Keirsey Replaces Read As Center Chief of Staff

Col. Jim D. Keirsey, commander of The Student Brigade, today becomes Infantry Center chief of staff.

He replaces Col. B. M. Read who is leaving here for an assignment in Vietnam.

Col. Lou D. Marlowe Jr., director of The Infantry School's Office of Doctrine, Development, Literature and Plans since July, takes over the job of TSB commander.

Col. Keirsey has over 23 years service, having entered the Army as an enlisted man in September, 1940. He received a direct commission less than one year later.

During WW II he served in the European Theatre of Opeations with the 45th Div.

Col. Keirsey's Vietnam service was as senior advisor to the 21st Div. of the Army of the Republic of Vietnam.

Among his awards and decorations are the Silver Star Medal with two Oak Leaf Clusters, Legion of Merit, Bronze Star Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster, and the Army Air Medal with six Oak Leaf Clusters.

They have four children, Dan, 22, Kent 19, Kristen 17, and Hank 14.

Prior to coming to Fort Benning to assume command of TSB in August 1968, he was assigned to Fort Belvoir, Va., where he served as commander of the Combat Support Group, Combat Developments Command.

Col. Read came here in October, 1967 to become deputy assistant commandant of The Infantry School. He became chief of staff last June.

Col. Read's assignment in Vietnam will be as operations and training officer for the U. S. Army, Vietnam (G-3 USARV).

Col. Marlowe, a native of St. Louis, entered active service in 1942 after serving several years as a reserve officer.

He is married to the former Miriam Printy of St. Louis, and is the father of one son and five daughters.

NCO's Son Wins First-Baby Prize

By Spec. 4 Frank Truchon

Fort Benning's first baby of 1969 was a big one, born to the wife of a supply sergeant just 20 minutes after the new year began.

The baby boy, whose parents are Sgt. and Mrs. William J. Connolly Jr. of 2016 Victory Drive, weighed eight pounds, 11½ ounces. Although the parents were expecting a girl, they quickly named their son William John Connolly III.

Sgt. Connolly is a member of the 536th Light Maintenance Co., but is expecting a transfer soon to USARAL Headquarters in Alaska, where he will work in the office of engineering.

The timely arrival of young William at Martin Army Hospital earned him a $100 prize from the National Bank of Fort Benning in the bank's annual "first-baby" contest. The baby also qualified as the first in Muscogee and Russell Counties.

News of his son's birth came to Sgt. Connolly from a neighbor, S.Sgt. George Arthur of Greenbriar Drive. When Mrs. Connolly reported to the hospital, Connolly was sent back to his home, where there is no telephone.

At 1:30 a.m. Wednesday, the call came to Arthur's home, and he quickly relayed the news.

The mother is the former Sandralee Swiger of Weirton, W.Va., who observed her 27th birthday on Christmas Day.

She had first expected the birth on Dec. 11, and then thought it might occur around Christmas. "When she

Hotel Gives Six a Free Vacation

Six Fort Benning soldiers, all Purple Heart winners in Vietnam, are still saying "unbelievable" to describe their surprise Christmas vacation.

The six enlisted men spent three nights in one of Atlanta's most luxurious hotels, getting everything free. And they still don't know how they were selected.

Host for the six was the Regency-Hyatt House, which provided free food and drink for the surprised soldiers, too.

"I was amazed," said Sgt. Edwin D. Dennis of Co. D, 43rd Engr. Bn., CTC. "We got everything we wanted from the hotel. Three meals a day...as many meals as we wanted. Even free laundry service."

Other Fort Benning soldiers spending Dec. 24-26 at the hotel were Spec. 5 John R. Griffith, 181st Avn. Co., 10th Avn. Gp.; Sgt. Robert Currier, Company Ops. Dept., USAIS; Spec. 4 Charles Bates, Hq., 197th Support Bn.; Sgt. Bobby Reynolds, Co. B, 5th Ba., 1st Bde., ATC, and Spec. 5 John H. Thomstatter, Lawson Army Avn. Command.

"There were no restrictions on us whatsoever," said Griffith.

Arrangements for the free stay were made through Third Army and Connolly, who has been at Fort Benning for six years, is a 26-year-old native of Richmond, Calif.

Mrs. Connolly and young William will be released from the hospital on Saturday. The family expects to leave for Alaska in about four weeks.

Lt. Col. Louis H. Boettcher, formerly assigned as chief of Doctrine and Review, Brigade and Battalion Operations Dept., replaces Col. Marlowe as ODDLP director.

Lt. Col. Marshall G. Engle has been name to replace Boettcher at BBOD.

McCrary Named ATC Assistant

Lt. Col. Earl C. McCrary, a native of Tifton, Ga., whose only previous Fort Benning assignment was with the 3rd Inf. Div. in 1950, has been named special assistant to the Army Training Center deputy commander.

Commissioned through Fort Riley's Officer Candidate School, he has served overseas in Germany, Korea, Canal Zone and Vietnam.

Kurtz Takes Command Of 931st Engineers

Lt. Col. Maurice K. Kurtz, former commander of the 43rd Engineer Bn., assumed command of the 931st Engineer Gp., CPC, in a small ceremony Tuesday.

Kurtz took command from Col. George A. Austin Jr., who plans to take leave before retiring in March. He plans to settle in the Atlanta area.

The new group commander is a graduate of West Point and received a master of science degree in structural dynamics from the University of Illinois. He has completed the Engineer Officers' Advanced Course, and attended the Command and General Staff College.

He has been awarded the Army Commendation Medal for service with the U.S. Army Nuclear Cratering Group. He was deputy director, acting director and later director of the Cratering Group from August, 1965 until January, 1968.

While the Cratering Group supported Atlantic-Pacific Canal Study, Kurtz was responsible for the preparation of nuclear engineering designs for sea-level canals in the Isthmian region of Central America.

Among his other accomplishments, he was mainly responsible for the preparation and editing of the exhaustive study entitled "Military Engineering with Nuclear Explosives."

The study, published by the Nuclear Cratering Group in June 1966, contains detailed information concerning cratering with nuclear explosives and assorted hazards, as well as techniques for using nuclear explosives for practical military engineering and construction.

Kurtz received prior nuclear experience at the U. S. Army Engineering Research and Development Laboratories, Office of the Chief of Engineers, and Headquarters, Army Materiel Command.

He received his commission from Auburn University in 1942, when he was graduated with a bachelor of science degree in civil engineering.

Board Cites 3 Civilians

Col. James I. Muir Jr., Infantry Board president, made the presentations.

Mrs. Roberts, a typing clerk in the Management and Budget Div., was officially commended for outstanding and sustained superior performance of her duties.

In addition to her certificate of commendation, Mrs. Roberts was presented a cash award.

What are the criteria for earning the CIB in South Korea?

The Combat Infantry Badge can be awarded in South Korea if an individual meets certain conditions. To begin with, he must serve in the designated Korean hostile fire area at least 60 days and must be authorized hostile fire pay.

He must be assigned to an Infantry unit of company or smaller size. Officers may not receive the award if they are no higher than the rank of captain. Warrant officers and enlisted men must have Infantry MOS. Officers of other branches who command company size units or below may qualify if they meet the rest of the requirements.

Soldiers must have engaged the enemy in firefights in a hostile fire zone or in active ground combat "at least five times."

Recommendations for the award must be approved at division level. There are exceptions to the general requirements for those who are killed or wounded.

The new criteria are now in effect.

VIETNAM AWARDS

How many awards have been made in Vietnam to date? What is the most common award?

Approximately 750,000 awards have been made to U.S. soldiers for combat zone service from 1963 through mid-1968. At the current level of awards, about 33,000 a month, the one million mark should be reached early this year.

The most common award has been the Air Medal with 373,000 awarded up to July 1, 1968. Bronze Stars, Commendation Medals, and Purple Hearts, through July 1, 1968, all ran a close race for second place with approximately 115,000 each through mid-1968.

Pay Increase

How much has the military received in pay increases in the last six or seven years?

Since 1962 military pay has been increased 30 on the average or 40 per cent.

Taxes Going Up

Are my social security taxes going up this year? If so how much?

Effective Jan. 1, 1969 the Federal Insurance Contribution Tax deduction rate increased from 4.4 per cent to 4.8 per cent. The percentage rate of tax deduction will reach 5.2 per cent under the current law in the 1971-72 calendar year.

The maximum tax contribution for 1969-70 will be $374.40 and in 1971-72 the amount will be raised to $405.60.

Medical Education

Does the Army have a program available through which I can obtain a medical degree?

Regular Army Officers who have less than three years active duty and who will be under 28 on May 1, 1969 and have an intense interest in pursuing an education in medicine, dentistry, or veterinary medicine beginning in 1970 should submit their applications through channels.

Your application should cite as a reference DA message 691006 and should reach Headquarters, Department of the Army, no later than January 15, 1969.

Conditional letters of acceptance to a professional school may be submitted directly to the Surgeon General, ATTN: MEDPT-MP, Department of the Army, Washington, D. C. 20315.

Distinguished Military Graduates from ROTC are also encouraged to apply.

Additional details may be obtained from the director of Personnel at 545-2501.

"Duty — Honor — Country. Those three hallowed years reverently dictate what you ought to be, what you can be, what you will be. They are your rallying points: to build courage when courage seems to fail; to regain faith when there seems to be little cause for faith; to create hope when hope becomes forlorn."

General of the Army, May 12, 1962

From the plane to apollo in only one man's lifetime

Live television seen from 230,000 miles deep in space from a space ship, the Apollo 8, heading towards the moon, at speeds up to 25,000 miles an hour. Unreal as it seems millions of people throughout the world watched and heard three American astronauts slip through the void of space toward the moon.

At 7:51 a.m. eastern standard time the Saturn 5, America's biggest rocket, lifted Col. Frank Borman of the Air Force, Maj. William A. Anders, also of the Air Force, and Capt. James A. Lovell Jr. of the Navy, on their history making journey.

Their trip was near perfect from lift off to splash down. The world hailed the achievement as an advance of American science and technology.

Christmas Eve Apollo 8 reached its destination and orbited around the moon 10 times Christmas Day before returning to Earth.

In none of the previous 17 flights were the problems of propulsion, navigation, communications and tracking as complicated as in this mission, yet, few achieved the degree of accuracy and timing.

The accomplishments were many. The crew took over 1,000 still photographs and color films of the journey and the moon, the hidden side was mapped, landing sites for future astronauts were surveyed and close up television pictures wee provided to the world. We learned to deal with the interplay of gravitational forces in space, the Saturn 5 rocket proved itself, the navigational techniques worked perfectly, deep space radio links worked well, and finally man proved he is able to function in space.

Scientists estimate man will land on the moon by July or August of this year.

How far man has come in the lifetime of a single individual. Many who watched the live pictures on their television sets were born before man even knew how to fly. Now, they will see man step onto the surface of an alien world and look up into the sky and see—the Earth.

General guidelines provided for proper care of puppies

Many calls are received by the Office of the Post veterinarian concerning the care of young and orphaned puppies. The following may be used as a general guideline. Three basic principles are involved: (1) environment (2) nutritionally adequate formula and (3) good management.

When considering environment, temperature, isolation and freedom from disturbance all are important. During the first week of life a temperature of 85 to 90 F. is desirable. This can be gradually reduced to 80 F. during the second week and gradually reduced further to 75 F by the fourth week of age.

To achieve these tempratures, a light such as in an incubator can be used or a heating pad is also suitable The puppy should be confined to a relatively small area and disturbed as little as possible during the first few weeks of life.

During the first two to three weeks of life the puppy may be maintained on a commercial milk replacer for human infants or on a formula made as follows:

Evaporated Milk 4 oz.
Water 4 oz.
Karo Syrup ½ oz.
Egg Yolk 1
Vitamins
Warm to body temperature

The puppy should not be maintained on homogenized milk under any circumstances at this early age. Should the above preparations cause the puppy to have diarrhea or become constipated a veterinarian should be contacted. The puppy should be fed these formulas in small quantities several times per day depending upon its size.

At two to three weeks of age pablum can be mixed with the formula. During the fourth week a good quality dog food can gradually replace the Palbum until the fifth week when the pablum can be replaced completely and the formula may be replaced with reconstituted evaporated milk.

Management of the puppy is also very important in that the newborn puppy will not have the ability to evacuate the bowel or urinary bladder during the first few weeks of life without stimulation. The mother normally provides necessary stimulation by licking the puppy.

Honor and integrity is the Army's foundation

All enduring structures are built on firm and lasting foundations comprised of many elements. Our American military establishment is such a structure—built of strong material, remodeled and modernized when necessary, and resting solidly on a foundation of honor and integrity.

These words represent standards of conduct and performance of duty spanning the history of our nation as well as the history of each branch of the armed forces.

Unfortunately the ideals represented by these two words—honor and integrity—are too often overlooked, sometimes misunderstood and frequently ridiculed. Far too many people look upon these ideals as outmoded—useless carry-overs from a past era.

Too many Americans have adopted the "hooray for me, the devil with you" outlook. They are more interested in feathering their own nests at the expense of others than in performing honorable service in their particular jobs or professions.

Fortunately, the hallmark of the military man is his honor and integrity. If there is any doubt, leaf through the pages of history and recall such places as Valley Forge, Gettysburg, Belleau Wood, Midway, Bastogne, Iwo Jima, Chosen Reservoir, Hill 811 and Khe Sanh.

It is not in the makeup of a military man to gain personal advantage at the expense of his comrades, to shirk his duty or to seek the easy way out at the expense of his assigned mission.

The greatness and success of America's armed forces do not lie solely in our superior weapons, logistic capability or masses of men. The greatness and success have come from the individuals who have served with honor and integrity.

For as long as we have men wearing the uniform of our country to whom honor and integrity are a way of life rather than mere words, our military structure will remain strong and secure.

Your honor and your integrity are your most cherished possessions—the mark of a true man. Guard them well and never let them be compromised. (AFPS)

Waiting Wives Help South Vietnamese Orphans

Over a thousand Vietnamese children in a dozen orphanages have been helped by the Waiting Wives' Club of the Armed Forces YMCA during the past year.

The Waiting Wives have sent clothing, soap, candy, and other articles to various orphanages run by the Catholic Church, Christian Missionary Alliance, American Army units and others in coordonation with the Chaplain's Office on post.

"This is only one of the numerous projects our organization engages in," said Mrs. Jack M. Thornton, club adviser. "In additin, we work with the Salvation Army, Vietnam Mail Call and the summer Fresh Air Camps."

Over the holidays they collected and made additional goods to send to Vietnam and sponsored a party with refreshments and toys for the Salvation Army to distribute to the needy.

The main project for 1969 is making up arts and craft kits for 100 boys and girls who take part in the Salvation Army's Fresh Air Camps.

"We have to start now so the kits will be ready in June," said Mrs. Thornton.

The members not only help others but help each other. The Waiting Wives provides women in the area whose husbands are overseas an opportunity to meet others with similar problems. In many cases those with a problem can be helped by someone in the group who has experienced a similar problem.

The club meets every Wednesday morning from 9:30 to 11:30 at the Armed Forces YMCA at 14 West 11th St. in downtown Columbus. The only charge is a baby sitter provided by collection to pay the fee for the AFYMCA.

Allies See Ranger Show At Victory Lodge Outing

After watching displays of rapelling and other mountain climbing techniques, hand to hand combat and the rope drop, the spectators saw Maj. Raymond R. Rau, a Ranger and chief of ASTD, perform the "slide for life" into the Victory Lodge lake.

Seconds before he hit the water, a detonating cord just beneath the surface exploded, and pushed up a huge wave which carried him to shore.

Afterwards, the crowd moved into the lodge for a traditional beef barbecue. The international gathering included professional soldiers from over 35 countries including Vietnam, Thailand and several European and South American countries.

49ers Fete Scheduled

The Daughters of the United States Army are planning what they hope will be the biggest and gayest party of the year Fe. 8, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

The Main Officers Club will become the Gold Nugget Saloon, complete with games, dance halls and chuch wagon chow, reflecting the gold mining towns of California in 1849.

Proceeds will go to the Tot Town Nursery and national scholarship funds.

The local Columbus scholarship is available to a daughter of a retired or deceased Army officer. The scholarship was established in memory of Maj. Gen. Charles D. Roberts, whose wife founded DUSA in 1929.

Military support for the 49'er party is provided by units who are represented on party committees by military coordinators.

Lt. Col. Frank J. Spettel, 1st Bde. executive officer, ATC, is chief military coordinator working with Mrs. Robert Beideman, DUSA 49'er chairman.

Tickets are available throughout the month of January to MOOM members, and may be purchased at the Main Officers Club and through major unit representatives. Tot Town Nursery will extend its hours until 2:30 a.m. for the evening of the party.

Nurses to Meet At Hospital

The regular monthly meeting of the Fort Benning Registered Nurses Association will be held Monday at 9:30 a.m. in the second floor conference room of Martin Army Hospital.

The program will consist of a demonstration in the art of self defense as applicable to nurses.

Giving the demonstration will be S-Sgt James Devine, who has recently returned from a tour of duty in Vietnam. He will be assisted by Mrs. Carol Wade.

Additional information about the meeting and the organization may be obtained from the chairman by telephoning 689-2213.

For ATC Officers, Wives

2nd Bde. Holds Formal

The holiday season was initiated by the officers and ladies of the 2nd Bde., ATC, with a formal dinner-dance at the Main Officers' Club.

Twinkling lights on the Christmas tree and other festive decorations set the scene as the guests were received by Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Oscar E. Davis, Col. and Mrs. Francisco J. Ramos, Col. and Mrs. Herbert G. Peabody and Col. and Mrs. Galen C. Morey.

COL. PEABODY GREETS MRS. J. M. MORRIS
Mrs. Oscar Davis Is at Colonel's Right

Maj. Bartolo Diaz and Maj. James L. Haygood were the project officers for the affair, sponsored by the 6th Bn.

The Infantry Chorus, under the direction of 1st Lt. William J. Tuttle, presented a holiday program that included their rendition of "The Saints Go Marching On" as it would be sung in several different countries.

Col. Ramos bid farewell to Lt. Col. and Mrs. James M. Morris, Maj. and Mrs. Haygood, Capt. and Mrs. Donald J. Graham, Capt. and Mrs. Thomas H. Duval, Capt. and Mrs. James W. Lee, Lt. and Mrs. Ronald R. Miller, Lt. and Mrs Gerald A. Sheffield and Lt. and Mrs. Philip G. True.

Dear Community Service

My husband is in Vietnam and I get an allotment of $250.00 each month. I am having trouble making my check cover all of my expenses and bills. I have told my husband that I can't keep our three children in school clothing, make house payments, buy food and pay our bills unless he can send me more money. As far as I know he has no other obligations. My husband is an E-6 with 19 years service. Can you tell me how much money he makes and maybe assist me with my problem?

Worried Wife

Dear Worried:

First you should visit us at Building No. 5, Main Post, Fort Benning. Of course we would need much more information before we could advise you. It appears that your allotment could be increased considering your husband's grade and length of service. Only you and your husband know all of your financial and marital circumstances. We can advise you of the amount of money your husband receives and can write through his commander requesting investigation of his current pay status. While this is being done you may talk to one of our financial management counselors to see if your bill payment schedule can be better organized.

GEN. WRIGHT, L, EXAMINES NEW CONSOLE AT MARS STATION
Reviewing Equipment With Him Is Spec. 6 Oliver Sarvis

MARS Station Hooks Up Soldier Caller With Home

By Bill Hardin

One of the best known amateur radio operators here cut the ribbon to officially open the new Military Affiliate Radio System (MARS) station at Fort Benning.

Following the ribbon cutting, Gen. Wright toured the facility which boasts several thousand dollars worth of new radio equipment to compliment other equipment which has been used for some time in the local station's operation.

Unique Service

The local MARS station offers a unique service to this area. Servicemen, Department of Defense civilians, and authorized dependents in Vietnam or Japan may contact a MARS station and request that a telephone patch type message be sent to a person in the states.

If radio contact can be made, and if the Fort Benning station has proper reception, the caller is able to talk via a combination of radio and telephone with a friend or relative.

The request comes in to the local station direct from Vietnam, and an operator at the station here then places a call to the person for whom the message is intended. If the person lives in the Columbus-Fort Benning-Phenix City area, there is no charge for the call.

If however, the addressee of the message lives elsewhere, a collect call is made from the MARS station here. Thus the only cost for the overseas call is from the local MARS station to the place where the person called is located.

Time Limit

These calls are limited to a period of from three to five minutes, and in all cases, must be originated in either Vietnam or Japan.

With MARS stations in most every part of Vietnam, including Saigon, Long Binh, Cu Chi, and Phu Bai, it is possible for a person in Vietnam to have a message sent home through the MARS station nearest to their location, usually not far away.

The MARS station here will accept a 25-word message for delivery anywhere in the world, at any time the station is open and operating. Such messages are known as MARSGRAMS. Though there is no guarantee of delivery, most of these messages are able to be delivered from a station which is located near the addressee.

The 25 word limit on MARSGRAMS does not include the address, and these messages may be sent here by simply telephoning through the MARS Station 545-3069 and giving the operator who answers the address and message.

The MARS station at Fort Benning handles hundreds of messages each month, with approximately 75 per cent of the traffic coming from or going to Vietnam.

Posthumous Awards

Parents Receive Medals for Son

By Spec. 4 Bob Mast

The Distinguished Service Cross, Silver Star with first and second Oak Leaf Clusters, Bronze Star Medal and Purple Heart were among decorations awarded posthumously to Sgt. Edward D. Crow at a recent ceremony in the commanding general's office here.

M. Sgt. (ret.) and Mrs. Charles Crow of LaGrange, Ga., the sergeant's parents, accepted the award from Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., Fort Benning commander.

The Distinguished Service Medal was awarded to Crow for "... extraordinary heroism in connection with military operations involving conflict with an armed hostile force in the Republic of Vietnam."

The citation read, in part, "Sergeant Crow distinguished himself by exceptionally valorous actions on April 12, 1968, while serving with an Infantry company during an enemy attack on its position."

"His unit was in a night defensive position when it became the target of a mortar and ground assault. Initially, the intensity of the enemy fire forced Sgt. Crow to abandon his ... position, but he quickly regrouped his men and personally led a counterattack to regain it ... After successfully regaining the mortar emplacement, he fired illumination rounds to expose the enemy ... and placed effective suppressive fire ... and forced their withdrawal."

The Silver Star with first Oak Leaf Cluster was awarded him for "gallantry in action in another battle in Vietnam.

"As the battle progressed, he constantly moved through the heavy fire to aid and assist the casualties. When he was seriously wounded, he ignored his condition and continued to treat his wounded comrades. After personally helping several men onto a dust-off ship he returned to his mortar (and) started to fire the weapon by himself."

Sgt. Crow received the second Oak Leaf Cluster to the Silver Star for his bravery on April 12, 1968.

988th MPs Dig Deep To Help Needy Family

By Spec. 4 Richard Emerson

Traditionally, people reach just a little bit deeper into their pocketbooks during the Christmas season and the men of the 988th Military Police Co. are no exception.

1st Sgt. Thomas C. Tyler of the 988th, delivered $83.50 donated by the men of his unit to a needy family in the Booker T. Washington Apartments in Columbus.

According to Mrs. Wilma M. Cooper, a case worker from the Department of Family and Children Services, a 38-year-old mother and her 13-year-old son were "most appreciative."

The mother, said Mrs. Cooper, worked as a maid in a private household until she was hospitalized on Nov. 17 for an operation. Complications developed and the doctor informed her that she could not work for six months.

The mother finally had to apply for welfare payments Dec. 2, but the case had to be referred to the state board which stated that it would begin welfare payments to her on Jan. 18. This left the family without any money for Christmas.

The family has been living on surplus food commodities since the mother was forced to quit working, said Mrs. Cooper, and sometimes this isn't enough. The Welfare Center paid the family's rent for the month of December, she said.

MUIR RECEIVES AWARD AT RETIREMENT
Pinning On Cluster Is Gen. Izenour

Col. Muir Retires at Infantry Board

Col. James I. Muir Jr., president of the Infantry Board since 1965, retired Tuesday and received the first Oak Leaf Cluster to the Legion of Merit.

He received the award from Maj. Gen. Frank Izenour, commanding general of the board's parent organization, the Army Test and Evaluation Command at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md.

The ceremony at the Sandy Patch Test area marked the end of a 30-year Army career for Col. Muir, whose father, grandfather and great grandfather were all career officers and, like Col. Muir, graduates of West Point.

Attending the ceremony were Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., post commander, Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of The Infantry School, and Brig. Gen. Frank Linnell, deputy commandant of Fort Gordon, Ga.

Col. Muir was graduated from West Point in 1939 and is a veteran of WW II. He served as a special adviser for the secretary of defense for two years in Vietnam.

His son, Capt. James I. Muir III, is now serving in Vietnam.

The military tradition of the Muir family dates back to the 1800s when the colonel's great grandfather, Col. Clarence B. Bennett, an 1855 graduate of West Point, fought in the Civil War.

His grandfather, Maj. Gen. Charles H. Muir commanded the 28th Div. and IV Corps, during WWI. Muir Range here is named in his honor. And the colonel's father, Maj. Gen. James I. Muir, commanded the 44th Inf. Div. and led the Western Defense Command during WW II.

Dental Care Improved For Vietnam Era Vets

A new policy on dental care adopted by the Veterans Administration will extend treatment to Vietnam era veterans on a more liberal basis.

VA provides treatment for dental conditions which originated or were aggravated during military service if veterans apply during the first year after release from service.

Until recently all ex-servicemen had to support their requests by military records.

Under VA's new policy, dental treatment may be provided without supporting military records if it is determined professionally — during the first eight months after release from service — that the condition is service-connected.

The veteran must make his application within the first six months after release from service and he must have served on active duty six months or more to qualify for the new benefit.

Dr. J. J. Hiniker, VA's director for dentistry, said the new policy is expected to extend dental care to veterans who during military service developed conditions which were not entered in their records.

52nd Co. Elects Council Officers

President of the Council is OC Ronald Noble. Vice president is OC Jerry Wrettenhouse and secretary-treasurer is OC Jack Graham. Other members of the council are OCs Claude Wilder, Stephen Schreiffer, Chuck Rowland, Robert Haupt, Al Beck and Jerry Kahl.

S. Sgt. Donald M. Williams gets up early to lead trainees through eight weeks of basic. For many of the drill sergeants, the work day runs for 16 to 18 hours. Williams works at Co. E, 5th Bn., 1st Bde., ATC.

It's a 'Rough' Life for Drill Sergeants

By 1st. Lt. Fred Vollrath

A drill sergeant's life is not an easy one.

His day begins before the trainee thinks about getting up and ends 16 to 18 hours later, after the trainee goes to sleep.

When the eight-week basic training cycle is over for the trainee, it begins again for the drill sergeant.

From the day he picks up the new recruits from the Reception Station to graduation day eight weeks later life is pretty "rough," S. Sgt. Bill J. Woolery says.

"Being a drill sergeant is more of a challenge than a job," to Sgt. James A. Berg. "Our job is to orientate these new recruits to the Army's way of life and teach them the basic skills to survive in combat," said Berg, a Vietnam veteran.

The first two weeks of basic are the hardest — both on the trainee and the drill sergeants.

"Most of the recruits come to us with no idea of what the Army is like," added Berg. "They don't know what to expect and what is expected of them. We teach them both."

The drill sergeant spends a great deal of time, the first two weeks, teaching the recruit the basics of Army life: how to make his bunk, how to arrange his foot locker, military courtesy, policing the barracks and spit - shining shoes.

Fort Benning's recruits come from every part of the nation and represent a variety of backgrounds from high school drop-outs to college instructors to factory workers and farmers. There are even veterans who have re-enlisted for Vietnam.

"Many don't like it when they have been drafted but most of them realize they are here because their country needs them and accept their obligations," said Berg.

The biggest problem faced by the drill sergeants from former college students is not resentment at being in the Army, but the fact "many of them are in poor physical condition when they get here."

The most satisfying part of the job to Berg is "watching them on graduation day and seeing how far they have come under your training."

Berg and his fellow drill sergeants led Co. E, 5th Bn., 1st Bde., in the Oct. 28-Dec. 20 training cycle. The unit was high company on the Individual Proficiency Test, the Basic Rifle Marksmanship, and the winner of Tiger Tactics award.

Sergeant: 'I Died For The People Of The U.S....'

CAMP EAGLE, Vietnam — A moving letter, written by a 101st Airborne Div. sergeant before his death in September, speaks for virtually every American soldier who has risked his life fighting for freedom in Vietnam.

"It is too bad I had to die in another country, the United States is so wonderful," wrote Jeff Davis of Manchester, N.H., "But at least I died for a reason and a good one."

Davis was killed in a firefight Sept. 6 while serving with A Co., 3rd Bn., 187th Abn. Inf. near Cu Chi. Before departing for Vietnam, he wrote the letter to his fiancee, whom he later married in Hawaii. He requested that it be opened only in the event he died here.

"I may not understand this war, or like it, or want to fight it, but nevertheless I had to do and I did," wrote the proud American. "I died for the people of the United States."

The young sergeant served with the Screaming Eagles in combat for more than nine months after arriving in Vietnam Dec. 1, 1967.

Davis saw compensation for his death in a future of freedom for his relatives, friends and "others also who enjoy this wonderful country, and who appreciate what they have and thank God every day for it.

"I died for the guys with long hair and protest signs," he continued. "The draft card burners, the hippies, the anit-everything! people who have nothing better to do. The college kids who think they shouldn't have to serve because they're too good. I died so these people could have a little longer time to try to get straightened out in life. God knows they need it.

"Yes, I died for the so-called 'younger generation,' of which I was a part but for some unknown reason I never became an active member. I guess I was a 'square' or something with short hair, no police record, didn't drink or smoke (pot included) also, God forgive them.

"I died so these members, active members of the 'young generation' could have the right to do what they do. To protest, have long hair, go to the college of their own choice, wear weird clothes, and run around mixed up with no direction at all.

"I died so they protest the war I fought and died in. Without it, what would they protest? But I also died for the many thousands who died in this war and other wars before, for these same reasons. For the men who fought gallantly on the many battlefields of many wars to keep this country free. I guess that in order to gain freedom there must be war. I died for the United States."

Bunker Betrays Occupants, But U.S. Captain Is Happy

DI AN Vietnam — A bunker is built to protect the man inside it, but it doesn't always work that way.

As he was directing his men against an enemy position eight miles southeast of Phuoc Vinh, Captain Richard E. Holden of Macon, Ga., a company commander with the 1st Infantry Division's 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry, encounteed a bunker that slowed the advance of his men.

Holden worked his way to a position on top of the bunker and shouted, in Vietnamese, for the men inside to rally to the allies.

He leaped in front of the enemy position and emptied two magazines of ammunition into it. The enemy still fought back, so Captain Holden and First Lieutenant David L. Fulton of Whittier, Calif., a platoon leader, threw grenades into the bunker, silencing it.

WASHINGTON (ANF) — About 12,000 U. S. Army soldiers from units based in the United States will participate in major U.S. military exercises to be conducted in Europe during January and February.

The Army personnel and about 3,500 U.S. Air Force members who also will participate in the exercises are assigned to units redeployed from Europe to the United States last summer but retained under operational command of the U.S. commander in chief, Europe.

The exercises will evaluate and further develop techniques for the deployment of U.S. North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) forces to Europe.

The exercises, the first in a projected series of annual exercises for these units and for some other units based in Germany, are designed to maintain proficiency in operating procedures and to deal with special requirements pertaining to the European theater.

Originally planned for later next year, the exercises were scheduled earlier as part of the proposed U.S. contribution to the increased readiness of NATO.

All Army units deployed as part of the Army exercise, named Reforger I, will return to their U.S. home stations upon completion of the exercise.

The one brigade of the 24th Inf. Div. and associated elements now in Germany will not rotate as previously announced but will remain there. This will enhance the continuing readiness of the division primarily by reducing frequent personnel shifts.

Among the Army units deploying from the United States in Reforger I are the following:

The 24th Inf. Div. (Mechanized) of Fort Riley, Kans., less the brigade already in Germany; 2d Squadron, 3d Armored Cavalry Regiment, Fort Stewart, Ga.; 517th Medical Clearing Company, Fort Carson, Colo.; 342d Transportation Truck Company, Fort McClellan, Ala.; 100th Transportation Truck Co., Fort Eustis, Va.; and Co. D, 1st Composite Support Battalion, Fort Riley.

Also, 417th Ambulance Co., 440th Signal Battalion, Fort Hood; Tex.; Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, 36th Medical Battalion, Fort Hood; 5th Surgical Hospital, Fort Knox, Ky.

Boxcar Is Home

Candidate Rides Wyoming Rails

By S.Sgt. Larry Greene

Spending Christmas leave at home isn't too unusual—unless your home happens to be a condemned railroad boxcar. That was the case with OC Francis Keaton, 55th Co., 5th Stu. Bn. (OC), TCB. In fact, it's the case with Keaton anytime he goes home.

He lives on Wyoming railroad tracks in a 10 by 50 foot gleaming silver car that has been condemned for freight hauling.

Inside the car is the equivalent of a four-room house with master bedroom, dining area, kitchen and a living area complete with color television. The reason for this "mobile home" is the occupation of Keaton's father — a bridge building foreman for the Union Pacific Railroad.

"My father's job requires him to move with the railroad to do his work," Keaton explained. "The railroad won't pay the expenses of two households, thus the boxcar house. We stay in one place anywhere from two weeks to six months, depending on how long it takes to do the job in that area. When we move, we hook onto a train heading in that direction, and when we get there, we just ease off onto a side track," Keaton stated. "The high Wyoming wind and passing trains sway the car a lot, but you get used to it," Keaton adds.

"My mother is not too thrilled about living in a boxcar, but she goes along with it. The cinders along the tracks make a lot of dust and causes some real cleaning problems."

Since their location changes so often, the Keatons mail is addressed to the railway roadmaster. Plumbing is a problem, but water is brought in from a railroad water car.

"I guess it's not too bad," Keaton says. "Explaining to people just where I live presents more problems than actually living there," he said.

Training for Vietnam

Scout Dogs In Action

By Spec. 4 Bob Mast

Photos by Spec. 5 Larry Herrmann

Suddenly, a twig snaps, and an alerted soldier stands poised on four legs, silently signaling his buddy of the presence of the enemy.

Of course, no soldier has four legs, no matter how many times the name "Leg" has been buried at at the "dogface" Infantryman.

In this case, the dogface is for real as a scout dog and his handler, both students at the Fort Benning scout dog unit's training school, learn their trade through practical experience.

The Vietnamese village, which was used as a movie prop in John Wayne's film, "The Green Berets," stands in the recesses of a vast woodland on the reservation.

The scout dog training school has the distinction of being the only one in operation, a position it has enjoyed since 1966, when the war in Vietnam demanded more scout dogs.

The training school was started at Fort Carson, Colo., in 1953, but was closed in 1957. It was reopened at Fort Benning and is conducted by the Infantry Center Hq. Detachment, Scout Dog. The 26th and 51st Scout Dog Platoons are attached to this unit and are charged with the training program.

The 26th received its present name in Korea, where it was the only scout dog platoon in action. The unit began its life as the 25th Quartermaster War Dog Platoon in WW II and distinguished itself in campaigns in the Philippines and Japan.

Its outstanding record includes Presidential Unit Citations from action in the Philippines in WW II and the Republic of Korea, where it also received a Meritorious Unit Citation for participating in more than 1,000 patrols and was credited with reducing the casualty rate by 65 per cent.

As a result of their remarkable efficiency, official approval was given for activation of scout dog platoons to be attached to every combat division; however, the Korean cease-fire came about before an expanded training program to add five additional platoons in Korea, could get off the ground.

The 51st Scout Dog Platoon was trained and activiated here and has remained to help the 26th train other platoons.

Presently commanded by Maj. George M. Massey, the school's mission is to train dogs to give an early silent warning of the presence of enemy troops and equipment and to support instruction in Infantry School courses, such as OCS, Ranger training, and the NCOC Course.

The 12-week course trains dogs and handlers as platoons and individual replacements to platoons already serving in Vietnam.

The course is broken down into several areas of training, the major portion being patrolling. The first two weeks are devoted to basic obedience where the handler learns to control the dog. The rest of the training is divided into three levels of patrol training: scouting, intermediate scouting and advanced scouting.

Around the fifth or sixth week of training, dogs are taught to recognize mines and booby-traps and to spot the enemy in a populated village. Later, the dogs and handlers learn river crossing and rappelling techniques.

Capt. John T. Anderson, the 46-man unit's executive officer, explained that after the seventh week of training the dogs and handlers work with other classes at the Infantry School to make the total training concept as realistic as possible.

The unit exclusively uses German shepherds or dogs with strong German shepherd characteristics. Sold by the Air Force for about $405 each.

Dogs are particularly susceptible to voice inflection, have a keenness of scent and hearing, have eyes which are acute to movement; and can reason in that they have a power of memory-in-sequence, according to Andrews. They can also be trained to understand over 200 words and remember their meaning.

At the outset of training, the unit tries to match the personalities of dogs and handlers to mold them into combat teams. The course begins with the handler establishing himself as master of the dog. He cleans and grooms the animal and allows no other person to make friends with his dog. The dog is trained to accuratey understand the feeling and wishes of the handler as the commands are given, and is never allowed to ignore a command or fail to carry it out.

Men chosen to be handlers must have a genuine fondness and interest in dogs. Patience is the virtue most called for in training the dogs.

A handler is trained to give vocal commands clearly and firmly, the inflection of his voice and gestures are the chief way he communicates with the animal. Words spoken in encouraging tones elate the dogs, but harsh words depress them.

"Our dogs must be suspicious and alert to strange odors and persons, have confidence in themselves and their handlers, but are not trained to be aggressive or to attack," said 1st Sgt. Robert D. Bennett.

The team is used as the point of a patrol and the dog's only mission in combat is to silently alert the handler to the presence of enemy troops or equipment. Once the enemy is spotted, the dog and handler go back to the commander and report. This is the primary function of a scout dog. "A dog can be rejected for training if he is too aggressive," Anderson said.

After graduating from the school at Fort Benning, the dogs and handlers are sent to Vietnam for two additional weeks of training at the War Dog Training Detachment kennels at Bien Hoa.

'Charge Of Light Brigade' Shows War Is Not a Sport

A REVIEW

By Spec. 4 Harry Lloyd

War is not a game for amateurs. Or gentlemen. Or their ladies. That's one lesson to be learned from "The Charge of The Light Brigade," a movie of epic proportions about the abysmal defeat of British forces during the Crimean War.

The tone of the Tennyson poem is retained, but with greater accent on the ironies. The Six Hundred cavalrymen were brave and loyal, to be sure, but they were also the victims of a theory of war that was out of touch with reality. Their charge against the guns of the Russians was a mass blunder somewhere along a tangled chain of command. After the defeat the officers bicker among themselves, like children, each trying to avoid the blame.

There is nothing subtle about the way the story is told. Director Tony Richardson expands on the brilliant techniques he used in "Tom Jones" to present powerful characters and stark action. If there is a fault, it is that Richardson is too preoccupied with his message. He hammers it to us both through the tragic story and with animated Victorian-style cartoons.

The hero, who becomes the first to die in the charge, is Capt. Louis Nolan, played by David Hemmings. The captain is a bit of a rebel, and is scorned by his superior officer because he earned his promotions by fighting in India rather than buying them.

"He rides too well," says Lord Raglan, the bumbling leader of the British. "It isn't right that Britain should have officers as good as he. It makes war too much like murder."

Sir John Gielgud gives a memorable performance as Raglan, a veteran of the Napoleonic Wars who can't get over the notion that the French are no longer his enemy. Raglan detaches himself from the fighting and sees "a pretty little valley" rather than blood and destructions.

The brigade commander, played by Trevor Howard, is the natural villain of the story. His petty rivalry with his brother-in-law on the battlefield is a major factor in the defeat.

Lord Cardigan, an imposing man with red face and flourishing whiskers, rules his men according to tradition with personal edict. He can break a 20-year soldier with one word. On the eve of battle, he woos the wife of a junior officer. And after the battle, which he somehow manages to survive, his greatest concern is that Capt. Nolan had the audacity to ride in front of him.

While the British soldiers are dying in the Russian Crimean, the people at home are celebrating erroneous reports of tremendous victories, content that they have tamed the Russian bear and sped the progress of British industry. War is a necessary diversion they reason, and it is good for the spirit.

But no, says Hemmings. "War should be fought, and when it is fought, it should be until the end," he reasons. He does not take part in the cricket games played in the camp, and only be among all the British officers seems to realize the possibility of death in battle. Nolan does not dread death, but neither does he glorify it. He is a professional about his job, and believes all soldiers should be the same.

The disappointment of the movie is that Vanessa Redgrave, given star billing, is hardly seen. When she is shown—as the wandering wife of Nolan's best friend, a fellow officer—it's nothing like the role she played in "Blow-Up".

Even People Of Year 2001 Can't Solve All Problems

By Spec. 4 Chip Rinaldi

Science fiction fans should be heartened by Stanley Kubrick's latest effort in cinema, "2001: A Space Odyssey," because it is probably the best science fiction film ever produced.

Compared to his earliest success in film, "Dr. Strangelove," which deals satirically with the problem of the nuclear bomb, international relations and an overzealous military, "2001" is totally futuristic in concept. It is hard core science fiction material with no easily noticed references to the present world.

Kubrick's latest movie begins with a kind of prologue establishing the most basic nature of man. This prologue also provides a reference point from which to view the entire story of the movie.

In the initial scenes the community of man is depicted at its most primitive level, solving problems of survival in much the same manner as animals of the jungle. Discovery of the weapon and then a black monolith—representing the eternal mysteries of the universe—establish the theme of the movie and the issues with which it will deal. They provide the common denominator of primitive man and future man.

Transitition to the 21st century is made. This era is complete with space stations and interplanetary travel. The scene is set for the science fiction adventure which is about to begin.

A mysterious object is discovered on a distant planetoid beaming radio signals at the planet Jupiter. It is the same object which confronted primitive and once again it defies man's comprehension.

A space ship is sent to Jupiter, complete with the latest computer to further penetrate the mystery of the black monolith—it's almost human computer, HAL, is almost a necessary prop in any credible science fiction work of today. The difficulty it poses to the crew of the space ship offers additional drama to the movie. This difficulty is also necessary for an audience which is constantly attuned to the plight of man versus machine.

The arrival on Jupiter marks and entry into strange dimensions which almost instantaneously take man through his whole lifetime and send him back into the dimensions of space as an embryo hardly the wiser for his experience. The conclusion is consistent with the tradition of good science fiction: The mystery of the future is not solved. There are certain mysteries of the universe that defy human comprehension.

Top '68 Tune? No Clear Choice

"Harper Valley PTA" by Jeannie C. Riley and "The Dock of the Bay" by Otis Redding rank as the number one songs locally for 1968 in separate surveys released by two local pop radio stations, WDAK and WCLS.

The Beatles' "Hey Jude" was ranked as the top tune in the nation last year by Cash Box Magazine, followed by Paul Mauriat's "Love Is Blue."

No one type of music dominated the top twenty field last year either locally or nationally. Soul, Country-Western and Folk were all represented.

Contract Bridge

By Spec 4 Paul Mangione
Using the Two Club
(Stayman) Convention

An opening bid of one no trump was once considered a mark of ignorance by bridge players because, with very rare exception, a suit could have and should have been bid. It was felt to be more expedient to explore major suit possibilities, for a major suit with the required trumps is usually easier to make. The No Trump contract can wait while suits might be lost in the rush. By doing this, however, they lost the advantages of the one No Trump bid.

It is quite possible to retain a good communicaton with your partner by using the No Trump open to feel for a strong suit. Thus we have the two club convention. A two club response to one No Trump is an artificial bid with no relation to club strength. It is a force bid to the opener to show his four card major suit at once.

In order to reply to 2 Clubs with a major however, opener's four card major must be led by at least a queen. In the event that opener has no major response he then replies with two diamonds. Like the club bid, this is an artificial bid with no bearing on actual diamond strength. A strong diamond (or originally a strong club) suit is a simple coincidence.

In the event the opener holds two valid four card majors, he must respond with the spades first and then the hearts if it is worthwhile to do so. Correspondingly, if opener's first re-bids is hearts, then he says he has no major spades suit. But if his re-bid is spades, that doesn't rule out the possibility of a major-heart suit and the partner should be open for it.

concerning a mother, child and three could-be fathers. Gina Lollobrigida, as Mrs. Campbell, finds herself in an awkward situation when three ex-soldiers (Peter Lawford, Telly Savales and Phil Silvers) and their families return to Italy for an Army reunion. Each believes he is the father of Mrs. Campbell's daughter, whom they have separately been supporting for 20 years.

WHO'S MINDING THE MINT? — Jim Hutton, a mint worker, loses $50,000 in currency. If he doesn't replace the money before the loss is discovered, he may go to prison. He devises a system to penetrate the mint by the way of a public sewer and will then print the money to replace the lost currency. To assist him, he enlists Dorothy Provine, Milton Berle, Joey Bishop, etc., each a professed expert in one phase or other of the operation. It's wacky, silly and preposterous to the extreme . . . go, go, go from start to finish!!

INTERLUDE — The bitter-sweet story of a love affair between a young girl journalist and world famous conductor. It is a very contemporary story which is sensitively told. Their love could never last . . . the girl knew it . . . he knew it . . . so did his wife . . . !

MORE DEAD THAN ALIVE — Drama that takes place in the Old West when a gunfighter is released from jail and tries to get a job. The injustices encountered in his efforts to rehabilitate are many and there are many conflicts, trials and tribulations as he tries not to use his gun to obtain justice and equality. There's plenty of action for the Western fan.

THE DEVIL'S BRIDE — Christopher Lee stars in this horror film about witchcraft and black magic. A band of Satanists are confronted by Lee and all the supernatural forces of the powers of darkness are unleashed. You will cling to the edge of your seat as this eerie film proceeds!

Assorted Sports Fill '69 Slate

By Spec. 4 Paul Mangione

Athletes in almost every sport will be able to compete in post-wide competition during 1969.

Champions will be selected in activities from football to horseshoes, and hundreds of soldiers will be taking part. Hundreds more will be able to participate in non-competitive sports at Fort Benning.

In many sports, post winners will be eligible to participate in high level competition.

The ladies can get in on the action too with the 3rd Army Bowling Roll-off set for 3-4 May and 10-11 May. Each post holds high match games on the dates mentioned and then phones in the results to 3rd Army Headquarters at Fort McPherson, Georgia for comparison against other posts.

Softball

The softball clinic begins April 16th and last to 18th. Instruction will be given at the Main Post field house and the post softball field. Each company size unit may send one man.

Fast-pitch softball, for men only will begin May 19th and continue through the summer until Aug. 29th. This tournament is brigade level. Each major unit on post will submit a team to play in the six member league. Players will be picked by the various units after pre-season intra-unit eliminations on the company level.

The Infantry Center Volleyball tournament will be held April 21st to 25th. This competition will remain on a company level. Each major unit on post will control all the organization for their respective teams. The results will be co-ordinated through the Special Services Sports Director.

Softball for women will be played on an exhibition basis only from the 4th of June to the 5th of July. The WAC detachment at each installation in the 3rd Army area will provide a team.

Tennis

Men's and women's tennis will be played on an individual application basis from June 9th through the 13th. Persons interested in participating should get in touch with their unit athletic officer or the Post athletic director.

Golf

A men's and women's golf tournament is set for July 29th to Aug. 1st. The play will be held at the Main Officers Club course at the Country Club. The tournament is open to every one on an individual application basis similar to the tennis tournament. People who just want to play golf can use the Special Services golf course at Sand Hill year 'round with the exception of Christmas and New Year's Day.

A company level, slow pitch softball tournament will be held from Aug. 18th to the 22nd. This is an Infantry Center tournament, sponsored by the Special Services Sports Department. Trophies will be awarded to the winners of every tournament.

Horse-Shoes

For those who are less athletically inclined but still like to compete a small games tournament, featuring table tennis, hand ball and horse-shoes. Each major unit on post will enter four players, one for each sport. The play will be decided on a point basis, points for entry and progressive points.

Football

Each company size unit may enter one man in the Flag Football clinic, held from the 11th to the 13th of September. This clinic is for both officials and coaches. The company level tournament will follow starting Nov. 17th and running to the 28th. The competition will be on a double elimination basis, that is a team must be defeated twice before they are out of the tournament.

Basketball

The basketball clinic, for officials and coaches will be held on a company level from Nov. 19th to the 21st. The tournament runs through the Christmas holidays into January.

Racing Champion Yarborough Finds Fans, Foes In Vietnam

(Reprinted from The Charlotte Observer)

Cale Yarborough has been in some precarious situations during his stock car racing career, but last week he was wishing for the comfort and safety of his race car.

While on a good-will tour of bases in Vietnam, Yarborough was trapped during a Viet Cong rocket barrage. He spent the night pinned down in a bunker.

"I had much rather been in my race car," Yarborough said Saturday after returning from his three-week trip.

A few years ago, Yarborough frightened race fans at Darlington when he sailed over the guard rail and down an embankment during the Southern 500. He climbed out of the demolished racer, shaky, but unhurt. But he admits he was just as scared with the VC rockets exploding around him.

"I don't care about going through either one of them again," he said.

Yarborough and Ford executive Barry Collier visited nine Army hospitals, discussing auto racing with the injured servicemen and showing a 30-minute film of the highlights of the 1968 NASCAR season. In addition, they spent two days on the seas aboard the USS Hornet.

Next to Joey Heatherton and Ann-Margret, the American soldiers are most interested in auto racing, according to Yarborough, who won an unprecedented four superspeedway events in the past season.

"I was very surprised at the interest the boys showed in auto racing," said the top one-season money winner in NASCAR history. "We would get the guys together in a hospital ward and talk about racing.

"Before I would show the film, I would ask how many of them had ever seen a stock car race. Out of crowds between 50-250, about 80 per cent said they had seen races. Most of them know a lot about the sport."

Yarborough volunteered to take the trip and was encouraged by the Defense Department. The Timmonsville, S.C., driver spent Christmas Day visiting wounded men in the 29th Medical Evacuation

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

BY BILL KLOEB

Although the deer season in Georgia ended Thursday, the Alabama season will continue until Jan. 13. More than 250 deer kills were registered at the Fish and Wildlife check station and it is estimated that many more were killed and registered. The Fish and Wildlife Division uses these figures to evaluate the deer population and make recommendations for the length of the hunting season and what type deer may be harvested. Anyone who killed a deer on the reservation this year is asked to call the Fish and Wildlife Division (545-6120).

The December issue of the Georgia Fish and Game Magazine carried an interesting article on how to skin a deer with a golf ball. According to the article you remove the entrails by conventional methods, remove the front legs by cutting through the knee joint and cut off the rear legs at the hock.

If you don't plan to mount the head, split the hide from the rib cage to the lower jaw. Cut the skin around the upper neck joint just behind the ears. Carefully remove the hide from approximately eight inches of the neck. Tie a rope or chain around the neck and tie the deer to a tree.

Now for the gold ball. Insert the ball beneath the skin four four inches below the cut on the neck. Tie one end of a stout rope around the skin-covered ball and the other end to an automobile or truck. Drive the vehicle away and the skin will separate rapidly from the carcass.

The favorite target of hunters through the country is the cottontail rabbit. In addition to providing plenty of sport the cottontail is also tasty table fare when properly prepared.

Although the cottontail is found in all states except Alaska and Hawaii, its popularity in Georgia seems to fall behind that of quail, dove and deer. The main reason for this lack of popularity is that the rabbit population in much of the state has been steadily decreasing.

The Georgia Game and Fish Commission financed a study to determine why.

The breeding habits, general health and other habits were also examined. In general, a complete life history was conducted on the rabbit population of Georgia.

This study showed that rabbits in Georgia breed from February to September. The young rabbits are born 28 days after mating. April and May appear to be the peak months for reproduction. In Georgia rabbits produce about eight litters per year averaging three per litter.

Since rabbits produce such large number of offspring, it would seem that there should be plenty of them. There are several factors that limit the number of rabbits. In the first place the average cottontail lives less than one year. Practically every predatory animal in the wild will eat rabbits. They are the prey of bobcats, foxes, hawks, owls, weasels and snakes. Free-ranging dogs and feral cats are also a big factor in keeping the rabbit population at a low number.

It is a fact of nature that almost any species of wildlife will be found in suitable habitat in the numbers that habitat will support and this is the primary reason for the decreasing rabbit population in Georgia. During the past ten years more than 23,000 small farms have been abandoned. More than 40 per cent of this land has been converted to pine plantations, and such lands do not provide the food and cover rabbits need to survive.

The Fish and Game Commission, through county agents, is now encouraging land owners to provide escape cover such as brush piles and briar patches and to plant permanent strips of food along fence rows, drainage ditches, pond and stream edges and other such areas which can provide proper habitat for survival of the cottontail.

Yarborough Visits Vietnam

Hospital in Binh Thuy.

"I get a lot of mail from the fellows over there," Yarborough said. "During last season, I just mentioned to a Ford official that I'd like to go and the next thing I knew, he called up and told me to pack my bags.

"It was a very rewarding trip for me, something that I will never forget. It's really difficult to explain what is really going on over there. It's a lot worse than I expected. There's war everywhere. We would get up on top of our hotel in Saigon and watch the fighting around the city.

"I would have liked to be at home with my family for Christmas, but I surely wasn't the only one that was away."

Explorers Study Police Methods

By Spec.4 Richard Emerson

A new law enforcement explorer post sponsored by Center Troop Command, co-sponsored by the 139th Military Police Co. and supported by the Provost Marshal's Office has been formed here.

During the first organizational meeting at the 138th mess hall 18 of 20 boys signed up to join the new explorer post. Army personnel from each of the supporting units attended the meeting and outlined possible future activities for the prospective explorer scouts.

The Provost Marshal's Office will give the boys the chance to learn about fingerprinting, traffic control, correctional facilities, police station organization, military police patroling and techniques of apprehension and searching, said Capt. David B. Berg, assistant operations officer and advisor to the post.

"These activities will give the boys who belong to the post some idea of what law enforcement is about but they will determine their own program," he said. The program, he added, is career oriented.

Side benefits, he stated, may include giving the explorer scouts experience in meeting people and organizing social functions.

At present, all the post members are from Baker High School, where the Chattahoochee Council of the Boy Scouts of America conducted a career field interest survey among students. The survey indicated substantial interest in law enforcement, said Berg, so the council contacted the Provost Marshal's Office about forming an explorer post.

The next explorer post meeting is scheduled for Saturday at 10 a.m. in the conference room of the Provost Marshal's Office and will include instruction in the practical application and use of types of radar.

Any boy between the ages of 14 and 18 who lives on Fort Benning or in the Columbus area may join the newly formed explorer post. For further information, call 545-3933.

Engineers Boost Power

Two floating power plants developed by the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers have been sent to the Panama Canal Zone to supply emergency power for operation of the canal.

A critical shortage of electrical power has developed as a result of greatly increased traffic through the canal.

The world's first nuclear floating power plant, the barge Sturgis, has been moved to Panama from Fort Belvoir, Va. It has a 10,000-kilowatt capability. The Andrew J. Weber, a 21,000-kilowatt floating plant, also has arrived.

Meanwhile, the Corps of Engineers is working to provide an adequate permanent power source for operation of locks in the canal to accommodate the great increase in traffic. (ANF)

Career Students Watch Company Build Bridges

Only seven months ago the 208th Engineer Co. (Panel Bridge), a former Missouri National Guard unit, was activated and assigned to the 931st Engineer Group, CTC, for refresher training and permanent duty assignment.

The 208th underwent an extensive eight-week training cycle under the supervision of a sister panel bridge company, the 931st. Following their Army Training Test, the unit began a series of mission assignments that have touched nearly every unit on post.

Two months ago the panel bridge company began serving in an instructor role for the Infantry Officer Career Courses at The Infantry School. Integrated as a part of their normal training, the 208th's demonstrations are held once or twice for each career course class at Fort Benning.

The demonstrations are held in the Greenwood Hill section of the post where the 208th and the 931st Engineer Group have constructed permanent panel and float bridge sections.

The unit has mounted a 50-foot section of panel bridge over a mock river and during the demonstrations for the infantry officers, the engineers add another ten-foot bay to the bridge. The Bailey-type bridge is organic to a division's engineering companies.

According to 1st Lt. John W. Merry, commanding officer of the 208th, the demonstration is included in the curriculum to acquaint the officers with panel bridge construction and concepts. The 60-foot bridge can be erected from scratch in approximately four platoon hours.

Merry assumed command of the 208th from Capt. John K. Wondel, who had served as commanding officer before the unit's activation in early May. Capt. Wondel will attend the Maintenance School at Fort Belvoir, Va., before beginning an overseas tour in 1969.

Merry comes to the 208th from the 931st where he served as commanding officer of Hq. Co.

Special Services Contest

Holiday Decoration Prizes Given

By Spec 4 Bob Mast

"It was tremendously impressed," were the words used by Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., Fort Benning commander, to describe the post's Christmas decorations following his presentation of awards to the winners and runners-up of the fourth annual Special Services Christmas Display Contest.

"The families contributed greatly to the spirit of Christmas and enhanced the religious and holiday mood of the post," the general said in describing the 47 units and families who dressed up their homes and areas for the season.

This year as in the past, Special Services held the contest in four categories, presenting awards to the first, second and third place winners of each category.

First place winner of the company-size unit category was the 72nd Engineer Co., 197th Inf. Bde. Sgt. Orestes Martin, bridge platoon section chief, accepted the award for the unit.

Capt. Jimmy Peters, commander of 55th Co., 5th Bn., TCB, accepted the second place award for his unit. The third place award went to the Infantry Board and was accepted by its 1st Sgt. Robert Heal.

Col. Robert M. Piper, TCB commander, accepted the first place award for the brigade's headquarters. The second place award went to the Reception Station's Headquarters and was accepted by the station's commander Lt. Col. Archie L. Stiff.

TSB's 2nd Stu. Bn. won the third place trophy which was accepted by Sgt. Maj. Alkus Stokes.

Spec. 5 Charles Duke, clerk, of C Co., 56th Supply and Services Bn., CTC, took the first place award for 245 Marne Road in the single family quarters category.

Lt. Col. Stanley R. Blunck, fld., 10th Avn. Gp. won the second place for his display at 408 1st Division Road. The third place award went to Maj. Fred E. Lyssy, a student in the Infantry Officer Advanced Course, for his display at 1011 A Kessler Court.

In the multiple family quarters category, SFC Thomas Curry, assistant food advsior, Hq. and Hq. Detachment, 1st Bde., ATC, accepted the first place award for his display at 149 C Magrath St. The second place award went to Capt. Gary C. Lind of the office of the Director of Personnel for his display at 427 Valdez Court. Maj. James R. Haise, a student in the Infantry Officer Advanced Course, received the third place award for his display at 131 A Butts St.

Registration for the Youth Activities Club basketball program will be held next week. A closing date of Jan. 10 has been set so that team rosters, schedules and practices can be set up.

If registration turns out as anticipated, there will be six leagues, four for boys and two for girls. Youth Activities is establishing leagues in this manner so more will have an opportunity to participate. By having a high number of teams, the number of members on each will be smaller, thus giving more an opportunity to play. Children will be competing with others near their own age and physical development.

The boys leagues will be broken down as follows:

Biddy League — 8-9 year olds

Pee Wee League — 10 year olds

Doughboy League — 11-12 year olds

Pony League — 13-15 year olds

The girls leagues will be:

Junior Miss — 6th thru 8th grades.

Sweet Sixteen — 9th thru 12th grades.

Youth Activities will run a tournament for each league upon completion of the regular game schedule. The number of teams involved will determine whether these will be Single or Double-Elimination tournaments.

Because of the large program, there will be a great need for many volunteer coaches. A minimum of 22 teams for boys and 4 teams for girls is anticipated. If you desire to coach, please contact the athletic director, 545-3371. Registration cards are available at Youth Activities, Bldg. No. 358, the Old Post Gym.

Veterans Facility To Open

ATLANTA — The new 192-bed Georgia Veterans Nursing Home in Augusta will be formally dedicated in ceremonies at 2 p.m. Monday.

The home, which will be operated by the Medical College of Georgia under contract with the Georgia Veterans Service Board, has five levels, cost $2 million and is termed the most modern veterans' nursing facility in the nation.

Gov. Lester Maddox will be the principal speaker. Others participating in the program will be former Gov. Carl Sanders; Augusta Mayor George Sancken, Jr.; Congressman Robert G. Stephens, Jr.; and Hugh H. Howell, Jr. of Atlanta, chairman of the Veterans Service Board.

Pete Wheeler, director of the Georgia Department of Veterans Service, will preside over the ceremonies which are expected to draw some 400 persons.

Wheeler said, "We expect representatives of all veterans organizations, in the state to be present. Dignitaries from the Veterans Administration in Washington are expected, along with VA medical and hospital officials at both the state and local levels. Georgia's congressional delegation has been invited and we expect many members of the Georgia General Assembly to be on hand."

Georgia veterans who need nursing home care are urged to make their applications now for admission to the Augusta facility. Application can be made through any field office or the central office of the Georgia Department of Veterans Service. The first patient is to be admitted to the home following dedication ceremonies next month.

Re-Up Easy At 197th

The 197th Inf. Bde.'s Reenlistment Office has announced that it will provide additional services for the troops in the Army's largest Infantry brigade in the future.

Beginning Wednesday and continuing on a weekly Wednesday night basis, the 197th reenlistment office will be open two extra hours, 6 to 8 p.m. The Wednesday night service will not alter the regular schedule of the reenlistment office, which is 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on weekdays and 8 a.m. to 12 noon on Saturdays.

"The additional services will be provided for the men who are on commitments during the day and don't have a chance to come down here," said SFC Audrey Johnson of the 197th staff.

A career counselor will be on hand for the night sessions and all members of the 197th are urged to take advantage of the additional service.

First Lt. David K. Baver is the officer in charge of the 197th reenlistment unit. Members of the staff include M. Sgt. Harold Woodward, SFC Johnson and S. Sgt. Robert Adams.

The 197th had the distinction of having the most men reenlist, 19, when Maj. Gen. John M. Wright, Jr., commanding general of Fort Benning, administered the reenlistment oath to 56 men recently in a mass ceremony in front of Infantry Hall on "Career Opportunities Day."

Nixon Replaces Johnson...As Battalion Commander

By Spec. 4 Dennis Wootan

The nation will gain a new President and the Army a new commander-in-chief when Richard M. Nixon succeeds Lyndon B. Johnson Jan. 20 in Washington.

But a Johnson-to-Nixon transition of command will have already taken place nine days earlier here at Fort Benning.

Lt. Col. James P. Johnson will pass command of the 5th Bn., 31st Inf., a unit of the 197th Inf. Bde., to Lt. Col. John L. Nixon Jr. on Saturday in ceremonies to be held at Esseben Field.

The change of command will be held in conjunction with the celebration of the 31st anniversary of the organization of the 31st Infantry Regiment.

According to Col. Johnson, the "lame duck" administration of an outgoing president has no parallel in the Army, where command is retained until the moment of change.

"I'll be in command right up until I sign out," he said with a wry grin.

In commenting on similarities in the change of command with the presidential transition, Col. Johnson pointed out that he and Col. Nixon have had discussions concerning the battalion and events which must be faced right after the change of command.

"These talks have been roughly similar to briefings and meetings between the incoming and outgoing presidents concerning their 'command,'" he said.

Despite any similarities which might exist between the change of command here and the one in Washington, Col. Johnson views the timing as "just coincidence." But even if it is coincidence, Col. Johnson has no qualms about birthing over his battalion to the new "administration."

"I think very highly of this man (Col. Nixon)," he said.

For his part, Col. Nixon has said he is "challenged by the opportunity to command the 5th Bn., 31st Inf."

"I have nothing but praise for the battalion and its commander," he said. "Col. Johnson has done a distinguished job in commanding the largest infantry battalion in the Army. I hope to continue the standards of performance which have been set by Col. Johnson."

Col. Nixon echoed Col. Johnson's remarks concerning the coincidental nature of the timing of the change of command.

Col. Johnson a native of Hazard, Ky., has commanded the battalion since November, 1967. Previous to assuming command of the "Polar Bears," as the 5-31 is

Astronaut Glenn To Address AUSA

The first American to orbit the earth, retired Marine Col. John H. Glenn, will address a meeting of the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army on Jan. 28.

Col. Glenn will address the group's quarterly membership meeting at Fort Benning.

Refreshments and a buffet will be served in the Officers' Club at 6 p.m. The group will move to Marshall Auditorium for the 8 o'clock program.

In addition to Col. Glenn's presentation, the program will consist of an opening song by Muscogee County Sheriff Jack Rutledge, followed by the Infantry Chorus and AUSA awards presentation.

According to Louis T. Kunze, president of the chapter, an early sellout of 1,400 tickets for the event is expected.

Tickets for military members of AUSA will go on sale in units and work sections on Monday. Soldiers may obtain tickets either through first sergeants or section chiefs.

Reservations may be made, according to the local president, by sending a check for tickets to the organization at P. O. Box 2626, Fort Benning.

Col. Glenn is a combat veteran of both World War II and the Korean War. He began his training as an astronaut in 1958, and on Feb. 20, 1962, he piloted the Mercury-Atlas 6 "Friendship 7" spacecraft on America's manned orbital mission.

At the time of his retirement from active duty with the Marine Corps in 1965, he had logged more than 5,400 hours of flying time, including almost 2,000 in jet aircraft.

ATC Takes Extra Precaution To Prevent Virus Infections

Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, Commander of the Army Training Center, has "pulled all the stops" to prevent unnecessary illness and loss of training caused by respiratory infections among trainees. These infections range from the common cold to meningitis.

Between these two are the illnesses which cause the most sickness at the Training Center — the "Acute Respiratory Diseases" (ARD), formerly called "Upper Respiratory Infections" (URI).

ARD is caused by viruses which are spread from one person to another by minute droplets of moisture. They travel by sneezing, coughing and even during normal conversation. The problem is greatest in groups of people who are closely associated for the first time. Symptoms of ARD are fever, cough, sore throat and fatigue.

The fatigue tends to reduce resistance against other illnesses, thereby increasing the susceptibility to diseases such as meningitis.

The preventive program ordered by Davis emphasizes the "packet" system.

Traffic accidents on Sunday and Tuesday took the lives of a Fort Benning soldier and a civilian employe.

Several holiday traffic and home accidents resulted in two other fatalities.

'Duty, Honor, Country' Applies To Every Officer, Says Harris

Gen. (Ret.) Hugh P. Harris, who was Continental Army commander before his retirement here in 1965, told four advanced Infantry Officer classes Wednesday that "competency, dedication and high moral code" are the keys to higher rank.

Gen. Harris, now president of The Citadel, observed that "The lack of moral fiber has most serious consequences in our world today. Concerning this, more is asked of the men and women in the armed forces than of any other group in the United States."

The general said each person must establish his own credo, and added that he could think no better one than "Duty, Honor, Country," the motto of West Point.

Subject of his speech in Marshall Auditorium was "Moral Fiber." He told the officers they have the opportunity to learn at the Infantry School the fundamentals to meet their responsibilities later.

Gen. Harris was commandant of the school in 1960. Among his other important commands were I Corps in Korea and Seventh Army.

"In your day," he advised, "you will not have the luxury of making many mistakes. Hold no fear of the future, however, for mistakes can often lead to success when a dynamic, forceful man makes them."

He said the one requirement for survival today is to gauge correctly the threat against the U. S. "You must believe that our nation was forged in the furnace of faith — the faith that free men will prevail."

Killed Tuesday night on his way home was SFC Jack Keith Wise, 37, assigned to the 529th Personnel Service Co. The Georgia State Patrol said Wise was making a left turn at U.S. 280 and 27 in Cusseta and was struck by another auto about 5:15 p.m.

Another soldier died Dec. 21 in a traffic accident in Louisiana on his way home for leave.

Another Benning soldier was burned to death in Stowe, Vt., apparently the victim of smoking in bed.

Several accidents in homes and barracks prompted Gen. John M. Wright Jr., post commander, to remind unit commanders of hazards of smoking in bed and using flammables indoors for cleaning.

According to Norman Evans, post safety director, several accidents were blamed on smoking in bed on post over the holidays. A wife of a serviceman was burned while using gasoline to clean a dress at home.

On the brighter side, Evans noted that more than 10,000 drivers had completed the Defensive Driving classes at Fort Benning in 1968.

nicknamed, he served two years with the 199th Light Infantry Brigade at Fort Benning, and in Vietnam.

Col. Nixon is a native of Gardiner, Me., and has been S-3 officer of the 197th Inf. Bde. He has served with the 2nd Inf. Div. in Korea and with the Military Assistance Command, Vietnam in Vietnam.

Col. Johnson departs the "Polar Bears" to attend the Armed Forces Staff College, in Norfolk, Va., where he will be one of some 80-85 Army officers in attendance. The course is six months long and features a series of seminars on aspects of command and familiarization with other services.

One out of six men entering service from July through November was a graduate. A little over half, 51 per cent, enlisted for special options and 37 per cent can expect assignment to a combat arms. As a result special interviewers have been sent to reception stations to counsel and assist highly trained draftees into fields the Army needs.

When will the M-16 rifle become the standard weapon for basic trainees?

The current target date is the summer of 1969.

NORTH KOREAN VIOLATIONS

How many times have the North Koreans violated the Armistice agreement in the past year?

The United Nations Command in Korea reported 214 serious incidences to the United Nations Security Council since January 21, 1968 when a band of North Koreans attempted to assassinate President Park.

As a result, 72 members of the United Nations Command, and 141 South Koreans have been killed.

How many soldiers wear glasses?

About one out of every three soldiers in the Army today wears glasses.

RETIRED PAY RAISE

When does the pay raise for retired military go into effect?

On Feb. 1 approximately 600,000 retirees will receive a 4 per cent pay raise. Receiving the raise are those who are getting their retirement checks based on the pre-July, 1968 pay scale.

Those who retired or will retire between that date and the next pay raise this coming July will have their retirement computed on the bases of their years of service plus 2.1 per cent.

The new increase will be reflected in the checks received in March.

I am going overseas shortly and am sending my wife and child to her parents home until I return. Am I going to lose my 30 dollars a month Family Separation Allowance?

Yes, the comptroller General has ruled that payment can not be made to servicemen whose dependents move into a relatives home during his absence. You are among the estimated 24,700 military men affected.

Assure your education through savings bonds

A good education is no longer a luxury, it is a necessity. More and more, business and industry are demanding that their employes be equipped with a solid academic background in order to meet and solve the complex problems of the space age.

The man in uniform, of course, has a head start toward obtaining an extensive formal education. With the various in-service programs available to a personnel on active duty and the provisions of the G.I. Bill for former service personnel, you can be confident of having the necessary assistance to help you obtain your education.

There is however, another matter to consider. When your son or daughter is ready for college, will you be ready to pay for it?

Recent surveys show that the cost of attending an institution of higher learning in the mid-1960's averaged about $1,600 a year at public institutions and $2,430 for private ones. And, there's every indication that the cost will continue to rise.

Self-help, tuition grants and student loans may answer part of the problem later, but to be sure that this educational goal is within the reach of you and your children, a groundwork of systematic saving should be laid right now.

What better way to save for the future than through U. S. Savings Bonds and Fyeedom Shares. They have a special combination of features making them uniquely suitable for an education fund—either for you or for your children.

Savings Bonds and Freedom Shares have the safety of a government guarantee; adaptability to a long-range goal while still being readily available for any emergency; an assured interest rate when held to maturity; easy availability though two automatic purchase plans; and important tax advantages.

All of these make it well worth your while to carefully consider using U. S. Savings Bonds and Freedom Shares as the base for your personal education fund. Whether you use them to augment the financial assistance you can receive for your own education or to provide that all-important college education for your children, they are a safe and sensible investment in the future.

Start this year off right and begin your personal savings program with U.S. Savings Bonds and Freedom Shares. All of the information is readily available from the Bond Officer on your installation. (AFPS)

Patients chaplaincy service helps you in times of crisis

A chaplaincy service for patients requires an individual ministry. The effectiveness of this ministry is primarily not in what a chaplain does, but in what he can be to the patient. Much of the chaplain's ministry is done in crisis situations. These stress conditions bring to the surface of the patient's mind thoughts and feelings with which the chaplain is especially equipped to deal.

In the loneliness and meaninglessness that the person faces, the chaplain may by divine grace be accepting, understanding, hopeful and honest. However, he will be limited in the number of people to whom he can give intensive pastoral care, because he must have sufficient time to guage the feeling of each patient in depth.

He can bear only so much of the anxiety of those in deep need; otherwise his ministry to all would sink to the level of routine banalities.

An adequate individual ministry must include the following: initial pastoral calls; pastoral care of the surgical patient, of the critically ill, of the patient with long-term illness, of children, of the maternity patient, of the mentally ill, of the patient with terminal illness; follow-up of referrals and requests for pastoral counseling; and pastoral care of the putpatient.

INITIAL PASTORAL CALLS: Upon his arrival at the hospital, or shortly thereafter, each patient is visited by a chaplain. Admission to a hospital is an anxiety provoking experience for most people; it means leaving the familiar and known for the strange and unknown.

The strangeness of a hospital and hospital personnel increases the patient's feelings of helplessness. A separation from friends and loved ones results in loneliness. An expression of friendly concern by a chaplain at this time can mean much to the patient.

This initial pastoral call should be the beginning of a relationship of mutual understanding and respect — a relationship in which the patient feels free to seek help in dealing with such matters as his relationship to his God, his fellow man and himself.

In a unique way the chaplain represents both the hospital, with its concern for the well-being of the patient, and the religious community with its compassion for the individual.

PASTORAL ROUNDS: A chaplain through his pastoral rounds expresses a concern for the patient as an individual. He helps the patient to know that God and the religious community remember him and feel he is important.

These regular contacts with the patient make it seem natural for the chaplain to call before surgery, or when a patient is placed "on critical". Regular pastoral calls help prevent the frightening but prevalent opinion that the chaplain calls only on those who are approaching death.

The chaplain makes his presence felt in the indefinable atmosphere which makes a good hospital. This influence affects all workers from the lowest to the highest. The chaplain cannot accomplish this alone; he must work shoulder to shoulder with the administrator and the medical staff.

Quote of the Week

"The Long Gray Line has never failed us. Were you to do so, a million ghosts in olive drab, in brown khaki, in blue and gray would rise from their white crosses thundering those mighty words: Duty, Honor, Country." —General of the Army Douglas MacArthur, at the U.S. Military Academy, May 12, 1962.

COL. (LEFT) AND MRS. KEIRSEY SAY GOODBYE TO TSB
Becomes USAIS Chief of Staff

TSB Honors Keirseys At Farewell Dinner

A farewell dinner was given to Col. James D. Keirsey recently in the Main Officer's Open Mess. Col. Keirsey, former TSB command ing officer has become Army Chief of Staff, USAIS.

Following the dinner, Col. Ernest J. Cherney, brigade XO, gave a few introductory remarks. He spoke about Col. Keirsey and some of the events which had taken place since the colonel had taken command.

Keirsey came to the brigade on August 5, 1968. In his parting words at the dinner, he said that he was sorry he was leaving after only a short stay, but that the "brigade seems to rise above" the problems caused by people leaving. He also thanked brigade personnel for "the gracious way we (he and his wife) were received and this gracious way of saying goodbye."

Mrs. Keirsey then gave her goodbyes to the wives of the brigade, saying that she had enjoyed working with women who were "vibrant and looking forward to an army life."

The highlight o the evening was the presentation of a plaque and a scrapbook to Col. Keirsey. The scrapbook contained photos of the battalions and companies in TSB and events which took place during the colonel's tenure.

The front page was a letter signed by Col. Cherney and each of the battalion commanders. The letter expressed their gratitude and thanked the colonel for his leadership during the past months. A portion of it read: "Your positive leadership and willingness to listen were very instrumental in instilling a sense of confidence in everyone privileged to serve under you."

New Social Security For Disabled Widows

Recent changes in the social security law this year will benefit many people here in the eleven county area served by Columbus. In making this announcement Robert E. O'Neal, District Manager of the Columbus Social Security Office, brought out one of the most significant changes.

Now a disabled widow who is at least 50 years old can get social security checks, even though she has never worked herself. The benefits will be based on her deceased husband's work under social security.

Before this new law there was no provision for paying social security benefits to a widow because of her disability.

O'Neal explained the basic requirements for this new benefit: (1) The widow must be unable to do any gainful work because of a physical or mental impairment, (2) She must have been disabled at the time of the husband's death or became disabled within 7 years after his death. If survivor's benefits were paid at the time of the husband's death to the widow and children, this requirement can be met within 7 years after these payments stopped.

This new provision also applies to certain disabled widowers and certain divorced wives who meet specific support requirements.

He urged all persons who feel they could qualify under this new law to contact their social security office. The office in Columbus is located at 301-15th St. and is open from 8:45 a. m. to 5 p. m. Monday through Friday. For the convenience of those who cannot get in to the office during the regular hours the office will remain open on Saturdays from 9 a. m. to 12 noon.

Dear Community Service

Dear Army Community Service:

I am an Army wife who wants to help as a volunteer for the Army Community Service. I would like to know if any committee has openings for volunteers and if there is somewhere I may keep my children while I am serving.

Answer:

The success of the Army Community Service Program depends on volunteers who serve on a variety of committees. Your services will be welcomed at the reception desk at Army Community Services at Hospitality House; or on the Handicapped Children, Publicity, Transportation and Casualty Committees. Don't worry about what to do with your children, ACS will treat your little ones to a stay in Toyland while you're working. ACS

Judo Demonstration Featured at RN Lunch

A demonstration of judo self-defense techniques highlighted the monthly meeting of the Fort Benning Registered Nurses Association (RNA) Monday at Martin Army Hospital.

The program was presented by S. Sgt. James Dezine, a hand-to-hand instructor on the combat conditioning committee of the Ranger Training Command, and by Mrs. George Wayde.

Mrs. Lyndell Porterfield, association chairman, welcomed as special guests, Col. Catherine Betz, chief nurse at the hospital; Donald H. Boyette, Red Cross field representative here; Miss Edith Ott, Red Cross recreation chairman at the hospital; and Mrs. Clinton D. Harvey, chairman of hospital volunteers.

Mrs. David Hacking, departing chairman of RNA, received a silver dish from the association members.

After a brief business meeting, committee chairmen for the coming year were introduced, including Mrs. David Gerg, program chairman; Mrs. Colin J. Campbell, bloodmobile chairman; Mrs. Dallas Cox, publicity chairman; Mrs. Horatio Tazeau, enrollment chairman, and Mrs. David Dixon, PTA representative.

Also introduced were the three members of the telephone committee, Mrs. Steve Bernhard, Mrs. Milton Horiwitz and Mrs. Rena Wynn. These ladies have the responsibility of informing the members of the association as to what the program for the coming meetings will be.

All inactive Registered Nurses in the Tri-city area are invited to attend the association's monthly meetings, held on the first Monday of each month at 9:30 a. m. in the second floor conference room of Martin Army Hospital.

Nighttime In Vietnam: Damp, Cold

CHU LAI, Vietnam (AMERICAL IO)—The stale air is alive with flies diving and pecking, jumping along the arms and around the neck. They'll stop for some seconds, rubbing their legs together, stroll around on flesh like it was a playground, take off and return. Mosquitoes are born at nightfall, it seems. They hang in the air and land without flourish. They come in quietly and know enough not to be seen. Mosquitoes cherish the dark. It looks as if the great banks of clouds in the west are lifting up the round, orange moon, offering it to our view. With extreme caution, and what looks like wisdom, the male lizard steps down the path from the bush. In the white light his skin glows; he looks lit up from inside. Somebody throws him an apple; he carries it off whole. The gigt seems to make the lizard a pet. The act is like feeding the family dog.

But the air is wet, and we need protection. Something about a poncho can make it hated. Perhaps it is the smell it gets, from mildew. Perhaps the grains of sand which stick. Perhaps its bulkiness; its willingness to come unfolded, the tie string which grows too long at one end. But the air is turning cold; and it seems to an American that Vietnam is the one place which will not freeze, but the day's sweat turns icy now. It doesn't seem possible, but the heat of the day can't be remembered at night. The poncho offers warmth and the smell becomes unnoticeable, the sand disappears.

You will always hear another mosquito, just before the edge of sleep. But in war we fight to make all sounds sweet, and soon after that final insect's bite some thoughts can turn their way home. But in the forests here, still we're living in muck. There's a black rifle seated under your arm, and we ask why it is that I must curl up with this cold piece of metal. Sometimes there's not much to think about outside of what might happen tonight. So your mind goes step by step, back in the day's time, recounting the sand got in the weapon, water in the chamber, the meticulous hour you spent brushing and wiping the weapon free of mud and dust. The drudgery of checking and rechecking the parts. Your mind thinks back to check again what's already been done, to decide, to make sure it's working right, that your bandolier is full and the magazines are clean.

But still you are working to keep thoughts complacent. You feel good having your boots almost dry beside you, and there is a new pair of socks for the morning. You begin to forget the day's exhaustion, the move from hill to hill to hill, the run for cover under sniper fire, the explosion when a booby trap went off ahead of you, injuring a man in the company. You thought then, of the circumstances, and you felt lucky not to have been walking point that day. The brain racks itself thinking of odds and — what if the trap had been more successful, what for your buddy then?

In sleep though, what was paid during the day gets the medication of night. And it becomes good to remember the familiarity of the moon, the same sight you grew up with as a boy, when you were out camping, when you went fishing. You realize that your job here has not been permanent hell and this time next year you won't be living in bugs and mud; you think of the girl you know, and of the common things which you've grown up with, eating, drinking . . . and driving around.

Enemy Arsenal Shown in Museum

LAI KHE, Vietnam (Div)It with weapons ranging from simple crossbows and punji stakes to sophisticated rockets and automatic weapons, the enemy has foughtions.

A representative sample of these weapons plus quantities of other VC equipment and memorabilia of the Vietnam war can be found in the 3rd Brigade Museum in Lai Khe.

Dedicated to the "Iron Men of the Iron Brigade," the museum can be an introduction to what has gone before for men newly arrived in the Big Red One. Names of operations such as Attleboro, Cedar Falls, Yorktown, Battle Creek, Manhattan and others dominate labels that identify the captured weapons, many of which were made in Communist China and the Soviet Union.

Soldiers from all over the division and guests from other units and civilian organizations visit the museum each week.

Here they can examine a .50 caliber machinegun that was captured after shooting down a jet plane during the Battle of Bau Ban in March 1966; a group of rockets that were fired into the Lai Khe basecamp during the Tet offensive early this year; shotguns and carbines captured during Operation Danbury by the 1st Battalion, 16th Infantry; Soviet submachine guns captured by the 2nd Battalion, 28th Infantry during Operation Yorktown, or a homemade shotgun captured by the 2nd Battalion, 16th Infantry during a road clearing operation.

The list goes on as one observes captured bicycles, field gear, gas masks and even sewing machines taken from a VC tunnel. There are also punji stakes and Chinese claymore mines.

A large portion of the collected items in the museum has been donated to the division's museum at Wheaton, Ill. No time has been set as to when they will be shipped stateside.

'Rangers' Work During Harvest To Keep Rice From Viet Cong

DI AN, Vietnam — To keep rice in the hands of the Vietnamese farmers who raised it and away from the Viet Cong who would like it, 1st Infantry Division forces conducted a specialized series of operations during the recent harvest season.

While regulating the movement of this all-important food, the intent of the 2nd Battalion, 16th Infantry "Rangers" is to pacify the people of the villages in their area of operations near Di An.

During the day, reconnaissance - in - force missions seek out the enemy in his sanctuaries. Other elements venture into the villages and hamlets distributing medical aid, and make the people aware of the allied presence in the area.

Harvest sites are watched and identification cards checked to make sure Communists are not stealing rice from the farmers by dressing like peasants and imitating them. Operations designed to intercept enemy elements attempting to steal rice from the fields at night involved placing ambushes along strategic routes.

Each family is allowed 220 pounds of rice in the home for its own use. Anything over this amount is stored until needed in district warehouses where it cannot be stolen.

WALKING GUARD IN RICE PADDY
Harvest Time Brings Special Duty

Summarizing the "Ranger's" mission, Delta Company Commander, Captain Hubert S. Shaw, stated an over-all goal of the program: "We want the people to trust in us and work with us, but not to the point of dependency. We want them to develop a belief in their own capabilities so they will be able to say 'no' to the VC Cong when taxed for food and money . . . even without the presence of our forces," he said.

Project 100,000 Puts More Men in Uniform

By Commanders Digest

Project One Hundred Thousand, DOD's program to give young men previously disqualified for military service an opportunity to qualify as fully satisfactory servicemen, completed its first two years on Sept. 30 and was termed successful by program director I. M. Greenberg.

Greenberg pointed out the 140,000 quota for Phase I and II set at the beginning of the program in October 1966, was not only met but exceeded.

Secretary of Defense Clark M. Clifford commended the program and said, "New Standards men in uniform are making their way in a highly acceptable manner. That this is so is surely the consequence of the exceptional skill, effort and enthusiasm which each department has brought to the task of training and motivating its New Standards men."

"New Standards" is the term applied to volunteers and draftees who score low on the Armed Forces Qualification Test and certain medical remedial men who may now be accepted in the armed forces.

