Our Anniversary

A man sits back to contemplate a piece of handiwork newly achieved. "Here, at last, is Perfection!" he cries. Yet the passing of a short time will find him seeking to remedy the very flaws that passed for perfection. And the next attempt will bring him slightly nearer his goal—if his is an open mind.

A year ago, we, too, proclaimed the spirit of constant striving toward perfection as our policy—and we have endeavoured in all our work to fulfill our promise. We may, at times, have felt that we had done very well with our work, we were sure then that we had. But the spirit of constant change which is the keystone that upholds the civilization in which we live has ever pointed the way to a higher ideal, one that seemed a little more attainable than it had before.

Men have spoken many times of their ambitions but comparatively few have reached the pinnacle toward which all reach. Therefore, we do not attempt to clearly define our policy since we realize that we cannot even contemplate our ultimate degree of perfection—still we can say, with all sincerity and with humility, that the "Herald" during the past year has given us enough promise to encourage the belief in our minds that it will ascend to still greater heights and give still greater promise. And we will admit that we are proud of the "Herald", of the work we've done with it and we intend to "carry on" still further.

'Cradle Snatchers' Ends Season For Dramatic Club

One week from today the 1932 dramatic club season comes to an end. As a farewell treat the three-act farce "Cradle Snatchers" will be presented, and the garrison is assured of one of the funniest plays ever presented on the stage. Hard work, constant rehearsals, careful selection of costumes and properties, all combine to make the final play one of the most finished of the local dramatic club's presentation.

"Cradle Snatchers" is a comedy vehicle in three roaring acts, laid in New York and Long Island, among the well-to-do. Three husbands, all tired-business men, go hunting, leaving behind them three lonely wives, who are also just a bit suspicious—of the so-called hunting expedition. Resolved to even things up, believing that "sauce for the goose is applesauce for the gander", the three wives engage the services of three young college shieks, to take them to dances, dinners and night clubs.

Of course such a state of affairs is bound to lead to mixups, and "Cradle Snatchers" is full of mixups. With an excellent cast, ably directed, the dramatic club offers its final presentation with the firm conviction that the audience will be treated to an excellent evening's entertainment.

Major H. B. Lewis, director of the play, announces with satisfaction his line-up for the coming performances. Headed by the three wives, Susan Martin, Kitty Ladd and Ethel Drake, played respectively by Mrs. H. B. Lewis, Mrs. Harry Reeder and Mrs. T. S. Arms, the cast is one of extreme popularity. Col. M. C. Stayer, Major S. A. White and Major Emil Leard appear in the roles of the three husbands, in the order named, Howard Drake, Roy Ladd and George Martin. The three sheiks are Henry Winton, played by Lieut. Robert Nourse, Jose Vallejo, played by Lt. B. M. Greely, and Oscar Nordholm, played by Lt. James Thompson.

Three flappers are played by Mrs. James Thompson, Mrs. C. H. Lanham and Miss Landon Reed. Mrs. James Bowen appears as Anne Hall, and Paul, the ever-present butler is played by Lieut. R. B. Hubard.

Major Lewis is assisted in his directing by Mrs. N. C. Pilet and Lieut. N. C. Caum. Lieut. A. E. O'Flaherty, stage manager for the dramatic club, is assisted by Lieut. Malin Craig, Jr., Lieut. C. N. Howze has charge of properties, and Miss Reed has charge of costumes. The stage settings are being constructed entirely by the main theatre back-stage force headed by Sgt. Jan. Ebbers and Pvt. Wiggins.

The performances will be given at the main theatre Friday and Saturday evenings, May 6 and 7, the curtain rising at 8:45 p. m. Doors open at 8:25. There will be no reserved seats, and admission will be by membership ticket in the Infantry School Dramatic Club. For those who are non-members, admission tickets may be secured at the box office the evenings of the performances. Everybody in the garrison is welcome and it is hoped that a large turnout will be present for the last show of the season.

Three-Day Field Maneuver Begins Early Thursday

A three-day field maneuver which threw into action all available troops of Fort Benning and those of the 4th Corps Area concentration camp began on Thursday moring. A probem prepared and conducted by Headquarters of the 4th Corp Area and under which the participating troops will be divided into two opposing forces is being conducted under the direction of Colonel Clyde R. Abraham.

All troop movements and the missions assigned to the various organizations are secret. Colonel Gilbert N. Allen of the 8th Infantry is in com-

Major General Fuqua Will Leave After Three Dav Visit To Benning

Major General Stephen O. Fuqua, Chief of Infantry, arrived at Columbus at 8:45 P. M., Tuesday, and proceeded at once to Fort Benning, where he made a three-day official visit of inspection. He was met at the Union Station by Brigadier General Campbell King, commandant of The Infantry School, Lieutenant Malin Craig, Jr., aide to General King, Captain John W. Blue, acting aide to General Fuqua, and Sergeant Clarence C. Barr, Sergeant orderly for the Chief of Infantry.

During his visit at Fort Benning General Fuqua will be the house guest of General and Mrs. Campbell King.

At 8:50 Wednesday morning a salute of thirteen guns was fired by a battery of the 83rd Field Artillery in honor of the Chief of Infantry. At nine o'clock a formal review of the combatant troops of Fort Benning was held on Gordon Field. Colonel Daniel G. Berry was in command of the troops during the ceremony and was assisted by a staff composed of Major Thomas D. Catron and Captain George C. Clark. Troops which participated in the review included the 29th Infantry, 24th Infantry, Company S 7th Engineers, 1st Battalion 83rd Field Artillery, Second Battalion 1st Tank Regiment with Company F 2nd Tank Regiment attached, and Flight B. 16th Observation Squadron.

Following the review of troops General Fuqua, in company with General King, began an inspection of the post. Shortly before noon officers of the headquarters staff were presented to General Fuqua.

At one o'clock he was the honor guest at a luncheon given by General Campbell King at his quarters. Other guests included high ranking officers from the maneuver camp and the regular garrison of Fort Benning. These were Major General Edward L. King, Brigadier General Manus McCloskey, Colonel Thomas A. Roberts, Lieut. Colonel Lewis Brown, Lieut. Colonel Clyde R. Abraham, Lieut. Colonel Thomas C. Hargrave, Major Reese M. Howell, Major Walter Moore, Colonel William B. Graham, Colonel Gordon Johnston and Colonel Gilbert M. Allen, all of the Fourth Corps Area concentration camp; and Colonel George F. Baltzall, Colonel Daniel G. Berry, Colonel Harry E. Knight, Colonel Charles F. Morse, Colonel Charles L. Willard, Colonel Walter L. Reed, Lieut. Colonel George C. Marshall, Jr., Lieut. Colonel Harry A. Wells, Lieut. Colonel Joseph A. Atkins and Major Edward C. Rose, all of the Headquarters Staff and other departments of The Infantry School; and Colonel Duncan K. Major, Jr., 29th Infantry, Colonel Lochlin W. Caffey, 24th Infantry, Major Allen F. Kingman, 1st Tank Regiment, Major Clyde A. Sel-

Col. Munson Will Succeed Col. Caffey

War Department orders announcing the assignment of Colonel Fred L. Munson to command of the 24th Infantry were received at Headquarters The Infantry School today. Colonel Munson is now on duty at Clemson Agriculture College, South Carolina, and his orders to join the 24th Infantry will become effective about August 1st. No announcement concerning the future assigment of Colonel Lochlin W. Caffey, present commander of the 24th Infantry, has been received.

Colonel Munson began his military career as a private in Company A 6th Infantry on January 11, 1893 and served also as corporal and sergeant until he was commissioned a second

General McCoy Narrowly Escapes

Failed to Reach Balloon Basket in time for ascension

General Frank McCoy nearly became a victim of what might have been a serious accident when he missed ascending in the big observation balloon (of the 2nd Balloon Company, Fort Bragg, N. C., temporarily stationed at Fort Benning), by about five minutes.

On the ascension which General Mc Coy so narrowly missed, the balloon was tossed about by the strong wind and pulled out to the end of its mooring cable. The cable withstood the strain, however, and the balloon was finally drawn back safely.

One of the two men handling the balloon, Sgt. James C. Richardson, Kansas City, Mo., was thrown out at the moment it began plunging, when it was only at an altitude of about 700 feet, but was saved by his parachute when he had fallen about 350 feet of the distance, thus becoming eligible for membership in the famous Caterpillar Club. The other occupant, Pvt. James O. Sande, of Mirando City, Texas, a balloon rigger, drifted with the balloon until it was brought back to earth.

According to statements of the two occupants of the balloon, they both attempted at first to escape via the parachute route, but a sudden lurch of the basket threw Sergeant Richardson out and at the same time threw Pvt. Sande to the floor of the basket. Pvt. Sande, then noticing that the balloon was losing altitude rapidly decided to remain with it until it should land. Neither of the two men was injured.

The cause of the accident was given as faulty action of the stabilizing mechanism which, instead of holding the balloon smoothly in the wind as it would have normally allowed it to be pitched around until the strain broke the rigging.

Better Army Quarters

New York (N. Y.) Times—April 19, 1913.—Housing at army posts, which was in a deplorable condition a few years ago, has undergone a transformation that makes life worth living in new quarters. The army is slow to complain when hardships have to be endured, but there is no doubt that morale declined in a period after the World War when officers and men and their families had to live in flimsy buildings never intended for permanent occupation, and in older structures long in need of repairs. Of the Third Corps Area in the South "officers and their families, especially the junior officers, lived in wooden buildings that no self-respecting farmhand would accept." The quarters at Fort Benning Georgia, were in cases mere shacks, not much superior to the houses that slaves formerly lived in. Fort Benning was notorious, but even in the vicinity of New York City, at Fort Hamilton, Fort Jay and Fort Totten, the men were trying to keep warm and dry in the Winter in tar paper shacks that had no comforts. Officers, except commanders, had a good

AN ANNOUNCEMENT

Realizing that a community of eight thousand people should have a publication devoted exclusively to the interests of the community we present this as the first issue of "The Benning Herald."

This paper will be published weekly, appearing each Friday, and will contain articles and items of interest to residents of Fort Benning and Columbus.

This paper is not a continuation of the Infantry School News, (which was discontinued a few weeks ago) but is intended to replace as nearly as possible a loss suffered through the discontinuance of the News.

Our policy shall be to bring into closer relationship, if possible, the two communities, Fort Benning and Columbus, Georgia, and our columns will be open at all times to the use of the public in both places for the furtherance of the aims and ambitions of the two communities.

We do not propose to publish any articles which might be distasteful to the personnel at Benning, and we do not in any sense think that this paper can take the place of the daily newspaper of Columbus, Georgia in the dissemination of current news.

To advertisers of Columbus we are offering our columns with the statement that we are prepared to give to the advertiser circulation among a selected clientele whose purchasing power has not been decreased or diminished during this period of depression ,and we do not hesitate to say that the merchants of Columbus have profited largely in the past through the patronage of Fort Benning residents, and should profit to a greater extent in the future throguh such patronage.

From time to time we shall carry editorials on subjects of interest to the two communities, and we hope eventually to number the entire population at Fort Benning among our readers.

We invite constructive criticism of our efforts knowing well that the one certainty that we can look forward to is our own imperfection.

Review at Gordon Field

Special ceremony follows review

Tomorrow morning at eleven o'clock, on Gordon Field, General Frank R. McCoy, accompanied by General King, McNair and Estes will review all troops now stationed at Benning.

The review will be held as the conclusion of the recent maneuvers in which the concentrated forces of the fourth corps are took part. There will be some seven thousand men in this review which includes Infantry, Cavalry, Horse-drawn Artillery, Air Corps, Tanks and Motordrawn Artillery of the regular army stationed at Fort Benning, Fort Bragg, N. C., Fort Moultrie, S. C., Fort Screven, Ga., Fort McClellan, Ala., Fort Oglethorpe Ga., Maxwell Field, Ala., and Fort McPherson.

Many prominent men have been invited by Geeral McCoy to witness the review. Among those are Governor Hardman of Georgia, Governor Roosevelt of New York, Governor Miller of Alabama, Mayor James L. Key of Atlanta, Dr. M. L. Brittain, Ga. Tech, President Bradford Knapp, Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, Ala., Congressman Robert Ramspeck, Atlanta, members of American Legion and the Spanish War the Reserve Officers Association, the Veterans.

Immediately following the review there will be a special ceremony in front of the Service Club in which First Class Private Lawrence A. Tillis of the 24th Infantry will be presented the "Soldiers Medal." by General Campbell King.

In this ceremony only the 24th and 29th Infantry will participate. Colonel Lochlin Caffey will be in charge of the troops.

It will be remembered that on March 30, 1929 while the 24th Infantry baseball team was returning from Tuskegee, Alabama, the two busses carrying the team ran into an open bridge and plunged into seven feet of water in the swollen Uchee Creek nine miles from Columbus on the Columbus-Seale, Ala. highway.

Private Tillis, one of the members of the team, displayed marked heroism by rescueing four men who were unable to swim, bringing them to shore singly.

This is the first Soldiers Medal ever to be awarded in the 4th Corps Area.

Rotary Club Hears General McCoy

Addresses Local Club at Weekly Meeting

In an address at the Rotary Club meeting, Wednesday, Major General Frank McCoy, Commander of the Fourth Corps area, expressed the very optimistic view that Fort Benning will eventually become the most important United States military center.

The General stated that, even though some of the marches to this year's maneuvers were very extended, he believed they were of great benefit to all who participated because they gave unusual opportunity for cooperation between the many branches of the service in attendance. Also, he stated that the success of the maneuvers was largely due to the range and facilities of the Post.

General McCoy, in commenting on the excellent aid given him by General Campbell King, Commandant of Fort Benning, Col. George C. Marshall, Assistant Commandant, and the personnel of the Fort, promised that, while he was in command, these maneuvers would be held annually at Fort Benning. He said he hoped that, in view of this year's success, General King and Col. Marshall would be equally as well prepared. He was especially pleased with the favorable conditions which prevailed.

The General made special note of the spirit which exists between the people of the Fort and those of Columbus and complimented this spirit very highly.

General McCoy, the Guest of Honor at the luncheon, was presented by General Campbell King, who briefly outlined the career of this famous military and diplomatic officer.

Other guests, presented by Col. George C. Marshall, were General King, General Estes, Col. Knight, Col. Bigbee, Col. Smith, Col. Duncan Major, Col. Nuttman and Col. Coleman. Also, among those who were present were Walter Byrd and Rev. Bascom A. Pafford.

The Second Annual Automotive Show

Held May 20th and 21st

The Annual Automotive Show will be held on the Post on Maly 20th and 21st. This show is sponsored and directed under the supervision of Major Kingman commanding officer of the 2nd Battalion., 1st Tank Regiment, and is the second of its kind ever to be held on this Post. It has as its purpose the bringing before the Army and the public ing general the value and progress of Automotive development in the Service. The advent of a Mechanized Force in our Army should make this show more interesting and valuable this year than last. The slow but inevitable passing of the horse and mule as the major means of transportation in the Army and in civilian life, as well as awakening a greater enthusiasm in Motor Shows evrey year and this year, we expect to equal or surpass the recent successful Horseshow held at this Post.

