With the beginning of the 1923-24 academic year yet a third design of the emblem came into use. This design also had the point of the bayonet toward the top of the shield but the sharp edge of the blade was now turned to the left of the shield as it is viewed from the front. This is the design which first appeared in print on October 5, 1923, on a pamphlet in the 1923-24 volume of the Mailing List entitled "Hippology and Horseshoeing." It was this design which was eventually approved by the War Department in 1935 as the official insignia of The Infantry School.

In the absence of written records it is only possible to speculate on the reasons for the two modifications of the original design. In the original the bayonet was pointed toward the bottom of the shield, seemingly at rest.

Someone working with design, perhaps at the printing plant, may have suggested that the insignia should indicate alertness, readiness, aggressiveness. The passiveness of the downward pointed bayonet defied the motto, "FOLLOW ME." It may have been felt that the blade should be erect, at the ready, in a position capable of use.

Ready For Use

Regardless of the reasoning, the point of the bayonet in the later two designs was reversed and the bayonet pictured as ready for use. In the second of the three designs this seems to have been the only change considered, but in the few intervening months before the third design was used, someone must have consulted a book on heraldry. In heraldry we find that all pointed instruments have their points toward the top of the shield and the curvingedge, if one exists, is to the left side of the shield as viewed by an observer from the front. This is always true unless specific instructions are included in the design description indicating a different position. The left side of the shield as viewed from the front is the "dexter", or honorable, side. The right side of the shield as viewed from the front is the "sinister" side.

If heraldic custom was to be followed and if the insignia was to conform to the original description given in The Doughboy of 1920-21, the point would be up and the cutting edge of the blade to the left, thus signifying honor, alertness, and, with the motto, leadership.

Authorized At Last

It was thus that the insignia of The Infantry School gradually evolved. Originally used only in print to identify a product of the School, it was authorized as a badge in 1935. Sixteen years later, on April 23, 1951, the following authorization was received by the Commandant of The Infantry School:

The following shoulder sleeve insignia is approved for the (sic) Infantry School, Fort Benning, Georgia:

On a blue Norman shield 3 7/16 in height and 2 inches in width, a white bayonet paleways (sic) point up below the motto "Follow Me" (sic), in white letters on the arc of a circle.

After 45 years the hope expressed by the editor of the first issue of The Doughboy, "Let The Infantry School achieve accordingly," has been adequately fulfilled. By its accomplishments the School has proven itself worthy of its insignia.

New system implemented

In FY 79 a new system for evaluating the performance of the civilian workforce will be initiated. This new system is designed to increase productivity through improved communications between supervisors and their employees.

One significant change is that the new form will require supervisors to evaluate nonsupervisory employees in such areas as quality and quantity of work, dependability and ability to get along with others. Supervisors may also elect to rate on things like writing abilities, problem solving and orginality of ideas. (TNS)

Washington action slows pay

By Pat Brown

While the 1979 Defense Appropriations Act may not be approved in time to meet mid-month military pay days, soldiers who have elected the check-to-bank option and who have checking accounts at a branch of one of the three banks on post will not be adversely affected.

The National Bank of Fort Benning, the Columbus Bank and Trust Co. and the 1st National Bank of Columbus have agreed to credit today the accounts of soldiers whose checks are normally mailed directly to them.

For other soldiers whose checks do not go to these banks, local Army relief agencies, credit unions and other financial institutions have been alerted that there is a possibility that post personnel may be calling upon them for temporary financial relief or assistance in meeting their obligations.

Fort Benning Finance personnel have picked up the checks that are normally mailed from Fort Harrison, Ind., and will distribute them as

Water a clouded issue

If you live or work at Fort Benning and have been wondering about the cloudy appearance of the drinking water lately, don't worry.

According to George Schladensky, Chief of Utilities on post, the muddy water situation is due to accumulated sediments in the water lines being stirred up to form "mud clouds." He added that with the recent dry spell, water consumption on post has increased which causes more agitation to the lines as a result of the added flow of water.

Schladensky emphasized that the sediments in the water are not unsanitary. He added, "We test the water on post every other day and we've found no source of contamination."

The Utilities Dept. will be flushing the lines to clean out the built-up dirt. But until the situation is cleared up, anyone drinking the water should let it sit to allow any impurtiies to settle to the bottom.

Air conditioners cut

Air conditioning on post will be turned off today, and the heating system will not be activated until Nov. 1, two weeks later than the normal seasonal date.

The two-week delay for the heat is in compliance with the post's energy conservation policy. It is Post Commander Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey's concern that everyone on post follow energy conservation guidelines outlined in the post SOP.

Benning residents are reminded to keep a close watch on thermostats during this period of hot days and cold nights.

The Director of Facility Engineers on post predicts a backlog of repair calls when the heat is turned on. So if your heater is on the blink and you have trouble getting immediate service, be patient — help will be on the way.

Catholics to give funds

Sunday post Catholics will have a designated offering to benefit the West Central Georgia Regional Hospital (WCGRH) Chapel of All Faiths Fund Drive. There is one main Catholic chapel on post but seven locations where Mass is celebrated. Approximately 2,000 Catholics attend the 12 weekend services. Support to raise an additional $26,461.59 is urgently needed.

Col. Treadwell to be honored

Barracks dedication set Thurs.

The third new barracks building at Sand Hill will have its dedication ceremony Thursday at 3:30 p.m.

Treadwell Barracks, named in honor of Medal of Honor recipient Col. Jack L. Treadwell, houses the 7th Bn of the 1st Infantry Training Brigade. These are soldiers currently going through the test program for One Station Unit Training (OSUT).

The $7 million brick structure houses 1,200 people in 56-man bays, each with its own cadre room, study area and bathing area. Also, within the one building, are all administrative offices and the dining facility.

The ceremony will be attended by Mrs. Treadwell and several other family members. Treadwell, who at one time commanded the 197th Inf Bde, died last December.

Treadwell was born in Ashland, Ala., March 30, 1919, attended school in the public school system of Snyder, Okla., and entered the Army in January 1941. He was assigned to the 45th Infantry Division where he was promoted to sergeant in 1942.

During World War II, Treadwell served in the European Theater of Operations as a platoon sergeant, platoon leader and company commander. He received a battlefield commission during the Anzio campaign in March 1944. He participated in eight major campaigns and received every decoration for ground combat given by the Army.

Following World War II he became a company commander at Fort Benning in 1946; attended the Armor Officer Advanced Course in 1949-50, the Command and General Staff College in 1954-55, the Armed Forces Staff College in 1958-59 and the Army War College in 1961-62.

Other Benning assignments included: as a major in 1956, he was an instructor at the USAIS; in 1958 he commanded the Officer's Candidate School and in 1966 he headed the 197th Inf Bde as a colonel until his departure for Vietnam in 1968, where he served as Chief of Staff of the Americal Division.

Treadwell was awarded the Medal of Honor for gallantry in action on March 18, 1945, near Nieder-Wurzbach, Germany during World War II. As the commander of Co F, 180th Inf, 45th Inf Div, then Lieutenant Treadwell single-handedly captured 18 German soldiers and knocked out six enemy pillboxes after eight of his soldiers had died in a similar attempt. His feat paved the way for his battalion's breakthrough of the Siegfried Line.

Infantryman has vital mission

By Mike Daigle

The world's constantly changing political and economic situation unfortunately makes war possible at any time. With threat forces being as highly mobile as they are, the U.S. Army must be ready to deploy quickly at any time.

Keeping this in mind, the 197th Inf Bde's primary mission was designated: to be ready to deploy all of its people and equipment to any battle zone, and fight and win the first battle engaged in. To achieve the high degree of combat readiness necessary to perform this mission, the soldiers of the 197th Inf Bde have trained in the jungles of Panama, the desert-like terrain of parts of Texas, and in the Arctic cold of Alaska.

There are two other important missions of the Brigade as well; one of which is testing method, tactics, and equipment for the Infantry Center. This mission is necessary to obtain and keep the best possible weapons and tactics in the Army system.

The third important mission is supporting the Infantry Center with available resources. This includes conducting honors and ceremonies and being the source for most of the troop and equipment support to the Infantry Board and Infantry School. The last commitment is one the Brigade is particularly proud of performing — helping to train the Army's future leaders.

Master Sgt. James E. Cratten of the 197th Inf Bde's S-3 office says of the performance of the Brigades' men during support missions, "The support our soldiers give the School is instrumental in training officers going through IOBC (Infantry Officer Basic Course). From the reports we receive from the Infantry School, our men seem to be doing an excellent job."

The Brigade is organized like a mini-division combined arms team with approximately 4500 soldiers. With 530 wheeled vehicles, 207 tracked vehicles (including 54 medium tanks) 18 105mm howitzers and 11 helicopters, the Brigade is highly mobile and packs quite a heavy wallop.

The Brigade is literally a combined arms team made up of two infantry battalions (a light and a mechanized), an armor battalion equipped with M60A1 medium tanks, an artillery with 105mm howitzers, a support battalion and several separate companies and a detachment performing specialized missions.

With a never ending training and support requirement, the job can at times be trying or frustrating but there is also the sense of knowing that you are doing a job not many people can do and doing something of immense importance for the nations' security.

Army sets new messhall meal rates

New meal rates in Army dining facilities took effect Oct. 1, according to DA officials.

The new rates for EM are: breakfast, 65 cents; lunch, $1.30 and supper, $1.30. Officers pay the same rates but are charged an additional 30 cents per meal, officials said.

In line with the new meal rates, Basic Allowance for Subsistance (BAS) rates are tentatively scheduled for increases retroactive to Oct. 1. These increases are subject to final congressional action on FY 79 appropriations.

The tentative BAS rate for EM is $3 per day, or about $90 per month and $62.80 per month for officers. (ARNEWS)

Medic MOSs face reup cutbacks

Male soldiers in grades E-4 and E-5 and women in all grades face added reup curbs in most CMF 91 jobs, MILPERCEN officials said last week.

Officials said the medical CMF is overstrength and males in grades E-4 on promotion standing lists and E-5, who do not hold a CMF 91 MOS, may not reenlist or be reclassified into MOS 42D, 42E, 76J, 91B, 91D, 91E, 91F, 91J, 91N, 91P, 91R, 91S, 91U, 91V, 91Y or 92B. (ARNEWS)

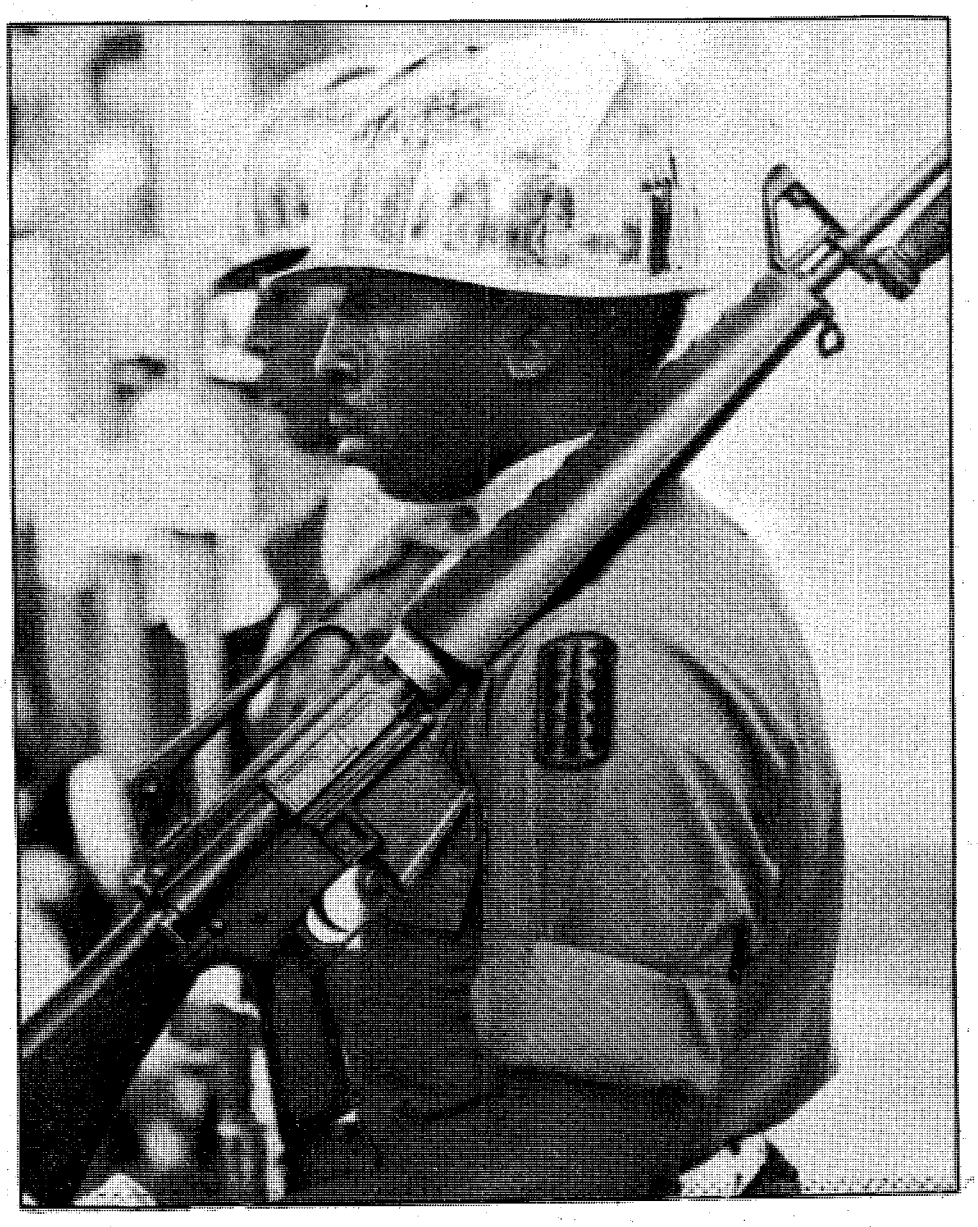
Memories

Mrs. Gracie York, widow of World War I hero Sgt. Alvin C. York, ponders a sculpture of her late husband donated to the Infantry Museum by noted sculptor Felix de Weldon. The occasion was the post's 60th anniversary celebration last week.

Post celebrates 60 years

Under clear blue skies, Fort Benning celebrated its 60th birthday last Friday. Felix de Weldon, noted sculptor, presented a statue of Sergeant York, World War I Medal of Honor recipient, to the U.S. Army and Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey, post commander, accepted it on the Army's behalf.

Present for the ceremony were Sergeant York's widow, Mrs. Gracie York, and other members of his family. Music was provided by the 283rd Army Band.



Cutting deep

Mrs. Gracie York (above left); Maj. Gen William J. Livsey, post commander; and sculptor Felix de Weldon use a World War I bayonet to cut the first piece from Fort Benning's 60th birthday cake. At left, members of the color guard provided by the 197th Inf Bde march during the opening ceremonies.

'Pioneer' earns degree here

Demonstrating that diligence does pay off, Staff Sgt.Cecil E. Brown, 1/29 Inf. will receive a bachelors degree in Criminal Justice from Troy State University this fall. According to the assistant registrar at Troy, Staff Sgt. Brown is the first post soldier to start and finish his degree shile stationed here.

The really amazing part of this story is that he earned his four-year degree in less than two years.

With the help of his former commander, Lt. Col. Richard E. Helmuth Jr. now commanding the 2/10th FA 197th Bde, he was able to achieve 20 credit hours a quarter with his work schedule. "Without Lt. Col. Helmuth as commander and the first sergeant's cooperation I could never have done it," said Staff Sgt. Brown.

Staff Sgt. Brown intends to remain in the Army for 20 years and then he hopes to be able to use his degree towards a job as a counselor in a security institution. With 15 more credit hours, he will be able to teach in a high school since some high schools have started giving courses in criminal justice.

Staff Sgt. Brown got his assignment to Korea deferred so he could complete his degree. He has to be there by the end of November, so he will have to take his final test a week early. He will receive his degree the beginning of December.

"Mr. Matt, assistant registrar for Troy State University, was also very helpful to me while I was obtaining my degree. He helped me schedule my classes, advised me on what to take, and gave me help with whatever military problems I was having. The Army offers a great opportunity for a man to get an education," Staff Sgt. Brown concluded.

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room - and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 100 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

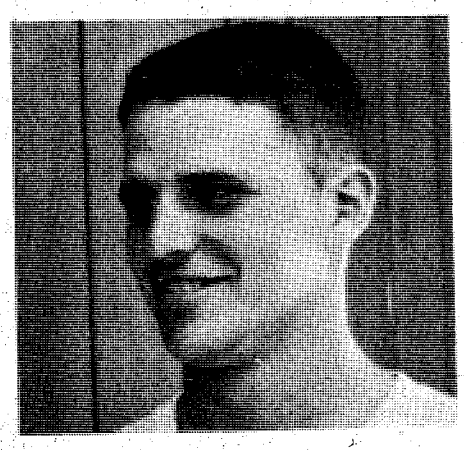
Glad you asked

Should the custom of saluting while in civilian clothes remain optional?

Spec. 5 Christine D. Wright, 478th Avn Co

One should always conduct him or herself in a military manner whether on or off duty, but having to salute during social activities that do not require a uniform is to lessen the mixing and communication between enlisted personnel and officers.

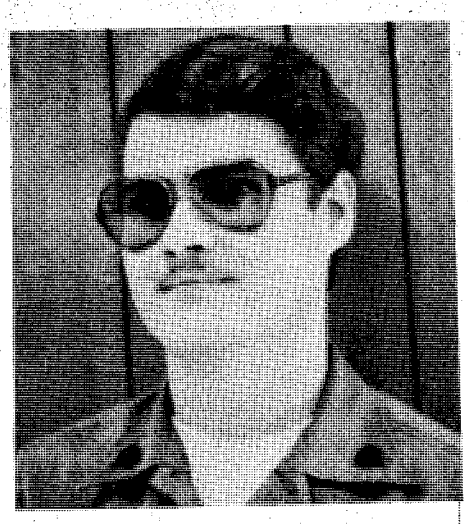


2nd Lt. Thomas R. Siermers, 9th Inf Div, 2/60th

Yes. Once out of uniform, it could only be considered courtesy on the part of a person if he chooses to recognize rank.

Capt. Neil A. Pearce, 12 Co, 1st Bn, TSB

I think that it should remain optional. I feel that when a soldier is in civilian clothes, he is usually off-duty and should not be required to salute. A simple exchange of greetings, such as good morning or good evening would probably be more appropriate.



Spec. 5 Cary Randol, USACEELA-CONUS (TDY)

I'm aware that I'm a member of the Armed Forces whether I'm in uniform or civilian clothes, but while out of uniform Ifeel that this particular military courtesy should remain optional.

GIs easy targets for press

It's a source of bewilderment to most soldiers that they so frequently see themselves portrayed to the public as ne'er-do-wells. Of course, understanding the nature of that thing we call "news" helps. A plane crash is news: ten thousand safe landings is not. By its very nature news is most often bad, and the public's perception of the Army and its soldiers depends almost exclusively on the information selectively presented by the press and broadcast media.

Unfortunately, it seems to be fashionable in some quarters of the information industry to take a periodic swipe at soldiers in particular and the Army as an institution.

Where such broadsides are deserved by substantial wrongdoing, the misbehaving party is fair game for public scrutiny and editorial scorn. But when a bad apple is made to appear representative of the whole barrel, that's not fair nor particularly ethical. It certainly isn't admirable. Nor is it very noble to print or broadcast the moral equivalents of ethnic sours in the form of stereotypes which suggest that the bad behavior of the few somehow typifies the entire group.

The truth too seldom portrayed is that the over-whelming majority of soldiers are honorable, dedicated, hardworking men and women who, because of the admission criteria they have met, the self-discipline they practice, the skills they have mastered and the often dirty, sometime dangerous work they do, are a cut above the average. They, too, are the very ones from whom their countrymen will expect the last full measure of devotion should diplomacy again fail and war come, and the crystal ball of history provides a grim prospect for peace in anybody's time.

Through it all, the Army will go on assimilating the youthful products of our society and will help them continue their education and development toward whatever life plateau they seek. In the process, a few will fail and leave the poorer for the experience. Some will take away no more than they bring in. Most will grow and mature, and a great number will excel and achieve more than ever before in their lives.

How unfortunate that this true mainstream of the Army is so seldom portrayed to the citizens whom worthwhile soldiers serve so well.

Letters to the Editor

PT affects performance

I'm writing in reference to the "Glad You Asked "question of the Sept. 29 issue of the BAYONET. Allow me to tell you how Fort Benning's PT program is affecting my job performance.

I'm in the 283rd Army Band (which is one of the hardest working and highest committed Army bands in CONUS). In September alone, the band played 59 commitments.

My personal opinion is that PT is very necessary to a certain extent, but I don't think that a PT program should interfere with mission accomplishment — as it does with ours. I'm 20 years old and in very good condition, yet I remain stiff and sore for a few days after each five-mile run.

In my job, we must look and play our best at all times. The band plays numerous weekend commitments throughout the year. It's difficult to get up on a Saturday morning, ride a hundred miles and play at peak performance after running five miles the evening before. I'm usually tired and just want to sleep.

Believe me when I say that every member of the 283d Band plays his best at each performance, but life would be much easier if our PT schedule weren't so heavy. The 283rd's PT program is, by the way, one of the heaviest PT schedules of all Army bands in CONUS.

Charles E. Burden,
Sgt., 283rd Army Band

Five DCD civilians receive awards

The Director of Combat Developments, U.S. Army Infantry School, Col. Stanley T. Skaife, presented awards to five of his civilian employees on Sept. 12.

Albert Standish, program and manpower coordinator, received a Sustained Superior Performance Award for his excellent performance of duties during the period July 2, 1977 to July 1, 1978.

Secretary Brenda Gould received a Quality Step Increase monetary award for her performance of duty from July 18, 1977 to July 18, 1978. Ms. Gould has been employed as the Director's secretary for over two years and has more than 18 years of government service.

Helen Remppel received a Sustained Superior Performance Award for the superb accomplishment of her assigned duties as clerk-stenographer of the Electronics Specialist Branch of Combat Developments.

Ralph H. Loney was awarded a Certificate of Achievement for his service over the past year as an Organization and Equipment Planning Officer in the Organization Branch of Combat Developments.

Savanna Gray's 10 years of dedicated service was recognized by a 10-Year Service Certificate with accompanying pin. Ms. Gray has been clerk-stenographer in the Organization and Experimentation Division of Combat Developments for more than four years. She is a native of Columbus.

Dropping in

Flying through the air may look easy, but the freefallers above are maintaining their formation while falling at 120 miles per hour. At right, a freefaller uses the spread-eagle position to slow his descent while guiding himself with his arms and legs.

Freefall team drops in on many local activities

By Betty Zimmerman

One of the most colorful and crowd-pleasing activities at Fort Benning is the Airborne Department's freefall team.

Several times a week, you can look skyward and see the red, white and blue canopies floating downward. The team jumps for the "Airborne 5000" on Eubanks Field every Monday, and usually for an Infantry Training Brigade (ITB) event each week. They also make an average of six practice freefalls per week.

The team is also in constant demand from recruiters throughout the southeast. They perform at festivals, air shows, auto races, county fairs, football games, organization days, and VIP ceremonies on York Field. Last year, they honored at least 150 of these requests.

Who are these daredevils who light up the eyes of Infantry trainees, instill the feelings of challenge to new airborne students and thrill the average civilian? They are all "black hats" in the Airborne Department. They range from the Department Director, Col. Stanley G. Bonta down to his driver, Pfc. Jan. Drupiewski. The officer-in-charge is Capt. Gary M. Pestrak and the non-commissioned-officer-in-charge is Staff Sgt. Jac Robinson. The other current members are: Staff Sgt. Donald Cruce and his wife, Sgt. Susan Cruce; Sgt. Maj. Richard Gibbs; Capts. Vernon Campbell, Billie R. Fitzgerald and Michael Griffon; and Sgt. Patrick Moon. Robinson is the team instructor, rigger and safety officer. Moon is also a licensed rigger, which means he and Robinson pack all the reserve parachutes. Everyone packs their own main chutes.

Leaving an aircraft at 10,000 feet and landing on a prescribed target is not an easy task. During freefall, the 45 seconds before the jumper pulls his ripcord, a jumper reaches the speed of 120 miles per hour if he is in a spread eagle position. By varying this position, such as holding their body straight as in attention, they can reach speeds of 200 miles per hour. What's more, they hit these maximum speeds just 12 seconds after exiting the aircraft.

Their job is to represent and instill interest in the Army, USAIS and the Airborne Department and with the excellent support of post, USAIS and the aviation units — this is exactly what they do.

U.S. Army Photos

On target

A member of the post freefall team zeroes in on his target on Eubanks Field. The team performs every Monday for the "Airborne 5,000" and averages six practice freefalls weekly. Members also performs for the Infantry Training Brigade each week.

6 MOSs to be surveyed in Oct.

Six MOSs will be surveyed this month to provide feedback on job skills and training, MILPERCEN officials said this week.

The MOSs, 12B (Combat Engineer), 15D (Lance Missile Crewman), 16E (Hawk Fire Control Crewman), 17K (Ground Surveillance Radar Crewman), 63Z (Mechanical Maintenance Supervisor) and 68M (Helicopter Weapon System Repaired) will be surveyed this month.

Survey results are expected to be ready for MOS management officials and training centers early in 1979.

Surveys are taken to get soldiers' opinions and critiques of job qualifications, specific duties performed and benefits of job training. (ARNEWS)

DoD okays bagger tip extension

DoD has issued an order to extend the tipping system for commissary baggers.

Tipping would have ended Monday under a 60-day extension that was tacked on last July's deadline. But a delay in passing another DoD spending bill for FY 79, after President Carter vetoed the bill earlier, has prompted DoD to extend tipping at least through the end of 1978.

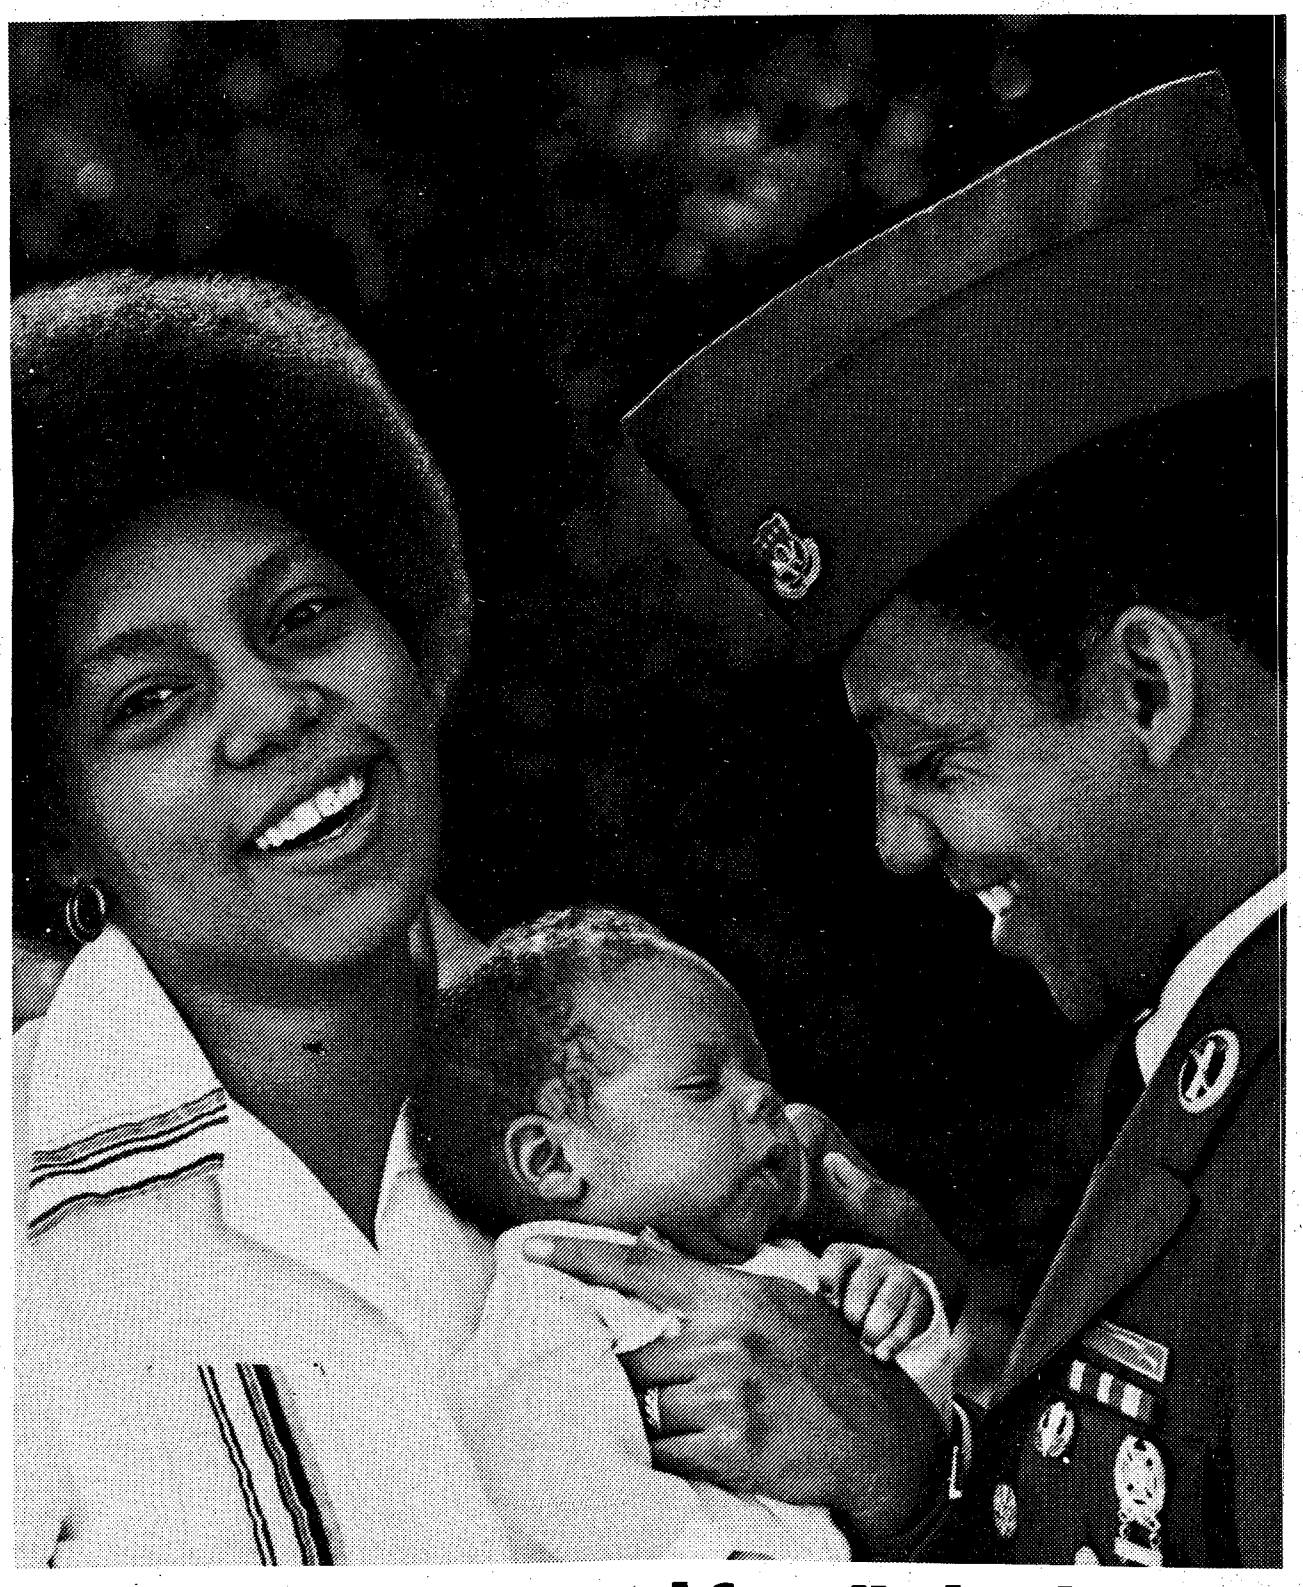
"Uncle Sam needs us."

Dorothy M. Forbes



Sergeant Earl Forbes is an infantryman. To him, the Army is a whole lot more than a place to work. It's a place to grow, too. His wife agrees: "My lifestyle has changed a lot. Things are better. Being married to Earl, I feel like I've got it better than many civilian wives. I'm interested in what he does. We talk about his assignments. We need each other. And the Army needs us. It really does."

What about you and your family? Maybe your husband should have a talk with his career counselor. He may find out just how much Uncle Sam needs him.

Keep a good family in the Army.

Fish Story

Although it is too late for this year's BASS Master Tournament, "Old Bigmouth" was finally caught. 1st Sgt. Wayman Howard (l) 546th Med Co, 34th Med Bn, and his son Raymond have been fishing the Chattahoochee River for years and, in his last week in the Army, finally located the right spot.

Documents needed to get benefits

It's entirely possible that some veterans and their dependents are not receiving benefits to which they may be entitled simply because they have been unable to locate certain formal documents to support relationships such as marriage or child dependency.

Georgia Commissioner of Veterans Affairs Pete Wheeler says that the loss of marriage certificates, birth certificates or other important documents should not deter veterans and their dependents from seeking benefits.

"The original documents are very important," Wheeler said," and they should be protected, but they are not solely, absolutely necessary to establish or verify entitlement to benefits for a veteran or his dependent."

As an example, Wheeler cited the fact that the Veterans Administration now will accept a certified statement in lieu of an original marriage certificate to establish eligibility provided it is the first marriage for each partner and the VA has no evidence on file that is contradictory.

Previously, it has been VA policy to require formal documentation to support claims for compensation and education benefits for veterans, widows and orphaned children.

"THE AUTO INSURANCE SPECIALISTS"

Court upholds convictions for theft, drugs

The larceny conviction of a specialist 5 was upheld last week by the U.S. Court of Military Appeals.

The soldier appealed his conviction on grounds that evidence used against him during questioning should not have been allowed in court and his original defense counsel was replaced.

The conviction stemmed from the soldier's attempt to steal steaks and pot roasts while picking up a delivery in his position as a messhall ration clerk. He was sentenced to a dishonorable discharge, confinement at hard labor for two years (later reduced to one year), forfeiture of $180 per month for two years and reduction to E-1.

The court, however, rejected the challenges, pointing out that evidence gathered during questioning of the accused, at the time the larceny was discovered, was property admitted into trial. The court noted that a major, who approached the specialist at that time, had advised the soldier of his rights by reading from a standard card he kept with him.

The second defense challenge, that the original attorney was not retained due to his PCS, was also rejected. The court noted that a new defense counsel had indeed been appointed to represent the specialist during review procedures. And it noted the soldier also hired a civilian attorney who specifically requested the new defense counsel be retained. In addition, the court said, an earlier objection to removing the original counsel had not been made.

In another case, the court also upheld convictions of an airman first class and a specialist 4, both of whom appealed on grounds that their convictions (for hard drugs; one for hashish and one for heroin, respectively, were based on two different UCMJ articles.

The servicemen challenged the authority that allows individual service secretaries to punish members for these crimes under the authority of either Article 92 or Article 134 of the UCMJ, saying that uniformity and equal treatment were not present.

But the court said that, while the UCMJ is designed to afford equal treatment for DoD members, Congress sanctioned this practice realizing that individual services should be allowed to meet the needs of their respective organizations.

Pay

soon as they receive word the bill has been signed. This maneuver will save the normal two days mailing time.

Continued inaction on the bill will also affect civilian employees, whose next payday is Oct. 19. However, since the first week of the current pay period was worked from Sept. 23-30 and is thus covered by FY 1978 funding, civilians will receive at least half of their pay next week.

Although there may be some delay in receipt of civilian and military pay, all pay due will be dispersed as soon as necessary Congressional action has been taken.

This is not the first time Congress has failed to approve an Appropriations Act before the end of the fiscal year. However, in the past, a continuing resolution authority was passed to permit disbursements to be made in the new fiscal year at a level consistent with the previous years. At the time the Bayonet went to press, this had not been done for FY 1979 defense spending.

Benning forests drying up

The forests on Fort Benning are at their driest state in many years.

According to Norman Force, chief, Forestry Branch, DFAE, the situation is at a critical stage. "I've worked with the Forestry Branch for more than 27 years and I've never seen the forests so dry or the risk of fire so great," he added.

The situation is the result of the recent dry spell throughout the Columbus area. There has been no measurable rain (at least eleven hundreths of an inch) since Aug. 18. The dryness of the forests is measured by a build-up index. With each day it doesn't rain, the index gets higher and higher.

According to the index, a reading of 50 is critical. Force can remember seeing the index rise to 99 only once since he's been here, but now the index reads an incredible 159 and rising. To add to the problem, October is usually the driest month of the year.

The situation could have an affect on military training as the use of incendiary weapons fire and outdoor fires will have to be strictly monitored. The Forestry Branch advises everyone to use common sense when handling flammables.

If a fire should start, dial 117 immediatly to report it if calling from on post, or 687-8117 if calling from Columbus.

Air Force to play Santa Claus again

Volunteers in an Air Force weather squadron will continue a 24-year tradition this Christmas season with their Santa's Mailbag Program.

The members of Det. 2, 11th Weather Squadron at Eielson AFB, Alaska, have been remailing letters postmarked "North Pole" to youngsters around the world since 1954.

People who would like a child to receive a letter postmarked from the North Pole should write the letter and mail it, along with a stamped envelope addressed to the child, to the following address: Det. 2, 11th Weather Sdrn, Santa's Mailbag, Eielson AFB, Alaska, 99702.

Mailbag Program has handled more than 165,000 letters. (ARNEWS)

Alexander calls for max effort to increase Reserve readiness

Promising to halt studies, at least through 1979, Secretary of the Army Clifford Alexander Jr., said efforts must now be made to enhance reserve force readiness.

Alexander made these comments in a speech at the centennial conference of the National Guard Association in St. Louis Monday.

"We have done enough studying," Alexander exclaimed. "We need now to make sure that . . . decisions are made and priorities (are) established."

These priorities, according to Alexander, include deployment effectiveness of Guard units and increasing unit sizes to full manpower levels.

Repeating the "Total Army" theme, the Secretary added, "We must continue to dispel the notion that there are active force issues and reserve force issues, because that concept does not square with our Total Army posture."

Alexander said he would personally direct a campaign to insure the Army leadership addresses Guard and Reserve issues in a "forthright and high priority fashion within the framework of the whole Army."

Alexander noted that almost 30,000 Guard troops have been called up by various states to handle domestic crises and provide assistance during the first eight months of 1978.

Promising support for these troops, Alexander stressed: "We need to reach out better to the families of our soldiers in the Guard. Their support of Guard activities is critically necessary. Their sacrifices, in terms of disruption of home life, must somehow be recognized, and in a tangible manner. I continue to be open to suggestions on this issue."

Antitank crewmen home in on targets during the TOW live-fire portion of the 3/7th Inf's three-day FTX.

'Cottonbalers' move, shoot, communicate

By Stephen Guthrie and Pat Jones

To begin a field maneuver is perhaps th most difficult task facing a commander in th modern Army. Collecting men and materia coordinating for supplies and insuring ever piece of equipment is operational can turn th most organized units into complete chaos.

Surprisingly, quite the opposite was tru when the 3/7th Inf, 197th Inf Bde (Sep) move out last week on a three-day training exercis (FTX) involving countless hours of logisti preparation. Everything from air mobil operations to pathfinder qualified scout insuring proper movement procedures wer used in the FTX.

Early last Tuesday the 3/7th boarde helicopters at Combined Arms Team (CAT Field at Kelley Hill to be transported to a dro zone (DZ) where the exercise would begi Some people were amazed to see fully comba loaded soldiers marching along the street t join an entire battalion stretched across th CAT field.

Choppers fly staggered

"The choppers fly in a staggered formatio that has them arriving every ten minutes, Maj. Wendall D. Kot, 3/7 S-3 officer shoute over the noise of the helicopter blades. "Onc the first load has cleared the aircraft, th helicopters, in a formation of five, then swin around for another load. The men are assembled in eight-man teams and are lifted out by company."

"The choppers will also lift out our jeeps and light vehicles in airmobile pods after the men are in the DZ. This entire movement, battalion size, should ideally take only six to eight hours. We are not trying for speed, but we do stress efficiency and expertise in everything we do," Kot added.

Task successfully completed

The task was completed successfully in a little over six hours, but everything was done correctly and with practiced ease. The battalion was now in a tactical field position. The men set up defensive positions involving the construction of fighting positions (foxholes or a build up area providing cover), command posts (CP), listening posts (LP), patrols, fields of fire, endless tasks necessary to establish a tactical position securely. Everything the men have learned in their time spent as Infantrymen will be used in this situation so close to actual combat.

In field situations the days are often too short and nights far too long as it would soon prove to the men training here. The first night would be a quick survey of the area in which they made camp. Brush is swept away to improve vision and placed in other areas to camouflage men and equipment.

After posting guards and perimeter observers, the men begin digging fortified fighting positions and establishing fixed targets as references to distance when laying fire. When darkness falls, the camouflage paint on the men's faces renders them practically invisible, almost a part of the forest. The night is spent in whispered conferences and planning the next days movement, some thinking of the day with expectancy, others with the knowledge of past experience.

The second day and night were started with patrols to scout out and possibly engage the enemy, using cover and concealment always. They advanced in squads of nine to eleven men in a wedge shaped formation with the men 15 meters apart. Hand signals flashed quick and precise between members of the teams, silent forms of communication relaying information. These hand signals tell what terrain is ahead, travel speed contact with an enemy and every other piece needed.

Men fell back

The men fell back and conducted screens, a form of travelling in a horizontal line to find an enemy without committing the squad. The screen allows the men to contact the enemy and relay information about him without his knowledge. After the screen was used again and again, the men shifted to a hasty defense. This requires using available cover and concealment rather than setting up fixed positions, and would allow the commanders to shift defense to the strongest point of an enemy attack.

After attacking and defending late into the night the 3/7th finally moved back to an assembly area to catch up on a few hours needed sleep. Now they would begin to remember parts of the problem, their fatigue, frustrations, boredom, the moments of excitement before the attack. The tension began to fade as visions of warm, comfortable beds and hot showers crept into their thoughts.

They awoke at 6:30 a.m. the next morning and rose to clean up and shave, to eat a quick breakfast and prepare to return to garrison. They roadmarched to the appointed location and began the long ride back. There, they cleaned all the equipment and weapons, and turned in every piece of issued items. The men hoped no one had mislaid anything or everyone would be forced to stay until it turned up. And that could be a long time.

When the equipment was all turned in and the platoon sergeant was satisfied with the evenings events, the men showered and retreated to a long awaited sleep. The commanders and first sergeants finally left and the barracks became quiet again. They had the next day off and dreamt of the long holiday weekend before them, where they would have the chance to recall the problem and ask themselves just how good they really were. The answer would be, "Damned good."

ITB hosts Ladies Day

The 1st Infantry Training Brigade held its second Cadre Ladies Day on Oct. 4. All wives of brigade cadre were invited to come out and see what their husbands do from day to day.

After being welcomed by the Brigade Commander, Col. Carl W. Stiner, the women went by bus to see several training sites, and then eat lunch in a battalion size dining facility. In the afternoon they were briefed by individuals from various post services informing them on what was available to them and their families here.

Some exempt from SQT

Soldiers in MOS 22D and 22E who were given Skill Qualification Tests (SQT) in these MOSs, then converted to Career Management Field (CMF) 19 are exempt from SQT reenlistment requirements, DA personnel officials said last week.

By regulation, soldiers must earn minimum SQT scores to reenlist. But, because of changes in the MOS due to conversion to CMF 19, these soldiers will be allowed to reenlist as tough SQTs were not available to them, officials said.

Weight controls allow for exceptions

Weight control restrictions on reenlistments include some exceptions which take into consideration body build, bone structure,muscular development and medical problems. DA reminded commanders in a message last week.

Paragraph 3-5E of AR 600-9 contains exceptions to the Army's weight standards for soldiers who are not found to be obese, according to the message.

In addition, exceptions are available for soldiers when a "Medical condition exists which interferes with weight loss and disability separation is inappropriate," the message says, adding that such cases must be documented.

The message also states that evidence of satisfactory participation in a weight control program with promising results is grounds for an exemption to the policy. But, the message stresses, this must be documented and must predate requests for exemptions.

Officials cautioned that the message is not to be misinterpreted as a relaxation of the weight standards in AR 600-9. "Indications are that the weight standards are being enforced and significant progress has been made. Achievement and maintenance of the standards are essential to the readiness and combat effectiveness and must continue to be enforced," the message concluded. (ARNEWS)

Soccer team downs locals

The newly formed Benning Youth Soccer Team which has entered into the Bi-City League, recovered from its first loss of the season Oct. 9 by defeating the Columbus Northhighland squad 7-0.

Scorers for the Benning team were David Courtney (three goals), Terrace Thomas (three goals, two fouls, 11-meter conversions) and Johnnie Inks (one goal).

The Benning team will meet the Hardaway High School team in a return match. Benning lost to Hardaway 3-0 during their season opener.

Games are usually played at the Baker Village Field.

Doughboy effort falls short

By Deb Hilgeman and Randy Ruston

The Fort Benning Doughboys went into Sunday's game against Auburn University junior varsity like a lion but went out like a lamb as they were overcome 24-17 at Doughboy Stadium.

Even though the Doughboys were unable to clinch a victory, they have to be commended for giving it one hell of a try. Pinpoint accuracy by Doughboy receivers Dave Williams and James Ivory resulted in more first downs than the Doughboys have seen in a long time. Both teams were plagued throughout the game by penalties; mainly passing interference and illegal procedure.

The Doughboys got off to an early lead when an 80-yard drive culminated in a three-yard scoring run by Arthur Hawkins.

Moments later, the Doughboys dropped their guard and the Auburn quarterback took advantage of the situation to sprint ahead of the opposition for a 72-yard scoring run. The point after brought the teams to a 7-all standoff.

In second quarter action, the Doughboys got a break when they blocked Auburn's field goal attempt and recovered on the 42-yard line. Despite a hard-hitting Auburn defense, the Doughboys on their 4th and 3rd seesawed back and forth with inches to goal before quarterback Joe Duenas took it over for the score with 12:12 remaining in the half.

Auburn again tied the score 14-all with 2:36 left in the second quarter on a 26-yard touchdown pass. The Doughboys rallied back with only seconds remaining in the period and took a 17-14 lead with a 26-yard Wallace Bowles field goal.

The Doughboys seemed to lose momentum as they went into the second half. The home team was unable to contain a fast-moving Auburn offense and halfway through the third quarter, Auburn's quarterback carried for a six-yard scoring run for a 21-17 lead. The final points came on a 30-yard Auburn field goal with 5:09 remaining in the fourth quarter.

Both teams saw a lot of action in the final period but the Doughboys were unable to score.

The Doughboys recovered a fumble on the nine-yard line but were unable to turn it into points. They opted for a field goal on the 12-yard line but the attempt was blocked.

Auburn attempted a field goal of their own but the try was wide and the game ended 24-17.

The Explorer Post 76 Colonial Band, led by Maj. Bill Drollinger, gave a precision halftime performance.

The Doughboys, now holding an 0-7 record, meet Albany State University tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. in Doughboy Stadium.

The Wildcats' offense was led by Reginald Williams and Andrew Perrim; defensive leaders were James Burns and Donny Ray Gales.

Offensive Rattler players were Lenward Jones and Fred Stewart; defensive pillars were Mike Webber and Todd Betcher.

Packers.....14

The Lavoie Colts narrowly edged the Rucker Packers for their first win of the season.

For the Colts' offense, Rickey Barnett and Greg Jenkins did the scoring; for the defense, Barnett also did well on tackle.

The Packers' offense was spearheaded by L. Boyd and T. Johns.

SENIOR DIVISION

Trojans.....0

The Benning Demons retained their first place position by zipping the Rucker Trojans 20-0 at Fort Rucker.

A long pass from quarterback Tillery to Jimmy Concepcion set up the first score on the one-yard line; Charles Cole took it over for the score.

Offensive Demon standouts were Charles Cole and Robert Burke; the defense can only be considered a total team effort.

Offensive standouts for the Trojans were Ron Bastin and Ron Torres; defensively, it was Marco Thayer and Mark Poole.

October 21

The Auburn Opelika Running and Track Association is hosting the 2nd Annual War Eagle 5-mile Road Race Oct. 21 starting at 9 a.m. They will have a 5 mile run for men and a 3 mile run for women; both races will run concurrently.

Trophies will presented to the top three in each age group.

Registration begins at 8 a.m. Entry fee is $3.

The race begins across from the Parliament House Hotel on the corner of South College Street (Highway 41) and Shug Jordan Parkway (Bypass 267) in Auburn, Ala.

October 21

The Dothan Runners Club will be hosting the National Peanut Festival 10,000 meter race Oct. 21 at 7:30 a.m. in Dothan, Ala.

The course is basically flat and smooth, although the first mile is uphill. The distance has been marked with a wheel.

Early entry is $3 and will be accepted until Oct. 15. Late entry fee is $5 and should be attained before 7 a.m. race day.

T-shirts will go to the first 250 entrants. Trophies for the overall winner, first three finishers in following categories will also receive trophies for both male and female; 12 & under, 13-20, 21-25, 26-30, 31-39, 40-49, 50-59, and 60 & over. Awards will be given to the youngest and oldest finisher also.

The run is being sponsored by the National Peanut Festival and Olympia Spa Golf and Country Club.

The Columbus Track Club

The Columbus Track Club is one of the most progressive, fastest growing, hardest working and most widely known track clubs in the area. From the first track meet at Lakebottom, in 1974, the club has risen to heights enjoyed by few clubs in such a short time. They now have six sponsored annual road races of which one of these, The Presidential Peanut Run in Plains, Ga. on June 3 has focused national attention upon the club. It was the topic of a two page article in "Runners World Magazine."

Anyone is welcome to join. Your running ability is no deciding factor. C.T.C. holds a monthly meeting the last Tuesday of every month at 7:30 p.m. at the downtown YMCA. The C.T.C. also hosts a fun run at Cooper Creek Park at 5 p.m. every Sunday.

2-Man 10-Mile Relay
October 29

A 2-Man 10-mile relay will be held at Lovett School in Atlanta. Team age (division) will be determined by the average age of the two runners. They will also have a 1-mile novice run at 2:45 p.m. Runners in division 20-29 will begin at 4 p.m. and all other divisions will begin at 3 p.m. Lovett School is at 4075 Paces Ferry Rd. NW. Restrooms will be available.

For more information contact Race Director, Karl de Santos at 1009 Clifton Rd. NE, Atlanta, Ga. 30307 or call 377-3974.

Each team should bring a baton and a person to record their times.

Kinnew's — Americus Road Race

Fort Benning was represented at the Kinnebrew's-Americus Road Race September 30. Al Hennigan ran the 5-mile course in 31:48, setting a personal record.

Dangerous duds

This 40mm grenade is about the size of a soda can and is pretty dangerous. It is approximately 1½ inches x 3⅛ inches and is one of the most dangerous duds as it packs enough wallop to kill a person at close range.

Don't be 'blown away' by duds

By Marti Henderson

Now that hunting season is here it is imperative that precautionary measures be taken by all to avoid the potentially dangerous duds that may be found on Fort Benning.

Duds are explosive devices that have been fired but have not yet exploded. All Army explosives are fired into designated "impact areas," but not every shell or grenade will explode as it lands. That dud has become a potential hazard and, if found, must be reported immediately to the police or immediate supervisor.

Almost anything can made duds go off — throwing sticks or rocks at them, even disturbing the ground around them. Don't fool around with duds. Avoid impact areas and report any dud that may be found.

Often, duds are not recognized because they are half-way buried or camouflaged by ground cover. Through the next few weeks, a series of photos of individual duds will be pictured in two ways: first, as it might be found in the natural environment; second, an actual photo of how the dud really looks.

These pictures may give enough of a visual description that will trigger your memory before picking up a "SOUVENIR" THAT MAY BLOW YOU AWAY.

Senator to fight bid to cut commissary funds from budget

By John Hart

Republican Senator Ted Stevens of Alaska is expected to fight for retaining the Federal subsidy for military commissaries, a member of his staff said this week.

Stevens was not available to comment about a "dear colleague letter" he will circulate among his fellow senators this week.

The staffer said Stevens' letter explains why he will introduce an amendment to the Defense Appropriations Act for 1979 when it is debated on the senate floor.

Stevens is attempting to overcome the Senate Appropriations Committee recommendation to phase out the federal subsidy to pay personnel costs for military commissaries, according to the staffer.

The Senate Appropriations Committee also agreed to delete funding for the shipment of exchange goods overseas, and a reduction of 1,900 personnel assigned to duties in military welfare and recreation activities.

Senator Thomas F. Eagleton (Dem.-Mo.) won the committee's support for his call to trim the military appropriations in those areas.

Eagleton was not available to discuss his military budget cutting activities.

One of his staffers said last week that for several years Eagleton has attempted to delete the subsidy for the commissaries.

Eagleton's recommendation calls for trimming $113 million from the $339 million commissary subsidy request for FY 79.

Similar amounts would be trimmed from the budget during the next succeeding two years to complete the subsidy phase-out.

Sen. Stevens' amendment will "strongly oppose" that recommendation because he feels such action would have a serious impact on morale.

One military association late last week sent telegrams to senators seeking support for Sen. Steven's efforts to retain the commissary subsidy.

The Air Force Sergeants Association telegram in part said ". . .such attacks on service benefits will be extremely detrimental" to the future recruiting efforts of the armed forces. (ARNEWS)

Artist's conception of new 'Run in Chef'

Fast food facility to be built here

By Betty Zimmerman

Construction has begun on the Fort Benning Exchange Service's first fast food facility.

The "Run in Chef" is scheduled to be ready for operation by Feb. 20, 1979. It is being built on the corner of Pecan Row and Marchant St. near the mini-mall.

It will compare to any modern commercial fast food facility of the same nature, except the Run in Chef prices will be about 20 percent lower.

The half-a-million dollar structure will seat 88 persons inside and 48 people on an outside patio. There will be four serving lines and cashiers inside and one drive-in window.

The menu will include hamburgers, fishwiches, french fries, hot fruit pies, onion rings, fried chicken, coffee, tea, carbonated beverages and milkshakes.

Society of Military Engineers

The October meeting of The Society of American Military Engineers will be held in the Benning Room of the Fort Benning Officers' Club on Oct. 18 at 11:30 a.m. The meeting will begin with a brief social period. After the luncheon, Mr. Jerry J. Posey, president, Geiger Company, will speak on "Construction Contracting with the Federal Government." Posey attended North Georgia College, began working for the Geiger Company in 1953 and is currently the President of both the Geiger Company and the Posey Company both of which do general contracting.

OE applications due by Dec. 31

Applications for the second class of the NCO Organizational Effectiveness Program must be received at MILPERCEN no later than Dec. 31, according to MILPERCEN officials.

Forty-five NCOs will be selected to attend Class 2 at the Organizational Effectiveness Training Center (OETC) at Fort Ord, Calif., officials said. Class 2 will run from May 3, 1979 through July 13, 1979.

The NCOs will be participating in a program to determine the role of the non-commissioned officer in Organizational Effectiveness (OE).

Upon graduation, officials explained, OE non-commissioned officers will serve under OE staff officers (OESOs) at various levels throughout the Army. Their role, the selection criteria and the program of instruction will be evaluated during the year following completion at OETC, officials added.

Entry into the program is voluntary and there are two selection criteria categories: temporary duty to OETC and return to parent unit, or permanent change of station with temporary duty to OETC en route to the new unit.

Officials said selection criteria for the program are:

(A) Grades E-7 through E-9 (E-6s are eligible with waivers)

(B) Advanced NCOES graduate (if applicable)

(C) Two years college desirable

(D) Upon completion of OETC, the soldier must have a minimum of 12 months remaining prior to ETS.

(E) Personnel in shortage career management fields will not be accepted.

Soldiers interested in applying for Class 2 should submit their applications through normal command channels to commander, MILPERCEN (DAPC-EPZ-P), 2461 Eisenhower Avenue, Alexandria, VA 22331. (ARNEWS)

Terminal leave policy affected by changes

Soldiers who elect to take "terminal" leave just before their ETS should be aware of a few new responsibilities and rules attached to that option, according to MILPERCEN officials.

Changes to AR 635-10 have been made and, effective Sept. 15, soldiers who take leave in conjunction with ETS will have to follow the new guidelines.

Separation points will provide soldiers who elect this option a telephone number where soldiers or next-of-kin must call if a soldier is hospitalized or dies, the new reg says.

Soldiers or next-of-kin have a responsibility to call the separation point if hospitalization or death occurs before the end of the effective date of discharge. Calls must be made at caller's expense, officials say. Callers must provide the separation point with details on time and date of hospitalization or death, complete address of the facility, treatment involved and names of physicians or attendants. (ARNEWS)

Getting hot

The CFC thermometer measures Benning personnel's progress against mankind's ancient foes — poverty, disease, ignorance. At the end of the campaign's third week, $64,604.20 had been raised in pledges and cash donations. The post goal is $300,000.

SQT results nixed for promos

The 1978 Skill Qualification Test (SQT) results and Form 10 reports for soldiers in MOS 74B, 74D and 74F will not be used for promotion and other personnel management purposes, MILPERCEN officials said recently.

The three MOSs, which are related through career progression and encompass many similar duties, are affected by changes in MOS equipment, the revision of SQTs and the unavailability of SQTs for 1979, according to officials.

These factors prompted MILPERCEN to suspend SQT results for official personnel use as well as production of Individual Soldier Reports (ISR) on Form 10As during the current year, officials explained.

Officials say use of these reports could seriously "disadvantage" soldiers and added that use of future SQT and ISR reports will be announced when available. (ARNEWS)

Training center planned

DA has filed a draft environmental impact statement on the proposed establishment of a military National Training Center (NTC).

When established, the NTC would provide the Army a training area where a total combat environment can be simulated. The area would provide realistic maneuver areas comparable with modern battlefield requirements, warfare techniques, and future weaponry developments.

If approved, the NTC would be used by the Army's combat battalions. Forty-two battalions, totaling approximately 80,000 soldiers, would rotate through the NTC for two-week training sessions each year.

Drummer boy

Gary Hunter, Fort Benning's youngest drummer, does a number on the skins. Gary, a member of the group "New Experience," headed by his father, Spec. 5 Horace "Butch" Hunter, will perform tomorrow at 7 p.m. in the Harmony Church Recreation Center.

Five-year-old drumming up big plans for the near future

By Betty Zimmerman

At five years old, Gary B. Hunter already knows exactly where he wants his life to go — Bigtime, U.S.A.

Everyone who hears this dark-eyed tyke with an afro play his drums agrees, he'll probably make it. There's certainly no doubt in his mind. When asked if he was going to be a famous drummer, he indignantly replied, "I AM a famous drummer!"

At the age of three, he began with a discarded set of bongos in his home. When he was four-and-a-half, he just climbed on the drum-set stool in the Fort Riley, Kan., NCO Club and began playing. Everyone was astonished, including his parents. The professional finesse wasn't there but the timing was.

His mother, Mildred, said, "It was then we realized Gary's potential. We encouraged him and bought him professional drums after he rapidly wore out a toy set. But he is too young to take lessons yet. First, he must learn to read, and maybe in two years, he'll be ready for lessons. In the meantime, practicing is no problem, the problem comes with getting him to stop playing. His enthusiasm seems to be never ending."

Gary placed third in the instrumentalist's category of a Denver, Colo. talent contest last year and performed in the recent WFXE competition in Columbus' Municipal Auditorium. He keeps current by practicing with his dad and fellow soldiers of his dad who enjoy jamming. They use the Harmony Church Recreation Center for their sessions because it has plenty of room and various instruments available for use.

Gary has been around music all his short life. His father, Spec. 5 Horace Hunter, 2nd Combat Support Hospital, 34th Medical Battalion, has been the leader of several musical groups, playing lead and rhythm guitar. He played the trumpet in school bands from the third grade through the twelfth, and picked up the guitar during his junior high school days, all in Thomasville, Ga.

CHAMPUS new year underway

Oct. 1 marked the start of a new year for CHAMPUS outpatient deductibles.

Defense Department officials remind the Program's beneficiaries that a deductible satisfied during FY 1978 (Oct. 1, 1977 through Sept. 30, 1978) cannot be applied to care received after Sept. 30. A new outpatient deductible will have to be satisfied for FY 1979.

The outpatient deductible is the initial amount a beneficiary must pay each fiscal year before CHAMPUS assistance is available for outpatient expenses. For an individual, it is the first $50 of authorized outpatient charges in a fiscal year. For a family of two or more beneficiaries filing claims, the maximum deductible in a fiscal year is $100.

Add caution to fall cookouts

Late summer and early fall is barbecue time in the South as families move outdoors to enjoy the cooler temperatures. With tight finances keeping more people away from restaurants, it's a good year for the backyard chef — if a healthy dose of caution is added to the othar ingredients. The following quiz will help you decide if you are ready to cook over the coals.

1. The most serious cookout mishap is:
(a) Sunburn
(b) "Burnt offering" meals
(c) Personal burns

The last choice is right. Sloppy work habits and inattention to the job have made chef flambe' the main attraction at plenty of barbecues.

2. You'll best light your fire with:
(a) Commercial liquid starters
(b) Gasoline
(c) Cigarette lighter fluid
(d) Wood shavings

If you picked (a) and (d), you win. The National Safety Council strongly warns against use of gasoline or cigarette lighter fluid. Follow directions on commercial fluids carefully and never add more fluid to coals which have already been lit.

3. If the fire needs freshening, the best fuel to do the job is:
(a) Starter fluid
(b) Papers
(c) Wood shavings or twigs

The last answer is right. Liquids or paper might create dangerously high flames.

4. If a flare-up does occur, the handiest way to put it out is with a:
(a) Blanket
(b) Water squirt bottle
(c) Handful of dirt.

The squirt bottle leads the list. A couple of well aimed squirts will quench a minor flare-up without disturbing the coals. The Council recommends keeping a home fire extinguisher nearby for more boisterious blazes.

5. What does the stylish but safe barbecuer wear to the cookout?
(a) Frilly party clothes
(b) Caftans or flowing dashikis
(c) A cellophane body stocking

They're all wrong! A safe ensemble includes a denim apron and mitts, accessorized by long-handled fork and tongs.

6. What is the best way to end your barbecue?
(a) Hose down the coal
(b) Hose down guests
(c) Tell everyone the party's over
(d) Bring the leftovers in for a midnight snack

Hosing down the coals is the best way to end an evening happily. Choice (d) is a real killer. Never bring the grill into any enclosed space to cook without ample ventilation. Burning charcoal produces odorless, invisible carbon monoxide that can execute an entire family in 30 minutes without even being detected. If bad weather forces the festivities indoors, douse the coals and move dinner to the kitchen stove.

Veterans Home to add nursing care facility

The conversion of a domiciliary building at the Georgia War Veterans Home in Milledgeville into a nursing care facility will be a big help in fulfilling the ever-increasing need for nursing care, according to Georgia Veterans Service Commissioner Pete Wheeler.

The 1979 General Assembly approved a budget request for $314,000 to convert the Carl Vinson building, a 132-bed domiciliary into a facility for veterans in need of nursing care.

Wheeler said that actual modification of the structure is scheduled to get underway early in 1979. The Vinson building was completed in 1968; another nursing care facility, the 150-bed Richard B. Russell building was opened in 1973.

The renovation of another structure, the Pete Wheeler building, was completed a year ago providing domiciliary accommodations for 288 veterans. The demand for domiciliary space is not nearly so critical as for nursing care. Wheeler said that time on the waiting list for nursing care should be greatly reduced with the conversion of the Vinson building.

In another area of veterans care expenditures of more than $100,000 were approved for the expansion and modification of air conditioning and for fire-safety improvements at the Georgia Veterans Nursing Home in Augusta. Contracts for these projects were let in June with completion anticipated by the end of 1978.

VA Q&A

Q — I am receiving a monthly disability compensation check, and I have recently moved. What must I do to have my checks sent to my new address?

A — Complete the reverse side of the envelope in which you received your check and send it to your local VA office. If you don't have the envelope, contact your local VA office and inform them of your change of address. Be sure to have your VA file number available.

Q — Am I entitled to dental treatment by or paid for by the Veterans Administration?

A — Dental benefits must be applied for within one year from the date of separation from active duty unless you have been rated for a dental service-connected disability or for a service-connected disability to which dental care is an adjunct.

CIIP returns to original birthplace

By Lisa DLuhy

History repeated itself Oct. 4 when the Central Initial Issue Point (CIIP) gave soldiers of Companies A and B, 7th Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade, their initial issue of military clothing.

The soldiers, who are in their seventh week of One Station Unit Training (OSUT), were given only fatigues and boots when they first arrived at the reception Center in Fort Jackson.

Back in July of 1958, CIIP was opened to supply soldiers going through training here with their initial issue. Over 300,000 troops went through the CIIP for their clothing, which is in the same building that is being used today. In December 1969, the CIIP closed their doors when basic combat training phased out here and reopened them last Thursday at a ribbon cutting ceremony.

Waiting until the seventh week of training serves two purposes. First of all, the soldier has been experiencing physical changes their first seven weeks and by now, they will have increased or decreased so that alternations are minimal. Secondly, they have progressed in the OSUT program, so that they will soon be awarded certain pass privileges that require a military uniform other than fatigues.

The cost of fitting one soldier with a complete uniform is well over $400. Last year alone, the Army spent $85 million on clothing issue. Last Thursday, $40 thousand was spent for each company.

DA nixes EER abuse

MILPERCEN officials have cautioned commands not to use Enlisted Evaluation Reports (EER) for purposes other than those required by AR 600-200.

A MILPERCEN statement says some commands are requiring EER submissions as supporting documents for personnel actions and programs not dictated in Chapter 8 of the regulation.

Calling other uses "inappropriate," the statement says "The EER is intended to serve as an assessment of the soldier's duty. (ARNEWS)

ITB barracks named for WWII hero

The third new barracks building in Sand Hill was dedicated yesterday in honor of Col. Jack L. Treadwell, a Medal of Honor recipient.

His widow, three daughters and three sisters were the guests of honor at the ceremony presided over by Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey, post commander. Daughter Whittie attended with her husband, Capt. John Carson, and daughter Deborah with her husband, Capt. John P. Florris; Miss Tracee Treadwell joined her aunts, Mrs. Ora Mae Harris, Miss Fannie Treadwell and Mrs. Mayme R. Rust, in rounding out the family contingency.

Maj. Gen. Levern E. Weber, chief, National Guard Bureau, Washington, D.C.; Maj. Gen. John Coffey Jr., Oklahoma State Adjutant; Maj. Gen. (Ret) Fred Daugherty, chief, Board of Directors, 45th Division Association; and Brig. Gen. (Ret) William R. Wilson, president, 45th Division Association, joined several members of the Medal of Honor Society in completing the official party.

Treadwell Barracks houses the 7th Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade, a unit engaged in the One Station Unit Training (OSUT) program. See related story, Page 2.

'Benning Blast'

An outdoor musical happening, entitled "Benning Blast," is scheduled for tomorrow between noon and 5 p.m., and it's free!

The rock 'n roll show, sponsored by the Music and Theater Branch of Recreation Services, will be held on the grassy field next to Carey Pool on main post. This area is between Riordon St. and Lavoie Ave.

For more information, call 545-1679 or 544-4823.

Doughboys to play

The Fort Benning Doughboys will pick on someone their own size when they host the Fort McClellan Volunteers 7:30 tomorrow night at Doughboy Stadium.

The Doughboys are coming off an impressive showing against the Albany State Rams. The Volunteers have lost three games this season and will be out looking for their first victory.

This could very well be the game that the Doughboys come out winners, so everyone is urged to come out and root them on.

Food stamp requests

Benning personnel will soon be able to apply for food stamps through the Army Community Services (ACS) here on post.

The Department of Family and Children Services (DFCS) for Chattahoochee County will supply the ACS with all the necessary paperwork for food stamp applications. ACS workers are learning how to assit food stamp applicants in filling out application forms.

The new program will benefit military personnel living south of Upatoi Creek in Chattahoochee County. Those living in the Muscogee County area on post will still have to go to the downtown office to apply.

Anyone who would like to apply for food stamps or inquire as to eligibility should call the ACS at 545-1233/4679.

Santa Claus suits

Recreation Services has a limited number of Santa Claus costumes available for use by active duty military personnel only.

You can make reservations for use of the suits after Nov. 1 by submitting a disposition form (DF) to the Recreation Services Officer. The suits may be used for onpost Christmas programs and activities only.

Post NCO comes through in clutch

By Pat Brown

"I don't feel I did anything beyond the call of duty," says Sgt. Maj. Tim Arnold of the 15th Finance Office at Fort Benning.

Maybe not. But thousands of soldiers here have special reason to be grateful to him. He's the man who made sure they got paid last week.

And it wasn't easy.

Many people expecting mid-month pay were getting a little tense as the time grew nearer to payday and necessary legislation releasing FY 79 funds had not been passed.

Oh, they knew they'd get paid, but when there's car payments, plans to make a trip, promises to the kids to take them to the fair, knowing your pay might be a day or more late tends to make you uneasy.

Lt. Col. Bruce Hall, post finance and accounting officer and Maj. Steve Ferris, acting director of Resources Management, understood this.

Point of no return

"By Thursday, the day before payday, we had reached a point of no return," says Lt. Col. Hall. "Even if the pay bill were passed and signed that day, it would still take two days for paychecks to reach here from the Finance and Accounting Center at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind. We decided to make arrangements for a courier to pick up the checks there and bring them here, so we could disperse them as soon as we received authorization to do so."

The man they selected as courier was Sgt. Maj. Arnold.

"We picked him," says Lt. Col. Hall, "because he's the sort of man that when you give him a job to do, you know he'll get it done."

And Arnold didn't let him — or the troops — down.

At first the flight was uneventful. With Maj. Russell Calvert as pilot and Capt. Joe Gorecki as co-pilot, the U-8 Seminole aircraft they were flying left Lawson Army Air Field around 2 p.m. Thursday.

"We reached Stanfidord Field in Louisville," says Gorecki, "and we were forced to land. The weather was so bad that flights further north were cancelled."

Undaunted, Arnold got off the plane, sprinted for the nearest rental car agency and within minutes had started the 112 mile trip north.

"The weather was bad." said the sergeant major. "Heavy rains and hail stones were large enough to have shattered the windows of several cars I passed. I have never had to pull

Treadwell: hero's career spanned 3 decades

The man for whom the third new barracks complex in Sand Hill was named was one of the Army's most decorated soldiers. Col. Jack L. Treadwell was born in Ashland, Ala., on Mar. 30, 1919.

He attended public schools in Snyder, Okla., and spent one year at Southwest State Teachers College in Weatherford, Okla., enlisting in the Army in January 1941.

He completed basic training with the 45th Inf Div at Fort Sill, Okla., and was a sergeant when the unit landed in North Africa in June 1943.

Col. Treadwell was a platoon sergeant during the landing in Sicily the following month. He also landed at Salerno and participated in the bitter winter fighting at Anzio, where he received a battlefield commission as a second lieutenant in March 1944.

It was at Anzio that he earned the Distinguished Service Cross, the nation's second highest decoration for bravery in action. He was cited for organizing a defense against a German attack, exposing himself to enemy fire while directing his unit's actions and directing artillery fire to within 50 meters of himself in warding off the attack. During the battle he led several hand-to-hand charges against the enemy.

Col. Treadwell was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor, the nation's highest award for bravery in combat, for gallantry in action on March 18 near Nieder-Wurzbach, Germany.

As commander of Co F, 180th Inf, then Lieutenant Treadwell, single-handedly captured 18 German soldiers and knocked out six enemy pill boxes after eight of his fellow soldiers died in a similar attempt. His feat is credited with paving the way for his battalion's breakthrough of the Siegfried Line.

Col. Treadwell was wounded a fourth time on March 30, 1945, near Rossbach, Germany, and was hospitalized until March 1946.

Following World War II, Col. Treadwell served in various Infantry units and in staff jobs. He became a company commander at Fort Benning in 1946 and attended the Armor Officer Advanced Course in 1949 through 1950; the Command and General Staff College from 1954 through 1955; the Armed Forces Staff College from 1958 through 1959, and the Army War College from 1961 through 1962. He also earned a BA Degree from the University of Omaha.

He served as aide-de-camp to Lt. Gen. Withers A. Burress, former commander of the First U.S. Army, Fort Jay, N.Y., from 1952 until 1954. Gen. Burress was commander of Fort Benning from July 1948 until January 1951.

He served as Headquarters Commandant of the Pacific Proving Grounds on Eniwetok from 1955 to 1956, coming to Fort Benning as an instructor in The Infantry School's Tactics Department in 1956. He became commander of the Infantry Officer Candidate School in 1957, and in 1958 was assigned as Chief, U.S. Army Infantry Center Training and Evaluation and Test Group.

In November 1966, Col. Treadwell was named commander of the 197th Infantry Brigade and during that year he dedicated Wigle Hall, the OCS Hall of Fame building at Fort Benning. He served as commander of the 197th until August 1968, at which time he was assigned to Vietnam.

Col. Treadwell also distinguished himself in Vietnam during 1968 and 1969. As Chief of Staff of the American Division and as commander of the division's 11th Bde, he was decorated twice for valor and meritorious service. He received the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry with Gold Star, and the Honor Medal, First Class.

Following his return from Vietnam in 1969, he was assigned to Fort Sam Houston, Tex., where he served as 5th Army Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations and Training until 1972. He then served as Senior Advisor to South Carolina and North Carolina Reserves and National Guards until 1973, when he suffered a heart attack. He was medically retired at Fort Jackson in March 1974 and was a resident of Indiahoma, Okla., until his death from another heart attack in December 1977.

The funeral for Col. Treadwell was held at the New Post Chapel at Fort Sill. He was buried at Fort Sill with full military honors.

He is survived by his wife, the former Charlotte Johnson, whom he married June 20, 1946. Other survivors include three daughters.

In addition to the Medal of Honor and Distinguished Service Cross, his awards and decorations included the Silver Star, Legion of Merit with two Oak Leaf Clusters, Distinguished Flying Cross, Soldiers' Medal, Bronze Star with Oak Leaf Cluster and "V" for valor, Purple Heart with three Oak Leaf Clusters, Combat Infantry's Bade (second award), the Air Medal with 12 Oak Leaf Clusters, Distinguished Unit Citation and the Army Commendation Medal. He was also awarded the Croix de Guerre with Gold Star by France.

Col. Treadwell was a Master Parachutist.

off the road because of weather conditions, but this time I did — three times!"

He finally reached Fort Harrison, picked up three duffle bags full of soldiers' paychecks, and 45 minutes later, was on his way back to Louisville.

"It probably helped that I had been assigned there before. I knew all the back roads and short cuts around Fort Harrison and Indianapolis," he said.

Calvert and Gorecki were ready to take off as soon as he got back to Louisville.

"And a good thing," says Gorecki. "Fifteen minutes later all flights at Standiford were grounded."

But no matter. Fort Benning's pay was on its way.

"They were on their way back," says Lt. Col. Hall, "when word began to filter down that the pay bill had been signed. That meant, if it were true, that our soldiers would get paid on time."

And as we all know now, they did.

"Lt. Col. Hall's motto is 'Service to the Troops," says Arnold. "That's all I did — just provided part of the service offered to the troops at Fort Benning."

Color TV set an energy hog

Your color television set is a major energy user in your home. A solid state color set used about 320 kilowatt hours per year and a tube set uses about 528 kilowatt hours, according to the Edison Electric Institute. Abalcl and white solid state set uses 100 kilowatt hours, while a tube type uses 220. Only your major kitchen appliances, your hot water heater and your heating and cooling systems will use more electricity than your color TV

You can save energy and money by doing the obvious things, like turning the set off if no one is watching, and by watching a show together rather than having family members use different sets.

If your set has an instant on switch, it is using the equivalent of a 20-watt bulb burning 24-hours per day. Multiply that by all the sets in the area. Why not turn your instant on switch off, or if that is not possible, install an off-on switch in the television cord so that you can save energy and money. (TNS)

Keep warm and save

When the temperature drops outside, people stay indoors and use more electricity for heating. This winter, you can keep warm and still save on electricity costs if you follow these suggestions:

- Set thermostats at 65 degrees during the day and 60 degrees at night. Using an electric blanket takes less electricity than turning up the heat.
- During the day when the warmth of the sun can heat a room, open drapes and window blinds. After sunset, close them.
- Have your furnace serviced at winter's beginning and you may save up to 10 percent in heating costs.
- Radiator systems should be dusted or vacuumed frequently.
- Wear warm clothing! (TNS)

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room - and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 100 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

Weather info benefits artillerymen

By Judi Taylor

A helium filled balloon rises slowly through the early morning mist while the men of the Meteorological Section, HHC & HHC Co, 2/10 FA, 197th Inf Bde (Sep), sit patiently awaiting the electronic impulses to be sent down and changed into a weather report.

The balloon the section sends up is no ordinary balloon, attached to the bottom of it is an instrument called a radiosonde. This radiosonde transmits humidity, temperature and air pressure to the Ground Meterological Device(GMD) which in turn transmits the findings to a radiosonde recorder.

Once the information has been graphed on the recorder the men set about transposing the electrical impulses into readings for each ballistic zone sounded. After the data has been broken down into degrees and knots it is changed into mils to be radioed to the artillery units.

Each round fired from a gun goes through different ballistic zones, levels of atmosphere with different weather conditions. Since differences in the earths atmosphere can cause an unintentional miss on a target, the artillery can correct the path of trajectory before they fire. The density of the air, which is computed from the temperature reading, can cause the round to fall either long or short of the target, and wind speed and direction can cause a significant difference in the rounds path. The information from the Metro Section enables the artillery to insure effective firing.

As well as aiding the artillery during their firing missions, the Metro Section coordinates with the Air Force detachment on Lawson Field and helps provide Fort Benning/Columbus with a daily weather report. The readings also go to a main computer in Kansas City where it is dispersed to Army, Air Force, Navy and Marine bases all around the world.

Spec. 5 John Schraffenberger is proud of the section he works with, "The men here are pro's, matter of fact, after our last ARTEP we were rated the best Metro Section in the Army, and you can't beat that!"

So next time you call the weather bureau and get a recording that says the high for today is expected to be 100 degrees, you know where the information came from.

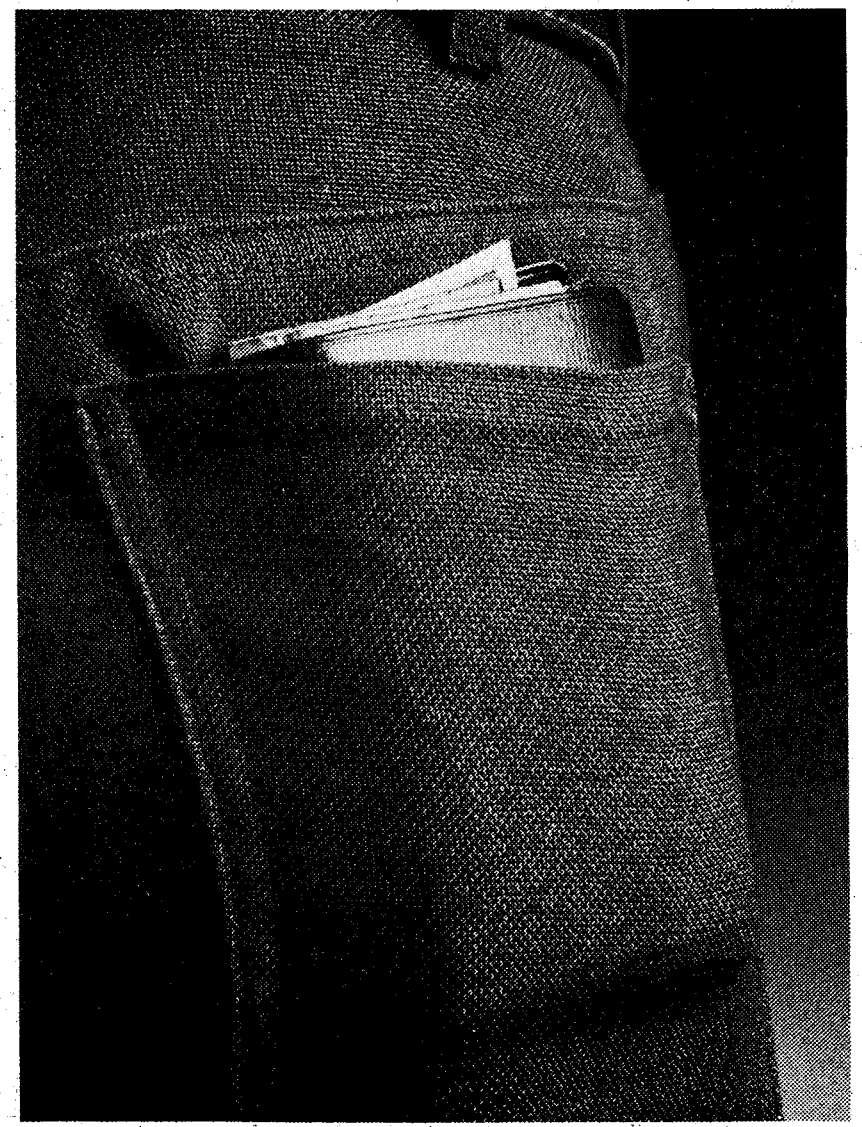
TO ALL FEDERAL EMPLOYEES:

BUY CHEAPER HEALTH CARE COVERAGE AND THERE'S ONE PLACE YOU CAN REALLY GET HURT.



Right in the old wallet.

Which doesn't make much sense when you stop to think you wanted to save money in the first place. More often than not, though, you end up with an expensive mistake on your hands.

Because cheaper health care plans cost less for a reason. They often cover less. And pay less when it comes time to make a claim.

That's why the Blue Cross and Blue Shield program is worth so much—even when it costs more. It covers more.

Dollar for dollar, the high option Blue Cross and Blue Shield program is the best health care coverage you can buy.

HIGHER AND HIGHER.

That sums up the main problem with trying to save money on health care coverage. The cost of hospitalization and medical treatment has been on the rise for years. So far, the end isn't in sight.

Take the cost of surgery, for instance. As the chart shows, the total cost of common surgical procedure and required medical services has risen as much as 250% over the last ten years.

And that's why Blue Cross and Blue Shield Plans are working harder than ever with doctors and hospitals across the country. We've got to find ways to help slow down dramatically rising health care costs.

So when you buy health care coverage, take a long, hard look at Blue Cross and Blue Shield protection. You may not think the price is right today.

But when you need help, the Blue Cross and Blue Shield program is worth every dollar.

Getting back in the Army isn't easy

By Bill Lopez

"It's a lot more difficult for a prior service soldier to get back in the Army than a lot of people think," a DA personnel official stated recently.

You might visualize your last few days in the Army as a time when everybody will seem particularly friendly and ready to roll out the carpet if you'd only decide to reenlist. But for the purpose of this article, let's suppose you choose to get out and see how "the outside" feels. Now, let's jump ahead a few months and look at the situation.

Suppose that after you've tested civilian life for a while, you decide that the Army would make a good career after all. "Ah, they'll be happy to see me in the old green suit again," you say. "I was in the top 10 percent of a competitive MOS, they'll roll out the old red carpet when I go in to see the recruiter."

So you walk in to see your recruiter and tell him the good news that you're ready to raise your hand again. But instead of signing you up, he tells you to have a seat in the corner, suggests you say a few prayers and asks if any of your friends are without prior service. What's going on, you wonder.

The facts are, getting back in the Army after taking your discharge isn't all that easy. Prior service quotas are always less than 10 percent of enlistments during any year and they're subject to more restrictions if recruiting efforts are more successful than planned, according to DA officials.

In addition to restrictive quotas, there is a requirement that all prior service recruits have at least a high school education.

If prior service soldiers want to reenlist, the enlistments are subject to vacancies in their prior MOS and original year group. If, for example, a mechanic enlisted in 1973, was discharged in 1976 as an E-5, and wants to enlist, the enlistment approval is subject to an E-5 vacancy in the MOS for all mechanics who also entered in 1973.

Prior service soldiers may be eligible to enlist in their secondary or another MOS, but this might mean a drop of at least one grade, depending upon grade and time in service at separation.

Full grade retention is rare, even if a soldier is allowed to keep his or her former MOS. A former E-6 who had six to ten years service for example, will be allowed to enlist as an E-5 at best. If a vacancy in a prior MOS and in a particular year group doesn't exist, and if he or she enlists between three and 30 months after separation, the highest grade retained by the former E-6 is E-4. (Enlistment within three months of separation is prohibited for E-6 and above). The top grade obtainable by a former E-6 enlisting between 30 and 36 months after separation is E-4, regardless of MOS and year group. After 36 months, E-3 is the highest grade awarded.

An E-4 who is separated between three and six years service might keep the E-4 grade, if he or she returns to the Army within 24 months. An enlistment between 24 and 30 months after separation will retain E-3 at best.

Along with frequent loss of rank, the date of rank for prior service enlistees is not effective until the day they return to active duty. Loss of rank may cause a soldier to lose dependent travel allowances to a new duty or training station.

Training in a new MOS is common and basic training is mandatory if a prior service soldier has been separated more than 36 months.

Well, you think, maybe you could join the reserves, keep your rank and return to active duty later. You can't. You may be able to return to active duty, but your rank is subject to the same restrictions that apply to any other prior service soldier.

So, if you're having second thoughts, and would rather face a red carpet than a lot of red tape, check with your reenlistment NCO about restrictions and qualifications for prior service soldiers. You may be glad you did. (ARNEWS)

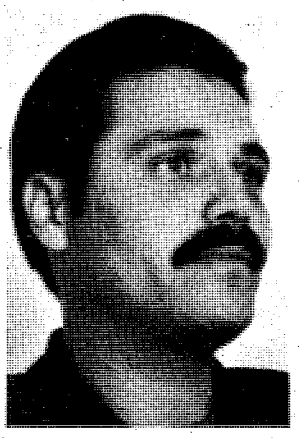
Should off-post EM be required to help clean up the barracks?



Pfc. Joe DeFazio, USAMU
Absolutely not! It's ridiculous that EM not making use of the barracks should be forced to clean up someone else's mess.

