Flight for Life Made Smoother By Helicopter Lifts

In Vietnam today, the flight for life from battlefield to hospital begins with a call over the DUSTOFF radio net for an evacuation helicopter.

The Dustoff helicopter can get the man to a medical facility in less than 35 minutes—from anywhere in Vietnam. And that facility can give the soldier definitive, resuscitative life-saving treatment.

Rapid medical evacuation by helicopter has been a key factor in the U.S. Army's successful medical program in Vietnam. The American soldier wounded in battle today has the best chance of survival than any war in history. Seriously wounded casualties are reaching treatment facilities alive and with minimum delay so that they may receive the full benefits of modern American medicine.

The Dustoff call—a symbol of fast medical aid and evacuation that has become a major factor in the high morale of Army combat troops—echoes across Vietnam wherever and wherever medical help is needed.

The reliability that has made Dustoff standard procedure in Vietnam is continually adding to the growing reputation of the determined and courageous men who operate and maintain the Army's evacuation helicopters.

Dustoff was the radio call sign of the first air ambulance unit deployed to Vietnam in April 1962.

It has since been adopted by the entire air ambulance system in Vietnam.

Brig. Gen. Spurgeon H. Neel Jr., chief surgeon for the U.S. Army in Vietnam and commander of the 44th Medical Brigade, has given this description of Dustoff operations:

"The request for air evacuation is normally made by the medical aidman at the site of the casualty. The call is placed over the Dustoff radio net and is received by the supporting air ambulance unit . . .

"Once the pickup is made, the patient is flown directly to the medical treatment facility best situated for the care that is required. This may or may not be the one which happens to be the nearest to the site of injury. Many factors impact on the decision as to the proper destination hospital. Distance is less important than time; and the objective is to minimize the time between injury and definitive resuscitative treatment."

The potential for this kind of helicopter support was recognized during the Korean War. Experience in air medical evacuation of casualties from areas inaccessible to ground vehicles provided the basis for development of the air ambulance service used so successfully in Vietnam today.

The UH-1D Huey is the preferred and authorized helicopter in all of the medical air ambulance and crash rescue units in Vietnam. This helicopter can carry six litter or nine ambulatory patients with a crew of four.

Some 15 per cent of air medical evacuation sorties are flown at night, and weather has not been a significant deterrent because of the versatile flight characteristics of the helicopter.

In addition to saving the lives of thousands of soldiers, the Dustoff crews are establishing a record of flexibility and adaptability that undoubtedly will be the precedent for future expanded use of the helicopter as a life-saving vehicle for civilian rescue and emergency service in the United States. Awards Given at ATC Graduation

Presentation of awards to cadre and trainees highlighted the graduation ceremonies of the Army Training Center's 2nd Brigade Provisional Battalion.

Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, ATC commander, awarded the Bronze Star to 1st Lt. Fred A. Preuss, Co. A, 6th Bn.; the Air Medal to Capt. James A. Kofalt, Co. B, 6th Bn.; and to Capt. Manuel Granado, Co. B, 6th Bn.; and the Army Commendation Medal to Sgt. Wayne T. Crisp, Co. D, 9th Bn.

Pvt. Darian N. Diachock, Co. E, 9th Bn., won the American Spirit Medal.

Among guests attending the ceremonies were Brig. Gen. James L. Baldwin and Col. Joseph N. Hearin, both of Washington, D. C., and Col. Joel M. Hollis of Fort Benning. Each was present to witness his son's graduation.

SSgt. Charles D. Gore received the Drill Sergeant of the Cycle Award from Lt. Col. William G. Riggs, commander of the 7th Bn.

Col. Riggs also presented awards to the individual trainees who excelled during basic combat training in their respective companies. Among those honored were Pvt. Joel M. Hollis Jr., son of Col. Hollis, and Pvt. Minguel Rios, son of SFC Eduardo Rios, formerly of Fort Benning, now stationed at Camp Darby, Livorno, Italy.

12 Retire After 20

In a ceremony at York Field Monday, 12 men ended their Army careers.

More than 200 watched as Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., Fort Benning commander, presented the Army Commendation Medal to the retirees, each of whom has served 20 years.

The 283rd Army Band provided music for the parade. An honor guard was formed by Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade.

Columbus residents who retired were Maj. Edgar N. Kelly, SFC James R. Brown Jr., SFC Larry Hogan, SFC John D. Moore Jr., SFC William Rosario, SSgt. Roy N. Turpin and SSgt. Marvin A. Vindrine.

Other retiring were MSgt. David Sassner (Miami Beach, Fla.) SFC Allen N. Barker (Shiloh, Ga.), SFC Leslie V. Holmes (Enterprise, Ala.), and SSgt. Clarence A. Colbert and SSgt. Isaac Head, both of Birmingham, Ala.

The War Department was established under a provision of the Constitution in 1789 as an executive department of the Federal government to administer the military establishment.

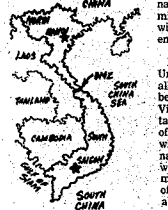
Lodge Asserts Position On War

(Commander's Digest)



A new phase of the Paris Peace Talks began on Jan. 25 with the "First Plenary Session of the Paris Meeting on Vietnam." On that date the delegations of the Republic of Vietnam, the United States, the Democratic Republic of Vietnam (Hanoi), and the National Liberation Front met together in two sessions of the Talks for the first time. (At present the only official participants were the U.S. and observers from Saigon and the NLF were present in Paris.)

The opening statements made at the first session of the "new" Talks present the initial positions taken by each delegation. Below is the statement given by the head of the U.S. delegation, Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge.

This is a unique moment in history. Today, in this new meeting in Paris, the search for peace in Vietnam enters a new stage. Today, we begin together the search for an honorable and enduring settlement to the conflict which divides us.

The world will be watching these proceedings with close attention.

They will expect progress, not propaganda.

They will expect agreement, not acrimony.

The United States is determined to do everything it can to assure that these meetings will lead us to peace.

Nixon Defines Goal

Last Monday, a new President was inaugurated, committed to an honorable peace and dedicated to an equitable solution. In his inaugural address he stated:

"The peace we seek to win is not victory over any other people but the peace that comes with healing in its wings; with compassion for those who have suffered; with understanding for those who have opposed us; with the opportunity for all the peoples of this earth to choose their own destiny."

I ask you to ponder these words.

No purpose is served by repeating the list of familiar charges or to recite once more the chronology which brought us here. Our responsibility is to the future, not the past. The problems we have settled have been procedural; the bulk of our substantive work is still ahead. The United States will enter these talks with a profound sense of responsibility and an open mind. It will put forth carefully considered proposals and hopes that the other side will do the same.

Undoubtedly, we have many difficult sessions ahead of us. A good way to begin our task would be to deal with concrete proposals.

The search for peace can begin in the DMZ. We believe that the demilitarized status of the zone between North and South Vietnam should be restored immediately. Specifically, the United States Government proposes that the DMZ should be:

—Free of all regular and irregular military and subversive forces and personnel, military installations, military supplies and equipment.

—An area in which, from which, and across which all acts of force are prohibited.

—A Zone temporarily separating North and South Vietnam pending their reunification through the free expression of the will of the people of the North and of the people of the South.

—An area the same in size and definition as that provided in the 1954 Geneva Accords.

—Subject to an effective system of international inspection and verification.

Geneva Accords

We therefore propose that each side publicly declare its readiness to respect the provisions of the 1954 Geneva Accords relating to the DMZ, and abide by those provisions.

We stand ready to begin today to work out the details for transforming this proposal for a DMZ into a serious and open-minded consideration to all proposals directed to this end by your side. Nothing could be more auspicious for our work here than an agreement today to begin urgent consideration of this matter.

We will put forward other concrete posposals at susequent meetings. Our proposal today with respect to the DMZ is advanced as a practical first step on the road to peace.

Of course, our real task is not a partial but a complete peace. The United States goal can be stated simply: to preserve the right of the South Vietnamese people to determine their own future, without outside interference or coercion.

Mutual Withdrawal

For this reason, the United States believes that all external forces should be withdrawn from South Vietnam and that all military and subversive forces of North Vietnam must be withdrawn into North Vietnam. We are ready to work toward the implementation of the objective of such mutual withdrawal.

The United States Government seeks no permanent establishment of troops, no permanent military bases, and no permanent military alliance. We have no desire to threaten or harm the people of North Vietnam or to invade that country, or to overthrow its Government. What we do seek is a South Vietnam that is free from attacks or subversion from without.

We seek peace not only in Vietnam but in the entire area of Southeast Asia. We believe that the Geneva Agreements of 1962 on Laos must be observed. We consider it necessary that the sovereignty, independence, unity and territorial integrity of Cambodia be fully respected.

The United States has, on more than one occasion, expressed its conviction that the essential elements of the Geneva Accords of 1954 provide a basis for peace in Vietnam. We reaffirm this today.

The Geneva Accords provided for international supervision. Experience has demonstrated the shortcomings of existing

Bull Rider Hopes To Go Airborne

By Sp4 Chip Rinaldi

When PFC David Peters talks about throwing the bull, listen to him. He's an expert.

Peters picked up plenty of experience at throwing bulls—and roping and riding them, too—as a rodeo performer before he sought a "tamer" life and entered the Army.

Peters was recently assigned to Co. C, 5th Bn., 31st Inf., 197th Inf. Bde.

Starting at the age of seven with a dog act in a local rodeo in his native city of Jacksonville Beach, Fla., Peters pursued the rodeo world as far West as Utah and earned top honors in two rodeos before he enlisted at age 17.

"The dog act," he explains, "involved two sheep dogs with small monkeys as riders trained to herd a few sheep. It was a simple act, but it captured my imagination at seven and excited me to the prospects of being a rodeo performer."

Rodeos, especially popular in the Southwest, are exhibitions of the skills of cowboys. Regulated by the Rodeo Cowboys Association of America, they feature a number of events requiring performers to display their skill at a number of daring feats. The title of "All-Round Cowboy" is earned by the cowboy who displays the greatest skill in events such as roping calves, bull dogging and riding bulls.

Peters continued in local rodeos with his dog act until he was 11, and then "grew up" to riding bulls and traveling to neighboring areas in Florida to participate in rodeos.

"It was rough work," he says, especially considering the fact that it was inevitable you would be kicked a few times by the bulls. But you learn how to take it and the challenge of pitting your wits and will against the animal's was exciting and the applause of the spectators was satisfying."

Rodeo work is dangerous, and Peters can testify to this. Once in a rodeo in Texas he was pinned against a wall by a bull, breaking both his legs, one arm and a few ribs. He spent seven months in the hospital after this accident.

When he was 14, he changed his status from performer to professional cowboy with membership in the Rodeo Cowboys Association. He worked as a rodeo clown whose job was to get a bull's attention after it had thrown a rider.

"It was dangerous work and this was when I had my accident," he explained, "but the experience of clowning was important for a career in the rodeo."

At 16 he formed a partnership with another rodeo performer, and trained his own horse and started traveling to rodeos across the country. It was at this time that he twice earned the title of All-Round Cowboy at individual rodeos.

Peters is now serving as an Infantryman with hopes of going to Airborne school soon. Service in the Army has curtailed his rodeo activities and he's not certain he wants to resume his old career with the same intensity once he has completed his service obligation.

"It was a rough life and I've been thinking of going into some other aspect of rodeo business," he says. "But the fascination of rodeos is still there for me."

methods. One of our principal tasks will be to work out more effective ways of supervising any agreement and to ensure equitable and effective investigation of complaints. We believe that the nations of the area, which have the most crucial interest in peace and stability in the region, should be involved in the system of monitoring the agreement at which we may arrive.

We seek the early release of prisoners of war on both sides so they can return to their homes and rejoin their families. We would be prepared to discuss this at an early date so as to arrange for the prompt release of prisoners held by both sides.

The United States is present here because we seek a permanent peace. The United States Government considers that it has a mandate for a fresh look. We know that peace cannot be achieved unless both sides can take part in its achievement.

Ladies and gentlemen, we here will be judged ultimately by history, not tomorrow's headlines. Let us talk without rancor and recrimination. President Nixon in his Inaugural Address stated in another context:

"We cannot learn from one another unless we stop shouting at one another—until we speak quietly enough so that our words can be heard as well as our voices." And he added: "Let us take as our goal: where peace is unknown make it welcome, where peace is fragile, make it strong, where peace is temporary make it permanent."

Ladies and gentlemen, in that spirit let us together—take up the task of peace.

Soul Music Is Top Seller Here

By 1st Lt. Fred Vollrath

The top selling music at Fort Benning is Rhythm and Blues according to D. F. Horgan, the retail operations manager for the post. His office is responsible for supplying the Browser Shop and other outlets with over 5,000 different record titles.

"We have found soul music to be the biggest seller," said Horgan, "it is followed by rock, popular, and country western. Our slowest selling items are classical but this comes as no surprise."

The Browser Shop sells an average of 8,000 albums a month.

The Post Exchange makes sure it has the current most popular records available for the troops through the use of a top ten seller chart supplied by the vendor.

"This list varies with each location," said Horgan, "This Top Ten list of albums supplied to us must be carried by the Post Exchange. After sixty days any albums that are not sold are replaced. We try to stay up with what is new and make them available at the lowest possible price."

The biggest sellers are "The Beatles" and Glen Campbell.

The report on the buying habits of Fort Benning's population was not surprising to two local commentators on the music scene, Pete Lis, a Radio-TV announcer for six years and currently a columnist for the Bayonet, and Johnny Michaels, a disk jockey with a local Top 40 radio station.

"The predominance of soul is a reflection of the area of the country the post is located in," observed Lis. "After all this is the heart of soul country being the deep South. If it wasn't popular here where would it be?

"Memphis is the home of Blues. The South is where the Blues originated. They've been brought up on it. Its a way of life to them," he concluded.

Nation-wide, soul music would not have the same popular appeal as it does in Columbus-Fort Benning Community, was also the opinion of Johnny Michaels.

"Locally the move may be to soul but nationally the trend is toward folk rock and pop-country, personified by Glen Campbell, the hottest thing on the record market today," said Michaels.

"Bubble gum music" was hitting big a couple months back, according to Michaels, but it is slowly declining.

"The kids loved it at first and the young adults could take it for a while, in small doses, but I think we have seen the peak — it's going downhill now but there will always be a juvenile market because there will always be juveniles," he said

First Players Selected For 'The Fantasticks'

The director for the upcoming Fort Benning Playhouse production of "The Fantasticks, J. Michael Calitri, began selecting his cast and production staff this week from among the estimated 15 people volunteered their talents.

"I'm very pleased so far with the response we have had, but we need quite a few more people for non-singing acting roles, musicians and production staff," said Calitri.

He plans to hold rehearsals four times a week at times most convenient to the participants, but feels, with the exception of the lead players and some of the musicians, everyone will not have to be present at every rehearsal.

"We expect to get additional support from the rest of the Special Services in obtaining some of the musicians and back-up talent," said Calitri.

The production of the play requires building an extension of the existing stage which will jut out into the audience. The addition will enable the audience to surround the stage and actors on three sides instead of simply being in front.

"It makes for a much more intimate theater production," explained Calitri. "This is the way it was done when it opened off-Broadway at the Sullivan Street Theater in New York in 1960."

The plot of the musical, written by Tom Jones and Harvey Schmidt, is drawn around two fathers who are trying to get their son and daughter to marry each other by using reverse psychology.

Among those auditioning for parts in the musical were Roger Brown, of the 609th Trans. Co., and Curtis R. Russell, a German teacher in Columbus, for the roles of the fathers, and Stan Catlett, of the 6th Sta. Bn. for a part as the old Indian.

Candidates for the lead male role of El Gallo were James Fagan of Hq. Co. 197th Inf Bde., Harvey R. (Buddy) Nash, of Hq. Co. USA Rec Sta. and Robert Hanley of TSB.

Casting will continue through this Monday. Anyone desiring additional information should call the Playhouse at 545-2992.

Zeffirelli's 'Romeo' Excellent Treatment of Tragedy

A REVIEW
By Jerry Ganfield

Nearly four centuries ago a young English playwright set out to entertain his townspeople by writing a simple tragedy, "Romeo and Juliet." Today Shakespeare's play claims another honor—the academy award nomination for best picture of the year.

Taking the Bard's words as his script with only minute changes, Italian director Franco Zeffirelli has produced a truly outstanding film. Though Zeffirelli cannot take credit for the screenplay, his viewers will appreciate his treatment of the tragedy.

Starring as the ill-fated lovers are two relatively new performers, Leonard Whiting, 16, and Olivia Hussey, 14. Each lends the youthful ardor and innocence needed in Shakespeare's Juliet, who was not quite 14, and Romeo, who was only slightly older.

The audience will be won by Olivia's expressively dark eyes and intense feeling, although her plaintive cries reveal her youth. Leonard Whiting, who has had British roles in "Oliver!" as well as other Shakespearean dramas, conveys well the melancholia of a love-stricken young man. Both were chosen from more than 350 British aspirants for the lead roles.

When Juliet cries, "Wherefore art thou, Romeo?" there is no need to wait, for Romeo appears in all his exuberance. Their meeting and their extreme reluctance to part is tender, yet humorous.

Adding a more robust humor to the production is Juliet's nurse who becomes embroiled in a bawdy street scene when she is ridiculed by Romeo's relatives and servants. It is there that Shakespeare appealed to the Elizabethan audience in his earthy humor. Although today's viewer might have to listen closely to catch the significance of the lines, the humor will not be lost. The actress who portrays the nurse does so with a coarse impishness.

Although the Elizabethan language may discourage some, the actors speak it with such lucidity and intent that the meaning is rarely lost, and the Queen's English is faultless.

Zeffirelli, who received academy nomination as best director, filmed "Romeo and Juliet" in Pienza, Italy, where the Montagues and Capulets fought their bloody duels. Beautiful, although simple costuming also enhanced the production which was filmed in a muting technique similar to that in Zeffirelli's "Taming of the Shrew," starring Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton.

It is to the credit of the director, however, that the center of focus never leaves the young lovers and their plight to dwell on ceremony and ostentatiousness.

It is Shakespeare and the actors who bring the viewers emotion to the surface. It is a superior performance, and no wonder the play is a classic. One wonders why the young actors did not receive recognition from the academy, however.

The play ends with every viewer hoping the tragedy will be averted, although realizing the inevitable. Undoubtedly there will be tears shed at every performance —just avoid a ladies' matinee.

Peter Bogdanovich To Make 'Looters' For Cinema Center

Cinema Center Films has entered into a non-exclusive, multiple picture agreement with producer-director Peer Bogdanovich, it was announced by Jere Henshaw, Vice President in Charge of Production.

The first project will be John Reese's novel, "The Looters," published by Random House in May of 1968. The story deals with what happens to a small town and several of its people when its only bank is robbed of 350,000 dollars which turns out to be Mafia money. Plans call for the film to be shot entirely on locations in California later this summer.

Bogdanovich's first film was the independently-made "Targets", which was released by Paramount to wide critical acclaim. A former free-lance writer, he has authored books on John

Hot Line to the Hits

For 'Traffic' the Lights Changed

By Pete Lis

'Traffic' is a group that excels at everything except getting it together. This has been evident not only from the drawn out personnel and touring problems they have had, but also from their records, fantastically good in terms of real music, but frustratingly plagued with a severe case of what could only be called "loose-end-ism."

It is difficult to say that there is anything wrong with them or their two records, including their newest. Every criterion you could think up, they meet; material, performance, vocals, production, mixing, etc.

Their new record, simply titled TRAFFIC, is a large improvement on their previous LP, the U.S. version of which was butchered by United Artists. Having decided that they hold one of the potentially hottest acts in the rock and roll scene, UA has put more of a push behind the new LP, and allowed for a nice eight-page insert in the package, but when it gets back down to it, producer Jimmy Miller says in his liner notes to the LP, "and the UA man still thinks that some underground DJ should write the liner notes. It's all a shame!"

Not to degrade under DJ's, because many of them have their heads in the right places, but how could one know or say more than the man that produced the session, and helped and formed the work into what 'Traffic' is really in to and sound best as?

To the music, it's superb. Dave Mason is a top-notch rock and roll composer, and the Steve Winwood, Jim Capaldi team is equally good. Winwood and Capaldi have a perfect understanding of each other's groove, coming up with material on a level with the Young Rascals' best this, they have command of their instruments and voices and the capability of bringing it off in new and fresh ways.

"You Can All Join In" is one of those opening, get-in-the-groove numbers. It's a fun, very bouncy, and yet a hard Dave Mason number — good tune, good lyrics. Steve's guitar playing is not worth noting for a technical exercise, but he has a superb gift of phrasing and understanding notes. Mason, doing the childlike approach in a very heavy musical setting, is what gives this such power as a piece of material.

"Pearly Queen" is a Steve Winwood showcase. He does everything except the drums, including bass, lead, organ and vocals. Tremendously effective bridges, where the quick rhythms of the guitar, all of it ending up in the phantom middle speaker. Put your headsets into your groove.

Their ability as musicians with any material is phenomenal. One must't overlook Chris Wood who is always drifting around somewhere in the middle or the side with the best sax or flute to be heard in a contemporary rock and roll setting. Wood is the only musician in the contemporary scene who has added a little used instrument to a group effort in any consistently strong way.

The problem is that although they can each write material in the style of the others, they never form together a single performing and composing unit. Mason does his songs; Winwood does Windwood songs. The performance is Traffic; never the material.

What makes this especially sad is that we may never really hear or see what this combination is capable of. They'll break up first. What makes it so potentially good is that Mason is a gifted writer and Winwood demonstrates time and time again his agility and ability with material that is not R & B in its inception or orientation. He is more than fully capable of bringing all the technique, style and energy he has learned from soul music to original material in another vein.

Vagabond Virgin

"Dear Mr. Fantasy" was an example of that. All the new songs on this LP "40,000 Headmen" and "Pearly Queen," point in that direction. His piano and bass guitar on "Vagabond Virgin" are really in the groove, the way Wood's doodling on the flute and Mason's Spanish rock rhythm fit right in is the new combination at work. Capaldi keeps time like Al Jackson.

After Traffic returned from their recent one-week-end tour of the States, in their full four man version, Dave Mason left and the remaining three went right into the studios. Maybe this will be the answer.

Last month, Traffic announced the split. There are rumors currently flying around London that Steve Winwood is to record with ex-Cream guitarist Eric Clapton. Winwood himself mentioned that he wants to get away for awhile, bewildered by his own creations and open some new doors.

At any rate, another group has bitten the dust. Still though, not many people know or have heard of this group. Let us describe it as a unique experience, one that should be thoroughly enjoyed with a good set of earphones. The First LP was titled MR. FANTASY and the second, just TRAFFIC. Try them, they may tie together some lose ends. . .and the beat goes on. . .

East: P, P, P
Nobody Vulnerable
South Opens
West leads Heart Queen

PLAYING BOTH WAYS

South sits with a very powerful hand to North's complimentary holdings. South's opening bid of two spades is a routine force to game. North has a definite spade response but also a No Trump hand and nine points. No Trump is, however, out of the question. Declarer has said nothing but "spades is my suit, answer me in your best suit" to partner. North must reply in spades and although he know he has enough points to go to game, it is always best to let declarer in a two hid confirm the contract.

East-West have relatively poor hands but possibilities for a few tricks. West leads the protected heart queen which is the logical lead but it plays into South's hand insuring over tricks. South takes the queen with the Heart Ace and leads a small spade to the board's king, drawing West's singleton ten and East's duece. This sets up the board for the contract.

A small spade from the board drawer the queen from East and all the rest of N-S spades are good. South leads the diamond jack forcing West's protected queen. The nine of diamonds from the board is taken by South in his hand. The four of diamonds is trumped on the board and South tries the club finesse with the queen.

The finesse fails and places West in the lead with the heart jack. The jack is followed with the heart seven which South trumps and the rest of his hand, four spades and the club Ace, is good.

The contract was made with one over trick because South played into West's protected queens. By drawing trumps and setting up his diamonds South was able to make an over trick instead of losing four tricks to a good heart-diamond cross.

It is not always wise to play your tops and then let the opposition "take their tricks." Many times, they won't take them if the hand is played both defensively as well as offensively.

Synopsis

WEST SIDE STORY Stunning film version of top rank musical which won ten Academy Awards. "WEST SIDE STORY" is a musical drama built around the frictions and clashes of New York's juvenile gangs and the fabled West Side. Unlike other classics, WEST SIDE STORY grows younger!

THE BETRAYAL—World War I espionage drama about a young woman doctor who becomes a double agent. One of her objectives is to steal the secret formula for poison gas from the French. The realistic and nerve-wrecking scenes and situations will keep you on the edge of your seat.

KENNER—A drama of adventure, excitement and suspense taking place against the exotic backgrounds of Bombay, India. The story is of a bittersweet romance and a young boy's search for his father, in which Jim Brown plays the action filled title role, as the tough seafarer on an errand of vengeance.

IMPASSE—Story of the search for the gold supply that was secreted on Corregidor during World War II. Now a quarter century later, "fast buck" operators compete with each other in their efforts to retrieve the gold. There's plenty of action.

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

By Bill Kloeb

The Rod and Gun Club will sponsor demonstrations of fly and bait casting by Ann Strobel, international women's fly and bait casting champion, in Briant Wells Field House at 4:30 p.m. March 7 and at 10 a.m. March 8. Miss Strobel will conduct a teaching clinic after each demonstration.

The demonstrations, free and open to the public, will include two films on fishing techniques.

Dates for the Georgia State Field Archery Championships, which will be hosted by the Chattahoochee Archery Council of the Rod and Gun Club, have been announced by Bill Guinn, council president. The pre-state shoot will be June 21 and June 22. The State championship will be held July 19 and July 20.

Guinn and Gene Stalcup went to Athens, Ga., this month to attend a meeting of the Georgia Bowhunters Association. According to Guinn, the primary subjects discussed were the constitution and by-laws. It was decided to make only minor changes at this time.

The name of the organization will be changed from "Georgia Bowhunters Association" to "Georgia Bowhunters and Archery Association." This change was made to appeal to all classes of archery enthusiasts.

ANN STROBEL

The annual dues, which include membership in the GBAA and the National Field Archery Association, will be increased from $8 to $10. An additional $3 will be charged for an additional member of the family with a maximum of $15 per family.

An associate membership will be offered for an annual fee of $2 per person. Associate members will not be authorized to participate in GBAA sanctioned shoots.

The association established the position of GBAA publicity officer, who will be a member of the executive committee. Bill Katter of LaGrange, Ga., was elected to the position. He will publish and distribute an official GBAA periodical called "Long Drawers."

Bill Arnold was forced to resign as president because of a job transfer to Alabama. Larry Cameron was elected to fill the unexpired term.

The Rod and Gun Club Board of Governors is constantly striving to improve facilities and activities available to the membership. In the past two years, four skeet ranges and one trap range have been constructed. The Chattahoochee Archery Council has also been organized. One archery known-distance range and two field-firing ranges have been constructed. Two more field ranges will be completed prior to the Georgia State Field Championships in July.

More boats have been located on reservation ponds and signs have been erected to direct would-be fishermen to the ponds. Facilities at Sportsman's Lodge and the Headquarters have been expanded and improved. These are just a few of the improvements, but representatives of major units on the board welcome suggestions for additional improvements from the membership. There have been several changes on the board over the last few months, and listed below are the representatives.

Also Capt. Gary Chittester (AMTU) 545-1152; Sgt. Maj. Winston S. Kelley (TSB) 545-5833; Sgt. Maj. Robert L. Henderson (CTC) 545-2603; Maj. Sgt. James D. Cupp (CTC) 545-4665; and SFC Henry B. Speech (TSB) 545-5012.

The others are SSgt. Otho N. Watts (197th Inf. Bde.) 544-2265; Thomas Brown (Civ. Pers.) 544-4703; John W. Gause (USAIC) 545-3301; and Norman J. McCollough (Civ. Pers.) 545-5812.

Seven members of the Fort Benning Rifles hit double figures as the post basketball team ran its record to 7-0 by defeating the Columbus College Junior Varsity 103-95 Monday night.

Frank Everett, playing his first game for the squad, led the attack with 19 points.

For the first six minutes of the contest, the Columbus College team held the lead, but its shooting went cold and the squad fell behind 21-15 before calling its first time out.

Their conference was to little avail, however; and when the college five called time again with less than three minutes left in the half, they were down, 43-31.

The Benning Rifles stretched their lead to 54-38 by the end of the half, largely on the strength of Peter Anderson's 15-point effort.

When play resumed, the pattern continued. With 16 minutes 22 seconds left in the contest, the Benning Rifles had widened their margin to 20 points, 85-45.

But the Rebels of Columbus College made the South rise again, and within a minute and thirty-six seconds had cut the Rifles' lead to 67-58.

The Rifles snapped out of the cold streak, but still lost ground during the next thirteen and a half minutes until they led by only one point, 94-93, with just over a minute remaining.

A couple of quick baskets reversed the trend, and the Benning quintet was still rebuilding its lead when the game ended.

Bill Whitlock gathered 13 points before fouling out midway through the second half. Travis Ragsdale split his scoring evenly between the halves, notching a 16 point total. Jim Rates hit 12 points, and Bernell Blunt and Charles Pruitt each contributed 11 in forging the win.

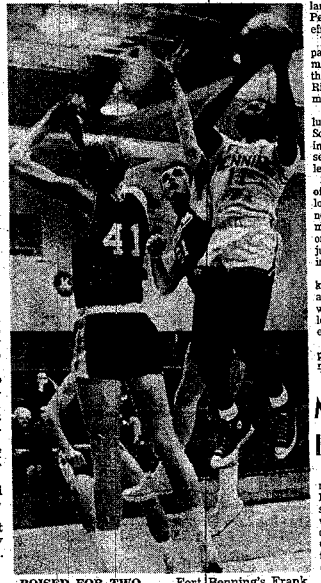
Center Bill Phillips led all scorers with 24 points in the losing cause. Four other Rebels hit double figures: Joe Whitley had 16, Tommy Lee had 15, and Chas Harper and Butch Stage each made 10.

The Benning Rifles are now scoring an average 94.0 points a game, while holding opponents to 75.6 points.

In Monday night's contest, the post team shot an even 41 per cent from the floor, dropping their field goal accuracy from 53.4 per cent to 49.8 per cent.

The Columbus College Rebels made 46.1 per cent of their shots from the field, while notching 64.1 per cent from the foul line.

The Benning Rifles have two games scheduled at Fort Gordon this weekend. Both games will be preliminary contests for Coach John Williams' squad before going to the Third Army basekthall tournament set for March 17-21 at Fort Bragg, N.C.



POISED FOR TWO . . . Fort Benning's Frank Everett is suspended in air before sinking two points in the Rifles' victory over Columbus College Junior Varsity, 103-95. Trying to block the shot are Bill Phillips (41) and John Barrett (51).

Alphas Battling Way Through USAIC Basketball Tournament

Company A, 1st Bn., runnerup in the Center Troop Command championship last week, took charge in the first week of play in the USAIC company level basketball tournament to lead the standings.

The Alphas are currently 2-0 in the double-elimination competition, after defeating the number one team from Hqs. Co., ATC, 70-60, last week, and then easily defeating Hq. Co., The Student Brigade, 56-29.

In the Alphas' first contest, Ralph Willard dominated all phases of the game, grabbing rebounds and scoring 34 points for the winners. The game was never really close, as the Alphas jumped to a 20 point, 39-19 halftime lead.

After the half, the two teams swapped baskets until the final buzzer, giving Company A an easy victory.

Pat Huetten had 12 points to aid the cause for the Alphas.

Only two men, Dan Allen with 16 points and Dave Stoltz with 13, reached double figures for the ATC team.

In a nearlier game, the Alphas again called on the talents of Ralph Willard in forming their attack.

Willard notched 23 points as Company A produced a 56-29 victory over The Student Brigade team. This time it was Bob Mason who gave the support, getting 10 points as the winners stretched their 26-10 halftime margin into the 27-point triumph.

In other games involving Center Troop Command teams, Company D, 818th Engr. Bn. dropped its first game, 73-62, to Hqs. Co. 5th Bn., 31st Inf., part of the 197th Infantry Brigade.

Tom Lewis had 22 for the losers; but three men, led by Veron Cheatum's 35 points, hit double figures for the victors, until [illegible] shooter with [illegible]

Marksmen Claim Honors In Army Reserve Match

Competition in the annual Third Army Reserve Rifle and Pistol Championship Matches ended this week with the pistol team of the 87th Maneuver Air Command and the rifle team of the 108th Division claiming top honors.

Approximately 170 citizen-soldiers from the seven-state Third Army area competed in the event held on the post pistol and McAndrews rifle ranges Feb. 22-23.

Awards to winning team members and to the top six individual shooters in both rifle and pistol were presented during a closing ceremony in Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall.

Maj. Gen. J. B. Russ, deputy commander, Reserve Forces, Third U. S. Army at Fort McPherson, Ga., presented the awards.

Members of the 87th Maneuver Area Command's winning pistol team fired a total score of 3,268 to take the title. Possible was 3,600 points.

The second place team in the pistol matches was the 120th Army Reserve Command with headquarters at Columbia, S. C., while the third place team was 81st Army Reserve Command with headquarters at Atlanta, Ga.

Members of the 120th Army Reserve Command rifle team scored 1,795 of a possible 2,000 points, out-firing teams from five other major Reserve commands.

The top individual competitors were Maj. Joseph E. Beck who won first place "old shooter" in rifle competition, and Sp5 Richard G. Dailey, who won the first place "new shooter" with rifle.

Army Experts Instruct Pan American Matches

By 2nd Lt. Johnathan C. Brown

EMPIRE RANGE, Canal Zone—One of the more highly successful aspects of the annual Pan American rifle match is the expert marksmanship instruction which the competitors receive each year.

It has been no different during the first week of the Tenth Pan American Invitational Military Rifle Match which began Feb. 11 at Empire Range, where 150 riflemen from 17 American nations began actual competition last week.

The key to the four days of advanced marksmanship training is the United States Army Marksmanship Training Unit from Fort Benning. This year the unit sent a detachment of 27 officers and noncommissioned officers who represent the best marksmen in the U. S. Army.

Their training objective, summarized by the officer-in-charge of the instructor group, Maj. Ivan W. Flowers Jr., is "to raise the standards of marksmanship and maintenance of small arms throughout the Latin American countries."

Members of the training unit conduct classes on advancement marksmanship, advise and discuss the problems of marksmanship with each team and offer expert ordnance support so that each weapon meets the rigid standards of competition.

M. Sgt. Fernando Muniz, a Spanish-speaking native of Puerto Rico, acts as head coach and translator for the unit.

It is his job to give classes in Spanish on sighting, aiming, trigger control, firing positions, effects of weather, range safety, use of the spotting telescope, and competitors' rifle maintenance.

Muniz also conducted the live-fire practical work in marksmanship during the latter part of the week.

"Training received in these annual matches," Muniz said, "has put many of these Latin American shooters among the world's top competitors."

In his seventh year as head instructor of the training unit to the Pan American matches, Muniz said he recognized about 90 per cent of the marksmen who have returned at least once or twice to the matches.

"These riflemen always look forward to the training week for practice and instruction as we can give specialized training that is not available back in their own countries," he said.

In addition, individual members of the training unit are assigned as advisers to each team. For instance, SFC James A. Nettles, formerly assigned to the USARSO Marksmanship Training Unit at Fort Kobbe, works with the Nicaraguan team.

Nettles said that his job was to offer technical and expert advice on all phases of marksmanship to the individuals on the Nicaraguan team during practice and competition.

Nettles and other team advisors who work with teams from the Spanish-speaking countries are aided by bilingual escort officers.

By far the busiest personnel in the training unit, however, are the armorers.

Working with the equipment and a van from the 659th Ordnance Company, they have the responsibility for inspecting each match weapon and correcting minor and major defects which would impede its competitive performance.

An M-1 rifle for each of the 150 official shooters means a lot of operating rods, rear sights, gas cylinder locks and trigger housings to be checked, repaired or replaced if necessary.

SFC Buckley T. Norris, advisor to the Paraguayan team, mentioned that many of the Latin American sharpshooters depend on this professional maintenance once a year during the Pan American matches because such expertise may not be available in their own country during the year.

The gunsmiths are SFC. Gerald J. Boutin and SFC Burl Branham.

"This is quite a profession," said Boutin, "You have to understand ballistics as well as mechanical engineering. It takes years and years to learn this business."

Sp4 Richard Gosselin, accompanying the equipment from the 659th vouched for their ability. He said that he learned more of the finer points of gunsmithing in one day with these armorers than he had learned in the last seven months.

"You really can't teach anyone everything about advanced marksmanship in two weeks," Lt. Col. Dales Red, MTU, observed, "but the seed is planted. Besides, several of these competitors return maybe two and three times to receive this training. Consequently they become quite proficient.

"In the search for new talent to fill out the teams," Red continued, "these marksmen have to teach what they learn here to other soldiers in their own countries and in some cases conduct their own rifle competition."

Lt. Col. Victor M. Calderon, Military Group advisor to Bolivia and escort for the Bolivian team here, said "This advanced marksmanship is something that you don't learn in one year, because there are so many factors involved. No individual could get all the fundamentals in one week.

"Down Country," Calderon continued, "we don't have the facilities or personnel for this kind of training. So the Pan American match is the only opportunity we have of the Military Group in that country, stated that the annual competition of the Pan American matches had accelerated interest in marksmanship and competition in several Latin American countries.

"If a soldier can shoot and teach others to shoot," Patton observed, "then we're in business."

INSERT TAB A . . . Last year's Columbus Derby winner, Rudy Taylor, explains the construction of a soap box racer to last year's runner-up Mark Moreloch and Glenn McCarthy.

Clinics Prepare Local Racers For Soap Box Derby July 13

The first of a series of Columbus Soap Box Derby building clinics was held at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Youth Activities Building on main post.

The purpose of the clinics, said Sgt. Sam Tyson, athletic director for the Youth Activities Center, is to show the boys how to build their soap box racers so they meet all of the qualifications for the Columbus area race July 13.

Other building clinics are scheduled at the Youth Activities Center March 11, March 25 and April 8. All building clinics will be held at 7 p.m.

This year marks the first time Fort Benning has been represented in the derby, Tyson said. At present, 18 contestants have registered, including 12 boys from Fort Benning.

Various Fort Benning units are sponsoring contestants by financing the construction of the boy's racers, he said. While the wheels, axles and steering gear may be purchased from Bill Heard Chevrolet in Columbus for approximately $22, the actual construction of the racing car usually costs another $3, he said.

Last week, 11 boys attended the showing of two movies on the derby, "Action in Akron," and "The Will to Win," at YAC on main post. Following the movies, the racing rules and regulations were explained. The program is scheduled to be presented again at the same place at 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

The local Soap Box Derby will be held at the Muscogee County Airport across from the Muscogee County Police Station. According to Sgt. Tyson, the small racers, which are limited to a total weight of 250 pounds including the driver, may reach 45 miles per hour on the 965-foot race course. Winner of the local contest will receive a $500 bond from Bill Heard Chevrolet.

A "shakedown" run for the racers will be held July 5, and on July 11 and 12, the Columbus Junior Chamber of Commerce, which is sponsoring the event, will inspect and impound the cars until race day.

Any boy between the ages of 11 and 15 may enter the derby. The National Soap Box Derby will be held in August at Akron, Ohio. Bill Heard Chevrolet will sponsor the trip to Akron for the winner and his parents and will also ship the racing car.

Provence, William Top Palm Beach Skeet Meet

The U. S. Army Skeet team over-powered its competitors during the 200 target International match and won the 12 gauge shoot-off in the Royal Palm Open Skeet Match in Palm Beach, Fla., last weekend.

Army team members won the top three places in the International match. Sgt. John William led the army sweep by breaking 195 birds. He was followed by his teammates SSgt. Phillip Provence with 190 birds and Maj. Gary Chittester with 189.

In the American Style shooting SSgt. Provence fired 100 straight birds in the 12 guage contest to end up in a nine-way shoot-off. Provence broke 70 more birds to win. Schmidt of the Marine Corps was second and Fisher from Pennsylvania was third.

Maj. Gary Chittester finished in a four-way tie in the 28 guage contest. He had to settle for fourth after the shoot-off, with Kelly from Jamaica finishing first and Stillwell from Pennsylvania placing second.

The 20 gauge match was won by Brunner of Illinois in a shoot-off with Busch of Florida.

High-Over-All champion went to Stillwell with 396 birds. Golla from Florida placed second with 394, and Army shooter Provence won third with 389.

In the 5-man 12 gauge team match the MTU team led by the shooting of SSG. Provence took second with 492 birds. The Massachusetts team was first with 498. MTU team members were, Provence 100, SFC William Wooten 99, Sp5 Anthony Rosetti 93, Sp4 James Tiner 98 and Sgt. John William 97.

MTU placed fourth in the 2-man 12 gauge contest with 198. Massachusetts won with a perfect 200. The team members were Lt. Col. Thomas Gillmore and SFC Wooten, both breaking 99 birds.

197th Bde. Opens Re-Up 'Branch'

The re-enlistment office of the 197th Infantry Brigade opened an auxiliary branch last week in Harmony Church to ease the task of interviewing brigade soldiers in the separated units there.

Located near the 197th Support Bn. headquarters on Hourglass Road, the second branch will serve members of the 1st Bn. (Mech), 58th Inf., 4th Bn., 69th Armor, 1st Bn., 211th Arty., Co. D, 91st Engr. and the Support Battalion.

M.Sgt. Harold J. Woodward of the brigade's re-enlistment program said that the six miles separating the major billeting areas of the brigade in Harmony Church and Kelley Hill necessitated the additional office. He added that the distance involved represented an unnecessary burden on men seeking re-enlistment information in the Harmony Church units and decreased the effectiveness of the brigade's re-up program.

Prior to opening of the new branch, the brigade's office on Kelley Hill had been averaging between 75 and 100 interviews daily in recent months. The high number of interviews, which reflects the rapid turnover rate of personnel in the brigade, was unmanageable in the single office, according to Woodward.

He said, "The rapid turnover rate in the brigade causes quite an administrative problem for our office but it also means an increased opportunity to present our re-enlistment message to a greater number of people. A large percentage of the men coming into the brigade are combat veterans from Vietnam and their experience is what the Army is looking for."

At present a plan is being considered at the office to take the re-enlistment program into the field where the majority of the brigade's soldiers perform their duties of supporting the Infantry School, according to Woodward.

The new branch in Harmony Church can be used for the purposes of in-processing and out-processing.

Canadian Educator Visits Here

New methods to improve the Canadian Combat Arms School were being sought by Colonel Donald E. Holmes, commandant, during a visit here Feb. 18-21.

Experts in tactics, mortars and officer candidates from the Canadian school accompanied him on the visit.

The Canadian officer has spent 28 years in his nation's service. He entered the Canadian officer-candidate school in Brockville, Ontario, after graduation from the University of Western Ontario in 1941.

After service in England France as a platoon commander, Col. Holmes returned to Canada in 1942 to become an instructor in the Battle Drill School in Vernon, B. C., the equivalent of the Ranger course here.

From 1944-46, the colonel was "loaned" to the British Army as a paratrooper, along with 700 other first lieutenants. He jumped on "D Day" in 1944 and in the British Army crossing of the Rhine in 1945.

After the war, Col. Holmes served as the chief instructor of the Canadian jump school at Rivers, Manitoba.

Stewart to Get Hunter Airfield

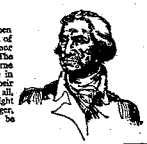
Department of the Army has announced a decision to permanently retain Hunter Army Airfield, formerly Hunter Air Force Base, Savannah, Georgia, as a subpost of Fort Stewart, Georgia.

It had been announced in November 1964, that Hunter AFB would be closed by July 1967, but this action was temporarily deferred to permit the Army to conduct increased rotary wing pilot training there. The field was transferred from the Air Force to the Army in April 1967, to provide required facilities for the expansion of Army flight training.

With the increase in Army helicopters to the present level of more than 11,000, there has been a corresponding increase in the requirement for training facilities for helicopter pilots.

Hunter Army Airfield has been selected for permanent retention as an Army training facility because of its excellent aviation facilities and the excellent aerial gunnery range at nearby Fort Stewart. Training there includes initial entry helicopter and fixed-wing training, and Huey Cobra transition and gunnery training.

George Washington



"We must give gratitude to men who have rescued us from the jaws of danger and brought us to the bonor of Independence and Peace . . . The Army, who have borne and forborne more than any other class of men in the United States, expending their health, and many of them their all, in an unrequited service of near eight years in the field, encountering hunger, cold and nakedness, must never be forgotten."

Prayer Breakfast Tradition Goes On

During his first days in office President Richard M. Nixon detected a common theme running through his mail; he also noted a common theme in all previous presidential inaugural addresses.

The theme in the President's mail said in a very simple way: "We are praying for you, Mr. President. We are praying for this country. We are praying for the leadership that this nation may be able to provide for this world."

And in all previous inaugural addresses each new President, in his own way, recognized the spiritual heritage of this nation and asked for the blessing of God on this country — in not only its affairs at home, but its affairs abroad.

President Nixon revealed these facts in remarks before dignitaries gathered for the 17th Annual Presidential Prayer Breakfast Jan. 30.

"I say to all of you joining us here today in this Presidential Prayer Breakfast," he said, "that in the many events that I will participate in, none will mean more to me, personally, none, I think, will mean more to the members of the Cabinet and to Congress than this occasion."

The event was broadcast live for the first time this year over the world-wide facilities of the Armed Forces Radio Service. In addition, the occasion was carried live in the United States to 60 military installations in 24 states by special audio circuits.

The Presidential Prayer Breakfast is sponsored by the Senate and House Prayer Groups. The purpose of the occasion, begun in 1952, is to bring together the leadership of the United States in recognition of the moral and spiritual values upon which the nation is founded.

Each year, soon after Congress convenes, men in leadership positions from various aspects of our national life meet for discussion and prayer on the occasion of the Presidential Prayer Breakfast.

The event normally is attended by the President, the Vice President, the Cabinet, members of the Senate and House of Representatives, the Supreme Court, Government officials, and other leaders from across the U. S.

In his remarks before the dignitaries, President Nixon said, "You have inspired us. You have given us a sense of the continuity of history which binds us together from the beginning to now. You have told us in a very simple and eloquent way that, great as the problems which now confront us, with faith, faith in Our Lord, faith in the ideals of our country, and also with a deep dedication to what our role is in this nation and the world, we are going to be able to make these next years great years for this nation and great years for the world.

"I believe that and it is to that end that we dedicate ourselves today. That objective transcends all partisan considerations. I am proud to stand here today in the presence of those who by your being here, indicate that you have not lost faith in this nation. You have not lost faith in the background that has sustained us.

"As a matter of fact," President Nixon continued, "we are entering a period when, sustained by that faith, we will be able to meet the challenge which is ours — a challenge which comes to very few people in the history of man. It is America's now. Whether we succeed or we fail will depend or determine whether peace and freedom survive on this world.

"We will meet the challenge. We will meet it because we are going to devote every hour of the day to seeing that we meet it properly. But we will meet it also because we will be sustained and inspired by the prayers of millions of people across this world. Those prayers do mean something. Through the medium of these words I want to thank the people of this world who are praying for us. We trust that we can be worthy of your prayers and worthy of your faith."

Short Story Contest Set

WASHINGTON (ANF) —Entries are now being accepted by the Armed Forces Writers League (AFWL) for their annual short story contest. Cash awards totaling $100 will be given to writers of the winning entries.

The annual competition is unique in that it is open only to amateurs. Sponsored in order to encourage beginners and other relatively untried writers, authors who have sold fiction to any major market or have been selling regularly to any minor markets, are specifically excluded.

Besides cash awards, writers will receive constructive criticism and an evaluation of each manuscript from three professional authors on the panel of judges. Such critiques frequently include selling tips. Many contestants of former years have had their stories published.

The contest is open to all AFWL members and other U. S. citizens who have filed for membership. Closing date is May 1, 1969. Entries must be submitted on the official League entry form obtainable together with additional contest details by writing to: Executive Director, Armed Forces Writers League, George Washington Station, Alexandria, Va. 22305.

Improved Jungle Boot Gets Check

Service tests of a new combat footgear are presently being conducted at the U.S. Army Infantry Board here.

The importance of proper foot protection for the combat Infantryman is paramount in the modern Army and cannot be over emphasized, said Col. Walter F. Johnston, president of the Board.

Test Board officials believe today's Infantryman, in fighting through the jungles of southeast Asia, has encountered many problems in foot protection which these tests are attempting to reconcile.

Commencing with 120 pairs of the new jungle combat boot, test officials at the Board have been putting them through their paces in two different test sites simultaneously. The testing is being performed by men with the Ranger Camp near Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., and with the Ranger Department's Patroling Committee at Fort Benning.

The new boot (tropical - combat, direct molded sole) is the standard 9½-inch jungle boot with uppers made of a nylon duck. The molded sole is spike resistant, having a rolled steel plate implanted within the layers of the sole. This protective device is a corrosion resistant steel strip extending from the ball of the foot to the heel.

In addition to this protection, the boot incorporates a one-inch wide cold-rolled carbon steel shank to conform to the arch as a support and further protection. The length of the shank and steel plate depends upon the size of the boot.

Besides protecting its wearer, the new boot affords a new approach to comfort. A removable, ventilated insole is offered the Infantryman, the new insole incorporating three piles of synthetic material called polypropylene adds comfort through cushioning and ventilation.

The test item is quite similar in appearance to the conventional jungle boot presently being used in Vietnam except for having a shorter steel shank which is engineered to reduce the breaking of the outsole; an ankle reinforcement tape, designed to give its wearer greater support and increased durability at this critical wear point; and ventilating holes, placed higher on the boot to afford more protection from incipient moisture.

Cadre of Fort Benning's Rangers are giving the new boot a thorough checking and should dispel any question of its combat mettle if it meets their demands, the colonel said.

Simultaneous with the service testing being accomplished at Fort Benning by the Infantry Board, similar tests are under way on the new footwear at the Tropic Test Center, Fort Clayton, Canal Zone.

The Infantry Board, a subordinate test activity of the U.S. Army Test and Evaluation Command, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Maryland, tests all equipment, clothing, vehicles, and weapons developed for use by the Infantry.

Americal Gets Reorganization

WASHINGTON (ANF)—The U.S. Army's Americal Division (23d Infantry Division) in Vietnam has been reorganized to standardize it along the same lines as the 1st, 4th, and 25th Infantry Divisions.

The Americal Division, which was activated in Vietnam on Sept. 25, 1967, is comprised of the 11th, 196th and the 198th Infantry Brigades which were deployed to Vietnam as separate brigades.

The reorganization reduces the combat service support elements of the division by approximately 750 spaces. These spaces will be redistributed to other units within the U.S. Army, Vietnam. The Headquarters and Headquarters Companies of these brigades are being retained in the division for continuation of their history and lineage.

Originally, the division was organized with three separate brigades, each with its own organic combat service support. With the continued buildup, including the deployment of the 101st Airborne Division (Airmobile), it was determined that the inherent flexibility of a standard Infantry division was sufficient and that a reorganization of the Americal Division, permitting redistribution of 750 spaces, was feasible.

There are still four separate brigades in Vietnam to provide for the unique flexibility of such units. They are the 199th Infantry Brigade, the 173d Airborne Brigade, the 3d Brigade of the 82nd Airborne Division and the 1st Brigade of the 5th Infantry Division (Mechanized).

Social Security Quiz

Q. I began getting social security checks in July, 1968. I earned $3600 before I stopped working full time and made only $120 a month from July on. Do I have to file a report of my earnings with social security?

A. Yes. A person who earned over $1680 in 1968 and got a social security check for any month in 1968 must file an annual report of his earnings with social security no later than April 15, 1969. This is required even if the yearly total is the same as was estimated earlier in the year. However, since you earned less than $140 a month from July through December 1968, you will still be entitled to the checks for those months.

Q. I have several doctor bills and I wish to file claim for payment from Medicare. How should I file my first claim?

A. Since you have never filed a claim before, it would be a good idea for the social security office to help you with your first claim. Bring all your itemized bills and your Medicare card. It is not necessary for the bills to be paid to file a claim.

Q. I applied for disabled widow's benefits. If my claim is approved, when will my payments start?

A. A disabled widow's benefits begins with the 7th month after the month in which she becomes disabled. However, the first month that any disabled widow's benefits could be paid was February 1968.

Q. My husband died in 1960. I was in an auto accident in 1962 and haven't been able to work since. Can social security help me?

A. If you are between age 50 and 60 and have a severe disability you should get in touch with us and file a claim to see if you can qualify as a disabled widow.

Q. Can a disabled widow get medicare benfits at age 61?

A. No. Medicare benefits are available only to those 65 or older.

Q. My mother was disabled at the time of my father's death in 1965. She depends on me for transportation and I am out of town during the day. How can she file a disabled widow's claim?

A. In addition to our 8:45 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday schedule we are open from 9 a.m. to 12 noon each Saturday. If your mother is between 50 and 60 years old we will be glad to assist her in filing for disabled widow's benefits.

Special Services Begins Volleyball Competition

By Ben Cunningham

The athletic arm of Special Services is often called the lineman of Army sports; without it there would be no team at all.

With the basketball season officially closed on a company level, emphasis is now being placed on the organization of volleyball competition which begins March 3. After company-level matches, units will send their representatives to the post tournament.

The Student Brigade Special Services is the coordinator of all athletic activities which take place in The Student Brigade and The Candidate Brigade. The branch is now headed by SFC Nelson Mize and SSgt. James Marsh.

All competition under the supervision of TSB Special Services is conducted on a company level. The program embraces football, softball, baseball, tennis, bowling, volleyball and sports for which there is a large demand. In addition to its gym the branch also maintains two softball fields.

At the end of each competitive season, special services picks teams to represent The Student Brigade in post playoffs. Post representation is the highest level of competition.

Flag Waving

Trooping the colors originated in the days when mercenaries were used. The men used their flag as a rallying point in battle and "trooping" the colors before a battle assured that recruits would recognize them.

ATTENTION!
PERSONNEL NEARING ETS AND RETIREES

If you have not decided on a "Civilian Career" and wish to TAKE FULL ADVANTAGE OF YOUR V.A. BENEFITS BEFORE LEAVING THE COLUMBUS AREA, we might be able to help you!

There is a serious shortage of Qualified Piano Tuners and Technicians throughout the United States and Canada. Although The Sims School is continually training and placing men and women in this highly specialized and financially rewarding field, the demand is far greater than can be met!

The School Placement Service is constantly receiving urgent requests from music merchants and piano dealers from all over the country! Choice employment locations are waiting for Certified Piano Tuners and Technicians! Positions may be available in YOUR OWN HOME AREA!

The Sims School is a RESIDENT SCHOOL, FULLY APPROVED by the U.S. Veterans Administration, including programs for Disabled Veterans. We offer no correspondence courses! The school is recognized and sanctioned by the Piano Technicians Guild (PTG), the International Organization of Licensed, Professional Technicians!

NO PREVIOUS MUSICAL EXPERIENCE IS NECESSARY!

WRITE TODAY FOR OUR DESCRIPTIVE BROCHURE AND COMPLETE INFORMATION.

CONTEST WINNERS · A NEW BRAIN TEASER QUIZ · FUN FOR THE WHOLE FAMILY

with Buck O'Brien

NEW YORK—"I keep getting letters from servicemen in Saigon and other far-away places asking me to send tapes of this program," said William B. Williams. "And the kicker is that they ask me to leave the commercials in!"

William B. conducts "The Make Believe Ballroom," a recorded music program of long standing and high rating heard over the independent radio station, WNEW.

Other broadcasters, here and across the nation, have been getting similar requests. It seems the writers feel they can allay that touch of homesickness if they hear a bit of chatter from their favorite disc jockeys, plus a few jingles singing the merits of Robert Hall clothes, Pepsi-Cola, Ultra-Brite and Bromo Seltzer.

Obviously radio ain't dead no matter how many

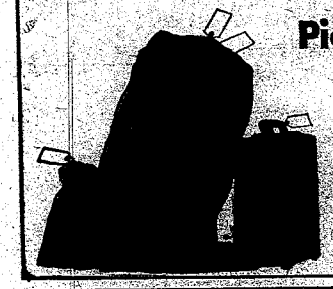
WHAT'S NEW?

The Cat Eye
locks in on the enemy.

Nothing that comes within its range escapes the deadly eye of this lightweight radar set AN/PPS-5. Designed for ground surveillance of the forward battle area, the AN/PPS-5 detects moving personnel and vehicles up to 5000 meters and 10,000 meters, respectively. Provides both audio and visual surveillance. Sectors of 30, 60, 90, or 120 degrees may be preset and scanned automatically. Because circuits in the AN/PPS-5 have been almost completely transistorized, substantial weight reduction has been accomplished. The Cat Eye can be air dropped or carried into combat zone by three men. And operated by a single soldier.

The design and portability of the Cat Eye make it ideal for employment with infantry, mechanized infantry, tank battalions and armored cavalry squadrons. Wherever the enemy may be found.



Pick your pleasure, overseas!

If you've been yearning to visit a certain area overseas, here's your chance to combine pleasure with business!

Oversea Area of Choice is a reenlistment option that makes it easy to select a particular oversea duty station. If you are a first termer, with at least eight months of active service behind you—and are qualified in an MOS for which an oversea requirement exists—this great opportunity is open to you.

If you are otherwise qualified—and the idea of foreign travel for you and your family appeals to you—get in touch with your Career Counselor. Chances are, he'll have just the ticket you've been looking for!

Your future, your decision...stay Army.

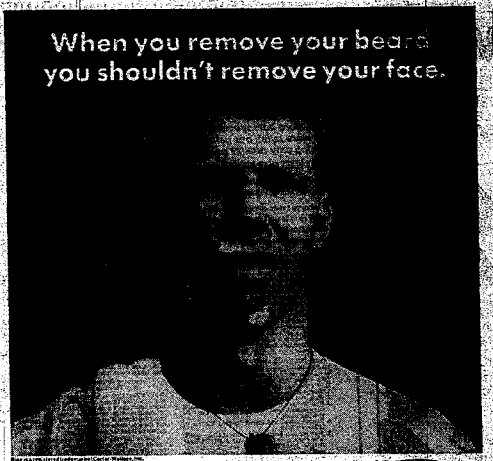
When you remove your beard you shouldn't remove your face.



Rise is a registered trademark of Carter-Wallace, Inc.

Today's super-duper razor blades are meant to cut whiskers. They can also do a job on the skin underneath the whiskers.

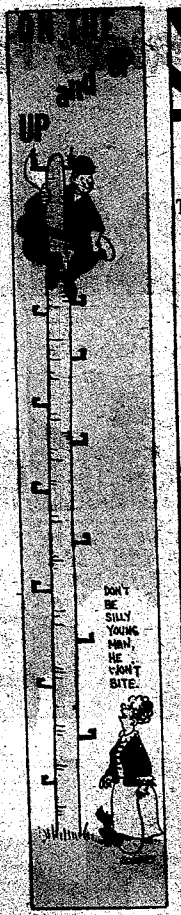
To help keep you from butchering yourself—this is the reason for Rise.® And why we put a thin lubricating film into it that gets between your blade and your skin.

Put Rise on your face before you shave, and maybe you won't have to put toilet paper on your face after it. Save Face.

THE GAME OF THE SEVEN GOOFS

These two cartoons have at least seven subtle differences. To see how good your eyesight is, check with the answers printed upside down.

Solution: (1) The ring on the stick to the left is at a different angle. (2) The ring around the base of the big tree is smaller. (3) The line over the back of the fallen skier is longer. (4) The line of the slope, on top in middle, has been raised. (5) There's a line coming from bottom of the big pine tree on the left. (6) The peak of the cape, on the snow, is different. (7) The snow covers more of the right foot of the man with the wood.



That bright young Marine,
George E. Porgie,
At kissing the girls had an orgy.
They'd run and they'd cry,
"What brass!
What a guy!"
"But of course.
I use Brasso",
winked George E.

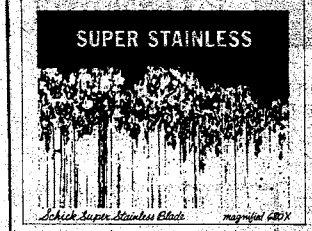
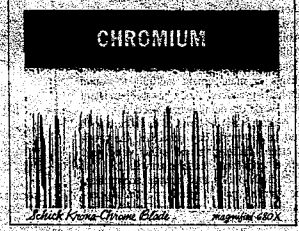
Schick chromium out-shaves, outlasts any super stainless

(even our own)



Super stainless is not complete protection against corrosion. This, for instance, is a corroded section of a plastic-coated Schick super stainless edge after five shaves, magnified 680 times. It's rough, pitted, corroded.



This is a section of the new plastic-coated Krona-Chrome chromium edge after five shaves, magnified 680 times. As you can see, chromium more effectively resists blade breakdown due to corrosion.

Only Schick Krona-Chrome has the chromium edge.

people sit glued in front of TV screens. In fact with the proliferation of portable transistors, car radios and loudspeaker systems in the supermarkets, there are millions more sets in action than there were in the so-called glory days of radio when The Lone Ranger was every kid's hero.

Speaking of that Masked Man and his great horse, Silver and his pal, Tonto, they are again riding the radio range. Charles Michelson, Inc. reports that 283 stations have signed up for regular broadcasts of the Ranger, The Green Hornet, The Shadow and other old-time heroes.

Kids who have grown up with video find it hard to imagine that at one time families spent whole evenings in the living room sitting in front of a console that emitted talk, music and sound effects but NO PICTURES.

A greybeard has supplied us with some oddities of that age:

Bob Hope, a giant success on stage, screen, TV and overseas bases, almost failed in radio. His program got off to a stuttering start, but Bob hung in there and eventually became a giant in that medium, too.

Another oddity: In 1938 Fortune magazine listed the results of a survey in which 5000 interviews produced a favorite (radio) personality listing. Jack Benny headed the list with a rating 10.7, Charlie McCarthy was tenth with 3.0, followed by Franklin Delano Roosevelt, star of "Fireside Chat," at 2.7. And Edgar Bergen was 14th at 1.3!

Later, there was a transition period. The tiny screen was making an impact on our habits, but fewer than half the American homes were as yet equipped with TV sets. To try to satisfy everybody, the networks invented the "simulcast." Some programs were aired on both radio and video.

One of these was "You Bet Your Life," a game show starring Groucho Marx. This one wasn't strictly "simul" —the radio show came on the air an evening before the TV version. After hearing the former, you could visit your favorite barroom the next night, watch Groucho, and win some free drinks.

"I bet that girl gets the next answer right," you'd say, and it was a sure thing because you already knew. Sneaky? Dishonest? Downright crooked? Well, yes, but a thirsty man hath no conscience.

OCS Reaches Milestone Saturday

By 2nd Lt. Wade Roop

The largest officer candidate review in Fort Benning history will take place Saturday as more than 1,000 Infantry officer candidates pay tribute to their predecessors.

The occasion is the graduation of the 100,000th second lieutenant from the school, which began producing Infantry officers in July 1941.

The review will be held on York Field beginning at 11 a.m. The public has been invited to attend.

The review will consist of 12 companies of officer candidates from the 5th, 6th, and 9th Student Battalions of The Candidate Brigade. Represented in the review will be men in phases of the OCS program from senior status to beginning junior candidates.

Graduation ceremonies will begin at 9:30 a.m. in Marshall Auditorium when candidates of 54th Company receive their gold bars.

Lt. Gen. Donald V. Bennett, Commander of VII Corps, United States Army in Europe, will present the graduation address to the new officers.

Among the young men to receive their gold bars will be 21-year-old Peter A. Bennett, son of the speaker.

Special guests invited to the ceremony include eight members of the first graduating class Sept. 27, 1941. Col. William J. Higgins, operations officer of the Infantry School, is the only first class graduate presently stationed at Fort Benning.

Other members of the first class invited are Col. D. L. Benton Jr., Fort McPherson, Ga.; Col. Howard C. Blizzard, Presidio of San Francisco, Calif.; Col. Howard E. Hamilton and Col. Edward N. Hathaway, Eighth U. S. Army in Korea; Col. Leo J. Nielsen Jr., Fort Meade, Md.; Lt. Col. Gilbert G. Holmes, Selective Service System, Lansing,

75th Infantry Assumes 'Ranger' Designation

The term "long range reconnaissance patrol" or LRP for short, is being dropped from Army termitology.

The historic 75th Infantry, an LRP regiment which was recently reactivated, will drop that parenthetical designation. Now the 75th Infantry is "Ranger," and will be a part of the Ranger Department at Fort Benning.

The 75h Infantry trades its origin to Merrill's Marauders of World War II, famed for their daring exploits in the China-Burma-India campaign, and thereby comes honestly by its "Ranger" designation."

"Ranger" was the name given to the companies of American colonists enrolled under the command of Robert Rogers to fight Indians in the French and Indian War of the 1760's.

Now the Rangers will return to their early historical role, that of gathering enemy intelligence, as the current major assignment of long range patrol units.

Col. Higgins Remembers

Experimental Class Found Formula

The effects of 26 years on the Infantry Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning have not changed the basic structure of the program, according to a colonel who graduated with the first class.

Col. William J. Higgins, Operations Officer of the Infantry School, will take part in ceremonies to recognize the 100,000th OCS graduate here Saturday.

"Though my course was shorter, some 13 weeks rather than 26, it contained the same framework of essential requirements to insure its graduates' being both tactically and technically proficient," Col. Higgins said of his class.

Speaking recently to an OCS graduation, Col. Higgins said, "We both graduated in time of national stress and world turmoil, in my case a short two months before Pearl Harbor and in yours at a time when our whole national fiber is being tested in the struggle in Vietnam."

In reflecting on his earlier OCS days, Col. Higgins said, "My class served as the test tube operation in which the pattern and program of instruction for the many OCS classes to follow was developed.

"This testing period was proved sound, for it formed the basis of instruction and source of commission for some 65,000 OCS graduates in World War II and some 7,000 during the Korean War.

"The same guiding principles established and developed by Gen. George C. Marshall here at Fort Benning in 1941 are still evident in the program today," Col. Higgins said.

Playing a major role in development of OCS at Fort Benning was Col. Richard R. Coursey, now retired, of Vidalia, Ga.

Materiel Command Liaison Office Gets Ideas From Battle Veterans

A new approach is being used here to speed the process which puts modern weapons, equipment and clothing into the hands of the Infantry soldier.

The program, under the direction of the Infantry research and development liaison office of the U. S. Army Materiel Command, is designed to glean information and ideas from the men who know first hand the requirements of soldiers operating anywhere in the world.

Staffed by Col. Robert H. Robinson and M.Sgt. Cliston A. Howard, the liaison office is working directly with men in all grades in the Infantry School, Army Infantry Board, the Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency, and Human Research Unit No. 4, agencies located here.

In addition, the colonel and the sergeant are interviewing combat veterans of the Vietnam war who may have information that will help in either developing, improving or producing the items the soldier needs to do his job.

Col. Robinson said he and the sergeant are approaching their task with "an open mind" as they search for ways to give the American soldier "the best no matter where he is."

Anything developed by the Army Materiel Command is of interest to the pair, he said. All information they collect, from ideas for change to outright innovations for something new, is studied and passed directly to the top levels of command or to the appropriate agency within AMC.

Currently, the two are traveling to various parts of the nation where they learn firsthand in laboratories and shops just what is presently being developed for the fighting man.

The liaison office was established on Dec. 31, 1968, and the two opened their office in space provided by the Infantry Board in mid-January.

Personal interviews with individual soldiers and officers will give them firsthand knowledge of the combat Infantryman's reaction to his combat equipment, including weapons, he said.

Col. Coursey, assistant commandant of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point prior to coming to Fort Benning in June 1941, was Director of Officer Candidates March 11, 1942 to Sept. 18, 1943.

"Development of the leader was the most important goal when OCS was begun at Fort Benning," Col. Coursey said. "Being a leader when the going gets rough is what counts," he added.

Col. Coursey, who has been invited to attend the graduation, said in a recent visit to Fort Benning he was "impressed with the great strides the program has taken in providing the best Infantry Officer possible."

Review

Mich.; and Lt. Col. John J. Carroll, White Sands Missile Range, N. Mex.

The guest speaker, Gen. Bennett is a former Superintendent of the U.S. Military Academy, West Point, N. Y. He held that post from June, 1966, to June, 1968, when he assumed command of VII Corps.

He was commissioned in artillery upon graduation from the Military Academy June 11, 1940.

He assumed command of the 82nd Armored Field Artillery Battalion in Sicily in November, 1943, and served with this unit in England during the landing in Normandy and throughout all the campaigns in Europe through the end of the war.

Gen. Bennett became Commander, I Corps (Group) Artillery in Korea in July 1962, and in September 1963 became director of Strategic Plans and Policy in the office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Military Operations. He was transferred to the Military Academy in January, 1966.

In addition to their son, Gen. and Mrs. Bennett have a daughter, Mary Lynn.

COMMAND and GENERAL SCHOOL

Can you give me some details on the proposal to give officers constructive credit in lieu of attendance at the U. S. Army Command and General Staff College?

It is no longer a proposal. The chief of Staff of the Army, has approved a program to grant selected officers constructive credit in lieu of attendance at Command and General Staff College. A board at the Department of the Army will select officers who will be awarded the credit.

BACKGROUND

While serving as Commander, U.S. Military Assistance Command, Vietnam, Gen. William C. Westmoreland detected a need for a program whereby selected officers could be granted constructive credit in lieu of attendance at USACGSC based on demonstrated knowledge and outstanding performance while serving in key staff and command positions under combat conditions in Vietnam.

On Aug. 19, 1968, Gen. Westmoreland directed that a study be conducted on this subject. The study, conducted by the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel and forwarded to the Chief of Staff in January 1969, showed that some officers have acquired knowledge and experience generally equal to that which could reasonably be expected of a graduate of the resident course at the college. Gen Westmoreland approved the study conclusions.

CRITIERIA FOR AWARD OF CONSTRUCTIVE CREDIT

After approving the study, Gen. Westmoreland established the following criteria which officers must meet to be considered for award of constructive credit:

a. Completion of 8 years commissioned service, and

b. Efficiency ratings competitive with Command and General Staff College selectees, and

c. Demonstrated proficiency during 6 months of combat duty in Vietnam in one or a combination of positions as:

(1) Commander of a brigade, or

(2) Commander of a divisional artillery, or

(3) Commander of an armored cavalry regiment, or

(4) Commander of a group, or

(5) Commander of a higher unit, or

(6) Service as chief of a principal general or special staff section of a:

(a) Division, or

(b) Logistical command, or

(c) In a comparable position on a higher level staff, or

(d) Senior advisor to Vietnamese division or higher commanders, or

(e) Senior province advisors

Officers are not required to submit applications under this program. Such action is unnecessary because records of all officers in the grades of major and lieutenant colonel who are not graduates of the Command and General Staff College and who qualify under the criteria will be considered by the DA selection board for award of constructive credit.

Officers who are granted constructive credit will not be programmed to attend the Command and General Staff College. Constructive credit may be declined in writing by an officer who prefers to attend the USACGSC. However, selection to receive constructive credit does not imply that an officer will be selected to attend the college if he declines the credit.

The credit granted an officer under this program will be given the same consideration as satisfactory completion of the resident course at Fort Leavenworth during effect on local

Department of Defense helps eliminate police shortage

Due to an initial shortage of policemen and the ever increasing growth, in size and population, of our major cities there is still a critical need for law enforcement personnel throughout the country.

In an effort to help relieve this shortage the Department of Defense has instituted a continuing program of assisting civilian police agencies in bringing their forces up to strength. Under it, servicemen who receive a firm employment or training offer from a legally constituted City, County, State, or Federal Government law enforcement agency can be released up to 90 days earlier than their scheduled separation dates.

Under this program officials of police agencies may interview and examine prospective candidates at military installations, but servicemen also are encouraged to make direct arrangements with any qualified police agency of their choice.

The program is open to those assigned in the continental United States. However, anyone who is assigned overseas and is interested in becoming a police officer can contact any police agency for employment details but he cannot apply for early release until he has completed his obligated overseas tour.

If you are interested in serving on a particular force such as the one in your hometown, you should write to the police agency where you are seeking employment, requesting additional information. Those interested in working for a Federal law enforcement agency should contact their educational officer for additional information.

If you apply for employment as a police officer you can expect to be asked to complete a detailed application form, take a written examination, undergo a physical examination, and participate in a personal interview with police officials.

Your service will assist in this processing by providing physical examination and written test facilities.

Once you have received a firm offer of employment or notice of training, you should contact your personnel officer who will assist you in applying for early separation. However, you cannot apply earlier than 180 days before your scheduled date of separation.

Remember, you must make application for early release. And in order to do so you must have a firm offer of employment from an authorized police agency. Above all, make sure that you have been counseled concerning fraudulent separation, for a mistake now could follow you the rest of your life. (AFPS)

The S.S. HOPE brings health to millions of poor

Today a great white hospital ship sails the seas, bringing medical knowledge, good health and goodwill to millions of people on four continents. Her name is the S. S. Hope, and aboard are American doctors, nurses and technologists who give their time and talent to help others help themselves.

In ten short but successful years, HOPE has become a symbol of effective self-help programs. President Eisenhower has called the Project "the single most effective step in presenting America as a warm and good friend."

In each country the ship visits, local medical personnel are trained and patients treated. Vast reservoirs of friendship and understanding are built. Seeds of knowledge are planted to grow and flourish long after the ship has departed.

Training is conducted through actual hospital procedures, classroom lectures and discussions, motion pictures and film strips. Teaching is stressed, because this enables HOPE to have a more enduring effect on local health conditions than would attempts at widespread treatment. Local medical people are, in turn, able to teach others. HOPE's impact thus grows and spreads.

Although teaching has been the key objective, more than 100,000 patients have been treated; over 10,000 major operations have been performed; and more than 2 million have benefited through immunization, examination and other services.

It was in 1958 that Dr. William B. Walsh founded Project HOPE. "The vivid impressions of this past decade," says Dr. Walsh, "will remain with me the rest of my life."

"The look on the face of the gnarled old man who came back again and again to shake our hand because our operation had saved him from a life of blindness; the Peruvian Indian who walked 200 miles over the impossible terrain of the Andes to bring his 2-year-old son for "An American miracle'; the warm-hearted gratitude from heads of the country to the poor of the barrio."

The philosophy of HOPE is a fundamental one. Better health leads to the ability to produce; higher production leads to better living; better living leads to freedom and peace. To the countless in the developing nations who have sought and found healthier, happier and more productive lives, hope is indeed a white hospital ship.

Your contribution to HOPE through the ISA campaign offers direct participation in this effective international self-help program. When you give to HOPE you help build better health — for generations.

COURTEOUS . . . Mrs. Margaret Pevey of Columbus, Ga., received the "Green Cross for Safety" sticker, along with a letter from Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr. after being cited by the Military Police for safe and courteous driving. Mrs. Pevey also received a Savings Certificate from the National Bank of Fort Benning.

Mrs. Wright Honored At ATC Wives Brunch

The Army Training Center commander's wife, Mrs. Oscar E. Davis welcomed Mrs. John M. Wright Jr., wife of the post commanding general, as honored guest at the ATC officers wives brunch at the Supper Club.

Other special guests attending were Mrs. Gary Robbins, Miss Patricia Chandler, Mrs. William Brock, Mrs. Gary Uliano and Mrs. Ethel Young.

Colorful bath and kitchen linens and accessories formed the table arrangements that set the scene for a fashion show presented by Mrs. Willard Miller. Designer styles shown included an evening pants dress made from a rhinestone-spangled bedspread, and a matching evening coat and dress fashioned from a pink wool blanket and sheet. There were also many easy-to-sew leisure robes, jump suits with wrap-around skirts and beach toppers all made from color-splashed towels. Unusual, fun-type outfits were modeled too. They ranged from a gaucho ensemble complete with matador hat and high boots to a siamese pink and orange harem pants costume.

The models were Mrs. Ronald Moloney, Mrs. Dean Schutz, Mrs. Robert McMain, Mrs. Ephriam Goss, Mrs. Robert White and Mrs. Ted Lewis.

Newcomers welcomed to the Training Center were Mrs. Esteban Beruvides, Mrs. Donald Kell, Mrs. Kenneth Gebert, Mrs. Raymond Villalobos, Mrs. Kevin Kenney, Mrs. Reese Thomas, Mrs. James Cooper, Mrs. Johnny Trammell, Mrs. Peter Ransom, Mrs. Charles Dumrese, Mrs. Donald Couch, Mrs. Donnie Uzzle, Mrs. David Hollar, Mrs. William Collier and Mrs. Manuel Grandado.

Mrs. Wright was among those who received Training Center charms, the traditional farewell memento presented by Mrs. Davis. Others were Mrs. Frank Loeffler, Mrs. Jesse Fulfer, Mrs. Marvin Grissom, Mrs. Joseph Sellers, Mrs. Joy Copley, Mrs. William Scott and Mrs. Dennis Duffy.

IOAC Lunch

Military Wives Know What 'Diversity' Means

Few people know better about the diversity of a wardrobe, clothes for all occasions and clothes for all parts of the world, than the military wife.

This diversity was emphasized in the theme, "Fantastic Fashion Originals," during the final luncheon for wives of a group of student officers.

The ladies' husbands are members of Infantry Officer Advanced Course No. 1. The group gathered for the formal luncheon at the Supper Club of the Officers Club.

Each table in keeping with the theme was decorated with a runner made from maps. Small dolls, dressed in various travel outfits, were placed along the runners and miniature moving vans completed the effect.

Wives modeled fashion originals, humorous styles which included a travel out fit, moving clothes, shopper's special, walking-the dog-dress and several other creations.

Mrs. Herman C. Brown social chairman, was presented a silver chafing dish as a thank you and farewell gift and Mrs. Roger L. Pierce won the door prize, a silver coffee warmer. Twenty other door prizes were given, all furnished by local merchants.

Special guests included Mrs. Earl Acuff, Mrs. Lon D. Marlowe Jr., Mrs. G. E. Wear, Mrs. Myron E. Lee, Mrs. Wilbur J. Thiel, Mrs. Wendell O. Doody, and Mrs. Archimedes J. Pisano.

OWC Golfers To Hold Spring Coffee in Mar.

The opening spring coffee for the OWC Ladies Golf Group will be held on Tuesday, March 18, 9 a.m. at the Country Club. Those planning to attend are asked to sign the sheet on the bulletin board in the Golf Shop.

Mrs. Betty Bridgeford, chairman, has announced that the new slate of officers for the coming season will be presented at this meeting. Also, plans will be discussed for the spring golf tournament.

For further information, call Mrs. Mia Harris, 545-4817.

Milk Bar Has New Facilities

The Commissary Milk Bar, Bldg. 1206, Ingersol Street, has opened a second drive-in sales window for added customer convenience.

All customers will continue to enter the milk bar line from Yeager Ave. but will have a choice of using the east window or the new south window.

Another added convenience for the customer is an expansion of operating hours. The milk bar is now open from 9 a. m. to 7 p. m., Monday through Saturday, and from 9:30 a .m. to 7 p. m. on Sunday.

Training Center PWOC Tour Tuskegee Institute

The ATC Protestant Women of the Chapel made a day-long visit to the campus of Tuskegee Institute in Tuskegee, Ala.

The members departed from Sand Hill's Chapel No. 5 accompanied by the ATC Staff Chaplain (Lt. Col.) James Barnett and Chap. (Maj.) Leonard Miller.

Arriving at Tuskegee Institute, the members were met by the Tuskegee Chaplain, Andrew Johnson, who took them on a tour of the Institute.

Walking beneath towering elms planted in 1908, they were told that some of the buildings were constructed of hand made bricks long before the Institute received any federal funds.

One of the first sites visited was the Booker T. Washington monument that honors the Institute's founder with the following inscription:

"He lifted the veil of ignorance from his people and pointed the way to progress through education and industry."

Following a bus tour of the campus, the PWOC visited the George Washington Carver museum. It is authorized by the trustees of Tuskegee to house Dr. Carver's extensive collections of native plants and birds, as well as his products from peanuts, sweet potatoes, and clay.

Also accompanying the group was Mr. Oscar Williams, a Tuskegee graduate and adult education teacher.

STRICTLY SOUTHERN

"Have two and butter them while they're hot." These words are not altogether foreign to the typical "Old South" Southerner. I remember as a child my Aunt Mary's dining table with the large cut-glass bowls of fresh honey and homemade jams or jellies. There was always fresh country butter and biscuits steaming hot from the old wood stove. One of her specialities was Huckleberry Muffins.

Huckleberry Muffins

1 cup huckleberries*
2 cups flour
1 tablespoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup shortening
1 cup milk
1 egg, well beaten

Wash and drain berries and sprinkle with ½ teaspoon flour. Sift dry ingredients and cut in shortening. Add milk and beaten egg. Stir berries in quickly; don't mash them. Bake in hot greased muffin pans for 20 minutes in 350 F oven. Makes 12-15 muffins. Blueberries can be substituted.

Fried Country Ham With Red-Eye Gravy

Slice ham about ¼ inch thick, leaving fat attached. Cook ham over low heat in heavy frying pan until browned on both sides. Lightly sprinkles of sugar on each side before cooking intensifies the flavor. Pour off grease into small bowl when ham is removed from pan. Pour in about ¼ cup of cold water in the pan and allow it to boil up. Pour this into bowl with grease. To make "redder" gravy, before adding water, add 1 tablespoon of brewed coffee or ½ teaspoon sugar.

The main course was always accompanied by a wide variety of fresh garden vegetables and Corn Pudding was always a favorite.

Corn Pudding

1 tablespoon melted butter
1 tablespoon flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon sugar
1¼ cups milk
1 tablespoon onion-very fine
1 tablespoon chopped pimento
2 eggs, slightly beaten
2 cups corn, preferably fresh (frozen or canned may be used-if canned drain before using)

Combine melted butter, flour, salt, and sugar. Add milk slowly, stirring until smooth. Cook until thick or about 10 minutes, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Add onion, pimento, eggs and corn and mix well. Turn into greased baking dish. Set dish in pan of hot water and bake in 325 oven 1 hour or until set, and slightly brown on top.

Burnt-Sugar Cake

2 cups cake flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon soda
¾ teaspoon salt
½ cup butter
1 cup sugar
1 egg, slightly beaten
1 egg yolk, slightly beaten
1 cup cold water
1½ tablespoons burnt sugar syrup

Sift flour, baking powder, soda and salt together. Cream butter and add sugar gradually. Add egg and egg yolk and beat until smooth and light. Add water alternately with sifted dry ingredients. Add burnt-sugar syrup. (To make burnt-sugar syrup, heat ¼ cup sugar in heavy skillet. When melted, add ¼ cup hot water and stir until dissolved. Cool.) Pour into two 9-inch layer-cake pans and bake in 350 F. oven for 30-35 minutes.

Burnt-Sugar Frosting

2 egg whites
1½ cups sugar
Pinch of salt
1-3 cup water
2 teaspoons dark corn syrup
2 tablespoons burnt-sugar syrup
Pecan halves

With rotary beater, beat together in double boiler (over boiling water) egg whites, sugar, salt, water, and corn syrup. Beat about 10 minutes or until frosting thickens and holds its shape. Remove from over boiling water, add burnt-sugar syrup, and continue beating until stiff enough to spread. Decorate with pecan halves.

Ranger Wives Hear Address By Lt. Col. See

The ladies of the Infantry School Ranger Dept. met in the Supper Club of the Fort Benning Officers Club for a morning coffee.

The program was presented by Lt. Col. Herbert See, Army Community Service officer, and Mrs. Raymond Kampe, supervisor of volunteers.

A movie was shown to illustrate the talk by Col. See who described the services and programs available through ACS. After a question and answer period, Mrs. Kampe explained the volunteer program.

Farewell gifts were given by Mrs. Y. Y. Phillips to Mrs. Melvin Jones, Mrs. William Ross, Mrs. Ernest Ten Eyck and Mrs. Robert Sparks.

Welcomed to the department were Mrs. Alfred Lindseth, Mrs. Robert Arneson, Mrs. Stanley Shaneyfelt, Mrs. Marvin Herbaugh, Mrs. Lee Grimsley, Mrs. Jerry Lorenzini, Mrs. Kenneth Johnson, Mrs. Robert Schreer, Mrs. Carl Mercer, Mrs. Robert Miller, Mrs. Jacinto Olivaz, Mrs. Bryant Sneed, Mrs. Robert Walsh, Mrs. Bernard Gecowelto, Mrs. James Krsnak, Mrs. Thomas Rickerd and Mrs. Ray White.

River Police Beach Patrol Boats

By SFC Herb Nesmith

CHU LAI, Vietnam (AMERICAL 10) — "That's it," the MP said, as the boat slowly glided in to the beach. "Yeah, our last trip," agreed the infantryman, reaching back to turn off the powerful 85 hp outboard motor.

The River Rats had finished their jobs.

At both River North (the Truong Giang) and River South (the Song Tra Bong), the mouths of large rivers just north and south of Chi Lai, patrols of the Americal Division's 198th Infantry Brigade Military Police Platoon beached their boats for the last time.

"Kind of hate to leave it," Sgt. Donald Breasette, Greenfield, Ind., was saying at South. Up at North, SSgt. Wilbur H. Major, Miami, Fla., was saying, "I wish we could stay here."

But the MP's, with their infantry boat drivers, were getting out of the riverboat business.

The platoon had been checking the rivers since September 1967, when the brigade arrived in Vietnam. Now the job was being turned over to Marines.

"The river patrols were designed to deny the enemy access to inland waterways, and prevent him from transporting weapons, supplies and personnel for the Viet Cong," explained the operations sergeant, SFC Robert A. Wiles, Augusta, Ga.

The patrols operated 24 hours a day, stopping sampans, checking the Vietnamese aboard for proper identification and seaching for contraband.

It has been a dangerous job. Six MP's have been killed and 14 wounded. But Charlie still got the worst of it, suffering 24 confirmed VC deaths and 11 more possibles. The river patrols have a lot of firepower at their disposal. Each boat, and they always used two per patrol, had a mounted M-60 machinegun, an M-79 grenade launcher, two M-72 Light Anti-Tank Weapons, hand grenades and the crew members' individual M-16 rifles. They also had at their disposal Army artillery and 81 mm mortar support from Navy Swift Boats.

Even when Charlie was not trying to ambush them, the patrols kept continually busy. On a typical day they stopped and searched 41 boats, and checked out 184 people. In one three-month period they confiscated more than 3,000 pounds of rice, 1,000 pounds of salt, ponchos, poncho liners, cartons of C-rations, cigarettes and $1,380 MPC, on its way to the Viet Cong or into the black market.

The patrols ran in all kinds of weather, from intensely hot days to nights of cold wind-blown monsoon rains. Every day and night they were on the rivers, denying the VC one of the most important means of transportation in Vietnam.

They ran their patrols at irregular times, so that Charlie would not be able to establish a pattern for them, so that he would never know when or where the River Rats might appear.

"I've spent some nights on the rivers," SFC Wiles said, "and it gets real lonesome out there."

The boats themselves were 16-foot fiberglass "Boston Whalers", powered mainly by 85 and 80 hp outboard motors, making them the fastest craft on the rivers.

Now the crews have gone back to other jobs; the MP's have returned to LZ Bayonet, the infantry boat drivers have gone back to their companies, the Vietnamese National Policemen and Popular Forces members have again taken up their former duties.

"There's plenty for the MP's to do," said their platoon sergeant, SFC Claude T. Fox, Junction City, Kan. "We've still got our regular military police duties around the 198th Headquarters; we run road patrols, escort convoys, provide security for the LZ, operate the PW collection point, and other normal MP functions."

Elks Bring Soldier A February Christmas

Last Christmas, when everyone was receiving packages from the Red Cross and other organizations with all sorts of goodies in them, Spc4 Ronald F. Blage, Co. C, 26th Engr. Bn., was not so fortunate.

The company had run out of "goody bags" when it was his turn to receive one. Spc4 Gregory Homme, came to the rescue, however, and gave Blage a pack of cigarettes from his own package.

The engineer noticed that the pack had a slip of paper inside the cellophane wrapper indicating the gift was from the Passaic Valley, N. J. Elks Lodge. Blage felt that even though it was a small gift, a note of thanks was in order.

In early February, Blage received a reply to his note. The lodge was so warmed by his response that they sent him a letter and package weighing more than 12 pounds.

Among the assortment of good things inside was a 2 foot Danish sausage and a five-pound block of provolene cheese.

The lodge wrote, "We believe that this is the least we can do compared to what you are doing for us back in the States."

To Blage it was a complete surprise. As he put, "Just like Christmas in February."

Desk Soldiers Hold Surprise

VC 'Attack to Reunite Vietnam' Fails

Communist troops who suffered a disastrous defeat in their assault on the sprawling Long Binh U. S. Army complex last week were told this would be their "final attack to reunite Vietnam" and were promised rewards of C rations when they took the post.

North Vietnamese Army Private Tran Van Thiet, 19, who was wounded in the leg and captured, was relating the pre-assault promise. Tran now is a patient in a hospital at Long Binh.

Tran told interrogators that prior to the attack early Feb. 23, Political Commissar Tu Lanh, attached to the Third Battalion, 274th Viet Cong Regiment, called the men of his company together.

"He told us the attack would be easily successful," Tran said, "and after it was over we would be able to go home to North Vietnam. He told us this would be the final attack to reunite Vietnam.

"We were told that our attack would be easy because we would have powerful artillery support and because most of the American troops were desk soldiers who were not experienced fighters.

"He also said we would capture many C rations and the troops were very happy. Some brought along can openers."

Before the attack, Tran said, each soldier had been issued six packages of noodles and three liters of dried rice. Many of the 122 communist soldiers killed in the futile attack were carrying these rations.

The attack was crushed by Army helicopter gunships, Air Force tactical aircraft the 720th Military Police Battalion, elements of the 199th Light Infantry Brigade, the 11th Armored Cavalry, and the "desk soldiers."

Tran was surprised to learn that many of the American soldiers on the perimeter who bore the brunt of the onslaught from 2 a.m. until 7 a.m. were indeed desk soldiers. These included administrative personnel, cooks, mo-dispatchers, special services clerks, vehicle drivers, and other so-called "rear echelon" troops who were a part of the post's reaction force.

According to Tran, Long Binh would be captured and installations would be destroyed the following day. They planned to withdraw under concealment of smoke from the fuel dump, which they planned to ignite. This, said Tran, would give them protection from American bombers and helicopters.

Tran, an assistant squad leader, was drafted into the North Vietnamese Army in July, 1967, and arrived in South Vietnam in December of 1967. He said that the 274th Viet Cong regiment had received many North Vietnamese soldiers as replacements for VC soldiers lost in combat.

Flashlights Too Dim To Light Heavenly Way

LAI KHE, Vietnam (Div. 10) — There was no return address on the small package which arrived recently on the desk of Lt. Co. William W. Cole, commander of the 1st Aviation Battalion, 1st Infantry Division.

A letter inside explained why.

"Dear Sir," it began, "I have become a Christian and want to get all my past cleared of all the things I have done wrong."

The unsigned note explained that the contents "are not of much value but I feel enough to keep me out of Heaven. I am sorry that I ever did anything wrong and want everything cleared that I can get cleared."

The package contained two slightly used flashlights, apparently "borrowed" from an Army aircraft.

Runaway 'Trainee' Is Goat In Odyssey of Grass-Eating

By Pvt. Richard Stirlen

This story is about how to get the goat of a guardhouse sentinel. Suggested title: "How to Go AWOL Without Kidding Around."

"Lightning," the mascot for Company E, 6th Battalion of the 2nd Brigade, ATC, jumped the corral bars last Saturday morning and went on a wild grass-eating spree until 5:30 p.m. when she turned up on the parade field in the West Cuartel on Main Post, seven miles from her Harmony Church home.

