The Volkswagen Scirocco lets you dominate all the roads on which you travel. Its new 1.8-liter engine will make it difficult for others to keep up with you.

The 1984 Scirocco can even help you accumulate greater wealth. Consider its manufacturer's suggested retail price: Only $10,870. That's thousands of dollars less than any German-engineered sports car.† Put yourself where you deserve to be. In the driver's seat.

1984 Scirocco. $10,870. It's not a car. It's a Volkswagen.

Mfr's sugg. retail price includes a 12-month unlimited mileage, limited warranty. Transp., license, dealer prep additional. *Obey your local speed limits. †Based on a comparison of mfr's sugg. retail prices. Seatbelts save lives.

Gen. Foss eyes Fort Benning command

Major General John Foss will succeed Lt. Gen. James J. Lindsay as Fort Benning's Commanding General and Commandant of the Infantry School at a change of command ceremony March 29 at 10 a.m. on York Field.

Gen. Foss, who has had several past assignments at Fort Benning, is a veteran of more than 33 years service and has had eight overseas assignments. In 1951, he enlisted in the Regular Army as an Infantryman and was commissioned in the Infantry upon his graduation from the United States Military Academy at West Point in 1956.

He then attended the Infantry Officer Basic Course and took Airborne and Ranger training at Fort Benning. From 1957 to 1959, he was a platoon leader in battle groups of the 504th and 187th Airborne Infantry in Germany and spent three and one-half months in Beirut, Lebanon. He completed his tour in Germany as a company executive officer in the 24th Infantry Division and from 1960 to 1962 he served here with the Infantry School in the Ranger Department.

In 1963 and 1964, he was battalion operations officer and a rifle company commander in the 3rd Battalion, 32nd Infantry, 7th Infantry Division in Korea.

From 1964 to 1965, he was a tactics instructor at West Point and, from 1965 to 1967, the first U.S. exchange instructor at Sandhurst, England's Royal Military Academy.

Gen. Foss served from 1967 to 1968 as brigade operations officer in the Central Highlands of Vietnam with the 2nd Brigade of the 4th Infantry Division, then one of the largest mechanized divisions in Vietnam. In 1969 and 1970, he commanded the 3rd Battalion, 12th Infantry, 4th Infantry Division, also in Vietnam.

In 1970, he was the operations officer for training with VII Corps in Germany and from 1973 to 1977 was assigned to the U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command headquarters, serving in the Combat Development Planning Group and as Chief, Division Restructuring Study Group.

From 1977 to 1980, Gen. Foss commanded the 3rd Brigade, 1st Cavarly Division, and was operations officer of III Corps, Fort Hood, Texas. In 1980, he became Chief, U.S. Military Advisory Group in Manila, the Phillippines, and in 1982, was assigned again to Germany as Commanding General, Seventh Army Training Command, Grafenwoehr.

Gen. Foss is a graduate of the Army War College and has a master's degree in public administration.

His awards and decorations include the Silver Star with Oak Leaf Cluster and numerous other U.S. and foreign awards. He is a Ranger and senior parachutist and earned parachute badges from the British and Phillippine armies.

Gen. Foss' wife, Gloria, is a native of Glasgow, Scotland, who came to the U.S. at age 16. She graduated from Columbus (Ga.) High School and is a registered nurse and graduate of the Columbus Medical Center School of Nursing.

Gen. and Mrs. Foss were married at Fort Benning on April 6, 1957, and have three children: Sp4 John, Jr., who is with the 2nd Armored Division, Fort Hood, Tex.; Kevin, of Austin, Tex.; and Julia who accompanies her parents.

Post symposium aids local small business owners

By Ben Walburn
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Improving the military's methods of awarding contracts is as important to the Armed Services as it is to the small business who will benefit, a member of the House Armed Services Committeee said here Saturday.

Congressman Richard Ray, (D, Ga.) stressed this to more than 300 people gathered at Fort Benning for a symposium aimed at teaching small business owners in the area, how to win government contracts. He said Fort Benning and other military installations cannot survive without small businesses doing some of the jobs.

Ray, along with Senator Sam Nunn (D, Ga.) Alabama Congressman Bill Nichols and Maj. Gen. Jim Lindsay, Fort Benning commander, sponsored the one-day symposium.

tant prices for small parts, Nichols said this is partly due to the fact that contracting officers receive catalogues from prime contractors listing items and their prices.

He stated that, "it's so easy to use the catalogues" instead of checking to see whether a small business or another manufacturer offers the same item at a lower price.

Nichols said a "spare parts bill" is now being considered by an investigative subcommittee to suggest some new controls on small parts purchases and that high prices now being paid for simple, inexpensive items should "be embarrassing to the defense firms."

One purchasing change being considered, he said, is to combine all inventory information from all branches into one central computer bank. This is because the subcommittee discovered that in some cases, one branch of the military ordered items at high prices when another branch of the service had a surplus of the same items.

Nichols drew a response from one symposium attendee when he remarked that unwieldy specifications keep small businesses out of the spare parts competition. The attendee charged that large businesses put so many technical details in the specifications that the local business cannot compete, not having all the information it needs.

Controlling specifications, setting up consumer advocate programs and limiting proprietary rights will make a spare parts bill difficult to write, Nichols said. Also, he added, Congress needs to make sure that legislation is "tough enough to do the job and yet that it doesn't have so much red tape" involved. (USAIC PAO)

RED CROSS

Giving support for 103 years

March is National Red Cross Month. Throughtout the month, the memory of the origin, past contributors and present operations of the American Red Cross will be promoted across the country.

The American Red Cross came into being in July 1881 under the laws of the District of Columbia. At the time of its organization, Clara Barton was named as the first president of the American Red Cross.

At first, the group's work dealt mainly with disaster relief, helping people cope with forest fires, natural disasters and the like. It wouldn't be until many years later that the Red Cross would achieve the prominence and variety of assistance it is known for today.

The first opportunity to "furnish volunteer aid to the sick and wounded of armies in time of war" came to the Red Cross in 1898, during the Spanish-American war. They were able to provide medical assistance, food, clothing and some shelter to a select few.

The old charter of the Red Cross was found to be unsatisfactory and was resolved in 1904. In January of 1905, President Theodore Roosevelt and an act of Congress revived the campaign and approved a reorganization of the Red Cross. The new charter required a yearly audit of Red Cross accounts be made by the War Department and federal supervision be provided by an official representative of the government. The supervision was intended to prevent over development and extravagant policy, but not limit the society's flexibility and speed in operation. A last important step in federal recognition of the American Red Cross was taken by President Robert A. Taft on Aug. 22, 1911 when he proclaimed, ". . . .the American Red Cross is the only volunteer society authorized by this government to render aid to its land and naval forces in time of war. Any other society desiring to render similar assistance can only do so only through the American National Red Cross." From that time of the new charter and Taft's proclamation, the Red Cross became national in operation, scope and standing.

Today, the American Red Cross, with support and cooperation of the American people, has committed itself to the provision of essential health and social welfare services to the member of the Armed Forces and its veterans. During every conflict, beginning with the Spanish American War, and in times of peace, the Red Cross has operated under terms of the Treaty of Geneva and carried out the requirements of its congressional charter.

The modern Red Cross basically operates under two main requirements: to furnish volunteer aid to the sick and wounded of the Armed Forces and to act in matters of voluntary relief and in accordance with military authorities as a medium of communication between people of the United States and their Armed Forces.

Most pamphlets and packets of information from the Red Cross specifically state". . . the Red Cross is a voluntary social welfare agency with no counterpart in other humanitarian or charitable organizations in the United States. It is maintained by volunteers and a paid staff working in chapters, on military installations and in hospitals worldwide and in Veterans Administration offices and hospitals."

The Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines all provide the Red Cross with considerable support. Through items such as office space, housing for staff, transportation to and from overseas, use of the AUTOVON military telephone system and use of the Defense Communcations System for emergency messages worldwide, the military is one of the Red Cross' biggest assets. In some cases, the military couldn't function efficiently without the Red Cross and vice versa. American Red Cross services to members of the Armed Forces and their families are documented by regulations of the U.S. Department of Defense. They also follow the military services that offer positive support for the mission and activities of the organization. With a network this vast, the Red Cross is a unique national resource able to provide many different types of health and welfare services to help individuals and their families avoid problems and emergencies, prepare for those that cannot be avoided, and cope with them when they occur.

The latest Red Cross advertising slogan is simply, "Give." Their slogan is a reflection of every service the Red Cross provides, able to give and receive at the same time. (McClellan News)

On call

498th Air ambulance crew constantly races to save lives

By Bill Reynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The cribbage game was forgotten as the "first up" crew rushed out to their waiting helicopter.

The blowing of the horn signaled an end to the marathon card game that was being played.

The crew chief unhooked the main rotor of the UH1H (Huey) with the big red cross painted on the nose as one of the pilots checked the craft. By the time the pilot-in-command received his briefing and walked out to the bird, the engine was running and it was ready to lift off.

Each move of the crew had been rehearsed so many times there was no wasted movement. The soldiers were looking at the pilot waiting for instructions on what type of mission they were going on. This one was a "milk run," a retired Army sergeant had had a heart attack, been rushed to Martin Army Community Hospital, was stabilized and now needed to be transported to the VA hospital in Tuskeegee.

More than 150 times this year the horn has blown in the operations room at Lawson Field, sending soldiers scrambling to their waiting ships.

The men of the 498th Medical Company (Air Ambulance), 34th Medical Battalion, live "on call" according to the operations officer, Capt. Richard H. Agosta. He says the unit's mission is, in wartime, the evacuation of patients and the transportation of badly-needed medical supplies.

Here at Fort Benning, the unit has four missions, according to Agosta. They are to provide medical support

43rd Eng. soldiers hone skills during practice squad ARTEP

By Bill C. Walton
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The men of Company C, 43rd Engineer Battalion, 36th Engineer Group got a chance to practice their basic soldiering skills last week during a practice squad ARTEP.

"We have a battalion ARTEP coming up in June," said Capt. Albert Vargesko, C Company commander. "So we are starting with the basic unit, the squad, and will progress into platoon and company size exercises before then. Our soldiers have had plenty of practice in their construction skills, as we just completed the new MOUT site, and these exercises give them a chance to sharpen their basic skills."

The soldiers were airlifted from Lawson Airfield by 36th Engineer Group helicopters, to a field site in the northern part of the post. Following a mission briefing by Vargesko the squads tackled the simulated combat assault problem.

In addition to the terrain problems, aggressors were encountered throughout the problem, to insure that the troops took advantage of all available cover and concealment. As this was being conducted as a learning process C Company platoon leaders acted as umpires and critiqued the squads after each part of the problem was solved.

After the initial contact with the aggressors one of them was captured. This gave the soldiers a chance to practice handling a prisoner of war.

The first objective was a heavily defended hilltop. To prevent a surprise attack, the aggressors had lookouts in the trees. Even that didn't help them as the squads used their fire teams as fire and maneuver elements to assault and take the objective.

This gave the squad members a chance to consolidate and to set up a defensive perimeter while the squad leaders practiced in preparing range cards for their crew served weapons.

Crossing a contaminated area was the next obstacle facing the soldiers. To insure mission accomplishment, all the men put on the MOPP-4 uniforms before starting this part of the exercise.

After negotiating the contaminated area the squads set up a hasty defensive perimeter and dug in to prepare against simulated nuclear fallout, the final test of the exercise.

During the post mission debriefing 3rd squad leader Sgt. Jorge Colon expressed his feeling about the practice ARTEP by saying "I think the training was great and we should do it more often."

to Fort Benning's mission by evacuating injured soldiers to Martin Army Community Hospital, transportation of military members to more definitive care, training of the pilots and crews, and a DoD-directed mission of military aid to safety and traffic.

The air ambulance unit does this by keeping two helicopters, complete with crews, ready to go at all times. The system is called, stated Agosta, "First up and Second up." He says, "We have the first up and second up aircraft on the pads 'ready to go,' everyday. During hazardous training on the post, the first up aircraft has a response time of approximately five minutes from the time of mission receipt until launch.

"When the 'first up' aircraft is out, the 'second up' aircraft assumes 'first up' for that time frame. That aircraft goes under the same guidelines — any post mission that would come about would be a five minute response."

The rapid response of air ambulance units like the 498th has often been credited as the reason for the saving of many lives since the early 50s.

According to Agosta, the air ambulance can get to anywhere on post within minutes.

The "First up" aircraft returns from its mission to Tuskeegee.

The crew of the aircraft inspects the aircraft, performing both post-flight and secondary pre-flight inspections. Once the inspections are complete, the crews go back to their normal duties — waiting for the horn.

Alcohol not allowed at Flat Rock Park

Since the first of the year, 11 soldiers from Fort Benning have been arrested at Flat Rock Park for drinking. According to Virgil Phillips, park ranger, soldiers drinking at the park is becoming a problem.

"It's really getting bad now. It's worse than any other time I can remember and I've been working here four years," Phillips said.

City code 3-5.E states no alcoholic beverages are allowed in any of the city parks. Phillips said that the Columbus Police Department has begun to help the park rangers check the city park for violaters.

"Most people know alcohol is not allowed in the parks, because they try to hide the stuff if they see us coming around," Phillips added.

He also said if someone is stopped in the park for something and alcohol is found, they will be arrested.

Programs help better life for post families

By Robert McClain
USAIC Public Affairs Office

(Editor's note: In last week's edition of the BAYONET, we examined the Army Chief of Staff's White Paper report on the importance of Army families. As part of a series of articles on the Army family, this week we will examine how Fort Benning supports the family.)

According to the recent Family White Paper Report by the Army Chief of Staff, the family is a very important part of accomplishing the Army mission.

In the report, Army Chief of Staff Gen. John A. Wickham Jr. stated, "A partnership exists between the Army and Army families. The Army's unique missions, concept of service and life-style of its members—all affect the nature of this partnership. Towards the goal of building a strong partnership, the Army remains committed to assuring adequate support to families in order to promote wellness; to develop a sense of community; and to strengthen the mutually reinforcing bonds between the Army and its families."

Fort Benning's community life officer, Maj. John Ross agrees with Gen. Wickham. "Families are an integral part of Army life. If a soldier's family life is strong and stable he is a happier and more content soldier. Therefore, he is a better soldier," he stated.

According to Ross, much is done at Fort Benning to make life better for the soldier and his family. "Community mayors and their staffs, area coordinators and community life NCOs are able to assist families directly with their problems. If they can not help the soldier, the staff of the Community Life office can take action to solve the problem," he added.

In addition to problem solving, Ross stated that one of the main goals of Fort Benning's community life program is to help develop a "sense of community" on post.

"Our community mayors and their voluteer staffs are a big part of developing this sense of community at Fort Benning. It is really the activities and programs they develop that help build that feeling of belonging in post families," he said.

According to the Family White Paper report, this need to belong or "sense of community" is an important part in building a partnership between the Army and its families.

The report also brought out that Army families have many problems unique to Army life. At Fort Benning, there are many agencies that soldiers and their families can turn to in time of need.

Because of the Army Community Service (ACS) program, Benning soldiers can find assistance in meeting personal and family problems beyond the scope of their own resources.

Through various agencies within ACS, families can find assistance with almost any problem they face. They can receive tips to help make ends meet, get household goods on loan, or find help for a handicapped family member. ACS also has programs dealing with child and spouse abuse.

> "Families are an integral part of Army life."

Family members can find assistance in job placement through the Civilian Personnel Division. And families can find help with child care at Fort Benning's Tot Town Nursery. Activities are also provided for post children through the Youth Activities Branch. The program provides a wide range of recreational programs for the children to include social activities, sports, music, dramatics, arts and crafts and community wide events.

Though much is currently being done for families, Ross added the job is not finished. "Support for the families has come along way but, we need to continue to receive progressive support from the Army as the program grows. Also, we need to get more residents involved in inter-community activities. We can never stop trying to better the program," Ross concluded.

SPIRIT savings can be found in unexpected places

By Bill Reynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Efforts to get "to the bottom" of the sanitary landfill netted Fort Benning more than $1.07 million in SPIRIT savings.

The million-dollar savings came when workers at the landfill noticed that many of the wooden pallets used to move material and supplies on Fort Benning were in "almost new" or usable condition.

According to Charles S. Campbell, storage manager, supply division, Directorate of Industrial Operations, an average of 75 to 100 wooden pallets and skids arrive at the Post Central Receiving Point each day. This figure does not include the number that are received at the main exchange, Martin Army community Hospital or the commissary.

According to the storage manager, approximately 60 percent of the skids received are issued to the customers when they pick up supplies or material. These customers are urged to return the skids when they off-load. Unfortunately, that has not always been the case, usable pallets were being carried to the landfill and dumped with the rest of the trash.

"Customers are requested to return all serviceable and reusable pallets to the property issue point," said Campbell, "pallets are expensive."

The SPIRIT initiative that captured the savings was to identify and separate the usable pallets from the damaged ones — at the landfill. The Sanitation Branch of the Directorate of Engineering and Housing, during December and January, ran a test to determine the cost of the program. They found that the cost of having someone identify the reusable pallets and to return them to the storage facility came to a savings of $41.17 per pallet.

When this figure was applied to the estimated number of pallets thrown away, yearly, the savings amounted to more than $1.07 million.

According to Dot Russell, SPIRIT coordinator, Directorate of Resource Management, this sort of thinking; looking in unexpected places for savings is what the SPIRIT program is all about. "SPIRIT thinking helps to eliminate the waste that raises the cost of doing business," declared Mrs. Russell, "We have to take a look at the way we accomplish our jobs and try to do them in the most efficient manner."

Drills, families get re-acquainted after cycle completion

By Bill Reynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

It's finished. The Delta Demons are soldiers now and gone on to their new assignments.

The drill sergeants get a chance to relax and get re-acquainted with their families. For the last 13 weeks they have been leaving the house before anyone was awake and returning after everyone had gone to bed.

"My wife says she doesn't know me well enough to call me by my first name." joked SFC Sidney Cooley, senior drill sergeant, Company D, 8th Battalion, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade.

Bill Reynolds

The drills finally get a chance to see some of the changes that have gone on around their houses while they were busy training new soldiers for the Army. There are new curtains in the windows, windows that were only black patches at night as they stumbled from their cars to snatch a few hours sleep before hitting "the trail" the next day.

Their children have grown since Thanksgiving, when the "Demons" arrived. The drill sergeants can, for a little while, put down the stiff campaign hats and the pistol belts, symbols of their chosen profession; and pick up the smiles and concerns of being a father.

"Being able to see your kids every day is like having a new-born kid," said 1st Sgt. Cleveland Harrell, D-8-2, "They're normally asleep when you leave and asleep when you get home."

Time between training cycles is not a "honeymoon" for the cadre of D-8-2, according to the first sergeant, but rather a period of time when they are no longer juggling a series of "priority ones." "We do SQT training, NCO development training and maintenance," commented the first sergeant. "We conduct a 100 percent inventory, re-stencil all equipment and do any necessary painting."

In less than a week the company will be filled with more "Demons." The drills won't see their homes during daylight hours — they will be too busy — training tomorrow's soldiers.

It is also a time to say goodbye — SSgt. David Kesler is leaving for Fort Bragg, N.C. Drill sergeants aren't born they are made. They serve for a time "on the trail" and then move on to other units.

Drill sergeants are obligated to serve on the trail for two years, but many extend for longer periods of time.

In less than a week the company will be filled with more "Demons." The drills won't see their homes during daylight hours -- they will be too busy -- training tomorrow's soldiers.

Chaplain's Views

By Rick L. Needham
Chaplain, 5th Bn., 1st ITB

The Resurrection of Christ is the central theme upon which the entire New Testament rests. Christ's resurrection both affirms and confirms the death of Jesus. It is the resurrection that gives Christ's agonizing, substitutionary death its validity. If Christ remained sealed in the tomb in Jerusalem there would be no salvation.

It is with this in mind and heart that the Apostle Paul writes to the church at Corinth (I Corinthians 15). Paul says, "Now brothers, I want to remind you of the gospel I preached to you, which you received and on which you have taken your stand. By this gospel you are saved . . ." (I Corinthians 15:1-2). Paul then proceeds in the next few verses to reiterate the gospel he received and passed along to the Corinthian church.

He gives us in I Corinthians 15:3-4 the essence of the gospel. He tells us in verse three that "Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures". Christ died once and for all never to die again. On the cross Jesus said, "It is finished." His death was on account of our sins and He paid the supreme price, death. All of this was just as the scriptures had predicted.

Paul goes on in verse four to reiterate the fact that Christ was buried. Why is the burial of Christ so important here? Why is it recorded in all four of the gospels? It is because the burial is one of the evidences of the bodily resurrection.

Continuing, Paul says, "He was raised on the third day according to the Scriptures . . . ". Something dramatic happens here in the Greek language. Up to this point Paul was using verbs, when speaking about Christ's death and burial, which denoted a once and for all, never to happen again, past tense. Now he shifts to the perfect tense which means that some action in the past carries results evident in the present. Christ's Resurrection is evident in the present even today, with the millions of changed lives. Those who have been slaves to their sin have found freedom in the Ressurrected Christ. This new life is not generated by a dead savior, but by the ever present reality of the living Christ.

Jesus remains alive as the Risen One. By His death and burial He came down to our level of humanity, but by His Resurrection He raised us to His level of life. Hosea 6:2 states, "He will raise us up on the third day that we may live before Him." We can not stand before God without the Resurrected Christ living in us and raising us out of the depths of our sin.

Paul later in chapter 15 states, "And if Christ has not been raised, our preaching is useless and so is your faith" (verse 14). "And if Christ has not been raised, your faith is futile; you are still in your sins (verse 16). "If only for this life we have hope in Christ, we are to be pitied more than all men. But Christ has indeed been raised from the dead . . ." (verses 19 & 20).

God in His creation gives us a beautiful picture of the "New Life" found in the Resurrected Christ. We observe in this season of the year the great "Spring Procession of Flowers". The first flower of Spring is the crocus, sometimes seen bursting forth through the snow. The procession continues with the hyacinth, daffodils, tulips, lilacs, and the lillies of the valley.

As the flowers of spring emerge from the dead of Winter, so our lives spring forth from the death grip of sin when we meet the Resurrected Christ. I pray that this Easter you will be introduced to the Risen Lord.

Stresses of parenthood discussed at program

By JoAnne Mercer
Chapel Publicist

"If each of us is honest we realize how close we come from time to time to being abusers," said Chaplain James Masteller as he introduced the film "Cipher in the Snow" to a group of parents gathered at Lloyd School recently. The powerful movie depicted how one lonely boy was "erased little by little," not through overt physical abuse, but through neglect.

Chaplain Masteller, director of the Family Life Center, pointed out that the mother in the film loved her son, Cliff, but didn't know how to express it. The stepfather was the bullying sort who didn't understand Cliff. Both adults were caught in the financial pressure of a low income situation. Consequently, Cliff never got the message, "I count — I have worth."

According to Chaplain Masteller, the film spoke of warning signals that are important for all parent/child relationships. He listed: The struggle for attention on the part of both parents and children; Social isolation - the need for a support group; Poor marital communication and the building up of stress within husband and wife; Parents who are unaware of the normal stages in child development; Poor temper control; and poor stress management.

The group shared childhood experiences that had made an impact upon their growth and development.

Chaplain Masteller went on to say that this kind of communication is important in all our relationships — with spouse, child, parent, or friend. He stressed, "The unique gift you can give is to care about people."

This program was one of several on "Coping with the Stresses of Parenthood" being sponsored by the LloydSchool PTA. Under the leadership of president Kathy Knotts and school principal Spurgeon Glenn, more programs are being planned for this spring.

Chapel welcomes new counselor

By JoAnne Mercer
Chapel Publicist

Mrs. Linda Martinez is the new pastoral counselor at the Main Post Catholic Chapel. Her ministry is especially designed for counseling services to the Catholic and to the Spanish community in general. Sensitive to the needs of the Spanish speaking military wife, she says, "I see so many wives who feel isolated, afraid to go out because they don't speak English very well. They are lonely and need someone to talk to . . . to give them emotional support."

Though raised in New York, Mrs. Martinez has family roots in Puerto Rico, and understands the Spanish community. Her husband is in the military, so she also understands the problems of an Army wife.

Mrs. Martinez recently received her masters degree in community counseling from Georgia State University and did her internship with social services on post. Her work at the Catholic chapel is in close coordination with other helping agencies. She is on the Parish Council and works with the Catholic chaplains. A devout Catholic, Mrs. Martinez says that her work is renewing her own faith as she reaches out and helps others.

Her office hours at Main Post Catholic Chapel are from 8 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. on Monday - Thursday. She is available for individual, marital and family counseling in English and in Spanish. Mrs. Martinez emphasizes: "You don't have to feel that you're going 'crazy' to seek help."

CONTACT offers troubled callers sympathetic ear

Troubled? Lonely? Upset? There is a group who cares and is available to listen and to help 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Call CONTACT at 327-3999.

The director of CONTACT, Susan Stanton emphasizes that this is not just a "Hotline" for persons in crisis situations, but a "Helpline" for any who are lonely and having difficulty in coping with day-to-day situations.

She says that many persons feel, "I should be able to solve my own problems." Yet, CONTACT does not "solve" problems, it "helps the caller see his/her situation in a new light and with different options," Mrs. Stanton emphasizes: "We ask the right questions and the caller comes up with the solution."

CONTACT emphasizes that each caller is assured of confidentiality and can remain anonymous if he/she chooses. Problems may range anywhere from those of crisis proportions to those that are frustrating aggravations of a daily routine. Mrs. Stanton says that usually 60% of the callers are simply lonely and need a sympathetic listener.

The Fort Benning community is very much a part of CONTACT, for there is always a representative from Fort Benning on the governing board, and some of the volunteer staff are retired military personnel or dependents. Also, the Protestant chapels on post financially contribute to CONTACT, especially with their annual Mother's Day offering.

Crew member class tackles squad mission course

By Bill Walton
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Bradley crew member class 3-84 went through one of the most exciting days of the three week course Tuesday when they tackled the Bradley Fighting Vehicle squad mission, during a driving rainstorm.

Senior Bradley instructor SFC Charles Pearce briefed the soldiers on the mission and some of its problems. He gave no answers to the problems but said, "We aren't here to teach you when to low or high crawl, because you have learned that during one station unit training. We want to teach you how to use the Bradley to accomplish your mission and to show you how the Bradley complements the vehicle and vice versa."

Following the briefing the squads went to the assembly area to prepare themselves and their vehicles for the mission. Bradley instructors act as assistant squad leaders during the mission and Sgt. Terry Klahn was in charge of the 1st squad.

He told the soldiers what was expected of them and gave them an assembly area departure time. The trainees camouflaged themselves and the Bradley. They also practiced dismounting procedures, both left and right, until they met Klahn's approval. The last step in the assembly area was to practice the ground action they would take when they assaulted the objective.

The steady downpour had no apparent effect on the student's enthusiasm as they ran through their paces. Private Ty Baker, from Columbus, Ohio, said, "The Bradley is a fantastic vehicle and is the best thing that ever happened to me. I feel lucky to have been selected as a Bradley crewman."

The first problem, indirect fire on the vehicle by using artillery simulators, took place shortly after the Bradley left the assembly area. The squad showed they knew what to do, put on their protective masks, buttoned up the vehicle and continued with the mission.

The second point of contention on the squad mission involves a danger area that requires the squad to dismount to clear the area for the Bradley. Klahn formed the troops into a wedge formation and moved them through the open woods. Crossing an open area they moved on line and used the "bounding overwatch" method, expecting contact. They weren't disappointed as fire from an aggressor bunker caused them to go into the offensive mode with the two fire teams supporting each other. They took the aggressor position without having to call on the Bradley for help.

By this time the men were soaked to the skin but the enthusiasm level seemed to be going up. As they boarded the Bradley again one of the squad members yelled, "I would rather hear a Bradley growl than a pretty girl sing!"The third problem was a small-arms ambush. They took care of this by buttoning up the Bradley and using the M231 firing port weapons to suppress the aggressor fire fire as the vehicle roared by the position at full speed.

A squad sized objective is the final problem of the mission. After dismounting the squad used a file formation, for control purposes, to traverse a densely wooded area, then changed to a wedge formation as the terrain became more open. The Bradley remained in the overwatch position, to call if needed.

As they moved up a steep hill, aggressor contact was made and Klahn gave the hand signal for the squad to move on line. After a furious "firefight" the 1st squad was victorious and captured the position.

Klahn debriefed the men on the conduct of the mission, passing out both praise and criticism. He said, "You guys did great and performed as I hoped you would. All of you showed a lot of motivation and enthusiasm and that is what counts. There were a couple of errors made but they were due to your inexperience and that will take care of itself."

When the squad members were asked what they had learned from the mission, Pvt. William Coats replied, "Have more than 20 rounds in the M60 machinegun belt before attacking an objective. I had to stop and reload and it slowed everything down." Private Arnold Chisholm said he needs to practice his M-16 reloading procedures, so that it would be more instinctive.

Capt. James Sparrow, commander, Company D, Infantry Training Group, which conducts the Bradley training, said, after watching the troops perform, "Our instructors are getting better all the time and I can see the difference in the end result.

"This class brings our total Bradley crewmembers trained here to 360, which equates to five full companies of Bradley crewmen. Starting in July our output will double as we are increasing our class size from 36 to 72 students."

Vandalism is more than 'harmless prank'

Marshal's Viewpoint

By Curtis D. Earp
Post Provost Marshal

One of the most costly crimes on Fort Benning is vandalism. Vandalism is the damaging or defacing of government or private property.

From Jan. 1, 1984 thru March 15, 1984, there have been 73 reported acts of vandalism at Fort Benning. These include private and government owned vehicles, playground equipment, mailboxes, buildings, homes and schools.

Although the perpetrators often perceive vandalism as a "harmless prank," it's not. Vandalism wastes time and money, causes needless suffering and may cause serious physical injuries. You and I pay for every act of vandalism either directly through direct replacement costs, or indirectly through higher taxes for repair/replacement costs or higher insurance premiums.

Losses amount to more than one billion dollars annually. Vandalism often creates suffering through the disruption of vital services (fire, police, electricity, etc.) and injuries may result from the hazards created by vandalism.

Who is responsible for vandalism and why do they do it? Vandals range from children to teenagers to young adults. Anger and a desire for "revenge" against society in general, a particular unit or organization, or a particular person are often the motivating factors for destruction of property. Other common factors leading to vandalism are boredom, drug abuse and alcoholism, lack of discipline and psychological problems on the part of the perpetrators.

Vandalism can be prevented or at least reduced by a few actions on our part as leaders, parents and citizens of this community:

- Protect personal and government property against vandalism by securing the property when not in use, utilizing lighting in dark areas and reporting suspicious people or activities around your home, office, or unit.
- Report any acts of vandalism which you may witness or have knowledge of.
- Get help for children/soldiers when problems are recognized. This help may include professional counseling, referral to a chaplain, or simply establishing a closer relationship between a parent and child.
- Give your children your time and recognition so they won't have to commit destructive acts to get attention. Discipline them when they are wrong, and care enough about them to know how they spend their time and who their friends are.

Let's all join together in the fight against vandalism! We'll all benefit when we do.

Soldiers can cast their vote through absentee ballots

Everyone knows that the life of a professional military member is a very mobile one. And, unless you happen to be stationed in your hometown, casting your ballot for the candidate of your choice can be difficult. That means you'll have to vote absentee.

All members of the Armed Forces, their spouses and family members, 18 years or older, who are U.S. citizens can vote by absentee ballot in federal, state and most local elections in one's legal state of residence (a federal election is any general, special, or primary election held to select, nominate or elect candidates for the office of president, vice president, presidential elector, member of the U.S. Senate, member of the U.S. House of Representatives, delegate from the District of Columbia, resident commissioner of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, delegate from Guam or delegate from the Virgin Islands).

Procedures have been established at the state level under the Federal Voting Assistance Act (FVAA) to let U.S. citizens stationed away from their legal residences register and vote in local, state and federal elections by absentee ballot.

Recognizing that state and local governments have different rules concerning voting, keep in mind that your voting officer has information that will give you detailed information on laws for each state.

And the easiest way to do that is to use the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) available at your legal office or from your voting officer. The FPCA is accepted by all 50 states as either an application for registration forms or as the registration form itself. Further, most states recognize the FPCA as a request for a ballot. You can also send a written request for ballots to your county or town clerk.

If you are already registered to vote and just want to request a ballot, your FPCA should reach election officials in your town at least 40-45 days before the election.

Federal Post Card Applications can be mailed free of charge from any APO or FPO mail facilities, all U.S. Embassies and any post office in the United States. (AFPS)

Policy prohibits headphone wear

Interim Change 101 to AR 385-55, dated Dec. 22, 1983, implements the new Army policy in support of motor vehicle and pedestrian accident prevention efforts on Army installations.

The new policy prohibits the wearing of headphones/earphones by joggers, skaters, pedestrians, bicyclists, motorcyclists and motorists while using installation roads and streets.

Individuals must have the use of their ears to keep them continuously aware of traffic sounds, vehicle horns, sirens, and other audible warning signals.

However, this policy does not negate the requirement for wearing of hearing protective devices in those vehicles that require their use. (Saf. Off.)

Shoppers can help save surcharge dollars

The surcharge collected from Army commissary customers in Fiscal Year 1983 amounted to more than $64 million, according to officials at the U.S. Army Troop Support Agency.

Surcharge, the five-percent fee added to a customer's total purchases after coupon discounts have been deducted from their bill, is returned for use within the Army Commissary System to benefit the customer.

Surcharge is used for construction (50.7 percent) to build new facilities or to make improvements to existing ones; utilities (11.9 percent for commissaries in the United States) which include electricity, heat, steam, water, gas, coal, air conditioning, refrigeration and telephones; automated data processing and equipment (15.2 percent) such as electronic cash registers, scanning, forklift trucks, display cases and meat processing tables; supplies (11.4 percent) which include price marking ink, cash register tape and safety glasses; and maintenance and services (10.8 percent) such as repair of equipment, laundry of uniforms and cleaning supplies. Surcharge is not used to pay employee salaries.

The Defense Appropriations Act requires that commissaries make enough money to reimburse the government for specific operating costs.

Troop Support Agency officials are concerned about the efficient use of surcharge funds and encourage shoppers to help save surcharge dollars. Customers should return carry-out carts to the store instead of leaving them in parking area, avoid asking for more grocery bags than are needed to bag their purchases, control children in the store to help prevent breakage of some items, report shoplifting and return items which they decide not to buy to the proper shelf or display case. The carts, bags, stolen or damaged merchandise are also paid for from surcharge funds. (TSA)

Col. Musselman hosts commander's seminar

By Paula L. Dempe
197th PAO

Recently, Col. James Musselman, 197th Infantry Brigade (Mechanized) (Separate) commander, hosted a commander's seminar for company commaders and the staffs.

The seminars, which are held every six months, serve three basic purposes: First, they let the commanders interact with their staff; second, they let the brigade commander meet with the company commanders in an atmosphere more conducive to discussing duty and social plans; and thirdly, they permit the commanders to pass information directly to the brigade commander, according to Capt. David Bombaugh, Brigade S-1 officer.

Bombaugh feels that the seminars are a good idea.

"Battalion commanders tend to prioritize the information before passing it on," said Bombaugh. "This tends to distort some of it."

Topics discussed were determined by questionaires and surveys sent out to all offices prior to the scheduled start of the seminar.

Colonel Musselman played an active role throughout the seminar. "He spoke with the commanders for a long time about things that mattered to them and himself; like how he rates the awards system," Bombaugh said. "He really let the commanders know that he cares."

"I was pleased with this seminar. Everything went smoothly, the critique was constructive and well expressed, everything went as planned," concluded Bombaugh.

Rain doesn't stop soldiers from qualifying with their 'basic tool'

By Bill Reynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

With the stacatto pace of an auctioneer the voice blared over the loudspeakers, "Scorers, if your man does not have an alibi, have him perform a four-point safety check, get him out of the foxhole and into the prone unsupported position!" With that the men of Company B, 1st Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade all started moving at once.

There was no confusion, the soldiers executed the instructions from the tower in a disciplined manner. Today was too important for any horseplay. Today they were to qualify with the basic tool of the Infantryman — the M16.

There is Airborne, Ranger, Special Forces, Airmobile, Air Assault and Mechanized, but they are all only specialties or different methods of getting the Infantry to the battle. The rifle has been the basic tool of the Infantryman ever since the invention of gunpowder.

Whether the weapon fires a 5.56 mm bullet or a LASER, this is the day an Infantryman is made.

As one man, the soldiers up and down the line at Malone 16 took the empty magazines from their M16 rifles and started the procedure to ensure that their weapons were safe. As one man the scorers watched their firers and raised their paddles to signal the tower that the weapons were, indeed safe.

"My soldiers are well briefed on safety," commented Capt. Antonio Brown, commander, B-1-1. "The drill sergeants explain what is expected of them on the range and keep the soldiers under constant supervision while on the range."

Brown and his drill sergeants keep an eye on the skies. Off and on all day the sky has been pouring rain, drenching the soldiers of Bravo company, obscuring their vision, making it difficult for them to see the targets as they raise up and down. "You can never tell how the weather will affect the scores, " said the Battalion Commander, Lt. Col. James D. George, "Sometimes the weather may be fine and the scores may be lousy." Col. George remembers last winter when the weather was freezing and men from his battalion set a brigade record that lasted for more than six months. He said, commenting on the weather, "You just never know."

Back on Malone 16 Brown and his men were concerned — not about the scores that the Infantrymen were turning in — but about the condition of their soldiers' feet. After the drenching rain and the endless rounds of ammunition hurled downrange they would have to complete a 10-mile roadmarch back to the barracks. The commander and the drill sergeants were concerned about how their men would fare on the march with wet boots.

Blisters and Infantrymen have been at war for centuries. The commander was overheard to voice his concern about his men becoming overheated during the march and cooling too rapidly once they returned to Hanson Barracks, affectionately known as the "Starship."

"The weather is always a factor whenever you conduct training like a road march," Brown Said, "We took that into consideration before we came out here.

"Our plan is to get the mission accomplished without sacrificing common sense and safety."

The soldiers move from firing position to firing position — shooting at targets that pop up out of the mist. This is no arcade game where you get to put your initials on an electronic keyboard. Malone 16 is where Infantrymen prove that they are the cutting edge of the Army. They carry the rifle.

Use caution when buying used car

Generally you have only limited legal protection

By William Spradley
Legal Assistance

You may think you are saving money by buying a used car. Then again you may fall victim to an unscrupulous used car dealer.

When an individual desires to purchase a used car, he or she will have little legal protection in most cases. When you buy a new car there is maximum protection with a 12,000 mile or twelve month warranty. The only expense is the inconvenience of running down to the garage. If the car dealer refuses to repair the newly purchased car within the warranty period, your legal right is to sue for breach of warranty.

However, if the car you purchased was used — WATCH OUT, BE CAREFUL, BEWARE! Remember the only legal protection you have, generally speaking, is limited. The consumer is at the mercy of the used car dealer. The used car dealer isn't legally obligated to provide any warranties. In most cases when the car dealer provides a warranty, it is worthless.

The warranty will begin to read very protectively, then the fine print will waive all the above by using language such as "all express and implied warranties of fitness and merchantability and consequential damages are waived."

When the salesperson tells the buyer the car runs like it is brand new, this isn't a legally binding warranty. This salesperson talk is commonly referred to as puffing. If the salesperson makes a statement or representation of fact, this may be considered a warranty. Warranties may be oral.

Be careful though, because most sales contracts and or warranties will state the only representations legally binding are those recited in the contract and all others made aren't legally binding. Remember the used car salesman wants you to buy. He will tell you about anything to motivate you the consumer to buy.

Then you take the car home and read the warranty and get confused. The warranty directly contradicts the salesperson, because he made oral statements about the car, but the written warranty recites, "There are no warranties expressed or implied; this agreement is the entire agreement of the parties." Who wins? The used car dealer does.

Some used car dealers will give a 30-day or 1000-mile warranty, but you must still be careful. In most cases, the used car dealer will only warrant certain engine components to the exclusion of all other parts.

If you do decide to buy a used car take the following steps:

- First, if the salesperson makes an oral representation, or opinion of fact, demand that he put it in writing. If not, it will be his word against yours. Don't rely on the old line, "We will write it up later."

Before you sign the contract, test drive the car. Also,have an independent car mechanic inspect the engine and transmission. Read the contract and warranty carefully before you sign it. If you have time, make an appointment with the legal assistance office and have an attorney explain the contract and warranty before signing the contract.

Also, pay attention to the finance charges and interest rates. Some car dealers in the Fort Benning area charge as much 25, 30 or 50 percent annual percantage rate. This is legal in Georgia if the principal amount financed exceeds $3000. The consumer should wait and buy a car at a lower interest rate, somewhere else if necessary.

Just remember, failure to read the contract, or ignorance, is not a defense to breaking a contract.

If you have any questions about this article or the legalities of buying a used car, make an appointment with the Legal Assistance Office at building 5.

Juniors break national record play waiting game for title

By Rick Russell
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Fort Benning Junior Rifle Club set a new national team record here last weekend.

Teammembers Tommy Tamas, 581; Gary Stephens, 581; Deena Wigger, 578; and Heidi Hyder, 564, combined to score a total 2,305 out of a possible 2,400 which was one point better than the previous mark.

The team peaked at the right time, according to their coach, Olympic gold medalist Lones Wigger.

"This match was part of the National Indoor Smallbore Rifle Championship. There are several different regionals conducted across the United States between the months of January and April," explained Wigger.

"This match was our regional match and the score will be sent to the national headquarters to be compared with the other regional results, from which team and individual champions will be crowned."

> "All that is left is the waiting."

The results should be known sometime in May. Wigger believes his team has a good shot at the title but all they can do is wait.

"The kids have done all they can do. All that is left is the waiting," continued Wigger. "I think we have a good chance of taking the team title. There is one team, Langley Rifle Club, Langley, Va., that could beat us. They held the previous record and they have a lot of good shoters."

"Tamas and Stephens have a shot at placing in the individual competitions but once again we will just have to wait and see."

Benning's club competes in two different classes at the junior level. The top level is for the more advanced shooters. The intermediate junior level, which also competed for a national title, shot here last weekend as well.

The post's intermediate squad also has a shot at the national title. They scored 2,220 points out of 2,400.

"I was really proud of all of the kids," concluded Wigger. "They rose to the occassion like the champions each one of them are. They have worked very hard and I think their hard work is going to pay off for them."

Post football players head for collegiate gridiron

Four members of the 1983 Fort Benning Doughboy football team will be leaving the service to attend college and play collegiate football.

Roosevelt Davis, 6'1", 200 pound cornerback, will attend Troy State University, Ala. Davis led the 9-2 Doughboys with 12 interceptions and was voted the outstanding defensive back for the 1983 campaign.

Richard Redmond, 6'5", 255 pound offensive tackle, will attend Union College, Ky. Union College's head coach, John Pate, is extremely familiar with Redmond since he was the defensive coordinator for the Doughboys from 1980-1983.

Two Doughboy's head to Iowa to play for Coe College. Ray Lomas, 6'0", 195 pound wide receiver, and Scott Kishton, 6'4", 240 pound offensive tackle, both join Coe's rooster for 1984.

Lomas was the Doughboys second leading receiver the past two seasons averaging over 23 yards per reception. Kishton, a former quarterback in high school, brings speed and strength to Coe's offensive line.

"We have a couple other guys that are presently looking into different programs," commented John Ross, the Doughboys' head coach. "I think this says a lot for the Army, Fort Benning and these soldiers' units. All four plan on continuing their military careers either in the reserves or through ROTC programs. I am just so proud of all these guys." (USAIC PAO)

Willis uses consistency to defend title

By Tommy Pool
USAMU PAO

Members of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit scored hard earned victories in this year's National Mid-Winter Pistol Championships held in Tampa, Fla., last week from March 14-18.

Roger Willis, last years national pistol champion, totaled 2,656 out of 2,700 possible posts to defeat more than 300 competitors in the conventional pistol phase.

Willis put together consistent rounds of 885-885 and 886 during the .22 caliber, centerfire and .45 caliber events to surpass the match runner-up, Richardo Rodriguez of the U.S. Marine Corps who finished at 2,651. Max Barrington of USAMU claimed third place with 2,645 points.

In international competition, Erich Buljung of USAMU, won both the standard and centerfire events with scores of 580 and 593 respectively.

In team competition, the USAMU "blue" squad won four of the five team events over U.S. Army Reserve, National Guard and USMC squads. Team members from USAMU included:

Free Pistol
Erich Buljung, Jimmie McCoy and Gary Marsh..... (1,577)
Rapid Fire
John McNally, Waymond Alvis and Rojelio Arredono..... (1,705)
Standard
Erich Buljung, Jimmie McCoy and Rojelio Arredono..... (1,718)
Centerfire
Erich Buljung, Jimmie McCoy and Rojelio Arredono..... (1,768)

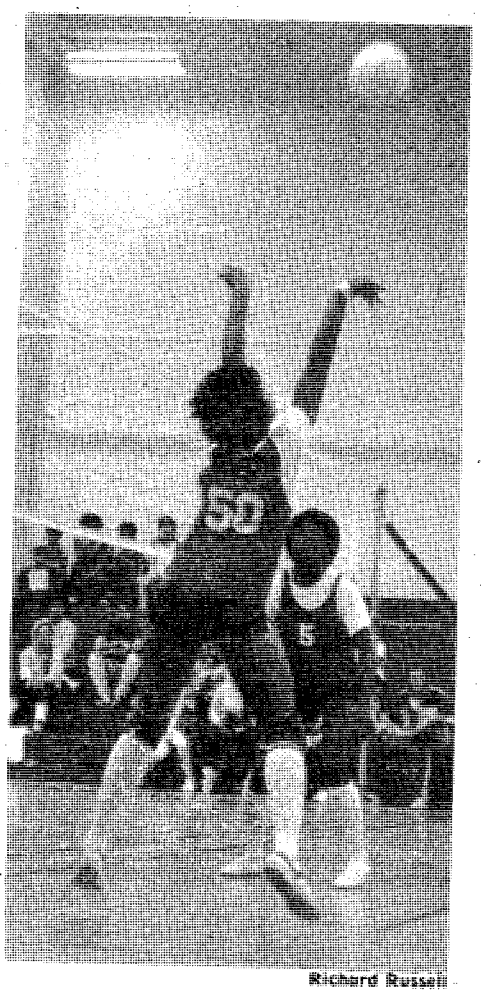
Women volleyballers begin quest for post title



Richard Russell

The Queen of Hearts are presently atop the women's division with a 2-0 record.

By Rick Russell
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 1984 Women's USAIC Volleyball league got underway this week at Santiago Gym on Sand Hill.Five teams will be vying for the post title.

"Presently I think the league is split between the two unit teams and the three mixed squads," commented Speedy Austin, director of the league. "I think the mixed teams are right now just a little better than the unit teams because they are more familar with the sport. It won't take the unit squads long to close up the ground between them and the mixed teams and I look for a very competitive season."

Spike Force is the defending champion. Coach Lupe Logo knows that repeating as post champions will be a tall order.

"We have four other girls besides myself returning from last year's squad," stated Logo. "We have also added a member from the Golddiggers team, the squad that finished last season as the post runner ups. I think that teamwork and a lot of sweat is what is going to take to repeat as post champions."

One coach, Michael Mack, doesn't think that Spike Force is the team to beat. He believes his team, the Intruders, are the cream of the division.

"We are the team that the rest of the division will have to shoot to catch," said Mack. "The Intruders are traditionally strong in every sport and this year's volleyball team is no exception. I have a couple of girls who have played college ball so I would have to say that experience is on our side."

Mack went on to say, "Defense will be the key to any teams success. Certain rule changes during the past couple of years have made the sport more offensive minded. A team that plays good, sound defense will be successful."

The three other teams in this year's division include the Queen of Hearts, 197th Infantry Brigade and the 524th Administrative Company of the 36th Engineer Group.

All matches are played at Santiago Gym. The best two-out-of three games determines the match winner. The women play on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday nights. The league will be a triple round robbin, with each team playing 15 matches. A double elimination tournament will be conducted at the end of the regular season to determine the post title.

Grasshopper results

Panthers 3.....Tigers 0

A complete team effort enabled the Panthers to defeat the previous undefeated Tigers 3-0 last Saturday. Neil Quimy scored the Panther's first goal on assists from Ecric Smock and Denise Quimby. Smock broke into the scoring column also by scoring his team's second goal. He thebn assisted on the Panthers' final score when Chermie Taylor rocketed a shot past the Tiger goalie.

Thunder 4.....Demons 0

The Blue Thunder claimed sole possession of first place Saturday when they downed the Red Demons, who were previously undefeated, 4-0. The Blue Thunder's win cuppled with the Tiger's loss gave the Thunder a one-game lead over the four team tied for second place, the Panthers, Scorpions, Tigers and Red Demons. Kieth Blackstone accounted for three of his team's four goals. Daniel Coyle became the first Thunder player other than Blackstone to score a goal this season when he drilled one into the net in the second-half.

Scorpions 1..... Gold Eagles 0

John Strange scored the game's only goal to led the Scorpions to a 1-0 victory over the Golden Eagles. Chris McCormick, Tara Norton and John Shine played well for the Scorpions as well.

A Team 5..... Cheetas 0

Termite results

Tigers 7.....Strikers 6

In a game which decided which team would claim sole possession of first place, the Tigers won a hard fought battle over the Strikers 7-6. Michael Hitchcock, Jason Smith and David Sorrell supplied the scoring punch for the Tigers. The Strikers got two goals a piece from Donald Langhorne and Derick McCreight. Steve Lorick and Jerry Bellamy each scored a goal to round out the Strikers' scoring.

Eagles 3.....Gold Eagles 2

Andy Nix scored two goals to lead the Eagles to a 3-2 victory over the Golden Eagles. Peter Rounsaville accounted for the Eagles other score. The Golden Eagles got goals from Stewart Burton and Jeffrey Parker.

Red Dragons 3.....Cosmos 2

Junior results

Strikers 2..... Warriors #2 2

The two undefeated teams in the Junior Division meet Saturday afternoon and after the smoke had cleared both squads remained undefeated. They played to a 2-2 tie and a shootout was not conducted. The Strikers got goals from Jeff Elliot and Michael Parker. The Warriors countered with goals from Daniel Swan and John McGlee. A shootout should have been conducted but since it wasn't it will have to be done at a later date.

Warriors #1 4..... Bayonets 0

The Warriors got three goals from Dennis Lane and another from Orest Lebedovych enroute to a 4-0 shutout of the Bayonets. Billy Boess was credited with an assist. He also turned in a strong defensive performance which help the Warriors to hold the Bayonets scoreless.

(Games with scores only mean a publicity sheet was not turned into the YA sports office.)

Golfers tee it up on St. Patrick's Day

By Rick Russell
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The St. Patrick's Day Two-Ball Scramble golf tournament on the Pineside Course of the Follow Me Golf Course was conducted last Saturday. The tourney awarded prizes to the top 13 teams and closest to the hole.

The team of Tommy Moon and Charles Darnell combined to shoot a five-under-par 67 to win the second tournament of the year. They beat Howie Smothers and "Ringo" Johnson, who also shot a 67, by the predetermined tie breaker of a reverse scorecard playoff. The team of Moon and Darnell won $34 per player while Smothers and Johnson settled for $25 a piece.

Third place went to Buddie Brooks and Charlie Bonnett who finished a distant three strokes back with an 18-hole score of 70, two-under-par.

The closest to the hole awards featured Walt Fraley who claimed two of the four prizes by landing the closest to the pin on both the #4 and #7 holes.

The next tournament is scheduled for Sunday. It will be a couples tourney, one man and women per team.

Power Trip. The Volkswagen Scirocco lets you dominate all the roads on which you travel. Its new 1.8-liter engine will make it difficult for others to keep up with you.

The 1984 Scirocco can even help you accumulate greater wealth. Consider its manufacturer's suggested retail price: Only $10,870. That's thousands of dollars less than any German-engineered sports car.† Put yourself where you deserve to be. In the driver's seat.

1984 Scirocco. $10,870. It's not a car. It's a Volkswagen.

Obey your local speed limits. †Based on a comparison with Porsche, Mercedes, BMW, Audi, Saab, Datsun 280ZX, Toyota Supra, Nissan 300ZX, Alfa Romeo, Fiat, Mazda RX-7 and Honda Prelude.

Generals Lindsay and Foss, outgoing and incoming Infantry Center commanders.

Gen. Foss takes command

By Bill Reynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Yesterday, the title "Chief of Infantry" changed hands for the third time since its revival in 1982 when Lt. Gen. nominee James J. Lindsay returned the Fort Benning colors to Gen. William R. Richardson, TRADOC commander, in a ceremony at York Field.

General Richardson then passed the colors to the new post commander and Chief of Infantry, Maj. Gen. John W. Foss.

Gen. Lindsay commented on his time as Chief of Infantry by saying, "The past nine months have been the most challenging and intense period in my life." He said he viewed his time at Fort Benning as, "sort of like serving with someone in combat; you only serve for a short time, but it's an emotional bond that remains with you for the rest of your life."

The new Chief of Infantry commented on his feelings at taking command of the Infantry Center by saying, "All of us are going to have to work together to keep Fort Benning the great post that it is . . . to make sure that Infantry does remain the 'Queen of Battle' and the leader of combat arms."

Gen. Foss comes to Fort Benning from Grafenwoehr, Germany, where he was the Commanding General, 7th Army Training Command.

Allen Horne

Maj. Gen. Foss accepts the Infantry Center colors from Gen. Richardson as the former commander looks on.

Single soldiers shouldn't be forgotten

Robert McClain

Last week I wrote an article discussing all the programs Fort Benning has to "improve the quality of life for Army families." After I finished the article, I began to wonder; What about the 50 percent of the soldiers who are single. What is being done to improve the quality of life for these soldiers?

VOLAR program helped

I tried to find Army-wide programs (like those for Army families) that were aimed at improving the quality of life for single soldiers. Initially, I could find none. The VOLAR (Volunteer Army) program of the early 1970s did much to improve life for single soldiers. Because of the program, action was taken to transmit the message to the soldier that he or she was an adult and he was going to be treated as such — as long as he performed. The program helped to improve barracks life and to improve unit morale.

After looking at the problem more closely, I found that there are programs for single soldiers. Unit athletics, recreational services, muscial performances, arts and crafts shops and a number of other outlets are available with single soldiers in mind. Living conditions have improved for the single soldier, but there are still complaints about barracks life ranging from a lack of privacy to a lack of visitation rights.

Restrictions neccesary

In one sense, certain barracks restrictions do provide for the overall safety and welfare of soldiers living in the barracks. True, some things can't change. The barracks must stay clean and inspections will probably always be a part of Army life. But perhaps it is time to re-examine all of the restrictions based on the mature type of soldier who is today's Army. Some of these soldiers are more than 30 years old. Some are sergeants and staff sergeants. In my mind, most of these soldiers are responsible adults and should be treated as such. And those soldiers who can't act accordingly should be treated on an individual basis.

Indeed, some commanders are trying to improve life for their soldiers. Increased company activities, improved living conditions and gripe councils are a few things commanders are working on. Morale support activities also do much to improve morale and life for soldiers. Still, more needs to be done.

Single home life

In the Army Chief of Staff's White Paper Report on the importance of Army families, it was brought out that a soldier's home life is an important part of accomplishing the Army mission. These same beliefs apply to the single soldier as well.

The white paper report also brought out that the happier and more content a soldier is with his home life the more likely he will reenlist.

Don't get me wrong, I am all for the Army policies for better family life. Many great strides have been taken to help Army families. The unique problems Army families face are being looked at and solutions are being recommended. Also families are beginning to feel a strong "sense of community" at Army posts. Some families that might have once felt neglected now feel they belong. We need to help single soldiers maintain their spirit of belonging as well.

Shouldn't be neglected

The Army should take a second look at the life of the single soldier — there is always room for improvement.

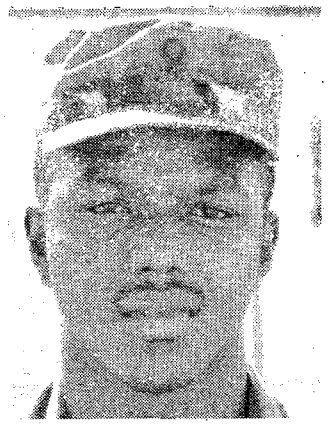
Commanders should continue to develop programs to improve the quality of life for all soldiers under their command.

Soldiers need to begin to feel that they too are cared about, that they too belong. But, if single soldiers feel like they are being treated as less than mature and have little to say about the conditions in which they live, we could lose some talented individuals.

"The white paper report also brought out that the happier and more content a soldier is with his home life the more likely he will reenlist."

Various Voices

"What do you feel could be done to improve the quality of life for the single soldier?"



Sp4 Perry Bradley, unit armorer, Company C, 197th Support Battalion — "I would change the visitation policy, because if someone is going to do something they are going to do it no matter where they are.

Sp4 Sydney Clark, supply specialist, HHD, 197th Support Battalion —"I would give them more recreational equipment. Better equipment than they have now. I would take off some of the restrictions that they have in the billets, like the visitation rights. There should be certain hours when they could have visitors.

Sp6 Charlene M. Aeletti, training NCO, Chaplain's Division —"The complaints that were brought to me is that they can't have hot plates or any food in their refrigerators that requires cooking.

The Army needs to re-evaluate the way E4s and E5s live in the bar-

Sp5 Mildred Smith, truck driver, Company C, 197th Support Battalion —"Make the barracks seem more like a home instead of an institution.

"Allow the soldiers to fix up their rooms. Right now, anything that is personal has to be locked up during the Top brass agree Army in best shape ever

Even though it faces a multitude of changes, the Army is in better shape than it's ever been for many years, according to recent testimonies by Secretary of the Army John O. Marsh Jr. and Chief of Staff Gen. John A. Wickham Jr.

"Today's Army is stronger and better equipped than at any time in its recent history," Marsh told the Senate committee on the armed services Feb. 2, during the initial presentation of the Army's annual "posture statement." "We're proud of this Army, its active, guard, reserve and civilian members."

Wickham, also testifying before the committee, said: "It is the best Army I have seen in 34 years of service. We have high quality in our soldiers, noncommissioned officers and officers. Last year almost 90 percent of our recruits were high school graduates."

Marsh said the Army is currently in "great transition" and faces changes in its organizational structure, training and equipment and operational concepts.

Picturing the Army as a mobile, combat-ready force, Marsh cited the Soviet's military buildup and called for continued Army modernization to face Soviet intervention threats.

"While we don't seek to match the Soviets weapon-for-weapon or soldier-for-soldier," Marsh said, "we must continue to field high-quality equipment that when manned by motivated, highly trained and physically fit soldiers will serve to counter Soviet numerical advantages."

Wickham relayed to the committee that today's soldiers believe in their ability to fight outnumbered and win with the equipment now coming into their hands. He noted that building that kind of confidence was fundamental to the entire modernization program.

Another modernization aspect is the Army's increased awareness of the family's role, both men stated. In explaining that 1984 would be called "The Year of the Army Family," they said a new policy would address issues needing attention.

Wickham emphasized that readiness of the Army ultimately rests on supportive, strong families. He indicated the family action plan and the chain of command would ensure that the needs and welfare of all Army family members receive that needed attention.

Both men expressed concern about shortfalls in strategic airlift and mobilization capabilities.

"The Army's light-division initiative will help decrease our strategic-lift shortfall," Marsh said from a prepared text, "but even with this effort our ability to execute a global strategy will remain severely limited." He said more effective mobilization could come about through planned improvements in reserve forces management and other areas.

The Army's operations in Grenada, Marsh said, underscore the importance of rapidly deployable forces. "It is expected that such a force, quickly inserted in the first days of a crisis, could defuse the crisis, thereby precluding the deployment of a much larger force later."

Both restated the Army's plans to form two light divisions in fiscal year 1985. (ARNews)

Letter

Editor:

We would like to reply to Ms. Zimmerman's article, "Mind poisoning poses problem," which appeared in the March 16, 1984 issue of The BAYONET.

We agree with Ms. Zimmerman that the last twenty years have brought many positive changes in the areas of racial desegregation and handicap awareness. These positive changes are due largely to more enlightened attitudes and information that has been made available through our educational system and the media. However, we take strong exception to Ms. Zimmerman's implication that the same types of positive changes have been taking place in the area of sexual lifestyles.

In the article, Ms. Zimmerman stated that the sexual revolution has helped children in "recognizing the various alternatives in sexual preferences, cohabitant status, and parenting prerequisites . . . " She goes on to say that although this does not ". . . condone any particular one," it helps children make their choices " . . . through knowledge rather than ignorance."

Young people have been making choices because of their new "knowledge" about these alternative lifestyles. Statistics tell us what these choices are: (1) Six out of every ten 16-18-year-olds in the United States have had sexual intercourse; (2) One out of every three 13-15-year-olds in the United States have had sexual intercourse; (3) Only 13 percent of teenage girls would marry the father of the baby if they became pregnant, three out of ten would have an abortion; (4) 1.4 million abortions were reported in the United States in 1982. These statistics, and others, would indicate that young people have chosen to become more sexually active. The number of unwed mothers, cases of venereal disease and abortions would indicate that at least some of these young people are having bad experiences with the sexual revolution.

Our objection to the article is this: Adults are not being "narrow minded" nor do they ". . . distort facts and perpetuate myths . . .", as Ms. Zimmerman states, when they pass on their beliefs to the younger generation particularly if these beliefs embrace the traditional Judeo-Christian values. Enlightenment in and discussion in sexual alternative lifestyles can be very poisonous for young minds if they only hear about the alternatives. They must also be informed of what the consequences of these alternatives are and what the advantages of "traditional" lifestyles are.

The media is not providing this information to young people today. Although we do not watch much television, we submit that very few shows, if any, celebrate ideas such as virginity before marriage or sexual fidelity in marriage with the same zeal that they expose us to the alternatives. This is condoning one by ignoring the other. Because the media does not consistently show both sides, adults such as parents, coaches, teachers, youth leaders and the Church must become involved in presenting both sides; the traditional side should be presented without fear of being accused of "narrowmindedness." It is only when young people thoroughly understand both sides of the issue that they can make a responsible decision.

Benning's Drill Sergeant of the Year teaches soldiers by setting example

By Bill Walton
USAIC Public Affairs Office

"I believe the most important thing to consider in dealing with new soldiers is to set the example," said SFC James S. Parris, Fort Benning's Drill Sergeant of the Year, when asked to explain his personal training philosophy.

Parris is the senior drill sergeant of Company A, 2nd Battalion, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade. This is the first time the drill sergeant of the year has come from the 2nd Infantry Training Brigade.

He has been a drill sergeant for 20 months and expectstospend at least 15 more months in that job. He was assigned to the 7th Army NCO Academy, in Bad Toelz, Germany, as an instructor/TAXsergeant when he learned he was being assigned to Fort Benning as a drill sergeant.

"The two duty assignments are related," said Parris. "The main difference is the age and experience of the soldiers that I am working with. However, I get more enjoyment from the drill sergeant job."

The most rewarding thing about being a drill sergeant, according to Parris, is the sense of accomplishment that he feels when a new soldier has learned all the required skills. "I really feel proud, knowing I took this guy, who didn't know a thing about soldiering, and taught him the necessary skills so that he can fit in any infantry unit in the Army," he said.

Are some subjects more difficult for the initial entry training soldiers to learn than others? Parris answered "I believe that drill and ceremony is the hardest subject for a young soldier to grasp. They are just not used to discipline and it takes them awhile to settle down. On the other hand, marksmanship seems to come natural to most of the new soldiers."

He gives a very high rating to today's infantry soldiers. He says that they want to be successful soldiers and try to learn all they can. But he believes that the 13-week training cycle is too short and should be increased by three weeks.

Parris enlisted in the Army in 1972 and has spent most of his career in infantry units. Originally he planned to attend Officer Candidate School but changed his mind and says he is proud

VA's 1985 budget request largest in its history

The Veterans Administration's budget for FY 1985 calls for more than $27.2 billion in new budget authority to fund medical, compensation, and other programs for the nation's 27.9 million veterans, eligible members of their families, and survivors of deceased veterans.

The request is $1.163 billion more than the agency's initial request of last year. For FY 1984, VA set an all-time high with a request of $26.1 billion, and this was followed with requests for supplemental appropriations totaling $301.1 million to fund new programs and increases in compensation, pension and employee pay. The total for 1984 was $26.3 billion.

Total agency employment will increase by 2,231 to a level of 223,296. The increased employment will provide for staffing of new medical facilities, additional medical workloads, selective medical program improvements and increased research employees.

"The President has once again emphasized his strong commitment to help veterans and we at the VA stand ready to carry out that commitment," VA administrator Harry Walters said.

The budget contains a 4.3 percent cost-of-living increase in compensation and pension payments. The pension increase would be effective Dec. 1, 1984, and the compensation increase April 1, 1985. The budget also proposes a 15 percent increase in subsistence allowances paid to GI Bill trainees. Though total GI Bill payment will decrease due to fewer trainees, the rate increase accounts for an additional $132.7 million in 1985.

A total of $821.8 million in new budget authority is requested for the construction program. This level includes design, site preparation or acquisition, and, in some cases, initial construction funds for five major hospital replacement and modernization projects at Allen Park, Mich.; Augusta, Ga.; Houston, Texas; Mountain Home, Tenn.; and New York, N.Y. The request also includes funds for seven projects for construction of nursing home units.

VA medical programs, which will treat more than 1.4 million inpatients and provide for approximately 18.9 million outpatient medical and dental visits, will be funded at $9.1 billion, an increase of $561 million above the current level. (VA)

Soldier enjoys work, field duty

By Rick Russell
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Not all soldiers dread going to the field. Sp4 Joseph J. Davis, Battery A, 2-10th Field Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade, looks forward to going to the field.

"I like field duty," commented the cannoneer. "I was stationed in Kitzengen, Germany, and we went to the field often. I enjoy field training exercises basically because I like my job."

He describes his job as a cannoneer this way, "We shoot, move and communicate."

Davis, a native of Brooklyn, N.Y., is presently attached to A Company, Headquarters Command, and works as a gym attendant at Audie Murphy Gym.

Being on special duty has not separated him from his parent unit though. He participated on their company basketball team which ended up as the post runner-up.

"I have been playing basketball for about 20 years," commented the six-foot, two-inch forward. "I played basketball in Germany and it was much different over there compared to here. There you only played within your unit. Here you have more of an incentive to play well. You can represent your unit on a higher level."

A graduate of Boys and Girls High School in N.Y., Davis attended Victor Valley Community College for one year before joining the Army.

"I joined the Army for the travel," stated the first termer. "I have five months left in the Army. I have already passed the postal examination. I plan on going back to N.Y. and working in the postal system."

Until then, Davis will continue to shoot, move and communicate at Fort Benning.

New DIG report indentifies millions in potential savings

Potential savings of $568.5 million in Department of Defense spending were identified in the first semiannual report from the newly established office of Defense Inspector General. The report covers the six-month period ending March 1983 and was transmitted to Congress recently by Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger.

In addition to recommendations regarding internal defense spending, the report summarizes management improvement, cost-cutting and fraud prevention and detection activities of Defense auditors, inspectors and investigators.

During the report period, there were 9,060 recommendations on how the Department could trim spending and increase efficiency. Those recommendations which managers have already agreed to implement are expected to save approximately $97.4 million. A second group of audit recommendations — not agreed to by management but still under study — account for another $471.1 million in potential savings.

The Defense Contract Audit Agency (DCAA) issued 27,094 reports questioning the validity of $12.5 billion in contract costs, $3.3 billion of which contracting officials agreed should be questioned, recommending further investigation.

DCAA auditors also reviewed the operations of defense contractors and recommended ways in which their operations could be improved and made more cost-effective. Potential savings of $105.5 million were cited.

Defense criminal investigative agencies closed 7,437 cases during the reporting period. More than 4,300 cases were referred for prosecution or administrative action, and 266 convictions were reported.

As a result of criminal cases referred to the Department of Justice, about $98,000 in fines and penalties were assessed, and restitutions and recoveries amounted to $1.5 million. From cases referred to military commands, more than $4.9 million was collected in fines, penalties, restitutions and recoveries.

The Defense Hotline continues to be a valuable tool in the war on fraud, waste and abuse, according to the IG report. Many audits, inspections and investigations addressed in the semi-annual report were initiated as a result of the 1,950 Hotline calls and letters received during the reporting period.

Computer purchase sparks SPIRIT idea, saves $4,000 yearly

By Bill Reynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The purchase of a new computer for the Directorate of Training Doctrine sparked a SPIRIT idea that slashed more than $4,000 off this year's operating costs.

It was early January when Mrs. Shirley A. Johnston, operations research analyst, DOTD, got the idea to computerize the task list for enlisted soldiers and officers in the Infantry field. She said that she got the idea after watching the typist across from her type the list — for the fifth time. "It seemed wasteful to me," explained Mrs. Johnston, "I don't know if it was my Scotch ancestry or my economic background, but I can't stand to do the same thing over and over again."

For each of the four enlisted skills in CMF 11 and the two officer skills, a separate task list has to be typed. Typing this list took 14 mandays each time the task and site selection board process was done. The cost before Mrs. Johnston's idea was $8,603.84.

According to Mrs. Johnston, 70 percent of the tasks were the same, so she wondered why they couldn't be placed into the computer banks. She went to work putting the information into the computer and now it only requires an update whenever there is a change.

It took Mrs. Johnston 16 hours to get all of the information into the system and updates will now take only two. An added advantage comes from the increased accuracy of the system. Whenever a list has to be retyped it always requires checking for accuracy. According to Mrs. Johnston only the new information has to be checked, thus cutting down the time before the product gets to the customer.

Costs for the quarterly enlisted boards ran, before her idea, $5,021.44. The twice-yearly officer boards cost $2,508.80. The quarterly new equipment updates cost $1,073.60. The cost came to a whopping $8,603.84 for doing the same thing over and over again.

"I can't stand to do the same thing over and over again!" said Mrs. Johnston. She claims that repetitive work is "boring" and increases the chance for error. "It's so much easier to do the work on a computer or word processor. It's faster and more accurate."

The cost of Mrs. Johnston's idea in manhours necessary to program and update all information for the rest of the year is $1,397.18. Because two updates had been accomplished before Mrs. Johnston got her SPIRIT idea, the savings this year will be only $4,714,51. Next year's savings, because the SPIRIT foundation has been laid, will be much more.

TRADOC sets 1984 Project SPIRIT goal

FORT MONROE, Va. — The 1984 goal for the Army Training and Doctrine Command's savings and efficiency campaign is $68 million, up from the 1983 goal of $32 million.

The campaign is called Project SPIRIT, for Systematic Productivity Improvement Review In TRADOC. Last year TRADOC installations and activities saved more than $56 million under the program.

"Most of our installations met or exceeded their 1983 goals. We hope to do as well with this year's goals," said TRADOC's Col. Frederick J. Stanley. (TNS)

President approves compensation increase

President Ronald Reagan has signed legislation approving a 3.5 percent rate increase in compensation for service-connected disabled veterans and in Dependency and Indemnity Compensation for widows and children of veterans who died from service-connected causes.

The increase will be effective Sunday and means an increase in monthly compensation payments VA makes to approximately 63,800 Georgia veterans and their survivors, according to Atlanta VA Regional Office Director T.R. Whire.

He said the legislation also increases benefits for a few service-connected blinded veterans who also suffered from service-connected deafness.

Disabled veterans and survivors affected by this legislation will receive their increased benefits for April in their May 1 checks, Whire noted.

Permit is not authorization to carry firearms on post

Recently at Fort Benning, a card similar to the one pictured (Special Weapons Permit) was taken from a young soldier who stated that he purchased it at a gun show. This card is NOT AN OFFICIAL WEAPONS PERMIT, and if you have one in your possession it DOES NOT authorize you to carry any type of firearm. As indicated in USAIC Reg. 210-5, Para 41A, The carrying of weapons (to include firearms, knives, clubs, etc.) anywhere on the reservation is prohibited except by those who are engaged in:

- The performance of military duty and authorized by appropriate authority to carry a weapon.
- Skeet shooting or authorized pistol and rifle target shooting.
- Authorized hunting (categories of authorized personnel are contained in USAIC Reg. 210-1).

The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms verified that the card has not been issued by the U.S. Government. If you are found to be in possession of firearms on the Fort Benning reservation, you will be cited by the military police. Military personnel are subject to disciplinary action under UCMJ. Civilians are subject to be ejected from the installation, and will be required to appear in U.S. Magistrate Court. (USAIC PAO)

IRS urges retirees to review pension rules

Retirees receiving pensions or annuities should carefully review the tax status of that income in order to decide whether to permit tax withholding on these payments, the Internal Revenue Service said.

Federal income tax is now generally withheld from pension and annuity payments. However, this withholding is not compulsory; any person can apply for exemption. The payer of the pension or annuity payments will tell the retiree how to file for the exemption.

To determine whether to have tax withheld, taxpayers should review the rules that cover pensions and annuities. A pension to which an employee contributed nothing during his or her employment, for example, is fully taxable in much the same way salaries and wages are during working years. The full amount must be reported as income on the line designated for fully taxable pensions and annuities on Form 1040. The 1040A and 1040EZ forms cannot be used to report pension income, the IRS said.

On the other hand, a pension to which both the employer and employee contributed, while not fully taxable, is partially taxable and is subject to special tax reporting.

If a retiree will recover his or her total contributions within 36 months after first payment is received, then the annuity payments are not taxed until the contributions are recovered. This is because the contributions were taxed while the person was employed.

Those who will not recover their contributions within a 36-month period are entitled to exclude from taxable income a certain percentage of their pensions each year. Normally, the issuer of the pension will compute the exclusion percentage — the figure that determines how much of a pension can be excluded from income.The exclusion percentage, once computed, does not change, the IRS added. If the issuer of the pension does not compute this percentage, instructions can be found in the free IRS publication 575, Pension and Annuity Income.

This publication will have the answers to most questions on the tax treatment of pensions and annuities, and can be ordered by using the handy order form found in each tax package.

In addition, for persons 60 years of age and over, free tax counseling is available through local IRS-coordinated Tax Counseling for the Elderly (TCE) programs. Through these programs, specially trained volunteers provide tax assistance on such matters as tax credit for the elderly, special treatment of the gain on the sale of a home by those age 55 and over, the proper method of reporting certain pension income and paying tax on it when necessary, and other subjects of special concern to older persons. The volunteers also help fill out the tax returns, the IRS said.

Those who are eligible, and need the assistance of this program, should call the IRS for information. (AFPS)

You can help a handicapped child by volunteering your time, efforts

By Mary E. Strickland
Army Community Service

Did you know there are 265 children living at Fort Benning enrolled in special education classes. This does not take into consideration the children younger than 6, older than 18, those who live off post, those with parents who are retired, or those with medical disabilities who have no educational disability.

There is an incident rate of from 6.5 percent to 11.5 percent of the total population that require special services due to some type of disabling condition. Fort Benning has an average population of 15,000 persons at any one time. Using the lowest figure available from the government, there are approximately 975 people here at any given time that could benefit from additional services because of an intellectual, emotional, or physical disability.

Did you know notices are regularly sent home with the children through the schools; sent through the mail; advertised in the bulletin, BAYONET and Alert Cable TV; and handed out as flyers to publicize recreational programs? Summer day camps, special events for those children with special needs, and Boy Scout, Cub Scout and Girl Scout Troops for our children with special needs are some examples.

Did you know there are 15 children enrolled in the Saturday recreational programs?

Do you know why some parents feel that the programs are for children with severe handicaps, and they feel that their children are not handicapped 'enough' to be eligible. Some parents do not read the notices. Some parents feel that the notices are not for them. Some think it will be expensive.

You can help. You can spread the word in your own neighborhood that these services are available, mostly free of charge to the parents. You can also volunteer your time as a recreation aide for the Saturday recreation programs, summer day camp, or as a Scout leader or assistant. Most programs will only require an hour or two of your time once a week. The summer day camp will be daily for four weeks.

Why should you? You can make a difference in the quality of life for children with special needs. These programs increase self-confidence, improve self-image, provide opportunities for socialization and the development of interpersonal skills, teach recreational skills so that the child can interact more successfully with not only their own familites but the community as a whole, and make it more likely that these children will grow up as well adjusted citizens with much to contribute to society and themselves.

If you want to help, you can call (and tell your friends to call!) Mary Strickland at Army Community Servce, building 229, 545-1169/1233.

The multi-talented members of Fort Benning's "Forever Forward" Brigade showed they can function in the frigid temperature of northern New York.

Leaving cut-offs, tee-shirts and the high 60-degree temperature of Georgia, the soldiers landed at Griffith Air Force Base and debarked the DC-10, charte r ed by the brigade,with enthusiasm that trans mitted challenge to the environment.

Grouped into several formations under the control of SSgt. Stanley R. Terry, the brigade movement noncommissioned officer, the soldiers were soon on buses headed for Fort Drum, N.Y.

Once the soldiers unboarded the buses at Fort Drum, baggage was reclaimed and the servicemembers occupied buildingsrecently vacated by members of the 82nd Airborne Division.

Before long, soldiers were soon swarming all over the area located in the 400 block setting up dining facilities, signal stations, motor pools, headquarters, and other shops that keep the 197th Infantry Brigade (Mechanized) (Separate) rolling.

A few soldiers mumbled, a few laughed, but many joined together to see what could physically be done with all the snow.

Since arriving in this winter wonderland, members of the "Forever Forward" brigade havedrawn equipment and basic issue items (BII) for field training, set up quarters for sleeping, unloaded train car load after train car load of vehicles railed up from Fort Benning, and chased, dumped, shoveled, slipped, and built their way into settling in for some good cold weather training.

The soldiers of Fort Benning's 197th Infantry Brigade (Mech) (Sep) proved themselves capable of functioning even in this chilly northern environment located 20 miles from the Canadian border.

Dining facility feeds more than its share during 197th exercise

By Willie Means
197th Public Affairs Office

FORT DRUM, N.Y. — The "Forever Forward" Brigade's award winning 197th Support Battalion Dining Facility staff is doing their share to support the brigades' "Artic Drummer" exercise.

"We're currently feeding over 700 people daily and our goal is to have all those people leave the chow hall with a good attitude," said Pvt. 2 Kevin D. Foy, a food service specialist. "Getting up on cold, dark, windy mornings at 3 a.m., you wonder, 'why me?' I normally tell myself, "you're a cook; you've got a job to do. Get out there and fix those soldiers a good breakfast so they'll start their day with a good attitude."

The support battalion's "Dependables" have lived up to their motto "Team work for better support" constantly since opening their doors on the third day after the advance party arrived.

"It might be because of our reputation, but it seems like everyone trys to eat here. We're feeding around 250 people each meal. We're supposed to be feeding 180," said PFC Donald A. Alexander, food service specialist. "We only have half our staff here. We each have assigned tasks but you don't catch anyone taking a break until the others can take a break. If one of us gets done with our job, we'll help someone else with theirs."

Working on short rations and equipment, the cooks still strive to keep a good nutritious meal ready for the soldiers.

"If we don't have enough food, we can't cook it," said Sp5 Terrance M. Louzon, ration control and night baker. "Then again, if we had the food, we could only prepare so much at a time. Back at Benning when we ran out of a meat, we could use our deep fryer to prepare some more. We don't have that capability here."

Feeding approximately 100 more soldiers than the other facilities, the cooks are not complaining. "It's tougher on personnel because we pull longer hours," stated Louzon. "But we don't grieve about it. We just adhere to our motto, 'Team Work' . I came to this dining facility Jan. 31. It was a big change for me. In Germany, I was feeding about 30 people each meal; now it's over 200. I had a lot to learn and it was the junior cooks like Alexander that taught me and helped me make the changes."

The cooks describe their works days simply as "everyday is Monday." They seldom get compliments. However, when they do, Louzon stated, "that just makes my day."

"All around, these cooks are outstanding," said SFC Stephen L. Semmler, the facility manager. "This is my own handpicked crew. I've watched them work and I have a lot of confidence in them. I want the soldiers we feed happy and so do they."

197th soldiers take advantage of winter weather

Soldiers hit the slopes before exercise begins

By Willie Means
197th Public Affairs Office

FORT DRUM, N.Y. — Soldiers from Fort Benning's "Forever Forward" Brigade's 298th Signal Detachment took to the ski slopes recently while waiting for equipment to arrive.

Soldiers tumbled, slid and rolled down the slopes only to be towed back to the top to start over again.

"It was something new but it was a lot of fun," said PFC Derrick L. Harris, a wire system installer operator. "I really enjoyed being out in the snow. I'm from Mobile, Ala. and don't get to see snow much."

Plans to have the soldiers get some ski training was developed before the unit left garrison at Fort Benning. The commander and first sergeant realized the soldiers wouldn't always work in nice weather so they decided to take advantage of this opportunity.

Soldier's mom gives 197th a tasty treat

By Willie Means
197th Public Affairs Office

FORT DRUM, N.Y. — Soldiers of Fort Benning's 197th Infantry Brigade (Mechanized) (Separate) 72nd Engineer Group (Combat) were the subjects of a tasty treat upon their arrival to Fort Drum.

Due to a request of Sp4 Dean E. Mitchell, a native of Philadelphia, N.Y., approximately three miles from this tundra-styled training installation, his mother, Mrs. Geneivle Mitchell, made several apple pies for the unit.

"I told the guys I lived near Fort Drum before we left Fort Benning," said Mitchell, a 12B who does everything from building obstacles to specialized demolition work. "I promised the commander some apple pie. He told me if I brought him some, then bring some for everyone; I did."

Mitchell grew up and attended Indian River Central High School. Coming from a fairly large family, six sisters and five brothers, he stated, "my mother loves to cook. I guess cooking those pies for the guys in the unit just gave her a chance to do some serious baking. She was always baking something tasty for me, my sisters and brothers, and our father Lewis. Mom said if the pies would make the soldiers happy, she would love to do it."

Mitchell joined the Army in 1981. Looking for something different to do, he soon found himself at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.

"I had a good job, but I wanted to see what the military was like; I wanted a challenge and to travel," said Mitchell, who takes snow mobiling, skiing, and ice skating to heart. "My parents think it's a good thing for their son to be in the service of his country," he continued.

Since being alerted for cold weather training at Fort Drum, people have grumbled and complained about leaving the early summer like weather. However, for Mitchell, it was an exercise he looked forward to.

"The first thing I thought about was being close to home," stated the 26-year-old. "Then I thought about being back in the environment I grew up in. I wish I could get assigned to Fort Drum."

Ski

"Many of the soldiers have never even seen snow; let alone done any skiing. Signal people are normally the first in and the last to exit an area. Whether the weather is nice or cold, you've got to have communication," stated SFC Jeffrey A. McWilliam, the unit's 1st sergeant. "The CO and I wanted to get the soldiers climatized as quickly as possible. Many said they would never get on any skis. Once they got started we couldn't get them to stay off them."

The 298th's mission was to provide tactical multichannel RATT (radio and telephone teletype) services to the brigade. McWilliam understands to get the best service, soldiers must give their best.

"The service we provided to the brigade was unique. Normally, you only find signal units at a corps level, stated McWilliam. "Taking the unit out to ski was doing something different. But most of all, it was doing something together. We didn't have any injuries — that is, serious injuries; we improved upon our comradeship, and it created better morale. All of this helped us to perform our best for the brigade."

Willie Means

Many soldiers took tumbles and found themselves spending more time making repairs than skiing.

PLAY THE WEST GA. SURVIVAL GAME

"Where do I sign up?" — Bryant Gumbel TODAY Show

You've seen them all. The great adventure movies. Raiders of the Lost Ark, The African Queen, Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid, Star Wars...

Now picture yourself having the adventure of your life. It's called the Survival Game. It's the fastest growing sport in America. To win, you'll have to be more alert than you've ever been in your life. And more resourceful. You'll also need speed, stealth, courage, and a good aim. And luck.

You'll learn more about yourself in 2 hours than you can in a lifetime.

The Survival Game is chess in the woods. It's a team sport played with men and women from all walks of life....each carrying a CO, pistol that shoots paint-filled pellets. The object is for your team to find the enemy's flag, hidden somewhere in the woods, and return it to your own flag station – while stopping the enemy from doing the same. And you can stop the enemy with a squeeze of a trigger and a splatter of paint.

Millions have seen the publicity in Life, Time, Sports Illustrated, Games, Sports Afield, The Today Show and P.M. Magazine, to name just a little of the attention. And there'll be more at the National Championships this year!

America's fastest growing sport...may be the adventure of your life!

Motorcycle safety course soon offered

The Fort Benning Safety Office is offering a motorcycle safety course to improve your motorcycle driving skills.

The program is designed to minimize your chances of having an accident and may reduce your insurance premiums up to 10 percent. Attendance is open to all military, civilians and dependents of Fort Benning. The advanced motorcycle course is being offered free of charge by the Motorcycle Safety Foundation's Better Biking Program.

The course will consist of three and one-half hours of formal classroom instruction followed by a three-hour road test. Students are required to provide their own motorcycle and safety equipment.

Safety equipment needed is : helmet with transparent shield or goggles, gloves, shoes or boots (cover ankles), jacket or long sleeve shirt and long pants.

If there is sufficient interest, the advanced motorcycle course will be conducted on a Saturday which will be announced. Remember, this course is designed to enhance your motorcycle driving skills and it may save your life in addition to saving on your insurance premium.

If you are interested in attending this course, please notify the USAIC Safety Office at 545-3267. Watch the Benning Bulletin for further information. (USAIC PAO)

Benning units snare excellence awards

Two Fort Benning units have been named first place winners in the Army-wide Chief of Staff's Army Award for Excellence Program for calendar year 1983.

The two units, Company D, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry and the 533rd Transportation Company, 67th Maintenance Battalion, 36th Engineer Group, were officially recognized for their achievements at a ceremony during the American Defense Preparedness Association's annual convention in Washington yesterday.

Representing Company D at the ceremony were 1st Lt. Reginald Young, SSgt, Edwin Reynolds and Sp4 Gregory Kuks. The 533rd was represented by Capt. Michael Brunett, CW4 Clayton McClanahan and SSgt. Monroe Sapp.

Company D represented the U.S. Training and Doctrine Command in the light density competition for units having from 50 to 700 items of equipment.

The 533rd represented U.S. Army Forces Command in the intermediate density category for units with from 701 to 1,000 items of equipment.

Troy E. Ellis, Fort Benning's installation maintenance officer, Directorate of Industrial Operations, said the Army Award for (maintenance) Excellence Program was specifically designed to recognize individual units with exceptional maintenance programs.

Company D, he said, conducted numerous exercises and demonstrations during the year and "maintained a high degree of unit readiness through sound management, leadership, training and maintenance innovations." The company is the Army's first Bradley Infantry Fighting Vehicle unit.

The 533rd, he added, was named winner for displaying a high readiness posture, sound management, leadership and training during the year.

Crime doesn't pay

Private First Class Jerry Booth, Headquarters Company, Headquarters Command, 43rd Engineer Battalion, 36th Engineer Group, was sentenced to confinement at hard labor and forfeiture of $397 pay per month for six months, reduction to the lowest grade and a bad conduct discharge for four counts of wrongful appropriation. Private First Class Booth wrongfully took government property and pawned it at two Columbus pawn shops.

Private Quincy D. Smith, Combat Support Company, 1st Battalion (Mechanized), 58th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade, was convicted of larceny. While on duty as charge of quarters, he received a report of stolen BDUs from a member of his unit, but he did not log it in. A few hours later, he found some BDUs in a latrine and kept them, despite the fact that they had another soldier's name tag on them. He sold them to a pawn shop the next day for $25. He was sentenced to forfeit $397 pay per month for two months, to be confined at hard labor for five months and to receive a bad conduct discharge.

to be a NCO.

There are a total of 557 drill sergeants in the two infantry training brigades at Fort Benning. Parris' selection as drill sergeant of the year came after a series of competitive boards. He went before a board at both battalion and brigade level before the final board at the U.S. Army Infantry Training Center. Next month he will travel to Fort Monroe, Va., to represent Fort Benning in the TRADOC Drill Sergeant of the Year competition.

For being selected as Fort Benning's Drill Sergeant of the Year Parris will receive a Department of the Army Certificate of Achievement and letters of commendation from the brigade and post commanders. In addition the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter of the AUSA, will present him with a dress blue uniform, a three-year membership in AUSA, a certificate of commendation plus an all expenses paid trip to the AUSA national meeting in Washington, D.C., in October.

On April 9, in a ceremony in post theater number three, he will receive the Donald C. Shuffstall Drill Sergeant of the Year Award.

Example setters must be in good physical condition and Parris does his best to stay in shape. "I participate in the daily company PT program which includes running two or three miles a day six days a week, plus three or four timed 5-mile runs during each training cycle," he said. In addition he plays softball, racquetball and has recently discovered the trials and tribulations of golf.

The Parrises, wife Ann and two boys, Tony, 3, and Peter, 6, live in government quarters. From St. Louis, he is an avid St. Louis Cardinal baseball fan and collects all sorts of Cardinal related memorabilia. His pride and joy is a curio cabinet in the living room containing 25 different size china Cardinals.

Consider safety before buying a new car

As automobile prices climb, causing drivers to keep their cars longer, the decision on purchasing a new car and which car to purchase grows in importance. Color, price and style shouldn't be the only considerations. The wise consumer considers safety factors, too — auto size, type of bumpers, occupant restraints and accessability — in choosing a new car.

1. As a rule, the larger the car, the safer it is. On the average, larger cars have better crash loss experience than small cars and policyholders with larger cars file fewer personal injury claims. Many insurance companies base the price of collision insurance on the damageability of the car. It pays to comparison shop with your insurer on both the car's damageability and insurance costs.

2. The choice of bumpers could save you hundreds of dollars. The 5-mph bumper, found on about half the cars, will withstand accidents much better than its 2.5-mph counterpart. For example, in crash tests on the Honda Accord, a 5-mph bumper sustained no damage at 5 mph, while the 2.5-mph bumper sustained $299 in damage. At 10 mph, the damage rates were $578 and $1,402. You may want to choose a car with the 5-mph bumper and count on future savings.

3. Check that the seat belts are easy to use and comfortable. Seat belts are important. About 40 percent of the persons who die in passenger cars, light trucks or vans would have been saved by wearing safety belts. If ejected from a vehicle, a person is 25 times more likely to be killed.

4. When you test-drive a car, see how well you "fit." Is the gearshift within easy reach? Can you comfortably reach the foot pedals? Can you see all points of the road as you drive? Can you change the radio dials, adjust the air conditioning and heating controls — all without diverting your attention from driving? Anything that reduces visibility or takes your attention from the road can cause accidents.

5. If you have children, you'll want to consider electrically controlled door safety latches. The safest place for a child in a car is in a seat restraint, preferably in the middle of the back seat. The addition of a door-locking safety feature is another good precaution.

6. If your passengers include the young or the elderly, check the ease with which they can get into and out of the car. Not all accidents occur in moving cars. (GEICO)

Does your family know what to do in a fire?

CHICAGO, Ill. — If a fire broke out in your home, would you and your family members know the best way to escape and stay safe? Would your children know their responsibilities in such a crisis situation?

The National Safety Council encourages all families to prepare for a fire before one occurs. Proper planning can minimize confusion, prevent panic and possibly save the lives of you and your loved ones, it says.

Statistics indicate that about 5,000 people died in accidents associated with fires in a recent year, it said, with four out of every five of these victims dying in their own homes.

The leading cause of these needless tragedies is smoking. If you're going to smoke, the council says, never do so in bed or in any other place where you might fall asleep. Statistics indicate that most fires occur between 10 p.m. and 6 a.m. — a time when most people are asleep.

The council recommends the following prevention tips:

- Install smoke detectors high on walls or on ceilings. Detectors should be placed on all levels of your home, preferably near bedrooms and stairs.
- All members of your family should help with the escape plan. Determine at least two emergency escape routes from each room in your home. Make sure children know what to do if fire should strike. Remember, stay out of the house once you have escaped.
- Keep matches away from chidren. About 20 percent of all home fire victims are under 14 years of age.
- If clothing ignites, remember to STOP, DROP and ROLL. Stop where you are, drop to the floor, and roll with your arms close to your body. This action will smother the flame.

For a free 12-page brochure on fire safety awareness, send a stamped, self-addressed, business size envelope to Dept. PR, National Safety Council, 444 North Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill. 6000611. (NSC)

Mayor feels need for more community involvement

By Connie McReynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office/1020

The philosophy of new South Main Post Mayor Sherry Lewis is a simple one. She would like to see the community have more of a 'oneness.'

"Instead of being an outlet only for complaints, I would like to see us getting some community involvement on the positive side too, perhaps by having a community barbecue or fun fair. We have enough of a variety of people from other states and overseas I'm sure we can come up with different things to do."

Lewis, who inherited the mayor's title after Peggy Bledsoe resigned, officially became South Main Post Mayor March 16. Still, she said she never envisioned herself in that seat.

"I volunteered to run for vice-mayor and thought that's great. I can spend a couple hours doing that and still have time for my school, church and children. Then, I dislocated my knee so I couldn't teach, Peggy called to tell me she was resigning and asked if I would be willing to step up and it wasn't a question of me not having the time, so here I am," she explained.

Lewis and her family have been residents of Fort Benning since August 1981. Her husband, SFC Clifford Lewis, is a drill sergeant at Sand Hill with Echo Company, 7th Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade. The Lewises have two children, Clifford III (Buddy), age 10; and Dahlia, age 8.

"The reason I became involved in the Community Life program is because I finally decided I could do it. When we first arrived it was hard to handle being a drill sergeant's wife and there was no support group for wives of drills."

Lewis said she thought a lot about volunteering, but didn't feel she had the time. "I threw myself into school and church, but as I began to face the reality of a drill sergeant's life, I found I was ready to branch out too."

Now, she's ready to try to get the community more involved in itself. "One thing we've decided to start is a monthly open house. It will be held the fourth Monday of the month from 9-11 a.m. and from 6-9 p.m. It will be for newcomer's in the community to get acquainted with us and for the people of the community to have a chance to meet the new folks.

"We've started a newsletter with the first edition to be out by April 2. We also want to become a point of contact for the foreign wives in our community, so we can help them get in touch with other foreign wives. Also, I see our role as being a support group for all the wives."

Connie McReynolds

South Main Post Mayor Sherry Lewis writes some helpful post information down for new community resident, Teresa Mitchell, at the South Main Post Community Life Center.

"It just comes down to the fact that we need more involvement. This way we could solve a lot of the problems between the families and improve our quality of life. We can make this a better place to live."

Benning gets new news source

The Fort Benning community has a new source of news and information. Computer controlled message boards have been installed at four locations on post, broadcasting international, national, business and sports news with twice daily updates plus annoucements of local interest. Two message boards are set up inside the main exchange mall. The others are in Martin Army Community Hospital and in Infantry Hall.

The system is the product of the Bruner Broadcasting Company of Grand Prairie, Texas. Fort Benning's agreement with the company extends for one year with an option to renew.

The company's computers operate the news network over telephone lines from its Texas offices. Bruner is solely responsible for the content of all broadcasts, which in no way reflect the views or policy of any agency of the Department of Defense.

Up and away

By Bill Reynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Sending one message in one bottle has often been the last hope of marooned sailors in stories. When you send hundreds of messages in hundreds of balloons your chances of contacting someone increase. That is what the children of Lloyd Elementary School did last Friday before taking off for their spring break.

Students placed a note containing their name and address and a message inside of a helium-filled balloon before releasing them to the mercy of the winds.

The idea is for whoever finds the balloon to write back and tell the student where the balloon was found and something about themselves.

Each year, just before spring vacation, the students at the school release the message-laden ballons as part of the school's summer reading program.

Kelley Hill cannoneers tackle first big test

By Bill Reynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

"Zulu-wun-foh this is Zulu-se-vun-niner Registration." With that message the men of Charlie Battery, 2nd Battalion, 10th Field Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade (Mechanized) (Separate), started the firing portion of the Artillery Battery Qualification Test Saturday morning.

It was their turn at bat.

This was Charlie Battery's chance to show their stuff with their new M109, 155mm Howitzers. They had been training for this moment ever since the battery had received the armored monsters.

Saturday was the first time the "Cannon-cockers" on Kelley Hill had a chance to show what they could do since they turned in their old 105mm-towed Howitzers and joined the 197th in becoming mechanized.

This was also the first big test of Battery Commander Capt. David W. Rackley since he took command of the unit eight months ago. He made it clear that the bigger guns of the battery were "not tanks" and they were artillery that supported the all mechanized brigade.

For the first time, according to the 28-year-old commander, the battery could keep up with the brigade. He claims that their tactics are "more fluid" now that the battery moved on tracks instead of being towed behind two and one-half ton trucks. "The soldiers will work in a more protected environment." said Rackley. The shell of the M109s provide protection from small-arms. He says that the brigade now has more firepower since the addition of the larger guns.

The Cassanova Gun

Artillery batteries normally number their weapons from right to left, in the direction of fire, with two guns or sections to a platoon and three platoons to a battery. Instead of a number, each gun in Charlie Battery has a name, starting with the letter C. The commander feels that it adds character to the howitzer and "personalizes" the weapon.

"Cassanova" is the name of the fifth gun. To the "gun Bunnies" that live in her, pamper her and curse her, she is more than a 155 Howitzer capable of throwing a 93-pound round more than 10 miles downrange. To the Cassanova crew, made up of men from all over the country, she is home.

The driver and number one man on the Cassanova gun, Sp4 Tim Whatley, likes the mechanized artillery piece. He thinks the added firepower and mobility is just what the battery needs. He along with the gunner, Sgt. Jerome E. Brown recognize that maintenance time increases when you have a more technical piece of equipment, but the end result is worth it.

Brown sums up his maintenance philosophy by saying, "A lack of maintenance will cause you to have to pull the pack—and I don't like that."

During the ABQT the Cassanova gun will be tested along with the rest of the battery for more than 36 hours. The ABQT differs from the Army Training Evaluation Program in that the ARTEP is an internal evaluation program that lets the commander know the level of training, while the ABQT is an actual test of the unit's ability.

