Energy: Conservation still needed

In the face of dwindling natural resources, Americans are constantly reminded to 'conserve energy.' Unfortunately, the energy crisis is a reality that will not be solved by building an Alaskan pipeline or drilling for offshore oil. There's no way around it: America, the richest and most powerful nation in the world, is running out of natural resources, and energy is among the most precious of these.

How is Ft. Benning being affected by this? A $1.8 million unfunded requirement for post utilities this year is one obvious result of the "crunch." "We estimated what utilities we thought we would use for the year and TRADOC authorized $1.8 million less than we requested," explained Charles Orr, Chief of Engineer Resources Management Division, DFAE. "While we will have some savings from energy conservation measures by commanders, we also have more buildings and personnel to support this year. For instance," he continued "additional energy will be required for Sand Hill construction, OSUT and new energy plants on main post."

People everywhere are beginning to realize that only through the combined effort of all, can a solution be found. On Ft. Benning, there are a number of ways in which individuals and families can conserve energy in troop units and housing areas.

Some suggestions for fuel conservation in troop unit areas are:

Be sure your buildings are insulated properly to conserve fuels. Poor insulation requires more heat to keep a building at adequate temperatures. Consider winterizing unused buildings; if they won't be used at all, turn the heat off or down very low. Increase the temperature of your air conditioners so they don't run as often. It may also be possible to turn off field floodlights in your area at night or leave fewer of them on.

Temperatures in office buildings can be lowered at night and increased the next

Hypothermia: It'll kill ya

Add the word "hypothermia" to your vocabulary. Your understanding and awareness of its seriousness could save your life.

Hypothermia, more commonly referred to as exposure, can cause death as the skin temperature lowers.

The body begins to lose heat faster than it can be generated, blood circulation is restricted, the blood does not carry enough oxygen to the brain, the brain slows down and panic follows — leading to wild, irrational physical exertion until physical collapse and then death.

It never gets that cold here in Georgia you say?

Wrong!

Under certain and usually unanticipated conditions, a person can actually "freeze" to death at temperatures as high as 50 degrees.

Exposure is a starting point — add fatigue, a little rain or sweat, wind, the wrong clothing, poor preparation, a failure to recognize the symptoms and the lack of a "buddy" for help — and you're a goner.

Anyone who participates in winter sports should be especially careful. Particular attention should be given to preparation for emergencies such as being stranded with a broken ski or snowmobile. A survival kit should be carried by each person. As a bare minimum it should include some chocolate bars and some kind of wind breaker such as a large plastic garbage can liner.

Survival experts advise wearing wool garments for winter outdoor sports. Wool does not absorb moisture so rapidly; moisture generated by the body is passed through the fabric to evaporate on the outside of the garment. If the moisture evaporates near the skin, it cools the skin surface even more.

The best defense against hypothermia begins with recognizing the symptoms. Shivering is the first sign. It is the body's attempt to generate heat by expanding and contracting the muscles. The next symptom is slow, slurred speech, followed by loss of memory and meaningless babbling instead of conversation. At this stage, because the brain is not functioning, the person may get the feeling everything is great.

In the more advanced stages the hands become immobile, the feet become numb,

MPs offer take-home service

Courtesy transportation will again be offered by the Military Police for New Year's weekend.

The service is a "take-home" policy instituted last year to help drivers who have consumed too much alcohol to drive themselves home safely.

The service can be obtained by calling the MP desk at 545-5222 and asking for transportation to one's quarters. The only restrictions are that the individual must have driven a car, is at an on-post facility, and is returning to post quarters.

The Courtesy Transportation is confidential and can save the drinker the possibility of becoming involved in an accident or being charged with Driving While Intoxicated (DWI).

The Military Police will also provide a wrecker to haul away cars that have broken down on post. The car will be towed to either the individual's company or quarters. For additional information call 544-4343.

Effects 26 MOSs

Reenlistment curbs announced

Unqualified soldiers reenlisting for service school and training center options have prompted DA to place strict reenlistment curbs on 26 MOSs, including 24 from the medical field.

Examples of unqualified soldiers reenlisting for the training options include soldiers reenlisting for 92B without required algebra and chemistry training, E-5s reenlisting for 91R and soldiers with more than four years of service reenlisting for 35G.

Although DA's major concern over the erroneous reenlistments applies to medical occupations, 13B (cannon crewman) and 94F (food service specialist) were also singled out for reenlistment restrictions.

The new policy on these reenlistments is designed to insure that soldiers are qualified for MOSs and to slot them in the proper career progression jobs. The restrictions include:

- Forbidding reenlistment into 13B by soldiers in grade E-5 and E-4 and on an E-5 promotion standing list.
- Forbidding E-5s to reenlist for training in 91R10.
- Limiting training for 91R30 to soldiers with at least one year of experience in the MOS.
- Requiring mandatory reenlistment wavier for E-4s who are promoted to E-5 before reporting for 91R training.
- Permitting soldiers in grade E-5 but not on an E-6 promotion standing list to reenlist for MOSs 42C, 42D, 42E, 71G, 76J, 91B, 91D, 91E10, 91F, 91G, 91H, 91J, 91L, 91N, 91P, 91Q, 91S, 91T, 91U, 91Y and 94F. Promotion to E-5 before reporting for training will require a mandatory reenlistment wavier.
- Prohibiting soldiers with more than four years of service from reenlisting for MOSs, 35G10, 92B10 or 91C10.
- Requiring written verification of succesful algebra and chemistry schooling for soldiers desiring to reenlist for 92B10.
- Terminating training into 91C30 as a reenlistment option. MILPERCEN will now select soldiers for this training under professional development and career progression procedures.

A MILPERSON official explained that mandatory reenlistment waivers will not void a reenlistment. Soldiers who reenlist and who later require the waiver will still have additional military obligations but will not be guaranteed specific training. (ARNEWS)

News in brief

1st lieutenants must wait longer for O-3 promotion

First lieutenants will have to wait longer for promotions to captain, under a policy which takes effect February 1, DA officials announced last week.

The increased time in service (TIS) requirement will be 54 months instead of the current 48 month requirement. Extending the TIS period from 48 to 54 months will be a gradual increase over an 18 month period.

Officials say the change was a "tradeoff" between having to extend the TIS requirement or lower manpower strength. They added that several advantages will accompany the change, including time to allow lieutenants to gain more experience, giving promotion boards a better understanding of lieutenants' qualification and allowing officers to better forecast expected promotions.

Officials said that the change will not apply to promotions to higher grades. (ARNEWS)

Policy covers handicapped

Soldiers with handicapped dependents will receive special consideration for assignments and transfers under a new regulation schedule to reach the field in January 1978.

Soldiers in grades E-4 with more than two years service and E-5s and above are eligible to receive special consideration of dependent handicaps according to the regulation, AR 614-203.

Among the handicapped needs that will be considered are treatment, education, therapy, training and counseling that dependents require.

The policy does not allow requests for deferment or deletion of assignments, but only special attention before orders are actually issued. Compassionate and other requests for reassignment or deferment are allowed under AR 314-30, along with AR 614-101 (for officers) and AR 614-200 (enlisted). (ARNEWS).

Hypothermia

drowsiness sets in — exhaustion and death follow.

Hypothermia treatment must get the body temperature back to normal as soon as possible. If the victim is conscious, remove wet clothing, pat the skin dry, put the victim in a sleeping bag and give him a warm drink. Never offer alcohol. Alcoholic beverages, while they make the victim feel warmer, actually cause more heat loss.

If the victim is unconscious or the body temperature is dropping rapidly, external heat is necessary for the person to survive. Survival experts advise that body heat is the most effective source to return the victim's body temperature to normal. They recommend the victim be stripped and dried — and then placed between two naked persons in a sleeping bag.

Hypothermia can be avoided by following rules for winter survival: Be in shape for the sport, always participate in a group or with a companion, be properly clothed, carry a personal survival kit — and know hypothermia danger signals and the corrective measures.

Glad you asked . . .

What was the most significant event of 1977?

By Debra Hilgeman

Douglas Bechtel

PFC Douglas Bechtel, Co C, 43rd Engr Bn

Speaking on a company level, the most significant event of 1977 was when our company completed the Recreation Center in Magraw Manor.

Arlene Pheasant

Arlene Pheasant, Combat Developments

I feel the most significant event at Ft. Benning during 1977 was the Infantry Systems Program Review (ISPR) which was held on May 11 and 12. I was really impressed with all the high ranking military and industrial people who attended and helped show what the Army has now and what is being projected for the future soldier.

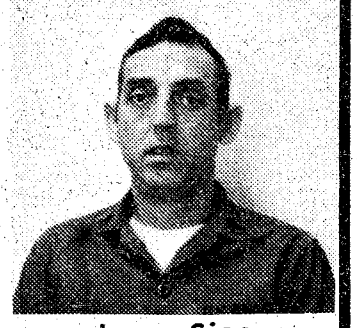
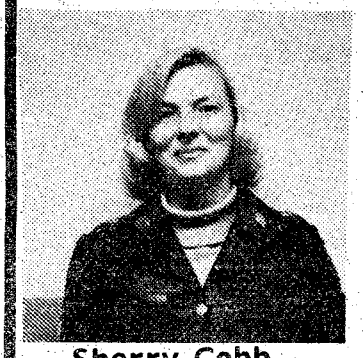
Worldwide, I believe it was the peace movement between Egypt and Israel; a fulfillment of Bible prophecy in our own times!



Jesse Sias

SSgt. Jesse Sias, HQS Co, HQS Cmd

Internationally, it was when Anwar Sadat made peace talks with Israel. There are not too many men nowadays who have the courage to make a decision as large as the one made by Sadat.



Sherry Cobb

Sp4 Sherry Cobb, Co A, HQ Cmd

The year ended without any great crisis.

Louis Marcotte

LtCol. Louise Marcotte, Director of Security, USIAC

On the international scene, the "Peace Initiative" of Egyptian President Sadat is probably most significant. For the first time in many years there appears to be at least a modicum of a chance for settling the Mid-East confrontation. On the other hand, if this current round of negotiations fails, next year's most significant event will probably be another conflict in that area of the world.

Seatbelts: a fact of life

By now every driver in America should be very much aware of the value of seat belts. The evidence gathered in support of seat belts is overwhelming. This evidence has been published in newspaper articles, magazines, on billboards, and on TV. Most drivers know the importance of seat belts.

A hundred people selected at random would be able to tell you the value of seat belts, but less than 25 percent of them will say they use them. That's right, less than 25 percent of the drivers on our highways use their seat belts!

Even though the facts and figures are well publicized, some of them are worth repeating. National Safety Council experts estimate that seat belts could save 8,000 lives a year. In addition, seat belts could reduce highway injuries by at least 2 million. The number of vehicles on our highways is increasing each year. With these facts in mind it becomes even more important to wear seat belts.

In addition to providing protection in a collision, seat belts can also help avoid collisions in some cases. If another vehicle suddenly whips out in front of your vehicle on the highway, you may have to turn sharply, perhaps even apply the brakes. In such a case, seat belts keep you solidly behind the steering wheel where you can maintain control of your vehicle.

None of this information should be new to any of us. Even though we all know better — why do the great majority of us still push aside or even sit on our seatbelts when we get into our cars? Why do we ignore the facts? Why don't you use your seat belts?

Many excuses can be given, but NONE are valid excuses. Each person has his own reasons for not wearing seat belts. The following examples constitute a small sampling of the most often used excuses along with the facts concerning each excuse.

Excuse: "I don't need a seat belt when I'm traveling at low speeds."

Fact: More than half of the serious accidents resulting in injury or death occur at LESS than 40 mph. Fatalities involving non-belted occupants have been recorded as low as 12 mph.

Excuse: "I don't need a seat belt. I'm just going to the store."

Fact: Three out of four accidents occur within 25 miles of home.

Excuse: "Seat belts are too confining. Besides, I might get caught inside a burning or submerged vehicle."

Fact: Less than one in a hundred accidents involve fire or possible drowning — releasing a seat belt takes a second. Also, if you do go under water while belted in, you will know exactly where you are.

Excuse: "I'll be safer if I'm thrown clear of my car in a crash."

Fact: Statistics prove that the risk of serious injury or fatality is five times greater for the person ejected than for the person who is kept inside the car.

Other excuses include: "I haven't got the time for seat belts; they wrinkle my clothes; I'm a careful driver — I don't need seat belts."

There are many other foolish reasons for not using seat belts. Is your reason listed above? If so, you may want to change your thinking.

The wearing of seat belts while riding in a vehicle in Ft. Benning is mandatory. Regulations place the responsibility for having all passengers strapped in on the "senior occupant."

The military police will not stop a driver for the sole purpose of checking his seat belts, but an unfastened belt can mean a ticket if the driver is stopped for another reason.

By using seat belts you could be one of the estimated 8,000 people who could save themselves just by taking the time to "Buckle-Up." Be one of the smart drivers — use your seat belts instead of sitting on them. Get into the Life-Saving Habit.

morning before duty hours. Be sure your air conditioners are properly sealed around windows and lower the heat in your buildings during the day when troops are in the field.

Familiarize yourself with your heating system and learn what type of controls it has and how they oparate. Check your mess halls; their kitchens are often heated only by ovens which may be left on all night so that the area will be warm the next morning.

What can the individual or family do at home to conserve fuel? Here are some more suggestions:

Keep your thermostat between 65 and 68 degrees instead of 70 degrees of more and wear a sweater, it's healthier. When you go to bed at night, check all lights to be sure they're turned off, particularly outdoor lights that aren't needed to keep your home safe. Turn out lights that you aren't using during the day; make it a habit to do this whenever you leave a room. Leaving light bulbs on does not save electrical energy, contrary to popular belief.

Try using fewer "convenience" electrical appliances such as can openers and clocks. Leaving windows open when the heat is on is a waste of energy; simply turn the heat down. Conserve hot water by having dripping faucets repaired and by turning on the cold water first instead of the hot water. This wastes less hot water.

Don't turn on your dishwasher or washing machine until it's completely loaded. Recycling saves energy too because it eliminates the need for producing entirely new products out of raw material.

GUN CONTROL

Registration Requirements:

After purchasing a gun from a Sales Outlet off post, one should be familiar with the proper way to carry, store, and transport the weapon both on the military reservation as well as off post. If you are active Military, a DOD Civilian who works on post and frequently uses post facilities and road, the weapon must be registered with the Provost Marshal.

After you make the purchase of the weapon (from other than a private person) ATF Form 4473 should have been filled out prior to your leaving the store with the weapon. This is a form from the Treasury Dept., Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms. It will be a permanent record, and will aid in tracing the weapon to you if the weapon is ever used in a serious offense or crime. Therefore it will be very important to you, if you should ever decide to sell the weapon to obtain a Notarized Bill of Sale and keep this in your important paper file. On a private sale ATF Form 4473 is not filled out.

KNOW WHO YOU SOLD THAT WEAPON TO, YOUR RECORD OF TRANSFER IS THE ONLY RECORD. To own a Handgun in the state of Georgia one must be 21 years old or older.

So you've gotten a good pistol or revolver and head for post. USAIC Reg. 210-5 says that you must register the weapon with the Provost Marshal. The registration is free and only takes a matter of minutes. There is no Local or state law requiring you to Register the weapon anywhere, so after you have your weapon registered with the Provost Marshal you have met the requirements of the law.

Storage

Where are you going to keep the weapon is another important question. If you are going to live in the billets then the security of the weapon becomes the responsibility of your commander. The weapon will be safe in the Units Arms Room. USAIC Reg. 210-5 allows you to retain the weapon and a small quantity of ammunition at your quarters on post, providing you take adequate measures to protect the weapon from being stolen or from unauthorized use.

Transportation

USAIC REG 210-5 strictly prohibits the transporting of any weapon on post. Post regulations state that handguns will not be concealed in glove compartments, under the seat, or in any other way concealed. At all times they will be readily observable by post Law Enforcement personnel. One exception to the regulation is that authorized shotguns, rifles, or a bow and arrows may be transported to ranges or hunting sites in the trunk of the vehicle. You must have a copy of the registration certificate with you. In the State of Georgia you transport your weapon in a private passenger vehicle in an open manner and fully exposed to view or in the glove compartment providing you possess a valid Firearms License.

Carrying of the Weapon

On post this is strictly prohibited. It is limited to persons who are engaged in;

- Performance of Military Duty
- Skeet shooting, authorized pistol and rifle target shooting
- Authorized hunting

With a valid firearms license a weapon may be carried (in the State of Georgia, not on post) ONLY in a shoulder or waist holster, hipgrip, or any other similar device, handbag, purse, attache case, brief case, or other closed container. Deadly weapons of any kind are not allowed by Georgia Law at any Public gathering.

Firearms License

The probate Court Judge in each county issues the license for a period of three years. The license costs $15, and there is usually a three-day waiting period as necessary background checks are made. The forms may be obtained from the Probate Court located in the Government Center in Columbus. The applicant must be 21 years old or older.

Special Re-up option available

There is good news for some first term soldiers reenlisting in 1978, according to a reenlistment policy announced by DA last week.

A test program will allow first term soldiers stationed in CONUS to reenlist for another CONUS station, beginning January 1. The program may be expanded to more MOSs and all first term soldiers if the test is successful.

Soldiers must meet the following requirements to qualify for the reenlistment options:

- Have a social security number ending in 1, 3, 5, 7, or 9.
- Be a first termer in grade E-6 or below.
- Have a position open at the station of choice, by grade and MOS.
- Must reup for three to six years.
- Must not already possess assignment instructions.

The option is available to otherwise eligible soldiers in the following MOSs: 02B, 02C, 02E, 02F, 02H, 02J, 02K, 02T, 11B, 11C, 11D, 11E, 12B, 13B, 16P, 16R, 17M, 26L, 31M, 35E, 35K, 43E, 44B, 51M, 51R, 54D, 55B, 62B, 62E, 63J, 64C, 67U, 71C, 71D, 71G, 71L, 71P, 71Q, 75C, 75D, 75E, 76W, 76Y, 82B, 82C, 82D, 83E, 83F, 84C, 91B, 91E, 91G, 91R, 91S, 91T, 94B, 94F, 96B and 96D.

Unit reassignment or change in grade or MOS will void station guarantee and subject soldiers to assignment to fill DA's needs. The test program is not open to soldiers serving overseas.

Your career counselor has more information on the new option. (ARNEWS).

PX executive retires after 41 years

By Sue Davis

A retirement dinner was held Dec. 15, to commemorate Frank D. Chester, Ft. Benning exchange executive.

Approximately 200 AAFES employees, retirees, distinguished speakers and guests attended the combination dinner/awards ceremony.

The room was elegantly decorated. Aluminum foil snowflakes hung from the ceiling and the lights, candles added a warm glow to the room and Christmas trees were strategically placed to give the room a holiday atmosphere.

Dinner was served buffet style and afterwards, honors were extended to a man who has devoted 41 years of diligent service to the military community.

Included in his list of awards was a certificate of merit and a certificate of retirement.

"AAFES try to get the very best to serve the military because they are the very best people in the world," Chester stated with controlled emotion.

At the close of the ceremony, Chester received a standing ovation and a congratulatory kiss from his wife, Elizabeth.

A native of Columbus, Ga., Chester can boast of a long and prosperous career. Being involved with military and civilian communities has enabled him to achieve a deeper insight as to the needs of the community.

Mr. Chester's tenure of service began June 1, 1937 as a sales clerk at the Ft. Benning PX even before he had graduated from Spencer High School. Within three years he was made manager of the PX serving the old 24th Infantry Regiment at Benning. With the outbreak of World War II he was promoted to supervisor.

He was inducted into the Army and was assigned to the same work — at Benning; Indiantown Gap, Pa. and Boston Embarkation, where he was discharged in 1946 as a sergeant.

He returned to Columbus and resumed his career while also attending exchange service schools. He advanced in his work and developed business interests. He is a partner in C & F Package Store on Buena Vista Road and owns an apartment complex on 18th Street.

"A highlight in my life was when I went to Vietnam in 1970-71 and operated the largest retail exchange in the world," Chester said. "That was in Saigon and we had 412 employees and did over $2 million of business a month. Treat people right, with respect and courtesy and they'll respond and support you whether they can speak your language or not," Chester added.

Chester has been active in city affairs and is a member of the Social Civic 25 Club.

He is also vice chairman of the board of trustees of the First African Baptist Church and serves on the board of management of the Brookhaven Boulevard YMCA.

Benning soldier discovers judo ability

By Patricia Redmond

Would you like to be hurled to the ground by nearly 200 pounds of skill and strength?

The skill and the strength belong to white-belt judoka Sp4 Richard A. Jones, key punch operator/stock control clerk for the 598th Lt. Maint. Co, 36th Engr Gp.

One would never suspect that this shy gentle beginner in judo from Atlanta, would engage in this type of gruelling sport.

Football, baseball and track were his sports in high school. He never thought of judo as a sport that would interest him.

Through the great faith shown him by Sgt. Arelius Mayes, captain of his Judo team and a brown-belt judo expert himself, Jones decided to see if judo was a sport for him.

Since starting in August, Jones has displayed an amazing talent by winning the majority of his matches. Thus far out of 20 matches he has lost only three, often defeating opponents almost twice his size with far more years of experience. Such a display of talent has won him acclaim from his superiors.

Jones readily admits there is no secret for his success. "I'm just scared, so I 'fight' to keep from getting hurt," he explains.

But Jones' success did not come without a lot of effort and hard work. He practices two hours a day, five days a week.

Pantsuit added to uniform inventory

Uniforms are slow to change and additions to the military inventory take time, but when those changes come, they improve the overall appearance of the Army soldier.

The latest addition to the Army uniform inventory the "Army Green Pantsuit Uniform," may be worn year around by all Army women. Currently available at post exchanges, the pantsuit is scheduled for issue through clothing issue, or clothing sales in March 1978.

The pantsuit consists of an Army green jacket, slacks and a gray-green turtleneck tunic, or a white, or tan shirt. The white or tan shirt may be worn as an outer garment during warm weather.

Soldiers putting insignia on the pantsuit uniform should follow the same guidelines they use when attaching insignia to the Army Green Uniform.

When the white or tan shirt is worn as an outer garment with the pantsuit, enlisted women will wear their polished brass insignia of grade on both collars. Officers will wear their grade on the right collar and branch insignia on the left collar. However, insignia will not be worn on the shirt collar when the jacket is worn.

Fixed uniform dates scrapped

Fixed uniform changeover dates have been scrapped, according to DA officials. Commanders will still prescribe the uniform for wear in formations.

Prior to 1974, DOD officials determined the seasonal changeover dates for uniforms. Installation commanders were later given authority to select their own changeover dates.

The Interim Change to the seasonal uniform regulation, AR 670-6, is being published and distributed to the field. The change eliminates the season uniform changeover, giving the soldier the choice of the uniform for the day. (ARNEWS).

Self-taught illustrator puts all in job

By Betty Zimmerman

Whether it's drawing block diagrams of telephone cables, custom painting motorcycles and vans, or raising his family, Sp5 Gregory Wilson puts his all into the job.

The 25-year-old artist is an illustrator in Benning's United States Army Communications Command (USACC) Agency. His Army duties include drawing diagrams of the agency's equipment and making training aids such as flip charts, signs and view graphs.

Wilson learned his job through on the job training while assigned to the 36th Eng Gp and the Training Aids Support Center (TASC) at Benning. Though unschooled in this field, he attributes much of his success to TASC's Henry Culberson and Curt Lenoir who taught him the art of lettering and preparing training aids.

His hobby is painting with his current interest directed towards custom paint jobs on motorcycles and vans. The colorful designs are intricate and represent many hours of detailed planning as well as exacting implementation. Wilson works with the Chopper Emporium in Columbus when his schedule permits.

Another time consuming activity of the Washington, D.C., native is his family. Wilson and his wife, Jane, have four boys under the age of five.

He plans to give up the Army with nine years service in 1980 and go to college, hopefully to study architecture. It won't be easy with such a large family, but the talented, determined young man said, "I'll manage, I always have!"

Drawing diagrams of underground telephone conduits is one phase of Sp5 Gregory Wilson's job as illustrator for the USACC Agency.

A year in review

1977 came into being with severe weather and freezing temperatures forcing residents of the Ft. Benning community to cut down on fuel consumption and forced activities to reschedule hours of operation or close.

1977 also saw the departure of MajGen. Willard Latham for assignment as the Chief, U.S. Army Element, Joint US Military Mission for Aid to Turkey.

MajGen. William J. Livsey came from an assignment as Chief of Staff, I Corps (ROK/US) in the Republic of Korea to assume command of the Infantry Center and the Infantry School.

JANUARY

Following along the lines of conservation, the Army Marksmanship Unit and LtCol. Frederic Shean, 1st AIT Bde developed a method through which a tin can could be fired by a modified Light Anti-tank Weapon (LAW). The development allows AIT trainees to fire the LAW repeatedly without any cost to the government.

Della Scott, a third grader from Edward White School received a $40 check for her second place essay in the National Junior Fire Marshal contest.

Twenty-eight distinguished graduates of the Infantry Officer Candidate School were inducted into the OCS Hall of Fame.

The Infantry School was tasked by Department of the Army to develop three new physical training programs for Army-wide use. The Baseline program was designed for those soldiers whose jobs require little physical activity; MOS program for those soldiers with special demands required by their specialty and the Unit program for those individuals assigned to units requiring special physical conditioning for the mission.

The Army's new Chief of Staff, Gen. Bernard Rogers placed renewed emphasis on appearance and fitness by revising the regulations concerning physical training and weight control. Stricter weight limits governed by height standards were established along with criteria for weight reducing programs.

Mrs. Daisey "Ma" Fraker retired after serving as the Director of Dependent Youth Activities for 10 years. Upon her retirement she received the Department of the Army Meritorious Civilian Service Award, the Army's second highest award for civilian service.

MajGen. William J. Livsey addresses the crowd after receiving command of The Infantry Center from MajGen. Willard Latham.

Gift Wrapping Booth

After a long, tiring, but gratifying month the NCO Wives Club wrapped their final gifts just in time for Christmas, around 5:15 p.m. Saturday evening, thus completing a third year of this service to the public with the funds earmarked for their 1978 scholarships and grants.

Many thanks to the public and to the members for a job well done. A special thank you to the managers and workers at the Main PX Mall for their many acts of kindnesses and patience during this very busy time.

Breakfast and Games

Members of the NCOWC and their guests met at the Top 5 NCO Club on December 28th for their final get together of the year. The ladies enjoyed a delicious breakfast in the dining room and adjourned to the ballroom for games and entertainment provided by the hostesses of the month; Ernestine Holmes, Eleanor Scott and Roxanna Campbell, along with the Program Chairmen: Esther Richard and Ethel Wise.

Annual Christmas Party

On the afternoon of December 18th, the Staff Judge Advocate and Mrs. Robert S. Poydasheff entertained in their home the lawyers, enlisted and civilian personnel of the Staff Judge Advocate Section with a lovely Punch Buffet in keeping with the holiday season.

Among their special guest at this grandeur affair were; Judge and Mrs. Aaron Cohn, Judge Rufe McComb, Chief of Staff and Mrs. Addison Davis and LtCol and Mrs. Kevin McHugh.

A Happy and Prosperous 1978 to all of you!

The Benning Lady

Mickey Harris, 1977 Ft. Benning Ladies' Golf Association champion, presents the thirty-year-old Officers' Wives Club (OWC) Golf Association trophy to Follow Me Golf Course pro George Cliff for retirement. Since the club's name has been changed and all women golfers on post can now join, a new trophy will be acquired to reflect the change.

New Method of Animal Tests

Begninning Jan. 9, a new method for examining dog and cat fecal specimens will be used at the Animal Disease Prevention and Control Facility, Veterinary Activity.

Special containers will be dispensed to pet owners at the clinic for a fee of $1 to cover cost of the container and the fecal examination. Effective January 9, no fecal specimen will be examined for parasites that is not presented in the new containers. The small tin containers that have been used in the past will no longer be acceptable. The new specimen containers will be available at the Veterinary Activity on January 3.

As of January 3, there will be a $1 charge for each heart-worm test performed at the Veterinary Activity due to the use of new diagnostic procedures.

Dramatizer Tryouts

The Dramatizers will conduct open tryouts January 5 and 6 at 7:30 p.m. and January 7 at 2 p.m. at the Music and Theater Community Center, Bldg. 229. For information call 545-5057.

Counsel troops on leave prior to overseas PCS

Many AIT graduates reporting from CONUS training sites have a "minus" or a "zero" leave balance when they arrive in Europe. according to reports from U.S. Army Europe. Soldiers faced with this problem have indicated they were not adequately briefed on their leave priviledges before they left the U.S.

Unit commanders should make sure all AIT students receive detailed briefings on the leave program — including the long-range effects of taking advance leave between BCT and AIT, according to MILPERCEN. Also, predeparture briefings for a European tour should include information about a soldier's leave entitlements. A commander should point out that a soldier cannot be forced to take leave, and that building a "minus" leave balance will limit the enjoyment a European tour of duty offers.

In a related matter, some junior officers have indicated they were advised to use accured and advance leave before they leave CONUS because they will not be able to take leave while stationed in Europe. According to MILPERCEN, the leave policy for enlisted and officer personnel in Europe is similar to the CONUS leave policy. While a unit's operation must be considered when leave is granted, liberal use of leave is encouraged.

Information on the Army's leave program is provided in Army Regulation 630-5— Leave, Passes, Administrative Absence and Public Holidays. (ARNEWS)

Benning dining facilities in annual competition

CSM Joseph Anderson of the Philip A. Connelly Award Selection Committee talks over the operation of the 524th PSC Dining Facility with Sp4 Shere Coleman (L) and Sp5 William Dozier of the 524th. Also from Benning in the competition is the 34th Med Bn dining facility.

The competition for the tenth annual Philip A. Connelly Award Program for Excellence in Army Food Service is currently underway.

A two-man inspection team, Capt. James Eaves and CSM Joseph Anderson, U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC) Ft. Monroe, Va., were at Ft. Benning last week to inspect two dining facilities: the 34th Med Bn dining facility, (large unit category-dining strength of 201 or more) and the 36th Engr. Gp, 524th PSC (small unit category).

The award, in honor of the late Philip A. Connelly, who for many years was a motivating factor in the conduct of the food services award program for the armed services, was established for a two-fold purpose; to provide recognition for excellence in the preparation and serving of food in troop dining facilities in the Army; and also to provide added incentive to the competitive programs of major Army field commands by adding a higher level of competition and appropriate recognition in the form of trophies.

The International Food Services Executives Association sponsors this program for the Army and participates in the evaluation of finalists, the presentation of awards and other forms of recognition.

Formerly restricted to garrison food service, this year's competition includes field kitchen operations as a command option. The inspection criteria for each dining facility, which was inspected during breakfast and lunch meals of a week day, included acceptability of food by personnel, quality of food served, appearance and attitude of food service personnel, incentive programs to motivate personnel, ingenuity and innovation in improving dining area appearance and command support and interest.

There are over forty-five classes being offered in January and some of the new courses are: Rug Making, Punch Needle, Latch Hook, Rya. Introduction to Stained Glass, Swedish Waving/Huck Embroidery and Beginning Bargello.

Some of the old favorites will be there too: Cake Decorating; Bridge classes, Sewing, Macrame, Decoupage, Handmade Aluminum Flowers, Needlepoint, Quilting, Decorative Painting, Garbage Art, Professional Make-up Techniques, Weight Watchers and Acrylics just to mention a few.

A list of the OWC Winter Class Schedule is available at the OWC Center. Office hours are Monday thru Thursday, 10 a.m.-2 p.m.

Tot Town to Accept Infants

When Tot Town reopens for the New Year on January 3, they will provide a new service to the Ft. Benning community. At the Main Post Tot Town only babies 3 to 6-months will now be accepted. In order to provide excellent care for these infants, Tot Town will hire a special attendant who will only care for young babies. Therefore, the charge for babies aged 3- to 6- months will be $.30 per hour more than the hourly charge for older children.

Also, parents must make a reservation at least 24 hours in advance. To protect the infant's health, no baby will be accepted who has not had two DPT shots and two doses of oral polio vaccine. Parents must be a member of Tot Town.

Talent Tree

Those who have Christmas items in the Talent Tree on consignment are requested to pick up their items on Tuesday, January 3 between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. The Talent Tree will officially open for business for the 1978 year on Monday, January 9 for consignments and Tuesday, January 10 for sales. The Talent Tree is open Tuesdays and Thursdays and the first Saturday of each month from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Buffet Brunch

On Wednesday, January 11, the OWC will hold their Buffet Brunch at 10:30 a.m. in the Supper Club. The Program will be a panel cussion on "Nutrition" by three dietitians from Martin Army Hospital. The panel will also answer questions from the ladies. Cost of the buffet brunch is $2.75, tip included.

Teen Disco

There will be a New Years' Eve "Eve" Teen Disco on Friday, December 30 from 7-11:15 p.m. at Faith Junior High School. The disco is free to all military dependents, ages 13-19. I.D. cards are required and you may bring one guest per dependent. There will be free refreshments and door prizes. The disco is sponsored by the NCO Wives Club of Ft. Benning.

New CHAMPUS contractor for Alabama

Beginning January 9, 1978, Mutual of Omaha Insurance Co. will process all claims for professional and institutional care received in Alabama by CHAMPUS beneficiaries. The company currently processes only professional claims for that state.

Mutual of Omaha was selected on the basis of competitive bidding. The company submitted the best overall proposal for administering payments of CHAMPUS claims for Alabama, according to Defense Department officials.

Affected CHAMPUS beneficiaries should begin submitting claims for institutional care to the new contractor after January 8, 1978, even if the care was received before that date, and should continue to submit claims for professional care to Mutual of Omaha. The address is: 3301 Dodge Street, Omaha, Neb. 68131.

New service shirt issue delayed

The addition of the service shirt to the Army inventory will be delayed six months to a year, according to an Army Uniform Board official. Originally scheduled for 1980, the shirt will not become an issue item before 1981.

According to the official, soldiers who tested the shirt liked it, but the material used in the shirt tended to absorb sweat and oil, creating unsightly stains around the collar and under the arms. The fabric was simply not up to snuff, said the official. "We want the best for the soldier," he added.

As a result of the tests, the Army has decided to look for alternative fabrics which overcome the staining problem. In selecting a new fabric, weights, treatments and shade variations will be considered, according to the official.

After an alternative fabric has been selected, the shirt will go through another test phase before final approval is given.

The shirt is expected to eventually eliminate the men's tan and women's white shirts now worn with the Green Uniform and replace the currently issued summer service uniform shirts.

The women's test service shirts will be redesigned, taking into consideration the need for shape in the garment.

Meant to be a versatile garment, the shirt is being developed in both long and short sleeves. It is being worn with and without a tie/tab, and with or without the coat. The shirt has been designed so soldiers will wear it as the outer garment without adding insignia after they have removed their coats.

When using the service shirt, officers will wear a cloth shoulder mark bearing rank insignia, according to the official. During the test, officers expressed a preference for the soulder marks to the pin-on insignia. The shoulder marks are made from the same material as the Army Green uniform, using synthetic gold or silver colored thread for the insignia. Enlisted soldiers, however, preferred the pin-on insignia of rank on the collar to the cloth insignia on the sleeves.

According to the official, no decision has been made on where branch insignia will be worn on the service shirt or if it will be worn on the shirt. (ARNEWS).

TRADOC will announce its winner in February 1978 and that dining facility will compete against those of seven other worldwide commands in the finals. The eight finalists will be evaluated in May and June by a team of Army judges.

There will be a winner and two runners up in each dining facility category and a winner in the division category. The awards ceremony will be held in New Orleans in August 1978. Four types of awards are given:

- Selected military representatives of winning and runner-up units receive short term scholarships to the renowned Culinary Institute of America.
- Winners in all three categories receive large silver bonds.
- Runner up units receive handsome plaques.
- The Commander, Troop Support Agency, provides certificates of recognition to all members of the winning food service staff.

Secretary of the Army makes first Benning visit

Hon. Clifford L. Alexander Jr.

Secretary of the Army Clifford L. Alexander, Jr. will visit with troops and observe training here Thursday and Friday during his first official visit to Benning.

On Thursday, he is scheduled to see the "Rangers in Action" demonstration at Victory Pond. Afterward, he will visit the AIT Bde and then go to Dixie Village to observe the Leader Reaction Course portion of the Infantry Officer Basic Course (IOBC).

The following day, the Secretary will visit the OCS area, observe Airborne training and watch IOBC students practice anti-armor tactics and techniques.

Mrs. Alexander will accompany her husband and will also observe training and visit other post attractions, such as the National Infantry Museum.

Secretary Alexander assumed office in February.

Alien report due this month

Aliens residing in the United States and its possessions are reminded that they must report their addresses to the Attorney General during the month of January, according to the Immigration and Nationality Act.

Aliens temporarily out of the country during January should not report their addresses until they return to this country. They have 10 days to report their addresses following their return.

The U.S. Post Office and Immigration and Naturalization Service offices (after January 31) have the necessary cards for aliens needing to report their residence. After filling out the card, the writer must sign it before mailing.

Aliens failing to report their addresses to the Attorney General will face serious penalties. Resident service members and relatives of service members who are not citizens must remember to submit their reports.

Marksmanship matches here

The 1978 USAIC Service Rifle, Pistol, and Machine Gun Marksmanhip Matches will be held Monday through Friday at Easley and Phillips Ranges. There will be competitions in both individual and team efforts.

Each rifle team will have at least seven members firing after a two mile run with all their gear on. The participants will have only a few minutes of rest between the run and the time they have to be on the firing line.

Thomas H. Kirkman, chief statistical officer explained, "We are trying to simulate what it would be like for the soldiers in a real combat situation."

A total of 184 contestants from most of the battalion-sized units on post will be participating.

There will be many competitions going on during the week and the public is invited to attend.

Nichols Alley on limits again

The Armed Forces Disciplinary Control Board has voted to return Nichols Alley, 18 11th Street, Columbus to "on limits status."

The establishment had been in a temporary off limits status for barring people in uniform from the place of business.

The board agreed that the owner of an establishment has the legal right to set and enforce his own dress code.

Benning baby, first-born in area

By Carol Marie Cropper

Randolph Shon Willis came kicking and screaming into the world almost a month late — but just in time to claim the title as the area's first baby of 1978.

The 8-pound 5½-ounce baby, born at Martin Army Hospital, is the son of Bonnie and Sp4 Randolph Willis of A Troop, 15th Cavalry, 197th Infantry Bde. He clocked into the world at 8:30 a.m. Sunday — a time when many others in the Columbus-Ft. Benning area were still resting from New Year's Eve celebrations.

Even though he came 20 days after he was supposed to, his parents seemed to immediately forgive him. "It suits me," said his 24-year-old father. "I'm just glad he's all right."

Mrs. Willis, who spent her New Year's Eve with labor pains, seemed even more understanding of her son's late coming. "I was just so happy when they told me he was the first baby of the year, I like to have passed out. I just couldn't believe it."

Recruiters answer: Why do people enlist in the Army?

Have you paid much attention to the ads placed in newspapers and magazines by the Army recruiters? If so you will have noticed their concentration on certain themes as enticements for enlisting. The recruiters didn't just pull those themes out of a hat. They know what "turns on" potential recruits and a recent Army survey has confirmed their judgment.

After questioning more than 4,000 soldiers worldwide the Army confirmed that the four most effective enlistment enticements are educational benefits, learning a skill or trade, opportunities for travel and adventure and the chance to mature and find oneself. These are oft-used themes in recruiting ads and almost two-thirds of the soldiers responding in the survey gave one or more of them as the reason for enlisting.

The survey also provided some interesting insight into reasons for extending the period of service by reenlisting. The most frequent reasons given were more nebulous than those for the first enlistment. Reenlistment was more frequent among those who had enlisted initially for patriotic reasons, had joined "to be a soldier," had a family history of military service or who had specifically benefitted from opportunities encountered in their first enlistment.

Not unexpectedly, the educational entitlements were also cited as a prime reason for not reenlisting. Many of those who accrued this benefit, particularly during the time when full GI Bill entitlements were available, decided not to reenlist so they could go back to school. Recruiters can no longer offer the GI Bill as an inducement since it has been replaced by a plan which requires the service person to pay part of the cost.

There were no surprises among the other reasons given for the decision against reenlisting. Those most frequently cited are as old as armies — long hours, discipline, personal appearance (including haircut policy) and "harassment" by superiors. Many one-term enlistees said they had never had any intention of serving beyond the initial enlistment.

There was remarkably little evidence of disillusionment with promises made by recruiters. Despite periodic reports of soldiers charging "breach of enlistment contract" this problem did not appear to be widespread.

As competition increases for shares of a shrinking population of healthy 18-year-olds the job of the military recruiter will become even more demanding. He will need a keen sense of what appeals to his potential "customers." Appeals to patriotism alone will not get the job done. Volunteer military service must offer today's young people a wide range of reliable incentives that will support the quality of life they seek. (AUSA Defense Report).

News in brief

Enlisted awards delayed

More than 200 awards are forwarded to the Enlisted Records and Evaluation Center (EREC) each month because of presentation delays, according to an IG check there, MILPERCEN officials say.

Ideally, awards should be presented prior to a soldier's departure from the unit making the award.

Some awards were approved as many as eight months before arriving at EREC, causing an unnecessary workload there and further delaying presentation of the awards to soldiers.

MILPERCEN officials say that failure to present awards in a timely fashion is out of line with the intent of the awards program. MILPERCENT advises commanders who must forward awards to strictly follow Paragraph 1-15, AR 672-5-1.

Soldiers who are in line to receive the awards can help speed up the process by leaving accurate military forwarding addresses. (ARNEWS).

W.O. applications sought

The Army Military Personnel Center is seeking applicants to fill expected vacancies in 49 warrant officer specialties during this fiscal year.

Fifteen of the specialties are logistics related. They are — 202A, biomedical equipment repair technician; 271A, land combat missile systems repair technician; 285A, electronic warfare/intercept equipment repair technician; 286A, communications - electronics equipment repair technician; 287A, data processing systems repair technician; 310A, utilities operation and maintenance technician; 401A, airdrop equipment repair technician; 411A, ammunition technician; 421A, armament repair technician; 441A, repair shop technician; 500A, marine deck officer; 510A, marine engineering officer; 621A, engineer equipment repair technician; 630A, automotive repair technician; and 761A, general supply technician.

Qualified enlisted personnel interested in applying for warrant officer positions should refer to DA Circular 601-73, Warrant Officer Procurement Program — Fiscal Year 1978, for opening and closing dates.

Successive leaves prohibited

Individuals may not take successive periods of leave, according to AR 630-5. A soldier is not allowed to take two or more successive periods of leave without performing duty between the leave periods. Exceptions may be granted in emergencies or unusual circumstances as determined by the individual having the authority to approve leave. This provision restricts an individual's opportunity to abuse the leave entitlement and emphasizes that the leave program provides a change from the work schedule. More information is available in AR 630-5.

Reviewers not doing job

Reviewers of Enlisted Evaluation Reports (EER) are not doing their jobs, according to a recent message to commanders from MILPERCEN.

"Reviewers must challenge rating officials to justify their evaluations," the message states. "While it is not mandatory that the reviewer always resolve honest differences of opinion between the rater and endorser, the reason for such differences should be explained and clarified in an attached reviewer enclosure."

The message cites "marked" differences between evaluations and narratives and states that an "appropriate review will ensure fairness to the Army and the rated soldier." (ARNEWS).

Some veterans' driving records may be purged

Many Georgia veterans who did not have their free, lifetime drivers' licenses updated by the end of the year are in danger of having their driving records purged from state files.

Georgia Veterans Service Director Pete Wheeler said that veterans were supposed to have their licenses renewed before their birthday last year, but records indicate that more than 200,000 veterans have not done so.

While there is no penalty for renewing a license late, veterans driving with outdated permits do run the risk of facing additional charges should they become involved in an accident or are stopped for some traffic violation.

Current law still provides free, lifetime driving permits for qualified veterans but now they are required to stand an eye examination every four years as part of Georgia's highway safety program.

Georgia's free, liftime drivers' license program was established shortly after the end of World War II.

Taking leave?

Do you know about annual, advance and convalescent leave?

- You're entitled to 30 days annual or ordinary leave per year. Annual leave provides the opportunity to put the mission aside and go camping, visit relatives or whatever else you want to do.
- Advance leave allows soldiers with limited annual leave to get extra leave for emergencies. It must be paid back as you earn annual leave. You are limited to 45-days of advance leave.
- Convalescent leave is granted when you're under medical care and unable to return to work. It is not chargeable to annual leave.

Now that you know about your leave, earn it, and use it wisely.

Funny bone + wish bone + back bone = success

By Chaplain Michael G. Curzon

During recent weeks we have been enjoying the holiday season, which to many might be called the football season. We have seen one "bowl" after another throughout this holiday/football season. We can learn much about life from the game of football. In fact, life has been termed a game. We want to win at football and at life. They both have rules which must be followed. They both require desire, preparation, and hard work.

A football coach wants the best potential football players on his team. One selection factor is the "bones" of a player. Coach Douherty of Michigan State has pointed out three "bones" that help determine a football player's success. He said, "I always look for three things in an athlete — a funny bone, a wish bone and a back bone." These three bones are just as essential in the game of life as they are in football.

"Funny bone" required for success

First, consider the importance of a "funny bone." Sterling Sill has said, "Any success requires a good sense of humor. Accomplishment is so much easier if we can always see the bright side of things." Your future success will depend to a great extent upon your ability to look life in the face and smile, to see the bright side of everything and the light side of some things. Henry Ward Beecher said. "Good nature is like a bee that always collects honey, whereas ill nature, spider like, sucks poison even from the sweetest flower." President Lincoln said, "With the fearful strain that is on me day and night, if I did not laugh I should die." And Jesus Christ taught us, "Be of good cheer. Why do thoughts arise in your hearts? Rejoice and be exceedingly glad." Our future success will depend upon our ability to rejoice even amidst the storms and pressures of life. Develop your funny bone.

"Wishbone" gets what you want

Secondly, consider your "wish bone." It has been said that we get out of life about what we want out of life. If you want something badly enough to pay the price, you can have it. Of course, to be a success you must want the right things. You cannot have success while breaking the rules of life any more than you could win a football game while breaking the rules of the game. But if a desire is right and you want it badly enough to pay the price, you can have it. If you just "want" something you will lack the motivation to pay the price, but if you really "WANT" something in capital letters, then you can achieve it. Sterling Sill said, "A big want banishes fatigue and pours a kind of magic power into the bloodstream." If you wish or want big enough it will propel you into action which will lead to your success. One of the saddest things I know of is the tendency for so many of us to live far below our potential, not only in accomplishment, but more importantly in joy and happiness. Perhaps we feel that we are "nothings," that we are failures, that others succeed, but "not me." Perhaps we give way to feelings of how bad, dumb, or unlovable we are. We are forever seeing what is wrong with ourselves, worrying about being unacceptable to ourselves, to others, and to God. God is very displeased when we give way to such negative, discouraging thoughts and feelings about ourselves. We thereby deny our own divinity which is one of God's greatest gifts ot his children. He has placed every good thing within our reach. All we must do is want it and seek it according to the rules of life. Jesus said, "Seek and ye shall find; knock and it shall be opened unto you." Seek and you shall find. God is not displeased that we want — but that we want too little. We settle for vain pleasures and ease when we could be happy and filled with joy and accomplishment.

"Back bone" helps you say NO

The third bone which we need for our future success is a "back bone." We must be able, under some circumstances, to stand up to ourselves, to others and to enticements and say without equivocation, NO! A person that cannot say "no" will not be successful in the game of life. We must learn to say "no" to the unimportant so that we can say "yes" to the important. Someone said it this way: "We must not put those things which matter most at the mercy of those things which matter least." God should come first in our lives, then our family and third, our work. All must receive a fair share of our time and energy. But we need to keep first things first or we will be unsuccessful. A common example is a man who becomes so involved at work that he neglects his family, especially his wife. Such a man, no matter how successful in his work, will fail in life. He has put that which is of greater importance at the mercy of that which is of less importance. We must keep our priorities straight. We must be able to say "no" to anything which would destroy our duties to God first, family second, and finally, our work. We must want the right thing and pay the price for its accomplishment. Part of that price is to say "NO" to anything — good or bad — that keeps us from our success.

Of course, there is another side to this coin. It requires backbone to say "yes" as well as to say "no". We must learn to say "yes" to God and do whatever He requires — no matter what. We must say "yes" to the pleas of our families for love and attention and support. We must say "yes" to giving an honest day's work for an honest day's pay.

Besides the standard 206 bones that most of us have to be successful in the game of life, do you have a sufficiently developed funny bone, wish bone and back bone? If you do, you are on your way to success.

Eeeyyy -- be COOL, keep it clean!

By Joseph Gorecki

Hear any new four-letter words lately? I'm referring to the vulgar ones that seem to permeate the environment and burn the listener's ears. By now it's quite possible that you've heard them all, but that shouldn't mean that you are duty-bound to circulate them in an attempt to educate the multitudes.

We are what we say. Our words reflect our personalities and our ability to communicate with others. Have you ever evaluated your ability to communicate and the vocabulary you use to get the message across?

Maybe it's time that you did. You might be unfavorably surprised.

The use of vulgarity may give you the impression that it adds flair and emphasis to a story and that you are coming across as being 'COOL.' The 'Fonz' doesn't resort to a four-letter word vocabulary and we all know that he's 'COOL.'

"Eeeyyy — you don't need it."

Next time your temper flares and the urge to spurt forth your vulgar venom and demonstrate your limited vocabulary becomes overwhelming; consider the people in hearing range. Not only are you polluting their environment but you're also demonstrating a lack of maturity and a disrespect for your position in the service.

Many times it's not a woman being victimized by a foul-mouth man. It might be women's lib or a lowering of moral values but there are a few women who could put the men to shame.

The impression received when overhearing a woman expressing herself with a four-letter word barrage of profanity is that she lacks human dignity, is cheap or ignorant and is probably not the type person to bring home to meet the folks.

The same impression holds true for the man who is unable to communicate in other than obscenities.

Consider the following as a check to determine whether your vocabulary is fit for aural ingestion.

- If what you say were said to you, would you consider it an insult?
- If your mother overheared you speaking, would she be offended?
- When you speak, do people tend not to listen or avoid your conversation?
- When your children repeat what you say, do you feel compelled to take remedial action?
- When you are talking or writing a letter, do you find it difficult to express yourself without resorting to your vocabulary of four-letter words?

If you answer yes to any of the above questions, you have problems. You're a foulmouth, %!#%!# and offensive person.

"Eeeyyy — you're not even 'COOL.' "

Scholarships open for the Citadel

Several Daniel Scholarships for outstanding high school graduates interested in engineering or business are available at the Citadel, the Military College of South Carolina.

The Citadel is a fully-accredited 132-year-old liberal arts college which offers degrees in 15 different areas of study.

The Daniel Scholarships pay $100 a year for four years of study at the military college. Awarded on the basis of a candidate's scholastic ability, industry, leadership capabilities, bearing and integrity, they are among the most coveted of Citadel grants.

These Scholarships are restricted to residents of Alabama, Georgia & South Carolina.

The scholarships were established in 1955 by the late U.S. Senator Charles E. Daniel, Citadel Class of 1918, and his brother R. Hugh Daniel, a 1929 graduate of the military college who heads Daniel Construction Company in Birmingham, Ala.

For information and application write to Chairman, Committee on Scholarships; the Citadel; Charleston, S.C. 29409. Completed applications must be received by the Scholarship Committee before March 1.

Be aware of female uniform regulation changes

By Marie M. Russo

Male commanders and supervisors should take another look at AR 670-30, Uniform and Insignia — Female Personnel, and become familiar with the recent changes and additions, according to Maj. Pat Ernst, WAC advisor on post.

A major problem, comments Maj. Earnest, is that commanders and supervisors fail to enforce military appearance standards for women soldiers the way they do for men.

The regulation provides guidelines concerning the military uniform and appearance for female service members.

Pantsuit Recent Addition

Soldiers putting insignia on the pantsuit uniform should follow the same guidelines they use when attaching insignia to the Army Green uniform.

The pantsuit, a recent addition to the Army uniform inventory, consists of an Army Green jacket, slacks and a gray-green turtleneck tunic or the white or tan shirt. The shirt may also be worn as an outer garment during warm weather.

"Out of uniform? Whatta ya mean, Top?"

When the white or tan shirt is worn as an outer garment with the pantsuit, the polished brass grade insignia must be worn on both collars. Officers should wear their grade insignia on the right collar and branch insignia on the left collar. However, insignia is not worn on the shirt collar when the jacket is worn.

Women's Permanent Press Fatiques Approved

Another change concerning the wear of women's uniforms is the approval of a permanent press fatigue uniform for women. Though the new item isn't available yet, a DA official reports that a concerted effort is being taken to have it available as soon as possible.

However, the DA official pointed out, women are not authorized to purchase the men's permanent press fatigues because of the critical short supply of this item and the impending availability of the women's permanent press fatigues.

It should be noted that, according to Army regulation, when fatigues are worn by women, the shirt is worn outside the slacks.

Maj. Ernst explained that the regulation also covers standards set for women soldiers regarding hair, make up, nail polish, jewelry, skirt length shoes, hose and overall military appearance.

General Appearance Eyed

Hair can be any length, the major said, but when in uniform, a woman's hair cannot be below the bottom edge of the collar. Some hairstyles while acceptable, may not be appropriate with certain hats. Women should allow for the proper wear of the headgear when styling their hair, according to the major.

The regulation also states that make up and nail polish are acceptable if applied and worn in good taste. Bizarre colored nail polish, blue or green, is not acceptable. Pinks, pastels, or reds, however, may be worn.

Some jewelry can be worn with the uniform but earrings are definitely not allowed. Wrist watches, rings and ID bracelets may be worn. Necklaces or religious medals may also be worn while in uniform but should not be visible.

Skirt length cannot be worn more than two inches above the middle of the knee or longer than one inch below the middle of the knee.

Pumps worn with the class-A and pantsuit uniform should be plain with a closed toe and heel. The heel must be the same color and material as the rest of the shoe. Heels may be one and a half to three inches high; the sole however, cannot be more than one half inch thick. Maj. Ernst adds that platforms are acceptable for wear with the uniform when the height does not exceed the half inch thickness.

"A soldier choosing to wear low quarters while in uniform is expected to keep them polished and in good condition," reminds Maj. Ernst.

Boots, an optional commercial item for the woman soldier, may be worn with service uniform when a soldier is out-of-doors in bad weather—rain, ice, snow. They must be replaced with appropriate shoes once the soldier has come indoors. The boot will not go above the knee; it will be a plain, black style without trim.

There is also a recent change in AR 670-30 concerning pregnant soldiers opting to remain in the service.

"As soon as her condition is obvious in a normally fitted uniform or when her uniform becomes uncomfortable, a pregnant soldier should begin wearing maternity clothing, purchased at her own expense," explains Maj. Ernst.

Standards of appearance for women service members are established in AR 670-30. With over 50,000 women in the Army today, and the number increasing rapidly, commanders and supervisors cannot afford to be unfamiliar with standards of appearance for a woman soldier.

Pantsuit Available at Clothing Sales Store

The 3-piece Woman's pantsuit is now available in most sizes at the Army Clothing Sales Store, Bldg. 1698. Cost of the items is as follows:

AG 344 Jacket.....$27.50 ea.
AG 344 Slacks.....$24.40 pr.
AG 413 Tunic.....$ 5.30 ea.

A question of honor--an editorial

By DAVID SCOTT

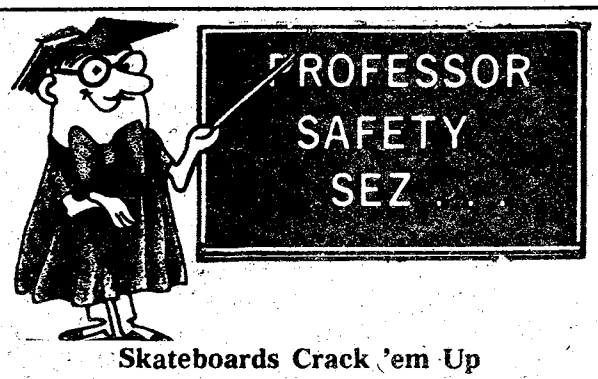
The loss of old-style discipline in today's Army has been the subject of much discussion. Many praise the Army for doing away with the "unnecessary harassment" that once seemed so essential to the maintenance of military order and discipline. Others disparage the present liberal trend, pointing out the fact that an Army that cannot obey orders cannot do its job.

True, the Army has loosened up to some extent. Grooming regs are more liberal, billets are beginning to look like Holiday Inns, there's even talk of women in combat. The Army had to make itself more attractive when the All-Volunteer Army concept was implemented. But better pay and living quarters, diversity of job assignments, and moustaches down to the bottom edge of the lower lip are not the cause of the discipline breakdown. The problem, or at least one of them, is the "easy out."

The Chapter 13, the expeditious discharge, the free ride, the easy out, these are the names of the cancer that is gnawing away at our discipline. Not that we don't need a program to eliminate undesirables. But a soldier given such a discharge can get it upgraded to "honorable" by keeping his nose clean for a couple of years and writing a nice letter to DA. This man, who was thrown out of the service because he was such a big screwup that it wasn't worth the Army's trouble to keep him, gets all of the veterans' benefits that you and I get for playing straight for three or four (or more) years. He's also getting an honorable discharge he does not deserve. Doesn't the labeling of a man discharged for conduct as "honorable" tarnish the shine of the "honorable" on the discharges you and I worked for? Do you want to be put on the same level as a walking lightning rod for Article 15s?

The easy out has other disadvantages. For every man put out, the Army must spend money to train his replacement. The man-hours and paperwork involved in processing these discharges cost money, too. Ever wonder why your bennies are being cut back so much? This may be part of your answer.

So what can you do? You could write your Congressman, especially if he's a member of the House Armed Services Committee. You could put a "Stop The Easy Out," bumper sticker on your car, if anybody makes them. But the best you can do is make yourself a self-disciplined soldier. Your personal pride and dignity, your drive and positive attitude, your desire to do your job well — these are the foundations upon which a strong, proud and efficient military unit can be built. Set your goals high, then do your damnedest to attain them. A good soldier helps make a good Army.



Skateboards Crack 'em Up

Skateboards are back — and so are the associated injuries and traffic problems. The problems are bigger than ever because kids can go faster and do more dangerous stunts on the new boards.

Local officials across the country are seeking appropriate ways to handle the sidewalk surfing craze. Some municipalities ban the boards altogether. Many towns restrict skateboarders to designated areas or prohibit them from riding in congested parts of town. In California and Florida, where the fad took hold several years ago, specially constructed skateboard parks have blossomed. Columbus itself now has two.

Motorists reminded cars need more than gas to run

Military motorists who fuel their cars at Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) self-service gas pumps around the world shouldn't overlook their vehicle's other mechanical needs.

All too often customers neglect to check the vital functions of their personal transportation — an oversight that can lead to costly repairs if continually overlooked.

On the outside of the car, the more obvious points to check include the tires for proper inflation, and tread condition, the windshield wipers, all external lights and signals and external mirrors.

Under the hood, the water level and coolant/anti-freeze strength of the radiator should be ascertained, followed by the quantity and condition of the engine oil. An occasional check of the battery's water level is a must, too. All belts should be scanned for proper tension and signs of undue wear. Water and heater hoses should be checked for wear and proper fitting. Lastly, air cleaners and filters should be given a once-over for cleanliness and brake and automatic transmission fluid levels should be checked.

Particularly before a trip or the arrival of cold, icy weather, an inventory of tools, chains, spare tire, first aid kit and emergency equipment is highly recommended (AAFES)

Chart ensures air traffic safety

The Navigation Aids office near Lawson Army Airfield has a unique layout chart that not only depicts the location of all their navigation aids but also shows the actual equipment at each spot through photographs.

An employee of the Electrical Maintenance Branch, U.S. Army Communications Command Agency, William Iakin, set up the briefing chart in this manner because many visitors were not familiar with the equipment named on the map.

"NAVAIDS," as they are called by flight and communications personnel, include such equipment as nondirectional beacons, radar sets, transmitters, recorders, localizers, glide slopes and terminal visual omni radios (TVORs), all of which are used to insure the safe arrival and departure of the airfield's traffic.

Recently, BrigGen. John S. Blair, commander, 7th Sig Cmd, Fort Ritchie, Md., toured the facility and was impressed with the chart's details and clarity. He suggested command-wide use of the idea.

TDY

Three little letters that can send a service member to the heights of euphoria while at the same time driving another soldier into deepest despair.

TDYs have been credited with saving marriages — and ruining them. It has been regarded as a means of 'padding' one's savings or creating extra bills.

The TDY trip could take the soldier to exotic, interesting places or to the dredges of the earth. There is one commonality in all TDYs — when the orders are cut, the soldier goes.

The BAYONET thought you might be interested in the oldest recorded TDY order.

Adult attitude best on road

Childish behavior exhibited while driving in traffic has long been a problem to other motorists: the impatient driver who pulls up immediately behind a car, passes abruptly, and swerves back into the right lane without allowing sufficient space for the car just passed; drag racing on a public highway; or passing on the right side.

While many people ascribe these immature antics to mere recklesseness, new insights indicate that the cause is more than superficial and may be rooted in early childhood emotions.

The primary consideration in analyzing driver behavior is how the driver views the rules of the road. Does he or she think of traffic laws as restricting or inhibiting freedom, or as creating a smooth orderly, and logical progression of traffic?

There are basically three attitudes a driver can assume: parent, adult, or child.

The parent attitude means that the driver signals his intention and demands that other drivers respond accordingly. The adult attitude means that the driver signals and then, before proceeding, insures that others accept and respond to the signal. The child attitude means that the driver is oblivious to the other drivers on the road and proceeds as if the highway were his play toy.

These three attitudes, simplified as they are, can result in four conclusions of the driver.

I'm not OK, you're OK. This is the most elementary level of transactional analysis. At this level the driver is unsure of himself and is not a mature driver. He may drive trying to do what he thinks other drivers expect of him rather than as the driving conditions dictate.

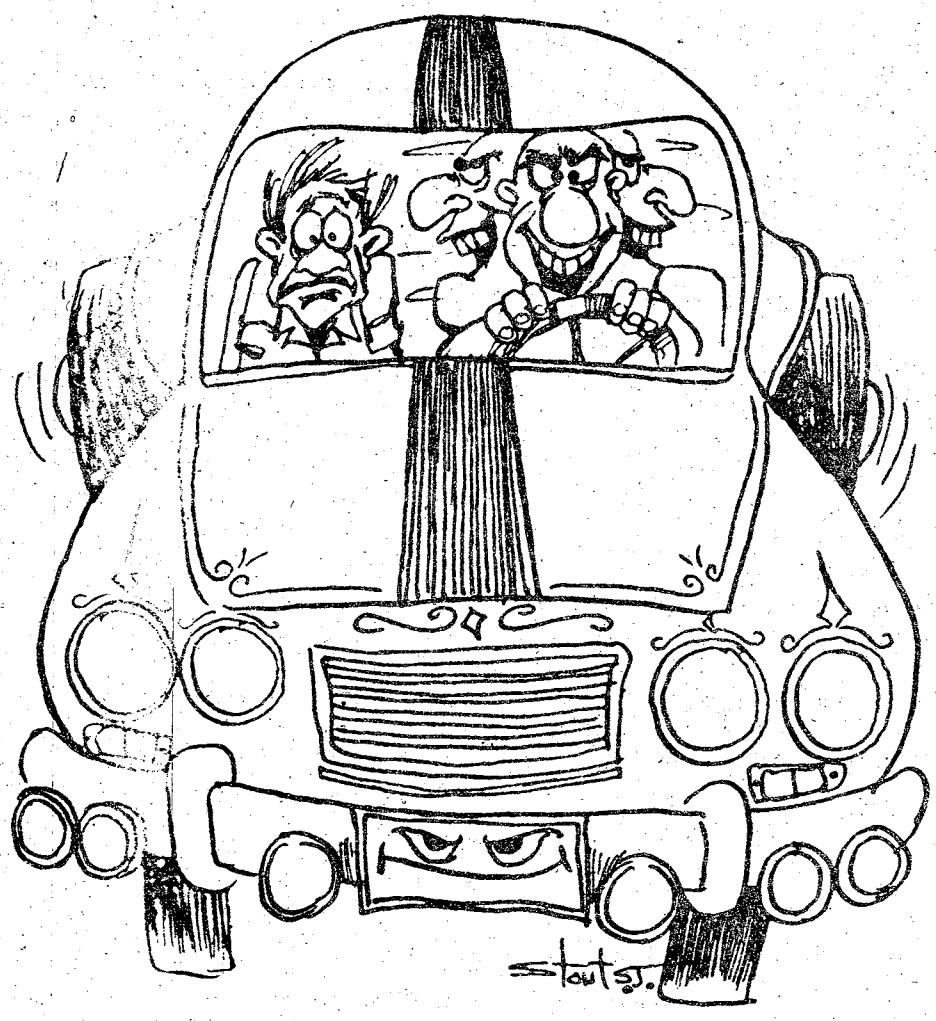
I'm OK, you're not OK. This driver can be the most dangerous. He thinks that whatever he does is right and that you are the incompetent driver.

I'm not OK, you're not OK. This driver feels he is a poor driver and that everyone else is in the same condition.

I'm OK, you're OK. This is the adult attitude that recognizes that each driver has responsibility to each other to insure free movement in an orderly fashion.

Each driver sometimes lapses into an attitude that is not adult. If he or she recognizes the attitude as that of the demanding parents or petulant child and keeps his emotions under control, then some of the recklessness and crassness found on the highway can be eliminated.

Driving in traffic with other mature and emotionally stable adults presents a safe medium for travel.



10-8 on the warpost

Members of the Associated Public-Safety Communications Officers, who design and operate the public-safety communications system in the US, paid their respects to CB radio last year when they held their annual conference in Chicago.

One of APCO's goals is that every citizen should have ready access to public safety resources from home, public place or vehicle. To this end, APCO has formally gone on record as seeking to improve the grade of service in the Citizens Radio Service, to promote proper use of Channel 9 and other emergency channels and to undertake other measures in upgrading emergency communications between citizens and public-safety radio users.

Inspector Robert Ellis of the District of Columbia Police Department, who heads an APCO committee on CB radio, reported to the conference that in a survey he conducted, 34 of the State Police Agencies responding said that about 9,000 state vehicles (almost half of the vehicles in operation in those states) are now equipped with CB radios. Six states reported that all their state patrol vehicles are equipped with CBs and five other states are planning to reach that goal. The only state police departments which have no CB radios in their cars are Nevada, Rhode Island and Virginia.

So, if you need help on the highway, break for a Smokey. It's more than likely he'll have his ears on.

Hot Line handles more than 'routine' problems

Problem, gripe, suggestion?
Call Hot Line!
Nobody listening? Need help?
Call Hot Line!
Got a better way to do things?
Call Hot Line!
Bugged, concerned, confused?
Call Hot Line!

It's your way to the top. Sound off and be heard by people who are there to help, dial 545-5555.

Since it's initiation in October 1976 over 840 calls have been received and with few exceptions, callers are quite satisfied with results.

Many important questions have been raised and answered; many legitimate complaints and problems have been resolved — and some questions just simply cannt be answered — but the wheels keep turning in an effort to find those answers.

Some of the "trickier" situations which have arisen are listed below:

May 10

"The 988th MPs have a pig as a company mascot. This morning at formation, a member of the company had to carry the pig in front of the formation. At this time the pig had a bowel movement and it got all over the man's uniform and he was not allowed to change clothes for an hour and a half. The man then was not allowed to go on sick call until 10 a.m.

May 29

"Request that the CG use his power to find my ex-wife."

September 14

"We have killed one rattlesnake in the vicinity of our quarters and now one has gotten into my quarters and was removed by the MPs. The MPs told my wife to get a cat and she did. But I am not satisfied with this solution. Ant and Rodent Control suggested we call the Ranger department. There has to be a better way to solve this problem isn't there?"

November 11

The owner of the restaurant won't let husbands or boy friends of waitresses enter the restaurant when the waitress is on duty."

November 12

"There's a stray cat in my yard and I reported it to PMO at 3:30 p.m. and there has been no action taken."

November 27

"Should my husband and I have a separate account or joint account. we have five children and are retired and my mother is living with us.

December 19

"The 1st National Bank of Ft. Benning has not been sending my statements for the past four months, now they are sending me old statements. I can't keep track of my account like this. It is costing me time and money."

Obviously the Hot Line system has a big job to do, a difficult one. But it's working, use it!!

Promotion to captain becoming a longer wait

First lieutenants will have to wait longer for promotions to captain, under a policy which takes effect February 1, DA officials announced recently.

The increased time in service (TIS) requirements will be 54 months instead of the current 48 months requirement. Extending the TIS period from 48 to 54 months will be a gradual increase over an 18 month period.

Officials say the change was a "trade-off" between having to extend the TIS requirement or lower manpower strength. They added that several advantages sill accompany the change, including time to allow lieutenants to gain more experience, giving promotion boards a better understanding of lieutenants' qualifications and allowing officers to better forecast expected promotions.

Officials said that the change will not apply to promotions to higher grades. (ARNEWS).

Pregnant soldiers must be counseled

Since the first of November it has been mandatory that all pregnant soldiers be counseled, according to DA message.

The purpose behind the counseling is to insure that the pregnant soldier understands the possible difficulties of reconciling parenthood with military obligations.

It has also become mandatory that dependent care counseling be required for all officers and enlisted people with less than three years service who are sole parents or who are married to another service member with dependents.

The counseling is provided to inform the soldier of options to remain on active duty or separate. In addition, a unit commander's checklist counseling sheet will clarify policy for medical entitlements, wearing of maternity clothes, assignments, legal assistance, child care and financial responsibility.

Included in the 14-point checklist and form statement is a note which advises that "Abortion is an ethical matter to be decided by the member after consultation with her physician and other professional staff as appropriate."

The counseling checklist also includes an explanation that "the primary purpose of this counseling is to provide (a soldier) with information upon which to make certain decisions and that the counselor will not influence or direct her toward any particular entitlements options."

According to the message the policy was developed as a result of problems encountered with respect to pregnant soldiers. Such problems include lack of proper medical facilities in some locations, physical limitations during pregnancy, child care responsibilities that may detract from duty performance, assignment in areas where dependent hardships exist, and possible conflicts stemming from alerts, deployment or assignment overseas.

At Ft. Benning, Martin Army Hospital is insuring that pregnant enlisted women are immediately reported to their respective commanders for counseling. The enlisted member is then given a minimum of seven days to consider the options available to her.

DA is monitoring the program to insure that pregnant soldiers are not coerced into leaving the Army.

Crime: An ounce of prevention is worth pound of cure

By Susanne Bostick

"Who, me?" "I'm just a private citizen, not a law-enforcement expert. What could I possibly do to prevent crime from happening to me?"

Keep your belongings locked up, to start with.

If you stop and think, there's a lot you can do. Remember, your car (or television, or credit cards, or almost anything else you own) may be at stake.

"But locks are only to keep honest people honest," you say. "A thief can get past any lock, if he's determined enough."

About keys: watch out when you give duplicates to friends. Keys are easily copied. If you ever lose one, have the locks changed immediately, and never keep an identification tag with your keychain. Above all, don't try to "hide" keys in mailboxes or under doormats; that's asking for trouble!

Don't let phony "repairmen" into your home! Always insist that repair people identify themselves. Be alert for strangers who seem to be just hanging around near your home, or in the hallway of your building. If you see any suspicious-looking cars in the parking lot or neighborhood, make a note of their license tag number.

Make lists of the serial numbers on your television, radio, camera, watch, binoculars, and small appliances. Better yet, have the serial numbers engraved on such items in a way that the identification cannot be removed or altered with ease. This will help identify stolen items, should they be recovered.

Be particularly careful when shopping, and don't leave your purse or packages on a counter. Women should carry purses that fasten securely, and avoid shoulder bags.

There are devices on the market that will turn indoor lights on at dusk when you're away; if you don't want to invest in one of these, make arrangements with your neighbors to leave your lights on at night. If you're only going out for the evening, you can leave your own lights on for that length of time.

Uncut grass can also advertise the fact that you're away; make arrangements before you leave to have it cut. Always close the garage door when you leave, even for a short time, and draw curtains or shades after dark.

Lock all doors every time you go out, even if you're just going to the corner store. Be sure your windows have locks too, and use them; if you have sliding windows, place a strip of wood on the inside track to prevent anyone from sliding the door open from the outside.

When you go out of town, make arrangements with your neighbors to pick up your newspapers and mail. If you plan to be away for several weeks, have the paper stopped. A mail slot in your front door is ideal; the postman can simply drop letters inside, out of sight of prying eyes.

When you receive wrong-number calls, don't give the caller your number. If such calls continue, report them to the telephone company. Let the military police or local police know you're going out of town, and don't leave notes telling where the house key can be found when you go out.

Keep the bushes around your house trimmed so prowlers can't hide in them, and be sure any stepladders are locked in a storage room.

Remember: stay alert, be suspicious of anything unusual (people or events) and report all losses or thefts immediately to increase the chances of recovering the item.

An ounce of prevention will yield a pound of cure!

Test Your E.Q.*

1. How much of the energy used in gas stoves supplies the pilot lights?
   a. 10%
   b. 25%
   c. 50%

2. An incandescent lamp and a fluorescent lamp having the same light output: Which uses energy more efficiently?
   a. fluorescent
   b. incandescent
   c. both about the same efficiency

3. How many soft drink cans can be manufactured from recycled aluminum with the energy needed to make a single can from aluminum ore?
   a. three
   b. five
   c. twenty

 Energy Quotient.*

1. (c) Approximately half of the gas used in a gas stove is used to fuel the pilot lights because pilot lights burn continuously.

2. (a) Fluorescent lights give off three to four times as much light per watt of electricity used as incandescent lamps do. One 40-watt fluorescent light gives more light than three 60-watt incandescent bulbs (and the annual savings may be as much as $10).

3. (c) Aluminum is a very energy intensive material with the largest share of the energy going to process the ore. Recycling is a great energy saver. The Nation's total throwaway containers equivalent energy waste is equal to the output of 10 large nuclear power plants.

Expectations: Breaking the basis of racism

By James Anderson

"Brown-eyed people are cleaner than blue-eyed people. They are more civilized than blue-eyed people. And they are smarter than blue-eyed people," said the teacher, Mrs. Jane Elliott, to her class of third graders.

At the beginning of a two-day experiment, Mrs. Elliott constantly praised the brown-eyed group in her classroom, pointing to their accomplishments as proof of their superiority. At the same time, the blue-eyed children were told that mistakes were to be expected from their type.

Mrs. Elliott found that the brown-eyed group excelled. When the blue-eyed group fell behind she said, "It is just what you can expect from blue-eyed children." The brown-eyed group was given special privileges in reward for good work. Scholastic achievement soared even beyond what was expected. The blue-eyed children fell into a pattern of failure and depression.

Mrs. Elliott was concerned that the experiment was having a bad effect on the blue-eyed group. She decided to continue the work, reversing the roles. The brown-eyes found themselves the inferior group. Their self-esteem and superiority was threatened. Their performance dropped dramatically. The reverse was true of the blue-eyed group.

I see a great promise for our future if we can put these lessons to work. The expectation barrier is a basis for racism, a foundation for our failure to improve, the start of "you can't teach an old dog new tricks," a factor in many of our social and personal problems.

Once we have broken through this expectation barrier, I feel we will find a new basis for freedom. We will see patterns of behavior change as the third graders' behavior changed. New records of all sorts will be broken.

Dr. Rosa Stanback a Georgia delegate to the National Women's Conference in Houston, TX, was guest speaker at Fort Benning's monthly Federal Women's Program meeting. Dr. Stanback, an assistant professor at Columbus College, captivated her audience with her experiences at the conference. Going through a copy of the National Plan presented at the historic council, she explained action taken on each topic.

DA speaks out on 'weighty' problem

The increased Army emphasis on weight control has resulted in questions by some service members about height and weight entries in military personnel records.

The personnel qualification record (DA Form 2-1) and the officer's record brief entries for weight and height are the findings of the service member's latest medical examination as furnished by an examining medical officer in accordance with AR 640-2-1 and AR 40-501. Unit weigh-in results or other sources cannot be used for posting results.

Recent messages from Department of the Army for E8 and E7 promotion selection boards indicate an increased interest by the boards in compliance with periodic medical examination requirements by servicemen.

While there is no indication that failure to meet periodic medical examination requirements as outlined in AR 40-501 will have any impact on the board's selection decisions, servicemen should be aware of the interest.

Service members bear responsibility when 'meeting the press'

By Charles Ray

"No comment."

In the wake of recent happenings, this is probably the first thing that comes to mind for most Army people when they hear the word reporter.

While this might seem to be a surefire way to stay out of trouble, it is at best only temporary relief. Used indiscriminately, the curtain of 'no comment' is also in violation of our democratic principles and DoD policy.

The public has a right to know what is going on within the military (within the limits of national security), and the reporter's job is to seek out and provide that information. Within the Department, we have a responsibility to see that this information is timely and accurate so that the reporter and the public can understand what is taking place.

The old adage of Calvin Coolidge, "I have never been harmed by what I do not say" does not apply to us today. What we do not say can be as harmful as what we do say.

Much of the anxiety over relations with the media is due to lack of knowledge and understanding of what their job entails. There is no magic involved in a reporter's job and, the movie image of the hard drinker with the battered fedora who badgers his news sources to get information is far from accurate.

Regardless of the medium, a reporter is concerned with two things—information and deadline.

Reporters are paid for meeting deadlines and getting good stories. They are not in the business of building the military image, nor tearing it down. The principal function of the press in a free society is to present all sides of an issue in order to keep the public intelligently informed.

Here are a few tips for smoother relations with the ladies and gentlemen of the press.

When talking to reporters, we should be "on the record, for attribution by name and title." On those rare occasions when the rules are otherwise, make sure the reporter knows and understands what they are 'before' you go "on background" or "off the record."

- Avoid highly technical language or military jargon.
- If a reporter has an appointment with you, don't keep him waiting. Remember his deadline and he'll appreciate you for it.
- Most reporters like to attribute sources. Talk conversationally, but remember that your comments might appear in cold type the next morning, attributed to you.
- Talk about your own operation or area. Refer the reporter to another unit or to a higher echelon if he continues to lead you outside your area of authority.
- Don't give a statement and then say it's "off the record." Many reporters will refuse to listen to such statements, reasoning that they might be able to secure the information from another, on the record source.
- Don't play favorites with media representatives. Give them all an equal shot at any news of your organization.
- Don't insist on seeing the story after it is written. If it is highly technical, a careful reporter might invite you to look it over. If he does, don't try to correct his grammar or style. Simply insure that he has accurate facts.
- Don't cry over one inaccurate or unfavorable article. Try to counter immediately with accurate or favorable information instead of boycotting the reporter or paper.
- Remember that reporters don't write headlines or decide upon placement of news. So, if you're displeased with either of these don't blame the reporter.
- Fight the instinct to sweep under the rug things which are embarrassing to your command. Discovery from another source will only magnify the embarrassment.
- Play square with the reporter. Give him the facts and news, not propaganda. Build up a reservoir of credibility, and you will be believed when things get tough.

James Murphy

Sergeant James Murphy is a team leader in an infantry unit. "The satisfactions? Training a new troop and seeing him proficient at his job. When you see a guy who really wants to learn, it's satisfying. I really enjoy working with other people. Sure, we're needed. The way I see it, if I didn't do my job, it wouldn't get done. In the Army, if you do your job, and do your best, you'll get promoted. It took me 3 years to make E-5. I think that's pretty dog-gone good."

The Army needs people like James Murphy. People who enjoy what they do. If that's you, why not see your career counselor today? You may find out just how much Uncle Sam needs you.

Keep a good soldier in the Army. Reenlist.

Teen Disco

The NCO Wives Club sponsored a Pre-New Years Eve Party on December 30 at Faith Junior High School for all of the dependent teens in the area and their guests.

There was food, prizes and entertainment for the teens' enjoyment.

This was the second such event for the teens this year that the NCOWC has sponsored, and the teens have been a most responsive and enthusiastic group.

A special thank you to the community and the school officials for their support.

The hostesses: Roxanna Campbell, Eleanor Scott, Delores Gardner, along with our special host 1stSgt. (Ret.) Philip Richard, deserves a hearty thank you for sharing their holiday time to make this festive season a little brighter for our teens!

How today's woman saves for tomorrow.

Today's woman is free to manage a home or a career. Or both, if she wishes.

But how she manages her money may be the key to real liberation.

That's why a smart lady buys U.S. Savings Bonds.

Whether she signs up for the Payroll Savings Plan at work, or the Bond-a-Month Plan where she saves, a little is set aside regularly to buy Bonds.

Either way, Bonds insure your rights to financial independence.

So buy Bonds today. And lib it up tomorrow.

Scouts wanted

Col. Robert Poydasheff, Ft. Benning District Chairman for the Chattahoochee Council of the Boy Scouts of America has asked the BAYONET to remind all parents that there are still openings for boys to enter the scouting in local troops. If your son is interested and between the ages of 11 and 18, call Col. Poydasheff at 545-4611 or Scout Executive Emmett McKay at 327-2634 for information.

AFGE Local No. 54 Monthly Meeting

At the December 1, 1977 regular monthly meeting, an amendment was passed to change the AFGE Local 54 monthly meeting night from the first Thursday night to the second Thursday night at 8 p.m. beginning with the meeting night January 12.

Rifle Owners

The firing of any caliber rifle on the Ft. Benning reservation is authorized only under the following circumstances:

- On established rifle ranges after permission has been obtained from proper authority.
- By military police and wildlife officials in conjunction with predatory animal control.
- By military police or personnel on post interior guard duty in the execution of their official duties.

Although hunting in certain areas of the reservation is authorized, hunting with a rifle is not. Accordingly, individuals observed with a rifle in an area where hunting is authorized are presumed to be hunting and are subject to apprehension.

Rugby gaining in popularity

In 1823 at Rugby School, England, a young man named William Webb Ellis picked up a soccer ball in his hands during a game and ran with it! His coach made a formal apology to the other team for the rule's infraction but this deviation sparked the beginning of the game of rugby.

The sport developed worldwide interest and finally became popular in the United States in 1905. Many schools adopted rugby over the more expensive American brand of football, which resulted in the formation of American rugby teams for competition in the 1020 and 1024 Olympics. The American team won the only two gold medals awarded in the Olympics for rugby.

But as the popularity of American football grew, the game of rugby slipped into obscurity until the late 1960s. Its renewal is attributed to many of the same reasons soccer is becoming so popular. The low cost of outfitting a team, simplicity of the playing field and the rules, and the dual role of offense and defense that each player exhibits are some of the major reasons. Another is the traditional party which follows each game.

Such post-game camaraderie is indicative of this last of the true amateur sports. If you are interested in playing rugby, the Ft. Benning Rugby Team, the "Flyers," will be holding organizational meetings for the spring season on January 11 and 12 in classroom 52, Infantry Hall at 5:30 p.m.

The reason for such an early start in the spring season is the selection of Ft. Benning/Columbus as one of the trial areas for the Georgia Select Side. The Select Side represents the best rugby players in the state who will compete for positions on the American International Rugby Team, the "Eagles."

Ft. Benning/Columbus has been chosen for this honor due to the fine record and reputation the Flyers have made with various teams in the South.

Soldier re-ups New Years Day

While most of the Benning population was ringing in the New Year with champagne and noisemakers, one AIT Bde soldier celebrated his holiday in an untraditional way.

SSgt. Gary R. Brumfield, from Co D, 4th Bn, became the first Benning soldier to reenlist in 1978, when he raised his right hand at one minute after midnight.

Brumfield has been working in the battalion's Training Management Administration since May, when he returned from Camp Hovey, Korea.

A veteran of the Vietnam Conflict, who was awarded the Purple Heart, SSgt. Brumfield and his family reside in Phenix City.

THAT FAMILIAR WIDE DESIGN HAS A LUXURIOUS NEW LOOK

We think the Pacer has always been a pretty stylish car, too. But now, there's a whole new dimension to Pacer's good looks. You might even say the new Pacer D-L Hatchback is downright luxurious. Besides the newly styled grille and front end, it has individual reclining front seats in Velveteen crush fabric or soft-feel vinyl, an electric clock, high level ventilation, Extra Quiet Insulation, whitewall tires with color-keyed wheel covers, bumper nerfing strips, deluxe interior and exterior trim, and much more—all standard.

It's covered by AMC's exclusive Buyer Protection Plan. And the Pacer D-L's surprisingly low price tag makes it one of the best values on the road today.

VA Q&A

Q — My husband is a veteran who added a total disability income rider to his National Service Life Insurance policy. He has been totally disabled for about five years and has been receiving $100 a month. How will this affect the face value of his basic policy?

A — It will have no effect. Benefits received under the total disability income rider will not decrease the face value of his National Service Life Insurance policy.

Q — As a veteran of World War II with a recently established service-connected disability, am I eligible for service disabled insurance?

A — No. Eligibility for service disabled insurance requires separation from service after April 24, 1951.

Heat controlled automatically

Will the long, cold winter mean a big, fat heating bill for your household? Not necessarily. You can cut heating bills up to 15 percent simply by turning your thermostat down 5 to 10 degrees at night. You can do it manually, or you can install a device that will control your thermostat automatically.

The device works like a timer to turn your system up or down at a pre-set time. Using it, you can set your thermostat to keep the temperature at 65 degrees during the day, and to set it back automatically to either 60 degrees or 55 degrees at night. In the morning, the device will reset your thermostat at 65 degrees, before you get up.

There are two types of automatic controls on the market. One type, called the converter setback, which retails at hardware stores for less than $40, can be installed yourself to an existing thermostat. The converter setback device either plugs into the wall or uses batteries.

The other kind of setback device replaces an existing thermostat. The main advantage is that all the wires can be hidden in the walls. Also available in most hardware or home stores, they run for $75 to more than $100, depending on the model and the installation needed.

Of course, you can always use the manual method. The automatic setback devices simply provide regularity and convenience.

But using either the automatic or manual thermostat setback methods can save you money. For example, if your heating bill was $650 last year, this could mean a savings of up to $95 this year. The amount you save will depend upon where you live and the weather this winter.

A new booklet, published by the Energy Research and Development Administration, tells all about automatic thermostat controls.

For a free copy of Energy Savings Through Automatic Thermostat Controls, send a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 636 E. Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

Appeal EERS, but do it properly

The number of incorrectly appealed EERs and academic reports can be reduced, say officials at the Enlisted Records and Evaluation Center (EREC). Officials at the center offer tips on how to properly appeal derogatory reports.

Soldiers wishing to appeal an EER or academic report should first understand that they must provide substantial evidence to support a charge of injustice or an administrative error. And, officials say, the burden of proof rests with the soldier.

Officials said that approved appeals or corrections will be made part of official records. Disapproved appeals and all related paperwork will also become part of the official record.

Additional guidance is in Chapter 8, AR 600-200.

King remembered at memorial service here

An interfaith memorial service in commemoration of the birth of the late Dr. Martin Luther King, prominent civil rights leader and Nobel Peace prize winner, is scheduled to be held Monday at 11 a.m. in Marshall Auditorium, Bldg. 4.

The memorial address will be given by Dr. John T. King, president, Huston-Tillotson College, Austin, Tex. Dr. King, who holds the rank of brigadier general in the U.S. Army Reserve, serves as deputy director of Plans, Programs, and Budget (Mobilization) in the Office of the Chief of Staff for Personnel, Department of Army. Dr. King, well-known educator, author and lecturer, is an active participant in a number of civic, professional and religious organizations. He will be introduced by Brig Gen. Fred K. Mahaffey, acting post commander.

Six post chaplains, representing various religious faiths, will participate in the service.

The service will close with the congregation singing the song most closely connected with Dr. King and the civil rights movement, "We Shall Overcome."

Everyone is invited to attend the service.

BrigGen. John T. King

MAH clinics relocated

The Acute Minor Illness Clinic (AMIC) will be temporarily relocated to A Wing on the 5th Floor, Martin Army Hospital. The AMIC will be open until 11:30 a.m. today. At that time, patients should report to the Emergency Room for treatment. The move is necessary due to the construction of the Electro-Mechanical Upgrade and should take approximately four weeks. During the week the Cardiology Clinic and Cardiac Care Unit will also be relocated to B Wing, 9th Floor.

Revival meeting on Kelly Hill

The Kelley Hill Chapel will sponsor a revival meeting Wednesday through Saturday, with services beginning each evening at 7. Four Columbus pastors will conduct the services.

Reverend James Carter of the Friendship Baptist Church will conduct the worship Wednesday and the Reverend Tony Dickerson of the Pine Hill Baptist Church on Thursday.

The pastor of Gate Fellowship, Reverend George Ivy, will preside over the meeting Friday and Reverend Johnny H. Flakes Jr. of the Fourth Street Baptist Church Saturday.

Property Disposal holds sale

A local auction sale will be held here January 26, the Defense Property Disposal Office announced Tuesday.

Bidder registration begins at 8 a.m. and the sale starts at 9 a.m. at the Property Disposal Office in Bldg. 67. Everyone is invited to attend.

The items offered for sale may be inspected starting Thursday and thereafter on weekdays from 8 a.m. - 3 p.m.

Items on sale include office furniture and machines, household appliances, kitchen equipment, sedans, station wagons, carryall and a pickup residue.

For additional information call 544-4767 or visit the Disposal facility located on Mitchell Avenue and 10th Division Road.

Jr Rifle Club conducts class

The Youth Activities Junior Rifle Club will be conducting its second basic fundamental and range safety marksmanship course beginning Tuesday at 4:30 p.m. at the indoor range in Bldg. 1106.

The course consists of two hours of instruction each Tuesday for six weeks. All youngsters 12 years or older who are interested in joining the Junior Rifle Club must attend the course. Additional information can be obtained from Lt. Col. Lones Wigger at 545-2343.

Recent results from the National Rifle Association indicated the Benning Junior Rifle Club placed fourth in the National Indoor Smallbore Rifle Championships for 1977.

Gen. Rogers speaks out on compensation issue

"Any military compensation system must be fair . . . and it must be fair to all taxpayers — including those in uniform — who pay for it," says Army Chief of Staff Gen. Bernard W. Rogers.

Gen. Rogers, in his speech to the President's Commission on Military Compensation, pointed out that stronger incentives are needed to retain quality people, including flight pay and similar bonuses.

The Commission's Staff Director Reginald Brown holds a different view. He spoke out against special pays, including flight pay. Brown contended that service members should be paid only enough to be retained.

Rogers and other service chiefs told the commission that a "comparative pay system" is needed to retain quality people as part of the military's obligation. Incentive pay and bonuses help promote "military community ties," the general stressed.

Brown, whose remarks were voiced prior to the service chiefs' testimonies, favors a pay system that only "competes" for people, by providing only enough bonuses to retain them. Brown also suggested that once a service member has opted for a military career, special pays are unnecessary. It was his feeling that service members could leave the service if they believe they are inadequately paid.

During its term, the Commission has expressed some interest in moving the services toward a salary system. Rogers has argued that a salary system would increase a soldier's tax liability and eliminate benefits and services which contribute to the community character of a military career.

Rogers also outlined the special needs and expectations of the groups within the Army — the junior soldier, the middle grade soldier and the senior soldier — while noting that the compensation system must meet the needs of a worldwide environment.

The cost and availability of housing varies widely from region to region. Rogers suggested, "On-post housing for most of our soldiers of all grades would not only provide a solution to the regional differences in compensation but would reinforce the Army community."

The general cited "financial counseling, housing referral, child care and food lockers" as areas where the Army is already attempting to provide for the soldier's welfare.

Rogers spoke most extensively on "a subject of great importance" — the retirement system. Calling it indispensable, he outlined how the retirement system acts to attract and retain the necessary quantity of quality soldiers. Additionally, it eases the economic disadvantage faced by military members who must enter the civilian job market in middle age. Rogers also stated that "it is obvious that a younger person is generally better conditioned to meet the physical demands of military service, particularly in the combat arms, than we of the Geritol persuasion."

The cost issue, which is frequently cited in discussions of the retirement system, was presented in a reasonable perspective by Rogers. He explained the increases in the last decade were the result of "larger standing forces required during and after World War II."

Furthermore, the costs when presented in inflated dollars for the year 2000 are tremendous, until looked at in more meaningful, constant 1977 dollrs. "Retired pay as a percent of the Federal Budget will also be essentially the same then as now (about two percent) provided the budget, as a fraction of the Gross National Product, remains fairly constant.

Rogers went on to review the unique conditions of military service — long, irregular hours, hazardous conditions, moving, and a multitude of other special considerations. He remarked that "money alone cannot engender the required degree of loyalty that must be aroused if we are to have the kind of Army our nation needs and deserves." He spoke of the "Psychic compensation" which the soldier derives from belonging to the worthwhile, honorable profession of soldiering, and from meeting its challenges.

In summation, Rogers told the commission, "Most of all, the compensation system must strengthen the military community which underlies, in large measure, soldier commitment."

The Commission is scheduled to make its final report to the President March 15.

News in brief

Clinic opens for retirees

Podiatry services at Martin Army Hospital were opened to retired personnel Monday.

Appointments will be available during the morning hours only and can be made by calling the Central Appointment Desk at 544-1051 or 682-1480. The increase in service is being done on a trial basis but no major problems are anticipated, according to hospital officials. This service is not being offered for dependents of retired but only for retired personnel.

Baggers may get salaries

Commissary baggers may begin receiving salaries instead of tips under plans being readied by the military services.

The services are complying with rulings by the Civil Service Commission, General Accounting Office and Justice Department. The rulings make baggers subject to the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) and entitle them to minimum wage salaries.

DoD has exhausted appeals of the rulings and is preparing a policy that stops the current tipping system for baggers in CONUS. The policy may also require a "users charge" for bagging services which will be passed on as a surcharge. The surcharge will be up to two percent of a commissary purchase.

Hospital meals cost more

In-patient subsistance (meal) rates for dependents and other qualified patients in military hospitals increased from $4.10 to $4.40 per day.

The increase is effective January 1 or upon receipt of the DA message announcing the increase, which Martin Army Hospital received January 1.

Infantry Chorus auditions set

The Infantry Chorus will hold auditions on Thursday for new members. There are 10 slots to be filled consisting of tenors, baritones and basses. The Chorus is also looking for personnel with instrumental talent. Any servicemember who feels he might be interested in becoming a member of the Chorus, is urged to contact Sgt. Ricky Hill at 545-4458 prior to coming for the audition. However, you may report to Co A, HQs Cmd, Rm 123 between 8 and 11:30 a.m.

The Infantry Chorus is a group of soldiers dedicated to performing for military functions, civic events and various other happenings in and around the Ft. Benning-Columbus area. It is a full time duty assignment.

Any questions concerning the Infantry Chorus should be directed to Sgt. Hill.

New IQT more demanding, tougher standards

Pvt. Steven Franklin E-5-1 prepares an M16 bounding antipersonnel mine as part of the new Infantry Qualification test.

By Pam Pegram

A new Infantry Qualificiation Test (IQT) has been validated by the 1st AIT Bde and will become a prerequisite for AIT graduation January 25.

The new performance oriented qualification test, conducted at "AO Eagle," Malone Range Complex, is possibly the most comprehensive exam given to AIT students in the Army today, according to Capt. Allen R. Brinkman, chief, Test and Evaluation Branch.

Developed by the Test and Evaluation Branch, the test is completely performance oriented. It requires the soldier perform 38 essential skills or tasks that are required for successful performance in an Infantry assignment. Each task must be performed to perfection on a 100 percent basis in order to receive a "Go" for the test.

All the tasks in the new IQT are part of the Infantry AIT course of instruction. The conditions and standards for each task come from the "Soldier's Manual," a handbook issued to each soldier as he improcesses into the AIT brigade.

The test was developed to provide a more percise evaluation of the training process and product — the Infantry soldier. The test measures job entry-level standards objectively and gives the soldier the opportunity to demonstrate what he is capable of doing, according to Capt. Brinkman.

Currently, AIT soldiers are not given an evaluation as comprehensive as the new IQT. Trainees are now tested through the tactical qualification test, an exercise using an ARTEP oriented scenario which requires the soldier to react to a variety of simulated combat conditions. Because of the tactical nature of the test, the soldier is required to perform only selected tasks.

The new performance oriented test challenges the soldier's skills with weapons, including the M16A1 rifle, M203 grenade launcher, M72A2 light anti-tank weapon (LAW), M60 machine gun, hand grenades, and for some soldiers, the 81mm mortar. Knowledge of first aid, mine warfare, NBC skills, basic individual tactical techniques, security and intelligence, and camouflage techniques is also tested.

Capt. Brinkman feels that the new test is totally in line with current Army training philosophy, the "Soldier's Manual" and the brigade's philosophy of "train to test."

"Initial results were favorable," said the captain. "They showed that integration and repetition results in retention of the essential principals and ideas. Results of tasks common to the SQT were comparable to the average scores attained by NCOs on the claymore mine, LAW and M60 machine gun," Capt. Brinkman added.

