"The new settlers and officials have been welcomed gratefully by the populace, those Vietnamese villagers who have eked out a bare subsistence under Viet Cong harassment for the past few years," he said. "Hundreds have already joined in to help in the construction efforts and have asked to be allowed to live in the new hamlets as they are developed."

Serving as the district chief is 1st Lt. Nguyen Duc Vinh (ARVN).

Lt. Vinh disclosed that the first phase of the project calls for the construction of a district headquarters in the vicinity of Dong An village. This headquarters will handle the administrative business of the Hiep Duc District.

A refugee center will be established near the village of My Lun to aid returning Vietnamese. Other projects anticipated in the coming months include road construction, a school and a small hospital.

A five-man Mobile Advisory Team provided by MACV will provide assistance to Vinh in his effort to re-establish GVN control in the district. The advisory unit is headed by Capt. Stanley W. Brown.

Posters showing pictures of a rich market place are being used with the question asked, "Do you remember the old Hiep Duc Market?—When were you able to get there last?"

Perhaps the most significant result has been the large number of VC in the area who have become ralliers.

As one of them told a Civil Affairs interpreter, "we want to feast again too."

Infantrymen Kill 32 NVA Troops in Village Sweep

By Sp4 Dale E. Reich

CHU LAI, Vietnam (AMERICAL 10) — Heavy contact with a reinforced NVA company netted Americal soldiers of the 11th Infantry Brigade 32 enemy kills near here.

Working in an area 5½ miles north of Duc Pho, infantrymen from Co. C, 3rd Bn., 1st Inf., and cavalrymen from "E" Troop, 1st Cav., combined efforts to crush the well-equipped enemy force.

Contact was made just before noon when Co. C was Combat Assaulted into the area to search out a deserted village. The landing zone was "cold" and gave no indication of the hard fighting that the Americal elements were to encounter the rest of the day.

"As soon as we entered the village they opened up on us with one of their machine guns," said Sp4 Chuck Burnes, Atlanta, Ga. "We returned fire immediately, knocking out the enemy machine gun next and killing six NVA."

The "Always First" soldiers, led by Capt. William J. Straub, Mt. Kisco, N. Y., then moved forward to search out numerous bunkers in their front. Before they had gone 25 meters, however, they began receiving rocket grenade and automatic weapons fire from those same positions.

"We tried to stay on line," explained PFC Brian L. Dawes, Montigo Bay, Jamaica, "but when somebody ran into a bunker we had to wait for them to knock it out."

"The 'tracks' from "E" Troop did a real good job," said Sp4 John W. Nelson, Waterloo, Iowa. "When the going got tough they laid down some heavy fire with their .50-calibers and made it possible for us to advance. They also made it possible for us to evacuate our wounded."

"The NVA all wore khaki or blue uniforms, and they all had helmets and rucksacks," Nelson explained. "They were an extremely well-equipped, hard core outfit."

The enemy soldiers were well-entrenched and had no intentions of leaving their positions once contact was made. One NVA refused to surrender after a series of fragmentation grenades, white phosphorus grenades, and a charge of C-4 were thrown into his bunker. He later fell under a barrage of M-16 fire from a Co. C trooper.

Sgt. Michael Krueger, Houston, Tex., a squad leader in the 3rd platoon, rode on the lead "track" as "E" Troop moved through the village and directed fire on enemy positions.

"I knew where the NVA were hiding" said Krueger. "As we moved forward they threw Chicom grenades at us from all directions. Fortunately, no one was hit. We killed a lot before we completely swept through the village area."

At one point during the battle a soldier fell wounded directly in front of an NVA bunker. Sp4 Marco A. Jimenez, San Antonio, Tex., moved immediately to aid the wounded soldier, and when he picked the man up he found himself staring into the muzzle of an enemy AK47. Jimenez, carrying the wounded man, heard the "click" of the empty NVA weapon as he moved back to find cover in a nearby trench.

Another "Always First" infantryman received a minor head wound when a bullet hit the side of his helmet, penetrated to the liner, and came out again.

When night fell, contact was broken and the soldiers counted 32 NVA bodies. They also captured 10 AK47s, two RPG machine guns, one M-16, one M-72 LAW, one RPG-7, several rounds of 82mm mortars, clearing equipment for an 82 mm mortar tube, shotgun shells, and numerous rucksacks. America casualties during the encounter was light.

Pioneers?

Circled Wagons Considered Best Protection

TAY NINH, Vietnam (21th Inf. Div. IO) — Their throats were parched from the hot sun beating down, and their eyes burned from the constant exposure to the whirling dust. Slowly and methodically they moved into the large wagon-wheel circle, considered their best method of defense. Quickly the men start to build cover for protection in the event of attack.

A wagon train or a mechanized infantry unit? It could be either for the defensive tactic has remained similar through the years.

Instead of building cover out of boxes and crates as the Indian-fighters of the Old West did, the Vietnam fighters build well-fortified bunkers with timber, sandbags and ammunition boxes.

These men have learned, as did their forefathers, that their defensive positions are held in a balance with their lives. Like the Indians of the Old West, the Viet Cong and NVA forces use the darkness to find their enemy's weaknesses and then strike where he is most vulnerable.

Fire Support Base Rawlins, located 2.5 miles east of Tay Ninh city, was chosen as the temporary home of the 4th Bn. (Mech.), 23rd Inf. Tomahawks. Its defenses were established similar to the American pioneers' wagon-wheel formation.

GEESE GANDER . . . Straight out of a nursery rhyme, the real "Mother Goose" and her companions give an Americal Division helipad a visual recon while two maintenance personnel from the 54th Medical Detachment wash one of their "dustoff" helicopters. Geese are used as early warning devices.

Unlike the pioneers, however, the 25th Infantry Division troops have far more efficient equipment to work with.

Twice in the past two months, estimated regimental-sized enemy units have found Rawlins impregnable. Realizing that the next attack of the base could be by a much larger force, the Tomahawks have been constantly rebuilding and improving their perimeter defenses.

"Since starting the perimeter at Rawlins, we have used 14,000 sandbags and 4,000 artillery ammunition boxes for the bunkers," said 1st Lt. David Blanchard.

Using dogs and geese as early warning devices, the frontiersmen usually know when someone was approaching their camp. The Tomahawks scatter trip flares behind, among, and in front of their concertina wire as an early-warning device.

Foxhole Cover Undergoing Tests at Infantry Board

By Rex Ellis

Something new has been added to the Infantryman's foxhole. Nothing glamorous like a blonde or comfortable like wall-to-wall carpeting but something that should enhance the protection offered the fighting man. It is a foxhole cover.

Presently undergoing service testing at the U. S. Army Infantry Board is a new lightweight synthetic materiel cover designed to improve the protection offered by the open foxhole.

The new innovation, measuring 80 to 84 inches overall, is manufactured of a close-woven dacron and designed to permit a section of the foxhole opening to be covered with up to 36 inches of top soil. The cover has two 8-inch sleeves, one at each end, which serve as anchors when filled with soil or have a log inserted and buried in small, shallow slit trenches along side of the hole. The anchors or ends of the foxhole cover are covered first with soil and then a solid coating of up to 36 inches of soil is placed over the entire cover.

Previously when the fighting man wanted to cover his lair he resorted to using branches, leaves, grass and any other natural foliage to hold the soil he then placed on top. This was never to satisfactory as the soil continually found its way through, getting into his equipment and down the neck of his shirt. In addition, when it rained the water ran in from all vantage points and made the foxhole untenable. The new cover is waterproof.

Possible advantages of the new cover are many. With the top cover of soil, a good barrier to random shrapnel is provided. It also provides a good means to more easily camouflage the foxhole from aerial reconnaissance and last but not least, it provides a good barrier from rain and surface water.

Advantages

Other possible advantages of the new top are being surveyed by test officials. It is being considered as a supplement to the poncho as a rain cover over men and equipment, and as an undercover means for placing bedrolls or equipment to keep them off the wet ground. And too, the weatherproof cover with top soil over it makes an excellent CBR protective device.

The new innovation is being scrutinized very closely for its practical aspects and for being funetional. Test officials are demanding that it not be just another nice-to-have but inadequate piece of equipment.

The Infantry materiel test board has received 60 of the new covers to commence the testing. The tests, under the direction of the Field Equipment Test Division, are being conducted at various test sites on Fort Benning's ranges. Test officials explained that it was necessary to test the item under various terrain features, different soils, and in all kinds of weather offered at the Georgia post. The new cover will be checked for durability in the tests which will include some of them being covered with soil to a depth of 36 inches for an extended period of 1 month. Periodic examinations of the amount of sag roofing support.

The measurements will be taken at least once a week and the test personnel are looking for not more than a foot of vertical sag to the foxhole.

It is possible to fasten two or more of the covers together and make a larger cover for the two-man foxhole and machinegun emplacements according to Captain Dennis W. Zuburg, test officer in charge of the field service testing. Zuburg's test crew, consisting of S.Sgt. Bruce R. Myhaver, test NCO, Specialist Four Ronald P. Shirell, assistant test NCO, and a crew of eight men, have been digging foxholes and installing the new covers in some of the most rugged terrain and hard digging soil in Georgia. "That Georgia clay is hard digging, particularly when one gets toward the bottom of a one man foxhole," according to Sergeant Myhaver.

The foxhole cover when encased for transportability by the Infantryman fits into a dispesable 7 by 7½-inch pliable packet which attaches to the belt of the Infantryman or can be placed into the backpack. Its total weight is less than 2 pounds.

America's Space Future Stress

By Sp4 Bob Mast
USAIC News Branch

America's future in space was emphasized by Dr. Eberhard F. M. Rees of the George C. Marshall Space Flight Center, Huntsville, Ala., at the spring general membership meeting of the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army (AUSA) in Marshall Auditorium April 17.

In his speech before 1500 AUSA members, Dr. Rees explained America's future space goals, the Army's contribution to the space program and the effect of America's space effort on the nation's general populace.

Some goals include manufactured items from space by 1972 and orbiting manned space stations, with reusable shuttle rockets using existing airports, by 1975.

Manufacturing has a role in space, according to Dr. Rees. Optical lenses can be manufactured better in the weightless environment of space, and many items may be constructed with more ease and economy in space.

Concerning the Army's contribution to space, Dr. Rees mentioned that the current space program traces its origin to the Army's Explorer I satellite, which placed America in the space race and discovered the Van Allen Radiation Belts around earth.

Dr. Rees graduated from Dresden Institute of Technology in Germany, in 1934 with a master of science degree in mechanical engineering. He worked with the German rocket program at Peenemunde during World War II and was one of the scientists who worked on America's post-war rocket program at Fort Bliss, Texas, from 1945 to 1950.

From 1956 until 1960, Dr. Rees was deputy director of the Army Ballistic Agency's Development Operations. In 1960 he was appointed Deputy Director of Research and Development, a post he held until his present appointment.

The Marshall Auditorium meeting was preceeded by a buffet dinner at the Fort Benning Officers Club.

Upon his arrival, Dr. Rees was met by Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., commanding general U. S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning and Louis T. Kunze, president of the local AUSA Chapter.

Follow Up Lead Begins To Increase Re-Ups

By Pvt. Marc Reiff
197th Inf. Bde. I. O.

The Reenlistment Office of the 197th Inf. Bde. is humming like a well oiled machine. This is due in part to an effervescent Lt. William Charitow.

A born salesman, he has incorporated his selling experience and army knowledge into a program that is unique in all the army. Called the FUL, or Follow Up Lead, it is responsible for an increase in re-ups over last March's figures.

The FUL has been in effect only two months, yet the percentage has steadily climbed. Integrating his civilian experience with the Army know how of Sgts. Eugene Steele and Harold Woodward, the new program was established. Ten reenlistments can be directly attributed to FUL for the month of March.

Once a man steps into the Reenlistment Office there is no hard sell pitch. Rather, all sides of the question of re-up are looked into and if the Lt. feels the man is well suited for Army life then he encourages him. If the soldier is married, the Lt. or Sgt. Steele may make a personal visit to the home and discuss the problem with the wife. "If the soldier is undecided, then we must convince his wife," says Chaitow. The VRB and special benefits for reenlisting will be patiently explained. We show that her husband can do something for the Army and the Army can do something for her husband. Only when we are convinced that both sides will profit will we reenlist a man," explained Chaitow.

FUL is also helpful to the company commanders in their re-up policies. After calling up the re-up office they can be assured that the prospective reenlistment will be looked into. "The uniqueness of FUL is that we follow up on these men instead of letting them sit and wonder what benefits they can derive from reenlisting," says Chaitow.

In March 25 per cent of the eligibles reenlisted, as compared to 11.8 per cent for last March. Speculating on April, Lt. Chaitow figures that 25 per cent will re-up as compared to 7.8 per cent last year. This rise in figures is directly contributed to FUL.

Sergeants To Get New Uniforms

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Drill sergeants will be among the first in the Army to be issued the new rayon-polyester wash and wear uniform this summer. This will replace the tropical worsted (TW) khaki shade uniform and is part of the extra clothing allowance authorized these individuals.

Besides receiving extra uniforms, drill sergeants get a number of other benefits. These include free laundering of fatigues, $30 monthly superior performance pay and an 18 month stabilized tour if assigned to a basic combat training unit. They also have a chance to compete for the annual Stephen Ailes award honoring the top drill sergeant in the Army.

Interested personnel are encouraged to apply for this program. Consult AR 614-204 for prerequisites and application procedures.

CTC Receives Vietnam Training

By Sp4 Richard Emerson
15th P. I. Detachment

The lead truck in the troop convoy stopped as a mine exploded under it. Seconds later, the entire column stopped and the occupants of the Vietnamese hamlet sprang the ambush that had been laid by a two-man band of Vietcong guerrillas given the command detonate the mine.

SOLDIERS MEMBERS OF THE TRAINING ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC OF VIETNAM (ARVN) ARE TRAINED IN AN AMBUSH

Within seconds, the ambush was sprung and the enemy was dead. Only the ambushers were not Vietcong guerrillas, but American soldiers in training at the Combat Training Center (CTC) here.

By assaulting into the middle of the column and destroying the ambush weapons, the members of the Vietnamese hamlet sprung the ambush and, during a two-day block of instruction given by cadre members of the CTC Vietnam Training Committee, learned how to recognize, react to and survive ambushes.

'Maintenance Men'

Mission: Best Support

By Pvt. August Nerad

"Our mission is to provide our customer units with the best possible maintenance and supply support," says Capt. Rodney B. Huffman, commander of Co. A, 67th Maint. Bn.

The company's achievements have been well recognized. Two weeks ago, Co. A accepted the battalion commander's trophy for superior performance of the duties common to all the companies in the battalion.

Nor have they forgotten that "The Army travels on its stomach." Under the guidance of SSgt. Travis B. Dover, the company mess sergeant, two consecutive Best Mess of the Year awards in Center Troop Command hang in the company mess hall.

As the main support unit of the 67th Maintenance Battalion, Co. A is prepared to go into the field to provide direct support for a brigade or division facing an enemy. The company's capabilities range from repairing mess kits to the largest military vehicles and servicing such engineering and electronics equipment as field radios and wire communication sets.

Originally known as the 67th Main Support Company, Co. A was activated in December 1965 for combat duty in the Dominican Republic.

At that time, the 67th Main Support Company worked with the maintenance unit of the 82nd Airborne Division, providing back up facilities.

The 67th Main Support Company received a unit citation during the assignment to add to the battalion's meritorious service award in World War II and four unit commendations earned in Korea.

In September 1966, the 67th Maintenance Battalion was assigned to Fort Benning, and the designation "Company A" was given to the old 67th Main Support Company.

Co. A was joined by the 511th Heavy Equipment Company, which was later deactivated and replaced by the 598th Light Equipment Maintenance Company.

In addition, Co. A maintains the 31st and the 35th Ordnance Detachments which support Army training with small arms repair.

By providing the "trouble-shooting" facilities for Center Troop Command, Co. A strives to provide "customer units with the best possible maintenance and supply support.

New Recreational Centers to Open Soon

By Frank Truchon
USAIC News Branch

The construction of two new recreational facilities here — an arts and crafts center and a movie theatre — is nearly completed and contractors are beginning work on a dormitory in the U.S. Army Infantry Center Rest Area at Destin, Fla.

A two-story, masonry construction arts and crafts center, located at the corner of Sightseeing Road and Eckel St. is 99 per cent completed and a 1,000-seat theatre at Scott Avenue and 13th St. is over 90 per cent completed, according to George P. Perdue, chief of the Project Design Section, Post Engineers. On the other hand, according to Perdue, the building of the new single enlisted men's barracks in Florida has just started.

The arts and crafts building, which is expected to be finished in about a month, will provide facilities for approximately 16 different crafts, according to Hugh E. Cook, Fort Benning craft director. These will include such hobbies as woodcraft, sculpture, ceramics, painting, leathercraft, model construction, electronics, cutting and engraving of stones and metal art.

Cook said that the new crafts building will be the first multiple craft facility in the Army. It will be able to accommodate 800 to 1,000 persons a day and will require an 11-man staff.

The barracks under construction in Florida for single enlisted men will house 38 persons. In addition to a sleeping area, there will also be a lounge area. The building is scheduled to be completed in about 90 days.

Roy Harris, Wife To Lecture at Auburn

— As part of the Auburn Festival of Arts, Dr. Roy Harris, famous American composer, and Johana Harris, pianist, will be on the Auburn campus Monday and Tuesday.

Harris has been recognized throughout the world and has received many honors. Last year he was commissioned by the New York Philharmonic Orchestra to write his Eleventh Sympony.

Johana Harris, dynamic partner in the artistic team, is a world renowned pianist, teacher and lecturer, and also the mother of five children. At 15, she became the youngest piano teacher in the history of the Juilliard School of Music.

A Folk Song concert will be given by Johana Harris at 11 a.m. Monday.

A public concert by Roy and Johana Harris will begin at 8:15 p.m. in Langdon Hall.

On Tuesday, at 2 p.m., Roy Harris will present an illustrated lecture.

There is no admission charge for the concerts or lectures and the public is invited.

PRO MUSICA

New York Pro Musica, performers of medieval, renaissance and baroque music, will appear in concert Tuesday, at 8:15 p.m. in the Auburn Union Ballroom.

Presented by Student Activities, the performance is one of many to be held during Auburn's first Festival of Arts.

The New York Pro Musica provides concert audiences with a unique opportunity of hearing the musical masterpieces of an age that produced Shakespeare, da Vinci and Dante, performed by young singers and instrumentalists who have been widely acclaimed for their artistry and authenticity.

Pro Musica's repertoire is as wide and as varicolored as the period it depicts: sacred works that were performed in such cathedrals as Chartre and Notre Dame; lusty songs and dances of 15th century Germany; music at once elegant and earthy from Elizabethan England; music from the courts of Spain and the Low Countries; madrigals of the Italian renaissance.

CONCERT

The University Brass Ensemble, directed by Dr. Billy Walls, will give a concert on Wednesday, to conclude Auburn's first Festival of Arts.

The concert will be held at 4:10 p.m. in the Music Building.

A program of contemporary music will be presented.

Auburn Students Present 'J.B.' At Arts Festival

"J. B.", the 1959 Pulitzer Prize winning play by Archibald MacLeish, will open Thursday at 8:15 p.m. at the Auburn University Theatre on College Street.

A production of the Auburn University Theatre, the play is directed by Maurice Erickson, with Dr. Kenneth Campbell in the title role.

"J. B." is a verse drama — a modern adaptation of the Book of Job. Two unemployed actors, reduced to selling balloons and popcorn in an ancient circus, decide to interpret the Old Testament story their own way.

The play will run through May 4, with the exception of April 28. Tickets may be reserved through the Theatre box office of by calling 525-4154. General admission is $2.

Baker High Presents Fine Arts Festival

The Baker High School English Club will present the third annual Fine Arts Festival on Tuesday, April 29, at 7:30 P.M., in the Baker auditorium and cafeteria.

The program in the auditorium will feature Miss Freddye Marshall, well known singer who has returned to Columbus after retiring from a successful career. Also featured will be the one-act play, "In the Beginning," by Stephen Turner, winner of the city wide playwriting contest.

Following this program, the festival will continue in the cafeteria with exhibits which include displays related to the lives and works of contemporary American writers, and various types of art exhibits. Refreshments suitable to the contemporary theme will be served during the exhibits.

New Department

Synopsis

SALT & PEPPER — They're Charlie Salt and Christopher Pepper, the dauntless heroes who hold the fate of the world in their hands . . . and dropped it! They discovered a widespread and nefarious international plot which plans the ruination of Great Britain. They persist through adventures and hair-breadth escapes that out Bond-Bond.

A MAN CALLED GANNON — A mature Western, exploding with excitement, romance, thrills, and drama. The story centers around a tough cowhand and a greenhorn who hire themselves out to an attractive widowed rancher and end up in the middle of a range war.

THE TRYGON FACTOR — The story of a criminal organization masterminded by a group of women who took to crime to save the family estate from ruin. They gradually spread to more daring and ambitious crimes: murder; robbery, etc., and all accomplished without a trace of evidence. There's action, thrills and mystery as Stewart Granger works on the baffling mystery of the "Trygon Factor".

WHERE'S JACK — 18th Century period comedy about a young Cockney with extraordinary lock-picking skill who becomes a thief and then London's most successful escape artist. A hero of the little people, idolized by Londoners as The Prince of Prison Breakers, he is finally brought to the gallows, but a daring plot by his friends, including Daniel DeFoe and Hogarth, manages to save him and he is spirited off to the American colonies.

CHARRO — A rugged post-civil war story which is loaded with action and adventure. Elvis plays a rare dramatic role as a "some-is frightened town from dis-times" sheriff trying to save aster.

THE FORUM THE LOBOM

By Paul Mangione
Bayonet Staff

Once upon a time California didn't have any baseball teams. That was twelve years ago. Today there are five major league teams there and it appears that the golden state may have reached the saturation point. No other state has more than two teams.

Granted, California is a big state and could conceivably support five teams adequately but such is not the case. New York learned many years ago that even they, the largest population center in the nation, were not capable of maintaining three major league teams.

For the better part of their stay in New York and Brooklyn, the Dodgers, Giants and Yankees were in contention for the pennant. New York saw several "sub-way series" yet it couldn't provide the people, which means money, for all their teams.

California's problem is somewhat different. Only two teams in the state have provided any real hope of winning a flag in the last five years. The Giants of San Francisco have always been a pretty good team. They have a super-star in Willie Mays and a long standing rivalry with another famous team, the L.A. Dodgers, that goes back long before their California days.

All of a sudden there are three major league teams fighting for the spectator's dollar within a radius of little more than 100 miles. The first noticeable casualty of this fight has been the California Angels.

The Angels were the first expansion team to settle in California. It was figured, and correctly so, that California could support three teams spread out along the length of the state. There were already two National League teams so an American League representative should have been well received.

Considering that they were an expansion club, the Angels did fairly well the first few seasons. Unfortunately they didn't get much better as they got older. The Angels also had some troubles with location. They had to share Dodger Stadium in L.A. for the first years until a stadium was built in Anaheim. Now they're settled in a beautiful stadium and a large population area but it hasn't done them any good.

The Angels had only eleven thousand for opening day and 17 thousand for a special "Patriotic" day celebration at which they gave away everything but the players. The team's management has offered a number of excuses like "the weather is just too cold . . ." The unpleasant fact is there are too many baseball teams in the area for the population to support. The remedies to the problem are an equally unpleasant fact for many people.

One or two bad seasons is not enough reason to move but a consistantly bad showing would be. If the new expansion clubs don't work out, perhaps they should move out of the state to new homes where they might be better appreciated.

Milwaukee wants a club; they supported one in the past and have a perfectly good stadium already built. All a prospective team would have to do is move in and play ball. Dallas wanted a club and so did Toronto and Vancouver. It might be wiser to spread these teams out so more people could see them. Baseball may be a sport but it runs on money like anything else, and there isn't enough money in that hundred-odd mile area in California to support three teams.

Tennessee Player-Coach Begins Officer Training

Terry Blair Bird, Elizabethtown, Ky., entered the Army after finishing a football career as a player and coach at the University of Tennessee. He is now an Officer Candidate in the 54th Co., The Candidate Brigade.

Candidate Bird was All-State and All-Conference football player at his hometown high school. As a result, he received thirty scholarship offers from different colleges, choosing the bid from the University of Tennessee, Knoxville.

At Tennessee, Bird started as an offensive guard on the varsity team for three years, during which he participated in two post-season bowl games, the 1966 Bluebonnet Bowl and the 1967 Gator Bowl.

Kline Hurls 7-5 Win In 55th Co. Opener

BY PFC James Swink
Candidate Brigade I. O.

Saturday Candidate William Kline celebrated the birth of his daughter by pitching the 55th Officer Candidate Company to a 7-5 victory over the 50th OC Company.

The Centurians of 55th Co. pushed across five runs in the first inning with the big blow being Dan Reimer's smashing four-bagger. The Centurians came back in the third and again in the fifth inning to score.

However, 50th Company's hopes were kept alive when it scored five runs on two errors and two walks in the third inning.

OC WILLIAM KLINE PITCHES 55TH CO. TO VICTORY

Leading the Centurian batting was Reimer who added two singles to his four-bagger. Second baseman Charle Harnden chipped in two singles with right fielder Michael Harper aiding the cause with timely hits and scoring the deciding run.

Centurian coach, 2nd Lt. John F. Mather, said "I feel the team played as well as could be expected, considering that this was our first game, and that we've only had one practice. We don't feel that this will be such a problem by our next game."

Guests of honor at the game were Col. Robert M. Piper who threw out the ball of the opening game, and Lt. Col. Dennis J. Harron. Col Piper is the brigade commander and Lt. Col. Harron is the 5th Battalion commander.

In other action, 53rd Company out scored 56th Company 14-13 in a scoring battle.

The deciding run was scored in the bottom of the 7th inning on a bases loaded sacrifice fly deep to left field. The 53rd Co. pounded out 16 hits while 56th could only dig up 10.

Whitacre Nabs 3Trophies Here

Marksmanship Tng. I. O.

Army marksmen showed power during the International Pistol Tournament at Fort Benning April 14-15.

SFC Robert Whitacre of the Marksmanship Training Unit was the man to catch as he ran away with three of the four championship trophies.

Whitacre won the Free Pistol championship, three points ahead of his closest challenger, SFC. Hersbel Anderson, 551 to 548.

He went on to down the hopes of SSgt. James McNally in winning the Rapid Fire Championship 296 to 294 and then he repeated himself in the Standard pistol championships by firing a 582 compared to McNally's 580.

USAIC's pistol team came out on top in the post, camp or station category by winning the Standard pistol team championship 2282, the Free Pistol team championship 2024 and the Center Fire pistol team championship 2300.

SFC Samuel Hunter of the Third Army Advanced Marksmanship Unit won the Center Fire match with a 588. SSgt. Marvin Black, MTU, was one point behind with 587.

MUT's Blue pistol team won three team championships by downing its competitors in the Free Pistol team match with a 2182, the Center Fire Team match with a 2355 and the Rapid Fire team match with a 1167.

MTU's second team, MTU Grey, won the fourth team match in Standard Pistol, with a 2298.

Jr. Bowlers Compete at Savannah

USAIC News Bureau

Fort Benning's Bowling potential was shown as twenty - four dependents brought home a total of eleven trophies during the Annual State Junior Bowling Association Championship Tournament in Savannah.

Norm Williamson was the top kegler, placing fourth in the senior boys all events division.

Kit Smothers and Jeffy Hall teamed together to take second in the girls team division and third in the girls doubles division. Kit went on to place eight in the junior girls all events division.

In the Bantam boys doubles division Robert Harris and Robin Harris teamed up to take fourth place. Robert placed ninth in the Bantam boys all events division and sixth in the singles division. Robin placed twelfth in the singles division.

The Benning bowlers were joined by bowlers from the Bowlarama and Victory Lanes. They traveled to Savannah by chartered bus sponsored by the American Junior Bowling Congress Association, the Women's Bowling Association and the Men's American Bowling Congress Association.

Mrs. W. E. Krilling, coach and chaperone of the Benning youth said, "This was the largest participation from Ft. Benning to-date."

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

There were two changes in the April fishing derby this week. Sgt. Robert Crossland entered an 8-pound 2-ounce catfish to go ahead in that category. He and Sgt. James Allen, who led last week, both caught their fish on doughballs.

SFC Robert Laac, Hq. Btry., 2nd Bn., 10th Arty. advanced in the bass category with a 6-pound 15-ounce entry caught using a black plastic worm at King's Pond.

SFC (ret.) Jack Maple still leads the bream race with his 18-ounce entry caught at Weem's Pond.

For the information of interested newcomers to the post, we'd like to explain the mechanics of the fishing derby. The Rod and Gun Club is sponsoring a monthly derby from April through October. Prizes are awarded the fishermen catching the largest bass, bream and catfish each month. To enter, you must be a member of the Rod and Gun Club, register at the club before going fishing, catch the fish from one of the post ponds and register your catch at the club upon returning. Those finishing fishing after the Rod and Gun Club has closed may register the catch the next day.

Incidentally, you can see the derby prizes any time you go to the club's main desk. They're mounted on the wall, ready to join your fishing gear after you hook the big one and win. Don't forget to register at the club, located on First Division Road about a quarter-mile south of Highway 27.

One of the most popular recreation sports on the reservation is King's Pond, located just east of Hourglass Rad on the Black Hawk Trail. The many acres around the pond that have been cleared and planted with grass are dotted with picnic tables and latrine facilities to make this lake popular for family outings.

In 1958, this 75-acre pond, the largest on the reservation was drained, cleaned and the shorelines deepened for more effective fertilization. Several small dams were constructed to eliminate swampy areas.

The pond was allowed to fill and was stocked with 75,000 bream, 30 per cent of which were shellcrackers. In 1959, 7,000 bass fingerlings were added and an intensive management program was started. Fertilizing, stocking and liming have been carried out each year.

Two stockings were made in 1967. The first consisted of 7,000 bass, 9-14 inches long, and the second, 850 channel catfish, 10-16 inches long. In 1968, the pond was stocked again with 1,900 channel catfish averaging three-fourths of a pound. The intensive management has resulted in steady improvement, and the fish population is in better condition than ever before.

You will increase your chances for success by using a boat. Rod and Gun Club maintains 24 boats at this lake. Rental fees are small. Just stop by the club and pick up a key, paddles, life preservers and any other fishing accessories you might need.

If it's catfish you are looking for, the place to go is Victory Pond. This 25-acre pond, located on Eighth Division Road approximately seven-tenths of a mile northwest of the intersection of Eighth Division and Hourglass Road, has a black top access road in excellent condition.

In June 1965, a survey conducted by the Bureau of Sport, Fisheries and Wildlife, indicated that this pond would be ideal for stocking catfish. In view of these findings, the pond was stocked with 50,000 channel catfish. A feeding schedule was initiated according to recommendations of the bureau. The fish have responded well and have grown to a size ranging from two to six pounds.

If you go to Victory Pond, be prepared for a big surprise. This year the Fish and Wildlife Management unit put 40 large flathead catfish each weighing over 20 pounds, into the pond to help balance the fish population. If you hook onto one of these monsters, in all probability you are due to lose some fishing tackle.

The one bad thing about this pond is that the number of days it can be open are restricted by the heavy use it receives from amphibious training conducted by the United States Army Infantry School. So be sure to check with Rod and Gun Club Headquarters before starting out.

COMPUTER CORNER ON SPORTS

By Bud Goode

What does the electronic computer predict in the way of a winner in the Western Division of the National League?

The electronic whiz went against the 8-to-5 proposition in the World Series last year. The Cardinals were favored. But Computer Corner said the Tigers had a slight edge, predicated on their batting power — and the added fact that 'luck' is important in a 7-game series. Curt Flood missed a fly — bad luck — and the Tigers won. The computer was right — won again.

How about the National League Western Division race? Here are Computer Corner's 1969 predictions:

TEAM	Estimated Runs	Opponent's Runs	Strength Ratio	Final R/OR
SAN FRANCISCO	650	540	1.23	1
CINCINNATI	700	630	1.11	2
LOS ANGELES	510	500	1.02	3
ATLANTA	590	590	.95	4
HOUSTON	550	560	.94	5
SAN DIEGO	500	650	.77	6

The San Francisco Giants look to have the best balance in the West. But Cincinnati is a potential threat. The Reds led the league last year in offense, scoring 690 runs. But — they trailed the league in defense giving up 673 opponent runs. Even so, Pete Rose and his hard hitting gang, finished with a 1.02 strength ratio, one game behind the 3rd place Chicago Cubs. Give Cincinnati some help with their pitching and they will challenge.

The Los Angeles Dodgers, by contrast, led the Western Division teams in pitching, allowing only 509 runs. They can be expected to stay close to this figure in '69.

But the Dodgers were the weakest hitting team in the National League last year, scoring a paltry 470 runs. Strong pitching but weak batting — no balance.

How many runs must L.A. earn to bring up their strength ratio to a winning 1.20 figure? With their present pitching the Dodgers must score close to 600 runs — 130 more tallies than they delivered in '68.

Can the Dodger offense improve 130 runs this year? Computer Corner's total strength progress chart shows that L.A. improved their position the last part of the season coming from a weak 14th on Aug. 20 to finish at 7th. Their added strength came from the hot bat of rookie, Bill Sudakis.

Can their rookies add 130 runs to the Dodger offense and put them in the race? If they don't then the Dodger's next big hit will be "New Faces of 1970."

OC Is Former Wrestler

Candidate Brigade I. O.

Officer Candidate Mickey Metzler wrestles with both people and books.

Metzler's college wrestling career was at Wabash College, Crawfordsville, Ind., where as a sophomore he had an 8-7 win-loss record and was voted the teams "Most Improved Wrestler". In his junior year, Metzler posted a 13-6 win-loss record and was Little State Champion in the 167-pound class.

He completed his college wrestling career with a 14-2 win-loss-tie record and was again Little State Champion in the 167-pound class. Today he is a candidate in the 50th Co. The Candidate Brigade.

Metzler equates wrestling with bayonet training. "A good wrestler must set up a series of movements. There is a counter to every move, and to be successful in the sport, the wrestler must know his own moves as well as be prepared to execute any counter."

Wrestlers also often go on crash diets in which they have almost no food or water intake. This can result in weight losses making them eligible for lower weight classes.

Metzler feels that these sacrifices create a team spirit. "This really develops willpower," he added.

Following graduation from Wabash, Metzler attended law school at Indiana University where he graduated and was admitted to the Indiana Bar Association before entering the Army.

Drawings Begin May 9

Destin, Fla. Vacations Available

The Special Services Office, U. S. Army Infantry Center, has announced the summer schedule for drawing and booking dates at the Infantry Center recreation area at Destin, Fla.

The Center has 12 cabins available at the recreation area located just off the Florida "Miracle Strip" about midway between Pensacola and Panama City.

These cabins are completely furnished and have all the modern facilities including air-conditioning or fan, television, cooking stoves, refrigerators and all needed cooking utensils.

The recreation area is operated primarily for active duty personnel; however, retired personnel, wives of active duty personnel not stationed on the post and other service personnel are accommodated on a space available basis.

In addition to the cabins the recreation area features a 38-foot deep sea fishing cabin cruiser, a water ski boat, two 16-foot boats and ten 14-foot boats. Motors may be rented for $2 a day or $1 for half a day.

The area also has trailer and tent spaces, snack bar, laundry facilities, picnic areas, barbeque pits and children's play area. Fishing gear and athletic equipment are also available.

Active duty personnel may arrange to have their names in the drawings by telephoning 545-5641 or registering at the Special Service Office (Bldg. 394).

Drawings will be held May 9, 19, 29; June 9, 19, 30; July 10, 21, 29; and August 8. Weekly bookings begin May 29 and continue until August 28.

Hq. Co., 1-29th Inf. Spikes 197th Volleyball Championship

By Marc Reiff
197th Inf. Bde. I. O.

In well executed championship form, Hq. Co., 1st Bn., 29th Inf. demolished Co. B, 4th Bn., 69th Armor, 15-4 and 15-6 to win the 197th Inf. Bde. Volleyball championship.

It was a fine team effort which enabled the 1st Bn., 29th Inf., to run its consecutive string of victories to nine. The play of Capts. Robert Winn and Steven Cook has to be singled out for their outstanding efforts. Putting the opposing team off guard with their spiking ability, Winn and Cook were a definite factor in the victory.

The first game became a runaway as the 4th Bn., 69th Armor was unable to stop the smooth team effort of the Hq. Co. Expertly hitting the ball to each other, they relayed it to just the right man on the third toss. The wide margin of victory shows just how well they handled the ball.

The second game was a must win for the 4th Bn., 69th Armor and though they tried hard, the 1st Bn., 29th Inf. was unbeatable Friday. Although losing 15-6, the 4th Bn., 69th Armor should still make a fine showing in the Post Championship as a runner-up representative.

Lt. Col. John Johnston, in the stands rooting for the 1st Bn., 29th Inf., was a cheerleading section unto himself and seemed to put extra spark into his team by his presence.

Members of the champion Hq. Co. team are Sgt. Henry Townes, Sgt. Phil Monfort, Sgt. Gene Peebles, Pvt. Pedro Diez, Pvt. Jose Rivera, Capt. Steven Cook, Capt. Robert Winn, and Capt. Paul Kaiser.

Both teams advanced to the Post Championship at Harmony Church Field House this week.

Armor Unit Hosts Scouts

GRAIC News Branch

The 4th Bn., 69th Armor, 197th Inf. Bde. held a Boy Scout outing day for Troop 39 and Cub Scout Pack 27 (Den 7) April 19 at Warner Range.

The boys were invited by Lt. Col. Robert H. Luck, the battalion commander to a picnic lunch and were given a chance to examine and ride M48A1 tanks. Four tanks and one Armed Personnel Carrier supplied by Company B were on display for the scouts to climb over, around and in.

LAW DAY USA

Thursday, May 1, marks the twelfth anniversary of Law Day USA. This day has been set aside by Congress and by Presidential Proclamation to remind us that adherence to the rule of law is essential in our society, and is basic to the welfare of every citizen and to the stability and vitality of the nation.

The theme for the observance of Law Day USA this year carries a timely reminder for all Americans:

"JUSTICE AND EQUALITY DEPEND UPON LAW -- AND YOU!"

It is appropriate, therefore, that on this day each of us at Fort Benning acknowledge our duty as citizens and recognize our responsibility to obey the law and to support the agencies of law enforcement and the courts.

I call upon each person at Fort Benning to give thoughtful consideration to the great rights secured to him under the law and to recognize the attendant duties and responsibilities these rights entail.

Money Hike Effective July 1, '69

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The automatic military pay increase provided by the Pay Act of 1967 is scheduled to go into effect July 1, 1969. Action on another plan, the Pay Modernization (Hubbell) Bill, has been postponed.

In a memorandum to the secretaries of the individual services advising them of this postponement Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird said.

"After consulting with concerned committee leaders in the Congress and the Bureau of the Budget, I find it is unlikely that action could be expected on the above program by July 1. I have, therefore, requested that action on the Pay Modernization Bill be postponed and that its provisions be thoroughly reexamined."

Laird added, "I wish to underscore my own personal interest in the importance of military pay and I wish to ensure that revisions recommended are equitable.

"As to timing, this means that reconnmendations for major revisions in the military pay system resulting from the initiatives of this study cannot be completed until July 1, 1969. Accordingly, preliminary data processing and related work underway in anticipation of installing a revised pay system that date will be suspended."

Application of the current law will result in a boost of military pay amounting to approximately 12.5 per cent of base pay. Details as to how the increase will be applied are being worked out. Funds for this military pay increase are already included in the Federal budget.

Proficiency Developed In Radio Mechanic Course

By 2nd Lt. John J. Meyer, III

A new start for young soldiers is offered by the Field Radio Mechanic Course (FRMC). Under the guidance of Senior NCO instructors these men develop skill and proficiency in repairing military radios. The instructors are highly qualified technicians and experienced soldiers.

"For many of these students this is their first chance to be a success," said Senior Insturctor Claybourne Harmon. "A good start here is necessary for their future success in the Army and as individuals."

The FRMC is tailored to the needs of the student with emphasis placed on the hands-on concept of teaching under close supervision by Instructor-Faculty Advisors. Assisted by the latest in classroom facilities at the Infantry School the student works throughout the nine week AIT course with the equipment he will use on the job. Step by step he gains the experience and proficiency necessary to cope with his future assignments.

Teaching electronics to students with such diversified backgrounds and ability places great demands on the instructor. Patience and understanding are his keys to success. Each student is treated as an individual challenge. To see a student make a new start and become capable of carrying his own weight on the job is a personally rewarding experience for an instructor and they take pride in their graduates.

"If you want to staff a shop with good men pick any of our graduates, said Harmon. "They are capable, dependable, and always willing to meet a challenge with the open mindedness necessary to operate in today's Army."

SFC Harmon speaks with the voice of fourteen years experience. Like most of the instructors with the Electronics Commiteee he has served in CONUS, USAREUR, and Vietnam with graduates from previous courses. The FRMC relies on this experience to provide a current and realistic rapport with the student and the response is evident from the students end-of-course comments. The challenge is appreciated and students graduate having made a strong start personally and confident in their ability to contribute materially to their assigned unit.

'Try Jumping Without Us'

Parachute Packing Unit Supplies Over Fifty Units

By Ben Cunningham
Combat Arms Lt.
er, Ala., Ft. Stewart, Ga., and Redstone Arsenal, Ala.

"Try jumping without us!" reads one of the mottos of The Parachute Packing Section, the supplier of parachutes to over fifty jump units. Included are all the airborne training companies of TRB. Some of the parachutes are serviced in Fort Lee Virginia away as Ft. Ruck- ia," says MSgt. Milton Farmer of that department. He also adds that in addition to the school each rigger is required to be jump qualified.

"The packing process is relatively quick and efficient to the men who have attended the three month Parachute Packing Maintenance April Delivery course at Fort Benning, Ga.," says Farmer, "they are taken to the 'Drying Tower' where they are allowed to dry if they have been exposed to any inclement conditions." At this point they are also examined by a packer to determine whether or not they should be sent to the maintenance unit for repair or modification.

If a chute is taken to the Maintenance Unit it is repaired by one of the 14 civilians who work in this area. After the needed work, the chute goes through another inspection by military authority. In addition to the civilian workers there are also 121 enlisted men and 3 officers assigned to Parachute Packing Section. When the chute is repaired or modified it goes to the adjacent building where the actual packing is done.

When the chute arrives here it is placed on a "parachute packing," where the layout man prepares it to be sent to the "packer." Here it is packed and tagged with the packer's signature. This is done in the probable event that a chute malfunctions. When asked about malfunctions Sgt. Farmer replied that "the rates (malfunctions) are extremely low, almost non-existant".

'Political Stickers Okay On Autos,' Says DA

The February 5 ban on the display of political stickers on automobiles operated by military personnel has been rescinded.

In February, the Department of the Army issued a message which said, "Display of political stickers is prohibited on automobiles operated by members of the Army while on active duty."

Confusion resulting from incorrect interpretations of this message and articles in the press incorrectly charging that it suppressed basic individual rights of freedom of expression caused the Army to change this policy.

Army regulation 600-20 specifically recognizes that members of the Army retain the "right to vote, to express their opinion privately and informally on all political subjects and candidates."

The Department of the Army has directed that the display of political stickers falls within the scope of private expression of political opinion.

Regulations prohibiting officers, warrant officers, and noncommissioned officers from trying to influence the votes of other members of the armed forces remain in effect.

IR Point Handles Troops

PFC Ben Cunningham
TSB-IO

"Last year 35,000 prospective paratroopers came through the Initial Receiving Point (IRP)" says Sgt. Willie Kimbrough, who is in charge of in-processing for the Airborne School.

This number is down from other years. One reason for this, according to Kimbrough, is the cutback in airborne divisions throughout the Army. "Most of the emphasis is now being placed on the new airmobile concept instead of the conventional paratrooper," said Kimbrough.

There are three men on duty when all new shipments of troops come in," continued Kimbrough. "It takes these three men about two hours to process in over 300 new troops."

The operation consists of a series of stations (tables) which the men go to in order to check their papers and be assigned to their training units.

Estes Named OCS Honor Graduate

By Pvt. George Burks
Candidate Brigade I. O.

Terry L. Estes (Hannibal, Mo.) was named the distinguished graduate of Infantry Officer Candidate Class No. 15-69 at graduation exercises in Marshall Auditorium here April 15.

For his achievement 2nd Lt. Estes received a letter of commendation from Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the Infantry School. He also received an Association of the United States Army (AUSA) plaque and an engraved "Follow Me" statuette.

The guest speaker at the graduation was Col. Francis P. Cancelliere, Treasurer of the United States Military Academy, West Point, New York.

The class included 142 new second lieutenants who, during the course, were members of the 63rd Officer Candidate Company, 6th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade.

Aviation Group Assists Scouts

Soldiers from the 10th Gp. assisted in the organizing and functioning of the Boy Scout's Pine Wood Derby held April 12 at the Columbus Municipal Auditorium. Capt. Edwin M. Frazier of the 177th Aviation Company spearheaded the 10th Gp. function.

Frazier who was appointed to General Sidney Berry's scouting staff was assigned the task of organizing the facilities and officiating the derby races. Frazier reported approximately one thousand cars from nine different districts were raced and that thirty-one trophies were awarded.

The Pine Wood Derby was rated as one of the best in recent years by the public, military personnel, and Chattahoochee Council.

Reno Enlists

Some people start things with a 'bang', but Spc Ronnie L. Reno got his six year enlistment going with one big roar.

He used an eight inch towed howitzer, one of the few left on active duty.

Reno, a member of Battery A, 2nd Bn., 10th Arty., and Fort Benning's Salute Battery whose men traditionally fire their own salute on reenlisting, pulled the lanyard last Friday just prior to the 10th Artillery's massive demonstration of artillery firepower at Ferguson Range.

During the ceremonies Lt. Col. Charles B. Tharp, 2nd Bn., 10th Arty., commander, gave the oath of enlistment to 21-year-old Reno who returned from Vietnam only last February after a year with the 25th Infantry Division.

Privates Are Temporary Commanders

For the first time in the history of Ft. Benning's Army Training Center, trainees were assigned to all the command slots during graduation ceremonies.

An Alexandria, Va., soldier, Pvt. James M. Wootton, acted as Commander of Troops for the graduating 10th Bn, 1st Training Bde., commanded by Lt. Col. Richard H. Thrower.

Members of the staff were Pvts. Charles F. Wadley, Co. B; Garrick Davis, Co. D; and Richard E. Marshall, Co. C. Marshall's father, Ralph Marshall, investigator, House Armed Services Committee, Washington, D.C., his mother, and brother, Brad, observed the graduation ceremonies at Kimbro Gym.

Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, commanding general of the Training Center, presented the American spirit Honor Medal, the highest award that can be received by a basic trainee, to Pvt. Drew L. Kershen, Co. C. Before entering the Army, Pvt. Kershen was a lawyer.

'Prisoner' Returns

because the meals were so bad. There was no food given to many of the prisoners. I lost 35 pounds during those last eight months.

"In addition, communication was cut off with my family. Although I found out later that my family was still writing every week, I only received two or three letters during my last eight months in prison," Rojas recalled.

The captain explained why the treatment of the prisoners became more severe as time passed. "The Cubans were trying to break our spirits. Any man who could command authority among the prisoners was separated from the rest of the group," he explained.

"The officers were taken away first. Then anyone who demonstrated any positive leadership was also taken away to prevent the possibility of organizing the prisoners' thoughts and actions."

Finally, after weeks of negotiations handled by the American Red Cross and private organizations, many of the prisoners were released by Castro on Christmas Day, 1962.

"The Castro regime had originally asked for tractors and other heavy equipment, but the exchange was made for 62 million dollars worth of medicines and baby food," Rojas explained.

"Those of us who had been prisoners so long were returned to Miami, where we were greeted by thousands of friends, relatives and generous Americans concerned with our well-being."

The next spring, under a special program inaugurated by President Kennedy, over 200 Cuban officers were given direct commissions into the various branches of the United States armed forces. Rojas was among these men.

He first came to Fort Benning in March 1962, where his Infantry Officers' Basic Course was taught in Spanish.

Since then, he has attended an English language course, the Military Personnel Officer's Course, a civil affairs and a military advisory training assistance course.

During his second tour at Fort Benning, Capt. Rojas served with the 197th Infantry Brigade as liaison officer for the Spanish-speaking Cuban officers in the brigade.

From March 1964 until July 1967, Captain Rojas was a Spanish instructor at the Defense Language Institute in California.

During his tour in Vietnam, which ended last December, Rojas served as a civil affairs officer with the regular and popular forces in the Binh Dinh Province.

The captain and his wife Emma, live on post with the three children, a son and two daughters.

Gen. Wright Thanks CTC

Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr. thanked both the members of Center Troop Command (CTC) and the people of the Columbus community for their assistance in fulfilling the mission of the U.S. Army Infantry Center during his farewell address to CTC on Monday.

After an introduction and welcome by Col. Charles H. Rederbaugh, Commanding Officer of CTC, assembled officers and men listened as Gen. Wright complimented the citizens of Fort Benning and the Chattahoochee Valley for standing behind the Infantry Center and the combat soldiers which it turns out. "They do support what we are doing," he said, and have "not distracted us from our job with demonstrations and protests."

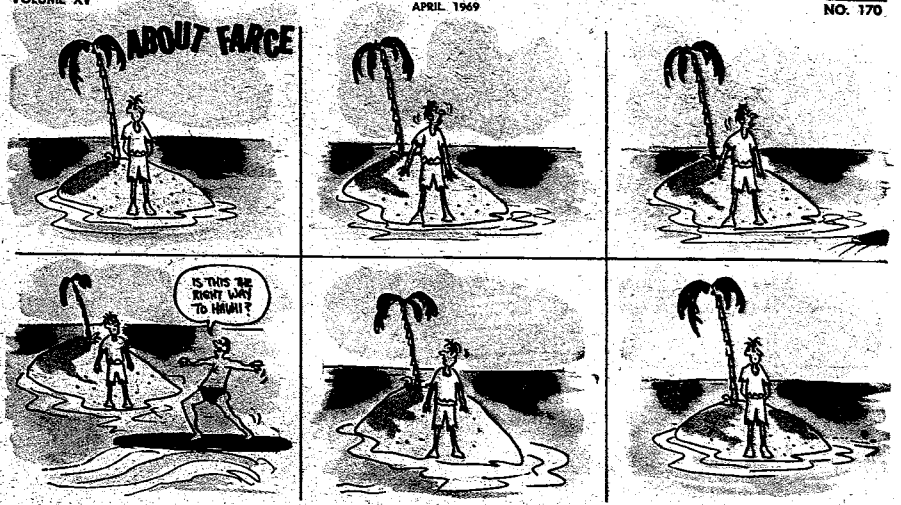
VOLUME XV — APRIL 1969 — NO. 170



HOPE HAS been entertaining warriors since the first two cavemen started throwing rocks at each other. Many other glamorous showbiz people carry mirth, melody and mmm! mmm! to fighting fellows far from home. They are justly acclaimed.

Less publicized are the little sports groups that regularly fly to overseas bases. They don't put on shows, they just visit around. Sometimes they're led by a fabled hero like Joe DiMaggio or a wit and story-teller like Joe Garagiola.

But you can't always have a Joe. Sometimes you have to settle for a Ron. And the Rons are very welcome, too.

Back from Vietnam and ready to spring train at hitting home runs and not-dropping-fly balls is Ron Swoboda, the star of the New York Mets if you don't count pitchers.

BASEBALL TALK-FESTS

Young outfielder Swoboda was in a group that spent half a month stopping in at hospitals, camps and outposts to chat with baseball bugs who happen to be in service uniforms. The others were Ernie Banks, Larry Jackson, Pete Richert, Al Fleishman and Bing Devine. (Ernie sure outranks Ron and all the rest as star, hero, pro's pro and blooming optimist, but we didn't get a chance to talk to Mr. Banks.)

Ron Swoboda, who isn't a blabbermouth and

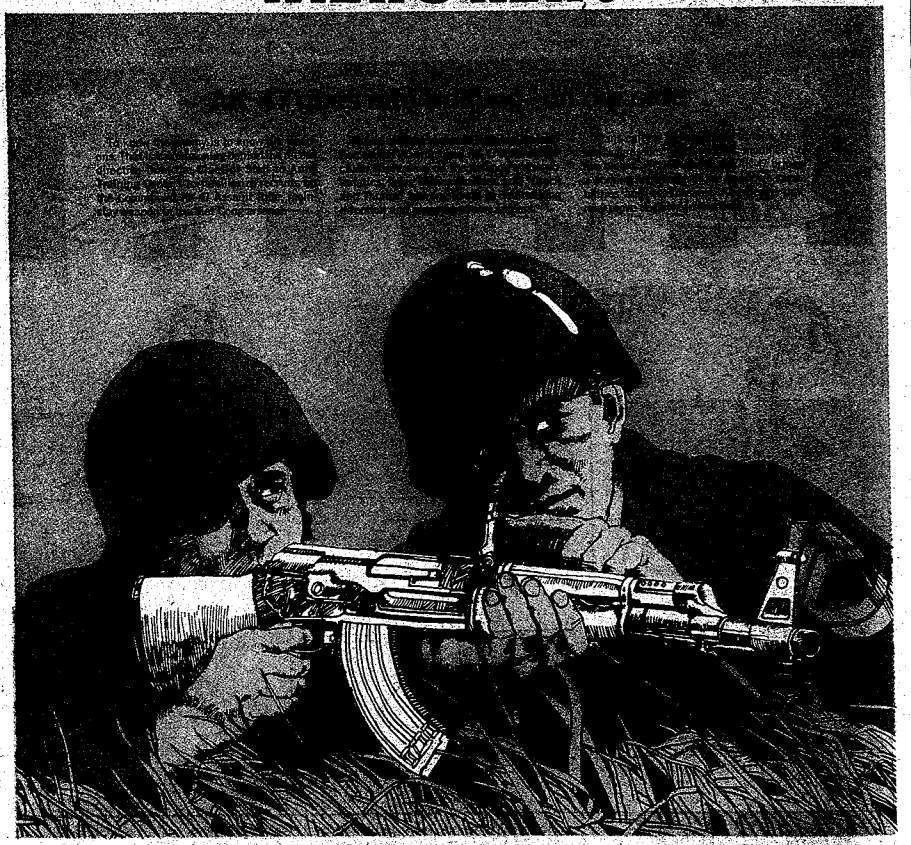
WHAT'S NEW?



State your preference for stateside

Now you can take advantage of a great reenlistment option that gives you a wide choice of stateside duty stations.

The CONUS Station of Choice Option makes possible a 12-month stabilized tour in the stateside area you want. All enlisted men and women in grades E-1 through E-6 serving anywhere overseas are eligible.

If you have 90 to 180 days left on a normal oversea tour, now is the time to take steps to get the stateside duty station you prefer. See your Career Counselor for all the facts. Check with him today so he can set things up for you.

Your future, your decision . . . stay ARMY.

Some pizzas are tough to cut...

Only Jeno's cuts so tender

What cuts easy, bites easy. That's Jeno's Pizza Mix. Jeno puts a separate packet of yeast in each box, so the crust you make rises so light and tender. And with Jeno's sassy sauce and savory herbs, there's no better pizza mix in town. Switch to Jeno's, and triumph over toughness. You'll enjoy the tasty tenderness of Jeno's, the Tendercrust Pizza Mix. Sausage, Pepperoni, Cheese or Plain. Double-Sizes, too: On your grocer's shelf.

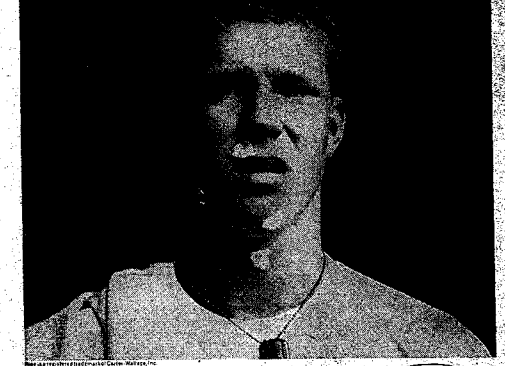
When you remove your beard you shouldn't remove your face.



Registered trademark Colgate-Palmolive, Inc.

Today's super-duper razor blades are meant to cut whiskers. They can also do a job on the skin underneath the whiskers.

To help keep you from butchering yourself—this is the reason for Rise.® And why we put a thin lubricating film into it that gets between your blade and your skin.

Put Rise on your face before you shave, and maybe you won't have to put toilet paper on your face after it.

THE GAME OF SEVEN GOOFS

These two cartoons have at least seven subtle differences. Check your findings with the answers printed upside down.

Solution: (1) The hole on the left over the shelf is placed more to the right. (2) The big hole to the left of the wall-bracket is placed lower. (3) At the corner of the wall the lower bar is bent. (4) The lamp is higher. (5) The wire of the lamp goes behind the picture frame. (6) The fingers of the man's left hand are different. (7) At the right there is a line missing on the bottom of the wall.

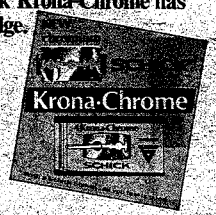
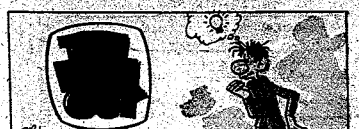
Super stainless is not complete protection against corrosion. This, for instance, is a corroded section of a plastic-coated Schick super stainless edge after five shaves, magnified 680 times. It's rough, pitted, corroded.

This is a section of the new plastic-coated Krona-Chrome chromium edge after five shaves, magnified 680 times. As you can see, chromium more effectively resists blade breakdown due to corrosion.

Only Schick Krona-Chrome has the chromium edge.





KICKING IT AROUND

...with Buck O'Brien

A past-30 father was baffled at first when he heard his kids raving about The Union Gap, The Doors, The Jefferson Airplane and such. After he learned they were musical groups, he developed a put-on of his own.

He'd bring home a flat package and announce, "This is the latest platter by The Credibility Gap." Or he'd pretend to have the newest disc by The Delaware Water Gap.

The kids enjoyed the game and decided old dad wasn't such a square after all. They looked forward to hearing about his imaginary rock singers such as The All Aluminum Screens and The Rickety Gates. Dad himself was particularly proud of following The Jefferson Airplane with The Gas Jet and The Teeny-Bopper Fokker.

But the game has its limitations since it's difficult to invent names that are farther out than the ones actually in use.

A friend of ours who goes by the name of Clocker Claude (he handicaps horses for the papers), suggests it might be fun to rate the mod minstrels the way he rates thoroughbreds. He submits this sample:

Beatles—they eat up the lettuce.

Doors—don't knock 'em.

Nitty Gritty Dirt Band—should clean up.

Banana Splits—a fine bunch.

Brooklyn Bridge—don't buy.

A buddy at the next desk who has a bald head and a bald chin ("It's a set," he says, borrowing a line from Abe Burrows) gets into the act with this list:

Animals—should be muzzled.

Rolling Stones—gather no moss backs.

Bee Gees—whatever became of Benny Goodman?

Rascals—throw 'em out.

Monkees—descended from man.

No matter what they called themselves, Baldy wouldn't like the long-haired lads of the now generation. He merely counts it as another point against them that they don't use human names for their combos. He fondly recalls the Andrew Sisters.

But, if he bothered to look through some of his old 78 rpm platters from the days when the record player was called a phonograph, he'd find some old names there, too.

How about the Ink Spots? The Revelers? The Kansas City Night Hawks? The Volunteer Firemen?

The Kittens, the Bob Cats, the Five Pennies and the Woodchoppers also were popular.

Many band leaders were not known merely to lead an unnamed orchestra. Thus there were Fred Waring and His Pennsylvanians, Guy Lombardo and The Royal Canadians, and Johnny Hamp and His Kentucky Serenaders. Tommy Dorsey had a band within a band, called The Clambake Seven. Times change, but not much.

So let's hear it out there for The Mound City Blue Blowers!

BLUEPRINT YOUR FUTURE

by Greg Frazer

There are tremendous opportunities for engineering careers in the world of today and tomorrow. Engineers are badly needed to meet the increased demand for goods and services in our country, and to explore the new frontiers that are being opened by peacetime uses of atomic radiation and solar energy.

Our population is expanding at a huge rate, and that means more and more products are needed to take care of the needs of these people. In addition, invention and research are developing new products and processes that need engineers.

Now, what qualities should you have to be an engineer? You should: Have the ability to learn and use mathematics. The desire and ability to retain scientific knowledge. The ability to consistently use the scientific method of problem solving in your everyday work—to see problems clearly and work out their solutions. Develop good study habits and be able to stick to a job or problem and see it through to the finish. An enquiring mind and the continuing desire to know "why" things work. The desire to want to improve products and processes you work with and the desire to want to learn to write and speak clearly and effectively.

While in the Armed Forces you have a chance to not only get needed credits for an engineering career via the many correspondence courses available to you, but to develop the study habits, skills and abilities necessary to get into the engineering school of your choice under the G.I. Bill.

An engineering career has many rewards and satisfactions. The starting pay is as high or higher than any other career during your first few years. Industry competes for good promising engineers just out of engineering school. Naturally, salaries depend on ability. The pay, however, usually increases with experience.

With the great advancement in the standards of living, there has been an expansion of business. A corresponding expansion has resulted in the field of engineering. Opportunities to advance to many administrative and management positions are there for engineers to take advantage of.

In engineering, you develop a personal satisfaction in your work. You can see tangible evidences of your work. You can measure your results and accomplishments. It has been pointed out that there are still many problems to solve, many curtains to raise. Engineers will design, develop and improve the goods and services you now use and will use in the years to come.

MEN WANTED NOW
TO TRAIN AS CLAIMS ADJUSTERS

Three recent I.A.S. graduates representing the three major branches of military service found new careers in the exciting, challenging and well paying field of insurance claim adjusting . . .

JOHN P. TROMBA, of Torrington, Connecticut enlisted in the U.S. Army in 1957, and as a Staff Sergeant in 1966 attended Officer Candidate School. While stationed at Ft. Bliss, Texas, Cpt. John Tromba began his I.A.S. training and upon the expiration of his term of military service John accepted a position as a claims adjuster with the U.S. Fidelity and Guaranty Insurance Company in California.

JOSEPH TALLARICO, former Senior Chief Petty Officer, USN, of Philadelphia, Penna., says, "INSURANCE ADJUSTERS SCHOOLS was a great recommendation for me. I am now employed as a Physical Damage Specialist by a large insurance company in New York at a good salary and a 69 Ford for my own use. I can look forward to three raises the first year and more frequent raises during the next three year period."

LOWELL D. WILSON enlisted in the U.S. Air Force shortly after finishing high school in Indiana at age 17. Almost 7 years later Lowell decided to return to civilian life and began his I.A.S. training. Thanks to "Project Transition" Sgt. Wilson was assigned to the Accident Investigation Section at Homestead Air Force Base which gave him some excellent experience while still on active duty. Lowell also attended Resident Training and even before his release from active duty he had received many job offers from insurance companies and independent adjusting firms. Mr. Wilson is now a claim adjuster with Employers Mutual Insurance Company in Nebraska.

Insurance adjusters and investigators are badly needed due to the tremendous increase of claims resulting from automobile accidents, fires, burglaries, riots, storms, and industrial accidents. Over 50 million dollars worth of claims paid each day. Top money can be earned in this exciting, fast moving field, full or part time. Work at your present job and train at home, then attend resident training for two weeks at MIAMI BEACH, FLA. or LAS VEGAS, NEVADA. Excellent employment assistance. For details without obligation, fill out coupon and mail today.

The little green shaver you can save a lot of green on.

The Norelco Flip-Top 20. It's green. To remind you of how much you saved when you bought it.

And to make sure you get a close, fast, comfortable shave, it has the famous Norelco Microgroove™ floating heads that follow the contours of your face.

And as if that weren't enough, it has flip-top cleaning, an on/off switch, and a handsome, rugged wallet.

Over there on the right is the Cordless 20B. It has flip-top cleaning just like the 20. And it gives you the same close, comfortable shaves. But there's one major difference. You never have to plug it in. It gives you 30 days of shaves on 4 little penlight batteries. Great for use in the field.

So no matter which you choose, Norelco is a shaver you can save a lot of green on.

would never be mistaken for Leo the Lip or Dizzy the Dialogue, managed to chat with the guys in the hospitals and in the outposts "because they wanted to talk baseball."

No doubt he gave them a lift and an autograph. Someday, if Ron tears National League pitching apart with home runs (he has the power) they'll have an all-star autograph.

A PHONE CALL FROM MOM

Meanwhile back at the ranch. Nobody in Vietnam has to be told how ballplayers come in and yak with them. But what about when they come back to the States? Swoboda actually got on the phone and called up relatives of the men he had met, as soldiers had requested him to do.

After Bill Russell made his TV acting debut as a cowboy, he was put under option by the producer who wants him for more roles whenever he can spare a few moments from his job as player-coach of the Boston Celtics. Bart Starr quarterbacked himself into an appearance on "Gentle Ben." Jim Lefebvre of the Dodgers was a mobster in a "Batman" episode. Outfielder Lou Johnson became a bandit in "Cowboy in Africa." Don Drysdale has been a video cattle rancher. Boxer Ernie Terrell showed up in the "Tarzan" series.

Jim Brown proved that an all-star running back can make it big in Hollywood. Chuck Connors proved that an assistant first baseman can do it, too. But talent scouts are missing a bet in not signing up more punters. Some of them are the greatest actors of all, the ones who flop after getting off a boot, writhe, moan and put over an Oscar-winning performance to get officials to call a "roughing-the-kicker" penalty.

RACING TIPS FROM THE STARS

Rigel Spica is author of the book, "Astrology and Horse Racing." He predicts when jockeys will have good or bad days, depending on the sign of the zodiac under which they were born.

Interviewed recently, he made a beautiful hedge by saying, "Of course, a jockey with the most favorable vibrations in the world can't carry an unfit horse on his back."

True, no doubt, but it would sure make a spectacular photo when he was trying it. ☆

Hollywood Movie Makers Return to Benning

BY DAVE LEONARD

Movie - makers have returned to Fort Benning.

John Wayne isn't here as he was two years ago, and the films won't be playing at local theaters, but the crew that is behind the cameras has all the earmarks of a big production.

Many Hollywood and television credits as it takes to produce a spectacular.

"We're stepchildren of the Green Berets," explained director Pat Fay with a big smile. "We're using some of the same

Fay and his crew from the Army Pictorial Center (APC) at Long Island, New York, are at Fort Benning for a planned three-month filming session, turning out action scenes for training films.

This week, after a month's work, the men have finished the first color film. The Army will call it "Hand grenades and the M79 grenade launcher;" the crew knows it better as "Pow!".

Monday morning the filmers showed this reporter where the title came from as they filmed a close-up of a bunker being put out of action.

"Here's the way it will go." Fay told the filmers and the soldiers used as extras.

"We'll start the cameras, I'll yell action, the machine gun will fire from the bunker, explosions will simulate small arms fire, then three bigger explosions will come at intervals, as simulated grenade rounds strike."

MP Saves Men In Auto Mishap

Pulls Man From Flaming Crash

By PFC James Doherty

A Fort Benning military policeman risked serious injury to himself in an effort to save the life of a soldier involved in a flaming automobile accident Sunday on Highway 27 near Babbit Road.

Military Policeman, Sgt. Robert L. Smith, was driving back to the Provost Marshall's Office with Sp4 James L. Hollingsworth after investigation of a routine larceny.

Pulling over, they stopped to offer a ride to a soldier waiting at a soldier pick-up point. A blue 1965 Ford sped by.

The Ford pulled into the left lane, apparently trying to pass a slower moving vehicle.

Then suddenly it spun out of control, swerving off to the right side of the road.

Smith and Hollingsworth watched the car skid across the top of Babbit Road underpass. It burst into flames when the gas tank and rear axle separated from the rest of the vehicle.

"We saw that two people were thrown clear of the car and that one was right in the path of the gas tank," the sergeant said.

The gas tank ignited and the man's clothing caught on fire.

Smith ran to the burning

At Miniature Retreat

Post to Bid Commandant Farewell

By Bob Mast

Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., commanding general of the Infantry Center and Fort Benning for the past two years, will be honored with a miniature farewell retreat May 9, prior to his departure for Vietnam on May 10.

Gen. Wright will review troops commanded by Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the Infantry School, at the ceremony hosted by Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, commanding general of the U. S. Army Training Center, Infantry.

Marching to the combined music of the 283rd and 291st Army Bands, troops representing the post's eight brigade-sized units will honor the outgoing general.

Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade will provide the color guards, while the 197th's Battery A, 2nd Battalion, 10th Artillery will comprise the Salute Battery.

Units represented include the 1st and 2nd Brigades of Army Training Center, 197th Infantry Brigade, The Candidate Brigade, The Student Bri-

ROTC Drill, Rifle Teams Compete Here

By SFC Richard Kemp

Junior ROTC cadets from five states are competing in a two-day rifle and drill team competition at Fort Benning today and Saturday.

Sponsored by the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the U.S. Army, the event consists of 110 students on 21 rifle teams and 365 students on 18 drill teams.

The competitors represent high schools in Tampa, Fla., Johnson City, Tenn., Camden, S. C., Camp Hill, Ala., and the Georgia communities of Macon, Savannah, Augusta, Atlanta and Columbus.

Most of the students arrived Thursday and were welcomed in Marshall Auditorium today by Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, commanding gen-man, later identified as Specialist-5 Robert Lee, (199 Infantry Drive, Columbus) and ripped the flaming clothing from his body.

"He was burned all over," Smith said. "His hair, his legs. Everything had caught fire when the gas tank exploded and his clothing ignited."

Smith next rushed to help Specialist-5 Julius Bussey (143 Barry St., Columbus) who had also been thrown from the vehicle, and another passenger, Specialist-5 Arthur Tollock (33 Peyton Dr., Columbus) who remained inside.

While Smith was treating the victims, Hollingsworth called for ambulances and fire trucks.

"It took only about ten minutes for them to get there," he said.

The injured men were taken to Martin Army Hospital.

Lee was immediately listed in serious condition. On Monday, a team of specialists flew from the Brooke Army Medical Center, Fort Sam Houston, Texas to examine him.

Lee was flown with the team Monday afternoon back to the Medical Center for specialized treatment, but his injuries were too serious and he died Tuesday morning.

Tollock and Bussey are still listed in satisfactory condition at Martin Army Hospital.

The three victims are from Company B, 43rd Engineer Battalion, U. S. Army Infantry Center Troop Command.

eral, U. S. Army Training Center.

The students were given a tour of Fort Benning today and will start competition at 8 a.m. Saturday. The rifle match will be held at Parks International Range and the drill teams will compete on York Field.

An awards ceremony will be held at about 1 p.m. Saturday on York Field.

Louis T. Kunze Jr., president of the local AUSA chapter, said almost the same number of competitors were entered in the 1968 event held here May 11 when 434 Junior ROC cadets on 22 rifle and 16 drill teams represented high schools in Florida, Tennessee and Georgia.

Rifle teams will be comprised of four firing members and one alternate. The matches will be held on the International 50-meter outdoor range using the international 50-meter target.

Drill teams will be comprised of not less than 12 nor more than 24 members. The teams will use both mandatory and unlimited (precision) drill movements.

The area AUSA chapter is supplying trophies and awards for winners in both team and individual events and is absorbing a portion of the travel expenses for each school, Kunze said.

DEMONSTRATIONS

1. How many men have been disciplined for taking part in antiwar activities: demonstrations or protests, publication and-or distribution of material, etc?

2. How many of these got less than court martial trials? What kind of punishment: How many tried? How many convicted?

3. What punishments were meted out by courts (general types of punishment, rather than case by case listings)? How many are awaiting action?

4. Would appreciate a terse summary of your regulations covering such activities.

The Department of the Army maintains no record of the number of instances of imposition of nonjudicial punishment or trial by inferior court-martial for offenses related to "antiwar" activities. On one occasion in 1968, the Department of the Army, in response to a Congressional inquiry from a Senator, polled Army commands worldwide to ascertain how many inferior court-martial convictions (summary and special courts-martial) occurred between 1 January 1967 to 1 September 1968 upon charges of promotion of disloyalty and disaffection among the troops or civilian populace, in violation of Article 134, UCMJ.

This inquiry revealed one conviction by special court-martial for such offenses. That particular conviction also involved charges unrelated to dissident activities. The sentence adjudged in that case included confinement for 6 months, but only 4½ months' confinement was served.

In 1968 of promoting disloyalty and disaffection among the troops and civilian populace. The gravamen of the offense charged was dissemination of statements critical of United States involvement in Vietnam. The sentence adjudged in that case included confinement for 4 years and dishonorable discharge for each of the two accused. The case is pending appellate review, which involves review of both the legal and factual issues of the case, as well as the appropriateness of the sentences.

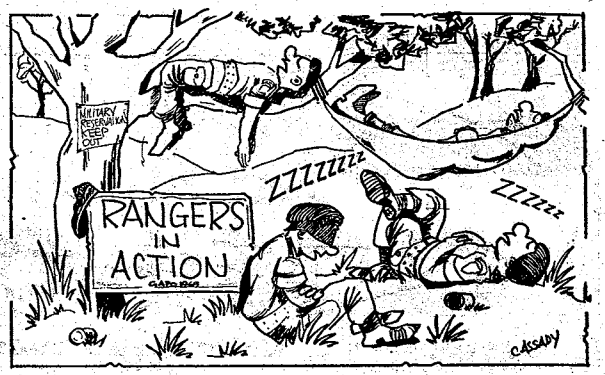
One medical officer was convicted by a general court-martial in 1967 of willful disobedience of orders and making statements designed to promote disloyalty and disaffection among the troops, in violation of articles 90 and 134 of the UCMJ. The sentence adjudged in that case included dismissal from the service and confinement for 3 years. This case and sentence was affirmed on review.

Another officer was convicted in 1965 of using contemptuous words toward the President, in violation of Article 88 of the UCMJ. The substance of the charge against this officer was that he participated in an anti-war demonstration carrying a placard denouncing the President of the United States and the Vietnam conflict. The sentence adjudged included dismissal from the service and confinement for 2 years, but the confinement was reduced to one year during review. This conviction was affirmed upon appellate review despite attacks on the constitutionality of the article of the Code under which the accused was convicted. The accused was released from confinement on parole 3 months and 2 days after trial.

Many military installations have promulgated regulations concerning the dissemination of publications on post. Distribution of publications contrary to such regulations exposes the serviceman to criminal liability for failure to obey a general order or regulation, in violation of Article 92 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice. The Department of the Army is aware of no instances of trial by general court-martial for such an offense involving distribution of antiwar literature.

One soldier was recently tried by summary court martial for such an offense, involving distribution of a petition requesting the installation command to meet with member of the command and discuss issues involving the war. This case resulted in the acquittal of the accused.

Eight soldiers stationed at Fort Jackson, S. C., were allegedly involved in an antiwar demonstration at that post on 20 March 1969. This incident and the soldiers involved is pending an Article 32 investigation, UCMJ.



Carcer Counselor's Corner

Special Intelligence is open to WAC's too

Three reenlistment opportunities are available to those with less than four years of service for pay purposes.

If any of these options appeal to you, call me on 545-REUP or visit us in building 1687 and we'll give you more complete data on the reenlistment opportunity.

Two of the three options are in the area of cloak-and-dagger work — Army Security Agency and Spe- while the third option is for the Army's Air Defense Command. The Special Intelligence duties— the way, is available to members of the Women's Army Corps, too.

Let's take a look at the options and see what they can offer you in the way of training and assignment.

The Army Security Agency is the command with the mission of providing electronic communications security in support of our national defense effort. It is possible to reenlist for ASA if you are trained or qualified for training in electronics, languages, communication and administrative fields. Among some of the positions you might fill with ASA are field radio repairman, Morse intercep- tor, fixed cipbony repair- man, radio teletype oper- ator, electronic warfare equipment repairman, gen- eral cryptographic repair- man, data processing equipment operator, or for- eign language interceptor.

To qualify for ASA you must reenlist for 3-6 years, be an E-6 or below, a high school graduate or equiva- lent and have a GT score of 100 or higher.

Duty Option

The Special Intelligence duty option is certain to satisfy those with a desire for something different. These duties include the reading, searching, filing, translating and interpret- ing of all types of infor- mation.

Individuals choosing this option will be doing vital work to safeguard Army operations, as well as functions aimed at deriv- ing information about the enemy's movements, his espionage, sabotage and subversive plans and ac- tivities.

Personnel entering this field will be trained as a military intelligence spe- cialist, area intelligence specialist or military intel- ligence coordinator. There is unlimited opportunity in this Special Intelligence area and men and women who show sufficient inter- est and ability may be se- lected as investigators or for technical and supervi- sory positions. Those with an aptitude for languages may also apply for special language training.

You'll not only find this option exciting but also challenging. It is open to men and women, E-6 or below, who reenlist for 3-6 years.

The Army Air Defense Command option doesn't deal in cloak-and-dagger work but it does involve an important aspect of na- tional security. As mem- ber of the Air Defense Command, you'll man one of the many Air Defense sites in the United States. These are the bases that protect the U.S. from air attack.

This option is open to men qualified for training as missile crewmen or fire control crewmen, Air De- fense operations intelli- gence assistant, or fire distribution system crew- men. The option requires a reenlistment term of from 4 to 6 years and is open to men, E-6 or be- low.

One of the bonuses of this option is that you may reenlist for one of the 21 metropolitan areas in the United States where Air Defense units are lo- cated. Not all areas are available but there are usually several areas from which to choose. In addi- tion to selecting your area of choice, you will be guaranteed a minimum of 14 months of service in that area.

We just touched the sur- face on the ASA, Special Intelligence and Air De- fense Command options. We'll be happy to give you additional information and start you off on your reenlistment processing for one of these three exciting options. Call or visit us to- day.

'Interservice Support' Discussed at Meeting

"Effective and Economi- cal Interservice Support" was the topic of discussion at the day-long meeting of 20 civilian and military representatives of the 13 military intallations in a Subgroup 31, Logistics Area III conference held here.

Col. C. W. Youngman, Infantry Center director of Logistics, welcomed the men and John L. Smith, general supply officer for the Directorate of Logis- tics, started the discussion.

While here, the visitors observed a quick-kill dem- onstration at Wagner Range.

Conferees included re- presentatives from Fort Bucker, Fort McClellan and Maxwell Air Force Base in Alabama and Fort McPherson, Dobbins Air Force Base, Moody Air Force Base, Warner Robins Air Force Base, Atlanta Army Depot, Albany Na- val Air Station, the Albany Marine Corps Supply Cen- ter and Fort Benning in Georgia. Also attending the conference were represent- atives from Third U. S. Army Headquarters at Fort McPherson and from U. S. Continental Army Com- mand at Fort Monroe, Va.

'Proudly We Hail'

Four History Periods Represented At Luncheon

By Bob Anderson
TSB

A program entitled "Prodly We Hail" was the highlight of a luncheon given by the wives of IOAC Class 69-2 at the MOOM Supper Club on April 24. Four periods of American History were represented by the narrators and their costumes. Mrs. Charles A. Carlton Jr., who wrote the Script, represented the colonial era and early Nineteenth Century America. She wore a long, black dress with a white wimple. She typified that era by saying,

"Faith in the principles of individual freedom and democracy helped sustain the Americans during the trying years of the Revolution."

Mrs. John E. Mirus' dress was reminiscent of "Gone With the Wind" represented the last half of the Nineteenth Century.

"In the North there was a boundless faith in democracy, a realization that the Civil War was not simply a contest between slavery and freedom, but a struggle to determine whether the American experiment in popular rule could survive," said Mrs. Mirus.

"At the opening of the Twentieth Century, the United States, one nation again, found itself emerging as a world power and President Wilson's slogan became 'We must keep the world safe for democracy,'" stated Mrs. John N. Smith. She wore a fringed velvet flapper outfit and represented the early Twentieth Century.

A contemporary dress worn by Mrs. Jerry K. Wall was the symbol of America since World War II.

"One lesson which the Americans had finally and painfully learned from the two World Wars was that their fate was the world's and the world's was theirs," stated Mrs. Wall.

Throughout the narration, a choral group of twelve wives under the direction of Mrs. Allan R. Simpson accompanied the speakers and enhanced the mood of the program by singing such patriotic songs as "Born Free," "Freedom Isn't Free," "John Brown's Body," "Over There," "Keep the Home Fires Burning," and others. Mrs. John S. Lualin and Mrs. John W. Johnson on the pianos accompanied the chorus and narrators.

Of special interest was Mrs. Geoffrey D. Withers own gilted harp on which she played a solo at the opening of the program.

The decorations committee headed by co-chairmen Mrs. William C. Massey and Mrs. Chad C. Payne carried out the patriotic theme.

The head table and front of the stage were draped in red, white and blue bunting of crepe paper. Arrangements of red, white, and blue flowers comprised the centerpieces. Several tables were decorated with ships, Liberty Bells, and small presidential dolls also representing different periods of the American past.

A gold American Eagle on glossy white paper trimmed in gold added a decorative touch to the place cards and invitations.

Door prize winners received gifts which reflected the theme of the event. Mrs. Karen Munford won a set of book ends, Mrs. Thomas G. Rhame won a replica if the Liberty Bell and the centerpiece from the head table went to Mrs. William Coomer.

Honored guests included Mrs. Sidney Berry, Mrs. E. C. Acuff, Mrs. Lon D. Marlowe, Mrs. Billy Vaughn, Mrs. Wilburt J. Thiel, Mrs. Wendell Doody, and Mrs. David Talbert.

Mrs. Paul H. Strang supervised the arrangements for the entire luncheon and Mrs. George A. Morgan assisted her.

TCB Captures Southern Spirit

By Lynette Herseim

In a scene recapturing the spirit of the Old South, two uniformed coachmen delivered a bemedaled colonel and his lady to the ball.

Honored guests at the gala affair, Colonel Robert M. Piper, commander of The Candidate Brigade, and Mrs. Piper, alighted from a horse-drawn banson cab, marking the start of the senior status formal of the 52nd Officer Candidate Company, 5th Student Battalion of the Brigade, held April 12 in the ballroom of the Fort Benning Officer's Club.

Voices, Friends From Past Honor Col. Wilbur Thiel

By Jim Doherty

"Lieutenant Colonel Wilbur John Thiel, This Is Your Life." So began a surprise "This Is Your Life" program held at the Fort Benning Officers Club April 26 for Lt. Col. Thiel, commander of the 2nd Stu. Bn., TSB.

Lt. Col. and Mr. Thiel were guests of honor at a graduation dinner for members of Infantry Officer Advanced Course No. 2-69.

THANK-YOU. . . Mrs. James Haise, modeling chairman, and Mrs. Gerald Cecil, sewing chairman present a certificate of appreciaton to Mrs. John Ferguson, first vice president of the Officers' Wives Club. Mrs. Ferguson also is in charge of OWC activities. The presentation was Surprise guests were Lt. Col. Thiel's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur F. Thiel of Pella, Wis., Col. John Swearingon for whom he served as a driver during World War II, and Colonel Ernest J. Cherney, executive officer, TSB.

Taped greetings were sent by Maj. Gen. John Mabry, presently commanding general, 8th Infantry, Republic of Vietnam, who was battalion commander of Lt. Col. Thiel's unit during World War II.

Other taped greetings were sent by the Thiel's oldest son, Staff Sergeant Michael J. Thiel of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 9th Infantry, Republic of Vietnam, Roy Elandt, a fishing companion from Lt. Col. Thiel's youth, and Les Ansorage, coach of the Marion (Wis.) High School basketball team which won a Class A State Basketball Championship with Thiel playing center.

Mrs. Thiel, the former Dolores Maleeg of Appleton, Wis. told of the early years of their marriage when the colonel worked in a cheese factory for 27 cents an hour.

Col. Swearingon narrated an account of his early Army career during the invasion of Germany and the occupation of Czechoslovakia.

Thiel received a battlefield commission in Korea in 1952.

He has since served as chairman of the Platoon Tactics Committee and executive officer, of the U. S. Army Infantry School, Company Operations Department at Fort Benning, and has had another Korean tour.

He will leave Fort Benning in May for Vietnam where he will be chief of the J-3 section of Military Assistance Command-Vietnam (Mac-V).

194th Birthday

AG Plans Celebration

The officers and warrant officers of the Adjutant General Corps plan to celebrate their 194th anniversary with a gala party on June 16, and need to get in touch with any retired AG officer or warrant officer who is interested in attending, according to Maj. Harold W. Spangler, Jr., the project officer.

"We aren't having any problems getting in touch with those on active duty," said Spangler, "but the retirement list we received from Third Army doesn't list by branch."

Any retired AG officer or warrant officer who would like to receive an invitation is urged by Spangler to contact him at 545-7894 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Mon.-Fri.

Many-Talented Supply Sergeant 'Can Do Anything'

Co-workers and friends of SFC Loretta Phoenix are not exaggerating when they say, "She can do anything!" This many-talented supply sergeant in the Army Training Center's Logistics Section turns out beautiful ceramic pieces and refinishes furniture with equal ease. She further fulls her spare time with wood carving, jewelrymaking and leather work..." almost any three-dimensional art form," Sgt. Phoenix adds in her quiet, casual manner.

"One Christmas I took some old fruit cartons, wire and wall paper and constructed a life-size snowman for the front yard," said Sgt. Phoenix. Then laughingly added, "Children going to school would stop by and pat it to see if it was real".

A former elementary art supervisor of schools in Manatee, Brandenton and St. Petersburg, Fla., Sgt. Phoenix also is well-versed in finger painting, tempera, soap carving, weaving, and papier mache as well as crayon and chalk drawings.

While in St. Petersburg her teaching included an art appreciation class at St. Pertersburg Junior College and papier mache instruction at the YMCA.

Her abilities have figured prominently in her military career, too. Entering the Army in 1963, Sgt. Phoenix was assigned to the Training Aids section, Ft. McClellan, Ala., where she prepared VUgraph masters, instructional flip charts and clothing layouts for military publications.

Later assigned as a draftsman to the U.S. Army Recruiting District in Chicago, she made scale models of recruiting displays that were used throughout 13 states. She also hand cut film for silk screen prints and made black ink line-drawings for photo processing.

While serving tours in Germany and France, Sgt. Phoenix saw many familiar art classics and took more than 350 color slides of famous sculpture and architecture. Recalling a visit to the Louvre, Sgt. Phoenix said, "I was surprised to see mummy cases in all different sizes. Somehow that detail had not occurred to me."

Reenlisting this month for six years, Sgt. Phoenix will have a total 21 years military service. Besides her sparetime art work, she has been busy with numerous extension courses. Holder of a bachelor's and master's degree in art education from Florida State University in Tallahassee, Sergeant Phoenix also has over 2,000 hours of accredited schooling since joining the Women's Army Corps.

At IOAC Luncheon

Native Dress of India Sets Fashion Theme

A fashion show featuring the native of India wa the highlight of the luncheon for the wives of IOAC 4-69 at the MOOM Supper Club April 23, 1969.

The show, narrated by Mrs. Yusha Verma whose husband is a major in the Indian Army, began with Mrs. Verma giving a brief description of the native dress of her land. She then presented eight costumes and gave a brief description of each.

The costumes included three types of Saris, a purple Ragebhani dress, a Gypsey or Bunjane dress and an Orange Bagali dress. Also shown was a Bunjai Slack Set and a Husai dress.

The costumes were modeled by Mrs. Jean Molnar, Mrs. Eva Brown, Mrs. Jane Alitz., Mrs. Mary Dargon, Mrs. Sue Curtis, Mrs. Claudine Bond, Mrs. Lon Centers, and Mrs. Clevo Brown.

Sitting at the head table as Guests of Honor were Mrs. Lon D. Marlowe, Mrs. Wilbur Tiel, Mrs. Wendel Dandy, and Mrs. Archemedes Pisano.

The luncheon was bosted by the wives of the 1st Platboon. Mrs. Margorie Wolfe served as general chairman. She was assisted by Mrs. Carol Blieber, who headed the decorations committee Invitations

OWC Holds Champagne Brunch

By Anna Axep

A champagne brunch which will be the final social event of the Fort Benning Officers' Wives' Club for the season will be held on Wednesday, May 7th on the Supper Club patio. The social hour will begin at 11:00 a.m. with registration being held in the lobby of the Supper Club.

Hostesses for the brunch are the members of the OWC executive board under the chairmanship of Mrs. Jackie Cummings.

Newly elected officers for the 1969-70 club year will be formally installed by Mrs. James Morris Jr., OWC president. After the ceremony the "Polka Dots" under the direction of Mrs. Robert G. Hertel, will present their spring concert to the membership.

Reservation are needed and are still being accepted. Deadline is Friday May 2 and cancellations will not be accepted after noon Monday, May 5. For a reservation call Mrs. Louis Boettcher, 545-4839; Mrs. Y. Y. Phillips, 545-7235 or Mrs. Earl R. Adams, Jr., 689-6533.

ATC Wives Hold Springtime Coffee

Feather "tulips" accented by Dutch figurines and miniature windmills graced the tables at a springtime coffee held by the Army Training Center officers wives Friday, April 25, at the Ft. Benning Country Club.

The hostesses were 6th and 9th Battalion wives who completed the scene with wooden shoes around the fireplace and colorful drawings of tulips and Dutch figures. The Holland mementos were loaned by Mrs. Thomas Hughes, Mrs. James Kofalt and Mrs. Donald Handy. Co-chairman for the coffee were Mrs. Handy, Mrs. Earl McCrary and Mrs. William Carter.

Special guests attending were Mrs. Llewellyn M. Murdock from Oregon and Mrs. Alvin Verboon of Indiana.

Newcomers welcomed to the Training Center were Mrs. Narveil Williams, Mrs. Edwin Frazier, Mrs. Donald Whiddon, Mrs. David May, Mrs. Glen Miller, Mrs. John Adams Jr., Mrs. Robert Morris, Mrs. Craig Sallee, Mrs. Theodore Kowalczyk, Mrs. Erik Bodin and Mrs. Daniel Schumacher.

Traditional Training Center charms were presented in farewell to Mrs. Harold Cook, Mrs. Dale Kemp, Mrs. James Buchheister, Mrs. Ramon Acosta, Mrs. Marion McCoy and Mrs. Michael Elfenbein.

PWOC Visit Nursing Home

The Army Training Center Protestant Women of the Chapel made its second visit to the Muscogee County Nursing Home Wednesday, April 23, to lead the residents in group singing and a short devotional.

Action Training Films Update Army Instruction

Back of one camera, Pete Voutsas, a 20-year veteran with APC, started his camera and zoomed in on the machine gun. At another camera, Pete's assistant, Jerry Calicchio, started to film the whole scene.

The "scene" was a sand-bagged bunker located in a pine-covered area of Diarida Range. Inside a soldier, protected from the blast by the bunker walls, manned the machine gun.

Zeke Myerson had planted the demolitions, and waited at the battery-powered detonator to activate the sequence.

Several hours of preparation would go into about 30 seconds of filming. Fay wanted to do it in one take.

Film rolled — the gunner fired — explosions shook the ground — smoke obscured the bunker — the smoke cleared, showing the bunker damaged, but intact. Film still rolled, to show the machine gun out of commission.

The action over, the gunner emerged from the bunker, dusted himself off and removed earplugs.

When those present get to see the final product after it leaves the editor's table, Fay figures they won't recognize it.

"First of all, it was a night scene," Fay noted. "It's too dark at night, so we shoot during the day. The film is balanced for indoor lighting and has to have a filter outdoors. Remove the filter, and you get the bluish effect. Underexpose a bit, and you get the night effect."

In the final film, the scene will be cut and interspersed with another scene shot earlier in the month. That shows a squad of soldiers moving through the woods falling prone and firing at an enemy position.

Grenade Rounds

The viewer will see the troops advancing, then switch to the bunker firing, back to the soldiers, and the firing of an M-79. The third round from the launcher will be the one to knock out the bunker, explained Ray Hash, Pat's assistant.

Nash, relative newcomer to motion pictures, bandied Voutsas' small personal camera during the explosion scene.

Nash formerly worked for a major New York photography studio, shooting with an 8 by 10 view camera. One of his assignments — with a smaller camera — was to shoot an official of President John F. Kennedy.

"We had several sittings, in Boston and at the White House," Nash recalled.

Filmed 'Unconquered'

Voutsas helped film the movie "Unconquered" starring Helen Keller, worked in filming newsreels, and rubbed the shoulders with more than a few of the big names in history and entertainment.

Voutsas recalled dealing with Lord Louis Mountbatten in the Far East during World War II.

"His personal photographer was intimidated by Lord Louie, and the fellow only shot him from behind," Voutsas said. "I got in front of him, got real tight close-ups, good shots. A photographer, and particularly a portrait photographer, motion or still, cannot allow himself to be intimidated by his subjects."

Voutsas, then in the military, received a Bronze Star for his service in the Burma-India-Siam area.

Fay, who tells is surprised audience that he's past fifty, was an actor and director in stage productions for USO during the war while Voutsas filmed the action.

After the war, he became one of the first three announcers with the pioneer DuMont network. Shows he worked with, mainly as a director, include "Bishop Sheen," "Captain Video" and the "Confession" series.

Later he spent six years directing industrial films for IBM before becoming involved as a free-lance director with Army Pictorial Center.

As a director his work centers on filming the scenes. The film is shipped back to APC and processed and edited there.

'Hands of Editor'

"No matter what we do, our life is in the hands of the editor," Fay said.

His first Army assignments included directing in the Big Picture series. "Strangely enough, I've filmed, maybe 15 of the Big Picture series and I've never seen on."

Along with the director and the cameramen are the "grips" and the prop man, Hubert Bland, Sam Montelbano and Phillip "Rosie" Rosedale. Each has their tale of Hollywood and the years they have worked there.

Coordinating the filming for Fort Benning is Maj. Lyle Teneyck, and coordinating on-the spot as technical advisor is Lt. Casper Nighobossian.

The films are being made to improve Army instruction by updating visual aid materials explained Maj. Teneyck, of the Infantry School's office of Training Doctrine and Literature, which is acting for the office of the Director of Instruction.

Films when completed will be stocked in Army film libraries to use in various training programs for units and in individuals.

80 ACS Volunteers Receive Service Awards

By Sp4 Frank Truchon

Eighty volunteers in the Army Community Services (ACS) program here Monday will receive approximately 115 awards in a ceremony at the Supper Club of the Fort Benning Officers Club.

The awards were presented by Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., Fort Benning commander.

Mrs. Raymond L. Kampe, volunteer supervisor, and Mrs. Robert VanDerLike of the public relations committee received certificates for 800 hours of service.

Amnng the other awards presented were 50-hour pins for those who have donated 50 hours of service; one-year pin guards for those who have given at least 140 hours of their time within one calendar year; two-year pin guards for those who have donated 140 hours each year for two years; certificates of appreciation to those completing 100 to 700 hours of service; and letters of appreciation for former committee chairmen. The pin guards are bars that attach to 50-hour pins.

In addition to the awards ceremony there was an initial orientation for approximately 70 new volunteers. Representatives from the offices of the Directorate of Personnel, the Adjutant General, the Staff Judge Advocate, the Post Chaplain, and the Post Surgeon presented their functions and explained how they relate to the Army Community Service program. Lieutenant Colonel Herbert G. See, ACS officer, Mrs. Kampe, and Mrs. Winston S. Kelley, assistant volunteer supervisor, also spoke to the new volunteers.