After checking his special orders for goat instructions, a bewildered sentinel at the guard house reported the errant nanny to the Officer of the Day, who in turn called the Provost Marshal.

Spt Frank Gale of the 988th MP Company, who responded to a radio call, found the animal tied out on the lawn, bleating at passers by. Lightning, he reported, surrendered peaceably and passively submitted to routine booking procedures at the Post Animal Clinic.

"I was kind of floored, of course," said Spt Dennis Lapp, who was on duty at the Animal Clinic when the goat was brought in. Lightning was sentenced to a term of confinement at the animal shelter, but was later released into the custody of three airborne trainees of the 47th Company, The Student Brigade, who nicknamed her "Airborne Billy."

Although she refused comment on her new home, one must assume that things were fine until "Lightning" or "Airborne Billy" learned that five parachute jumps were required to remain in her airborne unit.

Deciding that discretion was certainly the better part of valor, the old goat is reported to have transferred back to her basic training duties.

Ranger Dept. Demonstrates Combat Skills

The Ranger Department of the Infantry School will present a demonstration of "Rangers in Action" at Victory Pond in the Harmony Church Area Thursday.

The demonstration, open to the public, will begin at 2:35 p.m. All spectators must be seated not later than 2:15 p.m.

Among the honored guests will be Lt. Gen. Paul Gygli, Chief of the General Staff, Swiss Army.

The 50-minute narrated demonstration will include history of the Ranger patrol with demonstration.

In one confidence test the student is required to climb a pole 45 feet high, walk 45 feet across a one-foot wide beam with a three-foot high obstacle in the center, grasp a rope, climb several feet out on the rope and drop into the water approximately 45 feet below.

In the other test the student is required to climb to a platform 75 feet high, slide down an inclined cable and drop from the cable when he is approximately 20 feet over the water.

Suggestion Program Reaches Yearly High

WASHINGTON (ANF)—The Department of the Army reports that during fiscal year 1968, measured benefits from adopted suggestions submitted by Army personnel, other military and civilians, amounted to approximately $70 million. This figure represents a new single year record in the program's 25-year history.

Since the program's inception in 1943, 468,077 suggestions have been adopted and more than $12 million paid out as compensation to the originators of accepted ideas.

Since it is the conviction of the Army suggestion program that no one knows a job as well as the man or woman who performs it, the Army believes that they are excellent sources of information on how to improve a particular procedure or operation.

The program defines a suggestion as an idea submitted in writing by one or more eligible persons, civilian or military, intended to accomplish a job faster and-or cheaper by simplifying or improving operations, tools, or organization.

The total money saved by the Army during the first year the suggestion is in use determines the amount of the cash award. The minimum compensation given is $15; the maximum, $25,000.

Both military and civilian personnel should submit written suggestions on DA Form 1045.

Sgt. Perdue Given Honor

SSgt. Sife Perdue, Co. D, was honored as Second Bde. Drill Sergeant of the Quarter in graduation ceremonies of the 8th En.

He received a $50 U. S. Savings Bond from W. M. Phillips, commander of American Legion Post 35. Col. (Ret.) Jake Riley presented the Association of the U. S. Army (AUSA) Trophy to Perdue.

SFC George W. Hartford was awarded his second Bronze Star with "V" by Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, commander of the Training Center. Gen. Davis also awarded the Bronze Star for meritorious service to Capt. Milton S. Madell, SFC Jack Tilley and SSgt. Charles Jolley.

Pvt. Millard M. Williams, Co. D, received the American Spirit Honor Medal, which is the highest award that can be given to a basic trainee. The medal is provided by the Citizens Committee for the Army, Navy and Air Force.

Individual trainees who excelled in each tested phase of basic combat training received their awards from the battalion commander, Lt. Col. Thomas A. Austin III.

SSgt. William C. Heard, Co. B, was selected Outstanding Drill Sergeant of the cycle.

New Letterman Hospital Makes 'Finest' Better

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif. (ANF) — The nation's newest and most modern military medical facility, Letterman General Hospital, was officially dedicated during recent ceremonies at the Presidio of San Francisco, Calif.

The first army general hospital to be build in 20 years, the 10-story structure features today's most modern concepts in hospital design. A team of 1,800 persons representing professional medical specialties and countless technical skills will carry out the hospital's three faceted mission — patient care, training and research.

Letterman traces its origin as a general hospital to December 1898, when Army general orders authorized construction of Army's first general hospital.

A year later, then 40-bed wards were constructed on a six-acre quadrangle. With the Spanish-American War at its height, soldiers suffering battle wounds and malaria arrived by the shipload from the Philippines even before construction was finished.

Building Destroyed

Trouble came to the hospital during the early 1900s. A fast-spreading fire destroyed one-third of the building in June 1901. Five years later, when the city of San Francisco was struck by the earthquake and fire of 1906, the hospital treated countless civilian casualties as well as other patients who had to be transferred from hospitals that were damaged or overcrowded.

A New Name

In 1911, the "U.S.A. General Hospital, Presidio" was renamed in memory of Maj. Jonathan Letterman, the Civil War surgeon who served as medical director of the Army of the Potomac.

A pioneer in medical evacuation techniques, Letterman is especially noted for bringing order into the movement of battle casualties by establishing an ambulance corps to move wounded to the rear of the battlefield.

Nation's Largest

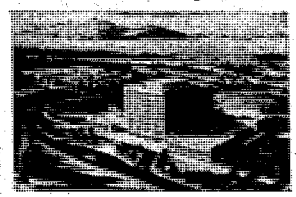
The hospital that bore his name continued to grow and prior to World War I was the largest military hospital in the country.

During the depression, the hospital treated many civilian Conservation Corps workers. This service, however had to be reduced abruptly during the fall of 1940 in order to meet the needs of expanding military forces.

War Readiness

Enormous growth in responsibility took place during each year of World War II. Eventually, 3,500 beds were operational.

The flow of casualties from the Pacific grew heavier and heavier. Letterman, a debarkation center, gave definitive care to relatively few patients; the majority were admitted, treated for less than 72 hours, and then evacuated by train to inland hospitals.



10-STORY LETTERMAN ARMY HOSPITAL

Letterman's teaching mission continued to increase as residency programs were formally established in 1947 for physicians and dentists studying to be specialists.

The hospital was expanded again to meet the demands of the Korean conflict.

Ground Broken

In December 1965, ground was broken for the new 10-story structure. Letterman served the Army on a wartime basis for the fifth time when casualties from Vietnam began arriving by helicopter from Travis Air Force Base, Calif. Upon arrival they were assured, as have been so many American soldiers before them, of receiving the "finest medical care possible."

Today the new Letterman makes "the finest" even better.

Founders Day Celebration Set

Graduates of the U. S. Military Academy at West Point will observe the 167th anniversary of their alma mater at a Founders Day dinner March 15 in the main ballroom of the Officers' Club here.

Speaker will be Col. Charles M. Simpson III, commander of the Fourth Regiment of the Corps of Cadets.

Graduates and former cadets of military academy and graduates of the Naval and Air Force academies have been invited to attend.

Eligible individuals who have not received invitations may receive one by contacting Lt. Col. James M. Morris Jr., Battalion and Brigade Operations Department, USAIS, Fort Benning.

Artillery Origins

The term "artillery" originally applied to all projectiles used in war but was later limited to certain types of heavy guns and the troops that serviced them.

Dog's Life Not Bad For 'Ugly' NCOC

By Sgt. Roger Rahl

The 7th Student Battalion has a permanent Non-Commissioned Officer Candidate.

Now starting his second year in the battalion, NCOC Mongoose says he wouldn't trade duty stations with anyone — not even for a new dog house and a 30-day ration of steak bones.

A graying black and white mongrel who came on the 76th Company scene last May, Mongoose will never win a canine beauty contest. He moves like he has a profile for every bone in his aged body, and he isn't even friendly.

At the moment Mongoose is spending most of his time with 72nd Company and SSgt Jesse Hatter. "He was recycled from 76th," explains 1st Sgt. Walter H. Young, "for missing five consecutive days of training." For practical purposes, he belongs to the entire battalion, and when one company is on Main Post at Infantry Hall or out on Ranger Week, he assigns himself to another and makes 200 new friends.

"Actually, he's an obnoxious sort," says Sgt. John Bellissimo. "He's not very friendly at all. And he's so military oriented that if you have on civvies, you're in a real hurt."

His mistrust of civilians has advantages and disadvantages. His barking once scared off some would-be thieves bent on emptying a barracks during a cycle break.

On another occasion, he created more trouble than he could handle by himself. A civilian-dressed paperboy got his leg between Mongoose's teeth and 76th Company Commander Capt. William Stolarcek determined that the dog had to go. While the company was in the field training, the MP's came to haul him away. He resisted arrest, and a sharp-shooting MP felled him with his tranquilizer gun.

"They tied him up and just dragged him off," says still - horrified Miss Garil Odom, 76th's clerk-typist. "I cried," she says. "He was sweet to me. He's so so ugly and old."

"We want Mongoose. . . we want our dog," chanted the demonstrating candidates at first formation the next day after they found out what happened. They continued the chant in the mess hall line and as they moved onto buses to go out to training.

Impressed with the candidates' loyalty, Capt. Stolarcek and 1st Sgt. Young were ready to relent when the Student First Sergeant approached them to plead the dog's case. "Capt. Stolarcek told us that if certain conditions were met, we could go get the dog," recalls S. Sgt. Walter Ruoff. "Well, we agreed to pay for his shots, build him a house, buy him a chain and feed him with scraps from the mess hall."

NCOC's Salvatore LaFata, Tom LaGrua and Merle Lickteig went to the dog pound to get him. "They told the man they came for the ugliest dog he had," says Miss Odom. "And he went straight for Mongoose."

Perhaps more caught up in the adventure of rescuing him than motivated by their love for him, the candidates went wild upon the dog's return. At a special formation Stolarcek promoted him VOCO (Verbal Order of the Commanding Officer) to Corporal. But it didn't take long for Mongoose to fall back into his laconic ways. "He went AWOL for five days and at another formation he got busted," says Young.

Mongoose hardly ever uses his dog house, a red, white and black shelter complete with shingles. The only time he showed any interest came when "Smokey" Salolarcek, the CO's dog, took over the house for a weekend visit. Mongoose learned that rank does indeed have its privileges — even at the canine level.

Class room Building 4485 is one of his favorite resting places. After attending initial orientation with at least a dozen previous classes, he once took it upon himself to sack out in the center aisle at a class opening. Not even the yell of "Attention" for Battalion Commander Lt. Col. Roddy L. Smith would stir him. So the colonel had to step over the sleeping PFC.

Hot Line to the Hits

Airplane Flies High on New LP

By Pete Lis

The new Jefferson Airplane LP is out. It is the Airplane's first live, in-concert recording, an album of amazing power.

The album represents a complete change from the orderly, controlled, cool flavor of the previously recorded Airplane. This new LP is the way the Jefferson Airplane feels when you are there and they are on stage-vibrating, thundering, bursting with sheer ecstacy-and for those of you who only know the band through studio recordings, BLESS ITS POINTED LITTLE HEAD is going to come as a complete revelation and surprise. This is also a fine recording by Al and Richie Schmitt, in that it couldn't more accurately convey the impact of the Airplane in its natural habitat, Fillmore East and Fillmore West. It was recorded this past November.

This recording raises at least two questions, (1) why hasn't the Airplane recorded live before? and (2) why doesn't every rock band?

Spencer Dryden, the Airplane's drummer, has remarked that the band has been trying this concept over the past two years, but they never arrived at such a successful end as they have on the new LP. They all really dig this album, because they feel it's the first record that sounds like them.

Out of ten cuts there's only one new, previously unrecorded Airplane composition, a programmatic piece that had its beginnings in a line by jazz composer Gil Evans, called "Bear Melt." The lyrics belong to Grace Slick and she sings them against a march-like accompaniment, which leads to everyone in the group doing an intertwined collective improvisation.

If you really have a technical head, you could say there's one and a half new Airplane songs, if you include "Turn Out The Lights," a brief hoe-down that developed spontaneously when Grace told the management of the Fillmore West how much groovier it would be if they'd please turn down the lights. She says so repeatedly, into the microphone, somebody tries a small riff behind her and then everybody is into his own bag of hotcha and crazy licks.

Answers 'No. 9'

BLESS ITS POINTED LITTLE HEAD starts with what sounds like the Airplane's answer to the Beatles' "Number 9;" a swirl of voices and ancient movie soundtrack music and a rock band tuning up. This is the one that caused all the trouble. The Airplane wanted to call it "King Kong," since that's what it is, the end of the old King Kong movie, as it was shown to the Fillmore East audience just prior to the Airplane's gig. So what sounds like a freak-out is really what went down: the end of King Kong, complete to the soundtrack - "It wasn't the airplane, it was beauty killed the beast!"

The problem with the title was twofold. The movie company was willing to allow use of the soundtrack (1:34) but unwilling to allow the band to use anything resembling the name King Kong. And RCA, didn't do much to help because of the political implications - of spelling Cong with a "c." In any event, the new title is "Clergy," and it leads directly to a super-charged "3-5 of a Mile."

Next is a storming "Somebody to Love," with Grace really belting. The final track on the first side features the guitar and blues singing (?) of Jorma Kaukonen, using Donovan's "Fat Angel" as an introduction to the traditional "Rock Me Baby."

"Other Side of This Life," the Fred Neil tune, leads the second side of the record, followed by "It's No Secret," from the early JEFFERSON AIRPLANE TAKES OFF days. It is beautiful for the sheer intensity of Grace's voice. "Plantistic Fantastic Lover" is the Airplane's brand of Motown in this version, an absolute stone groove, with the band positively "bad," Grace ferocious and biting off every syllable.

The record ends with "Turn Out The Lights" and "Bear Melt" (with its lyric about the man with the sledge hammer and keeping all the little animals alive).

GUSS

As for the cover, when the time is right-every few weeks - the Airplane calls in some people called GUSS (The Grand Ultimate Steward Service) to lay on an Imperial Feast, complete to racks of lamb, stuffed birds, vintage wines and, not infrequently, electric punch. The last one was a month and a half ago. The table extended 30 feet and was spread with a pressed white cloth, and 15 tall bottles of red wine evenly spaced. Jack Cassady, the Airplane's bassist, put his head down on the table to rest up for the feast and - CLICK - that was the album cover photo. It was something that happened.

The Airplane finished their last tour during the holidays and are now on vacation. The idea is that everyone in the band devote the time to pursue his interests beyond the Jefferson Airplane.

After working on Jean Luc Goddard's AMERICAN MOVIE, with the rest of the Airplane, Spencer Dryden is developing plans for what he calls, "THE rock film." Grace is working on a film script for herself. Jack has done a short tour with Country Joe and the Fish, and is working with David Crosby. Jorma has worked as a single at the Matrix and done some recording with other people. Marty is working at graphics and cartooning. Paul Kantner is writing songs.

"Something new has got to happen. There's got to be more to it than this, someplace else to go, something happening, and I really hope ours can be the band to do it!" Jefferson Airplane, February, 1969 ..... and the beat goes on.....

Aces and Spaces

Is it possible for a contract of five diamonds made with 27 points, the top four diamonds and three others as well as all four tops, to be set? It would normally be a safe bet to say no. In this case, unfortunately for North-South it is otherwise.

The bidding set North-South in what appeared to be a very good contract. Plenty of power on the board and a good response in South's hand should make the contract and possibly one over. It doesn't and never could because the hand was grossly misread and over-bid. The problem is "Aces and Spaces."

The contract is played by South with West leading the Jack of Clubs after observing what first appears to be an insurmountable board. North takes it on the board and his club suit is now dead.

Draw Trumps

South starts to draw trump with the deuce, East plays the three and the king takes it, leaving the nine trump for a vehicle to the board. However, West is void which places a big load of trump in East's Yarburough. This two point hand will now take at least two tricks. It would be heard to ask for much more. The Queen trump draws West's low spade, the board's five and East's four. One more round puts South on the board and voids his hand of trump.

On the board, with only one good trump and no way to finesse, South must let the opposition in. Now begins the contract's set as south leads the club 8.

East takes it with the singleton queen and leads back a low diamond forcing the board's Ace and placing South back in the same position as the trick previous. South stuffs the club but cannot lead the board's club as he holds no trump. Playing the tops would lose most of the board so he must let the opposition back in with a spade.

East trumps the spade and leads into south with a low heart. The heart 2 draws South's Queen and forces partner's King and North's Ace putting South back on the board. The Jack, six are both good but what now? North-South needs three tricks to make the contract. There is no possible way they can be made. The spade nine is trumped in East's hand, off one. The spade ace is N-S only good trick. The contract is set two by a ten point hold and a yarburough.

The answer lies in the gaping holes that North held and the fillers that West had. If the West-South hands had been reversed a slam would have been possible. No such luck. What can be done about "Aces and Spaces?" An honest answer says not too much. Remember that an Ace singleton or doubleton is excellent but four Aces (even three) with wide spreads down to the next card is an invtiation to set.

Officer Candidate Plays Lead Role in 'Pagliacci'

By 1st Lt. Fred Vollrath

OC Joey Evans, of 53rd Company, 5th Battalion, TCB, will play "Canio," master of a troup of strolling players, in Leoncavallo's opera "Pagliacci," tomorrow at 8:15 p.m. at the Columbus Musuem of Arts and Crafts, at 1251 Wynnton Rd.

"The Operalogue is about a group of strolling players, travelling through little towns in Calabria, in southern Italy. They are enacting a slapstick comedy about a devoted husband who becomes enraged at his unfaithful wife," said Theodore Gargiulo, the music director for project operalogues. "It is a play within a play as the comedy becomes a real life tragedy."

Gargiulo will narrate the story and play excerpts from the score on the piano as the plot unwinds. He is currently the music director for Special Services at Fort Benning, and an organist at the Candidate Brigade Chapel.

"We were very fortunate to get Mr. Evans," said Gargiulo. "He graduated from North Texas State University in January of last year and was working on his Masters degree in voice when he was called into the Army."

Casa Manana

"He was a member of the resident professional Summer Music Theater company, "Casa Manana", and has performed in oratorio, concert and opera," continued Gargiulo. "He has also performed the music of Handel, Kodaly, Milhaund, Adler and others."

Appearing with Evans will be Mimi Child, of Enid, Oklahoma, and Paul Depaola, of the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York City.

"We are especially thankful to Maestro Kurt Adler, the Chorus Master of the Metropolitan Opera for making possible the appearance of Paul Depaola," said Mrs. William B. Hart, the chairman of the Women's Guild, who is sponsoring the program.

Tickets are available at the door for $1.00.

Red Reels

Three of the five nominees for the best foreign film Academy Award were produced in Communist countries. "The Boys of Paul Street" from Hungary, "The Fireman's Ball" from Czechoslovakia and "War and Peace" from the Soviet Union are the entries. France and Italy supplied the remaining two nominees with "Stolen Kisses" and "The Girl With The Pistol."

Service Clubs Today Get Different Kind of Soldier

By 1st Lt. Fred Vollrath

Today's soldier is much more independent minded than his counterpart of ten or fifteen years ago in the opinion of Corrinne L. Helland, the Post Service Club Director.

"The soldier who came to the service club ten or fifteen years ago waited for games to be organized before could participate in or engaged in card playing," observed Mrs. Helland. "We had some great double deck pinochle players in those days.

"Young soldiers don't play cards as much as they use to," she continued, "They are more interested in checkers, chess, or television."

Each week day 150 to 200 men take advantage of one of the five service clubs available on post. On weekends or holidays ten times that number make use of the club facilities.

The clubs provides records, stereoes, pool, ping-peng, and other forms of entertainment.

"One thing that hasn't failed to hold the interest of the men over the years is a show that features a pretty girl," said Mrs. Helland. "They're always popular."

Self improvement classes, musicals, spectator entertainment, and competition events are also popular.

"Learning how to play the guitar is the big thing now," she said "A couple of years ago though it was the amplified electric ones, now everybody wants to be a folk-singer" and play the regular kind."

The Special Service's entertainment sections plans to bring half a dozen groups to post during March tor the troops entertainment. They include country western, and calypso, bands, comedy acts and magic shows.

Atlanta Braves Begin Advance Ticket Sales

Single and season tickets for the Atlanta Braves home games this season went on sale this week throughout the Southeast.

The Braves open the 1969 season at home April 7th against the San Fracisco Giants at 8:05 p.m. in Atlanta Stadium. Ticket Director Austin Brown said schedules of all the home games are available at each ticket agency.

"We are nearing the 2,000 mark in our season tickets sales, and we have already done three-quarters of a million dollars in advance sales through our season ticket and mail order departments," Brown says.

"With our Do-it-yourself ticket order form, we have a plan to suit everybody," he added. "A fan can get this form just by calling or writing us. It lists all our home games and their starting times. The fan just checks the game or games he wants to see, encloses a check, and returns it to us. We mail his tickets right back to him. Tickets may be purchased at Gate G, Atlanta Stadium.

Columbus outlets for advance sales tickets include Delta Air Lines, Southern Airways, Western Union, and Davison's Department Stores.

Girl Scout Jamboree

The "First Annual Girl Scout Jamboree," will be held at the Main Post Service Club Friday, at 7 p.m.

The program will include a Scout Dog Demonstration, a concert given by the children's chorus from the Candidate Brigade Chapel, and the Burris family will entertain with songs and dances. Various games for participation by the Girl Scouts will follow.

A buffet will be served following the entertainment.

Pure Romance

Dickens Never Thought 'Oliver' Was Like This

A REVIEW

By Jerry Ganfield

In what must have been the worst mess hall of recorded history, the musical "Oliver!" begins with orphaned boys marching in step to receive a stingy portion of gruel. "Food, Glorious Food" the boys chorus. Leave it to an innocent Oliver Twist to ask for a second helping.

From this incident Director Sir Carol Reed has launched a film which has received 11 nominations for Academy Awards.

As Oliver, 9 year-old Mark Lester encounters the displeasure of Harry Secombe as Mr. Bumble and his equally rotund cohorts on the orphanage's board of directors. Cast off and sold to an undertaker for a mere three pounds sterling, Oliver escapes and journeys to London.

Here he encounters the Artful Dodger, played by Jack Wild, and joins a gang of pickpocketing street urchins. At 15, Jack Wild is one of the youngest actors to achieve nomination in a supporting role. He plays it with the intelligence and connivance of an old pro under city grime topped by a ridiculous top hat.

The man who really steals the show, however, is Ron Moody as Fagin, master mind for the thieves. Haunted by the threat of being caught by the police, Fagin is constantly torn between the prospect of a straight life and trying to place a little more towards retirement. In his "I'm Reviewing the Situation," he is absolutely hilarious. For his effective role, Moody has been nominated as the year's best actor.

In smaller parts as Nancy and Bill Sikes, Shani Wallis and Oliver Reed add contrasting elements. Through one of the musical's best songs, "He Needs Me," Nancy sings of her love for Bill in spite of his many faults. At first Miss Wallis seems too beautiful for her surroundings in the London slums, but later as she enters the upper class home to save Oliver, her shabbiness becomes apparent.

As Bill, Oliver Reed is evil personified, and the audience cannot but hate him as a character. Nothing stands in his way. He brutally kills Nancy when she tries to take Oliver from him. Even his faithful, bow-legged, mongrel dog—which should get a Canine Oscar—turns against him.

The police shoot Sikes attempting to escape across the rooftops in a height-defying scene which may make some people hind behind the theater seats.

The film boasts the largest sets ever made in England which range from whitewash - perfect townhouses to pig-wallow slums.

The biggest production number of the show is "Who Will Buy?" As Oliver gazes into the high class townhouse court, a street vendor calls "Who will buy my sweet red roses?" One by one other vendors join in calling their wares, and the scene climaxes with a brass band, reminding viewers of the parade of 76 trombones. Effective, but just a little stagey.

Dickens' literary fans might just as well forget a script which follows his book, "Oliver Twist." The movie credits state, the screenplay is freely adapted. Whereas Dickens dealt with the rampant injustice, poverty and vice of the 1830's, the film is pure romance—a different dish than originally handed Oliver Twist.

Photographic Design Show On Display at Craft Shop

An exhibit of photographic design is on display at Building No. 394, Craft Shop No. 1, Lauber and Ingersoll Streets until March 9. The exhibit, made available by the University of Georgia Center for Continuing Education and the Art Department, is sponsored by Special Services Crafts Branch. It consists of twenty-four examples of photographic design produced by students at the University. The display is free and open to the public from 1 p. m.-5 p. m. Saturday and Sunday and 1 p. m.-10 p. m. Tuesday thru Friday.

Prints selected for this exhibit emphasize the creative potential of photography and represent conscious efforts of the student to see his world selectively and sensitively and to use the photographic process to express his feeling in deliberate design rather than in casual snapshots.

Most pictures were taken with student-constructed pinhole cameras which allow the student to learn the basic principle of photography, how and why a camera works, with a camera he really knows.

Check Your Pockets: You Just Might Be Rich

By Paul Mangione

Reach into your pocket and pull out your change. A couple of dimes, a quarter, nickles and a few pennies, maybe a half-dollar all together, or maybe a few hundred dollars if you look closely.

The prospect of money being worth more than its face value may be a little strange, especially during these days when inflation makes those hard earned bucks shrink instead of grow. Nevertheless, check your coins closely. You may be rich and don't know it.

Numismatics

The hobby, and often the business, of coin collecting or "Numismatics" has become so big the world over in the last ten years that the federal government has had to restrict the amount of coinage a person holds over certain periods of time. Collectors and professional coin dealers have taken so many coins out of circulation that, along with the increase in vending machines, parking meters etc., a noticable coin shortage has developed.

Children, adults, bank tellers and business men have been purchasing little blue card-board books with neat little holes punched out for the coins. As more and more people fill these books less and less coins are on the market for general use.

The value of coins, beyond their face rating, is determined usually by three factors: date, condition and place of minting. At one time the Treasury Department had mints operating in Denver, San Francisco, New Orleans, Philadelphia and New York. Also, several states, particularly those where gold and silver were mined, minted coins and tokens for use within the state and by the various mining companies. This has been outlawed but the coins have become very rare and consequently very valuable.

Rare Gold

During the 1930's the Treasury called in all gold coins minted by the Department to bolster the gold reserve. Hundred of millions of dollars of coins were melted down and turned into gold bars. The few that remained out immediately became rare and collectors began to grab them up. When the restrictions on gold were lifted the coins came out into the open again, not as currency but as collector's items, worth many times their face value. Certain twenty dollar gold pieces or "double eagles" are worth thousands of dollars.

Not too many people have gold coins in their pockets or even possess some. There are other coins, far more common and still very valuable. Pennies, probably because they are in greatest supply, are the most popular item for coin collectors. The Lincoln Head in use today has been around in one form or another since 1909 when the first were struck in San Francisco.

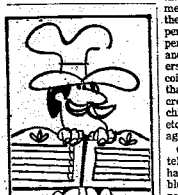
The man who designed the coin, Victor D. Brenner, originally placed his initials on the bottom of the reverse side. A few hundred thousand of these were printed and then a slight change was made. The initials were moved to the front, under the bust of Lincoln. The originals became collector's items for two reasons, they were the first of a series and the change of initials made them slightly different from the latter strikes. The 1909-S Lincoln penny today, in good condition is worth about 200 dollars. In un-circulated or mint condition, about 350 to 400 dollars. The price rises yearly.

As a rule, the San Francisco Mint, which closed in 1955, turned out fewer coins than the other primary mints at Philadelphia and Denver. Therefore the "S" mint marks makes them worth quite a bit more.

The mints stamp thousands of coins per day and during this process the metal die or image stamp, called a "striker," wears down. Usually it is replaced but sometimes a few thousand, or even a few dozen coins are stamped with parts missing. The 1937-D Buffalo nickel is a good example. The right rear leg is about three-quarters missing. This coin is worth a few hundred dollars.

Over Strike

The stamping machines also strike a little too quickly for the metal strip to move the newly struck coin out completely. The result is an "over strike." The most commonly known double strike is the 1955 penny which is worth about two hundred dollars, depending on condition.



No dancin'. No shootin'. Only eatin'. And what eatin.

Synopsis

CAMELOT — Legendary triangle between King Arthur (Richard Harris), Guenevere (Vanessa Redgrave) and Sir Lancelot brought to life in the enjoyable musical based on the Broadway hit! While King Arthur's famous love affair, his courtly wars, and eventual woes are familiar to everyone, this stunning musical is the love story of the ages...the most beautiful musical in years. . .as long as you live, you will remember CAMELOT!

KILLERS THREE — Set in be backwoods of North Carolina; it tells the story of a young bootleg driver and his wartime buddy who attempt a big robbery. They foul up the job and kill a Federal agent; then take to the road, pursued by the law.

NIGHT OF THE LIVING DEAD—The story has to do with an attack upon the living by ghouls triggered into action by the effects of atomic radiation upon their brains. The terrifying thing about these walking dead is that they devour any living person they encounter. If you have a queasy stomach—don't see NIGHT OF THE LIVING DEAD!

SAM WHISKEY—A western comedy featuring Burt Reynolds as a carefree adventurer who agrees to return stolen gold to a U.S. Mint and Angie Dickinson, who tries to save her family's honor by returning stolen gold bullion to the mint. Clint Walker and Ossie Davis help to thwart the caper, pulled off under the nose of the Mint Superintendent.

6 Veterans Watch Play At Marietta

A group of six Purple Heart winners traveled to Marietta, Ga., for a night of entertainment at the Barn Dinner Theatre Feb. 26.

The visit was part of the Cobb County Veterans Appreciation Program sponsored by the Cobb County Chamber of Commerce, the Atlanta USO and the theater.

The men, wounded in Vietnam and returned to the States for further medical attention, are recuperating at the Martin Army Hospital here.

After the drive from Fort Benning, the men were escorted to the Atlanta Naval Air Station where they were assigned quarters for the night and had a rest before going to the theater.

At the theater, the men were escorted to their tables by the female members of the cast of "Come Blow Your Horn."

Those who attended were PFC Charles Winslett, Sp4 Denton E. Devoe, PFC John Guy, PFC George Hilbert, PFC Douglas Depoister and Cpl. James C. Willis.

AUSA Solicits 1,000 Civilians

Members of the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the U.S. Army (AUSA) will "blitz" the two communities Tuesday in a campaign to seek 1,000 new civilian members.

Roy L. Smith, first vice president and chairman of the chapter's membership committee, said today the

From there, the AUSA "blitz" workers will move into the communities to contact as many of the civilian population as possible during the day.

"We want to reach a civilian membership total of 2500 in the chapter," Smith said. Attainment of the goal would mean an increase of 1000 civilian members.

A similar one-day campaign last year gained 240 new civilian members for the chapter, he said.

day-long canvass of the local population will begin with a kick-off breakfast at 7:30 a.m. at the Ralston Hotel in Columbus.

Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., post commander, will speak briefly on the AUSA and the Army to the 50 chapter members expected to attend the breakfast, Smith said.

'Private' Talks With Sergeants Encouraged at ATC

By Spt James Radford

"How many miles will we have to run tomorrow? And how many pushups will we have to do? When do we get our first pass? Why don't we get more time to eat?"

Few know less about the Army or have more questions than a basic combat trainee, and he always seems to have problems — financial, emotional and personal. But one person must have the answer to all these problems . . . his drill sergeant. Now the Army Training Center has gone one step further and provided him with a counseling room.

In each platoon's barracks, there is one cadre room set aside where the trainee may discuss problems with his drill sergeant in private. These rooms often contain a freshly brewed pot of coffee, a desk, chairs, lamps and carpet on the floor. An atmosphere of informality is maintained, giving the trainee a feeling of privacy, and the confidence that his problems can be solved right there in that room.

Many of the problems solve themselves just by getting them out into the open, and often a sympathetic ear is all that is required, the sergeants have learned. But Army life for a new trainee continues to pose problems that only an experienced Army veteran can answer.

Sometimes the drill sergeant can not give advice from his own knowledge. A financial problem may require legal assistance and referral to the Staff Judge Advocate section; perhaps a chaplain's guidance is needed on a family problem. In such cases, the drill sergeant remains in the background arranging for appointments for further counseling and seeing that the trainee gets proper assistance.

Commenting on the value of the counseling areas, SSgt. Charles W. Jolley of Co. E, 4th Bn., 2nd Bde., says, "I think it will help us a lot in counseling the young trainees. The atmosphere of the room itself, with easy chairs and curtains at the windows, puts the trainee in a more relaxed mood. He feels more at ease in discussing any problems he might have because he can do it in privacy. He's not looking around to see if his buddies are watching."

Though favorably impressed with the establishment of the counseling room, other drill sergeants, nevertheless, stressed their individual availability at all times. "We are ready to offer our help at any time, not only when we are in the company area and the room is convenient.

"Whether we're on the rifle range or bivouac site, the time is always right to offer the trainee help. If necessary we can wait until we go back to the company area, but we don't want the trainee to think that the only time he can see us is when he can see us in our 'office'."

This innovation to basic combat training is aimed at producing the best training possible. If a trainee's mind is on his training, not his problems, he will be able to serve the Army as a better trained and more capable soldier.

Lonely Boys Wish For 'Big Brothers'

By 1st Lt. Fred Volrath

There are an estimated 100 boys in the Fort Benning-Columbus community whose fathers are deceased or overseas and are in need of adult male friendship.

"While boys are growing up they all need someone special, be it a dad, older brother, teacher, or neighbor down the street, to identify with," said Capt. Patrick A. Traviss, a Social Work officer with the Army Community Service (ACS).

To answer the needs of these boys the ACS has begun a Big Brothers program modeled after a similar project undertaken at Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

"We have been putting out feelers for a couple of weeks now," explained Traviss. "The response we have received has convinced me a program like this is needed."

Traviss has been talking to men who are interested in the program, mothers who feel their boy needs some adult male guidance and companionship, and the boys themselves.

"I'm trying to match men and boys that have similar interests and temperaments," he said.

Mothers often have a difficult time in trying to be both mother and father to a boy, observed Traviss.

"They try, but most women have never learned to play catch, bait a fishing hook, hit fly balls, build a tree hut or do countless other things boys are interested in," he said.

Men who wish to participate in the program and mothers who feel their boys would benefit from such companionship should call 545-4043.

Benning Club Has 6 Winners

Knight Is Top Trophy Winner at Parachute Meet

SSgt. Bill Knight, who developed his parachuting proficiency as a member of the Fort Benning Sport Parachute Club, returned to outperform his former comrades and win the Second and Annual Interservice Sport Parachute Meet sponsored last weekend by the Benning Club.

Knight also outscored nine of his fellow members of the Golden Knights, the U. S. Army Parachute Team, who were also competing in the two-day meet at Fryar Field.

Knight was assigned to the Airborne Department at Fort Benning before a tour of duty last year in Vietnam and after which he won assignment to the Army's parachute team based at Fort Bragg, N. C.

Knight also won a trophy for first place in the style competition in addition to the overall trophy.

Presenting trophies to the 19 winners was Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., post commander, who also is a freefall parachutist.

Senior competitor in both age and rank was Col. Robert F. Bayard, commanding officer of the U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit at Fort Benning, who is president of the Fort Benning Sport Parachute Club.

Fort Benning club members won six of the 19 trophies offered in the meet. Trophy winners included Lt. Roy Rop, who took third place in advanced accuracy and SSgt. Mario Borkowski, first, Capt. John Mirus, second and Navy Parachutist Rigger First Class Michael Herman of the Albany Naval Air Station, third place in intermediate accuracy.

Other Benning winners were Air Force Airman First Class Charles Butler, who took first place in novice accuracy competition and Sp4 Robert Brugnoli, who won the Judges' Trophy for sportsmanship. Butler is assigned to the Air Force weather unit at Lawson Army Air Field.

A Golden Knights team won first place in the three-man team accuracy event. Team members were SSgt. Joe Pelter, SSgt. Stan Hicks and Sgt. Bill Galter.

Second place team winners were from Fort Stewart. Members were Sgt. Maj. Ed Rector, PFC Michael Barnes and Sp4 Kenneth Need.

A Citadel team placed third in the team competition. The members were Cadets K. R. Elias, M. E. Johnson and Joe Brown.

Other individual trophy winners were SSgt. Michael Howard and SSgt. Joe Pelter, second and third place overall; Sgt. Howard took first place in advanced accuracy, followed by Al Longerberger of the Patauxent River Naval Air Station in third place. Lt. William Agee, of the XVIII Airborne Corps, Fort Bragg, won second place in novice accuracy and Airman First Class Jay K. Denger of the Navy, from Hurlburt Field, Fla. placed third.

Freefall demonstrations were presented to spectators both days by members of the Golden Knights delegation, which was headed by Maj. Gerald Plummer. The exhibition jumps included formation freefall by a four-man group, and a reserve chute demonstration by Sgt. Knight after he collapsed his first chute and detached from it.

The meet attracted 60 entrants from various military posts and The Citadel Military College at Charleston, S. C. Judges were members of the U. S. Army Parachute Team, who were not among the 10-man competition team from Fort Bragg.

Military bases represented in the meet included Fort Rucker, Ala., Fort Stewart, Ga.; Camp Lejeune, N. C. and Quantico, Va. U. S. Marine bases; Patauxent River, Md., and Lakehurst, N. J. Naval Air Stations plus the Naval Air facility at Hurlburt Field, Fla.; Fort Campbell, Ky. and the XVIII Airborne Corps at Fort Bragg as well as the Army parachute team at Bragg.

Meet director was Capt. Jim Daniel of the host Fort Benning Club, who is a former member of the Golden Knights. Among his assistants was another former Golden Knights member SSgt. Joseph Barbarick, and Sgt. Johnie Abraham, both presently members of the Fort Benning Club.

FREEFALLING . . . Col. Robert F. Bayard, Fort Benning Sport Parachute Club president, begins his jump over Fryar Field in meet competition last week.

Doughboy 4 Tops Loop Tourney

Doughboy 4 closed out its 1969 basketball season with a 35-19 win in the finals of the Doughboy League double elimination tournament last Saturday.

Doughboy 4 gained the championship round with 33-10 and 23-13 victories over Doughboy 2 and 3. Earlier, Doughboy 4 completed the regular season's play with five victories and no losses for the league title.

Mark Harmsen was voted honorary team captain and inspirational player by his team mates. Jackie Surratt copped the scoring honors for the year with 64 points. The team was coached by Lt. Col. Richard Oltman and Lt. Ron Clouse, both of the Infantry Agency.

Rifle Team Sets 16 Records at Texas Gallery Event

The U. S. Army International Rifle Team set sixteen new records in topping all individual and team competition at the Texas State Gallery and Air Rifle Championships, Arlington, Tex.

MTU's Lt. John Writer, Olympic medalist, won the Grand Championship by outscoring his teammates with a record setting (Open and Service) 1597. Lt. William Rigby placed second with 1591, and Maj. Lones Wigger was third with 1590.

Lt. Writer established other records in winning the championship. He put together an open and service record in the Iron sight aggregate with a nearly perfect 799. Rigby was right behind Writer with 795. In winning the aggregate Writer fired a new open and service record of 200plus2 in the Iron sight standing match.

MSgt. William Krilling set a blazing new open and service records with 200 plus 110 additional 10's in the Iron sight sitting match and 200 plus 154 additional 10's in the Iron sight kneeling match.

All seven MTU marksmen—Writer, Wigger, Rigby, Krilling, Lt. Nels Nelson, Lt. Phillip Bahrman and Lt. Clifford Davis fired a perfect 200 in the Iron sight prone match. All seven shooters repreated their perfect 200 score in the Any sight prone match.

The Any sight aggregate was separated by a one-point spread. Wigger took top honors with 799, Writer followed with 798 and Bahrman was third with 797. Wigger also won the Any sight standing match with 199.

Six of the Army shooters fired perfect 200's in the Any sight sitting match and five 200's were scored in the Any sight kneeling match.

The Army team continued to dominant the matches by winning all the team matches. They set new records in the 2-man and 4-man Any sight team matches and the 4-man Iron sight team match.

The record 2-man Any sight team of Wigger and Writer fired a 799. The 4-man team record in the Any sight was won by Wigger, Writer, Krilling and Bahrman with 1592. The 4-man Iron sight team record of 1588 was fired by Wigger, Writer, Rigby and Krilling.

Teamed together, Wigger and Writer won the 2-man Iron sight team match with 795.

MTU Blue Team Wins Open Pistol Matches

The International Pistol Tournament and the Fort Benning Monthly Open Pistol match ended last weekend with the MTU Blue pistol team winning all team matches.

In the difficult International matches, SFC Herschel Anderson tied the Rapid fire half-course record of 299 in tallying a 593 Rapid fire aggregate win.

SSgt. James McNally was second with 589. Anderson also put together a 294 and a 290 for his 564 Free Pistol Championship.

SSgt. Bonnie Harmon won the Center Fire Championship with a 592. McNally was second with 590.

MTU Blue pistol team won all the international pistol team matches, concluding with a 2,269 in the Free pistol event, a 2353 in the Center fire and a 2328 in the Rapid fire match.

In the three-gun 2700 match the MTU shooters ran into a hard-holding marine competitor. Gunnery Sgt. Francis Higginson won the Grand Aggregate with 2668-128. He was followed by Army shooter Harmon with 2658-138 and SFC Robert Whitacre's 2651-152. Higginson also won the .22 caliber match with 893, the center fire match with 888 and the .45 caliber match with 887.

MTU's Harmon placed second in both the .22 caliber aggregate with 891 and the Center fire aggregate with 887.

SSgt. Marvin Black of the MTU placed second in the .45 with 885.

MTU Blue pistol team swept all team matches with 1178 in the .22, 1181 in the center fire, 1176 in the .45 and 1157 in the Service pistol team match.

Middle, Heavyweights Spar in OC Training

When officer candidates Paul E. Doyle and Thomas G. Demling square off in the Ranger hand-to-hand combat pit for practical exercise, they bring with them years of experience as amateur boxers.

Candidate Doyle, a 22-year-old graduate of Rutgers University, is the holder of several ring titles including the Boston Golden Gloves in 1962, the Navy Championship in 1964, and the New England Diamond Belt in 1967.

Doyle, who is six feet tall and weighs 195 pounds, was invited to compete in the U. S. Olympic heavyweight trials for a berth on the American [illegible] team.

Candidate Demling, a Notre Dame University graduate, boxed for both the Irish and for Innsbruck University in Austria. A light middleweight, he has fought for several amateur teams, including the Bengal Bouts, termed by "Sports Illustrated" as "one of the finest boxing organizations in the United States."

Because of their involvement in boxing, the two candidates said they hoped to stimulate interest in the sport and perhaps help initiate an official boxing program in OCS as a means of physical development and self-defense in-

Sights Marred, Rifles Drop 2

By Ken Sturzenacker

The Benning Rifles, with sights unzeroed, found the Southern hospitality good all over Fort Gordon except on the basketball court during their two games last weekend.

A pair of losses dropped the Rifles to an 8-2 record only two weeks before the Third Army tournament scheduled for March 17-21 at Fort Bragg, N. C.

After the trip to Fort Gordon, the Benning squad was never able to get loosened up enough to put together its usual fast-paced attack, and fell to the Ramblers 110-82 in Saturday's game.

Fighting the 19-point output of John Young and the 11 points notched by John Brennan during the first half, the Rifles lost ground and trailed at the break by 17 points, 54-37.

After the halftime, Young hit for another 15 and Brennan tallied 11 more to lead the pace.

For most of the second half, the Benning Rifles managed to match the scoring by the Ramblers, yet were still behind by 17 with three and a half minutes left in the game.

The closing moments also belonged to the Fort Gordon quintet, who stretched their 95-78 lead into the victory.

Bill Whitlock ran up 26 points for the Benning squad to lead the scoring. Jim Rates followed with 25 points, almost all coming on the end of jump shots taken from more than 20 feet out.

RECOVERS . . . Jim Rates is all alone on the rebound action last weekend at Fort Gordon. Other players are Gordon's Clyde Zachery (41) and Tom Chester (43), and Benning's Frank Briggs (22).

The home court advantage was apparent again Sunday, but the Rifles managed to slow the efforts of the Ramblers' big offensive guns, in the 98-78 contest.

Young, who had scored 34 points Saturday and as many as 43 against Fort Jackson earlier this season, was held to 17. Brennan managed only nine points.

Top scorer for either team in the action Sunday was Bill Whitlock, whose 33 points came from tapins to long jumpers.

Jim Rates again provided the crowd-pleasing moves, hitting most of his 16 points with jump shots outside the key.

Young was held to 10 points in the first half, due largely to play of the Rifles' 6-6 Bernell Blunt.

Young's size and exceptionally long reach had earned him a position with the Philadelphia 76'ers before he joined the Army.

Whitlock drew Brennan, a former Ignatius College star, who found his 6-7 height no advantage as he managed only nine points. In an earlier game with Fort McPherson, Brennan had scored 30 points, and was averaging over 20 per game.

The Ramblers found other ways and other people to score, however, and took a commanding 61-39 halftime lead.

After the half, it took the Ramblers over four and a half minutes to score a basket from the floor, and by that time, the Benning Rifles had narrowed the gap to 67-61.

Then Larry Womack and Curtis Cofield took up the scoring chores for the Ramblers and when Blunt fouled out with three and a half minutes left, the Ramblers led 90-70 to take the contest.

The two losses had a strong effect on the statistical profile of the team. Shooting percentage from the floor was 47.5 per cent, compared with a 49.8 per cent average in all previous contests.

Offensively, the Benning Rifles are now averaging 92.4 points a game, while allowing their opponents 80.2 points each contest. The average on offense is three points lower than it was last week, and the defensive average is seven points higher.

"As a team, rebounding ability has steadily improved during the season," Coach John Williams said. "Blunt, Whitlock and Briggs have shown the biggest improvement, to the point where they're beginning to take both position and rebounds away from bigger players."

Two games are scheduled for the Benning Rifles this weekend.

The Saturday night contest, set for 7 p. m., will be with Dobbins Air Force Base, Marietta, Ga. Sunday's game with the OCS All-Star squad, which includes several high school and college All-Americans, will begin at 2 p. m.

Racers Rev Engines, Test Skill In Slalom Competition Sunday

The revving sounds of high performance engines will be heard Sunday, at 1 p. m. when local sports car buffs hold a slalom at Columbus' Traffic Circle Shopping Center.

Sponsored by the Chavaga SCCA, the slalom will include more than 40 cars of all types in individually timed runs.

Although labeled a slow speed event, a slalom calls for the best of driver skill and car preparation to negotiate a plyon marked parking lot course.

Most drivers may keep their tachometer needle "sitting in the red" during their runs, but tight turns keep speeds low.

The course is laid out to give no advantage to any one type of car. Times of the winner of last month's slalom and the slowest class winner were less than five seconds a part.

Strictly an amateur event, the slalom is open to all cars capable of passing a strict safety inspection and prizes are awarded in several different classes.

Registration and safety inspection start at 11 a. m. with meetings and course work through at 12:45 p. m.

Entry fee is $3 for members of the Sports Car Club of America and $4 for non-members.

Spectators are admitted free.

ROD AND GUN CLUB NOTES

The Fort Benning Rod and Gun Club will sponsor demonstrations of fly and bait casting by Ann Strobel, international woman's fly and bait casting champion, in Briant Wells Field House at 4:30 p.m. today and at 10 a.m. tomorrow. Ann will conduct a teaching clinic after each demonstration.

The demonstrations, which are free and open to the public, will include two films on fishing techniques.

A holder of international casting records, Ann competes regularly in major tournaments, travels thousands of miles to expound the virtues of fishing and still finds time to do what she likes best—just fish.

Ann has made it to the top in an avocation —competitive casting—where men have dominated for years. Her successes underscore the little known fact that millions of women have taken to fishing as a pastime. More than 33 million persons fish in the United States annually, and it is estimated that 7.5 million of them are women.

Her string of honors stretches from Spa, Belgium, where she set a world record for fly accuracy in the 1964 International Casting Federation games, to Minnetonka, Minn., where she registered her first amateur win in that state's skish bait casting competition.

Ann's interest in fishing began when she moved from her native West Virginia to Minnesota and a girl friend invited her to join the Izaak Walton League, an unofficial international organization for fishermen.

Technique and accuracy with rod and reel came naturally and she began entering and winning one casting tournament after another.

In 1959, Ann turned professional and in that year won the 5-8 accuracy event in national competition with 98 out of 100 score.

For three consecutive years she dominated dry-fly and wet-fly competition, winning titles in 1962, 1963 and 1964. For four straight years she placed on the All America professional casting team.

In 1963 in Rotterdam, Netherlands, Ann won the international 5-8 and 3-8 accuracy titles and the All Accuracy title. As the lone gal among 106 men, she established the world record for fly accuracy at Spa the following year.

Her unhesitating approach to casting combined with her accuracy have earned her an international reputation. In national competition, Ann has cast her 10 targets in 90 seconds while competitors took up to eight minutes.

"It's great to compete and win but fishing's more fun and getting others interested is more rewarding — especially youngsters," Ann said. "They are so eager, so willing to learn."

One of her proudest moments came when two of her students, a set of 14-year-old twins from New Orleans, where Ann now makes her home, finished second in wet-fly and third in skish-fly in a national competition in Kansas City, Mo., after just 16 days of instruction.

Spring turkey seasons in Georgia this year begin as early as March 15 with various seasons open during March and April. The earliest season, March 15 through April 12, is in south Georgia.

Other open seasons for turkey include: March 24-April 16 for coastal and middle-Georgia counties which include Muscogee.

Hunt Club Holds Equestrian Show

Students and the instructors of the Fort Benning Hunt Club will be displaying their equestrian training in a show March 15 at 1 p.m.

Participation will be by Hunt Club students only with classes scheduled by experience and age. The instructors have determined the riders' qualification and the events in which each will enter.

Polar Bears Nab Cage Title

With a down-to-the-wire 66-61 score, the Polar Bears of Hq. Co., 5th Bn., 31st Inf., 197th Inf. Bde., triumphed over The Candidate Brigade's Hq. Co. in the final game of the post basketball championship last week.

With a string of 18 straight victories, the Polar Bears were not to be denied the victory, their third post championship in a row.

In a 32 point tie at the half, the Polar Bears came back to the floor to seesaw the score with Hq. Co.

"We stuck to the game plan of playing them man to man despite their height," said assistant coach Sp4 Jesse Moses. "Also we decided to come out and run them to death."

Sp4 Vernon Cheatum, whose 17 points was below his season average of 26, was the team's nucleous, constantly grabbing rebounds from the taller opponents.

Marking 27 points by the game's end, Sp4 Douglass Wonsey added strength to the victory.

At the end of the third period the score was 43-45 with Hq. Co. ahead. Neither team managed a decisive lead until with 51 seconds remaining, Sgt. Bill Smith, player-coach, sank two free throws to tip the game.

Flying Cross Goes To Sky Divers

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Eight members of the U.S. Army Parachute Team, the Golden Knights, have received the Distinguished Flying Cross for extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flight.

Gen. Bruce Palmer Jr., Army vice chief of staff, presented medals to Maj. Gerrell V. Plummer, commanding officer of the Golden Knights team; First Sgt. Robert F. McDermott, team first sergeant and SFC. Donald F. Strickland, assistant competition team leader. Other parachute team jumpers who received medals were Staff Sergeants Charles W. Aguilar and Joseph B. Pelter, and Sergeants Thomas W. Bennion, Robert C. Peterson and John R. Snyder.

The Golden Knights team, formed in September 1959 at Fort Bragg, N.C., provides the Army with a nucleus of highly skilled free-fall parachutists for participation in exhibitions, demonstrations, and national and international parachute competition.

The team is also charged with the responsibility of conducting research and developing the military aspects of free-fall parachuting.

During 1968, the team set 81 new world accuracy records at Zephyrhills, Fla., to raise to 87 the total they claim for the U.S. Since 1959, the team has made more than 70,000 free-fall jumps without one fatality.

Fast Repairs Help Tankers Score High

Swift maintenance played an important role towards the success of 4th Bn., 69th Armor, which has completed annual qualification exercises at Fort Stewart.

Lt. Col. Robert Luck, commander of the armored battalion, praised the speedy repairwork done on tanks at Fort Benning. "Damaged tank engine and transmission power packs were back with a minimum of lost time," he said.

The battalion's high scoring award went to the crew of SSgt. John J. Ault. Members of the crew were: Sp5 Barry E. Clark, driver; Sgt. Carson C. Starkey, gunner; and PFC John C. Quintana, loader.

They are assigned to the headquarters tank section of Co. A, which is commanded by Capt. Michael Tarby.

The high platoon scoring award went to the 3rd platoon, Co. C, commanded by Lt. Robert Rohrback.

The highest scoring company of the battalion was Co. C commanded by Capt. Juris Jauritis.

April's Draft Set at 33,000

The department of Defense has requested the Selective Service System to provide 33,000 inductees in April, 1969. Of the men called, 30,500 will be assigned to the Army and 2,500 to the Marine Corps.

The request supports currently approved force levels and will assure a timely flow of replacements for men completing their terms of service.

JAMES W. HICKEY, 100,000TH OCS GRAD, RECEIVES BARS
Generals Bennett, Wright Do The Honors

Says Gen. Bennett

'Officer Cannot Forget His Men'

By 2nd Lt. Wade Roop

Lt. Gen. Donald V. Bennett urged the newly commissioned second lieutenants of the 64th Company, TCB, to make the men they would lead as Infantry officers their primary concern.

Gen. Bennett, commander of VIII Corps, U. S. Army in Europe, was guest speaker Saturday at the officer candidate graduation which heralded the commissioning of the 100,000th Infantry officer candidate and which was marked by the largest OC review in post history.

As determined by the final tabulation of academic and leadership records, 2nd Lt. James W. Hickey of Port Jefferson Station, N. Y., was named the 100,000th graduate.

Also among the new lieutenants was 2nd Lt. Peter A. Bennett, son of the guest speaker.

During the graduation ceremony Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr. announced the placement of a plaque honoring the first 100,000 graduates in addition to those to come. It will be placed in the Infantry Hall of Fame.

Inscription on the plaque contains a portion of the speech delivered to the first graduating class in September, 1941, written by Gen. George C. Marshall, then the Army chief of staff.

Gen. Bennett said each man should be strongly aware of the need for professionalism, integrity, and aggressiveness. He pointed especially to the need for "abiding concern for the men for whom you are responsible.

"We must instill in you and give you the maturity and courage and judgment to know when to say 'yes, sir,' and when to say 'why, sir,'" he said. The "courage and the willingness to question things and get at the heart of any problem" was a challenge issued by the speaker to the class.

During the graduation ceremony Gen. Wright made three introductions. Col. William J. Higgins Jr., operations officer of the Infantry School, and Cal. Leo J. Neilsen, of

Microwave Oven Gets High Marks From Test Cook

"Delicious" was the description used by Sp5 Johnny O. Russell for food cooked by the Army's newest field oven.

Russell, a supervisory cook at the consolidated field mess operated by the 524th Personnel Services Co. and the 698th Light Maintenance Co., had eaten a dinner of baked chicken, scalloped potatoes and green beans which was cooked by the radar oven in less than one hour Tuesday.

The trailer-mounted oven was towed to the field mess on Red Arrow Road near 10th Armor Division Road behind a 2½-ton truck and arrived on the mess site at 3:30 p. m. From 4 until 5 p. m., the oven crew prepared, cooked and served a meal for 100 men, though only 90 showed up for chow, said Russell.

One and a half weeks of demonstrations of the developmental field kitchen, which works with microwaves, were scheduled for Fort Benning. The portable facility was to reach several areas of post.

Key name for the project is SPEED—for Subsistance Preparation by Electronic Diffusion. It is now under evaluation by Natic Laboratories.

The unit has an incinerator that may eliminate the need for kitchen police.

Airborne Gets Most

A total student input of 66,964 is expected by the Infantry School here during fiscal year 1970.

The projected figure is the anticipated enrollment in all leader and specialist courses conducted by the School, including 32,656 who will begin the three-week Airborne course.

Of the 30,833 men expected to start the leader classes, 1,436 are slated for the 36-week Infantry Officers Advanced Course, 2,511 for the eight-week Ranger Course, 5,820 for the 23-week Infantry Officer Candidate School and 12,550 for the non-commissioned officer candidate course of 12 weeks.

There are at least 17 different leader and specialist courses that will be conducted by the School.

In addition to airborne, the specialist classes include pathfinder, field radio mechanic, and track vehicle mechanic.

The Infantry Officer Basic course, a leader course of nine-weeks length, will enroll 4,510 men in 22 classes during the year.

In all, the total input will result in the start of 290 separate classes in the 17 areas of instruction.

The figures are based on current information and are subject to change, depending upon Army requirements for the various skills.

Auto Plates Offered By TSB

Over 5,000 license plates with the legend "Go Army" and decals stating "We Serve Proudly" are being distributed to all officer students and permanent party personnel of The Student Brigade's 2nd Battalion.

Lt. Col. W. J. Thiel, the battalion's commander officer, said that he feels that the display of the license plates and decals on automobiles will enhance the Army's image.

The license plates and decals, which will be distributed to any interested person who calls the 2nd Battalion Headquarters, were obtained from the Atlanta Recruiting Office through the cooperation of the Fort Benning's Reenlistment Section.

Cooks Like SPEED

Cooks can toss waste into it and at same time troops could be burning used expendable trays, flatware, cups and plates.

Other features of interest to cooks include a hot forced air convection oven, large grill, vertical cutter mixer and a two-compartment sink. As a design goal, Natic developers aim to provide enough refrigerated and nonrefrigerated space to store one day's rations for 200 men.

The kitchen is air-conditioned for summer use and heated for cold weather operations. A 60-Kilowatt gas turbine generator makes it independent of any external power source.

The kitchen is inclosed in a pod 12 feet long, seven feet wide and eight feet high—a size convenient for transport on a standard 2½ ton truck, and for lifting by Chinook or Skycrane helicopter or by military cargo aircraft.

When SPEED kitchens are adopted for army use, cooks will not have to take as much time preparing meals and troops will not have to wait as long for their food. The two large microwave ovens can cook one hundred pounds of roast beef in less than an hour in contrast to conventional cooking time of 3½ hours. A turkey roll can be cooked in 45 minutes while it takes three hours by conventional methods.

With meat products which usually take longer to cook than any other item on the menu, the ratio of SPEED time to conventional cooking time varies between one to three to one to six depending on the item being prepared. Using the SPEED kitchen, times required to prepare other items such as stews, casseroles, hash and vegetables are also reduced proportionately.

Radcliff New Deputy For TCB

Lt. Col. Edward C. Radcliff has assumed the position of deputy commander of the Candidate Brigade. He was formerly commander of the 6th Battalion ATC.

Radcliff replaces Lt. Col. Charles P. Cox, who has been assigned to Vietnam.

The 45-year-old Radcliff enlisted in 1943 and attained the rank of sergeant during World War II in France when he received a direct commission to second lieutenant.

BAGGAGE SHIPMENT

I AM A private first class with less than four years service. Can I ship my baggage at Army expense?

According to the Army Times you may be eligible to ship baggage at U.S. expense when making permanent changes of station or going on TDY. Personnel officials say such soldiers may be permitted to ship up to 200 pounds of personal belongings as unaccompanied baggage on a PCS or TDY move. Shipment of baggage by air is permited in some cases

BAD CONDUCT DISCHARGES

A FRIEND OF MINE is about to receive a bad conduct discharge. He claims it isn't that big a deal because it isn't very hard to have them reversed on appeals. What are the chances of a reversal?

Not very good. Since 1944 only, 8,990 have been changed to general or honorable, out of 62,511. This is only a 14.5 per cent reversal rate. Furthermore, in 1968 only 112 out of 1,191 were reversed — only 10 per cent.

This would seem to indicate getting bad conduct discharges changed is getting harder, not easier.

VETERANS BENEFITS

Are Veterans Benefits taxable?

The Veterans Administration says VA benfits are generally exempt and need not be reported as income on federal or state income tax returns. Except for interest earned on G.I. insurance policies are tax exempt.

Other major items of income that need not be reported include educational assistance allowances, pension and compensation payments, subsistence payments to vocational rehabilitation trainees and grants for special automobile and "wheelchair homes" for the severely disabled.

Also tax exempt are all benefits to surviving dependents of deceased veterans and compensation allowances for dependents of disabled veterans.

UNEMPLOYMENT BENEFITS

I will be getting out of the Army soon. I understand one of my rights as a Veteran is unemployment compensation. Do I have to return to my home state, that is the state I claim as my home of record to file?

The Bayonet checked out your problem with Mack Strickland, a claims manager with the Georgia Department of Labor. He informed us you may file a claim for unemployment compensation in any state of the union. But, you can only apply once.

You may not file in Georgia for instance, stay one month, and then move to New York and file again. Furthermore you will not begain to receive benefits until after your accrued leaves runs out.

ARMY EMERGENCY RELIEF

How many soldiers have received aid from the Army Emergency relief fund run by the Army Community Service?

During the month of January the Army Emergency Relief section of the ACS assisted 112 soldiers stationed here with $15,865.

DRILL SERGEANTS

Do Drill Sergeants receive any additional pay for the long hours they have to put in?

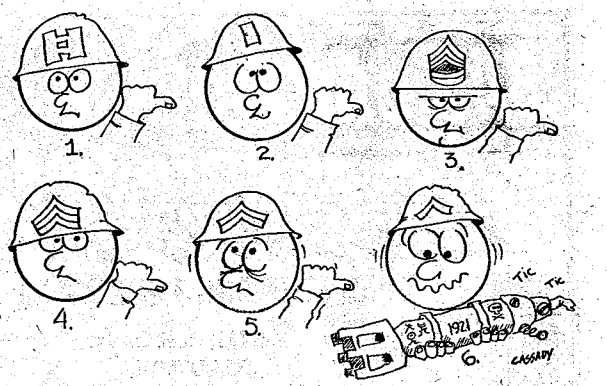
An award of Proficiency Pay (Superior Performance) at the rate of $30 per month has been authorized effective from Feb. 1 for individuals performing duty as drill sergeants at training centers.

It is contingent upon a minimum of six months demonstrated superior performance as verified by the unit commander. This program will be evaluated on a continuing basis.

VIETNAM VOLUNTEERS

How many men have volunteered for Vietnam since the war began?

The Army Personnel Letter dated January 15, 1968, says that since 1964 180,000 men have volunteered for duty in Vietnam.



E.O.D. (EXPLOSIVE ORDNANCE DISPOSAL) CHAIN OF COMMAND, OR, "PASSING THE BUCK"

Says Westmoreland

Reserves Key to 'One Army'

Army Chief of Staff General William C. Westmoreland believes the original concept of national defense has gone the way of the old horse cavalry—"and understandably so," he said.

Speaking at the Army section luncheon of the Reserve Officers Association in Washington Feb. 20, Gen. Westmoreland said, "Yet, the essential Minuteman principle of readiness remains, as it should, the hard core of our modern concept. I refer, of course, to the One Army Concept."

He said, "In my judgment, this concept accurately describes the sound partnership that exists between our Active Army and our Reserve components. Every day—both on and off the battlefield—the partners of this One Army are providing the needed security for our Nation."

Gen. Westmoreland emphasized that, like its predecessor, the One Army Concept also has required changes in order that it could continue to meet the challenges of time. "The changes have been made on both sides of the house—the Active and the Reserve. And, in my opinion, each change has brought about an over-all strengthening of our national security posture.

"I appreciate the turbulence that our Reserve Forces have undergone. Hopefully, future years will bring much needed stability."

He said, "I am convinced that we have come a long way toward overcoming many of the past difficulties associated with the buildup of forces to meet a crisis situation. Nevertheless, we have a long way to go to achieve the desired readiness and effectiveness.

"Individual effort has played a major role in our improved posture. In my opinion, we sometimes lose sight of the fact that everything we accomplish is the sum total of individual effort. We are prone to identify the sources of our success as 'better equipment' or 'improved organization,' or the like."

He mentioned that on Dec. 30 the last Army Reserve component unit scheduled for deployment to Southeast Asia arrived in South Vietnam. The arrival of that unit completed a planned deployment schedule that had begun with the arrival of the first unit in late August—"a schedule that has added nearly 8,000 skilled personnel in 43 selected units to our fighting force in Vietnam."

He said at the same time, "Thirty-three other selected units of our Army Reserve components have added significant strength to our Strategic Army Forces in Hawaii and the CONUS. And, concurrently, hundreds of individual Reservists have contributed their skills throughout our entire active force structure.

"Thus, once again, trained and dedicated Reservists have taken their places on the security team of our Nation to carry out the policies of our Nation."

Gen. Westmoreland then said, "The role of the Army is a continuing one, in both peace and war . . . By Army, I mean the One Army—Active and Reserves alike.

"Deep and demanding as is our involvement in Vietnam, we must continue to be prepared to honor our world-wide commitments to defeat aggression. We must, therefore, preserve the flexibility and military power represented by adequate forces and military strength in depth."

Korean hospital needs U.S. servicemen's help

American Servicemen have been pioneers on more than one occasion—especially in the giving field. Year after year, their projects have been found worthy of continued support by the American-Korean Foundation.

One such project is the newly named Seagrave Hospital at the Kaejong Institute of Rural Health near the Yellow Sea port of Kunsan in North Cholla Province, Korea.

First American money came to the Institute when air men based nearby provided money and materials in 1964 for a building program.

Last year, the American-Korean Foundation confirmed the Servicemen's choice by selecting the Institute to benefit from $200,000 the Foundation inherited from the American Medical Center for Burma, the organization that supported the work of Dr. Gordon A. Seagrave, the "Burma Surgeon." After the death of Dr. Seagrave in 1965 and the nationalization of all Burmese hospitals, the AKF was entrusted with the task of selecting the man to carry on Seagrave's work in Korea.

The subsequent search led to Dr. Lee Young Choon, founder and director of the Kaejong Institute which is located in a rather isolated region of 600,000 people, mostly poor farmers and fishermen.

The American-Korean Foundation has begun the construction of three buildings: a 64-bed surgical hospital and pathology laboratory, a central facilities complex, and a children's center.

IPO Board Member to Address 'Parents of Listening Eyes'

A member of the executive board of the International Parents Organization and the 1968 "Woman of the Year" in Warner Robins, Ga., will speak in Columbus March 20.

Mrs. Tom Spencer is scheduled to address members of the Parents of Listening Eyes during a meeting starting at 7:30 p. m. at the Gas Light auditorium.

Named Warner Robins' foremost woman last year for her work with children having hearing and speech handicaps, Mrs. Spencer was first elected to the executive board of the IPO in 1966. She was named to the board again in 1968.

The IPO is a section of the Alexander Graham Bell Association for the Deaf, Washington, D. C. and was founded by Dr. Bell to encourage the teaching of speech and lip-reading to deaf children.

The Parents of Listening Eyes is a companion organization to Listening Eyes Foundation, Inc., sponsor of a local school for pre-school age deaf children.

A graduate of Mercer University, Macon, Ga., Mrs. Spencer has been a teacher in both public and private schools.

School Founder

In her work with parent groups, she organized the Houston County Speech and Hearing Assn., Inc., at Warner Robins and the Georgia Association for Hearing Impaired.

The local parents group, Parents of Listening Eyes, was founded last May and currently directly supports the Listening Eyes school for preschool age deaf children. The group is headed by Richard A. Kemp, 1175 Bismarck Drive, Columbus.

For Mothers

Program Set to Observe Poison Prevention Week

A coordinated information program has been planned for the observance of National Poison Prevention Week (March 16-22) at Fort Benning and in the surrounding community.

The campaign for the week is aimed at mothers responsible for children under five years of age. From 90-95 per cent of the accidental poisonings reported are in children five years and under.

The campaign includes an appearance by Medical Activities (MEDDAC), Pharmacy Officer, Capt. William Jennings on the WTVM (Channel 9) program "Bulletin Board," at 12:45 p. m. Wednesday. Appearing with Capt. Jennings will be Spc Lee Tavel, a registered pharmacist.

According to Jennings, the purpose of the appearance is to inform the public of the actual purpose of National Prevention Week and to "let the public know what to do if someone in the family does take poison."

Scouts Help

Another phase of the week-long program includes the distribution of leaflets Tuesday by Scouts of Explorer Post 99. The leaflet, "First Aid for Poisoning," will be distributed to Post homes. On Friday, the Explorers will collect unneeded or unused drugs from the family housing areas.

Capt. Jennings said, "All families should take precautions to prevent accidental poisonings all year and should particularly use this time to discard the potential killers."

During National Poison Prevention Week, the two outlets of the Martin Army Hospital Pharmacy will, upon request, furnish each family with an Ipecac Poison Treatment Kit.

A program for the post dependent schools will include appropriate films to be shown to the children and the making of posters in art classes. Two leaflets, one on poison control and the other a checklist of poisons, will be passed out for the children to take home.

"Each month about 25 cases of accidental poisonings are treated at Martin Army Hospital. By each family taking steps to safeguard their children by flushing away unused drugs and keeping used ones out of the reach of children throughout the year this number could be reduced," Capt. Jennings concluded.

SAINT PATRICKS DAY

The World Health Organization ranks the Irish high on its list of well-fed people. This perhaps may be due to the fact that almost half of the population is agricultural. Thus our tribute to the people of Ireland on this Saint Patrick's Day:

IRISH SODA BREAD

1 lb flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon sugar
2 teaspoons baking soda
1 cup buttermilk or sour milk

Preheat oven to 450 F. Sift the dry ingredients several times. Add the milk gradually mixing well. Have the dough not too dry. Turn out onto floured bread board for about 1 minute. Shape into a round flat loaf and cut a deep cross on top from side to side. Bake on a flat pan in a hot (450 F.) oven for 45 minutes.

IRISH STEW

2 lbs neck of mutton or lamb
½ lb streaky bacon
9-10 medium potatoes
10-12 onions
Salt and Pepper
2 cups cold water

Cut meat into pieces and trim away as much fat as possible. Cut bacon into 1-inch pieces. Pare the potatoes and slice the onions. Place a layer of meat in a heavy pan, add a layer of bacon, onions, and potatoes and sprinkle with seasoning. Repeat layers, finishing with potatoes. Add the water, let it come slowly to a boil. Remove any scum, cover and simmer for 2½ hours. Potatoes should be cooked to a pulp. Makes four servings.

APPLE PUDDING-PIE

4 medium cooking apples
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
½ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1-3 cup water
2 teaspoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
1 cup quick-cooking oats
1-3 cup butter

Pare and core apples. Cut into eighth and place in greased baking dish about 10 x 6 inches. Sprinkle with combined spices, sugar, and a little of the salt. Mix water, lemon juice and grated rind and pour over apples. Add soda and remaining salt to oats, work butter into this mixture until crumbly. Spread oatmeal mixture over apples and bake in preheated oven (375 F.) for 40 minutes. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

IRISH COFFEE

Pour 1 jigger Irish whisky into a warmed goblet or coffee cup. Add 1 to 2 teaspoons sugar. Add hot strong coffee to within 1 inch of top. Top with chilled sweetened whipped cream.

92nd Co. OC Wives Hold Tea

St. Patrick's Day set the theme of the finance coffee for the 92nd OCS wives club held in the 94th Company dayroom.

Mrs. Cecil W. Boatwright spoke to the wives about the allowance they would receive when their husbands were commissioned. Mrs. Robert W. Muller talked about the graduation ceremony that will take place Mar. 29.

Col. Robert M. Piper, commanding officer of the Candidate Brigade and Lt. Col. Robert W. Muller made a special visit to thank the wives for the decorations of the TXB Spring Formal.

Mrs. Boatwright was the cadre wife hostess. The candidate wife hostesses were Mrs. Ralph P. Curtis, Mrs. Richard W. Scott, Mrs. Thomas K. Christie, Mrs. Martin A. Gonzales, Mrs. Wayne R. Garner, and Mrs. James P. Evans.

Honored guests included Mrs. Robert W. Muller, Mrs. Muller, mother of Lt. Col. Muller, Mrs. Everett J. Thomas, and Mrs. Jeffrey J. Clark. Special guest was Mrs. John P. McGwain. The company guests were Mrs. Cecil W. Boatwright, Mrs. Mark R. Eidemiller and Mrs. W. Thomas Dodge.

Incentive Awards

Cash incentive awards totaling $1,810 were awarded to 19 civilian and military workers at ATC last week by Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis.

Eufaula Historical Tour Visits Ante-Bellum South

The annual Eufaula Pilgrimage is an event of interest to the families at Fort Benning. Eufaulians have long been interested in getting to know their Benning neighbors and have recognized the contributions that Benning families make to the cultural and social file in the Chattahoochee Valley area.

This interest took concrete form in 1968 when the city officially adopted two units, the 271st Aviation Company and the 361st Transportation Detachment. Shortly before these units left for Vietnam in early 1969, many Eufaula citizens made personal acquaintances with the men and their wives.

Invitation

The Eufaula Heritage Association extends an invitation to families stationed at Fort Benning to come to the pilgrimage and tour the ante-bellum mansions and cottages.

Nine Heritage Homes will be open to the public for the tour this year. The homes represent a variety of architectural styles. Many are furnished with heirlooms and antiques passed on to descendants of original builders. Many homes have collections of antique furnishings gathered by their owners who have purchased and restored the homes in recent years.

Trained hostesses and "southern belles" will conduct the tours.

The last two years the Eufaula Pilgrimage has received regional and national publicity, and the National Association of Travel Organizations selected the tour of Heritage Homes as one of the top twenty travel events for the month of April. The pilgrimage offers tourists and history buffs a glimpse into homes built during the opulent, cotton-rich years of Eufaula aristocracy.

Over the past three years the pilgrimage has brought approximately 7,000 visitors to this historic city. They have come from practically every state and from several foreign countries. Visitors have expressed highly favorable reactions to the charm and knowledge of the hostesses, the towering mansions topped with cupolas, and the exquisite architectural detail found in many of the city's commercial buildings as well as its residences.

The city's hundreds of azaleas and dogwoods and gardens landscaped with ornamental shrubs and flowers have offered a lavish display of color and natural beauty that has contributed to the popularity of the spring-time tour.

Homes that will be open for the tour this year are: Kendall Manor, Sunnyview Farms, The Leftwich-Roberts-Gaskin Home, the Drewery - Mitchell-Moorer Home, the Cato House, Dean Hall, the Bray Barron Home, the Thornton-Comer-Rudderman Home, and the Calton-Hurlbert Home.

Art Show

In addition to the tour of homes the Eufaula Confederate Museum will be open, showing special Sesqui-cetennial exhibits, and the Eufaula Art Association is sponsoring an exhibit of the Alabama Art Association's Annual Juried exhibition. The museum and art exhibits will be on display at Shorter Mansion, headquarters for the tour.

To Make It Easier

PTA Panel Discusses Family Separation

Family separations due to overseas assigoment is an occupational hazard for the military man and his family.

The Fort Benning Dependent School's Parent Teachers Association sponsore a panel of two social workers, a teacher, one psychologist and two parents to come up with some recommendations to make the separation smoother.

"Long before separation occurs the family should have an equitable behavioral code spelling out expected conduct of the children," said Capt. Jeffrey L. Moss, a Social Work Officer at Martin Army Hospital, "The code should be understood by all members of the family and enforced equally by both parents."

Separation is difficult for all members of the family, the panel concluded. Where adults can verbalize their feelings, children often lack the facility for words to express their feelings and sometimes show their distress in behavior that is atypical for them.

Parents should be sensitive to behavior that might be symbolic of distress including a drop in school grades, edginess, sleep problems, temper flare ups, tearfulness, poor appetite, preoccupations, withdrawal or any behavior pattern unusual for the youngster. Most distress can be handled by reassurance from both parents.

"A mother cannot be both mother and father to the children," said Moss, "The children require some male figure to identify with. Usually youngsters seek out and identify with a favorite teacher, scout leaders, members of the clergy, coaches, and other athletic instructors at boys' clubs, "Y"'s and other youth activities, older brothers and sisters, relatives and friends."

Communication on a regular basis between the absent father and his family in the form of tapes, snap shots, and letters ease the problems of separation.

Preparation for a father's return is as important as preparation for father's absence.

"Often times differences in expected behaviour may exist between parents for their youngster," said Moss. "Separations often magnify these differences and so behavioral expectations should be brought into harmony before the father returns to make it easier for him to rejoin the family."

A period of adjustment is to be expected according to Moss. The wife will have to transfer back those roles more appropriate for the husband to have and perhaps restore the family's equilibrium.

Qualified assistance may be obtained when difficulties arise, from the youngster's teacher, the family's religious leader, those neighbors and friends who have had similar experiences, the Social Work Service in the Pediatrics and the ACS here.

Post Teacher Is Honored At Ceremony

A Fort Benning school teacher who has been instructing fifth graders here since 1954 was made an honorary life-time member of the Georgia State Parent Teacher Association Tuesday night for her work in gaining 100 per cent PTA membership among the parents of her students.

Miss Colleen O'Brian has been a teacher at the Edward A. White School since 1954. At the regular meeting of the Fort Benning PTA she was presented a pin and a letter from the Georgia PTA informing her that she had been made a life member. SGM Joe B. Blackwell of the 6th Student Battalion, the Candidate Brigade, who is the first vice president of the Fort Benning PTA, made the presentation.

When she was asked about the award, Miss O'Brian said, "It was a complete surprise to me. I consider it to be quite an honor."

PLANNERS . . . Mrs. Jackie Cummings and Mrs. James Bledshoe plan for the OWC tour of post homes set for April 2.

OWC Plans Tour of Post Homes

The OWC spring luncheon is set for Wednesday, April 2nd at the Supper Club. Officers for the 1969-70 club year will be elected at the gathering.

A tour of Fort Benning homes will precede the luncheon and is scheduled to begin with the first buses leaving the Main Officers' Club at 10:00 a.m. and at 10 minute intervals thereafter.

The homes viewed will illustrate the individuality of Army wives in transforming standard military quarters into distinctive homes. The decors will vary from early American to traditional and Danish contemporary to oriental.

The single slate of nominees will be presented to the membership by Mrs. James Morris, Jr., current president. The slate is as follows: Mrs. Malcolm R. Baer, president; Mrs. Robert La Monte, first vice-president; Mrs. James Wheaton, second vice-president; Mrs. Charles Reidenbaugh, third vice president; Mrs. James Heathcock, recording secretary; Mrs. Richard Thrower, corresponding secretary; Mrs. William Riggs, Treasurer; and Mrs. Raymond Kampe, custodian.

A single reservation needs to be made for both the Tour of Homes and the luncheon. The price for both plus a complimentary sherry hour will be $2.50. To make a reservation call Mrs. Louis Boettcher, 545-4239; Mrs. Y. Y. Phillips, 545-7325 or Mrs. Earl R. Adams, Jr., 689-5533.

Rangers Uncover NVA Base Camp

CAMP EAGLE, Vietnam (101-10)—Grasping vine handholds, the small group of sweating men clambered up the rock strewn incline. Moving past a growth of brush, the leader halted, peering up the slope. Thirty meters ahead perched a large hut overlooking the trail.

The six men, four American, two Vietnamese, were members of a 101st Airborne Division Ranger team which had been inserted near the Song Bo River that morning to check for enemy activity.

While moving along the river they had come upon a well-used trail hidden under the green canopy of trees. The team followed the trail as it paralled the river, observing small branch trails winding down to the river's edge.

Investigating the situation, they discovered that on each trail a large tree overhung the river concealing places to load or unload rafts or small boats. Several bamboo rafts large enough for two men, were found on the bank out of the water.

The team moved on.

For a few minutes the team watched the hut for some sign of enemy activity. The area seemed deserted save for the usual sounds of the wilderness —a bird squawking, the rustle of leaves in the wind, the sudden stir of branches as a monkey leaped from one tree to the next.

The minutes stretched out.

The men eased out of their positions and began cautiously climbing the trail toward the quiet hut. One man stepped into the hut while the others kept a tense watch. The hut, complete with beds and cooking area, was built on two levels, one dug out from under the hut. Firing ports in the lower level commanded the trail down the hill from the hut.

Moving up the trail, the Rangers paused to check another hut. Behind the building they saw a major base camp of 40 huts which stretched out before them.

"The area has been used recently," said S. Sgt. James M. Johnson of Pensacola, Fla. "We counted 33 green and black NVA uniforms hanging on vines, still dripping water." A team leader from Company F, 58th Infantry, the 101st's Ranger Company, Johnson added, "The coals in their cooking fires were still warm and the camp looked as though it has been hastily evacuated by the NVA force. We assumed they would be back in a short time.

After a quick check of the camp, the team returned down the trail to radio a report to the base camp. Johnson took two men to approach the camp from a different direction. It was then they spotted a 13-man NVA force re-entering it.

"They saw us, too, and opened fire with SKSs and AK-47s," said Johnson, "so we left the position and headed back to the rest of the team."

"The NVA were coming down the trail looking for us," Johnson continued, so "we requested an extraction and air support."

Within minutes two gunships were overhead with rockets and mini-guns pinning the enemy down, giving the team a chance to withdraw. The enemy was only 40 meters away when the Air Force jet fighters came in.

"I had them lay the napalm along both sides of the trail," said Johnson. "We could hear the enemy and feel the searing heat as we headed to our pick-up point."

As the 'chopper' lifted the team over the jungle, the patrol saw the enemy [illegible] some 2 hours after the flaming run.

People Sniffers Find Enemy Troop Movement

CHU ALI, Vietnam (AMERICAL 10)—In the Americal Division, the 11th Brigade's 90th Chemical Detachment constantly has its nose in Charlie's business. Utilizing two Man Personnel Detectors, better known as "People Sniffers," they can juickly determine whether the enemy is in an area or has recently been there.

The highly sensitive machines are the result of a long line of research. Although the "Sniffers" are still considered to be in an experimental stage, they have been a valuable tool in locating enemy troops and base camps.

"We've always been successful with the machine," said S. Sgt. Edgar Oakes, Coffeville, Miss., Chemical NCO for the 11th Infantry Brigade. "We aren't allowed to discuss our findings and are limited as to what we can say about the machine. All we can do is 'sniff'."

"I have 100 per cent faith in the 'Sniffers'," remarked Sp4 Michael Pullen, El Paso, Tex., a chemical staff specialist. "If the machine shows a hot spot you can guarantee that there's been someone in the area."

Although the "sniffer" missions take them into enemy infested areas, flying at low level, the 90th Chemical Detachment hasn't lost a man yet.

Six men fly the missions and maintain the delicate machines which cost $35,000 each.

VC Commercial Interrupts Night Alert

Suddenly a loudspeaker blasted through the darkness at the 1st Battalion, 20th Infantry troopers as they sat in their well-fortified positions.

The Viet Cong were playing American music to gain the troopers' attention and give the men a feeling of home. Then they came on with their version of the Chieu Hoi message.

The "Sykes Regular" troopers were not too impressed with what they heard. Sp4 Francis Brennah, Clifton, N. J., a B Company rifleman, jokingly said, "It sounded pretty good, but we thought we'd skip their offer for the night. They offered to treat us well and send us home if we would give up and bring our weapons with us."

The VC did offer some extra added incentive in their message, which was blurted in broken English. They told the men that they had machine guns trained and a mortar tube registered in on each bunker on the perimeter.

"Actually what Charlie had done was to add a little realism to a practice alert we had scheduled at Liz that night," Sgt. Dwane M. Rousseau, Memphis, Tenn., explained. "They offered us a little unusual entertainment. We hadn't had a show since Jimmy Snow was here last month."

In a matter of minutes B Company's 81 mm mortars were pounding away in the broadcast area. The voices in the night were silenced.

Several days later the 2nd Platoon, led by 1st Lt. Lawrence G. Koenig, Tampa, Fla., put Charlie's broadcasting to an end.

The platoon had moved into a village near LZ Liz, searching as they moved. In one hootch they came upon some loosely laid bricks on the floor. Pulling up the bricks, they discovered an 18 inch trap door leading to a small basement.

There were two old women in the hootch. One of the women was told to go into the hole. She did this but at the same time attempted to push something farther back into the hole.

PFC Edwin Roman-Rodriguez, San Antonio, Puerto Rico, seeing that there was something that the woman did not want them to find, went down into the hole to see for himself what they had found.

Their suspicions were confirmed when Rodriguez came out of the "studio" with the VC's broadcasting unit, a Japanese-made transistorized megaphone.

"This must have been a center for the local VC PSYOPS program," 1st Lt. Koenig pointed out. "We also found a bundle of propaganda leaflets similar to our own Chieu Hoi messages written in English and signed by the 'National Due Pho Front for Liberation'."

They also found some medical supplies, clothing and documents. The two would-be "Hanoi Hannas" were taken in for questioning.

"The equipment was well concealed," said Rodriguez. "We didn't expect to find it there, but we know it was in the area. I don't think that Charlie will have anymore messages for us, unless he

13th PID Begins Alaskan Bivouac

"Year round skiing on the finest and the largest slopes in North America. Average snow depth 130 inches, plenty of fresh powder weekly."

The travel brochure make the resort sound like a skier's paradise, until the prospective tourist comes to the part that says the resort accommodations are on a glacier.

The "resort" is Fort Greely, Alaska, and the glacier is part of a glacier network originating from the slopes of Mt. McKinley, highest point on the North American continent.

An Alaskan travel odyssey covering over 10,000 miles became real today for ten members of Center Troop Command's information office.

The mountains and glaciers will become the snow-banked home for the 13th Public Information Detachment (PID) at the Army's Northern Warfare Training Center, where the 13th will join elements of the 82nd Airborne Division in two weeks of unit survival training.

The trip began early this morning for the 13th PID outside the Headquarters of 1st Battalion, Center Troop Command. By 10:30 tonight, the 13th will be arriving in Fairbanks, after stops in Atlanta, Chicago and Seattle.

The last 100 miles to Fort Greely will be on the ground. Instead of flying over the snow drifts, the 13th will be seeing just how high they are — and the drifts may tower above the tail of the Air Alaska plane which left them in Fairbanks.

The training will consist of two phases, classroom and practical. During the week in the classroom, the fundamentals of cold weather environment survival will be taught.

The second week will be spent forty miles from the classroom area, bivouacing in tents and emergency survival shelters to test the principles learned in the first phase of training.

Included in the techniques necessary to survive in arctic conditions are snowshoeing, skiing and rappelling, the art of descending a sheer mountain face using a rope.

The 13th PID is scheduled to return to Fort Benning March 29.

CLEANING RODS FIT IN STOCK
SSgt. Roy Noland Is Testing

M16 Cleaning Kit May Go in Stock

The combat Infantryman in Vietnam may soon be carrying his rifle cleaning equipment in the buttstock of his M16A1 rifle, as was the case with the M14 rifle.

Test soldiers of the Army Infantry Board at Fort Benning are field testing a modified buttstock for the battle-tested M16A1 rifle this week. The buttstock has been redesigned to incorporate a storage compartment within the butt, and a hinged trap door like plate with a latch to secure the cleaning equipment in the butt.

At present, men armed with the M16A1 rifle have to carry the cleaning equipment in a separate case or in some other fashion. This is very unhandy under the many adverse conditions of combat and field use.

The modified buttstock with the cleaning gear included will add approximately ¾ pound to the overall weight of the rifle, according to Capt. Terrance N. Spiegelberg, project test officer. This is not added weight though, he pointed out, as the Infantryman had to carry it somewhere else previously, and this is just relocating it.

Testing of the modified stock which is termed a "product improvement test" is being conducted on Muir and Farnsworth Ranges and the Sandy Patch Test Area.

The rifle with its modified stock will be subjected to critical service and durability environments similar to what it would receive on the battlefield. It is being submerged in water, dragged through the mud and sand and carried during inclement weather to determine its dependability.

Assisting the Infantry Board in its testing of the modified buttstock is "D" Company, 1st Bn., 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Bde. All test soldiers are Vietnam combat veterans and are fully aware of the many rigors a rifle is subjected to on the battlefield. The men are under the close supervision of combat veteran, SSgt. Roy Noland, senior test NCO with the Board's Small Arms Test division.

Welcome Mat Out for ATC Visitors

There's a welcome for hundreds of visitors at the Army Training Center's Family Welcome Center on Fourth St. in Sand Hill.

To find sons or husbands who are graduating from basic combat training would be like searching for the proverbial needle in the haystack without the assistance of SFC Alfred Beebe and his staff. They locate soldiers for the families and help them arrange a visit. Maps are furnished and directions provided for reaching the unit sought.

According to Spc Robert Langford, who was assigned to the Welcome Center in January, "These people come from all over, lots of them from as far away as Key West, and they really appreciate just having someone here to help them. Since I've been here, I've met over a hundred people from around my home in Arkansas."

A small white frame building, the Welcome Center provides a central reception area furnished with comfortable chairs and color TV. Two smaller rooms permit more private visits with the families while another area is equipped with candy and soft drink vending machines. On days like last Sunday when there were 625 visitors it resembles a little grand central station.

To help visitors locate the Family Welcome Center, bright international-placed throughout the area.

2 Soldiers From ATC Receive Commissions

Two members of Hq. Co., ATC, received direct commissions last week. Both were given the oath by Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis.

James W. Larson, a management specialist from St. Petersburg, Fla., was commissioned a second lieutenant in the quartermaster corps. Denis A. Schulze of Columbus, Ohio, became a captain in the Judge Advocate General Corps.

In January, Larson was graduated from Valparaiso (Ind.) University with a bachelor of science degree in management, and in 1967 he received his master's degree in management from Michigan State University. Before entering the Army, he was employed by General Foods Corporation, White Plains, N. Y.

Larson's wife Barbara and son, Robert, who were present for the commissioning, will accompany him to Fort Lee and the Pentagon.

A member of the Ohio Bar Association, Capt. Shulze received a bachelor of arts degree from Mount Union College, Alliance, Ohio. He earned his law degree from Ohio State.

He completed basic combat training and infantry AIT at Fort Dix, and the Redeye Gunner's School at Fort Bliss. Since that time he has been assigned to the ATC Staff Judge Advocate Section as a legal clerk.

After completion of the SJA School at the University of Virginia, Charlottesville, Va., he will be assigned to Fort Devens, Mass.

Camelot Explores the Range of Human Emotion

A REVIEW
By Jerry Gonfield

"In Camelot — yes, Camelot. It may sound a bit bizarre, but for a few brief shining moments there was a spot called Camelot."

The Arthurian legend which has taken shape in the Lerner and Loewe production of "Camelot" may not be quite the image each of us has had in our mind's eye since first hearing the story, but it is a close facsimile.

Starring Vanessa Redgrave, Richard Harris and Franco Nero, the movie version does have its shining moments also. Surprisingly, although shrouded with romanticism, the movie has a few pointed comments on the hypocracy, prejudice, imperfection and weakness of man and his civilization.

Affectionately named "Wart" by Merlyn the Magician, King Arthur is portrayed by Richard Harris as a somewhat hesitant and reluctant king. Until Guenevere becomes his queen, that is. Then he becomes the most farsighted monarch of his day, envisioning a civilization based on might for right, trial by jury and justice.

In far off France Lancelot DuLac hears Arthur's call for invincible knights. Who is the perfect knight? "C'est Mo:" — it is he. So saintly does he believe himself to be that when he arrives in England, the English can hardly stand him. "Did he walk across the channel?" they scoff.

Vanessa Redgrave conveys a wide range of emotions from happiness to abject sorrow. It seems out of character, however, that she appears meticulously costumed in one scene and then looks like some one of the serfs in the following scene.

Using her womanly wile, she coerces three knights into jousting against Lancelot, although one knight questions, "What is the use of being in the upper class if we have to die like the lower class?"

Lost Kingdom

Adding a touch of humor to the tangled affairs of Camelot is King Pellinore, played by Lionel Jeffries. He is a wandering monarch in search of his kingdom, which he has lost, misplaced he says.

The catalyst in the downfall of Camelot is Mordred, King Arthur's illegitimate son played by David Hemmings. Greedy for the throne, he instigates the knights to rebellion and produces evidence against Lance and Guenevere.

With poetic justice, the jury before which Guenevere is charged for treason sentences her to burning at the stake. Arthur's ideas have brought the downfall of the one he loves.