Commandant Appointed Major General

Promotion Becomes Effective On Saturday May First

Brigadier General Campbell King, Commandant, The Infantry School, will be promoted to the rank of Major General on Saturday May 1st. General King's promotion will be to the vacancy created by the retirement of Major General William R. Smith.

General King came to Fort Benning as commandant in May, 1929, succeeding Brigadier General E. T. Collins. The development of the post, not only materially, but along the lines of accomplishment of its mission as the home of the Infantry School has been marked during the period of General King's command, and his success has been commented upon most favorably by inspecting officials, including Secretary of War Hurley, who spoke of his administration in glowing terms during his brief visit last year to Fort Benning.

General King is a native of North Carolina, having been born in Flat Rock. He enlisted with the Fifth Cavalry in 1897 and was commissioned a second lieutenant of Infantry in 1898. His service during the World War was important and distinguished, initially with the First Division and later as chief of staff of the Seventh Corps. He attained to the temporary grade of Brigadier General during the war from the grade of captain, which he held when war was declared. He was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal.

General King was honored by being placed upon the initial general staff corps eligible list issued by the War Department, and served upon the general staff from 1919 to 1923. In that year he was assigned to the important duty of commanding the Fifteenth Infantry, in China, and while serving there was promoted to his present grade of brigadier general. He was detailed as assistant chief of staff in May, 1925, and continued on that duty until his assignment as commandant of the Infantry School.

Among the foreign decorations awarded to General King as a result of his service during the World War are the following: Officer of the Legion of Honor (France); Croix de Guerre, with palm and silver star (France); Commander of the Order of the Crown (Italy).

Boy Scout Notes

Our rifle practice went over in a big way. 23 boys were present at the third section on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. These boys, under the management of Major Easley and Sergeant Heckert, caught on to the tricks of firing quickly and by next week every boy who came out will be able to fire. This is a big turnout. To get the merit badge one must at least be a first class scout. Right now there are only 5 boys who can qualify for it but there may be more if some of the second class scouts pass the first class test at the next Court of Honor.

We had our regular meeting Friday, April 22. One official and 29 boys were present also 2 visitors. We commenced the meeting by falling in just below the cabin. After giving the oath we played capture the flag and baseball. Then we went into the cabin. Here the patrol leaders told their patrols where their patrol meetings are to meet next week. Then we had a few announcements, gave the scout laws, and left to meet again next Friday.

There will be a display of scrapbooks, and ribbons awarded. Each club will be responsible for a glimpse and also for a shadow box, as well as for the display of their scrapbook.

In the afternoon of May 11th there will be a Garden Tour to some of the beautiful gardens of Columbus and vicinity. Mrs. Calvin Des Portes is chairman.

Mrs. Frank Bickerstaff is chairman of the Shadow Boxes.

Many of the committees have held meetings and mapped out plans for the Flower Show. The program and Classification card will be ready for distribution at the end of the week; a number of the judges have accepted; the publicity committee is advertising the Flower Show through the local and state newspapers, the radio, through invitations to all state garden clubs; to neighboring cities; on automobile bumper cards; in circulars, which the merchants are kind enough to enclose in their bills; Through the Chamber of Commerce.

There will be twelve judges this year, to be divided into groups, who will judge the Shadow Boxes, Glimpses, and individual exhibits. Every Garden Club member is pledged to make an exhibit. These judges will include artists, landscape architects, and, practical gardeners well qualified to make decisions. All will come from various cities, giving a diversified viewpoint.

With the addition of many new clubs, the Flower Show of 1932 will eclipse those of former years in the number of exhibits and in an increase of attendance, for thousands are expected.

Major General Fuqua Visits Post

leck, 83rd Field Artillery, and Captain John W. Blue, acting aide.

The afternoon was devoted to a detailed inspection of the Academic Area, which included an examination of the administrative offices and class rooms and other departments of the school. Schedules for the classes of The Infantry School for the 1932-33 courses were also scrutnized by General Fuqua.

On Wednesday evening General Fuqua was the guest of Lieutenant Colonel George C. Marshall, Jr., assistant commandant, at dinner.

A reception in honor of the Chief of Infantry was held at nine o'clock Wednesday evening. This affair took place on the lawn near the commondant's quarters. Officers of the Fort Benning garrison and of the Fourth Corps Area concentration camp, with their ladies, were guests at the reception. In the receiving line were General Fuqua, General Edward L. King, General and Mrs. Campbell King, and Lieutenant Colonel and Mrs. George C. Marshall, Jr.

On Thursday General Fuqua observed the class room work of the national guard and reserve company officers' classes and was occupied with visits to other class rooms until 10:30, when he met the members of the Infantry Board for a conference.

He was the guest of Major Allen F. Kingman at luncheon at 1 o'clock, after which the conference with the Infantry Board and Department of Experiment was resumed. These occupied the entire afternoon. In the evening he was the honor guesst at a dinner given by citizens of Columbus.

On Friday General Fuqua was engaged in official inspections and conference at Fort Benning until his departure for Washington at 3:30 Friday afternoon.

National Guard Notes

TOG. Today, tomorrow, and forever. Omigosh what a life!

The annual is progressing nicely. Everything indicates that the book will be off the press in time to take them home with you. The cooperation of each member of the class is solicited in preparing information to be printed near the individual pictures as well as special articles.

A small fire did damage to the bath house last Tuesday. The class was not inconvenienced very much.

Capt. Trechtor reports that Capt. Harry L. Wickham made the highest score with the automatic rifle. His score for the B record course was 442. Capt. Eduardo Mendex-Bas was second with a score of 435,and Capt. Harold Phelps, Capt. Roscoe W. Barbour and Lieut. Harold A. Erickson tied with a score of 430. Most of the officers took advantage of the opportunity to fire and good scores was the rule.

Lieut. Walter J. Flanagan was given a birthday party last Saturday. Among those present were Captain and Mrs. Edwin W. Swedberg, Lieutenant and Mrs. James B. Pettitt, Miss Lee Murray and Lieut. Edwin W. Boothby.

Lieutenant and Mrs. Blair E. Henderson gave a bridge party last Saturday evening. Several officers and their wives from the class attended. Among others present were Captain and Mrs. Charles O. Potter, Lieutenant and Mrs. Dewey J. Willis, Lieut. and Mrs. Harry Lyons, and Mr. and Mrs. Austin of Columbus.

Miss Lee Murray of Brookline, Mass., has been visiting her brother-in-law and sister, Lieutenant and Mrs. Walter J. Flanagan.

Several officers of the class took advantage of last Sunday's sunshine by making a trip to Warm Springs and taking a swim. Among the number were Capt. Leo W. Davis, Capt. Chester J. Kowalski, Capt. Edward H. Wyatt, Lieut. Wilson L. Crow and Lieut. James T. Fleming.

THE NEW BOOKS

HISTORY OF THE RUSSIAN REVOLUTION

By Leon Trotsky

Considering the challenge which Soviet Russia offers in the present crisis of world history; considering the major role which Trotsky played in the creation of the Soviet regime, the importance of this book is self-evident. Moreover, Trotsky is not merely one of the great figures of the century. He is also a brilliant writer and propagandist, a master of ironic invective, a persuasive theorist, a passionately biased historian who frankly, and quite naturally, writes from the Marxist viewpoint and who manages to make thrilling drama out of his analysis of the social forces which shaped the revolution. As a good Marxist it is these forces, rather than individual personalities, which he stresses. This does not prevent him, however, from drawing some very stinging portraits of the Czar and Czarina, of the Kerensky and Miliukovs, who attempted to reap the fruits of the February revolution and who muffed the job, of his brother Bolsheviks, Stalin and Kamenev, who were so incautions as to waver, however briefly, from Lenin's rigid principles. Such hostile pen sketches help to give his book the color and vivacity which it so undeniably possesses. Essentially, nevertheless, it is a conscientious study of the crucial months between the first democratic revolution of February 1917 and the troubled July days which led directly to the second, genuinely Bolshevist revolution in October. Trotsky has no mercy for the Mensheviks and Social Revolutionaries who aligned themselves with the burgeoisie and attempted to conduct the revolution along democratic rather than Bolshevist lines. He exposes their weakness, their treachery, the bankruptcy of their liberalism, and shows how the logic of events pointed inevitably to the triumph of Lenin. With this triumph his second volume will deal. It is unnecessary to point out that a capitalist America will hardly agree with Trotsky's interpretations and conclusions. This should not prevent anyone, however, from admiring his cosummate skill as a narrator of historic events.

OFFICERS'
CLUB NEWS

On May 1st, 1932, the management of the Club barber shop will be transferred to R. C. Mock who is resigning his position at Nora's Artistic Bob Shop, Columbus, Georgia, to accept this position with the Club. Mr. Mock has fifteen years' experience as a barber and has worked in the best shops in the South. He served four years in the Regular Army and has an excellent discharge. He is favorably known to many officers and ladies of Fort Benning. Before awarding the barber concession to Mr. Mock, several applicants were interviewed.

The Secretary of The Officers' Club is prepared to assist the membership in securing accommodation at suitable mountain and beach resorts for vacations. Folders and rates and other information are available.

Thursday evening supper dance will be held at The Officers' Club during May on the 5th, 12th 19th and 26th. Weather permitting, the last two may be held at the Polo-Hunt Club.

FINAL DINNER DANCE OF YEAR TO BE HELD MAY 13 AT BIGLERVILLE

Inquiries have been pouring into the office of the Officers' Club during the past week concerning the reservations for the Cabaret Dinner Dance scheduled for Friday, May 13th, at Biglerville.

In order to acquaint all members with the details, anotice has been prepared and forwarded to the entire membership.

This notice reads:

Columbus Dramatic Club Stages Play

Even better progress than was expected is being made with the rehearsing of the play "A Full House" which is to be given on Friday March 6 by the Junior Catholic Dramatic Club at the K. of C. Hall on Twelfth Street.

Several of the roles are unusually difficult because of the large amount of business required of the player. Much of the point of "A Full House" depends on the business which takes place and for this reason especial care is being taken to insure accurate stagework on the part of the members of the club.

There are fourteen characters in the play, and the work required of the individuals is pretty well divided up between seven of them. The characters and the person who takes the part are given as follows.

Susie, a maid ----------Ella Lee
Parks, a butler -------- J. H. O'Neil
Ottily Howell, a bride--Mabel Thompson.
George Howell, her husband--Charles Campbell.
Miss Winnacker, a maiden aunt—Louise Starratt.
Daphne Charters, Ottily's sister—Mildred Thompson.
Ned Pembroke, an only son----A. F. Kunze. Jr.
Nicholas King, a stranger------Willis Radcliff.
Vera Vernon, a chorus girl----Helen Yarbrough.
Mrs. Fleming, owner of the apt.--Margery Zettler.
Mrs. Pembroke, Ned's mother--Agnes Cunha.
Police Sergeant ----------Paul Hurst
Mooney ----------Philip Batastini
Kearney ----------Jack Brescia

The action all during the three acts is sustained by a complex series of events which involve nearly all the main characters in serious difficulties. At the same time the difficulties all center around two sources, a packet of letters and a stolen $30,000.00 ruby necklace. The very number of difficulties which can arise from two so apparently unrelated sources will cause the audience to cling to the edges of their seats in interest in the play.

"A Full House" is an unusual type of play in itself, since it combines the mystery element with that of comedy. The audience is aware, at every minute of the time, of each development of the plot as it takes place but the characters are not, a situation which makes their plight even more laughable. The combining of the comedy with mystery enhances the value of both to the ultimate completion of the plot in the third act and each acts as a foil to the other.

The members of the club have shown marked improvement in the last week in their understanding of the play and their consequent ability to portray their parts. It is for this reason that the writer firmly believes in the ability of the amateurs to make their initial dramtaic effort excel the ordinary work of untrained groups of players.

Tickets are on sale at the present moment and the number has been limited to two hundred. Reservations may be made by calling 4396-W, 2218 or 2008-W. The price of admission is 50c per person.

GUNBOTHAM'S SCHOOL DAZE

By J. L. G.

What with this tennis weather, terrain extrasizes, maneuvers, horse-shows, weekends, and spring fever, it's mighty hard to dig up printable material. You can't always write the things that people say or do. We have striven, with our meagre journalistic abilities, to set forth only those things about those people that would, we hoped, be humorous reading to the faithful few who read our weakly offering. We have tried to avoid writing about people who would not take it in the proper vein. We made mistakes, and those people who didn't like our "publicity" have it in for us. On the other hand, lots of people like to break into print. Never have we been intentionally vituperative, sarcastic or revengeful. What is the motto of England? As Munson calls it, "Honey swatted Mally's pants."

Limited by the above restrictions, it is really difficult to fill the paragraphs. There is the story of the hostess who gave a very large, high-ranking dinner party and invited her many guests to go to the Dramatic Club presentation afterwards. A week later she realized that it was a "Pay Show." Her husband gives her an allowance out of which comes all entertaining, so he got a big laugh out of it.

A young officer and his wife went to a big hotel in New York for just a day. He hadn't been married very long, and he hadn't been in many big hotels. As they had just run in from Long Island for the day, for some reason or other, they didn't take any baggage with them. He had heard about the ways of the big city, so as they registered, he looked at his wife, blushed, and told the room clerk, "We haven't any baggage, do you want us to pay in advance?"

This, incidentally, was mailed to us by Count Pablo Zuvaloff Zuver, ex-star columnist of the Benning Herald, and Infantry School News.

Lately Madame Hostess asked information for the telephone number of a friend, and called this number. When the voice answered, she thought that it was her compatriot, and she invited her to a luncheon party. At the same time, she said that she would call for her. Came the time of gathering, and Madame Hostess called. Madame Supposed Guest was surprised. She hadn't been invited. But Madame Hostess told her she had called her number, and had invited her by telephone. Then the light appeared, and looking up the number that had been called, Madame Hostess found that her guest was almost a stranger, but she hopped into the family chariot and arrived per schedule of calls.

Then again, too young chaps with a yen for home brew visited a friend in town. The host boasted that he had some of the best that they had ever tasted, and the lips smacked in anticipation. They all went out into the kitchen, where the host had a big pitcher already filled. He poured three large glasses, and then went out of the kitchen for something or other. Our friends sampled the liquid, and it tasted like no godly concoction—they had to pour it down the sink. The host returned, and smiled proudly as he saw the empty glasses. "I knew that you'd like that beer, you must have another." So the two visitors forced the terrible stuff down, politely refused another, and claimed an immediate engagement. As they edged towards the door, the host said, "I'm certainly glad that you liked my pride. It's coming along fine, and I'm going to bottle it tomorrow!"

Yes, that is the type of column one cannot write.