The precision registration mission over, the battery aimed their guns at their priority targets. When not actually firing, artillery batteries keep their most important targets in their sights to reduce the time necessary to put steel on the enemy.

Suddenly, the battery comes under attack from a simulated enemy and the command "March Order!" is given. The smoke from the simulators drifts over the field as the gun crews explode into action. Where camouflage nets and communications wire formed a network of firepower now stands an empty field as the M109s with their ever-present M548 ammo carriers rumble away. It looks like a parade of elephants with their young as the battery disappears into a cloud of dust.

The battery commander has already selected alternate positions in case the unit had to move. He claims his job is "to recon the positions and leave the operation of the firing battery to my executive officer and 'chief of smoke.'"

"Chief of Smoke"

The "Chief of Smoke" is a position peculiar to artillery batteries. He, along with a gunnery sergeant, runs the gun line. His word is law. His opinion is valued.

From the description of the job, a person would get a mental picture of a larger-than-life man that looms over the battery. The opposite is true in Charlie battery SFC Larry D. Lofton is not a gigantic soldier. He is an average-sized man whose energy and enthusiasm is infectious. In his 13 years in the military he has developed techniques that get the most out of an individual or crew.

The Cassanova crew pulls into their new position and drop the spade at the rear of the vehicle. They receive a deflection from "Smoke" and get their gun laid on a new direction.

Once the guns are laid, communications and camouflage nets are installed. Within minutes the battery is operational. The 155mm Howitzers no longer resemble a herd of elephants with their young—now they are dragons waiting to belch fire.

Clothing drive closes gap in post services

By Staci Blankenship
Correspondent

"Closing the gap" are the words used by Bouton Heights/Davis Hills mayor, Edwinna McHale, in describing Fort Benning's new clothing drive. "I wasn't aware that a gap existed in the circle of services available to military families in distress," says Mrs. McHale, "until I started working on the Christmas toy drive. I was shocked to find that many children on Fort Benning were asking for clothing for Christmas instead of toys."

In late January, with the help of the Family Life Center, Mrs. McHale organized the clothing drive, "And now we have racks of clothing ready to be distributed," she says. The Protestant Women of the Chapel have worked diligently since this drive began, to sort, size and hang clothing. Through their efforts this drive has progressed much faster than we had anticipated."

The idea behind the clothing drive is not based on individual income, but rather on the need of families who are facing a crisis, such as fire. However, any military family in need of clothing may call Barbara Henry at the Family Life Center at 545-1760.

"I am very, very pleased with the response we've gotten on this project," says Mrs. McHale, "I would like to thank the residents of Fort Benning for their support. Their caring and concern has turned an idea into a reality and by doing so they have made it possible to close the gap and bring the services available to military families in distress on Fort Benning full circle."

From your CPO

Veterans to soon benefit from insurance rate cap

By Cheryl J. Mehlenbeck
Civilian Personnel Office

As a federal employee you may participate in any private life insurance plan of your choice. Decisions concerning private life or health insurance plans are your own, and properly so.

With private insurance plans you are solely responsible for the cost of your premium payments. Private insurance companies might offer packages or plans that closely resemble federal offerings and/or appear to be supplemental to federal coverage.The fact that you are permitted to pay private insurance plan premiums through payroll allotments DOES NOT mean that private companies are associated with nor should you be led to believe they are sponsored by the federal government.

The Federal Employee's Group Life Insurance (FEGLI) Program and the Federal Employee's Health Benefits (FEHB) Program are government sponsored plans. Covered employees contribute a portion of their pay toward coverage, the employing agency also contributes.

Employees considering terminating their FEGLI or FEHB coverage in lieu of a private plan should consider the long-range consequences of such an action. Any employee who terminates coverage then later wants to resume coverage could not do so unless specific conditions are met. For example:

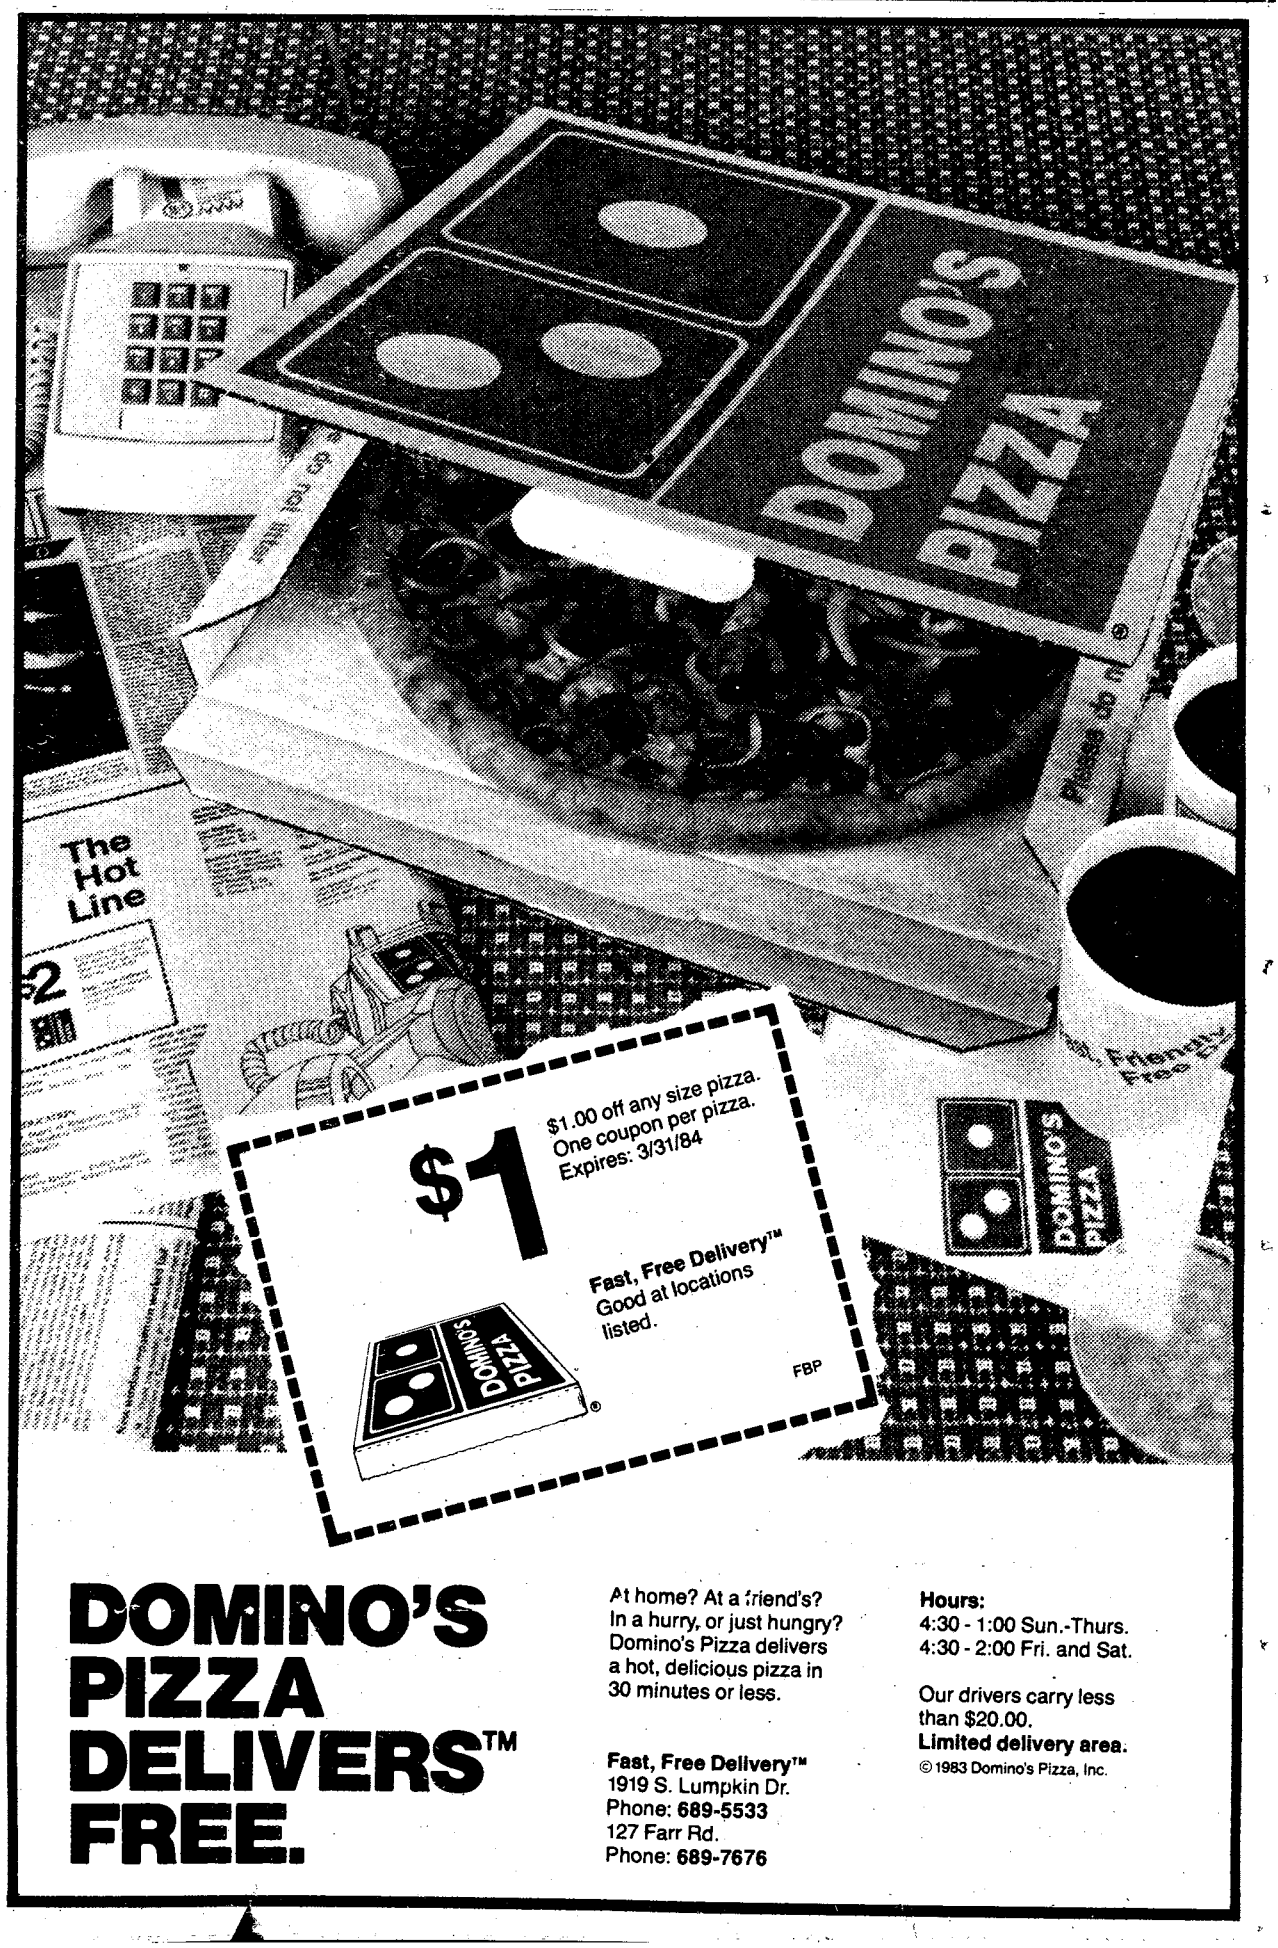
an employee cancels his FEGLI COVERAGE effective April 1, 1984. At a later date, this employee decides he would like to obtain FEGLI coverage again. All of the following conditions must be met before the employee can resume FEGLI coverage.

- Employee must be under age 50 on the date he requests insurance.
- At least one year must have elapsed between the effective date of the last declination (or waiver) and the date of the request for insurance.
- Employee must furnish satisfactory medical evidence of insurability. (The cost for a physical would be incurred by the employee.)

Waivers of life insurance are automatically cancelled when a separated employee returns to Federal service after a break in service of at least 180 days.

One additional factor to be considered is the effect a cancellation could have if an employee wanted to resume coverage upon retirement. To continue basic life insurance upon retirement, an employee must have been enrolled for basic insurance for five years of service immediately preceding the date of the retirement or the full period(s) of service during which he/she was entitled to be insured.

If at any time you have questions about any of your Federal employee benefits (life insurance, health insurance, retirement, accident benefits, etc.), please feel free to contact the Technical Services Branch, CPO, 545-2470-5578.



Flying kites can be fun when done with caution

FORT MONROE, Va. — Ben Franklin was famous for many inventions. One of those with which he continues to be associated is his discovery of electricity by flying a kite in a thunderstorm. Franklin was lucky that he survived that experience. Later on, as we understood more about electricity, we discovered that lightning and kites don't mix.

Flying kites has been a popular pastime for hundreds of years, but Franklin's use of a kite in discovering electricity created new hazards which we should understand and avoid.

A few of the most important things to consider when either you or your youngster fly a kite are:

- Do not use keys or any other metal accessory on the tail or string which may attract lightning.
- If the kite should become tangled in power lines, leave it. It is better to lose a kite than to risk your life.
- Kites should not be flown over radio and television antennaes.
- Don't fly your kite if the wind is freakish or changeable.
- Kites should be flown only in dry weather. A wet string may conduct electricity down to the flyer.
- Fly kites in a level, open space away from power lines, airports, trees and street traffic.

Enjoy, but do it safely. (TNS)

Marshal's Viewpoint

Don't let home life become a MP case

By Curtis D. Earp
Post Provost Marshal

One of the missions of the military police is the maintenance of discipline, law and order within the command! To reestablish order and preserve the peace, military police are often required to intervene in domestic disturbances. The objective of the military police is to initiate action that will neutralize the problem.

The intervention of military police into a domestic disturbance often has a calming effect. The President's Commission on the Cause and Prevention of Violence determined that many families in conflict actually desire an objective authority figure who will "do something that will settle things."

Domestic disturbances involve altercations, verbal or physical, between two or more members of the same family. Family conflicts are not unusual in themselves. However, given the right elements, these conflicts can often develop into uncontrollable and violent episodes.

It's this very unpredictability that makes a domestic disturbance one of the most dangerous offenses for both the persons involved and the military police. Most homicide victims are killed by close relatives or friends. A large percentage of these deaths are the direct result of so-called domestic disturbances. Nationside, domestics are one of the leading situational settings for deaths and injuries to police officers in the line of duty.

There are a number of factors which affect the incidence rate for domestic disturbances. These offenses, of course, are initiated when two or more family members have a difference of opinion. The conflict may remain at a verbal level or escalate to violence. The military police are obligated to respond to either level when a complaint is made.

Although not scientifically validated, most police officers will assent that the incidence of offenses appear to increase when the weather becomes warmer. Scientifically validated is the fact that in the vast majority of domestic disputes, one or more of the parties is under the influence of alcohol.

The obvious question — "What is likely to happen if the military police respond to a complaint of a domestic disturbance at your quarters?" — is easily answered.

- The sponsor and spouse will probably be apprehended and cited in a military police report, which in turn is referenced in the military police blotter.
- Depending upon what took place,the sponsor and spouse may be charged with assault or aggravated assault, and must then contend with the consequences of those actions.
- The military sponsor may be subject to judicial and administrative sanctions as the result of acts committed during the course of the disturbance.
- Families involved in repeated domestic distur-

Happiness! Have you ever met anyone that did not want to be happy? Yet, happiness is a state of being that is seldom realized and usually short-lived when experienced. The Bible teaches that there is a way which seems right to man, but it is not God's way, and, therefore, does not work with any degree of credibility. This is true in regard to happiness also. I have often wondered what would happen if I purchased an automobile, took the engine apart and then proceeded to put it back together without the aid of the manufacturer's manual.

Oddly enough, that is what we attempt to do in this matter of happiness. Our society has convinced us that we can be happy if we do a specific thing, go to certain places, purchase the magic item, or reach various goals. However, it appears that the experience of most of us does not bear this out.

In the Sermon on the Mount, particularly in the Beatitudes, God discusses the way He recommends for us to find a happiness that is real and brings contentment, peace and joy that will last and last and last. Think with me about one of the Beatitudes in particular: "Happy are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy" (Matt. 5:7). Have you ever seen someone whom you considered to be merciful? What did it look like? What were they doing? The Greek word translated "merciful" means, "to be moved in one's bowels" (the heart of man). The Hebrew word means, "to get inside one's skin so as to become completely identified with him." We might best call it "compassion in action." In this way you see, think and feel through the eyes, mind and feelings of others. This allows you to get a sense of what is going on in their life and to do something on their behalf.

The Scripture records teach us about mercy through various accounts of experiences in the lives of persons with whom we are familiar. Boaz saw Ruth gathering grain in the field behind the reapers and instructed his servants to leave some grain behind on purpose (Ruth 2:16). Compassion in action! The Samaritan saw a man who had been beaten and robbed lying on the side of the road, and he helped the man to his feet and took him to an inn for the night (Luke 10:30-35). Compassion in action!

"Happy are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy."

Our culture would have you believe that you would really be best served by spending your energy meeting your own needs, communicating your problems and feelings, being certain that your ideas are heard, and insuring that you get your rights. But the secret of happiness is to get inside the heart of others and understand what is going on in their life and do something to meet their needs. Happiness then will flood your heart beyond your capacity to contain it. "Happy are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy."

Confidence

Course builds, soldiers gain

By Connie McReynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Turning young men into soldiers is one of the obstacles drill sergeants face everyday. Help in accomplishing this comes in many forms, like the confidence course at Sand Hill.

Charlie Company, 10th Battalion, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade, was at the course this week to see how much the soldiers have learned during their basic training cycle.

"This course lets the soldier see what he can overcome," drill sergeant SSgt. Craig McLean said. "It has obstacles designed to build strength, develop teamwork and to shake the fear of heights."

The soldiers seemed in a relaxed mood and enjoyed the physical and mental challenges the 24 obstacles offered. Each platoon gathered around the particular obstacle their members were going through and shouted encouragement.

"These soldiers are in their 13th week, they graduate Friday, and this course lets them see how far they've come," SSgt. Robert Phifer, drill sergeant, said. "Each obstacle is something they can accomplish and when they do, they can step back and say, 'I did it.'"

One obstacle, 'Skyscraper', is designed especially for teamwork. It is approximately 30-feet high with regularly spaced boards where one man climbs through and helps pull the others up as they climb to the top. The 'Slide for Life' is used to quell fear of heights. It is about 50-feet high with a rope tied at both ends. The soldier climbs up and slides down the rope to the ground.

The 'Belly Crawl' has the soldier low crawling through a ditch of water with barbed wire strung over it.

Soldier 'pays the price' to stay Infantry

Loses 32 pounds during initial entry training

By Connie McReynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Private Everton King, Charlie Company, 10th Battalion, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade, is committed to a mission and feels he has paid the price to continue that mission during his 13 weeks of basic training.

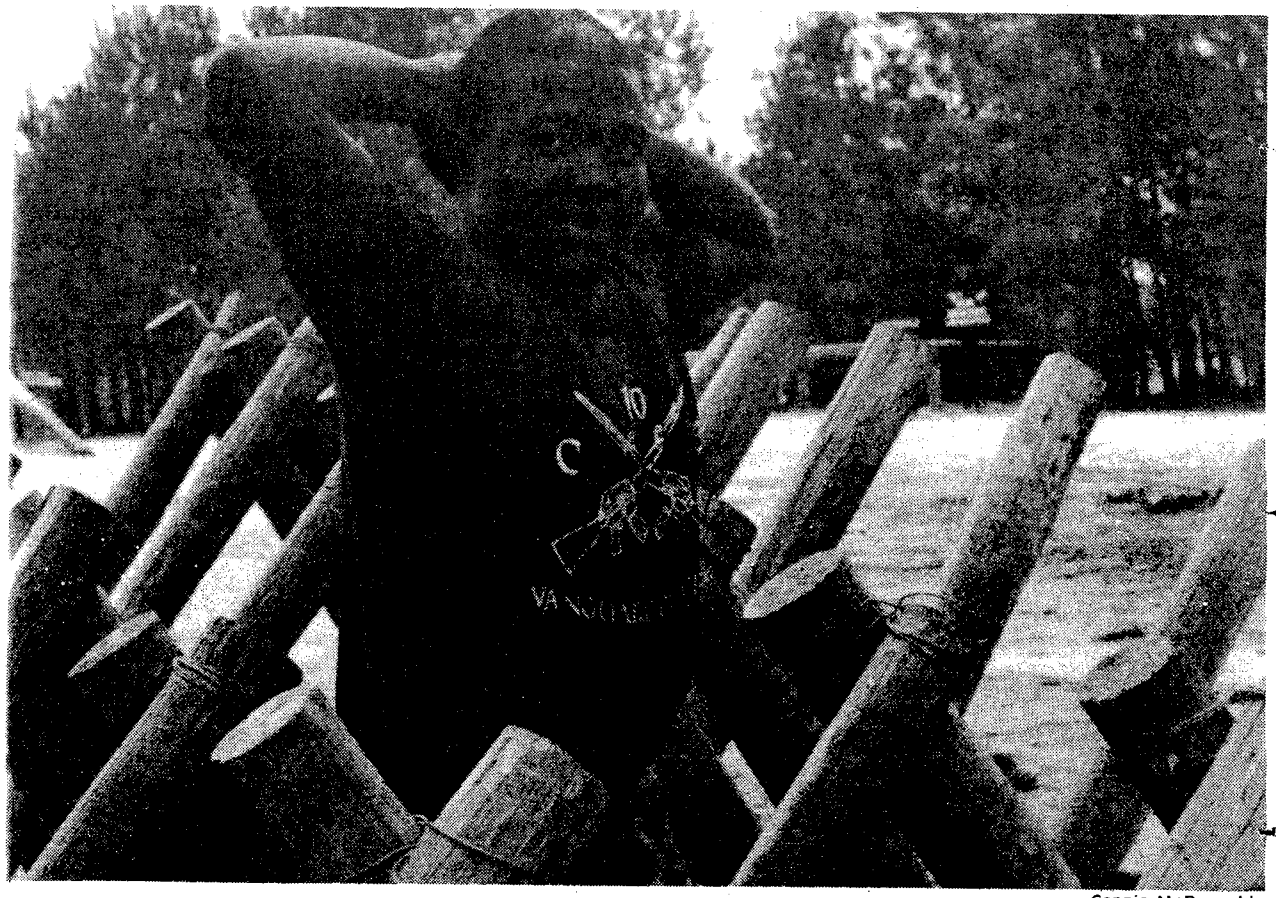
"It was hard. My first day was rough. A lot of pressure was put on me and it was hell, but I felt I was supposed to be here so I stuck it out," King said.

When King entered the service he was big; 202 pounds at 5-foot-8-inches. "He couldn't do one situp. He was in terrible shape. On the last PT test though, he scored 240. It makes you feel good when you see a soldier improve like this," SSgt. Robert Phifer, first platoon drill sergeant said.

The 21-year-old Jamaican entered the service during the Grenada conflict. "I became aware of what could happen to my home during the conflict and decided I wanted to help clean the Cubans out of my front yard. That's my mission," he said.

Since entering service, King has lost 32 pounds and is able to do 50 pushups and 48 situps. "SSgt. Phifer gave us a lot of exercises to do, like pull ups on our bunks at night and what he calls 'leg flutters.'"

King added he plans on staying in the Infantry, but first he's off to jump school and Ranger school.



Connie McReynolds

Private Everton King can go through the confidence course with few problems, now that he has lost 32 pounds since beginning basic training.

Officials foresee no increase in commissary poultry prices

FORT LEE, Va. — Even though the Avian influenza epidemic has led to the destruction of millions of chickens and turkeys on the east coast, officials at the U.S. Army Troop Support Agency do not foresee any substantial poultry price increases that are directly related to the disease.

Average retail fryer and broiler prices in Army commissaries are up marginally because of reduced production related to the flu. However, the sharp increase in poultry and egg prices over the past several months is tied to a 40 percent to 60 percent jump in feed costs.

If the disease is halted soon enough, full production is expected to meet consumer demand. Poultry and egg prices are expected to level off this summer following spring grain harvests. Prices may even decline as grain becomes more plentiful, farmers increase production and poultry markets become more competitive.

Shortages of chicken are not expected during 1984 because most fryers and roasters are produced in Georgia, Alabama and Arkansas, states that have not been affected by Avian flu.

East coast turkey production may be affected by the disease and some shortages may be experienced this fall. But, this is specultion that depends on how quickly the flu can be eliminated because turkey growers usually start production during spring months for autumn consumption.

Avian flu is only contagious to chickens and turkeys and it cannot be contracted by humans. Commissary shoppers may also ease their concerns because all resale poultry is inspected for wholesomeness and quality by the U.S. Department of Agriculture and commissary veterinary food inspectors. (TNS)

Buying generics helps cut food bills

FORT LEE, Va. — Fort Benning commissary customers seeking ways to cut their food bills could buy generic goods and save 12 percent to 33 percent when compared to similiar national brands according to officials of the U.S. Army Troop Support Agency.

Generics are "no frill" products that are easily identified by their white or yellow labels with bold, black lettering ing needs, breakfast foods, beverages and juices, canned fruits and vegetables, paper and plastic products, dog food, health and beauty aids, household cleaning products and cigarettes.

Although these products do not always offer the consistent quality of brand name items, generics are essentially equivalent in terms of nutrition. They also give customers another ad-

New rules increase certain CHAMPUS benefits

The Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services (CHAMPUS) has revised its rules on hearing impairment to help more handicapped people who need treatment.

The new rules make more benefits available to active duty family members under CHAMPUS' Program for the Handicapped.

Patients with serious hearing losses are now entitled to a wide range of benefits. They include hearing aids, schools for the deaf, sign language instruction for themselves and their families and training to communicate through lip-reading.

To qualify as seriously handicapped under the program, patients with hearing impairment must be tested. Children too young to be tested need documentation from their doctors showing they will not develop normal language skills without special help. Qualifications will be reviewed by CHAMPUS on a case-by-case basis.

As with all benefits under the Program for the Handicapped, CHAMPUS requires advance approval for treatment of hearing impairment before the care can be cost-shared. Prior approval may be requested by writing to:

OCHAMPUS
Benefit Authorization Branch
Aurora, Colo. 80045

All requests for patients under 19 years of age must include documentation explaining why the services are not being paid for under the Education for All Handicapped Children Act, a federal law passed in 1975. If a child is eligible to receive services for hearing impairment through the public school system, from the state where the patient lives, or from any other federal agency, CHAMPUS won't cover the services.

Remember, only active duty family members are covered under the Program for the Handicapped. Persons who have questions about coverage of hearing impairment under the Program for the Handicapped should contact the CHAMPUS claims processor for their state, their nearest Health Benefits Advisor, or write to the CHAMPUS Benefit Authorization Branch at the address above.

Weigh insurance decisions carefully

National Service Life Insurance term policyholders over age 70 will have their renewal premium rates capped at the age 70 rate under a policy change announced by Administrator of Veterans Affairs Harry N. Walters.

Nearly 50,000 veterans are expected to benefit from the initial rollback action on September 1, 1984. Another 25,000 veterans will be affected in 1985, Walters said.

"The action is being taken to provide financial relief for those senior policyholders who have continued their term insurance coverage in lieu of conversion to permanent insurance plans," Walters added. "Although premium rates are costly, we continue to experience a high renewal rate for older term policyholders."

At renewal age 80 in 1983, more than 78 percent of VA's term policyholders continued their coverage at a monthly rate of $150.40 for $10,000 coverage.

Under the new procedures, all term policyholders who have renewed their policies at age 71 or above will have their premiums rolled back to the renewal age 70 monthly premium rate of $6.18 per $1,000 coverage, effective September 1. Policyholders below age 70 will have premiums capped at their first renewal beyond age 70.

For example, a policyholder who renewed his or her policy at age 68 would continue to pay $5.18 monthly for $1,000 coverage for the five-year renewal period. At age 73 the policy would be renewed at the renewal age 70 rate.

The change requires no action to be taken by the policyholder, Walters stressed. "Renewal notices will continue to be mailed in advance of the effective dates and will reflect the lower rates for affected veterans."

Unlike many term plans issued by commercial insurance companies, VA's approximately one million term policies can be renewed indefinitely. More than eight percent of the NSLI term policyholders are age 70 older, despite the significant rate increases on each renewal to cover the higher mortality experience.

Funding for the premium capping will come from surplus funds contributed by term policyholers, Walters said. This will include $63 million that will be accumulated by retaining the 1984 and 1985 term dividends at the 1983 rate. Another $23 million will be transferred from a reserve for annuity payments since only one percent of insurance proceeds are paid as annuities. (VA)

Statue of Liberty

Time and corrosion have taken toll; restoration project now underway

The Statue of Liberty has stood majestically for nearly a century as a symbol of freedom, but time and corrosion have taken their toll. Inside, that great lady is coming apart at the seams. And her 100-ton outside skin of hand-hammered copper is also in bad shape.

About two years ago, President Reagan and then-Secretary of Interior, James G. Watt, appointed a high-powered commission to fix all that and more, including the restoration of nearby historic Ellis Island, where millions of refugees and immigrants first set foot on American soil.

The commission, headed by Chrysler Corporation's Lee Iacocca, intends to raise $230 million toward the projects, to set up centennial commemoration events through 1986, and to plan for continuing support for the two national monuments.

The initial phase of this restoration project began in January with the unloading on Liberty Island of construction material for the scaffold which will surround the statue completely.

It will remain in place throughout the two-and-one-half year restoration project.

"We want people to be aware that Liberty Island will remain open throughout the restoration process and we feel that a visit to the statue at this time will be an unusual and historic opportunity to see one of our nation's most meaningful symbols in the process of rehabilitation," said Russell E. Dickenson, Director of the National Park Service.

A commission spokesman said, however, that sections of the statue's interior will be closed from time to time as the work progresses.

All work on the statue and grounds is scheduled for completion before July 4, 1986. The 100th anniversary of the statue's unveiling and dedication will be celebrated by a rededication ceremony a few months later, on Oct. 28.

How bad is the deterioration? E. Blaine Cliver, chief of historic preservation North-Atlantic Region for the National Park Service, said "major renovation work on the statue's iron framework and copper skin is needed now to preserve the monument and to avoid serious future problems. Safety isn't a critical issue at present, but it could be in the future."

AP

This is what may happen to the Statue of Liberty if repairs are not made soon.

Her upraised torch may be removed to reinforce the thinning copper skin on the hand, torch and iron skeleton. Even worse, according to a Park Service spokesman, is the condition of the mammoth network of underpinnings. Corrosion is causing weakness.

How will the statue look when the work is finished?

Liberty's external appearance will be left essentially the same. "We will take every step to assure that she remains as majestic and beautiful as she is today," Dickenson said.

Originally known as "Liberty Enlightening the World," the statue was designed by Frederic Auguste Bartholdi, a French sculptor. The French raised $400,000 to have it built. When completed and presented to the U.S. in Paris in 1884 as a gift from the French people, the statue was dismantled and shipped to America.

Underpinnings for the statue were designed by Gustave Eiffel, the engineer who later designed the Eiffel Tower.

Americans raised an additional $270,000 to build the base for the statue. On Oct. 28, 1886, President Grover Cleveland dedicated the statue at a gala celebration in New York Harbor.

Liberty stands 151 feet high on an 11-point base. Natural corrosion of the reddish copper skin gives the statue its familiar bluish-green color. Any new skin will be specially treated to match this color, according to commission officials.

Inside the giant structure some major changes to accommodate visitors will be made. These include installing wider railings and other safety features on the spiral stairway which goes from the top of the pedestal to the viewing area in the crown.

The existing elevator, which carries visitors from ground level to the viewing balcony, will be replaced with a larger, more modern one, improved for use by disabled visitors.

Closed-circuit TV cameras will be installed inside and outside for viewing by those unable to climb inside the statue.

'Give me your tired, your poor, your huddled masses. .'

A steady stream of immigrants pouring into New York City beginning in the mid-19th Century — many fleeing Ireland's potato famine — resulted in the construction of a major new processing center: Ellis Island.

A former opera house at the tip of Manhattan, called Castle Garden, had served as the immigration station from 1855 until it was closed in 1890 because it lacked the capacity to process the masses of people coming to America.

The U.S. Immigration Bureau converted the naval arsenal on Ellis Island. It opened on Jan. 1, 1892, and five years later when the original wooden buildings burned down, 33 brick buildings were built.

More than 17 million newcomers arrived on Ellis Island over the next 62 years until it closed in 1954.

The procedures were the same. The immigrants were directed to the ground floor baggage room where they unloaded their worldly belongings before climbing flights of stairs to the Great Hall for medical and legal examinations.

Doctors watched them climb, and when they reached the top of the stairs, they would walk in a circle before the doctor who would examine their hair and face.

If there was a medical problem, their clothing would be marked with chalk. For example, an "L" meant lameness, an "H" a suspected heart disease, and an "E" meant eye problems.

They then entered the great hall for a full examination. Upon completion, immigrants waited on long rows of wooden benches for the legal inspectors. There were about 30 questions asked and it only took about two minutes. Interpreters were available as needed.

The questioning went something like: "What is your name?" "Where are you coming from." "Where are you going?" "Do you have relatives here?" "Do you have a job waiting?" and "Do you have a criminal record?"

For 80 percent of the immigrants, the average

MILLION OF IMMIGRANTS landing at Ellis Island were processed at this debarkation station which housed the Great Hall. It was declared a historic shrine in 1965.

Ellis

the stay was only three to five hours. About 20 percent were detained for either medical or legal reasons. Between 1892 and 1924, when the greatest tide of humanity swept through the narrow portal in Upper New York Bay, only two percent, about a quarter-million people, were excluded from admission.

Trachoma, a very contagious and then incurable eye disease that caused blindness, was the most common medical reason for exclusion.

The Alien Contract Labor Law of 1885 prohibited American employers from bringing over immigrants to work for lower wages than Americans received, or to be strike breakers.

If an immigrant was found to be "contracted labor," it was grounds for exclusion.

Massive immigration stopped after 1924 but the island continued to serve as an immigration center on a reduced scale.

It became a detention and rehabilitation center during World War II. From 1942 to 1946 it was a Coast Guard training center.

In 1965, Ellis Island was turned over to the National Park Service and it reopened as an immigration museum as part of the Statue of Liberty National Monument. (AFPS)

Don't blemish record by trying to 'float' checks

During Fiscal Year 1983, 35,866 dishonored checks totaling $2.5 million were processed within the Army Commissary System according to officials at the U.S. Army Troop Support Agency.

Commissary officials make every attempt to collect money due the government. Dishonored checks not collected at the local installation are forwarded for collection to the Finance and Accounting Office which supports the commissary region. Checks which the FAO is unable to recoup are then sent to the U.S. Army Finance and Accounting Center, Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., for collection.

Reimbursement was made on 32,660 bad checks locally and 3,206 were forwarded to the regional FAO which recouped on 2,243 of them. The remaining 963 were forwarded to the USAFAC which collected on 266. The Army was unable to collect on 697 checks or 1.9 percent of the total number of dishonored checks amounting to $52,361.37.

Officials attribute some of the bad check problems to kiting or floating which results when a customer gambles on a deposit arriving at the bank before the check. Commissaries deposit their checks daily and many banks have started clearing checks overnight. That means a check written in the morning could be deducted from the individual's account the next day.

The computer revolution and the tight money market have also reduced the amount of time it takes to clear out-of-town or out-of-state checks. The shopper who gambles assuming that it may take four days for his check to clear might lose.

Active duty personnel who have written a dishonored check at the commissary have five working days to repay and clear the check. The sooner the better. If they pay the day the check is returned to the commissary they can avoid having a letter sent to their unit commander. Second offenders are required by Army regulation to attend class in personal financial management before their checks will be accepted by any installation facilities, i.e. Post Exchange, officer or enlisted clubs.

It doesn't make sense, commissary officials say, to write a dishonored check. Not only does the customer have to reimburse the government for the full amount, but he also has to pay a $15 fee for processing the check which "bounces" in any Army commissary, except those in Europe, and his heretofore spotless record has a blemish on it. Form 1040EZ — for singles only

It's back! The new federal income tax return, the 1040EZ, that's only 11 lines long, was used last year by 15 million taxpayers. Remember, to use this form, a taxpayer must meet all the following criteria:

- Single filing status;
- No exemptions for being 65 or over or blind;
- No dependents; and
- Taxable income or less than $50,000 that is only from wages and from interest of $400 or less.

If you are uncertain about your filing status, dependents, or exemptions, read the step-by-step instructios for the form. (APS)

Scanner reading of 1040EZ to begin this year

Form 1040EZ — the easy returns introduced last year for single taxpayers with relatively simple filing needs — will have a slightly different look this year.

Instead of a line for each dollar entry on the return, all 1040EZ forms mailed to taxpayers will have a series of boxes in which taxpayers are asked to enter dollar amounts. These boxes will aid in processing these returns with Optical Character Recognition (OCR) equipment for the first time.

OCR, which works on the same principle as the electronic scanners used at supermarket check-outs, can read numbers and letters photographically at a rate of 2,000 characters per second. IRS officials state that OCR has the potential for transforming their current labor-intensive, paper-burdened processing system, now storing more than a billion and a half returns, into a totally automated data capturing operation.

Approximately 15 million taxpayers filed 1040EZ returns last year and IRS is estimating that 16 million will use this return this year.

Each return shows how the numbers should be formed so they can be read accurately by the scanners, and to eliminate confusion between similarly shaped numbers, such as 3 and 8, or 7 and 9.

Use of the preprinted label which accompanies each tax package is particularly important and should be used if possible. (APS)

Plans for Ellis Island are still on the drawing board, but restoration work on the Great Hall of the main registry building, where millions of immigrants were given medical and legal examinations, is expected to be completed by July 1986.

The Ellis Island centennial will be celebrated in 1992 with the opening of an historical museum and 33 refurbished buildings. These brick buildings were built in 1897 when the original wooden buildings burned down.

About 2,250 immigrants were processed on the island the day it opened, New Year's Day, 1892. By the time its doors closed in 1954, more than 17 million had passed through.

In 1903, a bronze plaque with the sonnet "The New Colossus" composed by the American poet and essayist, Emma Lazarus, was affixed to the statue.

It strengthened the tie between the statue and immigration in the following final lines:

"Give me your tired, your poor
Your huddled masses yearning to breathe free,
The wretched refuse of your teeming shore,
Send these the homeless, tempest-tost to me,
I lift my lamp beside the golden door!"

Today, more than 100 million Americans or about 40 percent of the population can trace their ancestry to family members who entered the U.S. through the Ellis Island gateway.

ROTC once again part of academic scene

The success of ROTC on college campuses today shows that there has been a dramatic change from the early 1970's — a time when some seemed to believe ROTC meant, "Riot-on-the-Campus." It was a time when a loud minority's abuse tainted the program for many students and their parents.

The ROTC program provides more than 70 percent of the officers entering the active Army, the Army National Guard and the Army Reserve each year. It was often under attack during the emotional Vietnam era.

Today, ROTC officials boast that the program has come full cycle from 1973-74, when declining enrollment bottomed out at 39,346 — a drop of more than 70,000 from the 109,819 enrolled in 1969-70. Since then a gradual climb in enrollment has continued for eight years, reaching 73,819 students during the 1982-83 school year.

A program beginning at Youngstown State University in Ohio this fall is an excellent example of how ROTC is being welcomed on today's college campuses.

Youngstown State University, its foundation and military science department cooperated in establishing a $15,000 second year scholarship fund. Twenty scholarships will be awarded to students in sophomore military science classes. These scholarships are not part of the Army's ROTC Scholarship program.

Each recipient of the "Gold Bar Scholarship" will receive $250 each quarter. It is expected that the money will provide a bridge for the first year military science students to the substantial financial assistance from ROTC during the third and fourth years.

How scholarships began

The scholarships came into being after John Coffelt, president of YSU, asked Maj. Larry Callaway, professor of military science, to come up with a proposal designed to solve the continuing problem of assuring that more freshmen will continue in ROTC when they become sophomores.

Coffelt was concerned that low enrollment of sophomores in ROTC would result in cancellation of the program since Congress has mandated that a school must have at least 17 students enrolled in third year military science in order to continue.

A drop in enrollment from the first to second year military science has been a continuing problem at YSU. During the 1982 spring quarter there were 213 students in YSU's first year military science class. However, only 29 stayed in the program for the second year.

This sharp drop in second year enrollment is not unique to YSU. It is caused by a number of factors. Historical data at YSU predicts nearly one of two freshmen will not return as sophomores. The drop is caused by several factors including: the need for many students to work during their second year because of exhausted savings; failure to meet medical qualifications; and a reluctance to compete for a three-year scholarship because that means a four-year active duty obligation after graduation.

Coffelt and Callaway agreed that awarding 20 scholarships to sophomores would assure the retention of enough first-year military science students to meet the Congressional requirement. They presented the proposal to William Roesti, president of the Youngstown State University Foundation, who agreed that the ROTC program is important to the university and granted permission to establish the scholarships to improve retention of first-year students.

Callaway feels the scholarships "will give our program a shot in the arm.

"YSU," he noted, "is really supporting our program. We have an excellent program that is going to get better with the help of these scholarships."

The first to receive the "Gold Bar Scholarships" were William Florig and Timothy Walter. They were selected on the basis of leadership potential and scholastic ability.

Florig is from Austintown, Ohio. Walter lives in Boardman, Ohio. Coffelt and Roesti presented these initial scholarships.

The ROTC directorate at the Army's Training and Doctrine Command headquarters sees YSU's scholarship program as another example of the way the ROTC is being accepted today.

TRADOC officials feel that this type of good working relationship between a college's faculty, students and ROTC will serve as a boost to the Army's plan to commission more than 10,000 lieutenants annually through ROTC, beginning in 1985.

The Army itself now provides 12,000 ROTC scholarships designed to attract outstanding students.

The scholarships are offered for four, three and two years. They pay for college tuition, text books and other purely academic expenses. Scholarship cadets also receive a tax-free subsistence allowance of $1,000 each year the scholarship is in effect.

Four-year scholarships are offered on a world-wide competitive basis to U.S. citizens entering college as freshmen. Three-year and two-year scholarships are awarded competitively to students already enrolled in college.

Enlisted soldiers are not overlooked in the Army's quest for quality second lieutenants. There is a program which gives early discharges and scholarships to eligible enlisted soldiers who pursue their college education through the Army's ROTC program.

During the past spring, the Army offered 200 two and three-year scholarships to active duty soldiers. Those selected to receive scholarships were discharged in time to enroll in a college or university for the 1983-84 school year. Applicants for these scholarships, which are awarded each year, must have served on active duty for one year and have either one or two years of college credit, depending on the length of the scholarship they are seeking.

Commission after graduation

After graduation, the Army wants the soldiers back — as officers. They will be expected to accept a commission in the regular Army if it is offered. Otherwise, they will be commissioed in the Army Reserve. Scholarship winners must serve on active duty for four years or for eight years in the Reserve, depending on the needs of the Army.

The TRADOC ROTC Directorate at Fort Monroe, Va., is receiving optimistic reports about acceptance of ROTC on campuses throughout the United States. (TNS)

Records fall during target championships

USAMU, Stewart sweep through competition

By Tommy Pool
USAMU Public Affairs Office

Nine shooting records fell during this year's Interservice Running Game Target Championships held at Fort Benning, March 19-21.

In individual competition, Randy Stewart of USAMU swept all three events setting two new national records, tying another and establishing three interservice records in the process.

Stewart began his record performance in the 50 meter olympic event, scoring 298 out of 300 in slow runs, raising the old mark by one point. During the competition, his total of 593 out of 600 broke his own record by three points.

He continued his dominance in the 50 meter mixed runs phase with a new record of 393 out of 400 and then tied the 10 meter air rifle mark of 383 in the final day of competition. Both were new interservice records as well.

In team competition, the USAMU "Blue" squad also scored new interservice records in all three events. Team members for 50 meter olympic and mixed run squads were Randy Stewart, James Reiber and William Allenworth. The winning 10 meter air rifle team was composed of Stewart, Reiber and Wesley Vaughn.

More than 30 competitors were on hand for the matches including representatives of the Army, Army Reserve and U.S. Marine Corps. The interservice championships is one of the last major shooting events leading up to the U.S. Olympic Team tryouts to be held in Los Angeles, Calif., this June.

Spring strikes fear in heart of OTHBSITHJ wife

By Laurie A. Viggiano
CASEMATE

The first faint hints of spring may bring joy to some people. But they only strike fear and loathing in the heart of any woman who happens to have an OTHBSITHJ for a husband.

Spring would be fine if it heralded nothing more than sunny weather and pretty flowers. However, it also brings another season of (gasp, shudder) golf, fishing and softball.

'Non-contact' sports

For anyone not familiar with the acronym OTHBSITHJ, it stands for Over-the-Hill-But-Still-in-There-Heavin' Jock. This is the guy wise enough to realize he no longer has the stamina, coordination or speed for football, racquetball, tennis and hockey. But, he's not quite smart enough to know when to throw in the whole towel and take up walks in the country or knitting by the fire. Instead, he turns to golf, fishing and softball. And what, you may ask, could be less harmful to an OTH jock than that?

A Mack truck doing 125 m.p.h, that's what. Imagine, if you can, a man with a one-wood fixed immovably in his grasp, who wound up at the first tee and then discovered he couldn't wind down again. Or, how about a guy who stumbled into his own tacklebox. Of course, it was full of shark-size hooks and two-pound weights.

Then, there's the time he came home from a 7 p.m. softball game at midnight, having spent most of the intervening hours at a hospital emergency room getting 10 stitches in a busted leg. Well, it's simply too awful to contemplate.

Some OTHBSITHJ wives will get out there and play a round with hubby, or go fishin' with him, even go to a game and cheer him on. These are rare and very hardy types, however. Most women have neither the nerve nor the stomach to witness exactly how their OTH jocks' bumps and bruises are actually received.

Advanced planning

It's enough for the less hardy among us to serve by merely standing and waiting, as Milton suggested. A little advance preparation for the return of the warrior from the battlefield is definitely indicated, as long as the wife is standing around waiting anyhow.

A wise wife gathers up all the Ben-Gay and elastic wraps she can lay her hands on, plus plenty of those band-aids that come in weird little shapes and sizes for boo-boos in strange and unlikely areas of the anatomy.

It's also advisable to keep on hand a good supply of nice soft pillows, to catch the copious flow of tears over that uncaught Moby Dick, the 18 straight bogeys, or those four missed fly balls. The pillows serve as an acceptable substitute for the wifely shoulder tocry on — can't let a sudden fit of tears ruin a good blouse or dress.

To the normal ordinary wife, this sounds unbear-

Tigers 2.....Cheetahs 0

Evading the Cheetah defensive line, Patrick Thyme and Laurie McDonald scored two goals for the Tigers. Joshua Dunn, James Mobley and Roberto DeJesus held the Cheetahs to a scoreless game.

Blue Thunder 5.....A Team 0

Forward Betres Malinke continuously booted the ball down field which enabled Keith Blackstone to roll over the A Team and score five Blue Thunder goals. Daniel Coyle and Rodney Etheridge were credited with assists on Blackstone's fourth and fifth goals. The A Team found themselves in a delicate situation when Thunder' fullbacks Anne Nichols, Katie Turgeon and Sammie Taylor sparked a little lightning against the A's offensive team and held them to a zero score.

Tigers 11.....Golden Eagles 0

Tigers' Mike Hitchcock, Jason Smith, Paul Feyereisen, Anthony Smith, David Sorrel and Kevin Dunn joined forces and clawed the Eagle defense to score a combined 11 goals. John Hughes, Vanessa Marinari and Mike Hardy caged the Eagle offense and held them for an 11-0 victory.

Strikers 6..... Red Dragons 1

Derek McCreight blew fire at the Dragons as he scored a game high four goals in the Strikers 6-1 victory. Jeremy Glasser and Steven Lorick each added a Striker' goal. Forward Kevin Harris helped the Striker defense to hold the Dragons to one goal.

OWC running festival set

The Officers Wives' Club of Fort Benning will be sponsoring the first "Festival of Running," April 28. There will be three fun runs: one, three and five miles, as well as a 30-mile, 6-member relay. All races will take place in the vicinity of Infantry Hall. Everyone, including local civilians, is eligible to participate. For more information and applications, contact Bill Hughes at 689-1934.

Marines sponsor road race

The first Marine Corps Logistics Base Sports Day in Albany, Ga., May 19, will feature a 10,000-meter road race which is open to the public. The entry fee is $5 before May 9. The fee will increase to $7 after that date. Applications are available at the BAYONET office, building 4, room 601. For more information, contact Robert McClain at 545-2201.

Racquetball trials scheduled

Fort Bragg, N.C., will be the site for the 1984 All Army Racquetball trial camp May 2-12. The Fort Benning Sports Office is now accepting applications for that camp. Benning could send as many as three individuals, one in each category, to the camp. The three categories are: open, men 34 and younger; senior, men 35 and older; and women, any age.

Boxing coaches needed

The sports office is looking for boxing instructors, coaches and trainers for the Physical Activities Sports program of the Morale Support Activities Division. Interested personnel should call 545-7519 for more information.

Reminder to fishermen

Post fishing regulations prohibit the use of minnows when fishing in ponds on the installation. Minnows may be used when fishing in the Chattahochee River or any of the streams on post. Any other live bait may be used anywhere on the post.

1984 Promenade Run slated

The American Family Life Insurance Company, the Columbus Bank and Trust Company and the Columbus Hilton are co-sponsoring the 1984 Promenade Run March 31. The two races, five and 20 kilometers, will be run concurrently beginning at 9 a.m. The course will wind through the historic areas of Columbus beginning and ending at the Columbus Hilton. The pre-registration fee is $8. For additional information contact Lloyd Sampson at 322-4041.

Bodybuilding contest

The Morale Support Activities Division is sponsoring the first ever Mr. and Ms. Fort Benning contest May 19 at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center. The contest, open to any active duty personnel stationed at Fort Benning, will award medals in five categories; arms, legs, chest, back and abdomen. There will be trophies awarded to the top five over-all finishers for both men and women. For more information contact Speedy Austin at 545-5777.

Racquetball lessons

The Morale Support Activities Division is offering free racquetball lessons beginning April 17. The classes will be held Tuesday and Thursday from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. in building 305. More more information, call Speedy Austin at 545-2332/5777 or Mr. Shelly at 545-4726/7832.

Dogwood marathon

FORT BRAGG, N.C. — Fort Bragg will be the starting point for the Dogwood Festival Marathon to be held May 6 as part of Fayetteville's Second Annual Dogwood Festival.

Entry fee for the marathon, which is co-sponsored by the 18th Field Artillery Brigade and the Fayetteville Area Runners' Association, is $6 before April 23 and $8 afterward until the entry cutoff date of April 30.

Interested runners should contact Capt. Louis Thomas (919-396-5077) or John Cox (919-497-4827) for entry forms or further information.

ably callous, but it's pure practicality on an OTHJ wife's part. She knows that nice blouse or dress may be the last she'll see for the duration; that is, until the poor old boy manages to kill himself at last, sliding into home base or something, and the insurance money comes through.

Budget battle

Part of the preparation for the coming season will no doubt include a careful reworking of the family budget, to include several professional carpet shampoos and quite possibly a reupholstery job. Particularly on his return from the fishin' hole or ball field, one dirty, bloody, smelly and battered OTH jock can create more mess than 10 five-year-olds could in a week of hard trying.

Indeed, hidden costs will assail the budget for several months, at least until cold weather blessedly sets in again. Clothing and uniforms shred and tatter at a most alarming rate for the OTH softball player, for example, due to the fact that he spends an inordinate amount of time on the ground, having stumbled or just plain fallen there. Shoes are an especially costly consideration. The younger jock can stay on his feet and even make a grandstand play in $1.98 tennis shoes, but not the OTH boy. His delicate tootsies require the $65 model with ankle padding, arch supports and specially designed soles. And, if he can find a pair with hidden crutches that pop up from the sides at crucial moments, so much the better.

In reality, marriage to an OTHBSITH jock isn't all that bad. Whatever his problems he's got spirit. After all, he's still in there heavin' and enjoying every painful minute of it. You always know where he is if he's not at home; it's either the golf course, the fishin' hole or the softball field . . . well, or maybe the hospital. And after his little defeats you know he's going to rush right back to you-know-who for cuddles and comfort and, of course, for the ever-present bottle of iodine.

If you have children,then you know exactly how to deal with an OTHBSITHJ husband. If not, you realize you don't need kids. You have a bumbling, bumptious, overgrown and lovable one already.

The Ledger-Enquirer can shrink your bills.

Every shopping trip you make should start right here.
In The Ledger-Enquirer.
Because the wealth of ads, articles, and coupons you'll find can save you money before you spend it.
Nothing but The Ledger-Enquirer gives you such a complete overview of where and when to find the city's best bargains.
So make the most of your Ledger-Enquirer. A monthly subscription is a very small investment that'll save you dollar after dollar or anything you need.

"Used my head and checked some ads before shopping. A half-price sale on hats was exactly what I wanted to see!"

"Saw an article in The Ledger-Enquirer about a new discount outlet for designer fashion. Turned out I could fit 2 suits in a budget for one."

"Saw an ad for a sale on my favorite brand. (I bought the shirt for what I saved on the coat!"

"Saved 30% thanks to ad in The Ledger-Enquirer. (Right down the street I saw the same pair for full price.)"

It pays to read The Ledger-Enquirer.

MANEUVER —Two tanks from the task force maneuver into position during external evaluation training.

'Cottonbalers' wage winter warfare

By Willie Means
197th Inf. Bde. PAO

FORT DRUM, N.Y. — Fort Benning's "Forever Forward" Brigade's 3rd Battalion, 7th Infantry "Cottonbalers" completed their environmental adjustment training and vehicle familiarization and jumped full-swing into their external evaluation training recently.

Smoke laid heavily over the 3-7th task force assembly area as armored personnel carriers; improved TOW vehicles; tanks from 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor, the Brigade's Speed and Power unit; and wheeled vehicles; all loaded with troops, began their advance to meet an enemy of unknown size.

Soldiers' faces were blank as the constant clanking and bouncing of the vehicles reminded them they were on a movement-to-contact mission while traveling down an unmarked route secured earlier by military police platoon members.

"The task force was issued warning orders and then operations orders the day before the war began," said Maj. John W. May, 3-7th's training officer. "Units will travel forward until contact is made, then defend and delay the opposing forces (OPFOR) (simulated by the brigade's 15th Cavalry scout unit) so the main body can get positioned."

As elements roved down the road in search of the OPFOR, commanders began having their units leave the road and cut cross country, hoping to avoid any obstacles set by the OPFOR.

"We're traveling in a bounding overwatch now," said Sgt. Samuel T. Lewis, an NBC (nuclear, biological, chemical) specialist traveling with a commander to give advice on possible NBC hazards. "You'll seldom find a unit staying on a road. Traveling across country provides cover and concealment, and gets you around obstacles."

The lead elements of the task force finally made contact with the enemy. The lead elements, using all weapons they could bring to bare on the OPFOR, including airstrikes by A-10 Thunderbolt II fighters provided by the 174th Tactical Fighter Wing, Syracuse, N.Y.; the 104th Tactical Fighter Group, Springfield, Mass.; and the 103rd Tactical Fighter Group, Hartford, Conn., soon took the high ground, then outflanked the enemy and surrounded him. The task force commander, Lt. Col. Douglas D. Allman, then committed the main-body of the task force and two elements he had in reserve and the battle was won.

"One of the best things about this force-on-force-training is the usage of MILES (multible integrated laser engagement system)," said Maj. George M. Reimer, brigade S-3. "Everything is more realistic, such as in a combat environment. You know you can't get hurt but someone out there is trying to get a MILES kill. You don't want to get killed, so you try and do everything correctly."

Shuffstall Award

The Donald C. Shuffstall Drill Sergeant of the Year Award will be presented to SFC James S. Parris at 11 a.m. Monday in Theater #3.

The award, given annually to Fort Benning's top drill sergeant, was established in 1980 as a tribute to retired Colonel Donald C. Shuffstall by Richard Leandri, a Clearwater, Fla. businessman.

Leandri said he established the award to honor his close friend Shuffstall, a former enlisted drill sergeant, for his 35 years of service in the Infantry.

CPO summer jobs

The public notice announcement for the 1984 Appropriated Fund Summer Employment Program is now available for review by interested individuals. Applications will be accepted until April 15.

Applicants for clerical positions must be 18 years old unless they are at least 16 years of age and a high school graduate. Applicants for non-clerical positions must be at least 16 years of age.

For further information concerning qualification requirements, appropriate forms, etc., visit the Employment Information Office, building 35, room 100.

Spring formal

The 1st Infantry Training Brigade's Spring Formal will be held at the Fort Benning Officer's Club tomorrow at 6 p.m.

To inaugurate this event, past brigade commanders and former battalion commanders of the brigade are invited to attend this social gathering.

This commentary is an admission of failure.

In journalism school, you are taught that a good reporter is objective and accurate. "You never put yourself into a story," is drummed into your head in school. Fledgling reporters that make that mistake are looked upon as being "unprofessional," or "too soft" for the business.

I failed to remain objective.

In an effort to be accurate about a story in this issue of the BAYONET about child abuse, I put in a call to the Department of Family Children Services in Columbus. There I was put on the line with Rick King, Fort Benning's military liaison for that department. We made an appointment to meet over a cup of coffee and discuss his office and their problems. After meeting with King, I realized it was also my problem.

I expected to meet with the standard bureaucrat that was going through the motions of handling "just another job." Instead, I met a pleasant-looking ex-soldier who hated his job. More accurately : he hated the reason for its existence.

He spoke of an incident that was the primary reason his office came into existence.

Several years ago a small child was brought into Martin Army Community Hospital — dead. The child had been brutally murdered — by her mother. During the autopsy, it was discovered that this was not an isolated case of a parent flying into a rage, the child was the victim of a long string of abuses.

There were several bones broken that had been left untreated and had started to heal. The reason the mother gave for her anger that resulted in the murder of the child was, "She cried a lot!"

After several cups of coffee, my notes littered my desk as I frantically tried to keep pace as King recounted story after story. I began to hate King's job. I have since learned I hate the reason for its existence even more.

"I expected to meet with the standard bureaucrat that was going through the motions of handling "just another job." Instead, I met a pleasant-looking ex-soldier who hated his job. More accurately: he hated the reason for its existence."

The 15-minute interview lasted two hours as he explained what his office and Fort Benning was trying to do. Fort Benning, along with the rest of the country, was trying to stamp out child abuse. Child abuse has been called the only crime that is hereditary: Parents give it to their children.

King made it plain what child abuse was and described the type person that abuses children. I fully expected that he would describe the classic picture of a sleazy-looking character in a dirty raincoat: I would feel comfortable with that description. My concepts and his description did not match. In fact, his description, with minor changes, fit me.

After King left, I sat at my desk for some time trying to think of a "pleasant" way to describe child abuse and child abusers.

After a while I realized that I had lost my objectivity and was angry.

I was too angry to continue working, so I did the next best thing: I went home and hugged my son.

Collecting aluminum cans can be fun, profitable

Robert McClain

The panhandlers of the 1800s searched long hours, hoping to find gold or silver. Today people are searching for a different precious medal — aluminum. Though the panhanders of today aren't looking to get rich, they are looking to add a few dollars to their incomes and to clean up the environment.

Bob Keeler is one of many Americans who have discovered the fun and profit in collecting glittering aluminum cans. Keeler is a clerk at the Reynolds Recycling Center in Columbus. He knows the can collectors well.

"All kinds of people are recycling cans," Keeler said. "Lower income people, housewives, children, doctors, soldiers, civic groups, church groups and retired people, all come here to recycle cans. You can find someone from just about every walk of life who recycles aluminum cans."

Keeler added he is seeing more retired military, family members and soldiers recycling aluminum cans now.

"I hate to see the highways littered with cans," commented Larry Stewart. "So once or twice a month, I'll a take a walk and clean up the streets. My wife and sons collect more than I do. It's a good project for the kids. It helps them learn to clean up the environment and they add the money they make to their savings." Stewart is a truck driver and recently retired from the Army.

"The people who do come into the center are people who are concerned about the environment and who want to add a few dollars to their incomes. With the economy like it is, every dollar helps," Keeler added.

Another recently retired soldier, George Chadwick, also brings his empty soda cans in to help clean the environment. He also admitted the extra dollars come in handy. "When I was a first sergeant in the 197th Infantry Brigade, my soldiers used to give me their soda cans to recycle. The money we made went for company parties, coffee funds and for things to fix up the barracks. Now I just collect cans in my spare time. I probably come to the recycling center twice a month to drop off cans," he said.

But for most people, the effect collecting cans has on the environment is a secondary reason.

Keeler added, "You would be surprised at the amount of cans some people bring in. I see one man who regularly brings in hundreds of pounds of cans every week." Keeler calls him one of the "entrepreneurs" of the recycling business.

He added recycling cans can bring in quite a few dollars for avid collectors. Most of the recycling centers in the area pay between 25 and 35 cents for a pound of aluminum cans. While this isn't much when you figure per can, it doesn't take long to collect enough cans to make the effort worthwhile.

"People make hundreds of extra dollars a month just by collecting cans. It's not hard. They just know where to look," Keeler said.

According to some of the more involved recyclers in the area, Fort Benning is a very good place to find aluminum cans.

One evening last week, I came

Ledger/Enquirer

across one of these "entrepreneurs" while I was taking out my trash. As I placed it in the dumpster, I saw a short, gruffy man inside the large container. He was searching through the trash with a flashlight. At first I was a bit embarrassed for finding him in there. I think he felt the same way. But after I said hello and separated my empty cola cans from my trash for him, we both felt a bit more at ease.

When he got out of the dumpster, I asked him what he was looking for. He said cans. I asked his name. "Jim," he said. He told me the dumpsters around the barracks are some of the best places in the area to find aluminum cans.

"Most soldiers drink a lot of sodas and they just toss the cans in the trash. I don't mind going through the dumpsters to gather them. To a lot of soldiers the cans are just waste. To me, the cans mean money. My only other income is from social security and the money I make collecting cans helps me make ends meet. I have a regular route I take every evening. In addition to the dumpsters, I'll go through the trash behind bars and restaurants. I figure I earn at least $150 a month collecting cans," he added.

Jim is just one of many low income citizens who search for aluminum cans at Fort Benning.

"I see a number of people every morning going through the trash container outside our dining faculity looking for cans. You see the same people day after day. They don't bother anyone. They just pick up the cans and go on their way," said Thomas Bingley, a shift leader with the 43rd Airborne Company dining facility.

"A lot of low income people do bring in cans to add to their incomes. Some tell me they don't really need the money, but it gives them something to do with their time. They add, it is also good exercise," Keeler said.

Maybe they don't realize it, but these can collectors are doing our nation a great service while they are making extra cash. Recycling saves energy and saves a valuable resource. It also helps to beautify the environment. How many other ways can you make a few dollars and help your country too?

Abuse

It should't hurt to be a child

By Bill Reynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Potty training, normally a traumatic, but necessary, experience for small children, became deadly business for a 29-month-old girl in 1980.

Her mother brought her to Martin Army Community Hospital after she had stopped breathing during a "training" session.

Doctors became suspicious when they noticed bruises on the child's body and called for an autopsy to be performed. They discovered the cause of death was a rupture of a major artery in the heart.

Since this type of injury was unusual, the mother was questioned as to what happened to the child. She claimed she had kicked the child in an effort to make her stop crying. The doctors determined that the force necessary to create such an injury was the same as being hit by an autombile travelling at 40 mph.

The autopsy also discovered major contusions to the crown of the head with evidence of bleeding under the skull. This injury was an old one; it had already begun to heal.

Then the story got worse.

There was evidence the child had suffered a fractured collar bone earlier. This fracture had been left untreated and was more healed than the skull injury. Further study found three ribs that had been broken and healed, a bruised liver and a damaged kidney.

The reason the mother gave for inflicting that much damage to the child was, "She cried a lot!"

The mother was tried in court for child cruelty. She was convicted of this charge and sentenced to three years in prison.

The dead child, according to Rick King, principal case worker, Department of Human Resources, showed a long history of being abused. More importantly, the damage to the child, showed a parent "out of control."

King says various forms of child abuse claim the lives of more than 2,000 children yearly. Part of the problem, he said, is the "don't want to get involved" attitude of neighbors, friends and relatives, that allows this form of behavior to continue. In the case of the little girl mentioned above, he says, "The neighbors knew that the child was in danger but didn't want to report it."

King defines child abuse as "acts of commission or omission that cause physical harm by a parent or caretaker." These acts may include neglect, exploitation, or sexual abuse. He the liaison between the Georgia Department of Human Resources and Fort Benning. His job grew out of a recognized need for better coordination between Fort Benning and the state. He claims that, formerly, child abusers living on post could move off post and escape attention. Now the Child Advocacy Program on post can follow up on abusers even if they change duty stations.

The advocacy program, according to Mary W. Behrend, program coordinator, is "not an adversary type program," but is there to help the child and the parents.

The program accomplishes its mission by providing counselling and seminars to assist the parents in "gaining control" of their home lives.

Control is the key word since there is a distinct difference between discipline and abuse. "Discipline," explained Ms Behrend, "is when there is a positive result of the action.

"Abuse is defined as the deliberate, non-accidental injury of the child by

Marshal's viewpoint

You can help stamp out child abuse at Fort Benning

By Curtis D. Earp
Post Provost Marshal

The effects of child abuse are devastating. Each year, one million American children suffer from child abuse. More than 2,000 of these children die; for many of those who live, the hurts inflicted on them as children influence their entire lives and ours.

Histories of childhood abuse and neglect are commonly reported by many adult criminals, juvenile delinquents, teenage drug addicts, and prostitutes. This means that your community, perhaps even your family, may fall victim to violence and crime perpetrated by those who were once victims themselves — victims of physical abuse or neglect, of sexual abuse or emotional maltreatment.

The financial cost society bears to deal with the results are enormous. The cost in human suffering and wasted individual potential is unmeasurable.

Countless adults are trapped by their history into acts of social violence. Child abuse comes down to one child who is physically injured: one child who is deprived of what he or she needs to thrive; one child who is exploited for the sexual gratification of an adult; one child who is made to feel unloved, small, worthless and no good. These ugly facts make up the elements of the definition.

The National Committee for Prevention of Child Abuse defines child abuse as an injury or a pattern of injuries to a child that is non-accidental. Child abuse includes non-accidental physical injury, physical neglect, sexual abuse and emotional abuse.

You can do a lot to help those you care about cope with the problems that lead to child abuse. There are many ways to assist families — be they friends, neighbors, or relatives who are having child abuse related difficulties.

Sometimes just being a friend, helping out with household chores, taking care of the children for a while, being around to listen to a person to talk about his or her problems can help some troubled parents cope with the isolation and stresses that trigger abuse. Helping a parent find help elsewhere, at a local counseling center or through a Parent Education Program, can be a great assistance in prevention of child abuse.

If you suspect child abuse in your neighborhood, please contact the military police at 545-5222 or the Army Community Service at 545-1233.

NCODP purpose sometimes forgotten

By Roy Owens
Post Command Sergeant Major

Many people in the Army talk about the Noncommissioned Officer Development Program (NCODP), but too few of them really understand what the program is intended to do.

Depending on who you talk to, an NCODP should do as little as to get a unit's NCOs together once a month for identity's sake, or as much as to plan every minute of training these NCOs need on any given subject.

Unfortunately, many commanders fall into this latter category — they believe their NCODPs should be designed to satisfy all of their NCO training needs. And too often they single out the technical skills in which their NCOs appear to be weak. These might include such subjects as MOPP levels, land navigation or current events.

But the fact that some NCOs have deficiencies in certain basic technical skills does not necessarily mean the NCODP is at fault. Neither does it mean the NCODP should — or even can — be used to try to correct those deficiencies. Unit commanders, as they always have, must simply provide time on their training schedules for such individual training, just as they do for collective training.

But if the NCODP is not designed to substitute for individual or collective training, what is it designed to do?

It is supposed to be used to improve a unit's efforts in teaching and maintaining those skills. It is also intended to support our service schools in their efforts to restore and develop the basic professional qualities historically and routinely found in the Army's noncommissioned officers — qualities that enable them to BE, KNOW, and DO.

To put it simply, NCOs must have a good knowledge of basic leadership qualities and the necessary skills, devotion and courage to apply them.

Many professional and training problems we have with our noncommissioned officers will disappear if we keep the main objective of our NCODPs focused on those leadership principles.

In any NCODP, the subjects selected for discussion and training need to serve primarily as ways to promote NCOs' understanding of how to BE, KNOW, and DO. But, if all we do is aimed only at making our NCOs technically competent through task training, we will never get to the program's main objective of training — to make our NCOs more effective and professional. Besides, the skill tasks in which any NCO must be proficient are too numerous for him to learn during the relatively short time that is provided by most NCO development programs.

If we are to fulfill the intent of the NCODP, then, we must first understand its main objective, which is to help our NCOs understand their roles as leaders. We must understand our responsibilities to our soldiers, our leaders, our units, the Army, and the noncommissioned officer corps.

In addition, we must understand our personal responsibilities for self-development and the capability and importance of using the NCO support channel.

Finally, and most importantly, we must understand the need to share our experience and know-how with each other.

36th Engineers help build small town with SPIRIT

By Bill Reynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Part of the 36th Engineer Group caught SPIRIT, built a small town and saved Fort Benning almost $1 million recently.

The U.S. Army Infantry School needed a town where Fort Benning's soldiers could practice the tactics of military operations on urban terrain.

Original estimates for the construction ranged from a low of just over 1 to nearly $2 million. These figures, according to Maj. Edward M. Harris, executive officer, 43rd Engineer Battalion, 36th Engineer Group, "were too high."

"When the Infantry School wanted the MOUT project constructed," commented Harris, "they took some bids from construction companies. Frankly, they could not afford the minimum bids." The Infantry Center, according to Harris, decided "it could afford the 43rd's price."

Engineers in the battalion gained more from the project than was spent, said Harris. He claims you can see how the skills of the battalion's soldiers were sharpened by looking at the finished buildings.

"The Army made 'money' on the deal because it provided training on skills that they needed." explained Harris. He claims that the quality of the bricklaying improved as the project went along.

The job was completed by including the construction project into the battalion's training plan.

The 43rd Engineer Battalion proved that a construction project could be completed under budget and on time by building the mock village near Dekkar Airstrip for $470,000.

the parent. That's the bottom line!"

Abuse can be treated

The cure for child abuse is more than the after-the-fact treatment of the injuries the children sustain. The treatment is education, according to Ms Behrend. She says that 90 percent of the people who abuse their children "want help and can be educated." She says this is the main reason why she and others in her profession must remain "objective" when dealing with child abuse cases. Her main interest is to make the child safe and to help the parents learn a different manner of dealing with their children without abusing them.

King states the military has advantages in the reporting of child abuse cases. Because of the closeness in the housing areas, people are more likely to notice when a child is being abused.

The closeness soldiers live and work under also has disadvantages, said King. He claims in many cases people are afraid to speak up because no one wants to believe their neighbor or fellow worker is abusing their children.

DoD has an active program to combat child abuse, requiring that each new member of a unit receive a briefing on their responsibility to report cases of suspected abuse. King reassures the public that reporting a suspected case does not make the person liable for any type of legal action. "All reports are kept confidential," said King, "with the rare exception of those cases that result in legal action.

"If a case is determined not to be child abuse; the witness cannot be sued. A statement made in 'good faith' will not result in a legal action."

Increased reporting in the military has been credited with the discovery of more cases of abuse on Fort Benning. Last year, according to Ms Behrend, there were 139 cases of suspected abuse on post. Of the 139 cases, more than 77 percent were confirmed. Ms Behrends feels the high accuracy rate of the reports is due to the military's increased awareness of the problem.

Symptoms of abuse

Some of the things to look for when a child abuse case is suspected are:

Repeated injuries: bruises, welts and burns on the child.

Passive, withdrawn behavior: children will display an almost "whipped dog" behavior instead of a friendly out-going personality.

Neglected appearance: poorly-nourished appearance, children that are inadequately clothed or wandering around the neighborhood at all hours.

These signs and others are the danger signals that say something is wrong in the home.

Whenever someone suspects a case of child abuse is happening, he or she is urged to report his or her suspicions to any one of several agencies. The Department of Family and Children Services in Columbus is one location that these cases can be reported. If the case is happening on post, either the Pediatric Clinic at MACH or the Child Advocacy Program in the Welcome Center would be the place to go. In any case, accurate reporting is the first step toward making the child safe and finding help for the parents according to King.

Increased policy awareness helps VA aid veteran's small businesses

The Veterans Administration wants to increase participation by small businesses owned by Vietnam era veterans and disabled veterans in VA competitive procurements.

VA administrator Harry N. Walters has directed VA procurement offices to actively seek out capable small business owned and operated by these veterans to increase their awareness about VA competitive contract opportunities.

While federal agencies are prohibited from setting aside contracts for exclusive award to small business other than those identified by Congress in the Small Business Act as socially and economically disadvantaged, agencies can take actions to increase the awareness among veteran-owned businesses with respect to competitive contracting opportunities.

The VA chief has ordered all VA facilities having procurement requirements to solicit these firms and assist them in participating in VA business opportunities.

In such areas as building construction, maintenance, supply, equipment repair and other continuing activities throughout VA's nationwide medical system, VA procurement officers are constantly looking for contractors.

Vietnam era and disabled veterans who own their own business are urged to contact the chief of supply at any of VA's 172 hospitals nationwide for additional information, or write to: Assistant Deputy Administrator for Procurement and Supply, Veterans Administration, Washington, D.C. 20402. (VA)

Go over applications; make your vote count

WASHINGTON — State election officials have been contacting the Federal Voting Assistance Program office regarding a persistent problem — incomplete or incorrect information on the federal postcard application used to apply for registration or to request an absentee ballot.

Since advance registration is required in many states, the time available to receive, execute and return the ballot becomes crucial. Any delay could mean a person's vote would not be accepted.

Some of the problems cited by election officials which caused the rejection of the FPCA's where they occurred were in items 2, 7 and 10.

Item 2 on the FPCA must show a complete residence address in the community in which application to vote is being done. This should not be confused with your current military or overseas address. A post office box is not acceptable. If the applicant must use a rural route number, there must be a good description of its location. Election officials use this address to place the voter in the proper precinct. In some cases it determines which ballot you will receive.

Item 7 must show the election for which the voter is making application. Some states require a separate application for registration and a separate request for ballot each election. Other states send ballots for every election to be held in the election year, with only one FPCA request.

Failure to make the correct circle(s) in item 7 may result in the applicant not receiving a ballot. This is particularly true if the person is attempting to vote in a primary election.

In item 10, applicants must place an X or check mark in the box that describes their status. In most states, checking any box 10(A) through (F) will entitle the applicant to a full ballot. All citizens not employed by the federal government, who are overseas by virtue of their employment and are requesting a full ballot, should check box 10(C). In 10(G), "Other U.S. citizens" means all other U.S. citizens not covered by any other category who are outside the States in a private capacity and who intend to return to their state of last residence may be uncertain.

Voters should ask a voting assistance officer or counselor to check their application for accuracy. Every military unit or U.S. Embassy or Consulate has a voting assistance counselor.

If information being sought is not available at the local level, write to the Director, Federal Voting Assistance Program, Office of the Secretary of Defense, Pentagon, Washington, D.C. 20301, or call Autovon 224-4928/4960 or commercial (202) 694-4928/4960. (ARNEWS)

Army research center works for soldier's comfort, safety

What do freeze-dried coffee and bulletproof vests have in common? They're both products of the same organization — The U.S. Army Natick Research and Development Center of Natick, Mass.

The center consists of four laboratories — the Aero-Mechanical Engineering Laboratory, the Individual Protection Laboratory, the Food Engineering Laboratory, and the Science and Advance Technology Laboratory.

No matter who you are, chances are you have used a product developed or improved by the labs at Natick.

Its main mission is to provide for the maximum survivability of military men and women. In doing this, the center is faced with the challenge of how to keep food fresh in the field and still provide nutritionally balanced meals.

Among the products developed in the kitchens of Natick's Food Engineering Laboratory are several packaged food containers:

- Tray Packs — high quality, multiportion institutional food, served hot, cafeteria style and packaged in half steam table sized containers;
- Meal, Ready to Eat — like the tray pack, but packaged for individual portions and lightweight, easy to open and provides one-third of the daily nutrient allowance;
- Food Packet, Assault — unlike the other two packs, this one doesn't have to be served hot and is lightweight, contains very high energy foods, and is a combat food packet designed for use during assault and reconnaissance missions.

Because troops cannot survive on food alone, the researchers at the Natick Individual Protection Lab also work on clothing and shelter. They are credited with the development of camouflage uniforms and helmets, the water-repellent fabric Gore-tex (used in clothing, tents and sleeping bags), and the improvement of the fabric Kevlar (now being used in bulletproof apparel and Kevlar lightweight, contoured helmets). They also develop and test cold weather clothing, equipment and boots.

Natick labs can simulate various environments, including arctic conditions. The "Mickey Mouse" boot, so dubbed because its layers of insulation cause it to resemble the cartoon character's boots, has been tested for arctic temperatures to -60 degrees.

Natick has also designed combat boots which when worn through the jungle, leave an imprint of a human or ape foot. Natick not only tests boots of its own design, but boots and sporting goods items of other well-known manufacturers.

The Aero-Mechanical Engineering Laboratory at Natick develops items that can be airdropped to those in the field. Some of the items they have developed are heaters, hot water units, bath units, field clothing and shoe repair shops, field laundry units, air supported and frame supported tents, and personnel and cargo parachutes and harnesses.

The Science and Advanced Technology Laboratory supports the other labs by doing the research and providing scientific and technical data that is used by the food engineering people, "such as methods to tenderize beef before it is slaughtered," says Harvey Keene, Natick labs public affairs officer. "Also they do a lot of taste tests," he added.

From "C" rations to tray packs and ready-to-eat meals, bulletproof vests and waterproof tents, the U.S. Army Natick Research and Development Center continues to work for the comfort and safety of men and women in uniform. (AFPS)

CHAMPUS requirements set for emergency treatments

Patients who reside within the health care zone of a military hospital do not need a statement of nonavailability if they are admitted for an emergency condition. However, they should be aware that emergency admissions are determined by the attending physician and are subject to review and verification by the CHAMPUS fiscal intermediary.

Each case will be reviewed by the medical review staff to determine whether the case meets the definition of medical emergency if the admission diagnosis is not one of the following:

Heart attack
Convulsion
Cerebral vascular accidents
Kidney stones
Poisoning (Including drug overdose)
Traumatic injuries (e.g.; gunshot wound, fractures, dislocations, burns, lacerations, contusions, sprains or strains, etc.)
Severe allergic reactions
Maternity (if baby weighs 5 pounds or less)
Self-inflicted injuries
Tetanus Toxoid when in connection with emergency services related to abrasions, lacerations or puncture wounds.

If your diagnosis is not one of the above, a copy of your discharge summary and emergency room sheet should accompany the physicians emergency statement. The emergency statement should state why you had to be admitted immediately and why the condition was life threatening.

Tax form problems often predictable

Each year, there are somewhat predictable trouble spots on federal income tax forms, according to the Internal Revenue Service; areas where large numbers of taxpayers make incorrect entries and thereby slow the processing of their tax forms.

These trouble spots fall into two broad categories: items that recur each year but require a certain amount of care and attention to detail, such as being careful to select the correct figure from the tax tables, and changes to the form resulting from changes in tax laws one year to the next, such as the addition of a new line to a form or movement of an existing line to a new position on the form.

Not surprisingly, the largest percentage of errors are made on Form 1040, the so-called long form. To assist filers of this form, IRS has compiled the following list of problem areas to double-check:

- Medical deductions. Actually this item is not entered on Form 1040, but on a required schedule. Probably because Schedule A was redesigned last year, this item led the list of last year's most common errors. Due to changes to the rules on medical deductions, IRS expects problems again this year. Be sure to check the new limitation on medical expenses.
- Figures from tax table. Because of the number of pages and figures involved, this item is always high on the list of most common errors. Double-check the figure from the tax table for your filing status and enter on line 38. Check the box for tax table.
- Unemployment compensation. Last year, perhaps due to the growth of the number of unemployed taxpayers and changes in the tax law, this item moved into the list of most common errors. Double check your figures on the worksheet on page 11 of the tax instruction booklet and make appropriate entries on lines 20a and 20b.
- Child care credit. Last year there was a trade-off: computations for this tax credit became more complicated, but many taxpayers were entitled to a larger credit. Read your instructions carefully and double-check your computations on Form 2441, Child and Disabled Dependent Care Credit. Enter figure on line 45 and attach Form 2441.
- Balance due/refund. This important item usually makes the list of most common errors. If your total tax owed (line 56) is larger than your total tax payments made (line 64), enter the difference on line 68, Amount You Owe. Follow the instructions for remitting payment. If the reverse is true, enter the difference on line 65, Overpaid. Enter on line 66, Refund, the portion on the line 65 overpayment that you want refunded to you.
- Earned Income Credit (EIC) not claimed. If you are a working parent and have living with you at least one child, and if your adjusted gross income (line 32) is less than $10,000, you probably qualify. See page 16 of the instructions.
- EIC error or not qualified. In order to qualify, you must have a dependent child living with you and you must have worked during the year, plus other limitations. Follow the instructions carefully and enter on line 59.
- Dividends. You must complete and attach Schedule B if you have $400 or more in dividend income. You enter your total dividends on line 9a: your exclusion ($100 for individual filers, $200 for married filing jointly) on line 9b; and enter the difference (subtract line 9b and 9a) on line 9c.
- Income computation. This is a logical outgrowth of item 8, since the taxpayers who miscompute their dividend income will end up with an error on line 22, total income. Double-check these figures.
- Income averaging. Due to the number of tax years covered on the form, Schedule G, Income Averaging, is one of the most complicated and intimidating forms for individual filers. You must have copies of your returns for the preceding four years in order to accurately complete this form. Read and follow instructions carefully and double-check all figures. (AFPS)

Can't meet deadline — file for extension

April 16 is the deadline for filing federal income tax returns. Just about everybody knows that. But what if you can't meet that deadline?

If you are not able to file your 1983 Form 1040 or 1040A on time, you can get an automatic four-month extension for filing, but you must pay the amount of tax you owe by April 16 anyway. (This extension is not available to those who use Form 1040EZ and those who want the IRS to figure their tax.)

The four-month extension is yours for the asking. Nothing has to be justified and you don't have to give a reason. The extension, using Form 4868 (Application for Automatic Extension of Time to File U.S. Individual Income Tax Return), must be filed by April 16.

This only allows you more time to complete your return. It doesn't give you more time to pay any taxes you may owe.

Taxpayers should "rough out" their deductions and income. Internal Revenue officials say it is in your best interest to come as close as possible to the actual tax owed. Once you have made a tentative estimate of the year's taxes, submit any balance due with the extension form to avoid paying interest later on. Taxpayers who substantially underestimate their tax liabilities will be penalized.

If you don't include the tax owed, your request for extension will be denied. If your estimate of the tax due is incorrect and you owe more money to the IRS when you actually file your return, expect to be charged interest from April 16 on the unpaid balance.

In addition to the automatic four-month extension to Aug. 15, another extension is possible. But only if you have a very good reason. And expect that reason to be reviewed by the IRS and accepted or rejected on a case-by-case basis.

This additional extension takes a Form 2688 (Application for Extension of Time to File U.S. Individual Income Tax Return), and is filed in duplicate on or before Aug. 15. The IRS will send one of the Form 2688s back to you telling you if your extension has been granted. Interest on any unpaid balance is charged from April 16 until the date it is paid.

If your return is completed but you don't have the money to pay your tax, the IRS recommends that you not request an extension. Send as much of the money as you can and they will bill you for the remaining tax due.

All requests for extensions are filed where you normally file your return. (AFPS)

Soldier sets sights on OCS

Luretta Gill wants to be a "decision maker."

That's the reason the administrative specialist gives for wanting to attend Officer's Candidate School.

While she plans on making the military her career, she claims the Army was not her first choice. "I was going to college at Jacksonville State University in Alabama, and I wasn't really serious about school," said the 23-year-old specialist four. "I realized I was going (to college) because all my friends were going there." After two years at Jacksonville, she quit school and later joined the Army.

She got her first taste of the military when she worked as a temporary hire at Fort McClellan, Ala. That prompted her to look into the opportunities in the Army when she went looking for employment.

When she put on the Army green at the beginning of 1981, she was assigned to Fort Dix, N.J., for basic training. After basic, she was sent to Fort Jackson, S.C., to train as an administrative specialist. Even though the Fort Jackson course is self-paced, she remained there for nine months serving as a drillperson. "I assisted the drill sergeants," Gill said. She describes her job as marching "hard-charging" males back and forth to class.

She left Fort Jackson and came to Benning where she was assigned to the Army Training Center. Gill is now serving as the secretary to the reception station's personal affairs branch.

Gill has now decided she is ready for college and is attending school at night. She claims what time she has, when she isn't working or going to school, she spends washing and waxing her new car.

VA increases home loan interest rate

The Veterans Administration increased its home loan interest rate from 12½ percent to 13 percent, effective March 21, 1984, Administrator of Veterans Affairs Harry N. Walters announced.

The last change in the interest rate occurred on Nov. 1, 1983, when it was reduced to 12½ percent.

Walters said the new rate was made necessary by current mortgage market conditions. The initiative is the first taken by the VA since the law was changed last year eliminating the authority of the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development to set the maximum interest rate for most Federal Housing Administration loans.

The VA action also increased by one-half percent to 13¼ percent for graduated payment mortgages, 15 percent for manufactured housing loans and 14½ percent for manufactured housing lots, combination manufactured home and lot loans, and home improvement loans.

The rate change does not affect existing loans whose interest rate remains the same for the life of the agreement.

VA home loans can be used to purchase, construct, alter, improve, repair or refinance a home. This includes the purchase of condominiums and mobile homes, with or without a [illegible] of VA.

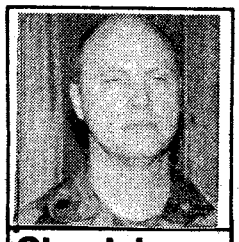
Spiritual

Difficult pathways convince us to walk in faith



Chaplain James Rogers

A strong and viable spiritual life will have a decidedly peace-giving effect on our lives. And yet, keeping faith can have some rather dire consequences as well. This is especially true when we decide to confront what we see in our world with a more lofty view of what ought to be.

The record of Christian believers is filled with the deeds of martyrs whose grace did not come cheap and who willingly carried a cross in our Lord's service.

Polycarp, Bishop of Smyrna, is a case in point. His life-long habit of going the second mile in service to his fellow man was tragically ended by lions in a Roman stadium. His death was the result of his refusal to renounce his faith in God. As a footnote to his tragic death, however, legend has it that his dramatic confession of faith as he faced death brought about an end to the barbaric practice of sacrificing Christians to lions.

As we think about the cost of Christian discipleship this Lenten season, we may do so while hoping that the price we pay for such spiritual adventure will not be more than we feel we can afford. We may find ourselves somewhat like the old Canadian farmer who observed "Mountains are all right, but they sure do block the view." Implicit in his comment is an outlook that somehow mountains do not really belong in nature's scheme of things.

When we begin to think seriously about upgrading our worship and service to God and our fellow human beings, we may wonder whether such spiritual discipline and hardship isn't somewhat abnormal. We may even conclude that living and walking the high road with and for God is just another way of asking for trouble. Somewhat like the old farmer, we may conclude that these spiritual mountains not only block our view, they may even interfere with successful living as defined by the standards of those around us.

Could it be that God prefers to see us in such a dire state of uncertainty. Not because he wants to see us struggle, but because these difficult pathways convince us to walk in faith rather than by sight. These spiritual exercises force us to grow into the people we ought to be and our efforts cause this suffering world around us to be what it should be.

Easter Sunday services

There will be a Protestant Easter Sunday service held on Sand Hill from 8 to 9:15 a.m. on April 22. Service leaders will be 1st ITB chaplains and the preacher will be Chaplain (Capt.) Rick Needham from 5th Battalion. The location is 500 meters south of the Sand Hill NCO Club and next to the bayonet assault course. In case of bad weather, it will be moved to Sand Hill's theater #3.

There will be a Catholic Easter Sunday service at the same place and date, but it will be held from 10-11:15 a.m. Chaplain (Maj.) James K. Bluett will head this service.

Catholic educator visits

The Rev. James J. DiGiacomo, S.J., well-known teacher, writer and lecturer, will be here April 14 and 15. On Saturday from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m., Father DiGiacomo will conduct a retreat day for Benning youth (junior and senior high) at Blessed Trinity Shrine Retreat. On Sunday, he will conduct a workshop for all parents, particularly parents of teenagers. The workshop, to be held in the Infantry Center Chapel Annex from 1-3 p.m., will focus on Father DiGiacomo's recent book, "Understanding Teenagers."

He teaches theology at Regis High School in New York City and is assistant adjunct professor of religion and religious education at Fordham University.

New bus route added

A new bus route from Custer Terrace to the Main Post Protestant Sunday School in building 2606 on Davis Road will begin next Sunday. The bus will leave Terry Drive at 8:40 a.m. and make the following stops: Arrowhead Road, Butts Street, upper Craig Drive, Kessler Drive, and lower Craig Drive. The bus will leave building 2606 following Sunday School (10:35) for the return trip to Custer Terrace.

For more information, call Bill Putnam at 545-5301 or 544-4915.

Chaplain's workshop helps combat stress

By JoAnne Mercer
Chapel Publicist

Recently, Fort Benning chaplains participated in a workshop on combat stress and the kind of ministry needed within the combat situation of the future.

Chaplain Emory Cowan, director of Clinical Pastoral Education, led the workshop that emphasized past combat experiences may become meaningless in the mass casualty combat scenario of the future that will possibly be a highly lethal, mobile battlefield.

Chaplain Cowan stressed, "Most of us have never been faced with large numbers of dying people. We need to know what we're about; we need to have a sense of our own ministry. We need to come to grips with our own finitude, know what our own stress levels are, and prepare ourselves through some kind of realistic training."

The group discussed the history of combat stress reaction, the meaning of stress, and what happens to people who survive disasters. Chaplain Cowan pointed out in day-to-day life, we often "have the illusion that life is going to get bigger and better, but in combat that illusion is shattered. A person's finitude is confronted — you are aware that life is very transient. You experience your boundaries and the possibility of your not being."

Various labels have been applied to combat stress. In World War I, it was "shell shock"; then in World War II it was combat exhaustion and battle fatigue. The Vietnam War brought to light new problems known as post traumatic stress disorders. Problems became "locked up" in the person and often erupted in hostility much later. Soldiers complained they "needed someone to listen to them and not interrupt." One chaplain who had served in combat said other people are "not able to hear you falling apart."

Stress can produce a tremendous psychological and physiological impact on the human body. Cowan gave an example of primitive man under stress from the threat of a tiger. In that situation, he had two options — "fight" or "flight." Today, modern man often does not have either option, and so tension builds. Yet, the body cannot take constant stress; release must occur. If not, the body becomes "burned-out."

Cowan warned that in the battlefield of the future, stress will be greatly magnified because of: "1) continuous operation — there will be no rest areas; 2) complexity of equipment; 3) 'no-fault' operations; 4) isolation that includes the continuous fear of death or injury and severe sleep deprivation; 5) decision making that may affect the lives of thousands of people; and 6) ill-defined, fluid combat areas."

In order for a chaplain to be prepared for ministry in such a situation, he/she must undergo training for "automatic behavior" so as not to become non-functional, confused and helpless. Training must provide a form of "emotional innoculation."

Cowan challenged the group with, "Can you make hard decisions in the midst of combat?" The chaplains divided into groups of four and discussed a hypothetical situation in which their ministry would involve life or death decisions. They would then have to answer the question, "Who needs me the most?" They expressed the need for training that would help prevent them from "feeling helpless or falling apart." They said chaplains should have "availability and visibility" and the ability to "hang in there with the troops."

Chaplain Cowan emphasized that chaplains must have adequate training in combat stress so in the war of the future, he/she will provide a ministry in which "decisions will be based on operative theology and automatic behavior that is able to withstand the stress."

Half-hour classes will be held on Tuesdays and Thursdays at noon in building 4's fitness center in W-47. The fee for the half-hour classes is $10 monthly.

The initial classes on Monday and Tuesday will be free of charge.

Volunteer center news

The Volunteer Resource Center (VRC) is still recruiting for the Red Cross Escort Service at the hospital. This service will consist of assisting patients from their room to the laboratory, x-ray, therapy, etc.

Army Community Service is still in need of receptionists. Don't you have four hours a week to help them? Also the exceptional family member program can use some help for their summer activities.

Fort Benning can use your talents even if you only have a short time here. No experience is needed for any of their positions but you can gain a lot of experience and have it documented too.

All activities using volunteers should contact the VRC at 301 McIver St. or call 545-5602/5176, to have a folder made up for their volunteers. These folders will be given to the person upon their departure and will contain their records of hours and services performed, letters of commendation, and certificates of appreciation. It is up to you to see that your workers recieve recognition for their efforts.

Soldiers gain experience, confidence during FTX

By Connie McReynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

One hundred and sixty trainees of Charlie Company, 9th Battalion, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade, learned something new this week; whether or not they could put what they've been taught so far to use.

Barry M. Wright, a PFC from Rochester, N.Y., said, "The most important thing I've learned is to pay attention and learn from the experience of the drill sergeant." Wright was one of the aggressors.

The company, in its 10th week of the cycle, went to Ninninger Range for a field training exercise that required the new soldiers to put into practice some 37 individual and team tasks.

The company consists of three COHORT platoons and one OSUT platoon. The COHORT platoons will be going to Company A, 3rd Battalion, 32nd Infantry, 7th Infantry Division, Fort Ord, Calif. "My goal is for each soldier to absorb as much of the great mass of information he's exposed to as possible. As COHORT troops, they won't have as much experience from seasoned troops to rely on when they get to Fort Ord," SFC Michael Lewis, company senior drill said.

"Most of those in leadership positions during this FTX will be the same ones we recommend to their 7th Division cadre for leadership positions."

"Each platoon has as its leader an executive officer from one of the companies in the battalion," explained Commander Capt. Charles E. Davis. He said using the executive officers as platoon leaders for the company FTX is new and, according to the lieutenants, it's a good idea.

"It's tough to teach and to participate, but it's more what we're trained to do. This is a more favorable situation for the trainees to learn their skills and how they all fit together," 2nd Lt. Hugh Rountree, A Company executive officer, said.

First Lt. Lars E. Lavine, B Company executive officer said, "I like the new FTX because it has given me the opportunity to maneuver troops. On the first day, my platoon conducted a two-and-a-half kilometer movement to contact."

"The FTX concept is a good one. The new soldier puts his individual and squad level training together to operate at platoon level. The lieutenants get the chance to plan and execute in tactical situations and they're doing well," added Davis.

Most of the first day and night was spent in classes, moving tactically, reconnaissance patrols and digging defensive positions.

Although the men grumbled about the 'heavy packs' on their backs and the foxhole digging, most said they enjoyed the exercise.

"I'll know whether or not I have enjoyed this after I dig this foxhole," Pvt. Daniel Almodobar, first squad, first platoon, commented. He added that this was the first time they've been out for an exercise and so far it hadn't been too bad.

"The most training value comes from involving the initial entry training (IET) soldiers in the planning," SSgt. Oliver A. Norris, second platoon drill sergeant, explained. And that is exactly what happened during the FTX.

The exercise gave the company 36 hours of training time but as Drill Sergeant SFC Raymond P. Rodriguez said, "The training is good, but I wish we had more time."

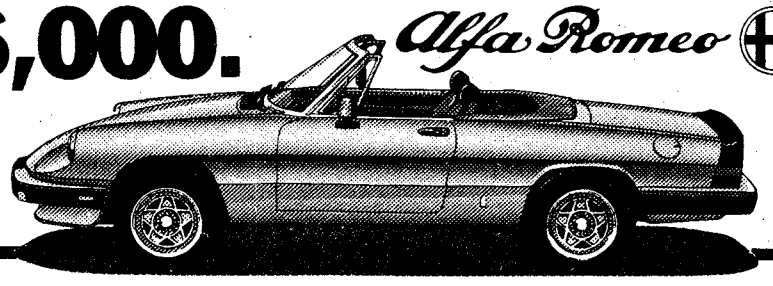
Alfa Romeos from University MotorCars for less than $16,000.

Alfa Romeo



Oooooooohhhhhhhh!

Its classic body shape and genuine Italian leather seats proclaim to the world that it is a true sportscar. The extras like matte dark-gray exterior trim, microprocessor-controlled digital ignition system, 30-second delay automatic interior lighting, new under-floor insulation and more say it's a true Alfa. Also, because Alfa's been thoroughly re-engineered in the last few years, you and your Alfa stay on the road, not in the shop. Right now at University MotorCars, we have an unusually good selection of Alfa GTV-6's and Spider Veloces in all the standard Alfa Colors. Prices are comparable with many American sedans and sports cars of far less prominence. This spring is an excellent time to drive an Alfa Romeo from University MotorCars. And to discover how getting there can be all the fun.

Light Infantry

I don't know but I've been told,
Infantry blue is good as gold.

Work all day, play all night,
Infantry blue is fit to fight.
Dodging bullets and chewing nails,
Infantry, Infantry tough as hell.

Ruck sacks — butt pack walkin across the land.
Infantry grunts gonna make a stand.
Infantry blue is the best in the land.

Mechanized

M113 cruising down the track,
Mechanized soldier with a ruck on his back.
Open up the hatch and close the door,
Push that pedal to the floor.

Fifty cal. mounted on the top,
Going to "Lebanon" nonstop.
Chasing those commies night and day,
Mechanized . . . is here to stay.