Phase III of the program, starting on Oct. 1 and running through June 30, 1969, is now in progress. The shortened nine-month phase will bring the continuing program in alignment with the fiscal year.

Although the goals were numerical in the first two phases, quotas in Phase III, and in the future will be based on percentages of total accessions for the armed forces. Greenberg said this would keep the program standardized regardless of whether total accessions go up or down.

Project One Hundred Thousand is aimed at men who fail to score well on standard written tests but can qualify as fully satisfactory servicemen when exposed to modern instructional techniques and on-the-job training, and to those who are disqualified for physical defects which can be corrected in a short period of time.

During the years preceding the program, more than one-third of the men reaching military age each year were declared unfit for service under the mental and physical standards established. Of these, more than half could meet the mental standards composed of written tests and educational requirements.

Volunteers and draftees who score as low as the 10th percentile on the AFQT are now acceptable under the program. The deficiency in mental ability is made up by concentrated and specialized attention during their training early in their service career.

New Standards men are trained along with all other men in regular training centers and schools and are not singled out as a special group. However, some are given extra time to bring their performance up to acceptable requirements.

This is accomplished through recycling of certain portions of training, assignment to a special training unit, extra time for skill training and educational upgrading.

The medical remedial portion of the program makes acceptable those men with specific defects that are correctable in six weeks or less by minor surgery or physical conditioning.

Greenberg emphasized that although the entrance standards for these men have been lowered in order to give them a chance to serve, performance standards remain the same. "All men accepted under the program are required to meet minimum performance standards established by each military service in order to be retained," he said.

Of the total that have come into the service under the program, nearly 95 per cent successfully completed their basic training

Museum Receives Posters

The Infantry Museum has received an unusual collection of WW I posters and original cartoons.

The presentation was made to the museum by Mrs. Carl E. Frisby, wife of the late Lt. Col. Frisby.

Her husband served several years of his career at Fort Benning, and following his retirement, he served on the faculty of the University of Georgia extension system and on the faculty of Auburn University.

The posters were collected by Capt. Johnathan Elliott Frisby, father-in-law of the donor. An officer in WW I, he gathered the signed originals while in Europe, and carried them with him through combat and travel until he was able to bring them back to the United States.

The Frisbys have made several other donations to the museum in recent years.

She is regent of the Oglethorpe chapter of the National Society of Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR).

A spokesman for the museum said that preparations are underway to appropriately display the recent gift.

Fort Sill Celebrates 100th Year

Maj. Gen. Philip H. Sheridan

On Jan. 8, 1869, Union cavalry leader General Sheridan founded Camp Wichita, Okla., close by a cliff formation known as Medicine Bluffs. The general named the distinguished Civil War veteran and Medal of Honor holder Maj. Gen. Benjamin H. Grierson as the first camp commander. Less than six months later, General Sheridan renamed the camp Fort Sill in honor of Brig. Gen. Joshua Sill, a U. S. Military Academy classmate who died leading a column of Sheridan's troops during the Civil War.

FORT SILL, Okla. (ANF) — Thousands of military and civilian members of the Fort Sill community will celebrate the post's centennial year in 1969, marking 100 years of progress from a tiny cavalry camp to the Army's sophisticated center of field artillery training.

During a century on the rolling Oklahoma prairie where Fort Sill stands, cavalry horses chased Indian ponies, horsedrawn wagons strained under aging field cannon and modern tracked vehicles rumbled along with weapons of enormous destructive capability as the post played an increasingly significant role in the nation's military life.

At a U.S. test site in May 1953, Fort Sill soldiers fired the world's first atomic artillery round. The post has come a long way from its beginning in January 1869 as a cavalry fort in the heart of the Indian Territory of the south central plains.

Since that first nuclear round, progress has been even more rapid at Fort Sill. The first troop-served HONEST JOHN Rocket was fired there in 1954, and, with the arrival of a CORPORAL missile battalion, the post entered the missile age in 1956.

Today, Fort Sill's U. S. Army Artillery and Missile Center annually trains thousands of soldiers in handling the Army's powerful array of artillery guns, rockets and missiles.

These artillerymen now wear a distinctive insignia symbolic of their proud heritage as the soldiers responsible for what General Maxwell D. Taylor has described as "the most explosive force the Army possesses."

The artillery has been separated into two branches, field artillery and air defense. The insignia of a missile surmounting two crossed field guns, worn by artillerymen since 1957, now is worn only by air defense branch members.

At Fort Sill, the field artillerymen once again wear the crossed cannon insignia introduces in 1907 and worn in peacetime garrison and in battle around the world for half a century.

173rd Div. Party Set

A reunion of members of the 173rd Airborne Brigade will be held at the USAIC recreation center here Saturday Jan. 18. at 6 p.m.

Guest speaker will be Maj. Gen. John R. Deane Jr., commander of the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N. C., and commander of the 173rd in 1966-67.

Tickets will be available at the door or in advance from unit representatives on the post for $2. The names of the representatives will be placed on company bulletin boards.

Tickets and billeting arrangements will also be available through Capt. Brandon Weathers, commander of the 44th Co. (Abn.), 4th Stu. Bn.

The informal get-together will include a memorial service for members of the brigade who have died in Vietnam.

Medical Care of Viets Expanded

DETROIT (ANF) — Medical care for Vietnamese civilians is becoming an important responsibility of the U. S. Army Medical Department.

Maj. Gen. Glenn J. Collins, deputy surgeon general of the Army, outlined the department's growing civilian-oriented activities in Vietnam during a recent meeting of the American Public Health Association here.

The civilian medical care program in Vietnam is more familiarly known as Army medical civic action. It is conducted in addition to the medical department's primary mission of supporting U. S. Army soldiers, Gen. Collins said.

The first organized program was started in 1963, when Army advisory teams began working with the Vietnamese military medical forces. This program has been extended to involve medical personnel assigned to U. S. military units. These men use their spare time to bring modern medical, dental and veterinary services to the local population.

At the request of President Johnson, Gen. Collins said, military medical teams were provided to work in Vietnamese civilian hospitals, beginning in late 1965. These teams rotate as needed and work under the direction of the U. S. Agency for International Development.

The most recent program, which began last July, provides hospitalization for Vietnamese civilian war casualties at established military hospitals and at medical care centers specially constructed for handling civilian war casualties.

Gen. Collins emphasized that providing these services "takes people and supplies." He praised the work of "a large group of unsung heroes — the supply personnel of the Army Medical Department."

OCS Enlistments Jump To Three Years in March

By Commanders Digest

All male Officer Candidate School applicants, except members of the Regular Army and Reserve Components on active duty, must soon enlist in the Regular Army for a three-year period upon selection for training. Department of Defense officials announce the new ruling becomes effective March 1, 1969.

For those applying for OCS on or after March 1, the following rules will apply:

Members of the Regular Army with three or more years, but less than six months of service remaining on their current term of service at time of enrollment in an Officer Candidate School, must extend their enlistment a sufficient period of time in order to complete OCS training.

Members of the Regular Army who enlisted for less than three years must extend their enlistment for a minimum of 12 months.

Members of the Regular Army with less than three years' service who enlisted in the Regular Army for a period of three years, but who have less than six months remaining on their current term of service at the time of enrollment in an Officer Candidate School, must extend their enlistment a sufficient period to complete OCS training.

OCS candidates who, because of illness, turn back to a subsequent class, or for any reason do not have sufficient service remaining to complete Officer Candidate School, must extend their term of service a sufficient period of time to complete OCS training.

Members of Reserve Components on active duty must agree to remain on active duty in their present status for a minimum of three years' total active federal military service. Those with more than three years of active Federal military service must agree to remain on active duty a sufficient period of time to complete OCS training.

OCS "College Option" applicants must enlist in the Regular Army for a period of three-years upon selection for OCS training. However, those college option enlistees who enlisted prior to 1 March will continue with their previously stated active duty obligations.

Members of the Army of the United States (inductees) must accept a discharge from the AUS and enlist in the Regular Army for a period of three years upon selection for OSC training.

Those individuals who withdraw from the OSC program any time after approval for OCS, or who fail to graduate from OCS for any reason, will be required to complete the time remaining on their term of enlistment, reenlistment or extension as the case may be. However, those individuals who are discharged from the AUS and enlist in the Regular Army for OCS training who fail to graduate or withdraw from the OCS program may apply for discharge under AR 635-200 not earlier than 60 days prior to and to be effective upon completion of a total of three years' active federal service.

These changes in the enlisted active duty obligation for OCS training will not change the total time spent in service for those who are commissioned from OCS.

Civilian Aide Wins Service Award

The Army's highest award for public service, the Department of the Army Decoration for Distinguished Civilian Service, has been presented to Charles S. Stevenson for 27 years of voluntary service to the Army.

Stevenson, civilian aide to the secretary of the army from Missouri, received the award from Secretary of the Army Stanley R. Resor in a Pentagon ceremony.

A veteran of WW I, Stevenson is one of the senior civilian aides and has completed 14 years of service in that capacity.

His interest in the military began when he publicized Army problems and activities after the passage of the Selective Service Act in 1940. He also helped form the Kansas City WW II Civil Defense Program and later the Missouri State Guard.

Stevenson then organized and was chairman of the city's Returning Veterans Committee after WW II. He was also first president of the Armed Forces Council of Greater Kansas City which supported recruiting.

Following his appointment as civilian aide in 1954, Stevenson formed and was first president of the Henry Leavenworth Chapter of the Association of the U. S. Army (AUSA). In 1960, he was elected national vice-president of the AUSA.

Last October Stevenson was given the AUSA President's Gold Medal for his support of national defense.

Hall Gets Silver Star

The Silver Star and the Legion of Merit were posthumously awarded to Lt. Col. Kenneth W. Hall in a recent ceremony at Fort Benning. The awards were accepted by his widow, Mrs. Mary E. Hall of Columbus.

Hall was serving as commanding officer of the 3rd Bn., 7th Inf. 9th Inf. Bde. in Vietnam last May 8, directing troops from his helicopter as they fought a Viet Cong force in the Gia Dinh Province.

When the colonel noted that several of his men were wounded and needed medical evacuation he ordered his helicopter to land. Hall then left his aircraft and began to help evacuate the wounded.

According to the citation, he remained in an exposed position in order to place suppressive fire against the enemy which enabled the wounded to safely reach the helicopter.

Hall repeated this evacuation process three more times while directing his men and supporting artillery fire in the engagement of the enemy.

20,000 Reservists, Guardsmen Out During 1969

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Secretary of the Army Stanley R. Resor has announced plans for the release from active duty by Christmas this year of 20,000 members of the Army National Guard and Army Reserve mobilized last spring.

This includes all members in units mobilized last May and, in addition, the individuals subsequently mobilized from the Individual Ready Reserves to provide replacements. Plans call for the release of all mobilized Gurdsmen and Reservists by Dec. 15, 1969. For some, this will mean release from active duty at least five months earlier than expected.

Of the units mobilized, about half have been sent to Vietnam, beginning last August. The remaining units have become part of the Strategic Army Forces in the United States, replacing in many cases active Army units that were sent to Vietnam.

The members of the Army National Guard and Reserve who are serving or will serve in Vietnam include not only members of the units deployed to Vietnam, but some individuals from mobilized units in the Strategic Army Forces.

The release plan is as follows:

Guardsmen and Reservists whose reserve obligation expires prior to the time they would otherwise be released will be released not later than the date of the expiration of their obligation.

All Guardsmen and Reservists who serve in Vietnam will be released after completion of the normal one-year tour of duty in Vietnam or Dec. 15, 1969, whichever is earlier.

All other mobilized Gardsmen and Reservists will be released between Dec. 1 and Dec. 15, 1969.

The net effect of this action will be to release about half of the mobilized members by Oct. 31, 1969, and the remainder by Dec. 15, 1969.

For those who were members of mobilized units, this results in release at least five months before the expiratin of the two-year period of active duty authorized by law.

For those individuals mobilized from the Individual Ready Reserve the result is release on or before the expiration of the active duty authorized by law.

To prevent this demobilization from lowering the readiness of the active Army forces, draft calls will continue to be adjusted by an amount sufficient to cover those releases. This will provide sufficient lead time to make sure that trained men are available to replace the Reservists and Guardsmen at the time of their release.

Should conditions in Vietnam permit, the Army announced, consideration can be given at a later date to a final release of all Reservists and Guardsmen earlier than Dec 15, 1969.

The units that were mobilized will be reestablished in the Army Reserve and National Guard beginning in January 1970.

Drivers Keep Center On The Move

By Spec. 4 Ken Sturzenacker

Members of the 533rd Trans. Co. maintain a strong, competitive spirit as they provide for the transportation needs of the Infantry Center.

The competition is with the members of Co. C, of the 58th Supply and Service Bn. who also drive support for the various units of the Infantry Center.

The two companies, both in CTC, alternate in one phase of their total mission, taking Ranger trainees to the mountain Ranger training area in Dahlonega, Ga. This consists of spending three weeks in the mountains of north Georgia, driving under severe conditions.

First Lt. Joseph G. Hauskey, commander of Co. C, says "The mountain area driving provides excellent training for our personnel, making them better drivers wherever they aree."

According to 1st. Lt. Charles F. Campbell, who commanded the 533rd, the driving commitments have caused a few changes in maintenance schedules.

"We have a seven or eight man crew that pulls normal maintenance in the evening and at night to keep as many of our trucks on the road as possible," he said.

Halusky has instituted the same type of maintenance schedule for his unit, and feels "the night schedule for servicing the unit's vehicles has been extremely successful in enabling us to perform our mission."

Campbell has turned his command over to 1st. Lt. Jake D. Mowrey.

The members of the 533rd have contributed their support to a needy family in Columbus, as part of their sharing for Christmas.

Both companies came to Fort Benning from Germany in September of this year, and have been providing transportation support for ATC and the various Infantry School units, including OC and NCOC companies.

Col. Explains U.S. Policies To OC Grads

By Pvt. George Burks

Kenneth B. Fonville of Greenwich, Conn., was named the distinguished graduate of Officer Candidate class 1-69 at graduation exercises in Marshall Auditorium.

Col. Robert M. Piper, brigade commander, told the class its graduation held a special significance for him since it was the first to go through a complete cycle during his tenure.

Col. Piper touched only briefly on strictly military matters, and centered primarily on current U. S. foreign policy.

He said there are several factors which tend to break down communication to the public concerning U.S. involvement in Southeast Asia. One of these factors, he added, is the proliferation of the press and the difficulties involved in covering a conflict covering 44 provinces of South Vietnam, in which each situation is different.

Col. Piper also discussed the "limited" warfare waged in Vietnam, and suggested that this is necessary in order to avoid escalating conflict in other areas of the world.

British General Visits Next Week

Fifty-nine officers from the School of War in Argentina will take an orientation tour of the post next week.

The group, headed by Brig. Gen. Sánchez De Bustamante, director of the school, will arrive Tuesday.

43rd Engineers Stay Busy With Varied Building Jobs

By Spec.5 John Munford

Pass by any troop construction project at Fort Benning and chances are good that the 43rd Engineer Bn., 93ist Engineer Gp., CTC, is involved in the project.

The battalion, which has been here since 1966 and under the 93ist since February, 1968, completed 34 separate projects during fiscal 1968 and seven more are currently in the design or construction stage, according to Maj. Walter D. Needham, battalion operations officer.

All construction projects are handed down to the 43rd by the Post Engineers. In most cases the battalion operations section designs the work, develops bills of material, estimates project cost and then after receiving approval from the Post Engineers, begins the construction.

This presents no particular problem for the operations section as a civil engineer, pipeline engineer and construction officer map out the project plans utilizing the soils analysts, surveyors and draftsmen organic to the section.

Success Key

The key to the success of the construction projects is constant coordination with the Post Engineers. "By coordinating with them, we are able to channel our capabilities into a continually successful operation," Needham explained. A weekly construction progress report is dispatched to the Engineers in order to help them schedule projects for the 43rd.

Basically the 43rd Battalion has two responsibilities: training and maintaining the highest possible operational readiness with assigned personnel and equipment and also, providing maximum post support compatible with mission, which includes both construction and detail support.

The battalion, commanded by Lt. Col. Maurice K. Kurtz, is composed of three line companies which are engaged in construction projects. Companies B, C, and D each have an earth moving platoon which speeds horizontal construction as roads and airfields. Two construction platoons are part of each company for vertical construction capability.

Co. A provides direct support maintenance for all of the battalion engineer equipment which includes bulldozers, scrapers, front loaders, graders, cranes and various rollers. Co. A also has an equipment platoon which provides additional equipment for use on construction projects in support of the line companies. The battalion maintenance shop provides backup organizational maintenance for all vehicles in the battalion.

Rock Supply

Company A also maintains a rock quarry near Fortson, Ga. The quarry operation has been in the hands of the battalion for several months and provides all sizes of crushed rock for 43rd construction projects. Quarry equipment is capable of turning out 75 tons of rock per hour.

Currently the engineer battalion is working on several projects. Also, the design for complete rehabilitation of the Young's Pool area, formerly the location of the old NCO Club is underway. The pool will be filled, storm drainage installed, a pavilion with latrines erected, and the area cleared for use as an outdoor recreation area.

The engineers are constructing a confinement facility on the grounds of the Post Stockade. When completed, the building will be used to house parolees. A target shed, control tower and earth berm are being constructed at Fiske Pistol Range. Practically all capabilities of a line company will be utilized on this project to include carpentry, masonry, electrical and equipment operation.

By early 1969 the battalion will have completed construction on a six-mile stretch of River Road. Several other road improvement projects have been completed by the 43rd since their assignemnt to CTC.

Ready Reaction

The flexibility of the organization allows the 43rd to serve as a "ready reaction force" for civilian emergencies in nearby Georgia and Alabama communities. Early this year the water well facility collapsed at Ogletthorpe, Ga., creating an emergency for the townspeople and industrial concerns in the nearby community. The 43rd sent a team of men with a water purification unit mounted on a 2½-ton truck to the scene to render aid. The equipment stayed on the site for nearly six weeks until the town's well could be repaired.

College Graduates Get High Priority In Army This Year

WASHINGTON (ANF)—Department of the Army personnel officers expect between 60,000 and 80,000 college graduates to enter the Army's enlisted ranks through the draft or voluntary enlistments during the current fiscal year.

If this estimate proves correct, about one of every five persons inducted will be a college graduate. This is considerably higher than in past years when percentages have run about 5 to 8 per cent annually.

During the first five months of this fiscal year, from July 1 through Dec. 1, about 23,500 college graduates entered the Army. A little more than half of these men were drafted. The remainder voluntarily enlisted under various enlistment options.

The Army's personnel staff is closely monitoring the assignment and utilization of these graduates, with the primary objective of deriving the maximum benefit for the Army through the most efficient use of their abilities while maintaining equitable treatment for all Army personnel.

A Department of the Army study, conducted in anticipation of the increased number of college graduates on active duty, established priorities for assignments in which the abilities, technical knowledge and leadership potential of these individuals could best be used, without denying other personnel equal opportunities. The categories are the following:

—Priority I: Skills that can be directly correlated to college academic fields or personal preferences, such as officer training, warrant officer flight training, language training and the skills included in the scientific and engineering assistant program.

—Priority II: Skills that will challenge the leadership or technical capability of the college graduate, such as radar technology, automatic data processing, and duties with leadership potential in the combat arms.

—Priority III: Skills that are essential but do not fully challenge the average college graduate.

Since July 1, 1968, about 65 per cent of the college graduates coming onto active duty have been assigned Priority I assignments and about 35 per cent to Priority II assignments. Less than one per cent of these college graduates have been assigned to Priority III assignments.

New Playhouse Stage Helps Drama Program

By 1st Lt. Fred Vollrath

The Fort Benning Playhouse is undergoing extensive renovation providing the post with a stage and laboratory for the production of live theatrical performances.

Under the supervision of Johnnie M. Calitri, the scene designer and technical director, a new stage, scene shop and design studio, is being built with "scrouged materials and work details".

"The new facilities will enable us to function in a professional manner," said Calitri pointing out the new construction, "with the new design we will have the entire theater to use as a lab for people interested in the presentation of live plays."

The construction is of a temporary nature to enable its rapid and inexpensive removal if sufficient local interest warrants new and more expensive permanent facilities.

"Before we can turn our efforts toward purely artistic pursuits we need the physical plant to conduct them in," said Calitri, "I'd like to teach a class on theater design sometime in the future, but right now my efforts are directed toward building the shop to teach the course in."

Contract Bridge

By Spec. 4 Paul Manigione

An opening bid of two in any suit is always a demand for game. No matter what responder holds, he must bid and keep bidding until a game contract is reached.

If responder holds less than an answering hand (eight points or less) the conventional response is two No-Trump. This tell opener that you have, regardless of distribution, nothing of very great value or power and that he will probably have to make most of the contract in his hand. If his initial bid of two force was valid, he should be able to do this.

When, however, responder has definite power he makes a positive suit response, showing his length first then his Aces and Kings.

Opener's suit is immediately established if responder answers in that suit or if opener rebids his initial suit. In the case of the latter, responder should accept opener's suit as trump and never try to establish a suit of his own.

The proper response to a force bid when sufficient trump support is held by responder is a single raise. This bid tells opener that his trump suit is good and allows for the showing of Aces and Kings. Responder should not show a weak suit in response to a two-bid. A proper response suit will be headed by at least two honors out of five in the suit.

A typical hand would look like this:

The bidding would go, opener, two spades, responder three hearts, opener three spades, responder four spades, opener seven spades.

SYNOPSIS

THE LOST CONTINENT — A suspense thriller about a Caracus bound frighter carrying an illegal cargo, unstable passengers and exposives is blown off course and becomes shipwrecked. The survivors end up in a marsh overgrown with man-eating weeds that harbor a fleet of shipwrecks and supernatural monsters.

RIOT — A taut, minute-by-minute story of 48 hours of terror in a maximum security penitentiary when its toughest inmates break out of their isolation block, seize hostages and take over a portion of the prison. RIOT stars Jim Brown as the prisoner who unwittingly becomes involved in a prison break and whose cool head makes him one of the leaders. The film is frighteningly authentic in every detail and was filmed within the walls of an actual active prison with real convicts in all but a handful of the roles.

A MAN AND A WOMAN — A simple tale about the attraction between a film technician and a racing driver who both are widowed. It is a beautiful and sometimes breath-taking exposition of visual imagery, a free vigorous cinematic style with incidents that have poignancy and charm.

THE NIGHT THEY RAIDED MINSKY'S — Highly colorful and fast moving comedy depicting the birth of burlesque in New York's lower East Side during it's boyohemian period. Join the laugh fest built around that famous night when the costume fell off the bellydancer thus accidentally introducing the strip tease to polite society.

'Bullitt' Stars McQueen As Supercool Detective

Steve McQueen plays a super detective in "Bullitt," which opens today at the Georgia Theater. The movie, shot entirely in the San Francisco area by director Peter Yates, also stars Robert Vaughn and Jacqueline Bisset.

McQueen, playing a dedicated San Francisco detective who puts integrity above his career, gives another of the visceral performances that have made him an international star. McQueen's latest film was "The Thomas Crown Affair." Other films which he has made include "The Sand Pebbles," "The Great Escape," "Nevada Smith" and "The Cincinnati Kid." For one of the most thrilling sequences in 'Bullitt,' an automobile chase between McQueen and villains Paul Genge and Bill Hickman, instead of speeding up the cameras, actual speeds were attained which at times exceeded 115 miles per hour. McQueen, noted as an automobile and motorcycle racer, insisted on doing his own stunts, especially the auto chase.

Vaughn, who stars along with McQueen as a very ambitious young politician, become a world favorite as TV's "The Man from U.N.C.L.E." Before his enormous video success, Vaughn had starred in many features including "No Time To Be Young," "The Young Philadelphians," "The Caretakers," "The Venetian Affair" and, with McQueen, in "The Magnificent Seven." During the making of "Bullitt," Vaugh was busy studying for his Ph.D. degree in Communications at the University of Southern California; he received it shortly after the completion of his starring role.

Jacqueline Bisset, the young British actress who plays McQueen's girl friend, rose to quick fame in "The Detective." She first attracted attention in "Two for the Road" and recently starred in "The Sweet Ride." Jacqueline made no attempt to disguise her British accent in the role of Cathy. "However," said she, "I've been in the United States for over a year and it may be that my British accent isn't what it once was."

Don Gordon plays Delgetti, the detective who works closely with McQueen. He is one of the best-known faces on television, for which he won an Emmy nomination in a "Defenders" segment. In fact, he is so well-known for his TV police-officer roles that an ex-convict, ignoring the real-life cops accompanying Gordon, turned to the actor and said, "You haven't got anything on me. I've gone straight since the last time you arrested me."

Costumes for Miss Bisset were designed by Theadora Van Runkle of "Bonnie and Clyde" and "I Love You, Alice B. Toklas" fame. The screenplay is by Alan Trustman and is based on the novel "Mute Witness" by Robert L. Pike. William Fraker was the cinematographer, and Frank Keller was film editor.

What's Behind Failure of Cowboys To Win Big Ones?

By Rick Yeiser

Among the more perplexing mysteries of the past football season is the performance of the Dallas Cowboys. Picked by many to be the NFL champs, the Cowboys barely managed only to win the Playoff Bowl. They played well this year, and quite often played spectacularly. They led the NFL in total offense, averaging 365 yards game. Their defense was the fourth in the league, allowing only 259 yards a game. The difference between Dallas and its opponents was the largest this year.

They managed to win all but two regular season games and walked away with the Capital division. Only the Colts seemed to be capable of beating them, but the Cowboys never even made it to the final. Instead they were beaten by Cleveland 31-20.

The loss to the Browns marked the third time in as many years that the Dallas club has lost a big game. The Cowboys have the personnel and the talent to have won all of these contests, so it stands to reason that they don't have the attitude and leadership that makes championship teams.

Their quarterback, Don Meredith, is perenially among the league's leading passers. Every year he throws together a couple of 300-yard games yet each year he fails to make the big plays that could make his team a champion. Apparently, Don Meredith is a choke-artist.

He has been since 1965 when his play calling cost the Cowboys the Eastern Division championship. That year the Cowboys and the Browns were neck and neck for the division lead when the two met in a game that would decide who would play the Packers for the title. With two minutes left and the Browns three points ahead, Meredith led his team to a first and goal on the Browns one yard line.

The Cowboys looked like certain winners until Meredith called one of the worst plays in the history of the game, a pass over the middle. There must have been five Browns bunched up at the center of the field to stop a run, yet Meredith figured he could somehow throw the ball through them. He didn't, of course. Cleveland linebacker Vince Costello grabbed the pass about three yards in front of the Dallas receiver and fell to his knees.

Texas critics immediately began to call Meredith all sorts of nasty names, hinting all the time that he really wasn't a winner. The name-calling eased in the ensuing years when Meredith led the Cowboys to two straight division championships. Both seasons he had banner years in the statistic derby as he and the Cowboys terrorized the Eastern Division.

What nobody seemed to realize is that the Cowboys were never really hard-pressed these two years. There was never much pressure on Meredith to come up with the big play or big game. Yet in the games that counted against the Packers for the title, the Cowboys fell short both times. The only reason these games were even close is that the Dallas defense did a good job of containing the Packers. Meredith and his talented offense fell far short of expectation.

Meredith played like a rookie against Cleveland in this year's playoff. After two of his first passes were intercepted he was afraid to throw the ball, and thus relegated the Dallas offense to an ineffective rushing game. His team was so sterile and ineffective that Craig Morton, his backup man, replaced him and did a much better job moving the ball. Once again Meredith failed to pass the crucial test of a championship quarterback.

Against the Vikings in the meaningless Playoff Bowl Meredith was spectacular, but the game didn't count. Perhaps the Cowboys will be the NFL favorites again next year, but it should no longer be a mystery if they fail. They don't have the essential ingredient of all championship teams, a quarterback who can play his best when the chips are all on the table.

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

By Bill Kloeb

As the hunting seasons close the Rod and Gun Club skeet and trap ranges should see more activity. Some sportsmen may want to try archery, one of the fastest growing sports in Georgia today.

Before trying this sport an experienced archer should be consulted. The selection of archery tackle is a very personal matter. What may be right for one person might be all wrong for another. The individual who has a minimum amount of difficulty mastering a rifle or shotgun might be overwhelmingly frustrated if he were to try to master a 55-lb. bow, especially if he has no previous experience.

While the rifle or shotgun can be fired with a slight squeeze of the trigger fingers, the bow string must be drawn to the cheek, held for a second or so, aimed and the string released with a smooth motion. Drawing this heavy bow for the first time could be compared with trying to bend a telephone pole.

A 55-pound, bow actually weighs considerably less than the average rifle. In the case of the bow, the "weight" refers to the force required to draw the string the length of the average hunting arrow, usually 28 inches. The average man should begin shooting a 25 to 30 pound bow and work up to a bow with at least 40 pounds pull.

The ideal situation would be for the prospective bow hunter to have two bows. One that is relatively light with which to learn the basic principles of shooting and to develop the muscles used in shooting the bow. The other bow should have a heavier pull and be suitable for hunting medium sized game.

SPLIT SEASON

The second half of the Georgia dove season closes Jan. 15. Some hunters ask why the two states have split seasons. This has been a bone of contention between dove hunters in the south of the states and those in the north for some time.

The dove, a migratory bird, arrives in the northern part of the state first. Therefore the northern part of the state wants the open season to be as early as possible. The doves don't arrive in the southern portions until later so the south wants the open season as late as possible.

Because the dove is a migratory bird, its open season is controlled by the Federal Government. Georgia is allowed up to 70 days open season, usually from Sept. 1 to Jan. 1. If any portion of the state is open on any day or days this counts against the entire state quota of 70 days. So if the first 30 days of the season were open in the north and the rest in the south, the total of 70 days would be used up.

Of course each part of the state wants its full 70 days. Under present laws there is only one way to do it: open the entire state for the whole season. This will provide some of the preferred portion of the season for each section of the state.

2 Braves Finish Basic Training

Raymond's surrender at age 31 will give Ken Aspromonte, age 30 and just acquired from Houston, the title of Braves oldest bachelor. Others on the 38-man winter roster are Dusty Baker, Stan Bell, Bob Didier, Andy Finlay, Ralph Garr, Garry Hill, Walt Hriniak, Rick Kester, Ron Reed, George Stone and Charlie Vaughan.

Jim Breazeale, the 19-year-old youngster who hit 19 homers and drove in 88 runs for Atlanta's farm club at Greenwood, S.C., is working during the off-season as a longshoreman along the docks at Houston, Tex. Breazeale was a Houston prep baseball hero just one year ago.

The April 7 opening night when Atlanta hosts San Francisco, will be the earliest opener in history for the Braves. It won't be the earliest game of the year, however, in the National League. The traditional league opener at Cincinnati, with the Reds hosting Los Angeles, begins at 2:30 p.m. The Braves and Giants meet in Atlanta later at 8 p.m.

The dates of Braves "openers" over the last ten years: 1968, April 10; 1967, Apr. 11; 1966, Apr. 12; 1965, Apr. 12; 1964, Apr. 14; 1963, Apr. 9; 1962, Apr. 10; 1961, Apr. 11; 1960, Apr. 12, 1959, Apr. 10.

Felipe Alou and Felix Millan, Atlanta's leading hitters last season, still have a chance at batting championships in the winter leagues. At last accounting, Alou trailed his brother, Matty, .378 to .392, in the Dominican League averages, while Millan led the Puerto Rican League with .351.

Keeping up with some of the young players on the Atlanta Braves' winter roster this off-season...

Outfielder Dusty Baker, a Marine reservist, is in boot camp at Parris Island, S.C. Baker batted .342 at Greenwood in the Western Carolinas League last season.

Baker's description of his first pro game, in 1967 at Austin in the Texas League: "I was scared and nervous, and I went 0-for-5 and struck out twice on sliders, which I had never seen."

Pitcher Stan Bell, who was 9-1 at Greenwood, began U.S. Army basic training Aug. 19 at Fort Bliss, Tex., and moved on to advanced training at Fort Hood, Tex., Oct. 13. He'll be discharged from active duty, he writes, "sometime in February."

Gil Garrido's biggest thrill in baseball, he reports, was his string of "33 continued games without errors" for Tacoma in the Pacific Coast League in 1969.

Southern California grad Tom House, a left-handed pitcher, met his wife, Karren, on the beach at Hawaii in 1966. She was vacationing; he was playing semi-pro baseball. Tom also reports that the Houses are expecting a child to be named "Thomas Paul if it's a boy, Brittany Lin if it's a girl." The child is expected this month.

Two promising youngsters in college in North Carolina are pitcher Garry Hill (University of North Carolina) and infielder Van Kelly (Western Carolina University).

Two Braves pitchers are finance majors—Rick Kester has his degree from UCLA in that field, and Jim Britton has worked toward a finance major at both Penn State and Tennessee.

It makes boys out of men.

Ex-Missionary Named 197th Catholic Chaplain

By PFC John Rowe

Chaplain (Capt.) Michael J. Harrington, who has spent more than four years as a missionary in Latin America, is the new Roman Catholic chaplain for the 197th Inf. Bde.

The newest 197th chaplain comes from a family that includes three other sons in the military. Chaplain Harrington's brothers are all enlisted men, with James Harrington, the youngest, being a private first class with the 82nd Abn. Div.

Charles M. Harrington is a sergeant in the infantry and James V. Harrington, the third brother of Chaplain Harrington, is a corporal in the Signal Corps.

Chaplain Harrington's last assignment was with the 1st Bde., ATC, from July 22 to Dec. 17. He had a temporary duty assigament from Oct. 6 to Dec. 6 while attending the Chaplain School's basic course at Fort Hamilton, N.Y.

The 197th chaplain, a native of Brooklyn, N. Y., has been stationed twice in Latin America. During his four and a half years as a missionary, he celebrated Mass at all of the Army bases in the Canal Zone and assisted at the School of the Americas, a military school sponsored by the United States for Latin American officers and NCOs.

A graduate of St. John's Prep in New York and St. Joseph's College in Princeton, N. J., Chaplain Harrington has a masters degree in theology from Mary Immaculate Seminary, Northampton, Pa.

Chaplain Harrington's American assignments have included two years of teaching at Thomas Moore Boys High School in Philadelphia, Pa., and one year at Immaculate Conception Parish in Baltimore, Md.

Feedback for Paw

HOLLYWOOD—Dub Taylor, playing a Texas border town mayor in Warner Bros.-Seven Arts' "The Wild Bunch," said many fans were angered at him because, as Paw in the movie "Bonnie and Clyde," he put the finger on the two young outlaws and maneuvered them into their death ambush. "I get letters," said Taylor, "asking 'Why did you do it?'"

It'll last longer than the payment book.

It takes about three years to go through a payment book.

It takes about 11 years to go through a Volvo.

Of course, we don't guarantee that a Volvo will last 11 years in America. But we do know that over 95% of all the Volvos registered here in the last 11 years are still on the road.

So if you come in and buy a Volvo now, you won't have to start making payments on another new car two or three years from now. Instead, you'll have a few years for making payments to yourself.

3 Receive Medal of Honor; Total for Vietnam Hits 40

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The Medal of Honor for combat heroism in Vietnam was presented posthumously to a U.S. Army officer and two noncommissioned officers in separate ceremonies during December.

In ceremonies at the Pentagon, Secretary of the Army Stanley R. Resor presented medals recognizing the actions of Pfc. Sgt. Matthew Leonard and Sgt. Ted Belcher to Leonard's widow, Mrs. Lois Leonard of Birmingham, Ala., and Belcher's widow, Mrs. Helen J. Belcher of Zanesville, Ohio.

The awards raises to 40 the number of U. S. Army members who have received the nation's highest award for valor during combat in Vietnam.

In a ceremony at the White House, President Johnson praised the action of Pitts, a former information officer who was serving as a company commander in the 25th Infantry Division.

"What this man did in an hour of incredible courage will live in the story of America as long as America endures — as he will live in the hearts and memories of those who loved him," the President said.

"He was a brave man, and a leader of men. No greater thing could be said of any man. His valor under fire moved him forever into that select company where the heroes of our history stand."

The White House announcement of the award to Pitts stated that he was the first Negro officer of the Armed Forces of the United States to be awarded the Medal of Honor.

In action with the 25th Infantry Division, Sgt. Belcher was on a reconnaissance patrol as squad leader with C Company, 1st Battalion, 14th Inf.

His unit met heavy and accurate automatic weapons fire and momentarily stopped. He quickly ordered his men to return fire and move forward.

Sgt. Leonard was on a combat operation with Company, 1st Battalion, 16th Infantry, 1st Infantry Division, when his platoon was attacked by a large enemy force. After his platoon leader was wounded, Sergeant Leonard rallied the platoon to throw back the enemy.

He organized a defensive perimeter, but his unit was threatened by an enemy machine gun. The Medal of Honor Citation said:

"Leonard rose to his feet and charged the enemy gun and destroyed it despite being hit several times by enemy fire. He propped himself up against a tree and continued to engage the enemy until he died of his many wounds."

February Draft To Take 33,700

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The Department of Defense has requested the Selective Service System to provide 33,700 inductees in February 1969. Of this total, 32,200 will be assigned to the Army and 1,500 to the Marine Corps.

This request supports currently approved force levels and will assure a timely flow of replacements for men completing their terms of service, the Defense Department said.

Pearcy Named Top NCOC Grad

Michael F. Pearcy of Charleston, Ill., was named the distinguished graduate of NCO Candidate Course 12-68 at graduation exercises Dec. 17.

Pearcy was promoted to staff sergeant.

Guest speaker at the graduation was Third U. S. Army CSM William Craig of Fort McMcPherson Ga. He stressed the challenge of duty as an NCO, and said the good NCO must have an open mind in order to cope with the broad and complex situations which arise in combat.

Cases For Lawyer 'Judd' Stay Ahead Of Headlines

Stories so timely that they are often ahead of today's headlines are prime subject matter for ABC-TV's "Judd for the Defense," according to Harold Gast, producer of the dramatic series.

"When something happens that has a vital bearing on what's going on in our society, we get to work on it," says Gast.

A case in point was "Transplant," a recent repeat.

"We anticipate situations and this happened with 'Transplant'—a story of criminal charges brought against a physician for taking the heart of a donor before he was declared legally dead.

"After our script was filmed, news stories appeared with the same charge against doctors."

This season the series has chosen sociologically hot topics whose themes are even more controversial than last year's: draft evasion, conditions in mental hospitals, homosexuality, black militancy and new religious movements, to name a few.

The story about black militants, "The Ends of Justice," brought a flood of mail from opposing viewpoints, says Gast.

Carl Betz, who stars in the title role of the colorful defense attorney, points out that the series is not afraid to take a position.

"It's an adult show that tackles ideas you don't usually find in television and we face problems head-on."

Sometimes the stories strike so close to home that unlooked-for reactions come from the cast and crew.

In "Punishments, Cruel and Unusual," in which Judd defends a former alcoholic, a supporting actor who had gone on the wagon was to play the role of an alcoholic but became so disturbed he had to be replaced.

In "Visitation," a story about the inequities of the divorce laws and child custody rights, an actress currently involved in the same situation in her own life, broke down and cried during a scene.

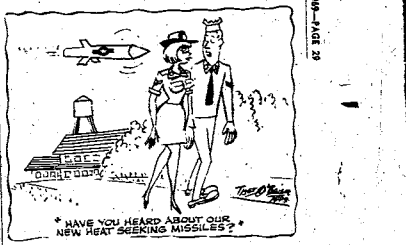
Already filmed is a tandem effort which will begin on another ABC-TV series, "Felony Squad" and end on "Judd" titled "The Law and Order Blues" (Jan. 31). Both episodes were written by Gast and concern an African with unfortunate police experiences who comes to the United States bearing the same antipathies.

Another story to be filmed shortly as a two-parter on "Judd" is "The Holy Ground," which depicts the present swing toward new and different religions—some of the psychedelic variety.

Recently completed is "Between the Dark and the Daylight," a drama in which the writer probes into the use of marijuana by teenage youth and the problems caused when a spy is planted among them to gather evidence.

In addition to the controversial and topical subject matter in the series, Betz points out that what makes the character of Judd, himself, interesting in his passion for the rights of the individual.

He adds: "I believe another factor in favor of our series is the fact that although I play a defense attorney, my clients aren't automatically acquitted. Some shows end with the jury still out and apt to vote either way. Audiences don't necessarily like all the ends neatly tied. They like the chance to make up their own minds."



A Battery Piles Up The Honors

An artillery battery of the 197th Inf. Bde. with the mission of supporting the Infantry School recently won its battalion of honor of the month title for the seventh consecutive time.

A Battery of the 7th Battalion, 18th Arty. captured the honor as a result of "esprit de corps and teamwork within the battery," according to its first sergeant, Thomas Simmons.

Simmons attributed A Battery's success to the efforts of every man in the unit. He said hard work and attention to detail were necessary ingredients in their success but the resulting high morale of the unit proved their efforts worthwhile.

The award is given monthly by battalion commander Lt. Col. James T. Heathcock, after inspections by his staff determine which battery rates highest.

A Battery's mission includes artillery firing for NCO and officer candidates to teach principles of calling in and adjusting artillery fire support.

The Battery has received the battalion honor plaque five times since July 1. If they win it two more times during this fiscal year, the plaque will be theirs permanently.

A Battery, which has had no AWOLs in the past six months, is commanded by Capt. Jerry M. Sollinger.

Col. White Moves Up

The Infantry School is losing its director of the Company Operations Department to Fort Jackson, S. C.

Col. Thomas B. Maertens, who has served in the position since May, will command a training brigade.

The new director who assumes his duties today is Col. John D. White, the department's deputy director since July.

Col. Maertens leaves a vacancy in the presidency of the Fort Benning PTA. He will be replaced by PTA Vice President, Col. George E. Ritter, the post veterinarian.

in essence, this system organizes incoming personnel into discrete groups (packets), and keeps them separated from other people except their cadre throughout their basic training. Further, the program controls their exposure to outsiders by regulating the use of barber shops and post exchange facilities.

All aspects of the trainee's life are watched closely to protect his health. He is assured eight hours sleep each night, avoidance of overtiring and chilling after heavy exercise and special attention to personal hygiene, particularly with regard to such things as the use of handkerchiefs to cover sneezes and coughs.

The intensified program goes further. It directs careful health supervision by cadremen and the use of the "buddy system" to detect illness early in its course to provide proper care by medical personnel. A medical face mask also has been issued.

The mask covers the nose and mouth in order to halt any disease organisms that might be transferred from one person to another. It is to be worn at all times when trainees are massed together. The mask is identical to those worn by surgeons at Martin Army Hospital here, and designed in such a way as to not restrict breathing or any physical movement.

Made of a lightweight plastic material, the mask is contoured to fit the face, and is held in place by an elastic band that circles the head. It has been tested by medical personnel and one unit in the 4th Battalion, and has been proven to meet all required functions.

This type of prior planning continues to allow the Army Training Center to complete its mission — training the best soldiers in the world.

'Caravan' To Stop

Representatives of the Atlanta Braves will appear in Columbus Wednesday on the baseball team's annual "Caravan" tour of Southeastern cities.

Rico Carty, Sonny Jackson, Pat Jarvis and Phil Niekre are the Caravan "regulars" this year, and other Braves players are expected to make special appearances as the Caravan stops in four Southeastern states.

Manager Luman Harris, broadcasters Milo Hamilton and Ernie Johnson and public relations edirector Lee Walburn are also expected to make several Caravan appearances.

A number of new cities appear on the schedule this year.

"Because of the tremendous interest in the Caravan, we've decided to go to several new cities each year on a rotating basis," says Dick Cecil, Braves vice-president.

"This year, we're especially going to try to reach the industrial plants in Caravan cities, to meet fans who have missed our visits in the past because of their working hours."

The '69 Caravan will take players and front office personnel to Georgia, Tennessee, South Carolina and Alabama.

Scouts Have New 'Bag'

Area Boy Scouts, Cub Scouts and Explorers are scheduled to distribute 15,500 Goodwill bags to homes in the Fort Benning district on Jan. 18.

Families are requested to fill the bags with used clothing and household goods prior to Jan 25 when the scouts will make a house-to-house collection of the bags.

Explorers will load the full bags onto vehicles at central pick-up points. The bags will then be moved to the Goodwill Industries Building, 2815 Hamilton Road, Columbus.

The Goodwill drive is a coordinated effort for the Coumbus and Fort Benning area and includes the Fort Benning, Yupaha and Muscogee Scouting Districts.

Last year's drive was the most successful ever conducted. The boys collected over 35,000 bags of clothing plus household appliances.

A coordination meeting for all unit leaders is scheduled for Jan. 13 at 7 p.m. in the Goodwill Industries Building. A free chicken dinner will be served for the unit leaders.

Teenage Dance Set Saturday

The dance for teenage members and guests of the Youth Center has been changed to Saturday night at the center, Bldg. No. 1054.

"The Sons of Bach" will play from 8 to midnight. Admission is $1.25 per person.

When Rowe Escaped, Close Friend Here Felt Relief

By Bill Hardin

When Maj. James N. Rowe escaped from a Viet Cong prison camp after five years of captivity, a fellow officer at Fort Benning had reason to celebrate.

"We were very close friends, and I never forgot about him during his confinement," said Maj. Raymond R. Rau, chief of the Allied Student Training Division here.

Rau and Rowe met early in 1963, when both were lieutenants with the 5th Special Forces group at Fort Bragg. They had similar interests and similar names, and it was almost natural that they become close.

As part of a group of eight officers the two flew to Vietnam for a special six-month duty assignment. Only two of the eight completed the full tour and returned to the states as scheduled. The others were either captured, killed, or wounded. One of the two who made it back was Rau.

Rowe had been sent to the Delta area and Rau to the mountains.

"Through other Special Forces men, I heard about Rowe and his operations while he was in the Delta," Rau recalled. Then one day news came of his capture.

Back in the states, Mrs. Rau was visiting at a Red Cross office when news came in that a Special Forces lieutenant, whose last name was spelled Raw, had been captured. Red Cross officials asked for a recheck on the identity, and word came back with the same spelling, R-a-w. Later in the day she learned that it was not her husband but his friend who had been captured.

Rau soon was promoted to captain, and during two subsequent tours he became quite involved in efforts to free his friend.

"Nick was a very knowledgeable, very pleasant individual," Rau said. "Time and again our intelligence brought news of his approximate

CSMs Fletcher, Williams Named

Command Sergeants Major Charles H. Fletcher and Bob L. Williams are settling into their new jobs as enlisted chiefs of the Infantry Center and the Infantry School.

CSM Fletcher replaces Walter C. Cannon, now the CSM of the U.S. Army, Vietnam, and CSM Williams fills the post vacated by CSM Lawrence Kennedy, who is now with the Third Infantry Division.

Both men came here directly from assignments in Vietnam. CSM Fletcher was recently with the Third Brigade of the 101st Airborne Div. (Airmobile) and CSM Williams was with First Battalion, 501st Abn. Inf., both at Fort Campbell and in Vietnam.

Of the two, CSM Williams has the more experience at Fort Benning.

He attended Airborne School in 1948, and the Advanced NCO Course in 1961 before becoming a platoon sergeant with Co. C, 508th Airborne Regimental Combat Team here.

Other assignments at Fort Benning include duty as 11th Battalion sergeant major at ATC, in 1966, and 197th Infantry Brigade SGM until October, 1967.

CSM Fletcher graduated from Airborne School here in 1943. His only other duty assignment here was with the 225th Airborne Inf. Regiment, which supported the school, in 1950-51.

CSM Fletcher, who will be 50 years old next month, entered the Army in March, 1942. He is a native of Dyer, Tenn. CSM Williams, 40, will complete 23 years of Army service this year.

Mrs. Fletcher is the former Christine Simmons of Humboldt, Tenn. They have two children: Michael, 20, and Lisa, 18.

Mrs. Williams is the former Ann M. Latter of Albany, N.Y. They have four children: Bob Williams Jr., 17; Theresa, 12; Cheryl, 10; and Patricia, 2.

The two new men met top enlisted men from the post's major commands at a luncheon at the Top Five Club last Friday. Also present was CSM Charles Craig, of the Third Army.

August Reunion

1st Cav. To Return Here

The First Cavalry Division (Airmobile) will hold its 1969 convention in Columbus next August, almost exactly four years after the division deployed from Fort Benning to Vietnam.

Dates for the Cav's reunion are Aug. 22-24. It was Aug. 20, 1965, that the "First Horse" left Fort Benning.

Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, ATC commander who recently returned from Vietnam duty with the division, will coordinate local arrangements for the reunion.

According to association president, Sherman P. Haight Jr., of Litchfield, Conn., Columbus is expected to attract a far greater number of 'new breed' cavalrymen to the annual meeting. Previous reunions have been held throughout the country with most being hosted by El Paso, Tex., which served as the home of the 1st Cavalry from the Indian wars until it deployed to the Pacific in World War II. Future plans call for alternating reunion sites between the two homes of the division at least once each five years.

Maj. Gen. William A. Becker, Chief of Legislative Liaison, Department of the Army, who has served in two wars with the 1st Cavalry was instru-

Driver Courses Pay Dividend in Safety

By 1st Lt. Dave Leonard

Reports on post accidents indicate that the Defensive Driver training is paying off.

No studeot exposed to the course has been killed or been reported injured in a traffic accident, the Safety Office reported.

The Safety Office has also been giving "scholarships" to traffic violators to improve their driving skills and attitudes, according to James Blount, assistant safety director.

"The driver improvement course which we offer might cost a man $20 in civilian life. We offer the course for free," Blount said.

The class, after duty hours, is a required subject for drivers issued traffic tickets for moving traffic violations.

Since last April when the 8-hour Defensive Driving Course was introduced into the remedial training course, 2,239 students have attended.

Blount noted that in the period covered, April 1 to Dec. 31, the Military Police issued 5,208 moving traffic violation tickets. Blount said the students who did not attend the remedial course probably included a large number on orders to leave Fort Benning.

"The percentage of violators attending the classes has improved in the past year until the average is better than 50 per cent," Blount said.

The Defensive Driving Course has been taught to a total of 10,241 persons at Fort Benning, including those who attended the remedial classes, the Safety Office statistics indicated.

A breakdown by major units shows, in numbers but not in percentages, that various commands and organizations had trained the following by Dec. 31: CTC, 2507; whereabouts and his physical condition. We knew the Viet Cong had not been able to break him, that he was still mentally sharp, and to good physical condition. We wanted him freed badly, and again we made an effort to get him out. Such efforts to free captured Americans are common, but this one held a special interest for me."

On his second tour in Vietnam Rau was involved in two efforts to free Rowe. "We came close, but couldn't quite make it, and though that if we pushed too far or too hard, they might kill him as they attempted to retreat," Rau said.

"Our intelligence kept feeding us information about Nick, and once an effort to free him was just about eight hours too late. Another time, the Viet Cong escaped, and when the area was searched, we found Nick's boots.

"My third tour was as an aviator, and I once flew over for a 'snatch team' which was dropped in an effort to get Nick out.

"My greatest fear was that one of our own pilots might accidently kill him. I knew that he had been allowed to keep a shaving mirror, and I feared that some pilot on a mission might see a reflection from the mirror and see a man moving and open fire in this notorious VC base area, which had been declared a free fire zone.

"I never forgot Nick. I was depressed that our efforts to free him had failed, especially since I had come so close on one occasion."

Rau was visiting a neighbor recently and commented that the new year would be complete if only his friend could be freed from captivity.

The following morning Mrs. Rau woke her husband and excitedly informed him that a Special Forces officer had escaped from the Viet Cong after spending more than five years in captivity. "It could only be Nick Rowe," she commented.

Later the identity was announced and Rau attempted to call his friend's father. Because of the busy holiday telephone traffic, he was not able to reach him until the following day. They had a long talk, and now Rau is waiting for Rowe to have a few days rest before he calls to talk with him.

CSM Mixon, who has been acting as the temporary Post Sergeant Major since September, introduced Fletcher to the group. Fletcher then made a few remarks, commenting that all of his past assignments had been with "leg" units, but he expected his new duty to be different in little only. "In order to run an efficient, well-organized, happy unit, I need the unit NCO's support. They certainly have my unqualified support."

mental in moving the convention to Columbus. "Columbus opened its heart to our families when we deployed so abruptly to Vietnam," he said. He also pointed out that Columbus is very near the Infantry Center at Fort Rucker, Alabama, and the helicopter training school at Fort Hunter-Stewart. "Most Vietnam veterans of the 1st Cavalry feel closely related to these centers and will, in my opinion, be much more interested in attending the reunions."

Capt. Ford, Ex-Navy Man, Can't Get Away From Sea

By 1st Lt. Dave Leonard

Not many Army officers can claim they have been assigned to the Army's largest port and also to the largest motor pool. Even fewer officers hold the diver's badge. Only a few have served in the Navy.

Capt. Daniel J. Ford claims all these distinctions and a few more.

Ford, assistant motor transport officer, helps operate Fort Benning's motor pool, largest in the Army. In Vietnam and at Fort Eustis, Va., he worked with Army boats and ships. Time out for schooling gained him the diver's qualification.

Service in the Navy—little more than a year in the Reserve—convinced Ford the Navy was not for him.

"After the first cruise during summer training, I enlisted in the Army," Ford said.

After three years as a clerk-typist and work with classified documents, Ford went to Officer Candidate School.

Ford started Armor OCS, but at mid-class, all the students were transferred to Fort Eustis for the newly-opened Transportation Corps OCS. The men were in the second class to graduate.

First assignment was at Eustis, with a terminal command which ran the port and its training facilities there. Harbored there were craft ranging from small landing craft to the freighter Sheridan and numerous tugs and launches.

Among his initial duties as a new lieutenant, Ford found himself in charge of the divers who aided in maintenance of the harbor and ships. Ford applied for diver's school—and was accepted.

After Navy-run schooling and demolitions training, Ford returned to Fort Eustis. Orders sent him to Vietnam in February 1967.

"I did not draw diver's pay there," Ford noted, "but did some scuba and deep diving work. And there was the time I had to fight an armed Viet Cong diver in some murky water off the coast."

At Fort Benning, Ford has helped plan transportation needs for VIP visits, such as the AUSA Symposium last spring, and for the 50th Anniversary celebration in October. For a while, he headed the entire 2,300-vehicle motor pool.

Ford will leave shortly for Okinawa, and plans to take his wife and family with him.

His assignment—ex-naval reservist Ford noted, is "going back to ships."

ROTC SUMMER CAMP

How many cadets will be attending Reserve Officer Training Corps summer camps this year?

An estimated 23,000 college students will attend camp this summer. They will train at Indiantown Gap Military Reservation, Pa.; Fort Bragg, N. C.; Fort Sill, Okla.; Fort Riley, Kans., and Fort Lewis, Wash.

DRAFT REJECTS

About how many men are rejected for the draft because of "moral" reasons?

A Selective Service report shows 3,664 men were rejected because they did not meet the Defense Department's moral standards during September. This represented approximately one third of those rejected for administrative reasons.

The rejections were based for the most part on long police records.

RETIREMENT

If I don't like my new assignment will I be able to put in for retirement?

Not unless you will complete 30 years service prior to the one year "on post" requirement. Furthermore if you serve in an overseas assignment and bring your dependents you will have to serve an additional year. Another thing to keep in mind is obligations you may have incurred by attending a course which requires a certain number of years service after completion.

ARMY ROTC SCHOLARSHIPS

My son is interested in applying for an Army ROTC scholarship for next year. How does he go about it?

Unfortunately the application deadline for the coming fall was January 15, 1969.

HUBBELL PLAN

I have heard and read a great deal about the Hubbell plan but have never had an opportunity to read the report for myself. Where can I get a complete copy?

The first volume of the Hubbell Committee proposals entitled, "Modernizing Military Pay" dated Nov. 1, 1967 is available for $2 from the Superintendent of Documents, U. S. Printing Office, Washington, D. C. 20402.

What does the Third Army patch design symbolize?

Over 50 years ago the Third United States Army was organized as an occupation force for the American sector of post-World War I Germany. It was this initial policing assignment that gave the "Big A" its colorful red, white, and blue shoulder patch.

Savings deposit program helps soldier and country

If you are being sent overseas you have an excellent opportunity to help yourself and your country financially.

Members of the Armed Services assigned to a duty station outside of the 50 states, the Virgin Islands, Puerto Rico, the Canal Zone, Guam, or American Samoa can deposit savings in the Uniformed Services Savings Deposit Program.

You can be on either permanent or temporary duty, or deployed with a ship or unit, as long as your assignment exceeds 90 days.

The money which you deposit during your assignment overseas earns the 10 per cent interest compounded quarterly, and continues to earn interest at that rate for up to 90 days following your return to the United States.

The maximum amount upon which interest may accrue is $10,000. The 10 per cent rate is about double the amount you ordinarly receive from a commercial financial institution.

You may deposit any part of your unallotted current pay and allowance in increments of $5. Among the pay and allowances which you can save through the program while you are overseas are basic pay, special duty pay, proficiency, incentive, family separation allowance, hostile fire and reenlistment bonus.

Normally you will not be able to withdraw deposits while you are overseas. However, provisions have been made for emergency withdrawals under circumstances prescribed in joint regulations by the Service Secretaries.

These withdrawals will usually be handled by individual commanding officers. Upon your return all deposits plus interest will be paid to you by check, waiting for you at an address you designate before your departure from overseas, or by payment to you directly shortly after your arrival, depending on your Service's procedures, or upon separation from active duty, or no later than 90 days after return from overseas.

Not only do you help yourself with this program, you help your country. You are helping your government achieve a specific goal of its own, to reduce our country's international balance of payment expenditures. The money you have in a foreign country reduces the number of U. S. dollars that country has for buying gold from our present reserves.

America's balance of payments problem is more dollars are going out of the country than are coming in, putting the United States in a deficit position. This is the problem that must be overcome.

You should contact your personal affairs officer or finance officer to obtain more information on this program.

Getting an allotment form is your first step in participating. Be sure you do this as soon as you arrive at your new overseas duty station, so your savings will begin earning that 10 per cent interest as quickly as possible.

Some service policies for military dependents

The Bayonet has received numerous questions on services available for military dependents whose sponsors are deceased or on duty elsewhere. In answer to these questions the Bayonet intends to outline briefly the services available.

Army Community Service

Under the Army Community Services are agencies designed to help in an emergency situation. Through the Emergency Financial Assistance Committee dependents of military personnel are eligible to receive emergency financial aid from the Army Emergency Relief, to include emergency needs upon death of a sponsor.

Policites and procedures are outlined in USAIC Regulation 930-10, Army Emergency Relief Assistance AER, September 10, 1968. To apply for assistance the dependents should have in her possession an identification card; copies of any pertinent military order, letters, or telegrams from the sponsor; eviction notices; invoices, and or bills from pressing creditors.

These should be brought to the AER office in Bldg. 5. Approval of the sponsor for a loan will be requested by teletype message unless definite indications of immediate emergency exist, in which case assistance may be rendered without prior approval.

The Army Relief Society provides financial and scholarship assistance to widows and unmarried dependent children of deceased Regular Army personnel.

Debt Counseling Assistance

The Debt Counseling Assistance Program provides an experienced counselor to advise and assist dependents in the preparation of a budget and the establishment of a debt liquidation schedule of creditor payments.

Advice will also be provided on related personal financial matters, except matters requiring legal advice such as the legality of contracts, legal aspects of income and property taxes, and operation of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Relief Act.

The Social Work Section provides professional counseling and referrals on personal, financial, and marital problems and mental and physical handicaps. Dependents desiring assistance should apply directly to the Fort Benning Community Service, Bldg. 5.

Volunteer assistance aids dependents in five areas. The administrative committee will help by providing reception for clients, answering routine questions, and referring non-routine questions to the proper ACS section or other agency for solution of the problem.

Casualty Committee

Wife to wife assistance is provided to dependents of deceased, active duty personnel after the notification officer and chaplain have completed, the initial visit by the casualty committee.

The emergency and transportstion committee assists in emergency situations such as children being left unattended, severe family problems, and transportation.

Handicapped children are aided by the bandicap committee by assisting the dependent schools special education program as needed, working with parents' groups, maintaining a resources file on mental retardation, and helping with the summer day camp.

The Hospitality House Committee provides an information center for newly arrived dependents and makes loans of household necessities to arriving and departing families.

24-Hour Test 'Squeezed In' By Arty. Team

A rigorous schedule of Infantry School support did not prevent a unit of the 197th Inf. Bde. this week from improving and evaluating unit efficiency through a Field Training Exercise.

The 7th Bn., 18th Arty., commanded by Lt. Col. James T. Heathcock, sandwiched its FTX in its busy schedule despite the fact that it is not required to do so by Army regulations.

Col. Heathcock said, "The FTX was based on a tactical situation which required artillery support for hypothetical defensive and offensive operations during daylight and darkness."

The 24-hour exercise began Monday for the Kelley Hill-based unit and was staged in Harmony Church. Tactical conditions were observed by the unit for the entire duration of the exercise.

The goal of the FTX was to provide tactical field artillery training for each of the battalion's three firing batteries and elements of its Headquarters Service Bty. Through use of the exercise, commanders were able to perform the necessary function of analyzing a unit's strong and weak points, according to Col. Heathcock.

During the FTX the unit occupied three positions, including a night position. It fired 27 missions, including night illuminating missions and hip shoots which fire missions executed by a unit while it is in the process of moving to a new position.

MOWW to Hear ATC's Davis

Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, commanding general of the Army Training Center will be the featured speaker at the monthly meeting of the Military Order of the World Wars (MOWW) at the golf course supper club Monday at 8:30 p.m.

Gen. Davis, a native of Arizona, recently returned to the post for his fourth tour of duty. He has instructed in The Infantry School and was at one time director of the Airborne Department.

The MOWW, a national organization of both active and retired officers from all services, meets monthly at the post.

William A. Lyman, president of the National Bank of Fort Benning, is currently serving as the commander of the local chapter.

Took 'Direct'

Mid-East Expert To Speak Here

Dr. J. C. Hurewitz, professor of political science at Columbia University and an expert on the Near and Middle East, will come to Fort Benning next Tuesday to address the Infantry Officer Advanced Course students.

Hubby Vowed 'I Do' (Join Army)

Wife Is New Executive Officer

A WAC lieutenant who joined the Army so she could be with her husband, and swore him into military service after receiving a direct commission in August of last year, assumed the executive officer slot in USAIC Troop Command's WAC Company Tuesday.

Second Lt. Mary Lewis, who hails from Peoria, Ill., took advantage of the WAC college option plan and received her direct commission last August. A few days later, she swore her husband into service. While he attended basic and advanced infantry training at Forts Polk and Dix, she attended the WAC Officer Basic Course at Ft. McClellan, Ala.

In early December, she arrived at Fort Benning and took leave with her husband until just before the new year arrived. Her husband, Robert is currently assigned to the 66th DC Co., TCB

A graduate of Wartburg College in Iowa, Lt. Lewis holds a bachelor's degree in biochemistry with a minor in history. It was at Wartburg that she met her husband, who was a student there at the time. She plans to return to school at a later date and pursue a master's degree in chemistry.

Her greatest ambition is to specialize in physiology and go into industrial research.

Junior Daughters Play Big Part in 49er Fete

The Junior Army Daughters Association (JADA) is busy planning for their part in the annual 49'er Party to be held Feb. 8 at 7:30 p. m. at the Main Officers Club.

The party is sponsored by the Daughters of the United States Army (DUSA) each year to raise funds for their post projects, including Toy Town, the post nursery.

JADA is planning to sell their wares at a "Frontier Store". Saleladies will be dressed in the calico frocks of the booming gold rush era. The members canvassed the post for "white elephant" items like knick-knacks, ash trays and vases to be sold.

In addition to selling white elephants, each member of JADA is making something to donate for the sale such as lacy garters and artificial flowers. Candies also will be featured at the store. The volunteers are making fudge, popcorn balls and cookies.

Officers of the association are Sue Welch, president; Julie Smeds, chairman of the Frontier Store; Gayla McKenzie, recording secretary; Ginnie Vaughn, corresponding secretary; Barbara Ghent, treasurer; Vivian Smith, publicity; Nona Correa, historian and chaplain; Gina Oglesby, reservations and membership; and Sally Keifer, hospital chairman. Mrs. Robert Fullerton is the DUSA coordinator.

Daughters of Army officers who are in the Regular Army, active or retired, or in the Active Reserve who are interested in joining the Association may call Miss Oglesby at 545-4720 for further information.

To donate items for the Frontier Store, please call Mrs. Fullerton at 689-6841.

Dear Community Service

DEAR COMMUNITY SERVICE:

My husband is being assigned to a short tour in an overseas area where dependent travel is not authorized and government quarters are not available. I would like to join him at my own expense. Will I be able to shop in the commissary and PX as I would if this travel was authorized?

Independent

Dear Independent:

No, you will not be afforded all of the dependent privileges. This usually depends on the status of forces agreement our government has with the country concerned. Serious consideration should be given to the many hardships and inconveniences that can result from this type of travel. Please contact us before you attempt this move.

HOW WE DO IT . . . SFC Charles Walker and S. Sgt. Michael Berge explain the Army Training Center mission to Mrs. Donald V. Wright, left and Mrs. Acy W. Akridge. (Photo by Spec. 4 Dennis Wootan)

Wives Learn About Husbands Job

"To Better Understand Your Husband's Mission" was the theme of the Army Training Center NCO wives' January coffee at the Sand Hill NCO Club.

SFC Charles Walker, Co. C, 9th Bn., assisted by S.Sgt. Michael Berge, Co. E, 8th Bn., presented a briefing on the mission of the Army Training Center and a film on the Army's Drill Sergeant.

They were introduced by Mrs. Donald V. Wright, wife of the 2nd Bde. sergeant major. Other 2nd Bde. wives assisting Mrs. Wright as hostesses were Mrs. Gaston Clark, Mrs. Charlie Cranford and Mrs. Joseph Andree.

Usinng Training Center briefing charts, SFC Walker explained how the Army converts the civilian to soldier—the hours necessary for each phase of training and the requirements each trainee must meet prior to successful completion of basic combat training.

The film was a vivid picture story of the challenges offered to the drill sergeant and the pride these elite of the NCO Corps feel in a "job well done."

Mrs. Oscar E. Davis, wife of the Training Center's commanding general, joined the ladies for the coffee.

Mrs. Acy W. Akridge announced that the ladies of the Reception Station and Committee Group would be the hostesses for the February coffee.

Vietnam's No Place for Honeymoon, Couple Finds

LAI KHE, Vietnam — Boy meets girl, boy loses girl when she goes to Vietnam, boy gets — well, the story hasn't reached its happy ending yet. And it won't until a 1st Inf. Div. officer is finally stationed with his wife.

Capt. Russell E. Reinel of the 1st Battalion, 26th Infantry met his wife, Patricia (currently a first lieutenant nurse with the 93rd Evacuation Hospital) while both were stationed at Fort Ord, Calif. And right away they were having problems seeing eath other.

"I was just back from Korea," the capatin from Columbus, Ga., noted, "and my first sergeant was in the hospital; when he came back to the company he said, 'Sir, there's a nurse at the hospital you'll have to meet.' And I thought either she's really bad, or so good-looking I couldn't think of asking her out."

"And I don't think he did," chimed in his petite wife, a native of Bayside, N.Y. "He came into the hospital and there in front of the doctors and patients we just kind of mumbled and stared at each other. I can't remember if he asked me out or not, but two weeks later I was spending the evening shampooing a rug with my girlfriend when up he came — I couldn't even remember his name."

With no more than time for a quick conversation before she went to work that night, the relationship did begin to bloom. By April the two officers were engaged and used every spare moment travelling along California's highways. In September they were married.

Vietnam came sooner than expected, and 10 days after the wedding he was alone on those California beaches and she was 10,000 miles away. But within a month after he volunteered, Capt. Reinel was with the Big Red One in Vietnam.

"To get an assignment together, we bothered everyone we could get hold of," Lt. Reinel said. "The head nurse at USARV tried especially to be helpful since I was the only one who raised my hand when she asked if any of us were married."

Since the 2nd Surgical Bn. in Phu Bai was scheduled to move to a 1st Div. area, Lt. Reinel was assigned to it in hopes that she would soon see her husband. But the move was delayed, so she was reassigned to the 93rd in Long Binh, about 30 miles away from the headquarters of her husband's unit. But the couple still hopes to be assigned together soon.

As things are now, Capt. Reinel will be developing his tan and tactical skill in the field, while his pretty wife develops freckles under the hot Long Binh sun.

Perhaps R and R will be their answer until the assignment problem is solved.

"Where do you want to go on our R and R?" Lt. Reinel asked her husband during a rare moment together.

"Bangkok," be answered.

"One of my girlfriends told me Australia is nice," she said.

"But too much time is wasted flying there."

"But . . ."

Reds Hit Choppers

The Viet Cong destroyed Army helicopters worth five million dollars in an attack with mortars, rockets and machine guns on the 164th Aviation Group at Can Tho in the Mekong Delta.

In a similar action Communists damaged six helicopters of the 9th Inf. Div. The U. S. Command said the attacks were part of a winter-spring offensive aimed at damaging the rice harvest.

The Delta is 14,250 square miles of rice lands and holds one-third of South Vietnam's 17 million people.

Almost three thousand more South Vietnamese soldiers than Americans died in 1968 combat action, according to figures released this week. The South Vietnamese Army listed 17,486 men killed. But the number of Americans wounded in the war was nearly double the South Vietnamese figure of 57,718.

During 1968, 191,387 Viet Cong died and 21,060 were captured. An official said the kill ratio rose from 2.9 to one in 1965 and 5.9 to one in 1968.

The Viet Cong turned their attention from ground actions in the Delta to attacks on shipping operations in and around Saigon. Three cargo ships underwent rocket, mortar and machine gun fire in the Long Tau Canal.

U. S. Command spokesmen said the Viet Cong were attempting to sink a ship in the canal. Ninety-eight per cent of all supplies sent to Vietnam go by ship and travel up the Long Tau Canal.

The three ships reportedly were the French tanker Ankor, the Phillipine merchant ship Crustacia, and the Lynfield Victory, owned by the U. S. Department of Commerce.

Engineers Chop Through 'Wilderness Road'

CHU LAI, Vietnam—Early pioneers who followed Indian paths through the American frontier, building roads as they went, had nothing on the men of Charlie Company, 26th Engineer Bn.

In a recent two-day operation about 200 miles northwest of Duc Pho, the engineers literally scraped a one-lane "Wilderness Road" out of a time-worn footpath in brush-covered mountains.

The road-building was a two pronged operation, with one group of men and equipment airlifted into the CIDG camp at Minh Long working toward another group that started from LZ Snoopy.

The overall objective of the mission was to open a route for two 175mm and two 8-inch self-propelled guns into Minh Long, because they were too heavy to be airlifted in. Along the way it became apparent that the operation was also a challenge to the engineers' skill.

"Every technique a combat engineer is expected to know was tried and tested on this project," said Capt. James P. Collins, company commander. "Often, the footpath we generally followed was washed out, and much of the way it was little more than six inches wide and surrounded by thick brush."

The engineers employed standard road-building practices, in addition to bridge building and demolition work. "We also had to install culverts along the way, cut trees, have mine sweep teams patrolling to check for buried explosives and provide our own security along the road," Collins added.

To prepare for the task, huge Chinook helicopters lifted four three-quarter-ton dump trucks and a jeep into Minh Long, along with one group of engineers. Flying Cranes also hauled a scoop loader, and airmobile grader and two D-8 bulldozers into the camp.

The group from LZ Snoopy moved behind two monstrous Combat Engineer Vehicles (CEVs), which mount a bulldozer blade, a boom and winch and a 165mm demolition gun. Other graders and bulldozers followed the CEVs to make rapid improvements as they progressed.

The artillery pieces, from C Battery, 3rd Bn., 18th Artillery, trailed the earth-moving machines and were guarded along the route by nine armored personnel carriers from E Troop, 1st Cav. The big guns will be used to provide heavy fire support for American Division soldiers in the area.

Paper Clip Marksmen Now Shoot for Real

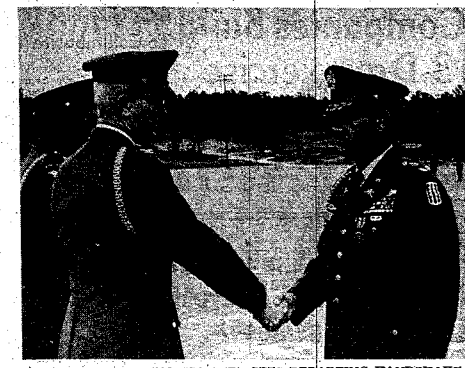
LAI KHE, Vietnam — Ten years ago it was a grade school teacher they harassed. Today it's the Viet Cong. But they still fire on the same team.

When they were kids at St. Vincent School in Latrobe, Pa., PFC Anthony Diorio and PFC Martin Janik formed a rubber band-paper clip fire team. Anthony loaded and Martin fired. Today in the 1st Inf. Div. the team is still in action. Diorio loads an M-60 machinegun and Janik fires it.

"We've been together all the way," said Janik whose home is now in Harrisburg, Pa. After St. Vincent, both men attended Latrobe High School and were graduated in the same class. After entering the Army last May, they took basic training in the same platoon, and during advanced individual training they even shared the same room.

"We were really worried when we got to Vietnam," laughed Janik. "Some guy squeezed into line between us when we were getting assignments at the 90th Replacement Bn. But it was lucky for us. He was assigned to another unit."

When they got to the Big Red One, the two men were assigned to Co. D, 2nd Bn., 28th Inf., and ended up in the same platoon and squad.



LT. COL. JAMES JOHNSON (R) GETS DEPARTING HANDSHAKE
Brigade Commander Col. John Strever Jr. Offers Thanks

Johnson Lauded on Departure

The change of command last Saturday of the 5th Bn., 31st Inf., was occasion for awarding of the Army Commendation Medal to Lt. Col. James P. Johoson, the unit's departing commander.

As part of a review and passing of the colors ceremony, Col. John E. Strever Jr., commander of the 197th Inf. Bde. to which the 31st Infantry is assigned, pinned the medal on Col. Johnson.

In attendance, though not a participant in the ceremony, was Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., post commander.

Col. Johnson was cited for exceptionally meritorious service to the United States Army while serving as commander of the 5th Bn., 31st Inf.

Particularly mentioned in the citation was the outstanding performance of the battalion on school support committments as well as the high calibre of performance displayed by the unit when it was deployed to Baltimore, Md., during a period of civil disturbances there in 1968.

The battalion is now commanded by Lt. Col. John L. Nixon Jr. The "Polar Bears," as the unit is nicknamed for its service in Siberia, comprise the largest infantry battalion in the U.S. Army.

The primary mission of the 5-31 Inf. is the support of the United States Army Infantry Center, in particular the activities of the Infantry School.

The battalion regularly provides demonstrators and aggressors for school problems and exercises.

Though currently all support being performed by the battalion is here at Fort Benning, later this month troops will be assigned to Dahlonega in North Georgia as aggressors for the Ranger mountain training phase.

The unit has also performed support duties at Eglin AFB, Fla., where holds its jungle phase of the Ranger command training.

Robinson Elevated In Test Division

Another full colonel was added to the list of graduates of Fort Benning's Officer Candidate School when Robert H. Robinson of the Infantry Board was advanced to that grade.

Col. Robinson received his promotion Jan. 9 in the office of the Infantry Board Deputy President, Col. Robert A. Robbins. Mrs. Robinson assisted Col. Robbins in the promotion ceremonies at the Infantry Board.

Prior to receiving his promotion, Robinson had been assigned to the Infantry Board as chief of Supporting Weapons Test Division. With his new rank he will be assuming duties as Chief for the Army Materiel Command's Infantry Research and Development Liaison office. This is a new organization currently undergoing activation at Fort Benning.

The colonel was commissioned at Fort Benning in May, 1945. His first assignment after graduation was with the 88th Inf. Div. in Italy until 1948. In 1950, he was with the 25th Inf. Div. in Korea.

Following duty as Battalion Commander of the 5th Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, at Fort Benning in 1967, Col. Robinson served a year with MACV in Vietnam. He was assigned to the Infantry Board in September 1968.

Robinson is a graduate of Kansas State University and he graduated from the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth and the Infantry Officers Advanced Course at Fort Benning.

The colonel has been decorated with the Legion of Merit, Army Commendation Medal with oak leaf cluster, Purple Heart and the Combat Infantryman Badge. He also wears the Parachutist Badge.

Col. Robinson is married to the former Dina Benst. The Robinsons have one daughter, Sue, 16.

Robbins Gets New IB Post, Colonel Hike

Robert A. Robbins, former operations officer for the Infantry Board, has been promoted to colonel. His new rank insignia were pinned on by Mrs. Robbins in ceremonies in the office of Board president Col. Walter F. Johnston.

Simultaneously with his promotion, Robbins was selected deputy president of the Infantry Board. This office was vacated Dec. 31 with the retirement of Col. James I. Muir Jr., the former President. Col. Johnston was the former deputy.

Robbins received his commission upon graduation from the Fort Benning OCS in October, 1942. He served with the 91st Inf. Div. in Europe during World War II and had two years of duty as a senior Airborne and Special Forces advisor in Vietnam in 1960-62. He served with the Army Arctic Test Center at Fort Greely, Alaska, from 1964 until his assignment with the Infantry Board as chief of the Small Arms Test Division in July, 1967.

Engineer Companies Build Bridges in 3-Day exercise

By Spec.4 Richard Emerson

Companies A and C of the 318th Engineering Bn. sent to the field Wednesday morning on a double-barrelled Field Training Exercise (FTX) which lasts through noon today.

It was the first time either of the companies from the recently-formed battalion had been to the field for training. Both had similar tasks during the FTX. Each company was required to perform maintenance on a road and to construct a bridge over a water obstacle.

Co. C of the 318th bivouacked near the intersection of Buena Vista and Hourglass Roads; set up the command post, mess area and motor-pool, and dug in on the first day. That night the three platoons took turns ambushing each other to give the men experience at both attack and defense, said 1st Lt. John Allbright, Co. C commander.

On Thursday, the first and third platoons launched a 60-foot Bailey (panel) bridge across Pine Knot Creek at the Hourglass Road crossing, with technical assistance from men of the 208th Panel Bridge Co.

Simultaneously, the men of the second platoon were making improvements and repairs on Reseca Road. The men dug and improved existing drainage ditches along the side of the road and blasted out a drainage culvert with four cratering charges each containing 60 pounds of ammonium nitrate. The explosion was equal to approximately 70 pounds of TNT. The blast hurled debris 100 feet into the air and excavated a ditch approximately fifteen feet wide and twenty feet long in the road.

Co. A bivouacked near the intersection of 10th Armored Division and Red Arrow Roads and spent the first day setting up the area. On Thursday, the men constructed a 38-foot Dry Span Bridge across Wolf Creek on Massey Road. The prefabricated bridge was provided by the 586th Engineering Company (Float Bridge).

The men also repaired and improved a 2,000 meter section of Massey Road. The work included blading, widening and digging drainage ditches along both sides.

During the building of the bridge aggressors attacked the engineers with smoke grenades and simulated rifle fire.

OCs Give Blood To Columbusite

Twenty officer candidates and a tactical officer from 91st Co. have donated blood to the father of a soldier.

The men donated 21 pints of blood to Albert Rich of Columbus. His stepson, PFC Craig Netherland of Fort Hood, Tex., was home on Christmas leave when he made an appeal for blood to the Red Cross.

Construction Firm Recruiting Here

By 1st Lt. Fred Vollrath

An $80 million - a - year Florida land development corporation is looking for 60 skilled and semi-skilled construction crewmen through Fort Benning's Project Transition Program.

"We are looking for men who have previous experience working in construction engineering units. We have construction programmed through 1976 on the east coast of Florida with plans beyond that," said George C. Blair, a construction engineer with the firm.

The development company is primarily concerned with the building of home sites and roads in well-planned communities.

Openings exist for a civil engineer to assist the construction engineer, construction clerks, foremen for road construction, dragline operators, shop and maintenance men and qualified vehicle operators.

Starting salaries range from $2.21 an hour for dragline oilers to $3.13 an hour for grader operators.

"This isn't a one project job," said Blair, "We are trying to build a crew that will stay together over the years."

Seven homesite developments have already been started. Two of them are over 45,000 acres and one is over 90,000 acres.

Jack Neal, a project transition counselor, said, "The company is primarily interested in people with experience."

Additional information and applications can be obtained from Neal at the project transition office in room 306, Building 35, or by calling 545-1383.

Avoid Skidding

Motorists whose automobiles go into a skid on slick pavement should not panic and slam on the brakes, advise automotive experts. Instead, the driver should let up on the gas pedal smoothly and steer the front wheels in the same direction as the skid. When the skid is corrected, drivers should pump the brakes lightly to bring the car to a safe stop.

Command Chain Gets New Faces

Two changes in the chain of command will take place Monday when Richard M. Nixon is inaugurated as the 37th President of the United States.

Nixon, of course, will go to the top as commander-in-chief of the armed forces. The No. 2-man in the chain, subject to confirmation by the Senate, will be former Rep. Melvin Laird, Nixon's designate as Secretary of Defense.

The new President has chosen to retain Secretary of the Army Stanley Resor, who was appointed to the position in 1965 by outgoing President Lyndon B. Johnson.

Nixon was born at Yorba Linda, Calif., on Jan. 9, 1913.

He graduated from Whittier (Calif.) College in 1934 and Duke University law school, Durham, N.C., in 1937. Mr. Nixon practiced law in Whittier for five years and, after serving as attorney in the Office of Emergency Management in Washington, D.C., January through August 1942, was commissioned a lieutenant junior grade, in the U.S. Navy.

Following his release from active duty in 1946 as a lieutenant commander, he was elected as a Republican representative from California to the 80th Congress and re-elected two years later.

In 1950, Mr. Nixon became U.S. senator from California and in 1952 was elected vice-president of the United States.

He became the second youngest vice president in American history. (John C. Breckenridge at 35 in 1856 was younger.)

During the eight years Mr. Nixon was vice president, he visited 56 countries and five continents as a personal emissary of President Eisenhower.

On three separate occasions, while President Eisenhower was stricken with major illnesses, Mr. Nixon was called upon to carry on the country's affairs until the President's recovery.

After 1960 Mr. Nixon returned to a law practice and other activities which again took him abroad for five separate trips plus a globe-circling tour of Western Europe and the Near and Far East in 1966.

Secretary of Defense Laird brings to his new duties at the Pentagon an interest and expertise in military affairs that dates back to his World War II service with the U.S. Navy.

For the 10 years preceding his selection as Defense secretary he was a member of the subcommittee on defense of the House of Representatives Appropriations Committee.

During World War II, he was wounded in action with the Navy in the Pacific.

Secretary Laird began his public career soon after the end of the war, when—at the age of 23—he succeeded his father as a member of the Wisconsin State Senate.

After six years as a state senator, he was elected to the U.S. House of Representativs from Wisconsin's 7th District. Secretary Laird served in the 83rd through 90th sessions of Congress and was elected to the 91st Congress in November 1968.

Secretary Laird, the first member of Congress to become Secretary of Defense, has written and edited three books: "The Republican Papers," "The Conservative Papers" and "A House Divided: America's Strategy Gap."

A native of Omaha, Neb., where he was born Sept. 1, 1922, Secretary Laird moved with his parents when he was just a year old to Marshfield, Wis., which he now considers his hometown. He graduated from Carleton College in Northfield, Wis., in 1942.

Panel To Review Defense Policies

(Commander's Digest)

A "Blue Ribbon" commission to examine the Nation's defense policies is among the initial plans of Secretary of Defense designate Melvin R. Laird.

Mr. Laird, in his first meeting with the press since being named to the Defense post, said, "I feel that we must set up a top level committee or commission to reappraise the Defense establishment and Defense policy, and the organization of the Department of Defense."

At the Pentagon news conference, Rep. Laird, R-Wisc., said he was hopeful that such a review could be set up in the not too distant future. He said the report from such a body would take from six months to a year.

Rep. Laird expressed hope that the war in Vietnam could be ended by next year and that he would give his enthusiastic support as Defense Secretary to this end.

He said he hoped he could come up with more satisfactory defense spending estimates, "but I would first hope that by the time we get to the preparation of our first budget, we could end the war in Vietnam."

When asked if he would define nuclear superiority and whether he believed in it, the secretary designate said, "Well, I have discussed that in the past. Certainly I believe that this country — and I don't want to limit it to that area, because the area is important as far as our conventional weapons are concerned — I believe that the United States should maintain a superior position as far as its defense forces are concerned. But this is, again, getting into the broad general area that I believe we should limit to my first press conference after assuming the role of Secretary of Defense."

He said that naming of the Service Secretaries and the Assistant Secretaries and the Deputy Secretaries is an important task and "one that I shall not take lightly, and I will take my time." He did say it would be ideal to name them in time so that they can have some transition period with the present secretaries.

When asked if his lack of administrative experience might hamper him in the Defense Secretary job, Mr. Laird said, "I would agree that I have not had administrative experience. I believe, however, that I have other experiences that would qualify me for this job, and I have no lack of confidence that I can perform as Secretary of Defense."

Needham Replaces Kurtz At 43rd Bn.

Members of the 43rd Engineer Bn. (Construction), welcomed a familiar face as new commanding officer last week.