Validation of the test began with a random sampling of AIT soldiers on selected tasks. Presently one company per training cycle is tested on all 38 tasks. The first companies to go through the complete test were E-5-1 and A-4-1. Upon implementation of the new test, the tactical IQT will become a tactical culmination exercise near the end of the training cycle, and will be conducted by the Tactics Committee.

"Reinforcement training conducted by unit drill sergeants is a must to pass the test, and the results from the first two companies tested indicated obvious preparation," said Capt. Brinkman, who is a former AIT company commander.

The captain concluded that the new test will enchance the quality control program by insuring that course graduates have been trained to prescribed standards and will provide a valid measure of training effectiveness.

Pvt. Joseph Marcos awaits evaluation of his performance at a first-aid test station. Standards for the new IQT are demanding, requiring each soldier to successfully perform 38 infantry-related skills or tasks.

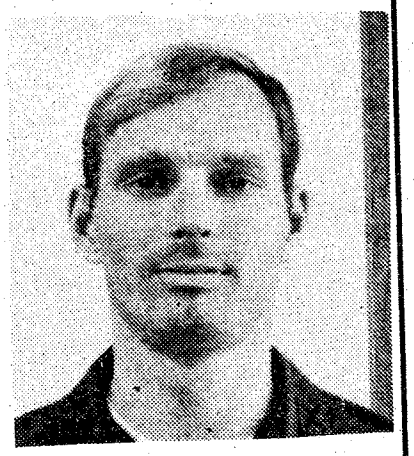
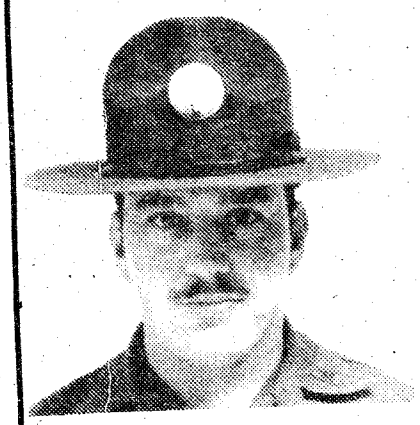
Glad you asked . . .

Is alcohol and drug abuse a problem at Benning?



Capt. Alvin L. Hennigan Jr., DPT Plans and Operations Div.

I think there is an alcohol problem that some commanders, but mostly individuals, don't want to believe exits. It's not at the crippling stage, but it is around.



Sgt. Jack R. Brewer, Co A, 1st Bn

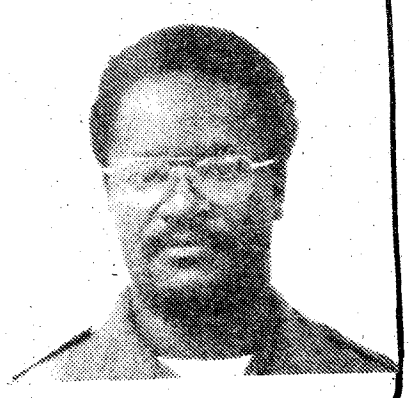
There is an alcohol problem in the U. S. and it tends to be more prominent in the Army. However, having been in the service for a short time, I wouldn't say it was any worse at Ft. Benning than at other posts with just as many personnel.

1stLt. Charlene C. Peters, 10th Co, 1st Bn TSB

I see the problem each and every day. I also see how "effective" supervisors overlook it. Part of the solution to improvement in this area would be reevaluating concepts and goals for our present program and to ensure that our social specialists (personnel) are conscientious and effective and not just filling a slot.

Sgt. Larry W. Lee, PMO, Crime Prevention Section

As a member of the Ft. Benning Military Police, I feel that alcohol and drugs are a problem here. Many crimes that I encounter are associated with drugs. For example, some of the robberies and larcenies that occur may be for the purpose of supporting a drug habit. Alcohol is a problem because many domestic disturbances that occur stem from the use of alcohol. Also, DUI is a real serious problem.



Sp5 Wesley Curry, 478th Trans. Co.

Yes, because the young soldier just off the street tends to take drugs to get him through everyday occurrences. With alcohol, this becomes a problem with mainly the top five ranking enlisted members and officers. They tend to consume alcohol because of frustrations or the desire to forget their problems.

Message

The President has proclaimed the period January 16-21 National Drug Abuse Prevention Week to emphasize that drug abuse is everybody's business.

There are few people who are not directly affected by this health problem in their family, social or work contacts. There are many myths concerning this problem. These myths and a general lack of facts often cause responsible people to unwittingly act in an irresponsible manner toward a fellow man.

People who abuse drugs are not necessarily immoral, rebellious or socially disadvantaged. They are unhappy people. They are also sick people who can get well, but they need help.

During Drug Prevention Week the program to provide facts will be intensified on radio, television and in the newspapers. Films will be shown in various high density population work areas on post. Supervisors are encouraged to allow personnel time to view these films.

I urge everyone in the Fort Benning Community to make a sincere effort to learn the facts concerning this problem so that when the opportunity presents itself they can provide meaningful help.

WILLIAM J. LIVSEY
Major General, USA
Commanding

Drug abuse prevention week observed at Ft. Benning

The Post has scheduled a series of events in observance of National Drug Abuse Prevention Week, January 16-22. The theme of this year's observance is "Drug Abuse is Everybody's Business."

A 45-minute color film entitled "Guidelines" will be shown in Classroom 3, Bldg. 4 at 11 a.m., Tuesday. Supervisors and unit commanders are being encouraged to allow as many employees as possible to view this film.

"Guidelines" is narrated by Father Joe Martin, a Baltimore priest who has served as alcohol prevention consultant to the Army, Navy, Air Force and Civil Service in the United States and overseas for a number of years.

In the film, he discusses eight principles useful in reaching and helping the alcoholic and their families. This film is available to major units who may obtain it by calling Vic Tipp, 545-5880.

lobby of Bldg. 4 during the week, consisting of theme-oriented literature, posters, and a video display entitled "Drink-Drank-Drunk."

Theme-oriented displays will also be set up at the major units.

Signs reading "Make Drug Abuse Prevention Week Your Business" will be displayed on safety marquees throughout the post, and appropriate messages will be available by calling 545-DOPE or 545-DRUG.

A number of Benning House employees will be making radio and TV appearance during the week. These include:

Name: Mr. Sidney Levine, ADAPCP, Acting Clinical Director
Date/Time: Sunday, Jan. 15, 12:30 p.m.
Station/Program: WRBL-TV, VIEWPOINT

Name: Ms. Mary Van Lear and Ms. Sheryl Creek, Benning House counselors
Date/Time: Tuesday, Jan. 17, 10:30 a.m.

Benning soldier receives award

SFC Jack H. Wallman, Tower Branch, 4th Student Bn, TSB, received the John Makovec Memorial Award in December 1977.

This award is given to an enlisted person who has emulated John "Big John" Makovec in his love of God, church and flag. Makovec was a retired master sergeant who faithfully served the Catholic priests and parish here as an unpaid handyman for twenty years.

The first enlisted man to receive the award, Wallman is the TSB representative to the parish council as a finance and facility member. He donates much of his off-duty time to the parish as a lay helper.

Evidence of his handicraft may be seen in the statue of St. Francis in front of the chapel, the shrine to the Blessed Mother and new painting jobs on other parish statues.

The memorialization funds are donated by Lt.Col. (Ret) Philip S. Gage Jr. of Atlanta, a life-long friend of Makovec.

The senior Catholic priest in conjunction with the other priests make the selection of the enlisted man who will receive the award. The award is presented on the Sunday nearest Makovec birthday.

Makovec was born December 16, 1899 in Austria. He served as a soldier in the Austrian Army during World War I.

Discharged, he immigrated to the United States during the twenties and enlisted in the Army shortly thereafter. He fought in Europe during World War II as a Infantryman.

His decorations included the Combat Infantry Badge, Europe-Middle East Campaign Medal with two Bronze Service Stars, World War II Victory Medal, Army Occupation Medal in Germany, The National Service Defense Medal, the Good Conduct Medal with clasp and three loops, and several certificates of achievements.

Records show that he retired on April 16, 1958 with over 20 year of service. Upon his retirement, Makovec elected to remain at Benning and freely served the Catholic parish. He did this from 1965 until August 9, 1976, when he died of a heart attack.

Colonel blasts Pentagon, basic national issues

By Julie Casey

What is it like to be one of the professionals—the cream of the crop — soldiers who end up at the Pentagon?

According to Col. Dandridge M. Malone, author of the 1973 article "The Prize" published in "Army Magazine", the Pentagon is playing a rather strange game that helps the winners lose.

Col. Malone, who is presently assigned as the special advisor for Organizational Effectiveness to the commanding general of TRADOC, visited here recently to speak at an Officer Candidate (Reserve Component) graduation ceremony. His article, "The Prize", is a conversation with the proverbial "you" — you being the Army — concerned with the shabby way officers are treated when they reach the Pentagon.

Malone expressed these and other comments in a recent Bayonet interview.

Casey: Why, Sir, did you chose to move the information about the Pentagon through unofficial channels?

Malone: I sent the articles up through official channels and it wouldn't move, because it was carrying a lot of bad news. So I packed it out of there and moved it through an unofficial channel which was the media.

Originally the article was a detailed staff study. It was equivalent to a master thesis. I worked on that damned thing for two years. I couldn't get my immediate command to react. It had to go up through 16 layers (of command) and it only got up through 4 or 5 layers, then some guy said that he didn't need any shrink telling him what to do.

Another thing that made me write the article is knowing I was going to make colonel without getting thrown out of the Army. I was able to sound off. (Malone has 25 years of service tucked under his belt.)

Casey: What was the response from the Pentagon after the article was published?

Malone: First the primary staff said all that guy is doing is shooting off his mouth. Well, General Abrams is a pretty wise man so, he went around the chain of command, just like I did, and he said, "let me talk directly to the action officers — let me talk to the drones." Well he talked directly to the drones and the drones said that guy is right. It is awful the way they treat people in the Pentagon.

Casey: After the article was published, were any changes brought about?

Malone: Yes, improvements were made but taking care of people is like repairing the roof. You fix it one year, then you have to turn around the next year and do it again because, they will go to hell naturally. So about once every year or so, I write a letter to who ever is the director of the Army Chief of Staff and remind him of the problems in the Pentagon and what he might do to improve situations.

Casey: Do you have anything else you would like to say as to the success of the "The Prize"?

Malone: It was probably an early effort in organizational effectiveness. It wasn't by that name, then, but it was an attempt to make better communications up the chain of command.

Casey: In the Army, the line between the officers and the enlisted is changing. How do you feel about this situation?

Malone: It is not as big as it was and it is getting smaller. Look at the Israeli Army, in 1967 they responded with a major combat discipline that folks couldn't even understand how they could react so dammed fast. In their Army you can wear your hair any length you want. There is no word for "Sir" in their language and there is no saluting. They wear a uniform that just barely looks like a uniform. Still in 1967, they astounded the world with demonstration of combat prowess. While other Armies that emphasize that line between officer and enlisted couldn't do that. In their Army every enlisted man is treated just as good as every officer.

It used to be extremely important because so many people were not educated. What are you going to do when your NCOs have master degrees, and PhDs in their fields? Their education level is the same as the officers? I have some NCOs that are working on their doctorate.

The lines of authority are crucial in combat, not the status thing.

Dick Gregory wrote a good book called "Nigger." It talked about all the little things people do to establish status. You tend to maneuver a guy down underneath you. It is kind of a built in thing — but it is not built in. It can be unbuilt. Folks are not going to put up with it. Folks on the top of that are not going to want to do it.

It doesn't make any difference in combat anyway. On the firing line there is no doubt who is the boss. Separate tents for the officers, separate eating gear, I don't go along with that. The officer is no better than anyone else.

Casey: Sir, what are your views on energy conservation and on how we are becoming more and more interdependent with the other nations of the world (considering the oil situation)?

Malone: Don't just look at oil, look at wheat. The whole world is becoming interdependent. Every one is kind of linked together. You know that when you go to Europe, you can direct dial to your home without going through exchanges. It's that easy. As a matter of fact the German telephone company has a $11 million outstanding bill from GIs and their wives. $11 million is a hell of a lot of interdependency between nations plus a lot of communication.

Col. Malone has also published another article in "Army Magazine" called the "Squad." According to Malone he was tired of being behind a desk with piles of papers and so he went out and spent three days with the troops on this field exercise.

Col. Dandridge M. Malone

Casey: Sir why did you want to go out with the troops and spend three days in the field?

Malone: As I said in the article most of us officers have so many things to check that we rarely have time to stick around and get to know the troops. We are never really around long enough to find out what is really going on.

Casey: According to your biography sheet you served in Vietnam for a year in 1967 with the 20th Airborne 1st Field forces and the 3rd Bn, 8th Inf Div. How did you feel about the situation in Vietnam?

Malone: I feel the Army did its job, but I don't think the nation did its job, by that I mean the Executive Branch, Congress.

Casey: Do you feel a lot of the problems in Vietnam, problems in morale, had a lot to do with the attitude in the United States?

Malone: Yes, It is like a football team — you can have a really fine football team, but with nobody in the stands . . . If the people in the stands aren't giving the players a little stroke every now and then, they are not going to play. That guy walking down the street didn't care. We had no support.

Casey: There has been a lot of literature written about the situation in Vietnam and the problems there. To name one specifically, the book "Soldier" by Lieutenant Colonel (Ret.) Anthony Herbert. How do you feel about Herbert?

Malone: He is a kook, but Herbert picked up on a lot of things that were going wrong with the Army and still are. A lot of tragedies, people caring more about their own than they cared about their unit. Caring more about my career, then duty, honor and country, he brought out a lot of things that the professionals gripe about, but he made one mistake. He made the whole damned Army look that way and it's not.

Herbert could never distinguish between truth and fiction in his own mind (Malone served under Herbert's command). In one minute he was saying that he could do 50 one-armed push-ups and then get down and do them. Then in the next minute, he would be talking about his Ph.D. from the University of Georgia, which if you checked up on it, you would find that they have never heard of him.

When asked if he enjoyed the Army, Col. Malone replied emphatically, "Yes and I plan to keep on going until it quits being fun."

The way not to park — Did you ever try to pull into a parking space but had to leave because the car next to you was hogging two spaces? You were probably ticked off, right? Well, then why do it to others? Next time you over turn your wheel and take up two spaces, remember that it only takes a few seconds to back up and move your vehicle so that it's occupying only one space.

Energy conservation measures implemented

President Jimmy Carter has said that by 1985, the nation should be operating at an energy-consumption level 20 percent below that of 1975.

In an effort to meet President Carter's proposal, Ft. Benning is carrying out measures which includes operating on a leaner budget for energy and suggests maximum participation in conserving our natural resources.

The Defense Department plans to make an eight percent cut in the budget by modifying existing structures and incorporating stricter standards in new construction. These standards are being used in all remodeling and building here, according to George Schladensky, utilities chief of the Directorate of Facilities Engineering (DFAE).

The rest of the planned savings must come from conservation measures. U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 11-27 outlines standards and suggestions for conservation of fuels and utilities and phased plans to reduce energy consumption in case of a sudden drop in the level of supply. Responsibility for enforcement of this regulation lies with the unit commander or activity concerned.

Recycling programs will receive heavier emphasis in the future. The oldest recycling program on post is waste oil reclamation, according to Gary Robinson, chief of the Environmental Management Division of DFAE. Used motor oil is collected from motor pools, post exchange activities and craft shops to be burned at the main boiler plant.

Scrap paper and trimmings from the Federal Printing Plant is collected and sold for recycling.

. . . Trapped in a bottle . . .

By Debra Hilgeman

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is a true story of a senior noncommissioned officer at Ft. Benning. After living with a drinking problem for 20 years, he was rehabilitated through the post Alcohol and Drug Control Office (ADCO) program. Why the Army adopted the ADCO program, how it benefits alcoholics and other drug abusers, and other aspects of the program will be covered in an article in next week's issue.

I don't know how long I was drinking before I realized I had a problem. My parents were social drinkers and I followed their example and began drinking occasionally when I was about 16-years-old.

I didn't start drinking heavily until I went to college. Although I was involved in school sports, I still spent a great deal of time drinking with friends and would often miss morning classes. At that time, I was drinking enough not to remember what I did the night before but I still didn't consider it a problem.

When I came in the Army in 1959, it was the Army's policy at that time, I think, to hide the problem drinker if he was still a good soldier. And I considered myself a good soldier; I always have. I've always been able to work; hung over or not.

I moved up in grade fairly fast. I always felt I could have gone on to Officer's Candidate School— I passed the test — but I didn't pursue it because I was afraid the responsibilities involved would interfere with my drinking. I wasn't drinking because of any pressure I was under but the drinking created pressure.

I got married and became a father and it was my wife who finally made me realize I had a drinking problem. By that time, I was working as the manager of an Army club and I was always the life of the party—three or four cocktails before dinner every night and a beer in my hand most of the time.

On my eldest child's fourth birthday, I told myself I wouldn't take a drink for three years and I didn't touch a drop until the day after my child's seventh birthday. By then, I felt I had proven myself and could handle a social drink. It worked for a while but I was putting in a lot of hours at the club and the drinking led to other activities. I was away from my family for a good portion of the day and night and became involved with a group of friends that I drank with till the wee hours of the morning. This led to more personal problems, which led to more pressure from my wife, which led to more drinking.

My wife tried all kinds of tricks to make me stop drinking. She would pour my bottles down the drain, for instance, but I kept myself prepared for anything by always carrying extra bottles in the car. Her constant nagging made it impossible for me to live in the house without drinking. I remember my wife telling me I didn't need another drink and I would yell, "Quit bugging me!" and I would have two.

> "I was always the life of the party — three or four cocktails before dinner every night and a beer in my hand most of the time."

Things were getting pretty rough for me when I got shipped overseas. This was fortunate for me in the sense that my colleagues were getting wise to my drinking problem, but unfortunate in that I used the separation from my family as an excuse to drink.

My overseas station had a liquor ration control that restricted an individual from buying more than five bottles a month. By this time, I didn't like drinking in clubs or with other people so I would buy bottles and drink in my room. Due to the ration control, I was 36 bottles over the limit by my second month there and got picked up for a ration control violation.

I was sent to the ADCO counselor but was able to talk myself out of it. A few months later, a sergeant major I didn't get along with said he smelled liquor on my breath—which he undoubtedly did — and sent me back to the same ADCO counselor. I was asked the same questions and again managed to talk myself out of any complications.

I was able to make it through the rest of my tour only to come back and find my wife had left me. Shortly after my stateside return I received orders for Ft. Benning and was only here about two weeks before the police picked me up as I left a downtown establishment. I don't know who called the police that night but sometimes when I drank I got nasty with people if they came up and tried to talk to me. Anyway, I was taken to the Benning House and brought before one of their counselors but once again I was able to convince him I didn't have a problem.

I kept myself going for about a month but by that time my problem was really bad. I was staying at a motel and having to get up at 3 a.m. so I could have at least ten drinks to get myself back to normal and make it to work. Plus, I had to leave the office from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. in order to get back to the motel and have enough drinks to carry me through the afternoon.

An officer at work finally called me in and told me I was being sent to another unit because of my drinking problem. I was sent to a new unit that same day but within an hour of arriving I was sent to yet another unit. The commander of that unit stood me in front of him at 2 o'clock on a hot summer afternoon and said, "You have a drinking problem and we are going to take care of it. I'm taking you to the Benning House."

I will always feel indebted to this man for his selfless concern and willingness to help. We met with an ADCO counselor and I admitted having a slight drinking problem but insisted I could take care of it myself.

At that point, I really began feeling trapped. I had been running around all day and desperately needed a drink. They wanted me to begin the program immediately but I told them it would be a week before I could pay my $300 motel bill, settle my affairs and enter the Benning House. The company commander offered to pay my motel bill if I agreed to stay at the Benning House.

> "I have problems within the service that I can't seem to correct as fast as I want to because there are people in the Army who still don't realize I was sick. As far as they're concerned, I was just an old drunk."

Despite the kindness shown me, I still resisted the idea of staying so I asked the CO what would happen to me if I refused to stay. He said he wouldn't have to do anything because in my condition, I would soon do myself in. If I stayed, however, he said nothing would happen to me except that I would get better. So I gave in and stayed.

I was given a room and can remember thinking I had to get away as soon as possible. I hadn't had a drink for hours and I knew I was in for a rough time. Fortunately, three clients of my rank were there. They understood what I was going through and helped me through the initial bad stage. Everything seemed very calm and slow and went just the way I wanted it to.

After a week of resting and settling my own pace, I reported to my CO and arrangements were made for a job that I wanted and had previous experience in. I was told that no-one — with the exception of my supervisor, my top sergeant, my CO and the people at ADCO — would know of my problem. To this day, there are still people I work for who don't realize I'm an alcoholic.

Once the initial week at the Benning House had passed and the alcohol was out of my system, I knew I would be able to make it. After about three weeks, I even became president of a council we had there. Still, it took me about 30 days before I got squared away to the point where I could start thinking properly. I had been reunited with my family and I was encouraged by them and by the good reports I was receiving from the people I worked for.

When I went through the ADCO program there was a 60-day residency period that has since been reduced to 30 days. We worked on our usual jobs during the day and returned to the Benning House every evening. After supper, we started off with total group therapy and later divided into smaller therapy groups.

My counselor there, largely through recounting his own story, was tremendously helpful and enabled me to see what I was doing to myself and what I could end up being. Just being associated with other people in the program was a big help and still is. I also began attending Alcoholics Anonymous meetings and continued for quite a while until other committments consumed too much of my time.

Since going through the ADCO program, I have set myself certain guidelines that I will not violate. I don't know if these decisions are right but I will allow no liquor in the house. I will not associate with people who drink and I will not go to parties where liquor is served. Nor will I go to a restaurant and tell my wife it is alright for her to have a drink; I tell her I prefer she does not have one because I do not want to have to smell liquor on her breath.

> "Thinking back, you're drunk most of the time or your mind is fogged up and once it starts unfogging you can see some terrible things."

For a long time I thought it was everyone else who had a problem; not me. An alcoholic has to face the fact that he is one before he can be helped. In my experience with what I think are potential alcoholics, I try to relate to them my experiences in the final days, weeks and months before I stopped drinking. I try to impress upon them what I finally came to — a drink a day, a few drinks a day, a half bottle a day, a quart a day — there was just no stopping. I know I have helped several people into really seeing the road ahead.

Thinking back, you're drunk most of the time or your mind is fogged up and once it starts unfogging you can see some terrible things. You realize your family is gone, your money is spent and your career is possibly ruined. I think those were some of my last thoughts during my drinking spells as I sat in my room watching television until I passed out from the liquor. The biggest thought in my mind was, "I wish one of these things would kill me." A lot of alcoholics reach the point I reached when they hope that maybe they will kill themselves with a drink and escape from a situation that liquor has made unbearable.

I truly believe the ADCO program has enormously helped many alcoholics who probably would have died someday as a result of drinking. I think the Benning House, ADCO and the whole program the Army has now is excellent. My only negative thought is that the entire Army is not yet enlightened about alcoholism. To some people, once you're an alcoholic you're always a drunk. I have problems within the service that I can't seem to correct as fast as I want to because there are people in the Army who still don't realize I was sick. As far as they're concerned, I was just an old drunk. I believe, however, that it will be easier in the future for people going through this program, or programs like it, as more folks accept the fact that alcoholism is a disease.

It's a common misconception that when an alcoholic drops that glass and doesn't pick it up again his problems are over. For an alcoholic, his problems don't end that easily. It's hard to imagine the amount of financial, personal and family problems that must be faced and might not go away for years. I have to face them everyday; problems that I created for myself during this 20-year period of drinking.

> "Everything is going so well for me now that it's hard to believe I wasted all those years drinking."

There is a feeling of well being that keeps me from drinking again. It almost makes me sick when I watch television and see a person with a hangover or an alcoholic having problems. Everything is going so well for me now that it's hard to believe I wasted all those years drinking. I was drinking to have a good time but what kind of a good time is that, anyway?

My body, soul and mind were trapped in a bottle and I'm still thanking God that I found a way out.

Engineers from the 586th Engineer Co (Float Bridge) feign battle with the enemy in a simulated gas attack during a field training exercise. The engineers set out to challenge the ice cold Chattahoochee River in an assault river crossing recently. The company, an amphisibious unit, had no problem moving four squads across the river under the simulated gas attack and fire-power of enemy forces. Within 30 minutes, the bridgehead was secure and ready to facilitate the maneuver of friendly forces.

Superstition runs rampant on Friday the 13th

By Bev Lockhart

Magic changes its form; it shifts its ground; but it exists everywhere. Especially on Friday the 13th.

Wherever there is danger, uncertainty, great incidence of chance and accident, even in entirely modern forms of enterprise, magic crops up.

Even aviation is beginning to develop its superstitions and magic. Many pilots refuse to take up a passenger wearing anything green, to start a journey on Friday, or to light three cigarettes on the same match while in flight. Their sensitiveness to superstition seems to increase with altitude.

Imbedded in the culture of the world's peoples, like the belief in spirits, superstition has important functions that continually change with the times.

Knocking on wood was once, like the pouring of water or oil at a Greek shrine or the throwing of earth over one's shoulder at a Chinese wedding, a gesture to avoid hubris — to placate the jealous gods who avenge themselves on a man happy enough to boast about his happiness. It became a cure for pride, a steeling of the boaster against psychological shock if his boast proved false.

No longer do people believe that the rice thrown at a wedding promotes fertility, but the custom lives on because it contributes to the gaity of the occasion.

In all cultures, some old customs are not only retained, but they are reinterpreted and given new meanings. Superstitions, then, are not mere obstinate survivals. Their functions change with changes in the culture's patterns or status among other cultures, but they remain human concerns to human beings.

It is said that a girl who takes the last cookie will be an old maid. The American folklorist Wayland Hand surmised that this is basically a taboo enjoined upon girls by older women to teach good manners.

When your left ear burns, someone is talking about you; cross it with a wet finger and avoid the scandal.

Male chauvinism has determined that a woman brings bad luck to a ship, a mine, a steel factory, or a lumberyard.

A guilty witch floats, while an innocent witch sinks — either way, she loses. Modern man has called this a rather expensive experiment, yet to the cultures that believe in them, witches are very potent.

Friday the 13th is regarded by superstitious persons as supremely unlucky. The superstition probably dates back to Christ's death. There were 13 men in attendance at the Last Supper; the Crucifixion took place on a Friday. Even office buildings, apartment houses and hotels avoid the 13th floor.

Some of these beliefs may seem strange to persons with a conventional Western education in science, technology, or religion. Superstitions can be better understood by studying their ethical, economic, psychological, social and even entertainment value to the people who believe in them.

Enforcement of Drug laws can be complicated

By Marie M. Russo

For more than a decade, drug abuse has been a major national concern. Education, rehabilitation and law enforcement have been the three prime responses to the problem.

According to one Company Commander, the most difficult aspect to deal with is law enforcement. "You practically have to memorize the UCMJ, the Regs, and the state laws that govern search and seizure in order to stop the drug traffic in your unit."

It should be noted that the thrust of the Army's program against drug abuse is to help the individual service member. "All efforts are made first to help the soldier by use of counseling or rehabilitation in the hope that the individual may once again be reinstated as a productive member of society and the Army," according to 1stLt. Robert Threlfall, project and plans officer at the Benning House.

Legal alternatives defined

If a leader identifies a service member who is using illegal drugs and feels that rehabilitation efforts are impossible or have already failed, then he/she has several legal alternatives in dealing with the service member according to Capt. Paul Anderson, chief of military justice on post.

Army regulation (AR 601-280) allows a commander to bar from reenlistment any individual he/she considers to be unsuitable or otherwise unqualified because of drug usage. This provision can be initiated without regard to the individual's ETS date, and if approved, would bar the individual from subsequent enlistment in the Army.

Civil authority arrests

AR 635-206 provides that an individual who has been convicted by civil authorities for a civil offense, (the offense, under the UCMJ, making the person liable to a maximum penalty of more than one year's confinement) may be discharged from the service.

Capt. Anderson says an example of this would be a soldier who is arrested by civil authorities for a drug offense and is then tried and convicted by a civil court. If the offense he/she is convicted of is in the UCMJ and the maximum penalty for that offense is in excess of one year, the soldier falls under the provisions of AR 635-206 and may be discharged from the Army.

Punishment given

Under this provision the soldier would receive a general discharge or, under certain circumstances, an honorable discharge.

Under the provisions of another Reg, (AR 635-200, Chap 13), an individual who is considered unsuitable or unfit for further service, because of drug use, may also be administratively discharged.

It is important to note that if the individual is separated for unfitness because of drug dependency or the unauthorized use or possession of habit-forming drugs or marihuana, he may receive either a general or honorable discharge depending upon the merits of the situation.

Under the provisions of the same regulation, a service member who is charged with a crime for which he could receive either a bad conduct or dishonorable discharge, he/she may request a discharge for the good of the service. The service member may once again receive either a general or honorable discharge.

The commander also has authority to invoke non-judicial punishment by Article 15 of the UCMJ.

Finally, if the offense is severe enough or if the service member refuses Article 15 punishment, the commander may prefer charges of a court-martial.

Anyone who is apprehended on post and 'Patriots' are reinvigorated

By Ron Fowler

Intensity — That was the watchword for the "Patriots" of the 1/58th Inf, 197th Infantry Bde, last week, as they took part in a week-long intensified training refresher program to sharpen skills needed for the successful completion of their upcoming Army Training and Evaluation Program (ARTEP).

"One of the basic goals in conducting this refresher training was to give our soldiers the chance to sharpen their skills as infantrymen," said Capt. Craig H. Pearson, assistant operations officer for the 1/58th Inf.

"When these skills have been honed to the point of perfection, we'll bring all these skills together collectively so the inividual soldiers will form as squads, platoons, and companies, and from there we'll undergo a rigorous ARTEP to evaluate our combat readiness as a mechanized infantry battalion," the captain continued.

Some of the subjects covered during the intensified refresher training included individual tactical movement, map reading, mines and booby traps, and camouflage operations. Each and every individual skill, hat collectively makes up a proficient infantry soldier, was gone over during the training.

"This is probably one of the finest refresher training programs that we have here in the brigade," said Sp4 James Jones, a radio-telephone operator in Co. B. "Training of this type enables us to keep our individual tactical proficiency to an absolute maximum. It's a great asset to all of us."

So the soldiers of the "Patriot" battalion will continue to strive toward total tactical proficiency with all their efforts directed toward one goal — successful completion of their ARTEP.

"With a program like this to work with," concluded Sp4 Jones, "we can't help but come through our upcoming ARTEP with flying colors!"

More MOSs open to women

Fourteen previously all male MOSs have been opened to women, the Secretary of the Army announced late in December.

The new policy leaves only 16 MOSs closed to women soldiers. It allows women to be assigned to brigade level headquarters, in Hawk and Hercules Missile air defense units, and missile and rocket field artillery elements such as Lance missile units. It also allows women to serve as pilots of helicopters, such as the Blackhawk, when flying support roles.

Assignments still closed to women are battalion and smaller size units of infantry, armor, cannon field artillery, combat engineer, low altitude air defense artillery and other combat specialties, such as special forces.

Women may also be assigned to the now all male 82nd Airborne Division. They may be placed in DISCOM, brigade and division headquarters. Only positions requiring airborne qualification will require women to become airborne qualified.

The 16 MOSs still closed to women are:

11B Infantryman
11C Indirect Fire Infantrymen
11D Armor Reconnaissance Specialist
11E Armor Crewman
11Z Maneuver Combat Arms Sergeant
12B Combat Engineer
12C Bridge Specialist
12E Atomic Demolition Munition Specialist
12Z Combat Engineer Senior Sergeant
13B Cannon Crewman
13E Cannon Fire Direction Specialist
13F Cannon Fire Support Specialist
16F Light ADA Crewman (Reserve Forces)
16P ADA Short Range Missile Crewman
16R ADA Short Range Gunner Crewman
17K Ground Surveillance Radar Crewman

The 14 MOSs recently opened to women are:

13W FA Target Acquisition Senior Sergeant
13Y Cannon/Missile Senior Sergeant
13Z FA Senior Sergeant
15B Sergeant Missile Crewman
15D LANCE Missile Crewman
15E PERSHING Missile Crewman
15F HONEST JOHN Rocket Crewman
15J LANCE/HONEST JOHN Operations Fire Direction Specialist
16B HERCULES Missile Crewman
16C HERCULES Fire Control Crewman
16D HAWK Missile Crewman
16E HAWK Fire Control Crewman
54C Smoke and Flame Specialist
82C FA Surveyor

The Army Reserve will also open the 14 additional MOSs to women.

In Memoriam

On January 16, Fort Benning personnel will observe the Birthday of the Reverend Martin Luther King, Jr.

On this day we should be reminded of Dr. King's lasting influence on America's society. It is an occasion to rededicate ourselves to the principles for which he lived and died — dignity to all, regardless of color, creed or national origin.

In recognition of Dr. King's many contributions, special Memorial Services will be conducted in Unit Chapels and Marshall Auditorium. All military personnel, their families, and civilian employees are encouraged to join in these services.

Out and about

An open invitation is extended to anyone interested in theatre by the Ft. Benning Dramatizers. Regular meetings are held Monday nights at 7:30 in Bldg 229.

Feeling let down after the holidays? The Destin Recreation Area could be just the thing to cheer you right up! It's open daily during the winter months, cabins are plentiful and the "Follow Me II" fishing boat is available to take you out onto the high seas.

Reservations are available on a first-come, first-served basis by dropping by the ITT office, Bldg 394 (Doughboy Stadium) or by calling 545-7414/2281.

Learn how to defend yourself! The Ft. Benning Judo Club will be accepting new members (active duty, retired and their dependents) ages six years and up January 17 thru 19 at the DYA Gym (Bldg 1055) from 6 to 8 p.m. and on January 21 from 12 to 3 p.m.

Monthly dues are $3 per person or $5 per family. For further info call Mrs. Keaton at 563-3486.

Pool Sharks, take your cue at the Foxhole Recreation Center tomorrow at 1 p.m. The 14.1 pool tournament will be the preliminary tournament at center level to determine the two individuals to represent the center at the post-level tournament.

Registration for Guitar and Piano classes at the Music and Theatre Center is taking place now. Classes will be held at 6 p.m. on Mondays.

For info call 545-1679.

DYA Soccer Registration takes place January 16 thru 31. If you think you have another Pele' on your hands, make sure he (she?) signs up!

For more info call 545-7853.

Saturday Night Fever is one of the most talked about films being shown right now and the Music and Theatre Center is ready to get in on some of the action. A Disco and Floor Show will be held in Bldg 229 on January 21 from 8 to 11 p.m. featuring the latest LPs played by the Music and Theatre Center's very own DJ!

The floor show will feature the live band "Leon Johnson" and a surprise specialty act.

Of course, admission is free and refreshments will be available.

Weekends can be a drag — when your kids are nagging at you about not having anything to do. Tomorrow, surprise them by taking them to the Columbus Museum of Arts and Crafts where Parley Davis, a musical magician who performs magic tricks and plays the accordian, will entertain them in the museum auditorium starting at 11 a.m.

Admission is $1 for children and free for accompanying adults.

Single people have problems too (don't I know it) but there IS help. The Columbus Pastoral Instutute is sponsoring a singles workshop tomorrow at the First Baptist Church in Columbus. Beginning at 9:30 a.m. a series of seminars including "Aloneness Without Loneliness," "Coping With Loss," "Sexuality as a Single," "Enhancing Self Image," "Religious Issues," "Legal Issues," and "Ongoing Functions of Parenting and Household Management" will be given by qualified single professionals and Pastoral Institute counselors.

Registration is $10.

The Atlanta Rhythm Section will be appearing in concert at the Columbus Municipal Auditorium on January 20 at 8 p.m. Tickets are available at Tapes 'N' Things on Victory Dr and Super Shirts in Columbus Square.

How to Safely Brown Bag It!

Kids (big and little) like to open their lunch bags and dig into all kinds of good food. It's also an easy way to save money. Of course, whether you pack a lunch for yourself or somebody else, you want to make sure it's wholesome when it's time to eat. Here are some brown bagin' tips:

- First off, the operation should be a clean one. That goes for your hands, utensils, and counter tops. Wash them thoroughly with soap and hot water. And, use utensils—not fingers—to put the food in your sandwiches; fingers spread bacteria.
- A thermos is one way to keep hot foods hot and cold foods cold. If you use one, be sure to wash and rinse it in boiling water after each use. If you're thinking about carrying soups, stews and chili in your thermos, that's fine as long as the food is boiling hot when it's poured into the thermos. Salmonella bacteria are killed by exposure to 155°F—well below the boiling temperature of 212°F.
- Another way to keep sandwiches safe is to pack a frozen sandwich that will thaw in time for lunch. It will also help keep the rest of the lunch cool. And don't let your lunch sit in a warm place, such as the top of the radiator. Warm places let bacteria grow.
- Canned meat and poultry products that can be opened and eaten immediately are a good bet, but be sure that the can is sealed and not bulged or dented. Dry meats or fully cooked products like bologna or franks also keep well.
- Lunch boxes, especially the insulated ones, hold the cold much better than paper bags. If you do use brown bags, though, buy them specifically for lunch and use them once; don't use bags in which you brought home groceries or other items.

Safe Brown Bag Lunches, a free pamphlet that tells how to pack a good lunch and avoid the perils of food poisoning, is available from the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

VA questions and answers

Q — I have National Service Life Insurance on a five-year level premium term plan, on disability waiver. Is it possible to convert this policy to a permanent plan while on waiver?

A — All term policies may be converted to any one of the permanent plans of its type, at any time, while the policy is in force without evidence of good health. However, NSLI may not be converted to an endowment policy while the insured is totally disabled.

Q — My annual income makes me ineligible for a VA pension, but I am in a nursing home. Am I eligible for regular aid and attendance fromthe VA?

A — Since Jan. 1, 1977, an aid and attendance allowance may be paid to veterans whose entitlement to current law pension and aid and attendance would otherwise be denied because of income in excess of the statutory limitation, if the income is within $500 of the limit and if the veteran meets all other requirements for aid and attendance.

Q — My uncle, who was receiving a pension from the Veterans Administration, was recently sentenced to a year in jail. Wh will get his pension now?

A — He will continue t receive his pension for th first 60 days he is in carcerated. If he has a wif or child his pension benefit may be continued to them as an apportionment.

Canada's federal communications department is changing the rules for Canadian CBers in an attempt to clamp down on hard-core abusers.

The changes will provide tougher measures to deal with CBers who hog the channels, use the wrong frequencies, disrupt channels in use or use illegal amounts of power.

Changes will also be introduced to clamp down on the estimated 60,000 to 120,000 Canadians who are operating without a license. There are now more than 600,000 legally licensed CBers in Canada.

Beginning this year, new CB licenses will only be issued to operators who have equipment meeting tighter technical requirements. However, CBers who have the older equipment will be allowed to renew their licenses without having to purchase the newer equipment. About 90 percent of the CB equipment now in use in Canada was made under the old regulations.

The tighter technical requirements are expected to reduce the problem of interference CBs can cause to television and ordinary radio sets.

Engineers Society meeting scheduled

The Society of American Military Engineers will meet in the Corregidor Room of the Officers' Club on January 25 at 11:30 a.m.

The meeting will begin with a brief social period, followed by a luncheon and a speech by Gen. (Retired) Bruce C. Clarke. The General's topic will be the "Engineers 1978 National Celebration."

Gen. Clarke graduated from the U.S. Army Military Academy in June 1925 and was commissioned in the Corps of Engineers. He graduated from Cornell University as a Civil Engineer in 1927, and served in engineer units in the United States, Hawaii and the Philippines.

In 1951 he was the commanding general of Ft. Hood, Texas. In 1953 he assumed command of I Corps in Korea and later was commanding general of X Corps in Korea. In 1954 he assumed command of U.S. Army Pacific. He was the commanding general of the Seventh Army in Germany in 1956 and then in 1958 became Commander of the U.S. Continental Army Command at Ft. Monroe, Va.

Veterinary Care

The Veterinary Animal Disease Prevention and Control Facility is open Monday thru Thursday between 1 and 3 p.m. on an appointment basis.

Appointments may be made three working days in advance by calling 545-4444 between 8 and 11:30 a.m. Immunizations and treatments are limited to those outpatient procedures designed to reduce the transmission of animal disease (i.e., parasite control, heartworm testing and prophylaxis, etc.) to humans and other animals.

Surgical, hospital, x-ray and laboratory procedures are not within the capability of the facility, but will be referred to civilian veterinarians. Civilian veterinarians may be located in the yellow pages of the telephone directory.

The Animal Disease Prevention and Control Facility will continue to issue health certificates and process animal bite cases.

Armed Forces Disciplinary Control Board

Armed Forces personnel who feel they have been unjustly or unfairly treated by local civilian establishments and businesses may lodge their complaints to the Armed Forces Disciplinary Control Board.

Further info may be obtained by calling the AFDCS Investigator or Maj. Martin at 544-4016/4424.

Drivers Education

Ft. Benning's Dependent Youth Activities (DYA) is offering Drivers Education to military dependents (both active and retired) between the ages of 15 and 19.

Registration for the classes, to be held January 16 thru March 6, is being held at Bldg 1054.

The registration fee is $100 per child.

Spoken Language Courses

The Army Education Center (Bldg 35) will be conducting courses in spoken German and Spoken Spanish February 13 thru April 10 from 6:30 to 9 p.m.

The Spoken German course will be taught using the German HEADSTART program material. Dependents may attend on a space available basis when accompanied by military sponsor.

There is no cost to the individual and textbooks are furnished on a loan basis. To enroll, call 545-4558 or drop by Bldg 35, Rm 314.

"Here, have another cookie," says Chief of Staff, Col. Addison D. Davis III to Melinda Vejar (center) and Kim Schafer of Girl Scout Troop 235. Col. Davis bought the first box of Girl Scout Cookies sold on Benning Monday. The girls will be taking orders for cookies today through January 21 for a February delivery. The cookies are $1.25 per box and come in six varieties.

Committee reviews doctor shortage

A review committee has been created to study both short and long term solutions to Army doctor shortages, DA officials announced in December.

The committee, headed by the Surgeon General, will study 37 suggested initiatives and make recommendations on health care policies. While some changes in policy may come later during the committee's review, other recommendations are expected later in the committee's term, tentatively scheduled to end in November.

The committee will study the possibility of immediately restoring lost health service wherever possible, increasing physician strength, updating and creating physician incentive programs and possibly contracting out some health care jobs.

The Army is currently short about 680 physicians. The greatest shortages are specialists in anesthesiology, internal medicine, pathology, pediatrics, psychiatry, radiology, general surgery, obstetrics and gynocology, ophthalmology, otolaryngology (ear, nose and throat) and orthopedic surgery.

Some Army installations are now providing care only to active duty soldiers. The panel will attempt to identify feasible means for restoring care for dependents and retired personnel.

Inspectors visit Post dining facility in Army competition

By Bill C. Walton

Benning's nomination for competition in the 10th Annual Philip A. Connelly Award Program for Excellence in Army Food Service is the dining facility of the 34th Medical Bn.

The award, which is sponsored by the International Food Services Executives Association for the Department of the Army, provides recognition for excellence in the preparation and serving of food in troop dining facilities throughout the Army.

A two man inspection team from TRADOC, Capt. James Eaves and CSM Joseph Anderson visited here recently to inspect the last of the 17 TRADOC Posts' dining facilities.

The inspection criteria for each dining facility, which is inspected during the breakfast and lunch meals of a week day, includes acceptability of food by personnel, quality of food served and the appearance and attitude of food service personnel. Incentive programs to motivate personnel, ingenuity and innovation in improving dining area appearance and command support and interest are also judged.

When SFC Ernie B. Hamm, the medical battalion's dining facility manager, was asked how he thought his facility fared in the inspection he replied, "I think we did real fine.

"We prepared two normal everyday meals and the troops seemed to enjoy them. All of the dining facility's personnel work as a team and I believe this was very apparent to the inspectors. They weren't allowed to give us a rating or tell us how we compared to the other dining facilities, but I am proud of the way our team performed and feel sure we will rank high in the finals."

The TRADOC winner will be announced in February and that dining facility will compete against the winners of the seven other worldwide commands in May and June. The eight finalists will be evaluated by judges from the DA level.

Everything by the book, including the correct recipe, is what wins dining facility awards. Under the close inspection of CSM Joseph Anderson, TRADOC Connelly Award Inspection Team, Sp5 Lee Norris, 121st Aviation Co, 34th Medical Bn, looks for the proper recipe to prepare a dish for the noon meal, one of two meals inspected by the team at the dining facility recently.

Current NCO photos a must

Current photos for all soldiers in the grades E-6 through E-9 are required in their Official Military Personnel File. The Photo must be updated each five years during the soldier's birth month.

Male soldiers must be photographed in the Army Green uniform with basic branch insignia, all permanently authorized ribbons, badges and tabs — correctly displayed and low quarter shoes.

Women soldiers must wear the Army Green uniform, coat and skirt, with insignia of their permanent branch, properly displayed ribbons, badges, tabs and black pumps.

Soldiers are reminded that in this era of a smaller peacetime Army and lower promotion selection rates, the official photo has taken on an increased significance. It is important that soldiers take action to submit and update photos as required, and that they present the best image possible in their photos, explained a DA official.

AMC PACER

THAT FAMILIAR WIDE DESIGN HAS A LUXURIOUS NEW LOOK

We think the Pacer has always been a pretty stylish car, too. But now, there's a whole new dimension to Pacer's good looks. You might even say the new Pacer D-L Hatchback is downright luxurious. Besides the newly styled grille and front end, it has individual reclining front seats in Velveteen crush fabric or soft-feel vinyl, an electric clock, high level ventilation, Extra Quiet Insulation, whitewall tires with color-keyed wheel covers, bumper nerfing strips, deluxe interior and exterior trim, and much more—all standard.

It's covered by AMC's exclusive Buyer Protection Plan. And the Pacer D-L's surprisingly low price tag makes it one of the best values on the road today.

falls under federal jurisdiction, should be aware that the use and abuse of drugs is regulated by the Controlled Substances Act of 1970. This Act governs the use, possession, sale, transfer, delivery and manufacture of all drugs addressed with the exception of alcohol.

Penalties received

The Act also provides that the penalties for first offense simple possession of a controlled substance to be "... a term of imprisonment of not more than one year, a fine of not more than $5,000, or both (84 Stat.1242, 1264)."

This Act applies only to the federal jurisdiction. However, state governments have adopted this Act or modified versions of it. Because of this, many states still make possession of any of the controlled substances a felony offense. A person convicted of a felony may lose such privileges as voting, holding public office, owning and bearing firearms, holding a professional license (doctor, lawyer, CPA, etc.), being bonded and receiving a security classification.

Felons may also be subject to registration requirements upon entering or leaving states, counties, or other political subdivisions.

In Georgia, the first offense, simple possession carries the penalty of a fine of not more than $2,000 or a prison sentence of not more than two years or both. "It should be noted," stated Capt. Patrick Gibbs, chief of administrative law on post, "that in Georgia the offense is considered a felony."

Thus, for the individual who is convicted for a drug offense, either by military or civilian authorities, the future can be a very dim prospect. Burdened with either a dishonorable discharge or a felony conviction or even with the record of being a drug user, the individual will later find it very hard to obtain decent employment.

"A Ledger-Enquirer Newspaper published in the Interest of the Personnel of Fort Benning

Misprint in 11C Job Books

The old adage "You can't judge a book by its cover" certainly holds true for the recently published MOS 11C Job Books.

Due to a contractor's error the MOS 11C Job Books were distributed inside an MOS 11B Job Book cover. Units are requested to check the Infantryman Job Book series. The 11C Job Books can be used by simply removing the incorrect cover.

Band chosen for Mardi Gras

The only band from Georgia selected to participate in the New Orleans Mardi Gras activities is Benning's Colonial Band of Explorer Post 76.

The band will be holding a dress rehearsal tomorrow morning at 11 on York Field, in front of Bldg. 4, and everyone is invited to the marching performance, weather permitting.

The Colonial Band will share the spotlight with 17 other bands from across the country that will march in one or more of the six parades planned during the Mardi Gras.

Marching four miles through the historic French Quarter in News Orleans, the Colonial Band will carry no music but play from memory, the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," "Stars and Stripes Forever," and the Dixieland-style marches, according to Maj. Bill Drollinger, band leader.

Benning scouts earn Eagle

The highest scout rank was awarded to Carl Madison and Allen Fox at a national Eagle Scout Court of Honor held recently at the Main Post chapel annex.

Carl started his scouting in Germany and completed his work for the Eagle rank by conducting a post-wide drive to collect food for the Army Community Services (ACS) Emergency Food Locker.

Allen also started scouting in Germany and culminated his trip along the trail to the Eagle by conducting a toy collection for ACS. These toys were repaired and distributed to needy families at Christmas.

Carl is the son of SFC and Mrs. Edward Madison of the AIT Bde and Allen's parents are SFC and Mrs. James Fox of the airborne department, USAIS.

Only one percent of the boys in scouting ever achieve the Eagle rank.

Radio airs post broadcaster

Benning has its own radio broadcaster, PFC Sylvia Underwood. She has been with the Public Affairs Office since August and can be heard six days a week on three of the local radio stations.

The schedule for PFC Underwood's broadcasts is:

Benning News	Mon.-Fri., 2:25 pm	WOKS, AM 1340
Benning Report	Thursday, 4:06 pm	WRCG, AM 1420
Contemporary music	Sunday 8:30 am	WRCG, AM 1420
Contemporary music	Sunday 8:30 am	WCLS, AM 1580

Soldier of the Quarter chosen

A mechanic at the 546th Medical Co. 34th Medical Bn., was named Benning's Soldier of the Quarter. Being the first soldier from the 34th Medical Bn ever to win the post award, he disputed a long standing Army rumor that motor pool mechanics are some of the worst soldiers in the Army.

Sp4 Jon A. Fleming, a native of Flat River, Mo., was assigned to Benning in May. A veteran of two years service in the Marine Corps he decided to enlist in the Army because of the promotion possibilities, education and training.

While at Benning he has worked in the 546th Medical Co. Motor Pool helping to maintain 15 vehicles and 20 trailers. "He is one of the best," says his first sergeant, Wayman Howard, "If I had 125 more like him in the company it would be ideal."

As Post Soldier of the Quarter Fleming will receive several prizes and honors. These include a USAIC Certificate of Achievement, a three day pass, ninety days exemption from unit duty, luncheon with USAIC Sergants Major, a twenty-five dollar saving bond, an Uncle Sam Bicentennial Bank and a certificate with a year membership in the AUSA.

Engineers from Co C, 43rd Engineer Bn, recently moved the Oglethorpe Monument from its old home at the Confederate Naval Museum on 4th Street, to its new location at the Chattahoochee Promenade on Front Street. National Infantry Museum Curator and Bicentennial Trust Fund trustee Dick Grube coordinated the movement operation for the 55-year-old, 20 ton hunk of granite. After a couple of hours of pushing and tugging the engineers finally managed to complete the operation without a scratch or chip.

Abandoned pets causing stray animal problems

By Kavan L. Stull

You've cleared the post and you're ready to leave on that cross-country PCS. The car's packed and you're pulling out of the driveway and there's only one thing left to do. And that's put the dog out.

Unbelievable? To most people perhaps, but according to animal control officials here, abandoned pets are a major factor in the stray pet problem on Benning. SSgt. Delmas Shipman, NCOIC of the Wildlife Management Section of Military Police, said that most of the stray animal problems can be traced to personnel clearing post and leaving their unwanted pets behind.

"Many people have the mistaken belief that someone, somewhere, will adopt their pet," he said. "Often the pet does not find a home and is left for itself to fend off disease and starvation."

Not only is pet abandonment inhumane, it's also against Benning regulations, according to Shipman. "Violations include such things as failure to provide shelter for pets; failure to provide food and water, and abandoning any pet.

Pet owners are responsible for controlling their pets at all times, said Shipman. "Animals, including cats, are not permitted to run loose on post. All pets, when outside, must be leashed or under voice control and within sight of the responsible individual."

When pets are turned loose, the Wildlife Management Section takes the necessary steps to control the animals. "The wildlife section will pick up stray animals found or reported loose on post. We turn them over to the veterinary facility for confinement and disposition. Disposition can mean finding the animal a new home or taking steps to see that the animal is put to sleep," explained Shipman.

Ending an animal's life isn't a pretty thought, especially when it's a pet animal, like a dog or cat. "But a painless, peaceful death is preferable to being subject to disease, starvation and being hit by a motor vehicle and left to die in the road," said Shipman.

If a pet is impounded by the Military Police Wildlife Section, and the owner has violated the animal control procedures as prescribed in USAIC Regulation 210-10, a Military Police Report will be initiated charging the individual with the failure to control a pet. The report will then be forwarded through command channels. Pets will not be released from the Post Veterinarian without a statement of release from the military police.

SSgt. Shipman recommends that pet owners observe three responsibilities:

- Be aware of USAIC Regulation 210-10 dealing with pet control and your responsibility as a pet owner. All pets over three months of age maintained on post must be registered with the post veterinary animal disease prevention and control facility.
- If you leave post on vacation, arrange to have your animal cared for.
- If you have a dog, cat or other pet you no longer want, don't just turn it loose to starve. Turn it over to the post veterinarian. Stray animals are a health and safety hazard.

News in brief

Wooden building bids open

Informal bids for wooden buildings on Post will be taken by the Savannah District Corps of Engineers until 2 p.m. January 31.

The bids are for the purchase and removal of any or all of the remaining 49 wooden buildings listed on Bid No. SAV-RE-78-11.

Interested personnel may inspect the property by contacting the Facilities Engineer Real Estate Office between the hours of 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. at 545-7144. Bids may then be made to Savannah by telephone — 912-233-8822 extension 451.

Anyone can bid on these buildings most of which are on Main Post. Some go for as little as $5, but the successful bidder must post a cash performance deposit of $150 per building to insure the faithful performance of the contract. This deposit will be return if the purchaser removes the building on time and leaves the area cleared of any debris except for the concrete footings. Sixty days are allowed for the removal of one building and the time allowance increases with the number of buildings purchased.

Out-of-state licenses, plates may not be valid here

If you are driving with a license or license plate from a previous station you may be in violation of the law, according to the Judge Advocate General's (JAG) Office.

License plates and driver's licenses from states other than a driver's home state or the state where he is stationed are invalid in Georgia, according to Capt. Kathryn Forrester, chief of legal assistance here.

This means driver's and vehicle licenses that a Benning soldier obtains from another state are invalid here unless that state is the driver's legal residence.

The charge would be "no state driver's license" or "no state tag." Maximum penalties range to a $50 fine.

Sweater okay over fatigues

The Commanding General has authorized the wear of British Army Sweaters over fatigue uniforms, with a few minor stipulations.

The sweater must be O.D. green, worn only as an outer garment with the fatigue jacket collar worn outside the sweater neck. Insignia and other accoutrements cannot be displayed.

Of course, if you don't want to wear the sweater, you don't have to. But if you're having problems keeping warm, you can pick one up at the PX Uniform Clothing Sales Store or the Infantry Hall Book Store for $21.25. The sweaters are available in sizes 38 through 46.

Look for SQT Notices

The SQT Notice tells soldiers what combat critical skills in their MOS and skill level will be contained in their SQT. Using the information in the SQT Notice, soldiers can consult their Soldier's Manual to review those skills prior to demonstrating them on the SQT.

The SQT may contain either or all of the three major components including the written component, hands-on component and commander's certification.

AD&D coverage up to $22,500 included.

Your MBA Group Term Plan provides Accidental Death and Dismemberment coverage automatically. Supplemental AD&D is also available at the low cost of $2 a month for members; $3 for a member and spouse.

Protect your family.

For only $3 additional each month you get important life insurance protection for the other members of your family. MBA's family coverage includes automatic AD&D, and conversion privileges to help your children start life insurance programs of their own.

You can keep MBA coverage for life.

When you leave the military or retire, your MBA coverage continues according to the schedule. There's no complicated conversion redtape. So it's easy to keep MBA protection. And you'll want to keep it for its value.

Good news from MBA.

Recent changes in the MBA Plan now make MBA even better. First, MBA eliminated the war clause. We've also made additional benefits available for experienced flyer members. Finally, MBA's new Additional Benefits Plan boosts total possible coverage to $150,000. That's the greatest value in insurance coverage available through any single military insurance plan.

MBA is one of the largest and oldest organizations of its kind.

And MBA is underwritten by one of the most respected financial institutions in the world. Mutual Of New York. MONY for the future.

New promotion worksheet brings major changes

Major changes in a revised E-5 and E-6 promotion worksheet are expected to drop individual promotion points and DA cutoff scores. The new worksheet, containing the first changes in three years, is scheduled to be in Army-wide use in February and will determine cutoff scores beginning May 1.

The worksheet retains a 1,000-point ceiling but point categories have been changed and points redistributed. It eliminates 25 points for physical requirements and 100 points for a commander's evaluation. Revised areas include a possible 150 points each for EER weighted averages and SQT scores and a score of 200 for combined military and civilian education.

If the servicemember hasn't taken an SQT, the total administrative points will be used to award extra points using the scale established on the new form.

Computations may be done differently

Maximum points for all other categories are the same but some are computed differently or requirements are added and deleted. For instance, time in service is computed differently. Only one point is given for each month exceeding the time in service (TIS) requirement in the new worksheet, compared to two points under the current system. Each month under the requirements (for soldiers requiring a TIS waiver) carries a one point penalty instead of the current one-half point penalty for each six-month period below the requirement.

"New promotion point worksheet??? I didn't even understand the old one."

Time in grade requirements change

Time in grade (TIG) requirements now carry 70 points instead of the current 60 points. Additions and subtractions for TIG requirements are unchanged.

EER and MOS test scores are currently combined for a maximum score of 150. The new system now allows 150 points each for EER weighted averages, and SQT scores replace MOS test scores. This change is the main reaon for the worksheet revision. An administrative score is computed based on an average of other categories for soldiers without SQT scores.

The awards and decorations category still carries a maximum 50 points but the Purple Heart has been added for six points and expert infantry and medical badges have been added for four points each.

Education category has major changes

The most drastic changes are in the education category. The current 125 military education and 100 civilian education points are combined for a maximum 200 points using any combination of the two areas. This allows soldiers with more than 100 points in civilian or more than 125 points in military education to transfer points into the other education category.

Point values for military education are changed for some training. Military correspondence courses are now worth the approximate value of resident courses. Currently, soldiers are given far more points for correspondence courses that resident courses. A corespondence course of 250 credit hours currently awards a one-half point per hour, or the maximum 125 points. The new system awards 16 points for a 250 credit hour correspondence course, based on dividing the hours by 15 and allowing no points for 14 hours or less.

Other military education point values are also changed. Points for NCOES are no longer allowed since the EPMS is requiring either NCOES or equivalent experience for promotion. NCO academies are being phased out of the Army training system and will no longer carry 20 points for a four-week course. Instead, two points will be awarded for each week of an NCO academy, based on a new computation for leadership courses.

Civilian education points are no longer awarded for elementary school attendance since it is mandatory for all enlisted personnel. High school points are not awarded to E-5s competing for E-6 promotions since it too is a madatory requirement. E-4s are still awarded 60 points for high school completion, or 15 points per year.

College credit hour points are increased from one-half point per hour to one point under the new system, whether they are resident, correspondence or test credits.

The 250 points possible from a promotion board remain unchanged.

Scores expected to drop

The new system is expected to reduce individual promotion scores and DA cutoff scores. DA is anticipating that some soldiers will fall below the current minimum cutoff from 600 to 550 points. Soldiers who fall below the minimum 550 for an E-6 promotion or the minimum 500 for promotion to E-5 secondary and 450 for E-5 primary zone, will be allowed to remain on promotion lists.

The 25-point physical requirement was was dropped, according to a DA official, because it discriminates against soldiers with legitimate physical profiles. He said the commander's evaluation was also dropped because commanders' ratings are usually high and do not provide a comparison between soldiers.

The expected drop in promotion scores will not discriminate against soldiers, the official stressed. Soldiers who lose points because they no longer receive credit for high school, NCOES, or are without SQT scores will compete with soldiers who also lose these points. As overall scores drop — as expected — for soldiers competing for promotions in the same MOS, cutoff scores will also drop.

The 24-point physical requirement was system and others will lose," says SSgt. Clem Kelsoe, NCOIC, Promotion Section, COMPACT. "We took an E-5 who was on the E-6 promotion list and recomputed his scores under the new system. He had 888 points under the old but only had 608 under the new system. He was promoted January 1 so he wasn't affected by the new worksheet, but there are others who may have this happen to them," explained SSgt. Kelsoe.

"Under the old system, an E-6 received 60 points for graduating from high school. That has changed, all things that are required for the lists aren't awarded points," Kelsoe continued.

DA officials plan to issue lengthy instructions on the new worksheet which they say contain "safeguards for soldiers" changing the April recomputation to February. Questions on the new worksheet should be directed to SSgt. Kelsoe by calling 545-7455 or dropping by Bldg. 83, Room 324.

Alexander addresses military issues

The age of coddling women in the Army is dead according to Secretary of the Army Clifford Alexander Jr.

"A woman in the Army is a soldier in the Army and should be treated as such. That means if she does well, she is to reap those rewards and if she does poorly, she is to receive the same treatment as a man would," said Alexander, during a press conference held Friday at the conclusion of his two-day Benning visit.

Speaking to a group of local media reporters in the VIP Lounge at the Lawson Airfield, Alexander noted that "Retirees had an appropriate gripe on their eroding medical benefits. We have tried to do a better job of providing these services, but we haven't done as well as we could," he remarked.

The secretary explained that a lot of the controversy was due to money, plus administration, citing the "awful administrative chaos" in the CHAMPUS program as an example.

Alexander feels there is no need right now to return to the draft. "The goals we set for ourselves, and Congress went along with them, we met by 99.4 percent." He went on to say that the quality of the people in today's Army is sufficient and "we are able to meet our goals with our all volunteer force."

Secretary of the Army Clifford L. Alexander Jr. visits the Airborne Department's McCarthy Hall facilities during his recent visit to Benning.

Reflecting on the major concern over the utilization of minorities, blacks, chicanos and Puerto Ricans, the Secretary said, "We do better on the utilization of minorities than any major institution in America, however, more needs to be done. Commanders need to continue utilizing more minorities. I have instructed promotion boards to find patterns of discrimination and eliminate them."

Alexander said he could see no serious racial tension at Benning. He noted a very high black population in the enlisted ranks, some 40 percent in the training category.

Overall the secretary found his Benning visit to be a very enjoyable one, allowing him the opportunity to meet and a talk with a number of today's "impressive" soldiers.

Secretary Alexander assumed office in February. His military experience consists of a tour with the New York National Guard in 1958-59.

He served as Foreign Affairs Officer of the National Security Council under President John F. Kennedy and as deputy special assistant, associate special counsel and deputy special counsel to President Lyndon B. Johnson.

His other government experience includes the chairmanship of the Equal Opportunity Commission from 1967-69.

Mr. Alexander was a partner in a Washington law firm from 1969 until his appointment as Secretary of the Army. He also hosted and co-produced a weekly television program from 1972-76.

He holds an A.B. from Harvard and an LL.B. from Yale.

Army Secretary's wife tours post

By Joyce Walker

When Mrs. Adele Alexander, wife of the Secretary of the Army, accompanies her husband on a post tour, she likes to strike out on a separate tour of her own.

"There are so many places to go and people to see in the Army, until I feel that my assistance is greatest when I'm off on my own," explained Mrs. Alexander during her visit to Fort Benning Thursday and Friday. "This way," she continued, "I can see the kinds of things he doesn't get to see."

While at Benning, Mrs. Alexander went to the 36th Engineer Gp Headquarters, 478th Aviation Co., and the 498th Medical Co. (Air Ambulance) visiting and interviewing women soldiers while there.

An alumna of Radcliffe College, where she majored in architectural sciences, Mrs. Alexander does free lance art, mostly pen and ink work. Prior to her husband's appointment, the native New Yorker came into contact with very few military persons. Now she takes an active interest in all aspects of Army life, especially the areas in the Army where women have an expanded role.

"One of the things my husband is particularly concerned about is the expanding role of women in the Army," she explained. "Therefore, one of the general things I try to do on every visit, is meet women soldiers and get a sense of their particular satisfactions and frustrations."

From her observations of women in the Army at various posts, Mrs. Alexander commented that she is impressed with the fact that in spite of the prejudices and fears, women are getting involved with and doing rather well in many aspects of Army life that were traditionally male domains.

The highlight of her Benning tour was the visit to the 478th Aviation Co where "those CH54s were the biggest helicopters I've ever seen," she exclaimed. Mrs. Alexander was also impressed with the mess hall of the 524th Personnel Service Co, where "I had a very interesting lunch with a group of women officers," she concluded.

NCOWC News
Change of Officers

Christine Bass resigned as President of the NCO Wives Club at the close of their general business meeting, on January. The Bass' will be departing Ft. Benning on or about February 11 for a tour of duty in Germany.

New officers for the NCOWC are: President, Mary Wildman; 1st Vice President, Sandra Jackson; 2nd Vice President, Elizabeth Jackson; and Correspondence Secretary, Ann Cogar.

Lunchon

Members and guests of the NCO Wives Club met for lunch at Johnny's Restaurant on January 18. The ladies enjoyed a delicious buffet lunch followed by coffee and dessert.

This month's hostesses are Esther Richard, Ethel Wise, Dorothy Sawyer, and Sallie Smith.

Gourmet Games

The NCO Wives Club sponsored their monthly gourmet games at Martin Army Hospital January 19. The patients played games for gourmet treats, hosted by the Coffee Call chairman, Edith Morgan, and other volunteers from the NCOWC membership.

Hq 197th Inf Bde

On January 4, the Ladies of Hq 197th Infantry Brigade met at the home of Mrs. B. J. Maynard for their monthly coffee. Mrs. James R. Hall, wife of the Brigade Commander, welcomed the ladies and thanked them for coming. Mrs. Hall also bid farewell to Sandy Vick and presented her with the traditional engraved silver tray.

Special guest included Mrs. Dorothy Brown, the mother-in-law of Mrs. Dick Brown, who was visiting from Wisconsin.

Cold weather no hindrance to combat marksmen matches

By Julie Casey

The Post Championship Combat Rifle, Pistol and Machine Gun Matches held last week at Phillips and Easley Ranges were successful according to Match Director Capt. William Leaptrott.

"The scores were high, considering the cold weather. Everybody really hung in there. The scores were also higher than the scores at the Regional FORSCOM matches last year at Ft. Meade, Md.," commented Capt. Leaptrott.

Individual combat pistol and rifle matches were completed January 10 with cold weather and winds bringing temperature down to 2 degrees above zero.

1stLt. Richard Pederson of the 43rd Co 4th Student Bn, TSB is firing with one glove on and one off because of the freezing temperature during the individual 400 yd. slow fire rifle matches Tuesday.

In the second half of the week, the team pistol, rifle and machine gun matches were held with slightly warmer temperatures and rain.

The individual combat pistol and rifle competitions were divided into two classes; open and novice. The open class was for competitors who had previously fired with the same type of weapon at post level of competition. The novice class was open to competitors who had not previously fired with the same type of weapon at post level of competition. There was also an aggregate award given for the over all winner in the matches.

In team competitions, post units were placed in competition against each other.

Chief Statistical Officer Tom Kirkman said, "In combat marksmanship we are trying to teach soldiers to perform under pressure in simulated combat situations. The cold weather really emphasized that point in this year's matches."

At the team rifle matches, the eight members of the team were required to run two miles in at least 25 minutes with only a three minute rest before firing. They were also required to run with their gear on — steel pots and all.

Sixteen matches were held with 185 contestants competing. Excellence in competition points were awarded to the top 10 percent in the three catagories.

From last week's matches marksmen will be chosen to represent Benning in the Regional FORSCOM Matches at Ft. Meade, in March.

"They will begin training within the week to prepare for the upcoming matches and we will be training them to win," said Mr. Kirkman.

Capt. Leaptrott commented that the names of the team members are not yet confirmed, but he is hoping to pick up about 35 members. He also said," I feel that our combat rifle team will push any other team. They are going to surprise a lot of people."

'Army takes care of its own'

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article is the last of a two-part series dealing with alcoholism and other drug abuse. The article explores why the Alcohol and Drug Control Office (ADCO) was established, how programs are conducted, and why alcoholism and drug abuse is a problem in today's Army.

By Debra Hilgeman

It is often said that we are living in a "drug-oriented society." Drugs of all kinds are readily available by prescription or over-the-counter purchase to anyone who wants them.

And, at one time or another, everyone is a drug user, whether the drug be caffeine, alcohol, nicotine, aspirin or one of the illegal drugs such as LSD or heroin.

The Army has always had soldiers with drinking problems; instances go as far back as the Revolutionary War. During the Viet Nam conflict the popularity of other drugs became visible and led to the passage of a law requiring the armed forces to establish treatment programs. Each of the services took different routes in accomplishing this objective; the Army did it by establishing the Alcohol and Drug Control Office (ADCO) to rehabilitate alcoholics and other drug offenders.

Benning has its share of alcoholics and drug abusers and the number is increasing. "The Army is a reflection of society," explained 1st Lt. Gorden Threlfall, deputy ADCO. "Drug usage is accepted by our culture and soldiers bring this acceptance with them when they come in the service. We tend to see these problems more clearly in the Army, however, because we are more close-knit," he continued.

Individuals are identified as having an alcohol or drug problem through one of four ways: commanders refer individuals, Troop Medical Clinics or the hospital refers individuals, treatment is sought voluntarily or individuals enter the program when they are picked up for an incident.

How widespread is the problem here? Last year there were 1490 Benning people identified as having an alcohol or drug problem. Of this number, 191 entered the rehabilitation program and 174 completed it successfully—a success rate of about 91 percent. The remaining people attended the three-day Alcohol and Drug Awareness course. With an overall success rate of about 85 percent, Benning's ADCO program is rated the most successful in TRADOC.

The ADCO program is financially useful in addition to its humanistic benefits. DA has figured that chemical addiction reduces productivity by 25 percent, so far every four days a man is a success in the program the Army has gained one man day. On Benning, the man days saved last year came to 8000 man days, or about 22 years. "We're one of the few Army programs that pays for itself," stressed Threlfall.

If an individual is referred to ADCO, he does not necessarily have to undergo prolonged treatment. Each individual is first evaluated by one of ten ADCO counselors. If the individual is determined through evaluation not to have a problem, he must attend two-hour classes over a period of three days.

If, however, the person is recognized as having a problem, either the resident or non-resident program will be recommended. A person in the non-resident program must attend ADCO meetings four times a week the first two weeks, twice a week for six weeks, and a ten-month followup phase with a minimum of two visits a month.

The resident program requires an individual to live at Benning House for 30 days, followed by 30 days non-residency, followed by 300 days of followup treatment with periodic evaluation.

After 60 days of treatment, a client and his commander meet with a counselor for a formal progress evaluation. If the client is deemed a rehabilitative failure by the commander, the next step is a Chapter 16 discharge.

If an individual is successful for the 60-day treatment his records are destroyed. The only people who know of an individual's involvement in the program are his counselor, supervisor and commander.

The client's anonymity is protected by public law; violation of which could result in a $5000 fine and a jail sentence. Another protection for the clients is an ADCO agreement with the Provost Marshall and the Criminal Investigation Division (CID) — no harassment, visits or drug dogs at Benning House, according to Threlfall. "We do have inspections but our counselors conduct them," he explained.

Although some of ADCO's clients have problems with drugs such as marijuana, the overwhelming majority is suffering from alcoholism. "Alcohol is the biggest drug of choice," Threlfall stated. "Senior officers and non-commissioned officers almost universally use alcohol; it's part of their age group," he continued.

The ADCO program has no age restriction and is open to military personnel, DA civilians, dependents and retirees. "We've had people in their seventies in the program, we've also had clients as young as 13. Juveniles have the choices of using civilian facilities but military personnel don't have that choice—It's here or nothing," Threlfall emphasized.

ADCO helps not only individuals, but families as well. If a client's drinking caused family problems there is a family counselor available for as long as the client and his family desire the service. "We're a good example of the Army taking care of its own," said Threlfall. "We have one couple where the retired husband has been

Some benefits to Veterans tax-exempt

Every year from January through mid-April, most Americans are involved in their annual struggle with income-tax forms. And Georgia Veterans Service Director Pete Wheeler again is reminding Georgia veterans and their families that some of the benefits they may be receiving are exempt from taxation.

Among these tax-exempt benefits are compensation, pension and educational assistance, including subsistence payments to vocational rehabilitation trainees. These monthly payments do not have to be reported on federal income tax returns.

Also exempt are death benefits paid to veterans' survivors, VA grants to service-connected veterans for specially-adapted homes and automobiles, and special clothing allowances paid to service-disabled veterans whose clothing is subjected to excessive wear due to their use of prosthetic or orthopedic appliances.

Dividends and proceeds from government life insurance policies are also exempt from federal income tax, but the interest earned on insurance dividends left on deposit with the VA is not exempt and must be reported on both federal and state returns.

The Internal Revenue Service advises Georgians having questions to call the IRS at 1-800-222-1040 for assistance.

3/7th Infantry beefs up TOW t

By Ron Fowler

In an effort to beef up their anti-tank capabilities the soldiers from the Anti-Tank (AT) Co, 3/7th Infantry have been conducting an intensified training program on anti-armor operations with the TOW weapons system.

"One of our main reasons for being out here is so that we can let our crews get some practical hands-on experience in a tactical environment," said SSgt. William Hasting, a TOW section leader in the AT Co. "The only way that we're going to be able to be totally proficient in our anti-armor capabilities is to get out here in the field, put our noses to the grindstone, and train!"

And train is exactly what the soldiers of the AT Co did as they underwent more than eight straight hours of intensive, grueling anti-armor crew drills. Every little area, down to the most minute detail was covered during the instruction and each block was culminated with a realistically staged practical exercise.

"All of this training that we've been conducting is to one end," commented Sp4 Wayne Frese, a TOW gunner in the company. "We're out here to sharpen our skills in preparation for the upcoming ARTEP. Our anti-armor capabilities are going to be greatly tested and taxed, and we're going to have to meet that challenge," Frese explained.

The ARTEP training will continue for the "Cottonbalers" of the 3/7th Infantry as they strive to maintain their standards as one of the finest units in the 197th Infantry Bde.

"We're here to perform a specific mission," concluded Frese, "and the only method by which we will be able to accomplish our mission is to train out here until all of our actions become second nature. When that time comes, we'll know that we're ready for anything."

Junior enlisted feels financial crunch

Financial hardships affect at least half the junior enlisted families, according to an Army survey of major commands.

The survey, cited by Army Chief of Staff General Bernard W. Rogers in his recent testimony before the President's Commission on Military Compensation, concluded that 50 to 80 percent of junior enlisted families are experiencing severe financial hardships.

Commanders, using their own criteria to define financial hardships, cited reenlistment and morale declines steeming from "barely adequate" pay, erosion of benefits and moving costs. A command in Europe reported that the economic situation there is impacting on soldier morale and detracts from the combat readiness of the U.S. forces in Europe.

Another command cited high civilian housing costs and troops living far from post, aggravating transportation problems, among financial troubles of junior enlisted families. The command also said that food stamps and second jobs were necessary income supplements for some families.

CHAMPUS curtailment and refusal of some physicians to accept CHAMPUS were also defined as problems in some commands.

Army Emergency Relief loans in one command, largely resulting from high rent and housing security deposit expenses, accounted for 41 percent of AER disbursements. Another 24 percent of the loans were for emergency food, utility and clothing expenses.

Fear of losing more education benefits was of primary concern in one command, which surveyed its first term soldiers.

Some lending institutions are reluctant to loan money to many junior enlisted families, according to respondents in the survey, forcing the soldiers to use less desirable short-term, high interest loans.

While some installations said financial hardships were found only among 7.5 percent of its junior ranks, others reported problems affecting up to 100 percent of the lower enlisted families. Hardest hit by high costs, according to the survey, are soldiers in Alaska, Hawaii, Washington, D.C. and heavily populated areas in the east and west. Least affected are those stationed in midwestern areas.

The DA survey was originally conducted in August 1976, with a similar survey in April to update the findings.

Andre Kole, recognized as one of the world's foremost authorities on the unusual, will present "World of Illusion," a Christian magic show based on prophesy of the Bible. The presentation, coordinated by TSB Chaplain Section, will be at Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall Bldg. 4, Sunday at 7 p.m.

sober for about five years and he and his wife are still working out their problems."

Unfortunately, medical science has not advanced to a point where persons susceptible to alcoholism can be identified before the person's drinking becomes a problem. "We do know that children of drug dependents quite often become dependent on drugs themselves and that most alcoholics have one or more alcoholic parents," Threlfall said.

The problems of alcoholism and drug abuse is a major concern in today's world. There are times not only in the Army but everywhere when getting drunk is socially acceptable. "The idea of using something in a socially acceptable manner is not the criteria we use. You must drink in a manner that is socially responsible, not just acceptable. Responsibility—that's the key word," concluded Threlfall.

The Federal Communications Commission has released the results of its recent study on CB-related television interference. Uncle Charlie estimated that some 1.3 million TV households experienced CB interference in 1976 and projected that the number would increase to three million households by 1979.

Here are some of the major findings:

55 percent of the complaints were attributable, in part, to inadequate CB harmonic suppression, present equipment standards being inadequate to prevent all such cases. 45 percent were attributed to overloading of inadequately shielded TV receivers.

40 percent of all complaints could be resolved and another 30 percent improved by installing a low-pass filter on the CB and a high-pass filter on the TV set.

45 percent involved illegal power amplifiers.

The FCC noted that about 80 percent of the TV overload-type complaints could be resolved or improved simply by installing a high-pass filter at the TV antenna input terminals.

More women shouldn't affect field performance

The addition of 6,000 women soldiers should not affect Army field performance, according to an Army Research Institute (ARI) report released recently.

"In plain language," the Max Wac study summarizes its report by stating, "the data indicates that the proportion of women, up to the percentages studied (35 percent or less of total unit strength), had no effect on measures of unit performance in the field."

The study was based on the unit readiness tests, or ARTEPS, held by 40 units in CONUS and Hawaii between October 1976 and June. The tests involved units from signal, transportation, medical, maintenance and military police fields.

Currently, there are more than 45,000 enlisted women soldiers and DA plans to increase this number to 50,400 by the end of FY 1979. An additional 6,000 women, or 56,400 by the end of FY 1979 will not affect unit performance, according to the report.

In addition to comparing ARTEP results from units from few to many women, and reporting no significant differences, Army researchers gave questionnaires to ARTEP participants. The answers led researchers to conclude that officers and NCOs need more leadership training to deal with special problems of enlisted women.

Max Wac is a study to determine if women can be used in more MOSs and a study of their performance in accomplishing Army missions. The ARTEP evaluation studied only their performance in a limited field environment. In March, the ARI is expected to release a report on the participation of women in REFORGER 77.

There are currently only 16 MOSs women are not permitted to hold. Women are also excluded from certain assignments in Category 1 (combat) units.

Martin L. King remembered in ceremony here

The Post Martin Luther King memorial service, held Monday in Marshall Auditorium, was a moving blend of musical and oral tributes in honor of the prominent civil rights leader and Nobel Peace Prize winner.

Various post chaplains participated in the service and the Community Gospel Choir, the Faith School Chorus, and Mrs. Louise Nickens provided appropriate musical tributes.

The guest speaker was Dr. John T. King, president of Houston-Tillostson College, Austin, Texas and a brigadier general in the U.S. Army Reserve.

The general used as his theme "Footprints on the Sands of Time" from a poem by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow. He declared, "Martin Luther King was destined from birth to achieve greatness in life and immorality in death. For he was unmistakenly touched with God's own magic wand, he was touched to leave behind footprints molded in time's sand.

"...he slowly but unmistakenly emerged as the undisputed king of the non-violent civil rights movement. But even more important, he emerged on the national and international scene as the voice of the poor, the advocate of the downtrodden, the inspiration of the hopeless, and the salavation of the oppressed, the forlorn and the underpriviliged."

The ceremony drew to a close with the entire audience singing the civil rights freedom song, "We Shall Overcome."

VA questions and answers

Q. — If my son enlists for military service now, will he be entitled to GI Bill education benefits?

A — Persons who initially enlist after January 1, 1977, are eligible for veterans' education benefits if they contribute to the cost through monthly payroll deductions. VA will contribute $2 for every $1 the serviceman pays under the new GI Bill program.

Q — Can a veteran use his VA home loan guarantee benefit to buy rental property?

A — No. Veterans must certify they intend to live in the home they buy or build with a VA-guaranteed loan.

Q — Can arrangements for burial in a national cemetery be made prior to a veteran's death?

A — No. Burial arrangements can be made by relatives or friends of the veteran at the time of his death. They should contact the superintendent of the national cemetery at which burial is desired.

Q — At what age is a veteran presumed to be totally disabled for purposes of qualifying for nonservice-connected VA pension?

A — Total disability is presumed at age 65, but you must still meet other eligibility requirements to qualify for VA pension. Check with your nearest VA office for details.

Feeding baby can be easier

Putting mashed potatoes in your hair is the "in" thing with the toddler set.

As you know, baby wears more food than he eats. Learning to feed oneself is so difficult.

Here are some helpful hints. Serve your toddler as much of his food as possible cut in little cubes. Dice his meat so it is easy to pick up. Give him a diced boiled potato instead of mashed potatoes. Buy beets and carrots diced, in small cans, or fruit cocktail. Dice a peeled apple to go with macaroni and cheese. Serve pineapple chunks or diced seedless grapes with turkey or chicken. Banana in cubes is easier to pick up than slippery slices of banana, and is good with ham or bacon for breakfast.

Peas are fun with spaghetti and for baby's sake, serve pasta in little shells or cork-screws.

For lunch give your toddler diced yellow cheese and bites of pear. Be sure to peel fruits until he has most of his teeth.

If he hasn't already learned to dip french fries in ketchup, teach him to dip whole green beans instead.

Keep in mind toddlers don't usually mind repetition. Some actually prefer to eat the same thing day after day.

Practice radiation safety with microwave ovens

Thousands of fast cooking microwave ovens are used in the U.S. today, and their present and future owners should be aware of the potential hazards related to microwave oven radiation.

Microwaves have a deep penetrating ability possibly causing a person to be burned without sufficient warning. The amount of physical harm depends on both the intensity of the radiation and the length of exposure. When exposed to microwaves at a very high level, they interfere with the body's metabolism, producing the symptoms of a high fever. If this artificially induced fever is high enough, death may result. At a lower level, microwaves may cause skin burns or affect eyes and other organs.

By law, every microwave oven manufactured after Oct. 6, 1971, must carry a label showing it meets the Federal safety standard. This standard limits the radiation to safe levels for the useful life of the oven. The standard also states that these ovens must have two independently operating safety interlocks, one of which must be concealed, to shut off the radiation when the oven door is opened.

Although radiation protection is designed into the oven under Federal standards, owners must follow the manufacturer's operating manual to keep the oven trouble-free. The following simple rules will assist owners in maintaining a safe and serviceable oven:

- Keep the oven clean. A build-up of matter such as food particles and grease, especially around the door seal, is the major cause of microwave leakage.

- Do not use metal utensils or aluminum foil in the oven. Earthen, porcelain, glass, or paper ovenware is recommended.

- If your oven is equipped with the wire screen type door, do not attempt to pass objects through the screen. Not only could you damage the screen, but the object could act as an antenna allowing the escape of microwaves.

- Do not operate the oven empty. This practice could cause damage to the oven since the microwaves are not absorbed and the possibility of leakage is much greater.

- Have your oven inspected and serviced by a qualified serviceman as recommended by the manufacturer.

Additional information concerning microwave ovens may be obtained from MEDDAC, Health and Environment, 545-1144. Personnel residing on post may request a radiation survey of their microwave oven by calling the above telephone number.

Got talent but don't know where to peddle it? Columbus Symphony's conductor, Harry Kruger, is looking for new talent to intermingle with the old. Auditions will be held tomorrow at 10 a.m. in Rm 001 of Fine Arts Hall at Columbus College.

What can I say? Last week I told all of you Atlanta Rhythm Section fans that tickets for their concert tonight at Columbus Municipal Auditorium were on sale at Tapes 'N' Things and the Shirt Shack. Well, I was wrong and I'm sorry for misleading all of you.

If you haven't found tickets yet (they've been on sale at O'Connell's Coins and Novelties and at Sodbuster and Billy along with the info desk at the Columbus College Davidson Student Center) you can still buy 'em at the door tonight for $5.

The new Epic recording group, "Crack the Sky," will be opening the show tonight at 8 p.m.

Kinderconcert . . . What's that you ask? Roughly translated, it means "Children's concert." Columbus Symphony, conducted by Harry Kruger, will perform tunes enjoyed by children of all ages at the Columbus College Fine Arts Hall auditorium Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

Big production numbers will include "Theme From Rocky (Gonna Fly Now)" and "Carnival of the Animals" featuring the Benning Belles and the Patty Taylor Dancers.

General admission is $1 and tickets are available now at the Fine Arts Hall box office.

It May Not Be Las Vegas but the Foxhole and Kelley Hill Recreation Centers have a Monte Carlo Night scheduled for January 28 beginning at 6 and 7 p.m., respectively.

You gamblers out there may be able to break the house at the Black Jack, Poker, Roulette, Chuck-A-Luck or Wheel of Fortune. Refreshments will be served throughout the evening and prizes awarded to the individuals with the most winnings at the end of the night.

For more info call 544-6074 (Foxhole) or 544-1721/3079 (Kelley Hill).

The Worms Crawl In the worms crawl out, the worms play Pinochle on my . . . excuse me, got a little carried away there. Anyway, the Kelley Hill Recreation Center will be sponsoring a Pinochle Marathon beginning at 1 p.m. on January 21.

You're better off to register with a partner; otherwise you'll be assigned one.

Boogie down on Saturday Night? Doesn't everyone? Well tomorrow night you can stay home and boogie down to "Soundstage." The new series will begin by featuring Kenny Loggins of Loggins and Messina fame; Jesse Winchester, former Viet Nam draft resister; and Michael Murphey, the soloist who recorded the hit "Wildfire."

The show will be shown on Ch. 28/48 at 10 p.m. and at 9 p.m. (CST) on Ch. 43.

DYA's Disco Dance will feature twin BSR tables, Sunn 300 watt power, Kaleidoscope projector, 35 mm projector, 8 mm MX8 Traynor boards, Electro Voice Speakers, special effects, three costumes, 1000 plus selections with The Fox as the DJ on January 28 from 8 to 11 p.m. for ages 13 thru 19.

Cost is $1 with dependent ID card.

DYA balloon contest slated

Dependent Youth Activities (DYA) is sponsoring a "Balloon to the Moon" contest for military dependents between the ages of 10 and 19 at the Youth Center, Bldg. 1054, at 1 p.m. Sunday.

Each participant will put their name and address on a card and attach it to a helium-filled balloon. The balloons will then be released, and the sender of the balloon traveling the farthest distance will win a watch.

In a recent balloon address contest held in New Jersey, the winning balloon traveled 960 miles in 24 hours, according to a DYA official.

For more information on the contest, call DYA at 545-3070 or 545-5511.

DoD pushes hearing safety

A DoD instruction to the services will create hearing safety programs to counter one of the most common military medical problems.

Hearing problems are common among most artillery and armor personnel and careerists in the infantry and other noise-polluted environments, according to a DA official.

The instruction, still pending final approval, will require hearing protection policies ranging from personal education and wear of ear plugs, to buying less noisy equipment and posting hazardous noise warning signs. (ARNEWS).

4-H Club members sought

Boys and girls interested in joining the Dependent Youth Activities 4-H Club can do so by calling Mrs. Balsley, 4-H director, at 687-0089 or DYA at 545-5511.

The 4-H Club is open to all young people ages nine to 19. Over 100 projects are available to include woodworking, cooking, sewing and veterinary science.

A general meeting will be held 7 p.m. Thursday at the McGraw Manor ACS building.

Bond saves 425 lives

By Marshall Jones

Imagine how much paper would be produced by cutting down 425 trees a month. That's 25 tons — 50,000 pounds — or 5 million sheets of bond paper!

A project designed to yield that much paper is scheduled to begin here Tuesday.

High-grade office paper will be collected for recycling and each administrative employee will be trained in the simple procedure required to assist in the conservation effort.

To inaugurate the program, specially trained instructors will be here Tuesday through Thursday to conduct classes explaining how the system works and what types of paper may be recycled. Each administrative employee will be scheduled for one of the fifteen-minute sessions and all are strongly encouraged to attend.

In accordance with the Federal Resource Conservation and Recovery Act, a Defense Department directive and Army Regulation 420-47, large installations such as this one must recycle paper where the cost is not prohibitive.

A system entitled "WASTE NOT" has been worked out for employees who handle office paper. It requires a minimum of time, effort and extra steps.

All the employees will be given a desk-top collector for suitable paper. By using the collectors, the post could gather and sell approximately 25 tons of paper a month from the 28 buildings on main post now involved in the project.

The estimated dollar savings for the post would range from approximately $10,000 to $28,000 a year, according to a report by the firm hired to organize the program.

Recycling paper takes less energy, generates fewer pollutants and uses fewer trees in producing fresh paper than does pulpwood processing. It would take 425 trees to produce the 25 tons of paper expected to be recycled here each month. Approximately 90 per cent of the weight of this paper is usable fiber, as compared to a third of the weight of pulpwood.

The "WASTE NOT" program is being administered by the Environmental Management Division, Directorate of Facilities Engineering. Plans call for the eventual inclusion of other areas of the post into the program. The cost-effectiveness of recycling newspapers and corrugated paper is under study, according to a division official.

Alexander discusses military benefits

Some so-called military benefits are actually services which are taken for granted in civilian communities. Secretary of the Army Clifford Alexander Jr., in addressing the President's Commission on Military Compensation at its last public hearing Wednesday, emphasized that more of these services are needed, especially for junior enlisted families.

"The man or woman who has chosen to serve our country in uniform — regardless of the length of that service — is entitled to the best we can offer . . . the younger enlisted people are sometimes unfairly ignored in our plans. Junior enlisted travel has been a glaring example of this," Alexander said.

Calling for a criteria on "Quality of Life" to determine soldiers' needs, Alexander mentioned that adequate housing, medical care, retirement and educational opportunities need improvement.

The Secretary hammered hard on the topic of housing; he noted that the Army currently houses none of its E-4s or below who have less than two years service, only 26 per cent of junior NCOs and 31 per cent of senior NCOs.

Saying that many enlisted and officer Army members live in substandard housing, he added that, "It is not uncommon to find soldiers in cold water flats." Alexander also pointed out that others live in trailers without heat or running water and that he knows of housing in which a soldier and four dependents live in one room.

Special housing problems exist at Ft. Polk, La.; Ft. Stewart, Ga. and Ft. Ord, Calif., where almost 4,000 Army families live in unsuitable rented housing, the Secretary commented.

Alexander asked the Commission to consider additional funding for leased housing in civilian communities, building more government quarters and providing additional allowances within the U.S. to compensate for high housing costs in certain areas. He also suggested that the Army could provide soldiers with money to pay for high security deposits for rented housing. This money would ease the financial burden of relocating, he explained.

The 20-year retirement, which pays retired soldiers half their base pay, should also be kept and not be replaced by longer minimum retirement proposals, Alexander said. He added that a retired E-6 earns only $425.10 per month after 20 years service and an E-7 earns only $483. Remarking that the retired E-6's income is below the federally established poverty level for a family of four.

Alexander also recommended a vesting policy which would entitle officers and enlisted soldiers who leave the Army after more than five, but less than 20 years of service to financial benefits after age 55.

"Both active duty and retirement costs are warranted because second incomes from spouses are usually not dependable since most of them cannot pursue careers while making the considerable moves necessary in the Army" Alexander argued "Military families, particularly in the enlisted ranks, rarely have the funds to own a home, which deprives them of an important financial security available to many Americans," Alexander added.

"Medical problems must also be resolved," Alexander declared. He said the Army must insure that its Medical Corps is large enough and stressed that problems with the military medical insurance, CHAMPUS, must also be corrected.

"I need not repeat the 'horror' stories regarding the failure of CHAMPUS to take care of the needs of the soldier," stated the Secretary. He called for more CHAMPUS funding for authorized treatment policies, paying civilian physicians more eligibility based on distances from military hospitals.

On the subject of soldier morale, Alexander said the Army is responsible for providing a soldier with a "total environment" including recreation, athletic and educational services. Present services are being degraded and are becoming less available.

Transition training is needed for soldiers killed in combat arms and other tasks not found in the civilian job market," concluded the Secretary.

Secretaries of the Air Force and Navy also testified before the Commission last week. The Commission has been asked to make its final recommendations to the President by March 15. (ARNEWS).

News in brief

EIB qualification gets tough

Expert Infantryman Badge (EIB) qualification requirements will be a little stiffer for enlisted men beginning April 1, an Infantry School official explained.

At that time, light weapons infantrymen (11B), infantry indirect fire crewmen (11C) and senior infantry sergeants (11Z) will be required to score at least 60 on their SQT to take the EIB test. Presently, soldiers must only pass the EIB test to be awarded the badge.

Infantry Officers are also eligible for the EIB by passing the EIB test.

The school has recommended a field test of the concept of requiring officers to pass the infantry SQT as a prerequisite for the EIB according to a school official.

"Based on the analysis of the field test and comments from major commands received on the feasibility of such a program, a decision will be made whether officers will take enlisted SQTs as a prerequisite for the EIB," the official explained.

E-4 promotions restricted

Commander's authority to waive time in service for promotion to E-4 has been restricted by DA. Under the new policy, commanders may only promote, with a waiver, 60 percent of their combined E-3 and E-4 strengths who have between 15 and 24 months time in service.

Service members authorized promotion by enlistment contracts, student promotion authority and the stripes for skills program are not affected. However, any of these promotions that require a waiver will be counted against the command's waiver promotion authorizations.

Bids for buildings open

The Savannah District, Corps of Engineers has announced invitations for bids on government owned buildings here.

Sealed bids must be received by 2 p.m. February 16 at the Castle Building Annex, 200 East Bryan Street, Savannah.

The following buildings are available for bidding: unit chapel, open warehouse, general storehouse and day room. Bids or request for additional information should be forwarded to District Engineer, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, ATTN: A SASRE-MD, PO Box 889, Savannah, Ga., 31402 or by calling 233-8822, extension 451.

Benning to get Home Box Office

By Debra Hilgeman

Benning subscribers to the Alert Cable TV system will soon be able to receive Home Box Office on their television sets, according to Wesley Owens, general manager of the post Alert Cable TV.

Home Box Office will be transmitted to cable subscribers via an $80,000 earth satellite receiving station. "Benning is probably the first Army post where a commercial cable TV system has installed this type station," said Owens. "Benning people have been clamoring for Home Box Office since Columbus got it last year," he pointed out.

The additional equipment required for transmitting Home Box Office has been operational since last month and has been undergoing extensive testing. The receiving station is a "futuristic-looking disc" anchored in 48 tons of steel-reinforced concrete and can withstand 120 miles-per-hour wind. The earth satellite, an RCA SATCOM II, is in a geostationary orbit 22,000 miles above the equator. According to Owens, the satellite equipment will "increase reliability and picture quality."

Benning's cable TV system became operational in 1974, utilizing microwave relay systems to broadcast Channels 46 and 17 from Atlanta. "This was a three-hop relay and was not very reliable so we decided early last year to investigate the feasibility of installing an earth satellite receiving station. It also became conceivable to consider the possibility of offering a pay-TV movie channel as an optional service to Benning subscribers," explained Owens. "We selected Home Box Office since it is the leader in pay-TV via satellite," he added.

Requests and applications were made to Army authorities and final approval for Home Box Office on Benning was granted last week. "We began installing subscriber equipment Monday and we already have a backlog of 500 people who desire the service," said Owens.

Since some parents may be concerned over the type of programs broadcast over Home Box Office, a "parental guidance key lock" is available. The device enables parents to "scramble" any shows they deem unfit for children's viewing. The device calls for $15 and can be resold, for the full amount, to Alert Cable TV whenever the customer no longer wants it.

Home Box Office will be aired over Channel 4 on weekdays from 5 p.m.-1 a.m. and on Saturday from 3 p.m.-1 a.m. The cost is $8.95 per month in addition to the regular cable charge.

The new receiving station will benefit all cable subscribers, regardless of whether or not they opt for Home Box Office. "The installation of this equipment gives us the capability of expanding signals to our customers," Owens stated. "There are two independent stations from Chicago and San Francisco who are planning to broadcast via the satellite. One, or perhaps both, will be broadcast here as part of our basic cable service," he concluded.

For additional information, call Alert Cable TV at 687-6109.

This five-meter "dish," recently installed behind the post Alert Cable T. V. facility, enables TV signals to be picked up from a satellite located 22,000 miles above the equator and transmitted into the homes of Benning residents.

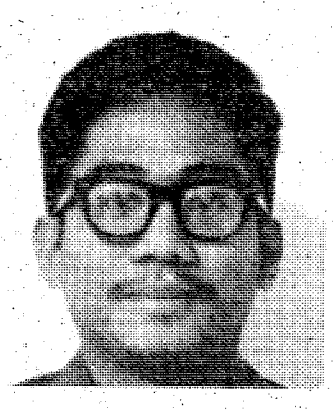
What are your ideas about paying state tax?