Drop that ramp and out he go,
Hear that sixty gunner roar.
Mechanized is rolling death.

On the high land or on the low land,
What do you see!
Mechanized death, that's you and me.
Pivot to the right and pivot to the left,
That's the dance of "The Mechanized Death."

Have You Read Any Good Sidewalls Lately?
Maybe you didn't realize it, but there's a lot of good information on the sidewall of your tires.
The sidewall tells you the maximum inflation pressure recommended. The number of body plies used. The kind of cord. And more.
But most important, it tells you the brand name. That's especially critical, since all tires look so much alike—on the outside.
Next time you read a sidewall, look for the name Goodyear. It's a brand name you can trust for sure.

New policy reduces cheapening effect of 'atta-boy' letters

Washington — Time was when just about any "letter of appreciation" or similar commendation could easily find its way into the soldier's official military personnel file. But now due to a recent policy change, that practice is no longer simple.

To reduce the cheapening effect of such wholesale OMPF filing of "atta-boy" letters and messages, the Army's military personnel managers have instituted some restrictions. From now on, a candidate letter for the file must:

- Bear the signature of a person outside the recipient's published rating scheme;
- Be directly addressed to the soldier or contain references to the soldier;
- Contain a statement authorizing the correspondence to be filed among other OMPF papers.

As a further restriction, only the basic correspondence (meaning no indorsements) may be placed in the file.

Officials say the new policy applies to the U.S. Army Military Personnel Center (for officers and warrant officers) or to Fort Benjamin Harrison (for enlisted soldiers), and to those not yet filed, regardless of the date of origin. (ARNEWS)

Take extra time choosing before picking garage

Car repairs are near the top of the consumer's complaints list.

A little extra time taken to find a reputable garage will pay off in the long run when your wheels need repairs.

Here are some things to look for before you sign the work order:

- Does the garage have certified mechanics? Although most states do not require mechanics to be licensed, some states, auto manufacturers, oil companies, and other industry-related groups do test mechanics' proficiency and skill and will certify competency.
- Is the shop clean? A quick check to see if the work place looks as though the mechanics working there take pride in their work is important.
- Does the firm guarantee its work? Reputable garages do.
- Will they give you a written estimate? Get it in writing — that's the first thing. Note on the repair order that you sign that you want to be called if any additional work is necessary. When you pay, get a bill itemizing the work done and the parts used.

After the work is done, if you are not satisfied, don't just gripe to your friends. Get some wheels in action.

- Were you satisfied? If you're not satisfied with the work, complain immediately to the shop. If you can't agree, contact your state or local consumer affairs office for their help.
- Did you try Auto-CAP? If your complaint involves an automobile dealer, get in touch with the nearest Automobile Consumer Action Panel (Auto-CAP). These are boards set up around the country to help resolve consumer complaints. They should be brought into the picture when your attempts to solve it with the dealer have failed. After receiving your complaint, an AutoCAP will ask the dealer to re-investigate the problem. If you still are not satisfied, your case will be referred to an action panel which includes consumers ad business representatives. Although dealers are not legally required to follow the panel's recommendations, they usually do.

To find out if there is an AutoCAP in your area, contact the National Automobile Dealers Association (NADA), 8400 West Park Drive, McLean, Va., 22101. Their phone number is (703) 821-7070.

Or, contact your local Chamber of Commerce or Better Business Bureau for the name of the local or state automobile dealers association that sponsors AutoCAPs.

If you're satisfied with the work when it is done, or if you go the complaint route and it is resolved in your favor, drop the dealer or garage a line to thank them. Everyone likes to hear good words. (AFPS)

Ivan

He isn't 10 feet tall, but he's no pushover either

The shrill sound of the junior sergeant's whistle pierces the early morning quiet, rousing 18-year-old Private Ivan Grechko out of a deep sleep. It's exactly 6:50 as the sergeant marches through the crowded barracks shouting obscenities. Ivan scrambles out of his sack and into his uniform. It's not wise to be late for early morning muster.

So begins a day in the life of a Soviet army conscript serving a two-year hitch and one of about five million people under arms in the Soviet Union.

In 1967, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics (USSR) passed the Law of Universal Military Service. It requires all Soviet men to take pre-induction military training and to serve in the armed forces. The Soviet military is not exactly a champion of women's liberation; Soviet generals have been quoted in the press saying women are not needed in the military. That may explain why there are only about 10,000 of them serving on active duty, mostly in clerical and health fields.

Even with the 1967 law, only 80 percent of Soviet men ever serve in their armed forces. Those who don't serve have an educational exemption, family hardship or "know someone."

But just what is a Soviet military conscript really like? Chances are he is a lot more militarized than his American counterpart. And, in some ways, a lot more disciplined. After all, he's been programmed for a long time.

Soviet military patriotic education begins early — at 6 or 7 years of age. Communist party organizations such as the Young Pioneers and Komsomol (Young Communist League) conduct training and summer exercises with a strong emphasis on developing military skills.

But the primary way pre-induction training requirements are met is through 140 hours of mandatory training for 16- to 18-year-olds. This includes basic military skills, such as drill and marksmanship, which takes place over a two-year period, usually in school. School dropouts take their training where they work. Wherever they get it, this training could be likened to what you went through in basic or boot camp, but the Soviets use the term "basic training" to cover the early phases of training when a person reports to his first operational unit.

At 17, the Soviet man reports to his local draft office. He is given a physical examination and later appears before a board that determines what military training he has had, what his political activity has been and what skills he possesses. Still later, another board meets to decide who gets in and who stays out.

Those who are accepted are assigned to one of the five branches of the armed foces: Strategic Rocket Forces, Soviet Army, Air Defense Forces, Soviet Air Force or the Navy. The naval infantry is similar to the U.S. Marine Corps but only numbers about 13,000 people. The Soviets also have a Coast Guard which is part of the border patrol. Their Coast Guard is much the same as ours; guarding the borders on land, sea and air. The big difference is the Soviet Coast Guard is run by the state security agency, the KGB.

Those who have the best skills are usually assigned to the elite units, and personal preferences usually don't count for much. But their skill level does. And one way for a young man to improve his

Main post library holds open house

"Knowledge is real power" is the theme of National Library Week, April 8-14, and the main post library will celebrate with an open house. Sayers Memorial Library will have its open house April 14 at 1 p.m. and will feature Dr. Dutchie S. Riggsby presenting, "Space Adventure."

Gwen Lewis, main post librarian, said the open house will acquaint people with what the library has to offer.

"We're really a highly academic library because of the number of people using the college extension unit here. But we have recreational reading, more than 300 magazines and newspapers from most of the states.

"We also have a children's room and even have a reading program for children during the summer. This year it will begin at the close of school and end about mid-August. Since this is an Olympics year, we will try to keep an Olympics theme.

"Our most popular section is the non-fiction area but our music section is popular among the young adults" Mrs. Lewis explained. She said tapes and records are available to listen to in the library or may be checked out. (USAIC PAO) skills, either through his own choice or at the direction of his draft board, is to take more training on his own time through DOSAAF (The Voluntary Society for Assistance to the Army,Air Force and Navy). DOSAAF training includes everything from military drill to electronics, communications, parachuting and even flying.

At age 18, the recruit goes on active duty. There isn't a centralized basic training program in the Soviet Union. Most inductees are shipped directly to the unit they will serve in during their entire tour. But there are exceptions. Some Navy and Air Force people attend a technical training school before being assigned to a unit. There they will receive the initial "basic training" other recruits get at their unit.

Army, Coast Guard, the air arm of the Navy, border and security troops serve two years. Those assigned to Navy ships, Coast Guard combat units and maritime units of the border troops serve three years; that's because their training period is longer.

Before inductees report to their unit, they're pretty sure of what they're getting into: a very structured lifestyle with little or no free time.

The first week is especially intense. Physical conditioning and field training are the order of the day. And like everybody from generals on down, they spend about five hours a week listening to the political officer preach the party line.

The initial training usually lasts about three months. One of the highlights for a recruit comes during the fourth week. That's when he is sworn into the armed forces. Each soldier reads the oath of enlistment aloud in front of his comrades.

"If I should break this my solemn oath, then let me suffer the severe penalties of Soviet law and the general detestation and contempt of all workers" is the last line in the oath.

Even after the initial basic training, a recruit's life still doesn't change much. The average Soviet G.I. starts his day early and ends it late. It's filled with organized drill, sports, physical conditioning, political lectures and, depending on the time of year, planting or harvesting local crops. Several times a week the unit participates in very realistic combat exercises.

The Soviets place a lot of emphasis on physical conditioning. Before the end of the first year of training, all military people must pass tests consisting of pull-ups, negotiating parallel bars, a 100-meter run, a 1 or 3-kilometer cross-country run, a 100-meter freestyle swim, and a 10-kilometer ski race or 6-kilometer forced march.

The Soviet soldier spends a lot of time cleaning his weapon. Soviets are known to keep their weapons very clean. But you can't say the same for the soldiers themselves.

Soviet society doesn't place as much importance on personal hygiene as Americans do. Soviet soldiers bathe once every two days, if that often. And wherever the conscript is assigned, there's probably a shortage of hot water.

Most of the barracks are open bay and sleep as many as 100 men. Bunks are stacked two, and sometimes three high, with as little as eight inches between stacks. That's about the same space as in your average coffin. There are common areas for personal hygiene.

A Soviet base usually has a library filled with officially approved books and a movie theatre (open only on weekends), where you can be sure Western films aren't shown. Bases sometimes have a gymnasium and service club.

There isn't much free time. Nearly every minute of a serviceman's time is "organized." The Soviets have repeatedly said that leisure time is often frittered away and that it needs to be directed into activities useful to the state and Communist Party.

If a few servicemen are musically inclined, they might be allowed to sing, but the songs are strictly censored by the political officer. Most of a recruit's free time is spent listening to the political officer.

Most soldiers don't leave their duty assignment during their entire tour. A very small percentage of them are granted 10 days leave as a reward for exceptional performance during a two-year tour and up to 20 days while on a three-year hitch.

When it comes to chowing down, Soviet GIs are allowed about 4,100 calories a day. Breakfast consists of something like cream of wheat, tea, and bread. They usually eat soup for lunch and probably have potatoes and dried fish for dinner. There is very little meat.

They have messing facilities, but no civilian cooks. The soldiers do the cooking. Many of the messes rely on wood-burning stoves. It's not unusual for the troops to grow their own vegetables or raise chickens and livestock to supplement their diets.

While U.S. sailors spend months at sea without port calls, the Soviet counterpart doesn't. But that's because the U.S. Navy is the best in the world at replenishing its ships at sea and keeping them on the move. The Soviets have historically operated out of ports, and still do for the most part. But that's changing. Their cruises are getting longer.

Pay in the Soviet armed forces is nothing to write home about. Food, housing and other needs are provided, but conscripts only get about $10 a month, most of which goes for cigarettes. Pay and privileges increase for careerists.

What about the wife and kids? Forget them for the whole tour. Soviet G.I.s who reenlist do get some consideration for their families though, even housing assistance.

But less than five percent of conscripts make the military a career. In the Army, for example, nearly 77 percent of the soldiers are first-termers. Conscripts also get a lot of hazing from career NCOs. Since uniforms are at a premium, it's not unusual for an NCO to demand a new conscript turn over the uniform he was issued. If he resists, he is taken out "behind the barn" and taught the rules of the game.

AFPS

These Soviet soldiers, clad in protective gear, jog through a smoke-shrouded training field.

And no recruit is going to report the incident. The officers turn their heads to that kind of abuse. They think it's necessary for good order and discipline.

Military life doesn't end after a conscript's tour of active duty is over. Everyone serves in the reserves until age 50.

So, how does Private Grechko stack up as a fighting man. Notwithstanding the stories about highly centralized control, inability to make decisions at lower levels and rampant alcoholism, those who keep a close eye on the Soviet military agree that Ivan is no pushover. He is said to believe he's better than his American counterpart and would come out ahead in battle. As one observer put it, "Ivan isn't 10 feet tall, but he's not a drunken midget either." (AFPS)

Dining faculity manager sets, obtains goals

By Paula L. Dempe
197th Inf. Bde. PAO

When Uncle Sam told SFC Larry Brown, dining facility manager for 2nd Battalion, 10th Field Artillery, the Army wanted him, he had no choice but to come.

Brown was drafted into the Army on January 21, 1965, from his home town of Orlando, Fla.

"It took me two years to get accustomed to the Army. Even then, I got out in November of '66 for three weeks," Brown said.

Brown re-entered the military as an E-5. Prior to his leaving the service, Brown had been a land-line teletype communications center specialist. Upon his re-entry, he changed his MOS to an 05C-radio teletype operator. As an 05C, Brown saw service in Vietnam.

After being frozen in the 05C field for nine years, Brown decided to be reclassified as a cook.

"If my MOS hadn't been frozen for so long, I would have probably been an E-9 by now," reflected Brown, thinking back on what he rates to have been a very successful career.

"I never went to cook school. I learned my new MOS skills in a 168-hour correspondence course," said Brown, continuing on to add he was stationed at Fort Hood, Texas at the time.

"As a young cook, I wanted to excel in my new field," he explained. "I took the advanced courses and the Food Advisor Service Technician School (FAST), which is the last available school in the 94B field."

Brown's cooking career started as the night baker at Fort Hood. "I had to make 176, nine-inch-crust pies a night. Making pie crusts wasn't easy. Now — no problem," laughed Brown.

The chow hall Brown started out in fed 1,500 people per meal and boasted 128 cooks.

"I had to start at the bottom and work my way up," he explained. "Eventually, I became the short order shift leader. At the same time, I was going through management CTC, food related courses."

Brown now has one year left before retirement. "So far," he insists, "the highlight of my career has been managing the award winning dining facility, 2-10 FA."

"Managing a dining facility like this is probably every enlisted man's dream," commented Brown.

The Connelly competition just past isn't Brown's only experience with the effort involved in TRADOC's (Training and Doctrine Command) most prestigious food service award.

"In '81, I prepared the support battalion dining facility, but it got entered in the wrong size category. TRADOC had to disqualify it from the competition," he explained.

"When I first got here to 2-10, I decided that I would win the Connelly. This was my goal," reflected Brown. "I won it."

Brown's next big goal while finishing out his time in the service is to win at the Army-wide level which is held in April. "I think we have a pretty good chance," Brown said confidently.

After retiring, Brown plans to move back to his hometown of Orlando with his wife and two children. There, he hopes to find work with either the government, or possibly, a hospital.

"I also want to finish college. I want a master of arts in management," he said.

As a dining facility manager, Brown is in charge of rations, planning menu's, taking care of personnel and troops, supporting the commanders in the field, all administrative work, and insuring the best possible food service available to the troops.

"Sometimes, when things aren't going well, I have to reach down deep inside myself and pull. But I think it's all been worth it." Smiling, Brown finished, "I work best under pressure."

Post boxing results

The Fort Benning boxing team won two of four fights during a recent tournament in Dothan, Ala.

Jeffery Johnson and Barry Butler won in the light middleweight and middleweight divisions respectively. Also participating in the tournament were Narciso Ortiz Jr. and Thomas Ollie.

The 1984 USAIC Boxing Championship will be conducted April 25-27 at the Briant Wells Field House provided sufficient participation is available.

Women's golf tourney

The Fort Benning Follow Me Golf Course's Ladies Golf Association is currently holding their annual spring handicap tournament. The tourney will run until April 24.

AUSA golf tourney

The annual Association of the U.S. Army Golf Tournament will be held April 19 at the Follow Me Golf Course.

The 18-hole tournament is open to AUSA corporate and regular members, as well as golf course members.

There will be a $10 entry fee for golf club members. For non-members the fee is $15. The fee includes: riding carts, greens fees and food and drinks.

Entry applications are available at George Cliff's Golf Shop in the Follow Me Golf Course. Entry forms should be completed no later than 6 p.m. April 12. For more information, call 545-0786.

Dogwood marathon

Fort Bragg will be the starting point for the Dogwood Festival Marathon to be held May 6 as part of Fayetteville's Second Annual Dogwood Festival.

Entry fee for the marathon, which is co-sponsored by the 18th Field Artillery Brigade and the Fayetteville Area Runners' Association, is $6 before April 23 and $8 afterward until the entry cutoff date of April 30.

Interested runners should contact Capt. Louis Thomas (919-396-5077) or John Cox (919-497-4827) for entry forms or further information.

MSAD jazzercise class

The Morale Support Activity is sponsoring a Jazzercise class beginning Monday. The class will be conducted by a certified professional instructor.

Two schedules will be offered. A one hour class will be held Mondays and Wednesdays at 9:30 a.m. in the Briant Wells Field House. There is a $15 monthly fee.

Half-hour classes will be held on Tuesdays and Thursdays at noon in building 4. The fee for the half-hour classes is $10 monthly.

The initial classes on Monday and Tuesday will be free of charge.

Bodybuilding contest

The Morale Support Activities Division is sponsoring the first ever Mr. and Ms. Fort Benning contest May 19 at the Kelly Hill Recreation Center. The contest is open to active duty personnel stationed at Fort Benning. Medals will be awarded in five categories; arms, legs, chest, back and abdomen. There will be trophies awarded to the top five over-all finishers for both men and women. For more information contact Speedy Austin at 545-5777.

Women's exercise class

The Morale Support Activities Division is offering free women's exercise classes at the Audie Murphy Gym. The classes are held Wednesday and Friday from 9 a.m. to 10 a.m. The class is directed by Rosa Guerrero. For more information about the class, call 545-1940/4592.

Grasshopper results

Blue Thunder 5Gold Eagles 0

Despite the defensive efforts of the Eagles' Ben Gersh, Adam Coward, John Grossman and Robert Noble, the game ended with a Thunder victory.

Forward, James Booth continuously brought the ball down field to Rodney Etheridge, with a hat trick, and Keith Blackstone, with two goals, for a five-point win over the Eagles. The Blue Thunder defense, led by fullbacks Sidney Cooley, Ben Joiner and Daniel Martin, took over to hold the Eagles.

Panthers 2..... Red Demons 1

The Panthers' aggressive style and constant pressure proved to be too much for the Red Demons. In the first half, the persistent play of the Panthers resulted in a score by Daniel Santa Ana, with Heather Brumitt and Robert Thompson getting the assists. The Demons' John Dugan, responded with a breakaway goal. The half ended with Panther Eric Smock scoring. The game ended two to one with strong defensive efforts by Chermie Taylor, Katie Rounsaville and Neil Quimby.

Tigers 3.....A Team 1

Tiger Derek Jones clawed his way through the A Team defensive line to score three unassisted goals. Center fullback James Mobley led the defense to hold the A Team to one point.

Termite results

Cosmos 6..... Strikers 2

Battling dust, wind and the Strikers, who had goals by Donald Langhorne and Steven Lorick, the Cosmos came from behind when Luke Erickson scored two goals to tie the game in the first half. Peter Schultz showed his European trained skills with a hat trick in the second half and Tom Stroud added the final goal for a six-to-two win over the Strikers. Manny Logo and Arther Mobley blocked key Striker plays to insure the win.

Golden Eagles 8..... Strikers 1

With spring break, the Eagles will to win, and the loss of star player Derick McCreight (out with a broken arm), the elements were against the Strikers. Steven Lorick made the lone Striker goal.

The Eagles were soaring high. They jumped off to a quick lead with hat tricks by Stuart Burton and Carlos Velez. Bobby Etheridge and Kris Profit sweetened the score with one point each. Eagles' Jon Kidd, Jeffrey Saliba, Jeffrey Turlo, Carrie Schmacher, Stacee Burton, Christine Velez, Scott Nimblett and Jason Buck made sure the Strikers only hit once.

Eagles 4..... Cosmos 3

The Eagles squeaked by the Cosmos when Greg Lurker displayed some fine offensive playing and teammates Andy Nix and Sam Lucas scored two points each. Halfbacks Charlie Holloway and Joey Neer led the defensive team and held the Cosmos back by one point.

Tigers 6..... Eagles 5

At the end of regulation play and after two five-minute halfs, the game between the Tigers and Eagles was tied and went into a shootout. Tiger goalie, Paul Feyereisen, made the saves that won the game. Scoring for the Tigers' were Mike Hitchcock, with a hat trick and a pair, and Anthony Smith with one.

Hitting the mark for the Eagles were Andy Nix, with a hat trick, Sam Lucas and Frank Brewster with one each. Halfback's Joey Neer and Marie Olive led the defensive battle against the Tigers.

Eagles 4..... Red Dragons 3

Halfbacks David Allard, Joey Neer and goalie, Sam Lucas held the Dragons to three points. Eagles' Andy Nix, scored two points, Peter Rounsaville and Shane Jordan scored one each to defeat the Dragons four to three.

Junior results

Warriors #2 3..... Bayonets 1

Carolyn Hughes, Sally Williams and Doug Belleter led the defense while Kevin Blake booted the ball in twice and John McGhee once for a final score of three to one Warriors.

Strikers 3..... Bayonets 0

Jimmy Wilson was credited with assists on goals by Mike Parker, with two points and Jeff Elliott with one point. Matt Schumacher led the Striker defense to end the game with a three-to-zero victory over the Bayonets.

(Results were compiled by Linda Laine, YA assistant sports director.)

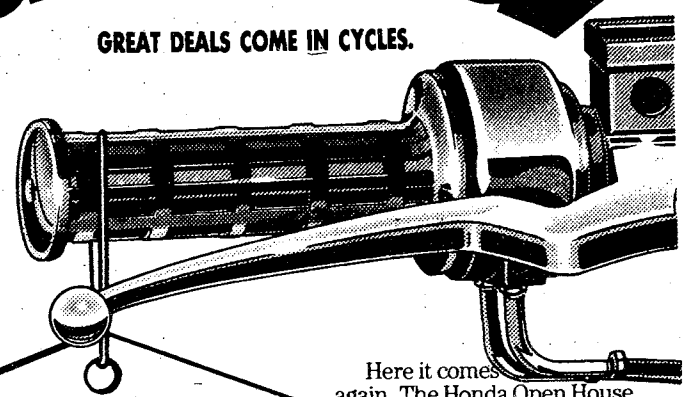
HONDA OPEN HOUSE

GREAT DEALS COME IN CYCLES.



Here it comes again. The Honda Open House.

Featuring Honda's $150,000 Grand Prix Game.

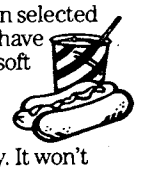
The Grand Prize is a 17-day European holiday for two. A V.I.P. view of the 1984 San Marino Grand Prix. And $20,000 cash.

Come in and play Honda's Grand Prix Game. See the exciting new 1984 Hondas. Or make a great deal on selected models. We'll even have FREE hot dogs and soft drinks. While they last, of course.



The Honda Open House. Hurry. It won't be here forever.

No purchase necessary. Void where prohibited. Limit one puzzle per licensed driver 16 or over while supplies last. Offer expires April 15, 1984. Complete details at participating Honda motorcycle dealers.

The Volkswagen Scirocco lets you dominate all the roads on which you travel. Its new 1.8-liter engine will make it difficult for others to keep up with you.

The 1984 Scirocco can even help you accumulate greater wealth. Consider its manufacturer's suggested retail price: Only $10,870. That's thousands of dollars less than any German-engineered sports car.† Put yourself where you deserve to be. In the driver's seat.

1984 Scirocco. $10,870. It's not a car. It's a Volkswagen.

Mfr's sugg. retail price includes a 12-month unlimited mileage, limited warranty, transp., license, dealer prep add'l. †Obey your local speed limits. ‡Based on a comparison of mfr's sugg. retail prices. Scirocco saves lives.

Hospital pharmacy resumes full services

The Martin Army Community Hospital (MACH) pharmacy resumed full services Monday announced Colonel Ronald L. Williams, acting commander.

Prescriptions written by civilian physicians may once again be filled at MACH. Additionally, beginning tomorrow, the pharmacy will be open on Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and on Sundays, from noon to 6 p.m.

The temporary reduction in pharmacy services began Feb. 27 when the pharmacy had a manpower shortage. This problem has now been overcome by the temporary addition of four military pharmacists and authorization to hire three civilian pharmacists, Williams said. (USAIC PAO)

Benning gets new Ranger unit

A Headquarters and Headquarters Company and the 3rd Battalion of the 75th Infantry Regiment (Ranger), will be activated later this year at Fort Benning. These new units will increase the post's military strength by approximately 730, the Army has announced.

The 1st Battalion, stationed at Hunter Army Airfield, Ga., and the 2nd Battalion, stationed at Fort Lewis, Wash., will also belong to the 75th Infantry Regiment, but will remain at their present locations.

An Army spokesman said when announcing the regiment's formation, "The activations will strengthen the Army's forces that are able to deploy rapidly to meet threats in low- and mid-intensity conflicts."

"The new regimental headquarters," he added, "will improve the Army's fighting capabilities by providing a single commander responsible for preparing training, equipping and sustaining Ranger forces."

The regimental headquarters will have approximately 130 soldiers. The 3rd Battalion, like the two existing Ranger battalions, will have approximately 600 soldiers.

The Army spokesman said, "These activations will increase the number of highly motivated, uniquely trained and equipped Rangers to meet specialized requirements and support objectives worldwide in peace and war."

Personnel spaces for the regimental headquarters and 3rd Battalion will come from existing Army resources, the spokesman said.

Several post locations, including Harmony Church, are being considered for housing the new units, a post spokesman added. (USAIC PAO)

CG's message

I would like to extend best wishes for a happy Passover to all of Fort Benning's Jewish personnel and their families. The Passover ceremony is a profound link in the chain of tradition that has bound Jewish families through the ages.

The message of Passover, the Festival of Freedom, is that the quest for human liberty is continuous. Freedom can never be taken for granted. It must be ever preserved and defended, even when we enjoy its blessings as we do in the United States. All Americans join with the Jewish People in the hope and prayer that through vigilance, courage, and strength, America may forever enjoy the blessings of freedom in a world where it is so very precious.

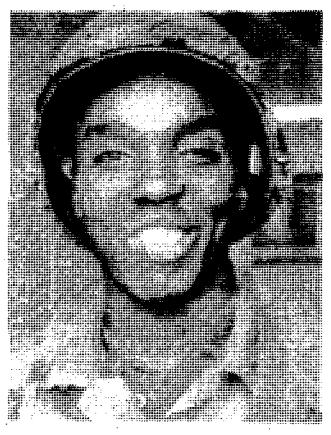
Why is common task testing important?

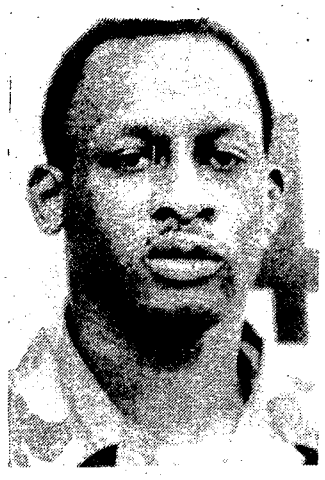


Sp4 Willie James Jr., 2-10th FA, 197th Inf. Bde. — "Without common task testing, soldiers may not take the time to keep up on these skills. It is very important we keep up on these skills because we may have to use them in conflict."

PFC James L. Buie, Hq. Cmd., USAIC — "Every soldier needs to keep in touch with common soldier skills. We need to learn as much as we can. Who knows when we may really have to use them."

Pvt. 2 Felicita Esteves, Hq. Cmd., USAIC —"We all need to maintain a high skill level in basic soldier tasks. These skills are very important for all soldiers."

PFC Honora C. Chichester, 546th Med. Co. (CLR) —"All soldiers should keep up on basic soldier's skills. Common task testing is one way to measure how well a soldier is doing at these tasks."



SFC Larry D. Kennedy. 988th M.P. Company —"Regardless of a soldier's MOS, common task testing is a very important part of his training. The testing also gives supervisors a chance to find out a soldier's weak points and gear training to correct those weaknesses."

Capt. Daryl P. Smoak, S—3, ITG —"Common task testing is very important for all soldiers. Each soldier should keep a high level of proficiency in all these skills."

Visitor impressed with post's professionalism

A Fort Benning visitor recently provided the BAYONET with the accompanying testimonial.

He became impressed with the atmosphere of professionalism and dedication to the American ideal that pervades the Infantry Center while visiting his son undergoing training here.

The visitor's faith in our nation as the greatest on earth was reaffirmed both by his Benning experience and this positive message relayed by a major corporation to all Americans.

Something To Cheer About

If you sometimes think the front page and the evening TV news bring nothing but doom and gloom, here's something to make you feel good about America: In a worldwide survey, it was found that 84% of Americans take great pride in their work, vs. 36% of Europeans and 37% of Japanese. 71% of Americans would be willing to fight for their country, vs. 43% of Europeans and 22% of Japanese. Americans also lead in national pride (80%). These are sparkling figures. They ought to be on the front page.

Army battle dress uniform inspires fashion craze

Robert McClain

While walking down the halls of area public schools, one might think Army soldiers are getting younger and younger. They're not. But, Columbus and Fort Benning youths are trying to look like soldiers. Adaptations of the Army's battle dress uniform have been slowly filtering their way into the wardrobes of local fashion conscious children and teen-agers.

Spencer High School student Curtis Harris is one of the many youths into the camouflage look. "I like to wear camouflage pants and shirts because they're different," he said. "They have a special kind of look." He added that a few students at Spencer started to wear them to school after Christmas and other students began to take their lead. "Before you knew it, you saw a lot of the kids wearing them," he said.

Another Spencer student, Johnnie McCray, likes to wear camouflage for a different reason. "It's all right to be up on the latest fad, but I wear them because they are comfortable and roomy," he said. "They also have lots of pocket space."

Area businesses are also enjoying this latest fashion craze, especially Army surplus stores. Army surplus store manager Paul Voorhees says he has seen many more children and older teen-agers shopping in his store lately. "We have always had Army parents buying their little children miniature sets of the Army fatigues," he said. "They wanted their kids to look just like daddy. But over the last few months, we have had a number of kids coming in here shopping for the camouflage uniforms to wear to school and out on the town."

He said the mass marketing of variations of the battle dress uniform have really helped his sales. "Kids can find the same items they see in fashion magazines in Army surplus stores for cheaper prices," he commented.

Antoinette Camp is a co-manager of a local children's shop. She adds that she cannot keep enough of the camouflage separates in stock. "The Army look has been selling well since last October. As soon as we get the camouflage separates on the racks, they are gone just as quickly," she added.

Mothers are having a different problem though. "I can't get them off my 12-year-old son," commented Betty Zimmerman. "It's the 'in' thing and that's all he wants to wear."

Betty Zimmerman

Tony Zimmerman shops for another pair of camouflage pants at a local department store.

Sergeant Terry M. Harrelson, a platoon sergeant with the 533rd Transportation Company, has noticed the craze too. "I think it's just a trend. When I was in school we had our fads. Wearing camouflage pants and jackets is just one of this generation's fads. In a few months they will probably be wearing something else," he said.

Harrelson thinks the increased press coverage of the military in recent months has had a lot to do with the fad. "Kids watch televison and the press has portrayed the military in a good light," he added. "Soldiers are heroes to some of these kids. Children once again have pride in the military. They are dressing like us now because they want to look like their heroes."

Throughout history, kids have used fashion to emulate their heroes. On any given day, you can see children dressed like soldiers, rock stars, doctors and baseball players. What's next? Maybe kids will begin to dress like their favorite newspaper columnist. Who knows?

Reserve Seabees test skills during Fort Benning training

Naval Reserve "Seabees" recently docked at Fort Benning to test their capability to deploy a construction force from its permanent drill site by air.

Exercise "Green Stinger" brought an 89-man detachment from the Reserve Naval Mobile Construction Battalion-24 to post. The detachment came from Redstone Arsenal, Ala., utilizing Air Force and National Guard transport planes.

According to Battalion Commander Noah Long, the battalion's mission was two-fold. "We wanted to get our Seabees trained in heavy crew-served weapons, such as the M-60 and mortar and to improve unit tactics. But our main mission was to perform construction work in a tactical environment. I think we accomplished both of those missions while we were at Benning," he said.

The Seabees were accompanied by their allowance of 42 pieces of construction equipment with all the tools and supplies they needed to live and undertake a variety of construction projects.

The air detachment is from the Carolinas. Its members reported to Huntsville, Ala., to ready themselves for the exercise four weeks ago. Seabees from Huntsville, Birmingham, Ala., and Chattanooga, Tenn., converged on Huntsville to prepare the equipment, tools and supplies for air shipment. Planes from Air Force and National Guard units in Dallas, Texas; Mansfield, Ohio; and Cheyenne, Wyo.; transported 30 planeloads of gear to Fort Benning.

Once at Benning, the air detachment convoyed its gear from a dirt "tactical" airfield to a remote site on post and set up its operations.

As part of their mission, the Seabees took on many construction projects around post. "Our unit did a little bit of everything. We repaired garage doors, built building additions, layed a sidewalk, as well as performing many other projects," commented Petty Officer 1st Class Morey V. Grimes.

The work sites had periodic attacks from the Infantry Training Group. The Seabees had to defend their work sites while accomplishing repair projects on training ranges on post.

Commander Long added, "The training we received was excellent. These were some of the most realistic conditions we have ever worked under. Exercises like this provide vital training in all aspects of the military.

"In preparing for the exercise, we trained all battalion staff members in planning management skills. The various services involved with the exercise also learned to work together in a realistic way and everyone benefitted," he concluded.

The exercise was observed by Rear Admiral Thomas S. Maddock, commander of the 20,000-man Reserve Naval Construction Force.

Fort Benning spends a million SPIRITed dollars

By Dot Russell
SPIRIT coordinator

What would you do with a million dollars? That question was asked of all directors and commanders at Fort Benning recently as a result of winning the first place award of one million dollars in the U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command's (TRADOC) Systematic Productivity Improvement Review in TRADOC (SPIRIT).

Winning this award was no accident. It was the result of team effort, a team made up of the total community with the common goal of making maximum use of the Army dollar. The "team" won a million dollars, and the "team" shared in the responsibility for spending it wisely.

This was accomplished by announcing receipt of the million dollars, requesting suggestions for ways to spend the money and announcing the Program Resource Advisory Committee (PRAC) would review all suggestions and make recommendations to the Commanding General. Use of the committee insured representation for each team member.

Because of limited resources, there are many needs; consequently, good suggestions for spending several million dollars were received. All suggested expenditures were assembled and sent to each committee member for review. Subsequent committee meetings, chaired by Fort Benning's Chief of Staff Col. Carmen Cavezza, were held to determine the committee's recommendations for funding.

The criteria used to prioritize projects were: projects benefiting the most people or activities; projects that will effect a cost savings to be applied toward the SPIRIT program; and projects that save energy.

Emphasis was placed on obtaining the maximum benefit from each dollar spent. Committee members carefully reviewed each item and in several instances were able to find suitable alternatives to satisfy some requirements. Several requirements were identified as qualifying for resources from other programs.

The committee's recommendation to the Commanding General consisted of projects that will benefit the entire installation. Maj. Gen. John Foss reviewed the recommendations and approved funding on April 5.

Approved projects range from building a new gas chamber for Nuclear Biological Chemical (NBC) Warfare training to installing hydraulic lifts on two carryall vehicles used to transport disabled children to and from off post schools.

In all instances, the SPIRIT award money will be spent in ways that will contribute toward increasing our country's combat readiness and benefiting soldiers and their families. This, of course, is accomplished in a number of ways — saving manhours, helping families, providing better training facilities and ranges, etc.

Approved projects include:

Gas chamber

The present 9'x15' gas chamber is in a state of decay. The small size allows for a maximum of nine students with two instructors at one time causing long waiting lines. The new facility will save an average of six hours per company-size unit and increase the quality and efficiency of NBC training for Fort Benning units, the Reserve Components, ROTC and other installations in the immediate area.

197th completes winter training

By Willie Means
197th Inf. Bde. PAO

The soldiers of the 197th Infantry Brigade's (Mech) (Sep) 3rd Battalion, 7th Infantry "Task Force," who recently redeployed from several weeks of cold weather training at Fort Drum, N.Y., got up at 3 a.m. on April 6 with very little griping. It was a day the soldiers had long awaited; it was time to go home.

"I've been looking forward to this day since the day before we left Fort Benning," said PFC Joseph Baggatta. "If they had gotten me up at 1 a.m., I wouldn't complain. Hey, it was time to go home."

The soldiers of the task force wound down from two weeks of cold weather and external evaluation training the end of March. Maj. Bill May, the task force operations officer, critiqued the training.

"The training went really well. It fits into the battalion's overall plans. We previously had platoon- level evaluation training, but at Fort Drum we had company-level," stated May. "The training was evaluated on how well soldiers and commanders performed tasks. Normally you have one big exercise then try to improve next time.

"At Fort Drum the external evaluation was controlled internally by the battalion commander and myself. This provided us the opportunity to do the training over and over again. Our next training will be at battalion level at the National Training Center."

The task force consisted of elements from Charlie Company, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor; 72nd Engineer Company (Combat); 2nd Battalion, 10th Field Artillery; and 3-7th Infantry as the mainbody. The 197th Support Battalion rounded out the task force.

"The training at Fort Drum was great," stated 1st Lt. Jeffrey A. Kulback, of the 72nd. "Besides good cold weather training, we got a chance to work with a "Bailey Bridge" and the "M4T6 (Bulk Bridge)." We don't have these at Fort Benning."

The task force was opposed by A Troop, 15th Cavalry; the OPFOR. The 15th proved to be a formidable opponent but in the end the task force was victorious.

"We accomplished our objectives. Fort Drum was the first time the 3-7th operated as a mechanized combined task force," said Lt. Col. Douglas D. Allman, commander, "Task Force 3-7th." "We identified our strengths and weaknesses. It was a very challenging training program. The soldiers responded magnificently."

Returning to Fort Benning, the soldiers disembarked the plane at Lawson Army Airfield to the tune of "Johnny Comes Marching Home" and various other songs played by the 283rd Army Band.

"I'm going home and see my wife Elizabeth," said Sp5 Cliff Menefee, tank gunner with 2-69th.

Insure your family's safety; eliminate home fire hazards;

Fires break out in homes throughout the U.S. about every 45 seconds. Each year, fire claims about 7,500 lives and causes billions of dollars in property damage, according to the Insurance Information Institute.

The institute recommends that trash be kept in covered containers and be disposed of regularly. Attics, basements, closets, and garages should be cleaned frequently.

And don't overload electrical circuits or use frayed extension cords, the Institute warns. And never run an extension cord under a rug or behind curtains.

Other tips include having all electrical wiring checked periodically by a competent electrician, and the use of fuses and circuit breakers with the label of Underwriters' Laboratories (UL) or some other recognized testing laboratory.

Regarding smoke detectors, the institute recommends the installation of at least one in every home. If it is battery-operated, check the batteries often.

In developing a family escape plan, the institute suggests that a sketch be made laying out each floor, and that every family member become familiar with it. Two escape routes from each room should be marked clearly on the sketch.

Fire drills should be held frequently, including some at night, the time most home fires occur. A family member should be assigned to assist the elderly or very young, and a meeting place outside the home should be designated for all to assemble in case of fire.

The institute is emphatic about not going back into

Fort Benning unit snares Army maintenance award

FORT MONROE, Va. — A Fort Benning unit has been named a first place winner in the second annual Chief of Staff of the Army Award for Maintenance Excellence.

"Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC) is proud to recognize D Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade, as the winner of the Chief of Staff Army Award for Maintenance Excellence" stated Maj. Gen. A.K. Ono, TRADOC's deputy chief of staff for Personnel, Administration and Logistics.

He added, "This award was initiated to improve readiness and efficiency, encourage innovative use of resouces, and provide positive incentives for extraordinary maintenance efforts. D Company is equipped with the newest infantry fighting vehicle — the M2 Bradley — and their selection for the award highlights the supportability of the Army's newest equipment. This unit is indicative and representative of the quality of personnel, training, readiness and new equipment in the Army of Excellence today."

Company D represented TRADOC in the light density competition for units having from 50 to 700 items of equipment. According to a Fort Benning spokesman, Co. D conducted numerous exercises and demonstrations during the year and "maintained a high degree of unit readiness through sound management, leadership, training and maintenance innovations."

Winners of the DA competition were recognized at a ceremony held during the American Defense Preparedness Association's annual convention in Washington on March 29. (TNS)

Travel vouchers

This project will cost $32,100 but will save $50,000 by eliminating overtime requirements. The major savings are not quantifiable but will affect all travelers by reducing the time spent in processing their travel vouchers.

Area shop

This shop will reduce travel time and fuel consumption for post engineers, and provide better service to the Har mony Church area. The shop will consolidate utilities and building maintenance within Harmony Church.

Leasing equipment

An immediate need exists for proper equipment to maintain ranges for combat training. Present equipment downtime has an adverse affect on productivity.

Handi-talkies

Handi-talkies will be used by the Ammunition Supply Installation Branch for communication between the 19 different magazines and the office. Communication is essential to determine if a magazine is manned and whether ammunition being requisitioned is available for the customer. Waiting time for customers will be reduced and overall safety enhanced.

Milk machines

Replacing the rental milk machines currently in the dining facilities will effect a savings of $28,000 a year after an amortization period of two years.

Intercom system

The system will be used in the Central Issue Facility (CIF) to communicate between the office and warehouse areas when ordering items of clothing and equipment for issue to customers, also to page officers and trainees attending classes and for interoffice communication. The facility serves approximately 11,000 personnel monthly. This system will produce time savings for customers and CIF personnel.

Modular containers

Modular containers for CIF will eliminate the need for forklifts to move pallets of field equipment and will release personnel to perform classification, turn-in, restocking, etc. The final result will be improved service to customers.

Command changes at Martin Army Community Hospital

Rebekah Hunt

Maj. Gen. Floyd W. Baker, Col. Ronald G. Williams, Col. Alcide M. LaNoue and CSM Donald B. Brady (l to r) participate in the hospital's change of command ceremony Wednesday.

A change of command and promotion ceremony was held at the Martin Army Community Hospital (MACH) Wednesday. Colonel Alcide M. LaNoue, commander of the Medical Department Activity and Martin Army Community Hospital, relinquished command to Col. Ronald G. Williams who will serve as interim commander for approximately two months.

Following the change of command, Maj. Gen. Floyd W. Baker, commander of Health Services Command, promoted LaNoue to brigadier general. General LaNoue leaves Fort Benning to assume command of Eisenhower Medical Center at Fort Gordon, Ga.

Colonel Williams had served as Director of Clinical Services at the hospital. General LaNoue has been MACH commander since Feb. 17, 1982. (USAIC PAO)

Towing devices

Three electric towing devices will be installed in the beds of 1-ton, 4x4 pickup trucks to recover small vehicles.

Fact booklets

Heat injuries are preventable. The success of any prevention program is education. The Hot Weather Fact Booklet is personalized for Fort Benning; utilizes easy to understand language; is illustrated; printed on water resistant paper and designed to fit inside the BDU pocket.

Radio sets

Hand held radios will insure safe operation of vehicles operating at Lawson Army Airfield.

Tiling floors

Tiling the floors in troop billets of the 4700 block, Harmony Church area will improve sanitation and troop morale.

Upgrading ITG

Included are relocating field latrines which are too close to mess facilities or range houses, constructing one new latrine and upgrading Malone Range #8. This project will directly benefit more than 37,000 soldiers each year.

Teleconference equipment

By leasing teleconference equipment, the U.S. Army Infantry School will have the capability for visual/graphic information exchanges between Fort Benning, Fort Leavenworth and Fort Knox. The result will be a reduction in annual travel costs for USAIS and counterparts at the other posts.

Bugle system

No bugle calls are used in Sand Hill. By providing an automated amplified bugle system, the integral part of training on military customs and courtesies can be brought to the soldiers.

Emergency radio net

An emergency radio net for the engineers is critical to keep bridges and roads open and for responding to other emergencies such as fires, hazardous waste spills, etc. Also included is obtaining needed fire protection equipment.

EOC communications

Upgrading EOC communications will satisfy a requirement for responsive day-to-day and emergency radio communications with tactical on-post units and with mobilization forces during all stages of deployment.

Answering sequencers

Telephone answering sequencers will improve service rendered to soldiers and their families using both the dental clinic and transportation office.

Fitness centers

Procuring fitness center equipment for the seven gym fitness centers will provide the soldier and his family with access to modern equipment.

Community projects

These projects are part of the Army Family Concept. The equipment and material to support child development, exceptional family members, youth activity centers and needs of the military community include therapeutic recreation equipment, material to support training programs for volunteer workers, material to support parent training, accessible playgroud equipment for handicapped children and many teaching aids.

Renovating centers

The Family Life Center provides professional counseling, guidance and opportunity for growth to the families of the Fort Benning community. The training facility trains chaplains in those skills necessary to assist soldiers and their families in resolving problems. This facility is one of two that trains chaplains for all Army installations.

SPIRIT material

Three thousand dollars was set aside for awards materials, engravings and printing to support the fiscal year '84 SPIRIT program.

Hydraulic lifts

Installing hydraulic lifts on two carryall vehicles to be used to transport disabled children to and from off post schools, will enable wheelchair-bound children to enter and exit vehicles with dignity.

So what can you buy with a million dollars? You can do what Fort Benning did. Use it as "seed," plant it in fertile soil and earn a high yield. The harvest will continue for many years because Fort Benning unselfishly spent the million dollars to benefit the "most" for the "longest."

Spring weather can cause heat-related injuries

Fort Benning Preventive Medicine Commander William Morgan warns Fort Benning residents that with warmer spring temperatures, the chances for heat-related illness are much greater.

Heat injuries can occur whenever personnel are required to work in warm environments. These heat injuries include sunburn, heat cramps, heat exhaustion and heat stroke. These are especially dangerous to the elderly.

Heat exhaustion is the inability to continue to work in the heat and is usually characterized by symptoms which may include extreme fatigue, nausea, vomiting, cramps, rapid breathing and fainting. Victims should be removed from heat and should be cooled and given fluids. If the victim's condition worsens, medical attention is needed.

The most serious problem is heatstroke or collapse. Symptoms include weakness, dizziness, nausea, headaches and cramps. The victim usually sweats heavily, but the sweating stops just before the onset of the stroke itself and the body temperature rises sharply, often to 106 degrees or more. Col. Morgan added if you see someone suffering from heat stroke, get the victim medical attention right away.

Col. Morgan also gave some tips on how you can avoid heat-related injuries:

- Cut down on physical activity which can put an added strain on the heart.
- Be careful of salt use.
- Avoid alcohol which causes fast water loss.
- Get adequate rest.
- Eat properly.

Courts martial manual changes effective soon

By Connie McReynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Significant changes to the Manual for Courts Martial will become effective Aug. 1. Also becoming effective then is the 1983 Military Justice Act, which has several code and statute changes.

According to Capt. William L. Allinder, chief of military justice, one important change in the MCM is its new format. "The manual is chronological in sequence and designed for laymen's use. The manual has to be usable in combat, so now a commander can look up a crime and see exactly what he has to do about it."

One change affecting courts martial is in pre-trial confinement. A soldier can now be confined if: a commander decides a crime triable by court-martial has been committed; the individual to be confined committed the crime; confinement is necessary because the individual may leave; lesser restraints are insufficient; and, if not confined, the individual may engage in serious criminal misconduct. Serious criminal misconduct includes a soldier who refuses to do anything or obey any orders.

"A person may now petition for a review of his case by the U.S. Supreme Court, once he has exhausted the military appellate system," Allinder said. He said the government now also has the right to appeal a military court decision.

The rules of evidence have been expanded allowing more evidence to be brought into court during a trial. Many administrative burdens have been lifted from commanders and the government, although commanders still retain all their powers.

The new manual expands commanders' authority to inspect for contraband and specifically allows urinalysis tests as evidence.

Under the punitive articles, any offenses committed with firearms have an increased maximum punishment. A new article has been created for drug offenses, 112A. Formerly drug offenses were tried under articles 92 and 134.

New specific offenses have been named under general article, 134. Some of these are kidnapping, prostitution, hoaxes such as false bomb threats, destruction of evidence, jumping a vessel and fraternization between officers and enlisted members.

Allinder cautioned that although fraternization between officers and enlisted members is the only type of fraternization specifically included in the new manual, fraternization includes other types of relationships that are prohibited based on local policies and Army customs. These are relationships between military members of different ranks which compromise the chain of command, result in the appearance of partiality, or otherwise undermine good order, discipline, authority and morale. One example is non-duty relationships between cadre of schools and students.

Soldiers' cadence calls place third in contest

(Editor's note: These are the third place winners in our 1984 Jody Call contest.)

Mechanized

I woke up in the morning; it was drizzling rain.
Pulled my APC into a plane.
The plane took off with a hell of a roar.
I knew that second I was off to war.
So I'll tell you a story not often told.
About Mechanized Infantry brave and bold.
They roll off the planes in the middle of the night.
They hit the ground and they're ready to fight.

Old John Wayne was a friend of mine,
We did PT all the time,
Push Up, Sit Up, 2-mile run,
We didn't stop 'til all was done.
John Wayne loved his Vitamin P,
He taught me how it was good for me.

On day one, I was puny and weak,
John Wayne started with the bend and reach,
On day two, it was doing me good,
I kept my faith, like he knew I would.
On day three, I was tall and proud,
I felt so good, I led the crowd.

PT's good for you and me,
We'll never OD on Vitamin P.
We do PT the John Wayne way,
We do PT every day.
I like PT that's no lie,
I'll do PT 'til I die.
PT keeps me fit and strong,
With Vitamin P, I'll never go wrong.

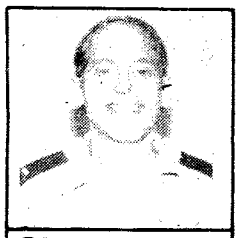
Spiritual

God loves and cares about each of His creatures



Chaplain Dennis Beck-Berman

This coming Monday night, Jewish families around the world will come together for the Passover Seder, the festival medal that Christians remember as the scene of the Last Supper. Passover is called the Festival of Freedom because it celebrates the exodus of the Israelites from slavery in Egypt to freedom in the land of Israel.

Jewish tradition requires that every spring we re-experience the bitterness of slavery and the sweetness of liberty through drama, song, study, taste, touch and symbol in order to appreciate always the blessing of freedom.

Passover also celebrates the final redemption of the world, which is symbolized by the renewal of nature in spring and by the cup of wine set aside at the Seder for Elijah. As the prophet said: "I will send the prophet Elijah to you before the great and awesome day of the Lord; he will turn the hearts of the parents to the children and the hearts of the children to the parents" (Malachi, Chapter 3, Verses 23-24).

But what does the reconciliation of the generation gap have to do with the age of universal harmony that ushers in the Messiah's coming? The following story suggests an answer to this question.

* * * *

It is told that the great Hasidic Rabbi Moshe Leb of Sassov had a custom of rising at midnight and engaging in mystical prayer. One night his soul soared aloft to his Creator and he experienced ecstasy. Suddenly his devotions were interrupted. A drunken peasant knocked loudly. "Open up! Let me in, it's cold!"

Moshe Leb tried to regain his concentration. The knocking grew louder. "Hey, it's so cold out here! Let me in!" Moshe Leb turned heavenward. "Lord, why does some drunken peasant have to bother me right now, just when my soul feels so deeply connected to You? Why should there even be drunks around, anyway?"

Then the rabbi was struck with a shocking thought: God has room for this human being in His world; He created him and sustains and loves him. God, who guides the steps of all His creatures, guided this peasant to his door tonight. But he, Moshe Leb, did not find room for this poor fellow in his world.

Then he became even more frightened, for he realized that he had held his own feelings to be so important that he was almost ready to write off the face of the earth a human being created in the image of God. Trembling, Moshe Leb ran to the door, embraced the peasant, and put him to sleep in his own bed.

* * * *

This tale relates to several Passover themes. The story teaches us to consider always what we hold to be important and how we treat others. How many lives are filled with anger, bitterness and frustration that could be overcome with forgiveness, unselfishness and sensitivity?

This brings us back to the words of the prophet Malachi. How do we react when our children come to us seeking attention and affirmation, love and affection? Are we too busy watching television or reading the paper? Parents and children are connected by the deepest physical and psychological bonds. Not until they can attune their hearts to each other's needs and feelings, can all human beings show each other the love that will usher in the Messiah's reign of universal harmony. This insight is reflected in the emphasis on children interacting with parents at the Passover Seder.

Passover is about freedom. Here too, we are faced with the question, what's important? In Russia, the theory of sharing wealth is so important that in its name they write off not only personal freedom, but also truth and even human life itself. In America, however, we consider it so important to protect personal freedom that in order to safeguar the rights of the innocent, we sometimes sacrific punishing the guilty.

Passover is also about love. Without love ther could be no freedom. Jewish tradition hint at this connection by ordaining the reading of th Song of Songs on Passover.

Indeed, the paschal lamb symbolizes God's love Instead of having one communal sacrifice, Go ordered every Israelite to sacrifice a lamb for hi own home. Unfortunately, we tend to believe in a cosmic God who cares about the world in general but not about my home, my life.

Passover is about really believing that God love us and cares about every one of His creatures. And like the rabbi in the story, we all need to take thi lesson to heart.

Guest speaker highlights chapel seminar

By JoAnne Mercer
Chapel Publicist

"The Christian Soldier" is the topic of a special seminar to be presented by Kay Arthur on April 26 at the Main Post Theater. The first session is 9:15-11:30 a.m., with the second session at 1-2:30 p.m.

Mrs. Arthur, a well-known teacher and author, is the principal instructor at "Precept Ministries" in Chattanooga, Tenn. This Bible study conference center was begun by Kay and her husband in 1970. It rapidly expanded and became the headquarters for the publication of a series of inductive Bible studies, "Precept Upon Precept," as well as production center for the television program, "How Can I Live?"

Kay Arthur has authored numerous prayer, study and devotion guides, including "Lord, I Want to Know You," "Teach Me How to Live," and "Sermon on the Mount: Prayer and Study Guide." Her "Precept" Bible courses are currently being studied by more than 30,000 people around the world.

She is well-known to the military community as her world-wide ministry includes speaking and teaching engagements at many Army installations such as West Point, N.Y.; Fort Leavenworth, Kan.; Fort Sam Houston, Texas, and Berchtesgarden, Germany.

The public is invited to participate in this seminar. For further information, call 545-2050.

Spouse abuse

"Spouse Abuse - Myths vs Realities" is the topic of a special program to be presented at the Infantry Center Chapel Annex on April 23, at 7:30 p.m. The speaker is Linda McCoy, ACS social worker and coordinator of the Battered Wives Shelter. Presented by the Protestant and Catholic Women of the Chapels, this program is open to the community. For more information, call Linda Wallace at 689-3591.

Catholic educator visits

The Rev. James J. DiGiacomo, S.J., well-known teacher, writer and lecturer, will be here tomorrow and Sunday. On Saturday from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m., Father DiGiacomo will conduct a retreat day for Benning youth (junior and senior high) at Blessed Trinity Shrine Retreat. On Sunday, he will conduct a workshop for all parents of teenagers. The workshop, to be held in the Infantry Center Chapel Annex from 1-3 p.m., will focus on Father DiGiacomo's recent book, "Understanding Teenagers."

Complainers should take a closer look at system

By Victoria L. Darcy
Guest Commentary

The worst additional duty appointment one could receive in the Army would have to be "complaint box custodian." Luckily, there is no such appointment. But just imagine the input commanders would receive — as if they don't hear enough complaints now.

Throughout my four-year tenure as a soldier in the United States Army, I have to admit, I could complain with the best of them. One of my supervisors, an NCO whom I very much respected and admired, gave me his philosphy one day. He said, "Soldiers are happy if they're complaining." He was often afforded the opportunity to recite this adage to the members of our office — almost daily in fact.

One specialist always complained about regulations. She couldn't decide from day to day whether there were too many, or not enough. Sometimes, she decided there were enough, but they weren't written properly. "Too vague," was her description, although she never once quoted any or noted a particular regbook.

Another didn't seem to like anything. I suppose my supervisor thought him to be the happiest of all. He was one of those "whiners" who found something wrong in everything and everyone. He wasn't very popular with the rest of us, either. Somehow, I always thought he really was happy complaining all the time, since I rarely saw him smile, nor did he get involved with many activities or ideas when asked.

I also knew a PFC whose only complaint was that she couldn't decorate her barracks room any way she wanted. That complaining was quite minimal to us as we spent our time complaining about the barracks themselves — the noise, the substandard living, getting "ripped off," etc.

Another PFC, who was married, complained because she couldn't get off from work in time to cook dinner for her husband. Being single, I assumed that she had concluded this to be the lesser of two evils. I would have chosen the other one.

Then there were the common complaints voiced throughout the ranks, from privates to officers. "Too much BS," would have to be the most prominent. I would say that PT ranked next, with complaints about the boss following a close third.

The Army seems to be just one big happy family.

Reflecting back on those four years, I have to admit now that I probably complained more than was necessary, and very often with little reason. I miss that unity experienced by soldiers — there is a certain bonding element that is a product of the "system." You can complain all you want about the "system," but it's solid, and most importantly it works.

The benefits are unequaled by any other organization. Soldiers are offered a variety of activities free, or at a minimal cost. What other large corporation takes care of all your medical and dental bills? The military also takes care of your family, and if you ever find yourself complaining about your paycheck, sit down and add up the costs you would have paid for doctor bills last year.

Educational benefits are another plus for soldiers -- college is expensive these days. Tuition assistance isn't so bountiful, either. Allowing the Army to pay 75 percent of your tuition for night classes, enrolling under the VEAP program, and free CLEP tests, are just a few of the ways you can obtain a degree with very little cost to you.

Most soldiers get the opportunity to go overseas as well. This is an experience you may not ever tremely good, and you can even travel to other countries through USO tours available at low rates. The Army also has hotels available in some areas which charge rates according to your rank — as little as $4 per night to stay in a superb hotel on the beaches of Hawaii or the ski slopes of the German Alps.

So much is available, yet so many don't take the time or put forth an effort to get more information. There are many opportunities awaiting — all you have to do is take advantage of them. Most apply to your family as well.

Does it sound like I'm complaining? Perhaps I am, but it's a different kind of complaining now. I belong to another big, happy family now — civil service. Ther are a lot of happy federal employees who don't get all of these benefits. Those of us who are veterans, are glad that we did take advantage of opportunities that were available "back in our Army days."

Married soldiers enjoy family life on post

By Connie McReynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

(Editor's note: This is the first part of a three-part series on the family at Fort Benning.)

Some married couples may find problems with adjusting to life while both of them are serving in the military.

Sergeant Alfonso Green and his wife Sp4 Jacqueline Green are a military couple that haven't had any big problems with getting support on post.

The Greens work in the same office at the Infantry Training Group in the Harmony Church area. "Everyone has treated us just the same as anyone else, not any better nor any worse," Sgt. Green said.

"We really can't find fault with Fort Benning as far as support goes. The post has some good services for families available here. For one thing, I think the community life program is good," he added.

The Greens will be married two years come May and have only experienced life as a married couple here but that will soon change.

"I had a baby five months ago, and two days after I got out of the hospital, I got levy notification for Germany. Al called DA and was able to get orders for Germany also, but I think more emphasis should be put on joint-domicile," Sp4 Green said.

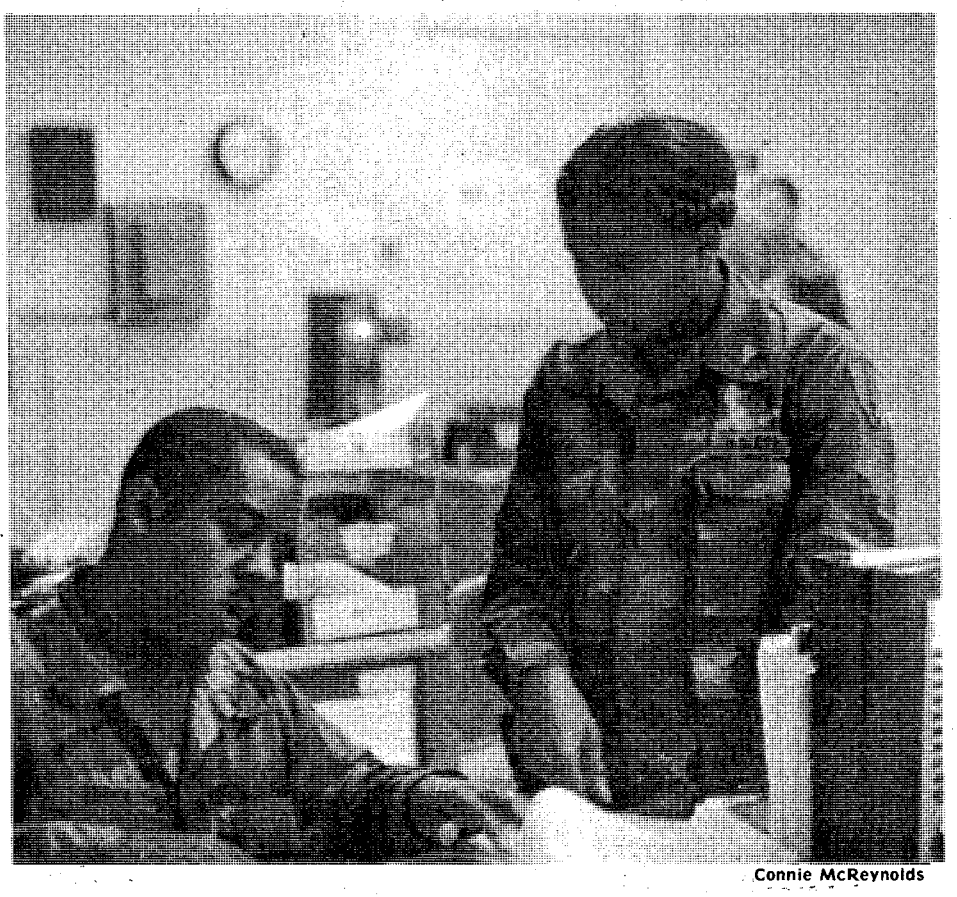
"Now there's a policy where married members are being kept together if possible, but that area is definitely something the Army needs to place more emphasis on," Sgt. Green added.

Another area that the Greens agree needs more Army emphasis is in the area of assignments. "If a servicemember could get an assignment where he could take his family, instead of being sent on an unaccompanied tour, it would sure help morale and keep both the family and servicemember satisfied," Sgt. Green said.

"One thing that has made our stay here enjoyable is our housing," Sp4 Green said.

Although they do not live in government quarters, both Greens expressed their feelings of good fortune to have been able to live in low cost housing on the military reservation. Being close to post facilities has meant much to them, the Battle Park residents said.

Sp4 Green has decided the Army will be her career. Sgt. Green isn't sure, yet.



Connie McReynolds

Sgt. Alfonso Green gives some pointers to his wife, Sp4 Jacqueline Green, on filling out forms.

HAVING YOUR OWN PAD CAN COST A WAD.

If you're headed back to civilian life, reserve yourself an extra income one weekend a month.

Nobody ever called barracks "posh" living, but you can't beat the rent.

Unfortunately, civilian life doesn't offer a quarters allowance to families, either.

So you might be able to use an extra income to put a nice roof over your head.

If so, consider joining your local Army Reserve unit when you get home.

An E-5 with four years' experience now makes over $115 for a single Reserve weekend.

Add in two weeks annual training pay, and the total can easily top $1,922 per year.

Other benefits include PX privileges and low-cost life insurance.

And retirement points toward a pension which begins five years before Social Security.

Wouldn't it be nice to have all that waiting when you get home?

It can be arranged. See your reenlistment NCO or unit commander. Or talk to your in-service recruiter, listed below.

Act fast. Civilian housing gets more expensive every day.

Promotion policy change helps more PFCs make E-4

Commanders can now promote more soldiers with 18 months time-in-grade to E-4 as a result of a recent change in promotion policy.

According to Gloria Kite of enlisted management, not enough soldiers were being promoted to E-4 previously.

The policy change allows a commmander to use all his units' allocations plus more if he promotes soldiers with 18 months time-in-grade. If he chooses to promote those soldiers with less than 18 months time-in-grade, he can only promote as many as his unit is allocated.

If a unit has no E-4 allocations, the commander may promote any soldier with 18 or more months time-in-grade anyway.

This policy change allows units with allocations to exceed their number of allocations and open the door to promotion for many E-3s that were previously locked in grade because there weren't enough allocations in his particular unit.

Post's top drill earns Shuffstall Award

The fifth annual Donald C. Shuffstall Drill Sergeant of the Year Award was presented to SFC James S. Parris, Company A, 2nd Battalion, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade, by retired Colonel Donald C. Shuffstall in a ceremony at the Sand Hill Theater Monday.

The award was initiated at the request of Richard A. Leandri, a prominent Florida businessman and staunch supporter of the United States Army, to honor his long-time friend and associate, Shuffstall. Leandri's support to the Army was publicly recognized during the ceremony.

In his remarks preceding the presentation, Shuffstall said, " . . . It's great to be 'home' again. I like to be around Infantrymen . . . You new infantrymen will learn a lot during the 13 weeks of one station unit training (OSUT), including these six important things: the COURAGE to carry out all assigned tasks; the appreciation of your OUTFIT because it allows you to complete the mission; the fact that being in the Infantry is a MAN'S job; the BASICS so you can find, fix, fight and finish the enemy; the spirit of the ATTACK that will win for you; and the TRAINING that it takes to achieve all the other five.

"Now, take the first letter of these six things and combine them into one word — COMBAT. God willing, you men will never see it, but if you do, I know you will be ready . . .

"The men who train you are the best in the world and I want to present to you the 'Best of the Best,' SFC James Parris." (USAIC PAO)

STAY WHERE THE PROMOTIONS ARE.

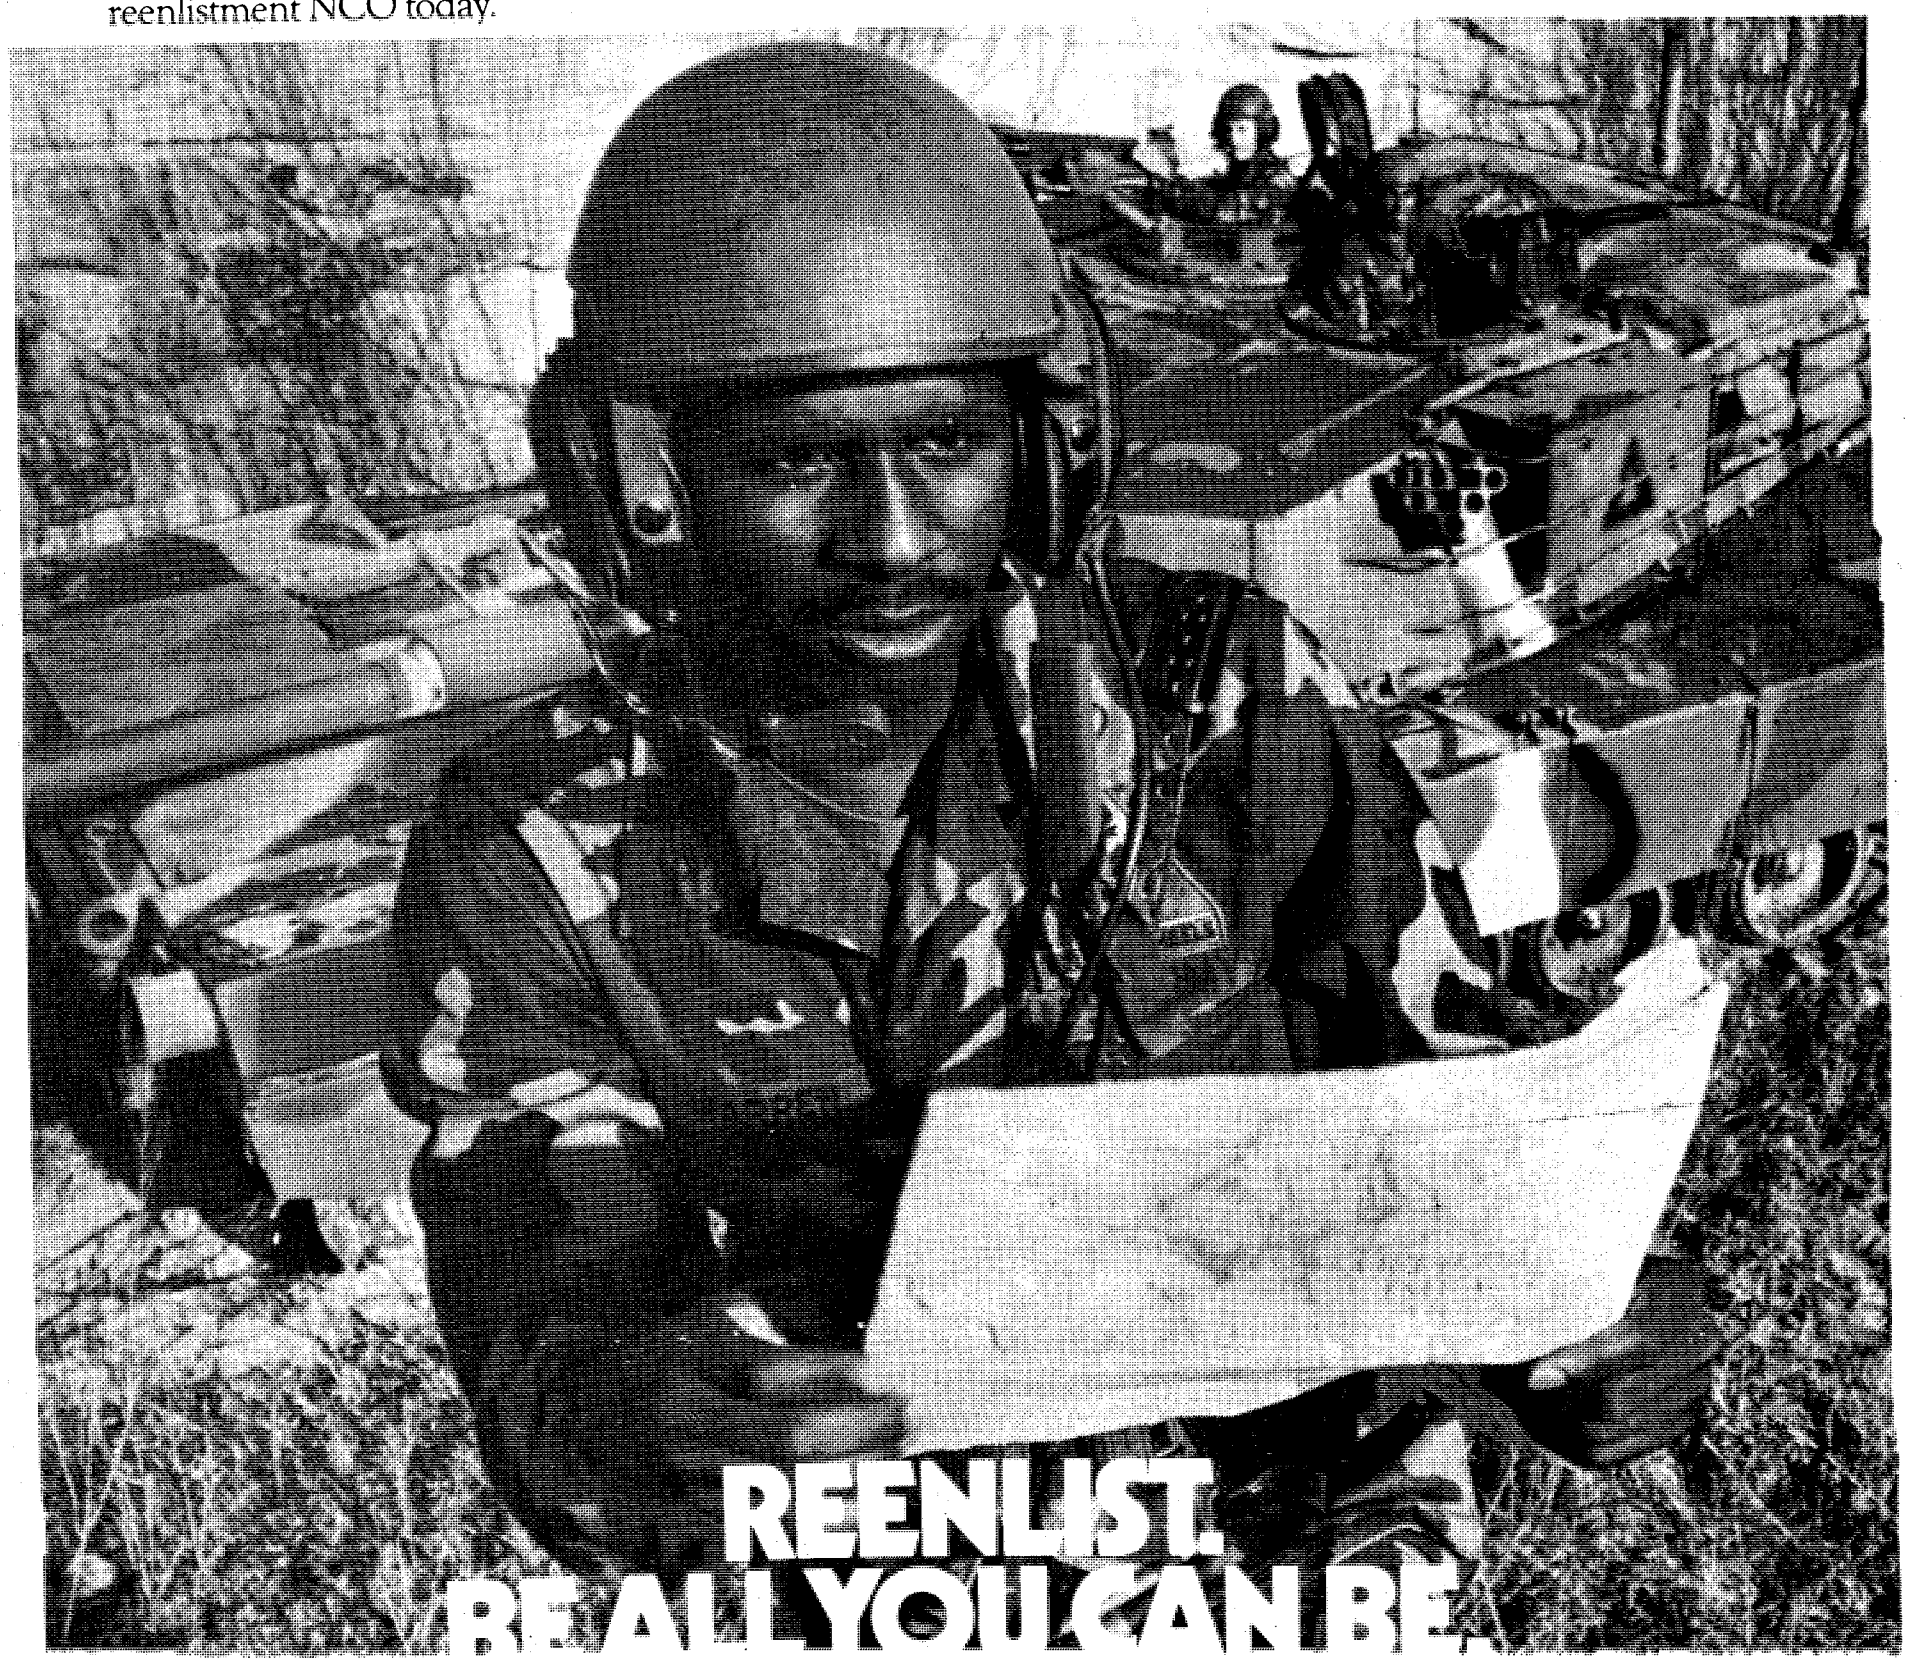
If you're in a shortage MOS and considering a move, think twice. Your best chance for fast promotion could be to stay right where you are.

With the Army's new policy of only promoting E-4s and E-5s in MOSs where vacancies exist, you'll want to study the MOS status roster carefully with your reenlistment NCO.

Right now, some of the best promotion opportunities are in the combat arms. There are more openings there because not everybody can make the team. The physical and mental requirements are tough because that's what it takes to be a leader.

So if you're currently serving with one of the combat arms, you're in the right place at the right time. Your chances for advancement couldn't be better. And if you're in an overstrength MOS and getting itchy, there's no better time to consider switching into the combat arms.

Whatever you decide, we want you to do what's best for you. Because we need you in the Army. See your reenlistment NCO today.



REENLIST.

Pinocchio's nose grows with every lie.

Puppet show coming to CC

The Columbus Junior Women's Club is presenting "Pinocchio" imaginatively performed by the Center for Puppetry Arts of Atlanta with hand-crafted string puppets and featuring actors in the roles of Gepetto and Fire Eater. The show will be at the Columbus College Fine Arts Hall on Tuesday night at 7 and Wednesay afternoon at 1. The tickets are $2. School groups are welcome and special rates are available for them. Call Sheila Wittman at 327-9781 for more information.

Indianhead Terrace news

There will be a pre-teen dance at the life center tomorrow from 5 to 8 p.m. The dance is scheduled to be outside, so if the weather is bad, it will be rescheduled. A concession stand will be set up for the occasion.

Indianhead Terrace will also try to have an Easter Egg Hunt, if enough interest is shown. It will be for children from 1 to 13 on April 21 from 1 to 4 p.m. The center needs donations of hard boiled decorated eggs.

NCOA meeting April 16

The local NCOA will meet Monday at the Sand Hill NCO Club. All potential and current members are invited to attend the 5:30 p.m. gathering. Additional information may be obtained by calling CSM Hollander, 544-1484, or MSgt. Cook, 544-3021.

Thrift shop announces hours

The Fort Benning Thrift Shop, Furniture Barn and Talent Tree are open for sales from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. every Tuesday and Thursday and the first Saturday of each month. There is also a flea market on the month's first Saturday. However, the furniture barn is the only facility that accepts consignments on Saturday. All sales are open to the public.

Talent Tree offers gifts

Did you realized there is a gift shop on post where you can buy handmade items? A large and varied selection of crafts are for sale — children's clothes, Cabbage Patch look-alike dolls, ceramics, oil painting, wreaths, afghans, tole paintings, and more. The Talent Tree is open Tuesday, Thursday and the first Saturday of each month from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Come to buy, browse or consign your crafts.

Post-wide billiards tourney

The 3rd annual post-wide pool championship will be held at the Foxhole Recreation Center on April 21 and 28. It is open to all Fort Benning active duty personnel. Trophies will be awarded to first and second place finishers. For further information, call 544-6079/7122 in the afternoon or evenings.

McGraw Manor fishfry

The adult activities of McGraw Manor Community Life Center will have a fishfry tomorrow at noon. The event will take place at the Log Cabin and fish plates will cost $2 while fish sandwiches will be $1.

If your kids are going to take part in the hunt, please send one dozen colored, hardboiled eggs to the center.

ACS orientation and awards

Army Community Service will conduct an orientation and awards ceremony for all ACS volunteers and anyone interested in becoming a volunteer. It will be held at the NCO Club Thursday from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Reservations for the luncheon portion must be made by today by calling 545-1169/1233.

Parents without Partners

The Parents without Partners (PWP) organization is a world-wide self-help group of single parents who realize the difficulties encountered in bringing up children alone or having to live apart from them. The Fort Benning-Columbus-Phenix City Chapter meets at member's homes and various restaurants. For more information, call the Social Work Service at Martin Army Community Hospital, 545-2766/3212, or call 682-2663 in Columbus.

OWC luncheon, art exhibit

The grounds of Riverside will be the setting for Wednesdays OWC luncheon. The gathering will feature a picnic and an art exhibit. The election of new OWC officers will also take place. Picnickers should bring their own "basket lunch" while drinks and dessert will be provided. No reservations are required.

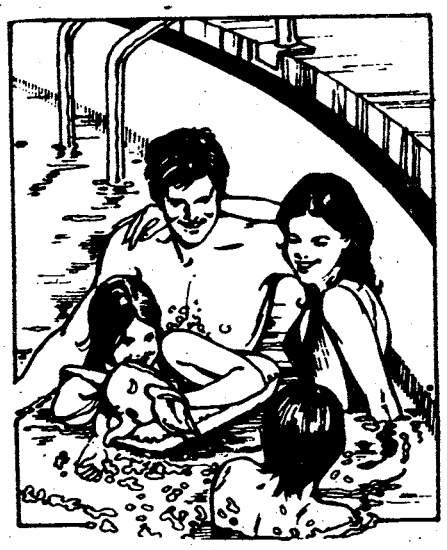
BH/DH flea market

The Bouton Heights/Davis Hill Community Life Center will host a flea market tomorrow from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Roundhouse. Spaces are $3 and a limited number of tables are available for $1. The sales are open to everyone.

Military Engineers to meet

The April meeting of the Society of American Military Engineers will be held Wednesday at the NCO Club. It will begin at 11:30 a.m. with pre-meeting socializing. After lunch, Randy Marshall, founder of Domation, Inc., will speak on the "Many Energy Saving Uses of Urethane Foam." Marshall graduated from Georgia Tech in 1977 with a bachelor of science degree in civil engineering.

Make reservations by noon today by calling 545-2804 or 545-1932. The menu will be either country-fried steak with baked potato, green beans, rolls and butter, or ham hocks and turnips with whole potatoes and corn muffins.



Pool changes hours

The Briant Wells indoor swimming pool has changed it hours of operation. It will be closed for maintenance on Mondays and Tuesdays except for "Swim for Your Life" members from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. On Wednesday through Friday, it is open for these members from 11 to 1 again and then from 1 to 7 p.m., it is open for all swimmers. The Saturday, Sunday and holiday schedule is from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. for all swimmers.

Course helps guardsmen hone their Infantry skills

By Bill Walton
USAIC Public Affairs Office

National Guard class members of the second Infantry Proficiency Skills Development Course (IPSDC) graduated this week at Benning's NCO Academy.

The purpose of the two-week course is to develop skilled Army National Guard (ARNG) 11B, skill level three, non-commissioned officers who can train and lead their subordinates in the proper application of cover, concealment, suppression and team work. In addition, they will be able to give and supervise the execution of necessary orders to enable the Infantry squad to perform its collective mission.

The course program of instruction (POI) was developed by the Infantry School and was modified during both classes by both the active Army and ARNG trainers and instructors.

"We want to update the Infantry skills of our ARNG 11Bs," said CSM Albert Mize, Reserve Components NCO Education Systems coordinator, National Guard Bureau. "Or as someone up the line put it, we want to paint our NCOs "blue" again. These two courses are being used to validate the POI, and we expect to offer it to all ARNG 11Bs in the future, through ARNG channels."

The course is designed to be conducted in a 24-hour-a-day NCO Academy environment. The first portion of the course is devoted to diagnostic testing and training the students in the modified Battalion Training Management System, trainer's workshop and methods of instruction. Subjects covered in the diagnostic tests include, among others M60 machine gun, Dragon, LAW, claymore mines and grenade launchers.

Additionally, refresher training in map reading, land navigation and NBC is also covered during the first phase of instruction.

During the second phase, the students receive extensive training in troop leading procedures and collective tactical training, to include patrolling, offensive and defensive operations, ambushes and raids.

A squad ARTEP is the major subject of the third phase of the course. This is where all the training comes together and the students receive their evaluations.

The majority of the field training was conducted at Wendy Field, in the eastern part of the reservation, and featured use of the multiple integrated laser engagement system (MILES).

"This training is great," said SSgt. William Bartlett, C Company, 2-156 Infantry, Louisiana National Guard, as he sloshed through mud during the platoon-size raid. "The more we can get, the better off we will be, and I for one really appreciate this opportunity. I especially like using the MILES because it makes the training more realistic."

A good cross-section of the ARNG attended the two classes. There were 40 students from 16 states in the first class and 42 students representing six states in the second. In addition, there were four trainers, an operations sergeant and an evaluator, all ARNG, added to the NCO Academy staff for the month it took to operate the IPSDC.

"The ARNG students and trainers are highly motivated and have shown they can adapt to rapid changes," said MSgt. Alberto Brown, chief instructor. "All of us have worked hard on this POI and I believe we have developed a real good course for the ARNG."

'Godspell' tickets on sale

The Fort Benning Community Theatre will present the hit musical, "Godspell," April 20, 21, 27 and 28 at the community theatre located on the corner of Anderson Street and Wold Avenue.

The show time for each date will be 8 p.m.

Tickets are available at the theatre or by calling 545-5057. Ticket cost is $2 for both adults and children.

"Godspell" is a fast moving, colorful account of the life of Christ set to up-tempo soft rock. For more information, call 545-5057.

Astros baseball

The Columbus Astros open a four-game home stand tonight at Golden Park against Chattanooga. The Southern League baseball action starts at 7:30.

Gladys Knight concert

Gladys Knight and the Pips will be performing at the Columbus Municipal Auditorium tomorrow night at 8. For ticket information, call 323-3636.

Jazz festival

The Dizzy Gillespie Quartet will be the guest artist for the annual Columbus College Jazz Festival this weekend in the college's Fine Arts Hall.

The quartet will perform at 8 tonight. As during previous festivals, the guest artist will conduct clinics and share their expertise with aspiring musicians from high schools and colleges in the state.

Preliminary competition for the bands competing in the festival will be at 1 p.m. tomorrow, with the finalist bands returning that evening at 8. Approximately 10 bands are expected to participate in the festival.

Tickets to the quartet's performance are $4. Admission to the Saturday program, including the evening concert, is $2. Full-time students, faculty and staff receive one free ticket to each performance.

For more information, call 568-2055.

Programs to aid handicapped

Two upcoming programs at Columbus College's Elizabeth Bradley Turner Center for Continuing Education will address some of the problems and needs of the handicapped.

"Training Puppeteers for 'Kids on the Block' Program" will be offered today at 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. Participants will learn how to use puppets to teach children to accept handicapped persons in their community.

"Self-Help Techinques for Raising the Handicapped Child" will be presented Wednesday. Participants may attend from 9:30 a.m. to noon or 6:30 to 9 p.m. The focus will be on skills for raising handicapped children and positive ways of dealing with the demands placed on time, material and emotional resources.

Both programs are free and are sponsored by Columbus College and the Mayor's Committee for the Handicapped. For more information, call 568-2023.

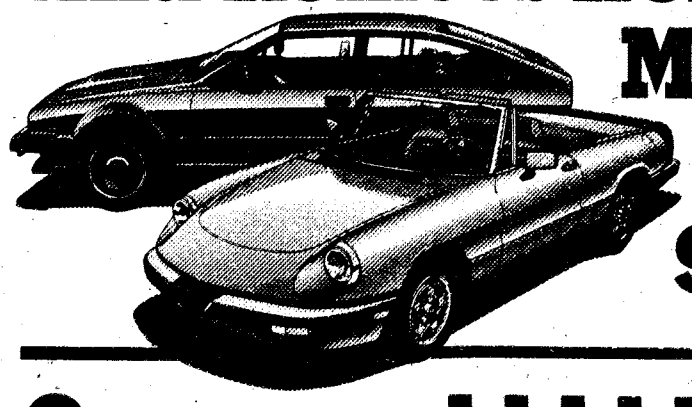
Alfa Romeos from University MotorCars for less than $16,000.



Oooooooohhhhhhhh!

Its classic body shape and genuine Italian leather seats proclaim to the world that it is a true sportscar. The extras like matte dark-gray exterior trim, microprocessor-controlled digital ignition system, 30-second delay automatic interior lighting, new under-floor insulation and more say it's a true Alfa. Also, because Alfa's been thoroughly re-engineered in the last few years, you and your Alfa stay on the road, not in the shop. Right now at University MotorCars, we have an unusually good selection of Alfa GTV-6's and Spider Veloces in all the standard Alfa Colors. Prices are comparable with many American sedans and sports cars of far less prominence. This spring is an excellent time to drive an Alfa Romeo from University MotorCars. And to discover how getting there can be all the fun.

PFC Timothy McKarse of Michigan's 70th Training Division (USAR) pauses outside the commissary to catch up on the news over one of Fort Benning's four new electronic information terminals. The message appears unreadable because of the effects of the lighting on the photograph.

Thunderstorms can be shocking experiences

Thunderstorms build up tremendous electrical charges in the clouds, while on the ground below opposite charges of equal potential gather. When the attraction between these opposite charges is strong enough to overcome the air resistance between them, lightning results. The dual character of lightning — currents of up to one million volts and destructive thermal effects — makes it doubly dangerous.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration has developed the following safety rules to help you avoid the dangers of lightning. Don't wait to apply these rules until you have seen the first stroke of lightning . . . most people are killed or injured during the muggy lull which normally precedes a thunderstorm.

- Stay indoors, and don't go outside unless absolutely necessary.
- Stay away from open doors and windows, fireplaces, radiators, stoves, metal pipes, sinks and plug-in electrical appliances.
- Don't use plug-in electrical equipment like hair dryers, electric toothbrushes or electric razors during a storm.
- Don't use the telephone during a storm — lightning may strike telephone lines outside.
- Don't go outside to take laundry off the clothesline.
- Don't work on fences, telephone or power lines, pipelines or structural steel fabrication.
- Don't use metal objects like fishing rods and golf clubs. Golfers' cleated shoes make particularly good — and therefore deadly — lightning rods.
- Get out of water and off small boats.
- Stay in your automobile if you are traveling. Automobiles offer excellent lightning protection.
- Seek shelter in buildings. If no buildings are available, your best protection is a cave, ditch, canyon or under head-high clumps of trees in open forest glades.
- When you feel your skin tingle or your hair stands on end, drop to the ground immediately

Marshal's viewpoint

Child abuse reaching epidemic proportions

By Curtis D. Earp
Post Provost Marshal

(Editor's note: This is the second part of the provost marshal's series on child abuse.)

There were four reported cases of child abuse on Fort Benning from Jan. 1 to March 29, 1984.

Child abuse is so appalling that many people refuse to believe it exists. That fact may be a major obstacle in preventing and curbing the rapidly rising numbers of physically and sexually abused or neglected cases in this country. These cases number as high as four million a year with up to 4,000 deaths.

Most people don't want to hear that many children are hurt, maimed and even killed by many methods. Some of these are beating, burning, flaying, chaining, starving, drowning or crushing. Others include rape, incest and perversion, deprivation of food, clothes, sanitation, warmth or comfort. Some children are never talked to except to be ridiculed or threatened. Their lives are filled with hopeless terror.

It is simple for those who don't want to know about all this awful business because more than 90 percent of the children bear their horror in their homes and 87 percent of the perpetrators are the child's own parent or guardian. Because offspring are considered to be chattel-property, they are without rights of their own. Thus neighbors think twice before intervening for a child whose screams are heard in the night because a parent can and usually does claim it's none of the Samaritan's business.

So it happens repeatedly; the neighbors say later, if they had only known the child was going to be killed, they would have done more to help.

It is believed that among all children nationwide, under age 6, who are treated for accidents, 10 percent are victims of abuse and another 10 percent may be linked to gross neglect.

Behind nearly every abused child, there lurks a parent who was an abused child. That and other factors are known to contribute to the nation's child abuse syndrome now reaching epidemic proportions.

Meanwhile, once a parent has abused a child, the second offense is easier and the third comes almost naturally. Inconceivable as it may seem, abuse in many homes is virtually a daily ritual. Because sexual abuse is invisible, some children never get help.

There are "hot lines" sponsored by the state Child Welfare Association and Parents Anonymous is for abusers who want to stop. The Department of Children and Youth Services does its best to provide therapy and counseling.

Busch Gardens

Park offers adventure, romance

TAMPA, Fla. — The adventure and romanticism of exotic Africa finds a home at Busch Gardens, The Dark Continent — celebrating its 25th anniversary this year — with its seven distinctly themed African sections complete with wild jungle animals, wilder thrill rides, colorful open-air bazaars and authentic foods.

Picture wild game roaming on an open veldt, tigers wrestling at water's edge, "The African Queen" cruising down the Congo River, and craftsmen at work in the streets of the Moroccan village of Marrakesh. This is the Africa of old which is recreated at Busch Gardens, the most successful family entertainment attraction on Florida's West Coast and one of the nation's top zoos.

Some of the original elements, as the lush gardens, exotic birds and the famed Bird Circus with trained macaws and cockatoos, are still among the most popular park attractions.

ral setting with an appropriate dash of whimsy to produce an African experience rivaled only by the real thing.

There are thrill rides, live shows, animal shows and exhibits, shops, restaurants and games in African settings. Busch Gardens Zoo has a collection of more than 3,000 animals, most of them displayed in natural settings woven into the general theme of the park. The park has won numerous national awards for its breeding and captive management programs.

In 1982, Busch Gardens added two rare white Bengal tigers to its animal collection, becoming one of only seven zoos in the United States to own and display this beautiful animal.

Gardens

From there, Nairobi is the next stop. Youngsters can ride an elephant and see animals that are just their size in the small animal petting area. Nocturnal Mountain gives a unique view of night creatures.

Animal lovers of all ages will be drawn to the park's animal nursery, which provides a close-up look at the newborns who are placed there for special tender loving care by the zoo staff. Last year, more than 1,000 babies were born at Busch Gardens, ranging from chimpanzees to gerenuks to crocodiles.

Big African game — including giraffes, elephants, rhinos, gazelles and antelope — roam the Serengeti Plain, where visitors watch them through the windows of a monorail, steam locomotive or skyride safari.

The towers and walls of Timbuktu, with rides and outdoor crafts exhibits, hover close by. The gates of this ancient desert trading center lead to rides like "Carousel Caravan," with specially created desert camels and Arabian horses, and for the more adventuresome, the "Sandstorm," a whirling thrill ride, and the "Scorpion," a European-inspired coaster which makes a full 360-degree loop. Next to this thriller is the 1,200-seat Festhaus of Timbuktu, featuring German food and "The Bavarian Colony Dancers and Band," a group that performs authentic German folk songs and dances.

Timbuktu is also home to the park's troupe of bottle-nosed dolphins who perform daily in the Dolphin Theater.

Neighboring Activities

In nearby Stanleyville, a bustling African town, Chiquita, a trained chimpanzee, shares top billing with the park's performing elephants in the Stanleyville Variety Show, a mixed bag of fast-paced variety entertainment.

Stanleyville also features a variety of shops with unusual African-inspired crafts and one of the park's more popular rides, "Stanleyville Falls," the longest flume ride in Florida.

More action-packed rides are found in the neighboring Congo section. One of the park's newest additions is the $6 million "Congo River Rapids," the only ride of its kind in Florida. The "Congo River Rapids" gives visitors a real white water experience on free-floating rafts, which splash their way through a lushly landscaped water course re-creating a journey down the treacherous Congo River.

For the stalwart, "The Python" is ranked as one of the most thrilling coaster rides in the South. Traveling at more than 50 mph, it drops 70 feet before making two 360-degree revolutions at G-force speeds.

Nearby are the "Monstrous Mamba," which spins and shakes its riders, and the "Swinging Vines," which whirls any and all would-be Tarzans.

An abundace of activites awaits those still too small to challenge the thrill rides. Children now can experience a mini-motorcycle jump, a boat swing, and a child-sized hang-glider. The centerpiece of the new "Dwarf Village" for youngsters is an elaborate treehouse, surrounded by rides and activities like a "ball crawl," and a "cloud bounce," or giant air mattress.

There are also rides specially designed for adults who prefer a slower pace, such as "The African Queen" boat cruise, which provides a leisurely trip through jungle wilderness.

The Anheuser-Busch complex in Tampa also includes self-guided tours of the Tampa brewery, in can sample Anheuser-Busch products.

Located at 3000 Busch Boulevard, two miles east of Interstate 275, Busch Gardens is open daily from 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m., except summer, and selected holidays, when hours are extended. The single admission price of $13.50 includes all rides, shows and attractions. Children 2 years and under are admitted free.

Adventure Island, a separate water theme park also operated by Busch Entertainment Corporation, is located next to Busch Gardens. Open seasonally from April through October, Adventure Island features five water flumes, a giant new speed slide, diving cliffs, a wave pool, beaches, picnic facilities and a special water play area for small children.

Take time to complete medical consent forms

Recently a 5-year-old child suffering from acute asthma was brought into a military hospital by a neighbor.

The child's mother and father, both active duty service members, were away on TDY. They had left no forwarding addresses and no telephone numbers. The neighbor had no power of attorney to authorize the child's treatment, and the child's medical history was unknown.

When these circumstances collide in the absence of military parents, unnecessary burdens are put on medical authorities and the child may have to suffer longer than otherwise necessary.

Legally, at least one parent or guardian must consent to the medical treatment of a dependent minor. Only in an emergency is there an exception. Yet, even in an emergency, the military physician will try to contact the parent or guardian to obtain consent if possible before treating the child.

When your child is left with any person other than a parent or guardian, taking the following steps before you leave assures that the child can get medical care if necessary:

- Give the person caring for your child a valid power of attorney (consent authority) for the child's health care needs for the time you will be gone. Even grandparents have no legal authority to give consent on their own. Martin Army Community Hospital's patient affairs office has forms prepared for this purpose.
- Leave phone number(s) and address(es) where you can be reached with the person caring for your child.
- Let the person caring for your child know if the child has any special medical problems and where his or her medical records are kept.

These are not actions needed only when small children are actively cared for by others during parents' absences. They are also needed when older teenagers remain at home alone while parents are away.

You may feel that your 14- or 15-year-old is quite responsible enough to remain at home while both parents are away, and thus might not think of parental consent being needed for medical treatment should he or she become ill or be involved in an accident.

But such consent would be needed if the child is under legal age and your dependent. So, even though that teenager is quite reliable and self-sufficient, take the time to draw up the consent form and leave it and your phone number and address while away, along with notations of any special medical problems and the location of medical records, with a neighbor, friend or co-worker who will be in touch with the teenager during your absence.

Soldier earns Ranger School's top award

By Connie McReynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

A soldier earns the right to be called a Ranger. PFC Paul G. Reed earned that right and was also awarded the Ranger School's highest award.

Reed, a distinguished honor graduate of Class 5-84, received the prestigious William O. Darby Award during the class graduation last week.

The award is sponsored by the Ranger Battalions Association of World War II. It is given to the soldier who has shown outstanding ability and leadership skills. Although it is given to a soldier showing special skills, it is not awarded every cycle.