Needham received his commission from Georgia Tech, where he was graduated in 1960 with a bachelor of science degree in mechanical engineering.

The major has served as construction engineer for the Seoul, Korea, U. S. Army district, and attended the Engineer Officer's ACvanced Course at Fort Belvoir, Va.

From early 1965 until the end of 1965, Major Needham was assigned to the Atlanta Army Depot. He then served a year as an advisor to the 1st Engineer Battalion, of the Liberian National Guard in Liberia, West Africa. According to the major, the Liberian National Guard is the equivalent of the active U.S. Army.

The major was then assigned to Fort Benning, where he has served with the 43rd Engineer Battalion.

Hot Line to the Hits

'Beatles' Is Group's Best

Today THE BAYONET begins a new column on popular music by Spec.4 Pete Lis, a Radio-TV broadcast specialist assigned to the Information Office of the Infantry Center. Prior to enlisting in the Army, Lis, a native of Waterbury, Conn., attended Boston University. After serving a tour in Korea, he was assigned to Fort Benning's Radio-TV section.

By Spec.4 Pete Lis

What better way to begin a column devoted to the latest in Pop music than by laying a few lines on you about THE BEATLES (Apple SWBO 101). Due to lack of space, I won't be able to delve into a complete dissection, which this two album set really deserves.

Containing 30 songs this piece reflects more than ever, the Beatles as the perfect product and result of everything that rock and roll means and encompasses. As it's basic idea, this album holds every part of extant Western music through the all-embracing medium of rock and roll. THE BEATLES is the history and synthesis of Western music. And that, of course, is what rock and roll is, and that's where and what the Beatles are!

"Back in the USSR," the first cut on the album, goes back to the beginning of the Rock Era. Notice the Beach Boys imitation. With all this talk recently of going back to the old style or conventional form of rock and roll, it's getting to be a real bummer. The Beatles start with the basics, add a track on a track, add a bit of parody and head for the bank.

Glass Onion

Throughout the album, the Beatles progress from this basic contemporary rock and roll sound, to their sojourn in India with the Maharishi in "Dear Prudence," "Looking Through a Glass Onion" or themselves, and George singing about his guitar in "While My Guitar Gently Weeps." There are many commercial favorites which you've undoubtedly heard somewhere on your radio. "Bungalow Bill," "Obladi, Oblada," "Rocky Raccoon," "Helter Skelter" and "Birthday" to mention a few.

The Beatles are all alone in this field. Any disbelievers can sit down with a good set of earphones and open their heads to Side Four where the theme of the single "Revolution" is carried out in two different versions, the latter with the most impact. And if this message isn't enough, "Revolution No. 9" is followed by "Goodnight."

In short, it is the new Beatles record and fulfills all our expectations of it. In general, you could say that this new release stands in the same relationship to Sgt. Pepper as Revolver was to Rubber Soul. And that is to say, the next one ought to be incredible . . . and the beat goes on.

'Roses' to Open Here At Benning Playhouse

By 1st Lt. Fred Vollrath

The cast has been selected and rehearsals begun for Frank D. Gilroy's prize winning play "The Subject Was Roses", scheduled to open at the Fort Benning Playhouse Feb. 12.

"The play takes place in the West Bronx in 1946, just after the war has ended," Spec. 4 Robert D. Burgener, the play's director explained to the assembled cast. "It covers three days in the lives of three people, a son who has just come home from the war and his parents, as they attempt to readjust to each other."

"Roses" won the Pulitzer Prize and Drama Critics' Award for the best play of 1965.

"We have a special interest in this play," said Burgener, "because it's going to be entered in the Third United States Army Play Contest."

The cast and production staff were drawn completely from local talent. The mother is played by S. Sgt. Betty Farmer, a photo-journalist with Center Troop Command, the father is played by Chap. (Capt.) Jack D. Moyer, assigned to Martin Army Hospital, and 2nd Lt. Gary R. Groment, the executive officer of 84th Co. 8th Bn. TCB, plays the son.

The set designer Pvt. Johnnie M. Calfiri, is a former assistant instructor at Centre College in Danville, Kentucky, Elizabeth M. Potter is the Stage Manager, and Susie P. Thomas, the make-up artist.

The director, Spec. 4 Robert D. Burgener, was a drama major at Eastern Illinois University, and has attended the University of Vienna majoring in theater production.

The play is scheduled to run from Feb. 12-15 and is open to the public free of charge.

JACQUELINE BISSET CO-STARS WITH McQUEEN

'Bullitt' Gives New Angle To Realism in Movies

By Spec 4 Harry Lloyd

The word "realism" has bounced around for a long time by people who talk about movies. At first it was a term of respect for the truthfulness of the filmmakers, and then it became a catchall and an excuse for seaminess. Few movies, however, qualify to be called "realistic" the way "Bullitt" does.

This is not to say that "Bullitt" does not have its moments of romance and adventure and other things that do not ordinarily happen to you, reader and film fan. But that may be only because you are not Steve McQueen.

The realism of this movie, in which McQueen plays a San Francisco police lieutenant, comes right off the screen and grabs you. It may take the form of a memorable automobile chase on a Sunday afternoon, in which case you can't get away from the feeling you're there in the back seat. It may come from the dialogue, or the faces of the characters or the excellent outdoor footage of The City.

Most of all, it comes from the character McQueen plays. Lt. Frank Bullitt isn't impressively intelligent, strong, good looking or any of those things movie cops used to be. He makes mistakes and runs up against a few blank walls. But he does his job, wins some victories, and finally begins to learn about himself.

Robert Vaughan, who used to be a hero himself as Uncle agent Napoleon Solo, plays a public prosecutor with selfish ambitions who tries to use McQueen. Vaughan, with his chiseled chin and Brylcreemed hair, is just too polished to be a hero anymore.

Jacqueline Bisset, as the sensitive and sensuous girlfriend of McQueen, plays a skimpy but important part in the movie. She 1) provides a relief from the unpretty things of the story and 2) causes McQueen to look into the mirror and see what his job is doing to him.

Synopsis

UP TIGHT is often as relevant as tomorrow's newspapers and shows, today. It is essentially the story of one man, time in a Hollywood film, the anger, frustration and despair of ghetto life in America today. It is essentially the story of one man, a beaten, alcoholic steelworker, who informs on his only friend.

THE HAPPENING — After an all-night party, Faye Dunaway, Michael Parks, George Maharis and Robert Walker break into the home of Anthony Quinn, a former syndicate member but now a respected hotel owner. Thinking they wish to kidnap his wife, Martha Hyer, or his son, Quinn volunteers to be the hostage and the youngsters go along with it. The joke backfires, however, when neither his wife, partner nor friend from the syndicate days makes any effort to help him. To top it off, the young people become nervous on what to do with him. Quinn resolves the matter by conducting his own kidnapping campaign and by so doing gets revenge on those who would not help him.

THE NIGHT OF THE FOLLOWING DAY — The story is about a kidnapping. The entire operation had been ridiculously easy, really. The razor-edge suspense was nerve shattering for them all, especially the blonde, but the consoled herself with the illusion that chauffeur loved her. Collecting the ransom money was far more difficult. The stakes were big — so were the risks. The operation was foolproof, it had to be. The details were carried out with meticulous efficiency, nothing was left to chance. But the best laid schemes . . . and when they went astray chauffeur acted with barbaric ferocity — but it was all in the mind, for was it not the night of the following day?

ANY GUN CAN PLAY — An action packed western about a bounty hunter, a Mexican villain and a thrusted bank employee who vie with one another over a stolen gold shipment.

THE STALKING MOON — An outdoor drama of the frontier West pits Gregory Peck, a U. S. Army cavalry scout against a savage Apache chieftain in a classic struggle that sets the screen ablaze with action and excitement.

Equal Housing Success Noted

WASHINGTON (ANF)—Secretary of Defense Clark M. Clifford has announced that reports submitted from around the nation at the end of 1968 show "persistent and impressive" progress in securing equality of housing opportunities for all military personnel.

Secretary Clifford said that reports showed that "93 per cent of the 1,201,250 rental units which were surveyed near military bases in the United States in 1967 are now available to all military personnel on an equal opportunity basis.

"While this is an impressive achievement, I want to emphasize again that nothing short of 100 per cent success can be acceptable."

When the housing survey was initiated in mid-1967, only 22 per cent of these rental units were listed as available to all military people on an equal opportunity basis.

"The progress has been persistent and impressive," Secretary Clifford said. "But what has been most impressive to me has been the voluntary cooperation of countless citizens in joining the Department of Defense in the campaign to wipe out discrimination against those who wear the uniform of our country. I am confident that progress will continue in the year ahead."

Veterans Get Increase In Education Benefits

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The Veterans Administration reminds veterans separated from service after Jan. 31, 1955, that they now are entitled to one and one half months of educational assistance — up to a maximum of 36 months — for each month of military service.

A law that became effective in December liberalized the Post-Korean G.I. Bill limit of one month of educational assistance for each month of service for veterans with at least 181 days of service, including some after Jan. 31, 1955.

The VA especially urges Post-Korean veterans who did not return to school because they could complete only a couple of years of college under the old formula of one month entitlement for each month of service to contact their nearest VA office.

Coaching 'Enjoyable' To Massey

Making productive use of leisure time can be an enjoyable and satisfying experience, according to Maj. George M. Massey, commander of the 197th Infantry Brigade's Scout Dog Detachment.

Last week Col. John E. Strever Jr., commander of the 197th Brigade, presented to Maj. Massey a Certificate of Achievement from the Fort Benning Youth Activities Center. The certificate was given to Massey for participating in YAC football as a volunteer coach.

Massey, who played football in high school and at the University of Tennessee, said, "It was enjoyable seeing boys who could barely run come out for football and finish the season as fairly accomplished players." He added he was stimulated seeing the boys keep going despite occasional defeat. He complimented the YAC football team and added, "Everyone involved benefited from the well-organized program."

Massey served in Vietnam as a company commander with the 5th Special Forces Group and holds the Bronze Star Medal and the Air Medal.

THE FORUM

By Spec. 4 Rick Yeiser

Yes, America, there is a Joe Namath. If you look in your Boy Scout Manual, you probably won't find him listed in the section for merit badges in quarterbacking. He's not reverent, humble, dutiful, or clean cut. You have sneered at him for his beard and sideburns, saying that he was a disgrace to the ideal that he portrays to American youth.

But in light of recent events, you'd better start rewriting your manual. Under quarterback I'd suggest that you replace reverent with passes completed, humble with touchdowns, and clean-cut with games won. Joe Namath won his Merit Badge in Miami, and it might be a good idea to give credit where credit is due.

Leave the word courage in your manual though. Joe Willie has it to spare. His knees are so bad that he must be driven from every game. It hurts too much when he bends his leg to put on the brake for him to drive himself. After his team's loss to Buffalo, Joe was the last to leave the locker room. He had had a bad day. Buffalo intercepted five of his passes and dumped him on his back time after time.

As he came down the stairs he grasped the hand rails and grimaced every time he had to put pressure on his knees. He met his father at the bottom and was quietly asked why he did it. . .why he subjected himself to such torture every Sunday afternoon. He gave no answer and only nodded his head negatively when his father asked him, for the hundredth time, to give the game up.

There is also a Matt Snell, You probably didn't pay him much attention before. He played in the "other League" and therefore any comparison between him and the great NFL backs was worthless by definition. I hope that you know better now. If you don't, why don't you ask Rick Volk, who had the misfortune of meeting him head-on early in the game. Volk spent the rest of the first half clearing the bees from his bonnet. He'd probably tell you that he would rather take on Leroy Kelly any day.

You probably didn't notice Snell when he wasn't running. The TV cameras usually followed Namath fading back to pass, and you missed Snell picking off the blitzing Baltimore linebackers. Occasionally, however, there was a blur on the right of your screen as Broadway Joe dropped back. That blur was a Colt linebacker being ambushed by Snell.

There is also a George Sauer. The only place you would have found him in your unrevised manual would have been under "hippie." George has long sideburns and a beatle brow and wears "granny" glasses off the field. In next year's edition list him alongside Paul Warfield and Bob Hayes in the "receivers" section. He's every bit as good.

Oh, yes, remember Johnny Sample? He's the guy you thought you relegated to second-class status by blackballing him from the NFL. He certainly didn't fit your Boy Scout image, because when he plays football he is not a nice man. He taunts his opponents unmercifully, hoping that they will lose their cool. Sorry about that. . .nice guys finish last, Ask Willie Richardson.

Then there is the Jet front four. You probably doubted their existence before last Sunday, and even now you probably can't remember their names. Don't worry about hurting their feelings though. They can make it to the bank without your sympathy. Send the flowers to Brasse, Smith, et al.

Yes, America there is a Joe Namath. And an American Foothall League and the New York Jets. You'd better get used to the idea too. They are going to be around for a good long while.

Ralph Tapp's 12 points of Hq. Co., CTC, weren't enough as the 524th Personnel Service Co., expanded a slim 16-14 halftime lead into a 30-24 victory at the Briant Wells Field House Monday night.

Curtis Bently led the 524th with 10 points, all on field goals, as the 524th maintained its share of first place in the Main Post League. Company A, 1st Battalion, CTC, holds the other half of first place with a 3-0 record.

In the second game, Coach John Williams' Co. C, CTC a resounding 42-16 victory over the 988th Military Police Company.

Cliff Pittman lead a well-balanced attack to give

The 20-5 halftime score and the final outcome were indicative of Comany C's 4-1 record. The 988th now holds a 1-3 record.

Pittman's eight points were backed up with Orville Johnson, John Moore, Irving Whitlock and George Duffy each contributing six from the floor.

Action is scheduled to continue with two games Monday night. The opener is set for 6.

Col. Leon D. Marlowe, new commanding officer of the Student Brigade, tossed up the ball for the start of the 1969 basketball season. Hq. Co., TCB, walloped Ranger Tng. Command, 46-25, in the opening game of The Student Brigade League. TCB scored on the tip-off and the Rangers were swamped for the rest of the time.

David (Chief) Loving brought smoke on the backboards with 14 points for TCB. Loving also rebounded many stray Ranger shots, and was integral in many scoring plays. Bob Terzyk of TCB initiated the slickest plays of the evening scoring 10 points. The Rangers' added swished in 10 points to lead his team in scoring.

A second game was scheduled for the evening, but A Co., ISB didn't show up. The game was forfeited to Hq. Co., TSB. Then the TSB team split and played against itself.

Sgt. Ward Has Solid Background As Boxer, Coach Around Globe

By Pfc R. L. Johnson

SFC Ruben C. Ward is the man to see about boxing. Sgt. Ward, operations sergeant for TSB, has coached Army boxers all over the world.

He started boxing in Atlanta in 1948 before entering the military. He enlisted in the Army in 1950, and began training for the Ft. Bragg boxing team. Just before his first fight, he was transferred Ft. Monmouth. He continued his training there, and fought his first match on the 1st Army team in 1952.

The next year found him in the ring for the Army again, but this time in Berlin. He was the middleweight for the Berlin Rifles. His first coaching job came later in that tour with the Bears.

Olympic boxer Eddie Crook broke his hand during the 1956 Olympic tryouts, and came to Berlin to be Ward's assistant coach. The Bears boxed foreign clubs as well as other Army teams. In what might be called a small international tournament they beat German teams in every weight class. Eddie Crook took over as coach when Ward rotated back to Fort Benning in 1957. During the next year he was assistant coach for the 29th Infantry team here and was sent to Hawaii to coach the 14th Infantry Battle Group. After returning briefly to the U.S., he was needed in Germany again.

In 1961 he coached the 15th Infantry Battle Group team there. The highlight of his tour came in Copenhagen, where Ingemar Johanssen refereed a match for Ward's team. The series of the men he coached went on to further their Army boxing careers. One of these was William Flemings. Flemings became featherweight champion of the 6th Army for three straight years from 1964 to 1966.

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

By Bill Kloeb

With the closing of the deer and dove season many hunters would like to get back to fishing but have been discouraged by the cold weather. There is a group of fishermen who believe the temperature of the water is the all important factor in the determining how good fishing is going to be and dictates the fishing tactics to be used. One friend of mine, an expert, claims the best results will be obtained by observing the following rules:

62 to 69—fish six to 12 feet.

51 to 61 degrees—use surface lures.

50 degrees and under—take up some other sport.

Ray Smith, a retired sergeant, doesn't believe in this theory. He caught a 10½ pound bass Jan. 9 at Kings Pond. The same day another fisherman pulled an eight pounder out of Kings.

Have you ever hooked a 10-pound carp? If not you've missed an angler's thrill. There are many carp in the Chattahoochee and other streams on the post. Of course the right bait is the secret for hooking one. Here is a carp bait recipe that is supposed to be one of the best.

Simmer one-half cup of water and one teaspoon of anise seed for at least three minutes.

Add four or five tablespoons of honey and continue to simmer until a light syrup is formed.

Cool slightly and pour on wax paper.

Adding a small amount of cotton to the syrup just before adding the corn meal will help to hold the mixture together in the water.

If you are successful in hooking into a mess of carp don't throw them away. The table qualities of many so called rough fish surprise even the most finicky eater. When properly prepared they can become a gourmet's delight.

The list of common "trash" fish is long. It includes such species as suckers, carp, drum, chubs, mooneyes, redhorse and huffalo.

Many of these are caught commercially and find their way into fishmarkets under assumed and more palatable names.

The "white perch" you buy could be drum; the "boneless cat" could be th e odd-looking paddlefish or spoonbill. Non-sport fish taken from salt water receive an even more impressive array of monikers.

To popularize and make use of the tremendous number of rough fish that abound in our waters is a big undertaking. We must overcome our reluctance to take home a mess of Suckers or "Thunderpumpers." Then we must learn how to turn them into dishes that delight the whole family.

The latter task must be approached with all the dash and daring of a continental chef. The old "roll them in crumbs and fry" usually won't do. Recipes for marinating, making creoles and a hundred different recipes may be obtained by writing the Georgia Game and Fish Commission, 401 State Capitol, Atlanta, Ga. 30334.

While on the subject of the Georgia Game and Fish Commission we'd like to mention that the commission publishes a very nice monthly magazine which should be of interest to local sportsmen.

The magazine deals mainly with hunting, fishing and conservation in the state of Georgia. There are articles concerning the improvement of hatcheries, streams, lakes and management areas; the location and opening dates at management streams and areas; the opening of seasons in various sections of the state; coming events such as archery and skeet tournaments and editorials concerning the position of the Georgia Game and Fish Commission on proposed legislation affecting sportsmen.

Armor Battalion In Stewart Tests

For members of the 4th Bn., 69th Armor, the new year has brought new challenges and a temporary change of locale.

Elements of the battalion, a part of the 197th Inf. Bde., are already at Fort Stewart, firing the first parts of the unit's annual Armament Qualification Course.

Alpha Company left Monday in convoy for the fort near Savannah, with plans to remain until late this month.

To ease transportation difficulties which would arise in the convoy of a battalion of tanks, the battalion borrowed vehicles assigned to a National Guard unit already at Fort Stewart for the battalion firing.

Initial exercises involve familiarization firing of the tank machine guns. Later "firing tables" include both day and night firing of the tank main gun.

The battalion is commanded by Lt. Col. Robert H. Luck.

Expect Your Tax Forms Soon

(Editor's Note: In an Army News Features series beginning this week, the Internal Revenue Service of the U. S. Treasury Department answers some of the most frequently asked questions on federal income tax matters.)

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Question: When will I be getting my income tax forms?

Answer from the Internal Revenue Service (IRS): Beginning in January, the tax forms are available at local IRA offices as well as many post offices and banks. Most taxpayers will receive copies of the forms and instructions in the mail.

If you receive a 1040 tax form in the mail, you may have a form that is printed in two colors. This is to draw attention to certain parts of the form that were troublesome to taxpayers last year.

Color is not used on the 1040-A forms or the 1040 forms that may be picked up at IRS offices and other locations.

Q: My wife worked parttime at a local department store during the Christmas season. If she files her own tax return will I still be able to claim her exemption on our return?

A.: No, you may not. When a husband or wife files a separate return the other must file separately too and neither is permitted to claim exemptions, expenses or deductions of the other.

If you wife's income is small it would probably be to your advantage to file a joint return. Compute your tax both ways to see which is best for you.

Q: My son is stationed in Vietnam with the U. S. military forces. What do we do about his tax return?

A: Military personnel in a combat zone do not have to file tax returns while stationed there. They may wait to file a tax return until 180 days after leaving Vietnam.

Road Expert DiGiacomo Wins Again

Outstanding driving seems to be a habit with Spec. 4 James Di Giacomo. This week, Di Giacomo wheeled his way to the "Driver of the Month" title for the second time in three months in 197th Inf. Bde. competition.

Di Giacomo, a member of Hq. Co., 5th Bn., 31st Inf., was presented the 197th's "Driver of the Month" plaque for the second time by Col. John E. Strever Jr., brigade commander. He first won the award by topping participants in the brigade's November driver contest.

The competition, conducted by the 197th's maintenance office, is broken down into three phases designed to test a driver's knowledge of his vehicle capabilities and limitations, maintenance and operating skills.

The overall objective of the "Driver of the Month" program is to promote awareness and improvement of these three critical areas.

Di Giacomo and December's winner of the award, Spec. 4 Joe Powell, HH-5, 7th Bn., 18th Arty., will represent the brigade in the USAIC quarterly competition to be held later this month.

The two-time winner of the 197th's top driving award served in Vietnam with the 199th Light Inf. Bde. and currently drives a five-ton wrecker for the 5th Bn., 31st Inf.

Correspondence Schoolwork Helps Many Get Promotions

By Spec 4 Frank Truchon

"The Army Correspondence Course Program offers avmeans of furthering military education anywhere in the world, whether in the active Army, a citizen - soldier of the Army Reserve or National Guard, or a member of another service."

These words of Col. Albert N. Ward, director of the Department of Nonresident Instruction, introduce the Army's correspondence course catalogue.

Four basic correspondence courses are offered: the Infantry NCO series; the Army pre-commission course; Infantry officer basic, and officer advanced.

NCO series is for any soldier who wishes to become an Infantry NCO or review such subjects as tactics.

The pre-commission series affords Warrant officers, ROTC senior cadets and enlisted men in all branches the opportunity to obtain a knowledge of the military subjects which they may be required to know for an appointment to the rank of Infantry second lieutenant in the Reserves.

The officer basic correspondence course is primarily directed toward reservists and guardsmen.

The officer advanced correspondence course prepares commissioned officers of the Reserve Components who are not on extended active duty for branch command and staff duties at battalion and brigade levels.

The educational requirement for a reserve officer to be promoted to major is completion of 50 per cent of this course. Requirement for promotion is the completion of the course.

Each of the correspondence courses consists of a number of subcourses, such as physical training, military leadership, and map reading. These are presented in progressive sequence. As soon as one subcourse is completed another is furnished the student.

A subcourse usually covers a single subject and consists of one to nine lessons and an examination. A corresponding exam is designed to be completed in one evening. However, most one-lesson courses do not have an examination.

Students take their tests on IBM punch cards which are graded by a computer in the departments Automatic Data Processing system.

There are over 30,000 students presently enrolled in courses and subcourses. Approximately 500 of these students are from foreign countries, including Ethiopia, Republic of China, India, Thailand, Korea, Vietnam, the Philippines and South America.

The department provides a counseling service for those students who need help in planning a course of study.

Evening Courses Offered

Six new subjects are among the 22 non-credit evening courses being offered during the winter quarter at Columbus College.

Dr. Fred Burgess, director of the college's continuing education program, said classes will start the week of Jan. 27 on a two-hour, one night a week basis for eight weeks. Some courses, however, are taught for only six weeks and a few are scheduled on a bi-weekly basis. The class for real estate salesmen begins Jan. 13.

Average cost per course is from $12 to $15 plus materials in some instances.

The majority of classes meet from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

Burgess said the winter quarter offering is the most varied yet scheduled at the college. The 672 enrollment for the past fall quarter set a new record.

Subjects offered for the first time this quarter include Introduction to Psychology, Landscape Architecture for Homeowners, You and Your Automobile. Basic Photography, Civil Liberties and the Constitution, and a seminar in Negro History.

Courses which fail to attract a minimum number of students will be cancelled, Burgess said. Persons may register either by mail or at the college. A brochure with a full description of courses and an application form is now available.

Among the courses offered are a seminar in Negro history), "You and Your Automobile," and "Tumbling for Fun."

Gen. Deane To Address 173rd Bde.

Maj. Gen. John R. Deane Jr., commander of the 82nd Airborne Div. at Fort Bragg, N.C., will come to Fort Benning Saturday to address a reunion of former members of the 173rd Airborne Brigade.

Gen. Deane commanded the 173rd in 1965-67 in Vietnam, and led the unit when it made the most famous combat parachute jump of the Vietnam war.

The reunion is open to all former members of the 173rd, regardless of rank.

It will be held in the USAIC recreation center, in Sand Hill and will begin at 6 p.m. and will last until midnight.

Tickets for the event, priced at $2, are available from representatives in most units on post, and will also be sold at the door.

Registration Set At American U.

American University starts another term Feb. 10 with four new courses among the 58 offered.

Tuition for dependents is $69. Tuition assistance applications for soldiers should be filed on DA Form 2171, approved by the unit commander and turned in at registration along with DA Form 669, to the Army Education Centers: Bldg. 35, Room 308, on Main Post; Bldg. No. 3355 at Sand Hill; Bldg. 9003 at Kelley Hill or Bdg. 5153 at Harmony Church. Through tuition assistance, the Army will pay $51.75 and the student $17.25.

Classes end April 3. Sessions meet from 5:15 through 9:45 p.m. Mondays and Wednesdays or Tuesdays and Thursdays.

The last day a course can be dropped for a money refund is Feb. 14.

Eighteen graduate level courses are offered, including three new ones: Business Budgeting and Executive Control, Investment Analysis and Financial Management. Courses are for three semester hours each, and up to six hours of graduate level courses may be transferred to other colleges in pursuance of a graduate degree.

The other new course, Business Statistics, is among 50 undergraduate level courses offered. An unlimited number of undergraduate credits may be transferred to other colleges, provided the grade earned for the courses is "C" or above and the prospective college permits the transfer.

American University courses here are taught on an accelerated basis and are graded on a three point system. Under this system, "A" equals three points; "B" 2 points; and "C" one point toward a cumulative grade point ration.

Soldier Hit by Car 'Serious'

A Fort Benning soldier was still in serious condition Wednesday from multiple injuries sustained Tuesday night when he was struck by an auto on Victory Drive.

Pvt. Erwin F. Krabbe, 26, of the 197th Avn. Co., was struck when he either stepped or stumbled off the curb of the median into the path of an auto driven by another soldier, Columbus police said. PFC Ronald L. Fuller, 21, of the Army Training Center, was taken to Martin Army Hospital for treatment of glass in the eye, police said.

Witnesses said Krabbe was tossed into the air by the impact and struck the windshield of the car, shattering it.

Arts, Crafts Museum Presents 'La Traviata'

By 1st Lt. Fred Voltrath

The Columbus Museum of Arts and Crafts will present its second operalogue, "La Traviata" tomorrow at 8:15 p.m. at the Bradley Museum's auditorium.

"An operalogue is a kaliadascope of highlights from an opera, the arias, duets, and dramatic underscoring," explained Theodore Gargiulo, who will narrate the story and play excerpts of Verdi's score at the piano.

Appearing in the production will be Gerida Gargiulo, a lyric soprano, and Larry Dorminy, a tenor.

Mrs. Gargiulo has professionally performed in concerts, operas, operettas, musical comedies, popular and sacred music. She sings in English, Italian, German French, Hebrew, and Spanish.

Dorminy is presently engaged at Albany Junior College, in Albany, Georgia, as a professor of voice, choral conducting, speech and drama. He has performed in concert, opera, musical comedy and oratorio works.

"We are presenting the performance in such a way that even those totally unfamiliar with opera will enjoy the performance," said Gargiulo.

DSCs Pinned On Pair In Awards Ceremony

Ten officers and five enlisted men received awards for heroism and gallantry in action on York Field Tuesday.

Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr. pinned the nation's second-highest decoration for valor, the Distinguished Service Cross, on Capt. James F. Dabney and Sgt. Roger A. Williams.

Dabney, a student in the Infantry Officer Advanced Course, received the DSC for his actions May 6-10, 1968, in Quan Binh Chanh Province in Vietnam.

Williams received his award for actions on Nov. 9, 1967, during a combat assault on Hill 1124 overlooking the Dak To Valley. He is now a motor pool sergeant with Co. D, 1st Bn., 29th Inf., 197th Inf. Bde.

In addition to the two DSCs, Gen. Wright also presented 10 Silver Star awards. Two received the Distinguished Flying Cross and another was awarded the Soldier's Medal.

When Dabney's company encountered a combined North Vietnamese-Viet Cong force, the captain exposed himself to enemy fire as he directed his fire team and artillery and air support.

Dabney then led his men in an assault against the enemy. Discovering a north Vietnamese mortar position, he charged the emplacement, killing two of the enemy and taking two prisoners.

Early the next morning, a large enemy force attacked the perimeter of the company's night position. Dabney quickly brought air strikes to within 50 meters of his unit's position, and then ordered counter-offensive and sweep of the area.

On May 9, Dabney sprang an ambush on the enemy forces. During the fight he moved among his men, encouraging them and directing their fire. At one point he personally manned a machinegun to kill three Viet Cong who were less than 25 meters away.

By afternoon enemy soldiers were fleeing in all directions. During the afternoon and the next day Dabney conducted a sweep of the area which crushed the remaining pockets of resistance.

Sgt. Williams was a specialist four when he par-

Bayonet Takes CONARC Award

Fort Benning's post newspaper, The Bayonet, has won first place in the U. S. Continental Army Command's (USCONARC) Annual Newspaper Awards as "the finest civilian enterprise letter-press newspaper in CONARC for 1968," in competition with 30 other newspapers in the country.

The Bayonet, now in its 27th year, is published by the Columbus Ledger-Enquirer.

"The paper was judged on its support of Army information objectives, its use as an instrument of command and its journalistic standards," said Mrs. Ruth M. Dearing, a spokesman for the CONARC Information Office which judged the entries.

The Bayonet will be CONARC's entry in the Department of the Army world-wide contest.

"Naturally I'm very pleased," said Lt. Col. Douglas B. Tucker, the post Information Officer. "I feel it is a great tribute to the devotion and professionalism of The Bayonet staff and the excellent cooperation of the Columbus

Dogs Unleashed In Training Here

By Spec. 4 Walter Nemkovich

Scout dogs have been used with great success in Vietnam, finding everything from an enemy weapons cache to mines and booby traps.

The Hq. Det., Scout Dogs of the 197th Inf. Bde. has recently finished training and shipping a new type of scout dog that can be used without a leash. The term "off-leash" means the dog can operate freely anywhere from 25 to 150 meters ahead of its handler. The actual distance will be determined by the type of terrain.

Th present method used is that of having the dog on a five foot leash with the handler walking to the rear of the dog.

The first graduates of this new course, all volunteers, were recently shipped to Vietnam from Lawson Field. The dogs in their individual cages were loaded on a C-141 Military Airlift Command airplane along with their handlers and supplies.

During the eighth week of regular scout dog training, the best dogs and their masters are selected for the off-leash course.

Ministers Invited Here For Prayer Broadcast

Ministers and religious leaders in the Phenix City-Columbus area are being invited to join officers and noncommissioned officers at Fort Benning in listening to a special broadcast of the annual Presidential prayer breakfast at 9:30 a.m. next Thursday.

Major General John M. Wright Jr., post commander, has invited unit commanders, staff officers at all intermediate levels of command and their senior NCOs to attend the broadcast in Marshall Auditorium at Infantry Hall (Bldg. 4).

President Richard M. Nixon will speak during the breakfast, which is to be held in Washington, D. C. The chiefs of chaplains of each of the military services also will be present.

The event was first organized and sponsored by Congress during the administration of the late President John F. Kennedy.

Chaplain (Col.) Holland Hope, post chaplain, said this will be the first time, to his knowledge, that the Presidential prayer breakfast will be broadcast directly to the Armed Services.

Only two installations in the Third U. S. Army area, Fort Benning and Fort McPherson in Atlanta, are to receive the broadcast according to Chaplain Hope.

The broadcast is being made to U.S. military installations over a leased telephone wire. Tape recordings will be mailed to installations where the time factor makes it impractical to hear the broadcast at the time the broadcast is held.

Classes in session in Infantry Hall at the time of the breakfast will be able to hear the broadcast through the closed circuit television system. There will be no video broadcast in the classrooms, however.

Those who attend are requested to be seated in Marshall Auditorium by 9:25 a.m. on January 30, the chaplain said.

ticipated in the operation for which he won the DSC.

As Williams' company was moving toward the crest of the hill under heavy enemy fire, his platoon was met by two North Vietnamese soldiers firing automatic weapons.

Williams dropped to his knees and shot both enemy soldiers, killing one and wounding the other. As the wounded North Vietnamese fell, he threw a hand grenade which landed at the feet of Williams' squad leader and two other comrades.

Williams reacted by shouting a warning, knocking one man aside and throwing himself on the smoking grenade. His body absorbed the grenade blast and shrapnel and saved the other soldiers from injury.

Recipients of the Silver Star were Maj. Stuart K. Purks and Capt. Jimmy L. Braddock, both of the 21st Co., The Student Brigade; 1st Lt. Anthony J. Bardol, 49th Co. (Airborne), TSB; Staff Sgt. Harry C. Coons and Staff Sgt. Willie J. Freeman, both of Company E, ISB; Spec. 5 Jack Bryant, Hq. Co., 1st Bn., 29th Inf., 197th Inf. Bde.; Capt. Alan B. Nason and Sgt. Marvin T. Miyashiro, both of Co. E, 5th Bn., 31st Inf., 197th Inf. Bde., Capt. Phillip L. Hendrix, office of the Director of Instruction.

Capt. Thomas F. Gaffney, The Infantry School Airborne Department& received the Silver Star with second oak leaf cluster.

Maj. Robert C. Knight, 21st Co., TSB, was presented the Distinguished Flying Cross with third and fourth oak leaf clusters. CWO Randy G. York, 181st Avn. Co., 10th Avn. Gp., received the DFC with first oak leaf cluster.

Capt. Frank J. Messana, Medical Corps, Martin Army Hospital, was awarded the Soldier's Medal.

"Much of the credit goes to the three specialists and two officers who have supervised the publication during the past year; Spec. Fives C. Frederick Reichardt, Richard L. McCready and Frank J. Kauffman and 1st Lieutenants William C. Bayne and Frederick W. Vollrath."

A formal presentation of the award will be made soon according to the USCONARC spokesman.

Scout Dogs

Attached to the collar of the off-leash dog is a miniature radio transmitter which sends signals to a receiver on the handler's helmet. These signals will enable the dog handler to tell if the dog is moving or has stopped. The dog will stop upon detection of imminent danger and look in that direction.

A silent whistle is utilized any time the handler wants to get the attention of the scout dog. Once attention is obtained, directions are given through the use of hand signals. The entire process is silent and very effective.

Instructor S-Sgt. Richard Fostervold, a Vietnam returnee, remarked, "I think the off-leash dogs will be very effective in Vietnam for both man and dog are highly trained and work silently."

Years before the first official inaugural medal was issued to commemorate a President, the United States Mint began striking Indian Peace. Medals, now known as the Presidential Series. Early Presidents gave these medals to Indian chiefs as tokens of friendship.

VIETNAM TOURS

I understand Department of the Army policy requires individuals under a year who are sent to Vietnam to complete a full tour. Is it true?

DA Message 848395 dated January 22, 1968 sets down the criteria for the determination of ETS eligibility of enlisted men for overseas service.

An individual selected for overseas assignment of intertheater transfer is eligible for such assignment if he has at least six months service remaining until ETS on date of departure from CONUS or area of residence port of entry.

Individuals assigned to units deploying to Vietnam are eligible for deployment provided they have at least 90 days remaining until ETS on date of departure from CONUS of residence port of entry.

Regular Army enlisted personnel with more than four years of service for pay purposes who have insufficient service remaining for oversea assignment as indicated above will be required to accomplish personnel action in accordance with Chapter 4, AR 601-208, to acquire sufficient time to complete the full tour as prescribed in AR 614-30.

Individuals arriving at overseas replacement station, who no longer possess the required remaining service until ETS because of their own negligence, will continue movement to overseas destinations as orignally ordered.

OCS

I will be entering OCS in March. I have served three years in the Army already, with one tour in Vietnam. I have been told that I will not be able to wear my decorations and awards while I am a candidate. Is this true?

Not any more. A change to AR 350-50 now states any authorized badges, ribbons, or wings may now be worn during Officer Candidate School. However, you are not allowed to wear any indication of former rank. Only the OC insignia may be worn.

How much can I send back home in gifts from Vietnam without having to pay duty on it?

Public Law 90-240 extends until Dec. 31, 1969, the time in which service personnel in combat areas are authorized duty-free entry of gifts, up to a retail value of $50, to the United States.

GI HOME LOANS

What is the maximum guarantee of GI home loans from the Veterans Administration?

The Veteran's Administration can now guarantee a loan of $12,500, and increase of $5,000 over last year. In addition, the permissible interstate rate was raised from 6 to 6¾ per cent to make it easier for veterans to obtain such loans.

INVOLUNTARY EXTENSIONS

Can the President, without the consent of Congress, involuntarily extend me?

Yes, Public Law 90-235 provides the President may, when Congress is not in session, as a national defense requirement, authorize the Secretary of the Defense to extend enlistments, periods of active duty or other military status in any component of the Armed Forces.

The extensions would expire at the end of six month, or 70 days after Congress next convenes, whichever is sooner.

VIETNAM LEAVE

How many days leave can I accumulate in Vietnam?

A new law authorizes personnel who serve at least 120 days in combat zone to accumulate up to 90 days leave. Leave in excess of 60 days so accumulated is lost unless it is used before the end of the fiscal year after the fiscal year in which service in a combat zone ceased.

Survivor assistance offered by Adjutant General's office

This is the second of a series on service policies for military dependents.

The Adjutant General

The Adjutant General provides services through six branches. The survivors' assistance branch provides timely assistance to the next of kin of deceased, retired, active duty personnel, or missing persons who live in Fort Benning's 81-county area of responsibility.

The survivor assistance officer is automatically assigned by the AG's office. He personally visits the next of kin as soon as practicable after the casualty notification to determine immediate needs.

He provides personal assistance in arranging for financial assistance if required, funeral arrangements and military honors if desired. Further help is given by offering advice on rights and benefits,, obtaining death gratuity and other authorized payments and provides other assistance as required.

Dependents desiring the services of a Notary Public may apply direct to the Staff Judge Advocate, United States Army Infantry Center Annex, Bldg. 5.

Uniform Services Identification and Privilege Cards (DD Form 1173) are issued by the AG to dependents of personnel whose sponsors are not stationed at Fort Benning, to survivors of deceased active duty and retired personnel, and to retired personnel and their dependents.

The cards may be obtained through personal visits to the Personal Affairs Branch, Bldg. 1827 or via the mail.

The Personal Affairs Branch, Bldg. 1827, assists by referring dependents to the appropriate agency for information and assistance concerning the shipment of household goods, passports, citizenship papers, legal matters, medical care or any other assistance available to military dependents.

Voting assistance is also obtainable from the Personal Affairs Branch. The branch helps retired people and their dependents or survivors on rights, benefits, and privileges.

Provost Marshal

The Provost Marshal should be contacted with regards to post tags, assistance in registration of cars, and insurance. The Provost Marshal is located in Bldg. 215.

Off-Post Housing

Officers departing Fort Benning and other stations on hardship tours are eligible to apply for on-post housing in Battle Park homes through the Family Housing Office, in Bldg. 35.

The following priorities are established: dependents of company grade officers departing Fort Benning on unaccompanied tours overseas; dependents of field grade officers departing Fort Benning on unaccompanied tours overseas, and dependents of officers departing from stations other than Fort Benning on unaccompanied tours overseas.

CHAPLAIN

For those unable to obtain on post housing the Off-Post Housing Service is provided in Room 132 in Bldg. 35 for personnel of all ranks. Listings are maintained on open rental and sale housing and include such information as the realtor, owner, price, interior and exterior fixtures, pertinent clauses of the lease agreement, whether children and pets are acceptable and other general information.

All Chaplain services including counseling, availability of chapel services, and Sunday Schools, assistance with problems concerning allotments and Army Emergency Relief, assistance in case of death, and contact with the Ministerial Alliance in the area are available upon request by contacting the Center Chaplain's Office, Bldg. 35 or by calling 545-2621.

Your actions and words reflect on the service

ALMOST EVERYTHING WITH which you come in contact is easily identified by its name. Whether it is a person, an object, an idea, an action — everything has a name. We have even given names to objects and places in the reaches of space and the depths of the oceans so that they are more easily identified.

YOU, AS AN INDIVIDUAL, also have a name by which you are called, paid, identified, etc. Your name is your birthright and something of which to be proud. It must be guarded from tarnish whether by deed or accusation.

BUT, AS MEMBERS OF THE Armed Forces you also have another name. You are known as Soldier, Airman, Marine or Sailor. You are a member of a "family" that is easily identified by its profession and its uniforms and, because of these, you are easily recognized in a crowd or a community.

IT IS BECAUSE OF THIS that you must guard your name — both your given family name and your military name — with care. You conduct, and your actions reflect upon you not only as an individual and as part of the Smith, Brown, Jones or Green family, but on you as a member of the military "family" as well.

YOU ARE, IN MANY CASES, more closely watched than your civilian counterparts because you are part of a profession or a group that is somewhat apart from the remainder of the population.

YOU DRESS DIFFERENTLY because you must wear a uniform; your family life is often quite different because of transfers, overseas assignments, working hours and the type of job you perform; and you comprise a very small segement of our total population.

BECAUSE OF THESE and other differences and because you serve the cause of patriotism, you are noticed.

FOR THIS REASON, your every action and word must reflect credit upon you not only as an individual member of your own family, but as a member of the military family as well.

OTHER MEMBERS of the military community are judged by your words and actions, just as you are judged by theirs. Prudent speech and action on the part of every man and woman in uniform are necessary so that at no time, in any way, will the family name of Soldier, Sailor, Marine or Airman be damaged.

JUST AS YOU STRIVE to keep your personal family name unblemished, do the same for your military family name. (AFPS)

Drug Abuse Lecture Heads TSB Wives' Coffees

Fort Benning Society Women's News

The wives of the Officers in the Student Brigade met recently in the Supper Club for their monthly luncheon. Guest speakers for the affair were Mr. John Guss and Mr. Stephen Ross of the CID Narcotics Bureau, who addressed the ladies on the topic of drug abuse.

The honored guest of the afternoon was Mrs. Lon D. Marlowe, wife of Col. Lon D. Marlowe, TSB commanding officer. Mrs. Marlowe, a newcomer to the briagde, was welcomed and introduced to the ladies by Mrs. John V. Webb, wife of Lt. Col. John V. Webb, commanding officer of the Infantry School Bn.

The cadre hostesses for the affair were the wives of officers in ISB. They arranged the entire program and prepared the name tags and reservations. The 4th Bn. wives sent the invitations, and the Hq. wives arranged the decorations and prepared the menu. The centerpiece was a yellow and lavender floral arrangement.

The program was introduced by Col. Payne, the Provost Marshal of the post. Mr. Guss' and Mrs. Ross' topic consisted of a lecture, slides and a film concerning drug abuse.

The wives of the men in the Infantry Officer Advanced Course met for a brunch in the dining room of a local department store. The fourth platoon wives hosted the affair under the direction of Mrs. Johnny McCullough.

Special guests included Mrs. E. Seibert from Wattenscheid, Germany, Mrs. Peter Withers from Columbus, Mrs. Chad Payne, Mrs. Bill Massey, Mrs. Bob Burnell, Mrs. John Johnson, and Mrs. Paul Strang.

Wig Line

The featured program was the showing of a compete line of wigs and hairpieces. Student wives modeling the wigs were Mrs. Paul Strang, Mrs. Earl Johnson, Mrs. Gunter Seibert, Mrs. Earl Yamada, Mrs. Dennis Schoen, Mrs. Robert Thomas, Mrs. Jerry Wall, and Mrs. Thomas Rhame.

The wives of Infantry Officer Basic Course 5-69 have been busy recently. A pizza party in the Day Room of the 23rd Co. satiated the appetites of 35 of the wives and Mrs. Albert Bredlau, special guest for the occasion. The party was financed from the receipts of a bake sale that the wives held before Christmas.

The party was held one evening when the wives husbands were out on an all night field problem, and was directed by Mrs. James T. Robinson and Mrs. Paul A. Markson Jr.

The wives held a luncheon in the Corregidor room of the Officer's Club. Special guests included Mrs. E. C. Acuff, Mrs. Wilbur J. Theil, Mrs. Wendell O. Doody, Mrs. Albert H. Bredlau, Mrs. Paul Markson, and Mrs. Steven Hall.

The theme of the luncheon was "Cherry Pink and Apple Blossom White." Mrs. Donald Sullivan and Mrs. Thomas Wright were responsible for the decorations and keeping them consonant with the theme. The centerpiece was a miniature cart filled with pink and white carnations, topped by small parasols.

The featured event of the affair was a songfest presented by the "Polka Dots," a choral group formed by the Officer's wives. The group sang a selection of their favorite songs.

A ionow-up coffee was held by the wives of IOBC 7-69 at the Officer's Field Ration Mess. Mrs. Kenneth D. Wiley spoke about the activities during the course. Projects discussed included plans for fund raising, such as a bake sale and tours. Seventeen wives attended the affair, hosted by Mrs. John C. Decker and Mrs. Clifford W. Shinski.

49er Party Will Provide More Than a Good Time

New cribs, cots, toy sheives and perhaps TV sets are among the things Tot Town Nursery can look forward to buying with some of the proceeds from the annual 49'er party scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Feb. 8 at the Main Officers Club.

The nursery now occupies a new building, but needs some of the things that will help to make the place more homelike for the children.

The new nursery accommodates approximately 225 children and has a large playgrounds, it is not operated for profit but to provide care for dependent children.

The Daughters of the U. S. Army (DUSA) were given the responsibility for operating the nursery ten years ago when a board of staff officers decided to get out of the "baby food and diaper" line and let the girls handle it.

DUSA, originally organized at Fort Benning in 1928, is comprised of daughters and granddaughters of Army officers. A spirit of friendship pervades the group which has grown into a national organization with headquarters in Washington, D. C. DUSA is dedicated to the support of worthy causes.

Each year at Fort Benning, DUSA give a 49'er party to earn funds for Tot Town Nursery and other worthwhile activities. In the past, DUSA has awarded scholarships, given financial assistance to the Youth Activities Center, and Boy Scouts.

DUSA hopes to award a scholarship to a deserving high school senior from Fort Benning as well as contributing to the National DUSA Scholarship Fund.

All members of the Main Officers Club can purchase tickets from major unit representatives and from the club.

OC Wives Hold Last Coffee

The fifth and final 98th Co. OCS Wives Club Coffee somewhat "whitened" the green winter of Fort Benning. The theme of the coffee, "Winter Wonderland," hung in icicle-form from the dayroom ceiling. Repeating the theme was a white and lavender feather snowman as the centerpiece of the refreshment able.

The nametags were decorated as ice skates, and the invitations were made of lavender color with white snowmen.

Credit for the displays goes to the cadre hostesses, Mrs. Steven D. Bice, and Mrs. Wilson W. Culbreth.

PEANUTS

Instead of "chestnuts roasting on an open fire," how about peanuts roasting in the oven? There's nothing quite so good to munch on during an evening card game than fresh roasted peanuts fresh from the oven.

To roast fresh peanuts in the shell, set the oven temperature for 375 F. and cook for 20 to 30 minutes in a shallow pan. Stir the nuts about every 10 minutes to keep from burning. To see if the nuts are finished crack and rub the peanut between your fingers. If the husk comes off easily, the peanuts are done.

Peanut Bars

1 cup 1 (6 oz. pkg) semi-sweet chocolate
¾ teaspoon salt
2-3 cup seedless raisins
2-3 cup chopped peanuts
Melt chocolate over hot water or over very low heat. Stir until nearly smooth. Remove from heat until nearly cool, then add salt, raisins, cut fine, and the nuts. Mix well, spread in buttered shallow pan to ¼-in depth. Then set, cut into strips.

Peanut Butter Cupcakes

½ cup butter
1½ cups brown sugar
½ cup peanut butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 eggs, beaten
1½ cups cake flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking powder
2-3 cup milk

Preheat oven to 350 F., a moderate oven. Cream butter, sugar, and peanut butter. Add vanilla and eggs, beating well. Sift flour, salt, and baking powder; add to egg mixture alternately with milk. Bake in greased muffin pans (or use cupcake liners) about 30 minutes. Frost with any Chocolate Frosting. Makes about 20 cupcakes.

Dear Community Service

DEAR COMMUNITY SERVICE:

I'm taking our two children and going to my mother's for about two weeks. My husband is in Vietnam and will not be home for another six months. My question is, who should I leave my address with while I am visiting my mother, just in case the Army needs to get in touch with you while you are away. In addition to leaving your address with your closest neighbor, we recommend that you contact our office so we can have a record of your temporary address. Please call ACS: 545-4043 or 545-7813 before you go.

Pay-by-Check System Here Certified 'Trouble Free'

By Bill Hardin

Almost one year ago, Fort Benning's permanent party soldiers began receiving their pay by check instead of cash.

Recently a survey was made to determine the effectiveness of the transition. Results indicated no problems during the year. In addition, there have been a number of man hours saved.

At the time of the switch, 17,000 persons were scheduled to receive their pay by check. A year later, that figure has risen to about 25,000.

Approximately two-thirds of all soldiers here are now paid by check.

Students and others here for 12 weeks or less are still paid by cash. These total about 12,000 each month, and are included on 35 payrolls.

According to finance and accounting officer, Lt. Col. Robert E. Van Der Like, those paid by check include officer candidates, Ranger students and those attending the infantry officer basic courses and mortar platoon leader courses.

Prior to adoption of the pay-by-check system here, a great deal of planning was done and meetings were held with unit representatives to explain the situation to them. There were also meetings with the Columbus and Phenix City Merchants Association, and local bankers.

When the first payday under the new system arrived, there were no major problems. There have been none since.

A large number of Pay Officers were freed from the responsibilities of making a payroll pickup. The need for counting the money and the guards formerly used are now eliminated, as were the problems of men not being available to receive their pay in the pay line.

The Finance and Accounting Office required little additional equipment to make the change to payment by check. This too, figured in the cost reduction, which reflects a monthly savings of $40,000 to Fort Benning.

When the new system went into effect, 13 field grade officers were posted as observers to see that no problems arose. For the first time, the commissary and post exchange were authorized to cash government checks. Initially, a number of check cashing points were set up over the post on payday. After only one month it was no longer necessary to maintain these points, and they were discontinued.

Also discontinued was the need for pay officers to pick up the checks. Now all checks are either mailed to the unit for distribution by either the mail clerk or the company commander.

By 90 days after the new system had gone into effect, all of the checks were being mailed. Today, of the 25,000 checks which go to men here each month, 5,000 are mailed directly to a bank.

Three banks on main post, a Sand Hill branch bank and a mobile banking facility will cash the checks at no charge, as will many merchants in the area.

Fort Benning was among the first Army installation to switch to the pay-by-check method. In addition to the $40,000 monthly savings the new system offers protection to a soldier who might lose cash. Should a check be lost, payment can be stopped by the Finance and Accounting Office, and a new check can be issued.

John Glenn Appearance Is Sellout

A record 1,400 attendance is expected Tuesday for the Association of the United States Army meeting.

Retired Marine Col. John H. Glenn, one of America's first astronauts and the first man ever to orbit the earth, is the featured speaker.

The meeting will open in the Fort Benning Officers Club where refreshments and a buffet will be served from 6 to 7 p.m. The group will then move to Marshall Memorial Auditorium at Infantry Hall for the 8 p.m. program.

WACs Become Experts In Variety of Jobs

By Spec. 4 Lynette Herseim

Center Troop Command's WAC Company, numbering about 100 women, provides active mission support to 10 major commands at Fort Benning.

Although larger in scope today and more diverse in available skills, the WAC mission is basically a continuation of those jobs given to members of the Women's Auxiliary Army Corps in 1943 when the first complement of WAC was assigned to Fort Benning.

Their original purpose was to provide administrative and clerical help to the Infantry School, struggling to meet the manpower requirements for WWII. In 1944 six detachments were active at Fort Benning, allowing senior noncoms and officers to play a larger and more active role in Infantry School activities.

It was not until 1958 that the one remaining WAC Detachment, reorganized and designated the WAC Company, was assigned to USAIC Troop Command. In 1964 the company's location was changed from behind Main Post Theater to its present location at the old hospital area.

The Fort Benning WACs' mission, according to the company commander, Capt. Miriam Turner, is to support and strengthen Infantry Center activities and its attached and assigned units throughout the military reservation.

The diversity of the WAC mission at Benning is as wide as the units assigned to the Third Army post. Finance specialist, air traffic controllers, data processing personnel, photographers, information specialists, physical therapists and dental technicians perform the soldier's job.

These women, who by nature of their jobs are indicative of the technical jobs given WACs in recent years, are complemented by clerk-typists and administration specialists assigned to many post units.

The women soldiers play an important role in the function of Lawson Army Aviation Command. Air traffic control specialists, some of whom work in flight data, clearance and ground control sections, are responsible for keeping airfield departures and arrivals within reasonable time frames.

For this specialized field an intensive 18-week course in air traffic control is taught at Keesler Air Force Base, Miss. After six months training at Fort Benning, the WACs are given their junior ratings. During this six months period the WACs are given familiarization training in air traffic control procedures, including instrument landing systems (ILS) and ground control (GCA) approaches.

In many instances, the air traffic control specialists are given further training at Muscogee County Airport. Following this final stage of on-the-job training, the WACs are given rating tests and upon successful completion, become Senior Controllers. Lt. Col. James E. Miller, operations officer, administers the tests.

The utilization of WACs as air traffic controllers at Fort Benning is unique in itself. Fort Benning is one of the few military posts in the country that has not charged civilian personnel with this task.

The GCA and ILS sections at Lawson Field vector nearly 400 approaches per month into the LAAC military control zone. Assistance is given by these sections and other elements of LAAC to all military and civilian aircraft in the area.

A soldier's job is also in order for WACs at Martin Army Hospital.

The technical aspect of WAC duties is readily evident at MAH, where radio isotope technicians and neuropsychiatric specialists provide much needed help.

Radio isotope technicians receive six months' training at Balboa Naval Hospital in Provisional Corps' Gen. Rosson To Visit Next Week

By SFC Richard Kemp

Lt. Gen. William B. Rosson, J-5, Office of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who is scheduled to visit Fort Benning January 26-27, less than a year ago was commander of a ground force unique in modern military history.

Gen. Rosson on March 10, 1968, took command of the newly-designated Provisional Corps, Vietnam with headquarters located at Phu Bai, slightly more than 7 miles south of Hue.

At the time, the corps was establishing the supply base and logistics lines which would sustain it in two of the major operations of the war.

The major commands comprising the PCV included the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile), the 101st Airborne Division (with a brigade attached at a later date from the 82nd Airborne Division) and the 3rd Marine division.

This was the feature making the Corps unique, for not only did the presence of combat elements of two branches of the armed forces require a greater logistical effort but also it entailed operations under a joint staff at corps headquarters, in which both Army and Marine officers shared in the planning of operations within Quang Tri and Thua Thien Provinces, the corps' area of Operations.

With the conclusion for the battle for Hue on February 25, 1968, the decision was made to redesignate the U. S. Military Assistance Command Vietnam (Forward) headquarters at Phu Bai as Provisional Corps, Vietnam.

A Marine major general was named deputy to General Rosson when the change of command took place in March. Marine officers held key positions such as deputy chief of staff and in G-3 operations. Air Force communications specialists were attached to the corps headquarters, maintaining liaison and direct communications with the Air Force headquarters at Tan Son Nhut Air Base adjacent to Saigon.

By the end of March, PCV had completed its task of preparing to take the offensive against the North Vietnamese Army and the few Viet Cong units operating in the area at that time.

Early in April, Gen. Rosson launched Operations Pegasus, employing the mobility of the 1st Cav., elements of the 3rd Marine Divsion and the hard-hitting power of the 108th Artillery Group in heavy bomber attacks to the wake of a series of heavy bomber attacks to relieve the encircled Marine force at Khe Sanh.

Immediately after completion of Pegasus, the Army and Marine troops, fighting with Republic of Vietnamese Rangers and all under the command of Gen. Rosson, began Operation Delaware-Lamson 216 and entered the A Shau Valley, a major supply and communications route for the enemy forces.

It was the first time U. S. forces had been in the valley in force in more than three years and Gen. Rosson's command capitalized on the advantage of mobility despite weather factors that initially hampered ground operations.

Before Delaware was over, the combined force had captured or destroyed over 2,000 rifles of various types, a dozen 37mm anti-aircraft guns and 66mm gun, 67 trucks and countless other items of weapons and supply.

In addition, the operation cost the enemy 726 men killed, five POWs and seven returnees. PCV forces lost 138 men killed in action, 662 wounded and 20 helicopters.

General Rosson was personally present on the battlefields almost daily. He tirelessly devoted his energies to his command in a day that began at 6 a.m. or earlier and regularly trailed into the night. He seldom left his headquarters at Phu Bai before 8:30 p. m. each day. He was at ease with his men in all grades at all times and he was seen by them in situations ranging from battalion headquarters briefings to talking with the wounded as they were loaded aboard Air Force C-130s at the Hue-Phu Bai air strip for evacuation to other hospitals.

Q: What are the new higher interest rates on Savings Bonds and Freedom Shares?

A: Series E Bonds now will return 4.25 per cent interest, compounded semi-annually, when held to maturity of 7 years. Series H Bonds will return 4.35 per cent also, when held to maturity of 10 years. Freedom Shares now pay 5 per cent when held to maturity of 4½ years.

Q: Will my old E and H Bonds pay more interest, too?

A: Yes. Outstanding E and H Bonds will return comparably higher yields for the remaining time to next maturity. The increase will be realized in the final interest period when Bonds are held to next maturity.

Antarctica is the coldest and windiest continent on earth. The world record, 126.9 degrees below zero Fahrenheit, was set on Aug. 24, 1960 at the Soviet Union's Vostok station. The U.S. record, set at Plateau Station on July 20, 1968, is 123.1 degrees below. Winds of more than 100 miles an hour are not infrequent on the continent.

Bulldozer Operator Appears To Be Looking Down Gun's Barrel

Actually, 'Dozer Is Clearing Area for 175-mm Self-Propelled Gun

100-Bed Hospital Stands as Tribute To Allied Effort

BONG SON, Vietnam — (173rd Abn 10) — Amid sounds of construction, doctors worked with speed and precision to save the life of a Vietnamese villager.

Having completed the operation, a U. S. Army doctor and a New Zealand Air Force doctor walked from the small operating room and looked with satisfaction at the new 100-bed Free World hospital being erected for the village of Bong Son, 40 miles north of Qui Nhon.

A staff of New Zealand doctors and technicians operate the new hospital with continued medical assistance from the 173rd Airborne Brigade, when needed.

Capt. Roderick G. Johnson of Birmingham, Ala. and other brigade medical officers have been actively engaged in supporting the village hospital with technical assistance and medical supplies since the Brigade's arrival to Bong Son.

Lt. Harry Guy, medical officer of the New Zealand Air Force whom Johnson has assisted on many occasions remarked, "We try to operate as independently as possible, and we constantly train Vietnamese personnel who will eventually run the hospital."

Though current working facilities are limited, the New Zealand staff treats about thirty Vietnamese daily. When conditions become too crowded, patients are transfered to Brigade medical facilities at nearby LZ English. "Dustoff" in the Brigade's medical evacuation helicopters are used to evacuate patients to Qui Nhon for further medical care.

Nearly doubling the accommodations for patients, the new hospital will have an X-ray lab, operating room, kitchen facilities and the latest in medical equipment.

According to Johnson, the New Zealanders have performed intricate operations with limited equipment, but with the opening of the new hospital, much more can be done for the Bong Son villagers.

In addition to medical assistance, the 173rd has aided the hospital staff through it's Civic Action Program by supplying food, clothing and building materials.

Hour-Long Nightmare

AN KHE, Vietnam — Two minutes out of their helicopters, 12 Infantrymen found themselves surrounded and in deep trouble. The next hour was a nightmare.

The two reconnaissance teams from E Co., 20th Inf., 173rd Airborne Bde. had been infiltrated into a Viet Cong stronghold near Phan Thiet.

"We had gone about a hundred meters from our landing zone, when we stopped to make sure our infiltration was successful," said 1st Lt. Ken McGinty of Gonzalez, Tex. "It wasn't."

"When we stopped," continued McGinty, "we heard VC all around us, signalling to each other by clacking bamboo sticks together. We had no idea how many they had."

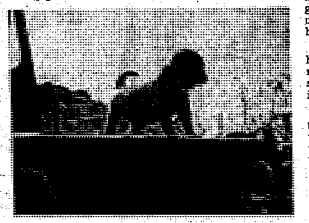
It was then that PFC Joseph W. White of Atlanta spotted three Viet Cong crouched in some thick brush.

Firing his M-16, White killed one instantly while the two others took off running.

Another VC, however, was running straight at the lieutenant from a different direction, firing his rifle from the hip. McGinty tried to return fire, but when his carbine jammed, Sgt. Barry G. Schatzer jumped in front of his CO and silenced the VC with a single rifle burst.

Radioing for immediate extraction, the team raced back toward the landing zone only to be met at the edge of the clearing by a hail of machinegun fire coming from two directions.

Luckily, the returning helicopter had two gunships as escorts, and as the chopper dipped into the clearing, the gunships blazed away at the enemy positions.



MASCOT . . . A ¼-ton Mack truck for the Army? No—Look again. It's "CQ", one of the mascots of the 11th Infantry Brigade, awaiting a ride to the PX.

McGinty, Schatzer and White also provided covering fire while the other nine men raced to the helicopter.

Reaching the helicopter, PFC Richard Hannerman, a radio-telephone operator from Manchester, N. H., suddenly realized the three remaining men had no communication, and he raced back across the landing zone.

As the second helicopter came in, McGinty delayed to again provide cover. Then, as he raced behind the second three, machine gun fire ripped the ground under his feet and knocked him down.

"I surely thought he was hit," said White, and as I ran back toward him, I saw two VC also heading in his direction.

"I guess it was sorta tense," continued White wryly. "I blasted away at the VC, and as one fell, the boss scrambled to his feet, fired his weapon and killed the other guy.

"We both got to the chopper okay," added White, "but we found one of the door gunners had been wounded, so the lieutenant took over his gun and we got out of there."

Solid Tips Given in Brickmaking

BONG SON, RVN (173rd Abn 10)-In the land of thatched and mud huts (rural areas of South Vietnam), brick construction is a relatively unknown trade.

Things are changing, however, and the Civil Affairs Office of the 173rd Airborne Bde. is currently working on a program to teach the Vietnamese along the central coast the art of making durable concrete bricks.

At Truong Luong Refugee Camp in Bong Son an experimental brick manufacturing location has been gun to turn out a much improved brick.

According to Maj. Ronald Lawrence, Brigade Civil Affairs Officer, "A six-man crew with two machines is now putting out 2,000 bricks a month, and what is most important they are bricks which will last.

"When the local people tried making bricks before, they made the mistake of drying them in the sun, which causes them to crumble more easily. Now, with the machines and the technique of shade-drying, they have a more durable product."

Eventually the brigade, in conjunction with CORDS (Civilian Operations Revolutionary Development Support), hopes to build nine schools with locally manufactured bricks in the Bong Son area.

Eventually the 2,700 refugees hope to return with their new skills to the nearby An Lao Valley, which they were forced to evacuate because of VC terrorism.

Old Sergeants Never Die...

SFC John E. Lambert has seen a lot of basic trainees in his years as a drill sergeant, but he isn't likely to forget a certain private he helped to train here in 1966.

That private is now Capt. Milton S. Mandell, commander of Co. 9, 8th Bn., 2nd Bde., ATC.

Lambert, who was a staff sergeant when Mandell was a private, is now senior drill sergeant in the training company.

When they were together before, it was in Co. A, 2nd Bn., 1st Bde. From there, Mandell went on to AIT at Fort Knox, Officer Candidate School, then Fort Knox and then Vietnam. There, as a member of the 11th Cav. Regt., Mandell met Lambert again. They were stationed only 15 miles apart.

It was a surprise to both when they met again here.

West Point Orientations Set For High School Students, EMs

Representatives of the U. S. Military Academy Preparatory School and the Military Academy at West Point will be at Fort Benning next week to talk with prospective applicants and persons seeking information on the Academy.

All enlisted men here meeting requirements for admission to the school and interested in application may attend two orientations offered Wednesday, said Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., post commander.

Area high school students and parents interested in application or information on the Military Academy are invited," said Col. Wiley B. Wisdom Jr., deputy post commander and coordinator for the West Point candidate program here.

"West Point—the Army Challenge," a movie orientation outlining the USMA program, will be shown at two locations followed by a question and answer period open to the audience. The orientations and discussion sessions will be held at 4 p. m. in Theater No. 1 and again at 7:30 p. m. in Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall.

At the evening program an additional film, "New Cadet Barracks," will be shown.

Capt. William A. Juergens of West Point and Cadet Capt. John P. Brundage will represent the Academy and Preparatory School, according to Capt. Philip E. Pons Jr., West Point candidate program advisory officer at Fort Benning. Brundage, member of the class of 1969, will conduct the discussion parts of each orientation.

Enlisted individuals in the Armed Forces eligible to attend the USMA Preparatory School normally enter the school at Fort Belvoir, Va., in August prior to entrance to West Point in July the next year.

Applications for the school are accepted year-round. Requirements for application are: citizen of the United States; between the ages of 17 and 22; unmarried and not previously married; high school graduate; medically qualified, and of good moral character.

"In view of the interest shown on Fort Benning, we are anticipating more applicants for the preparatory school this year than in recent years," Col. Wisdom added.

Additional information concerning the program is available through company commanders with pertinent facts presented in AR 350-55 and DA Pamphlet 350-3, the USMA Preparatory School Catalogue.

New Pathfinder Insignia Worn on Dress Uniform

Fort Benning's Pathfinders will soon wear a metallic badge to replace the former cloth badge.

The new badge is authorized for wear on Army green, white, tan, and blue uniforms. It is also authorized for wear on the shirt, when it is worn as an outer garment. The Army has also reversed a policy which was made last year that prevented simultaneous wear of both the Parachutist Badge and the Pathfinder Badge.

When the two badges are worn at the same time, on the left upper pocket flap, they are side by side, with the Parachutist Badge on the wearer's right.

Says Maj. Ramsey

Revolt 'Unlikely' In Latin America

By 1st Lt. Fred Vollrath

"Latin America will not suffer from Maoist type back-bush warfare in the foreseeable future, but a potential for it exists," Maj. Russell W. Ramsey, a recognized expert on Latin American affairs, told the Infantry Officer's Advanced Course last week.

According to Ramsey many conditions conducive to violent revolution exist but complex cultural, political and economic factors make it necessary to judge each situation independently.

"The vast under populated jungle and mountain regions of Latin America provide almost limitless capacity to conceal," said Ramsey. "They can easily swallow huge armies trying to hunt down insurgents."

He listed urbanization leading to the breakdown of peasant societies, isolated rural pockets of people never brought into the mainstream of the country's life, and a history of violence as contributing conditions in violent revolution.

While there are many factors favoring Maoist revolution, there are many considerations that also weigh against it, said Ramsey.

"Progressive reform-minded political parties, the Catholic Church, the peasants traditional conservatism, the Indian mistrust of white liberal intellectuals, and in many countries and enlightened military weigh against the success of back-bush warfare," he said.

He pointed to the recent failure of Communist guerrillas in Bolivia, led by Che Gueverra, as an example.

Not every act of violence in Latin American can be attributed to communists, according to Ramsey. In many cases it is simple banditry completely unrelated to ideological goals.

Only a national leader with a personal mystic and a genuine national grievance which no one is taking steps to correct can win a guerrilla war and "I don't think such conditions exist now," concluded Ramsey.

Ramsey graduated from West Point in 1937. He studied at Florida State University from 1960-62, majoring in Spanish, Spanish literature and history. In 1963 he obtained his Master of Arts in history at the University of Southern Mississippi.

He is currently an assistant professor of Military Science at the University of Florida where he is a candidate for his doctors degree in Latin American history.

He is a graduate of the Airborne and Ranger Courses at Fort Benning, and has served as a commander with the 101st Airborne Division (airmobile) and the 1st Air Cavalry (airmobile) in Vietnam, and has instructed in School of the Americas in Panama.

BACK AGAIN . . . Maj. Gen. Karl W. Gustafson, Provost Marshal General, was welcomed here for the third time since his appointment as PMG in September of 1968. The purpose of the General's visit was to get acquainted with the commanders and law enforcement agencies on post.

First Infantry Awarded Cross By Vietnamese

Soldiers who served with the First Division in Vietnam between July 12, 1965 and Oct. 16, 1968, are eligible to wear the Vietnamese Gallantry Cross with Palm, Col. E. C. Acuff, deputy assistant commandant of The Infantry School, noted this week.

He added that many officers and enlisted men at Fort Benning are eligible for the citation for having served during the indicated period.

The citation, South Vietnam's highest unit award for valor, was presented to the division in ceremonies held at Di An. Division Commander, Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott, accepted the citation, presented by Lt. Gen. Co Cao Tri, commanding general of the Vietnamese III Corp Tactical Zone.

The award is the first to be received in Vietnam by the entire Division although many of its units have been given awards, including a U.S. Presidential Unit Citation. The citation noted the Division's activities in Operations Atleboro, Lam Son, Junction City, Shenandoah II and Toan Thang.

'Guerrillas' Test Raw Rangers

By Spec. 4 Dennis Wootan

While most soldiers will concede the hardships and rigors of undergoing Ranger training, few persons realize the importance and difficulty of supporting the gruelling training leading to the coveted Ranger tab.

For a Ranger company operating here or in one of the two distant training points at Eglin AFB, Fla., and Dahlonega in North Georgia, one of the primary objects is to learn to operate effectively against an enemy in the field.

The counter-guerrilla training phase which is taught at Eglin AFB is important in light of current U. S. military requirements in Southeast Asia.

Consequently it is one of the most gruelling phases of the training undergone by Ranger aspirants, and one of the most difficult for the aggressor troops.

As the Ranger trainees slog through marshlands and swamps, engaging in riverborne operations and coordinating beach landings with naval coasting vessels, they search for and engage the troops of the green-shirted guerrilla forces.

These forces, who "die" or fade away, engage the Rangers in open firefight, or ambush the unwary student are the support troops provided by the 197th Inf. Bde.

The Kelley Hill-based brigade, largest in the U. S. Army, has three infantry battalions, the 1st Bn., 29th Inf., the 1st Bn. (Mech), 58th Inf., and the 5th Bn., 31st Inf., which share the onerous task of providing opposition in the field to Rangers, and here at Fort Benning to officer and NCO candidates.

Composed mostly of Vietnam returnees, the support troops provide an opposition carefully contrived to train now and save lives later during actual combat.

Often chuckling to themselves about the relative inexperience of the Ranger troops who have been in the field for weeks, the Infantrymen assigned to the acting role of guerrilla soldier realize that what they are doing is a part of what makes the U. S. soldier one of the world's finest.

Currently providing troops for the counter-guerrilla phase is 1st Bn., 29th Inf. The company and its assignees have been cited for excellence of the commitments performed during the training of Ranger 7, currently at Eglin AFB.

Depositors Must Close Accounts in 90 Days

U. S. Army finance officers have pointed out certain details that should be known by all participants in the Uniformed Services Savings Deposit Program.

The savings program, which is open to military personnel on active duty overseas, pays interest at the rate of 10 per cent a year, compounded quarterly. Accounts must be closed within 90 days after servicemen return from overseas.

Department of the Army Message 892393 states that depositors should understand the following items:

— Requests for accelerated repayment of deposits will affect the accrued interest of an account, depending on when and where the request is submitted.

— Cash deposits should not be made subsequent to requests for accelerated repayment.

— No interest will be paid after the expiration of 90 days from the date of return to the United States or its possessions.

— If the 90 day period expires on any day other than the last day of a month, interest is computed only through the last day of the preceding month. In instances where repayment is for less than the 90-day period, personnel received interest for a full month in which repayment is made. (ANF).

3 Civil Service Positions Open

Applications for metal workmen, electronic equipment repairmen, and policemen are now being accepted by the board of U. S. Civil Service Examiners.

Starting salaries for these positions are GS-3, GS-4, GS-5. Additional information and application forms may be obtained from Room 322, Main Post Office Building, Columbus.

Lieutenant Wins Medal of Honor

WASHINGTON (ANF) — A U. S. Army infantry platoon leader has been awarded the Medal of Honor posthumously for giving his life to shield two wounded soldiers from an exploding grenade.

The medal recognized the heroism of 1st Lt. Stephen E. Karopczyc, who became the 41st U. S. Army member to receive the nation's highest combat ward for service in Vietnam.

Secretary of the Army Stanley R. Resor presented the award to Karopczyc's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Karopczyc of Bethpage, N. Y., in a ceremony at the Pentagon.

Karopczyc was leading the Third Platoon, A Company, 2nd Battalion, 35th Infantry, 25th Infantry Division, during a flanking maneuver against an enemy force on March 12, 1967.

Although severely wounded, he directed the operations of his platoon during several hours of heavy fighting. When a grenade was hurled close to Karopczyc and two other wounded men, the officer left his protected position to cover the grenade with a steel helmet and protect the other men.

The grenade exploded, driving fragments into the lieutenant's legs, but his action prevented further injury to the other men. He succumbed to his multiple wounds two hours later.

At the Medal of Honor ceremony, Secretary Resor said, "The hard fighting in Vietnam has taught us again the wonderful qualities of the young American soldier — his sheer courage, his deep dedication to his fellow men and his high sense of duty."

How To Save Tax on Bond Earnings

(Editor's Note: This is the second article of an Army News Features series in which the Internal Revenue Service answers some of the most frequently asked questions on federal income tax matters.)

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Question: I'm buying U. S. savings bonds to help pay for my son's education. How should I go about this so I don't have to pay tax on the interest?

Answer from the Internal Revenue Service: The interest earned on a savings bond should be reported by the owner of the bond. If you purchase the bonds in your child's name as owner, then any tax liability will be his. Unless the interest earned on the bonds and his other income amounts to $600 or more, no return need be filed by him.

If you have your child elect to report the bond interest each year rather than wait until the year they are cashed in, then your child should file a return showing this bond interest the first year you start the plan. No further return will be required until the child has $600 or more income a year. Keep a copy of this first return to show that the interest has been reported on a yearly basis.

This transaction is a gift to your son. If you give more than $3,000 to him during the year, you may be liable for federal gift tax return.

Q: I'm expecting a refund but don't have one of the envelopes you've supposed to use to mail the return. What should I do?

A: Mail your return to the Internal Revenue Service center for your area. You can obtain the exact address by checking the 1040 instructions or by calling the local Internal Revenue office.

Q: Are membership fees in a charitable organization like the YMCA deductible as a contribution?

A: No, dues, membership fees and assessments paid to a charitable organization are not deductible if you receive benefits and privileges in return. However, you may deduct any gift you make to a qualified organization.

Light Armor Test Shows Versatility

FORT BELVOIR, Va. (ANF) — During two months of field testing in the United States, the Army has been evaluating the new concept of a "Light Armor Battalion" — a rugged, fast-moving organization that can carry heavy firepower into a wide variety of combat situations.

The new battalion, designed by the U. S. Army Combat Developments Command (CDC) at Fort Belvoir, Va., is organized with the M-551 General Sheridan armored reconnaissance and airborne assault vehicle.

In tests at Fort Riley, Kan., and Fort Stewart, Ga., CDC researchers have been seeking the soldier's views on the Sheridan vehicle and the doctrine and organization of the new battalion.

The light armor battalion concept is based on the interdependence of the Sheridan and the battalion's doctrine and organization. It is expected to be a system fully exploiting the relatively lightweight 16.5-ton Sheridan's water-crossing, fire-power, assault and air-transportable capabilities.

When the final blueprint for the battalion is approved, the new organization is expected to add significantly to the strategic power of airborne and airmobile units. To get data that would help shape the final specifications for the battalion, CDC turned to the men in the field.

In day and night platoon exercises on a 6,000-meter course at Fort Riley, Sheridan crews have compiled information on factors such as time needed to adjust fire, loading, sensing rounds and maintaining the M-551.

The platoon exercises included firing at stationary and moving targets with conventional ammunition as well as the Shillelagh guided missile from the Sheridan's 152mm tube. Shillelagh is a fully guided anti-tank missile system mounted as standard equipment on the M-551.

The first light armor battalion with the M-551 is the 1st Battalion (Light), 68d Armor, attached to the 24th Infantry Division. It is the test unit for the CDC evaluation program.

A company of the test battalion was recently airlifted from Fort Riley to Fort Stewart with all its equipment — including the Sheridan — to demonstrate the versatility of the M-551.

The CDC troop tests also are gathering information on the Sheridan's various night vision devices, the relatively new combustible cartridge that eliminates empty shell casings and a bore-scavenging system that uses a compressed air blast to flush residue from the firing tube.

Safety Officials Warn Of Wheel, Axle Dangers

Small foreign cars with reversed or inverted wheels — or any car with the front or rear end lifted in excess of normal standards — may be denied post operating privileges, according to an announcement from the Provost Marshal's office.

"Cars with these modifications are a safety hazard," explained James Blount, the deputy post safety director, "The manufacturer indicates the reversing or inverting of the wheels causes excess strain on the axle and may result in its breaking."

Studies by the National Safety Agency, National Safety Council, and Automobile Manufacturers Association show that lifting or jacking up a car changes the center of gravity. This increases the possibility of turning over when making a sharp turn.

The new requirements will go into effect immediately.

Beggar's Banquet Is 'Stone' Gas

By Spec.4 Pete Lis

The Rolling Stones have made their greatest comeback. From the disasterious THEIR SATANIC MAJESTIC REQUEST, where they tried to capitalize on the being progressive and different, they have emerged as the Stones we all know and love in Beggar's Banquet, their latest album for London.

The Rolling Stones have gone through quite a few changes since they first appeared as part of the "British Invasion" (whatever that was). Always being reborn, but still looking like the original copy, the Stones are still changing and will send you through some changes when you drop the needle into the groove.

I remember seeing them in Hartford, Conn. in the Spring of 1966. The concert was a fairly big one, held in a football stadium which seated over 10,000 people. A rather attractive bill preceded the Stones appearance, so the audience (mostly teeny boppers) was nicely psyched for the final gig. The local DJ came out, muttered something about thanking everyone for attending and then introduced the Stones.

The group, minus Mick Jagger, was already on stage, playing the opening bar of "19th Nervous Breakdown." Then Jagger came walking out, casually, stalking like the head rooster in the barnyard.

Mick appreciates a stone groove audience as much as any performer, and he was into his thing like it would never end. Just before the finale, Mick thanked everyone for coming and hoped everyone was having a good ride. Then they went into "Satisfaction". By this time, almost the entire audience was standing on their chairs.

Jagger made the mike jump, as he contorted, whirled and twisted. Then came the kids, about 3,000 strong.

The police lines around the stage were sagging unmercifully. The Stones were told to leave the stage, but Jagger was in such a frenzy, he kept on singing. Brian Jones grabbed Mick by the arms, and dragged him off the stage, but not before Jagger took the mike, which he was still clutching, and threw it into the police lines. The Stones then barely sped away to the airport and on to another gig.

"Street Fighting Man", the first cut on the second side, is the whole key to this new album. It's basic, violent, an excellent rock number. This is what the Rolling Stones are all about. As I mentioned earlier, BEGGAR'S BANQUET is the return of the Stones as we know them. They have broken out of the "psychedelic" bag, and into their rock 'em, sock 'em thing. They are totally aware of what's going on in the world today, and express their feelings in "Jigsaw Puzzle", which goes a good five minutes. Their tribute to the "other half" in "Salt of the Earth", a theme in which they have been dominate since their beginning.

"Sympathy for the Devil" seems to round out the best of the lot. Lyrically, it is a striking picture of a world gone mad. Putting down the people on top, and all this coming from a man of wealth and taste. Sounds like what a lot of people would like to become.

BEGGAR'S BANQUET ought to convince us all that the Stones are right.

Minsky's: Good Comedy But Too Many Loose Ends

By PFC R. L. Johnson

The film "The Night They Raided Minsky's", is a campy comedy set in the prohibition days of New York. It tells the story of the night at Minsky's Burlesque Theatre when the first striptease accidentally got started.

A problem arises in the theatre when a man from the New York Social Reform League decides that many of the burlesque acts are obscene. He attends every performance, jotting down a note book all the "lewd" actions he sees on stage. With these notes, he can describe all the juicy parts to the police. Then a young girl who wants to be a dancer (Britt Eckland) arrives.

She has run away from her puritan home town. Her experience consists of one dance; a biblical interpretation of Eve in the Garden of Eden. It is not exactly the sort of thing that is popular at the burlesque theatre.

But her dance gives an idea to the leading man in the show, Jason Robards. He knows that the police are planning a raid. Why not arrange to let them see her dance, which will convince them that the show was above-board?

It was a great plan, but as her performance progresses the police get a better reason to raid than the Social Reform League ever dreamt of, and the era of the striptease begins.

The problem with the movie is that it tries to cover too many secondary plots. Although the situations and people are funny, none of them are complete. Even at the end of the show, there is no climax, and the viewer does not clearly understand the consequences of what has happened. None of the questions the story presents are answered. It is like watching a murder mystery in which the murderer is never found.

Part of this is the fault of the acting and directing rather than the script itself. While Jason Robards is a capable actor, he is cold in a role which requires great changes in feeling to put across the story. This is also true of Britt Eckland. There is no upheaval in her personality as she changes from puritan to stripper. The audience is not sure how she feels about the whole thing when she is finished.

Much of the film shows life in those days, when the time could have been put to better use clarifying and expanding the plot. Photography in scenes of New York life is original and interesting however. Many of them begin in the jerky black and white of the old cinema, and then change into smooth modern technicolor part way through.

"The Night They Raided Minsky's" fails to combine a strong story with the history of the period during which the action occurs, but it does humorously expose the exciting world of burlesque.

Synopsis

THE TIGER MAKES OUT — A zany comedy which stars Eli Wallach as a frustrated Greenwich Village girlwatcher who decides to become a "tiger" and Anne Jackson as a suburban housewife who is abducted by Wallach . . . she likes the idea!!

PETULIA — Academy award winner Julie Christie stars in this interesting tricked-out romance and George C. Scott plays a recently divorced surgeon whom she wins over with her charming ways. She'll play with you a little at first. But that's just her style — that's how she comes on. When she gets down to business, lights will go on where you never even thought there were bulbs. She's awfully good at what she does.

THE SPLIT — Rob the Los Angeles Coliseum of half-a-million dollars during a sellout football game? It sounds impossible! But wait until you see the spine-tingling drama. Jim Brown and Julie Harris are the masterminds of the professional criminals recruited to pull off the daring theft.

EVE — An adventure filled saga set in the jungle countries of the upper Amazon. Greed, intrigue, treasure and the. Amazonian savages are the ingredients for this action-thriller.

THE SERGEANT starring Academy award winner Rod Steiger, is both a searing and sensitive drama. It involves a career serviceman troubled with loneliness and a need to dominate and be in charge. His frustrated need to possess one particular man (John Phillip Law) causes him to become derelict in line of duty with disastrous results.

Contract Bridge

By Spec 4 Paul Mangione

THE BLACK WOOD CONVENTION

Bidding for Slam.

Of the innumerable systems bridge players use to arrive at a slam contract, the Blackwood Convention is probably the most well known and consequently the most maligned. At first it appears to be very simple in construction but closer surveillance discloses a need for fine judgment in order to achieve the maximum effectiveness of the convention. It must be remembered that the Blackwood is a very difficult maneuver to execute. It requires a high degree of communication between partners for it to work well. The words of the inventor sum it up very well.

"We do not pretend that the Blackwood Convention will solve all your slam problems, because there are certain types of hands that cannot be covered by Blackwood.

"In some deals both the Blackwood Convention and cue bidding are impossible, because an exchange of information between partners is either unnecessary or unattainable. When that happens, a player must use his own initiative and jump directly into a slam." — Easley Blackwood

When the bidding indicates that a slam is possible and a suit has not been determined the Blackwood can be used by first, finding a suit and then either player bids four No Trump. It must be understood emphatically that this in no way means that a No Trump contract is desired. By this time the bidder must be fairly sure of 33 point holding with partner and eleven tricks. The convention is then made. The responses to four No. are as follows:

With no Aces bid five clubs.

With one Ace bid five diamonds.

With two Aces bid five hearts.

With three Aces bid five spades.

With four Aces bid five clubs.

Once the Ace holdings are established then bidder asks for kings by bidding five No Trump. Do not try, however, if the partnership doesn't hold all four tops.