Camelot Doomed

The happy kingdom thus disenchanted, the three friends must never see each other again. Camelot is doomed. As the sun rises on the eve of battle, King Arthur gives a young boy, Tom of Warwick, advice to tell future generations.

"Who was he?" ask Pellinore after the boy leaves.

King Arthur answers, "Just one of us, Pelli. Just one of a million drops in a moculi sea. But some of them sparkle, Pelli, some of them do sparkle." The boy, according to legend, becomes Sir Thomas Moore, England's great clergyman, statesman, and author.

The acting in the film, however, does not always sparkle, and there are moments when scenes drag because there is insufficient dialogue or emotion to hold them together. The first portion of the film consists of short sequences to cover time laspses and shifting of scenes. The film makes these sudden jumps until the crisis is revealed and then it rushes to the resolution. The scenery and costuming is excellent.

But in spite of imperfections, the message is there.

The audience may grasp the romantic ideal even if the film story somewhat misses their perfect image of it. They may still enjoy the dream of a perfect Camelot someday, if they ignore human frailty.

'I Pagliacci' Presentation Completes Opera Series

By Harry R. Nash

Saturday night the Women's Guild of the Columbus Museum of Arts and Crafts, presented the last of a series of Operalogues, or excerpts from famous Operas, at the Columbus Museum.

Singing in the shortened production of "I Pagliacci" were Metropolitan Opera singer, Paul De Paola, Columbus soloist, Mimi Child and Fort Benning OC Joey Evans. Theodore Gargiulo, Fort Benning Music Director for Special Services, coordinated, translated, and interpreted the opera while accompanying the soloists at the piano.

The performance was introduced by the president of the guild as a "living canvas in mosaic form." The soloists were then introduced. Upon conclusion of the opening formalities, the program was turned over to Gargiulo.

Everyday People

His introduction to the opera was extremely informative. He put the background of dealing with everyday people in a realistic situation. The continual verbal interpretation made the opera understandable to all and ruled out the necessity of the audience having a good knowledge of opera and its form.

His interpretation at the piano was equally meaningful and in it he demonstrated the talent, training, and experience necessary to perform the piano score of the opera at its best. Conductor, arranger, composer, voice coach, and organist, Gargiulo has performed in symphony, opera and musical comedy.

He has appeared with world famous companies including the Miami Opera Guild, Cincinnati Summer Opera and others.

After a shakey start, De Paola went on to demonstrate the quality it takes to stay with the Met as long as he has. His deep baritone voice rang through the small auditorium with authority and expression. It was a pleasure to hear him perform.

No plug. No cord. No socket. And no beard.
The Cordless 208 packs its own power. Just turn it on and your beard is gone for the day. Four inexpensive little penlight batteries make this happen every day for up to 30 days. Shaving's as easy as that. You never have to plug it in. Flip-top cleaning and a handy travel case with built-in mirror make it convenient, too.
Another great shaver is our Flip-Top 20 (pictured below). It gives you the same close, fast, comfortable shave, with a cord. But the greatest thing about both of these shavers is that you can afford them. So with or without a cord, you haven't a thing to lose. Except your beard.

Hit Records Spark Zombies to Life

By Pete Lis

Hot Line to the Hits

One of my buddies ran up to my car the other night, just as I was prepared to leave my residence for a quiet evening in the Fountain City. Opening my car door and jumping in, he exclaimed, "Hey man, have you heard this new group called the Zombies? They have it all in the right place, man, I heard their record on the radio. It's really nice."

OK, you just know I had to explain the whole scene. So, I started the car and headed north.

About 1965 an English group named the Zombies made two excellent hit singles: She's Not There" and "Tell Her No." After that, they made a good album. Several more fine singles (all of which flopped), and some songs for the flick BUNNY LAKE IS MISSING. Then they disappeared. Due to a lack of hit singles, Parrot records didn't follow up their first album. They chose instead to concentrate on such chart-busters as Tom Jones and Them.

Zombies Back

The Zombies are now back with a new album which they produced and arranged themselves. It is called ODESSEY AND ORACLE and is available in the United States on Date Records, a subsidiary of Columbia.

The group has changed somewhat over the years, and most of the changes are for the better. Others are attempts, or the results of attempts at commerciality by musicians who are probably a bit bewildered by the lack of success awarded to music as outstanding as theirs.

Rod Argent's keyboard work and melodic writing coupled with Colin Blunstone's breathy vocals are still the Zombies' main strength. Chris White, the group's bassist, has given them a necessary shove into today's head by writing a couple of tunes with lyrics that are in a very nice, together place. For example, in "Friends of Mine", the lyric is simply about how good it is to know two people who are kind and who love each other. Behind the lyric the backup vocals repeat: "Kim and Maggie, June and Duffy, Gene and Jim and Jim and Christy. . .etc." Of course it's schlocky, but it also works.

Rod Argent's writing is at just about the same quality lyrically as it was on the first album (ie. pretty good), although the subject matter is a bit broader than the boy girl stuff which was the norm during the early-Beatle period when he wrote the Zombies' hits.

His "A Rose For Emily" has, I suppose, some reference to the Faulkner story, in that it's about an old lady's death. This song uses only Argent's piano and some occasional backup vocals to accompany Blunstone's singing. The chords are a bit reminiscent of McCartney's "For No One," but there's nothing wrong with that.

Another nice cut is "Beechwood Park," a Chris White composition which contains some fine work by Paul Atkinson, the group's lead guitarist. Atkinson seems to have outgrown his post-Ventures style when the first album came out. Rhythmically, however, he still uses many of those dull "chank-chank" accent chords that he also used on the first LP.

Adequate

The Zombie's rhythm section is adequate, but not outstanding. Hugh Grundy, the group's drummer, has improved since the first album, but only slightly. Of course, being English, he hasn't been exposed to the new wave of "fatback" drums that are coming from James Brown, et al.

ODESSEY AND ORACLE starts and finishes with two Argent compositions which are direct decendents of the Zombie's earlier work. "Care of Cell 44" has one of Argent's fine melodic and chordal structures supporting that "coming home" theme used on one of the Zombies' unsuccessful singles, and used by almost everybody just after "All My Loving" and "I'll Won't Be Long." Argent tries to update this theme by making this homecoming that of a girl about to leave prison.

"Time Of The Season," their current huge single and the last cut on the album, has the same staggered beat as "She's Not There," except that the full drum set is replaced at short intervals with a handclap and an echo-laden sigh. It is on this cut that Argent takes his only solo in that cookin', neo-jazz style, so in evidence on the first LP. However, the solo doesn't really get off until Argent's Hammond organ gets double-tracked toward the end of the tune.

As I looked to my right, my buddy was just staring at me as he uttered "Yeeeaaaaaahhhhhh"... and the beat goes on....

Buddy Nash: Vet Performer at 23

By 1st Lt. Fred Vollrath

For twenty of his twenty-three years Harry B. (Buddy) Nash has been a performer — ten of them professionally.

"I've been performing for as long as I can recall," he said. "So long in fact that it is in front of an audience on stage when I feel I am most myself."

Nash, a chaplain's assistant at the Reception Station, plans to follow his parents into show business. He hopes to make it big some day with his own network television show.

For Audience

The key to making it to the top Nash believes is "to remember you are playing for the audience not just yourself. You have to please your public — give them something they understand. If you don't you are finished."

An entertainer must capture his audience with his first three or four numbers or he stands a real chance of losing them, Nash feels.

"If you haven't got their tastes pegged by then you're in trouble," he said.

A military audience is considered a real test of a performer's abilities because it is composed of people from all sections of the country and every social and economic background.

"An audience on the road is easier to gauge," said Nash, who has traveled the country extensively with a solo folk singing act on the dinner theater tour, for Theatre Productions Inc. out of New York City.

He began playing for military audiences shortly after he was drafted in May of last year. His sergeant major became aware of his ability and put him in touch with people who gave him an opportunity to perform.

Johnny Carson

Just before he was drafted he had an offer to audition for the Johnny Carson Show, the CoCo Cabana, and had contract offers from several national recording companies, but was unable to accept because he was undergoing basic training.

"Naturally I was disappointed but hopefully it will be waiting for me when I leave the Army," he said. "When I first came in I had the impression that everyone carried a rifle for two years and I wouldn't be able to perform for two years."

He was wrong.

Since coming to Fort Benning he has entertained at Special Services functions, talent shows, parties, entertainment contests, and in the local communities surrounding the post as part of the Community Relations program.

Post Glen Campbell

When his sergeant major was making efforts to put him in contact with the right people on post he described him as "the Glen Campbell of Fort Benning" because Nash incorporates many of Campbell's songs in his own routines.

"The name stuck," said Nash, "but I don't think it is really applicable because I don't have that country twang and I don't sing that type of music exclusively."

He sings and plays classical, standard, pop and show, as well as folk.

Nash is currently in rehearsal for the upcoming Fort Benning Playhouse production of the Fantasticks," scheduled to open on April 23rd.

The Drags Are Fun - If You Can See Anything

By Paul Mangione

The possibility of traveling on land at 180 miles per hour is terrifying for most people but for some, it is hardly moving. A group of individuals, a product of the swingin' sixties have developed a cult, and then a series of sub-cults, devoted to the premise that the faster you can go within a given distance the better you are.

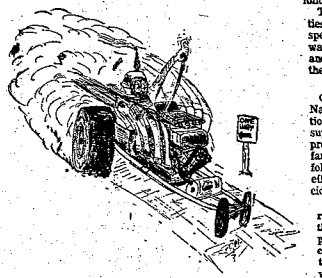
The "sport" of drag racing and its related field of endeavor, "funny cars" are becoming one of the most popular spectator sports in the United States. Tens of thousands and sometimes, hundreds of thousands of fans pack the stands to watch their favorite drivers scream down the measured quarter-mile at speeds in excess of two hundred miles per.

Impressive Machines

Two impressive looking machines (definitely not cars) called "rails" are pushed up to the starting lines by mechanics. The driver, who resembles an astronaut in his fire proof silver overalls, gas mask and helmet climbs into a cockpit barely large enough to hold him. He must straddle the transmission to sit down. As he is rolled up to the "Christmas tree," a pole with three pairs of lights arranged horizontally with the red at the top, he starts his engine.

He has no mufflers, they weigh too much.

The roar is deafening. Each driver tries to out rev his opponent. The engines, incredible devises that hardly resemble the six-banger in your old Ford, are run on a mixture of nitro-methane and maximum octane fuel. The fumes are powerful enough to kill all the foliage around most strips.



The mechanics pour a mixture of dilute acids on the "slicks," the huge smooth tires on the back of the rail. The fluid softens the rubber and allows for greater traction.

Tree Flashes

The tree flashes, red, yellow and then green. At the exact moment the green appears the drivers pop the clutch and floor the accelerator. The torgue power of five hundred plus horse power engines forces most of the rail high into the air and the tires, despite their size and softness, spin, sometimes for several seconds.

As much as two inches of rubber can be torn off the slicks as they tear down the short strip. The smoke and fumes are so thick it is impossible to see anything from behind. The race is over in less than eight seconds. The rails may have hit 210 miles per hour.

The machines travel so fast they must use parachutes to stop.

Things don't always go so smoothly. If there is a little oil on the strip, or the driver pops the clutch too fast, or too hard he looses control at a hundred and fifty and flips, or slams into the guard rail.

Occassionally the strain is too much for the mighty engines and they explode like a cannon shell sending flaming metal for hundred of feet. The parachute might malfunction and the rail goes screaming down the strip into the hay bails and the end. A fire usually follows.

The possibility of fatalities is always there. Many spectators come just to watch for the blood. Once and a while they see what they came for.

Hot Rod Association

Organizations like the National Hot Rod Association have been formed to supervise these races and provide safety factors both fans and the drivers must follow. The NRA is very effective in preventing accidents.

If nothing else, drag racing is a spectacular thing to watch. When properly supervised it can be a safe sport although the danger involved is a prime reason why many take it up and watch it.

The big tire manufacturers, auto dealers and fuel distributers have begun to actively seek out drivers who will let them sponsor their cars in return for publicity for their respective products.

There is a lot of money and a large following behind drag racing. Several magazines are published each month devoted entirely to the glories of the drag strip and the people who make them go. They will be with us for a long time, for better or for worse. We might as well get used to it. But next time you go to the strip, don't forget your gas mask.

Opening Lead: Spade 4

By Chuck Grutman

Some days its wiser to stay in bed, rather than fight the preverse fate of the bridge table. For the expert team of Appel and Romano, playing in the Southeast Regional finals at Tampa, Florida, last year, the maxim proved true. By the narrowest of margines, a mere 70 points, the tide was turned against them, and the match was lost.

Know Too Much

In many respects the hand is truly remarkable. Here is a hand that can be played by amateur and pro alike, one with a world of experience, the other with quite little, and the amateur holds the day. It is the saddest of truths that at times a lot of knowledge is a terrible thing.

Appel and Romano sat North-South, while their less accomplished opponents, Wydler and Cassat East-West. West led the Spade 4, an improper lead from a suit containing a medium sequence (i.e.,9,8). However, as his partner was well covered in the suit the mistake was not costly. The S3 was played from North and East played the S10. South played low. With a rare degree of insight, Mr. Wydler, playing East, led back the SKing, unblocking the suit. South took the trick with his SAce, and stopped to assess the situation.

South had eight top tricks; one spade, five hearts, a diamond and a club. He needed one more to make the contract, the obvious choice being a deep or shallow diamond finesse. The problem, however, is that if the finesse fails the opposition would run off at least three good spade tricks to set the contract. Therefore, the deep finesse is out, leaving only the shallow finesse (the reasoning is that East will have either the SKing or SJak 75 per cent of the time, while he would have the SKing only 50 per cent of the time).

50-50 To 60-40

South, however, decided that he could do a lot better than 50-50 odds. Instead of a finesse, he would try a complicated double squeeze calculate to raise his odds from 50-50 to 60-40. By leading out his last spade, and thereby giving West three more tricks, South hoped to squeeze East in clubs and diamonds.

South cashed his HQueen, and led his HJack, overtaking it with his heart King. Cashing his three good hearts on the board, he disregarded his D3, D2, and C4. East discarded his C3 and D6, reducing himself to the S6, DK, D9, and CK, Q5. He then led his last spade from the board, discarding the 10 from his hand, and the scene was set.

West cashed his good S9. East discarding his C7. East is now reduced to his DK,9 and CK,Q. On West's next lead, the S8 forces East to unprotect one of his Kings. If he discards the D9, South discards the CJ, making the two Aces and DQ. If the CQ is discarded, South discards the DQ, establishing his CJ.

Flyboys, OCS All-Stars Lose Games to Rifles

By Ken Sturzenacker

John Williams, coach of the Benning Rifles, must have hopeful feelings as he faces the Third Army basketball tournament at Fort Bragg next week. Three's the charm.

For the past two years, the Fort Benning team has come within one game of the Third Army championship and lost.

Both of the losses have been to Fort Campbell, Ky. Last year, the Mountaineers swept to a 117-104 victory on the offensive strength of Bob Burkheiser, who scored 51 points in the contest.

Burkheiser, a 6-2, 190-pound guard, got his college experience at Purdue University. Last year he was named to the All Army team in open trials held during February.

Burkheiser will be back this year for another shot at the other Third Army teams, and Fort Campbell's success will hinge on his health.

During the past two and a half weeks, Burkheiser has seen limited action because of an injury. Although he is expected to be able to start for Campbell during the tournament, his ability to drive and move against taller opponents should be hindered, and his timing a bit off.

Most of Campbell's 22-4 record a week ago came against college, junior college and industrial league opponents. Three of the Mountaineers' victories in its 9-3 log against service teams came at the expense of Fort Knox, Ky., traditionally a strong squad.

The tournament will be a round robin affair in two classes, pitting each team within a class against each of the other teams within the same class. The winner of each class will meet to decide the championship.

The Class A competition includes teams from posts with more than 10,000 eligible personnel.

Despite the threat Fort Campbell is with Bob Burkheiser, Fort Gordon looks like the team to beat.

The Gordon squad owns victories over Fort Jackson, S.C., Fort McPherson and Fort Benning, all of them by convincing margins. John Young, a 6-7 center, possesses an incredible reach and a deceptive hook shot which seldom misses its mark. He averages close to 28 points a contest, and hit a season high of 43 against Fort Jackson a month ago.

In addition to Young, John Brennan adds a solid threat at forward, standing 6-6, average 20 points and a dozen rebounds a game.

Fort Jackson will be able to rely on height at four of its five positions, with a 6-1 guard the smallest member of the starting five.

With two men at 6-5 and two at 6-4 starting, the Fort Jackson team made the best showing against the Gordon Ramblers, losing by less than 10 points in each of their two meetings.

At 21-16, Fort Bragg's record does not accurately reflect the team's strength. Most of the losses came early in the season, before the Christmas leave break and before several new members were added, including former Florida State University player, Bob Bowman.

The Benning Rifles have capitalized on an ability to run and make the fast break work in building their 11-2 record. The team's starting five is equally adept on offense or defense.

Coach John Williams calls Frank Everett "my most improved player all around." Everett, who is starting center, has become a solid, two way threat, adding much to the Rifles' attack.

Pete Anderson, a starting forward, hits from the corners and pulls in 10 rebounds a game, giving the Rifles a solid front line at both ends of the court. "Anderson had to fill the spot left by Mark Kemp's departure, and has done a great job," said Williams.

Fort McPherson, a Class B team for posts with less than 10,000 eligible personnel, faces an uphill battle in its quest for the Class B share of the Third Army title. McPherson has been unsuccessful in its seven meetings with military teams, six of them over Third Army tournament contestants.

The probable Class B champions will be the quintet from Fort McClellan, Ala.

Two victories last weekend gave the Benning Rifles a three game winning streak and an 11-2 record one week before the opening of the Third Army tournament Monday.

In Saturday night's action, the Rifles shot down the Flyboys from Dobbins Air Force Base, 118-93, then defeated the All-Stars from The Candidate Brigade's 5th Student Battalion in Sunday's game, 109-97.

Bill Whitlock and Jim Rates accounted for more than half of the Rifles' scoring in the game with Dobbins Air Force Base.

Whitlock notched 18 points in the first half, and Rates gathered 16 to pace the attack for the post team.

Bill Smith poured in 22 points, six coming on perfect shooting at the foul line, to keep the Flyboys within reach, 52-47, at the break.

For the first four and a half minutes of the second half, the balance between the two teams was still in effect, and the Rifles led, 60-54.

At that point, the Rifles began to find their mark consistently. Whitlock directed the attack, collecting another 21 points to run his game total to 39. During the closing minutes, Charles Pruitt made 12 of his 14 points and Travis Ragsdale scored his 10.

Coming into the game, Dobbins AFB owned a 5-1 record, with three of the victories gained at the expense of Fort McPherson. The Air Force team had beaten the Third Army headquarters squad twice by three points and once by 19 points.

The Sunday meeting beteen the Rifles and the OC All-Stars was the rematch held at the challengers' request after they lost the first contest, 76-61, February 16.

Bill Whitlock dropped in 34 of his 17 points in the first half to lead the Rifles to a 53-36 margin at the break.

Both teams used a strong running attack as their basic game plan, but the post team got the edge shooting from the field to take the lead. The first four minutes of the second half also belonged to the Rifles, as Whitlock ran up eight quick points to swell the bulge to 25 points at 67-42.

Thirty seconds later, Garry Ulrich, the All-Stars' big man at six-five, started hitting the basket, and scored eight straight points in two and a half minutes.

This he turned the ball over to Bob Hathaway and Ron Michaels, who took advantage of several Rifle fouls in netting another 10 points in the next two minutes.

With less than 10 minutes left in the game, James Wilson, Don Tarr and Ron Michaels took up the scoring challenge for the candidates, combining for 23 of the Stars' 36 points as they closed to within six at the final buzzer.

Jim Rates split his scoring evenly between halves, getting most of his 18 points on his long jumpers from outside the key. Pete Anderson did most of his work in close, gathering rebounds and a total of 16 points.

The candidates got beaten on the floor, making only 38.9 per cent of their attempts, compared to a 45.1 per cent mark for the Rifles. The Rifles scored only two more field goals than the candidates did, but took eight less shots to get their points.

Rifles Down Polar Bears In Post Exhibition Game

The newly-crowned USAIC champions, the 5th Bn. 31st Inf. Bn., Polar Bears, lost a hard-fought exhibition match last week to the Fort Benning Rifles, 121-113.

The first half saw outstanding ball handling by both teams with six foot Vernon Cheatum keeping pace with the Rifles. He connected on shots from virtually every angle on the floor. Hitting 20-25 foot jump shots, he was one of the favorites of the large crowd at Kelley Hill Field House.

Most Rifles have played college ball, and Jim Rates was second in scoring during the 66-67 season with a 25.2 average in The Student Brigade league.

The first period ended with both teams deadlocked in a 21-21 tie.

As the first half came to a close, Cheatum already had 27 of his 42 points. The score at this point was 57-54 in favor of the Bears, their biggest lead of the half.

In the third period, the Rifles gained an 88-79 advantage with two minutes 22 seconds remaining.

Player-Coach Bill Smith took time out for strategy and the Bears returned to tie the score 87-all by the end of the period. With fast breaks and footwork, the Bears offset the height and rebounding advantage of the Benning team.

In addition to outstanding bench strength, the height and teamwork paid off for the Rifles in the final period.

The Rifle's Bill Blunt Frank Everett and Bill Whitlock, with 48 rebounds among them, commanded the boards.

Ending the game with 44 points, Whitlock had shown the finesse which caused the Atlanta Hawks to draft him after playing four years at Oklahoma University.

Both teams played fine basketball but the deciding factor came at the free throw line where the Rifles sank 31 of 47 compared with 23 of 38 for the Polar Bears.

The game was the final contest for the Bears, who had ended the regular season of play with a 19-9 record.

Racers Glase, Gower Win Sports Car Event

197th Inf. Bde. sports car drivers, Bill Glase in a Sunbeam Tiger and Lawrense Gower in a Corvair Corsa, beat out drivers from Atlanta, Albany and Columbus to win their sports classes at last Sunday's slalom.

Glase, Btry. C, 2nd Bn. 10th Arty, won the class II competition with Gower, Btry. A, 1st Bn. 21i Arty, taking the class V.

Fifty-two sports cars were entered in the event sponsored by the Chavaga region of the Sports Car Club of America.

The twisting pylon course in the parking lot of the Traffic Circle Shopping Center, eliminated many drivers as they missed curves in the maze of pylons.

Time of day trophy went to Atlanta Porsche driver Cohen Davis.

Chavaga region will hold its monthly time and distance rally March 30 starting at the Starmount Shopping Center and another slalom is scheduled for April.

Player Profile

Benning Rifles Ready for Third Army Tournament

By Ken Sturzenacker

Some of the post's best basketball players have found places on the Fort Benning team which will represent the post in the Third Army tournament to be held at Fort Bragg, N.C., March 17-21.

The Benning Rifles currently hold a 11-2 record.

The starting five, Bill Whitlock, Pete Anderson, Travis Ragsdale, Frank Everett and Jim Rates, have led the squad to a 97.4 point per game average and held their opponents to 84.4 points per game.

Lt. John W. Williams, Winnfield, La., is coaching the Fort Benning team.

During his twelve years in the service, Williams has seen a variety of positions in sports, both as a player and coach. He played five years of semi-pro football with an Air Force team in Germany while acting as assistant basketball coach for a local team. Stateside, Williams coached a basketball team at Fort Eustis, Va.

He is currently assigned to Company C, 1st Bn., Center Troop Command.

Team captain, Travis Ragsdale, has a solid background in basketball. A native of Piedmont, Ala., Ragsdale was named most valuable player for his high school in Spring Garden, Ala., in 1963, after being named to the all-county team three consecutive years.

The 6-2 Ragsdale has played both forward and guard, and at 205 pounds, adds solid rebounding power to the team. Ragsdale was on the starting five at Berry College, Ga., receiving honors as both the best defensive player and the best hustler on the squad. He is assigned to Center Troop Command's 139th Military Police Company.

Another starter is William H. Whitlock, a 6-3 forward from West Memphis, Ark. He played for Oklahoma University, where he was nominated to the Big Eight All-Star team during his junior year.

Before joining the Army, he tried out with the Atlanta Hawks, but was dropped from their farm team when he injured his leg. He plays both forward and guard, positions he dominates with his size. He is assigned to the Medical Company at Martin Army Hospital.

Shortest man on the team is James A. Rates Jr., a 5-10, 190-pound guard-forward from Louisville, Ky. Size was not a problem for Rates, however, as he was named most valuable player in several tournaments for Central High, Louisville.

Rates, serving with Company B, USB, The Student Brigade, has played basketball with the Army since 1964.

Another guard on the team is Grady Jackson, who is 5-11 and weighs 195. He was named most valuable player for Southwestern High School, Deland, Fla. He also lettered two years while playing for Lane College. He is assigned to Hq. Btry., 2nd Bn., 10th Arty, 197th Inf. Bde.

Frank Everett, at 6-7 and 215 pounds, is the Rifles' newest player and will be starting center for the team. A graduate of E. J. Hayes High, Williamston, N.C., Everett attended Indiana University on a basketball scholarship before being drafted. He is assigned to Co. A, 58th Inf., 197th Inf. Bde.

Peter B. Anderson, a 6-3, 210-pound forward-center, rounds out the starting five. From Lynnbrook, N.Y., Anderson played for Malvern Senior High School and the State University of New York. He was named the NJCAA leader in both rebounds and scoring for two years. Anderson is assigned to the 26th Inf. Platoon, Scout Dogs.

LINEUP . . . Members of the Benning Rifles are practicing for the Third Army basketball tournament to be held at Fort Bragg, N.C., next week. Front row: Jim Rates, Skip Mitchell, Charles Pruitt, Travis Ragsdale, and Grady Jackson. Back row: Kester King, manager; Frank Briggs, Bernell Blunt; Pete Anderson, Bill Whitlock and John Williams, coach. Missing from the picture is Frank Everett.

Bernell Blunt, 6-6, at 228 pounds, attended Phoenix Union High School, Phoenix, Ariz., where he saw action as a center. He now serves with Company A, 197th Spt. Bn.

Just over six feet tall, Charles R. Pruitt played two years for Community College, Chanute Kan. Since joining the Army, Pruitt has played basketball for Fort Lee, Va., where he was named to the post's all star team. He is a member of Hq. Co., 93ist Engr. Gp, Center Troop Command.

Frank Briggs lettered three years at J.S. Abrams High School Bessemer, Ala., and was named most valuable player for Jefferson County during his senior year. After graduation, he played for Miles College. His is with the 20th Engr. Co. (Panel Bridge), part of Center Troop Command's 931st Engr. Gp.

Skip Mitchell, a six-one, 165 pound guard, arrived at Fort Benning in time for the two games at Fort Gordon during the first weekend of the month. From Lawton, Okla., Mitchell played ball for Oklahoma Baptist University before coming into the Army.

His arrival here followed his participation on the Fort Polk, La., team which captured the Fourth Army basketball title last month. He is assigned to Hq. Co., The Student Brigade.

Wigger, Writer Tame Wildcat In Phoenix Western Championship

Shooters of the Marksmen Training Unit's International Rifle team placed 1-2-3 in the Grand Championship and set a new record in the Any sight team match at the Western Wildcat Prone Championship in Phoenix, Ariz., last week.

Firing in top competition Maj. Lones Wigger dropped only six points out of 6400 to win the championship with 6394. He was followed by Army marksmen Lt. John Writer with 6390 and Lt. Philip Bahrman with 6389.

Wigger also won the Iron sight Championship with 3193-252. His teammate Bahrman was second with 3192-223.

In the Any sight Championship Wigger placed second with 3199, one point behind Writer's perfect 3200. Hill from the Marine Corps also fired 3199 for third.

MTU shooters took the top spots in the four daily aggregates. Bahrman won the first day honors with 1596-112. Writer took the second day aggregate with 1600-128, and Wigger cleaned both the third and fourth day aggregates with 1600's each day.

A new record was set in the two-man team any sight championship by Bahrman and MSgt William Krilling. They put together an 800 with 76 V's for the record championship. Writer and Wigger were second in the team match with 800-72.

ROD AND GUN CLUB NEWS

BY BILL KLOEB

In accordance with Change 1, USAIC Regulation 210-2, effective April 1, all post hunting and fishing permits will be issued by the Fort Benning Rod and Gun Club located in Bldg. 4050, Harmony Church. There will be a charge of $1.25 for a temporary (7-day) hunting or fishing permit. One dollar will go to the Post Fish and Game Wildlife Maintenance Association for the protection, conservation and management of fish and wildlife and a 25-cent service charge will go to Rod and Gun to partially defray the administrative costs of issuing the temporary permits.

The Rod and Gun Club will sponsor a fishing derby during the months of April to November. Each month, prizes will be given for the largest bass, catfish and bream. To qualify, members must register at Rod and Gun Club Headquarters before going fishing and must catch the fish in one of the post ponds.

SFC (ret.) Fred Snyder, Columbus, landed a 12 1-2-pound bass at King's Pond last Saturday. He also took a seven pounder from the same place. Snyder was using a bomber lure and fishing from a boat.

This time of the year not many fish are being caught but it seems that when they are the fish is a big one. One of the reasons for this is that most bass anglers wait until early April before wetting a line.

The early season angler will often find himself alone on the water, or be the only bass fisherman around. The best technique for early season fishing is to fish drop-offs and the shallows early in the morning and at dusk. Since the water is still cold at this time of the year, areas should be fished much more slowly than normal.

It takes a lot of study and time to determine the deep places, drop-offs and shallows in a pond covered with several feet of water. Post fishermen can save a lot of that time on the new pond being constructed south of 1st Division Road if they take the time to check it out before it fills. The new pond is about one quarter mile south of 1st Division Road about midway between Rod and Gun Headquarters and the junction of 1st and 8th Division Roads.

Hank Shaw, Sid Dykes, Sonny Dykes and Russel Norris, in that order, are the high four firers on the Rod and Gun Club skeet ladder.

Legislation allowing Georgians to make out-of-state gun purchases has been approved by the Georgia House.

The bill will permit a Georgia resident to go into any adjoining state to buy shotgun or rifle. Federal law prohibits such purchases except by residents of states which have laws allowing it.

Bill Guinn, president of the Chattahoochee Archery Council of the Rod and Gun Club announced that the number of shooters using the indoor archery range is on the increase. The range (Bldg. 2247 in the Airborne troop area) is open from 7:30 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays, and at 10 a.m. Saturdays and Sundays when the weather is inclement.

The Archery Club will hold a local shoot at the Rod and Gun ranges at 1 p.m. April 13. The public is invited.

William Browning, president of the Yuchi Bowmen Club of Opelika has announced that the 1969 Alabama Archery Championship will be held at the Yuchi Club Sept. 6-7.

Boar Team Tops Texas Matches

U. S. Army Running Boar Team from the Marksmanship Training Unit cleaned-up by winning the individual and team matches during the Running Boar Tournament in San Antonio, Tex., last week.

SFC John Kingeter, International distinguished Rifleman, led his teammates to a sweep in the over-all championship with 757. Teammates MSgt. Loyd Crow was second with 741, and SFC Edmund Moeller placed third with 732.

In winning the championship, Kingeter compiled an amazing Fast run aggregate of 372 for the Fast run championship. The Slow run aggregate as won by MTU member SFC Charles Davis with 393.

197th Sports Director Outlines Spring Plans

"Boxing, volleyball, swimming, softball and golf are some of the spring and summer sports activities being arranged for the 197th Infantry Brigade," says 1st Lt. James Fagan, the brigade's Special Services director.

Although various boxers have been working out at Kelley Hill Field House, there is no team training as yet, but Fagan hopes to initiate a smoker team soon that will compete at brigade level.

"Once the 197th gets the ball rolling, I am sure the other brigades will follow," Fagan added.

Fagan's plans include a training camp with all facilities where proper training will be given. He also is hoping a post tournament can be arrange with representatives in each weight division.

"Volleyball is the next company level 197th tournament scheduled," the lieutenant added. "The fan response to the recent basketball tournament was amazing, and I am sure that volleyball will fare as well."

Swimming, softball and golf events will start in late spring with a brigade level team being organized in softball.

Golf enthusiasts may enter 197th tournaments scheduled this summer with prizes awarded to the top finishers.

Chess Champion Speaks March 23

Thomas A. Nard, nationally known chess figure from Columbus, will give a demonstration of Chess Board Magic, March 23 at 3:30 p.m. at the Kelley Hill Service Club.

He will also give secrets behind The Chess Opening, after which he will play simultaneous chess on several boards at once.

Nard will also speak on "How to Start a Club," during his visit here.

This activity has been organized for enlisted men as well as other military personnel and civilians in the club and there is no admission charge.

Nard is the 1967 City Champion in Chess and president of the Georgia Chess Association. In addition, he is the United States Chess Federation Director and Vice-President of the Columbus Chess Club.

GEN. WRIGHT, COL. PIPER INSPECT BATTALION-SIZE CANDIDATE REVIEW

AUSA Week Celebrated

"Association of the U.S. Army Week," proclaimed in both Columbus and Phenix City, will end officially Saturday.

Mayors J. R. Allen of Columbus and John Anthony of Phenix City presented their copies of their proclamations to Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr. in a ceremony at Infantry Hall March 6.

In the same ceremony, Louis T. Kunze, president of the AUSA chapter, presented a membership card to the 1,500th civilian member of the chapter, Aldine R. Rosser, assistant administrator of the Medical Center in Columbus.

In their proclamation, the two mayors urged the citizens of their communities to "join in this salute to the chapter for its efforts to join the military and civilian worlds in a common goal of a stronger and greater America."

The presentation of the membership card to Rosser, of 5866 Windsor Drive, set the stage for a one-day membership "blitz" of the two communities, which was held Tuesday.

OCS Looks Ahead

Fort Meade, Md., were both recognized as being members of the first graduating class of OCS. Gen. Wright also introduced Lt. Gen. (ret.) Reuben Jenkins of Columbus, who at the time of the founding of OCS was operations officer of the War Department general staff.

New second lieutenants receiving recognition for their outstanding performance in 64th Company were the distinguished and honor academic graduate of the class, Thomas J. Maynard, and honor graduates William L. Toten, William M. Robinson Jr., and Paul F. Papette.

Following the graduation ceremony a large audience obseved an impressive review of more than 1,500 Infantry officer candidates. The review was inspected by Gen. Wright and Col. Robert M. Piper, commanding officer of The Candidate Brigade.

The Infantry School was presented citations during a luncheon honoring the School on the OCS milestone. Presented to Gen. Wright for the School was the National Certificate of Achievement for "outstanding contributions to national defense" presented by the National Headquarters of the AUSA. The presentation was made by Louis T. Kunze, president of the Columbus - Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter.

The military affairs committee of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce also prepared a citation to the School presented by Jim Woodruff Jr., chairman of the Military Affairs Committee.

AUSA Letter To USAIS

CITATION FOR EXCEPTIONAL SERVICE IN SUPPORT OF NATIONAL DEFENSE TO THE UNITED STATES ARMY INFANTRY SCHOOL, FORT BENNING, Ga., for outstanding achievement in training and commissioning one hundred thousand second lieutenants from the Officers Candidate School. As an important and integral part of the Army's training program, the Infantry School has furnished the U.S. Army with exceptionally well-trained highly motivated, and extremely dedicated junior officers for World War II, the Korean War and the war in Southeast Asia. In each instance, when our country's need was great, the awesome responsibility of preparing future Army leaders was placed on the Infantry School and the responsibility was accepted, the challenge was met, the outcome was outstanding. We salute the Infantry School and the dedicated men and women who have served this school and have vastly contributed to the National Defense of the United States of America.

Col. Greene Leaves USAIS

Col. Byron D. Greene Jr. leaves his post as Secretary of the Infantry School today in preparation for assignment as a brigade commander with the 1st Cav. Div. (Airmobile) in Vietnam. Succeeding Col. Green as secretary is Col. Billy M. Vaughn, Deputy Director of Brigade and Battalion Operations of the Infantry School.

Col. Greene will attend Vietnam Orientation here next week prior to moving his family to South Carolina. He expects to be in Vietnam by April 23.

The staff of the Secretary's office honored Col. and Mrs. Greene Sunday night with a farewell dinner attended by Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Sidney B. Berry and Col. and Mrs. Billy M. Vaughn.

Col. Greene has served in four positions at the Infantry School since being assigned here in July 1965. He became chairman of the Defense Committee of Brigade and Battalion Operations in July 1965 and in January 1967 became chief of the Tactics Group of the same department. He assumed duties as Chief of the Curriculum Division, Office of the Director of Instruction in August 1967.

"The Infantry School is an immense operation," Col. Greene said. "It is amazing how with an increased work load at the School the proportionately small staff is able to do a consistent better job of teaching," he added.

5 Groups Give To Health Fund

Five groups have reached the goal of 100 per cent participation in the joint National Health Agenices and International Service Agencies fund drive.

Since the drive began the USAIC Command Group, the Education Development office, Supply Center, Airborne Department and Department of Non - resident Instruction have achieved maximum participation.

'Bewitching Hour' Re-Up (Yawn) Time

When Sp4 Charles Honeycutt reenlisted at midnight he wasn't trying to be the first on Feb. 11.

All he wanted was to get home in a hurry.

Regulations say a man must be sworn in on the day he enlists. Nothing must stand in the way — not even an emergency leave.

So at one minute past midnight, Honeycutt raised his right hand as his commander, Capt. Darrell Carlton, Co. D, 197th Spt. Bn., administered the oath. Then he was on his way home — and regulations observed.

"I had to try to help him to leave as soon as possible," said the captain later when explaining why he and the 197th Infantry Brigade's career counseler, MSgt. Harold Woodward, stayed up late for the midnight ceremonies.

Former Aide Killed

Capt. William R. Black, 27, former aide-de-camp to Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr. at Fort Benning, has been killed in Vietnam.

According to reports, Black was killed in action shortly after midnight on March 8 while serving as a battalion intelligence officer in the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile).

The captain, a member of the U. S. Military Academy's 1964 graduating class, had been in Vietnam less than a month on his second combat tour there. On his first tour, he had served as an advisor to the Vietnamese airborne brigade.

He was Gen. Wright's aide from March, 1968, until Jan. 6, 1969.

Black's widow, Ann, and a son, Geoffrey, 2, are residing in Columbus.

Burial will be at West Point, N.Y.

Jr. Officers Board Studies 'Dropouts'

Commissioning, two years active duty and separation. That is the familiar pattern for most junior officers.

To find out why and recommend corrective action is the purpose of the Fort Benning Company Grade Officers Council. The council was established in August on a temporary basis and was later made permanent and established on a CONUS wide basis.

Since its first meeting, the council has made recommendations in the areas of Education, Hospital Care and Service, Finance Activities, Post Housing, Officers Open Mess, and Commissary Activities.

Council meetings are held monthly and generally last approximately 3 hours.

Airmobile Test Resembles 'The Real Thing' for OCs

By Spc Mike Smith

With a burst of automatic weapons fire and the roar of helicopters making an approach to a landing zone, students of the Officer Candidate School adjusted their gear and prepared to put weeks of training to practical use.

They were engaged in a field exercise in which candidates at Fort Benning and student pilots from Fort Rucker, Ala., combine efforts as part of their final training for commissions and warrants.

Once the helicopters were airborne with their payload of troops, there was an air of excitement for the men. For many, this was the first time that they had flown in a helicopter.

When the word was passed that they were nearing the new landing zone the men readied to meet the "enemy" that was guarding an ammunition cache which the candidates were to find and capture.

The maneuver is designed to give the men an idea of problems encountered in actual combat. Every phase of the problem was realistic. The only difference was that the men fired blanks instead of live rounds.

The day-long problem is an actual airmobile insertion in which the candidates are picked up from one landing zone and inserted into another landing zone to locate and capture an enemy position.

This training program enables both the candidates and the student pilots to put to use the weeks of prior training in combat airmobile assaults.

For the Infantry OCs it is part of seven days of field exercises in Quitman County, 50 miles southwest of Fort Benning.

Throughout the seven days, the candidates put classroom teachings into field use by conducting search and clear operations, night ambush patrols and area reconnaissance patrols, and locating enemy positions and strongholds.

More Men To Become Rangers?

Three more branches of the Army may require newly commissioned Regular Army officers to undergo Ranger Training, based on a study recommendation of the Office of Personnel Operations at the Pentagon.

The OPO is staffing the recommendation to require the eight-week course, which begins at Fort Benning, for those commissioned in Air Defense Artillery, Military Intelligence and Military Police branches.

At present, only those RA officers in the branches of Infantry, Armor, Field Artillery, Signal Corps and Combat Engineers are required to complete Ranger training.

The enrollment increase in the course would not present any instructional staff problems if the requirement were made, according to Col. Y. Y. Phillips Jr., commanding officer of the Ranger Department here.

Present enrollment figure anticipated for the coming year is 2,511 students. Capacity of the program is 3,080 annually, with a maximum of 220 students in 14 classes throughout the year.

Physical requirements of the program have been reduced in one area of the Awards Ceremony

Major Receives DSC; 13 Get Silver Star

Twelve officers and three enlisted men received awards for heroism and gallantry in action from Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., Fort Benning commander, in ceremonies Monday on York Field.

The Distinguished Service Cross, the nation's second highest decoration for valor, was awarded to Maj. Craig H. Boice of the 21st Co., TSB, for heroic action on Feb. 14, 1968, in Vietnam.

On that date, Boice was on a reconnaissance-in-force operation about three kilometers southwest of Can Tho in Phong Dinh Province.

When his company came under a ground attack, Boice darted ahead toward the enemy. After hurling several hand grenades, he managed to silence an automatic weapon and kill five Viet Cong.

The Communists then made a second assault on the American position. During this attack, Boice shot four Viet Cong and, by directing artillery fire to within 50 meters of his position, managed to repulse the enemy.

After a third assault had been repelled, Boice called

Color Film Released

A 24-minute color film, "The Spirit of Fort Benning," has been released by the Army Pictorial Center.

"The film captures the human side of the military community," explained Lt. Col. Douglas H. Tucker, Post Information Officer. "It depicts both the military training and community life of our post. It's an excellent orientation to Fort Benning."

The Information Office expects to have eight copies of the 16mm film available next week to units, schools, clubs, and civic organizations.

"Army film crews began shooting last May after months of advanced planning," said John W. Gause, project officer for for an ambulance helicopter. The ship landed amid a hail of small arms fire during which he picked up the most seriously wounded man and ran to the ambulance ship. After the other casualties had been withdrawn within the perimeter, the major continued to direct artillery fire on the enemy until they withdrew.

The Silver Star and the Soldier's Medal were presented to Capt. Waldo D. Freeman Jr., of the 27th Co.

Other Silver Star recipients were Capt. Douglas A. Alitz, Capt. Julious F. Johnson, Capt. Robert D. Frazier and Capt. Ronald L. Sheffield, all of whom arr with the 27th Co., Maj. Jerry M. To increase the sensation of combat, teams of enemy aggressors are in constant search of the candidates, trying to catch them with their guard down.

Throughout the maneuver the candidates were critiqued and advised by members of the Patrolling Committee of the Infantry School Ranger Department. The Rangers told the candidates of various problems they might encounter in combat and how to react to such problems.

Physical Combat Proficiency Test formerly requiring a total score of 325 points. The new requirement calls for only 300 points for a passing score, in addition to water survival requirements.

In addition to the PCPT test score of 300 or better, the applicant must have successfully negotiated a 50-meter swim test. No time limit is set on this test.

The Ranger Department emphasized the importance of unit commanders sending students to the program certify the applicant's successful completion of both the PCPT and swim tests. A certificate attesting to the applicant's successful completion of both is required.

ing military leadership.

Grady explains the events leading to his publicity as circumstantial: "They had scheduled a good-looking lieutenant to pose, but he was not available at the time, so they got me instead."

"It's really something being a 'national celebrity'," says Graves. "I can't wait to hear the reaction of the guys back home. I told my mom to buy a dozen copies."

The advertisement, along with a similar one scheduled to appear in subsequent issues of Sports Illustrated, Time and Newsweek, is sponsored by the Department of the Army and produced by N. W. Ayer, a Philadelphia-based agency.

the filming. "Most people don't realize the time and effort that goes into producing a film of this length."

A 12-hour day and hundreds of man hours of coordinating, staging, editing, and shooting may be required to produce a single minute of film the public finally views.

"We used some stock shots in the training sequences but even they required reviewing thousands of feet of film before we picked out the right ones," according to Gause.

The 10,000 feet of film shot locally was edited down to 3,000 feet that appear in the film.

"The film was produced with the anticipation that it will be used in the nationally televised Army Big Picture series," said Gause.

Groups interested in obtaining the film for viewing may call the Public Information Office at 545-2034 or 545-3301.

UNDESIRABLE

If you receive an undesirable discharge, can you get it changed by petitioning the Department of the Army if you keep a clean record for a year after you get out?

Byline Bayonet contacted Capt. Roger H. Sirlin of the Staff Judge Advocate's office. He states it is "absolutely false to believe an undesirable discharge will be changed to an honorable or general discharge as a result of good conduct in civilian life."

To reverse the undesirable discharge you must prove there was an error in the original findings which in Sirlin words is "virtually impossible".

Any reconsideration of a case must be applied for within three years after the discharge on DD Form 149 and sent to the Army Board of Correction of Military Records in Washington D. C.

PUBLICATION BANS

Reference change to AR 210-10, which gives the local commander authority to delay distribution of any publication which he considers undesirable because it presents a clear danger to the loyalty, discipline or morale of his troops

1. Is this regulation change designed to keep off post mainly such things as underground newspapers advocating resistance to the draft or military service, use of marijuana, etc.?

2. What publications do you know of that have been banned from specific posts?

The subject regulation change replaces an earlier regulation which permitted commanders to control distribution of literature at their installations. The change goes beyond the earlier regulation in that commanders must now report to DA if they withhold distribution of a publication. Some underground newspapers could be considered in the undesirable category.

Distribution of the August 1968 issue of Esquire was temporarily restricted at Ft. Hood. A decision by a member of the staff to restrict distribution at normal outlets was reversed by the Commanding General there after the matter came to his personal attention.

SUMMER UNIFORM

When is the turn over from Winter to Summer uniforms taking place?

The changeover date for summer uniform wear is April 7.

Olin Teague, Texas, Texas A & M Univ., 1932.

Planned parenthood fights world poverty and hunger

The shantytowns encircle every major city across Latin America. Spilling down the hillsides, spreading over the gullies and barren fields. They crowd up to the walls of modern hotels and office skyscrapers.

Alive with children, these pathetic communities of countless one-room shacks are usually without water, sewers, paved streets or schools. They contain 45 million of Latin America's 260 million people. (Another 50 million live in rural slums.)

The explosion of growth taking place throughout Latin America is matched in the less developed countries of Asia and Africa as well. Everywhere in these lands, a desperate race is under way — between a spiraling population and the food, schools, housing, jobs and health care required to meet its needs.

As President Johnson and other national leaders have warned, it is a race that is being lost.

If present trends continue, the world's population of about 3.5 billion will more than double by the year 2000. Most of this growth — nearly 90 per cent — will occur in the poor nations of Asia, Africa and Latin America.

Planned Parenthood, the pioneer family planning organization, has proved through its voluntary programs that parents in the developing countries want to limit the size of their families. They want to exercise this basic human right in order to achieve a better life for themselves and their children. And they are quick to take advantage of family planning help when services are offered conveniently, economically and with dignity.

In over 100 nations around the world, Planned Parenthood is working now to bring them this assistance. In some countries, Planned Parenthood acts together with national and local governments; in many others, small and struggling Planned Parenthood groups offer the only help available.

But this is just a beginning. In the less developed countries, at any given time, some 350 million poor women are deprived of the family planning aid they want and need. As a result, they are having 30 million unplanned babies each year — and probably one-half as many again illegal, often, self - induced abortions, with a high toll of mothers' lives and health.

Your contribution to Planned Parenthood will help to support and expand voluntary family planning programs everywhere in the world. And by reducing the pressures caused by overpopulation, hunger and poverty, your investment in family planning can provide the foundation for peaceful world progress.

Golden Anniversary Year Of Ordnance Association

The American Ordnance Association has begun a Golden Anniversary Year of meetings and special events.

Observance of the 50th year began at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md. on October 10, 1968, when AOA held its annual Defense Preparedness Meeting. It was there the Association was founded in 1919, when the Proving Ground was itself just a year old.

Meetings and special events, to honor the men and companies which have contributed to the work AOA has accomplished, will continue through this year, closing with the 51st meeting at Nellis Air Force Base, Nev., on Oct. 2.

As part of the year's events, AOA is conducting a Golden Anniversary Membership Campaign to bring the Association and its work to the attention of others, particularly those on active duty.

The prime function of the association is advancing the technical knowledge required to design, produce and maintain superior weapons for our nation's defense. To this end, AOA devotes the talents and skills of 47,000 members.

Membership consists of executives, engineers, scientists, and a core of officers, enlisted personnel, civilian engineers from the armed forces, and representatives of other government agencies involved in the Association's programs and activities.

It has established, in its Technology and Management Advisory Service, over one hundred Divisions and Sections, staffed with representatives from industries and civilian and representatives from the armed services.

Their know-how and experience is made available at no direct cost to the government.

ACA maintains a network of more than 50 chapters throughout the country to keep members in touch with defense activities at the local level.

It provides its members with various publications: ORDNANCE Magazine, the bi-monthly journal of the Association; THE COMMON DEFENSE, a monthly bulletin, and ARMAMENT, a newsletter. Membership in the American Ordnance Association is open to any American citizen who is interested in preparedness—both military and industrial.

Dues are $7 a year or $17.50 for three years, and are tax deductible. Officers, enlisted men and civilians attached to Military Commands will find membership particularly useful for keeping abreast of new weapons developments, and in touch with the complex science-industry-military teamwork that produces these weapons.

Those interested in joining should contact the American Ordnance Association at the Transportation Building, Washington,

Wives Club to Elect Officers at Spring Luncheon

A single slate of nominees will be presented to OWC members at their spring luncheon on Wednesday, April 2nd for election to 1969-70 offices.

Mrs. James Morris Jr., current president, announced that although the nominating committee under the chairmanship of Mrs. Sidney Berry has selected one nominee for each office, nominations from the floor will be welcomed, provided the nominee has given prior consent.

Mrs. Malcolm Baer, the nominee for president, has been at Fort Benning for a year. She has worked in staff aide assignments with the Red Cross and was a member of the Motor Corps. Mrs. Baer is an avid golf player and is a former president of the OWC Ladies' Golf Group.

Nominee for first vice-president is Mrs. Robert La Monte, who has been at Fort Benning since 1964. Mrs. La Monte is presently serving as president of the OWC Bowling League and is active in both the golf group and the ceramic studio. At first vice-president, she will serve as the chairman for all OWC activities and classes.

Mrs. James Wheaton, nominated for second vice-president, has been here since August 1967. She has experience as a volunteer Red Cross worker and enjoys golf. As second vice - president, Mrs. Wheaton will serve as the OWC ways and means chairman.

Mrs. Charles Reidenbaugh has been re-nominated for third vice-president. In this position she serves as chairman for the Thrift Shop. Mrs. Reidenbaugh has been here over a year, and is active in OWC classes and the Unit Commanders' Wives' Group.

Mrs. James Heathcock is the nominee for recording secretary. Although she has only been here eight months, she is an active OWC member and a volunteer at the Thrift Shop. While stationed at Darmstadt, Germany, she served as OWC secretary.

Nominated for coresponding secretary is Mrs. Richard Thrower, who is the Graphic Arts chairman on the present OWC Board. Mrs. Thrower arrived here two years ago and is a member of PWOC and a Sunday school teacher.

Mrs. William Riggs, nominated for treasurer, served as president of the OWC Bowling League two years ago. She is most familiar with OWC activities. Mrs. Riggs was a Red Cross volunteer for ten years and is a past secretary-bookkeeper of the Oklahoma Education Association.

Mrs. Ray Kampe, presently serving as custodian, has been re-nominated for the same position.

From Poisonings

Parents Able to Prevent Tragedies in the Home

There are many names for poison. Some of them are 'aspirin', 'bye', 'bug killer', 'furniture polish' and 'drugs'. Their victims have names like 'George', 'Mary', 'Johnny' and 'Alice'. Hundreds of thousands of children are involved every year in accidental poisonings. Many of these tragedies can be prevented.

This is Poison Prevention Week, an annual national observance proclaimed by the President to call the public's attention to the dangers of accidental poisoning and to suggest methods for reducing the toll of injuries and deaths.

Children under five are the principal victims of accidental poisonings according to the National Clearinghouse for Poison Control Centers. In 1967 the Clearinghouse reports more than 72,000 children under 5 accidentally swallowed potentially harmful substances.

Aspirin, both adult and children's, is implicated in a large percentage of accidental ingestions. Aspirin is one item found in practically every home. Often, it is left on the bedside table, or the kitchen counter, within easy reach of a youngster. Often, too, children have heard the flavored aspirin called "candy" by their parents — and candy it becomes, taken without permission. Another predisposing factor is children's tendency to imitate what their parents do and taking aspirin is an oft-viewed occurrence.

Locked up poisons prevent tragedy. A locked place for medicines may be a dresser drawer, a linen closet, a suitcase — any storage area that can be locked. Storage patterns should be related to the growth and development process of a child. He crawls, he becomes a toddler, then climbs. He is agile, ingenious and mobile; his parents must be his match.

Internal medicines should be stored separately from other household substances. Not only may there be similarities in the design and composition of containers, but the colors, consistencies, even odor, may possibly be duplicated. There is the possibility of reaching for one bottle and grasping the one alongside of it, the one that may be poisonous.

Chef's Corner

Well, it might as well be spring. There's the spring housecleaning, the spring gardening, and Spring Fever. That's where the busy housewife comes in. How can she prepare all her meals and still have time to be outside? Perhaps these suggestions for meals in a dash will help.

Quick Spanish Rice

½ cup chopped green pepper
1 1-3 cups pre-cooked rice
½ cup dried chopped onion
3 Tablespoons fat
1 beef bouillon cube
1¾ cups hot water
2 8-ounce cans (2 cups) seasoned tomato sauce
1 can luncheon meat (cut in thin strips)

Cook green pepper, onion and rice in hot fat, stirring constantly until lightly browned. Dissolve bouillon in hot water; add to rice along with the tomato sauce and meat; mix. Bring to a boil; reduce heat and simmer uncovered 5 minutes or until rice is tender. Makes 5 servings.

Rhubarb Custard Pie

1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
2 eggs
3 cups rhubarb (½ inch pieces)

Line a pie plate with rich pastry. Mix sugar and cornstarch; stir into well beaten egg yolks. Fill crust with rhubarb; pour sugar mixture over it. Bake in 350 degree ovem 50-60 minutes. Cover with meringue if desired.

Onionbread in a Skillet

1 8-oz package biscuit mix
¾ cup water
1 tablespoon dehydrated minced onion
Grated Parmesan cheese
Paprika

Add onion to biscuit mix. Combine egg and water; pour over mix and stir only until blended. Spread batter evenly in a well greased 10" skillet. Sprinkle generously with Parmesan cheese. Sprinkle top with paprika. Bake in 350 degree oven 12-15 minutes.

More Than a Flower

Wives Hear Lecture on Narcotics

The wives of students in Infantry Officer Advanced Class No. 3-69 met in the Supper Club as guests of the 3rd Platoon for luncheon and a lecture on drug abuse by Steve Ross of the Fort Benning Provost Marshal's Office.

Mrs. Lou D. Marlowe, wife of Col. Marlowe, the Student Brigade commander; Mrs. Kenneth West, mother of Mrs. Howard Prince; and Mrs. William Brown, and Mrs. Louis Scipioni were special guests.

The Supper Club was decorated with wall murals and table arrangements of colorful poppies. In his presentation, Ross made it clear that the poppy is more than a flower. He discussed the dangers to physical and mental health inherent in the misuse of narcotics such as amphetamines, barbiturates, marijuana, heroin and LSD. During the program, the ladies saw a film about the plight of a narcotic addict and were introduced to the odor of marijauna smoke.

The wives of the 3rd Platoon prepared for the affair under the direction of Mrs. Myrtis Roach, wife of Maj. Roach, the platoon leader. Among those responsible for the success of the function were Mrs. Earnest Menezes, chairman of the program committee; Mrs. Raymond Miller, chairman, and Mrs. John Morgan, Mrs. Juan Montes, Mrs. S. C. McPherson, of the invitations and nametag committee.

Local TV Programer Speaks to Wives Group

Television programmers want to know the public's interests. The methods of finding public interest were explained to the Medical Dept. Activities Wives Club by Mr. William Schafer, assistant director of Public Affairs for WRBL TV.

Programming for television is a job involving professional criticism, surveys, cards and letters from viewers, and the judgment of the programmer. Mr. Schafer emphasized the fact that surveys are the only accurate means of knowing public interest.

WRBL produced a program on the American Indians that rain-for one week on the "Rozell Show." The program so impressed the Bureau of American Indians that they made a one-hour documentary film on the program with Will Rogers Jr. as narrator.

In his concluding remarks, Mr. Schafer recognized the good relationship between Fort Benning and Columbus. Local interest in the Fort Benning personnel was displayed recently by successfully changing the method of informing families of Vietnam casualties. Many retired servicemen have settled in Columbus making the relationship an even closer one.

APO Wives Coffee

The APO Wives (formerly Waiting Wives) Coffee will be held March 25th at Teen Square beginning at 9:30. All wives of men stationed overseas are invited to come. Maj. Jackson C. Stevens will present a program including slides of many areas of Viet Nam.

APO Wives Coffees are sponsored by Army Community Services. Mrs. William J. Cushing is group chairman and Mrs. Wm. E. Bradshaw is co-chairman. For additional information contact Army Community Services at 545-4043 or 545-7813.

2nd Student Bn. Wives Meet for First Coffee

NCO and enlisted wives of the 2nd Student Bn., TSB met at the Hospitality House for their first coffee. Hostesses were Mrs. Spurgeon O. Sizemore, wife of Battalion CSM Spurgeon Sizemore and Mrs. Jessie Sheppard, wife of SFC Jessie Sheppard.

A St. Patricks Day theme was carried out with shamrocks for name tags and an Irish top hat filled with spring flowers for a centerpiece. The hostesses also provided a green and white cake in the form of a shamrock.

Those attending were Mrs. Wilbur S. Thiel, wife of Lt. Col. Wilbur S. Thiel, commanding officer of the 2nd Student Bn., Mrs. Wendell O. Doody, wife of Maj. Wendell O. Doody, 2nd Student Bn. executive officer, Mrs. Charles Fletcher, wife of post CSM Charles Fletcher, Mrs. Winston S. Kelley, Army Community Services assistant Chairman of Volunteers and Mrs. Clyde Yelton, wife of SFC Clyde C. Yelton.

Small unit coffees are being encouraged by Army Community Services among NCO wives so that they have the opportunity to meet other wives in their husband's unit and feel more unit "Esprit de Corp".

"The Wearing of the Green" was the order of the evening at the NCO Wives Club St. Patrick's Dance, at the Sand Hill Club. Mrs. Robert Meeks, chairman of the dance and her assistants, Mrs. Eugene Sides and Mrs. Kenneth Simpson presented green and white flowers to each guest. A buffet of German food was served and dancing followed with music provided by "The Reflections".

Post CSM Charles Fletcher drew for the door prize which was won by Mrs. Edward Higdon.

PWOC to Hold Special Easter Study Program

A special Easter program will be presented at the regular monthly meeting of the USAIC Protestant Women of the Chapels, Chaplain (Maj.) Everett Thomas will present a chalk-talk with the drawing of the events of Easter morning. His message will be centered on two questions: "Why weepest thou?" and "Whom seekest thou?".

The meeting will be held at the Religious Education Center, Bldg. 2605, Dixie Road on Wednesday. The coffee hour will begin at 9:30 a.m. and the program at 10. The public is invited to attend. A free nursery will be provided upstairs in Bldg. 2606.

One of the important projects of the USAIC Chaper of PWOC is assistant to the American Cancer Society in the preparation of supplies for indigent cancer patients. The meeting to work on this project will be held on April 3 from 9:30-11 a.m. at the Religious Education Center. All ladies are urged to comeition and assist in this worthwhile endeavor.

For further information call 545-4334 or 545-7413.

Mrs. James R. Barnett will lead a discussion on prayer at the regular monthly meeting of the Evening Chapter of Protestant Women of the Chapel on Monday at the Religious Education Center. The program begins at 7:30 p.m. and will be followed by a coffee hour.

Mrs. Barnett is the wife of Chaplain (Lt. Col.) James R. Barnett, Army Training Center Chaplain. She is a native of Virginia and is a graduate of Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth, Tex. Before her marriage she worked at the Rachel Sims Mission in New Orleans, La. At present, Mrs. Barnett teaches a class in the Wednesday Ladies' Bible Study Group and a Young Adult class on Sunday morning at the Religous Education Center.

Admiral Heads Group Studying Abolition of Draft

(Commander's Digest)

Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird, at a press conference, unveiled an action program aimed at development an all-volunteer force.

The briefing on an all-volunteer force, to be known as "Project Volunteer," was handled by Vice Adm. William Mack, Acting Assistant Secretary of Defense (M&RA) who began by noting that President Nixon has made his ultimate goals concerning the draft quite clear.

"He has stated his conviction," Adm. Mack said, "that the only long-run solution to the problem of draft inequity is to end the need for the draft itself; that is, to move to an all-volunteer force."

Continuing, Adm. Mack said: "The President has also provided a number of important guidelines. First of all, this objective applies to the period after our involvement in the Vietnam war is behind us and when our military manpower requirements can be safely reduced. Secondly, he recognized the need to keep the draft system in being on a standby basis in case of some future emergency.

"In addition, the President has cautioned that it could not be ended all at once but would have to be phased out so that at every step we can be certain of maintaining our required defense strength.

"Since we will still have to utilize the draft for some period of time, be also recognized the shortterm need to improve existing draft selection procedures."

Adm. Mack said there were two major objectives: 1—To describe proposals for dealing with the draft." Adm. Mack said, "that is to move to an all-volunteer force."

Adm. Mack said there were two major objectives: 1—To describe proposals for dealing with the long - term objectives of moving to an all-volunteer force, and 2—to suggest procedures for improving the present draft selection system.

To accomplish the first of these objectives, he said, two steps have been taken. First, the President has announced his intention to establish a Commission on the All-Volunteer Force. The report of this commission would be submitted to the Secretary of Defense for review and tions.

At the same time, Adm. Mack continued, the President has directed that the Department of Defense proceed at full speed with its own efforts to move in the direction of an all-volunteer force, as described in a study plan which we have identified as "Project Volunteer."

In addition to developing its own action program and recommendations, the Department of Defense studies under "Project Volunteer" would, of course, be made available concurrently to the Presidential Commission with such other material as the Commission may require.

Adm. Mack said he would like to give an indication of the magnitude of the problem and then showed a chart showing what he referred to as the voluntary recruitment gap.

"In the current fiscal year," he said, "we will require a total of 1,650,000 manpower accessions from civilian life to maintain the authorized strength of both our regular and reserve forces. The draft will directly provide only about one-fourth of this number—about 260,000 according to our latest estimates.

"We plan to recruit nearly 600,000 regular enlistees for active duty and an additional 130,000 into the National Guard and other Reserve components. Another 60,000 men will enter military service through the various officer and officer candidate programs. However, from a number of surveys conducted over the past several years, we must conclude that a majority of all entrants under the so-called voluntary programs are entering service because of the draft."

Adm. Mack said the proportion represented an estimated 40 per cent of volunteers for active duty in the early 1960's.

"It probably represents," he said, "about 60 per cent of the much larger numbers we are recruiting today. In the case of Reserve enlistments, our earlier surveys, before Vietnam, show that over 70 per cent of these enlistments were draft motivated."

He said the current proportion is also probably much higher. The current annual voluntary recruitment gap, including both draftees and draft motivated volunteers, is about 750,000.

The admiral said there has been no responsible study which has suggested that this current gap could be filled on an all-volunteer basis.

Most informed observers who have worked in developing this study, he said, agreed that no simple approach, such as simply raising military pay for new volunteers, could close the gap. "We would have to attempt to move forward in a coordinated way on many fronts," he said.

Kroon Named Top NCO Grad

Verlyn Kroon, Boyden, Iowa, was named the distinguished graduate of Noncommissioned Officer Candidate Course Class No. 22-69 at graduation exercises in Marshall Auditorium March 10.

Kroon, who was promoted to staff sergeant, received a letter of commendation from Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the Infantry School; and Association of the United States Army plaque and an engraved "Follow Me" statuette.

Guest speaker at the graduation was SFC Lacy Hamilton, senior tactical officer of the 83rd Co., NCOC.

The class included 101 new sergeants, members of the 81st Co., 8th Stu. Bn., the Candidate Brigade.

More Lawyers Needed for Special Courts-Martial

By PFC David J. Wynne

Important changes in the Uniform Code of Military Justice, which recently have been made by Congress, are going to have a tremendous effect on the future administration of military justice, explains Maj. LeRoy F. Foreman, chief of the Military Justice division of the Staff Judge Advocate Section here.

Foreman pointed out that, as of Aug. 1 of this year, accused individuals at special courts-martial will have the right to have attorneys appointed by the Army to represent them. At the present time, this right is afforded to persons being tried by general courts-martial.

"The Army has plans to take on an additional 400 lawyers in the Judge Advocate General's Corps, raising the total to 1,300," said Foreman in explaining the steps being taken to meet the requirement of supplying lawyers at the special court-martial level.

So far the plans call for 43 additional JAGC barristers to be assigned to the Third Army area, but the exact number to be assigned to Fort Benning has not been determined.

"No matter how many more men we get, they are sure to be busy," said Foreman. "We are required to supply attorneys for only the 61 General Court-Martial which were held here last year. In the 13 active Special court-martial jurisdictions on this Post, we had over 1,500 cases in 1968, and in some of these cases did the accused have the right to have an Army-supplied lawyer to aid in the defense. Of course, all of this is going to change in August.

"We are having troubles predicting how many men facing charges before a special court-martial will actually elect to have an appointed attorney. The Army has conducted two pilot programs, with one resulting in only 50 per cent of the defendants requesting attorneys and the other having 80 per cent of the accused asking for the aid."

Capt. Peter N. Harrison, Legal Officer of The Candidate Brigade, pointed out that, while the Army presently does not supply lawyers for the special court-martial defendant, still it does offer him a great

PRATO TOUCHES UP DEER'S HEAD
Hobby May Become Profession

Wildlife Fancier Knows His Stuff

By Bill Hardin

A food inspection specialist assigned to the post Veterinary Clinic hopes to make a profession of his childhood hobby, taxidermy, upon completion of his service with the Army.

Sp5 Paul Prato of Revere, Mass., has many of his mounted animals on display in the office of the clinic.

Prato, 22, first developed an interest in taxidermy as a high school student eight years ago. He answered an advertisement in a magazine and was enrolled in a correspondence course.

"I have always had an interest in wildlife," he said. After about eight months of study, he had completed his correspondence course and moved up from using his mother's scissors and kitchen knives to working with a set of surgical tools.

Though mounting is just a hobby for the present, the New Englander plans to make it a career following completion of his three-year hitch.

Prato has mounted about 40 animals in the past two years and is anxious to get at the job on a full time basis.

The first animal he mounted was a chipmunk's head, he said. "I shot the animal with a .22 hollow point rifle slug, and it blew his body apart, so I just had the head to mount.

"Since that first chipmunk, there have been snakes, raccoons, deer, pheasants, turtles, fish, fox, rabbits and other small animals," he added.

He requires only a small work area and his tools fit in a small box, easily carried about.

He has experience with both large and small animals, but prefers to work with the larger types.

"The larger animals are easier. The average time required to work on an animal, especially a small animal, is about four to five hours," Prato said.

"After the original work, the drying requires a couple of weeks, and then comes the final touch-up before the animal is ready

Teams Cooperate in Hide 'N Seek

CHU LAI, Vietnam (AMERICAL 10) — Hide N' Seek is a familiar game, but specially trained Americal Division combat teams have added a new twist, developing an effective tactic to invade isolated VC hideways.

The new maneuver involves the coordination and special skills of three groups — ranger patrols, Aero Scouts of the 123rd Aviation Battalion, and tracker dog teams. Together, they form a highly mobile, quick reaction force that had moderate success on its first field test.

Acting on information gathered from one ranger team working in mountainous country 15 kilometers southwest of Chu Lai, the combined teams air assaulted into the area where a Viet Cong base camp and ammunition dump had been spotted.

"We were hopeful of catching the enemy while he was still in the area, but he had bugged out by the time we arrived," said Sgt. John Dane, an Americal ranger team leader. "All the VC had left behind were two base camps, empty caves where they had sorted ammunition, and a lot of mines and booby traps."

There were no contacts during the day, and no American casualties from the mines or booby traps.

"The three groups worked beautifully together," said 1st Lt. George R. Blake, an Aero Scout platoon leader, "and I would like to get with them again on similar operations. Our combined skills are effective in this type terrain."

The ranger teams usually operate as small teams in enemy territory, observing troop movements and directing artillery fire on large concentrations of personnel.

The Aero Scouts are also one of the division's reconnaissance units, but with more men and firepower than the ranger teams. The Aero Scouts patrol the Americal Division area with light observation helicopters, followed by Huey helicopters carrying "Warlords," infantrymen assigned to the unit. Cobra helicopter gunships cruise close by to support the infantrymen once they are on the ground.

The tracker dog teams are made up of well-trained Labrador retrievers and men who are trained as visual trackers.

"Once the rangers had located the enemy, we all swooped in," 1st Lt. Blake related. "The only things we were able to uncover, though, were a shotgun, a few documents, some small arms ammo and one bloody bandage, still wet."

After the Americal troopers swept through the first company size base camp, the dogs and trackers located a fresh trail. "We knew it was fresh because there were only two booby traps on it," Sgt. Dane explained.

The trail led into a smaller camp where the wet bandage and other signs indicated the VC had hurriedly evacuated only minutes earlier.

The short operation was concluded when the helicopters returned to extract the men and dogs, but the results and concept are still being studied.

Bullet Is Benevolent

AN KHE, Vietnam (173rd Abn 10) — A Viet Cong soldier had no choice but to drop his weapon and surrender in bewilderment after a bullet he fired bounced off a paratrooper of the 173rd Airborne Brigade.

Cpl. Ronald K. Rosenberger, Fullerton, Pa., and a buddy, Sgt. William A. Finder, Portageville, Mo., spotted some thatchroofed huts while moving up a hillside trail with his platoon of Alpha Company 2nf Bn., 503rd Infantry.

Expecting the village to be friendly, the two paratroopers, point men for the lead element of the company, walked directly into the clearing and heard laughing and talking in one of the huts.

While Sgt. Finder looked into the hut, Rosenberger went around to the back and spotted a black pajama-clad VC who grabbed his weapon and started to run. He shot the Viet Cong and began to search the village for others.

Then he spun around and spotted a VC shooting at him.

"The bullet hit my ammo belt, pierced one of my magazines and knocked me down," Rosenberger said. "When I got back up the VC was so shocked he just threw up his hands."

AMERICAL INFANTRYMEN FROM THEIR UNDERCOVER Three Troops Coordinate to Locate Enclosed VC Hideaways

Pilot Killed, Aerial Observer Evades Capture

CHU LAI, Vietnam, (AMERICAL 10)—John McFadden's job as an aerial observer is to detect enemy ground activity, but the sharp crack of .50 caliber bullets ripping into the fixed wing aircraft indicated the enemy had reversed the process.

In the ensuing 30 hour period, McFadden scrambled along in a nightmarish evasion that combined luck and ingenuity.

Earlier the 27-year-old first lieutenant from Chicago, Ill., had climbed into the little Bird Dog. He had been glad to see his pilot was the same one that took him on his first flight some 40 missions ago. It was to be the pilot's last flight.

The small plane arched into Antenna Valley through Deo Le pass and headed south down the twisting Son Thu Bong River, approximately 10 miles south of An Hoi.

The course of the beautiful stream was familiar to both McFadden and his pilot. McFadden had followed the enemy supply route on other reconnaissance flights for the 196th Infantry Brigade in the Americal Division area of operation.

Gliding along 100 feet above the water and using the river as a guide, the two men had spotted nothing unusual. Suddenly the snap of 30-40 rounds from a .50 caliber machine gun broke the silence. McFadden knew at least the first burst had hit the plane.

When the Bird Dog began losing altitude, McFadden figured the pilot had been hit and managed to radio two May Day calls for help before the aircraft crashed. The calls went unheard.

The plane crashed in the water seconds after being hit. The cabin portion was submerged in the water along with the wing that was near the sandy bank of the stream.

"I got tossed around a bit, but just got scratched a little," said McFadden. "Finally, I crawled out of the right rear window. I surfaced for air then went underneath the plane to check out the condition of the pilot."

Diving under the wing that was partially exposed, he discovered the pilot was dead. "When I surfaced for air underneath the wing I heard two or three enemy talking. A couple of them jumped on to the wing from the bank. I stayed motionless as they walked above me and then left about 10 minutes later," said McFadden.

"When I thought they were gone, I crawled out of the water and up on the bank," said the lieutenant. "I quickly surveyed the area and spotted two Viet Cong about 75 meters away on the bank of the river. It was approximately the same area we had received the machine gun fire from."

McFadden fired his .45 caliber pistol at them and raced off in the opposite direction from the enemy. The enemy disappeared. "I figured they were going to get some more people or report what had happened."

McFadden moved off to the east in the high elephant grass. The surrounding rice paddy area had a few small hootches, but the lieutenant saw no one in the vicinity. "The people may have scattered when they saw the plane was going to crash," he said.

"I figured they would come," McFadden said. "They were taking pot shots through the high grass—a kind of recon by fire I guess. I just stayed low until they gave up the search."

McFadden waited until later in the afternoon then moved back further into the thick elephant grass. "I couldn't see too well, but in midafternoon I heard and spotted several aircraft flying overhead—I figured they were probably looking for me . . ."

He stayed in the elephant grass the rest of the night, plotting what he would do at first daylight. His water was gone and he knew that he had to take a position where he could be observed from the air.

Next morning McFadden pushed on through the vegetation until he found a plateau of elephant grass with a large boulder sticking out conspicuously.

"Everytime a plane would fly over, I'd jump on the rock and start waving," said McFadden. In the early afternoon a bird dog spotted the lieutenant waving his arms. In the next few minutes there were five planes in the area and a central helicopter to pick him up.

RADIO CONTACT . . . Sgt. John M. Brown, ranger team leader, had set up an observation post.

Dear Fort Benning: Please Send Some Information...

By 1st Lt. Fred Vollrath

What is the best side arm for Texas? What books and magazine articles have been written about "Snoopers?" What type or weave of rope has the strength of nylon yet won't stretch and isn't slick? One of the privates at the base has a twenty-first birthday coming up soon. Would I be permitted to send him a present?

Answering such questions is part of the job of 1st Lt. Michael W. Allee, the Fort Benning community relations officer.

Every week 15 to 20 letters from children, addressed simply to Fort Benning or to such particular persons as the "Officer in Charge of Riots," eventually end up on Allee's desk for answering.

"Most of the letters are routine request for pictures, patches, and general information," Allee said. "They don't present any problem because I maintain a stock package I send out. But every once in a while I really get an 'off the wall' question.

"The kids are serious about the questions they ask, so I make a serious attempt to find the answer. Many times I send them the material that covers the subject they are concerned with or refer them to the proper source if I can't obtain the answer on this post."

Inquiries on Special Forces are referred to Fort Bragg, Artillery to Fort Sill, Armor to Fort Knox, or whatever installation is responsible for a particular area of training.

Sending photographs and patches to one child, especially from a small town, leads to a rash of letters about a week later from the same area.

"Right now," said Allee, "two towns in Illinois, Paris and Cisne, are in the lead. I think I've received at least 20 requests from each of those towns."

One group was so grateful they formed a fan club for the former Information Officer, Lt. Col. Robert A. Sullivan, over whose signature the replies went out.

About three weeks after sending the requested patches and photographs the following letter was received:

I am 13 years old. On Nov. 7 you sent me the United States Army Infantry School (Follow Me) and the 197th Infantry Brigade patches. My friends and I have agreed to start a club entitled the Robert A. Sullivan Club. Although you've sent me those two patches I would appreciate if you could send me some more of these patches plus the 3rd Army and Specialist Third Class.

Thank you for members of the

Robert A. Sullivan Club

Sometimes kids will write more than once, using different names, to get more than one package of handouts.

"I had one boy who sent me three letters. They were all written in the same handwriting, using the exact same wording and the same address, but he used three different names," Allee recalled. "Apparently he got enough because I haven't heard from him lately."

Why the big interest in the Army?

As one young letter-writer put, "Theirs an Army career in my future."

"Isn't it a fact," Allee said. As he reached into his in-box to see what the future Army wants to know about today's.

Aviation buffs will get a special treat when the Fort Benning Flying Club unveils its newest aircraft at a club party scheduled for 8:30 p.m., March 29, at Lawson Army Airfield.

Mrs. Helga D. Sapp, the club secretary-treasurer, said the newest addition is a fully instrumented Piper Cherokee 140 belonging to the National Aviation Academy and leased by the flying club for private pilot license and instrument training.

The Cherokee is a low-wing aircraft which will carry four persons. It is powered by a 150-horsepower Lycoming engine and will cruise at 110 miles per hour. The club also has four Cessna 150s and one Cessna 172, which are used for pilot training and recreation by the club members.

The Cherokee 140 and the Cessna are ideal for taking the family home on weekends when it's just too far to drive. Renting a plane from the club is about as expensive as renting a car for the same distance and you get there much faster, said Mrs. Sapp.

Some of the club's aircraft will be on display at the party which will be held in the club's maintenance hangar at Lawson Army Airfield. (Those interested in joining the club may contact Mrs. Sapp at the club office at 545-2949.)

Rented Craft Will Cruise At 110 M.P.H.

Membership in the Fort Benning Flying Club is open to military personnel on active duty, post civilian employes, reservists and national guardsmen. Associate memberships are available for retired military and dependents of active duty personnel.

The club initiation fee is $25 but the fee is paid only once. Membership can then be transferred free of charge to most military flying clubs. Monthly dues are $4 and aircraft rental ranges from $8 to $31.50 per hour. This price includes, gas, oil and insurance.

The club was founded in 1959, when members began flying with one surplus craft loaned by the Army.

They bought their first plane, a Piper Supercruiser (PA-12), in 1961, and traded up to a Piper Cub (J-3) in May of 1962. The club began to build its present fleet of aircraft in 1963 with the purchase of two Cessna 150s.

The Federal Aviation Agency requires 40 hours of flying time prior to taking the flight examination. Twenty hours of this must be solo flight time.

The club has two full-time flight instructors, Bill Hubler and Jay Simon. Hubler has been with the club since last July and has been appointed club manager. Simon is also an FAA qualified aircraft mechanic.

Students usually fly with their instructor around six to eight hours before flying alone and then they fly four to six additional hours reviewing past lessons and cross-country flight. The student is then free to fly within a 100 mile radius of Fort Benning prior to his check ride with an FAA Flight Examiner.

The student must also pass a written examination, and the best way to prepare for it is to attend the Private Pilots Ground School run by the club, said Mrs. Sapp. This instruction includes 48 classroom hours and covers such subjects as navigation, communications, preflight instruction, weather and FAA regulations.

Seven former club members are now flying for commercial airlines. The club has also trained numerous instructors and several members have gone on to military flight school.

The flying club averages approximately 150 members who fly an estimated 375 hours per month.

Under recent provisions of GI bills and the Veteran's Administration, the VA will pay up to 90 per cent of the cost for a student who is aiming for a commercial, instrument, instructor, air transport or higher pilot's license and rating. Soldiers can also learn to fly on Project Transition by contacting the Education Center at 545-2178.

Project Transition Sets Limits for Participation

By 1st Lt. Fred Vollrath

A change in criteria for on-duty training under Project Transition, effective April 1, will affect only nine per cent of Fort Benning's military population, according to Gus W. Schlitzkus, director for Project Transition.

The new directives call for increased emphasis on training the poorly educated and those with no marketable civilian skills.

"The reason so few are affected at this post is because we have been directing our program toward this group all along," said Schlitzkus. "The biggest group to be affected here are career men who are now automatically classified as having a marketable civilian skill, and those who are in a technically skilled or administrative MOS."

Schlitzkus emphasized this in no way eliminated these people from participation in the program. "It only means they will have to do it on their own time. The Army will still provide the training."

Beginning March 13, off-duty classes in Data Processing and Basic Electricity and Electronics began for those who no longer qualify for on-duty classes.

The new priorities for duty-hour training will go first to men being discharged for service-connected disability and next, to those who possess absolutely no marketable civilian skill.

After them will come: those who possess a military skill which has some civilian counterpart but requires additional instruction to convert it to a usable civilian skill, and those who have a previously acquired civilian skill, but desire to upgrade it to become more competitive in the civilian labor market.

Last will be those who want to learn a second skill for civilian employment.

"A survey we ran in the middle of last month showed we had 759 enrolled in the program," explained Schlitzkus. "Of this number, 71.4 per cent had no marketable skill. The 187 who said they possessed a skill broke down to 20 who were in the Army under project 100,000, nine who were disabled, a 90 who had less than a high school education."

If the project 100,000, the disabled and those with less than high school education are deducted, only 60 are receiving training who would not be authorized training during duty hours, according to the latest guideline. This is how we arrived at our nine per cent figure," he said.

One reason for limiting duty hour training was that too many skilled individuals were taking time off from unit duties to participate in Project Transition. This loss of manpower hampered readiness ratings of many units, according to the Army.

To insure Fort Benning's program is in line with the new redirection the following guidelines have been instituted to:

—insure the unskilled and less educated are primary targets;

—increase counseling efforts for the unskilled and uneducated;

—encourage private industry to provide off-duty programs;

—insure on-duty programs will be limited to disabled and those individuals with no marketable civilian skill (a limit on on-duty hours of instruction will be imposed at about 240 hours;

—insure that OJT is not secondary employment.

—eliminate individuals who possess a civilian job skill, from on-duty Transition programs.

—assure any on duty programs conducted are subject to local command approval consistent with the mission of the installation.

To eliminate PCS or TDY for the purposes of Project Transition Training.

NCOC Grads Prove Themselves in Combat

"If it were not for the noncommissioned officer program, many U. S. units would have leadership problems in the smaller units," says Colonel W. G. Skelton, a former Battalion commander with the 25th Division in Vietnam.

"These men arrive knowing the skills of leadership and tactics and require but a short time to become effective," he added.

Instituted in the fall of 1967 as a means of supplying squad and fire team leaders for combat in Vietnam, the program was called a "whole new idea in training" by William C. Woolridge, then sergeant major of the Army.

Some 8,500 sergeants have completed the 12 week course and the first graduates are just now finishing their tours of duty in Vietnam.

Col. Skelton, like most commanders, was wary of the young sergeants at first. But he admits it didn't take him long to become a strong booster.

"We received our first three NCO's shortly after I took command. I must admit I viewed them a bit skeptically. However, within a short time they proved themselves completely and we were crying for more.

"In my battalion, all of these men became platoon sergeants, and several were platoon leaders."

Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, Commander U.S. Army Training Center, commented that while he was with the 1st Cav, incoming graduates of the NCOC program were assigned to a special company to work with combat experienced NCOs before receiving final assignment.

Gen. Davis recalls that after the graduates received their CIB's and were scheduled to depart, the commanding officers under whom they were training did not want to give them up.

On a broader scope, the NCOC course got an equally fine rating.

Army digest reported in its February issue that graduates of the course rated excellent after a four-month performance evaluation period in combat.

The report showed that over 80 per cent of the E-5 and E-6 leaders, nearly all with less than 15 months in service, were performing "exceptionally well."

Hot Line For Ideas Installed

Soldiers and civilians at Fort Benning who wish to make suggestions in the Army's Incentive Awards Program can eliminate a lot of paperwork by submitting their ideas over a new "hot line" — 544-7540.

If his suggestion is accepted, an individual can obtain a cash award up to $25,000.

To be accepted, an idea should simplify or improve operations, methods, procedures, layouts or organization; conserve materials or property; promote health or improve working conditions; reduce likelihood of accidents; or improve morale of Army personnel.

A suggestion is not eligible for consideration if it appears to be of the complaint type; recommends enforcement of existing rules, regulations or directive; proposes changes in housekeeping practices or personal comfort; or it if duplicates a suggestion for which proprietory rights have not yet expired.

The amount of the cash award is granted on the basis of actual or estimated savings to the Army. The fact that the idea is not new or original does not necessarily make it ineligible for award consideration. It must not, however, duplicate in subject content a suggestion already under consideration.

Benning Soldier In RE-UP Film

If someone had told Pvt. Robert Hanley that after 14 weeks in the Army he would not only be a combat veteran but also a drill sergeant, it is quite possible that he may have been somewhat skeptical.

Nevertheless it did happen, during the short filming of a reenlistment commercial for the Army. The one minute commercial took two and a half days to film.

During the commercial Pvt. Hanley plays the part of a drill sergeant making last minute reflections on his past Army career, before making his first jump into combat via helicopter. The scenes were filmed here against the back-drop of its Vietnamese village.

Pvt. Hanley is now a student in the Field Radio Mechanics Course, assigned to Co. H, Infantry School Battalion in the student brigade. The 21-year-old Pvt. is a graduate of Fashion Institute of Technology in New York City. While in college Hanley held part time jobs as a cast member in various plays and an extra in Hollywood films.

CREATIVE COOKING
IDEAS FROM THE KRAFT KITCHENS

Fish Provencale: fillets with a French flair. Combine one beaten egg and 1 tsp. milk. Dip 1 lb. of fish fillets into the egg and milk, then into a mixture of 1 c. dry bread crumbs and ½ c. Kraft Grated Parmesan Cheese. Brown on both sides in ¼ c. Kraft Oil, the one with the light touch that crisps food to a flavorful goodness. It's poly-unsaturated and always digestible. 4 servings.

Savory Salad: a zesty meal companion. What gives it a special sparkle is Miracle French Dressing, the livelier French that's pepped-up with onion. Marinate 1 c. cooked cut green beans and ½ c. sliced cooked carrots in Miracle French Dressing for several hours. Then drain. Tear a small head lettuce into bite-size pieces and place in salad bowl. Add marinated vegetables, ¼ c. sliced celery, 2 tsp. chopped pimiento and enough additional Miracle French Dressing to moisten. Toss lightly. Sprinkle with 4 slices of crisply cooked bacon, crumbled. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

War Films Rate First With Post Movie Goers

By Pfc David J. Wynne

It sounds a little like the mailman who likes to take a walk when he gets home from work, but the most popular films shown to the soldiers of Fort Benning are war movies.

Second Lt. Roger P. Bond, Fort Benning's Theatre Officer, reports that the post's all-time attendance record was set when The Green Berets was shown here in 1968. The John Wayne thriller about the Vietnam conflict was viewed by over 19,000 persons, as contrasted to the average flick's attendance of just over 1,400.

"We always get a very high attendance at war movies," said Bond. "I'd say that second-place honors would go to the action-packed Western. However if we're going to be talking about popular movies, the men here will enjoy any show — as long as it has a pretty girl in it."

Bond reported that movie attendance on the post is going up each year. More than 907,000 persons went to movies at the post's six theatres in 1968, an increase of 22,000 over 1967's figures.

"To meet the demand of the increased number of moviegoers, we are currently constructing another theatre, which is located in the Sand Hill area," Bond pointed out. The theater, the post's seventh, will have a 1,000-seat capacity. Only the Main Theatre, which can accommodate 1,397, will be larger.

"The projected completion date for the new theatre is April 17," said Bond. "Then, of course, the building will have to be inspected by the post's Engineers, and so it probably won't be ready for operation until mid-May."

Because of the increased attendance, Special Services has recently initiated the showing of Saturday matinees at Theatre Number 6 at Sand Hill and Theatre Number 11 at Harmony Church. Moreover, four of the theatres presently are being renovated.

Fort Benning has more theatres than any other military installation in the world, and it was Bond's Special Services group which had the job of distributing and scheduling the 676 motion pictures which were shown here last year.

Bond explained that the films which are shown here are obtained from the Army and Air Force Motion Pictures Service, a government agency which has its regional office in Atlanta.

"It is the regional manager of AAFMPS who purchases the films for various posts throughout the Southeast. We have no control as to what movies we will obtain," he said. "We get requests for certain movies every day, but unfortunately there is nothing we can do about it."

The Army has a policy to keep the price of admission as low as possible, and all receipts, after the payment of personnel salaries, are sent to AAFMPS for the purchase of additional films.

With close to 700 films presented here in a year, one would think that Bond, as Theatre Office, would have been turned into a super flick fan. "Actually I see very few of the films," he said. "And when I do go to the movies, I have trouble enjoying myself since I'm always wondering if the theatre operations are running smoothly."

Talented Men Can Win Cash

"It's not every day that a soldier gets a chance to make money and enjoy himself too," said Theodore Gargullo, Special Services Music Director, announcing the monthly Fort Benning Entertainment Contest.

Participants in the contest perform in the post's Service Clubs and have chance at three $25.00 cash awards which go to first, second and third place winners.

"Contest winners have an opportunity to join the Third U. S. Army Showmobile group, which travels and entertains all over the Third Army area," said Gargullo, "Singers, combos, folk groups, jazz groups, instrumentalists, comedy routines, skits, dances and monologues are all welcomed."

The contest is open to all soldiers with 90 days or more left in the service. Entry forms are available at all post Service Clubs and at the Post Entertainment Center, Bldg. 1237.

The contest for March will be at Service Club No. 2, Sand Hill at 6:30 on Saturday, the 29th.

Hendrix Grooves on 'Electric Lady'

Hot Line to the Hits

By Pete Lis

Being a little bit fed up with music as "reactive noise" (hey man, the world's a drag, let's play loud and drown it out), I was sort of set NOT to dig this LP, but I had to. Jimi Hendrix is a good musician and his science fiction concepts surmount noise.

There really isn't a concept (no, Sgt. Pepper trips here), instead there's a unity, an energy flow. The LP opens with an electronic track using tape loops and phasing (think of "Itchycoo Park" by the Small Faces for an example of phasing) called "And The Gods Made Love". Hendrix said in an interview that he knew this was the track that most people will jump on to criticize, so he cut it first to get it over with.

Hendrix produced and directed the sides himself. "Electric Ladyland" is also on Side A, the title of the album. It's a fairytale trip that serves as introduction to the rest of the LP; "I want to show you the angels spread their wings," he said.

"Next is "Crosstown Traffic", later made into a single. This band is a stomp under with a heavy beat. "90 miles an hour is the speed I drive, girl," sings Hendrix as he compares the woman with a traffic jam.

Former Traffic

Then, a live cut, which sounds as though it was recorded late at night in a small club, at one of the jamming sessions Hendrix is known for. It features Steve Winwood (formerly of Traffic) on organ and Jack Cassady of the Jefferson Airplane on bass. It's called "Voodoo Chile". It begins with a very John Lee Hooker-like guitar intro, and keeps a blues feeling all the way through.

After some feedback screech, a listener says, "Turn that damn guitar down!" and the track ends with Hendrix and a chick discovering that the bar in the club is closed.

Side B opens with a song by bassist Noel Redding, "Little Miss Strange", probably the most commercial of the numbers included. Basically hard rock, the best thing about it is some nice unison guitar lines, probably overdubbed, unless Hendrix has grown another couple of arms. An Earl King number, "Come On", is mostly rock and soul, the guitar break in the middle being one of the nicest things Hendrix has done.

"Gypsy Eyes" begins with a drum thumping, a simple bass line and a compelling guitar line. It's a light goovy tune that really sticks to your synapses. (If it was possible to hum or whistle Hendrix, this would be the tune you'd most like do).