2nd Lt. Michael Creed, Co. B, 10BC Class 8-78
At Fort Campbell, my permanent duty station, my platoon is billeted in an old-style platoon bay. In addition to serving as a living and sleeping area for all single EM, the bay also serves as a classroom where all the platoon business such as classes and equipment maintenance takes place. All personnel participate in the training in the bay area, therefore I consider it only fair that all personnel share the responsibility for policing the area.

Staff Sgt. Frank Reser, USACC Agency
I think that off-post personnel should not be required to clean up the barracks on a daily basis because they do not use the facilities as often as the personnel who live in the barracks. However, they should be required to help in the cleaning of common areas at times of major inspections.

Pfc. Kevin Malone, HHC 36th Engr. Gp. (CBT)
The EM that live on post are the ones who make the mess, so they should be the only ones to clean it up.

War and peace:

Soldiers deserve respect

By Gina Haspel

Several months ago, my husband left his job as assistant manager of a department store in Louisville, Ky. and joined the United States Army. He attended six weeks of basic training and is presently undergoing 14 rigorous and challenging weeks of Officer Candidate School, here at Fort Benning.

Hostility disturbing

Since my father is an Air Force career man, military life is not new to me. However, the open hostility and prejudice my husband and I encountered among our peers when we announced our decision, was very disturbing to me. Few Americans, of course, are aware of the growing sentiment against defense spending in general and against military benefits. But the gross misconceptions my generation has of military personnel, of their jobs and lives, shocked me. As a member of the military community, I feel compelled to speak out in our defense, a defense that I believe every young American should read and understand. I believe that unless civilian Americans start showing strong support for the two million plus men and women serving them in the armed forces, a fatal blow will be dealt to the prosperity and defense of this country.

Not second class

It is time that the American people and Congress stop treating people in uniform as second class citizens. Although the military has endured a long history of abuses, it is now the fad of the times to berate the soldier and his benefits. We can thank the bitter aftermath of Vietnam and uncontrolled inflation for this.

Congress considers and often takes action every session to further reduce military benefits. There are few spokesmen for the soldier in Congress. The members who promise to save taxpayers' money by limiting military spending, far outnumber those members honest enough to stand up for what they believe., against the powerful tide of public opinion.

Americans complain soldiers and their dependents receive free medical care and comissary privileges. The often neglected fact is the average pay of the noncommissioned officer is far below the salary of civilian counterparts. In fact, a young man or woman entering the service receives a paltry $419 a month. Military raises are consistenly below the national inflation rate, leaving the soldier to battle constant relocation expenses and the high cost of living with few weapons.

Military families never have had it easy. Now, in the face of growing criticism, more and more families are wondering how to make ends meet. Men stationed in Europe are forced to send their wives and children home because they cannot afford to pay rent on foreign economies due to a devaluating dollar — and no help in sight from Uncle Sam.

Double-dipping limit

In the latest of congressoonal moves, the Senate passed an amendment to limit "double-dipping." The amendment limits a military retiree who goes to work for the federal government from receiving more than $47,500 annually. Double-dipping is what Congress calls earning a government pension and salary. Hard and admirable work is what I call it!

There is absolutely no justification to deny a military retiree the money he earns from a subsequent government job. Government agencies hire the ex-military person because he has skills, training and expertise that cannot be found elsewhere. Congress certainly does not intend to take action against its own former members who move on to other government jobs. I, for one, am angered by Congress acting as if military people are cheating the American public by collecting two government checks. Men and women who managed to work two jobs in their lifetime deserve two salaries. To say otherwise is a gross violation of contract.

GIs aren't stupid

Perhaps even more frightening than the rash of congressional moves against the military is the attitude of the present generation. Many actually believe that their peers who join the service are either stupid, crazy or low class. Although there are few statistics on the subject. I think I can testify with honesty that people in the military are of the same diverse mix as in civilian life. Some of us

Legal Briefs

Each week the Legal Assistance Office receives many inquiries concerning false advertising, misrepresentation, and fraud. Many clients discover, much too late, that most of what was promised is not forthcoming.

Take the case of Soldier Jones. He really believed that his membership in "THE CLUB" would result in a 25 percent discount on all items purchased from Brand-Name Manufacturers. Little did Jones know that he was responsible for shipping costs to his home even though he paid 25 percent less. These costs equaled or exceeded the 25 percent saving he thought he could enjoy. Final cost was approximately the same as he would pay from the local merchant. The end result is that Soldier Jones now has a binding contract with payments of $25 per month for two years with no tangible benefit being received.

Other similar cases involve the oral promise that is not included in the written contract; membership entitlements where the individual still pays the cost for services rendered; close-out sales at cost, etc. Question these gimmicks before you buy or sign.

Further, the individual soldier is encouraged to consult the local Better Business Bureau or other similar agency prior to entering into a contract. To avoid complaints, make up your mind about the purchase before you buy and do not buy under pressure. If you are not sure, first have a definite understanding with the firm, preferably in writing.

To combat the growing concern in this area, the individual soldier is advised to read between the lines and question any promise made.

The Legal Assistance Section within the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate has attorneys available for legal advice and consultation. It is recommended that individuals come to Legal Assistance before signing a particular contract.

Hands off!

This highly sensitive explosive is known as a simulator. It is a handthrown device that provides battle noises and effects during troop training missions. The simulator produces a high-pitched whistle which lasts 2 - 4 seconds and then explodes, producing a flash and loud report. Because it is impossible for all highly sensitive explosives to be policed from the ranges, parents are advised to instruct their children to stay away from training areas and DO NOT TOUCH any suspicious objects. If this simulator or any other suspicious object is sighted, notify one or both of the following organizations immediately: 89th Ord Det (EOD) at 545-2914; Military Police at 545-5222.

Lavoie looks for home

Suppose they gave a party and everybody came — but had no place to meet. That's the situation facing members of the Lavoie Manor community, and they're mad.

"We're overflowing with talent, but we don't have the facilities to handle all the activities we've planned," explained Mrs. Mary Gauthier, who shares the community's social activities chairmanship with Mrs. Sandy Beattie.

"Right now the only place we have is the Sunday School room behind the Community Life Center," she said. Mrs. Gauthier quickly added the Community Life Center isn't exactly what its name implies. The tiny building houses the community chaplain, a kitchen and three desks.

"It's so small we had to enclose the porch to provide office space for an assistant," interjected Sgt. 1st Class Ruben Gauthier, mayor of Lavoie Manor.

So far, according to Mrs. Gauthier, the only activity operating on an on-going basis is the tot activity. Run two hours, four days a week in the Sunday School room, the tot activity attracts 25 or more 3- to 5-year-olds daily for pre-school-type activities.

"But there's so much, much more we could do if we just had room," Mrs. Gauthier sighed. "We've got talented people lined up and waiting to teach dancing, crocheting, knitting, exercise classes and support a walking club, TOPS group, teen and pre-teen dances and a 24-hour social work service. But, we have to have someplace to do it."

Finding that place has proven to be easier said than done.

"Every time we find a building that meets our needs it's occupied by either the Army or termite," said Mrs. Glenda James, editor of the community newsletter.

Sgt. 1st Class Gauthier, exasperated by the futility of his efforts, said, "We don't care if we get a place that's condemned. We've got an army of families who will do whatever is needed to provide a place for wholesome community activities."

Meanwhile, until a new home is found, members of the community aren't planning on sitting idly by. On Nov. 10 a horde of residents is scheduled to descend on the dilapidated Sunday School room and Community Life Center and spend the day in a massive clean-up campaign. Anyone living in Lavoie Manor who would like to pitch in should call Mrs. Gauthier at 687-5306 for details.

Military retirees

Money to burn or hard to earn?

By Bill Lopez

"I knew a retired officer who applied for a job and, before his salary was even brought up, they asked him how much he was getting in retirement," an Army officer remarked.

Is the retired soldier discriminated against because he earns a pension? Is his civilian job income less than he's expected to earn?

Discrimination?

Whether or not discrimination is the cause, the soldier retiree does earn less than his civilian peers who have a 20-year headstart in private employment. That's according to a DoD report based on a 1977 survey of retirees. The survey, published last spring, says that military retirees earn an average of $4,000 less annually than civilians with similar education and in the same age groups.

Retired military officers, the report says, earned an average of $20,169 in their first full-time civilian job after retirement (not including military pensions) during 1976. Civilians with four years of college, the report says, earned an average of $23,701 during the same year.

Retired enlisted members (EM) earned an average of $10,112 in their first full-time civilian job after retirement (not including military pensions) during 1976. Civilians with high school diplomas earned an average of $14,905 during the same year, according to the report.

The age of officers surveyed ranged from 40-49 and from 35-44 for EM, the same ages as civilians used in the comparison.

Although officers earned an average of 15 percent less than similarly-grouped civilians and EM earned 32 percent less, the trend is improving for officers and is worsening for EM, the report shows.

In 1970, officers earned 21.5 percent less and EM earned only 12 percent less than their civilian counterparts, according to report tables comparing 1970 incomes.

10 percent in Civil Service

Ten percent of all retirees begin their civilian careers in the Federal Civil Service. But federal jobs still pay the retiree less than his value, the report says. The average officer, a lieutenant colonel, is equated to a GS-14 but begins his second career as a GS-10. Likewise, the E-7 retiree is equated with a GS-6 but begins his second career as a GS-4.

DoD military retirees working full-time account for 56 percent of officers and 70 percent of EM, the report reveals. Only 16 percent of EM are fully retired while 31 percent of the officers are fully retired. Six percent of the officers were unemployed compared to nine percent of the EM. The remainder are semi-retired.

Why they get out

Reasons that retired officers gave for leaving the service, in order of the five most often expressed, were: to assume a second career, disability, poor promotion possibilities, failure to get promoted and the possibility of an undesirable assignment. Reasons given by retired EM were a second career, involuntary separation, disability, mandatory time in grade requirements and failure to get promoted.

The "1977 DoD Military Retiree Survey Preliminary Report," was prepared by the Directorate of Compensation, Deputy Assistant Secretary for Personnel Policy and the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Manpower, Reserve Affairs and Logistics), Washington, D.C. 20310. (ARNEWS)

E-4s, 5s get point list recomp

E-4s and E-5s on semi-centralized promotion lists will have their points recomputed and — for many — increased in October and November. MILPERCEN officials announced recently.

For most soldiers these recomputations will be the first since the current promotion point worksheet was introduced earlier this year.

MILPERCEN officials said E-4s on promotion lists as of September will have scores recomputed in October.

E-5s on promotion lists as of October will have their scores recomputed in November.

Recomps for the two ranks are being split, an official explained, because earlier divisions were popular with field MILPOs who were able to reduce the heavy recomp workload.

Recomputed points will be based on documented point credits in soldiers' records as of Sept. 30 for E-4s and Oct. 31 for E-5s.

Recomputed scores will become effective Jan. 1 for E-4s and Feb. 1 for E-5s.

Future recomps are planned each October and April for E-4s and November and May for E-5s, officials added. (ARNEWS)

CFC Goal: We're halfway there!

By Pat Brown

One month after the 1979 Combined Federal Campaign (CFC) kick-off ceremony on Sept. 18, post personnel had passed the half-way mark toward this year's $300,000 objective, with more than $156,000 contributed in cash and payroll deductions.

Members of the Columbus-Fort Benning, Phenix City community who participated in the campaign will see their CFC payroll deductions, checks and cash come back to the area through a number of voluntary health, welfare and youth agencies helping those local people who need it.

In all there are 46 individual agencies that benefit from CFC contributions. They are grouped into three organizations, the United Way, the National Health Agencies and the International Service Agencies. CFC donations may be made to any or all of the agencies, with objectives for each organization being set up as follows: United Way, $236,100 or 78.7 percent of the total; National Health Agencies, $48,000 or 16 percent; and the International Service Agencies, $15,900 or 5.3 percent.

Many of the agencies operate in this area. To name just a few:

Benning's own COMMUNITY ACTIVITIES ASSOCIATION is a permanent non-profit organization that administers contributed funds in support of the post's youth, recreational, welfare and service activities.

THE URBAN LEAGUE is an interracial service agency dealing with problems of health, welfare, housing, job placement, delinquency and guidance.

The CHATTAHOOCHEE COUNCIL of BOY SCOUTS and the CONCHARTY COUNCIL OF GIRL SCOUTS develop in local boys and girls the qualities of leadership, initiative, teamwork and service and provide outdoor recreation and camping opportunities.

GOODWILL INDUSTRIES is a rehabilitation facility using an industrial work setting to help handicapped persons become as nearly self-supporting as possible by teaching them job skills.

RUSSELL COUNTY MENTAL HEALTH ASSOCIATION meets some of the pressing mental health problems of Russell County and acquaints the public with the problems of mental illness.

Pvt 2 Andy Trammell, Co. A, Hq. Comd., presently assigned to the Combined Federal Campaign (CFC) project office, paints in the new total on the CFC thermometer, showing that more than $156,000 has been contributed toward this year's $300,000 objective.

The LISTENING EYES SCHOOL FOR THE DEAF conducts intensive training of deaf or hard-of-hearing children from infancy until they are able to attend public school, and also has a local training program for parents.

The METROPOLITAN and MCCLUNG BRANCHES of the YMCA help develop young people mentally, spiritually and physically through recreation and guidance programs for boys, girls, men, women and family groups.

The UNITED CEREBRAL PALSY CENTER has a program of therapy and instruction to help cerebral palsied children and adults reach their full potential.

MUSCOGEE and RUSSELL COUNTY RED CROSS organizations meet the emergency needs of military personnel and dependents, verify emergency situations, and conduct first aid and water safety training, provide disaster relief and a blood program to supply local hospitals.

If a contributor designates a particular agency to receive his or her donation, the amount will be credited to that agency and toward the dollar goal of the group in which the agency is organized. Undesignated dollar goal. Undesignated funds remaining dollar goal. Undersignated funds remaining after the goal of each group has been fulfilled will be distributed among the groups at the discretion of the local Federal Coordinating Group.

Consult your unit or organizational CFC keyperson today for your contribution card.

Withdrawn Korea units given homes

Two units being withdrawn from Korea have been given new homes in the U.S., Secretary of the Army Clifford Alexander Jr. announced recently.

The units will be arriving at new installations in December, Army officials said.

Current plans are to temporarily station the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry, a 2nd Infantry Division combat unit, at Ft. Riley, Kan., pending a final stationing decision, officials said.

The 833rd Ordnance Company, not a part of the 2nd Infantry Division, will be reassigned to Seneca Army Depot, N.Y.

The temporary stationing of the 2nd/9th at Riley is still subject to environmental studies, officials added, but they cited several factors, such as the availability of barracks and support activities, that make approval of this temporary site likely.

Temporarily stationing the battalion at Riley will be necessary, officials said, because of delays in choosing a permanent site for the 2nd Division among four options: Ft. Bliss, Tex.; Ft. Benning, Ga.; Ft. Drum, N.Y.; or a combination of Ft. Dix, N.J., Ft. Devens, Mass. and Drum, N.Y.

Officials said a decision for a permanent home for the 2nd Division has been delayed because military and economic considerations warrant further study of site options.

Slated to return to the U.S. in late 1979 are another infantry battalion, an artillery battalion, a medical company, a maintenance company and an engineer company from the 2nd Division, along with a nondivisional engineer battalion, officials said.

President Carter announced last April that 2,600 non-combat U.S. troops would withdraw from Korea by the end of this year.

That announcement slowed original withdrawal plans and accompanied a request for added military assistance and equipment transfers to Republic of Korea Forces. (ARNEWS)

Coming home

The final group of personnel from the 608th Ordnance Company, 67th Maintenance Battalion, 36th Engineer Group (Cbt) returned Oct. 11 from a month-long Reforger in Germany. After debarking from the plane, members of the 608th "stand at ease" while their personal luggage is inspected for contraband.

West Point trains officers

The United States Military Academy overlooks the Hudson River, some 50 miles north of New York City, in West Point, N.Y.

Back in the Revolutionary War, this site was known as Fort Putnam, a strategic defensive point for the Colonials. But now the "point" is home for 4,000 future Army officers.

Many famous generals have completed West Point since the first two graduates in 1802.

Many changes have occurred over the years but the guiding principles of duty, honor and country still remain the stalwart traditions.

Academic and training programs are continuously updated to insure that the education offered by the military is of the highest quality. The most recent change was the admission of women into the corps of cadets.

The typical cadet day begins at six o'clock when they are awakened by reveille. Following breakfast comes cleanup details and study time before 7:30 classes. Cadets remain in class all day with only a brief morning break and the noon meal. The lessons are followed by participation in parades or athletic programs. Evening hours are set aside for study and preparation for the next day.

Social activities are not excluded. There are dances, intercollegiate sports, movies, concerts and trips offered to fill their free time.

Military training is certainly not forgotten either. The four summers that a cadet spends at West Point are used to train him in the skills needed as an Army Officer.

Christmas Crafts Workshop slated

A Christmas Crafts Workshop will be held at the Harmony Church Recreation Center from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. on Oct. 24 and 25.

Mrs. Susan Harmon, a craft's instructor at Columbus College and a local hobby shop, will teach participants how to make table and door ornaments, hanging baskets, 3-D pictures, doll draping, quilting and many other decoration and gift items.

You must bring your own supplies. Therefore, you must decide what you would like to make before the workshop. You may get some ideas by visiting the local hobby shops or by calling Mrs. Billie Smith after noon at the Harmony Church Recreation Center, 544-6754/6423. 'aShe will have a list of the required supplies for various items.

New OER system is on the way

A new evaluation report system for Army officers is on the way. Army Chief of Staff General Bernard W. Rogers announced the approval of a new system, which is set to go into effect about Oct. 1, 1979.

Rogers said the new system has the potential for doing a more credible job than the current 67-7 (report).

All officers would get a final report under the current system prior to going to the new system, Rogers disciosed. He said such a final report would "ensure a degree of fairness that was lacking when we changed systems in the past."

MILPERCEN is the project agency for the new system.

The new procedure is expected to incorporate a number of features not a part of pervious systems. Highlights include:

A. Participation by the rated officer. The rated officer will be able to provide his point of view on his job by describing his duties, responsibilities, and objectives at the beginning of the rating period. At the end of the period, the rated officer will also get a chance to comment on how well he has achieved his objectives.

B. The current system of having a rater, indorser, and reviewer will be changed. The new system will use a rater, an optional intermediate rater and a senior rater. DA officials expect most officers will be rated by only two individuals, the rater and the senior rater. The senior rater will play a very important role in the evaluation system.

C. DA will maintain a senior rater profile, which will permit comparison of a specific rating and the normal rating tendency of the senior rater. The senior rater's rating history will be tracked and made available to boards and managers.

D. The new procedures will emphasize inreased communication, development of subordinates, and the setting of objectives.

E. The new system will vigorously support Army personnel management programs. DA officials expect a greater focus on open channels of communication and "constructive problem solving."

F. Officials say the new report system will also increase administrative accuracy by simplifying such items as the accountability of rating periods. The rated officer will review and authenticate administrative data.

The new system will use three forms:

A. A rating form. DA Form 67-8, essentially a revision of the current form. However,the new form will not use a numerical score.

B. A support form, DA Form 67-8-1, which will provide input from the rated officer, and provide for discussion between the rater and rated officer.

C. A tracking form, DA Form 67-8-2, which will clock the rating history of senior raters. (ARNEWS)

Building better bridges

586th on the road again

155mm howitzer towed by a 2½T truck loads onto a reinforced Class 55 M4T6 raft.

By Marti Henderson

The 586th Engineer Company (Float Bridge) went on the road again, this time to Fort Bragg, N.C. to support the ARTEPs of the 20th Engr Bn (Cbt) of Fort Campbell, Ky. and the 27th Engr Bn (Cbt) (Abn) of Fort Bragg. The 586th supported the 20th Engr Bn in a hasty night assault crossing with 15-man assault boats and the next morning (Friday the 13th) crossed rafts from their sister company, the 902nd Engr Co (FB) of Fort Belvoir, Va. All rafts involved in the deliberate river crossing were powered by 27-foot power boats provided by the 586th.

The support provided by the 586th is a follow-up of a much larger mission which involved a week long ARTEP and five weeks of training last spring at Fort Bragg. Evidently the training of last spring paid off as all the river crossings went smoothly.

The men of the 586th Engr Co (Float Bridge) are always ready and willing to support tactical bridging operations almost anywhere. Next week they begin training on the Ribbon Bridge. The 58th is the first CONUS float bridge company to get the new bridge.

According to 2nd Lt. Pete Wiedenbeck, a platoon leader at the 586th, "The primary advantage of the ribbon bridge over the M4T6 is the ease of construction. We should be able to bridge the Chattahoochee River in less than 1/10th of the time it took with M4T6 and with no support."

Use gasoline wisely!

Make five gallons of gasoline do the work of six! It's easy when you know how. All it takes is some willpower — and following the tips:

Your Car

- Keep the engine in tune. Check plugs, points, fuel and air filters and emmission control devices.
- Keep tires inflated to the maximum recommended pressure.
- Prevent gas-tank overflow by not filling it to the neck.

Plan Ahead

- Select the best route in terms of distance and type of highway.
- Travel light and avoid using a car-top rack. The less weight and wind resistance, the better the mileage.
- Combine short trips, such as visits, errands and shopping.

Your Driving

- The most economical speed varies from car to car. Therefore, find and maintain the moderate, legal speed that is best for your vehicle.
- Accelerate smoothly and gradually; fast "get aways" eat gas.
- Anticipate traffic signals to minimize stop-and-go driving.
- Maintain a steady speed as traffic permits.
- Build up speed before reaching an up-hill grade, not on it.
- Turn off the engine if you must park for more than a minute.
- Reduce long warm-ups by driving slowly at first, rather than idling a cold engine.

In the U.S., in 1977, there were over 100 million registered carts. These cars use 12 percent of total energy consumption.

Fossil fuels provide 95 percent of the energy we use today. These fossil fuels include coal, oil and natural gas. (1977) are exceptionally intelligent. Some of us are less so. Many of us are well educated. Others only have a high school education. Military personnel come from all over the country, from all kinds of backgrounds — wealthy and poor.

If the American people want a quality armed force, able to defend this country with no equal, then the American people are going to have to pay for it. Our country will never sustain a strong volunteer force if Congress is allowed to continue to reduce military benefits. Only by working together, not as enemies, can military and civilian Americans alike, achieve this dream.

VA stresses support for Vietnam veterans

"Human beings can cope with tremendous stress if one thing is present — the support of others. Without it, the ability to deal with stress is a lonely and often losing battle."

Those are the words used recently by Max Cleland, Administrator of Veterans Affairs, on accepting, in his name, the dedication of the book, Stress Disorders Among Vietnam Veterans, edited by Dr. Charles R. Figley.

Cleland said Figley's book will broaden understanding of why VA and the public must continue to provide support for Vietnam veterans.

Figley, a professor at Purdue University and Director of the Consortium of Veteran Studies, said the theme of the book is the war isnot over for thousands of men who served during the Vietnam War.

"Obviously, the war is not over for Max Cleland," Figley said. "This book is dedicated to him, not for the position he holds, but for what he has experienced."

Cleland, who lost both legs and his right forearm in Vietnam, said that Figley's book is the beginning of real and professional anaylsis of what the war meant to those who made it back.

"I know Chuck does not mean to tar all Vietnam veterans with the same brush. The majority came back, picked up their lives and moved on. This may be the greatest test of the veterans' courage that has been shown," Cleland said.

The publisher, Brunner/Mazel, of New York City, describes the book, two years in the making, as "providing the first comprehensive report of the long-term psychological effects of Vietnam on those who fought there and came home."

The dedication ceremony attended by Sen. Birch Bayh (D-Ind) and Rep. Floyd J. Fithian (R-Ind), several service organization representatives, and Figley's associates and family, was held recently at VA Washington headquarters.

In closing the reception, Cleland said, "The book documents the breaking and the hurts of the Vietnam era in the right places."

Army scientists get act award

A $20 thousand Special Act Award was presented recently to a team of 12 Army civilian scientists from the U.S. Army Armament Research and Development Command's Benet Weapons Laboratory. Watervliet Arsenal, N.Y. Secretary of Defense Harold Brown presented the monetary award.

The award recognized the team's development of a simulated test firing method to determine the safe firing life of cannon barrels. The simulated method replaces a major portion of costly test firing used to determine how long cannon barrels can be used before metal fatigue makes them unsafe.

The scientists receiving the award were: OR. Thomas E. Davidson, Laboratory Director; Bruce B. Brown and Albert N. Beiner, Research Mechanical Engineers; Donald C. Winters, Research Electrical Engineer; George E. Sogoian and Joseph Wide, Mechanical Engineering Technicians; Abraham Rubin, Stephen J. Ball; John F. Williams, Bruno Grestini, and James F. Kelly, Physical Science Technicians; and John J. Zalinka, Electronics Technician. (ARNEWS)

Pasturized plane

Pfc. Susan M. Jones, flight engineer, closes the door on the former queen of the Army aviation fleet, a U-8 Seminole, as it prepares to leave in the pre-dawn darkness for Arizona, where it will be put to pasture. Twenty-year-old Jones is within a few days of being the same age as the plane. The plane completed its final mission Oct. 11, when it was used to fly soldiers' paychecks to Benning in time to meet mid-month payday.

Because domestic production of crude oil falls short of our needs, the U.S. has to import almost half of it. At 1977 rates, this costs us $45 billion per year.

Professor Safety says

Some disposable diapers may pose a choking hazard to babies, a Seattle pediatrician warns. Dr. John Sterner says that some diapers are made with a removable plastic strip that covers the adhesive fastener on the diaper until it is used. The plastic strip must be removed to use the diaper, and an absent-minded parent may leave the strip near the baby. In one case a child almost died after picking up a plastic strip and swallowing it. Sterner recommends that parents purchase diapers that do not have a plastic strip over the adhesive. (Courtesy of Family Safety Magazine)

National bass tourney ends today

By Seth Hamilton

The National Military Bass Fishing Championship that began the Lake Point resort area on Lake Walter F. George Wednesday ends today.

The tournament features fishermen representing every branch of the Armed Forces. The fishermen, who came from all over the country, had to win state and regional championships to be eligible for this tournament.

Among those representing Fort Benning are Sgt. Maj. Robert Babcock, Directorate of Secuirty; 1st Sgt. John Campbell, 121st Aviation Company, 34th Medical Battalion; Sgt. 1st Class John Hester, Airborne Department; Command Sgt. Maj. Pat Croley, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, The School Brigade; 1st Sgt. (Ret.) Don Strickland and 1st Sgt. (Ret.) Robert Billman. The team of Babcock. Campbell and Billman finished third in this year's state bass tournament.

Fishing began each day about 30 minutes before sunrise and weigh-ins started at 4:30 p.m. Under a new rule, all bass that are still alive after weigh-in are placed back in the lake. Tournament director Lt. Col. Harry Hall estimates about 80 percent of the bass caught are being thrown back.

Fort Benning's free fall parachute jump team will perform during today's championship.

The Lake Point resort area, located at the intersection of the Cowikee Creek and U.S. Highway 431, serves as tournament headquarters.

This flag-receiving was part of the 1978 bass fishing championship opening.

The Lavoie Cowboys' fired up defense stymied the 49ers offense while the offense scored 25 points.

Outstanding Cowboy offensive players were Rickey Sullivan and David Christian; defensive standouts were Pete Mazur and Hardy Lundy.

Outstanding offensive players for the 49ers were Xavier Lee and Jeffrey Elliot; defensive standouts were Lee and Andre Bowen.

Buccaneers.....26
Falcons.....7

The Main Post Buccaneers overcame the Main Post Falcons to move into second place in their division.

Offensive Buccaneer standouts were Antoine Owens (4 TDs) and John Hattle; defensive standouts were Gerald Sayles and Shane Harlow.

The Falcon's only score was by Jay Harris on a QB keeper with Tom Wellman scoring the extra point; the best defensive play came from linemen Randall Eggre and Tony Rice.

TERMITE DIVISION

Golden Eagles.....40
Redskins.....0

The Tri-City Golden Eagles blitzed the Redskins 40-0.

Scoring for the Eagles were Davie Vereen, Anthony Bruce and Peter Marshall with one TD each; and Phillip Florence with three TDs. Extra points were scored by a Marshall to Gary Phillips pass and Marshall on a run. There were two quarterback sacks by Michael Holmes to lead the defense, assisted by James Gee and Richard Martinez.

It was the Eagles' homecoming game with the king, Pete Marshall, presenting the queen, Tammy Smith, with flowers.

Cowboys.....6
Raiders.....0

The Lavoie Cowboys notched another win by zipping the Raiders 6-0.

A lot of spirit was added to the Cowboys' offense by John Newby and Kevin Smith; for the defense, it was Pee Wee McIntyre and Barry Fox.

Leading the Raiders' was Reggie Tillman and Eddie Cavallers; the defense was a team effort.

PEE WEE DIVISION

Pirates.....8
Crusaders.....0

A 45-yard John Darr pass to Robert Hymes resulted in an 8-0 victory for the Tri-City Pirates over the Crusaders.

Defensive stalwarts for the Pirates were James Darr and Robert Lyons.

Napoleon Robinson led the Crusaders' offense, while John McCon added strength to the defense.

Patriots.....28
Eagles.....6

Jimmy Johnson and Darien Tucker scored two TDs each to lead the Main Post Patriots to a victory over the Main Post Eagles.

Outstanding Patriots' defensive players were Bobby Walls and Chris Valentine.

MIDGET DIVISION

Colts.....28
Falcons.....6

The Lavoie Colts upset the division-leading, and undefeated, Main Post Falcons with a 28-6 victory.

The Colts' offense was spearheaded by Rick Barnett and Keith Gerrald; defensive standouts were Greg Jenkins and Shelby Shipman.

SENIOR DIVISION

Crimson Tide.....8
Demons.....6

Benning's Crimson Tide defeated the Demons 8-6 in a tight defensive battle.

The Demons scored early in the first quarter when Michael Cole slipped past the Tide safely for a 40-yard pass.

Late in the fourth quarter the Tide mounted a 60-yard drive which resulted in a score when quarterback Kelly Deneen ran around the right end for eight yards. Dexter Jones fought three tough yards for the go-ahead extra point conversion.

The Tide stalled a Demon drive deep in Tide territory with seconds left in the game.

Standouts for the Tide were Ira Thompson and Tom Dinnell on defense and Dexter Jones on offense.

Demon's offensive standouts were Michael Cale and Robert Burke; defensive accomplishments were a team effort.

The win brought the Crimson Tide's season record to 2-1 and a tie for first place with the Demons.

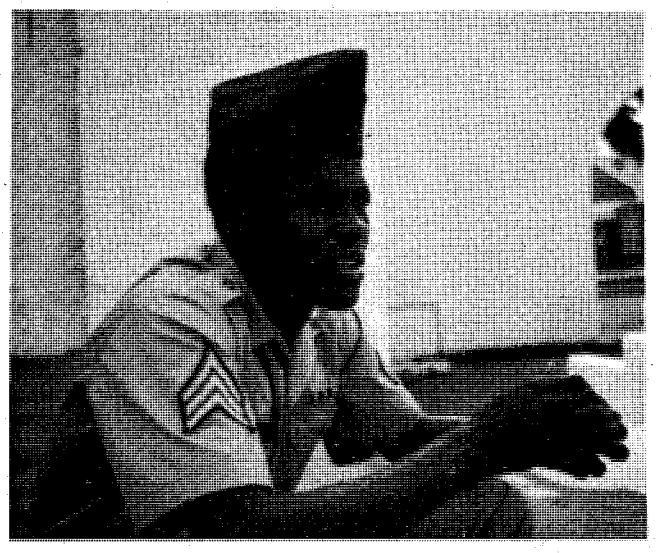
Determination, work athlete's key to success



Wendell Angel looks to the future with positive prospects for the Pan-American games next year.

By Julie Casey

Determination, work and self-motivation have proved to be quite an asset for Wendell Angel, who finished third in the 400-meter hurdles with the time of 51.3 seconds at the Counseil du Internationale Sports Militaire (CISM) games in Finland.

Angel competed against top world athletes, many of them Olympian veterans.

Angel also ran the first quarter of the mile relay in 46.9 seconds, helping the U. S. Army team to edge out Germany with a time of 3 minutes and 8.3 seconds over Germany's 3 minutes and 8.6 seconds.

The CISM games are an international competition between the Armed Forces of the world.

Angel also made the finals in the 110-meter high hurdles and the 400-meter dash.

"My coach wanted me to run all those events. He told me that the team needed the points. He asked me which was more important — my standing in one event or the team's standing in the CISM games," commented Angel.

Apparently Coach Jessie Lescomb, known as "The Whip," was right because the U. S. Army Team placed second in the CISM games.

Angel commented, "I loved it (the CISM games). I just wish I could have done better. I'm going to keep on training and training. My next goal is the Pan-American games and to place in the top five of the National AAU (Amateur Athletic Union) meet.

I want to achieve my goals and the only way I can do this is to believe that I can. I do believe! I have a motto, "My only limits tomorrow are my doubts of today."

Swim meet slated

By Jim Tillman

The Barracudas, Fort Benning's AAU swim team, will be competing with some of the state's best swimmers during the Columbus College Invitational Swim Meet to be held October 28 and 29. 300 swimmers from all over Georgia will represent the 12 teams entered in the two day event. The meet will begin at 9 a.m. on both days at the Columbus College pool and promises to be quite a challenge for the Barracudas.

The 'Cudas, coached by Rick Fagersten, will enter 25 swimmers in the multi-event meet. The team members, ranging in age from 6 to 18-years-old, will be competing not only for first place in their individual events, but to improve their AAU time and swim class standings.

"This is one of the biggest meets that the Barracudas will enter during the 1978-79 short course season," Coach Fagersten explains. "We will be traveling to Atlanta Nov. 4 and we will have several more meets scheduled for this winter."

Although the season has begun for the Barracudas they are still looking for new members to replace the ones who are not swimming the winter season and those who have departed from Fort Benning. Anyone wishing to swim in AAU competition should contact Coach Fagersten at 682-1833 or stop by the Briant Wells pool between 4:30 and 6 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Ruggers win game

In the cool, clear weather of last Sunday, the Fort Benning Army Rugby Team achieved their third win of the season over a small Georgia Tech team.

Although the record reflects three wins and three loses, only one of the victories was achieved on the field against the Atlanta Rugby Football Club (RFC) near tne beginning of the season. The other two victories concerned both Fort Campbell and Georgia Tech, when they forfeited the games due to the lack of players and were not willing to play short as per the ruling of the Georgia Rugby Union.

A change to the schedule for this weekend has been made, in which Benning will have a game against the Albany RFC tomorrow at 2 p.m. on Stilwell Field.

Come on out and watch the last of the true amateur sports.

DYA registration open

Registration for Dependent Youth Activities (DYA) basketball, boys and girls, will be conducted at Bldg 1054 on Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. through Nov. 15.

Boy's League is open for ages 8-10, 11-12, 13-14, and 15-17-years-old.

Girl's League is open for 8.11, 12.13, and 14-17-years old.

Registration fee is $10 for first child, $7.50 for second child, $5 for third child, and thereafter free.

An I.D. card, passport or birth certificate is required. Firt come, first serve basis.

COACHES ARE NEEDED!

JROTC team takes trophy

Scoring 1255 points, the Spencer High School JROTC Varsity Rifle Team, coached by Gordon Burke, won the annual fall outdoor match at Fort Benning's Parks International Range recently.

The high individual schooters trophy was won by Cadet David Cannella, Spencer High School, who fired 273 points.

Other JROTC teams finished in the following order — second place, Hardaway High, 979 points, and third place, Columbus with 870 points.

Women's tryouts slated

Tryouts for the post women's basketball team, the Doughgirls, will be held at Audie Murphy Gym Saturday and Sunday at 9 a.m.

For further information, call H.A. Baines at 544-1362.

Soccer team victorious

A well-disciplined Fort Benning youth soccer team proved last night that they still have it, despite an opening loss to Hardaway by 3-0.

From the opening kickoff, Benning showed Hardaway that they would not be beaten and an early Benning goal helped fire them up. The hard-charging Hardaway team tried to muscle their way into the Benning goal but ran into a solid Benning defense at mid-field.

Determination, hustle and teamwork sums up the 4-0 victory, with goals scored by Allejandro Illescus, Henri Pare, David Courtney, Richard Buller and an entire team effort.

Albany leaves Doughboys looking for first victory

By Seth Hamilton

The Doughboys are still looking for that elusive first win of the season. They put together their best offensive showing of the season but it wasn't enough as they lost to the Albany State Rams 35-33 Saturday night at Doughboy Stadium.

The Doughboys jumped out to an early 13-0 lead as tailback William McCall put on a one-man offensive show. After catching a long pass from Joe Duenas on the game's first play, he dashed 15 yards to the Rams 21-yard line. Then, following a Dave Williams reception on the Ram's 3-yard line, McCall ran it in for the touchdown.

On the next set of downs, the Doughboys marched from their own 4-yard line to the Ram's 22 before a Duenas pass was picked off in the end zone. That gave the Rams a first down on their own 20, but they fumbled the ball away on the first play from scrimmage. It didn't take the Doughboys long to capitalize as a few plays later Duenas hit McCall with a 6-yard touchdown pass. After the kick the Doughboys led 13-0.

The Rams proved they wouldn't roll over as they rallied back with two quick scores in the second quarter to make it 14-13 at the half. They came out charging in the second half and scored three unanswered touchdowns in a ten minute period to make it 35-13.

But the Doughboys weren't ready to be rolled either as they put together three successful scoring drives of their own and had a chance to tie the game on the most important play of the game.

Having just scored to make it 35-33 Rams, the Doughboys had to make a two point conversion play from the Ram's 3-yard line to tie the game up. Duenas faded back for a pass but the Rams broke through the line and sacked him for a loss. The Doughboys had come three yards short of breaking their winless streak at seven games.

Regardless of the final score, the Doughboys once again proved they can compete against good college teams. Doughboy coach Jack Barham stated that, "Most of the college teams we're facing have extensive football programs behind them including large coaching staffs, scouts, scholarships for the players and 20-25 hours of practice time per week. On the other hand, the Doughboys are only able to practice about seven hours a week and we have no scouts." He added, "The Doughboys are not exempt from duty time to practice. Everything considered, they're doing a great job."

The Doughboys will have that first win in their sights when they take on the Fort McClellan Volunteers (0-3) at Doughboy Stadium Saturday night at 7:30. Everyone is urged to come out and root the Doughboys on to their first victory the season.

Benning Birthday Runs

Tom Coniglio and Dave Fields breezed through the 10-mile race Oct. 6 during the Fort Benning Birthday Runs. Coniglio and Fields completed the run in a respectable 54:50 and 54:52.

Doug Vermillion followed in a close third with a 55:13 time.

Through the summer, 37-year-old Fields has been keeping a low profile on the racing scene because of the Georgia summer heat. Two weeks before the run he commented, "I have been allowing those young bucks to pass right on by making sure some old man such as myself doesn't slip by."

The weather is cooler and race times showed he and other runners are also getting the moth balls out. The first 10 runners to complete the 10-mile broke the 60-minute barrier.

Catherine Elliott, Doris Rock and Marilyn Hicks finished first, second and third in the women's division with times of 1:17:49, 1:18:49 and 1:18:52.

In the five-mile run, Wendell Angel and Bernard Pheiffer struggled the distance side by side in fierce competition placing first and second with times of 28:20 and 28:23.

Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey, post commander, easily won his age group with a time of 37:52.

The running events were started off by a two-mile novice run for women. Kathleen O'Neal won the event with a time of 18:18.

Hearing from many sources, everyone was happy with their times and many made personal records.

Callaway Gardens Marathon
November 11

The race everyone has been training for is on the horizon. The Callaway Gardens Marathon will be held Nov. 11 starting at 10 a.m.

Sponsored by the Atlanta Track Club and Callaway Gardens, a 20,000 meter race and a full marathon will be run concurrently. The marathon is certified by the AAU.

Both races will start at Robin Lake Beach Pavillion. To reach the beach pavillion enter through the beach gate.

There is a $2 entry fee to get into the park and a $1 race entry fee. There is no pre-registration. All registration will be done the day of the race.

Trophies will be awarded in both the 20,000 meter race and the marathon. T-shirts will go to the first 250 finishers in the marathon.

Callaway Gardens is located north on US Highway 27. Use the beach entrance.

For further details and registration forms contact Steve McWilliams at 1352 N. Highland Ave., Atlanta, Ga. 30306 or call (404) 876-5663.

Kinnbrew's-American Road Race

Americus runners were greatly impressed by Fort Benning runners during the Americus 5-mile Road Race Sept. 30. Five Benning runners placed in the top ten of the total 230 participants. Tom Coniglio lead the way placing second with the time of 26:16. Dave

Dave Fields

Fields placed fourth over all and first in his age group with the time of 26:47. Wendell Angel, Dale Barnett and Bernie Phieffer placed 6th, 9th and 10th with times of 27:22, 27:57 and 28:10.

Other runners who competed were: Rich Rowe—28:36, Paul Cormier—29:10, Peter Topp—29:40, Joe Rodriguez—30:01, Fred Dyer—30:18, William Schuller—30:40, Rich Hooter—33:36, Mike Stevenson—34:56, James Gallagher—34:58 and Jim Trimble—36:26.

1.1-Mile Run

Phenix City is sponsoring a 1.1-mile race Sunday at 2 p.m. Runners will be asked to estimate their time, and the one who comes closest will win a $25 gift certificate. The race will start and finish at the Roy Martin Recreation Center, and will loop around Idle Hour Park. On hand for the event will be Auburn University's Harvey Glance. Glance, a native of Phenix City, was a member of the U.S. 440-relay team that won a gold medal in the 1978 summer Olympics at Montreal. There is no entry fee — just come and run.

CHAMPUS introduces first new claim form

The first in a series of new claim forms has been introduced by CHAMPUS officials who predict it will significantly reduce the number of claims returned to beneficiaries for additional or correct information.

Designated CHAMPUS Form 500, the 8½" x 11" form will be used by both CHAMPUS and CHAMPVA beneficiaries for non-institutional care from civilian providers such as physicians, pharmacies, medical suppliers, medical equipment suppliers, ambulance companies, and laboratories. It will replace DA Form 1863-2, "Services and/or Supplies Provided by Civilian Sources (except hospitals).

Non-institutional claims account for about 70 per cent of all claims processed by CHAMPUS Contractors.

CHAMPUS Form 500 features clear, detailed instructions, particularly for troublesome areas that are likely to cause confusion. Several information elements have been included which will greatly assist the Contractor in processing a claim speedily.

At present, approximately three out of every ten non-institutional claims are returned to beneficiaries for additional or correct information, according to CHAMPUS Director Joseph C. Rhea.

"Whenever a claim must be returned, processing is delayed and this, in turn, slows down any payment due," Rhea said. "We believe the new claim form will minimize the possibility of errors or omissions if instructions are followed carefully."

Although limited quantities should be available shortly, it is expected that the new form will be generally available by early November. Individuals with access to the new form are encouraged to begin using it immediately, but CHAMPUS Contractors will continue to process non-institutional claims received on the old DA Form 1863-2 until February 1, 1979.

Other new forms in the series will be introduced at a later date. An announcement will be made when they are available.

Welcome

Col. Ernest Harrell, commander, 43rd Engineer Battalion, 36th Engineer Group gives an Orientation Briefing to incoming personnel at the Sightseeing Road Chapel. The Orientation Briefing included a tour of Fort Benning and was also opened to all the wives of the new personnel to help assist them in understanding the duties and missions of their husbands.

Local AUSA chapter wins Objectives award

The Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the U.S. Army (AUSA) was presented the National Council of Trustees Award for the Chapter Most Active in Pursuit of AUSA Objectives during opening ceremonies of the 24th National AUSA Meeting held Monday at the Sheraton Park Hotel in Washington, DC.

Bethel Edrington Jr., president of the local chapter, accepted the prestigious award on the chapter's behalf.

The Council of Trustees Award is based on all projects, meetings and other activities sponsored by AUSA chapters. Lemuel T. Downing Jr. of Phenix City was chapter president during the awards period.

The local chapter was also named runner-up in the Council of Trustees Award for Best Chapter Overall and the Best Newsletter competition.

On Tuesday, the local chapter held Hospitality Night, when more than 500 guests, including top military and congressional leaders, were welcomed.

The local delegation, made up of more than 30 attendees and headed by Edrington and Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey, post commander returned yesterday.

AUSA to host reception

The Columbus-Phenix City - Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the U.S. Army (AUSA) will host a reception for potential West Point candidates and their parents at the Follow Me Golf Course Clubhouse at 6:30 p.m. Sunday.

The purpose of this function is to host young men and women interested in attending the Military Academy, and their parents, at a social gathering designed to provide timely information about the Academy.

The evening will include a social hour; a presentation by Lt. Col. Jere K. Forbus, USMA Public Affairs Officer; West Point films; and a question and answer period.

There will be available literature provided by the USMA Admissions Office and the West Point Preparatory School.

36th Gp leaders in EO seminar

Key leaders of the 36th Engineer Group (Cbt) participated in an Equal Opportunity (EO) "executives information seminar" last Friday. This seminar was taught by Lt. Col. Paul G. Polk and Command Sgt. Maj. Elijah Fields, EO, HQs FORSCOM, Fort McPherson, Ga., at the request of Col. Robert A. Ayers, commander, 36th Engr Gp.

The purpose of the seminar was to discuss the history of Equal Opportunity in the Army and also recent program changes to better support the chains of command.

Post CofS commends NCO Wives Club here

By Donna Hale
and Jo Lynn Allen

The Non-Commissioned Officers Wives Club was honored on Oct. 11, when Col. Addision D. Davis III, Infantry, Chief of Staff took time from his extremely busy and demanding schedule to address the club members at their general membership meeting.

He commended all the members for their outstanding programs and the many hours they have unselfishly contribuedd to making the Fort Benning/Columbus Community a better place in which to live. It was indeed a honor and pleasure to be recognized by such a distinguished visitor and unequivically made the many long hours of volunteer service worthwhile. For all the members, thank you — Col. Davis for your laudatory remarks.

NCOWC Bazaar

The date of the NCOWC Bazaar is Friday, Nov. 3, at the Top 5 NCO Club beginning at 11 a.m. You won't want to miss it, the members have really been busy preparing some beautiful crafts. The various booths will consist of, crafts, Christmasy, plants, candy, baked goods, and white elephants. A hand made quilt and afghan will be some of the door prizes. Keep watching this column for more information on the upcoming fabulous NCOWC Bazaar.

NCOWC Membership Drive

Don't forget ladies, the NCOWC membership drive is in full swing. If you are not a member you're missing out on a good opportunity to be helping the Fort Benning/Columbus Community and also enjoying social functions. Why not call our membership chairwoman, Mrs. Delores Gardner, 687-7512 and join now? We need you.

Flu shots to be given

Soldiers here will be immunized against three different types of flu viruses during the annual influenza immunization program.

Shots will be administered here on much the same basis as they were last year, according to Col. Joseph Bartley, chief, Preventive Medicine Activity. Bartley added the program probably won't get underway until after Nov. 1, following the arrival of the vaccines and formal planning for administering vaccinations.

Following the recommendations of the Armed Forces Epidemiological Board, two flu vaccines are being obtained for administration to soldiers.

Basic trainees will receive both shots, a vaccine against the 'A Type USSR virus and another three-in-one vaccine against the A Type USSR, A Type Texas and B Type Hong Kong viruses. All other soldiers will receive a single shot of the three-in-one vaccine.

Dependents, civilian employees and other non-military beneficiaries will receive vaccines as recommended by the U.S. Public Health Service.

Claims change hands

Blue Cross of Southwestern Virginia will process all claims for professional and institutional care received in Indiana and Kentucky by CHAMPUS beneficiaries, according to DoD officials.

Blue Cross of Southwestern Virginia was selected on the basis of competitive bidding. The organization submitted the best overall proposal for administering payments of CHAMPUS claims for the two states, according to DoD officials.

Affected CHAMPUS beneficiaries should begin submitting claims to Blue Cross of Southwestern Virginia. The address is P.O. Box 13828, Roanoke, Va. 24834. (ARNEWS)

Abortion funds restricted

Effective midnight Sept. 30, and until further notice, abortions paid for by DoD appropriated funds are restricted to the following:

- Where the mother's life would be endangered if the fetus is carried to term;
- Where necessary for victims of rape or incest provided the rape or incest has been promptly reported to a law enforcement agency or public health service;
- Where two physicians have determined the mother would suffer severe and long-lasting physical health damage if the pregnancy is carried to term;
- Where medical procedures are necessary to terminate an ectopic pregnancy, i.e., gestation in the fallopian tube, etc.

CHAMPUS claims for abortions performed after midnight Sept 30, will not be paid unless they conform to criteria a-d above.

Claims for abortions performed prior to the 30th will be honored regardless of the new restrictions.

According to sources at DA, the congressional restrictions do not prohibit any woman from seeking or obtaining abortions for any reason. However, abortions outside the new criteria must be paid for through other than DoD appropriated funds.

This interim policy applies to the CHAMPUS program and also to the Army Medical Department's Health Care System. (FORSCOM)

Aviator shortage initiates study

The Army this week launched a study to review proposals for solving a shortage of active duty company grade aviators, according to DA officials.

The Army is projecting a shortage of active duty company grade aviators in Officer Speciality 15 (general aviation), an official said. At the same time, he added, many field grade officers hold this specialty.

Because combat aviation units require a large number of company grade officers, the official explained, a short-term solution to the problem (and one that a study group is examining) is placement of more field grade aviators in captain aviation positions.

The reason the Army has too few company grade aviators and too many field grade aviators, the official added, stems from attrition of the large Vietnam-era aviator strength. After 1972, he said many company grade aviators left the Army or were promoted to major. At the same time, he said, a directed cut in Army flight training programs occurred during the Vietnam phase down.

One alternative to filling these company grade positions, the official remarked, is to lift the restriction that lieutenants serve between 24 and 60 months in their basic branch before they qualify for flight training.

"There are very few lieutenants in the (training) program now," the official said, "Because many do not meet the 24-60 month time requirement."

An additional consideration the study group will examine, the official said, might allow lieutenants to apply for flight training immediately after basic branch course completion.

The aviator shortage is limited to Officer Specialty 15, the official stressed, and does not affect aviation material management, test or medical evacuation aviators.

The study group will also examine commissioned aviator officer career programs that "Could have a far-reaching impact on Army aviators," according to officials.

The official declined to provide exact figures, saying that they aren't an accurate reflection of the actual shortage. But he allowed that the projected active component, company grade aviator strength is "less than authorized."

The study group's report is expected to be completed before the end of the year, an official said.

Cadet promoted

North Georgia College Cadet Karen M. Reinke, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Robert Reinke, chief, PMO, has been promoted to the rank of cadet major for the 1978-79 school year. Cadet Maj. Reinke is assigned to the brigade staff and will serve as the Intelligence and Information Officer for the college's 450 person Corps of Cadets. She was selected for the promotion by the college's Military Review Board on the basis of military performance, academic achievement and peer evaluation. North Georgia College is one of the nation's four senior military colleges.

Spending money to save

By Betty Zimmerman

Spending money to save is happening in the Directorate of Resources Management (DRM).

During the FY 1977, DRM spent $68,022 in the Quick Return on Investment Program (QRIP), which means within two years they will save $38,356 above the original cost. There were no funds available in FY 1978, but things look better for FY 1979.

The goal of QRIP is to recover the potential savings that are often lost due to long administrative delays during the normal budgetary review process and competition from higher priority mission requirements. In other words, the QRIP office can authorize and expedite purchases of equipment for agencies which can show that they are needed now and will save money both in dollars and personnel.

Examples of items considered for QRIP funding are copy machines, word processing machines, laundry equipment, offset duplicating systems and mechanized filing systems. The cost must fall between $1,000 and $100,000 and the item must be off-the-shelf commercial equipment requiring minimum modification to become fully operational.

Some examples of equipment not eligible for procurement are stock fund items, medical equipment, OMA end items, aircraft, missiles, and tactical or commercial vehicles.

Purchases through the QRIP program can be combined with ideas for cutting costs and hence submitted to the suggestion program for individual monetary awards.

Check AR-5-4, effective Oct. 1, 1976, for details and then contact Capt. Dennis Fricke, DRM, 545-4358/1018 for assistance.

More moving time for some

Soldiers who must attend a school, while TDY and just before making a PCS move, may be given 10 days, in addition to leave and travel time, to move and resettle dependents, DA personnel officials said last week.

The 10 "free" days are avilable in three of four options soldiers will have when they attend DA directed TDY schooling in conjunction with PCS, officials said.

The four options will be available upon approval of the Army'a FY 79 budget request, expected to take effect this week.

The four options are:

1. Soldiers with dependents in government quarters may leave dependents in these quarters until they complete TDY, then receive 10 added days to move them before PCS. This option is allowed if soldiers are moning within CONUS or from CONUS to an overseas station.

2. Move dependents from a CONUS or overseas station to a CONUS station before TDY and receive 10 extra days to resettle dependents.

3. Return to present CONUS station after TDY and move dependents, residing on local economy, to any new duty station and receive 10 added days before required to report to a new station.

4. Clear any present duty station before going TDY and have dependents accompany you to the TDY station or another location at personal expense. Arrive at any new station as scheduled and receive dependent travel reimbursement based on the most direct route between stations.

These options are available to both officers and EM, but EM who are sent TDY as a requirement for their new assignment, such as Airborne, Ranger or Special Forces training, may not choose options two or four.

Officials also pointed out that these options do not apply to soldiers attending civilian schooling in a "permissive TDY status."

Soldiers alerted for combined TDY and PCS moves should be counseled about these options. Questions should be referred to localMILPOS.

Benning exchange participates in Army survey

Fort Benning's Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES), was one of four post facilities who participated in an Army pilot retail price comparision conducted by the A.C. Nielson Co.

The individual markets surveyed, in addition to Benning, were Fort Dix-McGuire AFB, N.J. area, Fort Lewis-McChord AFB, Wash. area and the San Antonio area.

In the pilot study, approximately 150 active and retired military personnel were interviewed in each market to determine which retail stores they shopped. Based on these interviews, Nielsen's local market observers checked prices at 48 stores in Columbus, Ga., serving Benning and 41 stores in the Tacoma, Wash. area around Fort Lewis and McChord AFB. Fifty-three stores in the Wrightstown, N.J. shopping area serving the Fort Dix-McGuire market and 48 stores in San Antonio were surveyed.

In all, 3,203 comparitive prices were collected in the civilian stores in August, and "prices of the day" (including specials and other promotions) were reported for comparison against identical items sold by AAFES.

Neilsen called AAFES prices "very competitive" and said the survey showed that prices were higher on only nine percent of the observations and that 89 percent of the observations were lower; two percent the same.

The A.C. Nielsen retail price comparison survey showed these results in the four areas where the survey was taken:

Location	Savings
Fort Dix-McGuire Area	25 percent
Fort Lewis-McChord Area	23 percent
San Antonio Area	22 percent
Fort Benning Area	19 percent

Overall savings by department showed the highest savings tended to be on specialty-type merchandise, and the low savings items were in those departments where the retail industry traditionally operates at a low gross profit. By department the savings are as follows:

Department	Savings
Clothing and Linens	30 percent
Tobacco	26 percent
Household items	24 percent
Stationery	24 percent
Jewelry	23 percent
Toiletries	14 percent
Food and Beverages	13 percent
Automotive	13 percent
Sundries (i.e., Toys, Photographic Electronics, Sporting Goods)	11 percent

Energy saving device to be installed at Eustis

A computerized control system is helping to save energy at Fort Eustis, Va. In addition, utilities are monitored for such things as excessive boiler pressures, fire hazards and fuel use.

The $6-million system is being installed in three phases. Each reportedly will pay for itself within six years in energy, manpower, and equipment savings.

For example, the system is set to keep certain buildings at 78 degrees Fahrenheit. But, should power use exceed an established rate, air conditioning, fans and unused lights in some buildings are cut off automatically.

Most people won't notice the cuts, a spokesman said. Air conditioning will never be off more than 30 minutes.

Using the system is the idea of a former sanitary engineer who came to government from industry. Now chief of the Eustis utilities division, John Roth, Jr. is seeking to escape "World War II technology."

The system is monitored 24-hours-a-day to diagnose problems, send out mainteance people, and/or shut off systems as needed.

Johnson Controls Inc., a world-wide firm, is the contractor.

Where do I go from here?

The following story was written by a Fort Benning chaplain.

About five years ago, while serving on the staff of a large downtown church, a young man came to see me. He was just out of the city stockade. He wanted to try to pick up the pieces and see what he could make of life. He told his story. He had moved to Atlanta from a small town. He had grown up in a strict, narrowly religious home. In the city were bright lights, things to do, places to go. He made some acquaintances, and began to move about. Some of these acquaintances were less than wholesome. The first thing he knew he was in jail for speeding, drukenness, assaulting an officer, obscene language in public, and a variety of other things. He learned that a man cannot do wrong and get by. He wanted to rebuild his life, and he asked me the question where do I go from here?

I shared with him that afternoon several principles that I think helped him answer that question for himself. I told him first that he needed to examine his life — take a solid look at his abilities and decide what were his strong points and what were his weak points. I reminded him that this was the advice given by Socrates when he said, "Know theyself," and that this was the beginning of success.

Secondly, I suggested that once he determined his best abilities that he needed to discipline those abilities. He knew the meaning of the word discipline because he had grown up on a farm and he remembered the discipline that was required for the raising of a crop. He admitted that he had forgotten the meaning of the word since coming to Atlanta, and that he had come to hate the word.

I told him of the time when I was watching the Master's Golf Tournament from Augusta, Ga. On one occasion during that telecast one of the participants hit a ball which went right down the fairway, between narrow rows of trees and landed in the green just inches from the cup. "Luck! What a break!" the people shouted. After the game, the sportscaster was interviewing the player and questioning him about "luck." The player responded by saying that he started practicing for that shot when he was six years old. This golfer knew the meaning of the word discipline, and I reminded my friend that he needed to re-learn that word.

Thirdly, I told him that he needed some motivation. I reminded him that the great contributors to life are those who are strongly motivated — they want to make something out of their lives. On the other hand there are those who say, "I don't want to be great; I only want to be comfortable." I reminded my friend that if he was going to start over that it was absolutely necessary for him to have a desire to make something of himself.

Fourthly, I suggested that there be some enthusiasm. I reminded him that there was no substitute for hard, enthusiastic work no matter what his ability might be. I shared with him the story of the Irish uncle who told his nephew as he was leaving home to seek his fortune. "Now Michael, my boy, just remember the three bones and you'll get along all right." Someone standing near by was curious and asked the Irishman which bones he was talkinh about. The Irishman responded "The wishbone, the jawbone, and the backbone. It's the wishbone that keeps you going after things. It's the jawbone that keeps you asking the right questions. It's the backbone that keeps you at it till you find it." How true — the need for enthusiasm.

Fifthly, I suggested the need for imagination. I reminded him that imagination is desperately important in using what abilities he had to the fullest extent possible, and that it was very important that he not lose sight of awe, wonder, and inquisitiveness.

Finally, I suggested the need for aspiration — the need for some power greater than his own. I told him that this power would make him better at whatever he tried to accomplish with his abilities. With this source of power, the very best would be brought out of him.

This young man was searching for a way to start life over again, and these were my suggestions to him. You may be interested in knowing that this person is doing quite well now in California. He has a job as an office manager of a small company. I hear from him several times each year, and we finally talk about the conversation we had five years ago.

I share this formula with you as a suggestion in answering the question, "Where do I go from here?"

Key staff changes announced

By Betty Zimmerman

Col. Richard W. McKee takes over today as deputy post commander. He is replacing the retiring Col. Robert E. Nelson Jr. who was Fort Benning's assistant commander. The job now has a new title and additional duties.

McKee has been the Director of Personnel and Community Activities at the Infantry Center since May 1, 1976. His replacement will be Col. Richard W. Brown, former Chief, Combat Support Division, Command and Tactics, U.S. Army Infantry School.

Nelson, who has been assistant commander since Aug. 17, 1977, will make his home in Midland, Ga. following 28 years of Army service.

He received a B.S. Degree in Business Administration and an ROTC commission from North Georgia College in 1950. Nelson reported to Benning in 1977 as deputy chief of staff and became assistant commander on Aug. 17, 1977. His awards include the Bronze Star Medal, the Army Commendation Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster, the Vietnamese Staff Service Honor Medal, the Purple Heart and the Combat Infantryman's Badge.

Doughboys to play

The Fort Benning Doughboys will host the Carson-Newman College Junior Varsity Eagles 7:30 this Saturday night at Doughboy Stadium.

The Doughboys won their first game of the season last week against Fort McClellan Volunteers 25-7.

Nelson gets key

Col. Robert E. Nelson, retiring post assistant commander, was presented the key to the City of Columbus at the Metro council meeting Oct. 24 for his work as the commanding general's representative to the Metro government for community relations, and as Post liaison officer to the mayor and the Metro council.

In making the presentation, Mayor Jack Mickle stated this was the first time the key had been presented to a post liaison officer.

CFC total rising

More than 80 percent of Fort Benning's objective of $300,000 for the Tri-Community Combined Federal Campaign (CFC) had been realized as of Wednesday, bringing the total collected in cash and payroll deduction pledges to more than $240,000.

The CFC is being conducted among all military and civilian personnel in the Fort Benning; Columbus and Phenix City area. Donations will help support 46 humanitarian organizations under United Way, International Services and National Health agencies in the local areas.

By giving through the CFC, the donor may make a blanket contribution to be divided among all the agencies, or he may designate his contributions for a specific agency.

Program to air

Fort Benning's monthly news and features TV magazine, Fort Benning Concern, airs tomorrow night at 6 on WYEA TV, Channel 38.

Reports this month include anti-tank training, Reforger 78, The Colonial Band, Fort Benning's 60th birthday, service schools and the baggers dispute being settled at the commissary. Specs. 4 Syl Underwood and Kirk Dorn are the hosts.

Fort Benning's latest Soldier of the Quarter (SOQ) is Sgt. David Libersat of the 3d Ranger Co., TSB. Like many of the SOQ winners, Libersat was surprised at being chosen for the award.

Libersat, an instructor, teaches future Rangers the basics of hand to hand combat, PT, land navigation and techniques of patroling. But as an instructor, Libersat has to specialize in all aspects of Ranger training.

In a ceremony held Wednesday at Bldg 4, Libersat received a U.S. Army Infantry Center Certificate of Achievement. He also received an Association of the United States Army (AUSA) Certificate with a one year membership, a $25 savings bond from the National Bank of Fort Benning, $25 from the Ledger-Enquirer, a watch from the AUSA, a

Don't be haunted by hazards this Halloween

By Carol Pinckney

October is the month of Halloween, a favorite holiday of the youngsters, but often a worry for their parents. Here are some tips from school authorities and the police on how to insure that your children have a safe holiday, as well as a few ideas for alternative forms of celebration.

Stay off roads

The greatest danger to children on Halloween is the automobile. Drivers have difficulty seeing the children because it is dark, the children are small and many are wearing dark costumes.

To alleviate this danger, please see that your children stay off the road as much as possible and they they cross at intersections rather than in the middle of the block. Remind them to look in both directions before crossing.

It is preferable that children go trick-or-treating in groups, rather than alone, and that they carry a flashlight to more easily see and be seen. If their costumes are dark, put reflectorized tape on the costume where it is certain to be seen. Plan the route and have them stick to their plan. Very young children should be accompanied by a teen or an adult, not just a slightly older child who is also trick-or-treating.

Beware of treats

The second greatest danger to children is, sad to say, poisoned treats. People with sick minds have been known to place pins, needles, fish hooks, drugs, and laxatives in trick-or-treat candy. Encourage your children to refrain from eating their treats until they are home, except for those that come from people they know. Have them stay in their own neighborhood, and avoid the homes of known cranks. Tell them to go only to places that are well-lighted and avoid all darkened homes.

Trick or Treat hours on post are from 6 to 9 p.m. this Tuesday.

Once at home, examine all their treats. Unpackaged treats such as popcorn should be discarded. Fruit should be washed thoroughly and cut into small sections before eating. Examine candy bars closely. Needles and pins can be inserted through the wrapper without disturbing it. Candy with loose or torn wrappers should be discarded.

Choose costumes wisely

Other Halloween hazards include falls and fire. If your child's garment is too long, hem it up. If it has parts that unwind or come undone or a scarf that could work loose, secure these items with safety pins. Children running in excitement cannot be relied on to hold up skirts, etc. and that can result in a hard fall. Also be sure to turn on porch lights, and remove obstructions on your own porch for the safety of other children.

If you must have a jack-o-lantern with a candle in it, please place them high, and well away from curtains.

Home parties an alternative

Many parents are now choosing to hold Halloween parties in their homes. Bobbing for apples and spooky games are favorites that please modern-day youngsters as much as they used to please their grandparents. A new twist is to use the pinata, traditionally for Christmas-time. Stuffed with candies and small gifts they are equally welcome in October, and pinatas are surprisingly inexpensive. Parents who are nutritionally minded prefer home parties to trick-or-treating because they can make nutritious snacks sweetened with honey or molasses for the youngsters, and void the sugar over-dose that comes with Halloween.

But whichever way you choose to have your children celebrate, take the necessary precautions so that Halloween can be fun for the kids, and worry-free for you as well.
(Reprint from October 1978 COMMUNIQUE)

Keep those costumes simple

Anyone who has suffered through an evening in an illfitting tuxedo or an overly elaborate gown will tell you that a simple, well fitted outfit can't be beat. Children's Halloween costumes should fit just right. Correct fit cuts down on tripping and doesn't hamper your child's freedom of movement in case of danger.

Be sure your little child's costume is light or bright colored. Dark costumes may go unnoticed by motorists. No costume is complete without lots of reflective tape applied to front, back and sides. Tape the treat bag as well. Placing your child's name, address and phone number in the bag is also a good idea.

It is wise to avoid putting masks on trick-or-treaters. A mask greatly reduces a child's field of vision, blocking out traffic, stairs, curbs and other hazards. Instead, paint a face on with makeup.

Hems on trailing or loose costumes—for witches, ghosts and such—should be raised to reduce the danger of tripping.

Use only flame-resistant fabrics for costumes. Candles are frequently used as home Halloween decorations and are easily brushed against or overturned. Check ready made costumes for flame retardant properties, or buy treated fabrics for home creations. But avoid TRIS-treated fabrics: the chemical used to fireproof these materials has been identified as a substance that may cause cancer.

All trick-or-treaters should wear slip-resistant shoes.

Vets not affected by defoliant agent

The Deputy Surgeon General of the Air Force has told a Capitol Hill panel that it is unlikely that Vietnam veterans could have any current symptoms of exposure to a defoliant called Agent Orange, which was used during the Vietnam War. Major General G. B. Dettinger testified before a house subcommittee on veterans' medical facilities and benefits on Oct. 11.

In the ten-year period between 1961 and 1971, about 44 million pounds of the herbicide were used in defoliation operations in South Vietnam. Dettinger said the agent was used primarily for denying the cover of thick jungle foliage to the enemy, and that it was unlikely that U.S. troops were exposed to direct spray of the herbicide.

Ground combat forces did not usually enter areas treated with Agent Orange for several weeks after treatment, the general related, "Because defoliation did not occur until three or four weeks following treatment."

Agent Orange contains a highly toxic compound called Dioxin, Dettinger said, but environmental factors such as exposure to light could destroy Dioxin within a matter of hours.

Agent Orange has been used widely in agriculture in this country since the mid-1940s. From 1961 to 1969, Dettinger estimated the amount of Dioxin in herbicides used in the U.S. was four times as much as that used in Vietnam. The use of the herbicides "has not resulted in a documented increase in illness among users of the general population," Dettinger concluded. (ARNEWS).

Could this be you?

Several complaints have been received concerning foolish drivers who cut into the normal flow of traffic with a sudden lane change.

An area where this is occurring quite frequently is at the end of the Lindsey Creek By-Pass just before First Division Road exit. Errant and discourteous motorists speed in the left lane to pass the cars lining up in the right lane preparing to exit toward Main Post. The "nutty" motorists look for an opening and make a quick cut into the right lane.

This is a dangerous and an illegal maneuver defined by USAIC Regulation 190-5 as improper lane changing. The penalty is an assessment of three traffic points.

Perhaps more importantly than the penalty are the strong likelihood of setting up a probable accident and the blatant discourtesy to other motorists.

All motorists are encouraged to drive courtesouly and not conduct maneuvers which endanger other mtorists or themselves.

Motorists who observe traffic violations are encouraged to submit an observed violation report under the provisions of paragraph 20a, USAIC Regulation 190-5.

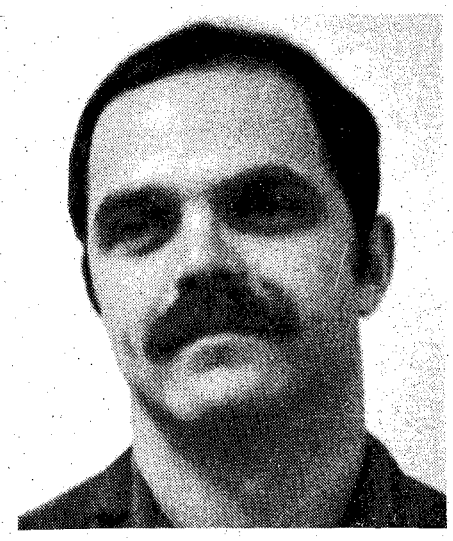
Glad you asked

Question—Should service members who prefer to follow special diets be authorized separate rations?

Sgt. 1st Class Truitt Breazeale, DTD, 10th Co., 1st Bn, TSB

"Yes. If a soldier is sure that he/she needs a special diet that the Army can not cater to, the soldier should be issued separate rations."

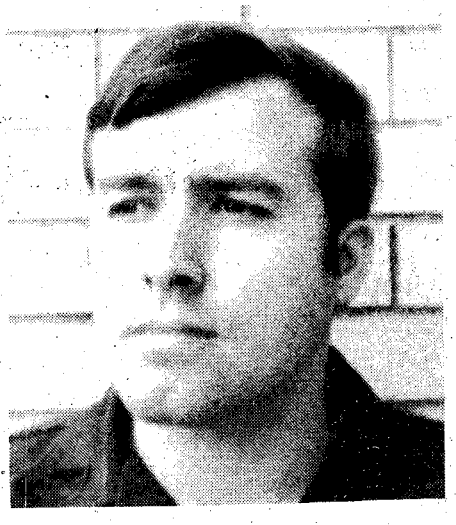


Staff Sgt. Dennis B. O'Kelly, Headquarters Co., Headquarters Cmd.

"Yes, I think it's justified for specific reasons such as health or religious beliefs. But there is a problem of control on the matter, which may be impossible to maintain. The answer to the problem could be for the individual concerned to coordinate directly with the mess hall supervisor and set up a special diet. The problem as a whole requires some special consideration."

2Lt. Kenneth Burkes, 10th Co., 1st Bn, TSB

"Yes. I feel if a person can't eat the food authorized they should be allowed to have separate rations. Some vegetarians can't eat the prescribed meals. Also over weight people should be allowed special diets. If a doctor prescribes a special diet, then provisions should be made to carry out those orders."



1st Lt. Nelson McGahee, 10th Co., 1st Bn, TSB

"If it doesn't conflict with the unit's mission, I feel that the serviceman should be authorized separate rations. Of course the CO should weigh each case individually."

Commentary

A tough row to hoe

By Ray Chattman

While hanging out in my company dayroom last week I heard something I hadn't heard in a long time: "Pity the poor lifer — he couldn't make it as a civilian."

I started to correct the guy who said it, but then I heard him say he was "short," and I knew I wouldn't get anywhere with an off-the-cuff reup talk anyway.

When you look at the overall scene, though, is it really the "lifer" that needs pity? I think not.

First, the saying is nonsensical. Why would someone drop out of civilian life when it's so much easier than the Army? Think about it.

Civilians on the average make more money, work fewer hours and don't have to worry about any extra duties or details after working hours.

Civilians sit back in their living rooms and watch the war on the 6 o'clock news, while the soldier has to sit in a field and worry about how close the next air strike will get to his foxhole.

It doesn't seem like a fair trade, does it?

But, to continue. The soldier has the difficult task of constantly moving around. It's rough on his family, and, if he doesn't make friends too easily, it's rough on him.

Job competition is just as tough in the Army as on the outside. Promotions are awarded to the deserving only after meeting requirements for time in service, time in grade, schools attended, job experience and job proficinecy — just as in any large corporation.

Now, people are always hearing about the benefits. Take travel. IT can be considered a benefit — in peacetime. But then, IBM has branch offices all over the world, too. Still, why would anyone want a transfer to the branch office on "Hamburger Hill' or to open a branch office in beautiful downtown Phnom Penh? I wouldn't.

The Army also offers job security. The pay may not be the best, but it is steady. The paid vacation is nice, too.But, with a little seniority any company will give you that.

Then there's retirement. In the Army you don't have to wait around until you're 65 to collect a check. You can cash in your chips after 20 years. A lot of people don't like that. They say it's too easy. But just ask a soldier who's served 20 years with a couple of wars sandwiched in the middle — and I've never heard of this country going for 20 years without involved in some conflict somewhere.

The soldier pays a high price for America's freedom — a much higher price than his civilian counterpart.

"Pity the poor civilian — he couldn't hack it in the Army."

Trainees show spirit

By Bob Crockett

The audience stood in response to the opening bars of the National Anthem. A few scattered voices began to sing along; then more joined until the whole audience was involved. The song ended with a rousing cheer.

What was the occasion? World Series game ? Nope. Super Bowl? Wrong again. NCAA basketball finals? No.

This singing was started by a few basic trainees at a Fort Knox movie theater as they were settling in for a Friday night show.

Cue cards? None in sight.

A drill sergeant in the audience? Probably not.

A pretentious display by impulsive trainees? Perhaps.

Mass hypnosis? Not likely.

The fact remains this happened in a small theater on an Army post in a country where such displays are supposed to be out of fashion.

It was a reminder that there are words to the National Anthem and that trainees, at least this group at Fort Knox, know them. That's no small matter. Their training gave them a spirit that affected those around them. It will also ultimately help shape them into professional soldiers ready to defend that for which those words stand.

Critics have called today's soldiers unmotivated, disruptive, unresponsive. Whether such accusations are true or false isn't the point. Trainees like these can and do turn out to be sharp, polished soldiers, given the proper training and time.

Will these trainees repeat this display during their four-year enlistment? Probably not. But this spirit of friendship and esprit de corps instilled by the training they've received is something they shouldn't forget. (TNS)

Amateur Art Contest slated

Kelley Hill Recreation Center announces its 10th annual Amateur Art Contest and Exhibition on Nov. 4-5. Entries will be accepted beginning Oct. 30 and the deadline for entries is Nov. 3, 7:30 p.m. No entries will be accepted after this time.

The show is open to all active duty and retired military and their dependents, as well as post civilian employees. Dependents must be 16 years of age or older.

There are eleven categories for judging as follows: charcoal, oils, photography, water colors, pen & ink, open media, pastels, acrylic, pencil, mixed media and sculpture. Only three entries are permitted per category, per person. Entry blanks may be picked up at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center (Bldg.#9079).

The judging will be held on Nov. 4, during non-duty hours. For further information, call 544-1721/3079.

Non-standard items to be axed Jan. 1

Effective Jan. 1, certain non-standard items will no longer be authorized for wear with the military uniform, according to Mr. N. L. Williamson, chief, Personnel Services Division, DPCA.

A message from the Chief of Staff of the Army, dated Aug. 25, states in essence: "Items which are not authorized by appropriate regulations may no longer be worn with uniforms after Jan. 1, 1979. Those non-standard items which are currently being worn may be continued to be worn but soldiers are advised not to purchase non-standard items."

Those items concerned are the wooley pulley sweater, red and blue baseball caps, the USAIC utility cap patch, shoulder tabs other than combat arms (green) and nameplates with other than black background.

Williamson stated that until Jan. 1, the wear of non-standard items is at the discretion of the commander. He added that the new regulation coming out will combine the proper uniform wear of the male and female personnel.

Professor Safety says

The average 60-year-old needs seven times as much light as the average 20-year-old to perform the same tasks, according to the American Optometric Association. The older person needs more light to avoid falls, burns, traffic collisions and other accidents. The older eye functions more comfortably under incandescent (yellowish) lights than under fluorescent (bluish) lights. (Courtesy of Family Safety Magazine)

Vocation Awareness Day scheduled Sunday

The Catholic Activity Center of Fort Benning is sponsoring a Vocation Awareness Day on Oct. 29. This will be an all-day event with guest speakers speaking at various post chapels during liturgical services.

The guest speakers are Father Dale DeNinno and Sister Eileen Magill from Pittsburgh, Pa. There will also be a cover-dish dinner and an instructional and recreational program in the evening at the Infantry Center Annex.

Father DeNinno will speak in the Harmony Church area at ITB Chapel #4 at 8 a.m. and at ITB Chapel #1 at 9:30 a.m. and in the Sand Hill area at the ITB Sand Hill Chapel at 11:15 a.m.

Sister Magill will speak at the Main Post Chapel at 9 a.m., Faith School at 10 a.m., Main Post Catholic Chapel at 11 a.m. and at the Sightseeing Road Chapel at 12:30 p.m.

Both Father DeNinno and Sister Magill will speak at the Main Post Catholic Chapel and 5 p.m. A covered dish dinner will be held at The Infantry Center Annex at 6 p.m. followed by the vocation program at 7 p.m.

For information, call 545-2054.

TSB officer receives award

Capt. Philip C. Rasmussen, 12th Company, 1st Battalion, The School Brigade, has been presented the Lutheran Lamb Award acknowledging his distinguished service as a Lutheran lay person developing youth through the Church and Boy Scouts.

The Lamb Award is a national award for Lutheran adults who are active in their church and participate in at least one civic youth-serving agency.

Less than 50 Lamb Awards are presented nationally each year.

The presentation took place at Rasmussen's home church (Peace Lutheran) in Billings, Mont. while he was home on leave Oct. 1.

He has just completed both Infantry Officer Advanced Course 2-78 and Ranger School. He was recommended for the award by Col. Robert Poydasheff, Staff Judge Advocate, and president of the Fort Benning District Chattahoochee Council, Boy Scouts of America.

Rasmussen is one of the youngest or the youngest person to receive the Lamb Award. He served as unit commissioner at Fort Benning and was instrumental in the development of the God and Country Religious Awards Program for the Chattahoochee Council.

Federal rates announced

The Department of Defense Wage Fixing Authority, Washington, D.C., has announced that new pay rates for federal employees in trades and crafts occupations had been approved.

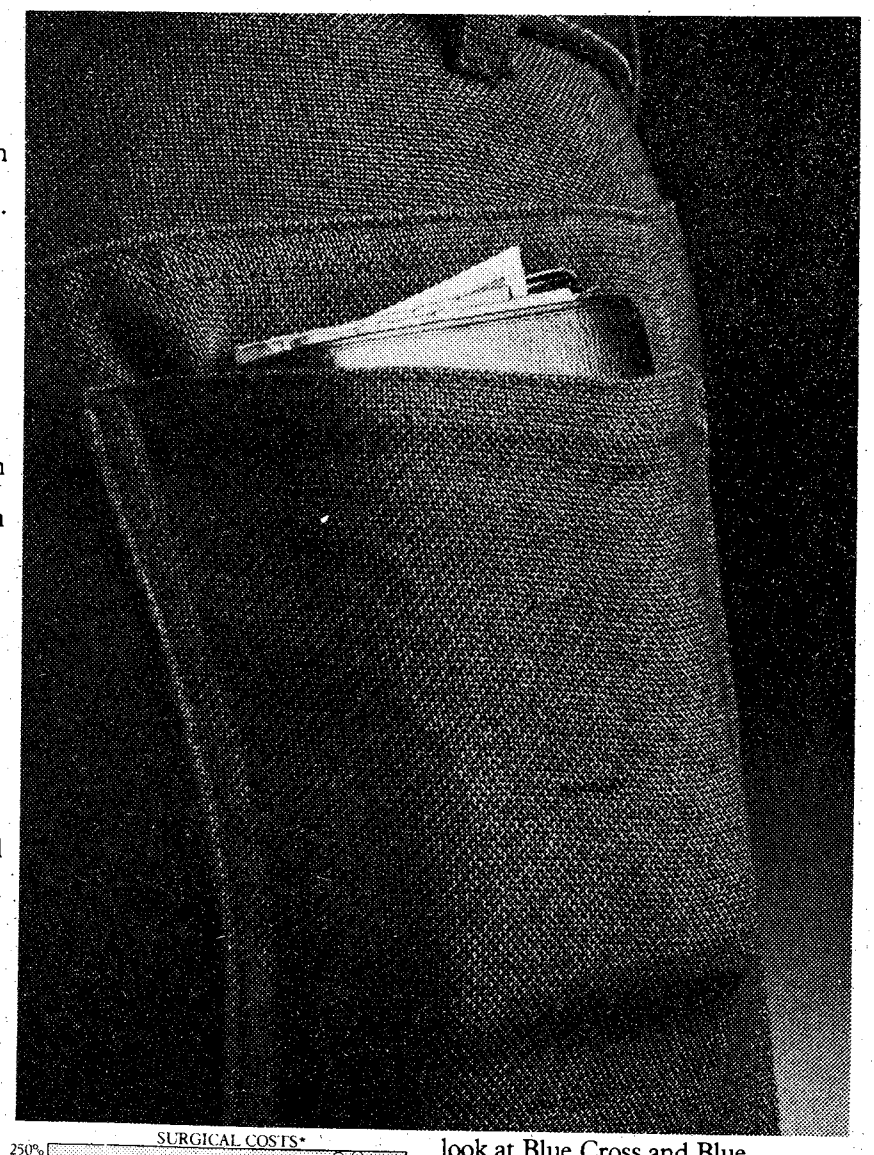
The average cents per hour increases for nonsupervisory employees is 32 cents, for leaders 35 cents, and for supervisors 49 cents. This is in line with President Carter's desire to hold government employee pay raises to 5.5 percent. The new rates are effective retroactive to Oct. 8.

These new rates apply to approximately 3,700 federal employees in the Columbus Wage Area (Eastern Alabama and Western Georgia). Fort Benning employs approximately 1,750 trades and craft workers, and, as the largest federal government employer, was tasked with conducting the survey of rates in private industry which resulted in the announced increase.

Employees of other government agencies affected by the pay increase include those at Maxwell AFB, Ala.; Veterans Administration Hospitals in Montgomery and Tuskegee, Ala.; Georgia and Alabama National Guard Units in the wage area, and Mobile and Savannah Engineer Districts.

TO ALL FEDERAL EMPLOYEES:

BUY CHEAPER HEALTH CARE COVERAGE AND THERE'S ONE PLACE YOU CAN REALLY GET HURT.



Right in the old wallet.

Which doesn't make much sense when you stop to think you wanted to save money in the first place. More often than not, though, you end up with an expensive mistake on your hands.

Because cheaper health care plans cost less for a reason. They often cover less. And pay less when it comes time to make a claim.

That's why the Blue Cross and Blue Shield program is worth so much—even when it costs more. It covers more.

Dollar for dollar, the high option Blue Cross and Blue Shield program is the best health care coverage you can buy.

HIGHER AND HIGHER.

That sums up the main problem with trying to save money on health care coverage. The cost of hospitalization and medical treatment has been on the rise for years. So far, the end isn't in sight.

Take the cost of surgery, for instance. As the chart shows, the total cost of common surgical procedure and required medical services has risen as much as 250% over the last ten years.

And that's why Blue Cross and Blue Shield Plans are working harder than ever with doctors and hospitals across the country. We've got to find ways to help slow down dramatically rising health care costs.

So when you buy health care coverage, take a long, hard look at Blue Cross and Blue Shield protection. You may not think the price is right today.

But when you need help, the Blue Cross and Blue Shield program is worth every dollar.

Carbon monoxide silent killer

Most people know vaguely that a gas called carbon monoxide (CO) is deadly, but few really know what it is or the surprising way that it works. No one can escape the threat of carbon monoxide. It results when a fuel containing carbon does not burn completely, usually because of insufficient air. Therefore, each time you burn coal, coke, oil, kerosene, gasoline, wood, charcoal, natural or manufactured gas anywhere, you have started a potential carbon monoxide factory.

Ventilation System

If the gases are directed harmlessly into the wide-open spaces by a heater's vent or car's tail pupe, you are usually safe. But if the system for disposing of CO breaks down and allows carbon monoxide to accumulate in a small area, you are in trouble. You are practically defenseless, for you cannot detect the gas. It is invisible, odorless, colorless, tasteless and creeps slowly into a person's bloodstream, rendering him weak and groggy.

Carbon monoxide sickens and kills by cutting off the oxygen supply to the body's tissues. The oxygen you breathe is carried from your lungs to all parts of your body by the red blood cells. When oxygen and CO are breathed in together the carbon monoxide, which combines with red cells 200 times easier than oxygen, displaces the oxygen. As a result you become ill and if oxygen is completely cut off, you die.

How can you determine if CO is present?

The symptoms of carbon monoxide poisoning are: tightness across the forehead followed by throbbing in the temples, headache, weariness, dizziness, nausea, loss of muscular control and increased pulse and respiration. If the concentration of carbon monoxide in the air is great enough, the victim may fall unconscious without warning.

Where are you likely to encounter carbon monoxide?

Most frequently in automobiles. Everyone has heard of motorists being asphyxiated while sitting in a running car in a closed garage or beside the road. Prevention of this type accident is easy: don't let a stopped car's motor run for more than a few minutes and even then keep windows or garage doors open.

Far less known and yet equally dangerous is being overcome by carbon monoxide while in a moving car. These accidents can usually be traced to failure in the automobile's exhaust system. The fault may be a blown gasket, loose manifold, leaky tail pipe, or holes in the muffler. Driving with the car trunk open or the rear window down on a station wagon are also dangerous.

All of these could allow gases to seep into the car instead of forcing them to the end of the tailpipe where they are dispersed safely into the air. That's why it can be lifesaving to have an exhaust system checked regularly and repaired promptly. Another way to protect yourself in both warm and cold weather is to drive with at least side vents open.

CO poisoning at home

At home carbon monoxide poisoning is caused the same way as on the highway, by faulty venting systems and lack of fresh air. The two important facts are: (1) All non-electrical heating or cooling equipment (except a cooking range) must have flue connections which vent carbon monoxide outdoors. (2) In order to burn efficiently and not produce quantities of carbon monoxide, this equipment must also have a good air supply.

Proper ventilation in the home is a must if you use gas or oil heat. This is especially true in the house trailer due to the limited air space and close fitting doors and windows. A faulty heater and insuffiecient ventilation is a deadly combination.

Remember, good air circulation is the best defense against the silent killer — CARBON MONOXIDE.