The mission of the Fort Benning Army Community Service, according to the official ACS progress report, "is the help make this post a better place to live for our military people, their wives, and their children."

In order to accomplish its mission, ACS depends in large part on the services of its volunteer staff, which numbers approximately 200 people. These persons, who donated 17,043 hours last year, work on one or more of the following committees: administrative, casualty, citizenship, emergency and transportation, food locker, welcoming, handicap, hospitality house, public relations social service and typing.

The tasks of these committees range from answering the telephone to helping handicapped children. The entire program can be summed up in the theme of ACS, "Self-Help, Service, and Stability."

Armed Forces Day Exhibits Various RVN Equipment

By Sp4 Frank Truchon
USARV News Branch

On May 17, Armed Forces Day, visitors to Fort Benning will be able to view a large number of displays of equipment and vehicles now being used by the Army in Vietnam. The exhibits will be on display at Stewart, Watson and Gardner Fields from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

On Stewart Field, the 197th Infantry Brigade will be showing tanks, armored personnel carriers, recoilless rifles, machine guns, howitzers and artillery weapons. Children will be able to take free rides in the APCs. In addition, there will be a radio communication system in operation for use by visitors and a demonstration of scout dog techniques. The dogs will perform basic obedience and negotiate obstacles.

The 197th Infantry will also demonstrate methods of dispensing chemical agents for riot control and will even have a bridge of the type in use in Vietnam set up on Stewart Field.

Lawson Army Aviation Command will exhibit two types of fixed-wing aircraft on Stewart Field. One of the planes, the T-41 Bravo (also known as the Mescalero), is a single-engine, four-seater training plane used to teach Army aviators to fly. The plane has a maximum speed of 590 mph. It can climb to an altitude of 17,500 feet and has a range of 590 miles.

The second type of plane is a U-6 Alpha (known as the Beaver). It is a single-engine aircraft which can be used to carry a load of cargo and four persons, or six persons without cargo. The plane has a range of 550 miles and has a speed of 115 miles per hour. Its ceiling with a load of cargo is 18,500 feet.

Those persons interested in learning about the training given to a soldier when he first enters the Army will be aided by the U.S. Army Training Center, Infantry. The Center will have drill sergeants and trainees at Stewart Field to brief visitors on the mission of the center and to demonstrate different phases of training. Trainees will demonstrate bayonet and pugil stick training, first aid techniques, quick-kill and Chemical-Biological-Radiological warfare training. Drill sergeants will explain each demonstrations to the visitors.

For persons interested in the types of transportation used in Vietnam, the 10th Aviation Group will be exhibiting helicopters on Stewart Field. These include the H-13 observation helicopter, a one-passenger aircraft also used for travel and coordination, and the UH1-D troop carrier, more popularly known as the Huey. The Huey, which is used for combat assaults in Vietnam, can carry a total of 11 persons plus two M60 machine guns at 115 miles per hour.

In addition, there will be two other types of helicopters on display. One is the UH1-C gunship, which carries twenty-four 2.75 rockets on each side and a 7.62 machinegun or a minigun. The other is the CH47 Chinook transport-cargo helicopter. The Chinook can carry 35 troops or 7,000 pounds of cargo and can cruise at 100 miles per hour. The ship is used in Vietnam for combat-support missions.

In addition to the exhibits already mentioned, the 10th Aviation Group will display three aviation vans of the type used for helicopter maintenance in Vietnam. Each of the vans specializes in a particular area of maintenance such as prop-balancing, sheet metal or lathe work. These vans are also used at Fort Benning on the helicopter flight line.

Sniping, a soldierly skill effective against the enemy in Vietnam today, will be the subject of a display by the Army Marksmanship Unit. Members plan to show how an M-14 rifle is modified for use in sniping and will have a weapon with a scope set up for visitors to view a camouflaged target in a tree 200 yards away. In addition, there will also be on display several small-bore rifles and pistols that were used by the unit in the last Olympics.

The Services Section of the U. S. Army Infantry Center, which includes both the Quartermaster and Transportation Branches, plans a variety of exhibits. For the Quartermaster Branch, these include a parachute packing and deployment demonstration; a food services display showing types of rations in use by the military; ration processing display describing the operation of the bakery and meat plant; including different cuts of meats; information on spot-bid sales of excess and salvage materials; a clothing display illustrating past and present types of authorized military uniforms; and a display on the work done by the laundry service on post.

The Transportation Branch displays include passenger movement of troops and dependents; household goods and freight; operation of motor-pool vehicle maintenance; the inspection of personal property movement; and various vehicles such as busses, sedans and two and a half ton trucks.

Dental care and facilities, past and present, will be the theme of the U. S. Army Dental Unit here. Pictures illustrating dental buildings, dentists at work on teeth, an early dental unit and a modern dental unit will show progression of Army dentistry and the way people at Fort Benning receive care on their teeth. A preventive dentistry layout of toothpaste, pamphlets on dental care and models illustrating uncared-for teeth will also be on display as will a dental van which provides stannous fluoride and cleaning treatments for all post school children. Finally, there will be a film showing dental facilities in the states and overseas.

The Youth Activities Club plans to set up displays showing the different types of activities that scouts are engaged in. These include, for Cub Scouts, such things as rock collecting, autograph collecting, and building bird-houses. Boy Scouts will feature camping, woodmanship, first aid, and survival. The explorers will display their interests in fields such as seamanship, communications, television production and criminal investigation. Scouts will be on hand to answer any questions on the displays and about scouting in general.

Armed Forces Day — a chance to see the Army and connected activities at work — will place Fort Benning on display to the civilian community. The public is invited.

Ceremonies Planned For Nation's War Dead

By Frank Truchon

Two ceremonies will be conducted here on Memorial Day, May 30, in commemoration of the nation's war dead. The first will be held at 10:30 a.m. at the Post Cemetery, and will be followed by another ceremony at 11:45 a.m. at the flagstaff in front of Infantry Hall.

At the cemetery, Chaplain (Major) Conrad N. Walker, Brigade chaplain, The Student Brigade, will give the invocation. He will introduce Brigadier General Oscar Davis, commanding general of the U.S. Army Training Center, Infantry and Mayor J. R. Allen of Columbus.

After completing their remarks, General Davis and Mayor Allen will place a wreath on the grave of an unknown soldier. This will be followed by a three-volley salute by the firing squad from Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry. After taps and a benediction, the 283rd Army band will play the National Anthem.

At the flagstaff in front of Infantry Hall, the American flag will fly at half-staff until noon, when it will be raised to full-staff for the rest of the day. During the ceremony the band will play "Ruffles and Flourishes," "The General's March" and the "National Anthem." Also during the ceremony Battery A, 2nd Battalion, 10th Artillery will fire a 21-gun salute.

Airborne Recon Unit Sets Trap for 'Charlie'

BONG SON, RVN (173d Abn 10)—When Sp4 Raul Santiago of Bowie, Md., first saw the figure clad in black pajamas intently watching his position he suspected his reconnaissance team was in for trouble.

It was nearly dark, and the 173rd Airborne Brigade Long Range Reconnaissance Patrol was deep within a Viet Cong infested mountain range along South Vietnam's north central coast.

"We didn't panic when we saw him though," said Santiago. "We figured he was probably a forward scout for a larger VC element, and we thought we could still find out just how big his unit was."

Unhurriedly, the LRP team packed their gear and moved toward a better location, hoping the suspected VC would follow.

Set in their new position, the four paratroopers furtively watched the enemy soldier and saw that he had quit following them and moved to a nearby streambed where he was signalling to a group they couldn't see.

"From the amount of splashing," said Santiago, "we figured they had a lot more men than we did."

Under the cover of darkness, the LRP's then moved into an even better location overlooking the streambed.

"We hadn't been there too long," said PFC Shayne O'Neill of Miami, Fla., "when we heard voices and could make out three VC crossing the stream" . . . "It appeared to be a patrol of some sort," added Sp4 Leslie Hatfield of Cape Cod, Mass., "probably looking for us."

"Suddenly this other guy came running toward us with his rifle blazing," said Team Leader Sp4 Mike Gayler of Mountainview, Ark.

"We shot him," said Hatfield, "and then everything broke loose." There was gun fire all over the place.

"We threw grenades all around our perimeter," said Gayler, "and then took off. O'Neill radioed in gunships and artillery as well as a helicopter to extract us, but it looked like curtains for us."

Hovering over the blackened jungle canopy, the helicopter had trouble in finding the team.

"It was impossible to land," said Gayler, "and we had to signal them with our strobe flash from our survival packs. Finally they dropped a rope ladder, and we scrambled aboard."

"It was a miracle," remarked Hatfield, "but we all made it back without a scratch."

FLY IT HIGH

Maximum display of the U. S. flag on Armed Forces Day, May 17, has been encouraged by Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., commanding general, U. S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning.

Standardized flag kits are available at the Post Exchange Toy and Garden Store.

Home delivery by local Boy Scouts can be obtained by calling the Youth Activities Center at 545-1585.

Even 'Losers' Honored in R&R Contest

By Sgt. Roger Rahl

SSgt. Jerry Luffman, Lester Hudson, and Alan Hildenbrand share the honor of not being selected as the one millionth man to go on R&R to Hawaii. But the fact that they were among the 18 men nominated for the honor is enough to stir pride within The Candidate Brigade.

"We are very proud of the men," says Lt. Col. Roddy L. Smith, commanding officer of the 7th Student Battalion, which produced two of the sergeants. He adds that, "we're also proud of the thousands like them who have come from the NCOC program and blossomed into fine combat leaders in Vietnam."

These three NCOC graduates were among 18 men nominated by Army units who selected them as being "the top soldiers in their command." The criteria for selection were high and encompassed everything from combat performance to character.

SSgt Luffman (Atlanta, Ga.), serving with the 25th Infantry Division, graduated from 73rd Co. (NCOC Class No. 30-68) last July. Three months after his arrival in Vietnam he was awarded the Silver Star for his valorous performance of duties in a night defensive action on the evening of Dec. 11, 1968.

Luffman, who is now serving as a platoon sergeant, was promoted to the rank of staff sergeant in February of this year. His first sergeant says about Luffman, "In my entire Army experience I have never met a finer soldier."

SSgt. Lester Hudson, (Point Pleasant, W. Va.) now with the 16th Infantry, graduated from 75th Company (NCOC Class No. 18-68) on April 16, last year.

While in Vietnam, he progressed from fire team leader to squad leader to his present assignment as platoon sergeant. He was awarded the Bronze Star for valor and the Purple Heart.

Staff sergeant Hildenbrand (Huntington Station, N. Y.) served as a squad leader and platoon sergeant in the 82nd Airborne Division. He is a graduate of 30th Company (NCOC 34-68) and has been in Vietnam since November of 1968. He was promoted to E-6 upon the completion of his OJT phase at Fort Jackson.

Red Cross Class For Volunteers

On May 6th and 7th, the last basic volunteer class unit next fall will be taught. Anyone interested in taking this course are asked to come to the Red Cross field house, Bldg. 1699 on Main Post on Mondays or Wednesdays between 9:00 and noon.

Message Center Digs Into 'Mountains' of Paper

Pvt. Richard Stirlen

How would you handle 50,000 pieces of copy a week? This is just one of the jobs of Center Troop Command's Message Center and Records Management section.

Under the watchful eye of Harry E. Wells, message center director, the center is responsible for a number of varied tasks. The message distribution branch is probably the best known, and acts as a clearing house for all correspondence going in or out of CTC.

For example, suppose a single piece of copy arrives at the center from main post and is to be sent to all the commands within CTC. First, copies must be made of the original and then sorted into stacks. Each command has its own subordinate message center, and each is given one of the stacks for final distribution to commanding officers and first sergeants.

Sp5 Larry Ade, chief message clerk, estimates that 10,000 pieces of copy move through and are sorted at the main center every day.

The center has its own well-equipped reproduction room, which does all the copy work for Headquarters, CTC, and prints the orders that pertain to CTC members. A photo copier, Bruning copy machine, and off-set press combine to reproduce about 4,000 more pieces of copy which are added to the list of items to be sorted and distributed.

Finally, the center's records management section keeps the files for CTC Headquarters. Not only must it maintain them in proper order and sequence, but it also sends out-of-date records to the retirement center.

Harry E. Wells, while serving as a sergeant major for CTC, re-organized the message center before his retirement in June 1962. He returned to work at Fort Benning as a civil servant in May of 1966, and, because of his experience in the field, was selected for the top post at the message center in June 1968.

How, then, does one handle 50,000 pieces of copy each week? Easily and quickly if there is a team like that at CTC's message center to do the job.

Col. Kurtz Wins Toulmin Medal

By Sp4 Frank Watson

Colonel Maurice K. Kurtz, Jr., commander, 931st Engineer Group (Combat), has been awarded the Toulmin Medal for 1968 for his article "Nuclear Excavation Research," in the periodical "The Military Engineer" for September-October. His work was judged the best article published during the year.

The medal is named for Col. H. A. Toulmin who, through his interest in encouraging engineers to write, founded the award in 1932. It is offered annually to the author of the article judged by a committee of top engineers as the best to appear in publication during the calendar year.

A graduate of the United States Military Academy, Col. Kurtz has received a Master of Science degree in Structural Dynamics from the university of Illinois and a Master of Science in military art and science from the Command and General Staff College in Fort Leavenworth, Kansas.

Col. Kurtz received his initial experience in nuclear engineering while serving at the Army Materiel Command with the Special Engineering Branch and the Nuclear Branch of the Military Scieoces Division, Research and Development Directorate in Washington D. C. Upon return from service in Korea, he served with the Army Nuclear Cratering Group at Livermore, California. The article relates his experiences there as director.

Naval Officer Begins Airborne Training Here

Lieutenanat Junior Grade Dorsey F. Morris Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Morris Sr. Columbus, Ga., presently assigned as naval gunfire liaison officer at Camp LeJune, N.C., came to Fort Benning last week for three weeks of training.

The Naval officer, who is currently serving on a Marine Corps base, began the basic airborne course at The U.S. Army Infantry School Monday.

Upon completion of the three-week course, he will return to Camp LeJune.

Lt. (j.g.) Morris entered the Navy in April, 1963.

93rd OC Company Adds Another Banner

By Sp4 Lynette Herseim

The 93rd Officer Candidate Company, 9th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade, added another banner to its guidon when it was presented with the Tiger Tactics award at Command Retreat ceremonies on Stewart Field.

The award, given for 93rd Company's performance over some 500 hours of the Company Operations Department of the Infantry School at the ceremonies on 15 April.

In tactics, the officer candidate is taught how to employ the small combat unit in both the attack and the defense. This training brings together all of the lessons learned in the earlier phases of OCS such as weaponry, communications and map reading, and applies them to realistic combat situations. Included in tactics are the employment of the mechanized, airborne and airmobile combat units as well as that of the "straight leg" infantry unit.

The training also includes an intensive, two-day field exercise in counter-guerilla operations.

During the presentation of the Tiger Tactics banner, Col. White commented that the Company Operations Department had been observing the 93rd Company since its training began some 19 weeks ago.

Radio Mechanic Course Is New Start for Soldiers

A new start for many young soldiers is offered to those selected for the field radio mechanic course.

The young man entering the Army today certainly has enough options available to him, however, arbitrary and devious he may think military assignment procedures to be.

The field radio mechanic course is one of those options and reviewed from the perspective of senior instructor SFC Claybourne E. Harmon, the amount of information the student takes away from the course is nothing short of "amazing"!

SFC Harmon, who is wrapping up nearly three years as an instructor with the Electronics Committee of the Infantry School, has helped guide some 5,000 radio mechanics successfully through the eight-week course.

He said, "I don't believe there's another place in the Army where a student can learn so much in so short a time. And the important thing is that what he learns here often forms a pattern for the remainder of his life".

SFC Harmon pointed out that similar courses are also taught at the Artillery School at Ft. Sill, Okla., and at the Armor School at Ft. Knox, Ky.

First Step

"Based on my own experience," he explained, "a number of our students come to us with just the barest experience in life let alone experience in the Army. For them the radio step in technicological exmechanic course is a first posure."

He added, "A good start here, particularly following the rigid patterns of basic training, is essential, we feel, to future success in the Army."

What does the radio mechanic do? How does he learn these important skills? SFC Harmon discussed some general concepts of the Infantry School course and how they fit the broader policies of military electronics maintenance training.

"This is basically a practical course," he stated, "Our emphasis is on doing; not so much on learning the theories of electronics."

Spectrum

As an MOS producing course, the radio mechanic course trains men to perform organizational maintenance on tactical communications equipment. In effect, the radio mechanic is the first man in the spectrum of communications maintenance echelons.

Policy guidance today in electronics maintenance training states that such training should be oriented to entry level personnel and centered on equipment.

SFC Harmon pointed out that the students are initially exposed to the basic test equipment and the literature they will use daily after leaving the course to join their units.

"From this starting base," he continued, "we take the students through a type transmitter and receiver we call the 'trainer'. This generally covers the first four weeks of the course."

The final four weeks of the course expose students to tactical radios and related communications equipment they will maintain in the field.

Asked about some of the problems typical to this type of instruction, SFC Harmon replied, "Well, I'd have to say one of the biggest problems, from the instructor's point of view, is the wide gap in individual student backgrounds."

Elaborating, he said, "Here at the Infantry School, we teach to relatively large classes. With a 100 man class it isn't the easiest thing to adjust your presentation and keep the interest of the man with a college degree and still keep the guy with an eighth or ninth grade education on board".

Meeting The Problem

"We have several ways of meeting this problem," he explained, "We can accelerate the students who grasp the material more quickly and move them into a more advanced class, or we can recycle students to a class just starting."

According to SFC Harmon, one of the biggest reasons for a student falling behind is a lack of motivation.

"This can stem from several reasons," he said. "One, for a lot of men, the return to school after basic and being out of high school one or more years comes as quite a shock."

In addition, the fact that the radio mechanic course is an AIT and in many cases students are arbitrarily assigned to the course creates a feeling that student desires were not considered in such assignment.

"A lot of guys simply don't make the effort when they learn they are in an electronics course," according to SFC Harmon. "I think it scares them a little, and this, plus the fact they have interests in other areas, leaves them a bit frustrated."

But how does one motivate the potential radio mechanic? In reply SFC Harmon said, "we don't in all cases. There are very few kids who pass through enrollment who couldn't make the grade; but we do drop about six or seven per cent of our annual enrollment for academic failure".

Lost Opportunity

He added, "I think it's a shame, really, but as an instructor you only have so much time in which to convince, motivate, the student, that this really is for him. The sad thing is the lost opportunity, particularly when you're talking to a lad who dropped out of high school, dropped the job corps, quit a job to enlist in the Army. It's then we realize, be just quit again."

The field radio mechanic course offers a tremendous opportunity to those young men fortunate enough to be selected for such training.

Whether the new soldier elects the Army or returns to civilian life on completion of his tour, he has, in eight short weeks, received the fundamentals of electronics maintenance that can, and will, open a wide, wide door as he develops his life's career.

SFC Harmon, as he departs for a new assignment, looks back with a justified satisfaction on the job he has done and the job his fellow instructors will continue.

"It's been fun...it's been rewarding," he noted. "I don't think there's a man who's been as effective instructor that wouldn't admit that it's one helluva satisfying experience!"

Hite Bowl: 'Back To Active Duty'

By Ken Sturzenacker
Dick Emerson
13th P. I. Detachment

One of the largest monuments to any single individual at Fort Benning has been brought "back to active duty" after nearly 25 years of disuse and neglect.

In a field graduation commemorating the renovation of the monument, 380 airborne students received their jump wings in Hite Bowl, near the airborne jump field.

Hite Bowl, an amphitheater constructed during 1942 and later named as a memorial to Lieutenant Colonel James Claiborne Hite, holds special significance for the Airborne Department.

Colonel Hite, a former commander of the 1st Battalion, 515th Parachute Infantry, died in a parachute mishap here in September 7, 1943, while giving a demonstration for an airborne class taking training at that time.

Used Extensively

Used extensively until the end of World War II for a variety of activities, Hite Bowl fell into disuse and was allowed to deteriorate.

The amphitheater, according to Haywood F. Bush, post housing and facilities officer of the director of logistics, was constructed in mid-1942 and renamed after the colonel's death in 1943.

The actual monument to Col. Hite is only 50 feet from the top of the amphitheater, and supposedly marks the spot where the colonel died. The Bowl and the monument are located about 200 yards off the northwest corner of Fryar Field in the Alabama portion of the post.

Bush recalled attending troop shows, movies, orchestra concerts and band concerts in the amphitheater, which was used primarily as a troop entertainment center during the 1940's.

Hite Bowl originally seated between 500-600 people on wooden chairs, according to Bush, who worked for the Area Engineers when the Bowl was built.

Several Similar

The amphitheater may have been built according to a standard Department of the Army plan, because in his travels to other military posts, Bush saw several similar to the one here.

Until two months ago, the Georgia brush and pines steadily sought to reclaim the amphitheater, covering it with vegetation. Pine trees, some close to 20 years old, grew through the Bowl's crumbling cement walls and terraces. The ruined orchestra pit filled with natural and man-made debris, including burned wood and charred torches. The underbrush and Fort Benning's "wait - a - minute" vines crossed and recrossed the once spacious stage.

All knowledge of the Bowl would probably have been lost in antiquity had it not been for the older members of the Airborne Department, who were at Fort Benning near the time of the colonel's death, and repeated chance discovery by bird hunters.

Side of Hill

The amphitheater is in the side of a hill bordering a large swamp area along Uchee Creek that provides a refuge for water fowl.

Despite its aging and ruined conditions, the theater was used as recently as November of last year, when the district boy scouts held their Fall Camporee in the Hite Bowl area.

The scouts built their ceremonial Camporee Campfire in the old orchestra pit, said Sergeant Lloyd N. Simpson, scout coordinator for the post scouting office. Prior to the event, scouts cleared off much of the underbrush and many of the small trees to make the theater usable.

At the end of the dirt road above the amphitheater, a fairly recent monument to Col. Hite stands on the hilltop overlooking old cement pedestal, the new brick structure is encircled by a chain draped from several wooden posts.

According to Airborne Department sources, the new monument was constructed in the early 1960's and supposedly replaces an older monument deteriorated beyond repair.

Clean Up

Colonel Lamar A. Welch, director of the Airborne Department, said plans had originally called for Hite Bowl to be cleaned out and ready for a commemorative sunrise service on Easter Sunday.

"We hadn't counted on the weather giving us trouble, and the work just couldn't be finished in time," he explained.

"So now the amphitheater will be used for our field graduation ceremonies, weather-permitting.

Major Henry Parkhurst, an instructor with the Airborne Department, said, "The reclamation of this area covered several phases. A bulldozer was brought in to remove the heavy stuff, and the airborne students themselves spent five weeks cleaning out the lighter undergrowth.

"The steps, the walls and the orchestra pit all had to be dug out from under 20 years of accumulated leaves and dirt.

"It was a major effort on the part of the students, and the class graduating here today had a large hand in making it possible," he said.

Sergeant First Class Chuck Winingear, who was in charge of getting Hite Bowl cleaned up, gave all the praise to the airborne students.

"All the work, including the new fences and the new signs, was done by the students, usually after they had finished making their jumps for the day. If anyone is to get credit for what's been done here in the last month, it goes to the students.

"They worked well, and they worked hard. We must have broken an average of two ax handles a day while clearing the underbrush and vines.

"The growth down there behind the stage was so thick, it took four days before anyone realized it all ended in a swamp."

In addition to the actual work on Hite Bowl, several new signs have been erected along the roads leading to the amphitheater; and at the top of the theater a large sign gives a brief history of the Bowl itself.

At First No Problem

According to stories told by members of the Airborne Department, said Master Sergeant Julian R. Guzman, chief instructor of the Pathfinder Committee, Col. Hite experienced no difficulty in his first jump. However, on the second jump, neither the main chute nor the reserve deployed.

Accounts of the details surround the parachute malfunctions differ, in spite of the presence of eyewitness reports.

Col. Welch said that Col. Hites parachutes simply failed to deploy, but that no reason was ever found for the failure.

"There is no truth to the legend that Colonel Hite was doing any special testing with parachutes," he said.

"Somehow, a rumor to that effect got started; and eventually, it was accepted as being true.

Rumors

"Major General Melvin Zais, now commanding general of the 101st Airborne Divison, who was stationed here at the time of Colonel Hite's death, tried to clarify the matter and top the rumors then (in 1943), but was unable to do so," the colonel explained.

It is highly probable that no one will ever know what caused the colonel's parachutes to malfunction, though the most persistent legend which has sprung up since his death offers one solution.

Despite denials that the colonel was conducting tests, the legend holds that he was using wet parachutes to determine the fasibility of jumping under adverse weather conditions.

Colonel Hite was 29 years old at the time of his death. He was a graduate of the University of Washington and one of the original members of the old 501st Parachute Infantry.

His death marked the sixth fatality in the first three and a half years of parachute training, as it was then known, at Fort Benning.

According to the September 9, 1943, issue of the Bayonet, which carried the story of the colonel's death, hundreds of thousands of successful training jumps had been made during that time.

The colonel came here from the 15th Infantry at Fort Lewis, Washington, on the request of Brigadier General George P. Howell, who at that time was executive officer of the first battalion of parachute troops to be organized.

He entered the service in Seattle, Washington, where he was an area director for the National Youth Administration.

TCB Marks Senior Status, Awards, Graduations

The 51st Officer Candidate Company, 5th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade began the OCS program this week. The 221 Candidates of the company, who had just completed the OCS "zero week" attended the traditional, opening-day orientation by the Brigade Commander, Colonel Robert M. Piper.

During their "zero week" the candidates put the company area into order, met their tactical officers, were informed of the details and practices that would be expected of them, underwent along with the routine in-processing, long and strenuous periods of physical training.

52nd Co.

The 52nd Company, 5th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade, has attained Senior Status recently. The 52nd Company was the recipient of the blue streamer which officially designates their new advanced status. The pennant was affixed to the company guidon by Colonel Robert M. Piper, the reviewing officer and commanding officer of The Candidate Brigade.

53rd Co.

The 93rd Company (OC), 9th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade, held its Senior Status Review on York Field Saturday, entering into the final phase of Officer Candidate training.

Colonel Robert M. Piper, The Candidate Brigade Commander, was the reviewing officer at the ceremony for the 184 candidates. He was also the guest of honor at the afternoon outdoor barbeque at Patton Hall.

Following the day's events, Senior Candidate Donald Sleeper, 93rd Co. Student Council President, and Mrs. James S. Frye, President of the OC Wives Club, acted as host and hostess to the candidates and their wives and guests at the reception in the company dayroom.

The evening party was highlighted by quarters entertainment of Senior Candidates, led by OC Samuel Tortorice.

5th Bn.

Three companies of the 5th Stu. Bn., TCB were honored April 18 at ceremonies in the 55th Co. mess hall.

Lt. Col. Dennis J. Harran presented awards for the Best Battalion Mess to the 51st Co., the Best Battalion Supply to the 52nd Co., and the Best Battalion Day Room to the 51st Co.

Awards Presented

Four awards were presented during a Retreat Review held April 18 on Stewart Field, for The Candidate Brigade at Fort Benning.

The First Sergeant of 52nd Company, 5th Student Battalion, SFC Coleman Lunsford was presented The Army Commendation Medal first Oak Leaf Cluster, for meritorious service in Vietnam.

Th Army Commendation Medal, first Oak Leaf Cluster, was awarded to S-Sgt. Earl W. Umholtz of Headquarters, 5th Student Battalion.

Sp4 Leslie Kimble, clerk of 66th Company, 8th Student Battalion, was presented the Bronze Star Medal for meritorious service in Vietnam.

Officer Candidate (OC) Robert Adamson of 61st Company, 6th Student Battalion, was awarded the Army Commendation Medal with first Oak Leaf Cluster.

Richard C. Arnett (Colvis, California) was named the distinguished graduate of NCOC Class Number 27-69 at graduation exercises in Marshall Auditorium April 15, 1969.

For his achievement, Arnett received a letter of commendation from Brig. Sen. Sidney B. Berry assistant commandant of the Infantry School, an Association of the United States Army (AUSA) plaque, an engraved "Follow Me" plaque, and a promotion to staff sergeant.

'Job Well Done'

General Wright Bids Farewell to 197th

By PFC Marc Reiff

In a personal farewell appearance before the 197th Infantry Brigade, last Saturday, April 26, General John M. Wright Jr. commended the Brigade for a "superb job."

Landing by helicopter and taking a sedan to the nearby Brigade Headquarters, General Wright was introduced by Col. John L. Strever Jr. the Brigade Commander, who said, "The word sad is used today in civilian life. Bnt in the military there is no room for sadness when a soldier leaves."

Presenting General Wright with a plaque on which the 197th Inf. Bde. crest and Battalion crests were placed, he went on to say, "The Brigade crest encompasses all the units in the Brigade, but it is the individuals altogether with which the army can be classified. These individuals make up the spirit and versatility of the Brigade. God speed, damn good hunting and safe return."

Stepping up to the reviewing stand, General Wright said, "My purpose in coming out here today is to say goodby to you and express my heartfelt thanks to the superb job you have done individually and as a Brigade. You are engaged in an important mission, that of producing the finest infantrymen in the world. Much of the credit in Vietnam is due to men standing on the field today. This job couldn't be done without the dedication and support of the 197th Inf. Bde."

Continuing, he added, "We depend heavily on the brigade accomplishing its mission. You have my heartfelt thanks for a job well done."

As the Brigade colors came to present arms, the General stepped down and walked back to the sedan which drove him to the awaiting helicopter. He soon disappeared over the horizon and will shortly be departing for Vietnam. But the words he spoke to the 197th Infantry Brigade stayed behind and will not soon be forgotten by the men who were there.

NCO Tells Recruits, 'Set Goal Out of Reach'

Eight years ago recruit John L. Thacker reported into a brand new Kelly Hill barracks to start basic training. Last month he reported in again — as First Sergeant.

Not the fastest rise in Army history but proof a soldier is only limited by his ambitions.

"Set your goals just out of reach," advises Thacker," and you'll always be climbing."

Realizes Ambition

This philosophy has helped him realize a major ambition, to hold every noncommissioned 'slot' in a rifle company.

When Thacker enlisted a new concept was being tried by the Army. His first unit, the 2nd Battle Group, 1st Infantry, 2nd Infantry Division, then at Fort Benning, had the mission of turning raw recruits into fully trained combat units. It was also during this period the young soldier formed his ambition.

"I attribute my success to the generation before me — the professional soldiers. They set the goal for me by their performance," says Thacker who then added. "Only through their leadership and abilities were we recruits able to form into a team in time to 'go' to Korea by June of 1961."

Returning to Fort Benning in October 1962 his ambition — that of holding every NCO position in Fort Benning's Honor Guard — Company C, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. — was finalized.

By March of 1964 he had achieved part of it and left for the 25th Division in Hawaii as a Sergeant.

"You don't have to blow your horn," he comments. "Just set the example and you will be recognized."

Shortly after joining the 25th's 1st Bn., 35th Inf., Thacker became a platoon sergeant and by November of that year took over the Battalion's radar section.

"You have to be able to adjust," reminisces Thacker.

That 'adjusting' saw the now 'professional' soldier volunteering as a helicopter door gunner and serving on temporary duty with the 114th Aviation Company in Vietnam until October 1965.

Back to 'Nam

He rejoined the 25th in Hawaii just in time to take a boat ride back to Vietnam. By now his radar section and the battalion's intelligence section had been formed into a reinforced reconnaissance platoon.

By September 1966 he had become that platoon's enlisted leader and now was assigned as the battalion's intelligence sergeant.

And in January, 1967, his second combat tour completed, it was back to home — Fort Benning's Honor Guard.

During the next year he realized all but the final step of his major ambition. By the time he became the battalion's training sergeant at the end of that year he had held every NCO position in Company C — except First Sergeant.

Last month his ambition was reached — he became Company C's First Sergeant.

Man Limits Self

Commenting about a young soldier's chances today of reaching his goals, Thacker says "a man is only limited by himself. However I think graduation from an NCO academy should be mandatory before a man is made a leader. His basic leadership traits can be brought out there and in those few cases, the unfit can be weeded out."

"It's too late after he has the stripes on," he added thoughtfully. Thacker speaks from experience gained from two such academies.

But Thacker's goal is still a little out of reach for he is still holding the rank of Sergeant First Class. Under present rules it will be three more years before he is eligible for E-8.

But then he still has 12 more years before retirement eligibility and goals can always be set higher.

Shakespeare, Mozert, Napoleon, Sophocles, All Present Sir!

By Lt. John F. Keever Jr.

Need to know anything about military strategy? Ask Napoleon. Or how about classical music? Mozert is the expert. Sophocles will discourse on the ancient theater. Elizabethan poetry is Shakespeare's bag. Ask Freud for a dream analysis and he will try to help you out.

Although this sounds like a sales pitch for The Great Books of the Western World, it is merely a portion of names from the roster of the 56th Infantry Officer Candidate Company, 5th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade. While in college, Bob Mozert and Bill Shakespeare were really business majors. Mike Sophocles was a law student; Leo Napoleon was a fine arts major; and John Freud specialized in political science. Nominally, then, these candidates are not what they seem, but that is all in the game of the name.

"What's in a name?" The 56th Co. roster has more to add to the name game. In a commercial vein, the list sports such people as two Fords, a Borden (dairy products), a Mussuiman (apple products), a Kroeger (grocery store chain), and a Katz (a drug store chain).

In a different category there is even a six-foot five-inch candidate named Stork.

In addition to all the famous names, there is some duplication which adds to the fun. There are two Smiths, two Campbells, four Johnsons, and four Williams, two of whom share the same initials, G. L.

What really is in a name? The 56th Co. may have the answer.

Billet Officer

An outstanding job rating was presented April 18 to Quentin E. Fagan, the billetting officer, Billetting Division, Headquarters Commandant.

The certificate accompanying the award praised Fagan for the construction of one extra guest house, six new cottages and an increase in the number of bachelor officers accommodated in Olson Hall.

The commendation, signed by Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., was presented by Col. Robert W. Seamen, deputy director, Directorate of Personnel, U.S. Army Infantry Center.

Presented Award

The commendation said that Fagan's "amiable personality and willingness to assist others have elicited many favorable comments from other activities and higher headquarters."

It further praised him for his "diligent approach."

Dependent Medical Care Slowed on Several Posts

A critical shortage of ical personnel, both military and civilian, in CONUS Army hospitals has forced curtailment of some medical services for dependents at several U. S. Army facilities in various parts of the country.

The shortage results from a sustained influx of patients and an insufficient number of medical personnel, primarily nurses, specialists and technicians.

Retired servicemen and other groups with lower priority for military care than active duty dependents are also affected by the new restrictions.

During this critical shortage period, dependents eligible for medical treatment will be issued certificates of non-availability by hospital commanders and will receive civilian medical care under the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services (CHAMPUS).

The CHAMPUS program generally calls for the government to pay a share of medical care costs. The proportion paid varies with the length and type of illness concerned.

Under CHAMPUS, the patient pays his share of the charges directly to the source of care — the physician, hospital, outpatient facility or pharmacy. The source of care collects the remainder from the government.

Eligible personnel seeking advice on the CHAMPUS program should consult their hospital registrar. A booklet containing additional details can be obtained by writing to: Department of the Army, CHAMPUS, Denver, Colo. 80240. Personnel in Europe should write: CHAMPUSEUR, U. S. Army Medical Command, Europe; APO 09403.

Third Army Service Club Seminar Meets at Kelly Hill

Tuesday, the Third Army Service Club program training seminar will take place at Fort Benning. Special speakers for the three-day affair, to take place at Kelley Hill Service Club include, Miss Verna Kriesel, Staff Director, Third Army; Lt. Col. Richard A. Sebenoler, SSO Fort Benning, and Col. Jim D. Keirsey, Chief of Staff, Fort Benning.

Ten topics will be discussed, including programming for the soldier, programming military community, planning procedues and time saving procedures.

Col. Keirsey, addressing the group, will speak on the responsibility of Special Services toward the soldier. The agenda of the seminar indicates the concern for providing a wide scope of activities.Pursuing this idea, Col. Keirsey commented, "even though funds may be limited, Special Services intends to find ways to help the serviceman utilize his free time to the best of his ability. I realize the job is not an easy one, but it will provide satisfaction and a sense of achievement (for the members of the seminar) when they realize their part in helping to make better, happier, and more responsible soldiers and citizens."

Continuing, he added, "A conference such as the one coming up, will give the members the opportunity to share their most successful ideas and as a result the total Third United States Army Service Club program will improve."

The mission of the Special Services is "to stimulate and develop and maintain mental and physical well-being of military personnel through their participation in planned recreation and morale activities," he goes on to say.

Among the other featured speakers will be Miss Corrinne Helland, the Post Service Cub Director for Fort Benning. Miss Helland will speak on program planning procedures, on Thursday, May 8.

Darwin Jaster Gets Direct Commission

Darwin H. Jaster became a captain April 23 when he received a commission in the Judge Advocate General's Corps.

The commissioning oath was administered by Col. Robert A. Lathrop, Staff Judge Advocate of The Infantry Center.

Captain Jaster received his B.A. degree from the University of Houston and his LL.B. from Bates College of Law, University of Houston.

He entered the Army in September, 1968, taking his basic training at Fort Polk, La., and Advanced Individual Training at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.

Jaster worked in the Infantry Center Staff Judge Advocate Section prior to commissioning.

MAH Dentist Promoted To Colonel

Lt. Col. Donald O. Lundquist was promoted to the rank of full colonel in ceremonies held in the Bernheim Dental Treatment Facility at Fort Benning on April 22.

Col. Lundquist entered the service on March, 1943, and received his commission in 1950.

During his Army career he has spent 75 months in overseas service, including a three-year tour with the 87th Medical Detachment in Germany from 1962 to 1965. Stateside stations include Madigan General Hospital, Tacoma, Wash., from 1958 to 1962 and Fort Dix, N.J. from 1965 to 1967. He came to Fort Benning in August 1967.

Freedom Shrine Presented To Post Children

By James Doherty

A "Freedom Shrine" of famous American documents was presented to the Fort Benning Children's Schools April 22 by Paul Morrison, chairman of the Americanism Committee of the Exchange Club of Columbus, Ga., and William A. Lyman, president of the National Bank of Fort Benning.

Morrison said he hoped the shrine would be "a living symbol of the rich heritage of freedom under God that we have here in this nation."

It reminded the students that the heritage of freedom includes duties and responsibilities as well as liberties.

Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., commanding general, U.S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning, accepted the shrine in behalf of the school.

Noting the dissension on American college campuses, Gen. Wright urged the students to emphasize the importance of God and traditional American freedoms in their daily lives.

"Never before have our people needed more to live by the ideas in these documents," he said.

The Freedom Shrine contains copies of 29 American documents ranging from the Mayflower Compact of 1620 to the Japanese Instrument of Surrender in 1945.

Printing Plant Proves

Printed Word Still Best Means of Information

In the era of computer programmed and closed circuit television instruction, the printed word remains one of the most valuable means if getting the lesson home to the student.

Meeting the yearly requirement for publishing the military texts and manuals used by more than 60,000 students here at the U.S. Army Infantry School and thousands more enrolled in correspondence courses, is the task of the U.S. Army Field Printing Plant, one of the oldest operations at this post.

Capable of producing 700,000,000 units a year, this establishment was formed in 1931 from elements of the Quartermaster and Engineer Corps and was placed under the jurisdiction of the commandant of The Infantry School.

It is a $1.1 million business using 2,000 tons of paper annually and requiring $500,000 for the cost of materials used.

To meet the increased workload experienced during the past three years, the field printing plant has had to expand its size and acquire new equipment.

To provide adequate working and storage space for the 10 men who sort, count, store and deliver 500,000 items each month, approval has been granted for a new warehouse costing $972,000 and providing 60,000 square feet at the present plant site.

Another new feature that will be installed soon is a $75,000 offset printing press.

Plant superintendent Collis Lehner (Columbus, Ga.), says he maintains a stock of 200 items ranging from acetate to wool to produce the training literature, maps, pamphlets and overlays needed by the Infantry School.

The veteran printer, whose 35 years in the field include 17 as a soldier, says currently the Infantry School receives 85 per cent of the plant's total output. Of the remainder, 10 per cent is for other activities of the U.S. Army Infantry Center (which encompasses all of Fort Benning) and the balance for other Third U.S. Army installations.

Commanded by Major Bill R. Boeckman (Oklahoma City, Okla.), the facility employes 90 civilian workers and 33 men in uniform. At least one-third of the civilian workers have been with the plant for more than 20 years.

The standard work time for completion of an order is 30 days but the printing plant has sufficient flexibility to react to the needs of The Infantry School on short notice basis.

"We are continually confronted with crash programs. For example, there are times when the final corrected information for a program comes in as late as four hours before the finished product is due," he said.

une Draft Will Take 25,900

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The Department of Defense has requested the Selective Service to provide the Armed Forces Examining and Entrance Stations with 25,900 inductees in June and has reduced the 1969 physicians and optometrists draft call by nearly half.

Of the 25,900 inductees in June, 23,900 will be assigned to the Army and 2,000 to the Marine Corps. This request supports currently approved force levels and will assure a timely flow of replacements for men completing their terms of service.

The 1969 medical draft call, announced on January 30, 1969, requested Selective Service to provide 460 physicians and 25 optometrists for the Armed Forces beginning in July of this year. An increase in voluntary applications for active duty has decreased the requirement from 460 physicians to 246, of which 13 will be doctors of osteopathy; and the requirement for optometrists has been reduced to 10.

Members of 2nd Bn. Unit Stand 'Second to None'

A new Army Training Center record has been established by members of Co. D, 7th Bn., 2nd Bde., with a company average of 62.93 on the end-of-cycle individual proficiency test. Col. Francisco J. Ramos, brigade commander, commanded the company in his address during the graduation ceremonies of the brigade's provisional battalion.

Instrumental in the company's achievement were Brian C. Moseley, Harry W. Mueller III, Donald B. Spangler, Anthony C. Sweat and Irvin L. Tankersley, each of whom received the maximum 67 points on the test. Pvt. Monte A. Creps, Co. E, 6th Bn., also achieved the maximum score.

The Silver Star was awarded to SFC Lemuel E. Morris, Co. D, 7th Bn., for gallantry in action by Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis. Gen. Davis also presented the Army Commendation Medal to S.Sgt. Walter M. Whalen, Co. B, 9th Bn., and to Sp5 Terry G. James, Co. C, 6th Bn.

Private Roy P. McRae Jr., Co. E, 8th Bn. received the American Spirit Honor Medal, the highest award that can be given to a basic trainee.

Lt. Col. Thomas A. Austin III, commanding officer of the 8th Bn., served as reviewing officer for the graduation ceremonies. He was joined in the reviewing stand by Maj. Willis R. Anderson, executive officer of the 7th Bn. Maj. Anderson retires April 30 after 27 years of military service.

Individual trainees who excelled during basic combat training received special awards from Col. Austin. The outstanding trainees of the cycle were Pvts. Riley M. Goss, Co. E, 6th Bn.; Harry W. Mueller III, Co. D, 7th Bn.; Timothy Campen, Co. E, 8th Bn.; and Clarence L. Thomas, Co. E, 9th Bn.

Nine soldiers scored the maximum 500 points on the final physical combat proficiency test. Co. E, 6th Bn., set a 2nd Bde. record with a company average of 435.77.

Capt. Timothy E. Sawyer, commanding officer of Co. E, 6th Bn., accepted the Brigade Commander's Trophy for his company from Col. Ramos.

Outstanding Drill Sergeant of the cycle was S.Sgt. David R. Marr, Co. E, 6th Bn.

Drill Teams to Compete On Armed Forces Day

By Frank Truchon

On Armed Forces Day, May 17, marching band and ROTC drill team competition will be held at Fort Benning on York Field from noon until 3 p.m.

High schools from throughout the Chattahoochee Valley which have band and drill teams or bands only have been invited to participate.

Band that will attend include M. Olive High School of Seale, Ala.; South Girard High School of Phenix City, Ala.; Tuskegee High School and Tuskegee Institute High School of Tuskegee, Ala.; Ethel Kite High School of LaGrange, Ga.; and Baker, Kendrick, and Spence High Schools of Columbus, Ga.

Drill teams that will take part in the Armed Forces Day celebration are Tuskegee Institute High School and Columbus, Carver, Baker, Hardaway, Jordan Vocational, Kendrick and Spencer High Schools, all of Columbus.

Each band will have a maximum of five minutes to perform whatever type of half-time program they desire. Each band will be rated on individual appearance, Unit appearance and uniformity, drill precision, alignment, intonation, balance, rhythm, and spectator appeal. First, second and third place winners will receive permanent trophies.

These events are part of the program planned for Fort Benning's annual Armed Forces Day open house.

The public is invited.

Cadet Anton To Lead ROTC Unit

Auburn University Army ROTC Cadet Lt. Col. William T. Anton has been named National Commander of the Pershing Rifles, a national organization of crack drill teams.

Anton, as National Commander, will transfer to the University of Nebraska and assume his new rank as Cadet Major General on June 1.

His selection was made by the 14 regimental commanders nationwide, the outgoing national commander, heads of the military departments and chancellors of the University of Nebraska.

Criteria for selection includes the individual's military and academic records, prior service to Pershing Rifles, and other qualities of citizenship and leadership exemplifying characteristics most symbolic of top military cadets throughout the nation.

Anton, a junior majoring in secondary education, was previously a student at Nebraska where he was a G-1 (personnel officer) on the Pershing Rifle staff. His father, Lt. Col. Andrew Anton, formerly of Fort Benning, was assigned to Vietnam. His son transferred to Auburn, becoming a member of the national staff at large.

At Nebraska, Anton received the Sons of American Revolution Award as the outstanding freshman military science cadet. At Auburn he has won the academic superiority ribbon for three consecutive "A"s in advanced military science. He is a member of PiKA social fraternity.

Organization Day Is Celebrated By 5th Student Bn.

By Lynette Herselm

A cheering crowd welcomed the Organization Day of the 5th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade, on April 25, in the battalion area.

Since its inception in March of 1954 the 5th Stu. Bn. has undergone changes that closely parallel United States involvement in international affairs.

The original program was designed to qualify personnel for a commission in the Infantry. This mission continues today.

As a unit instituted following the cessation of Korean hostilities, the 5th Stu. Bn. emerged on March 1, 1954, and subsequently assumed sole responsibility for Officer Candidate training at Fort Benning.

Although in 1956 it was reduced from five companies to three, which graduated six classes annually, the battalion was enlarged in 1963 to its present seven companies. However, one company remained inactive until December of 1966.

Program Expanded

Until the officer candidate program was expanded in October, 1965 to support the Army's leadership needs worldwide, the 5th Stu. Bn. remained the only Officer Candidate Battalion at Fort Benning. During the expansion period the 5th Stu. Bn. served as a prototype for the formation of four additional Officer Candidate Battalions. As a "base" for enlargement, the unit earned the unofficial title, "Old Guard" of the Infantry Officer Candidate Program.

Officer Candidate Class No. 9-54 was the alma mater of the current Battalion Commander, Lieutenant Colonel Dennis J. Harron. At that time his company was still known as the 11th Company. The title switched to 51st Co. in 1957, with OC class No. 2-57 of that year being the original 51st company.

One famous landmark of the 5th Stu. Bn. is Wigle Hall, site of the Infantry Officer Candidate School Hall of Fame, which was conceived in the late summer of 1957 by then Lt. Col. Waldron J. Winter, who was the Commanding Officer of 5th Battalion. The Hall has the purpose of honoring those graduates from Infantry OCS who have distinguished themselves in either Military or civilian life, and additionally to serve as an added incentive for officer candidates both present and future.

Building Dedicated

The building was officially dedicated on June 21, 1958 in honor of Second Lieutenant Thomas W. Wigle, a graduate of Infantry OCS Class No. 190 (1943), who distinguished himself in action near Monte Frassino, Italy, on September 14, 1944, for which he was posthumously awarded the Medal of Honor.

Of the 20 graduates of the Infantry Officer Candidate School who have been awarded the Medal of Honor, eight are graduates of the 5th Stu. Bn. These include Colonel John J. Tominac, who received the Medal of Honor for action in World War II; and Captain (now Major) Roger H. C. Donlon, Captain (now Major) Charles Q. Williams, Lieutenant (now Captain) Walter J. Marm, Lieutenant Robert J. Hibbs, Lieutenant George K. Sissler, Lieutenant James A. Graner, and Captain Joseph W. Grant, who received the Medal of Honor for action in Vietnam.

Games Held

The Organization Day games, held in the battalion area, featured basketball, volleyball, croquet, badminton, sack races, tug - of - war, a horseshoe toss, and a hand grenade throw. An afternoon basketball game was played between the 5th Stu. Bn. officers and the 54th Company Tactical officer, with the latter winning 34 to 17.

A steak dinner was served in the various companies of the battalion.

The reading of the battalion history by Senior OC Peter Berzins, (53rd Co) started the evening of live entertainment for the battalion guests.

Lt. Col. Dennis J. Harron spoke to the audience and welcomed the honored guests, Brigade Commander, Col. and Mrs. Robert M. Piper.

The Masters of Ceremony, Senior Officer Candidates, Joey Evans, and Gary Miller (53rd Co.) set the "Laugh In" show rolling with their singing and comic acts. The evening progressed with such vocal groups as "The No Names" of 56th Co. and "The Graduates" of 50th Co. Included in the Entertainment were folk singers, comedians, rock and roll combos and jazz bands.

Col. Piper awarded the three contest winners of the day with a ride in his Cessna Sky Hawk. The recipients were OCs Michael T. Mathies (60th Co.) Robert E. Jones (55th Co.) and Kenneth R. Osterling (54th Co.).

Advanced Inf Training Expansion Is Planned

HQ, THIRD U.S. ARMY, Fort McPherson, Ga. — Fort McClellan, Alabama has been selected to conduct the pilot test for expansion, from nine weeks to ten weeks, of Vietnam-oriented advanced Infantry training. General James K. Woolnough, Continental Army Command Commander, made the announcement during a visit to Fort McClellan April 23.

The test of extended Infantry training will place increased emphasis on land navigation and map reading, ambush techniques, night training, and technique of fire.

Fort McClellan's Infantry advanced individual training brigade will add one company to accommodate the test. The expanded training program has been prepared by the brigade, which is commanded by Colonel Chester R. Smith.

The first company to take the ten weeks training will begin on May 5, according to Major Dudley J. Budrich, Brigade S-3, and will enter the new portion of the cycle on June 23.

In the ten-week program, the first seven weeks and the last week will remain as currently being taught. The eighth and ninth weeks will consist of twelve consecutive days of field training. The trainees will be taught how, and afforded the realistic opportunity to live in the field.

General Woolnough said he recommended the increase in Infantry training following his recent visit to Vietnam.

CONARC plans a review of the expanded training in September after the fourth company has completed the new cycle.

Scholarship Is Offered By AUSA

By James Doherty

A $1,200 college scholarship is being offered to graduating seniors in high school ROTC programs by the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army.

One winner will be selected by a committee of the AUSA Chapter in coordination with the local superintendent of schools. The winner will receive $300 the first year, renewable for each of three remaining years, with the approval of the college professor of military science.

Applicants must show evidence of acceptance for enrollment at a four-year college offering ROTC and must present evidence of good physical condition, outstanding citizenship, and an interest in military service.

Application forms are available at all high school ROTC offices. The deadline is May 15.

Army Seeking Artists For Historical Painting

The Army Artist Program is seeking qualified artists to participate in its historical painting activity.

In the program there are 10 teams of three to five members each who are sent on a temporary duty assignment from the United States to Vietnam, Korea and Hawaii for a period ranging from 120 days to six months.

During their stay at these places the men are assigned to complete several oil or watercolor paintings dealing with combat situations, tactical operations and landscapes for permanent use as a historical record by the Department of the Army.

The program is open to all military individuals.

Linkletter TV Show Tour Makes Stop Here May 14

A military wife or dependent with an interesting story to tell may be invited to visit with one of the world's most prominent television personalities here May 14.

Synopsis

HEAD — The Monkees, (Mickey Dolenz, Davey Jones, Mike Nesmith and Peter Tork) that fast-paced young quartet, make their motion picture debut in "Head", a zany comedy with music. Featured players include Victor Mature, former heavyweight champion Sonny Liston, Annette Funicello and Green Bay Packers star Ray Nitschke. That's "Head" a turned-on wigged-out Technicolor release from Columbia that is clearly the most imaginative, entertaining and often sobering film of its type since the Beatles cornered the market with a "A Hard Days Night".

GUNS OF THE MAGNIFICENT SEVEN — Further exploits of the famed western band "The Magnificent Seven" and their efforts to free Quintero, leader of the Mexican peasants from the barbarous prison of Presidente Diaz' Mexico at the end of the 19th Century.

ANZIO — In 1944 Anzio made front-page news. Off-shore stood the allied fleet . . . the American and British invading forces . . . the hardware of war. On-shore . . . who knew what . . . Now . . . as it happened . . . one of the most momentous events of World War II comes to life on the street!

BULLITT — Not many freaky cops like Bullitt around. You look at the Italian shoes and turtle-neck and you have to wonder. You listen to the official beefs about "personal misconduct", "disruptive influence." You figure he's got to be up for trade . . . But when some rare Chicago blood starts spilling in San Francisco . . . they give Bullitt the mop . . . They weren't exactly doing him a favor . . . But they've done a great big one for you!

New Credit Union Opens Here Soon

The Infantry Center Federal Credit Union, at Fort Benning, in the process of expanding its facilities, will soon be moving to its new home.

The Credit Union, presently located in Building 1684, corner of Vibbert Ave. and Gillespie St., Main Post, will move during the first week of June to Bldg. 359 on Ingersoll St. behind the American Red Cross Building.

The Credit Union offers all types of loans on cars, signature, and real estate. In addition to the loans, it offers a savings facility paying 5¼ per cent dividends annually. Free life insurance is available to the 12,000 members of the organization.

The new facility will have a data processing system. Operating hours will be from 8:45 a.m. to 4:15 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The show, which attracts thousands of people from this area, including some of the best known horsemen in the Southeast, features competition for both adults and children.

This show is designed to give all an opportunity to exhibit these practical skills of horse and rider learned and practiced during the wioter months.

Following the horse show all exhibitors and their families are invited to a dinner at the Country Club at 7 p.m.

Roll-Off Produces Postal Team Roster

BY Sp.4 BOB MAST

A bowling roll-off Wednesday through Friday of last week (April 23-25), produced a team roster for the Third United States Army Postal Bowling Tournament.

Representing Fort Benning in the May 3-4 and 10-11 Third Army Tourney are Maj. Fred Stallans, 177th Aviation Company 10th Aviation Group; CSM Warren Paulk, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, The Student Brigade; SFC E. W. Plante, 524th Personal Services Company (Replacement), U. S. Army Infantry Center Troop Command; S-Sgt Otto Urban, Martin Army Hospital; S-Sgt. Mickey Webb, 48th Company, 4th Student Battalion, The Student Brigade; and Sp4 Arthur Warden, 177 Aviation Company, 10th Aviation Group.

Alternates for the tornament include Maj. Curtis Echols, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 6th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade; 2nd Lt. Vincent Busman, Weapons Department, U. S. Army Infantry School; and M-Sgt. Warren Hershman, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 10th Aviation Group.

Fifty post soldiers tried out for the team April 23. Six lines were bowled on April 23 and six on April 24. The team was cut to the top 20 scorers after these 12 lines. The team was cut to its final six men and three alternates after six more lines April 25. The team and alternates included the top scorers, in total pins, for the 18 lines.

Individual competitinn in the Third United States Army Tournament will be bowled May 3-4. Team doubles and all-events, a combination of singles and doubles, will be bowled May 10-11.

Fort Benning's team scores will be sent to Third Army Headquarters at Fort McPherson, Ga., where they will be compared with scores sent in from other Third Army posts, and the championship will be decided.

USAIC Shooters Set 3 Records

Team Wins CG's Trophie at 3rd Army Rifle, Pistol Match

Sp5 Calvin Jensen
Marksmanship Tng. U. O.

USAIC's rifle team set three new team records as the 1969 Third U. S. Army Rifle & Pistol Championships came to a close April 25th.

The six-man USAIC rifle team had to out shoot the defending record holders, the 82nd Airborne Division, who placed second in all three championships. The Infantry Center team fired a record 1707 in the Short range team match bettering the old mark of 1698. In the Long Range team match they fired a 1110 adding 14 points to the old record. Then in the overall team championship they set a blistering 2827 compared to the previous record of 2792 to win the Commanding General's trophy.

USAIC team members were 1Lt. David Cramer, SFC Clinton Stephens, SSG. Carl Hyatt, SSG. Jerry Peppers, SSG. D. carothers and SSG. W. Thomason.

The individual championship fell to SFC Raymond Course, 120th ARCOM, Raleigh, N. C. He fired an 1884. The novice category was won by USAIC's Lt. David Cramer with 1864.

Three other records were set during the match. Crouse fired a new record of 476 in the National Match Course. SFC Wilford Owensby, 108 Division fired a 198-7 adding five X's to the combined rapid fire aggregate and SFC Richard Tompkins of the Infantry Center set a new Slow Fire aggregate of 750, old record 726.

Pistols

The USAIC team keep their winning ways going during the pistol phase of competition. They wnn the .22 caliber team match with 1163, the .45 caliber team match with 1120 and placed second, behind the Tennessee National Guard in the Center Fire Team match.

USAIC pistol team members were 1Lt. Burton Milner, SFC Wilfred Pohl, SSG. George Duet and SSG. Donald Mathews.

Mathews, USAIC, won the Individual Pistol Championship with a fine 2821. His closest competitor was Sgt. Edwin Boucher of the Tennessee National Guard with 2607.

Mathews' teammate SSG. George Duet won the novice category with 2563 and civilian Thomas MacMurrian of Columbus fired a 2576 to win the civilian category.

Mathews won only one aggregate during his championship climb. He fired an 871 for the .45 aggregate. SGT. Boucher won the Center Fire aggregate with a 878 and Thomas MacMurrian ran away with the .22 caliber aggregate with an 888.

Junior Judo Players Earn Promotions Here

On April 23 the Cadet Judo Class of Fort Benning awarded its first promotions of the year. Seven students out of twenty being considered for awards, passed the difficult written and practical examination.

The degrees earned are as follows:

Gregory Branton-2nd degree
Cheryl Kelley-4th degree
Lynn Johnson-4th degree
Frederick Gutman-4th degree
Terry Patsos-5th degree
Janine Heal-5th degree
Terry Fitzpatrick-6th degree

Degrees available under the new Junior Armed Forces Judo Association Rank System range from 1st degree through 12th degree for ages 6 to 16 years. Students must qualify in technical knowledge of the spirit in Japanese and English as well as proficiency in the playing skill. Age is also a determining factor in earning a specific degree.

Trophys were received by the following students:

Best All Around Judoka-Terry Fitzpatrick

1st Place Breakfalls — Cheryl Kelley

Highest Test Score-Terry Patsos

2nd Place Breakfalls-Michael Mancini

Class members participating for three months received a Judo RAC patch to wear on their jacket. Another class for beginners will begin shortly. Anyone interested in participating may apply at the Youth Activities Office in Bldg. 338, across from the 7-11 shop on Rigersolt.

THE FORUM THE LOBBY

BY PAUL MANGIONE
Bayonet Staff

Lou Gerhig is gone, lost to baseball except for the Hall of Fame. He was the Yankee Iron Man, playing in more games than any other Yankee yet always in the shadow of his phenomenal team-mate, Babe Ruth. There is another ball player in the majors today who could be likened to Gerhig in just about everything, Billy Williams of the Chicago Cubs.

Billy has produced eight superlative seasons for the Cubs playing great ball when the Cubs rivaled the Mets and Wringling Brothers for the best traveling Circus around and in the last few years when they've done well. Through it all he has played like Gerhig, in the shadow of his team's star, in William's case, Ernie Banks.

Ernie Banks is Mr. Cub. He gets most of the newspaper headlines. When he doesn't get them, they usually go to the Cub's other great player, third baseman Ron Santo. Billy has had to look at the box scores to find his name.

William is a soft spoken guy who carries the proverbial big stick. "Ernie deserves all the fanfare he gets," he said. "When I go to bat the fans respond well and I feel it. But they're certainly not going to respond to me or Ron (Santo) the way they do for Ernie. We don't expect that."

Nevertheless, Williams feels the fans should be a little more appreciative of Williams. He's not bitter against the writers or the fans. He has said many times baseball is the best thing that ever happened to him. He even plans to play in his first world series this year. But nobody, particularly such as excellent athlete, likes to be taken for granted.

"I go out, day to day, to do a job. I do it and people begin to expect it as matter of fact. Hank Aaron of the Braves is in a similar situation."

Hank Aaron is a great ball player, like Williams, but neither one is a "colorful" player and both would admit it. It's not that they don't like the game, far from it. They don't possess the drive and outward enthusiasim of a Mickey Mantel or a Willie Mays. Williams has both but he doesn't show it the same ways.

"I am not a colorful ball player" he noted, "but I am a good one."

Billy is the only man on the Cubs who appeared in every game last season. The Cub's brochure states it very well. "Billy is the strong silent type. He says little, but does it all."

Bill feels that the writers have ignored him a little bit. Not that they have been unfair, Billy Williams doesn't call anybody names. He simply feels that he has been overlooked and understandably would like a little bit of what is coming to him.

If it appears Williams is a meek and overly humble individual that's the wrong assumption to make. He is indeed a soft spoken gentlemen quite and thoughtful. But ask the National League pitchers what they think about that big stick he carries. It does most of Billy's talking for him.

Williams is one of the most feared hitters in either league. He can pull the ball to both fields and, as he does with regularity, blast one out of the park. He is a consistent hitter who gets those important singles when the pressure is on. Clutch hitters are few and far between and therefore very valuable.

He is definitely a big man with the bat but that's not all. Billy Williams plays right field for the Cubs. He has for the most part been doing it for eight years and doing it exceptionally well. In 1968 he didn't have one error.

The second biggest pain that comes from lack of recognition, next to a hurt ego, is a hurt pocket book. The money goes to the colorful players. Of course the Cub management pays Billy well for his efforts, he's not complaining about that. The outside money, from promoters is what alludes him. People just don't know his name. Joe Namath reportedly got ten grand for shaving off his moustach. All Billy Williams gets when he shaves is a cut chin.

There is no doubt that Billy Williams as talented as he is, is not Lou Gerhig but it is always unfortunate when a great athlete and a fine man is over-looked just because he hasn't got a big mouth.

Computer Corner On Sports

BY BUD GOODE

Can the electronic computer help us pick the winners of the American and National League baseball races for 1969?

Last year the computer hit a homerun. On the opening day of the season "Computer Corner" tabbed the Detroit Tigers as the walk-away winners in the American League, and the St. Louis Cardinals in the National League. Both won.

Here are "Computer Corner's" predictions for the 1969 National League

Eastern Division:

TEAM	Estimated Runs	Opponent's Runs	Strength Ratio, R-OR	Final
St. Louis	630	500	1.27	1
Pittsburgh	630	540	1.17	2
Chicago	620	600	1.03	3
New York	520	520	1.00	4
Philadelphia	360	620	.90	5
Montreal	500	650	.77	6

How do you measure 'total team strength'? By simply dividing the runs your team scores by the number of opponent runs they give up, you get a good measure of team 'balance.' This ratio of Runs to Opponent Runs is almost a perfect measure of a team's offensive-defensive ability because it includes batting, pitching and fielding.

To win a pennant it takes a R-OR ratio of about 1.20—which shows the winners usually are 20 per cent stronger than the average team in the league. St. Louis was 9 games ahead of the pack last year with a 1.26 R-OR ratio, 26 per cent stronger than the average team. In '67 they won by 10 games with a 1.23 ratio.

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

By Bill Kloeb

Despite some real fine weather last weekend, the status of the fishing derby remained unchanged. SFC Jack Maple still leads the bream contest with his 18-ounce entry. SFC Robert Laac, Hq. Btry., 2nd Bn., 10th Arty., is ahead in the bass category with his 8-pound 15-ounce entry and Sgt. Robert Crossland still leads the catfish contest with an 8-pound 2-ounce entry.

In the spring of the year most bow hunters either store the archery gear or are willing to be satisfied with a quiet afternoon on the known distance or field range. But good hunting and practice can also be found in the spring and if you don't get in on the firing run or spawning of carp you are missing some real sport not to mention the invaluable practice of shooting at a live moving target.

Early each spring in late April and early May when the water temperature reaches from 60 to 65 degrees, carp begin to school and spawn. The marshes, swamps and shallows are soon teeming with fish. The spawning of carp is a noisy, turbulent affair with the fish wallowing on the surface.

Carp, during this period are not too hard to hit but are still tricky enough to present a good challenge. Beginners will miss many shots because of the excitement involved.

The type and draw weight of the bow are optional but most experienced hunters prefer a draw weight of about 40-pounds. One specialized piece of equipment is a must. A barbed or harpoon type arrow head easily removed from the shaft will save much time in removing the arrow from the fish. The arrows should be either metal or fiberglass. A large carp can break a wooden arrow with ease.

The Rod and Gun club now has 2889 members for the 1969-70 season and the number grows each day. Broken down, there are 2058 regular, 808 dependent and 22 limited memberships.

Limited membership in the club is available to civilian personnel who are not qualified to be regular members. Limited membership entitles the individual to use of the skeet, trap and archery ranges as well as the Clubhouse facilities. It does not entitle the individual to hunt and fish on the reservation. Dues are $8 annually. Applications for membership may be made at Rod and Gun Club Headquarters (Bldg. 4050) located on First Division Road approximately half a mile south of Highway 27.

If you should happen to be driving up Clark Road about 3 p.m. and see a ½-ton parked above the pond it will be well worth your while to drive over to the truck because in all probability the Fish and Game men are feeding the 15 to 20 pound surface eating catfish in the small pool above Russ Pond. It is something really worth seeing. The children will also enjoy the goldfish.

Bow fishing can be an exciting sport for the off-season archer and the headwaters of the Walter F. George Reservoir should be full of carp this weekend.

OWC Bowling Winners

The Officers' Wives' Club Bowling League members met recently at the Country Club for a champagne brunch which marked the end of the 1968-69 club season.

Mrs. Robert S. LaMonte, president of the league, and Mrs. Thomas J. O'Brien, trophy chairman, awarded silver trays to the first place team and various silver pieces to the next top five teams.

Individual awards were presented to Mrs. Alex Stewart Jr., high average of 161; Mrs. Nelson Newcome, high series scratch of 562; Mrs. Paul L'Homme, high series with handicap of 645; Mrs. Robert S. LaMonte, high game scratch of 228; Mrs. Orville Folkarts, high game with haodicap of 240; Mrs. Robert Graham, most improved bowler with 14 pins and Mrs. Robert S. LaMonte, best sportsman.

First place team winners were Mrs. Donald Miller, Mrs. Robert S. LaMonte, Mrs. Oswald Pennisi and Mrs. Ralph Henry, Team No. 3.

Last place team, No. 29 —the Ooo Ahs—were Mrs. Dilliam Pattison, Mrs. Conrad Walker, Mrs. Donald Magensen and Mrs. William Axup. For their undaunted efforts each received a last place champion towel.

Elections of officers for the coming year also was held. Mrs. Lyman B. Harris was elected as president. Those serving with her are Mrs. John K. Roberts, vice president; Mrs. Thomas J. O'Brien, secretary; Mrs. Myrtis Roach Jr., treasurer; and Mrs. Oswald Pennier, sargeant at arms.

Airforce Beats Army Twice to Take Title

MARINE CORPS AIR STATION, EL TORO, Calif. . . Army, defending its Interservice Volleyball title was beaten by the Air Force in the finals of the 1969 Championship Tournament, April 25th.

The black-clad soldiers finished the double round-robin tourney with a 4-2 record . . . both losses were to the Air Force.

On opening day, Army whipped Navy 15-9 and 15-7 before setting the Marine team down 15-12 and 15-7. J. L. Savage (Fort Ord, Calif.), M. D. McCain (Ft. Benning, Ga.)), led the Army team in the twin victories.

With two wins under their belts, the 1968 champions faced the Air Force. They were stopped 15-6 and 15-8, as Olympic team stars Highland and Stanley set each other up for several spikes.

The soldiers got back on the winning track in their next match as they hammered out two fast wins over Navy 15-6 and 15-8. They followed up this by again beating the Marine Corps team, 15-6 and 15-9.

In the tourney's final match, Army got off fast with a 15-9 victory over the blue shirted Air Force team. But, with Highland and Stanley and Pabst patrolling the net, the Air Force came back with 15-13 and 15-7 wins to clinch the championship.

The Theme of 'Airborne' Boxing Contests Is Spirit

By PFC Bob Anderson

"Airborne Boxing" sponsored by the 4th Stu. Bn. is scheduled to get into full swing at 7:30 p.m. ... [illegible] ... David L. ... [illegible] ... p.m. in the Boxing Arena at Brigade Headquarters.

"Since it was started seven years ago, the Airborne Boxing program has been a valuable extra in the 4th Stu Bn Department" stated the captain.

"To the Airborne students the boxing competition is a great morale factor because it develops an esprit de corps and a keen spirit of competition among the companies," according to Capt. Feagins.

"You don't need to be an ex-heavy weight champion to demonstrate your footwork or physical prowess, but you do have to be an Airborne student to participate."

The boxers sign up during the zero week phase of training and they box only during ground and tower weeks.

Training is conducted in the evenings, two to three times per week under the supervision of qualified coaches who are provided by the individual companies.

After the students have filled out qualifying forms, MSG Elmer C. Galloway, Battalion Boxing Coach, matches the contestants according to their size and ability. Each Wednesday at 5:15 p.m. Sgt. Galloway weighs-in each contestant and briefs them on the Friday night schedule. A schedule consists of twelve matches with three-three minute bouts per match.

In the past the boxing competition has been limited to enlisted students, but this season there are plans to expand the program to include student commissioned officers in bouts against each other. Previously, officers have been excluded from the competition but they did serve as score keepers.

Besides the value of just good fun and a sense of competition there is a tangible incentive for participating in the extra curricular fighting, the Battalion Boxing Trophy.

Army Rifle Team 'Traps' Top Honors at Lackland

The Army's International Trap Team took top honors during the 300 bird Lackland International trap match at Lackland, AFB, Texas.

The four-man army team from the Marksmanship Training Unit, Ft. Benning, broke 754 birds for the team championship. High shooter for the team was Sp5 Larry Stafford with 191 birds. Other team members included Sgt. James Beck, Sgt. Edward Leavendusky and Sgt. Gene Lumsden.

The individual contest was won by Air Force's Tom Garrigus with a 289. Despite Garrigus' win most of the attention of the match was focused on Stafford and Beck of the Army team, who ended in a tie for second, forcing a shoot-off. During the shoot-off Stafford broke 24 birds and Beck could only down 23 giving Stafford second and Beck had to settle for third.

The U. S. Army Running Boar Team established a new team record during the ISU-NRA Running Boar Matches at Lackland AFB, Texas.

The four-man Army team from the Marksmanship Training Unit, tallied a 2986 score over a three day period for a new team aggregate record. They totaled 118 points more than Air Force's second place finish of 2848.

Army members sweep all three individual aggregates. SFC Edmund Moeller won the Individual Championship with 759 points. Yeager of the Air Force was second with 752 and SFC John Kingetter, U. S. Army, placed third with 743.

Kingetter won the Normal Run Aggregate with 395 and Moeller fired a 367 to add the Fast Run Aggregate to his championship.

ATC PLAYER BLOCKS BALL
But Airborne Won Anyway

41st Airborne Takes Post Volleyball Title

The Airborne edged out Army Training Center's Special Training Company in a close contest for the 1969 Fort Benning Volleyball Championship at Harmony Church field house April 25.

After losing the first game of the final match by a score of 13 - 15, 41st Company (Airborne), 4th Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, snapped back and took the final two games with scores of 15-11 and 15-12, to remain undefeated and win the championship.

This was the second loss for ATC's Special Training Company in the double elimination tournament. The team's only other loss was to 41st Company.

The tournament started April 21 with nine companyteams from Army Training Center, The Student Brigade, Martin Army Hospital, Center Troop Command and the 197th Infantry Brigade.

Teams represented in the 16-match tournament included Special Training Company and 1st Battalion, 1st Training Brigade from Army Training Center; 41st Company and 3rd Ranger Company from the Student Brigade; The Medical Company from Martin Army Hospital; 968th Military Police Company and Company B.

Morris Awarded Silver Star for Gallantry

SFC Lemuel E. Morris has been awarded the Silver Star for gallantry in action by Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis during the graduation ceremonies of the 2nd Brigade Provisional Battalion at the Army Training Center.

Sgt. Morris was decorated for gallantry displayed on Nov. 1, 1968, while serving as battalion operations sergeant, 1st Bn., 26th Inf., 1st Inf. Div., at a night defensive position located west of Quan Loi in Vietnam.

The citation read "... At approximately 3 a.m., the camp was subjected to an intense rocket and mortar attack, followed by a ground assault by a numerically superior insurgent force. Throughout the attack, Sergeant Morris maneuvered about the treacherous area in search of wounded personnel. He repeatedly exposed himself to the hostile fire, as he personally treated five casualties and effected the safe evacuation of numerous others to a secure location.

"... On one occasion, Sgt. Morris braved the hail of enemy fire as he temporarily set up a radio antenna which had been knocked down by the explosion of an incoming rocket round. His selfless courage and initiative were instrumental in saving numerous lives and significantly contributed to the successful defense of the base..."

A native of Rogersville, Mo., Sergeant Morris, his wife and their three children live at 2721 Blan St., Columbus.

Sergeant Morris is assigned to Co. D, 7th Bn., as senior drill sergeant. He also has been awarded the Bronze Star, Army Commendation Medal, two Air Medals and the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry.

Plans Ready For Top Drill Sergeant Test

FORT MONROE, Va. (ANF) — Plans have been completed for the nomination, selection and recognition of the Army's top drill sergeant.

Details concerning the Stephen Alles Award for the "Outstanding Drill Sergeant in the Army" appear in the newly published Continental Army Command Circular 672-1.

To be eligible for the award, a nominee must have been assigned to a drill sergeant position for at least nine months as of June 30, 1969. He must also be a graduate of the Drill Sergeant School, be receiving proficiency pay and have scored at least 300 on the Physical Combat Proficiency Test (PCET).

Each Army training center is to nominate a drill sergeant. Each candidate will appear before a board in his Army area. One nominee representing each CONUS Army will then appear before a five-member board at Fort Monroe, Va., headquarters of U. S. Continental Army Command (USCONARC) for the final selection.

Army Chief of Staff General W. C. Westmoreland will present the award to the winner at a time and place to be announced later.

Soldier Gets Reprieve As NVA Rifle Misfires

"I saw what looked like a human form in the shadows," he recalled, "then someone said something unintelligible and put a rifle against my head."

Sp4 Rodney Aubut, an Americal Division soldier whose unit is under the operational control of the 196th Infantry Brigade, was walking point for Delta Company when a well defined trail had suddenly turned into dense underbrush northwest of LZ Baldy and he met the NVA soldier.

The AK-47 misfired. Aubut grabbed the weapon and took its North Vietnamese owner prisoner. The captive turned out to be a squad leader, and later under questioning admitted to an NVA ambush several meters ahead of Delta Company's position.

"It happened so quickly that I really don't know what went through my mind when I felt that firing pin hit," recalled Aubut.

Investigation showed that the primer had hit, but a dud round caused the misfire.

For Students

Dance, Awards Planned

A free dance for dependent high school students in honor of the winners of the Student Award Program will be held Saturday at the Youth Activity Center. Both the Student Award Program and the dance are being sponsored by the Fort Benning Officers Wives Club.

Ten $500 scholarship awards will be made by Mrs. James Morris Jr., OWC president at 7 p.m.

There will be dance music by the Wheatstone Mission from Georgia Southern College.

Supply Unit Turns In 'Best' Effort

"It's the best unit I've rated in the battalion so far." This was how one umpire described the performance of Company C of the 56th Supply and Service Battalion, Center Troop Commands, after their recent Field Training Exercise (FTX).

Wednesday morning, April 23rd, an advance party under the command of 2 Lieutenant Thomas R. Sundeen moved to the vicinity of Midwest and Sunset Roads to secure a defensive perimeter. Shortly thereafter, Company C's main body, under the direction of 1st Lieutenant Joseph G. Halusky, arrived at the site and began to deploy into defensive positions. Since the primary objective of the FTX was to defend their encampment and equipment against hostile forces, Company C was subject to constant harassment.

During an afternoon battle, the defenders captured the entire aggressor force, including their truck and ammunition supply.

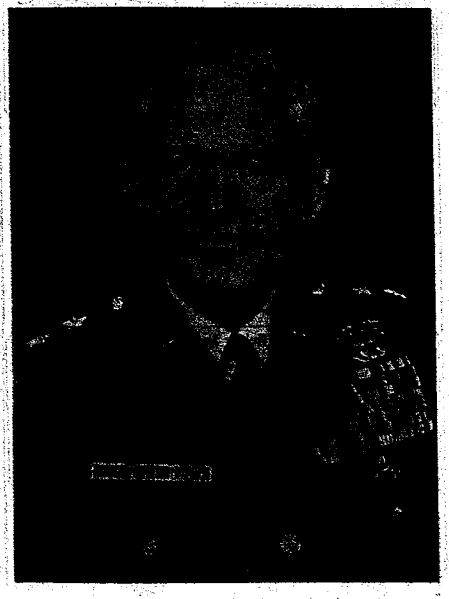
FORT BENNING, GEORGIA, HOME OF U.S. ARMY INFANTRY CENTER
VOL. 27, NO. 36 — FRIDAY, MAY 9, 1969 — 40 PAGES — 10¢

General, Mrs. Wright Farewell!

Commander, Family Depart Fort Benning Saturday



"I will dedicate every ounce of energy," said Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr. when he assumed command of the U.S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning in July, 1967, "to pushing forward the Infantry in every way that I am able."

The man who has led Fort Benning for the last 22 months has been most effective in his efforts to apply modern technology to the Infantry School and streamline the operations of the post.

Under his leadership computer programing, educational television and a variety of teaching devices have placed the Infantry School in the front of the instructional technology field.

Gen. Wright came to Fort Benning at a time when the escalation of the Vietnam war was causing a further escalation in the demand for more and better trained infantrymen.

During Gen. Wright's tour of duty at Fort Benning two events of great historical significance took place.

On November 10, 1967 then President Lyndon B. Johnson came to the post for a brief but impressive visit. He took that occasion to present decorations to soldiers who had recently returned from combat in Vietnam. The President was the fifth Commander-in-Chief to visit Fort Benning since it was founded in 1918.

The second was the milestone reached October 7, 1968 when Fort Benning marked its fiftieth anniversary as the Home of the Infantry. Extending his personal invitation to Columbus, which has played such an important role in the development of the post, the General was joined by local government and civic leaders in its three day salute to the Infantry.

With this in mind Gen. Wright attempted to reorg-

Armed Forces Day

Drill Teams To Compete

By Frank Truchon

The precision movements of ROTC drill team cadets and the sound of blaring trumpets and drums will greet visitors to Fort Benning on Armed Forces Day, May 17.

Seven high schools from the city of Columbus, including Baker, Hardaway, Carver, Columbus, Jordan Vocational, Kendrick and Spencer high schools and the Tuskegee Institute High School of Tuskegee, Ala., will send ROTC drill teams to perform for trophies here.

Three local marching bands from Baker, Kendrick and Spencer High School as well as bands from Seale and Tuskegee, Ala., and from LaGrange, Ga., will also take part in Armed Forces Day festivities.

The ROTC program includes much more than will meet the eye on Armed Forces Day. The first military training for high school students dates back to Nov. 12, 1918, when several enlisted men from Camp Benning volunteered to give instruction on military subjects to students at Columbus High School. The next year the ROTC program was officially started in the city at Columbus and Jordan Vocational High Schools.

ROTC training began at Baker High School in 1950 and was added to Hardaway, Carver, Spencer and Kendrick High Schools in the period from 1967 to 1968. Military training also began at Tuskegee Institute High School in 1967.

Local Bank President Enters OC Hall of Fame

By PFC George Burks

Charles S. Daley, President of the 4th National Bank of Columbus, Georgia, became the latest member of the Infantry Officer Candidate School Hall of Fame in a ceremony at Wigle Hall, site of the Hall of Fame, on May 6, 1969.

Lieutenant Colonel Dennis J. Harron, Commanding Officer of the 5th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade, inducted Mr. Daley into the Hall. Special guest at the occasion was Major General John M. Wright Jr., the Commanding General of Fort Benning, and Commandant of the U.S. Army Infantry School.

Daley entered the Army as a private in 1942. He was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Inand dinner.

The JCOC tour will depart Fort Benning on Monday afternoon May 20, for the Marine Corps Air Station at Cherry Point North Carolina, for the last leg of the conference.

A closing reception and dinner given by the Department of Defense will be held May 21 in Washington, D. C., followed the next day by final briefings by the Pentagon.

The present conference is the 39th to be conducted by the Department of Defense since it was first conceived in 1948. Personal expenses during the tour and transportation to and from the conference are paid by the conferees.

The stated purpose of the JCOC program is to inform these civilian representatives with the view of broadening the base of public understanding of the defense program and the Armed Services.

Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine briefings and demonstrations will be presented for the group during the nine-day conference slated to begin May 14 in Washington, D.C.

Hall of Fame

fantry after graduating from Infantry OCS in December of 1942. During WW II, Daley attained the rank of captain; and served as a company commander with the 82nd Airborne Division. He was also assigned to the 101st Airborne Division during the war.

For his activities in the war, Capt. Daley was the recipient of numerous awards, among them, the Purple Heart with two oak leaf clusters; five battle stars, four of which represent spearheading four major invasions; the Presidential Unit Citation with cluster; the French Fourragere; the Belgian Fourragere; Holland's Military Order of William; and the Army Commendation Medal.

In order for a person to be inducted into the OCS Hall of Fame, he must satisfy one of four prerequisites: He must be a graduate of Infantry OCS and must have attained the rank of full colonel while on active duty; He must be elected or appointed to an office of national prominence; He must be a recipient of the Medal Honor; or, he must be recommended by the comandant of the U.S. Army Infantry School in recognition of his outstanding service.

Lee Promoted To Colonel

Myron E. Lee Jr. was promoted to colonel by Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the Infantry School.

Lee, deputy director of the Infantry School's Brigade and Battalion Operations Department, has served in his present assignment since returning from a tour with the 9th Infantry Division in Vietnam in 1968.

ROTC is important to our national security

The Department of Defense continues to believe that ROTC is an important element of this Nation's total national security effort.

In addition, it wants to see its value strengthened —both to students and to the nation—and is prepared to consider changes which would improve this program at individual schools.

But the Defense Department is not prepared to see the ROTC program degraded in any way.

Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird, in a prepared statement, said, "I am confident that the administration, faculty, and students of the vast majority of our colleges and universities where ROTC is conducted, share this viewpoint."

Assistant Secretary of Defense for Manpower and Reserve Affairs, Roger T. Kelley, at a news conference April 29 read Secretory Laird's statement on ROTC to newsmen and said most colleges and universities would like to see the ROTC programs continued with appropriate adjustments.

Secretary Larid said, "I believe it is particularly important at this time for the American public to understand the viewpoint of the Department of Defense toward reserve Officer Training Corps activities at more than 350 colleges and universities throughout the United States.

"The nation has a need to structure our officer corps so that it represents a broad blend from various sources, including the Service Academies, ROTC programs, college graduate Officer Training Schools, and men and women commissioned from enlisted ranks.

"We can, thereby, not only make leadership opportunities available to a significant percentage of our youth but also provide added assurance for sound, responsible, and representative military leadership in the future.

"As a part of this broad base, the ROTC system has proven of great value to our nation. The ROTC program combines the outstanding resources and sound traditions of our colleges and universities with those of the military services. This vital interplay of civilain university and military training is the essence of the ROTC program," the Secretary of Defense continued.

Drill Sergeant volunteers needed

The Drill Sergeant, a symbol of the Army's new basic combat training program, came into being four years ago.

He is readily identified by his campaign hat; the same hat worn tens of thousands of American doughboys during World War I, by Teddy Roosevelt when he led his famous "Rough Riders" in the Spanish-American War in Cuba, and by General John J. Pershing as he pursued Panchn Villa in Mexico.

Initiated in 1872, the campaign hat was discontinued in 1939. It made its comeback in 1964 as a badge of identification for Army Drill Sergeants and they wear it proudly.

With the standard pattern of training used by the Army, the Drill Sergeant has become more important than ever.

He handles most of the training load, teaching 222 of the 352 hours of instruction that a recruit receives in eight weeks. The Drill Sergeant is responsible for instructing trainees in military tradition, military courtesy, military justice, drill and ceremonies, physical training, hand-to-hand combat, and the mechanics of the M16 rifle.

Replacing instruction by committees with a more personal instruction gives the Drill Sergeant an opportunity to inspire the trainee with pride in his unit and to motivate him in the best Army traditions.

What does it take to be a drill sergeant? He must be a noncommissioned officer who excels in every phase of basic training; and he must have completed Drill Sergeant School at any Army Training Center. Most of them have been in combat.

Drill Sergeant Schools teach noncommissioned officers effective methods of instruction — the art of imparting knowledge to the trainee in such a way that he will readily understand and remember it. The school places much emphasis on leadership. "Know your men", "Know them better than anybody else — the better to influence and motivate them in the best Army tradition".

An effective method in training a recruit is discipline mixed with tact. A Drill Sergeant must not just tell his men what to do. He must set an example. He must guide, counsel, instruct, assist and reprimand the recruit many times on an individual basis to obtain best results.

Classes at Drill Sergeant School are five and a half days a week, from Reveille to Retreat. Saturday afternoons and Sundays are free time. Service Clubs, the NCO Club, movies and other post recreational facilities are available during off-duty time.

More volunteers are needed for the Drill Sergeant Program. At the beginning of Fiscal Year 1969 the Army was short, 3,393 drill sergeants, 38 percent of the authorized total. Fort Benning, authorized 494 drill sergeants, has only 461.

10 Area Seniors Receive OWC Student Awards

By James Doherty

Outstanding Student Awards were presented to ten high school seniors by the Officers Wives Club (OWC) May 3 at the Fort Benning Youth Activities Center.

Five hundred dollars checks and certificates of achievement were awarded to the winners.

Fifty dollar savings bonds were presented to four alternates.

The winners were selected by the OWC on the basis of academic and extra-curricular achievement.

The contest was limited to the children of active and retired military personnel.

All ten winners plan to attend four year colleges in September.

Three will enter the University of Georgia i Athens.

Carol Ann Weaver, daughter of Sergeant First Class and Mrs. Jessie Weaver, Columbus, Ga., plans to major in English and Rebecca Burt, daughter of Master Sergeant (retired) and Mrs. Woodrow W. Burt, Columbus, hopes to major in psychology.

Both presently attend Baker High School.

Carol Ann McGee, daughter of Lieutenant Colonel (retired) and Mrs. Hoke S. McGee, plans to major in home economics. She presently attends Columbus High School.

Two other winners will attend Atlanta colleges.

Erick R. Frazier, son of Master Sergeant and Mrs. Wesley Frazier, Columbus, plans to specialize in electrical engineering at the Georgia Institute of Technology and Lillian Correa, daughter of Lieutenant Colonel and Mrs. Arnaldo Correa, Fort Benning, hopes to major in political science at Emory University.

Frazier is now a student at Hardaway High School and Miss Correa attends Baker High School.

Robert H. Craft, son of Sergeant First Class (retired) and Mrs. Edgar T. Craft, Columbus, will attend Valdosta (Ga.) State College where he will be a mathematics major.

He is now a student at Jordan High School, Columbus.

Douglas Edward Glass, son of Lieutenant Colonel and Mrs. Melvin F. Glass, Fort Benning, will major in physics at Purdue University in Lafayette, Ind. He is now attending Pacelli High School, Columbus.

Deborah Lisa Fletcher, daughter of Command Sergeant Major and Mrs. Charles Fletcher, Fort Benning, plans to be a history major at the University of Kentucky and Robert J. Everhart Jr., son of Lieutenant Colonel and Mrs. Robert J. Everhart, Fort Benning, will be a government major at Lehigh University, Bethlehem, Pa.

Stephen Lee Pearce, son of Sergeant First Class (ret.) and Mrs. Joe E. Pearce, Columbus, will enter the School of Pharmacy at the University of South Carolina. He now attends Hardaway High School.

Alternate winners were Jannice Lynn White, daughter of Chief Warrant Officer (ret.) and Mrs. Doyle White, Columbus, Susan Dahl Welch, daughter of Lieutenant Colonel and Mrs. Marhl Lee Welch, Columbus, Cheryll Lynn Hodges, daughter of Lieutenant Colonel (ret.) and Mrs. M. Douglas Hodges, Columbus, and Gary M. Flanigan son of Lieutenant Colonel (ret.) and Mrs. Dewayne P. Flanigan, Columbus.

Gold Star Wives Attend Regional Conference

By Jenette Read

Chattahoochee Valley Chapter and Columbus, Ga., Chapter of Gold Star Wives of America, Inc., traveled to Birmingham, Ala., April 26 and 27 to attend the annual Southeast Region Gold Star Wives Conference which was held at the Thomas Jefferson Hotel.

Registration commenced at 12 noon, April 26, followed by a welcoming reception by the Birmingham Chapter, which was hostess for the conference.

Following the reception, a business meeting was held which included the election of officers for the coming year. Guest speaker was Mrs. Francis Yielding from the Birmingham Youth Opportunity Center. She spoke on the many opportunities for gainful and psychologically satisfying employment available to skilled and unskilled women today. She urged the women with "time on their hands" or with restless minds to seek out this employment through the many state, federal and private employment agencies.

After the business meeting, Gold Star Wives from Georgia, Alabama, and Mississippi held a banquet at 7 p.m. Guest speaker was retired former Army Chief of Staff Harold K. Johnson, who gave a detailed history of the involvement of U.S. Forces in Vietnam, leading up to the present situation and the peace talks in Paris. After his talk, he engaged in a question and answer session and was asked the inevitable question by one widow: "Was it Worth It?" He answered this by replying that if you believe in the dignity of man, in the strength and unity of the United States, and the right of oppressed people everywhere to be free, "Yes, it was worth it."

On Sunday, April 27, a Memorial Service was conducted by Chaplain (Major) Harold B. Selke of Fort McClellan, Alabama. Following Chaplain Selke, Birmingham's mayor, the Honorable George Weibels, gave a rousing greeting and spoke on some of Birmingham's patriotic activities, including the adoption by the city of the famed division, the Big Red One.

Discuss Drug Abuse

'Flower Children' Gather

By Charlotte C. Lakewood

"Narcotics and addiction" was the subject of discussion at the Ranger Department wives luncheon, held on April 17 at the Supper Club of the Fort Benning Officers Club.

Hollis M. Baker, an Army criminal investigator, guest speaker, talked on "the problem so close to the hearts of parents today." His program dealt with the use and misuse of narcotics and included the latest statistics on drug addicts. He described various drugs and the ill effects of their use. He coordinated his talk with a movie entitled "Marijuana," narrated by Sonny Bono, well known singer of the Sonny Cher duo. The film described the different roads leading to addiction.

Warnings of "Keep off the Grass," "Excess speed Kills" and "Don't spend a penny for a Benny" painted among bright colored poppy flowers on big folded cards decorated the tables. In addition, candy pills and cigarettes were strewn around psychedelic posters. The signs were painted by Mrs. Robert C. Arneson.

Mrs. Donald J. Koepfer and ladies of Operations and Plans Division were hostesses for the luncheon. Several of the hostesses were costumed as "flower children" to accent the theme of the program.

Mrs. Y. Y. Phillips, wife of Col. Phillips, department director, welcomed as special guest, Mrs. Sidney B. Berry, wife of Brig. Gen. Berry, assistant commandant of the U.S. Army Infantry School. She also introduced newcomers, Mrs. Charles Chitt, Mrs. Jesus Ramos, Mrs. George Tillman and Mrs. Gary Baum.

Farewell Ranger charms were given to Mrs. Joseph Flesch, Mrs. William Mozingo and Mrs. William Able.

Roaring 20's Party Marks End of 8th Week

By Lynette Herseim

The Roaring 20's returned for a few hours to 50th Company, 5th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade, as the theme for the eight week party, held in celebration of the completion of the first rigorous weeks of training. The party also served as a farewell banquet for the 5th Stu. Bn. Executive Officer, Major Malcolm Blankenship, who is leaving to attend the language school in Monterey, Calif. prior to assignment in Thailand.

The party got off to an excellent start for the candidates, as their All-star volleyball team defeated the Cadre for the first time this season. Afterwards, everyone moved into the mess hall for steak dinner.

After the meal, during which music was provided by a five-piece candidate combo, Captain Smith, 5th Co. Commander, presented a plaque to Major Blankenship and then turned the speaker's stand over to the Battalion Commander, Lt. Col. Dennis J. Harron.

Following Col. Harrons talk, in which he encouraged the candidates to make the most of the fine potential they had already demonstrated, the Master of Ceremonies for the evening, OC Gary Bottoms took over to introduce the first act of the show, a four man folk gronp called the Graduates. Comprised of four OC's Gordon Cho, David Gruel, Brooks Doyle, and Donald MacIntyre, the group got the guests into a party mood by singing a good variety of numbers, including two sing-along selections, in which everyone joined with gusto.

The entertainment concluded with a skit in which the candidates satirized the cadre members of the battalion. After the entertainment, everyone joined in on the Company Song and the OCS alma Mater.

Red Cross Volunteers Hold Dinner

The Red Cross Volunteer Corps will hold its first Annual Recognition Dinner on Thursday May 15 at the NCO Club Annex No. 8 at San Hill. A social hour will begin at 6:20 p.m. with dinner at 7 p.m.

Brigadier General Oscar T. Davis, commanding general of the U. S. Army Training Center, Infantry will be the guest speaker and service and appreciation certificates will be awarded at this time. All Volunteers, active or inactive, are urged to call the Red Cross Volunteer Office (545-1101) on Monday or Wednesday morning for further information. Reservations must be made before May 10th.

Mrs. Baer Elected To OWC Presidency

By Anna Axup

The Fort Benning Officers Wives' Club May 7, held a champagne brunch honoring the newly elected officers for the coming 1969-70 club year. Spring bouquets on the tables of the patio of the Supper Club contributed to a most casual atmosphere.

Mrs. Malcolm Baer was installed as president by Mrs. James Morris Jr., outgoing president. Those who will serve with Mrs. Baer are Mrs. Robert S. LaMonte, first vice-president; Mrs. James Wheaton, second vice-president; Mrs. Charles Reidenbaugh, third vice-president; Mrs. James Heathcock, recording secretary; Mrs. Richard Thrower, corresponding secretary; Mrs. William Riggs, treasurer; Mrs. Ephiriam Goss, assistant treasurer; and Mrs. Raymond Kampe, custodian.

Following the installation ceremony the "Polka Dots", a group of OWC members under the direction of Mrs. Robert G. Hertel, presented their spring concert. Dressed in new costumes of bright pink, yellow and blue and with a burning desire to sing, these women with their songs and smiles created a fun-loving atmosphere for their audience. The group, which has become well known in the area, appeared on the Ted Mack Show in Miami last year.