By Sue Davis

CWO3 Joe R. Hooton II, HHD 34th Med Bn

I do not pay state tax. I do not feel the entire tax structure is supportive of military personnel or fair particularly with regard to servicemembers residing out of their home state for extended periods due to military commitments.

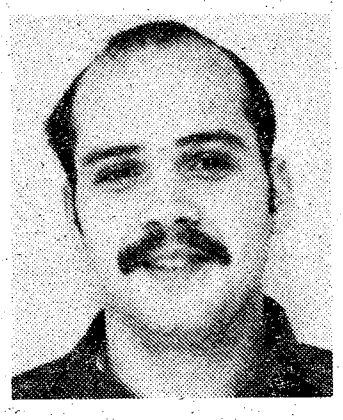


2nd Lt. Robert A. Mente, 18th Repl Det

I don't pay state tax, but I feel that servicemembers should not have to pay state tax while in the military because they usually don't reside in their home state. If they are stationed in their home state, it is usually for only a short time.

Sp4 Sandra D. Brown, Hqs Co Hqs Cmd

I pay state tax and I feel that if we are stationed in our home state we should pay the tax but if we are assigned elsewhere we should not have to pay.



Pvt. Michael E. Haid, 18th Repl Det

I think that personnel who are in the military and who do not reside in their home state should not have to pay state taxes.

PFC Rebecca Broxton, HHC, 36th Engr. Gp

Yes, of course I pay tax. I believe in my government and if all others would do the same, we would not have as many problems.

State tax withholding confusing to soldiers

With the beginning of State Tax withholding, soldiers seem confused concerning home of record (HOR) and legal domicile.

The terms legal domicile and HOR are not always interchangeable. Legal domicile is where the soldier votes, pays state taxes, registers a car, owns property and meets other state requirements for residency (owning property and registering a car do not automatically qualify for legal domicile). Legal domicile may change from time to time to keep pace with military moves and personal desires — provided the legal requirements of a particular state are met.

Whenever a change of legal domicile is made, a new W-4 Form (Withholding Certificate) must be completed. One entry on the W-4 is "Legal Residence" which, at the end of the calendar year, causes a copy of the W-2 Form (Wages and Tax Statement) to be forwarded to the appropriate state.

Home of record, as defined in Appendix J of the DoD Joint Travel Regulation, is the soldier's actual home just prior to entering the army. At time of separation, HOR may be used to designate the place to which the soldier may be entitled to receive mileage and household goods shipment allowances.

Once a home of record has been officially recorded, it may not be changed unless a bona fide error was made in the original entry. If a soldier believes an error was made, Appendix J of the JTR spells out what is necessary to apply for a change.

The application — along with copies of documentary proof — should be sent to: U.S. Army Enlisted Records and Evaluation Center; ATTN: PCRE-R; Ft. Benjamin Harrison, Ind. 46249 for enlisted personnel and, U.S. Army Military Personnel Center; ATTN: DAPC-PSR-S; 200 Stovall St.; Alexandria, Va. 22332, for officers. (ARNEWS.)

Tax audit

Not as bad as it sounds

There's nothing like a notice of a tax audit to pale the face and whiten the knuckles of most of us. A letter in the mailbox or a phone call from an Internal Revenue Service (IRS) examiner usually triggers a panic reaction "Why me? They have their nerve singling me out of the millions." Actually, an audit is a very businesslike confidential meeting between taxpayers (or their representatives, and the IRS to determine the correct tax.

Don't Presume Guilt

Nobody likes to be questioned, but notification of an audit is not a presumption of guilt or wrongdoing. An audit is conducted only to clarify something on your tax return. Some returns are, however, selected for audit at random just to make sure the entire system is working the way it should. In addition, all high income returns are automatically screened for audit.

The computers at IRS centers do not make life and death decisions about your tax returns. They are merely programmed to look for unusual deductions, credits, and other things that are out of proportion when compared to the returns of other taxpayers with similar income and circumstances.

Many computer-questioned returns never even reach the audit stage. An examiner looks over every return singled out by the computer to see if there is a valid reason for a discrepancy. For example, several heart operations could account for an unusually high medical deduction. Human judgment, not computers, leads to all audit decisions.

Good Records Essential

A key point to remember is that good records are a must for an audit. The IRS can't take your word on a deduction or other item claimed on your return. The law requires you to have proof, so be prepared with accurate records and receipts to substantiate everything.

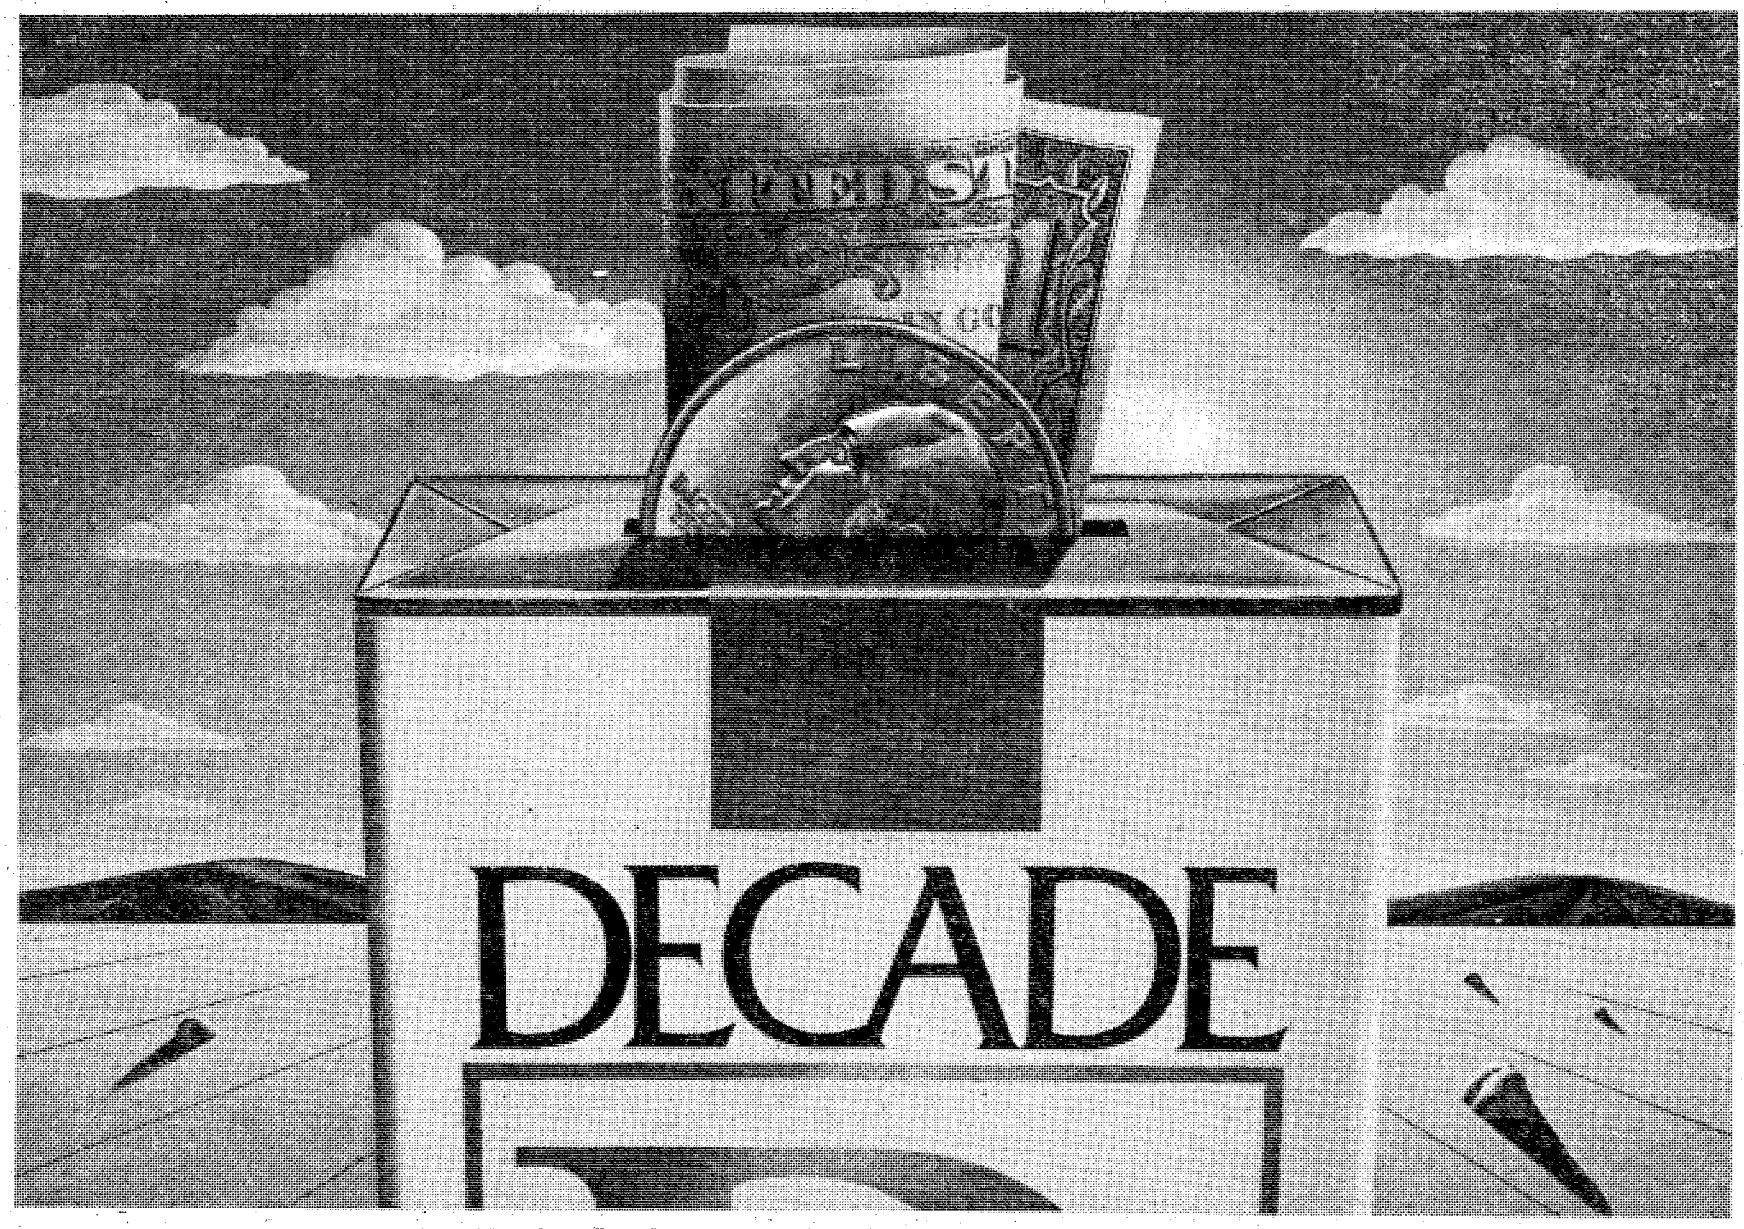
Keep in mind that an audit will usually be for past years — not the current year — which is why the IRS urges taxpayers to save all records and receipts for at least three years.

Your notice of audit will specify a date and time and even the name of an individual who may be contacted to answer questions you might have concerning the audit. If you have questions about anything, don't hesitate to contact the IRS. And, you can ask the IRS to change the date or time of your audit if there is a valid conflict with a previous commitment.

Despite the best intentions of everyone, some taxpayers are unhappy with the outcome of their audit. There are appeals channels within the IRS and the courts to remedy this. Taxpayers have the right to go directly to the courts if they so desire, but most don't. In fact, 98 percent of all appeals are resolved to mutual satisfaction through the IRS appeals procedure.

What To Do

If you're notified of an audit, don't panic. Get the facts and prepare for your audit by gathering the required documentation. Next, contact your nearest IRS office and ask for a copy of Publication 556, "Audit of Returns, Appeal Rights, and Claims for Refund." It's a free booklet which outlines the entire audit and appeals process.



IT TOOK US A LONG TIME TO MAKE DECADE.

NOW FOR A SHORT TIME YOU CAN SAVE MONEY BUYING IT.

As you've probably noticed, a lot of people have begun to smoke our new low 'tar' cigarette. So then why are we making this money saving offer? Easy. We want every smoker to try Decade. Because once you smoke your first pack or carton we're confident it won't be your last.

You see Decade is truly unique. It's the first low 'tar' in which all the parts have been arranged in perfect balance with each other. The tobacco, the filter, and even the paper. And it's this Decade "Total System" that makes our low 'tar' the first one with a taste worth smoking.

So if you haven't tried Decade yet, do it soon. Because the low price offer we're making now will be over in a lot less time than it took to make our cigarette.

Post police caused by litterbugs

A beautiful saffron yellow, tangerine and crimson-tinted sunrise creeps over the pine trees across the dew-covered grass sending beams of light through the cotton-soft fog that's dancing among the tree tops.

A pretty picture you say? Sure — until you add the descriptions of all the discarded plastic wraps, beer cans and cigarette butts.

Are you wondering what happens to all of the litter that is thrown onto the roadsides of post and why you don't see it just piling up?

Enlisted soldiers, in the grades E-1 through E-6, are taken away from their duty sections to perform the task of police call. "Post police is a seven day a week, 365 day a year mission on Ft. Benning," says Post Command Sergeant Major Vincent Roegiers.

One private first class commented, "I am offended by the demeaning chores that I'm given to do on Post police. It is an insult to my intelligence and a waste of time." But CSM Roegiers says, "Policing responsibiliities are everyone's concern."

The biggest problem seems to be that personnel of all ranks, including DA civilians, are throwing litter out of their cars into parking lots and along the roadsides, according to the sergeant major. "This concerns me," he continued, "because the very people who throw this trash away have to pick it back up themselves when they're on a policing detail."

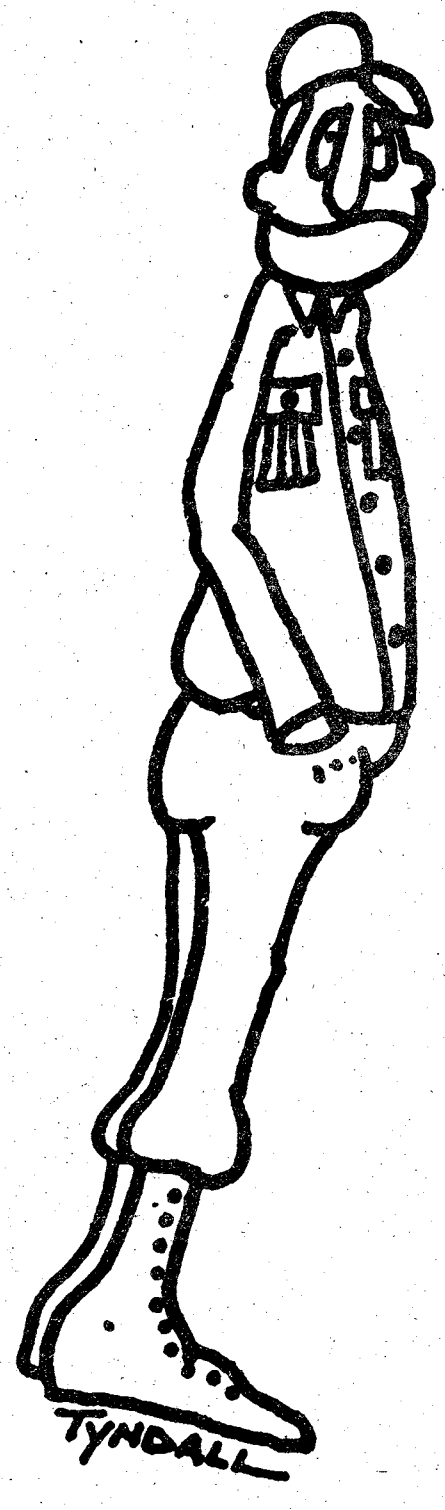
Another problem is that people will see a piece of trash and walk right over it without making an effort to pick it up. "To try to eliminate this problem," the sergeant major explained, "we have placed hundreds of barrels and trash receptacles throughout the installation in an attempt to make it convenient to deposit litter in its proper place."

Post police responsibilities are broken down into major unit areas by Department of Army Facility Engineers (DAFE) as directed by the post commander.

"Most units supplement the problem of trash removal with roving patrols from the companies that police along the roadways," CSM Roegiers pointed out.

A lack of personal environmental concern by Benning personnel has been a contributing factor to achieving less than successful standards of post cleanliness, the sergeant major commented. "Which results in utilizing more man-power and resources to present the proper image," he added.

Litter is an unnecessary problem that could easily be done away with if people would just take a little extra time and put trash in its proper place, the sergeant major concluded.



Litter? Who me???

Letter to the editor

It was pouring rain and there was no sign of it stopping. For eight hours, five of us were involved in what we all know as "post police." Our designated areas were raked, mowed, hoed, and picked clean of all debris that marred the scenery.

As I stumbled along 10th Division Road with rain dripping from my ear lobes, I decided to publicize my thoughts about post police and suggest a few ideas to help alleviate some of the hassles that go with it.

Obviously we can't give up post police altogether or we'd literally be buried in trash within a few weeks.

The government pays civilians to toodle around on power mowers, trim trees, rake leaves and, in general, be "galloping gardeners." Why not have these civilians gallop around and pick up trash too? They're well paid for the work that's done.

We service members have a tough enough job to do and shouldn't have to waste our time doing a job that could be done by government-paid civilians. Post police is an extremely unhappy interruption during the course of a work week when you have work piled up on your desk that has to be done by a certain time.

Why not relieve post police personnel after we've cleaned up our designated areas so that we can go back to work? — with time given to clean up and change if necessary. Picking up smelly cigarette butts, slimy, greasy cans, bottles and occasionally unmentionable garbage is bad enough without having to do it for eight hours.

The last alternative I would like to discuss is to have dependents take the job and be paid a minimum salary. The Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA), a federally funded program, was put into effect in July to provide employment for unskilled workers who did not qualify for unemployment. A program similar to this would not only give dependents something to do which would put money in their pockets, but it would also be of benefit to our environment.

Post police, as it stands now, is degrading and I hope I've presented what I think are logical suggestions for alleviating that disgruntled feeling which is everpresent in the minds of all E-6s and below when they look at the duty roster.

Fuel wasted needlessly

By Marie M. Russo

The American people who have been dubious about the national energy shortage of the past several years, have been warned again that continued waste of fuels will have catastrophic consequences.

Our Commander in Chief, in his State of the Union message Thursday, said the waste of energy must not continue. In May, Secretary of Defense Harold Brown exclaimed that "There is no clear or more serious threat to the long-term security of the United States than that which stems from the growing deficiency of secure and assured energy resources." And our own Post Commander is solidly behind resource conservation; recently initiating a paper recycling program as a conservation measure.

Yet, every day hundreds of Benning soldiers are involved in a duty — post police — that wastes fuel, not to mention man hours.

I think we all agree that post police is a necessary evil as long as people continue to throw cigarette butts and other assorted trash on the ground where it does not belong. But is it necessary to have the soldiers assigned to the detail stay out on police call the entire day, even after the trash has been picked up?

Obviously there will always be a cigarette butt or a piece of paper in the area, but that doesn't have to mean the area wasn't policed. Should three gallons of fuel be wasted so that five soldiers can be ready to catch a piece of paper if the wind should happen to blow it into the area that was policed earlier?

One company commander was overheard telling his troops that they "better not come back to the company area early — even if it means driving around all day."

Another commander was angry because his detail came back 40 minutes early and claimed that the job had been completed. As a matter of fact he was so annoyed that he sent the detail back out and all they did according to the NCOIC, was "drive around in circles."

When this NCO was questioned as to whether he knew he was wasting energy he replied, "Sure, but what I supposed to do? The job was finished and we couldn't go back to our duty sections and if I would have parked someplace and been caught I would've been in the wrong.

"I think the CO was the one wasting energy by not releasing us once our job was done," the NCO continued. "But what can I do — go to the IG?"

When incidents like this occur it makes one wonder if all the work being done to conserve energy is a waste of time. After a soldier spends a day wasting energy to drive around needlessly can he really be blamed for going home and not turning off his lights when they aren't really needed?

MajGen. William J. Livsey commented that "It is up to each of us at Benning to provide the support and cooperation for energy conservation measures to be successful."

Out and about

Columbus College Woodwind Quartet was scheduled to appear in concert on Sunday afternoon at 3 in the Music and Theatre Center, Bldg. 229. Well, folks, you're going to have to wait awhile because they've been rescheduled for March 28. That's a long wait, but the Music Center has something to hold you till then.

An alternate performance of ballet and classical guitar will be given at Kinsman Barracks, Bldg. 3305, in the 1st AIT Bde area at 3 p.m. Sunday.

Keystone cops and silent movies will be featured at Kelley Hill Sunday afternoon at 1. In addition, the Fox will be spinning more than 1,000 selections on his outstanding sound system which features twin BSR tables, Sunn 300 watt power, 8 mm MX8 Traynor boards, and Electro Voice Speakers. The free four hour show is open to the public.

A similiar show will be offered at the Dependent Youth Activities (DYA) Center Saturday evening from 8 to 11 for ages 13 thru 19. Admission is $1 with a dependent I. D. card.

Foxhole Recreation Center is closed but Monte Carlo Night lives on! The event was previously scheduled for both Foxhole and Kelley Hill Recreation Center, but will now only run at Kelley Hill tomorrow night at 7 p.m. due to natural disaster at Foxhole.

Gamblers will have a chance to break the house at Black Jack, Poker, Roulette, Chuck-A-Luck or Wheel of noon when the Dependent Youth Association (DYA) cupies the baloon that travelers the farthest will win a watch.

Up, up and away the balloons will fly Sunday afternoon when the Dependeny Yough Association (DYA) sends up balloons filled with helium and the name and address of each boy and girl participating in their balloon contest. The child whose name and address occupies the balloon that travers the farthest will win a watch.

The fun starts at 1 p.m. at the DYA Youth Center, meetings are held Monday evenings at 7:30 in Bldg.

The Ft. Benning Dramatizers are still extending an open invitation to anyone interested in theatre. Regular meetings are held7 Monday evenings at 7:30 in Bldg. 229.

OSUT trainers take course

Seven NCOs assigned to Committee Group, 1st AIT Brigade, recently returned from a two-week Instructor Training Course (ITC) held at Ft. Knox, Kentucky.

To fulfill a TRADOC requirement for the One Station Unit Training/Two Station Training programs soon to begin, these seven instructors will help design an ITC for Ft. Benning and will have the distinction of being the first instructors. The seven men are SFC Larry Byrd, SSG Stanley Logan, SSG Joseph Spencer, SSG Horace Williams, Sgt. Timothy Armstrong, Sgt. Norman Dennis and Sgt. Leneon Johnson.

The TTTP is a five-phase program that lasts approximately 6 to 7 weeks. Phase I is an Orientation week devoted to inprocessing, satisfying administrative and logistical requirements, and reviewing records.

Phase II will determine the individual's potential as a Subject Matter Expert (S.M.E.). This includes a pre-test, enrichment training, and a post-test. The pre-test and post-test will be the Performance Oriented Infantry Qualification Test, considered to be the best available means to determine the instructor's technical knowledge at this time. Another test is being developed that will be designed for the OSUT Course of Instruction.

During Phase III, the Formal On-the-Job Training (FOJT) phase, the instructor will serve a two-week apprenticeship on the training site. The instructor will learn the administrative procedures of conducting training. He will also work on his subject matter expertise.

During Phase IV, the instructor will attend the ITC. Phase V is a continuation of the instructor's training. The instructor will continue to improve his skills, keep up with changes in military techniques and attend sub-courses to keep AIT training at a high level.

The ITC is scheduled to begin February 27 and will be capable of graduating 48 qualified instructors every two weeks. With this quota, the Committee Group will meet its instructor requirements and TRADOC requirements by the start of the OSUT/TST programs in late August.

VA: doctors train in medical problems of aging

A new program to train experienced physicians in caring for the special medical problems of the aging population was announced January 8 by Max Cleland, administrator of Veteran Affairs.

The first 12 physicians to be trained under the program are already board certified as specialists in internal medicine, family practice or psychiatry. They will be given two years of additional training in geriatrics and gerontology at six Veterans Administration hospitals beginning July 1, 1978. Twelve more physicians will be added to the program each year.

"VA is taking this action because of our concern for the increasing age of the veteran population in this country, in the face of an almost complete lack of training elsewhere for specialists in the specific health problems of the older age group. We, therefore, will be seeking men and women who are committed to excellence as our first Fellows."

The largest segment of the veteran population, the 13.3 million who fought in World War II, will reach an average age of 65 by 1984, Cleland said.

The VA Administrator said that a National Academy of Sciences study, "Health Care for American Veterans," issued in June 1977, called for the VA to take a leadership role in creating systems for providing good quality long-term care, such as aging persons often require. The NAS report noted that most health insurance programs do not provide coverage for elderly persons and the private health care system does not have adequate capacity to provide a full range of geriatric services.

The physicians selected to be Geriatric Fellows will be paid standard VA salaries. They will be given multidisciplinary training in management of programs for older patients. They will prepare for future roles as teachers, administrators and policy-makers as well as clinicians. Training will be in hospital, extended care and ambulatory care settings.

Through joint appointments with medical schools affiliated with these hospitals, the Fellows also are expected to stimulate undergraduate and graduate medical education in geriatrics.

Two fellows will begin training annually at each of the following VA hospitals: Wadsworth (Los Angeles), Lexington, Ky., Palo Alto, Calif., Bedford, Mass., Philadelphia, and Little Rock Ark.

Barracudas star in Atlanta meet

The Benning swim team, the Barracudas, recently traveled to Atlanta to attend a swim meet hosted by the Atlanta Dynamos. Eight members of the team combined their talents to bring home 14 ribbons.

In the Senior Boys Division, Ray Greenwood, Eddie Griep and Kurt Andree placed in four events, to include Andree's 1st place in the 100-yard freestyle (time 57.94).

Briggett Pangelinan was the team star placing in five events which included a first in the 100-yard butterfly (time 1:13.94) and a second place in the 200-yard individual medley (time 2:40.3).

Manuel Pangelinan captured a ribbon in three events, while Tracy Kay brought home two ribbons.

The Senior boys relay team took second in the 200-yard free relay and fourth in the 200-yard medley relay to cap a successful day.

Any interested competitive swimmer between the ages of eight and 18 is welcome to try out for the Barracuda swim team by going to the pool at Bryant Wells Fieldhouse between 4:30 and 6 p.m. weekdays or by calling Coach Monte Fellingham at 545-5760.

Here's help, so don't get hung

By Bev Lockhart

Income tax time brings both joy and discomfort to my being. Joy, because I never make enough to have to pay, in fact, I usually end up with a refund and the discomfort comes in with the fact that I'm a writer, not a mathematician. Even the simplest instructions usually leave me frustrated; that's why when my editor asked me to write an article on taxes, I could only stare at her with disbelief.

I decided to start with my own Form 1040A so I'd know what I was talking about. I'm glad to report that by now the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) is probably processing my tax refund.

For those of you who are still stalling, this article may be of some help.

Before you do anything, get your W-2 form in your grabby little hands, along with the 1977 instruction booklet for preparing Form 1040A (just in case you can't understand my instructions) and a few blank 1040A forms, in case you make a mess of the first few, like I did.

First things first; at the top of the page you should print your name(s) address, social security number(s) and occupation(s), If you're in the Army, the occupation should be "U.S. Army," of course.

The next section, "Presidential Election Campaign Fund," asks if you want to contribute $1 toward funding the 1980 presidential election. The money is deducted from taxes already paid and won't affect your tax bill or refund.

Under "Filing Status," check the appropriate box. Box 1 is for singles, Box 2 is for married couples filing a joint returns, Box 3 is for married couples filing separately and Box 4 should be checked if you are an unmarried head of a household. Not sure whether you are an "unmarried head of household"? You can lawfully choose this filing status if you paid more than half the cost of keeping up a home which is the main home of your mom or dad as long as you can claim him or her as dependent. Note: the parent does not have to live with you.

You can also choose this filing status if you paid more than half the cost of keeping up the home in which you lived if you shared it with your unmarried child, grandchild, foster child or stepchild, even if the child is not your dependent; or any other person listed in 5a under "Children and Other Dependents" that you can claim as a dependent.

If you claim Box 4, don't forget to enter the person's name who qualifies you for this status in the space provided for after Box 4. Even if more than one person qualifies you for this status, you only need to enter one person's name.

Now that we've got that taken care of, we can go on to "Exemptions." Check Box 5a first. Everyone. There is no either/or on this one. Then, if you are filing a joint return with your spouse, check Box 5b. If you are filing a separate return, you can only take your spouse's exemption if he or she isn't filing a return, had zero income, and was not the dependent of someone else. If you are 65 years of age or older check the box to the right of 5a ("yourself"). If you or your spouse is completely blind, check the appropriate box and attach a statement to this effect. If you or your spouse is only partially blind you must submit a statement each year from an eye physician or registed optometrist that you or your spouse cannot see over 20/200 with glasses or the field of view does not exceed 20 degrees. If your examining eye physician doesn't expect the vision to improve beyond these standards you may submit a certified opinion to this effect from him or her. If you do this, you will only have to attach a statement referring to it in following years.

On line 5c, enter first names of your dependent children who lived with you. Fill in the total number in the box to the right of the arrow.

On line 5d, enter the full names and other information for your other dependents. Fill in the total number of other dependents in the box to the right of the arrow.

The IRS will allow you to take an exemption for a dependent who was born or died during 1977 as long as he or she met the requirements for you to claim him or her as a dependent while alive.

If you were married and your spouse died during 1977, check the boxes for the exemptions you could have taken for your spouse on the date of death, as long as you did not remarry before the end of your taxable year.

In Box 6, "Total number of exemptions claimed," add the numbers entered in the boxes above.

Now, take out your W-2 (Wage and Tax Statement) Form. Here comes the fun part. Enter your taxable income, as shorn on the form, on line 7. If you have earned any interest (from saving account), enter the amount of interest earned on line 8.

Dividends are entered on line 9. You can exclude, on line 9b, up to $100 of dividends received from qualifying domestic corporations.

If you are married filing a joint return, you and your spouse may be able to exclude up to $200 of dividend income. This means that if both you and your spouse had dividend income from jointly or separately owned stock, you may each exclude up to $100 of dividend income. However, neither of you can use any part of the $100 exclusion not used by the other in the case of stock owned separately.

Taxable dividends from the following corporations do not qualify for the dividends exclusion:

- Foreign corporations, including your share from a controlled foreign corporation.
- So called exempt organizations (charitable, fraternal, et cetera) and exempt farmers' cooperative organizations.
- Regulated investment companies, un the companies have told you how much of dividends qualify for the exclusion.
- Real estate investment trusts
- Electing small business corporations to extent the amounts are distributions out current earnings and profits. However, for purpose, current earnings and profits limited to taxable income for the year.

Don't get confused by saving and loa building and loan associations who refer t terest as "dividends." Earnings from this of association should be listed under lin "Interest income."

Subtract line 9b from line 9a and enter balance on line 9c.

On line 10, "Adjusted gross income," lines 7,8 and 9c. If the amount is less than 000 you may qualify for "Earned Inc Credit." Page two of the Form 1040A Inst tion Booklet has an explanation of the c and will also tell you if you qualify. The rules say that you must first pay for at half the cost of keeping up a home in the and that you must live there during the year (except for temporary absences for tion, school, etc.) Your dependent must b der 19 years of age or a full-time stude handicapped in order for you to qualify fo "Earned Income Credit."

If you moved during the year and you meet the criteria for maintaining a home, qualify. You do not have to reside at the s address during the entire year.

If you are serving overseas, but dependents otherwise qualify for residence financial support of a home, you are sidered a resident also, according to IRS ficials, and you may claim the "Earned Inc Credit." If however, you and your fa reside outside the U.S., or you do not mee of the other requirements, you do not qua

If you qualify for the credit, follow "Earned Income Credit," worksheet on two of the instruction booklet and com your credit. This amount is entered on line

Add up the money you gave to help pay paign expenses of candidates for public o political committees and newsletter fund candidates and elected public officials. I are filing a separate return, enter half o amount you gave, but not more than $ you are married filing a joint return, ente the amount you gave, but not more than $ you didn't make a contribution leave the blank.

If you don't want to hassle with this any longer, skip lines 11b through 15 an and date your return. If you are filing a return and both you and your spouse ha come, you should show the income of separately at the bottom left margin, s can figure your tax the way that gives yo smaller tax.

If you've gone this far and are curious exactly how much your refund is going or how much you're going to have to pay with me. The end is in sight.

...up on taxes

Your W-2 form indicates how much money was deducted from your pay during 1977. Enter the amount on line 11b, "Total Federal Income Tax Witheld." If you had more than one employer in 1977 and together they paid you more than $16,500 in wages, too much social security (FICA) tax, railroad retirement (RRTA) tax, or combined FICA and RRTA tax may have been taken out of your wages. If too much was withheld, you may be able to take credit for it against your income tax. Please follow the steps on page 12 of the instruction booklet.

Line 11c asks for "Earned Income Credit." See page two of the instruction booklet to compute this, then enter it on the space provided. Total lines 11a, 11b and 11c, and enter the amount on line 12.

Page 12 tells you which tax tables to consult, depending on how you are filing.

Line 13 asks for "Tax on the amount on line 10. If you qualified for adjusted gross income, you may be entitled to a ten per cent refundable credit based on your earned income (line 7). See page two of the instruction booklet.

On line 14, enter the amount to be refunded to you, according to the tax tables in the instruction booklet, if line 12 is larger than line 13. If line 13 is larger than line 12, enter "Balance Due." Attach a check or money order for the full amount payable to "Internal Revenue Service." Don't forget to write your social security number on the check or money order.

Be sure to sign and date your forms and attach the correct copy of your W-2 form, along with the exact amount of taxes owed (if applicable) before mailing your return.

Refunds are nice; I've already got mine spent in my head, If you're as eager as I am, get your return in the mail ASAP (as soon as possible). Early returns are processed much faster than the millions which can pile up as the April 15 deadline nears.

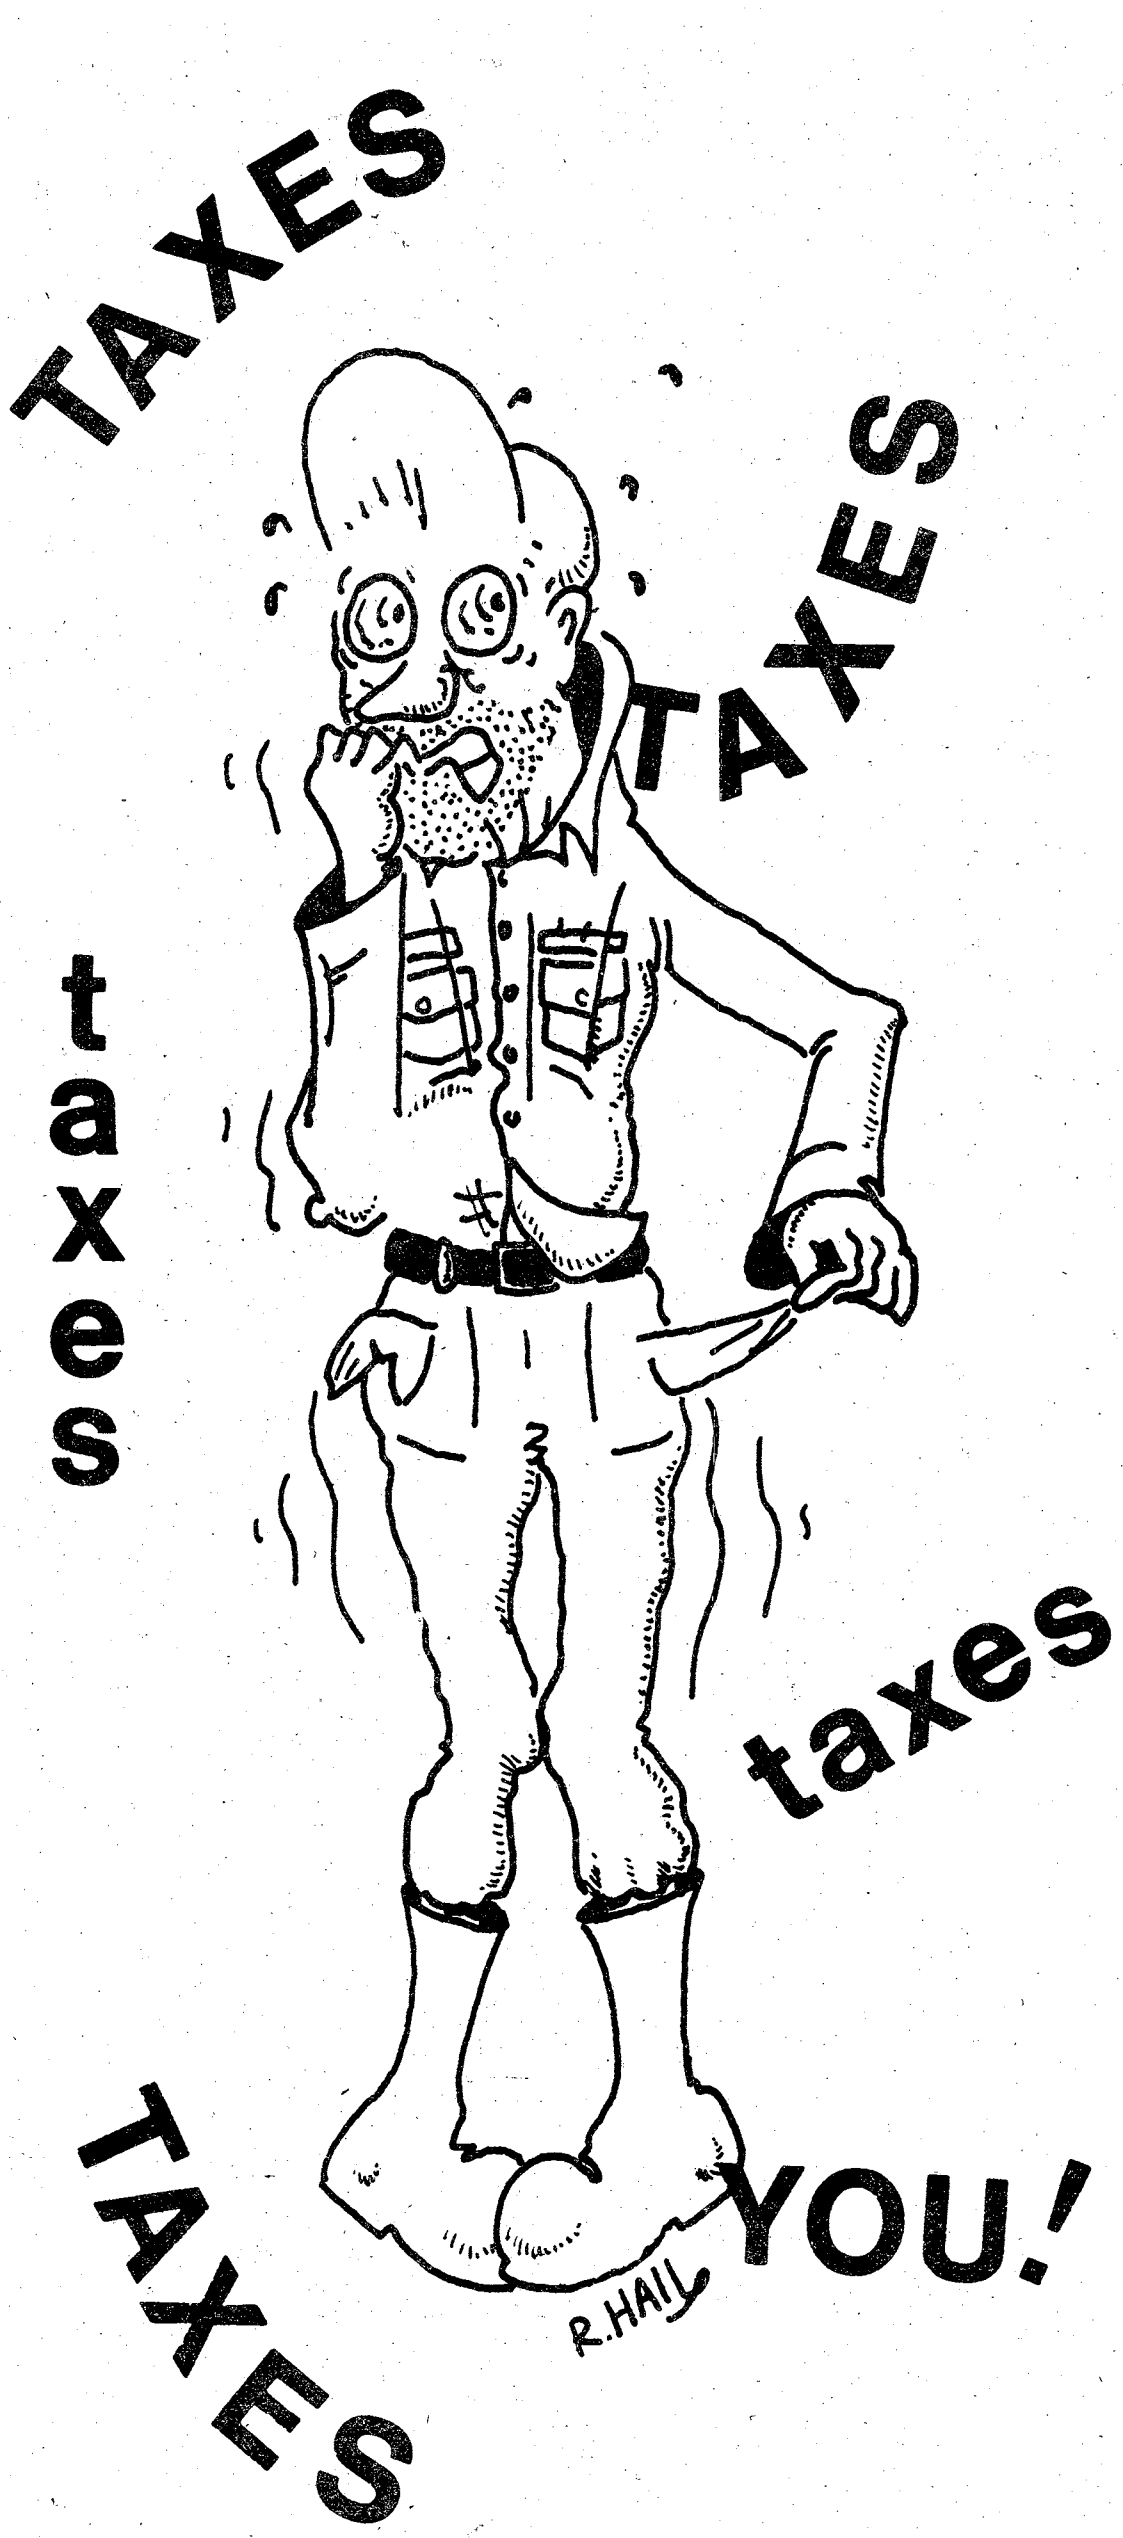
If serving overseas or other problems cause a delay, you can get an automatic two month extension by sending your tax office (addresses are in the instruction booklet) a Form 4668. Further extensions can be requested on Form 2668.

Most forms are available through post offices or your legal assistance office. If the supply is low, slow or incomplete you may send your IRS office a form requesting more forms. This form is on the back of your instruction booklet.

If you're overseas at an APO and waiting for the slow boat to China, you may request forms by letter directly from: Director, Office of International Operations, IRS, Washington, DC 20225.

If you still can't figure out what's going on, grab the nearest XO. He's been through a course sponsored by the JAG office and knows what he's talking about — or at least he should!

Good luck, and may your refund be plentiful!



Check it out before you lease or rent

Here are some helpful hints you should observe before signing a rental or lease agreement.

Inspect the interior and exterior of the premises throughly. Annotate all discrepancies and have the landlord acknowledge the defects or condition with signature and date.

Obtain FC Form 1174 at the Housing Referral Office.

Examine all windows and mirrors for cracks, dirt, stains and paint.

Open all drapes and look for water stains, tears and wear. Do not let rain or sprinklers wet the drapes after moving into the unit. Ask what type of cleaning is required upon termination.

Check all rugs for stains, wear and tear. Ask what type of cleaning is required upon termination.

Inspect every wall for nails, pealing paint and plaster, hooks, stains, spots, unauthorized wallpaper and any other defect. Check ceilings.

Check heating and cooling systems. Check for hot and cold running water and pressure.

Check for loose and exposed wiring.

Check plumbing and flush toilet. Make sure there is no ring around toilet bowl.

Check bathroom. Make sure blower is clean, also bathtub. Look for soap stains on walls. Check for unauthorized non-skid adhesive stripping on bottom of bathtub left by previous tenant and other unauthorized decorative items. Check glass sliding door and inside tracks for algae, dirt and mold.

Open refrigerator and check for missing ice trays, cracks and broken shelves. See if the area behind and under the refrigerator is clean.

Check stove thoroughly. Remove oven racks to see if they are clean. Check oven for grease and dirt. Check burners for carbon. Examine hood above stove for grease.

Check for missing light bulbs. Make sure light fixtures are clean. Check for defective electrical outlets.

Check for missing screens.

Check dishwasher and disposal.

Check patio or balcony area and doors for defects, holes and condition.

Inspect all cabinets, closets, cupboards, storage and linen space for condition.

If you have a yard make sure grass is cut, trimmed and edged. Check fence. Assure sprinklers are operational. Check for weeds, holes and dry area.

Check garage and driveway for oil stains.

Inventory all furniture and check for defects and condition. Check all cushions for holes or burns. Check under cushions for stains on spring coverings. Check box spring and mattress for stains, wear and tear. Turn over each item. Check mattress pad.

Submit all subsequent requests for repairs to the landlord in writing. Keep a copy. Report all damages immediately.

The above listing is not all inclusive. Include any other items you deem reasonably necessary in your inspection. REMEMBER, you will also be checked out on these items by the landlord prior to vacating.

Before terminating your tenancy give proper written notice, clean thoroughly, and arrange for an inspection of your quarters during normal business hours. You have not cleared until an inspection is made and all keys delivered to the landlord. Your deposit refund is contingent upon this inspection and all keys returned. Obtain from the landlord a written certification that your quarters have passed the inspection and that your deposit will be refunded.

Should you encounter a problem during termination which you are unable to work out with the landlord contact the Housing Referral Office. (Courtesy of the Ft. Campbell Courier).

AUSA award given

By Achmed Chettgren

The Association of the United States Army recently presented B Company, 3rd Battalion, 1st AIT Brigade, with an award for coming out on top of the group's recruitment drive with 183 new members.

The local membership's Corporate Membership Committee presented B Company Executive Officer, 2ndLt. Angel DeJesus, with a certificate and a check for $183 during a luncheon in the 3rd Battalion dining facility hosted by Brigade Commander Col. Carl W. Stiner.

Committee members present include Maj. Gen (Ret.) Thomas Tarpley, former Commanding General of Ft. Benning; E. G. Sparks, Chairman of the Board and President of the National Bank of Ft. Benning; B. Dayton Preston, Chairman of the AUSA Corporate Membership Committee; Ben Williams, District Manager of Southern Bell; Dr. Jack Lawler, a Columbus Obstetrician; and Col. Robert Poydasheff, Staff Judge Advocate.

Col. Stiner and Battalion Commander LTC James W. Shugart III, congratulated 2ndLt. DeJesus and the rest of the 1st Brigade officers, First Sergeants and Sergeant Major for their efforts in the AUSA membership drive, which garnered over 1500 new members.

After the luncheon and presentation, Col. Stiner took the AUSA members on a tour of the 1st AIT Brigade training facilities and explained the training mission. He expressed his appreciation for the organization's leadership, drive and concern in its striving for a strong, disciplined and professional Army and in its efforts to better the lot of Army personnel.

Anyone interested in becoming a member of AUSA can do so by contacting their company executive officer, the Battalion Sergeant Major or the Brigade Sergeant Major.

Citizens Band radios have been largely responsible for a widespread fraternity and trust among American motorists.

"Good Buddies" have pressed the mike button for everything from giving directions and tourist information to requesting emergency assistance.

CB enthusiasts have exchanged "handles," home locations, and other personal data over the airwaves. But, just how much should one "good buddy" trust another?

Police sources indicate that too much trust has gotten some CBers into difficulty. There are numerous cases of motorists being attacked or robbed as a result of information broadcasted to others over the CB.

NEVER — broadcast your exact location or use the word "I" (i.e. I am stranded on route . . .), it tells listeners you are alone.

Some get second chance at GI Bill

A new law may make it possible for veterans to enroll again if certain health problems prevented beginning or completing education under the GI Bill, according to VA Administrator Max Cleland.

The new program is available to veterans, spouses or surviving spouses whose eligibility for GI Bill education benefits expired on June 1, 1976, or later, but who had not used all their schooling entitlement when mental or physical disability interfered with their training.

The disability must not have resulted from the individual's willful misconduct, the VA Administrator emphasized.

Potential applicants must provide medical evidence that mental illness or physical disability was responsible for their being unable to begin or complete schooling before the expiration of their GI Bill eligibility.

Under the law, veterans have ten years from the date of their discharge from active duty to complete GI Bill training. Spouses or surviving spouses have ten years from the date of their initial eligibility to complete training under the bill.

Until the new law was passed, those who had not used all their GI education benefits by the end of that ten-year period lost them.

"This law," Cleland said, "gives us a welcome opportunity to help veterans who had their education delayed or interrupted because of circumstances beyond their control."

Any approved extensions will be for the length of time VA determines that the veteran or spouse was prevented from beginning or completing the education program.

The number of potential eligibles is unknown, but VA officials urge individuals who believe they qualify for the new program to avoid possible disappointment by making certain they have the necessary medical evidence in connection with their application.

Additional information on the program may be obtained at any VA office. (ARNEWS).

Breakfast hosts guest speaker

By Joyce Walker

The annual National Prayer Breakfast will be held Thursday at the Officers' Supper Club at 6:45 a.m.

Col. (Ret.) Charles H. Reidenbaugh of Columbus will be the guest speaker. Special musical entertainment will be provided by Sp4 Shane M. Burr of the Kelley Hill Chapel and the Infantry Chorus.

At the time of his retirement on August 1, 1974, Reidenbaugh was Director of Personnel and Community Activities, U.S. Army Infantry Center. During his more than 35 years of service, he served with the 148th Infantry (Pacific) in World War II, and was battalion commander and operations officer for the 25th Inf. Div. in Korea and Hawaii.

Assigned to the U.S. Army Japan Headquarters in 1960, he transferred to the John F. Kennedy Special Warfare Center in 1964. In 1965, Reidenbaugh was assigned as senior adviser to the 10th Division, Army of the Republic of Vietnam and, following a year in Vietnam, returned to Ft. Dix as deputy post commander. He later commanded the Center Troop Command here and the 3rd Recruiting District, Atlanta.

Reidenbaugh's civilian education includes a Bachelor of Science Degree from the University of Maryland and a Master of Arts Degree from George Washington University.

He is a graduate of the Command and General Staff College, and the U.S. Army War College.

Reidenbaugh's awards include the Silver Star, Legion of Merit, Bronze Star with Oak Leaf Clusters, Air Medal with two Oak Leaf Clusters, Army Commendation Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster and the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry with Gold Palm.

ADCO extends clients' service

The first part of a program that extends the ADCO counseling service beyond the confines of Benning House began Tuesday at the Kelley Hill service club.

Group sessions, primarily intended as a follow-up for Benning House resident clients, will be held every Tuesday and Thursday from 1:30 to 3 p.m. Similar projects on Main Post and at Sand Hill are planned.

New Benning House clients who do not undergo resident treatment will also attend the sessions.

Six permanently assigned counselors, with two in each of the areas to be covered, will conduct the program. In addition to reducing travel time and inconvenience for members of the units served, the decentralization will assist counselors and commanders in evaluating clients' progress; it will help commanders in screening, referral and making treatment available; and will provide assistance to unit Alcohol and Drug Control officers, according to Sidney Levine, Benning House's clinical director and psychologist.

The counselors, between group sessions and conferences with commanders, will be available for questions from individuals.

Another advantage of having counselors in the locality, according to Levine, is the possibility of assisting commanders in making earlier referrals to the alcohol and drug control program, conceivably preventing a problem from becoming worse.

General to address Columbus Lawyers Club

BrigGen. Alton H. Harvey, assistant Judge Advocate General for Civil Law, Department of the Army, will be the guest speaker at the monthly meeting of the Columbus Lawyers Club at 7 p.m. Thursday at the Officers' Supper Club.

The post Staff Judge Advocate's office traditionally serves as the Club's host each February. Army lawyers assigned here are associate members of the organization.

BrigGen. Harvey, who will speak on the changing role of the Judge Advocate General, attended Airborne and Ranger Schools here in 1951 as an enlisted man. He received his commission in 1952 after attending Officer Candidate School here, and was then assigned to Korea where he served as platoon leader and company executive officer.

Since his return to active duty in 1958, BrigGen. Harvey has served as assistant Chief, International Law Division, Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, 8th Army, Korea; as Staff Judge Advocate, U.S. Military Assistance Command, Thailand; and as Staff Judge Advocate, 101st Airborne Division, Vietnam.

His most recent stateside assignments have been that of Chief, Criminal Law Division, Judge Advocate General and Chief, Defense Appellate Division, U.S. Army Legal Services Agency.

ROTC awards scholarships

Active duty enlisted men and women now have the opportunity to finish college and earn a commission — all at Army expense.

Beginning January 15, Army ROTC will be accepting applications for two-year college scholarships which will become effective school year 1978-79. These scholarships pay full tuition, books, educational fees and provide a living allowance of up to $1,000 a year each year the award is in effect. In addition, students are paid while attending the Advanced Camp, normally between the junior and senior years of college.

Along with the scholarship benefits, winners may also be eligible to receive GI educational benefits. Applicants must have at least one year of active duty, be under 25 years of age on June 30 of the year eligible for commissioning, have at least two but not more than two and one-half years of college credit, have a GT score of at least 115, have been accepted by a college for next fall's enrollment, and be a U.S. citizen.

Following graduation, the former EM will be commissioned as second lieutenants with a four year active duty obligation. Complete details on this program are contained in AR 145-1. Applications must be requested by 15 April 1978; however, applicants have until 1 May 1978 to complete their applications.

For further information and application forms, write Army ROTC Scholarships, Fort Monroe, VA 23651. (TNS)

Post engineers get some on-the-job training from DAFE

Sp4 John Kolar of Co D, 43rd Engr Bn repairs the cord on a buffer at the electrical shop in the DAFE warehouse.

By Patricia Redmond

Several soldiers from Co D, 43rd Engineer Bn, 36th Engineer Gp recently enrolled in an on-the-job training (OJT) program sponsored by the Department of the Army Facility Engineers (DAFE).

The 90-day program was set up to help the military engineers from the 43rd improve their basic skills in electrical wiring, plumbing, heating and carpentry.

Working out of the carpentry and warehouse area, the engineers perform actual repair jobs at various locations on post. During their 90-day training at DAFE the service members wear civilian clothes and are trained by civilian members of the DAFE staff.

Five soldiers were selected as the first group to work with DAFE in the pilot program. Eventually everyone in the company will be given the opportunity to participate in the program.

"Indispensable!" That's how one DAFE civilian described the work done thus far by the engineers.

Not only has DAFE been beneficial in improving skills, but the real-life technical experience has been a great morale booster for the soldiers.

"DAFE is great," commented Sp4 John Kolar presently working in the electrical shop. "You really become interested in what you're doing and gain valuable experience."

AIT Bde hosts weekly rock concert

By Achmed Chettgren

More than 250 students of the 3rd Battalion, 1st AIT Brigade, were treated to a country rock concert Sunday afternoon. It was another in a series of cultural events intended to broaden the scope of the students and provide a pleasant break from training.

The Sunday entertainment programs, held in the 3rd Battalion classrooms, are presented by the Music and Theatre Branch of Recreation Services Director, Charles Sheikovitz, with the cooperation of 1st AIT Commander Col. Carl W. Stiner, 3rd Battalion Commander LTC James W. Shugart III; and Chaplin Cpt. Kenneth Leinwand.

"The purpose is to expose these young men to a variety of cultural events," said Sheikovitz," is to broaden their scope and give them entertainment."

The rock group, "Logan's Creek," was well received by the soldiers during their two hour concert featuring popular and original country rock tunes.

"It's a good moral booster," said PFC Michael Swetman of 1st Platoon B Company. "It's good to break away from the rigors of training and keep in contact with the outside world. I would like to see more of this kind of thing."

And there will be more. Next Sunday plans have been made to present scenes from the Nutcracker Suite by Brahms, featuring ballet dancer Judy Palucci with Sheikovitz as her partner. There will also be classical/Spanish guitarist, Paul Allen, featured on the program.

"Our mission," says Chaplin Leinwand," is to insure that the troops have access to the spiritual and cultural aspects of life, as well as the military aspects. We try to make these things available to them so that the troops are not only good soldiers, but well rounded human beings as well. Our Battalion has been successful in providing this broad spectrum for its troops."

Almost perfect teamwork!!! SIDPERS is the Army's computerized personnel actions system, but SIDPERS can't operate without paperwork, and teamwork is the necessary ingredient that keeps the correct paperwork flowing. The SIDPERS Section, 34th Medical Bn had the highest correct SIDPERS processing rate, 99.7 per cent, for major units at Benning for the last three months of the year. Benning lady

NCOWC News

Mrs. Larry D. Jackson (Sandra); moved up as President of the NCO Wives Club, upon the resignation of Mrs. Wesley A. Wildman (Mary) on January 19. Mrs. Herman Jackson (Elizabeth), also moved up to 1st Vice President.

Newcomers Coffee

The NCOWC held their monthly newcomers coffee on January 24 at their Clubhouse, located in the Lawson Field area. The President and members welcomed the newcomers and chatted over cofffee and donuts provided by the Hospitality Chairman, Rowena Cherry.

All NCO Wives are invited to this coffee, held each fourth Tuesday of the month at 10 a.m.

Breakfast and Games

Members and guests of the NCO Wives Club met at the Top 5 NCO Club at 9:30 a.m. on January 25 for their monthly social. The ladies ate a delicious breakfast, served in the dining room, and adjourned to the ballroom to complete their morning of fun and games provided by their hostesses Ethel Wise, Esther Richard, Sallie Smith, and Dorothy Sawyer.

2/10 FA Ladies Luncheon

On January 16 the ladies of the 2/10th FA Bn met for their first gathering since the busy holiday season. The ladies enjoyed a delightful luncheon at the Rankin Delicatessen. Mrs. Jane Furey, wife of the Battalion Commander, welcomed everyone and passed along several items of interest and news of upcoming events.

The hostesses for this enjoyable afternoon were Mrs. Kathy Cole and Mrs. Sherry Pena.

2/69th Armor Wives Coffee

The Officer's Wives of the 2/69 Armor met at the home of Capt. and Mrs. John Kelley for a lovely evening coffee. Mrs. Bienvendio Gonzales was formally welcomed into the wives group by Mrs. Ivey.

Mrs. Donald Burns was farewelled, since her husband, Capt. Burns is joing the 197th Bde Signal Section. Mrs. Burns has contributed her time and efforts to the battalion Wives Club by serving in the capacity of unit Treasurer for the past year.

Winner of this month's door prize, a jade plant, was Mrs. James Gebhardt.

2/69th Armor Hail and Farewell

The Officers and Wives of the 2/69th Armor met at the Custer Terrace Officers Club recently for their January Hail and Farewell.

Col. Ivey welcomed three new officers into the Battalion: 2ndLt. Phil Archer, from the MSC Officers Basic Course, and Capt and Mrs. Tom Herman, from the 440th Signal Bn in USAEUR, by way of the Signal Officers Advance Course.

2ndLt. Archer will be assigned as the Battalion Medical Platoon Leader, and Capt. Herman will assume the position of Battalion Commo Officer.

Later this month, 2ndLt. John Wright will join the battalion, coming from USAIS, where he has been the Administration Officer for the Director of Evaluation.

Capt. and Mrs. Donald Burns are leaving the battalion to join the 197th Brigade Signal Section, and WO1 Bienvendio Gonzales will be leaving for a tour in Korea.

Mrs. Gonzales will remain in this area and continue to participate in the wives's group activities. Good luck to all of the departing members of the battalion.

Farewell

It seems that it was only a short time ago that I said hello to the many friends that I have gained here at Ft. Benning. All too soon, I must say goodbye.

Being a part of the Bayonet and writing as the Benning Lady has certainly added to my stay here in a positive and pleasurable way. Many thanks to all of you, for your warmth, kindness, and friendship.

It has been a privilege for me to serve in this capacity, for and with the community. I will miss all of you, and forever cherish these fond memories.

Christine Bass

The Benning Lady will continue with Mrs. Larry D. Jackson (Sandra) writing the column. She can be reached at 119-E Baker Street in McGraw Manor or by calling 682-0094. Your information for the column may be sent or delivered to her or deposited in the box at Tot Town Nursery.

Retirees receive legal assistance

Message on recycling program

Fort Benning will soon begin a program to recycle office paper. This program will be in compliance with The Resource Conservation and Recovery Act and will be implemented by separating, at the source, the substantial quantities of high-grade white paper which are normally discarded. This recovered resource will be sold and the proceeds will be used by the environmental program to improve all recycling efforts.

This new recycling program provides a way for each of us, as individuals, to contribute toward a solution to the nation's solid waste disposal problem. It is estimated that 60% or more of the material we normally discard into wastebaskets will qualify for inclusion in the program. Only small changes in our daily habits are required for a successful program. This paper will be recycled rather than hauled away as "waste." This will help to guarantee a reduction in solid waste on our post and in our community.

"WASTE NOT" is the theme of the Fort Benning recycling program; you will soon see posters on many of the bulletin boards reminding us to support the program. All participating personnel will attend a brief instructional session at which time the program will be further explained. These sessions, to be located in your own building or another building close by, will be scheduled and announced soon.

We can be proud that Fort Benning is dedicated to environmental protection as evidenced by our agreement to participate in the recycling program. All of us are concerned about the environment, and reaction to this effort has been very favorable. It's up to each of us to provide the support and cooperation necessary for the program to succeed.

Approximately 650 infantrymen graduated yesterday at ceremonies held at Dickman Field, Harmony Church. Companies D, E, 6th Bn and Co. A, 2nd Bn joined the ranks of infantrymen around the world. Col. Carl Stiner, 1st AIT Bde Commander, was the reviewing officer.

Named Distinquished Drill Sergeant was SSG Robert L. McIntosh of E-6-1. Drill Sergeant McIntosh hails from Ellaville, Georgia.

PFC David M. Green, a member of A-2-1, was chosen as the Distinquished Graduate. A native of Mason, Michigan, PFC Green will return to his National Guard unit in Pontiac, Michigan after Airborne training.

The Instructor of the Cycle came from Tactics Committee. Sgt. Harry T. Rolle, a native of North Miami Beach, Florida, instructs mechanized maintenance.

Prestigious Patterson Award presented to OCS graduate

Second Lieutenant Thomas G. Foster IV has been named the 26th recipient of the prestigious Robert P. Patterson Award, presented annually to the outstanding honor graduate of all OCS courses during the previous academic year.

Mrs. Patterson, widow of the man for whom the award is named, will make the presentation Friday at 11 a.m. in Marshall Auditorium, Bldg. 4.

Lieutenant Foster was graduated from OCS October 19, 1976, placing second in a class of 179. He had a leadership score of 99 per cent and an academic average of 93.14. The former enlisted soldier, now stationed at Ft. Carson, Colo., will return to Benning for the ceremony.

The award was established in 1952 to honor the memory of Robert P. Patterson, Secretary of War under President Franklin D. Roosevelt and judge of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Following his death in a plane crash, 120 of his friends, headed by Winthrop Rockefeller and Gen. Julius Ochs Adler, set up a trust fund for which the yearly memorial service award is made.

The recipient receives an engraved service pistol, a certificate and a cash award, paid for out of the trust.

Cafeteria burns

No dining problems expected

By Joyce Walker

Although the Benning Cafeteria was destroyed by fire early Sunday morning, it shouldn't cause too many dining problems for post personnel, according to Shiegeru Ito, administrative officer of Post Exchange activities.

Two cafeterias located on Main Post, the Running Chef in the mini mall and the Infantry Hall cafeteria can accommodate the diners. There is also a pizza shop located in the mini mall and another cafeteria at the main mall.

People can also go to various other snack bars in the bowling alleys and on post for short orders and beverages.

Benning firemen found the blaze hard to control because of the age and material of the building, according to Chief Willard Bass, assistant fire chief here.

"We called the Columbus Fire Department soon after getting our first pumps on the scene," explained Chief Bass and within minutes they arrived. The fire was under control by 8:30 a.m.

Due to the fire, the Exchange offices where records were kept have had to organize and relocate in Bldg. 1827, the old Bargain Store. These offices were previously located on the second floor of the cafeteria building.

None of the cafeteria employees will be laid off but instead assigned to other concessions according to Mr. Ito.

Tactics proficiency recognized

The Tiger Tactics Award was presented to OCS class 1-78 Friday to acknowledge professional application of the fundamentals of tactics.

The award states that the morale, esprit de corps, cooperation, proficiency and military bearing of the class exceeds those standards set by and for the Infantry School.

Col. Bobby J. Harris, director of the Tactics Department, presented the award to Capt. Clifton A. Ripperger, commander 50th Co, 5th Student Bn, TSB, and James O. Smaugh, student company commander.

The class is the first OCS class to receive the tactics award since September 1972.

Benning soldiers star on TV

Benning soldiers will be stars in a 27-minute documentary to be broadcast by WRBL-TV (Channel 3) tomorrow from 7:30 to 8 p.m.

The documentary, entitled "The New Breed," was filmed in its entirety at Benning by RKO General Television. It features trainees and cadre of the AIT Bde, as well as female soldiers in the Airborne Department, Aviation Division and OCS.

RKO has telecast the film over its stations in New York and other metropolitan areas.

Volunteers are urgently needed by the Red Cross to serve at the hospital, field office, and schools, says J. C. Jackson, field director of the Red Cross' Ft. Benning Chapter.

Interviews will be held at the field office on Main Post Thursday and Friday from 9 a.m. until noon and also at Martin Army Hospital on Thursday from 9 a.m. until noon.

A volunteer training class will be held at the TIC Chapel Annex February 13 at 8:45 a.m.

For additional information call 544-4122 or 544-3213.

Post essay contest slated

The Equal Opportunity Coordinating Office (EOCO) is sponsoring an essay contest for sixth, seventh and eighth graders in post schools.

The subject theme of the essay is "What Black History Means to Me" and should be at least 750 words but not more than 1000. Entry deadline is February 15.

A 1st prize of a $50 savings bond and 2nd prize of a $25 savings bond will be awarded at each grade level.

Essays will be judged on content, grammar, knowledge and originality. Judges will be members of the school faculty and the EOCO personnel.

Contest winners will be announced on February 17th.

AUSA: pay commission may be talking too soon

The President's Commission on Military Compensation was established to take a hard look at a very complex subject in a relatively short time. They have pursued their goal diligently and have pledged to have their final report on President Carter's desk by the March 15 deadline.

The subject of the commission's work is obviously of great interest to military personnel in all the services and in all ranks. The commission's recommendations will most likely carry great weight in the design of legislation to change the way military pay levels are set, to reaffirm or abandon the present system of allowances and to quiet current arguments over the military retirement system.

To the commission's credit there have been a number of public meetings in Washington and at military bases across the country. Some commissioners are even traveling overseas to get the opinions of military personnel there. There has been no apparent effort to hide anything the commission or its staff are doing. Service newspapers have carried detailed accounts of the testimony before the commission, including recommendations made to the commissioners by the staff.

Some of those recommendations have been alarming, to say the least. The staff proposal to eliminate 20-year retirement hit military people like the shock waves from a very large bomb. And the shock was intensified by the fact that they came from a body that will have such direct impact, not from some irate individual member of Congress whose ideas would have to pass muster before several committees before having any weight.

The commission staff was just doing its job, to be sure. They exist to make the detailed analysis the individual commissioners, as occasional participants, do not have time for and to draft the recommendations the commission will ultimately approve to be forwarded to the President. But one wonders if it might not be better to delay the public presentation of those recommendations until the time they have the full weight of commission approval behind them.

Based on strong support for the retention of 20-year retirement made before the commission recently by the Chiefs of Staff of the Army and Air Force and the Commandant of the Marine Corps the commission could very well turn against the staff recommendation and support the present system. In the meantime, however, military morale has been shaken by the public staff recommendation and many military people are prepared to believe that the commission will ultimately do irreparable harm to the compensation system. (AUSA Defense Report).

News in brief

DoD pushes hearing safety

A DoD instruction to the services will create hearing safety programs to counter one of the most common military medical problems.

Hearing problems are common among most artillery and armor personnel and careerists in the infantry and other noise-polluted environments, according to a DA official.

The instruction, still pending final approval, will require hearing protection policies ranging from personal education and wear of ear plugs, to buying less noisy equipment and posting hazardous noise warning signs. (ARNEWS).

Reduced air fares extended

Four U.S. airlines intend to extend reduced military fares, according to the Military Traffic Management Command (MTMC). Delta, Eastern, United and American Airlines have told MTMC that they plan to extend the reduced fares beyond their scheduled March 31 end. While extensions are subject to Civil Aeronautics Board approval, MTMC said early statements by the airlines is an indication that other airlines will follow suit.

SQT results being filed

SQT scores must be immediately filed in a soldier's personnel records, even if temporary reports must be filed, MilPerCen told post personnel officials.

The information is important for promotions and reenlistment purposes and to record a soldier's training progress.

In a message, DA said new soldier report cards (DA Form 10A), which lists the soldier's latest SQT score and enlisted evaluation report weighted average, will not be distributed to troops until next month.

Until these forms become available, MilPerCen advises that the Individual Soldier's Report (ISR) be temporarily included in personnel files so commanders will have the information available if needed.

The report was designed byTRADOC to give soldiers information on how they did in each category of their SQT.

The ISR will be kept in personnel records until receipt of DA Form 10A, MilPerCen said. At this time, Form 10A will become a permanent document in the soldier's record jacket.

ID Card Section changes hours

The COMPACT I D Card Section, located in Bldg. 83, room 139, has changed their operating hours to Monday through Thursday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and Friday from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The extended service is available to those personnel who normally are serviced by this section, including retired personnel and their dependents; and active duty personnel whose records are maintained at Bldg. 83 and their dependents.

All active duty personnel applying for their own I D Cards and personnel in pay grades E-1 through E-6 applying for their dependents' I D Cards must report to the personnel records section (Officers, room 336; Enlisted, room 332) prior to 5 p.m. for initiation and verification of application.

For more information contact the COMPACT I D Section at 545-4742.

Marriage group helps couples grow

By Debra Hilgeman

In recent years, divorce has become an increassingly acceptable solution to troubled marriages. To counteract this trend, marriage communication groups have been formed to ward off potential marital problems before they get out of hand.

One such program is the post Association of Couples for Marriage Enrichment (ACME) that is dedicated to making good marriages better. The post ACME is a nonreligious program of weekend retreats and home group meetings, led by Chaplain (Capt.) Dave Myers and his wife, Barbara. The program is designed to teach couples communication skills that enable them to deal with whatever problems come up in their relationship.

Chap. Myers feels the main causes of friction in Army marriages are money problems, sexual problems and misunderstanding why the soldier is away from home so much. "I think the number one problem couples face is the inability to communicate effectively," he noted. "Communication skills do not come automatically," the chaplain pointed out, "they are learned and improved through practice."

In a marriage enrichment retreat, these skills are learned through exercises that teach the basic concepts of communication. "A key word is dialogue," said Chap. Myers. "My wife and I might illustrate discussing a certain issue such as 'Should the wife work?' Then each couple has a chance to practice communicating by taking opposite views on the issue and having a dialogue using the skills they have just learned," he explained.

Anything the group talks about, other than communication skills, is introduced by the group as an "agenda item." The topics brought up for discussion include roles, children, sexuality, work, recreation, spending, education, inlaws and boredom. Religious matters are disccused only when the subject is brought up by couples themselves, according to Chap. Myers.

Openess and honesty promotes growth

ACME operates under the premise that if a couple is able to talk about a problem openly and honestly, it will promote marital growth. If a dialogue between a husband and wife seems to be getting out of hand, Chap. Myers and his wife serve as monitors and steer the dialogue back into a safer area. "I have found that when a couple first gets into something like this, it gets to be threatening," the chaplain noted. "The retreat tends to stir up problems that were always under the surface but never recognized or admitted," he explained.

According to Chap. Myers, the main emphasis in a retreat experience is on practicing skills, not problem solving. "If a couple comes to a retreat expecting to get all their problems solved, they've come for the wrong reason," he said.

Professional counseling may be advised

If a couple's relationship has deteriorated to the point where they are facing divorce, they are advised to get professional counseling before participating in a retreat or growth group. "If a couple brings serious difficulties into a retreat, it can be very threatening to the other couples and tends to do an injustice to the retreat experience," the chaplain explained.

Chap. Myers feels the major problem he encounters is getting couples to commit themselves to attend a retreat. "Some couples are not sure what we're all about and that is where we've been weakened," he said.

Bordom is major complaint

The groups are comprised of couples of all ages. The wife may initially be the one to encourage the husband to attend, or vice versa, but in the end it has to be a joint decision, according to Chap. Myers. "Boredom brings in a lot of couples; especially the lower enlisted people," he noted. "This is especially true when the wife is tied to the home with children and doesn't have an outside job."

Support groups follow retreat experience

Once a couple has attended a retreat, they are encouraged to follow it up with support growth groups. After learning some communication skills at a retreat, the couple can use them to begin solving their problems using group support at a growth meeting. "These skills can also be used at home by a couple in solving some of their relationship difficulties," the chaplain added.

There are two ACME support groups operating in this area. The Benning Chapter is exclusively military and the Columbus/Ft. Benning chapter is about half military and half civilian. The chapter meetings are held twice yearly for both support groups and other interested persons who are not involved in the support groups but do participate in other functions. The support groups meet in various homes as often as the members decide on.

Retreats are planned whenever a sufficient number of couples expresses an interest in attending; six to ten couples are considered ideal. Post retreats have been held at McBride School, the Religious Education Center and off-post retreat centers. There is usually no fee and sometimes a free babysitting service is provided.

Chap. Myers emphasized ACME's committment to marriage. "When a couple has a committment to each other and really wants to develop the relationship they can. That's what we're for," he concluded.

All interested couples are invited to attend a Marriage Enrichment Rally, sponsored by Georgia ACME members, February 24-25 in Macon, Georgia. Additional information can be obtained from Chap. Myers at 544-6131.

Play it safe at your door

Many people, especially women, are robbed and assaulted at home because they opened the door to someone who seemed "legitimate."

Most people have a natural desire not to be rude to anyone at their door, especially someone who looks and sounds all right. But robbers will take advantage of this to get you to open the door.

Never automatically open your door when someone knocks, even if you are expecting someone! Your friends and legitimate businessmen, even if they are expected, will understand and appreciate your caution.

Maintain a cautious attitude of prevention each time someone knocks, and have a peephole mounted in your front door. These are the two best weapons you have against residential robbery.

Here are some additional safety tips:

- Always look through the peephole before opening your door. Police authorities believe that if everyone used a peephole, the crime of residential robbery could be nearly eliminated.
- Women should list their initial instead of their first name on the door and mailbox, in the phone book, and on mailing lists for magazines and monthly statements.
- If the person at your door is a stranger, ask for identification to be passed under the door so you can verify it by phone. If the person is unable to do this, don't open your door.
- Immediately report any solicitor or salesman without proper credentials to the police.

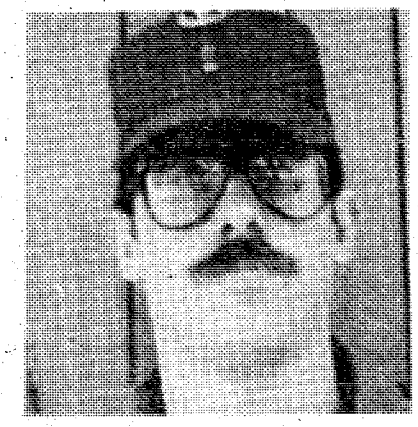
Glad you asked . . .

Is there enough courtesy and respect in the military?

By Sue Davis

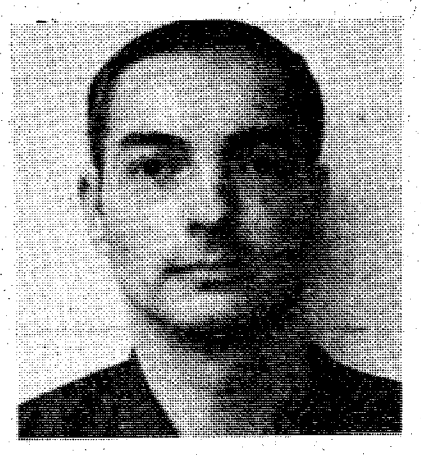


2ndLt. Allan J. Gainok, 23rd Co, TSB

I feel that there is enough common courtesy and respect but it is not always uniform in its use. I feel the soldier should get more instruction in military courtesy and respect so they know how to use it.

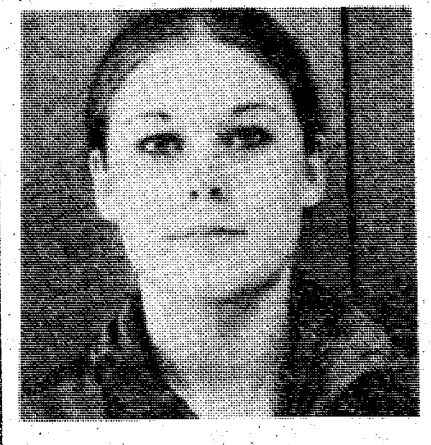
Pvt. James A. Verke, 2nd Combat Support Hospital

Being in the service for six months, I've experienced many different attitudes from all ranks of personnel. I do find that higher ranking people tend to look down on the lower ranks. I would feel more comfortable if this could be helped.



CWO3 Paul R. Wilson, 478th Transportation Co

It's distrubing to me the amount of and openess of profanity used by our male soldiers while in company of female soldiers. I can't believe our value system has accepted this as common practice, as is indicated by many of the male soldiers.



Pvt. Elizabeth A. Ghaemi-Gavgani, HHD 4th Student Bn, TSB

I feel that although there is a high degree of espirit de corps in my unit, there is not nearly as much respect for rank as military custom demands. We have a problem here which is either seated in ignorance or disrespect, neither of which belong in an airborne unit.

SGM John W. Watson, ROTC Valley Forge Military Academy & Junior College

It is the mark of a professional soldier; a stepping stone to the type of fighting men needed in today's Army. At the present time there just doesn't seem to be enough common courtesy and respect displayed by enlisted members, NCO's and officers.

Respect -- it's a two-way street

By Marie M. Russo

"Top, do you have a minute? We need to talk to you."

"Sure, come on in fellas. What is it, the three of you aren't in any kind of trouble are you?"

"No Top, it's our barracks sergeant; Corporal Jones is murder to work for."

"And aside from that we don't understand why you made him barracks sergeant."

"Yeah Top, we're E-4s and Stevens even is senior to Jones. How'd he get to be the lucky one?"

"I choose Corporal Jones to be the barracks NCO because I thought he was the most qualified for the job. I considered all of you for the position and I decided Jones was the best man for the job."

"Geez Top, I still don't think it's fair."

"Stevens we're not talking about fair — there's a job that has to be done and I want to get it done the best way possible. Now you said there was a problem with Jones, what is it?"

"All he does is give orders, Top."

"Yeah and if we go on sick call or something, he has more work for us when we come back. He doesn't show us any respect."

"Well, do you guys deserve his respect?"

"Hey, come on Top, why are you taking his side?"

"I'm not taking anyone's side, but according to the dictionary, to be respected means to be deserving of high regard. Are any of you?"

"Top we're all equal, he should suggest we do something, not tell us we have to."

"Listen fellas, I've been aware of tension in your outfit for some time now, but I thought you'd be able to work it out among yourselves."

"Top, how can you really know what's going on? You don't work in there with us."

"No you're right there Stevens, but I do have eyes and ears. First of all, Harris, you spend the better part of the day talking to that little Wac in Charlie Company and, Carter, I've never known you to be really sick when you go on sick call, which is at least twice a week."

"Well what about me Top, that squirt is my subordinate. Why should I have to do what he tells me to?"

"Because I appointed him barracks sergeant and that makes him boss. And another thing, Stevens, by virtue of rank you should be in charge, but I honestly don't think you're qualified enough. You don't have any sense of responsibility, and you're constantly going through some sort of personal crisis."

"So in other words what you're saying, Top, is that we should all shut up and let Jones be disrespectful to us?"

"That's not what I'm saying Stevens. You keep talking about respect, but do you realize it's a two-way street? You fellas never give Jones guidelines or suggestions, if you have a question you ask someone else and then get angry if he tells you that you've done the job wrong."

"Come on, Top, give us a break."

"All you guys do is attack Jones' work and decisions. I've given you enough of a break by letting you take advantage of him. He's been bending over backwards to give you what you want and yet when you do something he asks, you do a sloppy job."

"Alright, alright Top, we're sorry we bothered you."

"Just a minute, I'm not finished. You keep talking about the respect you deserve, but has any one of you ever stopped to think that Corporal Jones deserves a little respect too? He's been tasked with a big job and a lot of responsibilities, his job isn't all glory."

"So what do you want us to do Top? Get down on our hands and knees every time he walks into the room."

"Don't be smart Harris. But did it ever occur to any of you guys that if you showed your boss a little respect and common decency his attitude toward you may be different?"

"You know, Top, I never thought of it that way. By our complaining and refusing to do the work that has to be done, we're showing Jones that we're a bunch of incompetents."

"Speak for yourself Stevens. If the great corporal doesn't start showing me a little bit of respect I'm just not going to do another thing."

"Carter, by doing that you're telling him you don't deserve respect. Top is right, one way streets just don't make it. If we want respect we're going to have to give a little too."

"Yeah Stevens you said it. Thanks alot for pointing us in the right direction, Top."

"Alright now that you guys have your stuff together, get outta here before I get an ulcer."

CHAMPUS forms change

CHAMPUS Consolidated Prescription Drug Reimbursement Form 198 can no longer be used for submitting a prescription drug claim, according to officials of the program. Instead, it will be necessary to attach itemized receipts to a regular CHAMPUS claim form.

Each receipt must show the name of the drug, the name and address of the pharmacy where purchased and the prescription number. In addition, claims for the following drugs must show the strength of the drug:

- Narcotics, such as Morphine and Demerol.
- Non-narcotic analgesics, such as Talwin and Darvon.
- Tranquilizers, such as Valium, Librium, and Meprobamate.
- Barbituates, such as Seconal and Nembutal.
- Non-barbituate hypnotics, such as Doriden and Chloral Hydrate.
- Stimulants, such as Amphetamines and Methedrine.

Beginning January 1, 1979, drug strengths will be required for all prescription drug claims.

In another note, the customary "blue" CHAMPUS form — DA Form 1863-1 — used for submitting claims for hospital care under the Basic Program was recently printed in large quantity on white paper.

CHAMPUS officials have asked that beneficiaries and institutions be advised of the color change to lessen confusion resulting from it.

The blue 1863-1 should be used when available and the white 1863-1 may be used when the blue form is no longer available.

The National Safety Council estimates that if all passenger car occupants used seat belts at all times, 12,000 lives per year would be saved. You should wear them every time you are in an automobile as a driver or passenger. (Courtesy of National Safety Council)

1/58th Infantry tests their combat proficiency

By Ron Fowler

Below freezing temperatures and bone-chilling winds were only two of the elements that the "Patroits" of the 1/58th Infantry braved last week as they underwent an Army Testing and Evaluation Program (ARTEP) designed to test their combat proficiency as a mechanized infantry battalion.

The ARTEP was set up to provide the Patroits with tactical problems and situations that were staged as realistically as possible, according to MSgt. Gordon L. Dix, NCOIC of the battalion's S-3 (operations) section. "Every little detail that added to the dimension of realism and intensity of the ARTEP was implemented in the training," the sergeant pointed out.

Other units from the 197th Infantry Bde either provide support for the 1/58th or were actually a part of the mission task force during the four day exercise.

"We accomplished a variety of things during the ARTEP that we had been working hard to perfect," said MSgt. Dix.

"In the past few months, we've had a large influx of personnel into the battalion so this ARTEP gave us the opportunity to give these new people, especially the junior NCOs, the chance to really show us what they are capable of doing in a tactical environment," the sergeant explained.

"We got a chance to put a lot of the tactical knowledge that we have to practical use during the ARTEP," said Sp4 Glen Freeman of Co C, 1/58th.

The ARTEP has to be one of the finest training vehicles that the Army has for unit evaluation, commented MSgt. Dix. "It gives us the opportunity to see exactly where we stand in terms of proficiency and provides us a training tool with which we can further build our combat readiness. It's a great program," the sergeant concluded.

Seminar scheduled for officers leaving service

A Civilian Employment Opportunities Seminar is scheduled Saturday at 2 p.m. at the Ramada Inn on US 80-280 and 431, Phenix City, Ala., for commissioned officers who are preparing to leave the service.

The seminar will include information for those college graduates who desire to enter management positions in major U.S. corporations. Current market conditions, preparations prior to ETS and the Seminar's services will be discussed.

Also included in the seminar is an individual interview scheduled Monday through Thursday at the Columbus Airport Holiday Inn, to gain knowledge of the officer's background, professional experience, management techniques, and personal qualities.

Individuals that have previously attended an Information Seminar may preschedule interviews with Mr. John L. Begley or Steve Richards by contacting Debbie Ingram between 8:30 a.m. and 5 p.m. at 415-986-1429 before close of business today.

There is no charge for the seminar or placement service. Individuals assigned to units in the field may wear fatigues.

Retirees honored

Six officers and enlisted men, each with at least 20 years of military service, retired in January with a ceremony held in Marshall Auditorium Monday.

Maj. William H. Cain Jr., (CWO4) James P. Walters and MSgt. William C. Cato received the Meritorious Service Medal at the ceremony. It was the second award of that decoration for Maj. Cain and CWO4 Walters.

SFC Preston Dawson and PltSgt. Theodore B. Oliver were awarded the Army Commendation Medal. SFC Dawson had received the medal once before.

CWO4 Walters, MSgt. Cato and SFC Preston plan to make their home in Columbus. Maj. Cain will live in Laurens, S. C. and Sgt. Oliver will retire to Columbia, S.C.

Other retirees planning Columbus homes are: Lt. Col. Charles W. Carlson, CSM Spurgeon O. Sizemore, 1st Sgt. Johnnie C. Gollihugh, MSgt. Peter R. Ignaszewski, SFC John G. Day, SFC Conrad Gardner, SSgt. Frederick W. Alexander and SSgt. William E. Bragg.

Other retirees are: (CWO4) Everett C. Queen, SGM Wesley A. Wildman, SFC William J. Flanagan Sr., SFC Robert Allen Pastures, SFC Wade Gregory Webb, SSgt. Terrance R. Green, and SSgt. Calvin J. Martin.

The Ft. Benning Community Gospel Choir will be making their first appearance Sunday at the 1st AIT Bde Chapel, Sand Hill, at 7 p.m. The salute to Parade of America Music Month is brought to you by the Music and Theatre Branch of Recreation Services. The performance is free and open to the public.

The themes from "Rocky" and "Star Wars" will be just a few of the selections the Columbus Symphony Orchestra will be performing during a free family pop concert February 11 at 8 p.m.

Also appearing with the orchestra at Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall will be the Benning Belles and the Patty Taylor Dancers. The dancers will be performing to "Sandpaper Ballet" by Leroy Anderson.

Waylon Jennings and wife Jesse Colter will be performing at the Auburn University Coliseum at 8 p.m. (CST) tonight.

Tickets are $7 and $6 and are available at the Coliseum box office and at Sodbuster and Billy in Columbus' Peachtree Mall.

Local entertainers will be displaying their talent at the Music and Theater's Acoustical Coffee House on Friday at 7:30 p.m. in the Kinsman Barracks Consolidated Dining Facility. The program is free and open to the public.

He's got more glitter than Elton John and Bette Midler combined. Liberace and his orchestra, along with the Las Vegas Revue, will be in concert at the Fox Theatre in Atlanta tomorrow and Sunday. Tickets are $8, $9 and $10 and are available in Atlanta at all SEATS locations, *Jim Salle's Record Store and the Fox Theater box office.

Tomorrow's performance starts at 8 p.m., Sunday's at 3 p.m.

Valentine's Day is on its way and the kiddies are probably asking, "When can we buy our Valentine's cards, Ma?" The Columbus Museum of Arts and Crafts has an alternative this year. Carol Buchanan will be showing children how to make Valentine surprises using clay tomorrow starting at 10:30 a.m. There is a $1 fee per child.

David Wilkerson, evangelist author of "The Cross and the Switchblade," will hold a youth crusade at the Columbus Municipal Auditorium this weekend.

Saturday's session begins at 7:30 p.m., Sunday's at 3 p.m. The youth crusade is free and open to the public.

Wilkerson will also be on post at the Sand Hill Theater at 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

The controversial Broadway musical, "Oh! Calcutta!" will be performed by Broadway Productions of Hartford, Conn. at the Three Arts Theater tomorrow night at 8 p.m.

Tickets are available at Sears and the threater box office for $7.50 and $8.50.

"Faith Without Fear" will be the topic at Theology Night Out on February 12. The coat and tie affair will begin at the Top 5 Club with cocktails at 7 p.m. followed by a question and answer period.

Father Michael Smith, Director of Religious Education in the Savannah Diocese, is the guest speaker. Tickets may be purchased for $1.50 per couple at any chapel where mass is offered. A cash bar will be available.

More info may be obtained by contacting the hostess, Mrs. Susan Dalgleish, at 687-5664, or the Catholic Activities Center at 545-2054.

They're at it again! The Springer Theater Companys' production of "Hay Fever" will open Thursday. The comedy, featuring two Ft. Benning IOAC students, is about a middle-aged actress in the throes of idleness. A wacky weekend with a wacky family, the thwarted actress takes her bottled up histronics out on her long suffering family and startled house guests.

The ITT office, Bldg. 394, Doughboy Stadium, is offering tickets at a discount for $4. Tickets may also be purchased at the Springer Opera House for $5 for adults, $2.50 for age 18 and under.

Float on down to the 'Floaters' benefit concert for HARC (Helping All Races and Citizens) tomorrow night at Club Rendevous' grand opening.

A matinee for ages 18 and under will be presented at 7:30 p.m. for $3. From 10 p.m. till closing ages 18 and over will be admitted for $5 a head, $8 per couple. Tickets will be available at the door.

Club Rendevous is located at 1020 14th Street in Phenix City.

Elvin Bishop will be making his first appearance at the Columbus Municipal Auditorium Friday at 8 p.m. But that's not all folks! The Sanford Townsend Band will also be appearing at this BASH production.

Tickets are on sale at Sodbuster and Billy at Peach Tree Mall, Supershirts and Other Stuff at Columbus Square, and Tapes 'N' Things on Victory Drive for $6.

What will they think of next? Art via the nearest Xerox machine seems to be the latest fad. Dennis Powell will be exhibiting his Xerox masterpieces at Columbus College's Fine Arts Hall Experimental Theatre. The show opens Sunday at 3 p.m. and will run through Friday.

"Rhine, Women and Song" is the title of the travel film scheduled to be shown at the Columbus College Fine Arts Hall Auditorium Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

Former TV entertainer Dave Alexander will take the armchair traveler through Bavarian villages, on a boat ride on the Bodensee, a hike through the Alps, and an excursion through King Ludwig's castles.

Tickets are $3 for general admission, $2 for students and enlisted soldiers. For more info call 568-2023.

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room — and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single -room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 150 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

Editor's Note: Secretary Alexander visited Benning January 12 and 13 while BrigGen. Fred K. Mahaffey was the acting post commander. The general received this letter Friday and wishes to share it with the personnel of Ft. Benning.

SECRETARY OF THE ARMY
WASHINGTON

18 January 1978

Dear General Mahaffey:

Fort Benning is an interesting and dynamic part of our Army and I enjoyed the opportunity to visit a variety of training activities and talk with so many of our young soldiers.

Please convey my appreciation to the commanders and staffs of the Infantry Center for their fine efforts in providing me a worthwhile and useful experience at the Home of Infantry.

Sincerely,

Clifford L. Alexander, Jr.

Confiscating contraband, evidence integral part of MP investigation

By Kavan L. Stull

When the Military Police conduct an investigation they usually end up confiscating contraband and evidence. But what happens to it is a mystery to most people.

The Evidence Depository in the Provost Marshal's Office (PMO) provides safekeeping behind steel bars and a metal encased door. The evidence is used in criminal court action and action by commanders.

SSgt. Mark T. Marty, Military Police Investigations Evidence Custodian here, is in charge of the evidence and contraband, ranging from earrings and assorted cosemetics obtained from shoplifting suspects to 60 pounds of confiscated ammunition brass. The most common evidence obtained is marijuana, which comes in various sized packages and containers.

If the case is prosecuted (or the evidence is required) in the United States District Court, SSgt. Marty presents the evidence to the court and testifies as to how it was confiscated and maintained.

In the case of action taken by a commander, all evidence is held until the unit commander returns a report of action taken on the Commander's Report of Disciplinary Action Taken, DA Form 3975-a. This form is used by the Provost Marshal to provide the Criminal Records Directorate (CRD) of the action taken against subjects of the special category offenses reported to CRD. Army directives identify these special category offenses as violations of Articles 77-84, 87-110 and Article 134, Uniform Code of Military Justice (UCMJ), for which the maximum punishment prescribed in the Manual for Court Marital, 1969, is confinement for six months or more. Additionally, all offenses (except minor traffic violations) reported by civil authorities are required to be forwarded.

During the last six months the PMO has been experiencing unusually long delays in obtaining reports from commanders. Many require the forwarding of second and third notices with the final disposition taking three to four months from the date the report was released by PMO's Administration Section. After release from the Chief of Military Justice of the Staff Judge Advocate (SJA) Office, the evidence is disposed of by one of the following methods:

- Drugs are disposed of by burning in an incinerator and is witnessed by an E-6 or above.
- Privately owned property is returned to the rightful owner. If the owner can't be located it is turned in to the property disposal office for disposition. Government property is returned to the appropirate authority and ammunitions are turned into the admmunition supply point.

Accountability and control of all evidence is monitored to avoid a break in the chain of custody that would void its value as evidence in a criminal court. Physical inventories are conducted monthly by the OIC of the Military Police Investigation Section and quarterly by a disinterested officer not associated with the PMO.

A dog's bite is worse than his bark

When the National League of Cities surveyed the contry's mayors and asked "What do citizens most frequently complain about?" the answer given the majority of the time was animal problems.

It is estimated that 55 percent of American households have pets and people complain that unattended animals damage and destroy private property and are noisy. They pollute public places, transmit diseases, and, as we seem to be discoverng again — they bite!

Apporoximately one million people are bitten by animals annually in the nation. The Postal Service reported that in 1973 6,708 of the nation's mail carriers were bitten by dogs. During the month of February 1976, the Army Veterinary Service reported the quarantine of 11,449 animals for having bitten or scratched military personnel or their dependents. Dogs seem to be the culprits in about 90 percent of the cases.

It is the owned pet, not the stray that is the major source of the bite problem. "The true stray is usually shy of people and seldom behaves aggressively," according to Maj. Lyle E. Zitek, the Deputy for Veterinary Activities here.