Soldier of the Quarter, Sgt. David Libersat, 3rd Ranger Co, TSB instructs a group in hand to hand combat techniques.

three day pass and exemption from the duty roster for 90 days.

Other gifts include dinner for two at the Le Chateau Restaurant, use of a new Chrysler for two weeks, courtesy of Dixie-Chrysler Plymouth, a Command Sergeant Major Certificate of Merit, a coin bank from the 1st National Bank of Columbus and a bayonet letter opener.

Libersat came to Benning from Fort Stewart where he was also stationed with a Ranger company. Since joining the Army in 1974, he has been awarded the Expert Infantryman's Badge, the Good Conduct Medal, the Senior Parachutist Badge and of course the Ranger Tab. He has also attended Pathfinder school and the Jungle Operations Training Center at Fort Sherman, Canal Zone.

He is currently attending classes at Troy State University and plans to go to Officer Candidate School here.

Libersat feels that the future of the U.S. Army depends upon the professionalism of the individual soldier. He adds that, "Every soldier should make it his or her goal to be as professional as possible."

Dedication

Flanked by an honor guard provided by the 1st ITB, Mrs. Jack L. Treadwell is escorted by Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey, post commander, at the dedication of Treadwell Barracks Oct. 19. The $7 million brick barracks complex, third of its kind to be built in the Sand Hill area, was named in honor of her late husband, Col. Jack L. Treadwell, a Medal of Honor winner.

Saving energy can be all-year round project

Saving energy can be an all-year round project. Lighting, housing care and landscaping can help reduce the amount of energy you use.

Thermal insulation installed in the attic can save on electric and heating bills. The side walls and unheated crawlspaces are prime spots for insulation.

Weatherstripping drafty windows and doors also helps cut down on heating costs. Cracks around window and door frames can be caulked.

Storm windows and doors can cut heating and air conditioning costs by 15 percent.

A solid-state television uses less power than a tube-type set. Also, a black and white TV uses less power than a color set.

On the southern and western sides of your home, plant shade trees and vines. They can provide protection against summer sun and let in the natural light during the winter months.

Florescent lighting is four times more efficient and lasts seven to ten times as long as incandescent lighting.

When decorating your home remember that light colors reduce the amount of artificial lighting needed in the rooms.
Dirt absorbs light also, so be sure lamps and lighting fixtures are clean. (TNS)

Soldier-artists sought

By Betty Zimmerman

Qualified soldier-artists are being recruited to artistically record military operations for the U.S. Army Art Collection. These works will become a permanent contribution to American military history.

The Army Artist Program is sponsored by the U.S. Army Center of Military History with support from the Office, Chief of Public Affairs. The post arts and crafts director will provide technical supervision and guidance to the Army Artist Program at installation level. This includes planning and assistance to the participants. They will also assist in obtaining, evaluating and recommending prospective soldier applicants.

Soldier-artists who are qualified and recommended will individually initiate application for the program through their unit commander using a disposition form. All of the particulars may be obtained from DA Circular 870-19, dated March 15, 1978, and Jack Stewart, arts and crafts director, will help if you call him at 544-4624.

Members and alternates for one or more artist teams will be selected from the applications submitted by military personnel who are qualified, recommended, and eligible for release to this special 120-day temporary duty assignment.

Applicants must be competent, artist-illustrators who have a sound foundation in life drawing, composition and color. They must be able to record military events and experiences pictorially and with strong emotional impact. Allied student repeats honor

By Deb Hilgeman

While most people would be happy if they could excel in one thing; an Allied student here excels at most everything he puts his hand to.

The latest accomplishment of 1st Lt. Courage E. Quashigah, a native of Ghana, was being named Distinguished Honor Graduate of Ranger Course 9-78. Quashigah was the only Allied student among the 127 members of his class.

In 1972, Quashigah graduated from the Royal Military Academy at Sandhurst, England as the Outstanding Honor Graduate. He was also named Best Overseas Cadet and received a special academic diploma, and placed number one on the written test in War Studies.

While at Sandhurst, Quashigah won the British Army Officer Light Heavyweight Boxing Championship.

Quashigah enjoys being in the United States and hopes to travel here before returning to his wife and two children in Ghana.

As for future plans, Quashigah says, "Since the Army is my career, my plans will be in accordance with that."

VA Q&A

Q — If I give a payment in cash for an overpayment to the veterans' representative on campus, what happens to the cash payment?

A — For your own protection, it is advisable that you pay by personal check, money order or cashier's check. The vet rep should issue you a temporary receipt and forward the money to the agent cashier at the VA regional office. It will then be deposited in the government fund.

Q — Are veterans with peacetime service eligible for VA domiciliary care?

A — Yes.

Amputee veteran heads VA Chaplain Service

A 40-year-old Army veteran who lost a leg in the fighting in Vietnam has been named to head the Chaplain Service for the Veterans Administration's Hospital System.

Rev. Corbin L. Cherry, a Methodist minister born in Norfolk, Va., is the first combat-wounded chaplain to hold that post.

In announcing his appointment, VA Chief Max Cleland said, "I can think of no one better qualified to counsel and inspire our hospitalized veterans than Corbin Cherry. He will provide inspiration to our patients as well as to the dedicated chaplains who serve them."

As an Army chaplain, Cherry was assigned at Ft. Bragg, N.C., for a year, served in Vietnam for a year, at Walter Reed Army Hospital in the nation's capital for an additional 12 months, and at the Letterman Army Hospital in San Francisco, Calif., for three years.

His military decorations include the Silver Star, Bronze Star, three Air Medals, two Purple Hearts and the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry.

Cherry was educated at High Point College in North Carolina and the Candler School of Theology of Emory University, Carolina and the Candler School of Theology of Emory University, where he received his Bachelor of Divinity degree in 1962.

Shirling watches Benning grow

By Julie Casey

If you are looking for someone that has been working at Fort Benning for 35 years and has watched the post grow into a huge thriving military community, Mrs. Margaret Shirling is the one to see.

Mrs. Shirling started working here Jan. 7, 1943 during World War II as a clerk typist at the hospital.

"Everything was real active. The streets were alive with traffic around the clock," she commented.

She explained that she has lived in Columbus all her life and only left once.

"After I graduated from high school I went to Atlanta and attended business school. I was living in a boarding house and I cried the whole time. The boarding house had nothing but old ladies living in it and I felt very alone. You know, it wasn't like it is now for young girls leaving home to strike it out on their own," she said.

Shirling came back to work at Benning for what she thought was only during the war.

"I really liked it here at Benning; everything was so military back then.

Before Latham (Maj. Gen. Willard Latham, former post commander) came, the post had become a playground with litter all over the place. He really straighted up the place. Fort Benning looks like an Army post again," she added.

The layoffs came after the war but Shirling stayed on for ten more years at the hospital and then transferred to Finance and Accounting Div. She has since risen to chief, Stock Fund Section, Accounting Branch.

"I really enjoy working and will probably just keep on working until I'm 65," she concluded.

Housing Act provides more dollars

The Veterans' Housing Benefits Act of 1978, H. R. 12028, has been approved by Congress and sent to the White House, it was announced recently by Rep. Jack Brinkley (D-Ga.), chairman of the Subcommittee on Housing and author of the measure.

Brinkley said the bill, when signed by the President, will substantially improve and update the VA housing programs to reflect rapidly changing conditions in the housing and lending industries.

"Escalating housing costs and interest rates have effectively shut veterans and active duty service persons out of the market in many areas of the country," Brinkley said. "This bill brings the VA housing programs up-to-date with the times."

The broadest impact will be felt from raising the maximum guaranty on VA home and condominium loans from $17,500 to $25,000.

Another provision of the bill equalizes the eligibility for GI home loans for Vietnam Era veterans to that which is required for World War II and Korean Conflict veterans.

The maximum grant to eligible disabled veterans for specially adapted housing will be increased from the present $25,000 to $30,000.

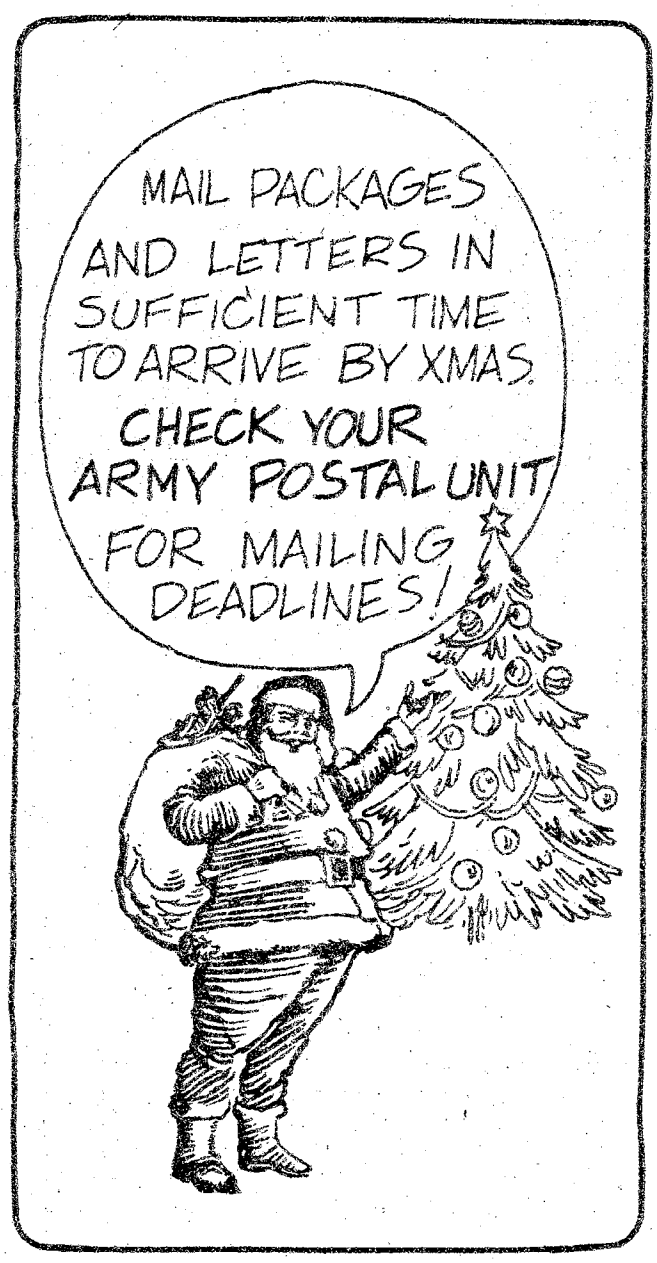
The Act restructures the VA mobile home loan program to more closely parallel the VA housing program for conventionally built homes and condominiums. It lengthens the life of these loans, and permits veterans who obtain them to use their remaining entitlement for another loan.

Inspection of mobile home plants by the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for the VA is also authorized in the bill. This along with other random inspections will assure compliance with standards of safety.

For the first time, converted condominiums may be approved for VA housing loans, and loans at higher rates of interest may be guaranteed for home improvements including solar heating and cooling systems. Brinkley, an advocate of energy conservation, said, "The energy measure was specifically designed to aid veterans in their conversion to more energy efficient homes without refinancing the entire mortgage."

In addition to housing measures, burial benefit programs administered by the Veterans Administration were also revised. Permission to pay a cash amount as reimbursement for the costs incurred by a veteran's survivors in acquiring a headstone or marker for placement in any cemetery, in connection with the burial or memorialization of the deceased veteran was granted to the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs.

A provision authorizing the VA to enter into 50-50 matching grant agreements with States to establish and/or improve State veterans' cemeteries is also written into the bill.



Cost-share requirement will increase for some

The Defense Department has announced that as of Oct. 1, dependents of active duty, retired, and deceased servicemembers are charged $4.65 per day for inpatient care at Uniformed Services hospitals. The previous charge was $4.40 per day.

New cost-share requirements went into effect on the same day for inpatient care received from civilian sources by spouses and children of active duty servicemembers under the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services (CHAMPUS). These individuals pay $4.65 per day with a minimum cost-share requirement of $25 if they are hospitalized for less than six days. Previously, they paid $4.40 per day, with a minimum requirement of $25.

By law, the inpatinet cost-share requirement under CHAMPUS for spouses and children of active duty servicemembers is based on the charge at Uniformed Services hospitals.

Inpatient charges at Uniformed Services hospitals are adjusted periodically to reflect changes in Uniformed Services pay. Previously, this adjustment was made at the start of a calendar year. Beginning this year, however, the adjustment will be made at the start of the fiscal year.

The increase from $4.40 per day to $4.65 per day is approximately the same percentage increase as the pay raise that went into effect on Oct. 1.

Armorers trigger AMU

By Tommy Pool

Any auto racing fan will tell you the key to a successful driver, or team of drivers, is the mechanics and pit crew. At the United States Army Markmanship Unit (USAMU) the men behind the guns, in this case the gunsmiths, are the key to winning by the Army Teams..

One of the Army's best, Lt. Col. Lones Wigger, a two-time Olympic gold medal winner, once said half of every gold medal or trophy he had ever won belonged to the armorers who gave him the edge with the best rifle on the line.

From routine trigger adjustment to a complete "overhaul," including rebarreling and matching specific loads of ammunition to a particular rifle, all are necessary to produce winning results.

Many of the individuals presently assigned to the USAMU are recognized as among the finest gunsmiths in America today. True masters of their craft, many of them will tell you that although they have been in the business for 20 years or longer, they still learn something every day. Finding out why a rifle or pistol doesn't perform the way it's supposed to is never ending and more often than not, they find it's for different reasons.

Youth Symphony started

Explorer Post 76, Fort Benning District of the Chattahoochee Boy Scouts of America Council, has started a Youth Symphony for teen-age musicians. The Youth Symphony will provide an opportunity for teen-age string musicians to perform with an orchestra.

A staff of well-qualified instructors will lead the symphony. The staff includes Ms. Barbara McPhail, a graduate of Columbus College and member of the Columbus Symphony, and Chris Johnson, also with the Columbus Symphony.

The Youth Symphony expects to start with an initial 50-60 young musicians. They will rehearse on Mondays in Bldg. 229, Crane Hall, from 7-9 p.m. Anyone wishing to audition or support the symphony is invited to attend.

Explorer Post 76's Colonial Band and Youth Symphony are sponsored by the School Brigade commanded by Col. Todd P. Graham. Senior advisor to both activities is Maj. Bill Drollinger.

North Georgia College seminar slated in Nov.

A representative of North Georgia College will visit Fort Benning on Nov. 7-8. Showings of a 22 minute film will be held in Classroom 51 Bldg 4, Infantry Hall at 7, 8, and 9 p.m. each evening followed by general discussions with interested persons.

If you would like to know more about the only coeducational, liberal arts, state supported, senior military college in the United States please plan to attend.

The opportunity to have a close circle of friends, to be a part of a Corps of Cadets with a 105 year history, and to compete in the only college intramural tackle football program in the U.S. may be just what you've been looking for.

For more information, call Maj. Sneed at 545-7112.

Veterans Day restored date

For the past few years, Veteran's Day was celebrated on the 4th Thursday in October. In response to requests by certain veteran's groups, Congress took action to restore Veteran's Day to its original date of Nov. 11 effective this year. (As this date falls on a Saturday, the legal holiday will be observed Nov. 10.)

Keep in contact with VA after separation from service

Veterans separated from military service may not hear from the Department of Defense until they finish their reserve commitment and receive a a discharge—but during the first six months following separation, veterans will certainly hear from the Veterans Administration.

VA cranks up a major information reinforcement effort as soon as DoD sendsword of a veteran's separation.

In its first letter to a veteran, VA encourages the service members to contact the nearest VA regional office—or a representative of a veterans service organization — for how to apply.

Follow-on mailings continue for six months. These tell the veteran how to get a GI home loan condominium and mobile home loans, plus information on insurance and educational programs.

Then, at the end of the six month period, the VA sends a round-up letter, reviewing and reminding the veteran of benefits. This is the timetable VA uses to inform new veterans, and VA Administrator Max Cleland hopes it will be the timetable veterans themselves follow in making the transition back to civilian life. He feels it is an excellent chart for setting and pursuing individual educational, vocational-training, and employment goals.

Here's a checklist for new veterans:

- On arrival at home register with local state employment service office. The longer you remain unemployed before you apply for unemployment compensation, the lower the rate.
- Within 90 days apply to former employer for reemployment.
- In 120 days (up to one year if totally disabled) convert Servicemen's Group Life Insurance to five-year Veterans' Group Life Insurance. By applying within 120 days of separation you don't need a physical examination.
- Within one year from date of notice of VA rating on disability apply to VA for service-disabled veterans' insurance (RH) based on qualifying service-connected disability.
- Within one year apply to VA for dental care.
- As soon as possible apply to VA for GI education or training. Eligibility extends 10 years beyond separation from military service, but not later than Dec. 31, 1989.

There are no time limits for veterans to:

- apply for GI loan guaranty to buy, build or improve a home.

Insurance guaranteed

Your Servicemen's Group Insurance (SGLI) gives you $20,000 worth of term life insurance. Coverage is automatically given to commissioned, warrant, and enlisted personnel on full-time active duty or on active duty for training for at least 31 days. Others covered unde SGLI are ROTC cadets attending field training and United States members of the Corps of Cadets performing full-time duty at the U.S. Military Academy.

A monthly deduction of 85 cents per $5,000 worth of insurance is deducted from your pay as your share of the premium; the federal government pays the balance. SGLI has no loan, cash, paid-up or extended insurance benefits.

For more detailed information see AR 608-2, Servicemen's Group Life Insurance (SGLI) — Veterans' Group Life Insurance (VGLI), or your personnel officer. (FORSCOM)

NCO Wives Club Bazaar scheduled Nov. 3

By Donna Hale and Jo Lynn Allen

Benning Ladies

I'm really getting excited about the NCOWC Bazaar now that the date is drawing near. I know you will be too when you see all the lovely things that will be for sale. For a preview of some of the bazaar items watch the Rozell Show on TV 3 Nov. 2. Why not mark Nov. 3 on your calendar and make plans now to be there? Bring a friend or neighbor with you and after you shop you can relax and enjoy the Coffee Shop.

The various booths will consist of Crafts, Mrs. Betty Daley; Christmas, Mrs. Gloria Dunlap; Candy Shop, with many different varieties of homemade candy, Mrs. Ann Cogar and Mrs. Rowenna Cherry; Plants, Mrs. Phyllis Rosziak; Ceramics, Mrs. Gerlinda Belcher, and White Elephants, Mrs. Lillian Sullivan.

Don't forget the door prizes. Remember the date, Nov. 3, Top 5 NCO Club from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. See you there.

NCOWC Luncheon

The NCOWC enjoyed their monthly luncheon at the Sheraton-Ralston on Oct. 19. Hostesses for the day were Mrs. Lois Cameron, Mrs. Lillian Lambert, Mrs. Ann Cogar and Mrs. Donna Hale.

Craft Day

Members met on Oct. 17 to finish up crafts for the Bazaar. They also enjoyed a demonstration on artificial flower arrangement given by Mrs. Sylvia Truett. She also demonstrated decorating wreaths and hearth brooms which the ladies found very informative. These items will be available at the Christmas booth the day of the Bazaar.

NCOWC Shopping Trip

The NCOWC is planning a Christmas shopping trip to Atlanta in November. What could be more fun than spending the day shopping in Atlanta? If you are eligible to join the NCOWC now's the time to join so you can enjoy this fun day. Call Mrs. Delores Gardner 687-7512 for more information on becoming a member.

OCS Mates Halloween Party

A Halloween party will be held Oct. 31 at the TSB chapel for wives and children of officer candidates in the 50th and 51st companies of the 5th Student BN, TSB. The chapel and ladies of the 51st Co are sponsoring the event. For further information please contact Gayle Terrell 689-6978 or Pixie Barton 682-0448.

Welcome Coffee

The next OWC Welcome Coffee will be held Tuesday, Nov. 7, at 10 a.m., in the OWC Lounge. Newcomers are cordially invited to attend. No reservation is necessary.

OWC Bazaar Reminder

Door prizes for the OWC Bazaar, Nov. 8, will be displayed at Bldg 4 from Oct. 30-Nov. 3. Be sure to go by and see the lovely gifts you will have a chance to win! For tickets to the Bazaar, contact Joyce Walsh, 689-1928, or your unit

Energy tips given

When you buy recycled goods, it helps stretch natural resources and saves on energy used in production — 25 percent less for steel, 20 times less for aluminum. (1977)

At a speed of 55 rather than 70 mph, you get 21 percent better gas mileage! The careful driver can get 30 percent better gas mileage than the average driver; 50 percent better than a careless one. (1977)

Summer temperatures (over 70 degrees F.) are better for fuel economy than winter temperatures. Rain, snow and the wet roads that result can cause an approximate 10 percent loss in fuel economy.

Doughboys win first game 25-7

By Deb Hilgeman

The Fort Benning Doughboys, pitted for the only time this season against Army peers, pulled off a 25-7 victory over the Fort McClellan Volunteers Saturday night in Doughboy Stadium for their first win of the season.

The Doughboys took an early 6-0 lead with a 1-yard run by tailback Willie McCall and held it till the final period.

In second and third quarter play, the defense was holding on both sides, prohibiting either offense from mounting any scoring drives.

Going into the forth quarter, the Volunteers felt a draft when Doughboy stalwart Arthur Hawkins ran over everything on the field to score three touchdowns in ten minutes.

The first scoring run was a Hawkins' charge through the center from the 4-yard line. Wallace Bowles added the extra point, putting the Doughboys ahead 13-0.

Three minutes later, the Doughboys parlayed a pass interception into a scoring run from the 9-yard line.

The Doughboys weren't through scoring, however, as Arthur Hawkins broke for 23 yards down the right side for the longest run of the game. The Volunteer's stormed the Doughboy line and blocked Bowles' try for the point after.

After eight straight losses this season, the Doughboys were long overdue for the 'thrill of victory.' When asked how he felt about the win, quarterback Joe Duenas said philosophically, "It beats the hell out of losing!"

The Doughboys next battle is tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. in Doughboy Stadium against Carson-Newman College junior varsity.

Turkey Shoot

The Cusseta Lions Club will sponsor a Turkey Shoot from 8 a.m.-6 p.m. Nov. 11. All proceeds will be used to sponsor an Elementary School Christmas Party.

Weapons will be furnished for $1.25. The shoot site is at the corner of Broad Street and Highway 27.

For further information call Cecil Smith at 545-3915/2841 or 989-3293.

Rugby team routs Albany

With six games behind them this season, the Benning Rugby Team used their experience to rout the Albany Rugby/Football Club 28-0.

The ruggers travel to Hilton Head, S.C. tomorrow to try and capture the High Spirits Tournament Cup. Last year, the Benning team brought back the second place trophy now on display in Bldg 4.

Ducks Unlimited

The Chattahoochee Valley Chapter of Ducks Unlimited (DU) will hold its annual membership banquet in the large banquet room at Ralston Towers on Thursday, Nov. 2 beginning at 7:15 p.m.

This year the banquet agenda includes a special multi-media audio-visual production in addition to reports from Lake Eufaula and Lake Seminole, an auction (including an expanded silent auction), and plenty of door prizes.

The admission fee of $30 per person includes dinner, annual DU membership and a chance on a shotgun. For children under 16, the admission price will be $15 to include dinner, a special drawing and membership as a "Green Wing."

DYA basketball sign-up

Registration for Dependent Youth Activities (DYA) basketball, boys and girls, will be conducted at Bldg 1054 on Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. through Nov. 15.

Boy's League is open for ages 8-10, 11-12, 13-14, and 15-17-years-old.

Girl's League is open for 8, 11, 12, 13, and 14-17-years old.

Registration fee is $10 for first child, $7.50 for second child, $5 for third child, and thereafter free.

An I.D. card, passport or birth certificate is required. First come, first serve basis.

COACHES ARE NEEDED!

Soccer team blanks Columbus

The Fort Benning youth soccer team, playing in the Bi-City League, defeated the Columbus team Monday night 8-0.

This expanded their winning streak to three in a row.

The Benning squad, with masterly teamwork, took command of the game from the opening kickoff and rarely allowed the Columbus team to cross the center line.

Goals for Benning were scored by Johnnie Inks (2), Terrance Thomas (2), Jorge Lucero (1), Mario Lucero (1), David Courtney (1), Henry Pare (1) and an entire team effort.

Pass, Punt and Kick Contest

Boys and girls ages 8-13 years old who are not participating in the Dependent Youth Activities (DYA) 1978 football or cheerleading programs are eligible to participate in the Pass, Punt and Kick Contest on Sunday, Nov. 5 beginning at 1 p.m. at Blue Football Field.

Proof of age is required prior to participation (I.D. card, birth certificate, etc.).

For further information contact or visit the DYA Center in Bldg. 1054.

Run For Your Lungs
November 4

Sponsored by the Georgia Society for Respiratory Therapy and the Atlanta Running Center, the Run For Your Lungs 5,000 Meter Road Race will be held at 10 a.m. on Nov. 4.

The run will start at the Urban Medical Center which is located just off Interstate 75 on Windy Hill Road.

Registration in advance is $3, and $4 race day.

T-shirts will go to all finishers. For registration forms contact Julie Casey at 545-7241.

National Peanut Festival 10,000 Meter Race

Al Hennigan lead the Fort Benning runners Saturday during the National Peanut Festival 10,000 Meter Race in Dothan, Ala. with the time of 38:25, finishing 31 in a field of 210 runners.

Jim Cambron also ran, placing 44 with the time 39:52.

Julie Casey placed first in the women's difision with the time of 40:29 and John LaVoie placed first in his age group (50 and over) with the time 40:39.

Getting It Right

In the Oct. 20 issue of the BAYONET we misspelled Shiela Hennigan's name. Shiela placed second in the 25-34 age group in the two mile Fort Benning Birthday Run.

Recruiting Command looking for athletic soldiers

The Army Recruiting Command (USAREC) is looking for soldiers who are highly skilled in sports. A USAREC sports clinic program may offer them the opportunity to demonstrate their talents to interested high school students in the U.S., Puerto Rico, American Samoa, Guam, Hawaii or Alaska.

The program was developed by USAREC to give high school students the chance to talk with soldiers in a relaxed setting.

"We usually set a 30-day sports clinic every quarter during the school year," said Captain Tim McKeever, information officer for the Southwest Regional Recruiting Command's advertising, sales, and promotion division.

"The soldier must be on active duty, he must be the best, or close to the best in his sport on the installation. He's got to be a sharp soldier, and, if he's selected, he must be released by his commander."

"A soldier participating in the clinic," said McKeever, "will be toy for at least 28 days."

In the past, sports clinicians from Ft. Sam Houston have had demonstrations in soccer, boxing, wrestling, martial arts, Olympic style weightlifting, body-building, archery, golf, fencing, volleyball, swimming, track and field, basketball and gymnastics.

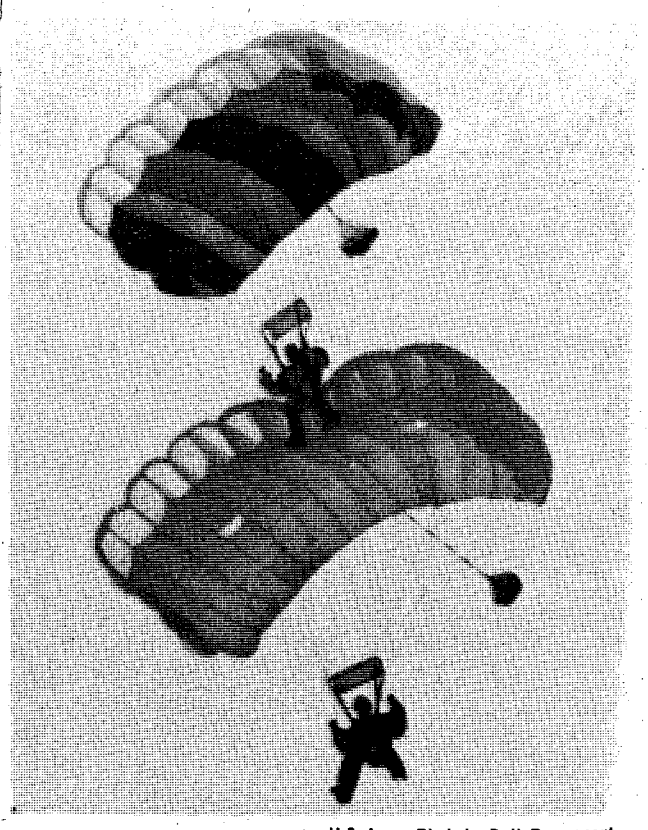
The standard procedure, according to McKeever, is for the athletes, generally two to a sport, to go into an assembly or gym class, and give a 30 minute presentation.

"The clinics are almost always well received," said McKeever. "We probably accomplish most of our worthwhile public relations during the breaks between the athletes' demonstrations."

"That seems to be when most of the students feel more comfortable asking questions about the sport, about the army, and about how the athletes feel about being in the army."

Skydivers stacking parachutes

Serious skydivers everywhere are enjoying a new dimension to freefall fun — canopy relative work. Just as skydivers can join hands in freefall to make complex formations, skydivers can fly their canopies together in a similar fashion.



U.S. Army Photo by Beth Davenport

Double Dipping?
Ron Murphree and Dee Falks 'double-up' for a landing on Fryar Drop Zone.

Still in its infancy, canopy relative work (CRW) was started on the west coast about two years ago. CRW only became possible with the advent of highly manueverable ram air parachutes, or "squares."

The high forward speed and unique lifting abilities of the square parachute enable its pilot to fly the canopy into the legs of another descending jumper. This forms a stack into which still other jumpers can join. The largest stack completed so far consisted of ten canopies.

Two skydivers of the Fort Benning Sport Parachute Club have introduced this state-of-the-art sport here. Ron Murphree, Corps of Engineers Area Office, and Dee Falks, Co B, 1/29th Rangers, TSB, recently completed the first canopy stack at Fryar Drop Zone. Although it looks dangerous, CRW is safe when properly executed. Murphree and Falks have completed several stacks at demonstration jumps on post and in the civilian community.

Canopy relative work requires expert knowledge of canopy capabilities and skill in flying it. Both pilots must know exactly what the other will do during link-up, or dangerous collisions could occur. Unlike freefall skydiving, which seldom lasts more than a minute, canopy relative work dives can take ten minutes or more. With CRW, a skydiver can work on aerial skills from exit to landing.

If you would like to see this interesting new facet of skydiving, come to any of the Fort Benning Sport Parachute Club operations or demonstrations. Jump operations are normally held on Wednesdays at 5:30 p.m. at Fryar Drop Zone.

Rangers finish phase 2

The Florida Ranger Division successfully completed the second phase of the great "Ranger Challenge Relay" Oct. 18. The 1st Ranger Company began running from Elgin AFB at six o'clock the morning before. They finished the 216-mile course in 30 hours and 15 minutes.

The course was divided into 44 legs of five miles each. A total of 53 personnel participated in the event. The fastest leg was completed by James D. Anderson in 29 minutes and 28 seconds.

The team was led across the finish line by Lynn Stevenson, the camp commander.

The baton is back in the hands of the Benning Ranger Camp. Earlier this year the 3rd Ranger Company stationed here ran the baton down to Elgin AFB in a record time of 27 hours. They must now make the long hard uphill track to the Dahlonega Mountain Ranger Camp. When the relay is completed after the baton is returned to Benning, approximately 1,000 miles will have been logged by the Rangers.

Some civil school obligations cut

DA has eliminated add-on active duty service obligations for soldiers attending civilian schooling programs of less than 20 weeks, according to MILPERCEN officials.

The change to AR 621-1, an official said, eliminates added service for soldiers attending less than 20 weeks of degree completion. Permissive TDY or cooperative degree programs at civilian institutions.

The change brings these schooling obligations in line with short course training programs that also exclude added service obligations for programs less than 20 weeks long, officials said. (ARNEWS)

Help fight vandalism!

Your help is needed. Every dollar spent on repairing or replacing things damaged or stolen by vandals is a dollar less that could have been spent improving the livability of your quarters.

It costs $99 to replace a street light globe, $50 to $60 to redo a road information sign and $40 to replace a window in family quarters. You as a taxpayer wind up paying for this vandalism.

The Military Police and other post officials strive to reduce the number of vandalism incidents on post. Your help in the fight against vandalism is needed.

- Make it a point to note strangers or strange happenings in your neighborhood. Report any suspicions to the MPs.
- Counsel your children on the seriousness of property destruction.
- Remember the dependent curfew. All dependents under the age of 18 will be required to be in their quarters after midnight except when accompanied by a parent or guardian. Unescorted non-dependents will not be allowed on post between midnight and 5 a.m. For curfew exceptions and clarifications see USAIC Regulation 210-5, Section X.

Bible Study series in full swing

The Lavoie Manor Chapel began its Community Bible Study series yesterday in the Lavoie Manor Community Life Center.

The group will consider the cycles of normal development and ways in which these cycles influence our religious lives as well as other relationships. In the weekly meetings there will be time for personal reflection and, eventually, planning sessions for positive change. The Bible will be used to explore various life stages of scriptural personalities comparing today's values and life styles.

Chaplain Darryl Goldman, the group leader, is currently finishing a doctoral dissertation on the Major Life Stages and Religious development at Emory University.

Reenlistment Qualification Test halted

Reenlistment Qualification Testing for soldiers who have not taken Skill Qualification Tests (SQT) was halted by DA last week.

Officials say soldiers who have taken an SQT may reenlist if they score at least 60 percent, as shown on the Individual Soldier's Report (ISR) or if their Form 10A score is in the 11th percentile or higher.

Soldiers, who until now have taken a Reenlistment Qualification Test because they do not have SQT scores, may reenlist with approval of their unit commanders.

When an SQT is available but a soldier has not yet tested, soldiers will be given priority testing. If test results are not received in time to verify reenlistment eligibility, MILPERCEN will approve reenlistments for these soldiers.

Soldiers who have not served in their Primary MOS long enough to qualify for SQT testing will have their reenlistments approved on a case-by-case basis by MILPERCEN.

Soldiers who take an SQT but fail to meet reenlistment standards may be extended and given another chance to pass. (ARNEWS)

Candidates attend reception

Sixty-five potential West Point candidates attended the reception held in their honor by the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chatper of the Association of the United States Army, Sunday evening.

Col. Harold Johnson, deputy chief of staff, welcomed the high school students and their parents as well as some active duty enlisted personnel. He then introduced the guest speaker, Cadet Timothy Clapp.

Clapp, a native of Columbus and a first classman at the Academy, gave a slide presentation on Academy life and admission procedures. The audience was given the opportunity to ask questions following the briefing.

Several recent West Point graduates now attending Infantry Officer Basic Course 8-78 were also there to answer the candidate's questions regarding the Point.

Anyone desiring more information about the Academy may call the West Point admissions liaison office, 1st Lt. Love Sears-Collins, at 545-3456.

Officer can earn wings after OBC

The Army will permit commissioned officers to enter flight training immediately upon completion of the officer basic course, according to DA officials. This is a change to the current policy which has required officers to serve 24-36 months with their basic entry specialty before attending flight school.

The policy change, which is expected to be effective in 1979, will assist in making up expected shortages of company grade aviators. (ARNEWS)

President asks Americans to conserve energy

Energy conservation as a domestic challenge is news. President Jimmy Carter has called for conservation by all Americans in whatever ways possible.

Many electrical appliances, such as clothes washers and dryers, dishwashers and electric irons, use a lot of energy. By using these in the early morning or late evening hours, we can lighten the load at power generating stations, when demand is highest and inefficient generators must be placed in service.

Repair all leaky faucets, especially hot water faucets, as quickly as possible.

Wrapping the water heater in insulation will save on heat loss. This combined with insulating the pipes leading from the water heater can save up to 40 percent of the heat. Insulating the pipes will also reduce the time it takes to get hot water at the tap.

Be sure the dishwasher is full, but not overloaded before you turn it on. About 14 gallons of hot water are used for each load.

Scrape dishes without rinsing them before putting them into the washer. If rinsing is necessary, use cold water. Let your dishes air dry. After the final rinse, turn off the control knob of the dishwasher and open the door.

Manual-defrost refrigerator-freezers use less energy than those which defrost automatically, but they must be defrosted often and quickly to maintain that edge. Some refrigerators have heating elements in their walls to prevent condensation on the outside. These heaters only need to be turned on when the air is extremely humid.

During holidays or other extended absences from home, empty and unplug the refrigerator, clean it thoroughly and leave the door open.

When cooking, it is more economical to use the oven of your stove than to use the surface heating units. The surface cooking units heat up the kitchen area while the insulated oven keeps the heat in one central area. Also, the oven requires one-third of the time to produce the same amount of heat as a surface unit.

All oven-cooked food does not require a preheated oven. Generally meats and casserole dishes may be placed in a cold oven. Check with recipes to determine pre-heating needs. Opening the oven door while baking can result in a 20 percent heat loss — depend on the timer to tell you when the food is done.

Microwave ovens can reduce power consumption by as much as 50 percent for the same cooking tasks done by an electric oven or surface unit.

Wash clothing in warm or cold water, rinse in cold. Use hot water only if absolutely necessary. Warm water washes and cold water rinses will result in lower energy use.

Fill clothes washers and dryers, unless they have small-load attachments or variable water levels.

Don't run the dryer longer than necessary. Separate drying loads into heavy and lightweight items. Since the lighter ones take less drying time, the dryer doesn't have to be on as long for these loads. Also, keep the lint screen clean.

Showering uses less water than tub baths. You can install a flow restrictor in the pipe to the showerhead which can save a lot of hot water. This device restricts the flow to an adequate four gallons of water per minute. (TNS)

Vol. 37, No. 59 Published in the interest of the personnel at Fort Benning November 3, 1978

Veterans' Day activities planned

With Veterans' Day being observed on its traditional date of Nov. 11 this year and Nov. 10 proclaimed a legal holiday for Federal employees, most military and civilian personnel at Fort Benning are looking forward to a three-day weekend next week.

But some post personnel will break their holiday long enough to participate in Veterans' Day parades and activities in Columbus and other towns in Georgia and Alabama on Nov. 11.

Col. Richard W. McKee, deputy post commander, will be guest speaker at Columbus' Veterans' Day parade, and Chaplain (Capt.) David M. Rhyne will give the invocation. The 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade will provide a firing squad, and Explorer Scout Post 76, The Colonial Band, will march in the parade.

Col. Bobby J. Harris, deputy assistant commandent, U.S. Army Infantry School, will speak at the courthouse square in Thomaston, Ga.

The 283d Army Band, a color guard from the 1/58th and a four-platoon marching unit from the 1st Infantry Training Brigade will participate in the Birmingham, Ala. parade.

The 121st Aviation Company, 34th Medical Battalion, will send a UH1H helicopter to assist the Fort Valley College ROTC Rappelling Team, Fort Valley, Ga. in their Veterans' Day activities.

The 1/58th will provide a color guard and an M113 armored personnel carrier (APC) to participate in the Albany, Ga. parade and are sending an M113 APC static display to Manchester, Ga. The 72d Engineer Company, 197th Infantry Brigade, will provide transportation for the M113s.

The 1st ITB will provide a company size marching unit for the Atlanta parade, and the 1/58th is sending a color guard to Smyrna, Ga. to participate in their parade.

Dependent schools on post will also be closed Nov. 10 in observance of Veterans' Day.

Vehicle registration units to be set up

By Betty Zimmerman

The Provost Marshal's Office (PMO) announces the arrival of more permanent vehicle registration decals. In an effort to assist personnel who were issued temporary registrations and people who have not registered their privately owned vehicles at all, the PMO will set up mobile registration units beginning Nov. 7.

Personnel with a current temporary post registration will only be required to provie this document when reregistering. Conversion of the temporary to permanent decals will require only the issuance of decals and posting of the number on the registration form.

New registration will require proof of ownership, valid driver's license, defensive driver's card if the applicant is 25 years old or under, and proof of insurance.

DATE	TIME
Nov. 7	9 a.m. - noon 1 p.m. - 4 p.m.
Nov. 8	9 a.m. - noon 1 p.m. - 4 p.m.
Nov. 9	9 a.m. - noon 1 p.m. - 4 p.m.
Nov. 14	9 a.m. - noon
Nov. 14	1 p.m. - 4 p.m.
Nov. 15	9 a.m. - noon 1 p.m. - 4 p.m.
Nov. 16	9 a.m. - noon 1 p.m. - 4 p.m.

The following categories of personnel are required to register their privately owned vehicles according to USAIC Regulation 190-5: all active duty military and their dependents; all retired military and their dependents, if they live in the area and frequent the post facilities; local dependents with sponsors stationed elsewhere, if they use the post facilities frequently; civil service employees; non-appropriated fund employees; authorized concessionaire employees; and representatives of commercial firms that regularly serve Fort Benning.

Any personnel that still have the old Third Army post tag should reregister their vehicle. The main vehicle registration office in Rm 218 of Bldg 83 will remain open as usual during the times of the mobile unit operate.

Doughboys to play

The Doughboys will try to extend their winning streak to three games when they take on the Florida State College Junior Varsity Seminoles 7:30 tomorrow night at Doughboy Stadium.

The Doughboys are coming off a 19-12 victory over the Carson-Newman Junior Varsity Eagles last Saturday night. Everyone is urged to come out and cheer our post team to victory.

Breathe easier

The West Central Branch of the Georgia Lung Association is sponsoring a six-month Better Breathing for Better Living educational program beginning Nov. 7, in The Medical Center Auditorium at 7:30 p.m.

The monthly programs are designed for patients with chronic lung disease (COPD) such as emphysema, chronic bronchitis, and asthma. A family member is encouraged to attend to develop a better understanding of the special problems of the patient and to aid in improving his lifestyle.

Dr. Alan Peiken, chief of pulmonary medicine at The Medical Center, will be the first speaker on Nov. 7. He will explain the anatomy and physiology of the respiratory system and the various diseases involved. Dr. Peiken will discuss the importance of learning breath control for the various impairments.

A local pharmacist will discuss the use of drugs, including actions and interactions with other drugs, side effects, and over-the-counter medications. Time will be allotted during each session for open discussion with the patients and family members.

Subsequent discussions will include home treatment and equipment, breathing exercises, nutrition, interpersonal relations in the family unit, insurance and legal needs, and finally a smoking cessation program will be offered the patients and family members.

All the sessions will be conducted by local physicians and allied health personnel.

There is no charge for this patient education program. Applications are available at your doctor's office or call the Georgia Lung Association at 323-4700.

Post hunting halted

Effective Nov. 1, all hunting was halted at Fort Benning because of the danger of forest fires. The Build-up Index or degree of dryness now measures 230 points. A reading of 50 is considered critical.

The post has been under a Class 4 alert for several days, which under standards established by the U.S. Forestry Service, means that conditions are such that fire spreads rapidly, will spot or jump, and is difficult to control.

High winds bring on a Class 5 alert, which means that fire could become unmanageable. The temporary ban on hunting will be lifted as soon as the danger of forest fires decreases. See related story on page 16.

Allied students discover America

by Seth Hamilton

"We're the best kept secret on Fort Benning." These words belong to Capt. William Boner, chief of the Allied Student Training Division (ASTD).

Boner is referring to the program where officers from foreign countries come to Fort Benning to attend classes ranging from the Infantry Officer Advanced Course to Jump School and Ranger training. At any given time, there are between 85-100 students from 30-40 foreign countries here.

During their stay here, the allied students do a lot more than go to school. According to Boner, "We could just stick to academics, but we try to give the students a feel for what America is all about."

The allied students' training is divided into two areas, academic and informational. Under the informational program, the students learn about American agriculture, industry, economics and other facets of American life.

As part of the informational program, the allied students travel throughout the Southeast on various field trips. These include visits to Columbus where they see local government in action, Atlanta, Callaway Gardens, Plains, Ga. and a five day trip to Washington, D.C. Allied students also participated in this year's Chattahoochee Raft Race Aug. 12.

Being a foreigner in any country can be difficult. Even though every allied student that comes to Fort Benning must know how to speak English, there are still many problems that can arise. To help the students adjust to our way of life, the ASTD has developed a civilian sponsorship program.

In this program, a local family will volunteer to sponsor a student. This means that the student is welcome to spend his free time with the family. The sponsor will assist the student with things like obtaining a local driver's license, buying a car or just getting around to see the local sights. It is here that the student gets a real feeling for typical American family life.

The civilian sponsors are an important part of the informational program in the allied students' training. According to Boner, "We couldn't survive without these civilian sponsors. The sponsors really make these guys (the allied students) feel at home."

When Boner said the ASTD was the best kept secret on Benning, he pointed out that few people here realize the full importance of the program. When these foreign officers come here to school, they learn a lot more about us than what they see in the classroom or out on the PT field. First impressions are always important, and it's the ASTD's job to give the student a well-rounded view of what we're really like.

That's important because when the officer returns to his own country and relates the stories of his visit to America, they'll know that he had stayed with friends.

Rep. Brinkley visits

By Pat Astran

Congressman Jack Brinkley took time out of his busy schedule to visit the 3rd Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade (ITB) at Fort Benning on Oct. 26.

He was here to receive an updated briefing on military construction activities and to review the One Station Unit Training (OSUT) tests currently being conducted in the 1st ITB.

The soldiers were Sgt. 1st Class William B. Freely, Co B; Sgt. 1st Class Robert R. Theis, Hqs Co; Pvt. 1 Richard L. Greene, Co A and Pvt. 1 Henry E. Carswell, Co B.

In his short and impromptu speech, he expressed his appreciation for the contribution that Fort Benning is making to the National Defense effort and pledged his full support for the training and construction programs that are currently underway and planned for Fort Benning's future.

Other personnel accompanying Congressman Brinkley were Mr. Pete Schrivner, a member of the House Armed Services Committee, and Mr. Larry Wheeler, administrative assistant to Congressman Brinkley.

Col. Addison Davis III, chief of staff and Col. Carl Stiner, commander, 1st ITB, escorted Congressman Brinkley and his party.

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room - and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 100 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

Glad you asked

What does Veterans Day mean to you?

Master Sgt. William O. Hardin, USAMU

"To me Veterans Day is a day to think of the men who died served the United States in previous conflicts."

Sgt. 1st Class John Brame, 81 Mortar Comm Gp Co B, 1st ITB

"I feel that Veterans Day is our most important holiday of the year. We are honoring the men who helped us get everything we've got today. For every good thing that most of us take for granted, someone had to sacrifice for it. We owe everything to our military vets."

Maj. Jim Dabney, Infantry School

"Veterans Day is when we recognize the contributions of all our veterans in defense of our country."

Pvt. Ronald Kingrey, 18th Rep. Det.

"Veterans Day is a national holiday. But more than that it is a time to think about all the men who have died in defense of our country."

Commentary

Are you living in the past?

By James E. Rogers
Chaplain, 1st ITB

Most of us spend a lot of our time and resources in discussing and planning for the future. It occurs to me, however, that most of us are not altogether that excited about the future. In fact, if our popular songs, TV shows, and current movies are to be taken seriously, we seem to be turning into nostalgia buffs.

A few years ago, for instance, the Beatles must have made at least a hundred bucks on a song about yesterday. Not since the forties have I heard a very popular song about tomorrow. A few of us can still remember the song "Manana" which probably said more about putting things off than it did about tomorrow.

And what about the movies? For every blockbuster such as "Starwars" which speculates on the future, there must be five-hundred Gary Cooper or John Wayne westerns that take us back to those thrilling days of yesteryear. And if you are still unconvinced, you must be one of the few people who missed out on the movie "American Graffiti." If TV is any indicator of what we think, "The Waltons" and "Little House On The Prarie" seem to point to a generalized belief that the good old days were simpler, more honest, and more genuine.

There can be little doubt that our pre-occupation with the past is tied up with our struggles and fears about the present. Most of us have little difficulty in understanding the present. That is hardly the issue. Maybe we understand all too well and prefer not to think about it.

So often we find ourselves in difficulties that are not of our own choosing in which we feel tested to the limits of our spiritual and physical being. Out of these encounters, we have often come away bruised and feeling like losers. Is it, then, any wonder that we are often plagued by fears and doubts about the future? We might as well admit it. Most of us are just giving lip service to our dreams and hopes for the future.

Whether we take life seriously or not, we are all aware of how serious and trying it often becomes. It is little wonder that we so often attempt to set our minds at ease with an idealized view of the past.

In addition to our personal experiences which seem to take away our hope for a brighter tomorrow there seems to be "an MOS overage" on prophets of doom these days. They seem to fill up the land. Such books as 1984 by George Orwell and Future Shock by Alvin Toffler are examples. In them the future is viewed as more troubling and less certain than ever.

And, apparently, there will be little that we can hold on to in this life. Even religious people have jumped onto this creaky bandwagon. With them, there is much talk about faith and love, but not too many people in religious groups are looking to the future any more. They too seem to fear any discussions about life after death as too much "pie in the sky in the great by and by." Equally tragic is their loss of a sense of how the world we live in ought to appear.

Many people are covering their failures by saying that progress is not inevitable. All of us know that. But it seems that in many cases, we are using this thinking as a very poor excuse to settle for a second-rate level of living. For some, success has apparently become a dirty word.

Norman Vincent Peale's positive thinking is sharply criticized as being too superficial. In a sense pessimism has become our unofficial creed as we discover new ways to avoid responsible living. Thus we watch our hope in the future decrease and our fear of the future continues to grow.

Dr. Robert Schuller has recently written a fascinating book entitled Possibility Thinking in which he encourages people to start believing again and daring to dream impossible dreams for themselves. He feels that all of our problems in life are filled with possibilities for success. Speaking as a religionist, he argues that God wants to turn each of us into a success. For Schuller a possibility thinker is willing to set goals for the future. Almost without exception, those who say they are living without goals are people who once had them, but too soon decided to settle for less.

Even the most realistic goals will bring about trouble and difficulty. But a clear picture of what a person wants will cause him to recognize a successful situation. Let's admit it. Without a clear image of success, we

Thanksgiving Food Drive in full swing

Sunday was the first day of Lavoie Manor's Thanksgiving Food Drive in which the entire Lavoie Manor Life program participants are cooperating in an effort to help replenish the Army Community Service's food supplies for the needy.

Chapel services have become a focal point of the drive, but Mrs. Glenda James, program coordinator, plans for a neighborhood emphasis as well. Citizens of Lavoie Manor are being encouraged to bring canned or packaged foods to chapel services, to the Life Center, or they may call 545-4715 to have the contributions picked up.

Although this is a community drive, Mrs. James solicits the help of all Fort Benning communities or individuals in contributing to a happier holiday season for the less privileged families of Fort Benning. The Food Drive will end on Nov. 22.

ACS to host Thanksgiving feast Nov. 23

Army Community Service (ACS) at Benning is inviting retired Army personnel, service widows, and unaccompanied military dependents and their families to the post for a Thanksgiving turkey dinner at the Follow Me Dining Facility, Bldg. 73 on Nov. 23.

Cost for the dinner is $2.90 for adults and $1.55 for children under 12 years of age.

Tickets must be purchases at ACS, Rm 109, Bldg 83. No tickets will be sold after Nov. 16.

Dependents must travel with sponsor

Dependents authorized concurrent travel overseas must travel with their sponsors and not later, MILPERCEN officials say.

Some dependents are arriving in Europe, officials say, after their sponsors, although they have been allowed concurrent travel. This, officials add, is causing problems in reimbursing soldiers for dependent travel costs.

If dependents are supposed to travel concurrently, officials explained, they must do so. Permission must be obtained if dependents want to travel separately from sponsors, they stressed. (ARNEWS)

Fort Benning scouts take top honors at Camporee

By Julie Casey

The Fort Benning Boy Scout District took top honors at the Chattahoochee Council Camporee held at West Point Lake. A total of 1,000 scouts came from Georgia, Alabama and Florida to participate.

Seven scout troops from Benning participated in the weekend event and received the Best Participator Award.

Individual Benning troops also did well in other competitions. Troop 27 received first in the "gateway" competition. Each troop constructed a gateway of lashed poles to show their scouting skills. Troops 277 and 135 placed second and third. In skill demonstrations, Troop 120 placed first with a knot and lashing display and Troop 237 received second, displaying their reflector ovens.

There was also competition between patrols in compass reading, knots and lashing, first aid and other skills. All the Benning troops received Awards of Merit with Honor for work well done.

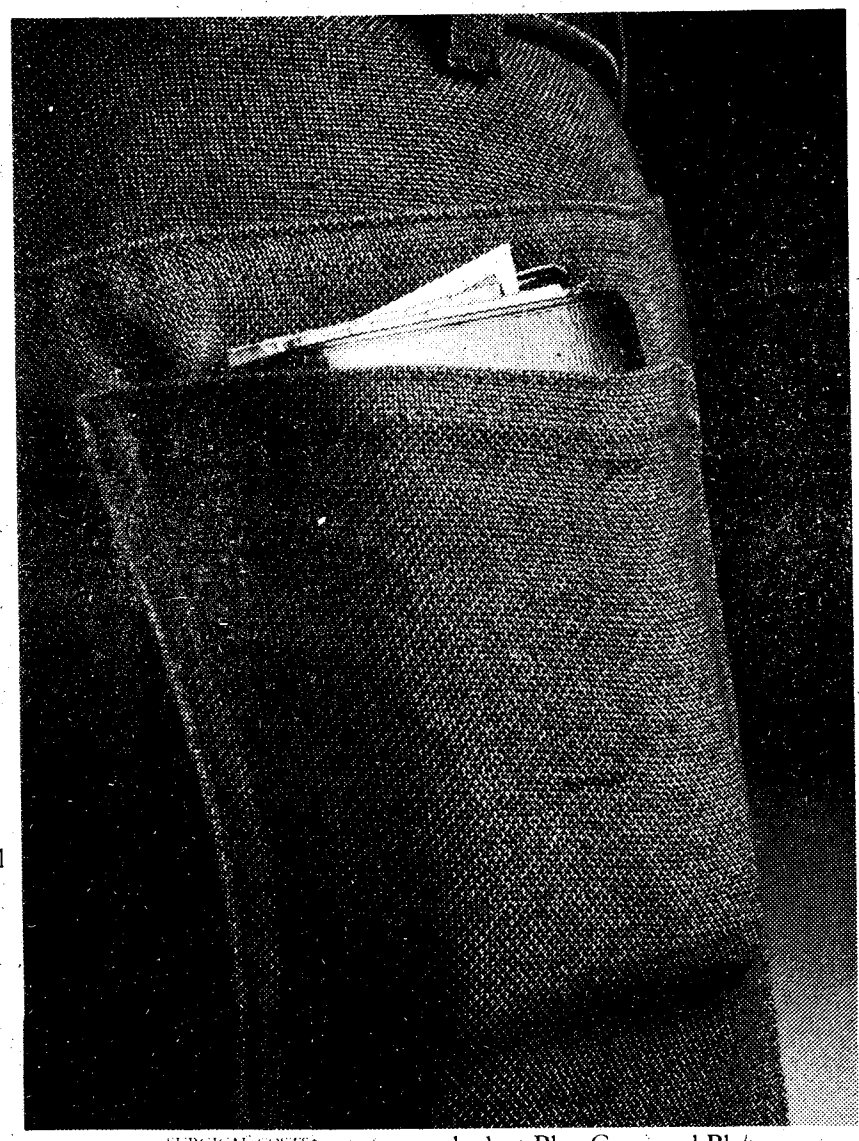
TO ALL FEDERAL EMPLOYEES:

BUY CHEAPER HEALTH CARE COVERAGE AND THERE'S ONE PLACE YOU CAN REALLY GET HURT.



Right in the old wallet.

Which doesn't make much sense when you stop to think you wanted to save money in the first place. More often than not, though, you end up with an expensive mistake on your hands.

Because cheaper health care plans cost less for a reason. They often cover less. And pay less when it comes time to make a claim.

That's why the Blue Cross and Blue Shield program is worth so much—even when it costs more. It covers more.

Dollar for dollar, the high option Blue Cross and Blue Shield program is the best health care coverage you can buy.

HIGHER AND HIGHER.

That sums up the main problem with trying to save money on health care coverage. The cost of hospitalization and medical treatment has been on the rise for years. So far, the end isn't in sight.

Take the cost of surgery, for instance. As the chart shows, the total cost of common surgical procedure and required medical services has risen as much as 250% over the last ten years.

And that's why Blue Cross and Blue Shield Plans are working harder than ever with doctors and hospitals across the country. We've got to find ways to help slow down dramatically rising health care costs.

So when you buy health care coverage, take a long, hard look at Blue Cross and Blue Shield protection. You may not think the price is right today.

But when you need help, the Blue Cross and Blue Shield program is worth every dollar.

VA compensation payments increase

Checks reflecting a 7.3 percent increase in Veterans Administration compensation payments were mailed at the end of October to more than two-and-a-quarter million veterans, 225,000 widows and more than 92,000 children of deceased veterans, VA said today.

The increases in compensation benefits were authorized by Congress shortly before it adjourned earlier this month and were signed into law by President Carter Oct. 18. The payments are retroactive to Oct. 1.

Compensation payments are made to veterans with service-connected disabilities, while Dependency and Indemnity Compensation benefits are paid to spouses and children of veterans who died from service-connected causes.

The legislation, known as "The Veterans Disability Compensation and Survivors Benefits Act of 1978," also provides:

- A 7.3 percent increase in the allowance paid disabled veterans whose artificial limbs cause excessive clothing wear. The former allowance was $203 per year. The new allowance is $218.
- A special $900 monthly allowance to enable certain seriously disabled veterans to employ a skilled health care practitioner whose aid and attendance in the home is demonstrably necessary to keep the veteran out of a hospital.
- An additional monthly payment of $175 for veterans who suffered the service-connected loss of one extremity or its use, and have subsequently lost the paired extremity from nonservice-connected causes.
- A new payment of $45 per month for surviving spouses receiving DIC payments who are so disabled as to be confined to their homes.
- A broadening of the eligibility base for allowances paid dependents of veterans with service-connected disabilities. Previously, dependents of veterans with 50 per cent disability were eligible, but the new law provides allowances for dependents of veterans with 30 per cent disability.

Increases were also made in the basic burial allowance from $250 to $300. The allowance that can be paid to survivors of veterans who die from service-connected causes has also been increased. The new rate is $1,100, up from $800.

The automobile allowance paid on a one-time basis to severely disabled veterans requiring specially adapted cars was increased from $3,300 to $3,800.

The new law also requires the Veterans Administration, in consultation with the Defense Department, to conduct a study to determine if former prisoners of war are receiving "adequate levels of compensation and health care due to their internment."

Included in the act, also, is authorization of a tax exemption of retired pay in the amount of VA compensation if a waiver is filed within one year from notification of entitlement to VA benefits.

Another provision will increase the special pension paid to holders of the Medal of Honor to $200 per month, effective Jan. 1.

Screams, howls fill the air Tuesday

By Madonna Simple

McGraw Manor children got the scare of their lives Tuesday night at the McGraw Haunted House.

Dracula (Spec. 4 Antonio Cruz, CSC, 1/58th, 197 Inf Bde) rises from his sleeping chamber to quench his thirst Tuesday night.

Above the eerie howls, clattering chains and sounds of things that go bump in the night, children's high pitched screams and peals of laughter carried on the light evening breeze.

Approximately 700 people took an eerie walk through the second annual Haunted House sponsored by the McGraw Manor Community Life Program. About $150 to $175 in donations were received from daring children and parents. The donations will be put in the Community Life Fund that supports the Tiny Tots Program and other community life type programs.

Twenty volunteers began working on the Haunted House three months ago. The majority of the volunteers were dependent wives and children.

With the sunset softly consuming the last ray of light, the Wolfman began his eventful reign of the graveyard. Upon entering the rickety house, gasps for breath were heard at the sight of a woman engulfed in quicksand. Moving on, a gypsy looks into the misty crystal ball seeking the future only to conjure up hair raising laughter from an old witch.

Scurrying past an exorcism in progress, fright overwhelmed you as you met face-to-face with Frankenstein. In the background alone and domineering, sat a Jacob's ladder, a device with sparks of electricity shooting between two wires.

Trying to escape the deadly fate of being boiled in a huge kettle was next on the agenda. And seeing children in cages fearfully waiting their turn to be tossed in was enough incentive to set a new running record.

However, if you lived through the episodes in the House, don't think you were home free. Dracula was anxiously awaiting outside for the scurrying children and proceeded to prey on those who managed to escape.

When asked his feelings on the success of the Haunted House, Spec. 5 Ronald E. Fugiel, coordinator of the McGraw Manor community and NCOIC of the Community Life Program said, "Lots of kids were getting scared to death. We had a number of people who decided once wasn't enough and went through three or four times."

Never repeat mistakes concept of 1/58th

By Stephen Guthrie

One of the most valuable tools for training in the Army today is the field training exercise (FTX). This week the 1/58th Infantry Battalion, 197 Infantry Brigade (Sep) moved out in a large scale four day FTX involving advanced infantry/armor techniques.

The men trained in everything from live fire mortar to night attack and defense patterns. Each company of the battalion took turns as aggressors against each other, providing the men with a life-like combat situation.

"Our field problems are always demanding," commented Maj. Roger H. Anderson, Battalion S-3 officer, "because we train on the concept of never repeating our mistakes. In this way we can learn from experience and know the most expedient method of conducting our training. The only way a unit can be combat ready is to train hard and have a large amount of dedication to their work."

The highlight of the problem was a Soviet type assault on a fortified defense position. Three of the companies lined up in a horizontal type line formation and attacked B Co in a demonstration of the Soviet attack methods. This was a perfect demonstration of the type of attack the soldiers may have to face and was a very impressive display of the unit's combat readiness.

197th to conduct Tank Gunnery 78

By Mike Daigle

After travelling all over the southeast every year to fulfill their annual obligation of tank gunnery, approximately 600 men from the 2/69th Armor and Troop A, 15th Cav, 197th Bde, will be conducting tank gunnery onFort Benning for the first time.

All the different types of training that tankers participate in, such as Field Training Exercises (FTX), Skill Qualification Test (SQT) and crew drills, lead up to tank gunnery — or ultimately, combat.

Tank gunnery consists of Tables I through VIII. The first three tables will be fired with lazers and the last three will be live fire. Table VIII is the actual qualification table and all the others just lead up to it. "This year will be a transitional year for the tankers on Fort Benning because of the new tank gunnery manual and the fact that we don't have a complete tank range on this post yet," commented Sgt. 1st Class Cleveland T. Mitchell. Mitchell, the master gunner for the 2/69th Armor, is the top gunner in a tank battalion and he is highly trained on the subject of tank gunnery.

The new tank gunnery manual maximizes subcaliber machine gun fire and minimizes main gun firing. The cost of a typical main gun round being $155 gives the tankers good incentive to be more conservative. According to Maj. James A. Dickens, S-3 officer for the 2/69th Armor, the probable cost of the whole tank gunnery program will approach one million dollars.

"There are several problems we have encountered that the unit didn't have to deal with the last two years at Fort Bliss and Fort Stewart, but because this is the first time we have done it here and the first time we have completely ran it ourselves, a lot of it is new to us," said Mitchell. "It should go more smoothly next year when the range is finished and the new scoring system is in effect."

The tankers have been delayed this year because of weather and range conditions but this just makes for a bigger challenge to the men of the 2/69th Armor and the 15th Cav. This will be the culmination of a years preparation and you can bet nothing is going to stop them.

Baggers to work for tips

The commissary baggers at Fort Benning and all military installations will continue to work for tips only.

The FY 79 DoD Authorization Act recently signed by the President included an amendment that exempted commissary baggers and carry-out service employees from the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Prayer Brunch slated Nov. 10

A city-wide interdenominational Prayer Brunch is planned for Nov. 10 at 10:30 a.m. in the Ralston Towers Ballroom.

The inspirational Brunch will feature Evelyn Christenson, the well-known author of What Happens When Women Pray as guest speaker. The brunch is being sponsored by the Ft. Benning-Columbus Great Commission Prayer Crusade.

The local Prayer Crusade was organized last March and is a part of the national organization that is a ministry of Campus Crusade for Christ International. The purpose is to promote prayer for our nation, state, and city and to encourage the forming of neighborhood prayer groups.

A brunch ticket costing $3.50 will guarantee a reservation. Since sales are limited and a capacity crowd is expected, interested persons are encouraged to purchase tickets early. Tickets are available from the Infantry Center chapel, Prayer Crusade Steering Committee members and at Christian bookstores.

For further information, call Barbara Brockman, 687-7959, coordinator.

European tours reduced

Some soldiers serving in Europe will have their tours reduced from three to two years beginning Jan. 1, MILPERCEN officials said this week.

The tour reductions, for first term bachelors (male and female) on four year enlistments, were slated to take effect with the Oct. 1 beginning of EY 79. But a Congressional delay in approving the DD budget means that tour reductions will not affect those single soldiers who arrived in Europe during October, November or December of 1975, as reported earlier.

Soldiers who qualify for the tour reductions and who arrive in participating commands during or after January 1979 will receive two year tours. Soldiers already serving in these areas for more than two but less than three years will have their PCS dates adjusted and will serve from 24 to 36 month tours, depending on when they arrived in these areas.

The phased-in tour reductions will apply to soldiers in the following areas: Germany, Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, Italy, Netherlands, Norway, Spain and the United Kingdom.

Soldiers on attache duty and soldiers with six months or less remaining until ETS do not qualify for the tour reductions.

Tables for adjusted DEROS dates released by MILPERCEN list new tour lengths for soldiers in participating commands from January through June 1976.

Adjusted DEROS dates released as of this week are:

Date Departed CONUS	Adjusted DEROS
Jan. 1-20, 1976	Jan. 1-5, 1979
Jan. 21-Feb. 9, 1976	Jan. 6-10, 1979
Feb. 10-29, 1976	Jan. 11-15, 1979
Mar. 1-20, 1979	Jan. 16-20, 1979
Mar. 21-Apr. 10, 1976	Jan. 21-25, 1979
Apr. 11-30, 1976	Jan. 26-30, 1979
May 1-20, 1976	Jan. 31-Feb. 4, 1979
May 21-June 10, 1976	Feb. 5-9, 1979
June 11-30, 1976	Feb. 10-14, 1979

There are strict guidelines that define bachelor (single) soldiers, a MILPERCEN official cautioned. He advised soldiers to check with local MILPOS to answer questions about meeting these guidelines. (ARNEWS)

Benning forests remain dry

Fort Benning's forests continue to dry out. The Build-Up Index or degree of dryness, which three weeks ago measured an unprecedented 159, is now at 234 and rising.

There has been at least one forest or brush fire on post every day for the last four weeks," according to Norman Force, chief of the Forestry Branch, DFAE.

The dry condition of the forests is indeed critical. The situation has curtailed most of the weapons fire on post ranges.

The dryness of the forests and the weather conditions determine how fast a fire can ignite and spread. The U.S. Forestry Service has devised the National Spread System for rating potential forest fire conditions. The list is as follows.

National Spread System

Class 1 — Fire will spread slowly and tend to die.
Class 2 — Fire will maintain itself until distinguished.
Class 3 — Fire burns briskly and spreads rapidly.
Class 4 — Fire spreads rapidly. Fire will spot or jump and is very hard to control.
Class 5 — Fire will spread very fast and jump rapidly. Fires in this class are usually uncontrollable.

Fort Benning is currently under a Class 4 alert. Fires started in this class can easily become out of control so please, be careful. Remember, if a fire should start, dial 117 on post and 687-8117 when calling from Columbus.

Marine Commandant joins JCS

The Marine Corps Commandant became an official member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff (JCS) last week when President Carter signed the FY 79 Appropriation Authorization Bill.

Since 1952, the Commandant has had "co-equal" status with the other members of JCS when JCS matters directly concern the Marine Corps. (ARNEWS)

Military Engineers Society meeting rescheduled

By Betty Zimmerman

There has been a change in the date of the November meeting of the Society of American Military Engineers. It will be held in the Benning Room of the Fort Benning Officers' Club on Nov. 7, at 11:15 a.m.

The meeting will begin with a brief social period and continue with a luncheon. The after-dinner guest speaker will be Lt. Gen. John W. Morris, chief of engineers and president of the National Society of American Military Engineers.

Morris was commissioned in the Corps of Engineers in 1943 following graduation from the U. S. Military Academy. He received his Master's degree in Civil Engineering from the University of Iowa. His military schooling has included the Command and Staff College, the Army War College and the Management Program for Executives at the University of Pittsburg.

He was Resident Engineer at Goose Bay Air Base, Labrador; Deputy District Engineer, Savannah, Ga., and District Engineer, Tulsa, Okla. He has served as the Deputy Chief of Engineers and as Director of Civil Works, Office of the Chief of Engineers in Washington, D.C.

Other key positions include serving as Division Engineer, Missouri River Division, Omaha, Neb.; Deputy Chief of Legislative Liaison for the Secretary of the Army; and Deputy Commandant, U. S. Military Academy.

He became the 44th Chief of Engineers in July 1976.

VA Q&A

Q. — How can I get tutorial assistance under the GI Bill?

Q. — I served in World War II. Is it true that I may be entitled to a VA pension in addition to my Social Security now that I am 65 years of age?

A. — You may be entitled to a VA pension, but only if you have limited income and assets. You should contact your nearest VA regional office for information and assistance in making application.

Q. — What period is considered wartime service for pension purposes during the Korean Conflict?

A. — June 27,1955.

Drive carefully next weekend

Veterans Day, Nov. 11, has been proclaimed by the President of the United States in honor of members and former members of all branches of the United States Armed Services — to recall their sacrifices during war and to pay tribute to their contributions to peace. It is dedicated to all who have fought for the United States and to the memory of those Americans who have died in battle. The day reminds many Americans of the tragedies of war.

During this holiday period, it is estimated that 400 Americans will lose their lives. These Americans will not lose their lives in some distant land fighting for freedom; these Americans will lose their lives needlessly on our nation's highways — victims of traffic accidents. The motor vehicle death toll over the last 78 years almost doubles the deaths of United States military personnel in all wars.

There have been enough tragedies in war, don't contribute to it by being remembered as one who lost his life in a traffic accident over the Veterans Day weekend. Observance of Veterans Day begins next Friday for Fort Benning personnel. If we each observe a few simple driving rules we can make this a safe holiday:

- Insure your vehicle is in good mechanical condition; check tires, lights, brakes, horn, and windshield wipers.
- Give yourself adequate time to reach your destination. Don't try to travel 600 miles a day.
- Use your seat belts. You should insure that each occupant is also wearing his/her seat belt.
- Obey the speed limits. Fifty-five (55) means you.
- Above all — DRIVE DEFENSIVELY

Shoplifting can result in loss of e

By Pat Brown

Shoplifting is a serious offense, and on Fort Benning, it's treated seriously.

If it is determined that an individual has shoplifted, that person will lose exchange privileges for six months. This applies whether the individual is on active duty, retired, or is a dependent, including juvenile dependents.

In addition, retired personnel and dependents run the risk of facing conviction and punishment by civil authorities, or if on active duty, action under the Uniform Code of Military Justice (UCMJ).

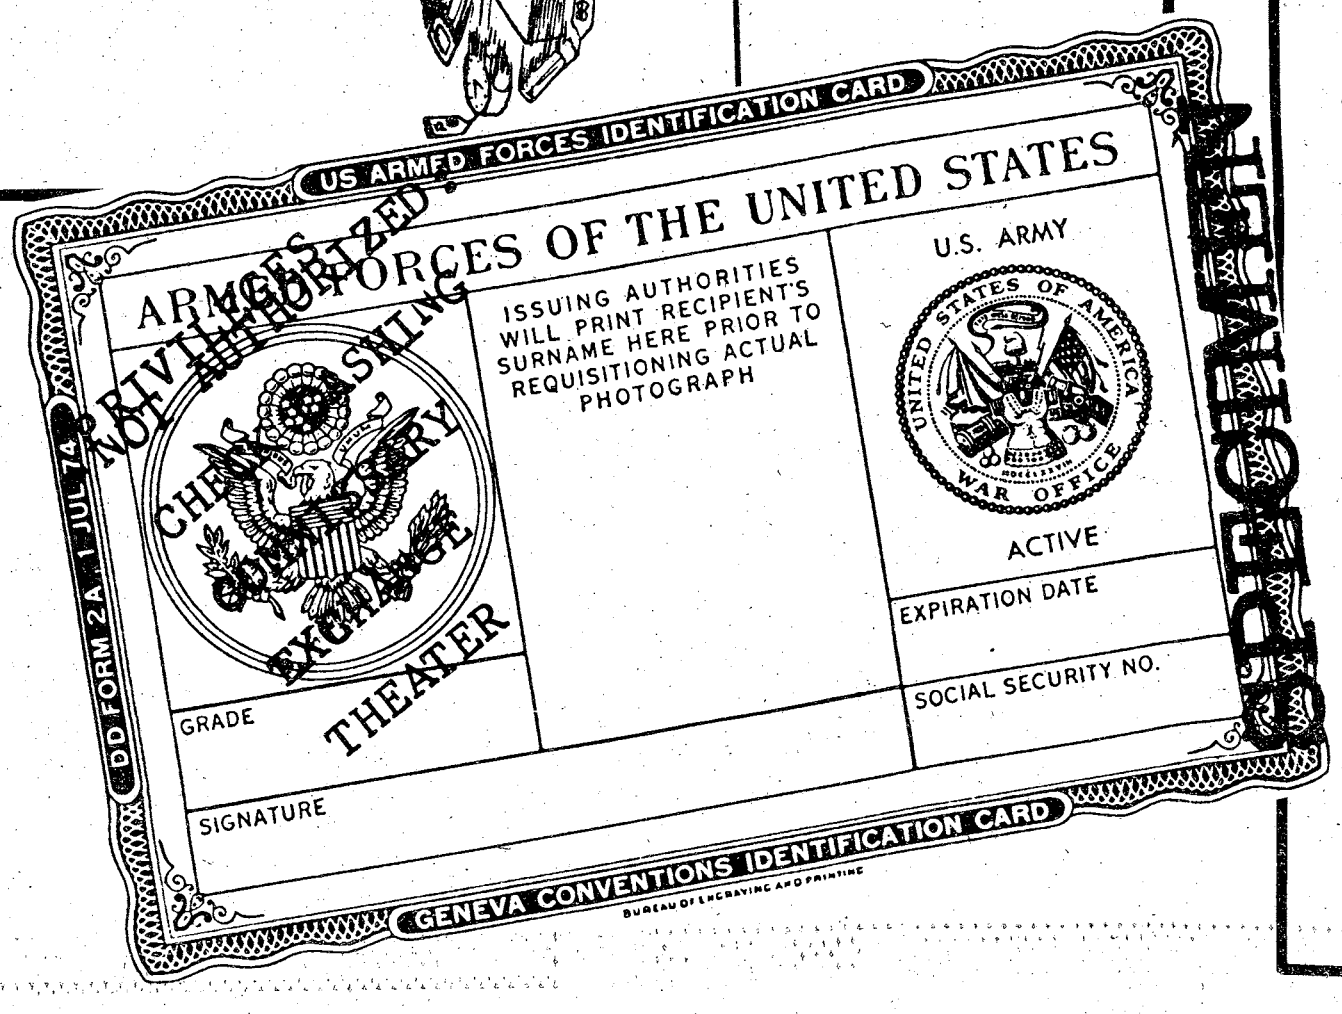
Usually the peak season for shoplifting is around Christmas holidays, but during the past month, there was a notable increase in the number of shoplifting arrests. In October, there were a total of 23 arrests, compared to the first nine months of the year, when the total ranged from 6 - 14 per month.

Most shoplifting offenses occur in the Main Mall PX, the convenience store on Main Post, and at the exchange activities in the 1st ITB area. Active duty personnel — mainly lower grade enlisted personnel — are the greatest offenders, accounting for more than 70 percent of those arrested. Dependents, usually juvenile dependents, account for more than 20 percent and retired and civilian personnel for nearly 9 percent.

Shoplifting has not been a major problem at the Commissary, according to the Provost Marshal Office (PMO). "Usually, said William Cobb, assistant commissary officer, "they pilfer things like a pack or two of cigarettes from a carton, or break into a package of luncheon meat and take out a couple of slices."

It's a different matter at the Post Exchanges. "They try to walk out of here with anything from a piece of bubble gum to a sewing machine," according to Shigeru Ito, Exchange administration officer.

"In addition to the Exchange detectives," said Ito, "all our clerks are trained to look for suspicious activity. If we have reason to suspect that shoplifting has occurred, we let the customer leave the store, and then detain him, asking him to wait in the manager's office. We then call the PMO and they take over from there."



exchange privileges, conviction

The PMO will send an MP to the scene — if it's a juvenile involved, the MP will be in civilian dress — who will take the subject to the PMO for questioning.

Upon apprehension for shoplifting, the individual's identification card is retained by the military police. The following day, military police investigators will deliver the card to the post ID Card Section for administrative processing.

A Staff Judge Advocate (SJA) Hearing Officer then notifies the individual of the date of his/her hearing. The suspected individual has the right to be present, present evidence to include character witnesses on his/her behalf and to examine evidence against him or her.

If the Hearing Officer determines the individual has shoplifted, he will recommend revocation of the person's Post Exchange privileges in accordance with AR 60-20 to the deputy post commander. A new ID card is issued with an overstamp voiding Post Exchange privileges for a period of six months for first offenders. Repeat offenders may lose their privileges permanently.

Because Fort Benning is a military reservation, shoplifting is against Federal law. If they are repeat offenders and the items taken have a large dollar value, retired and civilian personnel will be processed for permanent exclusion order from the post. For active duty and dependent personnel who are repeat offenders, housing privileges can be forfeited.

Active duty personnel are frequently offered an Article 15, but could be tried under Article 121, which could result in a trial by general court martial which carries a maximum punishment of dishonorable discharge and five years confinement at hard labor.

In addition to being excluded from post, civilians can be prosecuted in Federal District Court or in Magistrate's Court.

Juvenile offenders — those under the age of 17 — are handled a little differently. "After we pick the child up at the Exchange," says Spec. 4 Timothy T. Moder, of the PMO Juvenile Section, "we notify their parents. Depending on the age of the child and whether or not it's a first offense, we usually place him on probation under our jurisdiction."

"Otherwise, we turn him over to the civilian juvenile authorities either in Chattahoochee or Muscogee County, depending on where the child lives."

The juvenile, if determined to be a shoplifter, will also lose his Exchange privileges for at least six months.

PMO officials say many of the items taken, cost less than $1, although some cost more than that. Thus far this year, based on the number of offenses and the estimated cost of the items taken, the average value works out to $3.75.

The shoplifter is not the only loser. Innocent patrons must also pay in the form of price increases to make up for losses incurred for items shoplifted that go undiscovered.

Culinary Arts Show held

Last week on Kelley Hill, the 197th Infantry Brigade held a Culinary Arts Show to give gourmet cooks in the Brigade a chance to show off their talents.

The rivalry was intense between the cooks selected to compete in the show but in the end Spec.4 Anthony Hall, HHC, 1/58th Inf, 197th Inf Bde, came out ahead. He received a trophy, a four-day pass, and a letter of commendation from the commander for his efforts in the show.

Fried chicken, twice baked potatoes, and broccoli were the items being judged by the group. Among the judges were Nolan Walters and Richard Hyatt of The Columbus Enquirer, Ms. Beth McGee, program director of Dairy and Food Nutrition Council for the Old Southeastern Company, Lt. Col. Thomas S. Leverette, HHC, 197th Inf Bde, and Maj. Hobbson, teacher of the food services portion of the Commander's Course.

Second and third place winners were Pfc. Freddie Blocker, HHC 3/7th Inf, and Pfc. William Morehead, Co D, 197th Spt Bn, respectively.

Auto insurance refunds available to some

The Non Commissioned Officers Association (NCOA), in conjunction with the American International Group (National Union), has embarked on a comprehensive program to locate thousands of military personnel who may be due a refund of automobile insurance premiums. They were personnel who were stationed in West Germany from 1972 through 1977.

The refunds would emanate from "Technical Excess Funds" of several companies who wrote automobile insurance for Non Commissioned and Petty Officers assigned to that country. The amounts refundable will be determined by premiums paid, availability of technical excess funds per insured period and what companies declared technical excesses during this period of time.

The broad scope of this undertaking is the result of AIU's requesting help from the NCOA in determining which of its members rotated to the United States without filling out the required forms requesting refunds from its technical excess resources. Since the excess is a program established by the German Automobile Insurance Department in which all companies writing automobile business in West Germany must participate, it was decided to expand the service beyond just National Union insureds to include all companies. Also, since NCOA operates on behalf of all military parsonnel, it was further decided to provide the service regardless of rank and regardless of whether or not the individual is a member of the NCOA.

A spokesman for NCOA's recommended automobile insurance program coordinator, AMPAC, which will oversee the refund undertaking, explained that a technical excess fund is that money remaining as company profit, after all operating expenses have been calculated.

However, he also pointed out that everyone who believes they may be entitled to a refund may not be. Some companies automatically applied the refund to policy renewals, which some insureds may have considered safe driving reductions in premiums. Other companies may not have built-up excesses during all periods during the 1972-77 period being explored. In short, he added, not everyone who applies for a refund will be entitled to one.

There are several million dollars in unclaimed refunds involved and the NCO association is setting the wheels into motion to make it as easy as possible for those who are entitled to refunds to receive their money. A sample form will shortly be available which may be filled out and mailed to NCOA International Headquarters where it will be staffed and processed by AMPAC employees. Coordination will then be undertaken with those companies indicated by the insured as having held their policies during their tours in Germany. Each applicant will receive a return postcard indicating receipt of a claim and an explanation that up to 60 days may be required before further information as to whether their claim has been honored or refused.

All refund checks will be returned, by the companies, to NCOA International Headquarters so that the case file may be closed on each applicant. To preclude possible loss, checks will then be mailed to NCOA Service Centers in the applicant's area for further distribution.

The scope of the program is of such magnitude that it is essential that the official questionnaires be utilized. They have been designed to develop all necessary information for the insurance company's use in determining the individual's eligibility for refund. NCOA expects in excess of 100,000 inquiries, so requests made through individual letters, telephone inquiries, or other communications cannot be handled.

OWC Bazaar is scheduled for Nov. 8

By Jo Lynn Allen and Donna Hale

Taent Tree

The Talent Tree will be open Saturday, from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. Don't forget to stop by and browse through the lovely selection of Christmas gifts.

Benning Ladies

Please remember that the OWC Bazaar is Nov. 8, from noon to 4:30 p.m. in the Officers' Club. Mrs. William Livsey will officially open the Bazaar at a ribbon-cutting ceremony at noon. There will be lots of lovely items for sale — don't miss this annual treat!

OWC Welcome Coffee

The next OWC Welcome Coffee will be held Nov. 7, at 10 a.m., in the OWC Lounge. Newcomers are cordially invited to attend. No reservation is necessary.

NCOWC Oktoberfest

The NCOWC members and their husbands enjoyed an Oktoberfest Oct. 28 at their lounge on Lawson Field. About 50 attended the affair and were served delicious German food. The lounge was decorated in fall colors and dancing to German music completed the evening. Hostesses were Mesdames Lois Cameron, Lillian Lambert, Barbara Howard, Gerlinde Belcher, Ruby Johnson, Ann Cogar and Donna Hale.

Halloween Party

Ghosts and goblins danced about Friday evening, Oct. 27, when the NCOWC treated their children to a party at their lounge on Lawson Field. The children enjoyed games, prizes and refreshments. Highlight of the evening was the Pinate game. Each one shared in trying to break the pinate and rushed to get the candy once it finally was broken. Such a fun filled evening for the children, thanks to hostesses Mrs. Gloria Dunlap and Mrs. Jessie Green.

Schuller puts it like this. We must learn to focus on the dream for success. It is important to plug into a positive outlook which will provide us with more energy than we ever thought we had. People who are open to their divinely-inspired visions of themselves are different. For one thing they discover from both within and without a boundless level of energy that keeps them moving toward a successful life.

To sim it up, it is not only possible, but entirely necessary for us to plan out our life story in advance. Success will come only to those who look hopefully to the future as they plan for and expect great things to happen in their lives.

Our kids learn from us; What we show them about drinking. If we drink too much and get drunk, the chances are they will follow the example.

New law boosts bennies to some disabled vets

Some 65,000 Georgia veterans, their dependents or survivors stand to benefit from legislation signed into law recently by the President.

Georgia Commissioner of Veterans Affairs Pete Wheeler said that the bill, effective Oct. 1, and entitled the Veterans' Disability Compensation and Survivors' Benefits Act of 1978, provides for a 7.3 per cent increase in benefits to service-connected disabled veterans and to the spouses and children receiving dependency and indemnity compensation (DIC). The increase also applies to the annual clothing allowance paid to certain seriously-disabled veterans whose disabilities cause excessive wear on their clothing because of special prosthetic devices they are required to use.

Other provisions of the bill include:

- Benefits to survivors of totally disabled veterans not now eligible for DIC, regardless of the cause of the veteran's death, if the veteran has been totally disabled for at least ten years, or for five years continuously since his discharge;
- Substantial increases for certain severely disabled veterans, such as multiple amputees and those needing special medical aids;
- An increase of $500 in the automobile assistance allowance, available to certain disabled veterans, raising that allowance from $3,300 to $3,800;
- An increase of $300 in the service-connected burial benefit, from $800 to $1,100;
- An increase of $50 in the non-service-connected burial benefit, from $250 to $300;
- A new monthly "housebound" allowance of $45 for surviving spouses receiving DIC who are substantially confined to their homes or are institutionalized;
- An increase from $100 to $200 a month in the Medal of Honor pension for the 286 living recipients.
- An extension of dependents allowance to veterans rated 30 per cent or more disabled. Previously, the dependency allowance was allowed for a disability rating of at least 50 per cent.

Commissioner Wheeler, said, "This bill will be a great benefit to many of our seriously disabled veterans and it will help show our gratitude to the survivors of those who gave their lives for our country."

VA guidebook helpful

The Veterans Administration today reminded handicapped and elderly veterans about a guidebook, published by the Federal Aviation Administration, making air travel easier and more convenient.

Titled "Access Travel: Airports", the publication lists design features, facilities and services that meet the travel needs of the wheelchairbound, the blind, the deaf and the aged at 220 airport terminals in 27 countries.

The 20-page guide identifies 69 items important to aged and handicapped veterans and others. The list includes reserved parking, ramps, accessible rest rooms, elevator controls with raised lettering, telephones with amplifiers, and special transportation.

Single, free copies of the guide are available from the Consumer Information Center, Department 619F, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

Hill okays o'seas travel bennies for junior EM

Junior enlisted soldiers should begin receiving dependent travel and household goods benefits to overseas assignments on Nov. 1, according to DA and MILPERCEN officials.

The Junior Enlisted Travel (JET) Entitlements, passed last week by congress, will soon put junior FM on the same footing as more senior soldiers. The entitlements package authorizes the Army to spend several million this year for soldiers in grades E-4 with less than two years service and E-1 through E-3 to move their families.