One device to fill a column is very old, but it worked on the Vermette's the other day. Gunbotham asked Captain Joe Vermette if he had anything of interest for the column. Der Captain said that Mrs. Vermette, and Mrs. Mary Hartman, bridge champions, were taking a heavy razzing because they took on their husbands the other night to help the males with their bridge, and lost heavily. Gunbotham promptly informed Madame Annie Vermette that her husband had broken her into print. Madame, giving the pistol star the "family eye," told Gunbotham that she had gone to the library the other day to draw a book, and the sergeant said, "your father. Capt. Vermette, drew that book for you this morning." Der Captain said that the joke was on her because she looked like a kid. "Oh, no," replied his better half-pint, "The joke's on you, I may be a kid, but in any case that makes you the goat."

Speaking of goats, Gunbotham was a public victim of the populace during the horse show. In Capt. Jerry Wood's big horselottery, Gunbotham drew a beautiful, big, gentle animule named "Easy." Easy is a good hoss, with a good heart, and for the week before the horse show he was jumping nicely. Of course, he did kick one man in a prominent spot, and he tried to bite the orderly every time he bridled him. He bucked once in a while, but just in fun. Came the day of the big show, anl everything

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

If bitten by a poisonous snake everything depends on the following:

1. Nearly all bites are on the arm or leg. Tie a cord (a belt or necktie may be used) above the bite. This should be tied tightly at first but must be partly loosened for a few seconds every fifteen minutes to preserve circulation.

2. Do not cut the wound, burn it, or apply any chemical or medicine to it.

3. Do not use any alcoholic drink! This is most important. Alcohol makes the heart beat faster and thus pumps the poison quickly over the body.

4. Take the person bitten to the Station Hospital as quickly as possible so that snakebite serum may be given.

5. Give the patient strong black coffee, if he is dizzy.

6. There is no part of the Fort Benning reservation so distant that a person bitten cannot reach the Station Hospital in time. But the earlier the serum is used the better the effect.

7. If the snake is captured or killed bring it to the hospital. The treatment differs somewhat in bites of different kinds of snakes.

MAJOR HARRY L. REEDER

Meet the Chief of Staff of Fort Benning's Consolidated Mechanized Forces. As chief aide to General Carburetor, Major Reeder has presented some fantastic and experimental illustrative problems. The possibilities of this newest form of warfare is limited only by the imaginative powers of these tank fellows themselves. To the advanced class there is no other member of the academic department, with the possible exception of Major Heileman of the versatile Second Section, who can more effectively or with less effort, fill a 50-minute period from the platform, than the director of tank tactics. To the class Major Reeder is the champion crooner of the instructors. He has the distinction of turning out more "U's" in the shortest period of marking time and with a lot of courage.

Captain Talley Joiner entered the Station Hospital last Monday with an injured shoulder. A front tire blowout which sent Joiner and car into a ditch is responsible. Fortunately the injury is not serious.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

This issue is the anniversary number of the Benning Herald. A little over a year ago Congress, in its infinite wisdom, frowned upon military publications and the little light which burned under the name of the Infantry School News flickered and died. The suspension of the News left this large garrison without a medium of disseminating news other than the sensational official Daily Bulletin and its imitators in the several organizations. Useful as these publications are in acquainting the garrison with the will of higher authority, movie programs, and authentic information as to what roads and areas are closed to traffic, they fell far short of the yellow journalists standard to which the post had become accustomed during the short year that the News was operated by the Fourth Section.

After much futile effort spent in attempting to figure out how a newspaper that wasn't permitted to accept advertising from firms doing business with the government might be financed, it was finally decided that it couldn't be done. Whereupon the Fourth Section heard a sigh of relief, Post Headquarters commandeered the funds, and the world moved on.

It was then that the Columbus Office Supply Company stepped to the fore and started the Benning Herald as an independent civilian eterprise. Patterned after the Infantry School News at its best, the new paper filled the gap left by the extinction of its predecessor.

During the year of its existance The Benning Herald has increased in size and improved in quality. By carefully pursuing its columns one may keep informed of the official, social, and athletic life of the garrison. In every way it has served the interest of this large post as well as, or better, than our own publication ever did. In view of the difficulties faced at the outset this is no mean achievement and the conductor of The Flare who was once the Supervising Editor of the News, extends his hearty congratulations.

NOT A FATAL ERROR

Just as the review was about to start the Provost Marshall, with his customary flourish, escorted a lady from her car to the position in rear of the reviewing stand reserved for the wife of the Commandant. Having performed this agreeable duty, the Provost Marshall gracefully withdrew, leaving the lady in sole possession.

A moment later the Sheriff's efficient assistant, Lieutenant Pilet who had not observed his chief doing the honor, spied a smartly dressed lady nonchalantly occupying the place reserved for the wife of the Commanding General. Reluctant though he was to oust an attractive woman from her position of vantage, the Lieutenant is not one to shirk an unpleasant task. Stepping forward in his most gallant manner, he addressed the intruder: "I'm sorry," said he, politely but firmly, "But would you mind moving a few feet to the left? This space is reserved for Mrs. King."

"When are you expecting Mrs. King?" asked the lady, greatly amused for no reason that was apparent to an assistant Provost Marshall in the performance of his duty.

"I am expecting her any moment now," replied the Lieutenant in his best velvet-scabbard-held-a-sword-of steel voice.

At this moment the Provost Marshall rushed up just in the nick of time, as usual.

"Mrs. King," said the Sheriff, "Allow me to present my assistant, Lieutenant Pilet."

Eye witnesses state that the Lieutenant was visibly embarrassed. The Flare, however, contends that it was perfectly natural for a new arrival on this large post to mistake Mrs. King for the wife of some junior captain with an exceptionally good eye for pulchritude.

HEREDITARY HORSEMANSHIP

One of the unique featurse of the great annual Horse Show was the presence of three Arnold teams in the Parent and Child event.

In view of the fact that there are three Arnold children of horse show age and only two parents, the rule had to be modified slightly to permit all three of the young centaurs to participate. In this connection, the Flare voices its hearty approval of the intelligent interpertation which permitted the youngest mounted Arnold to ride with her grandfather. And thereby hangs a tale.

Of course, Peggy had to ride with her mother and Arch Junior claimed as his birthright the privilege of riding with his father. That left Joan, aged 7, without a qualified teammate with whom to make her debut as a competitor for one of those bright colored ribbons which all true horsemen and horsewomen prize above rubies. A less determined young lady might have bowed to what appeared to be the inevitable but not so Joan. She bethought herself of her grandfather in Washington, who was a famous horseman and poloist in his day, and sent him an S. O. S. to hurry down and ride with her in the show.

The appeal was irresistible and General Treat, true sportsman that he is, responded. Then it happened that when the curtain was rung up on the Parent and Child veent, seventy rode with seven—and placed.

The Flare salutes the oldest and youngest contestants and joins the Roman populace in acclaiming their triumph.

May Joan grow up to,

"Witch the world with noble horsemanship"

who is pinch hitting for one of the brethren who has taken the veil.

Now it so happens that, not long before this auspicious assembly, Brother Leard and four other Thanatopsis lads had foregathered with three Junior Leaguers in an ill starred wildcat session, at the conclusion of which the members of the parent organization all drew checks in favor of the three Juniors. This success was evidently a trifle heady for Leaguer Golightly, for on the afternoon of the meeting under his roof the prospective host was heard to announce in a loud and boastful tone, to a large circle of admiring golfers, that he was taking on the Thanatopsis Club single handed that night. Avaricious Junior Leaguers were informed that it was no use to apply for vacant seats because he, Single Handed Snarve, the Wolf of Austin Loop, wanted all of the easy money for himself. He assured his awe struck listeners that he would be "ruthless yes ruthless."

That night, however, Brother Leard had one of his famous evenings and certain other of the Thanatopsis brethren were in good form. At the final reckoning it was discovered that Captain Golightly had given the party in the figurative as well as in the literal sense of the word.

Moral: Anything received from Brother Leard at the end of the game should be regarded as a short time loan bearing a usurious interest.

BLOCK SYSTEM FAILS

The Technical Third Section was holding a combat firing exercise for the National Guard and Reserve Class which had been transported to the scene in trucks. The problem had several phases and Captain Reynolds, well knowing the tendency of student officers to make for home on the slightest provocation, was confronted with the problem of preventing their escape between phases. His solution was to have the enlisted driver of his car place same athwart Yankee Road between the scene of the first phase and the Biglerville Mess.

Strategic Reynolds' scheme might have worked but for a slight complication introduced by Military Observer Colonel James Churchill who had come out ot see the show. Having witnessed the first phase, he was on his way back to the post when he found his way blocked by Captain Reynolds' car. Annoyed, and not knowing that the driver was acting as barrier, the Colonel proceeded to dress him down and order him out of the way. The embarrassed driver started to explain but the irate colonel was in no mood to hear alibis.

Meanwhile three truck loads of National Guard and Reserve officers rolled past the barricade and escaped. It took twenty minutes to round them up and bring them back for the next phase of the problem. Unquestionably what the Infantry School needs is some sort of automatic control over motorized classes.

CLUB COMMUNIQUE

A recent issue of the scintillating Official Daily Bulletin contained the following notice:

"5. FOUND.

Pair fur riding gloves and knitted infant's coat and flash light. Owners may have same by calling at office of The Officers' Club."

Mine Host Dowdall's lost and found collection contains many wierd articles but a "knitted infant's coat and flash light" is quite the ultimate in the way of unique combinations.

CAVE CANEM

In the performance of our sometimes embarrassing duty of retailing all of the post gossip, we fell constrained to tell this one on a popular lieutenant.

Upon the return of the 29th from its Panama City hitch hike, one of the field soldiers was disappointed to find the one man dog he had left to protect his wife and children strangely hostile.

"What's the matter with that dog?" he asked his attractive wife. "He acts as if I didn't belong. Someone must have been hanging around a lot while I was gone."

Ralf! Ralf! Ralf! yipped the dog.

CITATIONS FOR THE WEEK

This week's award goes to Major Jack Thompson, Squire Jerry Wood and the entire horse group for their efficient management of the late highly successful and most colorful Horse Show.

Advertising . . . . . The Life of Journalism

Advertisers Who Aided In Building Herald Listed

At this time it seems to the Herald Staff particularly appropriate that they should take an opportunity to extend their appreciation to the merchants and advertisers who have assisted so much in the foundation and continued building-up of the paper. To many it is incomprehensible that any newspaper should carry any advertising at all, but the publishers and advertisers fully realize the enormous value of bringing their commodity before the buying public and consequently the custom of advertising has originated.

Advertising is not just a mere waste of space, no matter where it is used. Many people will be astonished to find out just how much influence an ad will have in bringing the message of the merchant before them. It will be surprising, too, to know how many of us really read the ads we see, and, even though some of it may be unconscious, we accept its message and, in a great majority of cases, will act on it.

It is for the reason that we understand the confidence the merchants felt in us and because we want to assist them as much as possible in placing their names before the personnel of Benning the following list is published.

COMPANY "A"

Look out F. A. Jackson, the Hawk is planning to strike again, and unless you resort to the same tranquility he doubts your survival. In apprehending him his secretary admonishes you in the employment of Botany; but do approve of you resorting to Oology.

Diabolically yours,
The Hawk

COMPANY "C"

It has so happened that the pistol has made its advent into the picture for certain members of our company. At this itme it should be the opportunity for Sregeant Kelley to exhibit the skill he has often mentioned, at shooting the pistol. So far, his only alibi is—that it requires much practice for him to concentrate on the trigger squeeze when the pistol is loaded—therefore, he made 3's instead of 10's this morning.

Several of our members have just returned from New Orleans, after having participated in the Volley Ball Tournament held in the "Pelican City." They report having had a gala time in the great metropolis, the one city able to contribute to the soldier's desires—whatever they are—and they are hoping that they will have the pleasure of another visit next year.

The company has gone in for chess. So far, we have not started playing, because of the fact we have no one in the company who is familiar with the game. However, it is suggested that several men be selected as students of the Company Commander, who is reputed to be good, and after some teaching, these men will be qualified to instruct the other men. Look out for a "Brain-storm."

"Bonusitis," is that feeling of suspense as to the outcome of the bonus action." Says "Pick Tom," "I got it bad."

COMPANY "F"

All of those who saw the pride of "F" Co. Batton step those hard fast 10 rounds of fighting last week saw their money's worth although Cotton lost but Glover knew he had a fight. Pvt. Dotson has planned a come back he has began training. We have some few other men of the Company who have an idea that they can fight. I don't think it is their idea of wanting to be a fighter. I think it is just plain depression, old man depression has got into the post now and believe it or not he is supreme ruler at large.

Well, all I can hear about the Bonus passage is Congress will cat next week and I am afraid next week will never come. A certain fellow of the Company has figured up to the last penny how his money shall be spent.

Every body seems to be worrying about why Lord Perry hangs around so much here of late. The new rumor now about the Johnson Twins, Buck and Meathouse, they were seen a few nights ago on an unusual Party, some how or another Buck left the house at a very early hour to the mercy of Lady Kidnapers.

Pvt. Dale has just returned from a 30 days furlough he refuses to tell where or how he spent his 30 days; rumors were uot that he was holding a secret search for the lost baby. No it was not Lindy's baby, it was Lee Moore's.

BAND

The orchestra is preparing for a big nite at Biglerville Friday when the 24th and 29th Infantry orchestras will both be at their best playing for the Company Officers Class. This dance is supposed to be quite the thing and is scheduled from 10:00 P. M. to 2:00 A. M. and both orchestras will have plenty to do as the plan is to alternate after each number.

Several compliments have been received by the band upon the marches played at the review this morning. Any number of men have said that the tempo was snappy and up to the minute. Thanks fellows, this helps a great deal and will cause the next parade to be even better than the one today.

We are about to acquire a recreation room. Heretofore Company G has been very gracious in permitting the members of the Band to use their recreation room. Now, backed by Captain Gillis, the Band Commander, we expect to have a recreation room second to none in the regiment.

The orchestra played for the formal dance of the Somber Chasers of Fort Benning and Columbus Monday nite at Pierce's Auditorium in Columbus.

One of the trio of Brown Brothers may be seen looking at his watch every ten or fifteen minutes now which feat was impossible last week this time. Yes, he recovered it from a member of the weaker sex.

Pfc. Decuir is taking vocal lessons much to the consternation of the other members of the band and he expects to sing "Bells of the Sea" as his next cornet solo.

Pfc. Monroe Lee has passed the bonus legislation paying cash to the veterans of the World War and is now wondering just why Congress has not done the same. If Congress desires to remain in good standing with Lee the bonus bill must be passed in the next few days.

SERVICE COMPANY

The results of the horse show surely brought some surprises to some of the boys. Old "Ma Rainy" got away with the bacon. What's the matter with you erstwhile cavalrymen?

Found: A man in the Service Company, 24th Infantry, who can dethrone Sergeant McCauley from the distinction of being the oldest soldier. Enlisted January 22, 1894. Lookout Mac, you had better quit.

HEADQUARTERS COMPANY

The regiment has shown a marked improvement in its appearance in garrison reviews and considering the limited time available for rehearsal and drill, this fact has caused quite a deal of comment throughout the garrison. It is hoped that we will soon be equipped with white belts to corrsepond with the white uniforms worn by the band; this will create a twofold improvement.