Nowhere Single

"Burning of the Lamp" was Hendrix's last single in England released a year and a half ago. It's a freaky ballad, with particularly nothing lyrics and on the whole a drag . . . it goes nowhere.

Side C could be referred to as the sea or water side. It opens with "Rainy Day, Dream Away," using a small group that includes Buddy Miles, formerly of Electric Flag, now on his own with the Buddy Miles Express. In it, Hendrix does a lot to restore the grooviness of rainy days.

"Rainy" fades to "1983: A Merman I Should Be" (a merman is a mermaid's mate, of course). Hendrix's vision of the future shows a world torn by war, on the verge of destruction as he and his lady go for a walk by the sea, and dream of living in the water. With the flute of Chris Wood (still with Traffic) Hendrix structures a beautiful undersea mood, only to destroy it with some heavy handed guitar.

A Bummer

My first reaction was, why did he have to do that? Then I thought that he created a beautiful thing, but lost faith in it, and so destroyed it before anyone else could, in several ways, a bummer.

Another electronic track, "Moon Turn The Tides Gently, Gently Away", deals some of the rent in your head, and the side ends peacefully.

The final side begins with a continuation of "Still Raining, Still Dreaming", only heavier and funkier, maybe just a hit too much so (iron raindrops hurt, man).

"House Burning Down" could be taken as Hendrix's first socially conscious statement, but it ends in typical Hendrix fashion; "an eere man from space . . come down and take the dead away".

Then the single, Dylan's "All Along The Watchtower", in many ways one of the most interesting cuts here. If you listen to the rhythm guitar track, and keep the original song in mind, you can see the way Hendrix overlays his beautifully freaky sound on the already established framework of the song. He is true to its mood. Last is "Voodoo Chile (Slight Return)", done this time with his usual backup men in a studio cut, heavier and more driving.

Hendrix is really the first cat to ever totally play ELECTRIC guitar. Remember, he used the wah-wah pedal before

"Brave Ulysses", and he's still the boss. Or just a good musician-producer? Depends on whether or not you want to believe the image or your ears. And if you want to flow, dig this on earphones, and watch the guitar swoop back and forth through your head. Hendrix is amazing, and I hope he gets to the moon first. If he keeps up the way he's going here, he will . . . and the beat goes on. . .

Benning Officer Plays Lead in 'Gideon'

Capt. Mark White, an instructor with the Infantry School, will star in the upcoming Springer Theatre Company production of Paddy Chayefsky's play "Gideon".

"Gideon, is a play of sweeping magnitude, wonderfully peppered with humor, yet warm and personal in its simplicity," explained Charles Jones, the Director of the Springer Theatre Company. "It is basically the poignant story of one very simple man and his encounter with God. It is all of us — our laughter, our tears, our struggle to live in God's will."

White began working with the downtown theater in a previous tour at Fort Benning.

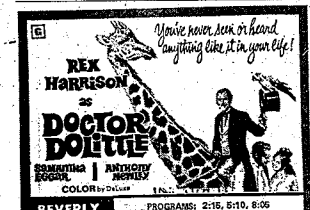
"I played Pierpont Finch in 'How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying' the last time I was at the post", said White. "I just returned from a tour in Korea and made it in time to get a part in this production."

Before being drafted and going through OCS, White was a professional actor with the Ellis Rabb's APA Repertory Theatre in New York City. He has appeared in the APA productions of "War and Peace." "Judith," and "The Miser."

"Half our 32 man cast comes from Fort Benning," said Jones.

"Gideon" opened March 20 and will continue through the 29th. Curtain time is 8:30 p.m. each evening except the 23rd and 24th, when no performances are scheduled.

The box office will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily and from 7:30 p.m. until curtain time each performance evening. Admission is $2.50 for officers and half price for enlisted men. Reservation can be made by calling 327-3688.



Fort Benning Movie Schedule

Synopsis

MAYERLING — The story of the ill-fated romance between Rudolph, Crown Prince of Austria (Omar Sharif) and the beautiful Baroness, Maria Vetsera (Catherine Deneuve), which ended in a double suicide at the Royal Hunting Lodge at MAYERLING in the late 19th Century. James Mason and Ava Gardner portray the Emperor and Empress, Rudolph's parents.

LADY IN CEMENT — The scene is Miami, teeming with killers, blackmailers, topless bikinis, go-go girls, cops, cement blocks, etc., and Frank Sinatra is right there in the middle of the action. Sinatra is a private eye who becomes involved with a curvaceous heiress in the shape of Raquel Welch and an ex-convict, Don Blocker, "Hoss" of TV's Bonanza.

THE HORSE IN THE GRAY FLANNEL SUIT — A fine family comedy from Walt Disney. The story is about a widowed advertising writer (Dean Jones) with two problems: a client who demands an unusual campaign and a teenage daughter who demands a horse. The horse brings the problems plus romance with horse trainer Diane Baker . . . but all the problems are happy ones!

SINFUL DAVEY — The time and place is Scotland in the spring of 1821 . . . our hero, Davey manages to desert the King's army to follow in his father's footsteps . . . that is to outdo his father and become the master rogue of Scotland . . . poor ole Davey has the same problem as his father . . . he's caught and sentenced to hang. There's plenty of laughs as Davey proceeds on his perfect collision course.

DEAD RUN — A suspense filled, action packed story about a group known as "The Organization" and their attempts to get top secret papers in an elaborately planned coup, only to have a petty thief accidently steal the iron-clad portfolio. Peter Lawford, a CIA agen assigned to recover stolen NATO documents, chases the pretty thief who has been from Berlin to Cannes, then to Munich and finally Paris. The story opens wih action . . . and never slows up.

'House of Cards' Was Built on Weak Foundation

A REVIEW
By Jerry Ganfield

Dealt an underground plot to overthrow the French government, mysterious and gory deaths, a bronzed and beautiful blond and a wandering American, Universal Pictures holds a fair-to-middling hand in the movie, "House of Cards," now playing at post theaters.

Inger Stevens, who as the Queen of Hearts, has advanced from TV's "Farmer's Daughter" to a sophisticated French woman, a la American-style, Costume designer Edith Head has created a few new numbers which suit Miss Stevens quite well.

Diabolic Plot

Miss Stevens plays the wife of a supposedly dead French general, who, because of her knowledge of a diabolical plot, is under constant restraint as a potential mental case. Her young son is being indoctrinated with revolutionary ideas. So far she has been unable to escape the clutches of her militant revolutionist family.

George Peppard enters the picture as an itinerant American who assumes the tutorship of the boy after the boy has taken a few pot shots in his direction with a stray pistol.

Thus the two stars meet for rescue and romance.

Orson Welles serves as mastermind of the French plot. His admirers may long for him to do something in the film, but he has little chance to do any acting. What can one do with five lines? His imposing bulk does lend mystique to the drama — until he falls from the ramparts of the Roman Colosium, that is.

Gore is prevelant from the opening moments of the movie when the previous tutor's body surfaces face up in the Seine River. From then on the tools of violence include: a switchblade (for throat cutting), a fist (for maiming), a foil (for dueling), a fishing rod (for catching assassins), and a push (for falling).

However, the backdrop for the gore is breathtaking. The setting progresses from Paris to Rome and catches many familiar and not-so familiar buildings in outstanding and creative color photography. The Eiffel Tower, pretentious homes, chateaus, St. Peter's, Roman ruins, Italian countryside — they're all there. (Even the fountain visited years ago by Anita Eckberg for a midnight plunge in "La Dolce Vita.")

Philosophical Fuzz

There is humor also, although a little camp. As Miss Stevens and Peppard collect coins from the famous Roman Trevi fountain which tourists use as a wishing well for the poor, Peppard remarks that half of what he is finding is bottle caps. "How can people be so dishonest?" asks Miss Stevens. They are able to garner just enough to buy gas for their stalled auto before a philosophical Italian policeman evicts them.

It's in the plot that "House of Cards" falls flat. Its backdrop of intrigue is extremely weak. The planned underground coup d'etat is revealed only by 1) old films of a lost Algerian estate, 2)a cache of rifles, and 3) a list of underground chiefs which a humbling American mercenary keeps in his breast pocket (where else?) Other than that, it's left to the audiences' imagination.

Peppard and Miss Stevens are Universal's trump cards. They play their parts well. All other characters are minor card board stereotypes. The two stars circumvent the murderous intentions of all around them, and they and the boy live happily ever after.

Liberty Lady

Frederic Auguste Bartholdi designed the Statue of Liberty which was a gift from the French to the United States. The famous monument stands 151 feet, 1 inch tall. When placed on the pedestal in New York harbor, the Statue stood over 305 feet. The statue weighs 450,000 lbs. or 225 tons. There are 167 steps from the land level to the top of the pedestal, 168 steps from the base of the statue to the head, and 54 rungs through the arm that holds the torch. The statue was completed and dedicated by Grover Cleveland on Oct. 28, 1886.

There are times when the duplicate bridge player feels true pity for his contract bridge playing friends. For the duplicate player every hand is a new challenge. There are no such things as bad hands. Even a hand devoid of all points can have trick taking potential if used skillfully. One bids, which are never played out in contract bridge, are among the most interesting to play out and the toughest to fulfill.

The above hand was taken from the Northeast Regional Cancer Charity game, played in New York this past month. The bidding presented is typical of the ultimate contract occurring on a majority of the tables, the only difference being that few West attempted the double of the 1 N. T. bid by South.

South, with 16 high card points, opened the bidding with one club. As he was using the convenient minor-five card major system, his 1 diff not promise length in clubs. West passed, and North, without a point passed. East, using the Kaplan-Shienwald defensive double, which promised at least 13 to 15 points and at least three cards in each of the unbid suits, threw a scare into South, and South carried on to 1 N. T.

The team of Appel and Romano, playing East-West, were among the three teams to double. Romano figuring the odds to be 57-43 that his clubs would all be good. North passed, East was content, and South could not find a better place to go, so he also passed.

The key play on this hand is the opening lead. Note that if Romano led a club, there could in that case be no way for his partner to reach him and the contract can be made by continually putting East on lead. Not knowing which was his partners best suit, Romano flipped a mental coin, it landed on end and he led his 7 S.

The play of the hand from this point on was quite routine. The 7 S was covered with the 8 S in North, the J S from East and taken in south with the Q S. South eventually had to let East in, and East immediately led the 6 C. West ranoff seven club tricks.

Five Trick Set

In all, the East-West team of Romano and Appel took seven clubs, two diamonds and two hearts, for a five trick set. At duplicate, such a set is worth, vulnerable, 1400 points, enough for a top on the board.

It is obvious that a 3 N. T. can be made by East-West, and a few teams competed to that contract, making it barely. In duplicate it's not what you have but how you play your cards.

Whitlock Paces Rifles In 3rd Army Tourney

BY BILL KLOEB

The Fort Benning Rifles returned strongly against Fort Rucker Tuesday in the Third Army Basketball Tournament after meeting trouble in a loss to Fort Bragg Monday.

Leading his teammates in scoring with 31 points, Bill Whitlock was the driving force in the Rifles' 71-63 win over the Rucker squad in the tourney being held at Fort Bragg, N.C. The only other Benning player to make double figures was Skip Mitchell who contributed 11.

Commanding an 8-0 margin in the opening minutes, Fort Rucker led throughout the first quarter which ended at 14-11.

During the second quarter, however, the Rifles took charge and edged ahead 38-35 by the half.

After the intermission, Fort Rucker was unable to hit consistently and ran into foul trouble. Omar Patton and Noel Leischman, each with 11 points for Rucker, fouled out in the fourth quarter. By the end of the game, the Rucker team had collected 25 personal fouls.

Rucker's troubles coupled with effective Rifle rebounding decided the Rifle win.

In the Rifles' loss Monday, Whitlock and Jim Rates had led the offensive against Fort Bragg with 26 points each.

From an 8-2 lead at the onset, the Benning five slipped to a one point deficit by the half, 46-45, and dropped the game, 102-95.

Whitlock scored nearly half of his points by hitting 10 of 13 freethrow attempts. Frank Everett with 17 points followed Whitlock and Rates in the double figure column.

Five Fort Bragg players hit in double figures, led by team captain Sam Brown's 21.

Lt. John Williams is coach of the Benning Rifles.

"Our ability to use the fast break has helped a lot," Williams said, "but the team is comparatively shorter than our opponents. Whitlock has done a really fine job."

"Tuesday Mitchell scored straight baskets after he came in as a substitute," Williams added, "and Bernell Blunt has been out rebounding all of his opponents."

The tournament which concludes today is a round robin event in two classes, pitting each team within a class against each of the other teams within the same class. The winner of each class will meet in decide the championship. The Rifles are entered in Class A competition for posts with more than 10,000 eligible personnel.

Defending champion from the 1968 tournament is Fort Campbell.

Satchel to Take Pitcher's Mound In Atlanta-Richmond Brave Game

Satchel Paige, newly-assigned Atlanta Braves coach and former All-Star pitcher, will highlight the Atlanta Brave-Richmond, Va. Brave exhibition game at Columbus' Golden Park April 4. Paige, 62, will pitch for a short time during the game which begins at 7 p. m.

Tickets may be purchased from the National Bank of Fort Benning. Special Services and all major units on post, said Gen. (ret.) Marcus B. Bell, chairman of the board of the National Fort Benning Bank.

Ticket prices range from $1.50 for bleacher seats to $5.50 for reserved and box seats. There is a ticket order form and a charge option available.

"I believe the Richmond team will give the Braves a very good game," said Bell. "I expect there will be a pretty full attendance.

Programs and souvenirs will be on sale at the game with fifty autographed baseballs to be given away to persons holding programs with lucky numbers.

Hunt Club Show

Christie Lober Wins Top Trophy

Christie Lober, 12, captured the Grand Champion trophy at the Equestrian Show sponsored by the Fort Benning Hunt Club March 15.

Riding Geich, Christie was awarded the trophy on the basis of average points after earning Beginner Equitation ribbons for first place in Fence Jumping and second place in Walk, Trot and Cantor. Christie, who has been riding a year and a half, is the daughter of Col. William J. and Mrs. Lober.

Runner-up as Reserve Champion was Terrie Lahnstein riding Silver.

The competitors, all students at the Hunt Club, entered riding classes determined by the instructors on the basis of their experience.

Riders competed in eight classes, ranging from Beginner Equitation, which was judged on the rider's hand control and seat in the saddle, to Knock Down and Out, which was judged on fewest faults over jumps which were increased in height each round.

Ribbons for all classes were presented to those placing first through sixth.

At the show's conclusion, the riders broke into teams to square off in a polo match using brooms and a basketball.

Capt. Jim Williams and John Fr Calvert are the students' instructors.

MTU's Lt. Writer Wins Smallbore Tournament

Lt. John Writer of the Marksmanship Training Unit, set the pace in winning the ISU Smallbore Three Position Tournament in Phoenix, Ariz.

Writer won the tournament with a 3528 total. MSgt. William Krilling and Lt. William Rigby also of the MTU placed second and third with 3490 and 3488.

In compiling his winning score, Writer set a new open and service record of 595 in the 40 shot, 50 meter any sight kneeling match.

The iron sight Position aggregate was won by Krilling with 1148. Writer came back to win the Any sight position aggregate with 1168. Writer's 1698 sight and Any Sight Aggregates totals won him the Position championship with 2309. Rigby was second with 2281.

Krilling put together a 589 in the Any sight Prone match and a 597 in the Iron sight Prone match to give him a 1186 for the Prone championship.

Judo Seminar

A special Judo Seminar will be presented March 27 at Briant Wells Field House. Rick Mertens, the executive director of the Armed Forces Judo Association will supervise the program. The event will begin at 7 p.m. and run for approximately four hours. All interested persons are welcome. Admission is free.

YAC CORNER

Basketball

The results of the Basketball League Championship and Tournament Championship Games are as follows: Biddy No. 2, Pee Wee No. 1, Doughboy No. 4, and Pony No. 3. In the Junior Miss League, Jr. Miss No. 2 was the League Champ and Jr. Miss No. 3 was the Tournament Champ. Youth Activities thanks the parents for their support in helping to make the basketball program a success.

Basketball Uniform Turn-In

Parents are requested to return Youth Activities Basketball uniforms to YAC Supply at Bldg. 358 as soon as possible.

Barracuda Swim Team

The Fort Benning Barracuda Swim Team will attend the Region III Championship Meet today through Sunday at the University of Georgia in Athens.

Fencing

Registration is open for children 6-19 years of age who are interested in learning fencing skills. Sign-up at Bldg. 358. When enough children register a date and time will be announced.

Teen Club

The teen-agers at Fort Benning will host the teen-agers from Warner Robins Air Force Base Teen Club with a dance tomorrow night. The band will be the Wheatstones. Admission will be $1.25 per member and $1.75 per guest. The dance will last from 8 to midnight.

Baseball

Boys in grades 3 through 10 are eligible to register now for baseball, at Bldg. 358, Mondays through Fridays 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Fifteen boys will be put on each team, after which all others will be placed on a waiting list. Tryouts for catchers and pitchers will be held at Bldg. 358 at 5 to 6 p.m. March 24 to March 28. All adults who wish to coach a team in YAC League Baseball are asked to call 545-3371 or stop at Bldg. 358. There will be a coaches meeting today at 6 p.m. at Bldg. 358.

YAC Swimming Program Has Large Enrollment

One hundred seventy children enrolled for the 6-week Youth Activity swimming program which began March 15. However, because of a lack of instructors and availability of the pool at Briant Wells Fieldhouse, only the first 100 children who registered began actual pool instruction.

A waiting list has been made up to schedule the remaining 70 children on a first come first served basis in the event some children drop out.

The children remaining on the waiting list will be rescheduled for the next class starting May 3.

Spd Richard Rought, a qualified Water Safety Instructor, teaches the classes and is assisted by other volunteers.

As soon as the weather becomes warmer, classes will be given at the outdoor pool at Building 1054, the Teen Square building off 1st Division Road. A schedule of hours and dates will be announced later.

Men's Spring Golf Entries Due Today

The Fort Benniog Golf and Country Club will hold its annual Men's Spring Handicap Tournament from March 24 to May 4. Today is the deadline for entering.

The tournament, consisting of matched play using full handicap, will require players to shoot one match a week until eliminated. Losers of first round matches will be placed in consolation flights.

A series of matches between flight winners will then determine the club champion.

Flight winners, runners-up and consolation flight winners will receive prizes. Special awards will be presented to the champion and runner-up.

Entry fee for the tournament is $3.

Black Belt Teaches Judo's 'Gentle Ways'

By Paul Mangione

The "gentle way" is at Fort Benning. It has been here for several years. The practitioners strain their muscles and throw each other about Briant Wells Field House several times a week. The "gentle" sound of bodies being slammed to the floor by screaming men (and women) in strange white suits is a regular occurrence here for approximately 75 students of judo.

SFC Ben Morse of the Ranger Department's Combat Conditioning Committee has been a student of the "gentle way" since 1954. His study of judo began in earnest in 1961. In 1966 he received his black belt qualifying him to teach the sport.

Morse is the instructor or "sensei" (pronounced sen say) for the adult class held every Wednesday and Saturday at Briant Wells Field House. His 32 students are soldiers, wives and dependents over 18.

"What normally goes on during a judo practice appears to the layman to be a rather violent, almost life or death matter," Morse said. "What these students are doing is not any more and is often less violent than many other sports. Judo is a competitive sport. It is a constructive and instructive art with many rules and regulations that all the players must follow."

Understanding the art of judo is often difficult for many non-Orientals. "Budo," the Japanese word for the marshall arts encompasses many forms and styles of attacks and defense. Judo is its only sport.

The world judo translates from the Japanese to "gentle way." The gentleness of judo is hard to understand at first; the knowledge comes with practice.

"The 'gentleness' of judo is the refined art of the style.

GENTLE? . . . SFC Ben Morse gives SFC James Devine a major hip throw in Judo, "the Gentle Way," at Briant Wells Field House.

The capability to use the hands and feet in such a way as to off-balance an opponent with a minimum physical effort, the co-ordination of all the body movements with the techniques of Judo, not a vicious attack, overcomes your opponent. This is the essence of judo," Morse explained.

The judo players at Fort Benning are members of the Armed Forces Judo Association, an organization recognized by "Kodokan," the parent school in Japan.

The sergeant pointed out that many people become discouraged with judo because they don't learn it as well or as quickly as they would like to.

"Judo is not a crash course. It is a detailed study and preparation of the mind and body. If a person wishes to study judo, he should watch a few practices to see if he possesses the patience and discipline to spend long and sometimes painful hours on the mat," he added.

Morse feels that judo has more to offer than other sports, both western and oriental. The brute force used in American sports like wrestling and boxing and the marshall arts like karate is not really necessary.

"The customs of judo teach the student a strong discipline. The bow before and after a contest is a sign of mutual respect. The grace and ease of the movements prior to throwing an opponent show the "gentle way" at its best. The gentleness is in the harmony of movement. There are no sharp fierce blows. It's all very smooth, very ordered," Morse concluded.

Pentathlon Tests Army Athletes' Skill, Stamina

WASHINGTON (ANF)—Following conclusion of the 1968 Olympics, the building years have begun for the Olympic games in 1972.

One of the most diverse and difficult events in the Olympic program in which Army personnel participate is the Modern Pentathlon.

The Pentathlon is a combination of five different sports, each requiring different skills.

If an athelete can ride horseback over a 1,000 to 1,600 meter jumping course, including some 15 to 20 jumps or obstacles of various types; fence with the epee (or dueling sword) under international rules; fire a pistol at a "turning target" at 25 meters; swim free-style for 300 meters in a 50-meter pool; and run for 4,000 meters over varied ground such as that found in an inter-collegiate crosscountry race—and excel in all of these—he is a potential Pentathlon champion.

Pentathlon background is rooted in military tradition, supposedly originating from Napoleonic days when military couriers had vital functions on the battlefield.

Called upon to deliver a message or an order that might mean victory for his country, the courier had to be able to ride a horse over all obstacles. When his charger was exhausted, the soldier had to run. Any river in his path required swimming. Finally, if spotted by the enemy, he had to shoot his way through their ranks and fight off any remaining enemy with his sword—all to assure that the message got through.

The Modern Pentathlon, as we know it today, was added to the Olympic program in 1912 and has been a regular event in the Olympic games since that time.

The complexity of the Pentathlon makes training tough. Proficiency in one phase often requires qualities which might handicap another skill. For instance, fencing requires quick reflexes and agility. Those same traits, however, are less important in pistol shooting, which requires steady nerves and powers of concentration.

Besides the Olympics, members of the Army perform regularly in Pentathlon competition in the Pan-American Games and the CISM, the Conseil International du Sport Militaire (International Military Sports Council). Founded in 1948, CISM promotes competition and cooperation among the military of member nations.

This year, the CISM Pentathlon competition will be held May 29 through June 6 at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., where he United States Modern Pentathlon training center is located.

Army personnel who feel they have the skill, stamina and determination to train with the U.S. Modern Pentathlon Team should contact their local special services officer.

Army Riflemen Sweep High Power Tournament

Distinguished Riflemen from the Marksmanship Training Unit took top honors in the Fort Benning High Power Rifle tournament March 15 and 16.

Firing on McAndrew Range, SFC Raymond Calvez won the championship with a 298-17. He was closely challenged by his teammates SFC Robert Lancaster and SFC James McQuien. Lancaster was one point off Calvez's pace with 279-24. McQuien was right behind Lancaster with 278-24.

In the individual aggregates MTU marksmen took both 200-yard matches. SSgt. Elmer Mondon a new shooter with the Army team, won the 200-yard Slow Fire match with 198-8, and newly reassigned SSgt. Robert Meeks won the 200-yard Rapid Fire match with 200-12.

George Floyd won the 300-yard Rapid Fire match with 199-7 and civilian shooter James Cannongton won the 600 yard prone with 199-11.

In the 4-man team match Army Drake team took first with 2874-58. Team members were Lancaster, McQuien, Meeks and SFC Buckley Norris.

The Infantry trophy team match was won by 1136 fired by Army purple team. Team members were Norris, Lancaster, Liberty and Meeks.

Pistol Teams Share Honors In Miami Meet

The Army, Navy and Air Force shared victories at the Palmetto Pistol Tournament, Miami, Fla., last week.

PO1 Donald Hamilton of the Navy won the match with a 2643. He outpointed Army's SFC Robert Whitacre's 2638. SSgt. Arnold Vitarbo of the Air Force was third with 2618.

Each man won one of the individual aggregates. Whitacre from the Marksmanship Training Unit won the .45 caliber aggregate with 577 and the tough International Rapid Fire match with a 589. Hamilton won the Center Fire aggregate with an 883 and Vitarbo won the .22 caliber match with an 892.

In the team matches MTU Blue won both the Center Fire and the .45 caliber team matches with an 1175 and a 1158 respectively. The Marine Corps Red team won the .22 caliber team match with 1180.

ATC Volleyball Begins Monday

Volleyball league action will get under way Monday in the Training Center with 10 teams vying to represent the Army Training Center for the post championship tournament in April.

Entering the single round-robin affair are three teams from Hq. Co. and one each from the 1st, 8th, 9th, and 10th Battalions, the Reception Station, the Special Training Co., and 2nd Bde. Hq. Co.

The competition will last through April 11 with three matches a night being played five nights a week. A match will be determined from the winner of the best two out of three.

The two top teams from the ATC league will compete in the post championship tournament April 21-25.

Masters Golf Tourney Affects Fort Gordon

The use of Fort Gordon facilities will be restricted while the Masters Golf Tournament is held at Augusta, Ga, Third U.S. Army has announced.

Official visits by military and civilian personnel from April 7-13 will be limited to urgent business, and request for travel must be approved by Third Army Headquarters, officials said.

All personnel visiting Fort Gordon in any status must comply with appropriate regulations governing the use of government transportation. No military aircraft other than those regularly assigned to Fort Gordon will use Bush or Daniel Fields except in emergencies.

Military and civilian personnel may attend the Masters Golf Tournament in an authorized leave status, however, billeting space is not available at Fort Gordon during this period.

Air Force Tops Trials

The preliminary U.S. Skeet Shooting team tryouts fired at the Fort Benning Trap and Skeet range concluded Sunday with the Air Force showing top contenders.

SSgt. John Satterwhite, USAF, won the 300 bird match with 291 kills. Air Force Shooter's SSgt. Saynor Thinglum and SSgt. Jack Johnson placed second and third respectively with 289 and 286 birds.

High civilian for the match was Bruno DeCosta of Vageville, Alberta, Canada with 274. Daphne Muchine was the high woman shooter with 281.

In the 4-man team competition, U.S. Army Grey placed second with 754 birds. Air Force Blue was first with 711. Members of the Air Force team were Johnson, Thinglum, Satterwhite and Earl Herring.

Shooter totaling 190 birds or more during their last two days of the tournament qualify for an invitation to the U.S.S. Shooting Team tryouts which will be held in San Antonio, Tex. The U.S. Shooting Team will be shooting in the Little World Shooting Games in Phoenix, Ariz. this fall.

Captain Builds One

Spare Time? Try Organ Making

By Ken Sturzenacker

The do-it-yourself craze usually goes no further than building a small piece of furniture or a backyard barbecue.

Capt. Robert R. Bugge has carried his hobby all the way to a $7,000 electronic organ, which he built from a kit for his church. Bugge, who was with Headquarters, 67th Maint. Bn., CTC, before reassignment, spent more than 300 man-hours assembling the organ from a kit that cost $3,000.

The electronic systems in the organ are completely transistorized. Sound is reproduced through a two-channel system," with the speakers in separate sound chambers.

The use of the two sound chambers yields the same effect achieved in a regular pipe organ. Using a formant principle, a basic tone is reshaped into the desired tone by electronic means to produce a note.

According to Bugge, assembling the organ from a kit enables the builder to make certain modifications to the basic instrument, thus "tuning" it to his own tastes.

This is possible because the circuits controlling each note are printed on two by four inch cards. By changing the card combinations, the builder is able to design his own stops, the devices which determine the sound produced by any given note.

"It took two pounds of solder, approximately 500 transistors and over a mile of wire to make the organ a working unit," the captain said.

The organ will be moved to its permanent home, the Prince of Peace Lutheran Church on St. Mary's Road in Columbus, this month.

Pastor of the church, Rev. John P. Ellwanger, feels the new organ will be the showpiece of the new sanctuary.

"Most of the work being done on the church has been contracted. There has been no opportunity for individual efforts in the actual construction.

"Of course, the building is being paid for through the financial contributions of the church members. But the donation of the organ is the only example of 'personal sweat, blood and tears' by one of our own members," the pastor explained.

The new church is a small structure, but the organ is large enough for use in a building capable of holding 500 people.

"As the congregation grows and moves into a larger church, the new organ can be moved too," the minister pointed out.

Capt. Bugge and the pastor both explained some of the organ's major features, comparing it to a better quality pipe organ.

The instrument features 32 speaking voices and is the equivalent of a pipe organ with 26 ranks, or groups of pipes. A Schober recital model organ, it is the only type of electronic organ which can be adapted to produce sounds with the tonal quality of a pipe organ.

Other features already built into the organ include a six-second decay reverberator, which produces a room-expanding effect, a standard 32 note pedal board equal to two and a half octaves and 40 watts of continuous power per channel.

Chimes can be added to the organ at a later date.

"The organ was finished in a walnut veneer to match the interior decor of the church sanctuary," Bugge said.

The captain, a native of Alexandria, Va., was graduated from Virginia Tech with a degree in electrical engineering.

He recently left for a career course at the Aberdeen Proving Grounds in Maryland.

The Name's New For Ex-LRP Unit

By SFC Snow L. Wilson

The 210 men of Fort Benning's only organized airborne unit are not too worried about tradition.

They are too busy training for long range patrols just as Robert Rogers' men were doing over 200 years ago when someone labeled them "Rangers."

"It just makes it legal," commented Capt. Thomas P. Myers of Vicksburg, Miss., while trying for the umpteenth time to get his clerk to change the correspondence to read "Company A, Ranger, 75th Infantry."

Until Feb. 21, Myers commanded Co. D (Long Range Patrol) 17th Infantry, attached to the 197th Infantry Brigade's 1st Bn., 29th Inf., and was in the midst of advanced unit training.

"We still have the same mission," said Myers, who served in Vietnam with the 2nd Field Force's LRP company. "But now the long range patrols have a common tradition.

"It comes down directly from Rogers Rangers of the French Indian Wars and Merrill's Marauders who were in Burma during World War II," he added.

The outfit called Merrill's Marauders was actually titled the 5307th Composite Group, organized by Col. Charles N. Hunter. Its long range penetration operations were more closely related to the original Ranger mission than the offensive operations of the more famous Ranger battalions.

In 1954 the 5307th was redesignated the 75th Infantry and activated on Okinawa, keeping alive the tradition.

"In Alpha Company we wear the 197th patch," said the captain, noting that the old 75th Infantry crest is being redesigned to look similar to the one of the old Merrill's Marauders.

The new Ranger companies (there are 17) will wear the shoulder patch of the unit to which they are attached.

Although the missions of the original Rangers and today's breed are similar the means of accomplishing are not.

"Can you imagine old Rogers trying to send a message around the world?" asked Myers in describing the capabilities of some of the sophisticated radios in his company.

"If each of his men had been armed with an M16 automatic rifle as mine are today, and helicopters, Rogers could have had the Seven-Year War (as the French Indian War was known) over in a week. Merrill's men would probably have sewn up Burma in the same length of time."

Co. A Ranger is spending most of its time getting ready for combat as a unit, rather than training individuals. The men spend a week to 10 days at a time in the field brushing up on LRP techniques.

Practically every man makes a combat equipped parachute jump each month.

Because of the small number of men in each patrol, five to seven, and the use of helicopters and small unmarked drop zones, to get the patrols into position Company A works closely with the Infantry School's Pathfinder Committee.

Although working now at the individual patrol level, the company expects to hav a platoon level Army training test in April and one for the whole company in June.

"Other than being airborne we are not a volunteer unit," Capt. Myers said. "But anytime a man wants out I'll sign his 1049 (transfer request)".

More than 60 per cent of the Ranger Company's men are veterans of Vietnam and some, such as 1st Sgt. Daniel J. McNiel, also have combat experience from Korea.

The new Ranger company, which joined the 197th here last year, was organized in Germany in 1959 as Company D, 17th Infantry.

Since being here it helped to train Co. D (LRRP), 151st Inf., an Indiana National Guard unit which went to Vietnam in December.

Air Force Team Here Aids Infantry School

By Bill Hardin

To help the Infantryman perform his mission, the Army has three Air Force elements serving here. They are Detachment 10 of the 16th Weather Squadron, the Airlife Control Element (ALCE) and the Office of the Senior Air Force Representative to the Infantry School.

The largest of the three is Detachment 10. This weather unit is staffed with three officers and 19 airmen. They provide weather service to The Infantry Center and its units.

A part of the Military Airlift Command (MAC), the unit is under the Air Weather Service, headquartered at Scott Air Force Base, Ill.

The activities of this group of men include briefing transient pilots, supporting the world wide Air Weather Service, passing on severe weather warnings, participating in the cold and heat injury programs and providing an automatic, recorded, telephone wheather forecast service.

The weather detachment also provides support for the Airborne Department of The Infantry School and works with the 197th Infantry Brigade's Meteorological Section.

The men of the detachment provide constant weather observation, and in addition, maintain continuous operation of fixed weather equipment on the runways of Lawson Army Airfield.

Lawson Army Aviation Command, and the 10th Aviation Group are also supported by this activity, which in addition, cooperates with civilian weathermen of the area.

The ALCE unit has four officers and four enlisted men assigned. The unit's official designation is Tactical Airlift Command, Detachment 1, 464th Tactical Airlift Wing.

USAF OFFICER GIVES WEATHER ADVICE
Army Fliers Depend on Forecasts

The primary mission of the unit is to provide operational control and to schedule aircraft and air crews in support of The Infantry School Airborne Department.

Secondary mission of these Air Force officers and men is to be ready to assist Army units here in any contingency.

This involves coordination and positioning of Army personnel and equipment when deploying in support of various missions, including civil disturbances.

During the past two and one half years, the ALCE detachment here has helped to upgrade Air safety, especially in regard to the handing of aircraft in the area of Lawson Army Airfield and the Fryar Field drop zone.

The minimizing of safety hazards has been accomplished by the men of this unit working closely with the Airborne Department and with Lawson Aviation Command and its supported units.

Working through the Tactical Airlift Command and the Military Airlift Command, ALCE makes arrangements for aircraft and crews, the Drop Zone Safety Officer and Combat Control Team members, as well as for the equipment they need.

To meet the Airborne Department's requirements, the detachment handles a weekly input that usually includes four C-119 aircraft, each with a five man crew, a maintenance man and three men to work on the Drop Zone during a parachute jump.

Lt. Col. George W. Porter serves as Liaison Officer to The Infantry School. His office advises the commandant and staff of the school on matters pertaining to the Air Force, its concepts and doctrines.

The six Air Force officers and enlisted men in the office serve as instructors and assistant instructors for a variety of classes taught in the school. Some of the subjects are Tactical Air Delivery Firepower, Tactical Air Recovery, Tactical Air Support, Close Air Support, Strategic and Tactical Airlife, and Special Air Warfare, which involves guest speakers. These speakers are arranged for by this office, and normally are used to address the Advanced Infantry Officer Courses. There is also joint instruction handled by Army and Air Force instructors, in which men from this office participate.

Army Needs Additional Lawyers

deal of legal assistance. "Each accused's case is handled by a defense counsel. Although these men are not lawyers, they are Army officers and they are well acquainted with the intricacies of the Uniform Code of Military Justice," he said. If a defense counsel should have questions as to how properly to present the accused's defense to the special court-martial, a legal officer, who is a lawyer, is available to answer his questions.

"Although the defense counsels, in my opinion, were doing a fine job, Congress seems to have followed the lead of the Supreme Court and has decided that each accused should have the right to an attorney supplied by the Army," said Harrison.

Foreman pointed out that, because of the requirement for so many more lawyers by August, it may be necessary for JAGC to call upon attorneys in other branches of the Army to meet the need until JAGC's manpower is sufficiently increased.

The Military Justice division of the Staff Judge Advocate Section is not the only division with a tremendous work load. The Legal Assistance division here handled over 52,000 matters in 1968. Last month, over 6,800 persons sought legal assistance, 3,800 of them involving tax questions.

Capt. Roger Sirlin explained that the Legal Assistance division acts as the equivalent of the Army man's civilian attorney. The division handles matters involving wills, powers of attorney, landlord-tenant relations, personal finances, among many others. "We can handle just about any legal problem which a soldier might have, with the limitation that we are not allowed to handle any matter which would require us to enter a civilian court," he said.

Claims both against and on behalf of the government are handled by the Claims Division. In 1968, this division at Fort Benning handled 1,224 claims against the U.S. and paid out over $127,000 in settlements. There were only 48 claims on behalf of the government, and these resulted in about $16,000 being added to the Treasury's coffers.

Claims against the government, which run from $10 up to several thousand dollars, primarily involve losses incurred by soldiers in transit. Capt. Leslie B. Enoch, chief of the Claims Division, said that the Army assists the soldier in filing his claim against the carrier. The Army pays the excess of any loss over the carrier's limited liability.

Smoke, Fire Are Products Of Versatile 2-10th Arty

By Sgt. James Walters

Where there's smoke, there's fire—and that's an undeniable fact as far as the 2nd Battalion (Composite), 10th Artillery is concerned.

[illegible]

SMOKE HERE RELIES WITH ARTILLERY
Key Piece of Equipment

fuel for flamethrowers.

One of the attached units, the 183rd Chemical Platoon, has the sole responsibility of "bringing smoke" on Fort Benning training activities. Under

[illegible]

During airborne activities at Fryar Field, for example, the 183rd makes billows of smoke to determine wind direction in the parachute drop zone.

The platoon also works in conjunction with engineers to demonstrate combat river crossing operations. While the engineers construct a pontoon bridge across the obstacle, smoke generating machines lay down a thick, opaque cover of smoke to confuse and block the enemy's view of the operation.

Also attached to the 2nd Battalion, 10th Artillery is the 69th Chemical Co. which, among other things, provides the fuel for portable and mechanized flamethrowers. Sgt. Patrick Linam, NCOIC for the company's flame fuel operations section, supervises the fuel preparation and recharging activities.

The fuel, a jelly-like substance, is composed partly of soap. When mixed, it is loaded into flame throwing equipment and utilized on various demonstrations. The 69th Co. produces an average of 3,500 gallons of the flame fuel per month, according to Capt. S. V. Johnson, the unit's commanding officer.

In addition to these activities, the 2nd Bn., 10th Arty. meets a rigorous schedule of more commonplace commitments. The battalion's A Battery serves as the Fort Benning Salute Battery. Used for special ceremonies, the battery provides gun salutes to visiting dignitaries. It also fires gun salutes for flag raising and lowering at Infantry Hall on Main Post.

But the primary mission of the battalion is to demonstrate and provide familiarization to the Infantry School with its vast range of equipment. It is authorized a wide variety of heavy weaponry in order to expose students to all imaginable support equipment for infantry operations.

"It's a lot of hardware," comments CW2 Kendal E. Craig, the battalion's property book officer.

The list of equipment assigned to the 2nd Bn., 10th Arty. is a formidable one covering a spectrum from searchlights to an Honest John rocket system. It has a collection of guns, both self-propelled and towed, that begins at 40mm and ends with the giant 175mm piece.

But more significant is the enormous amount of work and know-how that is required of the men of the battalion. Each piece in the vast array of the battalion's weaponry represents untold man-hours of operation and maintenance.

And whether it's making smoke, fire—or fire power, there's no doubt that the 197th Infantry Brigade's 2nd Battalion, 10th Artillery has a big job on its hands.

'Big Red One' Chapter Discusses Scholarships

Maj. James E. Manley discussed the 52 year history of the 1st Infantry Division last week at the first-anniversary meeting of the Fort Benning branch of the Society of the Big Red One.

Capt. Howard S. Stanfield, a second guest speaker, presented a current disposition of the division in Vietnam. Recently returned from a second tour in Vietnam, the captain pointed out changes of command within the division, positions of the units, and compared the techniques used now to those used during his first tour.

Lt. Col. R. Culbertson, president of the local branch, discussed the Scholarship Fund. He said that scholarships are now awarded to every surviving son of a man killed while serving with the 1st Infantry Division. Previously the scholarships were restricted to the eldest son.

According to Capt. James G. Smith, publicity chairman, there has been "a tremendous response" to membership. "Last year, under the direction of Col. Sidney M. Marks, we started our branch of the society with 12 charter members, and our present membership is well over a hundred."

Discussing funds for the scholarships, Capt. Smith said, "A majority of the money contributed is given by men presently in Vietnam. It's almost as though a man feels a sense of security — a feeling that life is contributing to something from which his family, or the family of his buddy, might benefit some day."

Lifeguards Practice For May Pool Opening

With the ATC swimming pool scheduled to open May 1, nine men from the Training Center are undergoing lifeguard training for the coming summer.

A three-week course will cover all aspects of life saving techniques including artificial respiration and treatment of injuries.

During the first week of training each individual will work himself into shape by practicing the four basic strokes—the crawl, the back, the breast and the side. These strokes must be perfected by the individual in order to pass the life-saving test.

In a final test of endurance the life-guard trainees must be able to swim 440 yards free-style without stopping.

Schedule Adds PT, Athletics For Officers

The Ranger Department has begun instructing students in the Infantry officer advanced courses in a physical fitness program, now part of their regular course of study.

The program is designed to provide participation in conditioning activities, team athletics and physical fitness testing for the company-grade officers.

Objective of the program is to enable the student to evaluate his physical fitness, assist him in retaining his level of physical condition, and to teach him conditioning activities and athletic contest which may be integrated into a unit physical training program.

The instruction is divided into three types of activity, physical conditioning extending throughout the program, team athletics, such as volleyball and soccer and two physical combat proficiency tests, one in the 9th week and a final test in the 34th week.

Sorry Frank

Who designed the American Flag? No one knows for a certainty. Francis Hopkinson, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, designed the seals for the State Department, the Treasury Board and a naval flag. He also asked Congress to reimburse him for the U.S. flag he claimed he designed. Congress did not do so.

World Of Sports

By Rod Reed

Every winter somebody thinks up a way to improve and equalize basketball, such as putting all the taller players into a shrinking machine.

Not quite so drastic is a scheme developed by John McHale, ex Philly sports columnist. It involves teams of eighth grade players and is called the "Better Balanced League." A point system is worked out so that each team will average the same height as the opponents.

If five feet tall is the norm, a team could have a combined height of 25 feet. It could have all five-footers. Or it could have two guys six feet tall, one five and two four. Etc.

The experiment has been carried out among schoolboys for a couple of years and is reported quite successful in that it has given many shorter kids their chance.

KICKING IT AROUND

with Kevin O'Kane

"I have slept."

A whopping normal minimum of seven hours of sleep a night is needed to keep body and mind in top condition. Sleep is the time when the body rebuilds itself, repairs damaged tissue, and gets rid of poisons. Without enough sleep, you're not going to be your best self.

Sleep, unlike food, is not stored in the body. You can't sleep today and expect to make up for it tomorrow. Sleep is a daily necessity, and many people suffer from sleep deficiency. Sleep deficiency is caused by not getting enough sleep on a regular basis.

Sleep deficiency can be a problem for many people who are trying to lose weight. If you're sleep deficient, you're more likely to overeat. Here's why:

1—Sleep deficiency causes fatigue. If you're tired, you're more likely to eat more than you need.

2—Sleep deficiency causes irritability. If you're irritable, you're more likely to eat more than you need.

3—Sleep deficiency causes depression. If you're depressed, you're more likely to eat more than you need.

4—Sleep deficiency causes poor concentration. If you can't concentrate, you're more likely to eat more than you need.

5—Sleep deficiency causes poor memory. If you can't remember what you've eaten, you're more likely to eat more than you need.

6—Sleep deficiency causes poor judgment. If you can't judge what you've eaten, you're more likely to eat more than you need.

7—Sleep deficiency causes poor coordination. If you can't coordinate your movements, you're more likely to eat more than you need.

8—Sleep deficiency causes poor reflexes. If you can't react quickly, you're more likely to eat more than you need.

9—Sleep deficiency causes poor vision. If you can't see clearly, you're more likely to eat more than you need.

10—Sleep deficiency causes poor hearing. If you can't hear clearly, you're more likely to eat more than you need.

11—Sleep deficiency causes poor taste. If you can't taste clearly, you're more likely to eat more than you need.

12—Sleep deficiency causes poor smell. If you can't smell clearly, you're more likely to eat more than you need.

13—Sleep deficiency causes poor touch. If you can't feel clearly, you're more likely to eat more than you need.

14—Sleep deficiency causes poor balance. If you can't balance clearly, you're more likely to eat more than you need.

15—Sleep deficiency causes poor coordination. If you can't coordinate your movements, you're more likely to eat more than you need.

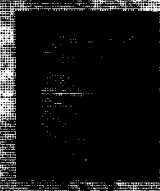
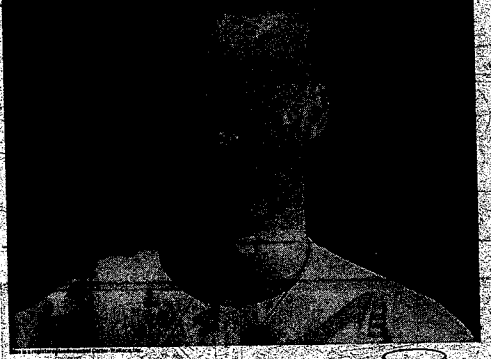
Gig proof



When you remove your beard you shouldn't remove your face.



Today's super-duper razor blades are meant to cut whiskers. They can also do a job on the skin underneath the whiskers.

To help keep you from butchering yourself – this is the reason for Rise.® And why we put a thin lubricating film into it that gets between your blade and your skin.

Put Rise on your face before you shave, and maybe you won't have to put toilet paper on your face after it.

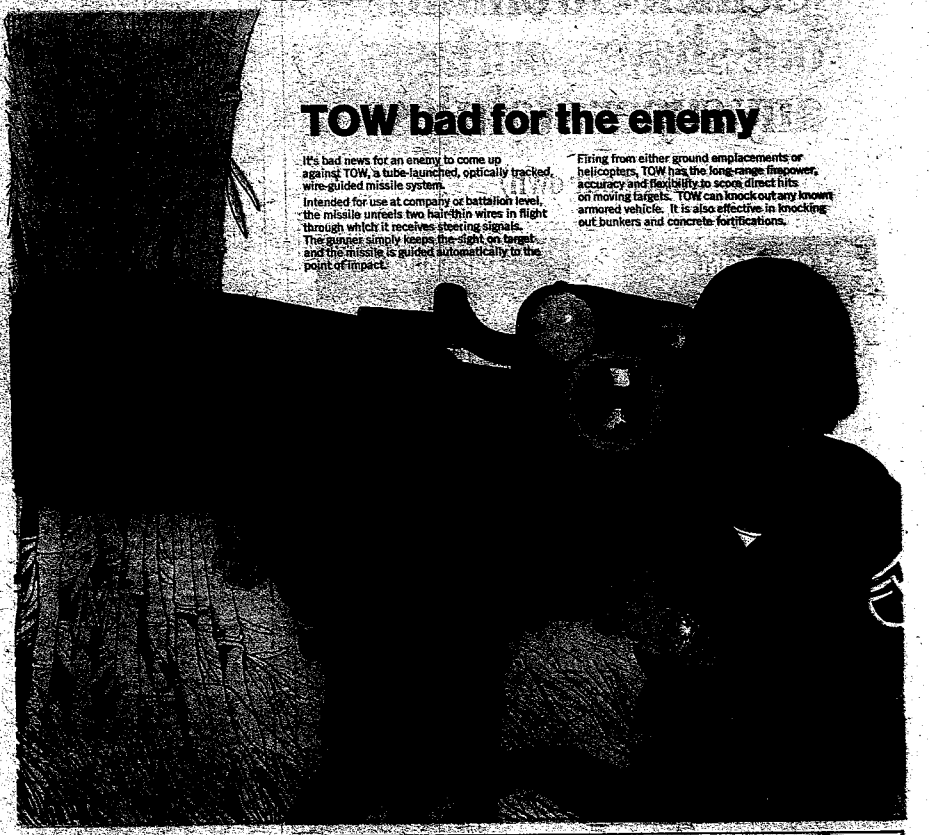
WHAT'S NEW?



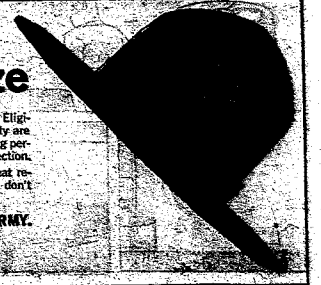
TOW bad for the enemy

It's bad news for an enemy to come up against TOW, a tube-launched, optically tracked, wire-guided missile system.

Intended for use at company or battalion level, the missile unreels two hair-thin wires in flight through which it receives steering signals. The gunner simply keeps the sight on target, and the missile is guided automatically to the point of impact.

Firing from either ground emplacements or helicopters, TOW has the long-range firepower, accuracy and flexibility to score direct hits on moving targets. TOW can knock out any known armored vehicle. It is also effective in knocking out bunkers and concrete fortifications.

Try the DS Option on for size



The Reenlistment Option for Drill Sergeant Duty offers you an 18-month stabilized tour at a stateside training center of your choice. Qualified NCO's and Specialists in Grades E-4 through E-7 can reenlist for this duty from any unaccompanied short-tour area. However, you must pick this option at least 30 days before you finish your overseas tour.

Every month will see the best of the Army's Drill Sergeants in Grades E-5 and E-6 promoted. Without regard to time-in-grade or time-in-service. Eligibility lists for this fast promotion opportunity are made up of DS's with four months outstanding performance. Performance is the basis for selection.

Ask your Career Counselor about this great reenlistment option. It's an opportunity you don't want to overlook.

Your future, your decision... stay ARMY.

Schick chromium out-shaves, outlasts any super stainless

(even our own)

Super stainless is not complete protection against corrosion. This, for instance, is a corroded section of a plastic-coated Schick super stainless edge after five shaves, magnified 480 times. It's rough, pitted, corroded.

This is a section of the very plastic-coated Krona-Chrome chromium edge after five shaves, magnified 480 times. As you can see, the chromium remains effectively intact. Much closer shave due to corrosion.

Only Schick Krona-Chrome has the chromium edge.

But, though the average team heights may be equal, there's still a good deal of individual mismatching and conversely a coach who came up with a new Lew Alcindor and a new Elvin Hayes could team them with three midgets and have an undefeated season.

Why wouldn't it be simpler and more equitable for roundball to borrow a idea from boxing? As you know, the much-maligned manly art of medieval murder divides its fighters into classes called fly-weight, bantamweight, featherweight, light-weight, welt-weight, middleweight, light-heavyweight and heavyweight. THERE'LL BE SOME CHANGES MADE

With spring training about to start, baseball will be trying out some of the "improvement" gimmicks that were thrashed over in the winter meetings, such as lowering the pitcher's mound and squeezing the strike zone.

A chap named Smith, when asked his opinion of the proposed changes, said, "Personally, I'd like everything, and I mean everything, to be the same as it was last year."

Very reasonable response coming from the manager of the World Champion Detroit Tigers, Mayo Smith.

THE GAME OF SEVEN GOOFS

These two drawings look alike, but actually differ in at least seven subtle ways. Check your findings with the answers printed upside down.

Solution: (1) The circle of the coin is caught in the bumper of the car in the background. (2) The license number of the race car is visible. (3) There is a bevel under the steering wheel of the other car. (4) There is a twisted tie-down fastening. (5) The pole of the signpost is shorter. (6) The hole in the hood of that car is different.

(7) The bumper of the crashed car is bent differently.

Answer: There are 20 triangles altogether in the drawing of the cat.

WHERE ARE YOU GOING?

by Greg Frazer

"Stay in school, let nothing prevent you from finishing high school, and, if at all possible, go on to college. Statistics prove your opportunities for the future are based to a great extent on your education," says Wallace M. Greene, Jr., Commandant of the Marine Corps.

He further says, "Education increases opportunity in the armed forces, too. Promotions are closely related to high school completion. A graduate, for example, has a 200% better likelihood of becoming a Marine corporal than a high school dropout. The missile age armed forces require men who are ready—in body, mind and in spirit—to master complex skills and to become enthusiastic and confident leaders."

These remarks point up the traditional American belief in the value of education. It is a belief that was clearly stated by President George Washington in his farewell address when he said:

"Promote . . . as an object of primary importance, institutions for the general diffusion of knowledge. In proportion as the structure of a government gives force to public opinion, it is essential that public opinion should be enlightened."

Today, education has become a yardstick for just how far you will get in life. The more of it you have, the further you will go. This holds true in the armed forces just as it does in civilian life. In today's intensely competitive job market the unskilled and uneducated job seeker soon finds how unmarketable he is.

Realizing this, the armed forces encourages in every way possible the furtherance of its members' careers. They want more education for these people, not only to make them more valuable to their service, but to help provide for their future.

Members of the military have many unique educational opportunities open to them. For example, if you have not completed high school, you have the chance to earn credits for a diploma. You may even earn credits for a bachelor's degree, a master's degree and, believe it or not, a doctorate. Often, a good part, or all of the cost, will be paid by the service in which you are enrolled.

It is one of the goals of the services to make military life a path to productive skills. They fully understand that there are many military specialists whose training prepares them for civilian careers after their service, but they also understand that for others their military training does not produce civilian-related skills. It is to help them that the armed forces have made available in-service training and educational opportunities which will increase their chances for employment in civilian life.

This is done through courses that can be taken on or off duty, depending on requirements, and by counseling. Formal education opportunities are offered within the capabilities of respective commands.

Every resource possible is exploited for the use of armed forces members, and in addition to local civilian schools and United States Armed Forces Institute courses, they also suggest extension courses.

Extension courses are those offered by the correspondence schools and they are an ideal way to learn while you work. Your lessons are mailed to you, equipment is often supplied, and you may study and work at your leisure. Tests are given regularly and you may advance at your own pace. Best of all, most credits earned through passing such courses are applicable to earning diplomas and degrees.

So, if you are interested in getting ahead now, while you are in service, is the time to get started. Investigate the educational opportunities available to you in your branch of the service. Write to various correspondence schools for their catalogs and see what they have to offer. Study the catalogs, then do something about it.

Remember, "item that has, gets." The more education you acquire, the further in life you will get. ☆

Vietnam-Bound Dogs Don't Enjoy Shot Needle, Either

BY DAVID J. WYNNE

If a soldier thinks he's leading a dog's life when he has to go through the tedious process of preparing for overseas replacement, he isn't too far wrong.

When dogs from the Headquarters Detachment and 36th Infantry Platoon Scout Dog unit of the 197th Infantry Bde. are to be sent to Vietnam, each dog has to PCR, just like his human handler.

"In many respects, a scout dog PCR's just like a regular soldier," said Spt. John R. Whitworth, veterinary technician. "In fact, many of the forms we use for the processing are the same forms used for humans. For example, the forms for the PCCR test, the history of health and the weight chart are exactly the same for dog and man."

"When a dog is to be sent overseas, we see to it that he has his teeth cleaned, that his shot records are up to date and that he is free of parasites. We have to make sure that the dog is top condition so that he can properly do the job of scouting for which he has had months of training," Whitworth reported.

In one respect a scout dog might have it a little better than his human counterpart who is getting ready to leave the country. Whereas the GI has to spend four or five days processing, a scout dog can get his records up to date in about a half hour, according to Whitworth. On the other hand, when a scout dog ships for Vietnam, it is a one-way trip; the dog stays for the duration. "Only if a dog does really exceptional work in Vietnam, then it might have a chance to return before the war is over so that it might be used for Special Catholic and Protestant services will be held at Fort Benning during Holy Week, including the Protestant Sunrise service Easter Sunday. Jewish services of Passover will also begin April 2.

For Catholics, adoration of the Most Blessed Sacrament will be held Holy Thursday at Main Post Chapel No. 4 from 8 to 12 p.m., and at Harmony Church Chapel No. 1 and Kelley Hill Chapel from 6 through 10 p.m.

On Good Friday, a day of fast and abstinence for all Catholics, services, including the Stations of the Cross, will be held at six of the post chapels:

Holy Saturday services, with a blessing of the Easter Candle and Mass, will be held at Main Post Chapel No. 4 and Harmony Church Chapel No. 5 throughout the week.

Protestant observances will begin Maundy Thursday with services at four post chapels throughout the day. Good Friday services will be held at eight post Chapels.

Easter Sunday will be highlighted by the Sunrise

'T-Men' Give Guns To Museum Here

The Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Division of the U. S. Treasury Department donated 12 military weapons of various types to the Infantry Museum here last week.

The weapons, which have an estimated value of $2,000, include Austrian, German and American sub-machine guns, a Japanese mortar, one German and one British anti-tank gun, and five bazookas. They were presented to museum curator John E. Hunter by Cecil D. Kent, area supervisor of the Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Division.

All of the arms were originally turned in to Treasury Department officers by individuals throughout Georgia during last November, the amnesty period given by the Gun Control Act of 1968.

During this time, persons who owned illegal or destructive weapons, such as fully automatic rifles or hand grenades not registered with the Federal government could surrender these arms

von Braun Speech Slated April 17

Tickets will go on sale Monday for the April 17 general membership meeting of the local chapter of the Association of the U. S. Army, at which missile and space expert Dr. Wernher von Braun will be the speaker.

The tickets, priced at $2.50, will be distributed to all units on post. Louis T. Kunze Jr., president of the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning AUSA, said attendance will be limited to 1,400 persons.

The program will start with a social hour at the Officers Club at 6 p.m. Von Braun will speak in Marshall Auditorium at 8.

Von Braun, 57, is a former German scientist who has worked for the U. S. space program since 1945. He is now director of the George C. Marshall Space Flight Center of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, Huntsville, Ala. He has held that post since July, 1960.

The Marshall Space Flight Center covers 1,800 acres in Redstone Arsenal with an over-all value of $400 million placed on its complex of laboratories, engineering buildings and test facilities. There are 6,300 persons employed at the center.

Activities at the center concern the development

Dr. von Braun has written nine books and numerous articles since his arrival in the U. S., the first appearing in 1952.

without any questions asked.

If a person is convicted of owning an unregistered or destructive device after the amnesty period without a good reason, he is subject to ten years in jail or $10,000 fine or both.

Kent said some weapons were turned in during the amnesty period because the owners, for various reasons, did not wish to register them. "One weapon, an anti-tank gun, was simply left on the doorstep of the Albany branch of our Office. It had note attached to it which said, 'This has been mine for a long time, now its your baby.'"

According to Chief Warrant Officer Robert Pattaude, museum weapons curator and maintenance officer, all of the weapons received will be restored as completely as possible and then will be put on display.

promotional work," he said.

Besides getting canine ready for their overseas assignements, the veterinary technicians at the post's scout dog school also have the everyday task of caring for the 360 dogs which are used in the training of scout dog handlers. SFC Emanuel F. Rose directs the vet techs, six of whom are taking 12 weeks of on-the-job training.

Spd Frank Dungan explained a large portion of the job consists of laboratory work. "Every two weeks, each of the 360 dogs have to be checked for parasites. There are five different types of common parasites," Dungan explained, "and they are the main medical problem for the dogs."

When treating the dogs, the vet techs usually give them tranquilizers and pain killers. "It doesn't put the dog to sleep, but they are in such a euphoric state that they don't care that they are being treated," Dungan observed.

"If a dog has to be moved before the tranquilizer wears off, he has to be carried since he can't walk. Believe me, doing the 150-yard man carry at a PT test is a lot easier than lugging 80 pounds of dead-weight German Shepherd."

Occasionally when giving dogs their shots, the vet techs will not have the time to tranquilize the canines. "We always muzzle them if we don't tranquilize them, and then it might take six or seven of us to hold the dog still while the shot is administered," Whitworth stated. "These dogs certainly aren't dumb. They may come into our hospital without reluctance the first time for a shot, but from then on, just like a child who sees a doctor with a hypodermic, they give us a hard time."

The dogs are fed once a day at a regular time. Each animal is given three pounds of meal and one pound of horsemeat every morning. It's the same meal every day. Whitworth scoffs at the multi-million dollar dog-food industry's attempt to get owners to feed their pets a variety of meats.

"You can find all types of dog food on the market today," noted Whitworth. "The dog food companies want you to feed your dog chicken one day and liver the next. Actually, a dog can't really differentiate very well between different tastes. In fact, feeding a dog a variety of foods might throw off its system and it's for that reason that we feed ours the same thing all the time."

Dungan pointed out that the scout dog, unlike the sentry dog, is basically quite friendly. "We have to handle many scout dogs every day," he said. "Occasionally one might growl and try to take a nip when you're treating it, but, if you let it know who the boss is, there isn't any trouble."

The scout dog enters the Army not as a puppy but as a mature animal. Dungan explained that the dogs, just like soldiers, have to adjust to the new way of life. "Once these dogs start doing their jobs, their only reward is the affection shown to them by their human handlers. For such a small reward, they certainly do a tremendous job."

AIRPORT TRANSPORTATION

How can I get from Fort Benning to the Muscogee County Airport?

Daily bus service has been started between Fort Benning and the airport. A. Howard Bus Company coach will make the trip to and from the airport 11 times a day.

The fare each way is $1.45.

The schedule will be adjusted for the new service as requirements dictate, but now the schedule is set up to provide travelers with enough time to check in at the airport before plane departures.

The schedule is as follows:

Fort Benning to Airport	Airport to Fort Benning
6:00 a.m.	7:10 a.m.
7:15 a.m.	8:40 a.m.

9:20 p.m.	11:00 p.m.

LIEUTENANT EXTENSIONS

How many lieutenants extend beyond their two-year active duty obligation and what is the advantage of extending?

Approximately half of the officers on active duty have less than two years service. More than two-thirds of these lieutenants leave the Army after two years rather than staying on long enough to be promoted to captain.

Junior officers serving an initial two year obligated tours can greatly enhance their Army Reserve(USAR) promotion status by remaining on active duty for an extra year.

This will permit them to be advanced to AUS captain and to fulfill the additional active duty commitment that goes with this promotion. The officer would then be appointed to the permanent grade of USAR Captain upon release from active duty.

Officers separated from active duty as first lieutenants are appointed 1st Lt., USAR and are not eligible for promotion in the Reserves until completing two years in grade if affiliated with a Reserve unit or four years in grade and six years total commissioned service if not affiliated with a Reserve unit.

NCOC EXPANSION

HAS THE Non-Commissioned Officer Candidate Course been expanded beyond infantry MOS?

Yes, the first Air Defense Artillery NCO Candidate School opened January 13, 1969, at Fort Bliss, Tex. The 21 week course will include 13 weeks of academic training and eight weeks of on-the-job training.

VPI OR VMI?

In the March 21 issue of the Bayonet, you stated Gen. George C. Marshall was a graduate of Virginia Polytechnic Institute. I believe you are in error. Marshall graduated from Virginia Military Institute in 1901.

The Bayonet erred. You are correct. George C. Marshall did graduate from VMI, not VPI.

MAILING FIREARMS

Are there any exemption to mailing firearms through military channels?

Yes, according to Army Digest, there are authorized exemptions for firearms imported for, sold, to, mailed by or issued for exclusive use of U. S. Government departments and agencies and sporting or antique firearms authorized to enter U. S. civil postal channels.

Restrictions remain on sending "war trophies" through APOs.

VIETNAM DECORATIONS

How many decorations were awarded in Vietnam last year?

Combat Zone Decorations earned by soldiers in Vietnam last year represented about half of the total

'MISSED AGAIN! . . . RUN BACK AND GET TWO MORE ROUNDS, COMRADE!'

New treatment promises to eliminate Rh problem

A perfected treatment promises to virtually eliminate future problems with the Rh factor in the newborn infants. Since its discovery in 1940, Rh incompatibility between a mother and her unborn child has created a major problem for the obstetrician as well as for the pediatrician.

A substance, designated the "Rh factor", has been found in the blood of some people; these are called "Rh Positive." People who lack this substance are called "Rh Negative."

A problem situation may arise when a woman who is Rh negative carries a baby who is Rh positive. This can happen only if the baby's father is Rh positive. Somehow, some of the baby's Rh factor "leaks" into the mother's blood stream. Since this substance is a foreign material to the Rh negative mother, she reacts to it by forming antibodies which destroy the Rh factor. Antibodies are chemical substances formed by the body to destroy any foreign material.

Blood Stream

The Rh antibodies may enter the unborn infant's blood steam. Here they attack the baby's red blood cells, which serve as a carrier for the Rh factor, and destroy them. This produces a toxic chemical, called bilirubin, as well as an anemic state for the baby. This has no harmful effect on the mother and therefore Rh incompatability can never be thought of as a threat to the physical health of the mother.

A woman who has developed Rh antibodies is said to be "sensitized". Usually the first Rh positive child of an Rh negative mother is not affected because the antibody level, or titer as it is called, does not become high enough to cause difficulty.

Only rarely is the second Rh positive baby troubled by difficulties from the Rh factor and usually it is not until a woman has had several Rh positive babies. Rh negative babies have no effect. A new treatment, called RhoGAM, prevents the formation of Rh antibodies and hopefully will prevent Rh problems in the newborn infant.

Exception

One exception to the statement about the first few babies usually not being affected is if the Rh negative mother has had a transfusion. This may cause the production of high levels of antibodies before the first pregnancy because prior to extensive research being done on the Rh factor, some women were given blood without knowing the Rh. This resulted in their becoming sensitized even before the birth of their first child. Today, blood is always carefully checked to insure that the patient receives the proper type.

Early in pregnancy, and then again during the 5th or 6th month, the blood of pregnant Rh negative women is routinely checked for antibodies, to see if she has become sensitized.

Future tests if needed may consist of repeated antibody tests at monthly or more frequent intervals throughout the remainder of the pregnancy or the physician may decide more information is needed and perform an amniocentesis. This procedure is one where the doctor draws off a small amount of the fluid surrounding the baby and has it analyzed.

The obstetrician must decide whether or not he feels the baby will be affected by Rh difficulties. He may decide on an early delivery of the baby by induction of labor as soon as he feels the infant is big enough to have a good chance of survival. After birth the babies may require exchange transfusion if the level of bilirubin is too high, or if it is anemic.

Early Delivery

Up until about one year ago, early delivery and exchange transfusion were the only methods the physicians had for treating Rh difficulties. Now we have available a vaccine which prevents antibody formation. This medication, RhoGAM, is given the Rh negative mother within 72 hours after delivery of an Rh positive child, if she has not produced any antibodies.

This vaccine prevents the formation of antibodies and makes each pregnancy just like the first one. Unfortunately this medicine cannot be given to women who have already developed antibodies and we must rely on early delivery and exchange transfusion for their treatment.

At Martin Army Hospital, each new obstetrical patient has her blood type and Rh factor determined at one of her first visits. If she is is Rh negative, then her husband's blood type is also checked and tests for antibodies performed. If she shows evidence of antibodies, further testing including amniocentesis may be done. Using these results, the obstetrician may decide on early delivery.

When an Rh negative woman delivers, the baby's blood type and Rh factor are determined immediately, as well as a further check for antibody formation. If the child is Rh positive and no antibodies have been produced then the mother will be given RhoGAM within 72 hours of delivery. A check is made by the laboratory to determine if the mother is allergic to the RhoGAM before it is given. We also generally recommend giving RhoGAM to an Rh negative mother after a miscarriage of over four months duration.

Gun Salutes

Gun salutes for VIP's are fired in odd numbers because of an old naval superstition which has been preserved through the years. The custom originated in the days when it took a long time to reload, and by firing all guns, the ship, fort or battery was rendered defenseless.

Purify Water

The Baby Erdiator is an airmobile plant that can purify water at 420 gallons per hour. The plant is lighter than a thousand pounds and can be transported by helicopter or over rough terrain on the Army's mechanical mule.

Art, Museum Exhibit Highlight Eufaula Tour

A juried art show and a Sesquicentennial museum exhibit are among the many events slated for visitors to the fourth annual Eufaula Pilgrimage, April 10-13.

The Alabama Art League's 40th annual Juried Exhibition will be on display in the Bluff City throughout the month of April, and will be of special interest to art buffs stopping in Eufaula for the annual tour of Heritage Homes. The show will contain approximately 45 works of Alabama artists.

Six Governors

Of particular interest to the student of history will be exhibits in the Eufaula Historical Museum. These exhibits, developed in view of Alabama's Sesquicentennial celebration, will feature the six Barbour Countians who have served Alabama as governor.

Portraits of all six governors will be on display along with numerous personal mementos.

The museum exhibit will offer a display of memorabilia from the confederate period, including muskets, clothes, letters and flags. Other exhibits will point up items of interest in local Eufaula history and Indian lore.

Both the Alabama Art League Exhibit and the Eufaula Historical Museum Exhibits will be housed in Shorter Mansion, which also serves as Pilgrimage headquarters.

Georgia Farm

Visitors will have the opportunity to tour nine of the Bluff City's Heritage Homes. For the first time, the country estate, Sunnyview Farms, in Georgia, is on the tour. The Gasking Home is another Heritage Home that is open for the first time, and Kendall Manor, a mansion of ante-bellum design is being opened again this year.

Infantry Center to Host Hail, Farewell Party

A Hail and Farewell Party will honor new and departing military and civilian employees of the Infantry Center Friday, April 1, at the Officers Club.

Guests will include officers, warrant officers and civilian employees in grade GS-11 and above who have been recently assigned to the center or are soon to depart the post.

Newcomers and departees will be presented to a receiving line at 7 p. m. on the patio beside the club pool. A social hour will follow.

Dinner will be served in the Supper Club at 8 p. m. There will be dancing in the main ballroom and Fountain Room from 10:15 p. m. to 1 a. m.

All members of The Infantry Center Special Activities Fund are expected to attend. New arrivals will wear blue bordered name tags, departing members, red bordered tags and all other members, white name tags.

The Hail and Farewell Party is a quarterly social event at The Infantry Center and honors all new members who have arrived in the past three months and all who will depart before the next party, now tentatively scheduled for July 11.

In case of inclement weather, the receiving line will form in the ball room.

At Luncheon

Wives Discuss Decorating Ideas

Home decorating ideas set the scene at the Ranger Wives luncheon held at the Supper Club of the Officers Club.

Displayed on a table were items made by the Ranger wives for use in decorating their own homes. Needlework, glass grapes, a mosaic made from corn and beans, antiqued furniture, paperflowers and ceramic pieces were shown.

Mrs. Joseph R. Walters, Jr. a representative of a local store was the guest speaker. She mentioned some of the important things to be aware of in selecting a carpet and showed some of the many fibers, weaves and colors available for today's home. She also explained the importance of padding beneath a carpet to cut down on its wear.

Decorator Trick

A decorator trick she gave was that of using brass buttons and yarn to make valances for drapes. A question and answer session followed.

Decorating the luncheon tables were carpet swatches and fabric pieces. The center piece for the head table was an arrangement of antiqued flowers, also done by a Ranger wife.

Farewell gifts were presented by Mrs. Y. Y. Phillips to Mrs. Jared Bates, Mrs. Robert Tyson and Mrs. Robert Velkey.

Welcomed to the department were Mrs. Samuel McNeill, Mrs. Gerold Andrews, Mrs. Arthur Littlewood, Mrs. Harold Van Gorden, Mrs. Frank Shehniski, Jr., Mrs. Joel Joyner, Mrs. Albertis Wilson, Mrs. Wm. Bowen and Mrs. Kenneth Johnson.

Mrs. Raymond McClean and the ladies of the Benning Ranger Committee were the hostesses for the luncheon.

OWC Offers Scholarship Program

Applications are now being accepted for the annual outstanding Student Award Program sponsored by the Officers Wives Club.

Eight $500 scholarships will be offered to seniors in Columbus and Phenix City High Schools. Students must be military dependents, either active, retired or deceased.

All applications must be mailed in before April 15th.

This project is being handled by Mrs. M. E. Lee Jr., welfare chairman of the OWC. For further information, please call Mrs. Lee at 545-4347.

Capture the elegance of Old World pastries right in your own home — the easy way!

Viennese Fruit 'n Cream Tart is a tempting, luscious three layer dessert. A flaky pastry crust holds colorful strawberry pie filling and velvety-smooth, almond-flavored cream cheese topped with rich sour cream.

Preparation takes only minutes. Simply fit a circle of pie crust dough into a flan ring or a layer cake pan. Spread the unbaked crust with pie filling, spoon on the cream cheese mixture and bake. Then top with sour cream and return to the oven for five minutes while the flavors mellow and the cream "sets."

Use any pie crust recipe, but be sure to use "enriched" self-rising flour. When the label says "enriched", it's your guarantee in addition to the special leavening and salt the flour contains nutrients essential to daily good health: three B-vitamins, thiamine, niacin and riboflavin, and the minerals, iron and calcium.

VIENNESE FRUIT 'N CREAM TART

One 9 or 10-inch tart

1-2 cup shortening
1 1-2 cups enriched self-rising flour*
3 to 6 tablespoons cold water
1 can (1 lb. 5 oz.) strawberry pie filling
Flavored Cream Cheese
1 cup sour cream

Cut shortening into flour until pieces are size of small peas. Sprinkle with water, a tablespoon at a time, mixing lightly until dough begins to stick together. Press into ball. Roll out on lightly floured surface to circle 1-8-inch thick; fit loosely into 10-inch flan ring or 9-inch cake round. Trim pastry. Spread tart shell with pie filling; spoon on Flavored Cream Cheese. Bake in preheated 350 F. oven 35 to 40 minutes, or until done. Cool slightly. Spread on sour cream and bake 5 minutes. Refrigerate.

Flavored Cream Cheese:

4 packages (3 oz.) softened cream cheese
2 eggs
1-4 cup sugar
1 teaspoon almond flavoring

Beat ingredients until smooth and creamy.

*Spoon flour into dry measuring cup; level. Do not scoop.

NOTE: If cake round is used, a removable bottom is preferred.

TCB Officer Wives Meet for Luncheon

Bright pastel decorations of kites and flowers made the theme 'Come Fly with Me' for The Candidate Brigade officer wives luncheon held at the Supper Club.

During the luncheon a wig demonstration was presented by Mr. Dan Tucker, a local wig and fall expert. He gave practical demonstrations on the uses of wigs, falls and hairpieces with the help of Mrs. Paul Sutcliff, who acted as a model. The proper uses and the different styles which can be used for formal and informal occasions were shown.

Special guests at the luncheon were Mrs. Edward C. Radcliff, wife of Lt. Col. Edward C. Radcliff, deputy commander of TCB and Mrs. Muller, mother of Lt. Col. Robert M. Muller, commanding officer of the 58th Signal Battalion.

The 8th Battalion wives hosted and decorated for the luncheon. Mrs. Ralph J. Huber was the chairman.

Ladies welcomed to the Brigade were: 5th Battalion: Mrs. Robert W. Cross, Mrs. John W. Hook, Mrs. David L. Sullivan, and Mrs. Gary L. Hubbard. Sixth Bn. newcomers are Mrs. Jessee P. Scholarships Available To Students

April 7 is the deadline for high school students interested in becoming Army Nurses to apply for scholarships.

After completing two years at the college of their choice men and women wishing to gain a commission as an Army nurse will transfer to the University of Maryland School of Nursing. They will then take their residency at Walter Reed Army Medical Center.

Upon recipt of a Bachelor of Science degree, the nurse receives a commission as a second lieutenant and is obligated to serve in the Army for three years.

Applicants should have completed the College Entrance Examination Board and have applied to a college.

COLORFUL SUIT FROM BATH TOWELS
Mrs. Albert Peterson Models Own Creation

Weapons Dept. Wives Hold Fashion Show

Mr. Willard Miller narrated a fashion show created from his local towel and linen store. The colorful fashions ranged from beach wear to glamorous evening wear. Mr. Miller remarked, "ladies who sometimes tire of not finding just the right thing in their clothes closet should turn to the linen closet, grab the nearest colorful bedspread or towel and be creative."

Eighteen designer fashions were modeled by Mrs. James G. Smith, Mrs. Alan R. Keller, Mrs. Albert E. Peterson Jr. and Mrs. Robert A. Thompson.

A brief business meeting was conducted by Mrs. Joel M. Hollis, wife of the Director of the Weapons Department.

Special guests were Mrs. Fay, mother of Col. Frederick V. Banse-Fay, and Mrs. Ralph G. Egenmaier.

New members welcomed to the department were Mrs. Raymond A. Sanders, Mrs. Gerald V. Turcotte, Mrs. Paul J. Kalowski, Mrs. Clifton R. Franks, Mrs. William E. Smith, III, Mrs. Rudolfo Diaz, Mrs. Robert L. Triplett, Mrs. James O'Herron, Mrs. Jay E. Pry, Mrs. Walter R. Fulton, and Mrs. Val D. York.

Hostesses for the coffee were the ladies of the Antitank-Missile Committee, led by Mrs. Donald L. Vest, wife of the committee chairman. Assisting were Mrs. Benge Johnson, Mrs. William C. Pattison, Mrs. Alan R. Keller, Mrs. Jerry L. Olson, Mrs. Thomas L. Adams, Jr. and Mrs. Eugene F. Monroe.

Preparations Complete For OWC Luncheon

Final preparations are being made by the Officers Wives Club for their spring election luncheon and tour of Fort Benning homes Wednesday, April 2nd.

Registration will begin at 9:30 a.m. in the foyer of the Officers Club and the first buses for the tour will leave at 10 a.m.

Mrs. Jackie Cummings, chairman for the tour, has announced that the last pick-up by the buses at each of the homes will be made at 12:15 p.m. and will return to the Main Club. A complimentary sherry hour will be held in the main ballroom followed by the luncheon and election in the Supper Club.

The ladies of the 10th Aviation Group, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Eugene Conrad, are the hostesses for the luncheon.

Mrs. James Morris, Jr., current OWC president, will present the single slate of officers nominated for the 1968-1969 club year to the membership. Nominations from the floor will be welcomed provided the nominee has given prior consent.

(A single reservation will cover both the tour of homes and the luncheon. The price is 2.50.

Reservations for this event are open to all registered members of OWC. Deadline for reservations is today and cancellations will be taken no later than noon Monday.

Pastry Course Held For Cooks at 197th

Tastier desserts are in prospect for members of the 197th Inf. Bde. with the establishment of a pastry baking school for brigade cooks.

The two-week course is conducted by SFC. Benjamin Cabrera and SSgt. Allen Graves of Hq. Co., 1st Bn., 29th Inf. According to the instructors the objective of the school is "to send the men back to their own units with the ability to prepare quality baked goods." The emphasis throughout the course is on quality.

The instruction centers around the preparation of 20 basic items. Graves pointed out that most of the students are on-the-job trainees from the mess halls and have had no contact with baking prior to coming to the school.

"They work with the same basic ingredients they will have in their own mess halls so that everything they learn here they will be able to use later," said Cabrera.

The new school is organized to provide small classes for better instruction and still serve the needs of the entire brigade. As it is set up now, each battalion in the brigade selects one man to attend the school for two weeks. When he returns another cook from a different unit in the battalion is sent.

The advantages in training the personnel to return to their own units as opposed to creating a centralized pastry operation was summarized in this way by Graves: "In the situation we have here the emphasis can be put on 'quality not quantity.'"

The first class of the 197th Pastry School graduated five strong and returned to their units to work their golden brown magic.

Any way you "cut" it there should be lots of good eating ahead for the patrons of the 197th's mess halls.

CTC Wives Club To View Mosaics At April Coffee

Wives of Center Troop Command officers will hold a coffee April 8 at 7:30 p.m. in the Benning Room of the Officers Club.

Mrs. Anneliese Fritts will display 28 pieces of mosaic art, including portraits, still life and a sculpture. Mrs. Fritts, wife of a warrant officer assigned to the 67th Maintenance Bn., studied mosaics in Italy. She has held exhibitions, including one in a San Francisco gallery. One of her portraits hangs in the Kennedy University in Berlin.

Sponsors of the coffee are the wives from the 67th Maintenance Bn. Reservations may be made by calling Mrs. Rhoda Cox, 545-1946, or Mrs. Lilia Kaufmann, 545-2839 before Friday April 4.

Korean Vet Quad-50 Supports Vietnam Convoys

CHU LAI, Vietnam, (AMERICAL 10) — On a dark, moonless night a VC mortar crew prepares for an attack on an Americal Division basecamp. They fire one round — their last.

The flash from the mortar alerts the crew of an awesome weapon from G Battery, 55th Artillery. Soon a thunderous roar is heard and a fiery stream of tracers seals the fate of the insurgents.

The powerful weapon is a quad-50, that is, four .50 caliber machine guns, mounted in tandem on a 2½-ton truck for mobility.

Originally designed as an anti-aircraft weapon, each quad-50 can fire more than 2,000 rounds per minute. The weapon was so successful in Korea, particularly against large ground attacks, that it has been used widely in Vietnam and in the Americal Division both for base defense and convoy security.

"Since the quad-50's have been supporting the convoys in the Americal Division area, we haven't been attacked from the ground once, with the exception of an occasional mine," said SSgt. John P. Pardieu, battery operations sergeant.

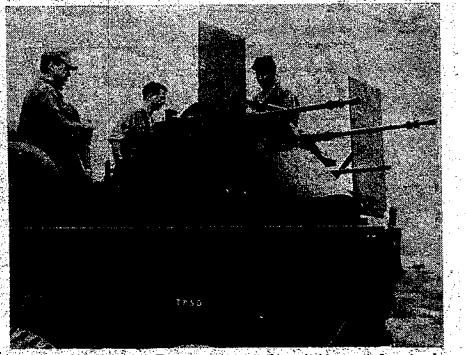
Attesting to the effectiveness of the fifties, Pardieu remembered, "At one time, there was an enemy .51 caliber anti-aircraft weapon operating in the vicinity of LZ Center. We located the weapon's position and promptly knocked it out."

The quad-50 is also a very effective counter-mortar weapon. "Generally we can't destroy the mortar, but the quad-50 certainly discourages the enemy," he said.

The weapon is traversed, elevated and fired electrically. It is manned by a crew of three, a gunner and two loaders. The squad leader operates the radio and directs the crewmen.

"It's a beautiful weapon," remarked Sgt. Eddie Black, quad-50 squad leader. "With all that lead flying, you know Charlie is in trouble."

Commanded by Capt. T. J. Stevens, G. Battery was activated at Fort Bliss, Tex., in August 1967, and shipped to Vietnam in February 1968. G Battery is the only battery of its type in the Americal Division and has quad-50's working throughout the division area.



MOBILE QUAD-50 . . . Four members of G Battery, 55th Artillery prepare a quad-50 for firing. One of 24 such weapons assigned to the battery, the unit is mounted on trucks for mobility to provide protection for road convoys.

Helix Two-seven: 'Target Marked'

Capt. Jack Dickens presses out the stump of a good Havana cigar; he walks hurriedly into the flight shack, up to a rack with his name on it, and picks up a black leather stachel bursting with well-worn maps and flight plans.

In two minutes he's rushing across the taxi ramp to this strange-looking propeller plane, Helix, with an engine on the front of the fuselage and one aft.

The captain tosses the stachel onto the left of the two seats, circling the aircraft with his men. He pushes the rudder by hand while his eyes comb the rear prop and the tires, and then climbs into the cockpit.

The Forward Air Control pilot for the 198th Infantry Brigade, one member of a team of veteran fliers, is prepared for his mission.

The radio crackles wind direction and velocity.

The 02 Helix climbs quickly from the Chu Lai airstrip. In a couple of minutes he's dead-ahead, south, over the Song Tra Bong River at a thousand feet. Then begins the circling and spotting.

Helix hangs above an infantry operation below. A 198th unit has called Americal Division Tactical Operations Center requesting an airstrike.

"He's down in there," the pilot murmurs, meaning the enemy. "Watch, we'll get him out. He might be dug in — twenty, thirty feet."

"Helix Two-Seven," the radio calls.

Capt. Dickens acknowledges momentarily with a slight drawl, "Roger, looking — about eleven o'clock." A tiny black speck, and then another are emerging just below the heavy cloud cover. "Got him in sight."

The Helix dips its right wing, points it like a finger to the target, and seems to roll over in the distance only of its own length.

Woosh, a trail of smoke extends from the wing to the billow of white spreading through the leaves below. "Target marked."

The dizzy earth spins somewhere over the captain's shoulder — he is watching the jets through the window above his head. He must keep his eyes on the circling jets at every second — the assurance that he guides them perfectly on target.

The jets, flying one in front of the other, seem to be moving on the rim of a clear glass a thousand feet above the Helix. Without a hint of hesitation the first, turning its wings on end, slides almost straight at the world. He is at the island of trees like an arrow.

Capt. Dickens smiles; the jet leaves a line of bright yellow flashes in its path, right through the center of the enemy position. Completing the parabola the jet is climbing straight up, flipping its wings again. The second jet is on target now.

They both dive a second time.

Capt. Dickens asks for one final run. He dives the Helix to mark another target about 500 meters northwest. "Not too low this time," he tells the jets, "They may be firing from this position." The fighters comply, complete a successful mission and are gone.

Beneath the Helix, the trees have been cleared. The infantry can move in now.

He then takes his Helix up to 2000 feet, flying towards the coast. When his replacement, Helix 23, has acknowledged and is in sight, "Two-Seven" skims along over a green sea toward the Chu Lai strip. He reaches above his head, changes the fuel tanks, takes a practiced glance at the instruments, settling down on the metal runway.

The ground crew is waiting on the parking ramp with the red ribbons to disarm the remaining rockets. The door is opened, letting in a spell of refreshing breeze. Helix 27's air hours are complete for the day.

Back in the flight shack someone asks Capt. Dickens, "Want to fly to Da-Nang tomorrow?"

"Don't fly tomorrow," he answers — "Wish I did."

Engineer Ingenuity Saves Lives At Vietnam's Bong Son Hospital

BONG SON, Vietnam (173d IO) — Prior to construction of an incubator by two brigade combat engineers, The Bong Son Hospital had little hope in saving the lives of premature babies.

"An incubator was desperately needed," said Maj. William P. Winkler, brigade surgeon and coordinator of the project. "I gave the specifications to the 173rd Engineers and they put it together."

Sp4 Richard Pence of Newport Beach, Calif., and PFC Alan Grigas of Shenorock, N.Y., built the incubator in two days. Using salvaged materials, the men fashioned the incubator from scrap wood, plexiglass from an airplane windshield, a poncho and some screen.

Miss Hoang Thi Nhu Quynh, chief of maternity at the small village hospital, was all aglow when the physician and the engineers arrived with the long-awaited incubator.

"We usually have about five premature babies each month and before, nearly all of them have died," she said. "Now I am confident we can save a great many," she added with a smile.

A competent midwife and nurse, Miss Quynh received three years of training in Saigon and 18 months at a nursing school in Montreal, Canada. She is aided by medical technicians and nurses who have had a minimum of one year's experience.

"Warmth and cleanliness are very important to a premature child and the incubator will help us greatly," Miss Quynh explained.

Maj. Winkler, who has been working with the Bong Son Hospital since August, is a graduate of the University of Illinois Medical School.

Being an obstetrician and gynecologist has helped him in assisting Miss Quynh at the maternity ward.

"We try to help them in every way we can," Winkler commented," and Miss Quynh has made remarkable improvement in the [illegible] of the hospital."

GEN. GOODPASTER

GEN. LEMNITZER

Goodpaster Named NATO Commander

WASHINGTON (ANF) — President Richard M. Nixon has announced that Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer will retire as supreme allied commander in Europe on July 1 and will be replaced by Gen. Andrew J. Goodpaster, present deputy commander of American forces in Vietnam.

Gen. Lemnitzer, who will be 70 in August, requested to be reverted to retired status. He has served in his present position since Jan. 1, 1963. Prior to holding this NATO post, he was Army chief of staff and chairman of the joint chiefs of staff.

The NATO Defense Planning Committee requested Nixon nominate a successor to Gen. Lemnitzer and he named Gen. Goodpaster for the committee's consideration. The committee unanimously approved, apppointing Goodpaster as supreme allied commander.

At a later time, the President will designate Goodpaster as commander-in-chief of United States forces in Europe, a position Lemnitzer also holds.

Gen. Goodpaster, a 1939 graduate of the United States Military Academy, was assistant to the chairman of the joint chiefs of staff from January 1964 to July 1966, later serving as its director from August 1966 to March 1967. Immediately before being sent to Vietnam, he was commandant of the National War College, Washington, D. C.

For seven years during the Eisenhower administration Gen. Goodpaster served as the President's staff secretary. Before that, he was a member of General Eisenhower's staff at SHAPE.

from automobiles and if the "Mysterious Litterbug" is not observed depositing the trash, he will return and retrieve it.

Persons seeing a "Mystery Litterbug" will be given a check for $15 provided they approach him and ask: "Are you the Mystery Litterbug?"

Four such awards are to be made each day during the week.

The cleanup campaign is being held to remove leaves and debris accumulated over the winter, to prune and shape shrubbery, clean flower beds, rake grassy areas, trim grass along curbs, walks and fences, police outlying areas and prepare grounds for the growing season.

The cleanup campaign will reach all areas of the reservation.

A spokesman for this year's campaign expressed hope that the impact will be great enough to last throughout the entire year.

Ex-Russian Officer Writes for Magazine

A former Russian field grade officer, Vyacheslav P. Artemiev, and Maj. Gen. Ellis W. Williamson, commander of the 25th U. S. Infantry Division in South Vietnam, are two of the featured authors in the March-April edition of Infantry Magazine.

Before defecting to the West, Artemiev served in the Soviet Army as a lieutenant colonel during World War II. A graduate of the Soviet War College, he is now a professor of military science at the U. S. Army Institute for Advanced Russian and East European Studies. His article, "Grechko," is an account of the military and political developments influencing the career of Marshall Andrei Grechko, Minister of Defense of the Soviet Union.

Artemiev draws upon his personal recollections of Marshall Grechko from his first assignment in the Russian Army to his eventual appointment of Minister of Defense.

"Bullets Not Bodies" is the title of Gen. Williamson's article that describes in detail the actions of a 36-man platoon which defeated a night attack by an enemy battalion near Tay Ninh. He uses this combat action to point out the importance of proper utilization of air and ground fire support. He also comments on several weaknesses he found on reviewing the combat reports.

The Infantry School position on the bayonet in a modern Army is the subject of a story written by a former assistant editor of Infantry, Lt. Michael D. Qualls. Facts for this story, "Cold Steel", were taken from a study conducted by the school.

The bayonet is also the subject of an article by Capt. James T. Collins. In a personal opinion article, Collins suggests that changes should be made by the Army in its attitude toward the use of the bayonet for training purposes and as a combat weapon.

"Into the A Shau" by Maj. Emmett Kelly describes in detail the fire support procedures and combat actions of the 191st Airborne Division and the Republic of Vietnam's 1st Division early last August when they invaded the A Shau on a combined operation. The story points out the ability of American and South Vietnamese forces to make such an invasion with little prior notice while still retaining massive fire support.

Ranger Camp Chief Honored

DAHLONEGA, Ga.—The Junior Chamber of Commerce here has named Lt. Col. O. J. Shalikashvili, commanding officer of the Mountain Ranger Camp, outstanding young man of the year of the north Georgia Community.

Shalikashvili was presented the award in a special program Feb. 25. He was cited for "outstanding contributions to the leadership and development of American youth through efforts he and personnel of the Mountain Ranger Camp contributed to community projects and activities of Lumpkin County and Dahlonega."

The civic organization expressed appreciation for the close cooperation and integration of efforts between the Ranger Camp and the civilian community.

Turkey Hunters Must Be Alert

Opening of the spring turkey season in Georgia Monday is an anxiously awaited date for the avid hunter. For the soldier in training in off post areas the season may pose a safety threat if hunters are not certain of their targets.