The JET program does not apply to moves within CONUS or to overseas areas where dependents are restricted from residing.

Benefits familite in these grades will enjoy for the first time include shipment of a privately owned vehicle, 1,500 pounds of household goods, dependent travel allowance, temporary lodging allowance and cost of living allowance.

Until now, soldiers in these grades were eligible for shipment of 225 pounds of military and personal goods.

Officials stressed that, while all junior EM are eligible for these benefits, they are still subject to approval of dependent travel to overseas.

For soldiers now in CONUS and alerted for overseas assignment, this means they must apply for and receive approval for dependent travel before receiving JET entitlements.

For soldiers now serving overseas, who want dependents to join them or who want the Army to pay for return dependent travel to CONUS, this means they must complete the minimum overseas command sponsored tour.

Eligibility for JET entitlements does not guarantee dependent travel, concurrent travel or housing in government quarters, officials stressed.

Junior enlisted soldiers are not eligible to reside in government quarters, according to DoD directives.

Approval of dependent travel is subject to availability of civilian quarters in an overseas command, official explained. If such quarters are available for occupancy within 60 days after a sponsor arrives overseas, concurrent, or joint sponsor-dependent travel, will be approved.

If quarters are not available for at least 61 to 140 days after a sponsor's arrival overseas, officials noted, deferred travel will be granted, meaning dependents will join their sponsor at a later date.

Because many soldiers who are eligible for JET entitlements are first term enlistees and within one or two years of ETS, officials added, they should be aware they must extend and serve the minimum command-sponsored tour length (usually three years) before dependent travel is approved. (A soldier with 18 months remaining service, for example, would have to extend 18 months to receive dependent travel if assigned to Germany.)

In addition, officials cautioned, the Army command in Europe recently issued a strong warning about financial hardships junior EM can expect to encounter there.

In Germany, where most eligible families

Doughboys make it two in a row

Going for it

Doughboy running back Arthur Hawkins is always a quick scoring threat.

By Seth Hamilton

The Doughboys have won two games in a row. They beat the Carson-Newman College Junior Varsity Eagles 19-12 Saturday night at Doughboy Stadium.

The game started slowly for the Doughboys as the Eagles jumped out to a 12-0 halftime lead. The Eagles had scored on a touchdown, a field goal and a safety for their 12 points.

The Doughboys turned the game around late in the third quarter. The Eagles had control of the ball deep in Doughboy territory and it looked like they were ready to add to their lead. But, Doughboy safety Edgar Arnold changed that as he intercepted an Eagles pass on his own three 3 yard line and bolted 97 yards for a touchdown. After the conversion failed the Doughboys trailed 12-6.

It wasn't long before the Doughboys pulled out a repeat performance. Following a fumble recovery by Doughboy Ed Cochran on the Eagles 32 yard line, the Doughboys marched to the Eagles 1 yard line where fullback Robert Moore ran it in for the score. The Doughboys missed the conversion play again and the score was all tied up at 12 apiece.

The Eagles charged right back all the way to the Doughboy's 7 yard line but were brought back to the 22 yard line after a clipping. It was there that the Doughboys staged one of their finest defensive stands of the season. They held their gound for three downs and forced the Eagles into a field goal attempt from the 36 yard line. The Doughboys fired up defense put on a heavy rush, making the Eagles miss the attempt.

With time running out, quarterback Joe Duenas led the Doughboys to their winning touchdown. After a clutch 15 yard completion to tight end Dave Williams to salvage a third and six situation on their own 25 yard line, Duenas dumped a 10 yard pass to Arthur Hawkins who proceeded to dash all the way for the score. That 60 yard scoring play put the icing on the Doughboy's second straight victory.

The Doughboys will take on the Florida State College Junior Varsity Seminoles tomorrow night at Doughboy Stadium.The Doughboys will be fired up to win their third straight.

National military bass tournament concludes

The results are in from this year's All Military National Bass Fishing Championship held at Lake Walter F. George Oct. 18-20.

Fishermen from Fort Benning fared well in the championship that faatured the finest fishermen from all branches of the Armed Forces. Benning's Bob Billman, a member of the Fort Benning Bass Club, led the field with a total three-day catch of 29 pounds lbs., 9 ox. Don Strickland, a former member of the Benning Bass Club, finished third with 27 lbs., 9 ox.

Other area fisherman placing well were Fort Rucker's Purt Price (4th) with 24 lbs., 13 oz. and Fort Jackson's Graham Wilde (5th) with 23 lbs., 15 oz.

The largest single catch of the championship an 8 lb. 5 ox. beauty nabbed by Hugh Guy of Fort Rucker.

Of the total 449 fish caught dauring the event, 428 of them were returned to the lake alive and well and that much craftier when it comes to going after bait.

Rugby going strong

The Ft. Benning Ruggers traveled this past weekend to Hilton Head Island to play in the High Spirits Rugby Tournament. Last year the post rugby team beat everyone until the final playoff and lost in overtime by a 3 point penalty kick.

This year the 'Flyers' won the first two games beating Georgia Medical College 15-3, and Tulane University 28-3. The championship game was between Ft. Benning and Old White RFC. Earlier these two teams had met and Old White had beaten Benning 15-4. But it was a more experienced Benning team this time and the game went into overtime at 9-9.

Both teams forwards refused to allow the big break for the score. Benning team was living up to it's reputation of playing hard rugby and it seemed the game was about to go into double overtime when a high tackle gave Old White a penalty kick that was good just as the whistle sounded ending the overtime.

So another 2nd place trophy joins the display case in Infantry Hall as the 'Flyers' once again lose the Hilton Head Tournament by 3 points. This Saturday, Nov. 4, at 2:00 p.m. the Post Ruggers will host The Auburn Rugby Team at Stilwell Field, so bring out the gang for an afternoon of live contact action. See you there!

Benning swim team places well in meet

By Jim Tillman

Fort Benning's Barracudas competed in the Columbus College Recreation Association (CCRA) AAU swim meet October 28-29. Expecting stiff competition, the 'cudas were not disappointed when 223 swimmers from the Dekalb Dynamos (Atlanta), the Atlanta Swin Association and other top seeded state teams attended the meet.

The Barracudas entered 19 swimmers entered 19 swimmers in the 160 events and came away with 10 first place, 5 second, 9 third, 4 fourth, 4 fifth, and 2 sixth place winnings.

Beginning with the Class "A" 11-12 year-old boys 200 meter free style, throught the 6-8 year-old firls 200 medley relay, the first morning set a fast pace for the meet. Turning in four "AA" times was David Christensen in the 100 meter back, 100 meter fly, 100 meter free and the 200 meter individual medley. This was quite an accomplishment for david since his normal distance is 50 meters and he is only 10 years old.

In the 11-12 years old boys, Manuel Pangelinan also turned down in "AA" time in the 50 meter back stroke and three "A" times in the 50 meter free, the 50 meter breast and the 100 meter individual medley.

In the senior division, Bridgett Pangelinan placed in all of her 6 events with 3 first, 3 thirds and 1 fifth. Also placing in all of his 5 events was Kirby Pilcher with 2 first, a second, a third and a fifth place.

The Barracudas will be on the road this weekend. Traveling to Atlanta's Tara Tarpons' pool November 4-5, the 'cudas will be facing a "marathon" style scheule of swimming events. Tehrir next home meet will be the Thanksgiving Pilgrim Meet set for November 18-19. This will be an age group and senior open to be held at Fort Benning's Briant Wells pool.

Doughboy Basketball season begins

by Seth Hamilton

The Fort Benning Doughboys basketball team started their season in winning style. After beating Columbus College in a pre-season scrimmage match, the Doughboys went on to win their first two games of the year by decisive margins.

In the season opener last Friday, the Doughboys traveled to Albany to take on the Albany Marines. The Marine's biggest mistake was letting the Doughboys into the gym as the Doughboy's offense dominated the game from the start. When the smoke cleared, the Doughboy's had smothered the Marines 103-70. Steve Mims scored 21 points for the Doughboys and Charlie Jackson added 18. Five Doughboys finished the game in double figures.

Before the season started, the Doughboys beat Columbus College, 71-66 at Sand Hill's Santiago Gym. Doughboy's All-Army center James King led the attack with 18 points.

On Saturday the Doughboy's came home to host the Fort Rucker Flyers at Santiago Gym. Unfortunately for the Flyers, the Doughboys weren't very hospitable as they beat the Flyers 99-56. The first half of the game was close as the Flyers used a slow, deliberate offense to counter the Doughboys fast breaks. But in the second quarter, the Flyers were held to only 18 points and the Doughboys had their second win in as many games this year. Top scorer for the Doughboys was guard Rick Donnelle with 18 points.

The Doughboys will play the Albany Marines again tonight at Santiago Gym in Sand Hill at 7:30. The teams will also play an afternoon game tomorrow at 1:30.

Here is the complete Doughboy basketball schedule:

Debbie Griswald accomplished something that very few bowlers succeed in doing. In order to get a Womens International Bowling Congress Century Patch you have got to bowl a single game of 100 pins over your average. Debbie averages 145 on her Thursday morning league. Debbie rolled games of 139 - 249 and 172 to earn her Century Patch.

Dotty Hudson of the OWBL who averages 152, almost succeeded in getting her patch also. Dottie rolled games of 134 - 244 and 173 for a 551 series.

Kenneth Warren, who averages 162, bowling in the Jim Calhoun League at the Main Post Bowling Center, whot a real nice 278 earning him an American Bowling Congress patch.

JROTC wins meet

The Carver High School JROTC Varsity Male Drill Team, coached by W. S. Nelson scored 761 points to win first place and the female team scored 663 points to win first place in the female competition. The annually sponsored MOWW-JROTC Drill Meet was held Friday at Rothschild Junior High School. Winning high individual honors was Cadet Abdual Rasheed and Cadet Gwen Daniel, both of Kendrick High School.

Jordan High School, coached by Eddie L. Sundie won Second Place and Hardaway High School coached by James M. Forsythe won Third Place.

Trophies were presented by Bruce H. Fraser, Director of Army Instruction and a member of the Columbus Georgia Chapter of The Military Order of World Wars.

Benning youth soccer

The Fort Benning Youth Soccer Team defeated North Highland in a Bi-City League game 3-1 Monday night. The victory was their fourth straight this year without a loss.

David Courtney, Benning's top goal scorer, accounted for two of the scores and Allejandro Illescus added another.

The Benning team will play again this Monday at Lakebottom Field (adjacent to Columbus High School) at 6:45 p.m.

Monday, approximately 120 men ranging in rank from lieutenant colonel to general officer ran a two-mile run starting and ending in front of the Golf Course Country Club.

Bill Schuler and Buck Walters placed first and second with the times of 11:15 and 11:17 respectively. Schuler's 5 minutes and 37 seconds per mile is measurable by anyone's standards.

Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey, post commander, placed sixth with the time of 12:55. He commented, "We'll just have to do this more often."

Other top finishers were, Stan Bonta and Tom Fluker with times of 12:06 and 12:52 respectively.

USAMU's McGowan wins Gulfport Pistol Championship

1978 National Pistol Champion, Charles McGowan, U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit (USAMU), continued his winning streak by overtaking teammate Emil Heugatter to win the Gulport Invitational Pistol Championship last week in matches held at the Gulfport, Miss., Police Department range.

Trailing Heugatter at one time by as much as ten points, McGowan rallied in the final two stages of the individual championship for a total score of 2,634 points out of 2,700 to Heugatter's 2,632.

In team competition, the U.S. Army "Blue" team of McGowan, Heugatter, Thomas Woods and Marvin Black, combined their scores to defeat a strong National Guard squad in winning the Center Fire, .45 caliber and team aggregate championships with a total of 3,487 points.

In other competition held over the same weekend at Quantico, Va., USAMU shooter Charles Davis turned in one of the best performance of his career to win the Virginia State Moving Target Championship. Davis, a member of this year's U.S. World Championship team, scored 569 and 573 points in standard runs and 369 in the mixed run for a total of 1,511 points to win over Robert Partridge, U.S. Marine Corps, at 1,497. Third place was taken by Martin Edmondson at 1,495 points.

Davis and Edmonson teamed up for 2,243 points to win the two-man competition and were joined by Jim Reiber and Robert George to score 4,408 points for the four-man championship. New York State finished second with 4,190 points followed by Canada at 4,031.

Marriage for convenience: a growing fad

By Bob Ray

"I'm sorry, but my hands are tied by policies and regulations that do not permit me to authorize you to move off post," the company commander explained.

"But sir," the specialist pleads. "I'm 25-years-old. I'm an E-5 and haven't lived in the barracks since basic and ATT. I'm not used to sharing a room with another guy, to the numerous stereos blaring, and to other guys stumbling down the halls drunk at all hours. It isn't easy to have to clean community showers and latrines when others do not have good personal hygiene standards."

"And, as if that isn't bad enough, sir, at 25 I still have no privacy. I have people coming in to my room to make sure it is tidy, to make sure it has been swept, dusted, mopped, and waxed. And even worse, they check to make sure I keep my drawers and wall locker neat," the specialist complained with fervor."

The commander, though sympathetic, stated, "Your complaint is not a new one, you know. If only I had a dime for each time I have heard it. But policies are policies. I'm sorry." He jokingly added in parting, "You could always get married. I'm sure that would solve all your problems."

But the seed planted in jest began to grow.

After looking around the specialist found another service member in the same plight and state of mind — and another contract marriage between soldiers searching for a way to "beat the system" was struck.

Consult legal advisor

Capt. Roger Hughes, Senior legal assistance officer for the VII Corps, said that before soldiers get into this situation they should consult a legal advisor. "Although we cannot do court work or represent someone in a hearing, we are attorneys and we can and do explain the legal ramifications involved. We are not personal advisors and cannot make a decision for those seeking legal assistance, but after we spell out the possibilities the two desiring the marriage of convenience will be a better position to weigh the facts and decide if moving out of the barracks and getting the extra living allowance is worth the risks they may be taking."

As he sees it, the main problems in this type of marriage which has been becoming more popular among the young troops in the past few years are: There is no quick way to get out of the marriage; the costs of divorce can be tremendously high — a soldier can still wind up responsible for support, and problems can arise over division of property.

First, let's look at the reason commanders cannot let any troop wishing to leave the barracks for off-post dwellings do so with the command blessings and living allowance. According to Army Regulation 210-16, "The installation commander will maintain maximum occupancy of all adequate bachelor quarters by authorized personnel." And even if you are able to obtain permission to live off post during a time when the barracks are full, the regulation states, "When adequate bachelor quarters become available, the installation commander will withdraw a previously issued statement of non-availability of quarters and require a member to live on post in accordance with assignment priorities.

In order to get around this policy, the two service members go on with their nuptial arrangements, spelling out all property, pay, and living arrangements in a contract which they duly sign and have notorized. This paper may make them feel safe, but according to Hughes, even this can be a pitfall.

would be expected to take advantage of JET entitlements, the dollar this week fell to record lows against the German mark exchange rate levels.

This increases the cost of paying German rents and utilities which the command says are much higher than average costs in the U.S.

Costs for setting up households in Germany, the command said in August, could run $1,000 or more for deposits and advance rents. Minimum auto liability insurance premiums, for a married soldier under age 25, the command added, begin at $400 annually.

"A junior enlisted soldier should carefully consider whether or not he wants to take his dependents overseas at all," one official remarked. "And if he's just finishing ATT, for example, he only has one week to make that decision and apply for dependent travel."

While advance pay and other allowances help offset expensive costs in Europe, officials said, soldiers should keep in mind that their future paychecks will be smaller during repayment of advance pay.

JET applications for dependent travel will be handled by local MILPOs, officials observed. They advised soldiers wanting to apply for JET entitlements to ask MILPOs for a DA Form 2370 (Application for Dependent Travel) and DD Form 1056 (Dependent Passport Application), adding that soldiers and dependents should have birth certificates, citizenship papers and other vital documents ready for travel request processing.

More information on specific requests can be obtained at local MILPOs. — (ARNEWS)

"Notorization of the document does not make it any more effective or legally binding. It just depends on the laws regarding divoorce and separations in the state where they are sought. Notorizing the document does not make it legal, it merely attests to the fact that the document was actually signed by the parties concerned."

Living together not answer

Anyway, the marriage takes place and the newlyweds often maintain separate living quarters, life styles, and friends — and life goes on the same as before but now off post with quarters allowances.

One specialist preparing the paperwork for such a marrriage said, "Neither of us wants to give up any privacy or independence and living together just naturally imposes certain restrictions. That is what we want to get away from so living together is not the answer."

So the marriage is completed and everything seems fine — until one or both parties decide that it is time to end the marriage agreement. Hughes explained that they can take a couple of routes.

"Here in Germany and in many states it is quite possible that a marriage such as the one in question could be annulled. Under German law the marriage is valid until such a time." He added that there was a catch to an annulment. "The cost of obtaining an annulment here in Germany is the same as the cost of divorce — expensive."

"One plus here, though, is that the marriage contracts (prenuptial agreements) are valid and enforced under German law. However, such contracts are valid only if prepared by a German notary, a government official who will assure that the contract complies with German law. In the United States it is up to each state to decide if it will recognize such a document as legally binding. The contracts are not valid in Germany, however, when used to circumvent the fundamentals of marriage, when used to fraud or trick one party; or when used to defraud a third party such as a creditor."

Next step divorce

Hughes explained that the other road to take is divorce. "On this the laws differ from state to state. We have fault and no-fault states. In the fault states the major problems divorces can be granted for are indifelity, abandonment, or impotence. In the no-fault states marital breakdown can be cited as the reason for pursuing a divorce. In this case the parties tate that marital relations have ceased to exist and that they have no expectations of resolve.

"No matter which kind of state it is, though, the courts will allow contest of the grounds or the settlement — and if one party decides not to play ball, obtaining a divorce could last for some time and cost tremendously," the legal assistance officer stated.

Support required

"There are so many possibilities of problems arising. For example, say one soldier gets out of the service. The remaining service member is technically responsible for support under federal law and Army Regulation 600-20—and his pay can be garnished for such support under the provisions of 42 U.S.C.A. 460-462. The marriage may also entitle the spouse to a claim on a portion of retirement pensions."

Words of caution: "Although the couple may not consider themselves really married, they do, in fact, incur all the requirements of support duties and responsibilities any other married couple would have. As I said earlier, convenience must be considered on an always the possibility that one party can decide to back out of the deal and play the support-property division games.

Hughes explained that, "Marriages of convenience must be considered on anan individual basis after researching all possible legal ramifications and pitfalls. After obtaining this information the couple must decide "Is it really worth it?"

Loss of BAQ

"Service persons who enter into such marriages could be setting themselves up for problems with the finance office, said Hughes. He explained that if the parties to the marriage have no true intent to be married, the marriage may be a sham, or void, and could be annulled. Once married, one of them is entitled to a BAQ at a with-dependents rate. However federal law and the DoD pay manual authorize that rate for only true marriages, not sham ones. Under these circumstances the service person could be setting him or herself up for an action by finance to recoup BAQ payments, or worse, charges of defrauding the government.

The captain closed by urging anyone considering entering such a proposition to contact their local legal assistance officer before any commitment is made. "It just may save them a lot of headaches and heartaches in the future."

Rules eased for vets to buy mobile homes

Georgia Commissioner of Veterans Affairs Pete Wheeler is advising Georgia veterans who may be considering the purchase of a mobile home, using their GI home loan benefit, that the Veterans Administration has modified its regulations pertaining to mobile home loans, particularly for double wide mobile homes.

Until recently, the VA's definition of a double width mobile home was "a home consisting of two or more units which when placed together formed a home 20 feet wide."

The new regulation amends the VA definition to include "any mobile unit which has a section, or sections, which unfold along the entire length of the transportable unit to form a home at least 20 feet wide.

Wheeler said that the modification of the VA ruling makes this type of unit eligible for the higher loan amounts and longer loan amounts and longer loan terms applicable to double-wide mobile homes.

The regulation provides for a loan of up to $20,000 for a maximum period of 20 years and 32 days to purchase a double-wide mobile home.

In contrast, the maximum loan amount for the purchase of a single-width mobile home is $12,500 for a period of 12 years, 32 days.

Complete information and assistance regarding GI home loans may be obtained at any office of the Georgia Department of Veterans Service.

Conduct social security business by telephone

People who have business with Social Security can now take care of most everything by telephone, Tommy Morris, Social Security district manager in Columbus, said recently.

The first week of any month is a bad time to call Social Security, unless the caller has very urgent business. That is the week Social Security and supplemental security income checks are delivered. During that time it is not unusual for all lines to be in use. The best time to call is after mid-month.

A person can call Social Security to:

- Apply for Social Security or SS benefits.
- Apply for Medicare.
- Change name or address of record.
- Report change in marital status.
- Report stop or start of work, and other events affecting checks.
- Report lost or stolen check or delayed payment.
- Report lost or missing Social Security or Medicare card.
- Get help with Medicare forms.

Farewell reception held

A farewell reception was held Oct. 24 at the Supper Club for allied students graduating from Infantry Officer Advanced Course 3-78.

In an award ceremony during the reception, Bob Walton, manager and vice-president of WRBL-TV, and Don Nahley, WRBL-TV sales manager, received certificates of appreciation for their work with the allied students.

While the allied students are going to school here at Benning, they are assigned civilian sponsors. The students can spend as much time with the civilian sponsors as possible and often end up staying at the sponsor's home, getting used to American ways of life.

Walton and Nahley have worked with the Allied Student Training Division (ASTD) as civilian sponsors longer than anyone else in Columbus.

Mrs. Janice Donovan of Columbus received a letter of appreciation for her work with the allied students' wives. Mrs. Donovan, a language tutor, travels to Fort Benning twice a week to help the wives brush up on their English.

Handicapped Dependents must be reported to DA

Soldiers with handicapped dependents should notify DA of their needs before being assigned to Europe, according to US Army Europe (USAREUR) MILPERCEN officials.

Services for people with physical, emotional or intellectual handicaps are limited in USAREUR, officials explained.

Army Regulation 614-203 requires that handicapped dependents be identified to DA as soon as the handicap is known. This will insure the handicapped dependent is taken into consideration before a new assignment is given.

In addition, officials said the soldier must indicate the handicapped dependent on the application for concurrent travel (DA Form 2370) before being assigned to Europe. An attempt will then be made to assign the soldier to an area where the dependent may receive the educational or medical care he or she needs.

If the soldier can't be assigned in an area where these services are available, DA will help solve the problem, officials concluded.

Veterans Day Message

Veterans Day — proclaimed by the President of the United States in honor of former members of the United States Armed Services — to recall their sacrifices during war and to pay tribute to their contributions to peace. Veterans Day was set aside to remind Americans of the tragedies of war and of those who gave their lives for freedom.

Some Fort Benning personnel will be travelling during this holiday while others will relax at home during this time. Whatever form of recreation you choose, take time to consider the safety of yourself and your family. Drive carefully and practice safety in all of your holiday activities.

None of our personnel were lost as a result of Columbus Day traffic accidents. This is an accomplishment which we should all view with pride. Let's match this achievement with a similar one during this holiday period. Take time to be safe.

WILLIAM J. LIVSEY
Major General, USA
Commanding

Today's cover was a prize-winning entry of The Ledger-Enquirer several years ago, reproduced here for Veterans Day.

Christmas Parade plans underway

Plans are underway for the 1978 Columbus Christmas Parade, which will take place Dec. 7 at 6 p.m. on 2nd Avenue.

The theme of this year's parade will be "International Christmases" lending itself to a world of ideas.

According to George E. Wade Jr., Parade chairman, "We have learned quite a lot from the past parades and are confident that this year's parade will be something the whole family will enjoy seeing and taking part in."

The 1978 parade looks to be the biggest parade ever held in Columbus with entries coming from all over the city as well as from other counties. The parade will take a slightly different route from past parades in that it will begin at the corner of 2nd Avenue and will turn onto 10th Street and travel down 10th Street in front of the Government Center and turn right onto 1st Avenue. The parade will continue down 1st Avenue to 13th Street, turn left on to 13th Street down to Broadway, left on to Broadway and travel down Broadway.

Members of the Committee include: Dayton Preston, downtown consultant for the City; Don Fabiani, executive director of the Columbus Convention and Visitors Bureau; Col. Richard W. McKee, deputy post commander; Mr. George Corradino, director of Music for the Muscogee County Schools; Joy Williams, First Federal Savings and Loan Association; John Charpentier and Sandy Brusso of the Columbus Convention and Visitors Bureau.

Anyone who is interested in participating in the parade is encouraged to call Sandy Brusso at the Columbus Convention and Visitors Bureau, 322-1613, between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.

SMA gets second star

The Sergeant Major of the Army will begin wearing new rank insignia sometime around the first of the year.

DA personnel officials say the new insignia was approved by Army Chief of Staff Gen. Bernard W. Rogers in late September for wear beginning 60-90 days after approval.

A spokesman for Sergeant Major of the Army William Bainbridge said a firm date for introduction of the new insignia depends on when the unique emblems can be manufactured.

The insignia is similar to that of a sergeant major but has two stars instead of one in the field between the chevrons and "rockers." The current rank insignia is the same one worn by command sergeants major with one star surrounded by a wreath.

Home care unit under construction

The Veterans Administration has awarded a $4.9 million contract to Barnett Construction Co., of Memphis, Tenn., for construction of an innovative, 120-bed nursing home care unit at the Memphis VA Medical Center.

The nursing home, scheduled to be completed in 1980, will be a two-story building, with provision for two additional floors if needed at a future date.

The building will be equipped with solar collectors to provide hot water to the facility.

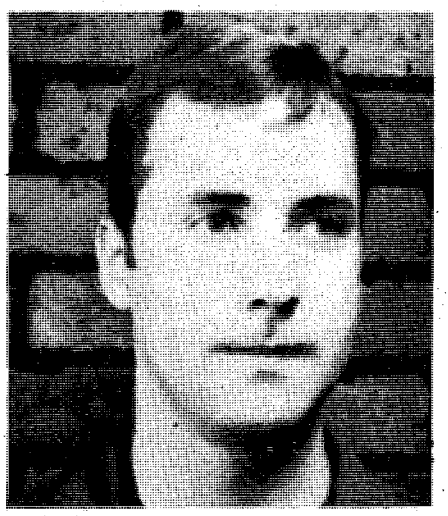
Glad you asked

If you could change one thing at Fort Benning, what would it be?

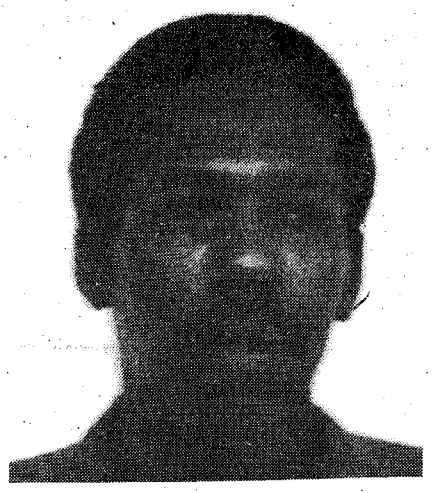


2Lt. Dawson Hancock, 11th Co, IMPC (Mortar Course)

"More emphasis should be placed on FORSCOM here at Benning rather than devoting most attention to TRADOC. Benning is an ideal location for line units, in addition to the 197th."

Staff Sgt. Ronald Miller, Co C, 5th Bn, 1st ITB (Drill Sgt.)

"I feel the hours of the service stations and malls on post should be changed to accommodate the soldier. Many soldiers don't get off work until 5 or 6 p.m. and do not get to use these facilities unless they go on duty time."



Staff Sgt. Robert Robinson, Co B, NCOSI, TSB

"I think it would be great if the recreation services or the club system could bring better and a wider variety of musical entertainment to Benning so that the soldiers would not have to leave post to see a good concert."

Sp. 4 Larry Clouse, Co A, 1/29 Inf, TSB

"I feel a greater emphasis should be placed on completion of the duty mission and less on strict personal appearance, police calls and other non-duty related functions."

Can't wait to get out?

Editor's Note; ARNEWS staffer Linda Kozaryn is editor of DA Scene and DA Focus.

By Linda Kozaryn

"What' sa matter? Couldn't make it out there?" If you ever find yourself returning to the military as "prior service," that's a question you'll be answering.

I've found the easiest response is a simple. "That's right." Not too many first termers want to listen to your reasons for doing what they presently consider an impossibility while sitting in the mess hall. Leave the re-up talks to the reenlistment NCOs.

Come to think of it, during my first tour I probably would have responded in the same way. Cleaning details, GI parties, CQ head count formations, inspections, field duty. Reenlist? I'd have to be crazy. So after three years with the military, with an engineer unit in Germany no less, I decided to return to the civilian world.

Being short then finally ETSing combines all the envy of your firends with a heady feeling of relief. Those "double-digit-fidgets" get pretty frightening. You really start to wonder, "What an I gonna do now?" The security of the military world certainly is comforting. But you can't admit your fears. Your first-term friends would think you were getting a "little strange." So although you may party more than the usual and five mornings a week, instead of your normal two or three, you're looking bleary-eyed, no one takes particular notice.

And then it's over. They've taken your ID card (and your identity) and you're on your way . . . to where? Jobs are hard to find but not impossible. If you're as fortunate as I was, your military experience may have provided you with a necessary skill for a position in the civilian world.

So you've got a job and you've started calling a Class VI store a "liquor store" again. You go to the restroom rather than the latrine. You've finally started having something to talk about other than "war stories" that nobody appreciates anyway.

You may still wake up at "0-dark-thirty" and experience the pleasant relief that you really don't have to get up for formation. You're slowly becoming a real civilian again.

Then, after a while, you start wondering where the excitement went. Your job is all right; the people are nice and it certainly is a lot easier than it was in the military, but . . . is this it?

The same job day after day, looking forward to a two or three week vacation in the summer. There don't seem to be any opportunities for TDY trips. It doesn't look like the whole office will be packing up and going camping for a week anytime too soon. There aren't even any inspections to break up the monotony. After three years of not worrying about what you're going to wear to work it's difficult to face that decision EVERY morning. And, you never seem to meet any new people.

You begin to really start missing the "guys" from your unit. Remember the time we . . . it's all gone. The partying after the Annual General Inspection. That sense of togetherness with all the people you suffered with and celebrated with, is no longer a part of your life.

You may start thinking that all those things you griped about in the military weren't so bad after all.

Most of the people you meet now have never bounced around in the back of a jeep or a Deuce-and-a-half while listening to artillery fire — they have no sense of adventure. Finding a secure job and living day-to-day with an occasional night out seems to be the way to live. For some this may be fine. I found it BORING!

Soldiers perhaps because they're all in the same boat being away from family and friends, tend to be much friendlier, have more in common and are willing to just get up and go! Experiences, good or bad, separate the living from the duds — military people are alive. It may not seem so at 5 a.m. when they have to get up, but when weekends roll around, watch out!

So to all your first termers who think this is all a lot of bull, take a minute and look at the life you're living. There's a lot to gripe about but there's a lot to gripe about on the outside too! I remember swearing I'd never wait in another line anywhere after I got out. As a civilian I stood in line at the grocery store, the bank, waiting for buses . . .

So here I am again, a member of the Army, this time around, proud of it. And when someone asks, "What'sa matter? Couldn't make it out there?" I usually reply. "That's right, I didn't want to!"

Too good to be true?

You get paid to stay healthy.

36th gets new bridge

By Marti Henderson
and Betty Zimmerman

The 36th Engineer Group's bridge construction company has a new bridge, the Assault Ribbon Bridge (ARB).

The 586th Engineer Company is the first CONUS unit to receive the Army's latest innovation in combat bridges. It replaces the M4T6 Float Bridge.

Its numerous advantages were pointed out in a briefing by George W. Deal and Roy G. Mitchel from the U.S. Army Troop Support and Aviation Readiness Command, St. Louis, Mo.

The ARB can be assembled in 15 to 35 minutes as opposed to at least four hours for the float bridge. The reason for this tremendous cut in assembly time is that there are only four major parts (already assembled) per bay in the ARB and 52 major components (unassembled) in the float bridge per bay.

The sections of an ARB are already connected and merely unfold like a ribbon through the use of a built-in hydraulic system. Therefore, two men can launch one bay in two minutes while nine men needed 30 minutes to launch one bay of the float bridge.

Twenty-two personnel from the 586th and eight men from the 72nd Engineer Company, 197th Infantry Brigade are presently taking part in a three-week course on the set-up, operation and maintenance of the ribbon bridge.

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room - and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 100 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

Leave: use it or lose it

Government civilian employees who have more than 240 hours of annual leave must use the extra hours by the ned of the calendar year or forfeit them.

The leave year ends with the beginning of the first complete bi-weekly pay period in the next calendar year.

Leave should be scheduled in advance to allow the supervisor to plan work and effectively use all employees. If an employee loses annual leave because the number of accrued hours exceeds 240, in some cases the leave can be restored.

Whether or not leave will be restored depends on the reasons the employee was unable to take leave.

First, the individual must plan leave six weeks before the end of the year, around the second week of November, and submit an SF 71, request for Leave, for approval. Failure to schedule leave in advance will result in the permanent loss of the excess leave with no chance for restoration.

The reasons for an individual's inability to take leave may be due to:

- Administrative error — May occur when an employee switches leave categories, going from four hours per pay period to six hours per pay period (and the change is not recorded).
- A crisis — the employee is directed to cancel scheduled leave due to an emergency situation within the organization.
- Illness — the employee is ill when annual leave was scheduled in advance. The person is on "sick leave" and as a result may lose the excess annual leave.

These circumstances are taken into consideration when an employee requests leave be restored.

After the lost leave has been restored, the employee has two years to use it. If not used, that leave will be lost with no further chance for restoration.

Employees with excess leave should keep their supervisors posted. Together, supervisor and employee can help prevent the loss of excess leave. (ARNEWS)

Drinking and driving deadly duo

Most people have the misguided idea that a few drinks will not affect their driving ability. The scientific fact is that the critical judgment of a driver and his/her ability to react quickly in emergencies are seriously impaired after only a few drinks.

One of the major factors contributing to motor vehicle accidents in the United States is drinking and driving.

Recent studies indicate that the major proportion of drinking drivers involved in accidents have a high blood alcohol level. This does not mean that the "social drinker" is not involved in drinking driver accidents, but does indicate the the "drunken driver" is the biggest single problem on our streets and highways.

Alcohol is a depressant. It depresses the central nervous system and removes inhibitions and social restraints. Contrary to popular belief coffee or other stimulants will not overcome the effects of alcohol — only time and body processes will accomplish this end.

The blood carries the alcohol to all parts of the body which contain water — and this includes the brain. Once in the brain, alcohol first depresses the area of higher functions which includes such things as judgment and social restraints. Next, it attacks the simple motor functions, reaction time and vision. Balance, coordination and sensory perception are the next faculties to be impaired. Concentrated drinking will eventually lead to stupor, coma and even, if continued steadily, death.

The more alcohol there is in the blood, the longer you must wait until you can drive safely.

The old adage of if you drink don't drive and if you drive don't drink is still valid. However, if you must have that drink, give your body a chance to eliminate the alcohol before you get behind the wheel of your car. (TNS)

Bright barrels to beautify post

"Roll out the barrel, and we'll have a barrel of . . . "LITTER!"

At least that is the hope of Command Sgt. Maj. Vincent Roegiers, post sergeant major, as some 600 litter barrels, painted Infantry blue and white, are being placed around post in strategic places.

It's all part of the post beautification plan. "We hope the barrels will serve a two-fold purpose," said Roegiers. "By painting them a bright, distinctive color and placing them in high-density places, we hope everyone on post will notice and use them.

"Our post will look better, and our soldiers will not have to spend as much time on post police."

The 36th Engineer group has been assisting by cutting tops off the barrels, and DFAE has been helping them with the painting.

The work is being done under the direction of Master Sgt. John F. Schafer, special projects NCO for the post sergeant major.

"I still have some barrels left," said Schafer. "If anyone needs a barrel in their area, please call me at 545-4633."

CFC reaches 117% of goal

The 1979 Combined Federal Campaign (CFC) has reached 117 percent of its goal by attaining $350,000.82 in contributions as of Nov. 7, according to the CFC post project officer.

Even though the goal for this year's campaign has been met, units and activities are encouraged to continue to contribute.

The goal for this year's campaign was $300,000. Funds are divided between the United Way, the National Health Agencies and the International Service Agencies. These large organizations group together a number of health and social service agencies.

Showers bring relief to dry forests

The critically dry situation at Fort Benning finally eased up a bit as the result of Tuesday's rain. Benning's Forestry Branch measured .12 of an inch of rain. According to Forestry Chief Norman Force, a reading of at least .11 of an inch is needed to have any real effect on the Build-up Index or degree of dryness.

The rain dropped the Build-up Index from Nov. 7's reading of 251 to 151 on Nov. 8. Although the index has moved down from the highest class, the current reading is still way above the safe level. According to Force, the rain will have no long term effect on the situation. "Unfortunately there is no rain in the immediate forecast, only wind. So we're by no means out of this critical period yet."

Hunting on post, as well as military training on the ranges, is still being curtailed. In order for the forests to get back to a safe level-below 50 on the Build-up Index-Benning will need a good, long soaking rain of between one and two inches.

The dried up situation at Benning has improved, but the statistics for the record dry spell are astonishing. Before Thursday, the last measureable rain was on Aug. 19, more than two and a half months ago. The Build-up Index had soared to an unprecedented 251 on Nov. 7. The previous high for the Index was 99. Fires on post during the period destroyed 633 acres or the equivalent of more than 573 football fields.

*Area burned is equivalent to 573 football fields.

* The forests can not get any dryer than 400. The wind is a factor that determines the rate at which fire can spread.

From basic green to Infantry blue

By Betty Zimmerman

The first class of One Station Unit Training (OSUT) soldiers graduate today at Weatherby Field.

In 12 weeks these 369 green soldiers of A and B Company, 7th Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade, have been taught how to "soldier". They have been trained to be qualified Infantryment through hard work, good leadership and carefully planned instruction. They proved their knowledge by successfully completing the required tests and have earned the right to wear the Infantry-blue branch insignia disc.

These men came straight to Benning from the reception station at Fort Jackson, S.C. in August. They took their combined basic and advanced individual training (AIT) here at Benning with the same drill instructors throughout the OSUT test program.

Despite a shortened training period of 12 weeks, the trainees learned all the skills listed on the accompanying chart. They also were required to qualify with the M-16 rifle, complete a 25-mile road march, score at least 300 on the physical training test and pass all end-of-block tests as well as the performance oriented infantry qualification test (POIQT).

Other soldiers are now undergoing basic training at Fort Knox, Ky. and will come to Benning for AIT in November. This is called Two Station Training (TST).

An extensive comparison of the program results will be made by the TRADOC Combined Arms Testing Agency (TCATA). Every effort is being made to insure each group receives exactly the same type of training. The main difference between OSUT and TST is the mid-course change in location and drill instructors for the latter.

43d Eng troops in Cabin Castle

By Charles Mills

Elements of the 43d Engineer Battalion Cbt Hvy 36th Engineer Group, recently participated in a multi-unit command post exercise (CPX) called Cabin Castle 78.

Cabin Castle 78 represented the largest gathering of engineer units for a CPX on record. Conducted at Fort McClellan, Ala. on Nov. 3, 4, and 5, this CPX involved twelve National Guard, Army Reserve, and Active Army engineer battalions, organized into four engineer groups under an engineer brigade.

The exercise itself cast the 43d Engr Bn (Cbt) (Hvy) and the other units into 24 hours of combat in a Western European scenario, and tested each unit's capability to effectively support combat operations with timely engineer support.

Veterans Day activities planned

Saturday, is Veterans Day and the occasion will be observed in a variety of programs by schools, civic groups and veterans' organizations across the state. This year the observance is particularly significant in that it is the first time since 1970 that Veterans Day is being celebrated on the same date throughout the nation. Congress restored Nov. 11 as Veterans Day nationally beginning this year.

A number of Veterans Day programs will have Georgia Commissioner of Veterans Affairs Pete Wheeler on the go around Georgia for several days. On Wednesday, he was in Bainbridge for a luncheon address before the Bainbridge Lions Club in the Holiday Inn.

Saturday will find Wheeler in Albany where he will attend Legion Post 30's annual Veterans Day mackerel breakfast. Following the early morning program he will participate in the Veternas Day parade through downtown Albany to the Municipal Building wherre he will deliver a Veterans Day speech.

On Sunday, he returns to Atlanta where he will be principle speaker before a joint Veterans Day program at American Legion Post 574 on Simpson Rd., N.W. Co-sponsoring the program along with Post 574 are: Disabled American Veterans Chapter 35; AMVETS Post 617, and Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 7612. The meeting will be held at 5:30 p.m. Sunday.

Wheeler journeys to St. Elmo, Ga., on Tuesday, for an address before the Chattanooga Valley Kiwanis Club, which will meet at 6:45 p.m. in the Chattanooga Valley Elementary School cafetorium in St. Elmo.

Climaxing Wheeler's round of Veterans Day activities will be a dinner address at a meeting of the James T. Rayle American Legion Post 123 and the Auxuiliary at 7 p.m., Nov. 21, in the Post home in Lexington, Ga.

Professor Safety Says

You may be carrying dangerous and illegal items in your luggage without being aware of it. Federal law prohibits air travelers from taking on board luggage containing explosive, flammable or corrosive materials, such as throwaway butane cigarette lighters, firecrackers, and other chemicals.

At the top of the list are book matches. The Federal Aviation Administration reports that an average of one fire a month is started by matchbooks carelessly tossed into a suitcase. The covers open and match heads rub against the striking strip of another book.

The FAA can fine an air passenger up to $10,000 if he unknowingly carries dangerous material in his luggage. If the violation is intentional, the penalty could be $25,000 and five years in prison. (Courtesy of Family Safety Magazine)

Theatre presents comedy mystery

The Springer Theatre Company will present the comedy mystery, "Catch Me If You Can," from Nov. 9 - 18 at 8:30 p.m. A matinee will be held Nov. 12 at 2:30 p.m.

1918 peace message donated to Infantry Museum

By Pat Brown

A handwritten U.S. Army field message dated Nov. 11, 1918, ordering a ceasefire along the Verdum, France front, has been presented to the National Infantry Museum at Fort Benning.

The message was presented by Lt. Col. (Ret.) Paul D. Strong, who had received it at 10:30 a.m. on that Armistice Day 60 years ago. Before going overseas, Strong had been part of the cadre sent here in 1917 to help establish what was to become Camp Benning.

At the time he received the order, the then Maj. Strong was commander, 2nd Battalion, 316th Infantry Regiment. Due to the heavy casualties suffered by the battalion he had been made commander while still a captain, but had distinguished himself in such a manner that he was promoted to major shortly before the Armistice.

The message read as follows:

"The following has just been received from Nrigade Headquarters. You will see that these instructions are strictly complied with. The runner bringing this will give you the correct time. Quote From Itasco One (Through Italy One) date eleven November '18, Hour Nine H, how sent, telephone to Italy one.

"Hostilities on the whole front after eleven H will cease today, French time. Until that hour the operation previously ordered will be pressed with vigor. At eleven Hour line will halt in place, and no man will move one step backward or forward. All men will cease firing and dig in.

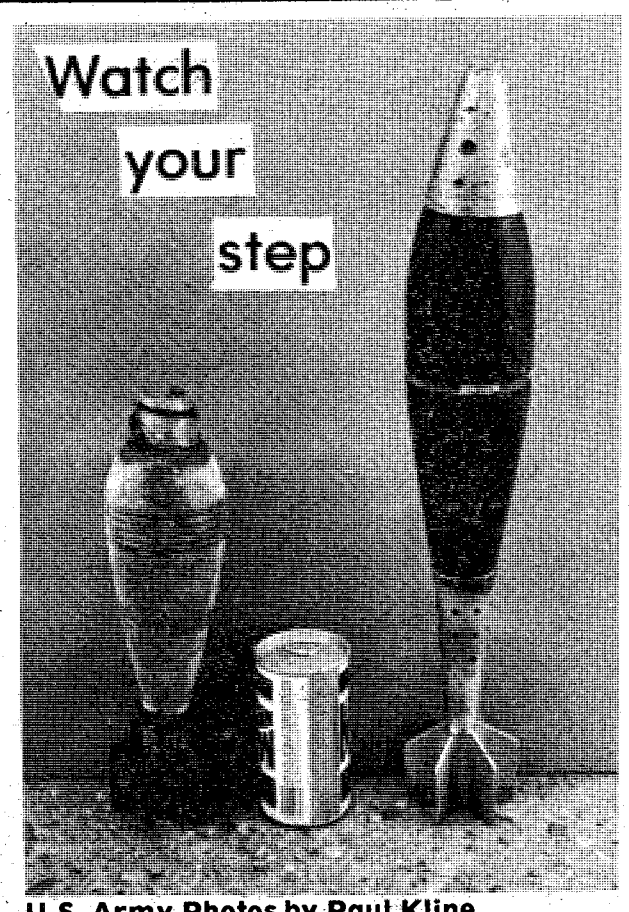
"In case the enemy does not likewise suspend firing, firing will be resumed but no further advance permitted. No fraternization will be allowed. Brigade and other commanders should be concerned with the importance of transmitting these order to the troops and securing their strict enforcements. Rockets and other signals may be used to notify the front line of the arrival of the eleventh hour. . "

"In order to carry out at once the foregoing, notify your battalion Commanders and through them all troops of your regiment. The Battalion at front has been ordered back. Place it in position well forward of crest of hill just in rear of WAVRILLE —"

(s) Johnson, Brigadier General, Commanding

Lt. Col. Strong also presented his taped memoirs of the last few days of World War I to the Museum. Dick Grube, Museum curator, said arrangements are underway to make the tape a part of the "A Living History" program at Carlisle Barracks, Pa.

Strong, who will be 92 this month, lives in Tallahassee, Fla.



In their natural environment (above), the 81mm mortar can be hard to spot as it could be buried in the dirt. The small mortar is a practice mortar. It is approximately one half the size of a live one. The 81mm mortar is loaded with black powder pellets under the fuse and the explosive components of the fuse can kill you. The 81 mm mortar (left) is is 22" x 81mm. It is loaded with high explosives and explosive components in the fuses. Once it is fired and doesn't go off, anything, can set it off. Detonation produces a large explosion and fragmentation and will kill anyone within 20 feet of the blast. If you find any type of DUD — Leave it alone. Call Range Control at 545-5186; 89th EOD at 545-2914/5689; or the Military Police at 545-5222 immediately.

Marine Corps celebrates birthday

The United States Marine Corps celebrates 203 years of service to the country today.

It was on this date in 1775 that the Continental Congress authorized the raising of two battalions of Marines who would "Serve to good advantage on land and sea."

In presenting his traditional "Birthday Message" to Marines the world over, Gen. Louis H. Wilson, commandant of the Marine Corps, remarked: "Since that November day in 1775 at Tun Tavern in Philadelphia, well over three million Americans have worn the Marine uniform "from the halls of Montezuma to the shores of Tripoli." Thousands have been wounded and killed in action against the foes of our country; and each generation has shown magnificently that courage, loyalty, and sacrifice were, indeed, very special qualities of Marines.

"Because of them and what they did, we have today a certain legacy, a certain tradition, and an eternal spirit that friends and foes alike around the globe have come to know well. As we gather once again to observe the anniversary of the founding of our crops, we can, unquestionably, take pride in our past. May those generations of Marines who gather after us be able to do the same — because we, on our watch, were ready for today. Happy birthday and my sincerest wish to every Marine for a 204th year that those who follow will view with pride," he ended.

Since the inception of the Corps, Nov. 10 has historically been the top social occasion of the year for Marines. This "Birthday of the Marine Corps" is celebrated faithfully each year by every Marine in every part of the world.

In keeping with this tradition, the Marines of Fort Benning will host the traditional "Birthday Ball" at the Officers Club tomorrow at 8 p.m.

The highlight of the ball will be the "cake cutting ceremony." Steeped in tradition, this ceremony serves to remind Marines the world over of the proud legacy that has been passed to them by the many thousands of men and women who have borne the title — Marine.

ACS aids in food stamp program

Fort Benning's Army Community Services (ACS) has provided additional information to assist food stamp applicants in Chattahoochee County.

A case worker from the Chattahoochee County Dept. of Child and Family Services will visit Benning every Wednesday afternoon from 1-4:30 p.m. to interview food stamp applicants.

Food stamp applications, which can be obtained at the ACS, should be completed prior to interviewing. The ACS recommends that the applicant bring the following things to the interview to speed up certification.

INCOME:

- Last 4 paycheck stubs or other acceptable verification. The verification should include gross income, Federal and State taxes, Social Security, mandatory retirement contributions, union dues and health insurance premiums.
- Social Security checks, VA checks and/or SSI checks (or copies of award letters)
- Railroad Retirement checks (or copy of award letter)
- Workmen's or unemployment compensation check (or copy of award letter)
- Alimony or child support payments paid to your household

SHELTER COSTS:

- Proof of rent or mortgage payments

Doughboys lose bid for 3 in a row

By Seth Hamilton

The Doughboys probably wish they could replay the third quarter of last week's game against the Florida State University junior varsity Seminoles. The Seminoles scored two touchdowns in the third quarter to cement a 23-11 victory over the Doughboys.

With the Doughboys leading 5-3 at halftime, it looked as if they were heading for an upset win over the Seminoles. The Doughboy defense had throttled the Seminoles in the first half, as they held the Seminoles to minus 21-yards on the ground and effectively stopped their potent passing attack.

But in the meantime, the Doughboys couldn't put much together on the scoreboard either. They managed five points on a 31-yard Wallace Bowles field goal and a second quarter safety when the hike for a Seminoles' punt went over everything including the Seminoles' end sone.

The third quarter proved to be the undoing of the Doughboys. The Seminoles took the kickoff and marched downfield on four plays for a touchdown with only a couple of minutes gone.

Before the Doughboys had a chance to organize their thoughts, the Seminoles struck again on a 40-yard touchdown pass to move ahead 17-5. Both scores had taken less than four minutes.

The Seminoles weren't finished yet as they added one more touchdown midway through the fourth quarter to make it 23-5.

The Doughboys weren't conceding anything as they came back to put together a scoring drive highlighted by a 30-yard Joe Duenas to James Ivory completion. Running back Arthur Hawkins, who is fast becoming known as "Old Reliable," capped the drive with a one-yard touchdown plunge to close the gap to 23-11 after the conversion run failed.

The Doughboys had a final chance to salvage the game when Ron Carter intercepted a pass on the Seminoles 40-yard line. But with time running out, the Doughboys couldn't move the ball any further than the Seminoles 30-yard line and came up empty handed.

The Doughboys record falls to 2-9 with just two games remaining. They'll take on the Mississippi University junior varsity Rebels on Monday at Doughboy Stadium. Game time is 7:30 p.m. Doughboys fans are urged to come out and root the Doughboys on to victories in the two final games.

While most of Fort Benning was comfortably resting in their beds the morning of Nov. 4, the Barracudas, led by coach Rick Fagersten, was on the road to Atlanta for this weeks swim meet. Leaving Fort Benning at 5:30 a.m., the team arrived at the Tara Tarpans Indiana Summer B and C meet in time for the 8 a.m. warm-ups.

The Tara Tarpans of Forest Park hosted the 50 event meet at their recreation center. Twelve teams entered the competition, bring 374 swimmers to the two day AAU sanctioned meet. Because of this large number of swimmers, some events had as many as 13 heats to determine the winner.

Although AAU B and C swim meets are for those swimmers who have not reached the faster swim times for the Class A standards, there were several Class A, AA and AAA times recorded from both the B and C Class competition.

Foos ball an 'enriching' sport

By Julie Casey

To most people, foos ball is a game like pool or darts to play in a bar. But to Derek Harvey, executive officer of Company B, Committee Group, it is a highly competitive sport.

Harvey, a professional tournament table soccer player (foos ball), is the 1977 National Champion. On Nov. 10, he will be defending his title in Chicago with the stakes riding at $100,000. Harvey is as enthusiastic about his sport as any runner or football nut.

Practice makes perfect

Derek Harvey concentrates on his lucrative hobby.

"You tend to take it seriously when you may win $2,000," he added.

Harvey has won as much as $4,000 at a tournament. He added that it is very expensive to enter and travel to the tournaments. But, some of the top money winners in the country earn up to $40,000 a year.

"I play the game because I like it. I would play even if there was no money involved," he said.

He has the game worked down to a science and reads opponents well. When playing, his hands move around the table with experience and skill.

Harvey has a regular physical training routine to maintain fitness. He runs ten to 15 miles per week to play the long hours during a tournament. When in heavy competition, Harvey spends up to 30 hours a week playing foos ball. In addition, he also lifts weights.

He has played for seven years, and started playing because the pool table was taken out of his hangout.

"The first time I played I really liked the game. I'm not the only one who plays, though. Tournament soccer is really popular in the Midwest and West. It has become so popular in Minnesota that high schools have formed leagues. Girls are also very involved in the sport," he commented.

What Harvey says must be true because foos ball fans even have their own magazine. The name, naturally, is "Foos News".

Meeting the challenge draws marathon runners

By Julie Casey

Running, it seems, has grasped the nation by the seat of its pants. People of all ages and sizes have come to realize the benefits of running, i. e. good health. Then there is the psychological side which has really taken people by surprise.

Why does a person put himself or herself through the marathon (26 miles and 385 yards)? What motivates your average soul to attempt such a feat? It is physically taxing no matter how much pre-training is logged. At 20 miles, your body has literally spent much of its fuel. According to many, the last six miles are a matter of mind over matter — you just hold on.

Dave Fields, a seasoned marathoner, commented, "I run a marathon in four different stages, a 10, 5, 5, and a 3 mile race."

What does he do for the last 3 miles and 385 yards? "Hurt a lot, pray, hope and push to the finish."

Fields is one of the top age group runners in the South and has completed eight marathons, one of them being the Atlanta Marathon where he placed sixth in 1977 with the time 2 hours and 44 minutes.

"I like the challenge of getting better times. I don't race with anyone during the run. I have a plan and I stick with it," he commented.

The marathon, running from 2 ½ to 4 hours of continuous running, is exhausting and tortuous to the healthiest bodies.

Al Hennigan, who will be running his first marathon Saturday, commented, "In the running community, the marathon represents the ultimate challenge both physically and symbolically. There is a certain mystic associated with the distance which diminishes at distances which are shorter or even longer. I suppose the reason is because longer runs, or ultra-marathons, generally mean running for a while then stopping and resting, whereas the marathon is continuous running."

For Harold Van Meter the questions was, "Should I or shouldn't I, or even more so, could I or couldn't I?"

He completed his first marathon last March during the Columbus Marathon in 3 hours and 43 minutes. The challenge was definitely there for a man with just one lung.

Tom Coniglio, a young man whose goal is the Olympic trials in 1980, runs because he loves it and is very competitive.

For many runners here, the challenge will be the Callaway Gardens Marathon Saturday. It is a physical feat that proves yourself to the one that really matters — you. The man who finishes a marathon may not be able to work for a week but his confidence is in top condition.

The challenge is there, its story told differently by each runner. For Tony Moore, the challenge is to do it again because he was unable to finish his second marathon.

"Sometimes you are mentally and physically unable to go on. You want to finish but your body just says no and refuses to respond," he explained.

That is why your average person is willing to push his body to the limits — nothing worth while is ever attained easily.

"Please come home and EAT, Fred! You know how spaghetti and meat balls taste when it's cold!"

Rifle matches held here

By Betty Zimmerman

The 1979 USAIC Service Rifle, Pistol and Machine Gun Matches began Oct. 30 with J. Ross Franklin, deputy commander for Readiness and Training, welcoming 180 local shooters.

He reminded the audience of the importance of accurate shooting in the Army and proceeded to show them how to do it by squeezing off one round from a M-16 rifle and hitting the target's bullseye 300 meters away. He laughingly remarked, "Even colonels need to shoot well."

The competitors in the five-day matches were all Fort Benning soldiers representing their various units. There were team and individual events in two classifications. The open class was for shooters who have previously fired with the same type of weapon at post level competition and the novice class was for those who had not.

All match competitors are eligible for selection as a member of the Fort Benning Composite Rifle and Pistol Teams which will enter the FORSCOM Eastern Regional Matches in April at Fort Meade, Md. The winners there will compete in the All-Army matches in May at Fort Benning.

Boxing Smoker

A 'boxing smoker' was held at the Harmony Church Field House on Oct. 6th at 6 p.m.

Boxing smoker is the name given to a series of three rounds, two minuts per round fights that make up a match. A smoker is held in the 1st ITB once every training cycle for the benefit of the soldiers. Each company and unit within the 1st ITB is represented in the ring.

In the most recent boxing smoker, there were 11 bouts. Two of the fights were settled by KO's, the others went down to the wire. In the feature heavyweight battle, Tony Foster from Co B, 7th Bn, son of the famous light-heavy weight world champion boxer Bobby Foster, defeated William Blockson, Co A, 5th Bn, in a tough match.

Rugby team wins 2

The Fort Benning Army Rugby Team launched a devastating attack this past Saturday against a young Auburn University Rugby Team. The effects were predictable as the experienced Benning ruggers took advantage of every mistake that Auburn made, to run up an early lead in the first half. However, the Auburn team seemed to learn from its first half play and the second half revealed a last minute rally that almost succeeded but the game ended 17-9 in favor of the Benning ruggers.

The "B" side game was played with the Fort Benning team playing its usual basic rugged rugby enabling them to shutout the Auburn "B" side 9-0.

This week the Fort Benning Army Rugby Team travels to Atlanta to defend its Division II Peachtree Tournament Championship against teams from Georgia, New York, and Missouri.

The Catholic Charismatic Prayer Group of Fort Benning is hosting an ecumenical evening, "Festival of Praise," on Nov. 14. During the Prayer Festival, the film, Behind the Scenes of the Hiding Place will be shown.

The Festival of Praise will begin at 7:30 p.m. at the Catholic Activity Center, Bldg 2615. All families and singles interested in Charismatic Prayer and Fellowship are cordially invited to participate. If anyone has any musical instrument which could be played during the Festival, please call Sister Janet Miller at 545-2054 for rehearsal time.

CID Inquiry of Travel Claims

Criminal and administrative irregularities involving travel claims submitted by DA civilians and military personnel have sparked a worldwide inquiry by the U.S. Army CID Command. The inquiry is twofold; to identify possible administrative shortcomings in processing travel claims and to identify criminal violators who have submitted fraudulent travel claims. Anyone having information relative to persons submitting false travel vouchers are requested to contact the local the local CID office.

PMO Operations Section

The Provost Marshal's Operations section will be closed the first Wednesday of each month for mandatory training. The hours will be 8 a.m. to noon and will also include personnel of Vehicle Registration and Hunting and Fishing Permit sections.

Group to tour Pacific

New York Strut, a five member group co-sponsored by DoD and the USO, will tour U.S. sites throughout the Pacific from Nov. 22 through Jan. 12, USO officials said this week.

The group will perform tunes that include 1950's rock and roll, current movie scores and "Top 40" hits, the USO says.

Pot Luck Supper set

The Fort Benning District Chattahoochee Council, Boy Scouts of America will have its Annual Adult Appreciation Night. "Pot Luck Supper", Nov. 17 at 5 p.m. in the Harmony Church Field House.

This annual event is held to recognize adult members of Fort Benning and the surrounding communities who have contributed their efforts and time to provide boys and girls an opportunity to participate and grow through scouting.

The program will feature a concert by the Colonial Band, Explorer Post 76. The guest speaker will be Judge Aaron Cohn, juvenile court judge of Columbus.

Scouters, volunteers and parents are coordially invited to attend. Information and assistance may be obtained by contacting Lt. Col. B. J. Maynard at 544-1616 or call the Scout Center at 545-1806.

Halloween party

On Oct. 31, the Business and Professional Women's Club of Columbus, hosted a Halloween Party for 25 children of Allied officers who are currently training at Fort Benning.

The party started off with a magic act. Following , Mrs. Rozell Fabiani of the TV 3 Rozell Show read a story to the children explaining the meaning of Halloween. Children and grown-ups alike had a lot of fun with apple bobbing, a game none had played before.

The party was arranged and coordinated byMrs. Barbara South of the Business and ProfessionalWomen's Club. She and 6 other club members served refreshments and handed out candy, prizes and Halloween masks to the Allied children who were accompanied by their parents.

Vol. 38—No. 9 Published in the interest of the personnel at Fort Benning. November 17, 1978

524th bucking for best

By Marti Henderson

The 524th Personnel Service Company Dining Facility, 36th Engineer Group (Cbt), has been chosen to represent Fort Benning in the selection of the TRADOC representative for the 11th annual Phillip A. Connelly Award for Excellence in Food Service, Small Category.

The 524th Dining Facility was first runner-up in their category in the 1978 world-wide competition. They also were awarded the post Best Dining Facility of the year award for the most outstanding small unit facility.

A group of Food Service members, representing the seven commands on Fort Benning, selected the 524th from among all the dining facilities on post through the process of evaluations and eliminations.

If the 524th is chosen during the up-coming elimination of TRADOC finalists in January, they will represent TRADOC in the Army-wide selection of the winner of the Phillip A. Connelly Award, Small Category, next summer.

The purpose of the highly coveted Phillip A. Connelly Award Program is two-fold. First, it provides recognition for excellence in the preparation and serving of food to military personnel in both Army troop dining facilities and during Army division field kitchen operations.

Second, it provides added incentive to competitive programs of major Army commands (MACOMS) by adding a higher level of competition and appropriate recognition in the form of trophies, additional schools, and formal education in their field.

Road closure set

Wildcat Road from Cusseta Road to Moye Road will be closed to through traffic Monday through Wednesday next week. Closure is necessary to effect repairs to railroad crossing of Seaboard Airline Railway. Due to holiday, if repairs are incomplete on Thursday, closure will extend through Nov. 30.

Ceremony planned

Local German-born residents and others will observe German Memorial Day in a ceremony to be held here at the Main Post cemetery Sunday at 10 a.m.

Lt. Col. Ernst Lissinna, the post German Liaison Officer, will speak in a brief memorial service, honoring the 44 German soldiers who died while held prisoners of war at Harmony Church from 1942-1945. German Memorial Day is celebrated the third Sunday in November.

The public is invited to attend.

Final game slated

The Fort Benning Doughboy football team winds up its gruelling 13-game season Saturday night at 7:30 p.m. in Doughboy Stadium against Alabama State University junior varsity.

After winning three of their last four games, the Doughboys are determined to close the season with another victory.

Over 20,000 fans were treated to high-caliber football this season. Show the Doughboys you're behind them at tomorrow's game — they DESERVE it!

CPR classes set

The Fort Benning American Red Cross Field Office has announced that classes in First Aid and Cardio-Pulmonary-Resuscitation (CPR) will begin in December. Persons interested in taking these classes may contact Mr. Owen, 545-5194 for further information.

Hunting reopens

Good news for hunters was announced this week. Beginning at dawn tomorrow (Saturday), hunters may take to the woods on the Fort Benning reservation. But they MUST quit at noon.

The half-day policy will continue until rain lessens the forest fire danger.

Holiday deadline

Due to the Thanksgiving holiday period, next week's BAYONET will be distributed on Nov. 22. Deadlines for that issue will be today before noon.

Published each Friday by the R. W. Page Corporation, Columbus, Ga., a private firm in no way connected with the Department of the Army. Tigers invade Auburn

By Larry Weese

Personnel from the 121st Aviation Company and the 187th Infantry Platoon (Pathfinders, Abn) recently made a trip to Auburn University to give ROTC students a taste of what Army aviation is really all about. This mission had taken about two weeks to coordinate due to the fact that they would be using other than U.S. Government property to conduct the operation.

Capt. Royal Sanders, operations officer for the 121st, was responsible for the overall mission and safety considerations involved with this particular mission.

The 121st used eight aircrafts to complete the mission. The first aircraft roared to a hover over the Auburn field and members of the 187th rapidly rappeled into the simulated landing zone. The helicopter then landed to serve as a static display. The pilots, Sander and Chief Warrant Officer Don McCoy, explained to the ROTC cadets some of the highlights and various roles of Army aviation, and briefed them on aircraft safety for their orientation helicopter ride.

Immediately after the briefing the cadets witnessed a simulated combat paradrop

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room - and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 100 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

COMMUNITY EDUCATION COURSES

Each quarter, the college offers non-credit courses in a number of different areas of personal interest. Such courses include cake decorating, disco dancing, photography, dog obedience, and many activities of a similar nature. Any persons having suggestions for activities in these areas should contact Mr. Johnnie Rutledge at 297-4981. A separate schedule of these activities will be made available when course offerings have been determined.

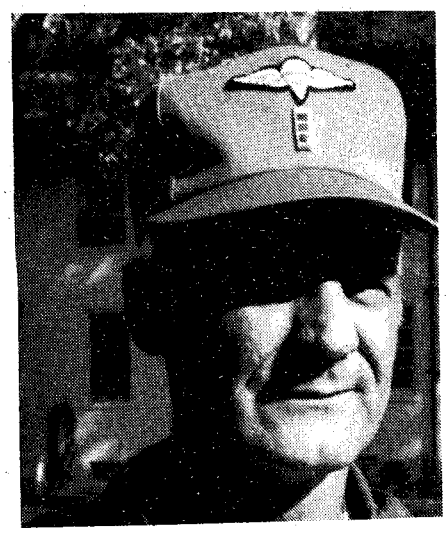
Glad you asked

What do you like best about Fort Benning ?

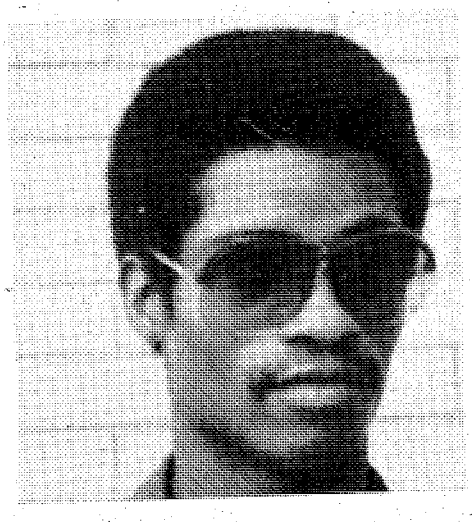


Chief Warrant Officer 3 Vaglienti, Parachute rigger

"The mall facilities on post are really good. Stores such as the bank, barber shops, cleaners and stores are good as any civilian."

MasterSgt. Jimmie Jakes, Co A, Headquarters Cmd.

"I work in the Equal Opportunity office and I've found that the best thing about Benning is the support that the chain of command gives to equal opportunity in the educational and training programs on post."



Pvt. Curtis M. Randall, Co B, 3/7th Inf.

"I think the post itself is the best point. I mean the scenery everywhere on Fort Benning is beautiful and all the grounds are kept very clean."

Capt. Thomas Crossman, 13th Co., 1st Bn. TSB

"I think that the recreational facilities here at Benning are quite a bit better than those at other posts that I've been stationed at. The camper and boat rental system is excellent."

Army leadership extinct?

Leadership. A lot of people, both in and out of the service, say that leadership is extinct in today's Army. They make fun of the rap sessions and group discussions, saying that the "democracy" of the new Army will be our downfall. "How can you win a war by voice-voting on everything" they ask.

Although it sounds like an over-used cliche, take a look at the record. Today's force has been called the best-educated, best-motivated Army to come along in its history.

To lead this Army, though, we still need leaders. Strong NCOs, decisive officers — all displaying the judgment, sensibilities and sensitivities that are needed these days to make people work together in harmony.

The good leader hasn't changed much. He still has all the traits of the good leaders of the Vietnam era — the same courage, integrity, honesty, loyalty, tact and knowledge possessed by his predecessors. His hair may be a little longer, he may wear a mustache, but he's still at the head of the formation, directing his troops and carrying out the mission.

Granted, there are bad leaders now, too, just as there were during the Vietnamese era. They are the ones faltering; the leaders who are short-changing the troops — and the Army.

Let's just hope they have enough sense to pay attention to the old Army maxim: lead follow, or get the hell out of the way.

As long as the Army recognizes and encourages its good leaders, the bad ones will hopefully stay where they belong: under the rock of mediocrity. (Courtesy of Ft. Belvoir CASTLE).

Don't put things off until 'later'

In the early hours of the morning, if you happen to lift one eyelid long enough, you'll see them: joggers, diligently running through the dew. What could be more refreshing than a two-mile jog a 4 a.m. followed by a brisk shower a big breakfast and then a day on the job.

How I envy these dedicated early birds, unfortunately, no matter how well-planned my before-slumber intentions may be, my spirit seems to lack one important factor — WILL POWER!

When the alarm rings at 4 a.m., my saggy body responds only to the sleep intoxicated desire to roll over. . .saying, "I'll start TOMORROW morning." Without fail, the next morning finds the same "It's TOO EARLY response.

Or what's even more interesting is the "fresh start" syndrome. "I'll be moving on to my next duty station in a month. . .I can start when I get there." Or, "I've got two weeks leave in another month or so; I'll go all out then." Naturally, when the "fresh start" time arrives, that 4 a.m. wakeup is still as dreadful as ever.

It is still beyond me how I can combat this lack of will power. Making a list is highly recommended for accomplishing difficult tasks. You get a great amount of satisfaction out of crossing an item off a "Things-to-do" list. Somehow the item "get-in-Shape-Exercise" never seems to get crossed off.

The most logical answer I can think of to solve this early morning dilemma is to exercise at night. But . . . then I tell myself, "I'll do that in the morning." (Courtesy of the Ft. Belvoir CASTLE).

License plates requested

Dear Sir:

My brother and I collect automobile license plates. We have many plates representing various nations in our collection, which we have proudly on display and often use in geographical projects in school.

We would like to know if any personnel on base might have any non U.S. or plates used by the military abroad that could be sent to us to include in our display.

In the event that plates can be sent to us, we will remit postal or any other nominal costs incurred, to you, or the parties that are able to assist us. Please mail the plates to John Forsyth, 248 W. Lehigh Street, Bethlehem, Pa. 18018.

Thank you for your assistance,

Very truly yours,

CID looking for investigators

The US Army Criminal Investigation Command (USACIDC) offers a unique opportunity for both women and men to acquire a career in Criminal Investigation.

To qualify, you must first be a member of the United States Army and have attained the rank of E4. This takes approximately one and one-half to two years of service. If you have had civilian police experience, are currently serving in the Military Police Corps, or have a college degree in law enforcement or criminal investigation area, you may qualify for service as a United States Army Criminal Investigator.

Criminal Investigators of USACIDC investigate all areas of crime, to include computer and contract fraud, burglary, theft, and homicide. Duties may range from extensive undercover operations to protecting high government officials throughout the world.

For further answers to your questions concerning this challenging career, contact the Fort Benning District, Third Region, USACIDC, at Bldg 75E, or phone 545-7950/5064.

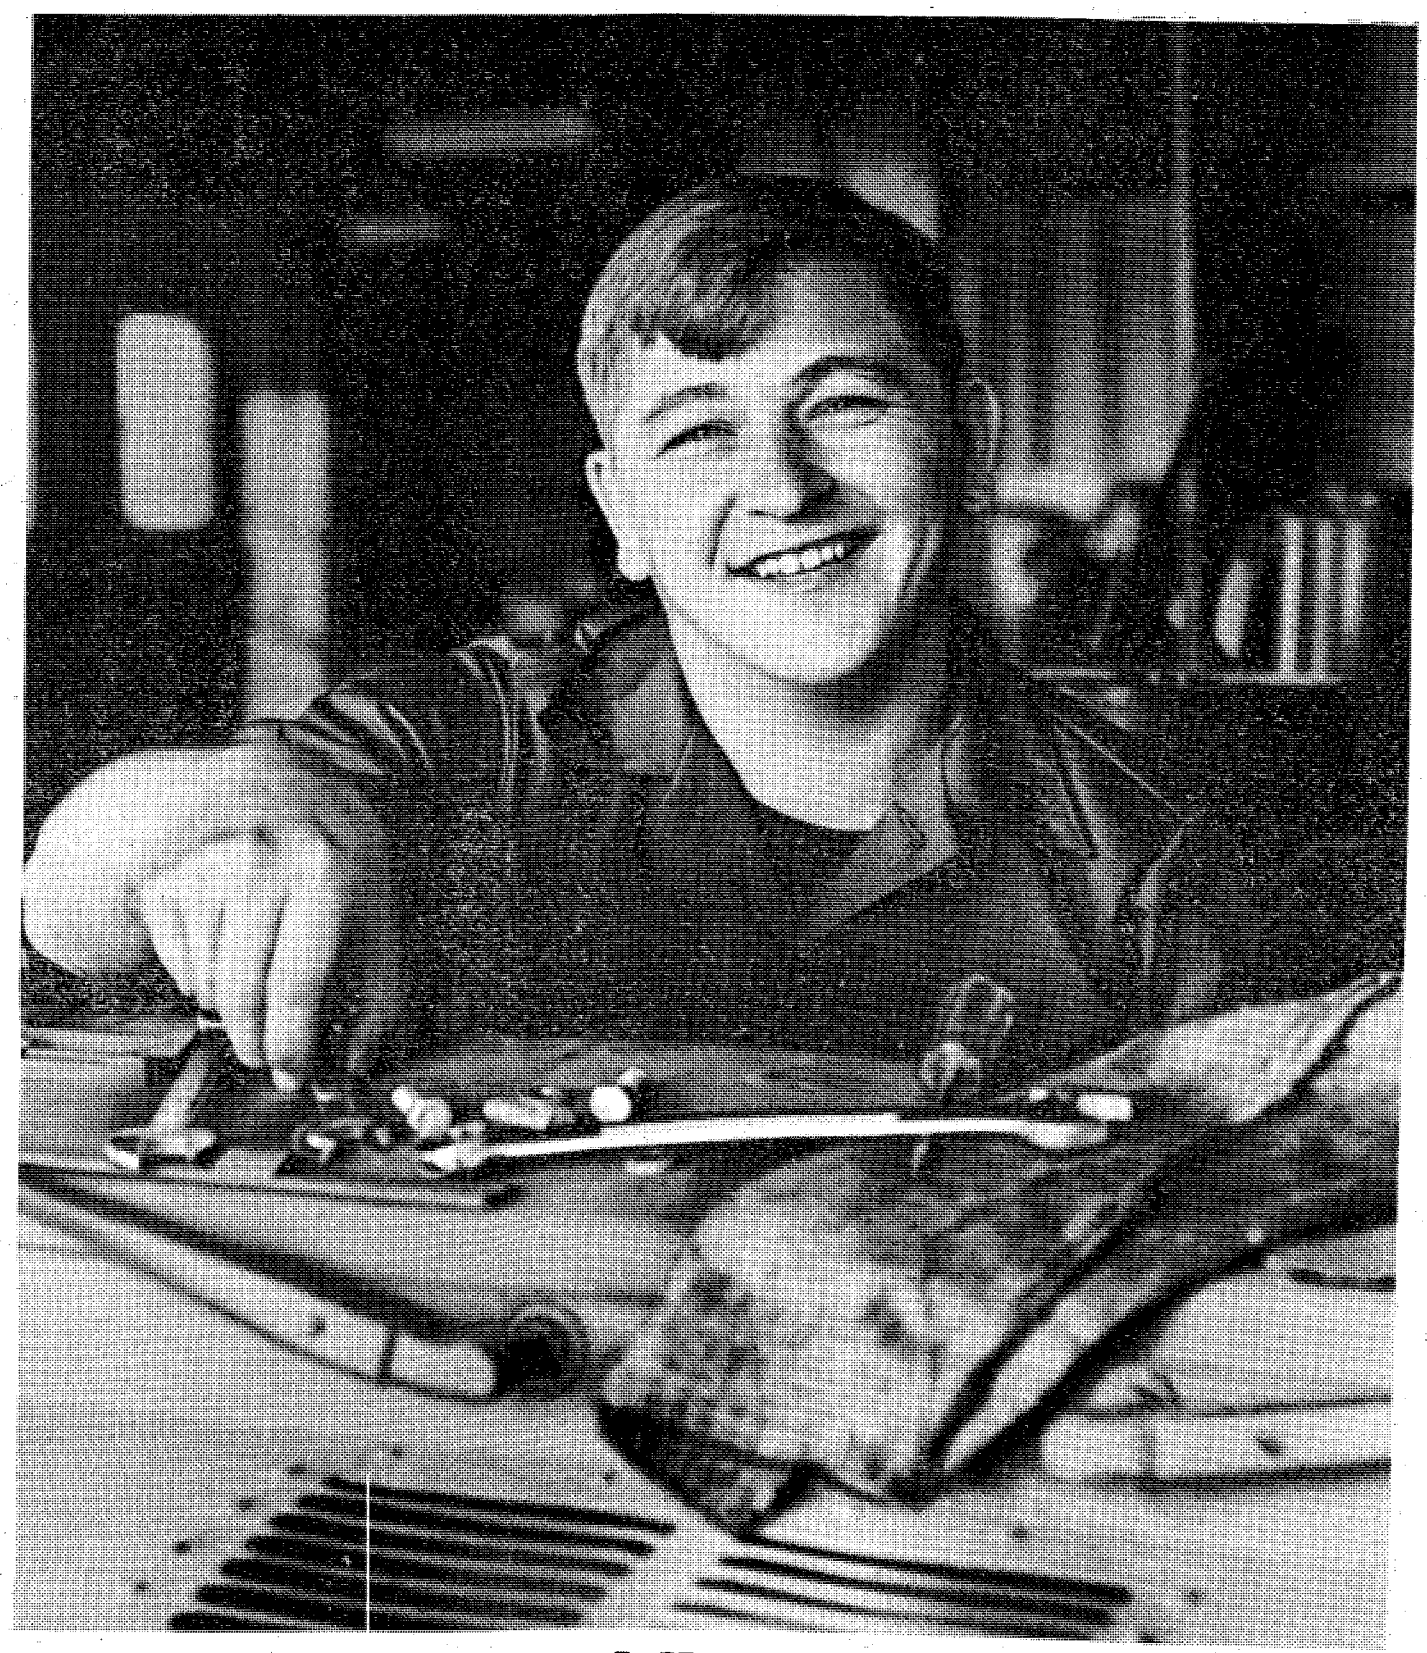
"Uncle Sam needs me."

Roger D. Nadeau



Sergeant Roger Nadeau is a wheeled vehicle mechanic. He's in charge of a motor pool section. "I try to take care of my people. Once or twice a month we get together and hash out problems. Last month, one of the guys had his doubts about reenlistment. I told him why I was for it. The promotion set up is good. The travel is terrific. So this guy starts thinking about all this. I think he'll stay. Qualified people are needed. That's how the Army gets things done."

Have a talk with your career counselor today. You may be surprised to find out just how much Uncle Sam needs you.

Keep a good soldier in the Army. Reenlist.

Beware: food and drugs don't always mix

Editor's note: This is the first in a two part series concerning food and drugs and the effect they have on the body.

By Marcia L. Beasley
Registered Dietitian

Did you ever wonder why physicians tell you to take certain medications on an empty stomach, others just before meals and still others with your meals? Would it ever occur to you not to take a tetracycline capsule with a glass of milk? Or if you are taking a certain drug for depression not to eat aged cheese or drink Chianiti wine? And why should women on the "Pill" eat more green leafy vegetables?

The answer to these questions is reflected in the effect that foods and drugs have on each other. Their interaction can determine whether the medications do their job and whether the body gets the nutrients it needs.

Although the interaction is dependent upon various conditions, in general, the presence of food in the stomach and intestines can slow down or speed up a drug's effectiveness. The natural and added chemicals in foods can react with certain drugs to make them useless or can cause a reaction which will result in a medical crisis.

Interference with absorption is the most common result of drug and food interaction. The classic example is the calcium in dairy products impairs the absorption of tetracycline. While on the other hand, the ascorbic acid in citrus fruits taken with some iron supplements will improve the absorption of iron.

In general, drugs will dissolve too quickly if taken with soda pop or acid fruit or vegetable juices. Therefore it is unwise to take drugs with these beverages unless it is checked out with a doctor.

The effectiveness of drugs used to prevent blood clotting is hindered by the EXCESSIVE consumption of food high in Vitamin K such as liver and leafy green vegetables.

MAO INHIBITOR DRUGS

Perhaps the most hazardous food-drug interaction is the one between monoamine oxidase (MAO) inhibitors (drugs often prescribed for depression and high blood pressure) and such foods as aged cheese, Chianti wine and chicken livers. The reaction can force the blood pressure to dangerous levels, sometimes causing severe headaches, brain hemorrhage, and in extreme cases, death.

Persons taking these drugs should avoid aged and fermented foods, including pickled herring, fermented sausage (salami and pepperoni), sharp or aged cheese, yogurt and sour cream, beef and chicken livers, broad beans such as fava beans, canned figs, bananas, avocados, soy sauce, active yeast preparations, beer, Chianti wine, sherry and other wines in large quantities. MAO inhibitors are also suspected of reacting adversely with cola beverages, coffee, chocolate, and raisins.

ALCOHOL AND DRUGS

Alcohol does not mix well with a wide variety of medications such as antibiotics, anticoagulants, antidiabetic drugs, antihistamines, high blood pressure drugs, MAO inhibitors, and sedatives. A good rule of thumb is to avoid alcoholic beverages when taking any type of prescription or over-the-counter medication.

Next week, the BAYONET will present "Drug Effects on the Body's Use of Food" and what you can do about it.

CLEP test gets harder

A revised CLEP test went into use Nov. 1. The revised test could change the education plans of thousands of soldiers.

CLEP, the college level examinatinn program, is a test accepted by more than 1,800 colleges and universities in the U.S. as the equivalent of most freshman level courses. The CLEP tests are popular with soldiers seeking college credit for as much as 30 semester hours at many schools.

Revisions in the new CLEP, according to a spokeswoman with The College Board(TCB) that produces CLEP, include more "in-depth" questions in the five subject areas covered by the test.

But the increase in the number of CLEP test questions also calls for more time to test, the spokeswoman added. Testing time for each subject has been increased from 60 to 90 minutes. The spokeswoman suggested that test revisions would make them more difficult to pass because of the expansion.

The biggest change in the CLEP series is in the English test, she explained. This test has shifted emphasis from English error recognition to writing skills.

Another change in the English test will be introduced next spring, the TCB official said. An optional English test version will replace the 90 minute multiple choice format with a 45 minute multiple choice test and another 45 minute test in essay form. While the optional English test versions allow a student to choose the exam on which he or she expects to score best, some schools may require students to take a specific English version before they award credit for the test, according to the official.

In addition to English, the CLEP covers these subjects: math, natural sciences, humanities and social science-history.

Because of the test revisions, the spokeswoman said, some schools may no longer accept the former CLEP series or they may grant less credit to students who do not take the new series.

TCB, at Princeton, N.J., is an educational testing service representing various U.S. colleges, universities and high schools. The board oversees the test service but each school applies its own standards in awarding credit based on the tests.

CLEP has been administered since 1968 and about 200,000 Americans take the test series each year.

More information on the new CLEP series can be obtained through local educaton centers or, for students who have already received CLEP credit, at the schools where they are currently enrolled. (ARNEWS)

Credit card can cost consumer $$$

In this country some 370 million credit card accounts are in use. The figure includes credit cards issued by retail stores, banks, oil companies and those cards used for travel and entertainment purposes. Wise use of credit cards can enable us all to enjoy the use of a product while we earn the money to pay for it.

Your Better Business Bureau wants you to remember that credit costs money — most of the time customers pay more for something if they buy it on time rather than pay cash for it. But it used to be that the customer who preferred to pay cash rather than use a credit card was at a disadvantage.

The merchants who honored "third-party" credit cards (banks or travel cards, for instance) paid the credit card firms a certain percentage of the sale each time a customer used his card. The additional costs were taken into account when the merchants set their prices for goods and services. The resulting higher costs were shared by all customers, including cash customers who did not use credit cards.

The Fair Credit Billing Act covers all users of "third party" credit cards. It declares unlawful any restraints on the merchant's freedom to offer lower prices to customers who prefer to pay cash. The act also offers the buying public more protection in resolving billing disputes. Here is some information you should know about the act:

The retailer is permitted, but not required, to give a maximum discount of five per cent on cash purchases. Those retailers who do give discounts must post a sign explaining the discount.

When you have both an account and a credit card with a bank, the Fair Credit Billing Act prohibits the bank from automatically collecting credit card payments from your account to "offset" the debt if your bill is overdue. This rule does not apply, however, if you instruct the bank to extend this service to you.

If you have a complaint with a store or credit card company, write it within 60 days to the company. Then, within 30 days of receipt of your letter, the firm must acknowledge your letter and, within 90 days, resolve the dispute. During this period you do not have to pay the account in question or any finance charges on the amount.

And, if you have returned an item which you have charged to a credit card, the store must notify the credit card company of the return, and the credit card company must credit your account.

Your Better Business Bureau urges you to be aware of the responsibility which accompanies the use of a credit card. If you are presently using a card, look carefully at the information enclosed with your next bill. The form which is titled "In Case of Errors or Inquiries About Your Bill" lists the procedures and the instructions which cover the loss of your credit card for future reference.

Your Better Business Bureau offers you, the consumer, reliability reports on both local and national businesses and on charitable organizations. For information simply call 327-2676, the BBB in Columbus. With this information you can often make a wiser decision and really get your money's worth.

197th to train at Drum in February

By Judi Taylor

Things are going to seem a little strange to incoming personnel of the 197th Inf Bde in February.

The Brigade will practically be at a standstill with most offices either closed or operating with a skeleton crew, parking lots empty of privately-owned vehicles and streets virtually deserted.

Have the soldiers of Kelley Hill been given a month long training holiday? A vacation? No, just a month of intensive cold weather training at Fort Drum, N.Y. Approximately three and a half thousand soldiers will be deployed to Fort Drum for the month-long exercise.

The objective of the training is to provide sustained cold weather training in an European environment. Only one of the battalions, the 3/7th Inf. ''Cottonbalers'' will not be participating in the exercise.The Cottonbalers will undergo cold weather training in Alaska at a later date.

Preparations are now underway for the massive deployment to New York. Training has already started in some units, with many of the Brigade's drivers having to learn to operate (Armored Personnel Carriers). Jeeps will be virtually useless in the deep snow that will be encountered at Drum.

Special Forces troops (Green Berets) will be coming to Kelley Hill to help prepare the troops for the cold weather situations they will meet. The Green Berets, from Ft. Devon, Mass. will also be at Ft. Drum to instruct the Brigade in the use of skis and snowshoes, among other subjects.

Other plans now being worked on include briefings for the dependent wives and husbands, safety briefings for the troops and aside from training, sightseeing trips to Canada and various locations.