Three Candidate Brigade Wives Clubs Hold Coffee

By Lynette Herseim

The 95th Company, 9th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade, Wives' Club enjoyed a spring decor for their third coffee April 29.

Special guests were Mrs. Robert W. Muller, Mrs. David W. Fonner, Mrs. Everette J. Thomas and Mrs. John R. Schumaker.

Special guests included Mrs. Edward Joseph, Mrs. Johne O. Rowell, Mrs. Roger Dimsdale, Mrs. Cecil W. Boatwright and Mrs. Virgil L. Cocke. Company guests were Mrs. Carey W. Dunning and Mrs. Woodrow L. Rowell.

The guests entered the company dayroom through a simulated garden of ferns, vines and trellises. A lavender hyacinth with the words "Walk through Spring" hung overhead. The highlights of the decorations was the serving table which was backed by a vine covered trellis.

A hillside scene featuring a deep purple umbrella with the sign "April showers" completed by a flower garden labeled "May flowers" provided the centerpiece. The spring mood was carried through with various floral plants, vines and umbrellas. The honored guests wore band made rose corsage name tags. The candidates' wives found their name in raindrops on an umbrella.

Complimenting the spring theme was a bright watermelon bowl filled with fruit. A "sandwich cake" made of six layers of different shapes and kinds of miniature sandwiches was enjoyed by the guests.

The program for the morning was a "customs and courtesies in Army life" presentation lead by Mrs. Dunning, wife of the 95th Company Commander. A mock receiving line was also held in preparation for the 95th Company Intermediate status party to be held May 10.

Hostesses were Mrs. Fred Lamb and Mrs. Howard Daniels. Mrs. Virgil Rush and Mrs. Alan Preston were in charge of refreshments and Mrs. Michael D. Lenkowski was in charge of decorations and she also poured the coffee.

6TH BN. COFFEE

The Officers wives of the 6th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade, recently (April 29) met in the dayroom at the 65th Company dayroom for their May Day Coffee.

Honored guests were Mrs. Curtis L. Echols and Mrs. L. Burnham.

Hostesses were Mrs. Jack H. Jacobs, Mrs. Loy W. Marotz and Mrs. Ben A. Mobley. Decorations were a Maypole centerpiece and flowered name tags.

New members welcomed to the club were Mrs. Joe H. Rufty, Mrs. Leslie T. Smith and Mrs. Ben A. Mobley.

The next coffee will be given by the 66th Company on May 26.

96TH CO BAKE SALE

The Officer Candidate Wives Club of 98th Company, 9th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade, conducted a bake sale during the company volleyball game recently (April 26) at the Main Post Gym.

The wives contributed baked goods of all varieties. The goods were sold to spectators during the game between 96th Company and 97th Company. Funds from the sale will be used for the clubs social functions.

56TH CO. COFFEE

The inaugural meeting of the 56th Company, 5th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade, Officer Candidate Wives Club was held recently (April 15) in Wigle Hall.

Honored guests included 5th Stu. Bn. Commander, Lt. Col. and Mrs. Dennis J. Harron, chaplain and Mrs. Phillip J. Cassibry.

Special Guests were Mrs. Frank Shaw, Mrs. James Bramlet, Mrs. John Keever, Mrs. Stephen Spencer, and Mrs. John Wilson.

Lt. Col. Harron spoke to the wives about the Infantry Officer Candidate program and outlined the three phases through which their husbands will progress in OCS. He outlined the duties and responsibilities of both the candidates and wives.

Greater Role by Military in Budget Planning Urged

Secretary of Defense Laird Also Discusses Compensation Plan

COMMANDER'S DIGEST

Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird believe the military departments have to play a greater role in justifying their budget requests.

Appearing on the Department of Defense's "Pentagon Forum" television program, Secretary Laird said he hopes to give the individual services greater voice in presenting their budget to Congress.

He said the Secretary of each service and members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff "should have greater responsibility for carrying forward and justifying their budgets before the Congressional committees."

Secretary Laird also talked about compensation, retention, ROTC, anti-ballistic missile system, and demonstrations on campuses.

The secretary said various changes are being proposed in the Hubbell Pay Plan, including increases for lower grade. The 100-page plan is now being reviewed.

He said the plan will be forwarded to Congress later this year, with early action hoped for in the second session.

Secretary Laird explained that the plan was not presented to Congress this session, because it may have delayed the July 1 pay increase.

It is possible that provisions of the Hubbell Plan could become effective July 1, 1970.

Regarding retention, the secretary noted competition from the outside is great. He explained that the services make great investments in training, and "we need these people in the military service."

Secretary Laird added that it is necessary to keep the services attractive enough so people will stay. A study on retention is being conducted, with recommendations expected the next two-three months.

As for ROTC and demonstrations on campuses, the secretary said many people have been confused over the reason we are involved in Vietoam. He said, "Our sense of purpose as far as this war, and as far as our commitment, must be clearly defined. President Nixon is trying to restore that sense of purpose as far as our country is concerned."

Some statements about the war have always been overly optimistic, he said, and misled some of the people that a solution was just around the corner.

He stated, "The kind of actions that are taking place in stopping recruiting of top people for military services, whether it be on college campuses or any other place in the U.S., don't serve the cause of our national security and certainly do not lend well the movement of volunteer forces in the U.S. This is one of the great disappointments and one of the things we must solve."

Regarding career progression for present members of the armed services, Secretary Laird said, "It is important to keep options open for enlisted men to move into the officer category if they desire to move in that direction.

While talking about the anti-ballistic missile system, the secretary expressed hope for arms talks with the Soviet Union. He noted that it is necessary to enter the talks with a "position of strength, not weakness."

Secretary Laird said members of the NATO Alliance have been briefed on the ABM program.

He continued, "Our NATO friends understand quite well how important it is to maintain creditability of our deterrent force if we are going to prevent nuclear war in the time period of the 1970's.

"And in order to preserve the peace during that particular time period it's necessary for us to have a creditable second strike deterrent. This is the way to protect our people, this is the way to protect our cities. And I believe that we have good support from our NATO allies."

The secretary emphasized that it would be a great mistake to disregard the ABM system.

In another area, Secretary Laird said that many lessons were being learned in Vietnam that can be used to help in areas of social concern in this country.

He noted that national security is the primary mission of the Defense Department, but the department can help in social needs.

The secretary said, DOD will cooperate in every way possible in making contributions toward better life at home, better medical treatment, better health, better education, better opportunities for underprivileged."

Airborne Students Receive Chapel Center Facilities

By Bill Hardin

Airborne students have a new chapel center offering a variety of facilities.

The center, in a World War II wooden building across the street from the Airborne Chapel was converted by students in the Basic Airborne Course. They worked at night on off-duty time to complete the project, which required several months to finish.

The chapel center is the result of efforts of Chaplain (Maj.) Robert D. Crick, who was responsible for the construction of three similar centers in Vietnam.

Chaplain Crick paid special tribute to the efforts of Sgt. Cryille J. Dushane. According to the chaplain, the 46th Company noncommissioned officer donated a great deal of time and talent to the chapel center project.

On the main floor of the facility, there is an office for Chaplain (Capt.) Ralph E. Short, a library and a lounge area. At one end of the lounge there is a free coffee bar open each night to those who visit the chapel center.

Approximately 100 men nightly use the center's study rooms and letter writing facilities. These rooms are located on the second floor of the two-story building.

[illegible] on the top floor [illegible] an organ and a piano, which the soldiers may use for practice and for group singing.

The chapel center has inspired the formation of an Airborne Chapel choir, which uses the building for rehearsals.

Two Airborne organizations use the center as a meeting site. They are the Paratroopers' Christian Fellowship and the Saint Michael's Society. Saint Michael is the patron saint of the Airborne.

"On Saturday mornings we hold a weekly retreat in the center," Chaplain Crick said. "This consists of four hours of secular as well as spiritual activity. We have discussions and counselling on a number of subjects which not only are of great interest to these young men, but which we feel will be of great benefit to them while in the Army and in later life as well."

Several food vending machines have been installed in the building for the Airborne students, whose training necessitates restriction to the student billeting area during much of the stay here.

"Since there are no service clubs in the immediate area and no plans to build additional facilities in this area for the men, the chapel center fills a definite need," the chaplain stated.

"Our future plans call for stereo music to be piped over the entire building for the enjoyment of the troops who come here to relax," the chaplain added.

"Many items have been donated to help furnish the center, but we still need good, wholesome books," the chaplain said.

TWO CHAPLAINS DISCUSS PLANS
Make Use of New Facilities

Foundation Offers Prize Of $1,000

By SFC Richard Kemp

A cash award of $1,000 is being offered the serviceman or woman who pens the best letter on the subject "My Hopes for America's Future" in the annual Freedoms Foundation Armed Forces letter writing contest.

In addition, the winner will join the authors of the next nine best letters in a trip to Valley Forge, Feb. 22, 1970, for the annual presentation ceremony on George Washington's birthday followed by a trip to Washington, D.C.

Additional awards include 50 of $100 and 50 of $50 each. Separate categories are open for those serving on active duty and those serving with Reserve forces. The awards are identical in each category.

Letters must not exceed 500 words.

The author must print or type his full name, rank, service number, full military address, service or reserve component, and full home address on the letter.

Entries should be sent to Freedoms Foundation, Valley Forge, Pennsylvania, 19481. They must be postmarked by Nov. 1, 1969.

Notification of winners will be made in February, 1970.

Freedoms Foundation letter awards program is part of an annual program in which the Foundation assembles outstanding expressions, projects and programs from individuals, organizations and schools

Secretary of State Discusses

Foreign Policy: 5 Major Issues

Editor's Note: On April 16 Secretary of State William P. Rogers addressed the American Society of Newspaper Editors at its annual meeting in Washington, D.C. Here are excerpts from his speech.

WASHINGTON, (AFPS)—Fortunately or unfortunately, many of the events in the world directly or indirectly affect us and the attitude of the United States toward such events is of importance. Whether it is the fact that some fish are leaving the waters around Iceland, which adversely affects their economy, or the fact of an attempted coup in Equatorial Guinea, to some degree we are involved or our involvement is sought.

The United States is the world's greatest military and economic and technological power; and there is no way to isolate ourselves from the responsibilities that go with that position.

It is understandable that the weight of great responsibility gives rise to certain concerns. These concerns are likely to be expressed in demands for a clear, comprehensive and consistent foreign policy that neatly defines and sensibly limits our national interests.

The difficulty is that we have a great variety of national interests—that some situations are intractable and others are fluid—and that unpredictable events arise which refuse to fit neatly into any preconceived notions of how much or how little the United States should be involved.

Let me illustrate the point by brief reference to five problems which have concerned this Administration during our first three months in office.

Vietnam: Negotiations for Peace

First, in Vietnam we are directly involved in military operations. We are seeking to negotiate a settlement which for the first time in twenty years would establish peaceful conditions in Southeast Asia. We are trying to bring about a peace that will permit the people of South Vietnam to decide their own future. Such a development would permit us, in consultation with our allies and at the appropriate time, to end our military operations. No issue more concerns United States diplomacy at the present time than this one.

Berlin: Political, Military Involvement

Second, in Berlin we are involved both politically and, through the presence of U.S. troops, militarily. Berlin has been a special responsibility since the end of the Second World War and has required the attention and action of every Administration since. It and a divided Germany—are at the heart of the problem of a divided Europe.

Only last month there were harassments against free access to Berlin. And just last week the Foreign and Defense Ministers of NATO urged continued efforts to explore the possibility of "ordered and negotiated progress" toward normalizing the situation surrounding that city. We cannot and do not seek to escape our present responsibility which derives directly from our role in World War II.

Middle East: Diplomatic Involvement

Third, in the Midde East, we are not involved militarily, but there is always a danger, as the President has pointed out, that we might be drawn into a renewed conflict. So the United States is actively engaged in a diplomatic effort to achieve not just a new armistice but a lasting peace. Our interests in friendly relations with all states in the area, and our commitment to removing sources of world tension require us, we believe, to work in whatever way we can to bolster the United Nations' efforts toward toward that end.

Peru: Economic Involvement

Fourth, in Peru the United States is involved in one of those difficult economic problems which sometimes occur among neighbors and friends. The dynamic of the American industrial and economic system has generated extensive foreign investment. Such a development sometimes creates misunderstandings. When it does we must seek to resolve them amicably and fairly with full respect for the rights of all concerned. The true involvement we and Latin Americans have with each other, and the only one we seek, is the involvement of constructive cooperation—and that is true in this matter.

Nigeria: Humanitarian Involvement

Fifth, in the civil war in Nigeria, we are not militarily, politically, or economically involved and we have resisted pressures to become so. However, we are deeply involved in a humanitarian effort. Our government has extended over $32 million worth of food and medical supplies to the needs in that area of the world. More recently we have dispatched a special envoy to expedite aid to people who are starving and break the log jams which have hampered the flow of the ample supplies which are available. We will continue to resist getting involved politically but we will continue our humanitarian involvement and do all we can to prevent disease and starvation.

So in its first three months this Administration has been projected into affairs in all parts of the world—Southeast Asia, the Middle East, Europe, Latin American and Africa—into old and new issues—issues that are local, regional, and global in character—into matters for which there is no exact formula for determining the proper measure of United States activity or responsibility.

One lesson is quite clear. Great power does not mean great freedom of action and decision. On the contrary, it often means very narrow choices of action and what we can do to influence events in a given case well may be marginal.

We can work for peaceful settlement in Vietnam; but we cannot negotiate a peace without serious response from the other side.

We can probe for formulas to reconcile issues in the Middle East; but no formula will work without the agreement of the principals.

We can reach the conclusion that it makes no sense to go on with a nuclear arms race; but an agreement to stop it requires reciprocal and reasonable decisions by both sides.

We can send food to starving people; but a full stomach is no cure for ancient tribal animosities.

So in international affairs, the weak can be rash; the powerful must be restrained. What complexity in world affairs should teach us is the need to act responsibly, to substitute cooperation for coercion, and to move from confrontation to negotiation of the issues that divide nations.

In case you forget to ask me what newspaper editors can do for the Secretary of State, let me answer by saying that you can continue to convey to the American people a clear sense of the complexity and unpredictability of world affairs—that our involvement inescapably flows from our position, our interests and our responsibilities in the world—and that however discouraging it may seem at times, we must never despair in our constant search for peace.

SECRETARY OF STATE WILLIAM P. ROGERS

"In international affairs, the weak can be rash; the powerful must be restrained."

"Great power does not mean great freedom of action and decision. On the contrary, it often means very narrow choices of action . . ."

"Convey to the American people a clear sense of the complexity and unpredictability of world affairs."

'Fort Benning's Own Welcome Wagon'

Replacement Detachment Assigns Incoming Troops

By Richard Stirlen

"The great majority of our transits have just returned from Vietnam, and a 30 to 45 day leave period at home. Many have long hair, sloppy bearing, and have forgotten much of their military courtesy. Through the replacement detachment, I try to get them back in the main stream of garrison Army life."

This is one of the basic jobs of the USAIC Replacement Detachment as seen by its commanding officer, Captain Armando R. Garza. The detachment handles all enlisted personnel, aside from students and WACs, that arrive at Fort Benning. Since the cluster of white buildings across from Crain Hall is the only replacement facility of its kind, it is faced with a mammoth task.

Most important, the newcomer must be housed and fed. The detachment is capable of billeting 400 men at any one time. However, since each man must be accounted for 24 hours a day, Captain Garza attempts to balance the unit with an average of 275 in-coming soldiers. Two officers and 21 enlisted men must do everything from sign personnel in, to cook their meals. With under 300 transits, the Captain says that operations move rather smoothly, and control and coordination problems are kept at a minimum.

While staying an average of three days at the detachment, the arriving soldier must complete a number of administrative steps. Administrative support for the detachment is supplied by the 524th Personnel Service Company, and 16 men, under the control of Chief Warrant Officer Vernon C. DeHart, assist the newcomer and place his files in order.

But how long is the replacement detachment responsible for a soldier?

Once he arrives at the fort, the soldier is initially in-processed, assigned a bunk and meal card number, and begins the administrative steps which will finally place him in a unit.

Personally, the soldier is responsible for getting his financial records processed through the Finance section. This normally takes about one day, and once this is completed, the man has time to take care of his own needs. Haircuts, new clothes, movies, and softball are high on the list of priorities for the newcomer. Also, the soldier will probably have to pull some light duty at the detachment, as the arrivals are in charge of keeping their quarters and area clean and well maintained.

Meanwhile, members of the detachment, who have already conducted an interview with the soldier, send the necessary information to the Adjutant General so orders can be cut to send him to a unit. Also, the detachment is responsible for transportation to and from various processing points and must coordinate it through the Motor Pool. Finally, each soldier is the responsibility of the detachment, and must be accounted for on the morning report and given counsel when problems arise.

All this in just 72 hours. Fort Benning's own "welcome wagon" certainly deserves praise for giving prompt efficient service, and a very favorable first impression to the arriving soldier.

MP Captain 'Is Sent' To Stockade

Captain John B. Smiley, commanding officer of the 139th Military Police Company has been "sent" to the stockade, while Captain Phillip L. Marti has been "released" to command the 139th.

Actually, the two Captains swapped assignments in a ceremony May 3rd. Captain Smiley will take command of the 202th Military Police Detachment at the stockade, and Captain Marti will become the commandig officer at the 139th. Both units are members of Center Troop Command.

Training Aids Center Helps Teachers, Students

A Viet Cong booby trap, a human skelton, an aggressor Army uniform, or a model of a wooden trestle bridge, all have a common function as training aids for the use of instructors here.

These and countless other unusual items as well as the commonplace, such as pointers, chalk boards, and training charts, are available through the Third U. S. Army Training Aids Center at Fort Benning.

The center serves The Army Reserve, National Guard, ROTC, and other than Army agencies. The majority of the center's effort, or about 70 per cent, is for The U. S. Army Infantry School.

The facility, which operates under the direction of Alan C. Ramsay (Columbus, Ga.), fabricates, repairs, maintains, stores, procures, and issues training aids not only to Infantry School instructors but for other units and activities on post.

To do the job the talents and skills of artists, carpenters, model makers, painters, photographers, and many others are used.

Operating in six branches spread out in 13 buildings, Ramsay is looking forward to the day when all 74 civilians and the two military men assigned will be working together in a single building.

"We are presently working on plans for such a building. It will have about 65,000 square feet, and will allow us to perform all of our services under a single roof," he said.

The center maintains raw material valued at $50,000 to construct training aids as requests come in for items not in stock.

Experienced Specialists

It also offers the service of experienced visual information specialists. These men talk with instructors and offer assistance on available aids and designing new training aids tailored to the exact requirements for a particular teaching point.

More than 250 work order requests come in each month for new, specific training aids not available in existing stock. These must be made in one or more of the center's six branches.

"We even have a man who travels into several states in the Third Army area in order to provide periodic service for some of the electronic devices we have installed," Ramsey said.

"From providing decals for officer candidate helmet liners to making a group of Viet Cong uniforms, we are usually able to furnish just the training aid that is needed," Ramsay added.

"Under some circumstances we need up to 30 working days to produce a training aid. In cases where the item requested must be made or ordered from a source far away, we are able to have it available for the instructor when he needs it, if he has allowed us sufficient time," he concluded.

The distinctive flavor of May Wine comes from a spring herb called woodruff. Float sliced strawberries and pineapple in a May Wine Bowl to herald the merry month.

When frying foods in butter or margarine, add a tablespoonful or so of oil. Keeps food from smoking.

The Spaniards say that their cooking methods conform to their climate: "In the north we stew, in the center we roast and in the sough we fry."

Add variety to the family's favorite soup by sprinkling with "croutons" of popcorn, chopped peanuts, package stuffing mix or puffed cheese snacks.

A mother of six told us the other day she hopes her family isn't planning another breakfast-in-bed surprise this Mother's Day: "Last year, it took me a week to find out where they put everything back."

Five Units Get Them

Minute Man Flags Given In Savings Bond Drive

By Frank Truchon

The 1969 U.S. Savings Bond Campaign here began May 5 with the presentation of five Minuteman Flag awards to units with outstanding records in the bond program.

The awards, which are earned by units having 500 or more persons and a 90 per cent or better rate of participation, were presented by Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, commanding general, U.S. Army Training Center, to the following organizations: The Candidate Brigade, United States Army Infantry School; the 6th Battalion, 2nd Brigade, United States Army Training Center, Infantry; the 5th Battalion, 1st Brigade, United States Army Infantry Center; the 10th Battalion, 1st Brigade, USAIC; and the 2nd Brigade, USAIC.

Fort Benning's goal in the bond drive, which will be conducted throughout the month of May, is 90 per cent participation. According to Lieutenant Colonel Robert E. VanDerLike, Fort Benning finance and accounting officer and bond program chairman, key men have been appointed in all staff and duty sections to make personal contact with every military person and civilian and to explain the program to them. In addition, forms for making bond allotments will be passed out.

In the bond program kick-off rally Col. VanDerLike said, "The purpose of the savings bond canvass . . . is to encourage all personnel to save part of their monthly earnings by investing in U.S. Savings Bonds through the payroll savings plan."

Among the tangible benefits that result from buying savings bonds, Col. VanDerLike stressed the good rate of interest, the safety of storing money with the government, the fact that bonds help to support the United States, and the reduction of inflation through the purchase of bonds.

Civilians can make a combination Freedom Share and Savings Bond purchase on one allotment. Separate allotments must be used by persons serving in the Army.

Participation in the Bond Program is voluntary. Persons can buy bonds by contacting their unit or staff sections.

Rotarians Salute Post

By SFC Richard Kemp

Approximately 125 business and civic leaders will join in an Armed Forces week salute to Fort Benning when they visit here May 14 as members of the Columbus Rotary Club.

The local Rotarians will leave the Ralston Hotel at noon and travel to the Fort Benning Officers Club where they will have lunch.

Entertainment during the lunch will be by the Folka Dots, the Officers Wives Club singing group.

After lunch, the group will move to the Quick Kill range to witness demonstrations in quick kill training techniques and to try these techniques themselves.

'They're inside the wire'

AK-47 Sounds Urgent Warning

THE THREE ARE ON THEIR WAY
Crewmen Prepare To Load Another Round Into Heavy Machine

By Sp4 Jim Bruce

LZ ROSS, Vietnam, (Americal 10)—"They're inside the wire," rasped an excited voice over the radio, but the flash and roar of an explosion and the staccato crackle of AK-47 fire inside the perimeter sounded a far more urgent warning.

Infantrymen and headquarters personnel jumped to a red alert. An NVA sapper squad had penetrated the perimeter wire.

The moon had set at 4:20 in the morning, but above LZ Ross artillery illumination flares floated like Japanese lanterns. The flares bathed this 196th Infantry Brigade fire support base in yellow light and created macabre interlacing shadows as eyes strained to see the lurking enemy.

All day long there had been increased sniping and harassment at the three observation posts surrounding LZ Ross, which is located 20 miles northwest of Tam Ky.

Intelligence reports had warned that either Ross or one of the observation posts might be a target.

Since before midnight, the dogs in Que Son Village 500 meters outside the perimeter had been yapping. Along the bunker line the men of Co. A, 2nd Bn., 1st Inf., had a premonition that something was going to happen.

Ten minutes after moonset something did happen. In the shifting light of the illumination, Specialists, Julius Riddle and Luis Cervantes spotted two figures advancing through the wire and cut them down in a lethal crossfire between two bunkers.

The pair proved to be the tail element of the NVA penetrating squad. Seven sappers were already inside the Americal Division base.

As stuttering exchanges of AK-47 and M-16 fire spread along the east side of the bunkerline, the deafening explosion of an RPG round ripped into the rear of a bunker, tearing out one wall and blasting the interior. Three infantrymen atop the bunker were slightly wounded by the concussion and shrapnel.

From the adjoining bunker, Spec. 4 William F. Doerr peered out through the smoke to see an NVA soldier poised to throw a grenade from the tall grass beyond the perimeter road. Doerr caught the man with a burst from his M-16, spinning him across the road and into the smouldering bunker.

From an unseen position, another sapper flung a Chicom grenade into his bunker and Doerr booted it out the door. The explosion deafened him, but he held his position inside the doorway. Under Doerr's covering fire, Medic Spec. 4 James Kaiser got the three wounded men to safety in the next bunker.

Believing Doerr to be wounded from the RPG explosion, the machinegunner in an adjacent bunker threw out a hail of protective fire around the neighboring position. Amid the smoke and confusion, Doerr watched and prayed.

From interior defensive positions, tracers laced out into the shadows of the supply pad and storage dump. The bunkerline was a turmoil of rolling smoke and flames, ricocheting tracers and exploding grenades as the sixth remaining sappers probed desperately for a way out of the perimeter. Alpha Company contained them. A steady barrage of artillery and mortar illumination maintained the eerie yellow light.

"Cease fire. Alpha's swooping the bunkerline," crackled the radio, and a temporary hush fell over the perimeter. Nerves were keen with tension, as a squad of infantrymen walked cautiously down the perimeter road, eyes probing every shadow.

In Day-Long Fight

Americal Troopers Pound NVA

By SP4 Jim Bruce

TIEN PHUOC, Vietnam, (AMERICAL IO) — In intensive day-long fighting which continued late into the night, elements of the 196th Inf. and 198th Inf. Brigades hammered at heavily fortified NVA positions in the mountains 10 miles southwest of Tam Ky.

The battle saw repeated clashes between the Americal Division infantrymen and troops of the 2nd NVA Division entrenched in well-camouflaged, concrete bunkers. At one point, enemy elements used flashing red strobe lights in an unsuccessful attempt to confuse night medevac helicopter extractions.

The action was the latest phase of fighting around the beleaguered village of Tien Phuoc, scene of a see-saw struggle since the opening weeks of the post-Tet offensive when NVA units overran and controlled a Popular Forces (PF) outpost and an outlying hamlet of the village.

Elements of the 3rd Bn., 21st Inf., and the 1st Bn., 52nd Inf., saw extensive fighting in the area the previous week. A CIDG camp at Tien Phuoc had been under daily mortar attack, and for a time, NVA machinegun fire controlled the village airstrip.

Intelligence indicated three battalions of the 2nd NVA Div., in strongly fortified positions in the mountains to the east of the village. Aerial photo reconnaissance reported enemy rocket and mortar positions around the village, and anti-aircraft fire was being encountered from a half-dozen locations.

"Legionnaires" of the 2nd Bn., 1st Inf., were airlifted into the mountain plateau early in the week to join the other elements in pushing a counter-offensive deep into the enemy stronghold. Three infantry companies took to the mountains while headquarters personnel and mortar platoons fortified a field CP in the Tien Phuoc District Headquarters building.

Heavy contact began early on the third day when Alpha Company came under intense automatic weapons fire moving out from their night laager. Within minutes, all three companies were in contact. Gunships and artillery missions pounded enemy targets throughout the day.

With the objective of taking Hill 107 to establish a new mortar position and field command post, Delta Company, under the command of 1st Lt. James R. Sanders (Arvada, Colo.) fought through fortified NVA bunkers to attain the summit in late afternoon. Enemy troops showed their displeasure with a steady barrage of mortar and recoiless rifle fire into the hilltop position.

Friendly casualties mounted as Alpha and Charlie Companies found themselves surrounded and unable to move. Five helicopters took hits during medevac and resupply flights into the battle.

At noon, the command and control ship of 2-1 Battalion Commander, LTC Sinclair L. Melner (Reno, Nev.), came under intense automatic weapons fire while making an attempt to resupply ammunition to the surrounded companies. The crew chief of the ship was wounded, and he was returned to the Tien Phuoc CIDG camp for medical attention.

A second resupply and medevac attempt in the early afternoon was successful in spite of continued automatic weapons fire.

With nightfall a few moments of confusion resulted when Delta Company, now securely dugin atop Hill 107, turned on a flashing red strobe light to guide in a MEDEVAC chopper. Within a few hundred meters of their position, two other lights began winking in the darkness.

The MEDEVAC pilot quickly determined the correct light, however, and lifted the wounded soldier out without further difficulty. Artillery was fired on the two bogus signals.

Dog Proves to Be Less Than Friend

AN KHE, RVN (173d Abn IO) — Dog, man's best friend, proved to be the Viet Cong's worst enemy, when it inadvertantly led helicopters and paratroopers of the 173d Airborne Brigade to position, 15 miles west of An Khe.

Flying over the familar central highland terrain, Captain John W. McCue of Delta Troop, 2-1st Cavalry spotted four hooches that he had not seen before.

Maneuvering his LOH (Light Observation Helicopter) closer to the hooches, CPT McCue could see no sign of life except a small dog. As the chopper hovered closer, the dog broke and ran down a small trail.

"I followed the dog on a hunch," said the young pilot of Plattsville, Wis., "and it paid off. The dog led me right to a group of VC carrying weapons and rucksacks along the trail."

The chopper opened up on the enemy, keeping them pinned down until Cobra gunships and paratroopers of the 4th Battalion, 503d Infantry could be notified.

Paratroopers of Alpha Company, 4-503d were quickly helilifted into the area and surrounded the enemy.

"After the choppers finished with them, they didn't put up much of a fight," reported one Sky Soldier of Alpha Company.

A sweep of the area produced six VC bodies and 26 suspected VC detainees. In addition, one automatic rifle, one SKS carbine, one AK-47 rifle, a .38 caliber pistol and documents were also found.

Surgeon Says

Children's Heart Diseases Are of Major Importance

By Cpt. Milford F. Schwartz

It is hard to pick up a newspaper these days without reading about some new advance in the treatment of heart disease; transplantations of the heart are almost commonplace and a temporary artificial heart is no longer a laboratory dream. Many of the patients undergoing these operations have been adults, but many of them developed their cardiac difficulties in childhood.

Today the field of diseases of the heart in infants and children has assumed major importance since advances in cardiac surgery have been made. Malformations of the heart, which would have proven lethal 10 years ago, or even two years ago, no longer represent a spectre of hopelessness, and many people have been given normal life expectancies.

Thus the finding of these conditions and their correct diagnosis is not an exercise in academics, but a critical responsibility for all physicians. At Fort Benning we see a great number of such children, a few with disease necessitating surgery, and many who fortunately will be able to lead normal lives without surgical intervention.

An entire clinic is devoted each week at Martin Army Hospital to children referred from our own medical facilities and from surrounding smaller bases to be avecuated jointly by a cardiologist and pediatrician.

Heart disease in children is either congenital (present at birth) or acquired such as with rheumatic fever, diphtheria, and other infectious diseases. The development of the heart before birth is an extremely complex process necessitating the joining together of several different components; consequently the room for error is great. We know that diseases such as German measles early in pregnancy predispose the developing infant to certain kinds of heart malformations. Specific heart defects are also often seen in children with mongolism. The vast majority of malformations of the heart in children are not yet explained however.

There are many ways in which cardiac disease presents itself to the pediatrician. The sick, cyanotic (blue) infant in the newborn nursery may be the most dramatic presentation, but it is relatively infrequent. Most heart disease may be relatively without symptoms in childhood — by the time advanced symptoms develop they usually herald irreversible changes for which there can be little help; it is thus important to find these patients prior to the onset of symptoms.

While shortness of breath, failure to grow, and easy tiring may bring the child to the doctor, most children present only with a murmur, a noise heard over the heart area produced by the turbulence of blood flow. Most children, even without any evidence of heart disease, have a murmur at some time in their development.

Most murmurs heard in children are innocent, i.e. not caused by malformation or disease. These eventually disappear and can be considered normal findings. The more common murmurs heard with organic heart disease are rarely present at birth and develop often during the latter part of the first year of life when they may be picked up coincidentally during a well baby checkup. By the characteristics of the murmur as to location, quality and loudness, some clues to a diagnosis may be obtained.

Naturally, if the child is frightened and uncooperative the murmur may be hard to characterize or missed altogether. Once a murmur is suspected of being associated with organic heart disease, chest x-ray and a cardiogram provide further help in pinpointing the trouble. Most important, careful follow-up with frequent examination is indispensible. When it is suspected that surgery may be necessary, the child is referred to a medical center such as Walter Reed for cardiac catheterization.

With the child awake, long thin tubes are passed from a vein or artery in the arm or leg into the heart — pressures within the heart are measured, oxygen levels are determined and dye is injected enabling x-ray motion pictures to demonstrate abnormal anatomy.

WAC's Celebrate 27th Anniversary Wednesday

By Ken Sturzenacker

As the Women's Army Corps (WAC) prepares to celebrate its 27th anniversary next Wednesday, a wealth of memories surrounding the early days of the Corps suface to trace the heritage of feminine participation in the military.

Authorized by an act of Congress on May 14, 1942, the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps (WAAC), as it was then known, actually got its start two months later. When he first U. S. Army Training Center for Women opened at Fort Des Moines, Iowa, on July 20, 1942, newspaper and radio reporters almost outnumbered the women in uniform.

The acceptance of women into the Army was considered a startling development, not only by the public but by the men in uniform as well.

From the multitude of problems to be solved before adding women to the Army arose a humorous incident concerning the insignia for the uniforms, a fashion note of some importance to the first WACS.

Designers were initially somewhat at a loss about the insignia for the women, since the men's insignia usually portrayed the general function of the corps concerned. No one knew exactly what the WACS were supposed to do, except that they would perform several Army jobs.

A first design produced only a busy, bee-like insect, which Mrs. Oveta C. Hobby, originator and first director of the WACs, promptly dubbed a "bug," adding that she had no desire to be called the "Queen Bee."

Designers then hit upon the idea of the head of a Greek goddess, Pallas Athene, portrayed in Greek mythology as a goddess associated with an impressive variety of womanly virtues and no vices either womanly or god-like.

She was the goddess of handicrafts, wise in the industries of peace and the arts of war, the goddess of storms and battle who led through victory to peace and prosperity.

The Fort Des Moines training center opened to 440 officer candidates and 330 enlisted women. By March 1943, four other training centers for WACs had been established, including one at Fort Oglethorpe, Georgia, which got its start in January 1943.

Originally limited by law to a maximum of 25,000 women, the WAAC became an integral part of the Army on July 1, 1943, when new legislation shortened the designation to WAC and gave the women full equality with the men in pay, promotion standards, training and privileges.

The first WACS to arrive at Fort Benning on March 5, 1943, only 19 months after a women's Army was authorized, were greeted by a cold, drizzling rain, weather more often associated with Infantrymen than women.

But the WACs adapted quickly to the host of tasks before them. Within weeks, they had taken on responsibility in many areas, serving in almost every capacity from secretary to Major General Fred L. Walker, the post conmander, to parachute rigger with the relatively new Parachute School.

At one point, the WACs also managed one of the post exchanges, successfully fulfilling their original purpose — to provide clerical and administrative help to the Infantry Center, Troop Command, U. S. Army Garrison, their present title.

According to Captain Miriam Turner, WAC Company commander, the mission of the WACs here is to support and strengthen the manpower of the Infantry Center as well as its attached and assigned units throughout the post.

Although WACs no longer serve as parachute riggers with the Airborne Department, the diversity of their roles is almost as wide as those of the units assigned to this Third Army post. Photographers, air traffic controllers, finance specialists, physical therapists, dental technicians and data processing personnel perform the soldier's full range of non-combat duties in support of the post's varied missions.

These women, who are indicative of the range of technical skills brought to the WACs in recent years, are complimented by clerk-typists and administrative specialists assigned to many post units.

struggling to meet the manpower requirements of World War II.

WAC officers relieved for active duty overseas a number of officers connected with the administration of the Infantry School and the operation of the post.

By May 1944, at the peak of the war and only one month before D Day, six WAC detachments were active at Fort Benning.

The first WACS to go overseas were requested by General Eisenhower for service in North Africa shortly after the Allied invasion there. These five WAC officers led the way for the more than 100 women who arrived for duty at Allied Headquarters in Algiers in January 1943.

Women continued to go overseas, and in July 1943, a large group arrived in England for duty with the 8th Air Force of the Army Air Corps. While in England, the WACs achieved several distinctions.

The Army Air Corps was the first branch of the Army to promote a WAC to the rank of lieutenant colonel, first to request the employment of WAC officer in non-WAC operational-type duties, and the first to allow its insignia to be worn by members of the WAC.

Before the end of the war in Europo, more than 16,000 women were serving in North Africa, England, India, China, Egypt, Australia and the tropical islands in the South Pacific. The Corps numbered more than 100,000 when the war ended.

Between January 1945 and May 1953, the WACS underwent five reorganizations and changes in designation at Fort Benning. Finally, on February 10, 1958, they were given the name WAC Company, U.S. Army Infantry Center

UNITED STATES ARMY
THE CHIEF OF STAFF

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE WOMEN'S ARMY CORPS

The men and women of the United States Army join me in saluting the members of the Women's Army Corps on their twenty-seventh anniversary.

This outstanding all-volunteer force is one in which the Army takes great pride. The record of achievement attained by the Women's Army Corps over these years has been marked by the selfless dedication of its individual members to the highest ideals of service and patriotism. Women of the Corps, numbering over 12,000 strong, serve beside their male counterparts at Army posts throughout the world, including Vietnam.

To our gallant and courageous comrades in service, we express our appreciation today for your valuable contributions to the United States Army and our beloved country.

Project 100,000 Excedes Projected Goals

Commander's Digest

A new report from "Project One Hundred Thousand" shows that through the first 28 months of operation, the program is running well ahead of its projected goals.

During this time, 172,812 "New Standards" men, or those who are acceptable under revised test scores and educational standards as well as for correctable physical defects, were taken into the Armed Forces. The goal for the 28-month period was 168,317.

Mr. I. M. Greenberg, director of the program, said that most New Standards men are satisfactory servicemen. He stated, "New Mental Standards men do not perform as well as the Control Group men when they are compared in terms of training attrition, promotions, supervisory ratings, offenses and attrition from service. The differences are low and are at an acceptable level."

The Control Group is made up of specified men who come into the military service under regular standards. They are used as a comparison with the New Standards men.

Project One Hundred Thousand was started in October, 1966, when the Department of Defense revised the entrance standards for military service and began accepting men who would have been disqualified in the past because of failure to meet the mental standards and for physical defects which are easily correctible. This special group of troops are identified as "New Standards" men.

Mr. Greenberg emphasized that, while entrance standards have been revised, "performance standards have not been lowered." He said the New Standard's men must meet the same criteria as other men for graduating training courses, for advancement and for retention in the service.

They are not singled out or stigmatized in any manner. After completion of basic training, they are trained in a military skill through formal courses or by on-the-job training. Mr. Greenberg said there are provisions at all stages of training for giving them extra help during training, if they need assistance.

Phase III of the program, which began in October, 1968 and which will run through June, is expected to bring into the service about 70,000 New Standards men. At the end of January, 32,145 had already been accepted.

During the first 28 months, nearly 10 per cent of all enlisted non-prior service accessions were New Standards men and 67 per cent of these have gone to the Army. About 53 per cent were volunteers.

For DoD as a whole, 86.4 per cent of the New Mental Standards men successfully completed basic training, compared to a success rate of 97.7 per cent for all other men.

The report points out that New Standards men perform significantly better in combat-type training courses and the simpler technical courses than in the more technical training areas. They tend to perform best in training courses which stress practical work and do not require significant reading and mathematical abilities. This can probably be related to the fact that, although they have an average of 10.6 school grades completed, their average reading and arithmetic ability is at the 6th grade level.

Aside from the combat type skills, the most common assignments for New Standards men are in food service, supply, wire communications, motor transport and automotive repair.

In promotions, after 19 to 21 months of service, 53 per cent of the New Mental Standards men in grade E-4 and above, compared to 59 per cent for the Control Group.

Mr. Greenberg said a very high proportion of New Standards men qualify as fully satisfactory servicemen when exposed to the modern instructional techniques used in the Armed Forces. As a by-product, their service would prepare them for more productive lives when they returned to civilian life.

The attrition from service rate for New Standards men is higher than for the control group, "but at an acceptable level" the report says. As of Sept. 30, 1968, the DoD attrition from service for New Standards with 19-21 months service was 11.6 per cent compared to 5.9 per cent for the Control Group.

Mr. Greenberg said a very high proportion of New Standards men qualify as fully satisfactory servicemen when exposed to the modern instructional techniques used in the Armed Forces. As a by-product, their service would prepare them for more productive lives when they returned to civilian life.

He said, "The revision in entrance standards is also resulting in a more equitable sharing of the opportunities and obligations for military service among the Nation's youth."

Vice Chief of Staff Visits Florida Ranger Camp

By 2nd Lt. Wade Roop

Eglin Air Force Base—Army Vice Chief of Staff General Bruce C. Palmer recently visited the Florida Ranger Camp to observe first hand the final training phases given to commissioned and noncommissioned officers enrolled in the rigorous course.

General Palmer arrived at the Florida Camp April 22 for the one-day visit during which he observed Ranger training including the jungle live fire course, artillery, adjustment training, and stream crossing methods.

Upon his arrival he was greeted by Col. Y. Y. Philips, Director of the Ranger Department, and Maj. Charles E. Getz, commanding officer of the Florida Ranger Camp. General Palmer was briefed on the program of instruction presented by the Rangers with particular emphasis on the counter-guerrilla phases at the Florida Ranger Camp.

While there he observed Ranger Class 11-68 as they conducted final phases of their training.

33 Junior Girl Scouts To Attend Field Trip

By Diana Kelley

Recently a group of 23 sixth graders were selected from among the 11 Junior Girl Scout Troops at Fort Benning to attend a field trip to Tuskegee Institute and Montgomery, Alabama.

The first stop was at Tuskegee Institute at Tuskegee, Alabama. They visited the home of Booker T. Washington, the only American to make the long journey from a slave cabin to the Hall of Fame. The girls learned that Booker T. Washington believed in a practical education and in addition to regular academic subjects, skills in building construction, bricklaying, cooking, handicrafts, agriculture, and the blacksmith trade were highly encouraged.

The girls saw the Chapel that was very modern in concept and which was made with sundried bricks that came from the school's brickyard and from the native Alabama clay. Most of the work was done by students in the trade school along with others that had graduated from the institute. The girls were told of the "Singing Windows" that will eventually be placed in the Chapel.

The museum showed some of the greatest contributions of George Washington Carver. It was one building that the girls wanted to stay in longer. The Capitol Building, with its impressive front steps, the six-point star where Jefferson Davis took oath of office as President of the Confederate States of America, the cantilevered staircases, and a crowning dome beside the eight large murals left the girls breathless (or maybe it was the walk up the three flights of stairs.)

The House of Representatives a well as the Senate Chamber was visited. Across the street they saw the White House of the Confederacy where Jefferson Davis lived during his hour of greatest triumph.

Next to this was the Department of Archives and History. It was filled with the tradition and history of Alabama and a place the girls did not want to leave. All three places offered informative guided tours.

Art Linkletter Show At Benning Tuesday

Television personality Art Linkletter and a special tour party will arrive at Fort Benning Tuesday in preparation for a special program, Wednesday for military families of the Fort Benning area.

The Linkletter World Tour to Military Families program will begin at 2 p.m. in the Main Post Theater with admission by ticket. There is no charge for the program.

Among the special guests of Linkletter will be the Military Wife of the Year, who is to be chosen this week in Washington, D. C. Also to accompany the tour party is movie actress and radio personality Chris Noel.

Highlights of the show will be entertainment by the Linkletter tour party and interviews with Fort Benning wives, children and local talents.

Tickets for the program may be obtained beginning Saturday at the Main Post Theater from 2 to 9 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday and from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. Monday and Tuesday. Tickets will also be available at the Main Post Exchange and Commissary.

'Pajama Tops' Is Next Playhouse Production

The risque French farcical comedy "Pajama Tops," by Mawby Green and Ed Feilbert will follow the successful running of the "Fantasticks" as the Fort Benning Playhouse's next production.

"We had a very successful run with the 'Fantasticks' last month," said Robert J. Hanley, an entertainment specialist who played one of the leading roles in that production. "In four nights we played to almost 1,000 people in the Entertainment Center."

Despite capacity crowds at the Playhouse, "Pajama Tops," is scheduled to tour post on the newly purchased showmobile.

"Through use of the showmobile," explained Hanley, "We can hit more of the troops, up to 3,000 at a time, compared to 250 at the Playhouse itself. It also enables us to bring entertainment to the troops that ordinarily couldn't get to us.

"We need seven actors and a stage crew of 15 to put on this show," said Hanley, "There are 4 male and three female roles. The female parts call for women in the early or middle twenties but the male parts have no age bracket."

Tryouts for the new production will be held May 20-21 at 7 p.m. at the Playhouse Bldg. 1237, located behind the Infantry Museum.

Synopsis

WINNING — The stock cars, sports cars, lady types — they are all part of Paul Newman's life as one of the top auto race drivers in the country. A race is lost because a 16 cent linkage lock nut breaks or a race is won in a wheel to wheel duel and breaking the curve first. It's racing at its best with unusual excitement and suspense.

THE FIRST TIME — The story is about a trio of teen-age boys undergoing that awkward and painful interlude between bicycles and girls wherein certain biological processes often called the "facts of life" occupy most of their thoughts. Suffice it to say that the story goes on to relate in a hilarious fashion a youthful experience a lot of men will recall as their own.

A MINUTE TO PRAY, A SECOND TO DIE — A drama about the violent, greedy men in lawless New Mexico Territory of the 1870's. This Western adventure reveals the inescapable trap which life by the gun can create. Alex Cord stars as the "Wanted Man" — hounded not only by lawmen and bounty hunters, but by his own deep-rooted fears.

SWISS FAMILY ROBINSON — The story of a Swiss family fleeing from the oppressions of Napoleon who became stranded on a desert island well short of its destination. . .New Guinea. There is sustained action, laughter, suspense and a charming love story which unfolds before you to a totally unexpected climax. Fine motion picture entertainment for the whole family.

THE GREEN SLIME — A spellbinding outer-space thriller that will keep you on the edge of your seat as you view one spectacular thrill after the other in a drama in which spacemen of the future encounter slimy green creatures on an asteroid, the like of which have never been conceived before!

Winners Announced in New Recognition Program

By Wade Roop

The United States Army Infantry School (USAIS) has announced the first winners in a new special recognition program for correspondence course students who excel academically while carrying a heavy course schedule.

Nearly 30,000 students are enrolled in the program studing a wide variety of subjects ranging from Drill and Command and Weapons, to Leadership and Brigade Tactics.

First Lieutenant Bobby G. Stewart of Hugo, Okla., has been awarded the distinction of being the first Infantry School distinguished correspondence course student under the new program. He completed 300 hours of correspondence course work through the Nonresident Instruction Department ter of 1969. The period spans from Jan. 1 to March 31.

Stewart, who attained an academic average of excellent and higher, will receive a personal letter of congratulations from Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., commandant of the Infantry School. He will also receive a citation announcing his selection as distinguished correspondence course student for the first quarter.

Ontstanding Work

In commending the work of Stewart, Gen. Wright noted that his outstanding work is indicative of a high degree of intelligence, professional competence, and dedication to duty.

Gen. Wright also said Stewart's record should be an inspiration to to others who are improving their military education through the time-honored correspondence course program of the Infantry School.

The school's correspondence course program is not new to the lieutenant. He completed the Army Precommission Extension Course through the school in 1964 with a rating of excellent. He received a direct commission as second lieutenant in the U.S. Army Reserve in 1965.

Eleven other students were selected as outstanding correspondence course students for the third quarter. The group was cited for an average rating of excellent or higher in order of work completed in the course.

Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the Infantry School, will send a personal letter of congratulations to the 11 honor students. Gen. Berry commended the honor students for their display of intelligence, initiative, diligence and preserverance in attaining honors in the course.

The top 11 honor students are: 2nd Lt. John J. Higgins III, completing 327 hours work, from Melrose, Mass.; Sp 4 Richard M. Trent Jr., 220 hours, Radford, Va.; Sp 4 Leland A. Hansen Jr., 204 hours, Salt Lake City, Utah; Maj. William C. Benway, 200 hours, Fort Collins, Colo.; Capt. David L. Hanson, 200 hours, Rochester, Minn.; S-Sgt. Michael H. Dunfield, 188 hours, Salt Lake City, Utah; Sp 4 Jerald R. Fink, 167 hours, Belmont, Calif.; PFC James M. Mayo Jr., 158 hours, Atlanta, Ga.; S-Sgt. Leo Ross, 153 hours, Bessemer, Ala.; 2nd Lt. Lee C. Basnar, 150 hours, Fort Huachuca, Ariz.; S-Sgt. Harry Beliunas, 110 hours, 1st Battalion (M), 67th Infantry in Europe.

In addition to these honor students, 61 additional students were entered on the U.S. Army Infantry School correspondence course honor roll for the third quarter with an average rating of excellent or higher.

Each honor roll student is to receive a personal letter of commendation from Col. Albert N. Ward Jr., director of the Nonresident Instruction Department. They will also receive a USAIS honor roll certificate.

Col. Ward commended the students for the achievement and the initiative, professional competence and determination exhibited by the men in achieving a high level of academic excellence.

421 students of the program received certificates of academic excellence for earning more than 10 credit hours with an average of excellent or higher during the first quarter.

Common Terms

In commenting on the new special recognition program of the correspondence course program, Gen. Wright notedthe terms "intelligence, perseverance, determination and initiative," are frequently used in commending these men.

"These are essential ingredients of a self study, self improvement program, which is basically voluntary in nature," he said.

While recognition is important, the most important aspect is that each student will continue to reap the benefits of the increased professional knowledge he has acquired through his own efforts, the General concluded.

In the final analysis, the Army, as well as the individual, is the winner through increased education, Gen. Wright declared.

"YEAH, SURE SARGE, BUT I'M GETTING DISCHARGED TOMORROW!!"

Colonel Casale Retires After 28 Years Duty

Col. Carlos C. Casale received the first oak leaf cluster to the Legion of Merit from Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr. at a retirement ceremony held April 30.

Col. Casale, who retired after more than 28 years service, has been the maintenance officer of the United States Army Infantry Center since June 1968.

Combat Artist Program To Expand in FY 1970

WASHINGTON (ANF)—The soldier phase of the Army Combat Artist Program initiated in 1966 will be expanded and continued during fiscal year 1970 under the designation "Army Artist Program." This program is sponsored jointly by The Adjutant General, Chief of Military History and Chief of Information.

Under the new designation, authorized by the Secretary of the Army, soldier artists will document military activities throughout the Army. Complete details on the program appear in DA Circular 28-40, dated April 17, 1969.

The original Combat Artist Program was limited to recording military activities in the Republic of Vietnam.

During fiscal year 1970, the program will sponsor two teams of soldier artists, one in the Republic of Vietnam and the second in the Republic of Korea. Each team will spend 60 days on location making sketches, then transfer to Hawaii for 75 days to prepare finished paintings from their sketches. All work by the soldier artists will become a part of the U. S. Army Art Collection in the Office, Chief of Military History.

All applicants for the FY 1970 program must have a written appraisal of their qualifications as an artist from an Army Crafts Director and an authorization for release from duty for 135 days signed by their commanding officer.

Applications must be prepared on DA Form 2496 and forwarded through official military command channels to: The Adjutant General, ATTN: AGMS-C, Department of the Army, Washington, D. C. 20315. Application deadline is Dec. 1, 1969.

HUSBAND HONORED . . . Mrs. Nevolia E. Wright receives medals for meritorious service awarded posthumously to her husband, SFC James G. Wright Sr. Col. Wiley B. Wisdom, deputy post commander, makes the presentation.

DA Warns

Are They Authorized?

The Department of the Army has issued a letter to unit commanders warning that unauthorized uniform items such as rope braids and colored discs to be worn under brass are being sold to persons in the Army.

The message warns Army personnel that many pawn and loan shops are selling these items and assuring the buyers that they are authorized, when in fact they are not.

Anyone considering buying any uniform items is reminded to check the authorization before making a purchase.

ROTC Cadets To Visit Fort Benning

More than 200 seniors ROTC students from four universities in Georgia and Alabama will visit Fort Benning May 16.

The future Army officers are currently enrolled in senior ROTC programs at Auburn, Ala., University, Florence, Ala., State University, Mercer University in Macon, Ga., and the Georgia Institute of Technology, (Georgia Tech) in Atlanta.

The groups from Mercer, Georgia Tech and Florence State, will arrive by bus Thursday, May 15, afternoon, and will remain overnight for the day-long activities on Friday. The Auburn students will drive here early Friday morning, May 16.

On Friday, May 16, the students will visit several areas of the post, and observe display and demonstrations.

The students, with the exception of the group from Florence, will return to their respective campuses following the Friday activities.

Florence State students will remain overnight Friday and will depart the post Saturday morning, May 17.

THE FORUM
THE FORUM

BY PAUL MANGIONE

The Canadians are an athletic people, partly out of desire and partly necessity. Let's face it, you just can't stand around in eleven feet of snow and talk. It becomes a real problem to prevent the feet from turning blue; so you move. No game is more suited to Canada's needs than ice hockey after all, there is plenty of ice laying about so why not put it to use?

Canada has done just that and in the process created an exciting game, ice hockey. The Canadian preoccupation with hockey has led some people to the conclusion that no American sport could compete on an equal plain with Canadian hockey. But baseball? there is more action in some hockey warm-ups than in a whole baseball game.

The pessimist's admonishments ignored, Canada got a major league baseball team. Montreal won the franchise and some groans were heard but not very clearly as the din of the cheering fans tended to drown it out. Baseball had come to Canada and it was there to stay. The Canadians are great baseball fans (most hockey players indulge in some softball in the off-season,) and many know more about the American sport than some Yankees. The Canadians love sports, just about any sport as long as it is played well and played hard.

Montreal christened their new team the Expos. The fledgling ball club won a lot of fans mostly because they won a lot of games, something expansion teams aren't supposed to do. The Expo's opener against the world champion-Cardinals drew a standing room only crowd. They went home happy as the Expos beat the Cardinals to record Canada's first win and baseball was under way in the "frozen north."

The Expos don't plan to provide a rest period for visiting teams on the way to a pennant. No realist expects the Expos to capture the flag, except maybe the Expos and their throng of admirers. They won't be push-overs. The Expos will win more games than any of the other expansion teams because they are better than the rest. They will continue to draw good crowds because they play a hard and fast version of baseball. They've managed to beat almost every other team in the National league at least once.

No they are not going to be push overs, the others will have to try hard to beat the Expos and if they don't try hard the others will lose. The Expos have proven they can play with the best, they may not always win but they can play. They will win their share and they will get better over the years. Don't be surprised if the World Series is played on foreign soil for the first time in a couple of years.

What about "King Hockey?" He's still king and his throne is as secure as ever. The Canadians have something to do between seasons now but they will come back to the rink like they always have because ice hockey is number one in the hearts of Canadians. Now if they could just play baseball on ice skates. . .

Benning Hosts Teams For Volleyball Tourney

Third Army Champs Defend Title May 12-16

By Robert Mast

Teams from nine Third United States Army Areas will compete with host defending champions, Fort Benning, in the 1969 Third United States Army Volleyball Tournament here May 12-16.

A total of 110 players from Fort Bragg, N. C.; Fort Campbell, Ky.; Fort Gordon, Ga.; Fort Jackson, S. C.; Fort Rucker, Ala.; Fort McClellan, Ala.; Fort McPherson, Ga. Fort Stewart, Ga.; and Hunter Army Airfield, Ala., will arrive at Fort Benning May 10.

CSM Charles Fletcher, U. S. Army Infantry Center command sergeant major, will open the round robin tournament at 9:30 a.m. May 12 at the Harmony Church Field House, Bldg. 4493, by throwing up the first ball.

Gen. Wright or his representative will officially welcome the contestants at a welcoming banquet at the post's recreation area May 12 at 7 p.m.

"No matches will be played in this tournament," said Hubert L. Odom, Special Services athletic officer, and project officer for the event. Usually volleyball is played three games to a match, the contest decided by the best two of three games. "This tournament will consist of two divisions, each team meeting other teams in its division twice," according to Odom. "Each individual contest will consist of one game. The tournament will be decided by the number of games won and lost in each division."

Division A will consist of Forts Benning, Bragg, Campbell, Gordon, Jackson and Rucker. Division B. includes Forts McClellan, McPherson and Stewart, and Hunter Army Airfield.

This year's Fort Benning team will be coached by CSM William T. Mixon, command sergeant major of the Ranger Department. "We've been practicing for the past several months and are in better shape than last year's team," he said. Last year's team won the tournament. "We have seven returning players and new players who know the game well," according to player-coach Mixon.

Returning team members include CSM Mixon; Maj. Wilford A. Phelps, 20th Company, and Maj. Emil Roper, 27th company, both of 2nd Student Battalion, The Student Brigade; Capt. Peter Linn, Detachment 1, Ranger Department; and M. Sgt. Julian R. Guzman, SFC Alberto Gulisao and S-Sgt. Siaki Mane, all of 41st Company, 4th Student Battalion, The Student Brigade.

Other team members include Maj. Stan E. Shaneyfelt, Detachment 1, Ranger Department; Maj. Wilbur P. Spencer, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 4th Student Battalion, The Student Brigade; Sgt. Alejo B. Meno, Company A, and SP4 Michael Williams, Company E, both of 10th Battalion, 1st Basic Combat Training Brigade, Army Training Center.

Maj. Spencer, M. Sgt. Guzman, SFC Gulisao and front row School Ranger Department; and SP4 Michael H. Williams, Company E, 10th Battalion, First Basic Combat Training Brigade, Army Training Center. The team will defend its title as Third Army Champions against teams from Fort Bragg, N.C.; Fort Campbell, Ky; Fort Gordon, Ga.; Fort Jackson, S.C.. Fort Rucker, Ala.; Fort McClellen, Ala.; Fort McPherson, Ga.; Fort Stewart, Ga.; Hunter Army Airfield, Ala.

Miss Scott, Autumn Miss Capture CG's Trophy

The Commanding General's Trophy was won by Bobra Scott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert T. Scott (845 Brown Ave.) Columbus, Ga., at the 7th annual horse show, sponsored by the Fort Benning Pony Club at French Polo Field May 3.

Her horse, Autumn Miss, was judged the best in the open working hunter competition.

Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., commanding general, U. S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning, made the presentation.

Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, commanding general, U. S. Army Training Center, Infantry, presented the U. S. Army Training Center, Infantry Trophy to Edea Coldwell (Atlanta, Georgia) whose mount, Shim Shuree, was judged best in the green working hunter class.

Nan Berry, daughter of Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the U. S. Army Infantry School, and Mrs. Berry, received a cash award in the green working hunter competition.

He mount, Just Hash, finished first in the green working hunter stake.

The first place trophy for maiden equitation over fences was given to Marcia Safar, daughter of Lieutenant Colonel Milo Safar of the U.S. Army Dental Unit and Mrs. Safar.

Lieutenant Colonel Evan Parker, U. S. Marine Corps representative at Fort Bening, made the presentation.

The show featured a special outside course in the competition in the junior handy hunter and open handy working hunter events.

Approximately 1,500 people from four southeastern states attended. A dinner at the Fort Benning Country Club followed the show.

ROD AND GUN CLUB NOTES

Whitacre Is 'Top Gun'

Army Wins at California

By Bill Kloeb

The 18-ounce bream caught by SFC Jack Maple early in the month held up to win the bream category of the April Fishing Derby. Sgt. Robert Crossland won the catfish prize with his 8-pound 2-ounce entry and S-Sgt. Jack C. Chapman, Company C, U. S. Army Infantry Center Troop Command, registered an 8-pound 2-ounce bass at 8 p.m. April 30 to win the bass contest. Chapman took his bass from Averett's Pond using a rod and reel and a black fliptail.

The May derby got off to a good start with Capt. A. J. Holhorn of the Ranger Department registering a 9-pound bass caught with a rebel lure at Harp's Pond Saturday, May 3.

Crossman who won the catfish prize for April came right back Saturday (May 3) with a 7-pound catfish caught from Victory Pond. He made his catch with rod and reel using shad for bait.

Retired S-Sgt. Jimmie Sharp, 100 Calvin Ave., is leading the bream contest with a 12½-ounce entry caught with a cricket at Harp's Pond.

Harp's pond, located on Keystone Trail about eight-tenths of a mile south of the intersection of Keystone and Buckeye Trails, produces some of the largest fish caught on the reservation. This 56-acre pond is located in a major impact area so fishing is usually limited to week-ends, and holidays. The pond was last stocked in May, 1955, with 6,000 bass and 60,000 bream. It has an excessive watershed and fertilization is impracticable. Management bas been directed towards clearance of the shoreline and maintenance of picnic areas. There are 18 Rod and Gun Club boats available for rent at this pond.

Averett's Pond, located on Americo Trail approximately one mile from the intersection of Americo Trail and Rinehart Road is one of the seven post ponds that receive intensive management. This 12-acre pond was last rehabilitated in 1962 when the pond was drained, the shoreline deepened and a control valve was installed in the dam. In January of 1963 it was refilled and stocked with 1,600 bass and 16,000 bream. Since then, fertilizer has been applied several times a year and the shoreline has been maintained to keep the brush controlled. Seine samplings indicate adequate bass reproduction and high numbers of intermediate bream.

Many anglers have a firm opinion that the phase of the moon has everything to do with whether or not the fishing is good but not all look at it in the same manner.

The big controversy, however does not center so much on the time of day as on the time of the month. A certain percentage of anglers believe fish are more cooperative when the moon is waxing fat while just as many think a waning moon has more influence on the feeding habits of the finny tribe.

This does not indicate all of these fellows are strictly night fishermen. What they say is that what the moon does at night is important to how the underwater gamesters will act in the daytime.

As far as we know, there has never been any scientific research to prove which of these theories will hold more water than the other and even if the technical people did come up with facts to substantiate one claim over the other, we are certain they could never convince a dyed-in-the-moonbeam fisherman.

For those who do their angling between sunset and sunup, there is still another theory. Some declare the full moon is responsible for more, angling success and others would not think of venturing forth except when the darkness is so complete that about the only two senses to remain operative are taste and touch and quite a few don't particulary mind what they are tasting.

Some dark night, lads claim that fish can see in total blackness. Others claim a fish feeds by sound or by feeling the vibrations a lure gives off as it moves in the water.

The 1-point Army Blue team was out pointed by two points in the .22 team match. Navy won it with 1182, Air Force was second with 1181 and Army Blue had an 1180.

Victorious Army Blue Team members were Blankenship, Whitacre, Harmon and Anderson.

AFC Robert Whitacre, the hottest shooter on the U.S. Army Pistol team, led the team by firing 2660 out of 2700 for the three gun 2700 Championship. Whitacre was closely pursued by his teamate S.Sgt. Bonnie Harmon with 2658.

SFC Hershel Anderson started the army team off by winning the .22 aggregate with a 894-49x. He outX'ed SGM William Blankenship, U.S. Army, 894-35x by 15 x's for the win. Whitacre was on point behind with 893 but third in the over-all standings. During the Center Fire match Whitacre fired an 897-54x to win the aggregate and to take the lead in the over-all standings. Harmon was 14's behind Whitacre, 887x40x for second in the Center Fire aggregate.

PO1 Herbert DeLong of the Navy won the final, .45 aggregate with 88.8 Blankenship of the Army was second with 887.

In the international style matches, SSG. Merriweather Jones, U.S. Army won the Center Fire match with 553 and Blankenship won the International Slow Fire match with 556.

The Army marksmen teamed together to win three of the four team matches. Army Blue team won the Center Fire team match, 1175, the .45 team match, 1175, and the Service Pistol Team match with a 1168. The Army

COMPUTER CORNER ON SPORTS

By Bud Goode

What does the electronic computer see for the 1969 pennant race in the Western Division of the American League?

Using an electronic computer to measure the strengths and weaknesses of baseball teams has proven helpful — for the average fan can't remember every one of the 6000 at bats in a season . . . the many hits, runs, errors or base on balls. But the computer can remember — and weight each factor in importance.

Here's what Computer Corner sees for the American League in the West:

TEAM	Estimated Runs	Opponent's Runs	Strength Ratio, R/OR	Final
MINNESOTA	630	580	1.10	1
OAKLAND	600	510	1.08	2
CHICAGO	490	500	.97	3
CALIFORNIA	530	600	.88	4
KANSAS CITY	450	650	.70	5
SEATTLE	450	650	.70	5

Although much of the American League strength falls in the Eastern Division, one of the most exciting races will take place in the West between the Minnesota Twins and Oakland Athletics. Can the rookie Oakland squad upset the Twins? The Las Vegas line says Oakland 2-to-1. Computer Corner says that Charley Finley must buy one more pitcher to make the grade.

How about the expansion teams, Kansas City and Seattle? No telling how they will do each they have 30 games under their belts. Our first estimate is that they will trail the league.

The Chicago White Sox? They lost consistently the first two weeks of last year, never overcoming the handicap. But Computer Corner's progress charts show the Sox improving after their dismal start. If Chicago ever developed just one new hitter in their rookie ranks, they would be a threat. Currently they don't have the balance.

As for the California Angels, their pitchers have sore arms. It looks like a long haul for the Angels to climb into contention. If manager Bill Rigney thinks he's near the top of the ladder, it is probable that the only way he'll do it is with the help of Hekins Van and Storage.

Gen. Davis Scores 72 In ATC Golf Tourney

ATC Commander, Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, shooting a net score of 72, captured the championship flite of the ATC Open Handicap Golf Tournament Saturday at Lakeside Course.

Capt. James C. Riley, Co. B, 9th Battalion, 2nd Brigade, followed closely on the heels of General Davis with a net score of 73 for the runner-up position.

Entries for the 18-hole open were broken down into three flites with nine players per flite. Handicaps ranged from 0 to 36.

Champion and runner-up for the first flite were Lt. John E. Purks, Hq., 8th Bn., firing a net 66 score and Lt. Walter T. Higgason, Co. D, 1st Bn., 1st Bde., netting a 73. CWO Wayne L. Fair, reception Station, fired a net 68 to capture the second flite. He was pursued closely by Lt. Col. Edward E. Betts, G-3, shooting a 69.

Duffer trophies were presented to Lt. David E. Stoltz, G-3, for the highest gross score; Chaplain N. A. Russo, heaviest golf bag; Capt. Charles R. Cresciona, Co. D, 1st Bn, 1st Bde., for the most 7's given on a score card; and CWO Fair, the shortest drive on the 1st hole. (50 yards).

In other ATC sports action during the past week, the slowpitch league got under way with 7th Bn. beating Hq. Det. 17-8. The fast pitch league began action this week with ATC splitting a doubleheader with 10th Aviation Group.

ATC Splits Twin-Bill For Season Opener

The ATC fast pitch soft ball season got under way Monday night at Bennett Field as they split a double header with 10th Aviation. ATC took the opener with a score of 4-0 and 10th Aviation bounced back with 11-1.

In the first game ace hurler Donald McClusky held down 10th Aviation with a three hitter. The first ait came with a bunt in the 1st inning, and the other two in the last.

The action began in the top of the 4th inning as ATC's McClusky lead off with a single and Neil Carsrud lined a hot grounder to short for another single.

With runners on first and second Phillip Doran bunted down the first base line and loaded the bases. Roy Williams lined a hard hit single into right field bringing across two runs home the third run with a Mike Masceriens brought home the third run with a hit past second. In the fifth inning, ATC came across with their final run.

Tenth Aviation came back primed for the second game, and scored three runs in the second inning, and five in the third, two in the fifth and one in the sixth.

ATC's only run came in the first inning as the 10th Aviation hurler walked the first two men setting up the bases for a run batted in by Jack Rhodes single.

ATC's next game will be with 197th Infantry Brigade tonight at Bennett Field.

Active and retired military and civilian members of the Department of Defense (DOD) who are interested in writing have a chance to win $25 to $300. A total of $550 will be awarded to winners in the second annual essay contest sponsored by the Fund for the Advancement of Management in the Armed Forces.

The purpose of the contest, is to "promote the advancement of management in the armed forces by encouraging members of DOD to conduct research and to write on the area of general and functional management."

Subjects suggested for the contest, based on their application to the military services, include studies of current management practices; analysis, discussion, conclusions and recommendations concerning a specific contemporary problem in military installation management; the development of practical methods through which computers may be used to improve management; and the study of any general or functional management area which will aid in producing a more effective operation within DOD.

Essays must be typed in double space on one side of 8 by 10½-inch bond paper. Contest entries must be no longer than 20 pages. All essays must have all pages numbered and fastened together and there must be at least a one-inch margin on all pages.

In addition, the entries must be submitted under a nom de plume and each entry will contain the full name and address of the competitor on a separate sheet of paper, inclosed in a sealed envelope. The envelope should contain the assumed name on the outside.

Those persons who write prize-winning essays will have their essays published in "Army Management Views."

The essays will be judged on originality and the value of the essay's contribution to the advancement of management in the armed forces. Essays will become the property of the Fund for the Advancement of Management in the Armed Forces.

All entries should be submitted no later than Septemger 30 to the Fund for the Advancement of Management in the Armed Forces, U. S. Army Management School, Fort Belvoir, Virginia 22060.

Expanded Two Weeks

McClellan to Conduct Pilot Test Vietnam AIT

FORT McPHERSON, Ga.. (ANF)—Headquarters, Third U. S. Army has selected Fort McClellan, Ala., to conduct a pilot test for expansion, from nine to 10 weeks, of Vietnam-oriented advanced infantry training. Commanding General of the U. S. Continental Army Command, General James K. Woolnough, made the announcement during a recent visit to Fort McClellan.

The test of extended infantry training will place increased emphasis on land navigation and map reading, ambush techniques, night training and techniques of fire.

Fort McClellan's infantry advanced individual training brigade will add one company to accommodate the test. The expanded training program has been prepared by the brigade commander, Col. Chester R. Smith.

The first company to take the 10-week course was scheduled to begin training May 5. The soldiers will enter the new portion of the cycle on June 23.

'Man to Beat' at CTC In Drive-Off Contest

By Richard Stirlen

Since its conception in January 1969, Center Troop Command's Driver of the Month program has supplied three contestants to the Post Driver of the Quarter competition.

While CTC's entries did not finish with top honors in this recent contest, Captain Robert L. Hauck, assistant S-1, at CTC, says that Private Mark Karinen, 56th Supply and Srvice Battalion, who captured the CTC laureis for April, "will be the man to beat in the up-coming Post drive-off."

The CTC driver program consists of a three part examination. Every company sized element in CTC is eligible to send one representative each month to compete in the command-wide competition. The winner is selected on a point basis, with a total of 150 possible points being awarded for the exhibition of driving skill and know how.

The first phase of the test involves a 25 question written exam, which includes items to check the driver on his knowledge of courtesies of the road, and civilian and military traffic regulations. This examination is worth a total of 80 points, the highest for any section.

Following the written portion, each driver is assigned an inspector and must take him on a road test. Drivers with either a jeep or ton-and-a-quarter truck are required to drive their vehicle in traffic situations around the main post area, while those with two-and-a-half ton trucks are observed during the check run on more open, hilly terrain. "This way", says Captain H. Hauck, "neither the small nor the large vehicle driver are given an unfair advantage." A driver can earn up to 50 points for this driving demonstration.

Finally, as each driver is responsible for the condition of his vehicle, the inspector gives each one a technical examination. Any break from prescribed maintenance methods can subtract from the 20 point value of this section.

Also, however, the contestants are judged on their physical appearance, previous driving record, and driver qualification scores. Any man who fails to meet minimum standards in any of these areas may be dropped from the competition.

As CTC's Driver of the Month receives an attractive plaque, while the Post Driver of the Quarter is awarded a $25 savings bond, vehicle operators should contact their Motor Sergeants to see how they can represent their respective company in the up-coming competitions.

Chief of Staff Says:

'Army Blends Capabilities With U.S. National Goals'

COMMANDER'S DIGEST

Gen. William C. Westmoreland, Army Chief of Staff, sees today's Army blending its military capabilities into an integrated whole, involving all of the instruments of national policy — political, economic, diplomatic — all a part of a well-orchestrated national effort.

An audience at Kansas State University, Manhattan, Kans., also heard the general declare, "The Army must not only be prepared and flexible to meet new and unforseen requirements to support national programs, it must also be prepared to do so effectively within the bounds of our national style."

The address, delivered April 9, was Gen. Westmoreland's effort, as a lecturer, to bridge what he termed the abyss called the "generation gap."

Followng are excerpts of the general's speech:

". . .in an effort to remain a political, let me acknowledge my awareness of the Selective Service issue. It is a deep philosophical question. If all are not to serve, who should serve? What are the economic and social implications of an all-volunteer force?

"As you know, President Nixon has recently appointed an Advisory Commission, composed of leading citizens, to study this matter in depth.

"I have purposely not gone into specifics on the Selective Service System — commonly called the draft — but I do want to make a point in passing. Contrary to what many people think, the Army has nothing to do with running the draft. The draft is run by an entirely separate agency of the government over which neither the Army nor the Department of Defense has any control. . ."

On the subject of education in the Army's officer corps, the general said, ". . .nearly 90 per cent of the career officers in the Army today hold baccalaureate degrees — our goal, of course, is 100 per cent.

"Also, under a civilian schooling program, specially selected officers are trained at leading universities in order to meet specific needs which demand the higher disciplines associated with masters degrees and doctorates. Today, some 20 per cent of our career officers already hold advanced degrees; and we estimate that approximately 75 per cent of our career officers may expect the opportunity to gain advanced degrees during their service.

". . .obviously, current demands have added new dimensions to the challenges faced by our military commanders. As never before, the military is in need of generalists, not specialists — officers who are military men first and foremost but who have an awareness and appreciation of the other factors that inevitably have a bearing on military policy. Vietnam is, undoubtedly, the best example of our need for this type of leader."

This so-called war of national liberation being less than total (compared to WWI and WWII) is often more complex . . . often more demanding.

For this reason, more than ever before, Gen. Westmoreland said, the Army needs the leader who is the "spherical thinker . . . not the man with stovepipe vision.

"We need the man who finds exhilaration in the study of all aspects of mankind: man's capacity to love and hate, his willingness to serve and desire to govern, his thirst for truth. . .the man who is just and compassionate . . .the man who is a humanist. We need the leader who looks out for his men, who knows his position as a servant of our people. . .who has the wisdom to see beyond his present actions to what their consequences might be."

At Training Center

Mayor Allen, Gen. Davis Review Graduating Soldiers

Columbus Mayor John R. Allen joined ATC commander Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis and Col. Richard H. Maeder, 1st Bde. Commander, as they reviewed graduating soldiers of the 4th Bn., 1st Bde., May 2 at Marshall Bowl.

A special section was provided for families and friends of graduating soldiers from Columbus-Phenix City — the largest group from the area to be graduated simultaneously.

The 4th Bn., commanded by Lt. Col. Thomas S. Dunmire, was cited for breaking the existing Training Center record for the number of men to score the maximum 500 points during physical combat proficiency testing.

A total of 16 soldiers were commended for this outstanding feat and were awarded plaques and "500 Club" Certificates.

Mayor Allen presented special awards to cadre and trainee personnel, including the Bronze Star Medal for meritorious service to 1st Lt. Eugene Westbrook, a training officer from Co. D.

Pvt. Willard H. Warmath Jr., Co. B was the recipient of the American Spirit Honor Medal and Pvt. Gregory C. Bedoe was named Battalion Outstanding Trainee.

Social Security

Data Processing Improves Service

The use of electronic data processing equipment in the social security office has improved the service to people in the eleven county area served by Columbus according to Robert E. O'Neal, District Manager.

To seed up this improved service, he urges people who get social security checks each month to report events which might affect their monthly benefit checks to his office. When the change of address is received in the social security office the message is sent to the payment center by teletype. In the payment center the teletype message is fed directly into an electronic computer. The computer changes the address instantly and the next check is mailed to the new address.

O'Neal says that many of the social security beneficiaries in the Columbus area have post cards addressed to a social security payment center. These cards are used to report changes of address, marriage, divorce, death or work to the Social Security Administration. He requests beneficiaries to mail these post cards directly to the Social Security Administration, P. O. Box 2406, Columbus, Ga. 31902. Post cards mailed directly to the payment center may delay checks.

O'Neals's office is open weekdays from 8:45 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 12 noon.

Physical, Mental, and Spiritual

Military Offers Growth Says Episcopal Minister

HQ, THIRD U.S. ARMY, Fort McPherson, Ga.—The following is the text of an article entitled "Military Service can Conduct One Swiftly Into Adulthood," which was extracted from a booklet MINISTRY TO THE ARMED FORCES, by the Rev. Edward L. Swanson. Mr. Swanson is civilian coordinator, office of the bishop for the armed forces, Episcopal Church Center, New York City.

"The armed forces offer a young man important satisfactions and accomplishments. He can grow physically, mentally, and spiritually. Military service is a unique testing ground. Its equality is pitiless and unparalleled.

Family, culture, religion, wealth, education, and station make no difference. A lad is on his own. Nobody saves him from the consequences of his actions. He is placed among his peers in the most elemental circumstances and tested to see of what stuff he is made. In barracks and aboard ship he lives with men of all types — coarse and refined, brutish and sensitive, rich and poor, intelligent and stupid. He need not like them but he must work with them and share in a common life.

There is value in this. To win acceptance on the basis of performance alone is one of life's deep satisfactions. The services make maximum demands, but they also reward performance. The hard-won corporal's stripes mean vastly more than a minuscule pay raise. And there is no escape for having to "deliver the goods."

"Military service is an opportunity to participate in a special way in the affairs of one's time. No man wisely seeks to escape the common experience of his age. The child's question, 'Where were you during the war, Daddy?" implies an expectation that Daddy was occupied with something relevant. When the rest of society is caught up in momentous events, one loses something if one has to say, "I had no part in them."

"To learn to function as a member of a team with full acceptance of personal accountability to its other members; to win such mastery over self that one can keep going while aching to quit; to be able to obey orders and accept discipline; to know that one is reliable—these are major accomplishments. They retain their value in civilian life. Thus, military service has a refining, purging effect. It can conduct one swiftly into adulthood.

BRIG. GEN. PAULICK

Paulick Visits Infantry Board

Brig. Gen. Michael Paulick, Deputy Commander, U. S. Army Test and Evaluation Command, was welcomed receotly upon his arrival at Lawson Army Airfield for a two day visit with the U. S. Army Infantry Board.

Gen. Paulick was met by Col. Walter F. Johnston, President of the Infantry Board.

This is the General's second visit to the Infantry materiel test activity since assuming the number two spot of the Test Command in May 1963. He uses the occasions to keep abreast of testing activities underway at the test board and to review plans for immediate and future testing.

Gen. Paulick was assigned here first as a lieutenant in August, 1940. His last assignment here in the early 1960s, was as a colonel and director, Airborne Air Mobility Department.

During Gen. Paulick's visit he toured the test ranges and facilities where he saw testing of the XM203 40-mm pump grenade launcher attachment to the M16A1 Rifle, a new foxhold cover, and the instrumented test range. The XM203 is the combined weapon system of the grenade launcher attached to the M16A1 rifle along with the proposed launcher sights.

3 Receive Commissions As Captains

Three privates first class and one private became captains here April 24 when they received commissions in the Judge Advocate General Corps.

Commissioning oaths were administered to captains Gary L. Martin (Minden, Neb.); Ronald A. Cimino, (Pittsburg, Pa.), Theron J. Cole (Bellehue, Wash.) and Charles A. Scharmmach (Syracuse, N. Y.). They were sworn in by Col. Robert A. Lathrop, Staff Judge Advocate of The U. S. Army Infantry Center.

Captain Martin received a B. S. degree from the University of Nebraska and a J. D. (law degree) from the University of Nebraska Law School. He entered the Army in October, 1968, taking basic training at Fort Dix, N. J.

Captain Martin is married to the former Jane Klosterman and is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred S. Martin, all of Minden.

Capt. Cimino received a B. A. degree from the University of Pittsburg and a J. D. from the University of Pittsburg School of Law. He entered the Army in October, 1968, taking basic training at Fort Dix, N. J. and advanced individual training at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.

Capt. Cole received a J. D. degree from the University of San Francisco. He entered the Army in September, 1968, taking basic training at Fort Ord, Calif.

Capt. Scharmmach received a B. A. degree from the University of Buffalo and a J. D. from the Syracuse University School of Law. He entered the Army in September, 1968, taking basic training at Fort Dix, N. J.

Service Club Directors Meet at Kelly Hill Today

By Frank Truchon

The Third U.S. Army Service Club program and recreation directors held the first session of a three-day seminar today at the Kelly Hill Service Club here.

Fifty-four directors from 30 service clubs throughout the Third Army area are participating in the event which is designed to find methods of improving service club programming.

Miss Verna H. Kriesel, staff service club director from Headquarters, Third U.S. Army, said, "We will be concentrating on programming events for today's young soldier. Our aim is to have something that will interest every man on every post."

Special guests at the seminar included Miss Pat Abernethy, chief of Service Clubs, Department of the Army; Miss Ruth Elwell, executive assistant to the regional chairman of Red Cross volunteers; and Major George Mayfield, chief of Special Services, Third U.S. Army.

New Medal Gets DOD Approval

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Design and criteria for the newly established Meritorious Service Medal (MSM) has been approved by the Department of Defense.

The MSM was authorized by executive order issued by former President Johnson to provide recognition for commendable achievement falling just below the requirements for the Legion of Merit.

The decoration is to rank with but worn after the Bronze Star. As it is a non-combat award, the 'V' device denoting valor is not authorized for the decoration.

All lieutenant generals and above are authorized to award the SMS. Authority is retroactive to Jan. 15, 1969, though recipients must have served part of the cited period after that date.

Dental Chief Visits Post May 8-10

By Bill Kloeb

Maj. Gen. Robert B. Shira, assistant surgeon general and chief, Army Dental Corps, will visit Fort Benning May 8-10 for an orientation concerning dental facilities and activities.

Gen. Shira began his Army career when he was commissioned a First Lieutenant in the Army Dental Corps in 1938. He served as Chief, Dental Activities, Gorgas Hospital, Canal Zone; Chief, Oral Surgery, Letterman General Hospital, San Francisco, Calif.; Chief, Dental Service and Chief, Oral Surgery, Walter Reed General Hospital, Washington, D.C., before being appointed Assistant Surgeon General and Chief of the Army Dental Corps in 1967.

Recognizing fire hazards can save your life

People are accustomed to living or working with fire hazards in their homes or shops and frequently don't realize they exist. This inability to recognize these fire hazards could mean your life or the life of a loved one. Now is the time to learn where these hazards are and how to eradicate them, during spring clean-up.

Good housekeeping plays a very important role in the prevention of fires in the home as well as where you work. And, Fire Prevention and good housekeeping go hand in hand. That is why clean properly seldom burns.

The basic means of fire prevention is through the maintenance of a high standard of cleanliness, both within the premises and out-of-doors. The proper and regular disposal of rubbish and other combustible waste material is of utmost importance. Metal containers with covers should be used for the disposal of such trash, and the contents should be removed from shops and buildings at the end of each day's work.

Rubbish and waste should not be allowed to accumulate out-of-doors where it can easily be ignited by a carelessly discarded cigarette.

The use of lockers for waste storage also can create a place for fire to start. In storing oily rags and clothes smeared with paint in the standard locker you create a good situation for spontaneous ignition. The danger of fire originating in such lockers is great. Oily and paint covered rags should be stored only in standard receptacles equipped with self-closing covers and removed from the building at the close of each work day.

Clean cotton waste and wiping rags also are considered hazardous because they are readily flammable and they should be handled in the same manner as dirty ones. Also excelsior, straw, sawdust, burlap and shredded paper are hazardous and should be treated like rags and waste.

Good housekeeping is the key to fire safety. A good workman or housewife not only keeps rubbish at a minimum, but through regular checkups keeps an eye out for any fire hazard or fire threat.

So begin today, check your home, shop or barracks for rubbish and other combustible material which constitutes a fire hazard. Anything that is of no value should be removed from the building and disposed of in the proper manner. (AFPS) anize the Army's Basic Combat Training and Advanced Individual Training programs.

He planned and directed or hosted major conferences to deal with the changing needs of the Infantry. In December, 1968 he directed a special "Basic Combat Training advanced Individual Training Conference", an in-depth study of the initial training of the individual soldier.

"The Infantry Battalion System Review" in April, 1969, attempted to project the needs of the Infantry over the next five years.

Both conferences stressed the importance of technological innovations and systematic planning in Infantry operations.

Under Gen. Wright's leadership, new emphasis was placed on Ranger and Airborne training and major improvements were made in parachute landing fall training.

A special Leadership Department was created and comes into being on May 21. The Student Brigade was reorganized and the Candidate Brigade established.

Thousands of young soldiers became three-stripers faster than ever with the opening of a new Non-Commissioned Officer Candidate Course.

This new program aimed at producing fire team and rifle squad leaders for Vietnam combat opened just four months after Gen. Wright arrived.

The Officer Candidate School expanded, considerably with over three times as many second lieutenants graduating in 1967 as in 1966.

Fort Benning's tradition-ally good relationship with the Columbus-Phenix City area was fostered by the general who was active in local civic affairs.

He received citations from the Columbus Jaycees, the Chamber of Commerce, the Rotary Club and several other civic and governmental groups.

Of great personal importance to the general were the activities of the local Boy Scout units. He served as chairman of the Chattahoochee Council, Boy Scouts of America until receiving orders for Vietnam.

Boy Scout activities, he has often maintained, are a "training ground for the young leaders who will keep their country secure."

Gratitude

The General has often expressed his gratitude for the support that Columbus has given to its infantrymen and to the "splendid relationship" between the post and the city.

"It is a great comfort for the men in Vietnam," he once said, "to know their families are in good hands in Columbus."

Columbus has returned the General's gratitude.

The time for the farewell retreat honoring Maj. Gen. Wright has been changed from 5:15 p.m. May 9 to 4:30 p.m. May 9 on York Field.

The public is invited to attend the event, a final salute to the man who has commanded this installation since July 15, 1967. Gen. Wright is leaving for an assignment in the Republic of Vietnam.

During the review, Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the U.S. Army Infantry School, will serve as commander of the troops who will take part. Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, commanding general, U. S. Army Training Center, Infantry, will serve as host.

Gen. and Mrs. Wright will leave Fort Benning Saturday morning. Following a brief vacation he will go to Vietnam.

NCOC Class No. 29-69 Graduates

Master Sergeant Rex Rhodes NCOIC, Evaluation Branch S-3, ICB, was the guest speaker at the graduation of NCOC Class No. 29-69 honoring Douglas W. Foster (Weatherford, Okla.) as the distinguished graduate in ceremonies in Marshall Auditorium April 29, 1969.

Foster was also honored as the academic graduate.

For his achievement, Foster received a letter of commendation from Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, Assistant Commandant of the Infantry School, an engraved "Follow Me" statuette, an engraved "Follow Me" plaque, an engraved Association of the United States Army (AUSA) plaque, and a promotion to staff sergeant.

Sergeant Foster graduated from the 86th NCOC company, 8th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade with 107 other new sergeants.

Insignia Changeover Suspended

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The mandatory changeover date for world-wide wear of subdued insignia on field and work uniforms, originally scheduled for July 1, 1969, has been suspended. A new changeover date will be announced by Department of the Army as soon as manufacturers provide a firm commitment as to when the subdued insignia will be available. At that time, the U. S. Army Support Command, Philadelphia, Pa., will also issue requisitioning instructions to the field.

Armed Forces Day

There are presently a total of 919 students enrolled in the ROTC program in Columbus and 279 students at Tuskegee Institute High School.

ROTC Voluntary

High School ROTC is a voluntary program open to students who are at least 14 years of age. Students receive 180 hours of instruction and one full credit for each of the three years of military instruction in Columbus schools. Those at Tuskegee Institute High School receive one-half credit for each year of the program.

Besides their regular classroom work, many students do extra work after school, ranging from 10 to 30 hours a month, in practicing for the voluntary rifle teams and drill teams. Students practice to perfect their regular Army drill work as well as individual school variations and .22 caliber rifle firing for competition throughout Florida, Alabama and Georgia.

Each school with an ROTC program is set up as a battalion. The battalion cadet commander has the rank of lieutenant colonel and the regular Army organization is followed down the line through majors, and captains on down to the lowest first year private.

Benefits derived from high school ROTC programs, in addition to training in citizenship, patriotism, loyalty and love of country, include such tangibles as being able to enlist in the Regular Army in the grade of Private First Class. In addition, students to take RTOC in college are exempt from the first year of the college program if they have completed three years of ROTC in high school.

Leadership Developed

Leadership ability, character molding and discipline—these will all become apparent to the spectator when the ROTC units come to Fort Benning to perform for Armed Forces Day. These same qualities will be found in the style and sound of the marching bands that will perform here. Of the three Columbus area high school bands that will perform here, Kendrick High School band is the youngest. The school was established two years ago.

The Kendrick band is comprised of 80 students, including five majorettes, and is directed by Bob Murphy. He graduated from Auburn University with a bachelor's degree and a major in music. Murphy taught band for six years at Lanett (Ala.) High School before coming to Kendrick. He has also played in the Columbus Symphony Orchestra for 13 years.

Students

Murphy said that most of the students in the band have been playing from two to five years. The band practices about eight hours a week on music alone and, during football season, they practice marching drills for approximately 12 hours a week. Students receive one-half credit a year for each year they are in the band.

Although Kendrick is a new school it has already received two superior ratings, the highest ratings given in the Georgia Music Association band competition. The school also took second place in Fort Benning's Forces for Freedom competiton on Armed Forces Day last year.

Another of the local high school bands is Spencer, which has been in existence for 24 years and which had the first band organized in Muscogee County. For the past 20 of those 24 years the band director has been Leon Brown.

Brown received a bachelor's degree from Alabama A & M College and a masters degree in music education from Vander Cook College of Music in Chicago.

Spencer Bands

Spencer bands have accumulated 18 to 20 trophies and ratings over the years and have traveled as far as Atlantic City and Atlanta for parades. The band will be going to Savannah, Ga., next year.

Brown said that several graduates of Spencer High School are now band directors. Some are now doing studio work in Atlanta and one is the head of a recording studio in Nashville.

The band director added, "The purpose of a band at this school is to give students a fundamental background in the field of music and possibly provide him with either a vocation or an avocation."

Baker High School has a band group consisting of 126 persons including majorettes, the band and the girls' drill team. The band director, John Grantham, majored in musical education at Auburn University and played with bands at Jordan Vocational High School, Auburn and in the U.S. Army.

Grantham taught band to elementary school children in Muscogee County for two years and has been the band director at Baker High School for five years.

Two Hours Practice

Students usually practice two hours during the school day and, in the football season, may also practice as much as five hours a week after school perfecting their marching.

All their effort showed up during the Georgia Third District music festival this year when the school received a superior rating in band competition.

43 Receive Awards

By Bill Kloeb

Forty three members of the Infantry School received incentive awards from Col. Earl C. Acuff, deputy assistant commandant of the U. S. Army Infantry School, at awards ceremonies held at Fort Benning Thursday May 8.

Mrs. Martha M. Messerly, Mrs. Emma L. Jones, Mrs. Jane P. Rice, Mrs. Bonnie E. Morin and G. W. Sasser received outstanding ratings and quality step increases in annual salary.

Mrs. Effie R. Davenport received a quality step increase in annual salary.

Outstanding ratings and sustained superior performance awards went to Richard W. Ulrick, Mrs. Marjorie H. Wilson, Joseph B. O'Conner Jr., Mrs. Margaret A. Cason, Robert L. Nelson, Mrs. Brenda R. Matthews and Miss Terry J. Thorne.

Mrs. J. F. West, Mrs. Voncille L. Jones, Miss L. Ruth Weaver, Arthur F. Blair, Mrs. Betty J. Allgood, Mrs. Ann M. Gray, Mrs. Elizabeth A. Jones, Mrs. Suzan B. Heinz, Mrs. Kathleen R. Meyer, Ralph Anthony, Mrs. Frances E. Hill, William C. Kinard and Allen K. Pruett were presented outstanding ratings. Pruett also received a letter of appreciation for an adopted suggestion.

Cash awards for adopted suggestions for work improvement were presented to Mrs. Margie H. Tharpe, Capt. David S. Kelly, Miss Rose Fuqua, Robert E. Surrency, Arthur Gilbert, George W. Hill and Dolzey P. Borel.

Mrs. Dorothy M. Cox and Mrs. Elizabeth K. Snell were awarded certificates of achievement for excellent performance of duties.

SFC James G. Simers, Maj. John S. Jacob and Maj. Truman C. Johnson received letters of appreciation for adopted suggestions for work improvement.

Col. John B. Wine and Maj. James S. Stallings received letters of appreciation for adopted suggestions submitted through the cost reduction program.

M-Sgt. Meliton Morales and Collis D. Lehner received letters of appreciation for adopted suggestions submitted through the work simplification program. Lehner also received two letters of appreciation for adopted suggestions submitted through the cost reduction program.

Army at Work Is Armed Forces Day Theme

By Frank Truchon

The Army at work — this will be the story that unveils itself to the public May 17, when Fort Benning opens its doors to the civilian community on Armed Forces Day.

Armed Forces Day is an opportunity for all the armed services to display their roles in the defense posture of the country.

Spectators at Fort Benning will be able to view a variety of exhibits and demonstrations. A senior status review at 10 a.m. on York Field will start the day's activities. At 10:30 a.m. the Air Force will follow with a fly-by of four E-4 Phantom II fighter planes; immediately afterwards, at 10:45 a.m. and later at 4:55 p.m. the Sport Parachute Club of Fort Benning will hold sky-diving exhibitions over York Field.

On Stewart Field, basic trainees will demonstrate bayonet fighting, pugil-stick training, first-aid techniques, quick-kill and Chemical - Biological - Radiological warfare training throughout the day.

The Ranger Department will demonstrate hand-to-hand combat, rappelling, bayonet techniques, pugi-stick training and a snake exhibit on Watson Field from 11 to 11:30 a.m. and from 3:40 to 4:20 p.m.

Minesweeping, water purification and the use of road building equipment such as chain saws, earth augers, surveying equipment and an oxygen-lance concrete cutter will be demonstrated by the U. S. Army Infantry Center Troop Command. Other demonstrations will include making ID tags, repairing shoes, pulling an engine from a quarter-ton truck and a WAC drill team demonstration at 1:30 p.m. on Gardner Field.

Local band and drill competition will be held on Gardner Field from noon until 3 p.m. Each band will have five minutes to perform a marching drill program. Drill teams will by the 197th Infantry Brigade; fixed - wing aircraft such as the T-41 Bravo Army training plane and the U-6 Alpha cargo plane by Lawson Army Aviation have 10 minutes to complete compulsory drill movements and any free drills they wish. Trophies will be presented to the winning schools at 3:20 p.m. in Marshall Auditorium. A singing program from 3 to 3:20 p.m. by the Polka Dots, the officers' wives vocal group, will precede the awards ceremony in Marshall Auditorium.

Besides the demonstrations on York and Watson Field there will be a number of static displays on exhibit all day.

Static displays will include tanks, armored personnel carriers, machine guns and artillery weapons Command observation, troop, cargo and gunship helicopters by the 10th Aviation Group; small-bore Olympic rifle and pistols and sniping weapons by the U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit; and a number of exhibits by the Quartermaster and Transportation Branches.

These include parachute packing, a food services display showing types of rations in use by the military, a display on the work done by the laundry service, a clothing display showing past and present types of authorized military uniforms, and a ration processing display describing the operation of the bakery and meat plant.

The U. S. Army Dental Unit will show the progression of Army Dentistry through the years, methods of caring for teeth, and a film illustrating dental facilities in the states and overseas.

The Youth Activities Club will display the types of activities that scouts are engaged in. These include rock collecting, woodmanship, first aid, seamanship and communications.