Hunters in Stewart and Quitman counties are asked to devote close attention to their targets making sure it is not a Noncommissioned Officer Candidate or Officer Candidate conducting patrol ling training.

Extensive training is conducted in both counties during the daytime and at night. Hunters are asked to be safety conscious and not fire at indiscernible targets. Without proper warning the unaware hunter could easily fire on students.

Office Helps Soldier Find Local Housing

By Spt Frank Truchon

During its first year, the Housing Referral Office here has helped 3,699 families to obtain off - post housing.

The housing referral service is a branch of the Family Housing office. When a married person receives orders to report to Fort Benning, part of his original in-processing includes reporting to the office. If government quarters are not available or if a person is not eligible for these quarters, he is then referred to Housing Referral for help in obtaining off-post housing.

At Housing Referral a person receives a list of restrictive-sanctioned housing, so listed because of discriminatory renting practices. He cannot rent any of these apartments. He also receives help in locating housing which is suitable in terms of size and monthly rent.

Leonard R. Robinson, chief of the Housing Referral Office, said, "We have a list of 6,000 approved apartments, homes and trailers in Columbus. All of these receive an inspection to determine if the location is suitable in terms of cleanliness, health, safety and environmental conditions."

Robinson added that most housing is within 20 minutes driving distance of the post. The average cost is $110 a month for a two-bedroom furnished apartment, excluding the cost of utilities.

After a soldier states his needs to the Office he receives a list of five or six apartments that approximate his needs. He does not have to choose any of the suggested apartments, and may live anywhere he wishes except in restrictive-sanctioned housing.

Robinson said, "We work closely with the real estate agents, who inform our office what apartments are available and what new ones are being built. We have received magnificent cooperation from the Columbus Real Estate Board in connection with housing."

The Housing Referral Office chief added, "Our office is constantly seeking to obtain suitable housing. During the past year we received 1,245 long-distance calls about off-post housing. We also placed over 9,000 calls in this area in search of proper apartments or trailers for persons who come to us for help."

The Housing Referral Office is open from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday in Bldg. 5, Room No. 1.

Gonzales Hits Mark With Re-Up

Spt Robert Gonzales became the 100th man to reenlist in the 197th Inf. Bde this year, when Lt. William Chapitow swore him in for six more years last week.

Standing alongside Gonzales as witnesses were MSgt. Harold Woodward, Reenlistment NCO, and SSgt. Eugene Steele.

Gonzales will be sent to Germany at the end of the month and wanted to be sworn in here. He did not find out about his distinction until the morning of the ceremony and was pleasantly surprised. "The Army has been my home since I was 17 years old," he said. Gonzales is now 22.

Gonzales is assigned to Co. C, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. as a member of the Honor Guard.

B-5-1 Captures Trainee Honors

Co. B was named Honor Company during graduation ceremonies of 5th Bn., ATC, at Marshall Bowl last week.

Co. B, commanded by Capt. Ramon Acosta, topped the battalion on the tested phases of basic training.

Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis presented the American Spirit Honor Medal to Pvt. Stephen M. Zimpel, Co. E.

Pvts. William A. Kelting, Co. A; Archie D. O'Steen, Co. B; Clarence E. Cogdell, Co. D; and James M. Strickland, Co. E, received Outstanding Trainee plaques and Certificates of Achievement from battalion commander Lt. Col. George R. Giles.

Col. Richard A. Haeder, 1st Bde. Commander, awarded the brigade commander's Trophy to SFC Alvin W. Grimes, senior drill sergeant of Co. B.

SSgt. Robert L. Harley, Co. B, was awarded the "Outstanding Drill Sergeant Trophy", by Giles.

Draft To Take 27,600 in May

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The Department of Defense has requested the Selective Service System provide 27,600 inductees in May 1969.

Of this total, 25,600 will be assigned to the Army and 2,000 to the Marine Corps.

This request supports currently approved force levels and will assure a timely flow of replacements for men completing their terms of service, the Department of Defense said.

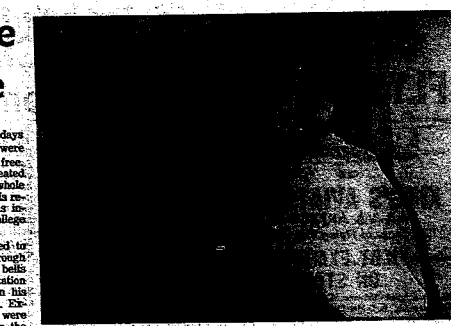
Brazilian Jail, Canoe Ride Make Trip Unforgettable



JUNGLE EXPLORER HENRY WITH SKIN OF BRAZILIAN ANIMAL
He Grew Beard On Trip Two Years Ago

By PFC Ben Conningham

Jail, canoe wrecks, and crocodile hunting was all part of Sgt. Frank P. Henry's exploration into the Amazon jungles.

Henry, who is now completing Airborne training in 48th Co., TSB, made the trip two summers ago while attending Wilmington College, N. C.

"I was working with both the biology and drama departments of my school," he said. "It was my purpose to bring back a general collection of representative nature." Henry added that he was more interested in the educational aspect of the trip than anything else.

When he reached South America he set up up his base camp at the small village of Makupa, in the interior of Brazil. It was here, said Henry, that he got some of his most interesting bird specimens.

Henry explored the rivers and jungle regions of the lower Amazon Basin. "The Amazon jungle is the most intense in the world," said Henry.

"My secret in getting along with the Indians was simply living as they did, eating as they did, and doing as they would do."

In these jungles Henry came across a small mission. Not far from this mission was a small island inhabited by many species of rare birds. He wanted to travel over and gather specimens and photographs at this natural aviary.

The waters between the island and his camp were dangerous but Henry, (who had been a professional guide in Canada), considered himself an expert with a canoe, and made ready for the trip.

A nun tried in vain to explain the perils of such a venture. Henry left, confident of his abilities.

"The rapids," he said, "were entirely different from those of Canada. My canoe was completey destroyed, and I was swept three miles down river before I was finally picked up by an Indian fisherman. It was one of the three times in my life that I was actually looking at death."

In addition to the biological specimens Henry gathered, he also collected Indian artifacts and skins of many animals from crocodiles to cougar for his drama department at Wilmington.

And then there was his two-day stay in a Brazilian jail. After missing his scheduled flight to Miami Henry decided to spend his time doing some further research up the Rio Negro. While he fished one day on the river a Brazilian amphibious craft approached him and asked to see his travel papers.

"Due to a lack of communication," as Henry put it, "they arrested me and flew me five hours to jail!"

On the second day of Henry's imprisonment he faked a malaria attack to gain the attention of one of the guards. The guard was persuaded (for $3) to contact Henry's Indian guide who, in turn, got Henry released from jail. "Those were two of the worst days of my life. The jail conditions were really bad," said Henry.

Within a couple of days Henry's papers were cleared and he was free. "I was always treated very well during the whole time," he said. After his release from jail he was invited to speak at a college in Belem, Brazil.

When Henry returned to the United States through Miami, two conveyor belts at the customs station were used to bring in his various collections. Experts in many fields were on hand to pick over the specimens of insects, rare birds and other animals. It is estimated by Henry that his entire collection was worth "about eight thousand dollars."

Henry's entire trip cost him $600.

Of his plans after his military service Henry said: "I plan on going to work for National Geographic magazine and possibly the Smithsonian Institute. I will go back to the Amazon for further research, and will also be going on an exploration into the Congo."

First Time in the Southeast

Kansas City Orchestra Slates Concert at Auburn

When the Kansas City Philharmonic Orchestra comes to Auburn on Monday it will mark the first southeastern tour for the 36-year-old orchestra.

Curtain time is 8:15 p.m. in the Auburn Memorial Coliseum. Seating will accommodate 10,000 persons in the area surrounding the main entrance.

The Kansas City Philharmonic has 90 members, one-third of whom are women. There are nine couples among the musicians. For the past 15 years they have appeared on "The Kansas City Hour," a series of regular weekly radio and television programs.

Mainz Opera

The Orchestra is under the direction of Hans Schweiger, who has led the ensemble for more than half of its history. Schweiger, acclaimed "a musician of unusual force and distinction," was general music director of the Mainz Opera before he was 25.

He became General Music Director of the Free State of Danzig in 1936, and was offered the position of Principal Conductor at the Berlin State Opera. His distaste for the new Nazi regime made him decide against this and he accepted the position of Conductor of the Tokyo Imperial Orchestra in Japan, emigrating to the United States in 1938.

The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers has six times honored the Kansas City Philharmonic with the ASCAP award.

Rockefeller Grant

A Rockefeller Foundation grant of over $20,000 was received by the Orchestra to develop regional concerts, and the group is supported by the Missouri State Council of the Arts, and the Kansas Cultural Arts Commission. A Ford Foundation program has recently been instituted with matching local funds.

During its 30-week season, the Kansas City Philharmonic plays 35 concerts in its four principal series, 33 tour concerts, 42 school concerts, three special concerts and 14 radio and television shows.

The Orchestra has 30 violins, 12 violas, 10 cellos, nine basses, three flutes and piccolo, three oboes and English Horn, three clarinets and bass clarinet, three bassoons and contra-bassoon, five horns, three trumpets, three trombones, one tuba, one timpani, three percussions, and one harp.

'Mayerling' Promises Much But Produces Little

A REVIEW

By Jerry Ganfield

Waiting to see "Mayerling," now playing post theaters, is like anticipating a hearty, calorie-filled strawberry sundae and then discovering it's ninety-nine per cent tasteless confectionary.

Omar Sharif and Catharine Deneuve star in this Terrance Young production which concerns the ill - fated Prince Rudolf, heir apparent to the Austro-Hungarian throne of the Hapsburgs.

The historical facts upon which the movie rests are vague, the events intentionally being shrouded with secrecy by the royal family. The plot is therefore simple, bringing out the highpoints of what is known, and unfortunately the movie turns out to be only a sweet romance without much depth.

Rudolf, played by Sharif, is barely on civil terms with his father Emperor Franz - Josef. Besides resenting his ineptitude as a parent, Rudolph disagrees with his father's traditional government. Because of the prince's progressive thinking he is sought after as a figurehead for an insurgent Hungarian group.

Different Story

It is a different story altogether with his mother, the Empress Elizabeth. Although she has been notably absent for most of his youth, the prince showers her with affection and sweet adoration.

In cameo roles Ava Gardner and James Mason are featured as the royal parents. We appreciate Ava for her aging beauty — "The most beautiful woman and best equestrienne in Europe" — and James Mason for his studied political lines — what's wrong with what we've used for centuries."

The incident which brings the royal Hapsburg family together is the celebration of the prince's first wedding aniversary. What a happy event it is too, except for Rudolf's wife, the Archduchess.

The Belgian archduchess — detested by the Emperor, a convenient match for the Emperor — is portrayed as a little vain, a little scrawny, and all but lovable.

Rudolf has the audacity to escort to the grand ball his new found love, Baroness Mary Vetsera, played by Catharine Deneuve. The Baroness' family has never been recognized at court, it not being of the old nobility. The guests are astounded when the prince has eyes only for Mary and will dance only with her.

When the wife becomes a little put out by the open insult, the Emperor calms her: "Remember you're an archduchess." Dutifully she holds her chin up.

Most of the film is a love affair between the camera and the two stars. It dwells on Sharif's handsome face and then on Catharine's fair one. We watch Sharif watch Catharine, and Catharine cast shy glances at Sharif, and. . .

In one of several overly long scenes, the camera turns from watching them watch each other to tune in on a rather coarse production of a deadly ballet.

One of the good characterizations in the film was that of a royal princess. An eternal matchmaker for the prince, she cuts quite a humorous figure in the staid royal family.

Edward Reconciled

In the end the lovers must decide their futures for it is obvious they cannot make a declaration of their love. The prince seeks the advice of the visiting Edward, Prince of Wales, but their outlooks on life are too divergent to meet on common ground. Edward is reconciled to his royal role. He will not soon be king of England—"Victoria is only 85!" He also advises the prince to do as he will do, return from his escapades to his wife. He is a realist.

The Prince must do otherwise because of his nature. He and Mary retire to Mayerling, his hunting lodge south of Vienna.

As the ending is historical fact, viewers may anticipate the outcome, but even knowing it, the last moments are still horrible.

Wooden

Sharif and Catharine Deneuve seem wooden and lifeless in the roles, registering little emotional conviction even in their moments of crisis.

The film, was shot on location for many scenes, but in sequences where a set has been built, it is painfully obvious. Whoever spent time on some of the actors' makeup should have spent a little more — or a little less.

By the story's conclusion, the viewer has followed a bitter-sweet romance devoid of its historical consequence.

Chess Player Wins 9 of 10 At Kelly Hill

Thomas Nard, a known chess player, put on a display of chess mastery Sunday as he played simultaneously with ten chess buffs at the Kelly Hill Service Club.

The 10 men then decided to form a chess club and, after more practice, they might take on Mr. Nard again.

One man did beat Mr. Nard but the others all fell before his experienced playing.

As the vice president of the Georgia Chess Club and president of the Columbus Chess Club, Mr. Nard promised his help in building the chess club here at Kelley Hill. All interested persons are invited to attend Monday evenings at 7:30 at the Kelley Hill Service Club.

Chess matches, tournaments and lessons on better chess playing will be held every Monday.

Kelly Hill Club To Sponsor Art Exhibit Sunday

Mr. Jim Hawkins will exhibit his collection of metal sculptures and wood carvings at Kelley Hill Service Club, Sunday at 3 p.m.

Wood carving began as a hobby for Mr. Hawkins almost ten years ago. The welding began four years ago when he started making flower containers from metal for his wife and Garden Club members. Some of his metal sculptures were used in "Black Comedy" presented at the Springer Opera House in Columbus.

He presently has pieces exhibited at "That Place," the new art gallery opening in Columbus, featuring antinques and many different works of art.

Everyone is invited. There will be no admission charge. For further information contact Miss Jeanie McLendon, recreation specialist at Kelley Hill Service Club, 544-1721.

Synopsis

I LOVE YOU ALICE B. TOKLAS—Peter Sellers plays the "de-squared" hero who unravels in a hippie haven. He is a successful Los Angeles lawyer who isn't sure and doesn't know what he is all about!! The story is an amusing contemporary satire about a nervous lawyer harassed by his mother and his pushy fiancee, and he flees from the altar to hippie land.

DUEL AT DIABLO. James Garner, while on his way to Fort Creel, rescues Bibi Andersson, wife of Army mule skinner Dennis Weaver, from the apaches. She begs Gardner to return her to Chief Chata of the Apaches. He refuses by returning her to BLACKBEARD'S GHOST. Gangway Blackbeard's on his wildest spree in 200 years. There's a fantastic phantom on the loose and only you and Dean Jones can see "Blackbeard's Ghost." Peter Ustinov categorically creates comic chaos with the local mobsters, the police, the track team....and poor Dean Jones.

SHOES OF THE FISHERMAN. Worried that the extreme starvation in Red China will result in a nuclear confrontation with his country, the Russian Premier (Sir Laurence Olivier) allows the release of Anthony Quinn, a religious figure long held in Siberia as a political prisoner. Quinn goes to Rome where his humility and humanity result in his being elected Pope when the present Pontiff dies. As the first Russian Pope, Quinn makes the Pontiff a human convincing figure lonely in his quest for World Peace and a man who makes a dramatic gesture to forestall a major catastrophe.

Academy Awards Will Be Shown World-Wide

The Oscar Awards program of the Academy Of Motion Pictures Arts and Sciences will be telecast world-wide for the first time, it was announced by Academy President Gregory Peck and Leonard Goldenson, President of American Broadcasting Companies, Inc.

The telecast of the 41st Awards ceremonies will go live to Mexico and Canada and 30 other countries, by means of color video-tape, color film and black-and-white kinescope, depending on the capabilities or preferences of the country receiving it. The tape or film will be delivered within hours after the awards program is over and will be available for prime time broadcast.

The line-up of countries which will see the 41st Awards broadcast are the United Kingdom, Australia, Mexico, Korea, Venezuela, Argentina, Austria, Greece, Holland, Finland, Italy, New Zealand, Uruguay, Chile, Costa Rica, Guatemala, Panama, Nicaragua, The Dominican Republic, Ecuador, San Salvador, Honduras, Norway, Spain, Portugal, Belgium, Switzerland, Thailand, Singapore, Hong Kong, The Philippines, Canada and The United States.

The show will be telecast from the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion of the Los Angeles County Music Center beginning at 10 p.m., EST, Monday, April 14.

Several other countries may soon be added to the roster. A number have indicated interest in broadcasting the program but have not yet concluded necessary agreements.

Non-English speaking countries which wish to do so will be able to provide their own "voice-over" translations as their broadcasts progress, eliminating any need for foreign-language dubbing on the film or tape.

ABC Films, Inc. will handle world-wide distribution.

Porter Wagoner Show Slated Here in April

The Porter Wagoner Show, a weekly coast-to-coast television program, will be at Gowdy Baseball Field April 20.

The Grand Ole Opry headliner will play two performances, at 2:30 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. With him will be an all-star cast, including Charlie Pride, Mell Tillis, Johnny Duncan, Dolly Parton, Speck Rhodes and the Wagon Masters.

Tickets will be available at all Special Services Bowling Centers, Craft Shops, Theaters and the Entertainment Center and Recreation Office, Building 396, until 1 p.m., April 18. The price of the tickets is $1 each.

Porter Wagoner first started out in a little town in Missouri when he would take his guitar to his job as a clerk in a market and play for the owner and customers during-times of slack business.

The owner liked Porter's singing so much he sponsored a 15-minute early morning show on a local radio station that featured Porter Wagoner. This attracted the attention of KWTO in Springfield, Missouri, and in the fall of 1951, Wagoner landed a spot on a weekly radio program there.

When the popular Ozark Jubilee was born at KWTO with the late Red Foley directing the show's talent, Red took Wagoner under his wing and taught him many of the important points of being a successful entertainer. Porter was soon a featured singer on the nationally televised show.

Hot Line to the Hits

'Bayou Country' Almost Makes It

By Pete Lis

Creedence Clearwater Revival's new Lp, BAYOU COUNTRY, suffers from one major fault, inconsistency. The good cuts are very good, but the bad ones just don't make it.

The group's sound is very reminiscent of the early Stones-hard rock based in blues. John Fogerty carries the group with his very fine lead guitar, in addition to his very good vocal and harp work. He also wrote all of Creedence's original songs, and arranged and produced the album. He probably swept out the studio when the sessions were over, too.

Despite John's dominance, the group has a solid overall sound. Stu Cook on bass, brother Tom Fogerty on rhythm guitar, and Doug Clifford on drums are all good musicians. They lay down a heavy backing for Fogerty, and the result is a very tight sound.

The main failing of the bad cuts is a lack of originality. "Graveyard Train" is a repeat of "Gloomy" on the first album. "Gloomy" wasn't worth much in the first place, and "Train" dragged out to eight minutes and thirty-two seconds, is simply boring. "Penthouse Pauper" is similar to "The Working Man", also on the first LP. The music and lyrics are good, but they've been heard before.

"Good Golly Miss Molly" is not nearly as exciting as the version originality done by Little Richard, though the group gets a good workout on this one. "Bootleg" is a good, short number which explains how something often becomes more attractive when it is illegal. Again, the lyrics are good, but even here, Fogerty uses the same riffs on "Keep on Chooglin." A few more fresh ideas would be helpful.

Blue Bayou

The good cuts do come off well. "Born on the Bayou" is a very bluesy thing which inspired the LP title. This contains some of John's best vocal work. "Proud Mary", their current number one single, is a good, easy-rolling song concerning a Mississippi river-boat. The Fogerty's guitars help to create a gentle, flowing mood. I take it that "Proud Mary" is the name of the boat.

"Keep on Chooglin" is Creedence Clearwater Revival's rave-up, a good long, toe-tapping song. As is usually the case with such numbers, it sounds better in person than on record. Nonetheless, CCR has managed to capture some of the excitement of a live performance on this album. Exactly what chooglin' is, or how you do it, is not explained. However, Creedence Clearwater Revival would like us all to keep on doing it (apparently we've been doing it all along without knowing it) and it seems like a good idea in these troubled times.

Overall, the material in BAYOU COUNTRY is not always strong, but Creedence Clearwater Revival plays with enough gusto to overcome this problem. With the stronger material, they are excellent. It seems to me though, that CCR has just about exhausted its supply of blues-rock numbers. They have produced two fine albums; so far, so good. But I think (and hope) that we will see new directions in their forthcoming albums . . . and the beat goes on . . .

ROD AND GUN CLUB NEWS

Last Second Decides 3rd Army Cage Title

By Bill Kloeb

The Rod and Gun Club sponsored Fishing Derby gets underway Tuesday. Prizes will be awarded each month to the fisherman catching the largest bass, bream and catfish.

The rules are simple. The fisherman must register at the Rod and Gun Headquarters before fishing, catch the fish with rod and reel or pole, take the fish from one of the post ponds and bring the catch to Rod and Gun Club Headquarters for official weighing. Fish caught at night after the club is closed may be brought in the next day.

Sportsmen are reminded that the 1968-69 hunting and fishing licenses, regular and associate Rod and Gun Club memberships and annual post hunting and fishing permits authorized Rod and Gun Club members expire Monday. All of these items may be obtained at the Rod and Gun Club Headquarters.

Fishing licenses cost $2.25; a hunting license, $3.25 or a combination license may be bought for $5.50. A Rod and Gun Club membership is $4 with an additional $1 for each family member over 16 years old. An associate membership is $8.

The Rod and Gun Club will sponsor a Turkey Shoot at the club's skeet ranges April 5. Shooting will start at 10 a. m. and continue as long as anyone wants to shoot. Rod and Gun Club will furnish guns and ammunition or competitors may bring their own. Entry fee is $1.

Sportsmen hunting in Stewart and Quitman Counties are reminded that the Infantry School is conducting small unit patrol training in these counties. Hunters are asked to give close attention to their targets—making sure they are not aiming at a Ranger, Officer Candidate or Non-commissioned Officer Candidate.

With the arrival of spring and warmer weather, a hibernating reptile is also appearing on the scene—the snake. In this part of the country there are four types and 20 species of poisonous snakes (coral, rattler, moccasin and copperhead).

The coral snake is from the cobra group and its venom acts chiefly upon the nervous system and may eventually result in paralysis. The rest are pit vipers and their venom affects the circulatory system—coagulation of the blood and collapse from shock is the result.

A person bitten by a nonpoisonous snake seldom experiences any adverse effect other than the scratches left by the snakes's teeth, but when a poisonous snake sinks its fangs into the victim's flesh and injects venom, serious injury and death may result.

To the careful and experienced woodsman, there is only a small chance of ever feeling the fangs of a snake. He knows better than to invite such a possibility. He is too smart to go roaming around the woods or swamps in sneakers or low shoes; he wears boots that cover his ankles and lower portions of his legs. He is sure of what lies beyond a log before he steps over it and is careful not to put his hand in a blind spot to pull himself over a ledge, or rock pile or up a hill.

The odds are more than a million to one that you will not be bitten by a poisonous snake this summer. They are even more negligible if you show a little caution and common sense in the woods and around stream and pond banks, but if you should be so unfortunate and be bitten, the treatment is to apply a tourniquet between the bite and the heart if possible, remain quiet, have your buddy call for evacuation and go to a medical facility. If ice or cold water is available apply it over the wound. Do not cut the wound. This only opens up more area for letting the venom into the blood system.

A list of emergency evacuation sites and telephones is contained in USAIC Reg. 40-2 and USAIC Reg. 210-4, Range and Terrain Regulations. A smart man will determine the location of the phone nearest to the area he intends to hunt or fish before going out. This information is available upon request at Rod and Gun Headquarters.

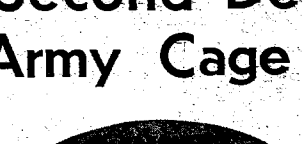
By Jerry Ganfield

The Third Army Men's Basketball Tournament took six days and 31 games to complete, yet was not decided until the final second of the last game March 22.

In a rematch between defending champion Fort Campbell and Fort Jackson, the South Carolina team won the contest and the Third Army cage title on a freethrow with but a second remaining.

Jackson's Dennis Cuff sank the charity toss and led all scorers with 33 points in the 93-92 victory.

After five days of competition at Fort Bragg, N.C., the two teams held identical 4-1 records which forced the playoff.



The Fort Benning Rifles placed behind Fort Jackson and Fort Campbell, posting a 2-3 record. Fort Gordon and Fort Bragg tied for fourth place and Fort Rucker finished last in the Class A competition.

In the battle for the championship, Fort Jackson led by a bucket at the half, 49-47, but never edged ahead more than five points in the game. Cuff guarded Campbell's Bob Purkhiser and held him to 13 points in the second half. Earlier Purkhiser had held a 40 point average.

With two minutes before the final buzzer, the Jackson Bobcats were ahead 91-88. Stalling, Cuff was cornered, and the ball got away from him. Campbell's Charles Paulk then drove in for an easy lay-up to trim the margin to one point.

Waiting for one last shot, Fort Jackson's Cuff was again fouled and went one for two at the free-throw line, but with 15 seconds, Fort Campbell scored to tie the game.

With one second remaining, Cuff received the ball and was fouled. He made the shot good for the victory.

Campbell's Bob Purkhiser was awarded the most valuable player trophy, which he also won in last year's tournament, for his 170-point performance in the week-long tournament series.

The third place Rifles lost their first tournament game to Fort Bragg, but took a contest with Fort Rucker before meeting the eventual champions.

Bill Whitlock, who was high scorer for the Rifles in all of the tournament games, netted 39 points in a 71-63 loss to the Jackson Bobcats.

Returning the next day against Fort Gordon, Whitlock and Jim Rates led the Rifle offensive to reverse the situation, winning by an eight point margin, 87-79. Whitlock sank 31 and Rates followed with 23 points.

In the last match of the tournament for the Rifles, the squad faced defending champion Fort Campbell. Although the Rifle defense held Milwaukee Buck's No. 1 draft choice Charles Paulk to 21 points, the Campbell team outdistanced the Rifles 110-90. Paulk had fouled out with ten minutes remaining in the game, but Purkhiser contributed 29 points for the win.

Whitlock and Charles Pruitt led the Benning team in double figure shooting with 26 and 23 points tallies.

Members of the Fort Benning Rifles were Travis Ragsdale, team captain, 129th MP Co., CTC; Bill Whitlock, Med. Co., Martin Army Hospital; Jim Rates, Co. B, 1SB, TSB; Grady Jackson, H., Btry., 2nd Bn., 10th Arty., 197th Inf. Bde.; Frank Everett, Co. A, 58th Inf. 197th Inf. Bde.; Peter Anderson, 29th Inf. Plat., Scout Dogs; Bernell Blunt, Co. A, 197th Spt. Bn.; Charles Pruitt, Hq. Co., 331st Engr. Gp., CTC; Frank Briggs, 29th Engr. Co., CTC; Skip Mitchell, Hq. Co., TSB.

Coach for the team was Lt. John Williams, Co. C, 1st Bn., CTC.

Hunter Army Air Field won the Class B division for posts with less than 10,000 eligible personnel, winning by a 40-point spread over Red Stone Arsenal, 88-48.

Drivers Cover 110-Mile Course In Sunday's 'March Hare' Rally

With a route straight out of "Alice in Wonderland," Chavaga SCCA's "March Hare" time and distance rally has been set for Sunday.

Registration will be at the Starmount Shopping center located just east of the Lindsey Creek bypass on Buena Vista Road starting at 11 a. m. with the first car on its way at 12:30 p. m.

The 110-mile course is mostly over paved roads but little traffic or congested areas can be expected.

Trophies will be presented in both equipped and unequipped classes with dash plaques going to the first 20 entries.

Unlike European rallies the American time and distance type call for acute navigation and exact calculations of various speeds over different parts of the route.

Some of the equipped cars have high priced computers capable of less than 1-100 of a second or mile error.

The unequipped use slide rules, tables and usually the seat of their pants to win.

The event is open to the public; however, rules allow no more than two adults for each car. There is no limit to the number of children under 12.

Escape envelopes will be issued for those who get lost, enabling them to reach the final check point where refreshments will be available and the trophies will be presented.

RANGERS VOLLEY . . . Fort Benning Rangers played their first game in The Student Brigade Volleyball League, beating Infantry Officer Advance Course 2-69 March 19 with a 15-3 score.

Sport Parachute Club Celebrates 10th Year

By BILL HARDIN

The 85 members of the Fort Benning Sport Parachute Club will celebrate the organization's 10th anniversary April 9.

The club has grown not only in membership during the past decade, but has collected trophies for both team and individual performances. The club also has won acclaim from civic organizations for which members performed.

In addition to the normal weekend jumps that the men and women of the club make, demonstration jumps are held locally, and in cities within a 100-mile radius of Fort Benning.

The club trains its members for participation in competition matches also. Members of the local club are regular entrants in tournaments held in the United States Parachute Association and sanctioned Southwestern and Southeastern area events.

The club's training program has enabled many of its members to walk off with trophies while competing against civilian sport parachutists, and the best sport parachutists from other branches of the military service.

The local club captured six of the 19 trophies

Army Pistol Champs Defend Florida Circuit Title

The U. S. Army Blue Pistol Team defended its pistol championship during the Florida Circuit Pistol Matches while firing in the National Mid-Winter matches in Tampa and the Dixie Pistol Matches in Jacksonville.

The National Mid-Winter Matches fired March 13-17 was dominated by the Army Blue Pistol team. It won the .45 caliber team match by setting a new record of 1184. It also won the .22 caliber team match with 1186 and the Center Fire Team match with an 1162, giving them a 3532 over-all team championship.

The Third Army Pistol Team from Fort Benning placed second in the Center Fire Team Match.

Individually the Army shooters from the Marksmanship Training Unit took home a share of trophies, SSgt. Bonnie Harmon, MTU, won the Grand Championship with a 2643. Harmon also won the .45 aggregate with an 884 score. Army marksman SSgt. Merriweather Jones fired a 889 for the .22 caliber aggregate win.

Marine Corps shooter Francis Higginson won the Center Fire aggregate with an 886. SSgt. Arnold Vitarbo, USAF, set a new record of 571 in winning the Free Pistol Match.

The women's championship went to the Army's distaff shooter SSgt. Barbara Hile with 2510.

The Army Pistol Team continued its winning way at the Dixie Pistol Match in Jacksonville, March 20-24.

The Army team showed its shooting ability by taking first and second in the team matches. Army Grey out-shot Army Blue by one point in the .22 and Center Fire team matches. Army Grey fired 1178 compared to Blue's 1177 in the .22 match, and 1168 compared to 1167 in the Center Fire, Match. Army Blue turned the tables in the .45 match by totaling an 1167 compared to Grey's second place 1155.

Blue's 1167 in the .45 match gave the margin it needed to win the over-all team championship with a 3511 over Grey's 3501 and Air Force's 3482.

The Individual Grand Championship was won by Navy's PO1 Donald Hamilton with a 2659. Right behind Hamilton was Army's SFC Hezekiah Clark with 2654 and SSgt. Marvin Black with 2649.

Hamilton, Navy's top pistol shooter won the .45 aggregate with an 886 and the Center Fire aggregate by out X-ing Army's SFC Emil Heugatter 885-52x to 885-49x respectively. Maj. Franklin Green, USAF, won the .22 aggregate by out-pointing SGM William Blankenship 892 to 890.

Blankenship won the service pistol championship with 876 compared to Marine Corps' Francis Higginson's 874.

The U. S. Army Pistol Team is presently preparing for matches to be held here in early April.

Atlanta Braves Play Exhibition

Although seats are still available for the Atlanta Braves' exhibition baseball game scheduled at Golden Park April 4, ticket sales have been brisk, according to Sam Greer, Kiwanis ticket chairman.

Tickets may be purchased from the National Bank of Fort Benning, Special Services and all major units on post.

The Braves will play the Richmond, Va., Braves, a farm club belonging to the Atlanta team, beginning at 7 p.m.

The Kiwanis Club of Columbus is sponsoring the game and will use the proceeds for community projects such as "Listening Eyes," a school for deaf children.

Satchel Paige, newly-assigned assistant trainer and former all star pitcher, will pitch part of the game.

Ticket prices range from $1.50 for bleacher seats to $5.50 for reserved and box seats.

Programs and souvenirs will be on sale at the game with fifty autographed baseballs to be given away to persons holding programs with lucky numbers.

The two Braves teams will meet again April 6 at Atlanta Stadium in the last preseason game. Game time is 2:15 p.m.

Projects Finance Trip

Troop Will Send 6 Scouts to National Jamboree

Six boys from Boy Scout Troop 237 have been selected to attend the 7th Annual National Jamboree at Farragut State Park, Idaho, from July 15-22.

Roger Butterbaugh, Charles Caskey, Ed Willingham, Chris Thomas, Steve Dreyer, and Dennis Hudson were selected on the basis of their contribution and participation in the local scouting program.

The troop has been engaged in fund raising projects since last October to finance the trip.

"Through light bulb sales, solicitation of local merchants, and work projects, we have been able to raise approximately $1,800 of the needed $2,250 for the trip," said Lt. Col. Lemuel M. Thomas, scout master for the troop. "We plan to hold a Bar-Bee-Que April 26th to raise the rest."

The troop plans at least six goodwill projects for the Fort Benning Columbus area during the coming year.

"Relieving that charity begins at home, our first project of the year was to fix up our headquarters, Camp Pine Knot," related Col. Thomas. "The boys fenced in the area, opened a new entrance road, built a parking area, developed a mile long nature trail and planted 2,000 pine seedlings."

Two future projects are to clean up a local shopping center and church yard. The other four will be determined at the monthly patrol leader council meetings.

"It's not all work and no play though," Col. Thomas assured, "We plan to take the boys on hiking trips along the historic trails in the Talladega National Forest in Alabama, help plan a 50 mile canoe trip, and spend two weeks during the summer at Camp MacKenzie, a local scout camp.

"These activities will require the scouts to spend 30 days and nights out-of-doors.

Other goals for the year are to advance every scout two ranks, gain 100 per cent Boy's Life magazine subscriptions, train all troop leaders and become "Emergency Prepared.

"We hope our program will help to build generals of the future," said Col. Thomas.

The troop is sponsored by the 5th Battalion, 31st Infantry, of the 197th Infantry Brigade.

Fort Benning Barracuda Swim Team

The Barracuda Swim Team traveled to the University of Georgia in Athens last weekend for the Region III AAU Championships. Fort Benning Barracudas who went were Wayne Wahner, Robert Kenyon, John Nixon, Jim Morris, Doug Mills, Janice Acuff, Kathy Giles, Rose Rodreiguez, and Lori Robnett.

Robert Kenyon and Wayne Wahner completed the 100-yd freestyle under a minute. The next meet the team will attend will be a tri-meet at Carrollton, Georgia.

ROTC Cadets Compete In AUSA Invitational

More than 600 Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps cadets are expected to compete here in an invitational rifle team match-drill team competition May 3.

A similar competition held last year, drew 434 Junior ROTC cadets on 22 rifle and 16 drill teams from Georgia, Florida and Tennessee.

Rifle teams will be composed of four firing members and one alternate. The matches will be held on the International 50-meter outdoor range using the International 50-meter target.

High individual winners will be determined from scores fired in the team match. Alternates will be allowed to fire for individual events.

Drill teams will be composed of 12 to 24 members performing both mandatory and elective [illegible]

Individual drill competition will be limited to two cadets from each school. Judging will be on the manual of firms and facing movements, using the elimination method to determine the winners.

2 Companies Try New Jungle Boot

by S.Sgt. Bernard P. Hoffer Jr.

In a step to broaden the testing of the new modified jungle combat boot which the U.S. Army Infantry Board is testing, the materiel test board issued the modified footgear this week to two companies in the 197th Inf. Bde.

Receiving the test boot were Co. B, 1st Bn., 58th Inf. and C. A, 5th Bn., 31st Inf. The Field Equipment Test Division of the Infantry Board will be directing and monitoring the testing of the new item.

The two companies are participating in the controlled confirmatory test of the experimental tropical combat boot for a six-month serviceability-usability program. During the period, test soldiers will be asked to evaluate the new boot and insole for its comfort and durability. Simultaneously with the boot test, a product improvement test of a new boot insole is being conducted.

Weekly reports from each wearer of the modified boot and insole will be analyzed and will cover all phases of normal duty. The test soldier will be queried as to his activity during the week, types of weather in which the boot has been subjected to, types of terrain over which they have been worn and the wearer's personal evaluation of the comfort afforded by the new boot. At the termination of the month test, each soldier will complete a comment sheet and evaluation report on which he gives a comparability of the new boot with the standard Army combat boot presently being used by soldiers in Vietnam. All the soldiers working in the testing program are Vietnam combat veterans.

Capt. William W. Curl III, B Co. commander, and Capt. James C. Williams Jr., of Co. A have been working closely with the Infantry Board's Field Test Division in selecting and briefing test soldiers on the conduct and importance of the tests.

Test Officer from the Infantry test board's FET Division on the boot project is Capt. Jimmy Brodock. He is being assisted

BOQs Get Kitchen Appliances

The aroma of bacon and eggs frying drifted through the room. The cook left the stove just for a minute, and transferred a load of clothes from the washer to the dryer. Then he completed cooking the breakfast and in a few minutes a hearty meal was on the table.

This scene is common place in family housing throughout post, but this week it became a reality for permanent party bachelor officers as kitchen and laundry facilities were installed in two BOQ buildings on main post.

Maj. Mark Smith, president of the Bachelor Quarters Billeting Fund council, and Quentin E. Fagan, Billeting Officer, decided some months ago that officers living in BOQ's needed facilities for cooking and laundry. Although recently-remodeled Olson Hall has such facilities, it serves only transient officers who seldom stay long enough to "set up house."

BOQ funds were authorized by the council for the purchase and installation of necessary equipment. Soon modern washers, dryers, stoves, sinks and kitchen cabinets were installed. No refrigerators were needed in the kitchens, as each BOQ room at Fort Benning was already provided with a footlocker-size refrigerator.

Kitchen tables and chairs and new curtains in the kitchen-lounge area topped off the list of additions. Good news for penny-watching young officers is that the laundry machines do not require coins.

To celebrate the "grand opening" of the new BOQ facilities in Bldgs 973 and 975, Smith held the March council meeting in one of served brunch to the members.

One characteristic of the brunch revealed it as a bachelor enterprise: paper plates.

"I just don't like to wash dishes," said the Major.

'Know Their Job'

Prock Praises NCO Grads

By Sgt. Roger Ruhl

"How are NCOC graduates REALLY doing in 'Nam?" That's a question many military people are asking.

NCO candidates in the 76th Co. don't have far to go for a complete report. The man in the know is their Tactical NCO.

SFC Robert Prock, with 28 months in Vietnam, is an enthusiastic booster of the course which is currently turning out over 200 combat NCO's each week.

"When I left," says Prock, who returned to the States last December, "all three of my squad leaders were graduates of the program. And so was the staff sergeant who replaced me as platoon sergeant.

"Most of them were good. The two E-6s sure knew what they were doing. They all knew the job they had."

Prock, who spent most of his time with the 3d Bn., 506th Inf., 101st Abn. Div. (Airmobile), said the new sergeants were a little reluctant to take charge in most cases. He understood that as "being only natural."

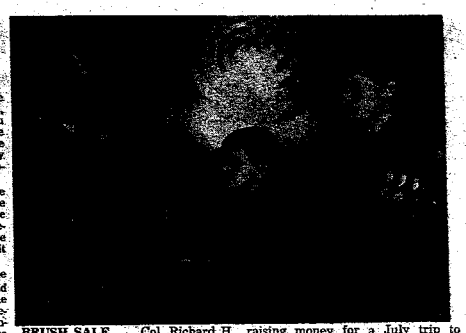
"Most of them are a little hesitant at first. They try to do everything themselves, like taking point. But after a while the find out they can't do it all and they start delegating duties."

Prock feels that the initial orientation and the first days in Vietnam are crucial for the NCOC graduates. "They have the knowledge," he says. "If they get started on the right foot over there, they'll be OK. But if you give 'em a chance to be exposed to some negative squad leader, they're likely to pick up some bad habits.

"I would always tell the new ones that they'll have to prove themselves to the men, but to always remember they ARE the boss, and that's the way it has to be."

Prock is one of the many NCOs who are sold on the objectives of the course. There is some resentment toward the "instant" NCO, but these graduates have proved themselves and have gained the respect of the men under them and their superiors.

In existance since the fall of 1967, the NCO Course has graduated over 8,500 NCO combat leaders. Billed by former Sergeant Major of the Army William O. Wooldridge as "a whole new idea in training," the course was created to relieve the critical shortage of squad and fire team leaders in Vietnam.



BRUSH SALE . . . Col. Richard H. Maeder, commander of the Training Center's 1st Brigade, buys a package of toothbrushes from Boy Scouts of Fort Benning Troop 54, who are raising money for a July trip to Canada. The salesmen are Lee Harbor and Roger Lehman. The Brigade sponsors the Troop.

Prock, with 23 years Service in the Army, thinks the program is doing the job.

Rosso's Response Shows He's 'RA'

By Sgt. Roger Ruhl

The response was automatic from Maj. Walter F. Rosso, even though he knew the telephone call was from his wife.

When he picked up the receiver, the major soundoff: "Maj. Rosso speaking, SIR!"

That's a fair example of the Rosso approach to things in the Army. He's All-Army, period. "I love the Army more than anything," he insists. "It's everything."

The major has been assigned since Jan. 17 to the 7th Stu. Bn., which turns out Infantry NCOs. As the battalion executive officer, he stands as an example to the candidates, for Rosso was an NCO himself for almost seven years.

He applied for a direct commission while at Fort Benning in the late 1950s. "If Capt. (Robert W.) Hill hadn't insisted I get a commission, I'd probably be an NCO today," Rosso was commissioned in the Reserve in September, 1960, while on active duty as a sergeant first class. He came on active duty as an officer in April, 1962.

In his current role, Rosso has found some unexpected restrictions. "Once you're field grade you can't get out with the troops like before. And you can't see the unit reflecting your personality as easily as you could. Now, satisfaction has to come in other areas, like seeing a bigger organization work together, and taking on more responsibility."

This investment starts paying dividends in three years.

Most cars last about as long as the loans that pay for them: three years.

In Sweden, where it's tough being a car, Volvo lasts an average of 11 years.

And while we don't guarantee that a Volvo will last that long in America, we do know that 9 out of every 10 Volvos registered here in the last eleven years are still on the road.

So if you buy a Volvo from us now, it'll still be worth owning three years from now when you get it paid for. You'll be able to stop making car payments and start making payments to yourself. And instead of paying interest to the bank, you'll be able to have the bank pay interest to you.

Automated Range Tests Effectiveness of Man, Rifle

By Rex Ellis

The Infantryman in the recon patrol forward position was advancing stealthily through the jungle maze with his rifle at the ready. He sensed trouble and could almost feel the surrounding presence of the enemy.

Cautiously he edged forward, alert to the slightest movement or sound. His highly trained senses and tuned reflexes were keyed for instantaneous action.

Suddenly, on his left and ahead, he detected a movement and simultaneously an enemy opened fire. He spontaneously gave the position a quick burst from his M14 rifle. With no further enemy response, he cautiously continued his forward advance. Almost immediately on his right and approximately 20 degrees off his course, a pair of enemy soldiers in a well-concealed position opened fire.

Caught in a possible enemy crossfire, the flank security on the patrol column wheeled instantly and fired without taking aim.

This response, called the quick-kill method, is much faster than the act of aligning two sights, but demands close eye and hand coordination of the soldier.

Continuing its probe of the enemy-infested area, the patrol's advance brought small arms fire on the left again. The elusive enemy was vacating his earlier position where he had made contact and was now well established in a more advantageous point.

Is this Vietnam and a play-by-play account of action against the Viet Cong? No, it is taking place on a test range at Fort Benning. The patrol is a U.S. Army Infantry Board test soldier advancing through the new automated test facility on Titus Range. This new electronic maze, the brainchild of Phillip Lee of Litton Industries and the Combat Conditions Test Division (CCT) at the Infantry Board, is used to evaluate the man-weapon combination in the quick fire role.

The Infantry Board tests all weapons, equipment, clothing, and vehicles developed for use by the Infantry.

The mission of the Combat Conditions Test Division is to develop combat conditions testing concepts and to design, validate and standardize testing procedures for testing men and weapons under simulated combat conditions. The division chief is Lt. Col. Charles King. This new automated range falls into this test concept and Phil Lee makes it click. Lee, an electrical wizard and engineer, designs circuit cards and gadgetry as easy as a good cook stirs up a cake.

TEST SOLDIER FIRES AT POP-UP TARGET RANGE

The electronic range consists of 22 targets of single and multiple pop-up silhouettes. It is located over a course similar in terrain and situations to those found in Vietnam. The targets are all activated when the test soldier breaks the beam of a photo-electric cell as he advances through the course. Simultaneously with the activation of a target, a small arms fire simulator begins firing to complete the battle scene. Each of the targets is activated from different range and firing angles to the patrol, thus creating different problems as the man progresses through the course.

The first target, upon activation, pops up at a range of 40 meters and is in view six seconds. If it is hit it will go down immediately, before the six-second timed interval expires. The range of the targets varies from 20 to 80 meters, while the angles of their appearance to the patrol's approach vary from approximately 10 to 90 degrees, both right and left. The man-like silhouette targets and the small arms fire simulators are both activated by the same trigger. The pop-up movement of the target and the sound of the fire from the small arms simulator help the soldier to detect the target and respond with his own rifle fire.

Simultaneously with the target and small arms fire simulator being triggered, the time element is being recorded for the test soldier to find the target and get off his first shot. Along with this, a microphone at each firing position senses the number of shots fired, time between shots, and time between bursts while at the target area, a hit-sensitive target and a microphone are recording the number of hits and number of near misses.

Since the life of a soldier often depends upon his quick response, he has been taught to fire in the "quick fire" mode. This is described in simple terms as "the soldier fires by instinct, without taking aim." Actually the soldier just points his gun and fires simultaneously, similar to a hunter stalking quail or other small game.

The electronic range is a labyrinth of wiring, switches, microphones, relays, and circuit cards tied to a control system in an instrumentation van. It is made up of four components: a recorder; a signal conditioning and control unit; data links consisting of radio and wiring; and sensors.

The course is not established with the idea of timing a soldier from the entry point to the end of the course nor is its function that of combat training. It is designed to measure the effectiveness of the soldier-weapon system, and his ability to acquire the target and destroy it. It is recognized that some training will be derived from the range but again it is not designed with this as an objective.

The operation of the range is designed to increase the understanding of parameters affecting the operational characteristics of the soldier-weapon systems in a simulated combat environment. In like manner, a comparison can be made in the operational effectiveness of selected rifles. The range, therefore, can be quite valuable in evaluating weapon performance. The test facility is sensitive enough to find small differences between weapons, and to pinpoint potential problems areas in the weapon.

Besides looking at modes of fire of weapons, the range is useful for evaluating the effects of such items as protective clothing, eye armor, and helmets when worn by soldiers under simulated combat conditions.

Approximately 60 soldiers have already passed through the electronic range with approximately 1,200 successful engagements. The results, as recorded in the Control Van, are being carefully evaluated by test officials at the Infantry Board.

MSGT WOODWARD, CSM CHICKINI OPEN MOBILE RE-UP OFFICE

Re-Up Office Goes to the Men

The 197th Infantry Bde. has recently initated the service of a mobile reenlistment office, the only one of its kind on post, in order to reach soldiers in the field.

The mobile office was converetd from a 14-foot camping trailer donated by MSgt. Harold Woodward, the brigade's senior reenlistment counselor.

Woodward explained, "I wanted a way in which the re-up office could reach the soldiers in the field who are supporting tactical problems for the Infantry School. Many of these men do not have the time to come in and see us at our regular office."

Visits to training problem areas in the field will not interfere with the soldiers' regular schedules, according to Woodward. He plans to conduct his interviews during the breaks provided by the training program.

95 Catholic Children Receive Communion

Ninety-five Catholic children between the ages of seven and nine who are dependents of persons working at Fort Benning received their first Holy Communion on Sunday at the Sightseeing Road Chapel. Monsignor Jerome Summer, the main post Catholic Chaplain, administered communion during the low mass.

The children received instruction for five months at the Catholic Activities Center to prepare for the event. The center is in charge of the religious education of Catholic children on post and private instruction on the Catholic Church to adults.

Thirty-five volunteer teachers, made up of military men and wives are responsible for providing instruction to approximately 500 Catholic children from kindergarten age through high school.

Sister Genevieve Hartmann, a member of the Order of Missionary Servants of the Blessed Trinity, is the director of the center.

Sister Hartman, said that, for the first communion ceremony, the girls wore white dresses and veil. The boys were dressed in dark pants and white shirts and ties.

Post Takes 2nd Place In Contest

Fort Benning will receive a Secretary of Defense Conservation Award for 1967 in ceremonies at 11:45 a.m. today in the offices of Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr.

Lt. Gen. Charles W. G. Rich, a former commander here, will present the award to Gen. Wright. Gen. Rich is deputy commander, Continental Army Command.

Fort Benning was named runnerup in competition with 46 other military installations. Red River Army Depot, Texarkana, Texas, was named first place winner.

The award is presented annually to the Armed Forces installation that has demonstrated the greatest progress in programs related to conservation, preservation of natural resources, beautification and outdoor recreation.

Last July a team of judges came here to view the post's conservation effort. The group took a two-hour helicopter tour of wildlife and recreation the installation's forest areas.

Trainee Inquiry Section provides answers at ATC

United States Army Training Center-Infantry has recognized many recruits are confronted with a number of problems not the least of which is finding time from the training schedule to seek an answer. Now the USATCI has the solution to both — "Trainee Inquiry Section."

"The trainee inquiry section is composed of members of the Finance and Adjutant General sections," said 2nd Lt. James E. Hauptman, special project officer. "These men go out to the 1st and 2nd Brigades each week to answer questions pertaining to personnel actions and personal problems."

They advise and provide guidance to the trainee on matters pertaining to care and support of dependents, schools, marriage, allotments, indebtedness and many other problem areas.

"Although the system is set up primarily for the basic trainee, it is open to all military personnel," stated Lieutenant Hauptman. "On a trial run for 60 days, the system — if successful — will have accomplished its primary purpose of setting trainees problems quicker and easier without interrupting training schedules."

Cheeks Is Top Driver

Sp4 Johnny Cheeks of Btry. C, 7th Bn., 18th Arty has been named top driver in the 197th Inf. Bde. for March.

The award program, sponsored by the brigade maintenance office, is designed to promote awareness and improvement on the part of drivers toward their vehicles.

Rewards for Cheeks included a three-day pass and a free steak dinner at the Black Angus restaurant.

A "Driver of the Month" plaque, presented by Col. John E. Strever, Jr., also goes to each month's winner.

Prior to joining the 197th, Cheeks served with Co. E, 3rd Bn, 18th Arty. near Pleiku in Vietnam.

which were awarded at the sport parachute meet held here March 1 and 2.

Members of the local club are afforded an opportunity to affiliate with the United States Parachute Association, which offers many incentives, including a monthly magazine and insurance.

New members of the club receive training in parachuting, and in how to pack their parachutes for jumping. The cost of training for a novice jumper is $15 and members of the club are entitled to use the club's equipment when making their jumps.

Additional information concerning the club and its membership requirements may be obtained from SSgt. Leonard D. Hester, manager of the club at 545-4347 or 545-2871.

Fort Benning Mourns Eisenhower

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER WATCHES FIELD EXERCISE ON HIS FORT BENNING VISIT

General Served Here As Lieutenant, Major

The flags were lowered to half-mast Friday following the announcement of General Eisenhower's death, marking the beginning of a 30-day period of mourning for the loss of one of America's greatest soldiers.

The thousands of men assigned to Fort Benning gathered at various formations held throughout the post Saturday morning and listened to their commanders read the official notice of the general's death.

From sunrise to sunset on Saturday, the cannon in front of Infantry Hall was fired every half hour in respect of the General. Starting at noon on Monday, the cannon was fired every minute for 50 minutes.

Early in 1919, General Eisenhower commanded Tank Corps troops at Fort Benning, serving as a lieutenant. He returned to the same post as a major in 1926 and joined the 24th Infantry. During his second tour at Fort Benning, he also served as coach of the post football team.

Besides being stationed at Fort Benning, General Eisenhower served at various posts throughout the Third Army area during his 36-year military career. Prior to World War II, he helped forge the Third Army into an effective fighting force.

Lt. Gen Walter Krueger chose him to be Third Army Chief of Staff during the massive Louisiana Maneuvers of 1941, and prior to that time the former President filled various positions with the Third Army.

One of his earliest duty assignments after gradua-

Ask a Soldier About Eisenhower

Ask an Army man to draw you a word picture of Dwight David Eisenhower. The soldier's response will tell you a great deal about the impact of this American on the nation he served so well for so many years.

For if you ask a younger man, he will sketch a picture of an older man, the President of the United States, the country's elder statesman standing solidly for American ideals.

"Human dignity, economic freedom, individual responsibility, these are the characteristics that distinguish democracy from all other forms devised by man."—Dwight D. Eisenhower.

And if you ask an older man, he will picture a younger man, the Army wartime general and peacetime military governor, chief of staff, and, later, NATO commander.

"Americans, indeed, all free men, remember that in the final choice a soldier's pack is not so heavy a burden as a prisoner's chain."—Dwight D. Eisenhower.

"Ike" was all of these to different generations of Americans in a career of more than half a century of public service. He also was president of Columbia University.

Gen. Eisenhower received his first star just two months before the United States entered World War II and soon began his historic role in the Allied victory.

Early in 1942, he became chief of the War Plans Division of the War Department general staff. Less than six months later he was in England as commanding general of the European Theater. On Nov. 8, 1942, he commanded American forces landing in North Africa and during that month became commander-in-chief of Allied forces in North Africa.

In December 1943, now a four-star general, he be-tion from the United States Military Academy in 1915 was as an instructor in the Officer Training Camp at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga.

General (then Colonel) Eisenhower joined Third Army Headquarters at San Antonio, Tex., in 1941. As Third Army Chief of Staff he participated in the famous Louisiana Maneuvers, the largest in the United States up to that time, and in the following year he was Brig. Gen. Eisenwhower appointed to the War Department General Staff.

A few months later he was designated Commanding General, European Theater. Later as Supreme Commander of Allied Expeditionary Forces, he commanded the D-Day invasion forces and subsequent Allied drive across Europe of which Third Army was a part.

Following World War II he was named to succeed General of the Army George C. Marshall as Army Chief of Staff. He left active duty in 1948, returning in 1950 as Supreme Allied Commander, Europe to head the organization of NATO defenses. He resigned his commission July 18, 1952 to become the Republican presidential candidate, subsequently serving two terms as President of the U. S.

"The Third United States Army has particular reason to mourn the death of General of the Army and former President Dwight D. Eisenhower," Lt. Gen. J. L. Throckmorton said. "As the Commanding General of the Third U. S. Army, of which General Eisenhower was once Chief of Staff, I am deeply aware of the loss that has been suffered by the U. S. Army, the Nation it is pledged to protect, and, indeed, by freedom-loving people throughout the world. We have lost a great soldier and a great statesman whose contributions to the well being of all mankind will never be forgotten.

Lawson Aviation Command leads the major units with 100 per cent participation rate. The Army Training Center is second at 90, followed by Infantry School (85), the 197th (66), the Infantry (61), Center Troop Command (41) and Martin Army Hospital (7).

"The agencies feel the drive is going extremely well," said Schoonover. "But I would like to urge all team captains to make their turn-ins promptly and make sure the drive is a successful one."

The drive ends Tuesday.

came supreme commander of the Allied Expeditionary Forces, planning and coordinating the land, sea and air forces for the Normandy invasion on June 6, 1944.

After the war, General of the Army Eisenhower served as military governor in Germany and as U.S. Army chief of staff. He became president of Columbia in June 1948, and in December 1950 he was designated by President Truman as Supreme Allied Commander in Europe.

In November 1952, the people of the United States elected Dwight D. Eisenhower President. He was reelected in 1956 and served his country as President until January 1961. (ANF)

BG Oscar Davis Addresses Canadian Forces Staff College

Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, the Army Training Center's commanding general, spoke last week to the Canadian Forces Staff College in Toronto.

A former member of the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) and the 101st Airborne Division in Vietnam, Gen. Davis spoke on the basic principles which govern air mobile operations, both from the strategic and tactical point of view.

The Canadian Forces Staff College, one of the three educational institutions making up the Canadian Forces College, prepares officers for senior integrated staff appointments and commands in the Canadian forces.

RESERVE AND GUARD IN RUN

How many National Guard or Army Reserve units ordered to active duty finally were sent to Vietnam?

Seventy-six Army National Guard and Army Reserve units were ordered to active duty in May 1968. Eight National Guard and 35 Army Reserve units have been deployed to South Vietnam with approximately 7,600 men. The first unit to be deployed to Vietnam was the 650th Medical Detachment, Dental Service (from Alabama), which arrived there on August 27, 1968.

The final mobilized Army Reserve Component unit deployed to Southeast Asia arrived in South Vietnam on December 30, 1968. The former Indian Guard unit, Company D, 151st Infantry (Ranger) received extensive training here at Fort Benning before going.

VIETNAM VOLUNTEERS

Have very many soldiers in Europe volunteered for duty in Vietnam?

Spec. 4 Wayne H. Persall of Redlands, Calif., recently became the 50,000th soldier in the U. S. Army Europe to volunteer since Jan. 1, 1965. During the first eight months of 1968, 10,235 enlisted men were accepted for volunteer duty in Vietnam.

The previous year, 19,815 enlisted volunteers seeking transfers to Vietnam were accepted.

"SOLE SURVIVING" SONS

Who qualifies as a sole surviving son and what special privileges do they receive?

For many years, the Army has granted certain soldiers the option of being exempted from duty in areas of active combat operations. These soldiers are known as "sole surviving" sons.

A "sole surviving" son is the last remaining son in a family that has lost one or more of its members (male or female) as a direct result of hazards involved in service in the Armed Forces of the United States. Certain persons may also qualify in instances where the other family member is currently in a prisoner-of-war or missing-in-action status, or is permanently 100 per cent disabled.

In addition, the Military Selective Service Act of 1967, under which Selective Service registrants are inducted, provides that a "sole surviving" son of a family is not eligible for involuntary induction, except during a war or national emergency declared by Congress. This law applies solely to involuntary induction; persons who qualify as "sole surviving" sons still may enlist in the Regular Army or volunteer for induction.

A soldier who qualifies for and desires exemption from assignment to active combat areas must apply to his unit personnel officer. The personnel officer will annotate the records to preclude assignment to an active combat area. One of the soldier's parents may request an exemption by writing to the Chief of Personnel Operations, Department of the Army, Washington, D. C. Such an exemption does not limit a soldier to service in the U. S. and, at any time, the soldier may waive his assignment limitation with regard to combat areas.

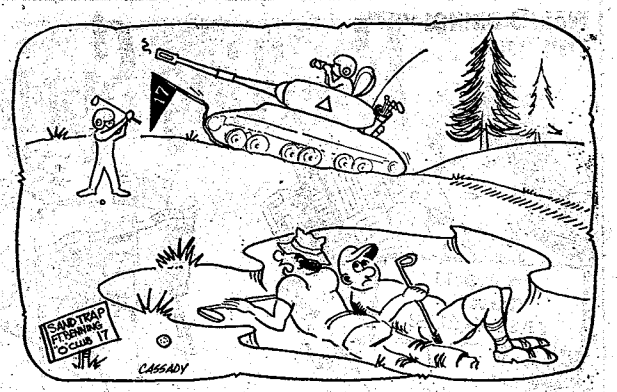
The Army will discharge any enlisted man who becomes a "sole surviving" son of a family, after his induction or date of enlistment, by reason of the death of his father or one or more of the sons or daughters as a direct result of injuries received or disease incurred during service in the Armed Forces of the United States, except during a war or national emergency declared by Congress. The soldier himself must apply to his immediate commander for consideration.

The intent of the policy concerning "sole surviving" sons is to save a family who has already lost one or more of its members in the Armed Forces from suffering possible grief. A soldier who is an only son, the last male member in the family, or a sole surviving son in a family where others have died for reasons not directly a consequence of military service, is not eligible for special consideration.

MOS EVALUATIONS

I just returned from Vietnam. Do I have to undergo my MOS evaluations?

Troops serving in, on their way to, or returning from Southeast Asia are exempted from MOS evaluations. Period of exemption begins the first of the month preceding the month in which EM goes to Southeast Asia and ends the last day of the month he reports to his new non-exempt station.



A better society is built only in a lawful society

Some people live a lifetime without ever feeling that they are in direct, personal contact with the law. They may never be arrested, never be sued or sue anyone. They may never be summoned as a juror or a witness.

If you hold such a view you are wrong. Every day of your life you are affected by laws, and protected by them. Here are just a few examples:

The electricity that lights your home and operates your appliances is subject to laws both as to rate and safety requirements.

The food you eat is subject to laws of marketing and quality.

The clothes you wear are required by law to be labled to protect you against misrepresentation as to materials used.

Traffic laws protect you, and all citizens daily, as driver or pedestrian.

There are laws that assure you of a fair salary, in line with your position and needs.

Health and safety laws apply to all public facilities, including those for recreation and amusements.

Even as you sleep, you are protected by laws setting safety and fire protection standards.

And that isn't all, by any means.

The law is the basic route by which we accomplish social gains. Through legislative enactments, at all levels of government, the will of the people is expressed and progress toward a better society is consolidated.

It always has been so, and it must continue to be if we are to retain the countless benefits of life in a lawful society.

In more ways than you realize, the law functions as your friend and protector — not as something to be feared.

Only A Lawful Society Can Build A Better Socity. (AFPS)

Dwight David Eisenhower's touch with Benning brief

At 12:25 p. m. on the 28th of March, 1969, another link with history died.

Dwight David Eisenhower, 03822, General of the Army and former President of the United States, lies buried in his boyhood home of Abilene, Kansas.

During his long military and civilian careers his association with Fort Benning was brief.

After World War I he was ordered to Camp Benning, founded only a couple of months before be reported for duty on Dec. 22, 1918. He served as an executive officer under the camp's first commanding officer, Col. Henry E. Eames.

For three months he "spent time here" before being ordered to Camp Meade, Maryland. He left March 15, 1919.

Seven years later Eisenhower returned to the post as an Army major and was executive officer and then battalion commander in the 24th Infantry Regiment. He also found time to coach the Fort Benning Doughboys to an All-Army football championship.

"I found that Eisenhower was a strict officer," recalled retired Master Sergeant Tom Fields of Columbus, who served in the 2nd Battalion under Eisenhower's command. "He busted me twice, yet I consider him one of the finest officers I ever served under."

"His old football stomping grounds was right where the Army Field Printing Plant is now," said Fields.

Eisenhower's second tour at Benning lasted only that one year. On January 15, 1927 he left and was never reassigned to the post.

A generation later in 1947, as the hero of World War II and Army Chief of Staff, he stopped here one day in April to speak to a banquet of civilian and military dignitaries.

As President of the United States he came here three times. Once on Thanksgiving Day in 1953 he spent 12 minutes at Lawson Army Air Field after dropping off his son, Maj. John Eisenhower, who was serving at Fort Benning. He returned that Christmas and spent two hours at his son's home exchanging gifts with him and his family.

In 1960 he paid an official visit to the post as President, his last. He took a long tour of an exhibit called "project MAN" (Modern Army Needs).

From all over the world dignitaries sent their sympathies. The messages came from war time allies; the French, British, the Russians—from new found peacetime friends, the Germans and Japanese, and from nations which did not even exist when he was in charge of this country's destiny.

The era he represented is fading from living memory into the pages of history. Probably less than a third of the people on this post remember him as the Supreme Allied Commander in the invasion of Hitler's "Fortress Europe".

Most remember him as one of the most popular Presidents this country has ever had.

Farewell.

Chaplain Harmon Moore to Speak Here Sunday

Chaplain (Col. ret.) Harmon David Moore, executive director of the Christian Council of Metropolitan Atlanta since his retirement from the service in 1967, will be the guest speaker for Fort Benning's Easter Sunrise Service Sunday in Doughboy Stadium.

CHAPLAIN MOORE

One of the first three Army chaplains to go Airborne, the 24-year-veteran started his military career in 1942 with the 501st Parachute Infantry Battalion in Panama.

The scope of his work in uniform covered pastoral, administrative and instructional areas. He also wrote several brochures and pamphlets, including the "Chapel Center Manuel" and "The Year of the Bible: A Pilgrimage for Service People Overseas" in 1956; "Guidebook for Summer Youth Institutes" in 1958; and the "German-American Hymn Book" in 1966.

His magazine articles include "Sermon Series Can Be Effective" in "The Chaplain" in 1956 and "Padre's Cadre" in "Army Digest" in 1959.

A book, "And Our Defense is Sure," consisting of sermons and addresses from the Pentagon Protestant Pulpit, a daily devotional service, was co-edited by Chaplain Moore, Capt. Ernest A. Ham (Chaplain Corps), USN, and Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Clarence E. Hobgood, USAF. It was published in 1964.

Originally from Wedowee, Ala., Chaplain Moore prepared himself for his career studies at Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky. He received a bachelor of arts degree in 1937 from Kentucky Wesleyan College at Winchester; a bachelor of divinity degree from Candler School of Theology of Emory University, Atlanta, Ga., in 1940; and a master of arts and doctor of education degree in 1947 from Union Theological Seminary, Columbia University, New York.

Prior to entering military service, Moore served the parish of the Second Methodist Church, Winchester, Ky., and charges in the Alabama communities of Ranburne, Rockford and Childersburg.

Chaplain Moore has attended the Basic Chaplain School at Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass., in 1942; Advanced Chaplain School, Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., in 1946; and the Army Management School, Fort Belvoir, Va., 1962.

Hat Show 'Tops' Lunch

Hats, all kinds of hats were the center of attraction at the Supper Club, when the Army Training Center officer wives held their Crazy Hat luncheon. First Brigade wives were the luncheon hostesses.

In a mock Easter Parade, contestants wearing headpieces created of everything from lampshades to combat boots and goldfish bowls, equipped with live fish paraded before the judges.

Mrs. Oscar E. Davis, wife of the ATC commanding general, presented a gift certificate to Mrs. Thomas A. Austin III for displaying the most beautiful hat. Mrs. Austin's chapeau was composed of a large lampshade, decorated with lavender crepe paper and lavender flowers on a white background. The gift certificate was from a local millinery shop whose display of latest hat fashions complimented the table decorations. Special guest, Mrs. Sidney Berry, wife of the Infantry Center's deputy commander, awarded the prize for the most humorous and most clever hat to Mrs. Theodore Cason. Mrs. Cason's battery - operated creation with its long, lighted antennae and the whirring propeller in back brightened the show.

In a more serious vein, Mrs. David Arzate displayed hats she has made since taking a hatmaking course in the Canal Zone. Mrs. Arzate explained the simple procedure for creating original hats, and remarked that she used to teach hatmaking and now enjoys it as a hobby.

Guests attending the luncheon included Miss Kathy Peabody, Mrs. Thomas Abernathy and Mrs. Dominic Ferrelli.

MAH Psychiatry Chief To Address Nurses

Members of the Fort Benning Nurses Association will hear Maj. Carl Segal, Chief, of Psychiatry and Neurology Service, Martin Army Hospital at their monthly meeting.

Maj. Segal will speak on "Community Mental Health", when the group holds its monthly meeting Monday in the second floor conference room of Martin Army Hospital.

In addition to providing an opportunity for members of the nursing profession to have fellowship with fellow members, the organization gives them an opportunity to keep abreast of the latest developments in the nursing and medical fields.

Most members of the group, headed by Mrs. Lyndel H. (Patricia) Porterfield (Poplar Bluff, Mo.), are either not actively employed, or are working on a part time basis.

"We afford registered nurses an opportunity to keep abreast of their profession, and allied fields such as X-ray and Public Health, through our monthly programs which are given by doctors and highly qualified specialists in these areas," stated Mrs. Porterfield.

"We also serve as liaison to the Red Cross and assist our members in matters such as earning Red Cross service pins," she said.

"The organization functions to help see that registered nurses will not be at a loss when they return to work following a period of absence from their profession. In addition, part time work for members is frequently arranged for members of the group," Mrs. Porterfield said.

Membership in the association, and attendance at the group's next meeting is open to all registered nurses in this area.

Red Cross Volunteers

The American Red Cross will have a Basic Volunteer Class on May 6-7 at Martin Army Hospital. Anyone interested in becoming a Red Cross Volunteer should come by the Red Cross Field House (bldg. No 1600) on Main Post on Mondays or Wednesdays between 9 A. M. and Noon.

NCO Wives To Meet For Coffee

The NCO Club of the Army Training Center will hold its monthly coffee at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday, at the Sand Hill NCO Club.

The theme of the event will be "Crazy Hats" Participants are asked to make a hat out of anything they please and wear it to the coffee. Awards will be presented for the following catagories: Most Original, Crazyiest and Generation Gap.

OLD TIME CHEESE RAREBIT

- 3 tablespoons butter
- 1-2 cup flour
- 1-2 teaspoon salt
- Dash cayenne pepper
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire
- 3 cups milk
- 1-2 pound sharp Cheddar cheese grated (2 cups)

Toast

In double boiler, or over low heat, melt butter. Stir in flour, salt, pepper, Worcestershire, thin milk; cook, stirring until thickened and smooth. Add cheese; cook, stirring until melted. Serve at once over toast. Makes 6 servings.

HOT CROSS BUNS

- 3-4 cup scalded milk
- 1-2 cup shortening
- 1-3 cup granulated sugar
- 1-4 cup warm water
- 1 pkg. active dry, or cake, yeast
- 1 egg, beaten
- 3-4 cup currants
- About 3 1-2 to 4 cups sifted all-purpose flour
- Salad oil
- 1 egg white, slightly beaten
- 1 cup confectioners' sugar
- 2 tablespoons hot water
- 1-2 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1-2 teaspoon mace

In large bowl, combine milk, shortening, granulated sugar, salt; cool till lukewarm. In small bowl, onto warm water, sprinkle yeast; stir until dissolved. Add to milk mixture, with egg, currants, mace, and as much flour as can be stirred into dough — about 3 1-2 cups.

Place in greased clean bowl. Brush top with salad oil. Cover with clean towel; let rise in warm place (80 degrees F.) until doubled in bulk — about 2 hours. Turn onto lightly floured surface; knead 1 minute; shape into 18 two inch balls. In each of 2 greased 8"x8"x2" pans, arrange 9 balls, about 1 inch apart.

With greased scissors, snip deep cross in each bun. Brush with egg white. Cover with towel; let rise in warm place until doubled in bulk. Start heating oven to 425 degrees F. Bake buns 25 minutes, or until done. Cool on wire rack; fill in the cross on each bun with combined confectioners' sugar, hot water, and vanilla extract. Makes 1 1-2 dozen.

To Vary: With egg and milk, in buns, add 3 tablespoons finely snipped preserved orange or lemon peel and 3 tablespoon citron.

THREE-BEAN SALAD

- 1 1-lb can French-cut green beans
- 1 1-lb can yellow wax beans
- 1 1-lb can red kidney beans
- 1-2 cup minced green pepper
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1-2 cup minced onion
- 1-2 cup salad oil
- 1-2 cup cider vinegar
- 3-4 cup granulated sugar
- 1-2 teaspoon pepper

Day before, if desired: Drain beans; place in glass bowl. Add green pepper and onion. Mix oil and vinegar with sugar, salt, pepper. Pour over bean mixture; toss. Refrigerate, covered, until served. Makes 10 servings.

New Officers Selected At OWC Spring Lunch

The OWC elected officers for the 1969-70 club year at its annual spring luncheon Wednsday in the Supper Club.

Mrs. Malcolm Baer was elected and will succeed Mrs. James Morris, Jr. as president. Other new officers are Mrs. Robert LaMonte, first vice-president; Mrs. James Wheaton, second vice-president; Mrs. Charles Reidenbaugh, third vice-president; Mrs. James Heathcock, recording secretary; Mrs. Richard Thrower, corresponding secretary; Mrs. William Riggs, Treasurer; Mrs. Ephriam Goss, assistant treasurer; and Mrs. Raymond Kampe, custodian.

Ladies of the 10th Aviation Group, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Eugene Conrad, were hostesses for the luncheon. A spring theme prevailed as yard long caterpillars made from wire and yellow and crenne crepe paper with spectacled styrofoam heads were placed on each of the tables.

Prior to the luncheon a tour of eight Fort Benning homes was held. More than 300 women viewed the unique individuality of other Army wives in transforming standard military quarters into gracious distinctive homes. The decors varied from early American to traditional and Danish contemporary to oriental. The homes opened were those of MG and Mrs. John Wright, Jr.; BG and Mrs. Sidney Berry; Col. and Mrs. Charles Reidenbaugh; Col. and Mrs. John Strever, Jr., Col. and Mrs. Herbert Peabody; Lt. Col. and Mrs. Thomas McGregor; Maj and Mrs. James Bledsoe and Maj. and Mrs. Frank Harbor.

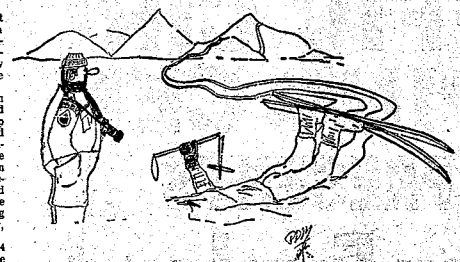
13th PID Warms Up To 'Skiing Holiday' at Ft. Greely

By Pvt. Richard Stirlen

"I feel confident that you people can travel from point A to point B and arrive ready to go into combat. Of course you may fall a few times along the way."

This was how Capt. John Southworth of the 82nd Airborne Div. summed up the two weeks of cold weather training just completed by members of the 13th Public Information Detachment, CPO, and elements of the 82nd, based at Fort Bragg, at the Northern Warfare Training Center in Fort Greely, Alaska.

It all began on March 14 when 10 men from the 13th PID, under the command of Capt. Joseph A Sellers, left Muscogee County Airport for the 5,000-mile trip to Fairbanks, Alaska. Arriving there at 10:30 p.m. Alaskan Standard Time, the weary group was trucked to Elelson Air Force Base, just south of Fairbanks, to rest before starting the 100-mile drive to Fort Greely. The following morning, the PID mounted a 2½ ton truck and was given a first taste of arctic cold on the four-hour drive south.



THAT WAS PRETTY GOOD LIEUTENANT, BUT THIS TIME SMILE

Our arrival at Fort Greely was marked by the routine in-processing, followed by a move to our quonset hut and a join-up with the 150 men from the 82nd.

Although most of us, including the Airborne who had jumped in the previous day, hoped for 24 hours of peace, two days of classroom work began on Sunday morning. This work was designed to introduce the novice to life and warfare in the coldest and most unfavorable of climates, and we were instructed in everything from winterization of a vehicle to arctic trail breaking. By Monday night most of us were feeling like another Admiral Byrd, and were anxious to put our "vast" knowledge of the North into play. All tio soon we were given the chance.

Tuesday morning, with the temperature hanging around minus 25 degrees, the class was taken to a frozen lake to observe demolition experts blow a number of holes through the four foot covering of ice. That afternoon the novices were introduced to their squad instructors.

Like a Drill Instructor greeting a group of raw recruits, SFC Richard A. Brooks gave the 13th PID, his squad, a long look and shook his head. It appeared to all of us that he felt he had been given a tough assignment, and at that moment most of us longed for a few more days in the classroom.

Tuesday afternoon consisted of a long march on snowshoes through the forests.

Wednesday morning, sore, and ready to start home, the PID was greeted by a surprisingly limber and cheerful Sgt. Brooks, who explained to us that today we would learn to ski. Whining that skies slipped on snow, and that men could get hurt, and couldn't we just work in the kitchen, the PID was led to its assigned slope and informed that there was really nothing to it.

"Don't worry," he said, "there is no chance of reaching that tree line down at the bottom of the hill." Moments later, Capt. Sellers looked up from his entangled position in a small sapling to await the remainder of his detachment.

For the next two days, we were on skis about one quarter of the time and on our backs, faces, and bottoms the remainder. To the great surprise of everyone, by Friday afternoon it appeared that we had learned something.

After a weekend of rest, Sunday night were taken to the Black Rapids Glacier and Training Area, about forty miles south of Fort Greely. Conditions there were not good enough for ski training, so we moved 35 miles further fouth.

After a four mile ski trek with 55 pounds of equipment on our backs, we were introduced to our home for the next three days, a village of 10-man tents at the foot of the Alaskan Mountain Range.

For three days, eating C rations for two meals a day and spending minus-30 degree nights in the tents, we climbed the hills, stumbled over craggy masses of ice and snow, and with more precision each day, skied in file down slopes which appeared to drop straight down into nothing. By Wednesday all of us were ready to return to the warmth and "civilization" of Black Rapids or Fort Greely.

However, one final test awaited the PID.

We made one final climb, which was, to put it mildly, one of the most difficult periods of physical exertion that any of us had ever undergone, pushing slowly back and forth across a mountain face until we were at the top, approximately 4,500 feet above sea level. But standing there, we, for the first time, realized the beauty and scope of the country we had lived in for almost two weeks.

The spell was broken by the realization that we had to ski back down. Strangely enough, on this last downhill run of the training, the entire group traversed our most difficult terrain with hardly a fall and with little correction from Sergeant Brooks. Arriving at base camp for our last night on the glacier, we all realized that, while we would certainly win no contests, we could move with some degree of confidence on the slabs of wood we had cursed so miserably only a few days before.

8 Complete Pie Course

"I wanted to be a military policeman," said PFC Ronnie L. Bailey this week, and then added, "but making pies is more fun!"

Bailey, of Hq. Co., 5th Bn., 31st Inf., was last week's honor graduate of the 197th Inf. Bde. pastry school.

The 19-year-old, who admits he never so much as opened a cake mix box prior to entering the army was presented a certificate by Col. John E. Strever Jr., brigade commander, during ceremonies marking the end of the two week course.

Seven others, PFC Richard Bain, Btry A, 7th Bn., 18th Arty., PFC James Overton, Hq. Co., 4th Bn., 68th Armor, PFC Roger Newport, Co. A, 197th Spt. Bn., PFC John A. Page, Co. C, 1st Bn., 58th Inf., PFC Nelson Shaw, Hq. Btry., 2d Bn., 10th Arty., Spt Sgt Pierro, Btry A, 1st Bn., 211th Arty., and Spt Aldwin Harper, Hq. Co., 1st Bn., 29th Inf., also completed the course.

While battalion commanders watched, Col. Strever charged the new pastry cooks to "continue their work and prepare interesting and quality baked goods for their units." The pastry school's honor graduate was typical of the others who had little, if any cooking experience prior to starting as on-the-job trainees after joining the 197th. And, although he had visions of being a military policeman when volunteering for the draft seven months ago, Bailey said "I was determined to do the best I could when they put me in the mess hall."

Khaki Uniform Season Arrives

The warm weather season arrives at Fort Benning, Monday.

That's not the word from the weatherman or the almanac, but from the post regulations on wear of the uniform. Monday is the first day this year soldiers can legally wear the khaki (short sleeve) uniform.

'Little Indians' Invade Benning

By Robert Mast

Five hundred Indian Guides from the Atlanta and Boy Scouts from the Atlanta area visited Fort Benning and observed the post's training techniques Saturday and Sunday.

This was the second wave of the Indian invasion of Fort Benning, according to Ben Benfield, chief of the Muskhogeann Longhouse Indian Guide Tribe. The first group "invaded" the fort Jan. 25-26.

"At that time," said Benfield, "we only had a quota of 500, and we almost doubled it. This second group is largely composed of guides and their fathers who couldn't make the first trip."

Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., post commander was made a chief of the Muskhogeann Longhouse during the last trip. The trip was the result of plans for a railroad ride, an idea which snowballed until the group wrote to Gen. Wright asking for a tour of Fort Benning. After their request was granted the Indian Guides asked who in the tribe wanted to make the trip. Within three days, according to Benfield, the quota was reached and doubled.

The boys opened their tour by observing a scout dog demonstration produced by the 197th Infantry Brigade's Scout Dog Detachment, followed by rides on the Infantry School's Airborne Department Tower Training Committee 250-foot "buddy seat" jump tower.

Later the scouts and Indian Guides traveled to Watson Field and watched the Ranger Training command demonstate mountain climbing and hand-to-hand combat techniques.

Lawson Army Airfield was the last stop of the day. The groups viewed displays of Army helicopters and light airplanes.

On Sunday the visitors participated in religious services in the field and went for rides in armored personnel carriers and other vehicles.

Gen. Rosson Named Deputy in Vietnam

WASHINGTON (ANF) — President Richard M. Nixon announced that he is assigning Lt. Gen. William B. Rosson to be deputy commander of American forces in Vietnam.

The President said he will nominate the University of Oregon graduate for a promotion to four-star rank.

Gen. Rosson will replace General Andrew J. Goodpaster who is becoming supreme allied commander in Europe on July 1.

Gen. Rosson now is director of the plans and policy directorate for the joint chiefs of staff in Washington, D. C.

Commissioned through the ROTC program at Oregan in 1940, he entered the service after graduation.

During his military career, he has served as special assitant to the chief of staff, U. S. Army for Special Warfare from February to August 1962, as chief of staff, U. S. Military Assistance Command, Vietnam from July 1965 to March 1967 and as commanding general, I Field Forces, Vietnam from August 1967 to July 1968.

50 Big Red One Soldiers Become Citizens

By Sp4 Thom Arne

LAI KHE, Vietnam (DIV 10) — Because an Immigration and Naturalization Law was changed in October, 1968, 50 1st Infantry Division soldiers will become American citizens May 1.

Special flights from Ton Son Nhut Airport will take the men to Honolulu and Agana, Guam, where their applications for citizenship have been processed by the district courts. While in Hawaii and Guam, the soldiers will complete their final examination which will determine their readiness for partnership in America.

The soldiers will then be sworn into American citizenship May 1, in conjunction with the celebration of Law Day throughout the United States.

Law Day signals the occasion for mass naturalization throughout the country. Both in Honolulu and Agana, elaborate plans are underway to make the soldiers part of the most impressive ceremonies conducted.

The man primarily responsible for the activation of the Big Red One project is WO2 Dale F. Jost, Holdrege, Neb. A chief legal administrative technician, he is assigned to the Staff Judge Advocate's office in Lai Khe.

Just is the man who placed citizenship booklets in the pocket of soldiers after writing the Daughters of the American Revolution Society requesting citizenship materials. He is also responsible for the letter writing, counseling and the local application processing involved in Naturalization.

Through this comparatively new program being offered by the 1st Infantry Division, hundreds of aliens from the Big Red One are eyeing their chance for partnership in America — when they will be able to vote.

Before the passage of Public Law 90-633, an immigrant living in the United States needed five years American residency before he could apply for citizenship. The residency requirement shrank to three years if one married an American citizen or served in the Armed Forces.

The new law, adopted October 21, in effect said any alien member of the Armed Forces who served on active duty in Vietnam may be naturalized if he was in the United States, the Canal Zone, American Samoa or Swains Island at the time of Enlistment or induction. He need not be lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residency.

The Big Red One soldiers letting in naturalization ceremonies represent 25 different countries. Included in the international roster are Mexico, West Indies, Trinidad, Netherlands, Phillipines, Ireland, Nicaragua, Hungary, Chile, Germany, Canada, Argentina, Italy, Panama, Great Britain, China, Indonesia, Jamaica, Cuba, British Honduras, Korea, Yugoslavia, Scotland, Greece and Spain.

Since the word on naturalization began filtering out to the battalions and brigades of the 1st Division in December, several soldiers have already been sent to Hawaii and Guam for citizenship swearing-in ceremonies.

Another 21 applications for citizenship have been sent to the United States, enabling those soldiers who will return to the U. S. before the Law Day excursion to complete their own naturalization proceedings while residing in America.

Cyprus Vet Fights 2nd War in Vietnam

CHU LAI, Vietnam (AMERICAL 10)—There are few men in Vietnam who can claim that they are the veterans of two different wars, especially if they are not yet 21-years-old. One man, PFC John E. Conley, a riffman for Co. B, 4th Bn., 3rd Inf., of the 11th Infantry Brigade, can make that claim. In fact, he can not only claim participation in two wars, but also membership in two different armies.

Conley, more familiarly known as "Little John," spent two years with the British Army before joining the "Yanks" of the American Army. For Conley, whose hometown is Cumberland, England, Vietnam is war number two. He first saw combat in Cyprus with the British Army in 1955.

He spent nearly a year in Cyprus riding "shotgun" for a British resupply truck. His tour was prematurely cut short when his truck was ambushed along one of the rocky dirt roads leading to the British front lines. Caught in a deadly crossfire, Conley was hit by enemy small arms fire.

On the way to the hospital he felt another pain other than his gunshot wound—his appendix was acting up. So, besides getting the bullet wound patched up, he also had his appendix removed.

"It was a good thing that my appendix was the only thing wrong with me," Conley said. "The way that Doctor was cutting me up, there is no telling what would have been left of me."

After his incident in Cyprus, Conley accepted a discharge after his two year's enlistment ended. He then came to the United States to visit relatives in Michigan. It wasn't long before he was back in uniform again, courtesy of a local Selective Service Board in Michigan.

Conley is not the first in his family to serve in two armies. His father was in the English Army and then spent some time with the American 82nd Airborne Division during World War II.

Sunrise Patrol

Armored Carriers Clear Roads

AN KHE, RVN (173D 10) — The first rays of the early morning sun began to warm the steel hulk of the Armed Personnel Carrier as it crept up the hill. Two lone figures walking in front were carefully searching the surrounding terrain.

Heads suddenly jerked around as a thunderous explosion reipped through the earth sending rocks, dirt, and steel fragments spinning into the air.

A lieutenant grabbed his radio and spurted words into the hand set. He smiled, "no sweat, number three just blew a mine." A look of relief was on the faces of the two men as they once again turned and began their search.

It was a routine day for Alpha Company, 1st Bn., 50th Inf. (Mech), 173rd Airborne Bde. Their mission — clear the roads of mines and enemy troops, set up strong points and keep highway 19 secure for convoys hauling tons of supplies daily.

The lieutenant looked toward his men, "Let's snap it up men. Those convoys will be. . ."

"Hold it, Ed! Don't move!" shouted Spc Lee Taylor, Bedford, Va.

The carrier jerked to a halt. PFC Edward Robertson, Reading, Pa., had frozen in his tracks, his eyes searching from left to right for the danger.

"Just to your right front, Ed — over there." Taylor pointed and both men began easing up on the spot.

The ground was still smooth, each pebble seemed to be in place and only a slight difference in color had alerted Taylor.

The two men were on their hands and knees now — inching forward, gently probing with their knives. Robertson's knife stopped as it hit something metallic. The two men very slowly began removing the dirt from the mine.

"I think its double-fuzed, better get EOD (Explosive Ordnance Disposal) out here," Taylor said.

The mine was marked and the two men moved on. A few minutes later they uncovered another mine.

"Both were big enough to flip a tank on it's back like it was a tin can," commened Robertson.

"Not a bad day though. A few weeks ago we got eight mines in one morning," Taylor remarked.

"Well let's get set up," Robertson said. "Those five-ton trucks will be rolling along any minute now, and it's going to be another long day."

No Monkey Business For Charlie Gibbon

"Charlie knows Charlie better than Charlie knows himself! Confusing? Well, the first Charlie is a very small monkey.

As mascot of the 1st Infantry Division's Information Office, "Charles Gibbon" has made his home in a nearby bunker since being brought to the area in 1967.

A veteran of Charlie Cong's offensive attempts during the past two years on Lai Khe base camp, the monkey seems to have a sixth sense when it comes to second-guessing the second Charlie.

With teeth-clenching frenzy, the monkey is inside his bunker at the slightest hint of a whistling sound from an incoming mortar round.

Happiness to Charlie is a can of soda brought to him by one of his Big Red One guardians.

Radiomen Move Fast in Course

Two students in Co. H, ISB, were halfway through their AIT the day they began.

Pvt. Gerald P. Pezzullo and Pvt. Gary D. Hall, graduates of the Field Radio Mechanics course were part of Project Update.

"This project takes men who have had extensive training in electronics and already know the basics of radio operations and maintenance and advances them four weeks into the course," said Maj. Murray W. Gibson, Electronics Committee chief. "Only in exceptional instances do we accelerate students four weeks in the eight week course. The first four weeks deal exclusively with the fundamentals of radio electronics, and we felt that Hall and Pezzullo could bypass the basics and handle the move advanced radio sets."

Pezzullo was named the academic Honor Graduate for attaining a 99.8 average on his exams. A graduate of Rhode Island Electronics School, Pezzullo worked for the Army - Air National Guard in Providence, R. I., as a communications technician.

Hall, a graduate of the University of New Mexico, holds an electrical engineering degree. Hall ranked third in his class with an exam average of 99.5. Before entering the service he worked for the Defense Atomic Support Agency in Albuquerque.

Both men were happy to have been a part of Operation Update. Pezzullo thinks the school is an "excellent one" and says its outstanding feature is "the high degree of competence of the instructors."

"The facilities are excellent," said Hall. He was also impressed by the "thorough and pragmatic method of instruction."

Both men were chosen as "Students of the Week" once. In addition, each of them spent some time working as assistant instructors.

The graduation ceremony was held in Infantry Hall where the course was taught. Maj. Fred C. Wist, Chief of the TV Division, was the guest speaker. The graduation class had 51 men.

PFC Wins Contest

PFC Robert J. Hanley, of Co. H TSB, bested a field of 10 contestents last Saturday at the Sand Hill Service Club to win the March Entertainment Contest $25 prize.

He sang an excerpt from the musical "The Music Man".

Sp4 David Solomon, of Hq. Co. of TCB, finished second to Hanley with a magic act. Third place was won by Edgar I. Farmer and the Five Five, from B-72 of the Training Center.

That April Entertainment Contest will be held at South Harmony Church Service Club on April 26th. Special Services provides shuttle bus service from clubs in other areas to the club holding the contest.

Head of Speakers Group Hopes to Reach Colleges

By 1st Lt. Fred Volrath

"As a soldier with two tours in Vietnam I am concerned over the lack of information people have on our efforts there," said Maj. Jackson C. Stevens, explaining why he volunteered to head the Fort Benning Speakers Bureau.

"The speakers program is set up to present the soldier's view of the war to the civilian population. The views presented are those of young Americans who are at the working level of the operations in Vietnam, not the planning and policy level."

Past speaker programs, centered around community service organizations, reached approximately 3 per cent of the people within a hundred-mile radius of the post. Stevens hopes the new program can reach many more.

Since July of 1968 he has made about 30 speeches in Columbus, LaGrange, Eufaula, Macon and other communities in the local vicinity, as well as his hometown of Columbus, Ohio, telling about the war and the Army as he has experienced it.

"The general reception has been warm and friendly," he said. "The civic organizations greet you like a long lost son, but student groups are more critical and questioning. They want to know about the draft, how it feels to be in combat, if you ever afraid, and why we are fighting.

"They are not hostile, but you have to prove yourself to them. The older groups often ask questions on policy which I am not qualified to answer."

This month he hopes to expand into colleges and universities.

"I think for a starter though we'll pick a good military school," he said, and chuckled.

Most of the other 60 speakers in the program are officers in the career course. Stevens hopes to interest other officers and NCOs in taking part in the program.

"I think as a soldier I have a duty to tell about the accomplishments and performances of the American soldier. Although I am only 30 and have never been in any other conflict, from all I have read and heard, today's young soldier is the best this country has ever had," he said.

"I feel the younger generation is getting too much criticism for actions of a very small percentage. It is this same generation that is carrying the bulk of the fighting and they aren't getting enough credit for their efforts."