The work will be tough on the soldiers when they reach Drum.The four weeks are broken down into different phases of training. The first phase will congregate on platoon and company level training which will stress individual skills.

The second battalion level, which may include a few days in the field. The culmination of the training will be a Brigade level Field Training Exercise in which the entire entourage will be working together and supporting each other's units as if in actual combat.

During the exercise there will be a mechanized company and a tank platoon from the 1/8 Infantry, Fort Carson, Co. acting as the Opposing Force (OPFOR).

The Brigade's mission of combat readiness means that as well as knowing a job, the soldier must be able to perform that job under any conditions. With training such as this, the 197th Inf Bde will be able to complete their mission anyplace in the world.

Used book sale slated

Do you have any books just laying around gathering dust? Been meaning to throw them away? Now you can get rid of them and at the same time help others. Confused?

The Listening Eyes School for the Deaf will sponsor a used book sale Jan. 19 and 20 at Peachtree Mall.The proceeds will be used for various School programs.

The School is collecting hardback and paperback books and National Georgraphic magazines for resale. Anyone interested in donating books for the sale can call 561-5132 or drop them by the School located at 3617 Macon Road.

If you're planning to do some shopping at the Peachtree or Columbus Square Mall, you can put them in the drop box in front of the Casual Corner store in both locations.

So go through those closets, gargaes and bookshelved and collect those books for the Listening Eyes School for the Deaf used book sale.

ROTC students get first hand look at Army today

By Stephen Guthrie

Nine students from Columbus's Hardaway High School Junior ROTC program visited Troop A, 15th Cavalry, 197 Infantry Brigade (Sep) last week for a first hand look at the military. Capt. John W. Kelley, commander, arranged the outing along with Maj. (ret.) James Forsyth, commander of the ROTC program at Hardaway.

The students, ranging from 14 to 17 years old, were given a briefing by Kelley explaining the Cav's mission and each individual soldier's responsibility to fulfill this mission.

Sgt. Mickey Logan then gave the students a complete tour of the living area of the soldiers, as well as a look at the arms room, CBR room and operations center of the troop. Logan also took the cadets to the 197th Inf Bde headquarters where the cadets were shown the S-1 through S-4 and how they cooperate with each unit.

The next stage of the visit had the group moving to the motor pool on a walking demonstration of different vehicles, ranging from a recovery vehicle to a tank. Each vehicle had a crew standing by to explain the vehicle's function as well as the soldier's own job requirements.

The cadets were then taken to lunch by 1st Sgt. Alphonso Dean at the 2/10th Field Artillery Dining Facility to sample a typical army meal. The day was concluded by a last visit to the motor pool for an in-depth examination of the vehicles.

Clarke becomes first woman two-star general

The first woman commanding general in U.S. Army history today received her second star, making her the Army's first woman major general. Maj. Gen. Mary E. Clarke, commanding general of the U.S. Military Police School/Training Center and Fort McClellan, was promoted during a ceremony at Fort McClellan.

Promoting Gen. Clarke her new rank was Lt. Gen. John R. Thurman, III, deputy commanding general, U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC).

Maj. Gen. Clarke began her military career as an enlisted woman in August, 1945. While an enlisted woman, she served as a finance clerk, supply sergeant and acting first sergeant. Following service in assignments which included the Berlin Brigade during the Berlin airlift, Clarke attended WAC Officer Candidate School at Fort Lee, Va. In Stptember, 1949, she was commissioned a second lieutenant.

Other assignments included: battalion commander Women's Army Corps Basic Training Battalion, Fort McClellan, Commander/Commandant of the Women's Army Corps Center and School, Fort McClellan; and director, Woman's Army Corps, Department of the Army, Washington, D.C. On May 18, 1978, she became commanding general of Fort McClellan.

Maj. Gen. Clarke's decorations and award include the Legion of Merit, Meritorious Service Medal and the Army Commendation Medal. She is listed in the 1978 edition of Who's Who In America. (ARNEWS)

Struttin' your stuff

Members of Co D, 6th Bn, 1st ITB volunteered their off-duty time to march in the Atlanta "Salute To Veterans" Parade on Nov. 11.

Soldiers from 6th Bn, ITB join in Veteran's Parade in Atlanta

Delta Company, 6th Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade participated in the Atlanta "Salute To Veterans" Parade, Nov. 11.

Zell Miller, Lt. Governor, State of Georgia, Lester G. Maddox, former Georgia governor, and Brigadier General W.F. "Tiger" Hunnicutt, assistant deputy chief of staff operations, FORSCOM, were among dignitaries in the parade.

Co D soldiers marched in formation wearing their camouflaged helmets and M16A1 rifles. The FORSCOM Color Guard and the FORSCOM Band as well as the Atlanta Police Honor Guard, mounted patrol, Fire Department, Fulton County Sheriff's Posse and Sanitation Department and many others also participated in our salute.

One of the floats of the World War I Veterans was "The Tomb of The Unknown Soldier. Highlighting the parade was a 1925 Hudson 4 door sedan (Snellville) and an old engine No. 1.

After the parade, back to Fort McPherson for D Company's soldiers to have a bit of food and a change of clothes.

Off to the game between the Atlanta Hawks and the Milwaukee Bucks for an exciting night of professional Basketball. The Atlanta Hawks won 102 to the Bucks 95.

One of the troops from Co D was from Jack Givens' hometown. Hubie Brown, head coach allowed James M. Leake and Jack Givens of the Atlanta Hawks to get together for a picture. Yes, these soldiers said they will have a day and a night to remember.

Ron Syvrud, 2nd Platoon, D Company, watching the end of the game was still reminiscing over the parade, he remarked "You know, that's the first parade I was ever in".

Walters to speak at AUSA meeting

The Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army will hold its Fall General Membership Meeting on Nov. 29 at the Fort Benning Officers Club and Supper Club.

A social period will begin at 6:30 p.m. at the Officers Club Ballroom with cash bars, followed by a veal cordon bleu dinner at 7:30 p.m. in the Supper Club.

AUSA members and their guests are invited. Dress will be coat and tie. Tickets, at $6 are available from unit Sergeants Major by calling 545-1516.

The keynote speaker will be Lt. Gen. (ret.) Vernon A. Walters, who, for thirty-five years lived at the center of world history and moved in the highest echelons of military and government circles.

He entered Rome with Clark, and witnessed Truman's historic Wake Island meeting with MacArthur. He was in Paris at the aborted U-2 conference. He served as top-level interpreter, negotiator, and troubleshooter for five Presidents.

From the Cold War policy to detente, to the Paris peace talks and Watergate, Gen. Walters was directly involved with the leaders who made history — de Galle, Khrushchev, Tito, Kennedy, Eisenhower, Nixon, Ford, Harrimon, and Kissinger.

Walters enlisted in the Army in 1941. When his talent for languages was discovered, he began a long career that included aggisnments as U.S. Military Attache to Paris and Rome — and ultimately the deputy directorship of the CIA. Walters retired from the Army in July 1976.

Cancer: Living life one day at

By Terri Moon

"When I was diagnosed, I wasn't upset or angry. It's very upsetting to receive that kind of diagnosis, of course, but I remember thinking, "I'm 26 years old. Everything has gone right in my life, and now something's gone wrong. Even if all the chemotherapy treatments are exhausted and I'm transfused until I can't be transfused anymore, then maybe I'll have two years to live. In two years, they could come up with a new drug.' It wasn't as if death was imminent."

Debbie Evans, a former Army nurse and graduate of WRAIN, was diagnosed as having cancer just over a year ago. It was a rare lymphocytic kind, and she was discharged from the Army for physical disability.

She's "been there" — at one end of the spectrum in medicine as a nurse, and on the other as a patient, running almost the full gamut of chemical treatments and surgery.

Night sweat

After returning from nurse-recruiting duty in California, Evans began work at Ft. Meade, Md. as ward head nurse. Shortly thereafter, symptoms began. She began having night sweats and weakness, but thought it was a result of the iron pills she was taking. But she had blood tests run, and they showed anemia and other abnormalities. Evans was referred to Walter Reed.

Frightened, she got in touch with a physician in Reed's Hematology/Oncology Clinic whom she'd known previously.

"I called him at home even though I hadn't seen him in about two and a half years. I told him what was wrong, but no one really knew why I was so weak at the time."

On her first visit to Walter Reed, a series of blood tests and a bone marrow evaluation were performed right away. The anguish she felt while waiting for the test results is still vivid.

"I went up to the medical library because I had never worked in hematology/oncology and I didn't know anything about it. So I took a hematology textbook and was sitting in a corner of the library reading about Hodgkin's Disease, leukemia and aplastic anemia — and how the symptoms are night sweats and anemia — and all of a sudden, it started coming into focus, and I was scared.

"I came back to the clinic a few hours later and my doctor let me look at my bone marrow. I could see it was full of abnormal cells and I knew then that it was some kind of cancer. They didn't know what kind it was, because they hadn't seen it that involved before.

"I was admitted that afternoon, which was my first experience as a patient. I had called my parents and told them something was wrong and it could be serious. They were on a plane from New Hampshire within a couple of hours."

Angered that the staff didn't level with her on the type of cancer she could have, Evans remembers thinking, "Look, I'm a nurse, so I know what's going on." But the next day and after more tests, "My doctor came into my room and said "it's some kind of cancer, because we've ruled out every other possibility. It's either a leukemia or a lymphoma, and if it's a lymphoma, it'll take a while to tell what type it is.'"

Under a local anesthetic, she was taken to surgery for a biopsy of her lymph nodes. "I wasn't scared of the surgery. The surgeons couldn't feel any enlarged lymph nodes, though, and they went in hoping to get one out of my neck." Finding a lymph node under her arm would have been the next step in surgery if the first attempt was unsuccessful. "What upset me was the possibility that they may not find anything and would have to try someplace else. But the surgery was great and all the nurses up there knew I was in the operating room and they waited outside to talk to me," she recalls.

Living in nearby Columbia, Md. Evans was in the hospital only nine days and was able to go home and continue chemotherapy as an outpatient.

"Within two weeks of the diagnosis and workup I started on chemotherapy and that was really frightening," she relates.

"But overall, I really felt like I had some time. I think most people who learn to deal with this disease who've been through the chemotherapy, or go through radiation therapy, are always in hopes that if it doesn't work, they are buying time for new methods of treatment to come through."

The perfect patient

But even as a nurse, having a good familiarity with the implications of treating a cancer patient, Evans recalled that it wasn't so easy. "In a way, it put a burden on me to be the perfect patient. It wasn't a negative thing to me because I was motivated to deal with this well, for the sake of my family and others. It wasn't frightening for me to be in the hospital or go through things because I knew what the staff was talking about."

She says she was most fearful for her husband, who's a certified public accountant and removed from the field of medicine. She says he disliked walking into a hospital just to pick her up from work. "All of a sudden I was in the hospital with cancer, and he had to come and see me and leave me here every night by myself. It helped to have my parents here. I don't know what he'd have done if he had to go home and be alone.

"I had to be the support in my family. When they were bouncing off the walls, I had to keep saying 'don't worry, they'll take care of me.'

"A couple of times I woke up very anemic and needed a transfusion. I was so weak I couldn't get dressed, and my mother and father were nervous wrecks. I said, 'I just need some blood,' because I knew that afterward I'd be doing fine." At first needing four units of packed cells for transfusions, after the first couple of months of chemotherapy Evans was rid of most of her tumor cells. Her blood count thus stabilized, and she was able to tolerate chemotherapy without needing more transfusions.

Stage four

Upon diagnosis, Evans' mixed histiocytic-lymphocytic nodular lymphoma was already at stage four, the most advanced phase.

"I had to have had it for a long time because I'd had so much involvement in my spleen and my bone marrow." She points out that this cancer type does not show symptoms until it's well advanced.

However, the National Cancer Institute has recorded 31 cases of this type of cancer in the last eight years, and of these, 23 of the patients lived. Because most of those patients were over the age of 60, Evans says, it was hard to set a prognosis for her at the age of 26.

"I'd had so much tumor in my spleen that they wanted to take it out, but when I first came here, it was so enlarged that they were afraid to do the surgery because they thought they may not be able to control the bleeding. They wanted first to shrink the size of my spleen with chemotherapy."

Because she responded so well to chemotherapy, surgeons postponed the splenectomy in order to later perform biopsies of her spleen, liver and lymph nodes. Doctors then told her if results proved negative, they'd have surgical evidence that she was in remission. And that's what happened.

Forced retirement

"But they complicated my personal life because I was being retired from the Army. If I'd not had that surgery scheduled, I could have started school to work on my master's degree in nursing or something. But there was a nebulous period there when I didn't know when I was going to have the surgery, or if I was going to have it at all.

"The most difficult part of the whole thing was being retired, not being sick or being on chemotherapy. All of a sudden I didn't have a job or any place to go, and I wasn't around people as much. What happened was that I had a lot of time to think and be miserable.

"At that point I was really depressed because I'd been home all winter alone. My parents came back to stay with me, I just couldn't stand being alone during the day anymore. I joined the cancer counseling group here, but I wasn't really looking for help as much as I was trying to commit myself to something other than being a cancer patient, and coming here for a blood test once a week.

"It wasn't an uplifting experience all the time, because patients in the group had a lot of problems and we had to talk about the reactions of our families and friends and how we were dealing with it. It was only depressing because it seemed as though everybody else had problems and most didn't have the family support that I had. It just made me feel more miserable. I thought, 'They don't have the support I have, I'm a nurse, able to understand all of this, so why am I still depressed? I'd get very angry that I couldn't fight the depression."

When she had surgery in May of this year, Evans relates, "I was convinced that nothing positive was going to come of it. I was just hoping there hadn't been metastasis to the liver." She adds, "but in spite of my attitude, everything was negative in the surgery. It was a real surprise to everyone, I think."

Although her spleen was eight times its normal size, there was no evidence of tumor cells in her lymph nodes. "It was a new lease on life, because it was good news for a change," Evans sighed.

"But at home, things were still the same. I still had nothing to do and at that point I'd given some thought to working here in the Hematology/Oncology Clinic." The clinic staff, however, thought she should wait until after her chemotherapy and surgery were completed. But she knew she could be of help talking to the patients in the clinic and just showed up in uniform one Tuesday.

"I started working and it was the best thing. I think the people who can deal best with an illness like this are the people who don't quit their jobs."

Since summer, Evans has kept up her three-day-a-week schedule as a volunteer in the Hematology/Oncology clinic, rendering nursing care and advice for patients. "I'm a fixture in the clinic now," she laughs. "Once the staff was all sitting around feeling depressed about a patient who'd just taken a turn for the worse and someone said, 'Boy, what we need around here is some good news.' Waving her hand, Evans repeated, "hey, remember me? I'm doing okay!"

Thoughtfully, she adds, "It's good for their sake, the nurses and the doctors too, to see someone who's responded to their efforts."

Evans and her patients find an immediate sense of rapport. She's able to level with them easily, a tactic she finds imperative. "I tell them I understand because I've been through it, and it doesn't help to pretend it doesn't exist. I tell them they need someone to talk to, and I get a pretty positive response from most people."

Determined to stay well

Even during the most trying times of her treatments, Evans recalled, she felt physically well, although during the first few months of treatment, she had general side effects of fever, aches and pains. But she says she was absolutely "determined not to become sick" from chemotherapy, certain that most of it was psychological.

A most annoying part for her was wearing a wig after her hair had become thin from chemotherapy.

But there was one side effect that she didn't seem to mind: "I lost about 15 pounds. I thought that was great!" she laughs. "I was always trying to lose weight anyway and really did get too thin, but I had to buy new clothes because I was suddenly a size 8. I thought that was the best thing in the world, but everyone else was so concerned. I kept telling them, 'this is the easiest diet I've ever been on!' "

When her dietician told her she needed 1800 calories a day, she recalled, "It was really a shame having to go out for a hot fudge sundae!"

When Evans first heard that she had gone into remission, her feelings were mixed. "I wondered, 'How on earth am I going to deal with being in remission and start living a normal life, and then stand a chance of going out of remission?' Remission is sometimes a very nebulous area, because it's always hanging over your head. It's much easier to deal with knowing that you're going to stay on chemotherapy. That's something you can deal with." She still fears blood tests and bone

ANG program improved

By Julie Casey

A regular Army officer working directly with the Army National Guard is a rare occurrence and has been quite successful for the Army National Guard (ANG) State Officer Candidate Schools (OCS).

"What we are looking at here supports over 2,000 Army National Guard Officer Candidates."

Maj. John J. Sabatini, chief, Institution Branch, Training Material Design Division, has produced a revised program of instruction for the 51 ANG State OCS.

His work has brought him recognition in the highest form by being presented with the Army National Guard (ANG) Meritorious Service Award.

"When I became involved with the program, it was under revision. Our responsibility within the branch was to put the State OCS program back into cognizance with what we teach here at the Infantry Center," Sabatini commented.

It was his responsibility to make sure the programs of instruction (POIs) were tactically and technically sound. His work plan also included physically sitting down with the action officers from the ANG and going over the material.

"I wanted to insure that the information we put out was in fact correct and that it wasn't, in plain English, just a bunch of garbage," he added.

"This is the first time the National Guard has had a direct hand in deciding formats for their training. Before, the Guard had to go through TRADOC and TRADOC came down to task us. This way, we say this and that needs to be changed and it's changed," he emphasized.

"Naturally," he commented, "the effort is a culmination of a lot of people — not just one individual. I'm just one guy running around trying to put it all together."

Sabatini's work involves 260 hours of instruction and will affect over 2,000 young candidates.

Professor Safety Says

Use your lights properly! Anytime you must drive under conditions of reduced visibility you must use your headlights. During darkness the obvious purpose of headlights is to permit the driver to see the road. Just as importantly headlights are necessary when the roadway can be seen but light conditions are not good. Drivers experience difficulty seeing other cars when driving under reduced light conditions. Use your headlights to be sure the other driver sees you. Parking lights are for parking.

marrow re-evaluations, always wondering "are they going to find something?"

'I'm going to respond'

As with all forms of treatment, nothing carries an absolute assurance. "If you go into chemotherapy with the attitude that 'I'm going to be one of the people that responds,' and are hopeful, you can work your life around the treatments. Even if it doesn't work, at least you've had those months of hopefulness, and maybe then it'll be time to try something else. At least you've lived your life well for as long as you could."

Evans believes in a common sentiment among patients with cancer, that they are always in hopes that a new medical breakthrough will help them, in this day and age of progressive medical research.

After beginning her volunteer work in the clinic, Evans found that she was so gung-ho about the job and kept so busy, she had trouble falling asleep at night. She then learned self-hypnosis at Reed, which she found most helpful.

Through her encounters with the patients she now sees, Evans finds that it's sometimes hard to get them to talk about the things that bother them. "It's not important to me that they live, but how they live and learn to deal with life," she notes. "Unfortunately, a lot of patients don't tell us about their problems until they become so severe it's a peak crisis intervention."

Never one person

Emphatically, Evans points out, "'cancer's not an illness that affects one person, but the whole family. All of a sudden family members feel guilty, and feel angry, and say, 'well, I can't argue with so-and-so because they're ill.' But the problems are still there and there are all kinds of underlying currents of fear and anger and anxiety."

She notes that some things can be dealt with easily through the many counseling services at Reed, like social work, the chaplains, psychology and psychiatry. "Unless people can bring it out in the open and talk about it, then things just get worse until somebody explodes."

Debbie Evans — nuse, and patient — affirms the advice she gives her patients — advice from her own intimate experiences with the cancer spectrum — the physical, mental and emotional factors so plagued with fear:

"Many people don't live for today, but tomorrow. They really don't appreciate their lives, because they are so future oriented they don't take the time to enjoy today.

"If you come to terms with the fact that you have a life-threatening disease, and you may die from it, you can make a determined effort to take more time with people, appreciate your family and friends, and do the things you may have never tried before. It can be a real growing, positive experience — it doesn't have to be the end of your life. Instead of turning life off, you can really turn life on." (Reprint from Walter Reed STRIPE)

Pilgrim's Feast slated

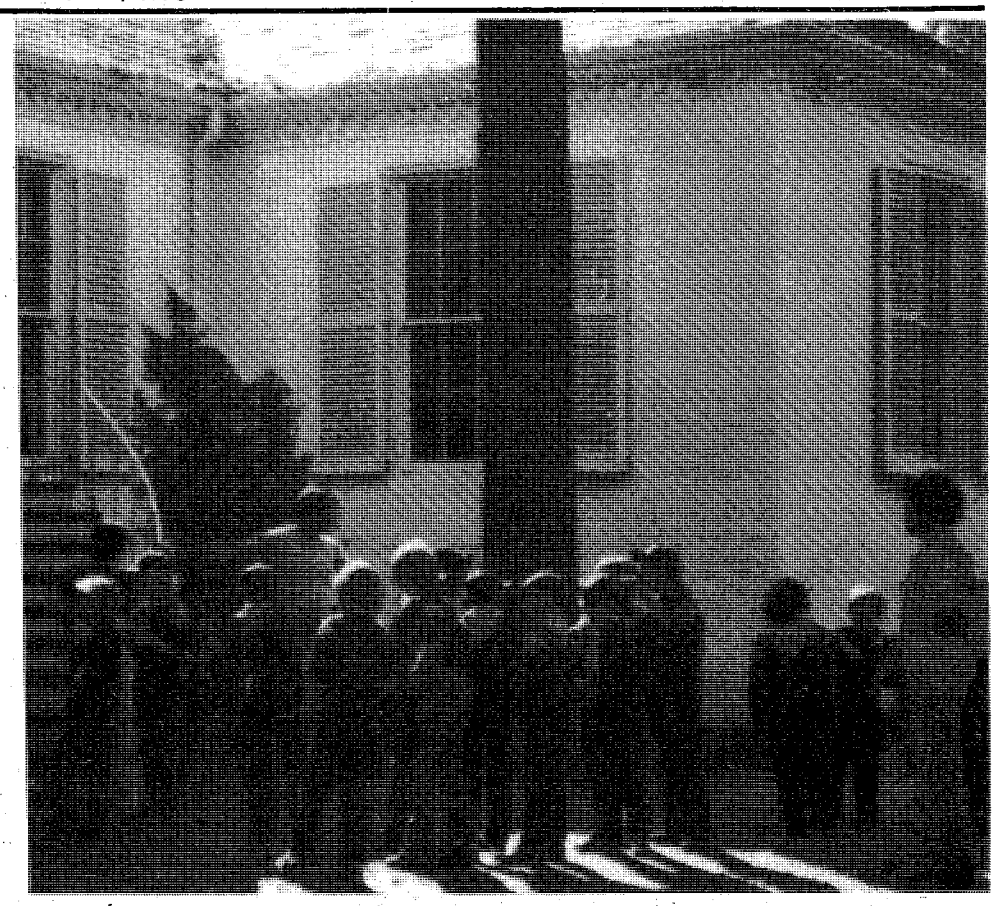
On Sunday, the Lavoie Manor Chapel will host a "First Thanksgiving" worship service and "Pilgrim's Feast." The day's activities will begin with the 11 a.m. worship service in which the chaplain and other participants will dress in traditional costume.

Following the service, the congregation will be invited to a time of "getting acquainted" in which opportunity will be provided for an entire afternoon of activities.

At 1 p.m., the participants will be treated to a concert by the Faith School band, directed by Mr. Evans. Mr. Evans has promised an exciting Pops concert which will add to the spirit of the celebration.

At 1:45 p.m., traditional Pilgrims games will begin and everyone will become involved in Indian and Pilgrim-style entertainment. At 2:30 p.m. the high point of the day will be the "First Thanksgiving" Feast which will include unusual fruits, vegetables, and, of course, Tom Turkey.

Families who wish to donate pies, fruits, or other items are encouraged to call Mrs. Brenda Holmes, or the Lavoie Manor Life Center.



Cub Scout Pack No. 227 participating in activities

By Tom Flaherty

The boys of Lavoie Manor's Cub Scout Pack #227, have been active recently with field trips and outings.

On Oct. 9, the boys were invited to Burger King to help kick-off Fire Prevention Week. A tour of the Main Post fire station for an inside look at the life and equipment of the men that work in a firehouse, was on the agenda Oct. 14.

Tuesday the Scouts went to Roosevelt Park in Warm Springs, where there were games, contests and nature hikes for both the boys and their parents. The main event of the day was a tour of the Little White House, the summer home of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Future events include a visit by Santa Claus, Christmas caroling, a rocket derby, the family Blue & Gold banquet and many more field trips.

The Blue and Gold banquet is to honor the birthday of Cub Scouting, and this year it is being planned for February in the banquet room of the Top Five Club.

The upcoming year will be an exciting one for Pack #227, so come out and join in the fun of Cub Scouting.

Gary Beske (c) and his Committee Group teammates complete the two-mile run required prior to competing in the USAIC Service Combat Rifle Match. Despite a broken leg, he was able to make the run in less than 30 minutes.

Comm Gp team on top

By Betty Zimmerman

The combat rifle team from Committee Group has made a clean sweep of the last three USAIC Service Matches in the rifle events.

They won the Precision Combat Rifle Team Match, the Combat Infantry Team Match and thus were the Grand Aggregate champions last week at the Benning ranges.

Two members, Jesse Waugh and Gary Beske, also won second and third place individual honors in the Combat Rifle Excellence in Competition Match.

In April 1978, they won the FORSCOM Eastern Regional Matches and participated in the All-Army event in May. They will return to FORSCOM this coming April and possibly All-Army again.

The current team members are Donald Francois and Jerrold Buckner; Jessie Waugh, G. Kirkpatrick and E. Waters; Philip Criber, Gary Beske and Trino Villegas.

They are all basic rifle marksmanship instructors for ITB trainees. But this doesn't mean they get to practice all the time. For one thing, their ranges and targets are completely different than competition ones and they are too busy instructing to practice for their own benefit.

Doughboys shutout Rebels, 6-0

By Seth Hamilton

The Doughboys survived a last minute scare Monday night and hung on to shutout the Mississippi University junior varsity Rebels 6-0 at Doughboy Stadium.

The victory, the Doughboys third in their last four games, was highlighted by a tough Doughboy defense.They held the Rebels to 178 total yards including just 59 yards in 42 carries on the ground.

The Doughboys showed they have a tough pass rush by sacking the Rebel's quarterback seven times. Defensive end Peter Christy went all out by getting to the Rebel quarterback three times.

The Doughboys took a 6-0 lead early in the second quarter. They had possession of the ball on the Rebel 41 yard line and quickly marched down field for a score. Quarterback Joe Duenas highlighted the drive with completions of 12 and 21 yards to tight end Dave Williams. It was Duenas himself who went in for the touchdown on an end around from the 10 yard line. The extra point kick was wide and the Doughboys led 6-0.

The game see-sawed back and forth until the Doughboys had the ball on their own 40 yard line with just 1:25 left on the clock. If the Doughboys thought they had the game wrapped up at that point, they had some serious doubts on the very next play as they fumbled the ball away to the Rebels on their 42 yard line with 1:20 left.

Using the clock, the Rebels brought themselves all the way to the Doughboy's 5 yard line with the help of two complete side line passes. An ominous silence fell over a shocked crowd at Doughboy Stadium as the Doughboy defense dug in at their 5 yard line with 16 seconds remaining to play. But true to form, the Doughboys excellent pass rush hurried the Rebel quarterback into an intentional grounding penalty which brought the Rebels back to the 25 yard line with 11 seconds left. The Rebels couldn't do anything against the Doughboy's secondary as two last ditch touchdown attempts sailed incomplete through the Doughboy end zone.

The Doughboy defense had passed the test and come up with a 6-0 victory. With the season's last game against Alabama State University coming up this Saturday night at 7:30 p.m. in Doughboy Stadium, the Doughboys seem to have worked out most of their bugs and are shaping up into a winning football team. Everyone is urged to come out to Doughboy Stadium and help make this season's last game a good one.

34th Med Bn maxes matches

By Larry Weese

The combat pistol team representing the 34th Medical Battalion virtually swept all team events and made extremely strong showings in all individual matches in the recent marksmanship tournament held at Phillips Range.

Scoring highly in the individual events was Gregory Smith, HHD, whose showings in preliminary matches gave him a first place in the Grand Aggregate match. In the Novice Class, Wesley Bass from the 187th Pathfinders earned 4th place in the Grand Aggregate.

Philip Krosofsky of 2nd Combat Support Hospital won a first and second, which combined, were good enough to earn him a third place in the Overall Open Class. Along with Krosofsky, two more members of the team from 2nd CSH, Jerry Newman and Lawrence Langley, finished 4th and 5th respectively in the overall scoring of the Open Class.

In the "Excellence in Competition" scoring which is determined by the highest scores for a single match, Langley and Newman tied for second and third place by both firing a 289 out of a possible 300 points.

The other members of the team turned in outstanding performances as was proven in the team's total scores and the General George S. Patten Jr. match. This match was a test of endurance as well as shooting skill as each team member must run a 2 mile course in combat equipment and still score highly on the firing line shortly after finishing the run.

Turkey shoot

There will be a Turkey Shoot held on Nov. 18 at Phillips Range, Fort Benning. The shoot will be open to dependents of military personnel, wives and children of the Fort Benning Rifle & Pistol Clubmembers and to all women military personnel.

Weapons and ammunition will be furnished. Firing begins at 1 p.m. and ends at 5 p.m.

Win some, lose some

By James Carter

The Fort Benning Rugby Team travelled to Atlanta this past weekend to defend its first place victory of the Division II Peachtree Tournament last fall.

Benning's first opponent was a large and healthy team from Clemson University. The action was in the true black and blue team colors of the Benning ruggers as the hard hitting forwards and the sure tackling backs of the post team shutout the Tigers 10-0.

The next adversary was a much improved Auburn team fresh from a victory over the University of Tennessee Volunteers. But the Benning Rugby Team bagged its second tiger 6-4.

The championship game was against The Iron Horse Rugby Club from Winter Park, Fl. The game was played in true championship style with neither team being able to penetrate the others' overlapping defense. Onlookers commented that the game would be lost by the first team that made a mistake since both teams were equally matched. Unfortunately, Benning made that mistake close to their goal and Iron Horse was able to take the ball in for a try just as the first half ended.

The second half was a real barn burner as the determined post ruggers kept the ball inside the Iron Horse half of the field for the rest of the game. The Benning team was constantly knocking at the door but could never get it across and the game ended 4-0.

The post team will host the High Country RFC Sunday at 2 p.m on Stilwell Field and will try to improve its 11 wins - 4 losses record.

Flag football champions

C Btry, 1/29th Inf is the winner of the 1978 USAIC Flag Football Tournament which took place Nov. 1-8. They defeated Co A, Comm Gp 8-0 in the tournament final Nov. 8 at Gowdy Field.

Eleven teams from the eight major units on post participated in the tournament.

Courthouse I tourney

A raquetball tournament is scheduled for Dec. 15-17 at the Courthouse I raquetball complex in Columbus. The tournament will be open to all interested players living in Phenix City, Columbus or Fort Benning.

Competition will be divided up into men's and women's groups with A-B-C and Novice divisions.

Registration forms for the three-day tourney can be picked up at Courthouse I or at Audie Murphy Gym on Main Post. Last day to sign up will be Tuesday, Dec. 12.

Prizes to be awarded include Courthouse I yearly memberships, raquetball raquets and T-shirts.

The Fort Benning AAU swim team will be hosting its annual Pilgrim Open swim meet here at the Briant Wells pool November 18-19. Over fifteen teams from throughout the state, Alabama and Tennessee, will be entering 300 swimmers in the multi-event meet. The first heat begins at 9 a.m. on each day and promises to be two action packed days of competitive swimming.

Fort Benning BB team BIG winners

Fort Benning finally has a post all-star basketball team and they are GOOD!

You've heard about 'beauty in motion,' 'fasterthan a speeding bullet' and 'he couldn't miss if he tried'? Those phrases could be applied to the 1978 Doughboy basketball team and the description would still not do them justice.

With a 6-0 record already to their credit, the Doughboys are on the road to capturing the TRADOC title this season and Coach Artis Lofton believes he's got the team to do it. (Coach Lofton led Fort Ord's basketball team to the 1978 FORSCOM Western Regional Championship title before coming to Benning as a student in IOAC-4.)

Tonight's game will be played at Santiago Gym. All future games will be played at Briant Wells Field House on Main Post across from Doughboy Stadium.

In past years Benning was represented at the TRADOC tournament by the best company-level team. Although Benning has a reputation for sending top teams to TRADOC, they fell short to posts represented by all-star teams.

Benning 'got on the ball' and organized its first all-star team this year due to the efforts of Ralph Santaliz, who took over as Athletic Director of Recreation Services in February, 1978.

Santaliz whipped the team into shape during preseason training and stayed on as coach during the first two games before handing the reins to player/coach Lofton. "These guys are in excellent shape," boasted Santaliz. "I ran them into the ground before the season started and it's helping now. We're proving that a talented, well-organized post team can do well in competition."

Being a soldier first and athlete second is not conducive to producing winning teams but the Doughboys are proving to be the proverbial 'exception to the rule'. Chalk it up to the talent, height and experience of the players.

The Doughboys have what it takes to be champions and you can bet your bars and stripes that they will be strong contenders for the TRADOC title.

"If we can remain undefeated through Christmas break, and keep everyone we have now," concluded Santaliz, "nobody will be able to touch us."

Post employee receives award

In a ceremony held Nov. 8, Maj. Gen. William Livsey, Fort Benning commander presented the Decoration for Meritorious Civilian Service with laurel leaf cluster to Leonard Ozley, director of Educational Development on post.

This is the second time Ozley has received the award, the second highest that the Department of the Army can give to a civilian.

The decoration is in recognition of Ozley's work in the development of on-post civilian educational opportunities for members of the military. Ozley is responsible for starting the first graduate and undergraduate college programs available on post. He also helped to eliminate the non-resident college fee for military personnel.

Ozley has worked at Benning for 25 years. He and his wife, Polly, live in Columbus.

Making Tracks

By Julie Casey

In an effort to provide better coverage of Fort Benning runners, I will have a Making Tracks statistic roster at races near the registration area in the future. It would be greatly appreciated if, Benning runners would leave their names and times on the roster. In the past, gathering statistics was just a matter of looking around for people with short haircuts.

Callaway Gardens Marathon

Charles Triplett led the Benning runners in the Callaway Gardens Marathon Nov. 11. He crossed the finish line in 2 hours and 49 minutes and 23 seconds. Tom Coniglio followed with the time of 2 hours and 49 minutes and 59 seconds.

The three loop course lapped Callaway Gardens on a hot day for a marathon. Many of the runners were unable to complete the grueling 26 miles and 385 yards due to dehydration. The race beginning at 10 a.m., left many of the runners having to face the noon day sun.

Julie Casey also ran placing 4 with the time of 3 hours and 26 minutes.

Poster coloring contest set

The Fort Benning children's postor-coloring contest begins Sunday, Nov. 19. Children may acquire postors for coloring from either the Lavoie Manor chapel, Custer Terrace Chapel, McGraw Manor Chapel, Main Post Chapel, or Main Post Catholic Chapel.

The posters will be colored and submitted to the judges by Dec. 1. They may be returned to the chapel of origin or to the Lavoie Manor Chapel. One winner from each of the chapels will receive a large Christmas stocking filled with candy and prizes.

The posters are to advertise the Lavoie Manor Children's Christmas Festival to be held at the Lavoie Manor Chapel on Dec. 16. The Puppet Company will provide a puppet performance fo the festival. Also traditional religious and comedy films will be shown. Following the activities, the children will be provided with refreshments.

Children everywhere or those who still feel young are invited to attend. The winning posters will be displayed in prominent places around Fort Benning.

Hospital named for Army nurse

An Army hospital will be named in honor of a woman for the first time, according to a spokesman for the Army's surgeon general.

Blanchfield Army Hospital, under construction at Fort Campbell, Ky., will be dedicated for Col. Florence Blanchfield, former chief of the Army Nurse Corps from 1943-1947.

Blanchfield, who died in 1973, was the first nurse to receive a regular Army commission in 1947. She was commissioned with the service number "N-1."

The spokesman added that the hospital dedication also marks the first time an Army hospital has been named for a nurse.

Blanchfield Army Hospital is slated for completion in two years. (ARNEWS)

NCOWC Board and Business Meetings

Nov. 6 the NCOWC held their monthly board and chairwomens meeting at their lounge on Lawson Field.

The general membership meeting was held Nov. 8, at the Top 5 NCO Club. Prior to the meeting, Mrs. Linda Hamon from the Dan Parker Gallery of Homes in cooperation with the American Red Cross, showed a film entitled, "One Person to Late." Mr. Gene Holcomb, Muscogee County Red Cross Director gave a brief talk on the importance of being first aid qualified and urged everyone to participate in the CPR and safety training classes offered by the Fort Benning and Muscogee County Red Cross. Miss Priscilla Allen and Mr. J. C. Jackson from the Fort Benning Red Cross were also guests for the afternoon.

Refreshments were served by hostess Mrs. Ruby Johnson.

MAH Coffee Call

The NCOWC semi-weekly Martin Army Hospital Coffee call took place on Nov. 8. Assisting Chairwoman Mrs. Lillian Lambert to serve coffee and donuts throughout the various wards of the hospital were Mrs. Joanne Thomas, Mrs. Gloria Dunlap, Mrs. Sallie Smith, Mrs. Delores Gardner. New Comers Coffee

The NCOWC extends an invitation to all newcomers in the area to join us for coffee on Nov. 28. The coffee will be held at 10 a.m. at our lounge on Lawson Field.

Happy Thanksgiving.

OWC Bazaar

The OWC Bazaar appears to have been an unqualified success! Many thanks to everyone who worked so tirelessly on all phases of the Bazaar — in planning the event, organizing committees, making crafts, baking goodies, and donating their time to work at the Bazaar. The Fort Benning community will derive much benefit from the proceeds of this endeavor. Thanks for a job well-done!

Thanksgiving

Published each Friday by the R. W. Page Corporation, Columbus, Ga., a private firm in no way connected with the Department of the Army. Opinions expressed by the publisher and writers herein are their own and are not to be considered an official expression by the Department of the Army. The appearance of advertisements in the publication does not constitute endorsement by the Department of the Army of the products or service advertised.

Family togetherness day a tradition

It's Thanksgiving again, and Sarah Josepha Buell Hale might have second thoughts about it.

The idea was born

It was her idea in the first place, making Thanksgiving an official, Nationwide holiday. And it was thanks to her years of badgering governors and finally President Abraham Lincoln, that it came to be — though, today, perhaps not quite what she had in mind.

The modern Thanksgiving seems to be that annual holiday when we pay the supreme All-American salute to overeating, when go-get-'em stores are well into their Christmas sales, when television football imposes a trance on all those already stupefied by the dinner table.

Some Americans do find time to give thanks, usually as the family gathers around the groaning board. That's what Mrs. Hale had in mind for the day — giving thanks.

Tradition Plus

But just as turkey is the day's traditional attraction, Thanksgiving through the years has been stuffed with politics, commercialism, and indifference, the National Geographic Society says.

In 1621, the Pilgrims set the style for future Thanksgivings with their now-famous celebraton at Plymouth in the Colony of Massachusetts. They fed enormously on wild turkeys, geese, ducks, wood pigeons, partridge, beechnut stuffing, home-brewed beer, wine from wild grapes, lobster, oysters, codfish eels, venison, pumpkins, corn bread and succotash.

They had unexpected guests drop in for dinner: 90 Indians.

They carried on with fun and sport, such as target contests between colonists with firearms and Indians with bows and arrows, and Miles Standish awed the assembly by parading his 20-man regiment back and forth.

They celebrated for three days, beginning each morning with prayers.

Despite all the goings-on, nobody knows exactly when the first Plymouth Thanksgiving occurred — though many historians say October.

Apparently the hungry Pilgrims were too busy eating to note the date. And it was two years before they had another Thanksgiving celebration.

Early Thanksgiving

The Massachusetts party was not the scene of the first solemn giving of thanks in the New World. Colonists at Jamestown, Va., observed a day of "thanksgiving" on Dec. 4, 1619, on the banks of the James River.

No matter which group was first, the harvest home festival of thanks became a custom associated with the New England colonists. George Washington took to it as his troops joined Yankee celebrators during the Revolution. And as President, he proclaimed that a day of thanksgiving should be observed on Thursday, Nov. 26.

His successors, however, sometimes chose dates in April, May, and August as Thanksgiving, or, as with Thomas Jefferson, ignored it altogether.

In 1863, Lincoln finally proclaimed the fourth Thursday in November as the Nation's annual day of thanks.

'It's the real thing' for 3/7th Inf

By Stephen Guthrie

The training most units of the 197th Infantry Brigade (Sep) use is as realistic and accurate as humanly possible, and often combat can be simulated to a high degree. But the 3/7th Infantry Battalion has developed the "fake" combat to a tee. Last week, the 3/7th went to the field for a two-day exercise that would pit them against Troop A, 15th Cavalry, another member of the 197th. Acting as aggressors, the Cav took up fortified positions on knolls covered with trenches and positions made for a defense against a concentrated attack. The Cav moved in during the evening and were ready for the attack many hours before the actual event took place.

The 3/7th had a tough task ahead of them; to completely overrun an enemy position that had been fortified and manned for an attack from a much larger force, and to do it in a certain amount of time. The attack began at mid-morning, just when the sun would be most useful to the attackers.

The Cav threw everything they had into their defense. Smoke, simulated machine gun and small arms fire, tear gas (CS) and manpower were all being used when the soldiers of the 3/7th charged up the knoll to meet the enemy. As Cav member Spec. 4 Billy Grogan later exclaimed, "I was even scared for a moment. It was just so realistic, I almost believed we were in combat."

With training of this kind taking place, America can be sure that today's modern Army has more going for it than complaints. As Command Sgt. Maj. Russell Anderson of the 3/7th puts it, "The soldiers of my unit are really getting into their jobs. It used to be we would have to tell them what to do when they were in the field, now, we have to be on our toes constantly because they are usually one step ahead of us."

Thanksgiving Message

1. Thanksgiving Day was originated by the Pilgrims as a way of giving thanks for their survival. This year as we give thanks we should remember that each year in the past has been marred, for many, by a serious or fatal accident. Fortunately, last year, no one from Fort Benning was either seriously injured or killed during this period.

2. To help assure your safety this holiday weekend, inspect your car before you drive to be sure it is in a safe mechanical condition. Then, as you drive, keep your seat belt fastened, practice defensive driving, and remember the three C's — Courtesy, Caution, Carefulness.

3. While you are enjoying your holiday, please keep safety in mind so that you and your loved ones can enjoy many more holidays in the future. Have a happy holiday and return safely.

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room - and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 100 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

Follow Me hosts Thanksgiving meal

By Barbara Robinson

Dining facilities on post are getting ready to celebrate Thanksgiving in a big way. Traditionally, the midday meal on Thanksgiving is a time to welcome area retired military personnel and military dependents to the post for a true feast.

According to Food Service officials, 6,529 pounds of turkey and 1,693 pounds of ham, along with 1,400 pounds of shrimp cocktail will make up the main attractions November 23.

The sumptuous meal will also feature 2,910 pounds of bread dressing, 1,830 pounds of fresh potatoes with giblet gravy, 2,958 pounds of sweet potatoes, 1,503 pounds of creamed onions, and 1,309 pounds of asparagus.

There will be 1,224 pounds of chef salad served.

All the trimmings will include 3,395 pounds of butter-flaked rolls, 2,229 cans of cranberry sauce and 970 pounds of relish.

For those who don't count calories, there will be 1,967 pies of assorted types, 50 pounds of whipped cream, 1,001 pounds of fruit cake, 1,409 pounds of unselled nuts and 289 10-pound cans of mixed nuts.

Coffee, tea, milk and soft drinks will round out the menu.

The Follow Me. Dining Facility will be open to all retired military and dependents as well as active duty personnel. Retired military and dependents will be charged $2.90, children under 12, $1.55, and soldiers on separate rations will pay $1.90. All dining facilities will serve from 1 p.m. to 3:30 p.m.

More than 1,000 persons are expected to take advantage of the dinner offer.

Thanksgiving Messages

"On this Thanksgiving Day we can be truly grateful for the blessings we enjoy. America is at peace and new international cooperation promises a more harmonious world. Our Armed Forces are well trained, vigilant and dedicated to maintaining that peace.

"Our country would not be secure this Thanksgiving without the selfless service and devotion to high ideals of the men and women who wear its uniforms. Rosalynn and I send our special wishes to them and to their families for a wonderful Thanksgiving holiday of good fellowship and personal fulfillment."

Commander-in-chief

During this holiday season, we extend to each member of the United States Army our personal greetings and best wishes.

As we pause to reflect on this year's events and achievements and consider our hopes and aspirations for the coming year, we take deep pride in the service, sacrifice and devotion that each of you has given in the cause of peace and freedom. Your unselfish devotion to duty has earned the respect and gratitude of all people who seek a world free of human and social injustices.

May each of you and your families have a holiday season filled with joy and a new year of good health and happiness.

"The approach of another Thanksgiving Day is a signal to put aside our usual preoccupations and give thought to the benefits we enjoy as citizens of a free country and inheritors of a tradition of individual liberty and responsibility which was observed in New England more than 350 years ago.

"The preservation of our freedom depends upon the spirit and will of the men and women of the Armed Services, who stand guard around the clock and around the world.

"On this occasion, I offer my personal best wishes and appreciation to all of you in uniform, your families, and those in the Department of Defense who, though not in uniform, are part of our military structure. Your efforts maintain the physical security that makes the freedom we all enjoy possible. You have my thanks on this and every day."

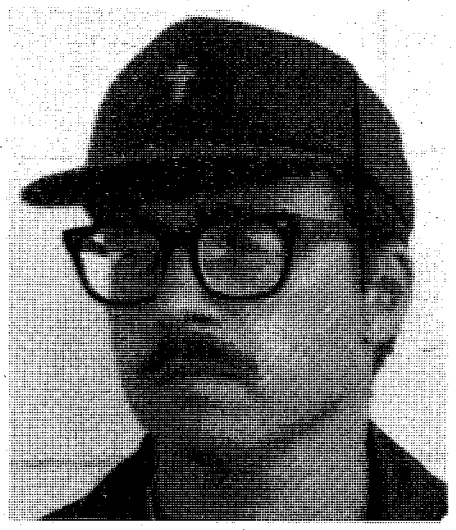
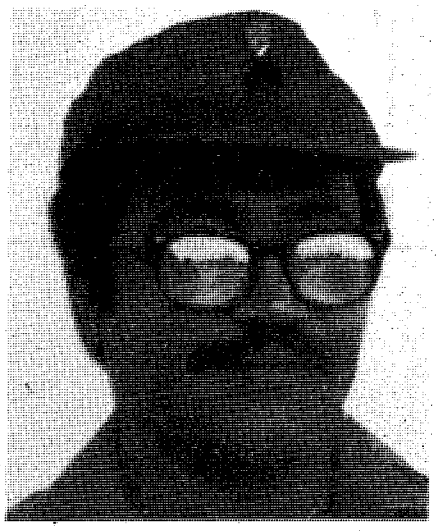
Glad you asked

How do you like to spend Thanksgiving?



Chaplain Hank Tteinhilber, HHC, 1st ITB

"I like to spend my Thanksgiving with people who don't have families to be with. Thanksgiving is a time of sharing. Many soldiers here are far away from their families. I enjoy sharing my holiday with these people."

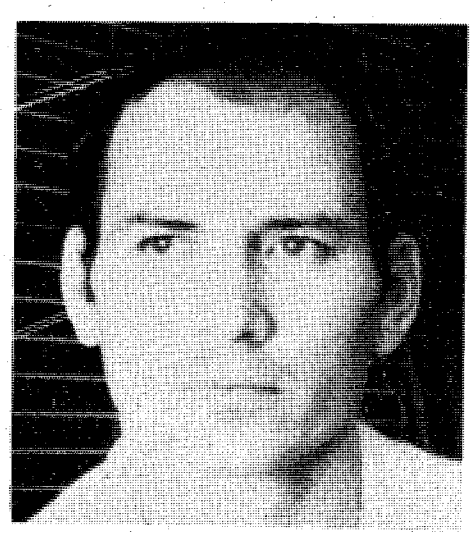


Sgt. Marvin Shields, 2nd Bn, 1st ITB

"I like to be with my family and travel around Georgia visiting friends. Of course we all like some turkey, chittlings, cole slaw, dressing, and home made pies."

Sp 5 Jim Clemments, Parachute Packing Branch

"I like getting together with my family, taking it easy, maybe watching a football game and having a great turkey dinner."



Air Force Capt. Dave Lawrence, Det 1, 317 TAW/ALCE

"I think of Thanksgiving as a time to share with the family. I like to spend a day with the family and remember all the things I have to be thankful for. Of course I like the traditional turkey dinner that goes along with the holiday."

Holiday for celebration

By Seth Hamilton

Thanksgiving is truly a great holiday. Unlike Christmas and birthdays, when everyone has to rush around buying gifts and planning parties, Thanksgiving is no big hassle. It is a relaxed time when people can be together with their families and good friends just to have an inexpensive good time.

The meaning of Thanksgiving should be very special to us. We, more than anyone else in the world, have so much to be thankful for. We're a strong, country that has flourished on the idea that every man, woman and child has a god-given right to live a free life. We have fought and sacrificed for what we believe. We've had the courage and conviction to be a leader among nations. Yes, we have a lot to be thankful for.

Thanksgiving is surely the true family holiday. Christmas, it seems, has lost some of its family spirit to the modern day avalanche of commercialism. There is no other day of the year that is set aside specifically to share good times within a family.

Thanksgiving in the Army is an unusual time. By the very nature of their job, thousands of soldiers are not able to be with their families for Thanksgiving. These soldiers will spend time with their family only on the telephone or in a letter. It is during this time when a soldier feels that need for family togetherness, but at the same times he notices something he might have overlooked before. He has his own family, the Army.

The Army really is a family of sorts. We work together in the same interest. We live and eat together. And more important, we are each other's friend. We take care of each other.

So if you're unable to get home to your folks over the holiday, it's not that bad. Be thankful for the family that's with you.

1621: Pilgrims give thanks

On an April day in 1621, a group of about 50 people stood on the sandy beach of Plymouth, Mass., gazing out to sea. They were watching a vessel moving steadily eastward until it was a mere speck on the horizon.

It was a gaunt and ill-nourished band that stood on the Plymouth shore. Their bodies had been wrached with illinesses; their minds had been tortured with anxieties and fears; their clothing was threadbare — but their faith was still undaunted.

The ship which the watchers on the shore followed with their eyes until it disappeared over the horizon was the Mayflower returning to England, where food, shelter, warmth, and all the comforts of an orderly civilization would be found.

Lonely for their homeland, the Pilgrims watched the sails of the ship disappear behind the trackless sea, but not one of their members was aboard. They chose to remain in this new land facing untold hardship, rather than forsake the vision that called them forth. Steadfast in their faith and perserverance, they lived to celebrate the First Thanksgiving Day and set the foundations of the American Nation that was yet to be.

Today, many of the world's population face unprecedented famine and starvation, but the land of the Pilgrims has brought forth bountifully. As we observe Thanksgiving Day 1978, let us take time to remember the significance of our Nation's annual day of thankfulness.

Letters to the Editor

Cigarettes are road sores

With all the publicity in the news about the extreme dry condition of the countryside. I find it hard to understand how anyone could be so stupid and inconsiderate as to throw burning cigarette butts out of car windows.

Besides making a mess out the roadside, the chances of starting a fire are highly possible. If you haven't noticed those patches of charred grass in the medium of the bypass, look again.

It is totally unexcusable and anyone that has been throwing cigarettes obviously sits on their brain while driving.

signed disgusted.

Only turkeys miss Thanksgiving!

Every year Americans celebrate Thanksgiving as their forefathers did for the first time more than 200 years ago. The colonists had much to be thankful for; their homes were built, their families were growing, and their future was bright.

Our goals and circumstances may seem far removed from those of our early ancestors, but we still have much for which to be thankful. To celebrate our good fortune, families come together each Thanksgiving to express their thanks for privileges that are denied to many families throughout the world.

Will you have something to be thankful for this Thanksgiving, or will your family's celebration be marred by an empty chair at the dinner table? The majority of America's service men and women are stationed many miles away from home. Many wish to take a trip and join their families during this traditional time of togetherness. IF you choose to make such a journey, remember that you are just one in thousands who will be taking to the highway for a quick journey home. It is estimated that 650 people will be killed in traffic accidents during the four day Thanksgiving holiday; don't let yourself be one of this number.

There are many practices which contribute to privately owned vehicle accidents. Such practices as driving while fatigued, operating a mechanically unsafe vehicle, and driving at exessive speed for the road conditions contribute to fatal accidents. The two primary factors which are most often involved in fatal automobile accidents are driving under the influence of alcohol and the non-use of seat belts.

This year three Fort Benning soldiers have been killed in privately owned vehicle accidents and several have been injured. In two of the three accidents, the driver had been drinking prior to the accident, while in all three fatal accidents no seat belts were being used.

"Although we can teach defensive driving, provide the rules for safe driving, ask or even tell you to obey laws and rules which will help keep you alive; ultimately it is up to you, the driver, to keep yourself and your passengers alive," said Mr. Bennie Padgett, Fort Benning Safety Manager. "We cannot do your driving for you ! If you want to avoid becoming a statistic this Thanksgiving you will have to do what is necessary to assure your own safety. And remember — watch out for the other guy."

Concern to appear Saturday on 38

Fort Benning Concern makes its monthly appearance this Saturday night at 6 p.m. on WYEA TV, Channel 9. An extensive report on this year's United States Army (AUSA) convention in Washington, D.C. is slated as well as an interview with Fort Benning Commander Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey's wife, Bena Sue.

Other topics include socialization between officers and enlisted soldiers, an art contest and an update on the dry forest conditions on post. The hosts are Specs. 4 Syl Underwood and Kirk Dorn.

1/29th attached to 197th at ceremony

By Mike Daigle

The 1st Battlaion, 29th Infantry, (1/29th), The School Brigade was attached to the 197th Infantry Brigade Friday in a full-scale ceremony that included a change of command. Maj. James I. Daily assumed command of the battalion from Lt. Col. Charles H. Jackson.

The entire brigade, assembled under Lt. Col. B. J. Maynard, commander of troops, passed in review for Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey, Fort Benning commander, and Col. James R. Hall, Brigade commander.

The mission of the 1/29th has been to support the U.S. Army Infantry School in its field and hands-on training. This required many man-hours of Infantry, airborne ranger and artillery support, as the school has many classes requiring field problems such as Infantry Officer Advanced Course, Infantry Officer Basic Course, Branch Immaterial Officer Candidate Course and more.

However, the strength of the 1/29th was cut in half, requiring the additional use of 197th Personnal in fulfilling their support roles. Therefore, the decision was made to switch the battalion to the 197th and have all school support under the same headquarters.

No garbage pick-up tomorrow

There will be no garbage pick-up in family quarters on post Thursday due to the Thanksgiving holiday, according to a spokesperson from the Utilities Division of the Directorate of Facilities Engineering. The next pick-up will be as scheduled, Nov. 27.

Occupants should take special care to store their garbage without causing a litter problem.

Let MOM mail Yule letters

This Christmas season, as in three previous years, the Military Overseas Mail (MOM) program will distribute thousands of pieces of mail — cards, letters and notes of support and encouragement — to military personnel, many of whom are away from home during the holiday season for the first time.

The mail is collected from the public at large and distributed around the world to U.S. service-members to let American men and women in uniform know that the American public cares about them.

If you or a local group you know would like to participate in this project, or if you have a friend or relative in military service who would appreciate some extra mail at Christmas time, write for more information to Military Overseas Mail, Box 4330, Arlington, Va. 22204. The telephone contact is Lee Spencer, program coordinator, at Autovon 227-9992 or 225-0852.

NCO Wives Club gives IV to MAH

Mrs. Luise Paulscock, welfare service chairperson, Fort Benning Noncommissioned Officers Wives Club (NCOWC), presented a peristaltic intravenous pump to Martin Army Hospital (MAH) in a ceremony held Nov. 16.

Col. Costas Kleanthous, MAH deputy commander, accepted it on behalf of the hospital.

The sophisticated machine makes possible highly accurate measurements of fluids given to a patient on an intravenous set-up. Money for the pump, which cost $810, was raised by the NCOWC through various fund-raising projects such as their annual Christmas bazaar and their gift-wrapping booth set up in the Main Mall each Christmas season.

Opportunity doesn't always knock

Would you believe that almost everyone who lives in your barracks is basically honest? You are, and you tend to think the same about others. But given the opportunity, a normally honest type may take advantage of favorable circumstances to advance his or her own cuase, i.e., rip you off.

Look at it like this: You wouldn't steal money from a bank because it's too well guarded. But if you found a $5 bill lying beside somebody's bunk you might pick it up while nobody is watching. You can think of plenty of reasons why you should have it, instead of the other guy. You also try not to think about the guy who "lost" it.

Now take it a step further. You're in the shower room and Pvt. Doe is in the shower with a head full of suds. His pants are not. Sooooo . . . while Doe has his eyes closed rinsing the shampoo out, you gently lift his wallet out of his pants. You're gone before he opens his eyes. He can't pin it on you because there were serveral guys in and out and he really didn't notice who they were. The opportunity presented itself, and you, not usually the felonious type, took advantage of it and "enriched" yourself.

"Not me," you say? Probably not, but don't be Pvt. Doe, either. While the thief may feel a twinge of guilt later, he still has the cash and ol' Doe can only kick himself for trusting his buddies.

Don't get the wrong idea. Everbody should get to know the people he or she lives with. Be friendly, but don't be dumb. They may all be great guys or gals, but you don't know what

Distinguished Drill Sergeant of Cycle named

All the long hours, the concern and the dedication paid off for Staff Sgt. Michael Penny when he was named Distinguished Drill Sergeant of the Cycle.

The Distinguished Drill Sergeant of the Cycle receives a drill sergeant statuette, drill sergeant silver cord for his campaign hat, a Department of the Army Certificate of Achievement and a Brigade Letter of Commendation. He is selected by a Battalion Board from the honor drill sergeant's of the graduating companies.

The Honor Drill Sergeant of a Company receives a Department of the Army Certificate of Achievement and a Brigade Letter of Commendation and is selected by the highest platoon average on the Advanced Physical Fitness Test (APFT) and Performance Orientated Infantry Qualification Test (POIQT).

The drill sergeant is the man most responsible for producing well trained Infantrymen to fill the ranks of combat units worldwide. When the drill sergeant assumes responsibility for the soldiers entrusted to his care, he takes an oath which reads as follows:

"These soldiers are entrusted to my care. I will train them to the best of my ability. I will develop them into motivated, disciplined, physically fit, well trained Infantrymen, thoroughly indoctrinated in love of Army and county. I will demand of them, and demonstrate by my own example, the highest standards of personal conduct, morality, and professional skill."

Opportunity

any one of them may do if given the opportunity.

Play it safe. Don't give them the chance. Lock your valuables in your wall locker whenever you're away — even if only for a moment!

All of this will help keep honest people honest. Next, consider the guy who takes the opportunity a step further. He's not as honest as you, and given the opportunity will greatly expand his holdings at your expense.

Say you're practicing formation for a funeral detail and you leave all your small valuables secured in your wall locker. But it's common knowledge that you keep your camera gear in your footlocker because it won't all fit in your wall locker. Pvt. Doe is still seething because he had to sell his stereo to make his car payments after his wallet was taken. The man at the pawn shop said he would exchange the stereo for something else of equal value if Doe could "find" something.

Don't just think you're secure. Be sure! Are your stereo system and footlocker chained to a bed or wall? Is your motorcycle locked up? And your car, is it locked, with no valuables sitting where it can be seen in the passenger compartment? Where is it parked?

Too much to think about? You have too much at stake not to. Preventing crimes against yourself will become second nature with just a little practice. Pretty soon you won't even think about protecting your hard-earned possessions from the passing opporuntist. (FORSCOM).

The keynote speaker will be Lt. Gen. (ret.) Vernon A. Walters, who, for thirty-five years lived at the center of world history and moved in the highest echelons of military and government circles.

Professor Safety Says

"Premoistened paper towels containing benzalkonium chloride should not be used near the mouth or eyes of children under six years old, according to doctors of Children's Hospital in Nashville. They warn that benzalkonium chloride is poisonous in heavy concentrations. They also advise keeping such towels stored out of reach of children."

Some OAC graduates notified of assignment

Most Officer Advanced Course (OCA) selectees will be notified of their next assignment after OAC graduation three to five months before they attend the courses, MILPERCEN officials said last week.

The advance assignment procedure will begin with the start of the May 1979 Military Intelligence OAC class and in June for all other OAC classes, officials said.

Officers with certain assignments may not receive advance notification within the three to five month target dates before OAC, officials said, but most should receive the early notification.

Officials explained that advance assignment notification is possible because assignment needs are being projected 18 to 20 months in advance.

The new Advance Assignment Policy is based on a test of the system that began earlier this year. That test, officials observed, showed that advance assignment procedures were valuable to Personnel Management officials and the individual officers.

The policy involves some added personnel actions that officers must take when OAC orders are requested. Local MILPOS can provide details of these requirements. (ARNEWS)

Helping hands

The Brownies of Troop 136 have been working hard collecting and giving up some of their own toys for the Army Community Service (ACS) Christmas toy collection for needy children.

Besides helping with Christmas, Troop 136s' total project is to help ACS in any way possible such as stuffing welcome packages.

ACS alive and doing well

The Army Community Service's (ACS) Save-a-Toy drive is alive and well. Volunteers at the ACS report that the response from the military has been good. Of course, more toys are needed before Christmas arrives.

Many of the toys that have come in are slightly damaged. The ACS would like to acknowledge the help of the 261st Medical Det. (Equipment Maintenance) . Soldiers of the 261st have been solely responsible for restoring the damaged toys so they can be used again.

The ACS hopes to have enough toys by Christmas to distribute to needy military families. They ask people donating toys to get any damaged toys in by Dec. 1 and toys in good condition by Dec. 15. The ACS would like to thank everyone who's helped for their support.

Say "thanks" with the gift that grows.

Beware of old 'Ptomaine Tom'

During the holidays, ''scrumptious'' meals are prepared in dining halls and homes. Refrigeration space is taxed and pots which haven't been used for some time are brought out. Highly vulnerable foods, such as turkey, ham, giblet gravy, dressing, cream-topped pumpkin and mincemeat pie, are served.

But lack of attention to proper food handling and sanitation in preparing and serving these holiday specialties can result in food poisoning.

One of the major causes of food-related illness has been roasting whole turkeys with the abdominal cavity filled with dressing. The problem is getting the internal temperature high enough to cook the dressing without buring the outside to a crisp. This can be prevented by baking the turkey and the dressing separately.

Another cause of sickness is

Thanksgiving feast

The turkeys held by (l-r) Sgt. 1st Class Ruben Gauthier, Lavoie Manor mayor, Chaplain (Capt.) W. Darryl Goldman and E. G. Sparks, president of the National Bank of Fort Benning, were donated by Bank employees during its food drive for the Lavoie Manor Thanksgiving program. The bank and employees contributed twelve turkeys, dozens of canned foods, bread, and many incidentals that will be used in providing Thanksgiving dinner for many Fort Benning families who could not otherwise afford such a meal.

merely warming and not boiling the giblet gravy. Leaving vulnerable foods on the buffet or table too long at a low temperature range between 45-140 degrees is asking for trouble. This is the range at which bacteria and toxins develop rapidly.

At home parties or buffets, insure that hot foods are kept hot (well above 145 degrees) and cold foods are kept cold (below 45 degrees). Food should not be left out for several hours after cooking.

Some simple rules to remember are: thaw frozen foods in the refrigerator and not at room temperature; adequately heat foods that are served hot; cover and refrigerate left over foods immediately and try to use them within 24 hours.

Champions' review

As reported in last week's issue of the BAYONET, C Battery, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry is this year's winner in the 1978 USAIC Flag Football Championship. The following is a more detailed account of the game:

By Calvin R. Fore

C Btry turned back an early threat by Co A, Comm Gp, and went on to win the 1978 USAIC Flag Football Championship 8-0.

Fueled by a stubborn defense and a well-balanced offense, the Red Legs completed a perfect 18-0 season. After winning both the 29th Inf and TSB championship, C Btry rambled to victory through five opponents during the post tournament.

For 14 minutes of the first half, neither team could generate an offensive drive. After exchanging punts, Co A moved the ball inside C Btry's 10-yard line where the Red Legs stopped them cold.

Sparked by the play of the defense, the Battery gathered momentum in the final minutes of the first half. Under the quarterbacking of Kenneth Smith and the running of outstanding halfbacks Ralph Jones and Leon Martin, C Btry rolled over Comm Gp's defense and scored on a 14-yard pass to Robert Barnes. The two-point conversion was scored by Smith's run around left end.

The second half was a defensive struggle with outstanding plays by Johnnie Dirden, Walter Priester, Daniel Yancy and Harry Simmons. The Battery made the only scoring threat half way in the second period but were halted when Co A intercepted a pass on their 10-yard line.

The outstanding defensive player was Yancy, who penetrated Co A's offense at will and made numerous tackles behind the line of scrimmage. The outstanding offensive players were Martin and Jones, whose hard, slashing runs kept Co A's defense off balance.

It was C Btry's "Last Hurrah!", as their unit was in the process of being deactivated during the post tournament.

Team members were heard saying it was "great to go out on top." They should know since this was a repeat performance for the Battery, having won the title in 1976.

The victory celebration was sweetened with 30 bottles of champagne, courtesy of the Battery officers.

Mistakes plague ruggers

By James Carter

The Fort Benning Rugby team played host to the Atlanta-based High Country Rugby Football Club Sunday at Stilwell Field.

The High Country Team was quick to capitalize on the many mistakes that seemed to plague the Benning ruggers and held a 14-0 lead at the half.

It was a determined team that came out onto the pitch in the second half, but in rugby determination isn't always enough. The kickoff was mishandled by Fort Benning and bounced into the waiting arms of a High Country forward who took it in for the score. The conversion was good and the score was 20-0.

The Benning ruggers refused to give up as they continually kept the pressure on High Country but the mistakes were too costly and the game ended 20-10.

The Benning B Side played their usual basic rugby but were unable to penetrate the High Country defense, who won the game on a penalty kick 3-0.

Because of the holiday weekend, there will be no rugby game until Dec. 2 when the post ruggers will travel to Atlanta to play the Atlanta RFC.

GRASSHOPPER DIVISION

L. Cowboys.....18
49ers.....6

The Lavoie Cowboys completed a perfect season by defeating the Tri-City 49ers and retained first place in their division.

Outstanding players for the Cowboys were Dennis Jarwin, Chad Perry, Jim Sullivan and Mike Lynch.

Offensive standouts for the 49ers were Xavier Lee and Jeffrey Day; defensive standout was Andrea Bowen.

Buccaneers.....13
Falcons.....0

The Main Post Buccaneers shutout the Main Post Falcons in a crucial battle to end up in second place in the division.

Scoring for the Buccaneers was accomplished by Antoine Owens (1 TD and PAT) and George Doyle (1 TD).

Offensive Buccaneer standouts were John Hattle and Timothy Thomas; defensive standouts were Eddie Meadows and Shane Johnson.

Antoine Owens was selected as the most outstanding player on the team this year, having scored a total of 27 touchdowns during the season.

Offensive standouts for the Falcons were Tom Wellman and Pablo Diaz; defensive standouts were Pat Schooley and Randall Eggie.

TERMITE DIVISION

Golden Eagles.....38
Redskins.....8

The Tri-City Golden Eagles remained undefeated as they overcame the Main Post Redskins 38-8 in the final game of the season.

Scoring touchdowns for the Eagles were Phillip Florence (3 TDs), Petie Marshall (2 TDs) and Gary Phillips (1 TD with three successful points on Marshall to Phillip passes).

Defensive standouts were Michael Holmes and Shon Poteat. Offensive standouts were Jerry Stone, Scott Harwick and Terry Phoenix.

MIDGET DIVISION

Wildcats.....28
Packers.....6

The Tri-City Wildcats captured first place in the Midget Division for the season by downing the Fort Rucker Packers.

Falcons.....16
Colts.....8

The Main Post Falcons scored late in the fourth quarter on a fluke defensive deflected pass into the hands of the intended receiver to break a tie score and defeat the Lavoie Colts.

The win clinched second place in the division for the Falcons' season closer.

Antonio Rogers and Richard Eggie scored the two crucial touchdowns. The offensive and defensive accomplishments were a team effort.

SENIOR DIVISION

Trojans.....26
Demons.....14

The Fort Rucker Trojans overcame the Fort Benning Demons in the division title game to take first place in the Senior Division for the season.

The Demons got off to a slow start. Faking the kickoff, their first play from scrimmage resulted in a fumble turnover to the Trojans on the eleven. After a series of hard-fought downs, Terry Kobes of the Trojans scored from the two with 6:54 remaining in the first period.

With 1:42 remaining, Maurice Powell scored around right end from his own 35. Powell scored late on a 58-yard run. The extra point was obtained by Terry Kobes.

In the second half, Jimmy Concepcion scored from the six and Colon got the point after. Bassett scored again for the Trojans, setting the score at 26-8.

In the fourth quarter, Charles Cole passed to Concepcion for a touchdown.

Doughboys edge Alabama 17-14 in season final

By Deb Hilgeman

The Fort Benning Doughboys' final game at Doughboy Stadium Saturday night was a real cliffhanger.

Picture this: After losing the first eight straight games in the 1978 season, the Doughboys do an about face and win three of their next four games as if their next promotions were riding on the outcome. They go to their final battle against a tough Alabama University junior varsity team and with scant seconds remaining in the contest, the score is tied at 14-all with the Doughboys possessing the ball.

Can the home team do it? Will the Doughboys pull out a victory before time runs out?

You bet.

Untested Walter 'Butch' Bridges kicked a 30-yard field goal with 23 seconds remaining in play, and thus became the Doughboys' 'million-dollar baby.'

The Doughboys turned the tables in their favor when flanker Arthur Hawkins caught a pass from quarterback Joe Duenas, following a blocked Alabama punt.

Two plays later, Duenas sprinted down the right side to the 14-yard line. With 2:31 remaining in the first period, tailback Robert Moore managed a one-yard scoring run and Bridges added the point after.

The Doughboys held on to their 7-0 lead until early in the third quarter when Alabama intercepted a pass on Benning's 49-yard line and parlayed it into a 7-yard touchdown around the right end with 9:53 remaining in the period. The conversion attempt failed.

Late in the period, the Doughboys were again in scoring position but a pitchout to tailback Willie McCall was driven out of bounds just short of goal. In the next play, however, Moore carried one yard for the score. Bridges' dead-center kicking added the extra point, setting the score at 14-6.

Late in the fourth quarter, a Doughboy punt rolled into the end zone, giving Alabama the ball on their 20-yard line. Doughboy fans began holding their breath when Alabama's Dwight Cranshaw exploded with a scoring 80-yard screen pass to Derrick Massingale and Donzell Brooks tied the score with a successful two-point conversion.

The tie was short lived as the Doughboys retaliated with Bridges' three-point 'Coup de grace' that clinched the victory 17-14 and gave the Doughboys a 9-4 season record.

(A photo feature and recap of the Doughboy's 1978 season will appear in an upcoming issue of the BAYONET.)

Doughboy BB team still undefeated

By Madonna Simple

Traveling violations and fouls plagued the Moody AFB Jets as the Benning Doughboys clinched a 93-80 victory Saturday, at Santiago Gym.

It was difficult to determine which basket belonged to Moody as the Doughboys held a tight rein under both nets.

In addition, the Doughboys, using the zone defense effectively, forced the Moody team to shoot from the outside, hacking away at Moody's chances for points.

However, the Doughboy dictatorship didn't stop Moody from trying to keeping up with the speedy pace. Most of the first three quarters were spent trading baskets and foul shots.

The Doughboys had all but three men score in double figures with the high man of the game, Charlie Jackons (22) piling up 17 points. Arnold Bray (42) followed a close second with 16 points.

Grier Gracin (33), was the high man for Moody with 22 points followed by Robert Oakman (31) who compiled 21 points.

The Doughboys were always one step ahead of Moody and led at half time 52-37. Even though Moody led in points during the second half, the Doughboys kept a constant hold on the lead.

Moody shirts captured the area around and under the basket. However, that didn't stop Bray, whose magnetic shooting always attracts a basket. Bray sunk a long shot from the far side of the court, silencing fans and opponents alike.

On a combination pass-play, Scott Cummings (14), weaved his way through his opponents to gently ease the ball through the hoop. It was that play that led up to three time outs before the final buzzer.

Moody's Bruce Browley (11) stole the ball from Tony Haycliff (44) on an attempted pass and glided down court all-alone for an easy two points.

Gracin made an easy layup on a long pass from down court, despite the wall of Doughboys surrounding him.

As time ran out, Doughboy's Michael Lawton (30) was fouled with 38 seconds left in the third quarter. Moody called three time outs in the fourth quarter in a futile attempt to get ahead but the final buzzer proved to be an enemy for the trailing team.

By Deb Hilgeman

When the Doughboys faced Moody again Sunday, the 101-82 Doughboy victory was predictable from the time the clock started.

The Doughboys accelerated in the opening minutes and grabbed a lead which they maintained at about ten points throughout the game. Although Moody is the toughest team the Doughboys have met this season, they couldn't summon the impetus needed to close the gap.

Doughboy forward Arnold Bray, 6'6'', wasn't shooting as many of his devastating dunk shots as usual but he was invaluable under the basket. Forward Charlie Jackson, 6'3'', also made some excellent plays, moving like a contortionist in a carnival to shoot the ball out to his teammates. James King, 6'6'' Doughboy center, left Benning last week to play his second year in the All-Army team but his leaving apparently will not affect the team's cohesiveness.

Luckily for the Doughboys, both teams were evenly paced in scoring. Although the Doughboys controlled the game, it was obvious they weren't playing to their full potential.

This was, perhaps, due to the intense rivalry between the teams. Sportsmanship suffered by the determination to dominate the hardwood. With one minute remaining in the final period, the sizzling atmopshere exploded in a fracas that resulted in one player from each team being ejected from the game. As one official described it, "The last five minutes (of the game) looked more like football than basketball."

The game ended on a sober note with the Doughboys using the final minute to notch 11 points to Moody's three.

The double win against Moody shot the Doughboy season record to 8-0.

The Doughboys' next games will be against Fort McPherson Dec. 1 and 2 at 7:30 and 1:30 p.m., respectively, in Briant Wells Field House. They meet Tuskegee at Briant Wells Dec. 3 at 2:30 p.m.

Making Tracks

By Julie Casey

After running my first marathon, I was curious as to why the marathon is exactly 26 miles and 385 yards long.

Supposedly the 26 miles and 385 yards is the distance between the Grecian cities of Marathon and Athens. According to the historian, Plutarch, who wrote the account of a battle between the Greeks and Persians in 490 B.C., a fellow names Pheidippides ran from the battlefield at Marathon to Athens to report the Grecian victory. The story goes, the runner completed the distance and fell dead while giving the news.

The first modern day Marathon was held in 1896 during the Olympics in Athens. The events included a run from Marathon to Athens in commeration of the legendary battle.

From 1896 to 1908 the distances varied, then in the London England Olympics, the course was altered so it would begin in front of Windsor Castle so the English princess could watch the race from her window. After measuring the course, the distance was found to be 26 miles and 385 yards. From then on that distance was the official marathon length.

The most famous marathon is by far the Boston Marathon, referred to as 'The Boston'. More than a million people line the streets on Patriots' Day to watch thousands of runners go the distance. The Boston began in 1897 with just 15 people participating. The 1978 Boston had over 6,000 men and women running, that is thousands of men who have run the qualifying time of three hours and women who have run the distance in less than three hours and 30 minutes.

The Boston is one of the top goals for your average runner and especially for women because they can not compete in the Olympic Marathon.

Federal Women's Program quarterly meeting set

The Federal Women's Program Committee is sponsoring the first quarterly meeting of the Women's Forum to be held on Nov. 30 from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the Corregidor Room at the Officers' Club.

The purpose of the forum is to improve the career status of women at Fort Benning through the interaction of ideas and the promotion of professional development in a social environment.

The meeting will be a pay-as-you-go luncheon. Mrs. Gloria Jackson, Civilian Personnel Office, will speak on the topic, "How to Get Promoted."

This forum is open to all Fort Benning employees, but space is limited so make your reservations early. Reservations may be made by calling Mrs. Christian at 545-1872 or Mrs. Cook at 545-4811 or Ms. Crouch at 545-1171.

Influenza vaccines available for DA civilians, dependents

Influenza vaccines will be available for post civilian employees, military dependents and retired military personnel on a voluntary basis.

This vaccine contains A Russian, A Texas and B Hong Kong strains. Personnel 26 years of age or older will receive one shot of this vaccine. Personnel 13 to 25 years old will receive a shot of this vaccine and should get a booster four weeks later to insure adequate immunity. Vaccines for children 12 years old and younger is not available at this time.

The immunizations will be available at the following dates, times and places:

Dec. 4	8a.m. - 4:30 p.m.	Basement conference room, MAH
Dec. 5	8 a.m. - 4:30 p.m.	Room 133-A, Bldg 35
Dec. 7	8 a.m. - 7:50 p.m.	Classroom 8, Bldg 4

Civilian employees who are classified as essential service personnel (firemen, DFAE maintenance workers, airfield key personnel, como-electronic personnel, hospital personnel, division chiefs, key supervisors and school teachers) are especially urged to get flu immunizations.

Other civilians over the age of 65 and with certain chronic illnesses as listed, should be immunized: lung disease, kidney disease, diabetes and other diseases.

Pregnant women may receive flu immunization as there is no evidence that it is harmful to the baby.

The following should be brought to the immunization areas by the patient: valid identification card, shot record (PHS 731) if available, and a certified power of attorney for minors if not accompanied by the parent.

Holiday leave, early releases set

By Joyce Walker

The Christmas holiday period for post soldiers and civilians will begin at 7 a.m. Dec. 21, and continue until 5 p.m. Jan. 3, The details for early Christmas drops and holiday leave policies have been announced by post officials.

Christmas early release program

All non-regular officers and enlisted personnel who are scheduled to ETS between Dec. 11, and Jan. 7, have the option of being discharged during the period Dec. 11 through 15, or remaining on active duty until normal release dates.

Soldiers whose enlistments expire between Dec. 11-23 may be separated on Dec. 11. Those with ETS dates between Dec. 24 through 30 can become civilians on Dec. 12. Troops who would have gotten out between Dec. 31 through Jan. 5 can receive their Christmas drops on Dec. 13, with soldiers ETSing Jan. 6-Dec. 14 and those due a discharge Jan. 7 on Dec. 15.

Terminal leave may be taken with the early adjusted release date. Soldiers who ETS after Jan. 7 and desire terminal leave will not be under this program. All pay, allowances and military benefits that would normally have ended at the soldiers' ETS dates will end upon their early discharge dates.

Leave policies

Unit commanders may authorize up to half of their personnel to be on leave at any one time during the holiday period. However, operation and training missions of all units and activities must be fulfilled.

Soldiers undergoing initial Infantry training at Fort Benning will be authorized to take leave during the break in training from Dec. 21 until Jan. 3.

The U.S. Army Infantry School classes will close down on Dec. 21 and crank up again on Jan. 4, according to school officials.

Personnel planning on taking leave during the holiday period should review the Army's leave policies. Whether you are an old timer at traveling or if this is your first trip after initial training, here are a few tips to keep in mind:

- Have you planned leave time according to your reporting schedule?
- Have you made travel reservations?
- Have you checked baggage limitations?
- Have you placed identification tags on your luggage?
- Do you have your travel tickets?
- Do you have your luggage ticket stubs?
- Do you have telephone number of contact at your next post if necessary to call?
- Do you have travelers' checks in place of large cash sum?
- Do you have sufficient funds to cover your plans?
- Do you require medication for air sickness?
- Do you have all carry-on luggage?
- Keep track of all travel expenses? (receipts)
- Have you checked the time zone changes?
- Have you arranged for transportation to post from airport?
- Do you know when to report to your unit, should you wear a uniform?

Losing your tickets

Be prepared — write down the ticket numbers on a piece of paper and put it in your wallet. If you lose your tickets, make sure that you just haven't misplaced them, then go to the airlines and give them the ticket numbers.

If "terminal" leave is taken just before you ETS, special instructions will be given at your separation point. You will receive a telephone number for you or your next-of-kin to call if you are hospitalized or fatally injured.

If you get sick or hurt while on leave or en route to another station, then you should call the nearest military installation for help. If none are reasonably near, contact the Red Cross or the United Service Organization (USO) for help.

'Rock Revue' begins final weekend

MacArthur Park Disco is performed by Dina Regidor and Charles Sheikovitz.

U.S. Army Photos by Charles Freeburg

By Charles Sheikovitz

The Music and Theatre branch of Recreation Services continues to present the package musical variety show "Holiday Rock Revue."

This dazzling Christmas special has already played to nearly three thousand troops starting with the 4th Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade on Nov. 12, Officer Candidate School on Nov. 15, 3rd Bn, 1st ITB on Nov. 18, 197th Infantry Brigade on Nov. 19 and 5th Bn, 1st ITB on Thanksgiving.

The cast of 30 representing military, DA civilians and dependents is preparing for their final weekend of shows beginning tonight at 8:30 p.m. at the Hidden Door Enlisted Mens Club, Saturday night at 8 for the International Wives Banquet at the Follow Me Golf Course Country Club, and the Grand Finale on Sunday at 7 p.m. for the troops of the 1st IB at Santiago Gym.

The show opens with lights out and the rousing voice of the Mistress of Ceremonies Vickie Menza announcing the coming excitement which is "Calendar Girl" sung by Johnny L. Thomas and backed up by the show's combo and featuring a bevy of beauties moving through the slick choreography dressed in stunning costumes depicting months of the year. Special lighting effects captures the imagination of all present.

Through the turned on sounds of the audience comes the brassy pumping rhythms of "The New Experience" with leader Horace Hunter on rhythm guitar, Robert Lawton on trumpet, Dwight Washington, singer, Gregg Palmer on Drums, Johnny Brooks on lead guitar and Kenneth Gholson on bass and vocals.

Settling down to a mellow mood comes song stylist Madonna Lovegrove acoustically accompanying herself to a popular love ballad.

The fun continues with three members of the audience, selected before the show, coming on stage to participate in a Dating Game with Master of Ceremonies Jimmy L. Evans who is also lighting director for the show. Separated by only a portable screen, the three GIs and the beautiful date exchange questions/answers in a whimsical suggestive manner that has the audience cheering and applauding for one of their own.

"A Taste of Country" is up next featuring leader Greg Moseley on vacal/lead guitar, Shelly Terry on back up vocal, Alvin Griggs on rhythm and John Hammond on drums. By this time the GIs are updancing to the music.

See REVUE, Page 16

Mistress of Ceremonies, Vickie Menza introduces the next act.

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room - and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 100 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

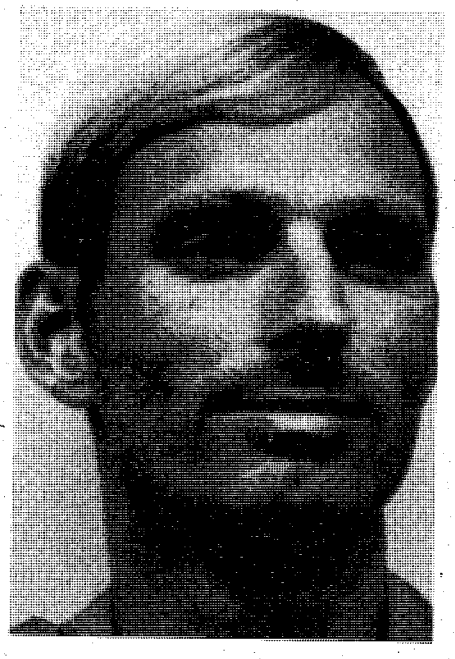
Glad you asked

If a soldier can score in the 400's on a PT test, should he/she be required to attend a daily PT with the duty section or organization?



Cpt. Al Hennigan, DPT

"It depends whether you are talking about a tactical unit or someone assigned to one of the various staff directorates. Units hold PT to develope a sense of teamwork, aggresiveness and spirit de corps in addition to physical fitness. Individuals not in the units on the other hand, should be allowed to maintain their own fitness programs if they can score 400 points or better when test time rolls around. These people usually do regular PT anyway; one doesn't score in the 400's by accident."

Spec. 4 Everett Green, Headquarters Company, Headquarters Command

"Yes, because we in headquarters command have to run two miles a day and five miles on Friday. We feel that if we have to do it, every one on post should also have to or else nobody should do it."

Staff Sgt. Robert Napier, Headquarters Company, Headquarters Command

"I think that if a soldier can maintain over 400 on the PT tests, he/she should be required to attend PT only once or twice a week."

Army promotions tend to rely on 'potential'

By Ray Rowden

It is no easy task to read Chapter 7 of Army Regulation 600-200 from beginning to end. But that's what it takes to understand the Army's enlisted promotion system. There are a few promotion questions not answered there.

The average GI is usually overcome with the desire to read the section about his next promotion first. The rest of the chapter is less interesting since it doesn't directly affect him — or does it?

Without a thorough reading it is easy to miss the Army's stated reason for promoting enlisted soldiers: "... to recognize the individual with great potential for leadership or increased technical skill in his chosen field of specialization." The reg specifies that promotions will not be made to recognize a job well done.

As one former brown-boot put it, "My Army promotes people for their potential. It gives medals and certificates for performance."

The sections of Chapter 7 that deal with specific promotions list the time-in-grade and time-in-service requirements and the need to be in promotable status. This status is explained at length in the front of the chapter. In a nutshell it requires the soldier to be on the job and free of legal entanglements.

Another easily overlooked item is the Army's criteria for recommending soldiers for promotion. It states, "Individuals will be recommended for promotion only after they develop the skills and abilities to perform the duties and assume the responsibilities of the higher grade."

But perhaps the greatest advantage of reading all of Chapter 7 is the overview it provides. A complete reading graphicly illustrates the increase in the system's competitiveness as ranks go up.

There is almost no competition for promotion to E-2 through E-4, although commanders are permitted to permit exceptional soldiers ahead of their peers by waiving a portion of the requirements for time in grade and time in service.

Soldiers trying for promotion to grades E-5 or E-6 definitely feel the competition, first at the promotion board and later as they compare their promotion points against the monthly cut-off scores.

The reg also clarifies the almost invisible competition among NCOs seeking promotion to grades E-7, 8 and 9. Referring to the whole person concept it states, "Individuals qualified for promotion are judged by the entire record of accomplishments and failures.