For example, the opener initiates the convention by bidding four no trump. Partner responds by bidding five hearts. Opener bids five No trump and in doing so says "4" know you hold two aces and by asking for kings I declare a two ace holding also." The reporter shows his kings the same way he declared his aces.

A bid of four No Trump doesn't always mean a desire to implement Blackwood. If a suit has not been agreed on or the bid is a jump shift from a one or two no open then it is simply an assist bid and bears no relation to the convention.

LT. COL. TATUM
Troop Sponsor

'Airborne' Scouts Receive Charter From Col. Tatum

There is no such thing as an Airborne Boy Scout Unit, but Ft. Benning Explorer Post 37 comes as close as any. The post is sponsored by the 4th Stu. Bn., TSB, the Army's Airborne Training battalion.

The 4th Bn. began to sponsor the post a year ago, and since then has contributed extensively to its success. A landmark of sorts occurred last Monday night when Lt. Col. Clifton Tatum, commanding officer of the battalion was presented with the charter authorizing the operation of the post for 1969. He reciprocated by presenting the post with a flag bearing its name and colors.

The charter is issued by the National Council each year to scouting posts throughout the country. Its issuance is contingent upon each post's having a reputable sponsor who will underwrite the post's activities.

The 4th Bn., as sponsor of Post 37, provides transportation, food, water, and tents for the Post's outings. Last year the Explorers took a camping trip to the mountains around Dahlonega and another to the Okefenokee Swamp, both of which were outfitted by the battalion.

Bridge Classes Offered Weekly At Service Club

Bridge lessons for beginners are held every Friday evening at the Main Post Service Club. Everyone is welcome, men and women, enlisted, officers and civilians.

After a period of instruction, tables will be set up and as many foursomes as possible will play. Tournaments are planned for the future.

Advanced players are also urged to attend. Their services would be invaluable in assisting the instructors with the novice players.

Paul Mangione, an editor with the BAYONET, and Charles Gruttman, a legal assistance advisor will be the instructors. The bridge classes will begin at 7 p. m. and continue until 9:30 p. m.

There are at least two active volcanoes on the continent of Antarctica: Mt. Erebus on Ross Island which towers more than 12,400 feet above the United States' McMurdo Station and Mt. Melbourne on the coast of Victoria Land.

AC CORNER

JUDO

Registration is now open for 13-19 year olds who wish to learn Judo. The first class is scheduled to start Jan. 25 at 11:30 at the Youth Activities Gym, Bldg. 358. Classes will be held twice weekly - Monday, 6:30 p. m. and Saturday, 11:30 a. m. Register at Bldg 358 as soon as possible.

The Pool Room will be open only for those teens who will participate in the Pool Tournament scheduled for Feb. 16 with Ft. Rucker. Teenagers interested in going to the Warner Robbins Teen Dance are asked to sign up as soon as possible in Mrs. Fraker's Office.

COMPUTER CORNER ON SPORTS

By Bud Goode

Pitcher Don Drysdale is screaming that the new baseball rules will revolutionize the game. He's right. Shrinking the strike zone from shoulder to armpit and lowering the pitcher's mound to a standard ten inches will help the batters, giving them another 10% of the game.

Ten percent isn't a revolution, you say? It is in baseball, for any technical change which helps batting automatically hurts pitching, and vice versa.

In 1963, when the strike zone was enlarged, the game was revolutionized overnight. Not much was printed about this sudden change. But we poured the pertinent statistics into our Computer Communications, Inc. sports analyzer to answer the question, "Which is more important—batting or pitching?" and to show how the increased strike zone changed the game:

	1960-62	1963	1968	1969 Estimated
BATTING	55%	45%	30%	40%
PITCHING	80%	40%	55%	45%

For the ten year period from 1950 to 1960, batting was the most important half of the game, accounting for 55% of the average team's position in the won/lost column at season's end, and pitching accounted for only 30%, with fielding making up the difference (15%).

But in the early 60's, the size of the strike zone was increased, giving the pitchers a bigger target, and an added 10% of the game. For the next five years, through last season, the pitchers have increased their control of the game. Why? Several reasons: first, the greater birthrate of the 40's gave baseball 10% more pitchers to choose from each years; second, the kids were bigger, stronger and faster because of protein rich-and all around better diets; and third, they had more education, and they were coming into the game with more pitches.

Last year pitching was was almost twice as important at batting (55% vs 30%); the new rules should add 10% to the batters, making the game even again.

Military Film Contest Opens

FORT MCPHERSON, Ga. — The Department of Defense, in association with the National Press Photographers Association and the University of Oklahoma, is sponsoring the first annual military newsfilm competition.

The contest is open to active duty uniformed members of the Armed Forces including full-time, extended active duty Reservists and National Guardsmen who are assigned duties as motion picture photographers. Military members who leave the service during the contest may take part in the competition, but only footage that is shot while they were on active duty is eligible for consideration. Civilian government employees are not eligible to compete.

The contest period runs through Dec. 31, 1969. Film entries should be marked "Defense Newsfilm Contest" and submitted through normal military channels to the Military Service Chief of Information, ATTN: Audio-Visual Officer, for routing to OASD-PA.

22 YACs Join Driver Education

By Sharee Eppinger

Twenty-two members of the Youth Activity Club from 15 to 19 have signed up for the 32 hour Driver Education course which began on Tuesday. Thirty hours are spent in classroom instruction and 6 behind the wheel of a car supplied by a local automobile dealer.

"The course is recognized by the state of Georgia and is in line with the state driver requirements," said Mrs. Connie P. Kinsey, a YAC spokesman.

The class is conducted by Max Wilson, a state certified instructor, on Tuesday and Thursdays from 6 p. m. to 8 p. m. in Bldg. 358. At the completion of the course a student is prepared for the state driving test.

Two insurance companies give reduced rates for successful completion. Since June of 1968 75 members of YAC have graduated from the course and received their certificate.

During the summer the course is conducted five days a week, two hours a day.

THE FORUM

By Spec. 4 Rick Yeiser

Controversy seems to characterize the times. Strikes, counter-strikes, and demonstrations have become as everyday as traffic congestion and air pollution. Sports, once one of the few facets of American life that seemed to remain relatively unshrouded by upheaval, has suddenly found itself thrust into the mainstream. It is besieged by as many sticky problems as anything else.

The owner-player head-butting that formerly produced an occasional holdout has now ballooned into player strikes that threaten the existence of certain sports. Baseball in particular has taken a beating.

That the game itself was in trouble became apparent this past season when excitement and baseball parted ways. Games dragged on and on, yet fewer runs were scored and fewer men got on base than ever before. Attendance lagged and the result was national speculation about the future of the game.

This speculation caused a few owners to push the panic button, and at the yearly meeting in San Francisco some very positive efforts were made to put some excitement back into the game. Bill Eckert, who was a nice guy, but knew little about the game, was unceremoniously dumped from his post as commissioner.

Just when it appeared that progress was being made, the owner-player dispute exploded, and it now looks as if the game is in even deeper trouble. It all started when the owners, as if to prove that they were really as stodgy and conservative as everyone thought, passed the "Lonborg Law." The law stated that a player who injured himself in a non-baseball related activity would not be paid for time missed, and would not be eligible for compensation.

Right or wrong, the players said that they would refuse to recognize the law and would not play until it was repealed. The pension dispute followed on the heels of the "Lonborg Law." Players are demanding a sizeable increase in their pension plan; the owners refuse, saying the demands are exorbitant. The players, through their association headed by Marvin Miller, a lawyer, say they will strike until their demands are met, and to prove their point have refused to sign their 1969 contracts. The owners are yelling coercion, and some have even gone so far as to say they don't care if the 1969 season starts or not.

Who's right and who's wrong? The answer, of course, is that both parties are to blame. The pension plan needs improving, to be sure, but the player's demands are unrealistic; the owners are not blessed with the Midas touch. On the other hand, they have reaffirmed our beliefs that they are less concerned with the game than their pocketbooks, which are by no means empty.

In the end, public opinion will probably settle the matter, and this is where the players will win out. America has traditionally sided with the underdog, with the exploited. The players are by no means exploited, but their pension plan does need improving. That they are shooting for the stars to reach the moon tends to be forgotten because they are sports heros, and a sports hero is America's super-celebrity.

The owners seem to be an indecisive old bunch of blithering idiots. They manged to fire the commissioner, but have taken months to hire another, and haven't even gotten to first base. The petty squabbles of the owners have become public; the resulting impression is that there are six or seven who love the game and want to do as much as possible for it; the rest regard their franchise as their own personal toy. The Dan Reeves-George Allen affair did nothing to endear the sports owner to the public either.

Thus, it seems to me that the pressure the public will bring to bear will be directed at the owners, not the players. The closer we come to a summer without baseball, the louder the shouting will be. Let us hope that it does not echo from the walls of an empty stadium.

Halfback Breaks Through

Former Rough Rider Completes Basic Training

A former flankerback with the Ottawa Rough Riders completes basic training today with Co. D, 1st Bn, 1st Bde.

"Football has taught me how to accept both defeat and victory — this I have found most important in applying to everyday life situations," says Pvt. Irvin M. Mallory.

Mallory, who played with the Rough Riders last season until called to active duty November 11, has received contract offers from seven other professional teams.

The Baltimore Colts, Atlanta Falcons, Detroit Lions and Dallas Cowboys of the National Football League and the Kansas City Chiefs, San Diego Chargers and Cincinnati Bengals of the American Football League have sent him applications.

Before signing with the Rough Riders, Mallory starred at Virginia Union University, Richmond, as a defensive cornerback. In 1966 he made the All Central Commonwealth Conference Team as a defensive cornerback. He was named to the All-Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association Team as a flankerback in 1967.

Mallory, clocked at 9.6 in the 100-yard dash in college, said his biggest thrill came Thanksgiving Day 1967 when he ran for four touchdowns against Haumpton Institute.

Today's game "takes more than size, speed and agility to play. It also requires a vast knowledge of the varied plays, formations and what to expect from the opposition," Mallory says.

A Co. Stays Unbeaten

By Spec. 4 Ken Sturzenacker

Company A, 1st Bn., put on its best performance of the year in running its record to 4-0 and keeping a share of the Main Post league basketball leadership Monday at Briant Wells Field House. The Alphas defeated C Co., 52-38.

Dennis Best had 16 points as three members of the winning team had men in double figures. Ralph Willard had 12 and Pat Huetten 14 for the easy victory, with Co. A pulling away from a 26-20 halftime lead.

Billie Williams got 10 of his 14 points in the second half for Co. C, but got little scoring support from the rest of his team. Co. C, now 4-2, holds third in the league.

The second game proved to be more of a contest as Company B, 1st Bn., hung onto its slim 20-18 halftime lead to defeat Company A, 818th Engineer Battalion, 39-36.

Bobby Reed of Company B topped all scorers for the night with 17. He got strong support from Harold Miller, who scored six of his 10 points in the second half.

Gary Miller of the 818th controlled the ball during the closing moments of the game, scoring all five of his second half points on consecutive shots from the foul line. He finished the evening with seven, behind Bill Rowe's nine and Otis Martin's eight.

Company A's record now stands at 3-3. Company B pulled away from the cellar by bringing its record to 2-3.

In games last Thursday, Bobby Reed's 18 points were not enough to keep Co. B from losing to CTC's Hq. Co., 36-30.

Gary Hostetter's 10 points helped the winners protect their 16-10 halftime lead for the victory. Jim Malone scored eight, and Larry DeGroot and Ralph Tapp each contributed six points for the win.

The 524th Personnel Service Co. maintained its winning habit and ran its record to 4-0 by easily defeating Co. A, 818th Engineer Bn., 44-34.

The victory was a costly one, however, as Dave Atkinson, the team's high scorer so far this season with a 20 point average, broke his leg in the first quarter after scoring four points.

Easone Smith took charge for the 524th, getting all 12 of his points from the floor. His performance was backed by Phil Hickman and Billy

HOSPITAL PATIENT WILLIE MCDONALD RECEIVES AUTOGRAPHS
Braves' Sonny Jackson, Run Reed Visited Wards

Atlanta Baseball Stars Make Big Hit With Hospital Patients

Five members of the Atlanta Braves baseball team visited Martin Army Hospital on Thursday of last week.

The group included pitchers Pat Jarvis and Ron Reed, shortstop, Sonny Jackson and Bob Uecker, former catcher and now head of the Braves' speakers' bureau. Other members of the baseball staff who visited the hospital were Dave Pursley, team trainer, and Milo Hamilton, play-by-play announcer.

The group visited patients at the hospital as part of their annual preseason goodwill tour, in which they will visit hospitals, retarded children's homes and civic organizations in 17 cities throughout four states.

The Braves were greeted by Col. Martin A. Pfotenhauer, commanding officer of the hospital, and Sgt. Maj. Brinley V. Gainer.

Afterwards, the players had lunch in the hospital's enlisted men's mess hall where they talked about sports with the patients. They then toured the hospital wards and chatted with the soldiers. Each patient received an autographed picture of the player with whom he was speaking.

The Braves have been making the "caravan" tour since 1956, when the club moved from Milwaukee to Atlanta. Some of the cities included on the tour are Rome, Ga., Macon, Ga., Charlotte, N. C., Nashville, Tenn., and Chattanooga, Tenn.

The Braves will hold an exhibition game here with their Class AAA club, the Richmond Braves, on April 4. The game will be played at Golden Park, which is located next to the Municipal Auditorium.

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

By Bill Kloeb

The Archery Council of the Rod and Gun Club held its annual election of officers at sportsmans lodge.

New officiers are Bill Guinn (689-6211), president, Ted Brown (322-4222) vice president and Jerry Brown (322-4222) secretary.

According to Guinn, 1969 is going to be a big year for archery at Fort Benning. In June the club will sponsor the Georgia State Archery Tournament. Approximately 250 archers are expected to enter this tournament and about the same number are expected to enter the Pre-State tournament to be held in May for range familiarization.

Guinn said the two 14 target field ranges will be expanded to four 14 target ranges for the tournament.

Limited membership in the Rod and Gun Club is available to local civilian personnel who are not qualified to be regular members. Limited membership entitles the individual to use the skeet, trap and archery ranges as well as the Club house facilities. It does not entitle the individual to hunt or fish on the reservation. Dues are $8 annually. Applications for membership may be made at Rod and Gun Club Headquarters (Bldg. 4950) located on First Division Road approximately half a mile south of Highway 27.

Final count of deer harvested on the reservation during 1968-69 season was 303. This compares favorably with numbers harvested during preceding years. The 1965-66 total for 189, during the 1966-67 season it was 181 and during the 1967-68 season were taken.

Hunters and fishermen are reminded that sportsmen planning to hunt or fish on the reservation are required to register in person at the Provost Marshal Office, Range Control Office or the Rod and Gun Club Headquarters prior to entering the hunting or fishing area. It is also the responsibility of each hunter or fisherman to familiarize himself with the range clearance map and keep within the confines of the areas designated as open for that day.

Clearance for fishing is not required for King's Pond, Weem's Pond, Clear Creek Pond, Hedley's Pond, Kirk's Pond, Upatoi Creek from Old Cusseta Road to the Chattahoochee River, the Alabama area to include Uchee Creek and the Chattahoochee shoreline.

Fishing, like football, requires a bit of strategy and a good job of "digging teaming" will work just as well on a bass as it does on a bruising fullback.

Since many fishing hours are consumed in finding the right combination of lure and fishing depth on a particular day, the use of teamwork is highly recommended.

Before casting off, spend a few minutes in a skull-session with your partner. Discuss the "playing field"—its rocky points, weed beds, dropoff, etc. Figure what effect the weather is likely to have on the fish.

As the plan of attack is worked out, each man is given specific assignments. In a boat, it's usually a case of "you hit 'em high and I'll hit 'em low". With two men, both the shallow and middle or middle and lower depths can be tested simultaneously. The inshore angler works the shallower level and the offshore rod probes deeper, an efficient time-saving arrangement.

When fish are known to be in a certain spot, different combinations of lures should be tried—floaters and sinkers, spoons and plugs. . .even various colors of the same lure.

"Ganging up" in this manner may often cut experimenting time in half. The only rule is that two different approaches should be used at the same time. So the next time out, instead of copying your partner's lure, try something different.

Ward, who both added eight for the winners.

William Rowe was high scorer with eight for the losers. Co. A was only behind by four at the half, 20-16, but could not recover.

The 988th MP Co. had to fight off a strong second half by Co. B, 818th Engr. Bn., for its 31-28 win.

The 988th led 16-10 at the half, largely on the strength of the play of Travis Ragsdale. Ragsdale finished the game with 13 points, and received strong support from John Bridgewater's seven points.

Lewis Reese led the losers with eight points, backed up by Charlie Hawkins, Eddie Williams and Terry McArdle with six each.

Main Post League action continues Monday at 6 p.m.

Women Bowlers Win Recognition

Five Fort Benning women have received recognition for their bowling feats from the Women's International Bowling Congress.

Mrs. Nancy Mullins, wife of retired Navy lieutenant Robert Mullins, picked up a 7-10 split, the first woman at Fort Benning to do so.

A triplicate series won recognition for Mrs. Patsy Cone, wife of Capt. Trent Cone. She bowled three straight games of 122.

The highest score ever bowled in the Officers' Wives League was made by Mrs. Carole Newcombe, wife of Maj. Nelson Newcombe. She rolled a 244, her highest game.

Mrs. Ella Jones, wife of retired S. Sgt. Robert Jones, won a WIBC patch for bowling a Dutch 200. She scored ten frames of alternate strikes and spares. Mrs. Gerda Crenshawl wife of S. Sgt. Robert Crenshawl received a patch for an all spare game.

Army Teams Sweep Pistol Match Here

Championships changed hands as the Army swept team matches during the six-day pistol marathon that ran the gamut of indoor shooting, conventional three-gun outdoor matches and international type shooting here last weekend.

SFC Robert Whitacre of the Army Pistol Team, defending his Indoor Regional Pistol title for the fourth consecutive year, was topping all of the other service competitors with 885-34, when Thomas MacMurrain, a Columbus postman, showed up as a late entry.

MacMurrian held a steady hand shooting at the 10's and X's and finished the course with a new civilian record of 886-35, giving him the Regional Indoor Pistol Championship. Whiteacre settled for second and SSG Arnold Vitarbo of the Air Force was third with 882-36.

MacMurrain's record score broke the civilian record of 884-37 held by A. E. Ferry of East Riverdale, Md.

Major Sallie Carroll of the MTU won the Women's Indoor Regional title with an 864-22. She also set new women's record in the 22 timed fire match of 199-10.

Whitacre set a new service and tied the open record in the Indoor .22 timed fire match with a blazing 200 with 17 shots in the X-ring.

The Army Blue pistol team lead by Whitacre won the team championship with a score of 1176-38. Team members were Whiteacre 298-13, SGM William Blankenship 294-7, SFC Emil Heugatter 293-10 and SSG Bonnie Harmon 293-8.

The 3-gun outdoor matches began in poor weather, but it didn't dampen the score or the spirit of MTU's SGM William Blankenship, who won top honors with his outstanding 2863-149. SSG Francis Higginson, of the Marine Corps, was second with 2658 and Whitacre was third with a 2652.

In winning the championship, Blankenship topped his competitors in the .22 aggregate with 891 followed by his teammate Merriweather Jones' 889 and in the Center Fire aggregate with 888, followed by Whitacre's 886. Blankenship was outpointed by Higginson in the .45 aggregate by two points, 884 to 886.

Second Baseman Roalstad Joins 65th Co., TCB

OC Ronald R. Roalstad of the 65th Co., The Candidate Brigade, was a professional baseball player with the Minnesota Twins' organization before he entered the Army.

Roalstad, a second baseman, was in spring training with the Twins and had a batting average of over .400 when he received his notice to enter the Army.

While majoring in forestry at the University of Minnesota, Roalstad was captain of Minnesota's National Collegiate Athletic Association championship team. After signing with the Minnesota organization upon completion of college, he played for two years in Minnesota with the Saint Cloud Rox of the Northern League.

Roalstad, a native of Minneapolis, says he will probably not return to professional baseball because he feels a layoff of three years in any professional sport, especially baseball, is too long.

Ranger Hq. To Be Part Of 75th Inf.

By Bill Hardin

The Army has approved plans to establish a provisional Ranger headquarters at Fort Benning.

The 75th Infantry will be the parent unit for Ranger companies assigned to divisions and smaller units here. No date has yet been announced for arrival of the colors.

In a closely related action, the Army is considering a proposal which, if adopted, would allow newly renamed Ranger units to wear the black berets, like those currently worn by members of Ranger Training Command.

Many long range patrol elements, which have now been renamed Ranger units, are already wearing the black berets.

Army to Honor Four Chaplains

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The U. S. Army Chaplains Corps will honor four Army chaplains who gave their lives during a WW II sea disaster with memorial services Sunday, Feb. 1.

Chaplain (Maj. Gen.) Francis L. Sampson, chief of chaplains, said the first Sunday in February would be observed in honor of Chaplains Clark Poling, Alexander Goode, George Fox and John Washington.

The four chaplains, one Jewish, one Roman Catholic and two Protestant, sacrificed their lives by giving their life jackets to other men aboard the torpedoed and sinking troop transport SS Dorchester on the morning of Feb. 3, 1943.

Survivors reported seeing the chaplains standing together on deck, linked arm in arm, with voices raised in prayer, as the stricken ship made her final plunge.

Chaplain Sampson said chaplains who wish to commemorate the heroic deed of these chaplains may desire to designate their offerings on the memorial Sunday for the Chapel of the Four Chaplains in Philadelphia.

Patients Reminded of Hospital's Emergency Schedule

By Spec. 4 Bob Mast

"Misinformation and non-cooperation" prevent Martin Army Hospital's general outpatient clinic from serving patients without delay," according to Maj. Henry C. Reister III, chief to the department of hospital clinics.

"The word apparently isn't getting to the patients, and when it is, they aren't cooperating," Reister said concerning the expanded outpatient facilities available since Nov. 11.

With the move from Martin Army Hospital to the renovated hospital Annex (Bldg. 396), the department of outpatient clinics established a new schedule and night outpatient care. The Army Surgeon General has posted an article this past month concerning complaints about the lack of such services at other posts. Fort Carson, Colo., is the only other post with this service, according to Reister.

"The new facilities and expanded hours will make it possible for patients to obtain convenient care for non-emergency illness and injuries," Dr. Reister said when the clinic expanded in November.

Until the middle of November, the emergency room was seeing two non-emergency patients for every emergency.

Referring to an extensive survey of emergency room visitors made recently, Reister said all but 20 per cent of the patients could have anticipated their need to see a doctor in time to make an appointment with the clinic. Patients who report to the emergency room with non-emergency ailments are now referred to the clinic.

"We treat 10,000 patients a week, which makes us the busiest Army Hospital in the continental U. S., with the exception of Fort Bragg, and we have services most other Army posts are asking for and want.

"With all this, nobody at Fort Benning who has requested an appointment since Nov. 11, has been refused. Every day since Nov. 11, there have been unbooked appointments at the end of the day. Yet there are persons who have experienced long waiting periods at the clinic because they didn't have appointments. These patients are examined on a first-come, first-served basis.

"With a staff of 34 doctors, there is a sufficient day and night to see all number at the clinic each appointments without delay. Non-appointment visitors will have a wait which could be avoided simply by making an appointment or at least calling the clinic before they arrive. Phone receptionists are available each evening to give patients an estimated time for appointment.

The clinic's central appointment desk is open Monday, through Friday, 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. (phone 544-1056). The Outpatient Clinic is open Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to noon, 1 to 5 p.m., 6:30 to 9 p.m., and Saturdays from 9 a.m. to noon (544-1153). The Pediatric Clinic is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to noon and 1 to 6 p.m. (544-1780). The hospital emergency room is open 24 hours a day (544-1123).

Dependents' medical records have been moved to Bldg. 396, the old hospital annex.

Draft Calls 33,100 Men

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The Department of Defense has requested the Selective Service System to provide 33,100 inductees in March 1969. Of this total, 31,600 men will be assigned to the Army and 1,500 to the Marine Corps.

This request supports currently approved force levels and will assure a timely flow of replacements for men completing their terms of service, the Defense Department said.

At Fort Bragg

Recondo Tests Skills

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (ANF) — The action starts early each day out on the large wooden structures among the pines, far from Fort Bragg's main post.

It continues deep into the night in an area that looks more like a circus fun zone than a combat training field. But no circus games are played. The time is short, and there is much to learn.

This is the site of the Recondo school conducted by the 82d Abn. Div. to develop the skills, self-confidence and leadership ability of the Army's junior non-commissioned officers and soldiers who may become squad or fire-team leaders.

The division's school, which was started in 1964, is one of three Recondo training schools in the United States. The others are at Fort Hood, Tex., and Fort Carson, Colo.

At Fort Bragg, the course is known as "Raider School," and the distinctive arrow-head patch earned by the men who complete it is worn with pride as the symbol of a rugged training program stressing stamina, mental alertness and combat skill.

This kind of training for the men who will lead combat patrols has been emphasized by Gen. W. C. Westmoreland, U.S. Army chief of staff. He has underscored the importance of conducting Recondo (the term is a contraction of "reconnaissance" and "commando") training under realistic conditions with maximum field training.

Out in the field at Fort Bragg, the 60 soldiers in each three-week cycle of the Raider course face a challenging assortment of obstacles to test their skills.

Capt. Ronald D. Mothershaugh, Fairborn, Ohio, officer in charge of the Raider School, says the men are in the course "to train hard for combat and to increase their self-confidence."

"People who come back from a tour in 'the Nam' (Vietnam) may think they know all there is to patrolling and survival. But most of them only went through a portion of it over there, and you find many Vietnam veterans enrolled in this course."

Fort Bragg's training ground includes a 50-foot tower called the "Slide for Life." Students slide down a 100-yard rope at a 30-degree angle, building up speed to 40 miles an hour before dropping into the icy stream below. Nearby is a 40-foot high "Mountaineering Tower" from which Raider students rappel straight down.

Social Security Quiz

Q. My husband and I have been drawing a combined social security check for a long time; now, after 40 years of married life, he plans to divorce me. Will this stop my benefits as a wife?

A. No. Your monthly social security check will continue. If your former husband dies before you do, you may then be entitled to benefits as a widow.

Q. Why are the social security taxes raised from time to time?

A. Social security taxes are raised from time to time to finance increased benefit amounts and other improvements in the program. Naturally, when benefits increase and new types of benefits are added. Costs increase and so social security taxes must be raised accordingly.

Q. I am receiving my social security retirement benefit while working part-time. My employer deducts social security tax from my pay. I'm over 65 — do I still have to pay the tax?

A. Yes, your employer is correct in withholding the tax from your earnings. He also shares this responsibility by paying an amount equal to your social security taxes. As long as you work you continue to pay social security tax, regardless of your age or benefit status.

Q. Where does the money come from to pay for all of the different types of social security benefits?

A. During working years, employees, their employers, and self-employed people contribute to special social security trust funds. Money is then available so that cash benefits can be paid from these funds to replace part of the earnings an individual or a family loses when the worker retires, becomes disabled, or dies.

12 Wofford Cadets Visit OC Company

Twelve ROTC Cadets from Wofford College, Spartenburg, S. C., visited the 95th Co., (OC), The Student Brigade.

Capt. Howard W. Jackson, CO, gave a brief orientation on the mission and operation of the officer candidate program. The Cadets then toured the facilities and discussed the program.

'Stripes' Writer

Al Ricketts, 40, Dies in Honolulu

Al Ricketts, the always interesting and often irritating staff writer for the Pacific Stars & Stripes whose "On The Town" column was one of the most widely read in the paper, died early this month in Honolulu.

Ricketts' wit and biting commentary filled a daily column for fifteen years. He left the Stripes in February of 1968 to write a novel and eventually took a job with the Honolulu Star-Bulletin.

A former entertainer himself, Ricketts numbered many show business greats among his friends and a few among his enemies. He has few qualms about picking through the artificial and pompous world of Hollywood and exposing the fakers and second rate performers. During his writing career he had been threatened with lynching and challenged to a duel, a pillow fight which he lost, although he was, amazingly, never sued.

The jazz community particularly will mourn his passing. Ricketts had many friends there including Louis Armstrong who has planned a special wake in his honor.

It was earned by lasting an average of 11 years in Sweden, where it's tough being a car.

Of course, we don't guarantee that a Volvo will last 11 years in America, where being a car is relatively easy. But we do know that 95% of all the Volvos registered here in the last 11 years are still on the road.

When a car is built to last like that, it can be driven a long way before it reaches the breaking point.

So a Volvo not only lasts long enough to get you out from under car payments. It also works well enough to keep you from getting into mechanic payments.

Which means you can drive one a long time without ever reaching the broke point.

BANK TO BANK . . . Officer Candidates watch as men of the 818th Engineering Bn. construct a Bailey (panel) bridge across Pine Knot Creek. One of the 818th's missions is to demonstrate their skills to students.

Deaths Linked to Drug Use

In Florida recently, a 16-year-old boy shot to death his family of five. A Minnesota man shot and killed a complete stranger on the road. A man in Colorado tried to shoot his wife but killed her grandmother instead. Then he killed himself.

And the boy and the two men committed these murders just after smoking marijuana.

And yet, surprisingly, there are still responsible people who accept LSD and marijuana as something less than dangerous.

LSD Praised

It wasn't too long ago that men like Aldous Huxley, famed novelist-essayist, and numbers of other professional people including writers, artists and actors, were saying nice things about LSD.

Several national news publications have in the past quoted well-known Americans defending marijuana as merely an "escape hatch."

But things are changing.

More and more responsible doctors and law enforcement officials are agreeing that LSD and marijuana are cripplers and have no place in society.

Still, says James L. Goddard, commissioner of the U. S. Food and Drug Administration, as many as 400,000 Americans may smoke marijuana regularly. Some estimate as high as three million.

Juvenile Violence

And Harry J. Anslinger, former U. S. Commissioner of Narcotics, says in his book "The Murderers" that much of the irrational juvenile violence and killing that has written a new chapter of shame and tragedy (in America) is traceable directly to this hemp intoxication.

The American Medical Association calls marijuana a "menace" and labels as "unscientific" a popular early WW II study.

The study, called The La-Guardia Report, was made by administering small amounts of marijuana to 77 prisoners. The final report said that experts in the U.S. Narcotics bureau, and other authorities who have denounced marijuana as dangerous, are in error.

The report gave the underworld a new lease on life and many youths still regard it as "gospel," according to Anslinger. But the AMA says that the report is unscientific because "antisocial behavior could not have been noticed as the suspects were prisoners."

Korean Division Gets High Praise

NINH HOA, Vietnam (ANF) — In their third year of fighting in Vietnam alongside United States and Republic of Vietnam forces, soldiers of the 9th Division of the Republic of Korea (ROK) continue to build an impressive combat record.

The ROK unit, nicknamed the White Horse Division, has participated in more than 145 operations since it arrived in Vietnam in October 1966. Its members are among 86,000 Free World soldiers fighting in Vietnam with the Vietnamese and Americans.

In one assault operation lasting nearly a month, the Korean soldiers achieved the first major penetration of a large enemy mountain stronghold. During the assault, the enemy was routed from an extensive cave network by Koreans armed only with grenades and knives who slipped into the caves through narrow crevices.

Their record of successful combat has earned the White Horse Division soldiers the respect and admiration of American liaison officers. The ROK soldier, one U. S. officer reports, "exhibits all of the professionalism of the best infantryman."

The White Horse Division operates within the area of I Field Force, Vietnam. In cooperation with American and Vietnamese units, the Koreans specifically are involved in the area from Cam Ranh to Tuy Hoa, a region that includes rich agricultural lowlands, a major part of Vietnam's railroad system and a section of the country's main national highway.

Equipped with M-16 rifles, the Korean troops have displayed a thoroughness in combat that is emphasized by the way they sweep an area — slowly searching behind every rock, bush and tree to rout the enemy.

The ROK soldiers deeply feel a purpose in their work. Maj. Kim Hoo Wan, a veteran of 17 years in the Korean Army, describes their feelings:

"We know what freedom means. Remember all the years we spent under the Japanese — then war in our homeland. I was a student in Seoul, but suddenly there was no more studying — only rifles and war. Many of my classmates — they are dead.

COMPUTER CORNER ON SPORTS

By Bud Goode

College football had a number of upsets this year. But three of them decided the fate of the Big Ten and ultimately, the Rose Bowl Championship. The interesting thing about college upsets, is that they prove out the findings of our electronic sports computer. After pouring three seasons of college football game stats into the Computer Communications, Inc. sports analyzer, we found a handful of statistics which separated winners from losers. But most important were — yards gained rushing, and passes intercepted.

TEAM	Rushing Yards	Passing Yards	Interceptions	Points
PURDUE	220	259	1	37
NOTRE DAME	147	307	3	22
OHIO STATE	333	78	0	18
PURDUE	57	129	2	0
MICHIGAN STATE	164	83	0	21
NOTRE DAME	131	216	1	17
OHIO STATE	101	0	0	27
USC	177	189	2	16

In all of the upsets listed, the winning team had more yards gained rushing than the loser — and the loser had more yards in the air. Although the Purdue team had demonstrated a strong passing attack before they played Notre Dame, and the Irish had a strong running game — Ara's boys were upset by the Boilermaker's ability to run through the line.

Woody Hayes' Buckeyes came into the season with a hidden flush — one of the greatest running attacks ever put on the ground — and upset Purdue and defeated USC in the Rose Bowl (by a score no one predicted). Mormit College football is a running game — and yards on the ground mean points on the scoreboard.

Pilots Add Membership

Membership in the American Fighter Pilots Association is now open to active duty personnel to all U.S. Armed Forces.

Recent interpretation of the association's requirement extended membership to all services and now includes combat helicopter personnel as well as fixed wing air craft pilots.

"With this change, the American Fighter Pilots Association now becomes a truly multi-service association," said Walker M. Mahurin, AFPA president.

A Problem? Dial HELP

Soldiers who feel they have insurmountable personal problems they are unable to solve themselves can receive help on a 24-hour basis through Project H-E-L-P.

"Before a person commits some rash act like going AWOL we want to help him," said a project spokesman. "Too often there is a solution to his problem that he is unaware of so he tries to solve it by running away."

Similar programs have been instituted in at least two other Army posts, Fort Bragg and Fort Campbell, and have met with great degree of success.

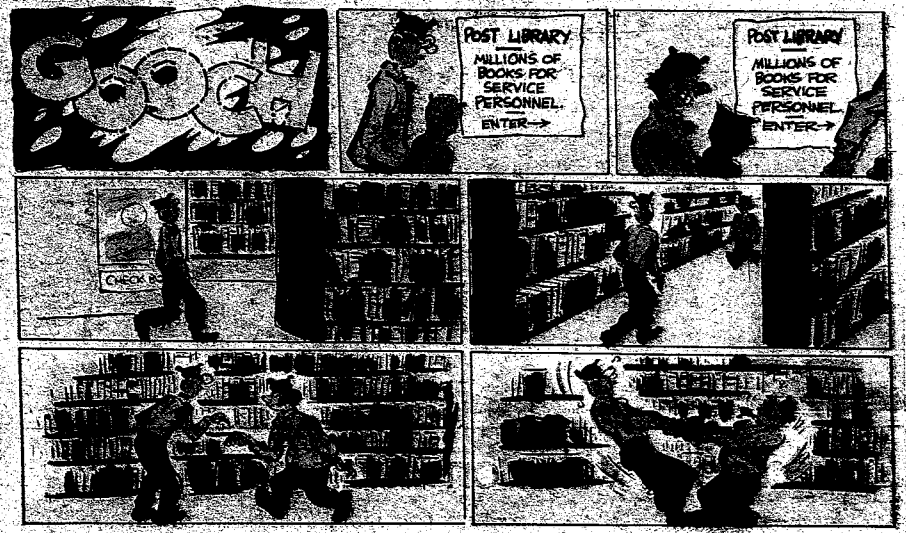
VOLUME XV — JANUARY, 1969 — NO. 16Z



Leading the list of inductees into the National Football Foundation Hall of Fame this winter is the player who scored the only touchdown in Navy's first win over Army. He's the late Admiral Jonas Ingram, Academy fullback of 1906 and Congressional Medal of Honor winner in the Mexican campaign in 1914.

For six years the Middies had been turned back by the Cadets, so Ingram's winning TD must have been especially gratifying. As always, there's a note of sadness when such a citation is awarded posthumously and the athlete isn't around to enjoy it. One thinks of the numerous

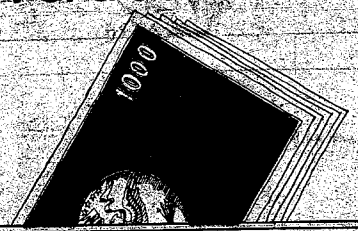
WHAT'S NEW?

Put a dollar value on what you know.



Your know-how and experience have a cash value. And it's easy for you to cash in. Just stop in and see your Career Counselor. Ask him about the Variable Reenlistment Bonus.

Ask him exactly how much the Army will pay to have you stay on for another tour. It could be as much as ten thousand dollars. And a list of great Reenlistment Options makes the money easy to take.

What you know is your stake in the future. Don't gamble with it. Find out how much it's worth. And cash it in on a sure thing.

Your future, your decision...stay ARMY.

Today's super-duper razor blades are meant to cut whiskers. They can also do a job on the skin underneath the whiskers.

To help keep you from butchering yourself—this is the reason for Rise.® And why we put a thin lubricating film into it that gets between your blade and your skin.

Put Rise on your face before you shave, and maybe you won't have to put toilet paper on your face after it.

THE GAME OF SEVEN GOOFS

These two drawings look alike but actually differ in at least seven subtle ways. Check your answers with those printed upside down.

Solution: (1) The base of the little loving-cup is different. (2) The top of the ashtray is different. (3) On the big picture, the left leg of the boxer is displaced. (4) The bottom of the right leg of man's trousers is larger. (5) The right tip of his shirt collar is higher up. (6) Between the legs of the stool, the bottom of the wall is indented. (7) The stem of the pipe is curved.

living hall-of-famers who have said with heartfelt sincerity, "This is the biggest thrill of my life."

BRING BACK THOSE NICKNAMES

In a nostalgic mood, columnist Russell Baker recently recalled colorful nicknames of some of his boyhood baseball heroes and deplored the lack of same in today's sweat-sock brigade. He mentioned the Sultan of Swat, the Big Train, the Fordham Flash, the Georgia Peach, And Joltin' Joe, Poosh-em-up-Tony, Twinkletoes, Stan the Man, Sal the Barber and Leo the Lip.

"One evidence of baseball's outgrowing boyhood is the names of the players in the latest World Series," said Baker, "The usual Detroit line-up is composed of Bill, Norm, Mickey, Don, Willie, Jim, Al and Dick. The Cardinals' usual starters are Tim, Orlando, Julian, Dal, Lou, Curt and Roger.

"There is not a Lip, or a Barber or even a Bananas in either line-up. In fact, with the exception of "Marvelous Marv" Throneberry of the Mets, it is hard to remember any player in the last decade whose name reflects that baseball is, after all, just a game that boys play.

"In growing up, baseball has become too self-conscious to tolerate the boyish absurdity of ridiculous nicknames. The game has become obsessed with the American passion for perfection, and one of the prices paid for perfection is the sacrifice of sheer fun."

Baseball isn't alone. Gone from assorted other sports are the Manassa Mauler, Little Miss Poker Face, the Galloping Ghost, Crazy Legs, the Wild Bull of the Pampas, Colonel Stick, Man Mountain, Bootin' Ben and Fireball.

WHO DAT?

Sports nuts among us know what real names go with those tags, but here's a glossary for the benefit of anybody who just wandered in: Sultan of Swat, Babe Ruth; Big Train, Walter Johnson; Fordham Flash, Frank Frisch; Georgia Peach, Ty Cobb; Joltin' Joe DiMaggio, Poosh-em-up-Tony Rizzuto, Twinkletoes Selkirk, Stan the Man Musial, Sal (Maglie) the Barber and Leo (the Lip) Durocher.

50 CASH PRIZES BRAIN TEASER CONTEST

It's easy! It's fun! And as always, there are fifty checks waiting to go to the first fifty readers to send us the correct answer to the problem below. Forty-seven readers will receive $5.00 checks and as an added incentive we are offering to go to the FIRST, the TWENTY-FIFTH and FIFTIETH readers sending in the correct answer.

The problem: "Okay, Smith! Grab that wheelbarrow with those bags of cement and get it over to the new gun emplacement," ordered Sgt. Ruffhouse.

Smith shook his head, picked up the handles of the wheelbarrow and trundled it toward the gun emplacement. When he was almost there he stopped. The emplacement was completely surround by a deep moat filled with water.

Looking around he spied two planks on the ground nearby. One was longer than the other. He tried to use the longer one as a bridge, but it just didn't reach. What was he going to do now?

Suddenly a bright idea hit him. He knew exactly how to get the wheelbarrow and the bags of cement across the moat using only the two planks. Nothing else. Can you figure out how he did it? (You can include a rough sketch if it is easier.)

- One entry per person
- Please state rank or connection with the Service
- Please give name of your local news paper in which you saw this AMERICAN ARMED FORCES FEATURES contest
- Send all answers (a post card will do) to BRAIN TEASER No. 167, AMERICAN ARMED FORCES FEATURES, 405 Lexington Avenue, New York 10017

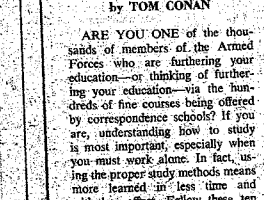
$12,000 A Year Plus Retirement

When John Bott retired from service he had 20 years to his credit and the rank of Major—but no particular future in civilian life. So he sold mutual funds for a while. Then he sold insurance. Then he became a sales clerk in a sporting goods store.

That's when John decided that there must be a better way to make it in civilian life. He determined to train as quickly as possible for a real profession. He enrolled in Universal Schools of Dallas for correspondence training in Accident Investigation and Claims Adjusting.



John Bott

Today John Bott is earning $1,000 a month over and above his service retirement pay. He is a professional adjuster with a large, independent company in Houston, Texas.

At age 50 he is in the midst of a secure, exciting "second career" with an almost unlimited future ahead. "What I earn depends on just how many hours I want to work," John writes. "It's up to me because there is more work than can be done. More people should know about this business. It's great!"

Universal Training Did It

And John feels more servicemen should know about Universal Schools of Dallas, too. He credits his success in his new career to the school's training and placement methods. "I'm only sorry I didn't see your ads years ago," he writes. "I would especially recommend this field to retired servicemen because this is one place where it doesn't matter what age you are. Your earnings are only limited by your ability and ambition."

John Bott is just one of the hundreds of servicemen, enlisted and commissioned, who have found money-making "second careers" with the help of Universal Schools. Here's why:

World's Biggest Business

Accident Investigation and Claims Adjusting is part of the biggest business in the world today. Every year some 22 million accidents and losses must be investigated and settled for insurance and other companies.

But there simply are not enough trained men to handle this huge and growing workload —not nearly enough. More trained men are urgently needed now, in all parts of the country.

FREE, NATION-WIDE PLACEMENT SERVICE

In fact, the need is so great that hundreds of companies now have standing requests with Universal Schools for names and addresses of all of our graduates.

As a result, Universal Schools of Dallas has trained and placed more men in this field than any other organization in the United States.

Universal training, the standard of the industry for 20 years, is complete, convenient and practical. Our famous 50-lesson course prepares you to begin earning immediately in an exciting Accident Investigation career anywhere in the country you wish to live.

Train in Your Spare Time

You simply read lessons by mail in your spare time. You set your own pace; move ahead as quickly or as slowly as you like. There are no classes to attend. No equipment to buy. No expensive "residence training." You need not make the slightest change in your present duty schedule.

Get the whole story now. Send right away for Universal's free book "of facts—including names, earnings and locations of men like you who have made the grade in Accident Investigation.

There is absolutely no obligation: No one will call on you. Simply mail the coupon below.

Guide to Education

SCHOOLS & COLLEGES

HOW TO STUDY

by TOM CONAN

ARE YOU ONE of the thousands of members of the Armed Forces who are furthering your education—or thinking of furthering your education—via the hundreds of fine courses being offered by correspondence schools? If you are, understanding how to study is most important, especially when you must work alone. In fact, using the proper study methods means more learned in less time and with less effort. Follow these ten tips on how to study and see for yourself.

1. KNOW WHY: why are you learning the course you are taking? What's the payoff? Will the knowledge help you to impress the teacher . . . or win a prize? The goal really doesn't matter as long as you have one. Experiments have proven that highly motivated students learn faster.

2. GET THE WHOLE PICTURE FIRST: Once you know why you are learning it, skim over the entire lesson, report or article. Get an idea of the main points covered. Look at the over-all picture to see how each step or element fits into the whole.

3. KNOW WHAT TO LOOK FOR: Knowing what to look for will save you time and believe it or not prevent you from learning too much. Many people clutter up their memories with irrelevant details. They learn things they don't have to know and probably will never use.

4. LOOK AT THE PICTURES. This is one bit of advice you never need tell a grade-school student, yet many older ones skip over the illustrations when they're reading. Study each picture and its legend or caption and relate it to the text of your subject matter.

5. TEST YOURSELF AS YOU GO ALONG: Ask yourself, "What is the writer trying to tell me? What should I get from this? What questions will be asked about this?" After you've read a section, close the book and try to recall the "meat" of what you have read. Summarize in your own words. Taking notes on key points often helps, but most educators agree that it's foolish to take very detailed notes. Strive for understanding. Once you get the meaning, a mere outline is sufficient for later review.

6. RACE YOURSELF: You wouldn't try to put 24 cans of soup up on the shelf all in one armload; you'd put them up a few at a time. Likewise, you shouldn't try to cram too much in one study lesson. Allow for rest periods every half hour or so, at least every hour. Remember, too, that the rest period should be spent in relaxing, not studying something else.

7. FOLLOW BLACK WITH WHITE: If you are tackling a different subject after a rest period make the contrast as strong as possible—mathematics followed by literature, for example. Psychologists have found that when two similar subjects are studied consecutively, the second may interfere with retention of the first.

8. REVIEW: In mental gymnastics, as in physical sports practice makes perfect. The more times you go over something—and the longer you review it correctly over a number of days—the less likely you are to forget it.

A JOB WITH A PRESENT AND A FUTURE

By Pete Taylor

Did you know there is a need of one service technician for every 90 cars on the road? Further, experts predict that there will be no slackening in the growth of the population of the country. And, as the population grows so will the number of cars and trucks.

In fact, every car and truck registered in the U.S. from time to time needs the services of a skilled service technician. In addition, today there is an increasing demand for specialists to service improved equipment in cars such as automatic transmissions, power steering, air conditioning, and many other special improvements.

Too, more and more families are moving to the suburbs of the big cities. This means more and more travel by car, more and more two car families. This means more and more skilled service people to maintain and keep the vehicles free of driving hazards.

In short, there are careers in automotive service. The automobile is here to stay. And that means a present and future need for auto service people.

You can have a rewarding and interesting career as an auto service technician. Although pay scales vary from town to town, well trained auto servicemen can expect good pay. Pay scales to some extent depend on cost of living in a community and the skill and training needed to do the job. Also, pay varies with the responsibility attached to the job.

An auto service technician who wants to live in his home town, can usually find a starting job in or near his home. On the other hand, he can move to any part of the country and find a need for his services. Opportunities are even available to him to go to foreign countries to service vehicles. Wherever an auto service technician goes, whether it's as a civilian or in the Armed Forces, there is a demand for his services.

Modern garages and dealerships have good, working conditions. Usually the newest tools and equipment are available to make service work easier, cleaner, faster and more accurate. Up to date tools and equipment make the job of the auto serviceman more interesting and less strenuous.

In addition to the main correspondence school courses offered, most dealers and garages have training programs after you get out of the service. For example, many big motor companies operate service training schools which are available to employes of a dealership. With the courses you can take while in the Armed Forces under your belt, schools like these see that you get the right kind of instruction to do quality work. Dealers and other repair shops are interested in seeing that you like your work and do a good job. If you make a success of your job, you are helping to make the business a success.

You can be certain that you will obtain a great deal of personal satisfaction as an auto technician. You can accomplish and complete jobs with your hands as well as tasks that challenge the mind. You can develop the reputation of knowing your business and doing good work.

If you wish, there are opportunities to branch out into other jobs related to the automotive industry with auto service technical training. Some of the opportunities are:

Automobile Dealerships: Many automobile dealers got their start in the community as auto service technicians.

Parts Managers: Training in service work is valuable if you want to sell parts and accessories and order stock.

Auto Supply Companies: Suppliers often look for men with auto technician training to work for them in dealing with automotive companies.

Teaching: The public schools and factory service schools need teachers to instruct in the field of auto repair.

Insurance Adjusters and Claim Examiners: Automotive service training could help you obtain a job with insurance companies on jobs requiring knowledge of automobiles.

As in most careers, however, there is no magic formula to determine that automotive service is the best vocation for you. You should talk to your guidance counselor, teachers, parents and men in the auto service field. You can then evaluate your interests and abilities, and measure them against the requirements of those in the field.

The decision to be an auto service technician is in your hands and must be made by you. If you are sure you like the field and the work, check your correspondence school catalogs for training courses. Take physics, math and other shop courses that may be offered. Practical training may be gotten through work in your outfit's motor pool or in some well equipped garage when you get out. Your most valuable asset is the determination and desire to get into the automotive service field.

KICKING IT AROUND

with Buck O'Brien

The alphabet game is having a revival and you can have some fun with it. Rather than try to explain it, let's give a classic example of how it works:

OVERHEARD IN A DINER

"F. U. N. E. M?"
"S. V. F. M."
"F. U. N. E. X?"
"O. K. M. N. X."

If you don't get the drift of that dialogue right away, repeat those letters out loud. When you do that, you find out the lines translate into:

"Have you any ham?"
"Yes, we have ham."
"Have you any eggs?"
"Yes, we have eggs."
"Okay, ham and eggs."

Of course, making up whole sentences like that is for very advanced players of the alphabet game. Beginners can have fun putting together single words. Following are some definitions which describe a word that can be simulated with only two letters. For example, to become rotten is DK (decay).

1—Condition of Old Mother Hubbard's cupboard.
2—Plant that grows on college walls.
3—Jealousy.
4—A petite, shapely red-headed Wac.
5—What friends call movie star Hepburn.
6—TV's equivalent of the filmland Oscar.
7—A type of written proso similar to an article.
8—Where Elsie the cow's milk comes from.
9—An electric fish.
10—How you look in a suit from a second-hand store.

Answers 1—MT, 2—IV, 3—NV, 4—QT, 5—KT, 6—ME, 7—SA, 8—IT, 9—EL, 10—CD.

If you've got a little group for a party, you can pass out pencils and paper and have a contest to see who can come up with the most and best answers in a specified short time—or who can get ten answers first.

If the idea starts to swing, members of the party will begin thinking up definitions of their own "alphabet" words to stump the others. Then you can open the game up by permitting the use of any number of letters, or combinations of numbers and letters. For example, the game in which Lt. Arthur Ashe excels is 10-s (tennis).

Here are some others, and just for a change, fill-ins instead of questions:

1—"Victor Charlie" isn't really a pet name for a Viet Cong. After all, he is the _____.
2—My date wanted to dance all night but I told her I was too beat. I didn't have the _____.
3—Now they call him a flyboy but in the old days he was called an _____.

Glenn: There's No Space 'Race'

By Spec. 4 Frank Truchon

Americas first orbiting astronaut, retired Marine Col. John H. Glenn, told 1,000 members of the Association of the United States Army Tuesday that he views America's space effort as being the greatest quest that man has ever made for knowledge.

Glenn was the guest speaker at Marshall Auditorium for the first 1969 general membership meeting of the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning chapter of AUSA. Included in the crowd were Mayor John Anthony of Phenix City and Mayor pro-tem George Dorman of Columbus.

The World War II and Korean combat veteran, presently a member of the board of directors of Royal Crown, piloted the Mercury-Atlas 6 "Friendship 7" spacecraft in 1962 on this country's first manned orbital flight. He told his audience, "Our space program is often misunderstood. The news media portray it as a race with Russia, but it is primarily a search for information which, though we may not be able to see it now, can be invaluable to us in the future."

The colonel said the political aspects of the moon race are important, and lesser nations would probably gravitate toward the world leader in technology. He added, however, that the advancement in our knowledge is what will ultimately count in moving the country ahead.

Questioned as to the future of the space program after a manned landing is made, Glenn replied, "There will probably be a bigger priority on funding such projects as housing, unemployment and poverty and less for the space program. I think its too bad, because by the time a landing on the moon is made we will have tremendous transportation capabilities on hand. However, I have no doubt that

94th Co. Grad Named Winner Of 'Patterson'

First Lt. James S. Zieba of Fort Bragg, N. C., has been named winner of the 17th annual Patterson Award.

Zieba was selected for the award from among the honor graduates of Officer Candidate classes at the Infantry School during the 12-month period ending Sept. 30, 1968. He graduated Oct. 12, 1967 as a member of 94th Co., 9th Stu. Bn., TCB.

Selection is made by the Secretary of the Army and the award is presented by Mrs. Robert P. Patterson, widow of the late Secretary of War and Judge of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Patterson died in a plane crash in 1952.

The Patterson Award is made from a $16,000 trust fund established by 120 friends of Patterson. The fund, established in 1952, provides an engraved serv-

Correction

A story in last week's Bayonet included two errors about the services available at Martin Army Hospital.

Patients are advised that the telephone number for the central appointment desk is 544-1065. The number given in the story was incorrect.

Hospital officials also advised that the pediatric clinic is open from 8 a.m. to noon and 1 p.m. until 5 p.m. on weekdays.

Indian Queen Visits Here, Sees Patients

Dressed in her traditional tribal attire, Miss Indian America XV visited Martin Army Hospital here Tuesday and toured the main post area.

Miss Thomasine Hill, 21, a Crow - Pawnee Indian, is touring the United States visiting various colleges and military installations "telling the story of the American Indian as it is".

After meeting with Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., Miss Hill and her traveling companion, Mrs. Susie Yellowtail, had lunch at the Fort Benning Officers Club and went to the hospital to visit patients.

Speakers Give Personal Glimpse of War

Last September, the Army implemented a pilot national speaking program to give audiences the opportunity to hear the first-hand experiences and observations of recent Vietnam returnees.

This week, using 38 volunteers from Infantry Officer Advance Course, Class 69-3, the Infantry School has started a local pilot speaking program.

The volunteers are divided into eight teams that will visit schools and civic groups in the Fort Benning area. All speakers are recent Vietnam returnees who have volunteered their own time to tell the Vietnam story to the American people.

Last Tuesday, five of these speakers addressed the senior class of Baker High School in Columbus. It was the first official appearance for the speakers.

The team is headed by Maj. Jackson C. Stevens, an Army Aviator who has flown more than 1600 hours in support of combat operations during two tours of duty in Vietnam. He emphasized that although the war in Vietnam is often referred to as "The Helicopter War," the primary role of Army Aviation in Vietnam is to support Infantrymen on the ground.

Capt. Herbert C. Masi of San Francisco discussed the Army's basic training program and how well it prepares the new soldiers for duties in Vietnam. Masi served for two years as commander of a basic training company prior to going to Vietnam in June of 1967.

Glenn

the program will go on, if for military reasons alone."

Prior to his address, Glenn met his audience at a buffet in the Officers Club. He was accompanied by Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., Fort Benning commander, and by Louise T. Kunze, president of the AUSA chapter.

At the buffet, the former astronaut was asked whether he thought the United States would place a man on the moon by the end of this year. He answered, "We will be very lucky to get there in 1969."

Glenn went on to say that because of the success of the Apollo 8 flight, the news media seem to be presenting the fact of "a man on the moon" as an accomplished fact.

"We still have a way to go," Glenn said. "The lunar landing module is still an untested piece of equipment. It will first have to be tested in earth orbit in the Apollo 9 flight and in moon-orbit on the Apollo 10 mission. If the next two flights work perfectly then I'd say we may land on the moon by the end of this year."

When asked why he joined the Marines rather than the Army, Glenn laughed and replied, "I was primarily interested in flying when I entered the service in 1942. After I had gone through the Navy's flight program I received a commission as a flyer in the Marine Corps. Once I was in the Corps, I stayed in — for 22 years."

At the auditorium, before Glenn's introduction by William Uzzel, president of Royal Crown, Kunze presented a statue of an Infantryman to CSM James Scott of the Student Brigade for his support of AUSA objectives.

CSM Scott enlisted 4,263 members.

Kunze also recognized and introduced the representatives of ROTC units from Auburn University, Gordon Military College, Tuskegee Institute and Baker High School. The Baker High School group performed the posting and retirement of the colors.

Following Col. Glenn's talk Gen. Wright presented him with an Infantryman statue.

Indian

dan, Wyo., won the Miss Indian America title last August 5 in competion with 38 Indian women throughout the U.S. The judging was based on moral charter, scholastic merits and traditional and modern skills. Miss Hill will hold the title until August of this year when a new Miss Indian America will be crowned.

A clan uncle of Miss Hill gave her the Indian name Ah-swoa-she-delish, which means to "She walks to her lodge" of "Everything I do, I do for the good of my people."

The trip to Fort Benning had special significance for Mrs. Yellowtail. One thing she particularly wanted to see was the statue of the Infantryman, which has stood in front of Infantry Hall since 1964. Mrs. Yellowtail's son-in-law, Maj. Eugene J. Wyles, posed for the statue while he was attending OCS here in 1959.

She took a good look at the statue and commented that it bears a very good likeness to Wyles. "I have pictures and a set of replica earrings of the statue, but this is the first time I have been able to see it in person," she said.

Wyles is now on his fourth tour of duty in Vietnam and is due to return in March to Fort Bragg, where his wife lives.

Mrs. Yellowtail, a full-blooded Crow Indian from Wyola, Mont., is an advisor to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare on matters concerning Indian Health for the state of Montana and the President's Committee on Health.

PROMOTION POLICIES

What new policies in relation to promotions have gone into effect over the last year?

There have been six major changes in the promotion policy over the year.

The new 12-months time-in-grade criteria for promotion to captain, AUS, became effective in May. Acceptance of the promotion automatically extends the obligation service of most officers to either 36 months from the date of entry on active duty as a second lieutenant or 12 months active serve as a captain.

Several times during the year, the Army authorized promotions to grades E-4 and E-5 without regard to position vacancies. This action was taken as a means of providing promotion opportunity for deserving individuals who would not otherwise have been promoted.

In June, selections for promotion to grades E-8 and E-9 were centralized at Headquarters, Department of the Army. The new procedure is intended to assure the most equitable system for selection and promotion of the best qualified individuals in the Army for the top enlisted grades.

Improvements in the enlisted promotion system were announced in July. The most significant change was the establishment of a standardized promotion scoring form to be used Army-wide.

Under the new system, each soldier will be able to measure accurately how he stands in relation to all others competing for promotion, and determine what he can do to increase his standings.

The designation of "selected for retention in grade" was announced in August, and will be used in the selection process for promotion to lieutenant colonel and major rather than the former "fully qualified-not recommended" category.

The new designation will be used sparingly, and will be limited to officers whose records clearly indicate the possibility of future advancement.

Stricter standards for promotion to permenent enlisted grades were announced in September, including no automatic provisions for permanent promotion to the next higher grade when a temporary promotion is made, longer time-in-grade requirements and a time-in-service provision.

VRB

Is there going to be a change in the administration of lump sum Variable Reenlistment Bonus payments?

Yes, pending publication of a change to AR 600-200, the Department of the Army has announced the following changes according to the Army Personnel Letter:

Submission of requests for lump sum payment is authorized 60 days prior to ETS or as soon thereafter as individual decides to reenlist.

Immediate commander will indorse the application to installation or comparable level commanders who will forward same in duplicate direct to DA. ATTN: AGPF-IE. The Adjutant General's Office will return completed applications direct to originating installation.

Installation commanders will, prior to forwarding, review and evaluate applications for entitlement eligibility and compliance with administrative requirements. Review will include coordination with servicing finance and accounting officers for verifications of entitlements to VRB.

The procedural changes are designed to reduce materially processing delays, eliminate an administrative workload at intermediate command levels, lessen the possibility of loss or misrouting of applications and insure individuals entitled to and desiring lump sum VRB payment receive it expeditiously.

TRAILER SHIPMENT

How much does the government allow for the commercial shipment of house trailers in connection with a permanent change of station?

It has recently been increased from 51 cents to 74 cents per pound.

Services available to soldier's family

The Bayonet continues with the third in a series on service policies for dependents at Fort Benning.

The Staff Judge Advocate renders legal assistance to dependents separated from sponsors in accordance with AR 600-103. Dependents seeking legal aid can contact the Legal Assistance Office at 545-5441. The office is open 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday, for appointments.

Liaison has been established with the Columbus Lawyers Club to enable consultation with respect to problems concerning Georgia law on Wednesdays from 1 to 4:30 p.m. Appointments can be made with the Legal Assistance Officer.

The Destin Recreation Center, in Destin, Fla., may be used by dependents residing in the vicinity of Fort Benning, while their sponsor is on duty elsewhere on a space available basis. Priority for use is given to military personnel and their dependents assigned to Fort Benning.

Those who desire use of the facility should contact the Recreation Office, Bldg. 394, or telephone 545-5641.

Tranportation

If the sponsor desires a Government Transportation Request be issued for the travel of his dependents to a designated location within CONUS, there are certain steps he must follow.

Upon receipt of reply from the overseas commander indicating an estimated delay of over twenty weeks before dependents are authorized travel, the sponsor should contact the Transportation Office for assistant in executing the Application for Transportation of Dependents (DD Form 884) in triplicate.

Applications must be signed by sponsor and supported by three copies of member's permanent change of station orders, and one copy of reply from overseas commander indicating delay.

Requests for transportation to Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico or a territorial possession of the United States must be the former home of the sponsor or dependent, or the current residence of a close blood or affinitive relative.

Upon receipt of reply from the overseas commander indicating an estimated delay of over twenty weeks before dependents are authorized travel, the sponsor should contact the Transportation Office for assistance in executing the Application for Overseas Movement of Dependents (DD Form 2370) in triplicate.

Applications must be signed by the sponsor, (the power of attorney cannot be used for this purpose), and supported by three copies of member's permanent change of station orders, and two copies of reply from overseas commander indicating delay.

Cars Built Safer Today--What About Drivers?

American automobile manufacturers are out-doing themselves year after year. Their products seem to be better engineered and more beautiful in appearance as time evolves, and they are being purchased in record numbers.

We might add that safety consciousness on the part of the manufacturers, and Congressional involvement in this area, are promoting more rigid precautions. Hundreds of autos are being recalled each year by manufacturers to repair equipment deemed unsafe.

But be this as it may, it is the driver of the automobile, in most cases, who causes the accidents. A car with faulty brakes, inadequate windshield wipers or headlights can be taken to a garage to correct these deficiencies. But, how about excessive speeding—doing 75 miles an hour on a 55 mile an hour highway?

A check with the legal office of the National Safety Council in Washington early this month produced some astounding figures.

In the first nine months of last year more than 40,000 Americans died on our highways and bi-ways! The projected figure for deaths on our roads for the remainder of 1968 will be in excess of 54,900.

While you're trying to digest those sickening figures, add 1,900,000 Americans who were injured, many so seriously they will be maimed for life.

The National Safety Council, U.S. Armed Forces, Congress and automobile manufacturers can expend all the energy in their possession to ask you to drive safely. . .but you decide the end result. It's for your sake and your family's sake—not theirs.

Remember, when the last squeal of burning rubber has faded away—who will be an added statistical figure? You or them?

For your sake and your family's sake, please drive safely during 1969.

Col., Mrs. Edwards Honored by Ranger Command

Col. and Mrs. I. A. Edwards were honored at a formal farewell dinner-dance at the Officers Club recently.

Col. Edwards, commanding officer of the Ranger Training Command, retires from the Army today. He and Mrs. Edwards will make their home in Phoenix, Arizona.

Guests were greeted in the Main Hall Room by a receiving line which included Col. and Mrs. Edwards, Col. and Mrs. Y. Y. Phillips, Lt. Col. and Mrs. Robert Garrison, Lt. Col. and Mrs. Raymond McClean, Lt. Col. and Mrs. Othar Shalikashvili, Maj. and Mrs. Henry Jeffrey, Maj. and Mrs. Charles Getz and Maj. and Mrs. Virgil Ferrandes.

"Winter Wonderland" set the mood for the evening. Lifesize snowmen greeted guests at the front door. Dinner was served in the Fountain Room where the head table was set under a back-drop snow scene which covered the entire wall. The fountain was blanketed with cotton icicles. Snowy pine cones, skiing Ranger snowmen and gold candles provided table decorations. Frosty white mums graced the head table.

Black Beret

Entertainment was provided by the Infantry Chorus under the direction of 1st. Lt. Tubble. Their program included "Follow-Me", "Black Beret" and a song written especially for Col. and Mrs. Edwards.

Col. Y. Y. Phillips, Ranger Training Command Deputy, spoke on the growth of the command in the past four years under the dedicated leadership of Col. Edwards. He told of how much it has meant to him to work with Col. Edwards and recalled some of his experiences while in the command.

Mrs. Edwards was then presented with a gold charm bracelet from the ladies of the Ranger Training Command.

Col. Edwards was presented a large walnut plaque made by Maj. Virgil Fernandes, Chairman of Patrolling Committee. Mounted on it were mementos from the various units in the Command.

After a farewell address by Col. Edwards, everyone adjourned to the Main Ballroom for dancing to the music of the Rams Trio.

Florida Rangers

The Florida Ranger Camp gave a party honoring Col. and Mrs. Edwards, at the Eglin Officers Club.

After greeting the officers and their wives or dates in a receiving line, a social hour, with egg nog as the house specialty, was held.

A menu including several different relishes and salads, meat balls, shrimp creole, chicken, and roast beef proved to be especially good eating, and the dinner was a fine complement.

As a remembrance from the Florida Ranger Camp, Maj. Charles Getz presented Col. Edwards with the traditional Ranger plaque, a caricature of a rather seedy-looking Ranger inscribed with humorous incidents involving the departing officer. The most amusing and apropo gift, however, from the camp was a cypress knee. The so-called knee is a tree stump, one of thousands found in the Florida swamps, which are the curse of the Rangers who conduct their problems there. A student never completes the Florida phase without tripping over a cypress knee at least once.

Class in Child Care Offered at Hospital

Military people, soldiers and their wives who are about to become parents and who are interested in finding out the facts about pregnancy and child care have an opportunity to learn from experts at Martin Army Hospital.

The Army Health Nurse Service offers an expectant-parents course, one class a week for four to five weeks, and deals with the following subjects: Pregnancy, labor and delivery; the new mother and baby; baby care; and child care. Movies and slides are shown and an expert in each field gives a talk on the subject under discussion.

Classes are held six times a year on Tuesdays from 7 p. m. to 9 p. m. in the second floor conference room at Martin Army Hospital. These classes are open to all soldiers and their wives.

The course which has been in existence since 1955, draws 90 per cent of the people attending from couples expecting their first child.

In an average class of 50 to 75 persons, 40 per cent of these are expectant fathers.

Persons interested in registering for the course can do so by attending one of the classes or by calling the Army Health Nurse Service at 545-5431.

VICTORY DRIVE NEXT TO KING'S AVIATION

Chef's Corner

By Sandra Pendleton

Georgia is the nation's leader in the growth and production of Chicken. What could be more fitting to compliment the industry than excellent Chicken recipes.

For delightfully different fried Chicken, dip in buttermilk then in flour and fry as usual:

Georgia Chicken Delight
- ¾ cup chopped onion
- ⅓ cup chopped celery
- 1 tablespoon chopped green onion tops (optional)
- ¼ cup chicken broth
- 1 10½-oz. can cream of chicken soup
- 1 cup dairy sour cream
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 3 cups cooked, cubed chicken
- 4 ounce can (½ cup) sliced mushrooms, drained
- 3 slices crisp bacon, crumbled (optional)
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- ¼ cup shredded Cheddar cheese

Preheat oven to 350 F. Combine onions, celery, and chicken broth in saucepan; simmer 20 minutes. Combine in 2 quart casserole soup, sour cream, Chicken, mushrooms, bacon, salt, Worcestershire sauce, pepper and cooked vegetables: mix well. Drop Confetti Biscuits by tablespoonfuls onto casserole. Bake at 350 F. for 40 - 50 minutes until golden brown. Sprinkle with cheese. Return to the oven until the cheese begins to melt. Yield 6 - 8 servings.

Confetti Biscuits
- 1 cup sifted all-purpose flour*
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 2 eggs, slightly beaten
- ½ cup milk
- 1 tablespoon dried or chopped fresh green pepper
- 1 tablespoon dried sweet red pepper flakes or chopped pimento
- 1 cup shredded Cheddar cheese

Combine in mixing bowl flour, baking powder and salt. Add eggs, milk, peper, and cheese: mix until just blended.

*For use with self-rising flour, omit baking powder and salt.

Rolled Chicken Breasts
- ½ cup finely chopped fresh mushrooms
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 2 tablespoons all purpose flour
- ½ cup light cream
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- Dash Cayenne pepper
- 5 ounces sharp Cheddar cheese, shredded (1¼ cups)
- 6-7 boned whole chicken breasts
- All-purpose flour
- 2 slightly beaten eggs
- ¾ cup fine dry bread crumbs

Cook mushrooms in butter about 8 minutes. Blend in flour; stir in cream. Add seasonings; cook and stir till mixture is very thick. Stir in cheese; cook over very low heat, stirring til cheese melts. Turn into pie plate. Cover; chill 1 hour. Cut firm cheese mixture into 6 -7 pieces and shape into short sticks.

Remove skin from chicken breasts. Place each piece, boned side up, between clear plastic wrap. (Overlap meat where split) Pound out from the center with wood mallet to form cutlets not quite ¼ inch thick. Peel off wrap. Sprinkle meat with salt. Place a cheese stick on each piece. Tucking in the sides, roll as for jelly roll.

Preparations Complete For Annual 49er Party

The Officers club, for one night will become the Golden Nugget Saloon, with such attractions as 'panning for gold,' 'a girl in the golden cage,' and a 'mile long bar,' to help celebrate the annual 49er Party, Feb. 8th.

Included in the evening's entertainment are a chorus of can can dancers, a floor show, the white elephant sale at the JADA Country Store, and lovely cigarette girls.

In addition to these attractions there will be special food from Maggie's Chuckwagon, with supper served continuously from 7:30 p.m. until midnight, and breakfast served from midnight until 2 a.m.

Guests are encouraged to wear costumes and prizes will be awarded for the most original attire.

Guests are reminded that they must present valid club cards with their ticket for admission to the party, which starts at 7:30 p.m.

All this fun does have a serious purpose. All proceeds will go to Tot Town Nursery, and local and national scholarship funds. The grants for both run to a maximum of $500, and are intended to help with tuition, lab fees and text books. All interested daughters of tired or deceased Army officers in the Columbus area may apply for this scholarship by writing to: Army Daughters, Box 1671, Fort Benning, Ga.

Tickets will be on sale at the Officers Club during all the major units and at lunch time and happy hours.

Fashions Don't Have To Be Silk and Satin

Photos By Rick Yeiser

A showing of fashions created from the bedroom and bath highlighted a luncheon for 130 wives of officers in Infantry Officer Advanced Course 3-69. The luncheon, held in the Supper Club of the Officers Club, was plannned by the wives of the first platoon. Special guests were Mrs. Andrew J. Gastis, wife of Col. Andrew Gastis, senior faculty advisor to the class, and Mrs. Wilbur J. Theil, wife of Lt. Col. Wilbur J. Theil, commanding officer of the Second Student Battalion, TSB.

The first platoon wive's chairman, Mrs. Royle Adams, arranged the affair. She was assisted by Mrs. David C. Christie and Mrs. Hugh C. Durham, III, who took charge of the invitations, Mrs. Robert Gleason, who arranged the menu, Mrs. Thomas Castro, who organized the program, Mrs. Thomas Marshall, who handled the publicity, and Mrs. Ray W. Brownlee, who took care of the miscellaneous details.

The afternoon began with a Sherry Hour at noon. The luncheon of baked chicken, mashed potatoes, peas, fruit juice, tossed salad, and sherbert, was served at 1 p.m. The fashion show began 45 minutes later as the ladies were finishing their coffee.

MRS. MARSHALL DISPLAYS BALL GOWN
Made From Bedspreads

Mrs. Willard Miller, fashion adviser from a local towel and linen store narrated the event. In introducing the show she commented that TV dinners, mini-skirts, and space travel had changed the complexion of man's life and, "No wonder the entire concept of furnishing the bedroom and bath has changed too. From the dark ages to just a little while ago these rooms remained virtually untouched by the changes that revamped the other phases of life. Then someone realized that if people were spending one-third of their lives in their bedrooms and baths, it was high time that these rooms reflected the personality of their occupants."

She added that the trappings of these rooms can serve a double purpose—as towels, sheets, bedspreads, and blankets, or as materials for forward fashions. "Everyone knows how much women adore the change. With the help of the ideas that you will now see, your imagination can go wild."

She then narrated a forty-five minute showing of fashions created entirely from bedroom and bathroom material such as towels, sheets, blankets, and bedspreads. Many of the creations shown were made from patterns designed by internationally famous fashion designers; others were simple skirts and blouses that required no pattern at all. She commented at the start that the patterns were available from any reputable dress shop, department store or fabric shop, and that all of them could be sewn at home. The purpose of the show was to give the ladies an idea of the possibilities open to them.

'Model' Wives

In all, twenty outfits were modeled by first platoon wives, none of whom had had any previous professional modeling experience. The designs displayed included culottes, slacks and jackets, ball gowns, bathing suits, mini-wraps, and others. Serving as models were mesdames Mrs. David, Mrs. Terence Bell, Mrs. Eugene Blackwell, Mrs. Kenneth G. Collins, and Mrs. Michael E. Dash.

The table decorations and centerpiece were consonant with the theme of the show. The stage display was an arrangement of multi-colored towels, face cloths, shower curtains, and bed spreads. Most of these were in flower patterns with canary yellow, lime, orange, and white as the predominant colors. The theme of the stage displayed was carried to the tables, where the "flowers" idea called for multi-colored face cloths to be fashioned into floral arrangements. Small plants of ivy were placed at each individual setting as favors.

The main topic of the coffee was the March luncheon to be hosted by the 8th Bn. Plans were made for the program and chairmen were picked for the various committees.

Wives Hear Judo Expert Speak on Self-Defense

The Geographical Wives Club held a dinner meeting at the Ft. Benning Country Club with forty-eight ladies attending. The membership consists of officers wives whose husbands are serving in an area where they cannot be accompanied by their dependents.

Mr. Marcel Karles, an instructor of judo and holder of the black belt, presented an informative program on self defense. He demonstrated how many of the articles women carry in their pocketbooks could be used to defend themselves and cautioned them regarding driving alone at night.

Two points he stressed were to lock all doors in the car while driving alone and to remain in the car with the doors locked if the car becomes disabled, using the horn to attract attention.

Five of Mr. Karles students demonstrated techniques that a woman can learn to defend herself, then asked some of the wives in the audience to come forward and attempt one of the simpler techniques.

Following a question and answer period, Mr. Karles offered to teach a course on self defense, which met with an excellent response from the ladies. The classes are scheduled to begin in February, and anyone desiring further information regarding the course or membership in the club may contact the Army Community Service office, telephone 545-4043.

Service Club Hosts Wives

The Main Post Service Club was the site of a coffee held in honor of the NCO Wives' Club by the service club staff recently.

Mrs. R. A. Sebenoler, wife of the Special Services Officer, poured the coffee while Miss Madeline J. Parks, Main Post Service Club director, and Mrs. Joyce L. Horsley, Service Club program director, acted as hostesses.

Plans were completed for the regular scheduling of "Bakery Bingo," a suggestion made by Mrs. Paul M. Long, club president.

The bingo will be held at the Service Club for the troops on the third Sunday of every month beginning in February.

The wives will both call the bingo games and furnish the pastries to be used as prizes.

Except for the sporadic squawking of the field radios, the only sound is the idling M-48A1 tank. A signal is given from the control tower and the tank lumbers forward to the ready line on St. Lo range at Fort Stewart, Georgia. Directly across the red dirt road adjacent to the range, crews from Company A, 4th Bn., 69th Armor, watch and wait for the first round from the tank's main gun. Qualification firing, the culmination of many days intensive training, is about to begin.

"The key to passing this test," explains Lt. Col. Robert H. Luck, commander of the 4th Bn., 69th Armor, "is that individuals must learn to act as a crew."

Each M-48A1 tank has a 90mm main gun, capable of firing a variety of ammunition. A 30 cal. machine gun is mounted co-axially with the main gun. On top of the turret is an independently mounted 50 cal. machine gun.

Operation of the tank and its armament requires precision coordination among the four crew members: tank commander, gunner, driver and loader.

Preparation and qualification are divided into eight steps, called tables. The first seven tables begin with zeroing each of the tank's weapons and work through live fire, both day and night, at a variety of stationary and moving targets. But the actual qualification firing, or Armament Qualification Course, isn't conducted until the eighth and final table.

Put in the form of a field problem, the eighth table demands split-second coordination and precision from each crew.

Qualification firing is built around the hypothetical enemy encounters made during the process of linking up with the platoon. It's a marriage of all the combat skills required of a tank crew.

A high turnover of personnel in the 4th Bn., 69th Armor adds complications. S. Sgt. Charles Dowdy, a tank commander for Company A, comments;

"I completed in-processing with the battalion and drew my TA-50 on Friday; on the following Monday I was on my way down here."

A number of crews work for the first time together on the eight tables at Fort Stewart. For some, it's their first experience as a member of a tank crew;

"My previous work was as a jeep driver. Now I'm a loader," explains Spec. 5 Allen Davis.

But despite these obstacles, the Company A crewmen develop a keen spirit of competition as the training reaches its final stage. A good-natured rivalry adds pressure as they not only attempt to qualify, but vie for platoon and company honors — for best firing scores.

A warm, clear afternoon at St. Lo range turns into a cold evening as Company A, 4th Bn., 69th Armor, begins th elast segment of the Armament Qualification Course: night firing.

A "Huey" helicopter circles high over the range and lands by the road. Its passengers: Maj. Gen. John M. Wright, commanding general of Fort Benning, and Col. John E. Strever, Jr., commanding officer of the 197th Infantry Brigade. After the important visitors attend a short briefing with Lt. Col. Robert H. Luck, the sun is down and the first tank rolls up to the ready line.

Powerful xenon light from a tank on a knoll knifes down-range and focuses on a distant metal hulk. The crew at the ready line lowers its main gun — suddenly the entire front end of the tank is engulfed in a brilliant ball of fire and smoke. The red line of the tracer test round disappears over the top of the target.

Crews waiting across the road from the range voice their corrections.

"Drop it down a little!"

Another round roars from the main gun. The tracer draws a perfect line from the qualifying tank to the target hulk, many hundred meters downrange. The round impacts with an orange ball of fire and a muffled explosion.

Small Arms Conference Slated

The Army will hold a Small Arms Conference hosted by the Combat Developments Command (CDC), here beginning Tuesday. The conferees will look at 50 tasks in small arms development.

The four-day conference is a management tool in the Army Small Arms Program which is designed to ensure that the most effective weapons systems are available to the Army. The scope of this program outlines objectives, tasks and priorities for research and development and procurement of small arms.

Among the goals of this conference are product improvement in the current small arms systems and the introduction of new equipment into the Army over the next five years. Long range objectives are geared to the development of systems tailored for the Army of the future up through the 1990's.

Conferees will discuss the full scope of small arms up to 60 caliber. Also included on the agenda will be such other weapons as pistols, shotguns and the infantry grenade launcher. Small arms ammunition, too, will receive attention at the conference.

In addition to CDC's weapon experts, other participants scheduled to attend the conference are representatives of the Assistant Chief of Staff for Force Development, DA, Army Materiael Command, and Continental Army Command. The semi-annual conference which has been held only twice before is hosted on a rotating basis by the participating commands.

Logistics Center Has 'Hectic' Job When Base Moves

TUY HOA, Vietnam — "Big Windy, this is 55. Drop your external by the LOC and pick up the conex and take it to the mess area. Then wet down so we can get your internal. We also have a water pod ready to go to the rear. Over"

First Lt. David Nainan of Lansing, Mich., watched as the big Chinook helicopter dropped its external sling-load of supplies on the chopper pad of the Logistical Operations Center (LOC) of this 173rd Airborne Bde. fire support base and then maneuvered to pick up the conex container for the mess hall.

Mainan, the forward S-4 officer for the 4th Battalion, 503rd Infantry, explained that the LOC has the vital job of keeping the base and the infantry companies in the field resupplied.

"Our biggest job comes whenever we move into a new fire base," said the former platoon leader. "Then we have to divide our time between digging bunkers and directing Chinooks loaded with sandbags, concertina barb wire, steel engineer stakes, demolitions, gasoline and all the other material needed for the base."

The one man from each line company assigned to LOC receives a firefly, or list of supplies the unit needs, every three days. The next day, he makes sure the company received the food, water, ammunition, clothing and medical supplies it requested.

"Sometimes things get pretty hectic when several companies are resupplied at the time, and three Huey-slicks and two or three Chinooks are constantly landing and taking off," commented Nainan.

He added that his five months in the field helped prepare him for the job by making him aware of the supply problems the line companies have.

During the monsoon season, a 10-day rations supply is kept on hand as bad weather often prevents the helicopters from flying. In addition, Nainan always had an emergency sling-load of ammunition and fragmentation and smoke grenades ready in case a company gets into heavy contact.

Radio Operator's Opus

CHU LAI, Vietnam (AMERICAL IO) — You won't believe where I am. The inevitably constant drone becomes to the imagination a giant boar, growling, a magnificent herd of buffalo stampeding the American Range, a heavy, powerful locomotive grinding its wheels on the tracks of a night-time eyard. The noise in my ears of the Great Lion; we are inside his mouth in this shack. — And with the rat I call him "Peeper." He is a rather small rat. I thought him to be a mouse at first meeting. But with the phones off his ratness is obvious. He talks to me like a rat would, without listening to my part, and all of what he says is rodent talk and as though I am supposed to understand. Rock and Roll will come on the headset from time to time — where from? I wonder where from?

I get carried away and think of this fantastic party of dreams, The Fantastic Fooly Bear comes dressed as a disc jockey. Nobody can shut him up and nobody knows who he is and really nobody understands a word he says. Jibbery - jab - arab - atab - tab. On and on and my night wears on this way like the knees in a pair of pants which are kneeled in too much.

The Rock and Roll is on. It's my name for Situation Reports. The code has stopped, thank somebody, I can stop reading. Man, it'll never stop. I hear it again, about to drive up through the farm country like the chief honcho in his Cadillac — this fast approaching sound. Yes, Rubber Duck, this is Flubba Dub.

Did you know I sat on top of a hill last night; spent my time trying to distinguish the code from the darkness. Cryptographic Blues, it's called. I was cold and a little afraid. But after passing such crashes from shells as I have and ducking the quick bullet's wings you would wonder at someone who'd jump at sight of a lizard. He thought he'd send a message but I told him he was speaking wrong and everyone knows lizards are meant for woods and make mighty poor radio operators. Then after we got acquainted (he told me his name) I DID offer him a bit of my C's and let him listen in, knowing he couldn't make heads or tails of code.

I used to think the code to be waves from Planet Venus. Jagged and visible light-lines like lightning is often drawn. Who was the big guy who held the spear of lightning? I think, too, when will the plane make Tokyo? I hear the purr of his engines come over the radio. It's like Terry and the Pirates. He's good, that Terry.

The shack from outside, amber light through the bamboo curtain. Blue white, through the screen which seems itself to be at the act of adding the color blue. Eleven-twenty, twenty-three-twenty. Man, ten more minutes. Last night I smoked a cigar for the last twenty or fifteen. Man, nine and one half more minutes. The cigar usually lasts ten or eleven.

The rain is a light monsoon tonight. We stayed dry last night. Bee, be ebbee be bbe b. Inside the lion's mouth once again and time for me to be off tonight. I think of luscious sleep. I shall, my man, think no more of Peep. Take the headset, off Code, off and gone with you. My arms jiggle from the incessant noise. Jingle kingle, quingle quick keick.

Maybe I'm acting it up a bit. Because it really is a great job here. See, I'm a musician, back in the world. I play guitar. Believe it or not, some of this jazz that comes across the waves inspires me. Someday I'm going to write some music in some sort of code. I think people'll dig it. I think it'll be pretty hip.

IT WAS WAR, ANYWAY

LAI KHE, Vietnam — The sounds of "Combat" were too real for two 1st Infantry Division soldiers.

The incident happened as Specialists 5 Robert R. Charpentier and Robert E. Rewkowski, were walking through their company area on the way for a shower. Suddenly they heard a couple of rocket-like explosions and a whistling sound directly overhead. "Did you hear that?" exclaimed Rewkowski. "Hit it!" yelled Charpentier. And hit it they did — directly in the middle of a mud-filled trench.

However, it only took a few seconds for the two towel-wrapped soldiers to discover the egg-defating truth. There were no incoming rockets. A television set in one of th emearby tents was blaring out a war program — "Combat."

Looking like Dennis the Menace after a day-long mud pie making contest, the two battle-fatigued soldiers who have less than 40 days left in country laughed off the whole experience. They were on their way to take a shower anyway.