The Army and related activities at work — this will be Armed Forces Day at Fort Benning.

The public is invited to attend.

ARMED FORCES DAY MESSAGE
17 MAY 1969

On Saturday, 17 May, U. S. military installations around the world will report to the public on the readiness of our Armed Services. Fort Benning is proud to hold open house on that day for the citizens of the Chattahoochee Valley and our own military community.

Armed Forces Day is our opportunity to proudly display the "Home of the Infantry." Throughout our history the Infantryman has been the backbone of our country's Armed Forces and for 50 years Fort Benning has infused the "Follow Me" spirit into thousands of Infantrymen. Ultimately, he is the final measure of our nation's desire to protect the ideals on which America was founded. And today, the U. S. Infantryman stands ready around the world to defend the principles of freedom.

So this Saturday we proudly salute all members of our Armed Services, reserving a special place of honor for the men of the Infantry. I ask all of you, military and civilian, to join in saluting all men in uniform on Armed Forces Day.

Bonner Receives Award For Adopted Suggestion

An engineering officer in the Resources Management System (RMS) Task Force, Headquarters, United States Army Infantry Center, received $30 and a letter of appreciation for three adopted suggestions in a ceremony here May 8.

Lieutenant Colonel Francis W. Bonner was presented the incentive awards by Col. Morris J. Naudts, chief of the Resources Management System Task Force.

Col. Bonner received $15 for proposing that traffic signs at the intersection of Clark, 19th Division and Marine Roads be covered in the mornings and evenings when a large amount of traffic is flowing on and off post. The suggestion provided better traffic control and increased safety for the motorists.

A second $15 check was presented to Col. Bonner for a suggestion proposing that left turn arrows be painted on the Engineer Road portion of the intersection at Custer Road. This suggestion reinforced the regulation of "no right turn," and eliminated a potential safety hazard at this point.

Col. Bonner, in addition to receiving the two cash awards, was also presented a letter of appreciation from Major General John M. Wright Jr., commanding general of the U.S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning, for his suggestion that customers take only one shopping cart upon entering the Main Commissary Store and obtain an additional cart at the produce register area, if they need it. This suggestion eliminated congestion, and speeded up self-service in the store.

Bonner is a member of a unit which has exceeded its incentive award suggestion goal by 1,250 per cent. The Resources Management Task Force, which has a staff of 13 people, had a goal of four suggestions. The task force, however, has submitted more than 50 suggestions during fiscal year 1969.

The task force, which will disband on May 15 after completing its mission of studying, evaluating and testing the resources management systems for Class I installations such as Fort Benning, Fort Bragg, N.C. and Fort Campbell, Ky., has been in existence for 21 months. During that time the unit has made extensive studies of the best methods of managing materiel and facilities and has written a 348 page draft of an Installation Management Procedure Manual.

The manual which has been submitted through channels to the Department of the Army is designed for use at Class I installations. The men on the 13-man team which contributed to the preparation of the manual have various qualifications for their work, including bachelor and master's degrees in accounting, finance, business administration and management.

Following the disbanding of the unit, some of the men will be assigned to The Infantry School here and others will go to Vietnam, Thailand and Saudi Arabia.

Doctor, Soldier, Missionary

Officer Candidate Has Many Hats To Wear

Spt Lynette Herseim

Doctor . . . Soldier . . . Baseball "Bonus Baby" . . . Missionary . . . Speech Pathologist. Five different persons? No, all of these descriptions identify one man, Officer Candidate (OC) Donovan Davisson, 96th Company, 9th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade.

In 1961 (OC) Davisson, a native of Portland, Oregon, began his collection of degrees and professions. At the age of 19, he received a bachelor of arts degree in Speech Pathology from Brigham Young University. He minored in Semantics and Psychology.

Upon graduation Davisson enrolled at the University of Utah. From this institution he earned a Masters Degree in Speech Pathology in the Spring of 1962.

During his undergraduate days at Brigham Young, Davisson had played catcher on the Cougar's baseball team. Because of his outstanding performance on the diamond OC Davisson was offered and accepted a Bonus Contract with the New York Mets after completing his masters degree.

After one month with the Mets, he decided the Big Leagues would not make a career and headed to Finland.

A conscientious member of the Mormon church, OC Davisson spent 1963 through 1965 in Finland as a missionary for his church. He helped start and develop Morman churches in Helsinki and six other Finland cities.

'Follow Me' Patch Appears

A giant "Follow Me" patch, symbol of the Infantry has appeared on the formation area of the 61st OC Company. It was painted on the hardtop by Officer Candidates in the company.

The patch, containing a map, is dedicated to the men of the 61st Co. and all those who will follow, with emphasis on those who are now and will be serving in Vietnam. The project was dedicated last week to the company at a mass formation, with an appropriate scroll read to the assembled candidates. The scroll reads, in part, "the result . . . is dedicated to the fighting men in Southeast Asia which they are defending."

"The sword across Vietnam shows the strife which tears the country. The brown of Thailand and Laos represent the potential danger which is there, and the green of Vietnam shows where our interest is as officers."

Joint Civilian Orientation Conference

Businessmen, Industrialist, Educators, Visit

By Wade Roop

Fort Benning welcomes Monday 75 businessmen, industrialists and educators from throughout the United States as the 39th Joint Civilian Orientation Conference (JCOC) takes a look at the Army's Infantry Center.

The conference, including visits to Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine installations during a nine-day period, is designed to acquaint the conferees with the operation of the Department of Defense and branches of the service. Fort Benning has been selected to again this year represent the Army.

Arriving at Lawson Army Airfield at 5 p.m., the conference group will spend Monday evening and Tuesday in a full schedule of events including reception, dinner, briefings and demonstrations.

The tour began Thursday in Washington with a visit and briefing with Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird and briefings by the Department of Defense.

Fort Benning's first official function for the conferees and escorts will be a reception and dinner Monday evening at the Officers' Club beginning at 7:25 p.m.

Commanding General, Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis will welcome the tour group Tuesday morning following the presentation of "I Am The Infantry" in Marshall Auditorium. Following the General's welcome the conferees will receive Infantry Center and School briefings.

Departing York Field in four specially marked CH-47 helicopters, the group will observe their first demonstration of the tour at Higley Hill. There the Company Operations Department will present the demonstration "Rifle Platoon in Counterguerrilla Operations," at 8:50 a.m.

The group will then fly to North Ruth Range where they will observe an Airmobile Demonstration presented by Brigade and Battalion Operations.

Lunch will be served in the field for the group at Victory Lodge followed in the afternoon by the "Rangers In Action" demonstration conducted by the Ranger Department.

The Infantry School's Airborne Department will present the final demonstration at 2:15 p.m. at Eubanks Field.

During the entire nine-day conference the conferees are divided into four groups, each representing one branch of the armed services. The color-coded groups are: Gold, Army; Blue, Air Force; White, Navy;

Announces Military Wife of the Year

Linkletter Show Arrives at Post

Kids do say the darnedest things as a laughing audience of several hundred found out Wednesday during the Art Linkletter Tour to Military Families special program presented at Fort Benning.

The nearly two-hour program hosted by television personality Art Linkletter climaxed two days of filming, interviews and visits by the Linkletter tour party in and around the Infantry Center.

Indicative of the attending audience, the program began with the Main Post Theater echoing refrains of "Follow Me" as sung by the Infantry Chorus. The fast moving medley kicked off an equally fast moving program that featured children of Fort Benning schools, personalities of the Post and special guests of Linkletter including the Military Wife of the Year.

"It's just like on television" exclaimed one enthusiastic onlooker as Linkletter came from behind a curtain to meet the applauding Fort Benning audience. His warm and humorous introduction quickly captured the eager audience and soon sent them into laughter as he questioned Mrs. Soni Talbert and Mrs. Micki Albrecht about some unusual experience they have had as military wives.

Linkletter then spoke on stage with SFC Richard Kemp who told a heart warming story about a letter he had written to his son while stationed in Vietnam and work he and other Fort Benning wives and men have accomplished to assist children with hearing difficulty.

The aspiration of possibly all the ladies attending the special program came with the introduction of the Military Wife of the year, Mrs. Edrei A. Coleman. She was selected in a special reception and dinner Monday night in Washington, D. C.

Also joining the Linkletter tour party and providing entertainment during the program were Chris Noel, radio and movie personality, and singer Betty Waldron.

Adding an international flare to the program were Cpt. and Mrs. Joseph Younes from Lebanon. Cpt. Younes is a member of Advanced Class Two taking part in Infantry School training through the Allied Student Training Division. He and his wife told Linkletter of the many changes and anticipations they had when coming to a foreign land to attend the Infantry School.

Facial contortions, the most unexpected answers and likely the most humorous portion of the program came as four Fort Benning third graders filed onto the stage, looked Linkletter in the eye and brought down the house with laughter as they answered his questions.

Children interviewed on the program were: 8-year-old Cindy Lee Murphy, daughter of Lt. and Mrs. Kelly R. Murphy; William J. Chaco, nine-year-old son of Sgt. and Mrs. William P. Chaco; eight-year-old Ellen Segal, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Carl Segal; and nine-year-old Daniel Gaffney, son of Cpt. and Mrs. Thomas Gaffney.

Closing the program with a surprise for Linkletter were the Polka Dots, singing group comprised of Fort Benning wives under the direction of Mrs. R. G. Hertel.

Linkletter and his party arrived in the Fort Benning area on Tuesday with a group welcomed to Fort Benning that afternoon by Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, Commanding General.

During an office call with the Commanding General, Linkletter was presented with a Bayonet plaque in appreciation for his visit to Fort Benning and the entertainment program designed especially for the military. The World Tour to Military Families this year will include visits to installations in Alaska, Guantanamo, Washington, and the Coast Guard Station in Miami.

The World Tour is sponsored by Wilson Harrell International, Inc., of Westport, Conn. Accompanying Linkletter on the tour were Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Harrell. Producer for the program was Charles Fagan and associate producer Miss Teresa Kanute, both of Harrell International, Inc.

Filming of Infantry School activities encompassed a portion of the Tuesday and Wednesday schedule for Linkletter. Tuesday afternoon the tour party observed "Rangers In Action" at Victory Pond and on Wednesday Linkletter stepped into airborne training at Eubanks Field for a first hand look at parachute training.

Will See Training Facilities

SMA Dunaway Visits Benning May 20-27

The Sergeant Major of the Army will visit Fort Benning, May 20-27.

SMA George W. Dunaway will visit the training facilities at the U.S. Army Infantry Center and School and the U.S. Army Training Center (Infantry.)

He will observe Non-Commissioned Officer Candidates training in squad drill, bayonet and quick kill.

Airborne Basic Training and a Ranger demonstration will also be on Dunaway's itinerary.

Dunaway entered the Army in 1941 and served in the European-African-Middle Eastern Theater in World War II.

He was born in Richmond, Virginia on 24 July 1922. He attended East End High School, after which he joined the 176th Light Infantry Regiment, 29th Infantry Division (National Guard) in in January 1940. He entered active federal service with that organization in February 1941 at Fort Meade, Maryland.

After attending the Airborne Course in August 1943, Sergeant Major Dunaway remained at Fort Benning, Georgia as an Airborne School Instructor until January 1945 when he joined the 517th Combat Team in France as a Platoon Sergeant.

He returned to Fort Benning in December 1945 with assignment to the 501st Parachute Infantry Regiment where he served as First Sergeant of Company "A". In March 1948, Sergeant Major Dunaway was reassigned to the 1st Airborne Division in Japan. While [illegible]

By James Doherty

A new Leadership Department will be established May 21, bringing to nine the number of instructional departments in the U. S. Army Infantry School here.

The department will be comprised of five groups transferred from other departments. These are:

The leadership committee and the drill and command committee from the Company Operations Department.

The combat conditioning committee from the Ranger Department.

The instructional automatic data processing division from the Office of Data Systems.

The effective writing and speaking element from the Office of the Director of Instruction.

Colonel John D. White, formerly director of the Company Operations Department, will be director of the new department. He has previously served as deputy director, Company Operations Department, assistant chief of staff G1 personnel with the 1st Cavalry Division (airmobile), Vietnam and commanding officer, 2d Battalion, 7th Cavalry, Fort Benning and Vietnam.

He will be replaced by Colonel John P. Garcia who has come to Fort Benning from the 9th Infantry ERF, where he was brigade commander, 1st Brigade. He previously served as senior adviser, 44th Sector Tactical zone, IV Corps, MACV, Vietnam; and as battalion commander, 3rd Battalion, 506th Infantry, Vietnam.

The objective of the new department is to "expand, emphasize, and coordinate instruction in leadership matters, according to Colonel White.

Its instruction aims at providing the Infantry student with the information he needs to analyze his own leadership talents, he said.

"All aspects of leadership improvement will be studied and developed," he stated.

UNDERGROUND NEWSPAPERS

Is it against Army regulations to publish and distribute a so called underground or antiwar newspaper?

The Army does not judge what publications are considered "underground" or "anti-war." Literary efforts by military personnel may not be conducted during normal working hours or accomplished with the use of DOD facilities, personnel, or property. Installation commanders may issue post regulations or similar directives providing that distribution of publications may not be made except through official channels unless prior approval is obtained from the commander or his authorized representative.

If it appears that the dissemination of a publication presents a clear danger to the loyalty, discipline, or morale of troops its distribution on an installation may be prohibited. Personnel who distribute publications in violation of post regulations subject themselves to disciplinary action under the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

OFFICER PROMOTIONS

I need to know minimum time in grade for promotion in the U. S. Army for officers by each grade.

Time in grade varies as promotions are made to fill vacancies. There are no established minimums. Current time in grade at promotion to the following grades is:

LTC to COL 5 yrs 0 mos 12 days
MAJ to LTC 3 yrs 4 mos 27 days
CAP to MAJ 3 yrs 2 mos 10 days
1LT to CAP* 12 mos 0 days
2LT to 1LT* 12 mos 0 days
CW3 to CW4 4 yrs 2 mos 5 days
CW2 to CW3 3yrs 8 mos 6 days
WO1 to CW2* 12 mos 0 days
*Promotion authority delegated to field commander

UNDERGROUND PUBLICATIONS

An item appeared in the Washington Post concerning the publication of an underground newspaper at Ft. Belvoir. The story mentioned two soldiers as being the editors. What are their rights (Constitutional) with regard to publishing a newspaper? Does the Army maintain a hold on a soldier during his off-duty hours?

Regulations state that personal literary efforts may not be conducted during normal working hours or accomplished with the use of DOD facilities, personnel, or property. Post regulations may require that official permission be requested prior to an unofficial distribution of a publication on post.

If a particular publication is disrespectful towards a particular officer or uses other language, the utterance of which is punishable under Federal Law or UCMJ, author may be appropriately disciplined. As a basic principle, soldier is on duty at all times unless excused by his commanding officer. Once the individual departs on an authorized absence the Army does not become involved in his outside activities unless they are in violation of the UCMJ or civil laws.

COFFEE HOUSES

In talking to soldiers at various "coffee houses," I have been told that the number of conscientious objector applications has increased greatly in recent months. Also, these soldiers told me that if you apply for CO status, it can delay your departure for overseas. Is this true? Have CO applications increased?

The Army provides ample time for applicants to obtain supporting references and for a Board of Officers to evaluate their applications. This occasionally results in some individuals being delayed for movement to their next duty station. In 1968, out of a total Army strength of over 1.4 million, 282 men applied for discharge as conscientious objectors. So far this year, 239 applications have been filed. (NOTE: discharges in 1968 as result of applications - 67; discharges so far this year total 38.)

What is the attitude of the Army toward on-base organizing for the American Servicemen Union? Off base organizing? Membership by service men in this group? Are there any rules against belonging; are there any penalties?

Career Counselor's Corner

Army Career Provides Lifetime Security

When most people think about a civilian job, one of the things they think about first is retirement. It is easy to see that the social security program, although nice, is not going to provide total support for anybody. This item, of retirement benefits is something that civilian firms are thinking about more and more.

How does all of this talk apply to you and the Army? You are in your early twenties, and the last thing on your mind is retirement from the Army. If this is the case, you may find yourself at age 65 with little or nothing to show for your life efforts. The secret to a happy retirement is good planning. You can start planning and doing right now. It is not hard.

First of all you must plan what you want upon retirement. You need money to insure that you will be able to feed yourself in your golden years. Older people usually have more physical ailments than young people, therefore, you will need good hospitalization.

It would also be helpful if you were able to buy things at a reduced price since you will have less money than you did in your earning years. Other attractions which would be attractive are the sense of belonging which is to be found in association with a lively social organization and having recreational facilities available at a reasonable price. Most of all, why wait until you are an old person before drawing some retirement?

All of these above mentioned benefits are yours since you are a soldier. By staying in the Army for seventeen or eighteen more years you can be taken care of for life. If you retire from the Army at age forty, the retirement pay which you will draw will continue for the rest of your life. The average life expectancy for men is about seventy. This means that Uncle Sam is willing to take care of you for thirty years or longer if you stay with him for just twenty years.

How will he take care of you? Will he give you the things which you will need for a comfortable retirement? Absolutely! You will have money because you will draw retirement pay. At the end of twenty years, retirement pay from the Army is equal to one-half of your base pay That is about $70.00 a week. Most soldiers who retire early choose to put their good military experience to use by going to work for a civilian firm. Sergeants who retire from the Army find that they to be reliable.

Most find happiness in a second career after their twenty years in the Army have no trouble getting a job because they have good management experience, and they are proven is completed. This means that you can have two retirements and social security when you are sixty-five. In other words, you will be making about $8,020.00 a year plus full military privileges for your golden years.

You can see that it does make sense, and it is not hard to do. Simply do what you are doing right now. Remain an active member of the Army. One thing, though, when you tell your Career Counselor that you would like to reenlist for another seventeen or eighteen years, you will find that it is only possible to reenlist for six at a time. In this way the Army gets to pay you several bonuses throughout your career instead of just one.

Safety Belts Are Best Means to Prevent Death

Isn't it safer to be thrown out of a wreck?

You hear and read of freak accidents during which people have been thrown free of the wreck onto a pavement carrying heavy traffic — and lived. We also know of pedestrians knocked hundreds of feet with relatively little injury. It is a fact, however, that you are five times more likely to be killed if you are thrown out of your car during an accident.

Can't I be trapped by a safety belt if my car catches fire?

You are more likely to be trapped if you are unconscious. Your belt reduces the force with which you hit and tends to keep you conscious. The modern quick-release buckles on today's belts can be opened instantaneously by a child of four with one hand. In any event, injury from fire or death by drowning is unlikely as only one-half of one per cent of the thousands of accidents studied involved cars that caught fire or submerged.

What happens to me if my car rolls over during an accident?

Your belt keeps you anchored to the seat where you receive protection from the body shell of the car. Owners of soft-top convertibles are often afraid of being dragged under the wreckage and killed. If you own a soft-top car you must play the odds. Only two per cent of all the accidents studied were cases involving a soft-top rollover. The great danger in a convertible is being thrown out over the side or over the windshield. A belt prevents you from being ejected. Without a belt you run the risk of ejection and may still be dragged under and killed.

Can't my passengers and I still hit the steering post or dashboard during an automobile accident even though wearing safety belts?

PTA Here Installs New Officers

By Frank Truchon

The installation of officers of the Fort Benning Parent-Teachers Association for the 1968-69 school year was held May 13 at the Faith Elemeotary School.

Those installed were: President, Colonel George E. Ritter, post veterinarian; 1st Vice - President, Lieutenant Colonel James R. Barnette, chaplain of the Army Training Center; 2nd Vice-President, Sergeant Major Bob Williams, command sergeant major of the Infantry School; 3rd Vice-President, Mrs. Florence Wear, wife of Sergeant Billy R. Wear; Secretary, Mrs. Evelyn Hodges, a teacher at Faith School and wife of retired Lieutenant Colonel Donald Hodges; Assistant Secretary, Mrs. Evelyn Southwood, an art teacher at Faith School; Treasurer, Master Sergeant William Quinn, Finance and Accounting Office; Assistant Treasurer, Mrs. Pat Mudd, wife of Major William C. Mudd, U.S. Army Infantry School.

Following the installation of PTA officers, Mrs. Hazel Scudder, superintendent of post dependent schools, gave a speech on the topic, "The State of Our Schools." Mrs. Scudder said, "The real test of a school is what it does for the children."

The school superintendent proceeded to enumerate ten ways in which Fort Benning schools help their students. Among the points she enumerated were in-service education for teachers; a professional guidance program; a health program for students; a kindergarten program; a wide variety of instructional material; good teacher-pupil relationships; an administrative group that works with children, teachers and parents; active participation of parents in the PTA; excellent facilities, and adequate federal funds.

Mrs. Scudder added as her second point that school-community relations are essentially worked out with individual parents rather than with groups because of the large turnover of the military population. She stated, however, that "the School cannot do what the parents fail to do with their children."

Mrs. Scudder concluded her topic on the state of Fort Benning schools by making some predictions for the future. She said, "I predict that in future schools will be open day and night for adults and children. We may have such things as diagnostic teaching, bio-chemical learning, and loose-leaf text books. Student unrest will continue and the average IQ will increase to around 130 as compared to the present average 90 IQ."

Following Mrs. Scudder's talk, Brigadier General Oscar E. Davis, commanding general of the U.S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning, spoke to the assembly. General Davis said that much of what Mrs. Scudder had talked about "is a testimonial of what she has accomplished." The general added, "This evening we recognize her for accomplishments in the field of education, but her students are her continuing accomplishment."

The meeting ended with the presentation of a portrait of Mrs. Scudder to the post dependent school system by General Davis on behalf of the Fort Benning PTA.

WOMEN'S NEWS

Miss Columbus Pageant Contestants Needed

By SFC Richard Kemp

Fort Benning dependents have been asked to compete for the title of Miss Columbus, the first step leading to the Miss American pageant.

John Swearingen Sr., chairman, entrance committee, Miss Columbus Pageant, said May 13 the competition is open to all young women of Columbus and Fort Benning between the ages of 18-28 who otherwise meet the basic requirements.

The 1969 Miss Columbus Pageant is being sponsored by the Muscogee Sertoma Club.

Swearingen said a preliminary judging of 30 contestants will be held in late June or early July with Miss Columbus being named from among 12 finalists on August 23.

Prizes for the winners in the Miss Columbus contest will include college scholarships, vacation trips and wardrobes, Swearingen said.

Rules for the event state a contestant must be single and never have been married or had a marriage annulled and must be a high school graduate by Labor Day.

Contestants may be either amateurs or professional in regards to talent and must meet certain wardrobe requirements.

Full details on the rules and the conduct of the local pageant may be obtained from Swearingen who asked those interested to telephone 561-8291 or 324-5681.

Surgeon Says

Safety Lenses Are Recommended For Children

By Maj. Charles L. Crawley

Since ordinary optical glass lenses can easily be broken, the Optometry Clinic routinely recommends safety lenses for children from the pediatric age through the teens.

Safety lenses are made in two types, heat-tempered lenses which are referred to as case hardened lenses, and plastic lenses, a ploy-vinyl product.

While heat-tempered lenses are more resistant to damage, they can be broken with sufficient pressure. However, as they break apart they do not shatter. This effect protect the individual's eyes. Heat tempering optical glass means that the basic lens must be thicker to withstand the tempering process. Therefore, the heat tempered lens is a heavier finished product than the ordinary lens.

The tempered lens resists scratching more effectively than any other kind of lens and for some patients this characteristic is necessary. Understandably, the process of tempering a pair of lenses increases their cost to be patient.

Plastic lenses' susceptibility to scratching presently is their greatest weakness. As their plastic lenses become damaged by scratching, the patient's glasses have to be replaced. Parents should understand this aspect of plastic and the resulting cost.

However, their safety factor places plastic lenses in top priority as most suitable for the usual patient in the growing years. Particularly for children the weight of plastic lenses is a very desirable characteristic. With instruction about the care of their plastic glasses, children can help to keep them in serviceable condition.

Whether the young athlete who requires an optical correction uses case hardened or plastic lenses, he will enjoy an inestimable measure of protection when he uses safety lenses. The protection to his glasses can be calculated in dollars, but how can the value of the gift of sight be appraised.

The Army provides case hardened lenses for those military patients for whom the Optometrists prescribe them. Presently, there is a feasibility study being conducted at Fort Dix to determine if plastic lenses will meet the requirements of military glasses.

Hats Main Attraction

197th Inf. Bde. Wives Hold Spring Luncheon

Ladies hats of every shape and size were the main attraction at the spring luncheon held by the 197th Infantry Brigade ladies recently at the Supper Club. The hostesses for the luncheon were the wives from the 1st Bn. (Mech); 58th Inf.

The prize for the most original created hat was awarded to Mrs. Michael Tarby. Mrs. Tarby's origination was a round loaf of bread covered with luscious hors d'oeuvres and other titbits.

Winning the prize for the funniest hat was presented to Mrs. Russel Rohrer. Mrs. Rohrer's creation was a scenic headpiece showing a young boy and girl fishing.

Mrs. Campbell Winkler's chapeau drew first prize for the prettiest hat of the day. Using a cornucopea for the base, Mrs. Winkler adorned it with ruffled black crepe paper and orange crepe paper flowers giving it a most colorful appearance.

Mrs. John E. Strever Jr., wife of the brigade commander, welcomed newcomers and bade farewell to departing ladies of the brigade.

Displayed among the lovely spring decorations were hats from a local millinery shop. The hats selected were pink and green to blend in with the dogwood flowers scattered along each table.

Mother's Day Coffee Held By Wives Club

"Mothers Day" was the theme of the 6th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade, NCO wives coffee held recently (May 8) in the 62nd Co. dayroom.

Mrs. Norwood H. Sheffie and Mrs. Joseph J. Lock, hostesses of the coffee prepared decorations of flower arrangements and a centerpiece was designed with red roses in a brandy sniffer.

A new chairman was elected to preside over the club. She was Mrs. William A. Flynn.

Two OC Wives Clubs Celebrate Senior Status

By Lynette Herselm

54 CO. COFFEES

The Officer Candidate Wives Club of the 54th Company, 5th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade, held a coffee in the dayroom April 30.

The student hostesses, Mrs. Steven Hatch, Mrs. Neil Dailey, Mrs. Michael Davey and Mrs. Gary Moore, carried out the Spring theme with decorations prepared with flowers.

The Vice-president of the club, Mrs. Gary Moore, presided over the program which centered around the senior phase of the Officer Candidate program. The 54th Company Commander, Capt. Gary L. Hubbard, spoke to the wives on the meaning and purpose of Senior Status and Lieutenant Jack R. Belshinger discussed the Senior Status Review, which will take place on May 17. Mrs. Gary L. Hubbard concluded this part of the program by giving the wives information concerning the Senior Status party.

Mrs. Dennis J. Harron, wife of the 5th Student Battalion Commander, presented several choices of calling card styles and explained the various uses of such cards to the Army Officer and his wife.

Mrs. Dennis J. Harron and Mrs. Frank G. Shaw were the honored guests.

The Company guests included Mrs. Gary L. Hubbard, Mrs. James N. Dorman and Mrs. Martin P. Martinelli.

60 CO WIVES

The Officer Candidate Wives Club of 60th Company, 6th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade, held their fourth coffee in the dayroom recently (May 9).

Mrs. Edward C. Radcliff and Mrs. Grady W. Williams were the honored guests.

Company guests were Mrs. Jesse P. Peel, Mrs. Paul Warren, and Mrs. Delmar Shepard.

Capt. Jesse P. Peel, Company Commander, discussed reviews in preparation for the 60th Company's senior Status Review on May 30. Mrs. Peel spoke on the use of calling cards.

Decorations were in blue, denoting upcoming Senior Status. The centerpiece was a Maypole consisting of a three tier base covered with paper carnations. Little men made of pipe cleaners held each streamer from the pole. A variety of cookies were found in May baskets on the table.

The guests wore name tags of white carnations from which two streamers fell; written on each were their names. Office Candidate wives wore carnations sprayed blue.

Hostesses for the coffee were Mrs. William Bodnar, Mrs. Clark Brandeo, Mrs. Benny Gees, Mrs. James Hall, and Mrs. Oscar Peraz. The Cadre hostess was Mrs. Luis Cotto-Colon.

Mrs. James Hall poured the coffee while Mrs. Oscar Peraz poured the punch.

Speeches Are Presented On Law Day

"Justice and equality depend upon law and you" was the topic of speeches given by eighth graders from the Don C. Faith School, Fort Benning in observance of Law Day USA on May 1.

Speeches were presented by teams of five students at the Wilson, Edward White, Wilbur, Loyd and McBride Schools.

All eighth graders from the Faith School had presented similar speeches on Wednesday.

The best twenty-five were selected to speak at other post schools by language arts teachers and Capt. William W. Robertson, Law Day chairman.

Campus disorders and the American legal system was the theme of several of the speeches.

Anne Marie Johnston, daughter of Col. Walter F. Johnston of the U.S. Army Infantry Board, argued that while the rights of minorities must always be guarded, the rights of the public must be firmly guaranteed.

"The rioters want all the privileges they can obtain under law, but they have no respect for the rights of others," she said.

She urged that social change take place within the context of the existing legal system.

Fort Benning's observance of Law Day USA was organized by a committee composed of Capt. Robertson, Mrs. H. J. Scudder, superintendent of schools, Dr. Joseph T. Conforti, assistant superintendent for instruction, Earl L. Miley, principal, Faith School, and Wayne Bex, eighth ing general, U.S. Army grade civics instructor, Faith School.

Winners in the speaking contest were: Janice Kim Acuff, Deborah Gail Foote, Sue Maeder Victoria Y. Holden and Mark H. See who spoke at the Wilson School; Jim Luther, Paula Johnson, Gary Norris, Eduardo A. Rodriquez and Roxanne Adams who spoke at the Edward White School.

Also, Anne Marie Johnston, Judy Schilling, Linda Luck, Susan Sheree Sikes and Deborah Lee Willard who spoke at the Wilbur School; Angela Faye Wilson, Kit Kitchen, Pamela Kay Smith, Stephen F. Tyler and Mary Catherine Ealick who spoke at the Loyd School; and Michael Bruce Murphy, Karen Faith Thomas, Victoria M.

Certificates of appreciation will be presented to the winners in an assembly at Faith School May 29.

Andrews, Eveline Engel and Denice R. Nelson who spoke at the McBride School.

8 Retire After '190' Years

Eight men whose combined service to the Army totaled 190 years retired Wednesday in a ceremony held at York Field.

Those who retired included Maj. Willis B. Anderson of Hq., Hq. Co., 7th Bn., 2nd Bde. USATC: SGM Harvey G. Stanley, U. S. Army Transfer Point; SGM George L. Thompson, Hq., Hq. Co, 10th Aviation Group; SFC Dennis W. Fountain Jr., Co. G, ISB, TSB; SFC Christ J. Lohere, Co. B, the ISB, TSB; SFC Lillard L. Powell, Hq., Hq. Bty., 2nd Bn., 10th Artillery; S. Sgt. George C. Logan, Co. E, 5th Bn., 31st Inf. and SFC Kenneth C. Hart, 3rd Ranger Co., TSB.

All of the men received the Army Commendation Medal, from Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., commanding general, United States Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning.

Wives Club Dinner Has Space Theme

"Out of This World" was the theme of the Medical Department Activities Wives' Club formal dinner dance held May 3 at the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

Beneath silver stars, a space theme was carried out with rockets and a huge world globe. In the dining area tables were decorated with miniature space rockets and red tapers.

Maj Gen. John M. Wright Jr., commanding general, U. S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning, and Mrs. Wright, Col. and Mrs. Martin Pfotenhauer, Col. and Mrs. Jack P. Pollock, and Col. and Mrs. Otis E. Bridgeford were in the receiving line. Mrs. Bridgeford is retiring president of the organization.

"The Statesmen" provided music for the dance.

Mrs. Silas Crase and Mrs. Charles Webb were co-chairmen. Mrs. Quentin Kramer was in charge of decorations and was assisted by Mrs. Richard Maloney, Mrs. Edmund Cavazos, Mrs. Robert Everhart, Mrs. Michael Hakola, Mrs. John Bostwick, Mrs. William LaSalle, Mrs. George Breza, Mrs. Harvey Woodruff, Mrs. Francies McGoey, Mrs. William Hartsock, Mrs. William Jewell, Mrs. James Padgett, Mrs. Richard Hewitt, Mrs. James Burke, Mrs. Joseph Tollison and Mrs. Robert Hunsicker.

'Humanizing the Curriculum'

Post School Invited To Attend Conference

By Robert Mast

Edward White School has been invited to present a demonstration at the conference of the Georgia Elementary Committee of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools at Georgia Center for Continuing Education, Athens, Ga., May 15-17.

The demonstration, consisting of speeches and lectures by Miss Mary Nell Hearn, Mrs. Saundra L. McWilliams and Mrs. Brenda L. Howe, teachers at Edward White School, will cover the topic of "Studying Children — How they learn."

Besides the three teachers, Fort Benning school representation at the conference will include Mrs. Hazel J. Scudder, superintendent of schools, Mrs. Mildred H. Carter, principal of Patch School and Mrs. Pearl M. Brakonecke, principal of Edward White School.

Mrs. Scudder is a member of the conference program committee and will serve as coordinator and resource person for clinic sessions.

The conference theme will be "Humanizing the curriculum" and will include clinic sessions, involving work sessions planned for groups holding interests in school affiliation, self study, accreditation and continuing accreditation. Leadership clinics, open by invitation only, are planned for consultants and for chairmen and members of visiting committees.

Included in the conference will be two addresses by Dr. John Goodlad, of the University of California, Los Angeles, who will speak of "Respecting Humanism in the Curriculum" and "Developing Humanism in the Curriculum."

Ambush

'Wolfhounds' Employ New Tactic

By Sp5 Jack R. Anderson

DAU TIENG, Vietnam (25th Inf. Div 10) — Ambush!

Typically an unconventional tactic, used by an unconvential force.

But "Wolfhound" infantrymen of 1st Battalion, 27th Infantry are taking the "un" out of unconventional and are employing the art of the ambush successfully against the enemy — an enemy that doesn't know how to fight any other way.

Emphasis was placed on the battalion's ambush operations when Major Jerry Holliday of Memphis, Tenn. took over as the "Wolfhounds" operations officer early this year.

"We needed to change our tactics," Holliday said. "We wanted the enemy to come to us instead of always going into the field on reconnaissance in force operations, looking for him. My idea was the ambush — quite irregular for a TO&E unit — but I thought it would work when proper emphasis was placed on it. The idea was unanimously supported by other battalion leaders," he said.

The proper emphasis was placed on ambush techniques, first through seminars attended by battalion leaders and then by means of an "ambush school" held at Fire Support Base Mahone II.

"At our seminars, we'd all get together and take a good look at ourselves," Holliday said. "We'd find out what we were doing right — and wrong — in our operations against the enemy."

The school at Mahone II was run "County Fair" style, with the "Wolfhounds" rotating from station to station, learning and relearning the arts of the ambush.

"One thing we found out right away was that the men weren't hitting what they were seeing," said Major Dallas L. Cox of Pulaski, Va., the battalion executive officer and also one of the officers responsible for the training school.

PART OF AMBUSH TRAINING
Students fire M-60

"The school set up both a zeroing and quick reaction course designed to train our men to pause long enough to take aim on the enemy. There has been a 100 per cent increase in body count since we started, too," he said.

Other stations at the school included a machine gun course, weapons demonstrations, first aid, ambush techniques and an introduction to scout dogs.

"The weapons demonstration gave the men an idea of the awesome firepower a small unit possesses while on an operation," Cox said. "This gives the men confidence and an aggressive spirit when they contact the enemy."

But how did the men respond to "training" after many of them were already seasoned in combat?

"At first, they didn't like the idea, but after an excellent class given by the scout dog platoon sergeant, the ice was broken, and most of them really enjoyed themselves," Cox said.

"Our soldiers today are intelligent, and many realized they were deficient in some aspects of weaponry and wanted to learn — they knew it could save their lives," he said.

In addition to this "ambush school," which both Holliday and Cox hope to run once every month, the battalion has initiated training between operations for the "Wolfhounds."

3rd Bde Chaplains Gives To Ben Cat Orphanage

By SP5 Trom Arno

BEN CAT, Vietnam (DIV 10)—More than $800 in cash, plus cases of apples, boxes of clothing and toys, and 150 classroom material kits have been presented to the Ben Cat Orphanage by Lai Khe's Third Brigade chaplains.

The cash gift came from the offering collection taken during Easter worship services at the Lai Khe chapel. It was presented to Pastor Nguyen Van Hue, director of the orphanage, by Major Howard Easley, Andalusia, Ala., Third Brigade chaplain.

The idea for such an orphanage in Ben Cat began in 1965 with Colonel W. D. Brodbeck, then commander of the Third Brigade.

The colonel wrote the editor of his hometown newspaper in Nebraska, the "Omaha World Herald." He stressed the Iron Brigade was in search of funds to provide for the children's support.

Thirty pounds of clothing came to the orphans as an individual gift from the Andalusia Baptist Church. The school materials were a culminated effort by several Georgia church groups. The project was coordinated by Dr. Leslie S. Williams of Jonesboro, Ga. He is the Baptist Association's superintendent of city missions.

The newspaper launched a successful campaign called "Bucks for Brodbeck" and enlisted the financial aid of their readers. The newspaper collected more than $17,000. The sum became the foundation for construction of the orphans' new home.

Since that time, more than $30,000 has gone into the orphans home in Ben Cat — the additional funds coming from many organizations.

Other chaplains at the orphanage during the gift-giving included MACV chaplain, Colonel Wilfred Hyatt, Saskatchewan, Canada, and 1st Infantry Division chaplain, Lieutenant Colonel Floyd L. Heckard, Mount Airey, N.C. Also in the group were Major Clifford Brula, division artillery chaplain from Pittsburgh, Pa., Captain Paul L. Miller, 1st Engineer Battalion chaplain from Billings, Mont., and Captain Billy J. Price, assistant Third Brigade chaplain from Columbus, Ga.

The Ben Cat Orphanage, sponsored by the Third Brigade, is the culmination of years of planning by soldiers and various church groups and missionary societies throghout the free word.

The children's village of Bau Bang, 12 miles north of Ben Cat, was virtually destroyed during fighting on November 12, 1965. The orphanage now houses 75 Vietnamese children, most of whom lost both father and mother in the Battle of Bau Bang. It is also a day-school for 150 youngsters from the Ben Cat area.

Patient Treated By Wife

LAI KHE, Vietnam (DIV 10) — It isn't very often a wounded soldier in Vietnam gets his wife for a nurse. But that's just what occurred after a Big Red One platoon leader received a neck wound during combat operations with the 1st Battalion, 28th Infantry.

Recalling his close call, 1st Lieutenant Marc G. Scott, Stratford, Conn., said, "The whole thing was kind of wild. It seemed everybody was shooting at me."

Sustaining a neck wound, the lieutenant was removed to a nearby bomb crater to await evacuation. Once in the dustoff helicopter, additional small arms fire was encountered, injuring the soldier in the right leg.

At 2nd Surgical Field Hospital in Lai Khe, Lieutenant Scott received 'red carpet' treatment from his wife, Captain Bernice Scott. That's right — superior commissioned officer.

When asked whether rank had its privileges in the Scott family, the attractive brunette replied, "He's bigger than I am." The junior officer of the household remarked, "You win some — you lose some!

The couple met while at Ft. Benning, Ga., where Lieutenant Scott graduated from Infantry Officer Candidate School. He previously attended the University of Bridgeport.

Big Red One Saves Saigon From Shelling

LAI KHE, Vietnam (DIV 10) — Six 122 mm rockets are lined in a row. They are loaded, fused, wired and armed at the capital of South Vietnam — Saigon.

The bases are loaded, and with a single twist of the fingers the wires will connect. A grand slam and the ballgame would be over. The wires are disconnected and the 1st Infantry Division nabs the last out to save the lead — and the game.

Imagine yourself as Mortar Platoon Sergeant Richard J. Dannen, doing a job miles from his Alexander, Iowa home. You gaze upon the gleaming rockets set on a dry island in the rice paddies, poised on the proverbial brink of destruction.

You fondly eye the havoc you created to drive the enemy away the night before . . . a mortar crater 10 yards away, shrapnel cuts in two warheads, and one rocket knocked off its bamboo aiming stakes.

A strong feeling of pride runs through your mind as you recall the duty you and your Big Red One buddies performed the night before in stopping six rockets from crashing on the capital.

You didn't know the disaster "Charlie" had planned for his rockets. In the watchtower, Specialist 4 James Wells of Cleveland, Ohio, studies the often-watched landscape through his starlight scope. Private First Class Eugene Griesing of Weatherly, Pa., picks up enemy movement on radar. Together, they direct the mortar barrage.

"I see them running on the paddle dikes," exclaims Spd Wells. "One's down on his knees, like he's praying. Move back the mortar fire."

After 70 rounds, enemy movement has ceased, the shelling stops, and the rising sun brings discovery of the rockets.

Put yourself in the shoes of Staff Sergeant John McGarrity of Madison, Wis., and you are returning from a night ambush patrol. As you walk along the dikes, your eyes blink with astonishment . . . Rockets! You curse in surprise for rockets aren't found that easily.

Keeping rockets out of Saigon usually means long hour of trudging through mud and sleepless nights on ambush patrols. Your job is not only to find rockets, but more important, to keep the enemy "Hell-bringers" from being set up. Your mission is to keep the enemy out of the rocket belt area.

As an infantryman, you slosh through this low, swampy land interlaced with small, nepa-lined streams. Mud is nothing new, but the waist deep muck still discourages humor. You take your camera out of its protective plastic bag so a buddy may snap a picture of your muddy face highlighted by a sincere smile for your girl back home.

"This continuous search of the rocket belt pays off," states Captain Robert Bartholomew of Belleville, N. J., and S-2 for the 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry. "We had a few rockets launched, but "Charlie" hasn't had a chance to get established. He's wary about coming because we're always covering the area. If he does get in, we're right on his tail."

As an infantryman covering the rocket belt, you are not alone. The 1st Engineer Battalion supports you with outboard motor boats to ferry you across larger streams.

You start out at dusk so as to set up for a night ambush. Vietnamese Navy patrol boats pick you up and ferry you up the Dong Nai River to the ambush site.

On the boats the men are quiet, thinking their own thoughts, and they remain quiet when they reach the ambush site. Only radio contact breaks the early evening silence. The site has been used before, and sandbags still form a small perimeter around the dry ground at the junction of two streams.

The Fullest Measure of Care Provided at MAH

By PFC Rick Hannegan

"High Quality" and "spare no expense" are two phrases that best describe outpatient care throughout the Army. Each patient may rest in the knowledge that where his health is concerned, he will be afforded the fullest measure of care which medical science can provide.

Most Army hospitals, such as Martin Army Hospital here, enjoy the use of up-to-date equipment and employ a well trained staff of technical and administrative personnel, despite the rapid pace of developments in health care. Each patient is guaranteed that the provisions for his health are basically good, well controlled and under a constant process of modernization.

NURSE APPLIES BANDAGE

Supporting structures of a local Army Hospital constitute an overall health care program without equal in the world. In order to illustrate the point, consider the back-up of the outpatient and pediatric clinics of Martin Army Hospital. In addition to fine local Army technical services in the fields of pathology and radiology, the patient may be referred for the further professional opinion of one of the physicians in 15 departments.

If admission is required for either diagnosis or treatment in these fields of professional service, it may be to one of the 900 beds at Martin Army Hospital. Pathology and radiology services beyond those offered locally are available at the Third Army Laboratory, at the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology, at the Walter Reed Army Institute of Research, and at either Brooke General Hospital or Walter Reed General Hospital.

Consultant services not usually rendered here such as pediatric, cardiology or neurosurgery are rendered at a referral center such as Walter Reed, if on a routine basis, or in the local community by special arrangement if the need is urgent. At first glance, some of these services may seem remote but they are in reality only a few hours away because of the availability of a routine and emergency air evacuation capability which is the finest in the world.

Let us take the actual case of baby "X", who, at one month of age, was brought in because he ate poorly and breathed rapidly. At 10 a.m. the clinic doctor noted that the baby was cyanotic and had signs of heart failure. By 11 a.m. he had been admitted to the hospital, was seen by the Chief of Pediatrics and by the cardiologist, and had been diagnosed as having congenital heart disease.

Treatment of his failing heart was begun at once. The air evacuation office was alerted and a plane was diverted to Lawson Army Airfield here. By 1 p.m. the baby was under oxygen and with medication; he was in a traveling incubator and had his parents with him as the plane roared off toward Walter Reed Army Hospital in Washington. Because of his very seriously ill status, a pediatrician accompanied him in flight and supervised the child's care until the baby was turned over to the pediatric service at Walter Reed at 6 p.m. on the same day.

At Walter Reed, the baby had special heart studies done and precise diagnosis rendered. Twelve hours after his "walk-in" visit at Martin Army Hospital, he had received definitive care and was resting comfortably. His care had involved dozens of people; people whose presence is seldom recognized, but who are always there, contributing solidly to the Army's overall health care structure.

Husband, Wife Serve In U.S. and Vietnam

A married soldier in the army sometimes finds togetherness to be more of a word that a fact, but not Capt. James B. Craig, O.C. 1-58th Inf., 197th Inf. Bde.

In March 1965, he received his commission from OCS, Fort Benning, after serving three years as an enlisted man. It was while serving in the capacity of company commander here at Fort Benning that he met Susan Worley, his future wife.

She was a nurse at Martin Army Hospital and a 2nd Lieutenant. They were married on January 11, 1967 and one year later he received his orders for his second tour in Vietnam. No wife wants to be separated from her husband and Mrs. Craig was no different. So she requested and received permission to go to Vietnam.

His higher rank did not last very long as 2nd Lieutenant Craig soon became Capt. Craig. She was stationed as a nurse in Long Binh and he as a company commander with the 93rd Mech. Detch. 9th Division Blen Phoec.

But they were not destined to be separated for long. Receiving a chest wound from heavy enemy fire, Capt. Craig was sent to Saigon to a spital and flown in to be his personal nurse was his wife.

After a normal recuperative period, he was sent to the hospital in Long Binh for convalescence and of course his wife returned to her hospital, which just happened to be the same one. Never let it be said that the army does not do it's bit for family togetherness!

But togetherness goes so far in the Craig family. Capt. James Craig does the fighting as attested by his two Silver Stars, three Bronze Stars, two Arcom's, and four Purple Hearts.

Mrs. Craig has a well rounded background in the Army as her father is Command Sergeant Major Donnie H. Worley, Sixth Army, Presidio of San Francisco, Calif.

When asked who outranks who now that they are both captains, Capt. James Craig said, "Let's just say that on post I enjoy the rank privileges."

Alaskan Scout Attends Officer Candidate Course

By OC Jon M. Hess

Officer Candidate (OC) Aloysius Wasuli of Emmonak, Alaska is a salmon fisherman in the summer and a National Guard Infantryman during the long Alaskan Winter.

OC Wasuli is now attending the Officer Candidate Reserve Course (OC-RC) in the 64th Company, 6th Stu. Bn., The Candidate Brigade, to receive his commission in the National Guard.

He is a member of the National Guard Scout Battalion in Emmonak, Alaska. "Our annual field training is held in February, training in winter operations.

The uniform, is snowshoes, overwhites, white K-boots and parkas. Because of his love of the outdoors, OC Wasuli rented his first 18 foot skiff and fished alone in the treacherous waters of the Yukon River Delta when he was only 15 years old.

The salmon season starts soon after he finishes his training with the 64th Company. "I must get out on the river at least six hours before the season starts to get a place among the hundreds of men in their skiffs." He uses no rod and reel, but prefers to use a gill net. He sets the net with floats and drifts with the current catching the migrating salmon.

"The Lower Yukon is the most productive area in Alaska for King and Red Salmon. I may catch 300 in a good day," he alded.

Salmon sell for about $1.20 each and profits are high for the stocky Wasuli when the salmon "run" every summer. He must pay rent for his equipment, but there is plenty of money left over for his winter activities—military and school.

Lee, Hornet, Cobra; All in Army Arsenal

US ARMY COMBAT DEVELOPMENTS COMMAND, Ft. Belvoir, Va. — The old saw of having the "game but not the name" might well be applied to project officers at the U. S. Army Combat Developments Command (CDC), Ft. Belvoir, Va. The command, which is responsible for writing the earliest conceptual requirements for new and improved materiel ranging from mammoth earth movers to fast-flying helicopters, delivers the baby but never gets to name it.

CDC projects are usually QMRs, Qualitative Materiel Requirements; PQMDOs, Proposed Qualitative Materiel Development Objectives; SDRs, Small Developments Requirements or, in many cases, are profound studies. They generally bear identification which makes them easily recognizable but unglamourous.

It is only after they have gone through the development and test phase, which is evaluated by CDC, and finally adopted for procurement that they are "born" and named in accordance with criteria outlined in a recently published Army regulation. For instance, infantry weapons use the names of such intrepid pioneers as CROCKETT, CARSON, CODY, and BOONE.

Armor-naming criteria offer such illustrious titles of famed American generals of the Civil War and other eras as LEE, JACKSON, STUART, MEADE, HOOKER, and WASHINGTON. Armored combat vehicles which take to the jungle carry sobriquets like CHEETAH, COUGAR, PANTHER, and LEOPARD.

To fight armor, antitank and assault weapons are cloaked in the more venomous terms, COBRA, RATTLESNAKE, VIPER, HORNET, SCORPION, and TARANTULA.

In the air, American Indian tribes and chiefs supply the names for helicopters and fixed wing aircraft. Among these are MOHAWK, CHEROKEE, GERONIMO, and TUCUMSEH.

MOLE, FERRET, BADGER, BEAR and BUFFALO, readily identified by their digging ability or their strength, aptly speak for engineer mobility equipment.

Although the equipment once in the Army inventory is forever known by its more dramatic title, the BUSHMASTER, named after one of the most deadly of snakes, left CDC as a QMDO titled: Vehicle Rapid Fire Weapons System.

Device 'Tells' Pilot If Malfunction Occurs

US ARMY COMBAT DEVELOPMENTS COMMAND, Ft. Belvoir, Va. — A talkative back seat driver will be allowed aboard Army aircraft during air missions under a proposal by Combat Developments Command (CDC), Ft. Belvoir, Va. The extra passenger, far from unwanted, will be a Voice Warning-Recorder System alerting crewmen to malfunctions in fixed and rotary wing aircraft.

The proposal calls for a lightweight, compact electronic system providing pre-recorded voice warnings through all crewmen's headsets to supplement visual instrument readings. The messages will warn of failures and malfunctions in major operating systems such as engines, transmissions, rotor r.p.m., tail rotors, engine oil and temperature.

The biggest advantage of the system is that it will free the crewman's eyes from instrument display panels. In demanding flight patterns such as "nap of the earth" maneuvers (where the craft passes close to obstacles on the earth's surface), and in actual fighting missions, crew members must be able to devote as much attention as possible outside the cockpit.

"Human factors" research has shown that visual instrument displays, often complicated, are hard to read quickly, particularly in emergency and stress situations. According to CDC, the warning voice system would in many cases replace the assortment of panel lights, tones, gauges, bells and horns adding to "sense bombardment" in tactical and training missions.

The recording part of the system will permit playback of faults and malfunctions occurring over a five-hour duration or longer. This will give maintenance crews a moment-by-moment record aiding in post-flight repairs and maintenance analysis. The recorder will also be a reliable "memory-bank" in pilot debriefings and accident investigations.

Each of the 20 messages will have a predetermined priority. Thus warnings of more critical malfunctions will automatically interrupt those of lesser priority. In cases of multi-malfunction, each warning will fall into proper sequence, and none will be "lost."

The system is intended to fulfill requirements specified for the Cheyenne compound helicopter, the Heavy Lift Helicopter and the UTTAS (Utility Tactical Transport Aircraft Systems), as well as other aircraft systems of greater and lesser complexity.

Messages will enter crew headsets with good audio quality, understandable above operational (ambient) noise. Time elapsing between an actual malfunction and its warning would be in the millisecond category, virtually instantaneous.

Pilots will be able to turn the system off when desired, though warnings triggered during any such "silent" periods would be stored and transmitted immediately once the system is repowered by the pilot.

System design must be simple, reducing parts required, operating and maintenance cost and logistic complexity.

94th Company Begins New Cycle

The 94th Company (Officer Candidate), 9th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade began the OCS program this week (May 1). The 220 Candidates of the company who had just completed the OCS "zero week" attended the traditional, opening day orientation by the Brigade Commander, Colonel Robert M. Piper.

During their "zero week" the candidates put the company area into order, met their Tactical officers and the Commanding Office of 94th Company, Capt. Roger Dimsdale. They were informed of the details and practices that would be expected of them, and underwent, along with the routine inprocessing, long and strenuous periods of physical training.

Bronze Star Presented To McDonough

Capt. Richard T. McDonough an instructor here, received the Bronze Star Medal for meritorious service in Vietnam at (May 5) ceremony. The decoration was presented by Col. John N. Wine, chief of the Office of Data Systems, where Capt. McDonough is assigned.

Capt. McDonough received the medal for service as a recruiting and induction advisor with the Office of the Personnel Advisor, IV Corps Tactical Zone, U.S. Military Assistance Command in Vietnam from November, 1967, through November, 1968. His citation read in part, "He pursued a thoughtful and thorough approach to upgrading facilities and procedures for recruiting, examining, and receiving new personnnel."

He also received, for the same period of time, the Honor Medal First Class, the highest Vietnamese award for meritorious service.

Prior to this tour in Vietnam, Capt. McDonough served with the U.S. Army Reserve Center, St. Petersburg, Fla., from August, 1965, until November, 1967.

The captain's other awards and decorations include the Army Commendation Medal with first Oak Leaf Cluster, the Good Conduct Medal with three Bronze Loops, the Army of Occupation Medal (Japan and Germany).

Ex-Korean Air Force Officer Enlists in U.S. Army

FORT ORD, Calif. (ANF) — Nineteen years ago, a major with the 187th Regimental Combat Team in Korea saved a starving and homeless 10-year-old boy from possible death by providing him with food and shelter. The boy stayed with the unit as a "mascot" and at the end of the war, the Army put him through high school and college — an opportunity that led to his becoming a lieutenant in the Korean Air Force.

Throughout the following years Jong-Duk Im vowed he would one day come to the United States to "repay this nation for all it has done for me." Im, now 29 years old, finally made it.

His recent basic training graduation from the 1st Brigade at Fort Ord marked the beginning of a three-year enlistment period in the U. S. Army in which he has volunteered for Vietnam duty to "help defend the ideals and freedom of America.

"I believe in this country and that what it is trying to do in the world is good," explained Im. "I am very much indebted to the United States Government and glad that I have the opportunity to pay back my 'debts' to this country."

Im's military commitment to Korea delayed his coming to the United States. Following graduation from Yunsei University in Korea, where he received a bachelor of arts degree in business management in 1961, he was told that before he could join the United States Army he would first have to fulfill an obligation to the Korean military.

He served the next seven months in the Korean Air Force Officer Candidate School, four of which were spent in paratrooper and special forces training.

Commissioned a second lieutenant in 1965, he was promoted to first lieutenant only three months later for heroic actions and outstanding leadership as a platoon leader against the guerrilla forces.

Im arrived in the states in 1967 only to learn that he would have to wait one year before joining the Army since he had entered the country on a nonimmigration visa.

When his induction date came up, he refused officer candidate school (OCS) offers explaining, "The six months I would spend in OCS I could better spend as an infantryman in Vietnam, so this is the way I prefer to pay back my 'debt.' Also, in three years, I feel I must return to my country to help in solving their many problems."

Gen. Davis and Son Jump After Graduation

By Bill Hardin

Brigadier General Oscar E. Davis was guest speaker at the May 1 graduation exercises for 148 newly commissioned second lieutenants, including his son, Worthen A. Davis.

The general, who is commanding general of the United States Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning, pinned the gold bars on his son immediately following the ceremony. The lieutenant has chosen Infantry as his basic branch of service.

Lt. Davis, as his father, attended the University of Arizona.

Father and son are parachutists and following the lieutenant's commissioning, the two made a parachute jump together.

No stranger to Fort Benning, Lt. Davis took basic training here. A year ago, he completed the basic airborne course offered by the Airborne Department of the U.S. Army Infantry School. He is also a graduate of the Defense Information School and served with the 82nd Airborne Division before entering OCS.

Lt. Davis has been assigned to the 13th Public Information Detachment, U.S. Army Infantry Center Troop Command, at Fort Benning.

Named as distinguished and leadership graduate of the class was Roger C. Thompson.

For his achievement, Lt. Thompson received a letter of commendation from Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of The Infantry School. He also received an Association of the United States Army (AUSA) plaque, and an Infantryman statuettes.

Lt. Thompson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Thompson of Oradell, N.J.

Save a Little Money And Possibly Your Life

By Bill Hardin

An investment of three seconds could result in a return of $5.

It takes no more than three seconds to fasten a safety belt, and the first person here each day for the next two months who is found to be wearing a safety belt properly while operating a motor vehicle will be awarded a $5 check.

James E. Blount, Fort Benning safety officer, said that vehicle checks will be conducted by members of his office at different times of the day and at various locations over the reservation.

Blount said 45 Fort Benning soldiers lost their lives as a result of traffic accidents between July 26, 1968, and April 25, 1969.

Most of these were involved in mishaps which occurred off post and "most of them could have been saved if they had been wearing safety belts," he said.

Blount said that most of the soldiers killed during this period were either thrown from the vehicle or were impaled on the steering wheel.

Not one of the victims who died was using a safety belt at the time of the accident, according to Blount.

During the past two years, three checks have been made by the Safety Office. The first showed that in October, 1967, only one out of every 31 cars checked had a driver wearing a safety belt. In April, 1968, when the second check was made, one out of every 15 drivers was using a safety belt. At the time of the last check, in August, 1968, one out of every 11 drivers was wearing a safety belt.

"In a neighboring state, a study shows that of 1,250 persons killed only seven were wearing safety belts.

Another study which covered 31 states revealed that of 50,000 deaths in motor vehicle accidents 1,055, or two per cent of the victims were wearing safety belts," said Blount.

"With the drive which begins today, we hope to motivate motorists to wear their safety belts because our figures show that 98 per cent of the wearers of safety belts are saved when involved in motor vehicle mishaps," he stated.

"We have already awarded the first $5 check. We had a spot check last week and 32 vehicles were stopped and checked before we found Spc Richard E. Yellott (Baltimore, Md.) wearing his safety belt. A member of Company C, 1st Battalion U. S. Army Center Troop Command, Yellott said that he always uses his safety belt," Blount stated.

The Fort Benning Safety Office is rewarding drivers for being safe, and reminds drivers that "a girdle helps to keep the figure, and a seat belt helps to save the life."

Doctor Urges Heat Injury Prevention

At the ATC Safety Council meeting, Lt. Col. Charles R. Webb from Martin Army Hospital spoke on new methods of preventing heat injuries.

He explained that all heat injuries, except heat stroke, result directly from the loss of body water and salts. Heat stroke occurs in persons who are so depleted of body fluids that they can no no longer control their body tempeature by perspiration.

The prevention of heat injury is not always easy, however, timely provision of water and replacemet of minerals will normally prevent heat casualties in healthy adults.

"Increased salt requirement is best provided by using more salt on foods at mealtime," said Dr. Webb. "Contrary to popular belief salt tablets are seldom needed, and their use may delay acclimatization.

"Plain salt tablets, unless dissolved in water, may cause vomiting, cramps, and diarrhea, thereby increasing the likelihood of injury from heat. Also excessive use of salt tablets can cause serious symptoms due to a disturbance to normal sodium potassium balance," explained Dr. Webb.

One of of the most common but potentially dangerous results of excessive sunlight is sunburn. Each year many soldiers with severe sunburn appear at dispensaries and a large number require hospitalization.

Greensmith Top NCO

Robert R. Greensmith, (San Diego, Calif.,) was the distinguished and honored graduate of Noncommissioned Officer Candidate Class No. 26-29 in Marshall Auditorium here April 8.

Candidate Greensmith led the class of 159 NCOs in both leadership and academics.

For his achievement, Candidate Greensmith was promoted to staff sergeant, awarded the first $5 check. We had a spot check last week and 32 vehicles were stopped and checked before we found Spc Richard E. Yellott (Baltimore, Md.) wearing his safety belt. A member of Company C, 1st Battalion U. S. Army Center Troop Command, Yellott said that he always uses his safety belt," Blount stated.

The Fort Benning Safety Office is rewarding drivers for being safe, and reminds drivers that "a girdle helps to keep the figure, and a seat belt helps to save the life."

received a letter of commendation from Brigadier General Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the United States Army Infantry School, an Association of the United States Army (AUSA) plaque, two engraved "Follow Me" stanuettes, and an engraved "Follow Me" plaque.

Preparations Ready For ROTC Cadets

Preparations are now well underway for the third year of ROTC Basic Summer Camp to be held at Fort Benning. Approximately 3,400 cadets, from colleges and universities all over the country, will be arriving here in two increments, on the 13th of June and the 27th of June.

The job of making transportation, training, billeting, and messing arrangements for these men is tremendous, and has been going on the the past two months.

But, as Colonel Jesus Ramos, Commanding Officer of the 2nd Training Brigade, Army Training Center said, "We have now made the last turn, and are heading down the home stretch. Due to the nation-wide importance of ROTC Basic Summer Camp here at Fort Benning, from now until graduation it will be our main concern."

4/69th Honor Company

Company "B", 4th Battalion, 69th Armor, 197th Infantry Brigade proudly added "the Honor Company" streamer to its guidon for the month of April 1969. In addition to the streamer, the company was also presented the Honor Company Plaque by LTC Robert H. Luck, the Battalion Commander, at a Command Reveille for-

During the month of April the company received the highest ratings for outstanding school support, general police of assigned areas and various inspections that were conducted.

Singing Before President Scary, Recalls Soldier

By Phil Schlaeger

"Your left, right, left, . .hallelujah!"

It's not every day that a drill sergeant gets a gospel singer for a cadence caller — much less one inclined to bark out arias from Faust.

"I just made them up," PFC Larry Conklin confesses, in referring to his basic training days at Ft. Knox, Ky.

Fortunately for the NCOs at Sand Hill, Larry now confines his baritone voice to theatres and night clubs rather than parade grounds, as evidenced by his recent performance in personnel in S-4, 5th Batta-The Fantastics. And if the lion (OC), TCB should just happen to prove unappreciative of the melodic tones emitting from the throat of their cohert, Larry can gently remind them that in February he won the Post Entertainment Contest.

Born twenty-seven years ago in Springfield, Ohio, Larry made his musical debut at the age of twelve, singing gospel music in his father's church. Soon he was to appear throughout the state as part of a trio. But it was at Northeastern High that he first developed a real interest in music, starring in several musicals.

Enlisting in the Army in 1960, Larry's talent was quick to be recognized by Special Services. While serving in Germany, he appeared with the Third Infantry Division Showcase for two years. During this span he studied voice at the Univerity of Wurzburg.

While touring with the Showcase, Larry performed before a seemingly endless number of dignitaries, both military and civilian. At Heidelberg in 1964, he appeared before Gen. Yakubovsky, Marshal of the Soviet Union. Perhaps the biggest highlight of his career came in 1963 with a performance in Berlin before the late President Kennedy.

"Sure, I was scared to death," Larry recalls, "but he was a very appreciative man. I sang something in German and then I did Tonight from West Side Story. After the show he came backatage to meet us."

Larry vividly recalls forming and directing shows on ship while traveling to and from Germany. "We had a real good show coming over, but coming back everyone was more preoccupied with getting home.

Completing his term of enlistment while at Fort Benning in 1966, Larry studied music at San Jose State, while appearing in everything from musical comedy, to opera, from television to club work.

The list of musicals he has performed in is indeed impressive: Roar of the Greasepaint, Smell of the Crowd; Carnival; Damn Yankee; Carousel; The Unsinkable Molly Brown; The Boyfriend; and Can-Can.

"I enjoy musical comedy more than anything else," he says. "My favorite show at present is The Fantastics — it's second to none."

Not choosing to limit himself to merely musical comedies, Larry has appeared on television on the local Rozelle Show and at the Southeastern Fair in Atlanta. He has also appeared on the operatic stage in Faust, Barber of Seville, Cavalleria, Rusticana, Carmen, Rigiletto, and The Student Prince.

What operatic role did he like best? "I'd have to say I enjoyed playing the role Escimillo in Carmen the most."

"I'd very much like to play the lead in Sound of Music. I think I might be able to do it this summer at Springer Theatre.

Having left the Army in 1966, spending 2½ years pursuing his musical career, Larry re-enlisted this January for the Third Army Area, hoping to return to the Third Army Showmobile. In the immediate future is trying for a part in the upcoming Fort Benning playhouse production of Pajama Tops. In addition, he has been invited by Theodore Gargulio, of the Columbus Civic Opera Company, to sing operatic excerpts at Carver High School on 22 May.

Second Running at Post

Film 'For Pete's Sake' Scheduled To Be Shown

By Frank Truchon

The second Fort Benning showing of "For Pete's Sake," the new Billy Graham Evangelistic Association film, is scheduled to be held at Marshall Auditorium on May 23 at 7 p.m.

The film produced in wide screen and color, is a comedy-drama while it takes on some of the larger questions about Christianity today as reflected in the lives of a gas station attendent and his family.

Peter Harper, played by Robert Sampson, his wife, Marge, portrayed by Pippa Scott, and their family, find themselves meeting the challenges of a Christian commitment after listening to a sermon during a Billy Graham Crusade.

During the months that follow the crusade, faith becomes a living force for Pete. It grows while he is pumping gas on a busy Denver street-corner, while returning a cake plate to a neighbor, and even under the challenge of leather and dare-devil" teenage motorcyclists who bring him face to face with the shattering honesty of today's youth.

The film doesn't boast any angels, just common, ordinary humans who are involved in vital issues presently facing twentieth century man.

Robert Sampson will be remembered for his starring role in another Billy Graham Evangelistic Association movie, "The Restless Ones."

Pippa Scott is well-known for her Broadway appearances and starring roles in most major television shows.

Al Freeman and John Milford work with Pete in their service station. Freeman starred on Broadway in "Blues for Mr. Charley" and was recently seen in "Golden Boy." Milford has been seen in "Get Smart," "Perry Mason," "F.B.I.," and other television presentations.

Other featured players include Johnny Jensen as Pete's son, Irene Tedrow as Grandma Harper, and Nicolas Surovy as Skip, leader of the motorcycle gang.

Synopsis

ROMEO & JULIET—In terms of today's youthful rebellion, social pressures and generation gap, this film touches home. Played, for a change, by 15, 16, and 17 year olds, Shakespeare's young men wear their hair long; they roam the streets eyeing and talking about girls: rival gangs brawl and somebody gets hurt—11th century "switchblades" were as real and longer than todays.

Romeo and Juliet's youthful love challenges the traditional blind hatred between their families, the Capulets and Montagues, and threatens the social stability of the older generation. This hatred has long been accepted by the establishment: Romeo and Juliet's budding romance is out of order, and therefore must be carried on behind the backs of their parents.

Juliet's defiance of her parents' choice of a proper match for her illustrates that a lack of communication between the generations is not unique to the 1960's.

Running time: 138 minutes.

DEATH OF A GUNFIGHTER—Set in the early part of the Century, Widmark is a gun-slinging, straight-laced Marshal in a frontier community. His knowledge of the deeds and misdeeds of all the inhabitants has kept him in office and his strict unbending execution of his job has, through the years, created enemies. Now the town leaders feel he is holding back progress and they decide to get rid of him. .he stubbornly refuses to give up his job; he finds he is pitted against the whole town in a tense and dramatic confrontation.

Running time: 97 minutes.

WHERE EAGLES DARE—In the deepest heart of Germany towering between mountain and sky stands the impregnable Castle of the Eagles, nerve center of the Gestapo. Imprisoned behind the massive stone walls is the Allied General who knows more about the coming D-Day invasion than any man alive. No matter what the risk. .no matter what the cost. .he must be rescued. . .or silenced. For the most explosive excitement of your life—See "Where Eagles Dare."

Running time: 155 minutes.

IF IT'S TUESDAY IT MUST BE BELGIUM—Europe sent us the Dutch Elm disease, the German measles and Whirlwind-Vacation Tour No. 225. .Now we're even! "If It's Tuesday, It Must be Belgium is a fictional account of the adventures and misadventures of a busload of tourists.

THE FORUM
THE LOGON

BY PAUL MANGIONE

A pall hangs over St. Louis heavier than the spring rains this year and it doesn't appear that it will let up soon. It's not smog or a cloud of evaporated beer that darkens the skies but the gloom in the hearts of baseball fans in this great city for the St. Louis Cardinals are in last place. The hottest preseason favorites, the winner of the last two National league pennants, the run-away choice for this year's flag are six games out of first after only four weeks of play. Even more amazing, and un-nerving for the Cardinals, are the Chicago Cubs who are enjoying their best start in twenty years with a 20-11 record and a two game lead in the Eastern division.

Such things are not supposed to be. After all, the Cards have the most impressive line-up in the majors, a line-up that was noticeably enhanced by some great pre-season trades that brought names like Pinson, Torre and Giusti to the club's roster. But they lost ball games; the Met's beat them, the Expos beat them, everybody beats them and the reasons are obvious and painful for the Cardinals and their fans. They are not hitting the ball. In a recent game the Cards left nine base-runners stranded, five of which got to first on walks or errors.

Every team goes through slumps but one that lasts from opening day through the first four weeks of the season is bound to have a snow-balling effect. The Cards had more pressure on them at the beginning than the others. They had won the last two pennants, possessed the strongest team by everyone's estimation and were generally considered to be good for a clinched pennant by the 4th of July. That they haven't done so is not surprising but it is surprising that they have done as badly as they have for so long. As they continue to lose it becomes a little more difficult to shake off the spectre of limp hats that plagues them.

Curt Flood and Lou Brock are not hitting. Bob Gibson isn't pitching very well. Nobody is doing anything very well for the Cardinals. Brock and Flood got on base only six times between them in the first sixteen games of the season. The Cards lost ten of those first sixteen and haven't done much better since.

Red Schoendienst, the Card's manager is looking hard but hasn't found the answer to his ailing team's problems. Some overly critical fans have suggested that the Cards are resting on their laurels and their pocket books but that isn't the case. The Cardinals have played hard from the start; they've tried everything to break the dreadful slump but nothing seems to work. The team has everything, all the potential to grab a third straight pennant but a cohesive factor, present the last two years, is missing this season. The Cardinals are playing like nine individuals instead of a team and it's hurting them.

The Cardinals will break the slump and start to win their share of ball games but unless they want to settle for second or third they're going to have to do more than just win their share. They must make up for bad time, four weeks to be exact. Gibson and Flood and all the rest will have to regain some of their lamented lost form. No longer can nine men be left standing idly on the bases.

Of course it is always easier to say what must be done than actually do it but the Cards can do it. They have done better before with less than they have now.

As for now, the Cubs are enjoying a place in the sun they haven't seen in about twenty seasons. Whether they stay there or not is, in good measure, up to Leo Durocher and his upstart team across the river. Leo took over an eighth place team in 1965 and brought them up to third last year. He has made some exceptional trades, Fergy Jenkins and Randy Hundley for example, and molded the talent he already had into a genuine contender. Whether they stay where they are is, also, in good measure, up to Red Schoendienst and his ailing flock of birds on the other side of the swollen Mississippi.

Pistol Team Dominates Arizona International

Fort Benning Based Team Sweeps Championships

The U. S. Army Pistol team caught fire as they won every major team and individual match during the Arizona International Pistol Tournament, Phoenix, Arizona, last week.

The Army team stationed at Ft. Benning, arrived in Arizona fresh from a victorious showing the previous week in the California International Tournament. They showed they were the top contenders and true champions by sweeping the Grand Championship in the 2700 three gun match.

SGM William Blankenship won the match with a 2653. Right behind Rainkenship was his teammates SFC Hershel Anderson 2650 and SFC Robert Whiteacre's 2639. Blankenship led the army team in the 22 aggregate with an 885. Anderson placed second with 883 and SSG. James McNally was third with 880. Blankenship had a tough time winning the .45 aggregate. He fired an 882 along with Anderson, but Anderson had to settle for second because of a lower x-count. (number of bulls in the x-ring, a smaller bull in the bulls-eye) Blankenship placed second in the Center Fire aggregate behind Whiteacre 886 to 887 respectively.

Army Blue pistol team won all three-team matches. They outshot their teammates Army Gray team 1171 to 1170. Army Blue repeated themselves by downing Army Gray in the Center Fire team match 1170 to 1164. Army Blue over-powered the Air Force team 1168 to 1158 in the .45 team match.

During the tournament three International style matches were fired. SSG. Merriweather Jones, U. S. Army, won the International Slow Fire match with a 544. SFC Aubrey Smith, U. S. Army, won the International Rapid Fire match with a 591 and Whiteacre came through to win the International Center Fire match with a 591.

☆☆☆ RACING AROUND ☆☆☆

BY ROB BOWERS

EDITOR'S NOTE: This week the Bayonet begins a new column by 2nd Lt. Rob Bowers. Lt. Bower's journalist experience came from five years as a Radio-TV newsman with a Chicago area news service. During this period he often covered racing events. He is presently assigned to the Television division of USAIS.

The Chavaga Region of the sports Car Clubs of America continues to hold the interest of local buffs, civilian and military, with its well rounded program of rallies and auto-crosses. April's rally Lulu I was just that — a lulu. Only thirteen of the thirty-three entrants had the stamina to push their way through the mass of gimmick clues and finish this billed "beginner's" event. Glen and Gary Wells took top honors followed by Joyce and Lesley Styring (no puns please) and Karen and Bob Woodruff. Joe Conners and Chris Williams picked off the fourth place trophy.

Coming up on Sunday May 25 is a speed and distance rally departing from Shakey's Pizza Parlor at 1:30. Registration begins at 11:00 and the entry fee is $3.00 for members and $4.00 for non-members. For further information contact your friendly M.P. Capt. Frank Amoroso at 687-6693, 545-3811 or Chuck and Jenie Todd at 561-0115.

On the other half of the local racing scene, Jerry Coley tells us that Phenix Dragway is hosting a straight eliminator meet this weekend with no less than four national champions entered. Phenix Dragway, by the way, currently is the nation's number one drag strip in records set. Appearing at this weekend's meet are D Gas Champ M. A. Madden of Anniston, Ala., and D Sport Leader Beau Laws from Winterpark, Fla.

Laws is a three time national champion and was the 1968 World Points Champion. This year he is number two in points competition behind another participant in this weeks event Ronnie Stewart of Decatur, Ga. Stewart is also the present leader in the C Modified Production Class. The F Gas Division is being represented by national champ Hood A. Paine of Atlanta, Ga.

The weekend of 25 May brings stock eliminators to the local strip with notables Max Hall, Keith Hodges, Sherman Adcock, and Jr. Quarrels competing.

In the near future drag fans can look forward to a super-stock invitational on June 1 and a funny car grudge match on June 8 between 330 pound Mike Burkhardt and the world's only woman funny car racer "Funny Honey" herself Della Woods.

CANDIDATES, GOVERNOR MEET AT GAME
Mr. Maddox Accepted OC's Challenge

A recent Atlanta Braves double-header baseball game had in attendance the entire 60th Infantry Officer Candidate company (6th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade) and their distinguished guest, the Honorable Lester Maddox, Governor of Georgia. The candidates extended the invitation to the Governor as the result of a sporting challenge from their company commander to have "the Governor there to meet us" if they were to be allowed to go to the game. Consequently, Student Council President John Creech, a native Atlantan, wrote to the Governor explaining the situation, and Mr. Maddox accepted. The Hon. Mr. Maddox, accompanied by his wife and daughter, was met at the stadium by 60th Co. Commander, Capt. Jesse P. Peel, his officers, and members of the student council. Inside, he was greeted by the 200 members of the company, many of whom were accompanied by their wives. Mr. Maddox personally spoke to all of them.

Holds Black Belt in Korean Style

Karate Demands Self-Sacrifice, Discipline Says OC

In this age of comic book super heroes, it does not seem strange that a real-life one-man wrecking crew should exist. This singular personification of destructive force is Bernard W. Alguire, a candidate in the 50th Infantry Officer Candidate Company, 5th Student Battalion (OC), The Candidate Brigade.

Candidate Alguire qualifies as an expert in the martial arts: he is the holder of the brown belt in Judo, and the first degree black belt in Tae Kwan Do which is Korean form of karate. He began studying Judo at the age of 12, but transferred his interests to karate upon entering college at Wayne State University (Detroit, Mich.) from which he earned a B.A. degree in sociology.

Alguire feels that his knowledge of Judo helped him to learn karate, even though they are different art forms. He explains that Judo is based upon the techniques of throwing, holding, strangling, and striking, with the last technique being the overlapping factor between the two martial arts.

"Karate," says Alguire, "is striking and kicking. In karate you use throwing techniques learned in Judo, as well as other self-defensive moves. Both art forms complement the other."

Alguire readily admits that karate is not totally grounded in physical violence in that it incorporates within it an oriental philosophical code. "In karate you learn to kill or disable, therefore you have to have rather strict rules to follow which carry over outside the classroom and into daily life."

According to Alguire, there are five basic tenets inherent in the philosophy of Tae Kwan Do, all of which have been in existence for thousands of years. Although these principles have altered somewhat through the years, the ideas are the same ones which lend karate much of its tradition. These ideas are: be loyal to the governing power; be obedient to parents (elders); be honorable to friends; make a sensible kill; and never retreat in battle.

Alguire suggests that the mind-body philosophy of karate demands great self-sacrifice and above-all discipline: "If one loses control of his faculties he lessens his ability as a fighter, and also puts others in jeopardy because of a misuse of his knowledge which focuses on killing or disabling blows."

Karate classes, Alguire explains "are extremely rigorous physically. The purpose of this is to develop the mental attitude to drive on when physically you can do no more. In this manner, the physical is subordinate to the mental in the development of the proper attitude."

Candidate Alguire has toured the country while appearing in both Judo and karate tournaments. Most of the tournaments do not involve titles or trophies, but rather, they give experience in fighting against different styles. In his own karate club, Alguire was the assistant instructor.

What does one say to an Alguire upon confronting him in a dark alley? Shantih, Candidate Alguire, Shantih.

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

By Bill Kloeb

Sgt. Robert Crossland still leads the May Fishing Derby with the 7-pound catfish he caught at Victory Pond. Maj. Richard K. Bachman, Martin Army Hospital, now leads the bream contest with a 15-ounce entry caught using fly rod and popping bug at Patterson Pond.

We knew it would happen sooner or later. After a check of the records it was determined that Capt. A. J. Holborn, Ranger Department, had not registered at Rod and Gun Headquarters before catching the 9-pound bass we listed as the leader in the May bass contest so we had to kill that entry. The leader in the bass contest is Capt. Robert W. Kesler, 21st Company, The Student Brigade with a 4½ pound entry caught at Weems Pond on a rod and reel and rebel lure.

Sometime in the early part of the 15th century some worthy with better imagination than eyesight blew a perfectly easy shot at a trophy buck, uttered a transparently phony excuse, and the "outdoor alibi" was born. It has flourished ever since and no right thinking hunter or fisherman would think to take to the out-doors without an adequate supply.

The word alibi goes back to the Romans, and in those days it meant "in another place." For lawyers it still means pretty much the same thing. But for hunters and fishermen it means a not too plausible, self serving excuse.

Some of the most overworked alibis used by fishermen when no fish are caught are: the water is too high or the water is too low; the water is too clear or the water is too muddy; the wind is from the east or from the west, north or south; the moon is too full or the moon is not full enough; the minnows are too big or the minnows are too small. The list could go on and on.

But broadly speaking there are two great divisions among fishermen and I'm not talking about the arguments between freshwater and saltwater types or between fly casters, bait casters and cane polers. The real division is between those who have discovered the true utility of the water temperature thermometer and those that have not. Those who have not are missing one of the great alibis for not catching fish — water that is too hot or too cold or whose thermal gradient is ascending when it should be descending, or vice versa.

Mastery of the alibi carries great responsibility. It is possible to excuse almost every muscue, given enough skill in the art form, but great care must be taken lest a vast and yawning credibility gap be opened.

The fact is of course, that there is nothing wrong with alibis taken in moderate doses. They enable us to rationalize the occasional errors that mar our generally outstanding performance. Even the best shooters miss a certain percentage of shots and the most experienced fishermen have days when they are blanked.

The best way to see that the credibility gap doesn't get too deep and wide is to catch more fish and its a known fact that the fisherman who keeps a baited hook in the water for the longest time has a better chance of catching fish. Too many fishermen are too inclined to take for granted and follow old fishing adages and quit because of them.

Candidate Is Soccer All American

The 52nd Infantry Officer Candidate Co., 5th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade, currently lists within its ranks an All-American athlete in the person of Candidate Richard F. Flaherty, of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Flaherty was honored as an All-American for his soccer playing with Pennsylvania's East Stroundsburg State College in 1965, the year in which that school placed fifth in NCAA soccer competition, a considerable feat for a school with only 2,063 students.

COMPUTER CORNER ON SPORTS

By Bud Goode

Art Linkletter asks those kids who say the darndest things, "What do you want to be when you grow up?"

A favorite answer is, "I wanna be a baseball player." Last season one of the wee ten-year-old youngsters added, "Maybe I could go with the Dodgers . . . they're hitting really needs help."

Not any longer. The lowered pitching mound, smaller strike zone shortened fences and the new faces of Andy Kosko, Bill Russell and Ted Sizemore have made the Dodgers one of the two batting powers in the Western Division. Walt Alston's club is putting 32% of their batters on base; more importantly, they are scoring 43% of their base runners. Note, Dodger fans, this is up from 39% last year, when the Dodgers trailed the league.

Computer Corner measures three important batting percentages in predicting offense and team runs — on base average percentage, power hitting percentage, and clutch batting percentage. Of these three, Clutch Batting, the percentage of base runners who score, is the most important.

To measure this most important Clutch Batting percentage, Computer Corner found the following results (through games of April 22) after pouring the season statistics into our Univac sports analyzer:

Eastern Division	Clutch Batting%	Western Division	Clutch Batting%
AMERICAN LEAGUE
NEW YORK	.384	OAKLAND	.387
DETROIT	.380	MINNESOTA	.372
BALTIMORE	.360	CHICAGO	.263
BOSTON	.330	CALIFORNIA	.325
WASHINGTON	.287	SEATTLE	.304
CLEVELAND	.244	KANSAS CITY	.251
NATIONAL LEAGUE
PITTSBURGH	.382	CINCINNATI	.447
MONTREAL	.376	LOS ANGELES	.426
CHICAGO	.373	ATLANTA	.377
PHILADELPHIA	.345	SAN FRANCISCO	.326
NEW YORK	.344	HOUSTON	.273
ST. LOUIS	.239	SAN DIEGO	.246

The handwriting is on the wall. Although two weeks does not a season make, it is plain to see which teams are pure or strong in the clutch. The most improved team is the Dodgers. L. A. scored only .238 percent of their base runners last year, and only 26% the year before. Their 'New Faces' of 1969 is the biggest hit of the year. The biggest loss suffered by last year's pennant champs, the St. Louis Cardinals. Scoring only 23.9% of their base runners the Cards must improve, and soon, or give up hopes for a flag. No matter how you cut it, the Cards are not the 12th weakest team in the National League. Computer Corner says that it is 'bad luck' in the first few games that has dropped them into the cellar on Clutch Batting and now predicts that the Brock-Flood club is set to explode.

CTC Drops 2 Games

10th Aviation Group swept two games from CTC in the second outing of the season for the Aviators in this years fast pitch softball league. Behind good pitching and determined batting the Aviators edged CTC in the opener 4 to 2, coming from behind to score 4 runs in the last two innings. CTC got their two runs in the fourth inning after Frank Lacy hit two batters in a row setting the scene for Willis's two run double.

10th Group got started in the fifth when James Milvin led off with a single and then stole second and third bases. Rich Cummiskey's sacrifice brought Melvin home for the Aviators first run.

The sixth inning Melvin and Merion teamed up with back to back singles driving in three runs.

For the Summer

CTC Replacement Unit Moves To Camp Shelby

BY FRANK WATSON

"To process between 1500 and 3000 National Guardsmen in two days, we expect to receive, equip, clothe, assign and transport the individual soldier to his unit within one or two hours of his arrival."

That was how Major Ralph Bush, operations officer for Center Troop Command's 931st Engineer Group, described the mission of CTC personnel who will spend the summer on temporary duty at Camp Shelby, Mississippi.

The advance party from Headquarters Company of the 931st left Fort Benning yesterday to prepare for the arrival of the main body June 1.

Personnel from CTC will include men from Headquarters Company of the 931st, the 494th Transportation Detachment and members of the 67th Maintenance Battalion. They will form a Replacement Company, responsible for the mess, supply, maintenance and personel activities required by the National Gurdsmen. They will remain at Camp Shelby until August.

Major Bush, the officer in charge of the Reserve Replacement Processing Center, explained that the replacement company would have only eight or nine days to assemble the paperwork to process the first Guardsmen out and begin receiving a new cycle.

Headquarters Company of the 931st will form the nucleus of the replacement company, and will handle the majority of the processing burden, as well as mess, supply and personnel actions.

The Replacement Company will be commanded by First Lieutenant John J. Grabenstein, present commander of Headquarters Company.

Movement control will be the responsibility of the 494th Transportation Detachment under the supervision of Lieutenant Algirdas J. Paukstelis.

With less than a week's notice, the detachment is expected to handle transportation requests, meal tickets and bills of lading for convoys up to 200 vehicles long coming from as far away as Florida and South Carolina.

Selected personnel from the 67th Maintenance Battalion will provide field maintenance support. The majority of the equipment will be supplied by Fort Benning, although many reservist units will bring their own.

The National Guardsmen, mostly from the states of Mississippi, Alabama and South Carolina, are drawn from the Central Reserve Holding Pool in St. Louis. Under the guidance of active reserve units, also stationed at Camp Shelby for the summer they receive two weeks of training in their MOS as part of their active duty training obligation.

Camp Shelby is a former Army camp inactivated in 1940, and now managed and maintained for the training of reservists and ROTC members by the state of Mississippi.

Mayor J. R. Allen Claims

Columbus 'Personally Involved' With Post

By Ken Starzenacker

"We are deeply, personally involved with Fort Benning, for we in Columbus feel closer to this war, as we have to two previous wars, than any other city in the country," Mayor J. R. Allen said in a personal interview.

He spoke solemnly in expressing the strength of the relationship that exists between Columbus and Fort Benning as the military community makes preparations for Armed Forces Day observances tomorrow.

The history of the post-community ties date back to 1918, when Camp Benning first got its start. During the more than 50 [illegible] creasingly more interdependent, more bound with each other's destiny.

The bond between the city and the post is readily explained, Mayor Allen pointed out, by the number of military families in the area. More than three-quarters of the more than 12,000 service families in the area make their homes in the communities outside Fort Benning.

Of this number, approximately 1,200 families are waiting for someone to return from overseas.

"So many of us have lost friends, relatives and loved ones in the service of their country that we feel special ties with the military not found anywhere for anyone, but for all of us in the Fort Benning area, it is personal, doubly sad, doubly tragic as our neighbors are called to risk their lives on our behalf."

Mayor Allen also noted the success of the military-civilian relationships at all levels in the Columbus area, pointing with particular pride to the work of the Civilian and Military Council.

"The Council," he said, "enables us to take any problem which involves a particular soldier or the military as a whole, and get on top of it as quickly as possible.

"Because the military has been, and is, full time for us, I feel I am as much a full time worker for the military as I am for Columbus."

Since its inception in October 1945, the Council has solved problems ranging from small personal ones to the question of finding housing for the arrival of thousands of additional soldiers during the Korean War.

The Council's 84 members are drawn from the area's major service organizations and commercial enterprises, as well as the governments of Columbus, Phenix City and Muscogee and Russell Counties. With this far-reaching foundation, the Council has managed to solve most problems in their earliest stages.

And through their participation on the Council, individual organizations have been able to tailor programs and services to the needs of the military as well as the civilian communities.

Fort Benning exerts a powerful set of influences on the areas surrounding the post, economically, socially and culturally, so the search for cooperation is of mutual benefit to both the soldier and the civilian.

During the month of March, disbursements—by the post totaled almost 24 million dollars, or more than 280 million dollars a year. With nearly 4,000 families of retired servicemen living in the Columbus-Phenix City area, their number alone accounts for more than a tenth of Columbus' estimated population of 135,000.

Adding to the nearly 14,000 retirees and their dependents the more than 35,000 active duty personnel and their dependents, some 49,000 people are tied to the military in the community.

Another 3,700 military or civilian families live on post, bringing to more than 63,000 the number of people dependent on the Fort Benning economy for their own support.

As the members of the Fort Benning military community make themselves a part of the surrounding civilian communi-

PWOC Hold Meeting May 28

The USAIC Chapter of the Protestant Women of the Chapel will hold their monthly meeting May 28 at 0930 hours. Rather than the usual monthly format, the group plans to visit the Muscogee County Nursing Home, have a short devotion, and sing a few old gospel songs that these people enjoy.

There are approximately 62 men and women at the home. Many do not have any family or friends to rely upon for companionship in their senior years and some have families in other states which makes visiting occasionally the only possibility because of distance. Meeting with these men and women is a rewarding experience and a chance to serve and share our Lord. All ladies are invited to attend.

Groups will leave, by car, from the Religious Educator Center, Bldg. 2605, at 0930 and will return from the nursing home at approximately 1115. A free nursery will be provided upstairs in Bldg. 2605. For additional information call 545-4334 or 545-7413.

Benning Leads Nation In Driver Training

Since March 1,1968, By Robert Mast

Fort Benning with 4,517 graduates of the National Safety Council's Defensive Drive Course, led the nation in February, according to The March, 1969, edition of the "Driver Trainer Newsletter," a council periodical.

The post, along with two other defensive driverproducing agencies including the Atlanta Traffic and Safety Council with 1,891 graduates, and the Georgia Safety Council with 1,741 graduates, held the top, seventh and tenth positions respectively in the nation and helped Georgia rise from fourth to second place among the states. Georgia, with 9,255 course graduates was topped only by North Carolina with 10,463 graduates.

nearly 20,000 Fort Benning drivers have received defensive driving training according to James Blount, Fort Benning safety officer. The National Safety Council reports that the course has graduated 1,191,003 drivers throughout the nation.

Max E. Ulrich, program director of the Georgia Safety Council, visited Fort Benning April 17 and 18 and trained 40 post officers, enlisted men civilians to teach the 16-hour course in their respective units.

SECRETARY HONORED — In an activity-packed final day at Fort Benning, Major General John M. Wright Jr. took time to officially thank his secretary, Mrs. Edna Peacock for her support while he commanded the U. S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning.

Bivouac Sing-a-Long?

Glee Club Formed By Basic Trainees

Trainees from as far north as New York, as far south as Florida, as far west as Missouri and as far east as Connecticut, joined together at the Army Training Center to form a choir and a glee club.

Climaxing eight weeks of basic training with the 8th Bn., 2nd Bde, was their performance at the battalion graduation ceremonies. Directed by Pvt. Larry D. Wyatt and accompanied by Chap. (Maj.) Llewellyn L. Murdock; the glee club sang several selections including the Second Brigade March, Vive L'Amour and the Army Song.

The group, all members of Co. A with the exception of Pvt. Roy E. Lind Jr., Co. D, and the battalion commander, Lt. Col. Thomas A. Austin III, has been singing each Sunday in chapel and provided the music for the Easter Sunrise Service held in Harmony Church.

Private Wyatt, formerly of Paducah, Ky., received his bachelor of music education degree from Murray State University and his master's of music from North Texas State University. Before entering the Army, he was an instructor at Central Florida Junior College in Ocala. Following completion of basic training, Private Wyatt was assigned to the U. S. Navy School of Music, Norfolk, Va., as an instructor.

Pvt. Lind is a graduate of Baptist Bible College and was the minister of music at Grace Baptist Temple in Pinellas Park, Fla. He has been assigned to Ft. Monmouth, N. J., for specialized training.

Two other members of the group, Pvts. John K. Haynes and Charles S. Hamilin, were civilian musicians. Pvt. Haynes has been assigned to the 293d Army Band at Ft. Benning and Pvt. Hamlin to the Third Army Band, Ft. McPherson.

MSC Marks Anniversary

Sunday, May 18, members of the Medical Service Corps (MSC) will mark their 52nd Anniversary. First established in 1917 as the Sanitary Corps, their mission expanded to include responsibilities and assignements to provide technical, scientific and administrative support in the care of sick and wounded and in maintaining the health of the Army. In 1947 an Act of Congress changed the Corps' name to reflect the enlarged functions.

The Medical Service Corps is comprised of four separate sections, each with its own area of responsibility: Pharmacy, Supply and Administration, Medical Allied Science and Sanitary Engineering and Optometry.

Included in the 40 job specialties and nine career fields in which MSC officers can be engaged are biochemistry, bacteriology, parasitology, clinical psychology, optometry and podiatry.

The group held a three-day seminar here May 7-9 to find new methods of improving service club programming. (U. S. Army Photo by V. P. Woodall)

For the M-60

New Bandoleer Support Developed at USAIB

To the experienced eye of the Infantryman the bandoleer for the M60 Machine Gun looked quite similar to the one he had used in combat or earlier training. In fact, the exterior was quite deceiving for it covered an improvement and modification of the M60 Machine Gun in the form of a hangar support for the bandoleer.

The new bandoleer hangar support, developed by the U.S. Army Weapons Command, was demonstrated for the Infantry Post activities last week. The operation of the new device was explained by project engineers of the Weapons Command's Small Arms Department.

The U.S. Army Infantry Board hosted the explanation - demonstration to which the U.S. Army Infantry School and the Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency attended.

Mr. Spiro Drew, one of the Weapons Command project engineers, explained the new device as a hangar attachment connected to the feed plate of the gun which would replace the current magazine mounting bracket on the M60 Machine Gun. The present mounting bracket and the T-7 Bandoleer are not compatible, thus creating problems for the machine gunner. The development would permit the attachment of the well-known T-7 Bandoleer as an assault magazine and eliminate some of the problems previously encountered.

The present mounting bracket with its separate metal backed canvas magazine is bulky, heavy and very awkward to use in an assault situation.

The demonstration, consisting of several firing exercises from various positions, was conducted on the Infantry Board's Farnsworth Range. Several combat veterans from each of the Georgia Post Infantry activities fired the M60 with the modification.

The Weapons Command is proposing that the new device be retrofitted to all M60 machine guns in the field and incorporated on those under production.

NEW LOOK. . .With the boots getting higher and the skirts getting shorter this could prove to help out people selling boot polish. With all that leather maybe you could polish Nancy Sinatra's boots.

Veteran Is 94th's CO

One of the most highly decorated Vietnam combat veterans is currently a member of The Candidate Brigade.

Cpt. Roger Dimsdale, Company Commander of the 94th OC Company, is the recipient of every combat decoration, except the Medal of Honor for his service in Vietnam. Most of these awards were received for valor.

While on a search and clear mission in Vietnam, an estimated battalion of North Vietnese (using rockets, recoilless rifles, automatic weapons, rocket-propelled grenades, and small arm fire) unleashed an attack on Cpt. Dimsdale's unit.