Mrs. Joshua R. Johnson, the wife of our Personnel Sergeant Major, is now recovering from an illness that has confined her to her home. We hope that she will continue her rapid convalescence.

We regret to learn that Colonel D. G. Berry, Infantry, has been ordered away from this garrison. It is felt that his departure and that of Colonel L. W. Caffey, two former officers of the "old 24th Infantry" will sadden

COMPANY "E"

We don't mean to say Company "E" is moving either out or into barracks; we mean to convey the idea that they are moving the barracks. At least they have moved part of the old 83rd Filed Artillrey Headquarters from its former location on Vibbert Avenue to a spot near their corrals. Why they did it we have no idea but we believe Sergeant Stewart wanted everybody to see the nice new tracks on his Mark VIII. Any way that is as good a reason as any for moving. Lieutenant "Phil" Whitney was on hand to lend a dignified atmosphere to the work. It is reported that he was in charge of the detail. Perhaps in the dim and distant future, when we replace all of our Mark VII Tanks with Christies, some house moving concern will buy all of these mechanical elephants at say $1.00 each (an exhorbitant price to charge for all fifteen of ours) and contract to move Block 23 and 21 down to the river to be used as transports in the next war.

COMPANY "D"

Baseball—Company "D" vs. 6th Cavalry. Dis Dis Hunt played a game of ball in the barber shop. Dis was slated to be the dark horse in the game with the boys; but when the time came for Hunt to strut his stuff it was found that he was A. W. O. L. "Dats no way to make the team, Scopes, you wont never get in the big leagues dat way. (Errors and English the hearts of many oldtimers who have looked upon these two officers, the last living reminder of the days when the regiment was at its height of military accomplishment as inspirations to carry on under rapidly changing conditions.

A guarantee has just been received stating that as long as there is a Logging Detachment in operation in this regiment, the presence of Cavalryman Barnes will not be seen in the fistic arena of this garrison.

THEATRICAL ATTRACTIONS

Cinema Calendar

for Grand, Rialto and Royal

AT THE GRAND

SATURDAY, SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Presenting, "THIS IS THE NIGHT", with Lily Damita, Charles Ruggles, Roland Young and Cary Grant. Imagine it! A bachelor's bride on a synthetic honeymoon, pursued by three persistent suitors. Naughty! Tuneful! Romantic! Funny! Comedy romance filled with volcanic fun. The hotest mixup roar since wives put cupid's bows on their lips. Charlie Ruggles with plenty on the hip. Lily Damita with plenty of "It". Roland Young clowning around. Cary Grant stealing their time. Grand plot. Hot songs. Gee whiz, don't miss it, take a tip, don't miss it!

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Presenting, "ARE YOU LISTENING", with William Haines, Madge Evans, Anita Page, Neil Hamilton, Wallace Ford, Jean Hersholt and Joan Marsh. They brought romance to millions over the radio waves but in their own lives was only heart-break and disaster. When your favorite radio crooner sings a tender love song, do you stop to think that tragedy and heart-break may be his only lot? Come back of the scenes of radio broadcasting in a picture drama you'll call great! The thrilling story of a radio entertainer who grasps at life and love, and finds in radio his Nemesis—and, his regeneration. Thrilling! Gay! Young! Different!

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY: Presenting, "AFTER TOMORROW", with Charles Farrell and Marion Nixon and a strong supporting cast. You meet these two sweethearts every day. They ride in the street cars with you. Work in your office. Dance to the radio you hear upstairs. It's love like theirs that glorifies life, as they work, save and yearn for each other. It speaks to all the sweethearts of the world. This romance of a boy and girl who had a fast line of wise-cracks on their lips. An da beautiful dream of love in their hearts.

AT THE RIALTO

SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Presenting, "POLLY OF THE CIRCUS," with Marion Davies and Clark Gable. She missed the trapeze bars as thousands gazed in horror. Hold tight to your seats. A thrill in store for you. You sit in your seat and suddenly the wizardry of this film takes you hurling through space as though you were performing these death-defying stunts. An amazing, new, dramatic role for beautiful Marion Davies. When you see her with Clark Gable you will vote them the most romantic pair in pictures. A circus beauty. A love-starved man. You'll thrill at this unusual romance.

TUESDAY: Presenting, "THE YELLOW TICKET," wtih Elissa Landi, Lionel Barrymore and Laurence Olivier. Fate hounded her. Love snared her. Innocence and beauty inflamed her persecutors. Your heart will raptly follow her brave struggle, her crushing triumph. Barrymore at his greatest. Landu more glamorous than ever. Your best friends will be telling you about it. You'll sit in rigid expectation throughout every minute. You'll be gripping your seat in sympathy for this boyand girl who are fighting to be free. (Personally recommended by this critic).

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY, May 6th and 7th: Bill Cody in one of the best Western pictures he has ever appeared in. You'll get the thrill of your life as you follow Bill's escapades in the saddle. It's one of those Westerns with a fresh plot and you're sure to get plenty of entertainment.

VAUDEVILLE ATTRACTION ALL NEXT WEEK: Offering Jack Crawford's Comedians. You'll love Jack Vinson as the country boy, Al and Flo Unrah in hits of Broadway; Miss Bobbie Farley, Southern Blues singer; Smith and Cook, famous dance team and Billy McQuage and Jimmie Churchill. One of the best companys on the road.

AT THE ROYAL

(Beginning with Midnight Show, Saturday, 11:15 p. m.

SUNDAY, MONDAY AND TUESDAY: Presenting, "FRANKENSTEIN," with Colin Clive, Mae Clarke and John Boles, with a strong supporting cast. EDITOR'S NOTE: Here comes the world's most famous shocker. Just a word of friendly warning: If you have a weak heart and cannot stand excitement or gruesomeness, we advise you not to see this production. Take our word for it, it will thrill, it will shock, it may even horrify you. But if your nerves can stand electrifying drama, you will find it in "FRANKENSTEIN." Following the preview of "FRANKENSTEIN" at Santa Barbara, Calif., the manager of the theater in which it was shown was called out of bed to the telephone at 2 a. m. Male voice on the other end of the wire said:

"I saw 'Frankenstein' at your theater tonight. I can't sleep and I don't intend that you should either."

ROYAL

No one can dispute this statement. Strange as it seems, if anybody can, Carl Laemmle, Jr., will be very much obliged to him. So will James Whale and so will Boris Karloff.

And here's the statement. No artist ever had the nerve to draw a likeness of the monster that Frankenstein created and which everyone in the world, for the last hundred years, knows, destroyed him.

Innumerable editions of Mrs. Shelley's story of "Frankenstein" have been published, and it has appeared in every language. But when the make-up people at Universal City were cudgelling their brains to find out what a monster would look like, they couldn't find a single illustration in any library, manuscript vault, art gallery or any other place whatsoever which would help them. All that Mrs. Shelley in her book did to help was to say, over and over again, that the face was so dreadful, so horrifying, so repellent that the monster never could come into any personal relations with humankind.

This was a staggering job, but when the make-up men had Karloff's classic and highly intellectual face made over to suit them, the production department was so concerned about it that they bottled Karloff up in a room in a closed stage so that nobody could see what the make-up looked like until it was displayed in the theatre. However, Frankenstein's monster can be seen on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday when this Universal production of "Frankenstein" opens at the Royal Theatre.

Incidentally, the lack of an illustrated edition of "Frankenstein" has now been repaired. Grosset & Dunlap are issuing a thoroughly illustrated edition of this hundred-year-old classic, and it can be purchased in any book store.

RIALTO

High Class Vaudeville Is Offering At Rialto

Theatergoers who attend any performance at the Rialto Theater at any time in the next week are sure of a real treat and super-interesting entertainment in the stage show now billed there.

Jack Crawford's Comedians, who have gained a reputation for their vaudeville performances and their popular plays, will appear on the Rialto stage for the week commencing May 2. Among the featured artists are Jack Vinson, the country boy, who is sure to make you hold your sides with laughter. The Broadway hit team, Al and Flo Unrah will provide many an interesting moment for the Rialto audience and Miss Bobbie Farley, the southern blues singer, will entertain you with some of the best of the late song hits.

A famous dance team, Billy McQuage and Jimmy Churchill, who can make the building shake like Ann Pennington, will do their stuff in the program which will be replete with comedy, thrills and surprises.

Of course the regular movie performance will also be continued as heretofore and the Comedians will be an added attraction for those who want a good time. Be sure to come and see 'em, and while your cares away!

CHARLIE AND MARIAN MEET AGAIN AFTER MANY YEARS

One of the first pictures that Charles Farrell ever played in was Mary Pickford's silent photoplay, "Rosita." Though he appeared in only one scene it was a big role for Charlie for it was the first named screen character he ever impersonated. Had he not been so nervous, as he later admitted he was, or so intent upon his own role, he might have noticed a slight, bashful, chestnut-haired, brown-eyed girl who was also making her first film appearance in the picture. She was Marian Nixon.

If these two unknown youngsters, had had the power to lift the veil on time, or a crystal ball with which they could have peered into the future, they could have looked ahead several years and seen themselves, both screen favorites, co-starred in the Fox dramatic romance, "After Tomorrow," Frank Borzage's production which opens at the Grand Theatre Sunday Monday and Tuesday.

But they were only human, and being so saw nothing but a long hard road ahead of them. This road, however, proved much shorter and easier than either of them contemplated. It was not long after that Farrell was cast in Frank Borzage's Fox picture, "7th Heaven," opposite Janet Gaynor, and with that picture came stardom. Miss Nixon's first leading roles were with Tom Mix in that actor's Western dramas. Her first starring picture was "Spangles." Since the advent of talking pictures she has been prominently cast in "The Rainbow Man," "Say It With Flowers," with Al Jolson, "General Crack" with John Barrymore, "Young Nowheres," "Show of Shows" and her recent Fox success, "Charlie Chan's Chance."

"After Tomorrow" is the first picture Farrell and Miss Nixon have made together since they first appeared in "Rosita." With these two young stars in the picture are such screen favorites as Minna Gombell, William Collier, Sr., Nora Lane, William Pawley, Ferdinand Munier and Josephine Hull, who comes from the Broadway stage to make her debut in the picture. The film is based on John Golden's and Hugh Stange's stage success.

SHRAPNEL BURSTS

In the Horse Show last Friday morning, the Artillery took five ribbons, one of them was for first place. They took second and fourth in the polo pony scurry and the first three places in the Novice Class jumping, Lt. Draper taking first place and bringing home another cup. Then Saturday, Capt. Brackinridge took a first place and received a cup, while wearing his Red Coat and jumping with a hunt team.

The eleven Artillery Reserve Officers assigned to the Concentration Camp will complete their two weeks of active service, Sunday. They went out on the problem for the Company Officers' Class last Monday and were again observers but rode a horse instead of walking around to see the troops. Since some of them hadn't been on a horse for some time, they certainly felt the effects of being in the saddle most all day.

The Artillery polo team was very much surprised last Sunday, in the first game of the Concentration Camp Tournament, when the 29th Infantry ran away with the first few periods and soon the score was 6 to 2 in favor of the Infantry. Finally the Artillery started scoring and although everyone thought they had waited too late to start, they made their sixth goal tying the score, just as the whistle blew at the end of the game. The extra period was also quite exciting as each team made a wonderful run for goal in the first few minutes but both times the ball went outside. After bunching up and everyone hitting a few short strokes the ball was pushed through the goal making the score 7-6 in favor of the 83rd.

BATTERY "A"

The "Kingfishes" of Alabama at large and Harris County, Georgia, who with the aid of Insurance Companies and army buddies have weathered the storm of depression and are now riding the crest of prosperity, wish to announce that on account of one of their Lieutenants having acquired a staff job that they have lowered the interest rate to wit: Alabama 50 per cent, Georgia, at large 75 per cent. This rate does not include ambulance chasing and other incidentals.

Figures do not lie but we have heard of liars figuring: so we suggest that some large construction company employ some of the members of this organization as they can make a pretty penny making 8 equal 12 and 12 equal 14.

Battery "A," came out well in the Infantry School Horse Show. Lt. Draper won first place in the Novice Jumping and Pvt. Acosta won third place in the enlisted men's jumping. Battery "A," for the 4th consecutive time, won first place on the Artillery Team. Boys give "C" Battery a chance, the next show Battery "A" will use Drill Harness and unshined boots.

We should think Pvt. "Tillie" Sailers is in line for Stable Sergeant as he is very good on "bedding down" and expert on castling. If you don't think so ask the Mule Sgt.

It has been suggested by some that the First Sergeant change brands as the last brand was bad on the throat.

Pvt. Usher has changed brands and his state of health is in very good condition. He has changed from the 35c to the 50c. He also states he hasn't broken his glasses in two months.

Acting Corporal, Private First Class, Supply Sergeant Haywood L. R. North is in good form due to the mirror on the third floor where he does shadow boxing. His voice is also in excellent shape. One more trip to Uchee with Pvt. Neely, Cpls. Stringfellow and Speedy Rogers and the quartet will be in shape for the stage (probably in Phenix City).

Lt. Ports was well pleased with the output of tickets by this organization for the 83rd F. A. dance.

BATTEY "C"

Our 15 days quarantine for the mumps, has been lifted and now we can go to town with our own class "A" passes. This quarantine was a real G. I. one, we worked and drilled with the post, but were barred from the show and town. Anyhow, nobody went to the show with "C" Battery insignia on their blouses, and we did not cross the bridge across the Upatoi creek.

The dance of the 83rd was a great success. Lt. Ports was the man behind this dance, and he fully deserves credit for its success. The Battery is patiently waiting for the next one, hoping that will not be such a long period of waiting.

The B. C. Detail again functioned very well during the field maneuvers. At the Bn. CP, the Battery was well represented by our Battery agent, Pvt. Johnson, who with his active war spirit and humor always notices our points of the maneuvers. He never sees the bright side of warfare.

"C" Battery won 2nd prize in the post horse-show. As in years gone by, the judges did not notice the appearance of our gun and limbers and they didn't take into consideration the soldierly appearance of the drivers and cannoneers. We didn't complain but the horse-show seemed to be one sided.

Our opinion about the new order regarding our working uniform is as follows: A girl can wear a handkerchief as a bathing suit and is considered dressed, but if a soldier has a sleeve cut out of his undershirt he is considered naked.

Q. M. DEPARTMENT

Judge, the Humor magazine, has just emerged from a stay in receivership and pulled through as funny as ever. and the chances are that "The Mighty Grumpy Gordy" will do the same.

The Mighty Grumpy, who has dodged many blows and passed out many a boxer in rings of Fort Benning and points North, South, East and West, has begun to feel the effects of the Depression.

One wouldn't believe the news on observing him for he is still able to yell "streeeeeike" as loudly as ever when indulging in his avocation of baseball umpire. He continues to be able, in his usual eloquent way, to pursuade people to fully appreciate the pugilistic ability of the Mighty Grumpy Gordy.