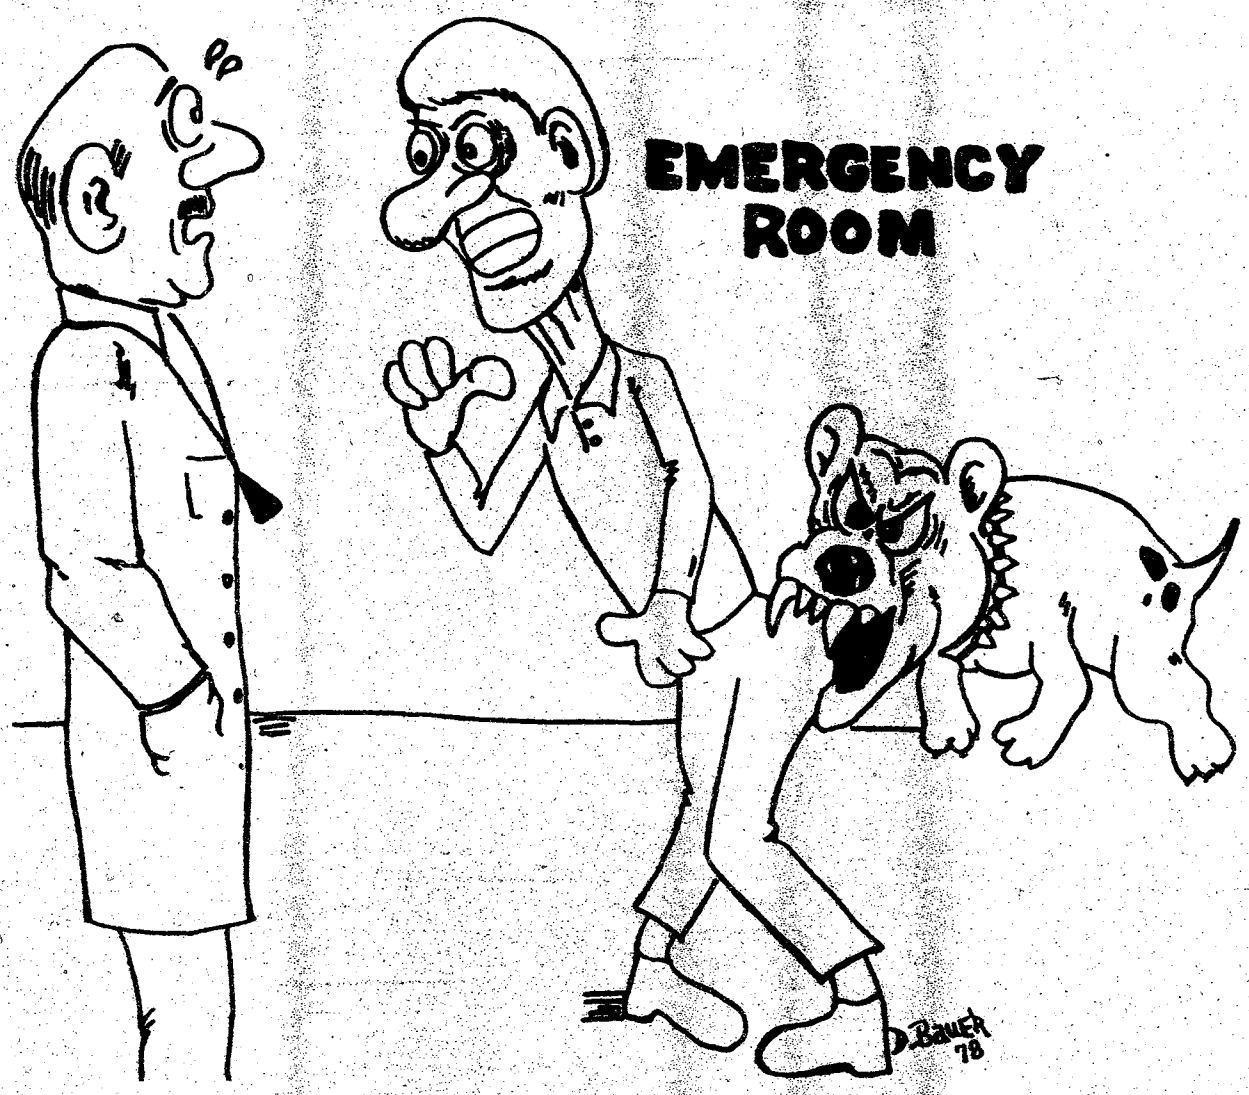
Children between the ages of five and nine are the most frequent bit victims. "They do not realize the danger of approaching an unfamiliar animal," Maj. Zitek pointed out.

An average of 40 bites or scratches are reported a month, according to Maj. Zitek. "None of them have been rabid so far, however there have been positive rabies diagnoses in wildlife or domestic animals with a radius of 100 miles," he added.

Almost half of the pet owners are unable or unwilling to devote the required time and effort to properly train and supervise their animal. "The dog may be the one that barks, bites or soils the neighbor's yard, but the owner frequently shares some of the responsibility for the problem," Maj. Zitek explained. "If the owner refuses to accept responsibility for his animal, then pet control becomes a command problem."

Several suggestions are offered to alleviate the animal problem.

- Before obtaining a pet, the family should carefully consider whether they will have the time to train the animal. They cannot depend on children to be of much help. Buying a pet to teach children responsibility seldom works.
- The size of the pet should be compatible with the living environment. Military living environments frequently change and should be taken into consideration.



- Children should be taught not to pet animals they don't know. Every animal is an individual and some will tolerate more abuse than others.
- If a family has an animal they cannot control, they should give it to someone who can train it, give it to the local humane shelter or have it put to sleep painlessly.
- When outdoors, the animal should be on a leash held by someone large enough to prevent it from threatening other people and animals. The effectiveness of voice control is extremely limited. Owners who do not control their animals should be required to remove them from the installation.

Post regulation requires that all bite or scratch victims who require medical attention report the incident to the emergency room. Following treatment, the victim is requested to contact the Veterinary Clinic.

In the final analysis, the world belongs to the people, not the dogs. Children must have a safe place to play.

Post observes dental health week

The 30th annual National Children's Dental Health Week will be observed Sunday through February 11 to emphasize the importance of learning and practicing good dental hygiene from an early age.

According to recent U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare statistics, approximately 68 percent of the nation's youth have some visible form of periodontal or gum disease, generally of a mild type.

Gum disease is a dental health hazard to children as well as adults and accounts for the greatest amount of tooth loss.

Unfortunately, unless preventive measures are taken, the disease progresses over a long period of time with little or no pain, destroying the gums, bone and other structures that support the teeth. Often a large percentage of periodontal problems in later life can be traced to neglect or improper care of the mouth during childhood.

The best method of prevention is regular brushing and flossing, regular visits to your family dentist and proper nutrition.

Snack Food is often harmful

According to an official for the post Dental Activities Department, snacking on candy bars or sugary soft drinks is probably the worst thing you can do to your teeth. One answer to the problem is to limit the number of times you eat sugary foods each day. Instead of selecting foods in the vending machine or at the corner snack shop, look for sugar-free candy or gum and soft drinks, fresh fruits, milk, cheese, soda crackers, potato chips, popcorn or peanuts.

Giving an infant a bedtime bottle may lead to a condition called "nursing bottle mouth." Normal bottle feeding does not contribute to this condition since the baby who takes a bottle while awake swallows the fluids quickly. If he is drowsy or asleep, his normal salivary flow and swallowing processes decrease. The tongue and the nipple tend to pool the sugary liquid around the top front teeth which are the ones most fequently affected. To save your baby's teeth, cleanse his mouth with a clean cloth or gauze pad after each feeding. In addition, check labels on baby foods and look for foods that do not contain sugar.

Handicapped children may need special care

The same basic rules of good dental health that apply to he well child are applicable to the youngster with a handicap. With the handicapped child, there should be a greater sense of urgency for a preventive program. Dental defects, if left untreated, may be more harmful to the welfare of the handicapped child and, in addition, may be more difficult to manage. Dental problems may be caused by the handicap or, in some cases, by its' treatment. Regardless of these special problems, however, most of a handicapped child's oral problems are caused by the same diseases that affect everyone's teeth.

For additional information regarding adaptive techniques and home care procedures for the handicapped person, contact the Bureau of Dental Health Education, American Dental Association, 211 East Chicago Avenue, Chicago, Ill., 60611.

Many people are concerned about the dangers of radiation incurred by exposure to dental x-rays. According to an official for the Dental Activities Department, the amount of radiation which reaches the more sensitive cells of the body is only a small pecentage of the annual natural background radiation to which man is inherently subjected. With the aid of x-rays, your dentist can detect the beginning of tooth decay, abnormal growth conditions, or abnormalities like tumors and cysts before they have an opportunity to grow and create more serious problems.

It is never too early, or too late, to start a well-rounded dental hygiene program. A visit to your dentist can be the first step to a lifetime of healthy teeth.

at Merit TV Read Like in Electronics

Merit Recording Studio.

In addition to the finest quality TV & Stereo equipment available for sale, Merit is very proud of the high quality expert service department and attribute much of their success to the fact that they can satisfy all of their customers with any service need that they might have.

The real key to success in today's market, according to Stan Merritt, is keeping up with the latest audio & video developments. The public wants a knowledgeable dealer, someone that understands and appreciates the features and new developments in the electronics field. Merit TV has kept up with latest trends in Video Recorders and demonstrates the uses and the advantages of them daily to their customers.

Many other new innovations are on the market today such as programmable turntables and cassette decks and new direct coupled amplifiers by Sansui that approach "O" distortion.

Merit TV & Sound City takes service to customers seriously. They believe in helping the customer select the right system for his or her needs and helping them get the financing they need. Financing is available through Merit TV or Bank cards are accepted.

To sum it all up, high quality plus lowest price plus excellent and qualified service equal a very satisfied customer and a very successful business. Come by Merit TV Sound City in Columbus Square or at 3475 Buena Vista Rd. today, you'll be in good company.

524th tops small unit dining facility category

A post dining facility has been selected best in its class in TRADOC.

The 524th Personnel Services Co., 36th Engineer Gp, won top honors as well as the best small unit dining facility (dining strength of 200 or less). SFC Robert Newsome heads the dining hall crew.

A team of judges from TRADOC inspected the facility in December. During May and June, the 524th will compete against finalists from the other seven major Army commands worldwide for the tenth annual Philip A. Connelly Award, the Army's highest award for excellence in preparing and serving food to military personnel.

Another post facility, the 34th Medical Bn's, was named runner-up in the TRADOC large unit category. The 34th's food service sergeant is SFC Ernie B. Hamm.

The Connelly awards were established as a reward and incentive for excellence in dining facility operation. Inspection criteria include food quality and acceptability by regular clients, appearance and attitude of food service personnel, ingenuity and innovation in improviding dining area appearance, and support and interest on the part of commanders.

Selected military representatives of winning and runner-up units in the Army-wide competition will get short-term scholarships to the Culinary Institute of America in addition to plaques, certificates and saving bonds.

Apprenticeship Program helps convert military skills to civilian

By Jim Eady

In the past, soldiers separating from the service have not been able to readily convert their military skills and experiences to an employable skill in civilian industry. Thus, time spent in the Army was often viewed as lost time. One of the greatest reasons for this is that many civilian employers traditionally know little about the quality of Army training and even less about military records of such training. The soldier's problem has always been one of providing a potential employer with valid and understandable proof of skills acquired while in the Army.

The Army-wide Apprenticeship Program is the answer to many of those soldiers' problems. Through this program a soldier can earn a journeyman's certificate from the U.S. Department of Labor (DoL) based on completion of AIT and subsequent duty experience. Now in its 40th year the DoL Apprenticeship Program is known throughout industry. The Army Apprenticeship Program builds on this familiarity.

Only certain skilled MOSs can participate in the program, which is designed to give them formal credit for the experience gained while in the Army. Each Army Apprenticeship Program is implemented through a DA Pamphlet in the 621 series.

Here's how the Army Apprenticeship Program works:

Enlisted active-duty personnel may voluntarily enroll in the program if their MOS is one of several participating. Soldiers enroll at the Education Center and their names are registered with the Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training, DoL. They are then given log books in which they record the amount of time spent in performing tasks prescribed by the program standards. The soldiers' immediate supervisors certify the hours recorded in the log books.

There are also a certain number of classroom hours, called related instruction, that must be completed during the program. This classroom instruction may be gained from AIT, vocational/technical schools, correspondence courses, or any other form of approved class study.

The soldiers are required to take their log book to the Education Center at regular intervals to have their hours of work and training transcribed in a consolidated form.

When the required work hours have been completed the soldiers become eligible to receive a Certificate of Completion of Apprenticeship from the U.S. Department of Labor. This certificate is the same as those issued to civilians who complete their apprenticeships under identical DoL sanctioned programs. Those who do not complete their apprenticeship program while in the Army are given their logbooks and a letter from the Education Center, certifying partial completion. They can then continue their apprenticeship in civilian life or simply present proof of skills previously documented.

The importance of the program is that it documents, in a form which has been "blessed" by the Department of Labor and is recognized by civilian industry, much of the soldier's training and duty experiences. As one soldier commented, "I figured if I was going to get an apprenticeship, I might as well get it for work I do everyday. I know this will be valuable when I get out of the Army."

The Army Apprenticeship Program provides the perfect opportunity for documentation of training and work experience gained by soldiers. But initiative is the key word. Only you can make it work for you.

If you are not sure of your eligibility for this program or you desire additional information, contact the Education Center at 545-4582 or 545-7768. (Printed courtesy of the Ft. Belvoir CASTLE).

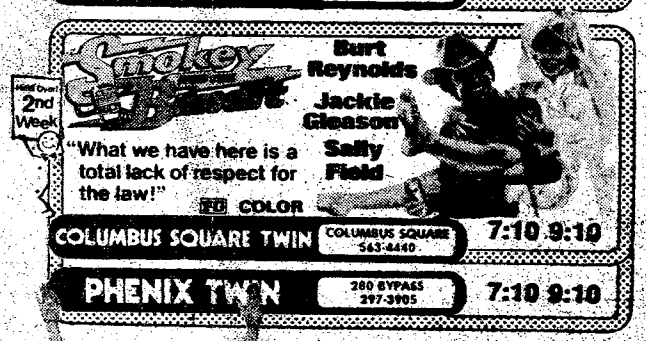
Monthly weather forecast

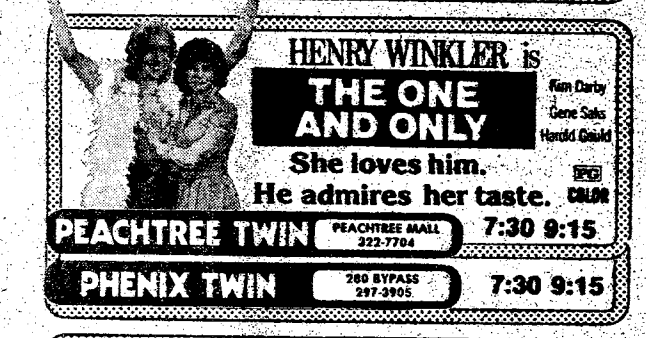
A daily weather forecast is available by calling 545-5281. More specific information not included in the recorded forecast can be obtained by calling the forecaster on duty at 545-5628-2472.

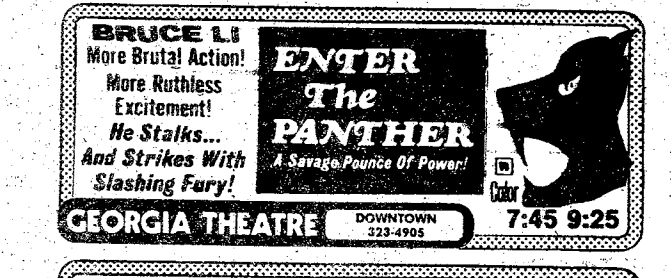
February is the second coldest month of the year in the Benning area. The weather is characterized by frequent frontal passages. These frontal systems are preceded by widespread low cloudiness with rain, normally lasting 12 to 18 hours and followed by rapid clearing and sharp drops in temperature.

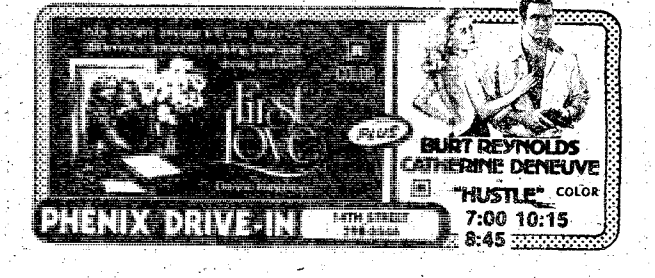
Snowfall is rare and seldom covers the ground. Gusty north-westerly surface winds normally follow passage and persist for 12 to 18 hours. Towards the end of the month temperatures begin to warm up.

The recorded high and low temperatures for this month are 63 degrees and 8 degrees Fahrenheit.









Sweet success.

Soldier punches way on team

By Lisa D'Luhy

It was the second Tuesday in September when an 18-year-old, 125 pound, soon-to-be private in the U.S. Army stepped up to the boxing ring to represent the United States in an amateur boxing extravaganza against Ireland.

Pvt. Sal Cenicola, a native of Rivervale, N.J., was about to fight his last bout before going to basic training and on to Infantry training here. His opponent was twice national champion from Dublin, but Cenicola was "really determined to win."

The theme from "Rocky" was played and Cenicola began shadow boxing in the ring.

In the first of the three three-minute rounds, Cenicola was throwing solid rights, teasing his opponent with an occasional left, his feet dancing circles around the Dublin champ.

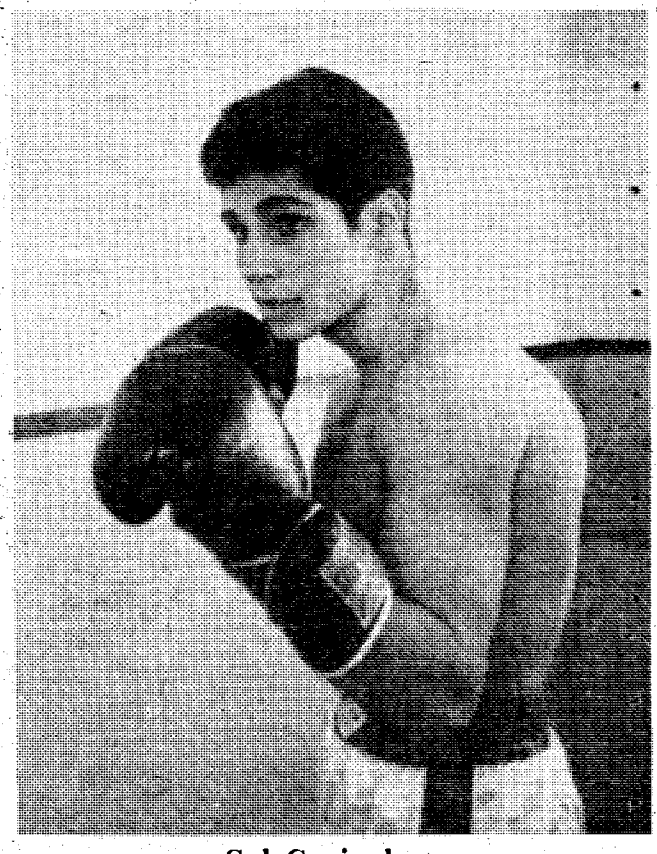
The second round proved to be challenging for both fighters, each scoring several good punches. It was the third round before the Irishman's face became smeared with blood, his movements sluggish.

When the bell rang ending the match, the two boxers joined together in the ring. "Winner, by unanimous decision, from the U.S.A., Sal Cenicola," the ring announcer shouted.

Not only did he win his match, but Cenicola was named the outstanding boxer for the entire evening.

Boxing isn't the only sport in which Cenicola is talented. He was a wrestler in high school and went undefeated his senior year. Boxing was already in his system and wrestling no longer appealed to Cenicola.

Cenicola became interested in the Army when a recruiter spoke at his school. The Army sounded good to him, even though he had already received several scholarships for his wrestling talents. It could offer him a good job, the opportunity to continue his education and, most importantly, the chance to pursue his boxing career.



Sal Cenicola

Cenicola, a recent graduate of Co B, 6th Bn, 1st AIT Bde, has been assigned to the U.S. Army Boxing team at Ft. Dix, N.J.

"I want to be a soldier first, then a fighter, and somewhere in between, I plan on going to college," Cenicola reported. "But I'm also going to try my hardest to make it to the 1980 Olympics!"

Post's judge advocate receives scouting award

Benning's Staff Judge Advocate received scouting's highest council award at the annual Chattahoochee Council Awards Banquet Thursday at Callaway Gardens.

Col. Robert S. Poydasheff was awarded the Silver Beaver for outstanding service and leadership as a scouting volunteer on the unit, district and council levels. Col. Poydasheff is chairman of the Ft. Benning District, Boy Scouts of America.

Reflecting on his more than 15 years of involvement in the scouting program, the colonel said "scouting is the most well-rounded program available for youngsters." He cited scouting's capacity to instill the qualities of good citizenship and leadership in its young participants.

Col. Poydasheff's military career has taken him to such widely-scattered posts as Berlin and Washington, D.C., and he has been active with the scouts in each of them.

Jack Bell of Columbus, a former council president, presented the Silver Beaver Award to Col. Poydasheff.

Pennsylvania has its "Punxatawney Phil," the Ft. Benning-Columbus area had its "Muscogee Goldie" to predict the weather yesterday, Ground Hog Day. Since hamsters are a nocturnal animal and very seldom venture out in the sunshine, Muscogee Goldie studied the local weather charts prior to making her prediction for a short, but rough winter to her owner, CWO4 Bill C. Walton, public affairs officer for the 34th Medical Bn.

What makes the BMW 630CSi so rare among the world's luxury coupes is that while all affect the racy lines and the trappings of the true GT car, the BMW 630CSi truly is one.

In proclaiming the BMW Coupe the best GT car in the world, Town & Country magazine's automotive authority put it this way: "Before advertising people learned that you can apply any name to any kind of car, GT stood for Grand Touring, which, simply stated, means a closed, two-door car with considerable style and considerable performance...I can't think of a better expression of the GT idea than this car."

If the thought of owning such a car intrigues you, call us and we'll arrange a thorough test drive for you.

Power machines added to post gym equipment

By Betty Zimmerman

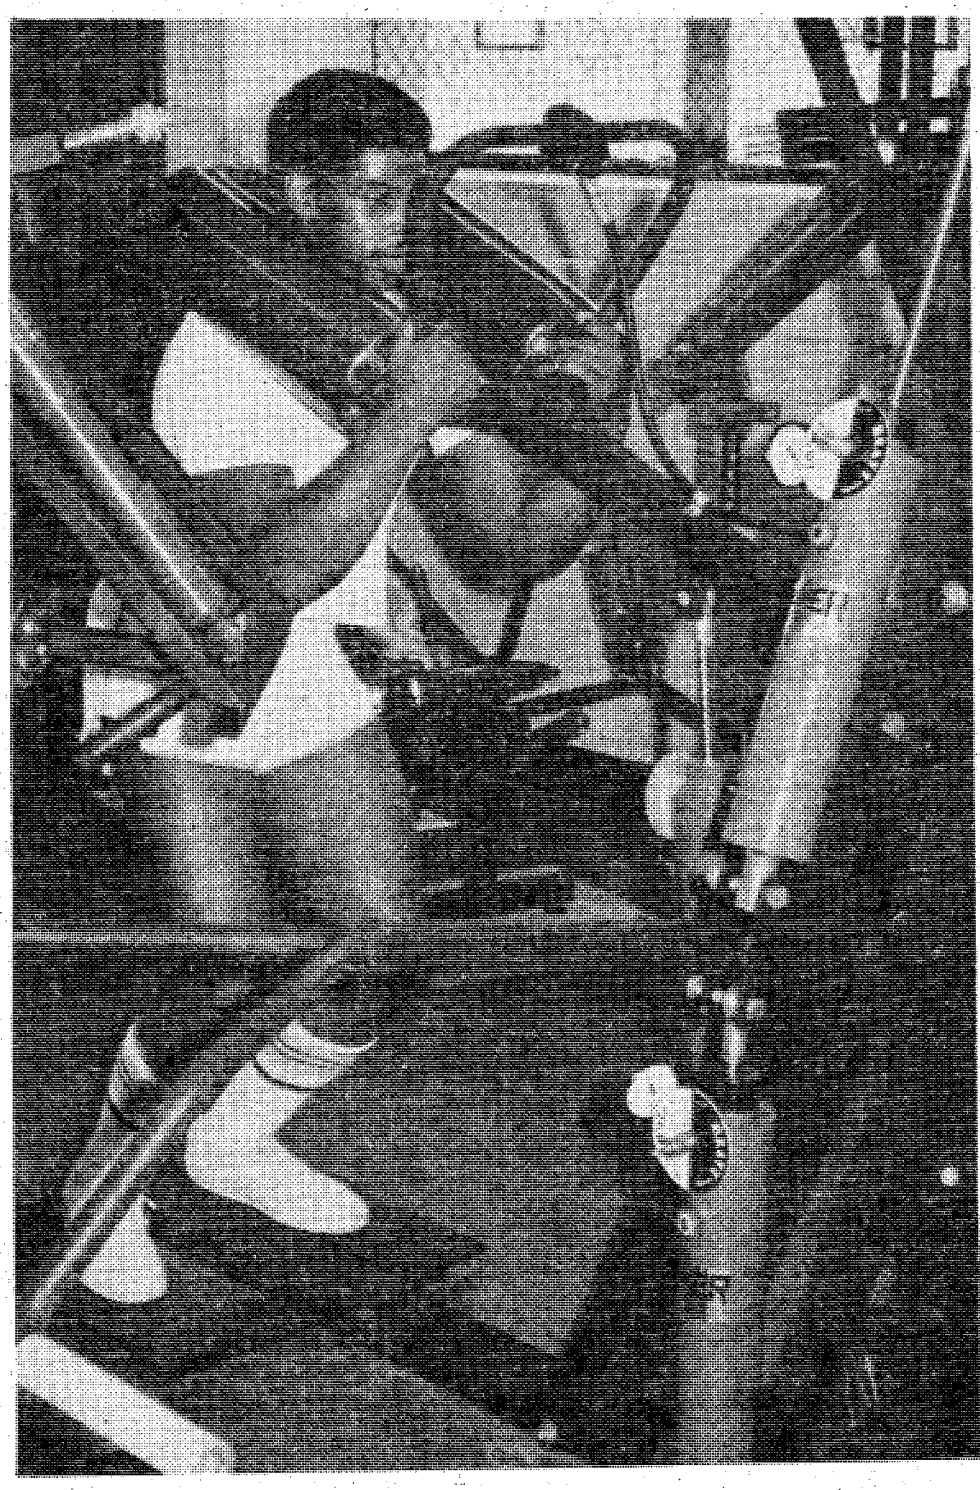
New muscle-building machines have been installed at three post gymnasiums by Recreation Services Division.

Three power machines serve the same purpose as the older weight machines but they are hydraulically operated. Briant Wells Fieldhouse and Audie Murphy Gymnasium, each, have one of these $3,695 machines and the new Santiago Gymnasium at Sand Hill has two.

The eight-station Powernetic machine allows the user to achieve 13 resistive exercises while completing only one four-minute circuit. It is a double resistive apparatus which allows the user to work the antagonistic muscle groups while using the agonistic muscle groups to push up or pull down.

Included in this group are the upright rowing and tricep extensor, neck flexion, bench press and bench rowing, neck lateral flexion, shoulder press and lateral pull, knee curl or knee extension, and squat station or heel raises.

The two main post gyms also have an adductor/abductor hip machine which allows maximum effort throughout the complete range of exercising the hip. But the main benefit of this particular apparatus is its ability to strengthen the knee, either to prevent injury or to rehabilitate the knee following injury or surgery.



Operating the Power Squat segment of the eight-station Powernetic exercise machine is Sp4 Billy Wilborn, 675th Med Det, 34th Med Bn. This unit is used especially for sports requiring strength in jumping such as basketball and volleyball.

Air Assault Badge authorized

Army Chief of Staff, Gen. Bernard W. Rogers announced Friday that he has approved the Air Assault Badge for Army-wide wear. This qualification badge, previously authorized for local wear by qualified soldiers assigned to the 101st Airborne Div. (Air Assault), Ft. Campbell, Ky. may now be worn throughout the Army.

Action is currently being taken by MilPerCen to finalize a change in the Awards regulation (AR 672-5-1) which will implement the Chief of Staff's decision.

The Air Assault Badge is designed for the individual soldier who serves in an Air Assault Unit and has successfully completed the standard Air Assault Course, taught at the Air Assault School, Ft. Campbell.

Any soldier who satisfactorily meets these requirements, as verified by an Air Assault Certificate, on or after April 1, 1974 is authorized to wear the Air Assault Badge as a permanent part of the uniform.

Civilians lose positions

A small reduction in the civilian workforce (RIF) is taking place in order to implement a manpower utilization survey conducted by TRADOC last year, post officials announced Monday.

Approved survey recommendations resulted in the abolishment of 65 civilian positions and the establishment of 38 others, leaving only 27 less positions.

Notification letters will be sent to affected employees by February 17, according to civilian personnel officials, it now appears that there will be few, if any, actual terminations.

Post officials stated that the reduction will be accomplished through a combination of attrition, selective hiring practices and installation RIF authority.

Personnel actions required by the reduction will be completed by April 28.

Tickets now on sale for Washington Birthday Ball

Tickets are on sale on post for the annual George Washington Birthday Ball of the Association of the U.S. Army (AUSA) to be held February 24 at the Harmony Church Fieldhouse.

All AUSA members and their guests are invited to the coat-and-tie affair. Festivities will begin at 6:30 p.m. with dinner being served at 7:30 p.m. The price is $4.50 per person.

Tables will not be reserved this year, but doors will open at 5:30 p.m. for early arrivals who wish to save tables for groups or organizations.

The catered meal will feature fried chicken, baked beans, potato salad, slaw, rolls, coffee, tea, ice cream and birthday cake. Cash bars will be available throughout the evening.

Music for the gathering will be provided by the Misty Harbor Band until 1 a.m. Tickets are available from sergeants major of the major units, the Public Affairs Office, Bldg. 4, room 604, Columbus Bank and Trust Co., the First Alabama Bank and the National Bank of Ft. Benning.

Commissary restates policy

The post commissary has been following a policy, effective since May, concerning special meat cutting services available to commissary patrons.

The policy states: "Special meat cutting services for patrons and organizations, such as slicing canned hams, slicing slab bacon, boning of poultry and processing of meats for freezer orders would be discontinued. Customers should request other special orders in writing, providing adequate advance notice and request items that are not normally stocked."

Telephone orders for meat cannot be accepted. Blank order forms are available in the meat market section of the commissary. These forms should be used to place special orders 24 hours in advance.

By Hoss, KACI 4615

Once upon a time there was a CBer called the Little Red Hen. She saved up her money for a long time and finally bought the fancy base station and beam antenna she had always wanted. When she got all the new stuff home, she asked her neighbors to help.

"Who will help me set up my antenna and wire up my new base station?" asked the Little Red Hen.

"Not I," said Sly Fox. "I've got to program my scanner for the police frequencies."

"Not I," said Big Rooster. "I've got to hide this linear amplifier so the FCC won't find it."

"Not I," said Road Hog. "I've got to re-wire this Ham radio for the CB channels."

So the Little Red Hen had to do it herself. Then she asked for more assistance.

"Who will help me check the SWR on my new base station?" asked the Little Red Hen.

"Not I," said Sly Fox. "I've got to re-wire my CB for the low-frequency channels."

"Not I," said Big Rooster. "I've got to go to a coffee break."

"Not I," said Road Hog. "I've got to be channel control tonight."

So the Little Red Hen had to do it herself. Then she was ready to go on the air.

"Who will help me talk on my new 40-channel SSB base station with a monster beam antenna?" asked the Little Red Hen.

"I will," said Sly Fox. "I could put in 500 more channels for you."

"I will," said Big Rooster. "I'll bring my linear and we could talk skip clear to California."

"I will," said Road Hog. "With a rig like that, we could run everybody off of our channel."

So the Little Red Hen invited them all over to help her run her new Base station. But when they arrived, she pulled out her FCC Inspector's ID card and confiscated all their equipment. Sly Fox, Big Rooster and Road Hog all had their licenses revoked and were fined $250 each for violation of various sections of Part 95 of the FCC Rules.

Moral: Don't count your plots before they are hatched.

Civil service job applications being accepted

——Civil Service job applications under the Secretary of the Army's Mobility Opportunity and Development (MOD) Program are being accepted through February 17.

Thirty MOD positions are to be filled under a test program beginning in April. The program covers three areas — intern training, management training and fellows assignments for people who show high job potential. After training, participants are assigned to civil service jobs ranging from GS-9 through GS-12 grades. The program is open to all civilians, military and federal employees who are available for employment by April.

Program participants will receive training in the Washington, D.C. area and will be assigned on a priority basis, first to the organization which trains them, secondly to the D.C. area and lastly to Army-wide vacancies.

The intern program awards participants GS-4 through GS-7 grades and provides one week of orientation training in each of the following specialties: Civilian Personnel, Budget and Procurement. After being assigned to one of these specialties from 12 to 36 months periods, interns will be awarded GS-9 positions.

Management interns begin training at the GS-9 level and receive about six weeks training in three of the following specialties: Public Affairs, Civilian Personnel, Equal Employment Opportunity, Logistics or Safety Management. After receiving progressive assignments over a two-year period, management interns are awarded GS-11 positions.

Fellows begin assignments at GS-11 or GS-12 levels. They receive "Developmental Assignments" at Army Secretariat or General Staff offices for about 18 months. Assignments for fellows can be in Operations Research, Supply, Military Personnel, Management Analysis, Budget Analysis, Organizational Effectiveness, Computer Science, Procurement or Public Affairs. Fellows are then placed in permanent GS-11 or GS-12 positions.

Applicants for all three program categories are assigned to specialties based on their interests and management needs. After successful completion of training programs, participants are awarded non-competitive civil service jobs.

Applicants must forward a completed standard form 171 (Personal Qualifications Statement) and a CSC form 1276 (Supplemental Federal Applications Statement). CSC form 1276 is a privacy act statement. Both forms should be available through local civilian personnel offices. Army civilian career program applicants must apply directly to the Secretary of the Army. Current federal employees and those seeking reinstatement should include a copy of their last SF-50 (Notification of Personnel Action). Applicants without competitive service status must include a current copy of Notification of Eligibility under an appropriate examination from the civil service commission.

Applications must be postmarked no later than February 17, and addressed to: HQ Department of the Army, ATTN: SASADP, Washington, D.C. 20310. Additional information is available by calling (202) 797-0337 or (Autovon) 227-0337.

Who is going to care for the military family in war?

Despite the pressure from bureaucrats and congressmen to treat military service just like any other job it still retains a special aura that sets it apart as a profession or, in a more abstract sense, as a calling.

Pride in one's unit, the satisfaction of serving one's country, the companionship of similarly dedicated people sharing hardship and danger, all set military service apart.

One of the traditions of U.S. military service that has grown up over the years is that the services "take care of their own." A soldier helps another soldier. Their families help each other in time of grief or need — and the Army looks after all of them.

When a soldier steps up to the pay table at the end of each month or gets a deposit slip from his bank he knows that his total pay represents two things, compensation for service performed (his base pay) and the money provided to house and feed him (his allowances). Combined they are a symbol of the commitment the Army has made to pay him a fair stipend for his work and to take care of his personal needs.

But now the pressure is mounting to change all this. There are some in Congress and in the federal bureaucracy who, alarmed by what they see as unreasonable personnel costs and concerned that military people don't appreciate what they have, want to combine the pay and allowances into a single salary. Since the allowances are now tax-free and the combined salary would be entirely taxable the sponsors of the salary idea promise that the service personnel will be protected from any loss of take-home pay. With that bigger lump sum showing on pay tables, they say, service men and women will better appreciate their generous compensation. For some reason they conveniently overlook the fact that it will cost the government more to prevent the loss of take-home pay than it could possibly gain by increasing the tax base. But their biggest oversight is failing to recognize the loss of military "togetherness."

We have to look no further backward in history than our unfortunate experience in Vietnam to see the effects of a personnel policy that divorces the service member from his home and family. Throughout that war the army of the late Republic of Vietnam paid little or no attention to the personal well-being of its soldiers or their families. Desertion to help with family emergencies, to harvest crops and simply to assure the family's well-being was routine. In the final dark days there was so little feeling of devotion to anything but the family that military structure collapsed.

Military service should not be just another salaried job. It is special and so must be the system used to compensate it. (AUSA Defense Report).

Retired pay questions answered

Retiring? All questions concerning your retired pay can be answered by the Retired Pay Operations Section at the U.S. Army Finance and Accounting Center (USAFAC).

Within the continental U.S., call toll free (800) 428-2290 or AUTOVON 699-3911; or write: Commander, USAFAC, ATTN: Retired Pay Operations, Dept. 90, Indianapolis, Ind. 46249.

Calls between the 10th and 20th of the month are handled faster, according to the finance center. Those are their "slack" periods.

To help in computing your retired pay, be ready to provide: retirement grade, date of rank, how you are being retired (service or disability), total service (active and reserve), and years of service for basic pay purposes.

VA questions & answers

Q — When a veteran dies, what is the effective date of the discontinuance of Veterans Administration benefits?

A — The monetary benefits end retroactive to the last day of the month preceding the date of death. If there is a widow and she is determined eligible for DIC or pension benefits, her first payment will be the full amount the veteran would have received had he lived the entire month in which he died.

Q — Does my six months active duty for training in the reserves count for Veterans Administration educational assistance?

A — It may. If you serve on active duty for a consecutive period of one year or more after the period of active duty for training, the active duty for training, does count. Otherwise, it does not.

Veterans eligible for burial benefits

The Veterans Administration reminds former servicemen and women that their families should be made aware of the VA burial benefits available to eligible veterans.

VA provides up to $250 toward the burial expenses of eligible veterans and an additional $150 is available as a plot or interment allowance, if burial is not in a national cemetery or other government cemetery.

These VA payments will be reduced or eliminated in cases where the veteran's employer or a state agency has made such payments.

In cases where a veteran's death is service-connected, VA will pay an amount not to exceed $800 in lieu of the usual burial allowances.

With the exception of Arlington National Cemtery, burial is available to eligible veterans at all national cemeteries having space, and may also be authorized for an eligible veteran's wife or husband, minor children and, under certain circumstances, unmarried adult children.

Eligibility requirements for burial at Arlington National Cemetery may be obtained from the Superintendent, Arlington National Cemetery, Arlington, Va. 22211.

VA will provide a headstone or grave marker for eligible veterans, and memorial markers are provided for certain members of the armed services who die on active duty and whose remains are not recovered, or who are buried at sea.

An American flag will also be provided upon request for use in covering the casket.

Veterans discharged under other than dishonorable conditions who served in the Spanish-American War, during the Mexican Border period, World Wars I and II, the Korean Conflict or the Vietnam Era are eligible for VA plot and burial allowances and for burial in a national cemetery.

Peacetime veterans with other than dishonorable discharges are eligible for burial in a national cemetery and for a headstone or grave marker. But peacetime veterans are not entitled to burial or plot allowances unless they were drawing compensation or were discharged for disability reasons.

We make a little go a long way.

Benning captains have 'Hay Fever' on their minds

By Marie M. Russo

Oscar Wilde, Edwin Booth and Franklin Roosevelt all share something salient in common with Richard Nowak and David Hunt — all have appeared on the stage of Columbus' 106 year old Springer Opera House.

Richard Nowak and David Hunt are both Army captains assigned to Benning while attending the Infantry Officer Advanced Course 4-77 (IOAC). The two have supporting roles in the Springer Theatre Company's production of "Hay Fever."

The play is a Noel Coward comedy about a family of four eccentrics and the absurd complications they encounter when they each secretly invite a weekend guest to their country home.

Judith, the wife and mother of this disorderly family, is a temporarily retired actress who, from her long stage experience, has lost any sincerity she may ever have had and tends to play various parts from her repertoire in whatever situation turns up. The play takes place over a weekend and her family and guests become her cast and audience.

When asked where he found the time to act, Capt. Nowak, who also played in the theatre's production of "A Christmas Carol," replied that if you organize your time well it really isn't too difficult. "The way I work it," he explained, "Is that I wipe out other recreation time like watching TV."

Capt. Hunt, whose wife Christine, is also involved with the production, commented that volunteering for a part in one of the Springer Theatre's productions is a great cure for boredom. "We spend three to four hours a night rehearsing," he explained, "and when you add that to the hours we spend in class and on class work, we just don't have time to get bored."

If you're thinking that they're just bluffing and probably have the lowest averages in the IOAC class because of the play, you're wrong. "My grades have never been better," Capt. Nowak stated. "There's more pressure on me to do good; if I don't I'd have to drop out of the play and I don't want to do that."

The Springer Theatre Company puts on five productions a year and volunteers are always needed for characters, set and costume help and all around stage hands. "It's a great opportunity for Benning personnel to get involved with the local community," Capt. Hunt mentioned.

"Even with a cast a small as ours," Hay Fever" has only nine characters, there is a great cross section of the community," Capt. Nowak added.

"We have military and retired military members, a college student, a housewife and even an unemployed actress, working on the production of "Hay Fever," Capt. Hunt added. "Volunteering for a part in one of the productions is a great way to meet varied groups of people and interact with the civilian community.

There's yet another reason to make the sacrifice of free time to work on a Springer production according to Capt. Nowak. "There's no comparing working on the stage of the Springer Opera House to that of any other community theatre," he pointed out.

Capt. David Hunt (looking over his shoulder), an IOAC 4-77 student here, rehearses his role in the Springer Theatre Company's production of "Hay Fever." The other cast members are (l to r) Daphne Brown, Linday Duty and George Hiller. The play is scheduled to open Thursday evening.

"It's a professional outfit," Capt. Hunt added. "The director, set designer and even the carpenter are all professionals."

A member of the Springer Theatre's board of directors, Col. Robert Poydasheff, Post staff judge advocate said, "This should be an outstanding comedy; my wife and I are attending with another couple from Ft. Benning. "People here are missing out on delightful entertain-

'Stereo' doesn't have to mean 'round music'

By Bill C. Walton

Today, when someone memtions "stereo" most people immediately think of music coming from multiple speakers to give a "round sound."

In the 1840s and through the late 1950s, the term "stereo" referred to Stereography or as it is more commonly known, 3-D photography.

In sterography, which has been around almost as long as conventional photography, two almost identical photographs are made with a camera having two lenses about 2½ inches apart, the resulting picture being a sterograph. When viewed through a steroscope, these sterographs are seen in 3-D.

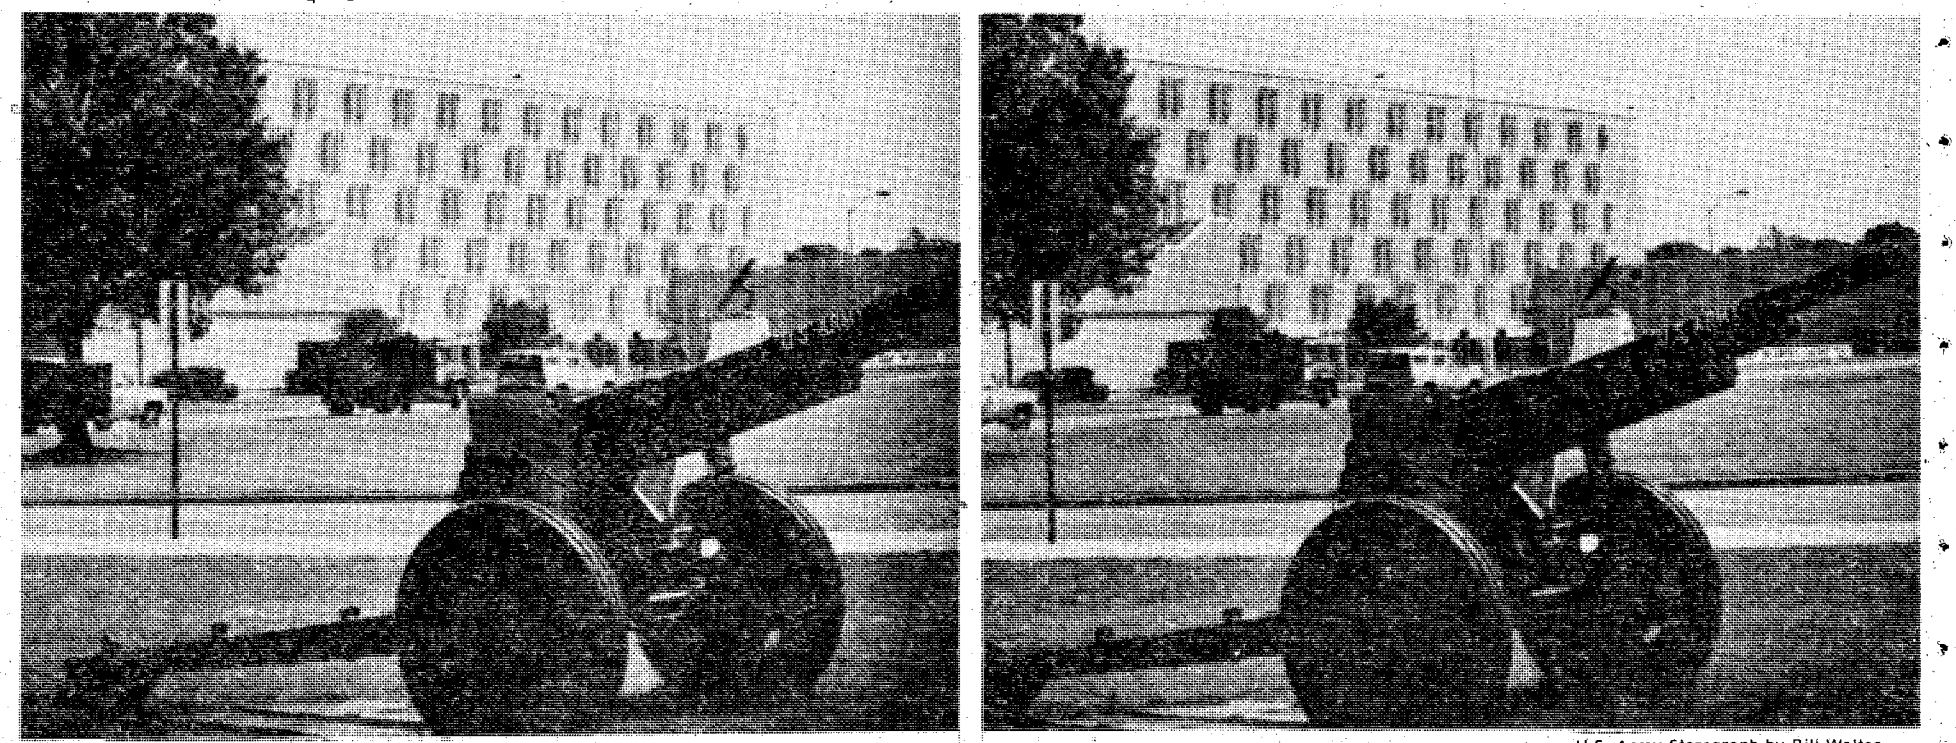
These optical instruments and a stack of sterographs were commonplace in American households during the first 40 years of the century and played a large part in family entertainment in the pre-television days.

Interest in this form of photography is again on the upswing, probably due to the current interest in nostalgia.

It is possible to see a sterograph in 3-D without a steroscope by using one of the following methods:

- Join the fingers of the left hand, place the left index finger vertically on the nose and forehead with the thumb below eye level and the hand extending outward between the eyes. With the right hand hold the sterograph against the left hand so that each eye sees one picture. Move the sterograph slowly away from your left hand, looking at the scene with both eyes. At the point the pictures come into focus, you will see a third picture in the middle. When this happens, concentrate on the third picture and it will be in 3-D.
- Hold the sterograph at normal viewing distance. Look at a distant object, across the street or out the window, and without changing the focus of your eyes drop your line of sight to include the sterograph and you will see the third picture which will be 3-D.

Either of these methods are equally effective, but it may take several tries to see the sterograph in 3-D.



These nearly identical photographs are a Sterograph of Post Headquarters.

ment if they are not going to the Springer plays."

The colonel added that too many people think of the plays as culture, when in fact they are just pure entertainment.

Another member of the board of directors, LtCol. Robert Bechdolt, assistant public affairs office here, says, "We see every Springer production and normally go on opening night so that we can have dinner at the Springer Opera House before the performance."

Lt. Col. Bechdolt continued, "With the talent at Ft. Benning, it's too bad that more soldiers don't get involved in the backstage activities such as carpentry, set building and painting."

The production of "Hay Fever" will open Thursday and play through February 18 with the exception of Monday night February 13. Evening performances will be at 8:30 and the Sunday matinee will be at 2:30 p.m.

The Information, Tours and Travel office, (ITT), Bldg. 394, in Doughboy Stadium has tickets for the production at a military discount, tickets are $4 each.

When tickets are purchased through the ITT office, reservations must be confirmed by calling the Springer Theatre Box Office at 327-3688 or 322-6112. These tickets must then be exchanged for a Springer ticket at least one hour prior to the reserved showing.

The Springer Opera House is located at 103 10th Street, Columbus.

Free pop concert tomorrow

The Columbus Symphony Orchestra will present a free family pops concert at 8 p.m. tomorrow in Marshall Auditorium, Bldg. 4.

The concert, sponsored by the Music and Theatre Branch of Recreation Services, is in conjunction with Parade of American Music Month.

Ellen Buckner will be directing the Benning Belles in a variety of numbers including "Hernando's Hideaway" and "Day by Day."

The Patty Taylor Dancers will be on hand to perform the "Sandpaper Ballet" to the music of "Old Soft Shoe."

Soloist Nancy Cozart, winner of the College Student Auditions, will also be performing.

Additional information may be obtained by calling the Post Music Center at 545-1679.

OCS graduate honored today

The 26th Robert P. Patterson Award will be presented to 2nd Lt. Thomas G. Foster IV today at 11 a.m. in Marshall Auditorium, Bldg. 4.

The award, given to the outstanding honor graduate of all OCS courses during the previous academic year, will be presented by Mrs. Patterson, widow of the man for whom the award was named.

Courage, high character and natural leadership ability were the criteria for the lieutenant's selection. In Mrs. Patterson's words, the winner "must have self-confidence and determination to become part of the leadership in defense of freedom."

Lieutenant Foster graduated second in a class of 179 candidates on Oct. 19, 1976. As the award recipient he receives a certificate, cash award and an engraved pistol.

Post larcenies up 40%

By Marie M. Russo

The overall number of larcenies on post increased 40 percent during the second half of 1977 in comparison to the first half of the year, according to Maj. Robert Pegg, Military Police operations officer.

In addition, this July through December period had the highest larceny rate in two years.

"This sharp increase in the larceny rate," Maj. Pegg explained, "is largely attributed to one factor — carelessness."

Of 93 larcenies in post quarters only 14 could be classified as actual housebreakings. In the other 79 cases either the property was left unsecured in the yard, garage or utility shed or entry to the quarters was gained by other than forcible means, according to Maj. Pegg.

Most of the items reported stolen from quarters were small, "the dollar value rarely exceeding $200," he commented.

Two other categories of larceny crimes also had sharp increases during the second half of the year, these were on-post shopliftings and larcenies in other post facilities.

There were 39 shoplifting incidents during the January through June period and 160 incidents during the second half of the year; this represents a 410 percent increase in the on-post shoplifting category.

This dramatic increase in the number of apprehended shoplifters is attributed to tighter Post Exchange security, according to Maj. Pegg.

The main mall Post Exchange facility was the scene for the majority of shoplifting incidents during the last six months of the year.

"Juvenile dependents and active duty personnel are the two major offenders in this category (on post shoplifting)," Maj. Pegg pointed out.

He also added that though there has been a decline in the number of reported shopliftings during the past 60 days, this category still accounts for more than 14 percent of all reported larcenies.

The other type of offense, larcenies in other post facilities, includes personal items taken from gyms, theaters, snack bars, etc., valuables taken from offices, BAQs, BOQs and guest houses and brass taken from ranges and training areas.

Maj. Pegg emphasized that in almost all of these cases the items stolen were left unsecure and in plain sight or unlocked wall lockers, desk drawers, briefcases or other containers.

"It is significant to note that the high percentage of larcenies on post have resulted from the lack of concern on the part of the Benning community members to properly safeguard their personal possessions.

An official from the Staff Judge Advocate's Office reminds post personnel that leaving valuables unsecured will cause a claim against the government to be denied if the property is stolen.

So, if that $300 camera that took you six months to save for is stolen because your wall locker wasn't locked, don't expect the government to pay you for the loss.

In conclusion, Maj. Pegg stressed that if the larceny rate is to decline, "Benning service members, their dependents and the civilian work force must renew their efforts in promoting and practicing good crime prevention measures within their commands and sections."

Can't get paid? Things were even worse 200 years ago

By Joe Hilton

"We have 22,000 instant critics every month," explained Col. Bruce W. Hall, chief Finance and Accounting officer here. "Therefore, we must do our job right the first time," he continued.

"Our finance section is competent and well trained to handle your military pay affairs," the colonel said. Though this may be true today, the finance section has not always been so well organized.

In past years, soldiers have been paid in many unbelievable ways; that monthly paycheck we've grown accustomed to receiving regularly very seldom arrived, if at all, on time.

Army history dates the Fiance Corps back to June 16, 1776, just two days after the official birth of the United States Army.

During this period, troops serving in the Continental Army were paid in printed promise-to-pay because the Continental Congress had no taxing power. The value of these printed promises depreciated rapidly because there was nothing to back them. Thus these IOU's called Contin-money gave birth to the phrase "not worth a continental."

This method of pay continued until the Pay Department was reorganized shortly after the War of 1812. Under this new system monthly pay was disbursed to regiments by a paymaster. However, there were many times when the paymasters might not arrive for several months.

By 1833 the pay situation had improved even more. At that time a private in the United States Army would receive monthly pay of $6,

"Well, where's my check?"

$1 or which was withheld until the expiration of his service commmitment.

Even with this improvement, Congress was still plagued by monetary disaster and could offer no help to the afflicted Pay Department.

It wasn't until World War II that most of the active duty personnel in the Armed Forces were being paid on a set day of the month.

World War II bro ght on a new challenge and probably the most important transition the Finance Department would face. The enlisted population exploded and the Army had the enormous task of paying ten million men and women scattered all over the globe. In addition the allotment was introduced and at one time, more than 8,000,000 monthly checks had to be mailed to soldiers' dependents.

To meet these demands new business techniques were introduced to keep pace with the changing times. And in 1950 the Finance Department was reorganized and redesigned as the Finance Corps.

The Corps is represented throughout the world. Here at Benning the Finance Corps' representative is the 15th Finance Section (Disbursing). Their mission is coordinating and executing plans and polices concerning the financial matters of Benning and its personnel.

The 15th Finance Section is a key element in the daily operation of the Post Finance and Accounting Office and its Advanced Infantry Trainee branch office. Finance specialists along with civilian personnel perform a wide variety of functions ranging from military pay administration, to the payment of local vendors, to accounting for the funds appropriated by Congress to operate and maintain the post.

"The Finance Corps is determined to keep pace with the times by adopting new methods and concepts in financial management practices," said Col. Hall.

Tests are currently being made on electronic and electro-mechanical equipment which can be utilized in the future to facilitate the accurate and timely information needed for budget, accounting and management.

Application of such instruments or other business type computers may entail input and output of data by transceivers which can produce instant results at electronic speeds.

News in brief

AIT ready for flu outbreak

A Minimal Care Facility to combat the mild outbreak of flu in the Harmony Church area has been set up by Martin Army Hospital with paramedical assistance from the 2nd Combat Support Hospital and elements of the 34th Medical Bn.

According to Dr. (Col.) Joseph Bartley, chief of health and environment here, "We presently have a mild outbreak of flu. As of today (Thursday) 55 patients have been admitted to the facility. We presently have 110 beds operational and can expand if necessary." he commented.

The facility will admit mostly trainees from the AIT Bde and other permanent party personnel who live in the Harmony Church area. The professional staff will be managed by physicians, physicians assistants and nurses from Martin Army Hospital.

The Minimal Care Facility is capable of meeting both the medical and personal needs of all patients. Post officials here also have arranged for PX goods to be available as well as library and other services.

Tournament begins Monday

Ten teams representing post units will be competing in the USAIC Company Level Basketball Championship which begins Monday.

Opening night schedule will be as follows: game one — MEDDAC vs. Co C, 2/10th at 6:30 p.m. in Briant Wells Field House; game two — 598th Maintenance Co vs. Co B, 2/10th at 6:30 p.m. in Audie Murphy Gym; game three — HHC, 43rd Engineer Bn vs. 10th Co, TSB at 7:30 p.m. in Briant Wells Field House; game four — Hq Co, 34th Medical Bn vs. Co A, Hq Cmd at 7:30 in Audie Murphy Gym.

Barracks dedication slated

The second complex of the new AIT barracks on Sand Hill will be dedicated Thursday with a normal ceremony at 3:30 p.m.

Guests of honor at the dedication will be Thomas J. Kinsman, namesake of the $8 million complex, who is a Medal of Honor recipient.

The new three-story brick barracks is the second of four housing facilities to be completed in the Sand Hill area.

The other two are scheduled to be finished by August. These barracks house 1,150 men each and Kinsman barracks is presently housing the AIT Bde's 3rd Bn.

First Black West Pointer has honor restored

After nearly 100 years of trying to have his name cleared, Henry Ossian Flipper will receive an Honorable Discharge and burial with full military honors tomorrow.

Flipper, who was the first Black to graduate from West Point in 1877, will have his remains reburied in Thomasville, Ga. next to his parents.

Many national, state and local dignitaries are expected to be present at this public ceremony. A Benning honor guard will render Flipper's final salute.

Col. Donald C. Shuffstall, public affairs officer here will represent the Department of the Army in presenting Mrs. Irsle Flipper King with the Honorable Discharge which the Army Review Board awarded her uncle posthumously.

Flipper began his education as a youngster attending night school. He later studied at Missionary schools until he was able to attend Atlanta University. Being an outstanding student, he was helped by his Congressman in securing an appointment to West Point.

During his studies at the Academy, Cadet Flipper was subjected to many forms of insults and discrimination, but due to his strong perseverance and a will to succeed, he graduated with honors and was commissioned as a second lieutenant from the academy.

His first assignment was to the Indian frontier post of Ft. Sill, Okla., where he was assigned to the 10th Cavalry, a Black Regular Army cavalry regiment. He was transferred to Ft. Davis, Tex. as an assistant quartermaster in charge of the commissary there. The black lieutenant was unexpectedly charged by his commanding officer with embezzling government funds and conduct unbecoming an officer and gentleman.

Flipper was found innocent of the first charge but guilty of the second, and was discharged from the Army.

Despite his dismissal, Flipper went on to become the nation's first prominent black civil and mining engineer. His career peaked when he served as an assistant to the Secretary of the Interior from 1921-1923.

Flipper never gave up trying to clear his name, but when he died in 1940 in Atlanta, his Army file still recorded the Court Martial conviction.

In recent years, a Georgia school teacher named Ray MacColl became interested in the Flipper case while researching black historical figures in the West. He turned up new evidence and in 1976 The Army Board for Correction of Military Records cleared Flipper on all charges posthumously and restored him to honor.

During the past year, many ceremonies were held in the black lieutenant's honor. The Georgia governor proclaimed March 21 as Henry Flipper Day. On May 3, 1977, the U. S. Military Academy at West Point held a parade and unveiling ceremony of a bust of Flipper. On October 27, 1977 at Ft. Sill, a bronze marker was unveiled designating Flipper's Ditch as a National Heritage Site.

Tomorrow's reburial (he is presently buried in an unmarked shallow, unkept grave in Atlanta) will be the last ceremony in recognition of his stature among soldiers.

Many activities planned for Black History Week

By Joyce Walker

Soul food, concerts, a jazz ensemble and a special showing of the film "Roots" will be part of the Black History Week celebration here beginning Sunday.

The celebration, a time to recognize the customs and contributions of black Americans, will be highlighted by the airing of the film "Roots," from the book by Alex Haley, on Alert Cable TV (channel 6) Sunday through February 18 from 7 to 9:30 p.m.

The Kelley Hill Recreation Center will sponsor an Awareness Night tomorrow at 7:30 during which a film will be shown followed by a round table discussion.

Sunday, "We Remember" a dramatic presentation of the contributions of renowned and little-known blacks, past and present — will be shown at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center at 5 p.m.

The Post Equal Opportunity Coordinating Office will sponsor a musical and oral presentation on Black History Wednesday, 7:30 p.m. at the AIT Chapel in the Sand Hill area. Reverend J.H. Flakes Jr., president of the local NAACP, will speak on the theme of "Roots."

A soul food supper will be hosted by the Harmony Church Recreation Center Monday at 7 p.m.

The Harmony Church and Foxhole Recreation Center will have a concert/dance February 19 from 2 to 5:30 p.m. as a salute to Black History Month featuring "Earthquake," a soul band.

The Albany State College Jazz Ensemble will perform at the Harmony Church Recreation Center February 26 at 2:30 p.m.

In addition, there will be special Black History displays in Infantry Hall, Bldg. 4, and post libraries throughout the month.

Commander's Message

The experiences, hardships, and accomplishments of Black Americans are deeply rooted within our American Heritage. Their contributions in defense of this Country can be traced as far back as the Revolutionary War. The birth of this Nation was assisted by the blood and sweat of the Black men and women who fought for this Country.

The accomplishments of the Black American do not end with the men and women in uniform but penetrate into such crucial areas as law, medicine, surgery, technology, agriculture, music, sports, and many more.

With these accomplishments in mind, and with pride and gratitude, Ft. Benning salutes its Black Americans during the week of Feb. 12-18, '78.

Equipment for a Snow Removal Task Force is loaded aboard a C-130 Starlifter at Lawson Airfield for shipment to Providence, R.I., where approximately 100 Benning soldiers were sent Wednesday to aid the weather stricken area. The movement of troops from Benning and Forts Polk and Stewart were dispatched to the northeastern states after the President declared some of those states Federal Disaster Areas. Equipment shipped to clear away highways and streets included front loaders, trucks, graders and dozers. Pictorial coverage of the snow-clearing operations by Benning personnel will appear in next week's issue of "The Bayonet."

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room — and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single -room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 150 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

Glad you asked . . .

What are your feelings on larceny in the Army?

By Sue Davis

Pvt. Timothy B. Smith, Co. A, 43rd Engineer Bn

Practically every member of my unit has had something stolen from him. We live in the old WWII barracks at Harmony Church and the doors and windows are so feeble that a child with a toy screwdriver could break in. Also, the heating duct that runs through the ceiling is run through a space large enough for a man to crawl through. In other words, the security is lousy.

PFC Jeffery R. Mathers, 988th Military Police Co.

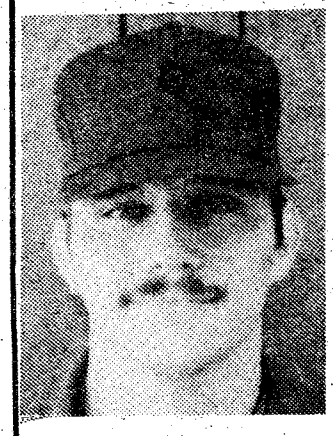
Most people are not larcenists. Give an honest person the opportunity to steal and you test his moral values. But if you keep your valuables secured, his opportunity is taken away. For example, if someone lay $100 down on his or her desk and left the room without seeing you and you were the only person around, would you take it?

Capt. Douglas B. Musser, 10th Co, 1st Bn, TSB

While stationed in Germany and on a field problem, I left my locked car in a lighted, guarded parking lot on the Kaserne. I was gone for three days. When I returned, my door window was smashed in with a brick and my tape deck was gone. The Army wouldn't pay my claim because the tape deck was a high risk item. Security is only as good as the people responsible for it!

SSgt. Robert L. Lawrence, Service Battery, 2d Bn, Field Artillery

I think the MP's should spend more time doing their duties such as guarding parked vehicles, rather than writing tickets. This should solve some of the problem with larcenies.



Sp5 Ronald L. Morris, Hqs Co Hqs Cmd

The Army is encouraging its "employees" about the importance of securing possessions. Also, it's a good idea for soldiers not to carry too much cash around at one time.

Letters to the editor—

Check writer feels insulted

I have been on this post for two years and have had many an occasion to shop the stores of Columbus, Ga. Most of the stores I've been in have friendly atmospheres and the people have been very nice. But every once in a while, I go in a store where I feel insulted. Specifically, I've tried to pay for my purchases by check and not only have they asked for two ID's, but they also requested my hair and eye color, height and weight.

Tonight I went shopping and paid by check. The clerk asked for two ID's — I gave her my driver's license and my military ID. Then she asked for my unit and company commander. I asked why she wanted to know and she told me that she was required to ask this of military personnel. In other words, because I am in the military, I am suspected of passing a bad check. What an insult to all of us who serve our country.

This has not been the first time I have been insulted in this manner and I hope it is the last time. I would like to know what information I am legally required to give on a check and what I do not have to give. You know, it's a shame that Columbus treats Ft. Benning personnel so shabbily. Am I supposed to be ashamed that I am a member of the military?

Disappointed but Hopeful
Hqs Co Hqs Cmd

Editor's reply . . .

The information requested on the reverse side of a check depends upon the policies of the particular store where a purchase is made, according to an official from the Legal Assistance Office here.

It is not because proprietors suspect military personnel of passing bad checks, but because of the fact that some people write checks that do bounce (whether military or civilian). If a check should happen to bounce, it is sent to your address. If action is not taken, your unit is contacted.

Unhappy soldier speaks out on the woes of post police

Here's another letter concerning Post Police. I think "Relentless Raker" (Jan. 27-Feb. 2, 1978 issue) should be listened to and taken seriously. I am tired of being sick. It seems every time I have post police it rains, and my cohorts and I are sent out to pick up trash or twigs. But the worst part is riding around post in the back of an open pick-up truck with the wind and the rain. This past summer I kept a cold for two and a half months and right now I have a cold and earache that is three weeks old.

There was also the article (the same issue) in which Post Sergeant Major Roegiers was quoted as saying something to the effect that the same people who throw the trash have to pick it up later. To refute this allow me to relate a personal experience.

I was riding in a car one evening with several people from my barracks. The driver, an E-6, threw an empty cigarette package out the window. I asked him why and he replied "I don't have to pick it up, some other slob does." I burned!

Why not catch the offenders and make them police the post — no matter their rank. I think this would be the best solution to a bad problem.

Sick and Tired

We want letters

The BAYONET invites letters from readers on topics of interest to the military community. The following rules are observed:

1. Letters must be signed. However, names will be withheld from publication on request.
2. Include your address or unit designation and telephone number with the letter. This information will not be published, but will be used for verification or clarification of letters selected for publication.
3. Keep letters short (about 200 words). The BAYONET reserves the right to condense letters or to use excerpts from letters, so that more may be printed.
4. Typewritten letters, double-spaced, are preferred.
5. Longer articles by recognized authorities on particular points of view, or treating specific topics of importance to the post, are also welcomed.
6. All letters will be answered. However, those letters lacking in properiety or substance will not be published.
7. Mail or bring letters to Editor; BAYONET; Public Affairs Office; Rm. 602; Bldg 4; Ft. Benning, Ga. 31905.

Colonial Band named Georgia's honor band

Benning's Colonial Band of Explorer Post 76 was named "honor band" from Georgia and received a trophy from the New Orleans community in whose parade they marched Sunday during the Mardi Gras festivities.

Band leader Maj. Bill Drollinger recalled the beautiful, "shirt-sleeve" weather the group enjoyed during the four-mile March. Their parade was sponsored by the Krewe of Thoth, and in addition to the trophy the band received a plaque for their participation.

Drollinger said that of the approximately 26 parades held in New Orleans in conjunction with Mardi Gras, seven were held the weekend they were in the historic city. The Colonial Band marched third in their procession, which included bands from Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama and other states.

The band, which pays its own way through fund-raising activities such as car washes, made the long round-trip by bus.

Education a must for today's soldier

By Madonna Simple

"Education — you can't get a job without it!" This old saying still holds true. Education plays a vital role in today's society and being in the military is no exception.

"Unlike the old Army where the soldier's main concern was being combat ready, today's soldier needs some type of formal education," said Wayman Jenkins, Main Post Education Center guidance counselor.

Ft. Benning, in order to meet this goal, offers a wide variety of educational programs geared to fit the individual's needs.

The soldier is offered every opportunity to better himself and the Army by completing high school, college, vocational school or enrolling in correspondence courses.

High school completion offered

Soldiers now have the chance to obtain their high school diploma either on or off duty. For those soldiers who are in key positions and can't attend day or evening classes, the education center offers special individual classes. This program is geared toward soldiers who are studying for SQT tests or just want to improve their English, reading and mathematics skills.

In order to qualify, the soldier must receive permission from the first sergeant or company commander. Once this is completed, the soldier will be provided with a special schedule to attend classes at their convenience.

Five colleges to choose from Currently, Ft. Benning offers college courses from five major colleges. These colleges are Columbus College, Chattahoochee Valley Community College, Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University, Troy State and Georgia State University.

Counselors from each of these colleges are available to assist soldiers in enrollment. Students will then be given the opportunity to sign up for the College Level Examination Program (CLEP) tests and collect up to 30 college credits, the equivalence of a year in college. The counselor will provide the soldier with a book to study. Examinations such as the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) are also available for soldiers wishing to earn as much credit as possible.

Project AHEAD a head start

Project AHEAD is a college enrollment agreement between a soldier and a sponsoring college. The school agrees to advise the student on his/her program and to accept credits from other schools to satisfy all or part of the degree program requirements. This program is conducted in accordance with DA Circular 621-13, Project AHEAD and AR 621-5.

The Army acts only as a vehicle in Project AHEAD's implementation.

GT improvement tests available

The Education Center offers soldiers the chance to improve their GT scores by scheduling review and refresher classes in English and general mathematics. Standardized tests are available to validate improvement.

Prepare for SQT tests

To assist personnel preparing for SQT tests, the Education Center offers individual or group study classes. Related equipment and material including study carrels with equipment, regulations, directives, bulletins, manuals and other reference materials are provided. Major commands and subordinate units are authorized these reference materials on an operational basis for those military specialties assigned. Reference materials and study areas are available for on and off duty study.

MOS reference libraries are located on Kelley Hill, Bldg. 9005, Harmony Church, Bldg. 5153 and Main Post, Bldg. 1369.

Vocational school program developed

Attending a vocational school instead of completing high school is offered by the education center. Initial courses include welding, carpentry, electricity, electronics, air conditioning/refrigeration, data processing, computer programming, auto mechanics and brick masonry. Personnel with 180 days of active duty in service are eligible pending approval of the company commander.

Army Apprenticeship Program ensures improvement

The Army Apprenticeship Program offers soldiers the chance to improve in their MOS or aid those soldiers in MOSs in which there is no job as a civilian. Currently 34 programs are available. The education counselors will provide interested personnel with information and enrollment.

Correspondence Courses aid career development

The Army offers correspondence courses that will improve understanding of a soldier's current MOS or can aid a soldier in obtaining a secondary MOS. These courses are divided into subcourses and must be completed within one year from date of enrollment. Credits are given for each completed course.

The education center will provide the soldier with DA Form 145, Army Correspondence Course Enrollment Application. Application approval comes from the company commander.

Army Tuition Assistance provided

The Department of Defense provides financial assistance for active duty personnel who are attending off-duty classes to attain a degree. This covers as much as 75 percent of tuition costs and fees. Warrant officers and enlisted personnel have no obligation after receiving assistance and it doesn't affect the GI Bill. After leaving the service, the soldier still has his/her full GI Bill benefits.

Using the GI Bill in the service

Personnel who entered the service prior to December 31, 1976 and have 181 days of active duty are entitled to educational benefits established under Title 38, U.S. Code (GI Bill) and Public Law 92-540, Vietnam Era Veterans' Readjustment Assistance Act of 1972. Personnel earn one and one-half months of education entitlement for each month of active duty. The Education Center will provide counseling and assistance to individuals on active duty who wish to use their GI Bill benefits while in service. The GI Bill is available until 1989 when it will be terminated.

With the current stress for education and human development, it's good to know that the Army and Ft. Benning are offering various educational programs to assist the soldier in meeting this need.

AUSA defense report

By Bev Lockhart

The Association of the United States Army (AUSA) has scheduled a variety of major activities for 1978.

The annual George Washington Birthday Ball is first on the agenda. The ball will be held February 24 at Harmony Church Fieldhouse. Tickets are on sale for $4.50 per person and may be purchased from sergeants major of major units, the Public Affairs Office, Bldg. 4, room 604, Columbus Bank and Trust Co., The First Alabama Bank of Phenix City and the National Bank of Ft. Benning.

1978 Activities

On March 17, AUSA will host the Civilian and Military Council.

The association will be sending 40 soldiers to the 19th annual Atlanta 500 Winston Cup Grand National classic on March 19.

From April 23 through 25, Ft. Benning will host the National AUSA Symposium, with 500 expected to attend. (This was incorrectly reported as occurring March 23 through 25 in the February 6, 1978 AUSA newsletter)

In April and May, the AUSA will sponsor the Local and Regional annual ROTC Rifle and Drill Team competition, hosted by Ft. Benning.

AUSA will also be sending 40 soldiers to the Winston 500 NASCAR Grand National stock car races at Talladega, Ala. in May.

The Spring General Membership Meeting Fish Fry will be held at Victory Pond on May 24. An election of new officers and board members will be held at the meeting.

The AUSA Third Region Meeting will be held at Ft. Campbell, Ky. in June.

On September 16, the association will hold its annual picnic at Victory Pond.

The Annual National AUSA meeting will be held October 16 through 18 at the Sheraton-Park Hotel in Washington, D.C. with the chapter's annual Fall General Membership Meeting following at Ft. Benning in November or December.

AUSA also plans to send 200 soldiers to the Alonzo Stagg Football Game at Phenix City in December.

Springer Theater Tickets

In addition, AUSA has purchased 12 season tickets for this year's Springer Theater productions. Before each play, six names will be drawn from the chapter membership roster and with each winner receiving two free tickets to that play.

Winners for the current play, "Hay Fever," are: Mr. Charles F. McLaughlin, Columbus; Mr. Frank A. Heard, Phenix City; Lt. Malcolm B. Clerkley, Ft. Benning; SFC George Hudgins, Ft. Benning; 1stSgt. John F. Schafer, Phenix City; and MSgt. William R. Black, Ft. Benning.

Several Ft. Benning personnel are participating in this play and working backstage, but more help is always needed with carpentry, painting, backstage work, and sewing costumes. Call 322-6112 if you're interested in giving them a hand.

Toll-Free Telephone Service

AUSA has established a toll-free telephone service to improve and facilitate communications between the local chapter and members with the National staff. National AUSA Headquarters may now be reached by dialing 1-800-424-2463. Hours of operation are from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. (EST) Monday through Friday. Action Line calls are routed through the AUSA switchboard and connect member and chapter requests to the department responsible for the service requested. The AUSA Action Line doesn't cost a dime, while providing fast service on replies to your questions.

Family planning workshop set

Natural family planning will be the subject of a weekend workshop conducted by the Couple to Couple League at the Catholic Activity Center on February 18 and 19.

The method taught by the Couple to Couple League is a system of fertility awareness in which several symptoms of female fertility are used in a cross-checking way for the greatest reliability and confidence. According to the League, this system (called the sympto thermal method) can achieve an effectiveness at the 99 percent level in actual practice. The League also states that its method assumes that every woman has irregular cycles.

Interested married and engaged couples are asked to register by phone with Carol Burdick at 687-3003.

'Good looking cooking' contest scheduled here

By Betty Zimmerman

The 1st Annual Culinary Art Show will be held in the Officer's Club foyer February 22 at 11 a.m.

Entries are welcome from any Benning military personnel who are talented in the art of "good looking cooking."

Just contact the sponsor, the Installation Food Service Office, at 545-3750/7070 before close of business Friday. Msgt. Riles or Capt. Marshall will answer any questions.

Three categories will be judged by a panel which will include Marcel Carles, the area's only certified master chef, and Helena Zimmerman, the Modern Living editor of the Columbus Ledger.

The categories are pastries, centerpieces and cold buffet items. These edible works of art are not judged on taste but on degree of difficulty, artistic ability, overall layout, craftsmanship, color combinations and originality.

The three first-place military winners will go to the U.S. Army Quartermaster School, Ft. Lee, Va. to compete in their 3rd Annual Culinary Art Show. They will also appear on the Rozelle Show on February 23.

Calls of "Come on, good buddy" and, "10-4" are filling the air waves of Christchurch, New Zealand as hundreds of CB radio enthusiasts copy the American craze.

According to New Zealand Post Office radio inspectors, about 1400 CB radio licenses have been issued in Christchurch, and they estimate that at least half of these were to hobbyists. The rest are held by small businesses, and even some government departments, for intra-city communication. A CB radio club has been formed in Christchurch and now has about 100 members in the city and probably twice as many in the surrounding countryside.

It is not all that expensive to set oneself up as a CBer in New Zealand — about $200. When a prospective hobbyist or businessman buys a set, his name is passed to the Post Office. After approving the radio equipment, the Post Office sells the CB license for $6. The radios, however, have only seven channels and are limited to an output power of one-half watt, which restricts their range unless a large antenna is used. Each radio owner is given a call sign by the Post Office.

An American visitor to the Christchurch CB club was amazed to find the New Zealand CBers so conservative in their language. He said that even in Australia now, the channels have become crowded with hobbyists chatting, using jargon, codes and truck drivers' terms.

But in Christchurch, he says, the only CB jargon used is "Come on good buddy" when calling someone, and "10-4" to signify something has been understood. Other than that, the New Zealand CBers try to speak slowly and clearly.

Celebrating 100 years of helping people get the most out of life.

In our 100 years, we've helped people start their own businesses...

...furnish their homes...

1978 marks the 100th anniversary of Household Finance. We're very proud, not only because we've grown as a company, but because for the last 100 years our loans have helped people grow along with us. We've helped people furnish their homes, take vacations, educate their children, start their own businesses. We've helped people get the most out of life. That's our business, and we're proud of it.

The modern version of Shoney's Inc., began in 1971 when Danner Foods, headed by Ray Danner, organized a group of companies owned principally by Alex Schoenbaum through an exchange of common stock. The effect of this combination was to bring into the company it's franchisor which held the master franchise from the Marriott Corporation for operation of Big Boy Restaurants in 10 to 15 states.

Today, including franchised Shoney's, there are more than 400 locations principally in the Southeast.

Company owned stores employ more than 8,000 people.

Through the years Shoney's has progressed from the Drive-In with "Big Boy" sandwiches featured to a full service, dine-in, Family restaurant with a wide ranging menu that fea-

DAVIS DRUG STORE: LOCALLY OWNED WITH COMPETITIVE PRICES

Oakland Park Shopping Center offers a wide selection of shops, and to assist you with your pharmacy needs, Davis Drugs is available. Being a full line drug store, Davis' offers pharmacy products, cosmetics, appliances, and photo-finishing. They offer such brand names as Rexall, Valu-Rite, Revlon, Max Factor, and Lavin just to name a few.

Davis Drugs is a member of Valu-Rite. Valu-Rite - America's largest voluntary chain originated in California. It is now Nation wide. It's strength comes from numbers of independent pharmacies (locally owned) buying collectively in large quantities so that quality merchandise can be offered at reduced prices which often times are lower than comparable products offered by large chains. These sales occur about every eight weeks and feature direct - mail circulars delivered to the home. These sales offer promotional products, appliances, quality name-brand products for less, and photo finishing.

For dependable pharmacy services, Registered Pharmacists Bob Worth and Norman Davis will fill your prescriptions to your upmost satisfaction. Bob Worth has been in this area for 13 years.

Norman Davis was born and raised in Phenix City, Alabama. A graduate of Central High School in Phenix City, Norman pursued his education and graduated from Auburn University in 1973. Norman has a B.S. in Pharmacy and has owned and managed Davis Drug Store since Feb. 1974.

Lawrence Bryan is part owner and he too is a graduate of the Auburn University School of Pharmacy. Lawrence also owns Sherwood Pharmacy located on Summerville Road in Phenix City. He is originally from Union Springs, Ala. and moved to Phenix City in 1956.

Moving target hit by Redeye missile

By Ron Fowler

A live Redeye anti-aircraft missile was fired at a moving target for the first time here during a recent training exercise in the 197th Infantry Bde.

Soldiers from the Air Defense Artillery (ADA) Btry, 2/10th Field Artillery were selected as the first unit to fire a live Redeye here. "We were very proud to be selected," said 1st Lt. Thomas J. Mayock, ADA Btry commander.

"A lot of effort on the part of all personnel concerned, especially our senior technical advisor, SFC John E. O'Laughlin, had gone into the planning of this training exercise and we feel that everything went very well," the lieutenant continued.

The target that the Redeye gunners fired at during the exercise was a specially prepared, remotely fired rocket known as a Ballistic Aerial Target. It is powered by three 2.75 inch rockets, the same type used on the Cobra helicopter gunships.

The Redeye gunners that fired during the live-fire exercise, Sp4 Kevin B. DeHart and PFC Michael Wade were selected to fire on the basis of their final standing in the Moving Target Simulator School conducted at Ft. Bragg, N.C.

"Of the 25 people that we sent to the school at Ft. Bragg, DeHart and Wade were the top graduates, and believe me, that's not an easy job because the school is tough. These two are

598th wins league playoffs, earn post tournament slot

By Joe Hilton

The under-rated 598th Light Maintenance Co outplayed 15th Finance (DS) and HHC 43rd Engineer Bn to capture the top seat in the 36th Engineer Gp (CBT) basketball league playoffs this week.

The 598th, a well-balanced, offensive team led by Johnny Acoff and James Randle, eased by 15th Finance with a 54-53 victory in a quick rebound, fast-break battle.

HHC 43rd Engineer Bn, their second victim, presented a greater challenge for the 598th. The 43rd, a hard core defensive team, created several crucial turnovers and went to the locker room on top of the score board in the half.

The second half was a shootout. Acoff and Randle went to work chalking up a combined total of 35 points against the Engineers. The climax to the battle was when Ed Cochran, from the 598th, came from nowhere to reject a desperate lay-up attempt by the 43rd. The 43rd. The 598th emerged victorious over the 43rd with a score of 46-42.

The 43rd went on to defeat the 15th, 50-46, the following evening to secure a second place to represent "Group" in next week's post competition.

Flyers rout Renegades in opener

In the season's opening game in Atlanta, Benning's rugby team, the Flyers, roared to victory by smashing the Atlanta Renegades, undefeated in two seasons of regular play, 15-0.

Kicking off first, the Flyers drove for the Renegades' scrum. Rapidly establishing dominance there, the ball was quickly fed out to the backs but mishandled. The Renegades recovered the ball and attempted to kick it downfield but the kick was blocked by winger "Red" McKinnon.

Before the Atlanta team could recover, the other winger, Joe Rozek, scooped the ball up on the dead run and took it in for the score.

The next points came with a penalty kick by halfback Joe "Irish" Duffy from 25 yards out. The game then stabilized as the Renegades settled down and attempted to play control ball.

In the final minutes of the first half, the Benning scrummies won the ball in a lineout and passed it to the backs. Flyers' fullback "Big Jim" Mahoney went into the backline and literally ran over would-be tacklers. Slowed by the attempted tackles, "Big Jim" was forced to pass to outside center John Lovejoy, who danced his way around opponents to set the halftime score, 11-0.

In second half action, the Benning forwards once again won the ball through the hooking of Steve Church. Well-handled by the backs, the ball was put into the hands of inside center Bruce Barlow, who kicked the ball over the Renegades' backline and into the waiting hands of Gerome "T" Tilghman. With a burst of speed, Tilghman outran the defenders to cross the line for the final score.

The Flyers will be pitted against the Birmingham Rugby/Football Club, rated the number one southeastern team in Alabama, for their second game of the season Saturday in Birmingham.

Benning players take trophies

Five Benning racquetball players recently entered the University of Alabama (Birmingham) Invitational Racquetball Tournament and brought back top honors.

Trophy winners were Sue Graham, who defeated the Alabama state champion to claim the Women's "A" Championship; Dave Lawrence, post champion, winner of the Open "B" title; and Tim Hoffman, who captured the 3rd place trophy in the Open "B's." Lawrence and Hoffman also teamed up to take the runner-up trophy in the "A" division.

Hank Langendorf and Everett Urich were close to capturing the Open "B" doubles title but had to forfeit their semi-final match due to prior commitments at Benning.

Army Research Institute considers human aspects

Whenever new Army training programs are being devised or new equipment is being designed, all aspects of applicability must be considered, including one important aspect not often publicized — the human factor.

The outfit responsible for considering the human factor is the U.S. Army Research Institute (ARI), which conducts the Army Research and Development Program in the Behavioral Sciences. Field units at various Army posts provide local scientific and technical resources to their respective populace.

Chief of Benning's field unit is Hal Strasel. His staff consists of three military personnel and 18 civilians, most of whom are psychologists. Their expertise and scientific capabilities are applicable to the solution of immediate operational problems, definition of short and long-range research requirements, and assistance in the implementation and utilization of research within the Infantry.

The ARI's mission is primarily technical in nature and relates to all aspects of manpower development; retention, improved utilization, improved training, increased organizational and individual effectiveness and applications of the system approach and human factors considerations in system development.

Take new equipment for example, it is common knowledge that mechanical tests are extensive to insure everything works as intended. But did you know research is also done to determine if the soldier intended to operate the new equipment can do so within his physical and mental capabilities?

Two major programs involving ARI right now are the development of the Infantry Fighting Vehicle (IFV) and the preparation of an extensive training program designed to raise the rifle marksmanship proficiency of all soldiers.

Data collection, surveying, preparing and analyzing questionaires, researching, compiling statistics and evaluating feedback are all means of considering the human factor. But Mr. Strasel stressed the fact that ARI does not work in a vacuum; their work is closely coordinated with the Infantry School project officers, and with other Training and Doctrine Command agencies such as U.S. Army Infantry Board.

Ladies of the Officers Wives Club receive tips on handgun safety as well as basic marksmanship by members of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit. National Pistol Champions, SFC Bonnie Harmon and SP5 Kimberly Dyer of USAMU, provided classroom instruction on safety and handling of different types of handguns. The ladies were then given a brief live firing exercise on Phillips pistol range under coaching by USAMU's pistol team members.

'Salute' honors hospitalized vets

A nationwide program called "Salute to Hospitalized Veterans," sponsored by No Greater Love in cooperation with the Veterans Administration, will take place in all VA hospitals Tuesday, Valentine's Day.

The day will be marked by special activities, including personal visits to patients by national and local celebrities, sports stars, Camp Fire Girls, beauty queens, college and high school students, government officials and others. In this way, the Salute will become the day on which Americans publicly and formally express their gratitude and concern for hospitalized veterans.

The Salute program has a four-fold purpose:

To pay tribute and express appreciation to the 80,000 veterans hospitalized annually.

To establish and promote a continuing awareness of these Americans and their difficulties.

To show recognition to the various groups of the VA Voluntary Service which serve hospitalized veterans.

To encourage young persons to participate and to interest them in serving as hospital volunteers year-round.

Benning will show its support of the salute by sending a representative to visit with patients at the VA Hospital in Tuskegee, Ala.

Veterans receive warning

Georgia veterans are being warned that stories about a so-called "special 1948 insurance dividend" supposedly payable to veterans of World War II are only that — stories.

Georgia Veterans Service Director Pete Wheeler said, "This '1948 special dividend' story is an old hoax that somebody, somewhere resurrects every few years or so. It's just a lot of misinformation that creates a nuisance for the VA which is literally deluged by thousands of inquiries."

The most recent outbreak of publicity on this hoax has been noted in the Columbus area where a large number of leaflets have been circulated advising veterans to write the VA regarding their claim to the "special dividend."

Wheeler explained that the dividend referred to was paid in 1950 and 1951 to some 16-million veterans. The 91st congress passed a stale claims act stating that "no claims by an insured for payment in cash of a special dividend declared prior to Jan. 1, 1952, shall be processed by the VA, unless such claim was recorded within six years after such dividend was declared."

Wheeler said that, under this law, any claim received by the VA will be returned to the claimant with a copy of the law and the matter will be considered closed.

"Seems that some old hoaxes never die," Wheeler said, "they just go on fooling some people forever."

He advises veterans not to waste their time or the VA's.

Boy Scouts invited to join new scout association

An invitation to join the National Eagle Scout Association is extended to Eagle Scouts, past and present.

The National Eagle Scout Association or (NESA), is a new organization for Eagle Scouts of all ages. The purpose is to harness the experience, talents and energies of Eagle Scouts to further develop the scouting program on local, regional and national levels.

You may be asking some questions if you are an Eagle Scout. For example, "Why should I join?"

For one thing, it will bring you in contact with some of the best people in America — men and boys who have achieved Scouting's highest distinction: the Eagle Badge. Since 1912, more than one-half million young men have joined the Eagle ranks. Now NESA gives Eagles the opportunity to renew a pledge of leadership and take an active role in strengthening the Scouting program in America. What could be more important than that?

What does membership give me? On receipt of your application and fee ($10 for a 10-year period), the NESA office will send you a membership card and your NESA wall certificate (an additional $3 if you order it) suitable for framing. Your subscription to the Eagletter, the NESA quarterly bulletin, will be initiated at this time and will continue until your 10-year membership expires. NESA membership also permits you to join one of the growing number of local NESA chapters in the Chattahoochee Council of the Boy Scouts of America.

"How can I belong?" It's easy. You are automatically eligible for membership if you are an Eagle Scout. Age is not a factor and current registration in the Boy Scouts of America is not a requirement. All you have to do is pick up an application from the Ft. Benning District Scout Center, Bldg. 2620 or contact Mr. Frank D. Shehulski at 545-3474.

probably the finest Redeye gunners in the brigade," Lt. Mayock commented.

The exercise, which was viewed by Col. James R. Hall Jr., the brigade commander, went off perfectly with a few minor exceptions, according to Lt. Mayock. "We had a few bugs out here today that we're going to have to correct in future firings," he explained.

Each Redeye section in the ADA battery is allowed to fire one live missile for annual service qualification.

Tentative plans are being made for the next live Redeye firing to take place in June of this year.

"The soldiers of the 'Rock's Support' 2/10th are honored to have been afforded the opportunity to show the rest of the 197th how capable we are at our mission and how we are striving towards total excellence in our goal to become the finest ADA unit in the entire Army. We believe that we took a giant step towards validating that out here today," Lt. Mayock concluded.

Out and about

By Bev Lockhart

February is Black History Month and Kelley Hill Recreation Center is celebrating with a variety of activities all month. Tomorrow is Awareness Night beginning at 7:30 p.m. There will be a film followed by a round table discussion. Sunday at the same time a "We Remember" black military will include a history and tribute to blacks in the military.

The Center will also hold an art exhibit February 19 thru 26. They will be accepting artwork in Charcoal, Oils, Photography, Sculpture, Water Color, Pen and Ink, Open Media, Pastels, Acrylic, Pencil, and Mixed Media February 15 thru 17.

Art work must be accomplished by a black artist and/or must depict some aspect of black history, life or culture.

Registration forms may be obtained from the Center.

A Soul Food Supper will be held at Harmony Church Recreation Center on February 13 at 7 p.m. to commemorate Black History Month.

Have an Extra Special Lady? Whether she's your mom, your girl, your wife, your sister, or just a friend, you can enter her in the Kelley Hill Recreation Center Valentine Sweetheart Contest.

Entries may be made by dropping off a photo of your "best girl" at the Center by tomorrow. Everyone is encouraged to drop by and vote February 14, whether they entered a "sweetheart" or not. The winner will be posted on Valentine's Day.

For additional info call 544-1721.

He Fooled Around and Fell in Love. Elvin Bishop will be appearing at the Columbus Municipal Auditorium tonight at 8 p.m. The show will open with the Sandford-Townsend Band, whose hit "Smoke From a Distant Fire" made the Top 10 last fall.

If you fooled around and forgot to buy your tickets, they'll be available at the door for $6.

A Cabaret Atmosphere will prevail when local musicians perform at Recreation Services Music and Theatre Acoustical Coffee House tonight at 7:30 p.m., Kinsman Barracks Consolidated Dining Facility (Sand Hill). The program is free.

The Greatest Show on Earth is currently appearing at the Omni in Atlanta thru February 19. The Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey Circus performs at 11 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday; 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday; 4 and 8 p.m. on Thursday and Friday; 11 a.m., 3 and 8 p.m. on Saturday; and 1 and 5 p.m. on Sunday. There will be no performances on Monday, February 13.

Tickets are on sale for $4 thru $7 at all SEATS locations in Atlanta (including Rich's and Sears). Mail order tickets may be obtained by sending a self-addressed,. stamped envelope with check or money order payable to Ringling Brothers Circus to The Omni, 100 Techwood Drive, N.W., Atlanta, Ga., 30303.

"Harvey," the Invisible 6'1½" Rabbit of Broadway fame, will appear live on stage in the Ft. Benning Dramatizers' production of the play that bears his name.

The play will be presented on February 17, 18, 23, 24, and 25 at 8 p.m. in the new Ft. Benning Playhouse, Bldg. 72, on the corner of Anderson Street and Wold Avenue.

For reservations, dial 545-5057. Admission is FREE!

Got Seat Belts in your American or foreign sports car? If so, you're eligible to enter in the autocross at Midway Plaza, Opelika, Ala., at 11 a.m. (CST) Sunday.

The low speed, one-car-at-a-time event which takes place on a closed course set off by pylons is sponsored by the Chavaga Sports Car Club of Columbus, the Twin Cities Motor Sports Association of Auburn, and the Heart Fund Association.

Entrance fee is $4 for members, $5 for non-members. All proceeds will go to the Heart Fund.

For more info call Ralph Evers, 323-2825, in Columbus; or Jim Godfrey, 205-887-5028, in Auburn.

"Shadow on the Green" will be presented by the "What You Will Players" at the 1st AIT Bde Chapel, Sand Hill, Sunday at 3 p.m.

The musical production portrays life during the Civil War days using mime, dance interludes and songs of the period. It is a fascinating panorama of an experience that was both grim and humorous, tragic and inspiring.

"Movin' On Up — A Journey Into Blackness" will be presented at Springer Theater in Columbus on February 19 at 4 p.m. Tickets for the musical are available through the Recreation Services Information, Tours and Travel (ITT) Office, Bldg. 394, Doughboy Stadium, for $5.

Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority will host an art show at Columbus Square February 18 from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. in conjunction with Cultural Awareness for Black Americans.

The art show is open to junior and senior high school students, college students and adults. Categories include Sculpture, Painting, Crafts, Graphics, Photography, and Open Media.

Awards will be presented for first, second and third place for each of the four age groups during intermission of the musical "Movin' On Up" at the Springer Theatre on February 19.

Entry forms are available at the ITT Office, Bldg. 394 Doughboy Stadium. For further info call Mrs. Dora Jackson at 689-5419.

This Is The Last Week that you'll be able to see Springer Theater's production of Noel Coward's light comedy, "Hay Fever." The play closes February 18. Evening performances begin at 8:30 p.m., Sunday's matinee begins at 2:30 p.m.

Tickets are available at a discount to the military community from the ITT office, Doughboy Stadium, for $4.

Easter Week-End is Fast Approaching and those who are hoping to spend their time at Destin Recreation Area must have their applications in by February 20.

Cottage assignments will be determined by lottery on February 21 and patrons receiving cottages will be notified by mail. All applicants not receiving a cottage assignment will be placed on a waiting list in case of cancellation.

Applications may be made at the ITT office, Bldg. 394, Doughboy Stadium. For further info call 545-7414.

The Columbus Symphony Orchestra will present a free family pops concert tomorrow evening at 8, sponsored by the Music and Theatre Branch of Recreation Services.

The Benning Belles, the Patty Taylor Dancers, and soloist Nancy Cozart, winner of the college Students Auditions, will also be be performing.

More info may be obtained by calling 545-1679.

Reenlisting may be better choice

By Sue Davis

Your ETS date is approaching and you still haven't decided whether to reenlist or get out of the service, so you consider an extension.

"The difference between reenlistments and extensions are almost like night and day," says SFC N.R. Saunders, Ft. Benning's senior Army career counselor and operations NCO.

Consider the advantages of reenlisting. Not only could you be granted the station of choice, but you could also be guaranteed a school and a bonus, if there is one. You may also cash in up to 60 days leave time within 90 days of reenlistment.

If you intend to extend for a few months, there are no advantages. No bonus, no guarantee that you will be working in your present MOS and no request for assignment.

However, when it is impractical or would cause problems to reenlist, it may be possible and desirable to extend the current enlistment.

Extensions may be granted for specific purposes such as:

- If a dependent is ill, requires hospitalization, or is pregnant.
- To meet service remaining requirements such as an overseas tour.
- For the convenience of the government.
- To comply with promotion requirements.

Say, for example, that a servicemember is promoted to E-5 two months before he is to ETS. He must extend for one month because three months time in grade is required for E-5's.

According to the Department of the Army, 75 per cent of all extensions are uncalled for. Extending for three months in order to secure a loan, for example, or tie up unfinished business, is not considered to be a valid reason.

Presently, a servicemember may extend for a maximum of three months in order to "think it over" and decide whether or not to reenlist.

"The extension program has been abused," Saunders stated, "in that the DA's objective is to reenlist all qualified people who want to re-up. But someone who has been in the service for three or four years shouldn't need to extend in order to decide if the Army is for them."

Accident claims life

A traffic accident on the Lindsay Creek Bypass near Upatoi Creek on Post has resulted in the death of a two-year-old boy and injuries to his mother.

Mrs. Vera Lynn, wife of Sgt. James C. Lynn, Mortar Co, 3/7th was run off the road in her 1978 AMC Jeep. Tuesday at 4 p.m. The vehicle struck the guard rail, a concrete culvert and an embankment then overturned several times. She and her son, Shawn, were thrown out of the Jeep.

They were taken to Martin Army Hospital and then transferred to the Doctor's Hospital in Columbus, where Shawn Lynn died at approximately 11 p.m. Tuesday.

Witnesses claim that a light blue Volkswagon caused the accident by pulling into Mrs. Lynn's lane and thus cutting her off.

SQT dates rescheduled

Skill Qualification Tests previously set for January have been rescheduled.

Career Management Field 63, mechanical maintainance, test dates have been changed to May 1 through October 31.