Stevens joined the active Army in 1959 after serving in the Ohio National Guard the previous five years. He is a graduate of the Infantry Officer Candidate School here, and graduated from helicopter flight training programs at Fort Walters and Fort Rucker.

During his first tour in Vietnam in 1964, he piloted both troop carrying helicopters and gunships in support of Vietnamese forces. On his second tour in 1967 he was a Flight Commander and Platoon Commmander with helicopter units in the area around Saigon and in the Mekong River Delta.

Co. D Keeps Equipment in Shape

By Sp4 Walter Nemkovich

The responsibility of maintaining over 1,200 vehicles, 12,000 weapons and countless other equipment falls on Co. D, 197 Support Battalion.

The 197th Inf. Bde. facility is located at Todd Field, a former heliport only being used temporarily by the unit. According to the company commander, Capt. Samuel Kosko, "The concept of the company is to provide staff planning and supervision of brigade maintenance."

Delta's maintenance facility houses a variety of services designed to provide mechanical support to all phases of the brigade's operation, with the exception of routine servicing of tracked vehicles.

The company is broken down into different sections or platoons that handle the varied types of repairs.

The mechanical maintenance section takes care of all the wheeled vehicles in the brigade — electrical maintenance repairs all signal equipment from radios to switchboards — armament works on all the small arms up to and including the .50 cal. machine gun — service and evacuation platoon can handle anything from tent repair to body and fender work — and tech supply handles some 15,000 lines items that help to back up the individual unit supply systems.

Located at Lawson Field, the aircraft maintenance platoon is a new addition to the company's operation. It performs third echelon maintenance on aircraft, mainly helicopters.

Artillery Teams Exchange Ideas

Artillerymen of the 197th Inf. Bde. picked up some inside information recently when an Artillery School contact team visited Fort Benning bringing news of the latest developments in that field.

Formal instruction was presented by a Fort Sill team to members of the 2nd Bn., 10th Arty., and 7th Bn., 18th Arty., as well as the Infantry School. They discussed current artillery employment in Vietnam, latest developments in weapons, vehicles and ammunition, target acquisition equipment and techniques, new radios, The Field Artillery Digital Automatic Computer and the latest developments in gunnery.

Showing off on their own, the 18th Arty. demonstrated its 14.5 mm trainer for the contact team.

Impressed by the convenience, accuracy and economy of the weapon, the contact team plans to explore the possibility of using the trainer in Field Artillery School instruction.

The 14.5 mm artillery trainer, developed at Fort Benning, is used extensively by the artillery committee of the Infantry School during instruction on the adjustment of fire.

According to Lt. Col. James T. Heathcock, commanding officer of the 7th Bn., 18th Arty., the visit of the contact team provided a worthwhile exchange of views between the Field Artillery School and Fort Benning.

He also said such visits provide a good means of informing field units of the latest developments in equipment, and provide the Artillery School with practical ideas from the field.

Lt. Col. Paul Buckley of the artillery committee coordinated the contact team's visit.

'Compassion Is Key,' Mayor Allen Says

Columbus Mayor J. R. Allen was guest speaker at the March Armed Forces Management Association meeting last week, at the Officers Club.

In the discussion of his topic, "The Art of Living," the mayor emphasized that managers must exert compassion in their dealings with subordinates. "In this rapidly advancing computerized world," he said, "there is danger of man's being reduced to little more than a punched card, a number instead of a name."

This may be a more efficient manner of record keeping and statistical summarization, he said, but it tends to lose the human element in dealings with man as a human being.

By being compassionate, the mayor noted, a manager can develop "esprit de corps" in a worker, and by setting an example and through understanding, can build a "fire" within a working for greater achievement.

Conversely, a number cannot develop "esprit." We are all servants of society, he said, and as such, owe it to employers and our employees to set an example for the accomplishment of goals that will benefit mankind as a whole.

Eight new members and 35 guests made a total attendance of 93 for the luncheon. The meeting marked the first appearance of Mayor Allen as guest speaker at Fort Benning, since taking office in January.

Protestants Plan Easter Services

The annual Easter sunrise service will be held at 7 a.m. Sunday, April 6, at Doughboy Stadium.

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Dominic L. Ferrelli, Martin Army Hospital chaplain and project officer for the event, announced that the services are open to the general public.

Chaplain (Col. ret.) Harmon David Moore, 24-year veteran of World War II and Korea, who became executive director of the Christian Council of Metropolitan Atlanta after his retirement in 1967, will be the guest minister and present the Easter message.

The program will begin with a musical prelude by the 263rd Army Band with a 28-member "Up With People" group providing the vocal portion. Also participating will be color guards from major post units.

The call to worship will be announced by Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Harry E. Traude of the Infantry Center Chapel. Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Merlin R. Carothers, The Candidate Brigade chaplain, will present the invocation, followed by Chaplain (Capt.) Leland Richardson, 197th Infantry Brigade Chaplain, who will read the scripture.

Infantry Magazine: Aptly Named

By PFC David J. Wynne

For nearly 48 years, Fort Benning's Infantry School has been publishing Infantry Magazine for the purpose of providing the American Infantryman with the latest information in Infantry organization, weapons, equipment, tactics and techniques.

Infantry Magazine is a descendant of The Mailing List, which was first published in 1921. In the introduction to the first issue, the magazine's editor explained that the mission of the Infantryman "requires the highest degree of technical and tactical training, including a thorough appreciation of the powers, characteristics and limitations of all forces and weapons utilized."

The purpose of publishing the magazine was to make accessible to the soldier the information he would need to carry out his mission, and this remains the purpose of the magazine to this day.

As its name suggests, The Mailing List was distributed by means of a regular list of recipients. The early publication consisted of instructional pamphlets put out by the Infantry School, and the material dealt with specific Infantry problems.

The Infantry School Quarterly succeeded The Mailing List in 1947, and the policies of the predecessor publication were continued. It was not until 1957 that the present title was adopted, and from that time on, although the magazine's basic policy remained the same, the publication changed dramatically in format and style.

Infantry Magazine is a far cry from the original publication, which consisted primarily of reprinted instructional problems without illustrations. The magazine is now a bimonthly journal. Because of its professional use of journalistic skills in layout and content, the magazine has gained worldwide respect as the professional journal for Infantrymen.

Throughout its history, Infantry Magazine has operated without the financial backing of any military organization or governmental office. All funds for operating the magazine come from subscriptions, for there are no appropriated funds or advertising dollars available to meet the publication's expenses.

Since September of 1968, the magazine has been under the direction of Lt. Col. James E. Witek, editor and publisher. Because of rising costs in publishing the journal, Witek has spent much of his time in building up the circulation. In the past six months, the number of paid subscribers has risen from 11,400 to nearly 14,000.

The magazine is staffed with only ten persons who must handle all editorial, production and business aspects of the publication. "The magazine has had a tremendous turnover in personnel in the past seven months," said Witek. "In that short period of time, we have had complete change in military personnel assigned to the publication."

Although the magazine has had many new faces in a brief time period, it seems to be able to come through with skillful staff members rather consistently. Witek is a graduate of Indiana University, where he obtained his B.A. degree in Slavic languages with a minor in journalism. He is working presently on his thesis for a masters degree in journalism from the University of Missouri.

The assistant editor's post is held by 2nd Lt. David E. Daubel, who obtained a bachelor's degree in journalism from Marquette. Second Lt. Richard K. Sink, who heads the magazine's production department, also has a B.A. in journalism. He graduated from the University of Florida. First Lt. Archie Moore, an illustrator, received a degree in fashion illustration when she graduated from the University of Kansas.

A normal issue of Infantry Magazine has 64 pages, containing six to eight main articles as well as about a half dozen shorter articles in the Combat Notes section. "We have almost 400 articles submitted every year," reported Witek, "but we have an acceptance rate of only about 25 per cent."

"We aim the magazine for the Infantryman who is a company grade officer or a senior NCO. As a matter of policy, we are more concerned with the platoon and company level than with the higher levels," he stated.

According to Witek, one of Infantry Magazine's main functions is to keep the men in the field informed. The latest weapon advancements from the Infantry Board, such as the 9mm hand-held mortar, are quickly reported to the American Infantry members stationed across the globe. "We are able to disseminate information on new weapons to the men one or two years in advance of when they would receive the official field manuals through regular channels."

Unlike its predecessors, Infantry Magazine strives to provide forum for progressive military thinking through the use of thought-provoking articles. "We do not hesitate to print controversial articles, as long as they contain a concrete suggestion for improvement. For instance," observed the editor, "in our first issue in 1969, we published an article written by a colonel from Fort Lewis who complained that the assault-fire techniques taught to our soldiers are not up to date. We have received several articles in response to that article, some agreeing and some disagreeing. By using Infantry Magazine as a forum in this manner, we are able to analyze various facets of Infantry life, always looking for ways by which we can make improvements."

Many of the articles deal with personal combat experiences in Vietnam. Witek explained that the publication will attempt to obtain personal accounts of soldiers serving in other areas, such as in Europe, Panama and by the Korean DMZ. Rather than allow the reader to be inundated with too many cold, hard facts, the journal also contains fiction which is based on fact.

Besides being responsible for the publication of Infantry Magazine every two months, the staff also has found time to publish various other publications of benefit to the Infantryman: Infantry in Vietnam, a hard cover book of 400 pages, is a collection of combat narratives. Other publications include Historical Essays, two volumes of Combat Notes from Vietnam, Leader's Handbook (now in its fourth edition) and Field Expedient Handbook.

'Musketry School' Marks 62nd Year

An anniversary was marked quietly at Fort Benning on Monday.

The Infantry School, almost 12 years older than the post itself, celebrated its 62nd birthday. It was on April 1, 1907 that Maj. Gen. Arthur MacArthur founded the School of Musketry at The Presidio, Calif.

The school stayed there six years before moving to Fort Sill, Okla., to gain a more central location.

There the name was changed to "Infantry School of Arms." With World War I creating a need for trained men, branches were set up at Camp Perry, Ohio, and Camp Hancock, Ga.

After the War, on Sept. 12, 1918, a single Infantry School was transferred to a site on Macon Road, three miles east of Columbus.

On Oct. 7 of that year, the new camp was named in honor of Confederate general Henry Louis Benning. The school moved to its present site on June 22, 1919.

Snap Shots Shouldn't Cost $2,000

By Paul Mangione

Is there some way to get a good, clear photo-enlargement from a small grey negative? Yes; providing several important but simple processes are observed when the picture is taken.

If the subject is lined up and the lighting is sufficient, the aperture on the camera lens is properly set, the ASA rating for the film used is registered and the "" stop is set and your depth of field was correct there probably won't be any trouble. If you make sure there isn't any dust on the lens and the battery on your camera works if it is a flash or a single lens replex.

If not, you will have trouble.

Don't become discouraged with that impressive camera you just spent fifty dollars on in the PX. All those dials and buttons and that thick direction booklet are not there to confuse or annoy the would be photographer. They're there to help.

The camera is, like the eye, a relatively simple device in principle. Light passes through a hole in the lens onto a section of light-sensitive paper. Anything that blocks the passage of the light onto the film leaves an outline or image.

Shade and Texture

Sometimes the light passes through an object but in less quantity than the light that passed around it. This makes for variations in shade and texture. Light reflects off the surface of many subjects and this also creates a variance in shade and tone.

It may sound simple and it really is, in principle. In reality the process is involved. The average photographic amateur needn't concern himself with the innumerable systems and processes by which that girl in front of the tree can be photographed. All he cares about is "will it come out?"

If you do it right it will, every time.

There are many cameras on the markets today. Why should the prospective fotog spend $2,000 on the Hasselblad system when he can buy a Kodak Instamatic 104 for about ten bucks? Perhaps he shouldn't. The answer lies in what you want from your camera.

The inexperienced are content with the super-simple snap shot cameras available today. They are inexpensive, easy to operate and the processing is cheap. The results are usually very satisfying 4X5 or pocket size prints. There are however, a few drawbacks.

Not a Swinger

The film used in an Instamatic and similar cameras is very slow and very grainy. When photographing a stable object the results are good. But don't try to snap a shot of your friend swinging a golf club for all you'll get is a smear.

Don't try to have enlargements made from the negatives. The results, if the film processer will even try to do them, will appear as if the picture was poured through a strainer and fell on the paper in little dots. The bigger the enlargements the bigger and less clear the dots become until they eventually become indistinguishable.

An instamatic will not shoot wide-angle, fish-eye, zoom or close-up pictures because the camera body doesn't exchange lenses. It can't do action and it won't enlarge.

It makes great snap shots and nothing else.

The two grand for the Hasselbad will allow a photographer to take pictures of just about anything anywhere under just about any kind of condition, including sand storms and under water. The results will always be the same, clear, sharp shots of everything from little children to bullets fired through a plate of glass.

If the prospective photographer doesn't have two thousand dollars to spend but still needs something more than a Brownie he can get it. It is not necessary to buy an entire photo system when purchasing a camera. A basic set-up of a camera body and standard lens allows for future additions as well as immediate use.

Within this range there are several dozen cameras of various qualities. Some have complete systems available. For an investment of between 50 and one hundred dollars a photographer can have a camera which allows him to shoot many action shots, black and white and color, portraits and close-ups as well as snaps.

The camera will produce an almost unending stream of quality negatives if it is given routine care and if it is set up properly.

When buying a camera the photographer knows pretty well what he is paying for. He knows what he expects from and what the camera will do for his photographs. The camera, like most machines, is only as good as its user. If it isn't properly set up it isn't going to work no matter what is done to it. Putting it in the closet and taking out the 104 won't solve a thing.

The instruction booklet which comes with every camera, explains in detail the limitations of the camera as well as its operational techniques. These directions must be followed or the camera won't work.

If a problem develops that isn't covered by the instructions, write to the manufacturer or go back to the dealer and ask. If he can't tell you then he has no business selling the camera in the first place.

When purchasing the camera don't buy a lot of miscellaneous garbage. Deluxe all-weather nylon pile carrying cases with plungers, 1000 power strobe lights and sun shades aren't really necessary. Save money for lenses and film. The rest will come later.

Army Helps

Perhaps the best part of photography is seeing your finished product. The Army can help out here. Special Services provides craft shop photo labs for service men on most posts around the world. Fort Benning has three. These photo labs have qualified instructors who will demonstrate how to develop negatives and print your own enlargements. The photographer's most creative impulses can be let loose here and it won't cost him much. The only thing required is the person using the equipment take care of it and provide his own paper.

There are several very good magazines devoted entirely to photography. Popular Photography and Modern Photography are two of the best. Read them every month for tips on processing and shooting and when planning to buy new equipment.

Newly Formed Civic Opera To Sponsor Operalogues

For 1969-70 Season

A series of operalogues for the season 1969-70 will be presented by the newly formed Civic Opera of Columbus. Theodore Garguilo will serve as artistic and music director.

The Women's Guild of the Columbus Museum of Arts and Crafts, three new living canvases this season, with the series known as project "Operalogues". Theodore Garguilo says . . . "I was pleased and proud to serve the community and work with Mrs. William B. Hart, chairman of the Women's Guild, as music and artistic director for the project.

A performance of Carmen last November, La Traviata in January and Pagliacci in March was well received by the public."

"Opera in Miniature" or "Opera in Mosaics" is narrated by Garguilo. He highlights the narration by playing excerpts from the score at the piano and accompanies assisting vocal artists, singing arias and duets.

On Thursday April 17, at 8:15 p. m. the Civic Opera will present Operalogue "La Traviata" at the Columbus Museum of Arts and Crafts Auditorium. This will be a benefit performance for the Civic Opera Production Fund. Garguilo will conduct the proceedings. He will be assisted by two guest artists, Gloria Garguilo, soprano and Larry Dorminy, tenor. Reservations may be obtained by writing the Civic Opera of Columbus, Georgia, P. O. Box 5178, Columbus or by telephoning 327-7127.

Magic Melvin

Tricky Sgt. Likes to Clown Around

By Sp4 Ron Johnson

A 12-year-old kid during prohibition days in Chicago sat in the back row of the Oriental Theatre on State Street. "The Magnificent Blackstone" was performing his magic act between movie features. The boy was so amazed by the magician's tricks that he watched the film and magic act three times, working his way down to the front row by the third performance.

Blackstone noticed that he had stayed for every show, and invited him up on stage to help with a trick. SSgt. Erwin Melvin Storke, also known as "Melvin the Magic Clown", says, "I don't even know what the film was about, but from the time I saw that show, I was hooked."

Command Performance

Storke, has spread his magic from Chicago to Japan since Blackstone introduced him to the art back in the 20's. He as practiced his magic wherever his Army career has taken him. In 1958 he gave a command performance for the Queen of Thailand. In his scrapbook he also has a letter from Princess Prem Purchat of Thailand thanking him for a performance for the crippled children at Siiraj Hospital, Bangkok. He has received numerous other letters of commendation.

During the Korean Conflict, The 1st Cavalry Division wrote and produced a play called "Yellow Ribbon" around his repetoire. The play toured Japan with Storke in the leading role. The story was about a private, played by Storke, who befuddled his superiors with seemingly impossible acts.

Sgt. Storke says he will donate his time and services to any worthwhile organization. He did his clown-magic performance for the Children's Ward and his night club act for the wounded from Viet Nam in Tripler Army Hospital in Hawaii. While stationed in Hawaii he also worked in a community Action Program with actor Richard Boone.

Performed Locally

Locally, he has performed on WTVM's program, "Bulletin Board?" At Christmas time last year, he put on a magic show at the Columbus Medical Center and visited patients who were unable to attend the show.

Upon retirement Sgt. Storke would like to have a children's T.V. show featuring magic and participation games with prizes for the winners. He plans on returning to Hawaii and feels that this idea has potential there.

Sgt. Storke, his wife Kenya, and their son Jimmy presently reside at Fort Benning. He works for the office of the secretary at Co. C.

Synopsis

100 RIFLES — Raquel Welch, sorrowed and goaded to vengeance by her father's hanging, leads a band of Yaquis to cut down their chief oppressor . . . Jim Brown plays Lyedecker, a disenchanted policeman from Arizona who has come to Mexico to arrest Burt Reynolds, a bank robber. A classic Western.

A FLEA IN HER EAR — This traditional bedroom farce takes place in Paris at the turn of the century when a neglected wife tests the fidelity of her husband by writing him an anonymous love letter. Misunderstandings, cross purposes, and mistaken identities follow, propelling everyone to a seedy hotel for a slapstick finale. It's a riot!

BORN WILD — Story of how the hot tempered warfare of rival high school gangs shuts and shatter the foundation of a peaceful small town. The story depicts the high emotion and tension, which under extreme circumstances, motivates the actions of young people today and how it infects our modern day society.

'Alice B. Toklas' Demonstrates the Power of Pastry

A REVIEW
By Harry Lloyd

Who's Jim Rex? O, you remember Jim. He's the guy, or guide, who holds your hand and leads you to the movies if you're too young to find your own way. Jim makes himself a little obnoxious at times, but at least he's good for laughs.

Jim is a four-letter man, and some of his letters are more desirable than others. For example, take his "R". Such a designation may never get a movie a spot on the Saturday matinee, but then it never hurts what the show is playing at a culture center like Fort Benning.

Almost automatically, Jim handed out one of these "Rs" to the movie, "I Love You, Alice B. Toklas," showing this week on post. But in the case of this movie, Jim is a little out of his league. Instead of rating the film, he should rate the audience. And if you don't pass the test, you don't see the movie.

If you immediately wonder what the "B." stands for, you don't qualify on the grounds of incompatibility with the plot. If you say "Mmmm, that sounds Hungarian," you don't qualify either, on the grounds of rationality.

Won't See Alice

If, on the other hand, you smile benignly upon hearing the title and reflect profoundly on the universality of real love, then you may qualify. But don't expect to see Alice. This movie takes place in a different wonderland.

"Toklas" is a vehicle for the comedic brilliance of Peter Sellers, who can be the funniest man alive in the right setting. The setting is almost always right here, whether Sellers is playing an admitted "square" lawyer or undergoing transformation into Southern California's wildest hippie.

In both roles, Sellers plays it as if he doesn't really feel he belongs. He's always the outsider, whether he wears a business suit or Indian beads.

The road to hippiedom starts for Sellers when he starts using words like "groovy" and "uptight." Then he lies to his sweet little Jewish momma, cheats on his fiancee and starts wondering about the double-standards of the Establishment.

Grassy Brownie

The catalyst in his change is a dish of brownies, cooked up by an even more delightful dish, Leigh Taylor-Young. The hippie (and busty) Miss Taylor-Young uses an extra ingredient in her cookies — something like grass clippings.

The breakaway is complete for Sellers when he leaves his bride at the altar and begins to pursue his career as an apprentice guru. But he has problems even in the world of the flower people. It's hard for him to walk barefoot on the beach, and he doesn't like to share his bathtub.

Crazy Cars

There are some memorable scenes in this movie, as in all Sellers shows. As in "The Party," there is a crazy car — this time an ancient Ford station wagon, painted up in psychedelic colors and forced into use as a hearse.

There is the Mexican family that Sellers the lawyer is representing in a civil suit. All 11 of them are whiplash victims.

And then there is that final freak-out in his own pad, where our hippie hero realizes that the Establishment may have something going after all. But he never finds out what.

To interpret the official Jim Rex, perhaps that "R" stands for Riotous, Ridiculous, Risque or Rowdy. Or, to better describe it, borrow a word from Harold Fine, the character Sellers portrays: "Groovy."

Lettermen to Appear At Auburn Coliseum

The Lettermen, a trio currently on their 20th cross-country tour, will be in Auburn on Tuesday, at the Auburn Memorial Coliseum.

The Lettermen are being presented by the Popular Entertainment Committee of the Auburn Union. Admission is $1.50. Tickets are on sale at the Union Desk.

Tony Butala of Sharon, Pa., Jim Pike of St. Louis, Mo., and Gary Pike of Twin Falls, Idaho, got together in 1961 and have appeared at more than 1200 colleges throughout the country since then.

Described as having a "unique, listenable sound," and "creative responsible musicianship," the famous trio was first spotted by George Burns who called them to the attention of Jack Benny, who signed them for his TV show. Since then they have appeared with regularity on such shows as Ed Sullivan, Dean Martin, Red Skelton, Sammy Davis, Bob Newhart, Mike Douglas, Danny Kaye, and the Johnny Carson Tonight Show.

In addition to their college circuit, The Lettermen are an attraction in Las Vegas, Lake Tahoe, Reno, Chicago, Los Angeles, Miami, and New York in the more "adult" and sophisticated hotels and night clubs.

Contrary to most vocal groups, The Lettermen all have the same range and interchange their parts, singing the melody line, top or bottom. All three are accomplished soloists.

The general public is invited to the performance. Tickets will be available at the door.

B, S&T Prove Rock Can Be Music

Hot Line to the Hits

By Pete Lis

BLOOD, SWEAT & TEARS is an album that succeeds as rock and succeeds as music and proves (as has been done before) that rock can succeed as music.

The LP has a lot going for it. It uses the change of pace that pop singers have long been bright enough to do — the uptempo tune after the dreamy ballad, etc. — to provide variety that maintains the listener's interest. Too many rock albums have had one track after the other sounding a good deal alike.

On this one, versatility means primarily rock tracks and jazz tracks, with some blues. The musicians' performances are just adequate. Lew Soloff blows an absurd "jazz" trumpet. Dick Halligan on organ can go gracefully from a classical sound on "Variations on a Theme by Eric Satie" to jazz. Jim Fielder has been since his superb performance on the first B, S & T album, one of the finest bassmen on the scene.

On this album he shows he can play anything. But beyond that, he exhibits an excellent sense of what goes where, that is, how to use his knowledge in a musically effective way. David Clayton Thomas is an extremely able vocalist who has more depth than most and happily avoids vocal "blackface."

I hesitate to go into a deeper dissection of this album because I'm not really with this group all the way. I don't know how they can be without Al Kooper. I have enough enemies already, and in the face of total disaster, I'd like to talk about Al Kooper.

Blood, Sweat and Tears was founded during the summer of 1967 by four musicians, with organist Al Kooper becoming the best known of the group. He was on the first B, S & T album CHILD IS FATHER TO THE MAN, but before this second one he split. B, S & T are getting along, so it's only natural to want to see how well Kooper is getting along.

Not had at all, friends. Kooper stayed with Columbia as artist and record producer. And he has out (in both capacities) the new I STAND ALONE album and THE LIVE ADVENTURES OF MIKE BLOOMFIELD AND AL KOOPER, as a follow - up to their SUPER SESSION LP.

I STAND ALONE doesn't stack up as well as LIVE ADVENTURES does. At First, I STAND ALONE sounds more like run-of-the-mill rock, with crashes, fervent singing, a backup group and sturdy rhythm pounded out. Later, it seemed to get better and grow on me, but not as a wholehearted sound I would like it to. Recording was done in New York, Nashville and Los Angeles. Seven of the 12 songs are written by Kooper.

LIVE ADVENTURES was recorded during three days last September at the Fillmore West in San Fran. Bloomfield, an influential, blues-based guitarist, formerly of the Electric Flag, made the SUPER SESSION album in a studio and before it was released, Steve Stills, formerly of Buffalo Springfield, added his music to it. So, they decided — for great "reality" — to add a rhythm section and play together, live, in front of a paying audience and make a record out of that. Result: the two - LP set, LIVE ADVENTURES.

Bloomfield sings for the first time on the album here, and it's really nice. When he sings "I Wonder Who," the organ comes up around him, giving him support and cushioning like an air filled chair. One of their live adventures was Bloomfield's falling by the wayside because of accumulated insomnia. Tracks with the fill - in musicians are included on side three.

There are some soul-satisfying blues on here. "Dear Mr. Fantasy," originally an old Traffic tune, sounds like it could be a hit single. And I couldn't believe my ears on a live album when "The 59th Street Bridge Song" sounded like Kooper's vocal had been overdubbed! Searching frantically through the liner notes, I found that Paul Simon liked it so well that he went into the studio and sang along on the last verse. Well, who has a better right to feel groovy about an interpretation of that song? He wrote it.

Notes scribbled on a dirty latrine wall:

Want to read a book that tells where rock is at? Try "Outlaw Blues," by Paul Williams, editor of "Crawdaddy!." The book doesn't try to tell you everything, but for the topics and groups that it does discuss, it's all right there. Really nice. Out in paperback. . .and the beat goes on. . .

ROD AND GUN CLUB NEWS

Riflemen Set Record

By Bill Kloeb

Fort Benning has been named runner-up in the annual Secretary of Defense Conservation Program. Lt. Gen. Charles W. G. Rich, deputy commanding general, United States Continental Army Command, presented the award to Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., post commander and members of the Post Fish and Wildlife and Forestry Sections at a ceremony held in Gen. Wright's office.

Fort Benning was named runner-up in competition with 46 other military installations. Red River Army Depot, Texarkana, Texas, was named first place winner.

The awards are presented annually to the installations that have demonstrated the greatest progress in programs related to conservation, preservation of natural resources, beautification and outdoor recreation.

Effective April 2, facilities of the Rod and Gun Club went on an expanded schedule.

Sportsmans Lodge is now open from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. seven days a week.

The kitchen is open from 11 a. m. to 6:30 p. m. Monday through Friday and from 5 a. m. to 6 p. m. Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

The trap and skeet ranges are open from 12 noon until dark on Wednesday and from 10 a. m. until dark on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

The archery range is open during daylight hour seven days a week.

Post Fish and Game personnel are now fertilizing post ponds and starting their annual predator control program. Kings, Stephens, Patterson Kirk, Headley, Victory and Averett Ponds come under intensive management at this time of each year.

Fertilization of ponds is not new. Ponds in Europe and Asia have been fertilized to increase fish production for thousands of years.

Proper fertilization will increase fish production fourfold and discourage undesirable weeds from becoming established by shading out the sunlight they need to grow.

Because Fort Benning is almost completely surrounded by urban areas with many bisecting public roads, many of the areas on post have become dumping grounds for unwanted and generally undesirable dogs. The predator control program is mainly concerned with elimination of these undesirables because they are destructive to game animals. Predator control measures are also taken against fox, bobcat, racoon and opossum. Random specimens of all animals taken are tested for rabies.

The Rod and Gun Club will hold a turkey shoot at the club skeet ranges tomorrow (April 5). Shooting starts at 10 a. m. and will continue as long as anyone wants to shoot. The shoot is open to the public. It's not necessary to be a member of the Rod and Gun Club to enter. Entry fee is $1. Rod and Gun will furnish guns and ammunition.

If you go fishing over the weekend don't forget to register for the fishing derby at Rod and Gun Headquarters. The club is giving prizes for the largest bass, bream and catfish caught in post ponds during April.

Marksmen Vie for Berth On Trap Shooting Team

Preliminary tryouts for the U.S. Trap Shooting team were fired at the Fort Benning Trap & Skeet Range March 21-23.

Shooters from all the services and the civilian ranks found Sgt. Thomas Garrigus, 1968 Olympic team member, and Army reservist Sgt. Gene Lamsden, former MTU member, in a shoot-off for first place. Both shooters finished the three-day tournament with 289 x 300 birds.

In the shoot-off Garrigus broke all twenty-five birds and Lumsden dropped one for twenty-four giving Garrigus the championship.

High civilian for the match was Kenneth Blast of Wichita, Kan. He fired a 272. Game adverturist E. F. Gates placed second in the civilian category with 270 birds.

Air Force Blue Trap Team broke 756x800 birds to sneak past Army Gray Trap Team with 732x800. Winning Air Force Blue team members were Garrigus, Chuck Eyler, Herman Mashburn and Phil Lones Wigger and Lt. John Writer, who both fired a perfect 400. Completing the 4-man team was MSgt. William Krilling who squeezed off a 397 and Maj. John Foster who fired a 396 for the team championship.

Individually Lt. John Writer took the Grand Aggregate with a 798, two points off a perfect total. In winning the championship, Writer won the kneeling match with a 200-20.

Maj. Lones Wigger won the prone and sitting matches with identical scores of 200-20. Lt. William Rigby fired a 198-15 to win the standing position.

Civilian master category in the Grand Aggregate was won by Tricia Foster with 790. She set a new women's record of 200 with 199 additional 10's in the kneeling match.

Civilian expert was Terry Nersesiah with 771 and civilian marksman was William S. Brophy III with 741.

Scores are submitted to NRA for selection with other sectionals for national honors.

Officers Tennis Team Faces Columbus College

The Fort Benning Officers Club tennis team will meet the Columbus College team at 9 a.m. tomorrow at the club courts here.

The exhibition match between the six-man teams will feaure both singles and doubles play.

The Columbus College netters recently returned from a road trip through the southeast and Florida where they compiled a 5-2 record.

"We are a young team and playing the Fort Benning team will give us a chance to get some experience under our belts," said Charles F. Ragsdale, the Columbus College tennis coach.

Each of the top two players of the Columbus team, Steve Campbell and Jonny Iniego, has an undefeated record going into the exhibition.

Fort Benning players are Maj. Allan Matthews, Capt. Gordon Brynilden, Capt. Jack Justice, Capt. Douglas Bielenberg, Lt. John Chryst and Lt. Herb Jerula.

The public is invited to attend the match.

One look at the tread and you know whether it matches the type of driving you do. This big, block pattern is for scrambles over and through mud, gravel, and reasonable snow. On decent pavement, it gives you a firm rapid ride. Some of the first-out have ended up in rallies,* gymkhanas and hillclimbs. We don't sell them as competition tires, but if you're on a tight budget. . .
The SP-41 Radial
Here is performance that must be felt to be appreciated. In the dry, it hangs on and on and on. In the wet, hundreds of tread sipes squeegee the water out from under you until it's all but a dry run. In the long run, SP-41 goes about 25% cooler than ordinary tires. Since heat kills tires, you'll run these for many a mile.

3 Marksmen Units Take All-Service Rifle Honors

Rifle marksmen from three Fort Benning units swept all three category championships in the National Match Course team match during the Spring Southwestern All-Service service rifle championships held at Camp Bullis, Tex., March 21-24.

Members of the Marksmanship Training Unit led the Benning Sweep in the open, major command and post, camp or station categories with their 6-man National Match Course team. They won the open or major service category with a 2872 with 78 shots in the center bull. The Third Army Advanced coached by SFC Kenner Marksmanship Unit followed up by winning the major command category with 2871 and 77 shots in the center bull.

MTU's six-man team was coached by MSgt. Roy Combs. SFC Robert Meeks led the team performance with a 484-10. SFC Carl Pritchett followed with a 480-12. Completing the team was SFC Robert Lancaster 479-10, SSgt. Harvey Skinner 478-9, SFC James McQuien 477-16 and SSgt. Elmer Mondon 474-12. Marine Corps Zahm team took second with 2863 and MTU's Red team Ravencraft was third with 2859-69.

Third Army's AMU Team was led by a fine performance from SSgt. H. Fuller 488-12. His fellow teammates were SSgt. B. Menz 478-13, SFC C. Wilson 478-12, SSgt. G. Floyd 474-16, SSgt. F. Sollitto 473-7 and SSgt. D. Kramers with 468-8. They outshot 4th Army's second place 2789-53.

Benning's surprising post team, Infantry Center Blue put together a 2781-49 to take a command lead over their rivals from Fort Bliss, Tex. with 2754 and Fort Hood, Tex., with 2732. with 2829-69 and the Infantry Center Blue team won the post camp or station division with 2781-49.

The infantry center team included SFC C. Stephens 480-13, 1st Lt. D. Cramer 474-12, SSgt. C. Hyatt 482-7, SSgt. D. Carothers 461-5, SSgt. H. Tomason 456-9 and SSgt. W. Duncan 447-3.

In other team matches MTU's Ravencraft won the 1000 yard Service Rifle match with 560-32 and MTU's Ravencraft won the 1000 yard Bolt rifle match with a 594-76.

MTU's Red team coached by SFC Burl Branham edged out MTU's Blue team 1218 to 1215 for the top honors in the Infantry Trophy Team match. Third Army's AMU was third with 1050.

The only team match the Benning marksmen failed to win was the Division A of the sniper match fired with a service rifle. Fort Bliss held the victory with 491. The top three spots in the Division B sniper match with bolt rifle was won by MTU personnel. SFC Robert Meeks and SFC Carl Pritchett put together the championship score of 750.

COMPUTER CORNER ON SPORTS

By Bud Goode

Which is more important in hockey, offense or defense?

A game of broken noses and stitches, hockey is a war fought on a bed of blue ice and cracked, white teeth. Scoring goals is important. But listening to players brag about one game's story, "... sixteen stitches and two penalties ..." makes the puck-passers sound as if the bruises are more important than the goals.

On both offense and defense, men for men and spirit for spirit, hockey is probably the most rugged pro sport. To find out which is more important, offense or defense, Computer Corner coaxed the current season statistics into our Data Processing Enterprises, Inc. sports analyzer through games of Feb. 25, and came up with these results:

OFFENSE	51%
DEFENSE	49%

Using Team Points (two points for a win, one point for a tie) as a criterion of success, offense and defense are almost evenly matched in importance in hockey. In baseball, by contrast, for the last few years, defense, as measured by a pitcher's ERA, is as much as twice as important as offense — and again, by contrast, in basketball, it is defense which is much more important in the standings for the average team.

But for the average team in Hockey, offense and defense are equally matched. What does this mean in terms of championships in the Eastern and Western Divisions?

Boston and Montreal have the best balance in the East . . . with Boston carrying a slight edge in the offense on offense.

The Western Division doesn't hold a candle to the East. Only St. Louis has any balance to speak of, with Oakland, Philadelphia, Minnesota, Pittsburgh and the Los Angeles Kings completely lacking in both punch and protection.

Braves Play Here Tonight

The Atlanta Braves will make their only official appearance of the year in Columbus tonight when they play their top minor league team, Richmond, in a 7 p.m. exhibition game.

Tickets for the game, sponsored by the Columbus Kiwanis Club, are on sale at the National Bank of Fort Benning and at the gate in Golden Park.

Archers Give Demonstration

Four members of the Chattahoochee Archery Council of the Fort Benning Rod and Gun Club presented an archery demonstration to the Columbus Exchange Club at the Martinique Motel March 25.

The demonstration, which featured Bill Guinn, Mike Christensen and Charlie Ard and his son, Chuck, included an explanation of the history of the bow and its effect on the evolution of man and a demonstration of firing at minute targets. A short demonstration of the cross bow was given gy Guinn.

According to Guinn, president of the Chattahoochee Archery Council, the council demonstration team may be obtained for appearances at civic meetings by telephoning 689-0211.

Pony Club To Sponsor May Horsemanship Show

May 3 Fort Benning's French Field will echo with the sound of horses' hoofs reminiscent of polo games played a quarter century ago on the same field.

To promote horsemanship, the Fort Benning Pony Club is sponsoring its seventh annual horse show. The public is invited as spectators or as participants in any of the events. The show is scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. and continue until 5 p.m.

The Pony Club's goal through the show is to regain the title of "Horse Center of the Southeast" for Fort Benning.

During the 1940's nearly 200 Army horses were stabled here, a club member said, and horsemen rode to hunt wild boar. A Department of the Army order disposed of the horses, however, in 1946.

With steady increase of horses in the last twelve years, there are now 80 on post.

Persons desiring entry forms and additional information may call the Fort Benning Hunt Club, 545-3000.

Military, Civilians Get Gun Control Regulations

Commanders Digest

Three government agencies have coordinated instructions for disseminating Internal Revenue regulations on the importation of privately owned firearms and ammunition by Defense Department military and civilian personnel.

The instructions hinge for the most part on the Gun Control Act of 1968 (P.L. 90-618) effective Oct. 22, 1968, and have been approved by the Internal Revenue Service (Treasury), Department of Defense and the Bureau of Customs. The authority for importation restrictions outlined in these instructions is contained in this Act and not in regulations generated by the Armed Services.

Procedures and requirements for military personnel are somewhat different than they are for civilians. For example, a military member on active duty abroad or Rod and Gun Clubs recognized by the Defense Department, are authorized under the Gun Control Act of 1968 to have firearms and ammunition generally recognized as particularly suitable for sporting purposes and intended for the personal use of such member or club, shipped from a licensed importer, licensed manufacturer, or licensed dealer to such member or club abroad.

This includes firearms purchased by a military member through post exchanges, ships, stores, or base exchanges from licensed dealers in the U. S. This does not apply where weapons are prohibited under existing military regulations. Military members are authorized to import into the U. S. firearms and ammunition that qualify under existing regulations, providing necessary proof is furnished their commanding officer — or his duly designated representative — that will permit compliance with regulations.

But it should be remembered that persons are prohibited under existing military member and then transferred to another member on active duty abroad will require an import permit as outlined by regulation before the firearm can be shipped back into the U. S.

Firearms previously taken out of the U. S. or possession by a civilian employee may be imported into the U. S. by the employee provided the supporting Form DD 1252 contains a certificate outlined in existing regulations.

Firearms currently in possession of civilian employees in the overseas area which were not previously taken overseas by such employee but were acquired abroad, may not personally be imported by a civilian employee. However, a civilian employee may arrange importation of authorized firearms by making arrangements with a licensed dealer within the State of residence of the employee who may act as an agent for the employee. Such licensed dealer will apply to IRS for permit for importation on behalf of the employee.

This prohibition includes weapons purchased overseas prior to, on or after Dec. 6, 1968. It also includes weapons purchased abroad by civilian employees through Rod and Gun Cubs, post exchanges, ships stores or base exchanges.

Prior to the Gun Control Act, both military and persons accompanying the armed forces overseas were authorized to import war trophy firearms, but the new Gun Control Act authorizes importation of war trophy firearms by military members only. Antique firearms are exempt from the provision of the Gun Control Act.

Following are definitions of terms which apply beginning Oct. 22, 1968. It should be noted that unless previously taken overseas all personally owned firearms and ammunition authorized to be imported into the U. S. must be generally recognized as particularly suitable for sporting purposes and intended for the personal use of the owner.

Prohibited Firearms: — 1 — A shotgun having a barrel or barrels of less than 18 inches in length; 2 — A weapon made from a shotgun if such weapon as modified has an over-all length of less than 26 inches or a barrel or barrels of less than 18 inches in length; 3 — A rifle having a barrel or barrels of less than 16 inches in length; 4 — A weapon made from a rifle if such weapon as modified has an over-all length of less than 26 inches or a barrel or barrels of less than 16 inches in length; 5 — Any other weapon as defined in the "any other weapon category"; 6 — A machine gun; 7 — A muffler or a silencer for any firearm whether or not such firearm is included within this definition; 8 — A destructive device.

Antique Firearms: 1 — Any firearm (including any firearm with a matchlock, flintlock, percussion cap, or similar type of ignition system) manufactured on or before 1898; 2 — Any replica of the above type if it is not designed or redesigned for using rimfire or conventional centerfire fixed ammunition; 3 — No permit is required for the importation of an antique firearm since they are exempt fro mthe provision of the Gun Control Act.

Ammunition: Ammunition or cartridge cases, primers, bullets, or propellant powder designed for use in any firearm. Documentation requirements for ammunition are the same as for firearms.

This investment starts paying dividends in three years.

Most cars last about as long as the loans that pay for them: three years.

In Sweden, where it's tough being a car, Volvo lasts an average of 11 years.

And while we don't guarantee that a Volvo will last that long in America, we do know that 9 out of every 10 Volvos registered here in the last eleven years are still on the road.

So if you buy a Volvo from us now, it'll still be worth owning three years from now when you get it paid for. You'll be able to stop making car payments and start making payments to yourself. And instead of paying interest to the bank, you'll be able to have the bank pay interest to you.

CAPT. JON WILLIAMS LOADS 35MM ROCKET ON TEST DEVICE
Sgt. James Gentry Aims XM190 Weapon

Antitank Training Kit Tested

Service tests were begun on a light antitank weapon (LAW) training device at the Infantry Board this week, it was announced by Col. Walter F. Johnston, President of the Infantry materiel test activity.

Present service tests of the training device are being performed to determine the suitability of the trainer. The new trainer is called the XM190.

This past year the test board conducted military potential tests on two other LAW training devices, both of which had shortcomings and have not been accepted.

The new LAW trainer consists of an expended M72A1 launcher and the XM190 Inner Tube Assembly Kit. Manufactured by Hesse-Eastern, the prime contractor for the M72 and the M72A1, the XM190 is a modification of the latter by replacing the inner tube with the XM190 assembly which consists of an extruded inner tube to accommodate a subcaliber device. In addition, the standard firing cap well cover has been replaced by a specially designed one which permits greater ease and speed in reloading.

The training device fires a 33mm rocket which has an exploding head to mark the point of impact on the target and simulates the flash, blast and smoke although not in the same magnitude. The trainer rocket has approximately the same ballistics as the 66mm warhead used in the M72A1.

In addition to the economy of operation of the trainer, it also advances two safety features which endear it to trainees. These are a safety pin which must be removed before loading and the firing mechanism of the exploding head, which is not armed until activated by the G forces of launching.

Conversion of the M72A1 into the XM190 requires approximately 10 minutes and can be performed by the unit armorer.

Presently the Infantry Board has received 15 of the new trainers for the test project and sufficient number of the practice rocket rounds for accomplishing the test. Actually, according to Col. Johnston, the test board will utilize approximately 400 rockets for conducting the service test, while 300 rockets will be released to the Weapons Committee of the Infantry School for further suitability testing.

Present testing of the trainer project has been placed under the direct supervision of Capt. Jon Williams of the Supporting Weapons Test Division of the Infantry Board. Assisting the captain in the testing is SFC Frank Mannarino.

First testing of the training device was conducted at Fort Stewart, where test officials attempted to determine range and accuracy against moving targets. Presently tests are being conducted at Fort Benning's Warner range to complete the evaluation of the XM190 as a potential training device.

All-Out War Is Declared On Litter

Monday marks the beginning of Spring Cleanup week at Fort Benning.

The program is directed toward all areas of the reservation, according to Col. C. W. Youngman, director of Logistics of the Infantry Center, who is serving as coordinator of this year's campaign.

"The week long event is designed to remove leaves and other debris accumulated over the winter" Col. Youngman commented. "Emphasis will be placed on pruning and shaping of shrubbery, cleaning of flower beds, raking of grassy areas, trimming along curbs, walks and fences, and policing of the outlying areas.

Col. Youngman added that another focal point of the campaign this year will be preparation of grounds for the growing season.

These will be four soldiers picked to roam the populated areas of Main Post, Sand Hill, Kelley Hill, and Harmony Church.

They will deliberately deposit litter during the entire week.

Persons spotting a "Mystery Litterbug" at work will be awarded a check for $15, provided they approach him and ask: "Are you the Mystery Litterbug?"

Four such awards will be made daily during the week.

Retirement Ceremony Honors 10

A total of 211 years of military service were recognized March 28 when Fort Benning held a retirement ceremony on York Field for ten men who completed their Army careers March 31.

More than 150 relatives of the men watched as Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., post commander presented Army Commendation Medals to the retirees.

The 283rd Army Band provided music for the parade of the honor guard provided by Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry. National and unit colors with color guards from The Infantry Center, Martin Army Hospital, The Infantry School, 10th Aviation Group and Center Troop Command also participated in the ceremony.

Columbus residents retiring were CWO Walker T. Wills, CWO William E. Stoops, SFC Bernie Pye and SSgt. Joseph E. Perry.

Phenix City residents were SFC Guy F. Michaud and SFC Joseph C. Wright.

Others retiring were MSgt. James A. Pyles, SFC Karl D. Fuls, and SFC William H. Smith.

NATO Marks 20th Peace-Keeping Year

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization marks its twentieth year of existence April 4 — dedicated to preserving peace and security in Europe, acting as a counterweight to Communist expansion and ensuring a balance of power throughout the wold. Cabinet rank officials of NATO will meet in Washington, D. C. Apr. 10 - 16. They will also observe the organization's birthday.

On April 4, 1949, 12 countries signed the North Atlantic Treaty at ceremonies in Washington, D. C. Since then three more have been added. The original participants were: Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, Iceland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, United Kingdom and the United States. In 1952, Greece and Turkey acceded to the Treaty, and the Federal Republic of Germany in 1955.

NATO is divided into three main sections in order to carry out its operations. These are the North Atlantic Council and its committees, the International Secretariat and the Military structure.

The highest authority of the Alliance is the North Atlantic Council, composed of representatives of the 15 member countries, all equal in status. All decisions of this council are taken unanimously, during their regular meetings to decide on major issues.

The International Secretariat is headed by the Secretary General of NATO and is composed of an international staff drawn from all member countries. It acts as the administrative branch for the Council.

The primary aim of NATO's military organization is to deter any potential aggressor from launching an attack. It is composed of the military committee, the three major commands and a Regional Planning Group.

Through the North Atlantic Council the Allies are able to exchange information and present individual views over the entire range of matters of common interest. It enables each ally to formulate policy with close knowledge of all other 14 members' views and the over-all objectives which NATO is seeking to attain.

On his recent trip to Europe, President Nixon told the Council in its Brussels headquarters, "One of the greatest values of having an alliance is the chance it provides to share ideas — to broaden the horizons of our thinking — to multiply the resources of experience and perspective we can bring to our problems, not only in our own immediate areas but throughout the world.

"As NATO enters its third decade, I see for it an opportunity to be more than it ever has been before: a bulwark of peace, the architect of new means of partnership, and an invigorated forum for new ideas and new technologies to enrich the lives of our peoples."

Food's Best In Texas

FORT MONROE, Va. — Texans can now claim not only the biggest state but also the best Army chow in the continental United States.

Both winners of the first Philip A. Connelly Award for excellence in Army food service were from the Lone Star state, according to Headquarters, U. S. Continental Army Command.

Selected as best single-unit mess was Battery A, Support Group, Fort Bliss, whose mess steward is SSgt. Aloysius C. Starke.

Honors for the best multiple-unit mess went to the 6th Bn., 92nd Arty., Fort Hood. The battalion's present mess steward is SSgt. Kenneth L. Rimmer. SFC James G. Delk, now a warrant officer serving in Vietnam, was mess steward during judging.

Runnerup honors were won by Battery A, 3rd Bn., 59th Arty., Milwaukee, Wis., an ARADCOM unit (single mess), and Consolidated Mess, Army Personnel Center, Oakland, Calif. (multiple mess).

Selection was made from 1,526 single-unit messes and 423 multiple-unit messes throughout the U. S.

Criteria for the Connelly Award included quality of food, sanitation in preparation and service, and rate of acceptability of the food by the soldiers.

Judging began last fall, when each CONUS commander conducted a "best mess contest" within his assigned geographical area. Other major commands in CONUS also took part in the program by submitting their regional finalists to the Army commander in whose area the units were stationed. Each CONUS commander then nominated his area's best single-unit and multiple-unit messes to USCONARC, who surveyed all finalists and selected the winners.

Interviews Set

Park College Official To Visit

Col. Robert L. Snyder, the Director of Adult Programs for Military Personnel at Park College, Parkville, Mo., will visit Fort Benning on April 9-10 to interview officers and enlisted men who are interested in a degree completion program.

Park College, founded in 1875, is a liberal arts coeducational institution with an average enrollment of 650 students. The faculty student ratio is 1 to 14. It is approximately 12 miles northwest of Kansas City, 20 miles from Fort Leavenworth and about 25 miles from Richards-Gebaur Air Force Base.

"The Degree Completion Programs have been in operation for over seven years, and have been highly successful," said Lenard Ozley, post education director. "Of the 336 military who have received degrees under these programs, over 30 per cent have already been accepted by graduate schools throughout the country."

There are at present 53 military students on the campus representing the Army, the Air Force and Marine Corps. The program is available to retired as well as active duty soldiers, and to those who leave the service on completion of their enlistment or obligated tours.

"Students accepted under this program are given permissive TDY, to attend," said Mrs. Laverne S. Worth, the Education Services Officer for the post. "They must pay all their own expenses at school, but they draw their full pay and allowances while attending class, and may draw the G.I. Bill if they are entitled to it."

"Park College offers military men an opportunity to obtain a Bachelor of Arts degree by participating in one of its degree completion programs," said Ozley. A B.A. degree can be obtained in history, sociology, economics, psychology, political science, economics and business administration, mathematics, chemistry, physics or biology.

The Social Science majors are offered in six-month and eleven month programs. The Natural Sciences are offered in eleven-month programs.

Soldiers accepted for this program must agree to serve an additional two years after obtaining their degree.

Those who desire additional information may call 545-4111.

End Draft Problems, Defense Deputy Packard Urges

Commanders Digest

Deputy Secretary of Defense David Packard believes it will take several years — and a good deal of discussion — before the draft problem is solved, but is convinced that one of the first things that should be done is to remove some of the injustice from it.

"I don't know whether a lottery is the right argument or not, but certainly the present system is not very good," Mr. Packard told newsmen on a television show Mar. 16.

A reporter estimated that about 30 percent of the June graduates would be available for the draft and asked the Deputy Secretary of Defense if that wasn't true.

Mr. Packard acknowledged that it would be a large number, but then qualified the statement:

"What happened here," Mr. Packard said, "is that there were predictions that there would be a large number of graduate students. That didn't come about," he said, "because there were various reasons why they weren't drafted. They were in the middle of their course and so forth, and so the results so far don't indicate what the percentage is likely to be."

He said he thought there would be a larger increase in the number of graduate students at the end of this semester, adding; ". . . the answer is, our present arrangement is not a very satisfactory one and I hope we can find a better solution to this draft problem, as long as we have to have a draft problem, as long as we have to have a draft."

A reporter suggested that the "big alternative" might be an over-all volunteer force, and then asked: "What progress has the Department made in its study thus far to determine whether such a force is feasible?"

Mr. Packard said there have been some studies made, but that he didn't think enough progress had been made so far to give a precise answer to the question, but he added that an all-volunteer force is feasible if you want to pay for it. "Whether it is desirable or not is another question," he said.

Asked how much an all-volunteer force would cost, Mr. Packard said, "It is difficult to get an accurate evaluation of the cost because it is hard to know how many of the present volunteers are draft-induced volunteers. A large portion, we think, are. I am sure there are some things that the services could do to make the service more attractive to keep people in the service longer. We are looking at some of those things and hope to implement them."

A questioner asked if an all-volunteer force — or professional army — could not lead to a military dictatorship in the U.S., and Mr. Packard answered: "Well, we know, as you know, the civilian controls the military here; I think that it is a very important part of the American way to do it.

"I would hope," he continued, "that if we find we have to go, or do want to go, to an all-volunteer force, that it can be done without the hazard that you outlined."

Court Reporters Hear Every Word

By PFC David J. Wynne

Working as court reporters for Fort Benning's Staff Judge Advocate Office, /Sp5 Vance J. Harris and PFC Edward Vellucci have the difficult job of taking down every single word which is uttered at General Courts-Martial.

Harris calls that the task much more difficult in military courts than in civilian practice. "In the Army, the witnesses have various backgrounds, and the different accents and modes of speaking can make the job of reporting pretty troublesome at times," he said.

For example," he continued, "a person with a Spanish background will tend to speak much faster than others, and continually I have to tell such witnesses to slow down so that I can be sure that I'm reporting the testimony verbatim. On the other hand, although I find the Southern drawl difficult to understand at times, still I look forward to a witness who was raised in the South because his rate of speech is much slower than others."

Vellucci, who was a reporter in civilian courts in Elizabeth, N. J. before entering the service, explained that the average person speaks about 180 words a minute. In order to pass the New Jersey State court reporter examination, Vellucci had to qualify with a reporting speed of 200 words per minute. Harris said that he had to qualify with the same speed in Indiana where he reported for the county circuit court in Valparaiso.

"The taking of verbatim testimony is all important for the appeal of an accused who is found guilty," Harris pointed out. "The record of the trial is the only thing which the officials have to review to see if the defendant received a fair trial."

"Because the record is so important," Harris continued, "I report every single word which is said. In fact, even if one of the lawyers should cough and then say 'excuse me,' I make sure that I report the same. You never can tell when the presence of a single word might make the difference in a person's appeal, and so the court reporter does no censoring on his own."

The hardest part of the job comes after the trial when the notes reported in the court have to be transcribed into a final record of trial. Harris estimated that it takes about three days of typing the record for every day of reporting in court.

Last year the reporters handled 61 General Court-Martial cases, as well as having the task of taking down occasional depositions and reporting at various investigations. The longest case Harris ever worked on in the Army was a three-day murder trial held last year.

To accomplish their job of court reporting, Harris and Vellucci use a stenotype. The 23-key machine is similar in operation to a typewriter, but it has the advantage of being completely silent.

Harris observed that many witnesses who are testifying for the first time are nervous when taking the stand. He surmised that this was because of the false impression they probably receive of the judicial process from TV or movies.

"The courtroom scenes portrayed on TV or at the movies are really quite different from the way courts actually are run," he noted. "The fictional accounts always has the lawyer almost sitting in the lap of the witness he is cross examining. This would never be allowed in an actual court, where the lawyer is at least eight to nine feet away from the witness."

"Also the film and television versions are much more dramatic than the real thing," according to Harris. "They don't show the meticulous out-of-court hearings in which complex legal questions have to be settled, nor do they truly indicate all of the background work and preparation which an attorney has to undertake before bringing his case to trial."

"But I guess if they did show all the duller aspects of the courtroom, nobody would watch their shows—not even me," Harris concluded.

Pilot Receives Silver Star

CWO Dale A. Fillmore, 177th Aviation Co., has been awarded the Silver Star for gallantry.

The decoration was presented for actions connected with a flying mission in South Vietnam in March of 1968. Fillmore landed his helicopter on an enemy field airstrip and retrieved a Special Forces team that was surrounded by the enemy and flew them safely back to their base camp through thirty miles of grounding weather conditions.

NCOC Battalion Plans Expansion

By David J. Wyatt

The Candidate Brigade's 10th Battalion, in operation for less than four months, is getting set to double its strength in the near future.

The battalion has the distinction of initiating a program in the Infantry School's Noncommissioned Officer Candidate Course by which men are graduated to serve with an MOS of 11C (indirect fire crewmen) or 11F (operations and intelligence). Previously, all NCOC's graduating from Fort Benning were given an MOS of 11B (light weapons infantrymen).

Under the command of Lt. Col. Bob. F. Oglesby, the 10th Battalion will add its fourth company in late April and will take on two more companies in May. At that time, the battalion will have three companies of men taking 11C training, and another three companies of candidates in the 11F course of studies.

The battalion, which went off provisional status on Jan. 7, graduated its first class on April 1. At that time, 154 men out of a starting class of 202 received their stripes. The top seven graduates were made E-6's, the rest of the class graduating as E-5's.

Maj. John R. Cassady, executive officer, pointed out that the academic aspect of the 11C and 11F training is much more difficult than the 11 B course. "Many of the candidates we have are college graduates who have recently come from an academic environment," he reported. "Even they find the work here extremely challenging. It's not just the task of learning all the theories; these men have to learn everything in the classroom and then actually use what they learn in the field. The whole purpose of the program is to develop soldiers who are leaders, not just individuals who are technically proficient."

The 11C candidates devote almost all of the last half of the 12-week course learning the intricacies of the mortar. Capt. Albert D. Brown, the battalion's operations officer, pointed out that the candidates spend 23% of the course's

New Destination For CG: Vietnam

Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr. will be returning to Vietnam rather than to Korea when he departs his Fort Benning command next month.

The general's assignment has not been determined. Previously, he served with the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) when it deployed to Vietnam.

Announcement of Gen. Wright's assignment will be made by Gen. Creighton Abrams, commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam. It is likely that he will go to an airmobile division, since he was one of the developers of the airmobile concept.

Originally, Gen. Wright

Sharpshooters From Unit Here Help Train Snipers in Vietnam

"I can't hit him," is the frustrating thought that races through many a soldier's mind in the Mekong Delta as he peers cautiously over a paddy dike and sees a Viet Cong in the distance.

The enemy may be too far away for the M-16 rifle, yet easily visible because of the flatness of the Delta. It is a recurring problem but one that is now being solved by the Marksmanship Training Unit of Fort Benning and the 9th Division sniper school at Bearcat. The only such school in Vietnam, it teaches beating the enemy at his own game.

Maj. Gen. Julian J. Ewell, division commander, first envisioned the need for trained snipers in the Delta. Prior to assuming command of the division, he requested that a team of the Army's best riflemen be assigned to the Old Reliables from the Marksmanship Training Unit.

Arriving in Vietnam in June, 1968, the nine-man team of NCO's, commanded by Maj. Willis L. Powell, set to work building a school from scratch and gaining practical experience in actual combat situations.

During the first month, two members of the team bagged 10 VC in a night ambush near Dong Tam, engaging the surprised enemy from over 500 meters. Thus proving the feasibility of sniping in the Delta, the team went to work on

Ticket sales for the April 17 general membership meeting of the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the U.S. Army will end Tuesday.

Dr. Wernher von Braun, director of NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center at Huntsville, Ala., will be the speaker. His topic will be "Manned Space Flight in the Future."

Approximately 1,200 tickets remain to be sold at a cost of $2.50 each. An AUSA spokesman said a sellout is anticipated.

The tickets entitle the holder to the buffet at the Fort Benning Officers Club starting at 6:30 p.m. and to 548 hours working with mortars.

Students in the 11F program undergo 587 hours of training, 100 of which are devoted to staff studies. According to Cassady, the level of instruction offered to the candidates is of the same level as that given to advanced officer students in the Infantry School.

"Candidates in the intelligence and operations course are likely to find themselves working at battalion level when they graduate," Oglesby said. "And that is exactly what we are training them to do."

The 11F candidates have courses dealing with the preparation of combat orders, the study of graphic representation, as well as studies in how to co-ordinate air support for ground units. "The 11F MOS encompasses many areas," Cassady pointed out. "The men may find themselves leading scout dog or recon squad. On the other hand, they might be serving as an assistant to a battalion operations officer and find themselves getting involved in tactical planning."

After completing the twelve-week course, those in the top five percent of the class are honored with E-6 rank rather than the usual E-5 position. "It's amazing how hard the candidates strive for that extra stripe," remarked Cassady. Final class rank is by two factors— academics and leadership ability. Each of these factors is of equal importance in making the determination.

The new battalion is housed in a complex of 71 buildings in the Sand Hill area. "One of the biggest jobs we had in getting the battalion started was to get the buildings ready for occupation by the candidates," Cassady observed. "The candidates have done a tremendous job of beautifying this area."

The NCOC program has been in effect at Fort Benning only since September of 1967. Oglesby feels that it has a great future. "At first, there were many individuals who had their doubts about the 'instant NCO,' but these doubts have been dispelled by the job these men have done in Vietnam," he explained.

classrooms and range facilities.

One of the touchiest problems was building a range, where students would spend most of their time. The great distances involved — up to 700 meters for target firing — called for a new system of raising and lowering pop-up targets and detecting hits.

The now-completed school teaches the art of sniping to volunteer riflemen from each battalion in the division. It constantly seeks soldiers possessing special qualities — a good eye, ability to think quickly and remain cool in combat, and the desire to learn.

Once a man is accepted into the school, he is issued a precision Match Grande M-14 rifle prepared by the Marksmanship Training Unit's shop with camouflaged stock and a scope, the heart of the sniper's equipment.

"The unique quality of the scope is its ability to tell the rifleman the distance to the target while making adjustments for the distance," said SSgt. Richard D. Rebidue, an instructor.

Designed by an Army lieutenant at Fort Benning, the complex scope is so unerringly accurate that it is now being commercially adapted to sportsmen's rifles.

Despite the precision equipment, the prospective riflemen sometimes experience doubts when they first arrive for classes. Doubts quickly vanish when they become aware of the competence of their instructors. As one student remarked, "I couldn't believe how great the NCO's were. They really know their business and treated us like professionals."

was scheduled to become chief of staff of the Eighth Army, stationed in Korea.

Gen. Wright's son, a lieutenant in the 82nd Airborne Division, will go to Vietnam later this month to serve with the First Cav, it has been learned.

The commanding general will be replaced in June by Maj. Gen. George Forsythe, a former assistant commandant here who is now with the First Cav.

DEFENSIVE DRIVING

How many people have been given the defensive driving course here at Fort Benning?

At the end of February the post had trained 14,758 people. The program is currently training about 2,000 a month.

Norman Evans, the post safety director, predicts the figure will level off to 1,000. In 1969 Benning was the ninth largest defensive driver trainer in the country, and the third highest Army post.

ARMY WAR COLLEGE

Does the Army War College plan to offer a correspondence course this year as it did last year? If so can you tell me the criteria for eligibility, educational requirements, details on how to apply and other pertinent information?

For the second year, the Army War College will offer a correspondence course to begin on July 1. The theme of the curriculum, like that of the resident course, will be the Development of a U. S. National Strategy and a Supporting Military Program. The three major areas of study are strategic appraisal, strategy and military planning. The correspondence course requires some two years to complete.

Criteria for Eligibility

Regular Army officers in the grade of lieutenant colonel and above must have completed 15, but not more than 25 years of promotion list service by July 1, 1969.

Reserve component officers on extended active duty meet the same criteria but will compute their years of service as active commissioned Federal service or age minus 25, whichever is greater.

reserve status not on active duty, years of ser-

For Reserve component officers in an active vice will be computed as commissioned service or age minus 25, whichever is greater.

General officers and colonels selected for promotion will be eligible with up to 27 years of computed service.

Educational Requirement

Successful completion and receipt of a diploma from the U.S. Army Command and General Staff College resident or nonresident courses or their equivalent.

Additional Requirement

Final TOP SECRET clearance.

There is NO age limitation and NO incurred service obligation.

Waivers

The Chief of Reserve Components, Chief of Personnel Operations, The Surgeon General, Chief of Chaplains and The Judge Advocate General may waive service and-or educational requirements for particularly deserving officers.

To Apply for Enrollment

Complete DA Form 145, the Army Extension Course Enrollment Application, and forward through command channels to appropriate address prior to May 1.

Commanders are encouraged to bring this educational opportunity to the attention of all their eligible commissioned officers.

"IT WOULDN'T BE SO BAD IF HE WEREN'T SO NEARSIGHTED, BUT LAST WEEK HE KNOCKED OUT AN OFFICER WHEN HE SALUTED!"

Benning student asks soldiers to Speak out

The soldier is often considered a forgotten citizen, especially in time of peace. Officers and enlisted men complain accomplishments are overlooked and their intentions misinterpreted. Those of us who have served in Vietnam are bewildered when we see headlines tell of communist victories in Vietnam, when we know the communists are defeated decisively in most major engagements.

The true image of the Army, and of the American soldier, is not being properly presented to the American people. The U.S. Army today is the best in history. News articles tell of the few who desert. The vast majority of young soldiers are performing their duties in a highly professional and dedicated manner. The public does not hear enough about these men.

Why don't our civilian neighbors get the word?

Most agree someone should spread the world, but we normally believe the responsibility belongs with others; The Information Officer, or Department of the Army, or with some unknown entity we can't quite identify. The US Army's formal information program is the responsibility of a very small number of people under the Chief of Information at Department of the Army.

The Army depends on an informal information program to tell the Army story to the civilian community. Every member of the Army is a member of the informal information program. The American public depends primarily on the individual soldier for information on the Army. The soldier, who says, "Nobody cares about my Opinion," is unaware of his own influence.

When Johnny Jones returns home from Basic Training and tells about the Army chow, his opinion carries more weight in his home town than official pronouncements of General Westmoreland. Every member of the Army speaks with authority on the Army. Your civilian associates consider you an authority in your field. They expect you to have knowledges beyond your present assignment.

You have a responsibility to speak out forcefully and authoritatively on behalf of the Army.

The Fort Benning Speaker's Bureau can afford you the opportunity to present your views and experiences to the local public. If you are interested in participating please call me at 545-4792.

'Common Sense Afloat' Urges U.S. Coast Guard

The frantic upsurge of water sports in recent years has resulted in a rapidly mounting casualty toll from "preventable" accidents. Preventable, that is, had the participants learned the potential danger of their equipment and environment.

The light-weight, low-powered outboard engine of a few years ago has become a juggernaut. The fisherman seeking a quiet spot for drowning worms has been replaced at the helm by untrained landlubbers who push their craft at full throttle.

If you plan to take up (or are already involved in) one type of water sport or the other, you owe it to yourself and your fellow water enthusiasists to learn something about the handling of boats and water safety.

If you observe the following ten common-sense rules of water safety, recommended by the U.S. Coast Guard, they will be your best insurance in avoiding boating accidents:

1. Know your boat
2. Keep good lookout
3. Run at safe speeds
4. Carry proper equipment
5. Respect the weather
6. Secure boat correctly
7. Keep boat in good shape
8. Don't overload
9. Take enough fuel
10. Obey the law

Above all remember that common sense and courtesy go a long way toward promoting boating safety.

Recognizing the need for emphasis on boating safety, the Congress, by joint resolution approved June 4, 1958, requested that the President proclaim annually the week which includes July 4 as National Safe Boating Week.

In line with this resolution President Nixon has this year designated the week beginning June 29 as National Safe Boating Week.

OWC Invites Teenagers To Dance

All military teenage dependents are invited to attend a dance in honor of the eight scholarship winners of the annual Student Award Program sponsored by the Officers' Wives' Club. The awards ceremony and dance will be held at Teen Square on Saturday, May 3rd.

The awards will be presented to the finalists by Mrs. James Morris Jr., OWC president, at a ceremony which will begin at 7 p.m. Music by the Wheatstone Mission will follow.

Deadline for applications for the eight $500 scholarships is April 15th. Eligible seniors must be dependents of military personnel, either active, retired or deceased and attending a Columbus or Phenix City High School.

Both the Student Award program and the dance is being handled by Mrs. M. E. Lee, Jr., welfare chairman of the OWC. For further information, Call Mrs. Lee at 545-4347.

Wives Model Hats at Show

"In spring, a girl's best friend is her hat," said Mrs. Irene Gordy, manager of the millinery dept. at a local store. "One of the best spring hats is the 'Do your own thing' hat. This hat is basically the traditional Panama hat that can be worn with bright spring flowers around the crown, a scarf tied around it and trailing down the back, or with no trimming at all."

Mrs. Gordy narrated a fashion show of spring and summer hats at a luncheon given by IOAC 2-69 wives.

NCO Wives Offer Two Scholarships

Maj. Rowe, 5-Year POW, Gets Silver Star

FORT SAM HOUSTON, Tex. (ANF)—Maj. James N. Rowe, the 30-year-old special forces officer who escaped from the Viet Cong after more than five years imprisonment, has received the Silver Star for outstanding gallantry in action while a prisoner of the Viet Cong in the U Minh Forest of the Republic of Vietnam. He also received the Bronze Star for assistance he provided the United States and Republic of Vietnam forces after his escape.

Maj. Rowe received the Silver Star for his efforts from Dec. 22 to 31, 1968. During this period, he was forced by his captors to move at least twice daily to avoid friendly air strikes, the citation said.

"On Dec. 31, two helicopter gunships began firing into an area about 300 meters from his location. The guard detail included one Viet Cong and five guards, one of whom was assigned to remain with Maj. Rowe as one remaining guard that at all times."

The guard detail, while monitoring a radio, learned that ARVN infantrymen were searching the terrain nearby.

"Becoming frightened, the guards moved Major Rowe into a large field of reeds, hoping to evade the infantry force. Realizing that if he were to escape, he must first get away from some of the guards, he tricked them into splitting into smaller groups in order to flee the area. Rowe persuaded his they were surrounded and kept him moving in a circle through the dense underbrush. While doing so, he was able to remove the magazine from the weapon slung across his guard's back.

"Finding a mua branch, he used it as a club and overpowered his guard, knocking him unconscious. Seizing the guard's radio, he moved 200 meters into a grassy area. At great personal risk, he quickly cleared a section and signaled one of the circling helicopters which landed and picked him up."

The Bronze Star citation praised Rowe for outstanding assistance.

The citation said, "His greatest desire after return to the United States control was to lead combat patrols into the area of his imprisonment in order to exploit the detailed information which he brought out with him."

WACs PONDER MAP-READING PROBLEM
PFC Rose Williams, Spc4 Sandra Penner

Map-Reading Course Finished By WACs

By Ken Sturzenacker

The Fort Benning WACs "conquered" the slopes of Cranston Hill near Victory Pond last week.

In doing so, they successfully completed a map reading and dead reckoning exercise as part of their preparation for a map reading exam.

The map reading exercises over recent weeks have covered terrain analysis, land navigation, coordinate determination and azimuth plotting. The exercises are the same ones given to NCOC and OC classes.

In presenting the dead reckoning and terrain analysis class to the WACs, Capt. James E. Wright, instructor, emphasized the need for all military persons to be familiar with basic map reading techniques.

"Too many times in Vietnam, the man calling in artillery and air support hasn't taken the time to determine his position properly. In some cases, he doesn't know how to determine his location because he's never been trained to read a map. As a result, his support isn't effective — or worse yet, the supporting fires all hit his own position rather than Charlie's," he said.

Wright pointed out that knowledge of map reading is important to all soldiers, not just officers and squad leaders or the men serving in the field.

"At any time, a cook or a clerk or a mechanic in a rear area may be called on to fight. Knowing where he is, and knowing how to communicate that information to others, may save his life."

As part of last week's training, the WACs were given sets of coordinates and required to determine an azimuth to their new location.

In addition, by utilizing terrain analysis, they had to decide when they had reached the point that coincided with the set of coordinates they had to find.

Lt. Mary Lewis, WAC Co. executive officer, said, "The 13 hours of map reading have given the company a greater appreciation of the role it plays in combat in Vietnam, It is possible that any of the WACs here might someday be assigned to a staff position where these principles would be of value."

VA Counselor Meets Regularly With MAH Patients, Retirees

By Bill Hardin

More than 50,000 active duty servicemen, their dependents, and retired members of the military who live in this area are served by a Veterans' Administration representative who visits Fort Benning three times each week.

John Broderick, of the VA's Atlanta Regional Office, said that he sees a great number of the 50,000 on each visit.

On Wednesday, Thursday and Friday mornings, he devotes his time to patients in Martin Army Hospital. Broderick counsels them on their rights and entitlements as veterans. Also, he assists them in filing claims for disability and gives them information concerning education and vocational rehabilitation benefits to which they may be entitled. He conducts private interviews by appointment on Wednesday and Thursday afternoons.

Broderick said, "I am frequently asked questions about National Service Life Insurance which is now available only to those who leave active duty with a service connected disability."

Through his efforts many men have received refunds for insurance premiums already paid. In other cases, he has helped a serviceman get insurance premiums waived.

"Often questions are asked about home loans, insurance and education benefits. Countless other questions and areas come up at times," Broderick said.

There are many servicemen and former servicemen who are eligible for disability benefits, but according to Broderick each must take the initiative. "He must initiate the action and file for the benefits to which he is entitled," the VA representative noted.

"My average visit with a hospitalized soldier lasts 30 minutes. The private conferences which are held by appointment on Wednesday and Thursday afternoons usually last an average of 20 minutes."

Men discharged from active service at Fort Benning are given a briefing from the VA representative. They are advised of rights and entitlements and are told how the Veterans' Administration may be of service to them in the future.

"We have a great deal of interest in the program from wives and especially the widows of servicemen and former servicemen," Broderick said.

"In recent months, retired personnel of this area have been receiving more counseling than ever before."

Auburn Students Sponsor Festival of Fine Arts

The first Auburn Festival of Arts, featuring music, drama, lecturers, movies and art, will open April 20 on the Auburn University campus.

Sponsored by Student Activities, the festival will begin Sunday, April 20, with an art exhibit and conclude Wednesday, April 30, with the Auburn Brass Ensemble.

The fifth annual National Print Competition, with entries from printmakers all over the U. S. will be on exhibit April 20, beginning at 4:30 p.m. Judging took place April 8, by Gardnund Bigtel of the High Museum of Art in Atlanta.

Eric A. Walker, president of Pennsylvania State University and Franklin Lecturer, will speak Monday and Tuesday, April 21-22. The New York String Sextet will also give a concert Tuesday. On Wednesday, April 23, Dr. Allen Tate will address the English Hour on "Modern Poetry with Commentary."

Teams Volley For Post Title

The Fort Benning Special Services company-level volleyball Tournament April 21-25 will conclude the season, which began in early February.

Nine post companies will compete for the post championship in the double elimination tourney at Harmony Church Field House.

After the tournament, an all-star team will be selected by Col. R. A. Sebenoler, Special Services officer, to represent the post at the Third Army Volleyball Tournament May 12-16 at Fort Benning.

Congressional Section Handles Important (and Other) Problems

By PFC David J. Wynne

Some soldiers think they have really big problems, and others have problems which are just "peanuts."

No matter what the type of problem, many soldiers and members of their families ignore the regular Army channels for problem-solving and set their complaints down in letters to their Congressmen. As a result, Congressmen sent over 2,500 letters of inquiry (commonly called "Congressionals") to officials at Fort Benning last year.

The letters from the various Senators and Representatives are all referred for handling to the post's Congressional Correspondence Unit, which is located in Building 35 and is under the direction of Col. Malcolm R. Baer, the post's adjutant general.

"We receive several hundred letters every month," explained Mrs. Martha O'Brien, the unit's chief clerk. "They really cover all aspects of Army life."

To say that some of the problems are just "peanuts" is no exaggeration. "One person wrote to his Congressman to complain that the Fort's commissary did not stock boiled peanuts. The Congressman, who happens to be from this peanut-growing state, quickly sent a letter to the post's Commanding General, querying about the matter," said Mrs. O'Brien.

"We had to handle the inquiry just like all the rest, and our research revealed that boiled peanuts had in fact been sold at the commissary but were discontinued several years ago because of low consumer demand."

Most of the Congressionals deal with subjects of much more interest to the serviceman than boiled peanuts. Almost twenty per cent of the inquiries by Congressmen into their constituents' welfare were concerned with requests by soldiers for hardship discharges. There were 487 such letters in 1968.

Other Congressionals were concerned with areas such as medical problems (450 inquiries last year), assignment problems (328), compassionate reassignment requests (217), and judicial problems (134).

Mrs. O'Brien stressed that most complaints are not handled any more expeditiously just because a letter comes from a Congressman. As an example, she noted that if a soldier writes to his Congressman about a pending hardship discharge application, the discharge request still has to be handled through regular channels.

"Most soldiers are probably aware that Congressionals don't take such applications out of regular channels, for only one out of every three complaints to Congressmen comes from soldiers. The other two-thirds are written by concerned wives or parents."

Mrs. O'Brien is most upset with soldiers who will write blistering letters to Washington without even having seen their commanding officers about their problems first. "This happens many, many times," she said. "The soldier simply winds up wasting time in getting his problem solved, for it will take several weeks for the CO to find out about the matter when he finally receives the Congressional."

Besides Congressionals, Mrs. O'Brien's unit also handles Presidential and Vice-Presidential correspondence. Only about two such letters are received every month.

"In October of 1968, we received 354 Congressionals. It was the most letters we ever received in a given month at this station," Mrs. O'Brien noted.

And just exactly how are Congressionals handled? Briefly, the Congressional is indorsed directly to the unit involved. Going through the regular chain of command, the inquiry is handcarried for reasons of speed, and it is placed in a distinctive red folder so that it will not be overlooked in a pile of other correspondence. The concerned group then has two working days to investigate the matter and send a reply to the Congressional Correspondence Unit, which then has three working days to forward an interim or final report to the Congressman.

"Usually we reply directly to the Congressman," said Mrs. O'Brien. "However, many times we will send a response through the Office of the Chief of Legislative Liaison."

Soldiers Tutor Village Children

By SFC Gene K. Moreno

CHU LAI, Vietnam (AMERICAL 10) — A large drum, suspended from a rope on the veranda of a long, low, white-washed building, booms out. About 100 children playing volley ball and whatever games children play run noisily toward the drum's sound.

They line up in neat rows. The boys are dressed in clean white shirts and blue trousers and the girls in flowing white Ao Dis, the native dress for Vietnamese women and girls for special occasions.

The occasion? School. School in the small village of Duc Pho, located on the fringe of the Americal Division's 11th Infantry Brigade base camp at Landing Zone Bronco.

This school, called the Duc Pho high school by the Americans who work there, and officially known as the Pho Dai school, was constructed through the joint efforts of the Vietnamese people and members of the 29th Civil Affairs Company, 4th AA Platoon, based at Chu Lai.

Upon completion of the school, the Civil Affairs unit began a program to supply the school with needed materials and equipment to help the children and their teachers.

LARGE TALKS WITH CHILDREN OF DUC PHO SCHOOL

Secretary of Defense and Supreme United States Commander Visit Troops

Lieutenant begins to read a lesson on the country of Norway, reading at a normal pace and emphasizing words he knows the Vietnamese will find difficult to pronounce.

At the front side of the room, his assistant instructor, Sp5 Larry Rachal, Baton Rouge, La., starts a tape recorder 1st Lt. Walton brought along as an experiment. The platoon members decided to tape the class, then play back portions of the lesson so the children can hear themselves speaking English.

Ourside on the porch, the platoon commander, 1st Lt. Steven Gumbiner, El Cajon, Calif., confers with one of the school officials on the condition of the cement floor in one of the classrooms. The floor is badly worn and more cement is necessary to effect repairs. The American notes the amount needed and assures the official that it will be delivered from the Civil Affairs warehouse that afternoon.

Gumbiner also serves as an instructor at the school, teaching classes in English as do most of the 4th AA Platoon members. Gumbiner explained that the designation "A" means that the unit is of the smallest size authorized for a Civil Affairs platoon.

Children not in class are busy bringing in bags full of rocks and sand on the backs of their bicycles preparatory to the mixing of the forthcoming cement. Everyone is cheerful and seem to be happy to be working together on a project of mutual benefit.

Back inside Lt. Walton's classroom, the young people, whose average age is 15 years, are now answering questions on the text read to them. When called upon, the children stand up and give their answers quickly and clearly. It is obvious that their homework was thorough. The entire class is conducted in the English language and the children sound much as their teacher in their pronunciation.

Pathfinder Becomes Pilot's 'Third Eye'

QUAN LOI—"It's like having a pilot on the ground," commented one medevac pilot. And to the rifleman seeking the enemy, the pathfinder, or "Blackhat," is the link to helicopter support.

Trained to advise, guide and control Army aircraft on any phase of an airmobile operation, the pathfinders of the 11th Aviation Group are familiar figures in the 1st Cavalry Division's combat assaults, medevacs, and supply drops.

"The 1st Cav makes more extensive use of us than any other unit in Vietnam because of its airmobility," said SSgt. William E. Lannigan, team sergeant supporting the 3rd Brigade. "Whenever a company needs us, we are called, and a team is sent out. The time we spend with the company depends on the tactical situation, and whenever there is a lot of action, we know we will be out there until it's over."

Usually working in teams of two, the pathfinders are responsible for maintaining contact with the division's support helicopters and guiding them onto the landing zones. Accompanying the first lift into the assault area, they immediately establish ground-air communications for control of the following ships. They travel with the command post and are often called upon for advice in selecting landing sites to insure the least possible obstruction to air traffice.

"After we select a site for 'logging,' the engineers usually help in setting it up," continued Lannigan. "If they aren't available, we clear off the location ourselves, using explosives."

The Blackhats are extremely flexible and perform in all kinds of combat missions, and any type of weather and terrain. Operations in hilly or wooded areas, though, produce particular problems. "The A Shau Valley was almost a nightmare," stated Cpl. Colin E. Detty.

"The battalion landing zone where I worked was carved on a hill. Whenever ships came in, they couldn't land and had to hover while unloading. We had to remain in position to make sure they didn't tilt too far one way or the other, and to warn the pilots of the obstacles."

Dense jungle with double overhead canopy necessitates a close working relationship between the helicopter pilot and his "third eye" on the ground. With the ship lowering supplies from the air while menacing vegetation reaches out on all sides, any mistake made by the Blackhat could be fatal to the pilot and his crew.

Probably the most precarious task, though, is bringing in a ship in the darkness.

"We stand in the open with a light in each hand to guide the helicopter in," explained Lannigan, a veteran of almost three years in Vietnam. "Under these conditions, it's understandable that we get shot at occasionally."

But the pathfinders, who are trained at the Fort Benning Infantry School, are well prepared to assume their job, having been schooled in demolition, map reading, radio operations, aircraft capabilities, and night and day parachute jumps.

"I have found that your aviators generally prefer a trained pathfinder," said Col. B. M. Read, former Chief of Staff, USAIC, "particularly when you get into what is called a pile-on operation.

"A small number of commanders feel their own people could do as well," continued Read, who is now Assistant Chief of Staff, G3, USARC, "but the pilots and commanders of airplane groups that I talked to think highly of the Benning trained pathfinder and want him when the traffic is heavy.

"Multi-ship insertions make aviators nervous when they get conflicting instructions from the ground. I also participated in one of these, and agree with them completely on the value of pathfinders," the colonel added.

Troops Keep Polls Open For Elections

LZ ROSS, Vietnam (AMERICAL IO)—Under the protective of their own government and the 196th Infantry Brigade, the Vietnamese residents of Que Son District have been conducting elections for their local government positions.

The voting is only the first round of elections for the people of this large refugee village which is located 20 miles northwest of Tam Ky in Quang Nam Province. Many elections will be held throughout South Vietnam in the next few months.

To insure a peaceful election, elements of 2nd Bn., 1st Inf. are operating near the polling locations and are coordinating with ARVN troops to prevent infiltration by enemy forces seeking to disrupt the self-governing process.

Preparing for the elections, Bravo Company, commanded by Capt. Richard D. Heroux, Watertown, Conn., moved into position around the Que Son District headquarters. After two days of providing outer security, the Americal Division unit moved to the western part of the area for search and clear operations.

In Memory of Ike

The Secretary of Defense has announced that participation by all Army musical groups, troop units, and equipment in public events of a social or entertainment nature has been cancelled until sundown April 26 in deference to the memory of the 34th President of the United States and the former General of the Army, Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Lion in Winter

Henry II and Elenore: A Medieval Virgina Wolf?

A REVIEW
By Jerry Genfield

It's Christmas and the average family gathers for celebration. But in "Lion in Winter" it's not the average family, it's Henry II and Eleanor, King and Queen of England 1154-1189.

Richard O'Toole and Katharine Hepburn bring to life the troubles of the royal pair, whose greatest enemies are themselves.

The contention between husband and wife is the perennial royal dilemma. Who should succeed the monarch? If history had been kind, their eldest son Henry would have been king, but he had died during an earlier family quarrel.

Home for Christmas

For the holidays Henry has released Eleanor from prison where he has kept her for the last eleven years. She just cannot keep from lamenting plots against her husband.

The family gathers — Henry, Eleanor, sons Richard, Geoffrey, John and royal consort, Alice. The scene becomes a muted and medieval Virginia Woolf.

Henry who has built England into a united feudal kingdom prefers the throne for his youngest son, John. The choice is ludicrous, for John is least like his father, being unclean, sniveling and treacherous.

Eleanor favors Richard, now the eldest. He possesses her beloved Duchy of Aquitaine and she wishes him to keep his position. Richard is also conniving and has a strange alliance with King Phillip of France.

Stable Son

Geoffrey, who is portrayed as the most stable son, is practically ignored. As he comments, "Why does no one even mention my name?" He is starved for parental recognition, so he must play one brother against the other.

"Every family has it's ups and downs," Eleanor rationalizes when tempers flare and intrigue deepens. Both King and Queen agree that their offspring are intolerable. But Eleanor dramatically personified in Hepburn's quivering features, is wrong when she looks in the mirror and says, "There's not another fight left in this old face." She has one more fling before the holiday is over. Even then she contemplates Easter when Henry will again release her for the occasion.

Noisy Neighbors?

In many ways the couple in "Lion in Winter" resembles a battling family next door. They spare nothing to hurt one another and although there is or was a love there, they have seen too much and said too much to retreat.

In a moment of tenderness Eleanor's barnacled exterior disappears when she recalls her early married life, and she sagely finds communion with the young girl who now loves Henry.

In "Lion" the resplendent trappings of the fairy tale kingdom are missing. The castle is realistically barren, damp and dirty. Where is Camelot now?

Among seven Academy Award nominations, the film has been cited for best picture, best actor and best actress. The movie has already received the New York Film Critics Award for the best film of 1968.

Strange Role

Although odds are against Katharine Hepburn receiving Oscars back to back, she has a stronger role as Eleanor than as the mother in "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner," which won her the Oscar last year. Miss Hepburn has received more nominations than any other actress (11) and has two Oscars.

Peter O'Toole, who has been twice nominated ("Becket" and "Lawrence of Arabia") without final success, may finally triumph as Henry II. The academy choices will be telecast Monday at 10 p.m.

Criticism leveled at the film stems from the caustic banter between the monarchs. The dilemma is serious, yet their verbal battles sometime appear tongue-in-cheek. The comic relief, however, invites laughter from the audience.

Stars to Sing At Awards

Frank Sinatra, Jose Feliciano, Aretha Franklin, Abbey Lincoln and Juliet Prowse will perform the Best Song Nominations at the 41st Annual Awards Presentation of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

The Academy Awards will be presented this year in the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion of the Los Angeles County Music Center on Monday. WTVM, Channel 9 in Columbus will carry the event live at 10 p. m., EST to conclusion.

Soldier Discovers Acting Isn't Easy

By 1st Lt. Fred Vollrath

"Back when I was a kid in New York I spent a lot of time in pool halls shooting. Going to musical shows wasn't exactly an acceptable social pastime in the crowd I hung around with," said Bob Hanley, an entertainment specialist at Fort Benning's Entertainment Center.

Hanley's "unacceptable" form of amusement changed into a desire to become an entertainer himself when he left the city to attend Archbishop Stepinac High School in White Plains, N.Y.

"At first I thought the kids there were kind of square, wearing coats and ties," he said, with just enought accent to peg him as New Yorker, "but, they seemed friendly and invited me to take part in a musical they were putting on entitled 'The Pajama Game.' After working in that production I was hooked; I wanted to be an entertainer."

His first professional efforts weren't too successful. Reading the want ads of "Show Business and Backstage," he came across one which was casting extras in a Sammy Davis Jr. Show and decided to apply.

150 Trying

"I figured it couldn't be too difficult to get a part," he said, "but, when I got there, there must have been 150 people trying the get the few rolls available."

"I found out how difficult a business I was trying to break into and how little prepared at that stage I was to do it."

Hanley hadn't planned on going to college after he got out of high school, but decided he needed something to fall back on if he didn't make it in show business, so he enrolled in the Fashion Institue of Technology in New York and majored in buying and merchandising.

As vice president of the student body in charge of entertainment, he wrote, produced, directed and starred in several shows including a 60 minute television program, "The Mighty Hanley Art Players."

Awareness

He started 'Awareness' discussion groups, "to get away from the constant fashion stress and get a better understanding of what was going on around us."

In the spring of '67 he was one of seven students selected from the school to participate in the United States Mobile Trade Fair and Fashion Show scheduled to tour the Soviet Union, Poland, and Czechoslovakia for six weeks to promote trade.

"In the Soviet Union I was in Moscow and Leningrad," he said. "I discovered people are pretty much the same everywhere. What struck me most was the cities were very clean. There was no litter or garbage in the street, but the cities were old, drab, and very provincial in their outlook.

Warsaw and Prague were a blend of both the east and west—more modern than the Russian cities and offering a greater variety of good. Being fashion conclous, I noticed the people's taste in fashions — or more accurately — the lack of it. In Russia the people looked like they bought clothes that would last rather than for style. "From the looks of the clothes they sure lasted a long time," Hanley said.

Resumes Pursuit

When he graduated from school he resumed his pursuit of an entertainment career and took a job as a model in conjuction with his show business career because "getting a 9 to 5 job and making auditions and rehearsals just don't mix, and besides, for a beginner the pay isn't bad."

During the time between his graduation and enlistment in the Army, he appeared as an extra in a Patty Duke movie, "Me Natalie," soon to be released, played in a satirical review that toured the country clubs in White Plains, modeled for several national publications and finally decided show busicss was what he really wanted.

His career hasn't been interrupted by the army.

Worked for CONARC

"I was with three television commercial agencies, but I didn't make a television commerical until I came into the Army and made one for the CONARC Recruiting Command," he said.

Since arriving at Fort Benning he has remained active in the entertainment field by occassionally acting as the master of ceremonies for the monthly entertainment contest, which he won last month, and is currently in rehearsal as "Matt" for the upcoming Fort Benning Playhouse production of the "Fantasticks" which will be shown April 23-25.

3 Benning Children Have Roles in Local Production

Children of three Fort Benning families are members of the cast of "Once Upon A Clothesline," being staged by the Springer Children's Theatre of Columbus.

Featured in the production, directed by Mrs. Charles Jones, are Deborah Hoover, cast in the role of Pinnete, Deborah Raby, as the Black Spider, and Garner Booth as Second Bird.

Deborah, the daughter of Maj. and Mrs. James H. Hoover, is a Kendrick high school sophiomore and is performing for the first time in the theatre.

Deborah Ruby, the daughter of Sgt. and Mrs. Donald G. Ruby, is also a Kendrick student. She has theatrical experience both on stage and behind the scenes in school productions.

Garner Booth, son of Maj. and Mrs. Van D. Booth, attends Edward A. White School.

"Once Upon A Clothesline" is a play for children which involves Pinne and Pinnette, two clothespins, and a magical threat to their existence posed by an awsome black widow spider.

The play will be presented in the Springer Opera House in Columbus at 8 p.m., April 18 and at 2:30 and 4:30 p.m. April 19 and 20. The same schedule will be followed the next weekend.

Admission is $1. The box office will be open daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. beginning April 14.

College Names Sears To Post

Dr. Robert L. Sears, professor of education psychology at Georgia College at Milledgeville, has been employed by Columbus College as director of the Columbus College-Fort Benning Center. He will assume his duties Sept. 1, college president Thomas Y. Whitley announced.

In September of 1970 Columbus College is scheduled to assume the role now played by the American University at Fort Benning. Whitley explained that Dr. Sears is being employed in September so that he can assist in planning the curculum to be offered by the college at the post.

Dr. Sears, a native of Sasser, Ga., holds a B.S. degree from Georgia Southern College.