Reed obtained the highest scores possible the first time he took any of the required tests.

Guest speaker for the graduation ceremony was Lt. Col. Wesley B. Taylor Jr., commander of the 1st Battalion Ranger, 75th Infantry, Fort Stewart, Ga. Taylor led the Rangers into Grenada during the U.S.-Carribean nations' military invasion of that island last fall. Reed also served in Grenada as a rifleman.

VA Q and A

(Editor's note: Following are representative questions answered daily by VA counselors. Full information is available at any VA office.)

Q — Is there a minimum amount of time that a person must serve in the military to qualify for VA benefits?

A — Generally yes. Persons who enlisted the first time on or after Sept. 8, 1980, must complete at least two years of continuous active duty or the full period for which the person was called to active duty, to qualify for VA benefits. For officers, the two-year requirement applies on or after Oct. 17, 1981. For veterans who enlisted prior to Sept. 8, 1980, the time limit usually depends on the benefit. Exceptions are made for veterans discharged because of a service-connected disability.

Q — What are the eligibility requirements for receipt of VA compensation benefits?

A — To be eligible to receive compensation, a veteran must have a disability which was incurred in or aggravated by military service, and rated as being 10 percent or more by the VA. The veteran must also have a discharge other than dishonorable.

Q — What are the requirements for pension benefits?

A — To be entitled to pension benefits, a veteran must have had at least 90 days of wartime service, be cosidered as permanently and totally disabled and incapable of engaging in substantially gainful employment, and have income which falls below specified income limitations.

67th Maint. dining facility chosen Fort Benning's best

By Connie McReynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 67th Maintenance Battalion, 36th Engineer Group, has been awarded the Fort Benning Dining Facility of the Year in the large facility category. They beat out two other post facilities.

The award was given last Friday in a ceremony at the dining facility. The competition was held among past Dining Facility of the Quarter winners.

"This is the first time we've taken the award for the year," SFC Clarence Burch, assistant mess sergeant, said. "We've taken the dining facility of the quarter before and we're very happy about this award."

The dining facility serves an average of 625 people per day, Burch said. There are 22 assigned military members, working two split-shifts, to care for those that eat at the facility.

Unannounced inspections were made at the facilities by teams from the post food service branch of the Directorate of Industrial Operations. "We were inspected on sanitation, administration and food preparation. We had no idea when the team would be coming over, so we had to always be prepared. We always make sure our people do the job right," Burch said.

The staff of the facility were all smiles about the award, but Pvt. 2 Clarence McCall summed up his feelings like this. "This is my first assignment. I've been here three months. I feel great. It makes me feel good and makes me want to do my best."

DPDO to hold spot bid sale

The Defense Property Disposal Office-Benning, has announced a local spot bid sale will be held April 26.

Bidder registration begins at 7:45 a.m. with the sale commencing at 9 a.m. at the property disposal office, building 467. The general public is invited to attend.

The items offered for sale may be inspected starting Thursday and daily thereafter, on normal workdays, between the hours of 8 a.m. and 3 p.m. Children under the age of 13 years old will not be allowed in the inspection area during this period.

A complete list of items, along with terms and conditions of the sale, will be available at building 467.

Items include typewriters (electric and manual), electrical and electronic equipment, individual clothing and equipment, vehicular parts, household furnishings, vending machines (cold beverage), ranges, lawn care equipment, kitchen equipment, one 1972 motorcycle (Suzuki); one wrecked cargo truck and 24 abandoned vehicles.

Visitors should park their vehicles outside the DPDO facility during the inspection period and also on the day of the sale. (USAIC PAO)

'Boomerang' has rich history

By Bill C. Walton
USAIC Public Affairs Office

If the airplane on Eubanks Field could talk, she (aircrafts are always of the female gender) could tell some travel stories of her trips to the far north and foreign countries.

The C47A airplane, serial numer 42-93790, is masquerading as the "Boston Boomerang," a WWII Pathfinder aircraft.

While talking, she could also tell of several changes of "uniform" that she has undergone in her 40-year life span.

Built by Douglas Aircraft in Oklahoma City, she was delivered to the U.S. Army Air Corps on June 27, 1944, according to records furnished by the Albert F. Simpson Historical Research Center, Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala. As most wartime aircraft were painted olive drab, it can be assumed that 790 was that color. Her first assignment was to the 4095th Base Unit at Robins Field, Ga., where she remained until April 1946.

Over the next five years, 790 was flown by various Air Force units in Arizona, California, Alabama and New York. Her color changed from olive drab to silver and she switched services, from the Army Air Corps to the U.S. Air Force. In April 1951, she arrived at Elmendorf AFB, Alaska, and served in several units in that part of the world for seven years. One of these was the 5064th Cold Weather Material Testing Squadron.

In the spring of 1958, 790 migrated south and joined the Air National Guard in Toledo, Ohio. This was when the partnership of 790 and MSgt. Joe Rudd, who would be her flight engineer for the next 12 years began.

"When I took over 790, she still had spray nozzles from spraying mosquitos in Alaska attached to her wings," said Rudd, who retired in 1983 and lives in Bowling Green, Ohio. "We removed the nozzles and cleaned up the aircraft, but I never could get her to shine the way I wanted. I had been warned about that by the crew that flew her from Alaska. They told me she had been flown through volcanic smoke and ash several times and it had affected the aircraft's exterior.

"This same crew also told me something that probably doesn't appear on her historical records," continued Rudd. "While she was in Alaska, she was loaned to Russia and spent a period flying in that country."

"When I took over 790, she still had spray nozzles from spraying mosquitos in Alaska attached to her wings."

The aircraft carried cargo and passengers while Rudd was her flight engineer. "I flew in the aircraft for about 2,800 hours and like most C47s, she was completely reliable," he said. "We never had any major maintenance problems."

The Governor of Ohio and the Ohio State Adjutant General were among the many passengers who flew on 790. The only documented parachute jumps from 790 were made by the Army parachute team, the Golden Knights, who made several jumps over Cleveland in 1968, according to Rudd.

After 26 years of active duty, the decision to retire 790 was made in 1970. Fort Benning had requested a C47A for the National Infantry Museum and 790 was selected.

The aircraft, with Rudd among the crew, was flown to Fort Benning in March 1970 and rejoined the Army. "I was sorry to see her leave the Air Guard," remembered Rudd. "But I was happy that she was going to be a display aircraft for a museum rather than taken to the "boneyard" in Arizona and sold as scrap."

Sometime between her arrival on post and February 1971, she was painted olive drab and named "Boston Bommerang" after a WWII Pathfinder C47 that is pictured in McCarthy Hall, the Fort Benning airborne jump committee briefing hall.

She stood behind McCarthy Hall until June 1975, when it was decided to move her to a more visible location. A CH54A helicopter, of the 478th Aviation Company (HH), 34th Medical Battalion, capable of carrying 10 tons, picked up 790 and transported her to Eubanks Field behind Infantry Hall.

The crew board the C47A aircraft at the Toledo Express Airport for her last flight to Fort Benning in 1970.

Friday the 13th fraught with grim, tragic past

Quick, now, what comes after the number 12?

Fourteen, you say?

Never mind the sheepish grin; you have plenty of company!

Fraught with a grim, tragic background, 13 is irredeemably linked to the occult and, in the minds of many, to evil.

The most readily identifiable clue to the fear of the number 13 is the fact there were 13 people present at the Last Supper . . . 12 disciples and Jesus. It was, of course, from that fateful gathering that Judas arose, leaving early, and went forth to betray Christ.

Ever since that time, in many countries of the ancient world and on into our own age, a host, discovering that through some miscalculation there were 13 people gathered at his home for dinner, might be expected to search frantically for a 14th guest . . . even a total stranger . . . to break the spell of the evil number. Or, that failing, in many cases one of the invited guests would usually be gracious enough to leave the party. For, had nothing been done to change the number, legend goes, and had 13 people sat down to dinner, the first to leave (recalling the role, of Judas) would have met dire misfortune, even death, within one year.

Not that 13 is universally unpopular. It is, in fact, a favorite number of occultists, which no doubt explains its unpopularity in other areas.

There are always 13 witches in a coven . . . never does the number vary. The initiation sequence into a number of occult secret societies, ancient and modern, numbers 13 distinct steps of trial and enlightenment, with the final degree symbolizing attainment of the highest order of power and knowledge being reserved for those who persevere through (or survive) the first 12 steps.

Certain reprehensive rites of black magic involve the sticking of 13 pins (or thorns) into strategic spots of a doll's anatomy.

There are always 13 "celebrants" at a Black mass.

The 13th card in the mystical Tarot deck is the Death card; a black-shrouded skeleton swinging a scythe, mowing a crop of human heads.

Even today, many office buildings, apartment complexes and hospitals have no 13th floor.

On many airliners around the world, there is no seat #13.

Had enough?

But tht's only the half of it! Today we're talking about the convergence of triskaidekaphobia with another traditional superstition: fear of Friday.

Friday gets its name from the Old Norse Goddess Freyja, wife of Wotan, the Norse God-Father, for whom Wednesday is named. Legend tells us she was a real humdinger, who kept Wotan on his toes.

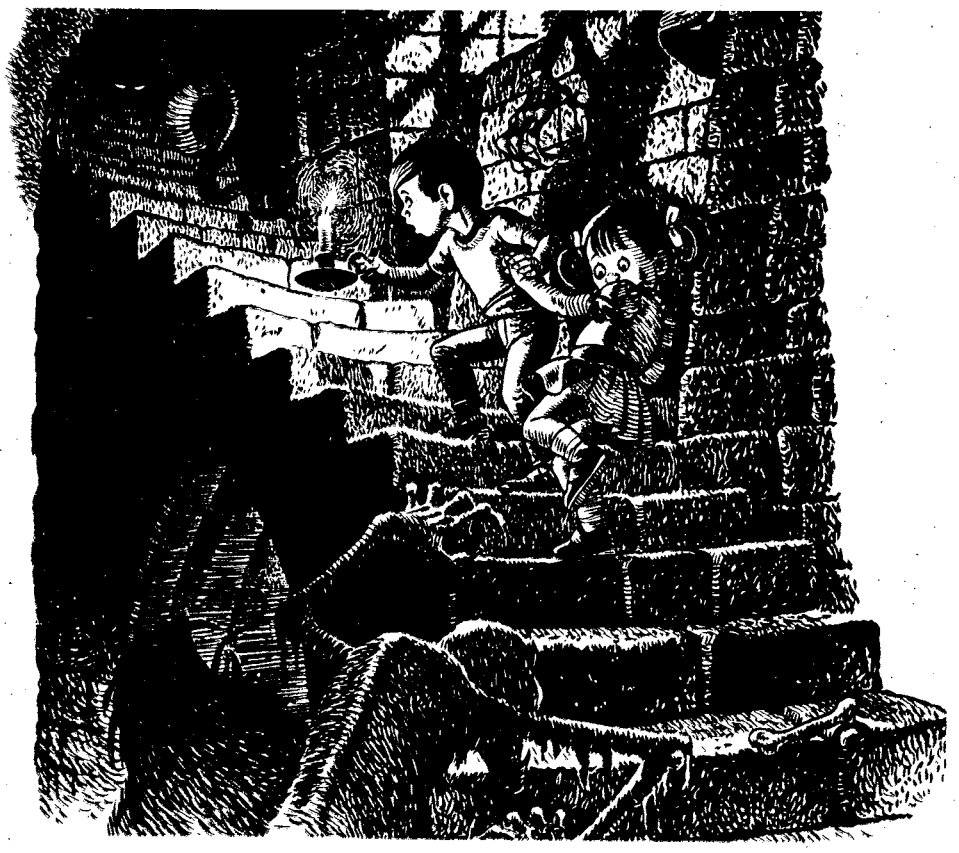
According to Biblical lore, Eve's temptation of Adam occurred on a Friday. Other disasters attributed to that day are the fall of Solomon's Temple and the death of King Arthur at the hands of his arch-enemy, Mordred.

More recently, Abraham Lincoln was assassinated on Good Friday, 1865.

Good Friday, of course, is a day of solemn penance throughout the Christian world, commemorating the Crucifixion.

Many people still hesitate to embark on a long journey or to begin a new project on a Friday, and in some of the rural areas of Europe and the Balkans, housewives refuse to do their washing on a Friday for fear of bringing down a curse on their household.

Despite the growing "T.G.I.F." syndrome, which is, after all, a comparatively recent development in the Western world, Friday is still a day regarded with fear and suspicion by many.



Now then, combine these two superstitions, and what have you got?

FRIDAY THE 13TH

So cross your fingers, don't spill the salt, give all black cats a wide berth, stay away from ladders, and be very gentle with mirrors.

Don't forget your rabbit's foot or other lucky charm, remember to knock three times on wood (plastic doesn't count) and if you're really uptight, you can put your underwear on inside out. That ought to do it!

And when you wake up safe and sound tomorrow morning, congratulate yourself, because there won't be another Friday the 13th until July

Good Luck!

Food

Dried fruit makes pork roast an extra special family treat

Dried fruit, naturally sweet and nutritious, is among the fastest-growing products in the supermarket today. Dried fruit is what makes Danish pork roast a special meal for family and friends.

Pitted prunes and evaporated apples are layered inside a rolled pork roast, offering an unusual contrast to the tender meat. A savory sauce based on chicken broth and flavored with wine accompanies the roast at the table.

When served with a crisp salad and a side dish such as rice or potatoes, Danish pork roast offers an easy, complete meal highlighted by the goodness of dried fruit.

Danish pork roast

¾ cup pitted prunes
¾ cup evaporated apples
1 cup boiling water
4 to 5 pound boneless rolled pork loin roast
3 tablespoons flour
¾ cup milk
¾ cup chicken broth
1 teaspoon bottled browning sauce
¼ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon dry sherry or white wine

Cover prunes and apples with water; let stand 30 minutes. Drain; pat dry. Unroll roast. Layer prunes and apples on inside, along length of roast. Roll roast and tie. Place in shallow roasting pan, fat side up. Bake at 325 degrees Fahrenheit, about 1½ hours, or until meat thermometer inserted in center registers 170 degree Fahrenheit. Skim 3 tablespoons fat from pan drippings; place in medium saucepan. Blend in flour. Cook over low heat until bubbly. Stir in milk, broth, browning sauce and salt. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until sauce boils. Stir in sherry; simmer 1 minute. Serve sauce with pork roast.

8 to 10 servings. (AFPS)

Little things add special touch to meal, dish

By Donna Higgins
Del Monte Kitchens

All cooks have their own "secrets to success" in the kitchen. Often it's the little things a cook does that add the special touch to a meal or individual dish.

The truth is, you don't have to be a professional chef to take advantage of special "tricks of the trade." Here are some suggestions to help at-home cooks improve their own techniques.

Storing fruits and vegetables

- Ripening of bananas can be slowed by placing them in the refrigerator. The skin will turn brown, but the fruit will keep longer. It's better than letting the bananas get overripe.
- To prevent browning of sliced bananas, apples or pears, sprinkle them with pineapple juice. Lemon juice will work just as well if you like its tangy flavor.
- A paper sack is a versatile container for storing foods. A paper bag will extend the life of mushrooms and accelerate the ripening of avocados, bananas and pears.
- If celery loses crispness, place in a pan of cold water along with a raw potato, and refrigerate for a few hours.

Shortcuts

- When cooking chicken, bake or broil extra pieces. These can then be used for chicken stir-fries, chicken tacos and chicken enchiladas. Plan your leftovers several meals ahead.
- Keep a couple packages of frozen egg rolls in the freezer for instant delicious appetizers or hot snacks for unexpected company. Serve with hot Chinese mustard or dip in honey.
- To get more juice out of a lemon, warm it in a microwave oven for a few seconds, or drop it briefly in boiling water, before squeezing.

Cook's rules

- Make certain your kitchen equipment is properly maintained. The oven temperature should be checked regularly for accuracy. Refrigerator coils should be vacuumed periodically.
- Set out all your required ingredients and necessary utensils before you start to make a recipe.
- When trying a new recipe for the first time, don't improvise, use exact measurements.
- Evaluate results. Ask family members for opinions. If someone says a certain dish isn't as good as usual, there's usually a reason. Cooking time might have been shortened, or a special ingredient might have inadvertently been left out.
- Relax and enjoy cooking. Don't put restrictions on yourself, such as "I can't do it because I've never tried."

Adding natural raisins takes routine out of ho hum recipes

Making routine recipes special often means only adding a new ingredient.

"Fruit, for example, can be added to almost any meal plan to provide color, texture and added nutrients," says Donna Higgins, manager of consumer services for Del Monte Corp. "A spinach salad takes on an interesting new flavor when raisins are added, accompanied by a Parmesan dressing.

"Both can be prepared simply for a fresh, homemade taste."

Spinach raisin salad

1 bunch fresh spinach
¼ pound fresh mushrooms, sliced
¾ cup natural raisins
6 slices crispy cooked bacon, crumbled
½ red onion, sliced
Parmesan Dressing

Wash and tear spinach into bite-size pieces. In large salad bowl, combine spinach, mushrooms, raisins, bacon and onion. Just before serving, toss with Parmesan Dressing.

4 to 6 servings.

Parmesan dressing

⅔ cup oil
⅓ cup white wine vinegar
3 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
1 teaspoon basil
1 clove garlic, minced
Dash salt
Dash pepper

Combine ingredients in jar with tight fitting lid. Cover and shake well.

Approximately 1 cup.

Is this the "perfect" biscuit?

When we asked folks in a recent survey to describe the "perfect" biscuit, a lot of them used our name! Of course, they also used words like "homemade, light, flaky, and golden-brown." We'd lay claim to those, too. Because we not only use the finest and freshest ingredients available (including real buttermilk), but we also put a lot of training and practice into baking our biscuits. Try 'em. You'd expect us to say they're perfect. But we'd rather hear you say it.

Here are three good reasons to try it, so you can tell us.

Blue Thunder 3.....Tigers 0

Blue Thunder goalie Daniel Beigun, halfbacks, David Eberly, Bucky Baty and fullback Daniel Coyle, handled the defense against the Tigers allowing no scores. Rodney Etheridge came up with two points and James Booth with one for a total of three and the win.

Eagles 1.....Cheetahs 0

The Eagles came up with their first win of the season when Adam Conard booted one in. John Cardin, Barbara Detwiler and Chris Porter held back the Cheetah offensive drive for a 1-0 victory.

Termites

Eagles 7.....Strikers 1

Eagles, Andy Nix with three points, Frank Brewster with two points, and Sam Lucas and Shane Jordan with one point each, all broke through the Striker defense to find their mark. Stacie Stafford, Charlie Holloway and Catherine Stillwell allowed only one Striker goal for the 7-1 Eagle win.

Tigers 9.....Strikers 0

The Tigers roared away with a 9-0 victory over the Strikers. Mike Hitchcock and Anthony Smith each had two points. Jason Smith, David Sorrell, Paul Feyereisen, Matt Sauer and Thurston Mumford all came in with one point each. John Hughes and Vanessa Marinari led the Tiger defense to hold the Strikers scoreless.

Juniors

Strikers 4..... Warriors #2 1

The Strikers maintained their number one slot in league standings by defeating the Warriors #2 by a score of 4-1. Jeffery Elliot scored two points. Michael Parker and Gregg Sharr came in with two more for the win. Dawn Quimby, Christian Sandoval and Matt Schumacher held the Warror team to only one point.

Warriors #1 7..... Bayonets 0

Warrior offensive captain Dennis Lane had a hat trick and a pair against the Bayonets. Teammate Billy Boess had two points and one assist. Orest Lebedovych and Chris Sutcliff had one assist each and Derrick Orlando was credited with two assists to secure the game. Defensive captain Kim Joiner led fellow Warriors' Brian Taylor, Jay Nelson, Charlie Neer, Steve Davis, Ami Davenport and Andrew Collum to hold the Bayonets scoreless.

Briefs

Sunrise service
There will be an ecumenical sunrise service for the entire Fort Benning community on Easter Sunday at 6:30 a.m. at the Field of Four Chaplains. The speaker will be Dr. Charles J. Granade, director of missions, Columbus Baptist Association.

Savings Bonds
The 1984 U.S. Army Savings Bond Kick-Off Rally will be held in Marshall Auditorium, Tuesday at 10 a.m. Commanders, directors, applicable staff officers, project officers and canvassers should attend.

Secretaries Week
The week of April 23-27 has been designated National Secretaries Week. Fort Benning salutes its many secretaries and their substantial contributions to the Infantry Center's mission.

Armed Forces Day
Fort Benning will observe Armed Forces Day on May 19th. The many activities planned for this year's celebration will be featured soon in the BAYONET. Tickets will be available through unit representatives early next week.

Suggestion campaign
Fort Benning's suggestion campaign is underway now through May 15. The TRADOC-wide campaign's slogan this year is "Excellence Starts With Your Ideas-Suggest."

Maxine Wing, post suggestion coordinator, said the post is looking for suggestions that "will save money and stamp out fraud, waste and abuse."

For more information you can call Wing at 545-4483 or drop off suggestions at her office in room 129, building 35.

Is your family enrolled in DEERS?

By Bill Reynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

More than 2½ million servicemembers whose family members are not listed in the Defense Eligibility and Enrollment Reporting System (DEERS) may soon find themselves presented with medical bills whenever their families need medical treatment.

Recent policy changes in DEERS make it necessary for servicemembers to ensure their family members are eligible for medical treatment.

DEERS is a computerized roster listing basic information on everyone eligible for military benefits. The computer listing is available at most military hospitals and the 47 military personnel centers around the country.

After July, families not enrolled in DEERS will lose their eligibility for CHAMPUS payments under the new policy. According to DoD officials, those families not recorded in the DEERS computers may be faced with medical bills whenever they receive treatment at local civilian hospitals.

The change also denies the use of military hospitals, for non-emergency care, after October 1, if the family member is not enrolled in DEERS.

Military hospitals will not deny emergency care, but may send the family a bill for any treatment received.

Persons rejected for CHAMPUS payments or in-service care would regain their eligibility once they are enrolled in DEERS.

The policy would not affect active-duty or retired members, who are automaticaly enrolled in DEERS. However, families of servicemembers are not automatically enrolled in the program.

According to Fort Benning DEERS enrollment project officer, Glenda Hall, some service members think their children are automatically enrolled in the program if they are born in military hospitals. She says enrollment in the DEERS computer has to be done at the servicemember's local ID card center.

Theater players efforts often go unappreciated

Robert McClain

If the past is any indication, the efforts of some very talented soldiers and family members may be appreciated by only a few select people. That's too bad for Fort Benning.

The Post Community Theater, located on the corner of Anderson Street and Wold Avenue, has put on many good productions in the past year, but few people have been in attendance.

The situation is a frustrating one for the cast and crew. Play director Abby Duncan knows that frustration well. "I know there are soldiers and family members at Fort Benning just sitting at home doing nothing but watching television when they could be in our audience" she commented.

"The production casts are made up of post soldiers and family members. They work long hours, in addition to their regular duties, to put on a production. I feel so frustrated when only a few people come to appreciate their efforts."

Duncan estimates that during an average performance only 20 to 50 percent of the 322-seat theater is full.

Members of the cast also share the frustration. "I ask people if they are going to attend the theater production and I get answers like 'Fort Benning has a theater?' stated PFC Tonda M. Mott.

Mott is a TASC photographer and is in the theater's up-coming production of "Godspell." She thinks a greater number of people would attend if the productions were more publicized.

"I know more people would be in the audience if they just knew they were going on," she added.

Duncan also feels more publicity would help boost attendance. "Commanders really should inform their soldiers that Fort Benning has more to offer than bowling alleys, craft shops and gyms," she said. "Fort Benning has a theater too."

The theater will present the hit musical, "Godspell," beginning tonight at 8 p.m. More information about the play can be found on page 20.

The productions aren't quite Broadway, but they are good entertainment at very reasonable prices. So if you enjoy theater, make it a point to attend.

Lyle Diedrichs

The cast of the musical "Godspell."

CG's message

In recognition of the contributions made by American Theatre participants to the Army Morale Support Program, I, Major General John W. Foss, commanding general of the United States Army Infantry Center, do hereby proclaim April as "American Theatre Month" at Fort Benning, Georgia. I further encourage all personnel at this installation to participate in the Morale Support's, Music & Theatre Section's scheduled activities throughout the month.

April is designated annually as "American Theatre Month" in recognition of performers, directors, designers, playwrights and others associated with the performing arts. The Army Theatre Arts Association, a member of the American Theatre Association, has been recognized as the largest producer of dramatic/musical theatre worldwide. Military personnel and their family members, through participation in this program, have enhanced their quality of life by developing self-assurance, confidence and communication skills.

JOHN W. FOSS
Major General, USA
Commanding

Various voices

Why do you think so few soldiers attend post community theater productions?

PFC Rita Wojciechowski, 15th Finance Company —"Most soldiers I know probably don't know the theater exists. I think many would attend the theater's performances if they knew in advance

SSgt Charles R. Knight, HHC, 197th Infantry Brigade —"I believe few soldiers attend because the plays are not advertised enough. Also many soldiers aren't really "into" cultural activities like the theater productions. I think if things like music festivals and concerts were offered, more soldiers would at-

Say special thanks to Girl Scout leaders

Girl Scout Leader's Day April 23, 1984

Anyone can be a Girl Scout leader. Anyone, that is, who is patient, fun-loving, understanding, enduring, inspirational, cooperative, sympathetic, creative, fair, organized, caring and who can find tremendous personal satisfaction and growth in helping young girls seek wonder and fulfillment in their lives.

Yes ma'am — and sir — we guess you could say that Girl Scout leaders are a very, very special kind of people.

Girl Scouts certainly think so. That's why they honor their leaders on Girl Scout Leader's Day and cherish the involvement of the concerned women and men who give freely of their time to make a difference in girls' lives.

Today's Girl Scout leaders are highly-motivated and specially-trained individuals who find they get as much out of Girl Scouting as they give, whether it's accompanying Brownie Girl Scouts on their first camping trip or helping a Senior Girl Scout decide on a career.

If you know a Girl Scout leader, today is her — or his — day. Please take a moment to say thanks.

And, if you are a Girl Scout leader, our caps are off to you. Enjoy your day!

(Concharty Council of Girl Scouts)

Benning Girl Scouts honor their leaders next week

Girls and adults throughout Fort Benning will join a nationwide celebration on April 23 honoring Girl Scout leaders for their important work on behalf of girls and young women in their communities.

This is the third annual salute to Girl Scout leaders, which is traditionally celebrated on April 22. This year it will be celebrated on Monday because of the Easter holiday. Girl Scouts, their families and supporters will spend the day showing appreciation for the women and men who carry out the diverse responsibilities of Girl Scout leaders.

In a letter of appreciation to volunteer leaders across the country, Girl Scout National President Mrs. Orville L. Freeman said, "How lucky our young Girl Scouts are to have creative, gifted troop leaders like you to guide them to the new worlds they can find in Girl Scouting . . . Nothing gives me more joy than joining with all our sisters in Girl Scouting to salute you on this, your special day."

533rd Transportation Company receives Army excellence award

By Connie McReynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Command Sergeant Major Harold Barker, CSM of Forces Command, presented the 533rd Transportation Company with the Chief of Staff's Maintenance of Excellence Award last Thursday at the end of the company's annual ARTEP.

The company represented FORSCOM during the Army-wide competition. It won that right by edging out 16 active Army and three Reserve transportaton companies in the FORSCOM competition. The 533rd won in the Intermediate Category.

The company has made a 360-degree turn around from where it was in June 1981, according to CWO4 Clayton McClanahan, maintenance supervisor.

In an earlier BAYONET article, January 13, he described how he and maintenance NCO, SSgt. Monroe Sapp, trained the mechanics, cleaned up the facility and improved morale.

The 533rd received outstanding ratings on annual IG inspections and no-notice rollouts. The company was also tasked by the commanding general at that time, Maj. Gen. Sam Wetzel, to brief other commanders on setting up post motor pools like theirs.

The 533rd spends many hours in the field, training to see if they are combat ready. SFC Mance Setser, truck master, said the company has just gotten back from a week of training which included moving the company's 55 tractors and 108 trailers in convoys.

Last week they held their annual ARTEP and besides moving their vehicles on convoys, they were gassed while moving and were required to perform other tasks. "All the drivers have done well and I know they are tired," Setser said.

According to Maj. Kenneth Adkins, senior evaluator for the ARTEP, the company received a satisfactory on all 156 tasks they were required to perform. There were 16 evaluators testing the company.

Adkins, of the Directorate of Industrial Operations, said, "The 533rd has done an excellent job. It is an extraordinary unit and makes me proud to be a transportation officer."

As a reward for a job well done, Lt. Col. M. T. Tomlinson, 67th Maintenance Battalion commander, cut short the ARTEP one day, ending it on Thursday. "We wanted to see how well you operate under stress and you did well," he told the company.

"The people in this company care, the soldiers, NCOs and officers. They care about their equipment and maintain it in a high state of readiness throughout the calendar year," Barker told the company during the presentation of the award.

"It takes a team effort and the 533rd has certainly proved it is a team."

Army takes care of its own through AER

By Betty Zimmerman
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Army has taken care of its own through Army Emergency Relief (AER) for more than 42 years.

The Army Emergency Relief program was established to help the Army fulfill its commitment to meet the basic needs of those who serve in the Army. AER has helped maintain this important tradition by giving assistance to Army people in time of distress and misfortune.

The money used to fund AER loans and grants comes from contributions collected during the annual AER campaign. Fort Benning's fund drive began March 30 and runs through May 15, announced 1st Lt. Jerry M. Tindall, post AER officer.

The Chief of Staff, U.S. Army, General John A. Wickham Jr., explained AER best when he wrote, "AER is your organization. It belongs to all Army people. AER's capability to make available the required funds to help the Army take care of its own depends on the continued support of all Army people, active and retired. The need for AER assistance has increased significantly in recent years. The more than $21,200,000 in AER assistance provided in 1983 to more than 62,100 Army people, active and retired and their family members, was the highest amount ever in one year and more than four times the amount in 1976."

Fort Benning collected $186,263 in 1983 and provided $198,803 in grants and loans to 806 Benning servicemembers, noted Tindall. Some of the situations that brought about AER help were valid emergency needs for items such as food, rent, required travel, utilities, medical bills, funeral expenses and essential needs when pay was not received or funds were lost.

Army Emergency Relief provides interest-free loans and sometimes grants for these needs. They also give educational assistance for undergraduate study by children of Army people.

"It is the only organization dedicated solely to helping the Army care for its own," according to Tindall. "It serves all Army people, active and retired and their family members, and orphans and spouses of deceased Army members," he added.

Each unit and/or directorate has been assigned key personnel to accept tax-free contributions from their people. Support your AER, your contribution is needed to help Army people.

Retired General Mark W. Clark dies at 87

U.S. Army

General Mark Clark speaks with Brig. Gen. Levan C. Allen, then commandant of the Infantry School, during a visit in 1942.

Was frequent Fort Benning visitor

Famed Army commander Gen. Mark W. Clark died Sunday at the hospital of the Medical University of South Carolina in Charleston. Hospital spokesman Charles Gudaitis said that Clark's death was cancer related. Clark would have been 88 on May 1.

Following his graduation from the U.S. Military Academy in 1917, Clark was commissioned in the Infantry and began a 36-year career that included combat service in both world wars and the Korean Conflict. His 5th Army captured Rome in June, 1944 during the Italian campaigns of World War II and later, as commander of the 15th Army Group, he accepted the unconditional surrender of Axis forces in Italy and parts of Austria.

Clark was named commander-in-chief of the Far East and United Nations Commands in 1952 and negotiated the armistice with representatives of the North Korean and communist Chinese armies that ended the Korean War in July, 1953. Later that year, he retired from active duty. He served as president of The Citadel, the Military College of South Carolina, from 1954 to 1965 and resided in Charleston until his death.

During his long career, Clark was a frequent visitor to Fort Benning and graduated from the Infantry School's Company Officers Class of May 1925.

DEERS

The DoD policy change is an effort to crack down on family members who are not enrolled in the program. Military members will be given one last chance to get their families enrolled before the crackdown.

Mrs. Hall urges all active-duty and retired members to check with their servicing ID card center to see if they are enrolled.

If the family is not enrolled, she says, all the sponsor will need is: a valid ID card, proof of marriage or birth certificate in the case of eligible children.

The policy change was published in a March 13 memorandum by the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Health Affairs, William E. Mayer, after it was learned that DoD has saved $45 million, since July 1, 1983, after it began using DEERS to screen out ineligible CHAMPUS claims.

Secretary Mayer said DoD must make a "last-ditch" effort to get active duty and retired members to sign up their family members before the July 1 deadline.

After the July 1 deadline, family members in the state of Kansas not signed up in the program will be denied CHAMPUS protection. In following months, the ban will be extended to other states. All military hospitals will deny care to persons not enrolled in DEERS, beginning October 1.

DoD plans to mail out letters to those service members whose records reflect family members, but are not enrolled in the DEERS computer. They will be advised to report to their local ID card servicing center to ensure enrollment in the program.

Michigan reservists attend Fort Benning training

By Victoria L. Darcy
ATC Correspondent

"During times of crisis, the Infantryman places himself as our country's vanguard in preserving our way of life. He is dedicated to his countrymen, and the pride of those closest to him. His strength has no limitations," remarked Lt. Col. Edgar L. Smith III, 9th Battalion commander.

"Soldiers of 9th Battalion, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade, are trained by this philosophy. Although basic training can be tough at times, they discover hidden strength within themselves that will be reserved. This strength will resurface again, even stronger, should they be called upon to defend our nation," he continued.

If the "balloon goes up," the 9th Battalion cadre will deploy within 24 hours of that call. They will be reassigned as platoon sergeants and squad leaders wherever they're needed. They will leave behind soldiers who must be trained, and someone will have to replace them.

That someone is the 3rd Battalion, 330th Regiment, 1st Brigade, 70th Division (Tng) Army Reserves, from Lavonia, Mich. Dubbed the "Trailblazers," these soldiers will be mobilized within 72 hours and will come to Fort Benning to take up where the drill sergeants and cadre left off.

During their annual training, March 31 to April 13, the Reservists sampled a variety of training requirements they will perform in time of need. Drill sergeants were certified and other cadre familiarized themselves with their respective jobs.

Certification for the drill sergeants began at their home station, but annual training insures that they are highly qualified for the job.

"They're certified to meet Fort Benning's standards," explained Capt. Charles W. Ryder, S-3 for 3-330th. "Cadre have to be qualified to do their job here as if they were on active duty status, and we are evaluated by the host unit," he added.

"We've always got something different to do each time we come down here for annual training," remarked SFC Luther Curry, senior drill sergeant from Company A, 3-330th. "After a couple of days, you get the feel of things, and you start to belong."

Assisting new soldiers and cadre on the "Lick 'em, Stick 'em Range," or Malone 13, SFC William H. Palmer, senior drill sergeant for Co. B, 3-330th, explained that weekend training throughout the year includes classes, PT, drill and ceremony, squad tactics and movements, but the unit learns more during the two weeks of annual training.

"The regular drill sergeants have the advantage because they know the soldiers," the 15-year Army veteran said, "but our rank structure is the same. Most of us have been on active duty, so this isn't so new to us. Our classes in Michigan keep us technically proficient and the annual training familiarizes us more by practical application of what we learned in class."

"We're not here to take the active duty jobs — not yet," Curry added. "We want to work along with them so that when the day comes and we're needed, we'll be prepared. That's what it's all about anyhow."

Outstanding trainees can expect early promotions

FORT MONROE, Va. — Early promotions to private (E2) are in store for outstanding basic training graduates and one station unit training students.

In a policy recently announced at the Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC) headquarters, Army training center commanders can promote up to three percent of BT graduates and OSUT trainees in their eighth week of training. Commanders can grant these promotions without regard to the normal six months time-in-service requirement for advancement to E2.

The early promotions are for "truly outstanding soldiers who demonstrate leadership potential, motivation, teamwork, and a positive attitude," a TRADOC message said.

Commanders can promote active Army or Reserve Component soldiers under the new policy.

Not all Army families are alike

By Connie McReynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

(Editor's note: This is the second part of the BAYONET's series on Fort Benning families.)

The 1984 Army theme is The Army Family. Emphasis is being put on providing and improving services for all Army members and their families.

Servicemembers with families have different needs. Each family is different and there are many different family situations. SFC Raymond Reynolds and SSgt. Patricia Driver are two soldiers whose families reflect different needs.

Reynolds, operations NCO in the Training Division of the Directorate of Plans and Training, has been in the Army 18 years. He is married and has three children, ages 12, 4 and 20 months.

"About the biggest problem my wife and I have had is for my wife to realize I'm in the Army. I had already served 11 years when I married, so I was totally committed to the Army. My wife was just not used to the odd hours and our forced separation," Reynolds explained.

He said he spent the first year of his marriage overseas, separated from his wife. He also spent two years in an Infantry Division where he spent many hours in the field.

Mrs. Driver has also been separated many times from her husband. She is a driver with the 533rd Transportation Company. She spends weeks at a time on convoys and supporting different exercises around the country. She and her husband, Harry Colm, live in the South Main Post housing area.

"Harry has taken it very well. When we lived in Germany, he had a job so it wasn't so bad. Now, he is a full time house-husband and is starting to get involved in the community.

"I enjoy going to neighborhood meetings and geting involved with the community life programs. I do get funny looks from the wives around here if I walk up to a group talking. Everything is geared to wives, like the NCO Wives Club. I wish there was a group for dependent husbands," Colm said.

"We were at Fort Lewis before coming to Fort Benning," Reynolds said. "There was a lot of emphasis on the family there. In the four years we've been here, the community life program has certainly improved the housing areas, with Gen. Lindsay's emphasis on rebuilding them.

"Family support services are good here also. My wife and I have used marriage counseling services before and I think more of that type of service is needed for the young soldiers.

"Young families don't know what to expect in living an Army life. They need some kind of support," Reynolds said.

"What I think needs more emphasis now, and should have had the emphasis before, is in the area of day care. Many wives work, especially younger wives, and they need to have more day care available on post," Driver said.

Mayor enjoys volunteering services

By Connie McReynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

"I became involved with the community life program so I could help keep our tiny tot program open," Sharon Fitzwater, mayor of Indianhead Terrace, commented on her role in her community.

"Actually, I thought I could do something and had something to offer to the community."

Volunteering is nothing new for Mrs. Fitzwater. She was a candy striper during her junior and high school years. "After school I went to college, so this is the first time I've been involved this much," she said. She often takes her children with her while she does her volunteer work.

Mrs. Fitzwater coaches Youth Activities soccer, is active with the tiny tots and spends a great deal of time in her role as mayor.

One way she sees as helping to improve the quality of life in her community is in getting the people acquainted with each other. "In the civilian community, we knew our neighbors. We had cookouts together, or played softball with each other, something like that. We could do the same things here.

"Most of the residents may know the people next to them, but that's all. There are some folks that stay indoors all the time. A lot of times, it's because they don't know anyone."

Mrs. Fitzwater also sees the command emphasis on the communities and the organizing of the Community Life Office as helping the housing area residents. "Before, there were so many channels to go through to get anything done, that not a lot was done. Now, each community life center has a sergeant major that can usually get more done by a simple phone call. We've also gotten much needed equipment. And with the command support, community life centers are being recognized as being here for a reason," she continued.

"I would like to see folks in the community more involved, perhaps by volunteering whatever time they can. The majority of the people appreciate volunteers and besides getting self-satisfaction, it's a great learning experiment.

197th soldiers hone skills supporting exercise

The 1st Battalion (Mechanized), 58th Infantry 'Patriots' of the 197th Infantry Brigade, has the task of training to be combat ready and to provide support to the U.S. Army Infantry School.

This dual mission requires leaders at all levels to constantly be on watch for training opportunities while on support commitments.

Recently, several men from the battalion maintenance platoon received just such an opportunity while providing school support.

At a school support mission earlier this month Staff Sergeant Jeffrey Raehal, senior recovery sergeant, and Private Patrick Ramshead, M88 recovery vehicle operator, were able to hone their skills while supporting a master gunner course exercise at Victory Pond.

"The instructors were demonstrating the required procedures for preparing the Bradley Fighting Vehicle for swimming," said Raehal. "Although we were only a backup, Ramshead and I made sure that our M88 was ready in case it was needed."

Fortunately for the demonstration, these two soldiers and their M88, "Metal Health", were well prepared.

Before swimming a tracked vehicle, it must be predipped to test for leaking seals. This is done by attaching a cable from the Bradley to a recovery vehicle which acts as an anchor on the shore and assists the vehicle, if necessary.

"The other M88 on site was having trouble with its winch cable, so we took over," said Ramshead. "We hooked our cable onto the rear of the Bradley and slowly let it out as the vehicle moved into the water."

When the free-float test was complete, Raehal and Ramshead backed their M88 away from the water's edge as the Bradley returned to the shore. When it was out, they released their winch cable and prepared for the next vehicle's swim.

"This commitment gave me a chance to instruct Ramshead on some of the capabilities of the M88 that I hadn't been able to show him before. Besides," stated Raehal, "we both got to work with the Bradley a little in between pre-dip tests. I'm going back to Germany soon and this will help me if my new unit has Bradley's."

This support mission bore out the Army adage that "Training is Maintenance." (197th PAO)

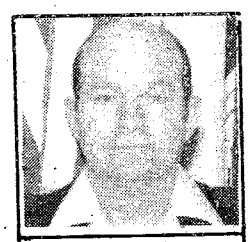
Spiritual

Take time to stop and appreciate life's beauty



Chaplain Joel Andrews

Helen Keller was one of the most courageous persons who ever lived. At the age of 2, she suffered a serious illness and lost her ability to see, to hear and to speak.. Having lost the senses of sight and hearing, she instinctively developed the other three senses. She knew her world by smell, touch and taste.

She once said, "I have often thought it would be a blessing if each human being were stricken blind and deaf for a few days at some time during his early adult life. Darkness would make him more appreciative of sight; silence would teach him the joys of sound."

"On one occasion," she said, "I was visited by a very good friend who had just returned from a long walk in the woods, and I asked her what she had observed. 'Nothing in particular,' she replied."

"How was it possible" she asked, "to walk for an hour through the woods and see nothing worthy of note? I who cannot see find hundreds of things to interest me through mere touch."

This is one of life's most crippling tragedies. We become so accustomed to persons, events, values and commitments; so familiar with them, that we do not see them — really see them — and they soon become almost meaningless and hardly more than a casual glance. Maybe this is why we are always being encouraged to "stop and smell the roses."

The Easter celebration is upon us and an important opportunity to "stop and smell the roses." The practice of our faith can and does become routine. We need these reminders of the greatness and glory of God's investment in our lives.

We hear again of God's victory over death, sin and the powers of evil. We need to be reminded that this was the most stupendous victory that has ever been won.

If there is no enthusiasm in your soul when you hear again about the resurrection, it is because you do not understand what was at stake — the ultimate outcome of the struggle between good and evil, between light and darkness, and between life and death.

On Friday, it seemed as if the victory belonged to the forces of evil. But the resurrection event changed that.

Since the first Easter, we have lived in the assurance that the ultimate victory belongs to God. That is the reason for our joy.

To see life's beauty
Is not a duty,
But rather a choice.

Chapel briefs

Spouse Abuse

"Spouse Abuse — Myths vs Realities" is the topic of a special program to be presented at the Infantry Center Chapel Annex on Monday at 7:30 p.m. The speaker is Linda McCoy, ACS social worker and coordinator of the Battered Wives Shelter. Presented by the Protestant and Catholic Women of the Chapels, this program is open to the community. For more information, call Linda Wallace at 689-3591.

Chapel seminar

"The Christian Soldier" is the topic of a special seminar to be presented by Kay Arthur on Thursday at the Main Post Theater. The first session is 9:15-11:30 a.m., with the second session at 1-2:30 p.m.

Mrs. Arthur, a well-known teacher and author, is the principal instructor at "Precept Ministries" in Chattanooga, Tenn. This Bible study conference center was begun by Kay and her husband in 1970. It rapidly expanded and became the headquarters for the publication of a series of inductive Bible studies, "Precept Upon Precept," as well as production center for the television program, "How Can I Live?"

The public is invited to participate in this seminar. For further information, call 545-2050.

Memorial service

"Yizkor" — Memorial services will be held at 9:30 a.m. on Tuesday, the last day of Passover, at the Jewish Center, building 2622.

Chapel film

"Blood on the Mountain," a new color film, will be shown at Sightseeing Road Chapel tonight at 7:30 p.m. It is a film that demonstrates the strength of God's love and forgiveness.

The release of Bob Jamison from Colorado State Penitentiary, triggers an escape by his former accomplice, Jim Hawker. "Hawk," as he is known, forces another inmate, Billy Hartman, to accompany him on a quest for revenge that leads to the kidnapping of Bob Jamison and his wife.

A chase by the police climaxes at the Royal Gorge where the hostages are forced into the cable car in a desperation move. The conflicts of human emotions and the interruption of human plans are woven into a tapestry of man's rebellion and God's forgiveness against the backdrop of the Sangre De Christo (Blood of Christ) mountains of Colorado.

As the viewer is drawn into the action and suspense of the film, he will find himself faced with some searching questions and agonizing decisions.

Send announcements where?

The BAYONET Community News section offers all organizations and individuals the chance to place their announcements in the post newspaper.

The announcements should be sent to the BAYONET news office in building 4, room 601. They must be submitted no later than Tuesday at 4:30 p.m. for publication in the paper that Friday.

For more information, call 545-2201/2202.

Aerobic dance classes

Want to feel and look your best? Join the Officers Wives Club's aerobic dance classes on Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings at 9:30 and Tuesday and Thursday evenings at 7:15. The monthly fee is $12 for all five classes or any combination you choose. Anyone affiliated with the military may participate. The classes are held at the OWC Activity Building, 1234 Ingersol St. For more information, call Sarah at 689-5139.

GED/English classes offered

Free GED and English classes are held each Monday and Thursday at 6:30 p.m. The classes, sponsored by the International Wives, are taught by qualified teachers. Instructional materials are provided by the Muscogee County Education Department. For more information about the classes, call Olga Kelly at 687-6471.

OWC piano, guitar classes

The Officers Wives Club School of Music offers private piano and guitar lessons to all military personnel and their families. For information, call Nancy Kirby at 687-7400.

Get in shape — jazzercise

A certified jazzercise instructor conducts four classes each week for anyone interested in dancing for fun and exercise. The OWC sponsored classes are held Monday and Wednesday evenings and Tuesday and Thursday mornings at the OWC activity building on Ingersol Street. For more information, call Georgia Schneider at 687-8067.

Parking on grass prohibited

Residents of government owned quarters are reminded that parking of privately owned vehicles on lawns or grassed areas next to government quarters is prohibited. Violaters will be cited by area coordinators and community life NCOs.

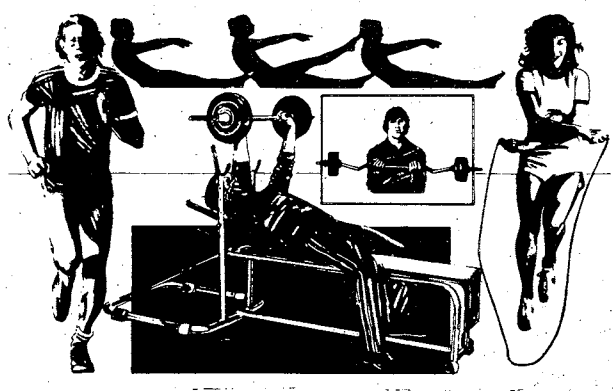
Red Cross needs volunteers

The Fort Benning Red Cross office needs volunteers for various areas in Martin Army Community Hospital. If you are interested, call Lillian Sullivan at 544-3213 or 689-3327.

Belly dance class

The Officers Wives Club sponsored belly dance class currently has openings for beginners in its noon session on Mondays and Fridays. The classes are conducted in the OWC activities building, but they are open to all military and their family members, regardless of rank.

For more information, call 687-3537 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. or 689-6447 after 6:30 p.m.



New OWC exercise class

The OWC is offering a new exercise class that includes an all-over body workout to music similar to the Jane Fonda workout with emphasis on toning muscles in arms, chests, waists, hips, thighs and stomachs. The classes are open to all military family members regardless of status or grade and cost only $10 a month. They will be held on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. For registration information, call OWC at 687-3537 or Vicky McCaffrie, instructor, at 689-5242.

Horse show

Goodwill Industries of the Chattahoochee Valley, Inc. is sponsoring the 8th Annual Greater Columbus Horse Show April 28th. The show begins at noon and will continue throughout the day with another show beginning at 6 p.m. Both shows will be located at the Columbus Fairgrounds.

Tickets can be purchased for $2 at the gate. By donating useable items to help Goodwill Industries, you may receive free admission.

For more information, call 324-4366.

NASA demonstrations

Wess McCoy from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration will give general demonstrations and explain models of rockets and the space shuttle at the Patterson Planetarium Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. The planetarium is located at 2900 Woodruff Farm Road in Columbus.

There will also be a laser video disk demonstration of in-orbit activities of the space shuttle. For more information, call 568-1730.

Sign Up America

The Columbus Jaycees have joined the race to "Sign Up America," a national campaign to gather signatures to show support for U.S. Olympians competing in the 1984 Summer Olympic Games.

The signatures collected by the Jaycees will be added to a giant scroll and presented to the U.S. Olympic Team. With the scroll, will be a check for $250,000 from the program's sponsors. Signers incur no obligation to the Jaycees or any other organization, they are merely pledging their moral support to America's athletes.

Fort Benning will probably have several shooters from USAMU representing the United States in these Olympics. Capt. Dave King, Fort Benning's Jaycee representative, says "Sign Up America" rosters have been posted on various bulletin boards in the post gymnasiums and in building 4. Show your support. Sign up today!

Parents without Partners

The Parents without Partners (PWP) organization is a world-wide self-help group of single parents who realize the difficulties encountered in bringing up children alone or having to live apart from them. The Fort Benning-Columbus-Phenix City Chapter meets at member's homes and various restaurants. For more information, call the Social Work Service at Martin Army Community Hospital, 545-2766/3212, or call 682-2663 in Columbus.

Thrift shop announces hours

The Fort Benning Thrift Shop, Furniture Barn and Talent Tree are open for sales from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. every Tuesday and Thursday and the first Saturday of each month. There is also a flea market on the month's first Saturday. However, the furniture barn is the only facility that accepts consignments on Saturday. All sales are open to the public.

Talent Tree offers gifts

Did you realized there is a gift shop on post where you can buy handmade items? A large and varied selection of crafts are for sale — children's clothes, Cabbage Patch look-alike dolls, ceramics, oil painting, wreaths, afghans, tole paintings, and more. The Talent Tree is open Tuesday, Thursday and the first Saturday of each month from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Come to buy, browse or consign your crafts.

Post-wide billiards tourney

The 3rd annual post-wide pool championship will be held at the Foxhole Recreation Center on April 21 and 28. It is open to all Fort Benning active duty personnel. Trophies will be awarded to first and second place finishers. For further information, call 544-6079/7122 in the afternoon or evenings.

Custer Terrace youth dance

The Custer Terrace Community Life Center will have a youth dance for youngsters 12 and up tonight at 8. The admission charge to the DJ-event is 50 cents.

Bake sale

The Custer Terrace Community Life Center is hosting a bake sale April 30 at the shoppette on Craig Drive. Residents are asked to donate baked goods and everyone is invited to take part in the sale.

Red Cross course offered

The American Red Cross is taking applications for a Service to Armed Forces Course for volunteer caseworkers. The class will be held on four days starting Tuesday. If you are interested, please call the Fort Benning Red Cross office, 545-5194.

Post Exchange news

The main exchange and concessionaires will be open payday Monday this month. Exchange officials announced the April 30 hours to be from 11 a.m. through 5 p.m. Normally, they are closed on Mondays, but the PX is trying to serve their patrons better by opening when Monday is a payday.

There is a new post exchange concessionaire. It is a quarters cleaning service that will be offering quaranteed cleaning. For more details, contact Ms Willie Davis or Matthew Lewis at 563-9978/9979. Their outfit, Starlite Services, Inc., is the only quarters' cleaning service now authorized to solicit patrons on Fort Benning. But this doesn't mean that you can't hire anyone you want to do the job.

Organ recital

Todd Wilson, organist and master of the choirs at the Episcopal Cathedral of the Incarnation in Garden City, N.Y., will present a recital at the First Presbyterian Church on Thursday at 8 p.m. This church is at the corner of 1st Avenue and 11th Street in Columbus. There will be no admission charge.

Girl Scout Day Camp

The Fort Benning Girl Scout Day Camp offers a variety of activities for Girl Scouts and non-Scouts from the first through sixth grades. The dates for this year's camp are June 11-15 but you must sign up by May 4. The girls may enjoy crafts, games, swimming, cookouts, camping and an overnight. For further information, call 689-9635/1371/8543.

Readiness is requirement for all soldiers... chaplains too

By Bill C. Walton
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Chaplain Section participated in "Operation Skypilot" last week. This was a three-day field training exercise (FTX) designed to meet integration and sustainment training requirements for chaplains and their assistants.

"This is the first time in at least four years that we have had all the chaplains and their assistants in the field at the same time," said FTX coordinator Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Emory Cowan. "We have a total of 54 people participating in this training which is designed to familiarize them with field operations and basic military subjects."

Physical readiness is a requirement for all soldiers, so "Operation Skypilot" kicked off with the Army Physical Readiness Test (APRT) in Doughboy Stadium. This was followed by loading of equipment and movement to the Malone 4 bivouac site.

Site preparation, setting up shelter halves and small general purpose (GP) tents occupied most of the first day. For control purposes, the personnel were divided into two platoons with four squads in each platoon. A late evening class on wearing and removing the M17 protective mask was the first opportunity for these squad leaders to instruct their "troops."

First aid, evacuation and transport of casualties were taught to the chaplains by a team of three nurses from Martin Army Community Hospital during the morning of the second day. After the instruction, everybody participated in splinting, bandaging and transporting of the sick and wounded.

"This is a little brush-up in preparation for AO Eagle tomorrow," said acting First Sergeant SFC Tom Prost. "Some of us were a bit rusty on these subjects and as the individuals and squads are in competition with each other, we want them to be as sharp as

"The competition idea came from Exercise NCOIC Sgt. Maj. Gary Nearhoof. Everybody will receive a numerical rating on these things; APRT, land navigation, road march, AO Eagle and general attitude, with a perfect score being 700 points."

The Tri-color Road land navigation course was the next item on the training schedule. Following a period of instruction and safety briefing by Chaplain (Capt.) Will Ghere, everyone dispersed, map and compass in hand, to locate as many marked points as possible in the one and one-half hour time limit. Sp4 Bill Parker showed the way for this event by locating five points.

"I learned a lot during my trek through the woods today," said Sp4 Stanley Harper. "I didn't find as many points as I had hoped, but I didn't get lost and now I have more confidence in my land navigation procedures."

All meals served during the FTX were the ready-to-eat variety in pouches, except for supper on the second day. The 67th Maintenance Battalion Dining Facility provided hot food for that meal. This was the highlight of the whole operation, according to some of the participants polled.

Both Protestant and Catholic field worship services were held during the second evening. These were followed by a period of intense study in preparation for the AO Eagle test.

A full-field equipment road march was the transportation used to move the group from Malone 4 to AO Eagle.

The final event of "Operation Skypilot" was the testing of basic military skills at AO Eagle. First aid, land navigation, setting-up a AN/PRC 77 radio, movement under direct fire and self decontamination were among the subjects tested.

The individual competition winners were announced at the end of the FTX. Sp4 Loretta Payne, with 644 points, placed first followed by Chap-

The Army is only as good as you are, and our success depends upon yours.

So if your ETS is approaching and you're thinking about the future, you should think about staying with us.

You don't have to leave the Army to earn more responsibility, groom yourself for a leadership role, or continue your education. Reenlisting can get you advanced training in your MOS, a new MOS altogether, or a chance to join a special unit. Reenlistment offers a new variety of challenges and opportunities, the kind experienced, success-oriented people look for.

Your Retention NCO can give you all the details. See him today, and bring along all your future plans.

Officer candidates, families enjoy training break

By Connie McReynolds
USAIC Public Affairs

It was a no-holds-barred day Saturday for the officer candidates of 50th Company. The candidates flung water balloons and pies at tactical officers (TACs) and took them on during softball, football and volleyball games.

It was all fun and games at the OCS Family Day picnic where 371 candidates, family members, friends and guests enjoyed themselves at the Rifle and Pistol Club.

According to Officer Candidate Peggy Blakey of 4th platoon, the family day picnic marked the end of the basic phase of the OCS cycle. "We now go into the intermediate phase, then senior phase. After each phase, we hold some event to mark the end of that phase and the beginning of another."

A big hit with the children attending the picnic was clown-magician, Capt. Philip Migliore of the 2nd Infantry Training Brigade. He awed the children with tricks such as changing the color of a scarf, 'popping' corn and balancing a ball on his nose.

One of the events that everyone enjoyed was the pie-eating contest. Officer Candidate John Mortimer won by putting his 'face' into devouring a chocolate creme pie.

Other events held were dunk-a-TAC, immitate a TAC, dance contest and a kid's relay.

Marshal's viewpoint

All riders must meet post motorcycle requirements

By Curtis D. Earp
Post Provost Marshal

There have been six traffic accidents involving motorcycles from Jan. 1, 1984 to present on Fort Benning. Two victims lost a limb as a result!

As of Sept. 1, 1982, any military or family member, or civilian employee desiring to operate a motorcycle or moped on Fort Benning must attend the motorcycle safety class conducted by the Post Safety Office or have attended a comparable course. Only two classes are conducted monthly. There are no exceptions!

All operators of motorcycles and mopeds on the Fort Benning Reservation must have proof of completion of the motorcycle safety class in their possession, anytime they are operating the vehicle. Failure to do so will result in the operator's vehicle being impounded. Persons purchasing a motorcycle must complete the class, which is given at Brown Hall, building #328, before operating their vehicle on Fort Benning.

Motorcycle requirements

- Definition: A motorized vehicle operating with three or less wheels in contact with the roadway and having an engine with more than 50 centimeters of displacement or with greater than five brake horsepower will be treated as a motorcycle.
- A valid state license is required to operate a motorcycle on Fort Benning.
- Motorcycle operators and passengers will wear approved motorcycle helmets in serviceable condition as described in USAIC Regulation 385-2. Visors or goggles are required to protect the eyes. Military equipment, such as helmet liners and aviator helmets, as well as football helmets, are not authorized.
- Headlamps must be used when a motorcycle is in operation.
- A passenger is not authorized on a motorcycle unless a passenger seat and foot rests are provided. Passengers are prohibited from sitting in front of the operator while the motorcycle is in operation. No person will ride "side saddle" on a motorcycle.
- Passing between lines of cars stopped for a traffic light or other traffic control device is prohibited.
- Weaving in and out of traffic is prohibited.
- A person riding on a motorcycle will not attach the motorcycle or himself to any vehicle moving on any roadway.

Morale Support Activities

The Destin Recreation Area provides an ideal spring vacation spot.

Destin ready for spring tourists

The Morale Support Activities Division's (MSAD) Outdoor Recreation Branch is gearing up for spring and summer activities at the U.S. Army Infantry Center's recreation area in Destin, Fla.

According to MSAD employee Doc Landrum, the recreation center provides an ideal vacation spot for service personnel and their families. He also added, this year the recreation area will be offering special rates for single soldiers wishing to take advantage of the Florida vacation spot.

There are 12 cottages in the area, each equipped with the basic necessities: cooking and dining utensils, bed linens, stove, refrigerator and color televison. The 10 two-bedroom cottages each sleep six people comfortably. The two three-bedroom cottages can sleep 11-12 people comfortably.

Reservations for cottages are determined by periodic post-wide lotteries, with active duty military personnel at Fort Benning having first priority. All other eligible people are accepted on a space available basis.

Visits to the recreation area during the seasonal booking period (April 1 - Oct. 30) are limited to six nights only. Due to the popular demand, a person may book a cottage only once during the booking period.

The first lottery drawing date of the season will be held Tuesday. Applications must be submitted no later than the close of business on the day prior to the drawing date. A list of the remaining drawing dates can be obtained at the Outdoor Recreation Center office.

Landrum added that one cabin and one trailer will be set aside for single soldiers and a special $5 nightly rate offered. The fee covers only lodging and does not include transportation or meals.

In Destin, you'll find many ways to use your active duty or retired military status to cut vacation costs. You'll be able to use your ID card at nearby Eglin Air Force Base and Hurlbert Field to help stretch food, fuel, recreation and accommodation dollars to the maximum.

Recreation abounds at the resort. A private beach, sailboats, motorboats, jet-skis, volleyball and basketball courts are all at your disposal. If you enjoy deep-sea fishing, you can charter the "Follow-Me" fishing boat.

According to its captain, Marvin Jenkins, the "Follow-Me" is one of the best bargains in the area. It is about one-half cheaper to charter than any other in the area and it is equipped with all of the latest electronic fishing gear.

The surrounding area itself has many attractions. Various shops, restaurants and night clubs can be found in the Destin/Fort Walton Beach area. Most offer good services and food at fair prices.

The recreation area is about a four- to five-hour drive from Fort Benning; but, it is well worth the long trip. For more information on how you can enjoy the Destin recreation area, call the Outdoor Recreation Branch of Morale Support Activities Division at 545-4155. (USAIC PAO)

New paperback features travel bargains

Travel bargains and know-how for the military family are featured in a newly revised paperback, "Space A '83," which may be purchased from exchanges or by mail.

The 283-page book tells military families, active duty and retired, how to travel on space available flights offered by the U.S. Air Force Military Airlift Command and U.S. Navy to and from the United States and more than 40 foreign countries. Much of the material is compiled from first-hand travel reports by service personnel and family members.

"Space A '83" is quoted directly from DoD regulations regarding procedures and eligibility for Space A flights. Also included are routes and maps showing the worldwide network of Air Force and Navy flights.

The book also covers discounts on commercial airlines, military charter flights, hotel and motel bargains, transient quarters and military facilities in the U.S. and overseas.

A "freebies" section lists addresses where readers may write for specific travel information, including foreign and U.S. state tourist organizations. Data on whom to contact in an emergency overseas and a compilation of U.S. Embassies and Consulates are included.

For a copy of "Space A '83" by mail, send $7.50 ($5.95 for the book plus $1.55 for postage and handling) to:

Light Infantry

Little Joe has gone away
To fight for freedom people say,

Left his mom and girlfriend too
Traded farm clothes for Army Blues,

He enlisted during the Vietnam War
Fighting hard in the Infantry corps,

One day his squad broke enemy line
Joe's leader died by a Chi-com mine,

Joe let out a yell and began to run
Straight to the enemy's largest gun,

He threw a grenade before he fell
Sent seven enemy right to hell,

Joe didn't die on that fateful day
But he lost his mind some soldiers say,

He became a leader, for the rest
Every battle became a test,

Then one night while on a hill
The enemy came and blood did spill,

Joe was killed and soldiers weeped
Some men say Joe's found his peace,
Back home his mom and girl cry
For the boy who turned man to die.

Ran one mile just the other day
Felt so good, do it every day.

Ran two miles, thought I'd stretch it out
Felt so good had to scream and shout.

Ran three miles, did it just for fun
Felt so good, being in the sun.

Ran four miles, was a pouring sweat
Felt so good, and I ain't done yet.

Ran five miles, finally had to stop
Pulled over speeding by a traffic cop.

So if you want to run, but don't want to stop
Better watch out for the traffic cops.

Mechanized vehicles in a row
Revving those engines, they're ready to go.

Fire your Dragon at your will.

The sound of the TOW is right behind,
Scaring those commies out of their minds.
The mortars are drumming out a beat,
Dropping the rounds right at their feet.

M60 tank, now where you at,
Come help me make those commies scat.
Big trucks, small trucks carrying a load,
Mechanized vehicles on the road.

Post family members await national competition

Members of the Spencer High School opening and closing ceremony team of the Vocational Industrial Clubs of America (VICA) were recently chosen as Georgia's best during state-wide VICA competition in Atlanta.

The team, comprised of Fort Benning family members, was chosen to represent Georgia in VICAs National Leadership and Skills Olympics in Louisville, Ky. June 25-30.

The team follows an outlined dialogue to "open" and "close" a simulated meeting of the VICA club. Included in the skills required are speaking, timing, grace and parliamentary procedure.

Team members walk into the room, call the meeting to order, offer an invocation, create and explain the VICA emblem one component at a time, handle any club business, present the pledge of allegiance and the club pledge.

Included on the team are Beverly Webb, Stephanie Davis, Frank Monroe, Michele Fields, Priscilla Torres, Richele Harmon and Trev Fuller. Ricky Parnell acts as the alternate.

In the national competition, the team will be facing 45 other teams from around the nation. The team's advisor Eugene R. Shaw added the team is currently raising money for the transportation, lodging and meal costs for the upcoming competition. Shaw said $2,400 is needed for the week-long trip and only $800 has been collected so far. The team will be sponsoring bake sales and car washes in the near future to help raise the money. If any individual is interested in donating to the fund, they should contact Mr. Shaw at Spencer High School.

Soldier receives Henry Caro Leadership Award

Staff Sergeant David R. Henderson of Advanced NCO Course 2-84, was recently presented with the Henry Caro Leadership Award.

The award was given in honor of CSM Henry Caro. Caro had the distinction of being the first enlisted company and battalion commander while assigned to the Non-commissioned Officer School of Infantry at Fort Benning. Caro was killed during an airborne exercise at Fort Stewart, Ga., in 1976.

The award formally recognizes Henderson as the ANCOC student who in the eyes of his classmates has contributed the most to his graduating class through demonstrated traits of leadership and exemplary professionalism.

Henderson is assigned to Company A, 2nd Battalion (Airborne), 505th Infantry, Fort Bragg, N.C.

The Small Dining Facility of the Year title was awarded recently to Delta Company, 4th Battalion, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade.

"We won the Dining Facility of the Quarter for the second and third quarter of '83. We worked hard for those awards and for the Dining Facility of the Year," explained SFC Alvah Arrington, dining facility manager.

The trophy awarded to the Dining Facility of the Quarter has been retired to the D-4-2 facility. The other two quarter winners were in the facility of the year competition with D-4-2.

"I've been here about one month," Sp4 Revenue Brown said. "I feel great. It makes me work harder and I want to meet the standards set here. I want us to continue to be the best."

Arrington explained that a post food service team conducted an unannounced inspection at the facility to determine the winner in the competition.

"The team inspected sanitation, food preparation and administration. We never relax here. We treat everyday as if we're being inspected and always practice proper procedures," he said.

The workers from the facility never relax in honing their culinary skills, either. Arrington said he encourages the personnel to participate in different culinary shows. "The Army Training Center food service personnel train the soldiers in whatever area they want to compete in," he said.

It has paid off. Sp4 Eric Aguayo placed second in the centerpiece, sugar category at Fort Lee, Va., during the Army-wide culinary arts competition held in March.

OWC 'Festival of Running' set for April 28

The Officers Wives Club will host a "Festival of Running" April 28. The full day of running activities will feature a 30-mile relay, five-mile run, three-mile run, one-mile run, and a one-mile slogger-jogger. They are open to everyone, military or civilian.

Four hundred and seventy-two awards are up for the taking including a best unit trophy for the five-mile run. Six individual trophies will go to the top three men and women in the one-mile run, and 12 cups for the top three men and women in the three-mile and five-mile run. There will be 453 other individual medals.

Additionally, there will be free beverages and refreshments for all registered finishers. Those who pre-register will also receive a T-shirt and a race certificate on race day.

Ample parking will be available in and around Infantry Hall. Other accommodations include picnic areas, concession stands, displays and demonstrations and entertainment.

If you've never won a race, here is your chance. The best bet is the 30-mile relay - open division. It is wide open. The one-mile run even has age groups for children 1-4, 5-6, and 7-8.

Registration blanks are available at the Sports Office in Doughboy Stadium, the main PX, the NCO and Officer's Clubs, local running stores, all gyms and recreation centers on post, building 4 and the hospital. For more information, call 689-1934.

(USAIC PAO)

"Festival" coordinator Maj. Bill Hughes and noted roadrunner "Racey 1" present Generals Foss and Burba with their registration forms.

Post participants score high in pistol championships

By Tommy Pool
USAMU PAO

The 1983 All-Army Champion, Thomas Woods of USAMU, scored a personal high to win this year's Magic City Regional Pistol Championship held in Birmingham, Ala., April 14-15.

Woods defeated a field of more than 70 competitors as he set a career high mark of 2,660 out of 2,700 possible points. His individual scores were 893 in the .22 caliber event, 878 in center fire and 889 in the final .45 caliber championship.

In team competition, the U.S. Army "Blue" squad scored a clean sweep, winning all three team events over the U.S. Army Reserve "Gold" squad. Members of the winning team were Ronald Martere (team coach), Thomas Woods, Joe Steed, Roger Willis and James Laguana.

Members of USAMU won a total of three gold, seven silver and three bronze medals in individual and team events during this year's Benito Juarez International Shooting Championships held last week in Mexico City.

Matt Dryke, USAMU, scored 198 out of 200 to take the gold in the individual skeet event and also lead the U.S. to first place in team competition.

In Olympic trap competition, Dan Carlisle scored 193 out of 200 to finish in third place, two birds behind the winner from France. Carlisle picked up the gold medal in team competition however, as the U.S. squad edged Sweden by one bird with a total score of 433 out of 450 targets. Italy finished in third place at 431.

Another gold medal winner from the U.S. was Deena Wigger, daughter of USAMU's Lones Wigger, in women's smallbore rifle. Army Reservist Darius Young won the gold in standard pistol, while Ruby Fox placed second in women's standard pistol.

More than 30 nations attended the championships which included a strong entry by the Soviet Union. This was one of the final major international shooting events prior to the Olympic Games this summer in Los Angeles.

The United States Olympic Shooting Team will be selected from the U.S. National Championships and Final Tryouts, June 10-23. The matches will be conducted on the Olympic Shooting site in Bernardino County, approximately 40 miles east of Los Angeles.

Armed Forces Day run

The Morale Support Activities Division will be sponsoring a "Shape Up for Life" run on May 19.

There will be two races, a 2.2-mile event and a 6.2-mile event. Trophies will be awarded to the first three overall finishers, male and female for both events. Medallions will be awarded to the first three finshers in each age group catergory. All finishers will receive t-shirts. For application information, call Morale Support Activities at 545-7519.

Marines sponsor road race

The first Marine Corps Logistics Base Sports Day in Albany, Ga., May 19, will feature a 10,000-meter road race which is open to the public. The entry fee is $5 before May 9. The fee will increase to $7 after that date. Applications are available at the BAYONET office, building 4, room 601. For more information, call 545-2201.

Racquetball trials scheduled

Fort Jackson, S.C., will be the site for the 1984 All Army Racquetball trial camp May 2-12. The Fort Benning Sports Office is now accepting applications for that camp. Benning could send as many as three individuals, one in each category, to the camp. The three categories are: open, men 34 and younger; senior, men 35 and older; and women, any age.

Boxing coaches needed

The sports office is looking for boxing instructors, coaches and trainers for the Physical Activites Sports program of the Morale Support Activities Division. Interested personnel should call 545-7519 for more information.

Bodybuilding contest

The Morale Support Activities Division is sponsoring the first ever Mr. and Ms. Fort Benning contest May 19 at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center. The contest is open to any active duty personnel stationed at Fort Benning. Medals will be awarded in five categories; arms, legs, chest, back and abdomen. There will be trophies awarded to the top five overall finishers for both men and women.

Applications can be found in all post gyms. The deadline for all applications is May 14. For more information, contact Speedy Austin at 545-5777/2332.

Racquetball lessons

The Morale Support Activities Division is offering free racquetball lessons beginning Tuesday. The classes will be held Tuesdays and Thursdays from 9 to 11 a.m. in building 305. For more information, call Speedy Austin at 545-2332/5777 or Mr. Shelly at 545-4726/7832.

Women's exercise class

The Morale Support Activities Division is offering free women's exercise classes at the Audie Murphy Gym. The classes are held Wednesday and Friday from 9 to 10 a.m. The class is directed by Rosa Guerrero. For more information about the class, call 545-1940/4592.

Women's softball sign-ups

Sign-ups for the post women's softball league will be held until May 11. You can sign up as part of a team or individually. All active-duty personnel, their family members, retired military, and their family members as well as D.A. civilians working on post are eligible. For more information, call Speedy Aus-

Power Trip. The Volkswagen Scirocco lets you dominate all the roads on which you travel. Its new 1.8-liter engine will make it difficult for others to keep up with you.

The 1984 Scirocco can even help you accumulate greater wealth. Consider its manufacturer's suggested retail price: Only $10,870. That's thousands of dollars less than any German-engineered sports car.† Put yourself where you deserve to be. In the driver's seat.

1984 Scirocco. $10,870. It's not a car. It's a Volkswagen.

Mfr's sugg. retail price includes a 12-month unlimited mileage, limited warranty. Transp., license, dealer prep add'l. *Obey your local speed limits. †Based on a comparison of mfr's sugg. retail prices. Seatbelts save lives.

Fort Benning observes Law Day

By Connie McReynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

May 1 is set aside as Law Day and is a day to call attention to both the principles and the practice of American law and justice.

Law Day was first conceived in 1957 by then American Bar Association President Charles S. Rhyne. President Dwight D. Eisenhower established Law Day by presidential proclamation in 1958.

In 1961, May 1 was set aside by a joint resolution of Congress, as an occasion for rededication to the ideals of equality and justice under laws.

The functions of the Judge Advocate General Corps are varied. Besides the trial defense, there is also the more familiar legal assistance.

Capt. Jack Spradley, legal assistance officer, explained the majority of cases seen at legal assistance deal with domestic relations. "We give general advice on divorce procedures such as advising servicemembers and/or their family members of their rights and drawing up separation agreements."

He said the lawyers also give counseling on child custody, paternity, adoptions and name changes. "We also counsel people on wills and we will draft a will for them. We mainly do simple estates. If the wills become too complicated, we refer the person to a civilian attorney."

General counseling is given to servicemembers on financial indebtedness and non-support of dependents, plus advising on bankruptcy. "We will send letters to creditors and try to avoid bankruptcy by reaching a payoff agreement," Spradley explained. "On non-support, we will write a letter to the servicemember and give about a three week suspense date. If we need to, we will send a second letter, then send a letter to their commander. We have been very successful. Most of these things can be handled with a phone call or a letter."

Spradley said the legal assistance office sees a handful of cases on tenant-landlord cases. "We will review leases for servicemembers before they sign anything. If a servicemember PCSs or gets out before the lease is up, he shouldn't be penalized, so we check for military clauses."

The legal assistance lawyers counsel on civil suits, but refer the servicemember to randomly selected local lawyers. "We can do everything short of appearing in court for the servicemember," Spradley explained. "We also try to arrange out of court settlements."

One thing a servicemember may not realize is according to the Soldiers and Sailors Relief Act of 1940, while in the military, servicemembers are entitled to lower interest rates on car and house loans. "We give counseling on those things too and encourage servicemembers to bring in the agreements so

Army continues battle against alcohol abuse

Department of the Army continues its battle against alcohol abuse by ordering two changes to policies concerning alcohol consumption on Army installations.

Army Chief of Staff General John Wickham announced Friday the banning of reduced price specials in military clubs effective May 1. Discounted drinks during so called happy hours or attitude adjustment hours "are not consistent with Army policies and programs to eliminate alcohol-related problems," the directive said. Also being curtailed is the sale of alcoholic beverages to uniformed personnel before 4:30 p.m. on duty days.

"Both changes are a part of the Army's effort to deglamorize alcohol," remarked Colonel Richard H. Hummel, director of Personnel and Community Activities at Benning. "The clubs will stop offering cutrate cocktails and will feature free finger foods and other enticements instead," he explained.

Attitudes about DUI need to be changed

Robert McClain

Despite new tougher Driving Under the Influence (DUI) laws in the military and in the state of Georgia, post soldiers continue to drive under the influence of alcohol.

Though recent statistics showed that 73 percent fewer soldiers died nationally from alcohol-related traffic accidents during the first quarter of fiscal year 1984, the DUI rate at Benning has stayed constant.

One death or one DUI arrest is still too many. According to military police statistics, 190 soldiers have been apprehended for DUI so far this year. One hundred and eighty nine soldiers were arrested during the same period last year. Of this year's arrests, 71 occured on post and 119 took place off-post.

Dr. Tom Tennent, program director of the drug and alcohol program at Fort Benning, thinks the biggest obstacle to getting drunk drivers off the road is peoples' attitudes toward the crime. They must be convinced that they cannot continue to endanger the lives of others and escape punishment.

"Many soldiers just refuse to believe that drinking and driving is dangerous," Tennent said. "They know about the tougher DUI laws, but it seems they think because it is their first offense or because they are good soldiers, their commanders will just give them a slap on the wrist."

The recent changes in AR 190-5, Motor Vehicle Traffic Supervision, leave little doubt about the consequences of drinking and driving. As of Jan. 1, 1984 anyone caught DUI will have their post driving privileges immediatatly suspended and will be recommended to the Drug and Alcohol Program. Soldiers will also receive a General Officer Letter of Reprimand.

"We must leave no doubt that drunk driving is a very serious offense and will not be tolerated, stated Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger in a 1983 Department of Defense report. "It is the number one killer in the military and the worst form of drug abuse."

Secretary Weinberger explained, "Drunk driving, not cancer or heart disease, is the leading cause of death in the military. This national tragedy has continued because we have tolerated it. It is time we address the problem head on and give it our best effort."

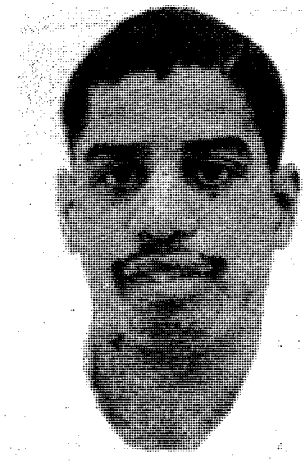
Various voices

What do you think should be done about drunk drivers?



Sp4 Mario A. Pacada, MEDDAC —"No matter what the penalties for DUI are, I think there will always be people who will ignore the law. The laws are OK, they just need to be enforced more. And people also need to be more informed on the consequences of drinking and driving."

Dorothy A. Lay, SATO ticket agent —"Everyone caught DUI should go through a program to see the effects of drinking and driving. They should see people who are crippled for life because they were in an accident with a drunk driver. They should see the grief the accident causes their families."

Sgt. Cary D. Rolin, 197th MP platoon —"I think the way Georgia and the military deals with DUI is fine, but the offenders must first get caught and MP and local police can't be everywhere. I think if more policemen were on the road, more drunk driv-

PFC Linda West, A Co. Hq. Cmd. —"I think the DUI laws in Georgia and Alabama are strict enough, but they need to be enforced more. If a person knows he will be put in jail if he drinks and drives, I think he

1984 savings bond campaign begins

By Connie McReynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 1984 Savings Bond campaign began at Fort Benning Tuesday. The theme this year is "doing for yourself while you are doing for your country."

Savings bonds are patriotic, a good investment, and steady savings you don't have to worry about if you get them through payroll savings, Capt. Robert Chilton, installation U.S. Savings Bond project officer said. According to the Department of Treasury, 60 percent of all bonds are sold through the payroll savings plan.

A spokesman from the finance and accounting office (FAO) said the deduction for bonds becomes effective during the month the individual wants the deduction to begin. If an individual wants the deduction to become effective a certain month, the allotment forms must be at FAO by the tenth of that month.

The latest market-based interest rate, effective for the period Nov. 1, 1983 to April 30, 1984, is 9.38 percent.

New Series EE Bonds and eligible outstanding EE and E Bonds and U.S. Savings Notes, began earning variable interest Nov. 1, 1983. The rate is set at 85 percent of the average market yield on five-year marketable treasury securities during the holding period.

New bonds must be held at least five years to earn market-based interest, while eligible securities purchased before Nov. 1, 1982, must be held at least five years after that date to earn it. The bonds are guaranteed to earn a minimum of 7.5 percent per annum, compounded semi-annually, if held five years or longer.

If servicemembers are interested or need more information, unit U.S. Army Savings Bond project officers are available to answer any questions.

CG's message

Savings bonds help keep America strong

The dates April 24-May 31, 1984 I have been set aside for Fort Benning's 1984 U.S. Savings Bond Campaign. I wholeheartedly support this effort.

A new market-based interest rate now sets yields on Series EE bonds, held at least five years, at 85 percent of the average return of five-year treasury securities. That rate is calculated and compounded every six months during the life of the bond and is guaranteed not to drop below 7.5 percent. Bonds will pay 9.38 percent during the first six-month period November 1, 1984-April 30, 1984.

No matter what your goals are — extra retirement income, college education for children, a new home — bonds can help you to reach them while they are helping to keep America strong as well.

Your dreams will not come true unless you make a genuine effort to save, and U.S. Savings Bonds represent a painless and convenient way to start your own savings program.

The success of this year's campaign is contingent upon your support of the program by initially joining the plan or by increasing your present allotment. During the campaign, a savings bond canvasser will meet with you to afford the opportunity to sign up for payroll savings.

I urge you to carefully consider this opportunity, a small payroll deduction today can help secure your future and the future of our country.

Army hospital user fee idea has not improved with age

Some ideas keep coming back no matter how often they are demonstrated to be ill-conceived, unworkable and even unfair. This seems to be especially true of suggestions purporting to save money.

Such is the history of the proposal to charge military family members and retirees a user fee for using military medical facilities. Last year, the Senate Appropriations Committee toyed with the idea of such a fee, but firmly rejected it after it was repeatedly demonstrated that no savings would result. Its impact would be most severe upon those in the services who can least afford to pay it — married junior enlisted persons — and it could even increase medical costs within the Defense Department.

Now comes the Congressional Budget Office (CBO) with its suggestions for saving budget dollars and, you've guessed it, the user fee is back. The proposal has superficial appeal; unless challenged again, it is unlikely the arguments of last year will be recalled on Capitol Hill. So, for the CBO and Congress, here once again are the reasons why charging members of military families and retirees user fees at miliary medical facilities is a bad idea:

- It would create a bureaucratic nightmare attempting to keep nationwide record of who had paid and how much among the highly transient military population.
- It may cause junior personnel to postpone seeking timely outpatient care which could result in higher inpatient costs.
- It would directly oppose another ongoing DoD program to encourage greater use of more cost-efficient military medical facilities rather than DoD's more expensive cost-sharing program whereby individual medical services are procured at civilian facilities.
- It contradicts the understanding given to our young men and women when they enlisted, that medical care would be furnished in military facilities without charge.

The user fee was not a good idea last year; it has not improved with age. (AUSA Defense Report)

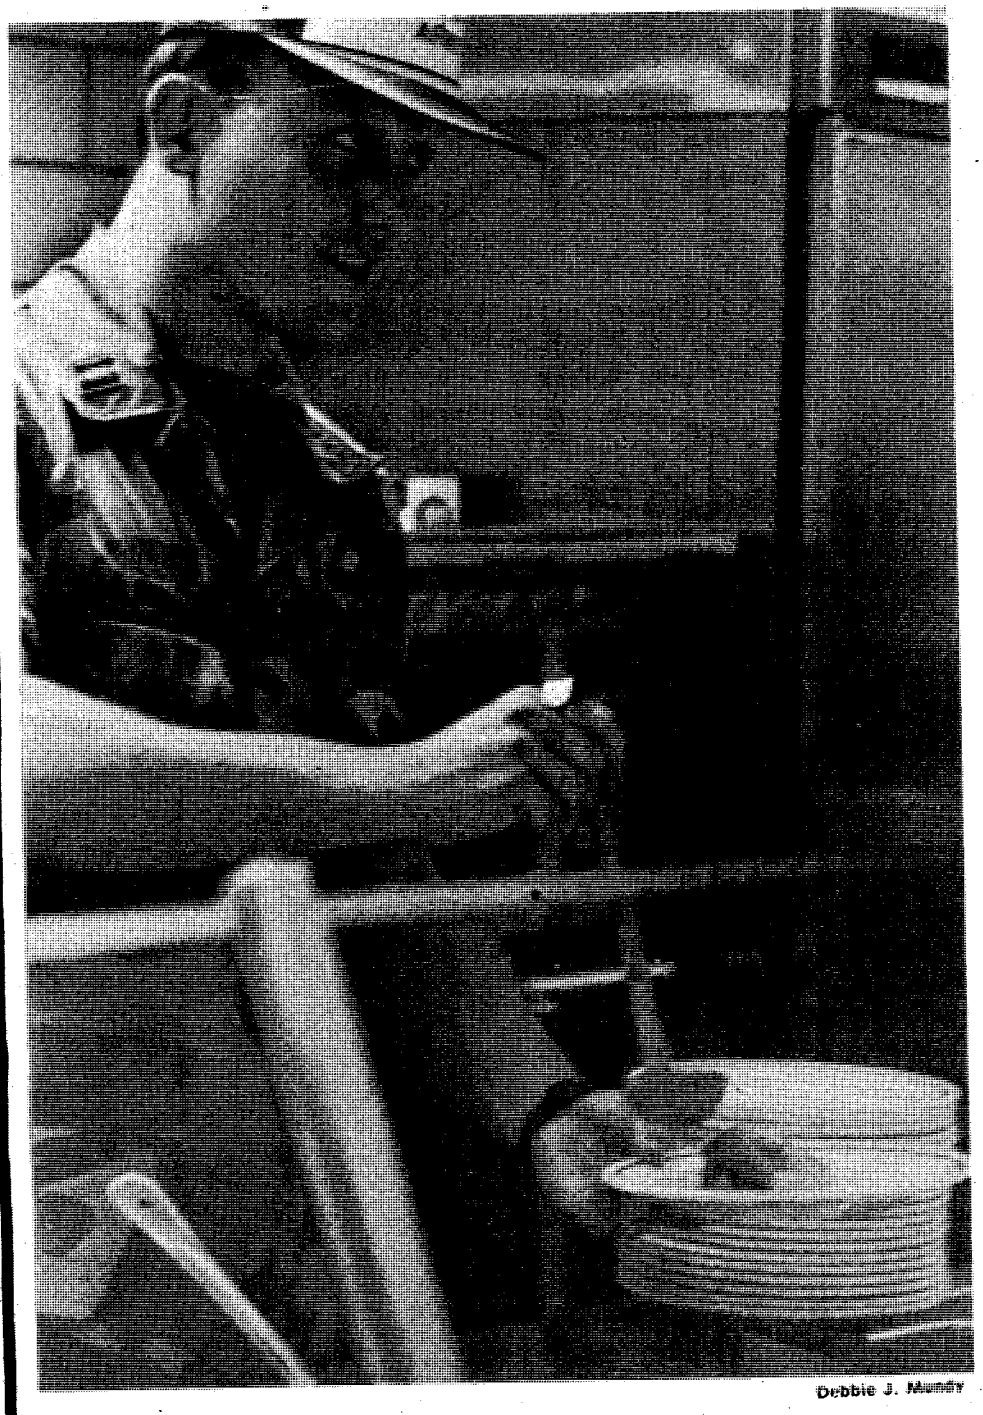
1-58th soldiers treated to special breakfast



Debbie J. Mundy

Capt. Peter J. Palmer is all smiles as he prepares breakfast.

Battalion officers get no complaints as they double as short-order cooks

By Paula L. Dempe
197th Public Affairs Office

Soldiers walking into the 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry, Dining Facility April 5, were greeted with the sounds of their battalion executive officer asking, "What kind of eggs do you want?"

Compounding their shock at hearing Maj. John R. Mays asking about their eggs, was the Battalion Commander Lt. Col. Bruce A. Blake, cooking them.

"The soldiers were very surprised to see us back there," said Mays. With eyes twinkling, he continued, "They must have been very pleased with the service — we got no complaints. Even when they'd ask for their eggs fried over-medium, and got over-hard — nobody complained!"

The breakfast, an annual tradition initiated by Capt. Peter J. Palmer, B Co, commander, when he was still the S-4 officer, was served by the battalion commander, executive officer, and a representative from the four companies.

With the notable exception of the eggs, all food was prepared before hand by the cooks, many of whom were frankly skeptical of their commanding officers' culinary abilities.

"I didn't think they would really be able to handle it; especially the omelet grill," reflected PFC Kennedy W. Miller, one of the regular cooks.

"They made me nervous. I didn't think they could do it," said Sp5 Michael A. Nadeau, another member of the dining facility crew.

After the initial surprise had wore off, reactions to the make-shift cooks became more favorable.

"I don't usually eat breakfast, but the quality of the food the officers prepared seemed about the same as the regular cooks," remarked Pvt.2 Charles Stevens, a medic with the unit.

"They didn't do too badly. However, eggs weren't cooked the way you asked, but . . ." trailed off Sp4 Roger A. Terranova.

Even the usual cooks amended their views.

"They did real good. It took more of them to handle it, but they made it," said Miller. "It would be good for morale if they did it more often." The breakfast treat, though fun on the occasional basis, has no chance of becoming regular.

"I don't want to make a living serving meals three times a day. It's difficult to please 300 soldiers on the type of eggs they want," said Mays. "I've gotten a better perspective being on the serving end. I've gone through the chow line hundreds of times, but I never thought about what it's really like."

"The breakfast lets us appreciate what the cooks go through," explained Palmer.

"Company first sergeants and sergeants major are next," promised Mays. "We're going to surprise them with it."

Fort Benning school board holds annual elections

Parents of the children attending the Fort Benning schools set the direction for their children's schools through an elected school board.

An 11-member elected board, made up of parents of children attending the school, meets monthly to set district policy and provide general direction to the systems. Members are elected for two-year terms, with each of the eight schools having a representative on the board. In addition to the eight school representatives, the board includes a chairman, a chaplain and a lawyer. Members' terms are staggered so the board will include experienced board members each year.

School board elections will be held this spring on May 15. Board seats up for election this year are the representatives for the Patch, Faith, Wilbur, McBride and Wilson Schools and the seat designated to be filled by a chaplain. To be eligible to run, an individual must be the parent of a child enrolled in the school during the time he or she serves on the board and must not be an employee or related to any school system employee.

Those interested in filling one of the school representative vacancies should contact the school principal. Any chaplain who has children in the Fort Benning schools and would like to serve on the board should contact either Col. Richard Meriaux, Board chairman, or Chaplain James Langford.

The school board meets on the fourth Monday of each month at 4 p.m., alternating the meeting place between schools. The board considers school policies, approves the budget, approves personnel selections, approves curriculum changes and functions in much the same way as do school boards in civilian communities.

Board meetings are open to the public with information regarding the site for board meetings available by calling any of the schools or the central administrative office at 545-2915.

Current elected board members are Col. Richard Meriaux, chairman; Maj. Estel Elkins, JAG representative; Capt. James Langford, chaplain; MSgt. James England, DPCA representative; Sharon Graef, Faith School; Sally Masteller, White School; Barbara Ard, McBride School; Maureen Vire, Dexter School; Edwinna McHale, Loyd School; and SFC Dennis Hall, Wilbur School.

A Patch School representative will be elected for the first time this May.

"Get involved," urges Board Chairman Meriaux "it's a rewarding way to participate in a very special way in our Army children's education."

Many activities set for Armed Forces Day

The annual Armed Forces Day celebration will be held at Fort Benning, Saturday, May 19, in front of Infantry Hall.

Leading off the day's activities will be the Junior ROTC Rifle and Drill Team competition, co-sponsored by the Association of the U.S. Army (AUSA) and the U.S. Army Infantry Center.

The competition gets underway at 7:30 a.m. on Gardner and York Fields and Parks Range, with 36 high schools from Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, South Carolina and Tennessee invited to participate.

At 8 a.m. a separate 10km and 2 mile "Fun Run" is scheduled at York and Stewart Fields.

The Armed Forces Day celebration officially begins at 10 a.m. with a parade on York Field, followed by entertainment, military demonstrations, exhibits and individual and inter-team competition nearby.

In conjunction with Armed Forces Day, the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter, AUSA, will sponsor its annual picnic from noon to 3 p.m. A nominal fee will be charged for the lunch and beverages as well as participation in selected entertainment and recreational activities.

An Airborne and Rangers in Action demonstration rounds out the day's activities at 2:30 p.m., followed by the crowning of the AUSA Queen and an exhibition by the winning ROTC drill teams at 4:30 p.m. An awards ceremony is scheduled for 5 p.m. for the rifle and drill teams.

The Airborne and Ranger demonstrations, along with the crowning of the queen will be held on Stewart Field. ROTC activities will be on York Field.

Other things planned, leading up to the Armed Forces Day celebration at Benning include, post level competition May 15-16. It will consist of various soldier skills such as map reading, camouflage and weapons maintenance. Winner of the competition will receive the Commanding General's Trophy during Saturday morning's parade.

On May 18, all major subordinate commands and separate activities will conduct an organization day with unit team athletic events and games in the unit area. (USAIC PAO)

Post soldiers must obtain proper forms for ID cards

Active duty members serviced at the identification card section located in building 83, room 129, are reminded they must report to their personnel NCO and obtain DD Form 1172s for their family members in order to obtain ID cards for them.

These forms must be completed in three copies with only section I and II filled out. The sponsor then takes the DD Form 1172 directly to his/her records section, building 83, room 220, for verification in item III.

Service members in the grade of E-7 and above may report directly to the ID card section where verification will be made. Exception to this policy consists of adding or deleting dependents (i.e. divorce, new child). After completing the reverse (item 58, 59, 61 and signing 62), the sponsor can give the DD Form 1172 to his dependent who reports to the ID card section with appropriate documents to get his/her ID card or a Geneva Convention ID card. The sponsor must bring a completed DA Form 428 when reporting to the ID card section.

Operating hours for the AG identification card section in room 129 are 8 to 11 a.m. and 1 to 3:30 p.m.

Reusing empty cans saves Benning $8,000

By Bill Reynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

A civilian employee in the Training and Audio-visual Support Center (TASC) came up with a SPIRIT use for empty ammunition cans and saved Fort Benning more than $8,000.

Albert Allgood, a TASC model maker, decided the blank firing attachment for the .50 caliber machine gun would last longer if it was stored in an empty can and issued as a separate unit.

The attachment, labeled the Device 7-60, is used whenever a unit trains with the Multiple Integrated Laser Engagement System (MILES). Use of MILES adds "realism" to tactical exercises by indicating when personnel or vehicles sustain a "hit" or "near miss."

When the device is attached to the .50 caliber machine gun, blank ammunition can be fired without having to pull the charging handle after each shot. According to Allgood, there was a tendency on the part of the user to "handle the device without attaching the guide assembly."

Units would be issued devices, load them on trucks and carry them to the training areas. When the training was completed, the devices would again be loaded onto trucks and returned to the center. The travelling over the back roads of the reservation would cause the loose devices to bounce around in the back of the trucks.

Because of the many different parts to the device, said Allgood, this would usually result in the tangling of the wire rope assemblies and damage or loss of parts. He stated that 70 to 80 percent of the maintenance costs for the 470 devices on post would be spent either in replacing lost parts or untangling the wire assemblies.

The yearly cost to repair the devices before Allgood's SPIRIT idea was $8,978.78, of which, $7,712.60 was spent on replacement parts.

After Allgood's idea was adopted, it was found that maintenance costs in both parts and labor were slashed by 70 percent. His idea resulted in a savings of more than $7,000 in replacement parts.

The savings on parts, according to Dot Russell, SPIRIT coordinator, Directorate of Resource Management, represents "hard savings" that count double in this year's SPIRIT contest.

The annual SPIRIT contest is Training and Doctrine Command's way of inspiring its soldiers and civilians to be more efficient in their day-to-day operations.

The installation that wins the contest is awarded $1 million.

Using caution, care helps prevent kid's accidents

CHICAGO, Ill. — Accidents are the leading cause of death for children once they get past their first year of life, reports the National Safety Council.

New statistics released from the council indicate that an estimated 8,600 children 14 and under died in accidents during 1983.

It is ironic, the council says, that the major contributing factors to children's deaths and injuries are also some of the most common activities associated with their development.

"A child's desire to experiment with items foreign to a youngster yet very common to an adult will often result in injuries," said Sharon Gamache, the council's home safety specialist. "What often places them in situations of high risk is, of course, their inexperience.

"It's important for parents to keep a careful eye on youngsters during their earlier stages of development," Gamache said. "As the child progresses", she added, "a parent must try to find a balance between the youngster's need for protection from danger and desire to have the freedom to explore.

"The balance shifts constantly as the child's abilities and judgment improve," she added. "As the year's pass, the need for strict parental guidance slowly decreases until the child is autonomous."

Regardless of what stage a child is in however, the following situations are times when accidents are most likely to occur, she warns:

- When children are hungry or thirsty. Many poisonings, in fact, occur just before mealtime.
- When children and parents are tired, usually before it's time for a nap, either in the late afternoon or before bedtime.
- When children are overactive or rushed and don't allow enough time to do things carefully.
- When parents quarrel or are under emotional stress and aren't aware of a child's activities. Often the child will react in a rebellious or hazardous way in similar stressful situations.
- When the family routine is upset by moves, long trips or vacations.
- When babysitters or other less experienced people supervise the child. (NCS)

VA pamphlet provides headstone information

A new, free pamphlet describing the Veterans Administration program for marking the graves of veterans buried in national and private cemeteries is available by calling the nearest VA office.

"The Veterans Headstone and Marker Program," VA Pamphlet 40-107, was developed by VA's Department of Memorial Affairs' Monument Service to meet the increasing demand for information about this program.

Last year, more than 210,000 headstones or markers were shipped to mark veterans' graves in private cemeteries and approximately 45,000 went to national cemeteries for the graves of veterans and their dependents.

Men and women veterans of wartime and peacetime service who were discharged from active military service under conditions other than dishonorable are eligible for this benefit, and in certain circumstances, veterans' dependents may be eligible.

The pamphlet also includes information on:

- the types of monuments available;
- monetary allowance in lieu of a government-furnished marker;
- replacement rules;
- how application is made; and
- shipment and setting of markers.