Even a prize fighter has his troubles. He must kepe up a front equal to his fame. And keeping up a front costs money. Grumpy's bookkeeper, it seems, failed to be on the job at the right time. The assets of the firm of Gordy, Inc., were found to be less than the liabilities, and the object of the receiver of Gordy, Inc., is to get the books balanced.

The Mighty Grumpy may surely consider it no dishonor to be temporarily in the hands of a receiver; in fact, it semes to be the proper thing these days. Someof the best corporations of the land have decided to add, at least for awhile, a receiver to their list of officers.

Smith To Fight Bozo - - Or Stribling Tuesday

Pa Stribling Will Fight W. L. If Bozo Is Not Forthcoming For Bout

Walker (Cyclone) Smith, of Benning, and Battling Bozo, Birmingham boob, will see about this thing of settling the question of box fight supremacy next Tuesday at 8:15 p. m., at Doughboy Stadium.

Both will tip the beam around 180. They're scheduled to go ten 3-minute rounds—or less. And, what's more, Bozo'll either be on hand, and a day or so in advance at that, for this fight or somebody like "Pa" Stribling, his manager, must part with $300, a very pathetic procedure with "Pa," indeed.

It was deemed necessary to ask this amount be posted because Captain Phillip Fry has had no end of trouble with Mr. Bozo in the past. Three times previously the Birmingham boob has been matched with Smith. Three times he has been conspicuous by his absence. Maybe I'm wrong, but Bozo is dumb like a fox. Smith has a reputation of hitting a right hard lick when he wants to and I have every reason to believe that Walker intends hitting some hard ones this time. I say this because I sat with Mr. and Mrs. Smith at the ringside at the Batton-Glover soiree and Mr. Smith talked constantly of Bozo, adding time after time that he certainly hoped Benning athletic officials would be able to bring the Birmingham fool back to the reservation for one more time, anyway.

Puggy Weinert, of Chicago, will meet Kid Baisden, of Valdosta, in the semi-final event of the card. This should be a good bout as both boys are known to pack potent punches and do not believe in this business of stalling to the extent they must be directed out of the ring by "Red" Lindsey, a robust football player whose knowledge of ring affairs is also above reproach.

Bunker Hill, of Benning, squares off with Bobby Green, of 8th Infantry, Charleston, in a special six-rouder that should likewise provide excitement a-plenty provided, of course, Greene is of the same calibre Hill is, and he comes pretty well recommended.

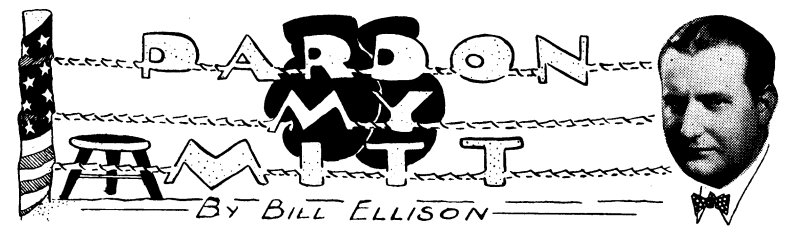
Grumpy Gordy, Benning, battles Kid Weston, of 6th Cav., Oglethorpe, in five rounds—or less, of fast and furious action. Gordy, who has been incapacitated for several months on account of an injury, will make his debut with earnest intentions to regain some of the following he once had among the boys on the reservation.

Benny Klaja. of 6th Cav., Oglethorpe, meets Frank Mackery, of the Tanks, Benning, in four rounds of preliminary fighting.

Kid Webster, Benning, is billed to do battle with John Mathis, Fort McClellan, Anniston, in another preliminary.

"Seaweed" Wilson, Benning, and Kid Williams, 8th Inf., Charleston, will furnish the entertainment in the curtain raiser.

Bouts begin at 8:15 p. m. and they'll be held in Doughboy Stadium, weather permitting.



Although Battlin' Bozo, elongated Birmingham fool, holds a draw verdict over Walker Smith, cyclone from Company C, by virtue of their quarrel last year, I cannot bring myself to believe anything but that Bozo entertains utmost respect for Smith's left hook that seldom travels more than six inches but which, nevertheless, packs an overdose of arsenic and dynamite for the weaving, bobbing, shifting human target in front of it.

From what I can gather from folks who saw that memorable battle at Benning, few were impressed with the Birmingham fool's punching propensities; rather, they refer to Bozo's extraordinary clowning qualities. They'll place a hand on your shoulder, disarrange your tie and fasten a half-Nelson on you whilst they shake with convulsive merriment relating how the Birmingham fool stepped back, made a delivery like a Montgomery moundsman and then caught Smith flush on the button whenever he let fly with that straight right.

I doubt very seriously if the Birmingham fool found much time to play the galleries in the boxing tourney held not so long ago in Chicago because it is a rather difficult matter to grimace. protrude the tongue and imitate the Charleston when right crosses, left jabs and stiff uppers are raining to the point of head. Bozo, on this specific occasion, wore the expression of a modern mortician and was about as elated as a a man in the breadline outside the penny restaurant of Bernard McFadden's Foundation in America's biggest city.

I shall never forget the absurd situation Bozo created in Birmingham where he fought Maxie Rosenbloom, reigning champeen. It was generally conceded by all and sundry that the Birmingham fool was a trifle disarranged in the region of the head—or many had reason to suspect as much at any rate—but few dreamed that he would go the extent he did to have his own way in a matter that concerned so important arrangement. I only wonder why the American Legion post tolerated a fool so dizzily inclined.

Ring celebrities of Birmingham and other points West made it up among themselves to make much of the coming battle. They sought ou the best holstery in the city and greased the proprietor's palm right well to make it possible for a gathering with such low social rating as gentlemen of the pugilisitc profession possess, to dine in the blue and gold room for a solitary evening. I cannot say whether any arrangements were made to cover the possible loss of silverware, napkins and towels, but this I know, the "big pot was to be put in the little one" and "the goose was to hang high," so to speak. with members tinearred gentry finally being recognized in their own right.

It was all fixed. Bozo and Rosenbloom would be honor guests. Strange, though, nobody had thought to ask the Birmingham fool's ideas regarding the gala function. Bozo had taken himself into consultation. though. and forthwith set his plans to working. On the night of the feast the hotel was ablaze in electrical splendor. All had seats when suddenly someone remarked:

"Where's Battlin' Bozo?"

"Oh. hadn't you heard." remarked a hatchet-faced man with nose glasses who sat near the end. "Mr. Bozo has chartered that hot dog joint right across the street and is entertaining his friends over there this evening!"

I. S. D. Hangs Up Bowling Record

Getting out in front to a lead of 266 pins, the Infantry School Detachment bowling team looms as a big favorite to cop the title in the Fourth Corps Area bowling tournament now being held at Fort Benning.

Besides taking an early lead, the Detachmenteers also upset the dope by hanging up a new high score record for one game in match play last night. In this game the Detachmenteers turned in a high total of 1016 pins bettering the old record of 987, by 29 pins.

The Second Battalion of the 8th Infantry bowling team is the nearest rival of the Detcahment team. The Screven bowlers scored the only victory registered against the league leaders, defeating them in the opening play.

The present tournament now under way consists of bowling teams from the 8th Infantry, 6th Cavalary, 22nd Infantry, 29th Infantry and Infantry School Detachment.

Doughboys Win Two Games From Bowdoin College

The Fort Benning Doughboys gave the visiting Bowdoin State College ball tossers a warm reception last Saturday and Sunday, taking both games of the two game series.

Saturday's battle was well played and the Doughboys coasted to a 6 to 2 victory behind the air tight hurling of Speedball Holloway and timely hitting by the soldier sluggers.

Holloway gave up four scattered bingles and was complete master of the situation at all times. His fast hop kept the visitors popping up or grounding weakly to the infield, six of the visiting batsmen died swinging.

McLane led the Doughboy offensive with three safe bingles and a walk out of four trips to the platter. The entire Benning team played heads up base ball in the field and on the bases. Tinsley enjoyed a big day in center field with five put outs to his credit.

Sunday's game proved to be a 15 to 0 landslide for the Doughboys. A long, lanky twirler, answering to the moniker of Wray, opened on the mound for the visitors. He walked the first four batters to face him in the opening inning and was then yanked in favor of Harris. Three runs were chalked up by the Doughboys in the first frame. In the second frame the soldiers ran wild to score one dozen runs off eleven hits, one walk and a pair of errors.

Stevens in the box for Benning never allowed the visitors anything that looked like a run for the first five innings. Hinkley relieved Stevens and continued to put on the whitewash, the game ending 15 to 0 in favor of the Doughboys.

After the second spasm, Lt. Kellam allowed the old timers to go in and sent a revamped outfit in for the third frame. Cole went to the mound for the visitors and stopped all scoring but the second stringers played great ball and never allowed the visitors a chance to register a marker.

The Doughboys are playing in Lanett, Ala., today. The Lanett A. C. has one of the strongest semi-pro teams in the country and holds one win over the Doughboys for the season.

Intra-Mural Base-Ball Leaders Arrange Season

Baseball moguls of the organizations of the Infantry School, assembled at the Athletic Office last Monday morning to arrange for the coming intra-mural baseball season. The session was a bit stormy with arguments coming thick and fast.

The first question settled was the admitting of the Medical Detachment and Ordnance Detachment, former "B" league teams, to the Class "A" loop. Other teams of the "B" loop argued that the loss of the two teams would cut the baby loop to four teams. The 2nd Tank Battalion and First and Second Bats of the 29th Infantry then offered to put class "B" teams on the field. After a vote it was agreed that both Medicos and Ordnance would go into the major loop. This will give the Class "A" loop an eight team club this season.

Among other new rules made, was the ruling that no player having once played with one team, could transfer to another organization and take part in baseball during the season. This does not include men that will be discharged and who re-enlisted for other

Great Grumpy Gordy Steals Bozo's Laurels

Captain Phillip C. Fry and his ever alert athletic attaches have made no comment whatsoever of their intentions but there are some who believe it will be necessary to enlarge the seating capacity of Doughboy Stadium for Tuesday night for the very simple reason the great "Grumpy" Gordy is to exhibit his wares in trunks and gloves on a card headed by Mr. Smith, of Benning, and Mr. Bozo, of Birmingham.

No provision has yet been made to restrain loyal Gordy followers in the general admission sector from coming fortified with overripe vegetables or to prohibit their using them in a time of need but it is believed in authoritative sources that other forms of affection for the hero will be resorted to instead, in this particular instance, by way of variety.

Gordy's fame is not restricted to the 96,000 some odd acres that constitute the government reservation, but overflows into Columbus, Phenix City, Girard and Hatchechubee. His marvelous punching proclivities are recognized the same as his antics in and about the athletic office, a dignified sanctum where only qualified persons are permitted to loaf and foregather for the decision of important sporting events and other such ticklish matters.

"Grumpy" is ever in the limelight because his associates are trying to do something for him by way of seeing that he gets along in the world. This, naturally, keeps Gordy in a state of turmoil and he frequently finds it necessary to get authentic information via telephone, letter or othrewise.

Here is a man whose keen sense of intellect is surpassed only by that of Tunney's as was ably demonstrated the other day when Lieutenant Harmony called to Gordy:

"Say, 'Grumpy,' hand me that picture over there, will you please?"

Ever obliging, Gordy stumbled to a table, lifted a volumnious directory and, holding it aloft, interrogated:

"Is this what you wanted, sir?"

But then he has his good points, as may be attested by some of his activities of late, among them the unceremonious entry into the athletic office. the selection of a cigarette from a pack on a highly polished table and the process of inhaling it without first resorting to questions as to whom the cigarettes belonged or if it was agreeable with the owner for him to help himself to the pack.

He is popular among all who know him for, it seems, somebody is ever anxious to do something nice for Gordy. On one occasion, particularly, a buddy called the sporting department of The Atlanta Journal, conversed long and earnestly with the sports editor, and extolled the merits of this boy "Grumpy" inside the ropes with a foe to contend with. Gordy was likened to the great heroes of the ring who have passed on but who, at any rate, left their lingering records for consumption by admirers. Gordy was all the while loitering nearby with mouth ajar and eyes enlarged, ready to shower his friend with congratulations at the end of the conversation but never stopping to notice that his benevolent companion's finger held the receiver hook pressed down as far as it would go.

Ching Johnson Scores Kayo Over Florida Heavy

Ching Johnson, Benning heavyweight, demonstrated the killing power of his good right hand to fight fans in Troy, Ala., last Tuesday night fans in Troy, Ala., last Tuesday night when he stopped Len Herring, Pensacola, Fla., heavyweight, in four rounds.

Johnson's kayo of Herring came as a big surprise to fight fans all over the country as Herring is known as one of the toughest fighters in the game and this was the first kayo ever registered against him in five years fighting.

Johnson led the fight all the way and had been hurting Herring with body punches. In the fourth round Ching worked Herring into a corner. Johnson feinted a left to the body and as Herring dropped his guard Ching switched a hard right hook to the head. The punch caught Herring between the eyes and he sank down on the lower rope. The referee counted nine with Herring in the sitting position, at the count of nine he tumbled to the ring floor, face down. After the fight Johnson's hands were examined to see if he carried loaded tape but one look at his giant maulers convinced the judges that Johnson needed no doctored tape to floor an elephant.

Corps Area Polo Tournament Games Played Sunday

By Bernard B. Swazey

The Fourth Corps Area elimination polo tournament got under way last Sunday afternoon at French Field as the Eighty-third Field Artillery defeated the strong Twenty-ninth Infantry team seven to six in a seven-period game, and the Fort McPherson four swamped the Student horsemen in the night-cap by a score of seven to two.

In the first game of the afternoon, the 83rd Field Artillery handed the 29th Infantry a handicap of two goals, and tagged the small end of the score until the sixth, and what was ordinarily scheduled to be the final period of the game, when they tied the score at six all. It was not until the seventh period, (played to break the deadlock) that the Artillerymen were ever ahead, but that was enough to win the game and keep them in the running for the Fourth Corps Area championship, and polo prestige.

The 29th Infantry took immediate advantage of their handicap and scored one goal in the opener, Lt. Sweeney claiming that honor. Captain Bevan rode up with a nice counter on the end of his mallet in the initial chukker, and scored the first goal for the Artillery.

The Artillery went scoreless for the second period of suspense, several nice drives ending by the ball missing the goal by a matter of inches. Lt. Westlund, double-threat man of the 29th Infantry team, scored two counters in this chukker, and displayed some brilliant horsemanship along with it.

The third period found the Artillery casting about for a means of winning the game. (They already had the incentive). Things looked dark for the red-jersied four, but in this chukker came the break that keeps people going to see polo contests all over the world. A foul was called on the 29th Infantry, and Lt. Bartlett, at four for the Artillery, drove a nice flying goal from the thirty-yard line. It was a dead ringer, too high to be knocked down. This seemed to dampen the 29th Infantry's ardor, or what ever they call it in polo, for they failed to count in this period.