Gen. Rosson Tells Grads They're Pros

By Rick Yeiser

Lt. Gen. William B. Rosson of Plans and Policy Directorate, Office of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, addressed 178 graduates of Infantry Officer Advance Class 4-68 Monday at Marshall Auditorium. Gen. Rosson formerly commanded Provisional Corps in Vietnam.

The students, members of the 21st Co., TSB, have just finished nine months of training designed to give them the knowledge needed to become combat leaders at the Battalion level. In the class were 18 officers from allied countries.

Gen. Rosson's address stressed this knowledge and the proper utilization of it. Officers, he said, are professionals, and professionalism is based on knowledge. No officer who knows less than his men can expect to command their respect, he added.

He also stressed the need for the graduates to share their knowledge with others. He noted that joint operations with other branches and components of American military forces are now commonplace, and true professionals exchange their knowledge so such endeavors can succeed.

Several of the graduates were picked out for special honors. Capt. Bernard E. Muller-Thym, who maintained an academic average of over 95, was named the class' distinguished graduate. Captain Pedro M. Oliva-Campos was named the Distinguished Allied Graduate, while Maj. Clifton R. Franks, Maj. Ralph R. Burr Jr., Maj. Samuel K. Wasaff Jr., and Capt. Bruce A. Jensen were named honor graduates.

Chaplain Thanks ATC's Head Usher

By Spec 4 James Badford

In addition to his regular discharge papers, Spec. 5 Oscar M. Williams, Hqs. Co. ATC, was presented one extra certificate upon ETS today. However, this one came from the chapel not from the Army. ATC Staff Chaplain (Lt. Col.) James R. Barnett yesterday presented Williams with a certificate of appreciation for nearly two years of service to the chapel as head usher.

But Williams' work with the church is nothing new. In college he was president of the YMCA, and state president of the Westminster Fellowship for the Synod of Alabama. And it is in his college activities that causes this Christian - Student - Soldiers' personality to stand out among his contemporaries.

From Alabama A & M College, he received a B. S. Degree in vocational agriculture in 1963. He then received a second B. S. degree from Tuskegee Institute in Adult Education, and now lacks only a thesis for a master's degree in the same subject.

Adult Education, and education in general is not totally college oriented in Williams' life. After 16 weeks of training in Montana, he was sent to Jamaica with the Peace Corps to work with the Experiment concerning the International Living Project. For two and one half years he worked as assistant director of a Jamaica youth corps camp for 550 boys, 16-20 years old.

An Alabama native, Williams is the son of Mrs. Courtney M. Porter, Bolligee. Since coming into the Army in January 1967, he has been at USATC, Infantry, both for basic combat training and assignment to the Finance Section as a senior pay specialist.

Smile! It's Dental Health Week Again

The benefits of good dental health are again being emphasized as Fort Benning observes National Children's Dental Health Week, Feb. 2-8. Sponsored by the American Dental Association and endorsed by the Department of Army, this period is set aside each year to accentuate the high incidence of dental disease in children and to stress approved means of reducing this rate and thus offsetting its serious results in later life.

A dental poster contest has been conducted in all on-post Fort Benning schools. Six electric toothbrushes will be awarded, one to the winner of each grade level, grades 3 through 8. Winners will be announced next week.

Each pupil has received, or will receive shortly, an anti-cariogenic treatment as well as a dental health kit containing a stannous flouride toothpaste, a toothbrush and disclosing tablets.

Both the electric toothbrushes and the dental health kits have been made available by the Community Activities Association.

Dental personnel ask all parents to help their children to observe these dental health reminders:

—Brush teeth as soon as possible after eating, including snacks.

—Reduce the intake of sweets. Sugar consumption is a major causative factor in dental decay.

—Have a stanous floride preventive dentistry treatment yearly and follow it up with daily brushing using an approved stannous flouride toothpaste.

—Drink flouridated water for a 50 per cent reduction of dentalcaries.

—Visit your dentist at least once each year.

Remember, dental health is a daily responsibility all year, and not merely one week a year.

Nurses Celebrate 68th

The Army Nurse Corps celebrates its 68th anniversary here Sunday with a reception at Martin Army Hospital from 2-4 p.m.

Among those invited are Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr. and Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis. Members of the St. Francis School of Nursing have also been invited.

The Army Nurse Corps is the oldest military nurse corps in the world as well as the first women's component of the U.S. Armed Forces. As a result of the devoted efforts of civilian nurses employed by the Army to care for the sick and wounded during the Spanish-American War, the Corps gained recognition and was established by an Act of Congress on February 2, 1901.

An all-officer corps, its mission is to provide safe and effective nursing service to military personnel and their families during periods of peace and in war under varied conditions. Army nursing, as an integral part of all nursing, adheres to the aims, goals and standards of the profession.

The Army Nurse Corps had a mere 403 members when the U.S. entered the war against Germany in 1917. Within the subsequent 18 months their strength increased to 21,480, approximately half of which served overseas. Many were honored by the U.S. and similarly by the foreign governments in the countries where they served. The "Spirit of Nursing" monument, unveiled at Arlington National Cemetery in 1938, is a tribute to Army nurses who lost their lives for the cause of mankind and peace in the world.

In 1939, when World War II began in Europe, the Corps strength totaled 625 officers. By early 1945, 57,000 nurses were on duty in 1,000 Army hospitals and medical installations across the face of the earth. In their round-the-clock vigil, they also provided nursing services during the evacuation of patients on planes, trains and ships. They met these challenges with indomitable courage and calm efficiency—16 lost their lives as a result of enemy action and 66 were interned as prisoners by the Japanese in he Philippine Islands. Approximately 1,400 were decorated for bravery under fire and meritorious service.

Army nurses were the first American women to be sent in support of combat operations at the outbreak of hostilities in Korea. On July 8, 1950, they were on duty caring for the wounded at Taejon, Korea. They endured the rigors of conflict and earned the coveted title of "Front Line Soldiers" battling a war against disease up, down and across that strife torn peninsula. Rightfully, they too share in the fact that only 2.5 per cent of the American wounded in the Korean war died of battle injuries—the lowest percentage in military history.

With the passage of the Bolton legislation on August 9, 1955, male registered nurses were authorized commissions in the Army Nurse Corps branch of the U.S. Army Reserve.

The selection criteria for appointment places emphasis on the personal, educational, moral and physical fitness qualifications of the individual. The general eligibility requirements include graduation from an approved school of professional nursing and a current registration to practice nursing in a state of the United States, District of Columbia or the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico. All newly commissioned officers attend the army Nurse Corps Orientation Course at the Medical Field Service School, Brooke Army Medical Center, Fort Sam Houston, Texas, prior to reporting for their initial assignment. Army Nurses serve in the grades of second lieutenant through colonel, depending on educational background, professional experience, record of performance and length of service.

Nurses of the Army have responsibilities for direct patient care activities, supervision, administration and service in consultant and advisory positions. They instruct in nursing science, prevention, rehabilitation and recovery measures and participate in research projects. They assist on mercy missions and share nursing knowledge and the learning and teaching of languages with other nurses and people of many countries at the local, national and international levels.

The educational opportunities in the ANC are many and varied, ranging in scope from university work on the doctoral level to short in-service training programs. There are courses designed to prepare a nurse to assume the added responsibilities of the specialized fields of nursing, including anesthesia, public health, operating room, medical surgical, psychiatric and pediatric nursing.

The experience an ANC officer obtains within the U.S. and overseas is also a great asset to a nurse's career. The Army Nurse has at his or her disposal the resources of the finest and most comprehensive medical facilities.

The ANC shares in a special way in the national shortage of professional nurses. It has opened wide the doors of opportunity to thousands of worthy young men and women to realize their goals in nursing. Participants in these programs receive generous financial assistance and personal benefits while completing their educational programs at civilian schools.

In keeping with their proud tradition of serving in time of need and wherever help is needed, nurses have served in Vietnam since 1962. Today approximately 800 nurses, both male and female, are serving their country in field hospitals, surgical and evac hospitals, "M.U.S.T." units and in field work among the Vietnamese.

Blessed with a profound heritage and invaluable role in the world today, the Army Nurse Corps proudly celebrates its 68th anniversary.

Soldiers, Employers Like 'Transition' OJT Program

By 1st Lt. Fred Vollrath

Within 60 days after their discharge, 99.2 per cent of the graduates of Fort Benning's on-the-job training program are employed, according to the results of a recent survey conducted by the Project Transition Office.

"The most challenging one to place was a man who needed to log hours flying a helicopter in order to qualify for his commercial pilot licenses," said Jack Neal, a counselor for the program. "We finally found a local doctor who owned his own and agreed to take our man and permit him to fly his helicopter on his rounds of the hospitals."

There are currently 190 men enrolled in the program, learning 39 skills that vary from automatic data processing to upholstering. The program is designed to bring an unskilled individual up to the apprentice level of training, or give him a good background knowledge of his field.

An effort is made to find the men jobs on post if possible but there is no hesitation to turn to local industry and business to find the right slot. One of the best features of the program according to Neal is everyone gains from it.

"If they are working on post they are still working for the Army, so it costs the Army nothing," said Neal. "The only difference in the person is learning a valuable skill he can put to use when he leaves the service."

Those who work off post are limited by policy to 4 hours a day for up to six months. They receive no extra pay for the work they perform, but, they are learning a valuable trade.

"The supervisors of these trainees have been pleased with the caliber of the people they have been getting. Many of the trainees stay with the business or industry they are working with after they finish the program," Neal concluded.

Bill Ennis, a press operator at the the Army Field Printing Plant, is teaching one such trainee on the operation of the Harris press.

"It's a little tough on me at time," admitted Ennis. "By the time I train man to where he is really proficient at this job he's gone and we get a new one and have to start all over. But, its worth it when one is really interested."

His pupil, Vincent Guerra, returned from Vietnam two months ago and immediately applied for the program.

"I had worked in a printing plant in New Jersey for a few months before I was drafted. I liked the work and want to go back when I get out. This program has given me a chance to get six months' additional experience," said Guerra.

The on-the-job training is not limited to two-year draftees or the first enlistment Regular Army. One of the most enthusiastic about the program are profession soldiers nearing retirement.

"It's the best thing that ever happened to the old soldier," is the opinion of M. Sgt. Donald E. Hilker, who will retire in March with 21 years service.

He is currently in training in the Automatic Data Processing Unit and hopes to work in the field with one of the major airlines after his retirement.

Through Project Transition a soldier is given the opportunity to get a firm foundation in a marketable skill to build into a career.

Sgt. Cited For Saving Girl's Life

FORT RITCHIE, Md. (ANF)—Sgt. Randy S. Morton has been awarded the Soldier's Medal for heroism after he risked his life to save a drowning woman.

Sergeant Morton, of Van Nuys, Calif., who is assigned to the 572nd Military Police Company, rescued PFC Constance Hotelling from Lake Royer at Fort Ritchie on Aug. 3, 1968.

The young woman, who has been discharged from active duty, was unable to swim and panicked when she found herself in deep water. She fought Morton's attempts to save her, dragging him under before he finally pulled her ashore.

The citation said, "His complete disregard for himself when faced with personal danger is evidence of his sincere dedication to his fellow soldiers and his country. His bravery and courage are a truly outstanding tribute to the military Police Corps."

Col. Thomas W. Riley, commanding officer, U.S. Army Joint Support Command, presented the medal.

Army's 'Big Picture' Program Keeps Rolling Along

In its spring issue of 1962, the authoritative "Journal of Broadcasting" stated: "It is doubtful whether any other program — network, local or syndicated—can approach the exposure record of the U. S. Army's Big Picture." Today that statement is more pertinent than ever.

The Big Picture is scheduled on 370 commercial and educational television stations in the United States and 44 Armed Forces Television stations overseas. A recent survey tabulated the Big Picture's annual TV audience at approximately 200,000,000.

In addition, an official Department of Army compilation recorded 137,563 individual showings of the Big Picture, from April 1, 1967 to March 3, 1968, to active Army personnel, members of the National Guard and Army Reserve, schools and many civic and veterans organizations.

It was in July 1951, during the Korean War that the progenitor of The Big Picture series, then known as The Blue Badge, had its humble beginnings on one station in the Washington, D.C., area. It quickly caught the public interest and, shortly, stations all over the country were requesting the programs.

To fulfill its command information mission, The Big Picture, through the medium of television, is able to reach both active and inactive Army personnel, National Guard, and Reserve, Department of the Army civilians, veterans and families of soldiers. Internally, the logs of the Audio-Visual Support Centers (Army film libraries) show a great demand for Big Picture films.

The Television-Radio Branch, U. S. Army Command Information Unit, Washington, D. C., acts as the executive producer of the documentary film series. Details of physical production are coordinated by the Army Pictorial Center, which provides directorial, editorial, script and laboratory services.

The Big Picture films, in essence, are factual reports of the far flung activities of the U.S. Army soldier in combat and in peace.

The effectiveness of The Big Picture is attested to by the many awards it has won during its 18 years of production. In its very first year, it received the 1951 Distinguished Achievement Award from "Radio-TV Life" magazine for the film "First Forty Days" covering action in Korea.

There followed in steady success 10 Freedom Foundation Awards, culminating in the presentation of the Foundations Distinguished Service Award. The "Red Diamond," an in-depth story of the 5th Infantry Division, was chosen to represent the United States in the Versailles International Film Festival.

Most recently, "The Song of the Soldier" received an "Emmy" award for excellence in writing and direction by the Washington Chapter of the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences. The film was also selected by the Smithsonian Institution for placement in a time capsule, preserved for posterity.

Some of the entertainment world's most famous stars have acted as host narrator for The Big Picture including Bob Hope, Gregory Peck, Paul Newman, John Wayne, Efrem Zimbalist, Jr., Glenn Ford, Robert Taylor and Jack Webb. (ANF)

ARMY CHAPLAINS . . . In recognition of the countless spiritual services provided the soldier and his family, the Big Picture looks at the U. S. Army Chaplain Corps through history. The film "The Bridge" contains footage on the chaplain's school at Fort Hamilton, N. Y., and some of the duty stations where chaplains serve.

TOPS IN PARACHUTING . . . The Big Picture is producing a film on the United States Army parachute team the "Golden Knights" to be released next fall. Recognized as one of the world's finest competitive parachuting teams, the Golden Knights have performed 915 free fall demonstrations before 50 million spectators in 49 states and 17 foreign countries.

How 'Big Picture' Is Produced

First there is an idea, or concept, for a film documentary. When this basic idea is approved, it is forwarded to the Army Pictorial Center, Long Island City, N. Y., where a contract writer develops what is called a treatment. The treatment may run anywhere from 9 to 20 pages. In it, the writer, after having researched the subject, incorporates the story line, a description of the scenes, the action and the men who will take part in the action.

After the script is approved, production wheels go into high gear. If location shooting is required, the Television-Radio Branch, U. S. Army Command Information Unit, Wash., D. C., coordinates with the Pictorial Center to have a camera crew and director dispatched.

When all of the required location and stage shooting has been accomplished the film editors at the Pictorial Center under the guidance of the project producers prepare a workprint. This semi-finished film with a scratch track of narration allows representatives of the Office of the Chief of Information, Department of the Army Staff agencies, and Department of Defense to review the film and make necessary revisions.

Following approval of the workprint, a sample print is produced. This film is the finshed product, voiced by a professional narrator or guest star, complete with sound, music and any necessary special effects.

Missionary to Speak

An American who teaches African history and African sociology to young Congolese will speak here Sunday. Miss Ann Anderson, a Presbyterian missionary, will tell about her life and work in Africa at the Protestant Sunday School, fifth- and sixth-grade division, at the Religious Education Center, Main Post on Dixie Road, at 9:30 a.m.

Miss Anderson teaches school in a nation that has experienced many upheavals in recent years. "My work," she says, "is to help young men and women step into the whirlpool of change with knowledge and, hopefully, a Christian response to the needs of their country."

Duplicate Bridge

By Chuck Grutman

The above hand was taken from the finals of the recent club championship held at the Town and Country Bridge Club in Nassau County, New York. The hand is interesting in that it offers both the experienced and inexperienced player an opportunity to shine.

Of the twenty-six pairs to play the hand, the best result was achieved by the expert combination of Toni Appel, a Student and Benedict Romano, an attorney. Miss Appel, sitting South, used the little known Michael's convention in response to East's strong two opening. Michael's Convention, which utilizes the principle that if there has already been one strong bid there will usually not be a second, makes better use of the overcall in opponent's major then merely showing great strength. It provides for a distributional hand in which the overall shows both minor suits and little high card strength.

It is obvious that the Michael three spade bid by Miss Appel perfectly describes her hand. Therefore, the 5 Club bid by Mr. Romano is explaines as his preference in the minors. With a view towards the vulnerability, North knew that he could afford to give away six tricks doubled, and still register a profit over a vulnerable East-West making their small slam.

The play of the hand is straight forward and with even halfway correct play, cannot be beaten. East, from the bidding, decided to lead what he considered to be the strongest and safest card in his hand, the Ace of Hearts, knowing that his partner most probably has the king, by his bid of the suit. Of course, the trick is won in dummy by the four of clubs, and Romano now goes immediately after the trump suit by leading the jack of clubs from dummy, finessing West's King. West played low, and North played the three. East discarded the nine of spades. With discovery of the three-zero split, Romano began to develop his diamonds. He led a small diamond to the Ace in hand, and returned to his dummy by trumping a heart. He then led a small diamond towards his hand and trumped it with a low club, felling the King. Returning to the board with a small trump on the jack of spades, declarer then ran his good diamonds until West decided to trump in. At that point North overtrumped, pulled West's last piece of trump, recrossed to his dummy and ran the rest of the diamonds. In all, the contract made seven clubs doubled, the swing hand for the night.

Against normal bidding, or what could be considered at least to be a bit more normal, the team of Jeffery Hazan and Stanley Marcus, sitting East-West, managed to squeak out a bid of six spades. The bid was successful, not due to Marcus' ability to reach the board for a diamond finess, since he could get there only once with the heart king, but rather due to the good fortune of a singleton Ace of diamonds. Note that a diamond lead by South immediately makes the contract, and that diamonds are the natural lead.

It is unfortunate at times that one knows a little too much about the game. Mel Fixman and Tom Stivala, two expert players from West of the Rockies, also reached the six spade contract. Stivala, craftily looking ahead, saw that unless the two outstanding spades broke one-one, or the Ace of diamonds was a singleton, then the contract will make, since only one finess is possible. Stivala chose the more probably course, the one-one split, and went down one trick.

The most incongruous set of bids was a four hearts, doubled contract by east-west, down two, followed by a three heart pre-empt by North, doubled, down five. Remember, in duplicate bridge its not the cards that have value that are important, but rather how you are to play the cards you are dealt.

Scout Drive Scores Big Success

One thousand scouts, Boy, Cub and Explorer from 21 units in the Fort Benning District collected three van-loads of clothing, furniture, TV sets, stoves and household appliances from people on post and in the Columbus area.

The scouts and 28 members of the 10th Aviation Group, acting as truck drivers and telephone operators, worked from 8 a.m. to 7:20 p. m. gathering more than 3,000 Goodwill bags in the area's fifth annual Goodwill Drive.

A total of 10 to 12 thousand bags were collected Saturday throughout the Columbus and Phenix City area and, since items are still coming in, it is estimated that the final total will amount to 15 or 20 thousand Googwill bags.

The purpose of the drive was to obtain materials which could be used in training handicapped persons in a new skill, such as TV repair, machinist and seamstress. After the items are repaired, they will be placed on sale in Goodwill stores in town.

Morrison and The Doors, They Bore Very Well

By Spec. 4 Pete Lis

He thinks his stage appearance and mannerisms are unlike those of Elvis, Otis Redding or Mick Jagger, to whom he is often compared. In private, he is soft-spoken, almost shy, while publicly, he sees himself as a new kind of erotic poet - politician. Frank Sinatra is his favorite singer, Elvis is second. His name is Jim Morrison, known to all as that tight-leather suited, aggressive-voiced spokesman of what many fear and live for as they listen to the "Doors."

"Break On Through To The Other Side," "Light My Fire," "This Is The End," this is the essential Doors concept of rock, lyric suggestion, the insistent and caressing music. All this is in the first Doors album which will stand out as a classic alongside Dylan, the Stones and the Beatles.

"Light My Fire" established for Morrison and the Doors an identity, and assured them an image to which the audience could and did respond.

Strange Days, their second album, emerged as an encore to the first. The theme had already been struck: Strange Days and People. "When The Music Is Over" restates the emotional slash and musical character and threat of "The End."

The third LP, Waiting For The Sun, released one year after their initial arrival on the big sceoe, is like old furniture in the attic. It's just there, as they had been, the same bag and the same restatement. Where once they set about instigating an expectation, now they only fulfill it, as though they were the only ones to be awaited.

Static

They are basically a static group, and their music is always repetitive—they restate notes, chords, harmonies, lyrics, gestures and themes. They destroy one's patience. And the three musicians behind Morrison. Ray Manzarek, the organist, and especially Robby Krieger, the guitarist, continue to construct this thing, something like a web, into which Morrison is woven.

Had the Doors not existed they probably would have been created, out of a need so intense and so American that it overshadows the musicians, and their music.

I'm just bored to death with Jim Morrison and the Doors. Probably more disappointed, because in the beginning, I was there with them. Excuse me, I have to go outside for some fresh air. . . and the beat goes on. . .

GSO Serves Servicemen

By Sharee Eppinger

The Girls Service Organization is the official junior hostess group sponsored by all Armed Services YMCAs and many USO clubs. The group consists of many young girls who devote their time to presenting hospitality to servicemen around the country.

Opportunities available to GSO members are numerous. The group offers a member the chance to exhibit leadership, teach consideration and friendship and share talents and skills. The GSO girl must be willing to attend training sessions and submit, to the rules and regulations of the organization but the personal satisfaction far out shines the demands.

GSO membership is open to single girls between the ages of 16 and 21. Written approval is required for girls under 17. Applicants must furnish names of three adult references to vouch for them.

The Women's Council provides senior hostesses and adult volunteers to assist in supervising and chaperoning the GSO members in social and other activities.

The program office keeps records of each girl's service hours and points. On the basis of these records special awards are presented periodically. The "GSO Girl of the Season" is the member who achieves the best record for the preceding three months as a junior volunteer. The winner is elected by her fellow members from among nine girls with the best annual records as junior volunteers.

Loneliness Tragic for 'Sergeant'

A REVIEW

By Spec. 4 Harry Lloyd

France was almost a forgotten spot in 1962, with World War II seven years behind and most of the action now centered in an Asian peninsula called Korea.

There were U.S. Army troops in France, certainly, but if they happened upon any excitement it was after hours or on weekend, perhaps in a little back-street soldier bar in a French village. At least that's the way it was in the 61st Petroleum Supply Co., an isolated outfit that serves as the setting for the movie, "The Sergeant," now playing at post theaters.

Here, the soldier's greatest enemy was simply boredom. One day was like any other day, distinguishable only perhaps because of the amount of rain that falls.

This kind of atmosphere, the movie suggests, may be more difficult for some soldiers than warfare. The most adversely affected of all is former war hero Rod Steiger, who plays 36-year veteran Albert Callan,a master sergeant.

Steiger takes over as first sergeant of the company, which has been without a topkick long enough to get "a little lax," as its weak, ineffective captain puts it.

Steiger plays his role quietly until he gets the company together for the first time, and then he socks it to them with all the style of the toughest first sergeants since Caesar's day. He shows quickly that he can "run the company" singlehandedly, but that satisfaction doesn't last. He can dominate the men as a group merely because of his rank, but he would rather dominate them individually.

The sergeant quickly picks out a target, a PFC played by John Phillip Law. Law is slender, handsome and sensitive, all qualities that Steiger doesn't have. And those two, along with a pretty young French girl, form a tragic triangle.

Steiger takes an unusual interest in the romance of the young PFC and the brunette librarian. But his interest is not in winning the girl away from the young man.

First, he gets Law to quit his job as a field foreman and come to the orderly room as company clerk. Here the PFC will be merely a puppet for him, he figures. But Law is more independent than the sergeant had figured.

Bit by bit, the sergeant unveils his personality to the audience. He entered the Army at 16, and remembers fondly that he was the youngest sergeant in his battalion. "The older men used to take a lot of interest in me," he recalls. He tells about a "marriage" that took place in New Jersey after the war, but his style is pure barracks talk and more bluff than truth. He demeans women before his men, and then makes a big scene at the PX snack bar when he walks in with a play-for-pay Polish girl.

"Do you like me?" he continually asks the PFC, but the answer "Sure, Sarge," is not enough. Frustrated in his efforts for affection, he takes out his wrath on Law's friend, an often-busted alcoholic who needs only six months before retirement.

For some unknown reason, Law never realizes the sergeant's intentions until their confrontation in a quiet restaurant. When the younger man tries to break away, the former war hero grasps him and kisses him.

Everything is then downhill, and quickly, for Steiger, and the most remarkable thing about it is that he evokes more audience sympathy in his defeat than in his victories.

Steiger's suicide at the conclusion, interspersed by artful cutbacks to 1944, may come as an anticlimax. In a movie as straightforward as this one, is it necessary that the main character kill himself to provide an ending? It's the screenwriter's version of the military way out, perhaps with the reasoning that it is more noble to be a dead sergeant than a busted one.

Fort Benning Theater Schedule

Synopsis

WHERE WERE YOU WHEN THE LIGHTS WENT OUT? — A romantic farce set against that historic power failure of 1965 that darkened the Eastern seaboard. Doris Day, Robert Morse, Terry-Thomas and Patrick O'Neal are at their comic best! Where Were You When The Lights Went Out? Millions still ask: Where Were You?

PLAY DIRTY — The stopping of Desert Fox Rommel in his fighting-fast sweep across North Africa is the prime order of business for the Allies in 1942-43. British Army Man Masters (Nigel Green) is the head of mercenaries charged with stopping Rommel by depriving him of the gasoline for his fast moving tanks. Masters has not been successful and his commanding officer Blore (Harry Andrews) will give him only one more chance to make good. Captain Douglas (Michael Caine) will accompany Masters and supersede him in command of the mercenaries. A fuel dump in the desert is decided upon as the objective and the force moves out to destroy it.

THUNDERBALL — The international crime syndicate known as SPECTRE, ingeniously hijacks two nuclear bombs by utilizing an underwater team of frogmen and sub-sleds. It plans to hold the entire western world for ransom by threatening to bomb two key cities. James Bond (Sean Connery) meets Domino (Claudine Auger) who tells him of a secret channel near the hideout of Emilio Largo, SPECTRE's chief. Bond alerts the Aqua-paratroops at Fort Orlando (of the plot to bomb Miami). The Aquaparas attack and Bond joins the fierce underwater sea battle for the inevitable showdown with Largo.

ENTER LAUGHING — The story of a would-be actor's first brush with the theater during the 1930's. There are a series of frustrations: lack of money, ineptitude at rehearsals, ect. All humorously told. A comedy of a stage struck boy who likes girls.

Takes 3 Trophies

Third Army Leads in Re-Ups

FORT MCPHERSON — The Third U.S. Army won three of four awards presented annually by the U.S. Continental Army Command (CONARC) for achievement of the highest re-enlistment rate among enlisted personnel.

Lt. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, deputy commander of CONARC, presented trophies in token of the awards to Lt. Gen. J. L. Throckmorton, Third Army commander, in a ceremony here recently.

Gen. Rich, a former Third Army commander, commented that re-enlistments in the Third Army area have always been in the winning category.

Lt. Col. W. T. Archer, Third Army re-enlistment officer, was congratulated by Gen. Rich and Gen. Throckmorton for supervising the winning re-enlistment programs.

Competition for the annual re-enlistment awards is among the five U.S. Army areas and the Military District of Washington, D.C.

Third Army had the highest regular Army first-term re-enlistment rate (39.33 per cent), the highest AUS (draftee) re-enlistment rate (3.26 per cent), and with a 26.03 per cent had the highest overall re-enlistment rate. Third Army missed winning the fourth category, regular Army career re-enlistment, by less than one per cent to the Military District of Washington, D. C. (34.30 per cent to 83.78 per cent).

The three categories were also won by Third Army last year. In the first half of fiscal year 1969, Third Army is again leading in these same three categories.

Bell's Wade Discusses Labor Role

William B. Wade, general personnel supervisor of Southern Bell in Atlanta, was guest speaker at last week's Armed Forces Management Association meeting, held in the Officers Club.

Wade discussed the role that labor relations plays, along with business, in developing working labor programs between management and employe. He said this role is especially important in the first line relationship of employe and supervisor, which will further promote better understanding, less dissatisfaction with management and improved morale.

THE FORUM THE FORUM

By Spec. 4 Rick Yeiser

The end of January is the annual nadir of sports, and this year is no exception. The football season has finally passed, and even rehashes of the Super Bowl are becoming stale.

Baseball is no help either. The annual proliferation of spring training optimism is still a month or so away, and last season is hardly worth talking about.

Basketball is with us, but the home stretch is still ahead. The professional standings indicate that both the Eastern and Western Divisions of the NBA will produce exciting finishes, but it is still too early to say for sure.

College basketball is going about as expected. UCLA is dominating the game, with several other fine teams struggling for runner-up recognition. The NCAA tournament, of course, will decide the issue, but we will have to wait a month and a half for it. Until then all we can do is sit back and hope that an occasional upset will spice the action.

Although still fairly regional in its appeal, hockey is producing most of the action. In fact, this has been one of the most exciting hockey seasons ever. The Western Division, in the St. Louis Blues, has produced a bona-fide pro team. The Blues are running away with the division, and have made believers out of the critics who said it would take years for western clubs to catch up with the established Eastern ones.

The Eastern Division is producing the closest, most exciting race ever. The Boston Bruins are the current leaders, holding a seven point lead over second place Montreal. The Canadians, who have led most of the season, have been rocked by the loss of both of their goalies. It seems that the club will have to scramble to stay near the top until their goalies return.

The Bruins, on the other hand, seem to be getting stronger and stronger. Until several years ago they were the doormat of the sport. Then a brash young 18 old named Bobby Orr, arrived and the Bruins have never been the same. Orr, who still doesn't have to shave every day, is already considered one of the two or three best players in the game. A defenseman, he scores as often as most wings and centers, and yet still gives opponents fits every time they cross the Boston Blue line.

If the Bruins look like the probable divisional leaders, there is no way in the world to predict how the rest of the team will finish. Second place Montreal is only seven points ahead of the last place Chicago Black Hawks. In between are the New York Rangers, the Detroit Red Wings, and the Toronto Maple Leafs.

The Black Hawks, when they are healthy, are the most explosive team in the game. Stan Mikita and Bobby Hull are two of the most prolific scorers the game has ever seen, but Hull has been plagued by a series of injuries that have seriously affected his stamina. Mikita is having another banner year, but the Hawk goal, manned by Dennis DeJorday, has been far too vulnerable. Hull is going to play with his jaw wired shut for some time, and the Hawks are going to have to struggle to keep the pace until he is at full strength.

The Rangers are a tough bunch of veterans and youngsters. They have hovered near the top for the last two years and will surprise nobody if they finally make it.

Alphas Dunk 524th In Narrow 29-26 Victory

Co. A, CTC, squeaked out a narrow 29-26 victory over the 524th Personnel Service Co. at Briant Wells Field House Monday night. Both basketball squads had entered the game with 5-0 records.

Co. A outscored the 524th during the first quarter 12-6, but the 524th returned the compliment in the second, creeping within four points to make the score 16-12.

The 524th finished the scoring drive by balancing the game at 16-16 during the third quarter. Co. A's Robert Mason broke the tie with another basket, but the 524th's Mark Lowe scored again. Co. A broke the tie for the final time when Ralph Willard scored to finish the quarter at 20-18.

Co. A stretched its lead one more point before the end of the game to finish three points ahead of the 524th, 29-26.

In a prior game the same evening, the 988th MP Co. defeated Hqs. Co., CTC, 54-20.

Ralph Willard poured in 18 points last week in leading Co. A, 1st Bn. to a 36-20 victory over the 988th MP Co. in CTC basketball action.

Co. A held a 16-12 edge at the half in the opener of the Main Post League's action, then held on during an evenly-played second half for the win.

Coach Kester King's Alphas ran their league-leading record to 6-0 to stay a half game ahead of the 524th Personnel Service Co.'s 5-0 log.

In the second contest, Co. B, 818th Engr. Bn. was unable to hold its slim 14-12 halftime lead in losing to CTC's Hqs. Co. 34-32.

Eddie Williams led the scoring for Co. B with 12 points, but the effort wasn't enough against the well-balanced eight point totals of Hqs. Co.'s Larry De Groot, Ralph Tapp and Jim Mastone. All of DeGroot's baskets came in the second half.

The third quarter was the difference as Hqs. Co. took a 10-4 scoring edge in the period.

The win gave Hqs. Co. a 3-3 record and solidified Co. B's grip on the cellar with a 1-5 season.

The 524th Personnel Service Co. maintained its perfect record and stayed half a game behind Co. A, 1st Bn., by defeating Co. C, 1st Bn. 47-40.

Easone Smith scored 16 of his 18 points in the first half to give the 524th a narrow 22-20 margin at the half. Mark Lowe had seven of his nine, and Bill Ward made all eight of his points in the second half to round out the win.

Pete McLorey and Billie Williams combined their talents to lead Co. C with 12 points each.

The loss did not drop Co. C out of third place, but seriously hurt the team's chances of taking the league title. The team has lost its last two contests and now has a 4-3 record.

Narrow Wins for OCs

In a tightly fought basketball game at the Main Post Gym, the candidates of 52nd Co. (OC) squeaked out over 56th Co. (OC) 46-44 with 11 seconds remaining in a 5th Battalion game.

Halftime found 52nd Co. trailing by one point, 28-27, the difference in 52nd's difficulties under the boards. The second half was nip and tuck with both teams changing leads.

With 11 seconds remaining in the game, the 52nd had a slim one point lead, 45-44, when one of its forwards was fouled. He hit one of the two free throws putting 52nd one basket ahead with five seconds remaining, 56th swept down the floor in a three on two situation.

A missed signal caused a possible scoring pass to go out of bounds and ended the game with the final score 46-44.

In a loosely played basketball game last week at Bryant Wells Field House, the Plowshimen of the 58th Company, (OC), whipped the 65th Co. (OC), 57-51.

Leading the way for the Phoenixmen were Gary Ulrich with 22 points and Bob Hathaway with 13 points. Hathaway was the key rebounder with 25 off the boards.

No. 1 Ashe Headlines Macon Tennis Tourney

Arthur Ashe, No. 1 ranked U.S. player, will head the list of contestants for the 1969 Macon International Tennis Tournament February 18-23. Thirty-eight players from the United States and 18 foreign countries are expected.

The tournament, which was first organized last year, will also feature other top U.S. players including Bob Lutz, Stan Smith, Jim Osborne, Jim McManus, Tom Edlefsen, Herb Fitzgibbon, Cliff Richey and J. L. Provines.

Entries from other countries include Istvan Gulyas, twelve-time Hungarian champion; England's Mark Cox, and last year's tournament runner up, Mike Sangster; and Ken Fletcher of Australia. Jan Leschly of Denmark, 1968 tournament winner, is not listed on the program as yet.

The coveted Davis Cup which the United States won last month from Australia will be on display, and several members of the U.S. team will be competing in the tournament.

Tickets for the event may be purchased at the Coliseum box office or by mail: Macon International Tennis Tournament, Macon Coliseum, 200 Coliseum Drive, Macon, Georgia 31201. General admission prices for adults range from $8 for the entire tournament to $2 for daily admission. Student prices, including high school and college and servicemen, are one-half adult ticket prices.

Allies Kick Off Soccer Match

It's often said that the sports-minded American public has largely overlooked one of the world's most exciting games—soccer.

True or not, soccer clearly enjoys a wide popularity in other countries, and it is probably only natural that some of the Allied students training at Fort Benning are interested in the sport.

Several months ago some of the students began playing impromptu games in the afternoon, and as interest grew, they arranged a formal Saturday match. The Allies met at Doughboy Stadium and picked two teams, one arbitrarily named "Home" and the other "Visitor". Lasting more than two hours, the match ended with the Visitors on top, 7-3.

The team captains are Maj. Hernando Diaz of Colombia (Infantry Officer Advanced Class 1-69) for the Visitors, and Maj. Rudd Henderson of Colombia (Infantry Officer Advanced Class 4-68) for the Home team.

Looking for other competition, the Allied Student Training Division has arranged a match against the War College staff and faculty at Maxwell AFB, Ala. for next month. Other challengers are welcomed, says ASTD.

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

By Bill Kloeb

With the addition of two boats at Clear Creek and three boats at Everett's Pond, the Rod and Gun Club now has 37 rental boats on reservation ponds. There are 12 on King's Pond, 10 on Harp's, 5 on Victory, 4 on Weem's, 1 on Snelling, and 1 on Schley. The club also has 14 boats with car racks which may be rented to use on ponds without boat rental facilities. Keys for boats may be obtained at Rod and Gun Headquarters.

Those not familiar with the post will now find it easier to locate fishing spots. New directional signs have been erected to show the way to some of the harder to locate ponds including Averett's, Snelling, Stephen's, Schley, Clear Creek, Hedley's, Harp's and McMurrin ponds.

The Fish and Wildlife Management Unit has stocked Russ Pond with 6,000 fingerling channel catfish and 4,000 channel cats have gone into the old swimming pool. According to Roy Johnson of the Fish and Wildlife Unit these two spots should be ready for fishing next fall.

Last week 26 twenty-pound flathead catfish were put into Victory Pond to aid in reducing the bullhead catfish population.

The small pool above Russ Pond was also the recipient of new tenants — 23 goldfish weighing from two to three pounds and two grass eating carp each weighing approximately ten pounds. The carp were added to keep down the growth of weeds in the pond.

The Fish and Wildlife Unit is building a 26-acre lake about a half mile south of Rod and Gun Club Headquarters. The pond is being planned as a family recreation area similar to King's Pond. It is not completely filled with water, but has already been stocked with 2,600 blue gills.

For many fishermen, cold weather and lack of prospects are tolerated without too much complaint. But what is a man going to do when he still wants to go fishing regardless of the elements? It's simple. Bundle up and go. The cold does require a change in tactics, however.

Fish, being cold-blooded creatures, are permitted by nature to maintain bodily functions at a speed regulated by the surrounding temperatures. The colder it gets, the more sluggish they become, and less food is required to sustain life. They do feed on a limited scale and can be induced to hit a baited hook on occasion.

Drop your offering in the deepest holes where the water will be warmest. Bottom springs, when known, are excellent spots. Fresh water entering the pond or river carries oxygen and stirs up the frigid water in a localized area and creates another preferred fish location.

Use baits and lures as if the fish were half asleep. . .not so much out of respect for the slumbering attitudes of the fish but to give them a chance to catch up if they so desire.

The Annual Boat Shop opens at the Municiple Auditorium today from 2 to 10 p.m. Saturday from 10 to 10 p.m. and Sunday from 1 to 7 p.m.

While on the subject of boats, fishermen are reminded that all boats used on the reservation must be registered with the Georgia Game and Fish Commission or the Alabama Conservation Department. For its members, the Rod and Gun Club has available application blanks and registration numbers for Georgia registration.

Youth Wins Rifle Award

The NRA Junior Distinguished Expert Award was presented to William R. Gyzen, member of the Fort Benning Junior Rifle Club. The award, the highest attained in junior rifle competition, was proudly presented by Bill's father, Lt. Col. (ret.) Kless Gyzen, leader of the Fort Benning Club.

The Fort Benning Junior Rifle Club has a current enrollment of approximately 100 youngsters, boys and girls, ages 9 through 18. This activity provides rifle instruction and firing through the NRA Junior Marksmanship Program in 10 stages, from Pro-Marksmanship through Expert.

Upon attainment of the Expert stage the youngsters must then fire and qualify on 40 separate targets in the prone, sitting, kneeling and standing positions to achieve the Distinguished Expert Award.

Atlanta Braves Move Centerfield Fences

The fences at Atlanta Stadium will be moved closer to home plate for the 1969 National League season, according to President William C. Bartholmay of the Atlanta Braves.

Distances to the "power alleys" of the stadium—left and right center field—will be shortened from 385 to 375 feet, he said.

"This is only a temporary move," Bartholman said. "Our long range plan is to adjust the playing field and use the natural concrete walls as fences. That would not only retain the excitement of a home run but also add the excitement of line drives careoming off the walls.

"Such an adjustment could be accomplished by re-designing the field and moving it slightly toward centerfield.

"Of course," we also think the present adjustment of the fences will contribute to the improvement of hitting and put more excitement into games at the stadium."

The distance to straightaway centerfield at the four-year-old stadium will be reduced from 402 to 400, while the 330-foot foul poles will not be moved.

Shortening of the distances, Bartholmay said, will bring Atlanta Stadium's "power alleys" closer to the average distance of the six other new stadiums built in the National League since 1960—the Astrodome at Houston, Dodger Stadium at Los Angeles, Shea Stadium at New York, Busch Memorial Stadium at St. Louis, and Candlestick Park at San Francisco.

Average distance to the "power alleys" in the seven new stadiums, with the Atlanta adjustment, will be 378 feet to left center and 379 to right center.

Minimum distances to the foul poles and straightaway centerfield are 325 feet and 400 feet, as established by the official rules for all parks built after June 1, 1958.

Atlanta Stadium, where more than 200 homes runs were hit by the Braves and their opponents in 1966, has seen its homer production decline steadily in the two years since.

Braves and opponents hit 165 homers in Atlanta in 1967 and only 95 last season.

The Braves set an all-time club record in '66, their inaugural year in Atlanta, with 119 homers at home. Opponents added 82 for a total of 201, good enough to lead all major parks.

WAC Basketball

'A Different Species of Sport'

By Ken Sturzenacker

To a man, the first impression of women's basketball is that it obviously belongs to a vastly different species of sport than the one he's used to watching.

Such was the case during the two games the Fort Benning WAC team played against the Fort McPherson WAC team last weekend. Fort McPherson won both games, 50-8, and 64-12.

First of all, the girls play with six people on the court, a move suspiciously like putting 12 men on a football field at one time, a trick almost successful for Kansas State against Penn State earlier this year.

Basketball is a game demanding hustle and complete dedication. Men are automatically expected to be downcourt for every play, going all the way offensively and defensively. Any player doing less can expect to sit on the bench, or be asked to turn in his uniform.

Not so women's basketball.

Two guards and two forwards for each team never leave their respective halves of the court. What sort of spirit is that?

Perfectly acceptable, evidently; the rule book doesn't let those eight people wander just anywhere they want to.

A look at the scorebook reveals another discrepancy between the two varieties of basketball. Nobody on either team is listed as a center, a fact that staggers the imagination of the fan used to watching men's professional and college teams.

And consider the effect the absence of the center on a basketball team would have on such people as Bill Russell, Wilt Chamberlain, Rick Barry and Lew Alcindor.

It takes several minutes of play before the shock of the differences wears off, and the similarites begin to show themselves. And there are more of them than might at first be imagined.

Points are scored the same way, and fouls and the rules governing fouls are also the same.

The biggest similarity to "normal" basketball rests in the style of the individuals on the court and their ability to function as a team.

A coordinated attack with several girls sharing the scoring and an aggressive defense produce the same results they do in men's basketball — victory.

The formula worked well for the McPherson team as it ran its record to 8-0. Three players from the McPherson squad hit double-figure totals in each of the games played here.

As with Alcindor's domination of UCLA basketball, girls' basketball can easily be controlled by one individual on a team. Cynthia Ross carries the McPherson team at both ends of the court, forcing off-balance shots, grabbing rebounds and taking advantage of turnovers, or leading a strong scoring effort. Her 27 points in Sunday's game was an individual high for the season.

But the biggest similarity is also the biggest difference. The girls play to win, as does any other team, but their primary motivation is not necessarily winning; it's having a good time. Victories would feel good, but they'd be hollow if they were achieved without a feeling of personal satisfaction. The rewards are measured in things other than trophies. The teams will face each other again tomorrow and Sunday at Fort McPherson.

Army, Air Force Share Pistol Championships

Army and Air Force marksmen shared victories in winning two individual and two team championships in the International Pistol Tournament fired at the Ft. Benning Pistol Club.

SFC Robert Whitacre of the Marksmanship Training Unit firing in the Rapid Fire contest put together a score of 592 to outpoint his teammate SGM William Blankenship's 587. SSG Alfred Richards of the Air Force placed third with 586.

In the standard pistol match Blankenship came back to win with a 581, an edge ahead of second place winner, Air Force sharpshooter SSG Arnold Vitarbo's 580.

Vitarbo came on strong in the Rapid Fire match setting a new open and service slow fire half-course record of 287 and a new open and service full course record of 569. SSG Merriweather Jones of the Army team was his closest challenger with 555.

Team competition found the Air Force Blue winning the Free Pistol team match with 2,192 to U. S. Army Blue's 2,161 and Center Fire team match 2,347 to Army's Blue 2,343. Army Blue won the Rapid Fire team match 2,336 to Air Force's 2,322 and the Standard Pistol team match 2,286 to Air Force's 2,284.

Major Draws Bead, Wins Regional Pistol Title

Outstanding woman in January's six-day pistol marathon here was Maj. Sallie L. E. Carroll, top women pistol shooter from the U.S. Army Markmanship Training Unit. Maj. Carroll won the Women's Indoor Regional title with an 864-22 and set a new women's record in the 22 timed fire match of 199-10.

Maj. Carroll earned the National Women's Pistol Champion title three different years. She came to the MTU in 1965 on temporary duty and was assigned in March 1966. She has now received a new assignment as an adjutant with the USATC at Fort Sill, Okla.

Once in the WAF, then a lady Marine and now a major in the Women's Army Corps, Maj. Barroll started shooting as a form of recreation and enjoyment.

In 1964, she was firing in a local match in Orleans, France, when the officer in charge of the European Pistol Team was impressed with her shooting and signed her as a member of the European Pistol Team. She then came to the States with the team to compete in the All-Army matches. Subsequently she went to the National Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio as part of the Army squad and won the National Women's Pistol Championship. This was the first year a woman had fired on the Army team and the first time the Army had won the Women's Championship.

She then came to the MTU and went on to win the National Women's Pistol Championship in 1966 and 1967. In 1966 she set her sights on the U.S. Shooting Team and the World Shooting Championships at Weisbaden, Germany. She made the team and in rough competition in Germany placed fifth in the Women's competition.

In May, 1967, Maj. Carroll fired her first 2600 in NRA competition to join the exclusive "2600" Club, an honorary organization for pistol shooters who have scored 2600 or more points out of total of 2700. Only three women pistol shooters have fired 2600 or better.

Drivers Compete In Columbus Autocross

Sports car enthusiasts will compete in an Autocross Sunday at the Traffic Circle Shopping Center in Columbus.

Although engines hit high RPM's at times, this Sports Car of America event is strictly a low speed affair with emphasis on car maneuverability and driver skill.

Each driver is allowed three timed runs through a course outlined by pylons on the shopping center parking lot. Penalty points are awarded for going off course or striking the rubber markers. Only one car is allowed on the course at a time.

Prior to competition each car must pass a thorough technical safety inspection. Tires, wheels, brakes, seat belts, steering gear and alignment and vehicle condition must be perfect before a driver is allowed to register. Drivers will compete in vehicle classes for trophies.

Sunday's Autocross is the local club's second event of this type this year and is drawing drivers from Atlanta, Macon, Auburn, La Grange and Birmingham, in addition to the local talent.

Technical inspections and registration opens at 11 a.m. with the first run at 1:15.

"Unlike most sports," says Webb Sullivan, SCCA Region 8 executive, "these events are held regardless of the weather for similar events are held throughout the Southeast Division of SCCA during the year leaving few open weekends to re-schedule because of rain."

"Actually a damp course demands more skill," adds Mike Scott, Autocross chairman.

The event is open to the public.

'Infantry' Examines Promotions

An up-to-date look at the US Army's officer promotion system, written by an officer assigned to Infantry Branch at the Pentagon, will be the lead article in the January-February issue of "Infantry" Magazine.

The article describes the latest methods of evaluation, and discusses in detail the present officer promotion system used by the Army.

Jac Weller, well-known Canadian free-lance writer, describes the new counter-guerrilla warfare TO&E of the Thai Infantry in another article in the January - February "Infantry."

Weller traces the development of the TO&E from its introduction to a new volunteer Infantry unit to the unit's preparation for deployment to South Vietnam.

A history of the US Army's distinctive insignia, from authorization of insignia just after World War I to present, is offered in another article, written by an officer when he was assigned to the Army's Institute of Heraldry.

A former logistics advisor to the South Vietnamese Army gives insight into the problems of being a logistics advisor in another "Infantry" feature in the January-February issue.

The "Infantry" Forum will be revived in the January-February issue with an article questioning the value of teaching assault fire techniques to trainees.

The Forum will become a regular feature, and concentrate on exploring problem areas in the Army.

Among the articles which will appear in the January-February Combat Notes section of "Infantry" is a description of the French Commando School, a report on mines and booby traps being encountered by Free World Forces in South Vietnam, a proposal for creation of a new combat formation for a counter-guerrilla warfare situation, and others.

Reinvest Profit on Sale of House

(Editor's Note: This is the third article of an Army News Features series on federal income tax matters.)

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Question: I made a profit when I sold my house. Is it true that I won't have to pay tax on it if I use the money to buy another house?

Answer from the Internal Revenue Service: On the sale of personal residence, the tax on any gain from the sale is postponed providing you purchase and occupy another home within a year at a price equal to or greater than the "adjusted" sale price of your old home.

Q. Were there any changes in the tax law last year I should know about when I file my 1968 return?

A. Adoption of a surtax in 1968 was the major change. This surtax will increase the amount of income tax most individuals will pay for 1968 by 7½ per cent. A line has been added to the tax form to help taxpayers make this calculation and it is explained in the instructions that come with the tax form.

Q. My son earned over $600 this summer working on a construction crew. He's now back at college and has a part-time job there. Will the money he makes cost me my dependency deduction for him?

A: Not necessarily. If he is under 19 at the end of the year or a full-time student, he may earn $600 or more and you may still claim the exemption if he otherwise qualifies as your dependent.

If any tax has been withheld from his wages he must file a return to obtain a refund. In any event, he must file a return when his gross income is $600 or more. In filing such a return he also claims his own exemption even though you claimed him as a dependent.

Speakers

discussed American small unit operations in Vietnam. He told of his experiences as a mechanized infantry company commander.

Maj. Raymond C. Jackson discussed the "other War," the civil affairs operations aimed at winning the hearts and minds of the Vietnamese people through a program of rebuilding devastated areas and providing food and other necessities to civilians in the war zones.

Capt. Frank C. Willoughby talked about Special Forces operations. He told of his experiences as Special Forces detachment commander, and of a battle in February, 1968, when North Vietnamese forces used tanks to overrun his camp at Lang Vei.

The experiences of these five officers were of special interest to the Baker High students, especially those who have relatives in the military. The time allotted to the program was not sufficient to answer the many questions posed by the students and the speakers agreed to return to Baker High at a later date.

The five members of the speaking team represent a fair cross-section of the young army officer of today both in background and experience. But there is little difference in their beliefs regarding the war in Vietnam and the responsibilities of the American people.

56th OC Company Receives 3 Awards

The 56th Co. (OC) The Candidate Brigade, received three battalion-level awards in a ceremony held on Jan 27. Presenting the awards for the Best Mess, Best Supply, and Best Day-Room was Lt. Col. Dennis J. Harron, Commanding Officer.

British Liaison Joins U.S. Army

Spec. 4 Frank Truchon

A British lieutenant colonel who wanted to fight in Vietnam was sworn into the U.S. Army Saturday by Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., Fort Benning commander.

Lt. Col. Peter G. Fleming, who has been the British liaison officer here for almost three years, retired from his country's service at midnight Friday. Eight and a half hours later, he accepted a commission into the U.S. Army with the same rank.

Fleming's change of armies is believed to be a "first" since Revolutionary days, when the two countries were fighting each other.

At the swearing-in ceremony Col. Fleming, a 25-year British veteran, wore an American uniform which he obtained from the widow of a close friend that was killed in Vietnam last year.

Fleming had tried for some time to have the British Army send him to Vietnam as an observer or "by any other route that looked promising." He was unsuccessful in his attempt.

The former British officer has been assigned as executive officer of the 197th Infantry Brigade until he can be sent to Vietnam some time before June. He put in his request for Vietnam duty before becoming an American officer.

Fleming joined the British Army in 1943 and served for 22 years in India, Africa and Southeast Asia. He also spent three and a half years fighting guerrillas in Borneo and Malaysia.

The officer attended the U. S. Army's airborne course at The Infantry School in order to add American paratrooper wings to the ones he won in 1949 with the British 21st Special Air Service Regiment. He has also been a faculty member at The Infantry School.

Colonel Fleming has often described his liaison

Mrs. Patterson To Make Award Presentation Here

By S.Sgt. Larry Greene

Pvt. George Burks

Mrs. Robert P. Patterson, widow of the late Secretary of War, will come to Fort Benning from Washington, D.C., Wednesday to present the 17th annual Robert P. Patterson Award.

First Lt. James S. Zieba, of Adams, Mass., a company commander in the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N.C., will receive the award in a ceremony at Marshall Auditorium.

Mrs. Patterson will be making her 14th visit to this post for the purpose of presenting the award. In the 17 years since its inception as a memorial to her husband, the award has been given once in New York City and twice in Washington.

The Patterson Award is conferred upon the outstanding officer selected from among the honor graduates of Officer Candidate classes at the Infantry School each year. Zieba, the distinguished graduate of the 94th Co. in October, 1967, was in competition with top men in classes that graduated between Oct. 1, 1967, and Sept. 30, 1968.

Year's Best

The Patterson Award, which consists of an engraved service pistol, a certificate and a cash prize, was established in 1952. It is financed by a $16,000 trust fund contributed by 120 friends of Secretary Patterson following his death in a plane crash at Elizabeth, N.J., in 1952.

Among the dignitaries expected to attend the award ceremony are William K. Brehm, Assistant Secretary of the Army, and Lt. Gen. A. O. Connor, Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel, representing the Army Chief of Staff.

Also in attendance will be Lt. Gen. Frank Sackton, U.S. Army Comptroller; Maj. Gen. John R. Deane Jr., Commanding General, 82nd Airborne Division; Maj. Gen. Wendell J. Coats, Chief of Information, and Maj. Gen. William A. Becker, USA Combat Developments Command.

After the ceremony, Mrs. Patterson and the dignitaries will tour the Officer Candidate Hall of Fame at Wigle Hall. This building houses the Patterson Room which displays

Parade Leads Way To 'Golden Nugget'

With a cry of "Wagons Ho," a 1917 Studebaker supply wagon belonging to the 2nd Division's Support Command and riders in old west costumes mounting Hunt Club horses will start the 49er Caravan on its way Saturday at 10 a.m.

The parade will form at the Hunt Club at 9:30 to tour the Main Post as a prelude to the annual Daughters of the United States Army (DUSA) 49er Party scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Saturday at the Officers Club.

pictures of all the recipients of the Patterson Award.

This year's winner entered the Army as an enlisted man in 1957. By 1966 he had worked his way up to the rank of Sergeant First Class. He had also qualified as an Airborne (Jumpmaster) Ranger, and an expert in SCUBA diving.

The late Secretary Patterson, born in Glens Falls, N.Y., in 1891, made his way up through the ranks while in the military. He served as an enlisted man on border patrol in 1916, and as an officer in France during World War I, in which he was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action on August 14, 1918.

During subsequent action Secretary Patterson was awarded the Silver Star for gallantry and the Purple Heart.

In civilian life Patterson practiced law, and, in 1939, was chosen by President Roosevelt to be a Judge on the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. He served in this capacity until July, 1940, when he was appointed to the office of Under Secretary of War. He succeeded Henry L. Stimson as Secretary of War on September 18, 1945.

When Judge Patterson died on January 22, 1952, he had served 13 years in private practice and had a total of 21 years of government service, including his military duty.

Saloon," until 2 a.m., with attractions such as a girl in a golden cage, "panning for gold," Maggie's Chuckwagon, a chorus of cancan dancers, cigaret girls, a "wild and woolly" floor show and a white elephant sale at the Junior Army Daughters Association (JADA) Country Store.

Dress for the occasion is old West costumes with prizes going to the most original member of the caravan in the morning and the most original costume at the party.

Proceeds from the party will go to Tot Town Nursery and local and national scholarship funds.

New cribs, cots, toy shelves and television sets are among the things the DUSA-operated nursery can look forward to buying with the money they receive.

The 225-capacity nursery, supervised by Mrs. H. S. Cunningham, now occupies a new building but needs some of the things which will make it more homelike for the children.

DUSA also hopes to award a scholarship to a Fort Benning high school student as well as contribute to the National DUSA Scholarship Fund.

job as that of "a friendly spy. . .rather a double agent. My function was to keep the British Army informed and also keep the U.S. Infantry informed about British military matters."

In order to join the U.S. Army, Col. Fleming had to have his retirement from his country's service approved and had to obtain a waiver on the rule requiring a period of five years to elapse before an officer can accept a commission in another country's forces.

Col. Fleming had been an officer in the King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry Regiment. Because his U.S. commission is a temporary one, he cannot receive credit for any retirement rights or for the time he spent in the British Army.

Col. John L. Waddy, O.B.E. (Order of the British Empire), has been named temporary British liaison officer here.

Col. Waddy, a 48-year-old British airborne officer, is a native of Sumerset County and is a graduate of the Royal Military College at Sandhurst.

Since November, 1967, he has been assigned to the British embassy in Washington where he served as the Infantry, Airborne, Special Forces representative.

Col. Waddy will serve in a dual assignment, spending the majority of his time here at Fort Benning until June when a new British liaison officer is scheduled to report.

Byline Bayonet

What members of the Army Reserve and the Army National Guard were exempted or granted delays when 20,000 troops were called to active duty after the capture of the Pueblo?

According to U.S. Army Command Information Fact Sheet 122, those exempted from the callup were enlisted men whose statutory obligation or enlistment expired prior to December 12, 1968—unless they volunteered to extend or re-enlist; and Enlisted Army Reservists who, upon completing two years of active duty other than for training, had been involuntarily assigned to a Reserve unit.

In addition those who had three or more dependents, members of the Individual Ready Reserve, having served 17 or more months active duty for training and or active duty, and members of the Alaska Scouts who could be identified as presenting an adaptability problem if ordered to active duty, were also exempted.

High school students were granted delays until they ceased to pursue the school course, were graduated, or reached the age of 20, whichever came first.

Teachers or students in college could have requested delay in order to complete the semster, quarter, or trimester in which they were alerted.

Participation in senior division ROTC qualified for delays as did extreme personal or community hardship of a temporary nature, and those having a discharge request or appeal pending or being in an approved delay status.

CASHING CHECKS

I have received a couple of checks from my parents over the past few months. I find it almost impossible to cash the checks in this area. How can I get them cashed?

You are not alone. Most individuals receiving personal checks from parents, relatives and friends, find it very difficult to cash such checks.

The comptroller's office suggests you tell your parents not to send you personal checks any more. United States Postal Money Orders, a bank money order, or a bank cashier's check will solve the problem. These checks can be readily acquired by sending the money and cashing these instruments will be just as easy as cashing a government check.

Identification will be required just as in cashing a government check.

USO

How active is the USO on behalf of the troops?

The Army Digest says year end statistics showed 1,187 entertainers with 157 different shows gave 5,599 performances to an estimated 7,917,628 servicemen in 1968. Officials say the number of groups entertaining in the Pacific area will double in 1969.

Fort Benning Playhouse is to open with 'Roses'

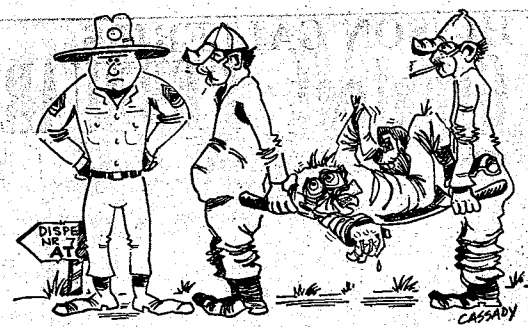
John, Nettie and Timmy Cleary, the characters in Frank D. Gilroy's "The Subject Was Roses," will come to life on the stage of the Fort Benning Playhouse beginning Wednesday at 8 p.m. and running through Saturday.

Robert D. Burgener, the play's director, Johnnie M. Calitri, the set designer and technical director, and over a hundred other people have put thousands of man-hours over the last two months into rebuilding the interior of the Playhouse and preparing the production.

These people have spent a great deal of their own time constructing the set and rehearsing the play, trying to build local interest in the production of live theater.

The Bayonet hopes their efforts are rewarded by a good turnout for each of their performances. The cost is but a few hours of your time and the reward is an interesting evening of entertainment. Make an effort to see the play sometime next week.

The Playhouse is located behind the Infantry Museum in Building 1227. Tickets are available by calling 545-2992.



"HE WAS ALL RIGHT...UNTIL HE TRIED BLOWING HIS NOSE THROUGH HIS MASK."

Services for Military Dependents

The Bayonet continues its series of articles on service policies for dependent military whose sponsors are overseas.

Shipment of Household Goods

To arrange for shipment and storage of household goods an individual should, upon receipt of reply from the overseas commander indicating an estimated delay of over twenty weeks before dependents are authorized travel, contact the Transportation Office for assistance and advice.

Property put into storage must be supported with six copies of PCS orders, one copy of the reply from the overseas commander indicating delay, and a request for Shipment of Household Goods (DD Form 1299) signed by member. A wife or other representative may sign the application if supported by Power of Attorney and an inventory (Standard Form 117).

Medical Treatment

Dependents who seek medical treatment for military facilities or from civilian sources are required to have identification cards. Current Army regulations require all authorized dependents over ten have an identification and privilege card (DD Form 1173).

Those seeking medical care at Martin Army Hospital without proper identification will be counseled by personnel of the Registrar Division, and the proper procedure for obtaining identification cards will be explained.

If in the event it is discovered by clinic personnel that a dependent is in a possession of a card that is outdated, or does not conform to current regulations, the dependent will be advised to surrender the card to appropriate authorities and obtain a current form.

The Chief, Registrar Division, has been designated as the coordinator for Medicare Programs for dependents. The Department of Defense Fact Sheet Number 38 outlines in detail the procedures for both inpatient and outpatient medical treatment from civilian medical facilities.

Each military sponsor should be furnished a copy of the Fact Sheet by the unit troop information officer prior to sponsor's departure from Fort Benning for overseas assignment where dependents cannot accompany him.

The Martin Army Hospital Booklet, dated March 1968, entitled "Clinics" outlines how outpatient treatment may be obtained at Martin Army Hospital. This booklet may be obtained at any time at any of the clinics, Central Appointment Desk or Information Desk, Martin Army Hospital.

Finances

Certain actions should be taken regarding financial matters before departing from Fort Benning for overseas assignment.

The personnel section should be contacted to ascertain the Record of Emergency Data (DD Form 93) is current and in accordance with the desires of the service member.

While at the personnel section an individual should ascertain if he is to carry his financial data record folder; payroll suspense documents; travel cards and addressograph plates. If he is to carry these documents arrangements should be made to pick them up. This is very important since receipt of any pay at the new station depends upon these documents.

Arrangements should be made at the Military Finance Service Office for any new, or changes to existing, allotments the service member wishes to effect. Enlisted members should be informed they will be entitled to overseas pay.

Travel

If moving from government quarter, a DD Form 137, Application for Basic Allowance for Quarters, is required to effect payment of BAQ.

A service member may accomplish his travel by an advanced travel payment, the use of Travel, requests, meal tickets, an diem per-or by paying his own way with reimbursement at his new station.

Any advance of travel must be settled within thirty days after arrival at new station.

Travel of dependents can be accomplished either by travel requests or an advance of regular pay. This advance must be repaid within six months. It should be remembered the service member cannot submit a voucher for collection of travel of dependents and dislocation allowance until such travel is actually performed and the dependents located in their new home.

Only an advance travel or an advance of regular pay, not both, is authorized for any one move.

Change of address should be furnished insurance companies, Finance Center, credit car companies, regular and special charge accounts, and any other agencies which may have a financial interest in the affairs of the sponsor or his dependents.

Written Home Lately?

How many times have you seen the overseas "mail call" where the postal clerk hands out letters until only a few dejected men stand by — those who didn't get one?

This isn't a scenario from a movie. It happens quite often for various reasons. Mainly, it's because addresses have changed by constant moves and the letters are somewhere in the pipeline.

However, let's reverse the situation. Family addresses backs home; seldom change. Yet, there are sometimes weeks and even months when they, too, become dejected waiting for letters.

Words from home bring a personal feeling of pleasure that only the reader understands. Remember, writing is a two-way street, and a letter means love and affection — whether you are 50 or 5,000 miles away.

And, your letter brings you home — even for a moment, or two.

ACS Helps Army 'Take Care of Its Own'

The young Army wife, shepherding three small children through Atlanta airport was beginning to feel desperate. En route from Columbus, Ga., to California to join her husband at Fort Ord, she faced a four-hour wait for the next plane.

The youngest child, a six-month-old baby, was crying for its bottle; a three-year-old daughter napped fitfully on a cold airport bench; a small son was having what seemed like the hundredth tantrum in an hour.

Fortunately, her husband had registered his family with the local Army Community Service (ACS) office before departing from Fort Benning. An ACS volunteer worker, realizing the difficulties the young mother would face, was on her way to the airport to make the family's stop-over as smooth and painless as possible.

The volunteer, who was an Army wife herself, came to the airport lobby bringing bottles of baby formula and clean diapers, picture magazines for the youngsters, and an attitude of helpful friendliness. After feeding the baby and confirming the family's reservations and flight number, she located the young mother's baggage and helped entertain the children during their stopover.

Incidents like this are repeated every day at air terminals and transportation centers all over the Third U. S. Army area as volunteer workers help the Army take care of its own.

Each major Army post has established an ACS office to assist soldiers and their families with problems beyond their personal means of solving. The office staff relies heavily on volunteer workers for helping the soldier's family with the unique difficulties related to military life.

Emergency Loan

In many cases, the office staff can handle a problem by telephone; a soldier needing an emergency loan is referred to the Army Emergency Relief office; an expectant mother living too far from the post to use its hospital is advised of her "military Medicare" privileges; a staff members explains to the parents of a handicapped child the Army's capability for helping the youngster to get special care.

Most requests for aid from ACS arise when the soldier and his family are separated, spokesmen say. Financial and transportation problems are the most common. Staff members and volunteers work closely with Army Relief Society and Army Emergency Relief officials in many of their cases, and on some posts the ACS officer doubles as the AER officer.

Four Years

Although the Army Community Service program is now four years old, it continues to present constant challenges and new problems for its volunteer workers. The ACS office is frequently turned to as a last resort, when military families can see no immediate solution to their difficulties.

Volunteer workers operate "lending closets" of household goods, interview newcomers and conduct orientation sessions, do office work, and help care for children. Sometimes men in uniform volunteer for special projects during their off-duty time. Recently a group of sergeants major here spent several weekends refinishing an unused cottage which is now known as "Hospitality House," a family reception center.

For the Army family with a physically or mentally handicapped child, the ACS office is frequently the agency which locates special schools and treatment centers to care for the afflicted youngster.

Maintaining a small army of volunteers represents a constant problem for ACS personnel, since Army wives frequently leave the community to accompany their husbands to new duty stations. But Army Community Service officers are used to problems, and they know that the military family will always produce enough volunteers to help the Army take care of its own.

Sara Spano Addresses Medical Dept. Wives

A newspaper woman's impressions of many of the world's most exotic places caught the attention of the Medical Department Activities wives as they met for their first luncheon of the new year.

Sara Spano, food editor of the Columbus Ledger and Enquirer, spoke to the group.

Mrs. Spano spoke about her recent world tour.

The "celestial churches" of Geneva, Switzerland, inspired Mrs. Spano. Tokyo, Japan, surprised her by not being the rickshaw conventional Japan, but a modern metropolis with highly skilled technicians. Hong Kong was fascinating with it's many stores and luxurious hotels.

While in Hong Kong, Mrs. Spano had taken a taxi ride to the top of a hill and from this point, could see into Communist China. "The view displays the price of freedom for those who are living on the edge of it," she commented.

Mrs. Otis Bridgeford, president, introduced the guest of honor, Mrs. Oscar E. Davis, wife of Brig. Gen. Davis, commander of the Army Training Center here. New arrivals greeted were Mrs. Trent Anderson, Mrs. Edwin Balcerzak, Mrs. Michel Brooks, Mrs. William Cochran, Mrs. Harald Dale, Mrs. Joseph Farlow, Mrs. Frederick Hayes, Mrs. Mark Hellman, Mrs. Gary Hollonbeck, Mrs. Richard Hockmuth, Mrs. Harvey Magaziner, Mrs. James Nibler, Mrs. Arnold Peck, Mrs. Kerwin Seiden, Mrs. Bobby Stracner, Mrs. Mauricio Teixeira, Mrs. Ruben Telan, Mrs. Gilberto Vila-Balzac, Mrs. Peter Von Rogov, Mrs. James A. Williams, and Mrs. Joseph Yohman.

Farewells were said to Mrs. James Babcock, Mrs. David Cole, Mrs. Chester DiLallo, Mrs. Henry Gaskins, Mrs. John Hill, Capt. Sally McCandless, and Mrs. Anthony Molinari.

Hostesses were Mrs. James Stubblefield, chairman, Mrs. David Fletcher, Mrs. Donald Hull, Mrs. Robert Rushton, Mrs. James Spelling and Mrs. James Walnes. "Food From Around the World" decorated the tables.

Never A Dull Moment For TSB Student Wives

A full complement of social activities highlighted the past two weeks for wives of student officers in the Second Student Battalion, TSB.

The Supper Club of the Officers Club was the scene of the monthly luncheon for wives of Advanced Course 1-69. The 4th platoon wives organized and planned the affair, which featured a lecture and practical demonstration on weight and figure control.

Special guests for the luncheon were Mrs. Wilbur Thiel and Mrs. Arcamides Pisano.

In keeping with the weight-watchers theme, each table was decorated with a diet soft drink can topped with dolls dressed in pink leotards. The floral arrangements were made by the platoon wives.

Mrs. Curtis Mock, representative for a local figure salon, delivered the main address. She told the ladies helpful hints for keeping their figures slim and shapely, and then gave a demonstration of exercises that would help.

Wives of Advanced Course 2-69 met at the residence of Mrs. Thomas A. Davidson for an informal coffee. Hostessing the affair were Mrs. Davidson, Mrs. Craig H. Bolce, and Mrs. Robert Bischoff.

Refreshments consisted of tea, coffee, miniature fruit-cakes, cookies and coffee cake. Two wives were welcomed into the group at the get-to-gether. Mrs. Daniel Cosgrove and Mrs. Mohamed Benzerti, wife of an allied officer from Tunisia, met the ladies for the first time.

A similar coffee was held by the wives of the Third Platoon. The ladies met in the home of Mrs. John Nenamaker, who acted as cohostess with Mrs. Peter O'Sullivan. The topic of discussion was the class luncheon to be held on the Feb. 27. The Third Platoon wives will organize the affair, and used the coffee to plan a theme and decorations and to form committees.

Further planning for wives activities was done by the Staff wives, who met at the home of Mrs. Craig Hagan to discuss the VIP Luncheon that will be held in April. The ladies selected "Proudly We Hail" as the theme for the affair, and selected the committees that will organize it.

In charge of decorations will be Mrs. Johnny McCullough and Mrs. William Massey. The menu and sherry will be handled by Mrs. Donald A. Hare; Name Tags will be made by Mrs. John N. Smith and Mrs. Chadwick C. Payne. The invitations will be sent by Mrs. Craig A. Hagan and Mrs. Robert W. Burnell. The program will be organized by Mrs. John Johnson and Mrs. LeRoy Edwards Jr.

Colonial Tour

Wives of the entire class met for their monthly luncheon recently. The activity included the Colonial Tour of Columbus, which is sponsored by the local Chamber of Commerce. The tour is designed to give visitors a glimpse at the colonial heritage of the city and includes visits to such ante-bellum mansions as "Wynnwood," Springer Opera House, St. Elmo, the Swift-Kyle House, The Cedars, and Elenwood. The ladies were also given a tour of the Springer Opera House. After the tour, luncheon was served in the Colonial Room of the Chamber of Commerce Building. Guests included Mrs. Wilbur J. Theil, Mrs. Wendell Doody, Mrs. Billy Vaughn, and Mrs. Anthony Germana.

Your Valentine Party Can Be 'Easy as Pie'

By Sandra Pendleton

It's February and hearts turn to thoughts of love and a Valentine Party. To set the table, use a pink cloth with contrasting red carnations and candles. For a salad that's as delicious as it is different try Strawberry-Cream Squares.

Dissolve two 3-ounce packages of strawberry gelatin in 2 cups boiling water. Add two 10-ounce packages frozen strawberries; stir occasionally till thawed. Add one 15½-ounce can crushed pineapple and 2 bananas, mashed.

Pour half into 8x8x2-inch pan. Chill firm. Spread evenly with 1 cup dairy sour cream. Pour remaining gelatin on top. Chill firm. Cut in squares and serve topped with sour cream if desired.

If it's a dessert you need, try my version of a pie that should fill the bill.

Pink Velvet Company Pie

Crust: 16 graham crackers
4 tablespoons melted butter or margarine
¼ cup sugar

Pie: 1 package strawberry gelatin
½ cup hot water or juice
1-3 cup lemon juice (2 medium lemons)
¾ cup sugar
1 large can evaporated milk, chilled ice cold for whipping
1 tablespoon lemon rind
1 10½-ounce package frozen strawberries - thawed

Mix crust and save ¼ cup for topping. Dissolve gelatin in hot water. Add lemon juice and sugar. Let stand while whipping milk to a stiff froth.

Add gelatin mixture and continue whipping till stiff peaks form. Fold in strawberries. Pour into prepared crust and top with reserved crumbs. Chill until firm.

A drop of red food coloring and a heart-shaped mold or heart-shaped cutter can turn some of your favorite recipes into Valentine treats.

On Feb. 12, the birthday of a former president wouldn't be complete without the traditional Lincoln Log.

Lincoln Log

5 eggs - separated
½ teaspoon cream of tartar
1 cup sugar
¾ cup sifted all purpose flour
3 tablespoons cocoa
¾ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla

Beat egg whites and cream of tartar till stiff but not dry. Gradually beat in ½ cup of sugar. Beat egg yolks til thick and lemon-colored. Sift ½ cup of sugar with flour, cocoa and salt; fold into yolks till blended; add vanilla. Carefully fold yolk mixture into whites. Line bottom and sides of jelly-roll pan (15x10x1 inch) with waxed paper; grease paper lightly. Spread batter evenly in pan. Bake in slow oven (325 F.) about 25 minutes. Cool 5 minutes; turn onto towel sprinkled with sifted confectioners' sugar. Peel off paper. Cool to lukewarm. Trim side crusts. Roll cake in towel. Cool. Unroll. Spread with 1 cup whipped cream. Spread outside with Glossy Chocolate Frosting. Score frosting with fork to resemble a log. Chill.

Chocolate Satin Frosting

3½ 1-ounce squares unsweetened chocolate
3 cups sifted confectioners' sugar
4½ tablespoons hot water
1 egg
½ cup soft butter or margarine
1½ teaspoons vanilla

Melt chocolate in mixing bowl over hot water. Remove from heat. With mixer blend in sugar and water. Beat in egg, then butter and vanilla. Frosting will be thin at this point, so place bowl in ice water. Beat till of spreading consistency. Frosts tops and sides of two 9-inch layers.

300 Attend Annual Spring Fashion Show

Valentine hearts and clusters of red and white crepe paper flowers surrounded more than 300 women at the Officers Wives Club annual spring fashion show and luncheon Thursday. The event was sponsored by the ladies of the Medical and Dental Group.

At the head table were honorary members Mrs. John M. Wright, Jr., Mrs. Sidney Berry and Mrs. Oscar Davis; OWC Officers were Mrs. James M. Morris, Jr., Mrs. John Ferguson, Mrs. John K. Roberts, Jr., Mrs. Charles H. Reidenbaugh, Mrs. Billy M. Vaughn, Mrs. Robert Carmichael, Mrs. William R. Porter and Mrs. Roger A. Culbertson; Co-hostesses Mrs. Martin Plotenhauer and Mrs. Jack Pollock; and guests Mrs. Paul M. Long and Mrs. C. H. Fletcher.

Fashions from the spring collections of many well known designers were featured. The colors red, white and blue were favored in the casual as well as the young couture look. Spirited fashion was seen in the city pants look in linens and garbardines. The latest in millinery was straw, flowers and the turbins. In the after five group the coat and dress in soft pastel colors was the formula.

The fashions from a local department store were modeled by Mrs. James Burke, Jr., Mrs. Ronald Collier, Mrs. Herbert Garfield, Mrs. Leslie Lee, Mrs. Donald Lundquist, Mrs. Richard Maloney and Mrs. Joseph Tollison.

The local store's representative, Mrs. Dottie Kovaces was the commentator for the fashion show and Mrs. Mary Roberts, a cosmetologist from the same store, was in charge of the models' make-up.

Co-chairman were Mrs. Donald Lundquist and Mrs. Keller Carlock with Mrs. Robert Whittemore as decoration chairman. Mrs. Ronald Malouf assisted with the models.

Lump-Sum Insurance Isn't Taxable

(Editor's Note: This is the fourth article of an Army News Features series in which the Internal Revenue Service answers some of the most frequently asked questions on federal income tax matters.)

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Question: Are life insurance benefits taxable?

Answer from the Internal Revenue Service: Death benefits from life, accident and health policies are not considered taxable income.

However, if the benefits are paid in regular installments instead of in one lump sum then a portion of the payments may be taxable as interest.

Q: I mailed a check to a charity in December but it was not cashed until this January. Does this mean I can't deduct it on my 1968 return?

A: You may take the deduction in the year you wrote and mailed the check. This means that a check dated by you in December 1968 can be deducted on your 1968 return.

Q: The label on the tax return I received in the mail is wrong. What should I do?

A: Draw a line through the incorrect part and put in the proper information. Return the corrected label with your return when you file so that your return will be properly identified and the needed corrections can be made on your tax account.

Editor's Note: In the third article of this series, the question was raised regarding a profit made on the sale of a personal residence. The tax on any gain from such a sale is postponed providing you purchase and occupy another home within a year at a price equal to or greater than the "adjusted" sale price of your old home.

'Dustoff' Crew Aids Mine Team

CHU LAI, Vietnam, (AMERICAL IO) — The Red Baron was mad. His voice jumped from the radio with cold fury.

"He don't talk like that very often," said the colonel's driver, listening at headquarters of the 26th Combat Engineer Bn. Only two minutes before, Lt. Col. Mathew W. Hoey and his chopper crew had been taking a break from a morning of lying over the engineer work parties of Company B.

Now they were airborne, charging toward the mine sweep team which had called for "dustoff," the emergency medical evacuation helicopter.

The ether crackled with terse messages alerting them to the destruction which lay ahead.

"The roller has been blown up; the driver and operator were hurt pretty bad," called the platoon leader. "Dustoff's already gone. Looks like a CD (command detonated mine)."

"Roger. We'll try to find the dink who did it. Get your tracks on the defense and we'll work over the area."

With that, now seven minutes from a cup of coffee, the Red Baron, as Lt. Col. Hoey was dubbed by his men, began a swooping flight at treetop level. He was looking for the position from which the VC had just blown up a special armored personnel carrier rigged with a mine detection roller.

Designed to destroy pressure mines, the roller was the victim of a 50-pound charge planted in the road and detonated from a distant location. Now it lay upside down fifteen feet from a huge crater.

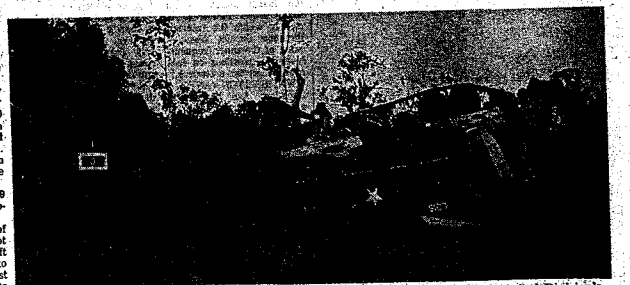
"That bunker at 9 o'clock," barked the colonel.

With only the briefest of directions, the pilot whipped the chopper left and right, up and down, to give Lt. Col. Hoey the best chance of dropping white phosphorous grenades into jungle-grown bunkers, trenchlines or ruined huts where hidden enemy might still be lurking.

With each toss the anger ebbed. The billowing smoke marked targets for the soldiers on the ground. The door gunners strained against their safety straps, leaning into space to spray tracers from above. For ten minutes lethal fire hosed over the battle area.

"Okay, that's enough. Lets go downstairs."

For the moment, combat was over. Action had lowered the intensity of emotions.



TANK FLIPS . . . An armored personnel carrier equipped with a special pressure-rolled attachment for detonating mines lies on its back after being flipped by a VC command-detonated mine. The carrier had been traveling in front of vehicles from the Americal Division's 26th Engineer Battalion as they were building a pioneer road. (USA Photo by Maj. Paul B. Parham)

"You'll have to stay here until we can retrieve the wreck. They want to investigate it," Lt. Col. Hoey told the officer standing beside the bulk. With that, 1st. Lt. Mathias J. Kasper of Monessen, Pennsylvania, issued instructions and SFC Edward Robinson of Mamebridge, Georgia, had his men and the ACAV's (armored personnel carrier with .50 caliber machine guns) from H Troop, 17th Cav., circle and dig in. This was VC country, and the wagon circle was as effective now as it was in the Indian wars.

Company B and supporting elements were spread in three areas along the jungle road. Their mission had been to build a road and get the heavy self-propelled cannons of A Battery, 3d Bn. 18th Artillery, into Tra Bong. This they had done. A "road" inched along the Tra Bong river. But most of the 28 kilometers from Binh Son to the CIDG camp at Tra Bong was a cow path. Years of war and disuse had allowed the jungle to creep back. The VC mined what was usable.

Three bypasses, two dry span bridges and one and one half miles of pioneer road along with the ever present mine sweep had been needed.

"We flew airmobile heavy equipment into Tra Bong and started from both ends," commented the colonel. "We were two-thirds of the way by the end of the first day. Then the rain started (13 inches in twenty-four hours) and really hurt. It took two days to go that last third of the way."

The return trip was worse.

"There isn't any road!" was one soldier's remark.

Now the job was to get themselves back to Highway 1 at Binh Son, and then home. The combat engineer vehicles presented a real challenge in the deep mud. Each of these monsters weighs 60 tons but were essential to area clearance, ammunition off-loading and augmenting fire power.

The tropical torrent washed out or weakened the road, erasing the previous work. An engineer vehicle bogged in the mud when a section built on a paddy dike collapsed. This halted the second party.

Find Nine-Level Complex

Rats Scurry Through VC Tunnel

Heat and lack of air met the tunnel rats as they crawled into the narrow entrance. The floor felt moist and solid, like a slightly dehydrated mud pie under the hands and knees of the 1st Infantry Division soldiers.

The Tunnel Rats, combat tunnel explorers, were investigating one of the largest tunnel complexes ever discovered in Binh Duong Province. The tunnel was never wider than a two-by-three foot crawlway snaking through the earth for 1,000 yards on nine different levels. Trap doors and booby traps hindered the men.

During the exploration, Maj. William J. Westoff, Ft. Morgan, Colo., of the 559th Engineer Detachment followed the progress of the men by means of a Tunnel Explorer Locator and Communicator, a radio device with ring-shaped antennas a foot wide. An engineer carried a unit through the tunnel, and Maj. Westoff tracked from the entrance.

"We're not only able to follow the tunnel," Maj. Westoff explained, "but the man in the tunnel can tell me that he's found a weapons cache and where to place a destructive charge. Then we can blow the tunnel from the ground and don't have to haul explosives through the tunnel.

The men encounter all sorts of danger inside the tunnels. Besides the Viet Cong, there are booby traps, pit falls, trap doors and, in the case of this tunnel, insects.

"I couldn't get rid of this one big yellow and black bug with hundreds of legs," said 1st. Lt. Edward A. Dannhaus, Brenham, Tex. "He crawled along with me for about 100 yards. I was afraid to shoot him, afraid that if I missed he would bite me."

The demolition specialists from Company C, 1st Engr. Bn., later destroyed the tunnel complex with catering charges and C4 explosives.

Viet Cong Swine Lead LK Perimeter Ambush

LAI KHE, Vietnam — The time was 3 a.m. There was no moon. Conditions were perfect for a VC attack.

Suddenly a soldier at a listening post outside the protection of his unit's defensive perimeter froze. The brush was stirring, and it sounded like a large force was approaching.

"We have movement! Company-size or more!" he radioed back to company headquarters.

The movement drew closer, then suddenly split down the middle and flanked on both sides. The enemy must have discovered where the listening post was, and now they were between the post and the company perimeter.

"It appeared that the main force had sent a probe," recalled Capt. Enrique P. Rodriguez, Miami Beach, Fla. "I decided to wait until they were really close and then use claymores and grenades so we wouldn't endanger our listening post with rifle fire."