While the pamphlet is intended to cover the program in broad terms, additional information is contained on the instruction sheet which accompanies the application for marker, VA Form 40-1330.

Any VA office can provide information and necessary forms needed to apply for a monument or an application for reimbursement of headstone and marker expense. Toll free numbers are located under U.S. Government in the telephone directory. (VA)

VA won't pay cemetery's headstone installation fee

Veterans service officers, funeral directors and other professionals who regularly deal with the next of kin of deceased veterans are reminded that the Veterans Administration does not pay the installation fee for government furnished headstones in private cemeteries.

The VA does pay, for eligible veterans, a $300 burial allowance and $150 plot allowance to help defray funeral expenses and the cost of a grave space, according to Chief memorial Affairs Director Paul T. Bannai, who noted headstone setting charges could be paid from these allowances.

Bannai, who is responsible for VA's Department of Memorial Affairs which last year shipped some 210,000 headstones or markers to private cemeteries, said this reminder is necessary because of a lack of unerstanding by some when applying for the free monument.

While instructions on the application and the application itself state, "All costs to install the headstone or marker must be paid from private funds," VA wants to insure that the next of kin of veterans are aware of this requirement.

The VA has no specific authority to pay the installation fee, and Bannai said such a program would be difficult to administer because of the differing charges by private cemeteries for installing a headstone.

"Some cemeteries provide the installation service without charge, but there is no limit to what can be charged," Bannai said. (VA)

arson-Newman ffers students OTC scholarships

The U.S. Army Reserve Officers' Training Corps ROTC) is the principal source of college-educated fficers for the United States Army. Each year 75 ercent of the new second lieutenants commissioned re college graduates of the colleges and universiies offering Army ROTC. Through Army ROTC, nen and women can combine their studies for a accalaureate degree with training for a commisn as a second lieutenant.

Of the more than 72,000 men and women enrolled n Army ROTC at colleges and universities this past all, there were 12,000 receiving financial aid via rmy ROTC scholarships. Army ROTC scholarships ay full tuition, lab fees, and other academic costs nd students are paid $1,000 per year subsistence ay which is tax-free. Students are paid subsistence y every year the scholarship is in effect. For xample, an Army ROTC scholarship is worth pproximately $5,200 this year to Army ROTC adets at Carson-Newman College in Jefferson ty.

Highly-qualified high school graduates receive lmost 1000 of the scholarships in the form of our-year awards. However, almost all the remainer go to college students as two or three-year cholarships. Applicants need not be enrolled in OTC to apply since a certain number are earmarked for college students who have not been aking part in the program.

Those applying must be U.S. citizens, of good oral character, and be under 25 years of age on une 30 of the year in which they will be commisioned (veterans may qualify for an extension to the ge requirement). Applicants must have a strong esire to obtain a commission and to complete their tudies for their baccalaureate degree.

There are certain medical qualifications to be et, including height and weight, as well as overall hysical fitness. It is extremely important that the uture officer have the necessary leadership potenl to become an effective Army officer. Scholarhip officials look for good appearance, personality, cademic potential and performance, and participaion in activities both in and out of school.

Since the Army requires increasing numbers of fficers with highly technical educational backrounds, special consideration is given to those majoring in engineering, physical sciences, and ursing.

Historically, two and three-year scholarship winers have averaged 1100 on the Scholastic Aptitude est and have grade point averages of 2.9 to 3.3 on a .0 scale.

As with most scholarship programs, the award older must agree to certain obligations. These nclude signing a contract which requires that the adet agree to serve as an officer for a period of our years active duty or for eight years in the Army Reserve, depending upon the needs of the Army.

Successful completion of ROTC includes attenance at a six-week advanced camp, normally etween the junior and senior college years.

Army ROTC cadets from Carson-Newman College in Jefferson City, Tenn., will attend advance amp at Fort Lewis, Wash. in 1984.

Fort Benning soldiers who will be discharged beween now and Aug. 28, the start of Fall semester egistration, and are interested in Army ROTC and nrolling at Carson-Newman should write to: Capt. ecky Sisler or Capt. Don Bork, Army ROTC, #1 Army Street, Jefferson City, Tenn. 37760.

The Carson-Newman football team is the 1983 AIA national champion.

we can review them before they sign," Spradley said.

The office handles other types of legal items too. Ad valorem tax exemption forms from Alabama and Georgia are available for exemption of taxes on property that has to be licensed; affidavits are typed and notarized; bill of sale forms are available, promissary notes, powers of attorney, special powers of attorney, revocation of powers of attorney and state of legal residence certificates are also available.

Also, the office can draft most legal documents like leases and quick-claim deeds, " . . . if it doesn't require going to court," Spradley said.

The lawyers see people with appointments Monday through Friday from 8:45 a.m. until 3:45 p.m., but will see anyone without an appointment in an emergency. Reserve JAG officers work two Saturdays a month at the JAG offices in building five.

Chapel praises family's volunteer work

By JoAnne Mercer
Chapel Publicist

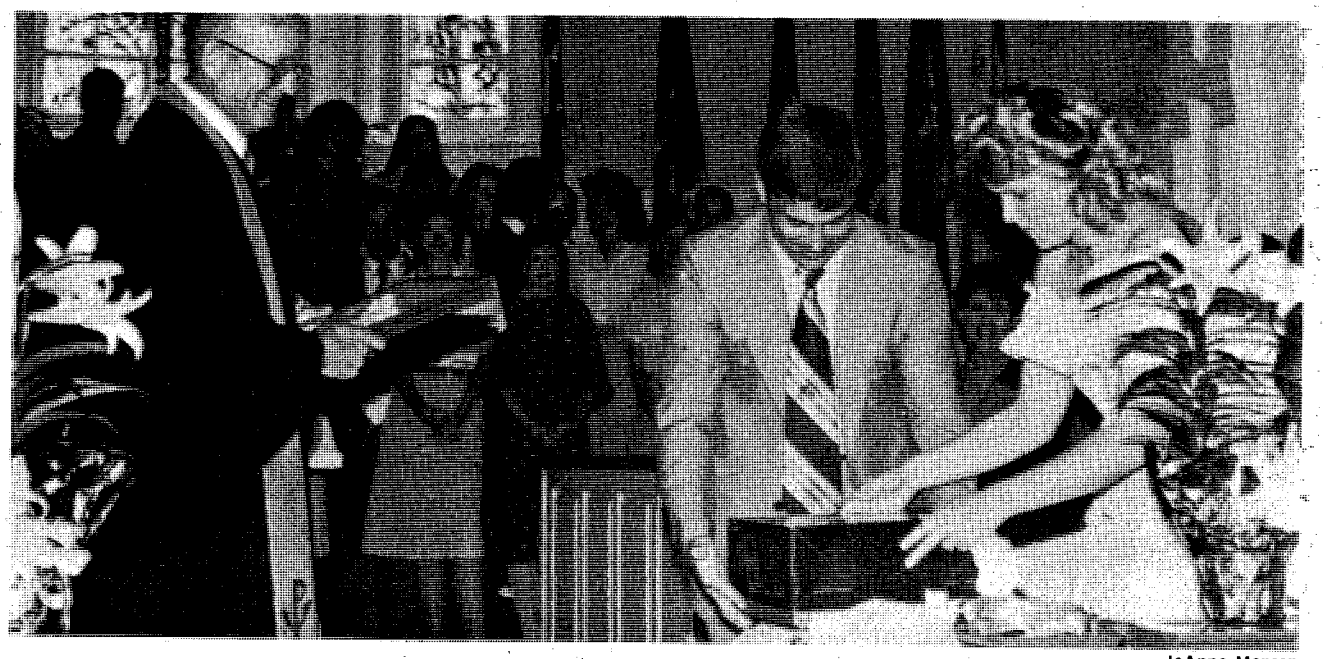
"They have given more than 3,000 volunteer hours to youth ministry during their stay at Fort Benning," said Chaplain Paul Cassibry during a special tribute to Capt. and Mrs. Bill Rue at the Infantry Center Chapel's Sunday morning worship service. USAIC Chaplain Joel E. Andrews presented them with a Scroll of Honor from the Army Chief of Chaplains. This award is given to "persons throughout the Army who have made particularly outstanding contributions to the community of faith."

Chaplain Andrews praised Bill and Gayle Rue for their work, saying that rarely had he seen such a strong youth ministry during his 23 years in the chaplaincy. He added that perhaps the key to their success as youth leaders is that though they are mature adults, "they have a healthy child inside them . . . that is important!"

When the Rues first came to Benning three and a half years ago, they began a small youth group at Sightseeing Road Chapel. They grew by leaps and bounds and combined with the youth group at TIC Chapel to form "Youth Alive" which is composed of Protestant and Catholic teen-agers who are sons and daughters of both officer and enlisted personnel. Today the average attendance on Sunday evenings is around 100. Gayle is quick to give much credit to others: "Without the wonderful support of parents, chaplains and chaplain assistants, the program would not have grown."

The Rues emphasize the quality of their relationship with the young people. "We have cared for them — laughed with them — cried with them." Gayle adds that, likewise, they have been cared for by the teenagers. She points out their supportive concern during the difficult days of her baby's sickness. She also says, "They have seen me get mad and ask for forgiveness."

In their work with "Youth Alive," Bill and Gayle have tried to show that "Christianity is not a lot of 'do nots', but that they can have fun in Christ as they learn about God and what He has in store for their lives."



JoAnne Mercer

Chaplain Paul Cassibry waits to give Bill and Gayle another going away present at the "Youth Alive's" party.

The Rues have also placed special emphasis on serving God through serving others. The group is involved in a ministry to exceptional children and gives many hours to the Saturday morning recreational programs and special events at Camp Smiley. Recently they were the largest group of teenage volunteers to help with the Special Olympics in Columbus. They also regularly visit a local nursing home and give of their time and friendship as they reach out to serve others.

The Rues will be leaving soon for graduate school at the University of Missouri at Rolla where Bill will work toward a masters degree in computer science with concern in operations research. Following graduation, he will assume a teaching position in the math department at West Point.

They feel some sadness about leaving Fort Benning, but are confident "Youth Alive" will grow and evolve. Last summer, the group was split into the junior high and senior high, with Bob and Michelle Wallace assuming the leadership of the junior high section. The Rues praise their work and also the contributions being made by E.J. and Joan Nusbaum as they begin their work as leaders of the senior high section.

The entire "Youth Alive" said their own special farewell to the Rues Sunday evening with a candlelight dinner and program in their honor.

Ninety-Seven Year Old E-2 Gets Credit At MTV

MTV Press

Norfolk, Virginia—The country's oldest active E-2 was seen riding his moped into the local Military TV and Stereo today. Could it be that he was actually attempting to get financing? When 97 year old, E-2 Rudy Ladoo entered the store everybody just stopped what they were doing to see if MTV would actually get financing for the new stereo system he had picked out moments earlier.

We have been on a quest across the country for someone they won't finance. They claim to give instant credit to all military personnel and government employees, any age and any rank, with no down payment required and small monthly payments.

Rudy was seen leaving MTV with the stereo system of his dreams and a smile on his face 30 minutes later. When asked how he felt about the purchase he just made he was ecstatic, promising he's going to bring his father (who happens to be an E-1) in next week to buy a car stereo package for his 1942 Packard.

If Military TV & Stereo can finance 97 year old E-2, Rudy Ladoo we're sure they can finance you. MTV has built their company on trust and is dedicated to serving the nation's armed forces from coast to coast.

☆ Ask The Chief ☆

Dear Chief,

I'm at the end of my rope and just don't know what to do. Every Saturday afternoon my wife and myself get into a major argument over what to sit back and watch on television. I like to sit back with a six pack and watch the ball game but my wife insists on doing aerobics while watching Dick Clark on American Bandstand.

If we have to go through one more weekend of these arguments, I'm sure we're going to end up in divorce court. What should I do?

Almost Divorced in Duluth

Dear Almost,

Your problem is not an unusual one at all. Many people in todays military do not realize that at Military TV & Stereo you can pick out your selection today and enjoy it tonight. You don't mention your age or rank in your letter, but MTV can finance any age, E-1 and up with no money down and small monthly payments.

So make the little lady happy and hurry down to your local Military TV & Stereo and pick out a new quality, brand name television. MTV has a wide selection from portable to console to choose from.

Cloudy weather doesn't stop Easter sunrise services

Sunday morning's threatening weather did not hamper attendance at the various Easter sunrise services, as well as the regularly scheduled Sunday services at Fort Benning.

Chaplain Paul Cassibry at the Infantry Center Chapel said the 6:30 a.m. post-wide ecumenical service was attended by more than 550 people. Dr. Charles Granade, director of Missions for the Columbus Baptist Association, delivered the resurrection message and special music was provided by the TIC Chapel Choir and the 283d Army Band.

A general Protestant service for 1st ITB was conducted at 8 a.m. by Chaplain Rick Needham before a congregation of 1,256 persons. At 10 a.m. Chaplain James Bluett celebrated the Catholic Mass of the Resurrection for 592 participants.

At the 2nd ITB, another record gathering of 1,250 persons congregated for the 8:30 a.m. service led by Cleo W. Buxton, regional director of the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship.

The Spanish Catholic community's special afternoon service and picnic was attended by 247 soldiers and family members.

Martin Army Community Hospital celebrated its first Easter sunrise service at 6:30 a.m. on the east side of the hospital. (USAIC PAO)

Catholic pre-marriage class

A pre-marriage class for all Catholics anticipating marriage will be held May 6 instead of April 29, as previously announced. The class will be at 1 p.m. in the Catholic Education Center at Custer Terrace Chapel.

Bible school teachers needed

Vacation Bible Schools will be held at four locations on post this year: Custer Terrace Chapel, McBride School (for McGraw Manor residents), Dexter School (for main post) and Wilson School (for Indianhead Terrace).

The schools will take place June 18-22 for 4-year-olds through junior high school students. Volunteer teachers, helpers and musicians are needed. Contact Bill Putman at 545-5301 or 544-4915.

Junior high "Youth Alive"

The junior high "Youth Alive" will present a special slide program on the resurrection of Jesus Christ. Under the direction of Bob and Michelle Wallace, the young people staged and produced their own slides. Music by Don Francisco, "He's Alive," will also be featured. Parents and friends are invited to this unique program at 6:30 p.m. Sunday in the TIC Chapel Center.

PWOC meeting

The Protestant Woman of the Chapel will hold their May meeting at 9:30 a.m. on Wednesday at the TIC Chapel Center. The program will include installation of new officers for the coming year.

Korean cooking class

Students in the Tuesday morning English classes for foreign-born wives periodically present a special cooking session featuring recipes from their native countries. On this Tuesday, they will focus on the preparation of a favorite Korean dish. The public is invited to attend at 10 a.m. in building 2305, Dixie Road.

Communication workshop

The Pastoral Institute, 2022 15th Ave., will sponsor a Couple Communication Workshop on Mondays, April 30-May 21, 7-9 p.m. Call the institute at 324-2488 for more information.

Chaplain Charles W. White
RECSTA

While I was traveling with my 10-year-old son re-ntly, he made a childish but profound statement en he remarked, "Dad I want to live until I die!" ter we stopped chuckling over his comment, we re able to have a short but serious discussion on reality of life.

As I am writing this article, I also recall a young dier who once visited my office with a difficult rsion of the above statement. He felt his life was eaningless. His problems and the stress related to m had produced a hopeless attitude regarding his ure. Yet, he was able to identify some positive ects in the midst of his problems after he allowed nself to look beyond his present circumstances.

As I continue to examine my son's statement, it ems to explain the real fullness of life. I do not nt to be trite or preachy but I emphatically be-ve fullness of life comes through God's gift of rnal life. The holy Bible states, "He desires that ch of us would have life and it is to be in an undant manner."

This abundant life begins when we grant God the sition of Lord and Master within our lives. After experience this transformation, we can really ve until we die!" And yet we are not eradicated by ath, but we continue to live on a spiritual level er the cessation of this physical life.

Benning 'clowns' brighten celebration

By Connie McReynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The clowns were sent in to brighten the day for the 'guys and girls' of the Medical Arts Convalescent Center on Talbotton Road Tuesday. Thirteen Fort Benning soldiers, including two clowns, showed up at the center's monthly birthday party celebration.

Some of the residents ventured downstairs for the first time in months, to attend the party, after being tempted by the clowns.

"This is a special treat for some of the residents because no one comes to see them and they get lonely. They enjoy just having someone to talk to," Lydia D'Orlando, activities director, said.

There were 55 residents downstairs for the party where the April birthdayers were recognized. The 'youngest' was celebrating her 49th birthday, the 'oldest', 91.

Staff Sergeant Eduardo Cruz set up the visit with the convalescent center. All the soldiers attending are from the Small Unit Tactics Branch of the Combined Arms and Tactics Department, U.S. Army Infantry School.

"There are 29 of us in our department and we try to get together as a group to do things whenever we can. We have schedules 90 days in advance, so when we see we have some free time, we plan something. Since we hadn't done anything like this, I called around to different places and volunteered our time. I think all of us are glad we came."

Many of the residents didn't want the attentive group to leave, but coaxed a promise of another visit as the group said their goodbyes.

Benning, reserve soldiers hone skills during exercise

By Victoria L. Darcy
ATC Correspondent

Huddled together in groups of six, the soldiers of Company A, 9th Battalion, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade, waited, their eyes searching the sky for UH-1 Huey helicopters. In the distance, the sound of rotar blades slicing the air signaled that "choppers" were nearing their position at Hollis Branch. For these soldiers in training, this airmobile segment was the highlight of their field training exercise (FTX) and the chance to prove themselves as bonafide Infantrymen.

Within minutes the helicopters approached in formation. Heads bowed low, the soldiers clutched their weapons and climbed aboard to their assigned positions. The platoons were then lifted off to conduct one of the final phases of their FTX.

As the helicopters swooped down onto the McKenna airstrip minutes later, each Infantryman prepared to conduct the air insertion. Their mission was to secure the airstrip and conduct a hasty defense.

Indeed, this was a training exercise for many soldiers, and an infrequent addition to the usual training schedule for 9th Battalion. The soldiers were exposed to airmobile tactics — most had never flown in Army helicopters. At the same time, the pilots, all students pilots from Fort Rucker, were observed by flight instructors onboard and received training on their functions during an air mobile exercise.

Along with the regular 9th Battalion cadre, members of the 3rd Battalion, 330th Regiment, 1st Brigade, 70th Division (Tng) of the Michigan Army Reserves honed their Infantry skills by taking part in the FTX.

"The airmobile portion of this FTX really gave us a challenge," said Capt. John J. McCuen, Company B commander. "The FTX objective was to familiarize and train soldiers in squad and platoon tactics. Using military aircraft adds excitement to the training, and it gave us a chance to train in areas we don't get to practice in Michigan or even during our usual annual training."

Victoria L. Da

Reservist SFC Robert B. Jarber makes sure range safety is followed requiring soldiers to roll over each other to change positions behind their weapons.

The FTX began Sunday afternoon as a "force on force" exercise, plotting two platoons against two other platoons. The platoons in the defense concentrated on preparing their positions; machine gun emplacements, securing the area, and manning the observation post. The 11C soldiers of the mortar section were also busy preparing firing positions, preplotting targets and computing firing data for the gunners.

Following the airmobile operation, the plato received an operations order (OPORD) from battalion commander directing them to condu movement to contact at night. They attacked Victory Lodge and Babbit Field. Once both a were secured, they roadmarched back "home 9th Battalion.

Post readies for National Volunteer Week

by Connie McReynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Volunteer Resource Center has a unique reason for being on post. Its function is to pay attention to volunteers.

"We have found out volunteers have different needs now, mainly because people just don't have a lot of time anymore," Pat Sneed, installation volunteer coordinator, explained.

"This office recruits volunteers for all the volunteer-supported agencies on post. We train all the volunteer managers and we present awards of appreciation to volunteers," she continued.

The office operates at 301 McIver St. and with Mrs. Sneed at its helm, is the central point for the more than 600 volunteers who gave more than 100,000 hours to activities on post last year.

"These volunteers help at the churches, religious education, scouting, wives clubs, thrift shop, as the commmunity mayors and staff as well as with the Red Cross and ACS," Mrs. Sneed said.

She said the Red Cross has the largest number of volunteers who work mainly at Martin Army Community Hospital. Those volunteers donated more than 2,700 hours last year.

Mrs. Sneed brings more than 19 years of volunteering experience with her in her job. She has worked in thrift shops, worked with the Officer Wives Club, Womens Clubs and has coordinated and directed volunteers in a leadership capacity.

"I really would like to see more younger wives get involved in volunteering. I think more of the younger husbands feel threatened because the wife will be spending time working without a financial reward.

"What we need to convince them of is that there are other rewards for a volunteer: knowledge, experience, which helps in applying for a job, and maturity. A volunteer learns a lot of usable skills. Also, volunteer experience is highly recognized now."

To bring into focus how valuable volunteering is, there is a National Volunteer Week scheduled May 6-12. The events for the week will be held at the Infantry Museum, the Main NCO Club and the Officers Club. The Officer Wives Club and the Non-Commissioned Officer Wives Club are co-sponsoring some of the events.

There will be workshops held on resume writing, writing job descriptions, delegation of responsibility and writing letters of references.

Also, Marilyn Keel, Headquarters DA ACS volunteer coordinator,and Lilly Korpal, Headquarters DA ACS volunteer consultant, will speak on "The Family Action Plan" and "The Department of the Army Appreciates Volunteers."

"The Volunteer Resource Center has received excellent cooperation from the command and the volunteers and volunteer agencies are happier. We're all working together and we're closing the circle," Mrs. Sneed concluded.

Army awards soldiers who served in Lebanon

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Soldiers who supported the multi-national peacekeeping force in Lebanon may be eligible to wear the Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal, Army military personnel officials have announced. Soldiers who believe they are eligible for the award should contact their servicing personnel administration facility.

Officials said soldiers who were bona fide members of a unit engaged in the operation or meet one or more of the following are eligible for the award:

- Serve for 30 or more consecutive days in the area of operations.
- Be engaged in direct support of the operation for 30 consecutive days or 60 non-consecutive days. The support must have involved entering the area of operations.
- Be engaged in actual combat, or equally hazardous duty, with armed opposition regardless of the number of days in the area of operations.
- Serve as a regularly assigned crew member of an aircraft flying into, out of, within, or over the area of operations in support of the military operation.
- Be recommended for the medal, or have been attached to a unit or specified command supporting the operation.

Recommendations such as these are made to the Joint Chiefs of Staff and must indicate that an individual's service warrants particular recognition,MILPERCEN officials said.

The Joint Chiefs of Staff approved the award for service in Lebanon beginning with June 1, 1983. The ending date has not been established. Additional information is in Army Regulation 672-5-1, paragraph 4-28.

Patch schools offer much for Benning youngsters

By Connie McReynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 3- and 4-year-olds attending the Pre-School Association classes in the Patch School building are kept busy with varied activities.

The children have gone on several field trips to the farmer's market, a farm, the post office, to see a helicopter and recently to the Kinnett Dairies. They also have an annual Fun Fair.

The school, sharing class space with the Alexander M. Patch Elementary School, is sometimes referred to as Patch Pre-School. Even though both the elementary school and pre-school are located at the same place, they are different organizations and have different telephone numbers. Alexander M. Patch, for grades kindergarten and first, can be reached at 545-3622. The Pre-School Association for 3- and 4-year-olds can be reached at 687-2404.

"Pumpkin Patch, building 322, will be closing so those children will be coming here and we are getting ready for them," said Pre-School Association Board Chairperson Alice Wilson.

To accommodate approximately 255 children expected for the pre-school, double sessions for the children will start this summer. The morning sessions will be from 8:45 until 11:45. The afternoon session will be from noon until 2:30. Wilson said Tot Town will still pick up the children for the afternoon.

Registration for the new sessions will be May 8-9, 9:30 a.m. until noon. There will be two- or three-day sessions for 3-year-olds and two-, three- or five-day sessions for 4-year-olds.

Costs will be $30 a month for two days, $45 a month for three days and $60 a month for five days. For registration, parents need to bring up-to-date shot records, birth certificates and $10 registration fee in check or money order.

DUI

The NCO in charge of the Alcohol and Drug Abuse Program, SSgt. Allen R. Curry thinks an increased awareness of the Army's new tougher DUI regulation might make a soldier think twice before drinking and driving. "If a person knows there is a greater chance he will be caught and punished for drunk driving, he might just take a cab the next time he has one too many," he stated.

Both Tennent and Curry agree prevention is another key to getting drinking drivers off the road. "Soldiers with drinking problems should be identified and sent for treatment before he or she gets arrested for DUI or kills someone while driving drunk," Curry stated.

Tennent and Curry are part of a team of counselors who work closly with post company commanders to identify soldiers with drinking problems and get him or her into the Drug and Alcohol Program immediately.

"One of the biggest problems we face is convincing company commanders that they're actually hurting the soldier by letting him solve the problem himself once they find he's an alcoholic," Tennent said. "They honestly think they're helping the guy and the Army by keeping it under the table."

The battle to get drinking drivers off the roads will be a long one. We live in a society that accepts drinking and driving. Through new policies and regulations the Army is determined to combat this problem. But until society's attitudes about the crime change, drunk drivers will continue to endanger all of our lives.

Legal assistance attorneys can aid separating couples

By Edward B. Downey
Fort Gordon PATRIOT

Military life can be difficult in many ways. It can be especially stressful for married soldiers.

Long hours, weeks of field manuevers, and especially the separation of families by overseas assignments may cause severe strain on a marriage. Unfortunately, many families don't survive these problems.

All too often, the relationship between a husband and wife deteriorates to the point where either one or both consider obtaining a legal separation or divorce.

A couple thinking about separation should consider seeking an attorney's advice. Since an Army Judge Advocate legal assistance attorney can't represent soldiers or family members in court, a civilian lawyer should be hired.

However, consulting a legal assistance attorney still might be worthwhile. Not only can they prepare a separation agreement, they also can give advice about residency requirements, potential for alimony, child support and child custody. They can give advice as well concerning legal rights and obligations relating to issues of marital property, existing debts and visitation rights.

Couples should remember that, until the divorce is final, they still are legally married. While married to a service member, the spouse not in the military retains his or her military identification card.

When a couple decides to legally separate, a separation agreement is drawn up. The agreement represents a contract between the two persons. When one person fails to abide by its terms, a "breach of contract" results. To enforce terms of the contract, one spouse must sue the other in court. Such a suit could be a long and expensive endeavor.

Enforcement of a divorce action works differently. In a divorce action, a judge signs the divorce decree. If one side breaks the terms established by the decree, that party could be held in contempt of court. Also, failure of a soldier to pay child support, as ordered by a court, could result in a garnishment of pay, involuntary allotments from pay and allowances, or recoupment of basic allowance for quarters.

Council of Infantry Elders will visit Benning next week

A "Council of Infantry Elders" will visit Fort Benning next week to discuss the Army's new Light Infantry Division concept.

The council is made up of retired general officers who will be joined at the session by a representative of the Canadian Army, Lt. Col. John A. English, commander, Combat Training Center, Canadian Forces Base Gagetown.

Generals Hamiliton H. Howze, Frederick J. Kroesen, William B. Rosson, Robert M. Shoemaker, and Sam S. Walker plus Lieutenant Generals William B. Caldwell and Joseph M. Heiser convene the first meeting of the council May 2nd.

The council is an idea implemented by former Infantry Center Commander, Lt. Gen. James J. Lindsay.

The one-day conference will include updates by Fort Benning officials, followed by exchanges of ideas drawing upon the "Elders" many years of military experience.

Discussion will focus upon Light Infantry Divi-

Club helps students learn exercise benefits

Club's program consists of many high energy activities

By Connie McReynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

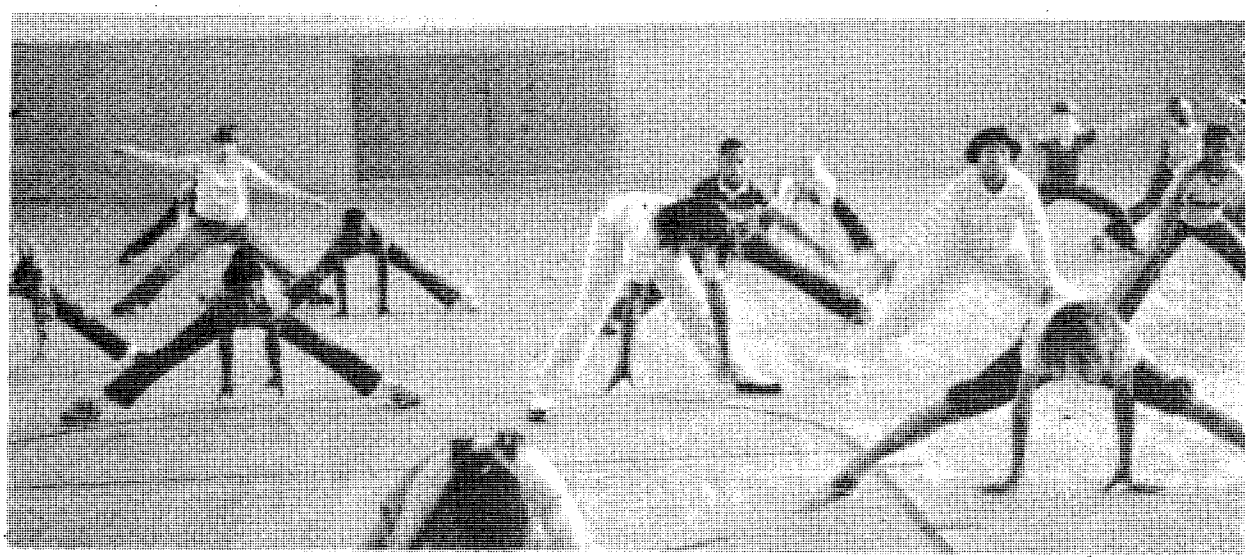
Learning good eating habits and what exercising can do for people are things children can use all their lives. This is exactly what the faculty of Edward A. White Elementary School is trying to accomplish.

According to Liliane Baumgartner, school nurse, the 'Go For It Fitness Club' was organized to help children become more aware of the role of exercise and diet in staying healthy.

Nancy Waldrop, gym teacher at White, came up with the idea of a class for overweight and underweight children. "There was a need for these kids to get some kind of help. So with the help of the nurse and principal, we were able to come up with this class."

There are about 30 children enrolled in the class which meets for two 15-minute periods, Monday through Friday. Wednesday is for catching up on classroom work, movies, lectures and rap sessions.

Waldrop said there is no stigma associated with being in the class. "One reason is because we call it a fitness club. Belonging to this club has a certain status, since not everyone can belong. In fact, a lot of the other school children do things so they can participate in the club on Tuesday." Tuesday is bring-a-friend day.



Connie McReynold

Students in the fitness club begin their activities.

The program consists of activities with high energy levels like jump rope, running, hula hoops and ball skills.

"I've lost five pounds, two and a half last Friday," Tara Dorsey, fourth-grader said. "This is helping me lose weight," Maria Sandobal said.

Donald Fisher, fourth-grader remarked, "I think it is a good program. I'm learning what to eat and what I shouldn't eat, plus how important exercising is."

"We encourage the students and they suppo each other," Mrs. Baumgartner said. She keeps re ords and charts on each child's progress and doe weekly weigh-ins on Friday.

"I advise the children on diets, but I don't pu them on a diet. They keep a record of what they'v eaten for one day and we will discuss it," sh said.

The children's enthusiasm was evident in the class earlier this week, as Alvolita Benson summe up why she enjoys the program, "It's fun!"

A GOOD PART-TIME JOB IS HARD TO FIND.

If you're headed back to civilian life, reserve yourself an extra income one weekend a month.

Did you know that one out of three Americans now "moonlights" to help make ends meet?

But as a returning veteran, you don't have to "moonlight." If you want an extra income, just "weekend" once a month with your local Army Reserve unit.

For instance, an E-5 with four years' experience now earns over $115 for a weekend's work. Over $1,922 a year, counting two weeks annual training pay.

As a Reservist, you also get PX privileges, low-cost life insurance, and retirement points toward a pension which begins five years before Social Security.

Wouldn't it be nice to have an extra income waiting when you get home?

It can be arranged. See your reenlistment NCO or unit commander. Or talk to your in-service recruiter, listed below. Act fast. Good part-time jobs are scarce.

Custer Terrace community mayor enjoys new life center building

By Connie McReynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Esther Dean, Custer Terrace mayor, may be the envy of other community life mayors on post.

The Custer Terrace Community Life Center recently moved to its new home, the old Custer Terrace Officers Club building on Kandle Drive.

Mrs. Dean is not a new face to the life center that services families in about 1,000 quarters in the Custer Terrace housing area. She has only been mayor since February, but had been the vice-mayor before.

"We're trying to get community involvement in the community life center," she explained. "There are a lot of lower enlisted servicemembers who live in this housing area and many of them don't know we exist."

She said the life center volunteers and staff put out a monthly newsletter and flyers of life center happenings that are given to area coordinators to hand out to residents. "We always need publicity," she said.

Mrs. Dean has nine staff volunteers who help whenever they can. "Right now, we're busy trying to start a tiny tot program. I've seen the families here try to get their children in Patch, some distance away, and there is a need for this kind of program in our own area.

"Also, since we do have mostly young families, we try to gear our activities toward the family such as having a community barbecue. There are some teens too, so we have a youth dance on Fridays."

Army establishes new evaluation program

By Bill Reynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Army has established a new "report card" for soldiers.

Formerly, the Army's skill qualification test (SQT) program was the report card for a soldier as he or she advanced through professional development courses in the Non-commissioned Officer Education System. Now the SQT is changing directions.

Soldier progress will now be measured by the Individual Training and Evaluation Program.

The ITEP is designed as a more modern system. Jeanette Pattilo, alternate test standard officer, Directorate of Plans and Training, explains it as a three-tier system that allows commanders to judge the indiviual level of training in their units.

ITEP consists of a commander's evaluation, hands-on testing and written SQTs. She explained the commander's evaluation allows testing of those skills that are considered necessary to support that particular unit's mission. Commanders will base these tasks on the soldier's manuals. These manuals and their supplements are already a part of individual and unit testing.

The second phase of the ITEP comes in with the hands-on portion. This portion is given to all soldiers from private to sergeant first class. The hands-on portion is given yearly to active-duty soldiers and every two years to the Reserve component.

Both the results from the commander's evaluation and the hands-on portion remain with the unit. This allows the commander to have a ready reference with which to plan training.

The final phase of the program is the SQT. Commanders receive a report back from the Army Training Support Center at Fort Eustis, Va., informing him of how each individual soldier scored. Commanders can tabulate those scores, according to Mrs. Patillo, and determine areas of strength or weakness in their soldiers skills.

"ITEP marks a new direction in soldier evaluation," said Maj. Mike Rees, testing officer, Army Training Support Center, Fort Eustis, Va., "It provides the unit commander results suited to training and personnel management with few administrative requirements."

Post-wide billiards tourney

The 3rd annual post-wide pool championship will finish at the Foxhole Recreation Center tomorrow. It is open to all Fort Benning active duty personnel. Trophies will be awarded to first and second place finishers. For further information, call 544-6079/7122 in the afternoon or evenings.

Bake sale

The Custer Terrace Community Life Center is hosting a bake sale Monday at the shoppette on Craig Drive. Residents are asked to donate baked goods and everyone is invited to take part in the sale.

Are you a drill wife?

We missed you at our last meeting. The next one is tomorrow at 2 p.m. in the Bouton Heights/Davis Hills Community Life Center. All drill sergeant's wives are invited. A belly dancing demonstration will be performed by Naome. If possible bring your favorite dish and the recipe. An award will be given for the best dish. For more information, call Mildred at 689-3477 or Vicky at 689-5242.

Pool changes hours

The Briant Wells indoor swimming pool has changed it hours of operation. It will be closed for maintenance on Mondays and Tuesdays except for "Swim for Your Life" members from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. On Wednesday through Friday, it is open for these members from 11 to 1 again and then from 1 to 7 p.m., it is open for all swimmers. The Saturday, Sunday and holiday schedule is from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. for all swimmers.

ARC summer youth program

The American Red Cross (Fort Benning) is taking applications for its summer youth program. If you are 14-18 years old and interested in volunteering, please contact Paul Oswald, ARC youth director at Martin Army Community Hospital, 544-4223/3213.

TOPS group meets Monday

The Fort Benning Chapter of TOPS (Take Off Pounds Sensibly) meets every Monday at 6 p.m. in building 2608 on Dixie Road. For additional information, call Georgia Johnson at 568-7111.

Post Exchange news

The main exchange and concessionaires will be open payday Monday this month. Exchange officials announce the April 30 hours to be from 11 a.m. through 5 p.m. Normally, they are closed on Mondays, but the PX is trying to serve their patrons better by opening when Monday is a payday.

There is a new post exchange concessionaire. It is a quarters' cleaning service that will be offering quaranteed cleaning. For more details, contact Ms Willie Davis or Matthew Lewis at 563-9978/9979. Their outfit, Starlite Services, Inc., is the only quarters' cleaning service now authorized to solicit patrons on Fort Benning. But this doesn't mean that you can't hire anyone you want to do the job.

Sign Up America

The Columbus Jaycees have joined the race to "Sign Up America," a national campaign to gather signatures to show support for U.S. Olympians competing in the 1984 Summer Olympic Games.

The signatures collected by the Jaycees will be added to a giant scroll and presented to the U.S. Olympic Team. With the scroll, will be a check for $250,000 from the program's sponsors. Signers incur no obligation to the Jaycees or any other organization, they are merely pledging their moral support to America's athletes.

Fort Benning will probably have several shooters from USAMU representing the United States in these Olympics. Capt. Dave King, Fort Benning's Jaycee representative, says "Sign Up America" rosters have been posted on various bulletin boards in the post gymnasiums and in building 4. Show your support. Sign up today!

Girl Scout Day Camp

The Fort Benning Girl Scout Day Camp offers a variety of activities for Girl Scouts and non-Scouts from the first through sixth grades. The dates for this year's camp are June 11-15 but you must sign up by May 4. The girls may enjoy crafts, games, swimming, cookouts, camping and an overnight. For further information, call 689-9635/1371/8543.

Parents honor teachers

The teachers and staff of Morris R. McBride School were honored with a tea April 3 that was given by a group of parents. Among the more than 50 people attending were Dr. Rolla Baumgartner, superintendent of Fort Benning Schools; Suzanne Williams, deputy superintendent; and Dick Skinner, deputy superintendent for logistics. The tea was the parents way of telling the teachers "thank you for everything you do for us and our children."

SIDS chapter meets Monday

The Sara Crystal White Chapter of the National Sudden Infant Death Syndrome (SIDS) Foundation will meet Monday night at 7. The meeting will be held at the Bradley Executive Branch of First Federal Savings and Loan Association on the Beallwood Connector. For more information, call Pat While at 689-0912.

Calvary Christian School

The annual Spring Festival will be held at Calvary Christian School next Friday from 3 to 8 p.m. The school is located at 7556 Moon Rd. Games, rides, a country store, spaghetti supper and lots of prizes will make this a fun time for the entire family.

Registration for new students, pre-school through 8th grade, are also being taken now. Call 322-1491 for kindergarten information and 323-0467 for information concerning grades 1-8.

Midland horseshow

The Midland Three Day Event, qualifying trials for the U.S. Olympic Equestrian Team, will take place May 11, 12 and 13 at Hardaway Farm, Grey Rock Road, Midland, Ga. The weekend events that are a benefit for the Springer Opera House, include dressage, cross country jumping and stadium jumping.

If you are a member of the Springer Opera House Guild, you are entitled to admision for all three days, reserved parking, listing in program and use of the membership tent throughout the festivities. For further information, contact Mrs. Ray Wright at 561-8102.

Chess tournament

Soldiers strive for Expert Field Medical Badge

By Bill Reynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Soldiers from six different military installations and from as faraway as Army Reserve units stationed in Florida arrived at Fort Benning to take part in the 34th Medical Battalion's annual Expert Field Medical Badge (EFMB) testing this week.

The EFMB is the peacetime Army's highest qualification badge for medical personnel.

According to Lt. Col. Gerald D. Poe, 34th Medical Battalion commander, "The purpose of the test is to provide recognition to members of the Army Medical services for the attainment of technical skill and proficiency in the performance of the field medical functions."

The test, according to Poe, is "physically tough," both medically and militarily. Successful contestants get to pin on the Caduceus and stretcher that signifies that this is no ordinary person.

Infantry and Medical branch soldiers are the only ones authorized to wear a qualification badge for their specialties. This practice stems from World War II correspondent Ernie Pyle's observation that the Infantry soldier and the ever-present medic actually faced, more closely, the horrors of war and should be recognized for their sacrifices.

The badges authorized were the familiar Combat Infantryman's Badge and the Combat Medic's Badge.

During times of peace, it was decided by DA that soldiers who demonstrated unusual skill in the two branches should be recognized for their achievement also. So the Expert Infantryman's Badge and the Expert Field Medical Badge came into being.

In order to wear these badges, soldiers had to successfully complete a test to determine if they were qualified.

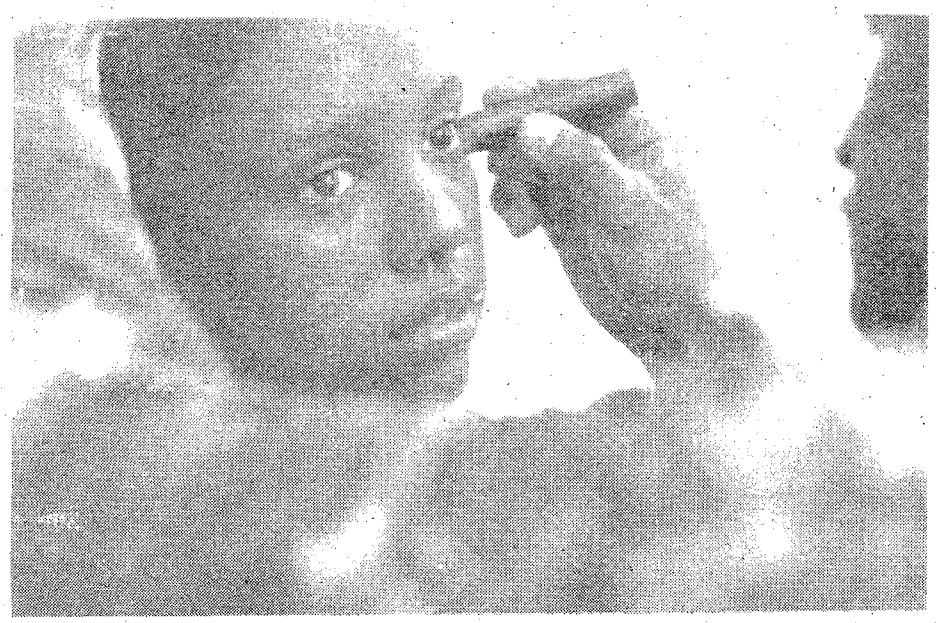
The test isn't easy.

According to Capt. Anita H. Eggert, a clinical staff nurse at Martin Army Community Hospital and one of the test proctors, only about 30 percent of those people who start the test are expected to pass. She says the reason most medical personnel even take the exam is because of the challenge.

"The soldier is undergoing quite a bit of testing," commented Eggert, "Performance area testing, a litter obstacle course, 12-mile road march, and prior to that, they take a written and a PT test, so it's quite a challenge."

Eggert, who because of her job, can't wear her EFMB on her duty uniform, claims wearing of the badge tells the public, "This person has gone through a challenge to become an expert in a field medical environment."

The test is open to all members of the medical field from the medic that works with the Infantry units to nuclear lab technicians.



Pvt. Elizabeth A. Bailey resigns herself to having a green face at the camouflage station of the EFMB test.

Pvt. Steven L. Ralston, field medic, Co. B, 197th Support Battalion, 197th Infantry Brigade (MECH) (SEP), checks a water sample to ensure that it's safe to drink as part of the General Subjects portion of the EFMB test.

EFMB candidates hit the road for the final event, a grueling 12-mile timed road march.

Fort Benning Community Theater is alive and well

By Vic Prophet Jr.
Theater Critic

The Fort Benning Community Theatre is alive and well as evidenced by the delightful current production of the 1971 Stephen Schwartz musical, "Godspell."

"Godspell" is based upon the Gospel according to St. Matthew, modernized with up-beat music, a casual but colorful and innovative set and some of the nicest blocking this reviewer has seen lately.

The cast of nine actors/singers/dancers was energetic and was obviously having great fun in their opening night performance last Friday.

Joel Hensley, in the lead role of Jesus, exhibits a fine rapport with the audience and fellow players. His performance was effective and even and he seemed to have an excellent understanding of the underlying purpose of his role.

Kevin Lawhorn immediately impressed this reviewer with his fine, clear singing and speaking voice. Although a comparative newcomer to acting, Lawhorn's portrayal of John the Baptist and Judas was smooth for the most part with only a little of the opening night jitters evident. Particularly impressive was the smooth transition he makes from John the Baptist to the character of the traitor, Judas Iscariot.

The remaining cast, Angela Terry (an extraordinarily fine voice), Darlene Glisson (who auditioned on a dare), PFC Robert Benlien (43d Engr. Bn, another first-timer), Suzette Landry (whose energy throughout was effervescent), Marilyn Davidson (whosegrace and technical clarity in the choreography is magnificent), 1st Lt. Crystal Brunstein (197th Supt. Bn), Norma Kuehl (who seemed to be having the time of her life throughout the production), and PFC Tonda Mott (TASC Photographer and described by the director as "a joy to have in the cast") all impressed this reviewer with their spirited dancing, singing and acting.

Musical accompaniment was provided in a highly professional manner by 283rd Army Band members; Sp4 Jonathon A. Paremske (piano), Sp4 Charles Eiland (bass guitar) and Sp5 David Pino (percussion), and Ira Smith, MSAD guitar instructor on lead guitar. It was as near perfection as this reviewer could have hoped. Their timing and enthusiasm was exceptionally good. Musical productions are by nature the most difficult of theatrical endeavors, requiring countless hours of rehearsal. The combo is deserving of the highest praise for their obvious dedication to providing the smooth musical continuity needed to pull off "Godspell" in the fast-paced manner in which they did.

Director Abby Duncan has created a delightful show in this production of "Godspell". She has proved that quality theatre is available at Fort Benning. Her imaginative blocking and use of virtually the entire theatre for entrances and exits is a fine tribute to her talent. Rob Munro's colorful and functional set and excellent lighting design are worthy of considerable note. He was ably assisted by veteran thespian Sp4 James Nicholson. Additional "techies" are Sp4 Lyle Diederichs, SSgt. Alvin Umphfres and Paul "Cecil" Lenic. Duncan and Munro have indeed chosen well in presenting "Godspell" during this, the American Theatre Month and the Easter season.

Missing "Godspell" at the Community Playhouse, located at the corner of Wold and Anderson Avenues, would be depriving yourself of a bright and happy evening and a delightful addition to the whole family's cultural good health.

The musical will run again at the playhouse tonight and tomorrow with curtain time at 8 p.m. Tickets are a mere $2 (a terrific bargain) and are available at the playhouse, telephone 545-5057.

Salisbury Fair

Columbus's annual Salisbury Fair kicks off next weekend with a Riverfest on Friday night. The 6-10 p.m. outdoor party will feature plenty of food and entertainment including country band "Bandana".

The festival will be held behind the Columbus Iron Works Convention and Trade Center and will cost $1, according to its sponsors, the Historic Columbus Foundation and the Columbus Jaycees.

The Salisbury Fair will begin its activities on May 5 at 10 a.m. There will be more than 100 craftsmen and artists selling their works and many food booths open until closing at 7 p.m. Sunday's hours (May 6) will be from noon to 7 p.m. Tickets for the fair are $2.

Entertainment contest

The Music and Theatre Section of Morale Support Activities Division is sponsoring a "post wide entertainment contest." The contest will be held at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center Sunday. If you enjoy singing, dancing, juggling, magic, or just being entertained you will want to join the fun.

For more information, call Claud Rivers at 544-3079, through Saturday between 1 and 8 p.m.

Horse show

Goodwill Industries of the Chattahoochee Valley, Inc. is sponsoring the 8th Annual Greater Columbus Horse Show Saturday. The show begins at noon and will continue throughout the day with another show beginning at 6 p.m. Both shows will be located at the Columbus Fairgrounds.

Tickets can be purchased for $2 at the gate. By donating useable items to help Goodwill Industries, you may receive free admission.

For more information, call 324-4366.

Callaway Gardens

Callaway Gardens' mile-long Robin Lake Beach is the site of a festive Plant and Craft Fair tomorrow and Sunday between 10 a.m. and 6 p.m.

An extensive selection of native trees and shrubs, herbs, and many cultivated ornamentals including hanging baskets, bedding plants and house plants will be for sale. Callaway Gardens' horticulturists will be on hand to provide helpful information on the growth requirements and habits of each plant species.

For this special weekend, Callaway Gardens' regular admission will be $5 for adults and $1 for children ages 6-11. Children under age six are admitted free.

For more information, call 663-2281 (ext. 191).

Andersonville exhibit

New exhibits telling the story of the largest Confederate military prison during the War Between the States will be opened to the public at a special cermony Sunday at the Andersonville National Historic Site.

John Tucker, superintendent of the historic site, said representatives of the National Park Service, the U.S. Army and local elected officials will be on hand for the 2 p.m. ribbon-cutting at the park's newly renovated museum.

The site was added to the National Park System in 1970. For more information, call Tucker at (912) 924-0343.

Astros baseball

The Memphis Chicks challenge the first place Columbus Astros tonight and tomorrow at Columbus' Golden Park at 7:30 p.m. The Birmingham Barrons play the Astros Sunday and Monday at 7:30 p.m.

VA Q and A

(Editor's Note: Following are representative questions answered daily by VA counselors. Full information is available at any VA office.)

Q — I am a disabled veteran receiving nonservice-connected pension under the Improved Pension Plan. I recently got a notice that I was awarded social security benefits. Should I notify the VA of my new award now or wait until the end of the year when I receive my Annual Income Questionnaire Card?

A — You should notify the VA of your social security award immediately to prevent an overpayment. To properly adjust your award, the VA needs to know the date you received your first social security check and the amount, including any back pay. You should report awards for your dependents also. If you receive a social security letter, send a copy to the VA Regional Office which has jurisdiction of your records.

Q — I have been advised that I have a VA educational overpayment. I do not have the money at this time to pay it all back. What can I do?

A — If you are returning to school in the next 45 days, you may request that the VA withhold your overpayment from the funds due you at that time; otherwise, you should set up arrangements to pay back the money in monthly installments.

Q — My husband died in 1967. At that time I applied for a VA pension and have been receiving $98 per month but have not received any increase in five years. I can't afford to pay my bills. What can I do?

A — As long as you remain under the protected VA pension program, in which your income cannot exceed $6,000, you will continue to receive $98 per month unless you lose a dependent. You may request that you be considered for the Improved Pension Plan. If VA determines you would be eligible for a higher amount, you may wish to elect the new program. (VA)

Crime doesn't pay

Private (E-1) James V. Seiber Jr., 444th Transportation Company, 67th Maintenance Battalion, 36th Engineer Group (Combat), was sentenced to confinement at hard labor for three months and forfeiture of $397 pay per month for six months for willful disobedience of a noncommissioned officer and disrespect toward two noncommissioned officers. Private Seiber, on one occasion, failed to obey an order to be at ease, and on two occasions used rude language toward two noncommissioned officers.

Private (E-2) Donald M. Peterson, Company C, 3rd Battalion, 7th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade (Mech) (Sep), was convicted of absence without leave and sentenced to be confined at hard labor for two months, to forfeit $300 per month for two months, and to be reduced to E-1. After an authorized emergency leave, Peterson failed to return to his unit for 36 additional days.

Specialist Five Vincent G. Spann, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor, 197th Infantry Brigade (Mech) (Sep), was convicted of conspiracy and robbery. With another soldier, he picked up two soldiers who were returning from Steffi's Bar on Victory Drive and offered them a ride to Kelley Hill. Once they were in the car, the other soldier held a .45 caliber pistol on the victims while he and Spann robbed them of cash and a watch. Spann was sentenced to be reduced to E-1, to forfeit all pay and allowances, to be confined at hard labor for four years, and to be dishonorably discharged.

SFC Ruben R. Gonzalez, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, Special Warfare Training Battalion, Fort Bragg, N.C., attached to ANCOC, The School Brigade, Fort Benning, Georgia, was found guilty of aggravated assault by attacking a senior noncommissioned officer with a knife. He was sentenced to be reduced to the grade of E-4 and to forfeit $303 per month for six months.

Sp4 Joseph Judah, Medical Company, MEDDAC, was sentenced to a bad conduct discharge after being found guilty of larceny. The accused, after being left alone in a friend's room, entered a locked drawer and stole five one-hundred dollar bills.

Private (E-2) Tiberius D. Mays, 598th Meintenance Company, 67th Maintenance Battalion, 36th Engineer Group, was convicted of larceny. Private Mays broke into the barracks room of some fellow soldiers who were on leave during the Thanksgiving weekend and stole several of their stereo components. He subsequently sold these items in a local pawn shop. The court sentenced Mays to be reduced to the lowest enlisted grade, confinement at hard labor for six months, and forfeiture of $497 per month for six months.

Best Ranger Competition separates best from rest

The third annual David E. Grange Jr. Best Ranger Competition will be held May 4-6 at Fort Benning.

Named in honor of former Benning commander and Director of the Ranger Department, Lt. Gen. David E. Grange Jr., the three-day competition is a comprehensive test of Ranger Skills.

Ranger Department Director Col. Tex Turner described the event. "The Best Ranger competition is the most demanding military competition I have ever seen. The Rangers who dare to participate, and dare is the appropriate word, undergo an extreme test of mental and physical abilities. These Rangers are tested to the maximum. It is written, 'Rangers don't ask of themselves, they demand.' Well, take my word for it, these guys have to demand."

Teams from the 82d Airborne Division, the two active Army Ranger battalions, National Guard and Reserve Ranger units, Air Force, Navy and Marines as well as Fort Benning have been invited to the competition.

The two-man Ranger teams will be graded on rifle marksmanship, parachuting, physical fitness, land navigation, long distance marching and swimming. Traditional Ranger skills will also be included in the competition.

Awards to the winning team will be presented at 10 a.m., May 7, at Victory Pond. Gen. Grange and Florida businessman Richard Leandri are expected to present the award, consisting of an Army Commendation Medal and a set of engraved pistols.

Dull looking used car may be worthwhile buy

Like a diamond in the rough, that dull-looking used car on the lot could be a worthwhile buy. And the car that shines like a diamond could turn out to be a clunker.

How do you tell the difference?

According to the American Automobile Association, assessing the way a car has been driven, along with the care and maintenance it has received, are the best ways to do this — even more important than the mileage.

A 1972 Federal law makes odometer tampering illegal. The law also requires the seller to sign a statement indicating the correct mileage at the time of the sale.

But you still need ways to find out if you have a clunker or a gem. One way is to road test the car — and not just around the block. Ask to keep it overnight for a closer examination.

If you [illegible] as bewildered by what goes on under the hoo[illegible] most people, get a reliable mechanic to give t[illegible] through checkup. Even if you have to pay [illegible] could save you a bundle [illegible] on.

The Better Business Bureau cautions that an experienced body shop can make an old clunker look like new. So look beneath the paint and polish to be sure the body is sound and original. Checking for rust in the trunk and under floormats is always a good idea.

There are many guide books available — primarily to car dealers — which list prices for used cars based on averages; other lists show the average bank loan value.

The main books used throughout the country include the National Automobile Dealers Used Car Guide (N.A.D.A.), the Kelley Blue Book, Glass's Guide, Galves Auto Price List, the Red Book and the Black Book — all of which provide a value from which buyers and sellers can agree to negotiate.

Dan Ray, Executive Director of the National Independent Automobile Dealers Association in Raleigh, N.C., says the books are essentially dealer tools and not consumer tools.

The dealer can use the book to his advantage by quoting, for example, the low side of an average price range.

He advises buyers to do comparative shopping and read community newspaper advertisements to get an idea of prices in their particular area. (AFPS)

Parents attend computer workshop; learn same skills taught their children

By Connie McReynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The parents of children attending Edward A. White Elementary School recently got together to learn basic computer skills.

Kitty Goding, president of the Parent, Teachers and Children organization, said many parents had brought up the idea of a computer seminar and she took the suggestion to Joann Alam, White School principal.

"I coordinated through Faith Middle School to use their computer room. At White, we only have two computers now. We hope to have 15 next year," she said.

Jerry Christie, computer coordinator for dependent schools, taught the two three-hour workshops to approximately 30 parents.

Mrs. Alam said there were many reasons for the parents wanting to learn computer skills. "Some of the parents have computers in their homes and decided they wanted to progress in their knowledge and some wanted to know what their children are learning in school. Besides that, it is something parents and children can do together."

Clothing sales no longer sell 'issue' insignia

Dallas — The Army and Air Force Exchange System (AAFES) will no longer be able to sell "issue" insignia to customers in military clothing sales stores (MCSS).

"Issue" insignia includes all Army and Air Force metal and embroidered rank, unit military insignia, patches, medals and awards formerly supplied by the Defense Personnel Support Center (DPSC) in Philadelphia.

A Department of Defense decision prohibits DPSC from further procurement of military insignia for resale. AAFES is now solely responsible for the procurement of all insignia for sale in MCSS.

"These procurement changes have affected insignia availability, and during the next few months, we may experience periodic, temporary shortages," explained William J. Schultz, chief of Military Clothing Branch, Headquarters Army and Air Force Exchange Service. AAFES-managed Army and Air Force MCSSs have stocked 1,380 insignia items from DPSC as well as items procured from commercial sources. (AAFES)

Sunday's clock advance costs one hour sleep

On April 29, at 2 a.m., your clock springs ahead one hour as daylight savings time begins.

The idea of using daylight hours advantageously is not new. Benjamin Franklin, while ambassador of France, woke up with the sun streaming through the window one spring morning and realized that the rest of Paris was still sleeping. This wasted daylight annoyed him and he came up with the idea of adjusting time according to the seasons to make the most of the extra daylight available in spring and summer.

But it was one of Old Ben's few ideas that did not catch on when he suggested it back home. At the time there were no established time zones in the United States.

By 1883, however, the U.S. railroads, concerned that trains were not running on time, created four time zones to eliminate the confusion caused by the more than 100 local sun times in use across the nation. From 1883 to 1918, the idea caught on throughout the United States, and the trains kept better schedules.

The first federal legislation on the matter was enacted during World War I, with passage of the Standard Time Act on March 19, 1918. That act adopted the four railroad time zones — eastern, central, mountain and Pacific — and created a fifth for Alaska. To conserve fuel and aid the war effort, the act also provided that the standard time of each zone would be advanced one hour for seven months of the year, beginning in early spring and ending in the fall. Thus developed the slogan still used today: "Spring Forward; Fall Back."

From 1920 to 1940, after the federal law was repealed, many states and municipalities by statute or local ordinance provided for local daylight saving time. Then, during most of World War II, from Feb. 9, 1942, until Sept. 30, 1945, daylight saving time was enacted again.

At war's end, various localities went back to the confusion that prevailed for years, noted in springtime newspaper headlines such as "America Again Starts Living on Scrambled Time;" "Wildcat Daylight Saving Time Goes Into Effect."

In Iowa, for example, there were 23 different combinations of dates on which community areas shifted to and from daylight saving time. Montana had areas on daylight saving time that required fishermen to fish on standard time.

Some other confusion that resulted included a visit by Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia. Arriving in Virginia, he found no reception committee to greet him. An official in the State Department had failed to notice that that particular part of Virginia had not joined the rest of the state on daylight saving time.

Man has long been preoccupied with his relationship to time. Lord Byron said in his poem Manfred, "Think thou existence doth depend on time?" He supplied his own answer when he wrote, "It doth."

With that in mind, don't forget to set your clocks and watches ahead one hour before going to bed on April 28 or you'll wake up running behind. (AFPS)

Father, son reunited at 'Artic Drummer' training

By Willie Means
197th PAO

FORT DRUM, N.Y. — Operation "Artic Drummer" did more than just provide cold weather training for one member of Fort Benning's "Forever Forward" Brigade.

As the brigade wound down two weeks of successful training the morning of April 1, an unscheduled event took place in the brigade's headquarters; a family reunion.

After more than 17 years, 1st Lt. Mark Damian Marek, deputy provost marshal for the brigade, was reunited with his father Walter J. Marek who lives in Lopez, Pa., approximately 250 miles from Fort Drum.

"I couldn't believe it. He was actually here," said the younger Marek, now a native of Dearborn, Mich. "My parents separated when I was 8-years-old. Since then, he was always one place and I was in another with my mother; always too many miles apart to personally see each other."

When Marek's parents separated in 1967, he remembers first heading for Pennsylvania. After a brief stay there, he and his mother relocated to Ohio, Washington State, and finally Michigan.

"We moved around a lot and I never had the opportunity to even talk to Dad on the telephone," said Marek. "We kept in touch through letters, post cards, and sometimes there would be 'fuzzy pictures.' I knew someday we just had to see each other again."

Lieutenant Marek completed high school in 1976. In August 1981, he received a bachelor of science degree in criminal justice from Wayne State University in Detroit.

"I always had an interest in criminology. Plus, I was curious about the military. While in high school, I had two nominations from the United States Military Academy," recalled Marek. "I was only in high school and wasn't really ready for the military. But during college, I saw a way to satisfy my interest in criminology and my curiosity about the military. I decided I wanted to be a Military Policeman."

Marek entered the military immediately following college graduation. After basic training at Fort Jackson, S.C., he attended Officer Candidate School here.

"I graduated with 50th Company, Class 1-82. I had a lot of luck going with me at the end," stated Marek. "I was one of the last to get assigned and I just knew I was going to be given Infantry: I got military police. Then three days after our last physical training test, I busted my ankle. I had to hop across stage with a cast on my leg."

Marek's luck followed him to Fort McClellan, Ala., where he attended military police school. It was at McClellan where he finally spoke to his father on the telephone.

"It was in the Spring of 1982 that I finally spoke to my father again," said Marek. "Since then, we've kept in touch. Just before we left for Fort Drum, I let my father know I would be in that area. It was the closest we had been since 1967. He took a chance and came up hoping he would get a chance to see me. I'm really glad he did. I was getting out the jeep at headquarters and was informed that I had visitors. I immediately knew it had to be him."

Marek stated, "There were no tears but you would have to go through the experience yourself to understand my feelings."

Management association offers scholarships

The Fort Benning Management Association is seeking applicants for its yearly scholarship program, according to James Kvicala, president of the organization.

All active duty or retired military personnel and active or retired federal civil service employees and their family members, residing within a 50-mile radius of the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning area are eligible for the scholarships.

The association will select a recipient for a $900 per year scholarship to Troy State University at Fort Benning, which the school donated to the association. The association is tentatively planning to provide additional funds for books and supplies.

This scholarship is good only at the Troy State Fort Benning branch and is not transferable to any other Troy State University location. However, upon completion of the one-year scholarship, the student will be eligible to transfer to the Troy State main campus at Troy, Ala., without paying out-of-state tuition.

The association will also be awarding two new scholarships this year; a $200 per quarter or $600 per year scholarship to Troy State University at Fort Benning and a $150 per quarter or $450 per year scholarship to any accredited college or university.

Applicants are required to write a letter to the Management Association, formally requesting consideration for the scholarship, including highlights of applicant's academic career and extracurricular activities. The letter should also explain why the applicant should be selected to receive the scholarship.

Along with the letter, applicants should include a copy of their high school transcript, a completed application to Troy State University or the college of their choice, and a copy of their request for SAT or ACT scores. Applicants must also submit three letters of recommendation, with one, if practical, from their principal or high school guidance counselor, transcripts from any colleges previously attended, and a statement of employment indicating applicant's employer, including name, and address, and applicant's job title.

Selection for the scholarships will not be dependent upon economic need alone. Each applicant will be judged on citizenship, high school grades, achievement tests, individual skills and school and community activities. There will be no discrimination on the basis of sex, race, national origin, handicap or marital status.

Applications must be submitted to Louise Wells, building 4, room 645, no later than June 30. For further information call Mrs. Wells at 545-4772/5860. (USAIC PAO)

2-69th Armor command changes

Lieutenant Colonel Joseph E. Conn relinquished command of the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor, 197th Infantry Brigade, to Lt. Col. Lon E. Maggart during a change of command ceremony Friday on Kelley Hill's Essebagger Field.

Maggart comes to Benning from the Civil Affairs Office, Third Armored Division, Germany. Prior duty assignments include Fort Monroe, Va., and Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, where he was a tactics instructor at the Command and General Staff College (CGSC).

He is a graduate of CGSC and had previously received a bachelor's degree from Kansas State University and master's degree from the University of Utah.

Conn's next assignment is to be with Fourth Army Headquarters, Fort Sheridan, Ill. (USAIC PAO)

Safety office offers motorcycle course

The Fort Benning Safety Office is offering a motorcycle safety course to improve motorcycle driving skills.

The program is designed to minimize chances of having accidents and may reduce rider's insurance premiums by as much as 10 percent. The course is not for beginners.

Attendance is open to all military, civilian and dependents of Fort Benning personnel. The advanced motorcycle course is being offered free of charge by the Motorcycle Safety Foundation's Better Biking Program.

The course will consist of three and one-half hours of formal classroom instruction followed by a three-hour road test. Students are required to provide their own motorcycle and safety equipment.

Safety equipment will consist of helmet with transparent shield or goggles, gloves, shoes or boots(cover ankles), jacket or long sleeve shirt, and long pants.

The advanced motorcycle course will be conducted on May 5, in building 328, Brown Hall, at 9 a.m. Remember, this course is designed to enhance motorcycle driving skills and it may save lives in addition to saving money on insurance premiums.

If you are interested in attending this course, please notify the USAIC Safety Office, 545-3267.

New reup criteria culls ranks

The Department of the Army recently clarified its reenlistment policies for mid-term soldiers.

According to SFC George D. Patrick, reenlistment NCO, Headquarters Command, USAIC, the policy is designed to keep only the best soldiers in the Army. He says, "Soldiers on their second or third enlistments that have less than 10 years in the military will have to meet certain criteria.

"Those soldiers that enlisted in the Army and took the Armed Services Vocational Aptitude test before Jan. 1, 1976 or after Sept. 30, 1980 will have to have a GT score of 100 before they can reenlist. If they don't have that score then they must have a SQT score of 80 or more."

Patrick explained those soldiers that tested before the 1976 date or after the 1980 date who don't have a SQT score must have have a GT of 100 or better and two scores on the ASVAB above 85.

Soldiers tested between those dates must have a GT score of 107 or an SQT of 80.

Those soldiers, he explained, who have an SQT score below 60 must have a GT of 107 and two scores on the ASVAB of 90 or more. (USAIC PAO)

Pay call — plan before taking leave

When planning your leave, you should do the following:

- Check the number of days you have accumulated.
- Do not take more leave than you can accrue by the end of your enlistment. (You are authorized 30 days a year.)
- Check your leave and earnings statement — is your leave balance up to date?
- If your leave balance is incorrect or you have questions about your leave, check with your PSNCO.
- You must have sufficient funds to cover anticipated expenses.
- If you work three-quarters of a work day and your supervisor approves and verifies it, that day will not be counted as a day of leave. The same applies if you work three-quarters of a day upon your return from leave.
- Plan your leave carefully — have a great vacation — allow plenty of time for a safe, punctual return.

FTS abusers will be caught

By Bill Reynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

"Before you pick up that office telephone and make that 'friendly' long-distance call, you had better think twice."

These are the words from Lt. Col. Lonnie J. Bellamy, commander, U.S. Army Communications Command. He says Fort Benning has the capability to obtain information that should put a stop to "friendly" calls on military phones.

"Beginning soon, unit and directorate telephone control officers will receive computerized printouts of their activities' use of Federal Telecommunications Systems (FTS) for outgoing calls," said Bellamy.

The printout will list: the date of call, the extension from which it was made, the time length of the call, and the number called. In the case of an FTS call that includes an area code, the name of the city will also be indicated.

"Army Regulation 105-23 prohibits the use of the official installation telephone system for unauthorized personal calls," explained Bellamy. "The FTS monitoring program will assist telephone control officers and supervisors in determining fraud and abuse of the official telephone system."

Bellamy explained how use of the system at another installation slashed their telephone bill from more than $75,000 yearly to just $5,000.

Insurance rates drop for many civilians

WASHINGTON — A recent review of premium rates for the Federal Employees Group Life Insurance Program brings good news for most employees.

The U.S. Office of Personnel Management has issued a new rate schedule that officials say "provides for generally lower premiums for all coverages." This means the program's rates for basic coverage will be reduced by 8.3 percent. No premiums will be increased as a result of the new schedule.

Under option A (the $10,000 of additional coverage), premiums will be reduced for all age categories. For option B (the multiples of salary) and option C (family coverage), enrollees under age 55 will benefit from reduced premiums and those 55 and over will continue paying the same premiums currently in effect.

Officials explain that the savings realized will vary depending on the age of the enrollee, and, for those in option B, the amount of insurance in force.

An OPM announcement says the change derives from a year-long study of mortality experience under the program. That action marks the first time experience has been analyzed under two optional coverages that took effect in April 1981.

Officials say reduced premiums will go into effect the first pay period beginning on or after May 1, 1984. For retirees, the new rates will be reflected in the June 1 annuity check.

Army turns thumbs down on thumbing rides

By Curtis D. Earp
Post Provost Marshal

Marshal's viewpoint

A familiar sight along Fort Benning roadways is soldiers walking along waving their thumbs at every passing car. The hitchhikers may unknowingly be gambling away their possessions and even their lives when accepting a ride from a stranger. By trying to save the amount of a bus or taxi fare, the hitchhikers have placed themselves in a position to lose something far more valuable than money.

Crimes of violence are increasing daily and many of these crimes begin with a seemingly innocent hitchhiking incident. AR-210-10 specifically prohibits hitchhiking on military reservations. This provision is for your protection. The government is not obligated to compensate you for any loss suffered while hitchhiking on post. The point is clear, accepting a ride under these conditions is dangerous.

When asking for directions, or if someone requests directions from you, do not get close to the car. If you must obtain or accept a ride from a stranger, ask their destination before telling yours. Do not go with a strange group of people that outnumber you or your friends.

If you are approached by a motorist offering an unwanted ride, you should take the following steps:

- Decline the ride
- Try to get a description of the person and the vehicle
- Notice the license plate number
- Report the incident to the MP's or civilian authorities as soon as possible

Hitchhiking can be dangerous whether you are the hitchhiker or the motorist offering a ride to a stranger. Once you pick up a hitchhiker, you become prey to the same possible consequences as the hitchhiker. Remember, hitchhiking is a dangerous pasttime — don't get involved with it.

Obey the law, protect yourself and your possessions. Ask yourself, is it really worth the risk? Play it safe — DON'T HITCHHIKE.

Army adds Grenada campaign streamer to flag

WASHINGTON — "Most Americans understand the necessity for sacrifice and preparedness to protect our liberty and freedoms," Army Chief of Staff General John A. Wickham Jr. said during the April 16 Pentagon ceremony at which the Grenada campaign streamer was officially attached to the Army flag.

After remarks by Army Secretary John O. Marsh Jr., Wickham told an audience of high-ranking Army officers and government officials that the Grenada operation "reflects great credit on the U.S. Armed Forces and their readiness."

"There are many stories to illustrate the dimension of human effort to assure success in Grenada," Wickham noted. "Some involved sacrifice, others involve exemplary service and still others involve support by Army families whose networks of concern at many Army posts supported those who needed help."

"The Grenada operation is a story of the total Army at work," he pointed out.

Army ranger and airborne forces landed on the small Caribbean island early on Oct. 25, 1983, in an action to restore order after a military coup left the country's president and several other leaders dead.

Eighty-nine American soldiers were wounded and 18 were killed during fighting against government troops and combat-trained Cubans on Grenada.

American forces went on to capture huge caches of Soviet and Cuban-supplied weapons and ammunition, leading to the belief that the island was intended as a communist operations base.

"The operation was planned in about one week with only a few days preparation for the units involved," Wickham explained.

"The operation was complex, involving joint activities, long supply lines, and our reserve components," he added. Thousands of soldiers participated directly in the operation, were prepared to deploy, or provided essential support."

"These soldiers worked literally day and night for weeks to assure the success of the deployed forces," said Wickham "I believe the quality efforts of all deserving soldiers warrant recognition. "This is why roughly 85 percent of the individual awards to soldiers were made for achievement — the Army Achievement Medal and the Army Commendation Medal. These were appropriate awards for exemplary achievement by soldiers who participated directly in the operation or who supported it."

'We are all soldiers first, specializers second'

Commentary by Jack Loudermilk
Fort Huachuca ACCENT

My company recently conducted mandatory common task testing, and I was surprised to find that every soldier, regardless of MOS, is required to recognize friendly and unfriendly tanks and aircraft.

Now, I can understand why all of us greensuiters are expected to know about CPR, proper wear of protective (NBC) gear, maintenance of the M16-A1, and other basic soldiering skills. But . . . recognize friendly and unfriendly tanks and aircraft?

Why would I or any other non-combat soldier be expected to know that sort of thing ? Other soldiers in my company — including some senior NCOs — expressed the same concern.

One E-7 commented that even if he did know the difference, there's no way he could stop a tank or a plane with his "little weapon." Another said that he didn't care what they looked like: "If they don't shoot at me, I won't shoot at them."

As for me, I was under the uneducated assumption that certain administrative jobs are of the type that would be eliminated and converted to combat arms in the event of war. I thought maybe that is why everyone is tested on skills normally expected only of combat soldiers.

I decided to check with someone who should know for certain — Fort Huachuca's top reenlistment NCO, MSgt. Edward F. Carey.

I was embarrassed when Carey told me what I should have already known: "We are all soldiers first. Our specialty comes second," he said. He also pointed out the Army tries to let everyone work in his or her specialty but sometimes circumstances get in the way.

> "Why would I or any other non-combat soldier be expected to know those sort of things?"

Carey, having served in the Korean and Vietnam wars, spoke from 27 years of experience, not policy. Several times, he witnessed a combat unit caught in a tight spot. And several times, he saw cooks, clerks and other support personnel grab their weapons and fight alongside their infantry counterparts. He even saw wounded soldiers working in support roles while the support soldiers fought in place of the wounded.

For those soldiers who may still not be convinced of the importance of learning combat skills, consider the following hypothetical situations.

Suppose you are working behind the lines at a desk and you are suddenly called forward to fight. And suppose you're sitting there in a foxhole when you notice a tank or two rolling your way. Wouldn't it be nice to know whether or not it's an enemy tank? If it is, you may want to get the hell out or radio for help.

Or suppose you're dug in and have casualties when you see a helicopter flying your way. Who does it belong to . . . us or them? Do you hide until it goes away? Or do you jump out into the open and try to wave it down? If it's friendly, you could be saved. If it's unfriendly, you could be dead.

If you think you're safe because you don't expect war to break out before you ETS, think about the Marines killed in Beirut and soldiers in Grenada. They too signed up to serve their country during a time of peace.

The next time you start to fuss about whether or not you should be expected to know something unrelated to your specialty, stop and think about what Carey said: "We are all soldiers first."

You fight for the right to vote, why not do it?

"I m hundreds of miles from my hometown. It doesn't matter who wins the local elections there; it doesn't affect me.

"I don't know which candidate to vote for. I don't even know what's going on at home.

"Lots of other people vote. If I don't, it won't make any difference. One little vote doesn't count for much."

These remarks explain why some soldiers feel they need not vote. We've all heard voting isn't just a privilege, it's a duty. True, it's our duty. It's also a freedom gained through intense struggle — and one many nations have yet to attain. We have, though, a few other reasons for voting.

If you ever plan to return to your hometown, you might care about the outcome of local elections. If your children go to school there or if you own property, you'll want to have a say in who's making decisions on such issues.

You and your family also are affected by the results of state elections. State officials decide such measures as state taxes. Your senator and congress representatives have a voice in such federal issues as military pay and other benefits.

You can find out what's going on in your hometown and state by subscribing to your hometown newspaper. Have it sent wherever you're assigned, and read about the local politics. You can also get information about candidates and issues from family or friends at home.

Your vote does count — and often decides the election results. The absentee vote, from military and civilians living overseas, recently helped elect a new official in a Texas state election. The official at the time was again winning until the absentee votes were counted. Those votes were enough to make the difference for the election of a new candidate.

This year gives us another presidential election year. It offers the chance for absentee voters to help select who'll lead our country for the next four years.

The absentee votes of the 1980 federal election made up five percent of the total cast. Much of the local outcome had a margin of less than five percent, proving again that your vote really can make the difference.

VA broadens ex-POWs' health care

The Veterans Administration is reminding former prisoners of war that a law enacted in 1981 broadened the agency's authority to provide health care for ex-POWs and liberalized rules for determining whether compensation can be paid for certain medical conditions.

Residuals of certain conditions suffered in prisoner-of-war camps are presumed to be related to the POW experience. A former POW who is now disabled by one of these conditions may qualify under the law for VA disability payments without the need for additional proof. It will be presumed, in the cases of former POWs, that the conditions originated in, or were aggravated by, military service.

A recent law added dysthymic disorder (depressive neurosis) to a list of such diseases that already included chronic dysentery, helminthiasis, nutritional deficiency (such as beriberi, pellagra), psychosis, and any of the anxiety states including post traumatic stress disorder.

Any former POW who was detained or interned for 30 days or more, and who became disabled by one of these conditions at any time after his military service, will be presumed to have incurred the condition during his military service unless there is evidence of some other cause.

VA Administrator Harry N. Walters urges all former POWs to register with their nearest VA office. Information on disability compensation and other benefits, including medical and dental care, will be provided along with assistance in applying.(VA)

Army makes absentee voting easy

Rules for voting absentee differ from state to state. Your unit voting officer can help you find the rules for your state. Some of the most often-asked questions are:

Q. Who can vote absentee?

A. All United States' citizens 18 years or older who live or will live outside the U.S. during an election period may vote absentee in any federal election.

In addition, all members of the Armed Forces and their families may vote absentee in state and local elections.

Q. I would like to vote but I don't know how. Where can I find help?

A. The Voting Assistance Guide has information about applying for absentee registration and voting. Voting assistance officers have the guide as do counselors assigned to military units and each U.S. Embassy or Consulate.

Q. How do I apply for an absentee ballot?

A. The Federal Post Card Application makes it easy. All states accept the FPCA as an application for registration forms or for an absentee ballot. You can get FPCAs from the same people who have the guide. You may also send a written request for a ballot to your county or town clerk.

Q. Do I have to be registered to vote absentee?

A. State registration requirements differ. Many states allow the voter to both register and request an absentee voting ballot on one FPCA. Others require separate FPCAs for each. Check the rules for your state. (Adapted from DoD FS-13)

'Festival of Running'

The Officers Wives Club will host a "Festival of Running" April 28, beginning at 8:55 a.m. The full day of running activities will feature a 30-mile relay, five-mile run, three-mile run, one-mile run, and a one-mile slogger-jogger. They are open to everyone, military or civilian.

Four hundred and seventy-two awards are up for the taking including a best unit trophy for the five-mile run. Six individual trophies will go to the top three men and women in the one-mile run, and 12 cups for the top three men and women in the three-mile and five-mile run. There will be 453 other individual medals.

Additionally, there will be free beverages and refreshments for all registered finishers. Those who pre-register will also receive a T-shirt and a race certificate on race day.

Ample parking will be available in and around Infantry Hall. Other accommodations include picnic areas, concession stands, displays and demonstrations and entertainment.

Starting times for each event are as follows:

30-mile relay	9 a.m.
Slogger Jogger	10:30 a.m.
5-mile run	11 a.m.
3-mile run	12:30 p.m.
1-mile (men)	1:45 p.m.
1-mile (women)	2:15 p.m.
Award ceremony	3:15 p.m.

AUSA golf tourney

A golf tournament is scheduled for May 16 as part of the post's Armed Forces Week observance.

The four-ball scramble will kick-off at 1 p.m. with a shotgun start.

Sponsored by the local chapter of the Assocation of the U.S. Army, the tourney will take place at the Follow-Me Golf Course. Entry fees cover prizes, food and refreshments. Golfers may sign up at the golf course pro shop. The field will be limited to the first 120 who enter.

Armed Forces Day run

The Morale Support Activities Division will be sponsoring a "Shape Up for Life" run on May 19.

There will be two races, a 2.2-mile event and a 6.2-mile event. Trophies will be awarded to the first three overall finishers, male and female for both events. Medallions will be awarded to the first three finshers in each age group catergory. All finishers will receive t-shirts. For application information, call Morale Support Activities at 545-7519.

Women's softball sign-ups

Sign-ups for the post women's softball league will be held until May 11. You can sign up as part of a team or individually. All active-duty personnel, their family members, retired military, and their family members as well as D.A. civilians working on post are eligible. For more information, call Speedy Austin at 545-2332/5777/7519.

Bodybuilding contest

The Morale Support Activities Division is sponsoring the first ever Mr. and Ms. Fort Benning contest May 19 at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center. The contest is open to any active duty personnel stationed at Fort Benning. Medals will be awarded in five categories; arms, legs, chest, back and abdomen. There will be trophies awarded to the top five overall finishers for both men and women.

Applications can be found in all post gyms. The deadline for all applications is May 14. For more information, contact Speedy Austin at 545-5777/2332.

Post law enforcement civilianizing

By Becky Winters
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning's police force is undergoing some changes as law enforcement operations are converted from military to civilian policemen.

Ten officers in blue uniforms now work for the traffic section of the military police and another 10 work for the DoD police office on post.

Benny Wright, chief of DoD police, supervises 10 men who presently enforce the fish and game regulations and handle animal control.

"My men are just like any other policemen in the sense that they have the authority to give citations or make arrests of anyone breaking any law on post," said Wright. "A lot of people think they are just game wardens, but the DoD police have the authority to arrest speeders, drunken drivers and any other lawbreakers they see."

Civilian law enforcement officers began working on post in July 1983 and eventually all law enforcement officers on post will be civilians.

"We are freeing the MPs to do the job they are supposed to do, which is combat support," explained Wright.

Presently, the MPs still handle range control and traffic control, but as the new department grows it will take over these functions. Fort Stewart, Hunter Army Airfield and Dobbins Air Force Base, Ga., are all policed solely by a civilian force.

Members of the force are all civil service employees and were hired by the Civilian Personnel Office. All have had experience as MPs or else are qualified due to their educational background

Special ceremony held

3rd Rangers give black berets to 273

By Henry Brown
USAIC Public Affairs Office

"We're getting to look more like a ranger battalion everday," were the words used by Lt. Col William C. Ohl II, commander of the soon to be activated 3rd Battalion (Ranger), 75th Infantry Regiment, after 273 soldiers got their black berets in a ceremony last Friday.

The prestigous black beret is awarded after soldiers assigned to the battalion complete either the Ranger Indoctrination Program or the Ranger Orientation Program, both two weeks long.

Junior enlisted soldiers undergo RIP to get physically and mentally fit to become Rangers. And for NCOs and officers, even those who have completed Ranger School must complete ROP to be awarded the black beret, according to Capt. Ernest T. Forrest, battalion civil affairs officer.

The requirements are stringent and Private Dana S. St Onge of Headquarters Company, 3rd Battalion, said he wants to be a Ranger because it's something special. The native of Eugene, Oregon said, "I want to do something different. I want to be a part of the elite."

To earn the beret a soldier must pass a Ranger PT Test (which includes Pullups) and score a minimum of 80 percent, complete a 12 mile speed march in full gear within three hours, a five mile run within 40 minutes, a swim test and walk off a three

Parents can show they care by being involved

By Connie Dickey and Becky Winters
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Children can sometimes find school a frightening experience. With frequent moves, the military child's school experience can be more nightmarish than others.

While educators may argue about the best way to teach a given subject, they all agree that the most successful students are those whose parents are actively involved in their education.

Because of the pressure on children to 'fit-in' at a new place and make new friends, their need for parental involvement in their school activities is greater.

Here at Fort Benning, the military parents have many options to help them know what's going on with their child and what is going on in the school.

Military families are lucky in this respect, because the framework for communications between parents and teachers is already in place.

Every school on post has a Parent-Teacher Action Committee and Parent-Teacher Conferences.

Parent-Teacher Conferences are scheduled regularly during the school year and are a time when parents can find out what is going on in the school, as well as discuss problems their children have. The first conference is held at the beginning of school to give parents general information about the new year.

Individual conferences between parents and teachers are held during the first nine weeks, before the first report cards are given out.

School officials and teachers encourage parents to communicate with their children's teachers, because if a child is having problems, the sooner action is taken, the better.

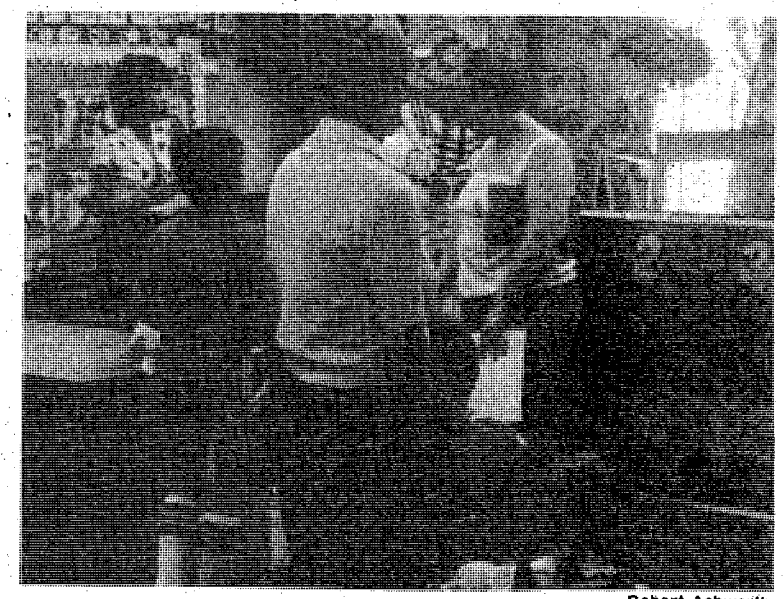
Knowing what is going on at school can give parents valuable clues to a child's behavior at home. If a child is throwing tantrums at home, it may be a sign that something at school is too frustrating. Or if a child refuses to participate in activities at school, parents may need to work on building the child's self-confidence.

Participation is another way parents can involve themselves in their child's education. There are positions for parent volunteers in the Fort Benning Schools, to help as chaperones on field trips, to work in the schools' media centers and to share their expertise in some way with the classes.

The schools keep a resource file on parents who are willing to come out and share their specialties, such as stamp collecting, crafts and unusual professions.

Children develop self esteem and self confidence by successfully completing tasks that they undertake. Parents can help with this by praising their children's efforts and successes. All children want parental approval and will become more confident in their abilities if parents are supportive.

If you're concerned about your child's performance in school, a special time each evening set aside to go over the day's lessons with the child can be very positive. If you listen to what the child tells you, it will show that Mom and Dad really care about what's going on. This can create a positive reaction; the more you care, the better the child will do in school.



Robert Ashworth

Many parents visited Mrs. Ernestine Ezekiel's kindergarten class during Dexter School's open house.

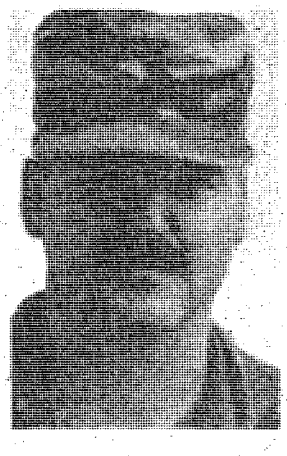
Various voices

Why is it important for parents to be involved with their children's schooling?

Jean Allen, family member-"Because a teacher can't give enough support and guidance that a child needs; some of it has to come from the parents. Staying in touch with school activities will help children benefit from mistakes their parents made when we were in school."

SSgt. Tommie Smith, 608th Ordnance Co.,-"Because it's important for parents to make sure their children achieve the knowledge needed to get an education. Some kids learn faster than others so parents need to be aware of their child's progress."

Ssgt. Charles Hammock, Enlisted Management-"Too many people don't get involved with their kids, and then the kids go on to learn and grow up too fast. By communicating with your child and their teacher you can learn by finding out what they're learning.



Ssgt. Scott Davidson, Bradley Master Gunner Course-"Because parents need to know if their kids are getting the proper schooling. You don't know if your child has a good or bad teacher unless you're acquainted with them and you get to know them."

Voter's week

The right to vote is one of our most cherished civil liberties. On Nov. 6 we and our families, by exercising this right, will help elect the next President of the United States. We will also help elect over 500,000 public officials at the federal, state and local level.

The Secretary of the Army and I strongly encourage you to vote. By voting we fulfill our obligation as citizens of this great nation and express our opinions on the issues and the candidates in a meaningful way.

Proclamation

In recognition of Hispanic's contributions to America, the week of Sept. 10-16, 1984 has been proclaimed as "National Hispanic Heritage Week." This year's theme is "Hispanics – A Part of America's Excellence."

Hispanic Americans have played a long and distinguished role in the history of our nation. Their accomplishments have been many and varied. They include such areas as law, science, religion, agriculture ad the Armed Forces of the United States. In the defense of our nation many Hispanic Americans have received the highest decoration our country can bestow — The Medal of Honor.

Fort Benning has scheduled several activities, static displays and events in observance of Hispanic's heritage. All military personnel, their dependents, and all civilian personnel are invited to observe and participate in these events during Hispanic Heritage Week.

Hispanic couple sings it their way, directs Spanish choir at Sand Hill

By JoAnne Mercer
Chapel publicist

"Spanish people have the need to hear the Word in their own language," say Harry and Maribel Romans. The couple have been involved with the Hispanic congregation at Sand Hill Chapel since coming to Fort Benning four years ago. Maribel sings and directs the choir and Harry plays the guitar for the Sunday afternoon mass.

Both were very active in Catholic youth groups in their native Puerto Rico before Harry joined the Army eight years ago.

The Romans are enthusiastic about the Hispanic congregation and how important it is to do things in your own language and culture. The congregation includes trainees,active duty families and retirees. "We have a variety of ranks represented, but we're Spanish, and that's important," they say.

The choir usually numbers between 10-15 volunteers, and Maribel says, "We sing from the heart and try to get everyone involved." She confesses that, "I didn't know I had it in me and was frightened when I took over leadership of the choir three years ago, but all of a sudden I discovered I could do it."

Harry has been playing the guitar since he was in the third grade and is particularly proud of his 10-string guitar, the "Cuatro", which is the national instrument of Puerto Rico and is currently enjoying a rebirth of popularity.

Harry is NCOIC of Respiratory Therapy at Martin Army Hospital and is finishing his degree at Columbus College. Maribel works at the First National Bank of Columbus in the Fort Benning Main Mall.

Not only do the Romans sing and play for mass, but also perform for other activities on post, in Columbus, and in various other parts of the state. They fondly recall playing at Riverside for a visiting general from Honduras. "We played and sang songs telling of friendship and unity — it meant so much to the Spanish people there."

This Sunday marks the beginning of Hispanic Week (Sept. 9-16), and the Sunday 1 p.m. mass at Sand Hill Chapel will feature special music by the choir plus a picnic on the grounds celebrating Hispanic culture. Festivities will include a cake cutting ceremony and a procession with participants wearing clothing representative of their native countries.

197th mortar squads compete in shoot-out

By Debbie J. Mundy
197th Public Affairs Office

All was quiet as the early morning mist began to rise. Then, the silence was broken by a series of dull reports.

Combat Support Company (CSC) and Charlie Company, 1st Battalion (Mechanized), 58th Infantry (Patriots), had begun their Mortar "Shoot-out" at Coolidge Range.

The mortar squads had been standing by, ready and alert, waiting for the competition to begin.

Alpha, Bravo and Charlie weapons platoons, and CSC 4.2 mortar platoon were all part of a stiff competition to determine the most proficient individual, squads and platoons in the unit.

The competition included day and night live fires. There were no dry runs and the competition was timed and scored the first time on a go/no go basis.

The targets were old vehicle relics placed on the impact area. The distance ranged from 1,600 to 2,000 meters.

The platoon used 4.2 inch and 81mm mortars mounted on Armored Personnel Carriers (APCs).

It took the coordination of three different sections to fire the mortars. The Forward Observer (FO), known as the eyes of the entire operation; the Fire Direction Center (FDC), commonly called the "brains" of the operation; and the Mortar Squads.

The procedures began with the FO initiating a call for fire over the radio to the FDC. The FDC plots the data on firing tables then sends the information to the mortar squads who put the data on the tubes and fire a round down range. Once the round impacts, the FO makes corrections and send adjustments to the FDC. The procedures are repeated until the round comes within 50 meters of the target.

"When the round is 50 meters from the target," informed Sgt. Kendall R. Brown, forward observer, "then all the other mortars prepare to fire on the target also. This is called the 'fire-for-effect' phase. The result should give you total destruction."

The mortar squad consists of a squad leader, a gunner, an assistant gunner, an ammunition handler and a driver/ammo handler.

The squad is responsible for placing data on the mortar and preparing the ammunition to engage the target. Once the data is placed on the mortar and the ammo is prepared, the assistant gunner drops a round down the tube and the round is launched following a chain reaction that ignites the powder used to charge the system.

Debbie Mundy

All four 4.2 mortars of CSC, 1-58th, fire at once in the 'fire-for-effect' phase of a fire mission.

The success of the mission depends on the ability of the squad to coordinate and communicate quickly as a team.

"It's good training. We don't get to shoot live fires that often," stated Cpl. Kevin M. Boyle, a squad leader. "It's especially good for those right out of AIT. Live fires help you learn your job more quickly."

Mortarmen have a lot of pride in what they do. The soldiers were constantly on the move and the competition was fierce.

"When you have a shoot-out, everyone wants to be the best," said Boyle. "It's great to compete. Our job is to get needed support to front line elements in a timely manner."

in the criminal justice field.

They have to know and understand all the regulations and federal laws that apply to Fort Benning, as well as the state laws of Georgia and Alabama, since the post covers all these areas.

The force is responsible for enforcing fish and game regulations on the 285 square miles of land on post, 60 miles of fishable water and 18 navigable river miles. "We do a lot of surveillance of hunting areas at night," said Wright, "because there are certain hunting areas where people like to poach." Poaching is defined as killing game during unauthorized time periods, such as out of season or night hunting.

DoD police are called when people see stray or wild animals on the loose and officers will use dart guns to apprehend the animals, which are then taken to the post vet.

"If the animals have a collar, we call the owners, who have to come down and prove the animals have had their shots before taking them back home.

"If they cannot show proof the animals have their shots, the vet will inoculate the animals and then the owner will have to pay for the shots before taking the animal home," said Wright.

"A lot of times people call us when there is a dead animal in the road, but we do not remove these animals," said Wright. All units on post are responsible for keeping up different areas of post, and the MP operation desk can tell people which unit to call in these cases, Wright explained.

The DoD police also patrol the river checking for fishing violations and use their boat to assist in search and rescue missions off post when requested by the local police authorities.

Presently the MPs still handle range control and traffic control, but they do not patrol in the areas where the DoD police are.

Quality merchandise, reasonable price are PX goals

By Becky Winters
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Selling high quality merchandise at reasonable prices is the goal of the post exchange system, according to Jack Heagle, Fort Benning exchange manager.

"We are always doing surveys on prices," said Heagle. "The regional Army and Air Force Exchange System (AAFES) office sends us requests for specific item price surveys and they compile the price comparison data from all AAFES locations in this region."

Unlike commercial businesses who set their prices according to cost and profit schedules, prices at the exchange are set by the regional AAFES office which follows a mark-up schedule set by Congress. The local manager has no authority to set prices, though he does have the authority to run manager's specials on certain items.

Since AAFES is a nonappropriated fund organization, their employees are not paid by tax money. They pay salaries out of the money they take in. Any profit they make after expenses are paid goes to the Army and Air Force Welfare Fund which is used for building recreation facilities for use by military personnel and their families.

"We do not carry or stock seconds," Heagle said. "If we find second quality merchandise in a shipment, we send it back. If any of the merchandise was on the shelf, we would immediately pull it and notify our quality control lab in Dallas."

The PX has approximately 35,000 items for sale and carries name brand merchandise. They also have a special order department where people can order items not in stock.

If there is demand for an item that is not in stock, the PX will sometimes put in a test order and see how the product sells. If people buy it, the item becomes a regular part of the stock.

If a customer is dissatisfied with merchandise, the PX will exchange it or give them a refund without question. "We are a customer service oriented operation," said Heagle. "If people are not satisfied with our product, it is to our advantage to make them happy."

Exchange officials admit that sometimes they cannot sell items as low as stores downtown, who can run "door buster" specials on certain items at a loss to the store, just to bring in business.

"If people can find an item they need downtown at a cheaper price, we encourage them to buy it there," said Heagle.

The 1984 AAFES price survey found that people who shop regularly at AAFES will save nearly 24 percent over "off post" shoppers.

meter high board blindfolded.

The beret, Forrest said, was worn by the Rangers in Vietnam.

It became part of the uniform with the activation of the 1st and 2nd Battalion, 75th Rangers in 1974.

Forrest said that everyone from the battalion commander down to the private must earn the beret.

Although a soldier earns the Black Beret that does not make the soldier Ranger Qualified according to Forrest. A soldier must still attend formal Ranger Training to wear the Ranger Tab.

Rainy day helps him decide to join Army

By Bill Reynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Editor's NOTE: This is the third in a series dedicated to the instructors and cadre of the Infantry Training Group. This week the BAYONET is highlighting an instructor assigned to the Basic Rifle Marksmanship team, SSgt. John R. Smith.

Smith

It was a rainy day in SSgt. John R. Smith's hometown of Camden, Ala.,that determined his choice of careers.

That day, Smith, who was a heavy equipment operator working on the county roads, decided to travel to nearby Selma, Ala., to see the Army recruiter.