In the fourth period. Major Arnold backbone of the Artillery team, playing at three position, and Lt. Draper, number two, took matters in their own hands and scored a goal each for the Red leg combination. Lt. Sweeny, number one for the 29th Infantry, scored his and his team's last counter of the game in this period.

Lt. Bartlett again hit his stride in

I. O. U

With intra-mural baseball season just around the corner it is time that we began to check upon our chances in the coming struggle. To begin with we are blessed with a C. O. who is a booster of athletics. Major Thomas B. Catron, Detachment commander, has coached several of the greatest army basketball teams ever turned out, he is also highly interested in baseball, and like all true sportsmen, will be out to win.

Captain Benjamin B. Bain will coach the Greencords this season. Captain Bain knows and has played the game. With the members of the team co-operating with him the Greencords should go out in front and win ball games.

Top Kick George Mowry is a red hot baseball fan. He has also proved to be of much value to the team as a morale booster during the past two seasons. The Top Kick also has a grave yard rabbit foot that he carries to each game, and on a couple occasions the old rabbit foot did its stuff.

To begin with, prospects are bright. Both the Detachment commander and first sergeant will give the team all the support possible. Of course this will not turn out a winning ball club, the players also have their part to play.

At the present time there is enough material in the detachment to develop a team that will hold a first division berth. First of all there must be harmony and team work. Arguments and dissatisfaction on the bench have really been the down fall of several Greencord baseball teams in past seasons.

First of all we will check the twirlers. "Wee" Grady Tolle needs no introduction. he is one hundred percent baseball player. Gibbs, the lanky boy who pushes a typewriter in the orderly room can pitch winning baseball if handled right, "Snappy" Bennett should still have a couple or so of his left in his old soup bone and "Sad Samuel" Stuart can also do mound duty. In the meantime there is no doubt other members of the outfit that are not being mentioned. Any man who desires is urged to get out for the squad and show what he can do.

Mickey McCarthy, veteran catcher. will be able to do his stuff back of the platter this season. Although graying at the edges, Mickey can still catch with the best of them. Dal Hawkins is also an excellent receiver and should team well with McCarthy.

Sam Stuart has no peer at first base. There is no question as to where Stuart should be placed. Pop Hecker is still capable of playing the keystone sack. His age is not hurting him and with regular practice he should have no trouble filling the bill. There is probably other keystone sackers in the outfit, if so they will be welcome.

Both the berths at short and third are open. It will be up to the ambitious youngsters to get out there and fight for a regular position. "Jughead" Cowan is an ideal third baseman if he would get out and hustle, he has one of the best throwing arms in the garden.

The outfield is also open. Callahan should be cinch in the left field. Davis will be okay for a berth. Among the new comers that have arrived since last season there should be several ball hawks. The time is drawing near for action and men that can play ball are urged to come out and get going towards building a winning baseball team.

Captain Horace O. Cushman was relieved from Command of the Company in April 1932. Captain Cushman was as much liked as respected by every member of this organization and his departure is one of our biggest regrets. He is now Regimental Supply Officer and this entire Company wishes him the best of luck and future success, in our hearts he shall always be remembered as "Our Captain."

Probably some of you remember having read a little headline in a Columbus paper "Looney made Corporal." We are very sorry to say that this wonderful expression has been destroyed on our trip to Panama City, Florida—"Looney made Private," however we admire your spirit, old timer. and with your courage you may soon be able to regain the old rating.

Congratulations are extended to Private Horace W. Strother upon his appointment Private First Class on April 20, 1932. Strother has worked very hard for this rating, he has been an excellent soldier in every respect and it is fully believed that he deserves this appointment.

"Hello Cecil" was heard from all parts of the barracks when Sergeant Coates returned from his re-enlistment furlough.

COMPANY "E"

Company "E" is getting their share of the orderlies for the Commanding Officer these days. Private Thomas C. Meeks, just came off has been made orderly for the past four times. Pvt. H. D. Watson relieved him as orderly from Co. "E."

Private first class John Kosheba has been the Commandant's orderly for the past week and stated that he enjoyed it fine. Kosheba is one of our outstanding soldiers, having over 12 years' service and a great world war record.

Our top kick "High" Davis. Corp. Clyde Johnson, Corp. and "Wild Bill" Terry, who are members of the Regimental Small Bore Team. this year have been awarded medals and their names are to be put on the Honor Roll 29th Infantry. Their team has won 13 of the 16 matches that they have fired. Colonel Major says the following about our small bore team: "The best record ever made by a 29th Infantry small bore team. This was made possible by the enthusisam and hard work of each man. This achievement is a source of pride nad inspiration to the entire Regiment."

The following are new arrivals to the company from other parts of the country who joined last week:

Anglin, and Manley.

Corporal Tate has reenlisted and taken his 90 days furlough.

Private James K. Culpepper one of our cooks has been sent to the Fitzsimmons Hospital. with T. B.

COMPANY "F"

And here is the dope on the whole shebang. On Saturday, April 10th "F" company's mighty warriors of baseball battled "H" company's aspirants to the championship in the second game of two games scheduled that day.

Errors ruled this game and we lost to the tune of 6 to 5. "H" company won a baseball game but no glory. The following Saturday. April 16th "E" company took the field against our very determined warriors and sunk to defeat in a closely contested game. The score was 4 to 3.

Tired but happy we came off the field with the problem of beating the highly touted Headquarters team of the 2nd Bn. the following day, Sunday.

Sunday morning at 9 a. m. while the sun smiled down on us we faced the big guns of Headquarters company determined to win. When the dust cleared away Headquarters was found hanging on to the small end of the score, which was 6 to 3. Everyone played heads-up ball and contributed every bit of hitting that was in them. Pvt. Ran McCullough. our dark horse had the big guns eating out of his hand. Only three hits were marked up against him. Following is a line up of the two teams:

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| McCullough C. R. | p | Foster—Twitty |
| Stolier | 1st | Cook |
| Evans | 2d | Mitchell |
| Barron | ss | Kjeilstrom |
| Maitland | 3d | Thompson A. |
| Holland | lf | Blackstone |
| Bright | cf | Miller |
| Cadle | rf | Bouquard |

SCORE:

"F" 6—"HDQRS." 3.

We are out to win and we are going to win, to take warning ye varlets and prepare for defeat.

COMPANY "G"

The week began with everybody expecting about half of it spent in the woods. Instead Friday and Saturday found "G" Company on the front line in The Two Day's Fight around Ochillee. The battle turned out to be a battle against red flags. We as defenders were not disturbed any great deal during the night as red flags are rather hard to see at night.

Corporals Saunders and Prewitt, two of our mainstays on the baseball team are in the hospital. Poison Ivy proved a little too much for Corporal Saunders and Corporal Prewitt received his pass to (the red roofed house on the hill) by injuring his right foot in last Saturday's game with "H" Company. "H" Company beat us but our hitting didn't come at a time to become convertible into runs. Everybody played well. Davis and Thompson doing some fine pitching and Prophet playing a jam up game at short. We will miss Prewitt and Saunders if we can't have them in the Battalion Headquarters Game.

Prevatt has graduated into the ranks of the Corporals as have Booker Holley, Baker and Hurst into the ranks of First Class Privates.

With a box of cigarettes at stake "G" Company Tug of War Team stopped neither to barter or talk and pulled Battalion Headquarters Team across the line two out of three times with the greatest of ease.

the fifth stanza and by superb playing, manoeuvered the ball all over the field and scored the lone counter of that period. Major Frazier of the 29th Infantry missed by a matter of inches. (It seemed that a jinx was on both him and Lt. Bartlett all during the afternoon, for they repeatedly missed with close shots. Some of the tries for goals even coming so close as to ricochet off the goal posts.

The sixth period was filled with suspense throughout. The 29th Infantry realized their dangerous position, for their mounts were fast growing weary, and the Artillery realized it was their last chance to be in on the score at the last of the game. Lt. Bartlett again came through with a brilliant play, and scored the goal that tied the game all in a knot.

This all called for that extra period, which turned out to be a hectic (?) affair. Well, at least for some. The Artillery twice drove down the field with beautiful chances to score, and, you know, the rules state that the first team scoring in the extra period wins the marbles, but they missed. Then the 29th Infantry tried their hand at the same stunt once, and thereby went the old game, for, as sure as gun's iron, the Artillery rushed the ball down toward the First Division road and Captain Bevan knocked it through.

THAT NIGHT-MARE—YE SECOND GAME

This goal came about in a rather unique manner. The Artillery rushed the ball the full length of the field and after a long shot by Lt. Bartlett, the ball stopped dead for the center of the goal, about five yards out on the field. Major Frazier came rushing in in an attempt to bring the ball away from that dangerous. position, and his horse collided with the goal post, unseating its rider. During the excitement that followed, Captain Bevan calmly tapped the ball through for the Artillery, putting the old game in the sock for that team.

The strong Student team spotted the Fort McPherson riders one goal, but why, this correspondent may never know. The Fort McPherson team was much too strong for the Students, as it showed from start to finish. They had the best horses by a far sight. (Diplomacy keeps us from commenting on the aptitude of the players) . . . . However, with good horses, we would wager good canteen checks on the Students hogging the show from the whole bunch of team.

Major Howell was the steallar performer of the afternoon, turning in five goals for his team. Captain Wing and Lt. Baker scored the other two goals for the Fort McPherson Raiders. Warrant Officer Shubert did his part in making the team appear as a threat for the crown in the tournament.

Major Allen and Lt. Griffin scored the only counters for the Students. Lt. Wilson and Lt. Matthews played the positions of numbers one and three, respectively.

Those who are in on the know about polo predict the 6th Cavalry will win the tournament, with Fort McPherson being runner up. Your correspondent predicts that if the Artillery doesn't win the tournament, they will run somebody up something, if it is nothing but the second place. Their horses are all in good shape and with a little more practise, the Artillery team should be a threat to almost any team here at this time.

There will be two more games next Sunday afternoon, the game being called around 1:30 p. m. A consolation tournament will also begin next Sunday, the 29th Infantry and the Students playing then. Sunday will see the 6th Cavalary, Fort McPherson, Fort Bragg and the Eighty-Third Field Artillery in action.

Most of us have read the Bible enough to know that once upon a time Noah built an ark that was so big that he had enough room to save his family and two of every kind of animal known to man; but most of us don't know that we have here in our company a Noah in the way of Skaggs. Well, we have, and he now reports that he has built a boat and it is now afloat on the widely known river, Chattahoochee. Believe it or not, but through Skaggs' legal adviser, Phibbs, it is reported that the boat in question is large enough to transport the entire Battalion to all points south on our next hike, including fourteen Mark VII tanks. The boat is built on the same lines as the house that Jack built.

CHATTER

With most all of our players turning out the Babe Ruth style of hitting, Lieutenant Kellam should have it very easy in picking a pinch hitter to do the work in the coming Post Intra-Mural games.

It is still believed by some of our noted sport fans that "F-2" is going to win the Battalion Series, however, don't blame me if you fellows lose your bets.

Looking at the fine crop of track men Lieutenant Nourse is turning out we have a team of men that is going to be hard to beat in the coming Post Track Meet. And too, men, they deserve all the backing that we can give them. So make your plans now to be on hand at the first crack of the gun in Doughboy Stadium. Be there and show Benning as well as our visitors that the old spirit that we are noted for isn't dead yet.

organizations. Another ruling allows the class "B" teams to carry two former class "A" players on their lineup. This will only affect those organizations that carry both a class "A" and class "B" team. Formerly no class "A" man was allowed to take part in a class "B" game after being dropped from the major loop. Any player that plays four and one half innings as a class "A" player will then go on record as an "A" class player.

The intra-mural season will open June 6th, and will be a split season affair with the winners fighting for the championship in a post season affair. The following teams have been entered in the major loop: 2nd Bn. # Col. Berry Goes To 1st Corps, Area

Among assignments contained in War Department Orders received at Headquarters, The Infantry School last week were those announcing the assignmentof Colonel Daniel G. Berry, Commanding officer of the Special Units, to the First Corps Area for duty with the organized reserves. Lt. Col. Frank F. Jewett will probably replace him. Lt. Col. Everett D. Barlow, Assistant Quartermaster at Fort Benning is also assigned to duty with the organized reserves, at the Seventh Corps Area.

Major Roger Williams, Jr., Instructor, has received orders to go to the 22nd Infantry at Fort Oglethorpe. Captain James A. Boyers is assigned to the 2d Division at Fort Francis E. Warren; Capt. Eugene R. Cowles is assigned to duty at the Connecticut Agricultural College.

Lt. C. R. Smith is assigned to the 22nd Inf.; Lt. J. A. Holly to the 1st Tank Regiment and 2nd Lt. Marion Huggins, Air Corps, in Hawaii, is assigned to the 16th Observation Squadron here.

As Gunbotham entered the arena, "Buggs" Raymond, local Graham MacNamee, made several wise-cracks about Easy and his proud rider, and Easy, loyal horse, wasn't going to put on a jumping exhibition for any mob that would laugh at "Buggs" Raymond's derogatory remarks. Oh no, he wasn't going to put on an exhibition, but WHAT a show. As Easy entered the ring he started bucking and twisting, and Gunbotham thought to himself "Something is coming off around here." Finally, after refusing the four foot jumps, the firm got the gate. Anyhow, Easy has some fine gaits.

Of all post orders, undoubtedly the latest medical purity program has caused the most comment. As we said in the first paragraphs, it is unfortunate, or rather, fortunate that we cannot write all of the comments made about the order. One has but to read it to see the possibilities. It is rumored that Limey Munson will ultimately be appointed swimming pool officer because of his experience, knowledge, and development of new devices to carry out these orders. Some of his cleaning inventions are unusual, to say the least.

BENNING HERALD

VOLUME II — FORT BENNING, GA., MAY 6, 1932 — NUMBER 2

Post Commandant Becomes Major General

Benning Plays Host to Many Noted Figures

Fort Benning is playing host to some of the most distinguished of the officers of the Army during the maneuver period. One of the first of the high-ranking visitors to reach here was Major General Edward L. King, Commanding officer of the Fourth Corps Area, who came here about two weeks ago. Major General Stephen O. Fuqua, Chief of Infantry made a three day visit last week. The last to arrive was Major General Samuel Hof, Chief of Ordnance, who reached Benning on May 4th. With his arrival, the number of generals to be at the Post was boosted to seven, five major generals and two brigadier generals. Those who were here at that time were Major General Edward L. King, Major General Campbell King, Commandant, Fort Benning, Major General Harry G. Bishop, Major General Ephraim G. Peyton and Major General Samuel Hof. The others are Brigadier General Manus McCloskey and Brigadier General William S. McNair.