His entire unit was under fire and several of his armored personnel carriers had been destroyed. Capt. Dimsdale then organized and led an assault on the enemy, which resulted in an enemy withdrawal. During the assault, Cpt. Dimsdale was wounded by shrapnel from a grenade which caused a light concussion and numerous flesh wounds. However, he refused medical aid until the area and his unit had been relatively secured.

His actions were rewored in the citation for the award of the DSC. "Cpt. Dimsdale's extraordinary heroism and devotion to duty were in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself, his unit, and the United States Army."

Cpt. Dimsdale possesses many other awards, including The Silver Star, The Bronze Star, The Air Medal with one Oak Leaf Cluster, The Army Commendation Medal with two Oak Leaf Cluster, The Purple Heart with one Oak Leaf Cluster, The National Defense Ribbon, The Vietnamese Service Medal, The Vietnamese Campaign Medal, The Good Conduct Medal, and The Combat Infantry Badge.

JCOC Dignitaries Depart Post

By Wade Roop

A tired but inspired group of distinguished visitors departed Fort Benning Tuesday afternoon following a full day of demonstrations and briefings at the Infantry Center on the operation of the Army and its modern day training and utilization.

Highlights of the tour were recalled in farewell thanks expressed by the Joint Civilian Orientation Conference group as they bade farewell to Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis and Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, commandant and assistant commandant of Fort Benning.

The conferees, arriving at Lawson Field aboard four CH-47 helicopters, had just witnessed a demonstration of the firepower and mobility available to the modern infantryman.

Conducted at North Ruth Range, the Airmobile Demonstration featured helicopter gunships, Air Force tactical air support, artillery and the deployment of a company of infantrymen. The Brigade and Battalion Operations Department, under the direction of Col. George E. Wyly, conducted the demonstration.

The action-filled day began with presentation of the epic poem, "I Am The Infantry", followed by a welcome by Gen. Davis. Infantry Center and School briefings were presented prior to the group departing by bus for Eubanks Field where the group was welcomed by Col. Lamar A. Welch, director of the Airborne Department.

The conferees observe the training given airborne students and a sky diving demonstration.

Victory Pond and the "Rangers In Action" was next on the itinerary for the conference. Following the visit with Col. Y. Y. Phillips, department director, and participants in the demonstration, the group had lunch in the field at Victory Lodge. Each conferee was escorted during the lunch by an officer candidate.

The Rifle Platoon in Counterguerrilla Operations presented by the Company Operations Department was the next demonstration viewed by the group. Col. John P. Geraci, department director, introduced the problem showing search of a mock Vietnam Village and ambush of an armored convoy.

From Bigley Hill the conference group and escorts were flown by helicopter to North Ruth Range for the airmobile demonstration.

The conference, sponsored by the Department of Defense, is a nine-day visit to Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine installations in an effort to give the civilian businessmen, industrialists and educators a better look at the operation of the armed services with the hope of a better understanding of the defense mission of the Department of Defense.

The group arrived at Fort Benning Monday evening and were guests at a reception and dinner Monday evening.

Gen. Forsythe Arrives June 2

Ceremonies Planned For New Commander

By ST-C Richard Kemp

Official ceremonies are being planned for June 2 to mark the arrival of Major General George I. Forsythe as commanding general, U.S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning.

The general is presently commanding the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) in the Republic of Vietnam.

He last served at Fort Benning as assistant commandant of the U.S. Army Infantry School from March, 1965, until March, 1966. He was a brigadier general at that time.

General Forsythe will take command from Brigadier General Oscar E. Davis, commanding general, U.S. Army Training Center, Infantry (USATCI).

General Davis began serving as Fort Benning's commander after the departure of Major General John M. Wright Jr. for Vietnam and until the arrival of General Forsythe. General Davis will retain command of the USATCI while serving as the center commander.

General Forsythe is a 1939 graduate of the University of Montana and was commissioned as a second lieutenant in the Infantry through the Reserve Officers Training Corps.

He began his military career when he was called to active duty in August, 1940.

Through a competitive examination, he was commissioned in the Regular Army in February, 1942, while serving as a first lieutenant on Kodiak Island, Alaska, with U.S. Army forces deployed in the European-African-Middle Eastern Theatre in World War II.

He has previously been at Fort Benning as a student and later as an instructor in the U.S. Army Infantry Regiment.

Decorations awarded him include the Legion of Merit, the Gallantry Cross with Silver Star, Bronze Star Medal with "V" device, the Army Commendation Medal with 1st oak leaf cluster, the Vietnam Service Medal, the Vietnam Campaign Medal and the Combat Infantry Badge (second award).

He is a qualified paracthutist and has commanded airborne organizations in a career that has included a wide variety of both command and staff assignments.

Infantryman Protects Our Ideals

The Infantryman "is the final measure of our nation's desire to protect the ideals on which America was founded," Brigadier General Oscar E. Davis, commanding general U.S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning said in an Armed Forces Day message.

The general stated "Throughout our history the Infantryman has been the backbone of our nation's Armed Forces and for 50 years Fort Benning has infused the 'Follow Me' spirit into thousands of Infantrymen."

Gen. Davis invited the citizens of Chattahoochee Valley and the military community to the open house at Fort Benning May 17, the day "military installations around the world reported to the public on the readiness of our Armed Services."

"We proudly saluted all members of our Armed Services reserving a special place of honor for the men of the Infantry," General Davis said.

Week-Long Visit

Post Ceremonies Welcome Dunaway

Ceremonies honoring Sgt. Maj. of the Army George W. Dunaway were held Wednesday on York Field here. SMA Dunaway arrived yesterday for a week-long orientation visit.

He will observe Noncommissioned Officer Candidates training in squad drill, bayonet and quick kill.

Airborne Basic Training and a Ranger Demonstration are also on Dunaway's itinerary.

Dunaway entered the Army in 1941 and served

Eleven Decorations Awarded During York Field Ceremony

Seven Silver Stars, a Legion of Merit, two Distinguished Flying Crosses and two Soldier's Medals were presented at a ceremony on Fort Benning's York Field yesterday morning.

Lt. Col. Alexander H. Hunt of the U. S. Army Infantry School received a Silver Star with second oak leaf cluster and a Legion of Merit.

Maj. Chadwick C. Payne of The Student Brigade was awarded a Silver Star and a Distinguished Flying Cross.

Silver Stars were awarded to Capt. Clifford R. Sherer of The Student Brigade and to Lt. Michael Pumphrey and SFC Myron Cloutier of The Army Infantry School. Spt Lloyd Atkins of the 197th Infantry Brigade received a Silver Star and Officer Candidate David T. Keaton of the Candidate Brigade received a Silver Star and a Soldier's Medal.

Officer Candidate Larry P. Holmberg of The Candidate Brigade received a Distinguished Flying Cross. A Soldier's Medal was presented to SSgt. William R. Payton.

Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, commanding general of the U. S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning, was the reviewing officer and presented the awards.

Also participating in the ceremony were the 29ist Army Band, conducted by 1st Sgt. Clinton Edwards; an Honor Guard from Company C, 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade, commanded by Capt. Raymond E. Henry, and a Color Guard with the U. S. Army Infantry Center colors.

Enlistees Now Promised NCO Candidate Courses

HQ USCONARC, Ft. Monroe, Va.—Young men who enlist in the Army can now be guaranteed attendance at one of the Army's NCO Candidate Courses (NCOCCs).

Under the NCO candidate enlistment option, recently approved by the Department of the Army, an initial enlistee can receive his choice of advanced individual training (AIT), which then leads to the NCOCC established for his particular branch.

Previously, NCOCCs were available only to in-service personnel and trainees undergoing AIT on a voluntary basis, who were nominated by BCT and AIT commanders.

The enlistment option was established to serve as an adjunct to the Skill Development Base (SDB) Program with a view toward attracting intelligent, versatile young high school and college graduates to the combat arms.

Besides promising attendance at one of the combat arms NCOCCs, the option also offers accelerated promotion to pay grade E5 for those successfully completing the course.

NCOCCs—averaging 21 weeks in length—are conducted at Fort Benning; Fort Sill, Okla. (Field Artillery); Fort Leonard Wood, Mo. (Engineer); Fort Bliss, Texas (Air Defense Artillery), and Fort Knox, Ky. (Armor). More than 13,000 soldiers were enrolled in NCOCCs in 1968 alone.

Qualified male applicants enlisting from civilian life or reenlisting in the Regular Army for three, four, five, or six year periods are eligible for the NCO enlistment option. To remain eligible after enlistment, a soldier must satisfactorily complete BCT and AIT (plus completing the Physical Combat Proficiency Test before AIT graduation) and must qualify for and retain a security clearance if required.

So that in-service personnel can continue to attend NCOCCs, enlistment quotas under the new option will be limited to no more than 50 per cent of the total NCOCC requirements. Soldiers who have requisite leadership potential but only a two-year service obligation are still eligible for NCO candidate training.

9,700 Graduates Of OCS Needed

Officer Candidate Schools must graduate approximately 9,700 male commissioned officers during FY 70. To meet OCS requirements during the coming fiscal year, approximately 1000 in-service applicants per month are needed.

Enlisted men and warrant officers with a minimum of a high school education are encouraged to submit applications under the provisions of AR 351-5 and CON Reg 601-210.

At the present time, Officer Candidate Schools are in operation at the Artillery School, Fort Sill, Okla.; the Engineer School, Fort Belvoir, Va., and the Infantry School, Fort Benning.

Successful graduates are commissioned in the Army and serve on active duty for a minimum period of two years.

OC Wives Hold Coffee

The Supper Club of the Fort Benning Officers Club was the scene of a luncheon and fashion show May 8 put on by ladies of the Brigade and Battalion Operations Department of The Infantry School.

A "May Flowers" theme was carried out with huge multicolored paper flowers decorating the tables and stage. A flower be-decked maypole in the center of the room completed the decor.

Mrs. George E. Wear, wife of Col. Wear, the department director, introduced Mrs. Lee Revel from a local store who did the commentory for the fashion show.

What are the authorized abbreviations for Sergeant Major's?

The authorized abbreviations for the rank of Sergeant Major of the Army is SMA. Staff Sergeant Major is abbreviated SSM and the proper abbreviation for the position of Command Sergeant Major is CSM.

How are Conscientious Objectors Applications handled?

Faster processing is in store for conscientious objector applications submitted by Army personnel. These applications, whether for discharge or noncombatant status, will now be forwarded directly to DA from installation or division level. They formerly went through major command channels before reaching Department of the Army. Purpose is to resolve these cases as quickly as possible while reducing the administrative workload at intermediate levels. References are AR 635-20 and change 25 to AR 600-200.

Social Security

What are the new criteria for obtaining social security payments if you have not worked five years under social security?

Robert E. O'Neal district manager for social security in Columbus said certain young disabled workers who were not eligible for benefits before last year (because they had not worked long enough in work covered by social security) may get a "yes" answer today if they check again.

He explained that in the past a person had to work five years under social security to be "insured" for disability benefits. "This was true no matter how disabled a person was," he said.

Now, because of a recent amendment to the law, a young worker may be "insured" for disability benefits with less than 5 years of covered work, O'Neal said. "This new rule applies to the man who became disabled before age 31. The younger the worker is when he became disabled, the less work he needs. In some cases only a year and a half is needed.

He pointed out that workers who are age 31 and older still need five years unless disability began before age 31. In any case, how severe the mental or physical disability is and whether it has or is expected to last a year, must also be determined before entitlement to disability benefits can be established.

"Any young man or woman who feels he meets these requirements should get in touch with the social security office right away," he said, "even if he was turned down previously. A person should file his disability claim as soon as he can after he stops working."

The Columbus Social Security Office is at 301 15th St. Hours are 8:45 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays; 9 a.m. to 12 noon Saturdays.

ARMY HOSPITAL

We have a report alleging that the Army has a hospital in Hawaii where we hide all our victims of leprosy and uncurable horrible diseases from Vietnam and after they die carry them as missing or something.

The Army has no hospitals anywhere engaged in this type practice. Army casualties in Vietnam are treated in appropriate hospitals in Vietnam and Japan. The severely injured are evacuated to specialized treatment centers for their particular type injury. Most cases go to the general hospital nearest their home or to the specialized treatment center.

ROTC GENERALS

What percentage of General officers are graduates of the ROTC program?

The Reserve Officer Training Corps is responsible for approximatey 30 per cent of Army's general officer strength.

Says Secretary of the Army

Safeguard deployment necessary

Remarks by Stanley R. Resor, Secretary of the Army before Union League Club's Public Affairs Luncheon in New York City, New York, Part I.

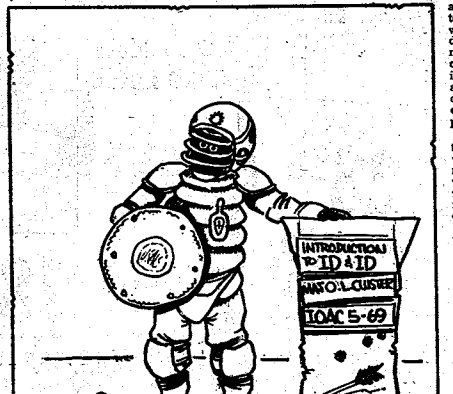
I want to talk to you today about what seem to me to be the major considerations involved in the current debate over the President's decision to continue deployment of a thin ballistic missile defense system. The facts of the thermonuclear age, and even more of the prospect of a possible thermonuclear war, are horrible to contemplate. Yet technology and certain irrevocable decisions have made these facts and that awful prospect inescapable today. The debate over whether or not we should deploy an anti-ballistic missile system cannot be conducted without taking into account of those facts, and the decision must be one which offers the greatest hope of reducing the prospect of such a war.

I want first to describe the nuclear environment within which our judgments must be made. I will next describe certain trends in that environment which cause serious concern and which we believe require the deployment of the SAFEGUARD ballistic missile defense system in order to preserve stability in that nuclear situation. Finally, I want to give you my views on the most significant reservations which have been expressed by those opposing deployment.

Let me describe briefly the nuclear arms environment in which we live. I do this knowing that it is generally familiar to most of you, but I believe that an informed discussion of defense against ballistic missiles must proceed from a common understanding of the facts of the nuclear environment in which we can now live. We cannot unilaterally or quickly change the fact that we live in a world where peace is ultimately preserved by the mutual capability of the major powers to assure one another's destruction in the event of war — a delicate nuclear balance.

We and the Soviets each have large arsenals of nuclear warheads. Some are affixed to missiles which are either land-based or carried in submarines, and some are intended to be delivered by bombers. Our land-based missiles, most MINUTEMAN, are buried in hardened silos. Our nuclear submarines, the POLARIS, are virtually impossible to locate when on station. And some of our bombers are on alert and prepared to take off on short notice.

For these reasons our nuclear striking power could today survive an attack by all of the missiles now in the Soviet inventory and still retaliate with a blow which would destroy the Soviet Union as a nation, killing millions of its people and eliminating much of its industrial capacity. Our confidence in this ability to retaliate derives not solely from the number of weapons we have, but also from the fact that with three basically different weapons systems we are confident that many weapons will penetrate any defense which the Soviets might erect. The Soviets know this and their behavior is influenced accordingly.



NOW I WILL BE GLAD TO ANSWER YOUR QUESTIONS.

Combat Occupational Areas Open

There are more than ten separate specialties open in the Combat Occupational area. These specialties generally require verbal, arithmetic reasoning, mechanical abilities, spatial-relations aptitude, and a high degree of emotional stability. Good near, far, and night vision, depth perception, normal color discrimination, stamina, and endurance are the more important physical requirements.

Listed below are some of the areas open along with a brief description of some of the duties and specialties in each.

INFANTRY—In addition to actual combat tasks, this field covers the installation and operation of field telephones, radio, and counterfire equipment, the driving of light motor vehicles, conduction of field surveys, preparation of sketch maps, reading aerial photographs, and performance of preventive and operational maintenance on weapons and equipment. Some specialties are Light Weapons Infantryman, Infantry Operations and Intelligence Specialist, and Infantry Senior Sergeant.

COMBAT ENGINEERS give close field engineering support to Infantry, Artillery and Armor. They perform such construction and maintenance functions as building roads and bridges and keeping them in repair, laying out mine fields, erecting temporary shelters, setting up camouflage. They use and maintain power and hand tools of all kinds and operate motor vehicles and power boats. Some of the specialties are Combat Engineer, Bridge Specialist Pioneer, and Combat Engineer Operations and Intelligence NCO.

ARMOR—This field covers the operations and field maintenance of tanks, amphibious tractors, and scout vehicles, the employment, servicing, and maintenance of vehicle mounted guns, and the use and care of related fire control equipment. As part of the Armor - Infantry - Artillery team, Armor carries the fight to the enemy, penetrating his defenses, pursuing beaten elements and operating within rear areas. Some of the specialties are Armor Crewmen and Armor Intelligence Specialist.

AIR DEFENSE MISSILE OPERATIONS—Air Defense Missile Operations, symbolic of the Nuclear-Space age, are concerned with the air defnse of our Country. Trained experts perform the host of duties necessary to make our defenseive missiles operational. In general, they perform the many operational and maintenance functions required to have the missiles ready to fire at a moments notice. Some of the specialties are Air Defense Missile Crewman, Air Defense Fire Control Crewman, and Air Defense Missile Material Mechanic.

ARTILLERY OPERATIONS AND INTELLIGENCE — This includes the preparation and revision of situation maps, and the collection, consolidation of fire direction centers, performance of artillery survey operations, and control of flash and sound ranging units and radar units. Specialties are Air Defense or Field Artillery Operations and Intelligence Assistant, Artillery Surveyor, Flash or Sound Ranging Crewman, and Field Artillery Radar Crewman.

There is a constant demand for trained men in the Army Combat Areas. Serving in these jobs brings recognition and steady advancement with many attractive career opportunities. Get all the facts about this varied and challenging field before you make up your mind. See your Career Counselor today.

Bama Guard Colonel Working With OCS

What is an airborne-qualified National Guard Officer from the 20th Special Forces Group doing with a company of Reserve Officer Candidates?

Lieutenant Colonel Virgil M. Bishop, the Deputy Group Commander of the 20th Special Forces Group in Birmingham, Alabama, is serving as a liaison officer representing the Chief of the National Guard Bureau. In this capacity, he assists the Reserve Officer Candidates of the 64th Co. (OC), 6th Student Battalion (OC), The Candidate Brigade. Lt. Col. Bishop also assists the Infantry School through direct liaison to the Adjutant General's Office of the state concerned with problems or questions about OCS.

Lt. Col. Bishop has had a varied career in the Army. In 1944, while still in his teens, he served as a rifleman in World War II. As a private in the 80th Infantry Division, he was awarded both the Silver and Bronze stars.

After the war, Lt. Col. Bishop completed his education at Auburn and Ohio State Universities. He graduated with a degree in Horticulture, and today he operates a landscaping business in his hometown, Alexander City, Alabama. Upon his completion of ROTC, he received a Reserve commission in artillery.

During the Korean Conflict, he was called up and served as a battery commander with the 42dth Field Artillery Battalion.

Red Cross Recognition Dinner Held At NCO Club

By Carol Aubin

"By its very nature and constitution, the American Red Cross is the people in action," said Brigadier General Oscar E. Davis, commanding general, the U.S. Infantry Center and Fort Benning, during an address to Red Cross volunteers May 15.

Speaking at a recognition dinner held at the Sand Hill Noncommissioned Officers Club, he said, "We of the military establishment need the work of the Red Cross as we need a good right arm."

Gen. Davis continued, "We recognize the place of the Red Cross in our military plans.'

Approximately 300 volunteers and guests gathered at the first annual dinner to hear the general trace the long history of the American Red Cross. He noted, "Your organization will be 78 years young this month, May 21, 1969. I say young because the spirit that you constantly bring to this vast organization, is that added spark—the spark of life."

He added that without volunteers the Red Cross could not function.

The general also told the volunteers, "Your service is symbolic of all that is warm, human and neighborly in American life. . .and is the truest measure of what the Red Cross stands for in its relations with the military establishment."

Gen. Davis concluded his remarks by congratulating the members for a job well done, and stated "By volunteering for this work you have evidenced your own dedication, selflessness and your willingness to serve."

Special guests attending the dinner included Al Klamke, director of services to military installations, American Red Cross, Southeastern area, Atlanta, Ga.; Mrs. Jackemeyer, secretary of the volunteers on post; Col. and Mrs. Wiley B. Wisdom; Mrs. Oscar E. Davis, wife of the Fort Benning commander; John Dugan, national director of services to military installations, Washington, D. C.; Miss Janet Rastall, the Red Cross field director at Martin Army Hospital, and Mr. Don Boyette, field director for Fort Benning.

Other guests included each department supervisor or commander where the Red Cross Volunteers serve.

Following the general's comments numerous members of the volunteers were awarded service pins and certificates.

These included: Mrs. Alonzo Mills, Mrs. Robert Persons, Mrs. Robert Culverhouse, Mrs. Russell Miller, Mrs. James Barksdale, Mrs. Dale Davis, Mrs. Robert Kreidenger, and Mrs. Dale Lloyd.

Also receiving awards were Mrs. George Lodeen, Mrs. Charles Morgan, Mrs. Lemuel Thomas, Mrs. Martin Michlik, Mrs. Colin Campbell, Mrs. Lawrence Richards, Mrs. John Carroll, and Mrs. Charles Ziegler.

The dinner was also an official welcome to the new chairman of the volunteers, Mrs. R. M. Piper, and a farewell to Mrs. Lemuel Thomas, who served as the local chairman for the past year. Mrs. Thomas, a volunteer for six years, was hostess for the recognition dinner.

The dinner was concluded with the presentation of a certificate of appreciation to Mrs. Thomas.

Red Cross To Teach Volunteen Workers

The American Red Cross will hold a Volunteen class for military dependents on June 5 from 8:45 a.m. to 3 p.m. The class will be taught in the second floor conference room of Martin Army Hospital.

Interviews will be conducted on June 2-4 from 9 a.m. to noon in the volunteer room of the Red Cross Field House on Main Post. A makeup interview session will be held between the hours of 1 and 3 p.m. on June 4 at the Field House.

A parent must accompany the teenager to the interview as parental permission is needed for the teenager to work. Volunteens are required to purchase their own uniforms and must furnish their own transportation to and from work.

Anyone interested in becoming a Red Cross Volunteen must be 15 years old by Oct. 1, 1969, and must be single.

Teenagers (boys and girls) are needed to work in the following places: Veterinary Clinic, Martin Army Hospital Pharmacy Pediatric Clinic, Pediatric Ward, Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat Clinic; Ward Z-3 (Recreation), and Martin Army Hospital Pharmacy.

Since the hospital snack bar is always full, volunteers should bring a lunch. Punch will be furnished.

Surgeon Says--Part I

Questions And Answers On The Rh Factor

By
Mrs. Earl W. Hathcock, Jr.

What is the Rh factor?

The Rh factor is a substance found on the surface of red blood cells. Those people possessing this factor are called Rh positive. Those people lacking this factor are called Rh negative.

What are Rh antibodies?

When Rh positive cells enter the bloodstream of an Rh negative person, the recipient may produce chemical substances known as antibodies which destroy the Rh positive cells.

Why are antibodies produced in an individual's body?

Antibodies are normally produced to render harmless many otherwise toxic agents, such as disease-causing organisms and their posions. By neutralizing the harmful agents, they act as a major defense mechanism protecting the body against many common diseases.

Does a normal individual have various kinds of antibodies in his blood?

Yes. A normal person's blood contains hundreds of different antibodies capable of destroying bacterial, viruses and other substances which are foreign to the body.

What do Rh antibodies do when they are present in the system?

When an Rh negative individual's blood contains Rh antibodies, these antibodies attack and destroy any Rh positive red blood cells that may enter that individual's blood stream.

When does the Rh factor become important to a family?

When the pregnant mother is Rh negative and the father is Rh positive, there is a possibility that the baby may be Rh positive. The Rh positive baby's red cells are foreign to the Rh negative mother and she may respond by manufacturing an antibody to fight off Rh positive blood cells.

Douglas School

Dr. Otis W. Douglas, headmaster of Trinity School, announces the opening of Douglas School, in Columbus.

Douglas School will perpetuate the Trinity School concept of education for Grade Kindergarten (4 year olds) through Grade 9, as well as children requiring special tutoring.

The aim of Douglas School is to develop each child's talents to the fullest extent and to build character through growth in mind, body, and spirit. This will be accomplished through individual and small group instruction, sensory motor training, and regular group instruction. Advancement will be at a rate that is satisfying, stimulating, and challenging to the child.

Call 324-2270 for details. Enrollment forms for Summer School, beginning June 2, and regular school term commencing in September, are available now.

Candidate Wives Meet For Monthly Coffees

5TH BN OFFICERS WIVES COFFEE

The officers' ladies of the 5th Stu. Bn., TCB, met May 9 for their monthly coffee in the home of Mrs. Dennis J. Harron, wife of the 5th Stu. Bn. commander, Lt. Col. Dennis J. Harron.

Mrs. Joel K. Chase, Mrs. John F. Keever Jr. and Mrs. Stephen H. Spencer, ladies of the 56th Company, were hostesses for the event.

A theme of spring games was carried out in the name tags. Finger sandwiches made from different colors of bread were shaped into a checker board and a tennis racket.

Mrs. Harron welcomed to the battalion as new members, Mrs. Neil R. Vos, Mrs. John F. Mather and Mrs. Gregory F. McGowan. Farewells were bid and silver calling card trays presented to Mrs. Paul L. Mason, Mrs. Bennie E. Tuggle and Mrs. Sidney T. Glass.

'May Day' Coffee Held By Wives

The 56th Company, 5th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade Wives Club held it's monthly coffee in the day room recently.

The theme of "May Day" was carried out with a May Pole centerpiece designed by the hostesses, Mrs. Kent Johnson, Mrs. Kenneth Kroeger and Mrs. Gerald Lawrence.

Election of officers was the program of the day. They are: chairman, Mrs. Glen Borden; co-chairman, Mrs. Robert Wilson; treasurer, Mrs. Kent Carley; publicity chairman, Mrs. Kent Johnson and hospitality chairman, Mrs. Gerald Lawrence.

Guests were Mrs. Joel Chase, Mrs. John Keever and Mrs. Stephen Spencer.

95th Company Enjoys Picnic

The 95th Company, 9th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade, enjoyed a picnic recently in the 9th Battalion hivouac area. The candidates and their wives and friends attended.

Honored guests were Lt. Col. and Mrs. Robert W. Muller and family. Special guests included Capt. and Mrs. John O. Rowell Jr. and family.

Company guests were headed by Capt. and Mrs. Carey W. Dunning, 95th Company Commander, and family. Also attending were the 95th Company tactical officers, their families and guests. A special welcome was given to Lt. and Mrs. Arthur Pappas, a new tactical officer for the 95th Company.

Football, motorcycle riding and relaxation were the main activities.

Could Your Kitchen Pass Food Advisor Inspection?

By Mary R. Braswell

Picture your kitchen if you were preparing and serving meals for about 200 people three times a day seven days a week!

Into the scene come several food advisors who can detect your slightest mistake in a glance. Then comes the command inspection group! Not only your menu and method of preparation undergo close scrutiny, but also your storage area, your dining room, your records and everyone handling the food are examined closely.

To earn a satisfactory rating from all these advisors and inspectors is not good enough for the 45 mess halls in the Army Training Center. They're expected to attain an excellent or superior rating and reinspections occur within a week if they fail to do so.

To the average person these requirements might seem extraordinarily strict, but to good, experienced mess sergeants they're simply a means of assuring that mess halls are operating the way they would like them to, and that the trainees are getting the best possible food.

The food advisors from battalion, brigade and headquarters are there to help them resolve any problem. For instance, if an inexperienced baker's first batch of sweet rolls are too brown, these are the people who can point out whether it was too much sugar or something else that might have caused the failure.

Th inspectors are checking eight separate areas: the personnel, outside area, storage space, kitchen, food preparation and cookery, dining room, records and building.

The mess sergeants are responsible for maintaining all these areas in such a manner that the mess halls can meet the inspection standards at any time for food advisors and inspection groups appear with little or no notice.

Each Training Center mess hall is visited every month by the food advisors and the command inspection group reaches every mess hall within a two-month period.

While all mess halls use the same master menus, Army recipes and foods, there are never any two alike. So through its teams of advisors and inspectors, the Army Training Center continually strives to better its mess hall operations.

52nd Company Wives Socialize At 'Roaring Twenties' Luncheon

The Fort Benning Country Club was the scene of the 52nd Company, 5th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade, Wives Club luncheon.

Honored guests for the luncheon were Mrs. Robert M. Piper, Mrs. Dennis J. Harron and Mrs. Frank G. Shaw.

Special guests present at the luncheon were Mrs. Gary L. Hubbard, Mrs. Robert Crane and Mrs. Gary Moore, chairman and co-chairman of the 54th Co. OC wives club.

Cadre wives present were Mrs. Thomas V. Grady, Mrs. Jerry M. Prater, Mrs. Sidney T. Glass and Mrs. Robert M. Boyd.

The theme for the luncheon was based on the "Roaring Twenties." Invitations, place cards, center pieces and programs carried out the theme.

As entertainment, wives of 52nd Co. presented a skit entitled "Only Three for Baby and Me," a protrayal of visiting hours during au OCS cycle.

Mrs. Grady then presented the wives with individual diplomas and engraved gold pins. Mrs. Grady was presented with a silver tray.

586th Engineers Teach Infantry School Students

By Ken Sturzenacker

Under the guidance of the 586th Engineer Company (Float Bridge), Center Troop Command, the monthly Bradley Landing river crossing demonstrations provide students in the Infantry School a basic knowledge of equipment designed to bridge water obstacles.

The 586th provides assault boats capable of carrying a combined infantry-engineer squad, sections of the M4T6 floating bridge capable of carrying a 60 ton tank.

The foot bridge is erected by members of the 818th Engineer Battalion, who complete their work in less than seven minutes. The short construction time would minimize exposure to hostile fire in combat zones.

The heavy vehicle floating bridges can be constructed from the individual bays, or floats, to span a river. As the bays are joined together, the bridge is placed across the river to form a ferry deck for vehicles. Bays can be joined into rafts, forming large prefabricated sections for the floating bridge. These rafts are then moved into position and joined to form a bridge.

Without the bulking, or deck, on the rafts, other means can be used to provide a road surface. The armored vehicle launched bridge (AVLB) can be placed across the rafts, forming a bridge useful in spanning water obstacles up to 60 feet wide.

The AVLB used for the Bradley Landing demonstrations comes from the 197th Infantry Brigade's Support Battalion. The 197th also supplies the tanks and other large vehicles used to show the capacity of the river-crossing spans.

The engineers work quickly and efficiently to provide methods of overcoming obstacles encountered by fighting units faced with water hazards.

The demonstration of some of the river-crossing techniques gives the new officers and NCO's knowledge of some of the support available to them in combat.

Legion of Merit Won in Vietnam

Remarkable Major Qualifies as Aviator, Parachutist

It takes a remarkable captain to be awarded the Legion of Merit and it's unusual for an Army aviator to hold a military and commercial aircraft four-engine rating, have a Parachute Club of America "D" license, the Army's Master Paracrutist Wings with over 1,000 jumps and the wings of a Vietnamese Jumpmaster.

But then, Phillip Jarrell, now a major and the 197th Infantry Brigade's new S-2, is a remarkable individual.

For example, shortly after he received his commission from OCS, officials from Department of the Army commented that he was most likely the only second lieutenant on active duty with over 15 years service.

His Legion of Merit, pinned on by Col. John E. Strever, the 197th's commander, during ceremonies recently, was awarded by the United States Army Security Agency for services as a captain during Jarrell's last duty assignment in Vietnam.

"I've never held a civilian job, so you might call me an Army Brat," said the 37-year-old major, who joined the Navy at the age of 15.

"They put me out with an honorable discharge for minority in December 1957 and it took me until February 1948 to get in the Army."

His misstatement of age was forgiven by the Army quite a few years ago, when the secretary of the Army authorized him to stay in for 24 years before having to retire.

This was to make up for the underage years.

Enlisting first for airborne, Jarrell joined the 11th Airborne Division in Japan as a member of the old 511th Parachute Infantry Regiment.

It was there his talent for boxing was discovered and he was soon a part of that division's boxing team.

"I got all the way to the finals while in the 11th," he reminisced with a grin crinkling the tiny scars around his eyes that are his only marks of the sport. "I fought six bouts in three days and after the last one — he was supposed to have just got out of the hospital — I was to take on the man who later became champion."

Pausing for a moment, he added, "That last guy must have spent two years in that hospital — on a full training program and a special diet."

In 1961, after eight years as an E-6, Jarrell decided the only way to get promoted at that time was by commission.

"When I applied I was in the 11th Airborne Division in Germany as the first sergeant of a company with four or five E-7's assigned."

By then, however, he was Master Parachutist, had made a combat jump in Korea with the 187th Airborne, had served again in Japan and had long been married to a girl from his hometown of Eden, N.C.

By the time his orders arrived for OCS, he had won his Army instructors license for free fall parachuting — "Number 38 and signed by General J. W. Stillwill." —his "D" license number 1038 and the highest one for parachuting from the PCA. He also was president of the Special Forces Skydiving Club.

After gaining his commission, his first assignment was with Fort Benning's Airborne Department, but he was soon selected for flight training.

This was followed by assignment to the Army's twin engine caribou transition course.

"After that course, I was immediately assigned to Vietnam where I joined the 61st Aviation Company," Major Jarrell commented.

While in Vietnam, he was awarded the RVN gumpmaster Wings which includes free fall qualification during a six-month course.

But only 95 days after his return to the United States, he was off to the Dominican republic as a part of the Special Forces.

Returning to the states, he faced the major task, as the S-4 property book officer, of helping to organize the Army's Aviation School Element at Fort Stewart, Ga.

The Army then selected Major Jarrell, then a Captain, to attend the United States Navy Flight School for transition into one of the navy four-engine type aircraft.

Another year in Vietnam came next and in June of last year Major Jarrell reported to Fort Benning for the Infantry Officer's Advance Course.

"Department of the Army and I agreed that I needed some 'troop duty'," he said concerning his assignment last month the 197th for the purpose of rounding out my career and perhaps having a little more time with my wife and two sons."

He may not be able to see too much of them however, for the oldest, Phil, a 16-year-old on Baker High's football team, also plays with a three piece dance band at Fort Benning's various clubs. His wife, Naomi, spends her spare time as a den mother for Fort Benning Cub Scouts. The ten-year-old David, is an active member of Cub Scout Pack 27.

Aid To Combat

Individual Flotation Device Is Proposed

US ARMY COMBAT DEVELOPMENTS COMMAND, Ft. Belvoir, Va. — In the near future, combat soldiers may take to water as easily as ducks under a new proposed requirement by Combat Developments Command (CDC), Ft. Belvoir, Va., for an individual flotation device. The device, which will weigh a scant 10 ounces, is required to support a 200 pound man carrying as much as 50 pounds of equipment in water.

The floating device, proposed under a "Letter Requirement-Quick Reaction" (LR-QR), is in answer to a stated need from the field. According to the CDC Project Officer, it is seen as invaluable for troops engaged in water crossing operations or in inundated areas, such as the Mekong Delta in Vietnam.

The device will provide safety for weak swimmers and allow a soldier to cross a water obstacle wearing combat gear. It will also be worn when personnel wearing combat equipment cross water in relatively unstable water craft or debark from hovering helicopters in water areas.

It will be a lightweight, compact, reusable, reinflatable device and will attach to suspenders or pistol belt. Its design calls for it to be impossible for the wearer's head to enter the water.

Certain features in ease of handling and wearing will be incorporated into the device. Once it is inflated it can be deflated and packaged with a minimum effort. In addition, it will quickly attach to an individual's equipment.

The device is envisioned as having either two or three compartments. Requirements call for the individual compartment — like bladders — to be replaceable or repairable at the squad level. If the final design has two compartments, each would be able to float at least 1 pounds. The three compartment configuration would each support pounds in the water.

Ideally it will have capability of having several devices to join together as a raft. Another high desirable characteristic the flotation device is that a soldier in the water able to fire his weapon.

New Short-term Health Insurance Available

WASHINGTON- (ANF)— Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird has established, effective Sept. 1, 1969, a special short-term health insurance program for servicemen being separated from active duty. The new program also will cover their dependents.

Under present law and regulations, all health care benefits under Department of Defense-sponsored programs end, both for the serviceman and his dependents, on the day he is released from active duty, unless he is being retired.

Generally, several weeks elapse before the dischargee obtains health care coverage, which usually occurs through a group plan provided by his new employer. Secretary Laird pointed out that a man being discharged who has a pregnant wife is at a particular disadvantage under the present arrangement since most insurance companies exclude any maternity benefits during the first 10 months of coverage.

Under the new progarm, a short-term low-cost health insurance policy would be offered to servicemen during separation processing. The plan would cover them for the following 90 days.

Servicemen initially will have a choice between two plans, one of which is being offered by Blue Cross-Blue Shield plan will include maternity benefits. The serviceman will pay the entire cost of which ever plan he chooses. The amount be will be required to pay will depend on the particular coverage he selects and whether he obtains coverage for "self" or "self and family."

The lowest charge for the 90-day short-term policy will be $16.50 for self only. For comprehensive coverage for self and family, including maternity benefits, the charge will be $90.

Awards Presented At TCB

By PFC George Burks

Colonel Robert M. Piper, Commanding Officer of The Candidate Brigade, presented various brigade-level awards at a ceremony held at the 75th Co. (NCOC), 7th Stu. Bn., on May 14.

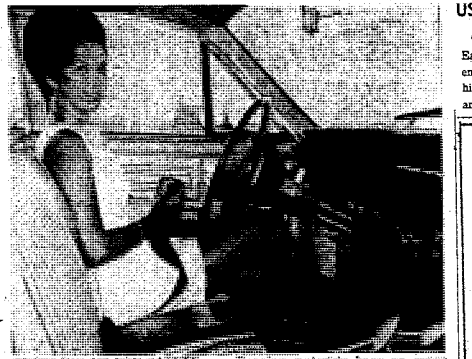
The 75th received the award for having the best mess in a temporary building. The award for the best mess in a permanent building went to Mess No. 1 of the 58th Co. (OC).

The award for the best day room in a permanent building was presented to the 51st Co. (OC). The 101st Co. (NCOC) received the award for having the best day room in a temporary building.

The brigade's best supply room in a permanent building was judged to be that of the 82nd Co. (OC). The 80th Co. (NCOC) was the recipient of the award for having the best supply room in a temporary building.

For leading Fort Benning with the highest participation in the Savings Bond program, the 5th Stu. Bn. (OC) receivnd a Certificate of participation, their fifth award.

S. Sgt. Amos Reynolds of the 73rd Co. (NCOC) received the award for being the Tactical NCO of the Month.



Sgt. Thomas E. Fish, an instructor in the post safety office, receives a plaque from the National Safety Council April 25 for his efforts as an instructor here.

The presentation made by Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., former commanding general, U. S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning, was for instructing 2,000 persons.

Fish serves as instructor for a defensive driving course which is taught two hours per night, four nights per week and for certain classes taught during the day.

586th Engineers Teach Infantry School Students

By Ken Starzenacker

Under the guidance of the 586th Engineer Company (Float Bridge), Center Troop Command, the monthly Bradley Landing river crossing demonstrations provide students in the Infantry School a basic knowledge of equipment designed to bridge water obstacles.

The 586th provides assault boats capable of carrying a combined [illegible] engineers [illegible] and [illegible] of the M4T5 floating bridge capable of carrying a 60 ton tank.

The foot bridge is erected by members of the 618th Engineer Battalion, who complete their work in less than seven minutes. The short construction time would minimize exposure to hostile fire in combat zones.

The heavy vehicle floating bridges can be constructed from the [illegible] assault boats. [illegible] the boys are [illegible] the build- [illegible] across the [illegible] driving [illegible] Can Span 60 Feet deck for vehicles. Bays can be joined into rafts, forming large prefabricated sections for the floating bridge. These rafts are then moved into position and joined to form a bridge.

Without the bulking, or deck, on the rafts, other means can be used to provide a road surface. The armored vehicle launched bridge (AVLB) can be placed across the rafts, forming a bridge useful in spanning water obstacles up to 60 feet wide.

The AVLB used for the Bradley Landing demonstrations comes from the 19Tth Infantry Brigade's Support Battalion. The 197th also supplies the tanks and other large vehicles used to show the capacity of the river-crossing spans.

The engineers work quickly and efficiently to provide methods of overcoming obstacles encountered by fighting units faced with water hazards.

The demonstration of some of the river-crossing techniques gives the new officers and NCO's knowledge of some of the support available to them in combat.

Legion of Merit Won in Vietnam

Remarkable Major Qualifies as Aviator, Parachutist

It takes a remarkable captain to be awarded the Legion of Merit and it's unusual for an Army aviator to hold a military and commercial aircraft four-engine rating, have a Parachute Club of America "D" license, the Army's Master Paracrutist Wings with over 1,000 jumps and the wings of a Vietnamese Jumpmaster.

But then, Phillip Jarrell, now a major and the 197th Infantry Brigade's new S-2, is a remarkable individual.

For example, shortly after he received his commission from OCS, officials from Department of the Army commented that he was most likely the only second lieutenant on active duty with over 15 years service.

His Legion of Merit, pinned on by Col. John E. Strever, the 197th's commander, during ceremonies recently, was awarded by the United States Army Security Agency for services as a captain during Jarrell's last duty assignment in Vietnam.

"I've never held a civilain job, so you might call me an Army Brat," said the 37-year-old major, who joined the Navy at the age of 15.

"They put me out with an honorable discharge for minority in December 1957 and it took me until February 1948 to get in the Army."

His mistatement of age was forgiven by the Army quite a few years ago when the secretary of the Army authorized him to stay in for 24 years before having to retire.

This was to make up for the underage years.

Enlisting first for airborne, Jarrell joined the 11th Airborne Division in Japan as a member of the old 511th Parachute Infantry Regiment.

It was there his talent for boxing was discovered and he was soon a part of that division's boxing team.

"I got all the way to the finals while in the 11th," he reminisced, with a grin crinkling the tiny scars around his eyes that are his only marks of the sport. "I fought six bouts in three days and after the last one — he was supposed to have just got out of the hospital — I was to take on the man who later beeame champion."

Pausing for a moment, he added, "That last guy must have spent two years in that hospital — on a full training program and a special diet."

In 1961, after eight years as an E-6, Jarrell decided the only way to get promoted at that time was by commission.

"When I applied I was in the 11th Airborne Division in Germany as the first sergeant of a company with four or five E-7's assigned."

By then, however, he was Master Parachutist, had made a combat jump in Korea with the 187th Airborne, had served [illegible] and had long been married to a girl from his hometown of Eden, N.C.

By the time his orders arrived for OCS, he had won his Army instructors license for free fall parachuting — "Number 38 and signed by General J. W. Stillwill." —his "D" license number 1039 and the highest one for parachuting from the PCA. He also was president of the Special Forces Skydiving Club.

After gaining his commission, his first assignment was with Fort benning's Airborne Department, but he was soon selected for flight training.

This was followed by assignment to the Army's twin engine caribou transition course.

"After that course, I was immediately assigned to Vietnam where I joined the 61st Aviation Company," Major Jarrell commented.

While in Vietnam, he was awarded the RVN gummpmaster Wings which includes free fall qualification during a six-month course.

But only 95 days after his return to the United States, he was off to the Dominican republic as a part of the Special Forces.

Returning to the states, he faced the major task, as the S-4 property book officer, of helping to organize the Army's Aviation School Element at Fort Stewart, Ga.

The Army then selected Major Jarrell, then a Captain, to attend the United States Navy Flight School for transtition into one of the navy four-engine type aircraft.

Another year in Vietnam came next and in June of last year Major Jarrell reported to Fort Benning for the Infantry Officer's Advance Course.

"Department of the Army and I agreed that I needed some 'troop duty'," he said concerning his assignement last month to the 197th for the purpose of rounding out my career and perhaps having a little more time with my wife and two sons."

He may not be able to see too much of them, however, for the oldest, Phil, a 16-year-old on Baker High's football team, also plays with a three piece dance band at Fort Benning's various clubs. His wife, Naomi, spends her spare time as a den mother for Fort Benning Cub Scouts. The ten-year-old David, is an active member of Cub Scout Pack 27.

Individual Flotation Device Is Proposed

US ARMY COMBAT DEVELOPMENTS COMMAND, Ft. Bronze Star Presented To Widow

By Robert Mast

The Bronze Star Medal with "V" device for heroism in Vietnam and the Purple Heart have been awarded posthumously to S-Sgt. Howard Williams.

Mrs. Patricia A. Williams, the sergeant's widow, accepted the awards from Col. Wiley B. Wisdom, Fort Benning deputy post commander, at a May 9 ceremony.

She was accompanied by her 2-yer-old son, Kelvin Williams, her mother, Mrs. Corine Lyons, the sergeant's mother, Mrs. Hettie Morgan, and by S-Sgt. and Mrs. Glyn Deese, Maj. Gerbert Williams and Mrs. Roosevelt Brantley, all friends of the family.

The Bronze Star Medal citation real in part: "Sgt. Williams distinguished himself by heroic action Feb. 19, 1968, while serving as light weapons Infantry advisor, Mobile Advisory Team 2, U.S. Military Assistance Command, Vietnam, which was operating with Regional and Popular Forces in Chau Thanh District, Dinh Tuong Province. The company received intense automatic weapons fire while on a search and destroy mission.

"With no thought for his own safety, Sgt. Williams moved throughout the area encouraging his Vietnamese comrades and directing their fields of fire."

Sgt. Williams received the Purple Heart for wounds received in military operations against hostile foreign forces which resulted in his death in Vietnam Feb. 20, 1968.

Prior to his death, the sergeant had been awarded the Air Medal with five Oak Leaf Clusters, Good Conduct Medal, National Defense Service Medal, Vietnam Service Medal, Vietnam Campaign Ribbon, Combat Infantryman Badge and the Sharpshooter Badge with automatic rifle and rifle bars.

USE $5.00

"Could you use $5.00? Each day, $5.00 will be given to the driver of a vehicle in which all occupants are using safety belts."

Say Visitors About Post

Armed Forces Day, 'Amazing, Exciting, Fantastic'

By Frank A. Truchon

Impressive, interesting, amazing, exciting, fantastic — these were some of the adjectives used by visitors to describe exhibits and demonstrations held at Fort Benning on Armed Forces Day.

Miss Jan Schler of Aberdeen, S. D., and Mrs. David Vollrath, were two visitors from out of state who came to Fort Benning to view the Senior Status review of 54th Co. (OC), 5th Candidate Bn., TCB.

Miss Schlaer, who came to see her fiance, Richard A. Jones, said, "The review was impressive. I didn't know what the Army was all about until I came here. Mrs. Vollrath said of Fort Benning, "It's almost a city within itself."

Two officers who are presently attending Infantry Officer Advanced course Number 3-69 were particularly impressed with the sky-diving demonstration. The man, Maj. Richard A. Harman and Maj. David C. Christie, have both gone through airborne training. Maj. Christie was at Fort Benning from 1961 to 1962 for Officer Candidate School, airborne and Ranger training. Maj. Harman attended the Infantry Officer Basic Course here in 1961.

The officers said that they were amazed at the maneuverability of parachutists. "It brought back memories of airborne school here in 1962," said Major Christie. The major brought his wife, Carollyn, with him and added that they were both intersted in going on the buddy - seat ride on the Airborne Department's 250-foot tower.

Maj. Harman's wife, Sharon, and their two sons Richard, 4, and Steven, 3, were with them. Maj. Harman said, "I wanted my wife to see the type of equipment I used when I was in Vietnam from 1967 to 1968. I also wanted to let the boss ride on the junior jump tower."

Thirty-one boys from scout troop 18 in the DeKalb district in Atlanta were also excited about Armed Forces Day. According to scoutmaster David D. Herr, a foreman for Delta Airlines engine overhaul inspection in Atlanta, the boys could hardly wait to take a ride on the 250 foot airborne tower. Herr said, "We explained to the boys that Armed Forces is a chance for the services to demonstrate their part in the defense role of this country. Armed Forces Day is part of the over-all scouting program of demonstrating to boys how they can be good civilians and good military citizens."

Second Lieutenant Thomas Stitt a student in Infantry Officer Basic Course number 10, said that he had come out to view the displays because he was curious to know more about the Army and what it does. He added, "I was particularly struck by the Ranger Department's snake-handling demonstration. The educational facilities in Infantry Hall also impressed me as being particularly outstanding. I believe that these kinds of activities help to strengthen the close ties between the Army and the civilian community."

Specialist Five Harry W. Taylor who was one of the men staffing the Transportation Services Branch display, thought that the Armed Forces Day open house helped to explain to military and civilians alike just what the Army is all about and what its various missions are. He said, "When I finish my tour of duty today, I intend to spend some time looking at the displays. It will be interesting to look at the different types of equipment. I saw a lot of it in Vietnam."

Two drill sergents helping to man the Army Training Center's Basic Training demonstration had very definite opinions as to what Armed Forces Day and the various exhibits and demonstrations mean to the civilian visitors.

Staff Sergeant John P. McClain thought that AFD helped to show civilians and military what the Army is built on and how it is put into action. Sergeant James R. Moore said that "On Armed Forces Day the Army is able to show families what their boys are doing now and what their other children may expect when they come into the service."

Specialist Five Lonnie Voyles a photographer in the Communications - Electronics Department assigned to man the department's display booth, perhaps summed up Armed Forces Day. He stated, "It allows civilians to meet the military population and get acquainted with them. Overall I'd say it's a day on which everyone can take pride in the Armed Services."

Pride in the Armed Services — this was the feeling that prevailed and the end result of Armed Forces Day.

Candidate Is Former Ad Executive

PFC David Swink

The advertising world has its own representative in the Officer Candidate Program.

Officer Candidate Leonard Stevens graduated from Boston University with a B.S. Degree in Public Relations. After graduation, Stevens began working for the General Electric Corp. at Hendersonville, North Carolina in the public relations department. In this position, he entertained municipal and power company executives from all over the country while also being in charge of a quarter million dollar demonstration facility.

Candidate Stevens was then transfered to Schenectady, New York where he was promoted from junior to senior copywriter, eventually becoming creative director. Later Stevens worked in G.E.'s Winston-Salem, N.C. facility as a creative director and copy chief.

Candidate Stevens has received forty-two awards for his ads, which have appeared in such well known magazines as The Saturday Evening Post and Electronics, member of the 54th Co. 5th Stu. Bn., TCB.

Infantry Board Test Sergeant Earns Award

In an awards ceremony at the U.S. Army Infantry Board's Sandy Patch Test Area, May 6, Sergeant First Class Donald D. Neal, veteran test NCO for the Infantry materiel test board was awarded a Certificate of Achievement for Outstanding Performance of Duty. The honor was bestowed on Neal for his exemplary performance of testing duty while serving with the Small Arms Test Division of the Infantry Board.

Neal has been with the test activity since his return from a combat tour in January 1968. The Army veteran of 15 years service has had extensive testing experience and had a previous tour with the Infantry Board from 1963 to 1966. He had also served with the Arctic Test Center at Fort Greely, Alaska for a three year period.

The special ceremony honoring Neal served also as a farewell for the combat veteran as he is leaving the Infantry post for his second tour of Vietnam. On his previous tour of combat be served as an Advisor with the Advisory Team No. 2 of the 25th Infantry Division.

Sergeant Neal, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Neal, Plymouth, Indiana, is a graduate of the Defense Language School where he studied the Vietnamese Language prior to his previous combat tour.

QUIET, DETERMINED, OPTIMISTIC

Screaming Eagle Warriors Turn Sights Toward Home

BIEN HOA, Vietnam (101st 10) — They came down from the north, quiet and determined Screaming Eagle warriors returning home. Behind them are the battlefields without names and the towns with names no one can pronounce. Behind them are the dust, mud, rain, heat and cold.

They arrive at the 101st Airborne Division Replacement Co. in a mood of cautious optimism. All year they have seen others leave. Their eyes have occasionally caught a glimpse of a homeward bound commercial airliner.

Still, they know records can get misplaced, exotic diseases can keep them in quarantine, the rear does get rocketed and airplanes do crash. Going home is important and even the remotest threat is not taken lightly.

Replacement Co. is a pleasant surprise. Outprocessing is done quickly and efficiently by clerks who smile and treat each paratrooper with respect.

Harrassment doesn't exist. The few days of waiting are spent having uniforms cleaned, acquiring needed insignias and ribbons, clearing war souvenirs for the trip home, getting haircuts and talking.

At night, there are the luxuries of movies, clubs, showers and PXs . . . and there is more talk.

Conversation is not the amiable talk of civilians or the rough good-natured banter of soldiers. Instead, there is a series of individual dialogues, near soliloquies lost in the silence of deep thought.

Subjects for discussion are limited. Talk of home is confused, excited and a little apprehensive. A lot changes in a year, and no one ignores the fact that he is going home a partial stranger. Everyone wonders about the changes and how he will adjust.

Talk of the war is limited. Men speak of friends and good times. They discuss the war as a political issue; combat and death are forbidden topics.

One soldier learned to appreciate things. "Simple things," he said, "like a floor or a bed or three square meals a day. Things I knew I was lucky to have . . . I never knew how lucky though."

Another Screaming Eagle found out what it means to carry responsibility. "Before, there was always someone backing me up. Over here, if you don't do your job, someone gets hurt. It makes a big difference."

The plane tickets usually arrive on the fourth day. It's the end of the waiting. The baggage is on the bus, and everyone is sitting on the benches of the outdoor theater.

A senior officer appears on the stage, and his voice is filled with pride as he tells them what they already know but need to hear. He tells them of the courage they have shown and the hardships they have endured. He talks about the terror and the boredom, the seven days a week they worked and the job they did.

Then it's over. The band switches from martial music to "California Here I Come." The buses are loaded and start to pull away.

And then it is here, through the bus windows, thumbs up. The eternal, cocky, confident thumbs up that came before and after the worst of them. The thumbs up that has always been and always will be there as long as there are Screaming Eagles.

CO Medic Serves Fellow Infantrymen

By PFC Robert Mancini

LAI KHE, Vietnam (2-39 1o) - Medic! Medic! That's the cry that an infantryman hates to hear. But it is a call that PFC Nell Cunningham has heard often; and the men in his 1st Infantry Division unit know they can count on him when they need him most.

Cunningham is the senior field medic in the 2nd Battalion, 28th Infantry. He is a conscientious objector whose religion forbids him to bear arms.

"My religious belief (Pentecostal) prohibits the taking of a life, even in self defense. Therefore, I don't carry a weapon when the company goes on operation. I serve as a medic. It's my job to reduce casualities."

Cunningham takes his beliefs seriously. Divine guidance plays an important role in his life, and he relies on prayer and faith to protect him in critical situations. When the bullets start flying, Cunningham readily admits he's frightened, but he puts his trust in the power of God.

In recent combat action, his company encountered intense hostile fire. This didn't hinder Cunningham from providing rapid and efficient medical attention to wounded personnel.

Thinking back on the action, Cunningham remarked, "I did what I could. I was really frightened. I prayed and hoped that the other guys would cover me while I patched up some wounded G.I.'s. Even after that experience, I refuse to carry a weapon. For me it's morally wrong."

Soldiers Pay Close Attention To Vietnam Weather Forecasts

By Sp4 Dennis L. Selby

CHU LAI, Vietnam, (AMERICAL 10) — The closest most people come to meeting a meteorologist is when they turn on their television sets to catch the evening news and weather reports.

On the battlefields of Vietnam, however, the often taken-for-granted weatherman is a pretty important guy. From generals down, everyone listens closely when he makes his predictions, for his reports determine how and when men will move, and just how effectively they can move.

In the Americal Division, the job of making predictions and forecasts falls on Air Force Capt. John P. Huddle, staff weather officer.

Capt. Huddle, an Air Force and civilian-trained meteorologist from Sycamore, Ohio, supervises weather stations located at Chu Lai, LZ Baldy and Duc Pho, which collect weather data for division planners.

The functions of these stations are to observe weather and sky conditions, take atmospheric measurements and relay the results to the Chu Lai station, which compiles the information and comes up with a weather forecast.

"The instruments we use in Vietnam, for reasons of mobility, aren't as elaborate as those used in the United States, but our equipment is just as efficient," Huddle stated.

Equipment used by the weather stations include the aneroid barometer, a device used to measure atmospheric pressure and a temperature dew point indicator.

Past records and statistics play a major role in predictions, as the records relate what type of weather may be expected during a specific period," Huddle continued.

Aviation is one of the major items of concern to the weather stations and tacticians alike. "To be able to get a helicopter or C-130 airborne requires the latest information concerning visibility, windspeed wind direction and locations of fronts," he said.

In planning for troop movements on the ground, Huddle said, "The information we provide is more of a climatology nature — that is, what general type of weather may be expected. But, as the operation progresses, the forecasts have to be more precise as to what the exact weather will be from day to day."

"The only real problem we have encountered is not a lack of equipment, but a shortage of current or past weather data," Huddle asserted. "Also, we receive little or no weather information from China and North Vietnam, to give us an idea of what kind of weather may be expected."

"Duty — Honor — Country. These three hallowed words reverently dictate what you ought to be, what you can be, what you will be. They are your rallying points: to build courage when courage seems to fail; to regain faith when there seems to be little cause for faith; to create hope when hope becomes forlorn."

SFC's Widow Is Presented Bronze Star

The widow and three children of SFC Leonard L. Moore accepted the Bronze Star Medal, Purple Heart and other medals during a posthumous award ceremony held here May 15.

Mrs. Myrlee J. Moore, heard the citation read which credited her husband with "outstanding meritorious service in connection with military operations against a hostile force in the Republic of Vietnam." The citation continued, "He consistently manifested exemplary professionalism and initiatives in obtaining outstanding results.

His rapid assessment and solution of numerous problems, inherent in a counterinsurgency environment greatly enhanced the allied effectiveness against a determined and aggressive enemy. . His loyalty, diligence and devotion to duty were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service, and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army."

The Purple Heart was awarded SFC Moore for the wounds which resulted in his death August 8, 1968, in Vietnam.

The three Moore children attending the ceremony were Misty Lee, 4, Mark Lee, 7, and Mickey Lee, 17.

Medals awarded SFC Moore, prior to his death, included, Good Conduct Medal, World War II Victory Medal, National Defense Service Medal, Vietnam Campaign Ribbon, Expert Badge with rifle bar, and Sharpshooter Badge with pistol, carbine and automatic rifle bars.

Tuskegee Institute High School Wins Post Band Competition

Tuskegee Institute High School of Tuskegee, Ala., took first place in marching band competition and Carver High School of Columbus walked off with the top prize in the ROTC drill team competition here on Armed Forces Day.

In individual ROTC competition first place winner, cadet Stephen Ellis was presented a trophy. He is a student at Kendrick High School, Columbus. Second through fifth place winners were awarded certificates.

Tuskegee Institute High School won the band competition with a rating of 51.3 per cent and Kendrick High School came in second with 42.3 per cent.

Among the other bands competing for trophies were South Girard High School of Phenix City, Ala.; Mt. Olive High School of Seale, Ala.; Ethel Kite High School of LaGrange, Ga., and Baker High School of Columbus, Ga.

The bands had five minutes each to perform any type of half-time program they desired. They were rated on drill precision, alignment, intonation, balance, rhythm, individual appearance, unit appearance and uniformity and spectator appeal.

Carver High School was awarded 560 points out of a possible 600 points to win first place in drill team competition. Tuskegee Institute High School was close behind with 550 points. Other schools competing in the drill team competition included Baker, Hardaway, Jordan Vocational, Kendrick and Spencer High Schools of Columbus.

Drill teams were given 10 minutes to perform compulsory drills and a free drill routine of their choice. Teams were scored according to their manner of executing such movements as "to the right flank march," "to the rear march," "dress right dress," "order arms," "forward march," "about face" and "paade rest."

NCOC Earns $12,000 As Professional Bowler

By Lt. Robert M. Causseaux

Noncommissioned Officer Candidate Donald Meyers, currently assigned to the 104th Company (NCOC), has never made the bowling scene on TV, but before he entered the Army he earned over $12,000 by bowling with or against such stars of the Professional Bowlers's Association as Billy Welu, Don Carter, and Nick Webber.

Meyers, a native of Beatrice, Nebraska, is not an affiliated member of the PBA, but he did manage to travel on its tour during school vacations and summers. His pro bowling excursions have taken him to such centers of pin activity as Chicago, Kansas City, St. Louis, and Des Moines.

Candidate Meyers relates that his biggest win occurred while he was still in high school. Entering the Petterson Classic in Chicago, he emerged not only victorious, but $2,000 richer. Since that time, Meyers concedes that his game has "fallen off a bit," to the point where he sports a 213 competition average.

In addition to his money-making competition bowling, Meyers is certified by the PBA to instruct bowling. He claims to have started bowling when he was eleven years old. In the subsequent ten years Meyers says that he has bowled in as many as four leagues at a time in order to sharpen his game.

Since he entered the Army, Meyers says that he has not had much time to practice his sport, although he did win a position on the Fort Lewis bowling team. Meyers has not lost his touch completely, however, for he entered a local tournament on his last leave and picked up the first-prize money of $300, which he admits does help his funds for leave rations.

Learn To Say 'Follow Me' in 27 New Languages

BY BILL HARDIN

Learning to say "Follow Me" in 28 languages is not a difficult task for Fort Benning soldiers and their dependents.

All that is required is a little effort — and a few visits to the Language Laboratory operated by the Educational Development Office.

From Arabic to Vietnamese, the laboratory has a variety of languages as well as a number of methods to teach them.

"We use records, books, and tape recordings as teaching aids," said Mrs. Frank L. Bauer director of the facility.

"We use native instructors whenever possible, and emphasis is placed on learning to speak the new language, rather than to read and write it," she said.

There are from 100 to 150 students enrolled in various classes taught here at any given time.

"Our classes are open to military personnel stationed here, their dependents, and civilian employees of the post, on a space available basis. We have seldom had to deny a civilian admission to a class however," Mrs. Bauer said.

"The courses offered are practical, conversational courses, with from 15 to 35 students per class. This size enables the instructor to devote a great deal of individual attention to each student and thus help the student progress more rapidly," she added.

The laboratory includes 48 booths with individual headphone sets. A recording may be piped to each cubicle. From a master control position, the instructor is able to monitor any of the booths and hear what the student is listening to.

Using the master control position, the instructor can talk directly to several students simultaneously, and assist them without requiring them to leave their booths and without disturbing other students in the room.

"Most students make remarkable progress," Mrs. Bauer said. "Progress depends a great deal on the motivation of the student. If he truly has a desire to learn, puts forth a bit of effort and invests a reasonable amount of time, the progress is rewarding."

"It is possible for a student to visit the laboratory and work on his own without being enrolled in a class, but classes are offered at night for those who wish to join," she said.

Classes are 12 weeks in length and meet twice each week, either on Monday and Wednesday, or on Tuesday and Thursday. Most classes are two hours long and begin at 7 p.m.

"Vietnamese attracts more students at present than any other language. Perhaps this is true because many of the students in the infantry Officer Advanced Course may take a language course here as one of their electives," commented Mrs. Bauer.

Frequently, a number of Allied students come to the laboratory in order to improve their knowledge of English.

"Whether it be English or any of the 27 other languages we offer, we welcome inquires about the program and enrollment in the classes by all eligible to participate," she said.

For Use In Assault Operations

Engineers Propose Continuous Floating Roadway

US ARMY COMBAT DEMAND, Ft. Belvoir, Va... A "ribbon" bridge which will provide a continuous floating roadway for water-crossing in assault operations has been proposed for development by the Engineer Agency, Combat Developments Command (CDC), Ft. Belvoir, Virginia.

This new type of improved float bridge, according to Major Dennis J. York, CDC Engineer Agency Project Officer, will allow construction five times faster with approximately one-half the personnel required for float bridging presently used for tactical operations. The ribbon bridge will permit passage of tactical vehicles up to 50 tons. It will incorporate lifting points and slings to facilitate movement and placement by helicopters.

Normally the assault bridge will be moved and launched by vehicle transporters, then emplaced and held in position by bridge erection boats. A bridge set capable of spanning approximately 400 feet will consist of light ramp elements and 16 interior bays. CDC design of the bridge also calls for capability of multiple bays to be used as rafts to ferry loads weighing up to 60 tons. Tentative issue is planned as one set per engineer Float Bridge Company.

Ease of construction will permit crews to form the bridge at about 22 feet per minute. Simplicity of construction permits all-weather erection of the span on an around-the-clock basis. When the tactical situation permits, floodlights on the transporter will assist in night construction. Turnaround time for checking and servicing bridge units before dispatch is a scant 30 minutes... Safety features incorporated in the bridge call for hand-holds, guards around moving parts, and non-skid surfaces for roadways and walkways.

Present and future concepts of combat operations are foreseen by CDC — the designers of the Army of tomorrow — as dependent upon a high degree of mobility for tactical forces. It is envisioned that the ribbon bridge will provide the crossing capability for the initial high vehicle density during assault and follow-on actions. The bridge will compliment the Mobile Assault Bridge which gives attacking forces assault ferrying capabilities.

The quick-to-construct ribbon bridge will also meet an immediate need of the rapid assault forces of today's Army. It will help to insure the continuous forward movement across wet gap barriers by such a host of combat vehicles as tanks personnel carriers, and self-propelled artillery.

The bridge according to the CDC proposal, will accompany armor, mechanized and motorized units in the field when the tactical situation calls for water-crossing. The airlift capabilities built into the requirement for the bridge will help insure that it is up front wherever and whenever needed.

Civilians Review Stockade System

A committee of six prominent civilian penal experts is conducting an analysis and evaluation of Army confinement facilities and practices.

Army said the study will concentrate on the stockade system and include a review of the Presidio of San Francisco stockade.

In appointing the committee, Secretary of the Army Stanley R. Resor acted on the recommendation of Army Chief of Staff William C. Westmoreland, that a committee be appointed to provide an independent and professional evaluation of Army confinement facilities and practices.

The committee will conduct its own inspection of Army confinement facilities in the U.S.

The committee represents a broad spectrum of experience in the management of prisons. Chairman of the committee is Austin H. MacCormick, executive director of the Osborne Assn. Inc., New York. He is a member of the board of National Council on Crime and Delinquency and the American Correctional Assn.

Other members of the committee include: James V. Bennett, consultant to various federal and state penology agencies.

Richard A. McGee, president, Institute for the Study of Crime and Delinquency, Sacramento, Calif.

Lawrence Pierce, chairman, New York State Narcotics Addiction Control Commission.

Former Officer Records Clerk Receives Direct Commission

A former officer records clerk in the USATCI AG Section, Patrick T. Conlon of Hartford, Conn., exchanged his Specialist 5 stripe for a second lieutenant's bars when he was awarded a direct commission at USATCI Headquarters by Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, Ft. Benning commander.

His father, Daniel J. Conlon, joined General Davis in presenting his son's new rank insignia.

A graduate of Hartford's Bulkeley High School, Conlon holds a bachelor of science degree in insurance administration from the University of Connecticut at Storrs.

He entered the Army in February 1968 and completed basic training at Ft. Dix, N.J. While assigned to USATCI, Conlon was selected to attend the Third U.S. Army Noncommissioned Officers Academy where he was the distinguished honor graduate. He also was named Headquarters Company Soldier of the Month for November.

On completing the officers basic course at the Southeastern Signal School, Ft. Gordon, Ga., he will be assigned to Ft. Monmouth, N.J.

DRIVER OF THE MONTH . . . Sp4 Des Prindle, of Co. C, 1st Bn., 29th Inf., has been named top driver in the 197th Inf. Bde. for May. April's winner was Sp4 Joe Powell of Hq. & Hq. Btry., 7th Bn., 18th Arty. Both men received "Driver of the Month" plaques, a three day pass with a free steak dinner provided by a local restaurant. The awards, sponsored by the 197th Infantry Brigade Maintenance Office, are designed to promote awareness and improvement on the part of drivers toward their vehicles. Sp4 Des Prindle is congratulated by Col. John E. Strever, Jr., 197th Inf. Bde. commander.

Medicare Card Replacement Simple Process

"I've lost my Medicare card. How do I get a new one?" This question is one of the most frequently asked at the Social Security Office, according to Robert E. O'Neal, District Manager.

"Get in touch with our office at once if you lost your Medicare card," O'Neal advises. "Give us your full name, address, your claim number (social security number), and your date of birth. We will get you another card."

He pointed out that the Medicare card is one of the first things needed when a person over 65 enters a hospital. It enables the hospital to obtain immediate information on the patient as to coverage, number of days of care available, and other information that will be needed for Medicare to pay his bill.

"There is no charge for the replacement of lost Medicare cards," O'Neal stated. "Just write or call us at 324-5461. Our address is 301 15th St. in Columbus. We're open weekdays from 8:45 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturdays, 9 a.m. to 12."

Owns 'Dating Bars'

NCO Candidate Has 'Ideal Job' in Boston

By Sgt. Robert M. Causseaux

In a polling of typical soldiers, the "ideal job" in civilian life might be that of a corporate executive, pilot of a large commercial jet, or even a life guard on the beaches of Hawaii; but this is not the case with NCO Candidate Carl Miranda, currently assigned to the 10th Company, 10th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade.

Miranda, before entering the service, was a one-man business team in an "ideal job", in that he was the owner, manager and creator of several lucrative "dating bars," located in Boston and New York.

Miranda explains that these sophisticated saloons catered primarily to the affluent, single stratum of people which he calls "swingles." "We tried to appeal to working young people," he says, "such as lawyers, young execs, sports figures, airline stewardesses, and nurses, and give them a good place to meet.

For Miranda, this means a tavern with an old English atmosphere. He adds that there must be tight controls in the establishment of both standards of dress and the type of clientele which uses the place. "We stick to the legal rules and our own discretion to filter the crowd," he says. The sign at the entrance to Brandy's, one of Miranda's operations in Boston, reads: "You must be 21, mentally and physically; No bubble gum chewers or white socks allowed; No Nehur jackets." This, states Miranda, gives the doorman discretion.

Miranda, who started his Gatsby-like career by selling Good Humor ice cream (a job which lasted all of two days), had the majority of his business holdings in Boston, before he entered the service. He says that the business was not only interesting and financially rewarding, but that it had its fringe benefits, too, in that it allowed him to meet prominent figures in the world of fashion, politics, and sports.

Tuskegee Institute High School of Tuskegee, Ala., took first place in the marching band competition and Carver High School of Columbus walked off with the top prize in the ROTC drill team competition on Armed Forces Day.

In individual ROTC competition, Cadet Stephen Ellis of 114 Prince Ave., Columbus, a student at Kendrick High School, was the winner. Second through fifth place winners were awarded certificates.

Tuskegee Institute High School won the band competition with a rating of 51.3 per cent and Kendrick High School came in second with 49.3 per cent.

Among the other bands competing for trophies were South Girard High School of Phenix City, Ala.; Mt. Olive High School of Seale, Ala.; Ethel Kite High School of LaGrange, Ga., and Baker High School of Columbus, Ga.

The bands had five minutes each to perform any type of half-time program they desired. They were rated on drill precision alignment, intonation, balance, rhythm, individual appearance, unit appearance and uniformity and spectator appeal.

Carver High School was awarded 560 points out of a possible 660 points to win first place in drill team competition. Tuskegee Institute High School was close behind with 550 points. Other schools competing in the drill team competition included Baker, Hardaway, Jordan Vocational Kendrick and Spencer High Schools of Columbus.

Drill teams were given ten minutes to perform compulsory drills and a free drill routine of their choice. Teams were scored according to their manner of executing such movements as right flank, rear march, dress right, order arms, forward march, about face and parade rest.

Widow Receives Medal In Honor Of Husband

The Bronze Star Medal, first oak leaf cluster, was presented to Mrs. Reba L. Elred during a posthumous awards ceremony held April 14 in honor of her husband Capt. Waymon C. Elred, who was killed in action in Vietnam Jan. 5, 1969.

The medal was presented by Col. Wiley B. Wisdom, deputy post commander, U.S. Army Infantry Center.

Elred, formerly of Cookeville, Tenn., was cited for "outstanding meritorious service in connection with ground operations against a hostile force" in the Republic of Vietnam.

Capt. Elred had previously been awarded the Silver Star Medal, the Bronze Star Medal, Army Commendation Medal, Vietnam Service Medal, Good Conduct Medal, National Defense Medal, Vietnam Campaign Ribbon, Combat Infantryman Badge, Parachutist Badge, Expert Badge with automatic rifle and rifle bars and Marksman Badge with the pistol bar.

Mrs. Elred is the former Reba Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ethan Smith of 520 N. Whitney Ave., Cookeville, Tenn.

Capt. Elred was the son of Mrs. Stuart S. Elred, 72 West Columbia St., Cookeville.

Must Balance Between 'Ideal' and 'Practical'

Equipment Selection Is Difficult

U.S. ARMY COMBAT DEVELOPMENTS COMMAND, Ft. Belvoir, Va. — A young man's choice of the "perfect wife" or car is far simpler than the Army's selection of equipment to support the field soldier now and in the future. This is one way materiel and doctrine specialists at Combat Developments Command (CDC), Ft. Belvoir, Va., look at their job as the "user representative" leading to the development of equipment related to the effectiveness of combat forces as far into the future as the 1990s.

CDC's role as "user representative" means that the soldier has a personal "ambassador" as new items of equipment pass through their rigorous pre-fielding tests and evaluations. It also insures that the soldier's "yeas and nays" will have a strong voice when military planners decide the shape and substance of the future Army.

The user representative is an expert with firsthand combat experience in his field, whether an actual combat arm or any one of the Army's many support and service support branches. In speaking for the trooper, he often has the tough job of saying "no."

Delicate Balance

Colonel Tom M. Nicholson, Chief of CDC's Electronics Division, a signal officer and "air-mobility" man, explained that outlining the requirements for new items of equipment involves a delicate balance between what would be "ideal" or perfect, and what can actually be accomplished within the constraints of technology, time, cost and desired effectiveness.

He points out that the modern age has not changed the familiar maxim that a sound land combat force must do three things; shoot, move and communicate. The user representative does all he can so that developments come as close as possible to the "perfect" products the soldier wants and needs.

Taking communications as an example, Nicholson said that the Army's goal is to continually increase commo capability while simultaneously reducing the bulk, number of components, weight and upkeep requirements of commo systems.

The user representative must he certain that equipment specifications take the "real world" into account. There is probably not a soldier in the Army who would not like to have a continuous-commo radio system with unlimited channel capability, full security control, the dimensions of a pack of cigarettes, infinite mean time between overhaul, no identifying signature effects and of such little cost as to permit its "throw-away" after operation.

Dream World

But this is the dream world, as far out as the "perfect wife." Therefore, Nicholson says, the real challenge is to "state requirements for equipment or systems that will provide a maximum capability at a minimum cost in dollars and development time which can support the 'user' in his operating environment."

For communications equipment this would mean considering the basics like the mobility, security, traffic, range, support and quality standards each item should measure up to. Of particular import to the user representative are what developers call "human engineering" factors. These are the considerations which make it possible for the soldier to live with his equipment without undue discomfort; operating difficulty or "enslavement" to the tools of his trade.

CDC must further decide who is to use the equipment. A pack portable radio capable of operating in an unlimited frequency range may be nice-to-have for all units, but any number of developmental constraints (such as technological feasibility, time and cost) may demand more selective allocation.

By the same token, developers examine the support requirements for every piece of hardware. What may initially seem like a practical system for hypothetical artillery battery-to-fire control center commo system may look less acceptable when generator support, specially trained personnel and a 50,000 square foot area are needed for effective employment.

Checks and Balances

"Checks and balances" are one side of it. The other side is that user representatives are optimistically convinced that the pace of technology will bring startling additions over the next five to seven years; this at continually less drain on the pocketbook than would be required today or five years ago for the same result.

Col. Nicholson, who was Division signal officer in the early 1960s for the experimental 11th Air Assault Division and later the signal officer of the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) in Vietnam, remembers that in "airmobile concept" requirements for extremely light-weight, mobile commo equipment, multi-channel systems were restricted by technology to eight voice channels. The same package for a ¼ ton vehicle or trailer can now, less than half a decade later, incorporate as many as 48 voice and 48 teletypewriter channels. Parallel increases would apply to other areas such as switchboard capabilities.

Along the same lines, CDC envisions progress in reducing the actual number of components for aircraft electronics equipment, called avionics. Future families of aircraft will boast integrated systems vastly simplified over earlier configurations where complicated display consoles inhibit fast readings for pilot and navigator alike.

"Shoe-Horning"

Nicholson's staff is working to overcome the "shoe-horning" of new avionics packages into the airframe, known as the black-box approach. The main idea is to get early developmental "lead time" on user needs, technological forecasts and all tactical and organizational plans for future Army aviation. This will allow for fully integrated avionics packages to be incorporated into the craft literally as the airframe leaves the production line. Results will be a cut back on piecemeal additions and expensive retrofit after the aircraft gets to the field.

In sum, Nicholson says, today's "general theme in stating communications requirements is that whenever possible new systems or equipment being developed have the maximum capability for interface, interchangeability of components (on the ground or in the air), simplified logistics and that the scope of training of personnel for operation and maintenance be minimized to support a few basic communications equipment rather than hundreds as exist today."

The future soldier will be talking about up-tight communications when he says he "heard it through the grapevine."

In Civil Service

Barriers Cleared Away In Jobs For The Poor

The Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO) and the U. S. Department of Labor will invest $150,000 to develop a program to clear away barriers to employment and promotion of disadvantaged people in local and state civil service jobs under merit principles.

The efforts will be mounted through a grant to the National Civil Service Leagues, announced recently by Secretary of Labor George P. Shultz and Bertrand M. Hardin, acting director of OEO. Each agency is contributing $75,000 to the program. It is anticipate that the Department of Housing and Urban Development will provide $75,000 for additional technical assistance and to find jobs for disadvantaged people within the Model Cities Program.

The funds, routed through the Community Action Program of OEO, will finance a 12-month experimental and demonstration project to:

— set up a task force to oversee research and provide guidance;

— take stock of current government programs in the states, some 20 cities, and other jurisdictions to discover successful methods of employing and using the disadvantaged; and — report on the findings and recommend specific action that state and local governement should take.

The League will also seek out and distribute information on Federal financial aid and programs now available to improve public service employment opportunities.

Civil support will be generated through regional and local meetings and a national conference. Reports and "basic issue" papers will be distributed to stimulate public awareness and discussion.

The League intends to revise its own Model Civil Service Law, and will set up an advisory service for jurisdictions that want to change personnel procedures.

Additional information may be obtained from the League at 1028 Connecticut Avenue, NW., Washington, D. C. 20036.

Snoopy's Going With Him

Charlie Brown To Be The First Boy To The Moon

CAPE KENNEDY . . . It's a year of firsts for Charlie Brown. The world-famous comic strip character not only bows as a big screen movie star in his first feature-length picture, Cinema Center Films' "A BOY NAMED CHARLIE BROWN," but he's also going to be the first boy to the moon.

An incredible feat for a little guy who can't even win a ball game? Not really. Charles Schulz' comic characters, enjoyed daily by millions, have become unofficial mascots of the NASA Manned Space-Craft Center, and the Apollo 10 astronauts are counting on Charlie Brown and his bouncy beagle Snoppy (the one with the cute smile) to carry them safely around the moon for 2½ days in May as a preliminary scouting mission before an attempted landing on the moon in July.

Code Names

"Charlie Brown" and "Snoopy" will be the unclassified code names for the manned space vehicles, the "unseen astronauts." In fact, Snoopy will get closer to the moon than anyone ever has.

Thomas P. Stafford, John W. Young and Eugene A. Cernan left Earth May 18 on an eight-day space flight designed to inspect the target site for Apollo 11 and pave the way for its landing there.

"Since we're going to the moon to find out all these facts and kind of snoop around, the lunar module's going to be called 'Snoopy'," said flight commander Stafford at a news conference. Its command module mothership will be named after Snoopy's companion, Charlie Brown.

Project Apollo

Snoopy was recruited by the U.S. astronaut team to serve as the watchdog for safety of Project Apollo. The long-nosed beagle who fancies himself a combat hero of World War I fame has left behind his Sopwith Camel to don a space suit featured on posters throughout Apollo industry as the symbol of quality workmanship and professionalism in the manned space flight program.

Creator Schulz, a staunch advocate of manned space exploration, allowed his characters to be used by NASA and Apollo contractors to promote the project with the hope that Snoopy would provide a necessary touch of humor to the very serious and exacting business of designing, manufacturing, and testing man-carrying space vehicles.

Space-craft manager Ernie Reyes, whose idea it was to introduce Snoopy to the space program, says: "Snoopy started out as just a friendly pup, and now he's a fire-breathing dragon! He has become the symbol of good, detailed planning to all of us."

The Peanuts characters provide a vital lightness to the space program. "If there is no humor in the program," Reyes says, "there is a hole in your stomach."

Snoopy

Stafford and Cernan will fly the four-legged lunar module landing ship nicknamed "Snoopy" twice to within 50,000 feet of the moon's surface. Young will remain in the command module "Charlie Brown," in a 60-mile high orbit, ready to swoop to the lunar module's rescue if necessary.

Except for descending the final 50,000 feet to the moon, the flight of Apollo 10 will rehearse all the operations Apollo 11 astronauts Neil Armstrong, Michael Collins and Edwin Aldrin carry out in July.

"What the Apollo 10 mission is going to do is tie together all the knots that we've had in the past, to sort out all of the unknowns and actually pave the whole way for a landing," Stafford said.

The Astronaut

The "Snoopy the Astronaut" emblem has received the support of the Astronaut Office and is now recognized and publicized as the astronaut's personal symbol for excellence and program accomplishment.

Officer Candidate Fuller Once Guarded Movie Star

Soldiers dream of guarding movie stars, but few ever really get such an ideal duty.

Officer Candidate Ralph R. Fuller is one soldier who did. He was a bodyguard for Jayne Mansfield, while he was assigned to the United Kingdom Air Police near London.

Miss Mansfield was in England at that time on a savings bond campaign.

Fuller, 31, with 14 years of service in the Army and Air Force, is currently assigned to the 96th Infantry Officer Candidate Company, 9th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade.

Fuller's many-faceted military career began when he enlisted in the Air Force in 1955. After completing basic training, he was assigned to the Air Police Corps at Parks Air Force Base, California.

His international experiences commenced in 1957 with his assignment in England. With this unit, Fuller gained distinction for himself and the U. S. through his success in Air Police proficiency contests.

His team placed fourth among teams competing from 26 bases in the United Kingdom. Individually, Fuller placed 35th in an All-Europe Air Police contest.

From England, he journeyed to Italy, where he was stationed at Aviano Air Force Base. There, he was assigned to the base's distinguished security unit.

Fuller left the Air Force in 1963 to join the Army, in which he had the intention of becoming an officer. However, Fuller again received orders to travel, this time to Schofield Barracks, Hawaii, where he remained for three years.

He was sent to Fort Sill, in his native state of Oklahoma, in 1966. His services there and in Hawaii earned him the Army Commendation Medal in 1967.

Presently the Student Council president of the 96th Co., Candidate Fuller plans to stay in the infantry because, in his words, the infantry is "what's happening."

A Funny Thing Happened

Offers Fun-Filled Night

By August C. Nerad

Need a place to go this weekend? Want your entertainment different from the hackneyed movie, traditional picnic, usual pool room — something alive and exciting? Historically famous Springer Opera House, featuring A Funny Thing Happened On the Way To the Forum, is your answer.

Springer Opera House, founded in 1871, has hosted America's top theater personalities. Edwin Booth, brother of the infamous assassin of Lincoln, played Hamlet to standing ovations in 1876. Similarly applauded have been Ethel Barrymore, Will Rogers, Martha Graham.

Although entering the Springer Opera House is like "stepping into the past," with its gold-gilded columns, white velvet-textured wallpaper, box seats entered from doors in hidden aisles, one finds the Opera House has continued to present modern dramas and comedies. No exception is A Funny Thing . . .

A Funny Thing . . . — the rollicking Roman-staged musical comedy that enjoyed popular success on Broadway starring Zero Mostel, features as the freedom-loving, conniving Pseudolus, actor-director Charles Jones. Jones has entertained audiences as the star of the Off Broadway play Seven At A Blow.

Pretty Margaret Knox, playing the virgin Philia, is wooed by her co-star Bill Willis as the young, idealistic Hero.

The players include two soldiers from Ft. Benning, 2LT Douglas Bergman is Miles Glorius and Spec.4 Nelson Allison is the prute-au character.

Others in the production are: Victor Stratton as Sysnex, Barbara Appino as Domina, Roy Campbell as Hysterium; director's assistant is Sue Slaughter—and some of Columbus' most alluring young ladies in the House of Lycus.

So if you're desiring a lusty, fun-filled evening, you'll find your weekend's pleasure at the Springer Opera House, 103 10th St.

Performances are at 8:30 p.m. May 22 thru 31, except Sunday. Tickets are available at the Box Office for $3.50 but are half price for enlisted men.

COMPUTER CORNER ON SPORTS

By Bud Goode

In the Book of Daniel there's a line about being weighed in the balance and found wanting. The suspense builds as later in the story Daniel is thrown to the lions.

'Balance' is the name of this baseball game. And though the season is only three weeks old, Computer Corner is ready to throw a selection of teams to the lions. Reason: no 'balance.'

To win a pennant in either the National or American League a team must score at least 50% more runs on offense than they give up on pitching and fielding defense.

To measure team balance through games of April 29, Computer Corner obtained three results after pouring the season statistics into our Univac electronic sports analyzer:

AMERICAN LEAGUE
EASTERN DIVISION	R/OR	WESTERN DIVISION	R/OR
BALTIMORE	70%	MINNESOTA	88%
DETROIT	16%	OAKLAND	42%
NEW YORK	12%	CHICAGO	13%
BOSTON	EVEN	CALIFORNIA	-17%
WASHINGTON	-3%	SEATTLE	-26%
CLEVELAND	-59%	KANSAS CITY	-35%
NATIONAL LEAGUE
CHICAGO	54%	LOS ANGELES	52%
PITTSBURGH	18%	SAN FRANCISCO	39%
NEW YORK	9%	CINCINNATI	29%
MONTREAL	-12%	ATLANTA	10%
ST. LOUIS	-20%	SAN DIEGO	-35%
PHILADELPHIA	-22%	HOUSTON	-44%

The day the season opened Computer Corner tabbed the top three teams and the bottom three teams almost exactly as they stand now in the four divisions. Only St. Louis is far off the computer's first prediction. But the Corner is not giving up on the Cards. Twelfth in offense last week they are now ninth. We expect that Break and Floods hats will get even hotter.

As for the strongest teams, Baltimore is scoring 70% more runs than they allow; Minnesota and Los Angeles are scoring 50% more runs than they give up. The out-of-balance clubs? Cleveland, Kansas City, Houston and San Diego. With only three weeks gone, Computer Corner throws them to the lions.

THE FORUM

BY PAUL MANGIONE

The peace and tranquility of Fort Benning may be threatened during the coming summer months unless some civic minded people here do something about it. In a very short time several thousand children will be let loose from their schools into the hot Georgia sun for another vacation season and, as this torrent of humanity floods the post, the tensions will rise.

Inter-mingled among this mass of youth are a few dozen judo students and here lies the danger. During last summer and most of the school year there was no shortage of instructors for these kids. Now due to the wonders of world crisis and the Army's duty rotation system, most of these instructors are no longer with us. The problem is clear. Eventually these kids will grow tired of pummeling one another as they seek the mastery of their sport and attempt to go on to bigger things.

Most likely the "bigger things" they will go after will be their parents, their tired, weary, hard working parents.

This reporter had a discussion recently with the mother of a girl in the teenage judo class. Her daughter had developed a great interest in judo and was forever after the mother (herself in the adult class) to practice. She said she did practice with her daughter, once. Her back has not been the same since. It seems these "little ones" are more powerful than they appear, particularly when they know what they're doing.

The problem has not confined itself to the young people's classes. The adult class has been without an instructor for a month. SFC Ben Morse, a fine teacher and holder of the black belt was sidelined by the doctor. The sergeant broke his back a few years ago and the strenuous activity of judo was too much for him so he had to stop.

A remarkable lady named Barbara Murphee sallies forth twice weekly with the 12 year old and under group. She is also the secretary of the Fort Benning Judo Club and is the person to contact if interested in becoming an instructor. Her number is 545-7101. Persons interested in instructing should hold a brown belt or above. Classes will be scheduled to conform to the individual's availability.

In the interests of saving a number of fathers and mothers from being thrashed by their children throughout the summer, volunteer quickly—remember—school is almost out.

FORT BENNING WINS VOLLEYBALL TITLE

Fort Benning successfully defended its crown as Third Army Division "A" Volleyball champions today (May 16), at it closed the week-long Third Army 1969 Volleyball Tournament, played here. The infantrymen compiled 16 and 4 record.

The hosting team closed out the tourney with victories over Fort Bragg, N.C. by a margin of 15-3 in both games and then dropped two to Fort Campbell, Ky., 11-15 and 9-15.

Fort Campbell, after walloping Benning, turned around and split with Fort Rucker, Ala., 11-15 and 15-5, giving Fort Rucker its only victory of the tournament.

Campbell wound up in second place with a 16 and 6 record after winning fiercely fought second place playoff match with Fort Jackson, S.C. Successive scores in that best two of three battle were 13-15, 15-12 and 15-10 respectively. Jackson wound up with a 14 and 7 record and third place after the match.

Jackson's other victories included Fort Rucker, 15-2 and 15-6; and Fort Gordon, Ga., 15-1 and 15-10.

Fort Gordon beat Fort Bragg earlier in the day 15-8 and 15-13 to wind up in fourth place with an 11 and 9 record, while Bragg placed fifth with a 4 and 16 mark followed up by Fort Rucker with a 1-19 record.

Division "B" play ended with a split between Hunter Army Airfield, Ga., and Fort McClellan, Ala., 11-15 and 15-3 respectively; and Fort Stewart, Ga., gaining two games with thanks to Fort McPherson, Ga's "byes."

Hunter finished in first place with a 10 and a 2 record; followed by Fort Stewart with an 8 and 4 mark and Fort McClellan with an even 6 and 6 measure. Fort McPherson did not field a team for the tournament and defaulted their games, thereby providing "Byes" to the other Division "B" teams.

After the tournament, Col. Wiley B. Wisdom, Fort Benning deputy post commander, presented trophies to the first place and runner-up teams, most valuable players, individual trophies to all star teams and individual prices consisting of watches and luggage to members of winning and runner-up teams in each division.

Pvt. John Werle, Fort Jackson, S. C., and SP4 William Kealoha, Hunter Army Airfield, Ga., were chosen most valuable players of Divisions "A" and "B" respectively.

"All Star" players from Division "A" included SP4 James R. Pentico, Fort Rucker, Ala.; Pvt. John Werle, Fort Jackson, S.C.; Sp4 Gilbert Pagat and S. Sgt. Richard Hurlbert, Fort Campbell, Ky.; and SP4 Michael Williams and SFC Alberto Gulisao from Fort Benning.

Division "B" "All-Stars" were 2nd Lt. Kevin L. Cornwell Fort McClellan, Ala.; Maj. Edward Lee and Capt. Wayne Smoot, Fort Stewart, Ga.; and SP 6 Teddy Maxwell, Capt. James Sweet and SP4 William Kealoha from Hunter Army Airfield, Ga.

Army Beats Atlanta Braves By Two Weeks

The Army beat the Atlanta Braves by two week to rights on Ron Nasworthy of Atlanta, Georgia.

Nasworthy, presently a NCO Candidate in the 194th Company, 10th Bn., TCB, was that close to signing a major-league baseball contract with the Atlanta Braves before he was inducted into the service.

Before his draft notice came, Atlanta appeared to have won the rights to the 6'5", 235 pound pitcher over the offers of four other teams. Nasworthy said he also had offers and feelers from Cincinnati, Cleveland, the Yankees, and the White Sox.

The pro scouts had been watching him since he posted an overall 13-4 record in three years at Bordo High School. Later at Brewton-Parker Junior Colleges Nasworthy had an 8-2 season. However, his school and baseball career hit a snag after the first year when he transferred to Georgia State where he played in only one game before scholastic trouble made him ineligible.

After his impressive showing at Brewton-Parker, Nasworthy had offers of financial assistance from several colleges including Florida State, Valdosta State, and Birmingham State. Nasworthy says he would like to take advantage of one of these offers after he has completed his military obligation.

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

BY BILL KLOEB

The rainy weather over last week-end curtailed fishing for all but a few hardy souls. Stubbornness paid off for Capt. Michael Wikan, 21st Company, The Student Brigade. He took a 6-pound 12-ounce bass from Harps Pond on Saturday, May 17, to take the lead in the May bass contest. According to the captain he was using a rod and reel and a lazy ike lure.

Sgt. Robert Crossland, Company C, 197th Support Battalion, still has the largest catfish registered and Maj. Richard K. Bachman is leading the bream contest with the 15-ounce entry he caught using a fly rod and popping bug at Patterson's Pond.

When you go fishing be sure to register for the Fishing Derby at Rod and Gun Club. Entries will not be accepted in the derby if the fisherman has not registered before going out.

The front counter of the Rod and Gun Club is open 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., Monday through Friday, and 5 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. Sportsman Lounge is open from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m., seven days a week. The kitchen is open 11 a.m. to 6:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, and from 10 a.m. to 6:30 p.m., Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. The skeet and trap ranges are open from 12 noon till dark on Wednesdays and from 10 a.m. till dark, Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. The archery ranges are open all day, seven days a week.

Last week we mentioned the inclination of most fishermen to take old fishing adages for granted and follow them without any experimentation of their own.

One of the favorite of these adages, which has caused many fishermen to go home without fish, is to "knock off during the midday hours when the weather is hot."

The next time you are out on a dead calm blistering hot day and the fishing hasn't been too good and then they quit biting altogether about 10 a.m. try this.

Move over to the weed bed of the pond or go to another pond if the pond you have been fishing doesn't have one. Position your boat as far off-shore as the general outline of the bed permits and anchor the boat so you have complete control of the lure. For openers, snap a weedless silver spoon on your line and add a white pork strip or green frog as a trailer.

Now cast into the weed bed and let the lure sink to the bottom. Don't start your retrieve immediately but count to 10, then begin an extremely slow retrieve. After just two or three revolutions of the reel handle, stop and allow the spoon to sink to rest. Repeat this count, then again move the lure slowly. Repeat this procedure until you have retried the lure. This is the secret of fishing weed beds "weedlessly" and "productively." The silver spoon is one of the best weedless lures ever devised but it can't work miracles. If fishermen insist on trying to rip it through the weeds with a frantic retrieve they are going to get plenty of weeds and no fish.

If 30 or so casts fail to bring a lunker from his weedy den, dig out a dark colored spinner and fasten on a purple or black pork rind as a trailer. Then cast and retrieve in the way we've described above. Fishing weed beds requires a lot of patience but as we have said before the fisherman who keeps his line in the water the longest and uses a little imagination and ingenuity has the best chance to catch the most fish.

Of course we don't say the spoons will work every time. One time a lure will work wonders and the next time it seems to have no appeal to the fish at all.

If the spoons don't work we suggest a plastic worm of the flip tail variety. In the spring and fall these lures are usually very effective in this part of the country. But regardless of the lure that is used, to be effective, it must be fished slowly and often in the weed beds.