The men of the perimeter waited. Nerves tensed, and hand grenades and claymore detonators were ready.

The rustling in the brush grew closer. Then a voice. Were they talking to each other?

"Hey, no VC ever made a noise like that" yelled Spec. 5 Thomas B. Hunter, Ogdensburg, N. Y. "They're pigs — wild pigs!"

The enemy met a wall of laughter for resistance. After some quick maneuvering on both sides, the swine moved into the camp, circled the mortar platoon, and exited into the darkness with neither side suffering a casualty.

According to Maj. Patricia S. Ernst, project officer for the visit, the WAC Director will pay an office call on Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., Fort Benning commander, and have conferences with Col. J. D. Kiersey, chief of staff, and Col. J. W. Haley, director of personnel.

Following a luncheon with WAC officers, Col. Hoisington is scheduled to visit Col. C. H. Reidenbaugh, commanding officer, Center Troop Command.

She will visit the WAC Company, where she will be briefed by Capt. Miriam B. Turner, commander, and will be honored at a reception there. She will visit with the enlisted women, and view a performance by the company drill team.

Visits to various Infantry School activities have been tentatively scheduled.

"Col. Hoisington's main interest is seeing her women at work, and talking to them," Maj. Ernst said. "She is truly interested in her women in uniform, both officer and enlisted."

Col. Hoisington, whose father and three brothers are graduates of the U. S. Military Academy, entered the military service as an enlisted woman in November, 1942, in Spokane, Wash. She was graduated from the Officer Candidate School at the first Women's Army Auxiliary Corps Training Center, Fort Des Moines, Iowa, in 1943. The Corps was redesignated Women's Army Corps (WAC) in 1956.

The WAC Director, born in Newton, Kan., is a 1940 graduate of the College of Notre Dame, Md., where she received a baccalaureate degree in chemistry and mathmatics.

Col. Hoisington became the seventh commander of the Women's Army Corps Center, and Commandant of the WAC School, Fort McClellan, Ala., in 1964.

In 1966 she became the Director of the Women's Army Corps.

The WAC Director has been awarded the Legion of Merit with oak leaf cluster, the Bronze Star, the Army Commendation Medal and the French Croix de Guerre with Silver Star.

Col. Hoisington, who recently returned from a tour of several overseas commands, will be accompanied by Lt. Col. Ruth M. Isham, Third U. S. Army WAC Staff Advisor, and Maj. Edna M. Steinback, WAC Coordinator, U. S. Army Third Recruiting District.

Banse-Fay Advances To Colonel

Frederick V. Banse-Fay, the executive officer of the Weapons Department of the Infantry School since last May, has been promoted to colonel.

Col. Banse-Fay was the chairman of the small arms committee from March, 1966, until he received his present assignement. Prior to that, from 1951 to 1953 he was an instructor in logistics with the Staff Department of the School and a student in the Infantry Officer Advanced Course.

The colonel entered the Army in December of 1942 with the 564th heavy maintenance (Tank) Ordinance Company, a reserve unit. After taking his basic training at Camp Flora, Miss. he served as a supply sergeant and acting first sergeant at Camp Hood, Tex. prior to taking OCS here in 1945.

The colonel graduated from the Commanding General Staff college in 1962 and is an alumnus of the University of Maryland, from which he received a Bachelor of Science degree, with a major in military science in 1957.

Craft Shop, Theater To Be Opened Soon

By Spec. 4 Frank Truchon

Construction of two new recreational facilities at Fort Benning — an arts and crafts center and a movie theater — is almost completed.

A two-story, brick arts and crafts center, located at the corner of Sightseeing Rd. and Eckel St. is 89 per cent finished, and a theatre at Scott Ave. and 13th St. in Sand Hill is about 85 per cent completed, according to George P. Perdue of post engineers.

The arts and crafts building, with a completion date of Feb. 26, will house approximately 16 different crafts, according to Hugh E. Cook, Fort Benning craft director. These will include such hobbies as woodcraft, sculpture, ceramics, painting, leathercraft, model construction, electronics, cutting and engraving of stones and metal art.

Cook said that the new crafts building will be the first multiple craft facility in the Army. It will be able to accommodate 800 to 1,000 persons a day and will require an 11-man staff.

The new Sand Hill theater will seat 1,000 persons, according to 2nd Lt. Roger P. Bond, theater officer. It is scheduled for completion on April 17.

The new facility will replace Theater No. 6, which will probably be turned into a classroom. Bond said approximately 20 different films will be shown to some 7,000 patrons each month.

197th Driver Wins Quarterly Contest

Spec. 4 Dale E. Watts, representing Hq. Co., 1st Bn., 58th Inf., 197th Inf. Bde., has been announced as the winner of the "Driver of the Quarter" contest for the U. S. Army Infantry Center.

Spec. 4 Watts, an enlisted reservist from Los Angeles, was presented a cash award of $25 for finishing ahead of seven other contestants at a Command Safety Council meeting Monday in the office of Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr.

Receiving the runnerup cash award of $20 was Spec. 4 Lester B. Morris of 177th Co., 10th Avn. Gp.

The military vehicle drivers, participating in the contest on Jan. 29, were chosen from major units which held monthly competition during October, November and December of 1968.

The contestants, operating their assigned military vehicles, went through three phases of testing conducted by the Center Troop Command which included a written exam, a road test and a vehicle inspection.

A multiple choice questionnaire quizzed the contestants on such points as the most frequent cause of traffic accidents, what one should do when becoming fatigued, the most frequent cause of serious injuries and property damage, the chief reason for reducing speed at night, the speed limits on post and what one should do when entering an expressway.

The Center Troop Command, the 197th Infantry Brigade and 10th Aviation Group host the contest on a rotating basis.

'Cream' Are Gone, Not Forgotten

By Spec. 4 Pete Lis

November 26, 1968 will go down in the annals of pop music history as the end of one of the most successful and egotistical groups to ever come from England. It was the final appearance for the Cream, two extraordinary farewell concerts given at the Royal Albert Hall. More than ever, it revealed why Cream had to break up.

I remember reading the shocking news for the first time, back in August. Eric Clapton, possibly one of the greatest blues guitarists of all time made the announcement to the British Musical Press. It hit me right square in the head, although rumors toward this end had circulated for months. I didn't want to believe it. I was Clapton taking off in "Spoonful," Jack Bruce with his subtle whirlwind bass figurations, and I was the harmonica in "Traintime." Ginger Baker pounded his way into my bass drum with his plateaued sectionings.

But that's it, isn't it? Each into his own thing, but molded into an All-Star band, because it was such a nice thing, and oh that bread! How could they miss?

It's not that hard to analyze. The ego trip was quite prevalent. When they first began, two or sometimes all of them would socialize, going to one another's home or going out on the town. It didn't work. They just weren't in the same grove, so the socializing stopped, and with it another beat of the Cream. More and more, as time went on, they withdrew into their own worlds, emerging for the sole purpose of touring and recording.

I saw them in Atlanta sometime last October on their farewell tour of the states. The Atlanta audience isn't exactly the hippest in the world, far from it, but they know what they like and all the kids hit their parents for $7.50 so they could say they sat right in the front row. I bought a $4 stub and sat near the top, somewhere in the back so I wouldn't be choked with the smell of hot dogs.

Just watching Cream in action, the most deficient mind could sense a certain aloofness, barely held together by loose strings and chords of super changes. When Baker went into his solo on "Toad," Clapton walked off stage, sat down and dragged on a cigarette. Between "Sunshine of Your Love" and "Traintime," they had a rather long discussion on stage. It seemed as if they couldn't make up their minds as to what they should do next. As usual, their sound was superior, but there was no camaraderie within the group and almost no rapport with the audience, unless you were stoned out on the sound.

Cream will live on though, thanks to the medium of records. "More Canned Cream," a two-record set, will soon be available in the form of live and studio recordings made during their final American tour.

Baker, Clapton and Bruce purified their approach to their music as much as they could, went as far as they went, and wound up repeating their perfections, like a snake swallowing it's own tail . . . we now pause five seconds for station identification. . . .

Patients Preview 'Roses'

By 1st. Lt. Fred Vollrath

Patients from Martin Army Hospital will get a special "sneak preview" tomorrow of the Fort Benning Playhouse's production of "The Subject Was Roses," scheduled to open to the general public Wednesday at 8 p.m. and run through Saturday.

"We are having this special performance for two reasons," said Robert D. Burgener, the play's director. "First, we feel this will give a very important segment of Fort Benning's population a chance to see the play that might not have a chance otherwise; and secondly, to give the actors an opportunity to play before a live audience prior to the regular opening."

Patients who are interested in attending can request tickets and transportation through Martin Army Hospital according to Burgener.

Another special performance is planned for the senior drama classes of the local high schools on Tuesday.

"The playhouse has undergone extensive renovation to give us the facilities we need to put on first-class productions," Burgener said as he pointed out the improvements.

A new stage has been built out of scrap lumber from old bleachers. Backdrops were constructed out of materials salvaged from last year's Halloween Carnival, and a chandelier was constructed from plywood and castings from used 106mm recoilless rifle shells.

"We keep costs down by making maximum use of material available to us on the post," said Burgener. "We got our props for this play from the hospitality house and quartermaster furniture."

Five hundred manhours have gone into "Roses," Frank D. Gilroy's 1965 pulitzer prize-winning play about a couple living in the Bronx in 1946 whose son has just returned home from the war.

Local talent supplied the entire cast. The mother is played by S.Sgt. Betty Farmer, a photo-journalist with the Center Troop Command. The father is played by Chap. (Capt.) Jack D. Moyer, assigned to Martin Army Hospital, and Pfc. Stan Cattlet, a company clerk at the 6th Stu. Bn., plays the son.

(Anyone interested in obtaining tickets or further details should call 545-2992.)

Buddy Morrow Band Plays at Supper Club

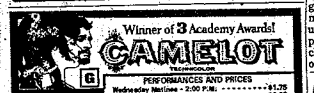
Morrow and his orchestra is one of the few band attractions to become big draws in hotels, supper clubs, radio, television, and records in the last few years.

The Morrow Band features a mellow and resonant sound — with little stridency and muted brass. They specialize in show tunes and swing.

Buddy handles four saxophones, three trombones (in addition to his own) three trumpets, a bass, piano and drums. Two vocalists afford a contrast for those who come to listen rather than to dance.

After "Night Train" the band followed with a string of hit records that included "One Mint Julep," "I Don't Know," and "Hey, Mrs. Jones."

Morrow has always insisted that a band must have versatility. That is why his orchestra is organized along lines that give it the elasticity to meet almost every musical situation. They can play college proms one night and smart country clubs the next, elegant hotel rooms and popular ballrooms, or a two-hour jazz concert for non-dancing audiences. Their repertoire embraces the whole spectrum of popular music from early dixieland, rhythm and blues, and intricate ballads to full progressive.



South Pole Base

The U.S. Naval Support Force, Antarctica, the Navy's logistic support command for United States science programs in the Antarctic, was established Feb. 1, 1955. It has always been commanded by a rear admiral. The present commander is Rear Admiral J. L. Abbott Jr.

Girl Scouts Plan Drive

The Girl Scouts estimate a for the annual Scout Cookie sale set to begin February $2,000 increase in sales over last year's figure of $8,000.21.

Four-hundred fifty Girl Scouts will be selling cookies from door to door with the cadets and senior scouts selling from booths in the commissary and PX.

Although the Brownie scouts aren't selling cookies, they will be making and displaying posters around Main Post.

For the next couple of weeks the scouts will be taking advance orders for the butter mint, sandwich, and peanut butter cookies.

Mrs. Arthur Clifford, the Girl Scout chairman for Fort Benning says the funds collected from this drive will go to the troops and the Concharty council fund, the Local Council for Girl Scouts of the U. S. This year the council is donating its share to the Senior Opportunity fund. This fund helps the girls attend scout jamborees, travel and learn about scouting nationally and internationally.

The Girl Scouts here are sponsored by the 197th Infantry Brigade including the 72nd Engr. Co., 197th Support Bn., Headquarters, and the USAIC Scout Dog Detachment.

Co. B Upsets Alphas

THE FORUM
THE LOBBY

By Rick Yeiser

Poor Paul Richards. He thinks that the baseball players are bluffing when they say they will boycott spring training if their pension demands are not met. He probably thought that Joe Namath was bluffing too.

Paul, they are not bluffing, and the sooner you and the rest of the baseball magnates realize it, the better. This is part two of the twentieth century, and hopefully it is coming to pass that people are becoming more important than institutions. Baseball, wonderful institution that it is, is no exception. It is the players as individuals who make the tradition of the game, and who provide us with entertainment every summer.

Without them there would be no Hall of Fame, no Astrodome, no World Series, or any of the other things that have made the game our "National Pastime." That you and the rest of the baseball brass consider their demands to be heresy indicates to me that your allegiance is to the institution and not the individuals who comprise it. Please wake up before it is too late.

Yale, that bastion of Ivy League intellectualism, has suddenly shed its ivy and bared its fangs. The result: old myths and revered institutions have joined the Edsel. Cornell and Columbia helped Yale in this balloon bursting which propelled the Ivy League back into big time football status.

What happened was that the Ivy League had two players drafted in the first round of the professional football draft, and several others in later rounds. Marty Domres, Columbia's classy quarterback, and Calvin Hill, Yale running back, were first round picks.

Both selections surprised the college football world and the legion of sportswriters that follow it. As far as they were concerned Yale was home of William Sloan Coffin, and Columbia an embattled fortress in West Harlem, but no more. Football players came from the Big Ten, the Big Eight, the Pacific Eight, and the SEC.

Then, to add insult to injury, more Ivy League players were selected in later rounds. Brian Dowling, Yale's highly publicized quarterback, went in a middle round, giving Yale as many draftees as the football farm in Tuscaloosa. Cornell and Dartmouth also added players to the list of potential pros.

Other than the Ivy tinge, the draft went pretty much as expected. Mr. Simpson, of course, went first, and was followed by many of the names that dotted the All-American teams. Notable exceptions were Terry Hanratty and Steve Douglass, two concensus All-Americans at quarterback, who did not get selected until the second round.

Several teams seemed to have come out better than others. The Buffalo Bills had the worst offensive backfield in pro football last year. The addition of Simpson and Bill "Earthquake" Enyard should give them one of the best next year, and raise them to the level of a contender for the AFL Title.

The Atlanta Falcons filled two of their weakest spots. George Kunze will give the offensive line a much-needed boost, and Paul Gipson should give the Falcons a much better running attack next season.

The San Francisco 49ers and the Boston Patriots both picked up desperately needed receivers. The 49ers in John Brodie and Cliff McNeil had two-thirds of a fine passing game last year. With the addition of Ted Kwalick at right end the 49ers might rival the Jets as the best passing team in football. The Patriots need more than a fine receiver to become a contender, but Ron Sellers should make them a much stronger team next year.

The L. A. Rams also got rich. They had three first round choices and didn't waste them. Larry Smith will give them a much needed runner. Ram receiving ranks were so thin last season that Wendell Tucker, an AFL castoff, ended up starting the last three games. The addition of Jim Seymour should solve this problem in the future. The draft may have put the Rams into the Super Bowl.

By Spec. 4 Ken Sturzenacker

An upset victory for Company B, 1st Bn., climaxed the final game of Center Troop Command's Main Post Basketball League. Previously unbeaten Company A, 1st Bn., dropped its record to 7-1 in the 44-38 loss, Monday night.

TOPS TEAMMATES. . .Maj. John Foster wins championship aggregate and individual honors at the Murray State University Gallery Match, Louisville, Ky. Maj. Foster tallied a 798.

Cicero Moore's 18 points led the Company B attack, aided by Bobby Reed and Willard Crowley, both of whom had six points.

Taking an early lead, Company B stayed on top each quarter, with at 24-19 halftime margin. Company A was only able to pull to within three points, 34-31, at the end of the third quarter.

The win gave Company B a 5-3 season mark.

In Monday evening's first game, Company A, 818th Engineer Battalion, evened its final record at 4-4 by defeating CTC's Headquarters Company, 42-34.

The loss dropped Headquarters Company to a final 5-3 record.

Otis Martin scored eight of his 14 points and Joe Bennes had six in leading Company A to a 20-14 halftime margin. Curtis Robinson had eight points to strengthen the second half scoring.

In the three games played last week, the 524th Personnel Service Company put on its strongest defensive show of the season, holding the 988th Military Police Company to a 22-4 halftime spread.

The 43-32 final score gave the 524th a 7-1 season mark and dropped the 988 to an even 4-4 record.

High point man for the losers was John Rowland with eight.

Thursday's first game was also a defensive contest, ending in a 36-34 victory for Company B, 818th Engineer Bn. The score at the half was 24-2. Company A of the 818th played the defensive strongmen in the second half, scoring 16 while allowing only four. But the catch up attempt wasn't enough.

The loss lowered Company's A's record to 4-4, while the win boosted the Company B log to 3-5.

Two 1st Battalion teams clashed in the other contest Thursday night at the Briant Wells Field House in a game also marked by strong defensive strategy.

Company B held Company C to a 14-8 mark at halftime, then poured on the offensive efforts to win 35-14.

Reed and Stone had 10 points each, and received strong support from Moore's eight point effort in leading Company B to the win in posting a 5-3 season.

Company's C loss ended a 4-4 season.

Rifle Marksmen Sweep Murray State Matches

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—The U.S. Army International Rifle Team from Fort Benning's Marksmanship Training Unit topped all competitors in the Murray State University Gallery Match.

Maj. John Foster led his teammates to win the championship aggregate with a 798. He was closely followed by Maj. Lones Wigger, 797; M.Sgt. William Krilling, 796; and Lt. John Writer, 795.

The individual position matches were sharply contested. In the Prone Match four marksmen tied for first place. Maj. Foster along with his wife, M.Sgt. Krilling and Lt. Nels Nelson all fired a perfect 200 with 20 shots in the X-ring.

Lt. Philip Bahrman topped the Kneeling Match with a 200-19x. The Sitting Match was shared by Maj. Wigger and Mrs. Foster who both fired 200 with 19 shots in the X-ring. Maj. Foster took the Standing or Offhand match with a 198.

The two-man team match was won by Maj. Foster and M.Sgt. Krilling. They tallied 1,394 to outpoint their nearest rivals and teammates, Maj. Wigger and Lt. Writer with 1,592.

Main Post Tournament Champs To Face Harmony Church League

The 1969 Center Troop Command Basketball Tournament will be held Feb. 10, 11 and 12 to determine the command championship.

The best of three series will pit the Main Post League winner against the Harmony Church League winner.

The first game will be played Monday in the Briant Wells Field House on Main Post. Starting time is 7 p.m.

The second game is set for the Harmony Church Field House Tuesday at 7 p.m., with the third game, if necessary, slated for Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the Harmony Church Field House.

Semi-final competition settled the title holders in the Main Post League last night as the 524th Personnel Service Company and Company A, 1st Bn., tangled in a 7 p.m. game.

The Harmony Church League playoff is scheduled for 6 p.m. tonight in the Harmony Church Field House. The two teams leading the league with identical 6-1 records Feb. 4, two days before the end of the league's regular season, were the 586th Engineer Company (Float Bridge) and Company D, 818th Engr. Bn.

The CTC playoffs will determine the two teams to represent CTC in the post-wide tournament to be held Feb. 17-25. Both teams in the CTC tournament will take part in the post championship.

Trophies will be awarded to the top two Center Troop Command teams in next week's championship tournament.

Volley Clinic Begins Feb. 12

A Volleyball Clinic will be held from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. Feb. 12, 13 and 14 at the Harmony Church Fieldhouse.

Sponsored by Special Services, the clinic is designed to promote better company-level competition within the major command by training coaches and officials in techniques of playing and officiating.

Each company-size unit is encouraged to send at least one representative. Names of selected individuals are to be submitted to Special Services Officer, ATTN: Sports Director.

The clinic was formerly scheduled for Briant Wells Fieldhouse.

Ulrich's Free Throws Tip Game to 55th Co.

Former collegiate basketball standout Gary Ulrich hit two free throws in the final seconds to climax a rally and ice a 50-47 victory by 55th Co. (OC) over 50th Co. Jan. 19, at Briant Wells Field house. The victory placed the 55th Co. record at 4-0.

For three quarters 55th Co. trailed, but pulled into the lead early in the fourth period when playmaker Ed McIntyre stole a pass and scored. After 55th had moved into a 48-44 lead, 50th staged a comeback of its own to trail by one point with two minutes remaining.

In the final two minutes neither team could negotiate a field goal, but with 33 seconds left, 6-foot-6-inch pivotman Ulrich sank two clutch free throws to give 55th the win.

Ulrich paced the scoring for 55th with his 16 points, followed closely by teammate Bob Hathaway who scored 13 points.

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

By BILL KLOEB

The largemouth bass is the universal fish most sought by anglers throughout the continental United States and southern Canada. The largemouth is also fast becoming the most popular fresh water fish in Hawaii and Puerto Rico. This all-American is missing only in Alaska.

Largemouth are readily identified by the position of the jaw joint. It extends well back of the eye, whereas on the smallmouth and other type bass it is below or forward of the eye.

Feeding habits range from finicky to voracious but even a fully fed largemouth often can be goaded into striking out of sheer orneriness. This dog-in-the-manger trait has put many lunker on den walls.

Largemouth tend to dip to deeper levels during daylight hours, lying off a point or dropoff. In shallower lakes look for them in the densest aquatic growth — lily pads or weed beds.

Experienced fishermen have found that old stumps, fallen trees and bridge supports are productive targets for their lures. In shallow lakes crawl a weedless worm or spinner garnished with a strip of pork rind across a bed of water lilies or weed bed.

There are three ways of fishing heavy cover: putting the lure in open pockets and along the edges, working over submerged growth, and dredging it right on through. All three methods require different techniques and generally different lures, and not all of them are likely to work on a given day.

The edge and pocket fisherman needs accuracy because he's likely to be casting nonweedless lures. Slow moving and splashy stuff is likely to attract fish from a considerable distance, even if they can't see the bait for the vegetation. Working a weed bed from far out may waste a lot of time over barren water. A raking retrieve nearly parallel to the edge is better.

The most delicate heavy cover fishing is done over submerged vegetation because the fisherman can't see exactly what he is doing. In fishing a surface lure, almost any kind will work, but when you want to fish underwater grass and weed beds with submerged lures, it's best to use one that is about the same weight as the water it displaces. It will hover.

Wigglers and weedless spoons go either over the top or right through the growth. Throw a wiggler into the heavy stuff, let it sink slightly then raise your rod tip and speed up the reeling. The lure comes to the surface and the spinner makes a surface splutter. When the lure comes to what looks like a pocket in the grass, lower the rod and let the lure drop toward the bottom, speed up reeling then surface the lure again with the lift of the tip.

While the largemouth inhabits waters all over the United States, their growth varies in different areas. In south Georgia and Florida fisherman brag about 12-to-16-pounders with occasional lunkers going to 18 or 19 pounds. In the central south a 10-pounder merits headines and north of the Ohio River a six-or eight-pounder is considered a prime speciman. This is attributed to the longer yearly growing period in the south.

The official record largemouth was taken from Montgomery Lake, Ga., by George W. Perry on June 2, 1932. His prize weighed 22 pounds, four ounces, was 32 1-2 inches long and had a girth of 28 inches. Three of the five species of fresh water bass records have been taken in Georgia or Alabame. A six and a half redeye was landed at Halawakee Creek, Ala., March 24, 1967, and an eight-pound eight-ounce spotted bass was taken from Smith Lake, Ala., May 3, 1968.

49er Sees Advancement of AFL

By PFC Chester Hilburn

"The American Football League will never have to take a back seat to the National Football League again as far as great personnel is concerned," commented Pvt. Tommie Lee Gray, a seventh round draft choice of the San Francisco 49er's last year. The Super Bowl victory by the New York Jets on Jan. 11, plus the fact the AFL won more pre-season exhibition games from the NFL, seems to prove the trend, he added.

Pvt. Gray, Birmingham, Ala., is presently assigned to Co. B, 4th Bn., 1st Bde, USATC, as a basic trainee.

The former Morehead State University star halfback was analyzing the Super Bowl game in which the heavily-favored Baltimore Colts were stunned by the New York Jets, 16-7.

"The Baltimore Colts and New York Jets were two evenly matched football giants that met for the world championship. The Jets, however, were ready that day — they wanted the victory a little more, so they hit a little harder and played a little harder. They had to prove something to themselves and the rest of the football world."

Pvt. Gray was a flanker last season for the 49er's before being called to active duty Dec. 2. The 175 pounder played mainly where his terrific speed could be utilized.

While playing for Morehead State University, Morehead, Ky., during 1964-67, he gained wide recognition for his blazing speed and quick moves. In 1966 Gray was named the Ohio Valley Conference's "Player of the Year." In 1967, the tailback was presented the Morehead State University's "President's Trophy," signifying him as the school's best athlete in all fields. During the same year Gray was clocked at 9.3 seconds through the 100-yard dash in the Ohio relays.

Commenting on the Green Bay Packers disappointing showing for the past season, Gray said "the team with the most breaks will usually win, especially in a balanced league such as the NFL. The breaks didn't go for the Packers last year. I don't think they are "washed up" — with a little momentum they could come back again next season.

As far as the prospects for his former team, the 49er's, Gray added, "San Francisco is in a rebuilding process, now, with their future hopes lying in a number of new promising personnel. They have a new head coach and staff who have instituted an entirely different offense and defense. Once the players and coaches begin to jell together, they should start to move."

Pvt. Gray believes that team spirit and morale can have a definite affect on the outcome of game.

"A team is like a machine — one man lays down and the whole planning and operation breaks down. A player with a negative outlook can infect the whole squad with his attitude. A lapse by a player on any one down can mean a game."

Incentive Plan Rewards Thinkers

By Spec. 4 Frank Trichon

Up to $25,000 in cash awards is available to civilian and military people at Fort Benning, if they are willing to put on the "thinking cap."

Last year, 1,943 persons here did just that. This group included 780 civilian and 1,163 military personnel who made suggestions through the Incentive Awards Program. The result of this was that they earned $27,600 in cash awards for work improvements that have saved the Army an estimated $2,530,000 a year.

Eleven individuals here were placed on the Third Army Honor Roll for suggestions, each of which will save the government $10,000 or more per year.

Out of a total of $2,145,360 saved by 27 members on this honor roll, $1,630,891 (76 per cent of the total) was achieved by the 11 persons from Fort Benning.

Of all the people who made suggestions at Fort Benning last year, Lt. Col. (ret.) John Mabry achieved the highest savings for the Army. He was formerly chairman of the Artillery Committee of The Infantry School Brigade and Battalion Operations Department.

Mabry's proposal of the use of the M-31 14.5mm artillery training weapon in place of 105mm rounds in the post's artillery familiarization program will save the Army an estimated $1,187,400 per year. The suggestion neted him a cash award of $1,000.

As a result of suggestions made here, Fort Benning received the outstanding unit award of fiscal 1968 for having the best cost reduction program throughout the Department of the Army. On Oct. 8, 1968, President Johnson presented Maj. Gen. John M. Wright a certificate of merit for this achievement.

According to John H. Schultz, executive secretary of the Incentive Awards Committee, it is extremely simple to make a suggestion. Schultz said, "First of all a person has to stop and think about the existing methods in an activity. If he recognizes an operation which is slowing him or another person down, or if he sees how a machine can be bettered, he then looks for ideas that will improve these operations or machines."

Schultz stressed that the person making a suggestion should look particularly for ways of "improving safety, health, or welfare and for methods of reducing costs by lessening man-hours, mileage or equipment use."

The awards committee secretary added that the next step is for the person to reduce his idea to writing, using the Army Suggestion Form, DA Form 1045, which is available at all units. He should then give the form to his supervisor for processing, evaluation and submission or send it directly to the Incentive Awards Committee, Civilian Personnel Office.

Schultz continued, "The idea is then logged in and proprietary rights on it are established. After a title is assigned, the idea is sent to the office of primary interest. If the office has the authority to adopt the suggestion and thinks that it has merit, then that office can begin implementing the idea at once."

According to Schultz, the office to which the suggestion is sent can either adopt the idea, reject it, or if the office does not have the authority to adopt it and yet recommends adoption, the suggestion is sent to a higher headquarters.

The types of suggestions submitted to the Incentive Awards Office vary widely. Schultz stated, "They encompass such proposals as the use of inexpensive training rounds in lieu of expensive artillery ammunition; the use of printed forms which speed up preparation time and save man hours; and recommendations for changes in traffic regulations."

An Open Letter From The General

DEPARTMENT OF THE ARMY
HEADQUARTERS UNITED STATES ARMY INFANTRY CENTER
FORT BENNING, GEORGIA 31905

ATICP 21 JAN 1969

SUBJECT: The Army Suggestion Program

All Fort Benning Personnel

1. A special campaign for the promotion of the Army Suggestion Program has been announced by Department of the Army and will be conducted during the second half of Fiscal Year 1969 at Fort Benning. The slogan to emphasize this promotional program is "PROGRESS - 1969."

2. Statistics have shown that emphasis on increased participation in the suggestion program results in increased measurable benefits in the form of tax dollar savings at Fort Benning and throughout Department of the Army. This increased emphasis over the past year has developed five times the tangible savings above Fiscal Year 1967 as shown below:

	Number of Suggestions	Tax Dollar Savings
Fiscal Year 1967	1088	$522,144
Fiscal Year 1968	1943	$2,530,528

3. In order to guide the efforts of all personnel in the submission of specific, positive and worthwhile suggestions, Directors and Commanders will identify and publicize problems in functional and operational areas most clearly allied to mission accomplishments.

4. I anticipate a most successful campaign during this second half of Fiscal Year 1969 and am confident that your response will produce measurable dollar benefits for Fort Benning in excess of last year's record breaking savings.

MAKE-BELIEVE CONG LADY 'HARASSES' VIET-BOUND SOLDIERS

Realism Can Be Good Looking

By Dennis Wootan

Twice a month, troops who have received orders for assignment to the Republic of Vietnam are familiarized with what they might expect to experience while "in country."

Though a four-day period is hardly enough to prepare persons for all they may experience during a year in Vietnam, the 1st Bn., 58th Inf. tries to make it real enough to leave a lasting impression.

The 58th, a 197th Inf. Bde. unit in charge of RVN training for all of Fort Benning, recently added a special attraction to the schedule of the Vietnam familiarization course.

As the convoy departs from Theater 5 in the Harmony Church area carrying the troops participating in the RVN training, it passes a series of signs advertising a roadside business.

The business, a car wash and stand selling Crations and cokes, is cared for by a lovely young lady dressed in Oriental clothes. She stops the convoy, and goes from truck to truck, trying to sell soft drinks to the troops.

Obviously a part of the training, the young lady is a WAC lieutenant, whose task it is to see how long she can keep the convoy immobile in a test of the command structure that has been set up for the RVN class.

As the trucks pull away, she tosses a grenade in one of the trucks to punctuate the possible pitfalls in deviation from proper Army procedures.

Brush Regularly, Twice a Year

Reaaaadddyyy—

Brush!!! This is a command being given by dentists to the new receptees at the U.S. Army Reception Station, but the brushing is not what is new. It is the paste with which they brush.

The U.S. Armed Forces Preventive Dentistry Paste, manufactured under the name of Zircate, to be applied semi-annually, is the first step in the Oral Health Maintenance Program. Its purpose is to insure preventive dentistry services to all personnel within the Army as early as possible after their entry.

The first military personnel to receive the paste were the troops in Vietnam, next the Reception Stations and eventually all military personnel and their dependents.

The paste, developed and tested at Indiana University, results in up to 90 per cent stoppage in present cavities, and from 40 to 96 per cent reduction in future cavities, when accompanied by regular brushing with a recognized stannous-fluoride toothpaste.

On his first day of in-processing at the Reception Station, the new inductee will receive his first application of the paste following a dental examination.

Upon entering the orientation hall, he will receive a dental care kit, a toothbrush, toothpaste, and the preventive dentistry paste onto the teeth. Later in his basic training, he will receive an orientation on the proper care of his teeth.

According to Lt. Col. Silas M. Crase, preventive dentistry officer, time spent during the former means of application by dentists (approximately 30 minutes per man), has been cut down to 15 minutes for 40-50 men.

General Gets Inside Look At AIB Developments

During his semiannual visit to the U. S. Army Infantry Board last week, Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., Fort Benning Commander, witnessed some of the latest methods of testing and viewed at first-hand a sample of the latest developments for the Infantryman, from weapons to wardrobe.

Upon his arrival at the Infantry Board's Sandy Patch Test Area, Gen. Wright was welcomed by Col. Walter F. Johnston, president of the Infantry Board. He was then conducted through various test division static displays. Representatives of each of the four test divisions described the testing operations and explained tests now underway.

The semiannual visit allows Gen. Wright to keep abreast of testing operations and update his information on developments and testing of new Infantry equipment.

"Methodology of Testing" was the theme at Combat Conditions Test Division where Lt. Col. Charles R. King, division chief, and Ronald W. Klein, project director of testing methodology study, gave the general an insight into testing advancements through electronics. Klein explained the use of a new prototype transmitter utilizing the burst technique of transmission which permitted the moving of data from a large number of sources over the same frequency by using a frequency time sharing method.

This enables the tester to evaluate the man-weapon combination and also equate the weapon. Such information as rate of fire, split second timing to fire, time to first hits on targets, number of near misses, hit probability, all use a function of range and weapons and are transmitted simultaneously by the same transmitter. Micro seconds count in this operation.

The Field Equipment Test Division, Small Arms Test Division and Supporting Weapons Test Division each displayed their latest weapons and equipment undergoing testing. Some of the items under test which were viewed included the 30-round magazine, pouch, and bandolier for the M16A1 rifle and the six sights now being evaluated for the 40-mm grenade launcher attached to the M16A1 rifle.

Some of the other tested items included the 40-mm buckshot round, the 40-mm dual purpose round (antipersonnel and antimateriel), jungle boot, lightweight intrenching tool, overgarment, late developments of the GI helmet, a plastic training hand grenade and the development of a plastic rod tip for the M16A1 rifle cleaning rod.

Each test division chief briefed Gen. Wright on those equipment tests completed since his last visit and also gave him a sneak preview of projects to be tested in the immediate future.

The Infantry Board tests all weapons, clothing, vehicles and equipment developed for use by the Infantry. The Board was established here in December, 1919. It had been originally activated at Fort Lweavenworth, Kans., in 1903.

IOAC Team Gives Talk At Macon

Six members of Infantry Officer Advance Course Class 69-3 were guests of the Macon, Ga., chapter of the Disabled American Veterans on Thursday.

Maj. Bennie E. Young, a Macon native, led a program based on the DAV's February theme, "Americanism."

The six officers, all veterans, are members of Infantry Center's pilot speaking program.

Young told of his experiences during two tours of duty in Vietnam, and how these experiences had strengthened his faith in our nation and in the American way of life.

Maj. Raymond C. Jackson, of Tipton, Ind., compared the Americans in Vietnam with those who fought in the Pacific during World War II. Maj. Jackson is a veteran of World War II and Vietnam, and he feels that the young soldier of today is the best ever.

Other team members were Capts. David Hill of Canton, Ohio, William A. Whittle of Fort Monmouth, N.J., and Frank C. Willoughby.

The team members answered a number of questions regarding the war in Vietnam and the performance of our troops there.

Scout Troop 27 Claims Generals

By Spec. 4 Bob Mast

"We are the most active Boy Scout troop on post and have a history dating back to Fort Benning's first troop," claims Lt. Col. Raymond J. Montgomery, Troop 27's scoutmaster.

The chairman of the Instructional Materials Preparation Committee has been in scouting a long time — 16 years in various Cub and Boy Scout positions, and he backs up his claim with fact.

Currently, the troop is working on a money-making project. The 56 members are selling candy at a dollar a box. Proceeds will finance the troop's annual summer camping trip to Camp McKinsey. Extra profit will be added to funds to send one, or possibly two, members of the troop to the national Jamboree in Idaho this August.

Camping plays a big role in the spirit of the troop. One weekend a month, the boys head to the field, usually pitching their tents at Camp Pine Knot.

The first charter issued at Fort Benning was issued to Troop 1 in 1923. Ten years later, Troop 1 became known as Troop 27 locally and Troop 127 for national records. Later, two troops were established from this unit, both claiming the heritage of Troop 1, first at Benning.

Early troop projects included mosquito control and construction of foot Bridges on post. Today, conservation control is a big project with Troop 27. Recently, Norman Force, post forrester, provided the troop with long leaf pine seed, which the troop planted in the Camp Pine Knot area. Force is a registered merit badge counselor in areas related to conservation of natural resources and forestry.

Troops 27 and 127 might well claim to be the "Troop of Generals." Charles Merton Adams Jr., Charles Stillwell Jr., Lloyd Friedendal, Charles Bonesteel, Ben Harrell, Charles McNair and Ben Overshine are well-starred names associated with Troop 27's history.

Troop 27, sponsored by 2nd Battalion, 10th Artillery, meets at the Scout Hut, Bldg. 2683, near Russ Pond, under the Leadership of Col. Montgomery; Sgt. Clarence Rogers, assistant scoutmaster; and junior assistant scoutmasters Mike Porter, son of Air Force Lt. Col. George Porter, Air Force liaison officer, and Rick Maeder, son of Col. Richard H. Maeder, ATC 1st Brigade commander. Both junior assistants are Eagle Scouts. Sgt. Rogers also devotes off-duty time to Youth Activities Club football.

Marc Tharp, son of Lt. Col. Charles B. Tharp, 2nd Battalion, 10th Artillery commander and troop sponsor, is the troop's senior patrol leader. His assistant is Dana Whitlock, son of Major Robert R. Whitlock of The Infantry School's Office of the Director of Instruction.

Col. Montgomery's son Roger is a Life Scout working on his way to Eagle, and a patrol leader with Troop 27. In addition to his scouting activity, he is a member of the Baker High wrestling team.

Members of the troop's adult committee include Col. William J. Lober, deputy chief of The Infantry School's Weapons Department, Troop 27 committee chairman; WO Jaques Farrell, Student Brigade Headquarters, troop treasurer; Col. Tharp, who is instructional representative as well as sponsor; Col. Frederick Bonse-Fay, Weapons Department executive officer, troop committeeman; and Maj. Herbert A. Jordon Jr., of The Infantry School's Company Operations Department, committeeman.

WILSON-HAFFENDEN
Served in India

Missionary, Ex-General, Speaks Here

A retired British major general who served in India, Burma and Java will speak at Marshall Auditorium Wednesday on the subject, "God on the Battlefield."

Gen. D. J. Wilson-Haffenden served for 28 years in the British Army before retiring in 1948. Since then he has served as a missionary for Dohnavur Fellowship and as general superintendent of Christian Medical College in Vellore, South India.

The former general will speak at 7:30 p. m. following a full day of activities at Fort Benning. He will speak at the senior officers' prayer breakfast at 6 a. m. in the Officers Club, and is scheduled to appear on a Columbus TV station.

The address is free to the public.

Wilson-Haffenden was chairman of the Greater London Crusades for Billy Graham in 1954, '66 and '67. He was secretary of the Boys Brigade (British Boy Scouts) for 13 years, and is on the board of the British Navigators, an interdenominational organization which presents the Christian faith to servicemen.

He is now touring the U. S. on behalf of the Navigators, International.

The general was commissioned in the British Army in 1920, and served with the 8th Punjab Regiment on the Northwest Frontier of India. He attended the Staff College, Quetta, where one of his instructors was Col. B. L. Montgomery, later known as Marshal "Monty" Montgomery.

He was promoted to brigadier after Dunkirk, and then returned to the East. His final command as a major general, was in the Madras Sub Area of India, before the country achieved independence in 1947.

Cubs Race Pine Cars

By Spec. 4 Richard Emerson

Pack 27 of the Fort Benning district Cub Scouts held its Pinewood Derby at White School last week.

The miniature soap box derby was a father and son project. Each scout was given a block of wood, an axle and four wheels to construct a model car which was raced down 30-foot gravity track.

Ricky Beltran of Den 5 took first place in the speed event while Joe Mudd and Anthony Bissonette finished second and third.

The Pinewood Derby was a warm-up competition for the Chattahoochee Council finals to be held during the Scout-O-Rama at Municipal Auditorium in April.

In the Den Championships, Patrick O'Connor placed first ahead of second and third place winners, Garner Booth and Jarrell Mituta. Other den winners were:

In Webelos I, Joe Mudd defeated Arthur Clifford and Peter Axup for first place while Anthony Bissonette finished ahead of Ricky Coker and Mike Bowers to take first in Webelos II.

The Cub Master of Pack 27 is Maj. Henry C. Reister, a doctor at Martin Army Hospital, and the pack is sponsored by the 67th Maintenance Bn. of CTC.

Lt. Dobbs OC Honor Graduate

William C. Dobbs was named the distinguished graduate of OC Class No. 3-69 Feb. 1.

For his achievement, Lieutenant Dobbs received a letter of commendation from Brigadier General Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the Infantry School, an Association of the United States Army (AUSA) plaque, and a "Follow Me" statuette.

Guest speaker at the 50th Co. graduation was Maj. Gen. Edward L. Rowny, Deputy Chief of Staff, U. S. European Command.

Traffic Deaths Exceed Estimates

BY 1ST LT. DAVE LEONARD

When George Washington chopped down the cherry tree, it was no accident. However he faced up to his action.

Highway safety is no accident either. But, the statistics do not lie, stressed a Fort Benning safety official.

With the three-day Washington's Birthday holiday approaching, safety officials again reminded drivers to exercise caution.

The emphasis on safety at holidays or after paydays is based on statistics—reports of accidents and fatalities on the highways.

Third Army has set "expectancy rates" on various types of accidents, including traffic fatalities. Fort Benning has exceeded the predicted number of traffic deaths for the year, with five months to go in Fiscal '69.

Soldier injuries in privately-owned vehicle accidents also have topped expectations and already stand at 168 per cent of the predictions.

Safety Office studies indicate:

—Drivers 19-21 years of age had half the fatal crashes.

—Small or sports-type cars, which afford less protection to the occupants, were involved in two-thirds of the crashes.

—Half the deaths occurred while soldiers were on pass, mainly in the local area or within a 100-mile radius.

Open House

No, this building isn't the recent victim of a firebombing exercise. It's one of the block-long "quartels" on Wold Avenue undergoing complete renovation for use as bachelor officers' quarters. Work on the project should be complete in January, 1970. Cost for the work is in excess of $3 million. (Army Photo by Sp4 Ralph Bowles)

Infantry School Called 'The Best' By Top OCS Grad

The winner of the 17th annual Patterson Award called the instruction he received at The Infantry School "the best you can come by . . . anywhere" in presentation ceremonies here Wednesday.

First Lt. James S. Zieba of Adams, Mass., named top graduate of Officer Candidate School here during a 12-month period ending in October, advised candidates in the Marshall Auditorium audience to pay close attention to all phases of their instruction.

"Tactics is important," he said, but so is all the rest. Staff procedures and military justice, for instance, are very vital. The instruction here is tops."

Zieba, who commands an airborne company at Fort Bragg, will return to Vietnam soon. He served there as an NCO before entering OCS.

Mrs. Robert P. Patterson, widow of the one-time secretary of war for whom the award is named, presented an engraved service pistol and a check for $650 to Zieba. Lt. Gen. A. O. Connor, deputy chief of staff for personnel, Department of the Army, presented a certificate.

A plaque was presented by William K. Brehm, an assistant Army secretary.

Three former award winners also attended the ceremonies. They were Capt. Robert W. Kasser (1968), on leave from the 9th Infantry in Vietnam; Capt. Albert Scooler (1963), Fort Knox, Ky., and Capt. Robert Baker (1964), Hunter AFB, Ga.

MRS. PATTERSON Presents Award

Five other former winners are now in Vietnam.

Mrs. Patterson described the winner as "one who has forged ahead and become the prime example of an effective, courageous, ambitious soldier — a man who has proved himself to be excellent officer material.

"My husband's devotion

Historic 29th Inf. Has 68th Birthday

By Sp4 Walter Nemkovich

The men of the 1st Bn., 29th Inf. marched past the reviewing stand at Essenhagger Field last week, commemorating the 68th anniversary of the unit.

Included in the ceremonies was Company D (LRP), 17th Infantry, which was attached to the 29th Infantry upon the arrival of the long range patrol unit from Frankfurt, Germany during the past year.

Among the guests viewing the 29th's Organization Day parade were Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., post commander, Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, ATC commander and Col. John E. Strever Jr., commander of the 197th Brigade.

Though rain put a damper on some of the day's activities, which included a pass-in-review, there were static infantry displays of light infantry weapons from a M-79 grenade launcher to a 106mm recoilless rifle jeep, a scout dog demonstration of on-leash and off-leash dogs, and a sleak dinner with refreshments.

After trooping the line, Lt. Col. Robert G. Hertel, the battalion commander, pinned decorations on eight of his soldiers.

Receiving the Bronze Star with "V" device were: SSgt. Johnnie R. Riley, Sgt. James E. Duncan, and Sp5 Forrest M. Stanley, all for service in the Republic of Vietnam.

Awarded the Bronze Star for meritorious service in Vietnam were: SSgt. Clarence E. Knight and PFC Leroy C. Frazier.

C. Stenaway all for service in Vietnam.

In an address to the battalion, Lt. Col. Hertel cited the 29th on their "professionalism and sense of duty remaining high" during "Operation Baltimore," in which the battalion participated in establishing order in that city.

In reference to the mission of the 29th Infantry, Lt. Col. Hertel said, "I am proud of the role this battalion plays in helping the Infantry School in producing the best combat soldier in the world."

On February 2, 1901, the Congress authorized the War Department to organize the 29th Infantry Regiment.

In 1902, the regiment was shipped to the Philippine Islands to stop the piratical expeditions and banditry of some of the native chieftains.

Ordered to Panama for duty in the Canal Zone in 1914, the 29th Infantry undertook the arduous and important responsibility of protecting the locks of the canal from enemy sabotage until the conclusion of World War I.

The 29th is credited with four major campaigns in World War II, and two in the Korean Conflict.

Traffic Deaths Jump

—Eleven fatalities happened on weekends, six on weekdays.

—Ten deaths came between payday and the seventh of the next month, the other seven during the rest of the month.

—The most dangerous time of day was midnight to 3 a.m., particularly on a weekend. Eleven of the 17 deaths happened at night.

—None of the 17 victims had taken the defensive driving course.

—Speeding was indicated as a factor in 15 of the 17 cases.

—Thirteen of the cases involved cars running off the road; four struck oncoming vehicles. Of the 13, nine overturned or struck objects.

—Alcohol was a contributing factor in six cases; 10 cases are undetermined; and in only one was alcohol ruled out as a factor. Older drivers were more likely to be affected by alcohol.

The Safety Office report concluded: "There is a need for a pre-payday orientation for all driver personnel on (1) reducing speed during hours of darkness due to visibility limitations, and (2) reduction in driver alertness and responsiveness due to fatigue and use of alcohol.

James Blount, assistant safety officer concluded, "Most drivers know what to do, but it takes something more to motivate them to do it."

He offered a number of sobering reflections. For instance, he noted that more Americans have died on the highways than in wars.

"Since 1776—193 years—1,160,000 Americans have died on the battlefield. In the past 68 years—since 1900—1,720,000 have died on U.S. highways. War is considered a national tragedy, yet auto deaths have become an accepted part of life, it appears."

Patterson

to the Armed Forces is what gives me the courage to talk to you today," Mrs. Patterson said. "During his entire career in the War Department, Judge Patterson kept very close to the Officer Corps, demanding more of those in command than training and judgment.

"He searched also for the spirit of the 'soldier who knows what he fights for and loves what he knows.' For the Judge thought that an officer's value to the nation depends on the real and loving respect he has for his country and what it upholds."

CHECKS

RECENTLY, there has been a significant increase in the number of dishonored checks cashed both on and off post. Cashing checks is a privilege extended to you by the merchants of shops you patronize. If you abuse this privilege, the merchants have the right to refuse your check. One of the most common reasons for "bad" checks concerns a joint checking account. Many times, one party will write a check and neglect to deduct the amount of the check written from the balance.

The spouse, thinking there is more money in the account than there actually is, writes another check, thus overdrawing the account. It is good practice to have the checkbook with you when cashing a check and record the amount of the check immediately.

What you should know about checks and checking accounts:

After depositing a check from another bank, how long should you wait before you can draw on the money deposited?

The safest way is to wait until you received your deposit slip back from the bank informing you that your check has cleared. When automatic deposits, such as allotments checks are deposited to a checking account, there is a tendency to draw on the account a day or two before the deposit gets to the bank. This is not a good practice because the checks do not always reach the bank on time. Consequently, if a check is written early the account is overdrawn.

May you use a signature other than the one that is filed with the bank?

There is a good possibility that bank will not honor your check. This is for your protection as well as for the bank's. If you have been signing your name as A. A. Smith, don't suddenly decide to start signing your name Adam Aaron Smith. Using the correct signature in endorsing a check is equally important. If your government check comes to you with your first name, middle initial and last name on it, you must sign it that way. However, if that is not the same signature that is on file at the bank, you must first sign the check as it is on the check then underneath the signature as it is on file with your bank.

Will a bank accept a check that is written in pencil?

Yes, it will; however, they prefer that it is written in ink so that no changes may be made once the check has left the author's hands.

Are you permitted to erase or cross out something on a check?

No. This is for your protection. Knowing this, you should never accept a check that has been altered.

How long can you wait to cash a check before it becomes invalid?

After six months, the bank usually consults the maker before it is honored. Technically, the time limit is six years, but is is not good business to wait too long before cashing a check.

If you write a check using two different amounts, which one does the bank accept?

Some banks will take the amount written in longhand, but most banks will return the check for clarification.

Is it legal to postdate a check?

It is not illegal but it is not a good practice. Most banks return the check and some will hold the check until the date is reached. Postdating of checks is a frequent occurrence at the Post Commissary, PX and other establishments on post. These places of business are not permitted to take a postdated check in exchange for merchandise purchased.

TRY TO BE WATCHFUL of irregularities when you cash a check. You should always make sure that the balance in your checkbook matches the one on the bank statement. If there are any discrepancies, check them thoroughly; more often than not, the error is in your computation. Double check or have someone else check your arithmetic to make sure your balance is correct.

More Services for Military Dependents

This article concludes The Bayonet's series on service policies for dependents whose sponsors are deceased or serving in a duty station outside the Fort Benning area.

Officers Club

The wife of an officer or warrant officer is eligible to become an associate member of the Officer's Club upon written application by the sponsor and approval by the Board of Governors.

The departing sponsor can request a dependent card if his wife is going to remain in this area and desires to continue to use the facilities of the club.

NCO Club

The dependents who are ordered overseas may continue to use the mess facilities of the Central NCO Mess providing the sponsor was a member in good standing. Upon departure the sponsor can request a dependent card. The dues are one-half the rate of the sponsor.

Membership is available to all unremarried widows of deceased active duty and retired noncommissioned officers and specialists above the third enlisted pay grade upon application to the Mess secretary.

Red Cross

The American Red Cross acts as a counsel in personal and family problems, provides guidance and assistance with reporting and communications between families and servicemen, and provides information concerning Federal and state legislation and regulations on allotments, allowances, insurance, civil relief, and other benefits and assistance in obtaining these benefits.

A referral service is available through the Red Cross to inform and assist in the utilization of other available resources.

Financial assistance is given for emergencies, basic maintenance and other emergency needs. It is limited to the temporary provisions of essentials for health and welfare. Financial assistance may be extended for nonrecurrent essentials which are urgent and require immediate attention such as medical and hospital care, transportation, and burial.

To apply, an individual residing on post or in Government housing off-post should contact the Field Director in Bldg. 1699.

Those who live in civilian housing should contact the Red Cross Chapter in Columbus, or Phenix City, if living in Russell County, Alabama.

Command Information is the commander's program

The philosophy of the Army Command Information program is it is the company commander's program. Higher levels of command provide guidance and state the periodic objectives of the program, but it is the company commander who must decide what material is to be presented to the troops and in what manner.

Any good commander may have a good Command Information program whether he realizes it or not. It is a continuing day to day and hour to hour process. It is definitely not limited to scheduled periods of instruction. "Commander's Call" is merely the formal group instruction phase of the program. Even so, it is important. The unit commander should regard this time on his schedule as a precious hour.

It belongs to the commander, and is his to do with as he pleases as long as the objectives of the Command Information program are met. The Commander's Call should address immediate problems and activities of the command. It should present the information that the commander wants presented, and answer the question that the troops are asking.

The pamphlets, Troop Topics and other material distributed by Fort Benning's Command Information Program and higher headquarters are intended to be resource material. With rare exceptions, there are no more "mandatory" Command Information topics. The distributed materials may be used as the basis for a class, or they may be made available in the dayroom without any formal instruction at all. It is the company commander's decision, based on the needs of his troops for the information.

Third US Army Reg 360-14 requires two enlisted Command Information assistants also be appointed on official orders to assist the commander in his capacity as unit Command Information Officer. Their duties should include maintaining a file of Command Information reference materials such as Troop Topics, Command Information topics and fact sheets, Army Digest, and regulations pertaining to the Command Information program.

Guidance on the program is provided by References: a. Department of the Army Pamphlet 360-300

b. Third US Army Regulation 360-14

c. USAIC Regulation 614-24.

USAIC Reg. 614-24 list the acceptable additional duties which may be assigned to officers at company-battery-troop-and detachment level. The duty of unit Command Information Officer is included in that list. Since the Command Information program is an integral part of the command function, this additional duty should be assigned only to officers [illegible]

49'er Fete Big Success For DUSA Charities

The 49'er party, sponsored by the Daughters of the United States Army, raised five thousand dollars last Saturday for the Tot-Town Nursery, and DUSA scholarship funds.

"The party was a great success by any standard," said Lt. Col. Frank Spettel, the post project officer. The two to three thousand people that attended the party had a great time and DUSA raised the necessary funds to continue their projects."

The party was given an unplanned for authenticity when an electrical storm caused all the lights to go out for three hours.

Fortunately the Officers Club was able to scourage up enough candles for us to continue. Just like the 49'ers we had to make do with what we had," chuckled Col. Spettel.

Prizes were awarded for the best couple displaying the spirit of a 49'er, the most original costume, the best women's contest, and the funniest couple.

Dressed as farmers, circa 1849, Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Galer were selected to receive the best couple award during the annual Daughter of the U.S. Army 49'er party held at the Officers Club.

Other contest winners were Mrs. F. J. Spettel, dressed as a 49'er miner, the most original costume; Mrs. David S. Britt, dressed ber shop quartet; Lynda Fullerton in a comedy act in an 1849 Sunday-go-to-meeting dress, best women's costume and Maj. and Mrs. Lyle McCarty, dressed as identical clowns, the funniest couple.

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. John M. Wright Jr., Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Oscar Davis, Col. and Mrs. C. H. Reidenbaugh and Col. and Mrs. M. A. Pfotenhauer served as judges.

More than 200 volunteers helped to stage the event which provides financial assistance for the Tot Town Nursery and DUSA Scholarship Fund.

Entertainment for the party included a four-act variety show with Col. (ret.) Arthur DLuca as emcee. The acts included a can-can by eight officers' wives, a barbershop quartet; Lynda Fullerton in a comedy act and a can-can spoof by six Artillery officers.

The DUSA has been using the 49'er party for over a quarter of a century to finance its charitable projects.

Dental Chief Cites Need For Early Tooth Care

Regular visits to a dentist are a necessity to assure a childs permanent teeth will come in straight and strong according to Lt. Col. Silas M. Crase, chief preventive dentistry.

"By the time a child starts school he usually has 20 of his baby teeth, and four permanent," said Crase. "The permanent teeth are his six year molars and are the foundation for properly aligned permanent teeth. Most parents don't realize the permanent teeth are coming through because no baby teeth are lost."

During the next six years a child's jaws grow rapidly to make room for the permanent teeth and the roots of the baby teeth slowly dissolve as the other teeth beneath them grow toward the surface.

"Ideally, baby teeth will come out just as the permanent teeth begin to erupt. Unfortunately, it doesn't always work this way. Sometimes the baby teeth aren't loose enough to give way, perhaps because the roots haven't dissolved or a baby tooth has been lost earlier endangering the properly-positioned eruption of the permanent one," Crase explained.

This condition can be prevented by taking x-rays to pinpoint any defects in the early stage when treatment is most effective.

If a permanent tooth is ready to erupt and the baby tooth it is to replace is not ready to leave a dentist can help it along. When a baby tooth comes out prematurely a dentist may need to preserve the space so the permanent tooth will have room to come in.

"This is to prevent the other baby teeth from slowly drifting into the empty space," said Crase. When this occurs there isn't enough room for the permanent teeth to come in and they may grow in crooked.

ACS Needs 'Kitchen' Donations

Mis-matched dishes, silverware, pots, pans, ironing boards or irons that aren't being used and that are still in good condition, are needed at Hospitality House. They are also in need of baby and children's toys for their new play room. Donations may be brought to the Hospitality House between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Many will recognize Hospitality House as the lending closet where they received housekeeping articles to tide them over until their own household goods arrived at Fort Benning. Hospitality House is an Army Community Service Activity and is staffed by volunteers from the post NCO Wives Club with Mrs. Gerald Purnell as chairman. In addition to lending needed articles on a temporary basis, Hospitality House provides weary travelers a place to relax with baby beds and a play room for children.

Farewell Coffee

A farewell coffee for Mrs. James R. Todd, a Hospitality House volunteer, was held recently. Mrs. Todd, whose husband is being transferred to Fort Bragg, was presented a card of appreciation by Hospitality House volunteers.

Exemptions Can Be Claimed Later

(Editor's Note: This is the last article of an Army News Features series in which the Internal Revenue Service answers some of the most frequently asked questions on federal income tax matters.)

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Question: What should I do about my withholding to better my chances of getting a refund next year?

Answer: from the Internal Revenue Service: Do not claim an exemption for yourself on the withholding certificate you fill out for your employer. This will result in more being withheld from your paycheck.

Note that if you do not claim all the exemptions you are entitled to for withholding purpose, you have not forfeited your right to claim them at a later date.

Last year, about 50 million refund checks were issued to taxpayers who were overwithheld.

Q. If I file my return now, how long will it take for me to get my refund?

A: The normal processing cycle for refunds mailed now is 5-6 weeks if the return is accurate and complete. Send your return to your regional service center.

If there is a delay beyond the usual 5-6 week period due to the large volume of returns being received or missing or inaccurate information, you should hear from the IRS about your refund within 10 weeks from the time you filed. Taxpayers should wait at least 10 weeks from the time they filed before writing about their refund.

CAPT. McKAY: 197TH'S FIRST WAC
(Photo by Sp4 Chip Rinaldi)

Capt. McKay

197th's First WAC Works in Personnel

BY Sp4 Chip Rinaldi

Last week the first WAC in the 197th Infantry Brigade was promoted to captain, and is now the officer in charge of the personnel actions section of the brigade's adjutant general office. Both her assignment and the promotion ceremony in which she received her captain's bars were unusual.

Her assignment makes her the brigade's solitary lady and her promotion to captain gives her the distinction of being one of the few people whose promotion to that rank was presided over by two colonels — Col. Charles H. Reidenbaugh, commander of the Center Troop Command and Col. John E. Strever Jr., commander of the 197th.

Capt. McKay, who as previously assigned to OTC, believes "there is a definite place for women in the Army." She says she expects her job in the formerly all-male brigade to be challenging and interesting.

"No doubt there will be a phase of raised eyebrows from the men in the brigade concerning me," she said. "But I'm certain the novelty of the situation will soon pass and accomplishing the unit's mission will again be the primary object of attention."

The novel situation has already resulted in a feminine twist on at least one of the military customs observed by members of the brigade. Instead of passing out the traditional cigars upon the occasion of her promotion, Capt. McKay gave chocolates to the men working in her office.

To her career in the Army, Capt. McKay brings the experience of a varied background. Before entering service she worked as a school teacher, a horse trainer, a painter and as the assistant editor of a weekly newspaper. Some of her paintings presently decorate the walls of her office.

Her hobbies include horseback riding and interior decorating. She is presently involved in directing efforts to redecorate the interiors of the Officers Club.

Capt. McKay has been in the Army for slightly over two years. After receiving a direct commission she was assigned to Fort Benning and CTC. Her initial assignment there was assistant S-1 officer. She also worked there as information officer and special projects officer.

She feels that military service is excellent training for young women. Concerning herself she says, "The Army offers the opportunity to stretch my abilities and find out exactly what I'm capable of doing." She added that the Army experience enables a person to achieve personal growth and broaden his horizons through travel opportunities and the frequent chance to meet new people.

Capt. McKay is a native of My Wok Village, Calif. and holds a bachelor of science degree in animal husbandry from Fresno State College in California.

Riggers' Motto: 'I Will Be Sure'

AN KHE, Vietnam (173rd Abn BO)—On the ground the paratrooper rifleman's job is like that of any other infantryman in Vietnam.

However, this is where the similarity ends, for only the paratrooper is trained to jump in combat, and in order to perform his mission on the ground, he must get from the aircraft without injury.

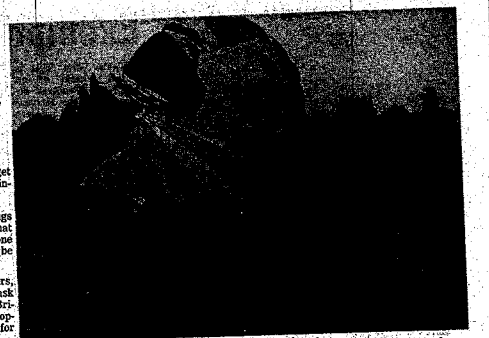
This responsibility belongs to the man with the red hat who always works with one thing in mind: "I will be sure—always."

REPACKS. A member of the 173rd Airborne Brigade's rigger platoon repacks a parachute after its 120 day expiration date. (Photo by SSgt. Arnold Fisher)

Better known as riggers, these men have a vital task with the 173rd Airborne Brigade—keeping the paratroopers prepared at all times for a parachute assault.

For over a year now, the 173rd, known in many quarters as the "Trouble-shooters" of Southeast Asia, have been fighting without their parachutes, conducting airmobile helicopter assaults and reconnaissance in force missions throughout the northern sectors of II Corps, in the Central Highlands.

However, as the riggers know, the Brigade can always be called upon to jump again as they were in February 1967 to launch Operation Junction City. And, to keep the brigade ready for the word "GO", a parachute must be repacked every 120 days.



SKIRTS CHUTE. After recovering from a parachute landing fall, a 173rd Airborne trooper maneuvers behind his chute to bring it under control in a training jump near An Khe, Vietnam. (Photo by PFC Craig Lindaman)

This continuous job of repacking is an arduous one, but not the only job that the riggers have. In addition they conduct continuous training programs to keep up to date on new rigger concepts and cross-training themselves to carry out any assignment. They also work with each maneuver battalion on Air Delivery Teams and riggers made a helicopter jump near An Khe.

Recently the riggers have begun conducting a jump master course in An Khe which serves as a refresher course for the Brigade's qualified jumpers. During the final day of the first course 35 "jumpmasters" bring it under control in a training jump near An Khe, Vietnam.

"It's hard to feel like a paratrooper when you rig chute after chute and never see it jumped," said one of the riggers. "But, after making a jump like today I have the feeling again. I can even feel it in my voice when I greet an officer and shout,—"Airborne, All the way, sir."

Trucks Keep Rolling Along

Grease Monkey Undaunted by Mud and Grunge

CHU LAI, Vietnam (173rd Airborne Brigade 10)—There's this incredible pain screeching through the neck. But if he can just hold his head up a minute longer, the bolt'll come loose. The final suspenseful turn and the black oil is throbbing miraculously down between his fingers, along the arm, and off the elbow, where it drops smoothly into the quart can in the mid.

This is not the spotless repair shop in Milwaukee, or even Joe's Texaco on the corner of Elm. Franky's been on his back in the mud for twenty minutes, and the toughest part of the job is just holding his head up out of the puddle. He fills the can and turns the bolt back to where it'll hold. In exhaustion he just lets his head fall back into the water.

Now he's got to extricate himself; get up and out again; walk to the oil dump and back. The mud has ways of working itself into pockets and under the collar of his shirt. He takes his watch off for the fifth time today, empties the grunge from under the strap, winds it, and checks the time.

Arranging the empty sandbags he uses to lie on, he goes back under, aims the socket wrench at the bolt, fixes it tight; he again rests his head under the muddy security of the jeep bottom of the cakey manifold, the dented sump; his eyes raise up, stare at these yellowish green frozen stream of new grease. He'd repaired the universal on the front end that morning and now with that oil change, something was going to work smoothly: the hole quarter-ton truck. The jeep was going to purr.

Franky's got his eyes planted on the steering mechanism, and then on the front axle, and then on the wheel and the tire. The edge of his mouth crack into a wide smile and he lies there, just he and these few kind-of-amazing parts that make this small heap of tin, he thinks, work.

What the reason? What the game? He considers, but doesn't especially care. This fixing he does is what he's happy about, whether it's in Milwaukee, or even if it's got to be here, LZ Bayonet. Nobody asks Franky to do much else, and if they did there's the chance that he might be bugged because Franky's got a hard opinion of what he's doing here in Vietnam, and when he gets his mind set on something there's no stopping him.

He's got hands like magic when it happens that a vehicle has a bug in it. And he'll set it straight to get the rations or mail through to the guys in the field. He's been called at night a hundred times to get a truck back on its feet.

"What I like," says Franky, "is the pleasure of seeing trucks roll the way they should. I used to work in stock cars, and when our car'd come into the pits with mechanical trouble, well, then the burden was on me.

"The driver'd want to know why something went wrong, and a lot of times it was just some cheap oil gasket that would keep the car from finishing. That kind of bad business can really hurt a guy...So I got my defenses up, and I learned to almost predict what was going to go wrong. I do the same thing here in my job, and if it's helping Uncle Sam, then that's as much satisfaction as winning a race."

So Franky's in the driver's seat now. He cranks the jeep and takes it down the muddy road for a test. He's not happy until he's checked it, and you can see him leaning out the side driving with one ear to the engine, because he knows the sound of anything that doesn't function exactly right. And when this one's okay, the first thing on his mind is the next one in line.

"The distributor's bad. Not much sweat there." Maybe there's more to it with Franky.

U.N. Training Valuable, Says Martin

By PFC Ken Hammond

A soldier in the United Nations peacekeeping forces wears many hats, according to 1st. Lt. John Martin, an Infantry officer from Ireland.

"The position of the U.N. is that of a policeman, diplomat and a soldier at the same time," said Martin, who was a member of the 3rd Irish Infantry Group in the United Nations Forces in Cyprus in 1964. The U.N. forces had been called in to help restore and maintain peace on the troubled island.

"Our mission was to prevent hostilities and promote conditions that would lead to the return of normal life on the island," Martin said.

He described the U.N.'s position as a buffer between opposing elements on the island. The idea was to try to prevent fighting, and at the same time, help with civic problems.

"The U.N. must be completely impartial," he said. "It's very difficult."

The 26-year-old Irishman, now studying here in Advanced Infantry Officer Class 1-69, began his career as a soldier when he was a 17-year-old high school senior. In his small hometown on the western coast of Ireland, he joined the National Guard as a private. Later he attended the Regular Army Cadet Academy for two years and was commissioned a second lieutenant in 1962.

He served as a platoon commander for two years, and then was promoted to first lieutenant in 1964. Later that year he joined the 8,000 man United Nations' team. He is a graduate of several infantry courses at the Irish Army's Infantry School.

Volunteering for UN forces "gives you the experience of working away from your country for a while," said Martin. "Also it gives you practice in the techniques of patrolling, small unit operations and manning observation posts."

Perhaps his most valuable military benefit from the experience was the opportunity to compare the training of his Army to that of others, he added. In all, there were seven countries in the U.N.'s Cyprus force, including Canada, England, Finland, Denmark, Sweden, Austria and Ireland.

"We could compare our standards and training to those in the other armies," Martin said. "Also the different armies could improve their relations with each other."

But his greatest experience was working with the people, Martin says.

"Actually going to the village level, into the local coffee shops, stopping and talking to the people working in the fields — this was the big thing," he said.

PVT KRAMP RECEIVES PLAQUE
Lt. Col. Gerald Coady Honors Driver

Passes Come Fast To Driving Winner

Winning the competition for the 197th Inf. Bde.'s Driver of the Month for January was a bonanza for PFC Douglas Kramp of Company D (LRP), 17th Inf.

PFC Kramp, who is a jeep driver for the 17th Inf., won exemption from duty for 60 days and 3 three-day passes as a result of coming out first in both battalion and brigade competitions.

The plaque recognizing Kramp as the brigade's best driver for January was presented by Lt. Col. Gerald G. Coady, acting commander of the 197th. The 17th Inf. patrol unit is attached to the 1st Bn., 29th Inf., an assigned battalion of the 197th brigade.

"All of us in D-17th are very proud of PFC Kramp's achievement," said Capt. Thomas P. Meyer, commander of the LRP company.

He issued a challenge to members of other units of the brigade by saying, "It is the spirit of the airborne infantry to thrive on competition, and to prove the excellence of airborne troops in all areas of endeavor."

All the members of the 27th Inf., attached to the 197th Brigade, are airborne qualified.

Presentation of the award is based on several factors pertaining to wheeled vehicle driving. The winner must have demonstrated not only the ability to operate his assigned vehicle, but he must have maintained it well in accordance with published Army standards.

In a recent post competition, drivers from the 197th took first and third places in a contest for Driver of the Quarter for Fort Benning.

Insurgents Wane in Colombia

By Spec 5 Michael Beck

Colombia, a country of high rugged mountains and vast tropical forests, is a natural area for insurgent warfare favored by communist guerrillas. Maj. Hernando Diaz of the Colombian Army has been fighting guerrillas there since he entered the army 20 years ago.

After graduating from the country's military academy in 1954, Diaz was commissioned in the Infantry and immediately went into combat as a platoon commander.

At the time, the Colombian Army was using large sweeping movements to entrap and engage the guerrillas, said Maj. Diaz, an Allied student studying here in Infantry Officer Advanced Classes 1-69. Because of the terrain, however, this was only partially successful.

In 1964, the army undertook widespread change in tactics, said the Bogota native, who by this time had been promoted to captain and had seen seven years of combat. The army generally stopped using large troop concentrations, and instead sent out small patrol to infiltrate enemy positions. "We also began a program of civic action in the country," he added.

"Because of its experience," Maj. Diaz reflected, "the army was able to develop the new plan effectively. In 1964 the guerrillas were a 100 per cent problem for the army. Now they are only a 10 per cent problem."

Today the government supports civic action, which is the most important activity of the army, said the major. "Each brigade has one engineering battalion which builds roads, school and other needed structures."

Injured Dogs Get Quick Care Here

An ambulance marked with green crosses, believed to be the only one of its type in the U. S. Army, is being used in Veterinarian services here for canine corps cadets.

Like other Army ambulances, it is a ¾-ton truck, complete with four wheel drive and olive drab paint. Here the similarity ends.

The markings on each side, on the rear and top are similar to other ambulances, including the crosses on a white background.

Bill green has replaced the red in the crosses on this ambulance.

Green crosses have for over 50 years been used to designate the veterinary portion of the Medical Corps.

This ambulance is used here exclusively for the Army's Scout Dogs.

It is the result of suggestion by Capt. Larry Wood, an Army veterinarian.

Several valuable Scout Dogs were lost during the past summer because of heat exhaustion during field training. The ambulance is used to help treat and save sick or injured animals in the field and to evacuate them to the kennel areas for further treatment.

When trainers and dogs are on the move during a field problem, the ambulance usually follows and provides immediate medical attention if necessary.

The ambulance serves more than 250 dogs and travels an average of more than 100 miles each day.

Inside the ambulance there is an examination table which pulls out to allow the doctor and his assistant more room to work. In addition, there are well stocked drug and medical supply storage areas.

Not only does the ambulance save lives, but it enables both the dog and his handler to save valuable training time formerly lost when the dogs had to be brought in from the training areas to the kennels for medical attention.

S. Sgt. Leads Assault, Awarded Medal of Honor

WASHINGTON (ANF) — President Lyndon B. Johnson presented the Medal of Honor to a member of each U.S. Armed Service in one of his final White House ceremonies.

Army S.Sgt. Drew D. Dix was awarded the Medal of Honor for his action in combat in Vietnam while serving as an advisor to a unit of Vietnamese soldiers.

The other service members who received the Medal of Honor for heroism in Vietnam were Lt. Col. Joe M. Jackson of the Air Force and Maj. Stephen W. Pless of the Marine Corps, both from Newnan, Ga., and Lt. Clyde E. Lassen of the Navy, from Ft. Myers, Fla.

During the ceremony, Johnson said, "Each man heard the call of duty in an hour of hard challenge and each man answered that call beyond demand. The record of their deeds, at the very summit of human testing, will forever now be part of the history of valor."

Sgt. Dix, from Fayetteville, N. C., became the 42nd U. S. Army member to receive the nation's highest combat award for service in Vietnam.

A member of the Special Forces, Sgt. Dix was assigned to the U. S. Senior Advisor Group, IV Corps, in Vietnam. On Jan. 31, 1968, he was serving as an advisor with a Vietnamese patrol in Chau Doc Province when the province capital was attacked by two heavily armed Viet Cong battalions.

Called to the capital to assist in the defense, Sgt. Dix voluntarily led a relief force that rescued civilians trapped within the city. He assaulted an enemy machine gun position and killed six Viet Cong.

The following day, he assembled, a 20-man force and cleared the enemy out of several buildings in the city. During this attack, he captured 20 prisoners, including a high ranking Viet Cong official.

The Medal of Honor Citation said: "Sergeant Dix's personal heroic actions resulted in 14 confirmed Viet Cong killed in action and possibly 25 more, the capture of 20 prisoners (and) 15 weapons, and the rescue of 14 United States and Free World civilians."

Bye Bye Big Brother

By Spec. 4 Pete Lis

I was going to write about CHEAP THRILLS this time, the second and by far the most successful and exciting album ever done by Big Brother and the Holding Company, but they no longer exist. Janis Joplin, the lead singer and reason everyone paid to see them, has left the group to form her own act known as the "Janis Joplin Revue". I read last month that they opened in Memphis, the blues singers La Scala, during the holidays and just bombed horribly. So now, I don't know where to turn. I think I'll go for a walk, do something to clear my head, forget about this for awhile, and start again tomorrow.

Janis Joplin is beautiful. For those who have been fortunate enough to see her in person, understand what I'm talking about, or do you? Anybody who has seen pictures of her must think I have strobe lights for eyes. I don't man, I have head lights, but it's hard keeping them on high beam. You are in better shape if you have CHEAP THRILLS.

The Big Brother band created a wall around Janis that suited her fine. They were not a blues band, but then Janis is really a rock singer. Their sound was a whole one, not based on individual dexterity, but upon texture and excitement. And when they feel it, they turn out beautiful sounds. Peter Albin's bass solo in the middle of "Easy Rider" (before they rocked it up) was always exciting and right up front, like Peter himself.

Sam can play very pretty guitar, very lyrical lines that match the beauty of his songs. He's written most of the pretty songs they did Song," "I Need a Man To Love."

David Getz is a good drummer, I can't explain why, maybe he's got rhythm. And James Gurley's guitar on the live recording of "Ball and Chain" is so frighteningly fitting I felt like I was plugged in the first time I heard it.

Most everyone has listened to them a lot, and some people have listened the wrong way. I guess Janis heard too much of herself.

At any rate, you can hear Janis' voice in all it's deep seated glory on CHEAP THRILLS.

'Pendulum' Puts Cop on Hot Seat

A REVIEW
By Sp4 Harry Lloyd

Remember when the policeman's enemy was the criminal, and movies told it that way?

Well not any more. The robber isn't the enemy of the cop — he makes him necessary. Like if there weren't any litterers, how would the streetcleaners make a living? And if viruses suddenly disappeared who'd support the doctors? If you ever tried to play cops and robbers and nobody would play robber, you'd understand.

So who's the archrival of the cop these days? Why the judge, of course. Technology has made it easy to catch the criminals, but the judges have made it hard to punish them. As soon as a new killer goes behind bars, the Supreme Court comes up with a technicality that lets him out.

That's the premise of "The Pendulum," a suspense movie with more message than most such flicks. But don't get yourself hooked by swallowing the whole Law and Order line.

The movie makes a good case for the civil libertarians, too.

George Peppard is the cop who gets more than professionally involved in the debate over crime and punishment. He's a Washington, D.C., detective who helped put a mad killer in jail — before nine old men decided the conviction wasn't by their book. So the killer goes back home to mother in Pennsylvania.

Some private detective work turns up another problem for Peppard. His wife (Jean Seberg) skips an appointment at the beauty shop for a sneak meeting with an old boyfriend. Peppard smells a ratfink. When he leaves for Baltimore to make a speech, he tells her he's going to New York, and won't be back until the next day.

The trap closes, but wouldn't you know Peppard gets evidence against his wife by illegal methods. When the maid comes in the next morning, both the wife and her lover are dead. Peppard has taken care to cover his tracks, but his comrades in the homicide squad quickly suspect him and start building a case.

Aha! Now the shoe is on the other flatfoot, and Pep-pard is practically booked for death row. Desperately he hires his archenemy, a slick lawyer from the F. Lee Bailey-Edward Bennett mold. Naturally, this is the same lawyer who got that young punk off the hotseat.

Lawyer and client never seem to get over their suspicion of each other. Peppard doesn't tell the truth about sneaking home, and his attorney spends more time talking about ironies than building a defense.

Just when the police have their case almost wrapped up, a new piece of evidence shows up and the suspect sneaks away on a lifesaving mission. His own life.

Is the problem ever solved of police vs. courts? Of course not. Wisely, the movie doesn't take an intractable position. Rather, it shows the depth of the dilemma by letting the two sides switch roles for a while. Some questions go unanswered, but at least they were raised. And there is the unspoken reminder at the conclusion that guilt is always a relative thing.

ICED TREAT . . . Peggy and Jane McCutcheon, two of the youthful stars in the 'Holiday on Ice' show, perform their twin or mirror routine during a practice session. "Holiday on Ice" will be at Columbus' Memorial Auditorium for four days, March 5-8. A special reduced price for military has been announced. Chits worth one dollar for the first two performances may be obtained from the Recreation Office, Bldg. 394, all theater box offices on post, all Service clubs and bowling centers. One chit per ticket purchase is required and must be presented to the Auditorium box office by 3 p.m. on the date of performance.

JUNIOR OFFICERS

"One of the Crowd?"

This advertisement has been placed for the interest of Junior Officers who are "a cut above the ordinary", who don't consider themselves "one of the crowd."

Anyone can find a job. That's simple. Anyone can get a job with mammoth companies with dozens of openings. What is not so simple is to get the right position . . . a position in which your talent and ambition is applied to the greatest mutual benefit. In other words, your needs are not necessarily met just because you are invited to join one of these firms. Their needs and yours are not always the same.

As you probably know, there are literally thousands of companies looking for young men. The firms we represent are a cross section of companies interested, in "quality" not "quantity." They are not trying to hire all the officers they can find but the best we can find! These firms have relatively few openings . . . but one is all you need if it is the right firm for you.

Our Junior Officer Candidates therefore are exposed to a broad base of selected clients before they interview . . . Yes, some companies will come here, but most will invite you to visit them. You will not have to limit yourself to only those companies with a recruiter who can get to see you here. Further you will often have the opportunity to interview with company officials instead of recruiters.

Rock Lovers Are Choking On Bubblegum Barrage

By Rock Digger

With so many truly heavy sounds bombarding our eardrums in the last year or so, it's easy to get a case of tight jaws when one suddenly finds his ears assaulted by a burst of super-subteen trivia.

But this so-called "Bubblegum Music" is encroaching upon our airwaves, spreading like a cacophonous cancer through jukeboxes everywhere, and generally stirring a lemon into the rock music pot better make that cauldron.

But rather than sweat the small stuff, why not relax and let your bile go back to low tide while we calmly consider what's been taking place in the "creative minds" who have unleashed the "Bubblegum Blitzkreig."

They simply got on to the fact the soaring inspirations and abilities of the new generation of musicians, along with the incredible technical feats of a select few recording engineers, suddenly pushed much of today's music beyond the grasp of the horde of fuzzy-faced gibbons which inhabits America's Junior High Schools.

These teenyboppers just happen to constitute a massive multi-million dollar segment of the current recreation and entertainment market . . . a ready-made affluent society with easily influenced minds and readily available coin of the realm.

Paul Revere and the Beach Boys started scratching at the peanut-butter smeared surface of this goldmine. The Monkees staked the first large claim.

Then Tommy James and the Shondells and Boyce & Hart sensed the lucre to be certed away, and Bubblegum-Bonanza was suddenly out in the open.

"Yummy, Yummy" "Goody Goody Gumdrops" and other lighweight ditties that managed to sound the same flooded the record market. Groups with names like The 1910 Fruitgum Company almost overnight could demand several thou for a concert appearance . . . and still the fever grows. Ask any rock-jock who is burdened with the chore of answering his own request lines!

But there is hope . . . there must be, for as the ancient Abyssinian philosopher Hyena Bobboonis once said, "Hope springs eternal . . . " I mean, we survived "Witch Doctor" and "Alley Oop," didn't we? And did our forefathers and foremothers not manage to pass thru puberty to the tune of "Abba Daba Daba?"

Just take lots of Excedrin, or whatever else you dig, and cool it. It's just not worth getting uptight over.

Columbus Orchestra To Give Concert Here

By Sp. 4 Frank Truchon

The Columbus Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of conductor Harry Kruger, will present a concert at Marshall Auditorium Feb. 20 at 8:30 p.m. This will be the first time the group has performed at Fort Benning.

The program, which is open to the general public, will include selections from La Gazza Ladra Overture by Rossini, Prelude to Hansel and Gretel by Humperdinck, Peer Gynt Suite No. 1 by Greig, Dance of the Tumblers by Rismky-Korsakoff, Concerto in A Minor for Two Violins by Vivaldi (first movement only), Moldau by Smetana, Thunder and Lightning Polka by Strauss and Hoedown from Rodeo by Copland.

The doors to Marshall Auditorium will open at 7 p.m. and seating will be on a first come, first served basis. Harry Kruger said that the concert will last approximately an hour and a half, including the intermission. Kruger added, "The program may appear long, but the numbers are all short. Only two — the Peer Gynt and the Moldau — require as much as 15 minutes to play."

The orchestra conductor said, "We have nearly a dozen musicians in our orchestra who are connected with the military and this little trip seems especially appropriate to us."

Kruger emphasized that the symphony orchestra is local in nature. "Ninety-five percent of the players are from Columbus," he said. "Some are professional musicians, others are housewives, teachers, doctors, lawyers, students and business people."

V-NECK. . . Movie star Raquel Welch displays the latest thing in bath robes for her latest movie "Lady in Cement." New innovations are fine, but a lot can be said for toweling dry too.

Movie Producer Must Watch Props

One of the major problems facing the producers of "Daring Game", a new movie by Paramount was the safeguarding of one of the creations of the prop department.

The item in question was a fully operational machine-gun and torpedo-firing speed boat capable of laying down a thick smoke-screen.

GSO 'Girl of the Year' To Be Crowned at Dance

The Armed Services YMCA of Columbus will honor members of the Girls' Service Organization at the formal "Girl-of-the-Year" dance Saturday night.

The honoring ceremony will take place at 9 p.m. during the 1st intermission of the formal dance, and will recognize the nine girls who have earned the highest service point records for the preceding year. These nine girls will participate in a colorful court ceremony, the highlight of which will be the crowning of the Queen for 1969. The Queen was chosen from among the nine nominees by vote of the GSO membership.

This year's Queen will be Miss Patricia Curbow who is also the GSO President. Her two runners-up are Miss Vince Locascio and Miss Vicky Ellis who will be the ladies-in-waiting. The other six girl nominees who will be the Court Attendants in the procession and ceremony are: Misses Kaye King, Donna Lee, Debra Lange, Bobbie Mann, Brenda Peacock and Carol Singletary.

Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., commanding general of the Infantry Center, will officiate over the crowning of the Queen. Mr. J. Dixon Wadsworth Jr., chairman of the Committee of Management of the Armed Services YMCA will present certificates of merit to GSO members; and Col. Jacob L. Riley Jr., USA (ret.), chairman of the Committee on Public Relations will present gifts to the Queen. Mrs. Lorraine Neighbors, president of the Women's Council of the "Y" will present awards to all girls who have earned them on a cumulative service point basis from date of membership; and Mrs. B. Ed Johnson, Secretary of the Women's Council, will present a gift to the Queen. The ceremony will be narrated by Mr. W. H. Stokes Jr., Executive Director of the Armed Services YMCA.

The Biddings:

North	East	South	West
1 C	P	2 D	P
2 S	P	3 D	P
4 D	P	5 D	P

By Paul Mangione

The hand represented here affords an excellent opportunity to North, South for a solid game contract. North opens with a one club bid, holding the minimum thirteen points necessary. His longest suit is spades but all his power is in clubs so the "strength-length" principle holds true. He knows that his partner must have at least an equal holding with some compliment before a game is possible. His bid tells his partner exactly that.

East passes and South bids two diamonds. Why a jump-shift? Even without the club void South holds fifteen points and an exceptionally powerful diamond suit. The jump-shift tells North of a very strong holding in diamonds and demands a game contract.