The roster of distinguished visitors at Benning not only includes those names high in American Army circles but is augmented by the visit of five military attaches from as many countries, who came here from Washington on the invitation of the War department to act as observers during the Corps Area Maneuvers. Five countries are represented, each of which extends a similar courtesy to the United States officers under the same circumstances. Colonel Francis J. Pillon, of France and Colonel Shohei Washizu, of Japan, arrived in Columbus last Sunday for their stay here. On Wednesday evening the three other foreign officers, Colonel Maurice F. Day of Great Britain, Lieutenant Colonel Marco Pennaroli of Italy and Captain Count Gustaf F. Von Rosen, of Sweden arrived. All the visitors made a complimentary visit to the Commandant at his office on Thursday morning. During their stay they are being escorted by Lieut. Colonel John R. West.

Meanwhile the first of the major actions which will take place during the maneuvers was begun on Thursday when the Red and Blue forces moved out of camp into the field to meet in another of their fierce battles. This action will last from Thursday through Saturday and its movements will embrace the use of practically every brnach of Infantry offense and defense. Members of the Red command will be distinguished from their friendly enemies by a white hat-band and their aerial observers will have their planes marked by streamers from the tail. Blue planes will have streamers hanging from the wings of the plane and neutral planes will be unmarked.

Student officers of the Infantry School will participate in the maneuvers on Thursday, Friday and Saturday and will be assigned to various positions of staff and command.

Stars Presented To General King

Colonel George F. Baltzell, Director of the Infantry Board, is shown here presenting to Major General Campbell King, the Commandant, of the Infantry School, a set of Silver stars given him by members of the officer personnel of Benning.

Cabaret Party Ends Series of Dances Sponsored By Club

It looks very much like the breaking of another record for The Officers' Club when one glance at the large chart in the office of the Club which shows the table reservations for the Cabaret Dinner Dance at Biglerville, Friday evening, May 13th.

The S. R. O. sign has been hung up. The Secretary regrets that the facilities of Biglerville Hall make it impossible to serve many who were so unfortunate as to "miss out" on table reservation. It seems that no one wants to miss the final big party of the year which will feature a French Cafe with all its atmosphere and entertainment. No wonder.

Comedy, ballad singing and beautiful dancing girls will be presented on the stage and run-way which will extend to the center of the hall.

The one and only "Ham" Kelley has consented to act as Master of Ceremonies, "Nuff Sed," Such popular local comedians as Lewis, Raymond, Caum, Decker, "Zero" Wilson, and others are prepared to spring new stunts while a surprise quartette and the stars of the "Red Mill" will offer vocal numbers.

Five selected dancing acts by twenty pupils of Miss Anna Dozier in beautiful costumes and appropriate stage settings are promised to be the last word in the art of modernistic terpsichorean Art.

With the placing of an order for 300 pounds of Turkey with the trimmings by the Steward, those who attend are assured of plenty of good food to eat under happy auspices.

George Horton and his orchestra are all tuned up and rearing to go and the dance floor has been placed in excellent condition.

All dinner guests are advised to ar-

Dramatic Club To Give Final Performance

The final performance of the Infantry School Dramatic club for the season 1931-32 will be given tonight at the main theatre, when the three act farce "Cradle Snatchers" is presented to members of the garrison. Under the direction of Major H. B. Lewis, retiring president of the dramatic club, the final show of the school year will play to a capacity house.

"Cradle Snatchers" is one of the funniest comedies on the stage, and ran to record houses for several years. The cast has been drilling long and hard, and promises an excellent performance. Mrs. H. B. Lewis, Mrs. Harry Reeder and Mrs. T. S. Arms play the roles of the three wives, Susan Martin, Kitty Ladd and Ethel Drake. The three husbands are played by Col. M. C. Stayer, Major S. A. White and Major Emil Leard. The three college boys are portrayed by Lieut. Robert Nourse, Lieut. B. M. Greeley and Lieut. James Thompson. The three flappers are played by Mrs. James Thompson, Mrs. E. C. Lanham and Miss Landon Reed. Mrs. James Bowen plays the part of Anne Hall, niece of Kitty Ladd, and Lieut. R. B. Hubard appears as the butler.

Admission to the performance is by membership ticket in the Infantry School Dramtic Club, but for those who are not members, tickets may be purchased at the theatre. Doors open at 8:25 p. m., and the curtain will rise promptly at 8:45. Everyone is cordially welcomed to attend the performance.

New Golf Course To Be Formally Opened Saturday May 14th

The new golf course of the Officers' Club will be formally opened next Saturday, May 14th at 1:00 p. m. Short dedicatory exercises will precede the start of play, but no play will be allowed at any time prior to the opening of the course. Ladies of Benning have been invited to attend the ceremony and to play during the afternoon; no charge will be made. Begining Sunday morning, May 15, however, the usual rules governing days ladies may play will again become operative on the new course.

The lower nine holes which are in use now will be maintained and there will be no restrictions as to hours or days ladies may play on this nine.

The Club Championship will be played this year as follows: 36 holes qualification play on Saturday, May 21st. Any officer who is not able to play the full thirty-six rounds on the Saturday specified, may play eighteen on the preceding Wednesday and eighteen on Saturday but all thirty-six qualifying holes must be completed by Saturday night, May 21st. On Sunday, May 22nd, the first elimination round of 18 holes; on Saturday, May 28th the second elimination round of 18 holes on Sunday May 29th, the semi-finals and on Monday, May 30 the finals. Players will be divided into flights of 16 each.

GLEE CLUB OFFICIALS FOR NEXT YEAR ELECTED

Officers of the Glee Club who were elected for the next year at the election last Monday are as follows:

President ------ Major E. W. Leard
Vice-President ---- Mrs. J. J. Albright
Secretary --------- Lt. J. E. Raymond
Treasurer --- Chaplain W. T. Howard
Librettist ---------- Mrs. N. D. Cota

Ceremony Held at Quarters Sunday

Ceremonial recognition of the promotion of the commandant of The Infantry School to the grade of Major General was made on Monday morning, May 2nd, when troops, staff officers and friends assembled at Fort Benning to greet Major General Campbell King and to congratulate him upon his promotion to his new rank, whcih became effective, officially, on May 1st.

The troop formation, which was unique in itself, took place on the grounds of the commandant's quarters. Representative groups of all organizations of Fort Benning were formed in line on each side of the driveway leading from the commandant's quarters to garrison headquarters. Colors of the units were grouped together, and the bands of the 24th and 29th Infantry regiments were combined at one end of the line, faceing the quarters of the commandant. Upon General King's appearance in the doorway, the first gun of the salute in honor of his new rank was fired, the troops presented arms and the two bands sounded flourishes and ruffles and played "Hail to the Chief". General King, accompanied by Colonel George V. Baltzell and Lieutenant Malin Craig, aide, then passed between the lines of troops and proceeded to post headquarters, where the commandant's staff and other officers of the garrison, in formation on the lawn before the building, were awaiting him. Here Colonel Baltzell made a brief congratulatory address on behalf of the assemblage, in which he expressed the personal and official gratification and pride of the members of the garrison upon the promotion of their commandant.

General King, in response, thanked the officers for their demonstration of interest and esteem. In the course of his talk he pointed out that the honor which had just come to him might easily be within the reach of every officer and that the slowness of promotion should not deter them from aspiring to the higher grades. He alluded, in illustration, to his own career and mentioned particularly his prospects for promotion as they appeared shortly before the World War. At this time he was a Captain and, he stated, is appeared that, in the normal course of events, he would retire in the grade of Major. In closing his remarks he thanked the officers for their loyal support and the efficiency with which they executed their duties. This latter, he said, was largely responsible for the advancement which had been given him by the War Department.

Another and less formal ceremony took place in the commandant's office, where members of his staff and some of the higher officers of the garrison assembled to express their congratulations personally. Colonel Baltzell, acting as spokesman for this group, first made a short talk in which he conveyed the sentiments of these officers, who are daily in close contact with the commandant. At the conclusion of his talk he presented General King with a set of silver stars, the gift of the headquarters staff.

GENERAL KING PROMOTED

General King, in acknowledging the gift and in response to Colonel Baltzell, paid high tribute to his staff, whose members, he said, were in large measure responsible for his own success and that of The Infantry School.

Major General Campbell King will continue in command of The Infantry School, being the first officer of that rank to be designated by the War Department as its permanent commander.

Girl Scout Notes

DAFFODIL TROOP

A delightful meeting, April 29, was planned by two members of the troop. The girls took their supper down to the Upatoi, where they had a grand time wading. After supper, the Scouts hiked back to the cabin, holding their goodnight circle on the way home.

BASEBALL

Because it rained Saturday, the picnic the Cardinals planned had to be cancelled. Instead, the morning was spent playing baseball in the gymnasium, with Mrs. Brown as overseer, and Betty Bishop "umpiring." It was so much fun, the enthusiasts plan to do it often.

GIRL SCOUT COUNCIL

Monday morning the Council met. Mrs. Matchett gave a report of the regional conference she attended in Miami, and Mrs. Brown of the local one she went to at Macon. The state of the treasury was reported by Mrs. Rose. The women set the date for the Court of Awards for May 27.

CARDINAL TROOP

Mrs. Brown made a number of announcements at the opening of the meeting: the date of the Court of Awards; new examiners for badges; an overnight hike for both Troops to the Academic Camp, May 13; a picnic and swim for the Cardinals this Saturday.

Each girl was asked to list her badges to be ordered for the coming ceremony.

While Mrs. Brown and Miss Stilwell helped the girls working for Second Class for the next Court, the others played rather rowdy baseball outside.

Before the good-night flag ceremony and song, the ushers for the Dramatic Club performance of the sixth and seventh were chosen. Friday,

Extensive Plans Made for Show

Columbus is making extensive preparations for the fourth annual Flower Show, which promises to be the largest and most beautiful in its history. Fourteen clubs will participate, including Charter, Fort Benning, Perennial, St. Elmo, Rose Hill, Cherokee, House and Garden, Wynnton, Marguerite, Beautification, Multiflora, Camellia, Rainbow, and Rosemont.

All the clubs, with the exception of the Rainbow of Phenix City and the Rosemont, just organized will sponsor a Glimpse and also a Shadow Box, and will display their scrapbooks.

During the past week, various committees have met, and special invitations, automobile tags, club ribbons, and classification cards have been distributed. Each garden club member has been requested to invite a guest, and all garden lovers are urged to do likewise, in this manner increasing the attendance. As to the ribbons, each club has a different color, and the members are requested to wear them duringthe days of the show.

AWARDS

First award will be a blue ribbon counting two points; second, will be a red ribbon; third, a white ribbon for honorable mention.

The Sweepstakes prize will be awarded to the exhibitor scoring the greatest number of points in the Show. This to be a handsome iron bench. A purple ribbon will be awarded for the most outstanding individual exhibit. This to be a pan of Grecian roses.

A prize will be given to the individual entering the greatest number of exhibits.

The Classification cards is divided into eight classes, and includes perennals, Mixed Flowers, Bulbs, and Tuberous Plants, Flower Arrangement, Miscellaneous, Potted Plants, Roses, Photographs of spots around Columbus, and Garden Scrapbooks.

There will be a free Garden Tour to which all visitors and their hostesses are invited, this to be under the direction of Mrs. Calvin Des Portes. Cars will assemble at First Baptist Church. The tour to begin at 11 o'clock, May 11th.

Mrs. James W. Woodruff is general chairman of the Flower Show, and chairman of other committees, which include a representative from each club participating includes:

Preparation of Building—Mrs. A. O. Blackmar, Jr. (Charter).

MARGUERITE—Miss Irene Davis, of Thomasville, guest of Mrs. Lawrence Murray, president of the club. Miss Davis is president of the Thomasville Garden Club.

BEAUTIFICATION—A. J. Nitzcheke, Thomaston, expert on Roses.

MULTIFLORA—Miss Lurline Collier, state Agricultural College, Athens.

CAMELLIA—A. E. Wachendorff, florist, Atlanta.

Boy Scouts

We have a story to-day about some great big smart scouts who went on a hike out to Jeff's Hole. They were Donald Noble Leary, Farrar Gee, Jr., Forrest Harding, Jr., and Samuel Augustus White, Jr. Of course, they knew it wasn't going to rain and it seemed so until 8:00 o'clock the next morning. The pup tent was a little crowded but they got along all right. The tent leaked but by using their scout knowledge they fixed this. After eating soup for breakfast they came home on a running board of a car.

On Friday we had our regular meeting down at the scout cabin. Present: 28 boy scouts, 1 official and 1 visitor. We played capture the flag and baseball. Major Arms announced about the children's horse show. The scouts hope to take a big part in this. Then we gave the scout laws and adjourned to meet next Friday.

The New Books

AMERICA FACES THE FUTURE
By C. A. BEARD

About twenty authors participate in this symposium on "the new intellectual and moral climate" and on "blue-prints for a planned economy." Among them are Nicholas Murray Butler, William Trufant Foster, Waddill Catchings, Edward Angly, Charles R. Walker, Andre Maurois, James Truslow Adams, Gerard Swope, John T. Flynn, William C. Ewing, Walter B. Pitkin, Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt Governor Philip F. LaFollette, and the editor. Most of their papers had appeared in one magazine or another before. They vary greatly in merit, from the highly dubious chapter on "The Stabilization of Industry," by Mr. Swope, to the able discussion of "The Monetary Factor in Business Depression," by Dr. Ewing. The book as a whole is disappointing, and leaves a great deal to be desired. It is full of confused and uninformed thinking, and there are pages of sheer ignorance and blah. Dr. Beard's introductory chapter on "Challenges to the Social Order" is hardly illuminating, and his running comments could be better informed and far more helpful.

GUNBOTHAM'S SCHOOL DAZE

By J. L. G.

'Twas a beautiful spring evening, an occasional star was shining in the sky, and all was quiet in the wilds of the Benning campus. Suddenly the crunch-crunch of field boots on the red clay broke upon the still of the night. A light flashed on and off, evidently aiding and augmenting the above mentioned stars. Suddenly a deep, authoritative voice boomed out. "Put out those lights." Tito Teller Muscatelli was not to be fooled. "Nertz" replied brother Muck. "I said to put out those lights." The voice was more insistent. Tito was not to be taken in by an old gag like that. "I said Nertz," said he, and flashed his light around the beautiful clay and pine scenery. "Hey, Muscalaley, said Chesty Puller, "That's Major Arms." But our hero recognized the disguised voice of Selman, and wouldn't bite. "The nertz still goes," yelled he. Suddenly the trail dipped and a group was disclosed in some old draws. "Who was yelling at me to put out my light?" asked Diogenes. "Where's Selman?" "I told you to, Mr. Muscatelli." The deep voice boomed out. It was Major Arms.

Fire and Wisecracker McHugh is a big game hunter of no mean ability. However he has more success than discrimination. Game Warden Grace has a warrant out for Mac. It seems that while it is open season on cops, the bag limit is one, and McSlug got two. And the handsome McHugh nose is beautifully plastered with tape and bandage.

Lew Bell receives commendation for his unintentional wisecrack during the fifteen minute talk. Lew was discussing care of the feet on the march, and he was handling the subject in a very serious manner. He had talked about the feet for several minutes, when he said, "Next to the feet, we shall consider the socks." Bim Carne was almost awakened by the ensuing laughter.