GOLF'S GREATEST SHOWMAN
Paul Hahn Demonstrates Trick Shot

Paul Hahn, Trick Shot Artist To Perform Here

Paul Hahn, the world's greatest trick shot golfer, will present his full one-hour show at the Fort Benning Country Club at 4:30 p.m. June 2.

The trick-shot artist, comedian and instructor will roll out his 90-pound golf bag of crazy clubs and proceed to astound and delight the audience with such zany shots as a "Triple Pendulum," a "Graduated Tee" and his famous "Double Action Series" in which he hits a dozen balls in succession with a club in each hand.

According to Hahn, all golf shots are hit with the same basic swing no matter what club is used. To back up his statement, he'll demonstrate clubs with rubber shafts made of garden hose, swivel jointed clubs and clubs with six-foot shafts.

He will hit the ball 210 to 250 yards straight down the fairway whether the tee is a yard high, or he's balanced on one foot, has one foot on a chair or is hitting three balls one after another as they swing before him. And while all of this is going on, Hahn keeps up a continual line of humorous dialogue.

In addition to the trick shots and humor, Paul Hahn also gives a serious golf clinic. His philosophy about the game is simple. He says, "good golf is easy . . . there's no reason to complicate a game which can be a great pleasure for all participants."

Sue Murphy Wins Tennis Tourney

Top seeded Sue Murphy beat Lou Kearns 6-2, 6-3, to retain her title as champion of the Women's Singles.

Other results are as follows:

MEN'S SINGLES — Ellison Withers over Kelly Murphy 6-1, 6-1; John Lewis over Ellison Withers 6-1, 6-0.

The fourth week of action in the Officers Club Spring Tennis Tournament here saw fourth seeded John Lewis upset second seeded Norm Chryst 6-3, 2-6, 7-5. This victory by John Lewis qualifies him for the finals of the Men's Singles.

MEN'S DOUBLES — Gordy Brynildsen and Al Matthews over Gill Stephenson and Carter Morey 6-3, 6-3.

MIXED DOUBLES — Jessie Wear and Scott Murrie over Anna Hines and Olive Hines 4-6, 6-1, 6-3; Leu Kearns, CLASS SINGLES — Oscar Hobby over Scott Gabriel 7-5, 7-5; Herh Jervis over Norm Piche 6-0, 6-1. Wojtwics Default.

Three Teams Tie In Fast Pitch

IN ATC Slowpitch Softball League action last week, Hq. and Hq. team No. 2 defeated Reception Station 6-0 to take a half game lead in the standings. M.Sgt William B. Quinne, finance operations NCO, hurled the shutout victory. Early league standings show a tight four team race to date:	HHC-2 3-0 HHC-1 2-0 7th Bn. 2-0 Reception Sta. 2-1 9th Bn. 0-2 6th Bn. 0-2 Spec. Trng. 0-2 Hq. Det. 2nd Bde. 0-2

The ATC fastpitch team holds a slight percentage point lead in the fastpitch standings although having had six games postponed.

Racing Around

Chavaga Will Go Sunday May 25

By Rob Bowers

Local competitors on the racing scene were wondering if it wouldn't be wiser to invest in speed boats last weekend as everything was rained out. There'll be plenty of action this weekend however if the weather breaks.

Chavaga says it's still a go Sunday for their second May ralley. The time-distance event takes off from Shakey's Pizza Parlor at 1:30. Registration is at 11:00. Anyone with the will to try is invited. There will be a $3.00 entry fee for members of SCCA and $4.00 for non-members.

Like everything else the super-stockers were rained out at Phenix dragway last weekend, but owner Jerry Coley says the stock eliminator match scheduled for this Sunday is still on. Also this weekend Phenix dragway adds a new dimension to its fare with motorcycle drags. Enthusiasts will be treated to the thrill of three bike classes in competition; stock, modified and drag. Time trials, grudge matches, and test runs will be held on Saturday. Bike matches will be included as a part of the bill on Sunday. The gate opens at noon Sunday. Eliminations begin at 3 P.M. Special admission for bike events is $2.00. Jerry has also announced a new come on for the military types who are such staunch supporter of local racing. Members of the armed services who appear in uniform will be admitted for a reduced rate of $1.00. Jerry also tells us that fans can soon look forward to night racing at the dragway.

Moving away from the local scene for a moment, the biggest event in racing is fast approaching, the Memorial Day Indianapolis 500. The turbines are gone this year — showing that even racing has its conservative trends — but you can bet that Andy Granatelli is not. Old Andy is back with a 318 Plymouth pushrod V-8 in his famed Lotuses. He has eight machines entered with super-stars Andretti, Rindt, and Hill pushing the pedal.

Parnelli Jones is running three Ford wedges with four wheel drive. Dan Gurney has entered his Olsonite Eagles which finished 1-2-4- in '68. Bobby Unser is out to win again with the same combination as last year — another eagle. And A. J. Foyt, looking for his fourth Indy win, is in the running with a Sheraton-Thompson special.

The time trials have begun and it won't be long before the cry rings out for real — just like in the commercial — "Gentlemen, start your engines." When that happens the eyes of the world will be on a very competitive race where anything can and does happen. We'll have a first hand report in June with photos.

Dependents Golf Tourney

The Fort Benning Officer's Club golf course will be the site of the Eighth Annual Military Dependents Golf Tournament June 2-5.

The tournament will be a 54-hole medal play event over two 18-hole courses. Competitors will be authorized a free practice round June 2. The tournament will be played June 3-5.

Over 200 dependents of active, retired and deceased members of the Army, Navy, Air Forces and Coast Guard with handicaps of 25 or less will participate.

The tournament was started by Zada Schriver, wife of retired Air Force Col. Gerald J. Schriver, at Andrews Air Force Base in 1962. The tournament began its rotation of military installations in 1964 under the chairmanship of L. W. Freas at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, Ohio. This is the first time Fort Benning has sponsored the event.

After seven successful years of growth the tournament has emerged as a topflight national sporting event. This year contestants represent installations located in 26 states.

Lois Sutton, current Ladies' Champion of Fort Benning, is the tournament chairman. Betty Bridgeford is tournament director. Both will play in the tournament.

Mrs. Sutton Wins Ladies Spring Golf Title

A punch party held by the Ft. Benning OWC Golf Group at the FBOOM Country Club was the recent scene of golf trophy awards for the Ladies' Spring Handicap Tournament. The ladies also chose this occasion to install their newly elected officers for 1969-70.

Mr. Howard Holbrook, the club professional, awarded the Spring Handicap Championship Trophy to Mrs. James Sutton. Runner-up in the championship flight was Mrs. Emmett Simmons; consolation trophy went to Mrs. Otis Bridgeford.

The first flight winner was Mrs. John Kearns; runner-up, Mrs. Robert Robbins; consolation, Mrs. Robert Fowler.

Second flight champion was Mrs. Richard L. Prillaman; runner-up, Mrs. Paul Mitchell; consolation, Mrs. Albert Ward.

In the third flight, the winner was Mrs. George Magner; runner-up, Mrs. Frank Langdon, with consolation trophy going to Mrs. Fred Keifer.

The nine-hole trophy was won by Mrs. Charles French.

Champion of the separate eighteen-hole Loser's Tournament was Mrs. Charles French.

Newly installed officers for the club include Mrs. Richard L. Prillaman, president; Mrs. Louis A. Harris, first vice president; Mrs. Joseph Goss, second vice president; and Mrs. Gerald Wilson, secretary-treasurer.

Bayonet's Synopsis Of Books

THE DISCIPLINE OF POWER by George W. Ball (1968)

An incisive examination from the vantage point of wide experience at high-policy levels, of U.S. foreign policy problems. The questions addressed include the background of the Common Market, the advantages of a united, "Third Force" Europe, relations between the U.S. and the U.S.S.R., and U.S. activities in Vietnam.

CHINA AFTER MAO by A. Doak Barnett (1967)

The Red Guards—largely teenage groups of Chinese terrorists — burst dramatically upon the scene in mid-August 1966 at a huge mass rally in Peking. The avowed aims of these mobs were to suppress dissidence against Mao and to elevate him to the status of a near-deity.

Barnett poses the question: Can the "thoughts of Mao" provide the answers to China's unsolved problems or will changing conditions make Maoism obsolete. He seeks some indication of the answers by examining the major problems and possible directions of change. He finds that, although those who are trying to insure that Mao's dogmas prevail after his death are now in the ascendency, they may be fighting a losing battle.

The competing forces that are sure to collide after Mao's death may ultimately compel the Peking regime to come to terms with reality and move in new directions toward more rational and moderate policies.

POLICY AND POWER: Two Centuries of American Foreign Relations by Rubi Bartlett (1963)

The history of American foreign policy, from the seeds of the Revolution through the Cuban crisis to the present, tracing the thinking of U.S. national leaders as the nation arose out of the century of isolation into the status of a world power.

POWER AND INTERNATIONAL RELATONS by Inis L. Claude (1962)

A study of the problem of the management of power in international relations; and an examination, comparison, and evaluation of the three leading theoretical approaches to such management: The balance of power system; collective security, as an alternative; and world government, as a monopoly of power.

THE OBLIGATIONS OF POWER: American Diplomacy in the Search for Peace by Harlan Cleveland (1966)

Written by a former Assistant Secretary of State for International Organization affairs and the present U.S. Ambassador to NATO, this book is an excellent review of and forecast of U.S. policy.

A short and very readable account of U.S. successes in the cold war emphasizes lessons for crisis management, means of maintaining peace, and the usefulness of development assistance.

TWENTIETH CENTURY CHINA by O. Edmund Clubb (1964)

A political history of China which seeks to demonstrate that present day Communist China is an evolutionary product of her past history rather than a revolutionary product of Marxism-Leninism.

The parallels discovered, between the policies and objectives of Mao Tse-tung's China of the 1960's and those of the earlier rulers, lend credence to the contention that the Chinese Communists are Chinese first and Communists only second.

Pet Show To Be Held Saturday

How do you pin a blue ribbon on an earthworm?

Miss Paula Gunther-Mohr, recreation intern with the Main Post Service Club, hopes to be able to avoid such amenities altogether in recognizing the "Oddest Pet" at the Sixth Annual Children's Pet Fair, Saturday afternoon May 24.

Undoubtedly, Miss Gunther-Mohr and her supervisor, Miss Madeline Parks, will have their hands more than full in handling the wide assortment of pets and their masters gathered under the roof of the Sightseeing Road Club.

The Fair, which will begin at 1400 in Bldg. 2784, is open to all post children under the age of 15. No age limit has been set on the pets.

First, second, and third prize ribbon awards and prizes will be presented to the winners categories ranging from "largest" to "smallest," and from "best groomed" to "best mascot".

Seen on display to augment the local menagerie will be minah birds, iguanas, boa constrictors, and possibly even a boa constrictor all owned by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Berger of the Pet's Own Shop, 2443 Wynn Rd. in Columbus.

Tornado Chess Tournament This Sunday

All military and civilian personnel are invited to participate in the Tornado Chess Tournament to be held Sunday, May 25. The tournament, co-sponsored by the Columbus Chess Club and the Main Post Service Club, will be held at the Service Club on Sightseeing Road, Bldg. 2784.

Registration will be held at 1000 hours, with the first round scheduled to commence at 1030.

Captain's Suggestion To Save Army Million Annually

Captain David H. Price, member of Co. A, 10th Bn., 1st Bde., ATC, recently received a cash award at Ft. Rucker for his suggestion which will save the Army an estimated $2,200,000 annually.

Son of Mrs. Ritcie C. Price of Athens, Ga., Capt. Price was presented $500 by Colonel M. H. Parson, assistant commandant of the Army Aviation School, during a recent ceremony at the post. The latest check, only a portion of the total award, is in addition to $1,000 he previously received.

A former member of the Department of Tactics at Ft. Rucker, Capt. Price's suggestion resulted in the development of a subcaliber training device, the M8C caliber .50 spotting rifle, for use in aviation gunnery training at the Aviation School and its element at Hunter Army Airfield, Ga.

The gunnery training involves some 150 students each year who fire 2.75-inch folding fin aerial rockets from UH-1 "Huey" helicopters. These students, each allowed 112 rockets to meet current qualification criteria at a cost of $88.14 per rocket, fire rockets costing a total of $1,212,892 annually.

Capt. Price's idea was to reduce this annual figure by using a subcaliber training device. He selected the caliber .50 spotting rifle, currently used with the 105-mm recoilless rifle. The spotting rifle, modified with an appropriate mounting device, is attached to the UH-1.

Instead of fabricating a separate mounting device, salvage XM117 rocket launchers were modified to accept the spotting rifle. Capt. Price returned salvaged items to use in addition to saving wear on the launcher tubes which fire the 2.75-inch folding fin aerial rocket. The latter launchers normally are discarded after many firings have caused the launcher tubes to be a safety hazard.

The spotter-tracer ammunition, costing $1.07 a round, and the gun, Capt. Price learned, both are available through normal supply channels. In addition, the same number of subcaliber rounds as rockets could be used, resulting in a savings of $67.07 on each rocket that was normally fired.

However, the rockets should not be completely eliminated during training, Capt. Price suggests, because the effect of the relative wind on the two projectiles is slightly different and the two projectiles have a slight difference in velocity. He suggested that some 28 rockets be fired during the final phases of rocket training so the student becomes familiar with its effects.

WBGT Used To Prevent Heat Injury

By Robert Mast

Summer is around the corner, accompanied by some very warm weather. Last year 10 heat casualties occurred at Fort Benning including the death of one basic trainee.

To avoid an excess of heat casualties, the post uses a Wet Bulb Globe Temperature (WBGT) Index, published by The Infantry Center Directorate of Helligence as a guide to heat dangers. The index is based upon four different readings, each indicating potential dangers of weather. These four categories of danger are reported periodically. In determining the extensiveness of training at Fort Benning, unit commanders are urged to follow these reports and plan training accordingly.

Category I comes into effect when the index exceeds 80 degrees. This indicates that soldiers not conditioned to the heat should be acclimatized to working and training in warm weather for a period of several weeks; but this acclimatization does not totally protect against the ill effects of heat.

When the Index reaches 85 degrees, Category II comes into effect. Heavy work and training for unseasoned troops should be limited intensity and time. Acclimatized soldiers may train and work on a reduced scale. Classes should be held indoors.

Category III is reached when the index goes over 88 degrees. The time seasoned troops may work or train is limited to six hours a day.

When the index reaches 90 degrees, Category IV prohibits all outdoor work and training. Normal duty may be resumed when the heart alert has been cancelled.

Early Out Policies Outlined

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Section VIII, AR 635-200 details Army policy on early separation to attend civilian schools.

Headquarters, Department of the Army, has received a number of requests for attendance at schools which do not meet the requirements described in the policy.

In order for a school to qualify, the institution must be listed in the Education Directory, Part III, published by the Office of Education, U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare. Among other qualifications, the school must offer courses leading to an associate or higher degree.

Unit commanders and personnel officers should understand completely the requirements for release to attend school to avoid disappointment, possible loss of entrance fees paid by the soldier and delay in his returning to civilian life.

Brigade Set To Conduct New League

The 197th Infantry Brigade Special Services will conduct a slow-pitch softball league beginning in early June.

Tentative plans are to have inter-brigade competition culminating with a playoff in August to determine the brigade champion and representative for the USAIC tournament.

Playing fields to be used for competition this year will be Essebagger Field, 2-10th Arty field and the 1-58th athletic field at Harmony Church.

Games will be played week nights after duty hours.

8 Receive Awards At ATC

Eight Army Training Center personnel have been presented incentive awards by Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, USATCI commanding general.

Mrs. Jennie L. McRae, secretary to USATCI deputy command and chief of staff, and Mrs. Betty G. Parker, management technician, USATCI Management and Budget Office, received outstanding performance awards with quality step increase.

Cash awards were made to Mr. George E. Wells, publications supply clerk in the AG Section, and Mr. Verney Jones, cook in the 10th Bn., both of whom received outstanding and sustained superior performance citations.

Mrs. Kay H. Tillman, clerk-typist in the Judge Advocate office, was awarded an outstanding performance rating.

Mrs. Betty W. Kemper, writer in the Informtion Office, received a $25.00 suggestion award for consolidating congratulatory correspondence to families of award winners.

Letters of appreciation for adopted suggestions were presented to Capt. Charles F. Evans, Hq. Det., and SSM Roy E.

SERVING FT. BENNING, GEORGIA, HOME OF THE U. S. ARMY INFANTRY

VOLUME XV — MAY, 1969 — NO. 171

Copyright 1969 W. R. BRADBURY CO. 405 Lexington Avenue, N. Y., N. Y. 10017 — Printed in U. S. A. 16

INDIANAPOLIS—The defending champ is established as the favorite in most contests. But in auto racing, that ain't necessarily so. A Gremlin in the gas line or a Hoodoo under the hood can cheat the best of drivers out of a checkered flag.

The Indy 500 had been operating from 1911 until 1940 before anybody won twice in a row. Wilbur Shaw was the victor in '39 and '40. Back-to-back winners have been rare since.

Bobby Unser is current defending champ and he has the guts, daring and skill to repeat. (Ed. Note: As we go to press the 1969 Indy 500 hasn't taken place. We can now all second-guess Rod Reed if that should be the case.) He won last Memorial Day with a record speed of 152.882 mph, despite the fact that two gears were broken, and that he had to steer with one blistered hand and hold the car in gear with the other. And in the back of his mind was the gloomy awareness that his kid brother, Al, had cracked up against the fence in the 41st lap. (Al wasn't seriously hurt.)

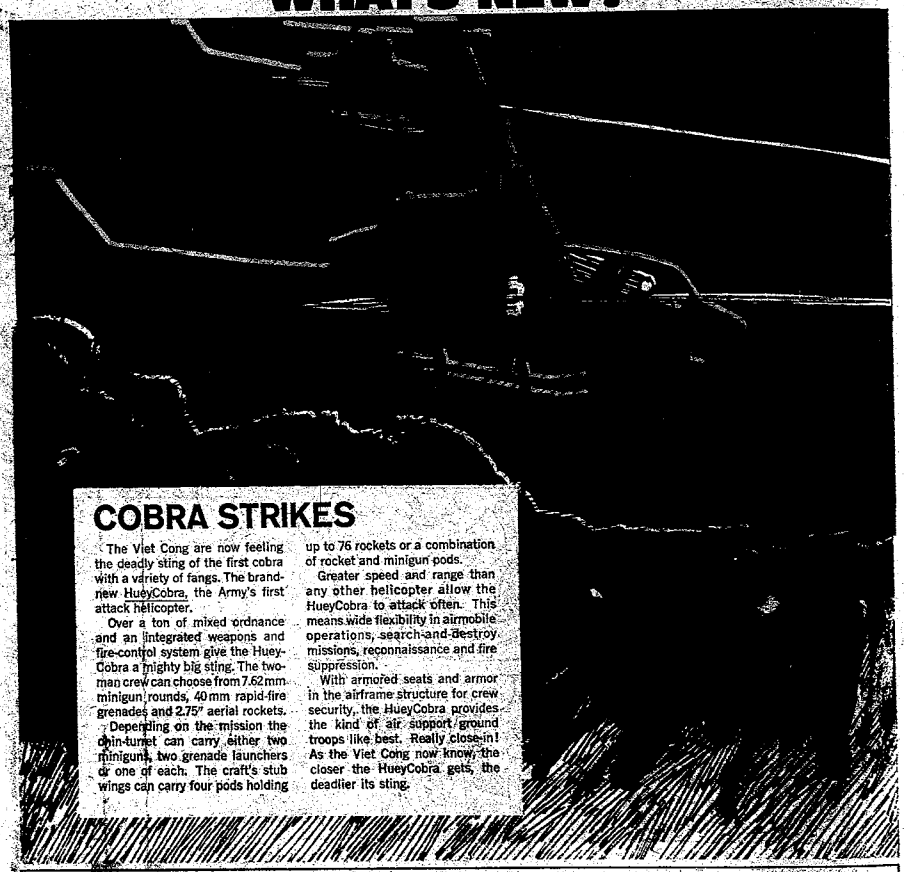
WHAT'S NEW?



COBRA STRIKES

The Viet Cong are now feeling the deadly sting of the first cobra with a variety of fangs. The brand-new HueyCobra, the Army's first attack helicopter.

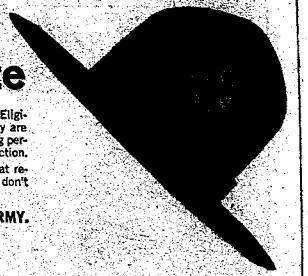
Over a ton of mixed ordnance and an integrated weapons and fire-control system give the HueyCobra a mighty big sting. The two-man crew can choose from 7.62 mm minigun rounds, 40 mm rapid-fire grenades and 2.75" aerial rockets.

Depending on the mission the chin-turret can carry either two miniguns, two grenade launchers or one of each. The craft's stub wings can carry four pods holding up to 76 rockets or a combination of rocket and minigun pods.

Greater speed and range than any other helicopter allow the HueyCobra to attack often. This means wide flexibility in airmobile operations, search-and-destroy missions, reconnaissance and fire suppression.

With armored seats and armor in the airframe structure for crew security, the HueyCobra provides the kind of air support ground troops like best. Really close-in! As the Viet Cong now know, the closer the HueyCobra gets, the deadlier its sting.

Try the DS Option on for size



The Reenlistment Option for Drill Sergeant Duty offers you an 18-month stabilized tour at a stateside training center of your choice. Qualified NCO's and Specialists in Grades E-4 through E-7 can reenlist for this duty from any unaccompanied short-tour area. However, you must pick this option at least 30 days before you finish your overseas tour.

Every month will see the best of the Army's Drill Sergeants in Grades E-5 and E-6 promoted. Without regard to time-in-grade or time-in-service. Eligibility lists for this fast promotion opportunity are made up of DS's with four months outstanding performance. Performance is the basis for selection.

Ask your Career Counselor about this great reenlistment option. It's an opportunity you don't want to overlook.

Your future, your decision . . . stay ARMY.

This watch tells you what the moon will be like tonight.

In addition to what day, it is. What date it is. What month it is. And what time it is accurately and dependably, year after year. It's self-winding; ten karat gold-filled top, stainless steel back case. Black or a white dial, with raised markers and a matching band. Shock-resistant precision movement, seventeen jewels, lifetime unbreakable mainspring and balance staff. An exceptional watch for moon watchers, sun worshippers, or anybody who'd like to know the time of day. #1737, $125.

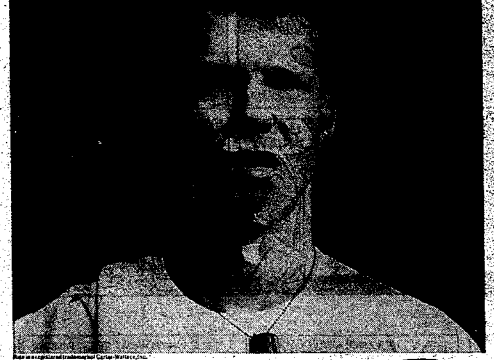
When you remove your beard you shouldn't remove your face.



Rise is a registered trademark of Carter-Wallace, Inc.

Today's super-duper razor blades are meant to cut whiskers. They can also do a job on the skin underneath the whiskers.

To help keep you from butchering yourself—this is the reason for Rise.® And why we put a thin lubricating film into it that gets between your blade and your skin.

Put Rise on your face before you shave, and maybe you won't have to put toilet paper on your face after it.

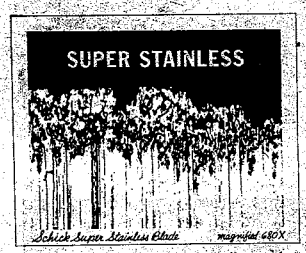
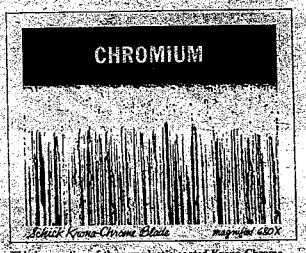
1968 Schick Safety Razor Co., Division of Eversharp, Inc., Culver City, Calif.

Schick chromium out-shaves, outlasts any super stainless

(even our own)



Super stainless is not complete protection against corrosion. This, for instance, is a corroded section of a plastic-coated Schick super stainless edge after five shaves, magnified 680 times. It's rough, pitted, corroded.



This is a section of the new plastic-coated Krona-Chrome chromium edge after five shaves, magnified 680 times. As you can see, chromium more effectively resists blade breakdown due to corrosion.

Only Schick Krona-Chrome has the chromium edge.

Spare-Time Study

by Greg Fraser

IF YOU ARE INTERESTED in learning new skills, improving skills you already possess or in advancing your education for the future, there are ways to do so painlessly and speedily in your spare time—while you are in the service. One of them is the correspondence school.

Often the butt of jokes, this convenient way to learn is still one of the most popular in the United States. Last year, for instance, nearly one million people, with every kind of background imaginable, enrolled in this type of school—more than in all of our colleges and universities combined. In fact, many distinguished Americans who have reached the pinnacles of success are graduates of these schools. Among them are Arthur Godfrey; Walter Chrysler, founder of the Chrysler Corporation; Harry Golden, author and columnist; Senator McClellan of Arkansas; Eddie Rickenbacker; Charles Wilson, former head of General Motors; and Senator Stuart Symington, to name but a few.

They, like thousands of others, didn't bemoan the fact that the system had snatched opportunity from their grasp or that the times were such that success could not be attained. They made their own opportunity and became successful in spite of the obstacles in their way. You can do the same.

Perhaps you quit school too soon with too little. Perhaps you couldn't afford college or couldn't go on for other cogent reasons. Now, while you are in the service, is the time to rectify this state of affairs.

Aim as high as you wish. Right this minute, some 200,00 students are enrolled in spare-time study courses such as law, accounting, writing, art, engineering, architecture, and college prep programs.

The rest of those million enrollers involved in correspondence school courses are learning technical trades such as TV repair, photography, drafting, computer programming, air conditioning, refrigeration and myriad other subjects.

Of course, just taking spare-time courses doesn't guarantee instant success. What your chances are and what you achieve are as much up to you as to the skills and learning you gain.

If you start a course, stick with it. Establish a steady routine and exercise self-discipline. Spare-time study is not for the fellow who is looking for the easy way out, nor is it for the type of guy who likes to dabble. If you're like them, you'll never make it down the home stretch.

Spare-time study is for the kind of fellow who really wants to get ahead and who is genuinely concerned with his future—the kind of fellow who won't quit when the going gets tough or things become a little dull. If you are like that, you can really do yourself some good via the correspondence school course. Spare-time study does pay off. ★

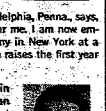
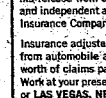
TO TRAIN AS CLAIMS ADJUSTERS

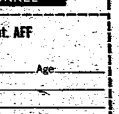
Three recent I.A.S. graduates representing the three major branches of military service found new careers in the exciting, challenging and well paying field of insurance claim adjusting...



JOHN P. TROMBA, of Torrington, Connecticut enlisted in the U.S. Army in 1957, and as a Staff Sergeant in 1966 attended Officer Candidate School. While stationed at Ft. Bliss, Texas, Cpt. John Tromba began his I.A.S. training and upon the expiration of his term of military service John accepted a position as a claims adjuster with the U.S. Fidelity and Guaranty Insurance Company in California.



JOSEPH TALLARICO, former Senior Chief Petty Officer, USN, of Philadelphia, Penna., says, "INSURANCE ADJUSTERS SCHOOLS was a great recommendation for me. I am now employed as a Physical Damage Specialist by a large insurance company in New York at a good salary and a 69 Ford for my own use. I can look forward to three raises the first year and more frequent raises during the next three year period."



LOWELL D. WILSON enlisted in the U.S. Air Force shortly after finishing high school in Indiana at age 17. Almost 7 years later Lowell decided to return to civilian life and began his I.A.S. training. Thanks to "Project Transition" Sgt. Wilson was assigned to the Accident Investigation Section at Homestead Air Force Base which gave him some excellent experience while still on active duty. Lowell also attended Resident Training and even before his release from active duty he had received many job offers from insurance companies and independent adjusting firms. Mr. Wilson is now a claim adjuster with Employers Mutual Insurance Company in Nebraska.

Insurance adjusters and investigators are badly needed due to the tremendous increase of claims resulting from automobile accidents, fires, burglaries, riots, storms, and industrial accidents. Over 50 million dollars worth of claims paid each day. Top money can be earned in this exciting, fast moving field, full or part time. Work at your present job and train at home, then attend resident training for two weeks at MIAMI BEACH, FLA. or LAS VEGAS, NEVADA. Excellent employment assistance. For details without obligation, fill out coupon and mail today.

Solution: (1) The glass has disappeared on the label on the wine bottle. (2) One pet less in the pocket of the scholar. (3) One star less on the cookbook. (4) The cork on the bottle, right of the blackboard, has been modified. (5) The metal bolt on the big horizontal tube, right of the blackboard, has been modified. (6) The vertical tube on extreme left has disappeared. (7) There is an indication of liquid in the vase at left of blackboard.

KICKING IT AROUND

with Buck O'Brien

GOT ANY NOMINATIONS for the Hall of Fame? No—not the one with Babe Ruth, Ted Williams, Casey Stengel and those other baseball cats.

We're referring to the Hall of Fame for Great Americans. (No offense, Casey.) This Hall was organized in 1900 to honor citizens who "made significant contributions to the nation's history and culture." Voting is held every five years, so in 1970, some new names should be added to the present 93, perhaps bringing membership to a round hundred.

As to be expected, there are a good many presidents on the honor roll, starting with Washington. Elected right along with George was Gilbert Stuart, who kept painting his portraits; Washington Irving, who wrote his biography; and Booker T. Washington, who wrote "Up From Slavery."

Lincoln and Grant are charter members and so is the gallant general who fought on the other side, Robert E. Lee.

Many inventors are listed, but it took some of them a little while to get in. Robert Fulton, Eli Whitney and Samuel F. B. Morse made it in 1900, but Alexander Graham Bell didn't crack the portals until 1950.

One oddity is that two flyboys you might have considered as an entry were ten years apart in election. Wilbur Wright was named in 1955, brother Orville in 1965.

Mark Twain wrote some scathing and hilarious criticisms of James Fenimore Cooper. In dissecting "Deerslayer," Mark proved, at least to his own satisfaction, that "Of nineteen rules governing literary art in the domain of romantic fiction, Cooper violates eighteen." Twain thought James Fenimore was a pretty punk writer.

So Cooper was balloted into the hall in 1910, Twain had to wait until 1920.

Physical location of the Hall of Fame is an open-air colonnade on the New York University campus, where bronze busts of the great Americans are displayed. A College of Electors, made up of more than 100 eminent men and women representing each State of the Union does the balloting to decide who gets in. No more than seven may now be elected at one session.

Fighting men are represented in the Hall of Fame by Naval officers John Paul Jones, David Glasgow Farragut and Matthew Fontaine Maury. And Thomas J. ("Stonewall") Jackson is there, presumably glowering at William Tecumseh Sherman. And Teddy Roosevelt, the old rough rider, is in, too.

The Hall is by no means a Men-Only club. Among the ladies are Harriet Beecher Stowe, who wrote "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and Susan B. Anthony, who fought for women's right to vote.

But if you're planning to send in a vote for your favorite female, hold on. If she's alive, she's not eligible. A candidate (male, too) must have been dead for at least 25 years.

It would be healthier for her just to get on the list of The Ten Worst-Dressed Women. ★

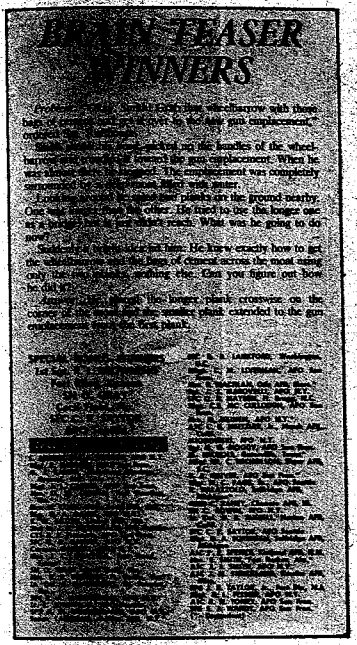
BRAIN TEASER WINNERS



No plug. No cord. No socket. And no beard.

The Cordless 20B packs its own power. Just turn it on and your beard is gone for the day. Four inexpensive little penlight batteries make this happen every day for up to 30 days. Shaving's as easy as that. You never have to plug it in. Flip-top cleaning and a handy travel case with built-in mirror make it convenient, too.

Another great shaver is our Flip-Top 20 (pictured below). It gives you the same close, fast, comfortable shave, with a cord.

But the greatest thing about both of these shavers is that you can afford them. So with or without a cord, you haven't a thing to lose. Except your beard.

Equally gutsy, daring and skillful are many other gas jockeys likely to be in the "500," including such as A. J. Foyt, Mario Andretti, Graham Hill, Dan Gurney and Joe Leonard. Whoever finishes first will have to have a car that stays in one piece.

The Unser boys come from a racing family that's had its share of tragedy. An uncle and an older brother, Jerry, were killed in racing crashes, the latter at Indy where Bobby was later to capture the big prize.

A couple of other young men drive fearlessly on the same oval that took the lives of their fathers. Billy Vukovitch Jr., finished seventh in the 1968 race and was named Rookie of the Year. His dad had won the "500" twice in a row and was trying for Number Three when a multiple car accident drove him into the wall and snuffed out his life.

Some years ago Tony Bettenhausen, a top driver of his time, got killed in a practice turn when the car he was trying out malfunctioned. His lead-footed son, Gary, was also an Indy Rookie in '68 and won enough sprint, midget and other races to fetch home $62,901.

Though the race won't be held until May 30, for a month beforehand there'll be plenty of action, excitement and danger at "the old brickyard," as the Indy race plant is called, while practice and qualifying runs are made at heart-stopping speeds. And on the big day whoever gets a kiss from the beautiful Trophy Queen will be somebody who has been first embraced by Lady Luck.

Rangers Receive Colors of Merrill's Marauders Unit

By Wade Roop

EGLIN AFB, Fla. — Fourteen members of the original Merrill's Marauders of World War II fame were on hand at the Florida Ranger Camp Tuesday as colors of the old 75th Infantry were presented to the Ranger Department of the Army Infantry School.

Accepting the colors from a member of the original command was Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, commandant of the Infantry School at Fort Benning.

The ceremony was a combined colors presentation and graduation for Ranger Class 12-69 at the Florida Ranger Camp. Addressing the newly graduated class and speaking on behalf of the Marauders Association was Mr. David Hurwitt, secretary of the association from Long Island, New York.

Same Spirit

'Twenty-five years ago we Marauders had to learn by the trial and error method in the mountains of Burma," Hurwitt told the 103 graduates, visitors and officers present. 'The same spirit of determination and dedication to walk another mile, climb another hill and fight another fight indicative of the Marauders exists today in this inspiring young group of soldiers," he concluded.

"We have been impressed by the training here," Hurwitt said of the previous day's tour by the visiting group of jungle fighting training conducted at the Florida camp. He went on to say, "The insurance this training provides is invaluable and instills an intense sense of leadership in men."

Capt. Andrew J. O'Brien, adjutant of the Florida camp, gave a brief history of the distinguished unit

Ceremonies To Greet Maj. Gen. Forsythe

Maj. Gen. George I. Forsythe, new commanding general of the U.S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning, will be welcomed to the post at 4:30 p.m. Monday afternoon with ceremonies on York Field.

He will be saluted by an honor guard from Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry and with a 15-gun salute from Battery A, 2nd Battalion, 10th Artillery.

General Forsythe will take command from Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis who has been commanding general since Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr. departed for Vietnam.

General Forsythe comes to Fort Benning from the Republic of Vietnam where he commanded the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile).

He served here from March, 1965, to March, 1966, as assistant commandant of the U.S. Army Infantry School.

A 1939 graduate of the University of Montana, General Forsythe received Army training in the Reserve Officers Training Corps.

He received his commission as a second lieutenant in the Regular Army while serving on Kodiak Island, Alaska.

During World War II he was assigned to Headquarters, XIX Corps in England where he participated in the planning and conduct of the D-Day invasion of Europe in June, 1944.

He later served as military assistant to the assistant secretary of the Army, White House liaison officer for the chief of

Two Memorial Day Ceremonies Will Commemorate War Dead

The public is invited to attend two Memorial Day ceremonies, to be held here today, commemorating the nation's war dead.

One at 10:30 a.m. will be held at the Post Cemetery. Following this, another ceremony will be held at 11:45 a.m. at the flagstaff in front of Infantry Hall.

The invocation at the cemetery will be given by Chaplain (Major) Conrad N. Walker, administrative chaplain, U. S. Army Infantry Center, Staff Chaplain's Office.

Also participating will be Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, commanding general of the U. S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning, and Mayor J. R. Allen of Columbus.

General Davis and Mayor Allen will place a wreath on the grave of an unknown soldier after they complete their remarks. A firing squad from Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade will follow with a three-volley rifle salute. The ceremony will end with taps, a benediction and the "National Anthem" played by the 283rd Army band.

The American flag will fly at half-staff in front of Infantry Hall until noon.

In a ceremony beginning at 11:45 a.m., the flag will be raised to full staff. General Davis will attend and speak at the ceremony.

The band will play "Ruffles and Flourishes," "The General's March" and the "National Anthem." Battery A, 2nd Battalion, 10th Artillery will fire a 21-gun salute.

Parent Group

In the new activation, the 75th Infantry has been designated parent organization for all Department of Army authorized Long Range Patrol units and redesignated them as Long Range Reconnaissance Ranger Department of the Infantry school has been designated as custodian of the regimental colors and trophies.

"It is with great honor the Ranger Department becomes associated with and accepts the colors of this proud and distinguished unit," he said on behalf of the department.

During the ceremony the color guard presented the unit colors to Command Sgt. Maj. W. T. Mixon, of the Ranger Department, who presented the colors to the president of the Marauders Association. Mr. Phillip Piazza, Stratford, Conn., made the presentation to Gen. Davis who accepted the honor for the Infantry School. He presented the colors then to Col. Y. Y. Phillips, director of the Ranger Department.

Jungle Warfare

Piazza, now a Connecticut businessman, is a graduate of the early Infantry Officer Candidate School program at Fort Benning in 1941. He and four others were in charge of setting up early jungle warfare training in Trinidad.

He noted that the early training was remarkably similar to the training conducted by Rangers today. Another member of the early training staff present at the ceremony Tuesday was Dr. Lewis Kolodny of Baltimore, Md., who was medical officer of the original group at Trinidad. He remarked that at that time stream crossing and night patrolling problems were conducted much on the same basis as today.

Others attending the ceremony, who were members of the original Marauders unit commanded by Brig. Gen. Frank D. Merrill, were: Jack Benfield, treasurer of the association, York, S. C.; Sam Rapisarda, Cleveland, Ohio; Willie Marton, Virginia Beach, Va.

Student Honored

Edward Mell, Melford, Pa.; George Richardson, Edison, N.J.; Anthony colombo, New York; Victor DeAngelo, Bridgeport, Conn.; George Rose, Portsmouth, Va.; Joe Ganci, Roselle, N.J.; Thomas Martini, Long Beach, N. Y. and Ray Lyons, Ridgemount, N.J.

Representing the Infantry School and Ranger Department in addition to Gen. Davis and Col. Phillips were: LTC. O. J. Shalkashvilli, commander of the Mountain Ranger Camp; Maj. C. S. Getz, commander of the Florida camp.

Honored during the graduation ceremony was 2nd Lt. R. L. Richardson, student company commander and honor graduate of the class.

What are the responsibilities of the Systems Command within the Air Force and how does it interface with the other commands throughout the Air Force?

The Air Force Systems Command is an integral part of the Air Force. The command's job and responsibility are to furnish combat elements of the Air Force new equipment or modified equipment.

How is this job of support accomplished?

The means for the Systems Command's plan of support is known as the Air Force Plan and that is a broad overall document that designates the responsibilities of the various branches as to the defense of the country.

Is there any way that the various commands can have a say in the development of new modified equipment?

Yes. There is a liaison office at the Systems Command Hqs. composed of representatives from all the major commands in the Air Force.

Are the troops in Vietnam given any direct support by the Systems Command?

Yes. Special arrangements have been made to support the troops in Vietnam. There is a Liaison Officer attached to the 7th Air Force Headquarters in Saigon. This officer or members of his staff are in direct communications via teletype or telephone hourly to modify equipment or respond to the needs of the troops in the field.

MEDAL OF HONOR

When was the first Medal of Honor presented?

1863.

Do Systems Command scientists and civilian aircraft engineers maintain close liaison?

There is definitely a close liaison with commercial companies and the Air Force for quite often they deal with the same aircraft companies. In fact there is a continuing transfusion of information so to speak. What is developed for military purposes very often has a commercial derivative or visa versa.

G. I. BILL

If I work while attending college on the G.I. Bill, will the amount of money I earn be deducted from my VA allowance?

No. The amount of education allowance paid by the VA is determined only by the amount of schooling you take and number of dependents you have.

ROTC PROGRAM

Is the ROTC program gaining or losing strength in the wake of the current controversy about it on the college campuses?

According to an article in the April issue of Army Digest some critics of ROTC point to overall reduced enrollment as a sign the ROTC program is fading away. A look at the figure indicates this just isn't true. Between 1965 and 1968 total enrollment did decrease from 157,000 to 150,000.

But at the ame time enrollment in the Advanced Course of the production end increased from 25,320 to more than 37,000.

Diminished enrollment in the basic course was to be expected as the trend toward elective ROTC programs becomes more prevalent. Previously enrollment was required at Land Grant Colleges.

Some schools have exercised their options for elective programs — and once a school does so, enrollment in the basic course usually declines. Ten years ago, two thirds of the senior ROTC units had compulsory programs; this year two-thirds have elective programs. The decision is the institutions.

The Department of the Army does not favor one program over the other.

With 268 units in being, there are at least 268 variables, reflecting each institution's history, philosphy, and background of its student body.

No pat solution to individual campus problems can be arrived at by broad policy directed at institutions. Accordingly, the Army moves to meet the challenges at each campus as they apply in that particular camp situation — in concert with institutional officials.

Career Counselor's Corner

Enlistment VRB Can Mean a Start in Life

The term VRB, what does it mean, and who does it apply to? It means a lot of money and it can apply to you!

Many soldiers were leaving the Army simply because they could make more money on the outside with the valuable skill which the Army had taught them. Training new men to fill the vacant jobs was costing the Army quite a bit. Simple logic dictated that some of the money which it would take to train a new man should be given to a man who reenlisted. That was how VRB came about.

For staying in the Army one more term, a man can get enough of a bonus to get a good start in life. If he is married it can be the nest egg which is needed to start married life.

You do not have to stay in the Army for twenty years in order to get this VRB. Four to six years is all it takes. During this time a man should be making more money than he was during the first term, and therefore, would not have to dip into his bonus just to meet normal living expenses. He can save a good portion of this bonus if he chooses to and add to it from his regular pay so when his new ETS rolls around, he will be financially equipped to start into civilian life without having to accept the first job which is offered to him.

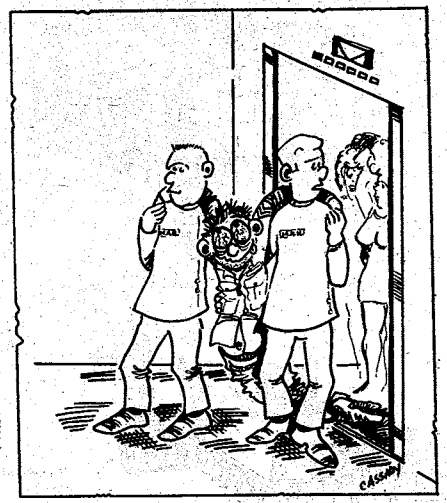
Enough of this vague talk. It is time for some concrete examples to give you an estimate of how much you are worth. If you are an Infantryman, your VRB is 2. This means that you take your regular reenlistment bonus and multiply it by 2. If you are a Specialist Four, and plan to stay for six years, your regular reenlistment bonus is $1,141.00; with your VRB of 2, your additional bonus is $2,282.00 which means that you would get a total bonus of $3,423.00 for staying Infantry. If you are a five ton truck driver, your VRB is 3. If you plan to stay for six years and you are a Specialist Five, your total bonus is $5,528.00. As you can see VRB is figured on the VRB multiplier, present pay grade, and length of service you plan to stay for.

VRB does not knock out all of your other reenlistment options. You may choose to go airborne or you may choose an overseas area to be assigned in and still get your VRB. As long as you stay in your primary MOS you can receive your VRB.

The Army has gone one step further. Since your reenlistment bonus must be counted as income, it is subject to income tax. If you were to draw your entire VRB as a lump sum, this would make your income taxes extremely high for the year.

Let's get back to the Infantryman who has that bonus of $3,423.00, here is how he collects his money to avoid a bad tax break —he picks up his regular reenlistment bonus the day on which he reenlists plus one sixth of his VRB, a total of $1,421.00 minus taxes. Then each year of the term of reenlistment, the man would get $380.00 on the anniversary of his reenlistment. If you decide that this annual business is not for you, you can then apply for the lump sum payment of your VRB.

In order to find out much more about VRB and how much you are worth because of your skill, visit your Career Counselor. He is the expert, and will be able to figure out exactly how much you can get by staying in the Army one more time!



THE CURIOUS THING IS THAT EVERYTIME THIS SAME GUY ENDS UP STUCK IN THE ELEVATOR WITH THE GOOD LOOKING SECRETARIES

Says Secretary of the Army--Part II

Safeguard deployment necessary

Remarks by Stanley R. Resor, Secretary of the Army before Union League Club's Public Affairs Luncheon in New York City, New York.

The Soviets also have the capacity to absorb a first strike by our nuclear forces and in retaliation inflict destruction on the United States sufficient to end our existence as a nation. I am sure that they believe it vital to their national interests to retain at least that capability.

What I have described is mutual assured destruction, the doctrine which has been the basis of our deterrence since the Soviets first deployed large numbers of inter-continental ballistic missiles.

None of us prefers to see the world this way. But it is the world we live in. In the absence of another way to offset the Soviet threat and to provide the nation a means to ensure its survival, reliance on retaliation as our deterrent has been affirmed by every President since General Eisenhower. And in all likelihood we will have to continue to rely on our assured destruction as our deterrent until, either by agreement or by parallel action, we and the Soviets move to some other basis for our security.

Because deterrence is the foundation of the very survival of our nation today, we must make every reasonable effort to protect our retaliatory forces. And it is because we see certain trends in Soviet deployments and activities in the development of nuclear forces — trends which if continued could lead to substantial threats to our nuclear forces — that we have taken the steps we are taking in the deployment of the SAFEGUARD ballistic missile defense system.

Let me describe for you, insofar as time and security requirements permit, what it is that has caused us to take these steps. First is the continuing deployment of the Soviet SS-9 intercontinental ballistic missile. The SS-9 can carry a warhead with a yield of up to 25 megatons that is powerful enough so that if it hits within about one mile of a MINUTEMAN silo that missile is very likely to be rendered useless if not destroyed.

One SS-9 can also carry three separate smaller warheads of about 5 megatons each. These would have to impact within about one-half of a mile of a silo to be effective. There are no insuperable technical barriers to achieving that accuracy, and if it is achieved, the threat to our MINUTEMAN force would grow rapidly with the continued deployment of the SS-9. We have seen as recently as two weeks ago evidence of Soviet testing the SS-9 with multiple warheads.

IOAC VIP Luncheon Features 'Arriba, Arriba, Fiesta'

"Arriba, Arriba, Fiesta" was the theme of the program given by the ladies of IOAC 3-69 during their VIP luncheon at the MOOM Supper Club.

Mrs. Twila Jackson, wife of the student company commander, welcomed and introduced the honored guests. The guests included: Mrs. Davis, wife of Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, commanding general, USAIC; Mrs. Berry, wife of Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, asst. commandant, USAIC; Mrs. Acuff, wife of Col. Earl C. Acuff, deputy asst. commandant, USAIC.

Mrs. Hollis, wife of Col. Joel M. Hollis, director of Weapons Dept.; Mrs. Marlowe, wife of Col. Lon D. Marlowe, wife of Lon D. Marlowe Jr. commanding officer, TSB; Mrs. Barraclough, wife of Col. Donald F. Barraclough, director of the Ground Mobility Dept.; Mrs. Engle, wife of Lt. Col. Marshall G. Engle, senior faculty advisor, Mrs. Munday, wife of Lt. Col. William Mundy, commanding officer, 2nd Stu. Bn., and Mrs. Lawrence, wife of Capt. Andrew B. Lawrence, commanding Officer, 27th Co.

A meal of both Spanish and Mexican food preceded the program. The ladies enjoyed a dinner of salads, tamales, enchiladas, fiesta freeze and coffee and tea.

The program was started by a Tequila dance performed by Mrs. Mona Counts and Mrs. Gwen Brownlee. A Mexican pantomime and dance was presented by Mrs. Sharon Harmon, Mrs. Margie King and Mrs. Betty Tanner.

A bull-fight skit, written by Mrs. Joan McKenzie, was held in the center stage area. Serving as matadors were Mrs. Betty Jackson, Mrs. Joyce Gross and Mrs. Joan McKenzie. The matadors' assistants were Mrs. Millie Arzate and Mrs. Jeanette Griffith.

During the skit, the matador dedicated the fight to Mrs. Twila Jackson, wife of the class company commander. A gift was presented to her in thanks for all her efforts and help that she had given to the class.

The last act, a Mexican hat dance, was performed by Mrs. Carolyn Derrah, Mrs. JoAnne Barton, Mrs. Jackie Blackwell, Mrs. Gwen Brownlee, Mrs. Ann Wilson, Mrs. Hilda Castro, Mrs. Jean Asselin and Mrs. Mona Counts.

Fond 'Sayonara' Luncheon Held for Wife Of Departing Training Center Chief of Staff

The Army Training Center officers wives luncheon at the Supper Club was a fond "sayonara" to Mrs. Galen C. Morey, wife of the ATC chief of staff, who will accompany her husband to his assignment in Japan.

In addition to the traditional Training Center charm, Mrs. Morey was presented a silver chafing dish by Mrs. Oscar E. Davis, wife of ATC's commanding general.

The oriental theme was established through table arrangements featuring authentic Japanese dolls loaned from the collection of Chaplain (LTC) N. A. Russo, Goddess of Mercy figurines and a matching lotus bowl with an oriental floral arrangement centering the head table were loaned by Mrs. Herbert G. Peabody.

Mrs Robert Noell and Mrs. Ralph McDurmont from a local weight reducing establishment presented a demonstration of the equipment and exercises used in their weight-control program.

The luncheon hostesses were wives of the Operations and Training staff section and the Reception Station, coordinated by Mrs. Edward E. Betts and Mrs. Archie Stith.

Special guests attending were Mrs. Wilmer O'Farrell, Mrs. Jennie McRae, Mrs. Alwin Verboon, Mrs. Reuben Duncan, Mrs. Mike Huffman and Mrs. John Vollentine.

First Brigade newcomers introduced by Mrs. Richard H. Maeder were Mrs. Ken Latta, Mrs. Ronald Thomley, Mrs. Steven Petersen and Mrs. Michael Thoma.

Mrs. Francisco J. Ramos introduced the new arrivals to the 2nd Brigade: Mrs. Ralph Shaw, Mrs. John Adams and Mrs. John Parker.

Headquarters newcomers introduced by Mrs. Peabody were Mrs. Daniel Allen, Mrs. Douglas Rogers, Mrs. Theodore Rath and Mrs. Oliver Brin.

Training Center charms were presented to departing members: Mrs. Jack Hall, Mrs. Arthur Luchsinger, Mrs. David Price, Mrs. David May, Mrs. James Turner, Mrs. Robert Fraley, Mrs. Jimmy Lewis, Mrs. William Hess, Mrs. Carl Freeman, Mrs. Duncan and Mrs. Morey.

Mrs. Dunaway Addresses NCO Wives Luncheon

The Fort Benning NCO Wives Club honored Mrs. George Dunaway, wife of SMA George Dunaway, at their monthly luncheon at the Sand Hill NCO Club.

Mrs. Dunaway spoke to the group about her early experiences as an Army wife and her experiences as the wife of the top NCO in the Army. SMA and Mrs. Dunaway were visiting Ft. Benning.

Mrs. Norman Shlam, chairman of the scholarship committee, presented the recipients of the two $1,000 scholarships that the club offered this year.

Miss Connie Louise Dycus and Ronald B. Clark, both graduating seniors at Hardaway High School in Columbus, were the winners. They were presented their scholarship certificates by Mrs. Paul Long, club president.

Miss Dycus is the daughter of SFC and Mrs. Homer L. Dycus. SFC Dycus is presently serving in Korea. She will attend Columbus College in the fall and plans to become a nurse.

Ronald Clark is the son of MSG and Mrs. Billy Clark (Ret.). He also plans to attend Columbus College and will major in business administration.

Those present viewed the film "Spirit of Ft. Benning" in which the club has a special interest since they were included in a dance scene at the Top Five Supper Club.

A centerpiece of fresh flowers adorned the head table with smaller versions of the main centerpiece on the other tables.

HOSPITAL VISIT . . . Mrs. George Dunaway, who accompanied her husband SMA Dunaway on a visit to Fort Benning, visited some of the Vietnam returnees at Martin Army Hospital.

Gold Star Wives Plan Flag Fund Campaign

The Chattahoochee Valley Chapter of Gold Star Wives of America, Inc., backed by the civilian and military community, is conducting a fund drive for contributions for a "Gold Star Avenue of Flags," which will be erected on the median of Victory Drive beginning at the Georgia Welcome Center and continuing toward the Traffic Circle.

Their goal is to place 100 flags and flag receptables prior to the June 14, 1969, Flag Day Dedication, 10 a.m., at Municipal Auditorium on Victory Drive.

The Gold Star Wives have obligated themselves for $4,000 to cover the costs. This will include a unit cost of $32.50 for a complete flag kit (5'x8' flag, 20 foot collapsible staff and receptacle to hold the staff), plus miscellaneous expenses.

Flags will be flown on four specific occasions each year for a period of three consecutive days; these are: Memorial Day (May 30), Flag Day (June 14), Independence Day (July 4) and Veterans Day (November 11).

Registration for the typing class is open to teenagers 13-19 years of age. A fee of $5 will be charged in addition to membership in Youth Activities.

The first month of typing classes, four days a week, will start June 10 from 9 to 11 a.m. A possible location of the classes is Patch School. Classes are also scheduled to begin July 7 and August 4.

Registration for the typing classes will be held in Building 358, across from the 7-11 shop, Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The teenage charm and modeling class starts June 16 and will run for two weeks, Monday, Tuesday and Thursday from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. in the OWC lounge. The registration fee is $15.

The newly elected members of the OWC Executive Board are: Mrs. Malcolm R. Baer, president; Mrs. Robert S. LaMonte, 1st vice president; Mrs. James Wheaton, 2nd vice president; Mrs. Charles H. Reidenbaugh, 3rd vice president; Mrs. James L. Heathcock, recording secretary; Mrs. Richard N. Thrower, corresponding secretary; Mrs. William G. Griggs, treasurer.

Mrs. Ephiriam Goss, assistant treasurer; Mrs. Raymond Kampe, custodian; Mrs. W. T. Humphrey, allied liaison; Mrs. John K. Roberts, ceramics; Mrs. Norman E. Newberry, typing; Mrs. Adolph F. Katulan, mimeographing; Mrs. George Wear, hospitality.

Mrs. Robert W. Seaman, membership; Mrs. William McLean, pre-kindergarten; Mrs. Curtis Herrick Jr., program; Mrs. William K. Rapp, publicity; Mrs. Daniel A. Schrieber, reservations; Mrs. Warren B. Jones, school of dance, and Mrs. Ralph E. Short, welfare.

'PROUDLY, WE HAIL'. . . The wives of IOAC 2-69 will present a patriotic program entitled "Proudly, We Hail" today on the Rozell Television Show, WRBL, channel 3. Mrs. Jerry K. Wall, left, and Mrs. John N. Smith model the clothes they will wear on the program. Mrs. Geoffrey D. Withers, seated, will open the program playing the harp solo. The program was written by Mrs. Charles A. Carlton Jr.

Farewell Salute Held for Tharp

Officers and wives of the 2nd Battalion, 10th Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade, saluted their commanding officer, Lt. Col. Charles B. Tharp, at a farewell banquet in the Benning Room of the Main Officers Open Mess.

Col. John E. Striver Jr., commanding officer of the 197th Infantry Brigade, in his address to the gala affair, cited LTC Tharp for his achievements in supporting the brigade "as outstanding."

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

By Bill King

King's Pizza On Call

Treat the marchers in the family to a hearty brunch after the Memorial Day Parade. Try creamed minted chicken on thin pancakes.

A small portion of macaroni can be cooked in a deep fry pan. Just lift the basket with th cooked pasta out of the boiling water and let drain without risk of burning yourself.

Pretzels were invented by Alpine monks to give to good children, who remembered their prayers. Leftover bread dough was twisted into three rings to resemble a figure with hands clasped in prayer.

Chopped sweet red pepper adds a colorful and compatible touch to cabbage slaw.

Don't forget that a really fine cookbook can be a lovely shower gift for that bride-to-be.

And don't forget that a lovely time awaits you whenever you and your family dine at KING'S PIZZA. ON CALL. Delicious food, served with loving care.

Miss Columbus Looks Forward To Georgia's Pageant

By PFC Phil Schlaeger

Being cast as a "naughty girl," sometimes isn't all that bad. To Miss Dorothy Jean Bush, Miss Columbus of 1969, auditioning for a bit part in "My Fair Lady" could possibly lead to a much more majestic role in Atlantic City this September.

Of course, first Jean must compete in the Miss Georgia contest at the Three Arts Theater in Columbus June 11-14.

The vivacious Columbus High School senior was trying out for her school's production of "My Fair Lady" when she was initially contacted to enter the Miss Columbus, Georgia Pageant.

What was her first thought upon hearing her name announced as "Miss Columbus"?

Brown-Eyed

"I was exalted," replied the stunned but stunning brown-eyed beauty. "I was just so happy I didn't know what to do."

"Mother was confident all the time, but I was just frightened to death," admitted Jean, adding that "Daddy was just plain proud."

Jean expects she'll have mixed emotions when she relinquishes her title Aug. 23 at the Three Arts Theatre. The Miss Columbus Pageant, sponsored this year by the Muscogee Serdma Club, is open to young ladies from Columbus and Ft. Benning between the ages of 18-28.

New Problems

"It's a very exciting and rewarding experience for any girl," Jean said, adding that "it's one of the best times a girl could ever have. You're able to meet people who could help you later in life. Then of course, you have lots of fun in making new friends."

Being an attractive celebrity does, however, often attract new problems.

"Just because you have a title doesn't mean you don't have feelings," she explained. "At first I had to prove to my friends and classmates that I was still human, but eventally they came to accept me for myself."

You would think that any guy would boast of his dating a beauty winner. Not so with Jean.

"He was upset at first," she confessed, referring to her boyfriend, "as it took him away from me.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Bush was chosen from a field of 17 local beauties vying for the diamond tiara crown. The decision of the four judges was based on four areas of competition: evening gown; talent; swimsuit; and interview.

Triple Winner

The 18-year-old queen was, in fact, a triple winner at the pageant. In addition to winning the talent competition, she was voted Miss Congeniality by her fellow contestants.

Jean readily admits to being "shocked" on being named "Miss Congeniality." "It showed that the girls really cared about me. Next to being named Miss Columbus, it was probably the best honor I could receive."

In the talent competition, Jean sang an aria from "Sampson and Delilah." Hoping to sweeten her contralto voice, Jean gargled Green Mint mouthwash following what almost proved to be her "last supper."

'Oh No!'

"I got out on the stage right after eating and was I ever stuffed! I felt myself getting sick and just stood there thinking 'Oh no!' But I went on anyway. I felt faint and the mouthwash didn't make me sing any better, but after the first few lines I felt alright."

Fresh from her conquest of Green Mint, Jean plunged into the swimsuit competition.

"Actually, I feel very self-conscious in a swimsuit," she revealed to this astonished reporter. Jean's modesty is certainly unwarranted as her 116 pounds are well distributed over a 5'6" frame.

MISS COLUMBUS. . .Dorothy Jean Bush reigns.

Children's School Nurse Program Sets Pattern For Dependent Schools

By Bill Hardin

The school nurse program of the Fort Benning Children's Schools established 13 years ago has set a pattern for dependent schools around the globe.

Beginning with but a single nurse, the staff has grown to include four registered nurses.

Aside from the routine first aid performed as the need arises, there are many health programs calling for the skills of the nurses.

For not only are the four ladies professional nurses but they also serve as teachers, counselors and testers.

Caring for 4,000 students from kindergarten through the eighth grade, the team is headed by senior nurse Mrs. Robert L. (Lou Ella) Williamson, who has been with the Fort Benning school system since the nursing program was organized.

The nurses assist teachers with health program planning and teaching. They make home visits when necessary and handle countless contacts for students who need to be referred to various clinics at Martin Army Hospital.

The four are clinical nurses as well as instructors and all are registered nurses. Each had experience in public health prior to coming to Fort Benning.

About the only thing the nurses do not do is give immunizations. These are done by the various clinics and dispensaries with which the nurses maintain close contact.

The nurses administer screening tests in both the hearing and visual areas and work with a dental health program. When necessary they refer a student to a clinic.

They also measure each child once a year for height and weight. This information helps determine growth and development.

TB Tine tests are also administered for each student once a year by the nurses.

Other duties include maintaining immunization records of each child and administering any medications prescribed by a physician. Since students are allowed to keep [illegible] with them, we get [illegible] cases of colds and communicable diseases than we should." She is quick to urge parents to keep the medication and administer any dose due during school hours, according to the doctor's instructions.

A school health record designed and developed here, and later approved in Washington, is now being used world-wide by other dependent school systems.

The nurses also supervise the health room in each school. These contain first aid supplies and testing and screening equipment.

The greatest problem facing the four is the unusually large number of students who are sent to school ill. Assuming [illegible] to send ill children, we get [illegible] cases of colds and communicable diseases than we should." Paratroopers Enjoy Two Days Of Water Skiing, Surfing, Golf

CAMP EAGLE, Vietnam (101st IO) —It was probably the most pleasant mission for D Co., 1st Bn., 506th Abn. Inf. since its arrival in Vietnam.

The 101st Airborne Division paratroopers were dressed in full combat gear and were led as usual by Capt. J. W. Hendrichs, Savannah, Ga., their company commander. But this was not a day for sloshing through rice paddies and hunting for Charlie.

The soldiers' thoughts, instead, centered on water skiing, surfing, miniature golf and relaxing in the sun. D Co. was picked as the first Screaming Eagle infantry unit to enjoy a two-day stand down at Eagle Beach. Maj. Gen. Melvin Zais, division commander, was there to greet them.

"I don't know anybody who deserves it more than you guys humping the hills," the general told the assembled troopers. Then he asked Hendrichs to step forward and assist in cutting the infantry-blue ribbon, officially opening the division's in-country recreation site.

The new facilities feature a picnic area with barbecue pits, an 18-hole miniature golf course, a basketball-volleyball court, a mess hall, an NCO-EM club and a P.X.

A direct MARS line was completed just in time for the opening ceremonies. Plans also call for a gift shop, APO, a dayroom with television and pool tables, a stage for USO shows and movies and facilities for badminton, tennis and perhaps even archery and fishing.

Billeting for 160 men was provided by engineers from A Co., 326th Eng. Bn., who constructed eight barracks capable of sleeping 20 men each by placing SEA huts end to end. The engineers also built the picnic area, in the shade of the pines that line the beach.

The ocean swimming area consists of a 200-meter strip of white sand beach. Equipment will be made available for water skiing and boating, all under the close supervision of qualified lifeguards. A permanent staff of 15 to 20 men will supply and service the facilities for living and recreation.

Infantrymen Receives Almost Too Much Mail

By PFC Allen Sutliff

LAI KHE, Vietnam (DIV 10) — Hardly a day goes by in Vietnam without a 1st Infantry Division soldier wishing he would receive more mail. However, this is not the case for one Big Red One trooper.

PFC Robert Uhrich, Wichita, Kan. a clerk for Headquarters Battery, 2nd Battalion, 33rd Artillery, like most soldiers, likes to receive letters from his girl-friend. Not having received one from her in a couple of weeks, he was waiting anxiously for the one that was sure to come "today" — all 16 feet, 8 inches of it.

"Honestly, it was more mail than I could handle at one time," stated Uhrich. Not complaining though, the letter-writing must have taken as long as the letter-waiting feels Uhrich.

First Registrant Signs Up for Reunion of 1st Cavalry

By Jim Doherty

A World War II cavalry trooper rode horseback yesterday from a modern CH-47 "Chinook" helicopter, dismounted and signed his name to a sheet of paper.

Maj. (ret.) Hughes "Pappy" Seewald thus became the first registrant for the 22nd Annual Reunion of the 1st Cavalry Division Association which will be held in Columbus and Fort Benning August 21-24.

The cavalry horse and trooper uniform contrasting with the Chinook illustrated the changes in transportation, weapons and style that the First Cavalry division has seen in the last 25 years.

Seewald, former president of the association, was greeted by Sherman P. Height Jr., current president, George Dorman, mayor pro-tempore of Columbus; Charles Crowder, executive director of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, and Lt. Col. Gerald F. Wilson, a personal representative of Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, commanding general of the U.S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning.

Tentative plans for the reunion were discussed at a meeting Tuesday afternoon.

On the agenda will be tours of Columbus and Fort Benning, demonstrations of U.S. Army Infantry School training operations, social gatherings with leaders of the military and civilian communities and a special briefing on airmobile operations in Vietnam.

Trips to Callaway gardens, a west Georgia recreation area which features an exhibition of native Georgia horticulture, and to Franklin D. Roosevelt's "Little White House" in Warm Springs are also being planned.

A dance for teenage sons and daughters of association members and a heritage tour of Columbus homes for the wives are being organized.

A special demonstration of Ranger training and an exhibition by the Army "Golden Knights," a precision skydiving team, are on the program.

Memorial services for members of the division who were killed in combat will be held on the final day of the reunion.

The association was formed in July, 1944, to honor the memory of members of the 1st Cavalry Division who were killed in combat and to foster friendships that had developed during the war.

Today there are over 11,000 life members and almost 1,000 associate members.

A special foundation established by the association provides scholarship aid for the children of division members killed in action in vietnam.

Expansion of this scholarship fund was stressed in the reunion organizational meeting Tuesday.

Both Haight and Seewald, who are here to assist in organizing the reunion, are veterans of 1st Cavalry Division operations in the Philippines during World War II.

Haight served in the 7th Cavalry as a sergeant with a reconnaissance platoon. His decorations include the Bronze Star Medial with "V" and oak leaf cluster, Purple Heart with oak leaf cluster, Combat Infantryman Badge, and South West Pacific Area Campaign Ribbon with four stars and two arrowheads.

Seewald joined the 5th Cavalry in 1942 as a second lieutenant and rose to the rank of major before retiring in 1946. his citations include the Silver Star, the Purple Heart, the Combat Infantryman Badge and the South West Pacific Area Campaign ribbon with four stars and two arrowheads.

The 1st Cavalry Division was organized in Texas in 1921. It first saw combat in February, 1944, in the American assault on the Admiralty Islands. Later in the war it participated in the Luzon campaign.

During the Korean conflict it joined in the defense of the Pusan perimeter.

In 1965 the 11th Air Assault Division tested at Ft. Benning, became the 1st Air Cavalry division (Airmobile).

Following this introduction of airmobile concepts to its operations, the 1st Air Cavalry assumed a leading role in the defense of the Republic of Vietnam.

Columbus has "adopted" the 1st Cavalry division as its own home unit.

Lt. Col. Berry Takes Command of the 2/10th

197th Infantry Brigade cannoneers of the 2nd Bn., 10th Arty., welcomed their new commander, Lt. Col. William W. Berry, yesterday, May 29th, with a mounted review on Kelly Hill's Munsan Heliport.

The change of command ceremony was part of the artillery battalion's organization day activities.

Lt. Col. Charles B. Tharp, who had been the battalion's commander, is joining the 1st Infantry Division in Vietnam.

Lt. Col. Berry, who first joined the Army in 1947, had achieved the rank of Master Sergeant before accepting a commission as a First Lieutenant of Artillery in December 1956.

While enlisted, he served in Korea with the 9th Infantry Regiment of the 2nd Infantry Division in 1951-52.

His last combat experience was in Vietnam during 1966-67 as S-3 of the 9th Infantry Division's 1st Battalion, 11th Artillery.

In 1967 he became that division's assistant G-2.

Other highlights of his service include duty as an ROTC instructor at the University of Berkeley during 1953-56; battery executive officer and assistant S-3 of the 2nd Bn., 5th Arty., in Germany during 1957-60; gunnery instructor at Fort Sill's Artillery School during 1960-63; and Hq. Co. Commander of I Corps (Group) in Korea during 1965-66.

Prior to his last assignment as a student to the U. S. Army Command and General Staff School last year, Lt. Col. Berry had been the 2nd Armored Division Artillery Executive Officer and assistant Fire Support Coordinator at Fort Hood, Texas.

Born in December 1929 at Yuma, Ariz., Lt. Col. Berry holds a BGE Degree from the University of Omaha and has completed the U. S. Marine Corps School Career Course.

His awards include the Combat Infantryman Badge, Legion of Merit, Bronze Star with Oak Leaf Cluster, Air Medal, Army Commendation Medal, Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry with Gold Star and the Vietnamese Medal of Honor.

400 Years Experience Goes Into Officer's Mess

Over 400 years of military food service experience combine to make the Officer's Field Ration Mess at Olson hall one of the best in the Army. The OFRM is designed to serve all student officers with the Infantry School assigned to the Second Student Battalion, TSB.

The mass is serviced almost entirely by civilians, almost all of whom have retired from active duty after over 20 years in food service. Sixteen civilian employes with 341 years on active duty fall in this catagory, from Jenous M. Langford Sr., who retired as an E-7 after 27 years in Army mess halls to Howard Lawson Jr., who with 20 years of active duty behind him, has the "least" military food experience of the sixteen.

Three men still on active duty give the mess halls an additional 53 years of culinary experience. WO 2 William E. Everitte, secretary and custodian, has served for 16 years. Mess Sergeant Gilbert Rowe adds more than 19 years 8 months experience, while his assistant, SSgt. Earl W. Hendon has put in over 18.

Since the job of working at the OFRM is a demanding one, the experience of its employes pays great dividends in quality. The daily menus offered by the OFRM are far more difficult to prepare than similar ones in a normal Army mess hall, requiring great skill and hard work from its cooks and administrators.

While the normal mess hall will offer a sound, well-rounded food selection, the OFRM offers a variety of every type of food that the Army master menu has to offer on a given day. The OFRM will always have a choice of two soups, two salads, 2-5 types of vegetables, at last three varieties of meat, three choices of starch, at least five choices of pastries, and three different types of beverages.

Officers who have sampled these offering for the most part agree that the food is the best that they have eaten while in the Army.

The OFRM has some special problems that are not found in most Army mess halls, Mr. Everitte and his personnel are responsible for feeding officers from over 50 allied countries, and every effort is made to cater to their particular national tastes. Consequently rice, usually cooked in two different manners, is offered at every meal for the great number of Oriental officers.

In addition, the mess crew concocts as many exotic dishes as possible in order to make a foreign officer's stay at the Infanty School more enjoyable.

The amount of food available to the patrons of the mess hall also differs from the norm. There is absolutely no restriction on how much food an individual may eat, and those so inclined can return to the line for second and third helpings at no extra cost.

According to Everitte, the OFRM can finance the increased costs that such a variety and amount of food entailed because the Mess hall works on a non-appropriated fund basis. The officers are charged an extra ten cents per meal over usual Army meal prices, and this added income finances the many benefits that hungry officers receive at the OFRM.

In addition to providing food in quantity and quality, these funds have also been used to add to the beauty and atmosphere of the dining facilities. The walls in both dining rooms are covered with murals, and stereo music is provided to keep the dining atmosphere as relaxing as possible.

So far, Everitte has never received a complaint about the extra ten cents.

Eight Week Oral-Oriented Course

Officer Candidates To Learn Vietnamese Language

Officer Candidates of the 61st Company will soon be receiving classes in the Vietnamese language.

The classes will be under the direction of Capt. Henry J. Cook III, Commanding Officer of the 61st Co., and Candidate John Pope of Jacksonville, Florida.

Pope learned his Vietnamese during a two-year tour in Vietnam with International Voluntary Services. He served as a secondary school teacher of geography and English during the school year and worked in Community-oriented projects in rural areas during the summer. Pope also assisted youth groups while living with families in order to learn the social customs of the people.

The course in Vietnamese will consist of eight weeks of oral-oriented work in an attempt to give the future 2nd lieutenants a working knowledge of the language and an appreciation of the Vietnamese people.

74th Co. NCOC Graduation

"Courage has long been a trademark of America." These were the words of CSM Thomas J. Tobin, CSM of the 2nd Trig. Bde. USATC Inf. Ft. Benning, Ga., speaking at the graduation ceremonies of NCOC Class 32-69 in Marshall Auditorium May 20, 1969.

CSM Tobin's topic was courage and its relation to the newly graduated sergeants, formerly of the 74th NCO Company 7th Stu. Bn., TCB. Of the 154 new sergeants, Stephen J. Ross of Arlington, Virginia was honored as the distinguished graduate, leading his company in both academics and leadership.

For his achievement, Ross received a letter of Commendation from Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, Assistant Commandant of the Infantry School, an engraved "Follow Me" statuette, an engraved "Follow Me" plaque, an engraved Association of the United States Army (AUSA) plaque, and was promoted to staff sergeant.

10th Stu. Bn.

The 10th Student Battalion of The Candidate Brigade honored some of its units recently during the Battalion Monthly Award Ceremony.

The 101st Company was the recipient of the best mess of the month award.

The best supply room of the month award went to the 103rd Company.

The best day room of the month award was presented to the 101st Company. This marks the third consecutive such award to that company, which has also been recognized twice on the brigade level as having the best day room in a temporary building.

The awards were presented by the 10th Student Battalion Commanding Officer, Lieutenant Colonel Bob P. Oglesby.

John M. Stuart Jr.

Senior Advisor to UN Speaks to Officers

A senior advisor of the United States Mission to the United Nations, John M. Stuart Jr., spoke May 21 to four Infantry officer advanced course classes at the U. S. Army Infantry School here.

Stuart said that peace is a profession of the diplomats while the soldier is necessary to create and maintain a civil order where in the law can operate.

Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the school, welcomed Stuart and introduced him as a career journalist who has served his country in World War II, Korea and Vietnam before going to the U.N.

Stuart said the United States' mission in the United Nations has three areas in which it operates: (1) It delivers formal, official addresses to the Security Council, the General Assembly, and the various committee groups; (2) It enters into quiet, bilateral talks in the corridors or backrooms of the U.N.; (3) It conducts "Demonstrative Diplomacy" by speaking to people around the world to try to let them understand United States policy.

The third area, Stuart explained is a more recent task where they use world-wide radio, plus local radio and personal appearance, to talk about U. S. policy. He said, "One out of two people in the world has a vivid memory of living under Western European, or colonial, control." These people, he stressed, have to be informed of U.S. policy.

Then Stuart outlined the problems before the U.N. He said that the nations have never been so well armed but so nervous of their position; the slow, faltering steps toward disarmament are probably the result of this nevousness. Next, the rich nations seem to get richer while the poor get poorer; the problem of distribtuion and allocation resources under the pressure of expanding population will not go away by itself. And third, everyone acts out of self-interest and the U.N. has to find the common ground.

As an example of finding common ground, Stuart told of two quarreling diplomats who finally entered a conference room together and one said to the other, "All right, I'll admit I'm wrong if you'll admit I'm right."

AF Cadets Will Attend Airborne Training Here

The United States Army Infantry School's Airborne Department will train 308 U. S. Air Force Academy cadets this summer.

The cadets will take the three-week basic airborne course, which qualifies the graduate to wear the silver wings of a military parachutist.

Each year a number of Air Force Academy cadets forgo a portion of their summer leave in order to take jump training.

Thirty-nine students will begin training June 8, a second group of 75 on June 22, and 194 cadets on July 13.

Daily Bulletin and Family Quarters Bulletin

Official Publications Speed the Flow of Information

By Bill Hardin

The changing scene in the military community calls for a flow of information to all its residents from the highest commanders to the dependents living in post quarters. The word reaches all through two official publications.

The two may be classified as newspapers, but they carry no commercial advertising and are distributed at no cost to the readers.

They are the Daily Bulletin and the Family Quarters Bulletin, both published as a service of the Fort Benning Adjutant General (AG) Section's Operations Branch.

The Daily Bulletin has a circulaton of 2,200 copies daily and averages six pages while the Family Quarters Bulletin is a weekly publication which averages four pages and boasts a circulation figure of 3,500.

The Daily Bulletins probably date back to the time when the post was known as Camp Benning and was nothing more than a tent city. The Family Quarters Bulletin is a much more recent addition, it originated in 1965. It was first printed daily, but lack of pertinent official information caused it to become a weekly publication one year after it was started.

The Daily Bulletin circulates official information and official directives to commanders and their subordinate units on post.

The family Quarters Bulletin provides official directives and information as it pertains to family quarters.

The official portion of both papers has the same impact as official orders or command publications and command letters.

Both publications are also used to distribute unofficial information for service personnel and dependents who are awaiting a permanent change of station (PCS) move.

Items in this section are not accepted from civilians due to a lack of space. There is no charge for placing information such as items for sale in these sections.

Articles to be published in either bulletin are sent to the Operations Branch of the Adjutant General Section. A disposition Form (DF) or letter format is followed for an official requests.

Unofficial information is accepted also by letter, either typed or neatly written.

Unofficial information is accepted also by letter, either typed or neatly written.

Unofficial sections in both bulletins carry news of theatre openings, club openings, special events and items of this nature. Once the information for the bulletins is received in the operations branch, one person coordinates, prepares and types the items in bulletin format.

Checked for authenticity by a representative of the chief of the Administration Services Branch, the bulletins are then ready for the press.

Printing is done on an offset press and from there the bulletins are sent to the Message Center, AG Section, where they are distributed over the post.

Spratley Received Scholarship

Michelle Spratley, daughter of Mrs. Neva Spratley and the late Al Spratley of The United States Army Infantry Center Information Office, has received a $500 scholarship from the American Businesswomen's Association (ABWA).

The award, was presented Tuesday (May 20) during the Fountain City Charter Chapter of the ABWA's observance of National Scholarship Week.

The presentation was one of four made by the chapter at a dinner meeting held at the Women's Club in Columbus, Ga.

The awards were presented by Dr. Fred Davis, director of continuing education at Columbus College, who was speaker for the event. He spoke on "The Power of Womenpower."

Fast Evacuations Decrease Deaths

By Spl Pete Matmansky

LAI KHE, Vietnam (Div 10) — Deaths due to battle casualties have been steadily decreasing in war annals with the introduction of faster evacuation procedures and better medical facilities.

During World War II approximately half the men who served in the 1st Infantry Division became casualties. Of these, approximately one-fifth died from their wounds. The bumpy ride, the extended length of time from pick-up to aid station, the less than sterile conditions of the operating tent — all took their toll.

On the other hand, since the Big Red One landed in Vietnam in July, 1965, approximately 2,000 of the 68,000 men attached to the division have been killed, or a little over one-eighth of battle casualties.

Like a large hummingbird fluttering down to nestle on a nearly overgrown path, the helicopter banks left sharply, swoops toward the clearing hacked from the dense jungle, then descends slowly toward the waiting wounded.

Twenty seconds after touch-down, the chopper rises to tree top level, and skims along the forest ceiling like an elevated train.

As the big bird whirls back, the 1st Medical Battalion is already informed of the conditions of the incoming patients.

When the whirleybird swings down to its berth, a six-man team rushes out to meet it. Four grab the arms of the litter and carry it toward the aid station, while the remaining support walking wounded.

Locator Service Keeps Track of 150,000 Men

MRS. FRANCIS PACHUTA WORKS TO KEEP RECORD STRAIGHT At Post Locator Service

By Bill Hardin

Remember the nursery rhyme about the old woman who lived in a shoe, and had so many children that she didn't know what to do? Well, pity the man at Fort Benning who keeps up with 150,000 people.

The man is E. S. Poole, mail supervisor. He is in charge of the Locator Service, a function of the Adjutant General Section.

The eight civilians and ten men in uniform who work under his supervision maintain information on the whereabouts of 150,000 service personnel — men and women assigned here, those who have departed within the past year and students who were here during the past six months.

His section receives an average of 150,000 pieces of mail to handle each month.

"This is mail which cannot be delivered as addressed," he said.

"We are able to deliver 75 per cent of the mail which is channeled to us. Some of this requires only a minimum of effort, while some pieces cause us a great deal of work," he stated.

The office operates around the clock, with three shifts on duty on a seven-day week basis.

Files are updated constantly with about 3,000 names added or deleted each day.

"We maintain cards on all students assigned here, and we also keep various other rosters and records in order to locate people when the correct address is not known by those who want to contact them. Sometimes we must do a bit of detective work in pursuing a problem of locating a person assigned somewhere on post," Poole said.

Frequently, mail is sent to men due to report here but who have not yet signed in. This mail is held by the locator until the office receives the addressee's name on a morning report so that the mail can be forwarded to the appropriate unit mail clerk.

Providing a telephone service which gives immediate response to inquiries about soldiers stationed here is another function of this group.

Poole said, "We receive both humorous and difficult calls almost every day. There are many John Smiths here and often that is all we have to go on at first."

"At one time we had an extremely large number of privates here with the surname Larson. Some spelled it differently, but you can imagine the problem of attempting to help a caller find the particular Private Larson being inquired about," he said.

The telephone calls come in at the average rate of one every minute.

A few days ago, a caller asked for a man by his first name. The only other information the caller had was that the soldier was assigned to the 197th Infantry Brigade. There are more than 8,000 men in the Brigade and probably hundreds with the same first name.

"The average telephone inquiry is handled within two minutes, and many much more rapidly. We have four telephone lines coming in and the men and women who handle these calls work as rapidly as possible to provide the desired information. We hope that our caller will be patient. It is an enormous task sometimes, especially if we are to be thorough, and we stress accuracy and speed in our operation," Poole said.

'Pride of Command Officer's Ultimate Reward'

By PFC George Burks

The pride of command will be the ultimate reward for the diligence of the dedicated Army officer, Major General David M. Jones, the commanding general of Eastern Test Range at Cape Kennedy, Florida, told a capacity audience attending graduation exercises of Infantry Officer Candidate Class No. 19-69, at Marshall Auditorium May 23.

Addressing 178 newly commissioned second lieutenants, Gen. Jones called upon them to adopt an "honest critical sense" when using, in the name of the military, the money and materials supplied by the American public.

Gen. Jones told the graduates of the 93rd Officer Candidate Company that they were entering the most "challenging and promising period in history," but especially challenging in the sense that there are conflicting public attitudes toward the military, due largely to speculation about the "military-industrial complex."

He pointed out that "we can see the results of crime and poverty," but that it is not always easy to understand the strategy of defense spending.

Gen. Jones said that today's successful military leader must be "highly educated, highly motivated, and proficient." He said he felt that these qualities were imbued in the graduating class, of which 135 held a bachelor's degree, or higher.

He stressed the importance of continuing one's education, both formal and practical, but warned the class of the pitfalls to be expected with too much specialization.

One of Gen. Jones' sons, David Jr., was among the members of the graduating class. Second Lieutenant Jones spent one and one-half years, primarily as a medical technician, in the Air Force before he entered the Army.

Lt. Jones, who attended Texas Technological College (Lubbock, Tex.), took his basic combat training and advanced training at Fort Polk, Louisiana. He is a native of Satellite Beach, Florida.

The Distinguished Graduate of OC Class No. 19-69 was Second Lieutenant Charles W. Hanes, of Westville, New Jersey. Lt. Hanes received a letter of commendation from Brigadier General Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of The U.S. Army Infantry School. He also received an Association of the United States Army (AUSA) plaque and a "Follow Me" statuette.

Maj. Gen. Jones, a graduate of the University of Arizona commenced his Air Force career in 1937. In 1942 he volunteered for the Doolittle Project. During the training phase of this project, he flew the initial evaluation flights on the B-25 aircraft which were specially equipped for the mission. After the Doolittle raid on Tokyo, he bailed out over China, whose people helped him in returning to the U.S. For his participation as a flight commander in this mission, he was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross.

During a mission on December 4, 1942, Gen. Jones was shot down over Bizerte, North Africa; consequently he spent two and one-half years in a German POW camp.

Gen. Jones was graduated from three major Air Force schools: Command and General Staff School, Armed Forces Staff College, and the National War College. For three years prior to attending the National War College, he commanded a jet bomber wing at Langley Air Force Base, Virginia, and one at Royal Air Force Station, Sculthorpe, England.

Gen. Jones started his research and development work in 1956 while assigned as Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations for the Air Proving Ground Command at Eglin Air Force Base, Florida.

3 Soldiers Take Part in Springer Theater Production

By August C. Nerad

In addition to laughter and entertainment in the Springer Theater Company's current production of "A Funny Thing Happened On The Way To The Forum," you'll find three GI's from Ft. Benning.

2LT Douglas Bergman and SP4 Nelson Allison are starring in supporting roles on stage while stage manager 1LT Robert Hutchison coordinates the show from the wings.

During the interview Doug Bergman was sitting backstage in the gold-incrusted costume of Miles Gloriosus, the Roman captain he plays in the show. On stage each of a quartet of female dancers cast as seductive courtesans did her own version of humps and grinds to blaring, jazz-heated music.

Haphazard Life

Doug Bergman speaks in a quiet sincere tone when he relates his former haphazard life as an actor trying to find work in and around Chicago.

The husky, about six-foot, blond-haired fellow readily admits that show biz has been tough. Sometimes when he didn't have an acting job, he didn't eat.

In order to stay in "bread," he has worked at various jobs. He has been a folk singer in coffee houses and small clubs, and was a tile layer for four months.

Despite struggles in his uncertain profession, he has had experiences that were both personally and theatrically satisfying. "I like avant-garde theater. That's why I and another actor did Albee's "Zoo Story" in the First Congregational Church of Des Plaines, Ill. Doing a play in a church was "different" and Albee was the avant-garde playwrite at the time.

Doug Bergman's most notable past achievment has been acceptance in the cast of Chicago's famous Second City noted for its introducing the internationally-known comedy team of Mike Nicholas and Elaine May. Shortly thereafter Uncle Sam called.

He has also appeared as Helen Keller's father in the "Miracle Worker" at the Des Plaines Theater Guild and in a variety of roles with the Robin Hood Children's Theater, a company that tours numerous schools and youth centers surrounding Chicago.

He plans more work with the Springer Theater Co.

Sp4 "Ned" Allison share the spotlight in "A Funny thing. . ." as one of the play's delightful trio of protean characters. And it isn't surprising to find him in his second floor dressing room again "doubling" as a seamstress mending one of the six basic costumes he must wear.

As a protean, this seasoned actor shows great versatility, doing anything from singing to acrobatics. He plays a eunuch, slave, citizen and soldier. He jumps in and out of costume like an appealing Jack-in-the-box.

Both the Columbus Enquirer and Ledger have noted his prowess in supporting roles in favorable reviews when he played in the Springer production of "Gideon" earlier this year.

Leading Role

He has also played the leading role of Mike Mitchell in "Sunday in New York" at the Brandywine Theater in Ashville, N. C.

His other credits run the gamut of roles of popular traditional dramas and musicals of the college stage. He performed as Russell, the lead in "The Best Man," and as a dancer in "My Fair Lady," "South Pacific," and "Oklahoma!" at Western Carolina University where he received his Bachelor of Arts degree in Drama.

Having less than four months to serve in the Army, he intends to continue studying the theatrical arts and to obtain his Master of Arts degree at Northern Carolina University.

What describes 1LT Robert Hutchison in "A Funny Thing. . ."

Picture an attentive man wearing a telephonic headset backstage before a switchboard of lights and levers and chances are you've identified the stage manager. In this case, Bob Hutchison.

He is responsible for all the behind-the-scenes effects. This includes lighting, curtains and sets. He complements the actors in presenting the most perfectly possible show.

Ribbon-Cutting Ceremony Opens Thousand-Seat Sand Hill Theater

The new Sand Hill Theater, the first permanent-type structure in the area, was opened in a ribbon-cutting ceremony by Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, Fort Benning commander.

In expressing appreciation to all those people who had made the theater possible, General Davis noted that it would be a real boon to the morale of Sand Hill personnel. He added that in this area where there were few places to go, the new facility would be especially appreciated.

The modern brick-concrete-and-steel structure is air conditioned and equipped with one thousand cushioned seats. The color scheme throughout is keyed to Infantry blue.

With General Davis on the bunting-draped stage were Mr. George Helms of Atlanta, the regional manager of the Army and Air Force Motion Picture Service; Lt. Col. R. A. Sebenoler, USAIC Special Services officer; Lt. Roger Bond, theater officer; S.Sgt. Santaliz-Toro, Theater NCOIC; and the 251st Army Band that introduced the ceremony with a program of special music.

Special recognition was given by Colonel Sebenoler to post engineering and civic construction representatives attending the opening.

Other guests included Col. Herbert J. Peabody, USATCI deputy commander; Col. Galen C. Morey, USATCI chief of staff, and Col. Richard H. Maeder, USATCI 1st Bde. commander.

Synopsis

GOODBYE, COLUMBUS. — A bittersweet and hilarious comedy about a wonderfully alive and perceptive love affair between a mismatched young man resisting routine mold and a rich (pretty) college girl rooted to her family background. If you enjoyed THE GRADUATE — you will enjoy GOODBYE COLUMBUS

Pet Fair Attracts 99 Entries

From talking pets such as a Mynah bird, a crow and several parrots to other unusual pets such as snakes and roosters, the sixth annual Children's Pet Fair attracted a total of 99 entries.

It was the largest participation since the fair has been in existence.

This year the event was held in the Main Post Service Club, and offered 10 categories of competition.

Thirty ribbons were awarded the winners which were selected by a three member panel of judges.

Serving as judges for this year's event were: Henry G. Burger of the Pet's Own Shop, Capt. Paul F. McWilliams and Capt. James M. Helman, both of the Post Veterinarian's Office.

Army 'Photo Bugs' Eligible To Compete in Contest

All "photo-bugs" who are on active duty for ninety days or more are eligible to compete in a photography contest here in June and July. So if you haven't had a chance to show-off your wares, now is the time.

The Third United States Army and 13th Interservice Photography Contest will begin June 1 and continue through Aug. 3.

The purpose of the contest is to provide an opportunity for photography enthusiasts in the Army to compete within the photographic field and receive recognition.

The contest will be conducted on Installation, Army, Department of the Army, and Interservice levels. There will be three groups of photographs at each level of competition: Group I — black and white photographs; Group II — color photographs and Group III — color transparencies.

Each entry submitted will fall into one of these groups and be placed under one of the following categories: People, babies and children; animals and pets; action; scenic; military life still life and experimental.

Contest rules are as follows:

a. An entry will be a photograph taken by each contestant on or after Dec. 1, 1967.

b. No official military photograph will be accepted.

c. An entry considered unworthy or unsuitable for exhibition by the contest officers will be withdrawn.

d. No contestant may withdraw his entry during the contest period.

e. No contestant may receive more than two cash awards in each group plus honorable mention.

f. On determining that an entry is not in the correct category, judges will transfer it to the correct category.

g. Any entry that does not conform to size, proper identification, or entry requirements will be disqualified.

h. Prints entered in the Interservice Contest become the property of the Army.

i. All color transparencies in the Interservice Contest will be returned through channels to the contestants.

New Demonstration Site Finished at Shelton Range

Visiting dignitaries, the officers and general visitors who watch the training of the Infantry Soldier get a new classroom at Shelton Range. The last of its type in the country, it is designed as a prototype for construction of similar ranges at other posts, according to Lt. Col. Barney K. Neal, of the small arms committee, U.S. Army Infantry School Weapons Department.

43RD ENGINEERS POUR CONCRETE DURING CONSTRUCTION
They Finished Their Mission Two Weeks Early

The training site, also to be used for advanced and Vietnam-oriented classes, was recently completed in record time by Company B, 43rd Engineer Battalion, part of the U.S. Army Infantry Center Troop Command's 931st Engineer Group.

By bivouacking the officers and noncommissioned officers at the construction site and putting the men on a 24-hour a day, seven days a week, work schedule, the work was finished two weeks prior to its originally scheduled completion date.

This was done through coordination among the units involved, and simultaneous work with continuous operation and maintenance by the supporting groups.

According to Lieutenant Donald A. Primrose, Company B project officer, the goal was "to beat the completion date and save money."

The range is laid out with 25 positions, 13 foxholes and 12 surface firing points. The farthest target is 50 meters from the shooter. There are 125 pop-up targets scattered throughout the range behind seven mounds called berms. The large number of targets available and the number exposed at any one time differentiate Shelton Range from conventional ranges.

Company B was responsible for moving the earth to the correct heights for the berms, for the electrical work operating the targets and the carpentry and pouring of concrete for the "coffins" housing the target devices. The coffins are so-called because the man-shaped targets, when hit, fall into these concrete boxes.

In their work, the company employed earth scrapers, graders, water distributors, backhoes, 5-ton dump trucks, earth augers and 20-ton cranes.

Lieutenant Primrose estimated that the unit used more than 75 cubic yards of concrete, laid 14,400 linear feet of wire and made 300 connections and 50 splices.

Colonel Pollock Named District Dental Advisor

Col. Jack P. Pollock, dental surgeon at Fort Benning, has been made an advisor to the Western District Dental Assistants Society. The announcement came at a dinner meeting of the society May 20 at the Downtowner Motel in Columbus, Ga.

The first military dentist to serve as an advisor, he succeeds Dr. Thomas G. Crymes of Columbus who has served in that capacity for three years. Two other advisors are Dr. Fred M. Miller Jr. and Dr. Cephas V. Thompson III, both of Columbus, who have served for three years and will continue for another two-year period.

Special recognition was given to Dr. Crymes for his "outstanding support" as an advisor to the dental assistants.

New officers installed at the meeting include: Mrs. John Kazmin, president; Mrs. Harry Whetzel, president elect; Mrs. Bonner Rivers, vice president; Miss Marion Smith, secretary; Mrs. Donald Pippens, treasurer; and Mrs. Donnie Stringfellow and Mrs. Peggy Pilgrim, board members.

The installing officer was Mrs. Harvey E. Kelly, secretary of the Georgia Dental Assistants Association, with Mrs. Harold Barrow as conducting officer. Mrs. Jed Clemons sat at "Friendship Table," at which each new officer lighted a candle as part of the investiture.

Hahn To Perform At Country Club

BY MARC REIFF

The St. Louis Cardinals are finally making their move. Like the Yankees of old, the Cards were preseason favorites to wrap up the National League title by mid July. But now it seems that it may take them a bit longer, if they make it at all.

The current surprise is the Chicago Cubs. Leo Durocher has taken them to third place finishes in the last three years and may just take them all the way this year. Everyone is playing up to potential and ageless Ernie Banks is playing like a rookie. If the pitching can continue, Chicago should be able to nose out the Cards in a tight race.