According to Smith, because it was raining and road construction had come to a halt, he had time to think about the direction his life was taking. "I was tired of working for the county and wanted to do something with my life."

Smith claimed he sometimes had problems with his name when he checked into hotels or cashed a check, but he had no problems entering the Army.

"I'd always considered an Army career," Smith said. "I tried to get into West Point after high school, but my grades weren't high enough." Smith comes from a family where military service is a tradition. His grandfather, father and brother all served during various wars.

Smith's entrance into the Army started with his trip to Selma that day and to Montgomery, Ala. to be sworn in the next day. It was just before the Christmas holidays in 1975 when Smith went to Fort Jackson, S.C. and put on the Army's uniform. "I had been in the Army for five days when I was sent home on 18 days leave." Smith said.

After the holidays he returned to Fort Jackson to complete basic training. He later went to Fort Polk, La., for his advanced individual training as an Infantryman.

"Smith claimed he sometimes had problems with his name when he checked into hotels or cashed a check, but he had no problems entering the Army."

Upon completion of AIT, Smith was assigned to the 24th Infantry Division at Fort Stewart, Ga., as a 106mm recoiless rifle gunner. He remained with the 24th until June of 1978 when he was assigned to Berlin, Germany.

While he was in Germany his son was born. Smith continued another family tradition by naming his son John Smith.

The Smith family returned from Germany in 1981 and was assigned to the ITG.

Currently, Smith is working with the team concept of basic rifle marksmanship. His team picks up a company of entry-level soldiers and remains with the same soldiers throughout their instruction.

Smith swears by the team concept because it allows him and other instructors to identify and assist the soldiers that have problems qualifying. "We are with the same platoon for eight days," Smith said. "It gives the soldier a 'point of contact' on each and every range he goes to. When he gets to a range in the morning he doesn't have to wonder 'who do I go to with a problem?' He knows he can go ask the NCO who has been with him for the last three or four days." Smith stated that the success of the team concept can be seen in the higher rifle qualification scores of the soldiers.

"Under the old range concept," Smith said, "each day the soldier went to a different range and different instructors. The instructors never knew 'this man is a weak firer and needs extra help.' Under the team concept we know from day to day, so we can identify and give the extra time to those soldiers.

"I think the team is the best thing they have ever done for the soldier."

Smith's familiarity with weapons comes from his experience as a hunter and being on a unit rifle team at Fort Stewart.

Here at Fort Benning he doesn't hunt, preferring to spend his off-duty time with his family.

SSgt. John Smith instructs a soldier on the M16 rifle range.

Benning selects NCO/Soldier of the year

Bill Reynolds

Volkman

By Bill Reynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The winners of the 1984 Fort Benning Non-commissioned Officer of the Year and the 1984 Soldier of the Year competitions have been announced.

SSgt. Robert P. Volkman, an instructor with the Rogers Branch of the Ranger Department was named Fort Benning's NCO of the year, while Sp4 Kenneth McKenzie was named Soldier of the Year after a post-wide competition.

Both Volkman and McKenzie were selected after winning post-level competitions for Soldier and NCO of the quarter. Volkman claimed he "lucked out" by having both the NCO of the Quarter and NCO of the Year competitions within the same month. He had been selected as the NCO of the Quarter in August.

"I knew what to expect," said Volkman. He credits his success on the board to his job as an instructor. The Rogers branch teaches the latest in Infantry tactics and techniques to students attending the Infantry School.

Volkman also was selected as July's Instructor of the Month for the Infantry School and as the NCO of the Quarter for the School Brigade.

Specialist Four McKenzie, an MP assigned to the 988th MP Company, started his trip to Soldier of the Year honors after winning competitions starting in April.

In that month, McKenzie went before the Soldier of the Month competition in his company. Later he was selected as the Military Police Activity Soldier of the Quarter. McKenzie claimed he actually used those earlier competitions to prepare himself for the E—5 promotion board.

McKenzie went before the promotion board prior to attending the Soldier of the Year competition and scored a near-perfect 248 points out of a possible 250.

The prizes for winning the competition have not as yet been determined.

Last year's winners received trips, dress blue uniforms and cash awards, according to a Fort Benning official. Similar prizes may be awarded this year.

Avoiding x-rays helps medically, cuts costs

By Mary Thompson
Radiation Protection Officer

Will you be one of the seven out of 10 Americans who will have a medical or dental x-ray taken this year? Most of the time that's fine because the x-ray will help your doctor find out what's wrong and decide how you should be treated.

The information from diagnostic x-rays can even save your life. But sometimes x-rays are taken when they're not medicaly needed. And even when there is a good medical reason for an x-ray, if proper care is not taken,the patient can get more radiation than necessary.

Like many things, x-rays may do harm as well as good. X-rays may add slightly to the chance of getting cancer in later life. And if the sex organs are in or near the x-ray beam, changes could result in the reproductive cells. Those changes might be passed on and could cause harm in future children and grandchildren. Because the amount of radiation used in x-ray examinations is small, the chance that x-rays will cause these problems is very low.

Doctors and other medical workers try to protect you from unnecessary x-ray radiation. You can help too. By avoiding x-rays that aren't medically needed, you avoid the risks and you can also avoid unnecessary medical costs.

You may now be asking, "How many x-ray exams are safe?" There is really no answer to the question. There is no number that is definitely safe, just as there is no number that is definitely dangerous. Every x-ray can involve some tiny risk. If the x-ray is needed to find out about a medical problem, then that small risk is certainly worth taking.

Here is what YOU can do:

DON'T INSIST ON AN X-RAY. Sometimes doctors give in to people who ask for an x-ray even if it isn't medically needed. If your doctor suggests an x-ray, ASK HOW IT WILL HELP to find ot what's wrong. How will it help with your treatment?

But, DON'T REFUSE AN X-RAY if the doctor explains why it is medically needed. Remember, the risk of not having a needed x-ray is greater than the tiny risk from the radiation.

If you are pregnant, MAKE SURE YOUR DOCTOR KNOWS OF YOUR PREGNANCY before taking an x-ray of your abdomen or lower back. You should let the doctor know even if you only THINK you might be pregnant. Because the unborn baby is growing so quickly, it can be more easily affected by radiation than a grown-up.

Mammography (breast x-rays) is an important way to detect breast cancer. But, NOT ALL WOMEN NEED MAMMOGRAPHY. Women more likely to need mammography are those with certain breast symptoms, or those past menopause, or those over a certain age with a personal or family history of breast cancer.

ASK IF A GONAD SHIELD CAN BE USED if you or your children are to have x-rays of the lower back, abdomen, or near the sex organs. Gonad shielding should be considered if the patient might have children in the future.

KEEP AN X-RAY RECORD CARD in your wallet. When an x-ray is taken, have the date, the type of exam, and where the x-ray is kept filled out on the card. Then, if another doctor suggests an x-ray of the same part of your body, you can tell him or her about the previous x-ray. Sometimes the doctor can use the previous x-ray instead of taking a new one. Or, if a new x-ray is needed, the previous one might help show any change in your medical problem. You can obtain a card for everyone in your family by writing to this address: Food and Drug Administration, (HFX-28) Rockville, Maryland 20857

Soldier competition runners-up winners in own right

By Bill Reynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 1984 Soldier of the Year and NCO of the Year competitions are now over.

The winners of the quarterly competitions met August 22 at a board held by four command sergeants major, one sergeant major and one sergeant first class. From this board two soldiers, SSgt. Robert P. Volkman and Sp4 Kenneth McKenzie emerged as the top two soldiers on post.

The soldiers' experience in the military ranged from less than a year to seven years. The specialty skills represented ranged from Behavioral Science Specialist to Military Police. Six NCOs competed for honors as the NCO of the quarter, while seven junior enlisted soldiers tried for Soldier of the quarter.

The one thing all the candidates had in common was they had all passed and won similar boards within their units.

Volkman had been before the Instructor of the Year board held in the School Brigade, taking top honors in July. The 25-year-old staff sergeant later took top honors in the post NCO of the Quarter board held in August.

According to Volkman, his normal study habits helped him prepare for the competition. Besides the study involved in teaching Infantry tactics and techniques in Ranger Week for the advanced and basic Infantry officer and NCO courses, he is a student at Troy State University in the evening. Volkman commented that while he was the winner in the competition, it didn't mean the other soldiers were losers. "We are all winners," he said. "I was just lucky, it could have easily gone the other way."

Volkman's competition for the honor was tough when you consider the caliber of NCOs competing. SSgts. Randy L. Ziglar and John W. Burton, both drill sergeants in the Army Training Center, had already been selected as the NCO of the quarter in both unit and post competitions.

Ziglar, a drill sergeant in the 5th Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade, is a member of the U.S. Army Europe Sergeant Morales Club. This club was started to honor the first platoon sergeant of Gen. Frederick J. Kroesen. Kroesen considered Morales to be the best NCO he had met and when he was commander of USAREUR he started the club in Morales' honor. Membership to the club is limited to the top NCOs serving in Europe.

Ziglar

In his seven years of service, Ziglar has won the 1st ITB NCO of the quarter award twice.

Burton, a drill sergeant in the 9th Battalion, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade, had also won the post NCO of the Quarter award before trying for the NCO of the year competition. This meant that he had competed and won at the battalion, brigade, ATC and post level events before appearing at the August 22 board. Volkman called Burton, "my toughest competition."

Burton

The competitors for the Soldier of the Year award had to be just as sharp as the NCOs. While they did not have as much experience, the competition, according to Sp4 Audrey C. Ventour, behavioral science specialist, U.S. Army Infantry Board, was just as tough. Ventour went before two boards in the same afternoon — one for the post Soldier of the Quarter — and two hours later, the Soldier of the Year board. Ventour stated she had barely caught her breath from one board before she was facing another. She won the distinction of being named the Fort Benning Soldier of the Quarter and placed second in the Soldier of the Year competition.

Ventour

Ventour has less than a year on active duty, entering the Army as a PFC because of her degree in psychology. She credits the other soldiers at the Infantry board for helping her become the post Soldier of the Quarter. She claimed the NCOs would ask her military questions during the course of the day. "They would watch TV and read the papers at night and come in the next day and ask me questions." She said.

Ventour is from Trinidad and has set her sights on accomplishing three things: getting her American citizenship this year, her master's degree next year and completing the Primary Leadership Development course next month.

PLDC was a means of preparation for the board for the second place finisher in the Soldier of the Quarter competition. Specialist Four Brenda Witherspoon, administration specialist, HHC, 7th Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade was a runner up in the post Soldier of the Quarter competition. She credits her company first sergeant and battalion sergeant major with helping her get ready for the competition. She had just completed Fort Benning's Primary Leadership Developement Course when her first sergeant informed her he was sending her before the first of several boards. With only four days to prepare for her first board, Witherspoon and her first sergeant worked together over the weekend.

Witherspoon

The day came for the board and Witherspoon said she felt confident. She wasn't nervous for the initial board, held at brigade level, because her first sergeant had given her a dress rehearsal in the conference room to prepare her for the board.

Once she had taken top honors at brigade level, Witherspoon went on to earn Soldier of the Quarter honors at the Army Training Center competition.

Mark Cummings

MOS 91Q—Pharmacy Specialist: Prepares, controls and issues pharmaceutical products under the supervision of a pharmacist or physician, or supervises pharmacy activities.

PFC Cindy Keough, MEDDAC, "There's a lot of responsibility involved in my job. It's very fast-paced, especially now because we're understaffed. Although we're very busy it's important that you're concentrating on what you're doing. It's up to us to fill prescriptions correctly because drugs come at different strengths."

Hiring college grads is something the Army has always done. And lately, we've been doing a lot more of it.

In fact, last year alone nearly 7,000 college grads chose to begin their future as Army Officers.

Why? Some wanted the opportunity to develop valuable leadership and management skills early in their career.

Others were impressed with the amount of responsibility we give our officers starting out. And still more liked the idea of serving their country around the world.

Interested? Then you can start preparing for the job right now, with Army ROTC.

ROTC is a college program that trains you to become an Army officer. By helping you develop your leadership and management ability.

Enrolling can benefit your immediate future, too. Through scholarships and other financial aid.

So the next time you're thinking about job possibilities, think about the one more recent college graduates chose last year than any other.

For details, call Major Neil Ellis at 568-2058, or visit the Military Science Department at Columbus College in Jordan Hall, Room 332.

Spiritual

Leaving behind past brings us closer to God's prize

Chaplain Philip Touw

REFLECTIONS

With all of excitement in Los Angeles during the past several weeks, this year could be called "The Year of the Olympics." The response to the games, both in TV audience and actual attendance, was phenominal. 104,000 people watched France and Germany play soccer; 94,000 saw Joan Benoit win the women's marathon; 12,000 people saw the U.S. Volley Ball team win the gold againt Brazil. What a response! It is obvious that the people of this country love sports.

But I am aware there was another group of people who loved sports as much as we do today. Those people were the ancient Greeks. There was no greater honor for an ancient Greek than to be a hero of the early olympic games — particularly the running events.

Paul, writing to the Greeks in Philippi, knew of their love for running and borrowed language of the olympics to describe what a godly life is all about. (Philippians 3:13-14) He said that when we live a life for God, we, like a runner, need to leave the past behind. Paul did not specifically say what part of the past must be left behind, but I would like to suggest three things we do need to leave behind before we can get on with the business of positive living.

Of the first things which we need to "leave behind" are the negative, destructive attitudes which we carry with us toward and about others. Gandhi once said that he would become a Christian in a minute, if only he could find one. What he meant, I believe, is that Christianity professes an ethic of love, but that ethic is seldom put into effect. Prayer, or reconciliation with the person against whom we have such feelings, can often free us from the chains holding us in the starting blocks. Leave that part of the past behind.

The second things we would do well to leave behind are our past failures and we all have them. We have them in business, family relations, friendships, sports, school and on and on. We can do one of two things with a failure: Failure can establish a pattern whereby we expect to fail and consequently do fail, or we can use that past failure to learn and to grow and to change. The Chinese symbol for crisis is the same as the symbol for opportunity. The same can be true of a failure; it can become the springboard for success.

Finally, I think we need to leave behind past sins — and we all have those, too. Some of us refuse to hear the message of forgiveness. We have a need, it seems, to periodically take past sins out of our "sin-closet" and beat ourselves with them. The message of atonement, the message of forgiveness, declares that if we confess our sins, God is faithful and just and will forgive our sins and cleanse us from all unrighteousness. With confession comes freedom from the power of those sins — forever. It is just as if we had never sinned. The Bible is clear that God forgives us, but maybe the hardest part of forgieness comes when we try to forgive ourselves.

Do you want to run in God's race? Then leave the past behind and reach out for the prize — the upward calling to follow the lead of God's Son, Jesus Christ.

Performers schedule special concert

Mickey and Becki Moore, nationally known composers and performers of contemporary Christian music, will be at Fort Benning Sept. 16-18. On Sept. 16, the couple will present special music at the 9:20 and 11 a.m. worship services at the Infantry Center Chapel.

Later that day they will meet with "Youth Alive" at 6:30 p.m. in the TIC Chapel Center. On Sept. 18, they will present a special concert at 7 p.m. at the Kelley Hill Chapel. The public is cordially invited.

Mickey and Becki were singing in Greenwich Village seven years ago when they made a leap of faith and totally committed their talents and lives to the service of God.

Now their ministry of music includes four albums, numerous cross-country tours and many appearances on national television. Their "Love Song for Number Two" has spent months at the top of contemporary Christian music charts. It is extremely popular at Christian weddings.

Becki wrote the song for Mickey who says, "Each time we sing that song we make a commitment to the Lord and to each other of our love for Jesus and for each other."

Their music is fresh and original and sparkles with their own special sense of humor. One initially skeptical campus music critic wrote: "I am one of those people who is strangely unaffected by concerts. Mickey and Becki Moore proved to be the exception to that rule. Their show is professional, humorous and moving."

In addition to their concerts that are open to the public, the Moores will be meeting with the soldiers of the 197th for prayer breakfasts and other special getherings where they will share their personal beliefs and experiences of the Christian faith.

For more information call TIC Chapel at 545-2050 or Chaplain David Bon at 544-1692.

ning. An excellent team of Catholic educators from the Fort Benning/Columbus area will lead the sessions. CCD teachers and others interested in learning teaching skills are cordially invited. For more information call 544-3305.

Saturday mass

Beginning this Saturday the regulr 5 p.m. Catholic mass will move to Kelley Hill Chapel, building 9023 (next door to the Kelley Hill Theatre).

PWOC studies

Beginning Sept. 17, the Protestant Women of the Chapel will offer three courses of study in building 2605 on Dixie Road, beginning at 9 a.m. The courses are:

1) The Book of Philippians — which will deal with many basic truths of the Christian life, such as handling anxiety, controlling your mind, the purpose of suffering, and the Christian's perspective on death. This study will present an excellent opportunity to know more intimately the Apostle Paul and study in detail the incarnation of Jesus Christ.

2) The Book of James — will include temptations and trials, how to handle your tongue, intercessory prayer and healing. This course is a textbook for Christian living with instruction, admonition, and encouragement.

For further information on these two Bible studies call Jan Priddy at 682-2813 or Karen Stranz at 687-8322/

3) "MOPS" — Mothers of Pre Schoolers — this program is an unique opportunity for mothers of young children to find fellowship, support, training and fun. There is also a craft time for stimulating creative expression and learning new skills. For more information contact Brenda Pace at 682-9479.

IMPOC: Mastering mortar gunnery

By Henry Brown
USAIC Public Affairs Office

One of the most technical courses in the United States Army is taught here at Fort Benning, according to Captain Mark E. Mercer, chief of the mortar division. And that is the Infantry Mortar Platoon Course (IMPOC).

IMPOC is a six-week course taught to commissioned and non-commissioned officers who are or will be assigned to mortar platoons.

The soldiers start off the course with mechanical training, said Captain David W. Chambers, chief of the mechanical training branch.

Chambers said during this phase the Officers and NCOs are taught how to set-up and use 81mm and 4.2 inch mortars.

They are taught to use the M2 Aiming Circle. This is a device that is mounted on a tripod and used for aligning the guns in a particular direction.

The students are also taught drills used during live fire exercises.

The next phase of training the soldiers are taught is tactical employment of the guns and Forward Observer procedures. FOs locate targets, specify ammunition type and tell the Fire Direction Center where the rounds hit.

The students get two weeks of training on the FDC, according to the chief of the FDC branch, Captain Brad R. Bergeron.

The FDC is a center that controls direction, elevation and charge information which is passed on to the gunners so they can make the necessary adjustments on their guns to hit the target.

"During this phase of training," said Bergeron, "the Officers and NCOs are taught about FDC personnel and equipment, the use of the M16 plotting board, other firing charts and safety."

The plotting board is a device used to assist in computing firing data to relay to the guns.

The new Mortar Ballistic Computer will replace the plotting board, and instructors are now undergoing training on the computer. In April 1985, IMPOC will be extended two weeks when they add this training to the student's curriculum.

The computer is hand held and has the capability to store battlefield information, including the locations of FOs, weapons, known points and no fire zones.

Sgt. 1st Class Richard Cardogan, a senior instructor, said the soldiers fire five times throughout the course as a part of reinforcement training. At the final phase of firing, the mortarmen are divided into three groups to reinforce all phases of training.

One group fires the guns, another group works as FDC and the last group serves as FOs.

Second Lt. Wesley Jennings, a student said, "I think the training will be useful, especially to me, because I am a cavalry officer and being assigned to a cavalry unit I'll have a better opportunity to use it."

Jennings is assigned to the 1st Cavalry Division at Fort Hood, Texas.

Army cracks down on fraudulent travel claims

By Kelly Walker
Provost Marshal Office

The Department of the Army has targeted the month of September to begin the Army wide Travel Claim Campaign. Thousands of dollars are stolen each year through fraudulent travel claims. Not only is this a crime against the Army, this is a crime against you, the taxpayer.

Before going further, a definition of fraud is in order. Basically, fraud is deceit, trickery, or breach of confidence used to gain some unfair or dishonest advantage. As the definition indicates, fraud is not an offense under the Uniform Code of Military Justice or Title 18 of the US Code. Rather, the term is a generic designation for a category of criminal offenses involving fraudulent behavior (i.e., making a false statement, making a false claim, or bribery).

Although fraud is inherently difficult to detect, there are "indicators" of fraudulent activity which can signal a potential problem. In order to detect fraud and reduce loss to the government, commanders and supervisors must be able to recognize these indicators and take appropriate action. They should realize that what appears to be a minor administrative discrepancy could prove to be fraud against the Army. It is primarily the responsibility of the commander to detect and report the incidence of travel fraud. However, fraud is a concern to all of us. Supervisors at all levels must be alert for possible fraud and report it.

Here are two examples of travel fraud.

— In January 1983, a master sergeant was accused of submitting lodging receipts totalling $700 a month for TDY from January 30 to March 21, 1982. His actual total expenses were about $1,400. During questioning he admitted the claim was part of a deal with an unnamed hotel employee to have various females live with him at the hotel.

— In April 1983 an anonymous letter indicated that a captain did not rent the car or stay in the hotel he claimed for his trip to Sudan. He claimed $5,652 for lodging, $6,152 for car rental, and $300 for gasoline. He was counting on the political unrest in Sudan to discourage any verification. However, the State Department determined that he did not rent a vehicle and grossly inflated his lodging bill.

Fort Benning is not immune to this growing Army wide problem. Since January 1, there have been four reported incidents of travel fraud at Fort Benning. In order to combat this costly crime, here are a few do's and don'ts for TDY travelers:

Provost marshal

Things That a TDY Traveler Should Do

1. Ensure that you keep receipts for expenses over $25.
2. Handle the government's money as you would your own.
3. Utilize government quarters and mess when available.
4. Double up with other travelers when using commercial transportation.

Things That a TDY Traveler Should Not Do

1. Claim room service meals after already claiming three meals for a given day.
2. Claim the cost of someone else occupying your lodging.
3. Claim unofficial telephone calls.
4. Claim expenses for barbers, manicurists, or masseurs.

Eliminating overprinting saves Benning thousands

By Bill Reynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Land Navigation committee of the U.S. Army Infantry School asked the question "why" and saved Fort Benning more than $200,000.

According to Capt. David G. Evans, OIC of the committee, the school issues more than 400,000 map sheets each year to students in the officer basic and advanced courses, the advanced NCO courses, primary leader development courses, Army Reserve components and other agencies. The committee also exports the map sheets along with a programmed text to other service schools.

The maps were labeled MR6 and MR7 and were part of the programed text on map reading.

In the past, according to Evans, map sheets were obtained from two sources: the Defense Mapping Agency or the local printing plant. When the maps were issued by DMA they required overprinting to mark them MR6 and MR7.

The local printing plant charged $126 per 1000 copies of the map.

The annual cost to the committee of overprinting was $3806.40. This beat having the entire map printed locally for a cost of $50,752.

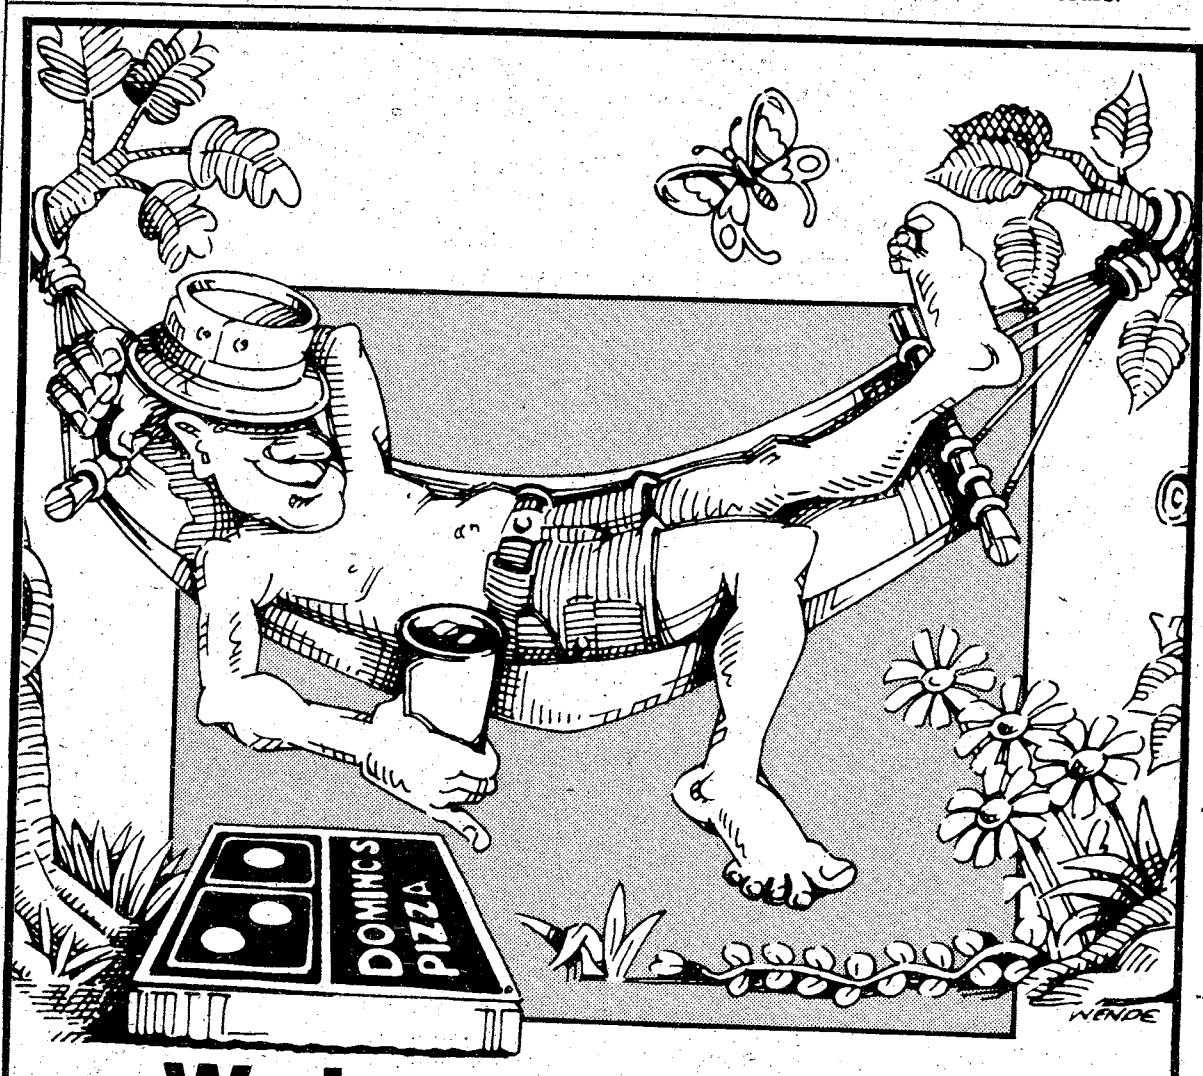
The committee was in the process of revising their manuals when the question of over printing was asked. It was decided to eliminate the three letters.

The sharing of the SPIRIT idea with the rest of the post netted even more savings. The annual allotment of MR6 and MR7 maps printed for Fort Benning came to $203,008. Maps are now ordered from the DMA and issued without over printing.

Theater closing

The Main Post Theater has been closed for renovation. Estimated reopening date is Nov. 1, 1984. For your continued enjoyment in movie entertainment during this period the Sand Hill Theater will be programed for seven days a week operation, with feature show times as follows: Monday - Friday 6:30 p.m., Saturday - Sunday 1:30 & 6:30 p.m.

Watch for feature showings to be advertised in the Bayonet, daily on your Main Post Theater Marquis and at the Main Post Exchange.



We love you just the way you are.

Teachers complete their lessons during the workshop.

Teachers begin school by attending workshop

By Dale Alam
Fort Benning Schools

School started early for 23 Fort Benning teachers, counselors and principals. A seven-day workshop was held in the summer in response to the Fort Benning Schools' efforts to provide a sound, exciting, individualized program.

The participants left the workshop with ideas, specific materials, newly planned instructional units and a renewed commitment to the individual child.

Doctor Carma Hales, director of the Utah System Approach to Individualized Learning Project (U-Sail), was responsible for all this pre-school excitement. This dynamic, energetic, Salt Lake City educator is an instructor at Brigham Young University. She is a recognized writer, lecturer and researcher and at Fort Benning she challenged the participants through demonstrations, discussions and research applications.

Through her Project U-Sail, she is able to provide specific materials, methods and organizational patterns designed to challenge the individual student and support and enrich the classroom teacher's efforts.

The U-Sail Project and Dr. Hales were recognized for excellence by two special Presidential Pacesetter awards for effective educational program development and implementation. Additionally, the project has been recognized by the United States Department of Education and National Institute of Education as an exemplary educational effort and included in the National Diffusion Network's "schools that work."

Females get new cap

Effective Oct. 1, the Army green garrison cap is authorized for wear as an optional item by all female soldiers when wearing the following uniforms: Army green uniform, Army green pantsuit, Army green classic uniform, Army mint green AG388 uniform, Army green maternity uniform, hospital and food service duty uniforms, hospital and food service maternity duty uniforms and flight uniforms on administrative flights.

The difference among the four garrison caps is the color of the braid on the cap: gold-general officer; gold with black-commissioned officer; silver with black-warrant officer and green-enlisted. The female black beret remains the mandatory possession headgear and is authorized for wear until a yet-to-be-determined wear out date arrives. Female enlisted soldiers may continue to wear the female service cap as an optional item.

Effective Oct. 1, all female commissioned and warrant officers will be required to wear either the Army green service hat or the female black beret when wearing the coat of the Army green uniform, coat of the Army green classic uniform, jacket of the Army green pantsuit and the tunic of the Army green maternity uniform. Exceptions to this policy are: when in a travel status or when other headgear is authorized such as the maroon or green beret, garrison cap with Airborne insignia, etc. For specific units, the female commissioned and warrant officers will be required to possess the Army green service cap when the black beret is no longer authorized.

Proper wear position of the garrison cap:

The cap will be worn with the front vertical crease of the cap centered on the forehead, in a straight line with the nose so that the front lower portion of the cap will be one inch above the eyebrows, approximately the width of the first two fingers. The top of the cap will be opened to cover the crown of the head. The bottom of the rear vertical crease will fit snugly to the back of the skull. No hair will be allowed to cover any portion of the bottom edge of the cap.

Hair will not be visible on the forehead below the front bottom edge of the cap.

Wear of distinctive unit insignia for enlisted personnel will be in accordance with paragraph 26-210, AR 670-1. Wear of rank insignia for officer personnel will be in accordance with paragraphs 26-5 and 26-6, AR 670-1. Wear of officer and warrant officer candidate insignia will be in accordance with paragraphs 26-14 and 15, AR 670-1.

Wear of the Airborne insignia by authorized personnel will be in accordance with paragraph 26-30, AR 670-1.

These policies are being incorporated into AR 670-1 currently under revision. (AFPS)

197th wins post best large dining facility award

By Willie Means
197th Public Affairs Office

The 197th Infantry Brigade Support Battalion's motto "Dependable; Ever Ready Support" definitely holds true when talking about the battalion's Dining Facility.

Recently, post food service announced Support Battalion's dining facility as the "Best Dining Facility," in the large category, for the third quarter of this fiscal year.

The "Dependable's" crew competed against other Fort Benning Dining Facilities during the quarter to claim the honors.

"I had confidence the people would do well," stated SSgt. Larry G. Brown, shift leader the morning the post food service team "dropped" in for their unannounced tour We knew we had a good chance of winning."

The "Best Mess" competition is held quarterly and the inspections are unannounced. However, being unannounced suits the "Dependables'" crew just fine.

"If people knew when the inspections were scheduled, everyone would put on false fronts," stated SFC Stephen L. Semmler, administration NCOIC. "By being unannounced, the food service team can get the true picture."

The Dining Facility was inspected in administration, food preparation, and sanitation. Upon completion, the results were sealed in an envelope then later compared with results from other facilities. The Facility with the most points won the competition.

"We figured that we had a good chance of winning," commented SFC Anastacio Guitron, the Battalion Dining Facility Officer. "Since arriving here in less than a year, we've received honorable mention in the Phillip A. Connelly Food Service Competition, and we were selected as "Best Mess" for the first quarter of the fiscal year. We have a good crew and they go out of their way to try and make things nice for the soldiers."

The competition was held the second week in July. Guitron said the Crew had to make no special efforts to prepare for the competition since the cooks hold their jobs in the highest esteem.

"My cooks are proud of their jobs and they keep the Dining Facility in good condition," said Guitron. "We're definitely 'Dependable' and we strive to uphold the tradition of being 'Forever Forward.'"

The Facility will be awarded a trophy in the near future for its achievement.

Commander's inspection tests unit's readiness

By Paula L. Dempe
197th Public Affairs Office

Soldiers milled around nervously, anxiously performing last minute checks on their gear, themselves, and each other. It was time for A Battery, 2nd Battalion, 10th Field Artillery's annual Brigade Commander's Inspection (BCI).

The BCI, an annual event for most units within the 197th Infantry Brigade, is a tool the brigade commander uses to check the readiness and motivation of a unit and its individual soldiers.

During the BCI, the commander and his team of evaluators inspect training, duty rosters, files, fire/safety, commo, NBC, maintenance, field gear, the billets and the soldier himself. Most of the inspection was conducted Aug. 29 and 30.

"The BCI is very beneficial to the unit, explained 1st Sgt. James Keaton. "It keeps us on our toes by forcing us to do things we don't normally worry about doing. The BCI makes us bring everything up to par."

"Alpha Battery set the standards for the BCI last year," 2nd Lt. Dock Wilborn remarked, adding that, "to reach the same level of readiness his year, a lot of overtime was put in these last few weeks."

"This year I had to push everyone to be ready for the inspection. We just returned from NTC about three weeks ago," said Keaton. "We ran the vehicles pretty hard out there. However, we've put in a lot of maintenance work on them since getting back."

Lots of hard work goes into preparing for such a wide-ranging inspection as the BCI. Long hours are spent correcting deficiencies in maintenance, administration and all other areas that combine to create a smoothly working operation.

As a veteran of many past inspections, experts such as the Brigade Command Sergeant Major can learn many things about the well-being of the soldiers solely from the condition of their field gear in the TA50 layout.

"They had the best looking equipment I've seen in a long time," said CSM William Webb. "It was clean, well kept. It was all accounted for. The NCOs in the company are obviously looking after their soldiers. I saw no problem whatsoever."

Survey shows on-post shoppers save more

Shoppers at Army and Air Force Exchanges (AAFES) can expect to save 23.9 percent over shoppers "off-base," according to the latest A.C. Nielsen survey of prices.

In the survey that studied prices at 17 CONUS locations, the savings to exchange shoppers ranged from 5.2 percent for food and beverages to 35 percent for clothing and furnishings.

Robins Air Force Base was the location in Georgia included in the survey group.

Three hundred and seventeen nationally branded retail items sold by AAFES were compared to identical merchandise on sale in communities outside of military installations.

These items did not represent a typical "market basket." Items selected were those which sell in high quantities throughout AAFES and are classified as "volume leaders."

Items included in the study were clothing, toiletries, household items, watches, cameras and luggage, all items which sell in large volume with AAFES worldwide.

Five commercial shoppings were attempted for each of the 317 items at the 17 CONUS locations. Exchange regular prices were compared with "the price of the day" in commercial stores.

If the Nielsen shopper found the items on sale in the commercial stores, the sale price was used to compare with the exchange regular price, even if the same item was on sale in the exchange.

AAFES officials admit that the exchange does not always sell merchandise at the lowest price. Shoppers who are willing to compare and time the purchase of items with local sales can find items at a better price "off-base." However, the study found tht many items in the exchange represent the best buy.

Even with commercial promotions, the study found that the exchange beat competition 88 percent of the time and tied it one percent

The Nielsen survey is commissioned annually by AAFES to verify customer savings and to assure that AAFES is meeting or exceeding its 20 percent savings goal. (AAFES)

Precautions count when storing, transporting food

FORT LEE, Va. — Officials at the U.S. Army Troop Support Agency urge all commissary shoppers to take precautions when transporting and storing perishables anytime, especially if it is hot.

Food-borne illness together with the hot weather can really be an irritation for you and your family.

Warm temperatures shorten the expected shelf life of dairy products and rapidly increase growth of bacteria in products such as meat and poultry. Although you cannot see bacteria, they can threaten your health through food-borne infections and toxicants. Bacteria can be responsible for dollar loss through food spoilage.

Make the commissary your last stop before going home. If you nave a long distance to travel after shopping, carry a cooler, ice chest or other container in which you can keep perishables cool.

Use the special freezer bags, usually available in the commissary frozen food section, to protect chilled and frozen items and make sure that these items are bagged together at the checkout.

Refrigerate perishables immediately after you get home. The easiest way to prevent the bacterial growth which causes spoilage is through proper refrigeration temperature. The temperature inside a refrigerator varies so where you put perishables makes a difference. The coldest part is near the freezing unit and the bottom near the vegetable bin is the warmest part.

Here are some reminders for preserving food items and protecting your family and yourself from food-borne illness:

Dairy products — Store milk and milk products below the freezing unit at temperatures of 32-40 degrees. Fresh milk is extremely sensitive to changes in temperature so a one-degree change can shorten or lengthen its expected shelf life. After pasteurization, good quality milk refrigerated at a constant 35 degrees will have a shelf life of 14 days; at 40 degrees, 7 days; and at 45 degrees, 3½ days. Cheese keeps best at 32-35 degrees, ice cream and custard or cream pies at 10 degrees. Do not refreeze custard or cream pies which have begun to thaw. Bake them immediately and refrigerate until served.

Meat — Refrigerate fresh meat at 32-35 degrees in the coldest part of the refrigerator.

Fresh fruit and vegetables — Store at 32-50 degrees depending on the product. Ripen fresh fruit at room temperature (60-70 degrees) and then store in the refrigerator.

Frozen fruit and vegetables — Freeze at zero degrees and lower.

The best overall storage temperature for chilled perishable products is 34 degrees. If you do not have a thermometer, set your refrigerator thermostat just above the point at which milk begins to freeze (31 degrees). Although the ideal freezer storage temperature of 10 degrees or lower should be attainable in a separate freezer, you may have to accept zero degrees in the freezer compartment of your refrigerator.

To maintain these temperatures, open the refrigerator or freezer doors as infrequently as possible. Decide what you need and remove all of the items at one time. Avoid overfilling your refrigerator. Aluminum foil on the shelves reduces air circulation essential for efficient cooling so do not use it.

Remember, for best results refrigerate perishables at the proper temperature as soon as possible after purchase. (TSA)

Disabled veterans get more benefits

Veterans receiving compensation for service-connected disability may be eligible for vocational rehabilitation counseling benefits under expanded Veterans Administration programs, according to VA Administrator Harry N. Walters.

The basic period of eligibility for vocational rehabilitation services has been extended to a period of 12 years following discharge from active duty or from the date the veteran was notified of entitlement to VA compensation for the disability — whichever is later. The basic period may be extended if the veteran received an upgraded discharge or was unable to enter or complete training for a period of time because of his or her medical condition.

Walters pointed out that the purpose of the vocational rehabilitation program is to assist disabled veterans to overcome an employment handicap which resulted from their service-connected disability. In the case of a veteran whose handicap prevents employment, assistance to achieve independence in living is provided.

The VA provides evaluation and counseling to assist in development of a comprehensive rehabilitation plan designed to suit the disabled veteran's particular needs. (VA)

Doing well in school helps soldier do well in Army

By Connie Dickey
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Second Lieutenant Arthur Hargrove does well in school, always has. In fact, school was once so important he thought he might become a teacher. Instead, he is in the Army and doesn't regret his decision.

"I joined the Army at first because a teacher's salary is not very lucrative," the 25-year-old Californian said. "I checked out the Army and I really liked it, so here I am. I'm not sure I'll stay, but I think I'm in the right kind of job."

Hargrove joined the Army in October 1982 and went through One Station Unit Training here at Fort Benning. The Army took advantage of his leadership abilities and made him a drill corporal for eight months. From there it was Officer Candidate School.

"I got a lot of support from my drill sergeants and the rest of the company cadre. I was asked if I wanted to try for OCS and I told the drill I had thought about it. From there, the company helped me with my packet and I went to my interviews and board. They were always behind me," Hargrove explained.

But getting into OCS proved a challenge. It was not until one year later, in October 1983, that Hargrove was finally accepted. He was initially turned down because he was mistakenly judged overweight.

"I found that being in OCS takes a certain kind of attitude. It's hard at first, but that's a test," Hargrove said.

After OCS, the lieutenant attended the Infantry Officers Basic Course and Airborne School. He is now in the Bradley Commander's Course and will soon be stationed at Fort Hood, Texas.

Except for Airborne School, Hargrove was the top graduate of each course. He has a 100 percent average in the Bradley Commander's Course. "I'm hoping I will continue to do so well," he said.

Weekend

Museum tours

The Columbus Museum of Arts and Sciences, 1251 Wynnton Road, offers regularly scheduled guided tours for the general public. "Family tours" begin at 10:30 a.m. Wednesdays. Admission is free for the public tours. For more information, call 323-3617.

Send it where?

The BAYONET Weekend section offers all organizations and individuals the chance to place their announcements in the post newspaper.

The announcements should be sent to the BAYONET news office in building, room 601. They must be submitted no later than Tuesday at 4:30 p.m. for publication in the paper that Friday.

Recreation area

The Uchee Creek Recreation Area has 30 campsites available for rent. The campsites have water and electrical hookups and a camper service area. For more information about the campsites, inquire inside the recreation center's bait shop. The recreation center is located on the Alabama side of Fort Benning, off 101st Airborne Division Road.

Circus tickets

The Shrine Circus will be held at the Columbus Municipal Auditorium this weekend. Tickets are available at the Outdoor Recreation Office, building 247. Adult tickets are $4 and children's under 12 tickets are $2.

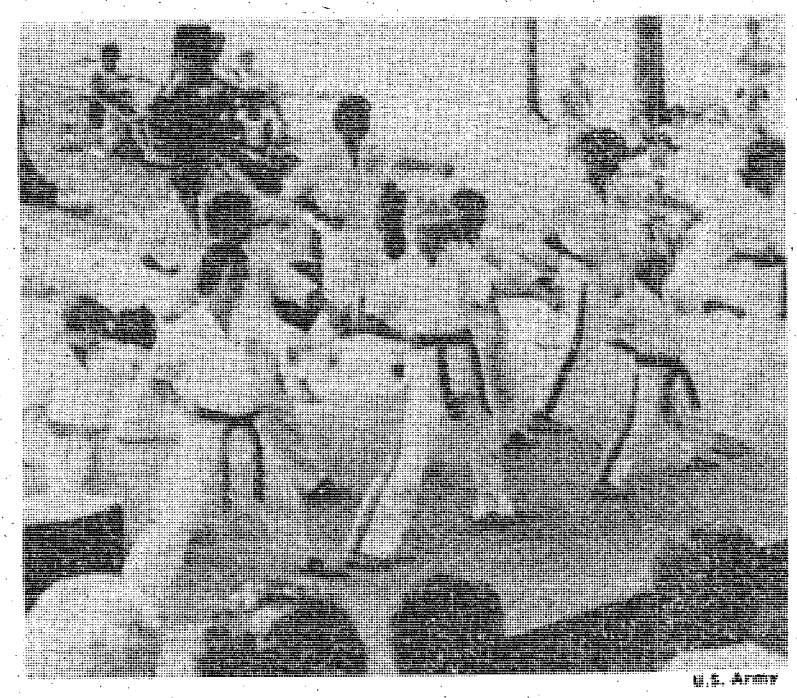
Performances are tonight at 8, Saturday at 10:30 a.m., 2:30 and 8 p.m. and Sunday at 1:30 and 5 p.m. For more information, call 545-4155.

Musical show

The Springer Theatre Company presents the musical hit, "My Fair Lady" now through Sept. 29. Evening performances will begin at 8. Saturday matinees will be given Sept. 15 and 22 at 2:30 p.m. For more information and tickets, call the box office at 327-3688.

DeSoto Caverns holds annual fest for Cancer society

Come for the day, part of the day or the whole weekend. It's September Fest at DeSoto Caverns to benefit the American Cancer Society. It's a way to say we care, with fun, excitement and laughter the whole family enjoys. The 9th annual September Fest will be held at DeSoto Caverns, Alabama's Onyx Adventure Caves, Saturday and Sunday, from 9 a.m. until 5:30 p.m. both days.



U.S. Army

Top regional and national champion clogging teams will participate in the two-day entertainment segment of the festival. Karate, blackpowder gunfights, and a live little theater production of "The Dragon that Giggled" by the Sylacauga Community Playhouse will delight audiences, young, old and just "in-between."

Bluegrass and a mixture of country/rock music will keep audiences on their toes, dancing or just plain loafing-back on blankets along the caverns' natural hillside amphitheater. Scattered picnic tables surround the entertainment stage.

The Arts and Crafts Fair will feature juried exhibitors from throughout the Southeast. Plus, great food and special attractions the kids will love. The Festival Gate is $1, kids under age 4, free. DeSoto Caverns with its Great Onyx Chamber sound and light show will be open for tours. There is a separate admission charge: $4.95 adults; $2.95 ages 4-12, under age 4, free. Tours of the caverns take about one hour, so plan your day accordingly.

DeSoto Caverns is near Interstates 20 and 65, 40 miles southeast of Birmingham in Childersburg, Ala. For festival information, camping and nearby hotel/motel information sheets, contact DeSoto Caverns at (205) 378-7252. (DeSoto Caverns)

Hunting season opens

By Mark Cummings
USAIC Public Affairs Office

When most sports fans think of fall the first thing that pops in their minds is football.

But for outdoorsmen who avoid the "armchair quarterback" epidemic, autumn means hunting.

Once again Fort Benning opens its wooded areas for local hunters to sharpen up their marksmanship skills.

Before heading to the woods all personnel authorized to hunt on post must have a resident or nonresident hunting license.

Georgia State licenses are available at the Permit Issuing Agency, building 247. Once this is obtained, the only thing needed is the Fort Benning hunting permit, which can be bought for $6. Permits may be bought in building 247 also.

For personnel hunting deer or turkey, a post deer permit (Form 48) or a post turkey permit (Form 10)must be obtained. These permits must be filled out prior to removing the kill from post and returned by all permit holders within 15 days of close of the respective season.

All hunting permits will expire Sept. 30. However beginning Sept. 21, new permits will be sold which will be valid Oct.1. These permits will remain valid through Sept. 30, 1985. Anyone hunting on post will be required to have a valid permit in their possession.

After receiving your license and permit you must then make sure your firearm meets some simple regulations.

All shotguns must be 20 gauge or larger. For deer hunting there can be no more than five shells in the magazine and chamber combined. For all other game, shotguns are limited to three shells in the weapon.

All muzzle-loading rifles must be .44 caliber or larger.

A solid outer garment of flourescent orange material must be worn by all hunters, with the exception of duck and dove hunters, during the entire deer firearm season. Orange headgear must also be worn.

Military personnel permanently assigned to Fort Benning who bag a deer on the Georgia side of Fort Benning do not have to tag their kill like all other hunters. However a deer carcass must be marked with a tag from the Alabama Big Game license if it is bagged by a permanently assigned soldier on the Alabama side of post.

Using dogs to hunt deer is prohibited throughout Fort Benning. However hunting drives are permitted with parties limited to a maximum of eight hunters.

A set of platform scales will be provided at building 5883 for hunters to weigh deer.

The following is the complete hunting schedule for the 1984-1985 season:

GAME	OPENING DATE	CLOSING DATE	TOTAL BAG LIMIT
Deer(Archery/Either Sex)	Sept. 15	Oct. 19	*Three; one of which must be antlerless. Antlerless deer can be harvested only on dates indicated or during archery season.

Close plays at home plate were common this week during action in the men's post softball tournament. The tournament concludes tonight with the championship game to be played at Gowdy Field at 5:30 p.m.

Museum run scheduled for October

By Mark Cummings
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 1984 National Infantry Museum Run is slated for Oct. 13 and race officials hope a few minor changes made for this year's event will lure a record number of participants.

The fourth annual run will start Saturday morning at 9 outside Doughboy Stadium. Runners will follow the same five-mile course as in past races and finish inside the stadium.

Bernie Pfeiffer, race official, said he expects another large turnout for the race. More than 6,000 runners have participated since it first began in 1981, raising more than $30,000 for the museum.

Pfeiffer mentioned that officials were hoping to attract some of the top runners from Atlanta and the surrounding area, but they weren't about to shell out money for big-name athletes.

"Instead of trying to attract the superstar-type of runner we decided to forget the big names and concentrate on making the race enjoyable for the average individual runner," Pfeiffer said.

He added that more than 40 track clubs received invitations to the run, including many military installations in the southeast.

Awards will be given to the top three overall runners and the top three in each age bracket. Some divisions will present awards to the top five runners.

Due to the demand from the units, trophies will be given to the fastest formations. Each formation must consist of at least 50 soldiers.

Awards will be given to 7-man male teams and 5-man female teams in several categories.

Beginning this week entry forms will be available at the Infantry Museum, all post recreation centers and gymnasiums and local sporting goods stores in Columbus.

Entry fee is $5 per runner, whether he or she is running individually or as part of a team or formation. Souvenir caps will be given to all participants.

Interested runners may register and pay their fee at the Infantry Museum.

After Oct. 8 the entry fee will be increased to $6 per participant.

10th Div. brigade will be housed at Fort Benning

Secretary of the Army John O. Marsh, Jr., announced Tuesday that the Army has selected Fort Drum, N.Y., as the preferred alternative for stationing its 17th active component division. One brigade will be based temporarily at Fort Benning until rehabilitation of existing facilities and new construction are complete at Fort Drum. The new division will be officially designated the 10th Infantry Division and activation will begin during fiscal year 1985.

Brigadier General (P) William S. Carpenter, Jr., has been selected as the division commander.

According to Department of the Army officials, the activation will improve U.S. capabilities to respond to regional contingencies requiring light forces. It also provides a way to strengthen the Army's ability to reinforce existing U.S. commitments to our Allies, they said.

"The Army leadership, based on a careful examination of the changing nature of the threat and constraints we are facing in terms of manpower, dollars and available strategic lift, are convinced that we need to modernize our long neglected light forces."

"Our recent experience and that of our allies confirm that credible, rapidly deploying, lighter forces are needed to counter the kinds of threats likely to be faced by the United States through the 1990's. The Army has, therefore, embarked on a program to improve its light force capability and modernize our force structure and designs while improving our real deterrent posture for more likely low-intensity conflicts."

Department of Army selected the 10th as the designation of the Fort Drum/Fort Benning unit based on its position on the Pentagon's order of merit list. Considerations used in that list include length of service, combat or campaign credits and honors.

The 10th Infantry Division deactivated at Fort Benning in May, 1958, barely a week after returning from service in Europe. During World War II, it had been designated the 10th Mountain Division and fought in mountainous northern Italy.

In addition, the Army plans to reactivate the 6th Division in Alaska. (USAIC PAO)

Army Sure Pay plan still under study

By Keith Trohoske
Army News Service Staff

The Army's study of the mandatory Sure-Pay system currently underway is expected to be completed by October.

Under Sure-Pay, a soldier's check is sent directly to a financial institution for deposit into a savings or checking account. The Army's plan to convert all soldiers to sure-pay by October was delayed when the Senate Armed Services Committee directed the Army to study different means for paying soldiers, including alternatives to the mandatory Sure-Pay program.

"The ASC's basic concern involves whether the Army has demonstrated the need to mandate Sure-Pay for the entire force, even when you view the improved readiness it provides," said Lt. Col. George L. Sumrall of the study group.

The mission of the group, drawn from Army staff agencies and major commands, is to conduct a wide-open review of all available pay options and compare each with the total impact of implementing mandatory Sure-Pay. They will also determine the pros and cons of alternatives to mandatory Sure-Pay to gain Army leadership approval of either mandatory Sure-Pay or the best alternative.

"Our committee is faced with balancing Army readiness requirements and the need to ensure that soldiers meet their family and financial obligations during deployments and lengthy TDY periods," Sumrall said.

"Recent deployments show that soldiers on 'voluntary' Sure-

Post theater getting face lift

Robert McClain

When the dust settles and the construction stops, Fort Benning's Main Post Theater should be a much nicer place to visit. The theater is currently getting a long-overdue facelift.

According to Exchange Service Manager, Roi D. Welch, the theater is basically getting "a well deserved" reconditioning. "A lot of soldiers and family members attend movies at the theater," he said. "We are trying to make the theater more attractive and comfortable for them."

Welch commented the majority of additions to the World War II era theater will be structural.

The restrooms have long been in a state of disrepair he said, but will all receive a major reconditioning. All fixtures will be replaced with modern ones and the decor will be updated also.

Conditions inside the theater were also in need of much help. Spilled drinks and food had given the theater carpet a certain odor. Many of the seats were in serious need of paint and cleaning. And it was not unusual to have large pieces of paint fall from the peeling ceiling. All these conditions will be corrected. The carpet will be replaced with easy to clean and attractive tiles. Seats are being repaired, painted and eventually steam cleaned. And the ceiling is getting a new coat of paint.

> "Spilled drinks and food had given the theater carpet a certain odor. Many of the seats were in serious need of paint and cleaning. And it was not unusual to have large pieces of paint fail from the peeling ceiling."

In addition, the theater orchestra pit is being repaired and updated. Welch commented the theater will be available for use in community activities. Also the lobby ceiling and tile floors are being replaced. The outside overhang and lounge will also be refurbished.

Welch also said a new Dolby sound system is in store for the future. He made a point to mention the theater is always trying to get newer and better movies to serve Fort Benning better.

Construction began Aug. 28 and will be completed in late October. The Harmony Church Theater is also due for renovation beginning Monday.

Cutting Army's budget — a formula for failure

When Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger provided Congress with the fiscal year 1985 budget reduction plan in May, he established a new and lower level of the defense budget.

In reducing the projected real growth from about 13 percent to 7.8 percent, he accepted the fact that the Administration would be unable to meet in full the objectives of its five-year program.

He probably also recognized that Congress will undoubtedly make additional cuts, founded in part on the defense critics' puerile argument that further major reductions in defense expenditures are possible without damage to our national security.

The adverse impacts of these actions will be felt most severely by the Army, both because it was allocated the smallest share of the budget and because both its original (10.3 percent) and revised (6.3 percent) real growth are significantly below those for defense as a whole.

The reductions will have an immediate impact on Army readiness and the quality of life of its soldiers. They will force the Army to dilute reenlistment bonuses and will eliminate promised relief in the out-of-pocket cost to serve members of government-directed moves.

In addition to the detrimental effect on troop morale, these cuts could adversely affect Army readiness if many skilled soldiers elect to take their talents elsewhere rather than reenlist.

In the long term, the reductions will defer Army modernization, stretch out procurement of weapons, delay major construction projects and postpone research and development programs for new and improved weapons.

Among the Army systems to feel the sting of the cuts are: M-1 Abrams tank; Bradley Infantry Fighting Vehicles; AAH-64 attack helicopter; Patriot and Hellfire missiles; tactical vehicles; training facilities; troop housing and medical facilities.

> "In addition to the detrimental effect on troop morale, these cuts could adversely affect Army readiness if many skilled soldiers elect to take their talents elsewhere rather than reenlist."

The effect of these reductions in an already austere fiscal 1985 Army Budget is to slow Army progress in correcting decade-old deficiencies and to threaten the substantial improvements achieved in readiness and in the quality of the people choosing the Army as a career.

Most important is the lasting adverse impact on the Army's ability to defend our national interests. (AUSA)

Absentee ballots

Suggestions should help you get your ballot in on time

Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary defines a vote as "a formal expression of opinion or will" and a voter as "one who votes."

This means that for someone to express his opinion in the next election so that it counts, he must vote.

Those who govern the realm of voting agree with this notion because when a voter consistently fails to let his opinion be known, he loses his registration as a voter and is effectively disenrolled from the list of those whose opinions count on the matter of who governs them.

Therefore, it is of the greatest importance that the Federal Post Card Application for Absentee Ballot (FPCA) be filled out correctly and legibly.

If election officials cannot read the information submitted on the FPCA, or if part of the FPCA is left incomplete, an absentee ballot may not be mailed.

This may mean no vote for an interested absentee voter.

To help avoid problems that may be encountered when filling out an FPCA, here are a few general instructions, as well as an illustration of a properly completed FPCA. Remember that all items on the FPCA should be printed, except for the voter's signature.

On the front of the FPCA there are two entries that must be completed.

In the upper left hand corner, the voter must provide the current address at which he or she regularly receives daily mail.

After the word "TO:", the voter must provide the current title and address of the election official for the voter's legal residence. In other words, the voter must give the address for the official who handles election procedures for the district in which his legal residence is located.

This information may be obtained from the unit's voting assistance officer who can provide the correct address from the Department of Defense Voting Assistance Guide. An incorrect address will mean that the absentee voter probably will not receive registration forms or be registered.

On the back, there are several pieces of information that must be completed. Failure to provide any of the necessary information can result in the potential voter not being able to vote, because the election officials cannot determine who the absentee voter is and what is desired or required of them.

The first blanks on the back of the application that the prospective voter comes to are the "State of" and "County, city or township of" blanks. These blanks should be filled in with the state and city or township of legal residence of the voter. If there is any question about this, bring it

Engineers spend extra time at NTC; complete vital construction projects

The last Fort Benning unit to return from Fort Irwin, Calif. and Operation Desert Raider was Charlie Company, 43rd Engineer Battalion (Combat) (Heavy), 36th Engineer Group (Combat). Arriving at Lawson Army Airfield Aug. 24, Company C had remained behind to do construction projects after the 197th Infantry Brigade returned to Fort Benning. The engineers spent another three weeks operating out of a field bivouac site in the desert heat.

They left for Fort Irwin on July 16 with the mission to provide anti-tank ditch and other combat engineer support to the brigade's two manuever task forces. After the exercise ended, Charlie Company's earthmoving platoon began their number one construction priority — upgrading the surface of a 4,500 foot assault airstrip to be used during Gallant Eagle '84 this month. The platoon set up a bivouac site right beside the airstrip and began working Aug. 8. A three to four inch layer of rock and dirt had to be placed over the entire airstrip, watered down and compacted. The platoon worked 18-hour days and even used light sets at night in order to complete the project on time.

While the earthmovers operated their heavy equipment, the company's other two platoons were busy building obstacles for two archaeological sites at Fort Irwin: Bitter Springs and Garlic Springs. Not only are these the only watering holes for animals in that part of Fort Irwin, but also historical sites of major significance. Located along the old Spanish Trail that was the route for mid-nineteenth century settlers headed for California, both were campsites for Kit Carson and Capt. John C. Fremont. The engineers strung concertina wire around the perimeters of both sites in order to keep tracked vehicles out of those areas.

Charlie soldiers also did carpentry work at post headquarters, recovered fence posts, built four off-load ramps and improved many tank trails with their bulldozers. Augmenting Charlie Company were 12 equipment operators and their earthmoving equipment from Company B, 43rd Engineers plus medical and survey personnel from other 36th Group units.

"Charlie soldiers also did carpentry work at post headquarters, recovered fence posts, built four off-load ramps and improved many tank trails with their bulldozers."

The troops boarded a commericial airliner at Norton Air Force Base for their flight home. Company equipment then was moved by rail over a two-day period using 41 rail cars.

The horses of yesterday have long since been replaced by the armored personnel carriers of today. However, through the years the Cavalry troops have maintained and upheld their missions of speed, defense and reconnaissance to the units they support.

Troop A, 15th Cavalry has served as the eyes and ears of the 197th Infantry Brigade (Mechanized) (Separate) since its reactivation within the brigade in 1973.

Scouting in advance of the brigade, Troop A seeks out enemy activity.

"15th CAV has three primary missions," explained SFC Danny Pollitt, 15th Cavalry operations sergeant. "We conduct operations and security reconnaissance, movement, attack and defense."

While the unit is equipped with 12 M60A3 tanks, six improved TOW vehicles, six scout tracks (113's) with Dragons mounted, and an assortment of regular 113's (armored personnel carriers), their primary mission is reconnaissance, not defense.

"Our most important misson is reconnaissance," Pollitt said. "This is where we go out and actually find the enemy."

To remain combat ready in their assigned mission, extensive

Sure pay

Pay can deploy on virtually no notice and experience far fewer pay problems than their buddies not on Sure-Pay. Ensuring that we improve our financial readiness posture and not create a burden on soldiers and their families is our toughest challenge," he added.

Other considerations involve areas in which Sure-Pay would involuntarily reduce soldiers' pay. Financial institution service charges, account maintenance fees and check-cashing fees could effectively cut a soldier's pay. The delay between deposit of pay and official notice of receipt of such deposits could result in bad checks being written and costs to make bad checks good would further reduce pay. The Army currently has no authority to reimburse soldiers for these charges should they occur.

"Our committee has set some guidelines to work with as we consider the best course for the Army," Sumrall added. "Not placing an additional financial burden on our soldiers ranks high on that list, along with ensuring that financial readiness can indeed be improved by the option we choose. Several of our alternatives, while improving readiness, may create work for unit commanders and administrative and finance officers. We want to avoid this."

Some of the options being examined include a personal financial plan being developed by each soldier not on Sure-Pay; requiring Sure-Pay for all soldiers assigned to a unit with a deployment mission; phasing Sure-Pay in by having new recruits sign up for it in their enlistment contracts; and for the Army to remain on "voluntary" Sure-Pay with more emphasis being placed on educating soldiers and their family members on the benefits of the program.

Results of the group's study, along with the decision of the Army chief of staff regarding which option to implement, should be completed in early October. The Army will report its decision to the Congress by Dec. 1.

72nd Engineers support 15th Cav. during exercise

By Debbie Mundy
197th Public Affairs Office

Most soldiers were just getting up at 5 a.m., but the soldiers of the 72nd Engineers, (Combat) (Separate), from the 197th Infantry Brigade, were just getting back to their bivouac site after working all night. Now that they had accomplished their mission, they could rest for a while; at least until they were called once again to support the exercise.

The war had started. A Troop, 15th Cavalry, had begun their external evaluation with the 1-58th Patriots acting as the opposing force. The engineers would be supporting them both.

Two platoons were sent out from the 72nd, one to support each unit. Both had the same equipment: three APCs (armored personnel carriers), a five-ton dump truck to carry equipment, supplies and any ammo that wouldn't fit in the APCs, and jeeps. In addition, they also had an AVLB (armored vehicle launcher bridge), a CEV (combat engineer vehicle) with a dozer blade and a 165mm gun, plus a bucket loader.

"The dozer blade was used to fill up tank ditches and to create or remove such obstacles as fallen trees. The 165mm gun was used to destroy bridges and bunkers and the bucket loader was used to reinforce defense positions for crew served weapons," explained 1st Lt. Leon Knight.

The unit brought out about 400 rolls of concertina wire to the field with them. The engineers also brought triple standard, double apron and tackle foot wire.

The wire is very respected in the field. It made a formidable barrier," said Knight, platoon leader of 72nd's 1st platoon.

The engineers acted as a liaison to the command. They informed the command of the type of equipment they had available and the type of missions they coud accomplish with it. It remained up to the command to decide how to employ the engineers potential.

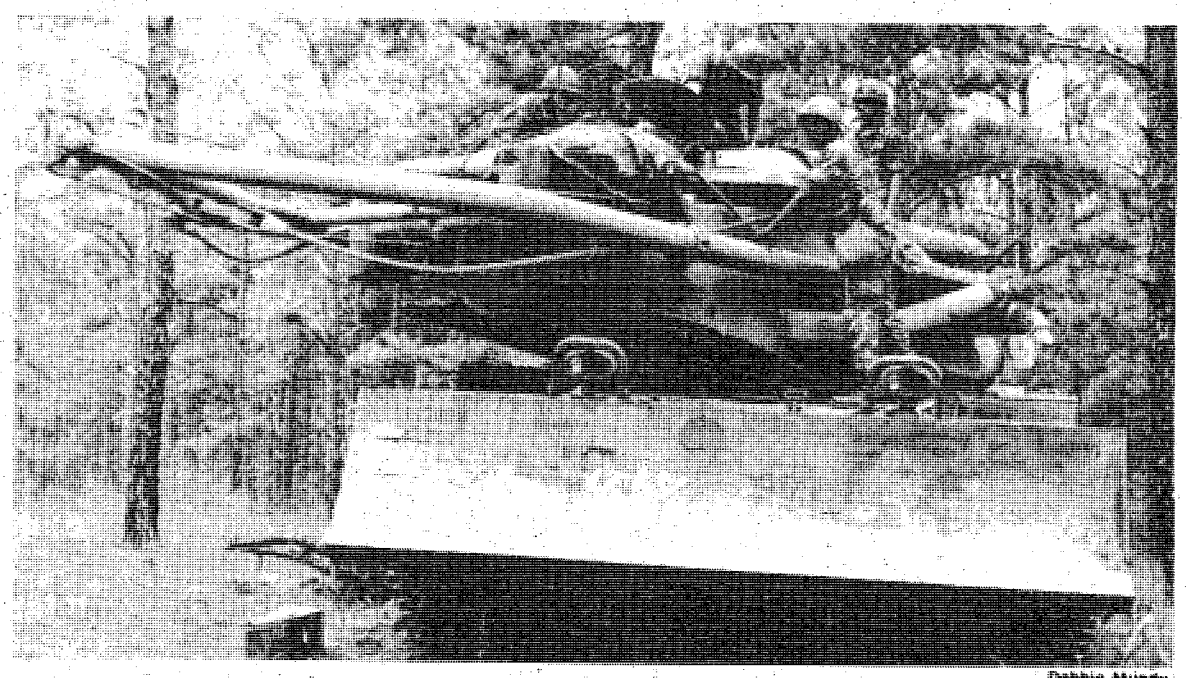
"The war had started. A Troop, 15th Cavalry had begun their external evaluation with the 1-58th Patriots acting as the opposing force. The engineers would be supporting them both."

"The engineers are demolitions trained," said 1st Lt. Bryan C. Miner, 72nd executive officer. "They can lay down a mine field or clear a lane for the friendly forces to move through it."

That's where the obstacle guards came in. They made sure one went through the proper procedures to breach an obstacle.

The mine field was one example," continued Miner. "Because we did this, our people knew how to deal with mine fields out at NTC. Our professionalism showed."

"The 72nd had approximately 110 men out in the field supporting the external evaluation. They have their own TOC (tactical operations center) and mess, as well as their line units, heavy equipment operators, truck drivers and obstacle guard. They accomplished their missions, working together with A Troop and 1—58 Patriots who provided support," concluded Miner.



72nd soldiers supported 15th CAV. using Combat Engineer Vehicles.

Cottonbalers conduct weapon training with 'flash'

Willie Means
197th Public Affairs Office

The soldiers are scheduled to do it only twice a year. However, when they really get to do it, they do it with a "FLASH."

For members of the 197th Infantry Brigade's 3rd Battalion, 7th Infantry, the "Cottonbalers," their chance to do it came Tuesday at Booker Range.

What did they do? The Cottonbalers took their book knowledge on the M202 "FLASH," a light anti-tank rocket, combined with a flammable chemical used on hard or soft targets, and put a torch to Booker Range when they actually fired the weapon.

"The weapon is really a portable flamethrower," explained 1st Lt. Comptom T. Pierre, executive officer, Charlie Company, 3-7th. "Upon impact the rocket explodes and all you see is a flash when the chemicals begin to burn. That's why they call the system the "FLASH"

A multiple rocket system capable of destroying targets up to 800 meters away, many infantrymen have heard and read about the "FLASH", but few have actually had the opportunity to handle and fire the weapon.

"The soldiers who came here from advanced individual training will really benefit from the firing," stated Pierre. "The

AAFES seeks out debtors

People leaving the military who are still indebted to the Army and Air Force Exchange Service could face civil charges, according to exchange officials.

AFFES officials recently referred more than 140 cases to the Justice Department in an effort to recover some $150,000 owed on dishonored checks and delinquent deferred payment plan charges. U.S. District courts will hear the civil suits involving at least $600.

"We want to call attention to the fact that people are not just going to rip-off the government," said Maj. Gen. Richard D. Murray, AAFES commander, in a June newsletter to field commanders.

"We might not get blood out of all these 'turnips,' but we owe it to all exchange patrons to squeeze."

Indebted individuals often were dismissed with less than an honorable discharge, according to AAFES officials.

Although collecting on delinquent accounts could take months, AAFES officials warn that these account holders, "should all be looking over their shoulders." (ARNEWS)

Fort Benning elects community life officers

New mayors, vice mayors take office Oct. 1

By Becky Winters
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning residents elected community mayors and vice mayors for the new year in moderate voting Sept. 4-7.

Staci Blankenship was elected mayor of the Bouton Heights/Davis Hill community, with Audrey Kirkpatrick elected vice mayor.

In Custer Terrace, voters chose Viviana Hernandez as mayor and Sherri Boyce to fill the slot of vice mayor.

Bennie Black and Janice Scott, two write-in candidates, were elected mayor and vice mayor respectively, in the Indianhead Terrace community.

McGraw Manor residents chose Victoria Barnes for mayor and Ada Brown vice mayor.

Belinda Nessmith was elected mayor of North Main Post, and Jack Craft was elected vice mayor.

South Main Post residents chose Patsy Carey to be their next mayor, and write-in candidate Karen Pangrazzi won the vice mayor slot.

The mayor serves as the liaison between the military and civilian community on post, seeking to improve the quality of life for service members and their families.

Mayors initiate community assistance projects and activities designed to enhance the day-to-day welfare of area residents.

The mayor is the central resource person in the community, one who knows where residents can get different problems solved.

If existing programs don't meet the needs of residents, the mayor will appoint a committee to develop whatever is needed. The mayor is also responsible for recruiting volunteers to serve on the various committees and appointing chairmen to run the programs.

Vice mayors assist the mayors and would take over as mayor in the event the mayor was unable to complete her term of office.

The new officers will serve from Oct. 1, 1984 to Oct. 1, 1985.

Fort Benning establishes new orienteering program

By Mark Cummings
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Under the direction of the Commanding General, Maj. Gen. John W. Foss, a competitive orienteering program is being established on Fort Benning, with hopes of expanding to Army-wide competition in 1986.

The purpose of the program is to assist unit commanders to build morale and esprit de corps and to provide an activity that allows units to compete together and be together. It also instills an awareness in orienteering by training soldiers in the use of map and compass reading and provides a recreational program to supplement the soldier's physical fitness program.

"Orienteering is just what the soldier needs", said Jeanne Truitt, program advisor. "In orienteering you not only run on flat roads, but on trails and through bushes and just about anything else you encounter in the forest. Besides, it's a fun way to receive training."

Orienteering is the combination of map reading, compass reading and land navigation. Teams compete to locate markers throughout a designed course in the shortest time possible. These markers are red and white colored and in novice events should be visible from 50 meters.

The sport is predominantly European, having been originated in Scandinavia in the late 1800's. It was first brought to the United States in 1946. Orienteering is very popular at overseas installations.

There is very little, if any,orienteering competition at stateside posts. However it is popular with college ROTC programs and at the United States Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., where orienteering is an extra-curricular activity.

"Orienteering is a fantastic way to learn land navigation." added Truitt. "I have high hopes for the program. I think it'll go over real well with the post".

Fort Benning's orienteering program will begin Oct. 27 at Bravo Area in Harmony Church with a meet and a clinic. This is to train unit Athletics & Recreation personnel in the methods and procedures of teaching orienteering and to conduct meets at company and major unit levels. Each unit should be represented by an A & R officer or NCO.

Commanders, Sergeants Major and First Sergeants are also encouraged to attend.

The program will begin at 8 a.m. with the clinic, which will last until noon. The meet will begin at 1:30 p.m. Those who wish to enter the meet must turn in a written notification of intent to the Physical Activities Branch, MSAD, building 394, no later than noon, Oct. 9.

Awards will be presented to the top three finishers. All entrants will receive a certificate.

The thought of starting a new sports program on a post that is unfamiliar to the community doesn't worry Tom Mull, post physical activities director. "Once the program is established, the competition will prove to make orienteering very popular," he said.

All units are encouraged to enter teams and/or individuals. Personnel must be assigned to the unit to participate. The unit will be responsible for selecting and training teams and/or individuals to represent the respective unit in competition.

Safeguard important documents

The Veterans Administration reminds veterans and their families to safeguard important documents relating to their military service, marriage, life insurance and VA correspondence.

Securing papers, marriage certificates or child custody evidence from fire, theft or loss could be one of the most important legacies a veteran can leave the family, according to the VA. Other documents that should be protected and filed with family papers are government and commercial life insurance policies, any VA correspondence with identifying claim numbers or social security numbers, wills, and where applicable, naturalization papers.

VA reminds families that they should be aware of survivor benefits as well. These include a death pension, dependency and indemnity compensation for service-connected death, burial benefits and interment in a national cemetery.

The few minutes spent by the veteran organizing and protecting documents — and informing the family — can do much to avoid anguish during times of emotional stress.

Veterans should encourage family members to seek information and assistance concerning benefits at any VA regional office. Assistance is also available through veterans service organizations (VA)

Absentee ballots

In items 5 and 6, the voter is required to provide the appropriate information asked for. In 6(b), the type of I.D. that the number comes from should be indicated.

The type of election for which the voter needs the ballot must be identified in item 7. As a rule, a separate FPCA must be completed and sent in for every election in which the voter desires to vote. However, some states and local election officials will mail all the ballots in an election year with the submission of only one FPCA. Procedures vary from state to state.

In some states, if the voter wishes to vote in a primary election, he may then fill in item 8 with the name of his political party preference. This item should not be filled in if party choice is secret in the state in which he is voting. Party choice is secret in primary elections in the following 12 states: Alaska, Hawaii, Idaho, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, North Dakota, Utah, Vermont, Washington and Wisconsin.

Although most states allow military personnel and U.S. citizens outside of the U.S. to vote absentee in state and local elections, in some states the voter may be liable for state or local taxes if he votes. Citizens outside the U.S cannot be taxed for registering to vote in federal elections. Item 9 provides the voter with the choice of voting in federal elections, as well as state and local elections for which he may be taxed, or voting in federal elections only.

Item 10 is used to provide voting officials with additional information about the citizenship of the voter. The voter should check the box that corresponds to his present citizenship status.

The voter's current mailing address, the same one that appears on the front of the FPCA, should be written in item 11. The voter must be sure to provide a complete address which includes the zip code and the APO or FPO number if it is a foreign address.

Information detailing the last year and jurisdiction in which the voter voted is required in item 12. This aids the transferrance of registration records.

If the exact information cannot be remembered, the voter should indicate the approximate year and enter the word "unknown" in the remaining spaces.

If this is the first election that the voter will vote in, the words "Not Applicable" should be entered.

Before moving on to item 15, the signature blank, the voter should make sure he reads and understands the statements in items 13 and 14. These statements acknowledge that the information the voter has supplied is accurate and true, and that he is eligible to vote.

After reading the statements in items 13 and 14, the voter should then sign the FPCA as required by the absentee voter's state law. Some states require that the FPCA be notarized or witnessed before it will be accepted by an election official.

If, and only if, it is required by the voter's state law, should item 16 be filled out. This item pertains to states that require the voter to take an oath of affirmation for items 13 and 14. This oath is usually administered by a commissiond officer or other person authorized to administer oaths. Once again, the various state laws are detailed in the 1984 Voting Assistance Guide that unit voting assistance officers have.

Problems with being registered or receiving a ballot using the FPCA can be minimized if applicants remember to print when filling out the FPCA, to fill out the FPCA completely and legibly, to provide accurate information about legal residency, to sign the completed card and to have the completed card witnessed and sworn to when it is required by state law.

15th Cavalry

training on the part of the unit is required. The best available training is during various field exercises. One of these field exercises is the Army Readiness Training Evaluation Program.

Training in garrison has many favorable points, the biggest being budget savings to the training unit. However, most garrison training is conducted in a class or is simulated. It lacks the realism of actually having a hands-on opportunity to use the equipment.

"Field training tremendously aids in the effectiveness of our mission," said Pollitt. "It gives us the opportunity to use all the aspects available to us. The soldiers get a lot of realism from the long hours and the constant alertness that has to be maintained."

15th Cavalry conducted an external evaluation Sept. 7-11 here.

The opposing force for the exercise was 1st Battalion (Mechanized), 58th Infantry and elements from 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor.

During the exercise, the 15th Cav. was able to utilize their support elements in a way that gave the unit ground surveillance radar, red-eye, engineer made obstacles, FIST (fire support team), and their own mess team.

"The purpose of this evaluation was to test the readiness of the troops. It tests their readiness and their ability," Pollitt continued. "Just about everything we use out here, the vehicles, the night-sight, we can't use in garrison."

Troop A, 15th Cavalry has showed time and again the readiness of their troops in field exercises such as the Fort Drum winter training in March and Bold Eagle at Eglin Air Force Base, Florida in October 1983.

"The better prepared 15th Cav. is, the better prepared the brigade is. We're the scouts for the brigade. We're out in front of everyone else. The better we do our mission, the better prepared the brigade will be to meet the challenges presented," concluded Pollitt.

Fort Benning celebrates Hispanic Heritage Week

By Becky Winters
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Post personnel got a chance to learn more about Hispanic heritage this week as Fort Benning celebrated National Hispanic Heritage Week.

Events ranged from static displays of Hispanic literature to "Salsa Disco" dancing. It was a chance for some to celebrate their Hispanic heritage, and for others to learn more about the varied cultural history.

Hispanics make a valuable contribution to the Army, working all over post in a variety of military and civilian settings, and some of them gave their feelings about Hispanic Heritage Week.

PFC Angel Rodriguez, 19, said he liked the idea of having a special week to honor Hispanic heritage.

"I think it is good to have this so Hispanic people can learn more about their background," he said. A native of Hoboken, N.J., Rodriguez works as a business administrative specialist with Support Battalion, 197th Infantry Brigade. He said he likes the Army and plans to reenlist for three more years when he completes his current tour.

"I think it is good to have a special week to educate people about Hispanic heritage," said SFC Michael Vigil, S-4 NCOIC of 4th Airborne Training Battalion. Vigil, a native of Pueblo, Colo., said he planned to take his wife and four children to some of the events.

Vigil said he loves being in the Army, "the challenge of dealin with day-to-day problems," and is proud of being able to serve his country.

Capt. Eladio Reid, Brigade S-1 for 10th Company, 1st Bn, TSB, said "I think it is an advantage to the Army because I speak Spanish as well as English."

Reid said he plans to take his family to some of the activities this week because he believes it is important that children learn their heritage.

Vigil Reid

Command Sgt. Maj. Albert Avila, command sergeant major for the U.S. Army Infantry School, said, "I didn't know there were so many Hispanics on post until I went to some of the events." Avila has been in the Army for 29 and one-half years and is scheduled to retire in six months.

rounds are very expensive and units don't get this type of ammo often. I was with the 101st Airborne and also did a tour in Germany, but I never fired the system until coming to Fort Benning."

Throughout the day, soldiers practiced arming the system, misfire procedures and finally firing the weapon. A little shaky after the first round, soldiers had gained confidence in the system by the fourth round and cheered for each other when many got direct hits and flames jumped off the targets and gave a luminous flash.

Hiring college grads is something the Army has always done. And lately, we've been doing a lot more of it.

In fact, last year alone nearly 7,000 college grads chose to begin their future as Army Officers.

Why? Some wanted the opportunity to develop valuable leadership and management skills early in their career.

Others were impressed with the amount of responsibility we give our officers starting out. And still more liked the idea of serving their country around the world.

Interested? Then you can start preparing for the job right now, with Army ROTC.

ROTC is a college program that trains you to become an Army officer. By helping you develop your leadership and management ability.

Enrolling can benefit your immediate future, too. Through scholarships and other financial aid.

So the next time you're thinking about job possibilities, think about the one more recent college graduates chose last year than any other.

For details, call Major Neil Ellis at 568-2058, or visit the Military Science Department at Columbus College in Jordan Hall, Room 332.

Crime doesn't pay

Private First Class Edward J. Marks, Company B, 43rd Engineer Battalion, 36th Engineer Group, was convicted on Sept. 5 for the wrongful possession of marihuana, in violation of Article 134, UCMJ. Marks and another soldier from his battalion left the Hidden Door Club and walked across to Gowdy Field where they prepared a marihuana cigarette to smoke. They were apprehended by members of the joint drug suppression team who were watching the area. He was sentenced to be reduced to the grade of E-1, to perform hard labor without confinement fo thirty-five days, and to forfeit $397 pay per month for one month.

Specialist Four Gary E. Bledsoe, Company B, Infantry Training Group, U.S. Army Infantry Training Center, was convicted on Aug. 8 for three AWOLs in violation of Article 86, UCMJ. Bledsoe was already pending charges for AWOL from April 24 to May 22, 1984 when he went AWOL two more times from June 12 to June 17 and from June 22 to July 6. For these offenses, Bledsoe was sentenced to be reduced to the grade of E-1, to forfeit $397 pay per month for two months, to be confined at hard labor for two months, and to be discharged from the Army with a bad-conduct discharge.

Private Edward V. Ramm, Company A, 10th Battalion, 2nd ITB, USAITC, was convicted by a special court-martial for two specifications of failure to repair in violation of Article 86, UCMJ on Aug. 31. On two consecutive days, Aug. 9 and 10, Ramm refused to report to previously scheduled training classes at Company A, 10th Battalion, 2nd ITB. For these offenses Ramm was sentenced to be confined at hard labor for a period of 40 days and to forfeit $382 per month for two months.

Private Eugene M. Bright, Company B, 1/58th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade, was convicted by a special court-martial for wrongful appropriation and AWOL in violation of Articles 121 and 86, UCMJ, on Aug. 17. Bright was on a paint detail when he took an unsecured .45 automatic pistol from CSC, 1/58th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade, and hid it under a log at the unit parking lot. After Bright had been identified as the one who had taken the weapon, he subsequently went AWOL for 11 days. For these offenses, Bright was sentenced to reduction to E-1, confinement at hard labor for 6 months, and to forfeit $397 per month for six months.

Private Roger S. Tompkins, HHC, ITG, USAITC, was convicted by a special court-martial for larceny, in violation of Article 121, UCMJ, on Aug. 17. Tompkins acted as a lookout as Private Lonnie Boyd (convicted of housebreaking and larceny) broke into room 4 of building 4705-3 and stole a cassette player and a television set. Afterwards, Tompkins allowed Boyd to use his truck to pawn the stolen goods. Boyd later gave Tompkins $20 and put some gas into his truck from the proceeds of the stolen goods. For his involvement in the larceny, Tompkins was sentenced to be reduced to E-1, one month confinement at hard labor, forfeiture of two-thirds pay for one month, and a bad-conduct discharge. (SJA)

Medal of Honor records show Hispanic soldiers' proud service

By Dallas Lynn
Fort McClellan Public Affirs Office

Hispanics are currently the second largest ethnic minority in uniform. They face many of the same problems faced by Black soldiers, but the problems are sometimes compounded by language differences.

Despite the problems, Hispanics have served as soldiers since the Revolutionary War with loyalty and devotion in war and peace. Since 1863, nearly 3,500 Medals of Honor have been awarded to military men who have met the standards of heroism. Thirty-seven of these men are of Hispanic origin.

Rodriguez

Many examples of courage displayed by Hispanics can be found in records of World War II. Army private Cleto Rodriguez was one example. When he and his platoon werehalted by intense enemy fire, he and a fellow soldier ran forward. In the hour that followed they engaged and killed 35 of the enemy.

Seeing enemy replacements attempting to reinforce the area, Rodriguez killed 40 more before crawling on to the enemy emplacement and throwing grenades to destroy it. Low on ammunition, he moved back towards American lines, losing his companion to enemy fire. His actions disorganized enemy defenses and a strong point was taken.

Fernandez

Typical of the heroism of Hispanic Americans in the nation's wars were the actions of Sp4 Daniel Fernandez, who laid down his life for his fellow soldiers while a member of an 18-man patrol in the vicinity of Cu Chi, Vietnam, on February 18, 1966.

The patrol was trying to reach a fallen comrade when it was ambushed by a Viet Cong rifle company. Intense enemy automatic weapons fire drove them back.

According to the citation accompanying the posthumous Medal of Honor award to Fernandez: "A United States Army sergeant was struck in the knee by .50 caliber machinegun fire. Specialist Fernandez rallied the left flank of his patrol, went to assist in the recovery of the wounded sergeant and, while first aid was

Hispanic week

The Hispanic community of Fort Benning celebrated Hispanic Week at Sand Hill Chapel last Sunday afternoon with a mass featuring music from various Latin American nations. Many members of the congregation wore clothing representative of their native countries and enjoyed the fun and fellowship of a "Latin picnic."

Soldiers granted hardship separations

Enlisted soldiers who encounter genuine hardships or situations of dependency after they enter active duty may be permitted to separate according to a policy in Chapter 6, AR 635-200, "Enlisted Separations."

Any active or reserve component enlisted soldier on active duty may be eligible for a dependency or hardship discharge.

Hardship separations do not involve death or disability. In these cases, separation from the service will alleviate the family's hardship.

Dependency separation may be appropriate when death or disability of a member of a soldier's or spouse's immediate family causes the soldier to be the main source of care and support.

Both are voluntary, and soldiers ar usually separated with an honorable character of service. Commanders must notify soldiers who will receive a General Discharge.

Field commanders can consider requests without referring them to HQDA. The first special courtmartial convening authority in the soldier's chain of command can approve or disapprove these requests.

Soldiers should work with their supervisors and other individuals or agencies to solve the problem before requesting separation.

Soldiers may apply for separation in one of three ways:

- Soldiers in the United States should apply through their chain of command when they are present for duty or on leave.
- Soldiers on leave from overseas units should contact the personnel office of the installation closest to their leave address.
- Personnel on TDY should apply to the unit to which they are attached.

Soldiers with temporary conditions should consider asking for a compassioate reassignment. If that is disapproved, the soldier may apply for separation.

Army officials approve separations for hardship or dependency when release from active duty is the only way to corect the situation.

Discharges from active duty will not be approved simply to overcome the inconvenience of family separation due to PCS.

For more information on hardship or dependency separations, contact DAPC-EPA-AS at Autovon 221-8739 or 221-8740. (FOCUS)

Unique medical school offers best of two worlds

By Tom Joyce
American Forces Information Service

Ask any number of 10-year olds what they want to be when they grow up. Those who don't want to be firefighters or Good Humor men will probably give you that time-honored answer: a doctor.

For some, that dream never ends. Lured by the prestige and money that go with the profession, Americans are flocking to the nation's medical schools.

But each year, 156 of them receive invitations to begin study at a university that allows them to combine two rewarding careers — military and medicine.

This unique institution of higher education is the F. Edward Hebert School of Medicine of the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences (USUHS), Bethesda, Md.

Operated by the Department of Defense, it is the only military medical school in the country. Although a military background is not a requirement for admission, forty percent of them have some type of prior military affiliation. Approximately 5 percent of all students have prior enlisted service.

Rear Adm. (Dr.) William N. Narva, vice president of the university, explains the school's purpose: "We are here to maintain the excellence of health care in the military by producing a cadre of well-trained, career-oriented military medical officers."

Competition for admission to the tuition-free school is tough: there were 4,000 applicants — grade point average 3.47 — for the 156 positions in this fall's class.

Applicants pass through a rigorous screening process — so rigorous, in fact, that the attrition rate among those accepted is only 1.8 percent. Only U.S. citizens are admitted, and they must meet the academic, physical and personal qualifications of the school. Most important, they must be motivated towards a medical career in the uniformed services.

Students are commissioned as ensigns or second lieutenants during medical training, and receive full pay and allowances. They are promoted to O-3 when they start their seven years of obligated military service following graduation.

The faculty numbers more than 200 full-time and 1,300 adjunct physicians, health care professioals, and scientists. Since the Washington, D.C. area is a center of military medicine, the University has easy access to health care professionals and specialists who can lecture in a variety of disciplines.

Student carry a heavier class load than those at other medical schools since they receive additional instruction in such military medical subjects as tropical medicine and applied military physiology.

The University reflects both a medical and a military environment. Army Col. (Dr.) Craig H. Llewellyn, chairman of the Department of Military Medicine and the Commandant of Students, say those attending the university are medical students first and members of the military second. "But," he adds, "second is not very far behind first."

It is the intent of the school to give equal weight to being medical students and being in the military.

Officers are required to stay fit and meet the weight standards imposed by their respective services. In addition, students participate in field exercises involving military medicine. They may also volunteer to attend diving or jungle survival school, or may even earn their airborne wings. And, it's not unusual to see the Dean and President of the University, Jay P. Sanford, M.D., rappelling from the four-story basic science building on the campus right along with students.

Although the Hebert School of Medicine is less than 10 years old, it has already earned quite a reputation. (AFPS)

DA board makes observations on Article 15 appeals

Nearly 2,600 soldiers have appealed their Article 15s since November 1982 under new authority in AR 27-10, "Military Justice."

Soldiers in grades E-6 and above, including officers and warrant officers, may petition to transfer Article 15s to the restricted portion of their Official Military Personnel File.

The DA Suitability Evaluation Board may approve the appeal if the intent of the non-judicial punishment has been served and if the Article 15's transfer is in the Army's best interest.

The board consists of colonels and a senior NCO is a voting member on all enlisted cases.

After adjudicating almost 2,000 petitions, the board made several observations:

- One-year rule. The board normally returns petitions without action unless at least one year has passed and one non-academic evaluation has been received since the Article 15.
- Seriousness of incident. The board considers the seriousness of the incident that resulted in the Article 15. Patterns of unacceptable behavior weigh against approval. Infractions such as dishonesty, breaches of integrity, common theft, and disloyalty are not readily overcome by time or exemplary performance.
- Investigative files. The board has full access to DOD investigative records, including MP and CID reports.
- Seniority and performance. The board considers the age and grade of an applicant at the time of an Article 15; overall performance, commendatory and disciplinary records; and the restricted fiche.

The board also considers the effect of an Article 15 on the soldiers' career as well as the quality of evidence and argument the soldier presents.

In cases which appear to merit approval, the board normally asks the soldier's commander or supervisor about the soldier's current performance and adherence to acceptable standards of conduct.

- Documentation. Evidence useful to the board shows that a soldier is serving to the best of his or her ability. Such trends may be affirmed by letters of support and by copies of unfiled documents attesting to outstanding performance, significant contributions, and professional development.

Soldiers should not submit evaluation reports, awards, decorations, certificates of achievement and other documents in performance records.

When a petition is approved, the soldier is notified by a letter which contains instructions for handling records approved for transfer that might be filed locally. The soldier is also informed that transfer of an Article 15 is not retroactive and does not warrant reconsideration for selection for any purpose.

When a petition is denied, a letter of notification is sent to the soldier. A copy of this letter is placed on the performance fiche; other related correspondence is placed on the restricted fiche.

The board's decision to deny a petition is final unless the soldier gathers additional evidence to support a subsequent petition, or files an appeal under AR 15-185, "Army Board for Correction of Military Records."

Because of the large volume of petitions being received, a backlog of cases awaits adjudication by the board. Currently, there is an average delay of about four months between the time a petition is received and the time it is adjudicated.

In spite of the large volume of petitions, the board is giving full and just consideration to every petitioner.

For more information on appealing Article 15s, soldiers should contact the Fort Benning MILPO or JAG office. (FOCUS MAGAZINE)

Self examination can help prevent testicular cancer

There is a cancer that is unique to men. It is testicular cancer and even though great successes in treating and curing testicular cancer have been made in the last several years, men are still dying from it.

Dr. Diane McGrath, director of Cancer Education and Communications Programs, Duke University Comprehensive Cancer Center, says testicular cancer is most common in young men between the ages of 20 and 35. "But testicular cancer is still considered a rare disease," she pointed out. "Statistics show that among white males, there will be about 3.6 cases per 100,000 in the United States each year. For blacks, the figure is .8 cases per 100,000."

According to Dr. McGrath, most of the cases of testicular cancer are detected by the individual while performing a self examination. They may have detected a lump on the front or side of the testicle. "Other symptoms include swelling, pain or a feeling of heaviness in the scrotum, or swelling or tenderness in other parts of the body, including the breast, groin and back," says Dr. McGrath.

If during a self examination, men detect any of these symptoms, Dr. McGrath warns: "Don't panic! These symptoms indicate other common medical problems, too."

The important thing to do, says Dr. McGrath, is get checked by a competent physician as soon as possible.

"This is one cancer that can be cured if detected and treated in the early stages," stresses Dr. McGrath. And even if testicular cancer is detected and one testicle has to be removed, Dr. McGrath says men need reassurance about sexual functions.

"Men only need one testicle for normal sexual activity and to father children."

In most cases the cancer only affects one testis and the right testis is the one were it most often shows up. If the cancer is detected, an individual treatment plan will be arranged by your physician.

Dr. McGrath also cautions that "any individual whose testicles had not descended by age six are at high risk for testicular cancer." Dr. McGrath says if a man is not sure, he should ask his parents. "Most men's testicles descend at birth or shortly thereafter," relates Dr. McGrath. "If they had not descended, an individual's pediatrician would have monitored the condition very carefully."

Dr. McGrath suggests all men do a testicular self-examination at least once a month. Here's how she says to do it:

Stand in front of a mirror and look for obvious lumps, swelling of the scrotal sac or breast enlargement;

Examine each testicle, rolling it gently between the thumb and fingers. Feel for any lumps or swelling.

Identify the epididymis (the rope-like structure that collects sperm) on the top and back of each testicle. Don't mistake this for an abnormal lump.

Again, if you detect anything abnormal, don't panic, but do schedule an appointment with your physician as soon as possible.

The toll-free phone number for information on cancer is 1-800-4-CANCER. (AFPS)

TRADOC halts smoking on flights

Since September 1, smoking aboard any TRADOC flights has been disallowed.

TRADOC's commander, Gen. William R. Richardson, changed the policy in direct response to three major concerns: safety, personal inconvenence to nonsmokers and health benefits of all involved.

The Fort Monroe Flight Detachment, upon direction from Headquarters, TRADOC, was the first to adopt the new policy. TRADOC then sent a message to aviation detachments throughout the command, requesting their comments on the proposed policy change. When the majority of responses supported the change, Richardson ordered the new policy to go into effect TRADOC-wide. (TRADOC)

Weekend

Springer Theater

The Springer Theater Company's 1984-85 season begins with "My Fair Lady" tomorrow, Sunday and Sept. 18-22, 25-29 at 8 p.m.; Sept. 15 and 22 at 2:30 p.m.

For more information and tickets, call the box office at 327-3688. Upcoming productions include "On Golden Pond," Oct. 25-Nov.; "The Teahouse of the August Moon," Feb. 7-16, 1985; "Chapter Two," March 28-April 6, 1985. Season memberships are $32.

Fall symphony

Light and lilting strains of popular tunes, all-time favorites and light classical music will fill the air as Callaway Gardens begins its annual fall "Symphony in the Gardens" series. The concerts are scheduled for Sunday afternoons at 3 p.m. at the Overlook Pavilion on Sept. 16, 23 and 30.

The Columbus Pops Orchestra, under the direction of conductor Harry Kruger, will perform their renditions of dance music at this Sunday's concert. The program includes Leroy Anderson's "Blue Tango" and selections from "My Fair Lady" by Lowe, as well as Alford's "Colonel Bogey March."

In addition to enjoying the concerts, Gardens visitors may want to bring along a picnic or come early and tour the new John A. Sibley Horticultural Center or bike around the Scenic Drive.

The only charge for this outstanding symphony is the regular Gardens admission of $3.50 for adults and $1 for children, ages 6-11. There is no charge for annual pass holders.

Career opportunities

"Careers and Opportunities for Women in the 1980s" will be offered at Columbus College's Elizabeth Bradley Turner Center for Continuing Education on Monday from 7 to 10 p.m. Participants will have an opportunity to enroll in career workshops, meet with representatives of various schools and industries and schedule individual counseling sessions to determine personal and professional goals.

The program is co-sponsored by the Columbus Area Network for Professional and Executive Women. The fee is $10; for more information, call 568-2023.

Civic chorale

An additional date of Sunday has been set for auditions for the Columbus Civic Chorale, a community-based organization dedicated to bringing the best of choral literature to the Columbus area.

Time for the Sunday auditions is 2-3:30 p.m. in the choral room (room 001) of the Fine Arts Hall at Columbus College.

Folk festival

For the fourth time since 1981, regional folk musicians, traditional artisans, and preparers of ethnic and "down-home" foods will gather at the Chatahoochee Promenade in the Columbus Historic District for the Columbus Museum's annual Chattahoochee Folk Festival, Sept. 29-30.

Beginning at 11 a.m. each day, the free event will feature three stages of continuous music lasting until 6:30 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday.

In a program funded by the Georgia Endowment for the Humanities called "Chattahoochee Blues," blues musicians from the Valley region, and the story behind their music, will be presented in a special segment of the festival each afternoon from 1:30 - 5 p.m. Music historians, folklorists and the musicians themselves will be there to explain and demonstrate the blues tradition as it is found in the deep south.

Those interested in participating in festival workshops should bring along their fiddles, guitars, banjos, dulcimers or harmonicas for some firsthand pointers from the experts.

Admission to all events is free. For more information, contact Fred Fussell, festival director, Columbus Museum of Arts and Sciences at 323-3617.

Harold Radford, Mary Beth Cunningham and Ron Glen star in the Springer Theater Company's presentation of "My Fair Lady."

Scholarship

Troy State University is offering the Lloyd Dean Hightower Scholarship which can only be used at the Troy State Fort Benning Branch. The scholarship is named in honor of SFC Lloyd Dean Hightower who died in May 1983 and who received a Bachelor's degree from Troy State posthumously.

The scholarship provides tuition for one academic year and can begin with any academic quarter. Those applying for the scholarship must be a high school graduate or have a GED, be enrolled in TSU and not academically dismissed from any other undergaduate program. They must also be a dependent of or a retired NCO (E5-E9) and live within a 50-mile radius of Fort Benning.

Applicants are required to write a letter to the Sergeants Major Association formally requesting consideration for the scholarship, including highlights of the applicant's academic career and extracurricular activities. The letter should also include an explanation by the applicant as to why he/she should be selected to receive the scholarship.