Department of Army is the sole authority for promoting soldiers to the top three enlisted grades. Field grade commanders may promote soldiers to E-5 and E-6 when the individuals match the promotion point cut-off score announced by DA and company commanders may promote soldiers up to E-4.

The senior NCOs are not allowed to appear before the board that considers them for promotion. The proof that they are prepared to contribute at a higher rank must be in their records. (Courtesy of Redstone Rocket)

Letters to the Editor

DYA parents say 'thanks'

Letter to the Editor,

The parents of the Lavoie Cowboys football team, Grasshopper division, would like to thank MasterSgt. Smith, FirstSgt. of A.O. Eagle, and all the NCO's of A.O. Eagle for their full support and backing of our sons and the entire team.

These men bought our boys uniforms with their names on them, set up a concession to support the team and are giving a banquet for the team.

The boys showed their appreciation by finishing the season undefeated. They also won all of their scrimmage games.

Thank you so much. These are a superior bunch of soldiers to take their time to help out 15 little boys.

God bless you at A.O. Eagle,

The parents of the Lavoie Cowboys

Keep medical appointments

The Veterans Administration is steadily placing an increasing emphasis on outpatient care for veterans with medical problems making it imperative for veterans to make appointments as far in advance as possible.

"Equally important," said Georgia Commissioner of Veterans Affairs Pete Wheeler, "is for veterans to keep those appointments to avoid creating problems for themselves, for other veterans and for medical personnel."

Wheeler said that failure to keep a scheduled appointment, particularly when it pertains to a claim for compensation and pension, will mean a delay in action on the claim. This, of course, would mean a delay in any payments and could possibly result in a claim being set aside for failure to cooperate.

Missed appointments also mean valuable time lost for physicians, technicians and clerks in the VA clinic. Usually, it is too late to schedule someone else, so other veterans waiting for examinations are penalized too.

Wheeler said, "A veteran should make every effort to report as scheduled and to notify the VA clinic as soon as he knows that he will be unable to keep his appointment.

"The cooperation of all concerned is absolutely necessary for a smoother, more effective operation in the VA clinics."

Check-out uniform specifications

Some soldiers are wearing uniforms which do not meet Army standards of quality, according to an Army uniform Board official.

An informal survey recently conducted at several Army installations revealed that some local commercial vendors are selling military clothing and insignia which does not meet Army specifications. According to the official, an item meeting government standards will contain a uniform quality control label. The label states that the item meets or exceeds the military material and design requirements for that particular article of clothing.

Insignia must bear a hallmark or label verifying that it meets military requirements and was produced by a manufacturer approved by the Institute of Heraldry, U.S. Army.

Local Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) outlets usually monitor commercial vendors making sales on installations. The vendor's certification is established before they are permitted to sell their wares on post. Items purchased from Post Exchanges or clothing sales stores on post meet the standards.

Soldiers purchasing uniforms or insignia from retail stores located off-post should inspect the items to make sure they contain a uniform quality control label or insignia hallmark.

Some items offered at off-post commercial outlets may have been rejected by government purchasers, may not conform to approve specifications, or are outdated items being discontinued, according to the official.

Violations of uniform quality control should be reported to commander, U.S. Army Natick Research and Development Command, Attn.: DRDNA-ZU, Natick, Mass. 01760; insignia violations should be reported to Commander, the Institute of Heraldry, ATTN.: DAAG-HD, Cameron Station, Alexandria, VA. 22314.

Additional information concerning uniforms and insignia may be obtained from four Army Regulations. They are:

(A) AR 670-5, Uniform and Insignia, Male Personnel

(B) QR 670-30, Uniform and Insignia, Female Personnel

(C) AR 702-2, Uniform Quality Control System

(D) AR 672-8, Decorations, Awards and Honors, Manufacture, Sale, Wearing and Quality Control of Heraldic Items. (ARNEWS)

Accepting collect calls forbidden

By Julie Casey

The problem of fraudulent phone calls has been greatly reduced, according to Lt. Col. Raymond K. Elderd Jr., commander of United States Army Communication Command Agency (USACC), with the introduction of the code authorization numbers now used for long distance calls. Still, the problem of accepting in-coming collect phone calls plagues Fort Benning's phone system.

Elderd commented, "At the end of the month, we tally up the long distance calls to and from Benning and distinguish which calls are authorized. The Army only pays for authorized phone calls."

Mr. Jack M. Leech, manager of Southern Bell in Columbus, added, "Accepting in-coming collect phone calls is unauthorized and a felony, and we do prosecute the first time. Just about every case that has been taken to court has ended in favor of the telephone company."

"A message is sent down through the chain of command and your company commander is required to take action. What usually happens? — the soldier has to pay for the call and receives a letter of reprimand." explained Elderd.

Leech added, "The maximum sentence for this offense could result in a $1,000 fine and one year in prison."

"The biggest problem arises from phones that are in semi-public areas where anyone may have access to them such as Charge of Quarters phones left unattended during the day," Elderd commented.

He suggested that dial locks purchased from self-service would help to remedy this problem. It is very important to turn the dial plate before securing the lock to render the phone totally useless.

What should you do in an emergency and you must make a call to Benning?

Elderd commented, "The best thing to do is charge the call to your parents or to a friend who would understand and send them a check later. If you have accepted an in-coming collect call, your best bet is to go to your first sergeant, explain what is going on and pay for the call."

The Bell Telephone system is very sophisticated, thus your chances of being caught are very great.

Priority Mail

Priority mail is used when the fastest transportation and most expeditious handling is desired for any mailable matter weighing more than 13 oz. on which priority mail rates have been paid. The maximum size is 100 inches in length and girth combined.

When using Priority mail, be sure to use special envelopes or stickers. Clearly mark the package or envelope "Priority Mail" in large letters on all sides to ensure it is handled properly.

Military Parcels (PAL and SAM)

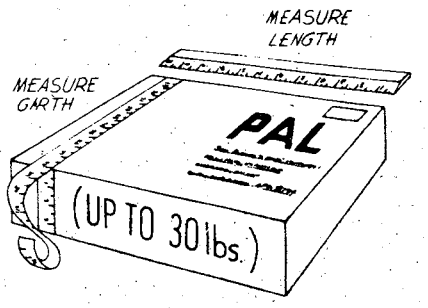
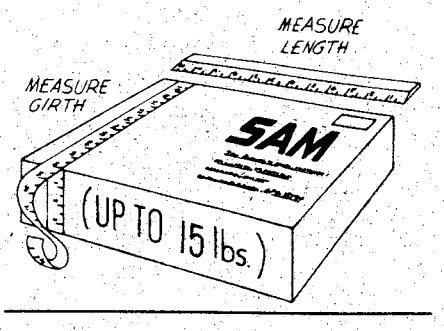
PAL (Parcel Airlift Mail) is flown to the overseas destination. Packages up to 30 pounds and 60 inches in combined length and girth may be sent by PAL. You pay the regular parcel post rate to the U.S. exit port or from the U.S. port of entry, plus a $1 fee for the air service.





SAM (Space Available Mail) is transported by surface means in the United States and flown on a space available basis from the United States to the overseas destination or from the overseas destination to the United States. Packages up to 15 pounds and 60 inches in combined length and girth may be sent by SAM for regular parcel post rates to the U.S. exit port or from the U.S. port of entry.

Watches and jewelry valued over $50 mailed to APOs or FPOs must be sent registered mail.

ZIP Code

ZIP-Coded mail moves faster and more efficiently. The five digits in a ZIP Code are in sequence, focusing on successively smaller areas. The first three digits code one of more than 500 key post offices, each of which serves 30 to 200 smaller post offices. The last two digits identify the post office or postal installation of destination.

To continue in the line of dance, a beautiful pas de deux from the Nutcracker Ballet is presented by Elizabeth Turley and Charles Sheikovitz, the show's director.

The classical mood embellishes with soprano Louise Bellemore's artistic performance of Habanera, from the famous romantic opera "Carmen." Accompanying her on piano is Priscilla Allen.

Soul music is personified by "Funque Faktry" with lead singer and guitarist Lawrence Way. To keep the feel of Disco alive, dancer Dina Regidor and partner perform the popular Donna Sommer's version of "MacArthur Park."

As a special thanks to a wonderful audience, Madonna sings "Merry Christmas Darling" accompanied by Priscilla Allen on piano and John Hammond on drums under the glistening mirror ball effect by well rehearsed lighting technician Richard Comston.

The show's Sound Director, Robert Abraham, switches from live to taped Christmas music for the audience to leave by feeling pleased from experiencing a job well done.

Westville: a look at years past

Christmas season is a very special time at the 1850 village of Westville, where the holidays are celebrated in much the same way that they were in 1850. This year it will be observed Dec. 9-30. The Westville houses, gaily decorated with fruit, native greens and berries in the 1850 manner, bustle with many activities, which include doll making, candle dipping and holiday baking. The aroma of smoke from the log fires, hot wassail and gingerbread fill the cool, crisp air of the village.

The "Lighting of the Yule Log" and the "Hanging of the Greens," a charming and delightful ceremony combining both holiday and Holy day, takes place at Westville on Saturday, Dec. 9 at 3 p.m. Activities begin with an exciting yule log hunt. Then the greens are hung, the yule log is lit, carols are sung, and, lastly, wassail and yule log cake are served to the visitors. After the Yule Log Ceremony at Westville, visitors are invited to drive the one-half mile to Lumpkin for a candlelight Christmas tour of the Bedingfield Inn, an 1836 stagecoach stop, located on Lumpkin Square and restored by the Stewart County Historical Commission.

Every weekend will feature Christmas music with certain special activities each Saturday at 2 p.m. On Dec. 16, the spotlight focuses on the elegant Moye House with its French heritage. On Dec. 23 Christmas is celebrated at Westville's Singer House with special emphasis on the many German Christmas customs. A highlight of the day is the lighting of the Christmas tree and the singing of Christmas carols. Dec. 30 has been set aside for the "burning of the greens" and the "pealing of bells" throughout the village to welcome the New Year.

Westville, located one-half mile from Lumpkin and just off U.S. 27 in southwest Georgia, is open daily throughout the year from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. and Sundays from 1 p.m.-5 p.m. except Dec. 25, Jan. 1 and Thanksgiving Day. For further information, contact: Westville, Box 1850, Lumpkin, Ga. 31815; or call 912-838-6310.

Special Masses slated

The Catholic Spanish-speaking community of Fort Benning will celebrate the Feast of Our Lady of Guadalupe Patroness of the Americas, at a special triduum next weekend.

Father Luis Villarreal, O.M.I. from San Antonio, Texas, who has worked in the Missions of Mexico for the past 12 years, will serve as celebrant at the Masses and director of the Triduum.

On Friday, Dec. 8 at 8 p.m., a Mass will be held in honor of the Immaculate Conception of Mary at the Infantry Brigade Chapel. On Dec. 9, a Mass will be observed at Harmony Church with the soldiers of the 4th and 5th Battalions at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. Then, on Dec. 10, a fiesta will be held immediately after the 1 p.m. Mass at the ITB Chapel. Each family is asked to bring a covered dish to share with the troops.

In the 1950's there were 5 or 6 alcohilic men to every alcoholic woman. Now the ratio is about 30 to 1.

15th Cav the eyes, ears of Brigade

By Stephen Guthrie

When most Fort Benning personnel think of the 197th Infantry Brigade (Sep) they think only of infantry units with FORSCOM responsibility. Yet, A Troop, 15th Cavalry is an important exception to this rule by being an armored reconnaissance Cav troop. They are the only one assigned to Fort Benning and the only unit on post with the Sheridan tank.

Quite naturally this poses an unusual problem to the soldiers of the Cav, for by the very nature of their work they are presented with a different mission than the rest of the brigade. The mission they hold is that of reconnaissance and scouting — to be the eyes and ears of the brigade.

"I see my role as a definitely unique one," commented Sgt. Curtis King, 1st platoon sergeant, "we have a double role in a Cav platoon that combines traditional Infantry, both mech and ground, with light armor. The techniques of movement and manuevering differ considerably and sometimes we're hard pressed to find a good mix between the two."

This week the Cav is participating in troop level Army Training Evaluation Programs (ARTEPS) to test just how well they actually

AN ANTIBODY STORY

Open fire

1 The father is Rh positive.
2 You are Rh negative.
3 Your baby may be Rh positive.
4 During a period shortly before delivery and/or at the time of delivery, some Rh-positive blood cells from your baby may enter your blood stream and mix with your Rh-negative blood cells.
5 When your baby's Rh-positive blood cells mix with your Rh-negative blood cells, your blood system produces substances called antibodies that fight to destroy the "invading" Rh-positive blood cells.
6 These antibodies become a permanent part of your blood system and, should you become pregnant again, your next baby will receive them across the placenta into its blood system.
7 If your next baby is Rh positive, these antibodies will fight to destroy its blood cells. This disease of the blood is called Rh hemolytic disease and can result in serious illness and sometimes, death.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ABOUT THE ANTIBODY STORY

(Q) How serious is Rh hemolytic disease?

(A) Rh hemolytic disease may cause anemia, jaundice, heart failure, brain damage, and sometimes death.

(Q) What is the meaning of Rh positive and Rh negative?

(A) Some persons (approximately 85%) have a special substance as a part of the surface of their red blood cells. They are Rh positive. Persons whose blood cells lack the substance are Rh negative.

(Q) Are there any other ways you might develop an antibody?

(A) Yes. Through multiple blood transfusions. If you (male or female) have had blood transfusions, there is a possibility you may have gotten an antigen you did not already possess. In some cases some individuals will build an antibody to this foreign antigen.

(Q) If I have an antibody from one of the above mentioned reasons, what can it be used for?

(A) It can be used for two purposes.

1. To make a product called Rh_o(D) immune globulin (human). This product is used in hospitals to administer to Rh negative mothers within 72 hours from delivery. To prevent Rh hemolytic disease of the new born.
2. To make blood typing sera, for typing blood and cross-matching blood for transfusions.

(Q) How can I find out if I have an antibody?

(A) A simple laboratory test of a small amount of blood is required.

(Q) Is there any cost for this blood test?

(A) No. There is no cost to you.

(Q) Are there any special requirements to participate in this program?

(A) Yes. You must be sterile if female in good health, and you must pass a complete physical exam.

(Q) Will I be paid? If so how much?

(A) Yes. We market this product to a pharmaceutical company. We are paid, so therefore we pay our donors. The amount will depend on the type of antibody and its strength.

If you have a similar history, you you may earn extra cash while providing a much needed service.

For test, at no cost or obligation, please call or write.

Operation Identification to be hosted by PMO

One of the most pressing problems facing the Military Police and other law enforcement agencies today is the identification of stolen property. A large percentage of stolen property is never recovered and the individual(s) responsible for the theft is not apprehended, due to the victim being unable to positively identify the stolen property.

Operation Identification, a part of the Provost Marshal Crime Prevention Program, is a method in which an individual's property is marked with an engraver using the social security number as the identifying mark. Common items to mark are television sets, stereo equipment, appliances, cameras, watches, and etc.

Operation Identification is effective, it makes stolen property easy to identify and makes it difficult for a criminal to dispose of it. When the perpetrator is caught with this marked property in his possession it becomes solid evidence of possession of stolen property. Operation Identification assists Law Enforcement in contacting you when property is recovered and plays an important part in the speedy return of your property.

The Military Police Crime Prevention Section will mark your Christmas gift items at the entrance to the Main Post Exchange every Friday — Sunday until Christmas. We hope you will participate in OPERATION IDENTIFICATION."

Walters addresses AUSA

Lt. Gen. (Ret.) Vernon Walters, the man who served five presidents and was Deputy Director of the CIA during Watergate, will relate his experiences in a 30-minute interview on WRBL-TV "Project 3" Saturday evening at 7:30.

Walters drew a standing ovation from 250 members of the local chapter of the Association of the United States Army who heard his presentation at Wednesday's general membership meeting.

Christmas film showing

On Dec. 10, the Lavoie Manor Chapel will host a special Christmas-on-Film service at 11 a.m. During the service, two films from the New Media Bible Series will be shown.

The films, "The Annunciation" and "The Nativity," realistically portray the announcement of Jesus' birth and the events which surrounded his birth.

The New Bible Media Series was recently purchased by the Fort Benning Religious Education Department. Mrs. Marguerite Waldrop, director, has described the films as "a very unbelievable description of the Christmas story."

Also, the Lavoie Manor Chapel choir, directed by Mrs. Brenda Holmes, will perform special Christmas selections during the service.

Christmas festival to be held

Clayton, Alabama will usher in the Christmas season with a flourish during the Clayton Country Christmas Festival scheduled for Dec. 1-3. Something has been planned for old and young alike during this three-day event, including Christmas carols, a turkey shoot, barbecue, flea market, arts and crafts fair, clowns, square dance and, of course, an appearance by Old Saint Nick himself. This holiday festival has been selected as the Historic Chattahoochee Commission's Valley Attraction of the Month.

A variety of activities have been planned for Dec. 1, including an Open House at the Barbour County Area Vocational School. The public is invited to tour the facilities from 9 a.m. CST to 3 p.m. CST. Friday evening, at 5:30 p.m. CST, folks will gather around the courthouse square for the lighting of the Christmas tree. Following this traditional ceremony, visitors will be serenaded by three local church choirs.

A huge farmer's trade day will be a major feature Saturday, Dec. 2nd. Farmers from throughout the area will bring their produce to town for sale at a flea market auction. Younsters will be able to test their marksmanship skills during a turkey shoot later on in the day. Also of interest will be several arts and crafts exhibits which will give fair goers an opportunity to do some Christmas shopping.

On Saturday afternoon at 2 p.m. CST, history buffs and interested visitors will have the opportunity to take part in an historical marker dedication on the square. Furnished by the Historic Chattahoochee Commission, this marker will spotlight the origin of Barbour County and the original county commissioners. Following this ceremony, barbecue will be available. That evening the National Guard Armory will be the scene of an old fashioned square dance. Music for this foot stomping affair will be provided by a seven-piece band. Tickets are $2 for adults and $1 for children under 12.

Visitors will still be able to visit the arts and crafts booths on Sunday afternoon. Sunday evening the festivities conclude with caroling by local church groups on the courthouse lawn.

For further information contact Historic Chattahoochee Commission, P.O. Box 33, Eufaula, Alabama 36027, or Winn F. Martin, Chairman,Clayton Country Christmas Festival, c/o The Clayton Banking Company, Clayton, Alabama 36016.

Two men receive suggestion awards

Two Fort Benning men received a total of $1795 for their separate suggestions of ways to save the government money.

A civilian employee, William Callier, with the Laundry Branch, Services Division, DIO, was granted an award of $955 for his adopted suggestion. His proposed modification of the Colmac pants pressers saved approximately 12,480 manhours per year for a savings of $50,746.

Callier modified the pressers to handle both permanent press and cotton pants without damaging the permanent press material.

Sgt. 1st Class Larry Bowling, Control Office, AIT MILPO, Compact. AG, received $840 for suggesting a computerized system to provide current information and locator service on enlisted members assigned to the 1st Infantry Training Brigade.

The use of this system has eliminated the need for hand filing and maintenance of DA Forms 647-1. It also provides historical data needed to readily identify and locate people who have departed and saves time in locating and forwarding information, security clearances, records, etc. Adoption of this suggestion has resulted in annual savings of $27,691 in manhours.

Some MOSs changed

Sheridan crew members in MOS 19G and 19H, who are serving in units that have converted to the M60 Main Battle Tank (MBT), will keep those MOS as secondary or additional skills, accordig to MILPERCEN officials.

Since these soldiers began converting from 19G to 19D or 19E and from 19H to 19D or 19E, officials say, not all are retaining their former primary MOS as a secondary.

There is still a requirement for the 19G and 19H MOS in units where MBTS are not used, officials explained, and keeping these MOS as secondaries is necessary to allow tankers to serve in either MOS.

Tankers who have been reclassified and do not have a 19G or 10H secondary should notify their local MILPOS. (ARNEWS)

Benning soldiers assist in Guyana

By Larry Weese

Fort Benning soldiers who provided medical and humanitarian assistance last week in the wake of a mass suicide by Americans in Jonestown, Guyana, were cited by their commander for "outstanding teamwork."

Maj. Clarence Cooper, commanding officer of the 498th Medical Company and head of the Fort Benning contingent of 44 men, praised the entire operation here and in Guyana. "We received the best possible support from the 34th Medical Battalion and the Infantry Center staff during the alert and deployment last week," he said following the troops' return last Sunday.

Maintenance personnel who disassembled helicopters here for air movement to Guyana and who reassembled them at their destination were singled out by Cooper for special recognition, as were flight crews.

"The crews performed a variety of missions under adverse conditions in a highly professional manner," he said.

Cooper added that "although the operation involved gruesome experiences for all personnel who participated, there was overall satisfaction at having performed a humanitarian mission such as this."

The 498th was alerted on Nov. 20 by the Department of the Army to prepare to join a task force being sent to Guyana.

As planning for the mission progressed it was decided that a minimal sized contingent of four helicopters, nine pilots, four crew chiefs, four flight medics and a small ground support crew to help maintain the aircraft would be sent to the South American country. Two doctors from Martin Army Hospital also made the trip.

Equipment airlifted to Guyana also included trucks and a wrecker to be used in reassembling the aircraft in Guyana.

All loading and physical preparations for the movement were completed by the 498th on Monday, Nov. 20. The first of six Air Force C-141 Starlifters to be used in the movement arrived early in the evening of Nov. 21 and was airborne before 10:30 p.m. Other flights followed through the night.

After arrival in Guyana, the 498th personnel were used for medical evacuation of any injured persons, search operations, transportation of personnel and supplies, as well as assisting in the transport of bodies found within the area," according to Cooper.

A typical remark from one of 498th Med Co's enlisted men is that of Pvt. 1st Class John Dianchini. . . . "I thought it was a waste of people's lives. Jones must have had strong power over those people. While there, I tried not to think about it and just did my job."

He said the task was made more difficult by a lack of navigation aids or accurate and updated maps.

Cooper added that each trip from Jonestown to Georgetown, Guyana, base of operations, amounted to 150 miles of flying and dead reckoning navigation. The four aircraft and crews flew 73 hours in three days in support of the operation between Jonestown and Georgetown.

Personnel from the 498th who took part in the operation in Guyana with Cooper were:

Warrant Officers Louis W. Mann and Tommie L. Eiland, Sgt. 1st Class G. E. Woods, Staff Sgt. Joe A. Williams, Sgt. Ralph W. Williams, Spec. 4 James L. Crawford, Sgt. William D. Powell, Pvt. 2 Purvis R. Owens, Sgt. Rufus J. Dixon, Sgt. Samuel C. Roland, Sgt. Claude H. Lackey, Spec. 4 Nicholas J. Hodder, Sgt. Harold D. Ball, Pfc. John J. Bianchini, Spec. 4 Jerry M. Fair, and Spec. 5 Richard R. Bussell.

Also, Spec. 4 Gustavo B. Vissarreagas, Sgt. Phillip G. Livingston, Spec. 4 Richard M. Fry, Sgt. Brian H. Kautz, Spec. 4 Raymond D. Fashaw, Staff Sgt. Raymond E. Penick, Staff Sgt. Richard A. Nuesslien, Staff Sgt. James H. Jackson, Spec. 4 Charles P. Smith, Pvt. 2 Russell A. Pabst, 1st Lt. Joseph L. Bradley and Warrant Officer Charles F. Angee, Woody G. Vines, and Roger W. Duprey.

Also, Warrant Officers Richard E. Hilgendorf, James W. Tiller, and Robert A. Price, Spec. 4 David R. Barkley, Staff Sgt. George Carpenter, Sgt. Richard E. Downey, Pvt. 2 Ronald Collier, Pfc. Gerald O. Jones, Sgt. David R. Holly, Spec. 5 Daniel C. Lopez, and Spec. 5 Thomas C. Hughley.

Also in the party were doctors Lt. Col. Richard G. Mills and Capt. Gerald M. Hodge.

Final AIT class graduates

By Pat Astran

The final 1st Advanced Individual Training (AIT) graduation was held last week on Dickman Field, Harmony Church, completing the phase-out of AIT training.

Over 60 thousand soldiers have been trained under the AIT program prior to its name change to the 1st Infantry Training Brigade on July 1, under the OSUT/TST test program.

AIT Bde personnel were initially billeted in old WWII wooden buildings. However, the OSUT/TST test proved an increase in personnel and new buildings were built to accomodate them.

The 1st AIT had five battalions comprised of 24 companies. After the switch-over, it grew to seven battalions comprised of 36 companies.

The Infantry AIT soldiers received training in anti-armor techniques, mine warfare, M-60 machine gun training, military operations in Urban Terrain (MOUT), mortars, M-203 grenade launchers, automatic rifle field fire, range firing and light anti-tank weapons (LAW). The program of instruction (POI) was taught by well-qualified NCO's from the Committee Group while unit-taught subjects were the responsibility of the drill sergeants.

Drill sergeants were primarily responsible for leading and caring for the soldiers. Company commanders and drill sergeants led AIT soldiers through the confidence course, obstacle course, patrolling and Infantry assault courses. Every time the soldier looked up, there was a drill sergeant ready to correct his movements or inspect his weapon, equipment, the barracks, and the soldier's personal appearance when needed. Road marches and dismounted drill were conducted to develop discipline, alertness and teamwork among the soldiers. Endurance and stamina were increased throughout the cycle in daily physical and tactical training.

The last two AIT graduating companies were Company D, 2nd Battalion and Company E, 2nd Battalion commanded by Capts. Thomas L. Hendrix and Bob Way, Jr. respectively. Commanding the AIT battalion was Lt. Col. David Cooper with the command sgt. maj. being Grady Coats.

AIT has come to an end but the training continues with new concepts. The Brigade motto: "Relentless in Training, Unyielding in Battle" will be carried over the AIT days. Forging on now to One Station Unit Training (OSUT) and Two Station Unit Training (TST), the Infantry will continue to improve training for the soldiers of the future.

Under the big top

Family and friends gather for refreshments and to look at displays after the last AIT graduation ceremonies.

If just one gallon of gasoline were saved each week for every automobile in the country, we'd save about 5.6 billion gallons of gasoline in a year or about 8 percent of the demand created by all our passenger cars.

Christmas Festival scheduled

Tomorrow afternoon, the Lavoie Chapel will host a Children's Christmas Festival. The festival will begin at 2 p.m. with a series of Christmas films from the Bradley Memorial Library of Columbus.

The films will be followed by an extended performance by the Evangel Temple Assembly of God Church.

The festival will include free refreshments and games for everyone. For further information please call 545-7363 or 545-4715.

Army looking for club system NCO's

The Army is looking for "highly qualified" volunteers in grades E-6 and E-7 for its club management career and development program, according to a MILPERCEN official.

A shortage of NOC's in the program was recently worsened. the official says, because NOC club management positions were increased.

The official said that MILPERCEN receives ample requests from soldiers wanting to enter the "highly marketable" club management and food service MOS. But, she added, only those soldiers with related degrees or experience are accepted for the OOJ MOS.

Among requirements that applicants should have are qualifications in accounting, personnel management, administration, food service, bar and entertainment operations.

Soldiers usually accepted into the program, the official says, come from administration, finance, food service and related MOS.

Soldiers who volunteer for the program must currently be in an overstrength MOS, the official points out, and with less than 16 years of service.

Details on qualifications and applications are in AR 614-200. (ARNEWS)

Don't be a victim

Now that the holiday period is here, and the majority of you will be taking leave, think about the shock, the heartbreak and the anger that you would experience if you came home one evening and found that your barrack's room or quarters had been burglarized. Think about your valuables-including items that you've collected and cherished over the years-being stolen or wantonly destroyed. Think about the possibility of walking in on a burglar while he was ransacking your home at night!

Most burglars won't take a second look at a house or apartment that appears to be occupied. To discourage these criminals from selecting your residence as a target, consider using the following anti-burglary procedures to help create the impression that someone is home when you're out during the day or evening.

Are we trying to scare you? No. We're hoping to make you aware that you could very well become a victim of burglary. We would also like you to think about — and, more importantly, practice-techniques that can help you reduce the possibility of becoming a burglary victim!

- Don't leave messages on the door or mailbox indicating your absence.
- Use electric timers to turn house lights and a radio on and off during evening hours.
- Enlist the help of neighbors to keep mail, newspapers and ads from collecting while you are away.
- Remember that unattended yards and unmowed lawns over an extended period of time are signs that the residents might be away.
- Consider also that whether or not trash cans are set out on collection day, it is an indication that the residents might not be home.
- Advise your local police, as well as a reliable neighbor, when your home will be unoccupied for any length of time and where you can be reached. (AFPS)

FY-72 officers select job specialties

Beginning this month, officers who entered the Army during FY 72 are selecting the Alternate Specialties that they will serve in when not filling primary branch assignments, MILPERCEN officials announced.

MILPERCEN this month began sending information and instructions to MILPOS and individual officers that will help them work together in planning career specialties, officials said.

More than 2,600 officers in this group have until the end of January to list four priority alternate specialties, officials explained.

Officers in the 1972 year group will be notified of final MILPERCEN alternate specialty assignments in April, they added. These officers are also being encouraged by MILPERCEN to review DA Pamphlet 600-3 and to discuss career and specialties with their career managers. (ARNEWS) do perform in a field situation. The exercise will pit the Cav against an Infantry unit, taking the role of aggressor, and should prove to be interesting as the two different styles meet.

The members of the Cav bear a heavy load. The time and effort spent in training must be precise and exacting, because the commitment placed on these men may be tough. When asked if he believed the troop could handle the responsibilities of their mission, Spec. 5 Mickey Evans' answer was, simply, "We have to. No one else knows how as well as we do, and, of course, we are the best."

Army strengthens Affirmative Action Program

The Army has strengthened its Affirmative Action Plan (AAP) for providing equal treatment and opportunity of women and minority soldiers, according to DA Equal Opportunity officials.

In approving the plan, the Secretary of the Army Clifford L. Alexander, Jr. and Chief of Staff General Bernard W. Rogers stressed that the fundamental and compelling purpose of the plan is to enhance combat readiness of our forcesl They added that "The plan is the most important management tool we have for developing planned actions to ensure that minorities and women are provided genuine opportunities for advancement and professional fulfillment based on aptitude, attitude, performance and merit."

The new plan, and second such revision since first published in 1972, reinforces defense directives and Army regulations on equal detailed data on minorities by identifying them reaching its goals.

Changes in the new AAP include more involvement and responsibility for reaching goals on the part of major commands. For example, it requires commands to collect more detailed data on monorities by identifying them as members of one of 15 specific ethnic groups instead of the current broad grouping of White, Black, Hispanic and Asian or native American.

Other revisions, according to an Equal Opportunity official, emphasize direct involvement with the AAP by commanders and managers who will be tasked with more participation in developing and reviewing affirmative action goals.

The new plan also tasks commands and commanders with correcting "imbalances" between current Equal Opportunity treatment and AAP goals. This aspect of the AAP, for example, places "Goals but not quotas" on promoting and assigning women and minorities who are not proportionately represented in various specialties, shcools, and staff positions.

Another change is that Equal Opportunity reports cover fiscal year dates rather than calendar years.

More detailed information on ethnic groups, UCMJ statistics and similar data, an Equal Opportunity official explained, will give the Army more accurate information for measuring the program's success.

Secretary Alexander and General Rogers indicated that ". . . Leadership at all levels must diligently pursue the actions necessary to ensure that we have an Army that is comprised of capable, motivated, and disciplined soldiers who are encouraged to develop and use their talents to the fullest."

DA PAM 600-26, already in the hands of major commands and staff agencies, is being printed now and will be distributed through brigade level about January.

Columbus to host vet 'supermarket'

Many Georgians will have something else they should remember this year on the 37th anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor.

On Dec. 7, veterans, their dependents and survivors will have an opportunity to meet with some 25 federal, state and municipal agencies in one central location when the Georgia Department of Veterans Service, in cooperation with the Veterans Administration conducts a one-day, one-stop service and information program from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. in the Municipal Auditorium.

Georgia Commissioner of Veterans Affairs Pete Wheeler and VA Regional Office Director Ralph White met with Columbus Mayor Jack P. Mickle, Nov. 29, who signed a proclamation officially designating Dec. 7, as "Supermarket of Veterans' Benefits Day" in Columbus.

Someone dubbed the program a "supermarket" several years ago because of the wide variety of agencies and benefits available to veterans under one roof and, appropriately enough, the name stuck.

"There are many veterans and dependents who may be eligible for various benefits but who, for some reason, have never applied for them," said Wheeler. "These are the people we hope to see on Dec. 7."

He added that every agency having any connection with veterans' benefits will be accessible to all veterans and their dependents including their wives, children and dependent parents.

"We will not just answer questions and shuffle people from one agency to another," Wheeler said, "But we will find out what can be done for them and, in many cases, do it on the spot." He said that it is expected that hundreds of claims will actually be filed during the one day.

Among the agencies which will be represented in addition to the Department of Veterans Service and the Veterans Administration are: the Small Business Administration; the Social Security Administration; the Federal Housing Administration; the State and U.S. Labor Departments; the Georgia Game and Fish Division of the Department of Natural Resources; CHAMPUS (retired military); the U.S. Armed Services; the Georgia Department of Public Safety; the Georgia Department of Revenue; the Georgia Department of Education; the Geoergia State Merit System of Personnel Administration; the State Scholarship Commission and the Geoergia Higher Education Assistance Corporation; the American Red Cross, and local government representatives.

The Georgia Department of Veterans Service originated the one-day, one-stop "Supermarket" concept of service in Columbus in 1965. Since then, in seven cities — Augusta, Rome, Savannah, Macon, Albany, Atlanta and Columbus — more than 75,000 persons have benefited from this free "on-the-spot" service.

"All participating agencies are involved with veterans' benefits in some respect," said Wheeler. "By having all in one place at the same time, it eliminates the necessity of a veteran or his dependent having to go several places to have his questions answered."

Veterans and their dependents from anywhere in Georgia are urged to attend this free service in the Columbus Municipal Auditorium from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m., Dec. 7.

DoD schools now being reorganized

Department of Defense Dependent Schools (DODDS) are being reorganized to improve management and communications and to give school principals more responsibilities, defense officials announced last week. The reorganization includes an expansion of the three current regional offices to five and the elimination of the regions, district offices, officials said. The five new regions will be located at Okinawa; Eastcote, England; Karlsruhe and Mainz-Kastel, Germany; and Torrejon, Spain.

The DoDDS system includes 261 schools overseas with an enrollment of about 140,000 students. (ARNEWS)

Stagg Bowl

The Baldwin-Wallace College Yellow Jackets will be playing in the NCAA Division III championship game, the Amos Alonzo Stagg Bowl, in Phenix City at 12:40 p.m. (EST) tomorrow against arch-rival Wittenberg University.

The game will follow the annual Stagg Bowl-Christmas Parade at 10 a.m.

All tickets are $4. They are available at the Stagg Bowl headquarters in the Village Green Shopping Center, Phenix Bypass.

AUSA has distributed 200 tickets to Benning troops through unit sergeants-major.

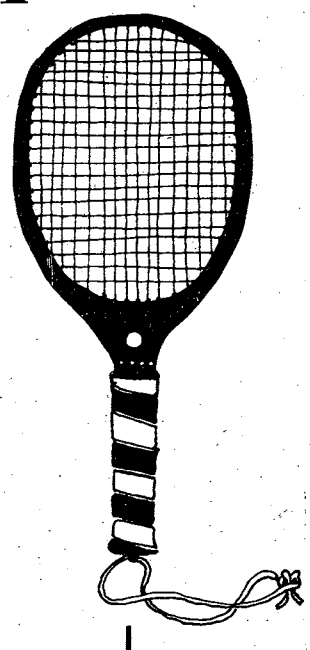
The game will be broadcast on regional televison.

Youth soccer team

Playing very aggressive ball, the Fort Benning Youth Soccer Team defeated the Hardaway squad 3 to 0 in the final game of the season recently to win the Bi-City League Crown.

The Benning team, consisting of Jorge Melson, Terance Thomas, Chris Volta, Andi Krakowiak, Scott Miller, Jack Todd, John Inks, Richard Butler, Jim Klein, Bill Klein, Henri Pare, David Courtney, Craig McLeod, Charles Smith, Stephen Perry, Mario Lucero, Jorge Lucerno and Jose Lucero, finished the fall season with eight wins and two losses. (42:8 goals).

Racquetball



Part 1: The Game

Editor's Note: This is the first segment in a four-part series about raquetball. The series will discuss and illustrate the fundamentals of the game that is fast becoming America's favorite indoor sport. Special thanks to Dave Lawrence, top raquetball player in the Columbus area and instructor/pro at the Courthouse I raquetball complex, for his assistance with these articles.

By Seth Hamilton and Dave Lawrence

Racquetball is the youngest of the racquet sports. It is a fast paced, exciting game that combines elements of tennis, squash, badminton and handball. Even people who have never actively participated in any sport are finding racquetball to be a great way to stay in shape while having a lot of fun.

Physical fitness buffs enjoy racquetball because of the physical activity. An average one-hour match will burn up more than 700 calories. For the weight-watchers reading, if you played three hours a week all year, you would burn up 100,000 calories or 30 lbs. of extra fat.

Racquetball is played in a closed court which measures 20 ft. wide, 20 ft. to the ceiling and 40 ft. long. The floor, ceiling and all four walls are used in the game. The object of the game is simple: hit the ball where your opponent can't get to it before it bounces twice on the floor, providing your shot has hit the front wall. The score is kept similiar to badminton where a point can only be scored by the player serving. Games are usually played to 11 or 21 points.

The only equipment needed for racquetball is a good racquet (it is important that the string tension and grip size be comfortable for the player) and a ball. Another requirement is a sense of court etiquette. When 2-4 players get into some fast action in that confined area, it is important to keep out of the opponent's way, for good manners as well as safety reasons.

It is not hard to become good at racquetball. A couple of times on the court will be enough for anyone to be absle to enjoy playing, and be good at it too!

Next week we'll discuss proper racquet grips and positions for shots as well as the basic forehand and back hand strokes.

DYA: Season in review

Football fanatics come in all ages and the Dependent Youth Activities (DYA) program caters to even the youngest pigskin participants.

This year's program drew over 600 Benning boys and girls ages 6-17 years old and reflects the growing number of youth participating in organized sports on post since DYA was formed in 1969.

According to Lt. Col. Doyce Ariail, DYA league football commissioner this season, "Great strides were made this year in improving the youth sports program." Much of the credit for the improvements lies with Russell Cavaco, who took over as DYA director in November, 1977 and Cpl. Jackie Jarrell, DYA sports director since September, 1977.

Teams are formed according to an 'area concept' — Main Post, (Davis Hill and Bouton Heights), Lavoie and Tri-City (McGraw, Custer Terrace and downtown). The program is designed to incorporate youth sports into the Community Life Program, with the teams governed by their own community board. "The community develops participation and contols themselves," stressed Ariail.

Ariail pointed out that while the football program is supported by DYA, it is administered by volunteers. As league commissioner, Ariail was assisted by the volunteer area presidents: Lt. Col. George Batchelor — Main Post, Sgt. 1st Class Roy Needham — Lavoie, Mrs. Connie Lyons and Mrs. Mary Marshall — Tri-City.

"With four sons in the football program this year," laughed Ariail, "I really felt it was my duty to volunteer my services."

Ariail went on to describe overall parental participation and support of the program as "excellent." In opening day ceremonies, Fort Benning Commander, Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey challenged the parents and coaches to "maintain their cool." That's easier said than done but most parents did "pretty well" according to Ariail.

The official objectives of the program are to (a) inspire youth to practice the ideals of sportsmanship, citizenship, scholarship and physical fitness and (b) to provide an environment with team spirit, self-discipline, competitive will to win, physical fitness, values of team play and maximum participation.

"Maximum participation was really stressed," noted Ariail. "We tried to insure that each child, regardless of capability,was able to play a minimum of one quarter's worth of play in each game."

Most of the equipment is provided by DYA and the nominal registration fee paid by each child is used towards incidentals and offsets the overall cost of the program. DYA is continually purching new and better equipment as funding is made available.

Safety awareness is ever-present in the program. The 34th Med Bn assisted in the safety aspect by providing medics for each game. "Although we had a few minor injuries," said Ariail, "many of the players' injuries occurred off the field."

"All in all," Ariail concluded, "this was a very successful season and we hope that the parents and children will be back next year."

My sincere thanks to you for your outstanding contributions to the success of the Dependent Youth Activities 1978 football season. Because of you we enjoyed excellent teams with superb coaching and fantastic support.

The program provided the perfect setting for teaching our youngsters athletic skills, the importance of team work and, most importantly, sportsmanship.

You are to be congratulated for making this our best season.

AAU sanctioned

Barracudas host meet

Story and Photos

by Jim Tillman

The Barracudas hosted their fourth Annual Pilgrim Open swim meet November 18-19. Teams from the Columbus Aquatic Club and the Columbus YMCA joined Fort Benning in facing the top seeded teams from Atlanta, Valdosta, Albany and Gainsville to make this the most successful AAU sanctioned swim meet in the Columbus area for the past several months.

This 80 event meet, held at Briant Wells Field House, produced four candidates for Georgia All-Star status (AAA swim class time in an event). Ten - year - old Karen Hill of the Columbus Aquatic Club finished with three AAA times in the 50 meter breast, 100 meter free and 100 meter individual medley. She also had AA times in the 50 meter back and 50 meter free. Ms. Hill is a repeat at Georgia All-Star status. She received her first award in 1977 and since Sept. 16, Karen has produced eight AAA times in various swim meets.

Another 10-year-old Aquatic Club member, Ralph Leary, turned-in a AAA class time in the 50 meter breast and four AA times in other events that he entered. Ralph entered six events and swam away with four first place and two second place finishes.

For the Barracudas, David Christensen and Manuel Pangelinan, 10 and 12-years-old respectively, qualified for their first Georgia All-Star award. They both received the qualifying times in their age group 50 meter back stroke.

David Christensen had a super meet and turned in three AA and two A times to go along with the AAA class time in the six events that he entered.

Manuel won two of his events with AA times and two others with A class times. An interesting note about the event in which he achieved his AAA time is that he came in second behind Georiga All-Star Paul Farr of the Atlanta Tallman Pool Club who had a water churning 30.71 AAA time.

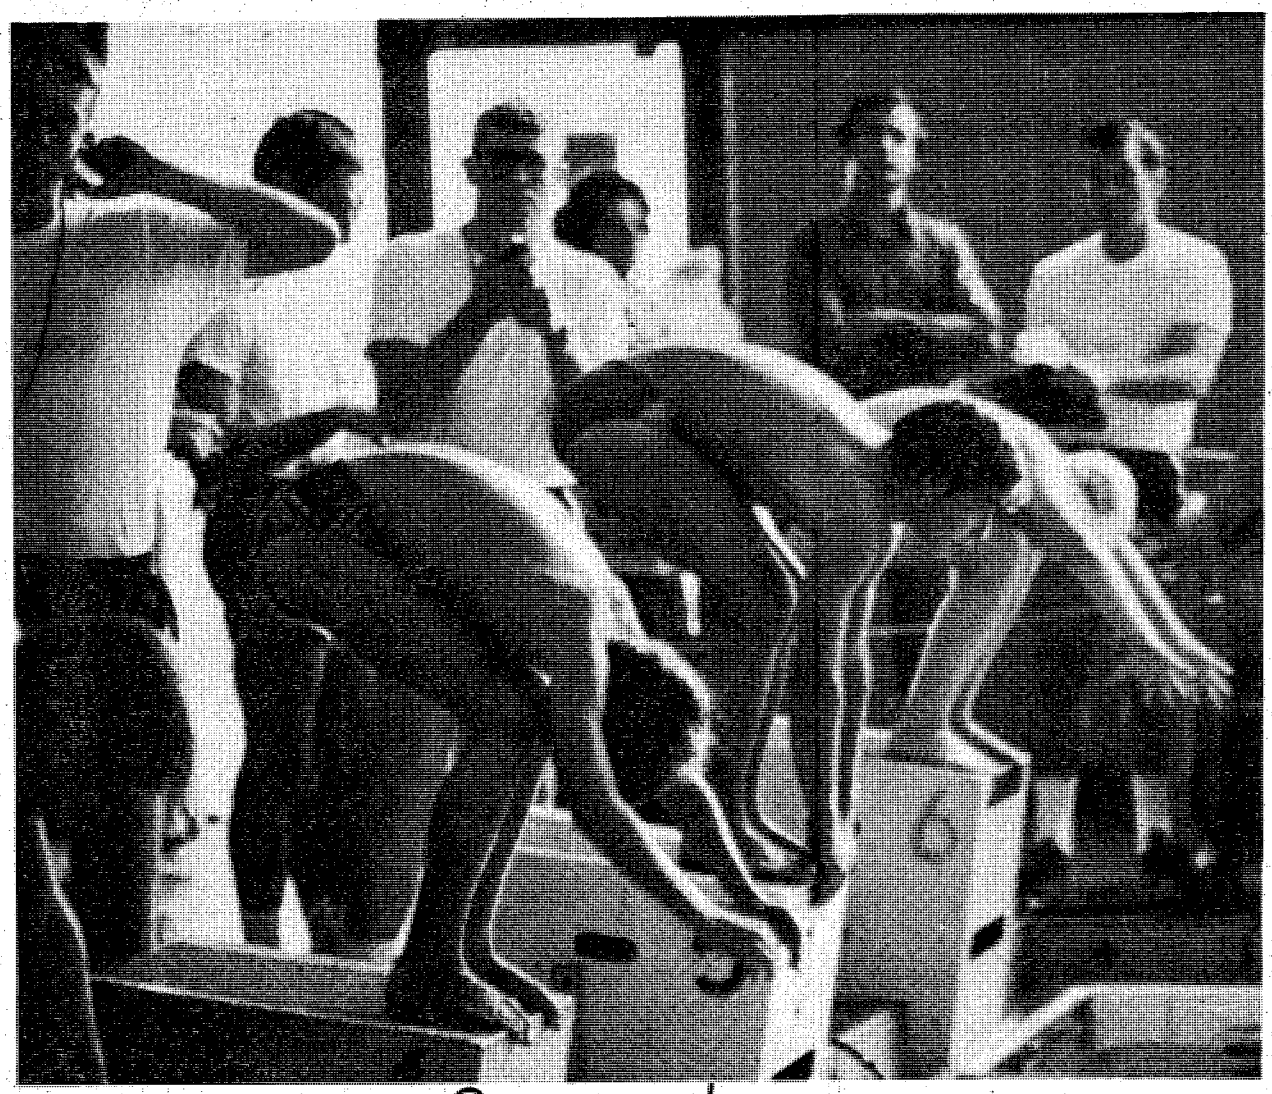
These four swimmers will be reported to the Georgia State Association of the Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) where their swim times will be recorded and verified as AAA class standings. Later in 1979, they will receive an invitation from the Association to a dinner in honor of all 1979 season Georgia All-Stars.

In the senior boys division, Kirby Pilsher and Kurt Andree swam neck and neck in four of their events with the edge going to the more experienced but younger Pilcher. Both men produced excellent times in the 50 meter free, with Kurt finishing second in 25.23 (A time) and Kirby with a 24.49 (AA time) for first place.

In the senior girls, Bridget Pangelinan repreated her previous swim meet standards by placing in each of her events. Bridget, who was changed to the senior girls division after her birthday a few months ago, has finally broken back into the class A swimmers with a 29.14 time in the 50 meter free.

While most of the swimmers of this meet had to only overcome the natural obstacle of beating the clock, Cathy Wehrle of the Atlanta Swim Association had a much more difficult obstacle to hurdle. Deaf since birth, Cathy swam in her first AAU swim meet. With the aid of hand signals and the flash of the starter's gun, she finished with solid B class swim times in the 100 individual medley, 50 meter free and 50 meter butterfly.

Anyway you want to look at it, the swimmers of the Fort Benning Barracudas had a tremendous weekend of competitive swimming. In an event this size, it would have been impossible to run smoothly without the help from some parents and other volunteers. The 'Cudas would like to give special thanks to Senior Candidate Kirk A. Moeller and the men of 51st Company (OC), 5th Student Battalion for their support and expertise during this two day swim meet.



On your mark . . .

Senior Candidates of 51st Company (OC), 5th Battalion TSB, aided the Barracudas with their meet by performing the duties of timers, place judges and assistant clerks.

MacArthur's promise saves Pacific

The story of the Japanese attack upon Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941, is one of the most written about happenings in American history. But the man whose leadership would eventually win the war in the Pacific was not at Pearl Harbor. Douglas MacArthur was in the Philippines.

It was General MacArthur's brilliant leadership that won the war in the Pacific, but what of his days in Manila just after the Pearl Harbor attack? The Philippines would not long be spared and its fate would depend upon the decisions made by MacArthur.

In Manila, across the International Date Line, it was Monday, Dec. 8, 1941, and the telephones began ringing just a few minutes after the last Japanese plane had flown away from the smoking ruins of the naval base at Pearl. The first reaction of General MacArthur — and that of all Americans — was disbelief. The next reaction was to prepare the Philippines for the expected onslaught of the Japanese.

General MacArthur, as did most of the strategists in the War Departmnt, believed that the Japanese would soon be put to rout. But just a few days before Christmas, U.S. reconnaissance aircraft reported a large fleet of warships sailing toward the Philippines.

Then reports came in of a large enemy formation closing in on Clark Air Field. Just as at Pearl Harbor, the Japanese could not believe their good fortune. The planes were parked close together on the field and few survived the attack.

The American military in the Philippines outnumbered the Japanese attackers two to one but many were already melting into the hills to escape the attack.

The rest is history: how the American defenders of the Philippines were forced to retreat down the peninsula, where the Battling Bastards of Bataan held out against hopeless odds. Finally realizing that there was no further hope, the remnants of the American Force and their Philippine allies crossed the narrow straits to the island of Corregidor.

On April 9, 1942, the remaining forces on Bataan surrendered. On the night of May 5, after a final five-day artillery barrage against the starving defenders of the rock, the Japancese landed and hauled down the American flag.

General Jonathan Wainwright was forced to surrender unconditionally. Under his orders, which the Japanese forced him to broadcast, other American commanders in the Philippines surrendered one by one. By early June, except for scattered guerrilla detachments in the hills of the islands, the war was apparently over in the Philippines.

But such was not the case. MacArthur had made a promise before he left the Philippines: "I shall return." And the Japanese had made a fatal mistake in overlooking the carriers that had sailed from Pearl Harbor shortly before they attacked.

Douglas MacArthur would and did return to lead American forces to victory, despite the devastation which began the Pacific War on Pearl Harbor Day.

Revised CLEP test in effect Nov. 1

A revised CLEP test went into use Nov. 1. The revised test could change the education plans of thousands of soldiers.

CLEP, the College Level Examination Program, is a test accepted by more than 1800 colleges and universities in the U.S. as the equivalent of most freshman level courses.

The CLEP tests are popular with soldiers seeking college credit for as much as 30 semester hours at many schools.

Revisions in the new CLEP, according to a spokeswoman with The College Board (TCB) that produces CLEP, include more "in-depth" questions in the five subject areas covered by the test.

But the increase in the number of CLEP test questions also call for more time to test, the spokeswoman added. Testing time for each subject has been increased from 60 to 90 minutes.

The spokeswoman suggested that test revisions would make them more difficult to pass because of the expansion.

The biggest change in the CLEP series is in the English test, she explained. This test has shifted emphasis from English error recognition to writing skills.

Another change in the English test will be introduced next spring, the TCB official said. An optional English test version will replace the 90-minute multiple choice format with a 45-minute multiple choice test and another 45-minute test in essay form.

While the optional English test versions allow a student to choose the exam on which he or she expects to score best, some schools may require students to take a specific English version before they award credit for the test, according to the official.

In addition to English, the CLEP test covers these subjects: math, natural sciences, humanities and social science-history.

Because of the test revisions, the spokeswoman said, some schools may no longer accept the former CLEP series or they may grant less credit to students who do not take the new series.

TCB, at Princeton, N.J., is an educational testing service representing various U.S. colleges, universities and high schools. The board oversees the test service, but each school applies its own standards in awarding credit based on the tests.

CLEP has been administered since 1968 and about 200,000 Americans take the test series each year.

More information on the new CLEP series can be obtained through local education centers or, for students who have already received CLEP credit, at schools where they are currently enrolled. (ARNEWS)

Social Work Services aids military community

By Myra Gulley

The role of Social Work Service in a general hospital is to improve social conditions relating to patient care as well as improving the emotional state of the patient, either on an in-patient or out-patient basis.

Social workers at Martin Army Hospital work directly with patients and their families in helping them learn to cope with problems related to severe or long term illness, recovery, and rehabilitation, as well as the short term, more acute illness.

They also contribute an understanding of significant social and emotional factors related to a patient's health problems and thus assist physicians and other health professions in the evaluation and treatment of the individual. They use community health agencies and other resources to assist the patient in adjustment to disability and to life in the community.

Out-patient services

Social work services on an out-patient basis are provided to people who need aid on a time-to-time bases for an emotional or personality disturbance, family or marital problems, and various other services.

Their services may be employed individually or in a group; it may be brief counseling, supportive therapy, or counseling of a longer duration.

Social workers are involved in many programs designed to meet the special needs of our military community to include not only active duty personnel but also dependents of all ages as well as retirees and their dependents.

A social worker is a team member of the Hospital Discharge Planning Committee along with members from other allied health services in the identification and management of in-patients

Army gets more high school grads

More high school graduates joined the Army in FY 78 than in any other year, according to Army Recruiting Command officials. Seventy percent of the 106,512 male non-prior service volunteers who enlisted during FY 78 are high school graduates, officials explained. This is a 13.8 percent increase from FY 77. The Army's fifth full year of recruiting since the draft ended in June, 1973, saw 134,428 volunteers enlist; 1.9 percent shy of the year's goal of 137,000 recruits.

These included 19,829 volunteers in the delayed entry program. The number of women volunteers without prior service (17,517) represented 99.5 percent of the year's goal. The number of women volunteers with prior service (10,399) represents 104 percent of that recruiting goal, officials added.

More than 2,500 volunteers entered the Army during an average recruiting week in FY 78, officials commented. September totals were the highest for the year as 15,000 men and 2,275 women without prior service enlisted. Another 3,800 men and women enlisted in the delayed entry program during September. Among those who enlisted in September, 1,150 had prior service, officials said. (ARNEWS)

Health Services Command plans holiday tea

By Donna Hale
and Jo Lynn Allen

The Health Services Command Activity Officers Wives Club will hold a Christmas Tea on Dec. 13, from 1 to 3 p.m. at 507 Baltzell Ave. All Health Service wives and retired medical and dental members are cordially invited to attend. For further information, call 561-2991.

Membership Meeting

The International Wives will hold their monthly membership meeting on Dec. 5, at 7:30 p.m. in the Army Community Center (ACS), Bldg. 83. Babysitting service and refreshments are provided. Each person attending is asked to bring a can of nonperishable food for the ACS Food Locker.

Christmas Dinner

The International Wives Annual Christmas Dinner will be held tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. at the Follow Me Club House. Reservations are required. For more information call Olga Davis, 687-6471; Odrun Heckland, 327-1943; or Miriam Lang, 327-0776.

Duplicate Bridge

Duplicate Bridge is offered every Thursday, 12:30 p.m. at the Officers Club. Please come — we need players. Call Bea Serff, 689-6087.

Benning Ladies

Talent Tree

The Talent Tree will be open the first three Saturdays in December, from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. Stop by and see the lovely selection of Christmas gifts!

Sergeants' Major Wives Lucheon

All active duty and retired Sergeants' Major Wives are invited to attend a luncheon, Dec. 6, at the Top Five Annex. There will be a social hour from 11 a.m. to noon, followed by a gift exchange. Cost of the luncheon will be $3.75 including tip. For reservations, please call Mrs. Vernell Harrell, 689-4981 or Mrs. Mary Wildman, 563-2496.

NCOWC Makes MAH Donation

The NCOWC presented a peristaltic intravenous pump to Martin Army Hospital on Nov. 16. The pump, costing a little over $800, was presented to Col. Costas Klenathous, MAH deputy commander, by Welfare and Service Chairman Mrs. Luise Paulshock. Col. Klanethous on behalf of the hospital extended his appreciation to the NCOWC for the gift.

The sophisticated machine makes possible highly accurate measurements of fluids given to a patient on an intravenous set-up.

The NCOWC is happy to make donations such as this and thanks the Ft. Benning/Columbus Community for their continued support of our fund raising projects.

NCOWC Gift Wrapping Booth

Nov. 24, the NCOWC open their Christmas gift wrapping booth at the PX Mall. The booth will be open the same hours as the PX from now until Dec. 24. We will eagerly be waiting to wrap your requiring coordination of health services in pre-discharge planning. Social Work Service also supports Family Practice, the Well-Baby Clinic, OB-BYN Clinic, and the "AMIC" Clinis, with specialized services tailored to meet their particular needs.

Child and spouse abuse services have long been identified area for social work service intervention.

Early this year, Social Work Service began providing support and services as needed to the Community Outreach Program which serves approximately 500 military families in a community of three adjoining trailer parks, located off of Victory Drive. This program was originated by the Community Health Nursing Activity along with Army Community Services.

A social worker also works closely with Fort Benning schools and their counselors and teachers in providing school consultation services as well as counseling services to children and adolescents of all ages.

Another program which started a year ago brings together hospital staff and patients in small groups to discuss the many issues such as patient care and staff attitudes. This program, called the Patient-Staff Human Awareness Groups, also provides the staff with a channel for voicing their concerns and at the same time offering suggestions and recommendations to improve the quality of patient care and staff performance.

The Maternal Bonding Program at Martin Army Hospital was initiated as a joint effort between the Department of Nursing and Social Work Service. This program provides the newborn infant and the parents with a one-hour "attachment" period immediately after birth.

Coping with stress

The stress of daily living often creates feelings of tenseness, nervousness, and agitation. One new program currently being offered by Social Work Service to help people deal with these feelings is Realxation Therapy. In a controlled and relaxed environment the individual goes through a process of "trained relaxation exercises," with the goal being to reduce the patients's anxiety level and at the same time facilitating the more effective utilization of additional treatment methods.

Location

Social Work Service's out-patient program is located in Bldg. 324, which is part of the old hospital annex, next to the Infantry Museum. Appointments can be made by phone or by just "dropping in." Social workers are "helpers" and many people have found that counseling can make a valuable contribution to their total health care.

For more information about any of the services, please call 545-3212/2766.

NCOWC Shopping Trip

Nov. 15, the NCOWC enjoyed a trip to Cumberland Mall in Atlanta. The bus left at 8 a.m. and stopped near Waverly Hall at the Back 40 Restaurant for the ladies to enjoy breakfast. The bus then traveled on through the pretty fall countryside to Atlanta where the ladies spent the day shopping. The ladies had lunch at the restaurant of their choice which included the Magic Pan crepe house and El Chico. It was a fun day for all.

NCOWC Food Baskets

The NCOWC delivered Thanksgiving food baskets to needy families in the area on Nov. 20. The baskets were prepared by Mrs. Luise Paulshock and delivered by Mrs. Paulshock, Mrs. Joanne Thomas, Mrs. Ann Cogar and Mrs. Donna Hale.

Infantry Fighting Vehicle presented to Army

By Betty Zimmerman

The Infantry Fighting Vehicle (IFV) was presented to the Army by the FMC Corporation Dec. 1 at a San Jose, Calif. ceremony. Fort Benning Commander, Maj. Gen. William L. Livsey, accepted the vehicle for tests by the Combined Arms Team.

Two IFVs were involved in the roll-out because it has not been determined which gun will be used. One vehicle had a Hughes Helicopter Corporation chain-gun turret and the other was armed with a Ford Aerospace Communications Corporation self-powered gun. Six additional vehicles will be ready for Army testing at a later date.

In addition, a General Support Rocket System (GSRS) carrier was included in the Infantry conference scheduled

The U.S. Army Infantry Center will host "Infantry Conference-78" on post Dec. 13-14.

The conference, which will attract top Infantry leaders from many U.S.-based and overseas units, will provide a platform for presentations and discussion of selected systems and subjects of interest in the areas of Infantry doctrine, organization, developments and training.

Also, the conference will provide a means to focus high-level attention on those selected systems and subjects to insure that field commanders and the Infantry Center are channeling their efforts in a coordinated direction to provide the best possible leaders, organizations, equipment and training for the Infantry soldier.

During the two-day conference, weapons and equipment exhibits, which can be viewed by the public, will be on display outside of Infantry Hall.

The exhibits will include Russian uniforms and weapons, and three Russian vehicles, the T-54 tank, the BTR-60 Armored Personnel Carrier, and the BMP, Russia's newest Armored Personnel Carrier. Experts from the 197th Infantry Brigade will be on hand to answer questions on the Russian equipment, weapons and vehicles.

Walters' interview televised

Taped interviews with Lt. Gen. (Ret.) Vernon A. Walters, who spoke to the local chapter of the Association of the U.S. Army on Nov. 29, will be featured on WTVM-TV, Channel 9, WDAK-AM and WEIZ-FM Radio on Sunday.

WDAK-AM and WEIZ-FM will broadcast simultaneously the interview at 9:30 a.m. on their "Pinpoint" shows, and WTVM will telecast the interview on its "Focus" show at 6 p.m.

Gen. Walters enlisted in the Army in 1941 and began a long career that included assignments as Military Attache to Paris and Rome — and ultimately as the deputy director of the CIA before he retired in 1976.

BAYONET Interview

SMA keeps ear to the ground

By Julie Casey

William G. Bainbridge, Sergeant Major of the Army, was here this week to speak at the graduation of the Advance Noncommissioned Officers' Course, Class 505-78, Dec. 6.

In a Bayonet interview, Bainbridge expressed the following views on important Army issues concerning enlisted service members.

Q: How effective is your voice in making policies?

Bainbridge: I think it is very effective. I gather input from all installations through NCO channels and by talking to commanders: When I find something that needs to be changed, the problem is sent up through the Chief of Staff channels to get the word to the top.

I feel they listen to what the soldiers' needs are as the senior NCO sees them. My main duty is advise the Chief of Staff on enlisted matters. My job is to search out these problems by traveling around to see for myself. I find out more here in a week then I would find in four weeks back at the Pentagon.

Q: What are your general feelings regarding leadership capabilities of the NCO today?

"You can't legislate feelings," comments Bainbridge on fraternazation.

Bainbridge: I feel, the NCO Corps is the best since I've been in the Army. They are better because standards are higher, staff sergeants must have a high school diploma before promotion, and better training methods result in better soldiers.

Q: Do you think today's NCO is less responsible than the one of yesteryear?

Bainbridge: I don't think the NCOs of today are more or less responsible than those NCOs of five years ago, ten years ago or 15 years. Good NCOs look for responsibility.

Q: Is the SQT a competent test for the soldier's ability?

Bainbridge: If the SQT is put together as well as the 11-series here at Benning and the training beforehand is done according to the manuals, yes the SQT is effective.

We are also continually re-evaluating and getting feedback from the field to monitor the SQT program.

Q: Are there any forthcoming policies or specific guidelines concerning fraternization between soldiers besides the message (See page 11) received last week?

Bainbridge: That message is it. What it says is the commander is to keep good order and discipline within the prerogatives he already has. That is what this fraternization policy is all about. You can't legislate feelings. Fraternization is proper as long as it is not detrimental to the command.

Q: A subject that continually surfaces is the question of whether or not the male enlisted soldier is accorded the same rights, privileges, and disciplinary actions, particularly at company level, as those of the female soldier. What are your views?

Bainbridge: I think so. Are there cases where it isn't? Yes, but I feel it is the exception rather than the rule, because officers and NCOs can't let that happen.

Q: Being in a position to observe soldiers throughout different installations, do you feel that the training of enlisted soldiers is adequate to meet the demanding requirements of their jobs?

Bainbridge: The experts at TRADOC decided its takes "X" number of weeks to properly train a soldier in basic and advanced training to make him a working part of his team. If Gen. Donn Starry and his people feel they could train a soldier effectively in four weeks, two weeks or two hours, they would do it. They continually work to get that soldier trained effectively in the least amount of time so the soldier can become a working member of that team as soon as possible. I think we ought to let the experts do their job. There is money in training soldiers, and Gen. Starry could use the money in other areas if he thought he could train them sooner.

"I feel the NCO Corps is the best since I've been in the Army."

Q: What do you think of women in combat?

Bainbridge: Now that is kind of a bad question to ask right now because the chief says they won't be in combat arms. Will they become members of combat support? You bet, there is no way to keep them out of it. Will women serve in the future? — I don't know. We are continually re-evaluating the situation.

Q: How do you feel about the overweight soldier?

Bainbridge: AR 600-9 doesn't leave much room for personal feelings. It says that the soldier has to be within the guidelines or has to go home. The Chief of Staff does not want to write some parent or wife and tell them their young man died, not because he was shot, but because he died of a heart attack before he could reach the top of the hill.

Q: Do you think the average soldier is physically fit?

Bainbridge: Yes I do, but I don't think we really have any average soldiers.

Q: A recent article stated that the present Selective Service System is not capable of mobilizing enough recruits in time to meet Pentagon needs in time of crisis. What are your feelings about this statement?

Bainbridge: The Selective Service System is in deep stand-by. It would probably take 180 days to get the first recruits into training. The Chairman of the The Joint Chiefs of Staff came out with a message that says he and the other Joint Chiefs would like to see Selective Service System come about, not to draft, but to register and classify possible soldiers in the military age group.

We have to be able to get those fellows in there when we need them. We would have the

New policy affects parents

'If the Army wanted you to have dependents ...'

Sole parents and service couples with dependents must convince the Army that parental responsibilities will not interfere with military duties — and they must live up to these promises — or face reenlistment denial or involuntary separation, according to a policy announced Friday.

Dependent Care Plan

As of January, DA officials said, soldiers in the sole parent or service couple (with dependents) categories have three months, following counseling, to give unit commanders a "reasonable and workable" dependent care plan (DCP).

The DCP, officials explained, must provide details of how minor dependents, or adult dependents who are unable to care for themselves, will be cared for in case of unscheduled alerts, field exercises, temporary duty, charge of quarters duty, overseas deployment to areas where dependents are restricted, short notice overseas deployment or evacuation of dependents from a hostile area.

A DCP may be approved at special court martial level (usually at brigade headquarters) or disapproved at general court martial level (usually division or post headquarters), according to the new policy. If the DCP is disapproved, soldiers have until six months after counseling to amend or resubmit a new DCP for approval.

DCP Disapproval

If a DCP is not accepted by the Army, if it is not followed or if parental responsibility interfers with military duties, according to the new policy, four "management tools" may be used to correct conflicts. They are: counseling, reenlistment control, performance appraisals and involuntary separation.

Counseling

The first alternative listed in the new policy has been required since May 1 for those service member sole parents and service couples with less than three years' service, if the couples have dependents. In January, the alternative will be expanded to cover all enlisted sole parents and service couples with dependents.

Bar to Reenlistment

Reenlistment controls, the new policy states, allow a bar to reenlistment under AR 601-280 if a soldier fails to manage "personal, marital or family affairs." The regulation will specify that reenlistment bars may be imposed for failure to respond to duty requirements because of parenthood, and such bars must be imposed for failure to provide an acceptable DCP.

Performance appraisals, the new policy continues, will "clearly" indicate if parenthood impairs duty performance.

Involuntary Separation

Involuntary separation, as a last resort, may be imposed under AR 635-100 for officers. For enlisted members, AR 635-200 will apply if a soldier is "unable to perform prescribed duties; is repeatedly absent from work is not available for worldwide assignment because of parenthood." Family emergencies may be excused in some cases, however.

Assignments

DA officials remarked that sole parents and affected service couples will not be assigned to headquarters and non-deploying units simply to avoid parental and military conflicts. Doing so, they stressed, would be unfair to all soldiers.

DCPs will also be reviewed by a new command when affected soldiers move, officials said.

In addition to active duty soldiers affected by the new policy, National Guard and Army Reserve regulations will undergo "similar changes."

DA officials remarked that the new set of policies will "emphasize the responsibilities" of both parents and commanders concerning parental and military roles and will also give commanders "flexibility" in resolving the problems these roles cause.

Statistics

Current Army statistics estimate that two percent of active duty soldiers are sole parents, or about 15,000. More than 13,000 of these are EM. There are more male soldiers who are sole parents than women.

An estimated five percent of all soldiers are married to other service members (about 37,000), officials add, but there is no reliable date on the number of service couples with dependents. (ARNEWS) roll-out. This proposed answer to the Russian multiple rocket launcher uses the same chassis and power train components as the IFV.

All these vehicles are prototypes and will now be tested by the Army under the RAM concept — reliability, availability and maintainability — and a variety of other tests.

The vehicles rolled out in front of the reviewing stand. The FMC crew was replaced by an Army crew and a formal entry of the serial number was made into Army records. A vehicle mobility demonstration was followed by a static display.

In accepting the vehicles, Livsey reflected on the importance of the tests that the vehicle and weapons will undergo. He said, "Potentially it's the best fighting vehicle in the world; we cannot afford to provide them (pointing to the soldiers nearby) anything less than the very best in the world."

Continuing, Livsey said that the IFV was perhaps our greatest void in our fighting force and nothing could possibly be more important than a thorough test. He also commended FMC for the remarkable job they did in such a short period of time.

Attendees included Judd White, House Armed Service Committee staffer; Lt. Gen. F.J. Baer, deputy commanding general for Material Development, U.S. Army Material Development and Readiness Command; Maj. Gen. Thomas Lynch, commanding general, U.S. Army Armor Center, Brig. Gen. Stan R. Sheridan, outgoing Fighting Vehicle Systems program manager; and Brig. Gen. Philip Bolte, incoming manager.

Glad you asked

What do you think about the Doughboy's football program last year?

Spec. 4 Cynthia Henningsen, ETV-TASC

"I felt the program was excellent. Some of the teams seemed to be really tough and as a result fans started dwindling away with the losses. Fort Benning is fortunate to have the opportunity to participate in college level football. The players and experience is here and I feel the guys should get extra time to practice or be partially exempt from duty during the season."

Maj. Bill Drollinger, Enlisted Analysis, DTD

"I think the program is super great and I'll tell you why. If you are only looking at the local interest in the Doughboys, you are missing something. For example, during the nationally televised pre-game show for the Auburn-Alabama game recently, the commentators discussed the Doughboys and how they were no push overs when they played the Auburn junior varsity. There can be no price tag placed on that type of publicity for Fort Benning and the Army.

This is only the third year for the Doughboys. The scedule up to now has been fairly erratic, as has the fan turnout. But as the season schedules become more regular and a sense of tradition and rivalry is established, the fans will come out in strength to support this fine team."

Sgt. 1st Class Richard Lee, Hq Co., Hq Cmd., DPT

Sfc Richard Lee, HqCo., HqComd., DPT

"Although I didn't get to a Doughboys game this season, I think it's great that Fort Benning is represented by a post football team. I think they did a really good job considering the stiff competition and limited practice time."

Learn to live with conflicts

Throughout the course of daily events people find themselves facing conflicts. The conflicts, whether they are related to other people, situations, or rules and regulations, cause people a lot of stress. Conflicts are experienced by individuals and groups of people.

When you watch many of the advertisements on television you see people faced with conflict and the solution to the conflict is to purchase a certain item or service from the advertiser. Consequently a person sees that conflicts not only exist but that there are also solutions to the conflicts.

Conflicts can be lived with and used as means of personal growth. The answer to living with conflict is whether or not you want to experience growth as a person or reject the conflict.

Some ways to deal positively with conflict is to begin with clear cut communications. Failure to have clear cut communication is the first step to intensification of the conflict. Therefore, identify the fact that your value, perspective, or situation differs from someone or something else. There need not be any value judgment made as to who or what is right or wrong.

Once the conflict is identified clearly and communications are good then alternatives to the relationship, situation, or rules can be addressed. For example you are in a hurry to make an appointment and end up in a traffic jam. At that point you desire to make the appointment on time and the traffic situation causes you to feel the conflict of not doing what you value, being on time for an appointment. In this situation the line of communication is primarily with one's self and it centers around a value or standard you have set for yourself. How are you going to handle the conflict? Here is a negative way to deal with the conflict. Become angry at everyone else in the traffic problem. Then you can begin to act in an obnoxious manner while you create a greater hazard. Positive alternatives would be to recognize that the situation exists and you may not be able to do anything about it. You perhaps could choose an alternate route of travel. If you see you are going to still be late, stop and telephone the person you are going to meet or else render an apology when you do arrive. In following the positive alternatives to living with the conflict you continue to give positive value to yourself as a person and to other people involved.

In seeing conflicts as a part of every day life and accepting them as the norm places a person in a better position to live with conflicts. When conflicts are faced and dealt with positively personal growth in the individual can take place and life becomes more meaningful.

Defense budget shrinking

This summer a nationally syndicated columnist wrote, "There is something wrong when the richest, most powerful nation in history votes added billions to record military budgets, but refuses to spend money to insure health care for its citizens, housing for its homeless, or jobs for the unemployed."

Now, every writer tends to get carried away with his subject from time to time but it is the mark of the great journalist to be able to express conviction while, at the same time, conveying facts. Unfortunately this journalist fell short of that goal. An examination of the 18 Federal Budgets beginning with 1960 (a non-war year) and ending with 1977 shows some rather spectacular contradictions to the argument that defense spending is robbing social programs in the United States:

- In terms of constant 1960 dollars (disregarding inflation) defense spending has risen by just 5 percent in 18 years while spending on social programs has grown by 322 percent, 60 times faster!
- In the same period spending for weapons and for military research and development actually declined by 24 percent. The growth in the military budget has been primarily due to increased pay for service personnel to approach parity with the civilian sector and to increasing numbers of retirements by those who served in World War II and Korea.
- Over those 18 years the share of the federal budget devoted to machinery ready to crank up to save time.

Q: When you assumed the post of Sergeant Major of the Army, what goals did you set: which ones have you accomplished and which are you finding more difficult?

Bainbridge: The main one and continuing one is to see that the soldiers' needs are met and to be able to transmit them to the decision makers so that things get done. I think I've been pretty successful, primarily because I've been able to communicate with soldiers like Sergeant Maj. Roegiers (Fort Benning command sergeant major) and the people who work for him.

There have been some little things I'm glad to see happen. One is, The Army, being the senior service, will for the first time have dress mess uniform for the enlisted man. It is a super looking uniform and I'm glad to see it happen. We have also made the Army tan uniform a seasonal uniform like the greens, which is practical.

One thing I would like to see is for soldiers to receive earlier notice of where they are going to be stationed after coming back from overseas, so their families can get prepared.

In the area of professionalism, I want master sergeants who are selected to go to the Sergeants Major Academy not to be able to say no unless they have a compassionate reason.

Good Samaritans get taste of own medicine

By Betty Zimmerman

Good Samaritans of Fort Benning, a Military Assistance to Safety and Traffic (MAST) helicopter from the 498th Med. Co., 34th Med. Bn., needed rescuing themselves last Saturday night, Dec. 2.

The response overwhelmed the five-person crew that included Chief Warrant Officer Rick Hilgendorf, aircraft commander; 1st Lt. Joseph Bradley, pilot; Staff Sgt. John Shepard, crew chief; Spec. 5 George Therman, medic; and Spec. 5 Denise Poling, attendant.

The medevac chopper was returning from a mercy mission to Atlanta's Grady Hospital when the transmission's emergency light came on, signaling possible trouble.

They needed to land immediately and the closest airstrip was at Callaway Gardens near LaGrange, Ga. The helicopter set down safely but the crew found the small strip closed, and there they were with no money, transportation, food or housing.

Bradley could think of only one person he knew in LaGrange, the administrator at West Georgia Hospital, Charles L. Foster Jr. He called him to see if they could possibly spend the night at his hospital since they were stranded.

And that's when the tables were turned and the MAST unit was rescued in royal style. Foster sent a car for them in just ten minutes and had them taken to the Days Inn Motel where they were fed, housed and treated like royalty in general.

Bradley is not sure who footed the bill for it all, but he said, "Carlyle McConnell and his motel staff were wonderful to us and we can't begin to thank Charles Foster enough for his concern and help."

"The maintenance crew from Fort Benning came on Sunday and by noon the helicopter was fixed and we were on our way back, but we certainly enjoyed our layover at LaGrange."

social programs has grown by 94.7 percent while the defense share fell by 52 percent.

● Measured in terms of constant 1960 dollars our Gross National Product has grown six times as fast as our defense budget and, while our defense share of the GNP has dropped from 9 percent in 1960 to 5.2 percent in 1977 (a drop of 42 percent), the social program share has jumped from 5.3 percent to 12.5 percent — up 135 percent.

The inroads of inflation and the shift of emphasis away from defense to a wide range of social programs are most evident in the fact that despite the $117 billion defense budget just signed into law for fiscal year 1979 we will have 500,000 fewer military people and 200,000 fewer civilians on the defense payroll than we had in 1960 when the defense budget only came to $45.2 billion.

It is unquestionably true that for those citizens intent on improving education, health care and family life the defense budget appears to be an unfair competitor. They see different threats and different paths toward a better society. Somehow, through, they must be made to see the broader threat and to realize that only by readiness to defend our way of life can we be sure of the opportunity to improve it.

Road construction 'just routine'

By Julie Casey

Road construction at the intersection of Benning Boulevard and Custer Road is just routine maintenance, according to chief of Roads and Pavements Branch, Jack Armstrong.

He commented that Benning Boulevard was originally made of cement slabs and later covered with asphalt. The cement slabs have been heaving and moving and the asphalt is causing problems. The construction gang is remedying the situation by replacing the cement with asphalt. Once completed, Benning Boulevard will have a smooth top.

Armstrong added that weather permitting, construction should be finished within ten days to two weeks.

He asked that drivers use extreme caution and watch out for the workers and equipment.

"Those men are just trying to do their job and play it safe," Armstrong concluded.

DUI penalty stiff

A law went into effect in Georgia on March 31, 1976 and its far-reaching ramifications may cause a lot of foot blisters for Fort Benning soldiers.

With the enactment of Georgia Code Section 68B-305, anyone found guilty of driving under the influence (DUI) of alcohol will lose his driving privileges in this state for one year on the first offense.

A second offense means suspension of driving privileges for three years and three-time offenders will have to make do without their license for five long years.

Soldiers with out-of-state drivers licenses are subject to the same penalties as Georgians. According to Capt. W. L. Armstrong, clerk of the Columbus Recorder's Court, your license will be returned to the state which issued it upon conviction of DUI.

And should their law differ and they return your license to you, you are still not allowed to drive in Georgia.

Benning has similar penalties for driving under the influence of alcohol or other drugs. On the reservation the charge is called "Driving While Drunk." In addition to mandatory one-year supension of your drivers license, you are also subject to punishment under the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

Further, you can lose your post driving privileges just for refusing to take a blood/alcohol test while on Fort Benning. According to Sgt. 1st Class David Christy of the Provost Marshal's Office, refusal to take the test will result in a mandatory six-month suspension.

The message here is clear: If you drink, don't drive. And if you are convicted of DUI, whether on post or off, you'd better be prepared for a lot of walking in the next year.

Army releases fraternization policy

Problems involving fraternization between soldiers will require counseling or "other action as appropriate," according to a new Army policy sent to the field, and effective, now.

The new uniform guidance is necessary, a DA message states, because of "an increasing number of . . . inappropriate relationships" between soldiers of different ranks.

The policy, which will be included as paragraph 5-7F in AR 600-20, states: "Relationships between service members of different rank which involve, or give the appearance of, partiality, preferential treatment, or the improper use of rank or position for personal gain, are prejudicial to good order, discipline, and high unit morale. Such relationships will be avoided. If relationships between service members of different rank cause actual or perceived partiality or unfairness; involve the improper use of rank or position for personal gain; or can otherwise reasonably be expected to undermine discipline, authority, or morale, Commanders and supervisors will counsel those involved or take other action as appropriate."

DA officials say the new policy is "deliberately broad" and is designed to permit local commanders to "exercise good judgment in implementing a sensitive and important army policy," while also reemphasizing Army customs and traditions.

The increase of women soldiers in Army ranks during the past few years, coupled with societal trends, has made the fraternization issue more visible, according to a DA statement.

Officials also remarked that while local commanders may apply the new guidance differently, it allows them to deal with fraternization situations that have unique or extenuating circumstances.

Eleven months of study and staffing by DA agencies and major commands preceded the policy's approval, officials added. (ARNEWS)

New plane to brighten Benning skies

BEECHCRAFT U.S. Army C-12A

By Betty Zimmerman

Fort Benning received a new airplane for staff use Nov. 28. The Beechcraft Model C-12A replaces the Beechcraft U-21, a 1967 model.

The new plane is a pressurized, air conditioned, fully instrumented turboprop that can carry a pilot, co-pilot and eight passengers. Its cruise speed is more than 258 knots and it is capable of altitudes over 30,000 feet.

Col. Millard Burke and CW4 Denver Kidd have been checked out in the new plane which will be used for long distance executive flights. Burke, also the airfield commander, explained, "It is more economical to fly a group of passengers to a distant meeting or event in our own plane in one day than have them tied up for two to three days traveling by commercial aircraft at a greater cost to the government."

"This new craft flies about 50 knots faster than the old one and can go 20,000 feet higher, enabling us to fly over most bad weather," he continued. "It also has the latest in safety and comfort features making it a vast improvement over the outdated U-21."

Colonial Band booked solid for Christmas

By Seth Hamilton

Christmas time is the season for fun and merriment, but for members of the Colonial Band, the holiday season will also be a very busy one.

The Colonial Band, made up entirely of Scouts from Explorer Post 76 at Fort Benning, has established itself as one of the top marching bands in the South, if not in the country. The band has accumulated many honors which include being named Georgia's "Best Community Band" for the past three years. They were named "Honors Band" at last years Mardi Gras.

The Colonial Band is busy all year long with engagements throughout the Southeast, but during the Christmas holidays the band is booked solid. The band's schedule has to be worked around the fact that just about all of its members are attending school.

The Colonial Band's holiday schedule started last Saturday when they played at halftime during the Stagg Bowl classic in Phenix City. Earlier that morning, they had participated in the Phenix City Christmas Parade.

Yesterday, the band marched in the Columbus Christmas Parade. With them in the parade was a "Frosty the Snowman" float built by members of the band.

Future engagements include traveling this weekend to Augusta, Ga. for a mall concert competition tomorrow and a Christmas parade on Sunday.

The band will hold its Christmas party this year in Green Hall (Bldg. 229) on Dec. 21. Green Hall is the band's regular rehearsal hall.

Following a brief Christmas break, the band will perform at the inauguration ceremonies for the new mayor of Columbus on Jan. 3.

The Colonial Band entertained at five Doughboy games this year, three of those dates coming in the past month along with two outside concerts. Currently, the band is in training for this year's Mardi Gras in February.

The New Year will bring a couple of changes to the band. They will be adding a Men's Rifle Drill Team which will perform with fixed bayonets. There are also plans for a Ladies Flag Corps. The 1979 Colonial Band will feature a total of 125 performers, including 100 marching musicians.

Considering what they've done so far and the new additions they have planned for 1979, it seems that the Colonial Band is living up to its reputation as "Georgia's Famous Scouts."

Committee Group chief retires

Maj. George W. Vessell, chief, Tactics Committee, Committee Group, USAIC, was awarded the Meritorious Service Medal on Nov. 28 by Col. John L. Jones Jr., Committee Group commander.

Major George W. Vessell

Vessell entered the Army on Nov. 21, 1958 and attended Officer Candidate School as a staff sergeant in 1967 when he was commissioned as a second lieutenant.

Vessell's career includes service in Vietnam, Korea and Germany.

His awards include: CIB, Bronze Star Medal with "V" Device and Oakleaf Cluster, the Parachutist Badge, the Republic of Vietnam Gallantry Cross and the Army Commendation Medal with third Oakleaf Cluster.

At Fort Benning, Vessell was commander of C Co., 5th Bn. 1st AIT Bde prior to being assigned to Committee Group in June 1977. As chief, Tactics Committee, Vessell was a driving force in the effective implementation of the One State Unit Training Test. Through his leadership, trainees were taught the fundamentals of Infantry individual, squad and mechanized tactics. His recommendations and changes to the Tactics Program of Instruction here made extensive improvements to the tactical training of Infantry trainees.

Vessell retired on Nov. 30 after twenty years active duty in the Army.

Britton takes over 5th Stu Bn

Lt. Col. J. W. Britton Jr. assumed command of the 5th Student Battalion, The School Brigade, on Nov. 30, replacing Lt. Col. Donald Sawtelle, who has been reassigned as chief, Human Resources Management Team, Directorate of Personnel and Community Activities.

Britton, a native of San Francisco, entered the Army in 1959 and graduated from Officers' Candidate School here in 1960. His previous assignment was in the Office of the Secretary of Defense for Manpower, Reserve Affairs and Logistics at The Pentagon, Washington, D.C.

He and his wife, Jay, have two sons, J. III, 15, and Jeffrey, 10.

Clinics combined

In an effort to provide more responsive care to walk-in patients, some of the functions of the Emergency Room and the Acute Minor Illness Clinic at Martin Army Hospital are being combined to form a TRIAGE station.

Beginning Dec. 11, all walk-in patients who do not have an appointment should report to the TRIAGE station (formerly the Emergency Room Sign-In Desk.)

Emergency cases should report directly to the TRIAGE Station just as they have at the Emergency Room Sign-In Desk in the past.

There is no change in procedures for Pediatric walk-in patients.

ADCO: Helping Benning people with problems

By David B. Cunningham

The Alcohol and Drug Control Office (ADCO), located in Bldg. 2215, provides service to the Fort Benning community in the fields of alcohol and drug abuse prevention/education and rehabilitation. Each of these areas is, in its own right, vital to assure the health, safety and sanity of every individual of the Fort Benning community.

The area of prevention/education functions to supply current factual information on alcohol and other drugs to each service member, dependent and civilian employee. The scope of this information includes such common substances as caffiene, nicotine and prescription drugs, as well as alcohol and illegal drugs.

The goal of the prevention/education program is to provide each individual with the information he or she requires to make a responsible, well informed decision on drug use. An additional objective of prevention/education is the publication of information concerning the assistance which can be provided by the ADCO to individuals who may be experienceing problems caused by alcohol or drug abuse.

This assistance is provided by the Benning House program, the rehabilitative division of ADCO. The Benning House makes its services available to all active or retired service members, their dependents, and Department of the Army civilians who have alcohol or drug problems, as well as to commanders or supervisors who have reason to believe that a particular subordinate may have such problems.

In the case of individuals with an alcohol or drug problem, professional counselors are available to provide assistnace on personal basis. This assistance may take the form of individual private counseling sessions or through interaction with groups of people who are experiencing or have experienced common problems.