The American League race (East) is shaping up exactly the way everyone thought it would. Baltimore, Boston and Detroit are the only ones with enough big guns to take the title. Denny McLain is 7-4 and is a few days ahead of his pace of last year when he won 31 games. Mickey Lolich has won six games so far and it is not hard to imagine the Tigers ending up with two twenty game winners in these two. Did someone say thirty game winners?? In either case, I am backing the Tigers to repeat as the American League winners this year, and remember, you read it here first.

The weaker West division title is seemingly not out of the reach of any team. Minnesota is ahead by only one game but Kansas City is moving up very fast. This expansion team has a better early season record than any baseball expansion team ever. KC is also the only expansion team in history to concentrate primarily on young ball players rather than the older has beens who might be good for a couple of years then fizzle out. Joe Gordon, the manager delights in playing his men against the team that sold them to the Royals, and so far it has paid back with wins over their former team and in such crowd pleasing fashion that the Royals are drawing almost 14,000 fans at home. "We knew the people would stick with us if we stayed with the kids," said Owner Ewing Kauffman.

Ford is being hard pressed this year in the Indy 500 by the Offenhauser. Although the fastest qualifying time was set by A. J. Foyt in a Coyote-Ford at 170.568 miles per hour, there are 20 Offys entered in this years race. Last year an Offenhauser driven by Bobby Unser won the race and the durability of the engine could make it a winner again this year. A. J. Foyt and Mario Andretti are the pre-race favorites in their Fords but in racing anything can happen, especially at Indianapolis. They have the fastest qualifying times but the big question is, can the Fords hold together for 500 tough, gruelling miles.

Dan Gurney, in a Stock-Block Ford is the only non turbo charged car in the race. He has added 15 cubic inches while the Offy has been forced to drop several inches. If all goes well look for Gurney to end up in the winners circle.

The wonders of modern-day athletic competition.

Jack Nicklaus thought his two-round total of 147 would miss the cut by a stroke in the Atlanta Classic, he flew home to Florida after visiting his new golf course at Hilton Head, S. C., Friday afternoon.

After he had been home about half an hour, his pilot called the Atlanta Classic headquarters and asked what the cutoff was. Told it was 147, the pilot said they'd be right back. An hour and thirty five minutes later, Nicklaus had flown back to Atlanta to get a good night's rest for an early Saturday round. It was all a waste though, his name didn't even appear in the money winning list in Monday's paper.

Paul Hahn, world known golf trick shot artist will perform at the Fort Benning Officers Club Golf Course at 4:30 p.m. June 2.

To be held in conjunction with the eighth Annual Dependents Golf Tournament, the demonstration is open to the public.

Acknowledged by leading golf writers, top golf professionals and clubs in the entertainment business as the world's greatest trick shot artist, Paul Hahn has thrilled and amazed audiences on every continent of the world. Combining a smooth edged comedy routine with an amazing repertoire of golf trick shots, he reached the top by hard practice and a keen insight into what pleases people.

The "wizard of clubs" started his golf career at the age of ten and turned professional at 18. He was a teaching pro in Augusta, Ga., and Miami, Fla., prior to World War II.

After four years of sea duty during World War II, Paul returned to golf. He was playing so well in 1947 that he took a fling at the professional circuit but in 1948, he found pickings too slim so he finished out the season at Glen Oak [illegible] Country Club in Chicago. That autumn he went west and settled down to working on a trick shot repertoire. He took a club job to take care of the grocery bill and worked high school clinics for students and at the same time got "audience reaction" to his trick shots and comedy routine.

In 1949, he took the show on the road and in 1950 it clicked. The rest is golf history.

Hahn's amazing skill has been featured in motion pictures produced by Paramount, Universal-International and Columbia. He has been featured on the Ed Sullivan, Garry Moore, Art Baker, Paul Winchell, Bob Barker and Johnny Carson shows. He has acted as master of ceremonies at practically every major golf tournament-clinic including the "Masters" in Augusta and the National Professional Golfers Association Championships.

While emphasis is on entertainment, the golf clinic that Paul presents is especially worthy of attention. Top golf professionals consider his clinic the most comprehensive ever presented anywhere by anybody.

MTU Leads Slow Pitch League

MTU softball players have jumped into a lead in the first half of the Intra-company slow pitch softball league.

After three weeks of competition the MTU softballers have won six straight games on some strong hitting. They were momentarily slowed down by a close shave from B Company ISB, winning 12 to 11.

Ranger company and USACDCIA are top contenders in the standings. Rangers have won two and lost two while CDCIA hold a four and two record. Ranger company will meet the MTU in a crucial game this week to determine first half league winners.

The first half league winners will play the second half league winners for a chance to advance to post level championships.

Post Tennis Tourney Slated

By BOB VARGAS

The Special Services Section here has announced the U. S. Army Infantry Center (USAIC) Tennis Championships scheduled for June 9-13.

Matches will be held at the Fort Benning Officers Club tennis courts to determine the post tennis champions and to select a team to participate in the 1969 Third U. S. Army Tennis Tournament, which will be held June 23-27.

Competition will be governed by the 1969 U. S. Lawn Tennis Association Rules except as amended by Infantry Center headquarters and will be conducted in the three following divisions: (1) Men's Open Division (singles and doubles); (2) Men's Senior Division (singles and doubles); (3) Women's Division (singles and doubles).

A men's team of four open and two seniors and a women's team consisting of two women will be selected to represent Fort Benning in the Third U. S. Army Tennis Tournament.

Each division will be determined on a single-elimination basis, with all matches being the best two out of three sets, except the semi-finals and finals of the Open Division, which will be the best three out of five sets.

As is the case in tournament play, known players will be seeded in each division, with other pairings determined by draw.

In the Senior Men's Division those participating must have reached the age of 40 years on or before June 22, 1969. Participants eligible to compete in the Senior Division may compete in the Open Division if desired; however, entry in the Open Division will forfeit a participant's right to compete in the Senior Division. There will be no changes after the official entry has been made.

In the event there is an insufficient number of entries in any division (singles or doubles) to warrant competition, a winner or winners will not be declared.

Two-Ball Handicap Tournament

The Fort Benning Country Club will hold a best two-ball tournament for men today.

Individuals will organize their own foresomes. Full handicaps will be used. Sign up for tee times in the club storage room.

Shooting Conference Scheduled

The competitive marksmanship program of the U. S. Army in 1970 will be the subject of a conference here June 3.

Directing the conference will be Lt. Col. Standford Brantley, U. S. Continental Army Command (CONARC) marksmanship officer.

The conferees will meet at 1:30 p.m. at the Fort Benning Trap and Skeet Club.

Among those expected to attend are Joseph Berry and Lt. Col. Harry L. Boblin, both from the Department of the Army, Major Home Pearson, representing the National Guard, Fred Young, U. S. Army Infantry Center match director, and the officers in charge of the Third U. S. Army area's rifle and pistol squads.

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

Capt. Michael Wikan, 21st Company, The Student Brigade now leads the May Fishing Derby with the 9-pound 12-ounce bass he caught at Harp's Pond. He was using a rod and reel and a lazy ike lure.

Sgt. Robert Crossland, still leads the catfish category with the 7-pounder he took from Victory Pond and the bream lead is still held by Maj. Richard Bachman, Martin Army Hospital, with the 15-ounce entry he caught at Patterson Pond.

The Rod and Gun Club sponsors a Fishing Derby each month from April to November. Prizes are awarded for the largest bass, catfish and bream. Rules of the contest are simple. You must be a member of the Rod and Gun Club, catch the fish from one of the reservation ponds, register at Rod and Gun Headquarters before going fishing and register the catch at Rod and Gun Headquarters. Catches made after Rod and Gun closes may be registered the next day.

Hunting and fishing on the reservation are as good or better than can be had anywhere in the southeast. It isn't that Benning has been blessed with an area that has an abundance of game and fish. It takes a lot of work by many people to create this condition.

The Fort Benning Rod and Gun Club provides both the hunter and the fisherman with a facility to learn more about his favorite sport. The club is located on First Division Road about a quarter mile south of Highway 27. It has trap, skeet and archery ranges at that location. It also has available fish bait, boat rentals and fine food.

But there wouldn't be much activity in the way of fishing and hunting if Fort Benning didn't have a very active conservation program. This program is supervised by the Post Natural Resources Management Board.

The purpose of the board is to assure balanced action on the part of a number of installation activities all working to make maximum use of the land, control vegetation to prevent destructive fires, stabilize soil to prevent erosion and encourage growth of fish and wildlife.

The Fish and Wildlife Unit of the Post Engineer Section is the coordinating agency for the Fish and Wildlife Program.

In the game management program six species are considered economically important — the white-tailed deer, cottontail rabbit, gray squirrel, bobwhite quail, eastern wild turkey and the eastern mourning dove.

Satisfactory and huntable populations of these species are developed and maintained by planting food patches, planned burning of grass and brush and good timber management.

The Fish and Wildlife Unit conducts an active predator control program to keep a proper balance of game and predator animals. Each year approximately 500 animals are trapped and specimens of fox, bobcat, raccoon, opossum and wild dogs are randomly selected and tested for rabies. So far all results have been negative.

The Fish and Wildlife Unit also promotes the growth of wildlife by planting grain to insure sufficient food.

In the fish conservation program the Fish and Wildlife Unit maintains the ponds and streams on the reservation so they are in the best condition to promote the growth of the fish population. This includes clearing banks of brush, deepening banks to promote the fertilization program, periodic testing of ponds to insure a proper balance of the various species of fish and stocking fish as required.

The Post Forrester, who contracts with commercial companies for the harvest of lumber on the reservation, coordinates with the Fish and Wildlife Unit to insure actions in the best interest of the conservation program.

The Provost Marshal is responsible for enforcement of the hunting and fishing regulations. Military police operate motorized patrols, man mobile check points, operate boat patrols and assist in the predator control program.

Harmon to Defend Title

Dependents Tourney Has Classy Field

The Eighth Annual Dependents Golf Tournament open to all female dependents of active, retired and deceased members of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Coast Guard, to be held at the Fort Benning Country Club June 3-5 has drawn over 200 entries.

Miss Peggy Harmon, winner of the Seventh Annual Tournament at Maxwell Air Force Base last year, will be here to defend her title. In the past year she has added the United States Golf Association Junior Girls Championship to her list of titles. She was the Washington, D. C., Girls Junior Champion in 1965 and won the Tennessee State Junior Girls Championship in 1966, 1967 and 1968.

Miss Harmon is not the only entry to bring a fine set of credentials to the tournament. Miss Jackie Evans of the Army-Navy Country Club, Virginia, is the former Kansas State Junior Girls and Women's Champion. She has also won the Topeka, Kan., and San Antonio, Texas, women's championships. She is currently Women's Champion of the Army-Navy Country Club.

Another golfer with an impressive background is Meridith Ross of Port Saint Lucie, Fla. She has won the New Brunswick, Canada, Junior and the New Brunswick Sectional Junior Championship in 1965 and 1966. In 1966 she also went into the finals of the Florida State Women's Amateur Championship.

Honors are not confined to the unmarried dependents. Mrs. E. H. McCarter, Boscobel Country Club, Pendleton, S. C., was twice women's champion of Langley Air Force Base, Peninsula Amateur Champion, Hampton, Va., Women's Champion of Fort Bragg, N.C., and for the last two years has been the women's champion of Boscobel Country Club.

Another entry who has an impressive list of championships to her credit is Mrs. Ralph A. Reeve of Marietta Country Club, Marietta, Ga. She has twice been women's champion of Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala., champion of Stewart Air Force Base, Tenn., Langley Air Force Base, Va., Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., and is the current women's champion of the Marietta Country Club.

Among the local entrants, Mrs. Arthur J. Sutton has the longest list of championships. She has been the women's champion of Langley Air Force Base, twice women's champion of Awase Meadows Country Club, Okinawa, and has been the Fort Benning women's champion for the last two years.

Beck Is Champion

Wins Grand Prix

U. S. Shooters continued to keep European marksmen pinned down as they walked away with the top prizes in Trap & Skeet competition during the Grand Prix of Brno at Brno, Czechoslovakia.

Army marksmen from Ft. Benning, representing the United States led the shooters in both the trap and skeet events.

SSG. James Beck dropped only three birds to end up with a total of 197 birds out of 200 for the Grand Prix Championship in Trap. He was closely followed by his army teammates Sgt. Gene Lumsden with 196, SpS Larry Stafford with 195 and Sp4 James Colombo with 194.

The three-man team of Beck, Lumsden and Sgt. Edward Lewendusky put together a winning score of 584 for the team championship.

In skeet competition, Sp4 Larry Tiner climbed the ladder to win the championship with 141 birds out of 150. Tiner had to out-shoot his teammate Sp5 Anthony Rosetti who also finished with 141. Head coach for the Army team LTC Thomas Gillmore finished third with 140.

The Army skeet shooters placed first and second in the team matches.

Trap team members will travel to Milan, Italy (this week) to defend their European championships while the Skeet team will be facing stiff competition in London.

Col. Snelling AFMA President

Col. James H. Snelling has been installed as president of the Fort Benning chapter of the Armed Forces Management Association (AFMA) for 1969-1970.

He received the gavel from George E. Heberling, outgoing president, at the last meeting of the 1968-1969 season, May 26, held in the Benning Room of the Fort Benning Officers Club.

Serving with Col. Snelling are Dewey L. Posey, first vice president; Lt. Col. R. E. Van Der Like, second vice president; Mrs. Betty A. Greene, secretary; and Mrs. Ann J. Horgan, treasurer.

Guest speaker for the event was Col. Charles H. Reidenbaugh, U.S. Army Infantry Center Troop Command commander. He spoke on "The Personalization Syndrome."

Col. Reidenbaugh said that while management has saved numerous hours through the use of more expedient and efficient data systems for record keeping, it has failed to use these hours in ways to keep the personal touch in handling people and their problems. He gave the example of how trade and labor unions have grown in relation to the mechanization and dehumanizing of factories and other blue-collar industries.

He then charged the new officers with their responsibilities.

The next meeting of AFMA will be in September.

Special Courts Martial Require Lawyers Aug. 1

By PFC Marc Reiff

"Men facing Special Courts Martial will soon have qualified lawyers to defend them," says 1st Lt. Lucien B. Campbell, the 197th Infantry Brigade's Legal Officer.

Lt. Campbell was referring to a change in the Uniform Code of Military Justice that goes into effect on August 1, 1969.

From that time on all Special Courts Martial defendants will be represented by legally qualified lawyers certified by the Judge Advocate General in Washington.

Previously, the defense and trial counsels were not necessarily lawyers. But General Order 33, which has just come down from Washington, now assures that defendants will have the full benefit and knowledge of a lawyer officer.

Previously the battalion commander was the convening authority at these trials but the responsibility now falls on the brigade commander.

The battalion commanders however will continue to recommend action on all cases involving their men and it will indorse it to the brigade commander for referral to trial.

This change is expected to benefit both the government and the men involved in the courts martial. With competent lawyers on both sides, a quicker and fairer trial is sure to result.

Lt. Campbell also says the change to the Code "will result in more efficient administration and a higher standard of justice."

In the 197th it is expected that two courts, each with seven members, will be in operation allowing more cases to be brought to trial with a minimum amount of waiting. More enlisted men are also being added to the staff of the legal office to expedite the expected increase in work.

EAGLE SCOUT AWARD . . . At a ceremony on May 15, Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, Commanding General USAIC, presented the Eagle Scout medal to Joel W. Wilson, the son of the 197 Bde. S-3 Lt. Col. Franklin L. Wilson.

SFC Lawrence Footman, Co. C, was awarded the Bronze Star by Col. Herbert G. Peabody, deputy commander, USATC. Col. Peabody also awarded the Air Medal to 1st Sgt. John E. Perry, Co. A; the Army Commendation Medal to Sp5 Thomas W. Netterville, Co. E, 8th Bn., and Sp4 Allen R. Jackson, C.E.; and the 1st OLC to the Purple Heart to S.Sgt. Howard L. O'Neal, Co. A.

Pvt. Christopher Evans, Co. C, was presented the American Spirit Honor Medal, the highest award that can be given to a basic trainee.

Lt. Col. William G. Carter, battalion commander, awarded plaques to the outstanding trainees of each company. They included Pvt. Sammie L. Davis, Co. A; Pvt. Lowrie B. Amos, Co. B; Pvt. John A. Totter, Co. C; and Pvt. Timothy F. Altman, Co.

Col. Carter also presented plaques to those trainees who achieved the highest score in their respective companies on the three tested phases of basic combat training.

SFC Miguel A. Rozario, Co. B, was selected as the outstanding drill sergeant of the cycle.

The Brigade Commander's Trophy was awarded by Col. Francisco J. Ramos to Co. B, commanded by Capt. James C. Riley.

'Accident Prone' Type Of Driver Identified

During the current campaign to encourage Fort Benning drivers to wear their safety belts, a spokesman for the Safety Office has outlined the methods of identifying the "accident prone driver."

According to James E. Blount, safety officer, this type driver usually falls into three or more of the following categories: (1) Has accidents of many kinds (2) is absent without leave (AWOL) and has much indebtedness; (3) violates traffic laws; (4) breaches military courtesy, and is guilty of other delinquencies, and (5) is a compulsive drinker who usually drinks from a bottle in the car, and not so much at clubs or at social affairs.

Blount also explained that the accident prone drivers who operate conventional model cars are apt to own older models which are dirty both inside and out and usually display a number of dents and scratches. These cars lack proper maintenance. They usually show bald tires, broken glass, and other deficiencies such as a horn which won't blow, windshield wipers that do not operate and lights that do not burn.

To identify this type driver among those who are behind the wheel of sports cars, Blount explains, "These are apt to have a larger than normal six engine in their car, and also have many of the same characteristics as do owners of conventional models, except to a lesser degree."

Blount also explains that some characteristics of the accident prone driver also appear as personality traits.

"These," he said, "are having a greater distractability than average, a tendency to act impulsively, a tendency to be antisocial, nonconforming, aggresive and intolerant of authority."

Another such trait, he said is emotional instability, including difficulty in tolerating tension and frustration. The accident prone man has an exaggerated notion of his ability, unusual tendency to risk-taking, and an unhealthy need to "stand out."

"In some cases, according to the safety officer, a subconscious quest for attention or satisfaction through self-inflicted injury also is present.

Blount said that something is wrong with such a person, and "unless there is a change of attitude, he is likely to be killed or at least seriously injured." The safety officer commented that such individuals are a danger to themselves and to other drivers and their passengers.

Army Digest Magazine Features

CAMERON STATION, Va. — The June issue of ARMY DIGEST features a Twenty-fifth Anniversary account of the D-Day assault by Western Allies.

New pay tables and Medicare benefits for service dependents also appear in the issue. In addition, there are stories on the U.S. Army Southern Command's jungle training course in the Canal Zone and WAC basic training at Fort McClellan, Alabama.

"Go With Overlord," an account of the allied invasion of Normandy twenty-five years ago, is also featured. Other stories tell about jungle-training operations in the Canal Zone.

Safety Office Predict Holiday Casualities

The Safety Office predicts that there will be fifteen Fort Benning personnel seriously injured during the 3 day Memorial Day weekend in holiday type activities. Two of these may be serious enough to die. Most of the injuries will occur in cars and aquatic activities. Some facts (based on previous experience) about these cases are:

CARS - None of the injured will be wearing safety belts.

None of the injured will have completed Defensive Driver Training.

The type vehicle will he a late model sports car.

The time will be between 0030 - 0500 hours.

The operator will be under 23 years of age.

His rank will be E-4 or E-5.

Water Sports - Mostly from swimming in an unsupervised area, not using the buddy system and he thinks he is a good swimmer.

Safety Officers Check 100 Cars In Post Safety Belt Campaign

Fort Benning safety office personnel have checked almost 100 motorists in an effort to make the first group of awards during the current safety belt campaign.

The number of vehicles checked in order to find a winner has had a sharp drop in the past few days, according to James E. Blount, safety officer.

"When we were looking for our first winner, we checked 32 vehicles at Outpost No. 1, prior to awarding a $5 check to Sp5 Richard E. Yellott of Company C, 1st Battalion, U. S. Army Infantry Center Troop Command," he stated.

"Our next check was made at the Main Post Exchange and 31 vehicles were checked before a prize was awarded to SFC John G. Lewis, of Headquarters, 7th Battalion, 18th Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade," Blount commented.

The third recipient of a check was Officer Candidate Robert L. Stark of the 66th Company, 6th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade. He received the check after 18 motorists were checked at the National Bank of Fort Benning.

The fourth $5 check went to Sp4 Kirk A. Supplee of the 608th Ordnance Company (Ammo), Center Troop Command. He won the check when his car was the seventh to be checked, and was the first in the 197th Infantry Brigade area, in which the occupant was found to be wearing his safety belt.

"We presented the fifth check to Chief Warrant Officer Robert H. Conner, Company D, 197th Support Battalion, 197th Infantry Brigade. His vehicle was checked at the same location, and on this day, we only had to check four motorists before we found our winner," Blount said.

"Our final winner last week was Capt. E. J. Hall of the 29th Company, 2nd Student Battalion, The Student Brigade. He was checked in the Olson Hall Parking lot, and was the sixth motorist checked," Blount related.

"We are continuing our two month campaign to promote the wearing of safety belts, and will make daily checks," Blount said.

"We are anxious to make the $5 award each day, and we will be checking at various locations in an effort to find a driver wearing a safety belt, so we may make more awards, be concluded.

The two month campaign is now in its second week and almost $200 dollars remain to be awarded.

Naudts Receives Award

Col. Morris J. Naudts, who will retire from the Army June 1, received the third Oak Leaf Cluster to the Legion of Merit from Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., commanding general, the U. S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning, during a ceremony held here May 7.

According to the citation, Col. Naudts received the award for his "professional competence, keen insight into the modern scientific management principles, outstanding leadership, ingenuity, dedication and superior accomplishments."

Col. Naudts, who since July 1957, has been chief, Resource Management System Task Force, entered the Army in March, 1940. During World War II, he served with the 37th Infantry Division in the Pacific Theater of Operations and with the 24th Infantry Division in Korea.

In addition to the Legion of Merit, he has been awarded the Silver Star with two Oak Leaf Clusters, the Army Commendation Medal, the Bronze Star Medal with three Oak Leaf Clusters and the Purple Heart with one Oak Leaf Cluster.

Col. Naudts, his wife Margaret and daugher Merideth, will reside at 1 Lowell Ave., South Highlands, Iverness, Fla.

COURTESY RECOGNIZED . . . Captain Robert M. Odom, right, Co. A, 1st Bn., 58th Inf., 197th Inf. Bde., is presented a check and a letter in recognition of safe and courteous driving performed May 7. Six Receive Honors From Infantry Board

By Rex Ellis

During informal awards ceremonies held at the U.S. Army Infantry Board, May 21, four Department of the Army civilian employes and two military members of the Infantry materiel test board were honored. Those receiving recognition in the form of certificates and commendations included First Lieutenant Charles M. Brunhoffer, Sergeant First Class Raymond F. Beam, Mrs. Betty Butler, Mrs. Viola Worozbyt, Mr. James A. Sudderth, and Mr. James G. Hardy. The ceremony was held in the President's conference room with Col. Walter F. Johnston, Board President, making the presentations.

Lieutenant Brunhoffer, who is departing the Infantry test board, was commended for his exceptional performance of service while testing Infantry items. The ceremony served as a farewell to Brunhoffer upon his departing the Infantry post for duty in Vietnam. Mrs. Brunhoffer was present for the ceremony and the couple was presented a going-away present from the Board by Col. Johnston.

Mrs. Butler, secretary to the President, was presented a certificate for outstanding and high quality performance of duties for the period of 12 February 1968 through 11 February 1969. She was cited for her meritorious service, technical proficiency and dedication to duty which contributed significantly to the successful operation of the test board. A quality step increase was awarded Mrs. Butler for her exemplary performance of duty.

For excelling in her duties as Clerk Stenographer to the Field Equipment Test Division, Mrs. Viola Worozbyt was presented a certificate of achievement for the period of 23 February 1968 through 19 February 1969. Mrs. Worozbyt was cited for her exceptional stenographic skills, personal initiative, diligence, resourcefulness and dedication to duty.

Sudderth, Hardy, and SFC Beam each were commended for improvement suggestions they had contributed toward greater efficiency in testing operations. Sudderth, Equipment Specialist with the Combat Conditions Test Division, has served the Infantry Board since April 1967. Hardy, Chief of the Management and Budget Division, has served the Infantry test activity since October 1968.

He entered civil service in January 1947, and has served in various Budget, Finance and Accounting Offices at the Infantry post. Beam, senior NCO of the Small Arms Test Division, has been instrumental in conducting recent tests by the division. He served with the Arctic Test Center, Fort Greely, Alaska, prior to his service with the Infantry Board. He is departing the test activity here for duty in Vietnam.

GLAD TO GET RID OF THIS GUY! . . . Cpt Alberta L. Fisher, Assistant AG of the 197th Inf Bde hopes to be clearing up some of her troubles as she outprocesses Cpt. Alf S. Fischer, also assigned to the 197th. Since both captains have been assigned to the brigade, the likeness in both names has confused everyone from local telephone operators to the mail clerk. "I used to get telephone calls from his girl friends at my home," remarked Cpt. Alberta Fisher. "Its pretty hard to explain over the phone to a gal on the other end that she has the wrong Al Fisher residence."

Greenlief Speaks To Graduates

A 1942 graduate of the Infantry Officer Candidate School, now a general, addressed 120 graduates of the Reserve Components Officer Candidate Class 1-69 Tuesday (May 27) at 11 a.m. in Marshall Auditorium.

He is Major General Francis S. Greenlief, deputy chief, National Guard Bureau, Department of the Army and Air Force.

Gen. Greenlief also was briefed on the activities of the Nonresident Instruction Department of the U.S. Army Infantry School and paid an office call on Brigadier General Sydney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the school.

Gen. Greenlief enlisted in the Nebraska National Guard as a private in July of 1940. He came on active duty in December of that same year.

As commanding officer of Company L, 134th Infantry, the general participated in battles in Normandy, northern France, the Rhineland and Ardennes. He returned to the United States in 1945 and was released from active duty the next year.

The general rejoined the Nebraska National Guard in 1947. He served as an operation and training officer of the 134th Regiment from 1948 to 1949. From 1949 to 1953 he was the assistant chief of staff of the 34th Infantry Division and acting assistant Adjutant General of Nebraska.

He took refresher courses at the Infantry School in 1948 and 1954.

General Greenlief was ordered to active duty in the National Guard Bureau as executive officer to the assistant chief in 1960. His appointment as a brigadier general in the Nebraska Army National Guard became effective in 1962. He was assigned as Assistant Chief of the National Guard Bureau for the Army in 1962 and appointed to his present position in 1963.

His awards include the Silver Star, Bronze Star Medal, Purple Heart with three Oak-Leaf Clusters, Croix de Guerre avec Etoile de Vermeil, American Defense Service Medal, American Campaign Medal, European-African-Middle Eastern Campaign Medal with four bronze service stars and the National Defense Medal.

Films of Wright Shown on TV

CBS News on Tuesday night treated local viewers to films of Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., assuming command of the 101st Airborne Division in ceremonies in Vietnam.

General Wright was commander of Fort Benning and commandant of the Infantry School until his departure on May 10.

SMALL BOY, LARGE DOG . . . Shaun Ahern and his pet dog were among the 99 entries to Fort Benning annual pet show. Other entries included frogs, chickens, and an assortment of other animals.

Third Army's C.M.M.I. Team Checks on Daily Maintenance

By PFC Ben Cunningham

There are two inspections during the year that are thought by many to be the most important in the Army. One is the I.G. (Inspector General's inspection). The other is the C.M.M.I. (Command Maintenance Management Inspection), an anual inspection which can be conducted at any time.

The Third Army C.M.M.I. team is assigned to Center Troop Command. They cover a territory which includes all Reserve and Active Army installations in the states of Georgia and Florida. Next year that area will be expanded to include Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

"The mission of the team," says Maj. Bobbie Fletcher Jr., "is to find out how well the individual units are performing day to day maintenance of vehicles, equipment and records. The results help keep the commander and staff of the unit advised of their present status."

Lt. Col. Robert W. Pierce, commanding officer of the team, breaks down the duties even further: "We find out what is wrong, tell them what can be done to correct it, and get them (the unit) on the right road."

Each member of the C.M.M.I. team must meet certain qualifications to participate in the inspection. The individual must be an E-5 or above and an expert in his particular field.

The unit that is to be inspected is given a three to four-hour notice prior to the inspection. In the ensuing time the unit puts together the last minute preparations.

During the actual inspection, the C.M.M.I. inspector examines the equipment and records, and asks questions of the members of the unit. The personnel involved are able to challenge the inspector on any deficiency as long as there is paper work to back it up.

Engineers Get New Equipment

Port Construction Units Expand For New Roles

U. S. ARMY COMBAT DEVELOPMENTS COMMAND, Ft. Belvoir, Va. — To meet the expanded role assigned to today's port construction units, the Engineer Agency, US Army Combat Developments Command (CDC), Fort Belvoir, Va., is now completing a proposed Table of Organization and Equipment for the Army's new Engineer Port Construction Battalion. CDC has the responsibility for writing TO&Es for the Army.

The Engineer Port Construction Company, which was organized for the post World War II timeframe to support the Theater of Operations, is not organized to perform the many tasks which are included in the missions of today's port construction units. This new TO&E for the Port Construction Battalion modifies the company TO&E and provides an increased capability which has proven to be necessary as a result of lessons learned in Vietnam.

Building Block

The battalion organization is based on the "building block" concept. The basic structure would consist of a Headquarters and Headquarters Company, and two to four Port Construction Companies.

The unit is charged with planning, supervising and executing all facets of marine and waterfront construction and improvement or rehabilitation of existing ports. This includes piers, wharves, navigational aids, marine demolitions, salvage, and the repair of locks and canals.

The new battalion will be equipped with working vessels, tugs, floating platforms, and harbor craft as well as conventional construction equipment. This equipment permits rapid construction of conventional pile piers and installation and removal of prefabricated piers such as the DeLong Barges and pontoon piers. The requirement for dredging is met by the use of cellular teams from TO&E 5-550, Engineer Dredge Teams.

The CDC designed battalion would give the Army new port construction capabilities in underwater exploration, such as sonar devices for depth soundings. The unit would have men and materiel resources for the repair of canals and locks, with greater ability to install portable piers.

New equipment in the battalion would see the inclusion of a construction equipment pipeline barges, pipeline tractors and a variety of specialized equipment to facilitate installation of submarine pipeline. The Army's new 600-650 horsepower tug would be used to assist in this capacity.

Minimum Effort

In its concept of operations the Engineer Port Construction Battalion may be employed in battalion strength when the size of the mission or project completion time dictates a maximum effort. However, in smaller jobs the companies are designed to operate independently at several different sites with the attachment of certain logistic and administrative personnel. The battalion would be completely mobile under conditions favoring concurrent land and water movement.

Fourth of July Competition Set To Select Outstanding Soldier

Seventeen major units and 58 individuals here are scheduled to take part in a series of competitive events during Fort Benning's Fourth of July celebration, for the purpose of selecting the outstanding soldier and the outstanding unit.

Both the outstanding soldier and the outstanding unit categories consist of two divisions. The Candidate Division includes all officer candidate and noncommissioned officer candidate battalions while the Infantry Center Division includes all other units.

Individuals participating in unit competition are not eligible for the individual competition and vice versa. All contestants must be enlisted men.

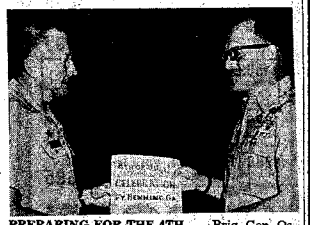
The outstanding soldier competition will consist of four events. These include a physical combat proficiency test (PCPT) to be held on Watson Field from 8-10 a.m.; a military appearance and a manual of arms event to be held on Eubanks Field from 12:30 to 1:30 and from 1:30 to 3:00 p.m., respectively; and a general military knowledge test to be held in Infantry Hall, Bldg. 4, from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. Fatigues will be worn for the PCPT and kahkis for the military appearance and manual of arms events.

Outstanding unit competition will be judged solely on platoon drill competition which will be held on Eubanks Field. Competition will be held for the Candidate Division from 8-10 a.m. and for the Infantry Center Division from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The event will consist of an in-ranks inspection, drill and ceremonies and maneuvers to be selected by the unit. Units will perform from five to seven minutes each and will be judged on precision, appearance, commands of the leader and the manual of arms.

Uniforms for the event will consist of cotton kahkis, helmet liner, pistol belt, first aid pouch, bayonet and M14 rifle.

The winner of the outstanding unit competition in the Infantry Center Division will be awarded the commanding general's trophy.



PREPARING FOR THE 4TH . . . Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, left, commanding general, U.S. Army Infantry Center receives Fourth of July celebration tickets from Col. Richard Maeder, Army Training Center, 1st Brigade commander, and overall chairman for the event. The entire 4th of July program with exception of fireworks display will be held on Eubanks field. All day entertainment of the AAU sanctioned Medal of Honor Marathon should make this 4th of July a celebration to remember.

ROTC Basic Summer Camp To Begin Here June 13th

By Pvt. Richard Stirlen

"All of us are keenly aware of the importance of the Reserve Officer Training Corp, not only to the Army, but also to the nation as a whole. An increasing number of senior Army officers are graduates of the ROTC program, and that is why we devote ourselves wholeheartedly to ROTC."

This was how Colonel Francisco J. Ramos, commanding officer of the 2nd Training Brigade, Army Training Center, described his feelings on upcoming ROTC Basic Summer Camp to be held at Fort Benning. The 3,600 cadets expected for the camp will begin arriving June 13, with approximately 1,800 cadets in the first increment. The second increment will report on June 27 for their six weeks of intensive instruction.

The ROTC Basic Summer Camp program is relatively new having been started in the summer of 1966 at Fort Knox, Kentucky. In 1967, it was moved to Fort Benning, and each year has seen an increase in class size. This Basic Summer Camp is unique, for it is the only one of its kind in the country.

Junior Colleges

Most people are probably familiar with the ROTC program which lasts four college years. However, Basic Summer Camp is designed to give students from junior colleges not offering ROTC, or those who were unable to enter the program during their first two years of school, an opportunity to make-up the instruction during the camp period. It replaces Military Science 1 and 2, normally given during the freshman and sophomore years, and qualifies cadets from Army areas in all 50 states and Puerto Rico to enter the advanced ROTC course when they return to their respective campuses in the fall.

While at the camp, the cadets are trained in the fundamental arts of soldiering, as well as being physically conditioned. They receive courses sponsored by the Infantry School in leadership, tactics, and map reading, and attend demonstrations of river crossing techniques, Ranger work, Airborne and Airmobile operations, and counter-insurgency measures. The cadet is placed in a number of leadership positions, and is under constant evaluation by a team of 133 officers directed by chief of the Liaison Detachment, Colonel Clifton E. Male, from Georgia State College in Atlanta.

As can be imagined, preparations for this six-week program are tremendous, and have been underway since January. According to Colonel Ramos, whose 2nd Brigade will be home for the cadets, "There has been thorough planning in all aspects of the program, not only as regards training, but also processing, recreation, housing and messing."

FORT BENNING, GEORGIA, HOME OF U.S. ARMY INFANTRY CENTER

VOL. 27, NO. 40 — FRIDAY, JUNE 6, 1969 — 40 PAGES — 10c

Maj. Gen. Forsythe Takes 'Over

Major General George I. Forsythe, has assumed command of the United States Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning.

The former commander of the Fort Bragg Center and Commander in the Dominican Republic public of Vietnam was welcomed to the post with ceremonies in his honor on York Field here Monday.

He was saluted by an honor guard and with a fifteen gun salute.

Gen. Forsythe said, "It is a great honor and privilege for Mrs. Forsythe and me to return home, to the Home of the Infantry, and to that 'iron triangle' of community support, the Infantryman, Fort Benning and Columbus."

He added that support and understanding of the Army's mission in this community is "without parallel in the entire country."

General Forsythe took command from Brigadier General Ewell E. Eaves, who had headed the post since the departure of Major General John M. Wright Jr., now commanding the 101st Airborne Division in Vietnam.

Incoming Officer Has Five Children

Mrs. Geo. Ennis, Col. Capt. Raymond Henry, Gen. Forsythe

Maj. Gen. Forsythe previously had served at Fort Benning from March, 1965, to March, 1966, as assistant commandant of the Infantry School.

A 1939 graduate of the University of Montana, he received Army training in the Reserve Officers Training Corps.

He was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Regular Army while serving on Kodiak Island, Alaska.

During World War II, he was assigned to Headquarters, XIX Corps in England where he participated in the planning and conduct of the Normandy invasion of Europe in June, 1964.

In later assignments, he was military assistant to the Secretary of the Army, White House liaison officer and the chief of staff of the Army, and first senior advisor to the field command of the Vietnamese Army with the Military Assistance Advisory Group in the Republic of Vietnam.

Before assuming command of the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile), he served as assistant deputy for Civilian Operations and Revolutionary Development Support (CORDS), commander, U.S. Military Assistance Command, Vietnam.

Third Army Commander Will Speak

By Dick Kemp

Lieutenant General John L. Throckmorton, commanding general, Third U. S. Army, will address graduating members of Infantry Officer Advanced Course Class 2-69 at 10 a.m. June 12 in Marshall Auditorium.

The general has been nominated by President Richard M. Nixon for promotion to the four-star grade and assignment as commander of U.S. STRIKE Command, MacDill Air Force Base, Florida.

He has served as Third section, supervised the enormous task of sending each cadet an information pamphlet, introductory letter, questionnaire, and hometown news release forms. He estimates that a portion of this material weighed 19 tons, and that gives some idea of the amount of paper work sent to the cadets. Lt. Siebels' office is also responsible for in-processing the arriving cadets. A staff of 300 officers and men will be on hand to man the processing stations and assist in control and movement of the cadets through the maze of medical and administrative sections constructed in the South Harmony Church Field House.

Lieutenant Weldon R. Williams, ATC Special Services, has planned a number of sports and recreational activities. There will be a volleyball and softball tournament, as well as a talent show. Third Army show on the 15th of June, cadet parties, and equipment for informal games.

In addition, cadets will be given the opportunity to travel to various interesting and historical areas in the surrounding communities. Trips to Atlanta and a Braves game, Roosevelt's Little White House, and a visit to Callaway Gardens are among the proposed activities. According to Lieutenant Colonel Gerald F. Wilson, "The people of Georgia are anxious and interested for these men to get out and see Georgia. They represent all 50 states, and can bring a lot to this section while also gaining from the experience."

Separate Housing

The mammoth task of housing and feeding the 3,600 cadets will be the responsibility of the 2nd Brigade. These cadets will occupy four companies in each of the brigades four battalions, while the fifth company in each battalion will continue to conduct an eight week cycle for basic trainees. Since the training received by the ROTC Cadets is specialized, they will be kept separated from the regular basic training companies. Captain Joseph Crawford, chief of 2nd Brigade Operations and Planning, has coordinated for the arrival of the cadets, and anticipates no problems in melding them into the brigade.

EDUCATIONAL OPPORTUNITIES

I am a 2 Lt. with an ROTC commission on an obligated two year tour of active duty. What chance do I have of advancing my education if I decide to make the Army my career?

The Army school system—the world's largest campus—has two colleges, 22 branch schools and two specialist schools, offering 650 courses of instruction in 17 states. The Army also makes full use of civilian educational facilities, sending selected officers to leading civilian schools to acquire Baccalaureate through Doctorate degrees. Today more than 1,000 officers are enrolled in 90 U. S. institutions pursuing degrees in 450 fields. Department of the Army statistics show that nine out of 10 career officers have undergraduate degrees with 20 percent holding advanced degrees. About 75 percent of career officers may expect the opportunity to gain advanced degrees while in the service.

PERSONAL BAGGAGE

I am in the grade of E-4 with less than four years of service and have permanent change of station orders to Germany. How much personal baggage will I be allowed to ship?

Soldiers in grade E-4 and below, with less than four years service are permitted to ship 200 pounds of personal baggage upon receipt of permanent change of station or temporary duty orders.

RETIRED PAY INCOME TAX

In December of this year I will complete twenty years service and plan to retire. Does income tax on retired pay differ in various state?

There is a great variation in the income tax the various states charge on retired pay. Connecticut, Florida, Illinois, Nevada, Maine, New Jersey, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Texas, Washington, Wyoming charge no income tax.

New Hampshire and Tennessee levy taxes on interest and dividends.

In Alaska, Arkansas, Hawaii, and Minnesota all military retired pay is exempt from taxes.

Disability pay is exempt in Alabama, Arizona, District of Columbia, Georgia, Idaho, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Michigan, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Utah, Vermont, Virginia and Wisconsin.

All military retired pay is taxable in Massachusetts.

Partial exemptions for various reasons may be obtained from California, Colorado, Delaware, Maryland, Oklahoma, Oregon and Virginia.

WEST POINT PREP SCHOOL

I understand the Army has a prep school to qualify enlisted men for the United States Military Academy. What are the qualification requirements and how can I apply?

The USMA Prep School (USMAPS) is located at Fort Belvoir, Va. The course runs from August to May each year. An enlisted man remains on active duty while taking the course. He must have high school education or the equivalent and be between 18 and 21 years of age.

Each major unit at Fort Benning has a USMAPS advisory officer. Additional information can be obtained from him or your unit commander.

Orientations on Discharge Must Be Held

Commanders are reminded that orientations on benefits of an honorable discharge must be conducted in accordance with recently distributed AR 350-21. These briefings (which also should cover the disadvantages of a less-than-honorable discharge) are to be given to individuals entering active duty, completing six months service and reenlisting. A new requirement in AR 350-21 calls for a Form 20 entry as to the latest date the soldier received this orientation.

Individual Records Needed for Discharge Processing

Processing of personnel returned from overseas for discharge because of unfitness or unsuitability is sometimes delayed at CONUS transfer stations if losing units do not forward individual records promptly. Records should be sent directly to the appropriate transfer activity by special delivery certified mail to insure receipt concurrent with or before arrival of the individual. Reference is paragraph 16d, AR 640-10.

Passport Needed for Commercial Travel to Thailand

Military personnel traveling to Thailand are reminded that they need a valid passport-visa when entering or leaving that country by commercial carrier. Failure to have the document can result in unnecessary inconvenience and expense to obtain one. AR 600-290 contains world-wide passport-visa information. In the near future Department of the Army plans to publish a circular on Thailand travel requirements.

SUBJECT: Association of the United States Army Membership

All Fort Benning Personnel

It is always necessary for the Army to keep its goals in support of our national policy clearly in focus. This is particularly important today.

The Association of the United States Army provides an unofficial channel whereby our purposes may be expressed; it performs a valuable service to our nation by furthering public understanding and appreciation of the Army. Equally important, it provides us an opportunity to associate with an organization having aims and objectives the same as our own.

The Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army occupies a unique position of leadership among 114 active AUSA Chapters. It was adjudged the "largest and the best" in 1968 and is a strong contender for similar accolades for the current year.

Civilian membership in the local Chapter is at an all-time high, following a successful drive to enlist support for AUSA in the community. We are challenged to match the dedication of this segment of our membership. Only through our full support do we justify the hard work of our civilian friends on behalf of the Army.

I encourage you to join me in a continuing program to insure our Chapter remains a leader in the important programs of AUSA.

Reliance on Education Needed To Overcome Today's Problems

In expressing his concern for the "education gap" of today, Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird said May 10, "In any long-range view, educational must be our chief reliance for overcoming most of the problems that beset us."

Speaking at dedication ceremonies of the North Central Technical Institute at Wausau, Wis., Secretary Laird noted, "In the lifetime of every adult in this audience we have witnessed a technological revolution which, along with great benefits, has also brought some tragic consequences.

"It has made the undedicated and unskilled worker obsolete. It has left behind many older workers who lacked the opportunity, the ability, or the incentive to undertake retraining. It has meant unemployment rates approximating those of the bleak years of the 1930's for young people who dropped out of school too soon or for other reasons lacked skills when they entered the job market."

Mr. Laird said the nation's schools bear some of the responsibility for these unhappy consequences. He noted that the "education gap" is the gap between the academic world and the world of work. "It is the failure to provide a bridge connecting the classroom

Tribute Describes Infantryman

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Today 25 years will have passed since D-Day when the allies' military armada landed on the beaches of France. With this in mind, the following tribute to the Infantryman has been prepared.)

By Maj. Bob Chick

Infantrymen during World War II were called "mud, rain, frost and sweat" boys by Ernie Pyle. Today, half a world and a quarter-century away, only the "frost" is missing. Were he alive today, America's most famous war correspondent would describe the doglace with the same affectionate words.

For they are the same young Americans, toughened fast by combat.

The Infantryman today is as dedicated to preserving a national ideal as his father who landed at Normandy 25 years ago.

The time and place are different, but the Infantryman is the same.

He cries when a buddy is killed, and is no less a man.

He—we call him a 'grunt' today—catnaps when the night battlefield is quiet.

He prays that an honorable peace will come soon—and so did his father.

A poncho is often his bed and incoming rockets his alarm clock. Ammo humping and convoy driving, ambushes and air assaults occupy the other 20 hours of his day.

He, like his father, often saves a chocolate bar from his C-rations, or at least a smile and a wave, for the children ravaged by years of war.

Infantrymen are different colors, different religions, even different nationalities, but they come from the same free land.

His trademark is a jungle hat or bottle of insect repellent snapped to his helmet—or maybe a short timer's calendar tucked inside.

His mission is peace and freedom in Vietnam, not war. His father won both—and so will he.

He loathes draft card burners, admires pointmen, and wouldn't part with his M-16 rifle and a bandoleer of ammo for a new Mustang convertible.

Call them grunts or ground-pounders, foot-sloggers or straight legs, but they're all proud Infantrymen. And, when peace comes to Vietnam, their fathers and their nation will welcome home their sons with honor.

Reception Welcomes Forsythe's

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. George L. Forsythe received an official personal welcome from senior officers here and prominent civilians of the Columbus-Phenix City area at 5:15 p.m. June 2.

Many old acquaintances were renewed as the new commanding general of the U.S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning and his wife greeted friends made during the general's previous tour here in 1965-1966 when he served as assistant commandant of the Infantry School.

More than 500 people passed through the reception line in the Fort Benning Officers Club to greet the general and his wife.

The reception was hosted by Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Oscar E. Davis.

"A refreshing change of pace . . . a swirling kaleidoscopic happening tin color and motion . . . a sensory experience of visual confusion and delight."

These phrases describe the impressions of couples attending the twelfth week intermediate party of the 90th Officer Candidate Company, 5th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade, held in the Officers Club.

According to Officer Candidate (OC) Gordon Black, decorations chairman, an attempt was made to change from the stable and traditional dance decorations and to create a more "insecure" ballroom atmosphere. To accomplish this, strobe and black lighting, programmed box slides, transparencies and multiple schemes of color and motion were utilized.

OC Black, an architecture graduate of Harvard University, also employed flourescent paint as one of the primary means of lighting. The swirling strobe lights added to the overall impression of continual motion. Multi-patterned and colored parachutes were used as curtains and false ceilings in the ballroom. Three thousand ballons formed a terrace of color across the front of the room.

One wall of the ballroom was painted with a two-dimensional geometric progression of orange and white lines. A psychedelic tunnel of color connected the ballroom with the dining room.

The theme of motion and confusion was continued in the dining room. A sixteen by eight foot collage sent out a barrage of swirling color and configurations from behind the head table. Each tiny element in its impressionistic scheme was clipped from magazines. This and other decorations were planned to excite and stimulate the imagination.

The most traditional part of the decor was a huge, crepe-paper stuffed "Follow Me" patch created by the OCS Wives Club.

In the center of the dance floor stood a tower of flourescent-colored boxes as the projection booth. From port holes in the tower, a continuous in-and-out-of-focus projection of slides and movies were emitted onto the walls, ceilings and floors of the dancing area. The Laural and Hardy Movies, O.C.S. and world travel slides attracted the guests attention and kept every moment busy.

The Guests of Honor were Lt. Col. and Mrs. Robert W. Muller.

Special guests were Maj. and Mrs. John R. Schumaker, Maj. and Mrs. Edgerton Crouter, Capt. and Mrs. Edward Joseph, Capt. William F. Downey, Capt. and Mrs. John O. Rowell and Lt. and Mrs. Larry D. Fleener.

The party danced to the music of "The Cotillions", a local group.

Rangers Wives Hear Talk On Femininity, Beauty Care

Femininity and beauty care were the topics at the Ranger Department wives luncheon at the Supper Club of the Fort Benning Officers Club.

Mrs. Julie Koppfer, associate director of a firm in the Columbus area, was the guest speaker. She gave a makeup demonstration on usage of her line of cosmetics.

Mrs. Jerry K. Lorenzini volunteered to be her model. Mrs. Koepfer demonstrated the steps to proper skin cleaning in preparation for make up application as well as for bedtime.

In discussing makeup shades, she included helpful tricks to facial contour. Pointers on how to adapt daytime eye make-up into night time wear, plus the technique of eyebrow shaping were also part of her talk.

As for beauty treatment secrets, she mentioned the care of the back of the neck since it shows signs of true age even though age is not apparent anywhere else. She stressed the importance of the upward stroke in cleaning and make up application to the face, as well as the need to keep skin moisturized.

In keeping with the feminine mystique, luncheon tables were decorated with painter palettes delicately fringed with net, acting as color charts for rouge.

Also, lovely eye rests fashioned of felt could be found admist dainty sweet pea paper flowers.

All decorations were of soft pastel shades.

Beautiful bouquets of fresh cut spring flowers were adorning [illegible]

Hostesses were ladies of Combat Commanding Committee.

Mrs. V. T. Phillips, wife of Col. Phillips, Department director, welcomed newcomers Mrs. B. Thomas Dunning Jr., Mrs. Richard Winslow, Mrs. Harry A. Garner, Mrs. Gary L. Baum, Mrs. William J. Wright and Mrs. Jonathan Thomas.

She then introduced farewell honorees to the ladies of Combat Commanding Committee who were Mrs. Henry H. Jeffers, Mrs. Jack L. Kilcrease, Mrs. John M. Merrill and Mrs. Mark B. Sanders.

Also Mrs. Michael E. Sullivan, Mrs. Gary L. Baum, Mrs. Wayne R. Garner, Mrs. Thomas Kwiatkowski and Mrs. Jerry K. Lorenzini.

Others leaving and recipients of charms were Mmes. Teddy L. Booth, Harold R. Van Gorden, Michael C. Jordan and Billy R. Robbins.

Also Mmes. Rogert C. Kinney, Donald J. Upton, Richard H. Utzinger and Thomas O. Ward Jr.

Captain Peel Speaks At Wives' Club Coffee

The Officer Candidate Wives Club of 60th Company, 6th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade, held a coffee in the dayroom May 9.

Capt. Jesse F. Peel, company commander, discussed reviews in preparation for the 60th Company's Senior Status Review to be held on May 30. His wife, Mrs. Peel, spoke on the use of calling cards.

Mrs. Edward C. Radcliff and Mrs. Grady W. Williams were the honored guests.

Company guests were Mrs. Peel, Mrs. Paul Warren and Mrs. Delmar Shepard.

Decorations were in blue, denoting upcoming Senior Status. The centerpiece was a Maypole made on a three tiered base covered with paper carnations. Little men made of pipe cleaners held each streamer from the pole. A variety of cookies were found in May baskets on the table.

The Citadel Graduates 4 Cadets

CHARLESTON, S. C. — Four Citadel cadets from the Columbus area, all the sons of military personnel, have graduated from The Citadel, the military college of South Carolina.

Colonel Marlowe Speaks At 'Blue Love' Spring Formal

The Student Brigade Officers' Spring Formal was held at the FBOOM. The evening's festivities centered around the theme "Love is Blue."

The gala evening began as Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant, USAIS, and Col. and Mrs. Lon D. Marlowe Jr., commanding officer, TSB, greeted the guests.

The guests then moved into the Fountain Room where they were served a choice of roast prime rib of beef or filet mignon, with green beans, tossed salad, baked potato and apple pie.

Following the delicious dinner, the master of ceremonies, Capt. David A. Talbert, company commander, 1st Co., 2nd Student Battalion, TSB, introduced Col. Marlowe who addressed the officers and their wives.

He commented on the outstanding performance of The Student Brigade even though faced with a high degree of "personnel turbulence."

This "turbulence" was reflected by his statement that "of the 113 officers who attended last year's Spring Formal, only eight remain in the brigade and of those, two will depart by the end of June."

Col. Marlowe then introduced Brig. Gen. Berry who praised The Student Brigade on a job well done in fulfilling its important training and support mission within The Infantry School.

The guests were then entertained by the United States Army Infantry Center Chorus, conducted by 2nd Lt. Gary W. Bagle.

Among the selections performed by the Chorus was "Love is Blue" which accented the theme of the evening's activities.

Also featured was a medley of songs from the musical "Fiddler on the Roof," highlighted by a solo performance of "If I Were A Rich Man" by SP4 John D. Rasanen. PFC Benie Salter gave a solo of "This is Our Land." The Chorus concluded their entertainment with "The Army Song."

The approximately 250 officers and wives in attendance spent the remainder of the evening dancing to the music of the "L and M's," a local dance band.

Wives Hold 'Old South' Coffee

The 95th Company, 9th Student Battalion Wives' Club met for coffee in the company day room.

"The Old South" was the theme for the coffee. High-top shoes, fans and silhouettes of a Southern lady decorated the room.

Vine-covered white pillars, white wrought iron chairs and fence and an imitation stone walk formed the entrance. A stately white Southern plantation served as the table centerpiece.

Honored guests were Mrs. Robert W. Muller, wife of Lt. Col. Muller, commander of the 9th Student Battalion, and Mrs. Evin L. Parker, wife of Lt. Col. Parker, Marine Corps liaison officer to the Infantry School.

Special guests included Mrs. Edgerton T. Crozier, Mrs. Edward Joseph, Mrs. John O. Rowell and Mrs. Carey W. Dunning.

A program featured Capt. Carey W. Dunning, 95th Company commander.

New President of OWC Brings To Job Wealth of Experience

MRS. MALCOLM BAER

Fort Benning's OWC is fortunate indeed to have heading its slate of officers for 1969-70, Mary Jane Baer.

Mrs. Baer is the charming wife of Col. Malcolm R. Baer, adjutant general of the Infantry Center here. She brings to the job a wealth of experience with club activities garnered stateside and abroad.

For nine years, Mrs. Baer has been a Red Cross volunteer. She was chairman of volunteer services at Camp McGill, Japan, in 1954; president of the Women's Golf Association, Fort Benjamin Harrison in 1958; welfare chairman for the First Cavalry Airmobile Division, 1963; president of Fort Benning's Golf Association, 1965 and activities chairman on the Executive Board of the Adjutant General's OWC, Washington D.C., for the 1967-68 term.

Learning in advance of her impressive record of service, one is pleasantly surprised on meeting Mrs. Baer to find not the stereotyped, busy "clubwoman," but a very poised and interesting individual.

Mary Jane Baer's interests are many sided. She is an accomplished painter. Several of her favorite pictures are on display in her home on Lumpkin Road.

Her artistic talent is apparent also in the furnishings in the Baer quarters. Many of the pieces are antiques that she has collected over the years.

On being questioned about her flower arrangements, Mrs. Baer admits to holding a teacher's certificate in floral design from the prestigious Sogetsu School of Ikebana in Tokyo.

This multi-talented lady is also a writer. She writes poetry and is presently at work on a book of children's stories.

In her spare time (?!) Mrs. Baer enjoys golf and bridge.

The Baers have three children — Shelley, 22, now completing graduate work in Bavaria; Malcolm Jr., 20, now at Middle Georgia College, and Mary Lou, 16, in her junior year of high school at Holton Arms, Bethesda, Md.

Summer Is Theme Of Coffee

Summer was the theme of the first coffee held by the Officer Candidate Wives Club of the 94th company, 9th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade.

Honored guests were Mrs. Robert W. Muller, Mrs. Edgerton Crouter and Mrs. Everette J. Thomas.

Special guests present were Mrs. Roger Dimsdale, Mrs. Edward Joseph, Mrs. Arthur B. Fennessey and Mrs. Robert G. Archer.

The program was a briefing by Lt. Col. Herbert G. See, chief of the Army Community Services at Fort Benning. Lt. Col. See explained the role of the Army Community Service.

Lt. Col. Robert W. Muller, commanding officer of the 9th Student Battalion, presented an orientation on the OCS Program and showed the wives the film, "Spirit of the Infantry."

Wives' Club Organizes Gardens, Atlanta Trips

Officer Candidates are known for their almost constant activity, but in the case of 60th Company, 6th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade, the wives are almost as busy as their soldier husbands.

In recent weeks, under the guidance of the President Mrs. Richard A. Farrand, they have been on outings to Calloway Gardens, gone on a shopping expedition to Atlanta, taken the Heritage Tour of Columbus, Ga., and had numerous barbecues, showers and parties.

The women are now involved in assisting their husbands in preparing for 60th's Co. Senior Status Formal Saturday, and in planning a reception for wives who will be joining their husbands once senior status has been achieved.

Mrs. Farrand is assisted by William A. Toelke, vice president; Henry D. Goss, secretary-treasurer, and Mrs. Lawrence Wells, hospitality chairman.

The club's advisor is the wife of 60th Co.'s commanding officer, Mrs. Jesse P. Peel.

Club's Auction To Raise Funds For Flag Drive

The Geographical Officers' Wives Club is planning a punch party and white elepant auction at 8 p.m. June 18.

They will meet in the Benning Room of the Fort Benning Officers Club.

According to Mrs. Ann Hunt, chairman, the proceeds from the auction will be turned over to the Gold Star Wives to help in their Avenue of Flags campaign.

"We hope to raise enough money to buy one complete flag kit as this is a most worthwhile project. We also hope our members will make every effort to attend this meeting, especially those whose husbands are returning home this summer so that we can bid them farewell," she said.

Tea Features Music Program

Members of the Columbus Symphony Orchestra presented a special program at the Weapons Department coffee, given by the Small Arms Committee, at the Country Club.

The program featured Arthur Cotruvo, violinist; Natalie Kruger, flutist, and Jack Jones, pianist.

Mrs. Joel M. Hollis presided at the coffee.

Magazine Published For Wives

LADYCOM is a new magazine being published expressly for military wives. It means lady communications. The first issue was in May.

The publishers of LADYCOM are offering the magazine free of charge to wives living overseas. LADYCOM will be published monthly.

The publisher, Edward M. Downey, is an ex-Air Force officer. He said the important role of the military wife has long been overlooked.

"These dedicated ladies," he said, "are vital to America."

SMA Dunaway Tours Post

Sergeant Major of the Army George W. Dunaway recently spent a week visiting Fort Benning.

While he was here, his itinerary included observing the training of Noncommissioned Officer Candidates, Airborne Basic trainees, Rangers and Officer Candidates.

He was accompanied by Mrs. Dunaway who was a guest at several social functions. She visited Vietnam returnees at Martin Army Hospital.

SMA Dunaway had previously been at Fort Benning as a student and later as an instructor in the U. S. Army Infantry Regiment.

He entered the Army in 1941 and served in the European-African-Middle Eastern Theater in World War II.

Dunaway's awards include the Legion of Merit, the Gallantry Cross with Silver Star, Bronze Star Medal with "V" device, the Army Commendation Medal with 1st oak leaf cluster, the Vietnam Service Medal, the Vietnam Campaign Medal and the Combat Infantry Badge (second award).

Provides Vital Support

Veterinaries Celebrate Anniversary

By Mickey Nichols

On June 3 the Veterinary Corps celebrated its 53rd Anniversary. This corps now provides vital support for the troops in the areas of food inspection, veterinary preventive medicine, animal care and treatment and research and development.

Before the Veterinary Corps was established the military lacked the protection of food inspection. Often the men were given rations that were spoiled and unfit to eat. As a result of this many men had diarrhea and other digestive disturbances.

During the Spanish-American War the "embalmed" beef scandal arose but it was not until 1916 that the Veterinary Corps was organized and their expertly trained personnel took over the responsibility of meat inspection and the checking of all foods of animal origin.

Many overseas countries do not have facilities to guard against diseased animals and contaminated food being sold. The Veterinary Corps assumes the responsibility of inspecting all animals and fowl purchased by the Army in foreign countries, before and after slaughter. They also insure that animal housing conditions are inspected whenever possible.

As a protection for our men in Vietnam the Veterinary Corps works closely with the National Institute of Bacteriology and Animal Pathology (NIB). One aim of NIB is the improvement of vaccine production available to farmers in Vietnam. The Veterinary Corps has assisted NIB in the vaccination of all hogs and poultry in order to help the farmers in Vietnam protect their stock and thus increase production.

The Veterinary Corps is also responsible for the medical care given to military animals and provides services for pet animals belonging to military personnel.

A military veterinarian performs a physical examination of dogs procured by the Army. The Veterinary Corps must also keep them in good health so they can do the best job possible. Wounds from enemy action, scratches, cuts and other injuries from rough underbrush and sharp terrain are common to the Army dog.

The military occupational specialty (MOS) of Army dogs numbers four. These are sentry dog, scout dog, tracker and contraband detector dog. German shepherds are usually used in every MOS except that of tracker. Labrador retrievers are used as tracker dogs. These dogs can all be used with or without a leash.

Tracker dogs are used because they can follow a scent or track not visible to man. This dog also alerts his handler as the enemy comes near. The tracker dog is an integral part of a reconnaissance element for tracking enemy movement and fixing his position for destruction.

Sentry dogs, now frequently used in Vietnam, and their handlers are trained in a six-week course at a sentry dog school in Okinawa. After the handler has completed his tour in Vietnam the dog is returned to Okinawa to train another six weeks with a new handler. These dogs provide security in a fixed vicinity and attack all intruders.

The scout dog works quietly to scent our intruders and warn the handler of danger. These dogs are trained to find tunnels, booby traps and caches of food and equipment. Many scouts dogs and handlers now serving in Vietnam received their training here at Fort Benning. When the handler completes his tour of duty he returns home but the dog must stay in Vietnam and be given to a new handler. The dog will undergo a training period in Vietnam with his new handler.

The newest canine specialist in the Army is the contraband detector dog. Recent headlines were made by a German shepherd, named "Gunner," who was trained by a biosensor research team under the cooperation of the Provost Marshal General's Office and Veterinary Corps

Post Finance Gets 3rd Army Award

A Third United States Army Commander's Award for Outstanding Management Improvement was presented at Fort Benning Thursday (May 29).

The award covered the period July 1-December 31 in 1968 and was made by Lt. Gen. John L. Throckmorton, commanding general, Third U. S. Army, to the Finance and Accounting office here.

Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, commanding general, U. S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning, presented the award to Lt. Col. R. E. Van Der Like, Finance and Accounting Officer, for General Throckmorton.

The award recognizes effective planning action by subordinate commanders and is presented semiannually to the commander achieving the most outstanding results from a management improvement project.

The award was made for a project which initiated the use of a personnel data card to audit all military leave records at Fort Benning.

Savings to taxpayers of $634,500 were realized through the use of the cards between April and July, 1968. Anticipated savings for Fiscal Year 1969 are $704,892.

Also present at the ceremony were Col. Robert E. Hall, deputy director of logistics, and George E. Herling, deputy comptroller.

Food Inspection Specialists Keep Benning Healthy

By Bill Hardin

Approximately 100,000 persons, both military and civilian, who purchase or consume food at Fort Benning, stay healthy because a group of food inspection specialists check a million pounds of food each day.

The responsibility for inspecting 926 million of food each year falls on 10 men who work under the supervision of SFC Vincent Lamm (Minneapolis, Minn.). They are assigned to the Fort Benning Medical Department Activities' Veterinary Division, commanded by Col. George E. Ritter.

All are graduates of the U.S. Army Medical Department Veterinary School (USAMEDDVS) in Chicago, where SFC Lamm has served as an instructor in both the basic and advanced courses.

Large Variety

These men encounter a variety of situations every day and even travel into near-by communities in order to perform their duties.

Their primary mission is to insure that all foods coming on post for consumption and resale meet prescribed sanitary standards and contractual requirements when applicable.

In most cases, they inspect food upon delivery regardless of previous inspections which the food may have already passed.

"This is done because some foods are subject to change in condition while in transit," says Lamm. "As an example, eggs may be affected by temperature change while in transit."

"Incoming meat previously may have received an inspection by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, but we check it here to assure that it meets all other contractual requirements," Lamm stated.

"Meat is definitely not the only type of food that we inspect. Dairy products, fruits and vegetables, even rations come under our scrutiny," he said.

The inspectors conduct tests to find out if food measures up to prescribed standards in other ways. "For example we conduct tests to determine if milk has the proper amount of butterfat and to see that certain foods are delivered in proper sizes, such as cuts of meat," Lamm said.

"Some food items are inspected several times before they are consumed. An inspector will check some items on arrival, again if kept in storage for a fairly long period and once more at the time of issue," the sergeant said.

"Our work carries us into the commissary, into post cold storage and even to a civilian cold storage facility which is under government contract in Columbus," he said.

Inspectors Travel

The inspectors' duties carry them also to many places within a 50 mile radius of the post. They inspect some 50 Civil Defense fallout shelters each year, when requested to do so by Headquarters, Third United States Army.

Civil Defense shelters are inspected to see that the required items are there and that emergency rations stored in these shelters are up to par.

The men also serve other installations in this area by maintaining a constant check on military C rations that are stored in Columbus and shipped, when needed, to other military posts. The quantity of C rations on hand totals almost 100 car loads at any given time.

Processing plants in this area which send food to Fort Benning also receive an inspection by one or more of these men when there is no other inspection conducted.

Trainee's Set New Record

The recognition of 23 soldiers who set a new Training Center record capped the presentation of trainee and unit awards at the graduation of the 5th Battalion, 1st Brigade, USATC, commanded by Lt. Col. George R. Giles.

The 23 formed the largest group in a single cycle to achieve the maximum 500 points on the Physical Combat Proficiency Test, almost doubling 1st Battalion's record of 14 perfect scores under the present four-company system.

A previous high of 18 had been established by the 3rd Battalion under the former five-company structure.

The PCPT consists of five individually-scored events; the one-mile run, 40-yard low crawl, run-dodge-jump, man-carry and horizontal ladder.

The basic trainee's highest award—the American Spirit Honor Medal—was presented to Pvt. Neil Rossman, Co. B, by Col. Herbert G. Peabody, ATC deputy commander.

Col. Richard H. Maeder, 1st Brigade commander, presented Outstanding Trainee awards to Pvt. James W. Williamson, Co. A; Pvt. Austin A. Farr, Co. D; Pvt. Stephen English, Co. E; and Pvt. Rossman.

Six Heroes Honored

Six heroes will be honored in the naming of a school, an instruction site, and four streets on the Fort Benning Reservation.

The new elementary school on Yeager Ave., which will be dedicated later this year, has been named Dexter School, in honor of Major Herbert J. Dexter, recipient of the Distinguished Service Cross.

Streets to be named for heroes include Leonard St. near Custer Road, named after Sgt. Matthew Leonard; Sisler Loop, south of Leonard St., named in honor of 1st Lt. George Sisler; Lauffer Court, near Leonard St., named in honor of PFC Billy L. Lauffer; Monroe Court, west of Leonard St., named in honor of PFC James H. Monroe, all Medal of Honor recipients.

A bleacher site will be named Drake Hill in honor of 1st Lt. Stephen C. Drake, a Distinguished Service Cross recipient.

Maj. Dexter, whose name was selected for Dexter School; was a 1952 graduate of Infantry OCS and a 1959 graduate of the Infantry officer advanced course here. He received the Distinguished Service Cross, the Army's second highest award for heroism, posthumously for gallantry in action in Vietnam in 1965.

While serving as S-3 officer with Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion (Airborne), 502nd Infantry, 1st Brigade, 101st Airborne Division, Maj. Dexter was accompanying a search and destroy mission in the vicinity of Binh Khe, Vietnam, Sept. 18, 1965, when his unit met with heavy enemy resistance.

When a friendly platoon retreated from a tactically important hill, Maj. Dexter reorganized the platoon, re-took the hill, and then directed its defense until his life was lost.

Firms To Interview Men Here

During the month of June, through Project Transition, four corporations are sending representatives to Fort Benning, to interview men nearing the end of active duty service obligations.

Job placement is an area where Project Transition can help every soldier who is leaving active service, according to Project Director Gus Schlitzkus.

Air Products and Chemicals Inc. is scheduled for June 11, interviewing for truck drivers, cylinder handlers and plant operators.

Deering Milliken Inc. also will be here June 11, interviewing for technical positions, computer operations and manufacturing management positions.

The New York City Police Department will have representatives here June 27, interviewing for patrolmen with a starting base salary of $8,947 per year.

Cone Brothers Contracting Company will be here the latter part of June interviewing for crane operators, bulldozer operators, mechanics, carpenters, pipe layers and brick masons or concrete finishers.

The Project Transition office, Room 307, Building 35, has further information on these four employers. An appointment can be set up by calling 545-1183.

Mr. Schlitzkus pointed out that Cone Brothers Contracting, among others, teaches all of the skills a man needs for heavy equipment operation, or for other jobs. A very good per centage of the men who are interviewed by a corporation are offered a job.

One fine example, said Mr. Schlitzkus, was Pratt & Whitney Aircraft who hired 34 men on one interviewing trip here this spring.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

By Bill King
King's Pizza On Call

For years kids have inscribed June Autograph books with "Roses are red. . ." Rinse pink and yellow rose petals in cold water and sprinkle over vanilla ice cream for a pretty dessert. Yes, they're edible!

Instant bouillon powder mixed with cottage cheese makes a good dip for calorie-conscious guests. Provide spears of raw cauliflower, pepper, carrots or celery.

Isaak Walton once wrote of the strawberry: "Doubtless God could have made a better berry, but doubtless God never did."

Teen Barbecue Fun: Let guests grill their own kabobs (chunks of franks, onions and pickles or ham, pineapple and peppers). Then they can just hold each kabob between halves of toasted frank rolls and pull skewer out for an instant sandwich.

Most sandwiches freeze well — but don't try freezing ones containing egg salad. Hard-cooked egg whites when frozen come out tough.

Today Marks Anniversary of D-Day

By Jim Doherty

Twenty-five years ago today the largest and mightiest amphibious assault force in history undertook the greatest successful cross-channel invasion in the history of modern warfare.

Over 100,000 allied troops were destined to go ashore in the June 6, 1944, invasion of Europe — D-Day.

The big German guns guarding the beaches could be countered with early allied artillery bombardment, but the assault force still had to contend with machine gun emplacements, land and water mines, barbed wire, explosives and other obstacles.

Worsening weather conditions made the allied tasks even more difficult. When the tide started to recede in the afternoon hours the waves became so high that smaller craft were frequently swamped.

Steep, fortified 100-foot cliffs guarded the approaches to some of the main beaches and strategic emplacements, such as the one at Point du Hoe and it was the job of the Rangers to scale them and knock out the defenses.

Before the day was out, the invading armies had suffered over 10,000 casualties.

SSgt. Maj. William V. Gilbert of the U. S. Army Advisor Group for Columbus Army Reserve forces, was of the landing forces.

Then a buck sergeant and section chief of a field artillery unit with the 20th Field Artillery which had been organized at Fort Benning in 1940, he had prepared for combat with amphibious training in Florida and six months of practice in England.

His unit landed at Utah Beach.

Toughest Part

"They weren't surprised," he said of the German defenders, "but they weren't that strong either."

"The toughest part was when we first hit the beachhead and later when we had to fight them from among the hedgerows."

Over 23,000 paratroopers had been dropped in the invasion area with the hope of securing strategic regions in the rear.

Lt. Col. (retired) Thomas Kennedy, then a second lieutenant platoon leader with the 101st Airborne Division, took off from Exeter Air Force Base, England shortly after midnight.

Assault Blow

He had received his jump training here in 1943.

Flying over the channel, he could see the invasion fleet beginning its assault below.

The 101st paratroopers' mission wa to secure the rear of the Utah beach area and then to secure the peninsula around Cherbourg.

By capturing the town of St. Mere-Eglise they hoped to block an expected German counterattack and safeguard openings for the beachhead infantrymen.

West Harnesses

"The Germans had flooded the marshes and I landed in a foot and a half of water," Kennedy said. "The first problem was to get out of our wet harnesses."

The jumpers' forces had been scattered in the jump and the immediate goal was to regroup and make way to the assembly areas.

His battalion had already suffered heavy casualties. The entire battalion staff, except for the S-3, had been lost.

The 101st met strong German resistance and the airborne invaders were engaged in several fire fights.

Static Positions

They attempted to assume static positions while still engaging in night patrols.

Kennedy's jeep struck a land mine while on one of the patrols. He was severely injured and had to be evacuated to England.

His unit returned to England to prepare for another assault, this time on Holland.

Beachhead Hit

Artillery support and relief for 82nd Airborne Division effort near St. Mere-Eglise was provided by the 6gth Field Artillery wrose members included a technical sergeant in charge of battalion communications, Jorn Roy, now of Columbus.

"We hit the beachhead at D plus 4 or 5 hours," he said. "In just two or three hours we must nave suffered 10 per cent casualties."

Everybody was trying to force his way off the beach," he continued. "We must have stayed there 6 or 7 hours."

His unit later pushed into Belgium and ended up on the Rhine when the Russia Army captured Berlin.

Roy remained active in National Guard forces after the war and recently retired as a captain.

From the D-Day landing at Omaa and Utah beaches, the allies were to push into the heartland of the German adversary and finally to the conquered capital of Berlin.

'River Rat' Patrols Live Tough Life

By Sp4 Robert A. Mancini

LAI KHE, Vietnam (DIV 10) — They sat around cracking jokes, putting thoughts of combat out of their minds. Then just as quickly as it started, the fun and joking stopped. A tough mission lay ahead of them.

The "River Rats" from 1st Engineer Battalion, 1st Infantry Division were up early checking weapons and gear for the upcoming operation. The nine-man team lead by SSgt. James M. Hawkins gathered around him for the briefing.

"Our three patrol boats will start at Xom Doug Chay and move south toward Saigon, cutting east along the Rach Cheic River. We'll have Cobra gunship cover and meet up with the infantry units of Delta Company, 2nd Battalion, 28th Infantry two miles southeast of Xom Doug Chay. Our mission will be to transport the infantry to swamp and marshy areas inaccessable by air. We'll also provide suppressive fire if the need arises."

Hawkins looked at his reconnaissance report and continued . . . "Previous action two days ago indicates recent VC activity. If we hit any small arms or automatic weapons fire, we'll head for the river bank and take cover. Cobras will provide our fire if necessary. Scheduled time of departure is 1045 hours."

GI Finds Gun, Guitar Don't Mix

CAMP EAGLE, Vietnam (101st 10) — A 101st Airborne Division artilleryman has found, to his dismay, that guns and guitars don't mix.

In civilian life, Sgt. Larry L. Leftwich made a good living playing lead guitar with a rock group around his home town, Washington, D. C. His group, the Satellites, even made a few records.

"So when I joined the Army and ended up in Vietnam, I bought myself a guitar to keep in practice," Leftwich said. "I would sit on top of our bunker, near the 105mm howitzers, and play whenever I had a chance."

But one day while Leftwich was practicing, his gun received a fire mission. He carefully placed his guitar on top of the bunker and went to work pounding Charlie. After the mission, he returned to the bunker to find his guitar in pieces.

"The concussion from the gun's firing split the case and broke every string; it looked like so much spaghetti," Leftwich explained.

Undismayed, he bought another guitar and took pains to keep it away from the gun's blast. But one day another unexpected fire mission came in, the guitar was hurriedly put down, and BAM!

"It was the first incident all over again," Leftwich said. "I was really irritated."

But persistence being the mark of a Screaming Eagle, Leftwich went out the next chance he got and bought a third guitar. And this one he never removed from the safety of the bunker.

"But then came the day we fired a great number of rounds at maximum charge," Leftwich moaned. "And you can guess what happened."

Leftwich sadly held up the remains of the guitar that, even in the bunker, had been blasted into junk.

"No more guitars," he said. "Enough is enough."

Photographer Finds 3 Rifles Hid By Enemy

CAMP EAGLE, Vietnam (101st 10) — A combat photographer generally has his eye to a camera, ready to record what's happening around him. But a cameraman from the 101st Airborne Division's 3rd Brigade let his eye wander and ended up capturing three AK-47 assault rifles.

Spt Jerry L. Lewis was accompanying a patrol from D Co., 3rd Bn., 187th Abn. Inf., when he made his find. The unit was in the middle of an enemy base area in the A Shau Valley and was moving toward a bunker complex spotted earlier. As the troopers moved down a trail, Lewis spotted a green canvas-covered bundle half-hidden beneath a log.

"The first thing that entered my mind was enemy weapons," Lewis recalled later, "but it was hard to believe I could have that kind of luck."

The bundle proved to be three new AK-47s, still in their original wrappings and covered with cosmoline cords.

Tall, Husky Specialist Searches For Charlie's Tunnel Hideouts

LZ BAYONET (AMERICAL IO) —

Would you believe a 6-foot-3 tunnel rat, weighing 200 pounds?

There is such a creature working in the 198th Infantry Brigade, and he searches out Charlie's underground hideouts with the same skill and daring displayed by many smaller Americal Division soldiers.

Tall and husky, Sp5 James Matthews came upon his job as a tunnel rat in an unusual way.

The 22-year-old soldier is assigned as a chemical staff specialist with the 198th's 87th Chemical Detachment, which has responsibility for denying the enemy future use of tunnels which cannot be destroyed.

Matthews and another member of the detachment, Sp4 Douglas Van Horn, form a special team whose mission it is to investigate these tunnels and neutralize them.

Van Horn is also quite a bit bigger than the average tunnel rat, at 6 feet and 180 pounds. But the two probers of the depths say they do not usually find their size to much of a problem.

"We can usually get into the tunnels on hands and knees," says matthews, "and when we get inside we often find them almost high enough to stand up in."

After the tunnels have been searched carefully and all items of intelligence value have been removed, the tunnel rats again turn chemical specialists to direct the tunnel denial operations.

They use a "mighty mite" blower or explode bags to distribute CS, a non-toxic but powerful irritant, throughout the tunnel systems, which are sometimes hundreds of meters long.

Company Helps, Aids Orphanage

By Sp4 Mike Shanin

SAIGON, Vietnam (Div. 10) — During 1954, in the face of growing Communist influence, Madame Vu Thi Ngai fled North Vietnam to re-establish the An Lac Orphanage in Saigon. The institution, aided by the men of Company C, 12ist Signal Battalion, 1st Infantry Division, has continued to grow and aid countless children.

Today, Madame Ngai and her 26 employees care for over 370 youngsters in the orphanage in Saigon and the annex in Di An. "We have children who range in age from a few hours to twenty-years old. When the children need the orphanage no longer, they leave to make room for others," said Madame Ngai.

Meal time finds some 500 children waiting in the chow line. In addition to the An Loc children, small waifs off the streets wander in at meal time, and are never turned down.

The role of Company C in assisting the orphanage is a vital one, according to Madame Ngai. "The boys help us in many ways. They provide food supplies and manpower, and we are very grateful."

Fort Benning Motorists Battered Holiday Odds

By Bill Hardin

Fort Benning motorists battered pre-holiday traffic predictions for the long Memorial Day weekend with a tally of only three injuries against a forecast of two deaths and 15 injuries.

Safety officials here expressed pleasant surprise and appreciation for the low total.

None of the injuries happened on the reservation, according to James E. Blount, a Fort Benning safety officer.

"I feel that the safety briefings which were conducted by the various commanders and the individuals' desire to conduct themselves in a safe manner are responsible for the death-free weekend," Blout said.

Over the entire post, commanders made an effort to see their troops were briefed on the hazards of the weekend and saw to it that their men were told of the predictions of death and injury.

Infantry School students, during the final few minutes of their last class Thursday, were given a safety talk by instructors.

The men of the United States Army Training Center, Infantry, received a safety orientation during the week prior to the holiday. In addition to a lecture on safety by officers, a safety film was also shown to the troops.

Safety orientation lectures held for troops of the 197th Infantry Brigade were supported by displays of wrecked vehicles and signs promoting safety.

In order to help promote safe driving, the brigade commander, Col. John E. Strever Jr., manned an auto checkpoint as safety officials were checking drivers as part of the current campaign to promote the wearing of safety belts.

Another of the commands which took special measures to reduce traffic mishaps was the U. S. Army Infantry Center Troop Command.

All members were given safety talks and men in pay grades E-5 and above were given a personal talk on safety by their commander, Col. Charles H. Reidenbaugh.

George Washington

"We must give gratitude to men who have rescued us from the jaws of danger and brought us to the honor of Independence and Peace . . . The Army, who have borne and forborne more than any other class of men in the United States, expending their health, and many of them their all, in an unremitted service of near eight years in the field, encountering hunger, cold and nakedness, must never be forgotten."

Few People Brush Teeth Properly

By Lt. Col. Silas M. Crase

Man has been using variations of the toothbrush for thousands of years. But most people still fail to use it properly or often enough.

The earliest toothbrush was probably the "chewstick" which was sharpened on one end and frayed at the other. It served both as a toothpick and toothbrush —crude but useful.

The first natural-bristled toothbrush is believed to have been developed in China about the time Columbus discovered America. The handle was formed from ox bones and the bristles from boar's hair.

Survey Shows

And yet the toothbrush, which has been around thousands of years and which is one of the best weapons against tooth decay, is more misused than ever today. In a survey of 1,000 families it was found:

—only 15 percent brushed their teeth 3 times a day.

—about 50 percent brushed their teeth twice a day.

—45 percent of the toothbrushes in use had bent, broken or matted bristles and had long outlived their usefulness.

(Why not visit the P-X today and get a couple of new toothbrushes!)

The essential point is: you should brush your teeth after each meal and after each snack. Brushing the teeth after meals and snacks is just as essential to cleanliness as washing the hands before meals.

Proper Brushing

One acceptable method of toothbrushing is as follows: place the bristles on the gums near the gum-tooth-line. Brush the teeth the way they they grow—upper teeth downward, lower teeth upward. And brush the the chewing surfaces back and forth.

However, you should follow your dentist's specific method of brushing and type of toothbrush he recommends for your personal oral conditions. When it is impossible to brush your teeth, rinse your mouth thoroughly and vigorously with water.

As for the toothbrush, it should have a flat brushing surface, medium textured bristles and a head sufficiently small to permit access to all surfaces of the teeth. You should have two brushes and use them alternately in order to give them time to dry.

Proper toothbrushing will help clean the teeth, aid in keeping gums healthy and it will improve personal appearance. So, brush immediately after eating and make sure that you brush properly, covering all surfaces, and that you use the proper-type toothbrush.

Officer Talks On Life, Military

Lt. Bill Ashton, professor of aerospace engineering at Auburn University, addressed the members of the 61st Company, 6th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade religious group, concerning the purpose of life and how it can relate to the military service.

During his sophomore year at Auburn, Lt. Ashton organized a chapter of the Campus Crusade for Christ, a nation-wide college religious organization. He told of his efforts and of the results of the Campus Crusade across the nation.

Army Reservists Start Arriving for Training

The first of more than 2,000 United States Army Reservists who will train here this summer started to arrive Saturday (May 31).

Three hundred fifty officers and men of the 1st Battalion, 71st Infantry Brigade from Texas will not only be the first of the Reservists to arrive but will be here the longest.

The men will attend the Infantry School's Basic Airborne Course, offered by the Airborne Department.

The course is three weeks in length. Several members of the 71st have been coming here each year for the past three years to become qualified parachutists. The brigade was designated as an Airborne unit three years ago.

Seventeen other units of varying size will follow. These will arrive at different times from June 1 on through the Summer. The last unit to train here this year will depart the post September 6.

This year, the Reservists will travel from Alabama, Florida, South Carolina, Texas and Puerto Rico.

The largest number from any single state, 1,300, will come from Florida. They are members of 11 different units, located in seven Florida cities.

Many of the Reservists will conduct their own training exercises, while some of the units will train side by side with Regular Army troops assigned here.

The Reservists will represent five branches of the Army, including Infantry, Quartermaster, Medical, Adjutant General and Military Police.

Baker High Student Gets Scholarship

Ronald H. Miller, a top scholar at Baker High School, is the recipient of the Association of the U. S. Army college scholarship awarded by the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Miller of 2917 Emory Street, Columbus, Georgia.

The $300 annual scholarship is renewable for four years of undergraduate study.

Miller, a member of the National Honor Society and a leader in the Junior Division ROTC program at Baker High, will enter North Georgia College, Dahlonega, in the fall.

He will take Army ROTC courses with the hope of receiving a commission in the Infantry upon graduation.

The scholarship was awarded on the basis of academic standing and extra-curricular contributions.

Miller's father, a retired sergeant first class, served in the Airborne Department here at various times from 1942-1962 and with the post engineers from 1962 to 1965.

He is presently a Civil Service worker in the water purification section of the post engineers.

Students 'Share Their Faith With Others' By Singing

By Ken Sturzenacker

The voices of almost 50 young people echoed through the Religious Education Center building as the members of the senior Protestant Youth of the Chapel group sang in preparation for another concert.

The high school student members of the "Follow Me" group, have taken an active role in expressing what they believe by singing for churches throughout the area.

According to Maj. Ronald Whitlock, the lay sponsor for the chorus, the choir has sung in an average of three churches a month since the beginning of the year.

"The group shares their faith with others, living a Christian witness on a practical, day by day basis.

"I feel the group has been an inspiration to young and old alike; most people are delighted to see a demonstration for another cause," the major said.

Although the Protestant Youth of the Chapel group has been active for nearly 15 years, the chorus got its start last fall under the guidance of Chaplain and Mrs. Curry Vaughn.

Tom Farnell, president of the group, credits Chaplain Vaughn for changing the emphasis of the meetings the group held.

"The chaplain showed us that we were more than a social group, and made our meetings a place where we could solve our problems.

"There was less emphasis on the social aspect of the meetings, and more on the reasons we were meeting in the first place — prayer, singing, discussion and Bible study," he said.

As president, Tom has shared in many of the chorus' activities, and has written the group's theme song and several other contemporary religious numbers.

The group will be meeting throughout the summer on Sunday nights, starting the evening's activities at the post Religious Education Center around 5:30 p.m.

The group will be using the Youth Activities Center pool Sunday nights as part of their recreational program.

As has been the case all year, the meetings will be informal and anyone is welcome to attend.

Three Soldiers Win Top Honors In Post Entertainment Contest

Men from the Candidate Brigade, the 197th Infantry Brigade, and the U. S. Army Training Center, Infantry, won top honors in the Fort Benning monthly entertainment contest.

The winners were awarded cash prizes of $25 each in the competition held in the Kelley Hill Service Club.

First place was taken by PFC Larry Conklin, Headquarters, 5th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade. He sang "More" and "The Sound of Music."

Second place honors went to Spt Patrick Hampshire, Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade, and a combo from Kelley Hill. They won for rock and roll improvisations.

Third place was presented to Pvt. Donald Brookyner, 7th Battalion, 2nd Brigade, U. S. Army Training Center, Infantry. Brookyner, backed by the same combo which played with the second place winner, sang "Yesterday" and "Misty."

The next regular monthly entertainment contest will be held at 7:30 p.m. June 28 in the North Harmony Church service club.

All military personnel assigned to Fort Benning are eligible to enter. Entry forms are at service clubs and the Playhouse, Bldg. No. 237.

Persons interested in competing should submit entry forms no later than June 20.

Safety Belt Campaign Boosts Driver Usage

The safety belt campaign here has moved into its third week with reports indicating more drivers are using the belts as they journey from point to point in their daily routines.

To date, $50 has been awarded to 10 drivers found properly wearing safety belts while behind the wheel of their automobiles. Another $170 will be presented, $5 at a time, during the balance of the two month campaign promoting the use of safety belts.

James E. Blount, safety officer, stated, "During the past week, we were required to check only 62 vehicles in all before we found our five winners for the $5 checks."

Between 10 and 15 vehicles were checked each day to find a winner, he said.

Winners of the $5 award last week were: SFC T. L. Johnson, Headquarters Detachment, 2nd Brigade, United States Army Training Center, Infantry; SFC Robert Wiedenhoeft, Headquarters and Headquarters Company 197th Infantry Brigade; Sgt. Colin Odom, Battery B, 7th Battalion, 18th Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade; 2nd Lt. William S. Lyke, Company B, 5th Battalion, 31st Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade; and 1st Sgt. Troy C. Ends Jr., Battery C, 7th Battalion, 18th Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade.

Current Movie Synopsis

SMITH — Set in the majestic slender of Washington and Idaho, home of the Nez Perce Indians, Walt Disney brings to you the story of the problems facing the American Indian today and of one man's fight for their rights.

HELL IN THE PACIFIC — The unique motion picture starring America's Lee Marvin and Japan's Toshiro Mifune is the powerful story of two strong men who are brought face to face on a desolate Pacific island and their struggle to confront, to communicate, to kill and to survive!! They hunted each other as enemies . . . they tormented each other as savages . . . they faced each other as men!!

CHITTY CHITTY BANG BANG — Fantasy is delightfully captured in this musical adventure about a British family and their magical car. The story takes place during the early 1900's and centers around the Potts family and their magical car CHITTY CHITTY BANG BANG. When the car isn't doing conventional things it propels itself over water and flies through the air. It's a charming light hearted musical that will thrill the whole family.

THE THOMAS CROWN AFFAIR — The story is a fictitional account of a $2,500,000 local bank robbery which is uncomfortably true to life. Boston this is where our story

Engineers Put In Full Day

By S.Sgt. Harry J. Feick

From USAIC school support to rafting the Chattahoochee the 586th Engineer Company is constantly on the move.

With seventy military drivers the bridge company totaled over ten thousand man hours transporting the Officer Candidate School and Non Commissioned Officers schools in March and looks for an even larger total for April and May.

From 3:30 a.m. - midnight, the 586th Engr Co supports the Candidate brigades — but that's not the days end. The candidates are sound asleep when the Engineers get back to their motor pool, top off their vehicles, and pull their after operations maintenance in preparation for the next commitment some three hours away.

The schools often train on Saturday and Sunday and the 586th is there ready to transport.

'Pajama Tops' Picks Cast

A cast has been chosen and rehearsals have started for the risque French comedy "Pajama Tops" which will be presented by the Fort Benning Playhouse June 18-22.

"Pajama Tops" deals with the hilarious antics that occur in an elegant French villa.

The play had a ten-year run in Hollywood prior to its Broadway opening in 1965 which starred June Wilkinson.

The cast of French characters includes three women and four men.

The women are Claudine (played by Deborah Trotter), a young woman who is studying to be a courtesan; Yvonne Chavinet (Kathy Meadows), a wife who loves life, and Babette Latouche (Linda White), the mistress of Yvonne's husband.

The leading men characters are Inspector Legrand (Roy Lothner), an old man who reminisces about his youth; Georges Chavinet (Bob Bowers), Yvonne's husband; Leonard Jolipeli (Jim Warren), a friend of Georges, and Jacques (Jeff Martin), Babette's husband.

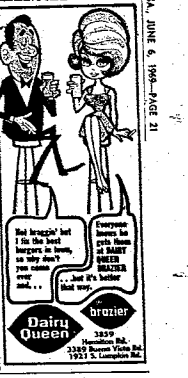
"We feel that such a show is ideal because its theme will appeal to our audiences," a playhouse representative said.

AFMA Convenes For Summer

The Armed Forces Management Association (AFMA) conducted its last meeting for this season on Monday, May 26th in the Benning Room of the Main Officers Club at Fort Benning. Guest speaker, Colonel Charles H. Reidenbaugh, chose as his topic: "The Personalization Syndrome."

Colonel Reidenbaugh discussed that while Management has saved numerous hours through the more expedient and efficient data systems for record keeping, it has failed to use these hours in ways to keep the personal touch in handling personnel and their problems. He gave us an example how the trade and labor unions have grown in relation to the mechanization and dehumanizing of factories and other blue-collar industries.

AFMA adjourned its meetings for the summer months and will reconvene in September.



Canine Obedience Class Holds Commencement

Commencement exercises were held for the Canine Basic Obedience Class in the ballroom of the Main Post Service Club here.

"Concho" owned by Capt. Ronald B. Bailey, 21st Company, 2nd Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, copped the first place trophy and blue ribbon.

"Roxanne DeBergerac," owned by Lt. Col. (ret.) Donald Shanon; "Caesar," owned by Capt. Bernard J. McHughes, 21st Company, and "Nikki," owned by Miss Linda P. Senechek won second, third and fourth places respectively. The first three winners were German shepherds and the fourth place finisher was a French poodle.

The course instructor was SFC Jesse S. Mendez, Special Projects, Headquarters Detachment Scout Dog, assisted by Sgt. John C. R. Stewart, Spt Robert E. Desterhouse and Spt Calvin Cottrell of the 26th Infantry Scout Dog Platoon.

Judging the obedience trials were 2nd Lt. Arthur P. Bills, Sgt. Thomas R. Sims Jr. and Sgt. William S. Linden of Headquarters Detachment Scout Dog.

Maj. George M Massey, detachment commander, delivered the commencement address and presented the special awards.

Post Ranks First in Conducting Courses on Defensive Driving

Fort Benning's safety office efforts have put the post at the top of a list of 616 agencies across the nation which teach the National Safety Council's defensive driving course.

The effort here has also enabled the state of Georgia to maintain second place in the list of states conducting help."

Only North Carolina has trained more thus far in 1969. North Carolina stands at 15,396, with the Georgia figure currently being 14,716. Of those trained in Georgia, 7,932 were trained at Fort Benning.

Safety officer James E. Blount stated, "We not only intend to maintain our lead at Fort Benning, but we are anxious to see the state move into the number one place.

Foreign Officers Tour Atlanta

HQ, THIRD U. S. ARMY, Fort McPherson, Ga. — The largest class of foreign officers to ever attend the U. S. Army Civil Affairs School at Fort Gordon, Ga., will tour the Atlanta and Macon, Georgia area May 25-27.

Twenty-eight strong, the foreign officers representing Indonesia, Laos, Thailand and Vietnam will begin their three-day tour at Dobbins Air Force Base.

They will also visit the Atlanta Army Depot, and see the Stone Mountain recreation area during their first day.

Guided by Major Lloyd Clark, an instructor at the Civil Affairs school, the group will also tour the State Capitol, the Farmers Market and the Atlantic Steel Supply Company.

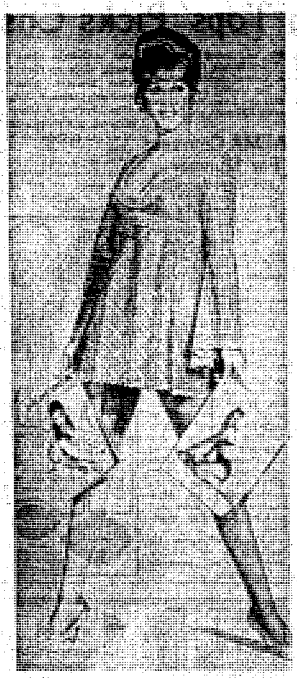
LYNN REDGRAVE



Pfc. Jim Eyer Shelly Davis will be visiting Martin Army Hospital Wednesday for a friendly visit with the patients. Shelly is presently appearing in Don Knott's new comedy "The Love God". She's no stranger to show business, having appeared in "The Oscar" and "How To Succeed In Business Without Really Trying". So, for you guys at Martin Army be on the lookout!