The following should accompany the letter: a copy of high school transcripts, (college transcript if currently enrolled), three letters of recommendation with one from a high school prinicipal or high school guidance counsellor, if practical, and a statement of employment indicating applicant's employer, address and job title.

Selection for the scholarship will not be dependent upon economic need alone. Each applicant will be judged on citizenship, high school (college) grades, individual skills, and school and community activities. There will be no discrimination on the basis of sex, race, national origin, handicap or marital status.

Applications must be submitted to Jim Gallagher, CATD, USAIS, room 347, Infantry Hall, Fort Benning, Ga., no later than Nov. 1. For more information, call him at 545-7162.

Spiritual

Chaplain Hessian lauds volunteers

"A thriving parish is one that is filled with volunteers," stressed Army Chief of Chaplains (Major General) Patrick J. Hessian. He was addressing a gathering of more than 200 persons attending the Fort Benning Chapel Volunteer Appreciation and Commissioning Dinner at the Officers' Club last week.

Chaplain Hessian said: "For a healthy program we need good chaplains who are well-educated by their denominations and believe themselves to be called by God; good chaplain assistants; and certain professionals such as directors of religious education." "But," he warned, "we are doomed to failure if only those people are involved in the program." He emphasized the need for the service and dedication of the unpaid volunteer.

To provide support for that necessary force of volunteers, Chaplain Hessian said that the paid chapel staff owes the volunteer six things: leadership; prayer; opportunity for service; a support base that includes training so that the volunteer will feel secure in the work being done; recognition for service and time; and motivation for the tasks to be done

Chaplain Hessian pointed out that the unique thing about chapel volunteers is "a spiritual motive that is very much up front in the process of getting the job done." He stressed that "we all owe God the stewardship of our talents."

Following Chaplain Hessian's presentation, Deputy Post Chaplain, Paul Cassibry, recognized and commissioned the chapel volunteers of the Fort Benning community "to be ministers of the Word of God in their particular ministry."

Fort Benning is part of the Chapel Volunteer Models Program being funded by the Chief of Chaplains Office. One aspect of this program will be the use of computers to maintain an individual "volunteer history" on those persons involved in the chapel program. This information can be sent to chapels at other posts within the U.S. and overseas, so that a person may more easily find opportunities for using his/her particular talents and gifts. (Chapel Section)

Former chief of chaplains addresses meeting

"Our business is peace," emphasized Chaplain (Major General) Francis L. Sampson last Thursday morning to one of the largest groups ever gathered for a St. Michaels Airborne Association prayer breakfast. "Life is not a rose garden," he continued, "life is warfare — justice vs. injustice; love vs. hate; selfishness vs. unselfishness. We find this warfare in ourselves, our families, our communities, our country, and our world."

He told the men and women of the airborne community that there are basically two philosophies of life and they can be summed up in the old adage: "Two men looked out from prison bars — one saw mud, the other saw stars." He urged his listeners to "look up to the stars — the stars of our flag and even higher to the Star of David or the Star over Bethlehem."

Chaplain Sampson is a man of peace who is well acquainted with the ways of war. He made two combat jumps in World War II and was imprisoned as a POW twice. During the Korean war he made a third combat jump. A recipient of the Distinguished Service Cross, Chaplain Sampson served as Chief of Chaplains for four years before retiring from active duty in 1971.

Reflections

Take faith in power of the Lord

By Chaplain John Bjarnason

The Law of Life

"Good Timber"

The tree that never had to fight
For sun and sky and air and light,
But stood out in the open plain
And always got its share of rain,
Never became a forest king
But lived and died a scrubby thing.
But man who never had to toil
To gain and farm his patch of soil,
Who never had to win his share
Of sun and sky and light and air,
Never became a manly man
But lived and died as he began.
Good timber does not grow with ease,
The stronger wind, the stronger trees.
The further sky, the greater length.
The more the storm, the more the strength.
By sun and cold, by rain and snow,
In trees and men good timber grow.
Where thickest lies the forest growth
We find the patriarchs of both.
And they hold counsel with the stars
Whose broken branches show the scars
Of many winds and much of strife.
This is the common law of life.

There are many important lessons for living herein. May I suggest a few:

- Life is a schooling experience, we learn from both the bad and good in ours and in the lives of others.
- What we do with our experiences makes all the difference.
- God has given us our free-agency to choose for ourselves whether we will face up to our challenges and opportunities or will shrink from them.
- God sends into each person's life exactly what is best for that person.

The successful life is first, a life that trusts with full-faith in God that God is providing the right combination of experiences, and second, taking in faith what God gives you and doing the best you can with it.

Dr. Norman Vincent Peale suggests steps for successful living:

- Stop running yourself down. There's a lot that's right with you.
- Eliminate self-pity. Start thinking of what you have left, instead of dwelling on what you have lost. List your assets on a piece of paper.
- Quit thinking of yourself. Think of helping others.
- Remember Goethe: "He who has a firm will molds the world to himself." Almighty God put a tough thing into human beings called "will". Use it.
- Have a goal and put a timetable on it.
- Stop wasting your mental energy on gripes and post-mortems, and start thinking about what to do now.
- Every day three times say: "This is the day the Lord has made. I will rejoice and be glad in it." (Psalm 118:24).

For more information, call 687-6152.

'The Shepherd'

All of us have to make important, often heart-rending choices as we live from day to day. Sometimes we make the wrong decision. We want to rebel and go our own way when "The Shepherd" chooses a rough path through dark valleys. Helping in making those decisions can be found in "The Shepherd," a film to be shown at Sightseeing Road Chapel on Wednesday, at 7 p.m. The exciting message of "The Shepherd" is that no matter how far we have gone down our own path, there is One who is always ready to guide us back home.

New chairman finds volunteering very rewarding

By Connie Dickey
USAIC Public Affairs Office

"I find it very rewarding working with the Red Cross. We are here to help the soldier. They are our primary concern on post," Maggie Siegfried, new chairman of the Red Cross volunteers, said.

Maggie Siegfried

The 11-year veteran of Red Cross volunteering has been at Fort Benning since June and was appointed chairman Aug. 22. She is married to Col. Richard S. Siegfried, chief of the light infantry task force. Their son, Benjamin, is a freshman at the University of Alabama.

Mrs. Siegfried said she has never regretted her decision to work with the Red Cross. "I've always wanted to work with the Red Cross. My mother is an RN, so I'm no stranger to hospitals and I thought I could help at a hospital through the Red Cross. After I attended a Red Cross orientation, I decided I wanted to be on the case worker side and I think it is just as rewarding as helping in a hospital," she said.

"When a soldier comes in and tells us his mom died and he needs to go home, we verify the death, get him a loan and make airplane reservations for him. If a young wife comes in telling us her husband is on an exercise and hasn't left her any money, we help her make ends meet.

"Also, if a young private comes in with his wife and they just do not have the money to live on, we offer advice and try to get them to see that until he gets through AIT or whatever training he's supposed to do, maybe she should go back to her parents until later. When things work out, it gives you a good feeling," Mrs. Siegfried said.

She decided to become a Red Cross volunteer in 1973, here at Fort Benning. "Basically, I was looking for something to do and the Red Cross had a booth at the OWC welcoming coffee, so I said, 'why not'?"

Besides working as a Red Cross case worker, Mrs. Siegfried has been a member of the Red Cross Board and Youth Chairman. "The Red Cross has a great program for youths, ages 14 to 18, in that they get experience that is recorded and can be used on job applications. They receive the same training as our adult volunteers and some recognition for the time they've donated."

Mrs. Siegfried said the Red Cross has about 75 active volunteers but more are always needed. "We take care of the Fort Benning community and any active duty member, retirees or their family members can help." If anyone is interested in finding out more about what Red Cross volunteers do, Mrs. Siegfried will be at her office in building 1699 on the corner of Ingersoll Street and Vibbert Avenue, Tuesdays and Thursdays from 9 a.m. until noon, or they may call 545-5194. There is a Red Cross orientation scheduled for Sept. 25 at the Main Post Chapel Annex.

NCO's who are good drivers . . .

GEICO'S JIM IRVIN COULD SAVE YOU $100 ON CAR INSURANCE.

ATTENTION NCOs!
There's money waiting for you just outside your base. It's the money you could save on car insurance by visiting your local GEICO office.

How much money? Many NCOs save $50, $75, $100 or more. Some actually save hundreds of dollars. And all it takes is 10 minutes at your local GEICO office to find out how much you might save.

HOW CAN GEICO SAVE YOU SO MUCH MONEY?
By insuring good drivers and lowering our sales costs. Doing business with good drivers lets us reduce your premium. GEICO also gives you 12-month protection against rate increases. And you may spread as many as nine easy payments over the year.

DOES GEICO GIVE YOU THE SAME SERVICE AS OTHER COMPANIES?
No, we give you better service. Because you can call us 24 hours a day, for any reason. So, if you're working odd hours or a TDY assignment comes up, there's no hassle. All it takes is a phone call.

And there's no hassle if you have an accident.

Because GEICO has thousands of claim representatives around the country and overseas.

Even if you're transferred to Germany, there's still no hassle. You can have insurance waiting for you when you get there. And if you'd rather store your car in the states, you'll get a lower rate until you come home.

DOES GEICO INSURE A LOT OF NCOs?
Since 1936, GEICO has specialized in providing low-cost, high-quality insurance for hundreds of thousands of NCOs. And we have over 1,200,000 satisfied policyholders.

WHEN CAN YOU START SAVING MONEY ON CAR INSURANCE?
To find out, call your local GEICO office today. Or visit the address below. And be sure to ask about our 3-year renewal guarantee program. Start getting the special treatment you deserve.

IT'S EASY TO DO BUSINESS WITH GEICO.

VISIT YOUR GEICO OFFICE TODAY.

2029 S. Lumpkin Road, Oakland Park Shopping Center, Columbus. (404) 689-2787.

If you don't meet all of GEICO's "good driver" requirements, you may still get the same quality insurance & service from a Government Employees Insurance Co. affiliate at somewhat higher rates.

IT ISN'T LUCK THAT GETS YOU PROMOTED IN COMBAT ARMS.

To be a forward observer on a TACFIRE team, you need the cool of a superbowl quarterback. There's no room for luck. That's the way it is in the combat arms these days.

To even make the team requires intelligence, physical agility and something your football coach referred to as desire. So not everybody makes the team.

Which means, for the people who do, there are plenty of openings and ample opportunity for rapid advancement. If you already serve in the combat arms, you know this.

If you haven't had a combat arms assignment yet and think you have what it takes, you couldn't pick a better time to go for it. See your reenlistment NCO today.

Civil Air Patrol volunteer services in times of need

By Henry Brown
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Civil Air Patrol (CAP) is one of the many organizations that support the local community during natural disasters and provide emergency relief.

CAP is an auxiliary of the United States Air Force whose membership is made-up of civilian volunteers who receive no pay for their services except knowing they were there to help during a time of need. The only compensation the unit gets is when it is called to perform a mission. Then it is reimbursed for fuel and maintenance costs.

One such unit is the 09089th Composite squadron located in Columbus. The unit is made up of 20 seniors and 22 cadets both male and female from the Columbus-Fort Benning area.

Cadet members range from 13 to 19 years old and senior members are 19 and above.

Cadet training is similar to that of the high school Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps, according to squadron commander, Major Emerson E. Addington. They are taught leadership, aerospace education and physical fittness.

There is no distinction made in training the two groups; both cadets and seniors get the same, Addington said.

Although the organization is not military, it is governed by Air Force regulations. They even wear the AF uniform.

When CAP members attend functions on military installations they get military support orders which, with their ID Card, gives them the same post privileges as military members on active duty for training. They are even allowed in the officers and enlisted clubs.

Addington said the CAP maintains a state of readiness at all times. He said that he monitors a radio 30 minutes every evening.

All seniors are qualified in a specialty, for example, in communications or maintance.

Addington said the CAP cadets meet on Tuesday evenings from 7:30 until 10 p.m. at the Metropolitan Airport in Columbus and the seniors meet Thursday evenings from 7 to 9 pm.

He said plans are being made to establish a wing at Fort Benning.

MPs celebrate anniversary

Fort Monroe, Va. — Although the Military Police Corps, as a permanent branch of the Army, is one of the youngest of the branches, it has been repeatedly created as a temporary agency. Its traditions of duty, service, and security date back to the Revolution.

In January 1776 Washington appointed a "Provost Marshal" to the "Army of the United Colonies." Two years later, the Continental Congress established by resolution a Provost Corps "to be mounted on horseback, and armed and accoutred as Light Dragoons."

At about the same time the Marechausie Corps received orders to apprehend "Deserters, Marauders, Drunkards, Rioters and Stragglers" and to perform various other military police duties.

The War Department appointed a Provost Marshal General in September 1862 for the duration of the Civil War. His primary function was enforcing the draft laws. His subordinates, stationed throughout the country, had orders to apprehend deserters, arrest disloyal persons, inquire into and report treasonable practices, seize stolen government property and detect spies.

At about the same time, Congress established an Invalid Corps, later called the Veteran Reserve Corps. Its purpose was to perform military police duties and maintain internal security. The Veteran Reserve Corps disbanded in 1866.

In 1917 Congress again appointed a Provost Marshal General for the duration of the war to administer the Selective Service Law. After World War I, the Corps dissolved.

In August 1941, a Provost Marshal General's Office and a Military Police Corps formed again. In addition, the Army established a school, a replacement training center, and a unit training center.

On June 19, 1946, the Army Chief of Staff approved the continuation of the Military Police Corps and the Office of The Provost Marshal General as a part of the military establishment. On June 28, 1950, Public Law 581 authorized the establishment of the Corps as a basic branch of the Army. (TNS)

Editor's note: The Military Police Corps celebrate their anniversary Sept. 26.

Travel thru school zones with care

The time of the year is upon us when strict compliance to speed limits is especially important.

Very shortly, children of all ages will be waiting for school buses on street corners. They like to play while waiting for the bus and often dart into or across the street.

Parents should supervise their children at bus stops. Concerned parents can rotate this responsibility and insure daily supervision of bus stops.

Motorists must be acutely aware and pay special attention to the road, especially in the housing areas. ther area of concern are the school crossing zones. The maximum speed limit is posted, "20 mph WHILE CHILDREN ARE PRESENT."

Further guidance from the MPA Traffic Section relates that when a school crossing guard is present at the crossing point, the 20 mph limit will be obeyed and motorists will also be required to comply with the traffic signals given by the school crossing guard. These instructions direct motorists to slow, stop, turn or continue through the zone.

The safety of our children should be paramount in the minds of everyone. The motorists, the parents, and even concerned pedestrians walking through a school zone can help us protect our greatest resource.

(Provost Marshal)

Clothing care labels now have more information

The Federal Trade Commission has revised its Care Labeling Rule. The rule requires makers of clothes to attach labels telling consumers how to care for their clothes.

Earl Johnson, an attorney for the Federal Trade Commission's Bureau of Consumer Protection, says surveys done by the FTC showed the labels being used by manufacturers are sometimes inconsistent, incomplete, and inaccurate.

Johnson says the amended rule is designed to provide consumers with complete and consistent information. He said it will enable consumers, launderers, and dry cleaners to avoid damaging clothes from improper cleaning procedures and will encourage manufacturers to use standardized terms consumers can understand.

For example, under the old rule, a care label might have simply said, "Machine Washable." The label must now give details on water temperature, drying instructions, ironing instructions, if any, and bleach warnings, if necessary.

A new label might read, "Machine wash cold, tumble dry medium, cool iron. only non-chlorine bleach when needed."

The rule became effective in January 1984. Because of the long time in manufacturing and shipping, the new labels may not be in all garments yet.

Consumers can get a free copy of the Federal Trade Commission booklet on the topic, "What's New About Care Labels" by sending a post card to "Labels", Federal Trade Commission, P.O. Box 37079, Washington, D.C. 20013. (AFPS)

Retirement home helps Army take care of its own

"Taking care of the troops" is more than just a slogan. Elderly retirees and disabled servicemembers are eligible to live in retirement homes operated by the federal government.

The U.S. Soldiers' and Airmens Home is located in Washington, D.C.; the U.S. Naval Home is at Gulfport, Miss.

The beautiful setting in Washington provides residents with outstanding health care facilities, comfortable living arrangements, and activities.

Robert M. Brown, a retired Army staff sergeant, said he enjoys the home because "it allows me to live my golden years in proper pride and self-respect. I am not alone."

Others like it for recreation and companionship. Richard C. Boyd, a retired Army sergeant first class, said he's there because of "the fine facilities for meeting my health and recreational needs, and the continuing fellowship with men and women of similar background."

The Home's 385-bed hospital is for the exclusive use of residents. Geriatric care specialties include podiatry, dentistry, mental health, rheumatology, optometry, cardiology and neurology. There is also physical, occupational and recreational therapy.

The typical resident is a 67-year-old male who served 20 years on active duty in enlisted status and has been living at the Home for nine years. However, the ages range from 40 to 100, although most are between 60 and 79. About 4 percent of the residents are female.

A spokesman for the home explained that all regular, retired enlisted personnel and warrant officers with 20 years of honorable service are eligible for admittance as well as non-retired enlisted personnel and warrant officers unable to earn a living due to service-connected disabilities or who served during war-

• See RETIREMENT HOME, page 33

Retirement homes funded through private donations

The services have set up foundations to support privately operated retirement residences for widows of military personnel as well as widowers, retirees and other family members.

Designed primarily for the aged and those seeking companionship, security and comfort, the residences are supported mainly by contributions from wives' clubs, military associations, corporate and foundation gifts, bequests, trusts and fees.

The 1984 "Uniformed Services Almanac" provides the following information regarding these facilities:

"The Army Distaff Hall in Washington, D.C. has 282 units with an additional 24 units in a special health care center for those needing continual nursing care. Eligibility is limited to widows, mothers, daughters, sisters and mothers-in-law of Regular Army officers, Reserve officers with 20 years of active Army service and Reserve officers retired under Title III, Title 10, USC. Retired female officers also are eligible."

For costs and other information, contact The Army Distaff Foundation, Inc., 6200 Oregon Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20015.

The Carl Vinson Hall in Fairfax County, Virginia has 250 units. The residence is open to widows or widowers of commissioned officers of the Navy, Marine Corps or Coast Guard who died while retired or on active duty; retired officers and spouses, and dependent mothers and mothers-in-law of officers.

For additional information, contact The Navy, Marine, Coast Guard Residence Foundation, Inc., U.S. Naval Observatory, Washington, D.C. 20390.

The Air Force Village in San Antonio, Texas has 378 units and a health care facility including a 68 bed nursing home. It is open to widows of Air Force officers, retired Air Force officers (single or with spouse), and young widows of Air Force officers with or without children during an adjustment period of up to one year.

For more information, contact The Air Force Village Foundation, Inc., 4917 Ravenswood Dr., San Antonio, Texas 78227.

Teresa Village in Fort Walton Beach, Fla. is the only enlisted men's widows home. It has 121 units and an additional 256 units are planned. It is open to widows or widowers, age 55 or older, whose spouse was a retired enlisted person of the Regular Air Force, Air National Guard of Air Force Reserve. Younger widows may be admitted under special circumstances; a limited number of retired couples, age 62 or older, may also be admitted.

For further information, contact The Air Force Enlisted Men's Widows and Dependents Home Foundation, Inc., 572 Mooney Rd., Fort Walton Beach, Fla. 32548. (AFPS) time and are unable to earn a living due to non-service connected disabilities. Currently, only about 12 percent are not retirees.

There are no age or income restrictions. However, anyone convicted of a felony during or after service is ineligible. An alcoholic must show proof of recovery and a deserter must show evidence of later good conduct.

Accommodations for the more than 2,000 residents include private rooms with a member manager on each floor to ensure resident welfare. Showers and bathrooms are shared.

Residents are charged 25 percent of their retired military pay and/or VA compensation. The average cost is $229 a month. All other income is exempt. About 25 percent of the residents work at the facility or outside the home.

No taxpayer money is used. The rest of the money to meet the facility's $31.3 million annual operating budget comes from 50 cent monthly contributions made by active duty soldiers, airmen and warrant officers, and interest from a fund set up with these contributions, as well as from court-martial fines. In fiscal year 1983, these fines totaled $23.7 million or 51 percent of the home's total income of $46.8 million.

In July, there were about 300 rooms available. However, because the hospital is filled, only those in fairly good health who are able to take care of themselves are being considered. There is no waiting list.

Unlike the Soldiers' and Airmen's Home, which is a independent federal agency, the U.S. Naval Home in Gulfport, Miss. is part of the Navy. It has an annual operating budget of $5 million and is run by active duty Naval officers. There is no charge to residents. In July, there were 170 vacancies in the 600-resident facility. There is no waiting list for retirees. The average wait for non-retired veterans is 3 to 6 months.

All honorably discharged Navy and Marine Corps veterans, 65 years of age or older, who are unable to earn a living, including commissioned officers, are eligible, provided they are able to walk and are in fairly good health. Upon admission, they must be able to take care of themselves and their rooms. Coast Guard veterans who served during wartime as part of the Navy also are eligible.

Although the age requirement is 65, exceptions are made for disabled veterans. About 40 of the residents are disabled. Approximately 75 percent of the residents are retirees.

"Although we are primarily a retirement home, we take 29 non-retired veterans a year," a spokesman explained. Each application is reviewed separately. "We consider things like disability and whether a person was a POW," the spokesman added.

The 60 women at the facility make up 15 percent of the residents. Their average age is 81; the average for men is 78.

The 11-story residency building which dominates the 38-acre site on the Gulf of Mexico includes a dining hall, library, theatre, bowling alley and a Navy Exchange. There's also an outdoor swimming pool and a 60-bed health care facility.

Like the Soldiers' and Airmen's Home, convicted felons need not apply. Alcoholics must show proof of recovery.

For additional information and applications contact: the Governor, U.S. Naval Home, 01800 East Beach Blvd., Gulfport, Miss. 39501. Tel: (601) 896-3110.

To contact the Soldiers' and Airmen's Home, write or call the Secretary, Board of Commissioners, U.S. Soldiers' and Airmen's Home, Washington, D.C. 20317. Tel: (202) 722-3338. (AFPS)

IRR now offers reenlistment bonus

To reduce personnel shortages and aid mobilization readiness, an Individual Ready Reserve (IRR) reenlistment bonus program was recently announced.

The program, to begin immediately in the Army and shortly by the other services, offers up to $900 to service members who are completing or have already completed their military obligation.

Individuals must have less than 11 years total service, have an eligible combat or combat support skill, and agree to serve for three additional years in the IRR.

Additional information may be obtained from an inservice recruiter, reserve activity, or the military service reserve personnel center. (AFPS)

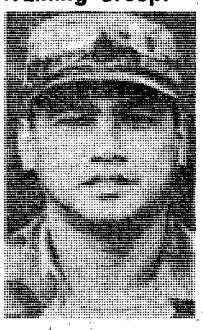
Soldier gets satisfaction as instructor

By Bill Reynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Editor's Note: This is the last in a four part series highlighting instructors and cadre of the Infantry Training Group.



SFC Benny Cruz

SFC Benny Cruz is rather softspoken about his hometown district on the Island of Guam. There are 27 districts or small towns on the island. He hails from the district of Manina and it was from there in 1967 that he reported for the draft.

His first military duty was a nine-week assignment to Fort Ord, Calif., for basic training. After completing basic he was shipped to Fort Gordon, Ga., to learn how to be an Infantryman.

His next stop after pinning on the blue discs and crossed rifles of an Infantry soldier was Fort Benning for the basic Airborne course. "After getting my wings I was shipped up to Fort Campbell, Ky., to the 101st Airborne Division,"said Cruz.

His first assignment was to the 3rd Battalion 506th Infantry. It was with this battalion that he went to Vietnam. Cruz spent 18 months with the 101st. He started out as a private manning a machinegun, eventually becoming a squad leader in the same unit.

Most soldiers went home after a year in a combat zone, but the then 21 year-old Cruz decided to stay, but with a better job. His last six months on that tour was spent as a liaison NCO for the 101st in Bien Hoa. Cruz smiled when he recalled his experiences during the last six months of his tour. "My first year was a rough tour but then I got a better deal," he explained.

"I spent my time picking up new soldiers coming into country and helping the old-timers going on R&R."

His tour in Vietnam over, Cruz reenlisted for another four years. He went back to where he started in the Army. His arrival at Fort Ord was a lot different than his last trip there. This time it was Sgt. Benny Cruz wearing the coffee-brown campaign hat of a drill sergeant instead of the frightened and confused look common to initial-entry soldiers.

"I went down there for six weeks to drill sergeant school and wound up spending the next three years 'pushing troops' in basic training," Cruz recalled. He said the best thing about his tour at Ord was that "It didn't snow." He claimed the fog in the Monterrey Peninisula made up for the lack of snow.

Cruz's next overseas tour made up for his missing the snow and cold weather. In 1971 Cruz received orders for Germany.

"I was stationed with the 3rd Armored Division in Gelhausen,"said Cruz. It was while he was in Germany that the former Airborne trooper got his first experience with mechanized Infantry. He had been in Germany only 18 months when he became eligible to reenlist again. This time he made the decision to leave Germany and rejoin his family in the U.S.

Cruz had gotten married in 1970 but was unable to take his new family with him when he went to Germany. Again he went back to Fort Ord as a drill sergeant. His second time "under the hat" was easier, according to Cruz. This time he spent more than three years as a drill before going back to Europe in 1978.

Cruz's orders took him to Mannheim, Germany as the platoon sergeant of a weapons platoon in the 8th Infantry Division.

With his tour in Germany over, Cruz's rotation cycle back to Fort Ord was broken with his assignment to the U.S. Army Infantry Center at Fort Benning, Ga. in 1980.

According to Cruz, his job with the Infantry Training Group is perhaps the most important assignment on post. As part of the Tactics Committee he says that it is with them (the committee) that the soldiers learn how to become Infantrymen.

"On AO Yellow we teach the soldier squad techniques. We teach him about the two fire teams that make up the Infantry squad," said Cruz. "We teach him (the soldier) the team leader's responsibilities and the responsibilities of the other members of the team. Here is the first place he gets to work as a team member." Cruz emphasized the necessity of the soldier learning teamwork as a tactical unit. He feels a soldier not working as a team member would soon become a casualty on the battlefield.

"We take the soldier downrange and teach him the movement techniques of a squad." said Cruz. "We teach the hand and arm signals used by a squad, and the size and shape of squad formations."

In eight hours Cruz and the rest of the instructors on AO Yellow teach the initial-entry soldier the composition of a squad, how to engage obstacles and danger areas, formations, tactics and techniques. He said his goal for the soldiers is to be able to respond as a squad.

DIO snares quarterly SPIRIT award for second time

By Bill Reynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Directorate of Industrial Operations was presented the quarterly SPIRIT award during ceremonies held in Infantry Hall Tuesday.

The award, presented by Post Commander Maj. Gen. John W. Foss, was the second in a row for the directorate.

Each quarter the directorate or activity presenting the most SPIRIT initiatives is presented the large trophy sitting in the lobby of Infantry Hall. DIO presented a total of 22 initiatives or management improvements during the third quarter of Fiscal Year 1984.

During the ceremony, Foss commented on the back-to-back wins by DIO. "I'm particularly impressed," said Foss. "This is the second consecutive win for DIO which proves that you (DIO) don't quit when you are on top."

During the third quarter DIO presented SPIRIT initiatives representing more than $286,000.

Along with the large trophy to the directorate, 10 individual SPIRIT awards were presented. The award of a desk pen set with the SPIRIT eagle atop a Fort Benning patch went to: Melvin Burton, for his suggestion to make a wear plate to use with ramp switches on the Bradley Infantry Fighting Vehicle; Curtis H. Gaylor, for his suggestion to clean and lubricate a fire extinguisher valve; John W. Sobolewski, for his suggestion to place caution stickers underneath the hood and on the dash of maintenance vehicles to warn against the use of water on engine and electrical parts; Michael Smallwood, for his suggestion to validate prices for locking handles for the M901 launcher; William Harden, for his suggestion to provide a motor-operated pants turner for use in the alterations section of the Reception Station; Carl F. Ibs, for his suggestion to install a steel plunger inside the ramp door pump valve of the BFV; Charles W. Parks, for his suggestion to provide a utility trailer to transport material; James E. Starling, for his suggestion to provide on-site training to Weapons Pool employees on the 25 mm cannon; Mrs. Patricia P. Ellis, for her suggestion to revise the document numbering system and Dieter H. Rohr for his suggestion to change the repair procedures on the ramp pump valves on the BFV.

VA Q and A

Q — My grandfather was a patient in a VA nursing home. He recently passed away and we are applying for burial benefits. Can we claim transportation expenses?

A — Transportation costs of remains are authorized when the veteran dies in a VA medical facility.

Q — Am I required to occupy as a home the house I purchased with my VA home loan eligibility?

A — Yes. The law specifically requires that you certify that you intend to occupy the property personally as your home in order for you to qualify for the loan.

Hispanic history

being administered to the wounded man, an enemy rifle grenade landed in the midst of the group. Realizing there was no time for the wounded sergeant or the other men to gain protection from the grenade blast, Specialist Fernandez threw himself on the grenade as it exploded, saving the lives of the four men at the sacrifice of his own."

Father Frances Schuler, pastor of the San Clemente Church in Los Lunas, N.M., said of him: "Daniel has taught us the true meaning of patriotism."

Senator Joseph M. Montoya said: "It is my hope that those who doubt the caliber of some of our young people today will look to Danny as inspiration."

Benevidez: hand-to-hand combat

MSgt. Roy P. Benevidez was another Hispanic who went far beyond what might be expected of a soldier in the Army. While serving in Vietnam, he jumped from a rescue helicopter and ran approximately 75 meters to rescue members of a Recon Team.

Despite wounds to his right leg, face and head, he carried and dragged half of the wounded team members to the aircraft. Under intense fire, he returned to recover the body of the dead team leader and classified documents. He was severely wounded in the abdomen and back.

One of three aircraft was destroyed and Benevidez called in tactical air strikes and directed fire from gunships. He was wounded again in his thigh while giving aid to a wounded team member.

On a second trip with wounded, he was clubbed from behind by an enemy soldier. He was wounded in the head and arm but killed the enemy soldier and continued to the aircraft under intense fire. He killed two more enemy soldiers as they rushed the awaiting helicopter.

Despite his many wounds and loss of blood, Benevidez made one last check for wounded and classified material before being evacuated.

Many other stories of courage by Hispanic American soldiers have been recorded, but these few examples give an idea of what Hispanics have contributed to the preservation of our nation's freedom and security.

DOT cautions parents on safety seat installation

The Department of Transportation has cautioned parents about a potential safety problem involving the installation of some child safety seats in passenger vehicles.

The department's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) said the potential problem concerns the compatibility of some child safety seats and manually adjustable seat belts. Child safety seats rely on vehicle lap belts to hold them securely in place.

A preliminary NHTSA review found that the situation may occur when the child safety seat is installed with the kind of lap belt that is not automatically tightened by a retractor. In some instances, the angle at which the belt is buckled is the same angle that permits adjustment of the belt length. As a result, the belt — and the child safety seat — may not remain secure in a crash. The potential problem does not involve child safety seats that are installed with a tether anchorage strap.

NHTSA Administrator Diane K. Steed emphasized that the potential problem does not involve a defect with the safety seats themselves and the parents should not be unduly alarmed. "Child safety seats are well-made, safety tested, and extremely effective in protecting child passengers. They have a history of life-saving successes when used properly," she said.

According to Steed, the manufacturers of child safety seats have been notified about the problem and asked to review the compatibility of their products.

Meantime, she urges parents first to install the child safety seat, carefully following the manufacturer's instructions. In doing so, they should inspect the installation, making sure the lap belt is tightly cinched. (If necessary, twist the short end of the buckle several times to shorten the length of the belt to enable it to cinch tightly.)

> "The potential problem concerns the compatibility of some child safety seats and manually adjusted seat belts."

Next, parents should try to tilt the seat forcibly to the side to see if the lap belt holds it securely in place. She stressed that tilting the seat was important because the belt loosening problem may not be noticeable when the buckle is first attached. In some instances, the belt may appear to hold the safety seat firmly in place but later work loose when the child moves around.

If after tilting, the belt slips through the buckle, she offered this additional installation advice for parents: turn the adjustable end of the lap belt upside down before inserting it into the buckle.

If these remedies do not work in your vehicle, try placing the child safety seat in a different seating location in the car.

NHTSA encouraged parents who have encountered this or other child safety seat/seat belt compatibility problems to report them to the agency's toll-free Auto Safety Hotline at (800) 424-9393 (426-0123 in the Washington, D.C. area.) (Driver Magazine)

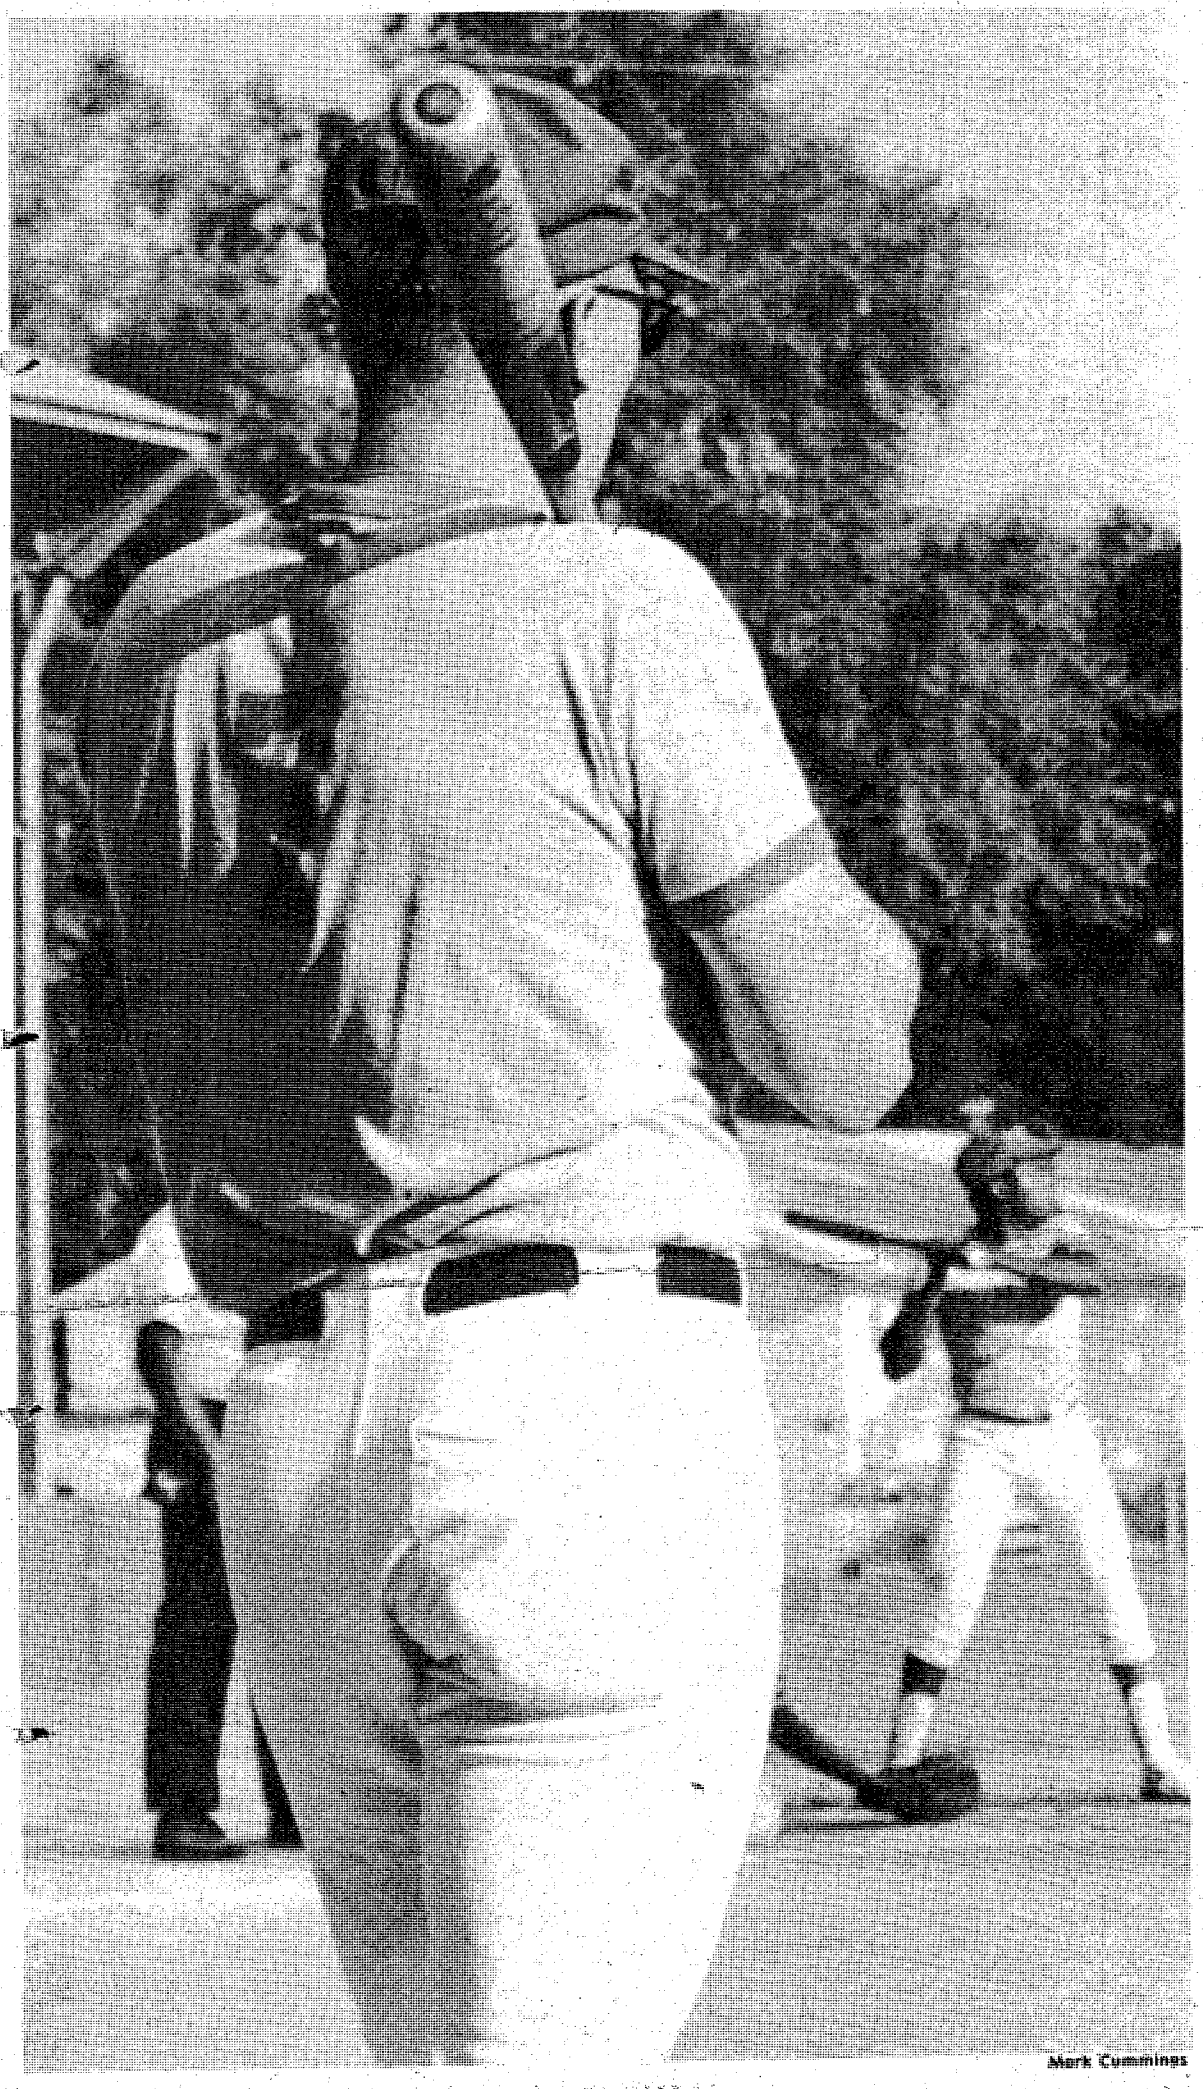
HHC, ITG captures post softball championship



Mark Cummings

An A Battery, 2/10 Field Artillery player patiently waits to take his cuts in last Friday's post softball championship.

Excellent fielding keys 12-11 win

By Mark Cummings
USAIC Public Affairs Office

It took an extra inning and the excellent fielding of pitcher Eltor Colon for HHC, ITG to capture the post softball championship at Gowdy Field last Friday, as they held off a stubborn squad from A Battery, 2/10 Field Artillery, to post a 12-11 victory.

Both teams scored single runs in the first two innings before HHC, ITG, jumped ahead in the top of the third with three runs. Second baseman George Patton drilled a two-run homer and Colon followed with a solo blast to put HHC out in front 5-2.

While A Btry. was shut down by Colon in the third, fourth and fifth innings, HHC put a pair of runs on the board in their half of the fifth to go up 7-2.

A Battery cut the deficit down to four runs at 7-3 in the bottom of the sixth. Robert Mann singled with two outs and romped home as Rafael Betancourt followed with a run-scoring triple.

HHC countered with a run of their own in the top of the seventh to lead 8-3.

That set the stage for A Battery, who came up for their final bats. Only three outs separated them from defeat.

Five singles and an HHC error paved the way for five runs to deadlock the game at 8-8. As a matter of fact, A Battery had Tab Bailey on third base, representing the winning run with only one out. But two great defensive plays by Colon, who fielded his position on the mound flawlessly, kept the game tied and sent the contest into extra innings.

"We made some errors and that allowed them to come back on us," said Colon, who doubles as coach as well as a player. "By the later innings they had figured out how to hit my arc pitch."

With one out in the eighth, HHC exploded with six consecutive singles, producing four runs and a 12-8 bulge.

With the 10th man in the batting order coming to bat and down by four runs, A Battery's chances of a second comeback seemed slim.

But a leadoff single by Wade Smith paved the way for another rally. Two singles and a pair of sacrifices brought across three runs to cut HHC's margin to 12-11. But Colon retired Bailey with the tying run on first to put an end to the exciting eight-inning affair.

"We played heads-up ball throughout much of the tournament", added Colon. "I'm getting out of the service next month, and at the beginning of the year I told the team I wasn't leaving until we won the post championship. That was our main goal throughout the season".

John Patterson led the way for HHC. Patterson went 4 for 4 at the plate and scored three runs. James Johnson and Colon contributed with three hits apiece.

Wade Smith and Keith Davis each cracked three hits to lead the A Battery assault.

It's a race to first as this HHC, ITG batter tries to beat out a hit.

Post marksmen earn spots on CISM shooting team

By Tommy Pool
USAMU Public Affairs Office

Final tryouts for the Council International du Sport Militarie (CISM) Shooting Team were completed at Fort Benning this week with all but three of those selected being from the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit (USAMU).

Individuals picked to the United States CISM Rifle Team in order of finish were: Glenn Dubis, Stephen Goff, David Erickson, Richard Hawkins, Lones Wigger and James Meredith, all from USAMU.

Members of the United States CISM pistol team were selected earlier this year and included the following personnel from USAMU: David Woodcock, Rojelio Arredondo, Erich Buljung, John McNally and Gary Cumbie. Also selected to the U.S. team for the Women's CISM Pistol events were Gail Liberty of the U.S. Air Force and Ruby Fox and Kim Dyer of the U.S. Army Reserve.

Gordon B. Rogers, commander of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, will serve as team captain and United States Chief of Mission. Team coaches from USAMU are William Krilling (rifle) and Fred Keifer (pistol). Roger Schneider, also of USAMU, will serve as the U.S. team gunsmith.

The team will depart Sunday to compete in this year's CISM Shooting Championships in Liestal, Switzerland from Sept. 22-30. More than thirty nations are expected to attend the championships.

CISM stands for Council International du Sport Militarier. This year's CISM Championships will include some of the top military teams in the world and is more commonly referred to as the "military olympics".

The shooting events will include individual as well as team competition in both military rifle and pistol matches with the overall best country trophy being awarded to the team with the highest composite score of rifle and pistol team aggregates.

The United States is the defending CISM champion and has won the title for the last three consecutive years. The U.S. also holds the record for the most victories by any country with a total of fifteen. Finland is a distant second with a total of four.

OWC bowling

The Officers Wives Club is now forming bowling leagues. The first games will be played on Sept. 27 at 9 a.m. at the Main Post Bowling Center. For more information call B.J. Anderson at 561-9657, or Fran Espar at 689-7888.

Over 35 Basketball

The 1984-1985 Over-35 Basketball League is now accepting registrations Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Doughboy Stadium, building 394. All active duty personnel, retirees, military dependents, family members and DAC, AAFES, and NAF employees are eligible to play. For more information contact Speedy Austin at 545-5777.

Women's Basketball

Registration is now being held for the 1984-85 Women's Basketball League. Any interested teams or individuals who are military, military dependents, retirees or their dependents, or DAC, AAFES, or NAF employees are eligible to play. You can register Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Doughboy Stadium. For more information call Speedy Austin at 545-5777/2332.

Women's basketball

Registration is now being held for the Post Women's Basketball League. You may sign up as a team or individually. All active duty personnel and their family members, retired military and their family members, and DA, NAF, AAFES and any civilian working on Fort Benning are eligible to play. For more information call Speedy Austin at 545-2332/5777.

GFL football

The Phenix City Southern Vikings, 7-1, ended their Georgia Football League regular reason schedule last weekend by drilling Gainesville, 41-2. John Ross' club will play Ackworth in the playoff semifinals tomorrow at 9 p.m. at the Phenix City Municipal Stadium.

YA football

All the conditions were right Saturday for the Youth Activities football opening day ceremonies. Situated on the field were approximately 150 eager young boys and girls and their full attention was being given to the guest speaker. Wallace Davis, former Minnesota Viking player and now head football coach at Carver High School, stressed the importance of fair play and good sportsmanship, while overhead the Silver Wings prepared themselves to parachute into center field with the official game ball.

Speeches over, game ball delivered and that last hot dog downed before the big game, ten teams hit the fields. Representing the divisons were the Falcons, Raiders and Pythons, six through eight year olds; the Steelers, Falcons and Colts, nine and 10 year olds; and the Redskins, Knights, Outlaws and Bills in the 11 through 13 year olds.

Spencer football

The Greenwave of Spencer High School will try to gain their first victory of the 1984-85 football season when they battle Kendrick (0-1) tonight at Doughboy Stadium.

Special Olympics

Registration is underway for the winter Special Olympics. Mentally and phyisically-handicapped children and adults over the age 8 interested in participating in the Special Olympics winter sports (bowling and basketball) programs may sign up now at the Columbus Recreation Department 107 41st Street, or the Columbus MR Service Center, 2400 Buena Vista Road. For more information, call Loretta Flowers at 323-7334.

Sports tickets

Tickets to college football games are hard to come by, but for your information here are the numbers of the ticket departments at area schools: Alabama, 205-348-6111; Auburn, 205-826-4750; Georgia, 404-542-1231; Georgia Tech, 404-894-5447. For ticket information on the Falcons, call 404-325-2667; for the Braves, 404-577-9100.

Baseball instruction

Major McDonald Valentine, founder and manager of the North Atlanta Mustangs semi-pro baseball team, will hold a free hitting, throwing and running demonstration for interested players, men and women, this Tuesday at 5:35 p.m. at Gowdy Field.

For years Valentine has taught thousands of players to become better baseball players.

During his career, he has instructed two USA Team baseball players, one all-world player, six college All-Americans and such noted professionals as Phil Garner and Mike Ivie.

Gloves and baseball cleats are required for the demonstration.

Correction

An article in last week's BAYONET mistakenly gave false information dealing with the upcoming hunting season.

Contrary to last week's article all hunters who possess a Georgia State hunting license and who bag a deer on post must tag the deer, regardless of whether they bag the deer on the Alabama or Georgia side of post. Any person hunting with an Alabama license does not have to tag their kill at all. However anyone wishing to remove their kill from post must first fill out a post deer permit (Form 48) and return it to the Permit Issuing Agency, building 247. This must be done before the kill can be removed from Fort Benning. This applies to both Alabama and Georgia hunting license holders.

Last week's article also mentioned that all shotguns must be 20 gauge or larger. However this only applies to deer hunting.

The Bayonet apologizes for any confusion the article may have caused.

Road races

7th Annual Chattahoochee River Race, West Point, Ga., Oct. 6: Long a favorite race for West Georgians, runners can choose either the 5 or 10-k course to run on. Starting time for both is 9 a.m., with a 1-mile fun run at 10:15. Advance entry fee is a reasonable $5 ($6 on day of race). Long-sleeved tee-shirts to all and 5-year age groups. A drawing will be held afterwards with five $100 bills going to lucky runners. Races start at West Point City Hall. Write to Vicky Imes, 130 Teel Road, West Point 31833 for more information.

* * *

National Infantry Museum Road Race, Fort Benning, Oct. 13: No race in West Georgia draws a larger field than this one. Entries are open to individuals and groups. Race proceeds benefit the museum. Last year, over $17,000 was raised. Entry fee is $5. This year's run will start (9 a.m.) and finish at Doughboy Stadium. For more information, call Jean Dyer at 563-4818 or Bernie Pfeiffer at 545-3285.

UP-town Runaround, Columbus, Oct. 27: Used to be called Textile 5-miler, then Textile 8000. It's still a 5-miler (1-mile fun run at 9:30) and it's still run uptown in conjunction with National Textile Week. The race starts at 10 a.m. at the parking garage on 1st Avenue and 11th Street. Entry fee: $6 early, $7 on day of race. Towels go to all entrants. Cash awards to male and female winners. For more information, write John Bohannon, 5462 Roaring Branch Road, Columbus 31904.

4th Annual Couples 6-mile Relay, Columbus, Nov. 4: One of the few relay races in these parts is set for Sunday afternoon at 2 p.m. Partner 1 (male or female) goes two miles before handing off to Partner 2. After two more miles, Partner 1 takes baton for final two mile leg. Cooper Creek Park is setting for this fun time. Co-sponsored by Wendy's and CTC, race fee is $12 per couple prior to Nov. 1; $14 per couple after that. Hand-blown glass awards, long-sleeved tee-shirts, Running in Georgia subscriptions. Write to Sandy Denham, PO Box 9594, Columbus, 31908 for more information.

Jaycette Jaunt, Columbus, Nov. 10: Details are still sketchy on this one. It will be run at Cooper Creek Park, scene of last year's 5-k race. More information forthcoming.

Briefs

NG conference

Approximately 220 people will be at Fort Benning this weekend for the National Guard Commander's Conference.

Among the attendees will be Secretary of the Army John O. Marsh Jr. The purpose of the conference is to discuss and develop mutually agreeable positions on a wide range of issues in the areas of training, doctrine, combat developments and other aspects of the National Guard proponency mission.

Attendees will include about 80 general officers of the National Guard Bureau, adjutants general from each state and territory, major unit commanders and general officers from active components.

Sight Saving Month

September has been designated as National Sight Saving Month. All persons working in industrial areas should wear eye protection devices. These safety glasses, goggles or shields could save one's sight, according to Wesley Wagner, a Fort Benning safety specialist.

Wagner said, "people should take the extra few seconds to put on eye protectors." He said it only takes that one time for a person to lose his or her sight.

Everyday, thousands of workers in the United States suffer some type of eye injury.

Air conditioning

Air conditioning on Fort Benning in all administrative buildings will be turned off for the season at the close of business today. Cooling in troop billets will be turned off at midnight and family housing air conditioning will be turned off Sunday at 7 p.m. The reason the air conditioners are being turned off, according to James T. Willis, installation energy coordinator, is that the post has met the requirements established by TRADOC for air conditioning season termination.

Many post shoppers are taking advantage of additional shopping day at commissary

By Becky Winters
USAIC Public Affairs Office

After two weeks of Sunday openings, commissary shoppers are enjoying the convenience of the additional shopping day.

The commissary is now open on Sundays from 11 a.m until 5 p.m. It began opening on Sundays on Sept. 9 and the trial openings will continue through Dec. 4.

"Last Sunday there was a good crowd because of mid-month payday," said Jose Fantauzzi, commissary officer. "On the two Sundays we have been open so far, we have done around $80,000 worth of sales each day."

The new commissary hours for the other days of the week are: Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays-10 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Thursdays-10 a.m. to 7 p.m., and Mondays-closed.

The commissary is still open 47 hours each week, but schedules have been changed so that the hours are a bit shorter on weekdays to allow the commissary to stay open five hours on Sundays.

No new employees were funded for the Sunday hours so commissary officials have to provide the Sunday service without hiring any additional employees.

"Because of the regulations, our employees are only allowed to work so many hours each week, so schedules had to be revised," said Fantauzzi. "This also means that there are fewer people working during the week."

There has been no increase in the commissary's weekly volume of sales, Fantauzzi said.

According to a survey done by the Directorate of Personnel & Community Activities last Sunday, 85 percent of shoppers on Sunday were retirees, and 99 percent of those surveyed said they liked the new Sunday openings.

According to Fantauzzi, checkout lines have been longer due to the decrease in personnel, but this is a problem that will continue unless more employees are authorized.

German liaison officers meet with Maj. Gen. Foss. Max Rowland

German liaision officers hold conference

The annual conference of German Liaison Officers was held at Fort Benning for the first time this week. The conference opened Monday and concludes today. On Tuesday, Post Commander Maj. Gen. John Foss welcomed the attendees who represent the Army of the Federal Republic of Germany to the U.S. Army at 12 TRADOC installations. Among those attending were the senior liaison to TRADOC, Col. Andreas Wittenberg and Brig. Gen. Bernd Klug from Department of the Army, FRG.

The conferees discussed ongoing projects within the German Army, joint German-American endeavors, and new developments in organization and tactics. The Germans also viewed a Rangers-in-Action demonstration at Victory Pond, took part in a marksmanship competition with the German military pistol at Phillips Range and visited the National Infantry Museum.

Yesterday, a memorial wreath laying ceremony was held honoring 44 German soldiers buried at the post cemetery. The soldiers were World War II prisoners of war who died in captivity in the U.S.

Charges of unfair golf club practices rebutted

The following was prepared by Chief of Morale Support Activities Division Lamar Caldwell, in response to an inquiry received over the commanding general's hot line, Dial 545-BOSS: (The caller objected to what he viewed as unfair practices concerning membership fees at the Follow Me Golf Course):

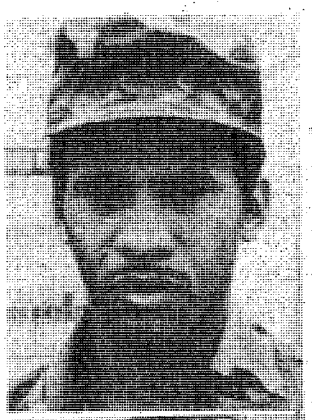
On Jan. 1, the commanding general approved an agreement between the Fort Benning Officer's Club and the Morale Support Activities Division Golf Course providing for payment monthly by the officer's club to the golf club in exchange for all members of the officer's club.

The fee for membership was reduced from an annual fee of $240 to $156 (payment for all monthly dues is $17 per month regardless of rank).

Effective Oct. 1 NCOs and non-officer club members will be authorized to pay upon application to Columbus Bank and Trust, $13 per month on a continuing basis for golf club dues.

Various voices

What are your feelings on the 10th Infantry Division having a brigade stationed at Fort Benning?



Sp5 Kenneth Quinn, Co. C, ITG-"I think it's a pretty good idea. The post definitely has enough buildings that aren't being used that could support the new brigade. It seems that with more soldiers being activated to Fort Benning the economy on post and in Columbus should improve."

CSM John Layne, 4th Airborne Training Bn. -"I think it's a good deal for Fort Benning, but the number of adequate facilities could be a problem. But I would like to see it stay here. It would be good for the economy."

Cecilia Boyd, family member-"I believe that anything the Army does is right. I trust the personnel higher up who make the decisions. The people who complain about the new division coming here are the same people who complain about everything else in the world. What I care about is what's good for the country."

Carolyn Carter, family member-"I see nothing bad about them coming here. It doesn't affect me, although my husband's infantry. It sort of makes me feel safe to know that a light infantry brigade is coming here to Fort Benning. They should have no problem finding room for the new troops, Fort Benning's just too big."

CG's messages

The 1984 Combined Federal Campaign will be conducted at Fort Benning and in other federal government activities in the area during the period Sept. 20 through Nov. 30. This campaign solicits monetary support for over 100 humanitarian agencies through a single appeal. This combined effort affords each of us a chance to assist in essential support to local, state, national, and international activities which render support to both our military and civilian communities. Every year, through the United Way, this campaign provides thousands of dollars for Fort Benning's health, welfare, and youth activities.

The goal for this year's campaign is $450,000. This goal can be attained by the wholehearted participation of all members of this installation and other federal personnel in the nearby area in a fair share system of giving. Generosity and concern for others have always been symbolic of those who serve in the United States Government. Let us continue this tradition.

All personnel are urged to support these deserving agencies by giving generously to the 1984 Combined Federal Campaign.

As I am sure you are aware, Fort Benning is home to the National Infantry Museum which is one of the finest facilities of its kind in the United States. Every year this Museum is visited by thousands of people, both military and civilian, who come away from it with a renewed sense of pride and a keen appreciation of the Infantryman and his unique position in American military history. Additionally, this facility plays an important educational role in the orientation of entry level soldiers.

This October 13th, for the fourth year, the installation will host the National Infantry Museum Benefit Run. This event, with an expected field of 5,000 runners, has become a significant athletic event and serves the dual purpose of not only spotlighting the museum, but Fort Benning as well. In the previous three years, this event has raised almost $30,000 for the museum. Realizing the importance of this event and the significance of the benefits derived from it, I would like to personally extend an invitation to you and members of your command to come out on the thirteenth and participate.

With the arrival of the Jewish High Holy Days, I would like to extend my best wishes for a happy and healthy New Year 5745 to all of Fort Benning's Jewish personnel and their families.

For centuries Jews have begun the year with self-examination, repentance, and prayer for divine guidance and strength. All Americans join your prayers that the coming year be one of blessing, prosperity, and peace for our country and for the whole world.

States have different absentee voting procedures

Military absentee voters from New York, Massachusetts, Virginia, California, Connecticut, Maine and Washington who plan to vote absentee in the upcoming fall elections must comply with recently announced changes and special procedures in their state's absentee voting laws.

The procedures apply to persons unable to vote by regular absentee ballot or in person because of their current military committment.

New York

New York absentee voters may now use home county addresses to request registration and ballots from the county board of elections in the requestor's county of voting residence. Prior law required requests to be sent to the division for servicemen's voting in Albany, N.Y.

Voters still are required to return completed ballots to the division for servicemen's voting, 99 Washington Avenue, Albany, N.Y., 12210. The absentee ballot return envelope which accompanies the ballot normally will be pre-addressed.

Mailed absentee ballots will be counted if received up to seven days after the election if postmarked not later than the day before election.

Massachusetts

Massachusetts had announced new procedures designed to make voting easier for persons voting from outside the United States.

The new law removes the notary requirement on the absentee ballot return envelope, and allows the counting of ballots received up to 10 days after a state general election.

Elimination of the notary requirement takes effect immediately, but the provision for late ballot counting does not apply to state and local primaries or to local general elections. Therefore, this provision will not be in effect for the upcoming Sept. 18 primary, but will apply to the Nov. 6 state general election.

Removal of the notary requirement eliminates a barrier encountered by many voters in foreign countries where notary services are unavailable. Late counting will reduce the number of Massachusetts voters disenfranchised as a result of receiving ballots too late to return by poll-closing deadline.

Virginia

In a law change that is certain to facilitate absentee voting, Virginia will now begin sending out absentee ballots 45 days before an election.

Virginia voters now may expect to get their ballots in time to mark them and return them to election officials in the county or city of residence not later than close-of-polls on election day.

Late receipt of ballots by absentee voters has been the chief reason for the inability of many Virginians to get their ballots back to their county or city of residence in time to be counted.

Absentee voters from Virginia are reminded of the state's oath requirement. The Federal Post Card Application used to request registration and an absentee ballot and the absentee ballot return envelope must be signed before a witness. State election officials have informed the Federal Voting Assistance Program that a number of requests have been received without this oath and could not be accepted. Consequently, a voter who fails to have the documents witnessed might end up disenfranchised.

Five States — California, Connecticut, Georgia, Maine and Washington — provide special write-in ballots to their residents unable to vote by regular absentee ballot or in person because they live or work in remote areas.

California

Californians unable to vote in California during the course of an election because they cannot meet mailing deadlines, or because of military or other government-authorized commitments, may use a special write in ballot.

The eligible person should send a written statement to their county clerk requesting a write-in absentee ballot explaining the reasons for one's inability to vote within the regular deadlines and asking to be issued a write-in absentee ballot.

Such a request will be accepted not earlier than 60 days before the election for which the ballot is being requested. The voter will be mailed a special write-in absentee ballot, which must be completed and returned to the county clerk before the polls close on election day.

Those eligible include California residents serving in the Armed Forces, the Merchant Marine, and U.S. citizens temporarily residing outside the United States, plus their voting family members.

Connecticut

Connecticut residents in the Armed Forces can request a general election write-in absentee ballot by writing to their town clerk for the prescribed form. On the written request, the applicant should state that "because of military contingencies, the regular application procedures for an absentee ballot cannot be followed."

Application for this write-in ballot may not be made earlier than 90 days before the general election. The special ballot will contain only the following offices: presidental electors and members of Congress. Voted ballots should be returned to the voter's county clerk.

This procedure applies to Connecticut residents in the Armed Forces and their family members residing with or accompanying them who, because of military commitments, cannot follow the regular application procedures.

Maine

Maine's special write-in ballot for servicemembers will be similar to regular ballots, except that no candidate's name will appear on it. Instead, it will list all offices to be selected, showing a space after each for the voters to write in a candidate's name.

Maine law defines "Armed Forces Members" as persons on active duty or in the Merchant Marine, government civilian employees serving outside the Unites States, and members of

Part of the training had soldiers taking aim at a tank with an M72A2 LAW after the tank rolled over their foxhole.

Soldiers learn anti-tank warfare at Duke Range

By Connie Dickey
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The sky was heavy with threatening rain clouds as the five-man squad moved across the field from their safe haven in the trees. They moved cautiously in three-second intervals, doing everything 'by the book.'

The grenade explosion cracked the silence and the soldiers tumbled, swinging their M16s into their arms as they went into a shooting stance.

The already dark day became darker as smoke from dropped grenades and smoke bombs billowed gray clouds from the ground up. With three men continuing to fire, two soldiers crept behind logs and pulled out their LAWs. Shooting with deadly accuracy, the soldiers each claimed a hit on the tank.

Even though the soldiers demonstrated how an armor-killer team would destroy a tank, it was just another day on Duke Range.

"The demonstration is just to show the soldiers what an anti-armor team looks like and what they do. It also gives the soldier an idea of the effects of a live LAW," SFC Norman Guiont, NCOIC of the range, explained.

He also explained what the basic training soldiers learn while at Duke. "We teach the soldiers how to destroy any armor or bunkers with the M72A2 LAW. Also, they are taught to slow tanks down by obstacles, C4 and flame/smoke items." In addition to these classes, the soldiers are given a familiarization class on the DRAGON.

To build confidence in the soldiers, they are 'treated' to a little extra, letting a tank roll over them while they are in a foxhole. The soldiers came out of the foxholes dustier, but no worse for wear. In fact, most of the soldiers said they enjoyed the experience.

Visiting Duke Range this week was Charlie Company, 3rd Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade. During the morning, the soldiers were given classes on the M72A2 LAW and broken down for some hands-on training, before being given the chance to shoot three M72A2 sub-caliber devices at stationary targets. After that they were taught how to identify threat and friendly vehicles.

For the past two weeks, the instruction at the range has been done by soldiers from C Company, 70th Division, Training Command, from Indiana. "We have 12 Reservists with us now, but usually we have nine range instructors," Guiont explained.

After lunch, the soldiers are broken down into three groups and sent to their last bit of training. At one station the soldiers are instructed on the makings of an Eagle fireball, Eagle cocktail and a Molotov cocktail, using field expedient methods. The 'highlight' of the afternoon came there, when the soldiers crouched in foxholes and a tank rolled over, then the soldiers popped up, engaging the LAW and shot at the back of the tank.

The moving target area had soldiers once again firing the M72A2 sub-caliber device, this time at a moving target. From there the soldiers went to their last station, the DRAGON.

"We are very careful here," Guiont said, "safety is our number one priority. The drills are very cooperative and helpful with this." Duke Range won a post safety award in July. "In the two years I've been here, there has only been one accident here," Guiont said. "One of the sub-caliber devices misfired twice and after going through the misfire procedures, a range NCO tried to disarm the rocket when it went off and injured him."

New computer van aids 197th management center

By Debbie J. Mundy
197th Public Affairs Office

The 197th Infantry Brigade (Mechanized) (Separate) has taken another step in remaining "Forever Forward".

That step forward consisted of obtaining the DAS-3 (Decentralized Automated Service Support System), a computerized van on wheels.

The brigade's data center, part of the BMMC (Brigade Material Management Center), received the DAS-3 recently. CW2 Ronald L. Russell, DAS-3 functional coordinator said, "The addition makes us more self-sufficient and mobile. Before, we had to shutdown after a certain hour to make deadline for the computer system AMO (Automated Managers Office) on main post. Now we don't have to depend on them. It makes us more flexible. We can take this computerized van to the field and perform the same functions with it. It puts us further ahead.

"The DAS-3, which comes with a price tab of approximately $500,000, is capable of handling may different programs. It can handle maintenance reporting, management, packed supplies, spare parts supplies, durable supplies, repair parts, inexpendable supplies, standard project book systems, and tactical unit financial management information systems functions," said Russell.

A program can take as long as eight hours to process or as little as 30 minutes.

"This computer system has been put out across the board Army wide," stated Russell. The Army started distributing them back in 1982. It will take them until 1986 to complete the distribution. Soldiers trained on this system will be able to go anywhere in the Army and work on the same system. It's excellent computer training for the soldier."

Russell became the liaison between the program users and the computer operators. He must interpret the problems of the program users for the computer operators so they can correct them.

"I enjoy the challenge of the DAS-3 system and making it work for the brigade. It puts more of an emphasis on 'Separate' as it lets us be more self-sufficient."

Application for Maine's special write-in ballot may be made by mailing a completed Federal Post Card Application to the home-town municipal clerk.

Washington

The state of Washington provides a special write-in absentee ballot for voters 90 days before each state primary and general election.

The ballot can be obtained by writing the county auditor (or the Department of Records and Elections for King County residents) with the following information:

- The voter's last Washington address and current mailing address.
- The qualifying facts as an absentee service voter or overseas elector.
- A statement that the voter will be residing, stationed or working outside the continental United States and will be unable to vote and return a regular absentee ballot by formal mail delivery within the period provided for regular absentee ballots.

A Federal Post Card Application may be used to obtain the ballot if the voter writes the above statement on the post card. The special ballot will list the offices but not the candidates names. The voter must write in the name. Voted ballots must be mailed to the county auditor.

Questions a voter might have on those provisions, or on any other aspect of absentee voting, may be directed to a voting assistance office or to any U.S. embassy or Consulate. If answers are unavailable at the local level, write to the director, Federal Voting Assistance Program, Office of the Secretary of Defense, Room 1B457, Pentagon, Washington, D.C. 20310, or call Autovon 224-4928 or 4960, or commercial, (202) 694-4928 or 4960.

Two 3rd Battalion (Mechanized) 7th Infantry "Cottonbalers" really get close to get a better idea of the terrain features on maps during the unit's Common Skill Testing held last week.

197th 'Cottonbalers' sharpen skills during ongoing education program

Many officers, NCOs and enlisted soldiers are finding much of their continuing, professional training within their units.

At the 3rd Battalion (Mechanized), 7th Infantry, of the 197th Infantry Brigade, there is an ongoing educational system for soldiers. Whether it be "hands-on", SQT familiarization, NCO professional development or officer classes on doctrinal changes, the "Cottonbalers" consider the educational advancement of all of its personnel.

The most recent round of professional instruction for "Cottonbaler" NCOs and officers was held Aug. 13, with instruction coming from newly assigned battalion commander Lt. Col. Richard T. Rhoades.

Rhoades, realizing the vast opportunities from professional development classes at all ranks, kicked off his tenure of command with a class on leadership and goals of the command. He highlighted the need for career counseling and management at all levels. He pointed out that lieutenants must understand the Enlisted Professional Management System (EPMS) as well as their soldiers.

Rhoades went on to address the need to establish goals within the command.

"We must have soldiers physically and mentally prepared to go to war. To do this, you must be technically and tactically proficient in your assigned jobs," emphasized Rhoades.

In keeping with the theme of leadership and development, Rhoades challenged young officers to "charge the NCO to know his job. He has on-the-ground experience, but he must go back to the books to hone his skills."

Rhoades also went on to describe that the officer/NCO relationship is one of team work. "The NCOs are your coaches on the field. They not only give orders on your behalf, but also coach in concert with those orders," said Rhoades. "In an operation, the squad leader may order his first team to a given point, but while that fire team is moving, he is coaching their movement."

In his approach to leadership, Rhoades told his class that, "Your soldiers expect you to know their jobs. You must know the employment of every weapon at your level. You must know the proper maintenance of all assigned equipment. The soldiers will perform their task when you demonstrate you know yours."

> "We must have soldiers physically and mentally prepared to go to war."

Rhoades went on to discuss with his officers the necessity of demanding the full potential from themselves and their soldiers.

He told them, "You must be prepared fully for what you set out to do. Don't waste soldiers' time by being ill prepared. Good leaders are good planners."

The professional development class concluded with a review of forthcoming training missions for the battalion. Rhoades had previously given a NCO development class along the same theme to the battalion's NCOs.

Soldiers urged to leave VEAP alone

Soldiers participating in the Veterans Educational Assistance Program are encouraged by Army officials not to withdraw funds in order to guarantee and gain the program's full benefit.

Although soldiers may withdraw money from their accounts to open an interest-bearing savings fund and later reestablish a VEAP account, Army personnel officials do not recommend it.

To withdraw from the VEAP, a soldier must cancel the monthly educational savings deduction and apply for a refund from the Veteran's Administration, which administers the VEAP accounts.

Servicemembers may re-establish VEAP accounts with a $300 lump-sum deposit or a $25 monthly allotment for a minimum of 12 months any time prior to separation. Personnel officials recommend reopening the account at least 60 days prior to separation for administrative reasons.

VEAP members with a high school diploma, a score of at least 50 points on the Armed Forces Qualification Test, and enlistment in a designated military occupational specialty are eligible for the Army College fund. Members receive extra benefits — known as kickers — with maximum amounts reaching $15,200 for a two-year enlistment ($7,200 plus $8,000 kicker) and $20,100 for a three-or-more-year enlistment ($8,000 VEAP plus $12,000 kicker).

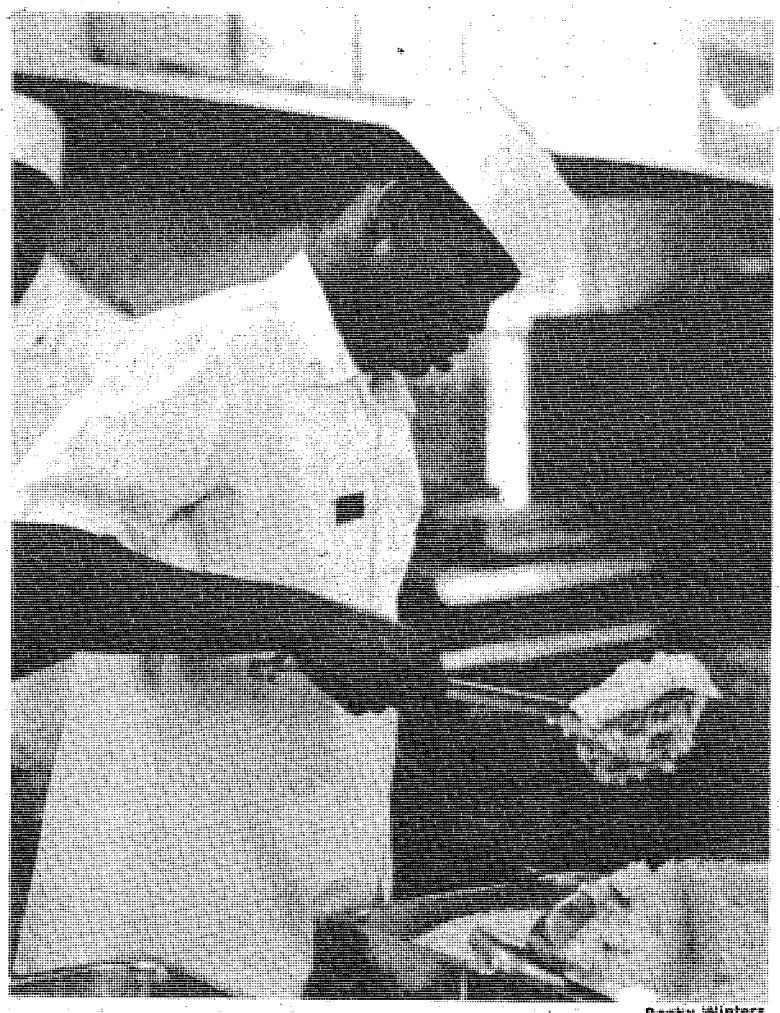
D-4-2 dining facility earns another quarterly honor



Becky Winters

Pvt. 2 Anthony Goodwin prepares food for the mess hall's serving line.

By Becky Winters
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Excellence is the norm rather than the exception for dining facility personnel of Company D, 4th Battalion, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade. The facility was awarded its fourth best small dining facility of the quarter award Tuesday by Post Commander Maj. Gen. John Foss.

They had previously won the quarterly award three times in 1983 and were chosen as the best small dining facility on post that same year.

Sergeant First Class Alvah Arrington, dining facility manager, said that there is a lot of emphasis placed on doing things right.

"We try to follow the regulations all the time and 99 percent of the time we don't take shortcuts," he said. "In rare instances we might have to take a shortcut to accomplish our mission, but that is the exception."

All personnel were trained by the Army and are skilled in all facets of dining facility operations. They were judged on food preparation, overall sanitation and administration.

"These are things that we do daily," said SFC Arrington, "which is why we have to maintain high standards. We even go into the light fixtures and clean at least once a week."Such attention to detail is what makes this dining facility stand out from others on post.

The facility has five military personnel and two civilians and the work is divided into two shifts each day.

Army personnel work 10 to 12 hours a day and meals are served at different times each day, depending on the training schedule of the troops.

"We feed 230 soldiers three meals a day, seven days a week," said Arrington.

Arrington is hesitant to claim any credit for himself. "The personnel set high standards for themselves and are highly motivated to succeed," he said.

Food service personnel in D-4-2 agree that motivation is the key to their continued high standards of performance.

"Our manager (SFC Arrington) makes us want to do better than anybody else," said Specialist Four Frank Scriven. "We put in a lot of long hours and we try to be the best mess every quarter.

Chris Farrar, one of two civilian food service personnel at D-4-2 agreed. "It is good leadership that makes this dining hall so good," he said. "Sergeant Arrington cares about his people here, and he takes care of them."

Private Anthony Goodwin said, "I think we keep winning because we work hard. Winners always work hard, but we're just doing our job."

Specialist Four Revenue Brown said it is hard work and concentration that makes C-4-2 succeed. "That and a good sergeant behind you pushing," he said.

The dining facility was judged by Post Food Service who sent a team unannounced to inspect the facility. "Since there was no advance warning, the judges knew that what they were seeing was the normal standard of operations in our dining facility," explained Arrington.

Old stories don't reflect 'real' OCS training

School's purpose is to prepare Army leaders

By Bill Reynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

"Ninety-day wonders" they were called during World War II.

Officer Candidate School graduates were churned out of the course at a rapid rate, to fill desperate shortages of officers during that time.

From the dark days of WW II have come stories — some fact — some fiction:

— Tales of late-night study aided by a flashlight under a blanket.

— Horror stories of ever-present tactical officers who could read minds and who enjoyed putting their charges through pain and humiliation.

— Stories of spit-shined floors destroyed by the metal taps of the boots of their TACs.

— Tales of soldiers required to eat "square meals" who almost starved to death before getting the hang of eating at attention.

— Stories of lieutenants old enough to command companies in combat but too young to buy a drink at a bar.

According to Capt. Timothy Fox, commander, 50th company, 5th Battalion (OCS), The School Brigade, those stories do not reflect what happens in OCS today. He said the purpose of the school is to prepare leaders for the Army.

"We're going to give the candidate the tools and assist the candidate in utilizing the tools that are necessary for the him to become a leader," said Fox, as he explained the philosophy of the OCS battalion. "We focus on general areas, in some cases, and let the officer's basic course fine-tune the technical skills."

Fox said everything in the course, from in-processing to graduation, is designed to produce these leaders.

"Officer candidates show up anywhere from five days to a week before their actual starting date of the class." said Fox.

He said these candidates are met by hand-picked graduates of the course called "Mini-Tacs." These officers have just completed the previous course and assist the new candidates in in-processing and being prepared for the 14-week course.

Fox explained the recent graduates also assist the candidate in making the transition from their previous assignments. "They transition them from what they are used to into the OCS train of thought," Fox said. Some of the candidates have a difficult time according to Fox, because of their military experience or lack of it.

"Many of the candidates come from Fort Dix, N.J." said Fox. These are soldiers fresh from basic training. He explained these soldiers are normally divided into two groups.

"One is a college option," explained Fox. "The soldier has a college degree and has gone to a recruiter and said 'I want to be an officer.'

"The recruiter sends the soldier to basic and upon the completion of basic training is sent to OCS." Fox cautions that while the enlistment contract guarantees attendance to OCS it does not guarantee gold bars.

The other type of soldier, according to Fox, is a prior-service soldier. "The second type of person we get from Fort Dix has been in the military before. This person has decided, after getting out and getting a degree, they would like to come back and be an officer. These soldiers are offered the same opportunity.

"You have two different experience levels." Fox said. "You have the soldier who has some military background versus the soldier who has none. Those people (non-prior service) have the toughest transition to make."

According to Fox, the reason it is difficult for some new candidates is they must make the mental transition from college campus to drill field without the benefit of military experience.

Fox claimed the mini-tacs perform almost as "big brothers" in helping the new candidate get prepared for their course — and the real tactical officers.

The tactical officer, according to Fox, is all-important to the candidate. The tactical officer teaches approximately two-thirds of the 900-hour course.

During the 14-week course, Fox said the candidate goes through three distinct phases. These phases are reflected in the candidates appearance, manner and uniform.

The basic phase lasts seven weeks in the program. Some of the candidates may think it lasts longer.

Fox said the primary mission of the tactical officers is to instill in the candidate a sense of self-discipline. "It may seem odd," said Fox, "I'm not talking about discipline as people normally see it.

"We're talking about the discipline within themselves to accomplish tasks to a certain standard."

The first three weeks of the basic phase are spent on team building as well as self-discipline.

The curriculum teaches the candidate common subjects such as drill and ceremonies, first aid or physical training. The basic phase is capped by an inspection by the battalion commander. Those candidates who have performed up to standards and pass the commander's inspection get to wear a black felt tab under their OCS brass. This felt strip signifies that the candidate is now "somebody."

"From that point forward," Fox added, "We have told them they have, as a group, completed their basic phase. They have now reached out and are grabbing for more responsibility. There are benefits attached with making intermediate phase candidate, not the least of which is the privilege of having ice cream with meals."

Fox killed another OCS myth when he said that square meals were out and had been done away with years ago. Instead, he said his tactical officers had developed, during meal times, a technique to ensure the candidate's attention during classes. Each candidate, after eating, must dispose of the empty plates and tray before returning to class. In order to do this, the candidate must pass between the tables of the tactical officers where they are questioned concerning previous training.

"Tray Line Ridge" disappears after the candidates reach Senior status three weeks before commissioning. By this time, according to Fox, the candidates are virtually running the company. They have developed those leadership skills and the self-discipline necessary for them to be leaders in the Army.

Fox, who received his commission from the Army ROTC program, feels the OCS program is "Probably the best commissioning source in the U.S. Army — Bar none!"

Programs help allied officers adjust to life in United States

By Connie Dickey
USAIC Public Affairs Office

"Culture shock is a very real thing. I came here from Germany in 1957 and I still remember how it was. I sympathize with these students and I think that's one reason why I like working here," Charlotte Osterbourg, programs officer at the Allied Student Training Division, said.

"When the new officers get here within that day I memorize who they are so I can call them by name without them being in uniform. They like that. Thank goodness I have a good memory."

The Allied Student Training Division (ASTD) plays host to 175 allied advance course students a year. Each student is here about seven months. The ASTD uses different programs to help them adjust to life in the United States.

One of the division's most important programs is the sponsorship program. An allied student has two military sponsors as well as a civilian sponsor. "When the allied students get to class, the military sponsors have already been selected. They help the student with their studies and socially. If the allied officer is married but unaccompanied, he is given one bachelor sponsor and one married sponsor.

"These sponsors are selected based on experience, whether they know the language or have spent time in that particular country. They are first lieutenants and captains, but the allied officers are second lieutenants through colonels," Mrs. Osterbourg explained.

Civilian sponsors are important too. When the allied officers arrive they are given a welcoming coffee at the Officer's Club. The civilians that come out to get acquainted with the allied students select who they want to sponsor. Many of these sponsors have been in this program for 20 years.

Mrs. Osterbourg explained that the civilian sponsors invite the allied student to their home, have picnics, take them to sports events, to the theater or to Calloway Gardens. She said many times the allied students return the favor by hosting the sponsors when they visit their home country.

Since allied families do not live on post, Mrs. Osterbourg explained that they live close together and the division has several functions set up for the family. "We have a welcoming coffee, a farewell reception, a New Year's Reception, picnics to Callaway Gardens and a dinner on the Jubilee. The ladies are also made honorary members of the OWC and attend their functions." There are also special activities set up for the allied student's children, such as a Halloween party, a Christmas party and an Easter Egg hunt.

Columbus helps make the allied students' stay here pleasant by making them honorary citizens, inviting them to the Shrine Circus, the Springer Theater and to a rodeo.

The course includes three trips. There is a trip scheduled to Atlanta, Florida and Washington which includes government, industry and historical tours. Some of the distinctive side tours are to Six Flags, GMC, the Delta Plant, St. Augustine, Kennedy Space Center, Disney World, Epcot, the Pentagon and the Smithsonian Institute. The families accompany the allied students on all the trips except to Washington.

"We always hear from the students once they go back to their homeland, especially around Christmas. I hear from students as far back as nine years ago. Then too, sometimes the students return for other courses, so they are back in the fold."

Weather team is valuable resource to 197th

By Paula L. Dempe
197th Public Affairs Office

Heavy thunderclouds built up ominously in the distance, swept along by winds estimated at more than 35 knots

Accompanying the massive stormfront is a whirling maelstrom of hail. However, there are no storm related injuries within the 197th Infantry Brigade.

An Air Force weather team had successfully predicted the front well in advance, leaving units plenty of time to adjust their training schedules accordingly.

"Our mission is to support the 197th Infantry Brigade with weather forecasts, both in garrison and in the field," said 2nd Lt. Michael Adams, the officer in charge of the Brigade's element of the Air Force weather team, all members of Detachment 10, 5th Weather Squadron.

"When we're in garrison, we supply daily forecasts based on the information we receive from Lawson Army Airfield. However, during field exercises, we're obligated to give four forecasts per day, based on information we gather ourselves. In the field we forecast things like wind speed and direction, temperature and barometer readings, as well as a variety of other conditions.

"This is very important for the NBC (nuclear, biological, chemical) team when they set up their decontamination point, and for the brigade's aviation section when planning flight schedules," Adams explained.

The brigade weather team is made up of four men. Sergeant Ed Coggins and Airman 1st Class William Martin are the observers. The qualified forecasters are Lt. Adams and TSgt. Egidio Ferrucci.

In garrison, the weather team concentrates mainly on training. All information used in their daily forecasts comes from the base unit located at Lawson Army Airfield.

"While here in garrison, we work mainly from 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.," Adams remarked. "Our base unit at Lawson doesn't forecast 24 hours a day in garrison. Our weather support just isn't as critical to the brigade as when we're in the field."

In a field environment, the weather can be critical to the outcome of a battle. Heavy ground fogs and dark overcast nights work to conceal both friendly and enemy troops. The unit that walks unprepared and unsuspecting into the fog can easily find itself out-maneuvered on the battlefield.

"We supply units in the field with information that is mission imperative," Adams said. "If taken into account, the units can use this information to change the battle."

California reserve unit concludes annual training at Fort Benning

By Peggy Zachary
91st Division PAO

Members of the 1st Brigade, 91st Division (OSUT), a reserve unit from California is finishing up their two-weeks of annual training here.

Of the brigade's five battalions, four are currently satellited with the 1st Infantry Training Brigade on Sand Hill. The other battalion is conducting their AT at Fort Carson, Colo.

In the event of mobilization, the 91st Division would activate at Fort Ord, Calif. Their mission would consist of operating a complete Infantry training center.

Annual training affords the reservists the opportunity to perform some of those duties they would be required upon activation.

For some, this excursion provided a first-time look at an active duty Army operation, while others have called the Army their surrogate family before.

For drill sergeants, along with everyday discipline, general guidance and encouragement, training included hand-to-hand combat, weapons maintenance, the confidence and obstacle courses, drill and ceremony and physical training.

Support personnel, to include clerks, supply and transportation specialists and cooks also had the chance to brush up on their skills.

Working with their counterparts or in the brigade headquarters, soldiers got a chance to test the skills they practice throughout the year during drill weekends.

For the first time, 11C (mortar) training was offered to some members of the brigade. Twenty-seven members joined in with those new soldiers currently learning their MOS.

Today, advance party members will begin the journey back to California with the main body returning tomorrow.

Reflections

Gates of repentance always open

By Chaplain Dennis Beck-Berman

Teshuvah - Repentance

As it is never too soon to be good,
So it is never too late to amend:
I will, therefore,
Neither neglect the time present,
Nor despair the time past.
If I had been sooner good,
I might perhaps have been better;
If I am longer bad,
I shall, I am sure, be worse.

Arthur Warwick

In the Hebrew Bible the word for "repentance" is teshuvah, which actually means "return," a return to our innermost nature, our truest self. An ancient sage suggested: "Repent one day before your death!" But who knows the time of death? "Even so," he replied, "repent each and every day." How many of us can live up to this ideal? Therefore the Bible ordained a ten day period beginning with the New Year (Rosh Hashanah) and ending with the Day of Atonement (Yom Kippur) for prayer, introspection, penitence, acts of charity and resolutions for improvements. The ram's horn (shofar) is blown to warn us to lead a more conscious life, to turn from evil and do good. The fast on the Day of Atonement induces a heightened state of spiritual awareness, in which we honestly examine our deeds, admit our failings, sincerely vow to cease our wrong doings, make restitution for our crimes, and seek forgiveness from the persons we have wronged. The true test of repentance is whether we do not commit the same sin again when faced with similar temptations.

According to Jewish tradition, during the Ten Days of Repentance our destiny for the coming year is inscribed in the Book of Life. Indeed, day by day we write our own destiny, for inexorably we become what we do. On one level, we are the sum total of our actions. Character cannot be counterfeited. Like the markings ingrained in the heart of the tree, character needs time and nurture for growth and development. However, the Gates of Repentance are always open and change is possible. Life is a bit like a game of chess, in which there are an infinite number of complex moves possible. The choice is open, but the move contains within itself all future moves. We are free to choose, but we are always bound by the consequences of our actions.

We can choose to write ourselves into the Book of Life. But this means ceasing to smoke, overeat, take drugs, drive after drinking—ceasing to do all the things that don't enhance our health and well-being, bring joy, harmony and love into our lives.

No matter what the price of repenting, it is never so high as the price of not repenting.

The Noble flag rests in its new place of honor at the museum.

Family donates WW II flag to National Infantry Museum

Many who fought during World War II have memories of events that happened and one who remembered was Roland V. Noble.

Noble's family donated the following memoir which is on display at the National Infantry Museum here.

This World War II story was related by Roland V. Noble In November 1982.

Noble had soldiered in various capacities for General George Smith Patton, Jr. during World War II. After seeing the movie "Patton", Noble talked about some of his experiences with Patton, concluding with the following story:

"I was a Sergeant Armorer Artificer in Company K, 260th Infantry, 65th Infantry Division in Linz, Austria, having reached that city during the day of 5 May 1945.

"Soon afterward, the German troops in that area surrendered unconditionally. A bunch of the boys of Company K decided to put up an American Flag to celebrate, but there was none to be found. They decided to make a flag themselves. They used Austrian Flags for the white material (stripes and stars), Nazi Flags for the red stripes, and finding no blue material, they dyed some of the white.

"They soon found that it was too much for them. Locating a nearby tailor they convinced him to make the flag, right away! They stayed and watched--and advised--as the tailor worked.

"When it was completed they hung the flag from a second-story window of the building being used to billet their platoon.

"Not long afterwards, General Patton came roaring through town, saw the flag, stopped, came up to the building, saluted the flag, and then in his usual way asked, 'Where in hell did you get that flag?' When they told him they had made it, he said, 'Boys, as far as I know, your flag is the first American Flag to be flown at the official end of hostilities.' He saluted the flag again and left."

Winnie Smullen, Noble's sister, wrote in a letter to the museum the following: "Many people had suggested to us that we should keep the flag for the family, but we felt that it was an Infantry Flag and that it should come back to the Infantry, particularly to Fort Benning where General Patton served. My brother and the men who fought with him loved Gen. Patton."

Leadership program

The Georgia Vietnam Veterans Leadership Program, in cooperation with the Columbus Small Business Development Center, will present free Small Business loan seminars to Vietnam Veterans at the Elizabeth Bradley Turner Center for Continuing Education building at Columbus College, from 7 to 9:30 p.m., Sept. 25-27.

The free workshops are for Vietnam Veterans who served more than 180 days in military service during the period from Aug. 5, 1964 to May 7, 1975. The seminars will assist Vietnam Veterans in applying for $25 million that Congress set aside for direct SBA loans.

Active duty and retirees who are interested in starting or recapitalizing a small business are encouraged to attend. If additional information is desired, contact Ron Miller at (404) 998-7200 or Mr. Rothschild at 571-7433.

Fitness programs

The Continuing Education Division of Columbus College offers a variety of exercise and fitness courses beginning next week. Some of the classes are beginning aerobic fitness, intermediate/advanced aerobics, Christian aerobics, coed aerobics, teen aerobics, all that jazz, slimnastics, swimnastics, an exercise program for pregnant women, tap and ballet for children, modern dance, tap dancing, males only dance school and mom and baby exercise. Fees range from $25 to $55. For more information, call 568-2023.

New chapter

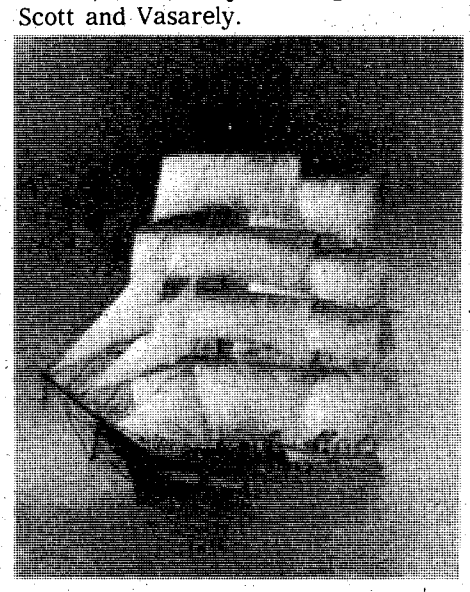
Nam Vets of Georgia Inc., has a new chapter in this area. Membership is open to all Vietnam era veterans who served in the military from Jan. 1, 1962 to Dec. 31, 1975. This time period is offered so that those who were in prior to the outbreak of war in Asia will be covered under the chapter's by-laws. Any veteran may attend the meetings. For more information, call (404) 628-4027.

Outpatient pharmacy

The Outpatient Pharmacy hours are as follows: Monday thru Friday-8 a.m. to 6 p.m; Saturday-9 a.m. to 6 p.m, and Sundays and holidays-9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 6 p.m.

Art auction

The OWC is sponsoring an art exhibition and auction Sept. 28 at the Officers' Club Ballroom. A preview will begin at 6 p.m. and the auction will begin at 7:30 p.m. The exhibition will feature works from Chagall, Miro, Dali, Rockwell, Calder, Hinte, Kelly, Boulanger, Wooster Scott and Vasarely.



Running medals

The deadline to pick up remaining medals and t-shirts from the OWC Festival of Running is Sept. 30 at the OWC Activities Building, Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Veterans information

The Retirement Services Office will have a State VA Service Officer available to assist servicemembers about to be discharged or retired as well as retirees and other veterans. This service will be provided from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on the third Wednesday of each month.

For appointments or further information, call 545-5369/2312 or drop by the Retirement Services Office in building 83, room 139. General VA information and assistance is provided during regular duty hours by the Retirement Services Officer.

Charm school

The Officers' Wives Club is sponsoring a six-week personal development class called "Positively You," which will teach etiquette, fashion, color-coding, makeup application and visual poise. Cost of the course is $85, which includes a $25 registration fee (installment payment plan available). Students should be age 11 and older. For more information call 687-5970.

Scholarship

Troy State University is offering the Lloyd Dean Hightower Scholarship which can only be used at the Troy State Fort Benning Branch. The scholarship is named in honor of SFC Lloyd Dean Hightower who died in May 1983 and who received a Bachelor's degree from Troy State posthumously.

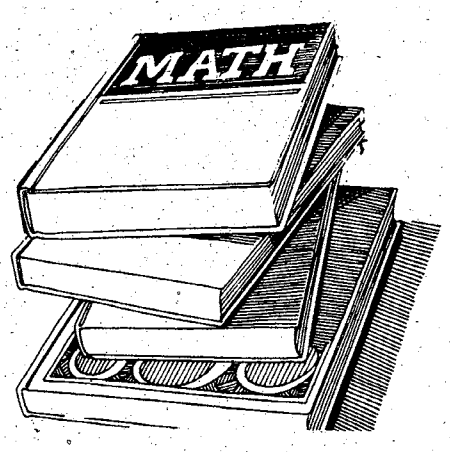
The scholarship provides tuition for one academic year and can begin with any academic quarter. Those applying for the scholarship must be a high school graduate or have a GED, be enrolled in TSU and not academically dismissed from any other undergraduate program. They must also be a dependent of or a retired NCO (E5-E9) and live within a 50-mile radius of Fort Benning.

Applicants are required to write a letter to the Sergeants Major Association formally requesting consideration for the scholarship, including highlights of the applicant's academic career and extracurricular activities. The letter should also include an explanation by the applicant as to why he/she should be selected to receive the scholarship.

The following should accompany the letter: a copy of high school transcripts (college transcript if currently enrolled), three letters of recommendation with one from a high school prinicipal or high school guidance counsellor, if practical, and a statement of employment indicating applicant's employer, address and job title.

Selection for the scholarship will not be dependent upon economic need alone. Each applicant will be judged on citizenship, high school (college) grades, individual skills, and school and community activities. There will be no discrimination on the basis of sex, race, national origin, handicap or marital status.

Applications must be submitted to Jim Gallagher, CATD, USAIS, room 347, Infantry Hall, Fort Benning, Ga., no later than Nov. 1. For more information, call him at 545-7162.



College registration

Registration for the fall quarter at TSU/Fort Benning is now underway and will continue through Sept. 26. Classes begin Sept. 26 and end Dec. 10. Admission forms may be picked up in building 35, room 300-C or the nearest Army Education Center.

Students may pay for their courses on the deferred payment plan and elegible military personnel and veterans can register without making a down payment. No out of state fees are assessed and undergraduate cost is $24 per quarter hour. Classes are held in buildings 4, 35 and Kelley Hill.

Red Cross

The Red Cross volunteer basic orientation course will be Tuesday from 8:30 a.m. until 12:30 p.m. at the Infantry Center Chapel Annex, building 101 on Lauber Street. For more information, call 545-5194 during normal duty hours.

Truck unit combines training with fun; 533rd rolls through common skills

By Bill Reynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The sounds of PT were still echoing in the air last Friday when soldiers of the 533rd Transportation Company lined up their trucks for a different type of convoy.

On normal days, the 533rd provides transportation support to Fort Benning carrying ammunition and other supplies in their 22-wheelers. Friday, according to the platoon leader of the first platoon, 2nd Lt. Dean F. Gemberling, the idea was to have fun — and conduct training at the same time.

The way truckers have fun is to spend the day without having to haul their huge M872 trailors cross-country. The truckers were participating in the Second Annual Military Stakes. The military stakes is a 10-event competition that requires the soldiers to use all of their common-task skills such as land navigation, communications, weapons and maintenance in order to determine the winner.

The fun part of the competition started when the two-soldier teams plotted the locations of the testing stations on their map sheets. The teams were graded on their ability to determine grid locations to the nearest 10 meters. After the locations were plotted, the soldiers then had to drive to those locations for each station of the competition. The soldiers could not rely on the road system to help determine locations, because according to Gemberling, the map and road data was not up to date. The idea, Gemberling stated, was to sharpen the soldiers' skills in navigating while in a moving vehicle.

Once the soldiers had their map plots graded they mounted their commercially-designed five-ton tractors and eased out of their motor pool. The large trucks looked peculiar creeping along — until you noticed the sign giving the motor pool speed of 5 mph.

Once out of the motor pool the pace picked up. The drivers roared down the road, always keeping in mind that the tachometer chart behind the speedometer was recording their trips. The tach chart records time of operation, revolutions-per-minute, gear changes and speed. This way the motor sergeant could keep track of the operation on every vehicle and the way it was operated.