Because of the nature of alcohol or drug problems, the commander or supervisor will find that they quickly become of concern to him in terms of unit readiness and lost manpower. Such concern is extremely appropriate in light of the critical mission with which the Army is charged. Yet, because of the long range implications of alcohol or drug problems, the commander is liable to experience a great deal of frustration in trying to deal with them.

It is at this point that the trained professionals at Benning House provide the commander or supervisor with a valuable resource for resolution of his problem. While maintaining constant liason with the commander, the Benning House counselor makes every effort possible to restore the individual experiencing a problem to duty as a fully contributing member of the unit.

The Benning House provides professional counseling and as such, its clients enjoy full confidentiality of all proceedingss and records. If you desire further information on alcohol and drug abuse prevention/education or rehabilitation, call ADCO at 545-5880/5774 or Benning House at 545-2742/4891.

Christmas ceremony

The Christmas season at Fort Benning will officially begin next Thursday, Dec. 14, with a Christmas tree lighting ceremony in front of Infantry Hall at 5 p.m.

Fort Benning Commander Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey will make a few remarks before turning the switch that will light the trees placed on each side of the "Follow Me" statue. The 283rd Army Band will provide a program of Christmas music beginning at 4:45 p.m.

The general public is invited to attend.

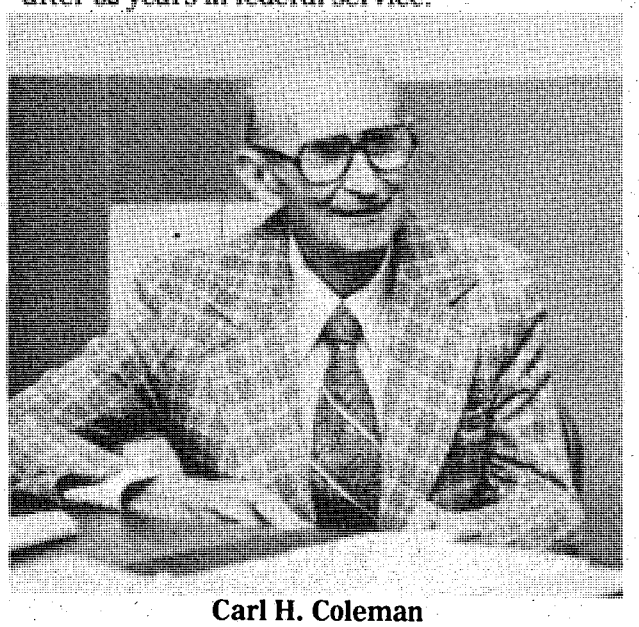
Retirement caps 52 years service

By Julie Casey

Col. (Ret) Carl H. Coleman retired Dec. 2 after 52 years in federal service.



Carl H. Coleman

"I've been pretty fortunate with my Army career and civil service," he stated.

Coleman's career began in 1923 when he went to work in a National Guard field camp at the age of 12.

He added, "I was a dog robber (an errand boy. I thought the National Guard was a very exciting life, then."

In 1925, Coleman enlisted in the National Guard and later, as a second lieutenant, was inducted into the regular Army.

When asked how he felt being a young man headed into the middle of World War II, he replied, "We were glad to see it come for some reason. We didn't know what was ahead of us, but the National Guard and Reserves, as now, were the Armed Forces's mainstay. We had a job to do and we were glad to do it. Yes, I was scared, but what could I do? Responsibility is like gold, it's where you find it."

Would the National Guard be ready today?

Coleman commented, "Yes — not completely — but I would say that the National Guard Forces are better prepared and in a better frame of mind than the regular Army (RA). They have more enthusiasm. They may be a little wild looking according to RA standards, but they know what they are doing."

Coleman's military career took him up through 1957 when he retired from the U.S. Army at Fort Monroe, Va.

He came to work for Civil Service in 1962 as foreman of the fixed industrial equipment for post engineers here.

Eighteen years later, working as an educational specialist, who writes correspondence courses, with over 300 instructional packets in publication, Coleman retires as a GS-11.

Now, 68 years old, and with a successful career behind him, Coleman recalls making $600 a month as a major.

"Well, that's my story," he commented tough and cheeky, "Someone will say, oh, he's just part of the old 'brown shoe' Army. Well, hell, I was a part of the 'wrapped leg' Army and that was way before the 'brown shoe' Army."

Coleman plans to reside in Columbus.

College sign-up slated

Fort Benning soldiers, wishing to continue their education while in the Army, can do so through the Columbus College Fort Benning Center. Classes are offered evenings on post and at the college campus.

Early registration is Dec. 11 from 9 a.m. - noon at Kelley Hill and 1 p.m. - 4:30 p.m. in Room 329 of Building 35. Regular registration is Jan 2-9 during the same hours. Applications for on-post classes must be submitted by Jan. 8.

The Tuesday-Thursday classes begin Jan. 4 and Monday-Wednesday classes start Jan. 8.

Courses through the Fort Benning Center are $75 per five-quarter course, or $15 per quarter hour. Eligible military personnel may use Veteran Education Benefits or receive Army Tuition Assistance. VA22-1990a and DA 2171 forms are available at all education centers on post.

For more information call Paul Hackett, director, at 689-8668.

Filipino Christmas Party scheduled

There will be a Filipino Christmas Party and Reunion on Dec. 23 at the Knights of Columbus Hall on the corner of Broadway and 8th Streets. The Christmas dinner will start at 5:30 p.m. Interested parties should contact Merle Salamanca at 327-5803, Minning Escondo at 322-4140 or Jean Montesclaros at 687-6630. Deadline for registration is Dec. 15.

Santa to Visit Scouts

Santa will visit the Cub Scouting families of Pack 227 at their regularly scheduled meeting on Dec. 18 at 7 p.m. at the Richard C. Wilson School auditorium.

The Cub Scouts will participate in a gift exchange. Gifts should not exceed the value of $2.50. Parents may bring gifts for their non-cubbing family members to receive via Santa.

After Santa's visit, the cubbing families are invited to sing Christmas carols in the Lavoie Manor area. The evening will end with hot chocolate and other refreshments at the school.

Christmas Lighting

In the interests of energy conservation, the following policies are announced for all activities of Fort Benning: Exterior displays in unit, troop billet and family housing areas will be non-electric. Lighted exterior nativity scenes will be permitted at chapels designated by the Center Chaplain.

A lighted tree or display may be used outdoors at Infantry Hall, Martin Army Hospital and at McGraw and Lavoie Manor neighborhood centers with a minimum use of lighting.

Use of interior decorative lighting will be prudent and limited to a minimum of displays. Use of interior and exterior decorative lighting will be confined to the evening period of 6 to 10 p.m., except on Christmas Eve when decorative lighting may remain on until 2 a.m. Christmas day. All decorations, both outdoors and indoors will be in accordance with established fire and safety regulations.

Christmas Tree Sale

The Dependent Youth Activities (DYA) of Fort Benning will be selling live Christmas trees until Dec. 20, during the hours of 4 to 8 p.m. at the Youth Center, Bldg 1054.

The sale proceeds will go to the post's cub scouts, boy scouts, girl scouts, explorers, swim club and junior rifle club.

Postpourri

When it rains, it pours

By Seth Hamilton

Fort Benning has finally had the necessary rainfall to end the critical dry spell that has threatened Benning's forests for the past two and a half months.

According to Norman Force, chief, Forestry Branch, Benning received over two and a half inches of soaking rain between Nov. 28-30. More rain fell in that three-day period than had fallen in the past three months. Force noted that he had recorded no rain water runoff, which means that the rain was completely absorbed by Benning's parched woodlands.

The rainfall spelled relief for the forest build-up index (degree of dryness) at Benning. The index had at one point soared to a dangerous level of 260. With the recent showers, the index has plunged to a safe reading of 4 as of Nov. 30.

Correction

In last week's issue of the BAYONET, it was mistakenly reported that the Children's Christmas Festival was to be held last weekend. The Festival will be held Dec. 16 at 2 p.m. at the Lavoie Chapel, Bldg. 2595.

Racquetball

Part II: Grips and Strokes

By Seth Hamilton and Dave Lawrence

In this article we'll cover the forehand and backhand grips, as well as the forehand and backhand stroke.

A couple of times out on the court will show you that if your grip is not correct, your shots will be very limited if not totally inaccurate. A good grip is designed to give you power, control and accuracy. An incorrect grip can limit a player in all of these aspects.

To make a forehand grip, reach out for the racquet as if to shake hands, making your thumb fall over the handle to form a V on the top of the grip. For the backhand you may perform the same maneuver, but rotate your V about one inch to the backside of the racquet. It is worth mentioning here that the correct grip on the racquet will not necessarily be the most comfortable at first. But after practicing a little, you'll wonder how you could hold the racquet any other way.

Once you have practiced the grips on the court and gotten a feel for them, you are ready for the stroke. Unlike tennis, where you keep a straight wrist and arm, in racquetball you have to cock your elbow and snap your wrist to generate the power needed.

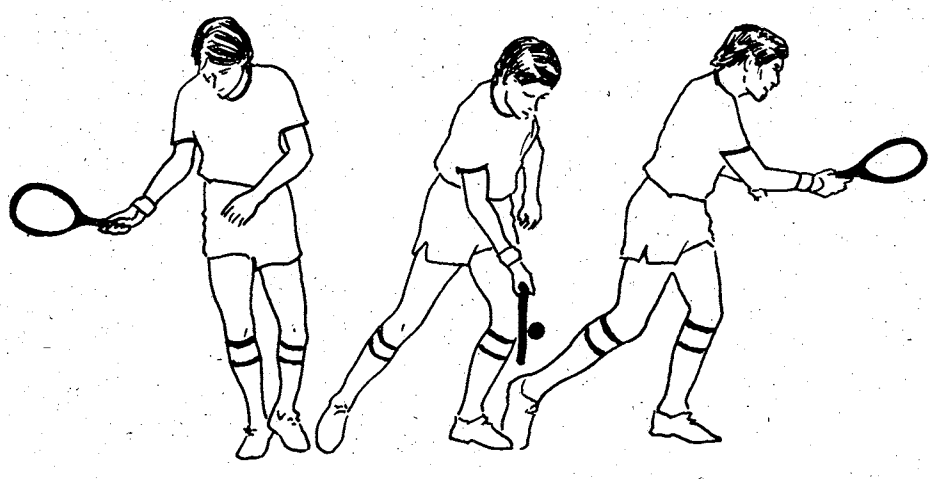
On the forehand stroke, start with the racquet cocked behind the head. Weight is on the back leg ready to shift forward with the knees bent. Step into the ball as you hit it, bringing full weight to your front leg and bending at the knees. The wrist and elbow should be snapped like a whip, making solid contact on the ball with the racquet face dead straight. The stroke should include a complete follow through to insure direction and power of the shot. The ideal place to hit the ball is between the ankle and the knee, about level with the front foot. After hitting the shot, square off in a crouched position facing the front wall ready for the next shot.

On the backhand, use the same basics for setting up: face the side wall, get low, weight on back foot, racquet close to head with wrist cocked and elbow bent. Step into the ball for the shot, using your shoulder, elbow and wrist to contact with power and accuracy. Again contact the ball low and use a complete follow through.

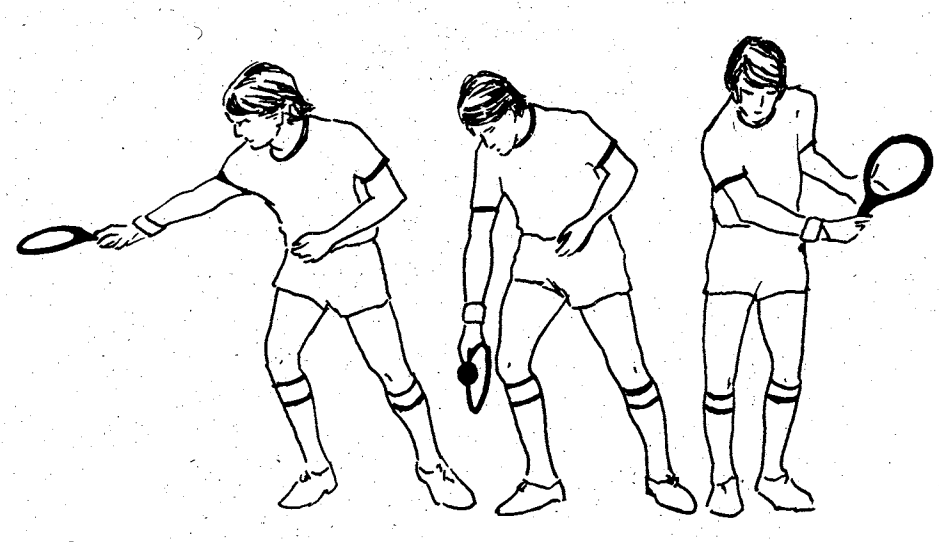
Another variation of the forehand and backhand strokes is the backwall shot when the ball must be hit rebounding off the back wall. The best way to make a good hit directly off the back wall is to set up four to five feet from the back wall and time your forehand stroke so that you contact the ball before it hits the floor. In the back wall shot, it is very important to keep close eye contact with the ball.

All shots in racquetball are variations of the forehand and backhand grips and strokes we have discussed. Do not be frustrated if you don't master these immediately. It will take practice and patience. It is best to play three or four times a week to keep in shape. Although you should play at your own level of competition, it is a good idea to play someone a step above you to gain more experience.

Next week's article will discuss and illustrate the shots and strategies of serving.



On the forehand stroke, move weight into the stroke, hit the ball low about level with the front foot and follow through. It is better to bend the knees more than is illustrated above.



For the backhand stroke, set up with knees bent and weight on rear foot. Step into the shot using the shoulder to complete the follow through. Again hit the ball low about even with the front foot.

Fort Benning Racquetball Classic sets records

The Fort Benning Raquetball Classic was held Nov. 28-Dec. 3 at Benning's Audie Murphy and Santiago Gyms. A record 88 players participated in the competition.

Dave Lawrence edged Daniel Hammond 21-19, 21-4 to win the men's A Division title. The men's B Division went to Ron Stokes who came from behind to beat Thomas Patyckula 13-21, 21-11, 11-3.

The C Division champ was Larry Epperson. He beat Paul Moore 21-9, 21-2. In the men's Seniors, Paul Merlin slipped past Joe Gorecki 21-20, 21-10. Todd Graham beat Ken Smith 18-21, 21-16, 11-9 in a tough match to finish first in the men's Masters Division.

Sue Graham won the women's A Division by topping Audrey Lenig 21-5, 21-4. The women's B Division winner was Nancy Hages who bested Barbara Gorecki 21-11, 21-9. And in the C Division it was Rosemary Cooper over Gina Youngblood 9-21, 21-9, 11-7.

Doughboys now 10-0

The Fort Benning Dougboy basketball team made it ten in a row as they swept two games from a FORSCOM representative, Fort McPherson, 82-68 and 78-59 last weekend.

In the first game, the Doughboys were intimidated by the slow tactics of McPherson and trailed 40-37 at halftime.

The Doughboys came back early in the second half to take a 45-40 lead and never trailed again. The Doughboys' height enabled them to out rebound the shorter McPherson team and score on numerous offensive rebounds.

The Doughboys were led in scoring by Frederick Nelson, 23 points; Rick Donnell, 20 points; Charlie Jackson, 18 points and Steven Mims, 10 points.

McPherson was led in scoring by Mike Johnson with 34 points.

In Saturday's game, the Doughboys once again started off slow but were able to keep close. The Doughboys' depth once again prevailed as McPherson was outgunned in the second half by the fast-running offense.

The Doughboys used a balanced scoring attack as five players scored in double figures.

Benning was led by Charlie Jackson with 14 points; Larry Varnedoe and Rick Donnell with 13 points; and Frederick Nelson and Arnold Bray with 10 points.

The Doughboys meet rival Moody Air Force Base in a tournament at Fort Rucker Dec. 15-17.

Still the One

Steve Ledford, Co C, 3rd Inf, 7th Bn, 197th Inf Bde, followed up his post chess championship by playing on the Army team in the American Legion's 19th Annual Armed Forces Chess Competition.

The Army team came in second behind the Air Force at the Legion's Hall of Flags building in Washington, D.C.

Ledford, from Erlanger, Ky., has been playing chess about nine years. He competed in about 12 tournaments this year and is a member of the U.S. Chess Federation.

Do it yourself

Do you know of any sporting event or competition that you would like to see printed in the BAYONET?

The BAYONET welcomes stories from readers but please follow these guidelines:

- All information MUST be typed in a triple-space, 60 character line format.
- Deadline is Tuesday noon for the Friday issue. The earlier copy is submitted, the greater the chance it will appear in print. (All stories are run on a space available basis.)
- If you find yourself with a good story but aren't sure how to go about writing it up, the BAYONET staff will provide whatever assistance is possible. In certain cases, the BAYONET will provide a reporter or photographic coverage.

For further information call 545-2131.

Maintenance program keeps 1/58th running

By Mike Daigle

One way to pick out a good Mech Infantry unit is to look at its maintenance program. While there is only one mech battalion on post it has a maintenance program that exceeds most Army standards.

While it is the leaders who are responsible for a unit's maintenance, the 1/58th Mech Infantry has developed a program that trains the trainers. The Headstart Maintenance Program was designed primarily for Infantry NCOs and officers who have had no mechanized Infantry experience.

The four-day program covers all equipment encountered in a rifle company : vehicles, weapons, communication equipment, Nuclear Biological Chemical equipment, etc. The four days also include one day of practical exercises on armored personnel carriers (APC), where they get a chance to swim the vehicles on Victory Pond.

The purpose is to train all leaders, from captain to sergeant, in sufficient detail to give them enough knowledge to inspect any item in their section.

"The enthusiasm the men have show towards this program has really surprised me," commented Maj. Garrett T. Cowsert, executive officer for the 1/58th. "The chance to really understand the equipment they work with has got the soldiers very excited. I'm sure this program is going to make a positive difference."

The seven platoon sergeants in the first class learned valuable maintenance lessons that will be passed on to the actual drivers of the vehicles.

"This class is just a part of the continuing maintenance program the battalion is always involved in. It takes a lot of time but it is absolutely vital in accomplishing the mission and that's what makes it worth the effort," concluded Cowsert.

Spec. 4 Mark Dowler, 121st Avn Co. receives his flu shot from Spec. 4 Phyllis Campbell of the 546th Med. Co. shot team. Spec. Bernard Hayward (R) gives Dowler a slip of paper with the time he can leave the observation area. Each person receiving the shot had to wait 30 minutes to see if they would have any adverse side effects from the vaccine. (U.S. Army

546th gives Fort Benning a 'shot in the arm'

By Larry Weese

The 546th Med Co (Clearing), 34th Med Bn, commanded by Capt. Barry Williams, was recently tasked by Martin Army Hospital with the job of giving this year's influenza shots to military personnel and their dependents on Fort Benning. The only exception in their responsibility is those assigned to the 197th Infantry Brigade and the ITB.

Under the supervision of 2nd Lt. Kathlyn Campbell and Sgt. 1st Class Harold McGee, the nine member shot team began the monumental task of giving personnel on main post Fort Benning their required .5 cc of flu vaccine on November 7. "As of this date, the team has given more than 5,000 injections to service members alone, and we expect that at least that many civilians and dependents will take advantage of this opportunity to receive the flu vaccine," said Campbell.

She went on to state, "It is particularly important that people under the age of 26 be given the injection because the types of viruses this vaccine guards against have not shown in the recent past and their bodies may not have any natural immunization from them."

The shot team uses the painless hypodermic injection apparatus better known to those of us with our sleeves rolled up as the "air gun," therefore people who fear needles have nothing to worry about.

Some of the training required for everyone involved in giving the shots include instruction in Cardio Pulmonary Resuscitation (CPR), administering adrenalin injections and treatment of shock in the event someone receiving the flu shots suffered any type of reaction to it.

The members of the shot team are in addition to Campbell and McGee, Spec. 5 Carolyn McClusky, Spec. 5 James Williams, Spec. 5 Bernard Hayward, Spec. 4 Bernard Allen, Spec. 4 Earl Phillips, Spec. 4 Phyllis Campbell, Spec. 4 Ralph Ogden, Spec. 4 Edmond LaBelle, Pfc. Cheryl McIntyre, and PFC. Linford Gayle.

Benning troops participate in parades

Fort Benning personnel supported both the Phenix City and Columbus Christmas parades this past week.

On Dec. 2, the 283rd Army Band, a color guard from the 34th Med Bn and the Explorer Post 76 Colonial Band participated in the Phenix City parade.

In Columbus on Dec. 7, joining the more than 50 entries were floats from the 197th Inf Bde, 36th Engr Gp and Explorer Post 76. The 34th's color guard appeared again as did the 283rd Army Band and the Colonial Band.

The parade began with the lighting of the two Christmas trees at the Government Center (facing 10th Street). Before the parade began, the Central High School Glee Club sang a variety of Christmas carols from the balcony of the Springer Opera House.

Christmas Tea

The Health Services Command Activity Officers Wives Club will hold a Christmas tea on Dec. 13, from 1 to 3 p.m., at 507 Baltzell Ave. A Norwegian gingerbread house demonstration will be shown and recipes given. All Health Service wives and retired medical and dental members are cordially invited to attend. For further information, call 561-2991.

Duplicate Bridge

Duplicate Bridge is offered every Thursday at 12:30 p.m. at the Officers Club. Please come — we need players. Call Bea Serff, 689-6087.

Talent Tree

Don't forget that The Talent Tree will be open Saturday, Dec. 9, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

NCOWC Christmas Ball

The NCOWC began celebrating the Christmas season with a Christmas Ball on Dec. 2 at the Forever Forward Lodge. The lodge was beautifully decorated by Mesdames, Ann Cogar, Lois Cameron, Barbara Howard, Betty Daley, Rowena Cherry, and Lillian Sullivan. A fire blazed in the fire place and made dining and dancing cozy. The evening began with cocktails at 7:30, followed by a buffet dinner. Foxie 105 Disco provided the music for the evening. Honored guests were, CSM and Mrs. Vincent Roeigers, Rev. and Mrs. Richard Ward and Huey and Jeanette Walker. Hostesses were, Mesdames Eleanor Scott, Joanne Thomas, Virginia Giles, Ruby Johnson, Gloria Dunlap, Frances Williams, and C. Little.

NCOWC Nursing Home Party

Nov. 27, the NCOWC sponsored their monthly birthday party at Muscogee Manor Nursing Home. Each one, celebrating a birthday, received a gift chosen especially for them. On hand to assist Welfare and Service Chairman, Mrs. Luise Paulshock serve cake and punch to manor residents were, Mrs. Lois Cameron, Mrs. Sue Patrick and Mrs. Shigeko Brown.

NCOWC Calendar

Dec. 11 — Ceramic Shop Meeting 7:30 p.m.

Dec. 13 — MAH Coffee Call 9 a.m.

Dec. 16 — NCOW Wives and husbands "pot luck" supper 7 p.m. NCOWC lounge.

Dec. 17 — NCOWC Childrens Christmas Party 2 p.m.

NCOWC Makes Donation

The ladies of the NCOWC have donated $400 to the piano fund at West Central Georgia Regional Hospital. Mrs. Luise Paulshock, welfare service chairperson, presented the contribution to Mrs. Barbara Pound, Volunteer Resources Coordinator.

The fund has been established to purchase a new piano for the Music Therapy Department at the psychiatric hospital in Columbus.

Finance Section relocates

The Finance Travel Section has moved from Bldg. 85 to 89 making room for the Trainee Finance and Accounting Branch from the 1st Infantry Training Brigade.

According to Maj. Neville Holder, executive officer of the Finance and Accounting Branch, the Brigade branch will consolidate with the Main Post branch Dec. 11 to allow the same mission to be accomplished with fewer people.

He added that a team will remain at the Brigade to handle finance actions, but records will be maintained on Main Post.

Santa Claus, alias Pfc. Richard McDonald, Co A, Committee Gp, assists Bena Sue Livsey, honorary chairman of the Officers Wives Club (OWC) cut the ribbon to the annual OWC Christmas Bazaar. Funds raised by the event are used to provide college scholarships to military dependents.

Chaplain promoted

By Joyce Walker

The post chaplain was promoted to the rank of colonel by Brig. Gen. John E. Rogers, assistant commandant, during a ceremony held in Bldg 4 at 10 a.m., Dec. 1.

Chaplain (Col.) Charles J. McDonnell has been Benning's chaplain since July 1978. He came here from the Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC) at Fort Monroe, Va., where he was the assistant to the TRADOC chaplain working in Army-wide ministries.

Chaplain (Col.) McDonnell

As post chaplain, McDonnell advises the general on the post population's spiritual needs, celebrates mass and administers a religious program for the military congregation.

A native of Brooklyn, the Roman Catholic priest has served in the Army chaplaincy for 13 years. During that time, he has served as assistant corps chaplain to I Corps, in Korea; division chaplain to 3rd Infantry Division in Wurzburg, Germany, and Community Chaplain, V Corps, 3rd Infantry Division, Nurnberg Military Community in Germany.

Passing in Review

As Co. A, 4th Bn. and Co. E, 7th Bn., 1st ITB graduated from OSUT, the crowd swarmed out of the stands. "This is the first time at Weatherby Field for ITB's visiting families to stand on the field line as the soldiers passed in review," said 1st ITB Cmd. Sgt. Maj. Virgil R. Greene.

'Exodus 78'

Soldiers hit Christmas trails

By Seth Hamilton

Thousands of Army personnel will be leaving Benning for the holidays, to spend time with their families and friends throughout the country. Almost 5000 soldiers of the 1st Infantry Training Brigade (ITB) will be departing Benning Dec. 20-21. To organize the mass movement of these troops in that short period of time, the Transportation Division, Directorate of Indstrual Operations, has developed "Exodus 78."

The Transportation Division has been planning "Exodus 78" since June of this year. "Exodus 78" is a complex plan of action to insure the orderly departure and return of the 1st ITB soldiers.

According to plans, 1st IB soldiers will be shuttled via military bus from their battalions to a central gathering point located in Harmony Church at the clover leaf drive. Troops will arrive there in timed intervals to avoid a traffic jam. From there, the troops will depart by commercial transportation.

Almost 5000 soldiers will pass through the departure area on Dec. 21-22. The Transportation Dvision has taken every precaution to make sure that things run smoothly. They have set up a communications network using two-way radios with the central gathering point serving as headquarters for the entire project. A radio will be set up in each battalion of the ITB so they will be in constant communication with headquarters.

When the soldiers arrive at Harmony Church, they will be ushered aboard the correct buses or taxis and depart for airports in Columbus and Atlanta. Those living within 500 miles will take Grehound or Trailways buses directly to

CFC Message

TO CFC 1979: Participants:

The Tri-Community Combined Federal Campaign for 1979 has been the most successful ever. As a result of the enthusiastic participation by personnel at Fort Benning and employees of other federal offices in the tri-community area, 142% of this year's objective of $300,000 was achieved with total contributions exceeding $426,000!!

The concern for others demonstrated by both military and civilian personnel of Fort Benning is in keeping with a true American tradition. The 46 agencies assisted by this fund drive will receive direct benefit from your contributions which are so vital to continuation of humanitarian programs in our community.

We should all be proud of our campaign achievement and deeply grateful for the unselfish generosity of those who gave! Project officers, key-persons and campaign volunteers throughout the tri-comminity area who contributed to the success of this fund drive are especially commended.

Please accept my congratulations and appreciation for your exemplary support of this most worthy endeavor!

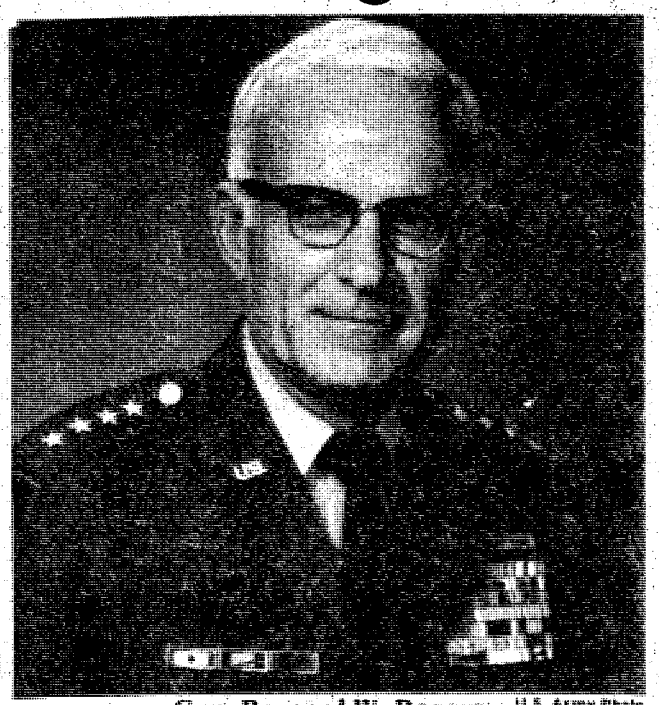
Gen. Rogers to visit Benning



Gen. Bernard W. Rogers U.S. Army Photo

Gen. Bernard W. Rogers, Army Chief of Staff, will visit Fort Benning Sunday and Monday to observe training in the 1st Infantry Training Brigade (ITB) the Infantry Officers' Basic Course (IOBC), and the 197th Infantry Brigade.

Rogers, who will be accompanied by his wife, will meet with Fort Benning Commander Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey, Monday morning. He will then travel by helicopter to the ITB, getting an overview of Brigade Operations at Sand Hill.

During the day he will observe such training as tactical live fire, anti-armor, squad live fire, combined arms team in the attack, machine gun qualification, and an IOBC Mortar Field Training Exercise.

Rogers will depart Fort Benning Monday afternoon.

Rangers to play Santa

Ranger wrap up

One of Santa's elves, Sgt. James A. Hampton, busily wraps presents for the Omaha Project's up-coming Christmas party.

By Pat Jones

A group of soldiers on Kelley Hill are planning to make it a happier Christmas for students of the Stewart Quitman Chattahoochee Training Center in Omaha, Ga.

The men of Co. B (Rangers) 1st Bn, 29th Inf, The School Brigade will hold a Christmas party for the students Tuesday. The affair will be held at the Center, according to the company commander, Capt. Ronald W. Pamperl. "I'm very positive about it and everyone is willing to help -' said 1st Lt. Eugene Payton, project officer. "We have even had some of the wives volunteer to bake cakes and cookies for the party."

The festivities will take most of the day and gifts will be given to the students by Santa Claus, portrayed by Pvt. 2 William Handley. Participation for the party is strictly on a voluntary basis.

Co-B became involved in the Christmas party through a program the 1/29th "Pioneers" sponsor. The program is named the Omaha Project after the town where the Center is located.

The project was established several years ago and companies from the battalion do general maintenance at the Center on a rotating basis and sometimes bring students to Fort Benning for demonstration of Army activities. "I've been there several times," commented Sgt. Roger Oslizly, "and after going once, you want to keep going back."

Holiday message

During the holiday period, many more of you will be on the roads than during other times of the year. Unhappily, excessive highway traffic fatalities traditionally occur during this period. You have a great responsibility to yourself, your loved ones and others to drive in a safe manner, to obey all traffic laws and to share the highway safely with all who use it.

Naturally there will be celebrating. Having a friendly social drink is one American custom that never seems to change. It is a rewarding few minutes that people share together. During this season I urge those who don't drink and those who drink in a non-abusive manner to help abusers by not contributing to their drinking problems and assuming a responsible role in reducing the adverse results normally caused by over-indulgence.

Make this holiday season a happy time for you and your family. Make it a safe one. Drive safely and return in good health.

Christmas programs scheduled

By Joyce Walker

Santa Claus, carol singers, festive parties and candlelight services highlight the post's Community Life Centers' scheduled Christmas specials.

Custer Terrace

Santa will arrive by fire truck at the Custer Terrace Community Life Center noon tomorrow. He will visit with the children until 1 p.m., then, a pinada stuffed with prizes, will be set up for the four and five year olds. Refreshments will be served. The festivities are scheduled to conclude at 2 p.m.

Lavoie

The Lavoie Community Life Center will host a Christmas party for three to four year olds in their Tiny Tot Activity program from 9 - 11 a.m. today. Jolly St. Nick will make an apperance and pass out stockings stuffed with goodies to the youngsters.

McGraw Manor

Residents of McGraw Manor will be entertained by Christmas carolers Dec. 22 at 7 p.m. Four groups of carolers will walk through the area for an hour singing all the traditional Christmas songs, then return to the center where Santa will be waiting for the children. Hot chocolate and other refreshments will be served.

On Christmas eve, a candlelight service will be held in the McBride School auditorium at 5 p.m. for the McGraw Manor residents.

Wishes come true

By Seth Hamilton

The oldest boy in a family of six whose father is stationed in Germany is hoping for a basketball for Christmas.

A family of nine whose father is stationed in Germany needs new coats for Christmas.

The oldest girl in a family of four is wishing for a radio from Santa.

Thanks to the Army Community Service's (ACS) Save a Toy drive, these people and many more will have their wishes come true on Christmas morning. The ACS has been collecting toys for the past couple of months to distribute to needy military families who might otherwise not be able to afford a Christmas.

According to ACS volunteer Donna Cline, the donations of useable toys, records, jewelry and clothing have been coming in from all over post in great amounts. "People have been very generous bringing us lots of new and used toys."

The ACS would like to thank the 34th Med Bn (Equipment Maintenance) for their assistance in repairing the toys that came in slightly damaged. The ACS would also like to acknowledge the help of volunteers Brenda Saze, Cathy Gray, Anne Palmer, Dixie Kochendarfer and Sue Briggs. These ladies volunteered their time to help organize the small mountain of donated toys.

Half day schedule begins next week out of Atlanta will use commercial buses and a limousine service to get there.

Transportation assistants and drill sergeants wearing red arm bands will be stationed at the airports to assist soldiers. More than 15,000 troops from area installations are expected to pass through the Atlanta airport during the two-day period.

"Exodus 78" will also cover the return of Fort Benning personnel. The Exodus project only coordinates the departure and return of the 1st ITB soldiers. But since most people will be returning at approximately the same time, transportation assistants at the airports will help permenant party soldiers returning to Benning as well as others going to various installations throughout the south. Troops from the ITB are scheduled to return between Jan. 1-4.

According to transportation assistant Jerry Newman, everyone involved from the Transportation Division has had experience in similar projects in the past. Severl things have been scheduled to prevent any mishaps. A car equipped with a two-way radio will drive back and forth to Columbus Airport during the departure days to report on traffic and weather condtions. A wrecker will be on duty as well as extra buses in the event of a bus breaking down. Military Police are setting up roadblocks on portions of First Division Road and Cusseta Highway in the vicinity of the central gathering point during the departure dates to cut off any unnecessary traffic.

"Exodus 78" has been months in planning, but will take place in just a few days. The people at the Transportation Division have taken every precaution, including a dry run practice of the departure, so that thousands of soldiers won't have to worry about getting home on time. And people getting together with their families is that Christmas is all about.

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room - and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 100 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

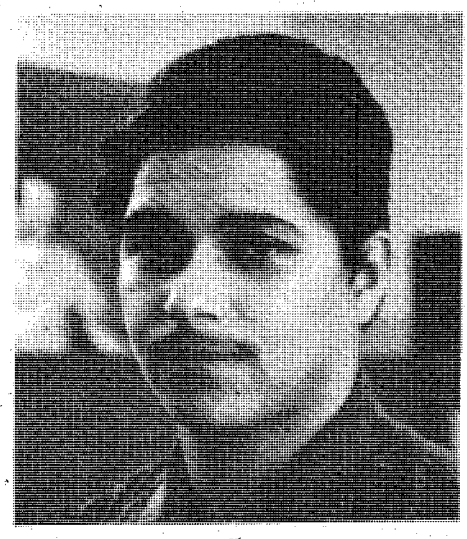
Glad you asked

Is there any particular Christmas memory that stands out in your mind?



Pvt. Enrique Hernandez, Co C, 43d. Engr. Bn.

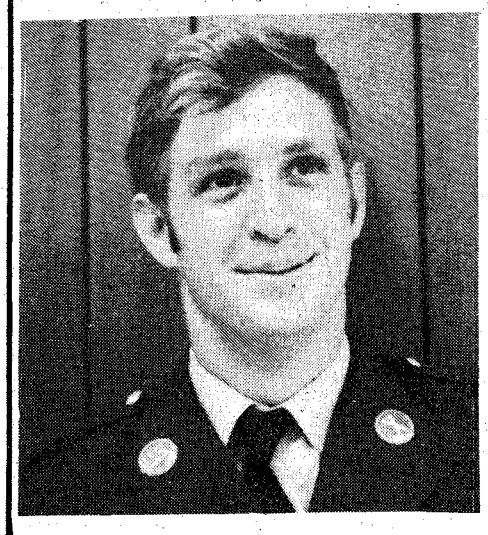
My most outstanding Christmas memory happened after joining the Army and attending basic training at Ft. Leonard Wood. While traveling from Ft. Leonard Wood to take my annual Christmas leave, our bus broke down for two hours, we all waited in a small cafeteria in a gas station.

Alicia Urbano, 4th grade, 303-B, 1st Div. Rd.

My greatest memory was in Alaska when my family and I went out and cut down our own tree and decorated it.

Sp4 Donald Ensminger, 498th. Med. Co. (AA)

I spent last Christmas in Saudi Arabia working at a place called the Mission-Inn where they have dance, dinner and other recreation for service members and dependents.



PFC James Stewart, Co A, 1/29th Inf.

As a child a horse-drawn hayride made Christmas memories very dear to me. This year, the Army gave me one present I'll never forget — my ETS.

Letters to the Editor

CB club leaves the air

On December 29, 1978, Ft. Benning's Citizen Band Emergency Assistance Association (CBEAA) will disband. This action has resulted from an apathetic attitude from those who would have benefitted most from this club — the military community and the surrounding community of Ft. Benning.

When I arrived here inApril, 1977, I noticed that many people here were unhappy when they were unable to contact the MP's on CB Channel 9.

Several of us initiated this club, worked hard to get it approved, and worked even harder to keep it going. However, five or six people do not make a club. It seems that CB'ers on Ft. Benning don't understand the need and value of a CB club. I've heard sad and sorry excuses from CB'ers here who do not support this club — everything ranging from paying dues to incompatibility among members.

When I first talked about forming this club in May 1977, I was told by many CB'ers that we couldn't get the constitution approved because there was already a CB club on post..

Those of us who felt the need for this type of club were not discouraged and forged ahead. In February of 1978, we succeeded in obtaining the approval of the constitution and by-laws of the CBEAA. Where are all those people who said it couldn't be done?

The next time someone tries to get help onFt. Benning's Channel 9 and cannot get anyone, he'll have to remember that each and everyone of us shares the blame for it. I sincerely hope that for your own sakes, you realize the need for a club.

It will be too late once you are lying in the hospital unable to move or breathe on your own because no one was out there on Channel 9 to hear your cry for help.

To those few concerned CB'ers who tried to make the CBEAA a success, I can only say "Thank you for a job well done." To those who made no effort, "I can only say "May God help you," because the only club that could is no more.

Political games with pay lessens soldiers' confidence

Soldiering can be a tough life, filled with hazards to life and limb and beset by frequent inconveniences to the soldier and his or her family. But one of the things the United States Army has been notable for is its ability to pay its troops on time, no matter what the circumstances may be. Even in combat the paymaster is on schedule, the family allotments arrive promptly in the bank and the soldier is relieved of the major worry about a reliable income for spouse and children. The Army is proud of this tradition of punctuality and, to the soldier, it has become a hallmark of service in this best of armies.

This is not to say there have never been problems. During the 1930s the depression-ridden Army had many of its people on half pay for a time and there was at least one instance in which it could not meet a monthly payroll — even at reduced rates. But the problem then was not a break down in the system. The Army simply did not have the money to pay its people.

In mid-October, 1978 it happened again, but no depression was involved. This time, in fact, the payroll should have been part of the biggest military spending budget in the history of the nation, driven to this new height by the need to improve defense readiness and by the surge of unrestrained inflation. The whole Defense Department ran out of money because Congress, in acrid disagreement over two secondary issues, ran past the statutory September 30 deadline for completing appropriations for the new fiscal year beginning the next day. On October 1 none of the military services had the money to meet mid-month payrolls. The prospect for young service members was particularly grim as they faced landlords and

Consider safety when shopping for children

Make playing safe this Christmas, advises Gene Holcomb, safety programs coordinator for the Muscogee County Chapter of the American Red Cross.

Holcomb urges parents to shop carefully when buying toys to protect their children from potential danger. Many playthings on the market today can cause harm.

Take lead-based paint for instance. Holcomb cautions shoppers to check to make sure a toy is not covered with this type of paint because of the danger of poison to any child who licks it.

Another important consideration in choosing a plaything is its construction and size. It should be durably constructed and its parts should be large enough so a child cannot swallow it. A safe rule-of-thumb: The toy or its detachable parts should be larger than a child's fist.

Even soft stuffed dolls and animals offer potential hazards if they have button eyes that can be pulled or chewed off and swallowed. Toys also should be examined for wood that can splinter, metal with sharp edges, or plastic that can break.

Electric toys also are dangerous and should be kept in good repair. They should always carry the UL (Electric Underwriters) test label and be used under supervision. An electric train or racing game should have a circuit breaker on the transformer. And a child should be taught the correct way to plug and unplug an electric toy.

Holcomb says, "Try to match the toy to the age, ability and interest of the child. Although consumer groups have sought to bring dangerous toys to the attention of the public, parents still have the primary responsibility for assuring that they are safe."

Infantry conference

The Infantry Conference-1978 that ended yesterday at Fort Benning was well-attended by general officers from U.S. and overseas-based units and agencies.

In attendance were 14 major generals and 11 brigadier generals.

Thirty-four major units were represented, 18 active Army (14 divisions and four separate brigades), 14 National Guard and two Reserve Components.

The conference was held to provide a platform for presentation and discussion of selected systems and subjects of high level interest in the areas of Infantry doctrine, organization, developments and training.

HMRC class graduates

By Joyce Walker

The first Human Resources Management Course (HRMC) designed for commanders, staff officers, senior noncommissioned officers (NCOs) and senior civilian supervisors, was conducted in Brown Hall during the week of Nov. 27 through Dec. 1.

The one-week pilot course graduated its first class of staff officers, senior NCOs and civilian supervisors from every major unit on post Dec. 1 except The School Brigade. Col. Richard W. McKee, deputy post commander, was present during the final review and critique, then handed the graduates their certificates.

Benning's HRMC is sponsored by the USAIC Equal Opportunity Coordinating Office (EOCO), commanded by Maj. Jack Cherry.

Two previous HRMCs have been conducted for drill sergeants of the 1st Infantry Training Brigade, according to Master Sgt. Jimmie Jakes, noncommissioned officer in charge of the Education and Training Branch/EOCO. Jakes, along with Sgt. 1st Class McLeod, Sgt. 1st Class Robert L. Giles and Sgt. Randy Wilson are the primary instructors of the course.

The post's HRMC is aimed at senior personnel with a program set up to improve their knowledge and skills in preventing/resolving human relations problems in their command. This is done by enhancing the student's skill in interpersonal/intergroup communications and conflict intervention techniques.

"We are trying to get human relations back into the chain of command where it belongs," said Jakes. Those eligible must be in the grade of E-8 or above, (E-7 promotable or in the position of E-8), and civilian GS-7, equivalent GS-7 or above. E-5s and above are eligible if on drill sergeant status.

Classes are conducted under what Jakes call a non-threatening atmosphere. As a personal means of better understanding the learnings and experience that took place during the course, students were asked to make journal reports at the beginning of each academic day. In these reports, students logged any significant events that ocurred during the day and night, how he felt about it, what he thought, what he learned, and how he could apply what he learned at his unit.

Course instructors seem to feel that the "reporting of individual learning to the group tends to maximize learning for all, to the extent that a person can learn from the experiences of another."

One of the first graduates of the course, Sgt. 1st Class George Brown of A Co, Hq Cmd, USAIC, felt the course was worthwhile and plans to see to it that eligible members of his company are given the opportunity to attend.

Drill Sergeant Jose Vesquez is also impressed with the course and feels it is very beneficial to drill sergeants. "Before you take the class, you think it's going to be boring," he remarked. "But once you're in class and start communicating with people, you find yourself really enjoying and learning from the experience."

"Uncle Sam needs me."

Irene W Monaghan

SP4 Irene Monaghan is a helicopter mechanic. "I think my job is important. And I enjoy it. You learn a lot in this job. For instance, if you are working in a small space inside a helicopter, you have to have patience. If you don't have it, you learn it. And you learn to be exact. The job is a challenge. I like that. The Army has good opportunities. I always tell my friends to reenlist."

The Army needs people like Irene Monaghan. If you're like she is, you may be surprised to find out how much Uncle Sam needs you.

Keep a good soldier in the Army. Reenlist.

Defense budget: taking the good with the bad

There are several "pluses" for the United States Army in this year's defense budget. There is money for overseas travel by junior enlisted families. There is the first increment of procurement of the best main battle tank in the world and a start toward production of a companion personnel carrier that suits the modern battlefield. There is money to continue subsidies to the commissary system, as well as for construction of more family housing, new hospitals and dental clinics.

There are also "minuses." Funds for military pay reflect an artifically restrained adjustment for inflation that not only fails to meet the actual impact of the loss of buying power but does not even attain the voluntary anti-inflation restraint level President Carter has asked civilian employers to observe. Nothing has been done to revitalize the Selective Service System the Army needs so badly to meet mobilization manpower demands. Another major cut in funds for ammunition procurement further complicates the Army's drive to improve combat readiness. Whether the small increase in money available for reserve component enlistment and reenlistment incentives will be effective remains to be seen.

Actually, budgets other than the Army's own will have a big impact on its ability to do its job. The Selective Service budget, for example, is independent of the military services. The severe cut in CRAF aircraft conversion funds, part of the Air Force budget, hurts the Army. Shrinkage of the Navy's combat capability, particularly in the antisubmarine and amphibious warfare areas, also impacts negatively on the Army.

The Army's budget has been increasing since FY 1976 but the steepness of the rising curve depends on whether inflation is taken into consideration. A chart of current dollars spent to support the Army shows a steep rise since 1976. On a chart showing constant dollars (adjusted for inflation) the rise is much smaller. This means just one thing — the Army and the taxpayers are getting less value for their dollars because of the increasingly deep inroads of inflation. No simplistic claims of increased support for national defense, based entirely on the number of dollars involved, can be believed.

The Armed Services are doing little more than marking time while the dust devils of an approaching storm swirl across the parade ground.

The above summarizes AUSA's latest fact sheet, "Final Action on the Fiscal Year 1979 Defense Budget, More Money for not much more Defense" which were distributed to post units this month.

Copies may be obtained from the post Public Affairs Office, Room 604, Bldg 4.

During this holiday season, we extend to each member of the United States Army our personal greetings and best wishes.

As we pause to reflect on this year's events and achievements and consider our hopes and aspirations for the coming year, we take deep pride in the service, sacrifice and devotion that each of you has given in the cause of peace and freedom. Your unselfish devotion to duty has earned the respect and gratitude of all people who seek a world free of human and social injustices.

May each of you and your families have a holiday season filled with joy and a new year of good health and happiness.

New overbooking rules ease involuntary bumping

The Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) released its new overbooking rules designed to minimize the practice of bumping passengers involuntarily. CAB has declined to prohibit overbooking altogether. It maintains that the practice provides tangible benefits to passengers by filling seats which otherwise would be left empty by no-shows and late cancellations and thereby keeps airline fares down and permits more travelers to get a seat on the flight on their choice.

Under the new rules before anyone may be bumped against his/her will, the airlines must seek volunteers who will agree to be bumped in return for a payment by the airlines. If there are too few volunteers, carriers may involuntarily bump passengers according to a priority seating plan approved by the CAB and made available at ticket counters.

Personnel involuntarily bumped will receive more compensation— the full value of their ticket coupons to their destination or first stopover (with a minimum of $37.50 maximum of $200). Should an airline fail to provide bumped passenger to destination within two hours of originally scheduled arrival time, the airline would have to double the monetary compensation to the passenger (minimum $75, maximum $400.

Under current rules, denied boarding compensation, ranging from $25 to $200 is payable only to bumped passengers who have not been rerouted within two hours.

In case of official travel, members will insure that checks issued by the carriers as denied boarding compensation are made payable to the Treasurer of the United States and forwarded to the Transportation Office with a copy of travel orders for credit to the applicable fiscal accounting classification. This applies whether air transportation is procured by Government Transportation Request, cash, or credit card.

Disabled veterans get compensation pay hikes

Checks reflecting a 7.3 percent increase in Veterans Administration compensation payments have already been sent to over 636,000 Georgia veterans and dependents of deceased veterans, according to Atlanta VA Regional Office Director Ralph White.

The increases in compensation benefits were authorized by Congress shortly before it adjourned earlier this month and were signed into law by President Carter Oct. 18. The payments are retroactive to Oct. 1.

Compensation payments are made to veterans with service-connected disabilities, while Dependency and Indemnity Compensation benefits are paid to spouses and children of veterans who died from service-connected causes.

The legislation, known as "The Veterans Disability Compensation and Survivors Benefits Act of 1978," also provides:

- A 7.3 percent increase in the allowance paid disabled veterans whose artificial limbs cause excessive clothing wear. The former allowance was $203 per year. The new allowance is $218.
- A special $900 monthly allowance to enable certain seriously disabled veterans to employ a skilled health care practitioner whose aid and attendance in the home is demonstrably necessary to keep the veteran out of a hospital.
- An additional monthly payment of $175 for veterans who suffered the service-connected loss of one extremity or its use, and have subsequently lost the paired extremity from nonservice-connected causes.
- A new payment of $45 per month for surviving spouses receiving DIC payments who are so disabled as to be confined to their homes.
- A broadening of the eligibility base for allowances paid dependents of veterans with service-connected disabilities. Previously, dependents of veterans with 50 percent disability were eligible, but the new law provides allowances for dependents of veterans with 30 percent disability.

Increases were also made in the basic burial allowance from $250 to $300. The allowance that can be paid to survivors of veterans who die from service-connected causes has also been increased. The new rate is $1,100 up from $800.

The automobile allowance paid on a one-time basis to severly disabled veterans requiring specially adapted cars was increased from $3,300 to $3,800.

Legal Briefs

The Georgia law which carries a stiff penalty for driving under the influence (DUI) of alcohol answers the natural question: at what point are you legally drunk?

To begin with, if you are swerving from lane to lane on the highway and the local constabulary sees you, chances are good that you'll be pulled over. But even if you're cold sober, you are still subject to a routine check by Columbus or military police.

It doesn't matter if you have the smell of booze on your breath or not, or if you can function normally in every way. In determining whether or not you are "legally drunk," a blood/alcohol test is given. If the alcohol content in your blood is in excess of one tenth of one per cent. (.10%), then you are drunk — simple as that. And one DUI conviction is all that's needed to cost you your driving privileges for a year.

To put this .10% in better perspective, let's examine some figures that will allow your blood/alcohol content to stay within the legal limit based on 86 proof liquor:

If you weight 150 pounds, you cannot drink more than four ounces of alcohol in the first hour and still be legally sober; 160 pounds — 4½ oz; 180 pounds — 5 oz; 200 pounds — 5½ oz. At those levels, the amount of alcohol in your blood will not exceed .10%. If you are a beer drinker, merely substitute 12 ounces of beer for one ounce of hard liquor to stay within the legal limit.

Another point to consider is that the average human liver can dispose of about one ounce of alcohol per hour. Therefore if you drink the above limits in your first hour of partying, you can only have one ounce of alcohol (or one can of beer) in each subsequent hour.

If the thought of losing your driving privileges for a year worries you, and the blood/alcohol content percentages confuse you, there is a solution. Don't drink if you're going to drive.

installment loan payments with little or no cash reserves. Some military-oriented banks made deposits out of their own funds to cover accounts awaiting military allotment checks.

Of course the story has a satisfactory, if not happy ending as the House and Senate relaxed their obstinacy long enough to pass a defense appropriations bill on October 12 which was signed into law by the President the next day. Detailed planning by the military departments made it possible to get money into the hands of the troops almost on schedule.

But the twelve days that the outcome swung in balance gave those troops time to think about Congressional pledges of concern for their welfare and to wonder about their sincerity. If something as basic as their hard-earned pay could be put in jeopardy by a peripheral argument, they wondered, could they really depend on the Congress that is constitutionally charged "to raise and support an Army?"

A soldier does not need this kind of uncertainty. His faith in his leaders must be unchallengeable.

If you're going to drink--don't drive

December marks the beginning of the winter holiday season — for many, a season of companionship, parties, and good cheer. All too often, however, the good cheer that is enjoyed at a friend's home sets the stage for tragedy on the highway. Half of all traffic fatalities are alcohol-related. That makes alcohol the largest single contributing factor in the traffic death picture.

Ideally, motorists who have to drive should not drink and motorists who intend to drink should not plan to drive. Realistically, however, we know that many motorists will drink and drive. Consequently, the most realistic defense motorists can take against alcohol-related traffic accidents is to understand what alcohol is and what effect it has on them.

Alcohol is a drug that affects the central nervous system. Although its' exhilarating effect leads many users to believe it is a stimulant, it is actually a depressant that acts much like an anesthetic to slow the body's reactions and dull the user's thought processes. The dulling effect causes many drinkers to forsake their normal caution, thus giving many drivers a false sense of confidence behind the wheel.

The percentage of alcohol in the blood determines the degree of loss of control and imparement of normal behavior. In most states, a driver is presumed to be intoxicated when his blood contains .10% or more alcohol. To reach that level, most of us would have to drink five or six ounces of 90 proof liquor in an hour. But actually, driving ability starts to suffer and the driver's chance of having an accident greatly increases well before the legal limit is reached.

Traffic statistics show increased accident probability at .04% alcohol content in the blood. For most drivers, that percentage would represent 1½ to 2½ drinks in an hour. By the time a driver reaches the legal limit she/he is at least six times as likely to have an accident as when she/he was sober.

Alcohol is eliminated from the body at a rate of approximately .018% an hour. That means the body can get rid of the alcohol contained in an average drink in about one hour. Therefore a driver should wait one hour after drinking for every drink she/he takes before sliding behind the wheel.

Another important factor in staying sober has to do with eating a hearty meal before drinking. It's a fallacy to think that you can have a few drinks then sit down to a big meal and get up without feeling any effects of the alcohol. By the time you sit down to dinner, the alcohol will already have been absorbed into your bloodstream. But if you eat before you start drinking, the food in your stomach will absorb the alcohol which will be released more slowly into your bloodstream as the food is digested.

Once you have become intoxicated, there is no quick remedy to sober up. Black coffee, cold showers, and fresh air won't help — they'll only make you a more wide awake drunk. The only way you can guarantee that you'll be able to drive home safely is to take precautions to keep from becoming intoxicated in the first place. Either plan not to drink, or eat before you drink and space your drinks to be sure you won't be under the influence of alcohol when you must drive.

Have your valuables marked

One of the most pressing problems facing the Military Police and other law enforcement agencies today is the identification of stolen property. A large percentage of stolen property is never recovered and the individual(s) responsible for the theft is not apprehended, due to the victim being unable to positively identify the stolen property.

Operation Identification, a part of the Provost Marshal Crime Prevention Program, is a method in which an individual's property is marked with an engraver using the social security number as the identifying mark.

Operation Identification is effective, it makes stolen property easy to identify and makes it difficult for a criminal to dispose of. When the perpetrator is caught with this marked property in his possession it becomes solid evidence of possession of stolen property. Operation Identification assists Law Enforcement in contacting you when property is recovered and plays an important part in the speedy return of your property.

The Military Police Crime Prevention Section will mark your Christmas gift items at the entrance to the Main Post Exchange every Friday — Sunday until Christmas.

'Getting the job done'

If size has anything to do with success, ambition or getting the job done, petite Spec. 5 Christine Wright would need a giant step to keep up. But ability and intelligence are measured by quality and experience — not size (and in these respects Wright has no trouble keeping up).

Following basic training at Fort McClellan, Ala. and two nine-week training sessions in electronics at Forts Jackson, S.C. and Gordon, Ga., Wright was assigned to the 478th Trans Co., 34th Med Bn at Fort Benning as a member of avionics personnel.

Spec 5 Wright tests, inspects, repairs and operates aircraft radio equipment. Her present responsibility is with the Sky Crane Ch-54 helicopter.

Most of her work takes place on the ground. All radios are required to be checked at various hours of flight time ranging from 200 to 1,000 hours. She removes the radios requiring testing and makes any necessary repairs. She does not fly often but when she does, she is classified as a Technical Observation Specialist.

She also has two other jobs on the post — one as alternate battalion mail clerk and another as supervisor of the arms room.

The arms room not only involves security of weapons when not in use, but also keeping them cleaned, oiled, and in proper working order.

She is on call as a mail clerk alternate and always knows that on paydays and holidays, she will be working in this postion. She sorts mail, picks up accountables and distributes the mail to different unit mail clerks.

Her reasons for expanding into other jobs are very sound. The more she knows, the better chance she will have to qualify for a selection of career opportunities when she completes her education.

"With each promotion comes more responsibility, and just the experience of working with different people is great," she said. "Everything meshes with something else and the idea is really all the same. After all, I came into the Army to learn as much as I can about people and to further my education and to travel."

Career preparation became important to this New York City native when the state discontinued the open-enrollment, tuition-free plan at City University of New York and she had to deal with the economics of an education.

Now Wright is working toward an associate degree in recreation through the Columbus College, Fort Benning Center, during evenings and free time. Originally, she began studies as a physical education major to become a teacher; however, because of reduced career flexibility, she moved into recreation which provides a much wider scope of job selection.

She enjoys ping pong, tennis, racketball and ice skating. She was a member of the championship battalion volleyball team in 1977, a member of the Fort Gordon girl's basketball team in 1975, has completed 300 miles in the Run-For-Your-Life program at Fort Benning, and was the only woman on the company's softball team last year.

Spanish service conducted

A Catholic Mass is celebrated in Spanish each Sunday, at 1 p.m. at the 1st Infantry Brigade Chapel. Chaplain (Maj.) Daniel Kennedy, who conducts the Mass, prepared for this assignment by taking an abbreviated 10-week course in Spanish at the Defense Language Institute in Monterey, Calif.

The Hispanic program was initiated two years ago for the benefit of Spanish-speaking soldiers and their dependents.

The Spanish community extends a warm welcome to any Spanish-speaking person in the local area to join them at the Spanish Mass.

Nineteen-year-old Pvt. 1 Donald Tilson graduated from Fort Benning's Airborne School Dec. 7 with four months total Army time. His next assignment will be with the 509th Abn in Italy.

His two Ranger brothers, Sgt. Michael and Staff Sgt. Edward Tilson, took time out from their 2nd Ranger Co assignment at Dahlonega, Ga. to make Donald's final jump with him.

Edward is 32 and has 13 years in the Army. Michael, 22, has served three years and seven months. At home is Gery, 14, and Jerry, 12. Edward and Michael plan to make the Army a career. Donald's not sure yet but thinks he will and the other two have a while to decide.

ITB organizes choir

During each training cycle, a choir is organized from the soldiers assigned to the 2nd Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade.

Band instruments include a guitar, tamborine, horn and whatever else the soldiers can get their hands on for the programs in which they play.

Troops are chosen by replies received from the Sunday bulletin and chaplain's cycle orientation.

Last cycle, the "Joyful Noise" choir sang and played instruments for th 1st Baptist Church in Columbus during "Operations Appreciation." On Saturday night, soldiers from other battalions will visit the downtown church and the "Joyful Noise" will play and sing for them as part of the service.

The choir was organized about a year ago. Some of the participating soldiers had never attended church, but afterwards, many said they really liked it and think they will continue to attend.

"It's a lot of work, but a lot of fun too," stated Spec. 5 Ronnie Tompkins, director of the "Joyful Noise" choir.

7,000 attend veteran benefits 'Supermarket'

Some 7,000 persons showed up at Columbus Municipal Auditorium Thursday to take advantage of a one-day program of information and service pertaining to benefits for veterans. The day-long event, popularly known as a "Supermarket of Veterans Benefits," was staged by the Georgia Department of Veterans Service and the Veterans Administration, and featured some 25 state, federal and local agencies.

In a joint statement, Georgia Commissioner of Veterans Affairs Pete Wheeler and Atlanta VA Regional Office Director Ralph White said, "We are very pleased with the large number of veterans and their dependents who came to us for assistance. Many of these people will be receiving benefits for the first time; and some of them didn't even know they were eligible.

"It is unique that we can assemble so many government agencies in one location at the same time and also file claims right on the spot; more than 3,100 claims were handled here today." Wheeler compared the results of the one-day program to that of an industrybmoving into the area: "In a few weeks," he said, "these people will begin receiving their benefits, and money derived from such benefits generally flows directly into a community ehanching its economic growth."

This year marked the third time that the "supermarket" was held in Columbus, which was the site of the first such program ever held in the nation in 1965. Since that time 14 of the day-long sessions have been conducted in other Georgia cities including Savannah, Albany, Macon, Augusta, Rome and Atlanta. Many other states have also adopted the program which wa originated by the Georgia Department of Veterans Service.

1978 Doughboy review

By Deb Hilgeman and Seth Hamilton

"We may not be winners, but we're certainly not losers."

That is how Doughboy Head Coach Jack Barham summed up the 1978 season during a football awards ceremony last week at Uchee Creek Recreation Center.

At face value, the Doughoys' 4-9 record this year was discouraging. But to judge the team on a win-lose basis does not tell the full story.

After finishing with an 8-1 mark last year, some people thought the Doughboys were winning because of an easy schedule. After playing mostly other Army posts and semi-pro teams, the Doughboys decided to take on a tough 13-game schedule in 1978. The competition this year included 12 games against colleges with established football programs, with four of the teams ranked nationally in the top ten of Division II.

Despite a string of early losses, the Doughboys managed to keep the games close. They never lost by more than three touchdowns and usually by only a few points. After dropping their first eight games, the Doughboys came back to win four of their last five. The comeback was highlighted by a 17-14 last minute victory over the Alabama University junior varsity Hornets in the season finale.

Throughout the season the Doughboys had to operate around many obstacles. Unlike the teams they played, the Doughboys had very limited practice time. During the season they averaged about seven hours a week practice. Even then, many of the team members would be absent because of military duty. Coach Barham noted that due to the limited practice, they had no time to cover the special teams play.

An unavoidable problem that plagued the Doughboys all season was personnel turnover. Coach Barham estimated the turnover to be about 40%. The problem affected the offensive line most which resulted in poor offensive showings in some of the games. Every week the Doughboys had to play teams which were better prepared, and had larger coaching and scouting staffs, but they always managed to play tough.

The Doughboys' defense was their mainstay throughout the season. When the defense would hold, the offense would have trouble putting points on the board. But as the Doughboys got into the season, their offense became more effective and the Doughboys started winning.

Fort Benning is one of the few Army installations to have a post tackle football team and the only post to take on such stiff college level competition. For the Doughboys, 1978 was a learning season. There is no substitute for the experience they gained by playing such a tough schedule. In addition, they may well have established a grueling precedent for other Army posts to try to live up to.

"Being a Doughboy coach has given me an opportunity to come in contact with some of the finest soldiers I've ever met; whether in an Army or football uniform," said Head Coach Jack Barham at the awards ceremony.

Post teacher receives Christmas Seal award

Octopuff, the Georgia Lung Association's costumed symbol, visited McBride Elementary School and presented Linda Fancellas, a kindergarten teacher, with a Christmas Seal scarf.

As the Fort Benning Christmas Seal chairman, Ms. Fancellas had the following to say, "It is fitting that children have designed our Christmas Seals again this year. Many people think lung disease is an affliction only to the elderly. Yet lung disease is as common among children as it is among adults. Thousands of children suffer . . . 29,000 under the age of five alone die in the United States each year from various forms of lung diseases."

Linda Francellas, a kindergarten teacher at McBride Elementary School on post, receives a Christmas Seal scarf.

"In the first seven days of life, 10,000 infants die from respiratory distress syndrome, also known as hyaline membrane disease. It ranks as the number one killer of babies in the United States. The human tragedy is incalculable, the social and economic impact is staggering," Ms. Fancellas revealed.

Lung association research has helped develop new methods to predict which infants are likely to develop this disease and to improve care for those who do. The association is committed to making certain that the 75,000 babies who suffer from hyaline membrane disease each year receive appropriate care. They also want to know why nearly 10,000 children under five die in their cribs each year. Nobody understands how apparently healthy babies die suddenly.

Ms. Fancellas also said, "Asthma is seldom fatal but seven percent of American children below fifteen suffer from it. For them, community health programs are being developed. The other things the Georgia Lung Association is doing to fight lung diseases in children are tedious and undramatic, but necessary, like encouraging more research through grants and fellowships; training doctors and nurses to recognize the problems and to use the latest medical treatment and working with hospitals, medical centers and medical schools so that they provide the best in personnel and treatment."

PX cutting prices for Christmas

Savings signs are very much a part of this year's Christmas shopping season in Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) stores worldwide.

December is the climactic month of the AAFES $6.8 million sales promotional program, which combines with the regularly scheduled sales and seasonal events to save customers money.

Each store has made a special effort to keep customsrs advised in advance of the sales events and holiday shopping opportunities by posting a large calendar showing the merchandise categories and savings available.

Check the calendar of sales events at your exchange retail store for this month's savings of 10 to 25 percent on such items as small appliances, personal care merchandise, giftware, sporting goods, fall and winter clothing and items for the home. Many stores will slash prices on Christmas giftwrap and decorations just before or after Christmas.

The $6.8 million sales promotion program features selected merchandise at reduced prices for periods of one to seven days. All sale items will be determined by store and geographic area, so the best advice is to check with the exchange for the upcoming specials.

2211 FORT BENNING ROAD, COLUMBUS

For some soldiers, Christmas means work

By Joyce Walker

For most of the Fort Benning populace, Christmas will be a day to spend with the family exchanging gifts, visiting friends and enjoying festive feasts. But for some, it will be just another duty or working day.

Troops remaining at Fort Benning during the holiday period have to be fed, so Army cooks will be working that day.

Knowing that she has to work that day, Spec. 4 Christine Armour, a clerk with the 524th Personnel Services Dining Facility, plans to celebrate Christmas the day before with her husband. They will decorate their tree and exchange gifts. The New York native is disappoined that she won't be able to celebrate it with her family and friends.

Also disappointed but able to laugh about it is Deborah Barber, second cook, 524th Dining Facility. "My tree and dog will be sitting at home alone," she jokingly remarked.

Some personnel working on Christmas will be doing it voluntarily.

Karen Campbell and Sheila Haley, Fort Benning telephone operators, volunteered for work in order to give married personnel the time off to be with their families. Both are single and haven't any family in Columbus. Sheila feels that Christmas is for children and those with youngsters can really enjoy it through them.

Military policepersons will be working special 12-hour holiday shifts so that every platoon will get either Christmas or New Year's eve off.

Pvt. Darlene Long, 988th Military Police Company, will be working from 6:30 p.m. until 6:30 the next morning during the holidays. She doesn't really like to travel during the holidays. She'd rather work on Christmas, "otherwise," the native of Oklahoma said, "I'd just be hanging around the company area."

All married military policepersons will be allowed to get off at midnight Christmas eve. When Spec. 4 David McKenzie 988th MP Co. gets off, he will help Santa set everything up under the tree. Living on post with his wife, Jane, daughter, Angela, 8 and son, David 5 McKenzie will be able to enjoy Christmas dinner with them before going back on duty 6:30 that evening.

Firemen work on 24-hour shifts and Christmas is no exception. They probaby won't participate in any training exercises, but they will be on call.

Fort Benning fireman, Alan Vinson has been with the post fire department for 11 years and has always had to work either Christmas eve or day. Usually, his wife, Edna, daughters, Teresa, 13, and Stephanie 6, along with his sons, Corey, 8, and John 7, visit him at the station before going on to a family Christmas dinner.

Fireman Billy Clark's wife, Christinia and son Gary, plan not to start the festivities until he gets home.

Helping hand

Charlotte Measle, dean of students at McClellan High School, Little Rock, Ark., is given a lesson on how to strap on a prachute harness by Staff Sgt. Arnold G. Gonzales, senior parachute pack supervisor. Ms. Measle was one of 19 educators from Little Rock and Shreveport, La. who visited here Dec. 3-6 to gain insight on Army life so as to counsel students on career choices.

CHRISTMAS CHEER

Twas the night before Christmas
And all though the tavern,
Friends greeted each other with,
"What're ya having?"
When from up at the front there came a loud shout,
"Last call for drinks boys, then everyone out!"
Out to their cars the customers stumbled
And keys into locks were nervously fumbled
Then turn on the motor and clash all the gears
And scare the pedestrians out of 10 years.

Turning up Main Street I spotted a dame
I whistled at her, but she called me a name.
Left at the corner and doing all right
When what should appear, but a cop on a bike.

And then in a flash I saw up ahead
The signal had turned from amber to red
Pulled in my head, put my feet on the dash,
And then the street was lit up with one hell of a crash
With scaple and scissors and 98 stitches
They drew me together like father's old britches
The Doc hardly spoke, just went straight to his work;
And then to his nurse, "Get rid of this jerk."

But I didn't get out, cause the copper was there
And carted me off to jail without any care.
And I heard him exclaim as he locked me up tight
"Merry Christmas, you fool, you're through for the night."

Our Goal Is Serving You

3rd Bn, ITB learning center is model facility

By Peter F. Larson

Master Sgt. Lawrence E. Hughes, 3rd Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade, has been instrumental in putting the 3rd Battalion on the map by building a learning center/audio-visual capability that has become well known as a model facility at Fort Benning.

The facility has an individual learning center with an extensive library of Training Extension Course (TEC) tapes, individual booths for Besseler Cue Sees and a multitude of training aids for all subjects taught in One Station Unit Training (OSUT). To conduct this training in the two 220-man classrooms, Hughes accumulated an extensive array of televisions with video-tape machines, 16mm projectors, tape players, overhead projectors and Besseler Cue Sees.

Hughes put together several slide show programs similar to the epic poem, "I Am The Infantry." Currently, he is programming a show based on Gen. Douglas MacArthur's speech, "Duty, Honor, County."

Hughes' first experience in military service was as an Army medic in World War II. He was drafted in May 1943 and saw service in France, Belgium, Luxembourg, Holland and Germany. He attained the rank of technical sergeant 4th grade before being discharged in March 1946.

Hughes entered the Army again in June 1960 as an Infantryman and has had assignments in Germany, Kore, Vietnam and Fort Eustic, Va. He plans to retire in May 1979.

Alexander speaks out on minorities

Secretary of the Army Clifford L. Alexander, says the Federal Government has far too few minority members in its upper grade structure.

He addressed these remarks to the NAACP chapter, Nov. 25, in Washington, D.C., Alexander said the Army has had problems in trying to insure that people in the Army, both military and civilian, are the most highly qualified and are fully reflective of equal opportunity goals.

To increase the minority workforce, the Secretary stressed Army efforts to assess and minimize the effect of reductions in force and realignments on minorities and women.

In addition to minimizing the effect of RIF's, Alexander said the Army had embarked on an "expanded executive search" to seek possible candidates from within the government as well as from the private sector.

After Alexander took office in 1977, he established an innovative internship and fellowship program which has recruited and is training 130 "high-potential" individuals for professional and administrative positions.

Of 334,000 Army employees, 63,000 are minority group members, said Alexander.

Emphasizing the importance of Army civilian employees, Alexander reflected, without them, the Army could not hope to meet requirements to administer policy, train and deploy troops, and acquire and maintain equipment. The civilians mean a better Army — one that is more ready and capable, concluded Alexander. (AR NEWS)

ITB chaplains work as team

Bayonet interview:

Chaplain (Capt.) Henry Steinhilber and (Capt.) Kenneth Leinwand, sixteen-month veterans of the Infantry Training Brigade (ITB), gave the following interview last Wednesday as they were returning from a field visit to One Station Unit Training (OSUT) soldiers at the Malone Complex.

Interviewer: Besides being a chaplain in ITB, I understand that you are also the post rabbi, Chaplain Leinwand. Obviously, the majority of your soldiers are Christian. Does this hinder you in any way?

Chaplain Leinwand: Actually, I tend to think that I am able to bring a unique perspective to the ITB. Although I don't have Sunday morning Christian worship services, I function in the same capacity as my fellow chaplains. Moreover, since we each preach and practice team ministry, all of us can function in this multi-denominational, pluralistic environment in a meaningful and satisfying manner.

Interviewer: Chaplain Steinhilber, how do you view team ministry?

Chaplain S.: I think the Rabbi brings a needed temperance to our chaplain's program at ITB. Sometimes Christians tend to lose sight of their roots, that is, the Jewish background to the New Testament. After all, three quarters of the Bible is the Old Testament. Chaplain Leinwand continually makes us aware of the foundations of our faith.

Interviewer: Chaplain Steinhilber, can you provide some example of team ministry in the ITB.?

Chaplain S.: Certainly! One of the prime examples that Chaplain Leinwand and I have instituted in the brigade is Ecumenical field services especially geared for the OSUT soldier. Sometimes it comes across as a hybrid between two or more traditions. But our soldiers love the services which fulfill a vital spiritual need.

Chaplain L.: Yes, another critical area in which we function as a team is in counseling.

Chaplain (Capt.) Kenneth Leinwand

Together, my colleagues and I share a wealth of counseling expertise, adding up to a fair amount of experience. At our weekly staff meetings, we share complex and difficult counseling issues and receive beneficial insights under the guidance of our brigade chaplain, Chaplain (Maj.) James Rogers.

Chaplain S.: We also pool our resources in the area of programming, homiletics, scholarship, administrative work, and fellowship.

Interviewer: Chaplain Steinhilber: What do you perceive as being the most difficult aspect of your work?

Chaplain S.: As you know, there is a tremendous volume of personnel, both permanent party and OSUT soldiers and our chaplain resources are stretched to the limit. There simply isn't enough to go around in order to adequately cover seven — 1,000 — man battalions, Headquarters and Headquarters Co. (HHC) and Committee Group. We have only seven chaplains, some with other duties and it is frustrating when you cannot provide the desired coverage. You work long hours and you try to do the best you can under the circumstances.

Chaplain L.: I quite agree with Chaplain Steinhilber and would further add that with additional manpower, transportation, and support staff, we could meet the needs of more soldiers in less time but we just don't have the resources to do everything we would like to do. Perhaps in the future, things will change for the better.

Interviewer: In recent weeks, Fort Benning has seen a rash of violent domestic problems. As chaplains who supposedly have a good insight into family disfunctions, how do you explain the recent situations, and what role do you play in helping to handle these crises?

Chaplain S.: We are living in very uncertain times. The economic squeeze is pressing harder and harder; the enlisted soldier and his dependents are feeling the pinch. This may cause minor problems to become major ones in the home. Domestic spats grow to proportions that sometimes lead to violence.

Chaplain L.: Another aspect is that in our extremely materialistic society, there is a tremendous neglect of moral concerns and spiritual values. This is certainly not a fault of the Army; rather, this phenomena has manifested itself for years in the "civilian world." Spiritual bankruptcy is one of the most difficult problems we face. A family that is founded upon a sound spiritual foundation will tend to function normally — even under extremely stressful situations, such as an economic squeeze.

Chaplain S.: If we can work with a family in the early stages of a problem, we can assist them in relieving pressure, tension, and stress before it becomes explosive. We know that there are no pat answers. We do not say, "Read many Bible verses and all will be fine." But, as professionally trained leaders of a religious tradition who also possess strong backgrounds in therapeutic skills, we strive towards workable and realistic solutions within the context of the Army, the individual's religious tradition, and the circumstances of the problem. Thus, we hope to come to some sort of satisfying solution.

Interviewer: How do you find the staff at ITB? Are they supportive of your work?

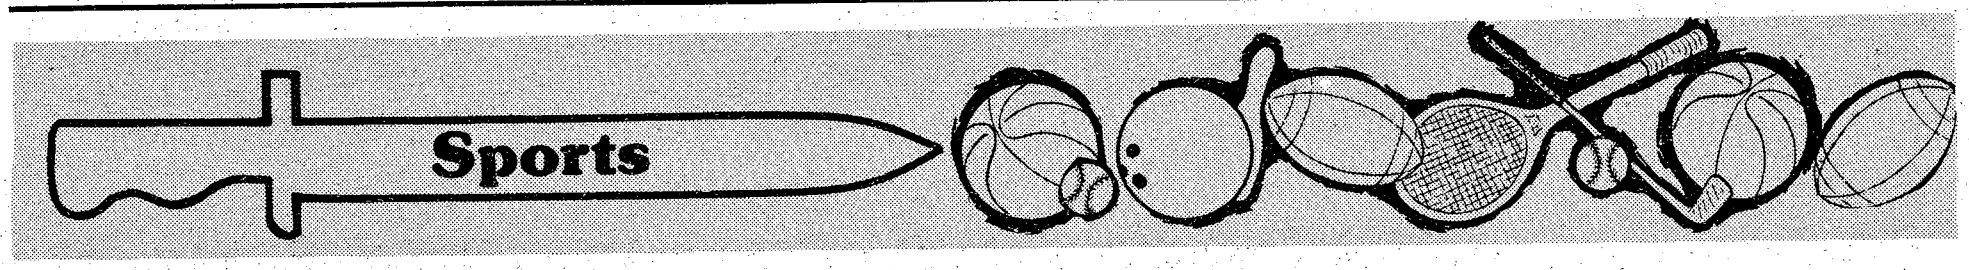
Chaplain L.: First, let me clarify one thing. As clergy in uniform, your question should rather ask, "Are you supportive of the commander and his spirtual program?" And we are, because Col. (Carl) Steiner, (brigade commander), places spiritual soundness among other necessary qualities for the professionally trained Infantryman. Our commander has gone to great lengths to insure that soldiers are provided with every opportunity to meet their spiritual needs. The staff often goes beyond the call of duty to see that these needs are fulfilled.

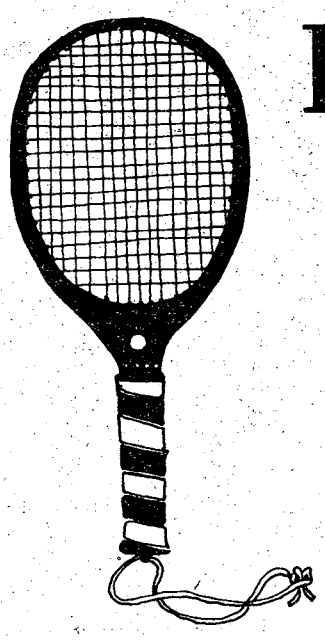
Chaplain Steinhilber and I are extremely proud to serve in a unit where commanders take the religious program seriously. Our hope is that we are able to meet command expectations.

Interviewer: One last question. What is the most rewarding aspect of your work?

Chaplain S.: I think Chaplain Leinwand would agree with me when I say that, when we witness effective change for the better taking place in the life of a soldier, we receive job satisfaction.

Chaplain L.: There is a tremendous amount of satisfaction in knowing that you have instilled something of value in a man, and perhaps helped shape him or motivate him so that he can stand tall on graduation day and go forth to take his place of duty in the ranks of a combat unit anywhere in the world and serve proudly.





Racquetball

Part III: The Serve

By Seth Hamilton and Dave Lawrence

This article will cover what many consider to be the most important part in the game of racquetball — the serve. You might get by with weak strokes or leaky stategies, but not with an ineffective serve. The player with the good serve will invariably come out on top.

The object of the serve is not only to put the ball in play, but also to force a weak return. To 'ace' a player on a serve is to place the shot so well that the opponent can't even get his racquet on the ball. Two good rules to remember when serving are to serve from a central position on the court and to hit the ball to your opponents weak side : if he has a strong forehand, hit to his backhand). You will need to choose three or four serves that you feel comfortable with, because it is best to mix up the serves during the course of a game.

We will discuss four basic serves. These serves, if you do not already use them, can be worth at least five points per game.

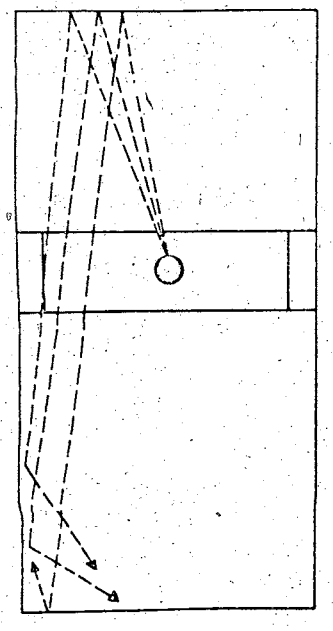


Illustration A

The Drive Serve

For this serve, you stand in center court and drive the ball low to either the left or right rear corner. A good drive serve to the weak side will elicit the weakest return shot of any serve. See illustration A for the correct drive serve path. This could be your best serve so don't give your opponent a chance to get used to it by over using it. This is an ideal serve to use late in the game when the receiver might be fatigued and less able to return a fast serve.

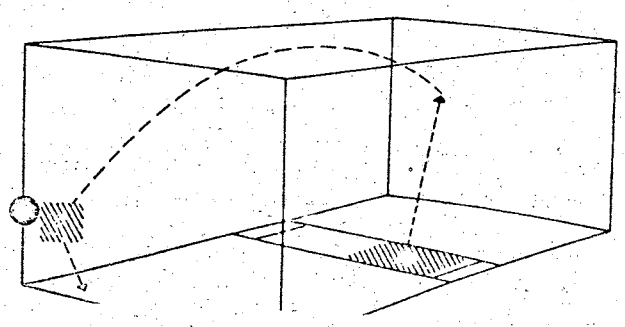

Illustration B

The High Lob Serve

The high lob serve can be very effective and should be used several times in a game as a change of pace. The server stands at center court and lifts (not hits) the ball three feet to the left of center court and three-fourths way up the wall. The ball will float high and deep to the back court, brush the side wall and die on the back wall. Illustration B shows the correct flight of the ball for a high lob serve.

The Z Serve

The Z serve has several variations: high, low, to the forehand and to the backhand. The server stands three to six feet to the left of the service box. Aim for a point one foot from the side wall and four feet up from the floor. By altering the distance from the side wall, you can serve low Z's, high Z's and a run around Z. You should be in a court by yourself to best practice this serve and its different variations. When you perfect this serve, it should be every bit as effective as the low drive. The drawing below (C) illustrates the flight of the Z serve.

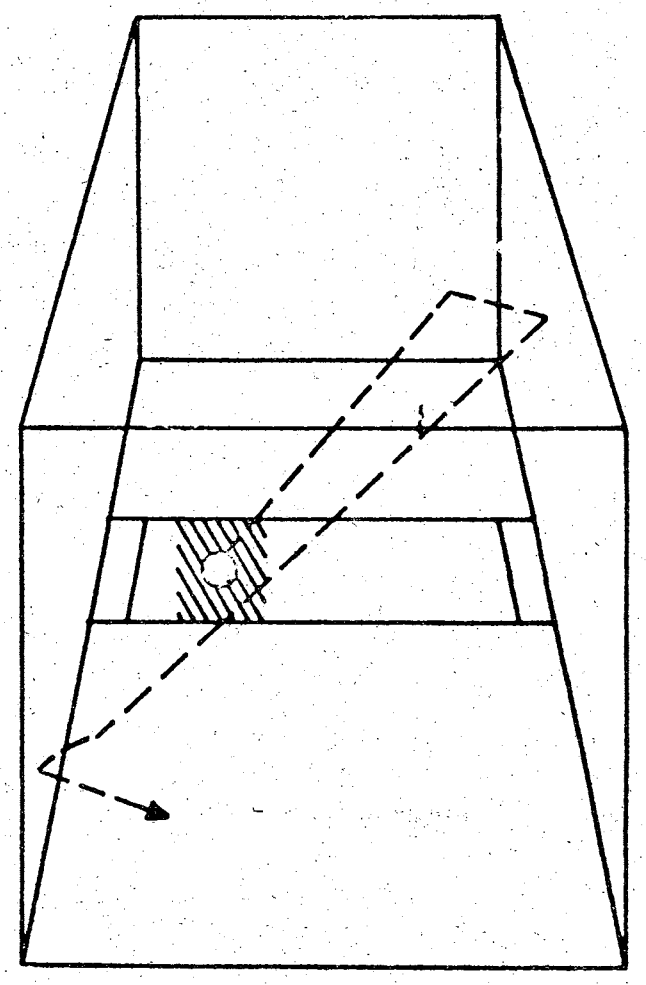

Illustration C

The Garbage Serve

For this serve you bounce the ball chest high and 'push' the ball so that it bounces about five feet behind the short line and high into the back wall. You do not want the shot to hit the side walls. The ball should fall into the back wall.

In conclusion, to serve is to have the advantage. You should deliver each serve with full concentration in the effort to draw a weak return. Good serves allow very fast strong return shots. Two good points to remember are: 1) practice by yourself each serve several times a week. Practice is the only way you'll be able to have these shots do what they are designed to do. 2) Mix up your serves during the game so that your opponent doesn't get into a groove with the returns.

Next week in part four of this series, we'll discuss how to return serves.

USAMU 'goes for the gold' in San Juan, Puerto Rico

By Tommy Pool

U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit members garnered all the gold medals recently during the invitational shooting championships held in San Juan, Puerto Rico Dec. 9-10.

Leading off with the first win was Ernest Vande Zande in the smallbore rifle prone event with 591 points, followed by Karen Monez and Phillip Whitworth at 590. The team of Vande Zande, Whitworth, Lones Wigger and Ronald Plumb easily won the team championship with 2,359 points.

In 50 meter rifle competion, Olympic Champion, Wigger scored 1,153 for a three point win over Vande Zande who finished with 1,150 points. Third place went to this year's winner of two World Championships, Wanda Jewell at 1,143.

U.S. World team member Karen Monez came back to win the final rifle event scoring 382 points to defeat all other competition in the air rifle match. Vande Zande and Linda Baily tied with 380 points with Vande Zande taking second place on the tie breaking procedure.

In other competition, Emil Heugatter took the air pistol title with 386 points afollowed by the current Ladies World Champion Kim Dyer with 376. In center fire competition, Waymond Alvis scored 586 points while Heugatter finished second with 582. This year's National Pistol Champion Charles McCowan came in third one point back at 581. The team of Heugatter, McCowan, Marvin Black and Erich Buljung scored 2,305 points to defeat Mexico at 2,258 and Puerto Rico at 2,190.

In the final competition of the matches. James Reiber won the Running Target Chamioship with 1,123 points scoring 563-560 to win both days of competition. Martin Edmondson finished in second place with 1,116 while Robert Partridge, USMC, placed third at 1,108.