Smothered Brothers

Now There Are None

By Harry Lloyd

Television's most notorious brothers got smothered last week under an avalanche of CBS network piety, provincialism and self-persecution.

One of the few clever and original shows on the air, The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour, was disfranchised after a long squabble because it tried to be different.

It was one war in which all the participants were losers—the Brothers, the sponsors, the network, the audience and Art itself. And the showdown came, ironically, almost immediately after CBS made an impassioned plea against censorship before the Pastore committee in Washington.

The clampdown on the Brothers carries evil portent for all of television because of the kind of show SBCH was and the things it attempted to do.

There are a pitiable few TV shows produced for the young, intelligent viewers, and as the best of the crop, the Smothers Brothers Show long rated tops with that group. It combined new and traditional folk sounds, some sharp satire and a smidgen of social comment along with just a tinge of blue humor. Although billed as a variety show, it didn't have something for everybody. Some persons who tuned in expecting a bigger version of the Ed Sullivan show were distressed to hear jokes about race, religion and politics.

And how did they react? Not as the intelligent viewer, who when faced with inane "Green Acres" or "Newlywed Game," shuts off the set. Just like addicted boobs, they sat through show and then wrote letters of protest.

Reacting quickly to all criticism, sensitive station managers began to protest the show's programming. When they demanded the right of prior censorship, relations between the show and the network began to chafe. When word of the cancellation came on Friday, the reason cited by CBS was that tapes of the show were consistently delivered too late for viewing.

That was the poorest excuse given since Russian troops bivouacked in Czechoslovakia "for Warsaw Pact exercises."

The excuse seemed lame because it was the one cited recently when the network suddenly replaced a recent show with a yellowing rerun. The show in question featured folksinger Joan Baez and comedian Jackie Mason.

Three weeks later, when cuts were complete, a shortened version of that show was put on the air. Missing were one of Joanie's songs and about five minutes of Mason's monologue. It isn't known whether Miss Baez sang another song of protest, but Mason said he would file suit against CBS for damaging his reputation as an entertainer.

All this is not to imply that Tom and Dick Smothers are blameless in the dispute. Perhaps they have been too independent and a bit impish in their dealings with the network. When they were censored and censured during their first season on the air, they let their feelings be known rather than bow in submission. When two little kids whose biggest running joke is sibling rivalry force the issue, mighty CBS is not about to back down.

There have been suggestions that NBC would pick up the show. The Brothers have appeared often on NBC as guest stars, and perhaps the network that produces "Laugh-In" could also adopt the Smothers.

There have also been hints that the versatile Brothers, who made their breakthrough during the folk music boom of the early sixties, might turn to movie direction, where censors are noticeably less sensitive.

Should that be the case, television would certainly be the loser. It is time that medium began to grow up emotionally to match its economic gains. TV, it seems, still has a "Mom always liked you best" psychosis.

Moby Grape Stops 'Putting Us On' With New LP

Hot Line to the Hits

By Pete Lis

It isn't often that the liner notes of a rock album take the form of an apology, although many should. But on MOBY GRAPE '69, such is the case. The notes begin with a revelation of man's inhumanity to man in the recording industry followed by a contrite report of how we, the public, had been hornswoggled by MOBY GRAPE up until the present. But now, say the notes, we can expect from the Grape, "nothing . . . but the music and the mutal respect and feeling from which the music springs - pure, honest, and with a most hopeful eye to the future." So says producer David Rubinson who also admits to having aided in the hype in the first place.

What a colossal waste of honesty.

Now, Rubinson is a good producer (Moby Grape, Taj Mahal), good enough to know that if the music is good enough, it'll stand by itself. And, a statement such as his might seem to be just a continuation of the Big Hype.

The most abnormal feature of the whole business is that MOBY GRAPE '69 is a good album. Some of it is very good. With the exception of the tripe served up on WOW, Moby Grape has always exhibited a musical honesty that resulted in some of the most solid rock going. And this album is almost as solid as their first which was a great record in anyone's book.

Although the five original members of the Grape recorded this album, Skip Spence quit drumming for them shortly after the recording and, for some reason, is not pictured or mentioned, although he is credited with writing one of the songs.

Still, all those elements of the Moby Grape style that made them among the first, and still among the best San Francisco bands is right out in front on this record.

One of those elements is power, and in Bob Mosely's "Trucking Man", they've got one of the most powerful cuts to come down the pike since "Great Balls of Fire". They even do justice to Jerry Lee Lewis with a heavy pumping piano in the last part of the song.

Listen to the lyrics and it sounds like a simpleminded hymn to truck drivers everywhere. But it hardly matters because it sounds like a truck driving song. Not a real trucker's song like Dave Dudley or Red Sovine would sing, but one idea of a truck song, and that's what makes it so good.

When Mohy Grape does a pretty song, it's real pretty. If you liked "8:05," on the first album, then you'll love "It's a Beautiful Day Today", also by Bob Mosely. The song's beauty is derived from the sound; the way the guitars are tuned, and the way it's sung, deeply and of Peter, Paul and Mary, it's in no way syrupy or gloppy. The man who doesn't like this song has got to be pretty hard-hearted indeed.

Pure Grape

These are the high points. The rest of the album is pure Grape. That is, it's got that country-rock sound that they devised and evolved considerably before other rock groups jumped into country music. And, it's their cleanly. While the song may bring to mind shades anemic imitation of country with heavy drums and bass.

Vocally, Moby Grape is as strong as just about any American group. Instrumentally, they're solid as can be and not terribly adventurous. Lyrically, they wax from humorous to hard to inane. Altogether, they're very good. They should get better.

Now, if only they would stop washing their dirty laundry on the backs of their records . . . . and the beat goes on . . . . .

Hotline Notes:

A Last Hurrah

"What a Bringdown." The last title of the final Cream album serves as a capsule summation of GOODBYE, and, indeed, the whole Cream mess. Certainly Jack, Eric and Ginger deserved a better fate.

GOODBYE is not a very worthwhile album. Critics will probably tear it apart, while even bonafide Cream Freaks will have to be a little dissapointed. It's like the once-famous tycoon who dies an anoflymous pauper; it's just a bad way to go out.

The studio version of "I'm So Glad" from FRESH CREAM is far superior to the live one. What melody the song had is lost as Jack and Eric get involved in a shouting match. "Politician" wasn't an overly brilliant song in the first place and the live recording doesn't improve upon the original version.

"Sittin' on Top of The World" is the best of the live cuts; it is dominated by Jack with a convincing vocal and a creaky bass. Eric comes in with a flash of guitar at the end; it all fits together tightly.

As for the studio cuts, they are plagued with the same faults which hindered WHEELS OF FIRE. Cream was best at playing blues; however, none of the stuff they wrote was blues. Hence, whether or not they work depends largely on the taste of the individual. If you're a fan of pure, simple blues you won't like these. However, if you can appreciate a few studio effects, they'll be quite listenable.

A double-tracked vocal helps Eric on "Badge", while a guy named L'Angelo Misterioso adds rhythm guitar. Felix Pappalardi plays piano and mellotron on "Doin' That Scrapyard Thing". And Jack Bruce abandons his bass guitar for piano and organ on "Bringdown".

There's a little nostalgia here; buy the record, listen to it, and hang the poster on your wall. And shed a quiet tear—not for Eric Clapton, Jack Bruce, or Ginger Baker but for Cream.

Do You Really Want to Look Like Tiny Tim?

By Paul Mangione

There exists among many people the peculiar notion that men's fashions are a bore and the male of the species should endeavor to look like a successful banker whenever the occasion calls for more than bermuda shorts and knee-socks. Others feel that the best a man can do is look like Elvis Presley circa 1958 or John Lennon, circa 1969. Hopefully, there exists a happy medium in which the gentleman can dwell and still retain a bit of individuality without looking like a mortician or a band master.

Perhaps the greatest difficulty in beginning a new fashion trend, in men's or women's clothes, is to avoid becoming faddish or so common place that it isn't new and different. The recent Nehru Coat craze provides a good example.

Markets were flooded with Nehrus after they were announced by men's wear magazines as being the "in" thing to have. Several designers changed to get some well known people, mostly show business personalities, to wear the new line and help promote them.

The result of all this over-publicity was a death sentence for the Nehru. Dealers complained that their showrooms were full of the things and nobody was buying them. Nobody would buy them either, because nobody knew what to do with a Nehru once it was purchased.

Another trend is developing towards making men's clothes that look like women's clothes. Hopefully this fad won't ever see daylight. The answer is not universal "sameness." Today it is already hard enough to tell the boys from the girls without everybody dressing alike.

A man's wardrobe should be diversified without being outlandish. You may not want to look like a banker all the time but occasionally (for church, weddings etc.) it may not be a bad idea. When the time comes for traditional type clothes a few rules should be followed in putting the whole thing together.

Dark suits are the only acceptable thing for formal and semi-formal wear, unless you live in the tropics or it happens to be in the middle of July. From Labor Day to approximately June 1 a dark suit and light long sleeved shirt are a must.

A vest acts like sort of a girdle in that it prevents the shirt from bulging out and keeps the tie neat.

The best looking, most expensive clothes could look bad on anybody if they're not worn properly. Tailoring is almost always a must. Never buy clothes unless you're completely satisfied with them.

Ornaments

Once you're sure the suit fits you, get some ornamental items to spruce it up. Try not to end up looking like a Christmas Tree. A silk handkerchief is a necessity when wearing a suit. A dark but different color standard size is preferable. A squared off handkerchief is just that, very square. They should be folded twice and placed in the pocket loose ends first and then fluffed out so about a half inch shows.

The idea is to look casual without being sloppy and still remain presentable. Matching ties and handkerchiefs, like anything matching, look planned, predictable and very bad. A co-ordination between the tie, handkerchief and shirt is a must, but when they are all the same color, and same material you will look like a mannequin.

Turtles

A turtleneck can be worn with a dress shirt only in a casual situation, never in place of a tie. Try getting into a restaurant that requires a tie while wearing a turtleneck and see what happens. We are all not Steve McQueen.

A turtleneck with a sport coat is fine in casual circumstances, but be careful. A white turtleneck with a blue blazer is great for professional yachtsman but on anyone else that particular combination borders on the absurd.

The new Edwardian style suits are catching on pretty well. Hopefully they won't go the way of the much lamented Nehru. Most of norms apply to the wearing of a double-breasted suit as to the traditional with a few large exceptions. The new style wide collar shirts and wide ties may be worn and in most cases should be. Button down collars with a double-breasted suit are exceptionally vulgar and should be avoided at all costs.

Persons who wear white socks with dark clothes are attempting to set back the march of men's fashion to the days of knickers and buckle shoes. Enough said.

Be original but not fad conscious, tasteful but not flashy. You pay for what you get, in clothes as in anything else but price is not always a determining factor. Find out what looks good on you, not Dean Martin or Joe Namath. If you don't like it, don't wear it. Clothes may not necessarily make the man but they say a great deal about him.

Duplicate Bridge

By Chuck Grutman
Bidding The Stamen Convention

Of the many conventions in bridge, I have found that the Stamen convention is among those, most widely accepted and used. It is a totally artificial system of bids. The Stamen convention is a response by partner to your bid of one no trump, and enables you to determine whether your side belongs in a major suit contract, no trump contract, minor contract, or whether you belong in a game contract at all.

The convention is easily mastered, provided that you remember a few basic tenets of the game: the first is that by bidding one no trump you have shown your partner that you have between sixteen and eighteen points, and that if he gives you a positive rebid it means that you must go on to game; secondly, that you must have partnership trust, meaning that if your partner asks for certain information regarding your hand, you must give it to him and rely on his judgement to use it properly.

Stamen requires that for a response to your one no trump bid your partner have either of the following types of hands: an eight point or strong seven point hand, or a weak hand with a long suit. The reasoning here is the partnership for game needs twenty-six points, or a strong twenty-five, and if you have the maximum number of points shown by your one no trump bid you still have only eighteen.

Artificial Bid

If partner has at least one four card major suit and at least eight points (or a strong seven) he makes the artificial bid of two clubs in response to your one no trump opening bid. He is demanding that you tell him about any four card major suit that you hold, even if it is the 2, 3, 4, 5. Partner now has control of the hand, and you must allow him to judge. Do not, in such a case, make an alternative bid merely because you feel that your suit is not good enough for a response. Only partner can judge that.

Should you not have a four card major suit, but still have eight points, and even distribution, the correct bid is two no trump, the same as in Goren. Partner, with a maximum of eighteen points, or a strong seventeen, will bid three no trump, and with a weak seventeen or six-teen points he will pass.

Should you have less than a strong seven points you should pass. The prospects for game are indeed dim, the partnership containing no more than twenty-four points altogether. There is however one.

There are a number of innovations that have been added to the basic Stamen convention. The first of these is "double barrel Stamen." Should you have eleven points or a strong ten, with a long minor suit card length, bid two diamond no major suit of four monds in response to partners one no trump bid, even if your suit is clubs. This bid shows a possible game in a minor, no game in a major, and a possible three no trump if partner has the majors stopped.

Gone With the Wind

Margaret Mitchell's Only Book Is Now Best-Seller, Movie Classic

By Jerry Ganfield

More than 40 years ago a journalist-housewife outlined in her mind an idea for a novel. The writing of the book took a lot longer than she had at first imagined. When she began in 1926, each chapter led to another, until her work numbered 500,000 words.

And what did she do with this novel of epic proportions? She placed it in manila envelopes secluded in closets, afraid to submit the manuscript to a publisher.

Only much later at the urging of friends who hated to see wasted effort and others who doubted she had written a line did she drag out the original copy for critical appraisal.

Central to her story was a self-determined heroine known to practically every American today. Her name? Pansy.

Thus were the beginnings of Margaret Mitchell's "Gone With The Wind," now being shown at post theaters.

Changed to Scarlett

By the time the manuscript became print in 1936, several changes had been made, the most prominent being the change of the heroine's name to Scarlett O'Hara. Also, since the story followed the course of the Civil War, researchers had to verify historical facts, knowing that many readers would be quick to catch any discrepancies.

All characters Miss Mitchell created were entirely fictional, and great pains were taken to see that there could be no connection with actual persons who might bring court suits. But try as the publisher might to avoid it, an oversight did appear after the book was finally printed. A Catholic bishop named Gerald O'Hara — the same name given Scarlett's boisterous, boozing father — had moved into the Atlanta area. Luckily he took the coincidence good naturedly.

While readers across the nation burned midnight oil unable to set the novel down, movie producers saw a chance to make an "immortal" film. With Margaret Mitchell as a consultant, David O. Selznick started the cameras rolling.

The producers faced many technical problems in the filming, but what concerned the public was who should play the lead roles. Clark Gable was a natural Rhett Butler. Trevor Howard and Olivia de Havilland were cast as Ashley Wilkes and Melanie Hamilton. The big question was who should portray the indefatigable Scarlett.

Names of many prominent actresses were bandied about, but the solution did not come until the cameras were already recording the second "burning of Atlanta." By chance a young British actress visited the set. It was the intense beauty and the eer saw reflected in her brightened fire the produ- eyes that brought her the role.

The South made protest. If not a Southern belle, Scarlett should at least be an American! But the choice remained — Vivien Leigh.

In the years since its filming, "Gone With The Wind" has been released, re-released and re-re-released. Though some may justifiably say the film is not matchless movie art and that it is too long (222 minutes), millions will see it and want to see it again.

Of the principal actors, only one, Olivia de Havilland, is living. The housewife who left us the Pulitzer Prize winning classic died in 1949. It was her only book.

BY CARROLL HIKER

When the Atlanta Braves made their next-to-last spring training stop in Columbus last week, a few hundred persons were sorely disappointed. One of them was Milt Pappas, the Atlanta pitcher who suffered a 4-0 defeat at the hands of a "B" team called, for box score purposes, the Richmond Braves. The rest of the disappointed were the Fort Benning basic trainees who arrived too late to grab a seat or see Satchel Paige.

An effective job of promotion by the Columbus Kiwanians resulted in more than 6,000 tickets sold for the game in Golden Park. A big part of the production was the announcement that Paige, a legendary pitcher who's more than 60 years old, would pitch. But by the time the trainees marched in and scrambled for seats on the turf, Paige had already made his appearance and retired three straight Richmond batters.

"I can still pitch in this league," Satchel insisted earlier Friday as he warmed his old bones in the sun outside a Columbus motel. "If they would let me, I'd pitch for nothing. They wouldn't have to pay me unless I got the job done. That's fair enough, ain't it?"

Only the night before, Satch had registered his first "official" victory in more than two years. He made a similar one-inning appearance in Savannah and got credit for a 1-0 decision over the minor league Braves. "I'm not pitching any more after this spring," says Paige, who is carried on the Atlanta roster as an "assistant trainer" but is actually more of a public relations man for the team. When Atlanta signed him last year, they partially corrected an old injustice and made Paige eligible to receive player pension benefits.

In his pitching heyday, which lasted from the 1920s until the fifties, Paige was the master of almost every pitch. He had remarkable control and an ability to throw a batter off pace. Most of those assets are still around, as Braves farmhands discovered in three innings against Satchel last week.

"I don't like to make the young fellows look bad," Paige insisted, tongue in cheek. Yet he unhesitatingly threw blooper pitches past the overeager batters. Only one of the three Richmond players came close to reaching base. He was the left-hand batter who hit a grounder to first baseman Bob Aspromonte. Aspromonte had to make the play at first himself because Paige is so lame and infirm that he can't run over to cover the base the way a pitcher should.

When Paige completed his one-inning stint, Pappas came on and ran into immediate trouble. Two subs in the lineup — Aspromonte and left-fielder Tito Francona, replacing injured Orlando Cepeda and Rico Carty — caused part of it.

With the bases loaded and one out in the third, Aspromonte bobbled a ground ball and missed the chance for a play at the plate. Then Francona dropped a line drive in left field, and quickly the big boys, the crowd favorites, were behind by 3-0. Frank Obregon's homer over Francona's head, the only real shot of the night, completed the scoring.

The real Braves, of course, were not dismayed by their defeat. The winning pitcher, toiling in behalf of the minor leaguers was 6-6 underarmer Cecil Upshaw, Atlanta's best reliever. And one of the stars for Richmond—who made the big team in time to start the opener — was speedy left fielder Ralph Garr, a bright prospect who stole two bases.

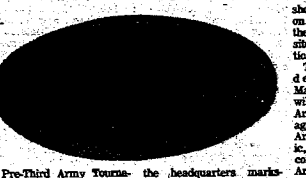
The Braves are popular with Columbus and Fort Benning fans, as the overflow crowd proved. They dulled their image somewhat by failing at the plate, but they brightened it considerably once the for-real season began, beating San Francisco in the first three games at home.

Most of the fans would agree they got their money's worth. They saw some good pitching, a homer, speed, and good defensive play by Hank Aaron. And unless they were the trainees who got in free — they saw Satchel Paige. That is what most fans will remember the longest.

Top Guns Begin Fire In Target Competition

Nearly 500 shooters from the Active Army, National Guard and Reserves will enter the Third U.S. Army Tournament here April 15-26. Preparations for the spring matches began last month.

In mid-March, a staff of 10 officers and 44 enlisted men under Maj. Fred Stallans, 177th Aviation Co., 10th Aviation Group, joined Fort Benning's Marksmanship Training Unit to train for the tournament season.



Pre-Third Army Tournament matches will be held this weekend to smooth the headquarters marksmen into a team. About 225 military and civilian shooters will be practicing on McAndrew, Ensley and the Post pistol ranges, sites of the later competition.

Tournament winners, under the supervision of Maj. Herman E. Edwards, will represent the Third Army in competition against teams from each Army area and the Pacific, Alaskan and European commands during the All-Army Tournament June 3-7.

All-Army individual and team champions in both rifle and pistol divisions will form the U.S. Army team, directed by Col. Robert F. Bayard, and enter matches all over the world.

Fort Benning will host the Inter-service International Tournament, spring phase, May 22-29. Sharpshooters in small bore rifle, 300 meter and free pistol (any caliber) matches will compete at Parks Pistol Range and the Post Pistol Range. The winter phase will be held November 4-10.

The inter-service tournament includes round robin matches in the different marksmen divisions at Lackland Air Force Base, Quantico Marine Base, and Fort Benning.

Other matches in the season includes the Southeast Regionals, May 3-June 2, and the Army-Air Force Carrot Match, June 8-9. In the Carrot Match, the losers receive a carrot trophy, indicating they should sharpen their eyesight, according to the Army Team. The Air Force has won the loser's trophy for the last six years.

During tournament matches, the Marksmanship Branch, composed of four permanent and 54 temporary staff members, runs the ranges, compiles the statistical data, including recording the value of the thousands of rounds fired, and publishes daily match bulletins.

The Branch is under the operational control of Lt-Col. David S. Burgess, USAIC range control officer.

April 20 Deadline

Bowlers Enter Postal Tourney

A bowling roll-off will be held April 23-25 to determine Fort Benning's entrants in the Third Army Championship Postal Bowling Tournament May 3, 4, 10, 11.

Active duty soldiers and WACs may register at any of the post's bowling alleys prior to April 20. Each entrant will bowl six lines April 23 and six lines April 24.

The roll-offs will be held with separate divisions for men and women. Men will abide by the American Bowling Congress rules, while women will be governed by Women's International Bowling Congress rules.

The top twenty contestants will bowl an additional six lines April 25. From these, the top six will compose the team for the doubles and singles and team events in the postal tournament.

Teams of six male and six female bowlers will represent the post in the May tournament. The results of the lines bowled will be sent to Third Army Headquarters, where they will be compared with results mailed from other posts. The highest scores will determine the Third Army champions.

Fort Benning placed first in the team event in last year's competition.

Softball Season Begins With Coaching Clinic

Fort Benning's preparation for the upcoming softball season will begin with a Softball Clinic at Briant Wells Field House and Gowdy Field from 1-5 p.m., April 16-18.

SSgt. Richard Workman, Special Training Co., Army Training Center, SSgt. Sam Tyson Co. A, 1st Bn., Center Troop Command, will conduct the clinic. Both men attended the Third Army Softball Clinic April 1-4 at Fort McClellen, Ala.

Softball rules, umpire position and techniques of officiating will be stressed at the clinic to help post units set up softball programs for the fast pitch and slow pitch softball seasons. Units may send at least one representatives from each company to the clinic, according to the Special Services Athletic Office.

The Infantry Center brigade level fast pitch softball season starts May 5 with the tournament to be held in August. Tryouts will be held at each brigade sized unit. Prospective players may contact the brigade's athletic and recreation officer.

Slow pitch softball schedules are set up independently by the post's major units. Separate companies compete within their parent units for a place in the Fort Benning Special Services Slow pitch Tournament August 18-22.

Pools Open

Post swimming pools will open April 15, according to the Special Services Athletic office.

Lifeguards are now undergoing training while the pools are being readied for opening day.

Scout-O-Rama Features Displays, Jump Tower

The 27 scout units in the Fort Benning District, Boy Scouts of America, will participate along with the other 14 districts in the annual Chattahoochee Council Scout-O-Rama at 1 p.m., tomorrow at the Columbus Municipal Auditorium.

The event is open to the public and tickets may be obtained from any scout at $1 each.

There will be booths and displays of scouting functions, a Cub Scout Pinewood Derby and a 15-foot working replica of The Infantry School Airborne Department's 34-foot jump tower, manned by members of the department.

Awards will be presented this year to the best all-around scout unit and the winner of the Pinewood Derby. Last year Fort Benning's Pack 227 won the honor ribbon for selling the most tickets to the event, having the most participants and the best display.

ATC Squads Vie In Tight Race

ATC volleyball league action is scheduled to be completed this week, with the Special Training Co. and 1st Battalion leading the pack in a tight race for the top two spots.

The champion and runner-up in the ATC league will be able to compete further in the post championship tournament April 21-25. League standings going into the final week show Special Training Co., 5-0, 1st Battalion, 5-1, 9th Battalion, 4-2, HHC-B 4-2, HHC-C 3-2, Reception Station, 3-3, HHC-A 2-4, Hq. Det. 1st Bde 2-4, 8th Battalion, 1-5, and 10th Battalion, 0-5.

Destin Recreation Area Operated for Army Use

By Bill Kloeb

Near the fishing town of Destin, Fla., The United Sates Army Infantry Center Special Services operates a recreation area for the use of every one assigned to Fort Benning.

Located between Chotawatchee Bay and the Gulf of Mexico, the Destin Rest Camp is in the heart of Florida's "Miracle Strip," midway between Pensacola and Panama City.

There are now five cement brick cottages under construction. When these buildings are completed about May 1, Destin will have 14 cottages and one three-bedroom trailer. The cottages and trailer are completely furnished and have modern facilities. Air-conditioning or fans, television, stove, refrigerator and all needed cooking utensils are provided in each cabin.

Rental rates begin at $7 a day.

Trailer and tent spaces, snack bar, laundry facilities, fishing gear, picnic areas, barbecue pits, children's play area and athletic equipment are available.

Recreation includes horseshoes, pool, ping pong, volley-ball, swimming, water skiing, bay fishing and deep sea fishing.

The recreation area has a 35-foot deep sea fishing cabin cruiser, a water ski boat, two 16-foot boats and ten 14-foot boats. Boat motors may be rented for $2 a day or $1 for half a day.

The coastline shelf, which extends along most of the coast of the Gulf of Mexico, enables swimmers and waders to venture 40 to 50 yards off shore in waist deep water. For the non-swimmer Special Services has enclosed an area where they will be safe.

The recreation area is operated primarily for active duty personnel, however retired personnel, dependent wives and other service-connected personnel are accomodated on a space available basis. During the months children are in school it is not too difficult to make reservations but when children are on vacation reservations are at a premium. To make the allocation of reservations equitable, a drawing is held for each five day period during the summer vacation. The first drawing this year will be held May 9. For enlisted men this period will be May 29 to June 3 and for officers it will be May 30 to June 4.

Recreation in the Destin area is not limited to the rest center. Destin has been called the "luckiest fishing village in the world." Billfish, sailfish, tuna, dolphin, cobia and wahoo are caught in the depths of the Gulf. No license is required for salt water fishing. Pompano, mackerel and flounder are caught from the Destin pier.

Fresh water streams and lakes are just minutes from the recreation area for fishermen wanting perch, bass nr bream.

Sightseers see the ruins of Fort Pickens and the old Spanish Village, a replica of Panton Trading Post which stood on Pensacola Bay in the time of the American Revolution. At Fort Walton, only eight miles from Destin, are the pre-historic remains of mammals and the Indian Temple Mounds, a burial place of Indians of the Fort Walton culture.

More in line with the atmosphere of the Gulf are two sea aquariums located at Fort Walton and Destin featuring gold fish, turtles, trained porpoises and octopi.

For golf enthusiasts there are three courses close to the Destin camp. Two are within a twenty minute drive of Fort Walton and the third is at Eglin Air Force Base just across the bay from the rest camp.

The Air Force extends base privileges to visitors at the rest camp upon the presentation of a military identification card. Post exchange, commissary and theater facilities are available. Officers and noncommissioned officers may take advantage of the officers' club or noncommissioned officers' club if they have proof of membership in a club at Fort Benning.

Advance reservations must be made with the Recreation Officer of Special Services (545-7414) for use of the cabin cruiser.

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

By Bill Kloeb

Bowmen of the Chattahoochee Archery Council may be interested in participating in the Lake Seminole Carporee to be held April 12-13. This little publicized event will give archers a chance to combine two popular sports.

The Carporee is held annually at lake Seminole and in addition to providing some exciting sport, helps clear the rough fish out of one of the most productive sport fishing lakes in Georgia.

Lake Seminole, located near Bainbridge, Ga., about 130 miles south of Columbus, can be reached by going south on Highway 27.

All contestants muster register at Jack Windgates Lodge and enter the lake from his camp. Registration fee is $4. This entitles the contestant to a barbecue dinner and a chance at one of the five trophies to be presented to the five archers bagging the most carp.

Bowfishing is a sport that is growing in popularity in Georgia. The archer who hunts carp, gar and bowfin (mudfish) will usually find a lot of action especially during the spawning season. These are the only fish that can be hunted legally with the bow and arrow. Any bowfisherman found with gamefish is considered to be in violation of the law.

Archers may not shoot within 150 feet of anglers using rod and reel or pole and line, from any bridge or from any public road. Arrows must be equipped with barbs or other devices to recover the fish and be attached to a strong line to the archer or his bow.

A 40-pound bow is just about ideal for this sport. It is light enough to use for an extended period of time without tiring, yet heavy enough to cast a heavy fishing arrow.

Due to refraction of light rays fish appear nearer the surface than they actually are. To hit a submerged target, the archer must aim beneath it. A pair of polaroid glasses helps the bowfisherman to see fish and other submerged objects. A pair of waders will protect his feet and keep out the cold water usually found in Georgia waters during spring. An arm guard and shooting glove or tab and your regular fishing license complete the list of items needed for bowfishing.

The Rod and Gun Club will sponsor the Tall Pine Open Skeet Shoot at the club skeet ranges April 19-20.

The shoot will consist of five individual events and two team events.

Event No. 1 — 50 targets with the 410-gauge, April 19. Starting time 9:30 a.m. Entries close at 3 p.m.

Event No. 2 — 50 targets with the 28-gauge, April 19. Starting time 9:30 a.m. Entries close at 3 p.m.

Event No. 3 — 100 targets with the 12-gauge, April 20. Starting time 9 a.m. Entries close at 3 p.m.

Event No. 4 — 100 targets with the 12-gauge, April 20. Starting time 9 a.m. Entries close at 3 p.m.

Event No. 5 — high overall champion. To be eligible, shooter must have entered all four previous events. Purses will be awarded to men and women champions.

Officers Suffer Tennis Losses

The Columbus College tennis team won a lopsided victory over the Fort Benning Officers Club team April 5 in exhibition singles and doubles competition, winning seven of the nine matches played.

Steve Campbell and Johnny Iniego, the two top rated players for the local college, won singles events as Campbell defeated Capt. Gordy Brynildsen 6-2, 6-3, and Iniego posted 3-6, 6-1, 6-2, over Lt. Norm Chryst.

The two Army officers, however, paired to defeat the doubles entry of Steve Campbell and Bobby Babcock 6-3, 8-10, 6-1.

Other results were:

Singles: Allan Matthews (FB) over Gilbert Rincon (CC), 6-3, 8-6; Bobby Babcock (CC) over Gill Stephenson (FB), 9-7, 6-0; John Simott (CC) over Douglas Bielenberg (FB), 6-3, 6-4, and Jay McClung (CC) over Herb Jervis (FB), 4-6, 6-1, 6-4.

Doubles: Riley and Iniego (CC) over Matthews and Bielenberg (FB), 4-6, 6-4, 8-6, and Clyde Thompson and McClung (CC) over Bill Stephenson and Herb Jervis (FB), 6-3, 6-2.

17 Complete Gas Station Course

The Gulf Oil Corporation graduated its sixth class under the Project Transition program here at Fort Benning on March 28. The course attempts to train service station attendents and operators.

Col. S. D. Keirsey, chief of staff, congratulated 17 graduates. He also commended the corporation on the "fine program development here."

M. G. Ferris, vice-president of the Southern Region for Gulf, told the class, "You are each on the threshhold of new opportunities and prospects." Ferris complimented the Army on the "fine job it does in the maturing of a man." He said that Gulf is proud of its program under Project Transition.

Boyden Jann, Gulf's manager of manpower development and employee relations, told the graduates, "This particular program is extremely important to our company . . . we hope that it, coupled with Army experience, has helped you become a better man—for yourself, and for others—when you finally leave military service."

Col. J. W. Haley, director of Personnel, who is responsible for staff supervision of the Fort Benning educational development program and Project Transition, congratulated the graduates and thanked Gulf for its program and "sincere participation in Project Transition from the beginning."

Col. Haley presented Infantry School certficates to the graduates while Thomas Muhleman, of Atlanta, presented certificates for the company.

Other Gulf representatives at the graduation included: Robert Hicks, director of sales for the Southern Region; Mike Nichols, district manager of the Macon office, and A. E. Burrell, recruiting, from Atlanta.

Lawyers Wear Captain's Bars

Patrick R. Sullivan of Clay Center, Neb., and James E. Motley of Laddonia, Mo., became captains Saturday following their appointments as officers in the Judge Advocate General Corps. Capt. James D. Ellis, a college classmate of Motley, administered the oath of office.

Sullivan and Motley both served in The Infantry Center JAG Section prior to their commissioning.

Clerical Positions Now Open

An infrequent Federal Civil Service examination is now open to applicants who may be interested in employment in career clerical positions.

Open only between April 4, 1969, and May 1, 1969, Announcement AG-9-12 was issued by the Interagency Board of U. S. Civil Service Examiners for South Georgia at Macon.

It offers employment as an office aid in grades GS-2, starting at $4,231 annually, and GS-3, starting at $4,600 annually.

Lists of eligibles established as a result of this announcement will be used to fill positions in Federal agencies to include a 100-county area in South Georgia and in Russell County, Alabama.

Interested persons should file for the examination as soon as possible.

Additional information may be obtained at the Fort Benning Employment Information office (Bldg. 1621) the office of the examiner-in-charge at the Post Office building in downtown Columbus and the Fort Benning representative at the Georgia State Employment Service Office.

Shelter Managers Try Togetherness

Two training classes took part in two-day fallout shelter survival exercises held by the post's Chemical, Biological and Radiological (CBR) School last week.

The training was designed to give shelter managers practical experience in the problems they might face in case of a nuclear attack, according to Lt. Robert W. Elias of the CBR School.

The goal, he said, is eventually to train enough people so there will be three qualified managers for each shelter. There are currently almost 90 shelters on Fort Benning, but not all are fully stocked.

Sixty-six shelter managers were trained in the two classes held last week.

Before entering the fallout shelter, the manager receives a 12-hour academic course designed to give him an understanding of the capabilities of the shelter in relation to the effects of a nuclear blast and nuclear radiation, Elias said.

In addition, the training covers the physical and psychological aspects of the individual's life while confined in a shelter, including sanitation, feeding, cleaning and recreation.

The shelter manager is also taught how to organize a staff to handle additional facilities, especially the medical and communications units found in the shelter. Most shelters, he said, do not have any communications units of their own, but might have radio equipment brought in as the shelter became occupied.

The director of Civil Defense for Muscogee County, Col. (Ret.) C. M. Virtue, spoke to one of the training classes about the need for fallout facilities.

14 Trainees Score 500

Fourteen trainees from 1st Bn., 1st Bde., ATC, were honored Friday for scoring the maximum 500 points on the physical combat proficiency test.

Under the present four-company system, the 1st Bn. established a record for the number of trainees to achieve the maximum score on the test, which consists of five individually-scored events.

This is the second time a battalion commanded by Lt. Col. Charles R. Rawlings has set an ATC record during PCPT testing. Under the former five-company structure, the 3rd Bn. added 18 names to the Training Center's exclusive "500 Club" roster.

The American Spirit Honor Medal was presented to Pvt. Stanley L. Jackson, Co. C. Jackson also was the recipient of Co. C's Outstanding Trainee award. Other outstanding trainees recognized were: Pvts. David A. Hornstein, Co. A; Macy C. Smith, Co. D, and Charles A. Williams, Co. E.

SSgt. Pledge M. Cannon, Co. D, was named "Outstanding Drill Sgt. of the Cycle."

Dental Society To Meet

The fourth annual Civilian-Military Dental Meeting will be held at Fort Benning April 17.

One of the purposes of the meeting, according to Col. Jack Pollock, post Dental Surgeon, is that it "contributes significantly to mutual professional knowledge and, equally important, to the continuation and improvement of the relations between the members of the Western District Dental Society and the military."

Activities for the day include a golf tournament and skeet-trap shoot at the Rod and Gun Club.

Later in the day, action will move to the Country Club for a series of table clinics, dinner and a professional lecture. The clinics will consist of eight informal sessions, each conducted by a member of the post dental activity.

Guest speaker will be Dr. Ted Fischer, University of Alabama School of Dentistry.

Airborne Chaplain Fraker Is Published Playwright

By Ron Johnson

"Airborne does everything better than anybody else. Whatever an Airborne trooper does, he does with total personal commitment."

These are the words of Chaplain Thomas R. Fraker, of the TSB Airborne Chapel. Fraker learned to respect the Airborne troops while serving with the 3rd Bde., 82nd Abn. in Vietnam. He is obvious proof for his own theory, with four Bronze stars, two with "V" device, two Air Medals, and two Army Commendation Medals to his credit.

Chaplain Fraker was ordained in the Methodist church at Emory University, Atlanta. He spent 12 years locally as a pastor, and for three years was director of youth work for all Methodist churches in East Tennessee and Southwest Virginia. During this time he became a chaplain in the Army Reserve.

After going on active duty in May 1967, he was sent to Ft. Bragg, N. C. He left Ft. Bragg long enough to attend Chaplain's School at Ft. Hamilton, N. Y., Shortly after his return, his unit was deployed to Vietnam.

He served with the unit in the Way Phue By area from February to September, 1968. He returned to stateside last month.

Chaplain Fraker also is a published playwright. He has three books in print including an anthology of 14 one act plays entitled "YOUth The Church". His latest project is to be titled "Foxhole Religion". He plans to collect writings of other chaplains describing the most important message they have for the soldier and the most unique experience of each.

In order to write his book on a level that youth would understand, the chaplain went to the young people he had met in his church work. He selected 14 or 15 teenagers from various social backgrounds to help him revise his concepts of the thoughts and feelings of youth.

He spend a week with them several different times at a mountain retreat, discussing problems and arranging ideas for which ever book he was working on.

This technique, which he eventually used for all his books, led him to his work, "YOUth the Church", published by the Holstein Youth Conference. The main theme of the collection is that youth are an important part of the church.

These plays were "so well received" that the chaplain wrote two more, "Don Q. Rides Again", a four-act play, and a one-act entitled "Shades of Grey".

Track Mechanics Learn Basics

By Bill Hardin

Move, shoot, communicate — these three words are familiar to every American combat soldier. Of the three, there are those who say the most important is "move," because an army first must be able to get to the enemy in order to do battle.

Playing an important role in moving the modern army are track vehicles and the men who keep them rolling.

One of these men is Sp4 Ralph M. Corliss, who performs maintenance on such vehicles in his job as a track vehicle mechanic.

Corliss, along with many other soldiers, was trained as a track vehicle mechanic during a seven-week course at Fort Benning.

The course is taught by Lt. Col. Robert H. Clough's Technical Training Committee of the Infantry School's Ground Mobility Department.

During the seven weeks of intensified training, Corliss and his classmates faced a variety of classroom situations, both indoors and in remote areas of the post. Instructors are combat veterans with the latest and best available training aids.

Students work with the actual track vehicles that will be a part of their lives during their Army duty and in situations typical of those they will face at a new assignment.

Corliss and his fellow students are taught about the operation of engines. They were shown why they sometimes fail to operate properly. They were also taught how to correct a problem so that a vehicle can agan be placed in service.

These students also learn how to recover a vehicle when it cannot move under its own power. They are taught basic electricity, track and suspension systems and preventive maintenance services.

The nature of the instruction dictates the size of a group. Portions of the course can be taught to an entire class assembled to receive the instruction. Other portions require the class to be broken down into small groups. When the situation warrants, individual instruction is given.

Track vehicles are used today in Infantry and Artillery as well as in Armor. Track vehicle mechanics have the responsibility for the lives of many fighting men.

Maintaining an average of above 90 per cent, Corliss was named an honor graduate of the course. He received a promotion to specialist four as a reward for his scholastic achievement.

He will soon report for an assignment in Vietnam.

In addition to the track Vehicle Mechanic course, The Ground Mobility Department, directed by Col. Donald F. Barraclough, offers a total of 35 courses, in which 32,004 men are being trained this fiscal year.

Legion of Merit Awarded to Pair

The Legion of Merit, second highest award for meritorious service, was presented Monday to two officers by Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr.

Col. (ret.) George D. Rehkopf of Columbus was cited for service as chief, Associate Arms Division, U. S. Army Field Artillery School, Fort Sill, Oklahoma.

Lt. Col. Douglas B. Tucker was cited for service as information officer of I Corps, Korea. Tucker is now Information Officer for the Infantry Center.

Academy Applications Available at All Units

Applications for nomination to the U. S. Military Academy and enrollment in the USMA Preparatory School are being made available to Fort Benning enlisted men on a year round basis.

Persons interested in receiving a commission through West Point may make application through their commanding officers for enrollment at the preparatory school at Fort Belvoir, Va. Application forms and information are available at company level with all applications immediately forwarded to the Fort Benning West Point officer.

Eligibility requirements are outlined in paragraph 6, AR 350-55, available at all units.

Preparatory school classes begin in August each year with completion in June the following year. Immediate entrance into West Point follows completion of the preparatory school.

Post's 'Top Lawyer' McConaughy Retires

Col. James G. McConaughy was presented the Legion of Merit, in retirement ceremonies here Mar. 25.

COL. McCONAUGHY

Col. McConaughy, a 26-year veteran, has served as Staff Judge Advocate of The Infantry Center since 1964. During this time he served for three months on temporary duty as SJA of U. S. Forces in the Dominican Republic.

Prior to coming to Fort Benning, Col. McConaughy served as Command Judge Advocate in Ankara, Turkey.

After the awards ceremony a coffee was held honoring Col. and Mrs. McConaughy, who plan to make their home in the Columbus area.

Board Chief Visits Knox

Col. Walter F. Johnston, President of the U.S. Army Infantry Board at Fort Benning, was among testing activity commanders from across the nation and as far away as Alaska and Panama who attended the 1969 Army Test and Evaluation Command's spring Commanders Conference at Fort Knox, Ky., this week.

The three-day conference was presided over by Maj. Gen. Frank M. Izenour, Commander of the Test and Evaluation Command.

The purpose of the semi-annual meeting was to review the testing program of the entire command. It permitted Gen. Izenour to assess the status of testing, review preparation of test plans and reports and make future plans for developments in the proving and testing program.

Col. Johnston briefed the commanders on Infantry material tested at the Infantry Board since the last fall's conference. He also covered testing now underway and the items scheduled for future testing. Col. Johnston was accompanied by Lt. Col. Edward P. Endres, Chief of the Small Arms Test Division, who assisted him in the presentation.

SP4 PATRICIA DAY LEARNS ABOUT CLUB
SSgt. Joe Barbarick Is Veteran Jumper

Club Instructs Would-Be Chutists

By Bill Hardin

A single engine airplane, with the right door removed, flies over an unpopulated area of the Fort Benning reservation. The plane's altimeter reads 8,000. A man crouched in the doorway leans forward and peers at a spot on the ground below. Suddenly, he glances toward the pilot and draws his forefinger across his throat, simulating a cutting motion.

The pilot, who had been looking to the rear, immediately kills the engine. The man at the opening springs from the plane, and drops a member of the Fort Benning Sport Parachute Club, through space.

He has begun a free fall which will last for 6,000 feet before he pulls the ripcord to open the parachute that will ease him down the final 2,000 feet to the ground.

There is a long road a sport parachutist must travel before he makes a high altitude, free fall parachute jump. The Fort Benning Sport Parachute Club helps many along the way.

The club offers 20 hours of instruction, required of all sport parachutists.

The training is normally given for five consecutive nights. It ends with the students making their initial jump.

Instruction is given by qualified club members who usually have several hundred sport parachute jumps to their credit.

Classes are usually limited to ten students. Three instructors work with them.

The aspiring jumpers are first familiarized with jump equipment and the aircraft from which they will be jumping.

They learn also how to pack a parachute for a jump and how to exit an aircraft.

In addition, a student learns the arm and hand signals used by a jumpmaster, and the five points of performance parachutists must make during descent.

Before formal training is completed, he is taught free fall body positions and how to steer, turn, and control a canopy. Time is also spent on counteracting malfunctions of any type.

Instructors also teach prospective jumpers what to do in the event of an emergency landing, as might be caused by high tension wires, water, trees.

Finally, the potential jumpers are given instruction on parachute landing falls. They are taught how to change vertical movement into horizontal movement. By learning to hit and roll, a jumper allows several parts of the body to absorb the shock of impact with the ground.

The cost of training is $15 per student. For those who meet the requirements, membership in the club is offered for $3 monthly dues and a small initiation fee.

Membership in the club is not required for training. For the students who affiliate with the club, there is equipment available for their use at no cost. The club furnishes its members everything except personal items such as gloves, boots, and the one-piece jump suit used by sport parachutists.

Once formal training is completed, the students make five qualifing jumps, in which the parachute is opeoed automatically by a static line.

They are then ready to begin free fall jumps and work toward competition with others.

Col. Pate Assumes Battalion Command

Lt. Col. Henry A. Pate Jr. assumed command of the 43rd Engineer Bn., part of Center Troop Command's 931st Engineer Group, in ceremonies Saturday.

He replaced Maj. Walter D. Needham, commander of the 43rd since early January, who has been reassigned to the 18th Brigade in Vietnam.

An awards ceremony was held as part of the scheduled activities. Two men were presented the Bronze Star Medal, and six men received the Army Commendation Medal.

Pate returned from Vietnam in February. He had served as a deputy commander with the MACV Construction Directorate.

He has also served as the deputy district engineer for the Little Rock District in Arkansas.

Pate received his commission as a second lieutenant in 1949 from Texas A & M, where he was graduated with a degree in history and government. He returned to school to receive a bachelor of science degree from the Missouri School of Mines in 1957.

The colonel is married to the former Hattie Hood Flato of San Antonio, Tex., his hometown. They have two children.

Receiving the Bronze Star at the Saturday ceremonies were SFC Tilton King, Co. C, and SFC Kurt W. Wetzel, Co. A.

Wetzel also received the Army Commendation Medal.

Others who received the Army Commendation Medal were: MSgt. Roosevelt Carter and SSgt. Robert Cranford, both of Hq. Co.; SFC Norman F. Moore of Co. A, SSgt. James Weatherspoon of Co. B and Sp5 Claude Norman of Co. C.

MOH Holder Re-Enlists

WASHINGTON (ANF)—Medal of Honor recipient Sgt. David C. Dolby, Oaks, Pa., who has been a civilian for 14 months, has re-enlisted in the Army for duty in the Republic of Vietnam with the 173rd Airborne Brigade.

Dolby received the nation's highest award for valor in September 1967 for conspicuous gallantry in action on May 21, 1966. At that time, (then Sp4) Dolby was serving as a machinegunner with Company B, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 8th Cavalry in the Republic of Vietnam.

Medical Officers

During the 1700's, the number of Naval medical officers assigned to each ship, and the pay they received, was governed by the amount of armament carried by the ship. Ships of less than 20 guns paid $21 to $23 a month; those with more than 20 paid $25.

Armed Forces Day Schedule Set

By Spt Frank Truchon
USAIC News Branch

With the theme, "Forces for Freedom," Fort Benning will hold open-house for the people of the Chattahoochee Valley on Armed Forces Day, May 17.

The post, like representatives of the armed services throughout the United States, will make the day a report to the people on the contributions that the services are making to the nation's defense preparedness. For the 19th annual celebration of Armed Forces Day, Fort Benning will present a variety of military demonstrations and exhibits.

From approximately 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. visitors will be able to see a variety of units in action. The program will begin with a senior status review on York Field, in which officer candiates of the 54th Company, under Capt. Gary L. Hubbard, will take part.

At 10:45 a.m. there will be an exhibition of sky diving by th Fort Benning Sport Parachute Club, also at York Field. There will be a second exhibition, of skydiving at 5:55 p.m.

On Watson Field, from 10 to 11:50 a.m., the Infantry School Ranger Department will demonstrate hand-to-hand combat, rappelling, bayonet techniques, pugilistick training and a snake exhibit. The Ranger will put on a second performance from 3:40 to 3:20 p.m.

From noon until 1:30 p.m. and from 2 to 3 p.m. on York field there will be local high school band and drill competition. High school marching bands and ROTC drill teams from Russell and Muscogee Counties and other communities in the Chattahoochee Valley will be

197th Inf. Bde. I. O.

The supposed moral decay of today's society has been an issue of great concern for clergyman, psychiatrists and educators alike. The apparent insensitivity of modern man to the problems of his fellow beings should be of great concern to us also. And it was to one Sgt. Richard Reardon, of Co. E, 5th Bn., 31st Infantry, 197th Inf. Bde., who showed that the decay is not uncontrollable and that "old fashioned" honesty is still there.

Sgt. Tommy Milim arrived at the 197th Inf. Bde. after serving a tour in Vietnam. After the routine records and finance processing, Milim received his long awaited back pay in the amount of $600. In the normal sequence the new arrival went to Central Issue Point to pick up his new clothing.

At the facility Sgt. Milim undressed and folded his clothes, placing them in the bottom of his new duffel bag, the first item issued. As he followed the line of men, the bag was set down and each item placed in it. Then he trudged to the next issue point and received

JUMPING CONGRESSMAN JOHN MARSH

Rep. Marsh Trains Here

Congressman Endorses Jumpmaster School

By Spt Dave Clark
Student Brigade I. O.

An Air Force C-119 "Packet" banked into the final turn and headed for Fryer Field Drop Zone. At the rear of the plane the jumpmaster, Rep. John O. Marsh Jr., Congressman from Virginia, looked out the jump door and checked below. He was watching for the white smoke which marked the impact point.

Beside him waiting to jump was Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of The Infantry School. The command "stand in the door" was given and the general moved quickly. The green light flashed and Lt. Col. Marsh, with a tap and the word "Go," sent the general into the air.

For Congressman Marsh, a member of the House Appropriation Committee, the jump marked the conclusion of the Jumpmaster Course conducted by the Jump Committee of the Airborne Department.

"The jumpmaster course is an outstanding program of instruction and is representative of the consistently high quality of training of the Airborne Department," said the representative.

During the course he

13 Silver Stars To Be Presented

By Spt Bob Mast
USAIC News Branch

Thirteen Silver Stars, two Legions of Merit and a Soldier's Medal will be presented to four enlisted men and 11 officers at an awards ceremony on Fort Benning's York Field today.

Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., commanding general of the U.S. Army Infantry Center, will be the reviewing officer and will present the awards.

Also participating in the ceremonies will be the 282nd Army Band and a color guard and honor guard from Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry.

Silver Stars will be presented to Capt. William G. Rogers and Capt. Terry L. Esse, both of 27th Company, 2nd Student Battalion; Capt. Edwards M. Creech Jr. and Capt. Roger L. Campbell, Weapons Department; Capt. Paul R. Sutcliff, 85th Company, TCB; Capt. Jack L. Kilcrease, Ranger Department; 1st Lt. Fenley D. Stafford, Company Operations Department; and 1st Lt. Floyd J. Davis, Directorate of Instructions.

more items.

After being issued his final piece of clothing, Sgt. Milim dug into the bottom of the bag to put on his original clothes. They weren't there!

The surprise and slight panic that resulted when Milim didn't find his clothes is not hard to imagine. He quickly surmised that someone had mistakenly picked up his duffel bag.

Sgt. Milim found himself in a helpless situation. There was really no way to find out who had accidentally picked up his bag. The $600 was gone with the wind. A report was filed with the CID but the money was really not stolen: it was all an accident, an expensive accident with no one to blame and no one to turn to. A few clothes belonged to the other person but how could these be traced? They were all newly issued and had no name on them.

"There was nothing to do but go on and wait. . . perhaps the man would be honest enough to return the money. . .but all I could do was wait," commented Milim.

Reardon processed through the Central Issue Point at the same time as Sgt. Milim. Returning to a bench where he had left his street clothes, he dressed and lugged his duffel bag from the point and departed for Kelley Hill.

A few days later Reardon got around to emptying his duffle bag. Taking the clothes out and placing them in his drawers was sort of a monotonous chore, and only when he noticed items of the wrong size did he realized something was wrong. Reaching the bottom of the bag, he found Milim's clothes and knew what had happened. Flipping through the wallet for identification, he found Milim's orders and the puzzle was solved. Noticing a large amount of money but never actually counting it, Reardon proceeded to 197th Inf. Bde. Hq. Co. and reported what had taken place.

First Sgt. Leroy Satterfield knew of his man's missing items and contacted Milim, who was, needless to say, overjoyed. The reward he offered Reardon was refused graciously.

Sgt. Richard Reardon exemplifies the finest traditions set forth by the Army Code of Conduct. Although faced with a temptation of great magnitude, he never hesitated once from his duty to return the missing property. Would you have been able to do it? Let's hope so.

had to lead successfully and participate in a night combat equipment jump and demonstrate the proper attaching, jumping and releasing procedures with an individual weapon and equipment container while participating on an actual jump. The representative also had to inspect three rigged jumpers in three minutes and discover all major and minor discrepancies.

The lieutenant colonel, a member of the Virginia National Guard, made four combat equipment jumps, two at night and two during the day. He also dropped an equipment bundle from an Army U6A "Beaver."

At the end of the course he had to pass a written examination with a minimum score of 70. He not only passed the test but attained a perfect score.

"I was tremendously impressed by the dedication and knowledge of the instructors in the jumpmaster department. The noncommissioned officer team headed by SFC Matt Oley and assisted by SFC James J. McMullen and SSG Richard J. Silbaugh covered in great detail the duties and responsibilites of an Army jumpmaster," added the congressman.

"I received a better understanding of military parachuting and the never-ending effort to assure the safety of every jumper. This was ably demonstrated by SSgt. Harold O. Snider of the Pathfinder Committee, who served as my jumpmaster in the course."

Oley, NCOIC of the Jumpmaster School, said, "The Congressman would make an excellent jumpmaster for any Airborne unit. He was an excellent student and did an outstanding job."

OCS

How many college graduates who enlist or are drafted into the Army enroll in the Officers Candidate Program?

Twenty-eight per cent of college graduates entering the Army go into the OCS program.

ROTC SUMMER CAMP

What is the projected number of ROTC cadets who will attend the six-week basic summer camp here?

About 3,400 ROTC cadets are expected. An estimated 19,800 advanced cadets will train for six weeks at five other posts; Indiantown Gap, Fort Riley, Fort Lewis, Fort Sill and Fort Bragg.

DIRECT COMMISSIONS

What regulation covers the procedures for applying for a direct appointment as a commissioned officer in infantry?

AR 135-100 can give you the application outline.

HUBBELL PLAN STATUS

What is the status of the Hubbell Plan? Is it going to be passed by this session of Congress?

The automatic military pay increase provided by the Pay Act of 1967 is scheduled to go into effect July 1. Action on another plan, the Pay Modernization (Hubbell) Bill, has been postponed.

A memorandum from the Secretary of Defense to the secretaries of the individual services advising them of this postponement is quoted below:

After consulting with concerned committee leaders in the Congress and the Bureau of the Budget, I find it is unlikely that action could be expected on the above program by July 1. I have, therefore, requested that action on the Pay Modernization Bill be postponed and that its provisions be thoroughly re-examined.

The subject of military pay as it pertains to relationships between those in the Services, as well as those in the civilian sector, is highly important and complex. The military pay system must reflect the most careful consideration of the needs of those in the Services and should serve the objective of attracting and retaining people of the required competency in our military defense system. To this end, an analysis of military pay has already been accomplished under the able direction of Rear Admiral Lester Hubbell.

Now we wish to have the findings of that analysis critically examined, possibly with the help of an independent outside organization with qualifications in the compensation field.

I wish to underscore my own personal interest in the importance of military pay, and I wish to ensure that revisions recommended are equitable.

As to timing, this means that recommendations for major revisions in the military pay system resulting from the initiatives of this study cannot be completed until after July 1, 1969. Accordingly, preliminary data processing and related work underway in anticipation of installing a revised pay system effective that date will be suspended.

Application of the current law will result in a boost of military pay amounting to approximately 12.5 per cent of base pay. Details as to how the increase will be applied to current pay scales are being worked out. Funds for this military pay increase are already included in the Federal budget.

AWOL

I read an awful lot in the papers that the AWOL rate in the Army is a lot higher than it used to be. Is this true? What are the figures?

The rates per 1,000 enlisted strength, for the peak years of the Korean War plus those for the past nine fiscal years are:

1952	181.0
1953	157.3
1960	44.9
1961	51.2
1962	55.6
1963	55.8
1964	53.7
1965	60.1
1966	57.7
1967	78.0
1968	89.7

Part I

Action taken to enhance Reserve officer quality

The Secretary of the Army has approved certain actions designed to enhance the qualifications of the officer corps of the Army National Guard (ARNG) and the U. S. Army Reserve (USAR). Generally, these changes involve branch qualifications for junior officers, promotion of officers, Federal recogition of Army National Guard offices and management of Army Reserve officers who are not assigned to units.

In August, 1967, the Army Chief of Staff appointed a special study group to assess the qualifications of officers in the reserve components (Army National Guard and U. S. Army Reserve). The board concluded that the overall officer corps was qualified. The board also found that, in general, current standards are adequate, but that branch qualifications for junior officers and management of Army Reserve officers not assigned to units could be improved. Additionally, the board recommended some changes in areas concerning promotion of USAR officers and Federal recognition of ARNG officers.

Although the Chief of Staff and Secretary of the Army approved changes recommended by the study group, definite dates have not yet been set for implementation.

One of the first actions to be taken to improve career and personnel management is an in-depth study of the overall personnel management system for officers in reserve components. This study will include a review of the responsibilities of all the staff agencies and headquarters that are involved with supervision of the Army National Guard and Army Reserve.

Attitude surveys will be used to obtain the views of officers on specific subjects, and will help to make the procedures as responsive as possible to the needs and desires of the officer corps.

Procedures will be developed to insure that Army Reserve officers who are not assigned to units meet established training objectives. These procedures will provide for elimination of those officers who do not meet the training objectives.

The study will also attempt to determine whether the current criteria for applying an officer of one branch against a requirement for an officer of another branch should be changed. Under present criteria, for example, a company grade infantry officer can be assigned to an armor unit as a company officer. The study will determine if such action degrades unit readiness, and what skills can be substituted without degrading unit readiness or working an unnecessary hardship on the officer.

The new personnel management system will include centralized control and review of efficiency reports for all ARNG and USAR officers. Normal reviews, accomplished through command channels will continue as well.

Annually, Department of the Army will review the records of all officers who are in an active reserve status, regardless of whether they are members of units or individual Ready Reservists. This review will consider whether the size and quality of the Army National Guard and Army Reserve officer corps are adequate.

Efforts to get and keep high-quality officers in the reserve components are being increased. The Army National Guard is being encouraged to aggressively recruit officers who have served two years on active duty. Additionally, stronger emphasis is being placed on advising officers of the different ways they can fulfill their military obligation as well as the benefits of service in either of the reserve components.

The Army Reserve is being encouraged to make greater use of Army National Guard Officer Candidate Schools. Instruction in these State schools has been improved by increasing the program of instruction by 50 hours per gear. The Continental Army Command and CONUS Armies are becoming more involved with supervision of the instruction in these schools, and the schools are seeking increased leadership opportunities for cadets.

New standards for officer promotions have been developed that are designated to improve the quality and professional competence of the officer corps. For example, an officer can still be selected to fill a unit vacancy and be promoted in this manner. Also, after a prescribed number of years in grade, it is mandatory that a promotion board consider an officer for promotion. However, under the new criteria, once an officer is nonselected by a "mandatory" board for the rank of first lieutenant through lieutenant colonel, he may not be promoted to fill a unit vacancy unless selected for promotion by a subsequent "mandatory" board.

Orpheus Club to Sponsor Concert at Museum

Fort Benning Society Women's News

By Mrs. Robert Wright

The Orpheus Club and the Museum Woman's Guild will present Joyce Harrison Schwob, pianist, and Natalie Kruger, flutist, accompanied by Jack W. Jones, in concert April 24, at 8:30 p.m. at the Columbus Museum of Arts and Crafts. The concert will dedicate the Orpheus Club's new piano.

Mrs. Schwob attended the University of Pennsylvania on a Board of Education Music Scholarship, and also studied piano at the Philadelphia Conservatory with Miss Muriel Hickman, and privately with Vladimir Sokoloff, Clarence Adler and with Madame Genie Robinor at the Philadelphia Music Academy. She appeared with the Philadelphia Orchestra in a production of Carmen, and also soloed at the Philadelphia Academy of Music with the Philadelphia Youth Orchestra Concert Series. Mrs. Schwob has also soloed with the Deerwood Symphony Orchestra, the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra, Henry Sopkin, conductor, with the Marietta Symphony and the Columbus Symphony, under the direction of Harry Kruger. She has played for local clubs, television and Musemont Arts Camp at Pine Mountain, and on the Knox Music Club Club Music Series, of Anniston, Alabama. More recently, in March of this year, she taped a television program for the Auburn Ala., Educational Television Station. In June, her requirements for Bachelor of Music Degree from Auburn University will have been completed. She is married to Henry C. Schwob and they have two daughters, Jan, 6, and Simone, 8. She has served as president of the Orpheus Club and as vice president of the Columbus Guild.

Mrs. Kruger has an A.B. Degree in Psychology from Oberlin College and a Master of Music Degree in flute from the New England Conservatory of Music. She was Principal flutist with Conservatory Orchestra and also flutist for the first woodwind quintet at Oberlin from 1949-1950.

Later, she was a member of the New England Conservatory Orchestra and woodwind quintet and was Principal flutist for the Portland (Maine) Symphony. From 1957-61, she played second flute and piccolo for the Atlanta Symphony and was flutist for the Atlanta Woodwind Quintet and the Kruger Sinfonietta, the Atlanta Civic Ballet and the Southern Ballet. She also played cello for the Atlanta Community Orchestra.

From 1961-1965, Mrs. Kruger played flute with the Toledo Orchestra, and was Principal flutist with the Toledo Little Orchestra Woodwind Quartet, and played cello with the Bowling Green State University Orchestra. In 1961, she began playing cello with the Columbus Symphony Orchestra, and became Principal flutist in 1962. Mrs. Kruger has concertized with Martha Morin, coloratura soprano, as "The Concert Ensemble," including a Salon Series Concert, sponsored by the Orpheus Club, in 1962. She had a solo appearance with the Columbus Symphony in 1968, and has made numerous appearances on television and for local clubs.

Mrs. Kruger has been a private teacher of flute since 1955 and was an instrumental music teacher in elementary schools in Atlanta. At present, she is woodwind instructor of the Columbus Youth Orchestra and has been flute teacher at Musemont Fine Arts Camp since 1962. She is the wife of Harry Kruger, conductor of the Columbus Symphony and Professor of Music, Columbus College. They have three children, Rebecca, age 10, who plays violin in the Columbus Symphony, Ann 8, who plays viola in the Columbus Youth Orchestra, and William, 7, who plays cello. Also a member of the Orpheus Club, Mrs. Kruger recently served as chairman of the Parade of American Music during February.

Mr. Jones, organist - choirmaster for the First Baptist Church, holds the Bachelor of Music from Stetson University and the Master of Sacred Music from Union Theological Seminary. While studying in New York, he trained with Abraham Kaplan, Choral Director at Juilliard School of Music and with Alec Wyton, Organist.

Mrs. Wright Honored At Farewell Luncheon

The Corregidor Room of the Officers Club, decorated with straw May baskets filled with spring pastel tinted daisy mums, was the scene Monday, April 14th of a farewell luncheon honoring Mrs. John M. Wright, Jr., wife of the commanding general of Fort Benning.

Hostesses for this event were members of the executive board of the Fort Benning Officers Wives Club under the chairmanship of Mrs. Bruce Fraser.

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Wright will leave Fort Benning next month after being stationed here since July 1967. Gen. Wright's next assignment will be in Vietnam and Mrs. Wright plans to reside in California.

Special guests were Mrs. Sidney Berry, wife of the assistant commandant of the Army Infantry School and Mrs. Oscar Davis, wife of the commander of the Army Training Center. Also present were the newly elected OWC officess for the coming club year.

After the luncheon Mrs. Wright was presented with an engraved silver Revere bowl by Mrs. James Morris, Jr., OWC prsident, on behalf of the club. Mrs. Morris thanked Mrs. Wright for all her assistance and guidance for the past year which resulted in a most successful year for the Fort Benning OWC.

PWOC Plan Meeting To Discuss Prayer

By Mrs. Waldrop

Exactly what is prayer anyway? Why and how should we pray? These questions and many others will be discussed at the monthly meeting of the USAIC Protestant Women of the Chapel.

Mrs. Phillip C. Wahlbom will be the featured speaker using as her theme "Guidelines for Effective Prayer".

"Everyone is born with the ability to pray," said Mrs. Wahlbom, "yet many remain childish and undeveloped in their efforts to communicate with God." Mrs. Wahlbom, an active member of the USAIC Protestant Women of the Chapel is the wife of Philip C. Wahlbom (CPT who recently returned from Vietnam.) She is a native of Auburndale, Florida, and a graduate of the School of Fine Arts at the University of Florida.

At present, Mrs. Wahlbom teaches a class in the Wednesday Ladies' Bible Study Group.

The meeting will be held at the Religious Eucation Center, Bldg. 2601, Dixie Road, Wednesday, 23, April. The coffee hour will begin at 0930 hours and the program at 1000 hours.

All those planning to attend are asked to bring a Bible, paper and pencil, and a desire to embark upon a higher plateau of living through the power of prayer. The public is invited to attend. A free nursery upstairs in Bldg. 2605 will be provided.

May 1 has been set aside for one of the most important continuing projects of the USAIC Chapter of PWOC: the making of cancer bandages for the American Cancer Society. The May 1 meeting will be held at the Religious Education Center from 0930-1100 hours, and all ladies are urged to come and take part in this worthwhile project. The need for your help is great. For further information, call 545-4334 or 545 7413.

WAC Candidates Visit OC Battalion Here

By Sgt Lynette Hershelm
Candidate Reporter 1. Co.

The Fort McClellan, Womans' Army Corps (WAC). Officer Candidate and WAC Basic Officer Class toured the Candidate Brigade and Fort Benning on April 3rd.

As part of the Officer Candidate course, the women are brought to Fort Benning for a three day orientation to learn what the men in the Army do and the consistency of the Infantry Basic training and Infantry Officer Candidate training.

Beginning the tour of the 5th Bn., The Candidate Brigade, commanded by Lt. Col. Dennis J. Harron, the WACs were given an Infantry Officer Candidate Course briefing by Lt. Charles R. Chapman. He showed slides of the training the men are exposed to. The candidates and officers then toured the Hall of Fame after which they were divided into groups to tour the 5th Ba. Larracks.

Assembling in the 54th Co. for refreshments, Capt. Gary L. Hubbard, commanding officer of the 54th Co. led the women in a question and answer discussion.

The WAC officers and candidates ate dinner with the OCS Candidates in 52nd, 54th, 55th and 56th Companies.

The WAC's were also given tours of The Scout Dog training, the TV Studios, The Army Training Center, The Infantry Museum and the Airborne department.

Included in the class are three Vietnamese Officers.

Maj. Dorothy Gorlicki and Lt. Sandra Writt with Platoon officers Lt. Lois Hiltel and Lt. Gail Bell accompanied the candidates.

At 10th Group Wives Club Celebrates Passing of 'Tax Day'

On Tuesday, with income tax forms completed and mailed, the wives of the 10th Aviation Group assembled at the Benning Room of the Main Club for their spring celebration coffee. The event was hosted by 609th Company with Mrs. Donald R. West as chairman.

The highlight of the group affair was an original program depicting the phases of an active Army wife. Models were outfitted to illustrate the sportsiady carrying golf bag and clubs, bowling ball, and fishing equipment.

Uniforms for a Red Cross volunteer worker and a den mother exemplified two types of ladies' uniforms available at the Thrift Shop for the wife's civic activities.

Other items found at the Thrift Shop are wall hangings and household accessories for the home decorator. Additional merchandise viewed was baby furniture for the mother-to-be.

In conclusion Mrs. Alvin H. Turner, moderator, presented a spoof on "Carol Burnett's cleaning woman costume". She introduced what she called "a typical Ft. Benning housewife" attired in a scrub-woman's dress, bonnet, apron, and Army boots carrying mop and pail.

Birthday honors were shared by Mrs. William Edward Bolling, Aries, and Mrs. James R. Callen, Tarus. They were presented carnation corsages.

Candidate Brigade Wives Club Meets for Tea

By Spt Lynette Hersheim
Candidate Brigade I. O.

The Candidate Brigade Officers Wives Club held their spring tea April 7 in the Ball Room of the Officers Club.

In the receiving line were Mrs. Robert M. Piper, Mrs. Edward C. Radcliff, Mrs. Dennis J. Harron and Mrs. Douglas R. Babcock.

The Officer Candidate guest wives were from the 52nd, 53rd, 63rd, 65th, 93rd, 94th, and 97th companies.

Spring decorations of spring flowers and yellow candles decorated the tables.

Those pouring the tea were Mrs. Thomas J. Smith, Mrs. Charles J. Dolan, Mrs. Douglas R. Pomeroy, Mrs. Paul J. Babcock, and Mrs. Merlin R. Carothers Pouring the coffee were Mrs. Ralph J. Huber, Mrs. James L. Burnham, Mrs. James R. Nabors, Mrs. Allen W. Peterson, Mrs. David D. Moss, Mrs. David W. Fonner, and Mrs. Michael P. Eskew.

The ladies pouring the punch were Mrs. Henry F. Dagenais, Mrs. Charles W. Davis, Mrs. Matthew De Maria, Mrs. Jose R. Rojas, Mrs. Andrew B. Lawrence, Mrs. Fenton Thomas, Mrs. James L. Burnham, Mrs. John H. Frey, Mrs. Jacques M. Farrell, and Mrs. Charles J. Pomeroy.

The officers wives of the 5th Bn., TCB held their monthly coffee at 209 Lumpkin Road, the home of Mrs. Dennis J. Harron, wife of the 5th Stu. Bn. commander. Mrs. Calcomb W. Blankenship was the co-hostess.

An Easter Theme was carried throughout the house with the main highlight being the egg tree centerpiece with hand painted eggs. Name tag bunnies were pinned on each lady as she arrived.

Mrs. Robert M. Piper was the guest of honor. Mrs. Frank G. Shaw and Mrs. Thomas J. Marshall were welcomed as new arrivals. Farewells were bid to Mrs. Malcomb W. Blankenship, Mrs. William A. Vivolo Jr. and Mrs. William A. Darrin.

Each lady brought a donation for the Community Services lending closet.

Medical Dept. Wives Meet at Welcome Center

By Mrs. Robert F. Wiley

"Welcome to Georgia," was the greeting given by Mrs. Virginia Taylor to the Medical wives at the Fort Benning Country Club Friday, April the 11th.

Mrs. Taylor, manager of the Columbus Georgia Welcome Center, showed slides of Georgia. The slide tour began at the Welcome Center. Our speaker stated that the Center was made possible by the Columbus Lions Club.

The historical significance of the Naval Museum was explained. Bradley Museum on Wynnton Road was also pointed out for its outstanding Indian relics and doll collections. To get in the mood of the southern mansion era it was recommended that we take the Heritage Tour sponsored by the Columbus Jaycees.

Callaway Gardens only 35 miles north of Columbus is a floral wonderland. The garden has a uniquely constructed chapel with all the material for it's construction coming from Georgia.

Andersonville 63 miles east of Columbus is one of the finest preserved confederate military cemeteries with 18,000 unknown soldiers buried there.

Six flags over Georgia in Atlanta offers fun for the entire family. This year according to our speaker, many more shows and rides have been added. The park will be open only on weekends during the month of April and starting June 1st it will be open daily. Another thing to see while in Atlanta is Stone Mountain, the largest solid mass of granite in the world.

If you want a scare, visit Okefenokee swamp. The swamp is filled with snakes, alligators and low hanging trees. Okefenokee has been the site for the older scarey movies.

The business meeting was called to order by Mrs. Paul L'Homme, vice-president. A welcome was given to new arrivals Mrs. Dominic Ferrelli, Mrs. Allan Gutstein, Mrs. Richard Schroeder, and Mrs. George Shepard. Farewells were said to Mrs. Gerald Filardi, Mrs. Constantions Levanos, Mrs. Donald Parmelly, Mrs. Henry Reister, Mrs. Angel Vasquez, and Mrs. Gilberto Vila Balzac. Our guests were recognized LTC Julia Decker, Miss Angela Filardi, Mrs. Donald Lundquist, Miss Carole Moergeli, Mrs. George Pickel, Miss Marcia Scarle, Mrs. Loraine Sharpe, and Miss Eileen Watters.

WEIRD WIGS . . . Cards, balloons and an Easter egg hunt were used to make the crazy hats worn by Mrs. Eugene Blackwell, Mrs. David Paulsen, and Mrs. Robert Bradley at a luncheon held at the supper club by IOAC 3-69.

Wives Club Meets for Hat Sale

Mrs. John R. McQuestion

The Supper Club took on the appearance of a festive millinery salon as the wives of students in IOAC 3-69 met recently as guests of 4th platoon for a luncheon and hat sale.

Attractively arranged in the center of the club with large mirrors for fitting and viewing, was a colorful array of spring hats which provided the ladies with an abundant selection from which to choose their Easter Bonnets.

Furthering the theme of the luncheon, the tables were each decorated with two centerpieces of crepe paper hats worn by elegant coffee can "ladies", the top of the table held two hat trees supporting dozens of miniature hats skillfully made by 4th platoon wives.

During the luncheon, the ladies donned homemade crazy hats which, after a brief parade, were judged by the honored guests; Mrs. Wilbur J. Thiel, Mrs. Wendell O. Doody, and Mrs. Archimedes J. Pisano. A prize of a lamp was awarded to Mrs. Robert S. Bradley for the prettiest bat. Mrs. Jonathan George, a guest at the luncheon, was awarded a Lava lamp for creating the most unusual hat. As a door prize, Mrs. Thiel received a certificate for a spring hat of her choice. Other door prizes went to Mrs. William E. Wake, Mrs. Donald B. Smith and Mrs. Paul E. Bisbop.

Mrs. David D. Paulsen, wife of Major Paulsen, 4th platoon leader, directed the planning of the luncheon. Among the many who participated in the preparations for the function were Mrs. Bennie E. Young (Program Chairman), Mrs. David I. Sprout, (Decorations Chairman), Mrs. John C. Stillman (Menu and Punch) Mrs. John R. McQuestion, (Publicity), Mrs. William E. Wake, (Miscellaneous), and Mrs. Walter W. Taylor, (Door Prizes).

NCO Wives Top Lunch With 'Krazy Hat' Show

By Betty Kimper

The Army Training Center noncommissioned officers wives "Krazy Hat" coffee at Sand Hill NCO Club April 10, assembled a bevy of zany and beautiful original hat designs.

Among them was Mrs. Thomas Tobin's "Army Wife" hat that was magcovered and complete with miniature moving van and automobile and fuel credit card. Bridging the generation gap was a design by Mrs. Arthur Lau. She plastered a red fruit basket with signs of the times and topped it with a rock and roll record and drug addict symbols. Other styles included a Christmas bow hat, a popcorn confection, a blue tissue bonnet, a vegetable garden basket and a birthday cake hat with candles.

Mrs. Alberta Amstutz, prize winner for the most original style, hanked a broad brim hat with ivy and capped it with a realistic bird nest made of grass clippings, glue and hair pins. Brightly colored feathers and tiny birds accented the design.

Mrs. Clington A. Musson's "Coffee Pot" hat won the craziest designed prize and Mrs. William L. Hudson was awarded the generation gap prize for her "Fashion Maker" hat complete with miniature sewing machine.

Visit Home of Founder

Post Girl Scouts Tour Savannah

Thirty-three Girl Scouts and four Service Team members left for Savannah April 11. The purpose of their three day visit was to tour the birthplace of Juliet Gordon Low, founder of the Girl Scouts.

The girls spent four weeks preparing for their trip. Activity groups were formed from the main troop body. The groups compiled available information on life in Savannah in the 1870's, to include architecture, furniture, nature study, stamps, history, geography, quilt patterns, and recipes. These groups reported their findings to the troop at their final meeting prior to the trip.

The sewing and cooking groups consulted with Mrs. Henry Benning Crawford, wife of the grandson of General Benning for whom the post was named, on authentic quilt patterns and recipes of the period. The troop presented the Birthplace with three of Mrs. Crawford's family recipes and one quilt block copied from a velvet quilt belonging to Mrs. Crawford's grandmother. These will be kept on permanent display at the birthplace for the Birthplace Gift Shop. The patrol leaders arranged a basket of daisies made from ribbon.

At the end of their visit in the birthplace a pinning ceremony was held in the garden. At this time each member was presented with the "Daisy Pin". To carry through the Army theme, the troop sang "Follow Me", "Song of the Soutbland" and "The World Song."

While in Savannah the troop also visited the Davenport House, America's finest example of Georgian architecture; took a walking tour of Svannah, dined at the Pirate House of "Treasure Island" fame, and visited Savannah's famed wharf area and beach.

On their return trip the Cadettes stopped shortly at Andersonville.

National Library Week To Be Observed at Sand Hill

By PFC Chester Hilburn
Training Center I. O.

"Hit is books that teach us to refine our pleasures when young and which having so taught us, enable us to recall them with satisfaction when old."

This thought by Leigh Hunt on books, enscribed at the entrance of the Sand Hill Library, expresses the theme of "National Library Week" will be observed throughout the nation, April 20-26.

The official art and music facility for the post will participate in the observance on April 20 with a coffee hour and special conducted tour of its facilities from 2 until 9 p.m.

Mrs. Dianne Tapley, librarian, believes the facility has been a tremendous success, providing the serviceman with a fine passtime for learning, reading, and listening. "We have received excellent support from the company commanders and NCO's in the Training Center," Mrs. Tapley said. "They let the troops know the facility is there for their benefit and pleasure and often take them down for a library orientation."

Some of the many services rendered by the library for soldiers and their dependents include: A circulating record collection, a children's book collection, special reserve requests, magazines and newspapers, a book copier, foreign language record collection, an interlibrary loan system, pocket books on Army maneuvers, reference books, a programmed music branch, periodicals and a microfilm reader-printer.

The circulating art collection includes a total of 687 paintings on every subject which can be checked out as easily as a book. An individual may borrow as many as six paintings at one time for a period of one month.

In the listening room, music scores are available along with a wide collection of language records. Approximately 3,000 records and 434 stereo tapes by the most famous artists can either be checked out or listened to in the library through a stereophonic sound track. An individual may even check out stereo tapes for his automobile.

The library offers more than 20,000 volumes of books. The wide subject interest includes mysteries, westerns, short stories, art books, best sellers, a children's collection and a number of books on philosophy, history, religion and psychology. Through the inter-library system an individual also may obtain a book not carried by the ATC library.

All 1968 encyclopedias and up to date annuals are available as well as all types of atlases.

The Sand Hill Library is open on weekdays from 1 until 9 p.m. and on weekends from 1 until 5 p.m. It is open to all military and dependents.

Post Names 2 Areas For Fallen Soldiers

By SP4 Robert Mast
USAIC News Branch

Two engineers who were posthumously awarded the Medal of Honor have had Fort Benning training areas named for them.

They are Sgt. Joe C. Specker and PFC Melvin L. Brown.

Lt. Col. Jonathan Minear, chief of the Infantry School's Brigade and Battalion Operations Department Engineer Committee, selected the names.

The area formerly known as the Uchee Creek Crossing Site, in the Alabama portion of Fort Benning, will be called Specker Stream Crossing Site. It is used to train students in Officer Candidate School, Noncommissioned Officer Course and basic officer classes in effective negotiation of river and stream obstacles.

Ochillee Demolition Range, renamed Brown Demolition Range, is used for electric and non-electric primed explosives training.

Sgt. Specker was awarded the Medal of Honor for action at Mount Porchia, Italy, Jan. 7, 1944. He spotted an enemy machine gun and sniper ambush while on a reconnaissance patrol and, upon his return, reported it to his commander.

He then took a machine gun back to the ambush site, but was wounded by enemy fire before he reached the area. He crawled to a position where he could place fire on the enemy, silenced the enemy machine gun and routed the snipers. Specker was found dead at his position when his company arrived on the scene.

PFC Brown received the Medal of Honor for his action September 4, 1950, at Kaesan, Korea. His platoon was securing the walled city on Hill 755 when the enemy attacked. Brown defended his position atop a 35-foot high wall. When he used up all ammunition for his rifle, he started throwing hand grenades at the enemy. With all his ammunition exhausted, Brown unceased his entrenching tool and waited for the enemy to scale the wall, knocking several of them down before his platoon rallied and drove off the enemy attackers. Brown survived the attack but died the next day in other action.

Hq. Co., TSB, Finds Modern New Home

By SP4 Ron Johnson
Student Brigade I. O.

"Goodbye, Old Paint" was the cry of members of Hq. Co., TSB, as they moved into a new barracks last week.

The company has been in temporary wooden barracks since September, 1965. The old barracks is located in the airborne area.

The new billets are the former home of the 197th Aviation Co., located in the 6th Bn. OCS area. When the new barracks became vacant, Hq. Co. requested the building for joint use with the scout dog school next door. Hq. Co. uses the bottom two floors and students of the scout dog school will use the third floor.

First Sgt. Richard Turner said, "I'm proud to be over in the new building. This type of building presents a better, more military appearances. It should enhance the morale of the troops."

The new company building has many advantages over the old. The old company was housed in three separate buildings. The orderly room, dayroom and living quarters are all under one roof at the brick barracks. This makes the company more centralized. Also, says Turner, "There is 100 per cent more space in the dayroom for after - duty entertainment."

The new barracks is also equipped with large bunk beds and double wall-lockers, making life more comfortable for the troops. The tile floors are also easier to keep clean.

Control Ship Crew Saves Wounded

By Sp4 Tony Swindell

CHU LAI, Vietnam (AMERICAL, 10)—In the heat of a bitter firefight, the importance of one man's life can stand out vividly, and his rescue become vital.

1st Lt. Earl Ingram II and WO Richard C. Cichewski, UH-1 pilots with the 174th Assault Helicopter Company, supporting the Americal Division's 11th Infantry Brigade, were flying the 3rd Bn., 1st Inf. Command and Control ship on routing missions off LZ Cork when word came that B Co. has been ambushed near a village south of there by an estimated 100 enemy soldiers.

"We flew Lt. Col. Gregg Coverdale, the 3rd of the 1st commander, to the site of the contact so he could assess the situation and deploy his troops," Ingram commented. "We dropped him off at one of the companies on the edge of the village and went back up to guide the gunships and MEDEVAC craft coming in. Soon, we could see from the air that three companies had formed a half-moon around the village and were pouring heavy fire into it."

When the MEDEVACS arrived, they radioed Ingram for landing instructions, but a pick-up zone hadn't been established at that time because of intense enemy fire in the area. As soon as word reached Ingram and Cichowski that the zone had been set up, they directed the craft in to evacuate five wounded soldiers.

About 4:30 p. m., one of the companies pushed into the village and called for a "dust-off" to pick up a seriously wounded man. As the MEDEVAC was about to land intense enemy fire opened up on it and it crashed.

The next MEDEVAC was then directed down by a route less exposed to enemy fire, but before it was able to land, the craft was hit repeatedly and forced to withdraw.

"After the second MEDEVACK had been hit, it was forced to land at a nearby landing zone because of damage, and then left us to pick up the man," Ingram said. "I was really nervous about going down there because our soldiers were all over the area and we couldn't use our machine guns."

Ingram and Cichowski swooped into the pick-up zone despite the heavy fire, retrieved the wounded soldier, and evacuated him to the hospital. After refueling, the two pilots winged their way back to the battle site to continue the aerial coordination.

"We were flying in some of the most miserable weather I've seen over here," Cichowski commented, "and decided to head home about 7 p. m. since we had done all we could that day. But then we got a call from one of the units who had a man who couldn't last the night unless he was evacuated. So that was all there was to it—bad weather or not, we had to go down and get him."

As the two officers circled the now-burning village, they tried to spot the landing signals put out for them, but the scattered fires complicated the mission.

"They were trying to bring us in with flashlights and burning sticks," said Ingram, "and it was almost impossible to find them for the fires. We circled the village many, many times before we finally spotted them."

Their trouble had just begun, however, for the pilots still had to execute a perfect landing in the midst of heavy foliage on an inky night, besides evading enemy fire from within the village. They decided that the best approach to the landing zone would be to skim the tree-tops, dipping down to pick up the wounded man at the last moment, and clear the area before the enemy could deliver effective fire against them. "It was really tricky," the lieutenant explained "especially since we were blacked out with no landing lights on a zero illumination night. As low as we were coming in, I was sure that our rotor blades were going to hit a tree."

Cichowski made a perfect landing on the pick-up spot, but no sooner than they touched down, a sniper opened up on them from 20 meters away. Bullets crashed into the rotor blades, engine, and one hit the armor plating on Ingram's cockpit seat. A radio telephone operator informed him that all the rounds were outgoing, and Ingram replied, "Tell that to my armor plate."

They were unable to pick up the wounded man because of the heavy fire, and took off until another pick-up zone could be established. Circling the village to check out damage to the Huey, the two determined that their craft was flyable. Upon receiving word from the ground to come in, they repeated their hazardous low level approach and successfully evacuated the wounded man.

Cichowski had much to say about his pilot. "1st Lt. Ingram organized and directed 2 "Shark" gunships, two MEDEVAC air craft, a recovery ship for the downed MEDEVAC, and the 11th Bde. command and control ship. He did a really fine job."

BECKY? . . . She wasn't Tom Sawyer, but she must have had a real sharp line because Sgt. William R. Gietzen, 1st Bn., 18th Inf. Div., ended up carrying her load of firewood and bundles.

Survival Is Name of the Game at Jungle School

AN KHE, RVN (173rd Abn IO) — It was a typical hot afternoon in the central highlands of South Vietnam.

A column of American troops was approaching a thickly covered hill near An Khe, when suddenly they were rocked by an explosion that shook the earth all around them. Before the soldiers could recover they were pinned down by small arms fire, but not one of the men in the squad was injured.

Luckily these troops were students attending the 173rd Airborne Brigade Jungle School. The mock ambush was just a field training exercise. Had the situation been real, negative casualties would have been unlikely.

Ambush and patrolling are only two of the many skills the students will learn while at the school. Consequently, the role of the jungle school is to teach the Sky Soldier how to avoid a snarling ambush in actual combat.

The jungle school, which evolved from a few classes by a small cadre in a couple of tents in Bien Hoa, has been expanded to its present size in An Khe where its cadre pack years of experience into one week. Tents have been replaced by permanent structures and training aids such as a mock NVA base camp, U. S. perimeter defense, and obstacle courses have been developed.

"We are constantly seeking ways to demonstrate the concepts taught in the classroom into meaningful practical exercises," said Lt. Kenneth E. Bergquest who is in charge of the school instruction.

"It's paid off too," he commented. "The graduates of the school are settled down, more confident and better equipped to meet the requirements of their new jobs."

The comprehensive seven-day course is designed to acquaint newly arrived personnel with Viet Cong tactics, the Vietnamese people, the country, and Brigade policies. All junior officers and enlisted men in grades E-7 and below assigned to the Brigade are required to attend the course.

From the day students arrive at jungle school until their final critique, survival is the name of the game.

Classroom instructions includes first aid, map reading, hygiene, combat intelligence and safety, with the latter being stressed in all areas.

Students also received instructions on the M-16 rifle, M-60 machine gun, M-79 grenade launcher and the M-72 light anti-tank weapon. Each man is given the opportunity to fire these weapons; throw the hand grenade and watch a live claymore mine demonstration.

Since the helicopter is the main mode of transportation in Vietnam, on-and-off aircraft loading is part of the curriculum.

During the patrolling class, the students pass through the school's mock VC village. Here, they are shown the various types of booby traps used by the enemy.

An overnight ambush patrol into hostile territory highlights and climaxes the valuable period of instruction.

For the majority of students, it's their first real combat mission — for some, it's a repetition of past experience.

"Stay alert and stay alive" is the school's motto — and when a soldier completes the course — he is better prepared to do both.

Combat Course Teaches Hazards to New Troops

Detain 12 Suspects

Fish Basket Smells of Foul Play

BONG SON, RVN, (173d Abn IO) — A suspicious looking fishing basket spotted by a 173rd Airborne Brigade helicopter pilot brought death to 28 Viet Cong in action along the north central coast of South Vietnam.

WO1 Robert R. Rousseau, North Hero, V.T., was conducting a first light reconnaissance in a Light Observation Helicopter when he spotted the fishing basket and a pon chi filled with coconuts.

"What seemed strange," Rousseau said, "was that there were no fishermen around. The brush seemed thin enough to see through but I couldn't spot anybody so I circled back."

Swooping down on the remote island, he saw five Viet Cong trying to hide beneath the underbrush.

"When we closed in on them the VC opened up with small arms fire," Rousseau added. The pilot and his crew chief fired on the enemy with mini-guns killing them all.

Documents that were found on the bodies indicated that one of the dead VC was a hamlet chief and another a VC propaganda worker. Further information indicated that a meeting was to be held that night. Acting on the intelligence, an element of the 2d Battalion, 503d Infantry, combat assaulted on the meeting place and killed 24 enemy with the assistance of Regional Popular Forces of Tan Chau District. Twelve suspects were detained.

Ordway, Columbus Man, Presented Silver Star

USAIC News Branch

Capt. Sidney G. Ordway of Columbus, a Walter Reed Army Hospital patient, received the Silver Star, Bronze Star Medal and Purple Heart at an awards ceremony in Infantry Hall here Friday.

Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr. made the presentations.

According to the citation, Ordway received the Silver Star for actions on Nov. 7, 1968, while serving as the commanding officer of Co. D, 4th Bn., 31st Infantry, 196th Infantry Bde. The company was conducting a combat operation when an enemy outpost was sighted. The point element engaged two insurgents and wounded both of them.

While the insurgents fled into a heavily wooded area, Ordway organized and led one of his platoons in pursuit. He spotted three enemy in an area to his front. As he engaged the enemy he was wounded by their return fire. By this time the company began receiving intense fire from a well entrenched enemy. Despite his painful injuries he rallied his men and called artillery and gunship support. He continued to direct fire on the enemy until he collapsed on the field.

Hq. & Co. A Captures 67th Battalion Trophy

By Pvt. August Nerad
13th P. I. Detachment

The first award of the new 67th Maintenance Bn. Commander's Trophy went to Hq. & Co. A during an awards ceremony Saturday.

The trophy is to be awarded tri-annually to the one company graded highest in overall performance of duties common to each of the 67th's five companies.

Col. Charles H. Reidenbaugh, Center Troop Command commander, presented the award to Capt. Rodney B. Huffman, commanding officer of the company which amassed a total of 2,500 points out of a possible 3,000 to win the trophy.

Since the 67th Maintenance includes two transportation companies, two maintenance companies and an ammunition company, each having its own responsibilities, only duties of a common, general nature were graded.

The areas judged are: company administration, maintenances of equipment, area housekeeping, operations and maintenance organization, mess administration, appearance, military knowledge, unit training and security.

The trophy was designed by Lt. Col. Alden L. Cox, the 67th commander, and built by Spt's Theodore Campbell and Thomas Polcha.

For future awards, the companies will be inspected and judged every four months. The company with the highest numerical score for the period will be presented the trophy, which will remain in that unit until the next inspection.

At the end of the calendar year, a company that has won the trophy more than once during that year will retain the trophy permanently.

Silver Star Presented To Sp4's Widow

By Sp4 Robert Mast
USAIC News Branch

The Silver Star, Bronze Star Medal, Purple Heart with second Oak Leaf Cluster and Good Conduct Medal were awarded posthumously to Sp4 William F. Harrell for heroism in Vietnam.

Mrs. Patricia A. Harrell of Nashville, Ga., his widow, accepted the awards from Col. Wiley B. Widsom, Fort Benning deputy post commander, at an April 11 ceremony.

Harrell was serving as a forward observer with Company A, 1st Battalion, 5th Infantry, when the company came under intense small arms and automatic weapons fire. The citation for the Silver Star read, in part, "With complete disregard for his own safety, Specialist Harrell exposed himself to fire as he moved to a position to call in and adjust artillery on the insurgents." As he attempted to observe the damage inflicted by the projectiles, he was mortally wounded by enemy small arms fire." His valorous actions were responsible for the successful thwarting of the hostile attack," the document read.