CMF 74, Automatic Data Processing test, dates have been changed as follows; MOSs, 74 B, D and E, March 1 through August 31; MOSs 34E, F and H, April 1 through September 30.

CMF 11, Infantryman tests have been rescheduled as follows; MOSs 11 B and C, June 1 through November 30.

Soldiers whose MOSs are 11D and E will not be tested in this CY due to the implementation of CMF 19.

The testing period of CMF 13, Field Artillery, has been set for July 1 through December 31.

Commissary holiday hours

A new commissary holiday closing schedule has been enacted by DA according to Post Commissary Officer Jose Fantauzi. When a holiday falls on a Monday, the commissary will be open on Saturday and closed onTuesday.

Previously on three-day weekends, the commissary was closed on Saturday. Fantauzi commented that the new schedule will bring more convenient service to commissary patrons.

The new schedule will apply to Washington's Birthday this weekend. Posted information contradictory to the new schedule is to be disregarded.

ITT Office moves

The Recreation Services Information, Tours and Travel Office has moved to the Kelley Hill Recreation Center, Bldg. 9079. Their new phone number is 544-3079.

Sp4 Cary Parler

By Betty Zimmerman

The Soldiers Medal, the Army's highest peacetime award for bravery, was presented to Sp4 Cary W. Parler by MajGen. William J. Livsey in a special ceremony Wednesday.

Parler distinguished himself Nov. 16, 1976 when he rescued Mrs. Naomi Dixon from a burning apartment in Columbus.

The Headquarters Command illustrator was on his way to work at the Training Aids Service Office when he noticed flames in an upstairs window of the KaBar Apartments on Mason Court. He ran to the burning apartment and pounded on the door. Getting no answer, he went downstairs and learned from the neighbors that there was a woman living in the apartment. He called the fire department, then went back upstairs where he kicked in the door and called out. With no thought of personal danger, Parler entered the smoke-filled room, low crawled to the bedroom and pulled Mrs. Dixon to safety. The fire was quickly contained and Mrs. Dixon was not injured thanks to his quick reactions.

ALL FORT BENNING PERSONNEL

1. This is the first three-day holiday of the new year and many personnel will be travelling long distances to be with friends and relatives or to enjoy winter sports. Accidents resulting from carelessness will bring tragedy to many. Much of the suffering and grief can be avoided by applying common sense to potential accident situations.

2. The privately owned motor vehicle accident will prove to be the greatest taker of lives over this holiday period. The majority of these deaths can be avoided by applying defensive driving techniques and wearing seat belts. For this same period last year, Fort Benning sustained no fatal injuries. Let's make this another safe holiday period.

3. As we pause in our everyday pursuits to pay honor to our First President, let us also pause to reflect upon our obligations to our families and fellow man. Spare everyone the burden of suffering and sorrow by accepting and discharging our responsibilities to drive safely and avoid traffic accidents.

4. Enjoy your holiday. Thanks, We're doing better.

Women assigned to combat arms

By Betty Zimmerman

Two officer candidates, due to graduate from OCS Thursday, will become the Army's first women to be commissioned in a combat arms branch.

The precedent-setting candidates, Brenda Barton and Donna Shuffstall, chose the Air Defense Artillery (ADA) as their branch.

ADA forces are deployed throughout the world in peacetime to provide a deterrent to possible enemy air attack and to be prepared to instantly counter an air attack. Essentially, ADA provides an umbrella of protection over the battlefield, thus allowing our combat and support units to maneuver uninhibited from any hostile air attack. Their air defense weapons include the Redeye for short, short range; the Chaparral/Vulcan for short range, low altitude; the Hawk for low, medium-altitude coverage; and the Nike Hercules for long range nuclear or conventional surface-to-surface fires.

Following at least 18 weeks of schooling at Ft. Bliss, Tex., these 24-year-old second lieutenants will be qualified to serve as platoon leaders on either the Hawk or the Nike Hercules air defense missiles.

Candidate Shuffstall is the daughter of Col. and Mrs. Donald C. Shuffstall of Ft. Benning, where her father is the Public Affairs Officer. She earned her degree in Anthropology from the University of Georgia in June and entered the Army in August. She had intended to enter the Military Intelligence branch but saw an Army Times article announcing the opening of ADA to women and immediately decided to accept the challenge.

"I like the excitment of the Army and look forward to the chance to go to Europe and possibly serve with NATO forces," she stated.

Candidate Barton felt she was morally obligated to enter the combat arms. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Barton of Williamsville, N.Y., explained, "I have been an outspoken advocate of women's rights and that included their right to fight for their country if they so desired. Therefore, when the opportunity presented itself, I took advantage of the chance to prove that a woman can handle the job."

Barton served in enlisted status as a personnel specialist since January 1977, and it is her belief that this service will enhance her capabilities as an officer by giving her an understanding of the junior enlisted problems. She has a bachelor of science degree in Business Administration from the State University of New York at Buffalo but found the business world too stifling for a woman.

Both candidates feel that the Army gives them the opportunity to prove themselves as a person — not just as a woman — and stated that they are prepared to over-achieve, if necessary, to show the doubters that women are capable of filling certain roles in the combat arms.

Officer candidates Brenda Barton (l) and Donna Shuffstall discuss their pending assignment to the Air Defense Artillery while resting during a 15-mile road march.

Thursday they will become the Army's first women commissioned in a combat arms branch of service.

Free tow available

In the event that your car should break down on post, a "free tow" is available to servicemembers by the Transportation Motor Pool (TMP) and the Military Police. This wrecker service will haul your disabled vehicle to your unit parking lot or on-post quarters.

The special wrecker service is in effect during hours when the PX garage is closed. These hours are 5 p.m. to 8 a.m. Monday through Friday and noon Saturday to 8 a.m. Monday.

The owner must call the MP desk sergeant to request service. He will notify TMP and a wrecker will be sent to your location.

A military police patrol will accompany the wrecker so that they may inventory your vehicle in order to check for scratches, dents, etc., prior to moving the vehicle. Wrecker drivers must have your signature in order to tow your car to safety. The vehicle will again be inventoried after it is towed to insure that no damages were sustained.

So don't let a "failure to repair" get you down. TMP and the MP's are available to "give a helping hand."

Canadian officer involved in Benning activities

By Julie Casey

Benning's Canadian Liaison Officer, who qualified as a Ranger here 12 years ago, is here and really enjoys it.

Maj. Ken D. Lidgren, who was the chief instructor at the Canadian Mechanized Brigade Group Battle School, while with the Canadian NATO Forces in West Germany, will also teach some classes to Benning troops. He added, "My main duties though mostly involve staying on top of new training and combat developments."

He is parachute qualified in Canada, Australia, and the U.S. Lidgren really enjoys jumping and trys to go up with the troops at least once a week.

Lidgren also served two tours in Cyprus with the United Nations Peace keeping forces when the conflict between Greece and Turkey split the island in 1974.

"It (combat in Cyprus) was a different conflict for our troops. They only fought during the daylight hours and of course for us it was even stickier since we were positioned between them." Lidgren said. "When I was there in 1976 things had not changed, except that the situation had stablized. Neither side would give an inch and the defensive line between them was still the same."

Lidgren commented concerning the duty here, "I feel the most enjoyable thing about the South are the people."

Lidgren has become very involved in Ft. Benning's activities. He has been invited to shoot with the Army Markmanship Unit and feels that he may occasionally accept. Lidgren, in 1962, received the Queen's Medal for top marksman in Canada.

He is also one of the assistant coaches of the Ft. Benning Rugby Flyers Club. A veteran player of 11 years, he commented that, at times, he wishes he was still out on the field instead of yelling from the side lines.

He also said he is taking advantage of the area's facilities to improve his two daughters' rifle markmanship abilities.

Colonial Band to highlight AUSA Birthday Ball

The annual AUSA George Washington Birthday Ball will be held February 24 at Harmony Church Fieldhouse.

All AUSA members and their guests are invited to attend the coat-and-tie affair. Festivities will begin at 6:30 p.m. with dinner served at 7:30 p.m.

The catered meal will feature fried chicken, baked beans, potato salad, cole slaw, rolls, coffee, tea, ice cream and birthday cake. Cash bars will be available throughout the evening.

Highlighting the Birthday Ball will be the Explorer Post 76 Colonial Band. The band, dressed in 1776 period colonial costumes, will perform for 20 minutes immediately following the meal. They will open with "Way Down in Columbus, Georgia," followed by "Battle Hymn of the Republic," "I Write the Songs," "Are You From Dixie," and other popular and patriotic music. They will close their program with "The Army Song."

The Colonial Band, which was organized in February 1977, made its first appearance at the AUSA chapter's 20th Birthday Ball in March 1977. Since then they have grown to a strength of 80, comprised of teenagers from all Columbus high schools and Columbus College. The band has given 26 performances in Georgia, Florida and Alabama, to include performances for all three states' governors and President Carter.

The Explorer Post has received extensive recognition and is being booked for performances one year ahead. At the Atlanta Salute to America Parade in July, the Colonial Band was selected as the outstanding "Community Band" of Georgia. Earlier this month they received a trophy and plaque at the Mardi Gras for being selected as "Honor Band" for out-of-state bands.

Their yearly operating budget, which is about $4,000, comes entirely from donations, fund drives, car wash projects, hot dog sales, and similiar projects.

The Colonial Band is the sixth largest in the nation's Explorer Scouting program and the largest scout band that isn't also a school band.

Their future schedule calls for a concert at post Easter Sunrise Service, Salisbury Fair, Festival of Forts at Ft. Mitchell, Ala., and the Scout-O-Rama in Columbus.

Explorer Post 76 is sponsored by TSB. Col. Todd Graham, commander of TSB, is chairman of all Explorer Scouting on post. He is also the chairman of the 53-member Explorer Adult Committee.

Requests for the band should be submitted early to either the Public Affairs Office, 545-1516; or Maj. Bill Drollinger, senior advisor and director, through the Scouting office, 545-7067.

Additional music for the ball will be provided by the Misty Harbor Band until 1 a.m.

Tickets for the Birthday Ball are available from sergeants major of major units, the Public Affairs Office, Bldg. 4, room 604, Columbus Bank and Trust Co., the First Alabama Bank of Phenix City, and the National Bank of Ft. Benning for $4.50 per person.

Glad you asked

How do you feel about the tips vs. salaried status for commissary baggers?

Mike Chapman, commissary bagger
If we were being paid for the hours we work, we'd get a lot more money. On slow days we don't receive many tips. A standard wage would make things easier.

William P. Keeton, commissary shopper
I like the idea. They need a little money because for now they must depend on tips.

Maxine Rose, commissary bagger
I feel that the baggers need and deserve a salary because we work hard and some days our tips are very poor. I think the baggers work twice as hard as anyone else in the commissary. Often we are looked down upon because of our jobs — especially the women. I feel that the two percent surcharge is the only way for us to receive a salary.

Pvt. David E. Johnson, Hqs Co Hqs Cmd
I believe that if someone works on a steady basis, they should be paid a salary. A two percent increase on your grocery bill will not amount to very much.

Rosemarie E. Simmons, commissary shopper
I think it's a good idea and it's fair. The surcharge would automatically be taken out and I wouldn't have to figure how much to tip.

It's tough living on tips

By Sue Davis

What moves with lightning speed in all directions and spends a lot of time in the back seat of your car? Well, it's not an excited French poodle — it's a commissary bagger!

There's a lot of talk these days about paying the grocery bagger a standard salary. The Department of the Army will implement this new plan July 1.

Yes, the present number of baggers will decrease, but at least they will receive guaranteed salaries — a paycheck every week. It's tough living on tips.

On slow days, baggers may not even receive enough to buy a carton of cigarettes or even a box of Ho-Ho's.

Recently, I had a conversation with a commissary bagger who seemed pleased about the additional two percent surcharge which would automatically be added to a shoppers grocery bill. "Sure, we ought to get salaries," the worker insisted. "We're on our feet most of the day. If a customer is feeling grumpy our tips are small. The amount of the tip depends on the mood of the shoppers and believe me, it's inconsistent."

Most people agree that paying the baggers a salary is a good idea, but a few questions come to mind such as: How will they decide who to hire? Will seniority be an important consideration in choosing the employees? Who will be these workers' supervisor?

These, and other questions will need to be worked out.

I think that having these workers on the payroll is the best thing that could happen to them. As for me, I couldn't survive on tips — it just ain't my bag.

Commentary

Combat no place for a WAC

By Bev Lockhart

With the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) and other feminist movements, the pressure for the Army to open up combat related MOSs to women grows stronger.

The Department of the Army seems to have the impression that WACs are dying to go into combat. In my opinion, we aren't! In theory, the idea of equality is good. In practicality, it wouldn't work. Men just aren't ready to accept women as their equals — especially in combat.

The instinct to protect women is ingrained in a man from childhood. Do you think his ideas would change if the solder fighting next to him in that foxhole is a woman? In reality, she would be just as competent in combat as he is — or if she's out there, she should be anyway.

Knowing that men's attitudes cannot be changed overnight, a woman does not have the right to jeopardize the lives of the other members in the unit just because they're more concerned for her safety than watching out for themselves.

Of course I'm for equal pay for equalwork—as long as the woman can do the job just as well as a man. If the job requires a woman to carry a ruck sack and an M-16 rifle, she'd better be able to do it, or she shouldn't have the job.

Our society is geared towards protecting women. It would be the same thing in combat, even if the woman were to outweigh everyone in her unit by 40 pounds.

Funds requested to improve housing

By Anne Harmon

The Corps of Engineers has asked for funds to upgrade family housing on Army installations worldwide.

A $122 million program to upgrade "substandard" or "inadequate" family housing on Army installations has been proposed by the Corps' Family Housing Division. The improvement work, which could begin in FY 1980, would affect 6,100 units on about 40 worldwide installations.

Quarters considered "substandard" or "inadequate" represent about seven per cent of all the Army's family housing units. They range from apartments to townhouses and duplexes and house both officers and enlisted soldiers.

Sixty-five hundred soldiers and their families now live in inadequate government housing. Most of these quarters were built by the Army in the 1950s and would need major renovations to bring them up to present-day standards of military construction and the private housing market.

Cramped kitchens and bathrooms and outmoded fixtures and appliances are typical. Many units located where air conditioning is authorized have no central system. Repairs to heating systems are also needed.

Many soldiers are "paying" the full price for substandard housing. Public laws allow soldiers living in inadequate quarters to keep part of their quarters allowance (BAQ), as long as normal operating and maintenance costs were recovered. However, in recent years rising costs have made it necessary for the Army to retain all of a soldier's BAQ, regardless of the condition of the quarters.

A noncommissioned officer assigned inadequate quarters may be living across the road from a fellow NCO in a more modern and spacious housing unit. Despite the difference in quality, both forfeit the same amount of money — their full BAQ.

Under the revamp program, up to $20,000 could be spent to improve a single unit, extending its "life" for the next 25 years.

Some quarters would be enlarged to meet the space requirements assigned to soldiers and their families according to rank. Storage areas would be either enlarged or built as additions to the main structure. Outmoded fixtures and appliances may be replaced with modern items, vanity sinks and stall-type showers.

Some Army families would enjoy the convenience of a kitchen disposal or dishwasher for the first time. Air conditioning would be installed in some areas of the country and carports built where necessary.

The Army's recommendations to DoD are based on a housing survey conducted by the Corps of Engineers last year. The worldwide survey pinpointed each housing unit in the Army system that does not meet modern standards, and Family Housing Division then determined which units could be economically upgraded. Of the 6,700 inadequate units, it is economically feasible to renovate 6,100.

In deciding which units will be improved, and how much will be spent on renovations, the Army, DoD, and Congress will study the recommendations in light of the Defense Department's long-range plans for military installations. (ARNEWS, "Engineer Update")

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room — and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single -room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 150 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

Foxhole at Officers' Club

"The Foxhole" is the name of the recently dedicated bar at the main Officers' Club, and was most often submitted among the approximately 350 suggestions in the "Name That Bar" contest.

Lt Col. Lee Hickman, post adjutant general, was the winner of the $50 first prize and promptly donated his money for drinks on the house for the capacity crowd present at the drawing.

Hickman was one of several suggesting "The Foxhole" as a name. He was declared winner after having his name drawn from the group submitting that name.

Other interesting names suggested were: The Discriminator, The Watering Hole, Hole 13, The Powder Keg, The Slammer, Albatross, Agamemnon, Acorn, Leader's Lair, The Monkey Room;

The Bar Too Far, Toast 'n Boast, The Combined Arms Pit, The Command Post, and Naumann's Nemesis (LtCol. Naumann is chief, Installation Club Management Division, DPCA).

Another interesting submission was "The Alvin York, Audie Murphy, William Shea Memorial Infantry Lounge and Historical Site."

Flyers overcome Birmingham

Benning's rugby team, the Flyers, captured another victory in Birmingham Saturday by defeating the top rated team in Alabama, 16-10.

That rating didn't intimidate the Flyers, who immediately established the same dominance in the scrum as displayed in their victory over the Renegades two weeks ago. Continually driving the Birmingham forwards off the ball, it was in the early minutes of the game when Joe "Irish" Duffy leaped on the ball as it came out of the Birmingham scrum and scored the first try of the day.

"Big Jim" Mohney kicked the conversion point sending the score to 6-0 with five minutes elapsed in the first half.

The game then became a Mexican standoff as the Flyers were unable to get anything by the well-seasoned Birmingham backline. The Birmingham team kept making costly mistakes resulting in penalty and free kicks for the Flyers. Duffy capitalized on one of the Birmingham mistakes by kicking the ball through the uprights on a penalty kick, setting the score at 9-0.

The situation looked grim for the Birmingham side until the final minutes of the first half when the ball came out quickly from ruck to the veteran Birmingham backs who took it in for a score and conversion. The half ended with Benning ahead 9-6.

In the second half action both teams reorganized their offense with the Flyers scoring first from midfield. Bruce Barlow received the ball after the Benning scrummies won the lineout and passed to the backs. Cutting and running across and up the field, Barlow eluded his opponents and went in for the score. The conversion failed but the Flyers had increased their lead to 13-6.

Both teams scored again in the final minutes of play. Mohney took advantage of the Birmingham penalties and kicked the ball through for another three points. Birmingham was able to make another try but the Flyers had clinched the victory, 16-10.

After a short intermission, the Benning "B" team played the Birmingham "B" team. Short of players, the Birmingham "B" team was supplemented by many of the "A" team members. The combination proved devastating as the more seasoned team beat the Flyers, 18-0.

The victory against Birmingham gave the Flyers a 2-0 season record.

The Flyers face another highly ranked team at the University of Georgia in Athens on Saturday.

"Uncle Sam needs us."

Patricia & Sheltra

Sergeant Robert Sheltra is an infantryman. He reenlisted because he enjoys his work and his life in the Army. His wife, Patty, agrees. "I like Army life. The benefits are good. The medical help. And the travel. I've gone to more places, met more people than ever before. I have a lot of friends here in the Army. My husband enjoys his job. He likes the people he works with. I've always liked the Army. I would encourage anyone to reenlist."

Maybe your husband should have a chat with his career counselor. He may find out just how much Uncle Sam needs him.

Keep a good family in the Army.

"THE" Place

cars of brand new merchandise come cheaper than a few pieces of this or that.

After buying these large quantities at substantial savings, their dollar has gone farther and bought more and better quality merchandise. That's the way that Georgia Freight is able to offer it's customer the lowest prices available.

Price is certainly a strong point at Georgia Freight, but service is second to none. Georgia Freight employs 4 qualified, courteous salesmen to help customers with all their needs. Mr. James Kenny, Assistant Manager, is always available to assist.

Georgia Freight carries it's services further to help its customers and offers 100% Financing to all E4's and up with credit approval. You can use BankAmericard, Visa, Master Charge or Lay-A-Way as conveniently as cash.

A business you can trust with your household needs that sells you merchandise at the fairest price in town and offers you financing through their own facility. Georgia Freight really is "THE" place for the military.

Soldiers coming back

By Pat Brown

The first of 10 planeloads carrying weather-weary soldiers, who have spent the last 10 days in a massive snow-clearing effort in Providence, R.I., will land at Lawson Airfield around 11 a.m. today.

Approximately 110 men from Headquarters, 36th Engineer Gp, the 43rd Engineer Bn and the 72d Engineer Co, 197th Infantry Bde left Benning February 8 to assist in a giant road-clearing and rescue mission in the snow-bound city.

They were joined there by elements from Forts Stewart, Polk and Belvoir, a contingent of Seebees from Gulfport, Miss. and National Guard units. Several pieces of heavy snow-clearing equipment were also flown to the stricken area from here as well as from the other posts. The combined elements known as Task Force Charlie, a part of the Army-wide Operation Snowblower II, were under the command of Col. Robert E. Ayers, commander of the 36th Engineer Gp.

The men will be flown in at regular intervals throughout the rest of today and tonight by the Military Air Command. The last planeload is expected around 8 a.m. tomorrow.

Quartermaster Laundry convenient

By Joyce Walker

Providing fast, dependable and professional laundrying services to Benning troops is what the Installation Quartermaster Laundry is all about.

One service offered there, goes under the code name "777." The 777 plan allows the soldier to by-pass his supply room and turn in soiled laundry directly to the installation laundry during the facility operating hours or in the convenient 24-hour night drop.

Another advantage to the 777 plan is that for only $2 per week, using the payroll deduction plan, military personnel may have up to 26 pieces washed, starched and pressed each week.

For the soldier who needs a clean starched uniform fast, the post laundry offers a special one day service on outer military garments. "Just bring in your uniform one day and it will be ready to go the next day or have it in by eight and pick it up that afternoon," says Andrew Anton, chief of the Laundry Branch.

Owners of durable press (wash and wear) uniforms can safely send their clothing to the laundry. The installation has purchased costly, special equipment for laundering these uniforms so that they receive the same tender loving care that some 500,000 laundry items receive each month.

The post laundry not only serves the 22,000 Benning troops, but we also support 14,000 Reserve National Guard and Reserve Officer Training Cadets coming here during the year," revealed Anton.

Of course when you have such a large number of clientele, a few problems arise. "Our biggest problem," the laundry chief noted, "is that a lot of the young soldiers don't fill out the laundry slips correctly. They will write them out in illegible script, rather than print."

A few items become lost or damaged. Claims for damaged or missing items are usually handled at the laundry within 24 to 48 hours. However, claims are honored by Fabricare upon presentation of the original laundry slip, so it is advisable for the customer to check his laundry before discarding it.

The main post pick-up point in building 2500 operates from 7:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. and is closed on Saturday, Sunday and holidays. Another pick-up point located in the AIT Bldg. area in Bldg. 5297 operates six days a week from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Uniform repairs are made by the post laundry's residence tailor, Ethel Carr.

Jaycees eat here

By Achmed Chettgren

The Association of the United States Army (AUSA) and the Post Commander MajGen. William J. Livsey hosted an appreciation reception and dinner for the Columbus Jaycees in the AIT Brigade's 3rd Bn facilities Thursday.

The function was held to show appreciation to the Jaycees for their vast community contributions and the outstanding hospitality they have continued to extend to Benning soldiers. It was also a forum whereby all concerned expressed the desire to continue their efforts in furthering a strong relationship between the post and the community.

"We hope this is a good thing," said MajGen. Livsey. "I do not consider Fort Benning an adjunct to the community but a part of it."

More than 170 members of the Jaycees and representatives from Infantry Center and various units on post were present for the reception and dinner. After an hour's social activities the group was moved to the battalion's dining facility.

The kitchen staff, headed by Mess Sergeant SFC James Archuleta, wore suits and ties and gowns. The tables were covered in white table cloths, and colored lights made ever-changing patterns through ice sculptures of swans and a swordfish made of shortening.

"Before you all go out and sign up (for the Army)," joked MajGen. Livsey, "let me tell you that the soldiers don't eat like this every day, although the daily menus are also very good. We have a good mess sergeant who puts out good chow here."

During the festivities Col. (Ret.) Wallace Veaudry, AUSA secretary-treasurer presented Col. Stiner, AIT Bde commander, and brigade CSM Virgil R. Greene, with a plaque for the brigade's efforts during the recent membership drive. The brigade garnered 1600 new members for the AUSA.

Jaycees President Joseph Bross thanked everyone for the night and "for giving us the strongest Army in its history. We thank you from the bottom of our hearts and our stomachs."

After dinner, Col. Stiner gave a commander's briefing on the new developments in AIT training and presented the film, "The New Breed," which was filmed here by RKO Pictures and distributed to more than 250 television stations around the country, according to the colonel. The film depicts soldiers going through infantry, OCS and Airborne training and shows how the role of women has broadened in the military.

Later, members were taken on a tour of the newly completed 3rd Bn facility, Kinsman Barracks, one of the most modern barracks facilities on post.

Custer Terrace Commissary converts to Chapel

By Julie Casey

The one time commissary-grocery store in Custer Terrace may still look like a store on the outside, but just take a look inside.

At the invitation of Chap. (Lt Col.) Charles Hill, a "Bayonet" reporter did just that. She went out to look at what was once an abandoned building with a sagging roof and disarrayed wallpaper.

The building was once a grocery store when that area was still part of Columbus and then a commissary after the post extended its boundaries.

When the community began transforming the commissary into a chapel, it was a mess and the floor still showed marks where the shelves had been. What is now the children's church was not even fit for storage, according to Custer Terrace Chap. (Capt.) Don Hannah.

"Most of the work done in the chapel was accomplished with the help of the Custer Terrace Community and tools from Self-help," Chap. Hannah said.

The draperies that hang along the front of the chapel were acquired from the Sight Seeing Road Chapel and altered by the ladies of the congregation, according to Chap. Hannah.

When you walk inside the building now, you will find painted walls, a fixed roof, wooden pews from Ft. Gordon, carpeting in the junior church room from Hqs Co, Hqs Cmd and a growing congregation, according to Chap. Hannah.

Baggers must be paid

By John Hart

The Defense Department has come up with three alternatives for stateside commissaries to choose from in resolving the grocery bagger issue.

A Pentagon official said that DoD is expected to abide with the Civil Service Commission compliance order dealing with the compensation of the baggers. He said the ruling does not apply overseas, but only in non-foreign areas where the Fair Labor Standards Act applies.

In November 1976 the commission ruled that the Pentagon must stop the practice of compensating the baggers solely by means of tips, calling for payment of the federal minimum wage.

Not only did the ruling direct the Pentagon to stop the practice, it also called for making retroactive payments to an estimated 10,000 baggers.

The retroactive payments would go back to May 1, 1974, when federal employees were brought under the Fair Labor Standards Act.

At this time, the Defense Department is waiting on "guidance" dealing with the retroactive payments issue, according to the Pentagon official.

He said all commissaries located in areas in which the Fair Labor Standards Act applies are required to implement one or a combination of three plans by July 30, 1978.

● Use a Nonappropriated Fund Instrumentality (NAFI) to employ and compensate the baggers. A 'Users Charge' would be used to finance the fund. This charge would be collected at the checkstand from those using the service. The charge would be a percentage of purchase, not to exceed two percent. Due to the conflicts inherent with "tip offset" and the Users Charge, tipping is to be discouraged. The bagger would be paid the appropriate scheduled rate for NAF Craft and Trade employees established for the area the commisary is located in.

● Dispense with the bagging service. Cashiers as a regular part of their duties would assist the customer in bagging purchases. The customer self-service may have limited application: As the alternative to bagger service supported by Users Charges, and to smaller stores where reduced volume would make this option feasible.

Each of the above plans will provide for at least one self-service checkout lane so commissary patrons (at their option), may bag their own groceries, according to the Pentagon official.

Rep. Les Aspin (D-Wis.), a member of the House Armed Services Committee, introduced last year legislation to counter the Civil Service Commission compliance order. The legislation is still pending action in the House Labor Standards Subcommittee. A subcommittee staffer said the panel is trying to resolve the issue administratively rather than by legislation.

When he introduced the legislation, Aspin said his intention was to save the military commissaries from the extra burden of paying salaries to the baggers.

A long-time critic of Pentagon spending, Aspin estimated it would cost the government between $12 and $18 million to put the baggers on a salary system. He also said it would cost $35 to $53 million for the Pentagon to make retroactive payments to the baggers.

DUI: Punishment could be death

By Kavan L. Stull

A drinking driver is involved in 30 percent of all fatal accidents which occur in the United States. This year, more than 30,000 Americans will die and more than 800,000 will be injured in accidents involving drunk drivers.

Between July 1 and January 1, 245 individuals assigned to Benning were apprehended, either by military or civil authorities, for Driving Under the Influence (DUI). Many of these same individuals were involved in accidents, causing serious injuries.

If you are going out and plan to have a few drinks, here are some precautions to take before putting the key in the ignition:

- Reduce your intake of alcohol so it will be safe for you to drive.
- Carpool it with some friends and determine who will drive home before the drinking starts.
- If on post, contact the Military Police Desk Sergeant for transportation to your post quarters.

The drinking driver endangers himself and those around him. If you have friends that have had too much to drink, help them out. Assure them a safe ride home.

Remember — the punishment for drink drivers could be death.

Infantry Board tests targets

Members of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit are about to complete activities as test soldiers in the Infantry Board's Training Effectiveness Analysis test against moving personnel targets.

The purpose of the test is to analyze the relative effectiveness of various techniques for engaging moving personnel-type targets with the M16A1 rifle. The targets represent walking and running enemy soldiers at ranges of 20 to 300 meters. Representatives of the Infantry School and personnel assigned to the Marksmanship Unit Moving Target Section jointly developed the preliminary engagement techniques now being tested.

The test is part of an overall project by the Infantry School to develop a rifle marksmanship training program using moving personnel target systems. One of the new target Systems being developed is the Infantry Remoted Targets System (IRETS). IRETS is designed to provide more effective training for the individual soldier at both stationary and moving targets. The first IRETS range system for Fort Benning is expected to be in place and undergo testing and evaluation later this year.

Chapel

Chap. Hannah commented, "It is not the building that makes the Custer Terrace Chapel a success, but the community's involvement."

The Custer Terrace Chapel is part of the Community Life Program. This program combined with Army Community Service is an effort to promote a wide range of social and religious activities for the area.

Services are held Sunday and Wednesday. Sunday school begins at 10 a.m. and the regular service begins at 11 a.m. Wednesday evening's services begin at 7:30.

Basic guidelines of conduct revised

A revised version of Army Regulation 600-50, Standards of Conduct, has been published and is being distributed to the field. This regulation contains the Army's basic guidelines concerning ethical standards of conduct expected of Department of the Army personnel — uniformed and civilian — and, in some instances, of members of the households of such personnel. All Department of the Army personnel must be briefed concerning the content of the regulation and reminded of its provisions semi-annually.

- provision for designating a deputy standards of conduct counselor for each DA agency, command or installation to provide the command and its personnel with advice and assistance regarding standards of conduct problems.
- prohibition of outside interests that conflict with official matters.
- prohibition of unauthorized disclosure of advance procurement information.
- prohibition of commercial solicitation of personnel junior in grade except in certain specified instances.
- prohibition of acceptance of gratuities where a conflict of interest may exist.
- limitation upon contributions or presents to superiors.
- prohibition upon use of government facilities, property and manpower for other than official purposes.
- prohibition generally against gambling, betting, and lotteries on government-owned, leased, or controlled property.
- requirement for certain specified personnel to submit annual Statements of Affiliations and Financial Interests.
- discussion of statutory restrictions imposed upon former government employees.

In addition, the regulation contains certain prohibitions applicable to military personnel only. These include:

- prohibition upon seeking or accepting anything of value in connection with the performance of official duties or the commission of any fraud against the United States.
- restrictions upon the use of a military title in connection with certain commercial enterprises.
- prohibition of the use, possession, sale or introduction into any military unit or post of any dangerous drug as specified therein.

While Army Regulation 600-50 does not provide specific answers to all ethical questions that DA personnel might face in the course of their duties, it does provide essential guidelines concerning those situations most frequently encountered. (Army Personnel letter).

Color TV uses more energy

The color television set is one of the largest users of energy in the typical American household. According to the Edison Electric Institute, a solid state color set uses about 320 kilowatt hours per year and a tube set uses about 528. A black and white solid state set uses 100 kilowatt hours while a tube type uses 220. A color TV uses more electricity than everything but your major kitchen appliances, your hot water heater, and your heating and cooling systems.

You can save a lot of energy by turning the set off when no one is watching and viewing a show together as a family instead of using different sets scattered throughout the house.

If your set has an "instant on" switch, it is using the equivalent of a 20-watt bulb burning 24-hours per day. Why not turn your "instant on" switch off, or if that is not possible, install an off-on switch in the television cord so that you can save energy and money. (The Push Pin News).

A Ledger-Enquirer Newspaper published in the Interest of the Personnel of Fort Benning

Benning soldiers star on TV

"The New Breed," a 26-minute color documentary about today's soldiers — Ft. Benning soldiers — will be broadcast on WTVM (Channel 9) at 6 p.m. Sunday.

The film will be a part of the Columbus Jaycee's "Focus" program which highlights community topics.

Filmed in its entirety here, "The New Breed," features trainees of the AIT Bde, as well as female soldiers in the Airborne Department, OCS and the Aviation Division.

Selection team visits here

If you are ready to accept the challenging job of an Army recruiter, you should meet the United States Army Recruiting Command (USAREC) Selection Team scheduled to be here Monday through Thursday.

Men and women, in grades E-5 through E-7 with GT scores of 110 (waiverable to 100), who have a valid driver's license and a good military record are encouraged to attend one of the briefings.

USAREC cannot take soldiers who are serving on an enlistment with a variable reenlistment bonus, a selective reenlistment bonus or where a cash enlistment bonus was paid.

Briefings will be held in Bldg. 75, room 201 and will start at 8 a.m.

For those NCOs who are unable to attend one of the morning briefings, the selection team will conduct an additional briefing at 7 p.m. Wednesday. Additonal information can be obtained by calling the Volunteer Army Branch at 544-2061 or 544-4944.

Red Cross wants yours

"I vant to suck your blooood," the American Red Cross says. Their Blood Bank is in urgent need of donors to insure continued plasma support to hospitals in the Columbus/Phenix City area.

A blood donor drive will be held here Monday through Wednesday to provide civilian employees the opportunity to participate in the program. All civilian employees who aren't eligible for the routine medical sarvices provided by Martin Army Hospital are especially encouraged to participate.

Combat Support Hospital deployed to Ft. Stewart

By Jon Kissane

Elements of the 2nd Combat Support Hospital, 34th Medical Bn, have deployed to Ft. Stewart, Ga. to provide support to the installation's hospital, which was damaged by fire last week.

The 2nd Combat Support Hospital (CSH), commanded by LtCol. Peter K. Iber, responded immediately to the request for assistance which was received late Friday. The CSH staff worked throughout the holiday weekend to plan and prepare the needed MUST (Medical Unit, Self Contained, Transportable) equipment for deployment and it was moved to Ft. Stewart by motor transport Monday.

Fire destroyed three of the four operating rooms at the Ft. Stewart hospital. The 2nd CSH is providing its operating room, central material service and two recovery rooms as well as one of its turbine power plants which will provide the MUST with all its utilities, including heat, electricity, surgical suction and hot water.

LtCol. Iber and his team of soldiers were flown to Ft. Stewart by the 121st Aviation Co of the 34th Medical Bn. Upon arrival they placed and set up the equipment, on ramps provided by Ft. Stewart facility engineers. The MUST is scheduled to remain operational for approximately five months, until the operating rooms are repaired.

The MUST operating room and sterile preparation service are completely self contained in large metal expandable shelters, which fold to less than half their operating size for shipment. Slightly smaller folding shelters used for transporting medical equipment will be used as the recovery rooms.

Once in place and expanded, all of these shelters are connected by insulated corridors, which are also connected to the main hospital at Ft. Stewart. The turbine power unit will be operated approximately eight hours a day during the routine surgical schedule.

The 2nd CSH, a FORSCOM unit, is well prepared to work with the Health Services Command Hospital. In December it was set up and operated in front of Martin Army Hospital in a joint MEDDAC/2ndCSH exercise called COMEDREX (Combined Medical Readiness Exercise).

Opportunity doesn't knock

Would you believe that almost everyone who lives in your barracks is basically honest? You are, and you tend to think the same about others. But given the opportunity, a normally honest type may take advantage of favorable circumstances to advance his or her own cuase, i.e., rip you off.

Look at it like this: You wouldn't steal money from a bank because it's too well guarded. But if you found a $5 bill lying beside somebody's bunk you might pick it up while nobody is watching. You can think of plenty of reasons why you should have it, instead of the other guy. You also try not to think about the guy who "lost" it.

Now take it a step further. You're in the shower room and Pvt. Doe is in the shower with a head full of suds. His pants are not. Sooooo . . . while Doe has his eyes closed rinsing the shampoo out, you gently lift his wallet out of his pants. You're gone before he opens his eyes. He can't pin it on you because there were several guys in and out and he really didn't notice who they were. The opportunity presented itself, and you, not usually the felonious type, took advantage of it and "enriched" yourself.

"Not me," you say? Probaby not, but don't be Pvt. Doe, either. While the thief may feel a twinge of guilt later, he still has the cash and ol' Doe can only kick himself for trusting his buddies.

Don't get the wrong idea. Everybody should get to know the people he or she lives with. Be friendly, but don't be dumb. They may all be great guys or gals, but you don't know what any one of them may do if given the opportunity.

Play it safe. Don't give them the chance. Lock your valuables in your wall locker whenever you're away — even if only for a moment! Lock it when you take a nap. Lock it even if you're playing cards right in front of it and may have had one too many at the bowling alley after work.

All of this will help keep honest people honest. Next, consider the guy who takes the opportunity a step further. He's not as honest as you, and given the opportunity will greatly expand his holdings at your expense.

Say you're practicing formation for a funeral detail and you leave all your small valuables secured in your wall locker. But it's common knowledge that you keep your camera gear in your footlocker because it won't all fit in your wall locker. Pvt. Doe is still seething because he had to sell his stereo to make his car payments after his wallet was taken. The man at the pawn shop said he would exchange the stero for something else of equal value if Doe could "find" something. Doe just took your footlocker.

Don't just think you're secure. Be sure! Are your stereo system and footlocker chained to a bed or wall? Is your motorcycle locked up? And your car, is it locked, with no valuables sitting where it can be seen in the passenger compartment? Where is it parked?

Too much to think about? You have too much at stake not to. Preventing crimes against yourself will become second nature with just a little practice. Pretty soon you won't even think about protecting your hard-earned possessions from the passing opportunist. (FORSCOM).

News in brief

. . . . . Women can carry them but men aren't allowed to

"The Army's policy is that women may carry umbrellas while in uniform but men are not allowed to," said a DA official, "and that policy is not likely to change."

While this difference in policy might appear to be a double standard, DA says this isn't the case. The optional umbrella policy for women was approved in June 1972 and was based on the fact that women's hairstyles are different.

"The average woman spends considerable time and money having her hair set and styled," the official explained. "Allowing her to use an umbrella to protect her hairdo from moisture is fully justifiable as a personal consideration."

The Air Force and Marine Corps have also recently decided not to change their rules on allowing men to carry umbrellas.

. . . TDY regulation changes

Soldiers can no longer collect the lodging per diem allowance if they lodge with friends or relatives while on TDY.

This change applies to travel within CONUS only. In overseas areas a soldier is still authorized to collect 50 percent of the lodging per diem rate for the locality concerned, even if he lodges with friends or relatives.

If the TDY location is a military installation, the soldier must obtain a statement of non-availability of government quarters before reimbursement for commercial lodging may be granted.

. . . Prayer celebration here

The World Day of Prayer celebration will be held at The Infantry Center Chapel on March 3 from 10 to 11:30 a.m. This service, sponsored at Ft. Benning by the Protestant Women of the Chapels, will be built around the theme "Community Spirit in Modern Living." The order of service was prepared by church women of Canada and will be shared by women around the world.

Mrs. Forrest Mobley, wife of an Episcopal Minister from Stone Mountain, Ga. will be the featured speaker. The program will be directed by Mrs. Sally Langendorf.

All persons at Ft. Benning and the Columbus area are invited to attend the service and make this truly a time of community in spirit as we pray together and give to meet theneeds around the world.

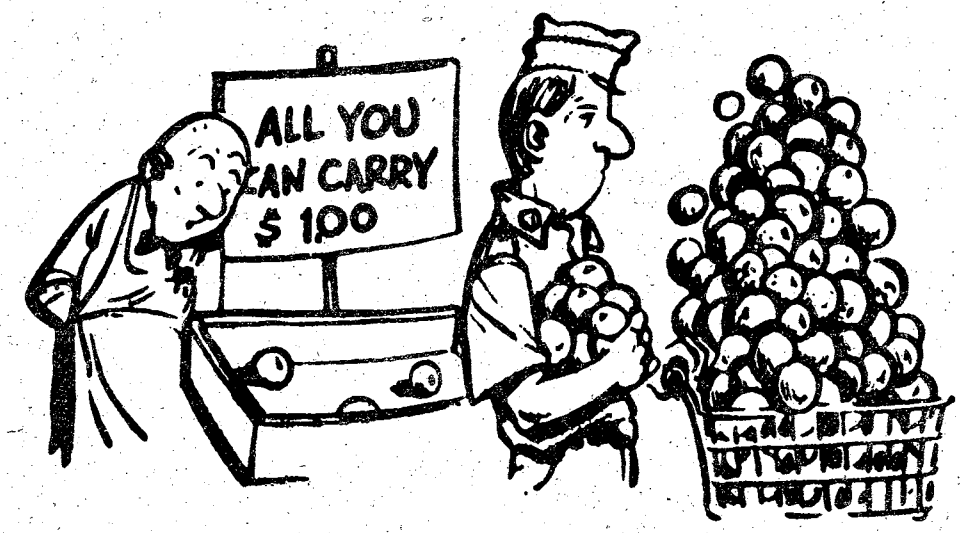
Readers respond on baggers' salary

In the February 17 issue of The Bayonet, the question was raised on the subject of paying commissary baggers a standard salary.

Here are the facts: On July 30, the Department of the Army plans to implement a two percent surcharge which would automatically be deducted from the shopper's bill, in order to pay these baggers wages.

According to Jose Fantauzzi, the commissary officer here, there will most likely be a separate line for those shoppers who would rather bag their own groceries and not pay the two percent surcharge.

The following articles were received from interested individuals who wanted to voice their views.



I'd rather do it myself!

It's tough living on tips--well, who asked you to?

No one is asking or expecting the commissary baggers to live on tips. It has been a voluntary service since it began. Applicants apply for permission to bag groceries. There is no guaranteed pay and there is no obligation on the part of the bagger to perform any service other than putting grocery bags in commissary patrons' cars.

It began as an opportunity for underprivileged male teen-agers of military families to earn money after school, weekends and during the school vacations. Admittedly, the original concept has expanded to include any person, male or female, teen-ager, housewife, retiree or moonlighting GI. This has afforded many individuals the opportunity for part time employment and the opportunity to make some spending money.

In today's society, especially on military reservations, there are virtually no opportunities for teen-agers to obtain employment. If exception is taken to this with the summer employment program in mind, note the program is geared to the destitute, minority applicant — the middle income teen-ager rarely is called even for an interview.

Another injustice to be considered in the proposal which would automatically add a two percent surcharge to the total of all patrons' bills is that not everyone desires or uses the services of the bagger. Arbitrarily charging everyone is unfair.

Adoption of the guaranteed salary will result in a decrease in the number of individuals who will have the opportunity to work. Administrative costs to carry out the program will reduce the take of the baggers. The two percent will not find its way into the pockets of the baggers — it goes without saying that the supervisors are not going to be working for the minimum wage.

It will result also in not enough baggers to handle the demands during peak hours. The commissary patron has all ready paid his two percent surcharge for this service — Who carries out the groceries then? The Checker? Mr. Fantauzzi?

But the real victims of this proposal are the teen-agers. They have no experience in anything. Employers will not even talk to them. Selling anything to their Fort Benning neighbors is prohibited by regulations. However their need to earn spending money through their own labor and initiative is real and immediate. Removing this opportunity for unstructured part-time employment cruelly discriminates against the young and inexperienced worker.

Speaking out

Two percent increase unfair

In reference to the "Glad you asked" column in the Bayonet, dated February 17; since you didn't ask me, I feel it necessary to tell you that I do not approve of a two percent increase in my commissary bill to pay salaries to baggers.

On page 22 of the same issue, John Hart's article lists three possible courses of action:

Use a Non-Appropriated Fund instrumentality and collect a "user charge".

Contract out the serving charging only the users,

Dispense the bagging service.

I prefer the latter course. I would expect that the cashiers and the customers could work together to get the groceries from the cart to the car. Most civilian groceries don't have a delivery service tothe car and the cashiers do most of the bagging. This would mean slower lines and a severe management challenge to our Commissary Officer to schedule more cashiers during high demand periods. The first two courses of action include management costs as well as a salary which is an increase in bureaucracy.

For once I find myself in agreement with Congressman Aspin in his efforts to save the taxpayers some money. The Civil Service Commission appears to be the enemy of the taxpayer; they want to provide four years back pay to 10,000 baggers who have already been tipped. Who is going to return our tips? Nobody.

Hospital survey showed overall satisfaction

An outpatient survey taken during November and December at Martin Army Hospital facilities showed an overall favorable response in areas of patient satisfaction.

The survey was designed as an attempt to measure various perceptions patients have about the care they receive, the central appointment system, and whether they are aware of the functions of the Patient Affairs Liaison (PAL) Office. It did not, in any way, attempt to study the quality of care received.

Surveys were distributed to each major specialty clinic, the emergency room, acute minor illness clinic (AMIC) and five of the eight troop medical clinics (TMC's). The number of questionnaires distributed was dependent on the daily average of each clinic. However, as a minimum, 35 to 40 questionnaires were given in order to give the clinic enough completed surveys to be statistically comparable.

A total of 700 forms were distributed to the various clinics and 653 or 93 percent were returned. Forty-one percent of the outpatient daily average visitors were surveyed. Numerical values from one to five were given for each of the possible responses, 1 — Never, 2 — Seldom, 3 — Sometimes, 4 — Usually, and 5 — Always. The average response to the total ambulatory care system fell between 4 — Usually and 5 — Always. The two areas which fell below this acceptable standard were adequate parking and in some clinics, the waiting time.

Examples of the questions on the survey form are: Do you receive friendly and courteous service from the clerical personnel in this clinic? Are your questions concerning your treatment answered to your satisfaction? Do you think the waiting time in this clinic is reasonable? Do you receive your appointment in a reasonable period of time?

The survey also determined that 40 percent of the people surveyed had knowledge of the Patient Affairs Liaison (PAL) function, which is to act as a go-between for troubled or dissatisfied patients and the service involved. 1st Lt. Edward Ponatoski and his staff, located in PAL next to the pharmacy lobby, are available for consultation from 8 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. or by calling 544-2788.

Art exhibition, auction planned

The Officers' Wives' Club will present an art exhibition and auction at the Officers' Open Mess March 4 beginning at 6:30 p.m.

Art lovers and collectors will have an opportunity to preview works of art by such masters as Rockwell, Dali, Curry, Miro, Chagall, Kelly, and many others from 6:30 to 8 p.m. The collection consists of original lithographs, etchings, water-colors, oil paintings and other graphics signed by the renowned artists.

A Steamship Round buffet will be served from 6 to 8 p.m. at the cost of $6.50 per person. Dinner reservations must be made no later than Monday. They may be made by calling 682-0640.

The auction and dinner are open to the general public.

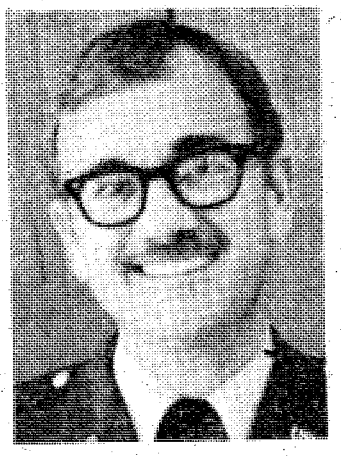
Glad you asked . .

What kind of entertainment do you think is needed on Ft. Benning?

By Sue Davis

Sgt. Charles Gissendanner, 586th Engr Co

A wider updated variety of movies would be one suggestion; another would be a varied selection of entertainment at the Top 5 Club — someone besides Joe Tex. Talent shows more often would also be a welcome form of entertainment.



Maj. (Chaplain) Tom Carroll, McGraw Manor Community Life Center

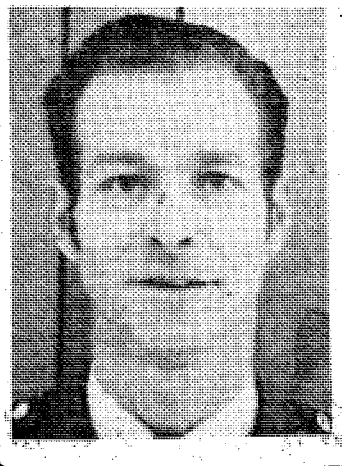
I believe we need more rock concerts that young dependents and enlisted would enjoy. I would also highly recommend a dinner theater open to the entire Ft. Benning community using local talent.

Pvt. Mary I. Joiner, 324th Personnel Service Company

I think that Ft. Benning needs entertainment geared more towards Christian activities such as gospel shows. Most of these activities seem to be off-post.

Sgt. Gene Dunn, Hqs Cmd, Aviation Division

I'd like to see more top names at the NCO Club (ie: rhythm and blues, rock and roll and country and western performers), plus more publicity about goings on outside of Ft. Benning to include trips to concerts in Atlanta or Montgomery.



SFC N.R. Saunders, Co A Hqs Cmd

I would like to see more family entertainment and more top name personalities from the music and comedy fields. I think we could keep a lot more folks on the post if we had more top names such as — Waylon Jennings, Barry Manilow. The athletic facilities are good but the forms of entertainment could be improved.

Letters to the editor

Reader believes women have right to fight

I realize Bev Lockhart's article "Combat no place for a WAC," in the February 17 Bayonet is a commentary which entitles her to voice her opinion.

But, I personally feel that her opinion represents a very limited number of women in the Army. The Army is not forcing any women into a combat arms branch; it is strictly a volunteer situation.

Also I believe most men's attitudes have changed sufficiently to allow them to fight side-by-side with a woman soldier without deterring his goal.

Let's face it — the type of woman attracted to a combat arms position is quite independent, capable, and self-sufficient. The men think of her as a "buddy" and fellow soldier — not some flighty female that needs protection.

In conclusion, if a man should be so insecure as to feel he can't treat a woman soldier as an equal, then I feel that it is his problem that needs remedying—not solving the problem by holding the women back only to feed his ego. I believe that we need to give both the men and women of today's Army the credit due them for their accomplishments in furthering equal rights.

B. Z., A longtime Army associate DA Civilan

Equality on the battlefront?

This is in response to the article "Women Assigned to Combat Arms" which appeared in the February 17 issue of the Bayonet.

While women officers in combat arms are uncommon, they are not unprecedented. In 1974, six women completed the Air Defense Artillery (ADA) Officer Basic Course; one was assigned as the executive officer of a firing battery in an Air Defense Group, and the other five were on orders to Air Defense units at Ft. Bliss. All six successfully completed their Air Defense schooling. Having accepted the challenge and proven their ability, they were forced to branch transfer. The only reason given was that Congress decided that Air Defense was a Combat Arm, and as such, women could not be assigned to it.

I can vouch for the accuracy of the above information, because I was one of those female officers. My experience, although disappointing, has provided an insight that has been valuable to me as an officer in an equally challenging branch, Military Intelligence.

I commend Candidates Barton and Shuffstall on accepting the challenge of ADA, and I am confident that they are capable of meeting that challenge. I sincerely hope that the Army has matured sufficiently in it's attitudes toward women and that Candidates Barton and Shuffstall will be allowed to continue to prove themselves.

Deborah Olson Read Capt., MI

The article mentioned above does not state that Brenda Barton and Donna Shuffstall are the first women to serve in Air Defense Artillery (ADA). It claims they are the first to be commissioned in a combat arms branch, which happens to be ADA.

I was aware of the women who completed the ADA basic course in 1974. They were 2nd Lts. Deborah Angel, Velma Brantley, Nancy Long, Roberta Schulz and Deborah Olson. Prior to that, 1st Lt. Susan Cheney had also become qualified and served with ADA. But—during this period, ADA was not considered a combat arm. The women were forced to change branches when ADA received this designation.

Who's bored?

By Achmed Chettgren

On a post as large as Ft. Benning, one would suspect there would be more of a diversity of activities than the usual bowling, billiards, clubing, pinball, or blaring rock concerts. Oh, occasionally one of the organizations on post may plan a trip to a sports event in Atlanta (E-5 and up only, as on one recent occasion) or something along those lines, but generally nothing unusual, unique, or just plain different.

What happened to professional plays, movies that are not a year old or more, clubs that women do not have reservations about going to, museum tours to Atlanta, or professional concerts? It becomes a bit monotonous having the library and its' books as the only alternatibve to the everyday, somewhat humdrum activities.

Ah, there are those who will say, "We've had things like that but attendance was poor." It begs the question "Were the activities given a chance?" or "Were they well publicized?" There are many people who walk around post saying, "They had that here? I didn't hear about it."

Rest assured there are many on Ft. Benning who would relish a creative and unique diversion from the 'I can always do that,' type of activities. Let us not assume that Ft. Benning is a simple minded entity. This post is comprised of people of varied backgrounds, interests, and levels of education and taste. Let's try to cover them all — or as many of them as possible — with a variety of unique special events. To use a somewhat hackneyed expression; "Variety is the spice of life."

Air Force pilot enjoys Army tour

Although he misses the sound of jets flying overhead, Air Force Col. Robert F. Brockmann is finding his three year Benning tour enjoyable.

"It's not the same, but I do occasionally get to hear the flop, flop of the helicopters," said Brockmann with a smile.

Brockmann, the Senior Air Force representative, is one of four Air Force representatives, is one of four Air Force personnel in the Infantry Officers Advanced Course and has attended various hours of instruction in other courses.

During their six-hour block of instruction, they present an organizational comparison of the Air Force and Army, plus a rundown on airlift aerial reconnaissance, close air support and weaponry. "Our colorful presentation including a lot of weapons delivery scenes," stated Brockmann, "provides a refreshing block of noise and action, which most students welcome as a break from other academic subject in the course.

The Air Force staff also acts in a liaison role to the Commandant and staff on all matters of Air Force doctrine and policy.

The veteran Tactical Air Command pilot has been at Benning a year. He began his military career in 1952 at Spence Field in Moultrie, Ga., where he went through pilot training.

During his career, Brockmann flew as a tactical fighter pilot in Korea, spent two years in the Navy exchange program flying from aircraft carriers, three years at Eglin Air Force Base, participating in the F4 weapons qualification tests and commanded the 480th Tactical Fighter Squadron at DaNang Air Base in Vietnam.

Headquarters type assignments were served at Headquarters, U. S. Air Force; U. S. Air Force Europe; 17th Air Force and 7th Air Force. Before coming to Benning, Brockmann was Inspector General for 12th Air Force, Austin, Tex. He attended Armed Forces Staff College at Norfolk, Va. and the Industrial College of the Armed Forces at Ft. McNair in Washington.

His awards include the Legion of Merit, Distinguished Flying Cross with two Oak Leaf Clusters, Air Medal with 12 Oak Leaf Clusters, Meritorious Service Medal, Bronze Star Medal and the Air Force Commendation Medal with two Oak Leaf Clusters.

The Iowa State native holds a Bachelor of Science degree in Civil Engineering from Iowa State University and a Masters Degree in Management from George Washington University.

Brockmann resides at Benning with his wife, Barbara and daughter Beth, a high school junior. He has another daughter, Brenda who is a freshman at Auburn University.

PROCLAMATION

HONORARY CITIZEN OF RHODE ISLAND

BY J. JOSEPH GARRAHY

GOVERNOR

WHEREAS, On February 6, 1978, a snowstorm of devastating proportions hit the State of Rhode Island. A storm which will always be known as the Great Blizzard of '78; and

WHEREAS, The severity of the "Blizzard" found Rhode Island in a state of emergency, unable, with its own resources, to cope fully with the effects of the storm; and

WHEREAS, You came to Rhode Island during our time of dire need and personally performed above and beyond the call of duty; and

WHEREAS, We are sincerely appreciative of your personal efforts to assist us in our time of need; and

WHEREAS, All of us want to invite you back to Rhode Island when you can enjoy yourself.

NOW, THEREFORE, I, J. JOSEPH GARRAHY, GOVERNOR OF THE STATE OF RHODE ISLAND AND PROVIDENCE PLANTATIONS, UNDER THE POWERS VESTED IN ME AS GOVERNOR, AM PLEASED AND PROUD TO MAKE YOU AN HONORARY CITIZEN OF THE STATE OF RHODE ISLAND AND PROVIDENCE PLANTATIONS.

J. Joseph Garrahy

GOVERNOR

There's no business like snow business . . .

Ten planes bringing cold, tired soldiers back from snow-blitzed Rhode Island arrived at Lawson Air Field Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

The soldiers, with their equipment and vehicles from the 43rd Engineer, 36th Engineer and 72nd Engineer Co, 197th Infantry Bde, were deployed to the Providence area as a part of a 1,000 person mobilization force coordinated by the U. S. Army Forces Command (FORSCOM), the Rhode Island state patrol and the National Guard on February 8th.

Just before the trip home a special ceremony was conducted by the Governor of Rhode Island, J. Joseph Garrahy. In the midst of snow removal equipment and giant C-5A transports, the Governor expressed his gratitude to the Army-Navy task force that has just rescued the smallest state in the union from the greatest storm in its history. The Governor applauded the untiring efforts of the task force and proclaimed them honorary citizens of Rhode Island.

Sp5 Darrell Hicks, Co B 43rd Engineer Bn unloaded his road grader from a C-141 Friday. He remarked. "This first things I want are a hot shower and sleep. It was hard work in that three feet of snow and the hours were long. Our equipment was in operation around the clock and we operators manned eight-hour shifts."

Also arriving on Friday's flight were Privates First Class Danny Hash and Roy Carroll. Hash, Co A 43rd Engineer Bn said, "I really enjoyed getting away from here and the people up there were so friendly and nice. The only bad thing was that I caught a cold."

Carroll, a South Carolina native from Hqs Co, 36th Engineer Gp, who experenced his first taste of snow exclaimed, "It looked so beautiful when we arrived, all that White stuff! But after a few days of removing all that snow from Interstate 95 I didn't think it was so pretty anymore."

Will power

Don't be caught dead without it

"Who, me? I don't need a will. I'm too young to die," the young soldier said. Two days later, he was killed in a car accident on the way to the post hospital to pick up his wife and newborn baby.

The state disposed of the soldier's estate according to it's laws — without regard to his desires or his family's needs. The soldier's wife and newborn baby were left without adequate funds to meet living and administrative expenses — not to mention death taxes.

If the soldier had only taken JAG's advice and made out a will . . . Instead, his family had only the small amount of Soldier's Group Life Insurance (SGLI) he had signed up for in basic training. But it wasn't enough to live on — not for long, anyway.

What's in a will?

A will is a written legal expression of your intent as to the disposition of your property after you die. If you have a valid will in existance at the time of your death, your estate will be distributed in accordance with the terms of the will under the supervision of the court in which the will is probated. If you die without leaving a valid will, your estate will be distributed in accordance with the laws of descent and distribution in the state of which you are a legal resident at the time of death, and in some instances, the state where your property is located at the time of death.

By having a will in effect at the time of your death you may:

- Designate who will receive your property
- Name the person you desire to serve as a guardian of your children
- Name the person you desire to serve as the executor of your estate
- Specifically provide that the executor be permitted to serve without bond and thereby save the estate the cost of a bond premium
- Make special bequests to persons outside your immediate family or to charitable institutions
- Take into account estate taxes so that beneficiaries will receive maximum proceeds from the will (The Tax Reofrm Act of 1976 has substantially changed estate and gift tax laws.)

Proper preparation important

Although a will is no more than a formal written legal declaration indicating the desires of the testator, it must be properly prepared and executed so as to comply with legal requirements. For this reason, you should always consult your legal assistance officer or a civilian attorney to write and assist you in executing your will.

Before going to a legal assistance officer or a civilian attorney, you need to gather the information he or she will need to assist you in making your will. You should have a list of property owned — both real and personal — including bank accounts, insurance, stocks and bonds, home, business and personal effects.

If you don't wish to itemize all personal property, list only the items for which you wish to dictate distribution.

You will also need a list of beneficiaries including the names and addresses of those who are to be your heirs and what you wish each to receive upon your death. In most cases, it's best not to say what each beneficiary is to receive in dollars because your estate may diminish or increase. Instead, it is generally better to allot a percentage or fractional part of the whole to each beneficiary.

A trust fund may be set up for those who are inexperienced in handling money or business affairs.

You will also need the name and address of your executor, guardian and/or trustee. It is advisable to secure a person's consent before naming them as such. Decide what authority and limits you wish him or her to have. Provide for someone to serve as guardian in the event both parents die. When parents fail to provide for the custody of their children, family discord and separation of children sometimes occur. You may wish to name a co-executor or a successor executor in the event the first one named cannot serve.

Use of standardized forms of wills should be avoided. If you make a will and wish to keep a copy with your for reference purposes or to deliver a copy to the principal beneficiary or executor named in the will, any copy so retained or delivered should be a "confirmed" unsigned copy (i.e., it should bear no signature; but your name as the maker and the names of the witnesses should be printed or typed thereon for information purposes).

Changing a will

The passage of time and changing conditions make it advisable to review the contents of a will periodically. Events such as marriage, birth of children, divorce, death of a named beneficiary, change in domicile, and changes in property owned occurring after a wil is made often affect its provisions.

Never try to change your own will by cross-

Old cemeteries reveal Benning past

With the land acquisitions in 1918 and 1941-42, Ft. Benning assumed the responsibility of maintaining private cemeteries, but until recently, there was no record as to how many.

Numerous private cemeteries are located within the boundaries of the Ft. Benning Military Reservation with the oldest headstone depicting births in the late 1700's and deaths as early as 1864. Several of the cemeteries have but one marker to show a single burial, while two of the larger ones have as many as 200 gravesites.

The maps plotted at the time of the second land acquisition showed only 29 private cemeteries on the reservation. But, through efforts of the Buildings & Grounds Division, DFAE, about 3,000 gravesites have been discovered and recorded. The systematic recording of gravesites and cemeteries was started in 1969 when they were physically inventoried and the Ground Maintenance Branch was successful in locating cemeteries and plotting them on the cemetery map.

SFC (Ret.)) John Zebreski, an employee of the Grounds Maintenance Branch, tackled the enormous task of clearing the lots, taking inventory of both marked and unmarked gravesites and maintaining the cemetery grounds.

Maintenance of the cemeteries includes clearing the underbrush, erecting fencing and gates, cleaning headstones and sometimes repairing broken headstones. Zebreski has added trees and shrubbery to several of the barren plots.

Leads to locations of cemeteries in the remote areas of the reservation came from the workforces of Forestry Branch and the Fish and Wildlife Branch, as well as military who bivouac or camp in the outlying areas. Usually in the vicinity of a burial plot is a chimney, well or other landmark that relates back to a settlement in that area in days past.

Echoes from days gone by spin tales of settlers who traveled from as far away as Pennsylvania, North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia and Rhode Island. Individuals buried here also represent soldiers of the Revolutionary War, Civil War, and World War II.

Some interested parties of the surrounding communities have called in to add some of the history of the old settlements.

Most inquiries furnish only a general idea of the area of burial and sometimes no information as to birth or death of deceased; however, the majority of inquiries are satisfied.

James Boone of Richmond, Texas, Mrs. Thomas F. Patrick of Satellite Beach, Fla., and Reverend Gene Walters of Tallahassee, Fla., are but three to write letters seeking information regarding ancestors.

Recently Miss Mildred Smyth of South Haven, Mich., came to search for the final resting place of her grandfather. The only information she had was that his name was

450 Reservists arrive

Reservists from the 80th Division home based in Virginia, began their annual two-week active duty training here last week with the AIT.

Coming in three, 150-man increments, the reservists are preparing for the reorganization of their division. Presently, the mission of the 80th Division is Basic Training and Combat Support Training. After the reorganization, they will be able to conduct Infantry OSUT.

In preparation for this transition, drill sergeants and Committee Group members are undergoing requalification training for OSUT. All 80th Division personnel will be individually evaluated by commanders and allowed to assume as much training responsibility as possible.

The final increment of the reservists will be arriving here March 12.

The craft center is offering beginner's classes in cabinet making. For information and registration contact the Education Development Division, Bldg 35, room 318 or call 545-1681.

"We are ready and willing to answer any questions and to teach beginners in all the crafts we offer." said Jack Stewart, craft center director.

In the photography department, they have facilities to develop both black and white and color film. The center furnishes chemicals for black and white but not color processing. Paper and the necessary chemicals for color are on sale in the store.

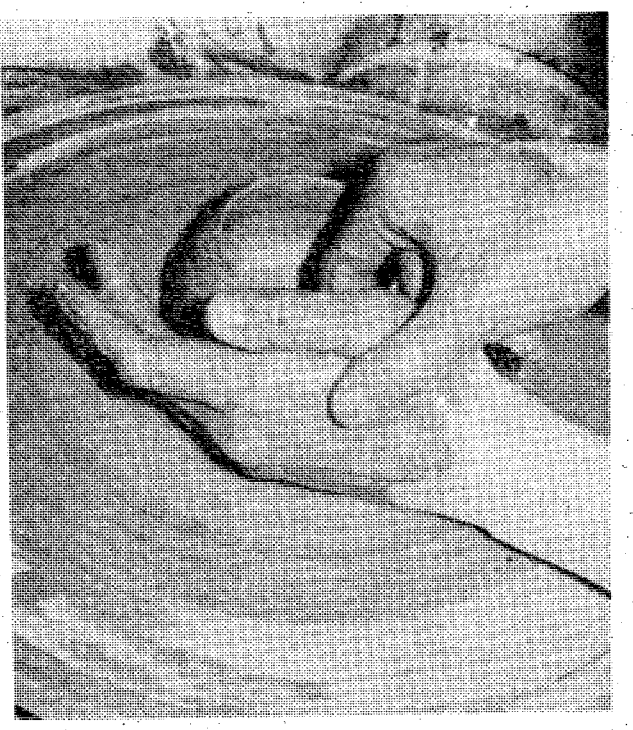
The craft center also has facilities for lapidary, jewelry, enameling, leather craft, weaving, modeling, basketry, candle craft, electronics, painting, decoupage, plastics, and sculpture.

"If people want it we'll get it," replied Stewart.

According to Stewart the craft shops sales store has all the necessary supplies for the crafts offered there.

The Kelley Hill multiple craft shop located in Bldg 9049 also offers leather craft, candle making, photo and woodworking.

All you have to do is walk through the doors and start.



English language classes slated

A workshop to train persons to teach English to non-English speaking persons will be held at the Religious Education Center, Bldg. 2605, Monday through Wednesday from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

The workshop will be centered around the skills, techniques and patterns used in teaching conversational English, reading and writing to non-English speaking persons.

The purpose of this workshop is to prepare you to teach in the English programs sponsored by the Chaplain Division each Tuesday morning from 9:30 to 11:30 at the Religious Education Center and each Monday evening from 7 to 9 at the McBride School on Custer Rd.

Wives of American soldiers, Allied officers stationed here and Vietnamese refugees are enrolled in the classes taught by volunteers.

Mildred Blankenship, associate director of Christian social ministries, Home Mission Board, Southern Baptist Convention, Atlanta, will direct the workshop.

Everyone is invited to attend. A free nursery will be provided for small children of workshop participants upstairs in Bldg. 2605. Each person is requested to bring a sack lunch for her/him self and nursery children. Drinks will be furnished. Lunch break will be flexible. For additional information call Marguerite Waldrop, director of Religious Education at 5444594 or 545-2366.

Promotion board advances officers

The Army Promotion Selection Board has chosen fourteen chief warrant officers here for promotion.

Those selected include three soldiers who will advance to CWO4, the highest warrant officer rank.

They are Chief Warrant Officers Jackey R. Aldridge, Claudus Birdsong Sr. and Jackie L. Todd, all from the 36th Engineer Gp.

Eleven others have also been slated for advancement from CWO2 to CWO3. The majority are in the 34th Medical Bn, which employs most of the aviators on post.

From the 34th, they are: Chief Warrant Officers Daniel O. Baxter, Harold F. Butler Jr., Rick L. Egelus, Burton E. Etheridge III, John O. Ford, Richard J. Kessock, Donald R. McCoy and Michael F. Russell.

The 197th Infantry Bde has two successful candidates — Chief Warrant Officers Daniel G. Beasley and Perry A. Burke.

Chief Warrant Officer Clarence E. Martin Jr. was the only one from his unit, the Third Region U. S. Army Criminal Investigation Command.

He uses fantasy, class and a pinch of salt

By Achmed Chettgren

The diners exchanged pleasantries, laughing heartily between bites of filet maignon, lobster tails, rock cornish hen and steamship roast. Their tables were covered in white, with ornate floral arrangements. and flickering candles. Around them sat ice sculptures of swans, bathed in a plethora of colored lights in ever-changing patterns. A huge swordfish molded from shortening was the centerpiece of a large table upon which sat a wide variety of pastries and other desserts.

Waitresses of varied nationalities, dressed in gowns and fancy dresses, busied themselves serving coffee, tea and other drinks. All of them looked as if they just stepped off the cover of a fashion magazine as they gave the visitors pleasant smiles and cordial greetings.

The Matre'd, James Archuleta, dressed in a white suit, surveyed the dimly lit room and smiled, for another of his fantasies had become a reality. No, this was not some fancy restaurant on Paris' Champs Elysee or even downtown Columbus. It was one of SFC Archuleta's many special dinners presented in his dining facility at the 3rd Bn, 1st AIT Bde. The aforementioned dinner was one prepared to honor the Columbus Jaycees recently.

SFC Archuleta, who has been in the Army 17 years, didn't start his career in the military as a chef. "When I came in I was an engineer," he said. "That was the job in the early sixties. You could make a lot of rank in it too."

Began as an engineer

After a year in the service, SFC Archuleta was assigned to Korea. He was there a short time when he heard of the need for a cook. "I had been cooking since I was 13 years old so they made me a cook. That's what I've done ever since." Aside from being a cook in Korea, SFC Archuleta has been a mess sergeant in Vietnam, Germany and a hospital diet cook in France. He has been stationed here for the last 18 months, assigned to the Co A, 3rd Bn, AIT Bde.

SFC Archeluta loves to cook. "I experiment with gourmet cooking at home, but my wife does most of the cooking (at home). She's a very good cook. For the most part, in this job you've got to have heart," he added pensively. "You've got to care. Even with the long hours, the schedule changes and menu changes you have to keep doing your best. And these guys are the best," he said, waving at his staff.

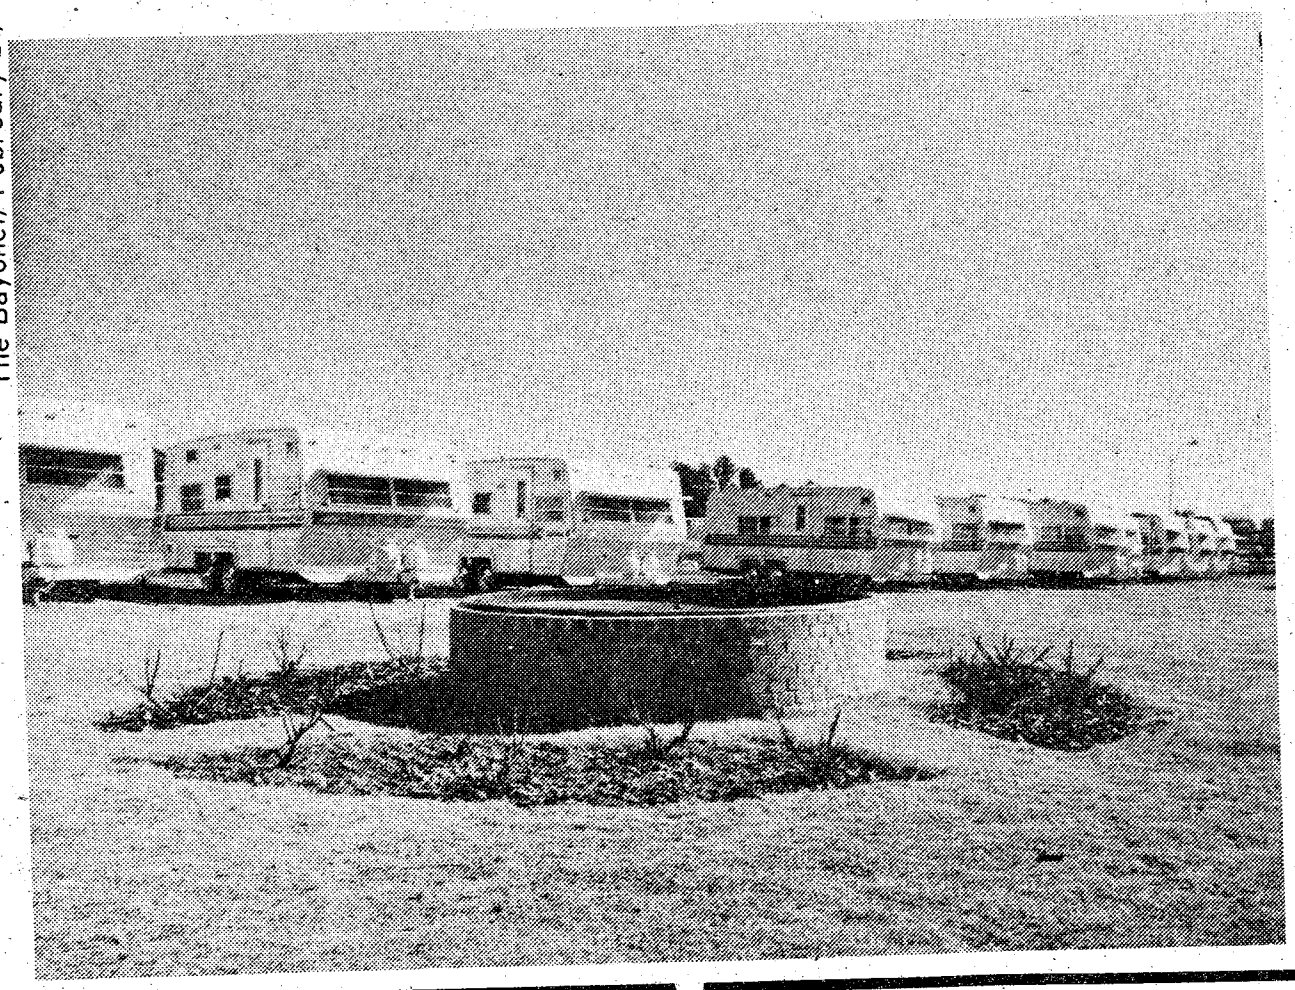
Camping a Way of Life



If you want to be a success in life, do something you know and love doing. That's exactly what Emily & Dick Ford did when they went into the RV business at Ford's RV Center in 1972. And they have been very successful. "Before we ever went into business, camping was a family institution with us. It brought us so much closer together that anytime we mentioned camping and the children were around that was it, they were going." says Mrs. Ford. Out of their love for camping came the knowledge and knowhow that the Ford's put to use so well today in their business. They got into business because they felt that there was a need for a full service RV Dealer here, one that could help residents and passers by as well. By servicing most any make or model RV, offering factory trained service specialists, accessories, dump station, LP gas, refrigerator service, tere business has become truly Full Service.

Camping has become B-I-G in the United States today and the Recreational Vehicle popularity has mushroomed. From only 6% of the population owning an RV in 1972 the figure has soared to 20% of the population of the United States that own 1 or more Recreational Vehicles today. And at the top of the list of RV's sits Coachmen. Coachmen is the # 1 name in RV's in the country today. Fords RV Center carries Coachmen exclusively for many reasons but the main one is T-R-U-S-T. Trust in the product, confidence in the workmanship and dependability, thats' the only way that Ford's can gain your trust. With a line like Coachmen not only is your business made sound, but you have a complete line of 74 floor plans and models available all from 1 dealer. That means you buy from one source and can buy from him in greater volume and receive a better price.

If you are a camper already, you know the joy and togetherness that the great outdoors can give to you and your family.

If you don't camp now, you will soon. Come by Ford's RV Center today and discover the great outdoors in a Recreational Vehicle. It could be the best thing that ever happened to you.

Archuleta

Barracks on Sand Hill in December, Archuleta has had to make the transition from cooking for one company to running a consolidated dining facility for five companies. "It's been tough. For the past 9 weeks we've been working seven days a week, about 15 hours a day, feeding 2,200 people a day. And these guys still work hard and take pride in their work," said Archuleta proudly.

He has received more than 25 letters of appreciation and commendation for his dilegent work on daily meals as well as on special dinners and luncheons. "I guess it's because I believe in class. I fantasize about different dishes and how I want to present them. Then I go out and do it. And I tell the other cooks my philosophy: If I look at it and I will eat it, only then will I serve it to anyone else. If you can't do that, don't serve it."

Support is the key

Aiding Archuleta in his striving for excellence is the support he says he gets from his superiors. "In running a good mess hall, support is the name of the game. I get just about whatever I ask for. The Colonel (LtCol. James W. Shugart III, battalion commander) has been great. He gives us his utmost support."

Archuleta has not limited himself to just studying the Army's methods of cooking. "I done a lot of studying on my own. When I retire, I plan to go to a gourmet school and then go into catering." He also feels that the Army cooking schools are not a way to teach new cooks. "Every mess sergeant has a method. No two (mess sergeants) are alike. I think it is better for these people to OJT. They learn more and they learn faster.

"And the Army is getting too commercialized. It doesn't help a cook to take something that is frozen and heat it up. I think a good cook should be able to cook from scratch. It would be cheaper for the Army to cook from scratch than to use prepared foods."

What does Archuleta look for when a new cook is assigned to his dining facility? "Attitude. If their attitude is bad then he'll never make it. If he is good, then we can work together and he'll do well. I also believe that if you keep a cook you should promote a cook. I don't like to keep bad cooks. A good cook that I keep I will try to promote. They deserve it. It inspires them to work harder too."

Mama's cooking

SFC Archuleta takes the same care and pride with his everyday meals as he does with the special ones. "These guys (AIT soldiers) are used to mama's cooking. I try to make the meals as close to mama's as possible. I also give them things that mama never made. A lot of these guys never had some of the dishes I make, or even some of the desserts. The real problem is that the guys don't really have the time to appreciate the food with the tight shcedules and stuff," said SFC Archuleta.

He also considers his job a challenging one. "We have to feed these people three meals a day on an allowance of $2.89 a person per day. It's not easy but we manage to do it. You can't do that at home and eat as well as they do here."

During his limited free time, SFC Archuleta likes to coach children in baseball, football and basketball. He has coached American Youth Association teams in football and baseball in Germany, leading them to championships. Currently, he is coaching a Pop Warner football team in Columbus. He has a wife, Mary, and two sons, Troy, 6, and David, 14.

Foreign Travel

The Department of the Army currently requires prior notification of all foreign TDY and leave travel. This can be accomplished by timely submission of DA From 2473 (Notification of Foreign Travel). Units or activities processing individuals for foreign travel, TDY or leave must contact the USAIC Directorate of Security before executing the forms. Forms are available from the Directorate of Security, USAIC.

For more information call 545-4772.

Attention Rifle Owners

The firing of any caliber rifle on post is authorized only under the following circumstances:

- On established rifle ranges after permission has been obtained from the proper authority
- By MPs and Wildlife officials in conjunction with predatory animal control
- By MPs or personnel on post interior guard duty in the execution of their official duties

Although hunting in certain areas of the reservation is authorized, hunting with a rifle is not authorized. Accordingly, individuals observed with a rifle in an area where hunting is authorized are presumed to be hunting and are subject to apprehension.

Benning athletes race in marathon

On Sunday the Infantry Officers' Advanced Course 2-78 sponsored the Great Seven Mile Jack Daniel's Race. Forty-three contestants ran in events that started and ended in front of Doughboy Stadium.

Dave Fields placed first in the overall competition with the winning time of 39:57. John Smyth of the U.S. Marine Corps finished second with the time 41:59. Charles Triplet and Richard Favati placed third and fourth respectively with the times of 43:52 and 44:04.

According to faculty staff member, Maj. Jack Daniel, the competition was a success even with the slightly cool temperatures. He hoped that in the next race they have more public participation.

Overall winners, faculty racers and student competitors were the three categories in the race. The faculty members made a good showing in the competition by having runners in the top five places.

Pets need tender loving care, too

He's there to guard your home, bring in your newspaper, tear clothes off the clothesline, chew your socks and be a faithful companion. He's man's best friend — the dog. But whether he's a dog, cat, horse or parrot, the animal could have a disease which may be unknown to you.

Intestinal roundworms (parasites) have been a problem for pet and livestock owners and doctors for many years. There are numerous varieties and the health problems they present to man and animals seem to be more severe in less economically developed areas. For years it was believed that intestinal parasites were not a threat to man, but in 1952 researchers reported the occurrence of a disease in humans called "visceral larva migrans" caused by the common roundworm of dogs. This discovery quickly changed a previous dog problem to one having direct impact on human health.

Most dogs will harbor roundworm sometime during their lives. It is primarily a puppy and young dog problem but the animal's age does not necessarily make him immune. Adult parasites live in the small intestine. Eggs are passed with the stool and develop into an infectious stage within two weeks. The eggs are absorbed from the soil by other dogs, humans and smaller animals. These eggs hatch into a larval form and migrate through the wall of the intestine to the liver, lungs and other parts of the body.

In younger animals, the larvae are swallowed and pass to the small intestine where they mature and lay more eggs.

In pregnant dogs, the migrating larvae may enter the uterus and infect the developing puppies. In many cases, the pups may have adult parasites in their intestines within three weeks after birth.

The adult female parasites lay as many as 200,000 eggs daily. These eggs are very resistant to adverse conditions and may remain alive as long as five years. However, in hot, dry, sandy soil under direct sunlight they die within months.

In human cases, the patient ingests the infective eggs, they hatch, penetrate the wall of the intestine and enter the circulatory system. The resulting disease is not life threatening and the symptoms depend upon the number of eggs swallowed and the larvae's location in the body.

The disease is very difficult to diagnose in children. A number of skin and analysis tests have been developed, but none, as yet, seems to be infallible.

Prevention requires reasonable precautions on the part of pet owners and parents.

Rugby: a game for the players

By James Carter

Americans are discovering a sport that doesn't necessarily require tremendous athletic ability or a physique designed by a computer. The name of this sport — rugby.

A rugby team is composed of 15 players divided into two groups; the forwards and the backs. The forwards are also referred to as the scrum, scrummies, or to the back who is unfortunate enough to get caught by them as — the Pack!

The forwards' principal job is to get the ball and feed it out to the backs. They take part in scrums, lineouts and all those disorganized-looking pile-ups in which each team attempts to win the ball.

Players have assigned positions, tasks

Although to the casual spectator the forwards seem a mass of humanity, the players have actual positions and certain assigned tasks. In the front of the scrum you will find two big men (props) supporting a much smaller man (hooker). The props provide the foundation on which the power of the other scrummies can be brought to bear by pushing from behind. In addition, they support the hooker by allowing his feet to be free so he can "hook" the ball when it is put in.

The classic prop is distinguished by having no neck, standing 5'9" and weighing 240 pounds. Such men appear to be born, or hewn at the age of 30 and remain at the same age for 15 years, when they grow old overnight and retire from the game. Hookers are usually quite bald, toothless and have arms hanging ape-like at their sides.

Behind the props are the two "second row." This powerhouse pair, usually the tallest and heaviest men on the team, were once recognized by their inevitable cauliflower ears. Fortunately, the wearing of scrum caps or tape around the ears has reduced this feature.

Back row functions like U. S. Cavalry

Finally, there are the breakaways and the number eight. Together they form the "back row" of the scrum and function like the U.S. Cavalry or Marine Corps — always the first to the action with dash and elan. Their role is to control the ball once it has been passed back by the feet of the other scrummies and keep the ball in the scrum until the halfback asks for it. Then they toe it back somewhat like a center hike in football except the ball stays on the ground.

After that, the scrum breaks up. Since they are on the outskirts, they have the best chance to tackle an opposition player before the ball is passed out or help support their backs by picking up a loose ball. Such a job is a glamorous one, for although their errors are hard to detect, everybody sees their brilliant contributions.

The other seven men on the team are known as the backs. Their primary purpose is to do brilliant things with the ball once the forwards have provided it.

Courageous scrumhalf vital to game

The back closest to the forwards in lineouts, mauls or rucks is called the scrumhalf or halfback. He is often a diminutive man of great courage who follows at the heels of the forwards like a terrier; throwing the ball out to the other backs when the forwards produce it. He is as vital as the quarterback in football and attracts the same hostile attention from the opposition. He can be distinguished by his unique scrumhalf-pass which enables the ball to travel 25 to 30 feet at waist level with the tip perpendicular to the ground.

The man who has to catch this unique pass is the next back in line, known as the flyback. Due to his close proximity to the opposing scrum, the flyback has but a few seconds in which to determine how the backline will attack — kicking, passing, running or a combination of each.

Once he has made this decision, it is he who must initiate the action. Unfortunately, due to a bad pass or poor handling, the only option he usually makes is to die with the ball after a bone-crushing tackle and wait for his support.

If the flyback does option to pass the ball, it should go to the next two men in the backline; the inside and outside centers. These fine specimens of manhood can be distinguished by their massive thighs and enormous egos. Their primary purpose is, once given the ball, to run through or in most cases over, the opposition backs.

If Mr. Outside gets in a jam, he has the option of passing to the last man in the backline, the winger. There are two wingers, who unlike all the other players on the team, stay on their particular side of the field. The reason for this is that the wingers have a two-fold mission; one is to serve as an outlet for the outside center to pass to in the attack, and the other is to assist the fullback in covering the field on the defense.

Since the field is 75 yards wide, the wingers would run themselves into the ground if they didn't stay on one side and keep the play turned in. Since the ball rarely gets out to the winger before a bad pass is made or someone is tackled, the wingers are looked upon as glamorous people who often keep their hair in place throughout the game.

Following the flow of play 20 to 30 yards behind the other 14 players is the lonely safety of the team, called the fullback. He is the one who must make the last-ditch tackles and catch skyhigh balls kicked over his teammates' heads. He also must kick with computer accuracy for the out-of-bounds touch line. The man who plays this position must have a tremendous amount of cool since the only time he gets involved with the ball and play is in a desperate situation.

Players pose a triple threat

Rugby combines the team effort of soccer with the one aspect of football that draws the fans — hard tackling. Like football, rugby involves a team of men driving down a field and attempting to place a pigskin across the opposition's goal line. Each of the fifteen players is a triple threat in that anyone can run, kick or pass the ball.

The field is 10 yards longer and 20 yards wider than a football field, thereby allowing more playing room. In addition to the space, the action is longer with two 40-minute halves with a 10-minute rest period in between.

The play is accented similar to basketball in that there is no stopping until someone scores, the ball goes out of bounds or a rule is broken. The game is designed for the player and not the coach as there are no "time-outs" to discuss strategy but rather, each player makes independent decisions that affect the actions of the team.

Unlike football, the tackler doesn't have a $35 helmet or a $45 shoulder pad he can jam into the ballcarrier's gut to cause unnecessary damage. Instead, tackling in rugby is an art that must be carefully done, less the tackler receives greater punishment than he dishes out.

Equipment needed is minimal

In an article by Cecil Darby, he totalled the cost to outfit a single player of college level football at $164.75 each season, not counting three sets of practice equipment for each player. To outfit a rugger, it costs $16 for a good jersey, $5 for a pair of shorts, $3.50 for matching socks and $20 for cleated shoes — the total cost is $44.50.

Rugby has two seasons on the East Coast and is played year-round in California. The fall season runs parallel with football (regular season) and the spring season runs from March to May.

So there you have it; a game designed for the player. Rugby is low in cost, high in development of teamwork, physical conditioning, and mental attitudes that stress the true aspect of sportsmanship — playing a game fairly, with everybody having an equal chance to excel.

If you are interested in learning more about this sport, call 689-1788 or 689-0943. Experience is not necessary, only a desire to play.

Youth Ranch relies on contributions

An Infantry Officer Advanced Course (IOAC) student here received a special license plate recently from the executive director of Youth Opportunity Ranch, Inc., of Russell County, Ala., for his generous support of the program since July 1976.

The Ranch's T. Ivey Adams Jr. presented the plate, normally available for a $10 donation, to Capt. Martin E. Conkling who was an instructor with the Mortar Division of the Infantry School's Weapons Department before joining IOAC Class 2-78.

Youth Opportunity Ranch is a non-profit project aimed at setting up a home for youths ages 6 through 17 who have gotten into trouble.

The old Glenville School property six miles south of Pittsview has been acquired and the ranch is now being built. Initially male youths only will be accommodated but plans call for a separate housing unit for girls.

The Ranch's first residents will be placed by the Department of Pensions and Security, and courts will recommend later arrivals. The home will not be a detention facility, according to Adams. A houseparent couple and an associate houseparent couple will be engaged for the project.

Adams said the only present facility available for judges to place wayward youths is the Russell County Jail. To alleviate this situation until the ranch is finished, Adams and his organization have been offering a free counseling service to Russell County to help deal with juvenile problems.

Incorporated in March 1976, Youth Opportunity Ranch was founded by Juvenile Judge Ben W. Baker, who recognized the placement problems and the need to provide help and supervision for youths.

Adams is hopeful the ranch will be operating this summer. Donations are requested from individuals, churches and businesses and all gifts are tax-deductible. The ranch also needs workers, both skilled and unskilled, to build its facilities. For more information call 298-0952 or write P.O. Box 1331, Phenix City, Ala. 36867.

Pets

- Pets, especially puppies, should be checked for worms every six months. This can be accomplished easily by taking a stool sample to your veterinarian.
- Before female dogs are bred, they should be checked for worms to prevent infection of the puppies before birth.
- If puppies are in the house before they are fully trained, a thorough cleaning job must be done when they soil the floor. Animals should not be permitted to lick plates from the table or sleep on children's beds.
- Children should wash their hands after fondling animals.
- Dogs should not be allowed into food shops or permitted to soil parks, playgrounds or other public places. When animals are curbed in housing areas, the owner should use a small scoop and plastic bag to dispose of the feces properly.

If owners follow these guidelines, they will have greater chances for healtheir pets they can enjoy without fearing them as a source of infection.

Benning Lady

By Sandra Jackson

Newcomers Coffee

The monthly Newcomers Coffee will be held February 28 at the NCO Wives Clubhouse, Lawson Field. All NCO wives are invited to attend the coffee, held each fourth Tuesday of the month at 10 a.m.

2nd Bn, 1st AIR Bde Monthly Coffee

On February 14, the ladies of the 2nd Bn, 1st AIT Bde met in the Day Room of Co D for their monthly coffee.

The ladies were presented a most interesting talk by Mrs. Ann Brandenburg and Mrs. Donna Cline of Army Community Service ACS).

The Day Room was decorated in Valentine's Day theme and coffee and cake were enjoyed by all.

Newcomers to the battalion were Mrs. Kless, Co C, and Mrs. Riggs, Co E.

Mrs. Dwight L. Means and Co E hosted the coffee.

Exercise Classes Offered

Wanted: Ladies interested in forming an exercise class. Classes may be held on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. at the Community Life Center, Bldg. 8.

Evening classes may be formed if enough people are interested. Contact SSgt. J. Rodriguez at 545-1121/7363.

Elections

The 51st Co Officer Candidate Mates Club held an Organizational Coffee at Wigle Hall to elect club officers on February 10. They are: Penny Petersen, Chairman; Pat Chaikin, Co-chairman; Connie Lindsay, Secretary; and Madeline Grams, Treasurer; Katherine Gable, Publicity Chairman; Linda Marasco, Hospitality Chairman; Betty Franks, Telephone Chairman; and Jan Brewer, Fund Raising Chairman.

Honored guests were: Mrs. Louis J. Perry, wife of the commanding officer of 51st Co, and Mrs. Eugene Payton, Mrs. Michael Lewis, and Mrs. John Nash.

43rd Engr Bn Hail and Farewell

The officers and wives of the 43rd Engr Bn met on February 10 for their Hailand Farewell at Pritchards Restaurant.

After a seafood dinner, the executive officer, Maj. Joseph Simoneaux welcomed the new battalion commander and his wife, Lt. Col. and Mrs. Ernest Harrell.

Also welcomes were: The new operations officer and his wife, Maj. and Mrs. Jeffrey Mills; the new S-4 and his wife, Lt. and Mrs. Richard Cooper; and the new company commander of Co C and his wife, Lt. and Mrs. Joseph Murphy.

Fond farewells were given to: Capt. and Mrs. Ken Verhine, who are going to Germany; and Lt. and Mrs. James Reddin and Lt. John Hord, who are going to Ft. Belvoir, Va. for the Advanced Engineer Officer course.

Wills

ing out parts of it or writing in additions. This could cause your entire will to be revoked, leaving you without one at the time of your death. Instead, wills should be reviewed with the assistance of legal counsel whenever a change needs to be made.

Legal counsel should also be consulted concerning any will previously executed after discharge, relief from active duty, or other separation from service.

Probate proceedings

Upon your death, your executor takes the will to the proper court for probate. Generally, an estate is subject to probate if a decedent owned property in his own name.

Probate proceedings:

- Validate the will, if there is one
- Discover, collect, manage and protect estate assets until final distribution
- Settle claims of creditors
- Settle federal and state tax obligations
- Distribute the decedent's property to his heirs and beneficiaries

Your estate goes through court to protect your creditors and beneficiaries. Court proceedings allow time for both to prove their claims. A will does not take effect until it is probated in the court of the county where the testator maintained legal residence.

After death of the testator, the person who has custody of his will must deliver it to theprobate court. The executor (named in the will) represents the deceased in court. If there is no will or no executor named, the court appoints an administrator for this purpose.

The executor or administrator makes application for letters testamentary (Authority to act). The probate court issues such letters and publishes a notice of appointment in a newspaper published and distributed locally.

This notice tells all creditors of the decedent to file their claims within a given period of time or be forever barred from collecting them. Such notice is published once a week for four weeks.

Unless provision is made in a will to the contrary, upon the receipt of letters testamentary, the executor posts bond, and with two appraisers appointed by the court, makes an inventory and appraisal of the deceased's property. Periodci accounting to the court is required of the executor until he files for final settlement. If the settlement is approved by the court, the executor will then distribute the estate according to the terms of the testator's will.

If there is no will, the administrator named by the court follows this same procedure for settling an estate. Through your will you can relive your executor of much of this procedure if you sodesire, thus saving time and expense.

The best method

In most instances, a will is by far the best method of preparing your estate to pass upon your death, according to a JAG official. This is particularly true in a state like Alabama which does not readily recognize by statute ownership of property in joint tenancy with a right of sruvivorship.

If you don't have a will, it is suggested that you contact your legal assistance officer immediately to discuss your individual needs.

If you already have a will, you should review it with a legal officer annually, or as often as a change is needed.

During the next few weeks, we will look at various portions of Part 95, Federal Communications Commission Rules and Regulations.

Subpart C, paragraph 95.44. Exteral radio frequency power amplifiers prohibited.

"No external radio frequency power amplifer shall be used or attached, by connection, coupling attachment or in any other way at any Class D station.

"NOTE: An external radio frequency power amplifier at a Class D station will be presumed to have been used where it is in the operator's possession or on his premises and there is extrinsic evidence of any operation of such Class D station in excess of power limitations provided under the rule part, unless the operator or such equipment holds a station license in another radio service under which license the use of the said amplifier at its maximum rated power output is permitted."

Basically, what this all means is that any device which increases the carrier signal to the antenna in excess of four watts is not authorized on any Class D radio. Carrier signal is simply and unmodulated signal, or "dead key."

So, if your unmodulated carrier signal is in excess of the antenna, or if you have a device connected between your radio and antenna which increases the output above four watts, you are subject to a fine of up to $500.00 if caught by the FCC.

Can you afford $500.00? I know I can't.

Charles Johnson and that he came to Georgia from Pennsylvania in 1860, or thereabout. A check of recorded names revealed that a Charles E. Johnson, born August 30, 1831 and died October 10, 1880, was buried in Cemetery No. 1 (the cemetery the old settlers called Good Hope Cemetery) and on the headstone was written, "Born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania."

The private cemeteries represent much history and a proud heritage. Personnel of the Building & Grounds Division have completed all of the records possible in conjunction with the bicentennial year.

AIT Bde conducting Cadre Orientation Program

A new Cadre Orientation Program, designed to inform incoming personnel of how the brigade works, began last week at the AIT Bde.

The program, which totals 35 hours spread over a five day period, includes the brigade commander's briefing, the orientation for new AIT soldiers, briefings by all staff sections, classes by different organizations on post, the Advanced Physical Fitness Test (AFPT), and the Performance-Oriented Infantry Qualification Test (IQT). All newly arrived Cadre personnel must attend the Headstart Program, which is geared towards making new Cadre aware of the present brigade programs.