West of course passes and North, because he has to bid and has already been told that his clubs are out, bids the standard second response to a strong reply, his length in Spades. However, he does not hold a strong enough hand to raise partner's bid. All he is doing is telling his partner where his second suit is, nothing else.

East passes and South bids three diamonds in the anticipation of a possible move into Blackwood. North must understand this or he will either leave South at three or over bid his relatively weak hand. North does not want Blackwood but understands that game is absolutely essential. North bids four diamonds telling partner that diamonds is the suit, Blackwood is definitely out and game is as far as the contract should go. If North had bid four No, he would have placed the contact into Blackwood by asking for Aces, when the situation should have been reversed. In any event, North wants only the game, nothing else.

With North's four diamond bid, South knows that game is as far as their holdings will allow them to go. He puts the contract to game with five diamonds and West leads.

Contract Made

West would have little choice but spades. A ten lead would be proper here. North plays the queen and East uses his king for one trick. East leads back spades poorly figuring West for the Ace. After that the hand lays down. South couldn't lose a trick except for the most foul errors which would be unlikely. The contract makes, easily.

Bridge partners should get together often and work out between themselves all their individual problems relating to bidding and response.

JUNIOR OFFICERS

INDUSTRIAL MARKETING OPPORTUNITY

Ft. Benning Interviews

Wednesday, 19 February 1969

One of the Nation's leading and fastest growing manufacturers of microfilm and related hardware has asked us to interview men who are interested in investigating a career in industrial sales.

It comes as a surprise to many officers that there are responsible marketing assignments available as well as some of the rather unsophisticated programs to which they have been exposed.

This program offers full training (experience is not necessary), base, salary, commission, expenses, good benefits and a choice of locations. First year's earnings can easily exceed $10,000.

Qualifications include college, strong leadership and management potential, and a strong desire to succeed in a competitive atmosphere in a responsible position.

The hiring companies pay all our charges

For an interview please call collect 703-354-0415 or return the coupon.

THE FORUM THE EOBOW

BY RICK YEISER

The blizzard which recently ravaged New England and the East Coast has been given unfair publicity. Adjectives used to describe it have all been negative, and indeed, a state of emergency has been declared in some areas.

I freely admit that a great deal of misery and inconvenience came of the storm, and that most of those affected by it would have just as soon been spared it. There are, however, a growing number of people in the Northeast who welcomed the white stuff, and whose joy was proportionate to the total accumulation on the ground.

I am speaking, of course, of the skiers who flock to New England slopes whenever there is a hint of snow. These people are a particular lunatic breed, and must not be confused with their brethren in the West.

The western skier is blessed with high mountains, bountiful snow, and a sharp, dry cold that makes the winter air endurable. In short, the Rocky Mountain skier has it made; he does not have to defy the laws of sanity and good judgment to pursue his favorite sport.

The Eastern ski buff is not so lucky; snowfall is unpredictable in the Northern Appalachians, many of the mountains are not high and steep, and the wet, sub-freezing air is usually complemented by prevailing winds up to forty miles per hour.

All the same, the main arteries to Vermont, upstate New York, and New Hampshire are clogged every Friday evening with countless numbers of hardy souls determined to vent their work week frustrations coming (or falling) down the slopes on the weekend.

They arrive after dark and must wait until Saturday morning to determine the fate of their weekend adventure. Too often it is the same thing. What the ski area calls "good" skiing in reality means barely negotiable. Further interpretation of this "good" rating indicates that the mountain is covered with snow and ice — no bare spots (this is when the term "Fair" is used), but the ice is winning its battle with the snow for king of the mountain.

Why the ice? Two reasons: There have been few New England winters without rain. Rain melts snow, and when the whole mess freezes again the mountain is a sheet of ice. Additional snow will cover the ice and make the mountain passable; the problem is that the wind is so fierce that snow can't accumulate and pack on the ice.

A good skier, however, can negotiate the ice and find enough snow to have a good day's skiing — provided everyone else doesn't have the same idea, and that is invariably the case. From the time that the lift opens in the morning, people pour onto the slopes. By mid-morning there is a forty-minute wait in the lift lines. Once the skier is lucky enough to get to the top of the mountain and be frostbitten on the way, he must start the hard part — getting down in one piece.

He has two choices: he can decide to fight the ice, which is suicide, or keep to the side of the trail where there is snow, and fight the people. If he takes the latter course of action he becomes part of a vast game of mountainside billiards, bouncing from person to person until he finally reaches the bottom.

The good skier once again has the advantage. If it is not snowing or foggy, he can see the perils that lie ahead and usually manage to avoid them. In fact, the really good skiers take a perverse delight in seeing how close they can come to some frightened soul without actually slicing him in two.

Good skiers or not, however, these people are all of the same breed. They fight both the elements and themselves, and seem to thrive on it, coming back for more punishment each succeeding weekend. Therefore I can't see how anyone can begrudge them their first big snowstorm of the year, when it might rain before the weekend anyway.

Fort Benning Squad Downs Semi-Pro Teams

The Fort Benning basketball team continued to dominate all opposition with an easy 113-76 victory Sunday over the Bush Furniture Company, a semi-pro team from Phenix City, Ala.

The win pushed Coach John Williams' record to 5-0, as the team continues to prepare for the Third Army tournament to be held at Fort Bragg, N. C., March 17-21.

The Benning quintet held a solid 50-36 halftime lead, then took command to outscore the Bush squad, 63-40, in the second half.

Five players, led by Bill Whitlock's 25 points, hit double figures in the win.

Coach Frank Loeffler led the Bush Furniture attack with 21 points, with two of his teammates also scoring in double figures.

In action Saturday night, the post squad handily defeated the Southern Door Closer Celtics, 90-59. The Celtics, a semi-pro team from Atlanta, were unable to cope with the quick Benning offense, and found themselves behind 33-25 at the break.

Richard Kemp led four post players in double-figure tallies with 28 points. The Celtics were outscored, 57-34, in the second half.

Last Thursday, Columbus College became the team's third victim, as the Benning cagers moved into the three-figure category with a 101-80 win.

The Fort McPherson team fell victim to the Benning squad twice in games played over the first weekend of the month, losing by 98-72 and 89-87 margins.

The Benning-McPherson rivalry will be renewed this weekend in a game scheduled for 1 p.m. Sunday at Briant Wells Field House.

The Benning team is seeking more opponents for other exhibition games. For information, call Mr. Bill Harrell at the Special Services' sports office, 545-5973.

Co. A Captures Main Post Title

Company A, 1st Bn., captured the Main Post League basketball title, 35-33, in a squeaker with the 524th Personnel Service Company Feb. 6.

The playoff game became necessary when both teams finished the regular season with identical 7-1 records.

The Alphas had beaten the 524th, 29-26, Jan. 27, but lost an upset to Company B, 1st Bn., 44-38, in the final contest of the season Feb. 2 to force the playoff.

Defense was the key to the action in the first half. The Alphas led 12-10 at the end of the first quarter, then traded baskets with the 524th for a slim 16-14 margin going into the locker room.

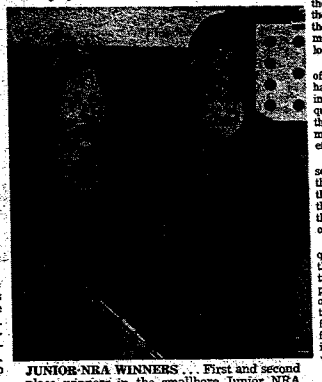
Ralph Willard had eight of his 20 points in the first half, four of them accounting for the Alphas second-quarter points. He opened the third quarter with four more to lead the offensive effort.

The 524th was unable to score effectively during the third period, dropping the quarter 10-4 to give the Alphas a 26-18 lead at the start of the final period.

The word for the fourth quarter was comeback, as the 524th reversed the trend, outscoring the Alphas 15-9. A closing seconds' desperation shot by the 524th's Ralph Tapp failed to drop in and Tapp failed to draw a foul, giving Company A the 35-33 victory.

Easome Smith scored 12 points, with eight points spearheading the comeback drive.

Company A, 1st Bn., is one of the two Center Troop Command teams which will compete in the post-wide tournament, February 17-25.



JUNIOR-NRA WINNERS . . . First and second place winners in the smallbore Junior NRA four-position rifle match Jan. 18 were Kathy Krilling with a 381-400 record and Bill Gyzen with a 343-400 total. Prone match winners were Lee McGregor, first; Richard Johnson, second; and Ronnie Gyzen, third, each with 91-100 totals. Ties were broken at NRA match headquarters. ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

BY BILL KLOEB

The Archery Council of the Rod and Gun Club has acquired Building 2247 in the Student Brigade area and has converted it into a 20-yard indoor range. This eight-point range will be open Tuesdays and Thursdays at 7:30 p.m. and will remain open as long as anyone wants to shoot. Arrangements to shoot at other times may be made by calling Bill Guinn at 689-0211, Gene Stalcup, 689-4864, or Tedd Brown, 325-9379.

There are approximately 24 privately-owned hunting preserves in Georgia offering native and pen-raised quail shooting for a few during a special Oct. 1 to Mar. 31 season. Some preserves also offer duck, dove or pheasant shooting. Some hunters may want to give this sport a try after the quail season opens here. A list of names and addresses may be obtained on request from the State Game and Fish Commission, Trinity-Washington Building, 270 Washington Street, Atlanta, Ga., 30334.

There have been reports that the stripes have begun to run in small numbers in the Chattahoochee River. It's early but one report credited Capt. Gordon Todd of the Student Brigade with catching 23 small ones over the sand bar at the site of the old Engineer Brigade. He was using a small silver mirror spinner.

Despite the claims loudly advanced that mail order controls such as passed by the last Congress would affect only criminals, not ordinary shooters and hunters, The Gun Control Act of 1968 incorporates quite a few restrictions on transporting or shipping weapons.

In the hope of preventing some honest hunters or shooters from unwittingly violating this law which went into effect Dec. 16, 1968, we list below our interpretations of the law concerning some of the more common situations which must inevitably arise.

If you wish to travel aboard any common or contract carrier (airline, railroad, bus line) with your own legally owned gun or ammunition, you must notify the carrier in writing beforehand and ascertain under what conditions you may do so. You may travel interstate with your own legally owned weapons and ammunition in your privately owned vehicle. State and local laws are getting into such a tangle, however, that it is advisable to carry with you any pertinent papers and to carry the weapons unloaded, in cases and in a lockable section of the car.

It is illegal to ship a gift weapon for a relative or friend from one state to another. You must take the weapon to your dealer and have him to ship it to a dealer designated by your friend or relative in his town. Expect to pay both dealers for their trouble. Legally, you cannot drive to the other state and present it personally.

You may not legally buy a gun from or trade with a buddy from out of state. A dealer within your own state cannot ship a weapon you have ordered by mail or phone without an affidavit from you stating your receipt is legal under Federal, state and local law and naming the chief law enforcement officer in your town. For personnel living on post, this would be the Post Provost Marshal. For personnel living off post it would be the local chief of police unless the buyer elected to have the weapons sent to his unit on post, then it would be the Provost Marshal. If you drive over to visit the dealer personally this rigamarole is not necessary.

There are no residency requirements for the purchase of ammunition but, of course, sections (Illinois and New York City, for example) have local or state ID card or license requirements which must be met. If you are going on an out-of-state hunt or shoot, it is advisable to inquire as to local and state laws of the state to which you are going.

Dealers and manufacturers of handloading equipment cannot legally ship reloading components such as bullets, brass, primers or powder out of state. Under the act such components, except lead shot, are considered whole ammunition.

Ramblerettes Slowed

The Fort Benning WAC basketball squad put on its best defensive and offensive efforts of the season last weekend in two games with the Fort Gordon Ramblerettes.

The best efforts weren't enough, however, as a much stronger Gordon team ran its record to 8-0 with 32-12 and 41-25 victories.

The Saturday night contest was a defensive struggle for both teams, as the Benning squad held the Gordon sextet to its lowest point output of the season. Defense was the game for the Ramblerettes as well, as the Lynne Jackson-Chris Engle combination at guard held the Benning team to 12 points.

The loss of Lynne Jackson in Sunday's game made an obvious difference, and the Benning WACs were able to produce a 25-point offensive effort. The 25 points formed a season high for the team, topping an earlier 21 point mark against Fort Rucker, Ala.

But the Ramblerettes were not to be denied their eighth victory. Phyllis Cox and Jean Tuggle combined for 34 points, putting the game out of reach in the third quarter.

Phyllis Cox led the scoring in both games for the Gordon team, notching 15 points in Saturday night's contest, then adding 22 before fouling out in the game Sunday.

She received strong offensive support from Jean Tuggle, who had 10 points in the opener and 12 more Sunday.

The 17-17 halftime score Sunday came on the seven point efforts of Fort Benning's Rita Mattix and Dora Johnson, balanced by Fort Gordon's Phyllis Cox's 14 points.

The Fort Benning WACs will play Fort Rucker in two games this weekend at the Briant Wells Field House. The first game is set for Saturday at 7 p.m., with the second game scheduled for 1 p.m. Sunday. This is the final game before the team enters the Third Army WAC Tournament Feb. 24-28 at Fort McClellan.

197th Advances Winning Squad

Fifth Battalion, 31st Inf. captured the championship of the 197th Infantry Brigade's company-level basketball tournament, defeating 1st Bn., 58th Inf., 83-46, Monday night at Kelley Hill Field House.

Fifth Battalion had beaten 1st Bn., 58th Inf., 82-40, earlier in the tournament. By virtue of their win Monday, the team will represent the brigade in the USAIC basketball tournament, Feb. 17-22.

The championship team reached the brigade finals by downing Hq. Co., 197th, 84-38; 1st Bn., 211th Arty., 78-42; and 2nd Bn., 16th Arty., 88-42, earlier in the tournament. The team is comprised entirely of men from Hq. Co., 5th Bn. 31st Inf.

PFC Vernon Cheatum led the champs in tournament scoring averaging 26 points per game. Sp. 4 Douglas Wonsley and player-coach Sgt. Bill Smith followed with 18 and 16 points each per game. Sgt. Sam Latney contributed 10 and PFC Ronald Wilkerson netted 6 per game.

Harmony Church Team Takes CTC Championship

By Ken Sturzenacker

Company D, 813th Engr. Bn., uncovered a second-half offensive to move from a 15-14 deficit to a solid 36-25 victory in the Center Troop Command championship opener Monday night.

The win gave Company D a 1-0 edge in the best of three series with Company A, 1st Bn.

Company D is the Harmony Church League title holder, finishing the season with an 8-1 log.

Company A had posted an identical 8-1 record in winning the Main Post League title, and claimed the title over the 524th Personnel Service Company in a 35-33 playoff victory last Thursday night.

The first quarter of Monday night's playoff game ended in an 8-8 deadlock. Company A moved into a slim 15-14 lead at the half.

The third period went to Company D, as the Engineers held the Alphas to four points, taking a 22-19 lead into the final quarter.

Dave Damm spearheaded the Engineers' attack, notching nine of his 15 points in the second half. Tom Lewis added strong support to the comeback, making seven of his 11 points after the break.

Gerald Johnson had 10 points to pace the Alphas' effort.

Ralph Willard, season high scorer for the Alphas with a 16-point average per game, was caught in the blizzard which blanketed the Northeast last weekend and could not return to play.

To capture the Harmony Church League title, Company D defeated Company C, 813th Engr. Bn., 46-36 last Friday.

In first quarter action, Company D built a 16-4 lead and stayed out of danger for the rest of the game. The teams swapped baskets with Company D holding a 26-12 margin at the half. In the final period the score widened to 36-24.

Representing Center Troop Command in the post wide tournament Feb. 17-25 will be Company D, 813th Engr. Bn., and Company A, 1st Bn., Main Post League champion.

Registration Opens For Soap Box Derby

The Youth Activities Council (YAC), has announced the opening of registration for the 32nd annual Soap Box Derby.

Boys who are interested in competing in the 1969 Derby to be held Aug. 23 in Akron, Ohio, can enter by visiting Bill Heard Chevrolet Company, 1501 First Ave., Columbus, Ga., or YAC, Bldg. No. 338 to complete the necessary forms. Each boy must be accompanied by a parent or guardian.

Only boys who have reached the age of 11 through 15, inclusive, by Aug. 1, 1969, can enter the contest.

In order to go to the finals at Akron, a boy must first win the local city championship to be held July 13 at the Soap Box Derby Race Track near Muscogee County Airfield. The Junior Chamber of Commerce is responsible for running the city race this year.

The first place winner of the local race will receive a $500 savings bond and a trophy.

The boy who wins the national championship at Akron will be awarded a $7,500 college scholarship. Winners of second through ninth places will receive college scholarships worth, respectively, $5,000, $4,000, $3,500, $3,000, $2,500, $2,000, $1,500 and $1,000.

In addition, trophies will be awarded for the best designed car, the best constructed car, the best upholstered car, and the car with the best brakes. Special trophies will be presented to each Canadian and overseas winner.

There is no specific entry fee except for the cost of materials needed to build the car. Any materials may be used, although there are certain rules with which the entrants must comply.

The cost of materials used in constructing the car, less the wheels and the axle (which can be obtained only at Bill Heard Chevrolet), must not exceed $20. All entrants must submit an itemized list of the cost of each part of their cars.

Cars must be built solely by the person signing the entry form. The wheelbase less than 48 inches and the entire length can be no more than 80 inches.

The rules also state that each car must be no more than 28 inches high, must have a road clearance of no less than three inches and cannot exceed a width of 34½ inches. The combined weight of the car and driver cannot exceed 250 pounds.

Units wishing to sponsor a boy who may not be able to pay for materials to build car should go to the YAC office or call 545-3371.

3 Tennis Stars Enter Macon International

Three more world-famous tennis stars will participate in the second Macon International Tennis Tournament February 18-23 at the Macon Coliseum.

Jan Kukal of Czechoslavakia, Thomas Koch of Brazil and Mark Cox of Great Britain have signed for the upcoming international event, according to George Peake, general chairman.

Thomas Koch is ranked No. 1 in Brazil. He won his only 1968 meeting with former Wimbledon and U.S. champion Manolo Santana of Spain, ranked No. 1 in world in 1965, and Dutch champion Tom Okker, currently ranked No. 3 in world tennis.

Tennis fans saw the magnificent play of Czechoslavakian Davis cupper Jan Kukal in Macon last year. He was a semi-finalist in the first Macon International and was particularly impressive with his smashing serve.

Mark Cox is ranked No. 2 in England. Cox was the fourth busiest player on the circuit in 1968, winning 50 matches and losing 20. Cox has a very tough slice serve and one of the best backhands in the game.

Tickets for the Second Macon International Tennis Tournament are now on sale at the Coliseum box office. Reserved seat tickets for the entire tournament are $15.00 for adults and $7.50 for students. Reserved tickets on a daily basis are $3.00 for adults and $1.50 for students Tuesday through Friday, and $4.00 for adults and $2.00 for students on Saturday and Sunday.

Archives Yield Family History

Lt. William A. Darrin Jr., given the task of rewriting the history of the 51st Company (OC), 5th Stu. Bn., The Candidate Brigade, delved into the archives and came up with a history of his own family's activities at Fort Benning.

Darrin found that his father was also an OCS graduate, who after being commissioned April 22, 1943, served in the European theater during World War II.

Darrin's research also disclosed that his step-father was stationed at Fort Benning, as was his father-in-law. His step-father, D. Page Cornwell, was in the Quartermaster Corps and was stationed here from December, 1942 to November, 1943.

Clifford L. Miller, Darrin's father-in-law, was at Benning as a private from January to March 1943 before he became a pilot and served as a navigator on a B17 in the South Pacific.

Scouts Take Part In Celebrations

By Sp4 Richard Emerson

Area Boy Scouts are celebrating the 59th anniversary of scouting this week during national Boy Scout week.

An estimated 5,000 Fort Benning and Chattahoochee Valley scouts support the national theme, "America's Manpower Begins With Boypower," with displays, programs and scouting demonstrations on and off post.

The scouts set up a live demonstration of a campsite in front of the Main Post Exchange on Saturday. Other displays were located near the Commissary and Infantry Hall.

Off post displays were set up at Oakland Park Shopping Center, Traffic Circle Shopping Center, Columbus Square, St. Mary's Lutheran Church and St. Mary's Elementary School.

Last Friday's opening celebrations were followed by Uniform Day on Saturday, when all the Boy Scouts, Explorers, Cub Scouts and Webelos wore their uniforms, "to publicize the number of scouts active in the area," said Major William C. Spence, a member of the Boy Scout Activities Committee.

This was followed by Religious Day on Sunday. An estimated 1,000 area scouts acted as ushers and took part in the programs of area Sunday Schools and churches. More than 2.2 million participated nationwide.

Annually, 35,000 scouts complete a religious program of study and service in their respective churches and institutions.

The national objective of Boy Scout Week 1969, according to Alden G. Barber, chief scout executive, was a total commitment to greatly increase the scope and quality of service to all boys.

Sights for Grenade Rifle Tested By Infantry Board

The Army Infantry Board, an Infantry materiel test activity at Fort Benning, is currently evaluating sights for the XM203 40-mm Pump Grenade Launcher attachment to the M16A1 Rifle.

After starting with six proposed sights for the new weapon, test officials have eliminated four already in the evaluation tests due to deficiencies in their capabilities, leaving a "battle" sight and a "quadrant" sight competing for adaptation and acceptance into the early service tests to be conducted by the Infantry Board.

Purpose of the evaluation tests is to select a suitable sight for the new launcher attachment which can be used under all foreseeable circumstances. Tests conducted in field trails here have been performed under situations and circumstances as near to battlefield conditions as possible.

This realistic testing will better insure the ultimate satisfaction in a chosen sight. In qualifying the sight through critical testing of the product, the Infantry Board also insures the infantryman that he receives "Only the Best for the Finest."

Test soldiers described the two sights as having different capabilities and advantages but highly competitive within their range capability. The "battle" sight is a top-mounted "open-ladder" leaf type design which attaches to the upper hand guard of the M16A1 rifle. The sight is graduated in 50 meter increments from zero to 250 meters, and uses the front sight post of the rifle as the front aiming point. Advantages of this sight are the ease and speed of its use and durability under the combat situations of entangled jungle growth and grimy field conditions.

The "quadrant" sight is side-mounted and attached to the left, forward section of the M16A1 carrying handle. The sight is graduated in meters from 50 to 400 in 25 meter increments. Sighting on the target is done by positioning the front sight post on the base of the target and aligning it with the rear aperture. Advantages of this sight are greater accuracy and range capability.

The present evaluation tests of the two competitive sights cover a wide field and many factors. The sights compete for accuracy of results at all ranges, speed to getting on target, time to first hit, hit probability, rate of fire and operation under the most adverse conditions of light and weigher conditions.

Evaluation test have been performed entirely by battle veterans. The minimum time spent on the field of battle in Vietnam by any of the test personnel is 12 months. These are the men who know what is needed in battlefield equipment.

Test officer in charge of the evaluation is 1st Lt. John H. Hennessey Jr. of the Small Arms Test Division with SSgt. Roy W. Nolanas Test NCO. The tests are being conducted on Griswold, Fisk, and Pierce ranges by the Infantry Board personnel and at the same time the equipment has been undergoing airborne qualifications.

Col. Walter F. Johnston, President of the Infantry Board, announced that with the completion of evaluation, the present schedule calls for the 40-mm grenade launcher attachment and its sights to be service tested by the test board in early summer and combat evaluated in Vietnam at the same time.

Nighttime Goggles Developed

The U. S. Army has awarded a contract for the production of a new kind of electronic goggles that will enable soldiers to see better at night.

The new goggles differ from earlier night-vision devices because they do not require infrared light to illuminate the target area. Instead, they operate in existing low levels of natural illumination.

The goggles will be lighter and smaller than previous night-vision instruments. They will be produced by International Telephone and Telegraph (ITT) Corporation's Aerospace-Optical Division, Fort Wayne, Ind. under a contract for almost $5 million from the U. S. Army Electronics Command.

Services Held For Lt. Darby

Funeral services were held Tuesday in Pittsburg, Kans., for 2od Lt. John F. Darby III, who was killed in Vietnam.

Darby, a 1968 graduate of Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning, had been in Vietnam for less than a month.

The lieutenant, 24, is survived by his parents, who live in Titusville, Fla.

He was assigned to the 9th Div., 39th Infantry, near Dong Tam in the Delta region south of Saigon.

Special Promotions on Tap

WASHINGTON (ANF) — All U. S. Army soldiers who attained promotion list status to the grades of E-5, E-6 or E-7 before Aug. 1, 1968, are being promoted to those grades during this month.

The Army has authorized promotions to these men during February if they are still on the latest approved local recommended lists for promotion to those grades and are in a promotable status.

These promotions will be made without regard to Department of the Army quota, requisition action and the local position vacancy criteria. If not promoted before officially leaving a unit, affected personnel in a transit status will be promoted upon arrival at their new duty station.

This action is in accord with existing enlisted promotion policy, which provides that all individuals who attained promotion list status in these grades before Aug. 1, 1968, would be promoted to these grades ahead of an individual who attined such status for the same grade and military occupational specialty after that date.

On Aug. 1, 1968, the Army began a new procedure for measuring an enlisted man's promotion qualifications. Although the requirements for promotion generally are unchanged, the new system computes a precise numerical score for each of eight factors, considered essential for promotion.

With these scores, a recommended promotion list now is prepared in an order of merit based on the number of points recorded on the Standardized Promotion Scoring Form used throughout the Army.

As a result of the one-time promotion authority, all future promotion actions through E-7 will now fall entirely under these new enlisted promotion procedures.

The Febuary promotions will prvide a more equitable flow of promotions to grades E-5, E-6 and E-7 by clearing from recommended lists all individuals who attained list status to those grades before Aug. 1. Although some grade imbalance may result within certain units, Army personnel officials foresee no major allocation. All promotions to grade E-7 during February are reserved exclusively for personnel in this category.

The total number of promotions being made under this authority, except to grade E-7, constitutes only a small percentage of the February allocation. All promotions to grade E-7 during February are reserved exclusively for personnel in this category.

8 Winners In Contest

FORT MONROE, Va. — Eight Army newspapers, representing the First, Third, Fifth and Sixth U.S. Army areas and the Military District of Washington (MDW), have been named recipients of the U.S. Continental Army Command annual newspaper awards. As previously announced, the Fort Benning "Bayonet" was winner in the civilian enterprise division for letterpress newspapers.

Placing first in the "Authorized Army" categories are Star & Missile, Fort MacArthur, Calif., letterpress reproduction; Gulfstream, Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., offset; Weekly News, Fort Lee, Va., multilith; and Redleg Weekly, Fort Irwin, Calif., mimeograph.

The Pentagram News, Hq, MDW, was the offset winner among civilian enterprise newspapers.

The Passing Review, a Fort McNair publication, won the award for magazine format; The Fife Tree, Fort Baker, Calif., the "Special" category award.

Publications were chosen on the basis of support of Army Information objectives, adherence to journalistic standards, and use as an instrument of command.

Winners will receive certificates signed by Gen. James K. Woolnaugh, Commanding General, USCONARC.

Special Services Hosts American Music Program

Special Services will present three programs dedicated to the "Parade of American Music." The Columbus Choral Guild will perform music of Stephen Foster, Negro Spirituals, and excerpts from "West Side Story" and "Carousel" on Saturday, 7:30 p.m. at the Kelley Hill Service Club, and on Sunday, 23 February at 1500 hours in the Fort Benning Playhouse. The Columbus Symphony will perform a program of concert favorites in Marshall Auditorium on Thursday at 8:30 p.m. Admission is free. No advance reservations are necessary.

As part of the current Kelley Hill Service Club observance of the "Parade of American Music Month," Mrs. Grace Whitehead, accompanist of the Springer Ballet Company of Columbus, will perform several pieces by American Composers. Mrs. Whitehead will perform Sunday at 3 p.m.

In addition to appearing at the Kelley Hill club, Mrs. Whitehead is scheduled to appear at the Main Post Club and at the North Harmony Service Club.

55th Co. Record Climbs to 6-1

Blasting opponents by a combined total of 58 points 55th Company (OC) scored two run-away basketball victories.

In action Feb. 1, 55th Co. trounced 54th Co. 71-41 and came back the next day to whip 52nd Co. 69-41. The two wins gave 55th Co. a season record of 6-1.

Mike Keeble paced 55th's win over 54th with 22 points, most of them on long field goals. Fifty-fifth Co.'s early lead was narrowed by 54th's Bill Donohue who scored 14 points in the second quarter.

In the second half, Keeble continued to score for 55th, and Gary Ulrich and Bob Hathaway sparked 55th's defense and rebounding. Along with Keeble's 22, Ulrich contributed 14 and Steve Meier pitched in 14. Donohue was high for 54th with 19 points.

OC Co. Scores Lop-Sided Win

The 52nd Officer Candidate Company furthered its drive to the 5th Student Battalion basketball championship with an easy 61-34 win over 51st Co. Jan. 18 at Briant Wells Field House.

Opening slowly the game was two and a half minutes into the first quarter before 52nd's Larry Hunsaker broke the scoring ice with a field goal. The score stayed tight through the first quarter, with the bigger 52nd Co. team holding a 12-9 lead.

A strong surge in the beginning of the second quarter coupled with 51st Co. turnovers gave the 52nd Co. a 28-17 lead at the half. Leading the offense were Vince Duffy, Al Beck, and Larry Hunsaker.

Through strong rebounding and alert play, 52nd Co. tagged the 51st with a 28 point deficit by the end of the third quarter.

In the fourth quarter the entire reserve component of 52nd Co.'s team saw limited action in the game which ended with 52nd on the top side of a 61-34 score.

Sp4 Mendel: Drafted For Heroism

By Sgt. James Walters

"It's funny how soon you start to forget things like that," said Sp4 Richard H. Mendel.

As he talked here Tuesday, the band and honor guard began taking positions on York Field, directly across from Infantry Hall.

A few minutes later, on the cold February afternoon, 21-year-old Mendel received his country's second highest honor for heroism, the Distinguished Service Cross.

The citation was read and he began to remember.

He remembered being a 19-year old reluctant draftee; long, exhausting days of training that turned into four short months; and he remembered a plane flight to Cam Ranh Bay, Vietnam.

But most of all, he remembered that only eight short months ago, he was sitting in a bunker west of Dak To, at a place called Firebase 29.

Patrolling had been called off. The North Vietnamese had infiltrated across from Cambodia in large strength and were badly hitting every patrol that left the hilltop perimeter. Alpha and Charlie Companies of the 1st Battalion, 8th Infantry were deepening commo trenches on the bunker line when the word came down around noon on May 2, 1968: expect an enemy weapons attack at 1630 hours and a ground attack at 1830 hours.

The intelligence people had "cried wolf" before, but there were things going on that suggested this might be it.

The chat didn't settle all afternoon as sortie after sortie of re-supply items were kicked out on the pad near Mendel's bunker. It wasn't the usual stuff — these were cases of serum albumin, medical supplies, concertina wire and mountains of all types of ammo.

The supplies were distributed, orders came to put two more layers of Health Agencies' Drive Begins

Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr. will officially open the 1969 campaign for funds to support the National Health Agencies and the International Service Agencies Marshall Auditorium Monday at 10:30 a.m..

"This combined campaign is the second of the two fund drives authorized each year for on-the-job solicitation of all personnel assigned on federal installations," said James F. Schoonover, post project officer.

A successful campaign for the United Givers Fund was completed at Fort Benning last November.

Twelve voluntary associations are combined under the National Health Agency in its drive for funds to support reserch, education and community service.

"These activities depend entirely on contributions in their fight to provide better health today and tomorrow for everyone throughout these United States," said Schoonover.

Last year in Georgia these organizations treated and provided service to over 300,000 patients suffering from heart disease, cerebral palsy, cancer, arthritis, multiple sclerosis, blindness and other crippling diseases.

The International Service Agencies consist of the American - Korean Foundation, CARE, Project HOPE and Planned Parenthood-World Population.

"To 22 million children throughout 35 countries, CARE means a daily meal at school, and pre-school

Drive Safely, General Urges

Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., Fort Benning commander, has stressed the necessity of defensive driving and use of seat belts to prevent death and injury during the long Washington's Birthday holiday weekend starting today.

In a letter to all units here, the general said that 35 Fort Benning soldiers have been killed in off-duty accidents during this fiscal year. Thirty-two of these deaths resulted from automobile accidents and none of the victims was using a seat belt.

The general added that during the three-day holiday many of the soldiers here will be exposed to highway travel and the hazards accompanying it, especially because of the bad weather at this time of the year.

O'Connor Has Been 'Superlative' Soldier

By PFC Ben Cunningham

Capt. Oscar Lee O'Connor, a 31-year-old Texan who wants to become a minister, set a fast pace for himself when he entered the Army in 1955.

O'Connor, awarded the Distinguished Service Cross in ceremonies here Tuesday, apparently hasn't slowed down, either.

At 22, O'Connor was the youngest staff sergeant and youngest master parachutist in the Army.

He served nine years as an enlisted man before entering OCS, and was named the distinguished graduate of his class in 1964. Since his commissioning he has served two tours in Vietnam.

On his last tour, in 1967, he became the youngest battalion commander in Vietnam.

When O'Connor was awarded the DSC, it was his ninth medal. Previously he had received the Silver and Bronze Stars, the Soldiers's Medal, Purple Heart, Army Commendation Medal and two Vietnamese Medals. One of these was the Vietnamese Honor Medal, awarded to him for saving the lives of 12 prisoners of war in "War Zone D" last year.

CAPT. O'CONNOR

13 Silver Stars Given To Fort Benning Men

The United States' second highest award for valor, the Distinguished Service Cross, was presented to two men here Tuesday by Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr.

In a ceremony on York Field, 13 others were presented the Silver Star, one received the Legion of Merit and one, the Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict.

13 Silver Stars

197th Inf. Bde., won the DSC for extraordinary heroism in Vietnam.

Winners of the Silver Star included six members of Officers Advanced Classes here. They are Maj. James MacDonald of Riverside, Illinois and Captains Jimmy Davis of Henderson, Nev., Herbert Chaney of Daytona Beach, Fla., Kenneth Hendrix of Greenville, S. Other Silver Star winners were Captains Viestur J. Drupa of Binghamton, N. Y., and John B. Ross of Iowa City, Iowa, both with Ranger Training Command; 1st Lt. Stephen B. Cook of Akron, Ohio, Co. D (LRP), 17th Inf., 197th Inf. Bde.; Sgt. Richard Wedge of Elkart, Ind., HH&S Btry., 2nd Bn., 10th Arty., 197th Inf. Bde.; and three members of 3rd Ranger Co., SFCs Clarence Urban of Columbus and Ernest Crane of Dahlonega and SSgt. George Mock of Jacksonville, Fla.

Sp4 Bolton Grimmett of Birmingham, Ala., with Co. B, 1st Bn., CTC, received the Soldier's Medal.

Mendel

sand bags on bunker rooftops, and three more strands of concertina were strung on the perimeter.

The sun was getting low when, as suddenly as it had begun, the big CH-47 "hooks" stopped lumbering in to Firebase 29.

A silence fell as men quietly began stockpiling full M-16 magazines and mortarmen cut charges and unwrapped rounds.

And just as predicted, at 1630 hours, the first B-40 rockets tore into the American machine gun position, recoilless rifle and mortar emplacements with deadly accuracy. Enemy mortars were "walked" slowly up the hill and began pounding the inside of the perimeter.

Between impacting enemy rounds, Mendel raised up and looked out the firing port of his bunker for a target. But there was nothing to see.

A short while later, the men on the perimeter felt a sudden relief as the enemy rounds stopped. But the feeling was only momentary.

Mendel glanced at his watch. It was 1830 hours.

It took a long time for everyone to realize what was happening. There is the element of fantasy in conceiving a human wave attack.

Small figures attempted to move across the helicopter pad in front of Mendal's bunker, carrying bangalore torpedoes made out of bamboo and TNT. Mendal and the entire Alpha Company perimeter opened up. It all seemed easy.

But across the firebase on Charlie Company's section of the perimeter, it was a different story. North Vietnamese soldiers were moving in waves up the steep incline to the perimeter. Despite a wall of counter fire, the enemy demolition teams blew through the wire and began streaming into the perimeter. With ant - like determination they began systematically occupying perimeter bunkers.

A call was sent for reinforcements from the relatively secure Alpha Company. Mendel was left in charge of his bunker as a platoon was moved up to the trouble area.

"Down where we were," recounted Mendel, "no one had any idea that the North Vietnamese had broken through." Mendal waited for about 45 minutes and when the relief platoon failed to return, he left a man in charge of the bunker and move up the slope to the breeched perimeter.

"That's when I knew that something was definitely wrong."

He moved up to a depression where a small squad of American soldiers were firing into their own bunkers. The enemy occupants countered with machine gun fire and grenades.

Mendel moved back and assisted with the wounded. Confusion seemed everywhere. Organizing a small squad, he gathered all the grenades and M-72 LAW's he could find and took a position near the end of the section of bunkers held by the North Vietnamese.

"Toss me some grenades!" he yelled to a buddy. One by one, the soldier was giving Mendel the grenades. Mendel was only mildly surprised to discover that the pins had already been pulled.

When the enemy fire dwindled for a moment, Mendel seized the opportunity to move forward. He killed two of the enemy with the last remaining rounds of his M-16 and got a third with a commandeered enemy AK-47. He was wounded in the process.

With no more grenades, he resorted to whatever he could find as he lead the systematic recapture of the perimeter bunkers. Employing gasoline - filled artillery canisters, he rushed forward and one by one, turned the bunkers into infernos for the enemy.

Daylight was greeted by sporadic firing from enemy delaying elements.

Two enemy battalions had failed to move two American companies largely through the efforts of Sp4 Richard H. Mendel, a 20-year old draftee from Saginaw, Mich. Eight months and many thousand miles away from Firebase 29, Sp4 Mendel was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross. In a few days, he will have completed his two - year military obligation and will return to college.

SUBDUED NAMETAGS

What is the date for the mandatory wear of subdued name and U.S. Army tapes?

Because of printing and supply problems the date has been extended to July 1, 1969.

FLU SHOTS

Approximately how many flu shots has the Army administered to its people?

The Army has administered approximately 250,000 inoculations for Hong Kong Flu, as of January 23, 1969. Estimates are that 760,000 additional shots were given by mid-February. These figures, according to the Office of the Chief of Information's Weekly Report Number 24, includes dependents as well as military. The figures are based on estimates of shots per vials distributed.

NCOC PERFORMANCE

How have the graduates of the Non-Commissioned Officer's Candidate School performed in Vietnam?

The Skill Development Base Program's NCO Candidate Course graduates rated excellent after four-month performance evaluation period in Vietnam according to Army Digest.

Report shows over 80 per cent performing exceptionally well in grades E-5 and E-6 most with less than 15 months service. To date, about 9,000 EM have completed the course and are now filling important positions throughout the Army.

I would like to apply for the Basic Military Journalist Course? When is the next class open?

The Department of the Army has announced the Basic Military Journalist Course (570-71Q20) is not available for Active Army in-service applicants, enlistment or re-enlistment, during 3rd and 4th Quarters of Fiscal 69. Since the BMJ Course is a feeder for the Broadcast Specialist Course (570-71R20), training will be reduced considerably.

Have recent demonstrations against ROTC on many college campuses resulted in a decline of the number of officers recruited from the program?

The Army expects to obtain 16,607 new second lieutenants this year compared to 14,176 in 1968, and 10,727 in 1967. The increases are expected despite a slight decline in total ROTC enrollment and a substantial decrease in the number of institutions requiring military training as part of their curriculum.

During the past five years, the Army said, the number of institutions with compulsory ROTC courses decreased from 132 to 95 and total enrollment dropped from 159,849 to 150,982.

The decline in total number of students enrolled is a result of many universities dropping the compulsory feature of the program.

QUARTERMASTER LAUNDRY

What is the Quartermaster laundry payroll deduction plan?

It is one of three types of Quartermaster laundry services available to active and retired military at this post.

Under the payroll deduction plan enlisted men can have 25 pieces of laundry plus a laundry bag finished as bundled laundry each week for a cost of $4.60 a month.

You can apply for it by going to your unit supply sergeant and signing the proper form.

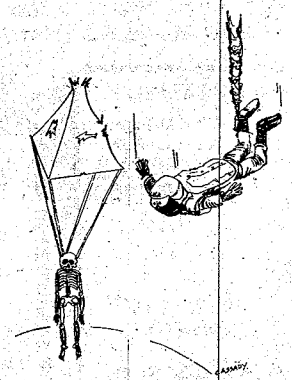
The Quartermaster laundry adheres to quality-control standards to insure care and treatment of clothing. These standards include checking for excess shrinkage, processing flatwork such as sheets, handkerchiefs and pillowcases so that all surfaces are smooth and free of wrinkles and insuring all articles are free of objectionable odors.

Service fatigues and khai uniforms are pressed and starched at no extra cost. They will also repair small tears, sew on buttons and remove spots without charge.

The other types of laundry service are cash per bundle and regular laundry service.

Healthier living standards goal of Benning fund drive

Now that spring is just around the corner and the miseries of winter and the Hong Kong flu, are about gone, we are beginning to plan and do things that keep us healthy — in body and spirit. Now is the time to plan to do something about research for better medical and technical services that will help keep us that way.



Time, too, to do something about this country's voluntary programs to assist and relieve those that are suffering from cancer, arthritis or other crippling diseases, or living in poverty because of economic pressures beyond their immediate control.

Military and civilian workers of the U. S. Government all over the world are being asked, during this time of year, to assist the National Health Agencies and the International Service Agencies in their programs of research and service to rid us of crippling disease and to release the pressures in overpopulated areas that cause poverty and existance under living standards so low as to shock the senses.

Fort Benning's campaign for funds for these agencies begins this week and will continue through April 8. Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., in his address at the kickoff ceremony, urged everyone to be generous when making contributions to these worthy humanitarian organizations.

We who are healthy and thrive under the highest living standards in the world want to remain that way. We also want to see the same conditions, not only for other individuals of our own country, but for all people everywhere.

We can help push a little further toward that goal by being generous in our contributions to those agencies that are working to make it possible but require funds to carry on. We can help by placing a worthwhile gift in the small red and blue envelopes handed us by our unit representatives in this campaign — James F. Schoonover.

Mail tax report early to get speedy refund

REFUND OR PAYMENT, that is the question concerning most citizens as the deadline draws near for filing our 1968 income tax returns.

WHETHER YOU WILL be among those receiving a refund or having to make up the difference between what was taken out of your pay and what is due Uncle Sam, the result is inevitable — the sooner you get it in the mail the sooner you can quit worrying about it.

AND IT STANDS TO REASON that the sooner you receive the money, in the case of those receiving refunds, the greater amount of time you will have for it to draw interest. Therefore, it can mean a few more dollars in your child's educational fund, the family Christmas fund or that retirement nest egg that you have been building up over the years.

AND FOR THOSE WHO WILL have to face the inevitable, that of paying their share, the earlier you get your returns off the sooner you can quit worrying about them. You will also reduce the possibility of making a costly mistake during a last minute rush to make the deadline.

IN ANY EVENT, THE moment of truth has arrived — it's time to get busy and compile those figures and compute those exemptions and deductions. And, although we have a highly complex tax system, the government has made every attempt to make it as simple as possible.

WHEN YOU COMPUTE YOUR tax, or have someone else do it for you, remember this — the government does not want you to pay more than your fair share of taxes. So if you are in doubt about a deduction, consult your legal officer or a tax expert, don't simply ignore it with the idea that "they wouldn't accept it anyway." If you are legally entitled to a deduction, no matter how insignificant, the government wants you to take it.

ON THE OTHER HAND, don't try to "slick" the government out of their just due. The Internal Revenue Service takes a dim view of anyone trying to pull a fast one, and will take vigorous action against those individuals who attempt to sbirk their responsibility. It isn't fair to try and shift your part of the countrys' tax burden to the conscientious taxpayer.

YOUR ANNUAL FEDERAL INCOME tax is one of the responsibilities that comes with the rights of citizenship. All it takes for you to meet this responsibility is to be honest and accurate when you file your 1968 income tax. (AFPS)

Good driver scans road

Staring a hole into the vehicle in front of you is a good way of being duped right in to an accident.

The things that determine how the driver ahead is going to react are happening ahead of him. It may be an intersection, a passing car, a vehicle pulling out from a side road, an animal or pedestrian. Whatever it is, the action he takes will be your tip-off to take some sort of evasive action.

When his brake lights come on it's the signal for you to brake, too. If he swerves, you swerve. If he manages to avoid an accident you'll be able to avoid one, too, if you have sharp reflexes and plenty of luck going for you.

There's a safer way to do it.

You can get a head start on the guy ahead by looking ahead. This will enable you to see what's happening at the same time he does or maybe even before.

This can give you extra seconds to change a near miss (or possibly an accident) into a no-sweat defensive action.

You'll be reacting to the action. Not reacting to another driver's reaction to the action.

Lift up your eyes and scan far ahead for what's happening, while, of course, staying aware of what's going on in your immediate vicinity. (National Safety Council)

OCS Grad Takes White House Job

LT. COL. COFFEY
OCS, Ranger

Lt. Col. Vernon C. Coffey, Jr., a distinguished graduate of Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning and an honor graduate of the Ranger School, Assistant to the Armed has been appointed Army Assistant to the Armed Forces Aide to President Richard M. Nixon.

The 1953 graduate of OCS recently returned from Vietnam where he was an executive officer of the 3rd Brigade of the 1st Infantry Division.

Following graduation from OCS, Coffeey was assigned in Korea from August 1955 to January 1957. Upon return to the United States he entered the Ranger School at Fort Benning and received his Ranger tab in April of 1957.

He was then selected as an instructor in the Jungle and Amphibious Committee of the Ranger Department at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla. He also was an instructor with the Fort Benning Ranger Committee.

While in Vietnam from February to December 1968, Coffee held the position of deputy chief of staff, G-4, with the 1st Infantry Division. On May 24, 1968, he assumed command of the 2nd Battalion of the division's 28th Infantry where he served as battalion commander until November 1968.

Coffey's decorations include the Silver Star Medal with oak leaf cluster and the Air Medal with three oak leaf clusters. He is a 1955 graduate of the U. S. Army Command and General Staff College.

'Togetherness' for Trainees

Do you remember your first days in the Army—the fear of the unknown and, most of all, no friends? The Training Center is changing this by implementing the "Buddy System."

During his first days at the Reception Station, each receptee is encouraged to select a "buddy"—one with whom he shares personal and common interests, environmental background, and one who is even approximately the same height and weight.

This system has been proven to be very effective in the development of esprit de corps, improvement of individual morale and the installation of discipline through appealing to the individual's sense of responsibility in assisting a "buddy."

On the last day of processing at the Reception Station, selections should be confirmed and reflected on rosters to indicate each pair of buddies. It is realized that some individuals will not make a selection. In such cases, the cadre use their judgment in pairing off individuals. Each team will be placed in the same squad to insure constant association throughout the cycle. They will be expected to help each other in all facets of training and in the day-to-day barracks life with special emphasis on health and personal problems.

Major Achieves 500 On Proficiency Test

Maj. Wilford A. Phelps, 29, Feb. 5 became the first field-grade officer at the United States Army Infantry School to achieve a perfect score of 500 on the physical combat proficiency test.

Maj. Phelps, a student in the Infantry Officer Advanced Course here, took the PCPT test at Stewart Field. He was administered the test by the Ranger Department a day ahead of his classmates because of an injury he had sustained.

The injury apparently did not hamper the major as he went on to achieve the following scores in each of the five events: low crawl — 19 seconds; horizontal ladder—78 rungs; run, dodge and jump—20.5 seconds; grenade throw—38 points; and mile run—5 minutes and 58 seconds.

The major said the lowest score he ever achieved on the combat proficiency test was 468 when he was going through the Ranger course here in 1961.

In 1961, when Maj. Phelps graduated from UCLA as an ROTC distinguished graduate, he had been commissioned a second lieutenant in the Regular Army.

The major, who is interested and plays in all sports was on the Fort Benning volleyball team which won the Third Army championship last year.

April 10, Maj. Phelps will complete the Infantry Officer Advance Course. Later, he will return to Vietnam for his second tour. He hopes to be assigned to the Florida Ranger camp when he returns from overseas in 1970.

Wives Hear Lecture on Teenage Drug Abuse

Mr. Steve Ross, investigator with C.I.D., presented an informative program on dope addiction to the Medical Department Activities Wives as they met for their February luncheon.

Mr. Ross spoke of the increasing drug abuse in our country with special attention drawn to the hazards of drug abuse. He cited as an example, sniffing glue for one week can lead to irreversible brain damage, can damage heart, liver, kidney and bone marrow to such an extent that death may result.

He emphasized the fact that a person not only can become addicted to the narcotics such as heroin or opium but also may become dependent upon stimulants such as pep pills or diet pills and depressants such as tranquilizers, sleeping pills or barbiturates.

In discussing marijuanna, Mr. Ross point'ed out five ways that the drug affects the body:

1. Impairment of judgment and memory.
2. Confusion and delusions.
3. Distortion of sensations (such as vision and hearing).
4. Loss of coordination.
5. Stimulation of aggressiveness.

He further pointed out some of the effects and dangers of LSD. He warned that LSD is not only unpredictable from trip to trip but also that one trip may unexpectedly recur up to 2 years without having taken an additional dose during the interval. Brain damage resulting in permanent insanity was mentioned as one of the hazards of its use. However the most alarming fact about the use of LSD was that it may lead to the malformation of chromosomes that would cause a deformity of the offspring.

Indicators

After discussing the various drugs that are being used by many of our teenagers today, Mr. Ross listed eight signs that should arouse suspicion as to the possible use of drugs:

1. Quarrelsome disposition exhibited by arguing with parents.
2. Decreasing interest in sports and bobbies.
3. Sudden downward trend in school grades.
4. Desire to sleep more than usual without a corresponding increase in physical activity.
5. Sloppy dress and a decreasing desire to adhere to the family standard of cleanliness.
6. New friends not as a result of a change in school, residency, etc.
7. Keeping of unusually late hours or staying out all night without explanation.
8. Apparent intoxication with no indication of alcohol being the cause.

He remarked that experience had shown that the youthful offender will exhibit one or more of the above tendencies as he enters the drug abuse pattern and as his habit increases so will the signs and symptoms of that habit increase

In his concluding remarks, Mr. Ross stressed the importance of preventing drug abuse by educating the people. Emphasis was made that the support of all in the community was needed to curb this trend. It was suggested that massive meetings of PTAs would greatly help in informing the public.

Mrs. Otis Bridgeford, president, called the meeting to order and welcomed new arrivals Mrs. Thomas H. Clark, Mrs. John P. Garrett, Mrs. William S. Glass, Mrs. Henry Harden, Mrs. Charles B. Herron, Mrs. William C. Jewell, Mrs. Ronald J. Kinateder, Mrs. Daniel L. Laduke, Mrs. Donald F. Loomis, Mrs. James Newton, Mrs. E. O'Sullivan, Mrs. George Shepherd, Mrs. Vern J. Iannone, Mrs. William McManus, Mrs. Jack Meyer, Mrs. Thomas Parkinson, Mrs. Bennard Poeschel, Mrs. Larry Wood, Mrs. John R. Woodard, Captain Charlotte A. Wytias and Mrs. Lewis ZerFoss.

Hostesses were Mrs. John Dowless, chairman, Mrs. George Breza, Mrs. Robert Freeman, Mrs. Robert Kreidinger, Mrs. Alphonse Lask and Mrs. Herbert See. Valentine hearts and red carnations decorated the tables.

8 slices trimmed bread
4 (or more) slices American cheese

Make sandwiches & cut diagonally. Place in buttered baking dish.

In blender combine 3 eggs, ⅛ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 1 teaspoon paprika. Cover and turn to high speed. Remove cover with motor running, pour in 2 cups milk. Pour egg mixture over sandwiches. Let stand 30 minutes. Bake in a preheated 350 F oven at least 20 minutes or until puffed and golden. Serves 4.

Mix candy in boiling water. Add to jello and dissolve. Add applesauce, lemon juice and nuts. Allow mixture to partially set—Add about 1 T milk to cream cheese to soften and swirl through gelatin mixture.

Fashions Highlight Valentine Luncheon

A Valentine's Day Luncheon held recently by the Officers' Wives of the 197th Infantry Brigade was highlighted by a fashion show featuring towels, sheets and bedspeads as basic fabrics for apparel.

Appearing before a huge red heart, ladies from the 4th Bn., 69th Armor, the hostess unit, modeled the dresses created from fabrics provided by a local drygoods store.

Special guests for the luncheon were Mrs. Franklin L. Wilson, and Mrs. Peter G. Fleming. They were introduced to the ladies by Mrs. John E. Strever, Jr., wife of the 197th brigade commander.

Mrs. Wilson is the wife of the brigade S-3, Lt. Col. Franklin L. Wilson, while Mrs. Fleming is the wife of Lt. Col. Peter G. Fleming, the brigade's new executive officer. Neither of the wives of the new officers had been to one of the wives bi-monthly luncheons before.

In addition to the brigade luncheon, the ladies of the unit have been busy with their monthly social coffees and business meetings.

Ladies of the 1st Bn., 29th Inf. met at the home of Mrs. Harvey Brown for coffee.

The wives of the 5th Bn., 31st Inf. met at the home of Mrs. Russell Rohrer. Mrs. Fredrick Winfrich co-hostessed the event.

The ladies of the 1st Bn., 58th Inf. met at the home of Mrs. Robert Covington. Capt. Covington is a chaplain for Harmony Church Chapel No. 1, where the troops of the 58th Inf. are quartered.

She was assisted at the coffee by Mrs. Richard Mather, wife of Chaplain Capt. Richard Mather, another of the chaplain staff for the 58th Inf.

The ladies of the 4th Bn., 69th Armor held their coffee last week, taking advantage of the time to plan the brigade luncheon. The 69th Armor ladies were hostesses for the brigade event.

The ladies of the 7th Bn., 16th Arty. met at the home of Mrs. Alan Duvall. She was assisted by Mrs. Olin E. Perkins.

ACS Begins Small Unit Coffees for NCO Wives

Army Community Services is sponsoring small unit coffees for enlisted and NCO Wives here. Unit coffees have long been the custom for officer wives but have not been widespread among the enlisted and NCO Wives. Consequently NCO wives have rarely been personally contacted upon their husband's arrival at a new unit and therefore have little unit "esprit de corp".

The purpose of the coffees, to be held on either a company or battalion level, is to let the wives meet each other.

Previously, wives have had to seek out organizations and creative outlets on their own and many times the new enlisted or NCO wife does not know how or where to begin.

It is hoped that bringing wives together through monthly unit coffees will enable them to feel more at home at Fort Benning and have a happier tour here.

ISB Coffees

NCO and enlisted wives of Co. G, ISB, met this month for coffee at the Hospitality House. Mrs. Gerald Furnell, wife of S. Sgt. Gerald R. Furnell; Mrs. Michael Senical, wife of SFC Michael Senical and Mrs. Kenneth Simpson, wife of S. Sgt. Kenneth R. Simpson were hostesses. The decorations carried out a Valentine's Day theme with heart shaped name tags and a center piece of fresh flowers and red candles.

Mrs. John B. Webb, wife of Lt. Col. Webb, ISB Commander was honored guest with Mrs. Cleo Carter, Jr., wife of Co. G's commanding officer Capt. Carter, Jr. and Mrs. Walter J. Ibbotson, wife of ISB CSM J. Ibbotson.

Also present were Mrs. Douglas Twiggs, Mrs. Larry Powell, Mrs. William E. Extine, Mrs. Emerich Gaksi, Mr. Olas Randolph, and Mrs. John Davis.

Plans were made for the Mar. 4 coffee at the Hospitality House. All wives of men in Co. G, ISB, TSB are urged to attend. No reservations are necessary.

Honored guests were Mrs. Lon D. Marlow, wife of Col. Marlow, TSB commander, Mrs. Warren A. Paulk, wife of TSB CSM Paulk and Mrs. Raymond Kampe, wife of Col. Kampe. Mrs. Kampe is supervisor of volunteers for ACS.

Also attending were Mrs. John D. Murray, Mrs. Ephraim Porterfield, Mrs. Wm. B. Herron, Mrs. Ashby L. Pendleton, Mrs. Theodore J. Vlahogeorge, Mrs. James E. Marsh, Mrs. Robert Powell, Mrs. James Vommero and Mrs. Thomas Garett.

Wives made plans for the next coffee Feb. 24, at the Hospitality House. All wives of men in Hqs., Co., TSB are urged to attend.

The NCO Wives Club announced plans for a St. Patrick's Day Dance at their monthly business meeting, at the Top Five Supper Club. Mrs. Robert Meeks was named chairman of the dance with Mrs. Roscoe Mansfield and Mrs. Arthur Hayman as co-chairmen. The dance will be held March 14 at the Sand Hill Club.

Two new board members were recognized at the meeting. Mrs. Herbert J. Combee is the new 2nd vice president succeeding Mrs. J. E. Mosely. Mrs. Grover Allen was named assistant treasurer, replacing Mrs. Wallace Colson.

New members recently joining the club are Mesdames: Bruce Eisenman, Spurgeon Sizemore, Thomas Brestin, Johnnie Tolson, Ken Emerson, Earl Wright, Charles Brown, Cleven Lloyd, Marlin Kimmel, Lavon Thomas, James Biddle, Fred Smith, Cooper Lobato, and Foy Caskey.

Chaplains Deal With 'Personal Problems'...And More

By Spc Ken Starsenacker

"That sounds like a personal problem to me, soldier. Why don't you go see the chaplain?"

The jokes about personal problems and the chaplain hide a serious point, according to Chaplain (Maj.) Wilton E. Sloan, Center Troop Command.

The bulk of the chaplain's duties fall into the service category—being available for counseling both for personal problems and in times of emergency. "If nothing else," Chaplain Sloan said, "we can send a man to a place where he can get the help he needs, even if we can't give him the help he's looking for ourselves."

Too many people seem to feel the chaplain is the man to see only as a last resort.

"By the time most people with a problem come to this office, there just isn't enough time left to take care of things properly."

"The chaplain's office should be the first place to go when one is faced with any problem that can't be handled through the normal chain of command," the chaplain explained.

The members of the chaplain's staff are available at all times, 24 hours a day. If necessary, a chaplain can be reached through the duty NCO at night, Chaplain Sloan pointed out.

The work done by the chaplain's section involves much more than just sitting in an office, waiting for people to come in with problems. The staff of the CTC chaplain performs about three or four weddings a month, as well as chapel services, baptisms and funeral ceremonies.

In addition, there is also the routine processing of paperwork, especially on personnel who are changing assignments, the consolidation of reports and the distribution of information.

"In other words, we're a service agency for Center Troop Command," he said.

The other CTC chaplains are Maj. Ezra Everett, Capt. Quincy Scott and Capt. William F. McAllister. Everett is responsible for the Indianhead Road Chapel. Scott serves the Sand Hill Chapel, which covers personnel from the 67th Maintenance Bn. and the 818th Engineer Bn., and McAllister serves in Harmony Church, covering the 43rd Engr. Bn. and the 991st Engr. Gp.

Sloan conducts services at the Infantry Center Chapel and the post stockade. Within the past few months Sloan, who plans to retire later this year, has donated over 150 books to the stockade library.

"The books have helped some of the men with their problems, and reminded them that being in the stockade is not necessarily the end of the road for them," the chaplain explained. "Our services and counseling programs are available to everyone who wants to use them.

"It is my opinion that most of the men in the stockade, especially those who are in for being AWOL, just felt frustrated with some difficulty at home, and felt the only way to handle it was to go AWOL. Of course, that only added to the trouble."

Army Needs Volunteer Linguists

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The U. S. Army is seeking enlisted personnel to fill a variety of worldwide jobs for linguists and translators.

The language training quotas are filled by volunteers, including those who enlist for this program.

Courses offered include Vietnamese, German, French, Russian, Spanish and other special languages of more limited interest.

Because of the wide demand for linguists, interested personnel may apply for the training regardless of their Military Occupational Specialty (MOS).

Some of the qualifications are a GT (General Technical) score of 100 or higher; completion of basic combat and advanced individual training (although applications may be submitted while individuals are in basic training); a minimum of 14 months (18 months for personnel attending the extended language courses) service remaining upon completion of linguists training.

Also applicants must score at least 18 on the Army Language Aptitude Test (ALAT-1 or ALAT-2) or have successfully completed a language course at the Defense Language Institute.

Complete details or applying for linguist training are contained in AR 611-62.

Post Will Hold Demonstrations For Patriotism

A series of mass "demonstrations" will be staged today by Fort Benning soldiers and civilians.

The demonstrations are for patriotism, and occupants of family quarters and other buildings have been urged to fly the American flag. The celebration is the observance of George Washington's birthday.

Each post housing unit is equipped with a bracket to support a standard flag set. The flag sets can be purchased through the Main Post Exchange, Toy and Garden Department, or a telephone call to 545-1861 will bring a Boy Scout to deliver a kit to family quarters.

Prior notice is posted in the Family Quarters Bulletin and the Daily Bulletin before each of the 21 days of the year that flag flying is encouraged.

New Illumination System Is Portable, Easy To Use

A newly developed battlefield illumination system (BIS) is presently undergoing service testing by the U.S. Army Infantry Board here.

The new illumination system implements 12 individual projectiles, each containing a parachute-deployed illuminating candle. It is contained in a 5x6x21 inch molded plastic case. The system is portable, weighing 13½ pounds.

A long-burning, short range, lightweight illuminating device, the new system is designed to supplement the illuminating systems currently being used in Vietnam. The new BIS increases the defensive nature of the present trip-flares through its diversification in placement and employment. It can also team with the 81-mm mortar firing sites in the defense of the fighting unit when illumination is required. Used in this capacity, it will increase the firing rate of the 81-mm mortar crew utilizing HE, since they will not have to change their firing tables and computations for firing the 81-mm illumination round.

The new system weighs slightly more than one round of 81-mm illumination (13½ pounds to 10½ pounds). Each system contains 12 illuminating candles, and the new BIS will illuminate over a longer period of time.

Firing of the illumination system is being conducted on Fornier, Griswold, and Simpson ranges. Among data being collected is the height of bursts, time of burn out, drift under all wind conditions, all times to ignition and time of flight.

The system will be fired during inclement weather and under conditions as near as possible to battlefield. During nighttime firings, the system will be evaluated to determine if it meets the requirements of 70 per cent probability of detecting and locating a target with sufficient illumination to bring the target under small arms fire. Similar tests will also be conducted concurrently with 81-mm mortar crews using live ammunition to engage targets in an area illuminated by the device.

Steuer and Spencley will also be checking the battlefield device for transportability and durability. During these checks of the system it will be transported over the rough terrain of Fort Benning ranges by means of weapons carrier, APC, the pack of the individual foot soldier, and jumped with the airborne.

Test officials pointed out that the new illumination system was not developed nor is it expected to replace all the illumination devices used on the battlefield. It is not a cure-all. Properly deployed and utilized it will greatly improve the firing of the mortar and small arms at night, remove the necessity of carrying the small parachute individual flare to a great extent, and supplement the defensive nature of illumination through its diversified employment and placement while providing for a command observation capability.

Solid-Fuel SAM Motor Test Fired

REDSTONE ARSENAL, Ala. (ANF)—The solid propellant motor design for use with the Army's new SAM-D (Surface-to-Air Missile-Development) system has successfully passed its first firing test.

The dual-purpose firing was designed to test both the propellant system, modified slotted-tube grain configuration and the sheer-spun maraging steel motor case.

Now in advanced development, the SAM-D air-defense missile system is intended for battlefield and continental defense against high-performance aircraft and short-range missiles. It will use a sophisticated phased-array radar to simultaneously detect and track multiple targets, and track and issue guidance commands to the missiles in flight.

The highly mobile system will be mounted on tracked or wheeled vehicles. Missiles—capable of delivering either conventional or nuclear warheads—will be carried in multiples on launcher vehicles and launched directly from their individual closed canisters.

The motor was developed and tested by Thiokol Chemical Corp., contractor to Martin Marietta Corp., for the high-energy propulsion system. Raytheon Company is the prime contractor for the SAM-D system.

Vietnam Names Liaison Officer

A new liaison officer from the Republic of Vietnam's Army has been assigned here. Maj. Nham Quang Anh has assumed the duties of Maj. Tran Dinh Ngo, who left after completing a 19 month tour.

Maj. Anh, a combat veteran of the Arvin 18th Infantry Division, is a 35-year-old native of Saigon.

The major is a graduate of the Thu Duc Infantry School, Saigon. The Command and Staff School, Dalat, and the Jungle Warfare School in Malaysia. His combat experience involves operations in Lam Dong and

Boy Leads Villagers to Safety

CHU LAI, Vietnam (AMERICAL 10) — One foot in front of the other, the men have to walk with one eye on the ground, the other combing the surrounding rice paddies. And they have to move quickly — they can be fired on from three sides, as they are completely in the open.

A young Vietnamese boy walks with the platoon leader at the front of the procession. An hour earlier he had been brought in with his family as a detainee. He has offered to bring the soldiers back to his village where he knows people are hiding from the "forces". He says they are NVA, and are now in hiding themselves.

The Vietnamese interpreter has told the boy that the remaining villagers must be brought to the detainee center for their safety; or if they are enemy, they must be found. The boy is young, only nine or ten, but he is distinguished — like many Vietnamese — because he is brave.

Possibly he understands only a little of what is taking place — maybe he realizes that the lives of his friends rest upon his willingness to act for their benefit. His people must be separated from the infiltrating enemy, and the move is made for their welfare. Perhaps, even at such a young age, he has learned that this war continues as an assurance of his own life of freedom. There is an urgency to his mission.

A small boy leading a platoon of giant men across the rice fields to bring a few people to safety — to take them from the fighting to a safe place, to a camp where they will be treated humanely, to a place for food and shelter, and a kind hand from a medic who will patch their cuts and try to treat their diseases. He goes without the least coercion as the line nears the island of trees, the boy beckons on with a proud arm.

Along the dike the line forms a right angle, turning into the trees at the edge of the island. The ground becomes much harder and easier to walk on than the heavy grey mud of the paddy dikes. Upon the platoon leader's soft-spoken command, his men spread through the trees and village yards to encircle the small central hamlet to which the boy is leading them.

The machinegunner sets up and waits anxiously behind a white cement wall. Three other soldiers are quickly hidden behind straw barriers on the far side of the houses. Night fall is approaching and beneath the big-leafed trees it is a strain to see.

Pointing to the prosperous - looking hamlet he has led the troops to, the boy repeats a few words to the interpreter, and runs excitedly under the eaves and into the darkness of a building. The platoon leader waits cautiously, remembering to keep a solid perimeter and an eye to the other hutches.

At this point there is some doubt in each man's mind as to the sentiments of the little boy who has led them here. The soldiers are in a perfect position to be ambushed. But they wait, resting all hope on the virtue of the small Vietnamese.

And when the boy comes out, prodding and assuring a long line of people carrying sleeping mats and pots and pans and, it seems, everything possible, there is a special joy to be seen in the faces of even the most hardened soldiers. One man tossles the boy's hair as he leads the people by the soldier's post.

As the civilians are gathering in the courtyard, the lieutenant in charge is concerned with finding the NVA the boy has spoken of. During a preliminary search of the village a soldier had come up with two NVA field packs. Evidently the enemy troops had gone into deeper hiding. But the night has become too black to find them now. The war will go on at night.

The enemy may decide to come out to fire, but it is time now to get the innocent people to the refugee area. The old women and men, along with their children and grandchildren, lengthen the line now, as it criss-crosses back across the silent fields of rice to the American camp. The small Vietnamese boy walks proudly with the American lieutenant.

Only a little consoled by a handful of chocolate cake, a Vietnamese boy receives treatment from an Army medic. The child and his family were among villagers evacuated from a hamlet threatened by North Vietnamese infiltrators. (USA Photograph)

Cobra Strikes Halt Skirmishes

PHU LOI, Vietnam (Div 10) — The "Cobra" gunship banked more like a fixed-wing plane than a helicopter as it started its run. It dropped like a dive bomber on the enemy outpost, launching grenades and fragmentation rockets, and firing machineguns.

"I could sit at my office in the Pentagon and be fully aware of the constant changes in our Corps, but I want to be with our women and see these changes in effect," Col. Elizabeth P. Hoisington, director, Women's Army Corps (WAC) said during a visit here Feb. 12.

"My job as Director is extremely important, but I cannot possibly do it well unless I know our women," the WAC Colonel continued. "It is the women who make the Corps."

Throughout her visit here Col. Hoisington constantly stressed the importance of knowing the young women in uniform. "I get a tremendous feeling of pride after I have talked with the women and their supervisors," she said. "They are my source of motivation."

The director recently returned from Europe where she visited the WACs in Germany and Belgium. "I try to spend part of every month visiting various installation and recruiting main stations," she explained, and continued, "It is very important to see how the women are performing, and to see if we are truly contributing to the overall mission of the Army. We bring it the skills of the American women, and I have to see our overall effectiveness first hand."

Discussing changes she has seen during her 26-year career, she said, "The biggest change is the age group that forms the nucleus of the Corps. Today the Women's Army Corps and the regular Army belong to the young people, and one of the biggest jobs in the Army today is to convince these young people to stay in.

"It used to be that the women came into the service, bringing their skills to the Army, but now, with the average age of the women 18-20 years, the Army gives them their training. This is why it is so important that we try to keep these young people after they acquire this expertise.

"Three-fourths of this tremendous Army is made up of young men and women—it does not belong to us greyhaired folk," the colonel added. "We may draw up the policies and provide the 'putty' to hold it firmly together, but it is the young people of today that make the nucleus of the Army and all of the credit goes to them."

Col. Hoisington said that her favorite assignment was as commanding officer at WAC Center, Fort McClellan, Ala. "Being the Director of our corps is a tremendous honor, but as commanding officer at the WAC Center one can truly see the changes that come over these young women in such a short time and see the contribution made by each person who has worked with these young women."

"The advancements and opportunities for the women in uniform are equal to these offered the males, and there is no doubt about it, the Army is marvelous to the women," she said. I have great faith in the young women, no matter what uniform of service they wear. Of course, I am slightly partial."

Col. Hoisington, seventh director of the 26-year-old Corps, spoke to the enlisted women during a reception held in her honor at the WAC Company, where she cited the "serious business of being a woman in uniform." During her visit the colonel talked to each woman individually. She also cut the ribbon to a new "beauty parlor" to be operated and used by the women in the company.

Specialist Given MOH Posthumously

WASHINGTON (ANF)—A U.S. Army soldier was awarded the Medal of Honor posthumously for giving his life to save the lives of the other members of his squad when he threw himself on a grenade and absorbed its blast.

The award recognized Sp4 George Alan Ingalls' heroic action during a combat operation near Duc Pho, Republic of Vietnam, on April 16, 1967.

Secretary of the Army Stanley R. Resor, acting for the President and in the name of Congress, presented the medal to Ingalls' mother, Mrs. Maud M. Ingalls of Yorba Linda, Calif., for her son's conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity in action at the risk of his life above and beyond the call of duty.

Ingalls was serving as a rifleman with Company A, 2d Battalion, 5th Cavalry, 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile), on a night ambush mission. Sometime after the ambush had been set up, a hand grenade was thrown from the nearby dense undergrowth into the center of his squad's position.

The grenade did not explode and was followed shortly by a second grenade which landed between Ingalls and a nearby comrade. Although he could have jumped to a safe position, Ingalls threw himself on the grenade and absorbed its full blast.

Aerobatic Captain Is Violinist, Too

By Sp5 Michael Beck

Capt. Ivan E. Gonzalez is master parachutsists, expert marksman, big game hunter. . .and player of the violin and the piano.

Gonzalez, who is attending Inantry Officer Advanced Class 4-69 here, has been an officer in the Venezuelan Army since he graduted from the military academy in 1958. His versatility extends to his military life, too.

After being commissioned a second lieutenant in Armor, he spent his first six months of active duty as an Infantry platoon commander. He then attended and completed the six-week Venezuelan Airborne School and was assigned to an airborne infantry battalion.

In 1963 Gonzalez joined the Falcons, the Air Force aerobatic team. "We gave exhibitions of parachuting and skydiving to public audiences all over the country. I have made 376 jumps and have never been hurt," said the 32-year-old captain who won the Venezuelan National Championship for Precision Jumping in 1967.

"I remember one particular exhibition at Maracaibo," he said. "Twelve of us jumped from 16,000 feet right into a cloud bank. I couldn't see a thing until we came out of it at 3,000 feet and then we couldn't spot the jump area. Four of the men finally landed in a cemetery, four landed in a corral, and 1, with three others, landed in the middle of a race track, three miles from the landing zone."

Gonzalez, who skydives as a sport, also enjoys hunting in the jungles and mountains of his homeland. Last year he won the Regional Class A Pistol Championship. He also likes to play baseball and basketball. "Although I studied violin and piano for eight years as a child," he said, "I confess I haven't had much time to practice recently."

Guest speaker at the graduation was Brig. Gen. Thomas W. Mellen, director of developments, Office of Chief Research and Developments, US Army, Washington, D. C.

The class included 125 new second lieutenants, members of the 61st Company, The Candidate Brigade.

Ex-Benning Unit Is High-Ranking Chopper Company

CHU LAI, Vietnam — The 178th Assault Support Helicopter Co. (ASHC) has become the second Chinook company in Vietnam to log 30,000 hours in the air.

The "Boxcar" unit was formed at Ft. Benning in October 1965 and came to Vietnam in February 1966. The company's first year in country was spent in general support of III Corps.

April, 1967 saw the 178th move north to Chu Lai on a temporary basis to support Task Force Oregon, the forerunner of the Americal Division.

The transitory assignment has become a permanent relationship and the company's parent organization, the 16th Combat Aviation Group, recently became part of the division.

Until May 1968, when the "Boxcars" were joined by the 132nd ASHC, the 178th was the Americal's only source of Chinook support.

The nickname for the unit is emblazoned on each helicopter in the form of three pairs of red and white dice, each showing a six which in dice jargon is "Boxcars."

The company's CH-47B helicopters provide a vital link between major supply points and desolate fire support bases and landing zones inaccessible by road.

Missions performed by the 178th, now commanded by Maj. Rodney A. Pimental, range from hauling ice cream to airlifting artillery pieces.

During its first 30,000 air hours the company flew 109,122 sorties, moved 166,256 tons of cargo, and transported 283,424 passengers.

"Generally we work in the northern part of the A.O.," explained Maj. William F. Martin, the executive officer. "However, we do have Chinooks flying throughout the entire division."

The manifests are prepared the day before the missions are actually flown, but as the tactical situation changes so do the plans of the 178th.

"We are much more flexible than you might think," Martin said. "Our schedule can be changed as quickly as it takes to radio one of our aircraft."

Last fall the 178th joined with other helicopter units to transport rice harvested in the Que Son District of Quang Nam Province.

More than 1,000 Vietnamese workers labored daily cutting the grain. The bundles were then placed in sling nets and airlifted back to district headquarters.

The operation is credited with depriving the enemy of 125 tons of rice.

The "Boxcars" are not only in the flying business, but also have written and published a widely-used training manual explaining proper techniques for using Chinook helicopters.

Behind every good aviation unit is an equally good maintenance outfit and the 178th is backed up by the 400th Transportation Detachment, commended by CW3 Alfred Romaszewski.

The aircraft mechanics work around the clock in two shifts to insure that each one of the $2-million helicopters will stay in the air the next time it is pressed into service.

"Our biggest problem is unscheduled maintenance," commented CW2 Joe Leming, aircraft maintenance technician.

"If a Chinook goes down in the field it is up to our people to either fly it home crippled or repair it in the field" he said.

One of the many inspections performed on the big choppers is the preventive maintenance periodic inspection, which is conducted every 100 flying hours and takes 3,780 man hours to complete.

The fact that a 178th ASCH Chinook has never been lost due to a lack of or improper maintenance indicates the quality of support continually offered by the 400th.

CHAPLAIN GOLDBERG PRESENTS FLAG TO SSGT. HARRIS
It Was Used In Funeral Ceremony

'Destitute' Man Remembers Adopted Country With Cash

By Sp4 Dennis Wootan

Military ceremony accompanied the funeral of retired soldier Jaboc Ramer at Andersonville National Cemetery last week.

Though Ramer, who died alone in a Miami hotel may have been obscure in life, at his death the fact that he had left all his worldly belongings to the federal government meant that the world noticed him to the tune of $14,900.67.

Found with Ramer in the hotel room where he died Feb. 4 was an old military foot locker containing $695 in cash and several bank books, one containing $7,945.67.

Along with the cash and bank books was a note naming the federal government as sole beneficiary.

Born in Lithuania before it became a part of the U.S.S.R., Ramer fought with the U.S. Army in both World Wars. He was honorably retired from the Army on July 31, 1943, as a Tech.4.

Ramer's casket was transported from Miami by train to Andersonville, Ga., where it was buried at the national cemetery.

Chaplain (Capt.) Jonas Goldberg of Fort Benning accepted the flag at the end of the ceremonies in the absence of family or friends at the funeral.

Battery D, 2nd Bn., 10th Arty., 197th Inf. Bde. provided the burial honor guard for the funeral. SSgt. Robert H. Harris was in charge of the troops who paid final honors to the soldier.

Diabetic Clinic Opens at MAH

By 1st Lt. Fred Vollrath

Sixteen patients attended the first session on Feb. 6 of the special clinic for diabetics at Martin Army Hospital.

"Through the new clinic we hope to provide diabetics with group and individual instructions about their problems and a continuity of treatment they were not receiving," said Capt. Jerry R. Stewart, the clinic's chief. "Previously they were treated by the regular out-patient facilities which were not equipped to provide the special program needed to educate patients to care for themselves."

Stewart, together with Capt. Robert F. Wiley and members of the Army Nurse Corps, dietitians, and podiatry clinic, instruct the patients on diet therapy, general hygiene, precautionary measures, danger signs, and special care.

The clinic currently reaches only a small percentage of Stewart's estimated "couple of hundred" people at Fort Benning suffering from diabetes.

"The person with diabetes can live a normal life in virtually every respect if he has a clear understanding of the disease and its management," said Capt. Stewart. "But he must learn to live with diabetes, and the clinic will help to provide the understanding and support needed by the patient and his family."

Diabetes currently affects three million people in the United States, one-third are not even aware they have the disease. A diabetic detection program for the public is carried out every two years by the American Diabetic Association, but the disease can be readily discovered in a routine physical examination.

It is a hereditary disease and results from the body's inability to burn sugar properly. It is caused by an insufficient supply of insulin or interference with the action of insulin in the body.

The classical symptoms are frequent copious urination, abnormal thirst, rapid loss of weight, extreme hunger, general weakness, drowsiness and fatigue, itching of the genitals and skin, visual disturbances and skin disorders such as boils, carbuncles and infections.

The clinic meets on the first and third Thursday of each month.

Anyone interested in additional information should call the Army Health Nurse at 545-5431.

He Wants That 2nd 'M,' So Sergeant Takes Action

By Sp5 Mike Smith

SSgt. T. J. Ham of Spokane, Wash., has a problem—his name is not really Ham.

The son of Mr. Theren Hamm of Oakland, Calif., used to spell his name Hamm until July, 1963, when he found that on his birth certificate his last name was spelled with only one "m".

An aircraft maintenance supervisor assigned to Headquarters, Lawson Army Aviation Command, Ham blames the mixup on a typing error on the birth certificate.

"No one realized the mistake until I had to have my birth certificate for induction into the Army," said Ham. "It was spelled with one 'm', so for military purposes I had to spell it the same way."

Over the years Ham has tried to sign his name with only one "m" but this sometimes is not so easy. "People often make a joke over it," he said.

Now Ham, 25, is starting the paper work to change his name to the family spelling of "Hamm" because, "I'm starting to get tired of people calling me asking why I spell my name one way and my parents spell it another."

Breathe Water?

Extension of Navy's Sealab Tests May Take Man 12,000 Feet Down

(Commander's Digest)

Adm. Thomas H. Moorer, Chief of Naval Operations, visualizes a revolutionary concept that could one day allow man to swim freely, without pressure equipment, at depths up to 12,000 feet — breathing fluid rather than air.

He said this technique would involve pumping an oxygenated saline fluid, rather than gas, through an aquanaut's lungs and also flooding his sinus cavities so that the pressure outside his body would be no greater than that inside. "Even at the crushing depth of 12,000 feet, he could survive without ill effect.

Discussing the oceanographic program before the Fort Lauderdale Navy League in Florida, Jan. 14, Admiral Moorer referred to the Navy's role as "inner space" as opposed to "outer space" demonstrated a few weeks ago by the moon-flight of Apollo 8.

He said the Navy's Oceanographic Office, established in 1966, is charged with a "prodigious" job which involves twelve Navy laboratories and more than 1,000 civilian scientists and engineers at more than 100 academic and institutional facilities throughout the country. He noted that in addition to the Navy, 24 bureaus in 11 departments within the federal government are involved in various aspects of oceanographic work.

He said the ultimate goal of the national ocean program was set a few years ago by the President's scientific advisory committee which recommended, "The effective use of the sea for all purposes currently considered for the terrestrial environment."

"Attainment of this objective would mean bringing all the benefits of the oceans into our daily lives — literally expanding the area of the earth we use to include the ocean world — which is almost three times larger than the land world," the Admiral emphasized.

Admiral Moorer said, "I believe the threshold of "inner space" was crossed dramatically in 1960 when the Navy's nuclear power submarine, Triton circumnavigated the globe submerged, and the bathyscaph, Trieste, descended 35,800 feet to the bottom of the Mariana trench — the deepest known place in the ocean."

He pointed out that a good deal of our "west destiny" was spelled out in 1966 when the Navy's Oceanographic Office was established and made responsible for the program's three major divisions — Ocean Science, Ocean Engineering and Development and Ocean Operations.

The Ocean Science portion is to advance our understanding of the physical, chemical, biological and geological characteristics of the seas — the geophysical dimension of the oceans.

"This program includes acoustics research and environmental prediction and also includes research and development on instrumentation special purpose platforms, and ocean data stations to improve our data acquisition capabilities.

"Our technological applications are developed mainly in the ocean engineering and development Program. Here we are engaged in increasing our capability for deep ocean search, rescue and salvage missions, and seeking the capability to operate at any oceanic depth."

He said one of the objectives is the development of a deep submergence rescue vehicle. "Such a system is nearing trials and is designed to bring 24 men to the surface at a time from relatively deep water."

He mentioned another deep ocean project which will develop a deep submergence search vehicle to permit recovery of small objects from depths as great as 20,000 feet. "The attainment of this capability will enable us to reach and research some 98 per cent of the world's oceans' floors and from many standpoints the success of this project is one we must consider as serving our national interests in the same sense that the Apollo program already has."

He said the technological problems connected with deep submersibles are many and include extreme pressures, low power resulting in low speeds and limited endurance, poor visibility, poor navigation, and constantly varying environmental conditions. "These are further compounded by the fact that the deep submersible must be built to take the forces of the surface waves as well as the pressures of the deep. All of this make the deep submersible a much more difficult problem from a technological standpoint than a space craft."

Admiral Moorer said the Navy's man-in-the-sea experiments, which have included Sealabs I, II, and now III, are being conducted to extend progressively in the capability of naval personnel to live and do useful work at ever-increasing depths for progressively greater periods of time.

The last of the three divisions — Operations — surveys worldwide and provides, produces and disseminates the charts, publications and forecasts necessary to support all marine activity on and in the sea.

The Admiral said, "Let me underscore a few of the advantages which can and should be ours if we choose to pursue a vigorous well-defined national oceanographic program:

INCREASED National Security resulting from more efficient operations particularly in the entire submarine warfare area.

FOOD from the sea, we are on the verge of a breakthrough in fish protein as a source of life-saving food. Two billion people could be fed using only half the world's present catch in this fashion.

MINING of minerals and chemicals from the sea will become more important as land supplies become exhausted. As an importer of manganese we have an obvious interest in the great deposits of these continually forming modules to be found in all the deep oceans. The modules contain copper, nickel, cobalt and other ores and portions of the pacific ocean bottom are paved with them.

BETTER charts and better routing based on more accurate predictions for commercial shipping.

'Group' Chopper Aids in Special Bragg Exercises

A helicopter and crew from the 177th Aviation Company 10th Aviation Gp., was used to provide operational support for the Airborne Electronics - Special Warfare Board at Fort Bragg, North Carolina.

The CH-47A was one of the many aircraft used in the testing by the AE-SW Board to determine loading and shipping procedures for various missiles, warheads, and nuclear devices. Some phases of the test involved the CV-2 "Caribou", the CH-37 "Mohave", and other aircraft of the Army and Air Force inventories.

The CH-47, flown by CW2 Michael J. French and CW2 James W. Pushak, left Fort Benning last month and immediately began work with several project officers of the AE-SW Board.

The three week project plans to determine the possibility of using certain aircraft from the U. S. Military inventory for the transportation of sophisticated weapons systems.

Duplicate Bridge

By Chuck Gruttman

Duplicate bridge is the art of bidding your hand in such a way that your team will either score more points than any other team in the room, or loose less points than any other team in the room, on a majority of the hands. Unlike contract bridge, the object is not merely to make game, but rather to beat your opponents by at least ten points on a majority of the hands.