Harrell received the Bronze Star Medal for meritorious service in connection with military operations against a hostile force in Vietnam from May to December of 1968.

Prior to his death, Harrell received the Purple Heart, National Defense Service Medal, Vietnam Campaign Ribbon, Sharpshooter Badge with Rifle Bar and the Marksman Badge with Automatic Rifle Bar.

Also present for the ceremony were Mrs. Mae Harrell, Specialist Harrell's aunt; Mrs. Louise Fu'eb, Mrs. Harrell's mother; and Mrs. Caroline Lunceferd, a friend of the family.

Wearing Of Emblems Authorized

By Sp4 Frank Truchon
USAIC News Branch

Soldiers are now authorized to wear appropriate individual emblems that accompany the award of Vietnamese unit citations.

U. S. military organizations are eligible to receive two of these unit awards—the Gallantry Cross, awarded for valorous combat achievement and the Civil Actions Medal, awarded for meritorious service.

Soldiers can wear the appropriate individual emblem on a permanent basis if they were assigned to or presented for duty with the unit at any time during the period of action cited; they can also wear the emblem if they were attached to and present for duty with the unit during the entire period or 30 consecutive days of the period of action cited. In all other cases the unit emblem may be worn only for the duration of the assignment to the unit.

The unit citation medal, which is an item of individual purchase, will be worn above the right breast pocket in the same manner as U. S. unit citations. The Gallantry Cross takes precedence over the Civil Actions Medal and is worn beneath all U. S. unit citations.

Awards of the Gallantry Cross and Civil Actions Medal will be announced in Department of the Army General orders.

IDEAS FROM THE KRAFT KITCHENS
EASY AND ELEGANT DINNER IDEAS

Ham Magnifique: fancy and festive. Combine two 10-oz. jars Kraft Pure Peach Preserves, ¼ c. vinegar, two tbsps. Kraft Prepared Mustard, one tsp. Worcestershire sauce, and a dash of Tabasco sauce. Mix well. Spoon half of preserves mixture over a 5-lb. canned ham. Bake at 325° until done, basting occasionally. Combine 6 c. hot cooked rice, ½ c. whole cashew nuts, and ½ c. chopped parsley. Place ham on the rice mixture on a serving platter. Serve with remaining heated preserves sauce. 8 to 10 servings.

Lemon Tree Muffins: muffins with a flavorful twist. Cream ½ c. Parkay Margarine. Gradually add ½ c. sugar and 1 tbsp. grated lemon rind. Add 2 egg yolks, one at a time, mixing well after each addition. Sift together 1 c. flour, 1 tsp. baking powder, ¼ tsp. salt. Add flour mixture alternately with 3 tbsps. lemon juice, mixing just until blended. Beat egg whites until stiff peaks form. Fold egg whites into batter. Spoon into 12 greased muffin cups. Sprinkle with combination of 1 tbsp. sugar, 1 tsp. nutmeg, and ¼ c. chopped nuts.

HONOR GUARD PRACTICES FOR CEREMONY
SSgt. Paul Wuestney Portrays VIP Role

Precision, Pride Combine In 197th Bde. Honor Guard

By SFC Snow Wilson
197th Inf. Bde. I. O.

Uniforms with razor sharp creases, glittering brass, boots reflecting as mirrors and men, moving as one, to the snap of commands is the picture formed in most minds when they think of an Army.

But, for most modern soldiers, perfection in drill after basic training becomes almost a lost art.

Automatic weapons, the ability to mass artillery fire, and close supporting aircraft, have brought an end to the tactics of mass formations traditional to armies for thousands of years.

Practicing age-old tradition and demonstrating the latest tactics however, is the daily task of the 197th Infantry Brigade's Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry — Fort Benning's Honor Guard.

Hand picked and highly trained, these men are the first Infantry Center soldiers to be seen by dignitaries landing at Lawson Field, are photographed daily by visitors during retreat ceremonies at the Infantry Hall and give the final parade for retiring soldiers.

They provide the pomp and circumstance for visiting military and civilian chiefs, and are the ones, in many cases, who carry the veterans of past and present wars to their final resting place and fire the last rifle volleys before taps drifts over the cemetery.

And when you don't see them on parade you will find them demonstrating tactics for Infantry School students at Higley Hill, Bunker Hill, along Hourglass Road, at Flint Range and the many other training areas of Fort Benning.

"In our spare time," says SSgt. Paul Wuestney, "we get ready for the ceremonies."

Getting ready means hours of polishing helmets, boots, brass and weapons. It also means long grueling hours of close order drill, the manual of arms with special flourishes and tedious rehearsal of the retreat and burial ceremonies.

"Can you imagine what would happen if we 'goofed' with the flag in front of Infantry Hall with a bunch of visitors watching?" comments Sp4 Willie O. Ware.

The men of the Honor Guard handle that daily ceremony.

Although the public only sees two platoons during the larger ceremonies on Post, Company C has three.

"When a man is first assigned," says PFC John L. Thacker, the acting first sergeant, "he goes into the training platoon. After a few weeks he either makes it or is transferred."

Making it means having the desire for ceremonial work—and the willingness to spend a little extra money.

"Most of the men have bought Corcoran Boots and extra uniforms," comments Sgt. Michael R. Banker. "We wear a fresh uniform for each ceremony, and, when they come up twice in one day, the cleaning bill starts to add up."

None seem to be able to say exactly why they wear the Honor Guard tab so proudly—and all laugh at each other's answers.

One young sergeant perhaps summed it up saying "maybe it's because this is really soldiering!"

Soldier's Widow Accepts Medals

By Sgt. Carol Aubin
USAIC News Branch

The Bronze Star Medal and Purple Heart were presented to Mrs. Rebecca A. Dickerson of Thomaston, Ga., during a recent posthumous award ceremony held in honor of her husband, Sp4 Thomas G. Dickerson, who was killed in Vietnam Nov. 23, 1968.

The medals were presented by Col. J. D. Kersey, chief of staff.

Dickerson, formerly of Cordele, Ga., was cited for his "outstandingly meritorious service in connection with military operations against a hostile force" in the Republic of Vietnam.

Transient 'Casual' Population Means 24-Hour Work for NCOs

By Pvt. George Burks
Candidate Brigade I. O.

Running what is by any standard a large company is an arduous job, but doing so with what may be the Army's largest company is a task requiring formidable energy and abilities.

The man in this role is Capt. James R. Nabors of Houston, Miss., who, since Aug. 12 has been the commanding officer of Hq. Co., The Candidate Brigade. Widely known as "First Casual," the company currently lists 1,340 men in its ranks, including 350 persons deployed solely to handle administrative functions.

The bulk of the company is composed of 1,190 soldiers who are coming to the OCS or NCOC programs, or who are in a transient status en route to their next duty station. Thus a major function of the company is to process men out of or into Fort Benning.

This processing is considerable in light of the fact that in an average week 250 to 300 men come to or leave the company, while in an average month, a platoon roster can be expected to change over completely.

One of the men who is most involved with this situation is SSgt. Demetris R. DeVane, operations sergeant, and a 23-month veteran of what he calls the "First Casual Campaign." DeVane is in charge of seven NCOs who are responsible for accounting for the bulk of First Casual's population, which is organized into nine platoons.

DeVane, who must use a loudspeaker to address the three daily formations of the company, admits that despite the complexity of his job he enjoys his work because he is the "first person on the company level to whom people come with personal or military problems. I enjoy the responsibility of attempting to help them solve their problems."

He notes that "Due to the work load of the company, the operations office must stay open 24 hours a day so that important information relating to casuals gets to them as quickly as possible." DeVane says that even if an alert for a soldier comes in only 72 hours prior to his scheduled departure, "We manage to get him out on time. And I still have a sense of humor."

The constant fluctuation in the number in the company available for duty occasionally creates a problem with respect to the company's other primary function, to place its members in duty positions which will utilize the special skills of the personnel. In this capacity, the company has succeeded in providing men for work in such places as the dental clinic, various Candidate Brigade offices such as Personnel, S-3, and Headquarters; the Infantry Museum; and offices of the Staff Judge Advocate.

All is not work for Hq. Co. — play is an integral part of maintaining the morale of the unit. Even though most of Casual's personnel are transient, the company's athletic teams produce enviable records.

Meeting Set For Clemson Alumni

The ninth annual CLEMSON NIGHT AROUND THE WORLD for Clemson Alumni and former Clemson students of the Chattahoochee Valley Area will be held at the Fort Benning Officers' Mess in the Benning Room on April 19, 1969 at 7:00 o'clock P.M. All Clemson Alumni and former students and their wives are invited to this annual traditional Clemson meeting. A social hour will begin at 7:00 p.m. with a seated dinner at 8:00 P.M., after which Professor Ernest Rogers of the Clemson University staff will deliver an address entitled, "The State of Clemson University."

Everyone interested in attending this meeting is asked to contact LTC A. B. Kitchen, Jr. at 545-5014 for reservations.

Army Menu Has Come Long Way Since Colonial Days

By Third Army I.O.

Not long ago, an American soldier complained that the Army was feeding him horsemeat.

When questioned, he had no complaint about the taste of the food, but said, "I saw them carrying the crates into the mess hall. It said 'PONY' all over them."

'PONY', it turned out, was a cargo handlers' abbreviation for Port of New York.

Unlike the troopers in the isolated cavalry units of the Old Western movies ("The Indians have cut off our supply lines, men—we'll have to kill and eat our horses"), today's soldier is backed up by a thoroughly tested logistical system that lets nothing stand between the serviceman and his chow. The 240,000 men and women in the Third U. S. Army receive a daily diet comparable to the carefully planned menus of a skilled homemaker — and totally devoid of horsemeat.

Dietitians at the U. S. Army Food Service Center in Chicago compile a Master Menu which is used in Army mess halls throughout the United States and in overseas commands where fresh, perishable foods are available. This is the A-ration, a balanced diet providing 4,500 or more calories per day, tailored to the nutritional requirements of vigorous, active soldiers. Fresh fruits and vegetables, ice cream, steak and apple pie are regulars in the Third Army mess halls.

The job of preparing three-quarters of a million meals each day occupies about 4,000 full time workers in Third Army, the majority of them graduates of cooks School, where they learn principles of small quantity cooking, baking, garrison mess and field mess operations.

The basic daily ration established by Congressional resolution in 1775 provided for the issue of eight components to each man: one pound each of beef and flour, a pint of milk, 6.675 ounces of peas, 1.143 ounces of rice, .183 ounce of soap and a carefully measured .0686 ounce of candle. As a topper, the soldier was allowed to draw a daily quart of spruce beer from the company keg.

Each Colonial soldier was expected to cook and carry his own food, which he supplemented with purchases from local markets, trading, and a certain amount of Yankee ingenuity.

Continental Army troops received the same food ration, with almost no variety, whether they were in garrison or on the march. With scant pay in their pockets and little to delight their palates, Colonial soldiers must have welcomed home meals when they could get them.

The serviceman's rations were frequently revised. By the time the Civil War broke out, coffee had been added, but the last standard of beer has been quaffed. The fraction of an ounce of candle flickered on into the 20th century, and by the end of World War I the government was spending the munificent sum of 31 and a half cents on each man's daily rations.

Since 1925 the basic cost has gone up more than a dollar a day per man, and the Army now has nearly 30,000 food service personnel involved in getting the chow to the troops. Even combat units in Vietnam try to serve at least one fresh, hot meal a day.

In extreme climates, however, transportation and storage problems may rule out the possibility of serving fresh foods, and mess sergeants resort to the B-ration. This is similar to the A-ration, but with canned products substituted for the perishable items. Mess halls in south east Asia do not now follow the Master Menu—the torrid climate and logistical priorities make it impractical—so ingenious Army cooks use a 28-day cyclic menu of modified B-rations, with fresh fruits and vegetables added to the menu whenever they are available.

For the soldier out patrolling in the "boondocks," lunch usually comes out of the familiar olive-drab tin can—the C-ration. The source of countless soldier gripes during World War II and the Korean conflict, C-rations are under constant revision and improvement. Each case of "C's" contains a dozen different 1202 calorie meals, ranging from roast beef and potatoes to beans and franks.

After each case is distributed among the men, a trading interval usually follows as the troops express thier individual preferences. Swap sessions of the future, however, will feature different terminology as Army research and development efforts introduce new individual food items. Currently under examination are freeze-dried perishable items, irradiated foods and micro-wave cooking.

Experiments at the U. S. Army Natick Laboratories in Massachusetts have produced individual ready-to-eat meals in packets weighing less than a pound. Freeze-dried items provided 1200-calorie meals which can be stored for a year or more without refrigeration or tin cans. When reconstituted in water, freeze-dried foods resume nearly normal size, texture and taste.

One test in which Third Army plays a part is the experimental 42-Day Menu. A novel feature of the 42-Day Menu is the inclusion of an alternate snack course at the noon meal. Troops being served according to the new menu would have their choice, at lunchtime, of a regular full meal or a soup-and-sandwich course. Ft. Bragg, N. C., is trying out the 42-Day Menu, as are Ft. Lee, Va., and Ft. Sheridan, Ill.

As menus, foods, and methods of preparation change, so do the methods of serving meals. Steel and plastic compartmented food trays are giving way to home-style place settings in Stateside mess halls; paper plates and disposable plastic utensils are replacing the soldier's aluminum mess kit in combat areas.

Army Will Assist In Rail Centennial

FORT LEE, Va. (ANF) — Rail car exhibits dating back to 1829 have left Fort Eustis, Va., to journey west to Ogden, Utah for the Golden Spike Centennial Celebration there commemorating the 100-year anniversary of the completion of the first trans-continental railroad.

The cars are painted gold, bearing the lettering "Pilgrimage Promontory."

Typical of the rail car exhibits is the one from Fort Lee, Va. It displays quartermaster items, Army clothing and equipment, and photographs of the past century. The exhibits were prepared by the Quartermaster School's museum craftsmen and training aids division.

An Army band and color guard will be present when the rail car exhibits arrive for the Golden Spike reenactment, scheduled for the early part of May.

The Army's role in the original Golden Spike Celebration was deemed fitting since Army surveyors had sought a suitable route for the railway years before construction began.

Additionally, Army quartermaster troops provided personnel with necessary supplies and Army soldiers worked in the construction of the rail line.

Other soldiers had guarded construction gangs against hostile Indians, many giving up their lives in carrying out the mission.

Porter Wagoner Show Has Pair of New Stars

1st Lt. Fred Vollrath
Bayonet Staff

Two performers whose songs were in the top ten, in the country western field according to last month's "Amusements Business" survey, will accompany the Porter Wagoner Show when it appears at Fort Benning on April 20.

Charley Pride, the first Negro country music artist to be signed by a major recording label, whose song "Kaw Liga" was number three on the survey, and Mel Tillis', whose "Who's Julie," was number ten, are scheduled to perform.

"Actually we are getting two shows for the price of one," said Roy Lothner, the post entertainment director, who booked the show, "Wagoner's and Pride's."

The post was able to get Waggoner's show for around five thousand dollars, about a third less than his regular rate, because he is scheduled to appear in Macon the night before.

The two performances at Gowdy Field, 2:30 p.m. and 6:30 p.m., are only two of the average 30 professional shows given each month on post through the Entertainment Center.

"In determining what acts to bring on post we try to balance it so there is something for everyone's taste," explained Lothner. "This month we plan to have groups such as the Stars of the Future, a rock group, the New Jazz Combo, Glerida Fay Swinging Strings, country western, Mr. Electric, a novelty act, and Jimmy Hooper & Tomihawks, country rock."

By charging a nominal fee for such national productions as "The Porter Wagoner Show," Lothner hopes to be able to bring big name groups to the post more often.

Tickets will be available at all Special Services Bowling Centers, craft shops, theaters, the Entertainment Center and Recreation Office, Bldg. 394, until 1 p.m. April 18. The price of the tickets is $1.

Tickets will be on sale as long as they last.

"We urge everyone to get tickets as soon as possible," said Lothner.

Duplicate Bridge

By Chuck Gruttman

BIDDING THE KAPLAN-SHEINWOLD

Good bridge requires a means of communication between yourself and partner in every bidding situation. In order to come to the correct contract, you and your partner must be able to describe your hand to the other, and be able to visualize your partner's distribution and point count. Over these next few weeks I will be looking into the theory of bidding. This week will be the first in a series of articles intended to change your lifeless bidding into a dictionary of description.

Defensive bidding is the method of using your opponents' bids to your own advantage, more specifically, using your opponents' bids to help describe your point count and distribution. The Goren defensive bidding system is passe, and is best forgotten because of its limitations.

It does not allow full use of the wide world of the bidding spectrum available in answer to an opponent's bid. The system I am recommending at this time is the Kaplan-Sheinwold Defensive Bidding System, which unlike Goren's point count only system, shows both point count and distribution.

Imagine that you are sitting East, neither side is vulnerable, North has dealt and opened with a bid of one club. From your position as East it is now your turn to bid. What would you bid with the following bands?

1) ♠ A,9,3 ♥ K,J,8,2 ♦ K,J,10 ♣ A,Q,6
2) ♠ K,9,3 ♥ Q,J,10 ♦ A,K,7,6,5,2 ♣ 9
3) ♠ K,Q,J,8,7,6,4 ♥ 6,3 ♦ 6,3 ♣ 6,3

In problem number one you have eighteen high card points, even distribution, and you have that club ace and queen behind North. As in Goren, you have the perfect one No Trump bid, which tells partner that you have between 16-18 high card points, even distribution, and control of the suit bid by opponents. You also might have legally bid your hand another way by doubling.

The double is used in this system to describe a hand that has at least three cards in the suits that were not bid by opponents. The double is not a point limited bid, meaning that all you need to double is a strong twelve points and the correct distribution. In problem one the double may be used if you wish, but the bid of one no trump is much more descriptive of your bolding.

Problem number two is prime for use of the double. You have the distributional qualification, at least three cards in each of the unbid suits, and the necessary point county. You probably felt that the correct bid over North's one club was an overcall of one diamond, since you have so many of them.

This is a possible bid in the system, however the one over one overcall describes a hand in which you have 12-15 points, and have a singleton, doubleton or void in one of the unbid suits. This is not the case. Although you have the point count, you do not have the distribution for the bid, and therefore you must double.

The last problem, number three, was probably answered by you in one of the following ways: pass; 3 spades; or 4 spades. Under the Kaplan-Sheinwold system you could pass or bid 2 spades. The single jump overcall is used to describe a point count of 6-12 points and a long suit in which you will most probably take at least four tricks. Also needed is favorable distribution. This you have. You could not use the 3 spade bid, nor the 4 spade bid, as they are used in different situations. The bid you did make is known as the "preemptive jump shift", and I will discuss its value next week.

Photos Shown At Festival

Forty prints, ranging from realism to abstract, and including pop and op for a good cross section of contemporary movement, will be on exhibit in Bradley Lounge during Auburn's Festival of Arts April 20-30.

The exhibit, will open Sunday.

Over 200 entries from top print makers throughout the nation were judged in the 5th Annual National Print Competition held at Auburn this week. Judging was done by Gudmund Vigtel of the High Museum [illegible] of Art in Atlanta.

'Fantasticks' Set to Open At Playhouse Wednesday

"Try to remember the kind of September, when life was slow and oh, so mellow", El Gallo, as portrayed by Harry R. (Buddy) Nash, implores the audience in the opening song of the "Fantasticks" playing at the Fort Benning Playhouse.

"The 25 members of the cast and the technicians have put over 2,000 man hours into this production during the last eight weeks," explained J. Michael Calitri, the play's director, "Most of it on their own off-duty time."

"What makes the play so good is it deals with basic emotions. It's a light, satirical musical-comedy which tells the story of two young lovers and their father's attempts to arrange a marriage between them using reverse psychology," said Calitri. "They fall in love at first, grow tired of each other, go their separate ways into the world, and finally realize what they really want is each other and come together at the end."

The play, by Tom Jones and Harvey Schmitt, has run since May of 1960 at the Sullivan Theater in New York City making it one of the longest running off-Broadway productions in history.

All but two of the members of the Fort Benning Playhouse cast have performed as professional entertainers before coming into the Army according to Calitri.

He had some difficulty in the initial stage of the rehearsals. The scripts came in late, several actors were levied to Vietnam, and many of the props had to be "begged and scrouged" to put the production together.

"Special Services provided most of the funds we needed," said Calitri, "but I wish we had more money available so we could fully utilize the existing talent on post.

The play runs Wednesday through Saturday in the Fort Benning Playhouse, Bldg. 1237, behind the Infantry Museum, at 8 p.m. Tickets are free and reservations can be obtained by calling 545-2992 or 5057.

Appearing in the cast are: Harry R. (Buddy) Nash, as the narrator, Deborah Ward, the girl, Bob Harely, the boy, Michael Gamble, the boy's father, Larry Conklin, the girl's father, the old actor, Stan Catlett, the Mute, Mike Spenard and the man who dies, Eric K. Wiley.

MASTER JUMPER, SSGT. FRIDLEY
Poised at Door of Craft

Test Board Sergeant Gets Master Wings

It was just another jump for SSgt. Wilmer E. Fridley of the U.S. Army Infantry Board at Fort Benning but it was different too. He was jumping for the first time as an Army Master Parachutist.

Fridley, a veteran of a decade of jumping, has racked up a total of almost a hundred jumps from military aircraft. He commenced his jump career at Fort Bragg, where he was awarded his Parachutist Badge in December, 1958.

During his parachute jump career, the Army veteran has participated in jumps in Europe, Panama, and throughout the continental U.S. It was while stationed at Fort Bragg that Fridley took part in the well-known mass airborne exercise called Pine Cone 1 and Pine Cone 2. This large scale exercise was a true test of jumping techuique, according to the new master parachutist.

As a test NCO with the Field Equipment Test Division of the U.S. Army Infantry Board, Fridley has testjumped many items of Infantry hardware. He has jumped the new lightweight equipment undergoing acceptability and serviceability tests for the Infantry, various types of ammunition, the Battlefield Illumination System, rifles, machine guns, and rucksacks.

Fridley has jumped from many of the Army's aircraft and also some of the Air Force. He has also jumped from both rotary and fixed wing category of aircraft. In the rotary class Fridley named the Chinook and Huey, while of the fixed wing he recalled jumping from the C-119, C-123, C-130, and the reliable U-6 Beaver. In addition he has jumped from the Air Force's latest transport in the field, the all-jet C-141.

A combat veteran of the Vietnamese War, Fridley served in the combat zone as a squad leader and team leader prior to his assignment with the Infantry materiel test board here in May, 1968. At the Infantry Board he has served as their jump master during parachute jumps with test equipment in addition to making the actual tests too.

Wynne Gets Intelligence Commission

USAIC News Branch

David J. Wynne of St. Louis, Mo., received a direct commission April 6 as a second lieutenant in the Military Intelligence Branch.

Wynne graduated in 1964 from St. Louis University where he was editor-in-chief of the student newspaper.

He received a law degree from the University of Michigan in 1967 and was an assistant editor on the Michigan Law Review. He is a member of the Order of the Coif, a legal honorary fraternity, and of the State Bar of California, the San Francisco Bar Association and the American Bar Association.

Wynne was an employe of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat's sports department for five years while attending high school and college.

After attending the John F. Kennedy Special Warfare School at Fort Bragg, Wynne will take a course in combat intelligence at Fort Holabird, Md.

He is scheduled to leave in August for Vietnam, where he will serve as a military adviser with the Military Assistance Group mand in Vietnam.

Horton Wins 1st Place In Pre-tourney Trials

By Paul Mangione
Bayonet Staff

Baseball's second century is under way with new teams and new rules. The effects have been felt from the box office to the pitcher's mound. The game's rookie high commissioner, Bowie Kuhn, has announced his plans to make baseball number one again in the hearts of Americans. He says baseball can be exciting as it once was. His new rules are designed to return the action to the game and the fans to the stands. If the season's first two weeks are an indication of the public and the players reaction, Mr. Kuhn may be successful.

The big question in returning action to baseball is not so much how to bring it back, but why did it go in the first place. The answer is quality, too much of it in too few places, mostly the pitchers. Baseball has become a pitcher's game. The man on the mound calls its tempo and, depending on how good he is, its level of boredom. He throws the pitch, it is a strike or a ball. The catcher returns the ball, squats down and gives a few signals. The pitcher squints and squirms, kicks a little mound dust around, checks out the field, the girls in the stands, and winds up and throws again. The whole routine is repeated. People get tired and fall asleep. Maybe they won't come to the park any more.

The fans want action. They want to see hits, exotic catches, run downs, double plays and so on. These events can't materialize if the batter doesn't hit the ball and the pitchers aren't letting them.

Kuhn wants to put the punch back in the ball so he had to take some of the zip away from the pitcher. The strike zone was shortened from the knee to the shoulder to above the knee to the arm pit. The pitchers mound was lowered five inches. Pitchers have been asked to take no more than twenty seconds between pitches. The results have been a little startling.

The out-put of runs in the first two weeks of this season has almost doubled over the same period last year. There have been almost a dozen games with one team scoring more than ten runs. Cincinnati pounded Atlanta for 19 hits and twelve runs this past weekend. Montreal's new expansion team drubbed the National league champion Cardinals for eleven hits and eight runs before a capacity opening day crowd.

Attendance is up over last year. There have been more hits, more runs and more errors. The result has been higher scores, more people and some irritated pitchers. Denny McLain of the Tigers, who is known to work his mouth as hard as his arm, complained bitterly about the mound and strike zone. Denny won his first game without too much trouble then lost to Mel Stottlemyre of the Yanks, who apparently must like the new rules because he pitched a one-hitter and won his third straight since the opener. It's all in how you throw the ball, Denny.

The new divisions will provide the real excitement. They are Mr. Kuhn's personal revelation and will prove to be the best innovation in baseball since the curveball was legalized. This year there will be four pennant races instead of two. Eight teams will fight for the flag instead of four and eight cities will have something to shout about all the way down to the wire. The races will probably be much closer this year than last. Nobody appears to possess the stuff to run away with the pennant before the All-Star game. The race will be tighter and much more exciting. Everybody who has a favorite team, everyone who enjoys baseball will profit.

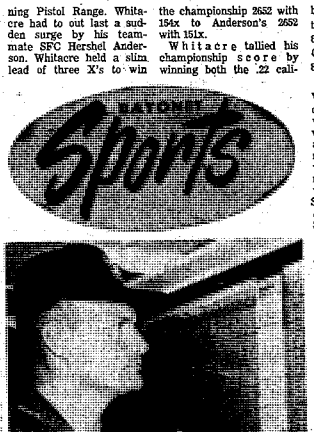
Trap Top 4 Spots

Army trap shooters won the top four spots during the 300 target International Trap Shoot at the Texas International Gun Club. San Antonio, April 11 13.

The army shooters, all members of the Marksmanship Training Unit, were led by the scoring of Sp4 Mike Cleary and Sp4 Glen Everts. Both men broke 290 birds out of a possible 300. After tie breaking procedures, Cleary won the championship and Everts placed second. Two other teammates, Sp4 Kerry Smith and Sgt. Edward Leavendusky placed third and fourth respectively with 289 birds apiece.

A sea-saw battle developed between two, fourman army teams, Army Black and Army Gray, for the team championship.

Army Black team came out on top to win the trophy by downing 772 birds compared to Army Gray's 771. Air Force's Blue team placed third with 766.



WINNER AGAIN FOR THE SECOND TIME—Horton Won the Pre-Third Army Rifle Matches

Army Wrestlers Take 12 Divisions In Inter-Service Championships

Bayonet Staff

Inter-service wrestling championships were decided in final matches held April 1-3 at Norfolk, Va.

Army wrestlers competed in Greco-Roman and free-form style matches with members of the Navy, Air Force, Marines and students of the United States Military Academy and the Air Force Academy. Army took 12 divisions.

Six Army wrestlers took Greco-Roman titles. In the unlimited division, 1st Lt. Jim Homan, Hq. Co., 3rd Bn., 64th Armor, Schwingfurt, Germany won over Army Capt. Bob Coulson, Little Creek, Va.

Sp5 Hank Schenk, Fort Lewis, Wash., grappled SSgt. Chuck Holliday to take the 198-pound title. In the 163-pound class 1st Lt. Don Carder, Hq. Battery, 3rd Bn., Fort Irwin, Calif., won the final match from PFC Lee Ehrler, Fort Lewis.

Sp4 Jim Hazewinkel, USMA, defeated Air Force Sgt. David Taylor, Beale AFB, Calif., to win the 136.5 pound category. In the 125.5 division Sp4 Dave Hazewinkel, USMA, won the title from Sp4 Roy Seymour, Fort Lewis.

Sp4 Chuck Miller, Fort Bragg, N.C. took the 105.5 class championship over Sgt. Bill Ritton, Fort Hood, Tex.

Following the Greco-Roman matches, free-style form championships competed April 3. Army wrestlers again took six division titles.

Sp4 Dave Hazewinkel and Sp4 Jim Hazewinkel took free-form championships in the 125.5 and 136.5-pound classes, and Lt. Carder repeated a victory by winning the 163-pound division.

PFC Gen Younger, Fort Sill, won the 149-pound class; PFC George Radman, USMA, took the 180.5 pound class; and SSgt. Chuck Holliday, Fort Lewis, was the victor of the 198-pound match, winning over Sp5 Schenk.

Post Bowlers To Begin Tourney Eliminations

Sunday is the deadline for registering for the Third Army Championship Postal Bowling Tournament May 3, 4, 10, 11. Active duty soldiers and WACs may register at any of the post's bowling alleys.

A bowling roll-off will be held April 23-25 to determine the Fort Benning men's and women's teams. Each entrant will bowl six lines April 23 and six lines April 24.

The top twenty contestants in the men's and women's divisions will bowl an additional six lines April 25. From these, the top six will compose the teams for the doubles, singles and team events in the postal tournament.

Teams of six male and six female bowlers will represent the post in the May tournament. The results of the lines bowled will be sent to Third Army Headquarters, where they will be compared with results mailed from other posts. The highest scores will determine the Third Army champions.

ROD AND GUN CLUB

By Bill Kloeb
USAIC News Branch

The good weather over the weekend brought about changes in every category of the fishing derby. SFC (ret.) Jack Maple leads in the bream contest with an 18-ounce entry. SFC Steven Pierce, Btry, C, 211th Artillery Bn., is ahead in the bass category with a 6-pound, 8-ounce lunker caughter on a jitterbug at King's Pond. SSgt. James Allen, Co, E, 8th Bn., 2nd Bde., ATC, is out in front of the catfish contest with a 3-pound, 7-ounce entry caught on a doughball at Victory Pond.

This is the first time in a long time that we have heard of anyone using doughballs. This used to be a very efficient bait if properly made. Here is a bait recipe that is suppossed to be one of the best:

Add five tablespoons of honey and continue to simmer until a light syrup is formed. Add one cup of corn meal and knead with a fork. Cool and pour on wax paper. Adding a small amount of cotton to the syrup just before adding the cornmeal will help to hold the moisture together in the water.

Simmer one-half cup of water and one teaspoon of anise seed for at least three minutes.

The warm weather we have been having over the past two weeks has caused the bass and bream to get on with the business of spawning and as they complete this they come out lean, mean and mighty hungry. Actually the spring spawning appears to be drawn out over a couple of months. The spawning period varies depending on the weather, water level and the condition of the water. At any rate the fishing in this area should be above average for the next couple of months.

From all reports the hottest lure these days is the old reliable black or purple plastic worm of the flip tail variety. These may be purchased at the Post Exchange or local tackle shops already made up or, if you are the economical, thrifty type, you can rig your own.

In rigging your own, use a 2-0 or 3-0 weedless hook. Feed the plastic worm onto the point of the hook, head first, for about one inch ending up with the worm trailing off the back at the bottom of the hook. This gives the worm a wiggling snakelike action when pulled through the water.

After casting out to a likely spot, reel in very slowly, stopping every few feet for a few seconds and start off again with a short twitch or jerk. If there is a bass in the vicinity you've casted, he may take the lure immediately or nail it after the first twitch or two, or he may wait until you have almost pulled it out of the water — so don't give up.

Like everything else in this world, fishing takes a lot of confidence. You can put your lure in a tempting place but without a little confidence the lure seems to be lifeless and no fisherman, however expert, has found one lure that works every day. It takes time and experience to know the right lure in the right situation.

One time a bellbender is right or maybe a thin-fin or bomber, but is is very seldom you will see a successful angler fish with the same lure day after day, year after year.

According to Roy Johnson, chief, Post Fish and Wildlife Section, fishermen are making some nice catches of white bass in the Chattahoochee near Laundry Ditch. To get there, follow the road around Lawson Field to about a quarter mile past Eddy Bridge.

Johnson and Norman Force, chief forester, will be on Ridley Bell's Sportsmans Lodge program tomorrow at 6 p.m.

The spring turkey season which ended Wednesday was about the most disappointing in the history of the post. Only two gobblers were reported killed. SSgt. Lestell L. Dawson, Co. A, CTC, took a 12-pound bird in Area "O" and MSgt. Loyd G. Crow killed a 19-pound gobbler with a 12-inch beard in the "K" Area.

Fish and Game Section is conducting a trapping and chemical program for predator control. It is necessary to reduce the predator population of fox, skunk, bobcat, raccoon and feral dogs as these animals are potential rabies carriers. The program, to continue through Aug. 1, will be in effect throughout the reservation.

Student Brigade Forms Softball Squad Roster

Student Brigade I. O.

It's play ball time in the Student Brigade. SFC Arthur S. Wahner, Brigade Special Services NCOIC, has announced plans to form a fast-pitch softball team which will complete in the post-wide major unit league. The league is sponsored by the Infantry Center Special Services.

The team will welcome players from either the Student Brigade or The Candidate Brigade, as both brigades are considered the same for special Services purposes.

The Student Brigade will compete with five other major unit entries, the 10th Aviation Group, last year's runner-up; Martin Army Hospital, the 197th Infantry Brigade, Army Training Center, and Center Troop Command.

League play will begin May 5.

Special Training Co. Wins in ATC Volleyball

Training Center I. O.

The Army Training Center volleyball tournament came to a close Friday night at Kimbro Gym with Special Training Company taking first place with an undefeated 9-0 record.

Because of a tie for second place there were play off games between 1st Battalion and C teams of Headquarters Company with 1st Battalion winning both games and placing second in the tournament with scores of 15-8 and 15-11.

The champion Special Training Company, and runner-up, 1st Battalion will enter the Main Post tournament to be held April 21-25 at Harmony Church Field House.

The standings at the end of the tournament were STC, 9-0; 1st Bn. 7-2; Hq. Co. B, 7-2; 9th Bn., 6-3; Hq. Det. 2nd Bde., 5-4; Hq. C, 4-5; Rec. Sta., 4-5; Hq. Co. A, 2-7; 4th Bn., 1-8; and 10th Bn. 0-8.

Rare Old Coins Go on Display

The famous coin collection of Mrs. Louise Schau will be displayed Sunday at the South Harmony Church Service Club.

Included in the showing will be three-legged Buffalo nickels, colonial coins and a set of five-dollar gold pieces made at all seven United States mints.

The Schau collection ranges from half-cent pieces to old paper money and is exhibited annually during National Coin Week at the First National Bank of Columbus.

Mrs. Schau and her husband, retired Maj. Nile C. Schau, operate the Columbus Stamp and Coin Shop.

Ex-Colt Halfback Trains as NCO

Candidate Brigade I. O.

An ex-professional football player is starting a new career in the 100th Company (NCOC), The Candidate Brigade.

Candidate Eric D. Robinson, La Place, Louisiana, gained football experience as a student at Booker T. Washington High School in New Orleans, where he was selected an All-League offensive halfback.

Although Robinson was offered a scholarship from Dillard University in New Orleans, he opted to attend Southern University, Baton Rouge, where he had to pay his first year's tuition, The following year he earned a full scholarship and moved into a starting position.

Robinson, although not drafted by any pro team after his graduation, signed as a free agent in 1965 with the Baltimore Colts. When the season opened, the 6-1, 240-pound halfback became a starter.

Boy Scouts Exhibit Skills, Community Concern

By James Doherty

USAIC News Branch

"Columbus hasn't got a zoo, and we think it should have one. Will you sign our petition?" asked Mike Scott, 9, son of SSgt. and Mrs. Elmer E. Scott. Sgt. Scott is a member of the 197th Spt. Bn. 197th Infantry Brigade at Fort Benning.

At the Scout - O - Rama held in Columbus April 12, an exhibit prepared by Mike and other members of Cub Scout Pack 22, focused attention on the absence of a zoo in the area.

"This city really should have a zoo. there's none around here at all," another young scout added.

Pack 22 was one of seven cub packs from Fort Benning represented by exhibits in the indoor section of the Scout-O-Rama in the Columbus Municipal Auditorium. Other cub packs presented exhibits of scoutcraft, Indian art, and first aid.

"Take this over and get a free meal," said one scout from Troop 51 as he handed out free meal tickets to everyone within reach. "It's good beef stew. Go ahead, get over there." Visitors who were too slow to redeem their meal tickets were promised a "rain check" for next year's Scout-O-Rama.

Other scouts participated in model car races, crossed shaky rope bridges, or leaped from miniature jump towers, constructed by 43rd Eng. Bn.

Scout Dog shows were held every half hour, and a group of Fort Benning Pathfinders arrived by helicopter in mock assault.

The Pinewood Derby model car race was won by Rick Beltran, son of Capt. and Mrs. Ellazar Beltran. Capt. Beltran is attending the infantry officer advanced course at The Infantry School.

Rich belongs to Pack 27 sponsored by the 67th Maintenance Spt. Bn., Center Support Command.

An exhibit of communications and electronic equipment was prepared by Explorer Post 127, sponsored by The Infantry Center Directorate of Communications and Electronics. The exhibit demonstrated the use of advanced teletype and radio communications mechanisms.

The goal of all scout groups was the same: to give boys a constructive outlet for their energies and eventually to help develop them into responsible citizens.

Although the Fort Benning District is only one of nine in the Chattahoochee Council, Boy Scouts of America, the military contribution to scouting has been significant. An estimated 2,000 sons of military personnel participate in local scouting programs, according to assistant scout executive James L. Hall.

The military contributions to Scout-O-Rama are almost impossible to enumerate, Mr. Hall said.

Besides providing personnel, scout equipment, and band entertainment, Fort Benning provided much of the equipment and instruction which made the activities of the older scouts possible.

Organization for Scout O-Rama was handled by a special committee headed by Brig. Gen. Sidney S. Berry, assistant commandant of the United States Army Infantry School. Maj. Gen. John M. Wright, commander of United States Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning had served as chairman of the Chattahoochee Council until receiving recent news of his reassignment to Vietnam.

As for the pickets from pack 22, they plan to take their petition to U.S. Representative Jack Brinkley, former Republican gubernatorial candidate Howard Callaway, and eventually to the City and county commissioners. They hope that the combination of scouting and support from military families will be strong enough to get Columbus a zoo.

The public is invited both as spectators and participants in any or all of the various events.

The show, which attracts thousands of people from this area, including some of the best known horsemen in the Southeast, features competition for both adults and children.

Most of the events are hunter type classes, with some jumping divisions. The day long affair will begin at 9 a.m., and will continue until 5 p.m.

The Fort Benning Pony Club through the show is endeavoring to reestablish Fort Benning as the "Horse Center of the Southeast." It has achieved larger participation in the show each year and larger numbers of spectators as well.

Trophies and ribbons will be awarded in all classes.

Entry forms for the show, and additional information pertaining to the show may be obtained by telephoning the Fort Benning Hunt Club at 545-3000.

German-Born Trainee Leads 7th Bn. Cycle

Training Center I. O.

A naturalized American citizen, Pvt. Hans J. Schneider, received the highest honor that can be given to a basic trainee during the graduation ceremonies of the 7th Bn., 2nd Bde., at the Army Training Center.

Schneider was awarded the American Spirit Honor Medal, provided by the Citizens Committee for the Army, Navy and Air Force, by Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, commanding general of the Training Center. The medal is awarded to the trainee in each cycle who best displays the qualities of leadership expressing the American spirit, honor, initiative, loyalty and high example to comrades-in-arms.

A native of Heidelberg, Germany, Schneider came to this country in 1958 with his sister and her husband, an American serviceman. Sponsored by a Petersburg, Va., couple, Schneider became an American citizen in 1963.

Following his graduation from Prince George (Va.) High School in 1964, Schneider returned to his birthplace to attend the University of Maryland, European Division. He received his B.A. degree in political science in 1968 and remained at the university as a staff member in the admissions department.

Schneider entered the Army in February.

Graduating with him in the 7th Bn. were over 850 soldiers, one of this year's largest cycles, who established a new brigade record on the physical combat proficiency test with a battalion average of 425.09.

Maj. Merle E. Scaff, G-4, and Capt. Robert J. Young Jr., Co. D, 9th Bn., received the Bronze Star for meritorious service in Vietnam from Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, commanding general of the Training Center. Capt. Young also was awarded the Air Medal with 1st through 28th Oak Leaf Clusters.

Outstanding Trainee trophies were awarded to Pvts. Gergory J. Connor, Co. A; Edgar I. Farmer, Co. B; Hugh N. Blevins, Co. C; and Walter L. Weaver Jr., Co. D, by Lt. Col. William G. Riggs, battalion commander.

Riggs also awarded trophies to those trainees who excelled in all tested phases of basic training and streamers to the companies attaining the high average in the battalion on the tests. The rifle marksmanship streamer was awarded to Co. E, the physical combat proficiency to Co. B, and the individual proficiency to Co. A.

Lt. Col. Dean D. Mulder, brigade executive officer, awarded the Brigade Commander's Trophy to Co. A, commanded by Capt. Ezequio L. Navarrete.

SSgt. Donald G. Schmidt was selected as the honor drill sergeant of the cycle and received a Certificate of Appreciation from Col. Riggs.

Combat-Fit Manikin In Museum

By Sp4 Bob Mast

USAIC News Branch

A manikin, dressed in full battle gear, and an RKO movie, "Airborne Battalion," filmed here at Fort Benning in 1943, were among items donated to the Infantry Museum here April 4.

The Airborne Department, represented by Lt. Col. Clifton Tatum, commander of 4th Student Battalion (Airborne), and two of the battalion's company commanders, Captains Joseph W. Moore, 42nd Co. and Jack Lemar, 41st Co. presented the manikin to John Hunter, museum curator.

Another Airborne donation occurred the same day when Capt. L. T. Pitts (ret.) a member of the original Parachute Test Platoon trained at Fort Benning, presented the museum a film depicting the origin of U.S. Airborne efforts during World War II. Pitts received the film by request from a Chicago film distributor, for donation to the museum.

New Sergeants Hear Ibbotson

NCO's "run" the Army and officers command the Army. This was the message of the speech given by CSM Walter J. Ibbotson of the Infantry School Battalion at the graduation of NCOC Class No. 26-69 in Marshall Aditorium April 8.

The graduation was for 159 NCO's from the 65th Co., with Candidate Robert R. Greensmith of San Diego the distinguished and honor graduate. Greensmith led his class in both leadership and academics.

Greensmith was promoted to staff sergeant.

43RD ENGR. BN. WORKS ON CONCRETE STRUCTURE
Exercises Lasted Five Days

Engineers Pass Readiness Test

By Pvt. Richard Sirlen
15th P. I. Detachment

After five rigorous days of around-the-clock field work during an Operational Readiness Test (ORT), the 43rd Engineer Bn. (Const.) has been awarded a combat ready rating.

Beginning in March, the Engineers began to prepare for their ORT by conducting a five-day Field Training Exercise which combined tactical field operations with fixed bridge construction and civil disturbance training. Then, on March 23, the battalion was alerted for the ORT, and the next day moved into various field command posts.

Standing 24-hour shifts, the Engineers, under the command of Maj. Walter D. Needham, began a number of assigned construction operations. These included road and bridge construction, as well as the renovation of ranges, the building of three soldier pick-up points, the asphalt surfacing of a street and parking lot at Sand Hill, and several design projects.

The Engineers also had to defend their perimeters against enemy infiltrators who attempted to disrupt operations. Despite this harassment, all proposed work schedules were met during the week, with six of the projects being completed.

Because of this performance, the 43rd was able to return to the Company area on March 28 with a well done from their commander, and a combat ready status.

CG's Secretary Receives Bonus

USAIC News Branch

Mrs. A. D. Rogers of Richland, Ga., was honored here March 26 for "outstanding and sustained superior performance of duty" in her job as executive secretary in the Office of the Commanding General.

She was presented a certificate and $200 cash by Col. J. D. Keirsey, chief of staff, as a group of co-workers looked on.

Mrs. Rogers has worked as a Civil Service employee at Fort Benning for 16 years and has been in her present job for the past six years.

The 81st Division was the first to adopt a shoulder sleeve insignia. The "Wildcat," insignia of the division, was approved by General Pershing's Headquarters, American Expeditionary Forces, Paris, France in 1918.

931st Commander Kurtz Promoted

By Sp4 Ken Sturzenacker
15th P. I. Detachment

COL. MAURICE KURTZ

Maurice K. Kurtz, commanding officer of CTC's 931st Engineer Group (Combat), was promoted to colonel in ceremonies at CTC headquarters Friday.

The new eagles were pinned on by Colonel Charles H. Aeidenbaugh, CTC commander, and Mrs. Barbara H. Kurtz, the new colonels's wife. Colonel Kurtz has commanded the 931st since the beginning of the year.

Attending the ceremony with the colonel's wife and three children were the commanders of the 931st Group major subordinate units, Lt. Col. Henry A. Pate Jr., commander of the 43rd Engineer Battalion (Construction), and Lt. Col. Edward M. Willis, commander of the 818th Engineer Bn.

Others at the promotion ceremony were Lt. Col. William L. Nichols, deputy CTC commander, and the commanders of the other major CTC units, Lt. Col. Douglas T. Banks, 1st Battalion, and Lt. Col. Alden L. Cox, 67th Maintenance Battalion.

Col. Kurtz is a graduate of the U.S. Military Academy, and has received a master of science degree in structural dynamics from the University of Illinois. He has completed the Engineer Officers' Advanced Course, and attended the Command and General Staff College, where he earned a master's degree in military art and science.

197th Sergeants Must Sometimes 'Juggle' Troops

By SFC Snow Wilson
197th Inf. Bde. I. O.

Did you, while sitting in the grandstands at Fort Benning's Higley Hill, Bradley Landing or Flint Range watching an Infantry School problem, ever wonder how the support troops got there?

Battalion operation officers and sergeants of the 197th Infantry Brigade often wonder too. And thats' their job.

On a typical day men, such as the 1st Bn., 58th Infantry's SFC Cecil R. Hudson have to come up with over 300 men and all types of equipment for over 15 different Infantry School problems.

Other units of the 197th also face the same tasks.

To get his job done, Hudson holds a daily meeting with each company's operation sergeant. Last-minute changes at this time often find these individuals "swapping" men and equipment in order to meet the battalion's commitments for the following day.

And although some charts found in offices are for "eyewash", those in operations tell a constantly changing story.

Several huge plastic coated charts surround Hudson's working area and to the uninitiated the cryptic grease pencil marks are a foreign language.

But to the operation sergeants of the battalion it is a running account of where they are to send their men and equipment.

"I get the battalion commitments for the Infantry School from Brigade operations each Thursday," says Hudson. "From that I break it down on the daily charts for each company."

Later that same day, company operation sergeants take down their own individual unit's commitments.

"We try to go easy on a week," adds SFC George A. Segree, battalion S-2 and S-3 sergeant and Hudson's senior.

"This gives them a chance to catch up on their maintenance as well as give the company commanders a look at their men."

Maintenace and availability of equipment is a major problem and the operation and battalion maintenance sections must work closely.

"Our daily meetings with the company operation sergeants who have the latest information on their units is the key to this problem," comments Hudson.

"They also know what its like to be short and let us know when they have a vehicle up for grabs' or excess of their needs for that day."

Although supporting Infantry School problems is a major activity for the 197th Inf. Bde., it is not it's only job.

"To name a few right now," says Capt. William D. A. Music, the battalion S-3, "we are also involved in presenting training to replacements for the Republic of Vietnam, holding NCO classes at night twice each week, assuring each unit presents its mandatory unit training, presenting mandatory subjects our selves and providing burial details and escorts."

About the nighttime NCO training, Musick said, "Although most of them are veterans of Vietnam the situation we have here is a lot different from that found in most line units.

"In order for them to appreciate the problems facing the battalion with respect to men and the maintenance, we try to let them know what they are facing here at Fort Benning.

"Past classes give noncommissioned officers, especially the younger ones, a background on policies here, leadership techniques in a stateside situation and who the key to this problem, to get in touch with in case of problems.

"For example, how to get a broken-down 'track' towed back to the battalion area," he laughed.

Then more seriously, "And by the end of the month our young officers will be getting the same type of classes."

With the multitude of commitments for men and equipment it is difficult for unit commanders to know exactly where their men are each day or what they are doing.

As one said, "wait till I ask my operations sergeant."

And like you, sitting in the stands, the operation sergeants of the 197th often wonder, for there are men who will be on guard, others on KP, some on sick call, some with light duty, a few will be clearing the company for ETS or PCS and still others on leave.

But, as you've noticed, they don't wonder long — somehow they know where to find them.

vying for three trophies.

Each high school band will have five minues to perform any type of half-time program they wish. Each drill team will have 10 minutes to perform certain compulsory drill movements and whatever free drills they desire. Winners in each category will be presented trophies at 3:15 p.m. in Marshall Aduitorium.

Later in the day the Air Force jets will fly over York Field, According to Lt. Col. George W. Porter, Air Force liaison officer here, the Air Force is scheduled to fly four jet fighters of the F-4 or F-105 type to pass over the field.

A retreat ceremony on York Field at 5:10 p.m. and a period of singing by the Infantry Chorus and the Polka Dots from 5:40 to 6 p.m. will round out the activities for Armed Forces Day.

In connection with Armed Forces Day, several Bunnies from the Atlanta Playboy Club have been invited to visit patients at Martin Army Hospital.

The Fort Benning Speakers' Bureau will provide speakers for organizations that want to put on an Armed Forces Day programs. Persons interested can call the Public Informaton Office at 545-2034 and ask for the Speakers' Bureau coordinator.

Fort Benning invites everyone in the Columbus, Phenix City and surrounding area to help the military population celebrate Armed Forces Day. The event provides an opportunity to show the civilian community how the soldiers work and what Fort Benning is doing to contribute to the defense preparedness of the country.

Army To Finance 800 Scholarships

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The Department of the Army announced that 800 outstanding high school graduates have been selected to receive four-year scholarships to any of the 272 colleges and universities that will be offering Army Reserve Officer Training (ROTC) this fall.

Each scholarship pays for tuition, textbooks, lab fees and a subsistence allowance of $50 per month. During the six-week summer camp between the cadet's junior and senior, the student received $171.60 per month.

Final selections of the 800 scholarship winners were made at the Headquarters, U. S. Continetnal Army Command from among the 1,700 finalists. In addition to the 800 winners, 450 first alternates were named.

In the near future the names of more than 1,000 two-year scholarship winners will be announced. These awards will be made to college students completing their second year of Army ROTC training. These scholarships will also pay for tuition, textbooks, lab fees and $50.00 per month.

The ROTC scholarship program was authorized by Congress in 1964. Approximately 3,900 scholarships were awarded during the past three years and by school year 1970-71, 5,500 will be in effect. The selection of the recipients is based on academic excellence, extracurricular activities, physical standards, results of College Entrance Examination Boards and evaluation of motivation and leadership potential.

Upon graduation from college and successful completion of the Army ROTC program, scholarship students are commissioned as second lieutenants in the United States Army and serve on active duty for four years.

High school seniors desiring to complete for the four-year scholarships next year should write the Army headquarters in their area during September 1969 and submit their completed applications by Jan. 15, 1970.

OC Schreifer Makes Jaycee List

By 2nd Lt. Charles Nohe
Candidate Brigade I. O.

Officer Candidate Stephen P. Schreifer, 52nd Company, The Candidate Brigade, was named one of the U.S. Junior Chamber of Commerce's "Outstanding Young Men of America" for 1968.

Schreifer, 24, thus joined such national figures as track star Jim Ryun and Tennis ace Arthur Ashe in receiving this recognition from the Jaycees in its annual publication, "Outstanding Young Men of America."

Schreifer, who was nominated for the honor by his alma mater, Western Michigan University, Business Administration degree in marketing, completing his studies with an "A" academic average.

In college on a track scholarship, he ran the 100-yard dash in 9.4 seconds and the 220-yard dash in 21.0 seconds. In 1964 and 1965 he was the Central Collegiate Conference sprint champion, Winning the title over competitors from the Big Ten Conference schools Notre Dame, Drake, and Souther Illinois University.

In addition to academic and athletic achievements, Schreifer served on the student body senate, tutored underprivileged children, taught in the university's marketing department and headed the Letterman's club.

Following his graduation in 1966, Schreifer sold home building products for the Detroit branch of Owens Corning Fiberglas Industrial Sales.

In 1967 he took a place on Western Michigan's board of directors, thus being the youngest member on the board.

"The school was looking for new blood and a fresh outlook on the board," explains Schreifer. His "outlook" as assistant fund drive chairman in 1967 resulted in netting $603,000 for the university. Schreifer, a member of the Kiwanis International and the Knights of Columbus, entered the Army under the OCS College Option program in June, 1968. He hopes to attend flight school after his May 19 commissioning.

Texas A&M Alumni Plan Apr. 21 Muster

By SFC Richard Kemp
USAIC News Branch

Former students of Texas A & M University who are now in this area will muster April 21 to mark the passing of comrades and honor Texans who won independence at San Jacinto.

Starting at 7:30 p.m., the meeting will be held in Fort Benning Officers Club, Col. Billy M. Vaughn, secretary of the Infantry School and muster chairman, said.

The Aggie muster began in 1903 when a 300-member corps of cadets at that time paid homage to the Texans who fought for independence in 1836. Musters have been held since, wherever A&M alumni and former students may find themselves on that day.

More than 500 musters will be held around the world this year, including several in combat areas in Vietnam.

There are about 60 former A&M students in the Fort Benning area.

Alumni who failed to receive notification of the muster are requested to contact Capt. Joel B. Terrill at 689-1685 for reservations and further information.

The muster ceremony is the same in all locations where held. As the Aggies pay respect to those who are absent, when the names of honored dead are called from muster rolls, a friend of the deceased answers, "Here!"

Gym Construction Begins

By SFC Richard Kemp
USAIC News Branch

Ground was broken in ceremonies Friday for a $200,000 gymnasium that will become the newest addition to the Youth Center here serving 9,500 dependent children.

Construction of the one-story facility is expected to begin next week with completion and full installation of all equipment anticipated by April, 1970.

Handling the shovel to break the ground at 11 a.m. were Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., post commander; Col. J. W. Haley, director of personnel, and Sam B Murphree Jr., president of Murphree and Lisle Inc. of Phenix City, the firm awarded the contract for the gymnasium.

The modern structure will include such features as Olympic-type equipment in the gymnasium and separate shower, locker and drying rooms for boys and girls.

An exercise room will contain a boxing ring, striking and training bags, stall and horizontal bars, climbing ropes and other items.

Roll-away bleachers will be located in the gymnasium flanking a basketball court. Other gymnasium apparatuses will include mats, rings, parallel bars and horses.

Money for the project was raised by the Community Activities Association from such sources as the Youth Activities Council carnivals and Officers Wives and Noncommissioned Officers Wives Clubs.

During the ground breaking ceremony, Gen. Wright said, "I am proud that Fort Benning people saw the wisdom and need of giving the youngsters this much needed facility. I thank all of you for your generosity in helping in this worthwhile venture. Never will you make a better investment."

Special guests were Col. C. H. Reidenbaugh, commanding officer, Center Troop Command; Col. Francisco Ramos, president of the YAC and commander of 2nd Brigade; Army Training Center; Mrs. James Morris, president of the Officers Wives Club; and Mrs. Paul Long, president of the NCO Wives Club.

Kaulukukui Tops NCOC Class 25

Candidate Brigade I. O.

Thomas K. Kaulukukui Jr. of Chicago was named distinguished graduate of Noncommissioned Officer Candidate Class No. 25-69 at graduation exercises in Marshall Auditorium here April 1. Kaulukukui was promoted to staff sergeant.

The guest speaker at the graduation was Sgt. Maj. Donald E. McClung, Company Operations Department.

The class included 96 new sergeants who were members of the 84th Co.

Visitors Here Get 'Proper' Treatment, Courtesy of Protocol

By PFC David J. Wynne
Bayonet Staff

How should an invitation be worded? Should white gloves be worn when one goes through a reception line? What type of uniform does one wear to a wedding? To what occasions should a person wear a hat?

No, these questions aren't asked of Amy Vanderbilt. But there are just a sample of the many queries received by the Infantry Center's Protocol Division.

Maj. Forrest V. Graves, chief of the division since last August, has the job of advising Fort Benning's Commanding General on all matters pertaining to protocol and customs of the service. He is responsible for the social formalities rendered on behalf of all distinguished visitors. In addition, he heads the staff of 18 military and civilians who make arrangements for various group visits to the post and plan the details of many of the Infantry Center's special projects.

"In the area of protocol, I would say that the question of seating arrangements is the most common problem we have. It can also be the most complex," reported Graves.

"For instance, we were recently visited by the Major General of Ceylon. Normally, one would think that he should be treated as any other two-star general, but since he holds the highest position in the Ceylonese Army, he really is the equivalent of our Chief of Staff. Thus, as far as protocol is concerned, he rates the same position."

Actually, the problems of protocol take only about 20 per cent of the time of the Protocol Division. The rest of the work load consists of handling the many group trips and VIP visitors who come to Fort Benning and arranging for special projects, such as the pending Infantry Battalion System Review.

Last year, the Protocol Division handled the visits of nearly 4,000 persons, 500 of whom were VIP's from foreign nations. Capt. David R. Collins plans and supervises the visits of domestic dignitaries, and Capt. William C. Riggs coordinates the visits of foreign travelers.

And just how does an individual rate VIP treatment? Graves explained that a visitor merits special attention if he is a general officer, if he is a civilian holding a government position with a rating of GS 16 or above, if he is a representative of a foreign government or if he is a foreign officer.

"Each individual's tour of the post is tailored according to what the person wants to see," explained Graves. "Most persons visit Fort Benning to see the various aspects of the Infantry School, and so we arrange it so that they can view different phases of OCS, airborne and ranger training."

All foreign dignitaries are accompanied by an escort officer, who is usually a captain, and by the Commanding General's representative, usually a colonel or lieutenant colonel. A representative is provided only if the Commanding General cannot accompany the visitor personally.

The escort officer and the representative are hand-picked. The Director of Personnel's office screens the records of the many officers stationed here, analyzing the officers' backgrounds to find individuals who know the language or the customs of the visitor's country. The Director of Personnel then makes his suggestions to the Protocol Division.

If there is a language problem, an officer who speaks the language of the visitor is sought. If an interpreter can't be found here, then the Department of the Army will provide one, according to Graves.

During their visits, the guests are housed in special VIP quarters, which are maintained by the Protocol Division. Marshall House, which is staffed by a cook, maid and orderly, is set aside for persons with the rank of Lieutenant General and above. Other special billets are Green Hall with 17 apartments and Olsen Hall with three suites for the VIP guests.

Many special projects are handled by a Protocol Division team which is headed by Maj. Robert D. Leinen. Presently the group is preparing for the Infantry Battalion System Review, which is to be held here on April 23 and 24.

Twenty-six general officers of the United States Army, including Gen. Bruce Palmer, the vice chief of staff, will be present at the review, which will examine the role and needs of the Infantry battalion. Approximately 100 officers are expected to attend.

The special-projects section of the Protocol Division has the task of handling all administrative aspects of the review, such as arranging for transportation, billeting and housing. The officers will be arriving from around the world.

Another special activity handled by Leinen's section is the annual West Point visit. This year, over 750 cadets will come to Fort Benning in June and will be treated to special Infantry demonstrations and displays. The visit lasts only three days, but requires detailed preparation by the Protocol Division, which begins six months in advance.

Altogether, about 180 officers, NCOs and enlisted men will be needed to meet the myriad needs and administrative problems which arise with the visit of such a large group.

Airline Slates All-Jet Service

Eastern Airlines will operate all-jet service in Columbus beginning April 27.

DC-9 jets are scheduled for four daily round-trips to Atlanta with one continuing to Charlotte and Pittsburgh. The flights leave Columbus at 7:10 a.m., 1:35 p.m., 4:56 p.m., 10:40 p.m., and arrive in Atlanta thirty minutes later, according to K. N. Stowe, District Sales Manager.

The morning flight continues to Charlotte, arriving at 9:00 a.m., and arrives in Pittsburgh at 10:39 a.m.

The jets will have a crew of four, including a captain, co-pilot, and two flight attendants, said T. Joseph Peddy, Station Manager.

Comptroller Will Direct Workshops

USAIC News Branch

George E. Heberling, Infantry Center deputy comptroller, will direct a series of Department of the Army Position Design Workshops to be held here from April 22 through June 5.

The workshops are aimed at cross-training high level managers and staff specialists in the range of considerations entering into good position design. This will be the first such workshops conducted here.

Each workshop will consist of three days of conference discussions as well as practical application work on small segments of organizational structures as selected by participating managers.

Leon H. Robertson and Dr. Ervin Williams, both representing Georgian State College in Atlanta, will be guest speakers for the workshops.

Infantry Center speakers include Col. C. H. Reidenbaugh, commander of Center Troop Command; Dewey Posey, A. Eugene Cottle and Leon G. Simms, all from the Directorate of the Comptroller, Emmet L. Storey from the Directorate of Personnel; and Mrs. Thelma W. Hearn and Lemuel E. Johnson of the Civilian Personnel Office.

Former Castro Prisoner Now CTC Legal Officer

By Sp4 Ken Sturzenacker
12th P. I. Detachment

A veteran of Fidel Castro's prisons, and the April 1961 Bay of Pigs invasion, now serves as the Center Troop Command (CTC) legal officer.

Capt. Jose R. Rojas, who left Cuba after 14 years of legal practice in his native land, now serves as CTC's legal officer during his third tour at Fort Benning.

Captain Rojas received his doctorate in law from Havana University in 1946, and maintained a private practice until July 1960.

Then, under the spreading threat of the Castro influence, he went to Mexico. From there, he came to the United States early in 1961, staying only a month before going to Guatamala.

During this two months in that Guatemala, Rojas trained with the 3506th Cuban Brigade.

The 3506th was made up of Cuban refugees determined to return to Cuba and regain control of the nation from the Castro regime.

Early on the morning of April 17, 1961, the 3506th Cuban Brigade, along with other refugee units, landed about 1700 men on the shores of Cuba's Bay of Pigs.

Most of the invasion force that was not killed in the brief fighting, was taken prisoner. As second in command in the judge advocate general's section of the brigade, Captain Rojas found himself in the Havana Province jail with many other political prisoners.

Although the first year of imprisonment was not marked by any serious mistreatment, the last eight months in Castro's prison were much different.

"During the four months in solitary confinement especially, I lost weight

Army Reviews Battalion System

By Bill Kloeb
USAIC News Branch

The United States Army Infantry Center and School was host to more than 90 high ranking Army officers and Department of the Army civilians here April 23-24 for a review of the Army Infantry battalion system.

The group included 26 officers of general rank or equivalent civilian rank, including Dr. William B. Payne, deputy under-secretary of the Army for operational readiness.

Among the generals were Gen. Bruce Palmer Jr., Army vice-chief of staff and Gen. F. J. Chesarek, commanding general, U.S. Army Materiel Command.

Also Lt. Gen. Charles W. G. Rich, former commanding general here and now deputy commanding general, U.S. Continental Army Command, and Lt. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, former commanding general of the 1st Cavalry Division (Air Mobile) which trained here prior to movement to Vietnam and who now command the U.S. Army Combat Development Command.

The review stressed doctine, organization and material requirements of the Army today and for the next five years. It considered the various elements of the infantry battalion with emphasis on this level of organization and as force development, U.S. a complete and independent combat system.

Presentation were made by representatives from the assistant chief of staff for Army Materiel Command, Office, Chief of Ordnance, U.S. Army Combat Development Command, U.S. Army Europe and U.S.

Gen. Wright Talks With Dr. Bunche After Speech

"Freedom and liberty are more likely to be cherished where they are fought for and won by tears, sweat and blood of the people who enjoy them . . ." was the message given to a class of graduating OCs Tuesday by Doctor Ralph J. Bunche, Undersecretary of the United Nations. Dr. Bunche's son, Ralph J. Bunche Jr., was a member of the graduating class. General John M. Wright, the post commander, spoke with Doctor Bunche after the ceremony.

NCOC Graduate First To Return to Benning

By PFC George Burks

Eduardo A. Llauger (Ponce, P. R.) is the first graduate of the Infantry Noncommissioned Officer Candidate Course to return to Fort Benning for duty from the Republic of Vietnam.

S. Sgt. Llauger is one of over 8,500 NCO combat leaders who are products of the program, which has been called by former Command Sergeant Major of the Army William O. Wooldridge "a whole new idea in training."

Llauger graduated from NCOC Class No. 9 (the 83rd NCOC Company) on Feb. 13, 1968. While in Vietnam, he served with Alpha Company, 7th Battalion of the 196th Inf. First Infantry Division. His unit operated mainly in the area immediately north of Saigon.

In February of this year, Army Digest reported graduates of the program who were in Vietnam were rated excellent after a four-month performance evaluation peri-

Columbus Lions Take Tour of Post

By PFC Jim Doherty
USAIC News Branch

Forty members of the Columbus Lions Club toured Fort Benning Tuesday along with wives and guests.

They were welcomed by Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the U. S. Army Infantry School.

Gen. Berry thanked the Lions for their civic endeavors and for their contributions to the welfare of military personnel in the Columbus area. Lions Club safety patrols and sight conservation projects were strongly commended.

The Lions were taken to Infantry Hall, where they were shown the educational innovations developed here. Emphasis was placed on the potential uses of computers in classroom instruction.

Also illustrated were the new Welch Autotutor and the educational television system.

Following the classroom sessions in Infantry Hall, the Lions dined at the Officers Club with Gen. and Mrs. Berry and Col. James D. Keirsey, chief of staff.

The visit was concluded with an orientation on night sighting devices at Shea Range. Among the devices shown were the Night Vision Sight, the Starlight Scope, the Night Observation Device, and the Crew-Served Weapon.

This was the first time that instruction on the use of these devices has been given to a civilian group. Previously, much of the information about these devices had been classified.

The trip was coordinated by Col. Joel M. Hollis, Director of the Weapons Department. Col. Hollis is a member of the Lions Club and chairman of its Civic and Military Affairs Committee.

od. Sgt. Llauger corroborates this praise: "Overall, I feel that NCOC graduates are doing a great job in Vietnam, not only in the field, but in key battalion positions as well."

Sgt. Llauger claims that NCOC training is more than adequate. He says that, "The training that I received here was good preparation in every way for RVN. Almost everything I learned here was put into practice there, and the practical application certainly reinforced what I knew. In fact, the training makes one versatile. I saw NCOC grads being used as first sergeants and platoon leaders."

Although Llauger says that he is "hard-pressed" to choose the most important stages of his NCOC training, he does feel that there were several invaluable components: "Ranger training is especially useful preparation for patrolling in Vietnam because it presents the candidates with situations very similar to those you encounter in that country. Furthermore, because the candidate assumes different positions of responsibility, he knows how each of his subordinates is going to feel."

Another important phase of NCOC training, in Llauger's opinion, is the course in map reading. "It just doesn't pay to blunder into the wrong sector over there.

S. Sgt. Llauger admits that the role of the NCO in Vietnam initially is not an easy one: "In the beginning, other, more experienced NCOs tend to doubt your ability, but as you prove yourself, they accept you and go out of their way to help you. They are particularly impressed by the ability of the NCOC graduate to serve as an instructor in many areas of military skill."

Llauger says the overall benefits of the NCOC program as it is applied in Vietnam cannot be overestimated. He said the course is not a panacea for the needs of the Army, but it is nearly as effective as it could be. He states the NCOC program "cannot create a leader, but if the motivated candidate enters the course with certain favorable leadership traits and applies what he has learned with a flexible approach to each situation, he should be a good leader."

"Besides," he adds, "the NCOC program provides both the draftee and enlistee the chance to make rank quickly and to earn considerable money."

Sgt. Llauger is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesus A. Llauger of Ponce, P.R.

Survivors Receive Tax Break

ATLANTA — State Veterans Service Director Pete Wheeler reminded Georgia survivors of deceased Vietnam veterans that the Internal Revenue Code provides cancellation of certain federal income tax liability if the veteran died while serving in a combat zone or died of disease, wounds or injuries received while serving in a combat zone.

Mr. Wheeler said, "This provision of federal tax law is important to survivors of a deceased veteran as it is in force not only for the year in which the serviceman was killed but also for any prior year ending after the first day he served in a combat zone."

The provision is not applicable if death occurs after a serviceman's discharge from active duty.

Vietnam and certain adjacent waters have been designated since April 26, 1965, as "combat areas" for the purpose of this law.

Mr. Wheeler said, "A claim for refund under provisions of this law may be filed by a deceased veteran's survivors or legal representatives within three years from the time the return was filed or within two years from the time the tax was paid."

Field office managers of the Georgia Department of Veterans Service can assist veterans, their survivors or dependents on matters pertaining to taxes and veterans' benefits. Contact the nearest field office for further information.

RESERVIST

How will the Active Army 150-day early release program affect the individual Reservist who has been assigned as an individual replacement from STRAF units to Vietnam?

ALL USAR-ARNGUS personnel returning from Vietnam after a normal tour of one year are authorized release upon their return.

PREP SCHOOL

As an enlisted man, if I attend one of the Service Academy Prep schools am I penalized for promotional opportunities?

No, "Cadet Candidates" retain their rank for pay purpose and can expect promotions as usual. But in a sense they are all unranked for they have their own cadet rank system.

How would an enlisted man go about applying for Service Prep School?

Personnel is responsible for handling applications and most installations furnish a special advisor solely for this program.

CENTRALIZED SELECTIONS

Why did the Army go to a centralized selection promotion system for grades E-8 and E-9?

The centralized system was adopted to insure that individuals having the most outstanding potential Army-wide were selected. The old system too often failed to insure promotion of the most qualified personnel.

E-8 AND E-9

How will the new Army centralized promotion system affect the lower grade NCO's?

Under the new system personnel in grades below E-8 and E-9 will be promoted on a command-wide basis.

PROJECT 100,000

What is the program called Project One Hundred Thousand? What are the objectives of this program?

Project One Hundred Thousand is a program adopted by the Department of Defense to accept approximately 100,000 men annually into the services, who, prior to October 1, 1968, would have been ineligible under standards at that time.

BENEFITS

What do the new bills up before the Senate pertaining to benefits for survivors of military people, provide for?

The proposals under study would: Increase Servicemen's Group Life Insurance coverage for active duty personnel from a maximum of $10,000 to $15,000; provide double indemnity SGLI benefits to survivors of servicemen killed in combat areas; and guarantee a monthly payment of $165 for all widows drawing Dependency and Indemnity Compensation.

Many widows of lower ranking servicemen now receive less. The measure would also give widows an additional $20 monthly for each child.

Action taken to enhance Reserve officer quality

The military education required for promotion has been changed. Commencing July 1, 1972 officers not on active duty must meet the following requirements to be considered for Reserve promotion. The most significant changes are the requirements to complete the basic course before promotion to first lieutenant and the completion of USACGSC within three years after promotion to lieutenant colonel. The following table compares the current and new requirements:

Current	Requirements To
1LT	None
*CPT	Basic Course
MAJ	50 per cent Branch Advanced Course
LTC	Branch Advanced Course
COL	USACGSC

New Requirements

1LT	Basic Course
*CPT	25 per cent Branch Advance Course
MAJ
LTC	Branch Advanced Course
	50 per cent USACGSC
	*Advanced Course (1LTs who have completed two years of active duty, and are filling unit positions, are exempt from this requirement.)

The remaining 50 per cent must be completed within three years from the date the officer is promoted to lieutenant colonel.

Legislation, if necessary, will be requested to permit promotion to first lieutenant after 18 months for those second lieutenants who have completed the basic course. The current requirement is three years time in grade.

Selection boards that consider ARNG first lieutenants for promotion to captain will be centralized at each CONUS Army. This is already the policy in the Army Reserve. CONUS Armies will be provided more detailed instructions on board membership and qualifications, and Reserve members serving on these selection boards will be officers who are not on extended active duty.

Officers may still decline promotions when their unit has no vacancy for the higher grade. However, they may serve only one additional year in the unit instead of the three additional years now permitted. Air Defense officers, Alaskan Scouts, and certain technicians are exempted from this change because many of them are full-time employees and acceptance of a promotion and transfer from their unit would adversely affect both their occupation and their effectiveness. The criteria for general officer assignments and promotions have also been improved. New criteria will require:

Officers to have served in an active Reserve status for five years immediately prior to assignment. (Secretary of the Army may waive one year.)

Officers to have sufficient time remaining to serve five years in the higher grade before mandatory removal from an active Reserve status.

Officers to complete six months of service and one ANACDUTRA in a general officer position before becoming eligible to be recommended for promotion.

Officers to meet promotion criteria at the time they are assigned to a general officer position, except for the six months service and the ANACDUTRA requirement.

Additionally, previous command experience is not now mandatory for officers to be promoted to general officer grade; however, DA Selection-Federal Recognition Boards must justify their selection when they recommend an officer for promotion who has not had command experience at battalion level or higher for a minimum of two years. Consideration is being given to making this a mandatory requirement for assignment to a general officer's position with a waiver provision for those who have lost the opportunity to meet this standard.

'WE REALLY BLEW IT THIS TIME. . . I THOUGHT THIS DINE-IN GIG WAS LIKE A SIT-IN . . .'

Career Counselor Corner

The Army needs skilled craftsmen

The young man who reenlists for training in the military crafts field will get the chance to develop one of several much needed specialties. Of course, aptitude and interest are needed to qualify. But if a man has these, the Army will provide the training necessary to get ahead.

Military crafts is a highly satisfying occupational field. Also, it's a diverse field, with plenty of room from a capable young man to choose the spot he is best suited for. For example, he might qualify and be trained as a carpenter. In this field an individual would erect and maintain wooden buildings and other structures such as trestles, bridges, and piers. He would also estimate cost of materials and requisition supplies. A man could also be trained as a plumber to install, maintain, and repair pipe systems and fixtures for water, hot air, gas, steam, petroleum, compressed air, waste disposal, and similar systems. Some of the other military craft specialties are heating and ventilating specialist, mason, or marine engineer.

The Army operates modern schools to teach military crafts specialties to qualified young men. Also, there is an extensive on-the-job training program for those skills that are best taught under actual working conditions. Therefore, training may be on-the-job, formal instruction in schools, or a combination of these. School training courses range from eight to seventeen weeks in length. Students at these schools learn refrigeration, water supply, petroleum storage, or many other needed skills. One of the fastest ways to develop certain skills is to be trained on the job, and this is particularly true in the military crafts field.

The Army has a continuing need for more military crafts specialists, so there is good opportunity here for capable young men. The more skilled a man becomes, the more quickly he will advance in rank, pay, and responsibility. The Army has some very attractive career opportunities for military crafts specialists. Skills acquired in this area are also in demand in many areas of business and industry. Army training can provide you with a valuable head start by giving you a firm foundation of useful experience.

Jobs related to military crafts have much to offer for the man that can land them. If an individual can qualify, this option lets him choose the job training he wants before reenlistment. In the military crafts occupational area, a selection can be made from the following career groups:

Construction
Chemical
Marine operations and maintenance
Utilities
Supply handling
Fuel and industrial gas production

Of all the armed services, the Army lets an individual choose from the widest variety of job training opportunities. Can you qualify for one of them? It is easy enough to find out. Before reenlistment. Without obligation. See your Career Counselor.

At Formal

Commandant Honored By School Brigade

By Spt Bob Mast

Commissioned members of the Infantry school's Brigade and Battalion Operations Department held a formal dinner dance at the Fort Benning Officer's Club April 19.

Honored guests for the event included Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., commander general, U. S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning, and Mrs. Wright; Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the Infantry School, and Mrs. Berry; and Col. Carl C. Acuff, deputy assistant commandant of the Infantry School, and Mrs. Acuff.

Entertainment was provided by a band, the Statesmen, and singer Buddy Nash. Prior to the dance, a dinner was served and presentations were made to several of the guests by Col. George E. Wear, department director.

Newlyweds receiving silver trays were Capt. and Mrs. Scott A. Graves, and Capt. and Mrs. Timothy Peary.

Silver baby cups were presented to Lt. Col. and Mrs. Paul R. Buckley. Maj. and Mrs. James H. Bledsoe, Maj. and Mrs. Shelly T. Raines, Capt. and Mrs. Jimmie R. Lackey, Maj. and Mrs. Barry F. Graham, and Maj. and Mrs. George D. Navadee.

'Beginning Anew' Theme of PWOC

"Beginning Anew" will be the theme for the post-wide Protestant Women of the Chapel (PWOC) Spring Fellowship at 9:15 a.m. on Wednesaay in Bldg. 2605, Religious Education Center.

Beginning of spring is an excellent time to be thinking about a "New Beginning" and renewal.

Mrs. Laura McCray, Assistant Dean of Women at Tuskegee Institute in Alabama will be the retreat leader. Mrs. McCray was an outstanding speaker at the Fort Benning PWOC May Fellowship Day in 1967.

A nursery will be provided at the program. All ladies are invited to come. The meeting will end at 11:30 a.m.

For Students

CAC Plans Career Day

BY ANNA AXUP

A Career Day for all military student dependents from grades seventh through senior high is being sponsored by the Catholic Activity Center on Saturday, 10 a.m. at the Center, Bldg. No. 2611.

Sister Genevieve, Catholic Education Director, has announced that several speakers in various vocational fields will address the students. Following the program a picnic will be held. Bus transportation to and from the picnic will be furnished for those attending the Career Day.

The main speaker will be Father John Donahue, CSP, A Paulist priest. During WW II Father Donahue was a tank company commander and was wounded three times in action. After the war he entered the Paulist Fathers' seminary, which is a religious order dedicated to the conversion of the United States. He graduated from Mexico City College in 1949 and received a Ph. D. from St. Paul's College, Washington, D. C. in 1957. Father Donahue was ordained a priest. For eight years he served as Chaplain to Catholic students at the University of Tenn. and UCLA. After serving as a missionary in South Africa for two years, he now is a vocation counselor for the Paulist Fathers.

Other speakers will be Mrs. Virginia Scott, registered nurse; Mr. Paul J. Miller, attorney at law; Capt. Fred Perry, anesthesiologist; Spt Richard A. Pizzo, industrial management; Sister Alice Christine, missionary and teacher; and Brother Finbar Ray, S. T., archeologist.

Anyone interested is encouraged to attend this program. For additional information, call Sister Genevieve, 545-5811.

The "Polka Dots" will perform at the Officers Wives Club installation champagne brunch which will be held on Wednesday, May 7th, on the FB Supper Club Patio.

The event will begin at 11:00 a.m. with a complimentary champagne social hour. Hostesses are the present OWC executive board under the chairmanship of Mrs. Jackie Cummings.

Mrs. James Morris, Jr., OWC president, will preside over the installation ceremony. Mrs. Malcolm Baer will officially become the OWC president for the 1969-70 club year.

After the ceremony the "Polka Dots" will present their new spring program. Their program will include "Look of Love," "Consider Yourself" from "Oliver", "Lusty Month of May" from "Camelot" and their theme song "Good Clean Fun."

This OWC activity has been active for the past two years and last year they appeared on the Ted Mack Show. New members are always welcomed and may join the group on Tuesday and Friday, 1:30 p.m. at the Catholic Activity Center.

Reservations are needed for the brunch. Deadline is Friday, May 2, and cancellations must be made by Monday, noon, May 5. For a reservation call Mrs. Louis Boettcher, 545-8895; Mrs. Y. Y. Phillips, 545-7335 or Mrs. Earl R. Adams, 689-6533.

Tour Reception Station

'Trainees' Welcomed By ATC Commander

A most unusual and attractive group of "trainees" were welcomed at the Army Training Center April 17 by Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, ATC commander.

Ready for a day's tour of duty, ATC's distaff side assembled at Marne Field at 1 a.m. where they were briefed on the mission and functions on the Training Center by 1st Lt. Daniel J. Allen and S. Sgt Billy J. Tyus.

They then boarded buses for a tour that began at the Reception Station where all trainees are introduced to Army life. Greeted by Lt. Col. Archie Stith, Reception Station commander, the wives visited all sections to observe the processing and testing conducted there.

The lunch line formed at the Reception Station's Headquarters Company mess hall where all diets were forgotten as the ladies eagerly sampled Army food.

Back board the buses, the feminine "trainees" were taken to the Malone Range Complex where they observed basic rifle marksmanship training.

The final briefing of the day was given at the Malone "Quick Kill" range where the ladies were permitted to don protective goggles and test their skill with the BB guns. Not all of them scored as well as Mrs. G. Clark who said, "They told me the goggles were set for expert and I believe them. I hit the disc every time."

OWC Plans Self-Defense Instruction

Seventeen Fort Benning women, mostly Geographical Wives, have completed a rigorous eight-week course in self-defense.

As a result of the success of this class, the Officer Wives Club will include self - defense as a part of the regular 1969-70 activities.

Mr. Marcel Carles, the instructor, is a gourmet chef at a Columbus restaurant. He takes time each week from his regular job to teach self-defense.

The course involves warm-up exercises, some judo and ju-jitsu, and the karate-chop technique. Carles manages to make the class entertaining and "painless" as well as educational.

Women interested in the instruction are requested to call Mrs. Robert La Monte, 689-3344 to reserve space in the fall OWC classes.

Chaplain Introduces 'Different' Art Form

By Gretta Badgett
Training Center I. O.

A different form of art has been introduced at the Army Training Center by Chap. (Lt. Col.) N. A. Russo.

For several weeks, the chaplain has been instructing officer and NCO wives in the art of faking grape clusters from rosin. To most persons, rosin means something used by baseball pitchers, but not to Sp5 Frank Braski, Sp4 Larry O'Neal or Sp4 Ross Hobit-been assisting Chap. Russo with the classes.

Rosin grape clusters? Certainly! Unbelievable as it sounds, not only grape clusters but ashtrays, lamps, lighters, and many other things can be made from the liquid rosin. All that is needed are the proper glass molds, rosin, catalyst, color, and "patience."

Sparking interest in rosin pouring is nothing new to Chap. Russo. Military personnel and their dependents at Ft. Ord, Calif., and Ft. Greely, Alaska, also have benefited from his talents and willingness to share his experience.

Once initial interest was displayed at each of these posts, the Special Service Craft Shops have added this to their vast number of activities.

During these past few weeks a few eyebrows have been raised at the Training Center when someone would ask, "How are your grapes? Did they turn out all right?" A few words of explanation and it became clear that those talking were not discussing edible grapes.

The classes have not only kindled an interest on the distaff side, but many of the military personnel have expressed the desire to try their hand. They hope that facilities soon will be available and that rosin pouring can be added to the many activities already offered.

Evaluates Army Program Lets Women Decide Future Career

A program known as the College Junior Program has been instituted by the Army to let a young lady evaluate the Army as a future career while the Army evaluates her potential as an officer. College juniors who qualify are invited to Fort McClellan, Alabama, for four weeks of training as Cadet Corporals.

The Army provides transportatioo, meals, lodging, uniforms, and a month's salary of $190.20. At the end of four weeks, trainees may choose to end their association with the Army or, if qualified, elect to be part of the Student Officer Program.

The Student Officer Program pays $300 a month during the girl's senior college year, entitles her to medical and dental care, PX and commissary privileges and 30 days paid leave annually. She does not attend military meetings nor wear a uniform. After graduation she is commissioned a second lieutenant in the Women's Army Corps and is required to serve two years in an executive or management position.

College juniors interested in the career of a commissioned officer in the Women's Army Corps should apply for the College Junior Program now. For further information contact an Army Recruiter.

NCO Wives Present Gift To Mrs. Wright

Mrs. John M. Wright Jr. was presented a silver tray as a farewell gift at a luncheon April 16 at the Top Five Club, given by Noncommissioned Officers Wives Club.

Mrs. Paul Long, club president, presented the gift.

Mrs. Wright is the wife of Maj. Gen. Wright, commanding general of the U. S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning, who has been assigned to Vietnam.

"April Showers bring May Flowers" was the theme carried out in table decorations. Name tags were small umbrellas.

Honored guests were Mrs. Wright and Maj. Patricia Ernst, advisor to the NCO Wives Club.

Eighty-eight members and guests attended.

New members who have joined the club are Mrs. Robert Nountry, Mrs. William Habs, Mrs. Henry Boggs, Mrs. James Lord, Mrs. Thomas Dean, Mrs. Luther Willis, Mrs. John Robinson, and Mrs. Chalmus Branton.

Fashion Show Tops Mother, Daughter Fete

"Splashes of Spring" was the theme of the April 12 Mother-Daughter luncheon and Fashion show, an event held every year in an attempt to bring the mothers of JADA girls into the activities of the club.

There were 80 mothers and daughters who attend the events, held by the Super Club.

The club was decorated with butterflies, caterpillars, and flowers made of crepe paper. The head table had a centerpiece consisting of a large butterfly alighting on a support of grass and flowers.

The fashion show began at 1 p.m. and was sponsored by a local department store. The commentator, Mrs. D. Kovac, described the outfits as the models walked along a ramp and out into the room among the tables.

Models were Laura Britt, Betsy Everhart, Corena Fleming, Lynn Huff, Paula Larish, Barbara Muller, Cathy Peabody, Debbie Peabody, and Julie Smeds.

Hostesses were Melissa Lee, chairman, Debbie Davis, Robin Fite, Barbara Muller and Nancy Nichols.

The club will nominate and elect new officers in May.

Present officers are: Sue Welch, president; Julie Smeds, vice president; Gayla Mckenzue, recording secretary; Ginny Vaughn, corresponding secretary; Nona Ghent, treasurer; and Vivian Correa, historian and chaplain.

Other officers are Sally Keifer, hospital party director; Gina Oglesby, reservations chairman; Susie Piper, hospitality chairman; and Barbara Smith, [illegible]

OWC to Install Officers For 1969-70 Season

By Anna Axup

New officers for 1969-1970 will be installed by the Fort Benning Officers Wives Club at a champagne brunch on Wednesday, May 7, at 11 a.m. on the patio of the Supper Club.

The present executive board will serve as hostesses under the chairmanship of Mrs. Jackie Cummings.

After the installation ceremony a program will be presented by the OWC choral group, "The Polka Dots," directed by Mrs. Robert G. Hertel. The singing group was organized two years ago by OWC members who just enjoy singing. Last year they appeared on the Ted Mack Amateur Hour and also have performed at many functions in the Columbus area.

Mrs. Hertel, who has a bachelor of music degree with a major in voice, has announced that the group will sing "Look of Love," "Consider Yourself" from Oliver, "Lusty Month of May" from Camelot and the group's theme song, "Good Clean Fun."

Reservations will be needed for the brunch. Deadline is Friday, May 2, and cancellations will not be accepted after noon Monday May 5. To make reservations, call Mrs. Louis Boettcher 545-4637; Mrs. Y. V. Phillips, 545-7335, or Mrs. Earl R. Adams Jr., 689-6553.

6th, 8th Bn. Wives Meet For Coffee

The 6th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade NCO Wives Club held their coffee April 14 in the 66th Company dayroom.

Mrs. William Flynn and Mrs. John Fitzpatrick hosted the "April Showers" coffee. They presented each guest with an umbrella name tag. The dayroom was decorated with bright spring flowers.

The honored guest was Mrs. Grady Williams.

New ladies welcomed to the battalion were Mrs. Victor D. Bauder and Mrs. Leon Johnson.

Mrs. William V. Webb was a special guest.

Mrs. Joe B. Blackwell poured the coffee and Mrs. Walter L. Mitchell poured the tea.

The Miss Sergeant of 66th Company, SSgt. William Flynn, made the beautifully decorated cake and the delicious cinnamon rolls for the coffee.

8th Stu. Bn.

The 8th Student Battalion, The Candidate Battalion, Officer Wives recently (April 9) held their April coffee in the home of Lt. and Mrs. John B. Caywood of 2449 Mimosa Street, Columbus, Ga.

Honored guests were Mrs. Robert M. Piper and Mrs. Edward C. Radcliff.

Special guest was Mrs. Caywood's mother-in-law, Mrs. Beatty E. Capwood who was visiting from Danville, Ky.

New wives who were welcomed to the Battalion were: Mrs. Brook Crawfor, Mrs. Mathew Hacker, Mrs. Gerald Bender and Mrs. Arthur Little.

The Brigade Ship Wreck party to be held on the 1st of May was discussed.

Mrs. Piper announced that the next Brigade Luncheon will be held on May 6, with a Fashion Show at Kirvess, Columbus, Ga.

At Ball Game

95th Co. Wives Club Sponsor Bake Sale

The 95th Co., 9th Stu. Bn. TCB Wives Club held a bakesale April 12 during a baseball game between the officers and candidates of the 95th Co.

Mrs. Carey W. Dunning, wife of the company commander, assisted the club members in making the plans. Mrs. Robert Lyngen was chairman.

Some of the players' families attended the game which the candidates won, 16-5.

Proceeds from the sale will go toward the social functions of the Wives Club.

54th Co.

The spring season provided a theme for the 54th Co., 5th Stu. Bn. Wives Club coffee held in the company dayroom April 1.

The president of the club, Mrs. Robert Crane, presided over the business meeting. The highlight of the program was a talk on "Customs and courtesies in army life." The presentation, which was supplemented by slides, was given by Mrs. Dennis J. Harron, wife of the 1th Stu. Bn. commander.

Following Mrs. Harron's talk, the wives went through a mock receiving line in preparation for the 54th Co. intermediate status party which was held April 5.

Refreshments were served by the candidate wife hostesses, Mrs. William Smith, Mrs. Robert Osterling, Mrs. Roby Whipple and Mrs. Eugene Harvey.

Honored guests included Mrs. Edward C. Radcliff, Mrs. Dennis J. Harron and Mrs. Malsoel W. Blankenship.

The company guests were Mrs. Gary L. Hubbard, Mrs. Bennie F. Tuggle, Mrs. James M. Dorman and Mrs. Allen W. Peterson.

OWC Sponsors Dance

A free dance for all dependent high school students in honor of the winners of the Student Award Program will be held on Saturday, May 3rd at the Youth Activity Center. Both the Student Award Program and the dance is being sponsored by the Fort Benning Officers' Wives' Club.

Home Control Returns to Valley

By PFC Bill Crawford

CHU LAI, Vietnam, (AMERICAL 10)—Hundreds of refugees are returning to the valley site of their former homes in one of the largest and most significant pacification efforts ever conducted in the I Corps Tactical Zone.

After an absence of nearly four years, the Hiep Duc District Government is again located on home soil. In 1965 government officials of Vietnam (GVN) were forced to evacuate the area in the wake of devastating terrorist attacks by VC and NVA forces.

Gradually most of the district's 7,000 inhabitants were safely relocated in refugee centers at Tam Ky and Nui Loc Son. The district government was forced to flee to Tam Ky as well. Now, through the combined efforts of the 196th Infantry Brigade and Military Assistance Command Vietnam (MACV), the Hiep Duc Government has returned to its original home, some 35 miles northwest of Tam Ky.

"The restoration of the district headquarters and the re-establisbedment of GVN influence in Hiep Duc in the middle of a highly publicized enemy offensive campaign is an emphatic demonstration of growing confidence among Vietnamese officials and among the people resettling the area," said Col. Frederick J. Kroesen Jr., 196th Brigade Commander.