According to a brigade spokesman, the purpose of the AFPT is to let the new Cadre know where they stand in physical training and, "The IQT (the final comprehensive test of an AIT soldier's knowledge) is simply to let them know what an AIT soldier is required to know upon his graduation," commented the spokesman.

2ndLt. Ann McMullen, OIC of 1st Bn PAC, was the first woman to go through the orientation and IQT. "As far as my job goes, the IQT doesn't directly affect me, but I work for AIT soldiers and I'm at Ft. Benning, the Infantry Center. It gave me an idea of what an Infantry soldier goes through. It was very interesting," she offered.

Currently, the orientation program will be given once a month and possibly more often, depending upon the number of incoming personnel.

Contributions requested for book on military

Military and civilian personnel throughout the world are being asked to contribute an article to a book to be titled "Traditions and Customs of the Armies of the World."

This document will have a separate section for unit branch and Army-wide traditions and customs for the Army of each country.

In addition, some of the general topics to be covered will be historical background, wartime and peacetime differences, volunteer and draft armies, the impact of technology, the impact of women, relationship to success in battle, and probable future trends.

The volume is being compiled and edited by Col. Clyde D. Boden, USAR (Ret.) whose military roots go back 40 years. A pre-World War II soldier, he commanded combat troops in Europe, served on the Army Staff during the Korean War, and commanded the DCSPER Mobilization Designation Detachment. Col. Boden is a 1968 graduate of the Command and General Staff College and a 1970 graduate of the Army War College.

Draft manuscripts, photographs, and drawings should be submitted to Col. Boden, 512 N. Livingston St., Arlington, Va. 22203 (703-528-7913) no later than August 31, 1978. They will not be returned but their receipt will be acknowledged.

Authors are requested to include a 50-word or less biographical sketch for inclusion if their articles are accepted and a 100-word or less synopsis of their article to be used as an introductory paragraph. All who submit copy will receive a copy of the first printing.

Veterans informed of hoax

Georgia veterans are being warned that stories about a so-called "special 1948 insurance dividend" supposedly payable to veterans of World War II are only that — stories.

Georgia Veterans Service Director Pete Wheeler said, "This '1948 special dividend story is an old hoax that somebody, somewhere resurrects every few years or so. It's just a lot of misinformation that creates a nuisance for the VA which is literally deluged by thousands of inquiries."

The most recent outbreak of publicity on this hoax has been noted in the Columbus area where a large number of leaflets have been circulated advising veterans to write the VA regarding their claim to the "special dividend."

Wheeler explained that the dividend referred to was paid in 1950 and 1951 to some 16-million veterans. The 91st congress passed a state claims act stating that "no claims by an insured for payment in cash of a special dividend declared prior to Jan. 1, 1952, shall be processed by the VA, unless such claim was recorded within six years after such dividend was declared."

Wheeler said that, under this law, any claim received by the VA will be returned to the claimant with a copy of the law and the matter will be considered closed.

"Seems that some old hoaxes never die," Wheeler said, "they just go on fooling some people forever."

He advises veterans not to waste their time or the VA's.

Vitamin E: Won't help your love life, but it can keep you fat

By Ruth G. Rupp

You were walking down the shopping mall and started to pass the Health Food Store.

What was it that caught your eye?

Probably that big sign advertising one of America's most popular vitamin supplements - Vitamin E.

You remember hearing once that Vitamin E will enhance sexual potency; you decide it's worth a try, and go into purchase a bottle.

STOP . . . let's talk about that bottle you are about to purchase.

First, think about the many claims being made for Vitamin E. . . . enhanced sexual potency, increased, physical endurance, prevention of heart attacks, protection against air pollution, slowed aging, healing of skin blemishes, deoderant, and cure for cancer, arthritis and ulcers.

Does it seem feasible that there would be a miracle vitamin that could do all those things?

The fact is that scientific research has been unable to prove any of those claims are true.

What is Vitamin E good for?

It is stored in your body's fat cells and acts as a preservative to those cells. No other use for Vitamin E has been found. When person's were completely deprived of Vitamin E they did not even show any adverse symptoms.

Secondly, consider the amount of Vitamin E your body does need. The Foods and Nutrition Board of the National Research Council has found the recommended daily allowance to be only 20-30 units.

Now look at the label on that bottle of Vitamin E. OH . . . it says each tablet has 1000 units and it is recommended that you take one tablet each day!!

Quite an excessive dosage wouldn't you say? Scientific research has not found any benefits to take high dosage of Vitamin E.

Thirdly, look at that number stamped on the cover of the bottle. That's right . . . I'm talking about the price tag. If nothing else convinces you to put that bottle back on the shelf, the price of it should. Vitamin E. can cost $7.45 for a 30 day supply of Vitamin E tablets.

Why not save your money, go on down to the grocery store, and by some vegetables, whole grain cereals, meats, milk, eggs, legumes, fruits, nuts, margarines, and vegetable oil.

These are foods you consume every day and they will provide all the Vitamin E you'll ever need.

Give till it helps.

Red Cross is counting on you.

THE BAYONET

Vol. 37, No. 24
March 3 - 9, 1978

A Ledger-Enquirer Newspaper published in the Interest of the Personnel of Fort Benning

CG will speak to civilians

MajGen. William J. Livsey, will speak to all Benning appropriated fund civilian employees during next week in Marshall Auditorium.

There will be a session at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. Each office is advised to send a different third of its staff to each of the sessions.

The general plans to thank everyone for their hard work and to request their continued support in the future.

New remarks on LES

If you are confused about the new remarks on February's Leave and Earning Statement (LES), don't be.

The reason for the new addition to the form is that the Finance and Accounting Center has received a lot of criticism because many soldiers are not aware of the true value of their pay.

Every quarter, as in February, remarks will be printed on LESs explaining the inherent tax advantages received due to the non-taxation of Quarters Allowance (BAQ) and Separate Rations (BAS).

When a soldier is receiving full BAQ and BAS, the following remark will be shown on the LES: "If BAQ and BAS were taxable, your take home pay would be $xx less." Other non-taxable conditions would have similar remarks.

Remarks concerning take home pay will not be shown if the soldier has no taxable income or if other remarks cause a LES continuation sheet to be printed.

If you still have questions concerning your LES see your unit Personnel Services NCO.

Mahaffey on extended TDY

BrigGen. Fred K. Mahaffey, assistant commandant of the Infantry School, left Ft. Benning Tuesday night for extended temporary duty at Ft. Leavenworth, Kansas. He is expected to be there approximately 3 months.

BrigGen. Mahaffey will be serving as Director of the Infantry Fighting Vehicle Special Study Group headquarters at Leavenworth.

Energy conservation

Waste not, want not

Weather may change for the better in March, but the energy problem won't go away.

March is the month of transition from Winter to Spring, but cold weather (subfreezing) days can be expected throughout the month. Emphasis is still placed on conserving natural gas and electricity.

In fact, say post officials, Ft. Benning's energy problems can be expected to worsen unless a dedicated effort by each individual can be rallied during the rest of the year.

Right now, the post is exceeding its programmed budget for energy. Unless the measures now in effect can reduce usage to an acceptable point, additional restrictions will be necessary, officials stated.

Col. Addison Davis, chief of staff and vice-chairman of the installation resources conservation board, says the post will begin to look for "indicators" of good conservation practices. "If an individual leaves a light burning unnecessarily, he's likely to leave a thermostat too high or do something else equally wasteful," he pointed out.

Temperatures in quarters should be no higher than 68 degrees, according to officials. Quarters occupants are expected to turn off lights in garages, patios and porches when not needed for nighttime activities.

While these simple actions will not mean much in savings individually, collectively they mean measurable conservation benefits. "More importantly," Col. Davis emphasized, "these actions indicate our people are aware of the greater problems in energy shortage and are doing their part."

USAIC Regulation 11-27 is the installation's bible concerning measures that individuals and activities must follow to conserve resources. It outlines some of the following energy saving points:

- Do not increase temperature settings when you feel chilly. Put on more clothing.

Time running out for license plates

By Kathryn F. Forrester

The deadline to secure Georgia license plates for motor vehicles is March 31. In order to qualify for an ad valorem tax exemption, certain conditions must be met.

A service member who is assigned to a duty station here who is in Georgia solely because of military orders may file the affidavit to secure an exemption. Thus, a person must meet these conditions:

Be a member of the Armed Forces of the United States.

Be assigned to a duty station at Fort Benning.

Be temporarily residing in Georgia because of military orders.

Cannot have resided in Georgia prior to entering the military.

Is a legal resident of another state and subject only to that state's personal taxation.

Was not a legal resident of Georgia January 1.

The person must have been the owner of the vehicle in question on January 1. Additionally, a dependent may qualify for the exemption if the service member sponsor would meet the above conditions. The dependent of the service member who is assigned to a duty station here but who is on TDY may pick up the exemption affidavit if the dependent has a power of attorney which provides authority to register the vehicle.

Also, the dependent of a service member who was assigned here and is currently assigned overseas and is on orders to return to Ft. Benning may qualify for the exemption if the dependent has the required power of attorney.

If you are a dependent and need to pick up the affidavit for the ad valorem tax exemption, bring your ID Card, proof of ownership of the vehicle (title, last year's registration) and power of attorney Bldg. 5, room 13. Forms for service members are available through battalion legal clerks.

The vehicle to be registered must be in the name of the service member or in both the names of the service member and spouse in order to qualify for the exemption.

Penalties for false statements in the affidavit shall include a fine for not more than $1,000 or imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than one year and not more than five years or both. The offense is considered to be a felony under Georgia law.

Additional information on securing license plates or filing for ad valorem tax exemption can be obtained by calling Legal Assistance at 545-3281 or 545-3282.

News in brief

..... Women's Army Corps — going, going, gone?

WAC, when referring to a woman soldier, is still an appropriate title, according to an official in the Women's Army Corps' director's office.

Use of the word WAC is entirely proper, the official said, but would be a "clearly unofficial" term if and when the corps is dissolved.

Legislation is pending in Congress which would abolish the corps, as part of an overhaul of the Defense Officer Personnel Act. The corps "only exists on paper" according to a DA spokesman, since women are tied into the same assignment and career system as men and in light of a recent Defense proposal to reduce the WAC director staff.

While one official suggested that WAC will be a common term in the future — regardless of the corps' fate — just as the term WAVE is still used to describe women sailors, a WAC official suggested a conversion to terms like "enlisted woman," "service woman," "woman officer," or "woman soldier" would be appropriate.

.... Contract baggers a possibility in commissaries

Bagging services at most commissaries may be handled by contractors when the present system of tipping baggers ends this summer, a DA official says.

Contract bagging services are one of three options DA has given CONUS commissaries to choose from by July 30. After that date, commissaries will have the option of levying a "users charge" of two to three percent of a total purchase and spending this money to hire a contractor to bag groceries, or of directly hiring baggers and paying them the minimum wage. A third option allows commissaries to dispense with baggers and require cashiers and customers to bag purchases.

The DA official said that contracting services in populated areas are easy to obtain and this choice is the most likely of the three options. However, the official added, "We'll need every bit of it (the users fee) to pay contractors."

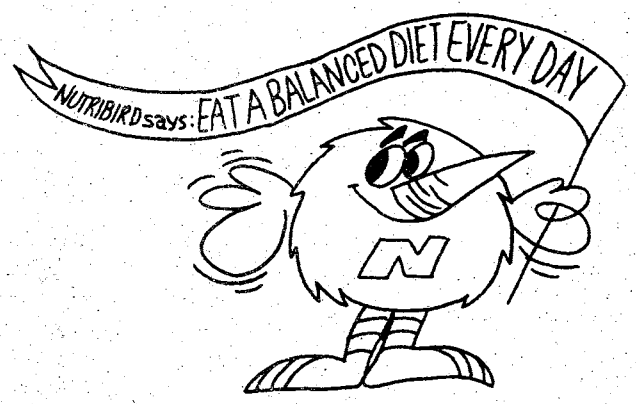
Nutrition Week features 'Nutribird'

Ft. Benning will join the rest of the country in meeting "Nutribird" during National Nutrition Week Sunday through March 11.

"Nutribird" is the American Dietetics Association's official mass media symbol of good nutrition. "It's a versatile character," says LtCol. Marcia L. Beasley, chief, Food Service Division at Martin Army Hospital (MAH), "whose body is a head of lettuce, with a carrot for a nose. At the mention of a food group, it changes its appearance. For example, the "protein" self might be a hamburger; the "dairy food" self a skim milk carton; and the "grain" self a slice of enriched bread. These faces often appear together to display a balanced diet." Lt.Col. Beasley says that the public will be seeing "Nutribird" in TV spots to promote good nutrition as a means to good health.

The four registered dietitians at MAH are preparing a postwide awareness program.



The purpose of this year's National Nutrition Week is to focus attention on the importance of a balanced diet to individual health. Energy-spending options can help to make a neat fit of snacks, pastas, and other foods popularly thought of as fattening.

At this time, food is one of the leading concerns of legislators. In the first three quarters of 1977, food-related bills accounted for half of all legislation introduced in Congress.

The tide for nutrition consciousness is at an all-time high, but this consciousness is not always based on sound information. Dietitians urge that Americans continue to stress sound dietary practices as an essential of protective health care. Their efforts are focused on asking everyone to follow a balanced diet — not only during National Nutrition Week, but all year round.

In addition to the posters, banners, articles and displays, the dietitians will join their counter-parts in the Columbus Dietetic Association co-sponsor with the Columbus Diabetic Association six weekly comprehensive sessions for military and civilian persons who have diabetes. Sessions will begin Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium at the Medical Center, 710 Center Street, Columbus. For more information call 544-1542 or 1974.

French fries, hotdogs, hamburgers

You may think it is, but it isn't always junk food

Story and Photos
By Sue Davis

Americans do everything in a hurry; drive, talk, play and eat. Grab a sandwich or a coke and run.

Fast food joints can be found in every city. Smiling waitresses stand behind the counter ready to serve that hamburger to relieve your Mac attack.

Many people are confused as to the definition of junk food. "In the strictest sense of the word, junk food in the diet would be carbonated beverages, alcohol, granulated sugar, jellies, jams, and syrups," according to LtCol. Marcia L. Beasley, chief of Food Services Division, MAH.

Nutritious food may be defined as any food containing at least two of the eight nutrients required in nutrition labeling with the nutrients exceeding the caloric value of the food. In other words, if a food is more fattening than nutritious, it's junk.

The eight nutrients necessary for a healthy body are protein, Vitamins A and C, thiamine, riboflavin, niacine, calcium, and iron.

If you're wondering about the nutritional value of the short-order line at the mess hall, LtCol. Beasley can put your mind to rest. According to her, the only real junk food on the short-order lines are potato chips and carbonated beverages. "Even french fries have some nutritional value," she affirmed.

"Unless a person is overweight or a cardiac risk, hamburgers, hot dogs and french fries are satisfactory in the diet, but I'm not encouraging people to eat from the short order line," she added.

Her reasoning stems from the fact that the short-order line lacks variety in certain food groups such as vegetables which are only available for the hot food line.

The fact that hamburgers, hot dogs and french fries are nutritional surprises some people. One soldier commented, "The short-order line is a slow killer. Dramatic? Maybe, but the amount of fat, additives and food colorings they put in hot dogs and hamburgers makes me sick to my stomach, but I still eat the stuff! I suppose one could say I live a Dr. Jekyll-Mr. Hyde type of existence." The song 'Junk Food Junkie' by Larry Groce explains his situation perfectly.

"During the daytime I'm Mr. Natural, just as healthy as I can be, but at night I'm a junk-food junkie, good Lord, have pity on me!"

Glad you asked . .

Is junk food, ie: hamburgers, french fries taking the place of the hot, balanced meal?

PFC David A. Lask
2nd Combat Support Hospital

Without a doubt, the Big Mac is going to continue to be a big part of the American diet but I don't see how anyone can say the days of the balanced meal are gone. Junk food has its place when our time or money is limited but I don't really think anyone is satisfied living primarily on fast-food and when given the chance, most people will prefer a balanced meal.

CSM (Ret) John F. LaVoie

I do not believe that the balanced meal is gone. The sandwich items are not junk food — they are nutritious. They are popular and should be served to those who do not want a full meal. I think that we will go even further and eventually to ala-carte dining facilities similar to restaurants for all but the tactical units.

Sp4 Gary W. Joyner, 546th Medical Co

The hot, balanced meal is not really gone. However, junk food is definately here to stay. In the Army, they seem to offer the best of both worlds. They serve well-balanced hot meals — there is also a "junk food" line. I think the Army should keep the meal system the way it is.

SFC James F. Robinson, 34th Medical Bn

No. I feel that the average soldier wants a good hot meal. The junk food has its place: mainly because we feed people from different places and backgrounds.

Capt. Jeanette Z. Walker
Co A Hqs Cmd

No, I don't think the balanced meal is gone. For those of us who are working mothers and wives who's time does not permit the preparation of three balanced meals a day, effort is made to fix at least one or two nutritional meals. With the Army's emphasis on weight control, many of us attempt to modify our weight behavior by eating more health foods, fruit, raw vegetables and less junk food. Junk food will always be around; however, many of us are working to eliminate as much junk food as possible from our diets.

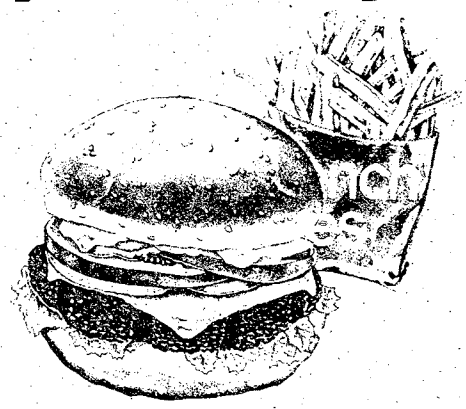
Junk food

Have it your way

By Achmed Chettgren



Junk food: The pet peeve of every nutritionists' and a concerned parents' existence. Everyday we are assaulted by advertisements on television, radio and in the print medium, extolling the merits of the foot long hot dog, the jumbo hamburger, the 'everything in the world on it' pizza, potato chips with uniform shapes and various other 'fun' products. In a time when quick is better, many of us have fallen prey to the catchy tunes of these ads and succumbed to claims of having it our way and fast.

There was a time when we were very conscious of what we ate; insisting upon having our three square meals a day. Our mothers had a great deal to do with that but as we moved away and grew allegedly more independent, we decided that the fuss mother used to take to make good meals was too much. Speed was of the essence. And there were people out there who knew that and decided to build monuments everywhere to satisfy our need for speedy dining. Junk food came into its own.

Have we lost sight of nutrition, of the value of getting our daily requirement of vitamins and minerals that keep us healthy. Even the mess halls here on Fort Benning have an optional 'short order' line, offering us hamburgers, hot dogs and potato chips as an alternative to waiting for the 'real meal'. Most opt for short order.

It would seem that we need to take a hard look at our diets and reassess our food priorities. Isn't it strange that after a good healthy bit of PT someone will inevitably suggest, "Hey, let's go get a mac or a big burger."

Commentary

Moral conscience is a guide

By Henry P. Harvey

The statement has been made that the test of a person's morality is how he or she behaves away from home. Military personnel have plenty of ready made excuses for abandoning the standards taught to them back home and settling for a life of compromise and accomodation.

Many believe they have been badly treated by peers and superiors; some feel that they have been tricked into slavery. Still others are in a strange land whose moral code is different from that in which they have been reared. In spite of these incentives to drop their moral standards, soldiers can remain true to the principles taught them at home by using their moral conscience.

When the word conscience is used, there are those who suggest that we are really just talking about fear of the consequences, about feelings of insecurity, or about a combination of both of these. Webster's Seventh New Collegiate Dictionary defines conscience as "The sense or consciousness of the moral goodness or blameworthiness of one's own conduct, intentions, or character, together with a feeling of obligation to do right or be good."

Conscience is defined by psychologists as knowledge of one's self. It is part of an internal conversation in a society composed of the various parts which make up the human personality.

Having learned from parents through rewards and punishment, it offers the human being the kind of advice which enables a person to be something more than a thing. A person is urged by the conscience to be more than a selfish, living machine taking advantage of the world around it. The conscience does this advising by making the individual feel sorry or proud before, in the process of, and after an act.

Sociologists define conscience as knowledge one has with others. Emphasis is placed on the fact that man is a participating creature whose conscience reflects most strongly the approval of the society. We are reliant on the opinions of others in deciding how to act. The conscience is a kind of individual recapitulation of the ideal of the society. However, it also serves to prevent the person from being forced into the complete mold of society when the standards of society are different from those in which the person was reared.

The conscience may make an error; it may be deceived; it may even be insensitive. However, it is the most reliable person for judging the rightness and wrongness of things. Therefore, using the conscience, one can correct mistakes, increase in sensitivity, and mature in moral competence. Living with the conscience rather than without it, we can live with a more genuine human relationship.

'Cottonbalers' ready for shootout

Sp 4 Charles Long's face reflects visions of weariness and satisfaction for a job well done after last week's training mission.

The 'Cottonbalers' from 'Charging Charlie' Co C, 3/7th Infantry stayed busy last week as they participated in a company-sized airmobile exercise in preparation for an upcoming live-fire operation.

"A great deal of intensive preparation has gone into the planning of this operation," said Capt. Fred M. Berger, commander of Co C. "As far as I can tell, this will be the first live-fire airmobile exercise ever conducted by the soldiers from the 'Forever Forward' Brigade here."

An actual date has not been set for the exercise but plans are in the works for it to take place in the very near future.

"Our scheme of operation will be to attack a simulated enemy retransmitting station, gather intelligence, and then destroy the station. Each of our platoons will get a chance to attack. It's all going to be very realistically staged," commented Capt. Berger.

The 'Cottonbalers' began preparations for the live-fire exercise last week as they conducted an operation similar to what the live-fire 'shootout' will be like.

According to the company commander, "Each of the platoons practiced just about every action they would need to take during the operation. Everything from the airmobile insertion to the actual raid was rehearsed until it was performed with absolute perfection. We take pride here in the company in trying to be the best infantry company in the whole brigade. And you can bet that we're going to do everything in our power to try and attain that rating."

Tentatively, the live-fire exercise is to be conducted at North Ruth Range. It's to be another first for the infantrymen of the 'Forever Forward' Brigade and another indicator of how they are blazing the pathway for future infantrymen to follow.

197th conducts intensive training

Five days of intensive individual weapons training conducted recently should have the soldiers from the "Rocks Support" 2/10th Field Artillery 197th Infantry Bde ready for any situation they might find themselves engaged in as a combat ready unit.

"We try to keep 95 percent of our personnel qualified at all times. Every individual weapon in our battalion, everything from the .45 cal. pistol of the M18A1 Claymore Mine, was fired in an effort to meet our qualification goals" said MSgt. Fred McDonell, operations NCO for the 2/10th.

The soldiers from the 2/10th faced this latest training exercise with their usual 'go get 'em' attitude. "This training is typical of the type of things we do to keep our unit battle ready. Individual weapons training is just as important as the training we conduct with our crew served 105MM howitzers" Pvl Michael Wade commented.

Weapons qualification can be boring or run of the mill but with foresight and planning it can be made into challenging and productive training like last weeks exercise, according to the soldiers of the 2/10th.

"It is important for every soldier in the brigade to maintain individual weapon proficiency. This is just another example of the brigade performing the mission in the best possible manner" concluded MSgt. McDowell.

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room — and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single -room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extros" but at no extra cost. Our 150 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

Concurrent travel

USAREUR working to improve rate

By Jo Ann Mann

As most soldiers coming to US Army, Europe (USAREUR) soon learn, the rate of approved concurrent travel for dependents is low; about 27-33 percent. USAREUR is currently working to improve this rate.

One reason for the low rate is that regulations require quarters—either government or economy—be available within 30 days of arrival in the command for concurrent travel to be granted. Housing Referral Offices (HRO) have tended to be conservative with their predictions of available housing, and generally report it's not available within that time frame. As a result, concurrent travel is often denied.

Following a 1976 spot survey, the Military Personnel Center, Europe (MILPERCENEUR) discovered that many soldiers arriving with delayed travel orders for their families were finding housing within 30 days—although availability reports indicated none. USAREUR's Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff, Engineers, (ODCSENGR) began pressing the HROs to prepare more accurate projections, since this is a basic document used in approving or disapproving concurrent travel. During the past few months, HROs throughout USAREUR have begun reporting shorter waiting times.

As the reports began reflecting this new information, ODCSENGR began taking other steps to increase concurrent travel. They found a significant number of temporary quarters ("temps") were occupied by military families who had initially accepted economy quarters — houses and apartments rented by individual service members within local communities—and then moved into "temps" to wait on government quarters. This practice filled "temps" with people who had already found adequate quarters. It wad decided to restrict the "temps" to service members newly arriving in the community, allowing them a place to live while they looked for economy quarters.

Along with that, USAREUR forwarded a request to the Department of the Army (DA) for concurrent travel to be approved when housing was deemed to be reasonably available within 60 days of the service members' arrival instead of 30 days. Since more temporary quarters are available and it costs the government less for families to stay there, it is hoped the request will be approved.

Upon receiving orders to USAREUR soldiers are sent a basic information packet with housing information. They are asked to return a form indicating whether they will accept economy or government housing. Availability projects and cost of various quarters are included in the packet. Projections change each month, but if a service member insists on government quarters, chances for concurrent travel are less.

According to Col. Jerome B. Hilmes, Chief, Engineering and Housing Division, ODCSENGR USAREUR, "there are not enough government quarters to house all eligible personnel. Leased quarters—local apartments contracted for by the Army for military families—will accomodate only a small percentage so about 30 percent of our people will have to live on the economy if they want to be with their families."

Presently, figures show approximately 90 percent of all personnel eligible for command sponsorship are together in USAREUR.

With the increased command emphasis on accurate HRO reports and the new policy on temporary quarters, USAREUR expects to increase its concurrent travel rate. (Forscom).

Careful!

A sunlamp can tan you faster than the sun — and burn you faster too. Each year more than 10,000 persons are burned so badly that they must seek treatment in a hospital emergency room. Some victims report falling asleep under a sunlamp for as long as five hours — an exposure long enough to totally destroy the skin and require skin grafts.

When using a sunlamp follow the manufacturer's instructions carefully and use a sunlamp with a built in timer. Remember, it takes several hours for your skin to show a burn so never lie under the lamp until your skin turns pink. By that time it's too late. Use the goggles provided —sunglasses do not screen out the ultraviolet produced by the sunlamp.

Drugs can sometimes make you more susceptible to ultraviolet. The most likely trouble makers are certain antibiotics, diuretics, tranquilizers and anti-diabetics. If you are using medication check with your doctor before trying to get a tan.

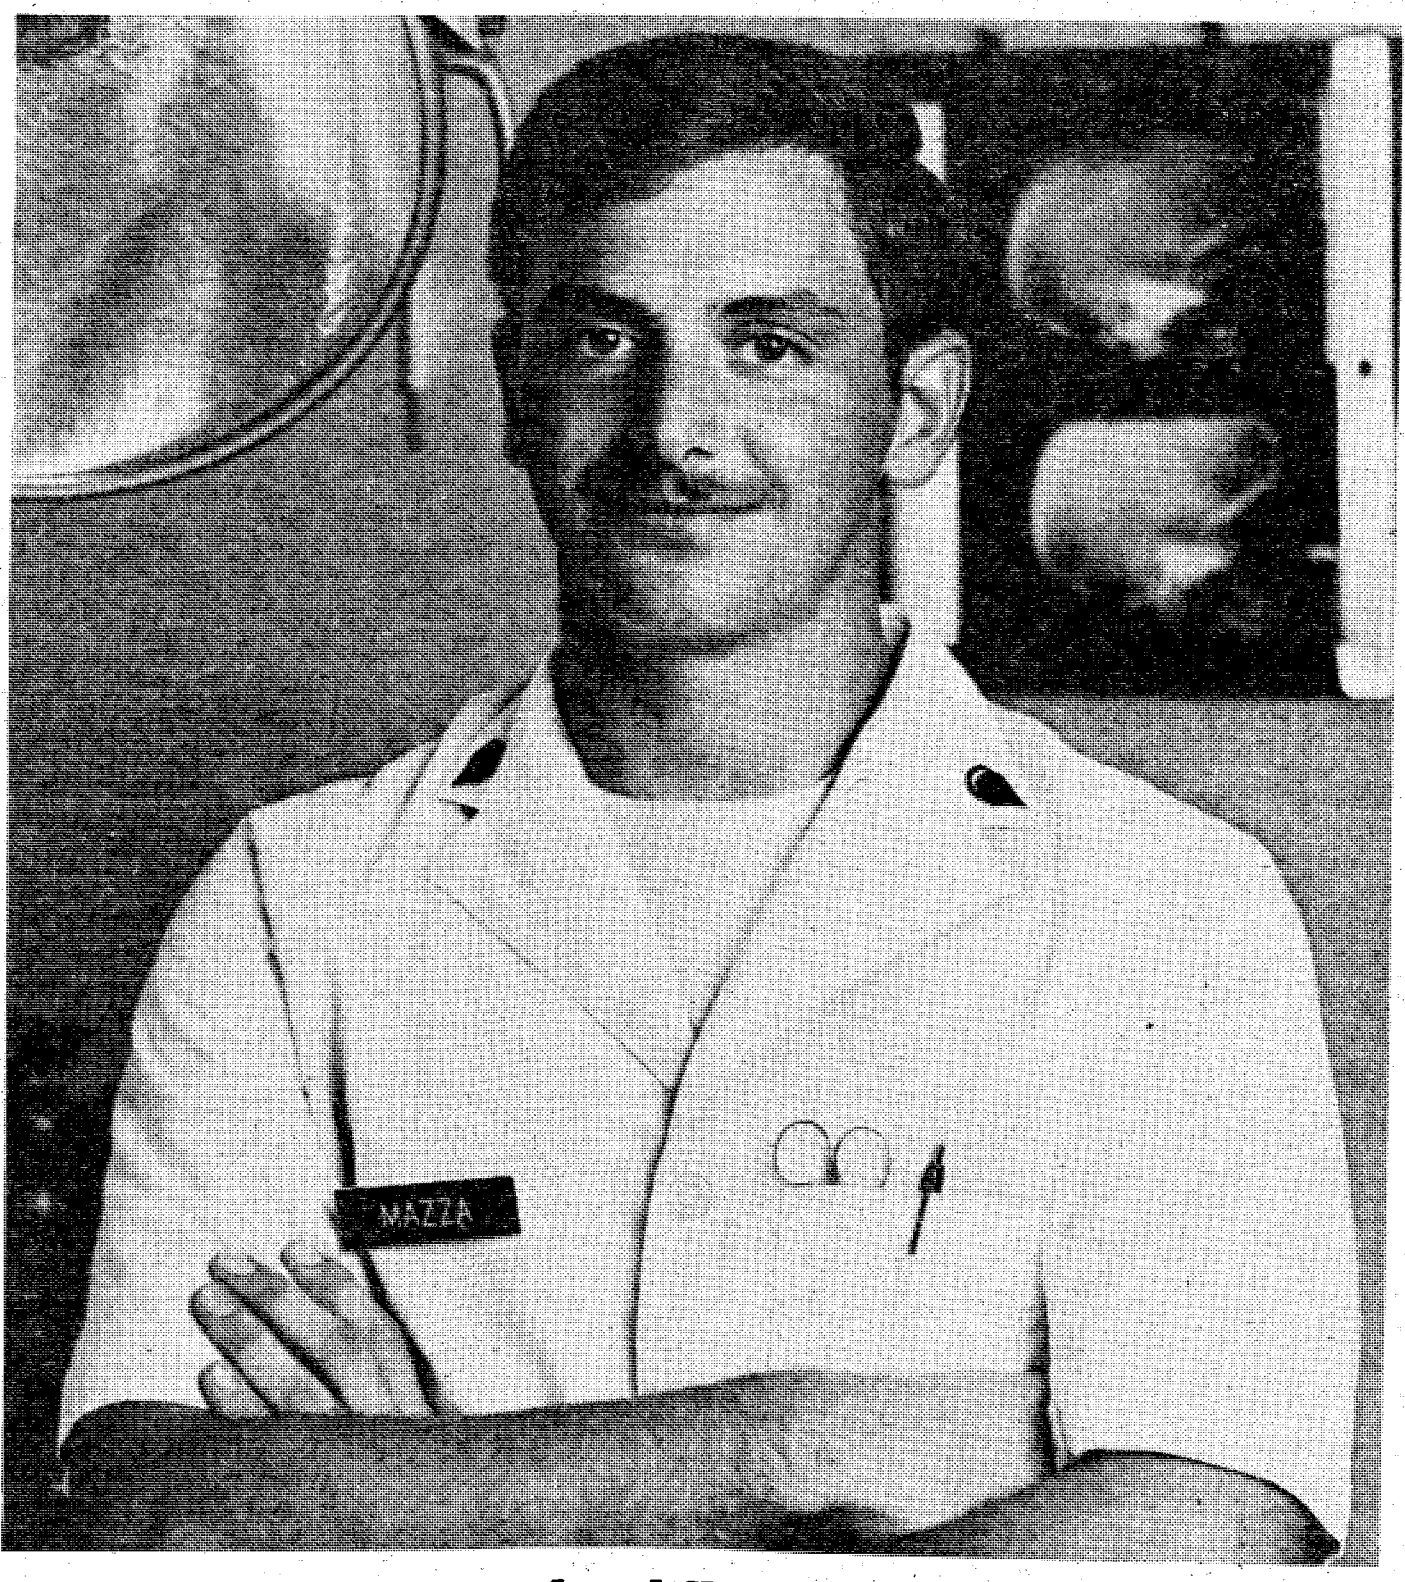
"Uncle Sam needs me."

Michael A. Mazza



SP5 Mike Mazza is a medic. He works in the emergency room of an Army hospital. "I think this job is great. It gives you a chance to see the real world. Me? I lived in a little town in Virginia for 18 years. Bam! The next thing I knew I was in Japan. Helping people. Like in a hospital ward. You do little things for them. And they think the world of you. I don't consider that kind of job to be work."

Indian major looking forward to cooling off here

By Julie Casey

One allied officer here for the Infantry Officers' Advance Course 2-78, is not worried about Georgia's hot summers. He said in his homeland of India, " . . . the summers are even hotter!"

Maj. Ajai B. Masihi, who is assigned to the Allied Student Training Division, said, "I feel the course will be an asset to my career. In this course they look at problems in a different perspective. Our enemies and reasons for battle are totally different than America's."

Planning to see and do as much as possible during his first trip to the States, Masih commented, "I love it here. I plan to taste, eat and drink as many varieties of food and drink as possible. I do not miss Indian food in the least."

Although Masih's primary language is Hindi, his religion is Christian. When asked how it happened, he replied, "Well, my great grandfather became one about 100 years ago."

He has a Bachelor of Arts degree and has been an instructor at the Indian Military Academy. Concerning why he decided to make the military a career, he said, "I had just graduated from college and was intending to go to medical school. When I saw all the books, about two lockers full, I knew that I didn't want to study any more. I finished my formal education in the Military Academy and was given a commission. I have been very happy with my career."

"In this IOAC course they look at problems in a different perspective. Our enemies and reasons for battle are totally different than Americans."

Masih's favorite sports are tennis, golf, and squash.

He commented that the fashions in India have been greatly influenced by the western and eastern cultures. "Their style of dress mostly depends on the circles they travel in. The college girls have gone to wearing blue jeans and tops, yet most of the working women still wear the traditional sarong," replied Masih.

Masih's wife, who is a gynecologist, and their two-year-old son are in India in a town called Brunei near the South Asian Border.

Prevent burglaries

Create the impression that someone is home

Think about the shock, the heartbreak and the anger that you would experience if you came home one evening and found that your barrack's room or quarters had been burglarized. Think about your valuables — including mementos that you've collected and cherished over the years—being stolen or wantonly destroyed. Think about the possibility of walking in on a burglar while he was ransacking your home at night!

Most burglars won't take a second look at a house or apartment that appears to be occupied. To discourage these criminals from selecting your residence as a target, consider using the following anti-burglary procedures to help create the impression that someone's home when you're out during the day or evening.

Are we trying to scare you? No. We're hoping to make you aware that you could very well become a victim of burglary. We would also like you to think about — and, more importantly, practice —techniques that can help you reduce the possibility of becoming a burglary victim!

- Don't leave messages on the door or mailbox indicating your absence.
- Use electric timers to turn house lights and a radio on and off during evening hours.
- Enlist the help of neighbors to keep mail, newspapers and ads from collecting while you are away.
- Remember that unattended yards and unmowed lawns over an extended period of time are signs that the residents might be away.
- Consider also that whether or not trash cans are set out on collection day, it is an indication that the residents might not be home.
- Advise your local police, as well as a reliable neighbor, when your home will be unoccupied for any length of time and where you can be reached. (AFPS clip sheet).

Is your Chevy heavy?

Hey all you car buffs — here's your chance to show off your pride and joy! A car show for several classes of autos will be held March 11 in the Columbus Square Mall.

A local club, "Chevys Unlimited," and the Mall are co-sponsoring the event. Winners will take away trophies donated by various auto parts stores and others purchased by the club.

The six classes include fully customized cars, partially customized, restored originals and competition cars that are not regularly street-driven. The vehicle does not have to be completed to fit into one of the various classes. There will also be a four-foot tall "People's Choice" trophy awarded by spectator's vote.

The entry fee is $10 and the deadline for non-members is Wednesday. Call Sp 4 Carol Edwards at 545-7984 or George Upton, 563-9407.

"Chevys Unlimited" membership is open to all military or civilian personnel that are interested in Chevrolets; whether it be for restoration, modification or maintenance of such cars. Members get discounts at some parts stores and sponsor activities in the community such as shows, rallies and even a youngster in the sop box derby.

Pay Panel close to making final recommendations

By John Hart

The President's Commission on Military Compensation is expected soon to reach final decision on five issues dealing with its recommendation to scrap the 20-year retirement program.

Dennis Gray, the commission's spokesman and associate director, said last week the commissioners would make final decisions on deferred compensation, grandfathering, transitioning, vesting, and severance pay.

Earlier this month the nine-member commission declared that military pay and retirement should be reformed.

Other decisions the commissioners are expected to make deal with the adjustment of the annual military pay raise and differential or special pays, Gray said.

He said that commission staff would brief the commissioners on the "rationale for military fringe benefits" but would defer recommendations until March 2.

The staff has not yet completed the ground work for making recommendations in the area of fringe benefits — commissary, exchange, and health care, according to Gray.

He would not comment on Congressional sources reporting that the commission would recommend that commissary, exchange, and health care benefits be guaranteed by legislation.

Congressional sources said earlier this month the guarantee for those benefits would be included in any commission recommendation that may require legislation — for example, the revamping of the retirement system.

The commission still expects to complete its report to the President by March 15.

"Unless Commission Chairman Charles J. Zwick gives us (the staff) different marching orders, we'll have the report ready," Gray said.

After the early February meeting, Commission Chairman Zwick stressed "that if Congress decides to legislate our recommended changes in retirement, current career service people should be guaranteed (by grandfather clauses) the right to complete their military careers under the existing system."

Zwick said, "The Commission is still considering whether to recommend that current careerists be granted the option of coming into a new system."

Grandfather clauses and transitioning are two major proposals. The Commission will also take up a number of supplementary issues relating to military health care and other fringe benefits. (ARNEWS).

THIS MAN RUNS HIS OWN BUSINESS IN PARTNERSHIP WITH NORTHAMERICAN

Meet William Harrigan. At age 35 he changed careers and signed up with northAmerican as a New Products Owner/Operator. Here's what he has to say about his first year in business for himself.

"You're not on the company payroll, mister; you're in your own business. It's my business. I run it."

"Right now, I have all the benefits of owning my own business and at the same time have all the advantages of a big business behind me. It's a joint venture."

"I don't think I could beat the tractor deal I got here — down payment, weekly payments — everything."

Bill Harrigan is one reason why northAmerican is the fastest growing van line in the country, and our need for business partners like Bill Harrigan is growing too!

If you're 21 or over, meet the Department of Transportation requirements, and can make a minimum investment of $2600 to $4300 which includes your tractor down payment and interim living expenses during training if you need it, give us a call. No experience is required.

Open door policy encouraged

Pvt. Tom Ferris is talking to his company commander about a parking ticket he received from the local police.

Sgt. Ramon Garcia is waiting to see the commander about the resassignment orders to Korea he'd just found on his desk. Last Sunday he got married.

Sp4 Kate Laswell wants her commander's advice on a loan she's thinking of making to buy a used car.

What do these soldiers have in common?

Problems, yes. More specifically, they're all taking advantage of the commander's open door policy.

Every unit should have an open door policy. It is one way that individual soldiers and their commanders together can find solutions to specific problems.

Army doctrine holds commanders responsible for the morale and welfare of their troops. So a soldier's problem is also a company commander's problem.

What kind of problems do soldiers talk about during open door sessions.

What kind of problems do soldiers talk about during open door sessions?

A commander may hear almost anything. Alcohol abuse, drug abuse, or indebtedness may be worring a soldier. Race and religion, family misunderstanding, divorce, marriage, alimony and child care may disturb others.

Operation security a must

By Robert Babcock

Editor's note: Robert Babcock is the Sergeant Major in the Directorate of Security here.

Operation Security, (OPSEC), is the essence of a successful mission. OPSEC involves everyone, even you. Your personal actions or conversations could damage the success of a mission.

While watching football on TV, you may have often heard the announcer say "The defense read the play and stopped it cold." The enemy playing the defense role would try to read our plays and intercept missions.

According to a security official here, denying information to the enemy is what OPSEC is all about. The three main questions the enemy wants answered are who, where and when. The enemy will use every means possible to gather this information. This can be very critical when the lives of soldiers are at stake.

The best source of information for the enemy is the soldier, the basic everyday ground pounder. Anyone you have close contact with could be the possible enemy, the laundry lady, bar girls, ladies of the night, shoe shine boys, KPs or barbers. Telling the laundry lady that you will need your uniforms tomorrow seems harmless enough, yet if everyone in your unit did the same thing she would be able to induce 'when' the mission is to take place.

Keeping things locked and guarded is a very important part of security.

Monitoring communications between units is another way for them to gather vital information. Conversations over telephones, radios, and telegraphs will supply this information unless proper security is applied. 30 seconds of improper radio communication could ruin the whole 'ball game.'

Radio communication should be used as little as possible, but if you have to, here are some ways to avoid detection. The use of a remote antenna, land lines, low power, terrain masking, runners, and hand and arm signals will help.

The Viet Cong made great use of our insecure admin log nets in Vietnam. They knew 'who' was getting priority support.

Other types of electronic warfare also pose a major threat to friendly troops. Radar signals can be detected from generators, typewriters, and teletypes. By monitoring our nets, the enemy will be able to detect any increase in the volume of traffic. More activity on our part will thus alert the enemy.

The use of intelligence gathering aircraft on our part alerts the enemy to 'where' we are intending to attack.

How do you counteract the collection efforts of the enemy? The main rule is to keep your mouth shut and go about your business as normally as possible. Do not leave details to the last minute. Work to camouflage your intensions and positions.

The use of high altitude aircraft to perform the photographic reconnaissance missions work to disguise our objectives.

Development of an OPSEC support plan to keep your troops well informed is essential for good security.

Teach your soldiers to stay alert to small changes like KP personnel not showing up for work and to report any unusual goings on. Do not try to use unauthorized codes or to talk around a subject. Always use regularly scheduled messenger runs to communicate.

In short, mission success is up to each individual.

- Shut off heating vents and radiators and close doors to unused rooms.
- Close vents to unheated attics.
- Check windows for cracks and block them with strips of cloth or masking tape.
- Close fireplace dampers when not in use.
- Keep outside doors closed as much as possible.
- Don't stand and talk with the door open, or leave it open when shaking out rugs or taking trash outdoors.
- Cover window air conditioners to keep cold air from seeping in.
- Close drapes and venetian blinds when the sun retreats. They will serve as insulation to keep the cold out.
- When cooking, use the lowest heating setting to get the job done.
- Plan ahead on frozen foods to allow for thawing time and reduce cooking time.
- Use small appliances to do specialized jobs—toasters, skillets—instead of the oven.
- When washing clothes, use the lowest water temperature to get the job done. Using cold water washing products will help.
- Do not use the washing machine until there is a full load of wash to do.
- Use a basin when shaving to avoid letting the water run.
- Dishwashers use an excessive amount of hot water. When possible, wash dishes by hand.
- Do not use the dish washer unless you have a full load of dishes.
- Take short showers. Get wet, turn the water off, soap down, then rinse. Do not let the water run needlessly.
- Get into the habit of using cold water for short rinses or hand washings.
- Our natural gas shortage is critical. You are the key to getting through this crisis.

'I didn't know' not a good excuse

Ignorance is not bliss — especially in the Army. What soldiers don't know CAN hurt them. Soldiers may be gliding along, thinking they have everything under control when BAMM — suddenly, their plane goes into a nosedive. They've missed duty or found out something they should have known a long time ago but now it's too late. The second shock happens when they find they have no defense. It was their responsibility and they must accept the consequences.

If pays for a soldier to read all of that small print in those innumerable DF's, SOP's and such at least once. Many of the companies on post have a policy that their soldiers must read the company bulletin board once or twice a day and this hands the responsibility to the individual. If the soldier comes up short, the company can pull out that paper and, more than likely, that soldier's signature will be right there on the dotted line, indicating that it was read and understood. (This paper was probably in that stack soldiers tend to just leaf through and sign when they're in-processing because it seems like all the same stuff. That's where the whole problem starts.)

Ignorance is not a good excuse, either, although 'I didn't know' seems to be an automatic alibi for many people. Agreed, this can apply to a situation where things change quickly with no specifics written down. But when it's all there in black and white and strictly enforced, getting caught unaware can be a surprising and unpleasant experience.

This is why a "second chance' is often implemented. Even very responsible people can be caught up in something like this; people who would never have done something like this — if they would have known. In most cases, the 'first offender' is given another chance; hopefully having learned that 'ignorance is not bliss.' (Courtesy of the Ft. Jackson Leader).

Benning youngster wins poster contest

Hillary Hicks, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Larry W. Hicks, has been named the Georgia State Winner in the Junior High School Division of the annual Career Guidance Week Poster Contest. As a state winner, Hillary's poster is in competition for national honors.

The poster contest is an important part of National Career Guidance Week observed each year in November. The event is sponsored by the National Vocational Guidance Association and the local school counselors in an effort to arouse interest in the world of work.

Hillary's entry also won first prize in her division in the Benning contest. Her colorful poster was a picture of a tree full of careers.

Hillary is a seventh grade student in the Faith School.

OUR NAME HAS CHANGED BUT NOT

3472 MACON ROAD

Allen Dale Shopping Center
Moon road

What used to be Sam's Style Shop is now Brenda Allen's. But the name is the only thing that has changed. Brenda Allen's still offers competitive prices on popular brand name items.

The original store was founded forty-five years ago and started expanding seven years ago. Since then they have opened thrity-three stores. And the most recent 33rd location is on Moon Road in the Allen Dale Shopping Center. Allen Dale Shopping Center is also very new, in fact, Brenda Allen's was the first shop to open.

Many probably wonder why Brenda Allen's can offer popular brand names at such low prices - the answer is volume. The company buys by volume and has low overhead. In other words, they give you first quality merchandise instead of plushness in the decor

Ft. Benning salutes the Parade

By Bev Lockhart

The Ft. Benning Music and Theatre Branch of Recreation Services participated in the traditional Parade of American Music in February.

Parade of American Music Month represents a nationwide movement in the promotion of American music, as well as the updating of musical program planning. Inaugurated in 1955 under the sponsorship of the National Federation of Music Clubs, the celebration is supported by a grant from the American Society of Composers, Authors, and Publishers.

The Department of the Army invites Army-wide participation in the traditional celebration every year. Awards are offered for top honors by the National Federation of Music Clubs with the Office of the Adjutant General Center presenting special recognition awards to Army musical groups.

The 283rd Army Band struck up the march of Ft. Benning activities February 1 with a concert at the Post Music Center. Eleven productions followed, including performances by the Columbus Symphony Orchestra, the Ft. Benning Community Gospel Choir, "Blended Blue Grass," The Albany Ensemble, and "Shadow on the Green" presented by the "What You Will Players." A disco dance and floor show for those feeling Saturday night fever was put on and instructors at the Tuesday evening guitar and piano classes prefaced their instruction with discussions on various American styles of music.

The Ft. Benning Parade of American Music Month was coordinated by Recreation Services Music Director Charles Sheikovitz.

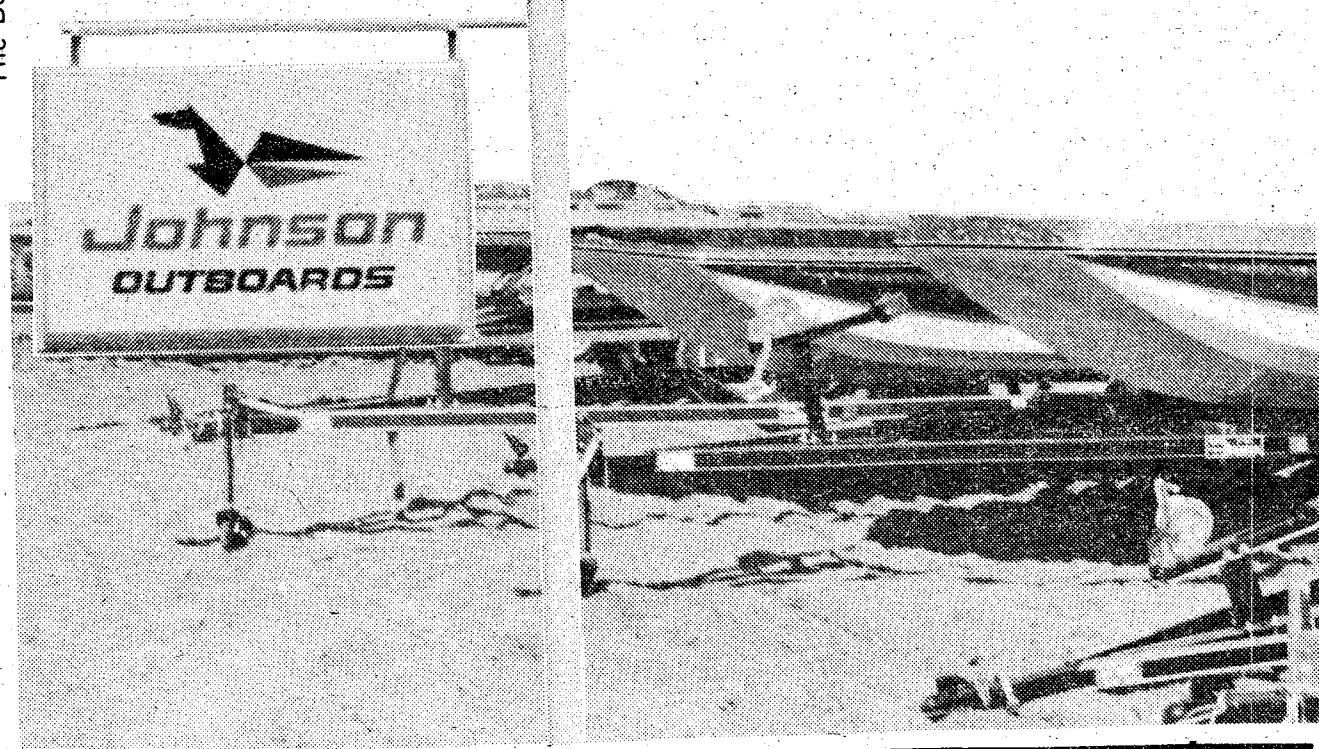
R.V. CENTER

It's a Pleasure



At Lake Eufaula Marine & R.V. Center, there's something different. A spirit, an attitude, a philosophy about their business that is rare indeed. The owners, Mr. Dick Ford and Mr. Les Kapelka, are responsible for this refreshing attitude and express their feelings like this: "It seems that today everyone is busy, constantly working and that makes their weekends and vacation time that much more important. It's a pleasure to be in a business that provides help and assistance to people who are trying to relax and enjoy themselves."

Help is an understatement! The plans that Dick and Les are putting into effect at Lake Eufaula on Highway 431 will do everything for the fisherman, boater and camper except the act of enjoying the vacation itself. Within 2 miles of the site of Lake Point State Park where a 248 slip boat marina is being readied for opening next month, Les & Dick will offer a Johnson Franchise and complete service center for all engines, plus an O.M.C. Bars to reenlistment don't have to be expected

By Ron Gordanier

Being late for formations or even work once in a while never bothered Specialist Jones. Neither did the Article 15's he received for the offenses. "No big deal," he always thought since he always got his work done, maybe a little slower than the others but nevertheless he got it done, especially when his supervisor stood over his shoulder.

Jones hadn't really decided whether to renlist or not but he was beginning to think "maybe staying in for twenty" wasn't a bad idea after all. But then Jones' unit commander called him in to his office and told him a Bar to Reenlistment was being imposed against him. Why? Because of his lackadaisical attitude. "The Army," said the commander, "wanted only those people who displayed good qualities to reenlist."

Another soldier who thought he didn't have a worry was Staff Sergeant George who had 15 years of service. He never did work very hard in all those years, not even hard enough to get a letter of appreciation. But he got by and worked at a leisurely pace.

He never seemed to worry about his appearance. Even though his company commander had commented a few times on how he should lose a few pounds. But that's all the further it went. Besides, George felt 250 pounds wasn't too much weight to carry on his six foot frame.

What the heck, he was getting by. Okay, hadn't he always managed to pass his MOS tests with a score of at least 90, plus get above average ratings on his EER. With only five more years until retirement why should he worry? He might even be able to make Sergeant First Class before then. Wasn't his promotion packet one of those considered by the last Department of the Army centralized promotion board?

Sgt. George really received a surprise when he opened the letter from Department of the Army which began:

"Dear Sergeant . . . The Qualitative Management Program was established by the Army as a means of improving the enlisted career force . . . You are to be barred from reenlistment."

Bar could end career

In both of these cases, the soldiers' military careers could come to a halt with reenlistments impossible as long as the bars remained in their personnel records.

In Jones' case he must ETS or show a vast improvement. George, however, with his DA imposed bar has a few other options. He can either submit a request for consideration, ETS, elect immediate discharge, or extend for 12 months, if his ETS is within 12 months from the date of the DA letter, for the purpose of improving his performance and showing evidence that he should be retained. In fact Sgt. George was lucky to have lasted as long as he did, since the unit commander could have imposed the bar himself for Sgt. George's apathy towards the overweight program alone.

In both of these hypothetical cases the bars could have been lifted if the individual's performance on the job as well as their attitudes showed a remarkable improvement.

Bars used to improve enlisted force

"Bars to reenlistment are management tools and can be initiated by anyone in the chain of command in an effort to upgrade the enlisted career force," commented a reenlistment officer. "A bar can be imposed against an individual to show him his shortcomings. Upon improvement and if the soldier shows that his retention is in the best interest of the Army, the bar can be lifted by the unit commander initiating a recommendation through channels."

There are many instances when this tool can be used to point out an individuals' shortcomings. AWOL, loss of clothing and equipment, continuous indebtedness, frequent article 15's, traffic violations and apathy to the overweight program are just a few.

The bars however, are not used in lieu of other types of separations. "If an individual displays performance or experiences problems requiring elimination from the service, then that's what can be done," stated a unit commander.

Paperwork must pass through chain

Once a bar to reenlistment is recommended by a unit commander (for a soldier with 10 or less years of service) at Ft. Benning, the paperwork must pass through the chain of command to the commander with special courtsmartial authority (a brigade or group commander here) for approval.

If the individual appeals the bar to reenlistment, the paperwork must then be forwarded to Post Reenlistment Office where the case is reviewed to make sure that regulations are complied with and the individual's rights are not being violated, according to SFC E.R. Saunders, Post Reenlistment NCO, here. From there the paperwork is sent to the commanding general for his approval or disapproval.

If the individual has more than 10 years of service approving or disapproving authority is at the Department of the Army level.

Once the Bar is approved, it is filed in the individual's personnel records and reenlistment becomes impossible. Every six months thereafter, the unit commander reviews the bar; if it is still valid, no further action is taken other than annotating on the records that the review had taken place.

If, however, the individual has shown that he has become a good performer and would be an asset to the military, the unit commander recommends that the bar be lifted. If approved, the bar is removed and the individual can reenlist once more.

Pass taken in conjunction with leave unauthorized

By Bev Lockhart

Every soldier knows there are only 30 authorized days leave per year. Most soldiers are also ready and willing to take any extra days they're offered — or can get away with taking.

It seems to be common practice here for soldiers to depart for leave on Friday when their leave actually starts on Monday. This is very easy to get away with since most units here permit soldiers to call in when departing on leave rather than signing out in person. This procedure is at the discretion of the leave approving authority.

AR 630-5 prohibits pass taken in conjunction with leave. This includes a regular pass which is granted for those periods when military personnel are not required to be present at their unit during specified off-duty hours, i.e., weekends, regular holidays and training holidays.

Many soldiers leave on their regular pass Friday with the intent to call their unit on Monday from their leave site to sign out. Many soldiers also call in Friday from their leave site to sign in, since they don't have to be back at their duty section until Monday. This saves four of those 30 days of precious leave.

But is it worth it? According to a soldier here, she tried to pull the stunt one too many times. She called her unit to sign in Friday, when her leave officially ended, while planning to fly in Sunday evening in time to make it to her duty section Monday morning.

Things didn't quite work out that way, though. She got snowed in and the flights were grounded. To top it off, her grandmother died. She needed an extension on her leave, but she'd already signed in. Fortunately, her First Sergeant was understanding enough (and she'd

British Army veteran a trainee here

Pvt. Joseph Romaine

By Lisa D'Luhy

After spending 11 years in the British Army, Joseph Romaine decided to pack his bags and his family and move to the United States to serve with the 82nd Airborne Division at Ft. Bragg, N. C.

Currently, the 34-year-old private is attending AIT here with Co B, 4th Bn, AIT Bde.

A native of Paighton, England, Romaine served with the "Red Devils," a Parachute Regiment, for three years before being promoted to the rank of Private First Class.

Unlike in the U. S. Army, promotion comes slow for the British, it takes over nine years for a soldier to reach the rank of Sergeant, and for some even longer. This is not detrimental to the soldier's career; it doesn't mean that he lacks the knowledge in his profession to advance, but rather he is not ready to assume a position of authority. Also, the British soldiers do not receive any special awards or citations for doing a job well done because it is expected of them.

The day Pvt. Romaine decided to become a soldier in the British Army he entered the recruiting office, took an entrance exam and left for the Parachute Regiment Depot that same day. His training at that depot lasted six months and is similiar to the Basic Training and AIT an American soldier receives.

When asked about the adjustment he had to make between the two armies, Pvt. Romaine commented that there really isn't much of a difference except for drill and ceremonies. He finds that weapons skills and physical training are basically the same. "I think the best way I could describe the two armies is with a quote from the late Winston Churchill, 'United in people, divided by a common language.' "

Romaine saw a lot of different countrysides when he served with the Red Devils. From Saudi Arabia to Canada, from Hong Kong to Turkey, Joseph has jumped into many countries and refers to Airborne as a means of getting into battle, the job starts when you hit the ground.

"He's a super troop, commented his company commander, Capt. Wes Cooler, referring to Pvt. Romaine, "Right now we are trying to see that his achievements be recognized and that his eleven years with an Army so similar to ours, not go by unnoticed."

Before getting out of the British Army, Romaine worked at Ft. Bragg as a liaison NCO and it was there that he received his U.S. jump wings, to go along with the British and German wings he received in Europe.

Joseph Romaine is looking forward to his assignment to Ft. Bragg as a member of the U. S. Army and will be leaving for the 2/505th Bn, 82nd Abn Division upon completion of AIT training. His wife, Mary Elizabeth, and their three children are presently residing in a small town outside Fayetteville, N. C.

10-8 on the war post

By Wagon Master
KFL 4845

This week's column is addressed to the one class of CBers who create more problems on CB than any other type there is. They are the "skip-shooters," the people who deliberately attempt to communicate beyond 150 miles. They are the cause of 60 percent of the so-called "land noise" that everyone hears. Unfortunately, a great many people have the mistaken idea that there is nothing wrong with shooting skip. However, there are several things wrong with it, other than just being illegal.

To be able to shoot skip (in most cases) you need a linear power amplifier, which is in violation of the FCC rules, as we discussed last week. When you transmit with the power packed up by a linear, you create spurious harmonics. These false signals cause television interference. In other words, you are messing up someone's TV program.

With CB equipment going to transistors and sensitized crystals, you can cause cross-channel interference of "bleed-over". More bleed-over is caused this way than any other, including having many CBers in one area. So now you are messing up someone's communication on adjacent channels, generally three or more on either side of the one you are on.

The next thing caused by the skip-shooter is interference with communications in other communities. This only adds to the existing ground noise level in those areas between two skip-shooters.

With no skip at all, the noise level would be at around three or four on the S-meter. However, with the sunspot situation, there will be a noise level of about five or six. This level can be tolerated, but how much longer are we going to tolerate the fruitcake here who decides he wants to talk to a nut in California?

If you see the FCC in town, don't be a "goodbuddy" and warn everyone, because the guy talking skip today may interfere with your use of the radio tomorrow. The only way that CB will ever be clear enough for use is for everyone who uses it properly to tell those who don't that they will not be tolerated and that they will be reported to the FCC.

Think about it the next time you hear someone shooting skip.

Discrepancies in pay and allowances the finance office hasn't corrected, requests for compassionate action, things that are sometimes hard to talk about during normal work hours — almost anything might be brought to your attention at open door sessions.

In many units there is no set time when a soldier may walk into the commander's office without a formal request. A commander might even be contacted at home when one of his soldiers has encountered a serious problem.

The open door is an adjunct to practicing leadership. It by no means replaces the chain of command, and, as a matter of fact, most of the soldier's problems can and should be solved within the chain of command. The open door policy is an extra dividend, bringing together you and your troops to solve problems that ultimately will affect morale or welfare.

Soldiers have the right to select the persons to whom they want to complain or from whom they seek information. You can talk or write to those from the top to the bottom run of the leadership ladder. They may seek information and asistance from the inspector general, the equal opportunity officer, the American Red Cross, the chaplain's office, the finance officer, the Army Emergency Relief officer and others.

It would be most beneficial, however, if you started at the company legel where you are closest to those who can provide assistance right away. (DA Spotlight).

Pass/leave

never been in trouble before) that she got off with a severe reprimand.

This is not usually the case, though, according to her company commander. If he suspects a soldier in his unit of violating AR 630-5, he investigates. If his investigation proves his suspicion to be correct, he uses his discretion as to what type of action should be taken. This could mean a counseling session, a letter of reprimand, an Article 15 or a court martial. Whether or not the soldier has been a problem before weighs a lot in his decision.

The next time you're thinking about calling in to sign on or off leave, consider the consequences. If you get caught, you could be in for more trouble than that two to four days is worth.

Guitar and Piano Classes

Registration for the Post Music Center's guitar and piano classes are now being held. The classes will be given on Tuesday evenings at the new Post Music Center, Bldg. 2783, at 6 p.m. The cost is $8 for six weeks of instruction with an additional $3 charge for the instruction book.

"Harvey"

If you haven't seen the Ft. Benning Dramatizer's production of "Harvey" yet, you're running out of time. Final performances will be held at 8 p.m. tonight and tomorrow at the new Ft. Benning Playhouse, corner of Anderson St. and Wold Ave.

It's free and open to the public.

Talent Needed

The Post Music Center is always looking for new talent for their Acoustical Coffee House, Chamber Music Society, Jam Night, and disco and floor shows. Choral groups, stage bands, musical theater presentations, and individuals are invited to display their talent.

This is a good opportunity to get up in front of an audience and lose that stage fright. Anyone interested should call 545-1679.

Instruments Available

The Post Music Center has a variety of instruments available to retired and active duty personnel and their dependents and Department of the Army civilians. However, the instruments must be used at the Music Center, Bldg. 2783, during operating hours: Tuesday through Sunday, 1:30 to 9:30 p.m.

Funny Car Championship

The Phenix Dragway will host the Nitro Bowl, a "AA" Funny Car Championship, tomorrow and Sunday. There will be many classes run, including "ET" bracket cars. Gates open at 9 a.m. with races starting at 2:30 p.m.

"Up With People"

International students will present a two-hour musical at Three Arts Theater in Columbus tonight and tomorrow at 8 p.m.

Tickets are available in advance for $4 from the Columbus Jaycee Headquarters, Columbus Chamber of Commerce, Sodbuster and Billy, and Super Shirts. Tickets are also available for $5 at the door.

"Three Penny Opera"

Columbus College's Drama Department is performing the satirical play, "Three Penny Opera," through Monday. The play, which portrays the hypocrisy of righteous people, begins at 8 p.m. nightly. The scene is London, but the performance will be staged at Fine Arts Hall Auditorium at the college.

Tickets are $3, general admission; $1.50 for senior citizens, military personnel and students. CC students get in free with IDs.

To make reservations, which are required, call 563-3801 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.

"Concert for Three"

The Columbus Museum of Arts and Sciences Auditorium will be the scene of a recital featuring James R. McFadden on the bassoon, John Viton on the oboe and Mary Stubbs on the piano. All three are Columbus faculty members.

The free concert will be held at 3 p.m. Sunday.

"Diary of Anne Frank"

Atlanta's Alliance Theater brings to life, "Diary of Anne Frank," the story of a young Jewish girl who hid from the Nazis during WWII. Performances begin at 8 p.m. at the Memorial Arts Center, 1280 Peachtree St., Atlanta, and will run through tomorrow. Reservations may be made by calling the box office at 404-892-2414. Tickets are $6.24 and $7.80.

"Masterpiece"

A play depicting the Vermeer art forgeries of the 1940s, "Masterpiece," will be performed at the Peachtree Playhouse, 1150 Peachtree St., Atlanta, through Sunday.

The curtain rises tonight at 8:30, tomorrow at 6 and 9:30 p.m., and Sunday at 3 and 7:30 p.m.

Tickets are $6.50 and $8.50. For reservations call 404-892-4110.

AER kicks off

The 1978 Army Emergency Relief (AER) Fund Campaign will kick off Monday at the Army Community Service (ACS) Welcome Center Bldg. 83, at 10 a.m. The Assistant Post Commander, Col. Nelson, will speak.

AER has been providing emergency financial assistance to deserving Army members — both active duty and retired — for 35 years. Funded by donations from service members, the organization is just one of the Army's many ways of taking care of its own.

The AER Fund Campaign will be conducted March 13 through May 3 with a goal of $25,000. Post personnel will be given the opportunity to contribute to the program when contacted by their section AER Fund Drive Keyman.

During the past year, the Ft. Benning AER section issued $147,000 of emergency financial assistance to over 1,300 service members and dependents. The interest free emergency loans are available to all military personnel, including military transients and dependents of retirees.

Project officers have been appointed by each major unit, activity and office throughout the installation to collect contributions for the drive. Military personnel are requested to make their contributions at their unit, while retirees living in the tri-city area are asked to send their donations to the AER Office, Ft. Benning, Ga., 31905; or bring them in person to the Welcome Center, Bldg. 83, room 112.

USMA celebrates birthday

The West Point Society of Fort Benning and Columbus will hold a Founders' Day dinner on March 18 to celebrate the 176th birthday of the United States Military Academy.

The co-ed dinner will be held in the Supper Club of the Officers' club with a social hour beginning at 6:30 p.m. L. G. Robert R. Shoemaker, deputy commander, Forces Command, will be the guest speaker.

All West Point graduates, ex-cadets and graduates of the US Navel Academy, US Air Force Academy, and foreign military academies, who have not been contacted and desire to attend, should contact L. C. Eubanks at 544-4865 before March 13.

Capt. Kathryn G. Carlson, Co A, Hqs Cmd, chats with North Georgia College President Dr. John Owen following her address to a group of North Georgia College students. Capt. Carlson spoke on career opportunities for women in today's Army.

Sand Hill gets modern dental clinic

The dedication of the new $1.5 million Salomon Dental Clinic in the Sand Hill area on post was held on February 23 at 3 p.m.

Maj. Gen. Marshall E. McCabe, U. S. Army Health Services Command, Ft. Sam Houston, Tex. and Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey were the principal speakers during the ceremony.

The 28-chair ultramodern clinic was named in honor of Captain Ben Louis Salomon Dental Corps, United States Army. Milton F. Willner of Los Angeles, life-long friend of the Salomon family, unveiled a portrait of the captain during the dedication.

Capt. Salomon was killed in action during World War II on July 7, 1944 in Saipan, Marianas Islands. He was recommended for the Medal of Honor.

Designed to blend with the modern barracks going up on Sand Hill, the clinic is equipped with the most up to date dental equipment available. The arrangement of three intricate maze operatory areas allow the staff easy access to more than one patient, resulting in the maximum utilization of personnel. It has a staff of 13 dental officers, nine enlisted and 29 civilians.

At present, the Salomon Dental Clinic will provide routine and speciality dental care for Advanced Infantry Training Brigade active duty dependents, retired military personnel and the proposed One Sation Unit Training program.

Due to the closing of the Dental Clinic No. 5 today, patients from HHC, Staff and Faculty, AIT Bde will also start receiving treatment there.

Artillerymen outshoot Hqs Cmd

By Betty Zimmerman and Debra Hilgeman

Btry C, 2/10 Field Artillery, 197th Infantry Bde, became the post's company-level basketball champions Monday night by defeating Co A, Hqs Cmd, 96-93, at Briant Wells Fieldhouse.

The hard fought battle went into overtime when the clock ran out with the score tied at 81-each. Ernest Crawley (21) sank four free throws and a field goal for six points in overtime and Frankie Tatum (22) added five, while Eddie Biggs (20) accounted for the other four to pull it out for Btry C.

Charlie Jackson (5) was high scorer for the winners with 30 points, but he fouled out early in the fourth quarter. David Pruden (34) led Co A with 41 points followed by Robert Hutchinson (10) with a 25-point total despite being ejected from the game early in the fourth quarter. Pruden's shooting percentage was fantastic with left-handed jump shots hitting from all over the floor. On free throws, he made 5 of 6 attempts.

Btry C earned a shot at the championship by edging Co A, 118 - 108 in a double overtime game Friday night. This come-from-behind effort tied their tournament win-loss record which mandated the play-off game.

In Friday's first half action, C Btry hurt their cause by committing numerous fouls and attempting long shots that missed their mark. Co A grabbed an early lead and maintained it with good ball-handling and accurate shooting, giving them a 51-46 lead at the end of the first half.

Btry C, led by forward Charlie Jackson, gained momentum in the second half and closed the gap in the early minutes of play. The rest of the half was touch and go and the second half went into overtime with the scoreboard showing 96 each.

In the first five-minute overtime, Co A scored six points before Btry C made it on the board but the score was soon tied up again and play ended tied at 102 each.

As the game went into the second overtime, Btry C finally found the impetus they needed to overtake Co A and the outcome was 118-108.

Col. Richard W. McKee, director of Personnel and Community Activities, presented individual trophies to members of both teams and first and second-place trophies, respectively, to coach Nathan Ferebee, Btry C and player-coach David Pruden, Co A, in ceremonies after Monday night's game.

Flyers zipped by Select Side team

The Flyers, Benning's rugby team, were held scoreless by the Georgia Select Side team Saturday on Stillwell Field.

The Georgia Select Side is a composite team of the best players in the state and will compete with other union select sides for an opportunity to play on the American International Team, the Eagles.

The Select Sides' experience and speed was too much for the aggressive but novice Flyers' "A" and "B" teams. Serving as the opposition for the Select Side, the standard 40-minute halves were divided into four 20-minute playing periods.

The Select Side was allowed liberal substitutions as they downed the "A" team 12-0, 8-0 and the "B" team 20-0 and 8-0.

The Flyers were scheduled to play Hilton Head tomorrow but the game was been cancelled. The Flyers will host the Atlanta Rugby/Football Club next Saturday.

IOAC soccer team falls to local club

The IOAC 2-78 soccer team fell to the Columbus Soccer Club 5-1 on Stillwell Field Saturday.

The Columbus team scored three goals in the first half while the IOAC team was held scoreless.

During the second half, Johnny Loumintang, an Allied student from Indonesia, scored the IOAC team's only goal and the Columbus Soccer Club scored two more times.

The final score was the IOAC team 1 goal and the Columbus team 5 goals.

The IOAC team is looking for other teams in the Columbus/Ft. Benning area to compete against. Any teams interested should contact the "Bayonet" editor in the Public Affairs Office at 545-7391.

Tornadoes

They won't take you to Oz

According to the National Weather Service, Georgia is in the area known as the "Tornado Belt." Although the violent storms may occur at any time of the year, they are most common in Spring.

The destructive whirling wind is accompanied by a funnel-shaped cloud which progresses in a narrow path. Southerly winds usually accompany tornado weather, which is characteristically hot, humid and oppressive. The tornado cloud may appear to be greenish-black within an hour or two prior to the storm. The tornado funnel stretches from the cloud, resembling a spinning, twisting rope at its bottom. Usually it is black or gray and sounds like the roar of a jet engine or diesel freight train. Tornado winds have been recorded as low as 70 mph and as high as 250 to 300 mph, according to the National Weather Service.

Warnings and watches

Tornado watches are issued to alert the public to the possibility of tornadoes. It covers a specific area for a specific period of time. Normal activities need not be interrupted during a watch unless threatening skies are observed.

Tornado warnings are issued when a tornado has been sighted or indicated by radar. Warnings are usually issued for one or more counties and in most cases remain in effect for less than an hour.

There are three different storm warnings given on post when such a storm is expected to strike.

- The Blue Warning is given when gusty surface winds in excess of 39 mph are expected.
- The Green Warning is given when sustained surface winds in excess of 55 mph or gusts in excess of 69 mph are expected to occur within six hours, but not before one and a half hours. Post sirens will give a series of two steady two-minute sounds interrupted by one silent period of one minute. Residential areas are notified by Mobile Public Address sets.
- The Black Warning is given when sustained surface winds in excess of 55 mph, or gusts in excess of 69 mph, or tornadoes are forecast to occur within one and a half hours. A steady sound of post sirens for three minutes will follow with residential areas being notified by Mobile Public Address sets. All clear is given when severe storm danger is past.

Protecting yourself

The Ft. Benning Storm and Shelter Plan includes the steps that should be taken to protect yourself and your family should a well-defined storm with dangerous wind velocity be expected to strike the area.

During a tornado warning, it is advised to remain indoors. Avoid windows, the upper stories of office buildings, house trailers, automobiles, and structures with largely, poorly supported roofs such as auditoriums and gymnasiums.

In open country, move from the tornado's path at right angles. If there is no time to escape, lie flat in the nearest ditch or ravine but be alert to rising water.

If you are in an office building, stand in interior hallways on the lower floors, preferably in the basement. In maintenance areas, workers should move quickly to the section of the plant offering the greatest protection in accordance with advance plans.

At home, a basement usually offers the greatest safety. If there is no basement available, take cover under heavy furniture in the center of the house against strong inside walls. Covering youself with a rug provides some protection against flying glass and debris. Opening windows and doors on the side of the house away from the winds may help equalize dangerous variations in air pressure.

Don't use the telephone unless it becomes absolutely necesary; all lines must be left open for emergency use. A battery-powered radio

Prayer coffee planned

A prayer coffee is being planned for March 10 at 10 a.m. at the Main Post Chapel Annex, Ft. Benning.

The inspirational coffee will be held to present plans for the Great Commission Prayer Crusade in Columbus. Louise Gelmore, Great Commission Prayer Crusade traveling representative from Nashville, Tenn. will be the guest speaker.

The Prayer Crusade is an interdenominational movement that encourages groups to unite in prayer for moral and spiritual awakening in America and around the world, for personal, community, state, national and world wide needs and evengelistic outreach.

Barbara Brockmann, steering committee member for the Great Commission Prayer Crusade Austin, Texas, will hostess the coffee. TIC Chapel is sponsoring the event. Call Toni Needham for free nursery reservations at 689-4911.

March Roars

Winter turns to spring during March, bringing with it some of the area's most severe weather. The predominant flow of air begins to shift from northwest to southeast, increasing the amount of moist tropical air. The tropical air mixes with cold polar air causes the severe weather. In fact, most of the tornado activity developing in this area, does so in March. Frontal passages begin to decrease; however, we can normally expect six cold fronts in our area during March.

Based on 25 years of historical data, an average high of 68 F. and an average low of 44 F. can be expected. The prevailing direction and speed of the surface wind is Northwest at 6 knots. The monthly average for precipitation is 5.3 inches.

Daily forecast information is available by dialing the recorded forecast at 545-5281. More specific information can be obtained by calling the forecaster at 545-5628/2472.

Command and General Staff Course

Individuals interested in attending the summer phase of Command and General Staff Course (C&GS) at Hattiesburg, Miss., must submit their application to ATTN: ATZB-DPT-T not later than April 3.

Applications must be submitted on DA Form 2496. The following information is necessary: Name, rank, Social Security Number, unit of assignment, phase, security clearance, branch, and desired reporting date.

For more information call 545-4252/5457.

The MUST Hospital is in operation at Ft. Stewart after that installation's hospital was destroyed by fire. PFC David A. Lask (1) and Pv2 Stuart K. Elective surgery in the MUST operation room began Tuesday and it is expected that the 34th Bn unit will remain at Ft. Stewart for approximately 5 months.

Night vision goggles a savings

The Army thinks it may save $400 to $500 million on the cost of 43,000 night vision goggles which are currently under development.

Cost of the new goggles, originally estimated at a cost of $900 million, may be reduced greatly as a result of a new tube which magnifies light for night vision. A DA official said the estimated savings will come if the tube is manufactured for less money than existing variations, as expected. It lasts longer in relation to cost, and fewer parts and repairs are necessary.

The new type goggles are expected to enter the Army inventory in 1982 and key parts will be designed to fit into cases which house light magnifying devices in current models.

The goggles are designed primarily for pilots and drivers.

will provide updates on weather conditions.

On a Green or Black Warning, children will be placed in designated shelter areas within the individual school. The same procedures apply to the post nursery. Children remain in designated shelter areas until the "All Clear" signal is sounded.

In the event it becomes necessary to evacuate families due to damaged quarters, they will be housed in Bldg. 83. Family Housing will take the responsibility to find quarters if it becomes necessary to house families over an extended period of time.

Personnel living in family quarters should have a copy of USAIC Pam 500-1, Storm and Air Defense Instructions for Dependents. If you have not received your copy, contact the Family Housing Office immediately.

After all, a tornado is more likely to cause fatalities in Georgia than in several of the Plains states, according to the National Weather Service. The information USAIC Pam 500-1 provides could save your life.

Workshop slated

Beth McGhee, of the Dairy and Nutrition Council of Columbus, will conduct a "Nutrition Workshop" for parents with children of all ages.

The workshop will be held on March 13 from 9:30 a.m. until 2 p.m., at the Ft. Benning "Follow Me" Golf Course's Country Club as part of the Monthly Early Education for Pre-Schoolers' Parents Education Program. The workshop is sponsored by the Catholic Activity Center.

The Practical Workshop will be concerned with money-saving as well as nutritional ways for parents to feed their children.

For additional information, please call 545-2054.

'Follow Me' wins award

"Good-looking cooking" was the objective for entrants vying for blue ribbons in the first annual Culinary Art Show held on post at the Officers' Club February 22.

SSgt. Don Carter, Co C, 1st Bn., AIT Bde, took first place in the "Best in Show" category with an 80-pound replica of the Infantry's "Follow Me" emblem sculpted in shortening. SSgt. Carter tied with CWO James Willis, Headquarters, AIT Bde, for first prize in the Centerpiece category also.

Other blue ribbon winners were PFC Birdie Hunter, 67 Maintenance, 97th Infantry Bde, in the Cold Meat category and Sp5 Jimmy E. Thomas of Co D, 1st Bn, AIT Bde, in the Cake category.

The three first place winners will compete in the third U.S. Culinary Arts competition at Ft. Lee, Va. this month.

Do you hear me?

By Bill Lopez

A 1975 Army study concluded that hearing disorders, primarily among combat arms troops, may be the most common occupational disability in the Army. DA officials say the problem is still a big one in 1978.

The study estimated that as many as half of the soldiers in infantry, armor and artillery branches, after more than 10 years, have hearing problems which interfere with job performance.

An estimated 20 to 30 percent of soldiers in these branches have "clinically significant" hearing loss after only 1½ years of Army service, the study reported.

In addition to the combat arms, other career fields may also expose soldiers to a variety of equipment noises which can damage hearing.

Many soldiers with hearing problems should, but don't have profiles which would help them to prevent further damage to their hearing, the study suggests.

Earplugs don't always offer enough protection. If you think you may have a hearing problem, see a doctor.

AER campaign underway

The 1978 Army Emergency Relief (AER) Fund Campaign kicked off Monday with the post goal set at $25,000.

AER has been providing emergency financial assistance to deserving Army members — both active duty and retired — for 35 years. Funded by donations from service members, the organization is just one of the Army's many ways of taking care of its own.

The AER Fund Campaign will be conducted through May 3 with a goal of $25,000. Post personnel will be given the opportunity to contribute to the program when contacted by their section AER Fund Drive Keyman.

During the past year, the AER section here issued $147,000 of emergency financial assistance to over 1,300 service members and dependents. The interest free emergency loans are available to all military personnel, including military transients and dependents of retirees.

Project officers have been appointed by each major unit, activity and office throughout the installation to collect contributions for the drive. Military personnel are requested to make their contributions at their unit, while retirees living in the tri-city area are asked to send their donations to the AER Office, Ft. Benning, Ga., 31905; or bring them in person to the Welcome Center, Bldg. 83, room 112.

Appointments for donating

A Donor Center will be open at Martin Army Hospital's laboratory for donors on an appointment basis, Monday through Friday. You can make an appointment by calling 544-2221 or 544-2780. "Give the gift of life — your blood," says 1stLt. James C. Stevens, MAH blood coordinator.

New Explorer post eyed

Benning's Explorers Committee is thinking about a post for young men and women, 14 to 21 years old, interested in field conservation.

Members will learn wildlife, fish, forestry, and conservation management by practice field application. There will also be nature walks and overnight back packing trips to study wildlife in its own habitat.

If you would like to participate contact SFC Marsh or SGM Johnson at 545-4443 or 544-4017 no later than March 24.

METRA provides buses

By Pam Pegram

Howard Bus Lines ended service to Ft. Benning March 3 and Columbus' METRA stepped in on an emergency basis.

The Columbus-based bus line stopped service after a period of financial difficulty.

Prior to discontinuing service, the Howard Bus Lines carried soldiers and area residents to and from post as well as Benning children to and from Spencer High School.

According to Columbus' Transportation Planning Chief Tony Collier, the city buses began taking school children from post to Spencer High School this week.

Although post officials have not been entirely pleased with the recent quality of Howard's service, it was the management of the bus line itself that announced the end of its operation.

"I don't know for sure if the end of our bus service is permanent," commented Thurston Crawford, owner of Howard Bus Lines. "Even transit bus lines like the METRA are having trouble because of increasing cost and declining patronage," he continued.

"The city buses will keep the same schedule set by Howard's," said C. L. Moffitt, METRA transportation director. The 65 cent fee charged by Howard Bus Lines will continue.

"Benning customers are reminded that they must have the exact change because of a

DA 'clears the air' on smoking policy

In an attempt to "clear the air" of any misconceptions about the tobacco-smoking policy, which was introduced by the Office of the Surgeon General, the Department of the Army has implemented the following guidelines:

According to AR 1-8, smoking is not permitted in auditoriums and no-smoking signs are posted in these areas. Receptacles are placed just outside the auditoriums so that visitors may dispose of cigarettes, etc., before they enter.

No-smoking areas are established in eating facilities in DoD occupied buildings wherever practicable. If smoking is permitted, all no-smoking areas should be designated and posted based on an estimate of smoking and nonsmoking patrons served.

"We tried to set up no-smoking areas here but the signs were ignored, stated a post official. "People just didn't pay any attention to them."

Elevators are strictly no-smoking areas as are shuttle vehicles such as buses, vans and sedans.

In medical facilities, smoking is restricted to staff lounges, private offices, and specially designated areas. Smoking is permitted in visitor waiting areas only where space and ventilation permits separated smoking and nonsmoking sections.

Smoking in conference rooms and classrooms prohibited.

In establishing and continuing a smoking policy in work areas under their jurisdiction, officials must strive to maintain a balance between the rights of nonsmokers and smokers. Smoking will be permitted in private offices. In common work spaces shared by smokers and nonsmokers, smoking will be permitted only if the flow of air in the room is adequate to remove smoke from a work area to provide a healthy environment. Work space may be planned to accommodate the preference of each group. As a general rule, a minimum ventilation rate of 10 cubic feet of fresh air per minute per person is recommended.

Except in medical care facilities, there should be no limitations on smoking in corridors, lobbies, and restrooms as persons are not in these areas for very long.

Emphasis is placed on educational programs to discourage smoking. These programs focus on high risk personnel such as those with chronic bronchitis, emphysema, asthma and coronary heart disease.

News in brief

. . . MAH sponsors Female Cancer Screening Clinic

A Female Cancer Screeing Clinic will be sponsored by Martin Army Hospital Saturday, March 18, from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the OB-GYN Clinic.

This program is being conducted as a contribution to the American Cancer Society educational efforts.

The program will take approximately 2 hours and will include a PAP Smear, breast examination, and instruction on proper breast examination and cancer warning signals. A surgeon will also be available should breast biopsy be required.

The Cancer Screening Clinic is available for all categories of eligible beneficiaries who have not had a PAP Smear or breast examination in the past 8-10 months. Hospital officials have requested that patients be 25 years of age or older, not in their menstrual cycle and, if possible, patients should be in the middle cycle.

This is not a problem GYN Clinic. Those patients seen who have GYN problems will be referred to the Central Appointment Desk for an appointment at a later date.

Physicians, nurses, and para professional personnel have volunteered their time for this clinic. If the response of the community is favorable, more cancer screening clinics will be conducted in the future.

Appointments for the program may be obtained by calling the Central Appointment Desk at 544-1051 or 682-1480.

Prospective patients are requested to call as soon as possible because only a limited number of appointments are available.

. . DYA participating in fiesta

Any youth dependents 6-19 years old, interested in participating in the Ft. Benning Spring Fiesta scheduled for April 8 can do so by registering at DYA, Bldg. 1054, Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. The last day for signing up is March 27.

The Fiesta will feature pinata games, a bean bag hunt, track events and a two-mile family walk-run.

Scout-O-Rama tickets on sale

Benning scouts are selling tickets to the Annual Chattahoochee Council Scout-O-Rama.

Members of Benning Packs Cub, Scout Troops and Explorer Posts are selling the tickets door to door on post for $1 each. The scouts are vying for prizes while selling tickets. Fifty percent of each dollar in ticket sales goes back to the scout's unit in the form of cash commission, prizes and patches.

The Scout-O-Rama, which will take place at Columbus Municipal Auditorium, April 1, will feature demonstrations and displays by Chattahoochee Council scouts.

METRA

METRA policy," Moffitt pointed out.

"The city will not have to buy new buses to provide the service, but it may have to hire additional drivers," commented Moffitt.

According to him, no studies have been made on the profit-ability of the service. "The city was contacted only last week about the possibility of assuming the service. Post officials gave the final go-ahead at 5:15 p.m. March 2," Moffitt said.

"No agreement has been made at this point," he continued. "We are optimistic that we will be able to continue to provide this service."

Two METRA buses are presently covering the regular Ft. Benning/Columbus route and plans allow METRA pick-up of Spencer students to begin the latter part of this week. Since March 3, military buses have been carrying the students.

Officials were uncertain if Howard's charter service between Columbus' airport and post would continue. A Georgia Public Service Commission ruling on this is expected soon.

"METRA is subsidized by federal grants, but the bus line can legally serve Ft. Benning if it can show the routes will benefit Columbus. METRA would take a loss on servicing Ft. Benning if they thought it would provide a benefit to the people of Columbus," Moffitt said.

"Columbus residents go to Ft. Benning to work. Soldiers coming from Ft. Benning will spend money in Columbus . . . It'll stimulate the economy regardless of whether METRA loses money or not," commented Moffitt.

Coffee Call

The Coffee Call chairman and committee met at MAH on March 1 at 9 a.m. to serve coffee and donuts to the patients. We want to thank Mrs. Dolores Gardner and Mrs. Elizabeth Jackson for their assistance. The chairman is Mrs. Edith Morgan.

Board Meeting

The monthly board meeting was held at the NCOWC on March 6 at 10 a.m. The clubhouse is located in the Lawson Field area. Mrs. Ethel Wise served as hostess for this occasion.

Hqs 197th Infantry Bde

On February 17 the wives of Hqs 197th Infantry Bde met at the home of Mrs. John G. Doble, Jr. for their monthly coffee. The hostesses for this most enjoyable event were Mrs. Doble and Mrs. Winston F. McColl. Mrs. James R. Hall, wife of the brigade commander, welcomed all the ladies and thanked them for coming. She extended a warm welcome to newcomers Ann Marie Grimmett, Mary Frank, Chryll Jeffrey, and Marjorie Dompe. A sad farewell was bid to Marta Burgess who was presented a traditional silver tray. As part of the program Mrs. McColl presented a make-up demonstration giving many helpful hints.

Glad you asked . . .

Do you feel that the Army would be better if everyone had their choice of duty station?

Capt. Joe Repya, Infantry Officer Advance Course 2-78

From a practical point of view, it would be impossible for the Army to live with such a system. The Army has good and bad duty stations and as a result, the professional soldier must be willing to serve at both. Assignment officers, whenever possible, should take the individual's station preference into consideration. In the final analysis, the needs of the Army must come first.

2ndLt. Clyde A. Selleck III, 45th Student Co

Most soldiers would be much happier if they could choose their duty station because of family ties and other factors that a large organization like the Army usually cannot take into account.

Majorie Dailey, married dependent

I feel that choice of duty station would be very helpful to the married soldier. When young married men go overseas, it adds much stress to family life and the family pocketbook. It also takes a lot of money out of Uncle Sam's pocket.

Sp4 Linda L. Lindy, 15th Finance Co

Although certain individuals might be more pleased to have a duty station of their choice, we must realize that with an organization the size of the U.S. Army, it would be impossible to give everyone their choice.

SFC James L. Walker, HHC 4th Student Bn, TSB

Yes I do because this would enable military personnel to plan further ahead as to their needs and responsibilities in the service and family life.

Duty station

Location affects performance

By Bev Lockhart

When I found out my first permanent duty station was going to be Ft. Benning, I was in AIT at Ft. Benjamin Harrison, Ind. After the cold hard winter up there, I was ready to go south. But after a few months here, I was wishing I was back at Ft. Benjamin Harrison again.

One of the most commonly heard phrases in the Army is, "My last duty station was better than this one." But if most soldiers were sent back to that previous duty station, they'd probably find just as many things to gripe about. In other words — "The grass is always greener on the other side of the fence" — or at least it seems that way.

You can choose

When a recruit enlists in the Army, he or she gets one of two choices: They can pick either their MOS or their first duty station. Most soldiers opt for their MOS because they feel they can put up with the location if they are working in a job they like. But oftentimes they find themselves in a terrible location, and no matter how good the job is, they're miserable. What is the end product? They're not as effective in their job as they could be.

The Department of the Army is so concerned with effective soldiers, but they seem to be unconcerned about the effect a bad location has on a soldier's morale. The key word is "seem." What most soldiers don't "seem" to remember is there are ways of getting out of a bad location:

- DA Form 4187, Personnel Action, provides for Volunteer for Foreign Service. The individual has a choice of codes (areas) to choose from. He or she lists three codes in order of preference. The form may be filled out by the soldier's company SIDPERS clerk.

- DA Form 2635, Enlisted Preference Statement, is consulted by Department of the Army agencies each time a soldier is considered for reassignment, or a change in a soldier's status occurs. The statement is usually completed while the soldier is in AIT, seven months prior to completion of an overseas tour and when a soldier desires to change his or her assignment preference. Resubmission voids any previous statement.

Try a swap

- Last but not least, if a soldier is really desperate, he or she may try for a stateside swap. Stateside swaps are governed by AR 614-200, section IV. The best way for a soldier to find someone interested in a stateside swap is to submit his order MOS, rank, social security number, unit, and desired location(s) along with their signature to Army Times, Attn: Stateside Swaps, 475 School St., S.W., Washington, D.C. 20024. Soldiers should be aware that once he or she has found someone to swap with, both of them must receive their commander's approval. If your commander thinks the soldier is doing a good job, he may not approve the swap.

I tried all three options and one of them finally came through. After submitting four DA Form 4187s in the year that I've been here I received orders for Germany. I'm beginning to think that someone up there (at DA) is concerned with my happiness. Maybe I'm just being too optimistic, but at least I'll have my choice of duty station. At last.

Letters to the editor

To grow or not to grow that is the question

Columbus is celebrating the 150th year of its founding and Mayor Jack P. Mickle, by proclamation has established the "Brotherhood of the Brush". It calls for the men to grow beards as their forefathers once had. I would like to know if Ft. Benning soldiers will be allowed to grow beards in celebration of this occasion.

It would seem that since we consider ourselves a part of the community we should participate as fully as possible with the events of the community.

What are the regulations governing this sort of thing and what is the Commanding General's policy covering this event? I, for one, along with many others would like to grow a beard for the festivities.

Tired of shaving
Hqs Co, Hqs Cmd

AR 600-20, Section VI, Paragraph 5-39, states "the face will be clean shaven except that mustaches are permitted. If a mustache is worn, it will be kept neatly trimmed and tidy. No portion extending beyond the corners of the mouth will fall below a line parallel with the bottom of the lower lip. Goatees and beards are not authorized." So, if you wish to become one of the "Brotherhood of the Brush" and stay within Army regulations, you may only grow a mustache.

Contempt of court: Law tough on 'no shows'

By Bev Lockhart

There seems to be a common misconception on post that soldiers are not subject to the jurisdiction of civilian courts. Unfortunately, this is definitely not true.

Soldiers cannot hide from civilian offenses merely by returning to post. Although Ft. Benning is an exclusive Federal legislative jurisdiction, the states of Georgia and Alabama have reserved the right to service their civil and criminal process within the border of its state on post.

Traffic violations are one of the most frequent offenses. Violators cited for misdemeanors are issued a summons to appear in Recorders' Court in the form of a traffic ticket.

If the violator doesn't show up for a court date, the judge finds him in contempt of court and issues an arrest warrant. The Columbus Fugitive Squad picks the warrant up and presents it to the office of the Staff Judge Advocate (SJA), according to the Commander of Columbus Police Department Patrol Service Jim Weatherington.

After reviewing the warrant to determine if it is legal, SJA notifies the soldier's unit and the soldier is required to report to SJA, Bldg. 5.

After the soldier reports to SJA he is turned over to the civilian authority and taken downtown where he is charged and given the opportunity to post bond. If the soldier cannot post bond, he is detained until the next court day. The original case is disposed of before the contempt of court charge is brought up.

The maximum contempt of court fine is $250 or 90 days in jail. The decision is left up to the judge's discretion, but the normal fee is $40 to $50.

If a soldier is detained by civilian authorities, he stands a chance of being charged with AWOL. According to Capt. Paul Anderson, chief of Administrative Law, SJA, the soldier won't be charged with AWOL unless he is found guilty of the misdemeanor. Whether or not non-judicial punishment is given is the soldier's company commander's decision.

So the next time you are served with a summons, don't miss your court date. The original charges is bad enough without a contempt of court charge slapped on top of it.

Children learn ABCs, colors at Tot Activity

By Joyce Walker

The only sound to be heard in the cozy little schoolroom is the scratching of pencils against paper. The volunteer teacher moves about the room, pausing every now and then to guide a small hand in matching like shapes (circles, squares, triangle, etc.,) faintly outlined on the paper.

This scene takes place in the Lavoie Community Life Center where a pre-schoolers Tot Activity has been in operation since February 6.

Five women volunteers take turns teaching the three-to five-year-old youngsters their ABCs, a few colors and some songs in preparation for kindergarten. "We also try to teach them how to play together, share and develop a sense of responsibility," stated Patricia Padgett, director of activities at the Center and a volunteer in the program.

The idea of opening a Tot Activity originated with Jean Davis, who assists with the program. "I couldn't find a job and was bored with sitting at home," explained Mrs. Davis, "so I thought becoming involved in some tot activity would be a more meaningful way of spending my time."