This years championship, which is fired annually, included 90 participants from the United States , Mexico and Puerto Rico.

Vets can look at discharge review index file

Veterans desiring to upgrade less than honorable military discharges can now find brief descriptions of cases similar to their own at the Atlanta Veterans Administration (VA) Regional Office.

According to VA Regional Office Director Ralph White, VA now has copies of decisions in the Defense Department's discharge review index file available for public inspection in 20 cities around the country, including Atlanta.

The index, which up to now has been available only at the Pentagon, provides brief synopses of appeals already filed with military officials.

Those interested in reviewing the discharge review index can visit the Atlanta VA Regional Office Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. or call the office's statewide toll-free phone number, 1-800-282-0232.

Unemployment bennies lost if work o'seas

Soldiers who separate from the Army and take a job overseas will jeopardize their eligibility for unemployemnt compensation when they return to the U.S, according to MILPERCEN officials.

Veterans who have not been employed since leaving the service are usually eligible for unemployment benefits in all states. But an ex-GI who works at an overseas job after leaving the service will lose unemployment eligibility in most, if not all, states, officials said.

Officials pointed out that some soldiers separate in an overseas area and accept employment there. Many expect, officials added, to collect unemployemnt compensation when they return to the U.S. while looking for a new job, only to learn that they do not qualify for benefits.

Legal assistance and state employment offices can provide more specific details on these benefits. (ARNEWS

Some using ID cards to get unauthorized care

By Gerald DuBois

Some dependents, former dependents and ex-soldiers are getting medical care at Army hospitals and clinics that they are not entitled to receive, Health Services Command officials say.

These patients carry expired identification (ID) cards, or they are divorcees or persons otherwise ineligible for military medical care.

"There is some medical care given to unauthorized persons," said Maj. Randall R. Kelley, consultant in patient administration with HSC headquarters. "Exactly how much is not known since most infractions discovered are relatively minor, are handled by the local commander and law enforcement agencies and are not reported to this headquarters."

When an offender is discovered, Kelley said, there is not always enough evidence to decide how much unauthorized care is involved. But some cases uncovered have amounted to thousands of dollars.

One recent case could have cost the command more than $2,300 if it had not been discovered, an official said. Health care costs are currently established at $20 per outpatient visit and $206 a day for inpatient care.

Who are the greatest offenders?

"Divorcees, dependent children over 22 not in school and married dependent children," said Kelley. Divorcees lose their PX, commissary, medical care and other privileges at midnight the day the divorce is final. But many of these people do not surrender their ID cards when their status changes.

Stronger regulations are needed, such as making soldiers responsible for turning in the cards, said Kelley. Much of the unauthorized use of ID cards can be blamed on bad controls, he said. The unauthorized medical care will continue until we have better controls, he added.

Dependent children are frequent offenders. Dependent children older than 22 are not authorized military medical care unless going to school full time and then only until their 23rd birthday. But some who leave college after their 22nd birthday continue to get medical care at military facilities.

"It is difficult to estimate who are the greatest offenders," said Kelley, "but many are married dependent children." Married dependent children regardless of age are required by law to surrender their ID cards when they marry. Many do not turn in their cards, however, and continue to get treatment at military medical facilities.

ID cards are seldom stolen or falsified, said Kelley. The majority of offenders carry ID cards that were issued to them and were once valid.

But even active-duty personnel with valid ID cards sometimes get unauthorized medical care by bringing in children of friends or relatives to military clinics. Children under 10 do not need their own ID card, said Kelley, and it is relatively easy for a military sponsor to get away with bringing in someone else's child.

There are persons getting unauthorized military medical care who do not realize they are committing fraud. Some people forget that they are no longer entitled to military medical care, he added. Others falsely believe they are still entitled to this care.

One recent case uncovered involved a veteran with 100 percent disability who received $5,500 in unauthorized medical care. He should have received his medical care at a Veterans Administration hospital.

The Talent Tree will be open Dec. 16 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

College Mixer

There will be a college mixer at Custer Terrace, Dec. 23, from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. College-age dependents of all post personnel and retirees are invited; house guests and dates are welcome. Drinks and snacks will be available. Come and enjoy the Christmas disco! Please make your reservations by Dec. 20. Call Mrs. Todd Graham, 687-8604 or Mrs. Addison Davis, 689-3715.

NCOWC Nursing Home Party

Muscogee Manor Nursing Home residents celebrating birthdays this month were honored by the NCOWC with a party and gifts on Dec. 4. Cake and punch were served by Welfare and Service Chairwoman, Mrs. Luise Paulskock and Mrs. Lois Cameron.

The NCOWC held their general membership meeting Dec. 6, at their lounge on Lawson field. Mrs. Joanne Thomas, club president, resigned her position at this meeting and Mrs. Pat Wilson, First Vice President was sworn in as the new president.

NCOWC Calendar

Dec. 15 — Muscogee Manor Nursing Home Christmas Party, 2 p.m.

Dec. 16 — Pot luck supper, 7 p.m. NCOWC lounge

Dec. 17 — NCOWS Children's Christmas party, 2 p.m., NCOWC lounge.

OWC, NCOWC Donation

The OWC and NCOWC presented checks totaling $200 to the Spencer High School Band Booster Club.

Students tour hospital

Thirty-three students from Spencer High School toured Martin Army Hospital on Dec. 5. The students are enrolled in a three-year series of Health Occupation Courses at Spencer.

During the morning they visited some of the wards and clinic areas of the hospital. After lunch, the students spent an hour with the various departments in which they had expressed a career interest.

These students, and others like them, may be hospital staffs of the future.

Carter to visit Benning

The White House has announced that President Jimmy Carter will arrive at Lawson Army Airfield today at 6:05 p.m. enroute to his home in Plains, Ga., for the Christmas holidays.

The public is invited to be at the airfield for the Presidents' first visit to Fort Benning. Persons desiring to greet the President should arrive at the airport no later than 5:15 p.m.

Carter will be met at the airport by Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey and a number of area dignitaries. He will travel on to Plains by helicopter.

Sole parent policy recap

The Army has announced new policy guidelines which give commanders more flexibility in dealing with the sole parent problem.

Changes, effective in January 1979, fall into four areas: counseling, reenlistment control, performance appraisals, and involuntary separation.

One change in the counseling area is that all sole parent enlisted members, not just those under three years of service, must submit an acceptable Dependent Care Plan. Otherwise, reenlistment can be barred.

A second change allows any impairment of duty performance because of parenthood to be reflected in the individual's performance appraisal.

A third change, the final tool for extraordinary cases, is involuntary separation, and it applies to officer and enlisted alike. Personnel can be involuntarily separated when parenthood makes them unable to perform duty or be available for worldwide assignment. (AFPS)

CHAMPUS deadline nears

Dec. 31 is the deadline for submitting 1977 claims under the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services (CHAMPUS). Any claim for care received between Jan. 1 and Dec. 31, 1977, that is not submitted by the deadline cannot be paid.

A CHAMPUS beneficiary with a 1977 claim that has not been submitted should mail it as soon as possible. Also, if a civilian doctor or other provider agreed to submit a 1977 claim directly to CHAMPUS and has not done so, the beneficiary should remind the provider about the deadline.

The deadline for submitting a CHAMPUS claim is the last day of the calendar year following the calendar year in which a service or supply was provided. It is recommended, however, that claims be filed promptly — as soon as possible after the service or supply is provided.

GOING TO GERMANY?

MAKE YOURSELF AT HOME!

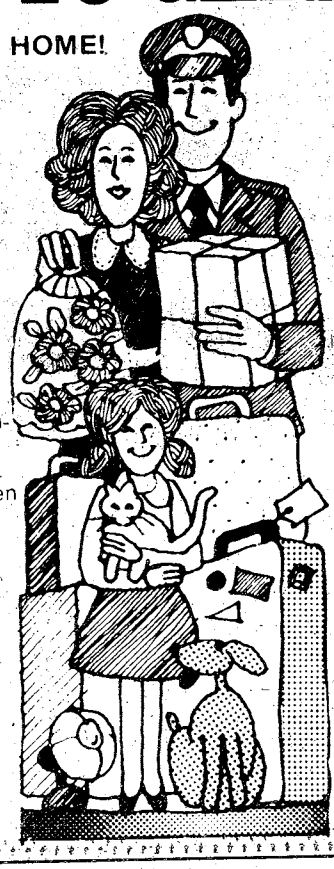
If you're off to Germany with your family and belongings, Davis is the best way to go!

Davis Agency Inc., the oldest and largest air charter service for military personnel and their families, provides comfortable and inexpensive flights to Frankfurt from 11 great American cities, including Atlanta. For example, one-way fares between Atlanta and Frankfurt begin at only $179 for military personnel stationed overseas and their spouses. And children's fares are even less.

Besides offering low prices, Davis carries lots of baggage – up to 66 pounds per passenger. On certain flights, special fares permit up to 166 pounds per adult passenger.*

So don't worry about taking your daughter's favorite doll or the family photo album—Davis will accept it, gladly!

*Subject to DAI tariff requirements.



Eligibility is restricted to all active military and Department of Defense personnel (U.S. citizens) stationed outside the continental United States and their immediate families—including spouses, children, parents and in-laws. Members of the immediate family are not required to be living outside the continental United States and may originate their travel in either direction.

DAI accepts American Express, Visa and Master Charge credit cards.

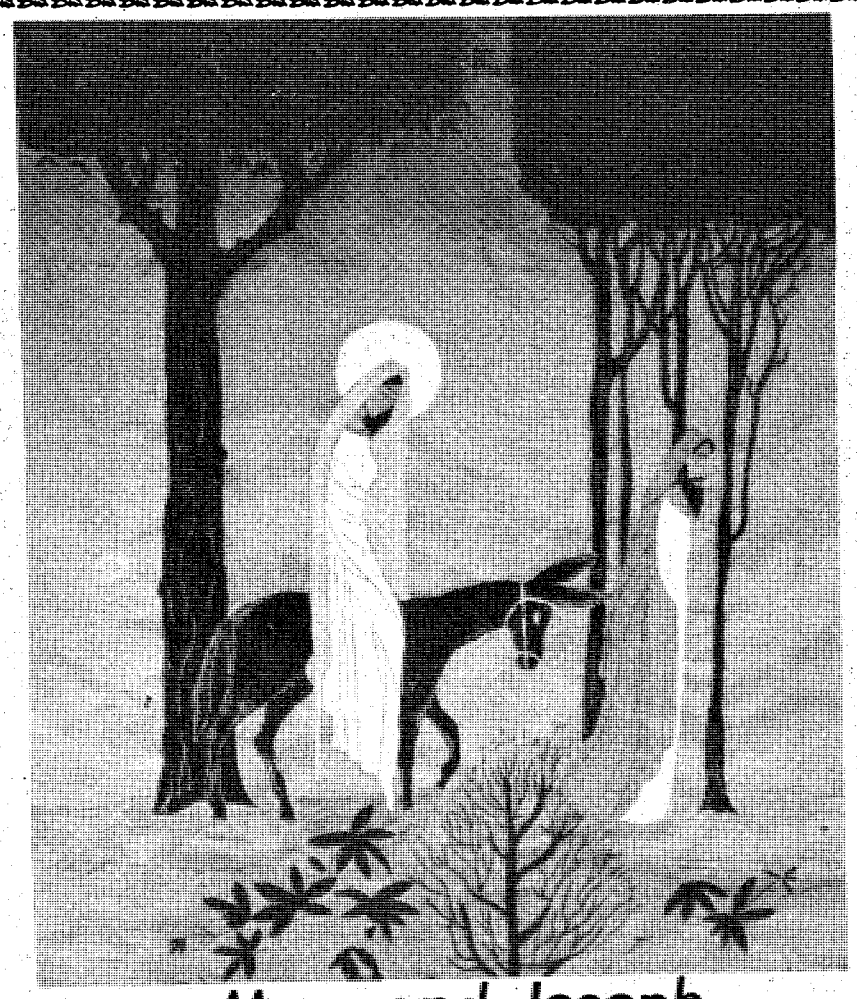
Benning dresses up for holidays



Mary and Joseph

The scene of Joseph and Mary traveling to Bethlehem adorns the quarters of Cpt. Randall and Yvonne Pilke. The captain painted the scene himself.

At Christmas time, some people decorate more than just their Christmas tree. They adorn their houses and yards as well, with Santa's wreaths, snowmen and various other nativity or holiday scenes. Here is a small sampling of how some post residents have decorated outside their homes.

Personal greeting

WARMEST WISHES FROM THE JOHNSONS is sent out to everyone passing by the door of Sgt. Roger Johnson, 139th MP Co. and his wife, Rhonda.

The Nativity

Cpt. Joseph and Diane Holcombe have this picturesque nativity scene set up outside their home in Davis Hills.

Saint Nick

The jolly face of Old Saint Nick greets anyone coming to the quarters of Sgt. 1st Class George and Ingrid White during the holiday season.

Christmas Messages

President Jimmy Carter sends the following Christmas message to Servicemembers around the world:

"Christmas awakens warm feelings in all of us for our loved ones, our communities, our nation — and especially for you who defend our cherished way of life.

"We are deeply indebted to you for the peace we enjoy this Holiday Season. Your dedication to our national security is a vital mainstay of our sustained progress and development.

"Rosalynn and I hope that you and your families will have a blessed Christmas and a safe and satisfying New Year." (AFPS)

Secretary of Defense Harold Brown sends the following Christmas message to Servicemembers around the world:

"During the holiday season Americans everywhere traditionally send best wishes to the men and women of the Armed Forces, whose function is to preserve the peace which is close to our thoughts at this time of year.

"As you so well know, keeping the peace knows no season. The peace and tranquility which we Americans share with one another this year flows from the year-round sacrifice and devotion on the part of the men and women of our Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps the world over.

"To the dedicated members of the Armed Forces and their families — most especially to those serving far from home and loved ones — and to all the equally dedicated civilian members of the Department of Defense, I send warmest best wishes for a merry Christmas, and a happy, healthy new year." Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room - and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 100 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

What do you want most for Christmas?

Angela Robison, 2nd grade
White School

I'd like to have some doll babies and a table and chairs for them. I'd also like a checker game. I've been pretty good.

Archie Zanders, 1st grade
Wilbur School

I want two 10-speed bikes (one for my sister), a motorcycle, a play horse, a pet snake, a donkey to put in the back yard and a camera just like yours.

Brandon Crouse, Kindergarten
Dexter School

I'd like a record player, camping stuff like a tent, sleeping bag, backpack and a shovel (so I can dig and make traps) — and I'd like a rope so I can catch a bull.

Shawn Laguana, 3rd grade
Wildon School

I'd like to have a bike (because I like to ride alot), Star Wars figures, a B-B gun, a mini car and new paints.

Letters to the Editor

Letter to my host

It usually takes me a month to get over the Christmas-New Years' holiday season. Some years I have had doubts that I would ever get over them. The day and night marathon of parties is just too much for me.

I hope this year is going to be different. I'm not going to drink as much or stay out so late. My intentions are good but I'm not blessed with an abundance of will power. I need your help and understanding.

If I arrive at your house and decline your offer of a drink take me at my word. Despite my track record of never refusing a drink, I'm going to mean what I say. Don't treat my refusal as you would an announcement that I have just returned from the moon, astonishment or remarks about "one never hurting anyone" won't do me any good. You may change my mind. There are a few things you can do to make it easier during my stay.

The usual cola, ginger ale, sparkling and Quinine water just don't turn me on. Cola and ginger ale have too many calories and I hate drinking sparkling or Quinine water straight. Augmenting these mixers with some diet rites and fruit drinks and even a pot of coffee might activate my taste buds.

If you have hired a bartender for the affair have him stack a can of each drink on top of the bar so I'll know they are available.

Should my resolve break down or if I have already had a few before I arrive at your party there are still a few things you can do to help me.

Don't shove my favorite drink into my hand as soon as I arrive. Don't insist on "topping off" my drink every time my glass gets half empty — and when I get ready to leave don't insist that I have one for the road.

Despite all my good intentions and your help I may drink too much. Don't let me drive under these conditions. I get obnoxious when I drink too much. There will probably be a bad scene if you take my car keys or incapacitate my car.

Neither of us will appreciate it at the time, but it won't be nearly as bad or lasting as the remorse both of us will suffer if I clobber myself or someone else on my way home.

I've started the holidays with these same good intentions before. Until now I've tried to make it on my own and the results haven't been too good. Maybe this year, with your help and a little help from my fellow guests I may be able to wake up the morning after your party with some of my self respect intact.

Giving, taking unequal

By David Rich

If your section is anything like ours, you probably don't have time to just sit around and think. About the time that it looks like you may get caught up, a rush job comes in that had to be finished yesterday, or somebody thinks up some kind of detail that can't wait.

There is, however, one time almost every day that I can count on to have absolutely nothing to do for at least a few minutes — waiting in the car at the parking lot exit for a break in the traffic already on the street and going home.

For days I spent that time edging forward, looking for a little space between front and rear bumpers that I could wedge into. After a few weeks of that, though, I decided that getting mad and risking higher insurance rates as a result of an accident weren't worth the five or ten minutes that I might save by trying to bluff out the driver of one of those cars or vans as they came tearing down the hill toward me.

Anyway, I was sitting there the other afternoon when it occured to me that there was a whole lot of taking going on around me and very little giving.

The taking was what I got to thinking about.

It upsets me that so many people take risks and chances — especially when it may involve me. When they dart into the space just in front of me as we cruise down the highway, they are taking for granted that I can slow down quickly enough to avoid an accident. They are taking a risk that may well involve my safety.

The extreme, of course, is when they take my life in their hands by driving while under the influence of anything that may affect their driving ability or judgement, whether it be booze, dope, anger or even impatience.

It seems to me that most of the time when there is some taking, there must also be some giving — from someone. If I voluntarily give you the right of way, that's one thing. But if you take it from me against my will, that's entirely different.

Surely it goes without saying that you don't have the right to take chances with my life by reckless driving, and I'd be a damn fool if I gave it to you — even if you're my best friend and I'm riding in the car with you.

The holiday season, with Thanksgiving just past and Christmas fast approaching, is traditionally a time to think of giving. In fact, that is the basis and importance of Christmas. Not the giving itself, of course, but the pleasure and joy associated with both the giving and the receiving.

This Christmas, give some thought to something more than gifts that cost money. Give me a chance to make it home for the holidays all in one piece. I'll do the same for you. We'll have given each other something more precious: at the least, safety; at the most, maybe even life itself.

197th TMC consolidates treatment

Listening in Warrant Officer Ed Wrightman gives Sgt. Thomas a physical in preparation for an upcoming boxing match.

The Troop Medical Clinic (TMC) for the 197th Infantry Brigade on Kelley Hill underwent drastic change after receiving a Forces Command (FORSCOM) directive to "restrict aid station activity."

Late last month, the Brigade surgeon received word from FORSCOM to restrict battalion aid stations and consolidate medical activities at the clinic. This required considerable work to move medical records and equipment, but was accomplished in a short period of time.

"The lack of lavatory facilities and proper security for health records was the primary reason for the consolidation," said Capt. Magdi B. Hanna, Brigade surgeon. After the move, the clinic staff took over the task of treating a larger number of patients.

Three medics were requested from each of the major sub-units and given training in clinic operation to help meet the demand.

"I think the new system works a lot better than the old one," said Pfc. Ronald McConnell, one of the new medics. "It gives me a chance to get practical experience in areas I never saw in my aid station."

The centralization offers not only better medical treatment and closer supervision of the medics by the physician and the physician's assistant, but has increased the TMC's capabilities by adding a new lab.

"Under the old system, a soldier was seen in the aid station and either sent to the hospital or referred to the TMC for consultation," said 2nd Lt. Michael L. Wyatt, clinic OIC, "but under the new system, we can do most of the routine lab work and the patient doesn't have to wait for results."

"The directive restricted the aid stations to screening, treatment and issuing over-the-counter drugs only. At the present, all screening and treatment is done at the TMC, but in the near future, I will present to the brigade commander a new program accepted by FORSCOM that will allow screening by trained medics in the aid stations at the battalion level," Wyatt continued.

"The consolidation system is working extremely well, resulting in a decrease in lost manhours and better medical management. An average of 80 patients is seen at daily sick call. We have most soldiers back to their duties by 10 a.m. This gives us more time to review health records and conduct special clinics for the needs of the Brigade," concluded Hanna.

Post soldier dabbles in magic

Spec. 4 John Schultz, 139th Military Police Co., spends his free time making magic with his assistant, Ann, who is also his wife.

By Seth Hamilton

Lots of people at Fort Benning have part-time jobs outside of their military duties, but Spec. 4 John Schultz of the 139th Military Police Company has a job a bit out of the ordinary. John Schultz is a magician.

Schultz spends some of his off-duty hours working at a magic shop in Columbus. He also performs with his wife, Ann, throughout the Columbus area. John is a member of the International Brotherhood of Magicians and the Columbus Magic Club. Recently the Schultzes have worked their magic for crowds at the Officers' Club, Custer Terrace and post schools, as well as at the Columbus and Peachtree Malls.

John and Ann perform most types of magic ranging from coin and card tricks to a stage show featuring a levitation act. John considers his part-time employment as a full time hobby. "It's a good way for me to blow off steam. Some guys go out and play golf or something; I go out and perform magic."

John has been around magic all his life. His father has been a professional magician for 35 years. As a boy, John's interest in magic was very inconsistent: that is, until he was at Advanced Individual Training (AIT) at Fort McClellan. He did a couple of simple tricks for his buddies and was surprised by their response. "I made a cigarette disappear and they loved it. I was very encouraged and it was then I decided to become a professional magician."

Nowadays, John is certain about one thing in his future plans — he'll be a magician at heart. He enjoys performing for audiences and loves "fooling people." He plans to eventually teach magic to prospective magicians. Ever since that day at AIT, magic has been a big part of the Schultzes' life. Like his father once told him, "Once you get bitten by the magic bug, there's no stopping it."

Off we go a'caroling

The Fort Benning Hunt Club will continue a five-year tradition tonight by going Christmas caroling on horseback.

Fifteen to 20 teenage and adult members will take part. There will also be a tractor pulling a trailer full of hay.

The carolers are scheduled to start at 6:30 p.m. from French Field.They will proceed down Running Avenue and turn right on Wickersham Avenue. From there they will turn left on Yeager Avenue and right onto Baltzell Avenue.

Then they will cross 1st Division Road to Dublinsky Street as far as Bjornstad Street where they will continue straight ahead to Running Avenue where they will turn right and then left on Stewart Street.

At this point they will cross the field to 1st Division Road and continue down Sigerfoos Road to Kries Street.

Following a stop at the general's quarters, they will circle Austin Loop and Miller Loop going on to Rainbow Avenue and down to the Hunt Club by approximately 8:30 p.m.

Women's forum outlines post job opportunities

By Pat Brown

The first Federal Women's Program (FWP) Open Forum and luncheon held here met with resounding success.

"We expected about 30 people to show up," said Ms. Norma Christian, Benning's FWP coordinator, "and we had luncheon reservations for more than 140!"

Improve Career Status

Corinne Cook, co-chairperson of the FWP Committee and forum chairperson, stated in her opening remarks that "the official purpose of the forum is to improve the career status of women at Fort Benning through the interaction of ideas and the promotion of professional development in a social environment."

Quoting from a recent magazine article, Ms. Cook pointed out that this interchange had long been available to men through the "old boys network," and that women, too, need to learn to use professional and social contacts to advance themselves and other women.

Gloria Jackson, an employee relations specialist with 12 years' experience in the post Civilian Personnel Office (CPO) was the guest speaker. Her topic was "How to Get Promoted."

Why You Can't Get Promoted

Emphasizing that her remarks were not to be taken as official doctrine or as CPO policy, Jackson's first comments would appear to have been more aptly entitled, "Why You Can't Get Promoted at Fort Benning."

She stated that civilian employees here, as at other military installations, were in a support capacity and would often find their way up the promotion ladder blocked by military personnel, both noncommissioned officers and officers, who would naturally be filling key positions at the mid-management and supervisory levels.

She also pointed out the reality of the veteran's preferance benefit. Given a choice between a well-qualified woman and an equally well-qualified military retiree, who had performed a like function while on active duty, the supervisor's natural inclination would be to select the veteran.

Persons who do get promoted here, leaving out the element of luck or chance, are usually those in professional or career fields. Others, who have a financial need or a desire to rise to the top, would do well to seek employment elsewhere, particularly at all-civilian Federal agencies, where chances for promotion are much greater.

No Guarantee

"For those who are not mobile or who simply do not wish to live elsewhere, I can only advise you to learn not only your job, but everyone else's; make yourself indispensable, volunteer; show initiative, loyalty, support, and enthusiasm; convince your supervisor that your job is the most important thing in your life — and you'll still have no guarantee that you'll be promoted!"

Ms. Jackson also stated that "women must develop the traits of aggressiveness and competitiveness. Men have been taught this from childhood, while assertiveness in a woman is often considered an undesirable trait — but competitiveness is what it's all about."

"Often, we are our own worst enemy," she continued. "We do not support each other. A recent survey indicated that even now, almost as many women as men indicated a preference for male bosses. Women should be glad, not jealous or resentful, when other women get ahead. Remember, when a woman gets promoted, she's going to leave vacancies behind her and maybe you'll fill one of those vacancies!"

Jackson also emphatically indorsed the idea advanced by Ms. Cook that women needed to join professional and social groups and to use ideas and experiences gained there to advance themselves and other women.

Benefits Here Greater

In conclusion, she stated that more than 25,000 persons had visited the Employment Information Center in the past year to inquire about Civil Service employment and jobs at Fort Benning. This is an indication that even though civilian employees here are sometimes disgruntled over their failure to gain recognition or promotions, obviously, benefits offered here are greater than they are in private industry in this area.

Rabbi 'keeps people together'

By Julie Casey

The force behind the Jewish Center here on post is Chaplain (Capt.) Kenneth Leinwand.

"We try to keep our people together," the Rabbi stated.

Leinwand's programs include Shabbat services Friday night at 8:15 in Bldg. 2622 near Range Control, Hebrew classes, Jewish lay-leadership classes, Jewish cultural retreats, conversion classes and Sunday morning prayer breakfasts. He also works with the Allied student's social gatherings.

In an effort to bring the military Jewish population closer to the civilian Jewish population, Rabbi Leinwand also guest preaches and teaches at the two Israeli churches here in Columbus.

According to Leinwand, this year's Hannukah will be celebrated at the Jewish Center, with students from the religious school of Shearith Israel.

"We are expecting about 70 children and will be showing films and exchanging gifts Sunday morning at 10," he said, "all are welcome to attend."

He added that there will be no charge for food for all active duty and only a small charge for civilians and dependents.

Leinwand also serves in a large capacity as an Infantry Training Brigade chaplain.

Even with his busy schedule, Rabbi Leinwand can be contacted at the Jewish Center on Thursday and Fridays at 545-3844.

"I wish to inform any incoming personnel that we exist and they are welcome to join us," he added.

Chaplain's holiday message

During this holiday season, two joyous events will be commemorated. Jewish personnel will celebrate Hanukkah while Christians are celebrating Christmas. Very little needs to be said concerning the happiness of the season. More time is spent during this season, attempting to bring happiness to others than during any other time of the year.

You may have noticed that Jews and Christians celebrate these special days in much the same way. For both faith groups, it is a time for family and other close friends, a time to eat more than is needed, a time to share gifts, a time to joyfully celebrate, to sing, to dance, to praise God for his intervention into history and our lives.

Hanukkah is an occasion for joyful celebration to Jewish personnel. The word Hanukkah means "dedication" and the celebration was instituted by Judas Maccabaeus, his brothers, and the whole congregation of Israel, in 165 B.C., to commemorate the dedication of the new altar set up at the purification of the Temple of Jerusalem to replace the altar which had been desecrated by Antiochus Epiphanes. The holiday season lasts for eight days, and is celebrated everywhere, chiefly as a festival of lights.

Christmas is that particular time of the year Christians celebrate the birth of Jesus. The story is filled with tenderness and sentiment. Throughout the world, the manger scene will be re-enacted with the Babe, Mary, Joseph and the Wise Men. The story of His birth will be read in churches and homes, and celebrated as well.

For the season to be more beneficial, listen to the accounts again of Hanukkah and Christmas, share the stories with others, and reflect on their meaning.

In each of these stories, the underlying meaning is that God has blessed his people in the past, and people continue to be thrilled and blessed by celebrating these events today.

School hosts fashion show

Mrs. Minnie Torbush's home living classes of Fort Benning's Don C. Faith School gave a fashion show at a local department store recently.

Seventy-five sixth, seventh and eighth graders took part and many modeled clothes they had made.

Student Donna McKinley said, "We had a variety of clothes, including pants, shirts, skirts and vests."

Sessica Doss said, "We were excited, nervous and then proud when it was over and everyone told us how well we did."

Eighth grader, Petra Lieske, thought it went well even though the modeling was new to everyone.

How Christmas is celebrated in other countries

By Joyce Walker

Christmas is an international holiday commemorating the birth of Christ, that is observed in many ways. Some Allied officers currently stationed here note some of the different ways it is celebrated in their country.

Christmas in France

As early as Dec. 6, "Pere Fouettard" (Whipping Father) visits with the children of France, according to Capt. Pierre Godard, an Allied officer going to school there. The youngsters place carrots in their shoes for the gray donkey that pulls the father's sleigh. In return, if they have been good, he (the father) leaves droppings of chocolate in their shoes.

Traditionally in the French home, a Christmas Crib (Nativity scene) is set up each year, featuring a donkey, ox, small replicas of St. Joseph, the Virgin Mary and professional people (farmers, bakers, etc.) but the manger remains empty.

Midnight Mass

On the evening of the 24th, the family gathers to attend midnight Mass. When they return from Mass, they put the Christ child in the manger and a late supper is eaten known as "reveillon." The meal varies according to the region of France one lives in.

For Godard and his family, this meal usually features a guinea hen stuffed with chestnuts. There is also goose liver, oysters, pork meat, white pudding, either some white wine or champagne.

Before going to bed, the children put their shoes before the chimney for Father Christmas to stuff with gifts. While they are asleep, small toys, sweets and fruits are hung on the branches of the tree, adding to the gifts that Father Christmas leaves in their shoes.

King, queen for a day

The Christmas Crib remains set up until Jan. 6, when the Wise Men enter, explains Godard's wife, Mireille. On this day, a special flat wafer cookie, "Gallette des Rois," (Cookie of the King) is eaten. The man or woman finding one of the two little figures called beans hidden in the cookie is king or queen for the day. This custom stems from the old days when poor people got to be chosen king or queen for a day using this method.

1st Lt. Rene Garcia, another Allied officer, has observed that the celebration of Christmas in his homeland, Nicaragua, is very similar to its observation in the states. "We set up and decorate a tree, just like you do here," he noted. One difference may be that our tree decorations include all the cards we receive from our relatives and friends."

According to Garcia, a Nicaraguan family gathers on the evening of the 24th to attend church services. Following the service, it is time for the family party to begin.

Children are put to bed so that the "Nino Dios" can come and place presents around their beds. It is usually, the only time of the year we get to enjoy big red apples," said Garcia.

The German Liaison Officer, Lt. Col. Ernst Lissinna, explained several different ways Germans observed Christmas.

"Christmas is actually celebrated on the 24th in Germany," said Lissinna. This is the date the Germans feel Christ was born. The "25 and 26" are two other legal holidays. The 25th is a day

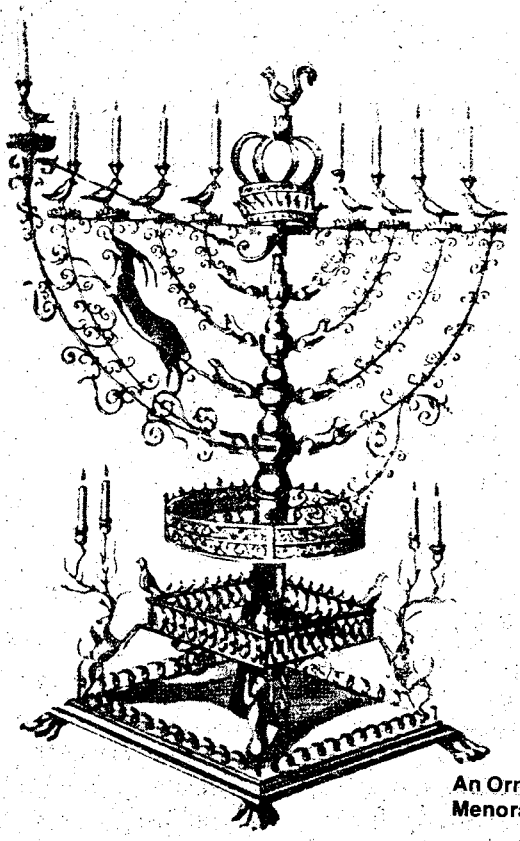
HANUKKAH



An Ornate Menorah

Twenty one centuries ago a small band of Jewish soldiers fought and won the first recorded battle for religious freedom. They resisted and overcame the Syrian King Antiochus who had attempted to suppress the Jews and their religion.

This war was called the Maccabean War since the Jews were led by a priest named Mattathias and his five sons who became known as the Maccabees — the Hebrew word for hammer — because in battle after battle they dealt hammer blows to the enemy.

It is to celebrate this significant victory that the Jews observe Hanukkah, or the Fest of Lights, each year. For eight days beginning on the twenty-fifth day of the Hebrew month of Kislev, Dec. 24 this year, they give thanks for the great event that insured the survival of Judaism.

On each of the eight days of Hanukkah, Jews light candles: one the first day, two the second, and so on. A special nine-branch candelabrum called a menorah is used. The ninth candle is not allowed to burn out until the last day of Hanukkah to celebrate the miracle that occurred in the Temple when the holy place was rededicated after it was recaptured by the Maccabean warriors.

When the lights in the temple were rekindled, the oil that was supposed to last for only one day lasted for the entire week. Thus, candles are lit for eight days, and one candle is made to last through the week.

The first Hanukkah lamps or menorahs were not intended for reading but were to be placed near windows so that passers-by in the streets could see them. Then and now, when the candles are lighted, the person lighting them and those who look on recite: "Blessed be the Lord our God, King of the Universe, who has sanctified us by Thy commandments and enjoins us to kindle the Hanukkah lamp."

Through the years, the menorah has stood for light and truth. The Hanukkah menorah also stands for the Jewish people's love for liberty. It glows in the synagogue and in the home; it guides the Jew through his life, and often accompanies him when he dies, as an inscription on his tombstone.

Christmas

the family celebrates Christmas and the 26th is used as a day to visit with good friends and neighbors.

Santa decorates tree

The decoration of the Christmas tree is done on Christmas Eve. Some family customs calls for Santa or the Christ child to decorate the tree as well as leave gifts for the children. The children are not allowed near the living room until everything has been prepared.

Christmas trees in Germany are still usually decorated with real wax candles instead of electrical lights, according to Lissinna. As many as 50 candles are used to adorn the trees. "The flickering of the lights gives the impression that the tree is moving and it is a beautiful sight to behold," says Lissinna.

It is interesting to note that German law forbids shops and stores to play Christmas songs before the first Sunday in December which is the first Advent. It is also illegal for Germans to use blinking lights in their decorations. A blinking blue light is an emergency light used by ambulance and police cars in Germany.

Christmas lunch

Great Britains' celebration of Christmas is similar to its celebration here, too, according to British Liaison Officer, Lt. Col. John (Norrie) Giles. One difference might be that the Britains have a Christmas lunch around 2 p.m. that features roast turkey and a Christmas pudding made out of fruit, currants and sultanas (small seedless grapes). Brandy is poured over the pudding, lighted and it arrives at the table, flaming.

The Queen traditionally gives her Christmas message around 3 p.m. over the radio each year.

The next day, Dec. 26, is another holiday called Boxing Day, which is spent going to parties and visiting friends. The name derives from the olden times when they opened the charity boxes on that day.

'Circle of Gold' chain letter a violation of federal law

An illegal chain letter scheme that is apparently sweeping the nation is being investigated by Postal Inspectors because of numberous complaints, according to Chief Postal Inspector C. Neil Benson.

The chain, called the "Circle of Gold," is believed to have started about three months ago in Marin and Santa Cruz counties outside San Francisco, Calif.

Typically, the chain requires any participant to buy two copies of the letter for $100 in cash. The buyer in a face-to-face transaction gives $50 of the total to the person from whom the letter was purchased and sends the other $50 to the first person at the top of a 12-name list. This top name is then crossed off and the buyer's name is added at the bottom of each copy before it is sold again.

The scheme is similar to a Series "E" Savings Bond scheme popular during the summer of 1976.

"Aside from the fact that those who buy and sell the chain letter are actually in violation of a Federal law," Chief Benson said, "the majority of those who become involved in this type of scheme end up as victims since actual profits from chain letters usually reach only those who enter the scheme early."

If the scheme involves the mailing of money, a bond or other valuable item, even if the chain letters themselves are not mailed, it is still a violation of Federal law.

However, so-called chain letters offering nothing more than recipes or the like are considered to be mailable bacause the items mailed do not constitute "a thing of value" within the meaning of the applicable law. Postal cards involving a "good luck" chain containing a threat of bad luck to those who break the chain are, however, illegal under a law that prohibits placement of threatening matter on the outside of mail.

Chief Benson urged all those who receive chain letters to "turn them over promptly to any postmaster or Postal Inspector to avoid possible criminal involvement in the scheme and to assist the Postal Service in its efforts to protect the public from this activity."

Making Tracks

By Julie Casey

You've heard the old saying, 'drinking and driving don't mix.' Well, running and wacky motorists get along about as well.

On evening runs, I have met up with a few of these notorious drivers. Running along the edgeway of a road, I have had to jump into the ditch to keep from being hit. I don't take up that much room. How much room can a person take if she has been told she could hide behind a broom handle? They either try to run you over or swerve into the other lane of traffic.

What is also cute, is when people throw things at you. I really don't think it is necessary to allow little Billy to use local runners for target practice. Those little cork balls smart, considering they could be moving at 50 miles per hour upon impact.

What is to be done? Stay off of the road? No, runners have a right to be on the roadways. The key to safe running is defensive running. Run as if someone is trying to flatten you. It does happen. Pick up any issue of "Runner's World Magazine" and you will be able to read about someone's death caused by a hit and run accident. Running, one of the healthiest activities, can turn into a deadly game.

Avoid accidents by running against traffic and staying away from heavily traveled roads. Running at night is very dangerous and all precautions should be taken. Wear light colored clothing and reflective gear. Do not expect the motorists to see you.

When you take to the road for your New Year's run, watch for those who have been celebrating a bit too much.

Two named distinguished graduates

Two Infantry Officer's Basic Course students here have been selected as Distinguished Military Graduates at North Georgia College (NGC).

Army 2nd Lts. Thomas C. Lasch and Brian K. Hunter, recent graduates from NGC, recently received their commissions as Army officers.

Lasch is the son of CWO and Mrs. Thomas H. Lasch of Hunter Army Airfield and Hunter is the son of Jack D. Hunter of College Park, Ga.

NGC is one of the country's four military colleges and is the senior military college of Georgia.

Barracudas compete in Holiday Classic meet

The Fort Benning Barracudas traveled to Montgomery, Ala. Dec. 16, to compete in the second annual Holiday Classic Swim Meet hosted by the Young Women's Christian Organization of Montgomery. The Montgomery Barracudas invited 10 AAU swim teams to this 50-event Class B and C swim meet which will be the last meet of 1978.

Three of the 'cudas, Jenny Crawford, Atlantis Tillman and Hilary Driver, gave the last meet of the year their best shot and achieved standard breaking times (SB) in their events. Jenny Crawford received her SB in the 50 meter fly with a time of 36.10 which advanced her into the Class B time for 11-12 year old girls.

The other two Barracudas, Atlantis Tillman and Hilary Driver, are both 8-year-old and under girl swimmers. These two young ladies swam neck and neck in three of their events. Hilary, whose ninth birthday was Dec. 19, received her SB in the 25-meter free style with a 17.91 A time, followed closely by Atlantis in 18.35. Atlantis got her SB with a 21.62 A time in the 25 meter fly beating out Hilary's 22.84. However, the older Ms. Driver outlasted Ms. Tillman in the 50-meter free style with a 41.25 over the slower 43.07.

The AAU short course season will continue after the holiday break with the Barracudas traveling to Atlanta in January. Anyone desiring additional information about the season or team membership should contact Rich Fagersten (Head 'Cuda) at 687-1833.

Korean karate lessons available on Benning

By Betty Zimmerman

Tae Kwon Do, Korean karate, lessons are now available at Fort Benning. Phillip J. Wargo, a 4th degree black belt holder, has started a school for post personnel.

His twice weekly classes are for everyone, six to 60, whether they are officers, enlisted, dependents or civilian employees. They are held in the Officer's Wives Club lounge on Tuesdays at 7 p.m. and Saturdays at 10:30 a.m. The lounge is in the old Infantry Museum building on Ingersoll Street. Monthly dues are $10 and the cost of the required uniform, the tobak, starts at $17.

Children's lessons will begin in January and their dues are $5. Their classes will be at 9 a.m. on Saturday.

Tae Kwon Do is a form of martial art that puts as much emphasis on the art as the sport. Mental attitude is as important as physical conditioning and a formal atmosphere with proper respect and adherence to certain rituals is maintained.

Progression is made through six belts: white, yellow, green, blue, red and black. Each belt has two grades, recommended and decided, and the black belt has degree levels. Students are tested approximately every three and a half months before a panel of judges. They must perform satisfactorily in attitude, form and sparring in order to earn the next belt.

Wargo, the operations officer at TSB's IOBC, is a member of the World Tae Kwon Do Federation and is ranked with the International Federation.He has been an instructor since 1965 when he was the the East Coast Tang Soo Do champion. In 1968, he won the Seoul, Korea championship and in 1975, he placed first in black belt form at the Florida Professionals Karate Tournament.

This well-qualified man is willing to share his experience and knowledge, so if the martial arts interest you, here's your opportunity for inexpensive instruction.

New track under construction

A brand new running track is currently under construction at Doughboy Stadium. According to post architect Ross Baldwin, the track will be completed by early springtime.

The four-lane olympic-type track, which will be built around the football field, is designed specifically for running. The track is one of only three of its type in the entire Southeast.

The surface of the track is a new, weather-resistant rubber type composition which is poured on top of an asphalt base. When the composition dries (24-48 hours), it will look like finely trimmed grass. The colored surface will resist rain and snow and will be virtually maintenance free. According to Mr. Baldwin, the new track will cost approximately $150,000.

The track is designed as a quarter mile or 440 yards for one lap. A wooden curb with start and finish lines as well as yard and meter markings will run around the interior of the track.

Work is being done on the football field in addition to the track. The field will be re-graded and planted with a new type of grass. The grass was developed at Auburn University especially for use on football fields.

Doughboys tops at Rucker tourney

By Betty Zimmerman

Benning won the Fort Rucker Christmas Invitational Basketball Tournament with a 4-0 record. Two Benning players, Charlie Jackson and Steve Mims,were selected for the all-tournament team.

Eight teams participated — Moody Air Force Base, Forts McClellan, Gordon, Benning, Rucker and McPherson, Albany Marines and Warner Robbins Air Force Base. The finals of the double elimination tournament came down to Gordon and Benning.

Benning won the first encounter with Gordon Saturday night, 104-89. Sunday's replay was much closer with the outcome in doubt right down to the closing seconds, but Benning emerged on top with the score 99-95.

Steve Mims was Benning's top scorer in the final game with 29 points; 21 of these were in the first half. The 6' 7'' forward was very effective from the 10- to 15-foot range and he also led in rebounds.

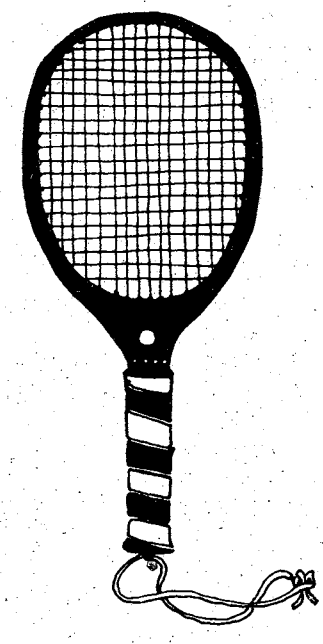
Richard Donnell scored 25 points and four of these were free throws in the last 30 seconds of the game. Charlie Jackson put 18 points on the board to help Benning maintain the lead throughout.

The last minute was hectic as the score narrowed to 95-93. Fred Nelson scored a field goal but Gordon came right back with two points. Then Donnell was fouled in Gordon's attempt to regain possession. He scored twice on the 1-n-1 situation and Gordon missed their shot. Once again Gordon intentionally fouled Donnell but he came through with two more points at the free throw line.

Benning's overall record now stands at 14-0. They will be playing Gordon again at Briant Wells Fieldhouse on Jan. 6 and 7.

Racquetball

Part IV] Service return



By Dave Lawrence and Seth Hamilton

Last week's article stressed the importance of the serve in racquetball and how the best serve forces a weak return shot. This article will put you on the other end of the serve — the service return. When a player serves, he automatically gains the center court advantage. It is important that you get the server out of that position. A strong return will force the server out of center court.

The service return must be carried out in a confident and direct manner, stroking the ball with variable power and having a definite shot in mind. The ideal position to be in to receive the serve is three to four feet from the backwall and one step off center towards your backhand. From this position you can take one full step to the backhand wall or two quick steps to the forehand wall. You are now ready to receive your opponent's best serve.

Unlike the serves, where you try to use a wide variety of shots, a minimum number of service returns will be advocated. If you can correctly execute the three following service returns with consistancy, you will have little need for any more variety. The strategy for service returns is the same as for racquetball; either try to hit shots that can not be returned (kill shots) or as perfect a defensive shot as possible. The three most important service returns are as follows:

Ceiling shot to the left (backhand) corner

This should be the mainstay of your service return game. It will force your opponent into the back court. A good serve will force you to make use of the ceiling shot to the backhand side. A properly executed ceiling shot dies in the backhand corner and leaves the server the least possible opportunity to go for a winner on his second shot. You should remember to face the side wall in the low crouch position when returning service. If you forget to face the side wall it will cut down on the power and proficiency of your return shot.

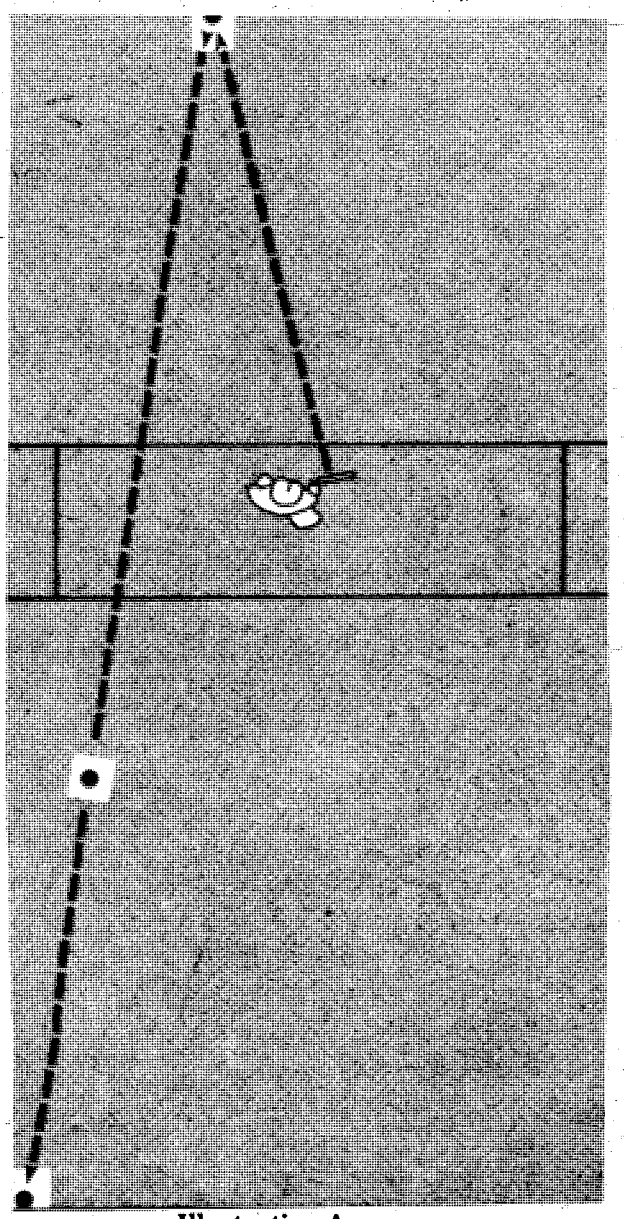


Illustration A

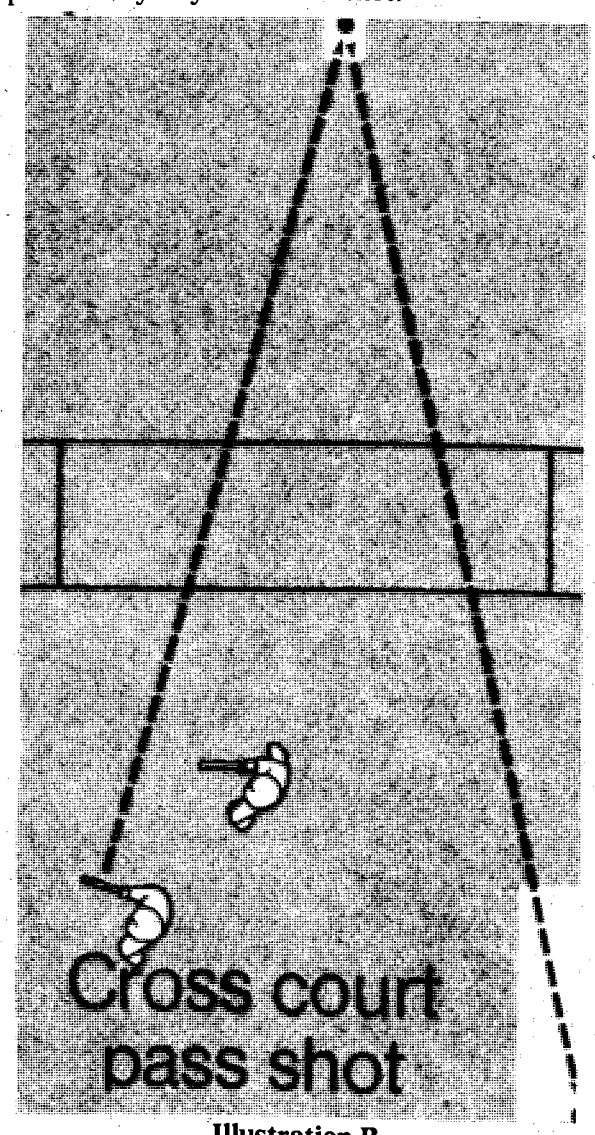

Illustration B

The shot is hit with eighty percent power to insure that it doesn't kick out from the wall for a set-up kill shot. You also do not want to let the shot hit the side wall. Concentrate on hitting every ceiling shot to perfection, stay low and you might be surprised at how many accidental winners you get. A perfect ceiling shot will die in the backhand corner. This shot can be every bit as effective as a kill shot because it is extremely frustrating to your opponent. See illustration C for the correct shot path.

Kill shot down the wall

This is the quickest way to punish a poor serve. The ball is driven hard and low, off the front wall, and hugs the side wall back to the forehand or backhand rear corner. Like most shots, this should be used several times per game to keep your opponent wary. This shot is not recommended in a game point situation unless you have more guts than we do in addition to an excellent backhand. Remember, hitting a kill shot off the serve can be risky because of your poor court position (back court) and your opponent's good position. Your margin of error here is very slim so either hit it direct, hard, low and straight or go to the ceiling shot. Illustration A shows the correct path of the kill shot down the wall.

Cross court passing shot

This shot is a necessary partner to the kill shot, both tactically and psychologically. You must keep your opponent honest or he will virtually nullify your kill shot returns by charging to the backhand corner every time he hits a poor serve. You must use the cross court shot just often enough so that he is never quite sure what you are going to hit.

You must hit this shot wide so that your opponent can't cut it off and low so that it doesn't come off the back wall. It also can't be angled too sharply into the corner or it will kick out towards center court. The serve is most effective when the ball is between three quarter court and the short line. You will not be able to hit this from the deep corner because your opponent's body will block the flight of the return, and that is legal. Illustration B shows the cross court passing shot.

In summary, your service return is just as important as your serve. Remember that a defensive return can be as good, if not better, than a poorly hit offensive return. Maintain your concentration, stay low and go for the best possible return.

Due to the holidays, the fifth and final segment of this series will not appear next week, but rather in the Jan. 4 issue of the BAYONET.

Army draftsman enjoys bringing animals to life

By Joyce Walker

With apparent ease, the specialist drew the giant snail on the surface of the raging blue white-capped sea.

U.S. Army Photo by Phil Reid

Drawing on talent

Spec. 4 Michael Harris adds finishing touches to one of his projects.

For Spec. 4 Michael Harris, Hq Co., U.S. Army Infantry Center, this feat required more skill than strength. He has been drawing colorful detailed sketches of animals, insects, birds and reptiles on paper since elementary school.

"I used to love to look at the pictures of animals from all over the world in school magazines," said Harris. "I knew I would never get to see them all, so I decided I'd try drawing them." The native of Charlottesville, Va. remembers that his first drawing of a squirrel turned out rather nicely.

Following graduation from high school, the budding young artist studied illustration at Piedmont College in Charlottesville and the Commonwealth University. The year before entering the Army, Harris studied all phases of commercial art at a private school in Virginia.

As a draftsman in the Army, he has worked here as an illustrator in the Directorate of Plans and Training since 1976. His jobs have included making charts, drawing maps, making view graph sheets and plaques for departing officers.

Harris's favorite mediums are water colors and poster paints, and he is usually working on two to three projects at a time. "I use to exhibit my portraits of dinosaurs and sea dragons in art shows back home," remarked Harris, "but I had to stop, because people were always either stealing or marking them up!"

Where is all this artistic interest leading the young draftsman? "It seems kind of unimaginable right now," said Harris, "But I would like someday to be an illustrator for Walt Disney Productions."

NCOWC Nursing Home Christmas Party

One of the best things about Christmas is sharing with others and the NCOWC did that on Friday, Dec. 15, when a big Christmas party was given for the residents of Muscogee Manor Nursing Home.

The Merry Makers'; Mrs. Billy Dawson, piano; Mr. Herschel Gilbert, soloist; and Mr. Parley Davis, accordian; furnished the afternoon's entertainment. Santa Claus, alias Mr. Bert Cameron, distributed gifts to approximately 240 residents.

Christmas cookies, cake and punch were served by Mesdames Luise Paulshock, Lois Cameron, Barbara Howard, Sandra Jackson, Darla Gacek, Phyllis Rosiak, Vermell Harell, Sue Patrick and Shigeko Brown.

Special thanks go to Mrs. Joan Langston for her gift of money for the party. Also to senior citizens Mrs. Lea Pessesenhoffer, Mrs. Margaret Bass and Mrs. Phyllis Rosiak for donating cakes. More thanks go to Mrs. Mary Wildman, Mrs. Berta Dinnel, Miss Susie Belcher and Mr. Henry Rosiak for contributing their time in helping with the party.

Mrs. Luise Paulshock is to be commended for the job well done in preparing for the large party. She so generously gave many hours of her time buying and wrapping gifts and making sure that everything would be perfect for the party. On behalf of all the NCOWC members and Muscogee Manor residents, 'thank you Mrs. Paulshock, for a job well done.'

College Mixer

There will be a college mixer at Custer Terrace, tomorrow from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. College-age dependents of all post personnel and retirees are invited; house guests and dates are welcome. Drinks and snacks will be available. Come and enjoy the Christmas disco! Call Mrs. Todd Graham, 687-8604 or Mrs. Addison Davis, 689-3715.

NCOWC Childrens Party

Christmas trees with candy canes,
Snowflakes on the window panes,
Santas' bag filled to the top,
With goodies, toys, and chocolate drops.

That's the way it was for the children of the NCOWC on Sunday, Dec. 17, when about 70 children were treated to a party. There was magic in the air with Dr. Love and his magic act. Santa Claus, Mr. Jimmy Belcher, made an appearance to hand out gifts. This wonderful party was planned and hosted by Mesdames Jessie Greene, Gloria Dunlap, Frances Williams and Eleanor Scott.

NCOWC Pot Luck Supper

The NCOWC took time out from the busy Christmas season to enjoy a husband and wife pot luck supper. Good food and fellowship as well as games and door prizes were enjoyed by all. Hostesses were Mesdames Virginia Giles, Gloria Dunlap, Frances Williams, and Eleanor Scott.

The Pre-Kindergarten School will be taking applications for 3, 4, and 5-year-old children starting Jan. 2. Children must be 3 by Sept. 1, 1978 to enroll. Birth certificates and shot records are required. For more information call the school office at 687-2404.

Sergeants Major Wives Luncheon

All active duty and retired Sergeants Major Wives are invited to attend a Chinese buffet at the Black Angus Restaurant, Jan. 3, at noon. Cost of the luncheon will be $2.50 per person (tip not included). For reservations please call Mrs. Millie Arnold, 680-3548; Mrs. Dixie Broley, 689-5806; or Mrs. Diana Navarrete, 561-3370 no later than Jan. 1. MERRY CHRISTMAS

Legal Briefs

Have you ever spent Christmas Eve in jail? Probably not. It hasn't happened to many people. Just thinking about it is unpleasant.

Thoughts of this kind were far from the mind of a man I know as he left a post club, got in his car and headed home last Christmas Eve. Earlier he had had a few drinks at a unit party then joined some friends for a few more at the club. He realized he shouldn't have taken those last drinks. He was a little under the influence, but he'd make it alright.

As he drove along he was thinking of the things that had to be done that afternoon. He and his wife had to pick up those "lay-away" presents for the kids and of course he had some last minute shopping to do.

About halfway home those last few drinks took full effect. He began to feel sleepy and that center line just wouldn't stay together anymore. No matter how hard he stared it insisted on dividing into two lines.

He became so intent on getting the line into one piece that he failed to notice a car pulling out from an intersection and despite a last minute effort his car struck the other car.

He wanted to settle the problem between himself and the other driver, but the other driver insisted that the police be called. When the police came they decided he had too much to drink to do any more driving. They said they didn't want to do it on Christmas Eve but they had to take him in.

By the time his wife arrived to take him home the stores were closed. It was too late for that last minute shopping and the kids "lay-away" presents stayed in the stores for Christmas.

The wife was unhappy, the kids were disappointed and unhappy and he probably felt worse than any of them. It wasn't a happy Christmas.

A sad story, Christmas ruined for an entire family. What makes it more sad is it didn't have to happen at all.

He could have asked someone to drive him home. Not likely, but his friends could have insisted. The bartender or club manager could have found someone to drive him home or called the desk sergeant at the Provost Marshal's Office. The military police would insure that he got home safely. Embarrassing you say. Sure but nothing compared to the possible results from driving under the influence.

Vol. 18, No. 7 December 29, 1978

New food stamp program on its way

Eligibility for food stamps could change for many Army families when a new program begins next month.

The new program, beginning Jan. 1 in virtually all areas, is described by Agriculture Department (USDA) officials as "The most comprehensive and detailed ... revision" of the program since it began in 1961.

Many households (in the U.S., Puerto Rico, Guam and the Virgin Islands) will no longer be eligible for food stamps when changes take effect, USDA officials say. But an additional three million low income households are expected to be added to the program and these households, along with some already receiving food stamps, can expect added benefits, officials say.

Beginning Jan. 1 in all areas, officials explained, food stamp recipients will no longer "buy" stamps at a lesser rate than face value. Instead, stamps will simply be given to households based on family, income and allotment size.

Currently, for example, a family may be receiving $100 in monthly food stamp allowances at a cost of $50. Under the new program, stamps would cost nothing but the allotment would be reduced to about $50.

More added to program

The change, officials in the Food and Nutrition Service of USDA say, is expected to add more people to the program.

"A lot of people don't have the money to buy food stamps. Now more people who are eligible will be able to get them. Under the new program, more people who are eligible will be able to get them easier," stated Sherra James, representative of the Department of Family and Childrens Services.

James visits Benning each Wednesday afternoon to review soldiers applications and to provide them with information.

Another program change that is expected to take effect in most areas, but not mandatory until March, is the use of updated income levels and corresponding allotment sizes, officials said. The major result of new rates, they add, is that fewer people will qualify for food stamps but allotments for remaining recipients should be larger.

Single soldiers

Many single soldiers who do not receive BAQ or BAS were previously barred from receiving food stamps because their residences did not have cooking facilities. But officials say that access to cooking facilities will no longer be required. So many single member households, with small incomes based solely on basic pay and clothing allowance, may be eligible for food stamps for the first time.

Another program change will make food stamp benefits retroactive to the first day of the month that applications are made.

Several other changes will also begin next month and there will be some policy definitions that favor single soldiers and families who do not receive quarters allowance (BAQ) or separate rations (BAS).

Since household income is limited only to what appears in the "Entitlement" section of a Leave and Earning Statement (LES), (excluding a spouse's income or a second job) soldiers who are authorized meal cards or who live in government furnished quarters do not have these entitlements counted as income, officials explained. But soldiers who receive BAQ or BAS must count these entitlements as income if they appear on an LES.

This definition, according to officials, means that soldiers with meal cards or living in government quarters have smaller incomes than if they received these benefits in cash. Therefore, they have a better chance of qualifying for food stamps and for larger allotments.

Some rules have also tightened eligibility for families. Currently, one parent is allowed to stay home to care for children under 18. After next month, however, non-working parents may only stay home to care for children under 12 or else they must register for and actively seek employment.

Assets change

The amount of "assets," or valuables a household can have has also changed. Assets,

Preparation key to Drum mission

by Christopher Berrien

While Santa and his elves were busy in preparation for Christmas, the Brigade Materiel Management Center (BMMC) was just as busy preparing for the Fort Drum exercise to begin in February in New York.

Headed by the magician, Maj. Fred MacKay, capable of pulling jeeps, tracks, radios and other sundry items from his magic hat, the supply gnomes of the BMMC (also referred to as the Blimp) were busy formulating lists, lists, lists, and more lists of equipment required for Fort Drum.

Beginning in late August, personnel were faced with the task of researching cold weather requirements for equipment. These requirements are unique because of the effect of extreme temperature ranges on various types of equipment and materiel. For example, did you know that diesel fuel and other petroleum products will not burn under certain temperatures?

Chief gnome, 2nd Lt. Timothy Knight, eagerly spurred the gnomes to greater and greater heights of list production and coordination with the actual request processing. Maj. James Wills, head magician of the Material Section, was busy forecasting repair part requirements for the vehicles as well as other items of equipment.

All in all, the research and processing of requests were quite a chore for the busy gnomes. Just think, if it weren't for the foresight of the researching personnel, who would know that 5,664 rolls of toilet paper are necessary to equip an entire Infantry brigade for the duration of the Drum mission?

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room - and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 100 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

such as checking or savings accounts and stocks or bonds, may not exceed $1,750. Although a vehicle is not counted as an asset if valued at less than $4,550,vehicles valued at more than this will be counted as assets.

Other features of the new program, officials say, are:

- Simpler forms and streamlined application procedures.
- New income levels based on U.S. Poverty Guidelines and adjusted annually for inflation.
- Improved administration of the program, reduced error risks and fraud.
- A simplified income computation with standardized deductions.
- Maximum Net Income ($6,500 annually for a family of four) and Gross Income ($1,225 annually for a family of four) limits for food stamp eligibility.

"Soldiers living on a tight income can provide food for their families and at the same time pay their debts. I think that this program is very beneficial to the soldiers," said 2nd Lt. Garland Zeiher, AER officer.

When applying for food stamps, soldiers are asked to provide:

- Pay voucher
- Receipt of earnings
- Child support payments/allotments
- Rent receipts
- Utility bills/receipts
- Medical bills (CHAMPUS)

From master sergeant to captain: commander has unique perspective

By Mike Daigle

If you had ten years in the Army and had already attained the rank of master sergeant, how much higher could you expect to go? Command sergeant major is all that's left, right?

That's what Capt. Gerald D. Marlowe, HHC commander, 197th Inf Bde, thought after he made master sergeant. There were other alternatives besides becoming a civilian, however. If he became an officer he could rise in a whole new pay scale. So he applied for a direct commission and got it. On Oct. 7, 1969, he was commissioned as a first lieutenant and became a scout platoon leader in Vietnam.

Marlowe is in a unique position for an officer and it enables him to have a different perspective as a commander, having been an enlisted man for so long with so much rank.

Get the point?

Capt. Gerald Marlowe explains the mission of his unit as soon as troops arrive so they will have a clear idea of what needs to be done.

"I don't think a captain can come into a company and say 'I am the commander' and expect people to respond. He should first become a member of that company," according to Marlowe.

When he received his commission, Marlowe had two years of college and had completed the Infantry Officer Basic Course and the Infantry Officer Advance Course through correspondence.

This, as well as other things, had some influence on his picking Infantry for his branch. Ninety percent of his enlisted time had been in the Armor field and after making captain, he was selected for the Armor Officer Basic Course. Experience does pay off.

The fact that his Army career started in 1955 as a draftee and he made it all the way to master sergeant, even with two breaks in service, and then made it to captain has given Marlowe some strong opinions about the Army and its soldiers.

Marlowe says, "Some of the best soldiers in the Army were draftees. We had a lot of high quality soldiers that were interested in doing the best job possible for their country while they were in the Army. However, soldiers now are as good as ever. Soldiers want challenges and they want leaders who can offer it to them. They are now more inclined to want to know why they have to do things, but I think that's good. As leaders, we should have good strong reasons for what needs to be done and not spend time just keeping soldiers busy."

Marlowe feels good about his unit and his time in the Army. "The best thing about the Army is there's something different to do all the time. And even a private has a chance to think for himself and prove he's capable of something more," he concluded.

Happy New Year

With 1979 upon us we take this opportunity to thank each and every one we have had the privilege of serving in 1978. One of the nicest things about 1978 has been the many people we have gotten to know.

Thanks for such a fine '78

NATIONAL BANK of FORT BENNING

Member F.D.I.C.

Glad you asked

What, to you, was the most memorable event of 1978?

Candy Ehrlich, dependent
My most memorable event of 1978 was when I had my first baby in Germany on Jan. 1st.

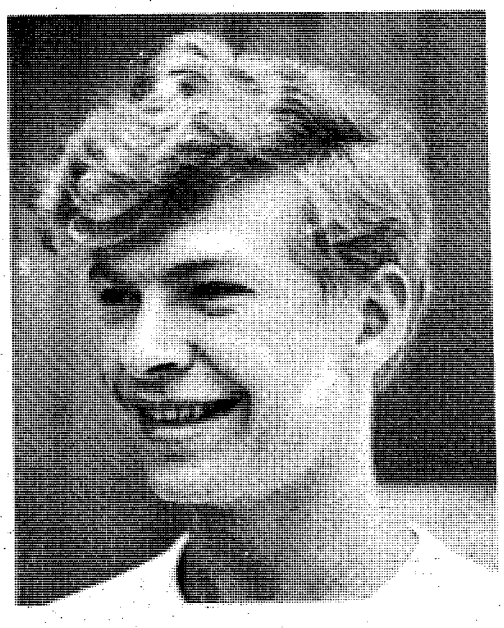
Pfc. Brian Kovnat, MEDDAC
The most memorable event of 1978 was the peace talks between Israel and Egypt. Even though they haven't come to an agreement as of yet — at least it's a start.

Pfc. Princess C. Sears
Hq Co, Hqs Cmd
My most memorable event of '78 was being able to participate in Fort Benning's women's basketball team.

Eva Hall, dependent
My most memorable event of '78 was when we left for Germany on Jan. 15th for three months. My husband and I went to visit my son who was stationed there at the time.

James A. Wilson, (E-7 Ret.)
The most memorable event of 1978 was when President Carter dropped Taiwan for Communist China — even though we have a treaty with Taiwan. I feel that this will result in a mistrust with other countries — and they will not depend so much on the U.S. as they may have previously.

U.S. Army Photos by Sue Davis



Spec. 4 Tim Grandy, 524th PSC
Guyana was the most memorable event that I recall. How some people can be so gullible as to follow a ridiculous religious cult is unbelievable to me.

JET benefits reviewed

Junior enlisted travel (JET) entitlements are effective as of Oct. 17, DA and MILPERCEN officials say.

This allows junior EM with orders effective on or after that date to apply for dependent travel and other JET benefits before traveling to a new overseas assignment. It also allows those junior EM already at overseas commands to request delayed travel benefits.

In addition to JET benefits announced earlier, officials said that JET entitlements include dislocation allowance for junior EM, except for those soldiers reporting to their first PCS duty assignments and those who ETS. This means that all other junior EM qualify for dislocation allowances at rates of $150.30 for E-1 through E-3 and $172.50 for E-4 grades to help offset PCS costs.

Soldiers in these grades (E-1 through E-3 and E-4 under two years service) who are returning from overseas areas that restrict dependents may also qualify for JET entitlements to move dependents and goods from a CONUS residence to a new CONUS station, officials said.

Officials cited "rough figures" in estimating the number of junior EM who can take advantage of JET entitlements. There are an estimated 33,000 Army families that qualify for JET application, including an estimated 49,000 dependents.

While JET program provisions mandated by Congress limit the number of dependents that may be added to present overseas areas, officials say, they do not expect this to have a significant impact on approving JET requests. (ARNEWS)

Handicapped children get a chance

Specialized Foster Care Project aids children

For years now, the State of Georgia has had the task of obtaining adequate foster care for children. In spite of the many families who have opened their doors to children who need care, the foster care program has not been able to develop adequate foster homes for emotionally disturbed and physically handicapped children due to lack of staff and funds.

The 1977 Georgia Legislature did, however, appropriate a limited amount of funds to develop homes for children with special needs in the form of the Specialized Foster Care Project. Recent cutbacks at the state level have caused a large part of those funds to dissipate.

The Specialized Foster Care Project commenced in Muscogee County and outlying areas (Chattahoochee, Marion, Stewart, Talbot, Harris, and Taylor Counties) on Oct. 1. It believes in the philosophy that each child should be given an opportunity to function in a family setting, and thus achieve self-actualization regardless of handicapping conditions. Specialized Foster Care seeks to deinstitutionalize certain children, to bring stabilization to others, and to provide those services that are necessary to the physical and emotional well-being of children with handicapping conditions by placing them in family settings.

The Specialized Foster Care Project is recruiting parents who are interested in sharing their lives with an emotionally disturbed child. The qualifications that are sought are :

- Secure and stable marriages or stability as a single individual.
- Sensitivity to the needs of special or troubled children.
- The capacity and desire to develop skill in handling special behavior problems through training.
- Ability and willingness to work with a social worker in carrying out treatment recommendations.
- Willingness to sacrifice personal plans for the welfare of a child, and to remain patient when little or no progress is seen in a child's behavior.

Specialized Foster Care parents will receive, in addition to on-going agency support, a service fee of $125 per month. Moreover, the agency provides board rate, medical costs, clothing allowance, the child's allowance, and other incidental expenses.

The cases below are only two of the many children who await placement for Specialized Foster care.

Robbie is an eight year old male who exhibits extreme temper tantrums, destructiveness, abuse to himself, and crying behavior. His father is an alcoholic and his mother has been in and out of hospitals for depression. There are five other children in the family. Robbie needs continued therapy and much structure in a living situation. The Child and Adolescent Division of Mental Health has recommended a specialized foster home. However, there are only 20 such homes in the state for one to two children each. Where can he go? Robbie can be enrolled in the psychoeducational center with the school system for a part of the day. Beyond that, however, there is no program to meet his needs.

Dallas is a 14-year-old male who has a history of aggressive behavior, bed-wetting, chronic lying, and congenital defects due to a history of family incest. Dallas is also mentally retarded. When he was eight years old, his father burned him severly with grease in a fit of anger. He is currently in a Youth Development Center for running away and truancy. He is making progress but must be released soon. Other resources have been attempted, but due to lack of funds and his low IQ, Dallas was not accepted. Specialized Foster Care has been recommended, but there are no homes available at this time.

This project differs from regular foster care in that Specialized Foster parents will require more training than regular foster parents and they will receive a $125 service fee in addition to the county per diem rate. Specialized foster parents will also take an active part as therapist in the treatment of a particular child.

The project requests that the community assume the responsibility for its troubled children. Persons who are interested in providing services for children like Dallas andRobbie should call Mrs. Ernestine Cole at 571-7279 or by writing to Specialized Foster Care Project, Division of Family and Children Services, P.O. Box 2627, Columbus, Georgia 31902.

Retirement ceremony held

The monthly retirement ceremony was held recently in Marshall Auditorium, Bldg. 4. The Meritorious Service Medal was awarded to 1st Sgt. Clarence Linton, Jr. and Sgt. 1st Class Rafael Henandez, both retiring to Columbus.

Sgt. 1st Class Monrow Abercrombie, retiring to Antlers, Okla., received an Army Commendation Medal.

Retirees for the month of December planning homes in the Columbus area are: Chief Warrant Officer 4 Darius Slusher, Lt. Col. James Crowder, Lt. Col. Harry Lucker, 1st Sgt. Robert Bell, Master Sgt. Edward Hilton, Sgt. 1st Class Lloyd Hightower, Sgt. 1st Class John Moore, Staff Sgt. Ronald Boyden, Staff Sgt. Joseph Brand, Spec. 6 Alfred Brown, Staff Sgt. Jose Pangelinan, and Staff Sgt. Fred Sherrod.

Those retiring to homes elsewhere are: Chief Warrant Officer 4 William Weaver, Dahlonega, Ga.; Lt. Col. Louise Vandever, Palm City Beach, Fla.; Capt. Uniform policy set

There are a number of items now worn with the uniform which are not specifically authorized in DA regulations, but which are worn with local approval. Effective Jan. 1, however, this approval will be withdrawn and only those items of the uniform which are prescribed in AR 670-5 and AR 672-5-1 will be worn by male soldiers of this command.

Some personnel will be allowed continued wear of certain types of headgear peculiar to their job assignments, as authorized by CTA 50-900, however, this headgear may be worn only at the individual's place of duty.

This major change in uniform policy has been directed by the Chief of Staff of the Army and is effective Army-wide.

Professor Safety Says

The Consumer Product Safety Commission plans to crack down on toys with sharp points. If tests identify an unreasonable risk of injury to a child a new regulation has been enacted which will allow the CPSC to ban sale of the toy and order it repurchased from those who have already purchased it. The regulation, applying only to toys designed for use by children under eight became effective December 1978.

There's more to T

TASC, the Training and Audio-Visual Support Center, should be more appropriately named "TASK" because of the variety of projects they undertake.

TASC is responsible for all educational media at Fort Benning.

The numerous services of TASC may be unknown to some and vague to others, but there's more behind TASC than meets the eye.

Taken for granted

Lt. Col. Thomas D. Fluker, chief, TASC Operations, explained, "People take TASC for granted. When they want something — a chart, photographs or a terrain model, they get it, but they never realize the extraordinary amount of effort and craftsmanship placed into each project."

Approximately 125 people work within TASC — 101 civilians and 24 servicemembers. The civilian work force has remained the backbone of the organization as military strength has increased and decreased over the years.

Fort Benning's TASC supports a 78-county area that includes Reserve and National Guard units and ROTC activities in Florida, Georgia and Alabama. Back-up support is also given to Puerto Rico and the Canal Zone because of their limited TASC facilities.

There are four basic branches in TASC housed in seven buildings on Main Post. They are Administration, Budget and Supply, the Training Aids Center, the Educational Television Branch and the Photographic Studios and Audio-Visual Center. Within each branch are sections. For example, in the Training Aids Branch, there is a Devices Section, which is broken down to include Plastics, Wood, etc.

All requests for training aids go to Bldg 4, Rm 249. Betty Musson, the primary work order clerk, handles all requests.

Training aids

The Training Aids Branch, located in Bldgs 107 and 108, create charts, maps, mock-ups and terrain models. Behind the scenes illustrators and craftsmen do the painting, drawing and lettering, with a meticulousness that borders on perfection.

Trendsetter

William B. Webb, chief of the Training Aids Branch and a 25-year veteran said, "Our Fort Benning TASC is unique because we've implemented new techniques. For example, we have an eight-year-rea artwork morgue fil instructors. We c change it whenev This saves money a Other TACS's have example."

MAH's Extension Photolab covers assignments of a medical nature such as surgical procedures, autopsies, and operations, which may be used as examples for intern briefings.

If you're wondering where all TASC's supplies and tons of equipment are kept, the answer is the Audio Visual Support Center (AVSC). This supply point stores and issues films, replacement training extension programs (TECHS) and audio-visual equipment such as 16 and 35mm silde projectors, overhead projectors, portable PA systems, color TV monitors, ¾'' video player/recorder television trainer system recorders (TVTs).

The Educational Television Branch (ETV), in Bldg 4, is divided into three sections: audio and motion picture, and TV production.

Audio records reel to reel, video tapes or cassettes, high-speed duplication of reel to reel, multiple cassete duplication and audio pulsing for slide/tape and multi-media presentations such as the show 'I Am the Infantry', which utilizes three projectors at once.

The Motion Picture section edits and produces motion pictures and training films. TV production controls the quality of locally produced television programs for TRADOC and Fort Benning supported units.

Budget Admin. and Supply in Bldg 4 handles all administrative policies, and procedures to include letters on equipment, reports, personnel actions and budget.

Mrs. Carmela Hatfield, chief of Admin. Budget and Supply, commented, ''For the past 25 years, there's never been a dull moment because the work isn't routine. You never know what's going to happen from one day to the next.''

The Central Supply in Bldg 2526 supplies and issues standard stock training aids such as graphic training aids (GTAs), chemicals, paper, mock-up weapons, etc. They have records of everything within TASC.

Fluker is pleased wth the work his people are doing. ''I'm tremendously impressed with the variety of talent in TASC. These people are different than any I've ever worked with before. I have people who can design, build, photograph, draw and create anything!''

Woman officer instructs Infantry

By Betty Zimmerman

Being a second lieutenant and an instructor of the USIAS is no easy task. Credibility is hard to come by.

Add to that the additional disadvantages of being a woman and you create a definite challenge.

But challenges don't frighten 2nd Lt. Marian Mosser from Washington, Pa. The personable young lady put herself through Thiel College in Granville, Pa., and earned a BA in Sociology. She got her MS in Criminal Justice at Youngstown State University, Youngstown, Ohio.

In July 1976, she joined the Army and served for a year as a plain clothes investigator at Fort Bragg, N.C. She even found time to teach criminal justice at Fayetteville State University between shifts with the Provost Marshal's office.

Mosser received a direct commission in July 1977, in the Military Intelligence (MI) branch and completed branch school at Fort Huachuca, Ariz. She really wanted to get into counter-intelligence but her assignment was to the Infantry School instead.

She and Capt. Robert Caspers give MI classes to IOBC, BIOCC, ANCOES and IOAC students, usually 200 men at a time. In January, they will be teaching seven hours a day for all but three working days.

The MI personnel are responsible for gathering, collecting and disseminating information concerning the enemy and area which will aid the commander in planning a tactical operation.

As instructors, they teach the Infantry students how to analyze terrain, carry-out counter-intelligence measures and to recognize Soviet Army equipment, uniforms and rank insignia. They even tell them all about individual Soviet soldiers — their training, personality and weapons. Classes on other possible enemies are conducted in secret blocks.

As MI officers, they are members of the Threat Team and must continually update their information in this area.

Mosser said she is continually confronted with total disbelief that she, a woman, is an Infantry School instructor. But she reminds the students that they are all soldiers and it doesn't really matter what sex they are. After all, her hopes still are to get into counter-intelligence eventually.

AORTA Resolution Run
January 1

The Auburn Opelika Running and Track Association is hosting the 25 kilometer Resolution Run Jan. 1 starting at 9 a.m. in front of the Auburn University Memorial Coliseum. There is no entry fee for the out and back course.

22nd Annual Troy 10 Mile Run
January 6

The 22nd annual Troy 10-mile run, sponsored by the Troy Track Club, will be held Jan. 6 starting at 2 p.m. There will also be a 1.4 mile novice run at 1:30 p.m.

Two hundred tropies will be awarded in the 10-mile run and certificates to novice runners.

Pre-registration is not required. Entry fee is $1.

Course records are held by Bruce Skiles and Marcia Wills with the times of 51 minutes, 27 seconds and 69 minutes, 43 seconds.

Savannah Marathon
January 6

The Savannah Striders are sponsoring a marathon (26 miles, 385 yards) Jan. 6 at Hunter Army Airfield. The course is certified and flat. For more information, contact John Burke at (912) 236-9511 or write to P.O. Box 9846, Savannah, Ga. 31402.

Running at Dusk and Dawn

Runners should use extreme caution when running at dawn or dusk. These semi-lighted times cut the driver's vision capabilities drastically and drivers may not have time enough to react by the time they see you.

Wear light colored clothing and reflective material. Reflective wrist bands and vests can be purchased at most sports stores.

Concern airs tomorrow

Fort Benning Concern, a monthly news and feature TV magazine, will air tomorrow at 6 p.m. on WYEA, Channel 38. This month's program features "The New Breed," a film depicting various aspects of Army training. Tune in as your hosts, Specs. 4 Syl Underwood and Kirk Dorn, keep you up to date on Army happenings. Your comments are encouraged and may be submitted to: Fort Benning Concern, Public Affairs Office, USAIC, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905.

Patrolling: B-3-1 practices for 'real thing'

By Pat Astran

Troops with Co B, 3rd Bn, 1st ITB learn what it is like to patrol an area as well as the tactics involved in acquiring information.

After ten weeks of concentrated OSUT training, the "Bravo Bushmasters" learn how to communicate quietly, and move in and out of an area quickly and undetected. Patrolling gives them the chance to practice all earlier tactics training in a realistic scenario.

While on patrol, the soldier's mission is to gather information and return it to the commander as quickly as possible.

The soldier must take note on the size of the unit, the activity or the lack of activity within the area, the location, time, the uniform and equipment.

Soldiers will also learn to stay alert for sources of information such as maps, photos and documents, enemy signal communications, and enemy personnel.

That night, the B-3-1 Bushmasters raided and destroyed enemy positions they had reconned during the day phase. Their day's training paid big dividends with a successful conclusion to a demanding day of training.

Inspection

Lt. Col. (Ret.) Bethell Edrington Jr., president of the local chapter of the Association of the U.S. Army, inspects a Light Anti-Tank Weapon (LAW) during a visit to the 197th Infantry Brigade recently. Lt. Col. Edrington commanded the 3rd Battalion, 7th Infantry during the Korean Conflict.

DA sets temperature

Department of the Army has instructed all installations to set temperature controls this winter to maintain a maximum of 65 degrees Fahrenheit during the day and 55 degrees Fahrenheit at night. The controls apply at all CONUS installations except when overridden by contractual and government agreements.

Exceptions to this policy are permitted for hospitals and areas containing specialized equipment. MACOM' and installation commanders may establish lower temperature standards where appropritae to local mission and actual building use. (FORSCOM)

Infantry representative aids officers' careers

By Betty Zimmerman

Infantry officers have many people interested in their career development. One of these is the Infantry branch representative right here at the USAIS.

Capt. Gary M. Weersing, an Infantry officer, came to Benning from the 9th Inf Div, Fort Lewis, Wash. in November.

The responsibility of career development starts with his boss, Officer Personnel Management System (OPMS) at DA level and continues through the branch representative to the commander and then to the individual.

OPMS has the overall responsibility to make worldwide assignments. They integrate civil and military schooling and insure the young officer receives progressive assignments.

The branch representative serves as a point of contact for Branch actions in the Fort Benning area. He provides career counseling and assistance through telephonic coordination with MILPERCEN.

He sets up branch visits, monitors the preparation of orders published at Benning, helps officers get Airborne and Ranger School following IOBC, helps with the accountability of "snowbird" "blackbird officers" (those in a holding status), presents career orientation briefings to officer candidate classes, and issues assignment instructions, as required, to IOAC students.

He also monitors the disposition of officers failing to complete IOAC or IOBC. This includes officers voluntarily resigning from the Army or withdrawing from IOAC. Another job is to coordinate with DTD and USAIS, the sequential training requirements at Fort Benning for advance course students based upon their duty assignment after IOAC.

Therefore, if you are an Infantry officer and have any questions concerning your assignment, schooling or career in general, see Weersing in Rm 542, Infantry Hall.

History of New Year's customs

Ancient Egyptians beat each other over the head to observe the New Year. Indebted Japanese once committed suicide on Jan. 1. Modern Americans watch football.

From the pyramids to the Rose Bowl, people have greeted the New Year with revelry, ritual, and often a touch of violence, the National Geographic Society says.

The custom of making noise on New Year's Eve dates back to the ancient custom of driving out evil spirits. In Scotland, young men and boys still parade in the village streets on Dec. 31, shouting loudly to drive out supposed demons and witches. In Denmark, young people smash the New Year in by banging on people's doors. Dancers in Japan go to friends' homes and make weird noises as they rattle bamboo sticks.

Father Time Mix-up

Father Time survives as a descendant of the Greek festivities featuring the god Cronus, lord of the universe. Cronus bore the lines of inestimable years on his face, and he carried a scythe. Later, Cronus's name was confused with the word chronos, meaning "time." So the hourglass has been placed permanently in the hand of the white-haired gentleman with the scythe who hobbles out with the old year.

The widespread observance of Jan. 1 as the start of a new year stems from Roman times. Julius Caesar arbitrarily chose that date as the first day of the year when he initiated the Julian calendar. Moreover, January, the first month, is also Roman, named after Janus, a god of doors and gates in Roman mythology. His two faces symbolize the passage from something old to something new.

Football and Mummers

Several New Year's Day traditions in the United States have become better known through the medium of television. Few Americans who settle down in their chairs on New Year's Day afternoon to watch the traditional Pasadena Rose Bowl game are aware that for a decade before the games began in 1916 the main New Year's Day attraction in Pasadena was chariot races.

Many U.S. and Canadian cities now feature New Year's Day parades. The granddaddy of them all is the Philadelphia Mummers' Parade, first held 101 years ago. For many years before the parade, the Mummers — a Philadelphia fraternal group — roamed the countryside, making merry and playing music from Christmas until New Year's. Then in 1876, Mummer bands were assembled into a parade, the forerunner of today's New Year parade festivities.

As to resolutions, probably as old as New Year observances, consider what Nathaniel Hawthorne wrote: "There is no such thing in man's nature as a settled and full resolve for good or evil except at the very moment of execution."

Be that as it may — Happy New Year!