Heat Casualties Take Their Toll

CAMP EAGLE, Vietnam (101st IO) — Paratroopers of the 101st Airborne Division are confronting another enemy beside Charlie.

Heat casualties are taking their toll with the infantrymen in the jungled mountains north of the Ah Shau Valley.

When one of his comrades passed out from heat exhaustion, PFC John S. Dennett, a medic with C Co., 1st Bn., 506th Abn Inf., acted swiftly to save the man's life. The stricken trooper stopped breathing three times and was revived each time when Dennett rendered mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to the heat victim.

Bayonet's Synopsis of Military Books

THE CHINESE PEOPLE'S LIBERATION ARMY by Samuel B. Griffith (1967)

Published by The Council on Foreign Relations, this book provides a thorough and authoritative study of the Chinese Communist armed forces, including not only their organization, capabilities, and leadership but also their role in political indoctrination and organization of the people of Communist China.

DECISION MAKING FOR DEFENSE by Charles J. Hitch (1965)

A composite of four Gaither Memorial lectures delivered at the University of California by the former Assistant Secretary of Defense (comptroller), this book provides a basis for the cost-accounting approach to decisionmaking. Included are the evolution of the national military establishment from 1789 to the beginning of the Kennedy administration; a description of programing and the application of cost-effectiveness studies to decisionmaking, and an evaluation of these techniques.

THE COMMON DEFENSE: Strategic Programs in National Politics by Samuel P. Huntington (1961)

An examination of the strategic aspect of the military policy of the United States with focus on the period from 1945 to 1960 and including an analysis of the political processes involved in the development of strategic programs within the American system of government.

A thorough review of NSC 68, the New Look, The New New Look, and other current strategies and programs is undertaken, together with a discussion of the influences of fiscal and domestic policies, party politics, and interservice rivalries on the innovation of strategic programs.

DECISIVE BATTLES OF WORLD WAR II: The German View edited by Hans A. Jacobsen and dugen Rohwer. Translated from the German by Edward Fitzgerald (1965)

Ten selected campaigns of World War II are discussed by German historians, many of them distinguished military commanders. Included are campaigns from Dunkirk to the Ardennes. Tactical conduct of the operation is reviewed as well as the relation of controlling elements such as geography, political systems, resources, and intelligence. Each campaign concludes with a summary of the lessons to be learned.

PROBLEMS OF NATIONAL STRATEGY, edited by Henry A. Kissinger (1965)

This anthology of readings on basic national security policy is of equal value to the serious student of national strategy and the lay reader. In presenting viewpoints on both sides of key issues, Dr. Kissinger, professor of government at Harvard University, provides an excellent representation of governmental, scientific, and academic thought on the major defense problems confronting the United States today.

AUSA Makes Contribution

The local chapter of the Association of the United States Army has made a contribution to the "Avenue of Flags" project, now in progress by the Gold Star Wives.

At a board meeting last week, AUSA voted to donate five flags to the avenue. An AUSA spokesman said "this commendable project aimed at promoting patriotism and respect for the flag coincides with our goal of supporting the ideals that are our heritage."

With the donation of $182.50 by AUSA this week over half the goal of $4,000 has been raised.

One hundred flags will be erected on the median on Victory Drive beginning at 4th Avenue and continuing toward the Traffic Circle.

The 3 feet by 5 feet flags will be raised on 20 foot staffs. Each flag will cost approximately $32.50. Donations may be made to the National Bank of Fort Benning, any Columbus bank or mailed to: Gold Star Avenue of Flags, General Delivery, Columbus, Georgia.

THE FORUM

BY MARC REIFF

Majestic Prince will be running in the Belmont Stakes tomorrow, repeat will be running. Owner Frank McMahon finally decided to listen to no one except his own heart and his big thoroughbred will attempt to become the first Triple Crown winner in 21 years and first undefeated winner in history.

Apparently, trainer Johnny Longden had other plans for the champion and they did not include a potential loss in the Belmont. More money could be made in racing this undefeated horse against inferior competition back in California. Except for Arts and Letters and Dike, there are no apparent challengers around for the Prince. But it is every owner's dream to win the Kentucky Derby and now that McMahon has that cup and the Preakness behind him he is not about to throw away the opportunity to become the biggest man in horse racing.

Most smart owners hire the best trainer on the market and let him take over, which is exactly what McMahon did. Johnny Longden was one of the best riders in the business and up till now has had a clear field on McMahon's stables. As long as the horse is sound there is no reason not to race him. The track is a mile and a half long which is the furthest distance that Majestic Prince has had to run. Both Arts and Letters and Dike are long distance racers and the Prince will be hard pressed to beat them, but isn't that the mark of a true champion?

As McMahon says, "he's not hurt, and if he is sound on June 7, he will run. And if he loses, so what?"

Saw my first Columbus White Sox baseball game the other night. I am probably no different from a lot of other men on post who keep up on their favorite team via the newspapers and wish they were back home to go to the games. But I would like to pass this word along; there is some mighty fine ball being played right here in Columbus. Some of these boys will undoubtedly see major league action in the near future.

Brian Murphy, the second baseman and Joe Monty, the shortstop, made some big league plays at their positions and would be a credit to any team. Columbus lost a thriller in extra innings but I found myself rooting for them as hard as I would have for my own Cleveland Indians back home.

So for all of you pining away for a baseball team to watch, it would be well worth the price of admission (75 cents) to come out and cheer on your new home team.

Townsend Wins Goose

By O. C. Michael Donahue

Officer Candidate Dwight Townsend, currently of the 96th Infantry Officer Candidate Company, 9th Stu. Bn., TCB has won "the golden goose," but his prize is neither fowl nor will it produce eggs of the aureate type.

Candidate Townsend is the winner of "The Golden Goose," which has been hailed as "Dixie's plushest hand-crafted dune buggy." Townsend won the Columbus-built custom machine in a scavenger-hunt drawing sponsored by the Columbus Junior Achievement Program. The dollar which he paid for his single, winning ticket, will go to that organization's scholarship fund.

The dune buggy is built on a Volkswagen chassis and is powered by a VW engine. It becomes an attention-getter due to its gold fiberglass body and chrome reverse wheels.

Townsend had first considered using his prize during his Ranger training problem, but he noted that "it would be difficult to camouflage."

'Bullets' Battle 'Ice-Cold' Bats, Crack Famine

The 197th Infantry Brigade Softball team, battling the weather as well as their "ice-cold" bats, holds a record of three wins and three losses in the USAIC Softball League.

Aviators, Infantrymen Each Win

The 10th Aviation Group split a doubleheader Monday night with the 197th Inf. Bde. The Infantrymen took the opener 4 to 2 after getting four unearned runs in the first inning and holding the Aviators to two runs through seven innings.

The 10th Group took the second game by the same score. The Aviators got their first run in the opening inning when Pete Rentson bunted and rounded the bases on a throwing error.

MTU Gunners Win Regional Tourney

The 1969 Regional High Power Rifle and Pistol Tournaments ended here Monday with marksmen from the Marksmanship Training Unit winning the championships in both events.

SSG. Robert L. Meeks fired a total of 986 points for the High Power Rifle Championships. He was followed by two of his fellow teammates SFC James McQuien with 984 and SSG. Elmer Mondon with 984.

Meeks also won the Rapid Fire aggregate, 398 while McQuien won the Slow Fire aggregate with 591.

The U. S. Army Blue team won the team championship with 1972-80. Their closest competitors was the Sixth Army team with 1968. Blue team members were Meeks, McQuien, SFC Raymond Calvez and SSG. Lawrence Cooper.

SFC Hezekiah Clark won the pistol Championship with a fine 2650 out of 2700. SSG. Elme Myers of the European team took second with 2643 and Donald Jayner was third with 2637.

Chalres H. Hubbard won the .22 caliber aggregate with the top score of 299-15, while Donald Jayner won the Center Fire aggregate. Edwin Boucher won the last aggregate fired with the .45 caliber with 883-32.

The team match was a close contest. The All National Guard team won both the .22 team match and the .45 team match. They were closely contested in the .22 match by the MTU Red team 1174 to 1171, respectively. Then in the .45 team match they had their problems to over-come the USAREUR team who fired an 1153 compared to the Guard's 1154 win.

The Center Fire team match was won by the MTU Red team 1163 followed by the All National Guard team's 1154.

Guard team members were Edwin Boncher, Carl Sundbeck, Owen Heim, Sidney Mills and D. R. Quertermous. MTU Red was composed of Clark, SSG. Marvin Black, SFC Aubrey Smith and SFC Lawrence Mosely.

COMPUTER CORNER ON SPORTS

By Bud Goode

There's a line in Genesis about a nice old guy name of Isaac who's eyes were failing. He figured his time was up. Baseball pitchers meet the same fate—thirty years sooner. Pitchers' lives depend on their ability to hit the corners of the plate. Without control their days are numbered. And some, at age thirty, are old men.

Control is one of the four important pitching factors measured by Computer Corner — it is the percentage of batters who get free rides to first base on a walk or hit-by-pitch. To win a pennant a team must be stingy with the walks it gives up. They must stand high on this important pitching control percentage.

To measure control, Computer Corner obtained these results through games of May 13 after pouring the season statistics into our Univac electronic sports analyzer:

AMERICAN LEAGUE PITCHING CONTROL	PCT.
EAST
Baltimore	8.0
New York	10.7
Detroit	11.2
Boston	13.4
Washington	13.9
Cleveland	14.5
League Average	11.0
PITCHING CONTROL	PCT.
WEST
Chicago	8.0
California	9.3
Oakland	10.2
Minnesota	10.4
Kansas City	10.9
Seattle	11.6
League Average	11.0
NATIONAL LEAGUE
EAST
Chicago	7.5
St. Louis	7.7
Philadelphia	9.0
Pittsburgh	10.8
New York	11.0
Montreal	11.3
League Average	9.7
WEST
San Francisco	7.6
Los Angeles	7.9
Atlanta	8.4
Cincinnati	11.4
San Diego	11.5
Houston	12.1
League Average	9.7

Cleveland, Washington, even Boston, are walking too many batters. Perhaps Boston's trades will help them. Houston, San Diego and Cincinnati are 'walking' away from the pennant. Atlanta, by contrast, is giving a free ride to only 8.4 per cent of all batters facing their pitching, much improved over last season — and they are threatening to cop the Western Division pennant.

Compare League leading Atlanta's control percentage (8.4 Pct.) to Ray Maloney and his staff at Cincinnati. The Reds are walking 11.4 per cent of the batters they face, and this three per cent difference may seem small, but at the end of 6000 At Bats in a season, it puts 180 additional runners on base. One-third of these free runners score.

Slow Pitch Results

The Marksmanship Training Unit's slow pitch team has won the first half of the Inter-Company Slow Pitch League with a six and one record. Their only loss was to the Rangers 10-6 last week.

CDCIA and H TSB are battling it out for second place spot. CDCIA has an edge on H company with only one game left to play while H company has two.

The importance of second place is a possible berth to the post level championships. The first and second place winners of each half of league play will be in a play off for advancement to post level tournament.

LEAGUE STANDINGS:

Team	W	L	Pct.
MTU	6	1	857
CDCIA	4	2	666

HHC TSB	3	3	500

51st Company Defeats 56th

Candidate John Fernandez, pitcher of the 51st OC Company, held the 56th OC Company to three hits on his way to an 8-3 victory last Sunday.

51st Co. wasted no time in getting on the scoreboard by pounding out three big runs in the first inning.

TSB Leads Softball League

Going into the fourth week of the United States Army Infantry Center Major Unit Fast Pitch Softball League, The Student Brigade has built up a good lead on other members of the league with a record of 11 won 3 lost.

Center Troop Command is second with a record of 10 and closely followed by the 197th Infantry Brigade and 10th Aviation Group with identical standings of 9 and 5.

The Army Training Center holds fifth place with a record of 5 and 9. Martin Army Hospital is a bad sixth with no wins and 16 defeats.

Games are played each Monday, Wednesday and Friday at Bennett and Goode Fields. Game time is 6:30 p.m.

ROD AND GUN CLUB NEWS

Lumsden Wins Milan Shoot

BY BILL KLOEB

Sgt. Henry Ferris, 85th Co, the Candidate Brigade won the bass contest of the May Fishing Derby with a last day entry of 8-pounds 4-ounces. He was fishing at Harp's Pond with a spinning rig and Hulla Popper.

S. Sgt Robert Crossland, Co. A, 197th Spt. Bn. made things more difficult for the competition when he upped his catfish entry to 8-pounds 4-ounces on May 30. He was fishing with doughballs at Victory Pond. Crossland had led the catfish contest all during the month of May. He was also the winner of the April Catfish Derby.

The May bream contest was won by Maj. Richard K. Bachman, Martin Army Hospital. He caught his 15-ounce entry at Patterson Pond. He was using a fly rod and popping bug.

The June Derby got off to a good start with S. Sgt. Orville Petter, 82 Ross Ave registering a 5-pound 13-ounce catfish he caught at Victory Pond June 1.

CPT Jimmy R. Ford, Ranger Department got on the bream roster with an even one-pound entry he caught at Patterson Pond.

Its interesting to note that Crossland took the winning catfish in the April and May Derby from Victory Pond. The leading bass for April was taken from King's Pond and the leading bream from Weems Pond. The winners for last May were an 8-pound 2-ounce bass caught at King's Pond on a black plastic worm, an 18-ounce bream caught at Schley's Pond and a 7-pound 8-ounces catfish caught at Victory Pond. As a matter of fact a review of last year's Derbies shows a definite trend in favor of King's Pond for the winning bass and Victory Pond for the winning catfish.

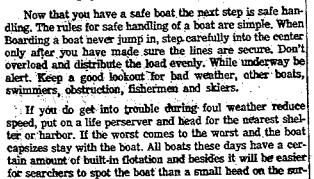
For the last three years boating accidents have increased sharply in the United States. One of the prime reasons for this the increase in the numbers of boats plying the waters. A large percentage of these accidents involve young people on their first boating expedition. Many lack proper training which also causes more trouble when problems arise.

If you are new to the boating scene it will be to your advantage to get the advice of an old-timer concerning the handling of your boat. With the Summer vacation here again it is more and more important that you know "the rules of the road".

Achially good boating safety should start even before you put your bent in the water. Boating safety starts with a safe boat. The boat should be equipped with a white stern light, red port light and green starboard light even if you don't intend to use it at night. A fire extinguisher of a type approved by the U.S. Coast Guard is required by law. One Coast Guard approved life saving device for each person aboard is also a must. A wise boater will also make sure he has paddles or oars, anchors with line, a flashlight, emergency signal kit, basic tool kit, first aid kit and bilge pump as minimum equipment.

Now that you have a safe boat the next step is safe handling. The rules for safe handling of a boat are simple. When Boarding a boat never jump in, step carefully into the center only after you have made sure the lines are secure. Don't overload and distribute the load evenly. While underway be alert. Keep a good lookout for bad weather, other boats, swimmers, obstruction, fishermen and skiers.

If you do get into trouble during foul weather reduce speed, put on a life perserver and head for the nearest shelter or harbor. If the worst comes to the worst and the boat capsizes stay with the boat. All boats these days have a certain amount of built-in flotation and besides it will be easier for searchers to spot the boat than a small head on the surface of the water.



U. S. Shotgun shooters stay on top as they place 1 - 2 - 3 in Europe's top competition during the Milan International trap shoot, Milan, Italy.

SGT. Gene Lumsden of the Marksmanship Training Unit, Ft. Benning won the championship by leading the field of shooters with an excellent 198 birds out of 200. Lumsden's out-put of 198 has been the best score of any U. S. shooter since they began their European tour.

Tom Garrigus of the Air Force placed second with 196 birds. He has been the only air force shooter to displace the army marksmen from the top spots.

SSG James Beck fresh from his victory in Brno, Czech. took third with 193 birds.

Trap team members are now preparing for their final shoot in Darmstadt, Germany before they return to Ft. Benning in mid June.

524th Leads CTC Softball League

The impressive 16-3 win notched by the 524th Personnel Service Company Monday night reflected the power of the leaders in the Main Post League softball competition.

The win, the 524th's seven in a row against no loses, dropped the second place 568th Light Maintenance Company's record to 4-2 and a three-way tie for second.

In the other softball activity Monday night, Company C, 1st Battalion, took a 14-9 decision in a high scoring contest to defeat the 98th Military Police Company.

Company C also holds a share of second place; and the 608th Ordnance Company has the third share.

Holding sole possession of fifth place in the 11 team league is the Dental Detachment, with a 3-2 log so far.

Caught in the middle with a .500, 2-2 record is the team from Company A, 1st Battalion, Company A's last championship came at the end of the basketball season when it won the Main Post League title.

Tied for seventh place with 2-3 records are Headquarters and Company A of the 67th Maintenance Battalion and the 98th Military Police Company.

The other three teams in the league, none of which have yet posted a victory, are Company C of the 56th Service and Supply Battalion, CTC's Headquarters and Headquarters Company, and Company B, 1st Battalion.

Action in the Main Post competition is scheduled to continue Monday night in the West Cuatrel softball fields.

Applications Accepted For Golden Knights Group

FORT BRAGG, N. C. (ANF) — The Golden Knights, crack U. S. Army Parachute Team, are now accepting applications for tryouts for assignment to the team.

Each year the Golden Knights conduct a 45-day tryout period beginning the last week in October. Those eligible are Regular Army enlisted men stationed in the continental United States or returning from overseas assignment. An applicant must have at least 18 months of service remaining on his current tour of duty, be airborne qualified and have at least 100 free-fall jumps.

The tryouts, consisting of 100 to 150 free-fall jumps per man in addition to ground training, will be held at the Golden Knights' headquarters at Fort Bragg from October 27 through December 13.

Once an applicant is accepted for the tryouts, a request for a 45-day TDY assignment to the Golden Knights will be made to his unit through Headquarters, U. S. Continental Army Command.

While on tryout, personnel will be quartered in government housing and placed on separate rations. Privately owned transportation to and from Fort Bragg for tryouts will be authorized with expenses for travel by any means reimbursed according to government rates.

Once an applicant on tryout is accepted to the team, the Golden Knights will request orders assigning him as soon as possible. Once assigned, each new member undergoes a 90-day trial period before final acceptance by the team commander.

Twenty-five applicants will be selected for the tryouts. Interested persons wanting more information or an application should write to: Commanding Officer, U. S. Army Parachute Team, Box 126, Fort Bragg, N. C., 28307. The deadline for applications is September 30.

FENCING

There will be an organizational meeting 6 June at 1730 hours at Bldg. 358, across from the 7-11 Shop. All children who registered are asked to attend. A schedule will be set up at this meeting. Registration is still open for boys and girls 6-19 years of age. Sign up at Bldg. 358, Mon. through Fri., 8-5 p.m.

ARCHERY

Archery will continue on Saturdays from 10-12 noon at Bldg. 1064. It is hoped that there will be an evening session also during the summer vacation.

JR. JUDO

Registration for the August Class is open. The first 20 that register will be accepted into the class. Register at Youth Activities, Bldg. 358.

SUMMER TYPING CLASSES

Registration is still open for the Summer Typing Classes, which will start 10 June and run daily 0900-1100 until July 3. DRIVER EDUCATION CLASS

A class will start 9 June to run daily, Mon. through Fri. from 6 to 8 p.m. There is still room for more students in this class. Classes will be presented in Bldg. 358 on Ingersoll Street and a fee of $35 will be charged. Age limit is 15-19 yrs and a learner's permit is required.

Infantry Center Tennis Championships

Special Services Section Schedules Tennis Tournament for June 9-13

The Special Services Section here has announced that the U.S. Army Infantry Center (USAIC) Tennis Championships are scheduled for June 9-13.

Matches will be held at the Fort Benning Officers Club tennis courts to determine the post tennis champions and to select a team to participate in the 1969 Third U. S. Army Tennis Tournament, which will be held June 23-27.

Competition will be governed by the 1969 U.S. Lawn tennis Association except as amended by Infantry Center headquarters and will be conducted in the three following divisions: (1) Men's Open Division (Singles and Doubles), (2) Men's Senior Division (Singles and Doubles), (3) Women's Division (Singles and Doubles).

A men's team of four open and two seniors and a women's team consisting of two women will be selected to represent Fort Benning in the Third U.S. Army Tennis Tournament.

Each division will be determined on a single-elimination basis, with all matches being the best two out of three sets, except the semi-finals and finals of the Open Division, which will be the best three out of five sets.

As is the case in tournament play, known players will be seeded in each division, with other pairings determined by draw.

In the Senior Men's Division those participating must have reached the age of 40 on or before June 22, 1969. Participants eligible to compete in the Senior Division may compete in the Open Division if desired; however, entry in the Open Division will forfeit participant's right to compete in the Senior Division. There will be no changes after the official entry has been made.

In the event there is an insufficient number of entries in any division (singles or doubles) to warrant competition, a winner or winners will not be declared.

Team members to represent Fort Benning in the Third U.S. Army Tennis Tournament will be selected by the Special Services Officer, Lt. Col. Richard A. Sebenoler.

Entry blanks may be obained by military personsons on active duty at the Fort Benning Officers Club Tennis Pro-Shop (Bldg. 560) or the Sports Office of the Special Services Section, USAIC (Bldg. 394.

A meeting of all tournament entries will be held at the Officers Club tennis courts, Bldg. 560 at 3 p.m., June 6, to draw for pairings for the initial round of play and to discuss tournament procedures.

Eagle Court Honor Three Scouts

By Sgt. Carol Aubin

An Eagle Court honoring a trio of young men from Boy Scout Troop 237 was called to order at 8:30 p.m. here recently (June 2, 1969).

This was a "first" for the Fort Benning District as never before have three scouts in the district received Eagle Medals at the same time. It was also a first for the 4-year-old troop.

Recipients of the Eagle Medals were Dale Stoddard, son of MSG and Mrs. Richard P. Stoddard, (181 Somerset Ave., Columbus); Roger Buterbaugh, son of SFC (ret) and Mrs. Logan Buterbaugh, (2239 Ellen Ave., Columbus), and Chris Thomas, son of Lt. Col. and Mrs. L. M. Thomas (2909 Avondale Rd., Columbus). Lt. Col. Thomas is scoutmaster of Troop 237.

Chris Thomas and Roger Buterbaugh both have been members of Troop 237 since it was chartered in December 1965, and have been together throughout their scouting career.

The Eagle Court convened following a regular court of honor for the troop. The ceremony opened with remarks by Bob Helle, advanced chairman of the Ft. Benning District.

Helle discussed the prerequisites for an Eagle Scout and told other members of the troop, "Having three candidates for Eagle Scout is a great honor for Troop 237."

The three young men, accompanied by their parents, were presented their Eagle Medals following Helle's remarks.

Rogert Buterbaugh was presented his medal by Rev. Max Barlow of the Asbury Methodist Church, Columbus, where Roger is an active member.

Dale Stoddard and Chris Thomas both received their medals from Scoutmaster Thomas. Thomas presented his son with the same Eagle Medal that was earned by him in 1942.

Following the presentations, a miniature Eagle Medal was presented by each boy to his mother.

10-Mile Marathon Set At Fort Benning July 4

Participants from all over the Southeast are expected to enter the second annual Medal of Honor Marathon at Fort Benning at 9 a.m. July 4.

Sanctioned by the AAU, the event is to be held as part of Independence Day observances here.

Dedicated to winners of the Medal of Honor, the 10-mile foot race begins and ends at Eubanks Field on the main post.

Open to all athletes of high schools, colleges, universities, track and field clubs and military installations, the event attracted almost 100 participants last year.

More are expected this year.

Gold, silver, and bronze medals will be awarded to the top three fiushers. Each, also, is to receive a trophy during a formal awards ceremony which will follow the competition.

Those wishing to enter the race may obtain entry forms and additional information by telephoning the Fort Benning sports director at 545-2604. Entries must be completed and in the office of the sports director no later than June 25.

Col. Acuff Talks at Ft. Rucker On Professionalism in Army

FT. RUCKER, Ala. — Col. Earl C. Acuff, deputy assistant commandant of the Infantry School, discussed three aspects of Army professionalism before some 233 graduating aviators Tuesday at Ft. Rucker.

Visiting the Army Aviation School for the first time, Col. Acuff explained that the Army partially has achieved professionalism through three wars, but "professionalism really is founded on knowledge," he added.

Knowledge, he said, has a "snowball" effect in acquiring professionalism. "The more (knowledge) you acquire the easier it becomes to acquire more," he said.

He added, knowledge is important because "you will be leading someone and they're going to look to you for answers. When you don't know the answers, they're going to say to themselves, 'Why should I ask him; he doesn't know any more than I know.'" Col. Acuff strongly advised; "No officer can survive under the circumstances."

Mission orientation was named the second aspect of professionalism. The colonel requested that the newly rated pilots ask themselves, "Am I in the right place . . . and am I doing what I ought to be doing?"

He explained that this aspect also concerns knowing what needs to be done and having the resolve and responsibility to get the job done.

The final aspect of professionalism, Col. Acuff said, involves "the life you lead." Telling the new aviators to set goals for themselves, he said, "Whether you write them down and whether you put them in mind, it's important to have them because those are the things that steer you throughout your life."

Col. Acuff advised the men, most of them are assigned next to Vietnam, that they are leaving a practical stage and going into an application stage in your lives. "That year (in Vietnam) will be the finest in your life," he concluded.

Following the graduation address the distinguished graduates were presented Certificates of Appreciation of the U.S. Army plaques by Col. M. H. Parson, assistant commandant of the Aviation School. Col. A. T. Pumphrey, director of the Department of Tactics, presented their wings and diplomas.

Lt. Noll From A.G. To Infantry

(ANF) A third-year student at the Harvard University Law School, Cambridge, Mass., Second Lieutenant Johnathan B. Noll, New Providence, N. J., has obtained a branch transfer from the Adjutant General Corps to Infantry.

Before being commissioned in 1968, Lieutenant Noll was a distinguished military student and company commander in the Harvard University Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC) program.

Lieutenant Noll transferred to the infantry branch because of a personal desire "to serve in the most meaningful capacity." The infantry, he said, "represents the essence of the military. It also represents the greatest chance for personal growth, the greatest challenge and the greatest opportunity to leave the Army a better man. . . ."

"I want to be the ball carrier, not the lineman," Noll said. "Life is too short to sit on the sidelines."

OCS Elects New President

Ralph R. Fuller (Lawton, Okla.) a 21-year old soldier with 14 years of serve in the U. S. Army and Air Force, has been elected Student Council President of the 96th Infantry Officer Candidate Company, 9th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade.

This veteran soldier started his military career in 1955, serving in the Air Force as an Air Policeman until 1963. During this period, Fuller says that his most enjoyable tour in the military took place when he was selected as a body guard for the late Jayne Mansfield, who was in England on a savings bond campaign.

Fuller gained distinction during this time through his success in Air Police proficiency contests. He placed 35th in an All-Europe Air Police Contest.

8 Civilians, 2 Officers Receive Cash Incentive Awards

Eight civilians and two officers received cash awards totalling $3,770 in a ceremony May 29, for proposing suggestions which resulted in an estimated nual savings to the Army of $251,545.

The awards were presented in Room 642 of Infantry Hall at 2:45 p.m. by Brigadier General Oscar E. Davis, then commanding general, U.S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning.

Major Douglas R. Babcock, The Candidate Brigade (provisional), U. S. Army Infantry School (USAIS) received an award of $1,000 for a suggestion proposing that a revised FB Form 502 be used to prepare performance of duty and final leadership observation reports. This suggestion resulted in an estimated annual savings of $159,218.

Sam H. Adams, Offive of the Director of Operations, USAIS, received $385 for a suggestion that resulted in estimated annual savings of $66,245. Adams proposed the building and use of SS-19 sound sets to provide sound support for the school in lieu of generator sets.

Mrs. Phyllis A. Bill, Transportation Services Branch, Services Office, received $475 for a suggestion proposing the installation of a self-contained open rotary file system for use in the motor transport operations unit. This proposal resulted in an estimated annual savings of $9,506 to the Army.

Kenneth L. Tingle, Quartermaster Services Branch, Services Office received $280 for a suggestion that resulted in estimated annual savings of $5,660. Tingle proposed the use of springs from unserviceable harnesses to repair jump training harnesses used by the Airborne Department.

First Lieutenant Paul R. Smith, 197th Infantry Brigade, received $245 for proposing the installation of a new gate, the widening of an existing gate, and the re-routing of vehicles being road tested by persons in the inspection branch of the Maintenance Office. This has brought about an estimated annual savings of $4,928.

John R. Bromley, the Student Brigade, USAIS, received an award of $180 for suggesting the use of a record log in the in-processing section of the Student Brigade so as to provide control over enlisted men's records. This resulted in estimated savings of $3,650.

Miss Josephine C. Zinceau, Special Services Office, received $175 for a suggestion proposing a revision to the preparation methods used by seven Special Services Libraries in gathering daily, monthly and quarterly statistical reports. This suggestion resulted in estimated yearly savings of $3,500.

Homer P. Williams, Family Housing Office, received $165 for proposing that packets of documents issued to those living in family quarters be reissued to future incoming families. This suggestion resulted in estimated annual savings of $3,538.

Miss Gertrude A. Schlosser, Special Services Office, received $150 for a suggestion that resulted in estimated yearly savings of $3,008. Miss Schlosser proposed that separate borrower's cards be issued in consecutive numbers to each participating member by the Main Post Library and Sand Hill Branch Library Number 2.

Albert C. Brissette, Directorate of Communications and Electronics, received $115 for suggesting the buying and use of a forklift to move large boxes, cable reels, batteries and other supplies from the warehouse area to the outside storage area of the Supply Division. The suggestion resulted in annual savings of $2,292.

Does every Rh positive baby born of an Rh negative mother and Rh positive father run risk of disease?

Yes, but the risk is only slight with the firstborn, while it increases progressively with each succeeding pregnancy. The reason for the risk being slight with the firstborn is that the mother generally develops Rh antibodies only after delivery. That is why, the disease occurs in the second and subsequent children.

How can a person be tested for the Rh blood type?

A simple laboratory test on a small blood sample can quickly determine a person's Rh blood type.

My husband and I are both Rh negative. Will we have an Rh problem in future pregnancies?

No. Your children will be Rh negative.

I am Rh negative and I am pregnant. Is there a test available that will determine whether I have Rh antibodies from previous pregnancies? Is my baby safe as long as this remains negative?

Your blood can be readily checked for the presence of Rh antibodies. Yes, your baby is safe from Rh hemolytic disease as long as this test remains negative. This test should be repeated after each pregnancy.

Can an Rh antibody be produced after a miscarriage?

Yes. Following a miscarriage a small amount of Rh positive fetal cells may enter the mother's bloodstream. The Rh negative mother's body may respond to these foreign Rh positive cells by building an antibody to Rh.

Is it true that once a mother has antibodies to the Rh factor all her future babies will suffer from hemolytic disease?

The chance of hemolytic disease in subsequent pregnancies is greatly increased. Each future Rh positive infant born to a mother having antibodies runs the risk of being affected.

I am Rh positive. What is the risk for my baby?

Since Rh positive mothers possess the Rh factor those mothers that are not immunized, each additional Rh positive baby conveys a further 10 per cent risk of starting the Rh immunity. The more babies you have, the greater risk of becoming immunized. However, there are many Rh negative mothers who have three or more Rh positive babies without becoming immunized. All of the children that you have up to and including the child who started the immunity will escape the disease.

Mature Driver Takes Special Care at Night

Being a little afraid of the dark is a sign of maturity when it comes to driving at night, and for very good reason. Mile for miles, the road death rate after dark is about triple the daytime rate.

Although more hazardous, night driving is often unavoidable. It can be reasonably safe, even pleasant, if one makes a few allowances.

The most important thing to remember is that at night you see only a fraction of what you see in the daytime. True, traffic activity is usually less, but then you also face a higher percentage of drivers of questionalbe abilities: drivers who have been drinking, tired drivers and drivers with poor night vision.

As with most driving situations, competence and confidence come with experience. First, don't overdrive your headlights. This simply means to drive at a speed that allows you to stop within the distance illuminated by your headlights.

Elementary? Sure it is! But it's worth repeating because it's one of the most abused night driving practices. Good drivers automatically take this double precautionary action when the sun goes down, they reduce speed and increase following distances.

Use your lights properly. Lower your high beam for approaching traffic or when you're following another car. Even low beams can cut an approaching driver's vision up to one-third.

If a car approaches you with its "brights" flick your lights up and down. If the other driver fails to lower his, resist the very human temptation to meet glare with glare by putting your "brights on."

Two half-blinded drivers create a dangerous situation. When you run across such a stubborn driver, especially on a high-speed two-lane highway, reduce your speed, because that glare can reduce your perception as much as 75 per cent.

Keep to the right and look slightly to the right of his lights not directly at them. Take quick glances at the center line and watch the space between his lights and the right side of the road. Be ready to edge over if he crowds the center line. When he's past, allow your eyes a few seconds to readjust to the darkness before resuming speed.

Artifacts Given To Museum

A World War I Army uniform and a collection of World War I photographs were presented to the Infantry Museum Thursday by Captain Hammond M. Salley, a student in Infantry Officer Advanced Course 3-69.

The uniform was once worn by Lieutenant Charles W. Morgan who served with Battery F, 4th Regiment, 1st Brigade during the war.

It was donated to the museum by his widow who now resides at 49 Court Street, Tarpon Springs, Florida.

Captain Salley is a friend of the Morgan family.

The photographs, including shots of General Pershing's arrival in France and the use of tanks at the battle of the Somme, were presented in behalf of the Tarpon Springs Historical Society.

Medical Records Filing System To Be Changed

Effective 1 July 1969, medical records at Martin Army Hospital will be filed under a terminal digit system utilizing the military sponsor's social security account number which will come into general use 1 July 1969.

Military sponsors should be advised to make their social security number available to their dependents when seeking medical treatment at Martin Army Hospital and from civilian medical treatment facilities.

This requirement also applies to retired military personnel and their authorized dependents.

"Duty — Honor — Country. Those three hallowed words reverently dictate what you ought to be, what you can be, what you will be. They are your rallying rebuke to build courage when courage seems to fail; to regain faith when there seems to be little cause for faith; to create hope when hope becomes forlorn."
Douglas MacArthur
General of the Army, May 12, 1962.

Education

with the office, factory or farm."

Secretary Laird said the elimination of the education gap has high priority on the agenda for the nation prepared by President Nixon. "In recent years there has been a bewildering proliferation of manpower training programs in Washington designed to overcome this problem. Because they have been scattered, fragmentary, often duplicative and overlapping, they have been wasteful and, to a degree, ineffective."

He mentioned that in addition to substantial administrative reorganization already accomplished, President Nixon soon will send to Congress a Comprehensive Manpower Act. "It will be designed to replace the present hodgepodge of programs with one coordinated system that overlooks no one who might benefit from training and makes maximum use of the knowledge and resources of private enterprise."

"The new act is the result of careful and objective study of the strengths and weakness of existing programs as well as of the alternatives which might be used to provide maximum effective training opportunities."

He said, "The important reforms which the present Administration is making in the tangle of national manpower training programs reflect the new philosophy and style which are beginning to assert themselves in Washington.

"Reflection now comes before action; impulsive action, shooting from the hip, and panicky response to immediate crises are no longer the order of the day."

WACs Receive Training In Actual Gas Chamber

By Carol Aubin

Fatigued members of the distaff side of the Army headed for the gas chamber two afternoons last week to receive their annual phase of training in Chemical Biological and Nuclear training (CBN).

This was part of the program as the WACs completed six hours of Chemical Biological and Nuclear (CBN) schooling.

The training was part of the annual training cycle which includes other field subjects such as map reading and land navigation.

After finishing the classroom portion of the training, which covered the uses and effects of various chemical and biological agents the WACs participated in the actual gas chamber exercise.

In small groups, the WACs donned protective masks and moved into the chamber to complete their training.

One by one, each girl removed her mask, and was require to state her name, rank and service number before moving outside to the fresh air.

Tears and red faces, coughing and stinging eyes were the most obvious effects from the gas.

With the tears and the coughing came a healthy appreciation for fresh air.

Ceremony Honors Six Men

A ceremony honoring six men who retired from active service in the Army was held on York Field here May 29.

The reviewing officer for the retirement ceremony was Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, then commanding general of the U.S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning.

Participating in the ceremony were members of the 29ist Army Band and an honor guard from Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade.

During the event, Lt. Col. Ellwood W. Brown received an Army Commendation Medal with second Oak Leaf Cluster.

Lt Col. Brown, whose last assignment was chief of the Personal Affairs Branch, Office of the Adjutant General at Fort Benning had 23 years of service.

In 1965 and 1966, Lt. Col. Brown served as executive officer, 1st Battalion, 8th Cavalry, 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) in Vietnam. After his retirement, he will continue to live in Columbus, Ga.

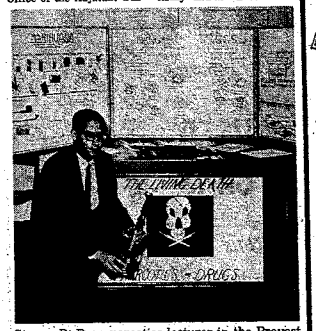
SFC Melvin H. Swain (Columbus, Ga.) received an Army Commendation Medal at the retirement ceremony. His last assignment was assistant operations sergeant, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade.

An Army Commendation Medal was presented to SFC Charles S. Elledge (Columbus, Ga.). SFC Elledge was project noncommissioned officer at the U.S. Army Human Research Unit of Fort Benning and he retired with 22 years of active service.

SFC Alfred S. Buffington (Belleview, Fla.) retired with 20 years active service. He was operations sergeant at the U.S. Army Infantry School Battalion, The Student Brigade. He was awarded an Army Commendation Medal.

An Army Commendation Medal with second Oak Leaf Cluster was presented to S-Sgt. Bobbie H. Duggan (Columbus, Ga.) who is retiring with 20 years of active service. His last assignment was as a warehouse foreman in the 1st Battalion, The Student Brigade.

S-Sgt. John W. Small (Paris, Maine) received an Army Commendation Medal at honoring his 20 years of active service. Sgt. Small was last assigned as a supply sergeant in the 56th Company, 5th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade.



Steven R. Ross, narcotics lecturer in the Provost Marshal's Office here, will participate in a half-hour panel discussion of drug problems on Channel 9's "Dateline Jaycee" at 7 p.m. June 27.

Long Tours at Bn. Level Suggested

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Current policies for recommending officers for command positions have been changed to permit more repetitive battalion level command assignments in order to better capitalize on the experience of proven leaders.

Highly qualified officers who have led battalions in Vietnam will be recommended by Office of Personnel Operations (OPO) for second battalion command assignments in the sustaining bases such as continental United States or long tour overseas areas.

Conversely, battalion commanders in sustaining bases will be recommended for similar duty in Vietnam.

Individuals recommended for these repetitive command tours will serve 24 months.

Vacation Bible School Planned for June 10-14

A Protestant vacation Bible school will be held here June 10-14 with a central theme of "God and His World."

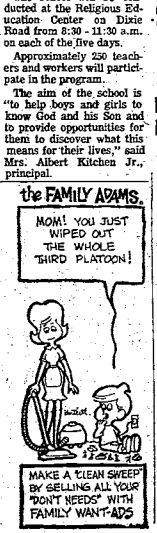
The school will be conducted at the Religious Education Center on Dixie Road from 8:30 - 11:30 a.m. on each of the five days.

Approximately 250 teachers and workers will participate in the program.

The aim of the school is "to help boys and girls to know God and his Son and to provide opportunities for them to discover what this means for their lives," said Mrs. Albert Kitchen Jr., principal.

The theme for the junior high students will be "World Without End;" for junior students, "God, The Creator and Sustainer;" for primary students, "God, the Creator;" for kindergarten students, "God's Wonderful World," and for nursery students, "God Loves and Plans for Me."

Buses will be sent to all areas of government housing.



Reid Designated Honor Graduate

Harold E. Reid (Atlanta, Ga.) was named the distinguished graduate of Infantry Noncommissioned Officer Candidate Class No. 33-69 at graduation exercises in Marshall Auditorium May 27.

For his achivement, Reid was promoted to the rank of staff sergeant.

Also, he received an Association of the United States Army (AUSA) plaque, a "Follow Me" statuette, and a letter of commendation from Brigadier General Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the United States Army Infantry School (USAIS).

The guest speaker at the graduation was Staff Sergeant Major Donald E. McClung, Company Operations Department, USAIS, at Fort Benning.

The class graduated 119 new sergeants who, during the program, were members of the 75th Company, 7th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade.

Teletype Improves Service

The letters, "EDP" would mean "everyday problems" to the average person. But to the employes of Social Security, they mean lot more electronic data processing.

District Manager Robert E. O'Neal reports that his office has a teletype machine hooked up to a nationwide network. With this system, the office is in constant and instant touch with other Social Security offices all over the country, and better service to you is assured.

He said that when a person receiving social security benefits moves and notifies the office of the new address, a teletype message is sent to the payment center, making an immediate change. This means no delay in the receipt of those vitally needed checks. If for some reason a check is not received, use of this system can alert the payment center to find the cause and take action.

O'Neal went on to say that the teletype can also assure prompt receipt of the first check after retirement or death. Also, the information necessary to figure benefit amounts is quickly obtained. Medicare problems involving entitlement to hospital and doctor bill insurance can be solved promptly by use of this system.

For ROTC Instructors

Beginning in September, 1969, positions as instructors in the ROTC program of the Detroit Public Schools will be open to retired noncommissioned officers.

The announcement was made here recently by the Department of Military Science of the Detroit High Schools.

Interested persons must have been in one of the combat arms, have a high school diploma or a General Educational Development (GED) equivalent, have a back ground in Army instruction, be in good health and work well with young men between the ages of 18 and 18.

Applicants are encouraged to send a complete resume of both civilian and military experience with the date they can be interviewed by the Detroit Board of Education to the following address: Colonel Albert R. Cupello, USA (Ret), Director of Military Science, Area 50, Fifth U. S. Army ROTC Group, Room 944, Schools Center Building, 5057 Woodward, Detroit, Michigan 48202.

An employment application will be sent by return mail.

personnel from the Walter Reed Army Institute of Research. "Gunnar" has learned to sniff out marijuana. Contraband detector dogs are taught to sniff things, not people, and are primarily trained for inspection in post offices and customs areas to prevent the flow of contraband marijuana into this country.

The Veterinary Corps provides care for public animals other than dogs. Horses are used to pull the funeral caissons at Arlington National Cemetery or as Olympic Pentathlon horses, at Fort Sam Houston, Texas. The United States Military Academy at West Point has mules to serve as Army mascots.

The Army veterinarian provides routine care and treatment for animals such as these.

The primary objective of the Veterinary Corps is to provide assistance for all projects involving food and animals. The meals eaten by the moon-circling astronauts were developed by the Army Research Institute of Environmental Medicine at Natick, Mass., with the supportive aid of the Army Veterinary Corps.

Many animal diseases can be transmitted to man so Army veterinarians protect the health of military personnel and their dependents by animal disease control and strict quarantine programs.

The Infantry Celebrates Its 194th Anniversary

By Sp4 Frank Truchon

"Wherever brave men fight and die for freedom, you will find me. I am the bulwark of our nation's defense. I am always ready ... now and forever. I am the Infantry — queen of battle! Follow me!"

This is the pledge of the United States Army Infantry, which will celebrate its 194th birthday June 14.

From the time the Continental Congress established the Army in 1775, the Infantryman has fought in 146 major wars, campaigns and conflicts.

The Infantry originally consisted of 10 rifle companies and has been maintained at various strengths since then. This ranged from an 80-man careasking establishment authorized in June 1784 to the 67 Infantry Divisions and five Airborne Divisions during World War II.

Militia organizations formed the local defense of the American colonies. It was the militia that brought its own arms, ammunition and powder to fight at the battles of Lexington, Concord and Bunker Hill.

By the time of the Mexican War, 75 per cent of the Army consisted of Infantrymen. It has also been estimated that at the time of its highest strength, the Union Army of over a million men was composed of 83 per cent Infantrymen.

Following the Civil War the Army was reduced to 25,000 men and was spread out along the frontier. Infantrymen fought in 15 campaigns and more than 1,000 engagements during the westward expansion of this country.

The Infantryman secured Cuba, captured Puerto Rico and suppressed the Philippine Insurrection. During World War I more than a million Infantrymen were sent to Europe to help defeat the German Army and, in the next war, more than 2 million Infantrymen were sent over.

General (ret.) Mark W. Clark, writing about the Infantryman in World War II and Korea stated, "It was on the members of the rifle platoons that the onus of

USMA Cadets Visit Benning This Week

By 2Lt. James Hopson

The Infantry Center and School will welcome cadets of the United States Military Academy Class of 1970 to three days of training, June 18-21.

The visit climaxes a month's training at six Army installations for the 738 West Point seniors.

Five cadets from the Ft. Benning area who will arrive with the class are: George B. Forsythe, son of Major General and Mrs. George I. Forsythe, Ft. Benning; John W. Adams, son of Col. and Mrs. Willis I. Adams, 313 Lumpkin Rd.; Bart J. Engram Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Bart J. Engram, Enterprise, Ala.; Robert A. Meier Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Meier, Atlanta; and Victor L. Ross, a 1966 graduate of Columbus High School.

General George I. Forsythe, commanding general of the Infantry Center, and Brigadier General Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the Infantry School, will greet the cadets at Lawson Army Air Field. The class will arrive in two groups — the first half at 11:45 a.m. and the remainder at 3:30 p.m., June 18.

During their stay, the West Pointers will receive an Infantry orientation, including briefings, demonstrations and training. The class will be among the first to learn combat marksmanship on a quick kill reaction course at the newly expanded Shelton Range. They will also test their skills on the leaders reaction course and will receive some preliminary airborne instruction.

Friday evening, June 20, the cadets will view a demonstration of an Infantry platoon searching a reconstructed Vietnamese village, and later, a re-enactment of the defense of Plei Bea, illustrating the combined firepower of an Infantry company in a perimeter defense.

The cadets and their dates will relax at a "hop" at the Ft. Benning Officers Open Mess, Thursday, June 19.

The class makes the Infantry Center the final stop on their tour, which includes visits to Ft. Monmouth, N.J.; Ft. Knox, Ky.; Ft. Belvoir, Va.; Ft. Sill, Okla., and Ft. Bliss, Tex. The cadets will depart at 9:10 a.m., June 21, from Lawson Army Air Field.

An informal orientation on the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, N. Y., and the U. S. Military Academy Preparatory School at Fort Belvoir, Va.

MYSTERIOUS NOVAK HANGS FROM TOWER
Escape Artist

4th of July Features The Mysterious Novak

By Bill Hardin

A man who duplicates the strait jacket escape of the late Harry Houdini headlines the list of international entertainers who will perform at Fort Benning as part of the July 4th celebration.

The Mysterious Novak, known as one of the world's leading magicians, escape artists and hypnotists, will attempt to escape from a strait jacket while hanging upside down, tied by his ankles to the top of a 250-foot parachute training free fall tower.

The Mysterious Novak allows viewers to examine the strait jacket he uses, prior to his performance. He also offers $1,000 to any person who can show that any trickery or gimmicks are involved in the jacket.

Following his escape, the star of the show will hypnotize persons from the audience. This portion of his performance is billed as family comedy entertainment.

Joining the Mysterious Novak will be the Johnson Family. Their act is a variety performance. This internationally known group boasts the world's youngest juggler, just six years old.

The Independence Day observance at Fort Benning will also feature performances by Marianne Verse. She will appear with her variety troupe, which will stage rock and roll music, singing, and dancing. The German star will perform her Acro dance, which gained her fame across the entire European continent. Her stateside band has numerous television appearances to its credit, and has performed at a number of military bases also.

Other internationally known performers are also being lined up to appear here as part of the day-long program as Fort Benning again this year plans many varied activities for the July 4th observance.

Fund-Raising Drive Underway To Buy Stained Glass Windows

FT. LEAVENWORTH, Kan. — A fund-raising drive is now underway at Ft. Leavenworth to purchase stained glass windows that will bear coats-of-arms of old Army units.

The windows will be located in the interwing gallery on the first floor of Bell Hall, academic building of the U. S. Army Command and General Staff College.

Units to be honored on the eight stained glass windows are the 3rd Infantry, 6th Infantry, 17th Infantry, 20th Infantry, 4th Artillery, 1st Cavalry, 7th Cavalry and 10th Cavalry. These units were selected because of their association with the settlement and development of Ft. Leavenworth.

In charge of this project is the Bell Hall Memorial Association, a non-profit, private organization that came into existence May 1 to perpetuate the tradition and history of old Army line units.

The Henry Leavenworth Chapter of the Association of the United States Army is donating funds for the first window.

Installation of four of the eight windows is scheduled for completion by the end of this summer. The association will fabricate and maintain the four by six and one-half foot windows. A bronze plaque will likely be displayed with each window to acknowledge its principal contributors.

In the future, the Bell Hall Memorial Association plans to honor additional Army units with stained glass windows on the second floor of the building's interwing gallery.

A membership drive in the association is planned for this fall. No dues are to be charged and membership will be open to all.

Infantry Anniversary

war fell — they had the least statistical chance for survival. There was rarely shelter, beds or safety for the rifleman. He slept in a trench or a foxhole often filled with water. He fought because of the discipline that was instilled in him, pride, belief in cause and because he did not want to 'let down' his fellow Infantrymen."

Though certain theorists suggest that with the stockpiling of nuclear weapons there will be no use of Infantry in the future, Infantry advocates think differently. They say that Infantry is the only force having enough versatility to gain control of the enemy's war potential, which consists of his land, people and resources. Decision in war, they add, is not obtained by counting millions of dead or the number of devastated cities, but by subjugating the enemy force protecting the homeland. Man still determines the final outcome of war.

It is the mission of Fort Benning to train this man.

This it does through basic training, Officer Candidate School, the Noncommissioned Officer Courses, Airborne School, Ranger Training and Infantry Officer Basic Course and the Infantry Officer Advanced Course.

During a man's first eight weeks in the Army he learns many skills. Some are how to fire a rifle; first aid for chemical, biological and radiological attacks; military justice and courtesy; drill and ceremonies; hand-to-hand combat; bayonet training; and individual tactics.

After a soldier has completed his advanced individual training in his military occupational specialty, he may attend the Airborne course here, which consists of three weeks of exacting training. The first week is composed of physical training, pre-jump procedures, the method of exit from aircraft and the body position in landing.

In the second week the soldier practices exiting from aircraft by jumping from the 35-foot tower and actual drop procedures by jumping from the 35-foot tower.

During the last week, the paratrooper makes five qualifying jumps from an airplane. On the fourth jump, the trooper is required to jump with full combat gear.

Officer Candidate School is a 24-week course centered on the development of leadership ability. At graduation, the new officer must be able to lead a platoon in combat. Candidates take turns in command positions learning how to direct and lead other men. In addition to learning how to deal with weapons, tactics and general subjects they are also required to instruct military subjects such as dismounted drill, physical training and command information.

Another candidate course, the Noncommissioned Officer Candidate Course, is a 12-week school designed to prepare fire team, rifle team and operations NCOs for possible Vietnam combat.

Students receive 407 hours of class work in which they learn patrolling, offensive and defensive operations, artillery and engineer operations, internal defense and development, chemical and biological operations, as well as airborne, airmobile and Air Force operations.

There is also training in map reading, intelligence, weapons, medical subjects and drill.

The nine-week Ranger course provides the student with demanding combat readiness training. He learns how to conduct night patrols, ambushes, raids and evacuations.

The Ranger also learns mountaineering techniques, map and compass reading, woodsmanship and survival training. Upon graduation, students receive the coveted Ranger tab.

The Infantry Officer Basic Course covers the teaching of small unit tactics, weapons and leadership while the Advanced Course concentrates on command and staff responsibilities.

USMA

will be held at 3 p.m. June 19 in Infantry Hall here.

Several first classmen (seniors) from the academy will conduct the meeting in Classroom 51 for all who are interested.

Each cadet will meet with a small group of prospective candidates. Following the informal orientation, the cadets will answer questions pertaining to the academy and the preparatory school.

The first classmen will be available for [illegible] only.

Flag Is All Things To The Nation

FLAG IS ALL THINGS

Tomorrow is the 192nd birthday of the American flag — adopted in the midst of the Revolutionary War by the Second Continental Congress, meeting in Philadelphia on June 14, 1777.

The Congress resolved "the flag of the United States shall be of thirteen stripes of alternate red and white, with a union of thirteen stars of white in a blue field representing a new constellation."

Tomorrow is also the 194th birthday of the United States Army. It was born at the start of the war which won for us our independence. The Congress — on June 14, 1775 — adopted the New England Army besieging the British in Boston and agreed to provide rules and regulations for that army.

It is proper that we observe these two anniversaries together. Both the Flag and the Army, besides having deep roots in the nation's history, are graphic symbols of a free nation — and of the will and determination of its people to protect their freedom. We can think of nothing more reassuring today than to reflect on some of the fundamental thoughts and principles embodied in the flag and in the army.

All Things to Nation

The flag is all things to the nation. It represents sovereignty. It is a symbol of liberty and unity — and of hope and the future. It is a point around which the people rally in times of danger. It represents as someone said, "The continuity of a people," their common purpose, their traditions, their way of looking at the world, their defiance against their enemies."

The flag stirs deep emotions. It can cause men to lift their eyes beyond immediate danger. The story is told that in World War I, a young soldier carried the Stars and Stripes far ahead of his regiment and placed it near the enemy lines. His commanding officer, fearful of some misfortune involving the soldier and the flag, shouted, "Bring back the flag, you fool!"

But the private replied, even louder, "Never! You bring up the regiment!"

When the regiment finally arrived at the place where the soldier had been under heavy fire, the men found him dead. But the flag was flying triumphantly in the breeze.

The saga of America is filled with heroic acts of the soldier's devotion to the flag. Another such act was that of Colonel Carl Bunker who burned the flag which was lowered at Corregidor before the Japanese could reach it. But before he disposed of it, he first snipped out a small fragment which he concealed under a patch in his shirt.

As he lay near death in a Manila prison, he passed half of it to a fellow prisoner, Colonel Delbert Ausmus; who after the war, delivered it to the War Department. Today, at the request of Colonel Bunker's widow, that fragment is a priceless exhibit at the Military Academy at West Point.

What Woodrow Wilson said about "Old Glory" on Flag Day in 1915 is worth repeating "The things that the flag stands for were created by the experiences of a great people. Everything that it stands for was written by their lives. The flag is the embodiment, not of sentiment, but of history. It represents the experiences made by men and women. The experiences of those who do and live under that flag."

The same is true of the Army. It, too, represents the experiences of the people whom it serves. As the Army Chief of Staff, General William C. Westmoreland, said, "The Army is made up of the people, and it belongs to the people. The Army is a cross section of America and our free society. It draws its officers and soldiers from every walk of life — from every part of America. Each citizen owns a share in the United States Army.

Basic Army Heritage

This concept is basic in Army heritage — the first chapter of which, perhaps, began with those embattled farmers of Massachusetts who, two months before the Army was founded, stood and fired the shot heard round the world. Thus the spark of freedom burst into flame. Blood was shed at Lexington and Concord. And they became symbols of the American Revolution.

News of the encounters at Lexington and Concord electrified the colonies. Massachusetts urged the Continental Congress to take over the regulation and general direction of the army collecting before Boston, as this army was to serve for the "general defense of the right of America. The delegates to the Congress had talked of resistence; now it was time to act.

Congress answered the Massachusetts request when it appointed a committee to bring in a "draft of rules and regulations for the government of the army." On the same day, it authorized the enlistment of riflemen from the Middle Atlantic States — men renowned as sharpshooters — to serve as light infantry under command of the chief officer of the army before Boston."

On the following day, the Congress gave their armies a general and a commander-in-chief, the incomparable Washington.

The Continental Army thus formed, stood at the threshold of a struggle which raged fiercely for six years. Six years is not long as nations count time but those years were filled with events dramatic and meaningful enough to give our infant land a heritage as rich as that of any of the ancient states of Europe.

RETIREMENT

I am considering retiring in the next couple of years. What can I do now to plan for my future retirement?

Servicemen with over 18 years of active federal service and their wives are cordially invited by Maj. Harold W. Spangler, Jr. of the Retirement and Retired Activities Branch to the Phase I Pre-retirement Orientation which will be held in Theater No. 1 at 9 a.m. on June 18.

This program is designed to help the prospective retirees in planning for his retirement.

DRAFT

Desire percentages of service personnel that came from the draft and percentage from enlistment during the following fiscal years: 1943, 1952, 1961, 1968. Also, how much has been allocated during the last FY for recruiting by the Army?

Statistical data not available on 1943. However, according to "Army Ground Forces" (pubished by Chief of Military History) the Army "accepted men of draft age as volunteers and permitted them to select their own branch of service" until the end of 1942. Apparently, after that time, all men were brought in to the service through the Selective Service.

FY 1952 - 79 Pct. draft, 21 Pct. first enlistment
FY 1961 - 34 Pct. draft, 66 Pct. first enlistment
FY 1968 - 63 Pct. draft, 37 Pct. first enlistment

A total of $30.7 million was budgeted for recruiting in FY 68. Of this amount, $18.8 million was for the pay and allowances of military personnel. Of the remainder, $3.4 million was for civilian personnel costs, and $8.5 was for related expenses to include recruit processing, printing, operational supplies, and operating expenses for the approximately 950 Army recruiting stations, and for advertising and publicity.

CHAPLAINS

Is a chaplain an officer by Act of Congress? Do commanders turn in fitness reports? In Vietnam, have any military chaplains come home due to opposition to Vietnam?

Chaplains are appointed in the same manner as other officers of the Army. The only variance is that they must have ecclesiastical indorsement by their church in order to enter military service. The rater, indorser, and reviewing officer of chaplains are LINE officers, not other chaplains. No Army chaplains have been returned to the United States for opposition to the war in Vietnam.

GENERALS

How many generals on active duty? Retired rolls? How many generals, active and retired, died last year? (1968)

There are approximately 518 general officers on active duty. There are 1,816 general officers on the retired rolls. Fifty-five died; three of these were on active duty at time of death.

PSYCHIATRIC CASUALTIES

We are asked to check that large numbers of soldiers and marines in Vietnam rear echelon areas are "going off their rockers." In this connection, we are asked to find out: number of men sent home for emotional or mental causes, number of these who are officers, a racial breakdown of these statistics.

The rate of psychiatric casualties in RVN is 12 per 1000 soldiers per year. The casualty evacuation rate for soldiers needing psychiatric care is 2 or 3 per 1000 soldiers per year. Less than 5 per cent of all medical evacuations from RVN are for psychiatric reasons. No rank or racial breakdown statistics are available. An excellent article about this subject appeared in the US MEDICINE, 15 May 1969, page 10.

Social Security Quiz

Q. I worked under social security long enough to qualify for benefits on my own record. However, I receive widow's benefits on my husband's record. Will a lump sum death payment be made when I die?

A. Yes. A payment can be made to the person paying the burial expenses or to the funeral home if authorized by the person who assumes responsibility for payment of the expenses.

Q. I will be 62 years old in March and plan to retire then. My wife is 53, and I have a 17 year old son. will they be eligible for benefits?

A. Yes, both your wife and son can receive payments until he reaches age 18. Payments may be continued to our son until he is 22 years old if he is in school full time.

Q. I will be 62 in August and I plan to retire at that time. I was told I had to have a birth certificate to prove my age, but my birth was never recorded. How can I get a birth certificate?

A. It is true that we must have the birth certificate of persons whose birth was recorded before they were age 5. Or, if a church baptismal record of a person's age was made before age 5 we must have it. If you do not have such records; you can use other records to prove your age. We will need at least two old documents which show your age. You may be able to get a school record from the county in which you attended school as a child. Other records which are acceptable are family Bible records, voting records, insurance policies, Federal census records, and children's birth certificates. Any document you can get that has your age on it can be used, but we need at least one record made early in your life.

Star Fruit Salads

NEW YORK (NAPS) — A simmery summer day becomes a festive one with a crisp refreshing fruit salad the star of an informal meal. There is a wide choice and can be fruit combined with fish or meats or serve the salad garnished with stuffed eggs.

What really makes a salad superb is the dressing. It unites the flavors and makes the difference between a star and a bit part. Our pictured salad is made from all fresh fruits, left in fairly large pieces and an unusual dressing made from real mayonnaise and heavy cream sparked with bitters.

Crisp iceberg lettuce, with the lovely cool pale green colors is used with the luscious fruit.

Fruit Salad

Western iceberg lettuce
Cantaloupe, cut into wedges
Pineapple, cut into sticks
Mango, cut into slices
Strawberries, whole or halved

Bitters Dressing

Core, rinse, drain and chill lettuce. Prepare and cut fruit. Gently pull apart leaves from chilled lettuce to form cups. Arrange fruit in the lettuce cups. Serve with Bitters Dressing.

This salad should taste refreshing on a hot summer day.

Women Model Indian Costumes

Wives of Allied officers attending the Infantry Officer Advanced Course were the honored guests at a USAIS Academic Staff Officers' Wives Club luncheon held at the Country Club recently.

The highlight of the luncheon, which was hosted by Mrs. John B. Wine and Mrs. William L. Humphrey, was Mrs. Usha Verma, who presented a fashion show featuring native Indian costumes.

Mrs. Verma, a native of India, explained that the costumes of various regions in India differ greatly in style and colors, however, the sari is the national dress of India. Mrs. Verma, who is the wife of Maj. Ashok Kalyak Verma (Infantry Officer Advanced Class 4-69), featured eight dresses, all authentic Indian garments she had brought with her.

Some of the costumes modeled were a red wedding sari, a pants and dress outfit from Northern India, a bright multi-colored gypsy garb and a mini-sari which might be worn by some of the avant-garde women in India's large cities.

In addition to the fashion show, each of the Allied wives brought with her a small display which was native to her country. The displays were arranged on a table along with the flags of all the nations the Allies represented. Some of the displays were dolls, jewelry and hand-crafted metal cookware.

Ceremonies Will Dedicate Gold Star Avenue of Flags

By SFC Dick Kemp

Dedication of the Gold Star Avenue of Flags will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday, Flag Day, before the Columbus Municipal Auditorium.

Mayor J. R. Allen will serve as master of ceremonies and Congressman Jack Brinkley will be the guest speaker.

The event will be concluded with a motorcade east from the auditorium along Victory Drive, reviewing the 79 U.S. flags to fly as a result of a campaign started a little over two weeks ago.

Mrs. Nan Nave, vice president of the Chattahoochee Valley Chapter of the Gold Star Wives and project chairman for the Avenue of Flags campaign, said Wednesday morning $3,644.57 had been contributed towards a goal of $4,000.

Mrs. Joyce Tremaine, chapter president, urged all residents of Columbus and Fort Benning to attend the dedication ceremony and to join in the motorcade along the line of flags.

The original plan for the Flag Day dedication of the Avenue of Flags called for 100 flags stretching eastwards from Fourth Avenue towards the Traffic Circle.

The 79 flags now located on the median go to the intersection of Victory Drive and Lumpkin Road only because of future plans to widen Victory Drive, Mrs. Nave said.

Once Victory Drive is widened, it is planned to continue the Avenue of Flags eastward to the Lindsey Creek by-pass and north along Fourth Avenue, she said.

Receptacles for flag staffs were completed Tuesday. Assisting were three cement companies, the local power company and members of the Sertoma Club.

Individual donations received have totaled from $1 to $165, she said.

Guidance in locating the flags was given by the office of the safety director of the Georgia Highway System and by the city traffic engineer's office, Mrs. Nave said.

Mrs. Tremaine praised the support of local civic groups, governmental officials and residents as well as the news media of the Columbus area.

Contributions are still being accepted for the Avenue of Flags. Those wishing to contribute may send a donation to Gold Star Avenue of Flags, General Delivery, Columbus, Ga.

Daylily Walk Planned at Eufaula

EUFAULA, Ala. — The multi-colored floral gardens, set against rising hills and beautiful Lake Eufaula, will again be the scene of the annual Daylily Walk Sunday.

Visitors from a wide area in Alabama, Georgia and Florida have come to Eufaula for the past five years to view the blaze of color in the Patrick garden.

The gardens, which have over 400 types of named daylilies plus thousands of seedling varieties which Patrick has cultivated over the past 12 years, will be open to visitors between the hours of noon and 6 p.m.

All shades and hues of color, with the exception of a true white and a true blue, can be found among the daylilies in the Patrick gardens. "You really need a color chart to indentify some of the colors," Patrick explains. "For instance, who can say what color is a true blue?"

Even without the color chart, the most "color blind" visitor can easily distinguish the rich hues of pink, red, bronze, cinnamon, orange, yellow daylilies.

A "lazy man's flower," daylilies don't need much care and the chances are good the flowers will produce if left completely alone, with only the care of mother nature. However, Patrick does fertilize his plants with regular lawn fertilizer and waters them occasionally so that the blooms will be larger.

In his flower beds Patrick has daylilies which range in price from 50 cents to $25.00. The more expensive plants were purchased to give him a good stock for cross pollination with other lilies.

"After the cross pollination has occured," he said, "the seeds are planted. You never know what color you'll get from the match. The seedlings take on the characteristics of the parent plants with some deviation, but one thing is assured. After the plants bloom, usually within two years, their color is stabilized and will not change."

Although Patrick has some new varieties in his garden, many of the old favorites will again explode in a mass of color during the Daylily Walk. Some of the plants which will be blooming are Golden Geisha, Pickfair, Frankly Fabulous, Grand Champion, Showman, Symphonette, Lime Painted Lady and Green Mountain.

During the Daylily Walk, sponsored by the Episcopal Men's Club, Patrick plans to give away $100 worth of daylilies. "Everyone is urged to register for the prizes," he said.

Patrick became interested in the cross pollination of daylilies some 12 years ago after watching his father-in-law, the late Dr. G. A. Ferrell, a florist, work with the plants.

Surgeon Says--Part III

Questions And Answers On The Rh Factor

Can hemolytic disease of the newborn be prevented?

Yes. Prevention now is possible with the use of a new drug called RhoGAM, for mothers who do not have antibodies. Mothers who have already formed Rh antibodies cannot be helped by this new drug.

What is RhoGAM?

RhoGAM is a specially prepared gamma globulin which contains a concentration of Rh antibodies. These antibodies provide protection against foreign Rh positive red cells which may enter the mother's bloodstream after delivery. An injection of RhoGAM provides virtually complete protection by preventing the mother's body from forming her own permanent antibody.

How is RhoGAM administered?

RhoGAM is injected intramuscularly into the unimmunized Rh negative mother each time she delivers an Rh positive baby or following a miscarriage.

When is RhoGAM administered?

RhoGAM is administered within 72 hours after the delivery of an Rh positive baby or within 72 hours after miscarriage.

Who of American Women."

Are there any special precautions to be observed in the use of RhoGAM?

Yes. Both mother and baby must have certain blood characteristics. Your doctor will have blood specimens tested by laboratory to determine whether you and your baby meet these requirements.

Are there any adverse reactions to RhoGAM?

It is not unusual for the patient to feel some temporary soreness at the site of injection and an occasional patient develops a slight, temporary elevation of temperature. In rare instances an allergic type of reaction occurs for which your doctor will take appropriate counteractive measures.

Will I need additional injections of RhoGAM?

Benning School Superintendent Receives Achievement Award

By Jim Doherty

A certificate of achievement for 19 years of service was presented to Mrs. Hazel Scudder, superintendent of the Fort Benning Children's Schools, by Maj. Gen. George I. Forsythe, commanding general of the U. S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning.

General Forsythe also presented a bronze plaque attesting to her service to the children of the Fort Benning community.

The plaque will be placed beneath a portrait of Mrs. Scudder in the administrative building for Fort Benning Children's Schools.

Mrs. Scudder, who plans to retire and was recently honored at a retirement reception, came to Fort Benning in August, 1950, as supervising principal of the Patch Elementary School, then the Main Post School. She became superintendent of schools in 1954.

She was a delegate at large for military dependent schools at the White House Conference on Education in 1955 and has been a member of National Education Associations, American Association of School Administrators and the Department of Elementary School Principles, NEA.

She served on the Committee on College and University Relationships of NEA's Department of Elementary School Principals and was a member of the Board of the Joint Council on Economic Education in New York, N. Y., for four years. In 1967 she was Georgia chairman of the Affiliation Committee.

She has served as chairman and a member of the Georgia Elementary Committee of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools and is currently a member of the ASCS committee on school improvements, one of seven commission members from Georgia.

Her name appears in "Who's Who in American Education" and "Who's

MISS COLUMBUS CANDIDATE
Brenda Davis Represents Post

Daughter of NCO Enters Pageant

By Carol Aubin

"The opportunity to meet new friends, the possibility of obtaining a scholarship and the fun of entering competition" add up to the reasons that prompted Brenda A. Davis, daughter of 1st Sgt. and Mrs. Jessie W. Davis, to enter the Miss Columbus Pageant.

Brenda explained, "This is the first time that the pageant has ever been open to Fort Benning residents, and I am being sponsored by the NCO Wives Club."

"I am fearful only of the unknown at the present time, and I won't become especially nervous about the competition until the time draws closer," Brenda continued. She noted that the tentative date for the pageant is August 23 at the Springer Opera House.

"I feel that this competition is especially important for several reasons," she explained. "I am not only representing myself, but the Wives Club, Fort Benning, and the United States Army...consequently my reasons for wanting to do my best are expanded far beyond personal ones."

Brenda explained, "When one enters a competition of this kind there is so much more involved than the thought of winning. The pageant offers a chance to better oneself. The opportunity for a young woman to realize her attributes and the chance to further develop her personality and poise...not forgetting that this competition certainly promises to be a great deal of fun."

Although Brenda is in no particular hurry to get married, she said, "I do enjoy domestic type duties; I like sewing, and I adore children!" She also noted that she would like to seek a career before getting married.

"I find political science the most interesting and varied field, and I would very much like to continue my education and pursue it further," Brenda said. She would like to attend the University of Georgia.

The 20-year-old candidate noted that she thoroughly enjoys current events, and explained, "I believe that as a military dependent I am necessarily aware of what is going on in the world today. My father is a great believer in dinner-time discussions on world affairs. I agree with him that to understand what is taking place nationally and domestically is of the utmost importance."

"American people must know what is going on, and how it is directly affecting their lives. They can then, agree or disagree through understanding, but it is really tragic when forces disagree through ignorance," she added.

Brenda, who is presently employed locally, stated that she believes she is now ready for college. "I feel that being employed since my graduation from Marietta High School has better prepared me to accept the responsibility that accompanies college life."

This year's Miss Columbus Pageant will be sponsored by the Muscogee Sertoma Club of Columbus, Ga., Inc.

According to John Swearingen, chairman of the entrance committee for the Pageant, "We are very anxious for participants from Benning, and since this is the first year we have opened it to the military, we are encouraging a good representation."

For information about entering the pageant telephone Mr. Swearingen at 562-8291.

Social Security Will Provide Youth Benefits

Robert E. O'Neal, manager of the Columbus Social Security office, said that children of parents who are deceased, retired, or disabled can continue to receive social security benefits until age 22 as long as they are full-time students at an approved school and are unmarried.

In addition, payments can be made during vacations from school as long as the student is not out of school over four months.

"Children currently receiving benefits need to let us know if they will continue to attend school after their eighteenth birthday," O'Neal added.

ATC Will Collect Food To Help Needy Families

The U. S. Army Training Center is the July sponsor for the food locker program which is maintained by the Army Community Services, USAIC, for needy military families.

Collection of any non-perishable food is now underway with all contributions being urgently needed and greatly appreciated, according to Mrs. Betty Wilson, wife of Lt. Col. Gerald Wilson, ATC G-1.

Items making complete meals are preferred. Baby needs include juices, strained foods, mixed cereal and enfamil formula. Boxed items that would be appreciated are cereal, oatmeal, grits, saltine crackers, instant potatoes, dehydrated milk, jello, pudding, kool aid, sugar and flour.

Canned meats that may be given include canned ham, corned beef, spam and luncheon meat. Many types of canned goods can be contributed including peas, corn, green beans, spinach, tunafish, salmon, soup, beans, applesauce, stew, spaghetti dinner, macaroni dinner, shortening, coffee (ground), spaghetti sauce and tomato sauce.

Such dried foods as black eyed peas, pinto beans, macaroni, spaghetti, and noodles are also needed.

Contributions can be deposited at any of the following locations: Sand Hill Chapel No. 5 Annex; Bldg. 5202 in Harmony Church; ATC Hq. Bldg. 3001 in Sand Hill; or 203 Miller Loop, Ft. Benning. One may call 544-7833 to have large contributions picked up.

Mrs. Wilson urges that no one hesitate to donate an item he feels is qualified even though it may not be mentioned above.

Candidate Brigade Holds Graduations, Election

CANDIDATE BRIGADE HOLDS

Colonel John P. Geraci, Director of Company Operations Department USAIS, presented the Tiger Tactics Award to the 83rd NCOC Company 8th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade in ceremonies June 2, 1969.

Col. Geraci remarked that the award was representative of the spirit and knowledge the company had displayed throughout the course of their training.

The Tiger Tactics award is given to the company which is selected by the instructors of the map reading, platoon tactics, company tactics, and the leadership committees.

Also attending the ceremony was Colonel Robert M. Piper, Commanding Officer of The Candidate Brigade.

PRIOR SERVICE SWEEPS STUDENT COUNCIL ELECTIONS

Prior service personnel hold most of the key positions in the Student Council of the 85th Infantry Officer Candidate Company, 6th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade, as a result of recent elections. Of the nine members of the council, six are men with prior service backgrounds and experience.

Robert Callahan, a soldier with eleven years prior service in the Army, has been selected to head the council as president. This ex-Special Forces veteran has attended more than 42 different courses or schools during his tenure in the Army. Candidate Callahan, who has served in Vietnam, the Dominican Republic, as well as stations of non-combat status, entered OCS straight from Germany where he served with Security Border Operations with the rank of staff sergeant.

Thomas Illing has been picked to fill the Vice-Presidential slot in the Student Council. A Vietnam veteran of four years prior service, he has received the Army Commendation Medal and the Air Medal. Before entering OCS he served with the Platoon Tactics Committee here at Fort Benning.

"SMOKEY THE BEAR" GOES TO OCS

Night club manager, bodyguard, ice cream salesman, linguists, All-American athletes, and acrobat have been a few of the backgrounds of candidates entering the Officer Candidate School program; but a new personage has come upon the scene: Smokey the Bear has come to OCS.

This is not the real Smokey the Bear, of course, but the Army's version in the person of the Drill Sergeant. Candidates Raymond Cumba and Ronald Doughtie are two former drill sergeants who aspire to be second lieutenants. They are currently in training with the 85th Infantry Officer Candidate Company, 6th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade.

Candidate Cumba received his initial training at Fort Dix, where he remained for two years as a drill sergeant. Cumba, who taught such classes as guard duty, hand-to-hand combat, and the use of the bayonet, was commended as outstanding drill sergeant for two consecutive cycles.

Candidate Doughtie received his training at Fort Knox. In Drill Sergeant School, he was named the distinguished graduate. Like Cumba, he was named Outstanding Drill Sergeant for two consecutive cycles. On the role of the D.S., Doughtie says, "People knock Drill Sergeants, but nobody will take their job."

NCOC GRADUATION

Command Sergeant Major Robert E. Durovey was the guest speaker at the recent graduation exercises of 140 noncommissioned officer candidates completing training as rifle squad and fire team leaders.

Maxie E. Lett was the distinguished graduate of the class, who were members of 100th Company, 10th Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, U.S. Army Infantry School, while in training.

Durovey is sergeant major of the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, 197th Brigade here.

For his achievement, Lett received a letter of commendation from Brigadier General Sydney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the Infantry School, an engraved "Follow Me" statutette, an engraved "Follow Me" plaque, an engraved Association of the U. S. Army (AUSA) plaque and was promoted to staff sergeant.

The noncommissioned officer candidate program prepares selected enlisted men for leadership positions in small unit assignments and fulfills a need for NCOs in the middle grade levels.

FREEMAN HONORED

Judd D. Freeman was honored as the distinguished graduate of Noncommissioned Officer Candidate Course Class No. 34-69 in ceremonies at Marshall Auditorium here June 3.

Freeman was both leadership and distinguished graduate, graduating with an average of 98.12 per cent. He and 136 other new sergeants were graduated from the 71st Company, 7th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade.

For his achievement, Freeman received a letter of commendation from Brigadier General Sydney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the Infantry School, an engraved "Follow Me" statuette, an engraved "Follow Me" plaque, an engraved Association of the United States Army (AUSA) plaque, an engraved pen and pencil desk set, and was promoted to staff sergeant.

The guest speaker was Command Sergeant Major Gerald F. Ellis, United States Army Infantry Center Troop Command, at Fort Benning.

Martin Army Hospital Promotes 60 Nurses

Sixty Martin Army Hospital Registered Nurses have received promotions. It is believed to be one of the largest, if not the largest group of civilian employees at Fort Benning from one activity ever to be promoted at the same time.

The promotion took place in the hospital's American Red Cross Recreation Hall June 4.

Making a brief address to the nurses, and extending them congratulations as he presented certificates of promotion was Col. Martin A. Pfotenhauer, director of the Fort Benning Medical Department Activity.

Promoted were: Mrs. Margaret T. Houseman, Mrs. Jenovis M. Obleton, Mrs. Helen M. Livingston, Mrs. Mary E. Bender, Mrs. Amy L. Oliver, Miss Barbara A. Long, Miss Rose B. Burt, Mrs. Dorothy N. Screaming Eagle School Helps Trainees 'Adjust'

BIEN HOA, Vietnam (101st IO)—"My men are dedicated," said Lt. Col. Donald E. Grange, commandant of the Screaming Eagle Replacement Training School (SERTS). "They've all seen combat, and they know what they are doing is saving lives."

Grange runs SERTS as part of the 101st Airborne Division Replacement Co. here. "It's a challenging assignment," he said. "The more we can teach these men now, the better they'll adjust to the combat situation and the better they'll function when they have to."

SERTS cadre consists entirely of "old timer" Screaming Eagles who have spent their time on line, men who realize what a man must know and do to survive and bow to teach it to him.

The school's operations officer is Lt. William F. Arenow, formerly with D Co., 2nd Bn., 506th Abn. Inf. "We give them a six-day course in infantry weapons and tactics as they apply to the division's operation," Arenow said. "We teach men the weapons they will be fighting with and against. We teach them the nature of the enemy and the means they must use to destroy him."

Replacements are assigned to SERTS immediately after they have completed in-processing. Classes average 60 newly-assigned Screaming Eagles and are organized as provisional line companies with officers and NCOs filling command slots. SERTS assigns a tactical NCO to each class.

Sgt. James A. Radford formerly with Aero-rifle Plt., C Troop, 2nd Sqd., 17th Cav., is a typical Tac NCO. He works a seven-day-a-week schedule, picking up a new class as the previous one graduates.

"I am their father and mother," Redford noted, "sort of a combat zone drill sergeant."

The Tac NCO is there when the replacements get up and when they go to bed. In the interim, he instructs, calls and moves formations, handles individual problems, motivates his men and inspects the billets.

"You can watch them change," Redford said. "By the end of the cycle they can run farther, walk faster and they know more. They look tougher, more confident — more like Screaming Eagles."

Weapons training is a big change factor. Lt. Wayne J. Jorgenson, provides a dawn to post-dark day of instruction. Weapons taught include the M-16 rifle, the M-60 machine gun, the M-79 grenade launcher, the M-18 Claymore anti-personnel mine and the 90mm recoilless rifle.

"We teach the basics to men who are unfamiliar with the weapons," said Jorgenson, who previously was assigned to A Co., 1st Bn., 501st Abn. Inf. "For the men who have been trained with the weapons, we provide an effective and interesting review."

The reaction course is the high point of SERTS physical training. It's 200 meters of running and crawling through tearing underbrush, conducted under live machine gun fire and the critical eye of a SERTS instructor.

Soldiers Wear 'Drive-on-Rags' Similar To Western Bandannas

BONG SON, RVN (173rd Abn 10) —In the dry and dusty central highlands near Bong Son, Vietnam, the paratroopers of the 173rd Airborne Brigade have resurrected the bandannas of the old West.

The Sky Soldiers wear what they call "drive-on-rags," slung around their necks much like the cowboys of old.

Legend has it that drive-on rags derive their name from the fact that when a paratrooper is so exhausted he can't take another step, when his rucksack is so heavy his chest is touching the ground and when the torrid heat is melting his shirt buttons . . . he then takes his drive-on rags, dabs a drop of sweat on his brow and drives on.

Mostly dark in color for camouflage purposes, drive-on rags often have appropriate sayings sewn on. Those advertising their prowess as soldiers display such names as "ALBERT THE BAD," "THE HAWK" and "GEORGIA FOX."

On the other hand, drive-on rags of great lovers in the brigade will bare their girl's name; "DONNA" (and) "DOC COMOS," "LADELHIA" (and) "RICKY" and "DELLA — PORDA VIDA" (for life) are some of the debs flaunted by romantic paratroopers.

More philosophical drive-on rags urge their fellow troopers to "DO YOUR THING MAN" and "BRING THE MAX" and "GEORGIA FOX."

Even deeper is the slogan which queries, "HOW YA GONNA ACT."

A most affirmatively proud group, paratroopers often nickname their unit after commanders. Thus you can see drive-on rags with such titles as "GIBSON'S RAIDERS" and "ROGIN'S HEROES."

Buzzing Warriors Attack Platoon

LZ BUFF, Vietnam (AMERICAL IO) — A platoon of the Americal Division's 198th Infantry Brigade got bees in their bonnets recently — working in an area they are likely to remember with a sting.

While participating in a cordon operation in the rugged mountains west of here, Alpha Company of the 1st Battalion, 52nd Infantry had a platoon hidden in the triple canopy forest for security when a swarm of hornets assaulted them.

"We had just been resupplied on the side of a mountain," said the assistant RTO (radio telephone operator) PFC David Herring, "and we were fixing to move out when they hit."

"A man somewhere in the back sat right on them," explained Herring, as Spt Douglas Cole added: "They were bees — we call them 'NVA Hornets' out here." Cole was stung seven times.

In seconds the regiment-sized force of buzzing warriors had the platoon dangerously scattered and running for cover.

"Words can't describe it," said Herring who, thinking fast, headed into some heavy brush to set up some security against possible attack by the larger enemy — "Charlie."

"We started popping smoke thinking it would keep some of the hornets away," he said. "Some of us jumped into the smoke and sat real still. We watched one guy running past with a big cloud right behind him — he was getting stung all along."

The soldiers had an added problem in that they had to remain silent during the entire attack. Deep in enemy territory, they could not chance making noise. Their position had been compromised already by the smoke and they had to try to leave the area.

There was evidently no way to rout the enemy. The "Ready Rifles" troops were at the hornets' mercy until someone got the idea to call back the resupply helicopter.

When the chopper dove down to pick the platoon up its powerful downwash proved to be just what it took to blow the NVA Hornets away.

SCOUT LEADS . . . A Scout dog across a stream to set up security in the bush. Spc4 Ronnie McCrary and his handler lead paratroopers of C Co., 1st Bn., 501st Abn. Inf. of the 101st Airborne Division recon operation.

Scout Dog Reappears After Being Lost 3 Days

CAMP EAGUE, Vietnam (101st IO)—A German Shepherd from the 47th Scout Dog Platoon reappeared near Fire Base Bastogne, after being lost in the jungle for three days.

"Sarge" as he is called, had traveled about nine kilometers and was apparently on his way back to LZ Sally when he was found.

"Sarge and I were working with Alpha Company, 1st of the 502nd, near Fire Base Veghel," recalled his handler Spc4 Ronnie McCrary. "We were on a small hill when he alerted to something in the stream at the botton of the slope. I didn't have a leash on him and he took off down the stream."

When McCrary reached the bottom of the hill, Sarge was gone.

"I called and called," he recalled, "but he didn't come back. It was like he'd vanished."

There was nothing the disenheartened McCrary could do.

"I just stayed with A Company and came back into Fire Base Birmingham with them two days later. From there I went back to Sally. We figured Sarge was gone for good," McCrary said.

"I was sent back out the next day. I didn't have a dog, so they had me walk slack for a new handler. I was gone close to a week and boy, was I surprised when I came back," he said.

"Sarge was waiting for me."

"It turned out that the morning I went back to the field, Sarge turned up outside the gate at Bastogne, barking his head off. They let him in and then sent him to the 58th Scout Dog Platoon at Camp Evans," explained McCrary. "They knew we had a dog missing so they called us."

"I played with him when I got back and there was a lot of kidding around," he said. "The guys looked at a map and decided that sarge was on his way back to Sally, but he hit Bastogne first."

The team; both McCrary and Sarge are together again . . . and happy.

Learn To Move, Shoot, and Communicate

Thai Allies Attend Field Radio Mechanic Course

By 2nd Lt. John Meyer

The successful soldier must be able to, "move shoot, and communicate". Allied students come from all over the world to study at the Infantry School. The majority attend the Infantry Officer Advanced Course but, equally important, others come to study in the specialty fields supporting tactical units.

Presently there are two enlisted men from Thailand enrolled in one such specialty course - the Field Radio Mechanic Course (FRMC). Master Sergeant Buapuing Pitoon, the Royal Thai Army, and Chief Ty Officer Seniwong Boonchod, the Royal Thai Navy, are in the sixth week of the nine week course learning to repair the radios found in tactical units up to battalion level. They have extensive backgrounds in electronics but find the course stimulating. CPO Boonchod is a graduate of the Ryal Thai Naval Signal School and the Air Force Telecommunications School.

"The class is not very hard," said MSG Pitoon, "but we are learning new things all the time."

The FRMC teaches students to perform organizational radio maintenance, through the use of the bands on concept of coning the first four weeks the student learns basic electronic theory and works with a "trainer" transmitter. He progresses step by step and in the last four weeks works on the acutal military radios.

"The instructors are very good here," commented MSG Piton, "We use the hands on concept of instruction in our country," added CPO Doonchod, "but there are usually only 20 people in the class."

Each class here is capable of instructing up to 184 men. Even with the large class size the instruction is student oriented and tailored to the individual through the use of the Faculty Advisor (FA) program.

The students are broken down into small FA groups and during the practical exercises work directly with their own instructor. There are as many as 12 instructors in one class to assist the students. Individual guidance is extremely important in electronics training allowing the student to proceed rapidly and safely through the course with less damage to expensive equipment.

Both of the Thai students have 12 years of military service and are in charge of radio repair workshops in Bangkok, Thailand. They like the work and hope to teach what they learn here to the other men in their shop.

"If we have the time we will teach," said MSG Pitoon, "but there is much work and very few people."

After completing the course here, the two men are scheduled to go to Ft. Gordon, Ga., to the Field Radio Repairman's (31E) Course - a 15 week course qualifying them to perform radio repair up to Direct and General support level. Two Thai Officers who completed FRMC 10 in March are currently taking the course at Ft. Gordon.

The officers, First Lieutenants Anake Satravut and Vitaya Ngamkala, were both honor graduates in their class. CPO Boonchol explained that at first he was afraid the language difference would make the classes difficult.

"We had a basic knowledge of electronics repair before we got here, or I don't think we would be doing as well as we are," he said.

They are doing very well. Both men are among the highest in academic standing in the class.

Safety Campaign Marks Nearing Halfway Point

BY BILL HARDIN

The current campaign here to promote the wearing of safety belts is nearing the halfway mark. Already 16 motorists have been awarded a $5 check for properly wearing their safety belts when checked. Another 29 checks are up for grabs.

All that is needed to win one of the checks is to be found properly wearing a safety belt when a military policeman and post safety officials conduct a spot check.

The spot checks are being made over the entire post, and are conducted on a daily basis, at varying times.

The number of vehicles checked before the awards were made for the week ending Friday, (June 6) showed a marked decrease from the previous week's totals.

TO MEMBERS OF THIRD UNITED STATES ARMY

SUBJECT: Army Birthday - Flag Day, 14 June 1969

On 14 June 1969, the United States Army will observe the 194th anniversary of its foundation. On this same day, our nation will commemorate the 192d anniversary of the adoption of the American Flag.

During the almost two centuries of gaining and defending our liberty, soldiers and citizens have known and experienced the challenge and sacrifice of conflict. Therefore, I commend this Day as an occasion for reflection on our proud heritage, and for remembrance of those who serve our flag to protect the "freedom and justice for all" which we cherish.

On this anniversary, I express my appreciation for your dedicated service to the nation and my pride in your accomplishments as members of the United States Army.

Officer Candidate Is Former Golden Knight

BY LYNETTE HERSEIM

Senior Officer Candidate Larry D. Holmberg has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for achievement while serving with the U. S. Army Parachute Team (Golden Knights).

The award was presented May 22, by Brigadier General Oscar E. Davis, then Commanding General of the U. S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning.

He was cited for . . . "extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flight in Zephyrhills, Florida during the period January 1968 to February 1968. Sergeant Holmberg demonstrated professional excellence, a high degree of skill and true competitive spirit.

As an individual he set and retired a world parachuting accuracy record. Despite the inherent hazards of such a feat, and in addition to the chilling temperatures at 1000 meters above the ground, he scored two consecutive dead center jumps and thereby forever retired the record for the United States.

The accomplishment has brought valuable morale, esprit and barriers present during the performance of this duty, Sergeant Holmberg continually adhered to an extensive training program of parachuting techniques and physical fitness. In this connection, he was able to overcome the mental stress and physical strain and thereby earn honor and prestige for the United States of America . . . "

Candidate Holmberg, is now in Officer Candidate Training with 54th Company, 5th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade.

Airborne training at Ft. Benning, in 1962 was Holmberg's first experience at parachute jumping, he was then transferred to Ft. Campbell Ky., for additional airborne training.

As a HALO (High Altitude, Low Opening) instructor for Special Forces Training at Ft. Bragg, Candidate Holmberg was accepted into the Army Parachute Team (the Golden Knights) in 1966.

As a staff sergeant, Holmberg performed over 500 demonstration jumps with the Golden Knights. Their travels included 43 U. S. States and four foreign countries.

In Sept. 1969 Candidate Holmberg participated in the Council International Sports Militaire (CISM), sponsored by the Reus Spanish AFB, Spain.

Competing with 12 other countries the Golden Knights achieved second place overall and first place in team accuracy.

In the individual competitions Holmberg placed 2nd over all.

He was awarded one Gold Medal, three Silver Medals and one Bronze medal. Holmberg was also awarded the Spanish Jump Wings as an honorary award for excellence in sports parachuting.

Candidate Holmberg has also competed in many National parachute meets, including The National meet of Nashville, Tenn. and the Piqua, Ohio Parachute meet. His name now appears on more world records than any other man.

While serving 33 months with the Golden Knights, Holmberg had one major mishap . . . "a broken leg".

After 1,570 jumps, Candidate Holmberg has plans for "the other end of the aircraft for a change." After graduation from Infantry Officer Candidate School as a Second Lieutenant, he will attend Flight School.

Candidate and Mrs. Holmberg are now residing in Columbus, Ga. He is a son of Mrs. Claire O. Brown of Portland, Ore.

'Safe Fuel' Is Goal In New Army Project

US ARMY COMBAT DEVELOPMENTS COMMAND, Ft. Belvoir, Va. — A completely new dimension to survivability of operating crews may be added to all army air, sea and land craft under a materiel requirement for "safe fuels" proposed by the US Army Combat Developments Command (CDC), Ft. Belvoir, Va. The objective is to reduce the threat of fuel fires from such dangers as crash impacts, mines, and small arms including incendiaries.

Several general approaches are being considered to meet this requirement. Laboratory tests have shown the possibility of burning gelled and emulsified fuels in a gas turbine engine. The gelled fuel, with the consistency of gelatin, is made by adding a two per cent solution of the compound alkylamide. In case of shock or impact the fuel is scattered in relatively low volatile globs.

Emulsified fuel is a radically different approach to the same problem. A gelled chemical solution with approximately three per cent water is put into the fuel. In its natural state it resembles a thick mayonnaise. On impact it reverts back to this state and reduces the hazard of fire because of its non-liquid quality.

Other candidates for safe fuels are the visco-elastic additives which would alter or delay the initial fuel spurt pattern if the gas tank is penetrated or ruptured. Also, low violatility fuels may be the answer.

In stating the objectives for the CDC "safe fuel," the proposal requires that it must provide an effective and reliable fuel system and engine operation without power loss during all operating conditions. It should reduce the hazards of post crash fires and lessen vulnerability to enemy fire. Finally, it has to have ease of handling transfer and storage over a range of operations and in climates from -65 degrees to 145 degrees above zero.

TO ALL MEMBERS OF THE UNITED STATES ARMY

The 14th of June marks the completion of the United States Army's 194th year of illustrious achievement. On this noteworthy occasion, it is an honor and a pleasure to greet all the men and women of our service.

Today we face confidently our Nation's enemies on many fronts. As for nearly two centuries, we stand prepared and resolute, reinforced by a history shining with examples of fortitude, valor, and determination to meet any threat whether physical or psychological.

The survival of human freedoms which are the very foundation of our Nation's way of life depends upon the Army's ability and spirit to meet any contingency. In Vietnam, as during other times in history, the Army is responding to orders of civilian authority in the pursuance of national policy.

We must shoulder responsibilities and meet challenges more difficult and more numerous than any we have previously encountered. I am confident that you welcome the opportunity to carry out the tasks which only we can perform with the Army's traditional dedication, courage, and success. As Chief of Staff, I am grateful for your magnificent accomplishments, and proud to share service with you.

Fort Belvoir's CDC Institutes New Program for Economizing

FT BELVOIR, Va. — The Reduction of Logistical, Administrative and Operational Overhead (LOGTAIL) program has recently been inaugurated by the U. S. Army Combat Developments Command (CDC), Fort Belvoir, Va. LOGTAIL was instituted on a command-wide basis by Lt. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, commanding general, CDC.

All CDC developmental requirements will emphasize the need for economy of logistics forces, administrative and operational overhead in current programs and chart a long-range course of action in these fields. The objective of the LOGTAIL program is to provide a viable combat service support system with a minimum investment of men and equipment.

In their job of designing the Army of the future, CDC action officers have the task of creating the organizations and doctrine of a support system that will include only those supplies needed by the engaged combat forces. The system devised will have to be functional, responsive, flexible, mobile, and economical in the use of personnel.

LOGTAIL will impact on Army 75, a CDC study of the Army during the timeframe 1970-75, and will be embodied in the guidance and constraints which will contribute toward the accomplishment of the objectives of this program in Army 85 (1975-1985).

Every study, materiel development and Table of Organization and Equipment prepared by CDC will reflect all possible reductions under LOGTAIL. Economy of forces will be a watchword for all work done by the command. It is anticipated that LOGTAIL will be the yardstick applied by CDC in the formulation of all concepts, doctrine, materiel, organizations and their evaluation by the command's directorates, institutes and agencies.

A CDC directive with a checklist to all CDC activities outlines criteria for using the LOGTAIL yardstick in evaluating every phase of combat developments. In the conceptual phase one question is "Does research include considerations for reduction of LOGTAIL?"

CDC doctrine will have to meet such checklist items as: "What new support procecures and equipment will be required?" "Can it be substantiated that there is a real and valid requirement for additional equipment, improved equipment, and what is the relationship to personnel and maintenance requirements?"

Items on the checklist for materiel development include "Is there a duplication in current or proposed materiel requirements?" "Does the proposed materiel developmental research support reductions of the LOGTAIL?"