A case in point is the above hand, taken from the championship tournament played at Vancouver in June, 1967. At all tables North passed the first round followed by an opening bid by South. Due to differences in bidding systems, the opening bid by South varied between 1 club (using the big club system), the Roman 2 club, the Weinstein and Miller 1 diamond, the "big" 2 club, the convenient minor 1 diamond, and finally the 2 NT. As varied as the opening bid by South were the final bids, Mrs. Cora Biddle, sitting South, and playing with her half-brother, Jesse Johnson from Oregon, arrived at the final contract of 6 hearts. Life master Bob Cook, out of the mid-west, and playing for the first time with another Life master, William Gigniliat, arrived at the technically correct 7 hearts contract.

The biggest swing on the hand, however, was made by the team of Appel and Romano. They ended up in the optimistic contract of 7NT, doubled by West on the basis of his three protected queens. Miss Appel went directly to 7NT, despite her five hearts, no trump being worth ten points more than a suit contract.

West was on lead. Anything that he led, except for the heart 10, may immediately make the contract. Should he lead a club, diamond, or spade, he would be finessing himself, and if he leads a heart he may finesse his partner. West decided to take the chance of finessing his partner, and led the heart 10. South took it in his hand with the heart Jack, and stopped to assess the situation.

The Bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	7NT	Pass
Pass	Pass	Pass	Pass

South: NT, 5S, 6D, Pass, Pass
West: Pass, Pass, Pass, Double

Mr. Romano saw that he had 11 top tricks, 2 spades, 5 hearts, 2 diamonds, and two clubs. The double by West told him that West probably had the three outstanding queens. Therefore, he knew that the club finesse would work, giving him a twelfth trick, but not the spade of diamond finesse. A thirteenth trick had to be developed.

15 Blue

Mr. Romano, knowing that all missing high cards were in the West hand, decided to "squeeze" West. This means that South would lead good tricks until West could no longer protect one of his queens. At this point, South eads that suit, establishing his jack. In this way a thirteenth trick could be developed. South led out three more hearts, ending in North, and leaving West with the following position, after West discarded one club, diamond, and spade: Spades: Q, 9, 5; Diamonds: Q, 6 5; Clubs: Q, 8 4. By leading the fifth heart from dummy, South now forced West to unguard one of his queens. West chose to discard the spade 5. South then led out 2 rounds of spades, on which the queen fell from East. On the third spade, East again was forced to unguard a suit, and he chose the diamond 5 to discard. South played the ace and king of diamonds, felling East's queen, establishing the 10 in his hand, making the contract. The hand won the tournament and 15 Blue Master Points for the Appel-Romano team.

A 7 hearts contract is much safer, but in duplicate bridge it is the extra ten points for No Trump that wins tournaments.

Music Program Set for Sunday

Special Services will present a program dedicated to the "Parade of American Music" this Sunday after-noon at 3 p.m. at the Fort Benning Playhouse. The playbill includes the Columbus Choral Guild which will perform the music of Stephen Foster, Negro Spirituals, excerpts from "West Side Story" and "Carousel," Folk singer Buddy Nash, will sing a medley of songs, and the Golden Squires of Hardaway High.

"We are trying to establish an entertainment program for Sunday afternoons", explained Theodore L. Gargiulo, the Special Services Music Director. "We realize the men have very little entertainment available to them during this time of the week so we are trying to fill the gap."

If the first program is successful Special Services plans to provide more Sunday afternoon shows.

"No advance reservations are needed," said Gargiulo, "seating will be on a first come bases. There is no charge."

The Fort Benning Playhouse is located behind the Infantry Museum.

'Shoes of the Fisherman'

Too Many Actors, Too Many Plots, Too Much Time

A REVIEW
By Paul Mangione

When the United Nations, Geneva Conferences, the Hague and the Red Cross fail, the logical place for a world in turmoil to turn is the leader of the Roman Catholic church. Who else? After all, everybody pays so much attention to what he does and says anyway.

Nonetheless, the man who fills the "Shoes of the Fisherman" is an internationally respected Italian gentleman or at least he was until Moris L. West decided that it was time for a change.

Mr. West is a fairly well known writer whose best work, "The Shoes of the Fisherman" was made into a super-gala motion picture with all kinds of stars, tremendous scenery and location shots and plenty of message. Unfortunately, it isn't a very good movie although its premise is intriguing.

It's really all very simple. A Russian Bishop, Kiril Lakota, played by Anthony Quinn who has been in a Soviet political prison for twenty years during which he was tortured by everybody is released by the Russian Premier, his prime tormenter played very convincingly by Sir Laurence Olivier.

Kiril goes to Rome to see the Pope who negotiated his release and is immediately made a Cardinal. The old Pope dies and Kiril is mentioned as a possible Pontiff by the bishops gathered in the College of Cardinals to vote for a new Pope. It seems that they can't agree on anybody so who else would they choose but a Russian Cardinal whom they never heard of prior to the death of the Pope?

While the balloting for the Pope goes on, a minor problem develops in the form of the Chinese who are starving to death en masse. The Chinese Premier Peng, wants to go to war with the other countries around China in order to either gain control of the "ricebowl" or bring in the Soviet Union against them.

The Russians don't want to go to war so the Russian Premier decides that the best mediator of a feud between two avowed atheistic nations would be his arch enemy, the almost Pope, Kiril.

All the principals meet on the Mongolian steppes and exchange barbs for a while until Kiril says that he believes that the Russians want peace and he will throw all the power of his office behind that striving for peace. (Every Pope since Peter has done the same thing without too much success.) Peng demands a sign of Kiril's honesty and agrees to a short cooling off period.

Kiril stumbles back to Rome and his coronation, struggling to decide what he can do to show Peng his intentions.

The whole ending is rather anti-climactic and leaves many loose ends. Kiril announces, as the papal crown is placed on his head, that he will dedicate his reign to world peace and that is, for all practical purposes, the end.

Of course, a major motion picture production would not be complete without some sort of romantic interest. It would have raised too many eyebrows if the Pope was messing around so the Green Beret milksop reporter, David Janssen, cast as an American TV announcer in Rome, provides the necessary material by chasing after some young girl while his much more beautiful and mature wife languishes in the background. Of course, he sees the error of his ways and returns to his wife at the end of the show. This is very interesting, except it has absolutely nothing to do with the movie, and the director's attempt to relate the two are pitiful and strained.

At best, Janssen adds the required romantic interest and at worst he makes a long movie longer.

Osker Werner plays a very convincing radical young priest who befriends the new Pope-elect and causes him great worries with his outrageous views on birth control, etc. This attempt to bring the plot into present day world affairs is forced but Werner does a very good job. An entire picture could be made on his role alone. Instead he just garbles up an already over-complex plot with another sub-plot and the movie becomes so strained that it borders on incredibility.

Too many great actors with too many deep plots tend to spoil a possibly great movie by making it too heavy and rather trite.

Playhouse Needs Singers, Actors For 'Fantastics'

Tryouts for the musical comedy "The Fantasticks" by Harvey Schmidt and Tom Jones will be held at the Fort Benning Playhouse (located behind the Infantry Museum) from February 24-28 and March 1, at 8 p.m.

"The play is a blend of satire and romanticism, comedy and serious verse," explained J. Michael Calitri, the play's director, "Those qualities are making 'The Fantasticks' one of the longest running off-Broadway plays in history."

The play began off-Broadway in May, 1960 and is still running.

The play was selected, according to Calitri, because it is a simple musical with little elaborate costumes, scenery, and casts.

He described it as "a musical written for a low budget, off-Broadway theater group — which certainly describes us."

The Fort Benning Players need four male singing - actors, three male non-singing actors and one female singing actress, in addition to a technical production staff of 25.

"We are shooting for a production date in late April but nothing will be definite until we have the casts together," Calitri concluded.

SEA-SHELLS . . . There are many things beneath the sea that we don't know about. Like coral formations and strange creatures. Here we have an interesting formation that washed up on shore. Who says beachcombers lead a hard life?

Janis Bombs Memphis

By Pete Lis

It has been suggested that Janis Joplin is the best white female blues singer of our time, but what other white girl sings blues? The remarkable thing about Janis Joplin is that she is a real blues singer, in "our" time, when imitations are good enough for most people. She has, like all true originals, a strong sense of tradition, and Memphis, is the blues singers' La Scale—the Gateway to the Mississippi Delta, where Howlin' Wolf, John Lee Hooker, Muddy Waters, and B. B. King made their earlier recordings; where Johnny Cash, Jerry Lee Lewis, Carl Perkins, Roy Orbison and Elvis Presley made their yellow Sun records, and where, in recent years, Otis Redding, Booker T. & MG's, Wilson Pickett, Sam and Dave, Eddie Floyd, and Rufus and Carla Thomas made their great soul recordings.

So it was important to Janie Joplin, the only outside act invited to the Second Annual Stax-Volt Yuletide thing, that she do well. And did she? as was reported that backstage, after it was all over, she said, "At least they didn't throw things." Janis Joplin died in Memphis, but it wasn't her fault.

The Yuletide thing was scheduled for Saturday night, December 21, at the Memphis Mid-South Coliseum. The first act, the reformed Bar-Kays (four of the instrumental group's original members died the year before in the airplane crash that also killed Otis Redding) came out of their dressing room wearing zebra-striped flannel jumpsuits.

The thing is, a stage act in Memphis, Tennessee is not the same as a stage act in San Francisco, New York, or Los Angeles. These days a lot of people think if a fellow comes on stage wearing black vinyl pants, screams about his mother, then collapses, that's a stage act. but in Memphis, if you can't do the Sideways Pony, you just don't have a stage act.

The Bar-Kays were followed by Albert King, the Mad Lads, William Bell, Judy Clay, and Rufus and Carla Thomas. They all boogalooed, stomped and bunched while members of Janis Joplin's Revue watched from the wings, shaking their heads.

After a brief intermission, Booker T. and the MG's appeared and played, as they always do, impeccably. Then Eddie Floyd, who is not, by a long shot, Otis Redding, but is still a very good soul singer, came on and got the biggest audience response of the night. If Janis came on directly after he left the stage, she might have got the kind of reception she wanted. But that's not the way it happened.

The crowd at the Fillmore, East or West, expects to see a band shove equipment around the stage for 10 or 15 minutes before starting. But in Memphis, this is not what the people come to see. The warmth generated by Eddie Floyd's appearance was dispelled while Janis' band put their instruments in order.

Janis opened with "Raise Your Hand," an Eddie Flyod son, and followed it with the Bee Gee's "To Love Somebody." She sang well, in full control of her powerful voice. Te band was not together, but they all seemed to be excellent musicians, and one could predict that, given sufficient rehearsal time, they would make a great back-up band for Janis, if they did have one basic flaw; none of them plays blues!

When she finished her third song and started to leave the stage, there was almost no applause, and so, of course, no encore. A few people went backstage, where everyone from the Revue was starring blankly at the walls, and tried to tell Janis that she was not to blame for what had happened. She had sung well, and the rest had been beyond her control. But she wasn't having any of it, and she went back to her room at the Lorraine Motel, where Martin Luther King had been killed, and where B. B. King and a lot of other blues singers had spent unhappy nights before her.

February 11th and the Janis Joplin Revue played Bill Graham's Fillmore East in New York. There were two shows each night. All were COMPLETELY SOLD OUT three weeks in advance . . . . . and the beat goes on . . . . .

'For Pete's Sake' Draws Full House

A full house was on hand at Marshall Auditorium February 16 for the first showing here of the new Billy Graham Evangelistic Association film, "For Pete's Sake."

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Merlin R. Carothers, chaplain of the Candidate Brigade, announced that the auditorium was completely filled at 6:30 p.m. for the showing at 7 p.m.

More than 500 persons had to be turned away.

Chaplain Carothers said that the Chaplains' section will try to schedule a second showing of the film in the near future.

World's Biggest

The plateau that covers most of the continent of Antarctica is the world's largest and driest desert. For example, at the South Pole, annual precipitation amounts to less than 2 inches. By comparison Phoenix, Ariz., in one of the driest parts of the United States, has an annual rainfall of 7.2 inches.

New York is considered by many to "be a nice place to visit, but not to live." These detractors point out that the vastness of the city has defeated many of the advantages that are inherent to a big city. Transportation is clogged, housing is scarce and expensive, and the air is so polluted that at times it can be fatal to breathe.

The New York fan has even more to suffer from. His city, the largest in the country, seems to produce no major sports team that even resembles a winner. The Dodgers and the Giants were taken away from him years ago, leaving only the Mets and sinking Yankees to represent baseball.

When Y. A. Tittle departed, the Giants became a run of the mill football team. The Rangers played hockey just well enough to finish in fifth place year after year, and when they finally did move up in the standings they fell flat on their faces in the Stanley Cup playoffs.

Super Joe and the Jets created the first real sports sensation in the city for years, but it appeared that the excitement of the Super Bowl was going to have to last the whole year. After all, there was no hope for the Mets or Yankees, and the Giants were still a year or so away from championship aspirations.

That leaves the New York Knicks, who have shown great potential and zero results. New Yorkers began to disregard the team and only showed up at Madison Square Gardens to watch them play if there was nothing else to do.

The Knicks started this season true to character. Their roster was dotted with stars: Bill Bradley, Walt Bellamy, Willis Reed, Walt Frazier, Dick Barnett, and Cazzie Russel. Yet these stars could only put together an 18-15 record after the first 33 games. Ho hum, thought New York, another season in which top-flight talent produced humbling mediocrity.

Then a strange thing happened; the Knicks began to play the best basketball in the NBA. The catalyst for this sudden about face was the trade that sent Bellamy to the Detroit Pistons for Dave Debusschere. Bellamy typified the inconsistency of the team; one night he would play spectacularly and the next night he would be as effective as the Paris Peace talks. Debusschere, on the other hand, was a consistent and talented performer who could be counted on to play well each time out.

With Bellamy at center, the Knicks had to move Willis Reed to forward. Reed, who is by nature a center, occasionally found the going uncomfortable. Back at his center slot, Reed has been pouring in over 20 points a game and has been a demon on the defensive boards.

Since this move the Knicks have won 25 out of their last 28 games. The play of Reed and Debusschere only partially explain this sudden surge. For the first time in years the Knicks are playing as a team, not as a collection of five extraordinarily talented individuals. Each game produces new heros. Frazier has become one of the fanciest guards in the league. His playmaking is rivaling Oscar Robertson's, and he is all over the court on defense.

Bill Bradley has finally lived up to his potential, and given the team a needed lift when they most needed it. Bradley, a forward at Princton was used by the Knicks at guard. He didn't play well at this position and seemed to be one more highly-touted college player who was a flop in the pros. When Cazzie Russel broke his leg, Bradley moved into his slot at forward and suddenly became the player everyone expected him to be. He has averaged nearly 20 points per game in the corner, and the Knicks have overcome what might have been a crippling loss.

Even with Russel out for the season the New Knicks give no indication that they are going to let up. The fine talent that they have always had has finally jelled, and the Knicks look like a good bet to join the Jets in the resurgence of New York sports.

Rifles Outshoot OCs

BAYONET Sports

A solid defensive wall held the post basketball team to its lowest score of the season, but cracked long enough late in the game to give the Benning Rifles, a 76-61 victory over the 50th OC Company, The Candidate Brigade, in action Sunday.

The win was the sixth in a row for Coach John Williams' entry in the Third Army tournament scheduled for March 17-21 at Fort Bragg, N.C.

The candidate team, composed of players with college experience, made a strong showing in its first game with the Rifles. Led by a pair of brothers who played for the University of South Florida, Burt and Keith Tackaberry, the OCs kept the pressure on throughout the contest. Burt had 14 points and Keith 10 to lead the attack.

Don Huskins, with 13, was the only other candidate to score in double figures.

Teamwork proved to be stronger than defense, however; and the post squad made it work to stay ahead despite several threats. The score was tied at 16-16 before the Benning Rifles took the lead for keeps.

Shooting accuracy ran hot and cold for both teams during the first half, and the Rifles went to the locker room with a 41-34 lead. Jim Rates led the scoring with 12 of his 18 points before the break.

In the second half, the Benning team looked more like its old self, building to a 61-43 bulge in the third quarter.

The candidates refused to admit defeat, however, putting in a burst of 15 to pull within six at 64-58, six minutes before the end of the game.

Nobody was more surprised than the post squad, who have gotten used to adding victories without too much effort. Fans familiar with the Rifles usual game were also surprised.

But the post team was not to be denied a sixth victory in what has been a perfect season. The Rifles found their mark, and were adding to their margin when the contest ended.

Bill Whitlock had 19, Jim Rates notched 18 and Peter Anderson added 12 in leading the post team to the win.

The Benning squad shot only 44.1 per cent from the floor, well below their 57.5 per cent average in previous contests. The starting five was missing Mark Kemp, who had accounted for 20 points a game in the team's earlier games. Kemp left Fort Benning last week enroute to a tour in Vietnam.

In opening the season, the Rifles played two close games at Fort McPherson, winning 86-72 and 89-87, and then went on a scoring binge in the next three games, the closest being a 101-80 win over Columbus College.

Sea Scouts Battle Driving Rains In Navigation of Chattahoochee

Battling rough weather this past weekend, members of Sea Explorers Ship 136 completed a 116-mile round trip on the Chattahoochee River while learning navigation and boat operation techniques.

Embarking from Bradley Landing, the journey began in Friday night's driving rain. Stopping for the night 11 miles down river at River Bend Park, the Explorers set up camp for the evening, cooked their own meals and kept dry in swiftly-built tents.

Saturday morning the Sea Explorers left the rain-soaked river bank to travel 47 miles south to River Bluff Park near Eufaula, Ala.

SSgt. Maynard Yellowhorst and SSgt. Richard Owings served as instructors for the trip, teaching the Explorers boat handling and operation and navigation principles.

After spending the night at River Bluff Park, the Explorers packed up early Sunday morning to return to Bradley Landing, about 2 p.m.

The six sea explorers on the weekend trip were between the ages of 16 and 18. They set up their own camps, prepared their own meals, and were responsible for everything except the actual operation of the boats.

The 586th Engineer Company, commanded by Capt. Guy Barchetto, provided three 27 - foot power boats, three power boat operators, and one mechanic for the Sea Explorers. Skipper on the trip was SSgt. Maruhnich of the 586th Engineers.

Rucker Topples WACs in Final Fray

The Fort Benning WACs finished their season on a strong note last Sunday, but the effort wasn't enough to stop the Fort Rucker team from taking both games in the two-day series.

The Rucker team won 43-13 and 34-21, bringing its record to 5-3, and Coach Bill Poppert's WACs are now on their way to the Third Army WAC basketball tournament to be held next week at Fort McClellan, Ala.

In the action last Saturday night, Fort Rucker's Susie Lane led the attack with 17 points, aided by "Stretch" Luxford's 11-point effort. Pat Pryor's eight points also topped the best efforts by the Benning team.

Rita Mattix led Fort Benning's scoring with five points.

The home team was unable to make its plays work against the taller defense, and found themselves behind 24-4 at the end of the half and 33-4 going into the final quarter.

Sunday's game was more of a contest, and the Fort Rucker team did not take charge until the fourth period. The score was in favor of the Benning sextet until early in the second period.

By the end of the half, however, the Fort Rucker WACs had moved ahead, 14-9. They stretched their lead to 26-19 at the end of the third period, finished the final eight minutes to win 34-21.

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

By Bill Kloeb

The Rod and Gun Club will sponsor demonstrations of fly and bait casting by Ann Strobel, world champion women's fly and bait caster, March 7-8.

As fishy as it sounds, a blond with pin-up proportions, has been cast in the role of fishing expert and casting champion. Miss Strobel, a blue-eyed platinum-haired West Virginian, will give sportsmen and women a few pointers about the sport of angling as spokeswoman for a national fishing tackle manufacturing concern.

Ann travels all over the country demonstrating the casting skills which have made her one of the best known female anglers in the world. She also participates in fishing clinics as guest lecturer to explain why fishing is an exhilarating and healthful outdoor sport for everyone — men, women and children.

The demonstration, open to civilian and military, will also include two films on fishing techniques.

The time and place of the demonstrations will be announced in this column next week.

It is not to early to start preparing for the spring turkey season. Pre-season reconnaisance can be the difference between successful or unsuccessful season.

Few birds surpass the wild turkey in keenness of vision, wariness and sagacity. None is more difficult to bag or more prized by hunters.

In the autumn, tom turkeys live alone or with several other males segregated from the hens and their half grown poults. They roost in high thick pines on higher ground, in tall cypresses in swamps or in big cottonwood trees along stream and river bottoms.

At dawn, they fly from the roosting tree to feed, covering several miles, usually in a wide circle, in the search for mast, fruits and berries. At midday, they pause to rest and dust on sun-warmed slopes and then toward dusk they return to the roost. So fixed are their habits that, unless molested, they will be found in approximately the same spot at the same time each day.

These fixed habits make the first part of the season the period most likely to be productive. The veteran hunter goes on reconnaisance before the season opens. He looks for roosting trees marked by droppings, broken twigs and scattered feathers at their bases.

Having found a roosting tee, he searches for adjacent feeding grounds, indicated by scratch marks and tracks, and determines the direction in which the birds customarily feed. Using this knowledge, he selects a spot overlooking the feeding trail. He arrives at this spot before dawn on opening day, hopeful that at sometime during the day his intended prize will appear. If he keeps absolutely quiet, and no other hunter or predator spooks the feeding hand, his hopes may well be justified.

Later in the season, when the toms have been disturbed by shooting, their feeding and summing habits change, and it is then necessary to seek them out more or less blindly. A call helps if the hunter is an expert at using it. If he is not, it would be better to leave it alone, for one false note will send every turkey within hearing into hiding.

In the spring, toms travel with the hens and are easier to stalk and call. Listen at dawn for the gobble of mate-seeking males. Often they can be carefully stalked or lured to the gun by judicious calling. Also look for strutting areas in sunny clearings near dusting spots. Here the romantic toms parade before admiring hens, dragging their wings and spreading their bronze-banded tails.

Turkeys should be shot as they flush or as they race away. Using Number 2 or 4 shot, aim for the head and neck. Camouflaged clothing is almost a must for hunting turkey.

Top 10 Scorers

Briggs, Pruitt Join Post Team

Two of the top ten scorers in the Harmony Church League which concluded its season last week by winning the Center Troop Command championship now play for the Fort Benning Rifles.

Frank Briggs, 298th Engineer Company (Panel Bridge), and Charles Pruitt, Hq. Co., 931st Engineer Group, are part of the post team headed for the Third Army tournament March 17-21 at Fort Bragg, N.C., March 17-21.

Briggs was first in the league, scoring 19 points a game, and Pruitt was fourth with a 14 point average.

A six-two forward, Briggs led the 298th Engineers to a 7-2 season and second place in the league behind Company D, 818th Engr. Bn. Company D's only loss came at the hands of the 298th, 37-35.

Pruitt, who stands just over six feet tall, got support from Darrell Ringler in guiding his team to fourth place with a 6-3 record. Ringler was ninth among the league's top scorers with an average over nine points per game.

Rick Caples finished second in the individual standings, pacing the CTC champions, Company D, 818th Engr. Bn. with 17 points a game.

Dave Brown also averaged 17 points a game, but was unable to pull Company A, 43rd Engr. Bn. out of the league cellar and away from an 0-9 season.

John Smith, Jim Lancaster and Burle Bolton combined their talents to give Company D, 43rd Engr. Bn. a 5-4 record and a share of fifth place in the league. Smith was fifth, Lancaster eighth and Bolton tenth in the league standings.

The three engineers scored 13, 10 and 9 points a game respectively.

Winford Brown and Rufus Powell had 13 and 12 points each, leading the 586th Engineer Company (Float Bridge) to a 7-2 record and a share of third place. They finished sixth and seventh in individual scoring for the season.

Company C, 818th Engr. Bn., took the other half of the fifth place tie with a 5-4 log.

Seventh place was crowded with three teams claiming identical 3-6 records. The three were Companies B and C, 43rd Engr. Bn. and Hq. Co., 818th Engr. Bn.

Top rebounder for the league was Dave Damm, Company D, 818th Engr. Bn. The other leading rebounders were Allen Ellebrecht and Randall Hill, 298th Engr. Co.; Glen Burgett, Hq. Co., 931st Gp. and Rufus Rowell, 586th Engr. Co.

Company D, 818th Engr. Bn. is one of the two CTC teams in the post - wide double elimination tournament being played until March 1 at the Briant Wells Field House.

TIME OUT . . . Members of 5th Bn., 31st Inf. basketball squad take time out on their way to the 197th Brigade tournament championship. By downing 1st Bn., 58th Inf., 63-46, the team became the brigade's top contender in the USAIC basketball tournament, Feb. 17-28.

Benning Skeet Team Ties World's Record

The U. S. Army Skeet team flattened stiff competition, winning all team matches, tying a world's record in the 12 guage, 2-man team match and placing second in the individual high over-all last week at the Flamingo Skeet Shoot in Miami, Fla.

SSgt. Phillip D. Provence and Sgt. John Williams teamed together in the 2-man 12 guage match to break 200 birds, tying the world's record. Provence and William also teamed together to win the 2-man 410 guage match, breaking 192 birds.

Shooting in the 5-man 12 gauge team match Provence and William led their teammates with 100 birds each. They were followed by Sp4 James Tiner's 99 birds, SFC William Wooten's 96 and Sp5 Anthony Rosetti's 95, giving them a team total of 490 and the championship.

In the individual high over-all Provence totaled 382 birds to place second, two birds behind civilian shooter Gola of Florida with 394.

MTU's William was topped in the 300 bird international match 286 to 283 by Robert Rodale of Pennsylvania, a former U. S. Skeet team member.

Hq. Co. Victors Carry ATC to Post Tournament

The ATC company-level basketball tournament held in Kimbro Gym at Sand Hill saw Headquarters teams No. 2 and No. 1 pull out victories to take first and second place.

The seven teams entered in the tournament played each other twice. The team setting the best record at the end of the tournament was the winner.

Both teams advanced to the Main Post Tournament with Hq. Team No. 2 posting an 11-1 season record, and Hq. Team No. 1, a 10-2 record.

Retired Military Personnel Boost Georgia's Economy

ATLANTA—There are almost 20,000 persons retired from careers with the Armed Forces now living in Georgia and who, by receipt of retired military benefits through the Department of Defense, are adding significantly to the State's economy, Veterans Service Department Director Pete Wheeler has announced.

Figures compiled by the Department of Veterans Service through the various branches of the Armed Forces show these retired military families widely dispersed throughout the state and receiving upwards of $70 million a year in retired benefits alone.

Because retired military people are veterans, they receive the same quality service in matters relating to problems or benefits as do the state's half-million regular veterans, Corperation by the Veterans Service Department includes participation in counseling programs, seminars, and other areas where this group of veterans' interests and welfare can best be promoted.

The figures show that retired military people tend to settle generally in areas that have large or extensive military installations. The Atlanta Metropolitan area leads the state with the largest number of retirees at 8,678 followed by the Columbus area with 3,733 and the Augusta area with 2,020 retirees.

Other areas with large numbers of retirees are Macon with 1,831, Albany with 1,434 and Savannah with 1,256. The rest are scattered throughout the state. Army retirees lead the list in number with just under 11,000; the Air Force is second with 4,635 and the Navy a close third with 3,037. Marine and Coast Guard retirees make up the balance.

There are few communities in Georgia that have no retired military personnel. Many have returned to their old homes, while others have settled in new locations. The word "retired" is not quite adequate to describe these people as most are far from being retired in the general sense of the word. They are working every type of job, providing skills and experience to many industries in the state as well as government.

Social Security Office Needs Earnings Report

"Many people drawing Social Security checks feel that when they file their Federal income tax return listing their annual earnings that they are reporting their earnings to the Social Security Administration," said Robert E. O'Neal, district manager of the Columbus Social Security office. "This is not so."

O'Neal went on to explain that every social Security recipient is required by law to make a report of his annual earnings if they are over $1,680.

He urged all beneficiaries who earned more than $1,680 in wages or self-employment income in 1968 to visit his office as soon as the withholding statement from his employer (if a wage-earner) or Federal income tax return (if a businessman or self-employed farmer) for 1968 are available.

The deadline for filing annual reports of earnings for the Social Security Administration is April 15, the same as the deadline for filing Federal income tax returns.

O'Neal urged all working beneficiaries to file early to avoid the last minute rush. His office is located at 301 15th St. in Columbus. Hours are 8:45 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays and 9 to noon Saturdays.

Chess Event Set in Nov.

WASHINGTON (ANF)—The 10th annual Armed Forces Chess Tournament will be held in the American Legion's Hall of Flags, Washington, D. C., Nov. 7-15.

The American Chess Foundation, a non-profit organization which sponsors the inter-service program said the plan for this year, as in 1968 calls for each service team to consist of six finalists to meet in 12 rounds of team play for the Thomas Emery Championship Trophy.

Anyone on active duty is eligible to try for a service team. Army finalists will be selected on the basis of U. S. Chess Federation ratings, major command tournaments and other records indicating their capabilities.

More information on the 1969 program can be obtained from recreation officers of commands, from USO facilities or by writing to: Army Special Services, Office of The Adjutant General, 2436 Tempo A, Washington, D. C. 20315.

Army Offers Scholarships To Actors

WASHINGTON (ANF)—The department of the Army annually sponsors several valuable scholarships and awards established by university drama schools and professional companies of the performing arts. The scholarships and awards are made to soldiers who have made outstanding contributions to the Army Entertainment Program.

Applications for 1970 scholarships and awards must be made through military channels to the Office of The Adjutant General by March 10, 1969. Application procedures and requirements are described in Army Regulation 28-12, "Army Entertainment Scholarships and Awards Programs."

All Army personnel on active duty, who are or have been participants in the Army Entertainment Program, may apply for the scholarships and awards. Certain exceptions apply to reservists on duty for training.

Among the organizations offering awards and scholarships are The Yale University School of Drama; Pasadena (Calif.) Playhouse College of Theatre Arts; Miami University in Oxford, Ohio; Arena Stage in Washington D.C.; Barter Theatre in Abingdon, Va.; University of Arizona; California State College; California Western University; and Virginia Museum Theatre, Richmond, Va.

The play written by Robert Cronin, the Army's 1967 graduate fellowship winner in playwriting at the University of Arizona, was given its world premiere as a major production of the university's 1968-69 theatre season. The play was directed by 1st Lt. Bryan Cahen, the Army's 1968 winner of the directing fellowship at the university.

PROMOTED... Daniel D. Clark was promoted to major. Maj. Clark is an artillery officer assigned to the Infantry School Brigade and Battalion Operations Department.

Social Security

Q. Last October, I filed a medicare claim for reimbursement of my doctor bills. It was sent back to me, unpaid, because I submitted an itemized bill that was not receipted. My neighbor, just this week, was paid on her claim that was submitted exactly the same way. Please explain this to me.

A. It is now possible to pay claims for doctor bills and other covered medical services without receipted bills. An itemized bill is all that is necessary. This change was not effective in October when you filed your claim.

101st Division Chapter Forms

The Alabama and Georgia Canopy Chapter of the 101st Airborne Division Association will hold its first meeting here Saturday.

Joe Beyrle, the national president will present the chapter charter to 1st Sgt. John Kazmin, chapter president.

Among guests who will attend are Brig. Gen. (Ret.) William Olsen, national vice-president; Walter Miller Jr., national secretary, and Raymond (Chappie) Hall, the first chaplain to jump with an airborne unit.

The chapter was formed last December by combat veterans of the 101st. The organization has a membership of more than 6000 men.

The meeting is scheduled for 2:30 p.m. at the Lawson Field NCO club. All past members of the division may attend.

Retirement Aid Program Started

WASHINGTON (ANF)—A strengthened program to assist the more than 51,000 enlisted military personnel and approximately 13,000 officers who retire from active duty each year was recently announced by the Department of Defense (DOD).

The average age of military personnel who retire is 45.

The new plan, called Project Referral, was developed in recognition of the fact that increasing numbers of military personnel will be retiring in the years immediately ahead.

For some years, the Department of Defense, in cooperation with other government agencies, notably the Department of Labor, has been conducting a program to counsel retiring military personnel on potential employment opportunities.

With the aid of computers, the Department of Defense now intends to strengthen the various programs conducted by the services to assure that maximum assistance is provided to each individual who completes a career of military service. The program will be conducted on a voluntary basis.

Under project Referral, a centralized DOD Skill Data Referral Service will be established in existing facilities at Dayton, Ohio.

This activity will consist of an automated skill data bank which will: systematically inventory the skills of retirees, identify areas where such skills could be used to the benefit of both the nation and the individual retiree, and also refer registrants to prospective employers in both the public and private sectors.

Detailed planning and development of automated procedures to support the referral service began in January. A pilot program will be conducted starting in September with full implementation of the program scheduled to begin in the spring of next year.

Training Firemen 'Borrow' AF Jet

Forty - six members of Fort Benning's structural fire-fighting and crash-rescue teams, headed by Fire Chief Gilbert R. Ward, observed demonstrations of fire-control and rescue techniques at Lawson Army Air Field February 12-13.

To provide realism, Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala., sent a T-33 Air Force jet trainer to Lawson Field to demonstrate control measures needed on such aircraft in case of a crash or fire. Air Force Lt. Col. Donald A. Brewer flew the plane.

Air Force Sgt. Robert D. Fowler and Air Force SSgt. Michael J. Krisko Jr., both crash - rescue supervisors with the Civil Engineering Squadron of the 3800th Air Base Wing, were instructors.

The two Air Force sergeants discussed such techniques as de-arming the explosive charges of the plane's ejection seats and canopy, shutting off the jet's engine, lifting a disabled man from the cockpit and installing safety pins in the landing gear to lock the wheels.

Robert E. Whitney, Fort Benning air safety specialist, said crash-rescue crews are required to have a knowledge of all aircraft using Lawson Army Air Field. "This demonstration reflects inter-service cooperation in the interest of aviation safety," he added.

Idea Worth $1,000 To Officer

A check for $1,000 was awarded a warrant officer here Feb. 18 for a suggestion he submitted through the Army's Incentive Awards program.

Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., post commander, presented the money to CWO Carroll Nelson, formerly chief of the Quality Assurance Branch, Finance and Accounting Office.

Nelson porposed the verification of leave taken by military people for use in preparation of finance records by means of personnel data cards sent to the Finance Office at the time of an individual's reassignment or separation.

"When a man takes leave, or is promoted, reduced, or hospitalized, this information is taken from the unit morning report and put on the man's data card," CWO Nelson said. "In order to prevent paying a soldier too much at the time of his separation or assignment to another unit, the Finance Office must have these cards on hand to verify pertinent information.

"I suggested that these data cards be sent to the Finance Office for this purpose," he added.

Although the Incentive Awards Committee recommended a cash award in the amount of $1,500, the maximum amount allowed for payment locally is $1,000. However, a request for the approval of an additional $500 has been transmitted to the Third United States Army.

At the award presentation, Gen. Wright said that the savings achieved through the Army's suggestion program as of Jan. 31, 1968, already amounts to $2.25 million during this fiscal year.

CWO Nelson is now enroute to his second tour of duty in Vietnam. He will be stationed with the U.S. Army Element, Military Assistance Command.

Captain

San Antonio, Tex., graduated from high school in 1954. He has attended Austin Peay State College in Tennessee.

The captain has completed Pathfinder and Special Forces training and Jungle School.

In November, 1967, soon after beginning his second tour in Vietnam, O'Connor commanded an air assault which attacked and surrounded a Viet Cong battalion-sized force. His men, of the 1st Cav. Div. (Airmobile), killed 72 enemy soldiers.

The Distinguished Service Cross was presented for actions last year while the captain was leading two platoons on a search-and-destroy mission.

The pointman touched off a booby trap, which threw a grenade among his men. O'Connor fell on the grenade in an attempt to shield them. When it did not explode immediately he picked it up, ran and threw it in an enemy bunker. Only then did it explode.

Since his assignment to Fort Benning, the captain has been busy with many outside activities. He presently working with the Latin Protestant Church Group teaching bible studies (in Spanish), at the Benning Hills Baptist Church on Saturday nights and Sunday School the following morning. His various teaching jobs have included positions at West Point and at the University of Mexico where he taught Cadets the fundamentals of the M-14 rifle.

Upon his retirement from the service O'Connor hopes to obtain his masters degree in criminology and at the same time become an ordained minister. His future aspirations are to work with youth groups in San Antonio.

NCO Grads Hear Wells

"The NCO of today is a special kind of citizen. He is dedicated, self-sacrificing and willing to work longer hours for less pay," said Sgt. Maj. Aubrey Wells during NCO graduation exercises last week.

Honor graduate of Class 18-69, 74th Co., The Candidate Brigade, was Jimmy Fields, Greensboro, N. C. He was presented his certificate of graduation and promoted to staff sergeant.

Guest speaker was Sgt.

Gen. Wright Will Depart In May

DEPARTING FOR KOREA: MAJ. GEN. JOHN M. WRIGHT JR., COMMANDING GENERAL

Eighth Army Post Awaits Commander

Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr. will leave Fort Benning in mid-May for Korea to assume new duties in Seoul as chief of staff for the Eighth U.S. Army, commanded by Gen. Charles H. Bonesteel III.

Mrs. Wright will accompany the general to Korea.

Gen. Wright's replacement, Maj. Gen. George I. Forsythe, is currently the commanding general of the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) in Vietnam. Gen. Forsythe formerly served as Assistant Commandant of the Infantry School from March 1965 to March 1966. He is the fourth assistant commandant to become commandant.

For 19 months Gen. Wright has been responsible for seeing that Fort Benning turns out, in his words, "the finest combat Infantryman in the world." Under his command Fort Benning has expanded its officer training program and facilities, established the Non-commissioned Officer Candidate Course, played host to a number of important national and international conferences, and celebrated its 50th anniversary.

"At Fort Benning, I believe in placing considerable emphasis on the spirit of the infantryman, which, when combined with his combat skills, results in a highly effective and professional soldiers," explained Gen. Wright. "I think all of us are continuing to question our training techniques and question everything we do on a daily basis, always striving to improve in every way we can."

OCS To Salute 100,000th Graduate

By 2nd Lt. Wade Roop

The Infantry Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning is making preparations to recognize its 100,000th graduate in ceremonies on March 8.

Events planned for the day will be highlighted by the graduation address presented by Lt. Gen. Donald V. Bennett, commander of VII Corps, Europe, and a review of 1,200 officer candidates.

The 100,000th candidate to receive an OCS commission at Fort Benning will be announced a few days prior to graduation after final testing and grades are completed. The candidate will be a member of 54th Company.

Since its origin early in 1941, Infantry OCS at Fort Benning has produced officers to meet the needs for periods of crisis including World War II, the Korean Conflict and the present war in Vietnam.

When Officer Candidate School was established here 28 years ago, then Army Chief of Staff Gen. George C. Marshall wrote to a group of 171 young men about to make history that they were, "the first class of which I believe will be the finest group of troop leaders in the world."

These men were later to fight in World War II as newly commissioned second lieutenants, members of the first class of Infantry OCS.

A Medal of Honor recipient will soon be returning to Fort Benning to attend Infantry Officer Candidate School.

Sgt. John Franklin Baker Jr. of Moline, Ill., earned the nation's highest award for valor while serving as a PFC with the 25th Infantry Division in Vietnam. He is currently stationed at Rock Island Arsenal, Ill., and will enter Officer Candidate Class 28-69, 62nd Co., TCB-March 19.

The Medal of Honor citation describes a combat operation Nov. 5, 1966, when Baker's company came under intense enemy fire. When the lead man was killed, Baker immediately moved to the front of the column. He and another soldier knocked out two enemy bunkers.

When his comrade was mortally wounded, Baker spotted and killed four enemy snipers, evacuated the fallen soldier and returned to lead repeated assaults against the enemy positions.

Moving to attack two more enemy bunkers, he and another soldier drew intense enemy fire and Baker was blown from his feet by an enemy grenade. He quickly recovered and singlehandedly destroyed one bunker. After the other soldier was wounded, Baker grabbed his machinegun and charged through the deadly fusillade to silence the other bunker.

He evacuated his comrade, replenished his ammunition and returned to the forefront to continue the fight.

When the forward element was ordered to withdraw, Baker carried one wounded man to the rear, returned to evacuate another soldier and was attacked by snipers. He killed the snipers, evacuated the wounded man and returned to cover the deployment of his unit. When his ammunition was exhausted, he dragged two more wounded men to the rear.

fluence, the training program continued to broaden its concept of "citizenship training."

"I the long run I believe the draftees who come into the Army are going to have a very fine leveling influence on the American public in general. I believe that these men will return to civilian life better men than they were when they entered the Army," said Gen. Wright.

Since their arrival at Fort Benning, Gen. and Mrs. Wright have been extremely active in community projects both on and off-post.

As an active member of the Boy Scouts of America, Gen. Wright has been instrumental in promoting scouting in this area and has encouraged full involvement of Fort Beuning personnel in the scouting program.

He came to Fort Benning from Washington, D. C., where he served as a director of a special study group charged with developing the Army's aviation requirements.

An Army aviator, Gen. Wright served at Fort Benning in 1964 as the Assistant Division Commander of the 11th Air Assault Division, which later became the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) in Vietnam. The General led the Division's advance party to Vietnam and served as Assistant Division Commander in the unit's first year of combat.

He enlisted in the Regular Army in 1935 and graduated from West Point in 1940.

In World War II, he commanded the battery which fired the last round in defense of Corregidor. He was a prisoner of war of the Japanese for 3½ years.

In the Korean War, he served with the 7th Infantry Division.

He has had a variety of command and staff assignments, duty as a military attache, and is a graduate of the Command and General Staff College and the National War College. He received a master's degree in business administration at the University of Southern California and graduated from the advanced management course at the University of Pittsburgh.

His military decorations include the Distinguished Service Medal, the Silver Star with Oak Leaf Cluster, the Legion of Merit with Oak Leaf Cluster, the Air Medal with 12 Oak Leaf Clusters and the Purple Heart with Oak Leaf Cluster.

COLLECTION OF SALES TAX

Since Fort Benning is a federal enclave, not under the jurisdiction of the state of Georgia, why is the state sales tax collected in at least two cases—newspaper subscriptions and Pizza On Call?

According to Robert M. Tempel, an auditor for the sales and use tax unit here in Muscogee County, the Buck Act, which is a federal amendment to the Soldiers and Sailors Relief Act, grants states and municipalities the right to collect sales and use tax on federal areas.

PATHFINDER'S BADGE

I have heard two conflicting stories concerning the right to wear both the Pathfinder's Badge and Parachutist Badge at the same time. One side claims you can — the other claims you can't, and both cite regulations to prove their case. Once and for all can you or can't you?

As it stands now you can. A forthcoming revision of AR 672-5-1 which is scheduled for publication within the next three months will give detailed information concerning the wearing of the Pathfinder's Badge and other combat and special skill badges.

When the two are worn side by side on the pocket flap, the Parachutist Badge takes precedence and is to be placed on the wearer's right.

RETIREMENT

I will be retiring soon. Can I choose the location where I desire to be processed for retirement?

Not yet, but effective March 31, according to the Army Personnel Letter dated January 15, 1969, those who are about to retire may elect to be processed for retirement at a location of their choice in CONUS; i.e., the 48 contiguous states and the Military District of Washington.

Members who have already submitted a retirement request with effective date of March 31 or later may request change in location for these proceedings.

Previously, soldiers returning from overseas were processed for retirement at the CONUS Debarkation Point; those retiring from a CONUS installation were processed at their duty station.

FOREIGN STUDENTS

Does a foreign military student receive any type of recognition to wear on his uniform for the completion of a course at a U.S. military school?

Since 1964 the Command and General Staff College has been giving emblems to be worn by foreign officers who graduate from the course.

In three to six months as a result of the Haines Board recommendation, all foreign students will be awarded a special pocket emblem upon graduation from U.S. Army schools. The purpose is to provide increased recognition for some 7,000 foreign students who attend courses every year.

To insure uniformity and quality the Institute of Heraldry will develop the metal, clutch black emblem. It will feature a common outer design, modified by an inner design to denote individual school identification.

Army Reserve should have personal affairs in order

Members of the U. S. Army Reserve serve as a back-up force for the Active Army. In order to be ready for possible mobilization, all members should have their personal affairs in order. These are the documents that should be on hand and kept updated against such a time:

— Any report of transfer or discharge (DD Form 214) that reflects prior active duty service.

— Your birth certificate.

— Birth certificates of all dependents.

— Your marriage certificate.

— For each adopted child 21 or younger, you should have certified adoption papers.

— For any dependent over 21 who is physically or mentally incapacitated, a statement from a licensed physician or medical officer verifying the incapacitation, stating that it prevents self-support, and giving the period of incapacity, and — If you or your spouse has been married before, either divorce papers or death certificates terminating the previous marriage.

Copies obtained from the chemical or electrostatic copying machines in wide use today, as well as photostatic copies, are acceptable.

You will need these documents to establish your dependents' entitlement to certain privileges and to put into effect an allotment. If you would be eligible for the monthly dependents' assistance allowance, a Class Q allotment must be in effect.

CARE gets help from American troops abroad

"CARE is there" has become a familiar reponse, wherever hunger and hardship call for help from the American people. In emergency areas, often it's the men in U. S. uniform who open the way for CARE to reach the people who need help most urgently.

This has been a vital factor in South Vietnam. Because a host of servicemen have offered extra hands, a CARE team of 7 Americans has been able to channel aid to refugees and other civilian war victims in the ravaged cities and villages of every province. For example:

Villagers in Tra Trung, Quang Ngai Province, were left desitute when Viet Cong guerrillas burned every hut and building. By radio from the nearest Special Forces camp, in Tra Bong, the "Green Berets" reported their plight to the CARE representative in Danang. The next day, 3 transport planes piloted by Air Force volunteers landed in Tra Trung with 9½ tons of CARE supplies — rice, to feed the families until a new harvest; clothing fabrics and sewing accessories; farm implements; tools, rattan and other construction materials to rebuild the homes and schools.

Similarly, at the height of the Tet offensive, CARE's office in Saigon received an S.O.S. — 6,000 refugees encamped on the grounds of a hospital in Cholon, the besieged Chinese section of the city, had been without food for 3 days. Before another day had ended, a Special Forces truck, under armed escort, drove 2 CARE men to the site with 17,400 lbs. of rice.

The same spirit prevails wherever CARE and U. S. forces meet. Panama is typical. In Llano Nopo, a remote mountain region, CARE is helping poor villagers build a health and community - development center that will be the hub of a better life. It would take 200 mule days to make a delivery of the tons of supplies required — lumber, tools, cement, medical equipment, food-for-work rations. AF and SF relays, by plane and helicopter, deliver cargoes in a few hours.

The variety of "missions accomplished" with the help of servicemen illustrates the good your 15A dollars do in 25 countries from Latin America to Africa and Asia.

To 22 million children, CARE means a daily meal at schools and preschool centers. To tens of thousands every year, it means the chance to get an education, in new schools CARE helps to build and to equip with desks, writing materials, books.

To teen-agers and adults, CARE means the tools, supplies and skills to grow more food; to get jobs as carpenters, mechanics, seamstresses; to build roads, clinics, water systems essential for human progress.

To the sick and injured, it means health restored by doctors and nurses sent by MEDICO, a service of CARE, to help staff hospitals and train local com-

Failure to pay just debts may lead to court-martial

As spring draws near thoughts turn, not to love as in the old adage of a young man's fancy, but to home improvements — a new car, new clothes or perhaps a new color TV. Take fair warning, however, and proceed with care.

Before a person takes on any additional debts or payments, he should add up his fixed expenses to be sure that he doesn't overload his budget with more installment payments than it can stand. It is better to wait and save enough money to make the purchase, or use a charge account on which there is no carrying charge, than to acquire additional time payments.

The penalties for military men and women who can't pay their debts or who deliberately default on a contracted debt may be more severe than they are for the general public. This is especially true in the case of career personnel, for failure to pay just debts is a military offense and could lead to disciplinary action — even to a court-martial.

After making his installment payments a person who has used his credit unwisely discovers he doesn't have enough left over to pay the rent — much less the groceries the family needs.

Worst of all, the man too deeply in debt has no peace of mind; his efficiency on the job is destroyed, and even his marriage can be soured by financial woes.

When the coming of spring and buying fever strikes — don't let it make you a bad credit risk.

IOAC Wives Witness Wine Tasting Demonstration

"Wine, Women and Song" was the title given to this month's IOAC-3 class luncheon. The luncheon was held at a local Columbus restaurant. The theme was supported by a wine tasting demonstration, and songs provided by Buddy Nash.

Col. (ret.) Hugh Brady, representative of a local wine distributorship, showed the ladies the proper way to open and pour a bottle of wine, and which wine to use with a specific meal. Each lady was given a booklet describing different kinds of wine, where they are made, and when the wines should be served.

Buddy Nash, a Fort Benning soldier, entertained throughout the luncheon with such songs as "By the Time I Get to Phoenix" and "The Wichita Lineman."

Ninety - six wives attended the affair. Guests at the luncheon were Mrs. Lon D. Marlowe, Mrs. Andrew J. Gatsis, Mrs. Wilbur J. Thiel, and Mrs. A. J. Pisano.

IOBC Wives

First platoon wives held their monthly coffee at the home of Mrs. Gerald Lord. Acting with Mrs. Lord as hostesses were Mrs. William C. Elrod, Mrs. David Campbell, and Mrs. Meredith Caram. The special guest was Mrs. Mohammed Benzerti, wife of an allied officer from Tunisia.

The topic of discussion centered upon the upcoming first platoon party. The ladies decided to hold it on March 8, and to use some sort of a western theme.

Mrs. Colin O. Havorson hostessed the second platoon's coffee, an informal get-together for the ladies.

The third platoon wives learned the proper use of cosmetics at their monthly coffee. The affair was held in the home of Mrs. Larry Munford, who was joined as hostess by Mrs. Frank Muller and Mrs. Jessee Myers.

Guest speaker was Mrs. Julie Koepfer, demonstrator for a local fashion store. Her speech concerned the proper use and application of cosmetics. Mrs. Koepfer emphasized her points with practical demonstrations on Mrs. John Luallin, who acted as a model.

Fourth platoon wives also were given a lecture and demonstration on the proper use of cosmetics. Mrs. Lula Malm, representing a local cosmetics store, served as the guest speaker.

The occasion was the platoon's monthly coffee, held in the home of Mrs. Robert W. Thomas. Mrs. Thomas shared hostess duties with Mrs. Wayne F. Reposa, Mrs. Michael E. Wikan, and Mrs. Steven A. Schmidt.

Mrs. LeRoy Edwards Jr. served as hostess for the fifth platoon's monthly coffee. The gathering was informal and centered upon making plans for the VIP luncheon to be held in April.

Dan Tucker, a local expert on falls and hairpieces, entertained the wives of officers in IOBC 6-69 at their VIP Luncheon. The luncheon was held in the Supper Club of the Officer's Club, and honored special guests Mrs. Wendell O. Doody, Mrs. Wilbur J. Thiel, Mrs. Lon D. Marlowe, Mrs. James Henderson and Mrs. David Fishback.

Cadre Hostesses were Mrs. Monte Wolff, Mrs. James Latham. Hostesses for the student wives were Mrs. Jack Belk, Mrs. Efrem Zimbalist III, and Mrs. Lloyd Owen Jr.

Social chairman Jane Belk served as master of ceremonies for the affair and also served as Mr. Tucker's model.

Wives of officers in IOBC 7-69 were initiated into the social customs and courtesies of Army life at a recent follow-up coffee. Mrs. Wendell O. Doody, wife of Maj. Wendell O. Doody, XO of the 2nd Stu. Bn, outlined the military customs that they would encounter in their new role as Army Wives.

She also touched on the General's reception that will be held for the class later in the month, and gave the ladies a few tips on the "dos" and "don'ts" of military protocol at such formal functions. She closed her talk by encouraging the ladies to take part in Army functions and to share the excitement that their husbands will experience throughout their military careers.

Mrs. Bruce W. Presley, student wife hostess, followed Mrs. Doody to the podium, and announced the committee chairmen who would be responsible for planning the class' luncheon. They are Mrs. James N. Waybright, finance; Mrs. John T. Booker, publicity; Mrs. Robert E. Holeton Jr., decorations and program; Mrs. John L. Wertin, food and wine; Mrs. Harold W. Williams Jr., reservations and invitations and Mrs. Robert F. Burns, assistant social chairman.

The Benning Room of the Officer's club was the scene of the class luncheon of wives of student officers in IOBC 7-69. Special guests included Mrs. Sidney Berry, Mrs. E. C. Acuff, Mrs. Wilbur J. Thiel, Mrs. Wendell O. Doody, Mrs. Ralph E. Short and Mrs. Kenneth D. Wiley.

Student hostesses included Mrs. John C. Decker, Mrs. Clark E. Runion, Mrs. Bernhard J. Muller Jr., Mrs. Clifford W. Shiniksi, Mrs. Stanley E. Ellington, Mrs. Robert E. York, and Mrs. Michael A. Mallory.

The theme for the luncheon was Valentine's day, and in keeping with the theme, the decorations were red and white carnations with red decorative hearts.

Mrs. Stanley Ellington served as chairman for the affair. Mrs. James R. Hughes and Mrs. William Pyrek were responsible for the decorations, Mrs. Clark E. Runion for the food and wine selection, and Mrs. Robert York for the decorations. Mrs. Julian Collins served the sherry.

OCS Makes Plans To Recognize 100,000th Grad

candidate training came during the World War II push for officers when 69 classes were undergoing instruction between Sept. 28, 1942, and Dec. 27, 1942. At that time 14,309 students were enrolled in the course with 12,569 graduating.

OCS training received through the Infantry School is designed not only to prepare young men for their role as combat leaders but also to create leaders as members of the civilian community.

Officer Candidate School has continued to fulfill its original mission of producing combat leaders since it began in July 1941. The program ran continuously through November 1947 at which time the school was discontinued as the need for officers diminished with the end of the war.

In February 1951 once again a war created the need of an Infantry officer candidate program and the course was reactivated to fulfill the requirements of the Korean War. The program has continued since that time as a 23-week course.

The list of distinguished persons graduating from OCS in the past is filled with such well-known leaders as the late Maj. Gen. Keith L. Ware, Medal of Honor winner during World War II and Commander of the First Infantry Division in Vietnam until his death in October 1968.

The OCS Hall of Fame, located in Wigle Hall at Fort Benning, has more than 300 distinguished graduates of the program including Governor Winthrop L. Rockefeller of Arkansas and 28 past and present members of the United States Senate and House of Representatives.

Soldier Dies In Alabama Auto Wreck

One soldier died over the three-day Washington's birthday weekend in a traffic accident.

The accident occurred about 3 a. m. Monday outside Lowndesboro, Ala., near Montgomery. Sp5 James W. Cole, from C Co., 1st Bn., CTC, was apparently returning to Fort Benning when he fell asleep at the wheel and ran off the road, striking a bridge. The driver wore no seat belts.

A Safety Office spokesman contrasted the fatal crash with a similar, nonfatal accident that occurred less than an hour earlier the same morning north of Columbus.

A driver fell asleep and ran off the road. He suffered a fractured jaw. He was wearing seat belts.

Both drivers operated older model cars. The fatality involved a 1959 model sedan. Both drivers apparently were alone at the time of the crashes.

Both cases indicated that some drivers did not heed the message given in pre-holiday orientations about driving when fatigued or about pushing the limits of endurance," said James Blount, deputy safety director.

Blount also pointed to the records that one-third of the 17 fatal accidents from July 1 through January happened between midnight and 6 a. m.

Blount noted that the first seven days after payday have generally produced two-thirds of the deaths, and urged caution as another payday weekend begins.

PROMOTED . . . Robert Durovey, 6th Bn., The Candidate Brigade, was awarded sergeant major stripes. Sgt. Maj. Durovey is being reassigned to the 197th Inf. Brigade.

Forsythe

ond lieutenant in the Organized Reserve Corps of the Army in 1928, following graduation from the University of Montana. He was commissioned in the Regular Army in 1942.

Maj. Gen. Forsythe saw duty in both the Pacific and European theaters during World War II.

He has had a variety of both staff and command assignments and is holder of the Combat Infantryman, Parachutist and Glider Badges.

The general left Fort Benning in 1966 to become G-3 (plans and operations officer), Headquarters, U. S. Army Pacific, at Fort Schafter, Hawaii.

He is a graduate of the Command and General Staff College, and the Air War College.

Pistol Club Sets Two-Day Match

A two-day battle for ten's and X's will take place March 1-2 during the monthly Fort Benning Pistol Match at the Fort Benning Pistol Club.

Marksmen from the All-Army pistol team, Third Army pistol team and Post pistol team as well as from the civilian ranks will be challenging for the championship honors.

Turn Around and It's Gone...

By Sp4 James L. Marshall

LAI KHE, Vietnam (Div 10)-The word to move comes at 9 a. m. There is little said as bunkers are filled, sandbags emptied, gear packed. The move has been made countless times before, and the men could do it blind. Within two hours the ten-day-old fire support base is leveled and the move is being made to the new site.

The watchword is dust. Dust to be kicked up by boots, shovels and choppers for the next 16 hours. An unseen radio thumps out "The Beat Goes On" as commo equipment hisses and garbles in competition. Letters, dreams and mid-morning review training have been halted; shovels, straining backs and the dust stir for the move.

Jets, artillery and gunships are already prepping the new position—100 VC were spotted in the area. And the beat goes on for the men of the 1st Infantry Division.

Three companies of infantry and a battery of artillery make the move together—11 klicks or approximately seven miles. 20,000 sandbags emptied and 20,000 sandbags to refill, 28 Chinook sorties of artillery, ammo, men and supplies, infantry last out and first in, 16 hours of sweat and dust. Cans of water and gas are loaded into the hook's harnesses along with commo equipment, flak jackets, and empty sandbags.

Some have iced kool-aid. Each drink cuts the dust, but throats dry to cotton in the heat when drinks run out. Police-up, pack-up, move-out. Red-burned backs, white-bleached hair, dust-stung eyes, and the beat goes on. The new base is prepped by 3 p. m. the sorties begin; artillery and infantry fireqover is effective before 3:30. The men know what to do: perimeter of 150 yards, unstring the concertina, clear away stumps with C-4 and plows; two circles of bunkers allowing for interlocking fire, artillery centered in a star formation; planned, fast, efficient.

Trees press close at the new base. Air strikes hurtle tons of brush and billows of black smoke, lowering the potential of 100 enemy snipers. Parched lips draw at ragged cigarettes as the artillery is positioned: "Two-zero-one-niner . . . number four deflection, two-zero-two-zero." Turn around and old holes are filled, turn around and the command tent's down, turn around they reappear eleven klicks away.

The anonymous radio came in with the first hook and sings "California Dreamin'," but there's no time. The beat of pounding hearts, aching arms and tired lungs goes on, sweating and straining under the sun until no amount of water helps gritty teeth and clogged throats.

Even a setting sun bleeds brown in the clouds of dust. The final roar of empty Chinooks sounds with the last rays of natural light, and dust-crusted bodies still glisten orange with sweat. Dusk rests stinging eyes and burning backs and laughter comes easier. There are jocular promises of joining a friend at the pool in the morning or going over to the club later in the evening. A sudden mortar round goes off, and digging, tired men flinch—a hundred VC out there. "Sock it to 'em!" they yell.

The fired round is a flare, and as if it were the starting signal a dozen men dash for the chow line. Sizzling meat and the sweet smell of watermelon is in the air. Iced drinks finally begin to loosen the dust, and breathing is easier without the thick heat.

After dinner the digging continues. The steady hum of a generator and crickets blend soothingly with a star-clear night; but 100 rocket-grenade rounds could put an end to that, so the bunkers are built. Red flashlights and luminous fireflies spot the cool darkness, and mosquitoes come from miles around for dinner.

The digging will continue after midnight.

MOVING DAY. . . "Turn around and old holes are filled, turn around and the command tent's down, turn around they reappear eleven klicks away." Troopers begin to dig in and unload supplies at a new fire support base.

'She's No Nurse; She's a Doctor'

CHU LAI, Vietnam, (AMERICAL 10 — Each morning the Chief of Professional Services, Lt. Col. Brady, reports the activities of the hospital to the commander of the 312th Evacuation Hospital.

What's so unusual about that? Only that Lt. Col. Brady looks like a nurse, but answers to the title of doctor.

Lt. Col. Anna M. Brady is an orthopedic surgeon, a distinction shared by only 12 other women in the United States. She was recalled from the reserves last May along with the other members of her orthopedic team, the 305th Medical Detachment (KD), which she commands.

Currently, the 312th Evac is based in Chu Lai where it serves the Americal Division.

"I have always believed in a large standing reserve as opposed to a large standing Army, which accounts for my having been in the reserves all this time," Lt. Col. Brady says:

A native of Philadelphia, Pa., she was the Chief of Orthopedics at Frankford Hospital there. In addition, she was on the staff at Kernan Hospital for Crippled Children in Baltimore, Md., and she taught at the Women's Medical College of Pennsylvania.

"It was a pretty busy schedule, especially with the reserves one weekend a month. However, it did provide a way to train the members of my team, for I would let them assist me on some of my operations," Lt. Col. Brady explained. "Naturally, that's the best training they could receive and we were lucky to receive all the cooperation needed to make it possible."

Lt. Col. Brady was a nurse during World War II and saw action in the European Theater, first in France and later in Germany.

"The biggest difference in the hospital situation there as opposed to Vietnam is the facilities themselves," she commented. "We operated in tents in Germany, and we had fewer conveniences and moved quite a bit more. Here we have basically a fixed installation, which naturally affords us a more flexible operation."

Lt. Col. Brady added, "Another big difference was the fact that once an area was taken we were basically free to move around in it. This afforded me the opportunity to make many friends, some of whom I am still in contact with today."

Does being a woman affect her practice in any way? "Probably the only time I was treated differently from any other orthopedic surgeon because of being a woman was when I was going through my residency," Lt. Col. Brady explained. "Before being accepted by my preceptor, I had to meet his wife. I'm sure that's one thing my male counterparts didn't have to do."

Each day, Lt. Col. Brady continues her routine of reporting to the commander, unnoticed in any special capacity by those around her. However, once in a while, a new patient will say, "Nurse, could you come here for a minute?"

Vietnamese Sit In At Roadway Drive-In

DI AN, Vietnam (DIV 10)-It was like a drive-in movie in the middle of the road. The 1st Infantry Division Psychological Operations team set up the screen at the "T" in the roads at Binh Duong hamlet and started showing films.

About 200 Vietnamese, one third of them adults, sat on the road and stood around the projector in the PSYOPS truck. They laughed in the darkness at the movies while armored personnel carriers from Headquarters troop, 1st Squadron, 4th Cavalry provided security.

"We've been showing movies in the villages for quite a while," said S. Sgt Kenneth Riordan, 2nd Brigade PSYOPS NCO, from McHenry, Ill. "Just recently we started showing them at night. It builds the people's trust that we're not afraid to be here at night. And it's that much time less Charlie can get to them."

The team, operating out of Quan Loi, visits 20 villages per month, showing films obtained from the Vietnamese Information Service. The films there are more than 100 different titles available—entertain while showing the ways in which the Republic of Vietnam government benefits its citizens.

They showed a film on a wild west rodeo with Vietnamese sound track, a slap stick comedy making fun of the Viet Cong, and two cartoons.

The people can identify with the happy people in the films. PSYOP advisor 1st Lt. Joseph R. Anthony, Sayre, Pa., commented, "It works like a cowboy picture seen by an American kid—after the show he is a cowboy."

The only person bothered by the tie-up on the roads was a young Vietnamese on a motorcycle. He started to walk the motorcycle around the crowd but stayed to look at the film.

"We try to give a mixed program with some hard sell message and some comedy shorts," added S. Sgt. Riordan. The 2nd Brigade PSYOPS film library includes several cartoons, two BC satires, and a feature film on the exodus of Vietnamese people from North to South in 1954.

Health Fund Drive Seeks 100 Per Cent

Three hundred team captains and key men met Monday in Marshall Auditorium to hear Msg. Gen. John M. Wright Jr. and two representatives from National Health Agencies and International Service Agencies officially begin Fort Benning's latest fund drive.

"I want each of you to make sure that everyone on post has the opportunity to participate in this worthwhile undertaking," Gen. Wright told the assembly. "We are our brother's keepers, and I am confident we will have a successful campaign and will go over the top."

Bee H. Bown, the field director for the International Service Agencies, and William L. Myers, the campaign coordinator for the National Health Agencies each made a plea on behalf of their organizations and presented a short film on their organization's work.

"The battle for better health is one we are winning," said Morris. "One by one the killers of the past have been mastered but the battle must still go on.

"I have a personal motivation, because the life that may be saved or prolonged could be mine, my children's or my grandchildren's."

Last year approximately $34,000 was raised through a 96 per cent participation by Fort Benning.

"This year we are shooting for a hundred per cent participation by each unit for each agency," said John P. Schoonover, the post project officer.

The drive will end April 4.

WAC Team Edged Out

The Fort Benning WACs were edged out of their opening game in Women's Basketball Tournament held this week at Fort McClellan by the Fort Jackson team, 30-27.

In the scramble match, Fort Jackson led from the toss of the ball, but Fort Benning's WACs pulled within one point, 26-25, with just over three minutes remaining.

Dora Jackson notched the threatening bucket for Fort Benning, but Fort Jackson collected final honors with the three point lead.

In an earlier game Fort McClellan, the defending champions, defeated Fort Gordon 47-25. Margaret Roberson, Fort McClellan's team captain, notched 24 points for the contest, while Fort Gordon's Jean Toggle led her team with 14.

A slow starting game, the Fort Rucker—Fort McPherson battle was hotly contested in the last five minutes when Fort Rucker's Patricia Pryor tied the score at 21.

The lead bounced from side to side until Pryor netted a basket which Fort McPherson could not match. Fort Rucker then pulled ahead to win, 32-25.

The tournament ended today.

Gray, Sgt. Maj. for 18 Years, Says 'Life of Soldier Is Best'

By Sp4 Bob Burgener

Sgt. Maj. James E. Gray, a 23-year veteran soldier, has been assigned to the 1st Bn. (Mech.), 58th Inf., 197th Inf. Bde.

Gray has served as a sergeant major since 1959, except for a three year period as a captain.

After that period as an officer, Gray elected to return to enlisted status. "I simply feel I can do more good for the Army as a sergeant major," he said.

A master parachutist and winner of the Army Commendation Medal (with Five oak leaf clusters), Sgt. Maj. Gray began his Army career in 1948. His first assignment was with the old 11th Abn. Div. He received the Combat Infantryman's Badge while serving with the 14th Inf., 25th Inf. Div. in Korea.

He was promoted to the grade of sergeant major (E-9) while serving with the 188th Abn. Reg. at Fort Campbell, Ky. in 1960. Over the past 18 years he was advanced to the newly-created grades of E-8 and E-9 as they became authorized. He has served as sergeant major of the 82nd Abn. Div. at Fort Bragg, N. C., and of the Infantry School here at Fort Benning in 1966.

At this time he accepted a reserve commission to the rank of captain and attended the Army's School for Unconventional Warfare at Fort Bragg before going to Vietnam as advisor with the Military Assistance Command Vietnam in 1967.

SGT. MAJ. GRAY
To 58th Inf.

Gray returned to Fort Benning in 1968 as an instructor with the Jump Committee of the Airborne Department, and planned to retire in January of this year.

With 23 years of service, he could easily have retired to his favorite pastime of fishing. "But it is very hard," said Gray, "for a soldier to be happy doing anything except being a soldier. The military is a profession much as medicine or law. I am a professional soldier and I wouldn't want to trade places with anyone else."

Upon completion of his active duty tour as a captain, as required by his reserve commission, Sgt. Maj. Gray elected to return to his enlisted status.

"I believe I can better serve the Army by working in a position I am familiar with and in which I have the most experience," he said.

Sgt. Maj. Gray and his wife, Alice, have made their home near Montgomery, Ala. but plan to move their family to the Fort Benning area in June. The Grays have two sons and two daughters at home and an older daughter recently married.

Gun Inventors

The machine gun was developed almost exclusively by American inventors including R. J. Gatling and J. M. Browning. It was first used in the Franco-Prussian war and was employed extensively in World War I.

AUSA To Present Over 300 Awards

The Association of the United States Army (AUSA) will present over 300 awards to Fort Benning Infantry students and instructors, local Army sponsored programs and distinguished individuals during 1969.

This year's award program is slightly changed from previous years, according to SSgt. Richard F. Wagner, administrative assistant to the secretary-treasurer of the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning AUSA Chapter.

This year, plaques will be awarded to the honor and distinguished graduates of Officer Candidate School and Ranger classes, and the OCS leadership graduate will receive a year's free membership in the association. In past years, the honor and distinguished graduates received free membership and no plaque was awarded.

Plaques of local design will be awarded to all company and battalion-sized units attaining 100 per cent AUSA membership of its officers and NCOs (E-5 and above). In previous years, the plaque went to memberships of E-6 and above. The same type of plaque will also be awarded to the honor and distinguished graduates of the NCO Course and soldiers of the month, quarters and year from Brigade or higher units.

The outstanding drill sergeant of each training cycle of each Training Center battalion will be awarded a plaque. The drill sergeant of each quarter within each ATC brigade will receive a drill sergeant statuette. Formerly, a drill sergeant statuette was awarded to the ATC drill sergeant of the cycle.

AUSA Certificates of Commendation will be awarded to any project officer or noncommissioned officer whose unit attains 100 per cent membership upon the recommendation of the unit's sergeant major and commanding officer.

The local chapter will continue to support area high school ROTC programs and award a trophy to the cadet attaining the highest score within his school's cadet competition. In addition, a trophy will be awarded to the cadet from each school ROTC unit who scores highest in the Army Area Interscholastic Rifle Matches to be held here May 1-3.

AUSA trophies and awards are not limited to these units and Army sponsored programs. Distinguished Fort Benning visitors, guest speakers and other dignitaries receive AUSA awards.

In addition to the award, Col. Austin received a certificate making him an honorary "Doughboy."

Col. Austin had commanded the 93ist Engineer Group since Nov. 10, 1967. During the time, he eningeered the successful training cycle of the 208th Engineer Company (PB) a National Guard unit assigned to the group in May, 1968.

ARMY DENTIST, RED CROSS VOLUNTEER ATTEND PATIENT
Facilities Are Modern At Bernheim Clinic

Dental Corps To Observe 58th Anniversary Monday

By Pvt. Rick Hannegan

Fort Benning's 80 Army dentists will observe the 58th anniversary of the Army Dental Corps on Monday.

The Corps came to life after more than a half century of efforts by the dental profession to secure the appointment of dental surgeons in the Armed Forces. Agreeing to the need, on March 3, 1911, Congress authorized establishment of the Dental Corps.

Head of the Dental Activities at the Infantry Center is Col. Jack P. Pollock. The team operates 7 dental treatment facilities, including one at Martin Army Hospital and the ultra-modern Bernheim Dental clinic and associated laboratory on main post. The clinic is named in honor of Col. Julien R. Bernheim, Chief of Dental Division, Office of the Surgeon General, from 1928 to 1932.

Here at Fort Benning, dental intern and residency programs are offered. The post boasts a number of qualified oral surgeons, prosthodontists (those dealing with artificial teeth), orthodontists (those dealing with irregularities of teeth and malocclusions), peddodontists (those dealing with diagnosis and treatment of children's dental problems), periodontists (those dealing with conditions of tissues surrounding the teeth), endodontists (those dealing with tooth pulp) and public health specialists.

Dental Service at the post provides from 20,000 to 26,000 patient treatments per month in all phases of dentistry.

On a wider scale, the Dental Corps currently lists 2,900 officers, 10 per cent of whom are serving in Vietnam. Corps enrollment peaked during the Second World War when membership exceeded 18,000.

Gen. Wright's Greetings

To the members of the Army Dental Corps:

On behalf of all the men and women of the United States Army Infantry Center, I extend congratulations and best wishes to each of you on the fifty-eighth anniversary of the Army Dental Corps on 3 March 1969.

Through devoted service, noteworthy skill, and the demonstration of the highest professional standards the Dental Corps has contributed substantially to the preservation of health and the conservation of the fighting strength of the United States Army. By the unfailing efforts of its personnel, the Corps has earned the respect and gratitude of all members of the Army.

I am confident that the Dental Corps, as a distinguished part of the Army Medical Department team, will meet the challenges of the future with the dedication and resolute determination exhibited in the past in supporting our military forces as they stand guard throughout the world.

JOHN M. WRIGHT, JR.
Major General, USA
Commanding

The individual at the head of this huge network of dental services is Maj. Gen. Robert B. Shira, Assistant Surgeon General and Chief of the Army Dental Corps.

The Corps, operating one of the most extensive adult dental care programs in the world, originated in 1842 with Dr. Edward Maynard, one of the few distinguished dentists of the day. From then until his death in 1891, he kept his idea alive and fresh in the minds of succeeding administrations. Within 10 years after his death the major battle was won the passing of the Army Reorganization Bill in 1901 and the first permanent military dental legislation.

Ironically, the Confederate Army recognized the need of Army dentistry and included dental surgeons in its organization long before the U.S. Army did.

Keep Them Clean

Dentures Require Proper Care

Millions of Americans every day neglect and abuse their teeth. Twenty-two million of them, 13 per cent of the population, have allowed this mistreatment to progress to serious oral disease and have as a result, lost all their teeth.

At about six months, the average person begins to develop the first of 20 "baby" teeth that will last him until he is six. At this time the first of the 32 permanent teeth begin to erupt. With daily care, these teeth could last a lifetime For a large number of Americans they don't. For these people, a third set of teeth is necessary and because nature won't provide them, science does.

"In many cases," says the American Dental Association, "it is desirable to insert artificial dentures immediately after the removal of the natural teeth. These immediate dentures provide the mouth with teeth and help the gums to heal. This prepares the mouth for future dental service and makes speech and swallowing more comfortable."

Lt. Col. Silas M. Crase, Chief of Preventive Dentistry at Fort Benning, said, "Today's artificial dentures are so expertly fabricated that it often takes close inspection to reveal that they are not real teeth. And, like real teeth, dentures must be cared for."

Col. Crase said that dentures, just like teeth, must be cleaned daily to remove food deposits and stains. Denture brushes, which are stiffer than regular toothbrushes, should be used to scrub the dental plates clean.

He added, "Dentures should not be worn at night. The mouth should be brushed with a soft bristle toothbrush in the morning, after every meal and before going to bed. Do not brush your mouth with a denture brush as this may severely damage your gums. Don't try to sterilize your dentures with hot water or let them become dry, as this will damage them."

Ill-fitting dentures can be dangerous, causing mouth irritation and destruction of supporting tissues.

Chaplain 'Discovers' Art, Plans Active Retirement

By Spt Ken Sturzenacker

"The chaplain has to be a counselor, a religious adviser, a service agent and an information bureau."

The words are those of Chaplain (Maj.) Wilton E. Sloan, one of Center Troop Command's four chaplains, who has spent 16 years giving guidance and help to soldiers.

"Too many people seem to believe the chaplain is the last resort, the man to see only when nothing else works" he says.

"Just the opposite is true," Chaplain Sloan said, "we can send a man to the people who can help him, even if we can't answer his questions ourselves."

Chaplain Sloan has had extensive training for his work. He received a bachelor of arts degree from Mississippi College, and completed work for a degree in religious education at Baptist Theological Seminary. In 1951, he was graduated from Florida State University with a master of arts degree in psychology.

Chaplain Sloan, a native of Teyty, Ga., served with the Marines from 1937 through 1938, and with the Army National Guard from 1939 until 1941.

When the United States declared war on Japan, Chaplain Sloan joined the Army Air Corps and served until the end of World War II.

Having served almost six years as an enlisted man, Chaplain Sloan returned to the Army during the Korean War.

The chaplain plans to retire later this year, probably in October, after completing 21 years of service.

The retirement, however, will be very active. Sloan plans to teach at the junior college level, specializing in comparative religions, the psychology of religion and general psychology.

In addition to his teaching duties, Sloan has developed another area of interests, art and sculpture.

About a year ago, he bought a set of paints and a couple of canvases, simply for the sake of copying photographs or other pictures for his own enjoyment.

Without any formal training, he found that he could produce good paintings based on other works. Since then, he has begun doing landscapes and impressionistic paintings.

The chaplain has experimented in a number of different techniques, using acrylics, oils, water colors and inks. In several of his works, he has combined methods of creating an impression, using spray paints, oils and inks all in the same work.

The other side of Chaplain Sloan's talents turn to sculpture. The use of free forms and three dimensional figures, the chaplain believes, offers better medium in which to express some ideas and create certain impressions.

Some of the chaplain's sculpture has consisted of collages, putting together other already finished articles to make a larger, more complex form.

"It has been personally exciting to be able to take an idea and be able to find ways to express it, especially when so many different interpretations can be drawn from the same concept." Chaplain Sloan said.

"Others' ideas on what you've done help you expand your own thinking and lead you to a fuller awareness of what you've accomplished."

Prize-Winning Talk Delivered To MOWW

Approximately 80 members of the Military Order of the World Wars heard an award winning patriotic speech at a Ladies Night dinner meeting Feb. 17 at the Officers Club.

Ed Hiles, executive vice - president of the Georgia Savings and Loan League, presented his speech "Don't Blame Caesar," for which he received a George Washington Gold Medal Award from The Freedom Foundation.

He spoke concerning the 200-year cycle of civilization, popular historical concept which outlines nations going from bondage to freedom to apathy and then back to bondage within a 200-year period.

In his speech, he listed virtues American citizens should adopt.

He included standing on one's freedom of speech and letting convictions be known in one's sphere of influence; not worrying about being "square" and insisting on one's right to be an individual; stop downgrading politicians, making politics an honorable profession; and fighting the "God is Dead" movement in America.

The American citizen has no one to blame for his apathy but himself. He can't blame the government — he "can't blame Caesar," Hiles said.

CI CAPSULES

Soldiers in pay grades E6 and below, regardless of years of service, are now eligible to reenlist for an overseas area of their choice. Under the expanded Overseas Area Reenlistment Option, assignment to a particular area is guaranteed. However, there is no assurance of how long the individual will remain in the selected overseas command as tour length depends to a great extent on priorities in filling world-wide grade and MOS requirements. Personnel with over four years service must reenlist immediately to take advantage of this opportunity. For more details, consult AR 601-280 and-or see your career counselor.

Scuba divers, serving in MOS 00B2, are now authorized special duty pay of $55 per month. This additional money was granted in recognition of the hazardous duty involved. Currently, there are 30 valid Table of Organizational Equipment-Table of Distribution positions in the Army for this MOS.

The voluntary retention for a period of two years for Army Nurse Corps (ANC) officers who otherwise would be required to be retired has been authorized. In view of the continuing need for senior officers, as many as 20 highly qualified ANC officers may be offered a voluntary retention of two years. The Army's current operational requirement for nurses is 7,362, while the strength of the ANC as of Sept. 30, 1968, was 4,595.

REMINDER

According to a recent Department of the Army policy message, the display of political stickers on automobiles operated by members of the Army while on active duty is prohibited. (ANF)

'Aviation Will Last,' Says General

"Army Aviation is here to stay," according to Lt. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, U.S. Army Combat Developments Command. Writing in the March issue of the U.S. Army Aviation Digest, Gen. Kinnard says that not only is its longevity assured, but new uses will grow from its development.

In the article entitled "Army Aviation's Future," General Kinnard says that the Army's current helicopter fleet is an excellent takeoff point for defining future requiremeots. He then outlines some of the probable development.

One development mentioned by the general is the heavy lift helicopter. He says that by the mid-70s an initial version of a 20- to 30-ton heavy lift helicopter could be ready and by 1985 there could be helicopters capable of lifting 40 to 50 tons. He also mentions the development of the vertical takeoff and landing aircraft (VTOL) aircraft, the stopped rotor aircraft and a triangular rotor aircraft system.

He concludes his article by saying "Having achieved the ability to use the helicopter and employ the tactic of airmobility, we should now 'take off.'"

10th Group Aids In Jordan Fund

10th Aviation Group has donated $148.32 to the Betty Jordan Fund, which will help to pay for a kidney transplant operation for the Columbus woman.

C. M. Skipper, pastor of the Central Baptist Church of Columbus, reported that the drive had collected $12,000 of a goal of $22,000 from the Columbus and Eufaula areas. He extended his thanks to the 10th Group for its support of the drive.

Infantry Corporal: Where Did He Go?

By Sp5 Mike Smith

What has happened to the Infantry Corporal?

Since the change to a Specialist - NCO grade structure in 1956, there has been a marked decline in the number of the Infantry two-striper.

The basic objective in the change of the grade system was to raise the prestige of the noncommissioned officer leader and at the same time assure recognition for the administrative and technical skills of specialists.

The basic idea was that the "noncom" would outrank all other enlisted men. The specialist ranks would be next, followed by the private soldiers.

As the infantry and the rest of the Army grew in technical complexity, the need for the Infantry corporal slowly started to vanish. For example, during the first stages of the program there was a need for the corporal as assistant squad leader, but in today's rifle company there is no longer an E-4 slot for assistant squad leaders.

When the big switch was made in 1958, there was quite a controversy as to who should be made a specialist and who should be the NCO. A man could place a request that he wanted to remain an NCO, but the final decision was made by the commanding officer.

At that time, a master sergeant was the highest enlisted rank held. With the new system, an E-7 could be a master specialist, an E-6, specialist first class, an E-5 could be specialist 2nd class and the E-4 could be a specialist 3rd class. A corporal would rank them all.

As the Army increased in technological complexity, the number of soldiers who were basically military technicians increased.

At the outbreak of World War I, there were 57 skills classified as specialists (including combat types) among enlisted men. By 1919, the total had reached 704. Today, there are 990 different job skills.

The plan produced a change in infantry rifle company organization. In 1954 there were 99 noncoms in a company, out of a total of 190 enlisted men, or 52 per cent. Under the new plan there were 43 Noncoms in the rifle company, or 23 per cent. All men in grades E-6 and E-7 were noncoms, as were men in grade E-5, except three cooks who were specialists. In grade E-4, only the three assistant squad leaders (machine gunners in the weapons squad) were noncoms and the remainder in E-4 (53 in number) were specialists. This was the plan to raise the prestige of NCO leaders and at the same time assure recognition for administrative and technical skills of specialist.

In the units of technical and administrative services, a similar situation existed, with such positions as platoon sergeant, shop foreman, section leaders and assistant section leaders being noncoms while those who are not in command or responsible for others were specialists.

In essence, the plan provided that those who actually led or directed others were noncoms and had the rank and authority to fulfill their responsibilities. Those who were not leaders were specialists and could attain a pay grade recognizing their technical or administragive skills.

With this grade change came a Military Occupations Skill (MOS) change, which introduced the suffix number to indicate the skill level to which a special field could extend.

In the late 'forties, the Table of Organization and Equipment (TOE) was changed, making the assistant squad leader an E-5 sergeant and the squad leader a staff sergeant (E-6). The corporal, since he was no longer a leader, became a specialist in his job. He took orders but did not give them.

Later on, the TOE changed again, calling for two fireteam leaders in grade E-5 and a staff sergeant as squad leader, but this did not completely eliminate the two striper, sometimes called the "hard stripe" corporal.

In today's infantry units there are only two slots in the TOE for corporals. They are the pathfinder and an ordnance NCO and they are the only slots in which an E-4 is in control of other men.

In artillery units there is a slot for a corporal as an assistant gunner. He leads the other men of the gun crew in the loading and sighting of the gun. He also is qualified to take the place of the gunner in case of absence or injury.

Until last July, the hard stripe corporal still outranked the highest grade specialist. This is no longer so. The corporal is senior to a specialist four, but not to the higher specialist ranks.

In today's modern Army, the corporal is not gone but his ranks are thinning out.

FROM OUTER SPACE . . . The truck-mounted tower is designed for air traffic control at Army airfields. Currently under environmental tests at the U. S. Army Electronic Proving Ground, Fort Huachuca, Ariz., the Aircraft Control Center, AN-TSQ-70A, is equipped with antennas for ultra-high frequency (UHF), very high frequency (VHF) and frequency modulated (FM) radio communications.

Defense Dept. Wants 500 Doctors for Army

The Department of Defense has requested the Selective Service System to provide 437 doctors of medicine, 23 doctors of osteopathy and 28 optometrists for active duty, beginning in July of this year.

Special calls for physicians have been necessary on an annual basis since 1961 in order to bring the total military medical strength to the level necessary to meet military requirements. These calls are effected only when necessary to supplement the number of doctors who have been acquired through regular procurement measures to meet requirements.

All physicians inducted as a consequence of the present special call will serve with the Army.

The number of physicians being called this year is fewer than in any other call since 1962. The last seven calls have been in excess of one thousand. This smaller call is related to the stabilization of the buildup of forces associated with the Vietnam war and with the large number of volunteers who enter military service through the Berry Plan. This plan provides for the early commissioning in the Reserve of recent medical school graduates and predetermines their date of coming on active duty, either immediately following internship, following one year of additional training, or as a specialist upon completion of a full training program in one of the specialties of medicine. A similiar program exists for osteopathic school graduates.