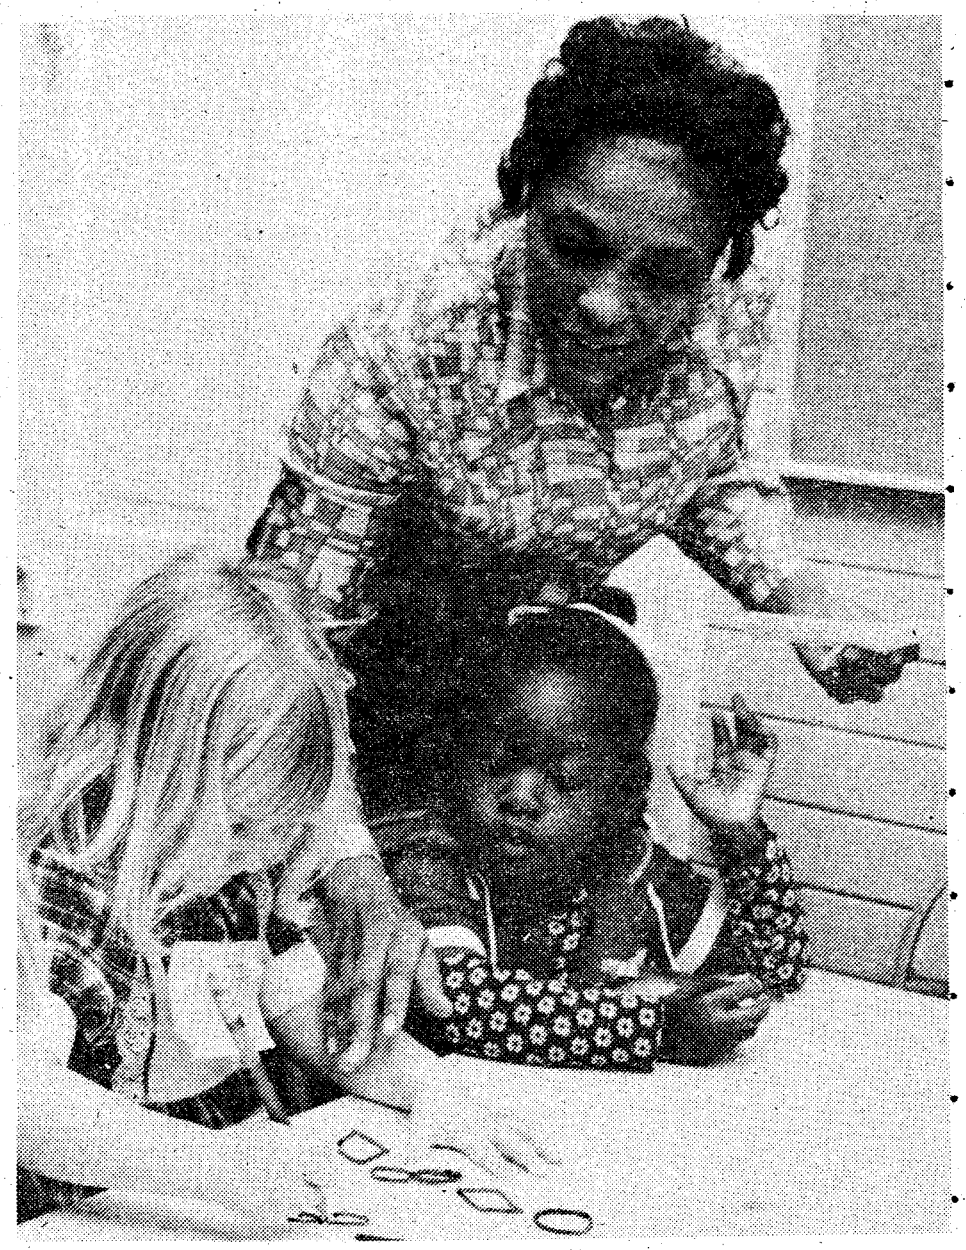
There are currently 20 tots enrolled in the program which is held on Monday and Wednesday mornings from 9-11 a.m. and "we have a waiting list," Padgett added. Each child donates $3 per month to help pay for books, crayons, papers and other materials needed to run the activity. Parents of the children provide cookies, drinks and other snacks.

"The children would love to come every day," remarked SSgt. Julio Rodriques, coordinator of the Community Center, "but we don't have the facilities to operate on a daily basis."

The one room in the center that houses the young students was decorated by volunteers from the Lavoie community. A chalk-board covers one wall, while brightly colored pictures of animals and letters of the alphabet adorn the others. Two long tables, surrounded by chairs, are used as desks. Mailboxes made from milk cartons are marked with each student's name, "so they have a place to keep their materials," added Lola Bannister, chairperson for Youth Activities Group and a helper in the program.

Other volunteers in the program are Karen Benthien and Ursula Tetzlaff, editor of the Lavoie newsletter.

Everyone involved in the Tot Activity feel it is a big success with the kids. Due to its success, they have hopes of being able to expand the activity two more days a week within the next three or four months.



Lola Bannister picks up the papers of Erica Buljung and Dee Holmes, two youngsters attending the pre-schoolers Tot Activity.

Art contest, awards highlight Girl Scout Week

By Pat Brown

The 21 Girl Scout troops here will join Girl Scouts across the nation in celebrating Girl Scout Week with focus on a different activity each day.

A highlight of Girl Scout Week, Sunday through March 18, will be the Citizenship Day program, Tuesday. Uniformed scouts from the three Cadette troops, seven Junior troops and eleven Brownie troops on post will gather at 5:30 p.m. in front of Bldg. 4 to hold a Flag Retreat ceremony. Representatives from the different troops will lower the 50 State flags and the U. S. flag, sing patriotic songs and say the Girl Scout Promise.

Mrs. William J. Livsey, honorary board member of the Concharty Council of Girl Scouts, and Mrs. Addison D. Davis III, Benning representative to the Board, plan to participate in the colorful ceremony.

On Sunday each troop will try to attend at least one church service as a group. Various chapels throughout the post will give special recognition to the Scouts.

On Monday Homemakers Day, the post Fire Department will present a program on "Safety in the Home" in Classroom 2, Bldg 4, at 6:45 p.m. The program is open to the public.

Military Police crime fighting goes to the dogs

The Military Police will do anything to fight crime in the streets even if it means going to the dogs.

During the last month, the Provost Marshal's Office has expanded their crime prevention efforts by the use of patrol dog teams in the various problem areas of post.

Sand Hill was the first area assigned to the patrol dog teams due to several robberies and assaults that had occured in that area.

"The dog teams are also being sent into the post housing areas in response to prowler complaints," commented SSgt. Diana Gilspy, NCOIC of the dog patrol.

As a highly visible dismounted patrol, the Military Policeman and his dog usually walk their beat minimizing the opportunity for criminal acts to occur, SSgt. Gilspy explained.

Motorized patrols cover the areas near troop billets, around the post exchanges and in poorly lighted housing and parking areas that are plagued with continuous crime incidents.

Unlike other types of Military Police working dogs (i.e. the sentry and narcotic dogs), trained patrol dogs can function in many facets of law enforcement and are extremely effective when employed against criminal activities such as robbery, assault, bulgary, rape and vandalism, according to SSgt. Gilspy.

The patrol dog team concept as an aid in law enforcement is a relatively new idea to Benning. Presently, 16 patrol dogs are on hand at the 139th Military Police Co. 13 of which have arrived on a PCS within the last 6 months from Lackland Air Force Base, Tex.

At Lackland a special 12 week training course, conducted by the Air Force, trains the MP in the required skills to become a qualified dog handler. After completion of the course, an additional skill identifier A9 (Patrol Dog Handler), is awarded to the MP.

The training the MP receives enables him to direct his new partner in performing any of the following tasks:

- Detect presence of unauthorized personnel
- Alert handler to presence of intruders

Women more than part-time soldiers

In the last five years, the number of women in the active Army has more than tripled while an even greater increase has occurred in the reserve components. These increases and the entrance of women into many nontraditional skills present challenges.

Today, women are successfully performing a wide variety of duties, many of which were considered solely in the male domain just a few years ago. A recently approved combat exclusion policy opened more specialties to women than ever before. However, equal training for men and women has only recently been implemented. Consequently, many women in the Army have not received all the training in soldier skills needed to perform their duties. Unit commanders must provide for these women additional individual training as required and ensure their full participation in unit training, field exercises and unit duties such as guard duty.

Qualified women now have the opportunity to serve in all but a few specific combat units and combat specialities. In availing themselves of that opportunity, women, like their male counterparts, must accept the responsibility for sharing all risks and enduring all hardships inherent in their specialty. Some people believe that women will not be deployed in event of hostilities, that they are only to be part-time soldiers—here in peace, gone in war. Some women are being used in skills other than those for which they were trained and some are being excused from performance of unit duties. The army cannot operate effectively in this manner. Women are an essential part of the force. They will deploy with their units and they will serve in the skills in which they have been trained.

Commanders must reaffirm their conviction that women are an integral part of the Army. With this in mind, they must ensure that women are provided an equal opportunity for assignment in their specialty. They must also be given adequate training and must be held responsible for the full range of duties that are a part of their assigned positions.

The Scouts will observe Health and Safety Day Wednesday. They will meet at the Main Post Girl Scout Hut at 6:30 p.m. and practice safety with game playing. They will also celebrate the Concharty Council Girl Scouts' 60th birthday. All Scouts and former Scouts in the Ft. Benning area are invited.

Friday, March 17, will be known as Arts and Crafts Day. Winning entries in the Scouts' Arts and Crafts talent contest which ended Wednesday will be announced, and winning entries placed on display in Bldg 4.

The week's observance will wind up Saturday, March 18, with an Out-of-Doors Day. Each troop has planned individual activities with picnics, camping, walks and trips as some of the events scheduled.

National Secretaries' Week is April 23-29; Secretaries' Day is April 26

Linking up to the problem solving system

SSgt. Joe Smith's battalion commander has received orders from brigade headquarters concerning SSgt. Smith's present mission. How does Joe Smith find out?

"My wife is out of work, my car needs repair, my electric bill is overdue. Pay day is next week. Who can help me?" cried PFC Jones.

The chain-of-command is the most fundamental and important organizational technique used by the Army. It relays information and instructions from higher commands down to the lower commands, provides a means of feedback from soldiers to commanders, helps with problems and requests for help, and serves as a method of communication.

The Infantry School definition states that the chain-of-command is that command channel which extends from the president, as commander-in-chief, down through the various grades of rank to the individual soldier. The command channel extends upward in the same manner for matters requiring official communication from subordinate to superior. In other words, the chain-of-command is a two-way means of communication.

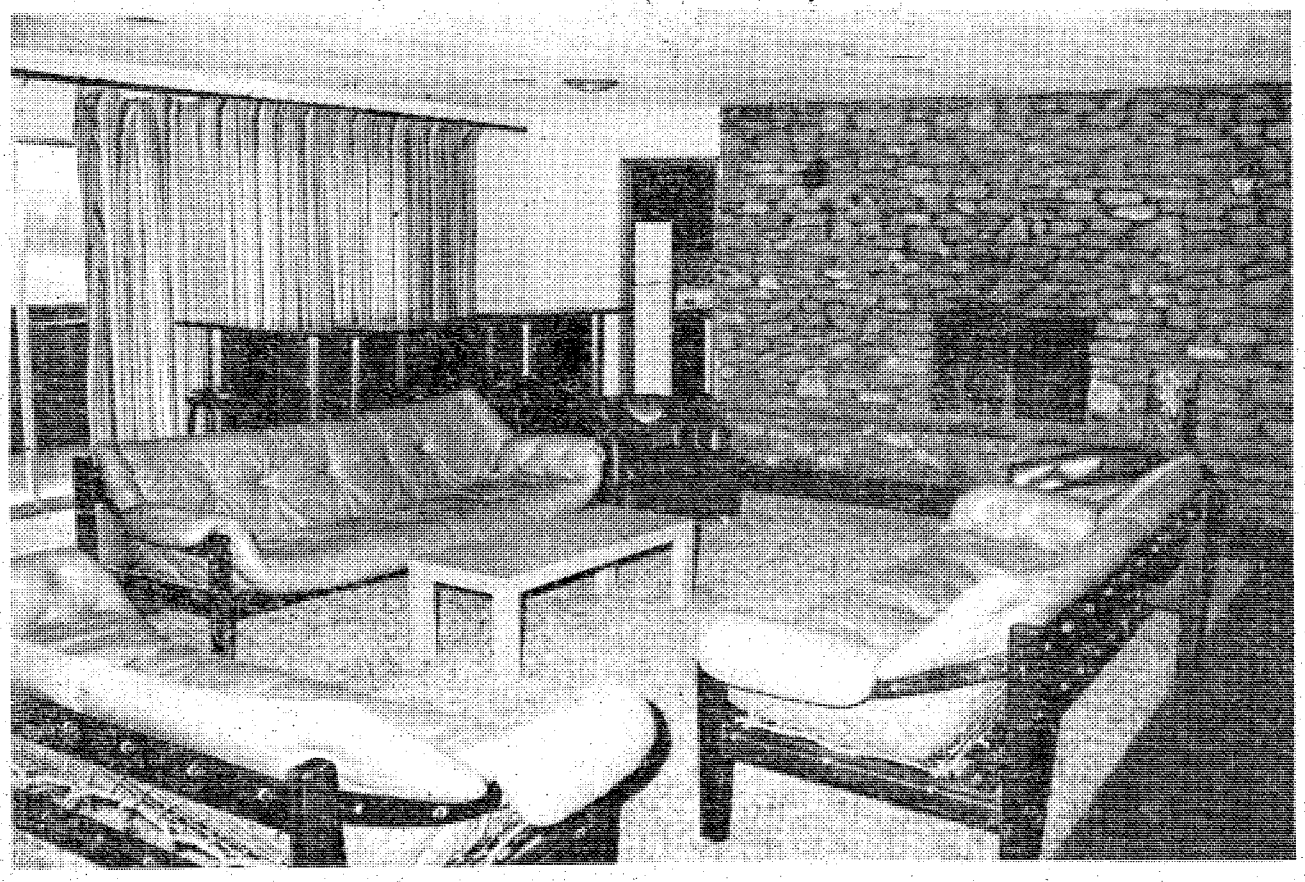
The Lodge: Not Just



Spacious Clubhouse Features Fireplace & Complete Kitchen

A community, not a complex, the Lodge Apartments located on North Oakley Drive are very, very unique. Unlike many apartments where neighbors never meet, the Lodge offers its residents every opportunity to meet each other but not at the expense of their privacy. It's a place for doers with a Tennis Court, Swimming Pool, Volley Ball Court and even an organized Volley Ball and Softball Team. And if that's not enough action, try entertaining in their beautiful club house facility with complete kitchen, fireplace, etc. Plan your own private activities or join the 2 or 3 organized activities per month sponsored by the management. You can't lose and you will never want for something to do.

The Country Club atmosphere carries over into the appointments of the apartments themselves. The largest interiors of any apartments in the area are available at the Lodge. Each and every one features individual Heating & Air Conditioning Units for personal comfort and living. A large Patio on the ground level apartments and a large Balcony in the upper levels. All the romance and enjoyment of a leisurely southern evening on the Patio or Balcony are yours to enjoy.

Uncle Sam don't wanna bump

By Marie M. Russo

SFC Barlow has a big problem — 18 years of active duty military service are about to go down the drain — unless, of course, he can do it right this time.

"I've just got to lick this," SFC Barlow thought. But loosing 72 pounds in five months isn't exactly an easy assignment.

SFC Barlow is overweight and knew it for quite a while, what he didn't know was that DA knew he was ovareight too. Army Regulation 600-9 finally caught up with him and if he doesn't lose those extra 72 pounds, his reenlistment won't be approved and he'll have to leave the service.

What is it that SFC Barlow has to do right this time? Diet, of course; thinking thin is great, but actions speak louder than thoughts.

The key to losing weight, according to LtCol. Marcia L. Beasley, chief of Martin Army Hospital's Food Services Division, is in the amount of food and drink consumed to the proportion of time you spend doing moderate to heavy activities as compared with the time spent doing light to sedentary activities.

Burden hard on body

Can you imagine carrying 40 pounds of luggage with you everywhere you go? You say no, yet a person who is 40 pounds overweight adds this burden to his body.

He has the additional problem of maintaining this excess baggage. His body adjusts to this additional work as best it can, but the price is often great.

Life expectancy is reduced and the aging process is speeded up by the onset of obesity.

The human skeleton is not well prepared to carry an extra load, consequently flat feet and arthritis of the knees, hips and lumbar spine are common in fat people.

Abdominal hernias and varicose veins, obstructions to free breathing, tendency to winter cough and bronchitis also result from excess fat in the body.

A variety of metabolic disturbances are associated with obesity, the principal one being diabetes.

Hardening of the arteries, gout and high blood pressure occur more often in the overweight person than the normal weight person.

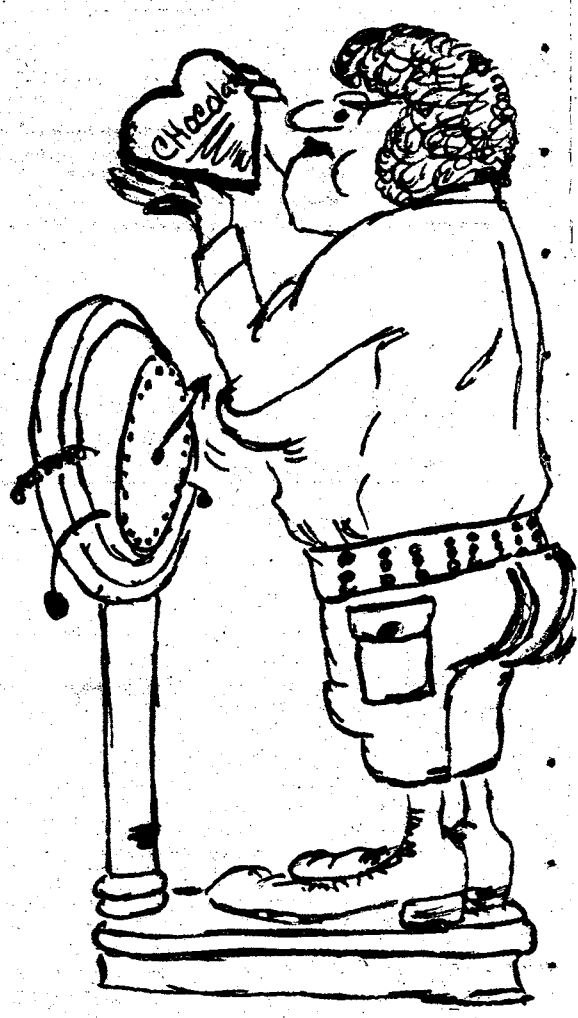
Also, the grossly overweight person is slow and awkward and therefore more likely to have accidents of all kinds, according to LtCol. Beasley.

Weight Control Program

The objective of the Army's Weight Control Program is to maintain the weight of all personnel at a level which is best suited to permit them to perform their duties in a peacetime or combat environment and to present a smart appearance expected of a combat ready Army.

"It is the responsibility of unit commanders," explains LtCol. Beasley, "to identify and counsel all personnel, both officer and enlisted, who do not present a suitable military appearance or satisfactory level of physical fitness because of an overweight condition."

It is important that an overweight problem



be identified early in your career. "The n years of service a member has, the more ficult it is to make a decision that could r in premature career termination," the col pointed out.

Note. Height and weight data do not include allowances for shoes and other clothing.

no more with no big fat soldier

Also, the older you become, the more difficult it is to lose weight and maintain it within acceptable limits.

After your commander identifies you as having a weight problem and talks to you, he should then refer you to one of the Troop Medical Clinics (TMC) for evaluation. There, a physician will determine if you are indeed overweight or if there is a medical reason why you should not participate in a "weight control program, that includes both diet and exercise," LtCol. Beasley commented.

In cases where a need for weight loss is indicated, realistic weight loss goals are established to include the number of pounds to be lost and the number of weeks you are given to lose the weight.

Weigh-ins are made every two weeks, in accordance with the regulation, to determine your progress and if you have no weight loss after each two week period, you are counseled by your commander.

You will remain on the weight reduction program until your established weight, physical fitness and appearance goals are achieved.

When goals aren't met

If after a period of dieting and exercising, of not more than six months, you have still not met weight and physical fitness goals you will be referred back to the TMC for a reevaluation.

If satisfactory goals have been met, one extension of up to six months may be granted, after which time you will be reevaluated.

After the established period of time, if you have not yet made satisfactory progress it is usually due to apathy or a lack of self-discipline, according to the colonel. "Individuals who allow this type of attitude to keep them from achieving their weight goals may be recommended for a bar to reenlistment or discharge, according to the regulation," she continued.

"Sure," you're saying, "losing weight is a lot easier said than done. I've tried all the latest diets and still can't lose weight." Well, LtCol. Beasley says, "Only in the imagination of some fast-buck author is there an easy and rapid way to take off excessive pounds and keep them off."

Obesity is caused by the intake of excess calories and no secret or mysterious promise for melting fat away can change that fact. "Balancing food intake with activity is the most effective means of weigh reduction and control," the colonel explained.

You gain weight when you take in more calories than your body burns up for energy. These excess calories are stored as fat, and for every 3500 calories stored you gain a pound.

How to Lose a pound

To lose that pound of bady fat, you must eat 3500 calories less than the amount required to sustain your present weight.

Since this excess weight was probably added over a long period of time, it is not wise to attempt to take it off too rapidly. "In general," says LtCol. Beasley, "a reduction of about two pounds per week is considered to be an ideal rate of weight loss."

In order to lose two pounds per week, you must consume about 7,000 (2 x 3500) calories less than required each week to maintain your present weight. This is equivalent to a 1,000 calorie deficit per day.

Where do calories come from? Well, all food contains one or more of the following:

- Proteins
- Fats
- *Carbo*hydrates (sugars or starches).

A gram of fat yields about nine calories, a gram of alcohol about seven calories and a gram of either protein or carbohydrate about four calories.

Helpful hints

Now that you have decided to reduce your caloric intake so that you can take off those extra five pounds, Lt.Col. Beasley has a few hints to help you use your remaining calories wisely:

- Consciously reduce the intake of sugar and alcohol, they provide no nutrition only calories.
- Reduce fat consumption, it contains more than twice as many calories as proteins or carbohydrates and provides little else except calories.
- Increase your intake of fresh fruits, vegetables and whole grain or lightly processed cereals.
- Eat moderate amounts of the high protein foods such as eggs, meat, fish, poultry and dairy products.

MAH helps too

The Nutrition Clinic at Martin Army Hospital operates a Weight Control Clinic twice a week. Initial instruction is for two hours while followup visits are scheduled at your convenience.

Dependents, retired service members and their dependents may be screened on a walk-in basis and then scheduled for the Weight Control Clinic, while active duty personnel must be referred from their TMC.

Questions you may have about the clinic or some new diet you heard about can be answered by calling 544-1974 or 544-1417.

No matter what excuses you can dream up, the fact still remains that you must be overeating and under-exercising to be overweight.

So, no matter how much you huff and puff, you can't shake it off, rock it off, knock it off, or bake it off. The only way you can take off those excess pounds is to eat less and exercise more.

The Musketeer Lounge is a cocktail lounge with a live band that performs nightly. The beautiful music and atmosphere makes the lounge very pleasant and relaxing. It is located in the Lumpkin Plaza Shopping Center on South Lumpkin Road and has been serving the Columbus-Ft. Benning area for 2 years.

The concept of the Musketeer Lounge was created after much travel and experience as a soldier in the army with bars, night clubs, taverns, etc. The Musketeer Lounge is a place whereby military personnel may relax in their off duty or in their leisure time without a fear of being ripped off.

The Musketeer Lounge is owned by John Maruhnich and managed by Helen Hall. John is originally from Scranton, PA., and resides in Columbus after retiring from the U.S. Army. John opened the lounge in March of 1976.

MUST unit builds surgical complex at Stewart

Members of the 2nd Combat Support Hospital, 34th Medical Bn, using parts of their MUST (Medical Unit, Self-contained, Transportable), are combining resources with the Ft. Stewart Army Hospital to create a surgical complex which supports the local surgery capability at the East Georgia installation.

Members of the 2nd Combat Support Hospital, 34th Medical Bn, move the Central Material and Supply unit in line with the operating room.

The Ft. Stewart facility was severely damaged by fires on February 7 and 13, three of the hospital's four operating rooms were destroyed by the fires.

An operating room complex consisting of a surgical suite, recovery rooms and Central Material and Supply has been complete and integrated with the existing Ft. Stewart hospital structure. The surgical suite with supporting power supply was constructed by nine men during a 24 hour period.

To date, the temporary surgical unit has been used primarily for minor operations such as biopsies.

The MUST is the Army's modern field hospital, it is completely self-contained and is 90 percent transportable by helicopter. The components of the MUST are the expandables and inflatables and the power pack unit. A complete MUST hospital has a 200 bed capacity, however it can be enlarged or reduced in size to fit a particular need.

Medical support to the Ft. Stewart Army Hospital is expected to last approximately 5 months.

Engineers to meet

The Society of American Military Engineers will hold its monthly meeting Wednesday at 11:30 a.m. in the Benning Room of the Officers' Club following a brief social period.

The guest speaker, Mr. James Cape, executive vice president of Armour and Cape, Inc. of Atlanta, will discuss "A-E Design Contracting for the Federal Government."

Work accomplished for the Department of Defense includes four projects at Benning, two at Ft. McPherson and several at Ft. Gordon including a Project Development Brochure for a $9 million Medical Complex. Private sector projects include engineering services for the $35 million Georgia World Congress Center, the Southlake Mall Shopping Center in Atlanta and a 20-story Hilton Hotel in Mobile, Ala.

Society inducts students

Faith Junior High School has recently been granted a chapter in the National Junior Honor Society. Their chapter, called the Hazel J. Scudder Chapter, is named for the superintendent emeritus of Benning's Dependent Schools.

Mrs. Scudder was the supervising principal at Faith School from 1950 until 1953. In 1954, she became the Suuerintendent of Benning's Dependent Schools serving in that capacity until her retirement in 1969.

Thirty-six students out of a body were selected on the basis of scholarship, leadership, citizenship, character and service. These 36 students were inducted recently at a special ceremony in the Faith School auditorium, attended by their parents and Benning school personnel.

Mrs. Scudder was the guest speaker and Chaplain (Col.) Ronald Day, post chaplain.

Chain of command

or unit and deal with subordinates is totally unfair to the headquarters or unit who receives the call," says Post CSM Vincent Roegiers. "Not only is it proper so everyone knows what's going on, but it is important for far-reaching discipline and control."

The Infantry School's Command and Staff Department, a proponent for the Military Leadership Manual, states there is only one formal command system in the Army — the chain-of-command; subordinate to and supporting the chain of command are three formal support channels. They are:

- Staff channels
- Technical and Administrative channels
- NCO channels

These channels are used primarily for exchanging information; they do not replace the chain-of-command.

Support channels

The staff channels and technical and administrative channels are similar in function, but different in characteristics.

Staff channels operate strictly within the organization established for that particular type staff section. Staff members work with like staff members at different organization levels.

Technical and administrative channels are unique. They have specific functions and may cut across staff boundaries.

NCO channels operate within staff and technical and administrative channels. It is different from these channels since information is passed from NCO to NCO. It usually involves matters relating to enlisted personnel, deals with technical, administrative and staff subjects which help strengthen unit effectiveness and harmony and accomplishes routine but important activities that agree with command policies.

Two-way communication

That is how the chain-of-command operates when unit missions and business is involved. How does it help the individual soldier with a problem?

"A strong chain-of-command cares about its people," says Capt. Frank Hudoba, commander, Co A, 5th Bn, AIT Bde.

Many problems can be solved on a company level if the soldier is willing to discuss his problem with his commander. A company commander can provide assistance and help direct the soldier to agencies that can solve his problem, such as the Chaplain's office, the Inspector General, Finance Office, Red Cross, Army Emergency Relief and many others.

If the problem can't be solved, the soldier has the right to carry it through the chain-of-command up to the highest commander.

Dependents can use it too

"Dependents too can utilize the chain-of-command and should start at the lowest level," said CSM Roegiers. "They can seek the same assistance as the soldier," he added. "The chain-of-command protects those who need help."

How can a dependent use the chain-of-command? For example, a soldier is in Panama on training exercises and for some reason his pay is incorrect. His wife has to pay the bills and feed the children. What can she do? Go to his unit and explain the problem. The unit can help get in touch with the Finance Office to straighten out his pay and direct her to an agency that can assist in the meantime.

The chain-of-command is a valuable and effective communication tool. It works for both the commander and the soldier.

Benning officer gets art award

A Benning officer took second place and honorable mention in the seventh All-Army Art Contest and Exhibition held recently at Ft. Belvoir, Va.

LtCol. Robert L. Bechdolt, Assistant Public Affairs Officer received a $250 Savings bond for placing second in the water base painting category (experienced group), with his watercolor entitled "Salmon Spawning."

He also received "Honorable Mention" in the oil, acrylic and mixed media category for his acrylic V-shaped wood surface entry entitled "Koptic." An engraved medallion was awarded for his placement.

Both entries had won first-place awards in the Army Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC) competition with "Koptic" taking Best in the Show.

"There's an awful lot of talent in the Army, so second place wasn't disappointing," Bechdolt stated. He added that he'd like to see more soldiers get involved with the Army's arts and crafts program, which is well-equipped and professionally staffed.

The entrants, both beginner and experienced, were selected from each of the major commands. After preliminary screening, 131 slides were sent to Belvoir for screening and selection. Staff artists from The Institute of Heraldry chose 81 works for consideration in the finals and the actual entries were forwarded for judging.

First place entries were awarded $300, second place $250, third place $200 and honorable mentions received an engraved medallion.

The winning entries will be displayed in Washington, D.C. and then at other Army installations around the world.

Gardening season 'growing' near

By Bev Lockhart

Thumbs up, gardeners! It's that time of year again; time to start planting those vegetable gardens so you can be eating your own home-grown vegetables this summer.

Not only do family gardens cut the cost of your grocery bill, they also provide a source of family togetherness. Personal satisfaction is also a product of home gardens. When you have the neighbors over for that barbeque this summer, you'll be able to say, "I grew that cucumber you're munching myself!"

Not only will a well-tended home garden supply your family with a variety of fresh nutritious healthful vegetables this summer, you can also preserve them for use after the season has passed.

Starter plants available

Now is the time to begin that garden of summer vegetables. Even occupants in family quarters can take up this fruitful enterprise. Starter plants for tomatoes, pepper and eggplant can be purchased at local nurseries and most other vegetables can easily be started from seed. The Toy and Garden Store sells punch and grow starter kits as well as seeds.

Gardening regs stated

Before you take out that hoe and start digging up the area around your quarters, better check out the regulation. USAIC Regulation 210-5 governs the growing of vegetable gardens in family housing areas:

- No area of the lawn may be destroyed for vegetable gardens. Former garden plots in lawn areas are not to be replanted.
- Occupants may plant vegetables in flower beds. Flower beds alongside buildings, which enhance the esthetic appearance, are authorized as long as they don't exceed 24 inches in width.
- Occupants may cultivate common (open) use areas which are at least 150 feet from the building. Garden plots in these areas are not to exceed 150 square feet.
- An occupant utilizing the common use areas must obtain approval for the Chief of the Housing Division. A letter or Disposition Form must be submitted with a sketch-map-dicating the location and size of the area.
- Occupants desiring to cultivate large garden plots must obtain an area from their major command.
- Major commands may obtain areas upon request to DFAE, Building and Grounds Division. A sketch/map indicating the location and size of the area must accompany the request.

Since space is limited, plan your garden wisely. Select those crops you and your family like best along with those that will produce an adequate supply on a few plants.

Gardening tips given

There are a few basic steps you should take to insure a good garden yield. Mr. Dick Collier of the Cooperative Extension Service, University of Georgia College of Agriculture, gives these guidelines:

- Prepare your soil by treating it for nematode (small worms) control. These worms are found in nearly all garden sites and must be eliminated before planting. Lime should also be applied before planting.
- Buy disease-free seed; preferably a western-grown seed that has been treated with a chemical to prevent seeding rot. Saving seeds from your garden each year is not recommended as they are more apt to contain disease-causing organisms.
- Plant disease-resistant varieties applicable to the diseases prevalent in your area. For instance, wilt is present in almost all Georgia gardens and unless you plant a wilt-resistant variety, you will have disastrous results.
- Seeds planted too deep will rot before they can germinate. Place just enough soil on the seeds to completely cover them.
- Use a mulch beneath all plants. It has diseases, preserves moisture and reduces weed growth. Removing weeds with a hoe can injure the root system.
- Water the garden often enough to maintain a uniform moisture level. It is better to water in the morning so the plants will dry quickly because diseases spread easily on wet foliages.
- Fertilize and spray for insects regularly for disease-free healthy plants.
- Harvest at the proper stage of maturity to get the highest quality vegetables. If crops such as beans, okra, squash, and cucumbers are left on the vine too long, the plant will stop producing.

More detailed information is available in the form of brochures, advice and free soil tests from the Cooperative Extension Service located on the ground floor of the Government Center in Columbus.

Happy Gardening!

Dog

- Attack on command
- Cease attack on command
- Track humans other than handler
- Search buildings and open areas for criminal offenders

These acquired skills plus the dogs increased sense of hearing and night vision capabilities make them an invaluable asset to the Military Police on patrol. If a building is found open or a burglary is suspected a patrol dog team can search the building quickly and efficiently and alert to any unauthorized personnel.

The dogs' tracking skills aid the Military Police in gaining information in the investigations of burglaries, robberies and rapes by ascertaining the direction of flight and discovering abandoned articles of evidence.

The ability to work around people without distraction or hostility toward strangers is the key factor in the patrol dogs' success as a law enforcement tool.

The patrol dogs are trained to attack only when commanded by the handler but if the handler is in danger of physical assault the dog will attack to defend the handler without command. The dogs are not trained to injure, but to grab and hold until the command to stop is given by handler.

Future assignments and utilization of the patrol dog in law enforcement efforts here have unlimited possibilities, according to Maj. Bobby Martin, military police operations enforcement officer. Currently, in addition to their crime prevention efforts patrol dog teams help provide security for the post Ammunition Supply Point. However, they are and will continue to be used effectively as a positive and aggressive measure aimed at protecting the individual and his property.

Kyokushinkai: Not a household word

By Mike Daigle

Kyokushinkai is not a household word in this country, but men like Sp5 Ronald E. Fugiel of the 179th MID, 197th Inf Bde are out to make it better known.

A form of Karate, Kyokushinkai was founded by Grand Master Mas Oyama, 1977 Black Belt Hall Fame recipient. Oyama became famous in this country in the early 1950's when he demonstrated the effectiveness of Kyokushinkai by chopping the horns off of live bulls and killing them with his bare hands.

Fugiel, who holds a third degree Black Belt in Kyokushinkai, started training in the martial arts when he was 13 years old. "I became interested in Karate through my father, who instructed courses in self-defense while he was in the service. I started with basic street fighting techniques and went on to the martial arts," said Fugiel.

Some of Fugiel's awards include a Bronze Medal in sparring Competition in the 1973 Junior Olympics and being third out of five to win the prestigious School of the Tiger Bishop's Ring.

Fugiel has been teaching martial arts since 1972. He is currently giving lessons at the Jewish Center Tuesday and Thursday nights at 7 p.m. Fugiel is more than qualified to give classes in Karate. He studied Kyokushinkai under Sensei Donald I. Buck, the West Coast representative of the School of the Tiger; various styles of Kung Fu under Y. C. Wong and Brendon Lei, and Tai Chi Huan under John Pell.

Wiggins edges Monez for title

LtCol. Lones W. Wigger Jr., of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, turned in his usual steady performances over two successive weekends in his bid for the individual Indoor Rifle Championships.

On February 19, Wigger and Sp5 Karen Monez squared off in a battle for the Conventional Indoor Sectional Matches held here. The two matched perfect scores of 200 through the first three positions and then scored identical "198s" in standing position for 798 aggregate scores. Wigger was declared the winner from the tie breaking procedure. In 1976, Wigger and Monez both scored perfect 800's and were named National Co-Champions.

In team competition, the U.S. Army "Red" team upset the favored "Blue" squad by scoring 1,592 points over the Blue's 1,589. Members of the "Red" team included, Capt. Robert Mitchell with the high individual score of 400, Lt. Brad Baumeister (399), Lt. Wanda Oliver (398) and Sp4 Stan Ellis (395).

In the International Sectional held the next weekend, Wigger fought off last minute challenges to win with 1,176 points. Placing second and third respectively were Capt. David Cramer, USAR from Aliquippa, Pa. and Capt Boyd Goldsby, USAR, Little Rock, AR., both with 1172. In team competition the U.S. Army Reserves scored an impressive 4,674 points to win over the Active Army's 4,662. Members of the USAR Team included Cramer (1,172), William Rigby (1,158) and David Kimes (1,172).

For Interservice Basketball

Post MP selected for All-Army

By Betty Zimmerman

A Columbus native stationed at Benning in the 988th M.P. Co, has been selected to play on the All-Army basketball team.

Sp4 James R. King was selected by All-Army Coach Hal Fischer for first string center on the squad that consists of the 12 best players in the entire Army. The team will play in the Interservice Basketball Tournament that will be held at Treasure Island, Calif. during March 18-25. This year's host is the Navy.

Benning's Robert Hutchinson shoots for two more in Saturday's game against Ft. Rucker.

King, 23 years old, 250 pounds and 6'7", has excelled in basketball since his junior high days at Columbus's Talbotton Road school. From 1969 until 1971 he played for Spencer High and was listed on the All-Bi-City team. During his senior year at Jordan High School in 1972, he was selected All-State, All-South, Most Valuable Player and Mr. Basketball.

He played for Mineral Area Junior College in Flat. River, Mo. in '73 and '74. While there, he was again named MVP and made the All-Conference team. His last two years were spent at the University of Southern Mississippi, where he earned his BS in Criminal Justice. All-Region, All-State and Honorable Mention for All-American completed his college days' accolades.

But his present coach in the Presidio of San Francisco, Hal Fischer, continues to praise the son of Mrs. Lula Bell King of Columbus. He said, "King is one of my finest players, on and off the court; he has tremendous jumping ability which enables him to be a leading rebounder and the best shot-blocker I've seen in a long time."

Post basketball teams in TRADOC tourney

The post Women's Basketball Team sent their season record to 16-1d by defeating Ft. Rucker 43-30 on Saturday at Briant Wells Field House.

The post Men's Basketball Team also overcame Ft. Rucker on Saturday, 108-90, earning them their first victory in a three-game season.

Both teams will represent Benning at the TRADOC Eastern Conference Basketball Championships at Ft. Jackson to be held tomorrow through March 18.

DYA Sports

76ers B-Ball champs

The 76ers of the DYA Termite League closed out a successful season at the DYA Gym by defeating the Bullets 23-21 in the DYA Championship game.

The Bullets led throughout the game until the final quarter when the 76ers outscored the Bullets 10 to four.

Tim Bryson led the 76ers with 10 points followed by Matt Deneen, Joey Alford, Sterling Johnson and Edward Pugh with two points; and Hilt Moree with one point. Other outstanding defense players were: Ricky Allen, Shea Briscoe, James Howard and Aaron Chapman.

Coaches Robert Allen and Ronald Alford wish to thank the 76ers' parents for their support this season. The 76ers' coaches and parents expressed their gratitude to DYA Sports Director Jackie Jarrell and the referees for an outstanding job this season.

Soccer Clinic set tomorrow

Columbus College Recreation Department and the Community Services Program will co-sponsor a Coaches Soccer Clinic tomorrow in Woodruff Gym for potential coaches in the area.

The clinic will be taught by Coach Ibraham Ibraham, soccer coach at Clemson University, who has conducted numerous clinics for both coaches and players. This year's Clemson team was ranked as the number one NCAA soccer team.

The class will include discussions and demonstrations of fundamental skills, team drills, basic instructional coaching techniques offensive and defensive strategies and team attacks.

Class will meet in two sessions; from 9 a.m.-11:30 a.m. and from 1 p.m.-3:30 p.m. Cost of the one-day program is $12.

For registration and information, contact the Community Services Program at 568-2023.

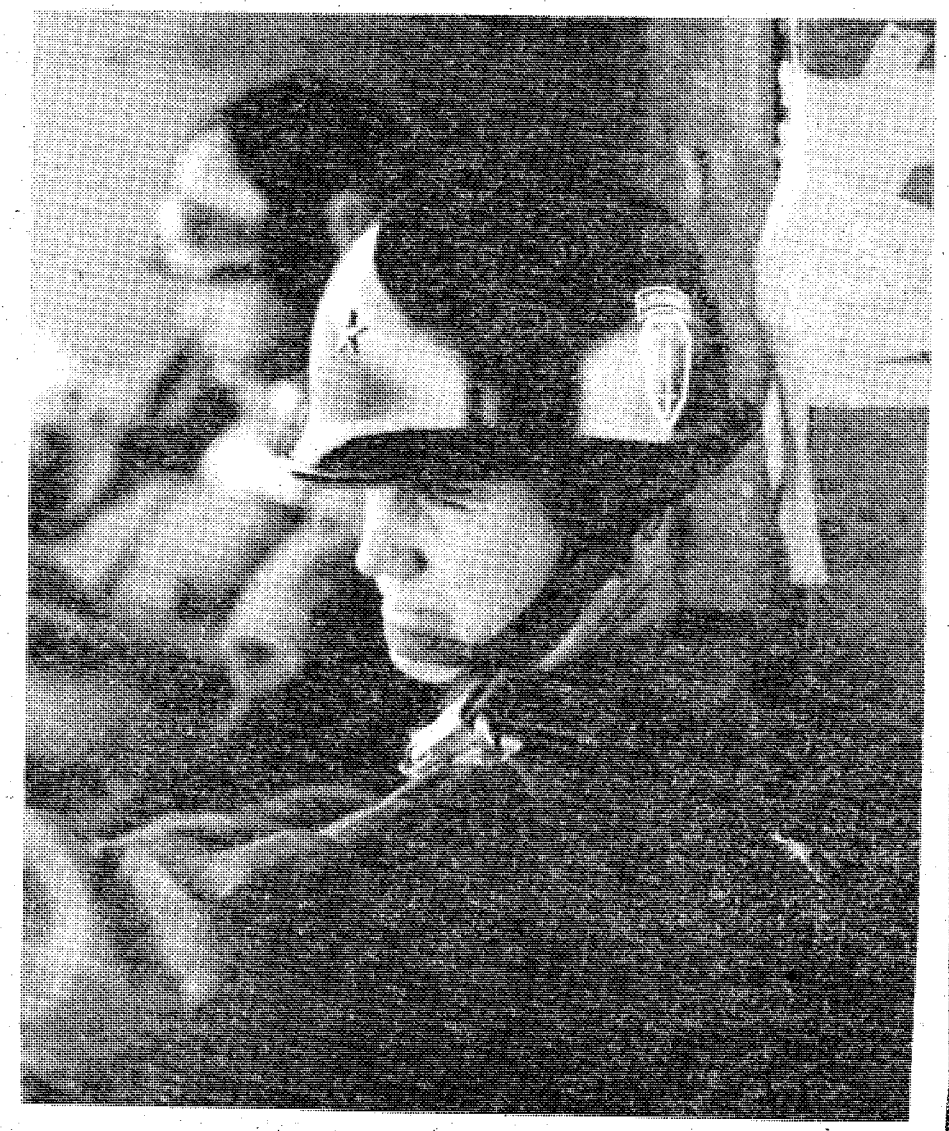
Vol. 37, No. 26
March 17, 1978

A Ledger-Enquirer newspaper published for the personnel at Ft. Benning

Brig. Gen. Mahaffey Set to leave Benning



An honor guard departure ceremony for Brig. Gen. Fred K. Mahaffey, assistant commandant of The Infantry School since May 1976, will be held Tuesday, March 21, on York Field at 3 p.m.

Gen. Mahaffey will depart Fort Benning on April 1 for Fort Leavenworth, Kan., where he will serve as Director of the Infantry Fighting Vehicle Special Study Group Headquarters. A successor for Gen. Mahaffey has not been announced.

Host officer for the departure ceremony will be Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey, Fort Benning commander.

Six platoons of soldiers from major post units will participate in the ceremony, along with a color guard and salute battery from the 197th Infantry Brigade and the 283rd Army Band. Members of the Airborne Department's "Airborne 5000" team will make a free-fall parachute jump onto York Field.

In the event of inclement weather, the departure ceremony will be held in the lobby of Infantry Hall. A farewell reception for Gen. and Mrs. Mahaffey will be held at the Fort Benning Supper Club following the ceremony.

3/7th, 197th going north to Alaska

An advance party of 132 soldiers left Lawson Field March 14 on C-141 and C-5A aircraft in preparation for a month of basic cold weather training in Alaska.

Most of the personnel were from the 3d Bn, 7th Inf., 197th Inf. Bde. Flying with the 3/7th were representatives of supporting units in the 197th and from around the post, including the 2d Battalion, 10th Field Artillery; A Troop, 15th Cavalry; 72d Engineers; Law Enforcement Command; 197th Support Bn. and the 179th Military Intelligence Detachment. The officer in charge was Major Roger A. Grugle.

Troops were loaded into a C-141 transport Tuesday morning and were followed by more personnel and equipment in a giant C-5A "Galaxy" which departed Lawson Field at around 1 p.m.

The group took cold weather gear, artillery and other weapons, ammunition and supplies. Approximately 625 more personnel are slated to join the advance party in Alaska on March 20. All are scheduled to return on April 18.

The flight to Eilson Air Force Base was expected to last about seven and a half hours, according to Major Jerome C. Casey, Airlift Control Element Commander at Lawson Field.

Benning House--a beacon in the night fog

By Marshall Jones

The post's alcohol and drug abuse rehabilitation facility (Benning House) celebrates its eighth anniversary March 23.

Benning House was the first alcoholic rehabilitation program in the Army when it opened its doors in 1970 with a staff of four volunteers, according to Jim Henry, deputy clinical director. Henry was one of the original four workers, and is the only one still with Benning House.

After about 1½ years in operation, the house finally received adequate funding and became a treatment center for all drug problems. The staff grew to 30 paid employees by 1972, but is now at a full-time staff strength of 11, after several reductions.

Despite the cuts, says Henry, Benning House now has a larger client caseload than ever before, with the current total around 220 active duty and retired military personnel, their dependents and appropriated-fund civilian employees of the Army.

Only about ten of this number actually reside in Benning House at any one time, and the maximum stay for a client is 30 days. The rest are treated on an "outpatient" basis. The total length of the rehabilitation program, including resident and non-resident treatment, is 360 days.

A recent innovation in the external treatment program has been the assignment of some of Benning House's eight counselors to the 197th Infantry and 1st Advanced Individual Training Brigades. These workers travel to the units and conduct interviews, progress evaluation of clients and group therapy sessions in the area where the clients are assigned. The counselors also consult with commanders in those brigades.

The clinical director of Benning House is Sidney Levine. He, along with Henry, a secretary and the counselors, make up the full-time staff. The facility also employes two physicians from Martin Army Hospital on a part-time basis.

Major (Dr.) Richard Mills of Martin Army's department of hospital clinics does examinations, administers medication and writes prescriptions. Major (Dr.) Ronald Dirkse, chief of psychiatry and neurology at the hospital, is a clinical consultant with Benning House.

Benning House is in a complex of five buildings along with the Alcohol and Drug Control Office (ADCO) on Gunterman St. here. Benning House works with ADCO to give the Alcohol and Drug Awareness Course (ADAC) to personnel identified as having a problem but not in need of rehabilitation. The ADAC lasts two hours a night for three nights.

Henry is proud of the facility's accomplishments, and even more proud that in its eight years of existence and with thousands of patients treated, Benning House has never had an act of violence occur during any of its operations.

News in brief

Honor guard

The Department of Defense (DOD) is looking for active duty women and civilians willing to enlist in its all-service honor guard unit in Washington, D.C.

For the first time, the unit is signing up women for ceremonial duties at the White House. The elite 3rd U.S. Infantry, "The Old Guard," is still closed to women because it is a Category 1 combat unit.

Recruiting teams are scheduled to begin visits to field installations to screen women applicants. Qualifications for women in the all-volunteer unit are the same as those for men and include a minimum height of five feet, 10 inches, with weight proportionate to height, no criminal record and at least one year remaining on active duty or willing to reenlist for at least three years.

Interested persons may call Military District of Washington officials at AUTOVON 222-2730 for more information.

Red Cross

The American Red Cross will honor their volunteers Tuesday with a recognition ceremony at the Top Five NCO Club at 10 a.m.

Mrs. John K. Singlaub, volunteer consultant, and Mr. Harry L. McCullohs Jr., managern Services to the Armed Forces, American National Red Cross from the National Field Office in Atlanta will be in attendance.

Volunteers who recently completed the orientation course will receive pins and certification as Red Cross volunteers. Special awards will be presented to outstanding volunteers.

All volunteers and their families are invited to attend. Refreshments will be served following the ceremony.

Reclassification

The Army's program for reclassification of NCOs into combat arms branches is intended to fill permanent positions, officials say, despite some soldiers' misconceptions that reclassificatons are temporary.

Officials say that there is no temporary reclassification program. The misconceptions, they say, may stem from a policy which requires reclassified soldiers to remain at their first station, in their new MOS, at least one year.

Reclassified soldiers may not volunteer for another MOS for at least one year after reclassification, according to regulation, but the needs of the Army prevail over preference and earlier moves may be ordered.

West Point Prep

Soldiers interested in attending the United States Military Academy Preparatory School, Ft. Monmouth, N. J., should have their applications in by June 1 for classes beginning in August.

In order to qualify, a soldier must be:

- A citizen of the U.S. or become a citizen prior to entering the Military Academy at West Point.
- At least 17 and not over 21 years of age on July 1 of the year he or she enters the prepartory school.
- Unmarried and have no legal obligation to support a child or children.
- In good health, have no disqualifying physical defects, and have vision correctable to 20/20.
- A high school graduate, or the equivalent, with a solid academic background. Ideally, applicants should have four years of English and three years of college preparatory mathematics. An individual with obvious leadership potential but with a weaker academic background should not be discouraged from applying, since many other factors are considered.

Applicants should be highly recommended by their commanders, counselors and teachers.

General addresses goals to post civilians

MajGen. William Livsey addressed all post Department of the Army civilians earlier this week.

The purpose of his talk was to state his goals, hopes and expectations for Ft. Benning and particularly the civilians.

He said his goal is to give citizens and taxpayers "every bit of combat readiness" that he can for their tax dollar.

"The reason for talking to you civilians is to tell you that generals come and go, officers change, but the civilian work force has more stability on any military installation than any other group," he said.

He suggested taking a capsule form look at Ft. Benning. He divided the post into four slices. The first slice is the United States Army Infantry School, . . . "probably the best military school, not only in the United States, but in the world." The second slice he mentioned was the Advanced Individual Training Brigade — that particular outfit that takes every soldier that's going into the Infantry out of basic training and makes an Infantry soldier out of him.

The third slice consists of all the U.S. Army Forces Command units on the post — one-half of a division in number. They are represented mainly by the combat ready units of the 197th Infantry Brigade, 36th Engineer Group and 34th Medical Battalion.

Installation management was the fourth slice he mentioned. "It serves a total population of 90,000 (8,000 civilians, 20,000 active duty, 11,000 retired, and 50,000 dependents), and pours into this community between $26 and $27 million a month. The post's operating budget is in excess of $100 million a year," he added.

"The post does not have unlimited money, taxpayers pay for everything," he added, stressing that we should all save money by conserving energy, materials and time — in other words — manage our resources.

"Your Army needs you, Ft. Benning needs you, your country needs you, and they need from you a commitment — not just to do a job — but to understand things in a broad generality," he concluded.

ARNewS Interview

SMA William Bainbridge

Sergeant Major of the Army William Bainbridge, recently extended in the Army's top enlisted position for an extra year, until July 1979, sat for an exclusive interview with Army News Service (ARNewS). Bainbridge talked about junior enlisted benefits, housing, retirement, the President's Compensation Commission, the All-Volunteer Army, education, CHAMPUS promotions, commissaries and other topics.

ARNEWS: What junior enlisted benefits are being requested in the FY 79 budget?

BAINBRIDGE: In the '79 budget are overseas travel benefits for junior enlisted. This has been sent to Congress, but we don't know what's going to happen there. The Chief of Staff has testified. We hope to hold that benefit in there. I think that's the biggest, single most important thing in the budget for the "people side."

ARNEWS: What about housing for junior enlisted?

BAINBRIDGE: This is a follow-on. If the junior enlisted soldier is permitted to get paid travel for his or her dependents, it's going to follow-on that we're going to have to ensure housing is available. We can't permit the family traveling with no place to live. Command Sergeant Major Tracey, from Europe, was here with his boss last week. His latest estimate is that about 16,000 non-command sponsored dependents are in Europe. The budget proposals will mean that some of these soldiers will still have to live on the economy—current housing assets can't absorb all of them — we don't know how much of a change can or will be made.

ARNEWS: What about separation allowance for junior enlisted soldiers?

BAINBRIDGE: They will draw separation allowance as part of the package being proposed in the budget.

ARNEWS: Is the overseas concurrent travel program for junior enlisted families likely to expand to CONUS?

BAINBRIDGE: We would like to see it, but there is no way of knowing if we will at this time.

ARNEWS: The President's Compensation Commission is proposing a 30-year retirement, severance pay for enlisted personnel and other proposals. What do you think of the proposals?

BAINBRIDGE: I would like to keep the retirement just like it is now. When people hear about the President's Pay Panel, they say, well, here's what they're going to do to us. They're not going to do anything. It's not a decision-making body. It's a recommending body. The President can accept or reject the recommendations and then make his recommendations to the Congress. They're the ones who will decide if there's going to be a change or not. Nothing will happen when the commission makes its report. It's going to take a while. The 20-year retirement probably won't change for those now in the service. I don't know what the commission is going to recommend there, but I certainly don't see them recommending an end to 20-year retirement for soldiers who now have 10 to 12 years' service. I think we need the 20-year retirement, especially in the combat arms — for the soldiers who spend most of their time in the field. However, I don't think you can give a 20-year retirement to one group, like combat arms, and not another, like support soldiers. I'm in favor of enlisted severance pay. In that respect there is no difference between a captain and a staff sergeant.

ARNEWS: Would a 30-year retirement discourage reenlistments?

BAINBRIDGE: I don't think we can tell at this time. Until the recommendations are put forth and their various provisions studied, it is impossible to judge its effects. However, I don't think a first term soldier is thinking retirement, or even a second termer for that matter. I do not think retirement becomes a real concern until the soldier has reuped at least twice which would give nine or more years' commitment.

ARNEWS: On what basis is the Army disputing the GAO report on costs for the volunteer Army?

BAINBRIDGE: They're (GAO) using costs, such as pay, now — compared to costs under the draft. They did not consider pay raises since then, that may or may not have happened with a draft, when the soldier was receiving pay below the poverty level. I think we would have still had to have those raises even under a draft.

ARNEWS: On a dollar-to-dollar basis, do you think today's soldier is of better quality than the draft-era soldier?

BAINBRIDGE: I've been asked that question a thousand times. We don't have the same standard on which to base quality. I'll tell you what I think he is today. I think he's a better motivated soldier than the draft soldier was. Under the draft he was here because he had to be and now the soldier is here because he wants to be. We have a difference in the philosophy of the guy or gal of today. I think we've got a quality soldier. I think he has better training opportunities. We have better quality people to give training and we have the time to train. We have an education system for non-commissioned officers. We have always had good NCOs in the Army, but now good ones have a better chance to be even better. I think the soldier is better led because of this.

ARNEWS: Is the soldier better prepared to perform a combat mission?

BAINBRIDGE: I think so, because we have a better chance to prepare the training nucleus which gives us a well-trained soldier who knows how to fight under any circumstances.

ARNEWS: The Army is recruiting fewer high school graduates than the Navy and Air Force. Only 56 percent of recruits have diplomas in the Army. What is the Army doing to help them earn diplomas?

BAINBRIDGE: We're the only service that requires a high school education before promotion to staff sergeant or specialist six. This is one of the single most important steps to improve soldier quality. We used to make the opportunity to gain a high school diploma available during duty hours. Now we provide the money and facilities to do the school work off duty. The opportunity is still there but the soldier has to give some of his free time.

ARNEWS: CHAMPUS has administrative visors who can help alleviate these situations being done about this?

BAINBRIDGE: CHAMPUS is an outside agency. Most active duty soldiers don't have a CHAMPUS problem. We just go to our local hospital or dispensary. The administration of CHAMPUS is handled by contract. You may have a post in the southeast being handled by a contractor from Nebraska. This has caused both time and distance problems. Another problem is that soldiers don't fill out the paperwork correctly in the first place. We're trying to assist soldiers by providing greater information on the location of CHAMPUS advisors who can help alleviate these situations That's going to help. And we're trying to prevent delays. Some claims might take 12 to 18 months to process. A third problem is that as a result of these delays, a doctor will often require payment up front and leave collecting to the individual. The soldier can't afford that. That is why he went to CHAMPUS in the first place. We have asked that CHAMPUS claims be payable at the 90th percentile; up from the current 75th percentile. The prospects don't look good at this time; however, we're continuing to fight. We're trying to do as much as we can from our side.

ARNEWS: The two to three percent commissary bagger surcharge isn't going to add

Arts and Crafts contest caps Girl Scout Week

A floral arrangement, a plaque and a doll house were the winning entries in the Arts and Crafts talent contest conducted by Benning Girl Scouts as part of their observance of National Girl Scout Week, March 12-18.

All entries have been on display this week in the lobby of building 4, with the winners indicated by a blue ribbon.

"We had a difficult time selecting winners," stated Mrs. Addison D. Davis III, who, along with Mrs. Roland Day and Mrs. Gus Watt, judged the contest. "They all showed the hard work and time that went into them and I was proud of the scouts who worked on them."

A winning entry was chosen at each Scout level — Brownie, Junior, and Cadette. Brownie Troop No. 136 was the winner at the level with an floral arrangement made of Easter basket grass and artificial flowers in a papier mache container. Mrs. Jan Mojica is troop leader.

A doll house made out of empty Girl Scout cookie boxes was the winning entry for Junior Troop No. 76. The scouts covered the cookie boxes with contact paper. But according to Ms. Pat Chew, troop leader, "everything else, all the furniture, was made of things the girls found at home — empty spools, bits of material coffee stirrers, cupcake papers, etc."

Cadette troop No. 193, led by Mrs. Rose Marie Schnicker, won at that level with a plaque depicting "The Last Supper", made of a ceramic-type fabric and finished with an antique gold glave.

All entires were troop efforts and most took several days to complete. "One night," stated Mrs. Schnicker, "we stayed up working until 2:30 a.m."

Glad you asked . .

What do you think of the Ft. Benning sports program?

Sp5 Leon Mabry, 72nd Engineer Co
The sports program could use some improvement in the area of commander interest in his company team. There is not enough support for the teams. To have good teams, they must have at least an hour to practice.

Sp4 Creig R. Holcombe, 139th MP Co
I feel that the sports program here is very good. The equipment is satisfactory and the program directors really do their best to assist. I think that everyone should try to do something they enjoy doing or exercise.

Johnie Eidson, civil service, Sports Branch, Recreation Services Division

The sports program here is good although the only problem seems to be the need for more participation. Everyone's like me; they get lazy sometimes. An hour of exercise each day — racquetball, for example, is just as good as participating in high-powered sports programs.

PFC Ridgely W. Vane III, 988th MP Co
The sports program here leaves a lot to be desired. PT in general is mostly running; not very exciting! The sports program here should have a new twist. Organized athletics is an excellent idea. More competition between the troops would certainly improve inter-company relations. PT should not be boring; we need a program to hold the soldiers' interests and not make PT the usual drag!

PFC Yvette D. Callands, Hq CO Hq Cmd
We need more cooperation by the companies; there's not enough team support. Pep rallies ought to be held to give the players more incentive to compete. More sports for women is also a nice idea — more should be offered than volleyball and basketball.

Getting to the point

By Sue Davis

"Open wide and say ahhhh," the dentist urged. "Nope," I said. "That needle you have in your hand is as long as my arm. I'll surely pass out if you touch me with that monstrosity."

He gave me the shot of Novocain anyway. I didn't scream for fear that I'd become a human pincushion. My hands gripped the arms of the chair tightly and tears rolled down my cheeks.

Going to the dentist is like drill and ceremony — the ceremony (celebration) follows after the swelling does down and the pain is gone!

Don't let this talk scare you away from going to the dentist. My imagination is lively whenever I sit in the dentist's chair. I imagine all sorts of terrible evils that the dentist might perform.

For the most part, dentists are caring, sensitive and understanding people and unless the man or woman looks like Adolph Hitler, Charles Manson or Gomer Pyle, I'll trust him with my life — or my teeth, so to speak.

It's important to have a good rapport with your dentist. Making conversation breaks the ice and allows the dentist to realize whether or not to be extra careful with your mouth. If you walk in and sit down all the while acting pretty macho, he's liable to think that you eat nails for breakfast and that a little drill isn't going to faze you a bit. Rule number one, don't play games with your dentist.

One fact must be made crystal clear: the dentist is not there to hurt you; he's there to help you— to cure your toothache, or give you a flashy smile. He constantly harps about using dental floss — he'll even take fifteen minutes to show you the correct technique. Then there's brushing. After meals, before bedtime, after snacks, and in the morning.

The good thing is that servicemembers have it made. They can go to the dentist twice a month, or until all their cavities have been filled, teeth capped, bridges crossed (or whatever they do with bridges) and root canals dug — and it's all for free.

Imagine paying a civilian dentist to do the same work; a root canal or even a simple cavity! It's enough to make my teeth chatter.

The dentists at Ft. Benning are highly qualified and very proficient. The last of my cavities have been filled but I'd just like to thank the dentist and clerical staff at Bernheim Clinic for doing such a bang-up job. They were sympathetic in every way and even managed to inject" a bit of humor into a difficult job. I didn't let them "needle" me too much, and I made sure they got the point! Thanks again!

Letters to the editor

Roadrunners present hazard

It must have been about 6:30 p.m. February 17. I was driving along Eckel Street in front of Infantry Hall. Suddenly, my right front tire blew out and, at the same time, I saw the runner. He was clad in a brown sweat suit. I narrowly missed hitting him as I pulled off to the right hand side of the road.

Which brings me to the problem at hand. Why must these people insist on running on the road when there is a track (which is sufficiently maintained), just yards away from them?

I realize that running lap after lap on a dirt track is boring but certainly there are other places to run besides the busiest traveled roads on post!

What surprises me is that one would think these runners would have enough sense to not want to get flattened by a car approaching them from behind . . .

These runners are a hazard to drivers — especially at dawn or dusk, and if they continue to run with the the flowing traffic then I feel that a post regulation should be adopted to prohibit this action.

These "roadrunners" will not live to a very ripe age (despite the exercise) if they persist in playing th6ese games of "chicken".

much to monthly grocery bills, but it's unpopular just because it's another surcharge. What might be done to prevent this surcharge?

BAINBRIDGE: You may not have to pay it. One proposal calls for setting up bag-your-own groceries lanes, thereby exempting the payment of the extra surcharge. I'm sure that more than one self-service lane will be provided if it's popular and the commissary facility has the room to provide for it. Additionally, a bill has been introduced in the House of Representatives which, if enacted, would exclude commissary baggers from the Fair Labor Standards Act—the basis for the ruling by the Civil Service Commission which brought about this surcharge.

ARNEWS: The new semi-centralized promotion worksheet has been both praised and cursed, especially in the education category. The point overlap between military and civilian education has been greeted positively and the reduction of points for military correspondence course has met with criticism. Is the new worksheet fair?

BAINBRIDGE: It's fair. We've been working on it for quite some time to make it fair. We eliminated points for PNCOC and schooling that was already required or soon to be required under EPMS. If it's a requirement, why award points for completion? It's not going to hurt the good soldier because correspondence points have dropped. The cutoff scores will be adjusted and there may be some reductions in these scores. The good soldier who strives to improve will still come out on top. Special efforts will be recognized by the local board.

ARNEWS: What about soldiers who don't have an opportunity to attend military schools? Will they lose the incentive to take correspondence courses if they're worth fewer points?

BAINBRIDGE: Every soldier has an opportunity to attend the leadership schools. I still think the good soldier is the one who will get promoted because he's going to do the things that will make him a better soldier. The worksheet wasn't set up to hurt anybody. You don't tell a guy or gal to get a lot of points and then take them away after they've been earned. That wasn't the reason for the change. The reason was to make it better by giving soldiers more points where they needed them. The commander, the non-commissioned officers and the individual soldier all have a responsibility to see that the soldier gets the training he or she needs for promotion. We are trying to make it a more equitable system across the board.

ARNEWS: Civilian education opportunities have been a common complaint, particularly with the 1989 expiration date of the GI bill. What is the Army doing about this?

BAINBRIDGE: We're trying to get Bootstrap back, but we have to determine what the Army needs on the enlisted side of the house. A sergeant who needs to get an education has the opportunity. We do not require anything above a high school education. Having two years' college by the 15th year of service is a "goal." It's not a requirement. If you really want to get two years of college education, you can do it no matter where you're stationed. You can get it by the time you've got 10 years' service. It's there for anybody who wants it. There are a lot of soldiers who came in the Army because of the GI Bill who now plan to make the Army a career. I think the 1989 expiration of the GI Bill is wrong for the career soldier. You can still use it in the service, but it's tougher. DA has developed legislation to extend GI Bill eligibility to 10 years after sepration for those in the service prior to 1 January 1977. We don't know if we will be successful.

ARNEWS: In your visits to the field, what has impressed and discouraged you most about the soldiers you've seen?

BAINBRIDGE: I think one of the things that impresses me is the readiness of our soldiers—their eagerness to be trained to the point of being excellent soldiers. Soldiers want and expect to be taught and led. The thing that discourages me most is when that doesn't happen. There are some things I'd like to see changed. I'd like to see every married soldier have a house. Some of the housing our soldiers live in is discouraging. The luck of the draw, or where you are assigned, may well determine whether or not you're at or below the poverty level. There are better housing facilities in some places than others. The Army would like to see that changed so every soldier's family has good housing. There are soldiers on food stamps who shouldn't be. That's discouraging. We work hard at all levels to see that all soldiers and their families are cared for. We haven't lost the war in our continuing battle to make things better for the soldier.

A symbol of hope during trying times

By Bev Lockhart

The American National Red Cross — still serving the needs of the American people now, as it has for nearly a century. March is traditionally observed as Red Cross Month. It is a time for concerned people to address their thoughts to those qualities of compassion, understanding and selflessness which identify the Red Cross spirit of volunteerism.

Volunteers ease suffering

Although its programs and services have grown in scope as well as size over the years, the relief of human suffering remains the organization's purpose. Throughout its proud history, its spirit of volunteerism has been the source of its strength.

It is the Red Cross volunteer — your neighbor — who helps ease the suffering of disaster victims; who instills in young people those qualities of leadership that will mean so much to the United States in later years; who donates the blood that gives renewed life to the sick; and who comes to the assistance of the men and women of the armed forces, both active duty and veterans, and their families in emergency situations.

During the past year, as disaster after disaster disrupted lives and brought destruction to widespread areas of the nation, Red Cross volunteers helped ease the suffering of their neighbors. In President Jimmy Carter's proclamation declaring March Red Cross Month he said, "Last year the Red Cross Blood Program expanded to play an even more important role in our daily lives by providing life-saving and life-sustaining blood and blood products to more and more ill and injured Americans. Through Red Cross nursing, first aid, and water and boating safety instruction, we have the opportunity to train ourselves to care for the infirm."

The Ft. Benning American Red Cross Field Office performs a variety of services to personnel and their dependents. The main office handles the majority of post personnel. Run by Senior Field Director Mr. J. C. Jackson, it is located next to TIC Credit Union in Bldg. 1699. The other one is located in Martin Army Hospital (MAH). It is run by Ms. Alicia Harper, Field Director, who, along with volunteer assistants, handles all assigned hospital personnel and patients. Each office provides specified services to meet the needs of all personnel assigned to Benning and their dependents. Both offices are open during normal duty hours, and there is always a duty person available around the clock to service emergencies after duty hours, on weekends and holidays.

"The knowledge that a Red Cross agency capable of servicing a report on home conditions or a doctor's report — usually within one to three hours — exists on post does much to maintain high morale and relieve the anxiety of servicemen and their dependents," Jackson believes.

Common services offered

Some of the more common services available relate to emergency or convalescent leave, leave extensions, financial assistance, and sending or receiving communication concerning family or personal problems.

According to Jackson, "in 1977, 10,700 persons received assistance through the Red Cross here." He added, "Six hundred, ninety-five loans and grants totalling $100,000 were given."

How to help the Red Cross

How can you help the Red Cross do a better job? Jackson says "Military personnel should insure that their families have all of their identifying information, such as social security numbers, and how to reach them at their unit or duty section in case of an emergency. This will enable us to speed the request for assistance greatly, especially if they are overseas."

Out of 1,441,364 world-wide volunteers, more than 150 of them are at Ft. Benning. Almost five million units (pints) of blood was drawn in the U.S. last year. Volunteers are always needed at the hospital, veterinary clinic, and safety and recreations services, Jackson emphasized. The Red Cross also has a summer youth program under which young people help out at the hospital, library, youth Center, and various other places.

Volunteers needed

Anyone interested in becoming a Red Cross volunteer should contact Mr. Jackson or Chairman of Volunteers Mrs. Jane Harvey at 545-5194.

After all, the Red Cross is a vital part of America.

An international society

Virtually every independent country in the world has its own Red Cross society, although in many Moslem countries it is called the Red Crescent and in Iran it is known as the Red Lion and Sun.

The societies are chartered by their own governments and conduct programs in the fields of health, welfare, and safety in accordance with the individual needs of each nation.

Some societies operate hospitals, clinics and nursing schools and engage in extensive public health education programs. Many of them are already involved in blood programs, and most have their own Red Cross Youth sections. The national societies depend heavily on volunteers to carry out their service programs and handle fund raising.

These societies, although autonomous, adhere to the basic principles of the Red Cross and through active participation by the public ensure that all may serve and be served. Internationally, there is considerable cooperation among societies in a variety of mutual aid and technical assistance programs, as well as through the provision of opportunities for youth participation in promoting world understanding.

Post Office imposes new packaging regulations

New packaging regulations designed to increase safe handling of parcels by reducing damage due to the use of inadequate containers, faulty closure and reinforcement materials is now in effect according to a Postal Service spokesman.

The new requirements replace existing postal regulations on the correct way to package and wrap parcels. The new rules reflect established commercial standards and will apply to all mailers, both individuals and businesses, using the Postal Service.

The major areas of change for the mailing public are:

- The use of corrugated cardboard containers in strengths directly related to the weight and nature of the parcel contents. To find this figure check the bottom of box for the circular certificate stating the weight.
- It is recommended that paper wrappers not be used on fiberboard containers. However use of paper wrapping is not prohibited. Experience shows such wrappers can be torn and lost in handling, and the address and return address of the parcel lost.
- A clarification of closure and reinfocement requirements with the recommendation that pressure-sensitive strapping tape be used for closing and reinforcing containers, instead of twine or cord. Masking tape and cellophane cannot be used in closing and reinforcing pacakges.
- A strengthening of the marking requirements on the outside of parcels. This would include a mandatory provision that the container with the marking "Do Not Bend" must have stiffeners, such as cardboard, protecting the contents. Also, extraneous information such as order numbers, which can be confused with ZIP Codes, will not be permitted adjacent to or immediately under the last line of the address. It is recommended also that a return address be enclosed in a parcel.

The Postal Service also said a series of guidelines for packaging and materials are in rates, such as books, soft goods, records and that have experienced relatively high damage rates, such as books, soft goods, records and tapes.

More details on the new regulations are available at post offices.

VA Q&A

Q — What are the requirements for a veteran to obtain medical care at a VA hospital?

A — Veterans discharged from active duty under other than dishonorable conditions who need treatment for service-connected disabilities, have first priority. Veterans needing medical attention for nonservice-connected disabilities may also receive treatment if they certify their inability to pay for such treatment elsewhere, and space is available.

Q — As a child of a veteran, I am receiving $292 per month under the VA's Dependents' Educational Assistance program. Will this be increased when I marry?

A — The law does not provide for additional allowances because of dependents in this program. But a cost of living increase effective Oct. 1, 1977, raised the monthly payment to $311.

Q — Is there a deadline for veterans to apply for medical treatment at a VA hospital?

A — No. There is no deadline for applying, but priority is given to eligible veterans with service — connected disabilities.

Q — My husband died from a service-connected illness. Since then I have adopted a child. Is my stepchild eligible for CHAMPVA benefits?

A — Adopted children are eligible for CHAMPVA if they were living in the veteran's home when he died, or if they are adopted within two years after the veteran's death.

- Bouton Heights Youth Center pick up at 6:10, return at 11:50 p.m.

Easter Egg Hunts

There will be three Easter egg hunts at Ft. Benning within the next few weeks.

The first one, sponsored by Army Community Service (ACS) and the Columbus Youth Organization (CYO), is for handicapped dependents. It will be held tomorrow at the ACS Welcome Center, beginning at 2 p.m. There will be prizes and refreshments.

Those interested may sign up by calling 545-1233/1169.

Dependent Youth Activities (DYA) is also sponsoring an Easter egg hunt March 26 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the field adjacent (east) to the Youth Center Bldg. 1054.

Prizes for those finding the most eggs include frisbees, Easter baskets and candy bunnies and eggs.

The Youth Center expects approximately 250 children between the ages of three and 12 years to participate.

The Kelley Hill Recreation Center is hosting an Easter egg hunt and magic show on March 26 also. Pull a rabbit out of a hat, or an egg out of a bush, you can be a part of it all. The fun begins at 2 p.m.

For more information call 544-1721.

Chamber Music Society

The post Music Center will present the next Chamber Music Society performance at the new Sand Hill AIT Chapel March 26 at 3 p.m.

Participating in the performance will be Mary Walker on Piano, Charles Walker on Baritone and Mike Nichols on Viola.

Special Olympics

The Columbus Jaycettes is sponsoring the local Special Olympics, competition between handicapped and retarded children, at Baker High School on March 21 and 22 beginning at 9 a.m.

For information contact Donna Blankenship at 563-2802.

St. Patrick's Day Disco Dance

Kelley Hill Recreation Center is holding a disco dance tomorrow from 7 to 11:30 p.m.

Antique Show and Sale

The Annual Eufaula Pilgrimmage Antique Show and Sale is scheduled for March 20 through April 2. It promises to be an interesting display of quality pieces from the stock of many dealers from the Southeastern area.

Price of the antique show is $1 per person.

Columbus Sesquicentennial

Casting for "Columbus 150" will be held at Columbus High School March 23 beginning at 7:30 p.m. Clubs and organizations are urged to volunteer and individuals are also invited to participate.

There will be a cast of 1,000 in the production which will cover the first 150 years of Columbus. There are no lines to memorize, as there will be ten narrators to cover that part of the production.

For more information call Rita Lowe, 323-1828 or the Sesquicentennial Headquarters, 568-1978.

Former Colonial Band members join service

Four former members of the Columbus/Ft. Benning Explorer Post '76 Colonial Band are now playing in military bands. Each one chose a different service upon their enlistment.

Ralph Del Monache was a drummer in the original Drum and Fife Corps in April 1975 and continued in the musical explorer post through the changeover to a full band. The 1977 Kendrick High School graduate enlisted in the Marine Corps and is now serving with the Washington, D. C. detachment of the Marine Drum and Bugle Corps.

Tim Sacki, also a Kendrick High graduate, enlisted in the Air Force and is now attending the Naval School of Music in D.C., which trains musicians from all the services. Sacki, a trombone player, participated in the Colonial Band from July 1976 until July 1977.

Kendrick classmate and fellow Explorer Scout, Rick Tatum, chose the Navy. He too is attending the Naval School of Music and his specialty is the trumpet.

Former Baker High student, Keith Panco, joined the Army. Following his completion of the School of Music, he will be assigned to Benning's 283rd Army Band as a french horn player. Panco was a member of Explorer Post '76 from Oct. 1976 until July 1977.

THIS MAN RUNS HIS OWN BUSINESS IN PARTNERSHIP WITH NORTHAMERICAN

Meet William Harrigan. At age 35 he changed careers and signed up with northAmerican as a New Products Owner/Operator. Here's what he has to say about his first year in business for himself.

"You're not on the company payroll, mister; you're in your own business. It's my business. I run it."

"Right now, I have all the benefits of owning my own business and at the same time have all the advantages of a big business behind me. It's a joint venture."

"I don't think I could beat the tractor deal I got here — down payment, weekly payments — everything."

Bill Harrigan is one reason why northAmerican is the fastest growing van line in the country, and our need for business partners like Bill Harrigan is growing too!

If you're 21 or over, meet the Department of Transportation requirements, and can make a minimum investment of $2600 to $4300 which includes your tractor down payment and interim living expenses during training if you need it, give us a call. No experience is required.

Snoopy is unemployed

By Sue Davis

The underbrush crumbled under his feet as he cautiously proceeded even further into the dense, dark jungle. His eyes focused straight ahead; piercing the blackness, searching for some hidden danger that he knew was there. Highly sensitive ears were attuned to every noise, and as he walked, he sniffed.

A monkey shrieked, then all was silent.

Suddenly, he stopped and sat, refusing to go further. "Good boy," his handler whispered and patted the dog's head. Upon investigation, the soldier discovered that a trip wire had been cleverly concealed and underneath it was a land mine. The rigidly disciplined animal had probably saved the entire squad's lives.

Snoopy, a scout dog who's been here since 1968, has never been to Vietnam, but was one of the first trained for the purpose of detecting unknown dangers in a combat situation. He was the test dog, the initiator, the guinea pig for scout dog programs which were implemented by the Infantry. Once the programs were perfected with Snoopy's help, they were taught to the dogs that would be in a war zone.

Some of the programs were:

U. S. Army Photo by Tom Fisher

More than 300 Girl Scouts from the 21 troops on post gathered in front of Infantry Hall Tuesday for a flag retreat ceremony. Scouts from Brownie and Junior troops lowered the 50 state flags, and six Cadettes lowered the U. S. Flag.

- Scouting — In this case, the dogs detect booby traps such as trip wires and mines as well as tunnels directly behind enemy lines.
- Remote-controlled scouting — a radio pack is strapped to the dog's harness and he is sent out to locate booby traps. With this technique, the animal is controlled by sounds.
- Mine and tunnel scouting — is a spin-off from the basic scout dog. The training includes locating mines and duds which have not yet exploded behind friendly lines.

They also locate caches of food, ammunition and other supplies.

After the war, Snoopy was out of a job, so he was reclassified as a demonstration dog. His job was to enhance community relations by demonstrating for numerous civic organizations in the Ft. Benning area.

"I guess you could call him a ham," laughed Sgt. Waymond Hamon, who works closely with Snoopy. "Give him an audience and he goes crazy; he loves attention," he said proudly.

Snoopy knew every trick in the book. He could "sit high," a trick in which he balances on his hind legs and does the "dead dog," where he would roll over and play dead then jump up quickly. He also ran an obstacle course. "The audience loved him," Hamon said. "He was the pride and joy of the kennels": friendly, enthusiastic and just plain smart!"

But now that the primary function of the dogs here at Benning centers around Military Police Public Awareness programs, such as patrols and narcotics cases, Snoopy is, once again, out of a job. He seems to be on a permanent "casual" status. "He's 11 years old and doesn't have as much zest and vitality as he used to have. He's also moodier now because the crowds are gone," says Hamon. "He could be re-trained as a patrol or narcotics dog," he added.

Gutten Tag Wie Gehts, you all!

By Bill C. Walton

"Ich bin ein Mitglied der 546 Kompanie. Meine Einheit ist in Biwak bei Dingolfing. Wo ist die Strasse nach Dingolfing?"

A statement and question such as this in German (which translates as — I am a member of the 546th Medical Company bivouac near Dingolfing. Where is the road to Dingolfing?) might very well be asked by any member of the 5646th Medical Company (Clearing) 34th Medical Battalion, which is scheduled to go to Germany on Exercise Reforger later this year. Part of their Reforger training includes the German language Headstart Program.

The mission of the 546th is to set up and operate medical clearing stations. Normally the unit operates as three separate platoons, each operating a clearing station. Each clearing station, normally housed in 9 tents, is capable of receiving and treating up to 80 sick and injured patients and keeping them for a maximum of 72 hours.

In the 1976 Reforger Exercise, 904 patients were treated by the 546th in its clearing stations. Each platoon is authorized 2 doctors for Exercise Reforger. These personnel are assigned from the Health Services Command and usually join the unit just prior to its overseas movement.

No stranger to Reforger, the 546th has two previous trips to Germany to its credit, in 1970 and again in 1976. A highlight of the 1976 Reforger Exercise was an "open house" to permit the German civilians to see how an American medical unit operates. A reciprocal German open house at the Hospital at Neumarkt allowed the soldiers to familiarize themselves with the workings of a German hospital. Due to turnover of personnel approximately 10% of the people who were with the unit during the last Reforger are still assigned so a trained nucleus is there.

The unit takes very little equipment (TA50, typewriters & field desks) with them. The advance party precedes the main body to Germany by some weeks and draws and prepares the prepositioned equipment.

Exercise Reforger requires more from the medics than accomplishment of their primary missions, so an extensive Reforger training program has been set up by the training section of the 546th, under the direction of SFC Robert McKay. Each individual in the 546th is scheduled to receive about 250 hours of Reforger related training.

Since today's Army depends on mobility, in a clearing company drivers training is a most important part of the overall Reforger Training. USAREUR military drivers licenses will be issued at Ft. Benning after successful completion of the USAREUR drivers test. The test includes a large section on the basic German Traffic law and 121 international road signs which must be instantly recognized.

As previously mentioned the German language Headstart program is receiving top priority in the Reforger Training program with-in the 546th. It is broken down into eight modules and a final test, which will be administered by the Education Center. After completing all eight modules, members of the 546th should be able to accomplish the following in effective, if not fluent, German: ask directions, exchange money, buy train tickets, order a meal, get a hotel room, do some shopping, make phone calls, talk about weather and general courtesies and know when to use DU & Sie, the two words for you in German.

The Headstart program also includes a German Army Organization & Equipment Class and a German Culture Orientation to make the Flight Crews: acrobatic mechanics

By Bill C. Walton

How would you like a responsible demanding position in an aviation company that allows you to be one of the first persons to arrive at work and one of the last to leave? The position is that of a helicopter flight engineer/crew chief and there is a waiting list of personnel desiring to fill this position in all three aviation companies of the 34th Medical Battalion.

The dual word flight engineer/crew chief is used because in the companies which are assigned UH-1 aircraft (121st & 498th) the title is crew chief, but in the CH54 company (478th) there are two individuals assigned to each aircraft with the titles of flight engineer and crew chief.

The flight engineer/crew chief is responsible for the mechanical condition of his/her assigned aircraft and since they "live" with the aircraft during most of their duty hours, they are familiar with all its minor faults and peculiarities. After all, as crew members they want to be sure that the helicoptor they are flying in is capable of completing all assigned missions. No. 8 to 5 clock puncher, a flight engineer/crew chief works as long as necessary to assure that the aircraft is as airworthy as it is humanly possible to make it. When the last flight of the day is finished and the pilot and copilot have departed, the flight engineer/crew chief still has work to do, making sure the aircraft is ready to fly tomorrow. When a problem develops his only concern is "When can I get it back in the air"?

The only thing that is certain about a helicopter is that maintenance problems will occur, either when it is flying, due to all the moving parts and inherent vibrations, or when it isn't flying due to seals drying out and leaking, or corrosion due to weather. The flight engineer crew chief is the one who prevents the little problems from becoming major ones. He is literally a jack-of-all trades. One day he must track down an electrical problem, the next day it is an air bubble somewhere in a hydraulic system that must be eliminated for the aircraft to function properly.

Over the years, a list of small parts that give the most trouble on each type aircraft has been established and most good aircraft mechanics have their own "Goodie Box" with the necessary parts to keep their aircraft flying, should the need occur. The only time a helicopter doesn't vibrate is when it is tied down inside a closed hangar and each flight engineer/crew chief knows how his aircraft "feels" and vibrates when airborne. Should a "new vibration" show up during a flight it is readily apparent to the mechanic and he is usually able to advise the pilot as to what it might be.

As a rough indicator of how much is required to keep a helicopter flying it has been determined that a CH54 requires approximately 15 hours maintenance and a UHL requires approximately 8 hours of maintenance for each hour of flight time.

Benning Doughboys to begin spring training

The Fort Benning Doughboy Football Team will commence spring training with registration and a light workout on the evening of April 3. Prospective players should report to Doughboy Stadium between 6 and 7 p.m.

LtCol. Jack Barham, Doughboy Head Coach, stressed the importance of spring training this year. "We expect an eleven game season against top level college and military competition," Barham announced. "We've already gotten playing commitments from Troy State, Presbyterian College, Carson-Newman College, Tuskegee, and the Florida State Varsity/Junior Varsity. We're still negotiating with several other well known NCAA Division II colleges and some major college JV teams. We aren't playing any pushovers. We'll be facing scholarship athletes and large, professional coaching staffs. A good spring training session is mandatory if we expect to hold our own."

Coach Barham said every position on the roster is open. "We have several players returning from the 1977 squad, and we expect them to help us, but they'll have to earn a spot on the team just like the new men."

The Doughboys especially need offensive linemen and receivers. Key spots are also open at linebacker and in the defensive secondary.

Full workouts will commence on April 4th, starting at 7 p.m. and running until 11:30 p.m., Monday through Thursday. Friday workouts will be shorter.

"We'll work for most of the first week in shorts," Coach Barham announced. "As we see who really wants to play, we'll start issuing equipment. The second and third weeks will see lots of hitting. We intend to end spring training with an intra-squad game April 29th.

Barham also stressed that post varsity level football is not for everyone. College level experience is helpful. At least high school varsity experience is almost mandatory.

"Only 60 players will eventually make the team," the coach said. "Every year we have a lot of men come out for a few days, work their hearts out, but fail to make the team. This is sad for the coaches and very disappointing for the individuals. If a soldier thinks he would have trouble making the varsity of a college such as Troy State or Albany State, he's better off to stay with the intramural sports offered by the post."

The coach gave his usual warning to soldiers who think playing football might be a way out of hard work in their units. "The only thing a Doughboy football players gets is the privilege of representing his unit and his post on the football field. We have plenty of players who are willing to work extra hard in their companies, just to get their leaders' support of the football program. We don't need any other kind."

Soldier captures judo title

By Ron Fowler

A twenty-year-old soldier from Btry A, 2/10th FA, 197th Inf Bde has captured a number one spot at the 1978 Amateur Athletic Union Georgia State Judo Championships.

PFC Johnny D. Maddox beat ten other competitors in the Senior Division 156 pound weight class to gain the title at the championships held in Decatur, Georgia on the 18th of last month.

"Winning the Georgia State Judo Championship in the 156 pound weight class has to be one of the biggest thrills of my lifetime," said PFC Maddox. "A long time ago I set certain goals for myself and dedicated myself to attaining each of those. Winning this championship is just a beginning."

PFC Maddox first began taking judo lessons five years ago and currently holds a brown belt ranking.

"This brown belt means a lot to me, but just about everything that I've worked for and dedicated myself to is contained in that black belt," PFC Maddox commented. "In tournament competition and practice, I've even been fortunate enough to defeat a few black belt holders. As a matter of fact, I had to defeat a black belt holder in Decatur to win the state championship."

Ten people from Ft. Benning traveled to the tournament and PFC Maddox was the only soldier from Benning to place in the championships.

What does the future hold for PFC Maddox as far as his interest in judo competition is concerned?

"At the present, I'm making plans to travel to the Amateur Athletic Union National Judo Championships to be held in Chicago in April," he says. "It's going to take hours of work and dedication on my part to prepare myself both mentally and physically for the competition. At the national level, only the best are able to win. You really have to have your act together and I'm going to go up there and give it my best shot. Who knows, maybe I'll come out on top."

Flyers zip Atlanta, 32-0

After a week of layoffs due to the weather, the Ft. Benning Rugby team demonstrated that they hadn't gotten rusty as they routed the Atlanta Rugby team 32-0.

As the fans and spectators basked in the sunshine, the "Flyers" surfaced that old style of aggressive but fair play.

The Ft. Benning team drew first blood early in the first half as a well placed kick by the fly-half, Bruce Barlow, bounced into the eager hands of the winger, Paul Keller. Running at full tilt when he caught the ball, Paul zipped past the Atlanta defenders for the first try. The conversion by Jim Mohney was good, score 6-0.

The game then became a constant defensive battle for the Atlanta team as the Ft. Benning forwards kept the pressure on and the ball in Atlanta's half of the field. Under such pressure the defense cracked and it was that elusive Joe "Irish" Duffy who found the hole and went in for the try. The conversion was missed and the half ended 10-0.

The second half saw more action as the better physical fitness of the Flyers surfaced and the Atlanta defense dwindled under the heavy hammering of the Ft. Benning pack. John Lovejoy put on a dazzling display of footwork and moves that brought the fans to their feets and four more points for the Flyers. The conversion was kicked by Butch and was good for two more points.

Then Joe "Irish" Diffy and Joe Rozek struck like twin lightning bolts for two more trys with the conversions being kicked by Jim Mohney and Joe "Irish" Duffy.

The final score was made by the rugger whom the Atlanta team had come to refer to as "that red-headed devil" — you guessed it Joe "Irish" Duffy. The conversion was kicked by Ben "OB1" Martin and the game ended 32-0.

The Flyers B Team then won their first victory of the season on the dazzling running of the fly-half, Cary Johnson, the brutal force of Rich VonShriltz, the kicking of Jim Mohney, and the constant pressure of the forwards. Final score 13-0.

Marathon--it lasts a long time

By Julie Casey

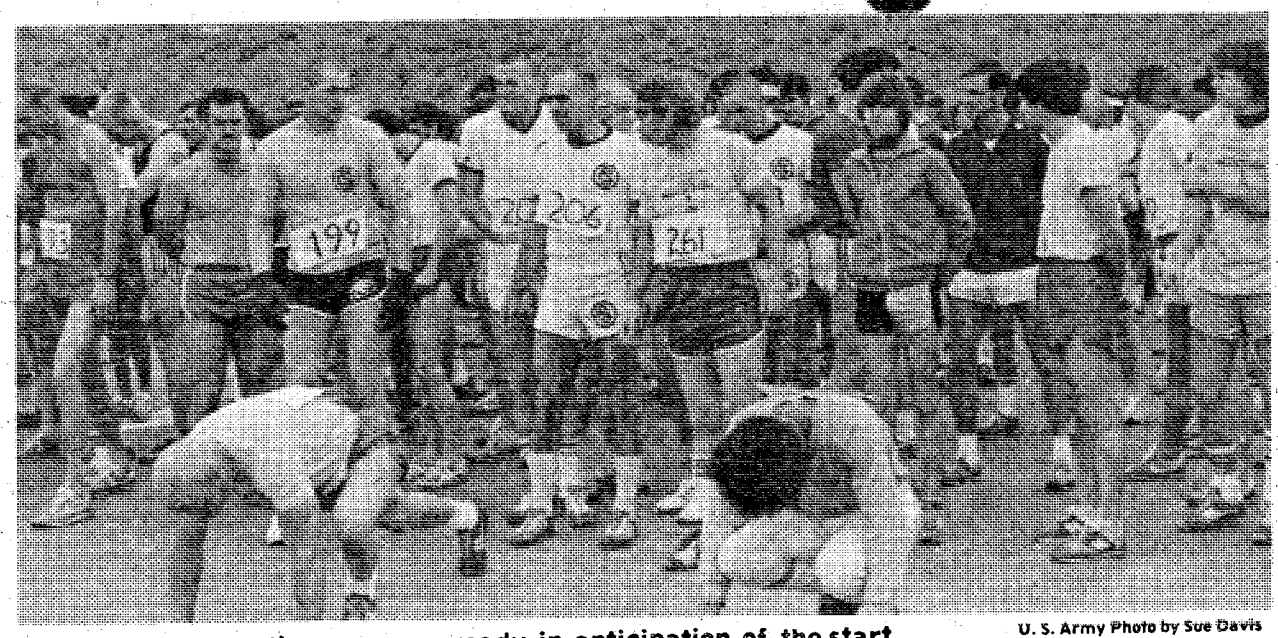
Runners crowded together on the starting line Saturday morning for the WRBL-TV and Pepsi Cola Marathon sponsored by the Columbus Track Club. The 26 mile and 13 mile marathons began in a blanket of fog with a majority of the runners shivering.

Ft. Benning participants were well represented in the event. Tom Coniglio placed third in the marathon with the time of 2:41:51. Coniglio, who is on the All Army track team hopes to make the Olympics in 1980. He also plans to attend the Pan American games in the fall.

Coniglio commented, "I know it isn't going to be easy but I'm going to give it a try."

The first Columbus Marathon was a great success and well organized according to one Officer Candidate who placed high in the mini-marathon.

When asked why he ran in the marathon Royce Hodge from Atlanta said, "I don't know. I just enjoyed it. It was really well organized."



Marathon runners ready in anticipation of the start. U. S. Army Photo by Sue Davis

The sun came out in the afternoon and the aid stations along the route became a necessary part of the race. Runners lasted the pain and distance. Out of 300 competitors in the mini-marathon 180 finished and 50 finished in the marathon.

"Anyone who finished either marathon is a winner," commented one man leaning against his van with bare tired feet.

Woman soldier takes it in stride

By Julie Casey

The blast of the starter's pistol echoed on that foggy morning and a wave of 300 hundred runners surged forward to run in the combined mini and regular marathon. Runners of all shapes and sizes came out to participate in the WRBL-TV and Pepsi Cola Marathons held Saturday morning.

After a year of retirement, I was coaxed into the 13 mile jaunt. I had been running just to keep my case of the 'jelly bellies' under control. One day while I was out fighting the bulge, I met my partner in crime, Capt. Al Hennigan. We had decided to suffer together and avoid the boredom of running alone.

With just four weeks of training there we were trotting down the road with a sea of bouncing heads in front of us and a sea of bodies behind us. At least we were not in last place.

In the first mile runners took off down the road like a bunch of wild Indians. The majority of competitors ran too fast to last the distance. I would have done the same if it had not been for Al, who kept warning me to slow down. Our object was to run the race at an even pace in order to last the whole distance.

Julie Casey watches the race after placing first in the women's division.

The morning air was cold and goose bumps appeared all over my body. I remember one gentleman after the race commenting, "You looked so cold this morning I didn't think you were going to make it."

The course had a good variety of hills and straight stretches and was lots of fun to run. Runners are special people and running a marathon is a curious event. People from all walks of life come out to strain, sweat and cross the finish line. Most of the competitors were friendly and they loved to talk.

Running down the road at about 7 minutes and 30 seconds a mile, I met up with a pretty good bunch of guys.

Striking up a conversation, one said, "I certainly hope you are not in my age group."

I replied, "How old are you?"

"32," he said.

"Well you don't have to worry I'm 48," I said laughing at the age of 20.

"You have to be kidding," came this voice from behind me.

I had a wonderful time talking about past and future marathons, training methods, skiing and the weather in Montana, my home state. Running a marathon is a great way to fill up your trivia file.

At the half way point I was pretty sure that I was in first place. I couldn't believe it. Before the race I thought maybe I'd make the top ten percent. I was so excited I think it made me run faster. I had not placed well in a race since my freshman year in high school.

At the seven mile mark, the sun came out and warmed my cold bones and it was time to run up the hills I had formerly run down. I was also on a first name basis with Joe, Paul and Kevin. We agreed to keep each others' spirits up and our knees rising and falling.

Kevin had to slow down because his muscles were too tight to keep up with the pace. Paul stayed with Joe and I until the 12th mile when he got a cramp in his behind and had to slow down. It was rather comical in a way.

Joe and I crossed the finish line together and what a wonderful feeling it was to stop. I placed first in the women's division and 63 over all with a time at 1:38:53.

I hope to continue running and will probably see Joe, Paul and Kevin again. Maybe in the Atlanta marathon.

New sports director plans expansion

By Betty Zimmerman

Play ball! What kind of ball? Well, under Ft. Benning's Sports Program, it could be basketball, softball, flag football, racquetball, volleyball or, in the near future, soccer.

So far, the sports office, under DPCA's Recreation Services, has only football to offer on post team level — but, the addition of more sports in this category is being suggested by the new sports director, Raphael Santaliz.