Gemberling stated that the tach chart was used as part of the grading system in the competition.

The competitors had to navigate to eight locations on the reservation — some of them on back roads requiring the soldiers to use all of their skills to manuever the enormous trucks into small spaces.

The last part of the competition was held at the motor pool of the 533rd. Three trucks were lined up with identifiable deficiencies and the soldier had to find the errors.

When the competition was over and score sheets checked, the team of Sp5 Anthony Cooper and Sp4 John Delcamp were the unchallenged winners. Cooper and Delcamp had racked up a score of 543 points out of a possible 545.

Trainers employ unique concept to teach IOBC students

By Connie Dickey
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Infantry Officer's Basic Course (IOBC) students have an advantage that some students don't. Their instructors, called trainers, stay with them and take care of more than 70 percent of their training.

The 2nd Training Battalion, The School Brigade, employs the unique platoon trainers concept in teaching IOBC students. "We are the only battalion in the Army to use this concept and it has proven to be very effective," Capt. George Filbeck, battalion S-3 explained.

The platoon trainers concept is based on the concept used by the Israeli Army and has been used at Fort Benning since 1977, according to Filbeck. He explained that the concept required that the trainers be with the students almost constantly.

"There is a captain, an E-7 and an E-6 assigned to each platoon, about 40 students. They take care of about 70 percent of the training and all the field training from day one," he said.

Lt. Col. John J. Ellis, battalion commander, feels it is the smartest way to train. "The trainers have ownership and responsibility for the final product, the lieutenants. They can follow the progress of the students from day one all the way through the course," he said. He mentioned that other service schools are trying out the concept also, although the aviation school is the only other school in the Army to use the platoon trainers concept.

The captain becomes a role model for the students by acting as commander and executive officer. The E-7 acts as a platoon sergeant and the E-6 as a squad leader. Their role playing is in addition to their instructing, assisting in other training or reinforcement training.

"It's not bad because I'm prior service and I knew a little about what to expect, but the role models we see, the captain and the NCOs, let us see both sides of the fence. We get to experience what it's like to receive orders from them and what we're supposed to expect from them," 2nd Lt. Michael Martin said.

"Also, we're put in different leadership positions and are taught what is expected from us."

Most of the captains have had command time and all are graduates of the Infantry Officers Advanced Course. "Most of us have fresh in our minds what is expected from a new lieutenant. I really think it is the best kind of training because we are 'trainers,' more than instructors. We're with the students basically every step of the way."

The captains and the NCOs are personally interviewed and selected by the 2nd Training Battalion commander based on experience. "The concept works because it is a team effort between the captain, the platoon trainer, and his NCOs. Also, since the captains do small unit tactics more, see it everyday and practice it, I would have to say these are some of the best trained and smartest captains on post," Ellis said.

Post schools begin flouride program

Dental caries (tooth decay) ranks among the most prevalent diseases in our society today. Tooth decay begins in early childhood and can continue throughout adulthood. Few individuals escape the destructive effects of this disease which is the leading cause of tooth loss before the age of 35.

Research has shown topically applied fluoride makes teeth less susceptible to decay. Starting this fall, children at White, Wilbur, Loyd and McBride elementary schools will be participating in a weekly fluoride mouth rinsing program conducted in the classrooms. Once each week throughout the school year, under supervision of the school nurse, the children will rinse their mouths for one minute with a dilute solution of sodium fluoride. This procedure is safeandis endorsed by the Public Health Service and the American Dental Association.

The fluoride used in this program is not a substitute for any other fluorides, such as fluoride in the drinking water. The fluoride in the drinking water strengthens the child's teeth while they are forming. The fluoride rinse protects the teeth when they can be seen in the mouth. It can be most effective when used in addition to whatever other fluorides your child may be receiving and when used on teeth that are clean.

Fluoride treatments are not the total answer. Daily brushing and flossing to remove all the continuously forming st cky film called plaque is equally mportant. The American Dental Association urges parents to limit their child's frequency of intake of sugar-containing foods.

Only those children who received written permission will be allowed to participate. The program is entirely voluntary. if there are any questions, please contact Mrs. Wetherell, Community Health Dental Hygienist, DENTAC, 544-2051 or your child's school.

Don't leave children unattended

Provost marshal

A call comes in to the military police desk sergeant from the mother of a child who was hit by a motor vehicle. When the MPs arrived at the scene, they find that the child entered the roadway from his yard on a Hot Wheel and was hit by a motorcycle. The child is transported to Martin Army Community Hospital and treated for head and leg injuries.

A quarters down the street is on fire. The military police and fire department respond to the quarters only to find an eight-year-old child left unattended in the quarters. The child is transported to the hospital where he is treated for smoke inhalation.

A military police patrol is flagged down in the mall parking lot; the patrolmen are told that in row "G" there is a small unattended child locked in a vehicle and the car is running. The military police arrive to find a five-year-old child passed out. At the hospital, the child is treated for carbon monoxide inhalation.

The MP desk sergeant is notified that a dog has just attacked a small child. The military police arrive to find an unattended toddler wandered into a yard were a dog was chained. The child got too close and was bitten. The child is taken to the hospital and admitted for observation.

Sounds like an episode from Hill Street Blues? Unfortunately, these incidents are not excerpts from some Hollywood script — they have actually occurred right here on Fort Benning. Equally unfortunate is the fact that all could have easily been prevented.

It's amazing that the Army finds itself required to publish regulations dictating the care parents must exercise over their children, but this is exactly the case! USAIC Regulation 210-5, Garrison Regulations, specifically provides that no child under 12 years of age will be left unattended in government quarters or elsewhere on the reservation.

However, the military police routinely [illegible] calls about unattended [illegible]

the quarters or allow him to remain by himself. Stay with young children playing in the vicinity of roadways.

With regard to leaving children in vehicles, the regulation provides that no child under the age of eight will be left unattended. If you think you will save yourself time by leaving a child in a vehicle, you're wrong! You'll probably find yourself down at the MP station explaining why you left your child unattended — or at the hospital hoping that your child recovers from any injuries received.

Remember, your children's safety is in your hands. Don't leave them unattended.

(Provost Marshal)

Silver Wings add five new members to team

Soldiers earn spots after completing course

By Bill Reynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning's Command Exhibition Parachute Team added five new members Friday after the completion of a week-long testing process.

The five soldiers, all of whom are cadre in either the 4th Airborne Training Battalion or the Ranger Department, are: 1st Sgt. Leon R. Sealy, 3rd Ranger Company; SSgts. Nick Caisse, Tower Branch; Joel D. Fluharty, Pathfinder Branch; Charles Hanson, Tower Branch; and Michael T. Peay, Ground Training Branch.

They earned their places on the team after participating in a week-long course, training to meet U.S. Parachute Association standards. This week the new members will be training on the "accelerated free-fall technique" necessary for them to be active members of the team.

The Silver Wings demonstrate precision parachuting techniques during ceremonies and at events on Fort Benning and the surrounding area. They put on performances, dropping from altitudes as high as 15,000 feet and guiding their Titan or Cloud parachutes to precision landings.

According to the team chief of the Silver Wings, SFC James Los, membership on the team does not get the soldier out of any of his assignments. All members of the team perform their regular jobs in addition to demonstrations.

According to Los, the majority of the training takes place after duty hours.

Last year the Silver Wings performed at 83 off-post functions in support of the Army's recruiting efforts. They jumped into football fields, parking lots and baseball diamonds.

Tomorrow, the team, minus the newest members, will be jumping into the football stadium in Knoxville, Tenn., for the Army/Tennessee game.

DOD, agencies now required to use ZIP+4

On July 1, the Department of Defense and its subordinate agencies were required to begin using the Postal Services Zip + 4 system.

A policy of returning mail that does not include the Zip + 4 only on the return address will be originated sometime before the end of this year. A similar policy will be effected on mail that does not include the Zip + 4 on the mailing address. It will be instituted sometime before Sept. 1986.

Zip + 4 is the regular five digit zip code with an additioal four digits that can be used to direct mail to specific areas in an organization.

Walt Blyler of the Military Postal Service Agency says Zip + 4 will have several advantages. "The Department of Defense is the biggest first class mailer in the country," he says. "Zip + 4 will not only take advantage of discounts offered by the United States Postal Service, but it will also help the Postal Service and the Department of Defense become more efficient."

Mail that is not presorted that uses Zip + 4 will save the government almost a penny on each piece of mail.

Ships may benefit most. Currently, many ships are assigned the same FPO number. With Zip + 4, each ship will keep its five digit zip code, but will have a unique four digit add on.

Personal mail is not required to have the Zip + 4, but Military Postal Service authorities strongly encourage its use.

Weekend

Springer Theater

The Springer Theater Company's 1984-85 season begins with "My Fair Lady." The play will be performed tomorrow and Sept. 25-29 at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

For more information and tickets, call the box office at 327-3688. Upcoming productions include "On Golden Pond," Oct. 25-Nov. 11; "The Teahouse of the August Moon," Feb. 7-16, 1985; "Chapter Two," March 28-April 6, 1985. Season memberships are $32.

Shopping trip

A local group has planned a one-day tour and shopping trip to New York City Sept. 29. The roundtrip fare from Atlanta to New York is $125. The trip is sponsored by the Columbus Chapter of the American Business Women's Association, a non-profit women's group. The New York trip is part of an effort to raise money for the group's scholarship fund.

A bus to Atlanta will be chartered if at least 43 people sign up for the trip. Otherwise, those making the trip will have to arrange their own transportation to Atlanta. The plane to New York City leaves Atlanta at 9:10 a.m. and will leave New York City to Atlanta at 7 p.m.

The group will spend about two and a half hours sightseeing and four hours shopping while in New York City. Anyone interested can call Barbara Collins after 5 p.m. at 561-5610.

Guest lecturer

Anita Giani Mason, associate publisher of Antique Monthly, will speak at the Columbus Antiques Show and Sale tomorrow at 2 p.m. The show and sale will be held at the Columbus Iron Works Convention and Trade Center.

Ms. Mason will present a 30-minute talk followed by a question and answer period. Her lecture, "Basics of Collecting—What to do and what not to do," stems from constant communications with antiques dealers and auctioneers across the country.

Antique show

Lovers of antiques, beautiful jewelry, silver, rugs, art and fine linens will find it hard to resist the Columbus Antiques Show and Sale to be held at the Columbus Iron Works Convention and Trade Center, 801 Front Avenue. The doors will open today and tomorrow at noon and close at 9 p.m. The show will open at noon and close at 5 p.m. Sunday.

Admission at the door will be $3. Advance tickets can be purchased for $2.50 from members of the Columbus Council of Garden Clubs or by contacting the Historic Columbus Foundation, 322-0756. The annual show and sale benefits the Historic Columbus Foundation.

Art auction

Original works by such artists as Salvador Dali and Eugene Delacroix will be featured at the Columbus College Alumni Association's annual art auction on Friday, Sept. 28, in the St. Thomas Episcopal Church Parrish Hall, 2500 Woodcrest Drive in Columbus.

The show includes oils, watercolors, graphics and sculpture by artists such as Dali, Delacroix, Alexander Calder, Al Kaufman, Irving Amen and Sandu Liberman. The proceeds from the annual art auction benefit alumni projects such as providing scholarships to the college, funding library acquistions and college instructional support.

The artwork can be previewed at 6:30 p.m., with the auction at 7:30 p.m. Donation is $3, and wine and hors d'oeuvres will be served.

For more information, call Geri Regnier, executive director of the Alumni Association, at 568-2280, or auction co-chairpersons Skip Barfield at 323-9905 and Peggy Batastini at 568-2053.

'Magic morning'

The Continuing Education Division of Columbus College offers "Magic Morning for Kids" Saturday, Sept. 29 from 9 a.m. to noon at the college's Elizabeth Bradley Turner Center. Local magician John Anderson will teach a variety of magic tricks. Participants should bring two quarters, paper, pencil and rubber bands. The fee is $10. For more information, call 568-2023.

Folk festival

For the fourth time since 1981, regional folk musicians, traditional artisans, and preparers of ethnic and "down-home" foods will gather at the Chatahoochee Promenade in the Columbus Historic District for the Columbus Museum's annual Chattahoochee Folk Festival, Sept. 29-30.

Beginning at 11 a.m. each day, the free event will feature three stages of continuous music lasting until 6:30 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday.

Those interested in participating in festival workshops should bring along their fiddles, guitars, banjos, dulcimers or harmonicas for some firsthand pointers from the experts.

Admission to all events is free. For more information, contact Fred Fussell, festival director, Columbus Museum of Arts and Sciences at 323-3617.

Use precaution when around asbestos

In an Aug. 24 Bayonet article the hazards of asbestos were explained. Fort Benning personnel can avoid asbestos contamination through use of protective equipment and proper personal hygiene.

When personnel are working around asbestos they can protect themselves by wearing protective overgarments, protective masks (with a fresh air supply), gloves, head covers and boot covers.

In addition to wearing protective equipment, the following rules should be followed at the work site:

- Employees should change from street to protective clothing in a clean area of the work site.
- No food or drink should be consumed on the "contaminated" work-site.
- All personnel should shower at the end of the work period to remove asbestos from their bodies.
- Protective clothing designed for re-use should be throughly laundered before being used again.

Any questions concerning asbestos protection should be directed to the Preventive Medicine Service at 545-1144/3518/2186.

The proper uniform is important in removing asbestos.

Many factors should be considered before getting an additional job

With the cost of living rising, more and more people are looking for second jobs. There's no question that it takes more money to live today. But if you're part of the Department of the Army team, there are a few things to keep in mind before taking another job. Regulations don't allow soldiers or DA civilian employees to work in outside jobs or other outside activity, with or without payment, that:

- Hinder or conflict with the performance of your Government job.
- May reasonably be expected to bring discredit upon the Government or the Department of the Army.
- Are not always in agreement with regulations, to include the requirements to avoid actions which reasonably can be expected to create a conflict or the appearance of conflicts of interest.

Off duty employment of soldiers by an organization taking part in a strike is legal if the person was on the payroll at the start of the strike. Once the strike begins, and while it is in progress, troops may not accept employment by that organization at the strike location.

Before taking that second job, check with your commanding officer or supervisor to make sure you're correctly following DA regulations. (TNS)

Credit cards not created equal

If you opened up your wallet and took a quick glance you would probably conclude that, except for their colors, all credit cards are pretty much alike.

But take a closer look. There is an important difference printed right on the front of the card — the name of the issuer. And that name can make a big difference in what the card can do for you.

If a card is from a particular department store or oil company, you receive credit only at that place of business. But, if the card if from a bank or travel and entertainment issuer, you often get credit in thousands of stores, restaurants and hotels around the world, as well as access to cash advances. However, many of these cards also offer more than just credit and cash — and the issuer you choose determines the additional benefits you receive.

"A lot of card issuers offer special bonuses called enhancements for their cardholders," said Michael Kessler, senior vice president, The First National Bank of Chicago. "Consumers should be aware of the extras offered by each issuer when choosing their cards."

The number and types of enhancements can vary from issuer to issuer. For example, some banks offer their Visa and Master Card customers discounts on merchandise, travel accident insurance at no cost, low-cost life insurance, investment opportunities and credit card registration.

"Enhancements are not the only factors to consider when you are choosing between cards."

But, a Visa or MasterCard from another bank may not offer the same bonuses.

Enhancements are not the only factors to consider when you are choosing between cards. Security and protection against fraud are among the other important differences between issuers. "Your card should not be easily counterfeited," advised Kessler. "Some banks use a hologram on their cards, a three-dimensional picture that's difficult to counterfeit."

In addition, you should be aware of the issuer's policy on lost or stolen cards. Some issuers will not charge you for any fraudulent use of your card. But many will hold you responsible for the first $50 of fraudulent charges.

"A person should be aware of all the differences among credit cards," added Kessler. "You should know about the enhancements offered, but you should not be blinded by a long list of bonuses of which you might not even take advantage. By being aware of these differences, you can make an intelligent decision." (HLB)

AAFES catalogs 'hot off the presses'

The 1985 AAFES catalog will soon be available at military exchanges worldwide.

AAFES officials said the books will be available overseas by late September, at which time stateside distribution will begin.

The 832-page mail-order catalog offers the traditional quality merchandise, plus some new and expanded items, according to AAFES officials.

Famous brand-name products in the new catalog include porcelains from Lladro, pipes by Dunhill, chinas from Mikasa, and the newest cameras from Nikon, Canon, and Yashica. There are also tape decks by Teac and Akai, vacuum cleaners by Hoover and Bissell, and power tools from Black and Decker.

Some of the catalog's new items are big-and-tall clothing for men, mink and silver-fox furs for women, and more modern train sets for children.

Expanded lines highlighted in the catalog include exercise equipment, men's wear, intimate apparel, telephone systems, video movies, and home security systems. (ARNEWS)

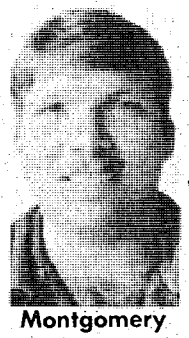
Personnel specialist spends year in Honduras

By Becky Winters
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Personnel Office was looking for a 75E (personnel actions specialist) and Sp4 Robert Montgomery wound up spending a year in Honduras.



Montgomery

"They asked me if I could be ready to leave in two days," said Montgomery. When he indicated that he could, and asked where he was going, "they told me that was on a 'need-to-know' basis and I didn't need to know."

Two weeks later he was in Comayagua, Honduras, part of the initial crew into the area.

"We spent two weeks clearing paths, pitching tents and setting up camp," he said.

Montgomery was part of Operation Big Pine II and later Grenadaro I during the year he spent in the country. "At times there were 5,000 American soldiers in the country," he said.

Their mission was training Honduran soldiers, and also involved a big humanitarian effort by American forces. "The medical teams went out and innoculated people, and vets did the same with the animals," he said.

Montgomery worked in the AG office which was a joint effort by the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines. His boss was an Air Force lieutenant colonel.

"I was really surprised at how well all the different branches worked together," he said. "I thought there would be a lot of rivalry, but there really wasn't."

Honduras is a country the size of Tennessee, with a tropical climate, Montgomery explained. "If it was raining when I got off work, I knew it was still winter."

Honduras is a democracy, but the standard of living of the people is very low.

"Some people live in flimsy wooden huts, and what we would consider the middle class live in adobe huts," he said. "Most do not have electricity in their homes, even though it would cost only $10 to $15 to install. The poverty is unbelieveable."

Education through junior high is free but many children cannot attend because they have to be out working to help feed their families, Montgomery said.

Montgomery said he kept a Spanish-English dictionary with him all the time, which helped him learn enough Spanish to communicate with people there. And it helped too, when he met his future wife, Naomi.

"We met on Christmas eve, and despite my poor grasp of Spanish, we got along fine because we like the same things.

"It was really no different from dating an American girl," he said, "because Naomi liked to go to movies and discos, just like I did."

Despite their poverty, the Honduran people are very pro-American. "They love American music," said Montgomery. "The DJ will introduce the songs in Spanish and then play American rock and roll in English."

Montgomery is scheduled to get out of the Army in November, and plans to go back home to Little Rock, Ark., and work in his uncle's business, repairing video games.

He eventually hopes to move his family back to Honduras and get a job in civil service there.

Navajo soldiers used 'hidden language' to aid in WW II

Throughout the fighting in the Solomon Islands, Guam, Peleliu and Iwo Jima during World War II, the Japanese were totally confounded by a strange language being picked up on their tactical radios.

It was Navajo, a language that has been described as American double-talk mixed with the sound of a hot water bottle being emptied. It was the language of the Marine Corps' famous code talkers.

Most codes are based on the user's native language. If the language is widely known, the code can be broken — regardless of how clever it is.

However, Navajo is considered one of the world's "hidden languages." That is, its original alphabet and symbols have been lost to history. When World War II broke out, there were only about 55,000 Navajos in the United States — mainly in Arizona, New Mexico, and Utah.

They tended to stay to themselves, which kept their language from spreading. Estimates are that only 28 non-Navajos, mainly white American scientists and missionaries, could speak this unique tongue where four inflections of the same word would give the word four different meanings.

The Navajos were the only Indian tribe in the United States that had not been intensively studied by art students and anthropologists from Germany — Japan's ally — as other native Americans had been during the previous two decades prior to the outbreak of the war.

When the first 30 Navajo recruits finished training at Fleet Marine Force Training Center, Camp Elliott, Calif., they were assigned to the 1st and 2nd Marine Divisions. Others went to the 3rd Division and to raider battalions.

These Navajo "code talkers" as they ultimately became known, increased to 420 before the end of the war. And the original contingent made its own unique contribution to military history when it took the basic Navajo language and modified it into an effective wartime code.

No wonder the Japanese couldn't break the "code," which proved indispensable for rapidly transmitting classified dispatches during the invasions of Guam and Peleliu. Because Navajos were on the sending and the receiving ends, there was no time lost in enciphering and deciphering messages — a situation that is absolutely critical when moving troops about swiftly and with precision.

Maj. Howard M. Conner, a Marine Corps signal officer, credited the code talkers for the success of the battle for Iwo Jima. The whole invasion was directed in Navajo code. Orders went from the corps' command post on a battleship to division command posts on the beach. During the first 48 hours, while troops were landing and securing positions, the Navajos sent and received more than 800 messages.

Several weeks later, when the flag was raised on Mount Suribachi, the victory message was sent — appropriately enough — in Navajo code. The "hidden language" was no longer lost to history. (AFPS)

Army researchers help develop new vaccine

Research and development findings recently released by a team of biomedical scientists that included Army medical researchers concludes that prospects have markedly improved for the development of a practical, universal vaccine against the deadliest form of Malaria, Falciparum Malaria.

According to a paper co-authored by WRAIR and the National Institute of Health Scientists, a vaccine against the initial stage of the infection "would, if effective, prime the human immune system to kill sporozoites, Malaria parasites injected by the mosquito, and thus prevent the subsequent stages responsible for the disease and transmission of the infection to others."

Research included genetic engineering by WRAIR scientists and National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases researchers. Their work, independent of New York University's Malaria protein "gene cloning," represents a breakthrough in the search for a vaccine candidate.

Army medical officials anticipate that future laboratory studies of the vaccine candidate will lead to field trials in human subjects. (ARNEWS)

Youth leagues get underway

The Youth Activities Soccer and Football Leagues got into high gear Saturday.

For many football teams, Saturday was their second scheduled contest of the young season. Both the Raiders and Redskins raised their marks to 2-0 with impressive victories. The Steelers, Bills, and Knights were also victorious for their first wins of the campaign.

Many soccer squads kicked off their season Saturday after the opening ceremonies at Gordon Field. The Sidewinders, Black Panthers, Rangers and Rowdies all came out on top during Saturday's action.

Golf clinic

There will be a free golf clinic offered at the Follow Me Golf Course, building 390, on Oct. 7, 14, 21, and 28 from 10:30 a.m. until noon. The clinic is open to active duty beginning golfers only. Two instructors will be available. For more information, call 687-1940.

Phenix City in final

The Phenix City Southern Vikings, 8-1, will play defending champion Forest Park tomorrow night in Forest Park for the Georgia Football League championship.

John Ross' club defeated Acworth in the semifinals last week. Forest Park upended the Vikings in the first game of the season.

Spencer football

The Greenwave of Spencer High School will take their 1-1 record into tonight's game with 0-2 Carver. The two teams will face off at Memorial Stadium in Columbus. The Greenwave is coming off a victory over Kendrick last week.

Chess tourney

The Kelley Hill Recreation Center will sponsor a USCF Chess Tournament Sept. 22. Registration will be at noon. The tournament is open to all military and civilian members of the USCF. The entry fee is $1. Tournament memberships are available for $3 for non-members. An unrated section will be conducted with no fee for players who are not interested in the USCF tournament. For more information, contact the Kelley Hill Recreation Center at 544-3079 from noon to 9 p.m. Wednesdays through Saturdays and from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Sundays.

Road race

National Infantry Museum Road Race, Fort Benning, Oct. 13: No race in West Georgia draws a larger field than this one. Entries are open to individuals and groups. Race proceeds benefit the museum. Last year, over $17,000 was raised. Entry fee is $5. This year's run will start (9 a.m.) and finish at Doughboy Stadium.

For more information, call Jean Dyer at 563-4818 or Bernie Pfeiffer at 545-3285.

Hunt club

The Fort Benning Hunt Club gives special rate horseback riding lessons Thursday for members of the OWC and NCOWC. This hour group lesson is $5. All military personnel, their family members and civil service workers may use the club.

Rentals are available from 9:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. every day except Wednesday.

Air conditioning policy follows Army guidelines, saves valuable energy

By Robert Ashworth
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Though summer is giving way to fall, warm weather is still with us and many Ft. Benning residents and employees may be wondering why the air conditioning season has ended. Ft. Benning officials did not arbitrarily direct that air conditioners be turned off, according to James D. Willis, Installation Energy Coordinator with the Directorate of Engineering and Housing (DEH).

TRADOC directives establish mandatory shutdown dates once certain conditions are met. Beginning in September, temperature and humidity are plotted on a chart on which a scientifically determined "comfort line" is drawn, he said. The data is provided by Detachment 10 of the 5th Weather Squadron, USAF. Whether combinations of temperature and humidity fall to the right or left of the line defines "comfortable" vs. "uncomfortable" conditions for energy use planning purposes.

After four consecutive days to the "comfortable" side of the comfort line, air conditioners must be turned off. This year's weather called for a systems shutdown that began last Friday. The shutdown was completed Sunday evening. Administrative offices were first, troop billets next, and family quarters last. That sequence was the reverse of last spring's turn-on procedure.

"Family housing occupants are generally least able to cope with the heat, but they are going to have to use fans, repair torn screens and open windows," explained Willis.

He added, "the air conditioning will not come back on."

Willis pointed out that authorizations for continued air conditioning must be approved within the office of the commanding general. Exemptions currently in effect have been automatically renewed. Health care and some data processing activities are examples of operations requiring special air conditioning. Requests from family housing occupants must be supported by a doctor's recommendation and validated by the chief of professional services at Martin Army Community Hospital.

Willis said that family quarters cooling facilities are geared to lower outdoor temperatures 17 degrees, but to no lower than 78 degrees F.

"The installation cannot guarantee maintenance of a particular temperature in anyone's quarters," he emphasized.

Willis stressed that everyone must cooperate by not using unauthorized air conditioning because energy is expensive and in limited supply.

Much of the post is centrally air conditioned, but many offices and approximately 400 sets of family quarters are cooled by window units. Central air can be regulated through a system controlled by DEH. Window units cannot at this time.

"Window unit use is on the honor of the guy who owns the window," Willis said. By next air conditioning season, all family quarters will have been converted to central air and all units in administrative offices, both window and central, will be under the regulated system, he added.

Willis went on to say that saving energy is serious business and the Field Officer of the Day will conduct random checks for unauthorized air conditioning. Last spring, a first offense brought a warning from the Director of

Gov. Joe Frank Harris presents Lt. Col. Ron Rokosz a proclaimation making Oct. 1 to Oct.7 "Airborne Ranger Week."

Governor proclaims 'Airborne Ranger Week'

WHEREAS: In 1950, a group of volunteer parachutists were organized into the first Ranger Infantry Companies (Airborne) in the State of Georgia; and

WHEREAS: These first Airborne Rangers underwent the most vigorous training their country could devise and set the standard of excellence throughout the United States Army; and

WHEREAS: This elite group of men formed the only American force to volunteer for combat in the Korean War; and

WHEREAS: The State of Georgia is the home of the 1st Ranger Battalion which led the rescue mission on the Island of Grenada, and has recently become the home of the 3rd Airborne Ranger Battalion and the headquarters of the Ranger Regiment; and

WHEREAS: In October, 1984, after 34 years, the bold and daring men of the Ranger Infantry Companies (Airborne) of the Korean War will reunite in the State of Georgia, the birthplace of the American Airborne Ranger, to share memories and friendship; and

WHEREAS: It is more fitting that the citizens of Georgia join together in honoring these gallant and heroic men who so bravely carried the American flag of freedom and brought great honor to their state; now

THEREFORE: I, Joe Frank Harris, Governor of the State of Georgia, do hereby proclaim the week of October 1-7, 1984, as "AIRBORNE RANGER WEEK" in Georgia, and call upon all our citizens to observe this week as a tribute to the first American Airborne Rangers.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Seal of the Executive Department to be affixed. This 30th day of April, 1984.

AUSA - Congress must insure housing costs are reimbursed

At times, Congress gives the indication of a willingness to face squarely the fact that to get and keep good people in the all-volunteer forces, we must adjust their compensation to the realities of the day. Such appears to have been the case when the legislators authorized the variable housing allowance (VHA) in 1980. They recognized that service members obtain housing under a set of conditions different from civilians with similar incomes.

Military personnel have little control over assignment areas; their income remains fixed, irrespective of the cost of living or locally prevailing wage scales; the transitory nature of military duty requires that they enter and leave the housing market in different geographic areas with greater frequency than their civilian counterparts.

It was in consideration of these unique conditions of military service that Congress sought to relieve service people of some of the financial penalties of assignment to high-cost localities. Congress rightly believed that these service members should not have to bear the entire burden of the higher costs.

Congress provided a variable housing allowance to stateside service members living off base if their average housing costs exceeded 115 percent of their basic quarters allowance. This program reduced the unreimbursed housing costs that service members were then paying from an average of about $1,300 to about $500 annually.

> "Subsequent congressional limitations have increased the average out-of-pocket costs to $1,200."

Unfortunately, the relief provided by the VHA program was fleeting, lasting just two years. In 1982 Congress imposed a "cap" on the VHA rates which had the net effect of raising members' average unreimbursed housing costs to about $700 anually.

Subsequent congressional limitations have increased the average out-of-pocket costs to $1,200 — right back to the condition existing before 1980. Proposals embodied in the fiscal 1985 defense budget, now before Congress, should help meet the expense of living "off-post," but it appears that soldiers assigned to the highest cost areas will be inequitably treated. If we are to attract and retain the young men and women needed to sustain our volunteer military forces, Congress must insure that their reasonable housing costs are reimbursed. (AUSA)

What are your feelings about Native American recognition?

Sp5 Elizabeth Torrez, MEDDAC-"I think they need more recognition and they shouldn't have to live on reservations. They should be allowed to live free like everybody else."

SFC John A. Perry, C Co., 2nd Bn., 69th Armor-"Recognition in the nation across the board as far as I know is poor. It needs to focus in on those people because of the contributions they made in this country before most of us and our ancestors even thought about coming over here. We have a tendency to downplay their contributions and their heritage and that is equally important to them as it is to us."

SSgt. Ronald E. Stone, 1st Bn, 29th Inf-"They are the main natives of the country, they were here first. They got the raw end of the stick. The treaty violations that were pulled against them, they got nothing out of them. And they are still on reservations. Put them in society."

Capt. David M. Martin, B Co., ITG-"I think the Native American culture should be more recognized so it can be appreciated by all Americans."

Ranger is proud of Indian heritage

Robert McClain

"The story of the Indian in America is a record of endurance, of survival, of adaptation and of creativity in the face of overwhelming obstacles. It is a record of enormous contributions to this country — to its art and culture, its strength and spirit, its sense of history, and its sense of purpose," noted President Ronald Reagan in his message proclaiming Sept. 28, 1984, as Native American Day.

Native American Day is a time to reflect on these accomplishments and a time to learn more about the history and culture of our first Americans.

One Fort Benning officer is very proud of his Indian heritage.

At first glance, 2nd Lt. John Bushyhead, executive officer with the 3rd Ranger Company, doesn't look like your typical "Hollywood" Indian. He's more the epitome of a Ranger. The long hair of an Indian is replaced by a neatly cropped patch of hair on the top of his head, the sides shaved clean.

But looking closely at his features you can see his Indian heritage. His lanky legs and arms seem to go on forever. A strong chin, high cheekbones and a larger than average nose highlights his face. There doesn't appear to be an ounce of fat on his tall frame.

"Because of my appearance," he said, "I get funny looks when I talk about my Indian background. I'm probably just one-eighth Indian and look more white than Indian. But I feel different from the average citizen."

Bush

ily tree with great pride. "I have always been proud of the Bushyhead name. It's so unusual. It's just something you want to know about.I've always been interested in finding out where we came from."

Bushyhead's bloodline is rich in Indian history. His family is well documented in Indian history books. His relatives include the Reverend Jesse Bushyhead. Rev. Bushyhead led one group of Georgia Indians over the "Trail of Tears" to Indian territory in Oklahoma. He also established a school for the Cherokees, later to be known as Bacone College. Bacone is currently the largest Indian college in the United States.

An uncle, Edward Bushyhead, founded the San Diego Union newspaper in the mid 1800s. His great-grandfather, Dr. Jesse Bushyhead, was the first Cherokee to earn a doctorate. Dr. Bushyhead was first cousin to Will Rogers and was made a member of the Oklahoma Hall of Fame.

> "I like what I found in the Rangers. I don't like average soldiers, soldiers who just want to get by. I like soldiers who give 110 percent."

His grandfather, Jesse Carey Bushyhead, was a succesful farmer in Oklahoma. He had two children. One became a successful lawyer. The other enlisted in the miltary. Edward Robertson Bushyhead served a distinguished career in the Army and retired as a colonel. Edward is John's father.

His father had a lot to do with his decision to join the military.

"When I was 17 and graduating from high school, my father asked me what I was going to do with my life. I told him I wanted to go to college and he said "how?" I joined the military as an enlisted man in 1977 and later went to college on the GI bill. After graduating from Florida State University he received his officer commission.

CG's message

In a continuing effort to bring about better understanding of all ethnic groups in our society, Fort Benning will observe Sept. 28 as Native American Day.

The area surrounding Fort Benning and Columbus abounds in cultural and historical experiences relating to American Indians and their involvement with the United States Government, in both the military and civilian communities. Many of the foods, clothing and languages we have today are a result of American Indian interaction with the White, Spanish, and Black segments of our society.

All Fort Benning personnel and their families, both military and civilian, are urged to take this time to reflect on the history, culture and contributions of Native Americans.

JOHN W. FOSS
Major General, USA Commanding

Correction

In last week's front page story on the Sunday commissary opening,the Bayonet incorrectly reported that 85 percent of Sunday customers surveyed during the first two Sunday openings were retirees. The correct figures as released by the Directorate of Personnel and Community Activities show 63 percent of the customers were either active duty or active duty family members and 37 percent were retired or their family members. The Bayonet apologizes for any misconceptions this error may have brought about.

President urges CFC support

In each of the past 23 years, federal employees and members of the Armed Forces have had the opportunity to show their concern for those in need through participation in the Combined Federal Campaign. I ask each of you now to continue that tradition of voluntary sharing.

Through the Combined Federal Campaign, we can help relieve pain and health problems now and support research to help eliminate them in the future. We can help our neighbors without making them dependent on government. We can assist the less fortunate in other countries, extending a nurturing hand to friends around the world.

Americans have a record of generosity and concern for others unmatched by any other country in the world. I am confident that our proud record will continue in the fall 1984 Combined Federal Campaign. While the decision to give is personal and voluntary, I encourage each of you to join me in wholeheartedly supporting this year's CFC.

Med facilities will deny patients if not enrolled in DEERS program

The Assistant Secretary of Defense (Health Affairs) has directed that beginning Monday, Army Medical/Dental Treatment Facilities will deny care to patients not in the DEERS data base.

However, prior to denial of health care, an evaluation will be conducted by a medical authority designated by the Medical Treatment Facility commander to insure that the patient is not placed at risk through the denial of care.

When the medical authority has determined that the patient is not at risk and has been unable to establish eligibility, care will be denied by the facility commander or his/her designated representative. When the medical authority has determined that the patient or hospital is at risk, the patient may be treated.

When the patient is treated he/she will be required to complete a statement saying that proof of eligibility will be provided within 30 days or he/she will be billed under provisions of the applicable directives.

If you or your dependents are not enrolled in DEERS, see your PSNCO and complete a DA Form 1172. Take this completed form to the ID card section to facilitate your paperwork. (MEDDAC)

Air conditioning

Personnel and Community Activities. A second offense drew a letter routed through the offender's chain of command.

Willis said Fort Benning is given an energy goal and "air conditioning is the big problem." TRADOC sets the goal. It may be adjusted later if unforeseen factors develop, but if the post exceeds its adjusted goal, the commanding general must explain why to the TRADOC CG. Furthermore, the excess energy used must be paid for with other than facilities engineer funds. This is money that might have gone for training, community life activities, or other important areas.

"We have to pay the local utility companies. Last year we spent about $1 million too much on energy. We won't know how we stand this year until the figures are adjusted," Willis said.

Willis explained that if the post meets its goal, though, it shares a fixed amount monetary award with other TRADOC installations meeting their goals. Energy awards have netted Ft. Rucker, Ala., $2 million over the past two years.

Willis praised the cooperation this summer from offices throughout post. Because employees endured a half-hour on, half-hour off routine everyday from noon to 6 p.m., family quarters air conditioning was turned off only 7 1/2 minutes each half-hour, the mandatory minimum dictated by TRADOC.

"Last year we had to periodically turn off the air conditioning in the housing areas for up to one and one-half hours out of every two," Willis reported. "It made it pretty tough. This year's sacrifices by Benning workers have paid off."

The next seasonal transition for energy use planners is winter. Again under TRADOC guidelines, heat will be turned on at Ft. Benning when the average daily temperature between the hours of 6 a.m. and 10 p.m. falls on or below 60 degrees F on three consecutive days. Asked to predict when that would happen this year, Willis responded that heat is typically turned on some time between November 15 and 25.

Soldiers now docked for quarters damage

Washington — Starting Oct. 1, the military services will have the authority to dock members' pay for damage done to their government quarters through abuse or negligence.

The new policy is a part of a $9.1 billion Military Construction Authorization Act recently signed into law by President Reagan.

Details on how the costs will be determined and charged still must be worked out, according to Army housing management officials.

The bill also authorizes the services to build 4,176 family housing units, 956 of them for the Army. Sierra Army Depot, Calif., will receive 205 units, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., 439; Fort Hood, Texas, 20; Bahenhausen, Germany, 106; and Mainz, Germany, 186 units.

The family housing budget targets $538 million to build new housing and $2.6 billion for maintenance, repair and improvements of the more than 450,000 units of existing housing.

The bill will also grant DoD the authority to limit tenants' liability after a house fire to avoid having to bill them for the full cost of their quarters.

In addition, the services will now pay for the repairs or changes to telephone wiring in military housing. It also allows the services to repay tenants for payments they may have made during 1984. The provision clarifies a law that prohibited using appropriated funds for telephone wiring.

Benning prepares for German-style Volksfest

By Becky Winters
USAIC Public Affairs Office

A German style Volksfest is scheduled for Saturday, Oct. 13 at Doughboy Stadium from 10 a.m. to 11 p.m

The fest will consist of live entertainment, German and American food and beverage concessions and 10 and 20 km Volksmarches.

Literally translated, "volksmarch" means people's walk, and is the big drawing card of the Volksfest.

"We hope to attract people from volksmarch clubs," said Tom Mull, director of Physical Activites Branch, Morale Support Activities Division. "There are clubs at Fort Jackson, S.C., and Fort Gordon, Ga., to name a few in this area," he said.

In Germany, volksmarching is a popular form of family entertainment, and people are always trying to add to their collection of badges, ribbons and patches that are awarded to everyone who completes a volksmarch.

Fort Benning marchers will be awarded a special Volksfest patch, and group trophies will be awarded to the three largest groups, for both military and civilian groups.

Anyone interested in participating in the volksmarches can sign up anytime between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. There is a $1 registration fee.

Sack lunches will be available at the concession stands and there will be water points along the route.

"We hope to provide a kind of carnival atmosphere," said Mull. "There will be a large tent set up on Doughboy Field and there will be picnic tables set up under it for people to sit at and watch the entertainment and eat."

The Infantry Center Band and a German band will provide musical entertainment and there will be a German dress contest, a breakdance contest, as well as a dunking booth.

There will also be a dance floor, a stage, food concessions and more under the big tent.

"We're hoping that families will turn out for this, because it is really a family type event," said Mull. There is no type of competition involved, it is a leisurely type walk that people can enjoy," said Mull.

Fort Benning has joined the Volkssport Association and now must conduct volksmarches periodically to maintain its membership in the organization.

Officials are working on getting the march sanctioned by the association and obtaining the IVV stamp to issue to members of the association who complete the march.

The stamp is important to those diehard fans of volksmarching who travel all over the country to increase their mileage record and collection of medals and badges.

The Volksfest is open to active and retired military, civilian employees and their families, and the general public.

Program helps young mothers cope with stressful situations

Young mothers of preschool children often feel inadequate, frustrated, bored and lonely. Frequently these feelings go unresolved and tension builds to a feverish pitch.

Mothers of Pre-Schoolers (MOPS) is a nation-wide program dedicated to helping young mothers during this high stress period of their lives. MOPS was begun at Fort Benning last year and was so successful it began its second year on September 17.

"Mothers of Pre-Schoolers (MOPS) is a nation-wide program dedicated to helping young mothers during this high stress period of their lives."

The group will continue to meet every Monday morning in building 2860 on Dixie Road(Sept.-May) from 9 to 11:15 a.m., with the purpose of:

- providing programs of interest to mothers of young children;
- developing friendships for the sharing of common problems and joys;
- motivating innate creativity;
- promoting spiritual growth.

Discussion topics will include the importance of being a woman, wife and mother; self-image; household budgeting; family relationships, and creative ways to spend time with your children. Small groups will provide for honest sharing, developing friendships and spiritual enrichment. There also will be a craft time for stimulating creative expression and learning new skills.

While mothers are meeting together, the children will be involved in a quality care program called MOPPETS. This will be a teaching nursery for ages 3-5 and an infant nursery for the very young.

The MOPS program is a unique opportunity for mothers of young children to find fellowship, support, training, and fun. It also provides an opportunity for women who would like to teach 3-5 year olds.

The group is sponsored by the Protestant Women of the Chapel, but is non-denominational and women of all faiths are invited. If you would like to participate in MOPS or would like to work as a teacher with MOPPETS, contact Brenda Pace at 682-9479 or the TIC Chapel Center at 545-2050.

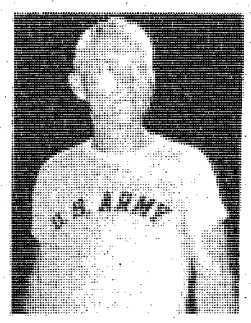
36th Engineer Group soldier has special PT run

James F. Reeves Jr.
36th Engineer Group



Wickham

Friday morning, Sept. 7, was no ordinary morning for PFC Susilo Suprobo, a supply clerk from the 215th Area Finance Support Center, 36th Engineer Group.

He awoke with an abundance of energy and enthusiasm, unlike the many other mornings when it required a cup of coffee and some pushups to wake up. Driving to post to report for PT,the closer he got to his destination, the harder his heart pumped.

What excited this young soldier from Djakarta was that he had a date to run with the Chief of Staff of the Army, Gen. John A. Wickham.

Suprobo is not a soldier who is accustomed to being around general officers. As he put it, "that was the first time I had seen a four-star general up close, close enough to touch. The only other four-star general I have seen was Gen. Richardson and that was at a distance. He spoke at my basic training graduation at Fort Jackson."

Suprobo is a modest young soldier who is quickly adjusting to life in the Army and if his luck continues as it has, he will go a long way. Born and raised in Indonesia, Suprobo spent most of his life on the Island of Java. His older brother was in the United States as a foreign exchange student when he was told a businessman from Mason, Mich., wanted to sponsor him as a student.

He arrived in Michigan in December 1979, eager to get started. He was enrolled in high school where he quickly overcame the language barrier and graduated. He was married in 1981 to his high school sweetheart and joined the Army.

With the help of his unit, he is studying to take his citizenship exams in January 1985.

"My goal was to set the pace of the run at nine minutes a mile for the three miles we ran," Suprobo reflected, and he did. While running, Suprobo said the general asked a lot of questions about his family and how they were doing.

"He showed a special concern about the welfare of my family. I think my family and I have been taken care of very well since I joined the Army. Because of the Army, I have been able to set goals for the future—something I have never been able to do before," he said.

Suprobo was not at all suprised to learn that Gen. Wickham is very concerned about the soldier-family team and is doing many things to improve the quality of life for soldiers and their families.

"I love my family very much and am glad to know that such a man occupies the highest position in the Army," Suprobo said.

When he heard "quick-time," Suprobo quickly glanced at his watch to see how he did, shook hands with the general and said goodbye. He remembers Gen. Wickham as a man with a good personality, an open mind and compassion. He also says the general is in good condition for his age.

"Wherever you are, sir, I wish you the best of luck and keep up the good work!" says Suprobo.

Posts needs SPIRIT ideas

By Bill Reynolds
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The local SPIRIT coordinator Dot Russell urges all Fort Benning personnel to turn in their money-saving ideas before the fifth working day after the beginning of the new fiscal year.

This year's SPIRIT initiatives exceed $27 million but still only guarantee Fort Benning is in the top three in Training and Doctrine Command's annual SPIRIT contest.

Last Year Fort Benning won the $1 million first prize by being more efficient than other TRADOC installations. According to Mrs. Russell, winning the prize this year may take more effort.

She feels Fort Benning personnel are still looking for ways to provide more Army for the dollar but are not reporting what they do. "People will make changes in the way they do business but won't report it because they think 'I'm just doing my job,'" said Mrs. Russell. These feelings were echoed by the post commander, Maj. Gen. John W. Foss, at a recent ceremony when he urged the audience to report their initiatives.

Mrs. Russell cites an example from the 197th Infantry Brigade (Mechanized) (Separate) where a unit had completed a money-saving initiative and didn't report the savings because they felt it was "just their job." She says when the preliminary figures had been computed the savings to the installation came to more than $2 million.

2-69th soldiers conduct gunnery qualification

By Debbie J. Mundy
197th Public Affairs Office

The 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor, of the 197th Infantry Brigade (Mechanized) (Separate) is currently conducting annual basic and qualification gunnery training.

The gunnery training is scheduled to terminate Oct. 11.

Tank gunnery training, as stated in the battalion's letter of instruction 1-85, is designed to support the following goals: exceed FORSCOM's combat capability criteria; achieve training excellence through qualification of tank crews to a rigorously enforced standard; duplicate conditions, tasks and standards of NTC in the operation of Tank Table VII (main gun qualification); reinforce tank tactical movements; land navigation; and increase gunnery skills.

"By focusing on this, 2-69 will obtain their objective of improving tank crew gunnery proficiency and their capability to perform crew drills," explained MSgt. Harold D. Preston, training NCOIC for gunnery.

The testing was conducted so that individuals as well as teams could be evaluated. Soldiers were required to be 100 percent proficient before moving on to the next table. However, in main gun qualification, 90 percent of the crew was required to be successful on initial testing. The remaining ten percent had to score satisfactorily the second time around.

"Each company will have the opportunity to improve their tank crew training by the time Oct. 11 rolls around," stated Preston.

Throughout the training, scenarios called for crews to incorporate unit operating procedures with FORSCOM tank gunnery qualification requirements. An operations order was issued to crews prior to beginning each table and crews were to perform assigned tasks to the best of their abilities.

"Some of the testing was designed so that soldiers could get credit for killing the enemy," said SFC Olvinn J. Lumpkins, of the unit's training section. "However, at some tables, if he didn't watch out he could be killed."

The scoring system mentioned by Lumpkins was designed to score soldiers by colors. If soldiers received a red mark, the soldiers were credited with killing some of the enemy but he was killed also; amber meant a lot of kills but the soldier only had a 50 percent chance of surviving; and green meant the soldier had a 90 percent chance to survive.

"This type training is good and the unit can only benefit from it," said Preston.

CPO job program provided many with summer jobs

By Cheryl J. Mehlenbeck
Civilian Personnel Office

Summer employment programs at Fort Benning provided 369 people with work experience and training this summer. The 369 employees were funded as follows: 143 appropriated, 76 nonappropriated and 150 U.S. Department of Labor Summer Youth Employee Program.

The employees performed duties as clerks, clerk-typists, laborers and lifeguards. Salary rates ranged from $3.35 (minimum wage) to $5.30 per hour. Employees worked an average of 25 to 40 hours per week.

While cutbacks in federal programs have affected the number of individuals hired under all summer employment programs, benefits to the individuals hired and to the government continue.

Summer hire programs provided job experience and a chance to visualize future job opportunities with the federal government. They provide organizations with temporary workers to substitute for regular employees during peak vacation periods.

Particularly for young people, the program provided opportunities to:

- Acquire good work habits by having to report to work daily and on time.
- Discover that gainful employment is rewarding.
- Become more aware of the value of money.
- Take pride in earning money for their own expenses, thereby reducing the drain on parental income.
- Spend vacation time in a constructive way rather than an unproductive way.

The CPO thanks all managers, supervisors and employees who assisted in the success of our 1984 summer employment programs.

Applications for 1985 appropriated fund summer positions will be accepted March 15 through April 15, 1985. Applications will be accepted for nonappropriated fund positions during the month of April 1985, exact dates to be announced later.

Army didn't always give decorations

Washington — Today, Army commanders can reward their soldiers for achievement, commendation, valor and service 27 different ways. But back when our Army consisted of a few thousand musket-toting farmers, there were no official decorations.

None, that is, until Aug. 7, 1782, when the Continental Army's Commander-in-chief, Gen. George Washington, established two badges of distinction for enlisted and noncommissioned officers.

Soldiers who completed three years of service with "bravery, fidelity, and good conduct," received a chevron for the left sleeve of the uniform coat.

A second badge that recognized "any singularly meritorious action," was a heart in purple cloth edged with narrow lace or binding. This award, called the badge of military merit, was affixed to the uniform coat above the left breast and permitted its wearer to pass guards and sentinels without challenge. The wearer's name and regiment were inscribed in a book of merit.

The badge specifically honored the lower ranks where decorations were unknown in 18th century European armies. "The road to glory in a patriot Army and a free country is thus open to all," said Washington.

During the American Revolution, the award was first presented in the Spring of 1783 to three volunteer soldiers from Connecticut: Elijah Churchill, for gallantry in action; William Brown, for his involvement in a nighttime attack; and Daniel Bissell Jr., for relaying valuable information to the Continental Command while posing as a deserter. All were decorated by Gen. Washington at his headquarters in Newburgh, New York.

The award fell into disuse following the Revolutionary War. In 1932 it was revived by the War Department as part of the 200th anniversary celebration of George Washington's birthday.

On February 22, Washington's birthday, the War Department announced, "by order of the President of the United States, the Purple Heart, established by General George Washington at Newburgh, August 7, 1782, during the War of the Revolution is hereby revived out of respect to his memory and military achievements."

A provision of the revived award permitted its presentation to World War I veterans who had performed meritoriously and had been wounded in action. The award, renamed the Purple Heart, was identified from then on with wounds or death suffered in the line of duty to the country.

The Purple Heart also underwent a face-lift. Instead of the purple cloth of Washington's time, the decoration was styled into a purple enameled heart, with a bronze quarter-inch border showing a profile of George Washington in Continental uniform.

The ring above the relief bears Washington's coat of arms between two sprays of leaves in green enamel. The inscription on the reverse side reads "For Military Merit."

At its inception in the waning days of America's War for Independence, the award recognized only the soldier's valor. Executive orders following its revival in 1932 extended eligibility to all members of the U.S. armed forces and to civilians who had been wounded in action against an enemy of the United States. But on June 20, 1969, the Army again restricted the award to soldiers wounded or killed in action. (ARNEWS)

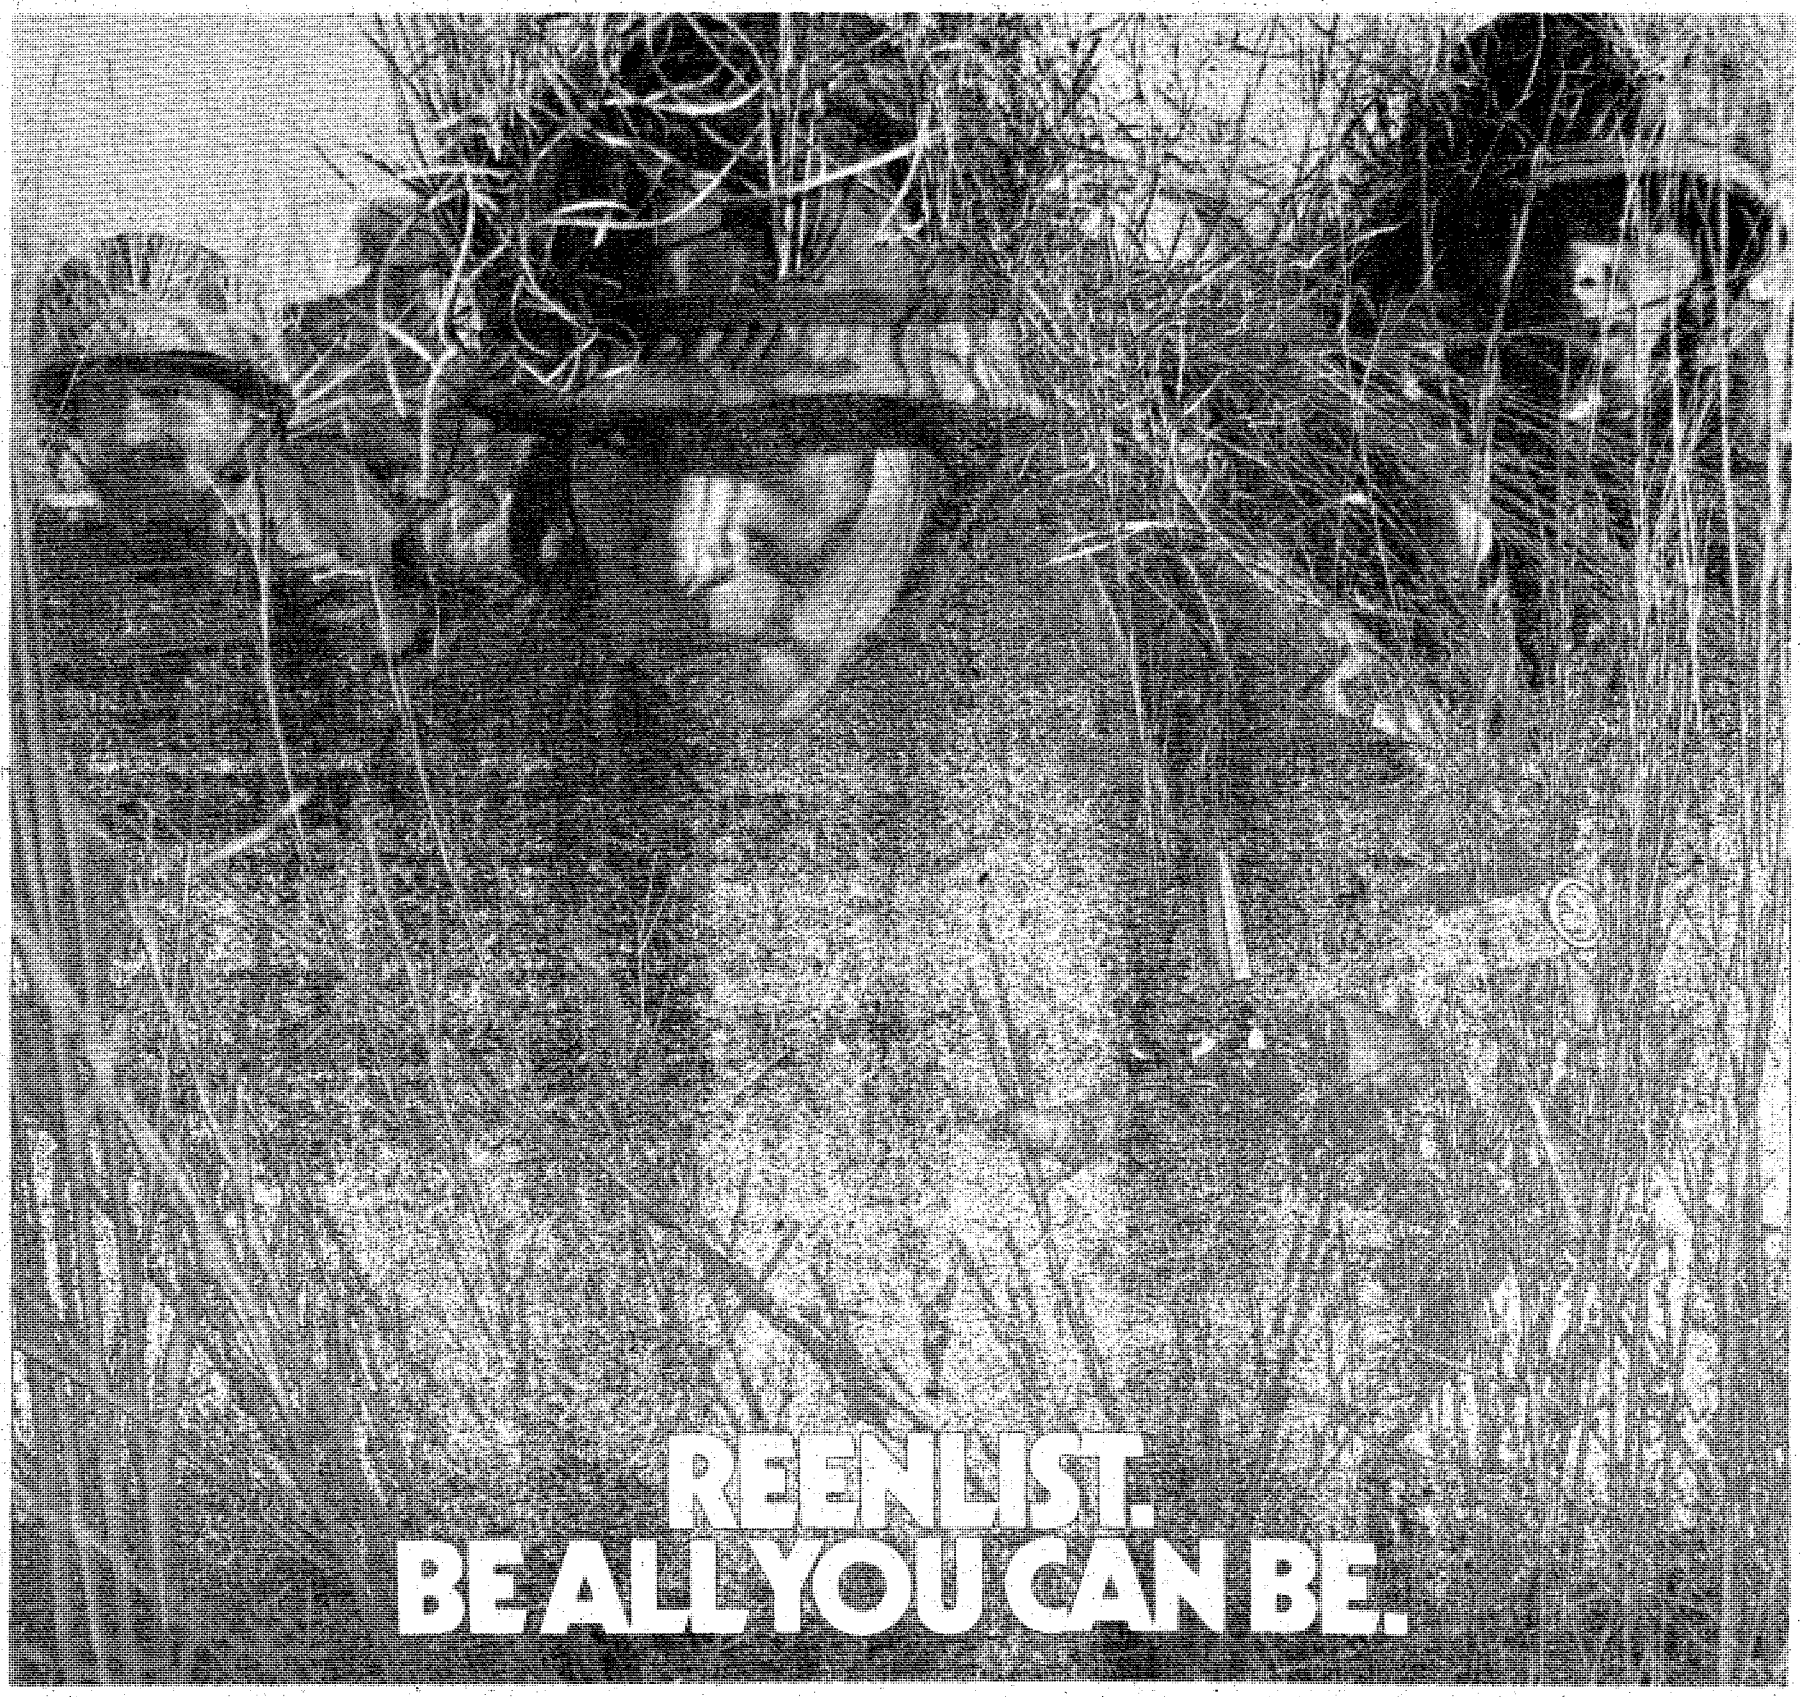
RANK COMES FASTER WHEN THE DUTY'S TOUGH.

If you want to get ahead in any organization, take on the tough job. Do it well and you'll be noticed, appreciated and promoted. It's that way in the Army, too.

The toughest duty offers you the best opportunities for advancement. In the combat arms, for instance, you'll find more openings because not everybody can make the team. The physical and mental requirements are tough because that's what it takes to be a leader.

So if you want to go for rank, go for the tough duty. In today's Army, the tough job is the smart job to have. See your reenlistment NCO today.



Soldier earns 197th Chef of the Quarter honors

By Willie Means
197th Public Affairs Office

More than 100 people turned out for the 197th Infantry Brigade's (Mechanized) (Separate) Chef-of-the-Quarter competition held Sept. 20 at the brigade recreation center.

Private first class Richard E. Jacobs, food service specialist with 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor,was selected the winner. His entree was boiled lobster and honey glazed cornish hen.

"I was kind of shakey when the judge announced me the winner," said Jacobs. "I wasn't even sure I could walk up to get my trophy. It's the first time I have ever won anything."

The Chef-of-the-Quarter competition, held to bring out the excellence of the food service specialist, is the first step in competing Army wide.

"The soldier's display was really good," stated SFC Larry M. Karasch, brigade food service supervisor. "This brigade is full of great cooks, but only one can represent the brigade in the Fort Benning competition scheduled for Oct. 4."

Cooks selected to compete in the competition at brigade level are notified a month in advance so they can begin their planning. The cooks are allowed a minimum of supervision and must prepare everything themselves.

"When I was told I was going to compete, I was nervous, but I wanted to win," said Jacobs. "My supervisor said I should take my time and really do my best. I did. Everyone was really looking good. I'm honored to be selected," added the 26-year-old native of Banwert, Ohio.

Jacobs joined the service because other members of his family had been in the military. However, he said, "I wanted to see how it was for myself."

Never having cooked before AIT at Fort Dix, N.J., Jacobs now looks forward to future competition. His achievement as brigade chef-of-the-quarter would have taken him to post competition, but due to a scheduled PCS, one of the runners-up, Sp5 Terry Luzon, 197th support Battalion Dining Facility, will take his place.

"I really wish this PCS move could be delayed until after the competition," stated Jacobs.

Jacobs resides in Columbus with his wife Karen.

The judges for the competition were Gloria Foss, Leslie Musselman and Carolyn Stapleton.

Indian

Bushyhead then came to Benning for the Infantry Officer Basic Course and was later assigned to the 3rd Ranger Company.

"I like what I found in the Rangers. I don't like average soldiers, soldiers who just want to get by. I like solders who give 110 percent. That's why I like the Rangers so much. They're not average soldiers. I want to be associated with that kind of people. Right now I'm working with the best soldiers, the best NCOs and the best officers in the world. I'm very happy with that."

Bushyhead thinks many misconceptions about Indians can be cleared up with education during Native American Week. He objects to the way Hollywood portrays Indians. "Too often Hollywood portrays modern Indians as drunken deadbeats. It makes me mad to see it. Indians are good people down deep.

"There are few pure Indians left in America, but many Americans have some Indian ancestors. Many Americans hide this fact, and I think that is wrong. We should be proud of our Indian heritage."

MPs strive to improve service to community

By Glenda Jordan
Provost Marshal's Office

The Law Enforcement Command recognizes and celebrates the 43rd anniversary of the U.S. Army Military Police Corps this week. It is a time to reflect on the nature of law enforcement.

We now live in a period when homicide, rape, burglary, arson and civil disobedience take a heavy toll on life and property and constitute a menace in every community. The citizen counts on the police to protect life and property, to prevent lawlessness and to apprehend the law breaker. The citizen expects the police to have the strength, skill and courage to deal with the criminal offender no matter how desperate and dangerous he may be.

It is the police who are first to feel the increasing tempos of social change. The police are aware that this increased rate of change, which brings new problems as quickly as it takes them away, only adds to the total amount of complexity already involved in policing. The social sciences, for the most part, have not been able to devise ways to cope with these ever increasing problems. Instead of positive solutions, we see the rush to purchase new hardware instead of seeking nonviolent solutions to the problems.

While new hardware improvements do often act as a stopgap solution, they are often involved in worsening the problems. We cannot afford to risk presenting the public we serve with space-age equipment and stone-age brains.

We may expect to see the race for new technology and hardware slowly die down and a more urgent race begun to create a new body of knowledge relating to policing. Instead of improving police hardware, we will be concerned with improving the police officer. To fail to recognize the police, at what might be called the cutting edge of society, is to fail to recognize what the police job is and the important place the police hold in society.

There probably will never be a better time than now for all police professionals to rededicate themselves to the majesty of the law under which we live, and which they have a duty to enforce and uphold as practitioners in the criminal justice field.

Police do more than just protect the community. The police also must assist the community for two reasons:

1. The police have the manpower, organization, equipment, training, skills, communications and mobility to provide a massive 24-hour-a-day, seven-day-a-week community service which actually supplements existing social and welfare services.

2. Police must become involved in this type of police helpfulness in order to gain and secure the support of the citizenry.

Bear in mind, on weekends when the social workers and lawyers are away and the social agencies are locked tight, it is the police who are called. And when everyone takes a holiday, whether it be at Christmas or New Years, or Easter, policework never ends. The police must be information sources, lawyers, social workers, mediators, medical experts and psychiatrists. They must use authority with effectiveness, restraint and impartiality. No other group is expected to perform such a variety of services.

Provost marshal

The police operate from a unique position in that they function in three separate but closely related roles, that is: social, political and administrative. The social role of law enforcement involves the police function as a basic social institution; an agency of social control. The political role involves the police as a government institution, that which exercises the governments' legitimate right of control. Here the police stand as the enforcement arm of governmental operation by virtue of their security mission. The administrative role bridges the gap between the local and national government and the towns and the people of the rural as well as the urban areas.

The police are, or should be, the "frontline" forces which secure law and order and provide the atmosphere of stability within which the government can carry out new and on-going social, economic and political programs.

In today's dynamic environment of change and dissent, the support of a government by its populace could very well be directly proportional to the professionalism, efficiency and effectiveness of the police forces in the handling of criminal threats and in the performance of their normal duties.

Can the challenge to our future that I mentioned earlier be met? I, for one, have no doubt.

Hark to the words of President Abraham Lincoln: "Let every American pledge his life, his property and his sacred honor; let every man remember that to violate the law is to trample on the blood of his father and to tear the character of his own and his children's liberty."

Crime is not just a police problem. The crime rate is not due to police inadequacy. Crime is the result of inadequate family life, poor schools, evil forces in neighborhood life and the distortions of human personality, discrimination and violations of basic human needs. The police are only one factor in what must be a multi-pronged program for crime control and criminal justice.

As fellow practitioners in the law enforcement field, we in the military police realize the importance of inter-agency cooperation, communication and coordination necessary to insure effectiveness and uniformity of police services throughout the country. Our provost marshals work very closely with their civil and military counterparts at the local and national levels. Our incorporation of, and participation in, communication networks, police intelligence networks and local police emergency contigency plans helps insure that the criminal finds no haven. You may be assured that the Military Police Corps is a competent, professional and capable law enforcement agency tht can be relied upon as a sturdy cog in the wheel of criminal justice,and can play an effective role in crime prevention, suppression and detection.

Your military police will strive to continuously improve on their ability to provide the finest in service and play a key role in your peace of mind at Fort Benning. (Provost Marshal)

"Crime is not just a police problem. The crime rate is not due to police inadequacy. Crime is the result of inadequate family life, poor schools, evil forces in neighborhood life and the distortions of human personality, discrimination and violations of basic human needs."

Protection Act gives spouses certain rights

Military personnel who have been divorced or are about to retire should familiarize themselves with the Uniformed Services Former Spouses' Protection Act.

Passed by Congress in 1982, the Act authorizes divorced spouses of uniformed service members to receive certain benefits based on the length of the marriage. The Act is based on the premise that spouses, while not a part of the military service, contribute to the servicemember's career.

Certain former spouses are now eligible for benefits similar to those available during the marriage. If not covered by a private insurance plan and unmarried, the former spouse is eligible for medical benefits. Other requirements: the former spouse must have been married to a member who performed 20 years of creditable service and the divorce must have occurred after Feb. 1, 1983.

Former spouses can now be named as beneficiaries on the servicemember's Survivor Benefit Plan. They may also qualify for use of base facilities such as the Exchange system.

A former spouse of a military member can receive direct payments from the member's retired pay for alimony, child support or a division of property if requirements and conditions are met.

Basically, that means the former spouse must have been married to the military member for 10 or more years during which the member performed 10 years or more of creditable service.

When the former or current spouse of a retiree applies for payment from retired pay, the member is advised and asked to verify the information provided by the spouse.

A Department of Defense official says that over 5,000 former spouses of retirees have applied for direct payment from the retiree's pay for alimony, child support or a division of property since Feb. 1, 1983.

Former spouses of members of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Public Health Service, and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration should contact the local personnel office for information concerning how they may qualify for these benefits.

Civil War battle to be reenacted at Andersonville

The Yankees are coming to Andersonville, Georgia, by the hundreds and thousands.

Hundreds are coming to take part in the Andersonville Civil War Battle Reenactment extravaganza on Oct. 6 and 7, and thousands are coming to watch the battle — one of the largest and most realistically staged in the state of Georgia.

More than 300 troops are coming from Illinois, New York, Ohio, Massachusetts and Tennessee. And Confederate troops from Georgia, Florida, Alabama and the Carolinas will be on hand to defend the honor of the South.

Two battles will be staged. The first, at 4:30 p.m., Oct. 6 and the second at 3:30 p.m., Oct. 7. The battles will be staged in Pioneer Park in the Civil War Village of Andersonville, which served in 1864-65 as the supply center for the famous Andersonville Confederate Prison where 45,000 Union soldiers were held captive and where 13,000 perished. Official "observers" from "The London Times," "The New York Times," and from the French and German military will be present to send firsthand on-sight dispatches back to their home bases.

Lanny Haygood of Forsyth, Georgia, Field Commander of the Reenactment of the 10th Georgia Infantry, and Bruce Robertson, 2nd Georgia Cavalry, who are coordinating the staging of the battles, say that about 100 Yankee and Confederate troops will be camped Civil War style in The Village of Andersonville for the entire weekend of Oct. 6 and 7 and will welcome visitors to their campsites.

The battles are a feature of the 9th annual Andersonville Historic fair, the theme of which is Civil War Days.

Part of the one million dollar Drummer Boy Civil War Museum owned by Gerald Lamby of Little Ferry, New Jersey, will be transported from New Jersey to Andersonville especially for exhibit at the festival, and Herb Bridges of Stockbridge will be on hand with his collection of Gone With The Wind memorabilia — the largest privately owned Gone With The Wind collection in the world.

Oldtime craftsmen, in period dress, demonstrating and selling their arts and 200 flea market dealers, selling Civil War artifacts, antiques, and collectibles, will be there.

The annual Andersonville Historic fair is sponsored by The Andersonville Guide and Town Council to support restoration projects in the Village of Andersonville, which recently was the recipient of the prestigious Phoenix Award given by the National Association of Travel Writers for achievements in restoration, beautification and conservation.

AUSA Oktoberfest

The Chattahchee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the U.S. Army will sponsor an Old Style Oktoberfest on Saturday, Nov. 3, beginning at noon at the Columbus Convention and Trade Center. The Oktoberfest will feature the very best in Bavarian music, food, dancing, drink and fun. Admission tickets will go on sale later this month and be available in banks and other businesses, $4 advance purchase and $5 at the gate. Tickets for children under 12 will be $2 in advance and $2:50 at the gate.

Folk festival

For the fourth time since 1981, regional folk musicians, traditional artisans, and preparers of ethnic and "down-home" foods will gather at the Chattahoochee Promenade in the Columbus Historic District for the Columbus Museum's annual Chattahoochee Folk Festival, Sept. 29-30.

Beginning at 11 a.m. each day, the free event will feature three stages of continuous music lasting until 6:30 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday.

Those interested in participating in festival workshops should bring along their fiddles, guitars, banjos, dulcimers or harmonicas for some firsthand pointers from the experts.

Admission to all events is free. For more information, contact Fred Fussell, festival director, Columbus Museum of Arts and Sciences at 323-3617.

Holiday brings repentance parables

Chaplain Dennis Beck-Berman

Parables about repentance are traditionally told on Rosh Hashanah, which is celebrated today. On the New Year's Day of the Hebrew Bible, also called the Birthday of the World, Jews throughout the world unite in prayer, penitence and hope for a better world.

One famous preacher frequently exhorted his hearers to perform their devotions on the High Holy Days with understanding and reverence and not by rote. He reminded them that fulfilling the rituals was a means to a higher end, namely, to achieve an inner purification. He used to relate this parable to make his point:

A naive villager, born and reared in the country, came to a big city for the first time and spent the night in an inn. Awakened in the middle of the night by the loud beating of drums, he inquired drowsily, "What's this all about?" Informed that a fire had broken out and that the drum beating was the city's fire alarm, he turned over and went back to sleep.

When he returned home he told the village elders about the wonderful system in the big city: when a fire breaks out the people beat their drums and before long the fire burns out. All excited, they ordered a supply of drums and distributed them to all the villagers. When a fire broke out later, there was a deafening explosion of beating drums and while the people waited expectantly for the flames to subside, a number of their homes burned to the ground.

A sophisticated visitor passing through that village, when told the reason for the ear-splitting din, chided the simplistic people: "Fools! Do you think a fire can be put out by beating drums? They only sound the alarm for people to wake up and take measures to extinguish the fire."

This parable, explained the preacher, applies to those of us who believe that beating the breast and raising our voices during worship, and blowing the shofar, the ram's horn, will put out the fires of sin that burn in us.

It is only an alarm and a warning to wake up and begin the process of soul-searching and repentance.

"It is only an alarm and a warning to wake up and begin the process of soul-searching and repentance."

Chapel briefs

Protestant women

The October meeting for the Protestant Women of the Chapel will be Monday, Oct. 1, at 9:30 a.m. in the TIC Chapel Center.

Charlotte Brown of Montgomery, Ala., will be the speaker. Free babysitting is available in building 2619. For additional information call the TIC Chapel at 545-2050.

Jewish services

Yom Kippur (Day of Atonement) begins at sunset Friday, Oct. 5, and ends Saturday night, Oct. 6. Services will be held at The Infantry Center Chapel Annex, next door to the Main Post Protestant Chapel off Sigerfoos Road, at the following times:

Friday, Oct. 5 - 7 p.m.

Saturday, Oct. 6 - 10 a.m. and 6:30 p.m.

First Friday mass

For the month of October the Catholic Women of the Chapel will be celebrating a home Mass on Friday evening. On Oct. 5 it will be at 122-A Zuckerman Street on Main Post. The service will begin with the rosary at 7:30 p.m., followed by mass and an audio presentation of "The Holy Land."

Free nursery services will be provided by Tot Town. Please make your own reservation. Husbands as well as all of the women in the community are invited to attend.The dress is casual. Please join us! For information call 687-8839.

S-T-E-P

S-T-E-P ("Systematic Training for Effective Parenting") is a study group to help parents learn more effective ways of relating to their children by focusing on the purposes of behavior.

The class will meet every Thursday evening for nine weeks, beginning on Oct. 11. Sessions will last from 7:30 to 9 p.m. in the Family Life Center, building 2606 (upstairs) on Dixie Road. Jane Prouty will be the group facilitator.

The maximum size of the group is 15 persons. It is not necesarry for both parents to attend, but it is highly recommended. Registration deadline is Oct. 8.

There will be a minimal charge to defray cost of parent handbooks. Free babysitting will be provided.

For registration/information call 545-1760/5301.

Catholic Mass

Beginning Sunday, Sept. 30, mass at the Main Post Catholic Chapel will be at 9 and 11 a.m. The 8 a.m. mass will be cancelled.

Plants needed

The renovated Family Life Center would appreciate donations of house plants. If you are moving and must get rid of your plants, or if you have too many for your living space, please call Chris Adkins at 867-1857.

Volunteers needed

Some volunteer positions available now are translators, receptionists, thrift shop volunteers, budget counselor, various environmental and historical positions, computer operator, tour guides, Red Cross, vet clinic, exceptional family member and CARE. For more information, call the Volunteer Resource Center at 545-5602.

'The Dameans'

A concert featuring the music of the Dameans will be held this evening at 7:30 p.m. at St. Anne's Church in Columbus (3800 Woodmont Drive).

The Dameans use their music as an expression of their own faith and as an important means of spreading the Good News. The public is invited to this concert. Tickets are $5 for adults and $3 for children. For further information call 544-3305.

Books needed

The Main Post Library is requesting paperback book donations for the Oct. 13 MSAD Volksmarch.

Scholarship

Troy State University is offering the Lloyd Dean Hightower Scholarship which can only be used at the Troy State Fort Benning Branch. The scholarship is named in honor of SFC Lloyd Dean Hightower who died in October 1983 and who received a Master's degree from Troy State posthumously.

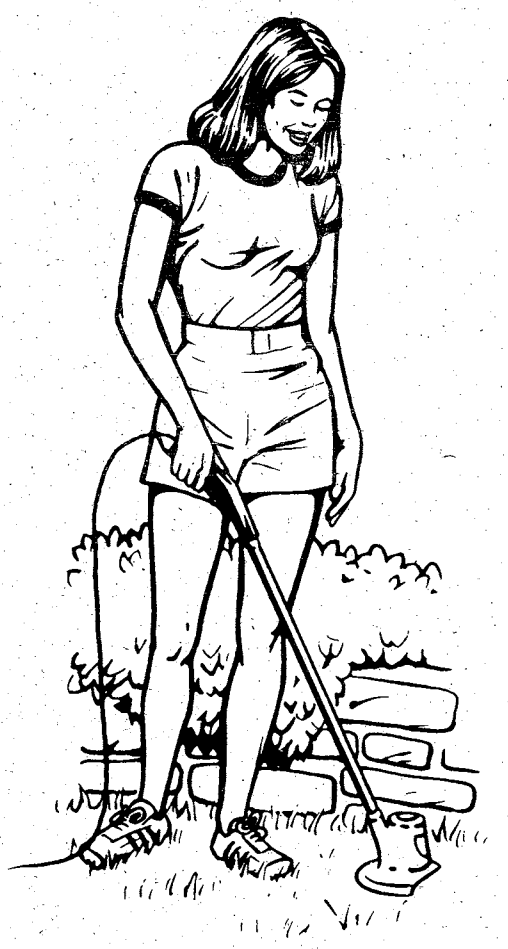
The scholarship provides tuition for one academic year and can begin with any academic quarter. Those applying for the scholarship must be a high school graduate, a GED, or be enrolled in an undergraduate program and not academically dismissed from any other undergraduate program. They must also be a dependent of an active duty or a retired NCO (E5-E9) and live within a 50-mile radius of Fort Benning.

Applicants are required to write a letter to the Sergeants Major Association, formally requesting consideration for the scholarship, including highlights of the applicant's academic career and extracurricular activities. The letter should also include an explanation by the applicant as to why he/she should be selected to receive the scholarship.

The following should accompany the letter: a copy of high school transcripts, (college transcript if currently enrolled), three letters of recommendation with one from a high school prinicipal or high school guidance counsellor, if practical, and a statement of employment indicating applicant's employer, address and job title.

Selection for the scholarship will not be dependent upon economic need alone. Each applicant will be judged on citizenship, high school (college) grades, individual skills, and school and community activities. There will be no discrimination on the basis of sex, race, national origin, handicap or marital status.

Applications must be submitted to Jim Gallagher, CATD, USAIS, room 347, Infantry Hall, Fort Benning, Ga., no later than Nov. 1. For more information, call him at 545-7162.



Clean-up

Bouton Heights/Davis Hill will hold a community clean-up campaign Monday through Wednesday. Special attention should be given to lawns, edging, cans and trash being removed from curbs. An inspection will be made Wednesday.

Planning is key to handling your finances well

You're an unusual person. You chose a job that will mean many moves. You're a soldier.

You may at times be located a long way from the people with whom you have personal business. You have an obligation to take care of your business, especially financial, no matter where you are.

Handling your financial matters with care looks good for you and also reflects well on your fellow soldiers. The more resposible you are, the easier it will be for all of us to get what we want.

You can have nice things, good times, great vacations, and money in the bank if you plan your spending. The key is you can't have everything at once.

If you never seem to have any money left after you pay your bills, you probably need a budget. A budget will show you those things you can afford and those you can't.

The first step is to figure exactly how much your income is. Add your take-home pay, the amount you receive after deductions, and any other income you may have such as investments or 'moonlighting' pay.

You should then figure what you spend on regular, fixed items. These items are things like rent, telephone, utility bills, contributions, major items of clothing, insurance premiums, loan repayments, credit card payments, and taxes. Since some of these items aren't due each month, you should set aside a certain amount to be sure that funds are available when the payments are due.

Next, start an emergency fund. It doesn't have to be a large amount — just enough to fall back on for unexpected expenses.

List your day-to-day expenses such as food, transportation, entertainment, clothing and household expenses. If you are married, have your family members keep track of the money they spend each month.

The last step is to figure out what is left. Add all your expenses, fixed and day-to-day, and subtract the total from your total income. The remaining money can be used for extra savings, investments or a special goal.

If your budget doesn't work out, don't be discouraged. You may have to adjust it a few times to make it easy to live with.

Planning your spending takes a whole new way of thinking. This kind of thinking becomes important when it comes to the little things. The little things you buy every day like sodas, candy, cigarettes, and magazines add up. Before you know it, you'll wonder where all your money went. You may run short a week or so before payday.

Recreation is another little thing that can add up. The money used for a good time is different for each person. Some people may like to bowl or go to the movies. Some like to party all night. Your idea of a good time may be playing tennis. So when thinking about recreation, think about what it costs you to have a good time and how much money you have to do it with.

You may have to learn to say "no" to recreation once in a while. If a friend wants you to go somewhere and you know you've spent all your 'good time' money, don't be embarrassed to say so. Be proud to say your budget won't let you. It's the way to end up with the big things you want. Stick to your goals.

If you need help planning your spending, try your local Army Community Service (ACS). Most ACS offices have full-time financial planning coordinators to help you plan your budget.

A counselor will sit down with you and work out a plan of action that best suits your individual situation. Then it's up to you. Make the most of your money.

Campaign targets pay fraud

Washington — Pay and allowance fraud will be the office of law enforcement's target in the Army's second fraud prevention campaign, Sept. 15 to Oct. 14.

"Pay and allowances constitute a huge portion of the Army budget," said law enforcement officials in explaining the focus of the 1984 campaign. "It is an area that affects everyone in the Army."

Criminal Investigation Command officials who developed the campaign would like to make the total Army community more aware of pay and allowance fraud, to encourage commanders and supervisors to look for and report suspected fraud cases, and to increase detection efforts through entitlement verifications.

A CIDC analysis of 1983 data revealed 357 cases of pay and allowance fraud totaling $837,956. In a related action, the U.S. Army Finance and Accounting Center reported 315 recoupment actions, amounting to more than $1 million.

To accomplish the campaign's objectives, publicity will feature how pay and allowance fraud adversely affects economy and efficiency in the Army, how receiving fraudulent pay and allowances is a crime that could result in confinement, and how pay and allowance fraud may be committed by omission as well as commission.

Board to standardize EER, OER appeals

Washington — Beginning in January 1985, an enlisted special review board will standardize the procedure for both officer and enlisted evaluation report appeals.

The action, implemented at the direction of Army Chief of Staff Gen. John A. Wickham Jr., resulted from the inspector general's recent review of the officer and enlisted evaluation report appeal systems. The study revealed a need for clarification of regulations as well as improved performance counseling by rating oficials.

Under this special review board, both the enlisted and officer review boards will report to one overall president to ensure uniformity of purpose and control. Both boards will process and adjudicate appeals submitted by members of the total Army and will include in their membership representatives from the active and reserve components.

These boards will come under the direct supervision of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel's Director of Military Personnel Management.

In addition, Army Regulation 623-105 (officer) and AR 623-205 (enlisted) will be revised to standardize the appeal procedures for both officers and enlisted soldiers.

Some changes will appear in revised regulations Oct. 1, with other major changes to follow. Among these changes, the revised regulations will tell potential appellants that the office of the local staff judge advocate is available to advise them in preparing appeals.

Instructions to current officer selection boards emphasize that no stigma be attached to rejected OER appeals. Likewise, no adverse inference will be drawn from a document revised or omitted from the Official Military Personnel File because of a successful OER appeal.

Fort Benning units test emergency readiness

By Becky Winters
USAIC Public Affairs Office

"An ammo storage area on Baughman Range just exploded," the caller reported to the emergency room at Martin Army Community Hospital Friday afternoon. The hospital was notified that it could expect multiple casualties.

This information was immediately relayed to the hospital chain of command, which set contingency plans into motion, and the ER dispatched a doctor to the scene by helicopter to immediately begin assessing the extent of injuries.

Fortunately for the 58 "patients" who would be carried into the hospital within the next few hours, the explosion never really occurred. It was all part of an emergency mass casualty exercise conducted by the hospital to test the readiness of Fort Benning medical and emergency personnel.

"We tried to make the exercise as realistic as possible," said Maj. William Jasper, chief of Plans, Operations and Training at MACH. "We assigned each patient specific injuries, and had a nurse at the scene telling the patients what symptoms they should give to the medical personnel."

Realism was also added by the use of moulage, plastic makeup that visually resembles wounds, which was applied to the "victims" by members of the 676th Medical Detachment, 34th Medical Battalion.

Part of the scenario called for assistance from the 2nd Combat Support Hospital, which happened to have a MASH unit undergoing training in the area when the explosion occurred. So half the patients were treated at the field hospital before being transferred to MACH.

"Their scenario was that they were in a combat situation and we were the evacuation hospital to the rear of the combat area," explained Jasper.

The other thirty patients were triaged at the scene by Dr. (Capt.) Jon Wilson who had been flown to the site in a helicopter from the 498th Air Ambulance Company.

Dr. Wilson categorized each victim according to his medical condition. Patients who required immediate treatment to save life or limb were classified as "immediate" and given the highest priority.

Those patients who after emergency care would incur little risk of loss of life or limb by delaying further care were classified as "delayed" and were in the second group to receive treatment.

Lastly, the medical personnel worked on the "expectant" and "minimal" patients. "Expectant" patients were those critically injured who required complex and prolonged treatment to improve their chance of survival, and who had lethal wounds. "Minimal" patients were those whose wounds were not life threatening and these "walking wounded" would be returned to duty after treatment.

The 690th Ambulance Company and the 498th Air Ambulance Company worked to transport the patients to the hospital, where the medical staff was on emergency standby waiting to receive them.

"All patients had arrived at the hospital by 4 p.m., which was a good response time," said Jasper.

The "patients" were trainees from B Company, 8th Battalion, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade.

MACH is required to conduct two mass casualty exercises each year to test its emergency preparedness plan, in order to maintain the hospital's accreditation by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals, Jasper said.

Did MACH pass the "test?" "We did real well," Jasper said. "We found several minor areas that needed improvement and those improvements will be made. That was one of the main purposes of the exercise, to find out where our system can be improved, and on that basis the test was definitely a success."

"This information was immediately relayed to the hospital chain of command, which set contingency plans into motion, and the ER dispatched a doctor to the scene by helicopter to immediately begin assessing the extent of injuries."

Suggestions can help VDT users lessen eye strain

By Steve Miller
Stripe newspaper

In today's computer world, the applications of computer technology and the accompanying use of video display terminals (VDTs) are revolutionizing the American workplace, and in all likelihood, VDT use will continue to grow rapidly in the future.

While this may mean important gains for American industry and business, VDTs are not problem-free. Health complaints connected with VDT use have cropped up, and by far, most are associated with the eyes and vision, according to the American Optometric Association (AOA).

Human eyes can see most efficiently at a far distance, a skill that met the needs of hunters and farmers in earlier generations. VDT use, on the other hand, calls for intense concentration on a task close at hand, usually only a couple of feet away or less.

When the eyes change their focus from far to near, several different muscles are used. A muscle inside the eye changes the shape of the eye's lens to focus sharply and clearly on the VDT screen. Other muscles turn the two eyes inward, pointing them together at the same character on the screen, while some muscles move the eyes quickly from one character or word to another.

Over time this change can cause problems for the VDT operator if no precautions or protective action is taken. The most common complaints of VDT operators include headaches, blurred vision, itching and burning eyes, eye fatigue, flickering sensations and double vision.

"The problems people encounter are caused primarily because the image on most VDT screens isn't as sharp or as crisp as if you were reading a book. In trying to get a sharp view of what the screen says, people try too hard to focus on the VDT image," said Col. Paul Whitmore, chief of the Ophthalmology Service at Walter Reed.

According to the AOA, controlling room lighting and VDT glare can make a difference, but so can a person's posture and positioning of the reference material or even the furniture.

Here are some suggestions to consider to help improve your operation of the VDT:

- Adjustable chairs can be a vision aid by enabling the user to sit at the proper angle to the VDT screen. Generally, the top of the VDT screen should be 10 degrees and the center of the screen 20 degrees below the user's straight ahead seeing position. The appropriate distance from the viewer's eyes to the sceen should be approximately 14 to 20 inches.
- Place reference material as close to the VDT screen as possible to avoid frequent large eye and head movements.
- Place the material the same distance from the eyes as the VDT screen to avoid having to change focus when looking from one to another. Every time the eye's focus is changed, it requires muscles to work inside the eye. Frequent changes may cause one to feel tired.

The following lighting and glare control recommendations are designed to maximize comfort, accuracy and productivity and to minimize eye fatigue and other complaints.

- Lighting needs vary with individuals, but generally, overall illumination for VDT operation should be less than the customary office lighting level. VDT screen brightness should be three or four times greater than general room light.

"Proper lighting is very important," Col. Whitmore related. "It's possible to have too much light and that's worse than too lit-

NCO's who are good drivers...

GEICO'S JIM IRVIN COULD SAVE YOU $100 ON CAR INSURANCE.

ATTENTION NCOs!
There's money waiting for you just outside your base. It's the money you could save on car insurance by visiting your local GEICO office.

How much money? Many NCOs save $50, $75, $100 or more. Some actually save hundreds of dollars. And all it takes is 10 minutes at your local GEICO office to find out how much you might save.

HOW CAN GEICO SAVE YOU SO MUCH MONEY?
By insuring good drivers and lowering our sales costs. Doing business with good drivers lets us reduce your premium. GEICO also gives you 12-month protection against rate increases. And you may spread as many as nine easy payments over the year.

DOES GEICO GIVE YOU THE SAME SERVICE AS OTHER COMPANIES?
No, we give you better service. Because you can call us 24 hours a day, for any reason. So, if you're working odd hours or a TDY assignment comes up, there's no hassle. All it takes is a phone call.

And there's no hassle if you have an accident.

Because GEICO has thousands of claim representatives around the country and overseas.

Even if you're transferred to Germany, there's still no hassle. You can have insurance waiting for you when you get there. And if you'd rather store your car in the states, you'll get a lower rate until you come home.

DOES GEICO INSURE A LOT OF NCOs?
Since 1936, GEICO has specialized in providing low-cost, high-quality insurance for hundreds of thousands of NCOs. And we have over 1,200,000 satisfied policyholders.

New Benning program's aim to halt DUI offenses

By Connie Dickey
USAIC Public Affairs Office

As part of National Drug Prevention Week, Fort Benning has started a prevention program to help stop DUI offenses.

Dr. Tom Tennent, program director of the alcohol and drug control office (ADCO), and Barney Cavanaugh, ADCO education coordinator, have begun the program which starts today.

"We found we have three goals," Tennent said. "Everyone has to have the facts, the commanders have to be involved and committed, and we have to get people to accept the fact that it could happen to them."

Cavanaugh explained that the 'it can't happen to me' attitude is the biggest stumbling block to a DUI prevention program, but it can happen easier than soldiers like to think.

"We hear the standard excuses, like I was almost home and I only had a couple of drinks. But it doesn't take much," Cavanaugh said.

He is in charge of the two and a half hour lecture/tape program and is taking it around post starting from the top of the chain of command on down. The 2/69th Armor Battalion, 197th Infantry Brigade, is the first to receive the program. "All of October I will be with the Army Training Center and then I'll be working with The School Brigade to incorporate this class into the schedule of courses taught here. We want to hit everyone on post," he said.

The target group for the program is E-1s through E-4s. "We have found that the DUI offenses seem to happen more in these ranks than any of the others," Tennent said.

According to the Military Police Activity, there have been 440 DUIs on post since Jan. 1; 384 enlisted, 16 officers and 40 civilians. "In eight months, one out of 25 soldiers in the 197th Infantry Brigade was involved in a DUI," Tennent explained. "We want to educate the younger soldiers and make them think how to prevent a DUI."

During the lecture, Cavanaugh brings out basic facts about alcohol and the physical and psychological effects it has on an intoxicated person. "It doesn't take a lot and we don't want soldiers ruining their lives or careers because of a DUI," he said.

Besides gambling with their lives and careers, soldiers may have to pay more money than they can afford. Cavanaugh explained that a Fort Benning soldier recently was arrested in Columbus on a DUI. Including fines and attorney fees, the soldier had to pay $2,323. He only drank a six-pack of beer—that's about $387 a can.

"We also try to get the soldiers to plan in advance what they are going to do, like using the buddy system. If one person decides he isn't going to drink, he can drive while the others party. A person can remember to eat before drinking and a group of soldiers can take a cab.

"From Fort Benning to the farthest point in Columbus, a cab costs only $15. That beats the average $350 fine for a DUI," Cavanaugh said.

Besides educating the soldiers, ADCO will be teaching the bartenders in the club system prevention also. "From Oct. 9 through Oct. 11, the bartenders will be attending ASIP—alcohol servers intervention program. We will teach them the physical effects of alcohol and put them in small groups where they are given situations and will have to handle them," Cavanaugh said.

"We can't scare anyone into thinking about prevention. We have to make people believe it can happen to them, and then they will have to learn how to take actions to prevent it from happening," Tennent said.

VA Q and A

Editor's note: Following are representative questions answered daily by VA counselors. Full information is available at any VA office.

Q — I am enrolled in a VA-sponsored on-the-job training program with a local employer. He is paying me a trainee wage and the VA is also authorizing a training allowance. Upon completion of my program will I receive any extra employment allowance from the VA?

A — No. Upon completion of the OJT program you should become a full-time employee with the firm, having progressed to the journeyman level.

C-10-2 soldiers test skills at Infantry Squad Mission Course

By Connie Dickey
USAIC Public Affairs Office

This week Charlie Company, 10th Battalion, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade, got a chance to put their 10 weeks of training to use. They were at Infantry Squad Missions (ISM), McBride's Bridge.

"These soldiers have been building up to this. They've gone from individual training to a team effort. This is an extended course to see how far they've come," SFC D.A. James, NCOIC of ISM, explained.

The soldiers go through five ranges as part of their squad tactical training. At AO Yellow and Green they are taught movement techniques. At ISM the soldiers learn to move as a fire team and squad through obstacles and opposing aggressors. Here they also contend with different types of terrain, like wooded areas, open fields and crossing a river.

From ISM the soldiers go to Malone 22 for live fire, Malone 26 for night fire and last to patrolling.

"Each of the squads are broken into an Alpha team and a Bravo team and have to move around the course. It usually takes about two hours to complete it," James said. "One of the instructors becomes a squad leader with each team and moves them through the course."

One of the objectives of the course is to get the soldiers used to working as a team. It challenges the mobility of the Infantry soldiers as they maneuver through different terrain and figure out what to do in each situation, James said.

The soldiers start the course by going through two danger areas of open fields, then they come upon an abandoned radar site. "They have to make mental notes of what they see so a SALUTE report can be given to their squad leader," James said. The site has a 60 foot by 12 foot trailor, trucks, jeeps, buildings and a Cobra gunship.

From there the soldiers encounter a sniper, have to fortify a bunker full of aggressors, conduct a river crossing, come into a contaminated area, assault an enemy headquarters building and perform a slide-for-life.

"The soldiers critique themselves after each movement. They begin to open up and start thinking, 'what if' and 'I can do this.' Infantry soldiers are not dumb. They come up with solutions," James is quick to point out.

Safety plays a big role on the course too. A safety briefing is given to the group as a whole and the NCO/squad leader is on the lookout for safety hazards during the course. Also, drill sergeants from the company work with the instructors to promote safety at the river crossing and the slide-for-life.

Article helps explain Leave and Earnings Statement

As a soldier, one of the most important pieces of paper you'll receive each month is your Leave and Earnings Statement (LES). The LES provides you with a tool to check your pay, taxes, allotments, and leave totals.

The LES is read as follows:

• Blocks 1-5, Identification. Soldier's name, unit ID code, pay grade, period covered by pay, and Social Security number. The "v" in the next block shows that your Social Security Account Number (SSAN) was verified by the Social Security Administration (SSA) and the Military Personnel Center (MILPERCEN).

• Block 6, Entitlements. Basic pay, separate rations, quarters allowance, variable housing allowance, rebate, and hazardous duty pay entitlement during the pay period. The total is at the bottom and in Block 10.