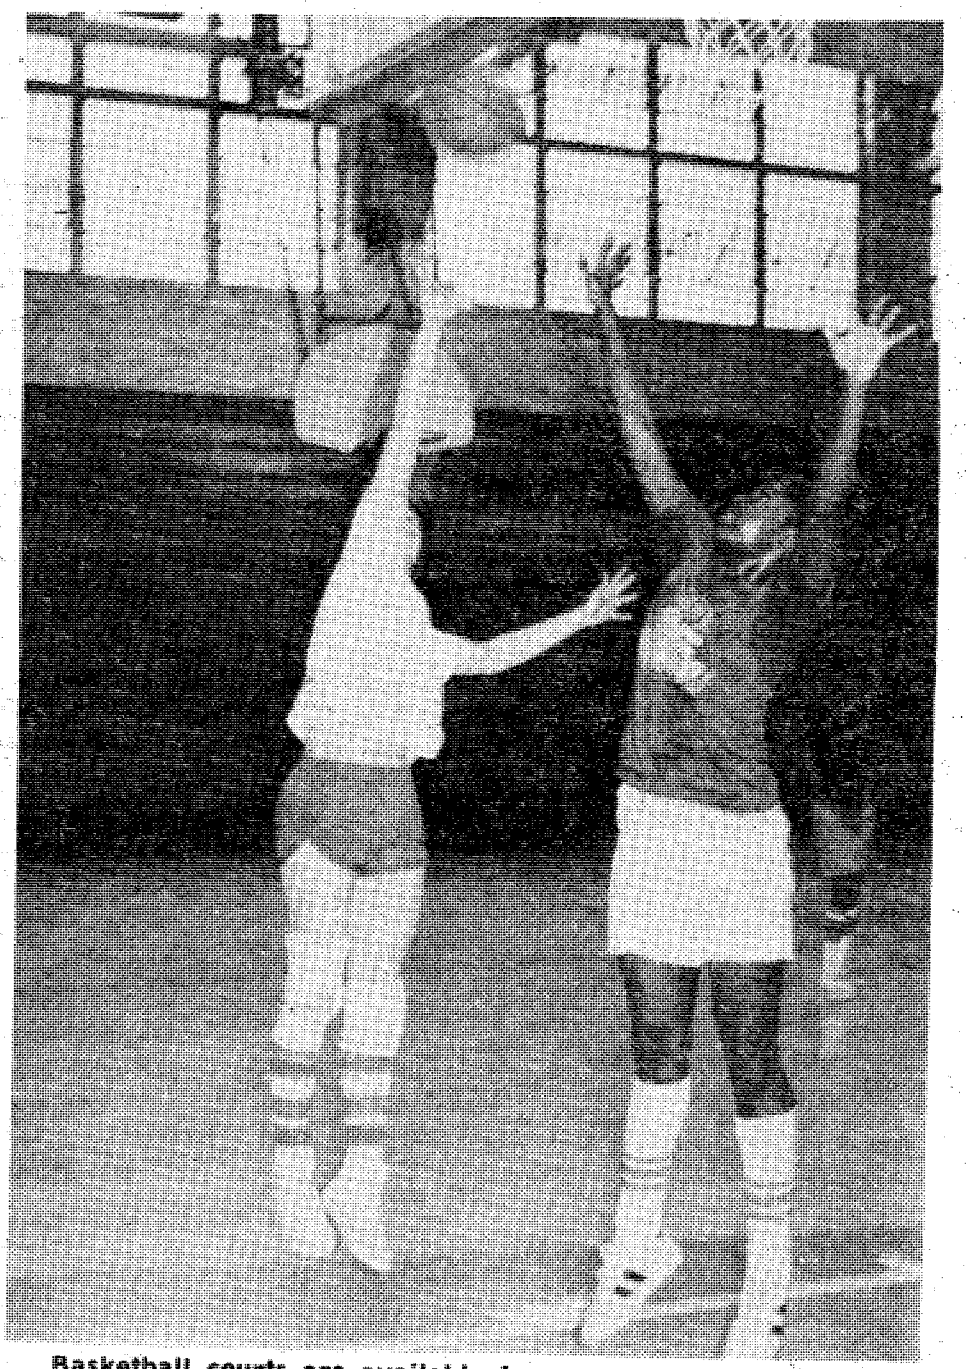
"Santaliz brings the enthusiasm of youth, proof of expertise and advantages of appropriate education to his new job. His accomplishments with the sports programs at Redstone Arsenal, Ala. and Ft. Riley, Kansas, present noteworthy credentials," stated Col. Richard McKee, DPCA director.

The 28-year-old North Georgia College Physical Education graduate served two years as an Army Athletic and Recreation (A&R) officer with the 36th Engr Gp and 197th Inf Bde here at Benning. He also coached at Marshall Junior High and Carver High School in Columbus during '71 and '72. From '74 to '76, he was the Department of Army civilian (DAC) sports director at Redstone and in '77 at Ft. Riley.

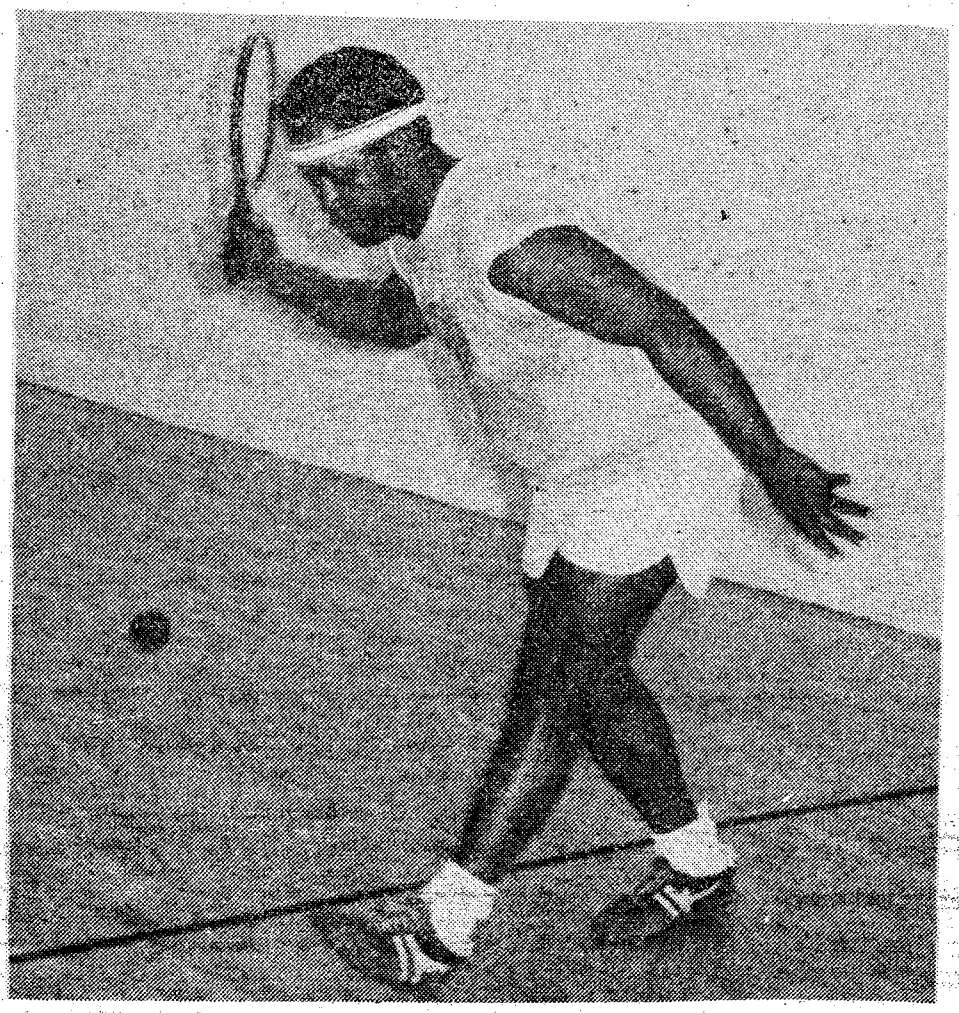
It's his job to see that the sports office carries out its mission of providing a well-rounded and comprehensive sports program that will motivate maximum participation by providing opportunities in all sports. They strive to enhance morale and develop and maintain the high standard of mental and physical well-being among military personnel. One means to this end is by emphasizing intramural competition at the lowest practicable echelon of command. From there their responsibilities progress through company level teams to post, TRADOC, DA, Interservice, National and finally International level competitions.

The local staff of 27 military and eight civilians handle the sports office administration, set up and run the various USAIC athletic programs, and manage the operation of the six gymnasiums, six swimming pools, five sets of tennis courts, Gowdy Field and Doughboy Stadium. Each command has its own A&R officer and staff who conduct their intramural programs.

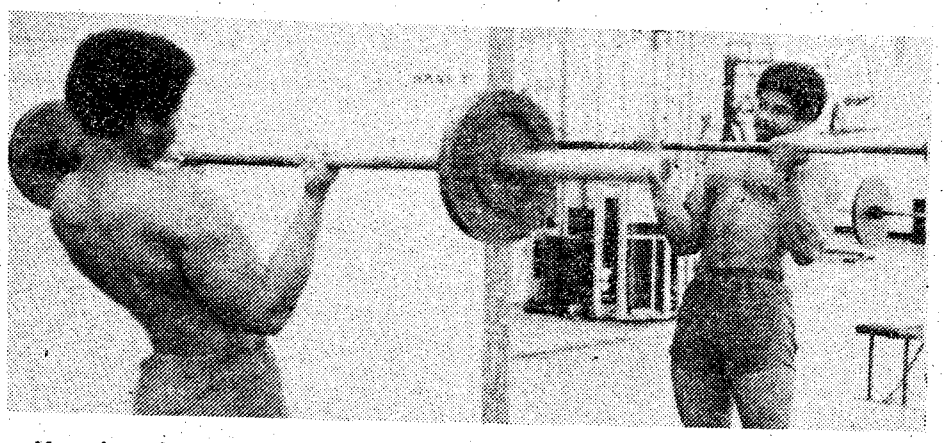
The volleyball program is in full swing now and preparations are going full steam for the upcoming softball program.



Basketball courts are available for use whenever volleyball games are not being held. Sp4 Geri V. Smith, HHD, 197th Spt Bn, practice for the TRADOC Tournament.



Racquetball is becoming very popular so reservations are required to get a court. 1st. Sgt. William Lyde, acting Sergeant Major, 10BC Bn (Prov), warms up for a challenge-play



Keeping in shape by using the weight lifting facilities at one of the Ft. Benning gymns is Sp4 Billy Wilborn, 675th Med Det, 34th Med Bn, who is "curling" 85 pounds.

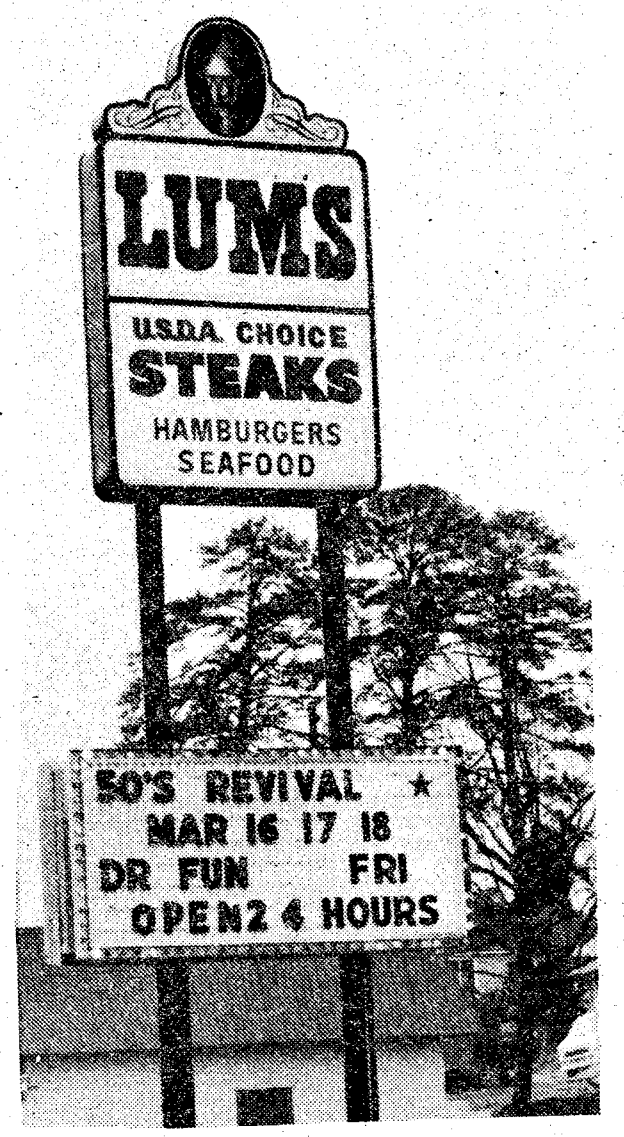
"Fifties" Revival Something Special at Lums



But lately, everything has been special at Lums. Ever since Ike & Debbie Smith took over management, they have worked hard to make it a very pleasant and popular place. Believe me, they have succeeded! Through personal service, a versatile and delicious menu and the lowest prices anywhere, they have rapidly made Lums a favorite place for hundreds of Fort Benning and Columbus residents.

This weekend, March 17th & 18th, is a perfect example of the good times at Lums. One of the best '50's celebrations ever in Columbus is taking place. Waitresses are wearing authentic 1950's clothing. And if you don't remember how good girls looked back then, you owe it to yourself to come by and see. Prices have also been rolled back to the 50's. Hamburgers . . . 50¢, Hot Dogs . . . 50¢, French Fries . . . 50¢, Milk Shakes . . . 50¢ and a Large Coke with an authentic 50's glass for you to keep is only 50¢. To set the mood you will enjoy over 6 hours of nonstop music from the great artists of the past. Photographs, posters, albums and other 50's paraphenalia has been gathered especially for the fun filled adventure into the past. When you come in the door you will actually step back in time to one of the most fondly remembered eras of all time.

Even a car contest for 1950's vintage automobiles will be taking place. Remember the 57 Chevy? Anyone owning a 1950 to '59 model car, will enter by parking his or her auto on the front lawn of Lums and be voted on by the customers. The winner will receive $50.00 cash and all participants will receive something for their trouble.

So, if you're looking for a whole lot of fun, anytime of the day or night at the lowest prices in town, come by Lums, Open 24 Hours a Day!

This week's column is on paragraph 95.81 of Subpart D. Part 95, FCC Rules and Regulations.

"95.81 Permissible Communications. Stations licensed in the Citizens Radio Service are authorized to transmit the following types of communications:

a. Communication to facilitate the personal or business activities of the licensee.

b. Communications relating to:

1. The immediate safety of life or the immediate protection of property in accordance with paragraph 95.85.

2. The rendering of assistance to a motorist, mariner or other traveler.

3. Civil Defense activities in accordance with paragraph 95.121.

4. Other activities only as specifically authorized pursuant to paragraph 95.87.

c. Communications with stations authorized in other radio services except as prohibited in paragraph 95.83a (3)."

Personal communications, simply put, is just about anything you may want to say that is not prohibited by law. It gives you and I as CBers a fairly broad area in which to talk. In business communications, you may not advertise goods or services for sale. Beyond that, the field is wide open.

Paragraph 95.41d(3) has some very good examples of acceptable communications relating to the safety of life or protection of property:

"A tornado is sighted six miles north of town."

"There is a four-car collision at exit 10 on the Beltway. Send police and ambulance."

"There is a fire in the building on the corner of Sixth and Main Streets."

Aid to motorists, mariners and other travelers is fairly well defined: street directions, hotel/motel accomodations, road and weather conditions.

To be authorized as an emergency station in connection with Civil Defense activities, the use of CB equipment must be on a volunteer basis. The equipment must be located under the direct control of the Civil Defense Agency which ordered the exercise, drill or test. Also, the licensee of the station must notify both the FCC in Washington and the Engineer-in-charge of the local FCC radio District.

As shown in paragraph 95.83a(3), a CBer may not communicate with an amateur radio station except as authorized under paragraphs 95.85b and 95.121.

So you can see that the FCC has given CBers a wide latitude in the use of their equipment. However, the proper use of CB is the primary responsibility of each operator. It is up to us to insure that CB radio remains a valid service. The only way we can do this is by using it within the guidelines of the rules, by reporting those who don't and by refusing to accept communications from them.

The word from the man is: use it right or lose it. Unless we police ourselves as the amateurs do, we could very possibly lose this service. Think about it.

2/10 FA Bn Hail and Farewell

The officers and wives of the 2/10 FA Bn met at Pioneer Lodge for their monthly Hail and Farewell February 24. It was a very enjoyable evening of fun and games as those attending formed teams to compete in the battalion's "Almost Anything Goes" contest. Everyone relaxed and enjoyed the informal evening while snacking on popcorn and Favarito's pizza.

Battalion Commander LtCol. Bart Furey opened the evening by welcoming everyone and bidding a sad farewell to 2ndLt. Budd Siniard and 1stLt. and Mrs. Jack Hyde. A baby cup was presented to Capt. and Mrs. Emmett Williams to congratulate them on the arrival of their son.

The evening was arranged and sponsored by the battalion staff.

Bake Sale

The Officer Candidate Mates Club held a bake sale February 27 in the mess hall and day room of 51st Co, 5th Stu. Bn.

The fund raising project netted $83 for the club's treasury. The money will be used to help cover expenses of the club's luncheon scheduled for April. Mrs. Jan Brewer is the Fund Raising Chairman.

Professor Safety says...

Did you know that most traffic accidents happen within 25 miles of home? This is easily explained. That is where most of your driving takes place. This should dictate to you that seat belts are necessary all the time, not just on long trips. (USAIC Safety Office)

AUSA Defense Report

As the President's Commission on Military Compensation weaves its way through the maze of problems that surround its subject and toward its scheduled March 15, 1978 reporting date it becomes clear that the most hotly contended issue it faces is the future shape of the military retirement system. Within the broad subject the issue of dropping, modifying or continuing voluntary 20-year retirement seems to be crucial.

It has already been proved that forcing all military careerists to serve longer will not save money over the long term. Fewer people may serve to retirement but those who do will get larger pensions. Shifting to a rigid system of retirement at 30 years of service or 55 years of age or some combination of age and service could do irreparable harm to the military personnel management system designed to provide the nation with the most effective fighting force possible. The answer to the problem of getting that effective fighting force with the least retirement-related expense seems to lie somewhere between the two extremes of 20-year voluntary retirement eligibility for everybody and forced service to 30 years or 55 years of age.

Many service personnel who leave the armed forces after 20 years could go on performing their duties efficiently for another ten years—perhaps even longer. These individuals would be found mostly in support jobs, some of them highly technical. It is just as true that by the time many infantrymen, tankers and other combat personnel reach the 20-year mark they have spent more than their share of time performing arduous duties under disagreeable and often hazardous conditions. They have had enough. Some can make the transition into administrative jobs, others can't. There simply aren't enough administrative or support jobs available to absorb all the combat people who have reached the 20-year plateau. Combat, in the Army and Marine Corps certainly is a young person's job.

A recent paper by the Congressional Budget Office warned those who would change the military career pattern by eliminating 20-year retirement that this change would create an older force and inevitably alter its ability to perform its mission. Before that change is made, the report said, all concerned must be prepared to accept its ramificatons.

The members of the President's Commission must remember that the retirement system's primary goal is to support an effective military personnel management system and it, in turn, must help produce an adequate national defense. This is the goal that must concern them most, not pure cost saving.

197th in field training exercise

By Ron Fowler

Elements of the 'Ever Ready Support" 197th Spt Bn, 197th Inf Bde took to the field last week in an effort to validate their readiness as a combat service support battalion during an Army Training and Evaluation Program (ARTEP).

The ARTEP gave the 'Ever Ready Support' troopers the chance to show their abilities as an essential element of the brigade in a simulated combat environment.

"All of the soldiers who participated in the ARTEP displayed the highest degree of professionalism in each of their jobs," said LtCol. William K. McDonald, 197th Spt Bn commander. "They've proven to me that they're the best," he added.

The Spt Bn was given a variety of missions to accomplish during the ARTEP ranging from administration of military personnel records to replacement of tank engines under night combat conditions.

"We've proved that we're not just a unit that can operate under garrison conditions. We've shown everyone that we're for real as a productive 197th Inf Bde unit," said SFC Harry P. Flood, NCOIC Spt Bn Personnel Actions Center.

The troops from the Spt Bn even had the chance to play 'infantry' during the ARTEP as they had to repel probing attacks from squad and platoon sized 'Opposing Forces' elements.

"We showed each and every infantry soldier in the brigade that we were capable of providing combat service support to the 197th and still maintain a tactical posture out in the field," said SP4 Pat Luna, clerk, S-1 section.

"We think that we can do just about anything that is asked of us, anything at all," she concluded.

Crew chiefs

All assigned aircraft mechanics in the 34th Medical Battalion are graduates of the Aviation Maintenance School, either a seven-week course at Ft. Rucker, Al. for UH-ls or a 14-week course at Ft. Eustis Va for CH54s. They are awarded crew member wings. After seven years duty as a crew member they are awarded senior crew member wings and after 15 years flight duty are authorized to wear Master Crew Member wings. However by the time they are authorized Master Crew member wings they normally have progressed to a maintenance supervisor or technical inspector.

Presently there are only two enlisted men in the 34th who wear Master Crew Member Wings. Formerly an all male position, there are currently two female soldiers occupying crew chief positions in the 34th Medical Bn., Sp4 Mary McAndres, 498th Med Co (AA) and Pfc Darlene Worthley, 478th Trans Co (HH).

It makes you wonder why anyone would want a job like this, which requires long work hours outside, rain or shine, night or day. Of course there is incentive pay involved, which varies according to rank, but it isn't a great deal of money and is normally used to cover expenses on TDY trips.

The reasons for being a flight engineer/crew chief are varied but were best expressed by SSG Norris Johnson, 478th Trans Co. (HH), with 10 years experience as a flight engineer/crew chief who said, "I like being a flight engineer because of the responsibility and the sense of pride it gives me. Where else in the Army can an enlisted man be responsible for a piece of equipment that costs so much money? I feel a personal sense of accomplishment after each successful mission, knowing that I am responsible for the mechanical upkeep of such a complicated machine. Then too, don't forget, flying is fun."

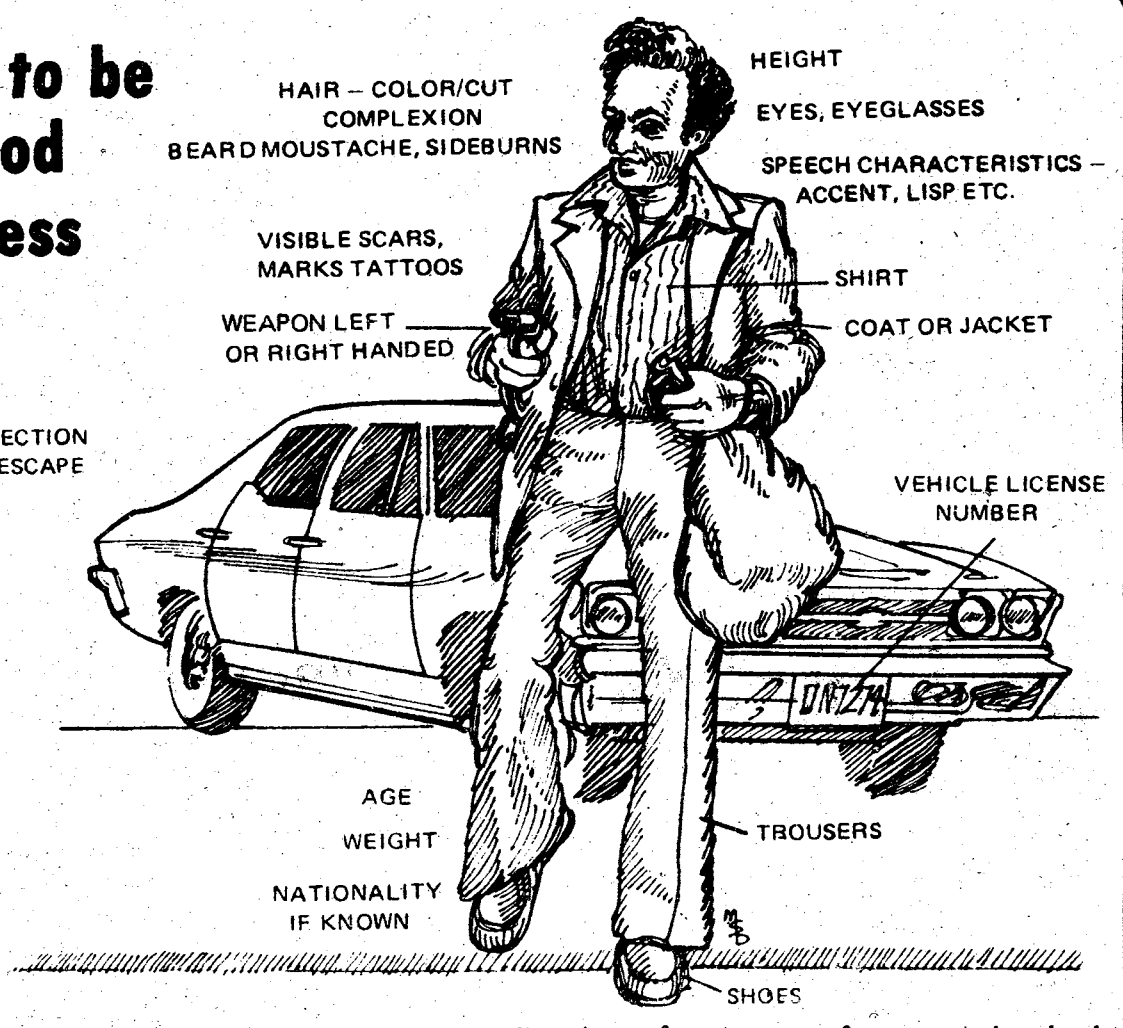
Assignment policies implemented

Department of the Army announced the implementation of new assignment policies designed to reduce personnel turbulence and associated costs while providing the soldier greater tour stability. Key policies include:

- No PCS moves in CONUS solely due to passage of a stipulated period of time.
- Assignment procedures to permit tour completion and encourage voluntary tour extensions.
- Assignment procedures will include consideration of cost.
- First-term, 3-year (or less) members will be given only one assignment after initial training unless required to serve a short tour, in which case two assignments are permitted. First-term, 4-year (or more) members are eligible for two assignments after training, regardless of tour length.
- Emphasis on career personnel assigned to an unaccompanied hardship tour area being provided a homebase or advanced assignment.
- General officer assignments will be for a minimum of 2 years.
- In-so-far as possible, CONUS assignments will be for 3 years or more. This will not apply to individuals ordered overseas. For officers selected to attend Senior Service College, a 2-year minimum assignment will apply.
- Through the grade of 0-5 for officers and E-8 for enlisted members, promotion will not be the sole reason for PCS reassignment prior to tour completion.
- Individuals declared excess at a particular installation will be reassigned at the same installation in their secondary or substitutable skills or, if not possible, to the nearest installation capable of using their skills.
- Hawaii is now included as part of the CONUS sustaining base for purposes of selection of overseas replacements. (ARNEWS)

How to be a good witness



Most crimes are over in less than a minute. If you are a witness to a crime, take note of everything you can — the size, weight, build, dress, speech abnormalities, method, and direction of getaway of persons involved. Don't compare notes with other witnesses. It's easy to become confused.

Benning to host Fiesta April 8

In the past years, Fort Benning has hosted a Spring and Fall Volks Fest at Doughboy Stadium. This spring, the post will hold a Fiesta with a flavor on April 8.

Highlighting the day's planned activities is a post parade starting from Bluefield down Zuckerman Road, Lumpkin and Sigerfoos to the stadium. The procession will feature the Colonial Band, 283rd Army Band, local Boy and Girl Scout Troops, the Fort Benning Hunt Club, fire engines and some floats.

The fiesta is schedule to begin with the running events of a 20, 10 5 and 2 mile run. Performances by the world-famous Blanko Brothers Mariachi Band, Carolina Alive, a group of 50 talented singers and dancers from the University of South Carolina and the Latin Sounds, a local group, are some of the attractions planned for the afternoon and evening.

Some dependent youth activities scheduled include pinata games, a bean bag hunt, track events and two mile family walk-run. Whether its walking, running, singing or dancing, the festive day promises fun for everyone.

Committee convenes to discuss doctor shortage

The Army convened a review committee to examine a series of proposed initiatives designed to alleviate the current shortage of doctors.

The committee, headed by the Surgeon General, with representation from the Army Secretariat, Staff, and Health Services Command, is studying numerous proposals including:

- Effective use of current personnel assets to achieve maximum restoration of health care in Army treatment facilities without creating detrimental long-term effects.
- Increasing the number of physicians and other health care personnel who can increase physician productivity.
- Updating and creating physician incentive programs.
- Improving communications with interested audiences concerning the doctor shortage, its effect, and planned solutions.

Chairing the Review Group is BrigGen. Enrique Mendez, the Deputy Surgeon General. The committee will operate until November 1978 or until it deals with the proposals before it. In this regard, if the committee recommends adoption of a proposal, it will not delay in implementation. Some adjustments will be immediate while others will be long-term changes.

As of Sept. 30, 1977, there were 4,056 physicians on active duty (this includes 290 interns). The Army had earlier programmed 4,738 physicians for FY 78 but has recognized the difficulty in attracting and retaining physicians and has since reduced the authorization. A programmed authorization of 4,539 active duty physicians is hoped to be achieved as soon as possible.

Acute shortages exist in the following specialties: anesthesiology, internal medicine, pathology, pediatrics, psychiatry, radiology, general surgery, obstetrics and gynecology, ophthalmology, otorhinolaryngology, and orthopedic surgery.

There are no plans to combine health care services under one Military Department or DOD Agency. Since 1976, there has been a DOD Level Health Council which oversees health care delivery and allocation of resources within the three services. Extensive cooperation exists within CONUS through the DOD Medical Regionalization Program, but there are no plans to dismantle the Army's Medical Department and jeopardize the Army's unique combat mission by removing its medical support.

Because of the doctor shortage, some eligible for Army health care may have to seek care outside the Army. The law sets forth the priorities for care. Active duty personnel have the highest priority and have not been deprived of care in any way. Those beneficiaries with lower priorities, that is, dependents of active duty, retirees, dependents of retired members, survivors of retired, etc., are entitled to care at a given treatment facility on a space available basis provided that the specialist is available, too. When physician shortages exist as they do now, some beneficiaries are going to be required to seek care outside our system. They may try to go to the treatment facilities of other services, to participate in CHAMPUS, or to obtain care at their own expense in the civilian marketplace. At some CONUS locations, certain kinds of services to other than active duty personnel simply cannot be provided.

The review group will examine some short-term methods to restore care such as hiring civilian physicians to work in hospitals and contracting for critical services, like radiology. Obtaining these kinds of substitutes will help the Army return to its former capacity to provide care. (TNS)

Patrolling: to see without being seen, hear without being heard

By Debra Hilgeman

Infantrymen are made; not born.

To be infantry-qualified requires weeks of intensive, physically demanding training. One vital aspect of infantry training is known as "patrolling." During a Benning students' infantry training, one day is devoted to teaching him the finer points of the art of "patrolling."

The day begins early with a 30-minute briefing conducted by one of the 23 assigned staff members of Special Subjects Committee, 1st AIT Bde. The briefing starts off with an explanation of a daylight reconnaisance patrol and a raid patrol; both of which the men will be doing before the training day is over.

"The mission of a daylight reconnaisance patrol," explains the instructor, "is to see without being seen, to hear without being heard." To the company of fifth-week AIT infantry students, this means an afternoon in the woods collecting information to prove or disprove information previously received.

Raids differ from recons

The mission of a raid patrol is primarily to provide security and harass, destroy or capture enemy personnel, equipment and installations. The alternate mission is to collect and report information whether it is related to the assigned mission or not.

Following the briefing, the men are split into squads and marched into an isolated wooded training site where they receive a more detailed briefing from a staff patrol leader for the remainder of the morning. The squad is first informed on what areas they will be graded. This includes attention to training and verbal instruction, individual camouflage and preparation of weapons and equipment, individual knowledge of situations, reaction to battlefield illumination, reaction to enemy artillery fire, teamwork, attitude, and compass and radio duties. "The grading system is go/no go. If a student fails, he must repeat the training," according to Patrol Leader Sgt. Dave Smith.

The morning instruction is designed to prepare the patrol team to deal with any situation that may arise on the actual patrol. The squad is given numerous training objectives, the necessary instructions, talked through the training objective and then required to perform a practical exercise.

If you see a snake . . .

Since enemy aggressors aren't the only things the soldiers may run into while on the patrol, they are also briefed on what to do in case of snakebite (sit still and wait to be medevacced out), wild dog attack (climb a tree or run) or what the man should do if he finds himself lost. Since the training area is surrounded by live firing ranges, it is important that a soldier who becomes lost not wander around trying to find the rest of his squad.

If a man should become lost while on the patrol, there are predesignated rallying points. For instance, any hardtop road is a rallying point and the students are told that if they are lost and come to a hardtop road, to stay there until they are found.

After the morning instruction, the men are ready to begin the daylight reconnaisance patrol. Camouflage is applied, noisy objects are placed in pockets lined with leaves and pine needles to muffle sound, and the patrol leader inspects his men to insure that everything has been done correctly.

First, an operation order is given describing exactly what the mission is. Then a warning order is given describing exactly what the squad is to do. After the warning order is given, the patrol leader conducts a final inspection before sending his men out.

Silence is key word

The men silently move out in a prearranged wedge formation. The only communication is through hand and arm signals which are passed on to each member of the squad. On the way to the objective, everything that was learned during the morning's classes is put into actual use.

When the squad is within 200 meters of the objective, they form an objective rallying point (ORP) and set up security. Two-man teams are sent out to get as close as possible to the objective to observe action and gather information.

Each team member is given a chance to go to the objective. If he is seen by the aggressors they will open fire so the man will know he was unsuccessful in remaining undetected. Not everyone is a successful sleuth, however. "I've had patrols that weren't out there 20 seconds before they were captured," noted Smith.

After each man has gone to the objective and collected information, he returns to the ORP and reports what he has found to the patrol leader. The information is recorded and evaluated and in the debriefing that follows, the men find out how accurate their observations were.

The final test is the evening combat patrol. The final phase begins with a class on light and noise discipline, or anything the patrol team might encounter on a night maneuver. Before moving out, dry runs are conducted on a simulated objective until the patrol leader feels his squad is ready for the actual patrol.

Keep the worms out of 'the apple of your eye'

By Sue Davis

Joey was the "apple of his mother's eye." His curly, blonde hair and saucer-like blue eyes made him look like Cupid. He smiled often and when he did, his dimples showed. Oftentimes, he would sit on the kitchen counter and sing while his mother washed the dishes. But now he's dead.

His mother only left for a few minutes to answer the door. When she returned from chatting with Alice, her next-door neighbor, Joey was sprawled on the floor, unconscious. Beside him was an open bottle of aspirin. He was only two years old; he couldn't read warning labels.

National Poison Prevention Week, March 10-25, 1978, is a nationwide attempt to reduce the incidence of poisoning in the U. S.

Over 4,000 Americans will die this year from accidental poisoning and 95 percent are preventable, according to the Georgia Department of Public Health.

Nine out of ten poison victims are pre-school children. Toddlers are usually curious, fearless and fast. They like to grab things off tables, and counters, wander into under-counter cabinets and closets and venture into medicine cabinets. A child's world is in low places.

Parents of preschoolers can prevent almost certain tragedy by storing harmful products in high places and securing cabinet doors with sliding latches. Surprisingly, some plants are toxic. These should be recognized and kept out of reach of children.

Although 90 percent of all poisoning cases that occur involve children, adults have their own hazards.

Adults will occasionally give a prescription drug to someone it wasn't intended for which may result in allergic reactions.

And as if that isn't enough to choke on . . .

Fumes such as carbon monoxide CO kill 1,000 people a year, according to national statistics. A running automobile in a closed garage builds up this invisible, odorless gas to a deadly level without the occupant knowing.

Charcoal grills should not be used as they produce CO concentrations.

One guaranteed deadly combination is alcohol and "downers" such as Librium. Other sedatives not classified as barbiturates or tranquilizers, such as sleeping pills or "mickeys," may cause a variety of reactions from stupor to death.

When using prescribed drugs, it is best to check with your doctor to learn any possible dangers from combining them with other drugs or alcohol.

Poisons are placed into two distinct groups:

Primary—which are dangerous in small quanities and include weed killers and pesticides.

Potential — which are deadly in large amounts. These posions include aspirin, various combinations of pills, household cleaners, common plants and aerosols.

A spokesman from MAH has suggested some poison treatment tips.

If someone has ingested a poison that is not corrosive (acid) or petroleum (gasoline) and is conscious and not convulsing, administer syrup or ipecac, which is available without a prescription at the high speed pharmacy to induce vomiting. When the victim gags, keep the basin and its contents to help the doctor identify the poison.

Afterwards, dilute again with water or milk. Never give a poison victim alcohol.

Call a doctor immediately. Ft. Benning personnel report to the Emergency Room at MAH.

Sweet success.

Gutten Tag Wie Gehts, you all

soldiers aware of some of the German Customs. To wit: If invited to supper with a family it is permissible to brig the lady of the house a bouquet of flowers, but don't bring red roses because this means that you and she are more than just friends. Women in Germany tend to take the titles of their husbands and are usually addressed that way (a doctor's wife is addressed as Mrs. Doctor So-and-So). A man precedes his lady companion into a public place to insure it is suitable for her to enter A man always walks on a lady's left side (this goes back to the days when men carried swords on their left sides and they wanted that side free). Germans tend to shake hands more than Americans do. A lady wearing a wedding band on the ring finger of her left hand is engaged, if married she would move the ring to the ring finger of her right hand. And all the people carrying briefcases aren't lawyers, as Germans tend to carry their lunches in briefcases.

Interest is high among the soldiers of the 546th concerning the language and culture courses because knowledge in these two areas will make their stay in Germany, particularly what free time they get, much more enjoyable.

Other subjects covered by the 546th training section include: The Soviet Soldier, NATO Orientation and Operation of a Clearing Station. Subjects to be taught by the 179th MI Det are: Geneva Convention, Code of Conduct, SAEDA, Military Intelligence and Handling of Prisoners and The Soviet Liaison Mission. The Post Legal Section will give classes on Civil Affairs and Status of Forces Agreement.

The 546th is preparing itself to accomplish its Reforger mission successfully and is taking several steps to insure that the biggest problem on the last Reforger Exercise, unit mail being sent to the wrong APO, will not be repeated.

Test program

Benning to become mobilization station

Ft. Benning and Ft. Lewis, Wash., are to become mobilization stations during a test program scheduled for April through December, according to DA officials.

The Mobilization Preassignment Program is designed to assign soldiers in the Individual Ready Reserve (IRR) to the nearest point needing their job skills when soldiers leave active duty.

The advance assignment to mobilation points will insure rapid deployment for units which are designed to ship overseas within 60 days of an assignment.

Eventually, about 50 separation points and 50 mobilization stations will assign IRR members in advance. Officers and enlisted members may remain in the units for which they volunteer. Preassignment orders will only be given to separating soldiers who do not volunteer for a specific unit and who have a reserve obligation. The voluntary preassignment program ended in 1977.

Preassignments to mobilization stations is necessary, say DA spokesmen, because soldiers often volunteer for distant units, making emergency deployment difficult. This program will inform IRR members of reporting points prior to an emergency and avoid traditional, time consuming mail notification, while insuring wartime strength at mobilization stations.

Patrolling

When everything is in readiness, the warning order is issued and the patrol is under way. Each man has been thoroughly briefed on his duties and position during the attack. When everything is set and the men are in place, a signal is given and the raid begins.

"All hell breaks loose"

"This is the tense part," according to Committee Chief Lt. Bruce Burney. "All hell breaks loose when that signal goes off."

If everything goes according to plan, maneuver elements sweep across the objective followed by a search team to collect any important documents. Once this is done, a demolition team sets up charges and the entire squad falls back to the ORP for a head count before leaving the area. When the attack is over, the soldiers return to friendly lines where they are debriefed, graded and evaluated.

Patrolling. Just how important is it? "An infantryman has to be used to the woods," said Burney. "This training is one of the few times the soldiers are actually in the woods at night on a battlefield exercise. In the event of a real battle, this training will help keep these guys alive," he concluded.

You can't find a more important reason than that.

smuggled across borders become less plentiful. And its widespread use apparently caught officials by surprise. "It 'snuck' up on us . . . we just weren't sensitive to finding it," according to one source. The current system used to monitor drug trends did not pick up the PCP fad. In one month use of PCP was raised from the status of confusing to epidemic proportions.

According to a DA official, although tests exist for the discovery of some drugs of abuse, the Army presently has no reliable means of testing for PCP abuse. But officials are aware that some PCP is being used, with cases of PCP abuse identified at Ft. Hood, Tex.; Ft. Lewis, Wash.; and Ft. Carson, Colo.

Developed during the late 1950s as an anesthetic, PCP was banned for human consumption in 1965 after tests showed it produced serious side effects. It did, however, become available commercially "for veterinary use only" as an animal tranquilizer.

Persons with a little know-how have been found to prepare PCP in illegal laboratories, rather than convert supplies intended for veterinary use. PCP is produced in powdered form as a single drug or in combination with other drugs, and is usually sold in gelatin capsules. In some areas, phencyclidine has appeared in capsules in blue, white and brown layers.

Users may inhale PCP as a powder, inject it in a fluid or swallow it in capsule form. The drug is also smoked as "angel dust" when sprinkled on parsley, marijuana or other substances. Some drug dealers add PCP to enhance low-grade marijuana. Still others market PCP as LSD, cocaine, mescaline, and THC (the active ingredient in marijuana).

When taken in small doses, the PCP affects the user in three stages:

- Perceived changes in physical images.
- Perceptual distortion — visual or audial hallucinations.
- Feelings of apathy or estrangement.

Individuals may experience drowsiness, the inability to speak and feelings of "nothingness" or "emptiness." Difficulty in thinking, poor concentration and preoccupation with death may also occur. Many users react to PCP with an acute psychotic episode.

Common physical indications of PCP use may include flushing, excessive sweating, mild relaxation of the arteries, insensitivity to pain, loss of muscle control, double vision, dizziness (which may cause nausea and vomiting), and nystagmus — spastic movement of the eyes.

Angel dust, goon, crystal, superjoint — by any name, PCP has reared its ugly head. Because it is synthetic and easily produced with a little knowledge, effective control may be difficult. Its potential for serious side effects and the general level of awareness on the part of abusers are sources of real concern to health, law enforcement and command officials. (ARNEWS)

Vol. 37, No. 27
March 24, 1978

A Ledger-Enquirer newspaper published for the personnel at Ft. Benning

Benning bids farewell to Mahaffey

Soldiers and civilian employees here and friends from the local community said goodbye to BrigGen. Fred K. Mahaffey, assistant commandant of the Infantry School, in an honor guard departure ceremony held on York Field Tuesday afternoon.

Mahaffey, who has been the assistant commandant since May 1976, will leave April 1 for Ft. Leavenworth, Kans., where he will serve as Director of the Infantry Fighting Vehicle Special Study Group Headquarters. His successor has not been announced.

MajGen. William J. Livsey, post commander, thanked Mahaffey for his achievements here, and stated that the contributions he and Mrs. Mahaffey made to the local community would be greatly missed.

In his response, Mahaffey said he and his family felt they were leaving their permanent home, since one-third of his 23-year Army career had been spent at Benning.

Six platoons of soldiers from major units participated in the ceremony, along with a color guard and salute battery from the 197th Inf Bde and the 283d Army Band. Members of the Airborne Department's "Airborne 5000" team made a free-fall parachute jump onto York Field, climaxing their demonstration with the presentation of a baton to Mahaffey and a dozen roses to Mrs. Mahaffey, which the team had carried with them in their descent.

Following the ceremony, BrigGen. and Mrs. Mahaffey were honored with a reception at the Ft. Benning Officers' Club.

The departing general entered the service as a Distinguished Military Graduate from the University of Denver. He has a Bachelor of Arts Degree in Business Management and a Masters Degree from George Washington University in International Relations.

He has attended the Airborne and Ranger Schools, Infantry Basic and Advanced Courses, and the Command and General Staff College. He was graduated from the National War College in 1971.

His decorations include three Silver Star Medals, four Legion of Merit awards, two Distinguished Flying Crosses, four Bronze Star Medals, the Meritorious Service Medal and 15 Air Medal awards. He has also twice received the Vietnamese Gallantry Cross with Palm.

During his career, Mahaffey has earned the Army General Staff Identification Badge, the Combat Infantry Badge, the Expert Infantryman's Badge and the Parachutist Badge.

BrigGen. Mahaffey is from Carlsbad, New Mexico. He and his wife, the former Jane Ann Garrett, have four daughters.

Mahaffey discusses Benning, new job

The BAYONET conducted an interview with BrigGen. Mahaffey Tuesday on his thoughts as he departs Ft. Benning for his new assignment at Ft. Leavenworth, Kans. See the related story on page 4.

Vets should make good use of GI Bill bennies

"GI Bill training benefits have insured successful careers for thousands of Georgia veterans, but many veterans fritter those precious benefits away on false starts, improper programs and poorly defined career objectives," said E. L. McIntire, Counseling and Rehabilitation Chief, Atlanta Veterans Administration Regional Office.

A veteran who entered military service before 1977 has ten years from time of discharge to use up to 45 months of educational benefits authorized under the GI Bill. The problem, said McIntire, is that the veteran can only maintain this eligibility through his original course and two program changes. Like baseball, he gets three swings at the ball.

"Many veterans waste their eligibility on worthless programs or by failing to complete courses of study," McIntire explained. "They run through their programs, use up their eligibility and discover too late they have neither a degree nor a job skill. They've struck out and lost more than just a game. They've lost a future!"

McIntire pointed out that any veteran entitled to VA schooling benefits is also eligible for the counseling services his office provides.

Prior to a counseling session the veteran fills out a personal data form recording school, work experience, hobbies, interests and vocational desires.

"That gives us some idea of how the veteran sees himself," McIntire said. "During the counseling discussion the counselor attempts to draw some of his own ideas of where the veteran is going and what his vocational needs are. His real problems may be personal and family difficulties. Those have to be taken care of first before we can talk about training."

The counseling office can administer a full battery of aptitude, temperament and intelligence tests and has complete vocational and educational libraries.

"We don't tell the veteran what to do," McIntire stressed. "We simply try to give him the tools and information with which he can realistically assess his interests and abilities and determine how he can best use his educational benefits.

"Our counselors are experienced pros," McIntire said. "They sit down with the veteran and go over his or her education, training, employment and career desires. Many times, the biggest service they provide is helping a veteran clearly define those career goals."

McIntire pointed out that counseling is required before a veteran can enter a second change of program or if he fails to complete a program. "By the time a veteran is required to receive counseling, though, he or she has little time left to train and in many cases is already committed to yet another unsuitable program," the VA counseling chief said.

There is no charge for VA counseling, but McIntire noted veterans must pay their own transportation costs. His office has eased travel costs by setting up counseling centers at the University of Georgia in Athens, Mercer University in Macon and Georgia Southern College in Statesboro. More are on the way. Veterans can get more information on VA vocational counseling by calling the Atlanta VA Regional Office at 1-800-282-0232 (statewide) or Columbus at 324-6646.

News in brief

Bouton Hill occupants urged to curtail water usage today

Certain occupants of the Bouton Hill family housing area are urgently requested to curtail water use from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. today.

Those areas affected are: Johnson Court, Michel Loop, Liesy Court, Story Court, Bennett Court, Dunn Court, Doane Court, Buker Drive, Hartsock Loop, Warren Circle, Kawamura Street, Fort Street and Fernandez Street.

The main supply line feeding the Bouton Hill water storage tank is being moved due to work on the Lindsay Creek Bypass extension. Normal use would drain the tank in a few hours.

Occupants are requested to use only enough water to meet minimum sanitation needs. This means reducing or eliminating showers, laundry, lawn watering, flushing commodes, etc.

Because of this disturbance to the main water line, rusty water, particles or chlorine taste may appear after service is restored. These signs should disappear shortly. If they do not, call the work order section at 545-5181.

This outage is an inconvenience, but is also a sign of improvement in our community life.

Uniform changeover date out

Effective immediately, the mandatory changeover date for winter and summer uniform seasons no longer exists. Soldiers may now wear the authorized Army Green, Khaki or other seasonal uniforms year-round. Commanders retain the authority to prescribe uniforms of formations, training, particular job functions or other similar situations. This change is designed to allow soldiers to dress in accordance with the weather.

The new uniform rules originated as a recommendation from the command sergeants major conference in 1976 to the Army Uniform Board (AUB). The AUB recommended adoption of the new rules and Army Chief of Staff Gen. Bernard W. Rogers approved the concept last December.

Baggers due salary July 30

Well, it's finally happened. Baggers in Army commissaries, who are presently working for tips, will become salaried employees July 30.

The Department of Defense has directed the Army (and the other services as well) to set up to a pay system which will guarantee that baggers receive the federal minimum wage and overtime, as regulated by the Fair Labor Standards Act.

The commissaries must either hire a civilian contractor to provide the bagging-carrying-out service, or hire commissary personnel specifically for the task according to DoD officials. In either case, commissaries will pay baggers from a fund created by a surcharge of approximately 2 percent of the total cost of all purchases made by customers who use the service.

Presently, Benning's commissary officials are investigating the possibility of hiring a civilian contractor to provide the bagging service here.

This bagging fee will be in addition to the regular surcharge paid by commissary customers. The regular surcharge will continue to go into a fund that pays for commissary operating supplies, modernization and construction projects.

When the commissary begins collecting the bagger fee, tipping will no longer be appropriate and will be discouraged," according to Mr. Fantauzzi.

Mahaffey makes his move

By Julie Casey

In the government's game of "Big Money," the Infantry Fighting Vehicle (IFV) just drew the card which says, "Do not pass go, go directly back to the Research and Development Program."

President Jimmy Carter withdrew the funds for production of the IFV for FY 79. As a result, two separate studies were initiated to re-evaluate the justification and cost effectiveness of the fighting vehicle. The study groups will also examine the IFV both in terms of systems and the force within those system operations to develop an IFV with less cost and without undermining the vehicle's effectiveness.

BrigGen Fred K. Mahaffey, assistant commandant of the Infantry School here will be the director of one of the special study groups.

Gen Mahaffey, who will be leaving Ft. Benning April 1 for Ft. Leavenworth, Kan., has been assigned to the Combined Center there as Deputy Commander to General Roy Sherman, as well as deputy commander of training and development. Gen. Mahaffey will also serve as an assistant Deputy commander for combat developments.

"I will be wearing two hats. The two jobs are a rather logical and favorable extension of my present job. I already have a good feel about the job. Until July 28, when my study is to be completed, I will be mostly occupied with the special study group," he said.

In an interview Tuesday, Gen. Mahaffey had the following comments concerning the Infantry Vehicle and his leaving Ft. Benning.

Q: How does it feel leaving Ft. Benning again for the fifth time?

Mahaffey: It is like leaving home. It is almost certain that this is our last tour here. Leaving brings home the realization of how much we are going to miss the friendships we have formed over the years. A lady that is going to be at ceremony today managed to find our first home here at Benning just after I was commissioned as a 2nd Lieutenant. I hate to put so many miles in between friends."

Q: What exactly will your duties entail as Director of the Infantry Fighting Vehicle Special Study Group?

Mahaffey: It involves an analytical based relook at the fighting vehicle. We are going to look at several, less costly alternatives. The results of the study are to be presented to the Secretary of Defense July 28.

Q: How long have you been involved with the IFV?

Mahaffey: Ever since I have been here. When I was here as an instructor, the IFV, at that time, was a very hot issue. I would say that the Infantry Fighting Vehicle has been a hot item with Infantry for a least ten years.

Q: What has taken so long to develop the IFV?

Mahaffey: It's not just the question of taking so long to develop it. It is the time it took to first convince ourselves, Congress, the Secretary of Defense, and the administration that we needed the vehicle. So the hardware development had not been the pacing factor.

Another hold up, concerning the program, was Vietnam. Funds that could have contributed to the development of the IFV went into the war effort. I also believe that after the wind-down from the war, if the problems I described to you could have been solved, we would be fielding the vehicle today.

"We are going to be in tough shape if we don't get the IFV. Every world power has an Infantry Fighting Vehicle except the U.S. The Russians have had theirs in the field for 10 years now. The success of the XMI Tank is directly related to the IFV. Anyone who says the fighting vehicle isn't needed doesn't understand the concept of today's battle field."

Q: I have heard that there are two studies going right now; one by DOD and yours. How do these studies relate or differ?

Mahaffey: The other study commonly called the Crizer Study, was the result of a congressional inquiry. This study is charged with re-evaluating the requirement for IFV; secondly, re-examining the current design of the fighting vehicle and thirdly, to examine the need for a more survivalable follow-along vehicle for the present armored carrier.

My group's charter is somewhat different. We are to examine different mixes both in terms of systems and forces with those systems, and different mixes of less costly derivatives. We are going to examine a whole range of alternative systems, combinations of systems and force mix alternatives.

Q: What is going to happen if we don't get the Infantry Fighting Vehicle?

Mahaffey: We are going to be in tough shape. Every major power in the world has an IFV except the U.S. The Russians have had theirs in the field for 10 years now. The success of the XM1 Tank is directly related to the Infantry Fighting Vehicle. Anyone who says the vehicle isn't needed doesn't understand the concept of today's battle field.

Q: What are the chances of the fighting vehicle getting funds?

Mahaffey: Let me explain that there are two main priorities; funds for Research and Development and procurement funds. The IFV is one of the big five priorities for the Army and ranked as number three. It is currently the Infantry Center's top concern.

Q: How strong is the Army pushing for the IFV?

Mahaffey: I think it is an approved Army Program. The Chief of Staff, the Secretary of the Army have endorsed it. I think (the fact) that we have had two major task forces generated in the last few months is sure evidence of the importance of the IFV to the Army.

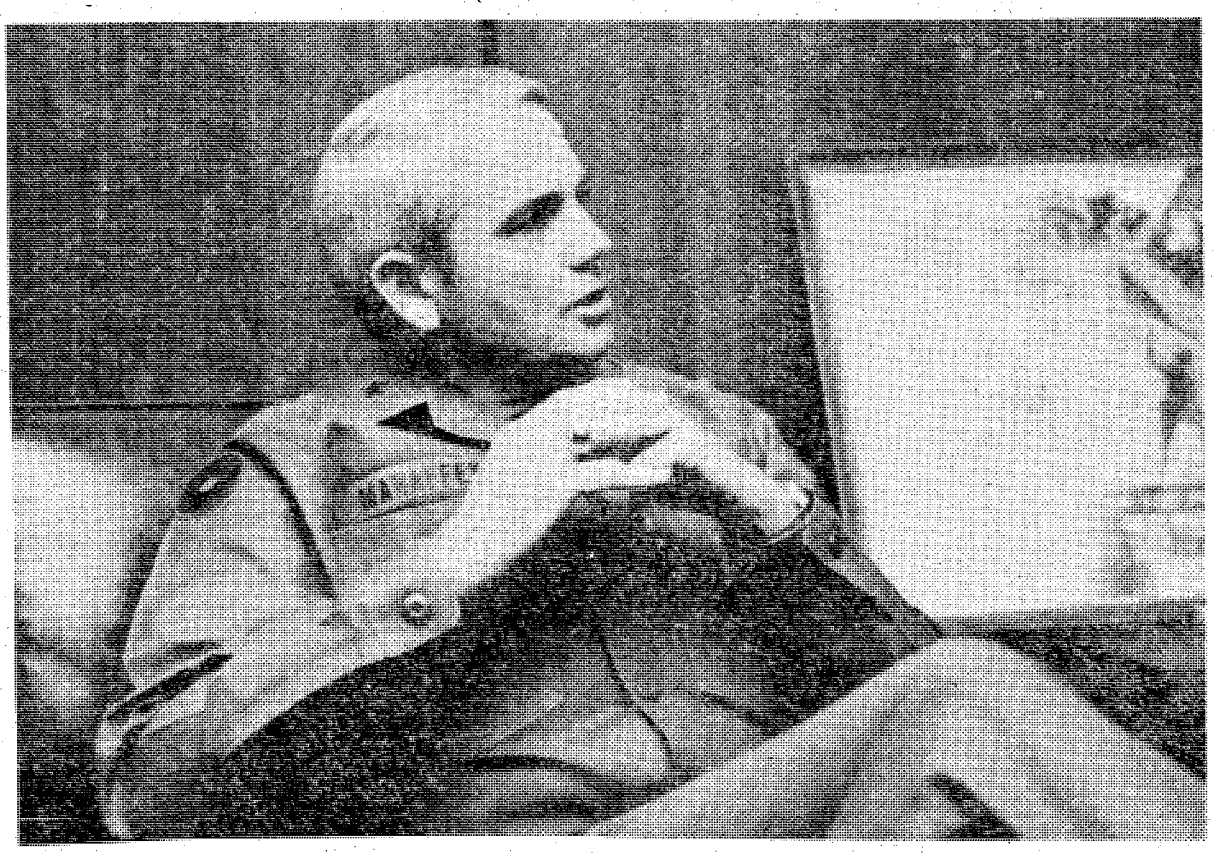
I should make it clear that the Research and Development program has not been retarded or impeaded. In fact, it has been expanded to provide some mock-up of alternative systems.

Q: How do you feel about the success of the Infantry Fighting Vehicle?

Mahaffey: I look at it this way. If the need is as real as I believe it is, I think that common sense, logic and analytically based persuasion will prevail on the buy line.

Q: How do you feel about the present design?

Mahaffey: I feel they could go ahead with the design as is. I am not predicting the outcome of the study, but I carry a deep conviction that we have got to field the IFV as a companion to the XM1 Tank.



BrigGen. Fred K. Mahaffey

Granade to be guest speaker at Easter Sunrise Service

Dr. Charles J. Granade, pastor of the Wynnton Baptist Church in Columbus and columnist for the Ledger-Enquirer, will be guest speaker at the Ecumenical Easter Sunrise Service on Gowdy Field at 7:30 a.m. Sunday.

The Colonial Band, the 283rd Army Band and a community choir, made up of singers from Ft. Benning and the local community, will provide the musical accompaniment.

For the 41st consecutive year, WRBL radio will broadcast the devotional live from Gowdy Field.

*A traveler th*roughout the United States and world-wide, Dr. Granade has made two tours to the Holy Land and has visited the Middle East. He is listed in "Who's Who in American Education and "Who's Who, American Clergymen."

Aside from being a columnist for the Columbus Ledger-Enquirer for the past 10 years, his professional writings also include articles in the "Baptist Program," "Church Administrator," "Home Life," "Church Musician," "Brotherhood Journal," "Christian Index" and the "Ala. Baptist Sunday School Builder."

In the event of inclement weather, the service will be held in Marshall Auditorium. The public is cordially invited to attend.

Courts-martial down, Article 15s constant

The Army's Article 15 rate has remained relatively constant since 1969 while the courts-martial rate has declined from one in five to one in 100 since the height of the Vietnam war.

Article 15s were administered at a rate of one for every five soldiers and the courts-martial rate was one for every 100 soldiers during 1977, according to figures released last week.

Armywide, there were 7,842 courts-martial and 166,798 Article 15s during 1977.

An Army official pointed out that many soldiers received more than one Article 15 which boosts the rate considerably. He added that many of the soldiers receiving Article 15s are included in the courts-martial statistics.

Glad you asked . . .

Do you feel that you need a second job to support your family?

Capt. Richard J. Nowak, 13th Co, TSB

Being with troop units the majority of my career and doing volunteer work in little theaters such as Springer, I really haven't had the time. However, my wife, Barb, works at St. Francis hospital so we can have things a little better

Sp4 Sherry Cobb, Co A, Hqs Cmd

No. The Army does not give you the time to hold a second job. With regular duty hours and company duty there is little time to spend with the family which is more important to me than the money a second job would contribute.

Sp4 Michael D. Drager, 546th Medical Co

I think that for the junior enlisted personnel the need for the wife to take a job is almost a must. The average individual, unless his job isn't demanding, simply does not have the energy for an extra job. How many Pvt's. or PFC's have "easy" jobs?

Capt. Peter A. Wasson, Hqs Co Hqs Cmd

For myself, I feel that the pay in the Army is adequate. However, I feel that the lower-ranking enlisted man with dependents could probably use some help.

Sgt. Donald E. Klient, Co B, Hqs Cmd

As a sergeant, I make enough money to pay the bills and have extra comforts. I waited until I made my present rank before I thought about getting married. If I would have been married as a Private and sent overseas, I would have had a difficult time breaking even.

Secondary income helps.

By Sue Davis

Moonlighting. It probably doesn't mean much to a Colonel, a Captain or a Sergeant Major, but for some lower-ranking enlisted individuals, a secondary income could mean the difference between paying the electric bill or sitting in the dark.

With the gradual but predictable rise of prices in civilian and military stores, the average soldier must budget more carefully in order to be able to afford that car, stereo or trip to visit the relatives.

Fortunately, the Army is aware of the problem and has taken steps to insure that the lower-ranking soldier is satisfied—such as raises in monthly pay; the last of which was implemented in October 1977.

The problem seems to be most prominent with E-5's and below who have dependents.

For example, an E-5 and his wife (who works), live in post housing so he is not allotted BAQ. His net pay is $570 a month. Because of the fact that his wife is employed, they were boosted up to the $12,000 annual income tax bracket. Last year, he paid approximately $1,200 in taxes to the federal government.

If his wife had not been working, he could have claimed her on his income tax and received a larger tax return but overall, his yearly income would have been less.

So what's the answer? It's easier to present a problem than to suggest a solution which would work in theory as well as practice.

For servicemembers who have the time to take a second job, their problem is partially solved.

A soldier may request the assistance of the Army Emergency Relief (AER), whose purpose is to aid the service member whenever it is deemed necessary.

In conclusion, the Army does and will continue to "take care of its own."

Rumors

Check it out first

By Sue Davis

Wait till you hear it straight from the horse's mouth!

One afternoon, I just happened to overhear a PFC and a Sp4 talking — "Hey, the CO is leaving next month." "Really?" his companion said. "I though that monster would never leave; he's always harassing me about one thing or another."

That's all I needed to hear. Off I went, bounding up the stairs, two at a time. Minutes later, my roommate knew, everyone in the bathroom knew — word spread like wildfire until everyone in the entire barracks got the word that the "old man" was on his way out.

The CO felt that something fishy was going on. People smiled and chatted with him — even asked how he was. He couldn't believe it. Maybe he was too much of a softy? People were actually beginning to like him? No, something was wrong, he thought.

I didn't see him coming; neither did my friend. We were talking about the upcoming departure of the CO and the celebration that would follow. "You!" he bellowed, pointing his fickle-finger-of-fate at me. "You told everyone that I was leaving, eh? I had intended to leave, but now I'm staying — and you are confined to the barracks until I can figure out how to slow down your mouth!" Right then I was two inches tall and shrinking fast.

If only I'd found out the facts before blurting a lie. Rumors breed quickly in Army barracks!

I learned my lesson and to this day when someone tells me some juicy information I raise my eyebrows in disbelief and smile. Until I see that information posted on the bulletin board I'm not going to say a thing!

JROTC Cadet receives award

Four high school students in the Junior Reserve Officers Training Corps (JROTC) program, including the son of an active duty NCO stationed here, were honored at Kendrick High School March 17 during the JROTC 5th Bn annual formal inspection.

Cadet SFC David G. Phillips Jr., the sophomore son of SFC David G. Phillips, MEDDAC, MAH, was the winner of his class Superior Junior Cadet award. Phillips won the same award last year as a freshman at Spencer High School.

Selection of each class Superior Junior Cadet is based on academic performance as well as performance in the JROTC program.

An "A" student, Phillips is active on Kendrick's rifle marksmanship team and president of Benning's Medical Explorer Post 99.

The military-oriented cadet, age 15, has another driving ambition — to become a physician. He would like to serve the Army as a doctor in exchange for medical training.

Superior Junior Cadets from the other classes at Kendrick were: Senior, Cadet Col. Otis H. Corbitt III; Junior, Cadet Capt. Veronica Atkins; and Freshman, Cadet SSgt. Michael McCoy.

Bayonet interview

'We're where the rubber meets the road'

By Debra Hilgeman

Editor's Note: SFC Regis Murphy is a drill sergeant assigned to Co D, 5th Bn, 1st AIT Bde. Murphy began his military career in the Navy but entered the Army a year later with an interservice transfer. He is Airborne, Ranger and Special Forces qualified with 16 years of service in the Army. Prior to coming to Benning, Murphy was on a classified Special Forces assignment. A native Pennsylvanian, Murphy attended St. Leo's College in Dade City, Fl. and is residing in Columbus with his wife, son and two daughters.

BAYONET: What are your feelings on being a drill sergeant?

MURPHY: I think that being a drill sergeant in AIT infantry is the most important job in the world. I think it's more important than being a company commander, on ROTC duty, or a recruiter, or anything. We're where the rubber meets the road. I think it is a little contribution to the nuclear umbrella. I'm a career soldier, of course. I was born a soldier; I love it. I would rather be a drill sergeant in peacetime than eat pizza off of Elizabeth Taylor's stomach.

BAYONET: How do you rate the quality of today's recruits?

MURPHY: I think the recruits are good; they're volunteers. They're not under any pressure to enlist other than unemployment or maybe social economic background. We're not at war so that could affect it either way — negatively or positively, patriotism or escape. In my opinion, the physical proficiency of today's recruits could be increased. I also believe today's recruits are ready to be exposed to more of the real world as far as the political situation goes.

BAYONET: What type of relationship do you have with your men?

MURPHY: A drill sergeant has to make a commitment to his men. That commitment, I believe, overrides the support people and at times even the chain-of-command. I'm the whole Army to these guys. My attitudes rub off on them because I'm there.

BAYONET: What teaching techniques do you use to motivate your men?

MURPHY: I'm the teacher and they're the students. I try and rationalize with them. I tell the men their survivability depends on their awareness of the subject matter. I also tell them things that aren't in the book, things that I've learned through the years. Once I capture their imaginations and their minds, the desire and the interest to learn are there. I'm a propagandist at heart. My men aren't in the Army, or this brigade or battalion; they're in the 'strike force.' 'Strike force' is a mentality. I try to instill in them the desire to win by telling them they're in the strike force. We attack, we don't defend. My men don't carry any entrenching tools unless they have to. My platoon knows answers to questions that a lot of other professional soldiers don't know. When my men leave here and go to jump school, they already know everything that they're going to be taught the first week. I'm a disciplinarian but I never use terrorism in dealing with my troops. I tell my men when they first get here that I won't lie to them and I don't want them to lie to me — it works.

SFC Regis Murphy drilling his "strike force."

BAYONET: How do you deal with discipline problems?

MURPHY: Quickly! I usually identify the first three days as critical. I spend those days reading autobiographies, one-on-one counselling and so forth. At the end of those three days, I know a lot about my men. The accuracy I have in predicting who will not graduate satisfies me.

BAYONET: What changes would you like to see happen in the infantry training program?

MURPHY: I think infantry training needs to be more realistic. We need to de-emphasize the basic soldierly duties and put that part at the end of training. Our troops should be trained to attack. At the beginning of the Viet Nam Era, quite often the soldiers had a defeatist attitude; i.e., the guerillas owned the jungle, they're tougher than we are. That's not true. I do my job better than most because I'm here today talking about it. I'm a survivor and that is what I want my men to be. I'd also like to see more instruction given at the platoon level and I think it can be done more effectively. I don't think the men are challenged enough; I think we're underestimating what they can do. They can absorb a lot more information than we're giving them credit for. Regarding more realistic training, I advocate having a "live" physical training field. In a "live" field, for instance, we could have burning tires in the pit of the run, dodge and jump. That type of training instills intestinal fortitude.

BAYONET: How would you rate the level of command support as it pertains to your job?

MURPHY: I think it is more difficult here than anywhere else to have effective communication with the chain-of-command because the chain-of-command isn't here at 11 p.m. or 4 a.m. when I'm getting ready for a P. T. test. I support the chain-of-command but there is a lot of distortion between the brigade commander and my platoon. Overall, I think the support should become more aware of what is happening on the platoon level.

BAYONET: How much of your time is spent on the job?

MURPHY: I probably get off what the layman considers one day a week. I have to keep my thumb on the pulse of the platoon. I want to know what they're thinking, what they're feeling, what they're doing right now. I can't be away from my platoon for more than two days. Three days off is like taking a 30-day leave — I just can't do it. I live my job. The link is always there; my men always know where to find me when I'm not with them.

BAYONET: As a drill sergeant, what sacrifices have you had to make?

MURPHY: Although the hours I put in as a drill sergeant are tremendous, I worked harder when I was in Viet Nam, the 1st Ranger Bn, and other assignments. The sacrifices a drill sergeant makes are his time and patience. You can put as much into it as you want but I think it reflects on your platoon in the end. My platoon may not be the best in the Army but I give it a good shot.

BAYONET: In your opinion, are the extra benefits a drill sergeant receives adequate compensation?

MURPHY: I don't think there is enough compensation, as far as what the Army can supply, for a man who is doing his job. I'm not an advocate for drill sergeants getting a lot of extra money, however. If I just wanted the money I wouldn't be wearing this uniform; I'd be in Rhodesia somewhere.

Captains Elise and Eric Adrian collaborate on the prescribed treatment for a dental patient at Bernheim Dental Clinic where both are assigned. They are one of only three commissioned couples now serving in the U.S. Army Dental Corps.

By Betty Zimmerman

Duty rosters, mail, telephone calls and appointments often get mixed up at the Bernheim Dental Clinic because there are two dentists who answer to Capt. E. Adrian.

When you see the pair together, you can readily tell the difference, however. Elise Friedman Adrian is the wife of fellow dentist Eric Dean Adrian.

The couple met while attending Tufts Dental School in Boston. They married soon after graduation in June 1977 and began their search for a home and place to practice.

Elise said they investigated possibilities of private practice and associateships but couldn't find anything that would keep them together. Eric, who is the son of Lt. Col. (Ret.) George C. Adrian, favored entering the Army because he said he enjoyed the Army life as a dependent.

So Elise, a Riverdale, N.Y. native, and Eric, from Farmington, Conn., became one of only three dental office couples in the Army. There are only 39 women Army dentists out of 1,873 Dental Corps members.

They are happy with their decision. Eric says he is pleased with the surroundings and appreciative of the experience variations. Elise mentioned the good facilities and the fact that they are able to work in the same clinic. Both mentioned their pleasure in working under Col. John Williford, the Bernheim Clinic director.

What happens when their three-year tour is over? "That's a question to be worked out later," Elise said. "Eric feels he would like to stay in the Army, but I am not so inclined. We'll just have to see how we feel about it when that time arrives."

Spring Fiesta goes Spanish

Take a long or short, walk or run in the morning, then laugh, dance, eat and sing through the afternoon and well into the night at the PostSpring Fiesta on April 8th.

Doughboy Stadium will be the scene of the fiesta with a Latin American decor rather than German as in previous years.

The fiesta is scheduled to begin at 7 a.m. with the walking and running events. The running events include 20, 10, and 5 mile marathons. There are two classes of competition; walkers and runners for participation, and runners for time. There is no entry fee for walkers or runners. Entrants should assemble at Doughboy Stadium at least 20 minutes prior to the event.

All entrants will receive a certificate of participation signed by the post commander, MajGen. William J. Livsey. The first three finishers in each timed category will receive an Olympic-style medal.

A parade featuring the Colonial Band, 283rd Army Band, local Boy and Girl Scout Troops, the Ft. Benning Hunt Club, fire engines and floats will march onto Doughboy Field around 3:55 p.m.

Continuous entertainment in the afternoon and evening beginning around 1 p.m., will be provided by the world famous Los Hermanos Blanco Brothers professional band, Carolina Alive, a group of 50 lovely talented singers and dancers from the University of South Carolina, Los Conquistadores an eight-piece brass and rhythm group providing Mexican, Latin American and Spanish sounds and the Latin Sounds.

Boxing, Dependent Youth activities and judo exhibitions are some of the demonstrations planned during the day.

Two food stands will be set up to provide a variety of Latin, American, Puerto Rican and Mexican foods.

All events are open to the general public. No admission will be charged.

DA announces new stateside tour length policy

Longer CONUS tours and a savings in PCS moving costs are expected under a new program announced by the Army late last month. The program is a combination of new and old policies.

The goal of the program, in addition to saving money, is to increase the average CONUS tour by three months, DA officials say.

The current average tour length in CONUS is about two years for enlisted members and three years for officers.

Key policies in the program include:

- Allowing soldiers to stay at CONUS assignments beyond normal tour lengths whenever practical.
- Encouraging voluntary extensions in current assignments in CONUS and overseas.
- Saving PCS costs to the Army whenever possible.
- Limiting first term soldiers, on a three-year enlistment, to one tour, unless they are required to serve a short tour overseas. First termers will be limited to two tours if they enlist for four or more years.
- Providing homebase (return to current duty station in CONUS, and advance assignment return orders (prior to departing overseas) to E-5s and above and from 0-1 through 0-5s departing for unaccompanied hardship tours.
- Assigning general officers to minimum tours of two years.
- Whenever possible, allowing soldiers to serve a three year tour at CONUS installations (or two years' minimum for officers selected to attend a senior service college).
- Not reassigning officers (0-1 through 0-5) and enlisted members (E-1 through E-8) to another installation solely because of promotion.
- Assigning excess soldiers to secondary specialties at the same installation rather than requiring a PCS. If their secondary skills are Doughboy Stadium circa 1925 as seen from Vibbert Avenue.

Doughboy Stadium to get new track

By Betty Zimmerman

The 53-year-old Doughboy Stadium is undergoing its first major renovation since it was built in 1925.

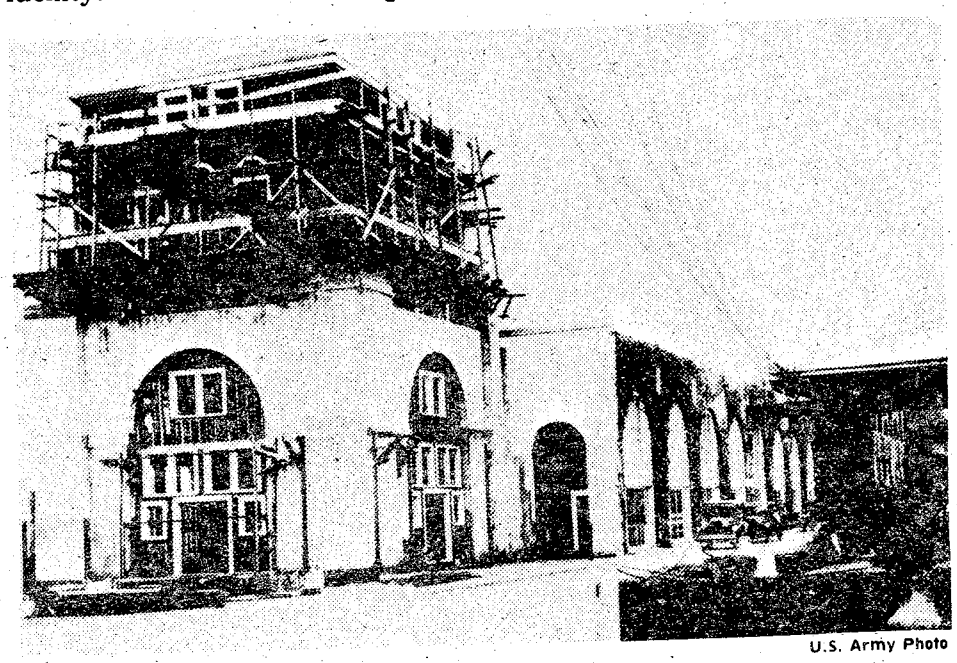
Recreation Services plans increased usage of the historical landmark. There will be a full schedule of post football games played there this fall, track events next spring and festivals several times during the year.

TRADOC granted Ft. Benning $233,040 of non-appropriated funds (NAFs) to upgrade the facility. NAFs are monies generated locally through various morale support programs such as post exchanges, restaurants, NCO, Officer and Enlisted Clubs.

This grant will finance refurbishment of the running track and the installation of seats on the existing concrete bleachers. Ten sections of 19 rows of seats, each 36 feet long, will be installed prior to the 1978 football season. Work on the track is scheduled to begin soon after the football season.

New higher and brighter lights, costing $61,-987 of appropriated funds, have already been installed on poles outside the stadium walls, replacing light poles that were located in front of the stands, thus blocking the view of many spectators. Appropriated funds are approved by Congress following specific budget requests.

The stadium was built and financed by U.S. Army Infantrymen in 1924 and 1925 as a memorial to their dead comrades of World War I. It was dedicated on October 17, 1925, immediately preceding the first football game — a contest in which the Infantry School defeated Oglethorpe University of Atlanta, champions of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association.



U.S. Army Photo

Construction of Doughboy Stadium began in 1924 and was completed in 1925. Infantry soldiers personally financed and built the stadium.

The new light poles are up but all of the old ones have not yet been removed in this 1978 photograph of Doughboy Stadium.

57 warrant officer specialties open to women

Women are not applying for warrant officer positions in the numbers expected, according to a Military Personnel Center (MILPERCEN) official. Of 59 warrant officer Military Occupational Specialties (MOSs) in the Army, women are eligible to apply and compete for positions in 57. The specialties closed to women are MOS 100E (Attack Helicopter Pilot) and MOS 224B (Short-Range Air Defense Systems Technician).

In the past, according to the official, women may not have been attracted to the warrant officer program because of its narrow focus on technology, electronics and mechanics. Also, many service members have never seen a woman warrant officer because they are spread so thinly throughout the Army. This could be one reason enlisted women have not considered becoming warrant officers.

More than 13,000 warrant officer positions exist in the Army. About 1,500 enlisted women will have the occupational and supervisory experience necessary to qualify them to compete for warrant officer vacancies by the end of Fiscal Year (FY) 1978. FY 1983 could see 19,000 enlisted women as potential warrant officer candidates.

Since 1973, when the Army had only 19 women warrant officers, the program has expanded slightly to the present number of 48 women warrants.

Their jobs range from club service technician and club manager to nuclear weapons technician and criminal investigator.

MILPERCEN, based on a study, identified 10 warrant officer MOSs containing enlisted women in their feeder specialties. Using an example, the official said that 104 enlisted women were in the enlisted feeder specialty which could lead to a warrant officer appointment as an Engineer Equipment Repair Technician. Of the 104,085 women were in the junior grades; 19 enlisted women had the necessary experience, making them eligible to apply for a warrant officer appointment. According to the official, however, MILPERCEN has not received any applications from the eligible women.

Many non-traditional specialties leading to warrant officer eligibility are underpopulated with women. Generally, the official said, the problem is in a person wanting to go into a particular field without having the necessary background skills. In most cases, warrant officer appointees are highly skilled and require no additional formal training.

Warrant officers serve as the Army's middle managers. According to the official, WOs are strictly technicians narrowly focused on a given specialty with repetitive assignments — battalion to DA level — to help them maintain a high level of skill.

The primary target audience for the warrant officer program is enlisted with six to ten years' active service and in grade E-6. These soldiers have had time to develop the fundamental skills and knowledge the Department of the Army Warrant Officer Selection Board looks for. Soldiers may be eligible to compete for more than one WO position. However, they can only accept one appointment.

All warrant officer specialties with the exception of aviation require balanced experience, both occupational and supervisory. Direct appointment to warrant officer is based on a soldier's qualifications, according to the official.

For individuals interested in applying for a warrant officer position, DA Circular 601-73 provides information on application procedures, the dates for applying for specific warrant officer specialty openings during FY 1978, and identifies mandatory and preferred qualifications a soldier needs to be considered for WO appointment. The MILPERCEN official concluded that soldiers interested in a warrant officer appointment should begin programming their career toward that goal. (ARNEWS)

Applications will be accepted for the following positions only: Janitors, lifeguards, water safety instructors, clerk typists, and gardeners.

The wage rate for all youth employed in this program will be $2.65 per hour. All young people between the ages of 16 and 21 residing in the community area of Benning with a parent or guardian are eligible for participation in this program.

Additional information may be obtained by calling Mrs. Ann Grimes at 545-7653.

Typewriting Teacher Needed

The Army Education Center needs a teacher to teach typewriting classes. Applicants should be certified to teach Business Education subjects with experience in teaching typewriting. Interested persons should call 545-5826/7768 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. to arrange an interview.

Citizenship Classes

Army Community Service (ACS) is sponsoring citizenship classes for all persons interested in gaining a basic knowledge of American History and Government in order to qualify for American citizenship.

Although there is no fee for the classes, which are taught by senior citizens from the Columbus area, the cost of books will be $2.65.

The citizenship classes will meet every Saturday April 1 through May 6 from 10 to 12 a.m. at the ACS Welcome Center, Bldg. 83. Registration will also be held at the Welcome Center at 10 a.m. on April 1. For more information call 545-1233/4679.

METRA changes service

The Transportation Office and META have announced a change in bus service between downtown Columbus and Main Post effective Monday.

The fare will be reduced from 65¢ to 50¢ (exact change is still required) and service will be more frequent. Operating hours will be reduced on Sunday and the midnight bus from Columbus to Benning will be eliminated.

The changes follow a study conducted by METRA since it initiated service tween the post and

The route between Columbus and the post will stay the same. However, the new route will combine the Downtown-Benning route and the Downtown-Peachtree Mall route, providing direct service to the shopping center without a bus transfer.

Education by a matter of degrees

By Bill Lopez

This is an enlisted member's guide to earning an associate or bachelor degree. It might also be called "Anything That is Worth Having Doesn't Come Easy." But if you think it is worth the effort, the opportunity is there.

If you've earned a high school or equivalent GED diploma, you're on your way to your first sheepskin. Earning an associate degree is perhaps easier than you think.

Most associate degrees require 60 to 65 credit hours. Many of these credits can be earned by simply proving what you already know through tests. The College Level Examination Program (CLEP) can earn you 30 credit hours, for example. Other tests, like U.S. Armed Forces Institute (USAFI) or Defense Activity for Non-Traditional Educational Support (DANTES) allow you to receive additional credit towards your first degree.

Most colleges only require a student to take up to 15 credit hours of on-campus study. So, a soldier who has earned 30 credits through CLEP and another 15 credits through DANTES, only needs to take the minimum 15 credits on campus.

An associate liberal arts degree is usually easiest to earn through test credits. But students should see a counselor early to insure they are taking courses and tests that will help earn their degrees.

Some colleges also give credit for job experience, even experience as an infantryman. The higher your rank and skill level determines how many credits you'll receive for job experience. Credit may also be earned for military schooling. There are 32 colleges in the U.S. which participate in the Serviceman's Opportunity College (SOC) program. These schools have standard requirements and accept each others' credits. This allows a servicemember to transfer and keep all credits earned at SOC participating schools.

The Army will pay up to 75 percent of your tuition costs if you attend college courses. Or, if you qualify for GI Bill education benefits, you can be reimbursed for 100 percent of your tuition costs. Neither of these tuition funding programs pay for enrollment or book costs. You'll have to pay for these yourself. No one said it would be easy or cheap. You should expect to pay about $20 of your own money — minimum — towards books and miscellaneous costs for each three credit hour course.

Congratulations on earning your associate degree! Now you may want to earn a bachelor degree but you've run out of test credits, SOC programs and job experience credit. You'll find that earning a bachelor degree requires about another 30 credit hours and you may not be able to afford the extra tuition and associated costs. Or your GI Bill may expire before you can earn your degree part time.

The Army isn't going to pay for your degree just so you can get one and then get out. But if you are planning an Army career, there are two other choices. First is Officer Candidate School (OCS) and second is the Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC).

Army education goals call for a high school education for enlisted members, an associate degree for warrant officers and a bachelor's degree for commissioned officers. Considering that fewer than half the members of the warrant officer corps hold associate degrees, earning a commission is your best bet if you want the Army to help you earn a bachelor degree.

Your application for OCS will be considered if you are less than 29 years old when you apply and you already have an associate degree or two years of college. After that, your commission may make you eligible for full time, on duty education to work towards your bachelor's degree after commissioning.

ROTC is another program you may enter and get help earning your bachelor degree. If you're on active duty, you may compete for an ROTC scholarship. The primary requirement for this scholarship is completion of two to two and a half years' college.

If you're planning to separate, you can apply your associate degree and military experience, skip the first two years of ROTC training and enter the advanced course. You can use your GI Bill and receive $100 a month for ROTC enrollment at a participating college. After graduation, you can elect to enter the reserves, receive a commission as a second lieutenant, enter active duty for six months, and then join your local reserve unit.

ROTC usually requires that you be no older than 28 at commissioning, but this requirement can be waived. At the end of your ROTC training, you'll have both a commission and a bachelor's degree.

That's two sheepskins . . . still counting?

THE MOST EFFECTIVE RESUME

.....is the one written by you.....

The resume is the most efficient means of reaching potential employers with your professional credentials. This is especially true if you do most of your job search by mail. Corporate recruiters have only a few minutes to scan the large quantity or resumes that cross their desks. It is important, therefore, that you make maximum use of this limited exposure on your first try, for there will not be a second opportunity.

YOU CAN DO IT!

The recruiter will be interested in your ability to express yourself within the limited confines of the resume. Most people have this capability . . . all they need is general guidance to create an effective written job presentation. You will be able to prepare a resume to compare favorably with the best professional resume with the help of our RESUME KIT. This kit informs you of the many critical problem areas, provides you the secrets used by the pros and furnishes you with sample resumes tailored to your needs.

USAIB celebrates 75 ye

By Marshall Jones

The U. S. Army Infantry Board (USAIB) one of the primary test agencies for U. S. Army Infantry equipment, celebrates its 75th anniversary this month.

Everything from scout dog leashes to missile systems undergoes the Infantry Board's rigorous testing.

After a weapon or piece of equipment has undergone research and development, the Army gives it to the Infantry Board which tests it using actual troops.

To commemorate the board's 75th birthday, a display will be set up next week in the lobby of Infantry Hall, Bldg. 4 depicting its mission and history.

A formal ceremony will be conducted on York Field Thursday at 2 p.m. with a display of equipment being tested by the board now and some to be tested in the future. Col. Walter E Meinzen, USAIB president, will speak and Chief of Staff Colonel Addison D. Davis III will represent the Infantry Center.

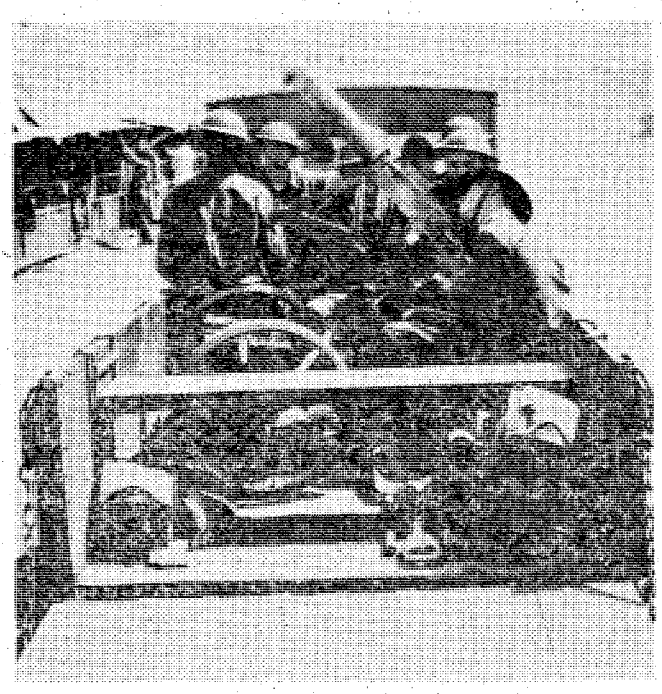
A "dining in" will be held at the Officers Club at 7 p.m. Friday for invited guests including active duty, retired and "attached" board members.

The USAIB was first established at Ft. Leavenworth, Kan. on March 31, 1903. On December 15, 1919 the board was relocated at Ft. Benning as a development and testing facility. Despite a name change to "Army Field Forces Board Number 3" from 1942 to 1956, the board has been operating here ever since. Officially, the board is now an Army Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC) Operational Test Activity assigned to the Infantry Center as a major unit.

Not limited to testing "new" equipment, the board continually evaluates improvements and modifications to such items as the Tube-launched, Optically-tracked, Wire-guided (TOW) missile system and the Mechanized Infantry Combat Vehicle (MICV).

The list of equipment tested by the board covers literally every combat need

Mounted on an armored personnel carrier, Sp4 Robin E. Gunnin, Co B, 1/58th Inf, 197th Inf Bde, tests the AN/PAS-7 night visiion device for the USAIB. The device is tested under all low-light conditions, from late afternoon to darkest night.



A machine gun squad, loaded in an early model of a four-wheel drive truck, conducts tests on an experimental gun mount in 1929.

What the user sees through the AN/PAS-7 night vision device tested by the USAIB is the patterns of heat radiating from people and objects. The warm human body and metal portion of a military ¾-ton truck glow brightly while the cooler canvas cover of the back of the truck is nearly invisible.

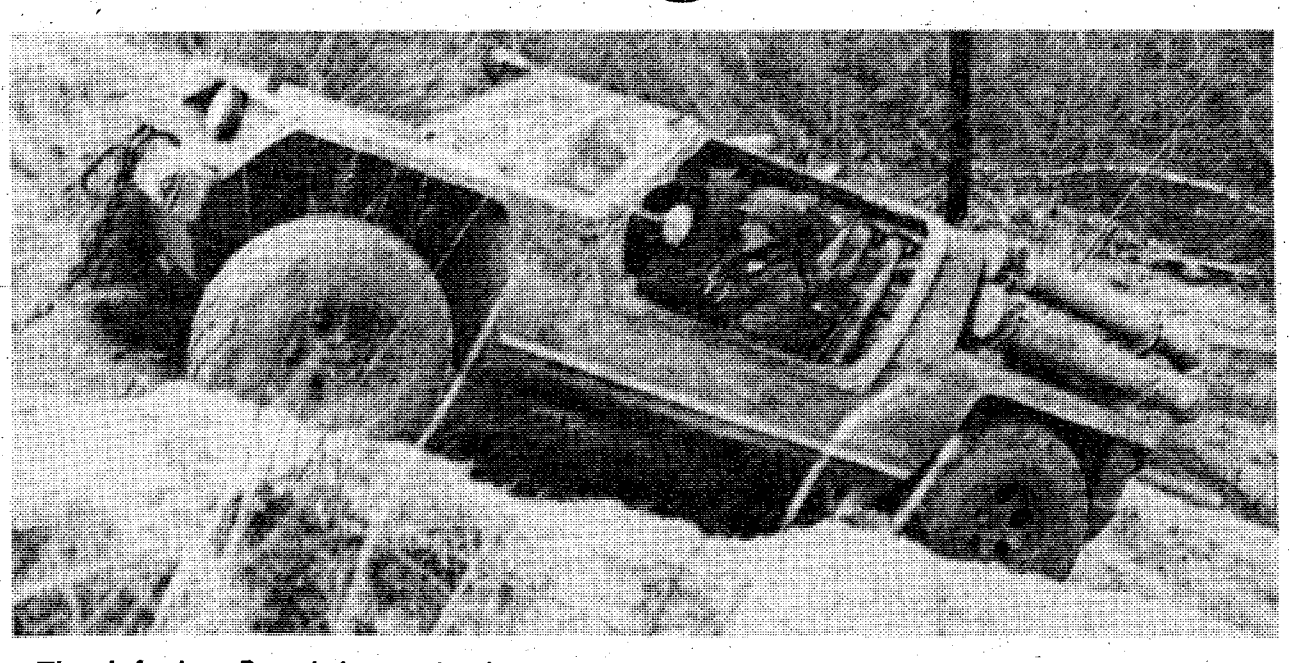
of the Infantryman: weapons, clothing, training devices, protective equipment, cooking gear and tools.

Last week personnel were in the woods off Cactus Road to test a hand-held infrared night viewer, the AN/PAS-7. As usual the board used professional Infantrymen from Co B, 1/58th, 197th Inf Bde to conduct operations using the sight.

The men of the 1/58th worked from afternoon into the night to test the device under the scrutiny of the board's test group, led by Capt. Daniel D. Turner.

USAIB's mission is to provide Infantryman with the best equipment available and testing it under actual battlefield conditions.



The Infantry Board is conducting tests on thedune buggy for its military potential as a high mobility weapons carrier for the TOW weapon system.

GI Bill education eligibility extended

Any veteran who qualifies for GI Bill education benefits is entitled to funding of 45 months' full-time education, even if he or she separated from the service when the law only allowed payment for 36 months of schooling, according to Veterans Administration officials.

Veterans separated in 1970, for example, have until the 10th anniversary of their ETS to collect payments for 45 months' education, even if they've already used 36 months' worth of benefits and have earned a degree.

Under current law, veterans on active duty before 1977 have up to 10 years after ETS-or the end of 1989, whichever comes first, to use their education benefits under the GI Bill. (ARNEWS)

Out and about

By Bev Lockhart

Jam Session

The scheduled Chamber Music Society performance, sponsored by the post Music Center, has been canceled and the Music Center Jam Band, a rock group, will perform instead at the new Sand Hill AIT Chapel at 3 p.m. Sunday.

Guest performer will be singer Shelley Terry.

A Day in Plains

Have you been planning to drive to Plains for a day of sightseeing but just seem to keep putting it off? You don't have to put it off any longer. Recreation Services Information, Tours and Travel (ITT) Office is providing the opportunity for you to make an interesting visit to the sleepy little Georgia town that produced the President of the United States.

The bus will depart from the ITT Office (located in the Kelley Hill Recreation Center) April 15 at 10 a.m. and return about 5 p.m. The tour costs $8.50 per person, including roundtrip transportation and a tour of the Plains area.

Woodworking and Cabinet Making Class

The Army Education Center, in cooperation with Recreation Services Art and Crafts Center, is offering military personnel a course in general woodworking and cabinet making April 4 thru May 4.

Classes will be taught from 6 to 10 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays at the main post Craft Shop, Bldg. 2783. To enroll, call 545-1681 or 544-4114.

Disco Down

The post Music Center is hosting a variety of events at their next Disco and Floor show. The show is scheduled to take place at Santiago Gym, 3rd Bn, AIT Bde, on April 1 at 7 p.m.

The event will feature two DJs, a floor show starring John Schultz as magician, a soul band, a rock and roll band, a demonstration of the hustle, and a comedian. Admission is free.

Sesquicentennial

The first official activity of the Brothers of the Brush and the Sesquicentennial Belles will be the temporary burial of "Mr. Ray-Zor" on Thursday at 7 p.m. at the Government Center. There will be a band, a chorus and a preacher with a eulogy to put "Mr. Ray-Zor" (better known as razor) to rest until after the Sesquicentennial week ending May 7th.

Belles should wear their Celebration dresses and bonnets and carry dead flowers for the "funeral." Brothers should wear their Old Fashioned Hats, Celebration Ties and long faces.

The ceremony is designed to let people know that there are Sesquicentennial activities happening now. Join in the fun of the Columbus Sesquicentennial celebration.

Westville Spring Festival

The 1850 village of Westville is celebrating the coming of Spring thru April 3 with a series of fun filled days to delight visitors of all ages.

Spring activities such as old time cleaning methods, rail splitting, spring gardening, mattress making, broom making and games and contests which include a kite making and flying contest will take place.

For you collecters, a carriage house sale will feature a variety of unique and unusual items.

Westville is open Monday thru Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m. Admission is $2.50 for adults, $1.50 for senior citizens, and $1 for school-aged children. It is located approximately 38 miles south of Columbus (near Lumpkin).

Rock Out!

Tomorrow is definitely the day to get crazy with two concerts scheduled in Columbus. "Toto," "Southern Ash," "Images," "Quint," "Silver Wings," "Logan's Creek," "The Funk Machine," and "The Nick Blackston Band" will be performing during an eight-hour concert at Memorial Stadium beginning at noon.

Sponsors BASH productions and WCGQ will hide 500 miniature Easter eggs in the park. Each egg opens up and contains a piece of paper telling the lucky winner what his or her prize is. Prizes include a pin ball machine, a year's supply of blue jeans, a year's supply of t-shirts, a year's supply of concert tickets, frizbees, albums, and ice skating passes, among other things.

Tickets are available for $3.50 at Sodbuster and Billy at Peachtree Mall; Supershirts and Other Stuff at Columbus Square; and The T-Shirt House on Buena Vista Rd.

Also performing tomorrow night will be "The Dramatics" and "Brass Construction" with "Earthquake." The concert will start at Columbus Municipal Auditorium at 8 p.m.

Tickets are on sale for $6 at Tapes 'N' Things on Victory Dr.; Sol and Harry on Broadway; Sodbuster and Billy; and Supershirts.

Tickets for both concerts will also be available at the door.

Eufaula Pilgrimage

An old south welcome awaits Eufaula visitors March 30 through April 2. The Bluff City's thousands of azaleas and dogwood trees will be at their peak during the 13th annual Eufaula Pilgrimage. Costumed hostesses and Southern belles in hoop skirts will conduct intimate, hospitable tours inside the famed heritage homes from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. (CST) daily with Sunday tours from 1 to 5 p.m.

A special candlelight tour will be held March 30 and April 1 from 7 to 9 p.m. Outlined in candlelight, the trail will lead you through a most interesting glimpse of yesteryear with the music of Dewey P. Williams and the Wiregrass Sacred Harp Singers accompanying the tour.

The Eufaula Art Show will be held from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. (CST) April 1 and from 12 a.m. to 5 p.m. April 2 on the lawn of historic Fendell Hall. Paintings, drawings, graphics, and photo art will be among the displays. $800 will be awarded for the best of show and five $100 merit awards will be given.

For more info concerning the show and registration, contact Mrs. Jerri Taylor, 435 W. Broad St.; or Mrs. Charlotte Mann, 628 Holly Dr., Eufaula, Ala. 36027.

Individual complete day tour tickets, including 11 homes and the antique show, are $12.50. Tickets for a group of 20 or more are $10.50 each, and a half-day individual ticket (six homes) is $7. Individual homes may be seen for $1.50; the Candlelight Walking Tour (four homes and two churches) is $5. The Carnegie Library on N. Eufaula St. will serve as ticket headquarters.