The planned race between Gab Gab Rudolph's rabbit and Gunbotham's terrapin has been postponed due to the fact that the big brown bunny, named "Lillyhoo Zilch," broke training the other night when Rudy took him on a party. Gunbotham's champion, "Mr. Terrence Pin" (Terry for short) is quite chagrined, and goes into seclusion if you even mention the affair.

The Post kids have every interesting little game that they all seem to enjoy. It is simple in its execution, ingenious in its plan, and lethal in its effect. Gunbotham was up in Rainbow Row the other day, and he saw some of these embryonic gangsters amusing themselves. They formed a long single line. One boy stood beside the line with a sling shot in his hands. He would yell "Go!" and the leading boy would run as fast as he could to try to get behind a large tree some twenty yards away. The shooter would count up to ten as rapidly as possible, then shoot a rock at the runner. Some of them were very good shots. Ever since we've been very polite and careful when we drive through "Hue Avenue."

So many people have asked us about the Razor Blade Sharpening that we are repeating the method. This is a good gag to know, because it really works and most people believe that the edge is better than that obtained by using a mechanical sharpener. The process is simple. You first take a glass—any kind or size will do. Fill it with water, then empty the glass, leaving only that moisture which remains in the glass. Place the razor blade against the inside ofthe glass, and pressing against it with the forefinger, move it back and forth against the glass. Turn the blade over and repeat the procedure. The blade is now very sharp. If you don't believe it, try it once.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

TULARAEMIA

Rabbit fever in recent years has become of increasing importance in all sections of this country. While we think of the wild rabbit as the usual victim of this disease it is well to remember that tularaemia can be spread by means of ticks or fleas to other species of animals. Recently the disease has been discovered as the cause of death of many sage hens and for several years it has been suspected that quail and other game birds have been practically wiped out in certain sections by this disease.

This disease is very contagious to man. Anyone handling animals or birds suffering from tularaemia may conrtact the disease.

In man the vast majority of cases of tularaemia have been reported in those who have handled or dressed wild rabbits. The disease usually starts with a sore on the fingers or hand which is soon followed by an enlargement of the glands under the arm and fever which disables for weeks in those who recover. Death is the all too common result.

A word of warning to the keepers of rabbits. Within the past two weeks tularaemia has been detected at Fort Benning in a pen of domesticated rabbits.

This is a most unusual happening. All previous reports of this disease outside the laboratory have been almost wholly confined to the wild variety. A radical effort to confine the disease at its starting points in Fort Benning has been attempted and it is thought that there may be no further spread to other domesticated rabbits on the post.

However all persons in this vicinity who keep rabbits should be constantly on the lookout for the disease.

Do not handle dead animals except with rubber gloves.

Report your cases—it is only in this way that you can prevent the spread of the disease.

National Guard Notes

Whether the class dance was a success or not is a matter of history. Judging from the comments received everybody was very well pleased and had a good time. Members of the class and their guests were introduced by Maj. Claudius M. Easley. The receiving line was composed of General and Mrs. Campbell King, Colonel and Mrs. George C.Marshall, Capt.P. A Buttrick, Mrs. Claudius M. Easley, Lieut. and Mrs. Donald W. Brann, Captain and Mrs. Alvie M. Merrill, Captain and Mrs. Rene M. Pinetl, Miss Miriam Denson and Capt. Casper Franz. Biglerville Hall was beautifully, appropriately and artistically decorated by Capt. Eduardo Mendez Bas. Flags from several States and Porto Rico graced the ball room and brought forth much comment. The dance committee was composed of Lieut. Granger G. Sutton, chairman, Lieut. John F. Phelan, Capt. Eduardo Mendez Bas, Lieut. James H. Johnson, Jr., Capt. James K. Bryan and a subcommittee of nine members of the class. Five hundred attended the reception and dance.

Capt. Chester J. Kowalski has been confined to the hospital a few days. His tonsils have been giving him some trouble. It is expected that he will be back on duty soon.

The committee appointed by President Paul A. Buttrick to advise the class of the feasibility of having a stag party has made its report. The committee is composed of Capt. Daniel G. O'Connell, chairman, Jerome B. Jones and Capt. Charles H. Andrews. The class decided to have the party at the Ralston on Saturday, May 21. See any member of the committee for further details.

Capt. William A. Carr is taking orders for class rings. If you desire to get one see the captain or any member of the committee.

Everybody breathed a sigh of relief when the examination on machine guns was returned.

Officers are now counting the days remaining of their tour of duty. Just a few more short weeks and we will be homeward bound.

The tent area was almost deserted Tuesday night. Several went to the fight in the stadium while others did TOG with Captain Burton L. Lucas in AR 4.

Tactics is the order of the day at present with maneuvers to follow soon.

Capt. Ezra S. Settle has been entertaining Capt. Gibson and Capt. Spencer who are here on official business.

Miss Beatrice Ferrell was the guest of Lieut. Perry Gwaltney at dinner in Biglerville last Saturday.

Mrs. James K. Bryan, wife of Captain Bryan assisted the dance committee in making plans for the dance and reception. Mrs. Bryan and her son frequently dine at Biglerville.

The Thanatopsis Club, parent organization, and the Junior League, big brother, have another member of the family. The Lanham Charity Organization is the young brother, and it is known socially as the "Debutantes". Brother Lanham is a stockholder in the same Crying Towel Corporation that Major Leard presidents and Major Harding subsidizes. A round-robin inter-club gathering might be arranged, but we are afraid that it wouldn't be a very good idea for the youngest member of the family to usurp the social and financial standing of the older members. Of course, this would be a matter for lengthy debate.

To "Bugs" Raymond, musician, actor and dit-dah daddy, and to "Spud" Murphy, also musician, actor, and wiry guy, our apologies. We accused "Bugs" of being the local Graham MacNamee who held forth at the Horse Show broadcasting Station, but it was the scandinavian son of Mr. Murphy. We understand that he was commended by four generals for his work, even if he did hurt the feelings of that gentle, kindly, horse named "Easy".

ON THE TRAIL OF A SCENT

Colonel Walter Reed, besides being famous as a producer of a couple of highly successful operettas, is also known in these parts as a skilled investigator. In his official capacity of Post Inspector it sometimes becomes his duty to look into malodorous conditions and locate the cause. Perhaps that is why Mine Host Dowdall thought of him when the olfactory nerves of Officers' Club employees and patrons began to register evidence that something was rotten in Denmark. Somewhere in the wall between the lobby and the reading room a tragedy had occurred and the case required the services of a high powered expert if the next Thursday night supper dance were to be a success. Colonel Reed, being both president of the club and official uncoverer of unsavory situations, was unquestionably the logical person to call into consultation.

The Colonel proceeded to go about finding out the cause of the stench in his customary thorough manner. Carpenters were called in and a section of wall removed. That this was a step in the right direction was proved by a sharp increase in the offensiveness of the odor when the beaver board came off. At this stage some one suggested that the wrecking crew send to the Chemical Warfare Service for gas masks but Colonel Reed was for direct action. Accordingly a caddy was requisitioned from the golf club and offered one large undepreciated American dollar to climb up between the walls and follow the stench to its source. A rope was attached to his leg and an impromptu tug of war team was organized to handle the other end of it. Presumably this precaution was taken lest the caddy get stuck between the wall and perish, which would only make matters worse by the date for the next supper dance.

The caddy disappeared and for some moments the President of the Club, Mine Host Dowdall and the growing conclave of interested spectators waited with baited breath. Finally there issued from between the walls a sepulchra cry of triumph and a few minutes later the caddy emerged holding aloft by the tail a dead cat.

What is the point of this story? To be perfectly frank, we aren't sure that it has any unless it be to illustrate to what extent the highest official of the Club is ready to go in the inerest of the members. Or, come to think of it, since Colonel Reed is the Post Inspector, it might be designed to warn those who have family skeltons to bury them deep.

PATRICK AND MURPHY CASH PORTALS

The spring crop of terrain exercises, maneuvers, etc., resulted in the automatic election of two prominent citizens to the exclusive Explorer's Club. Major Patrick and Lieutenant Murphy are the gentlemen upon whom this coveted distinction has been conferred. Both are members of the versatile Second Section which habitually carries off the honors in night rides, flag races and other outdoor sports in which an intimate knowledge of Benning's ninety-seven thousand acres is essential to success.

The two newest explorers are characteristically reticent about their achievement. Indeed both have been so reluctant to talk about it that The Flare has been hard put to get at the facts. Fortunately, however, our undercover agents are on the job and we have managed to collect enough evidence to convince Professor McCunniff, the President of the Explorer's Club, that the two communication experts have all the qualifications for membership.

Briefly stated the facts are as follows:

The Major and the Lieutenant, while establishing an axis of communication or some other technical gadget strayed off of the beaten track early one afternoon and came out at Eelbeck at 8 PM. Just how much and what part of Darkest Benning the intrepid explorers investigated in the interim will never be definitely known since both of them are quite vague as to their location at any given time during the afternoon and evening. We have reason to believe, however, that they covered plenty of territory. Their exhausted state upon returning to civilization—if you call Eelbeck civilization—is proof of that.

An interesting sidelight upon this episode is that Major Patrick's path-finding adventure caused him to get a total absence on an important appointment with the Director of the Dramatic Club. He was to meet her at 5 PM at one of the Electric City's numerous beauty shoppes and his failure to appear made it necessary for the lady to call on downtown friends to get her back to the post. We trust, however, that Pat's election to the Explorer's Club will compensate Mrs. Patrick for the inconvenience caused by her husband's unpremeditated voyage of discovery.

TRIBULATIONS OF A BON VIVANT

Captain Paul Buttrick, President of the National Guard and Reserve Officers' Class, came to Benning with two objects in view. The first, of course, was to increase his military knowledge and the second was to reduce. He is finding the first a comparatively simple process. Not so the second.

The genial captain first tried the Biglerville mess, but soon became convinced that the mess officer was party to a conspiracy to boost the business of the Associated Military Stores. In the short space of three weeks, the thrice daily issue of calories necessitated two emergency sartorial operations on the Captain's breeches for stricture of the waist line.

Realizing that this was making progress in the wrong direction the Captain renounced the table d'hote supply arrangement of Biglerville for the a la carte service at the Dowdall Tavern. Here for several days he rigidly adhered to a diet recommended by Colonel Stayer, consisting of lettuce, salad, spinach, dry toast and similar substitutes for real food. It was hard sledding, however, for the sight of Chief Clark's tempting dishes imposed upon the wavering Captain the cruel and unusual punishment which the High Gods of Olympus inflicted upon the unpious Tantalus. Then he began to slip and Mine Host Dowdall rubbed his hands in true inkeeper style as he watched his guest carry daily increasing quantities of Class I supplies from the counter to his favorite table behind the screen.

The Flare

Came a day when the Captain was particularly hungry and the luncheon was especially alluring. Slyly, after the manner of the family cat with designs on the cream pitcher, the famishing soldier moved along the counter and filled his tray with the best that the Club had to offer in the way of rich, starchy and forbidden food. Liver and bacon, creamed onions and mashed potatoes constituted the regular luncheon and to this our hero added two large hot rolls with a double ration of butter for each, a large glass of buttermilk and a slice of pie a la mode. Then he turned out of the line and ran full into Colonel Stayer, his dietetic advisor.

Chagrined and crestfallen, Captain Buttrick stodo holding the tray while the food dictator imposed his verdict. Pointing in turn to each and every one of the articles on the tray, the latter repeated the relentless formula "Put that back; put that back; put that back."

When the last "Put that back" had been uttered, the starving Captain sorrowfully turned in his laden tray and received in return a bowl of thin soup, a short ration of string beans and a cup of black coffee.

RANDOM REMARKS

Members of the Advanced Class who are curious about their marks on the written monograph are advised that they will probably know the worst by the Ides of May.

And speaking of monographs, we are informed by Colonel Stayer, Chief of the Versatile Second Section and prospective Assistant Commandant at Carlisle, that one of his duties at his new station will be to write a monograph a month. The line of Advance Class sympathizers forms on the right.

The faculty is fast becoming socially conscious. We noted a large turnout for the National Guard and Reserve Class dance. Incidentally, that was a good party and the committee is to be congratulated on staging a successful affair.

Last week The Flare told how Lieutenant Pilet tried to prevent Mrs. King from occupying the place set aside for the wife of the Commanding General at reviews. Since then one of the Sheriff's M. Ps. tried to chase her off the Commandant's lawn. If this sort of thing keeps up, Mrs. King will leave to dye her hair gray. The Shreiff's henchmen just refuse to believe that she is the wife of a Major General.

Two wekes ago Lieutenant Jake Moon, popular riding instructor and talented troubadour, came in to our tum to check out on his way to the Philippines where he is slated to be some sort of an aide to the Governor General. Perhaps the visit was in the nature of insurance against being included in any derogatory remarks we might have to make about the horsey set, but we prefer to take it as a compliment. What we started out to say, however, is that Jake and Mrs. Moon will be greatly missed in horse, musical and social circles.

On the occasion of a recent birthday anniversary, Mrs. A. S. Tucker received from Major Tucker a handsomely bound copy of Liddell-Hart's book, "Foch, The Man of Orleans." This appropriate gift promptly solved the always perplexing problem of what to give one's husband. When Tuck's birthday rolls around, he will receive a de luxe edition of the "Boston Cook Book."

JUST LIKE THE ROYAL MOUNTED

Major Lloyd Cooke happened out of his front door just in time to see an M. P. swoop down and carry off his dog which was sleeping peacefully in the yard.

"Here, where are you going with my dog?" cried the Major.

"I got orders to get two dogs that were running loose on the Commanding General's lawn," explained the minion of the law. "One was all I could find there and I gotta have two."

Warrant Officer Floyd Is Retired

Announcement of the retirement of Warrant Officer John M. Floyd, who for the past eleven years has been chief clerk in the ordnance office at Fort Benning, is contained in recent War Department orders received at the post. Mr. Floyd's active career of thirty years service officially terminated on April 30th.

Warrant Officer Floyd was born at Blackshear, Georgia on May 30, 1882. He enlisted on February 8, 1901, in Battery I, 4th Artillery at Fort Terry, New York, where he served as private, corporal and sergeant. He reenlisted in the 116th Coast Artillery Compnay at Fort Screven, George, on Nov. 8, 1907, where he served as private, corporal, sergeant, and quartermaster sergeant. In February, 1909, he was transferred to the 55th Coast Artillery Company and went with that organization to the Philippine Islands and served as private, corporal, sergeant and first sergeant. He went with the same organization to Fort Dupont, Delaware, in May, 1911.

He was appointed ordnance sergeant in April, 1912, and went to duty at Fort Caswell, North Carolina. On July 4, 1916, he went to duty on the Mexican border at Fort Bliss, Texas. He sailed for France from Fort Standish, Massachusetts in July 1917. He was commissioned as a First Lieutenant in the Ordnance Department on November 8, 1917, and served at the Ordnance Advance Depot Number One located near Gendrecourt, France. Later in the same month he went to duty as Ordnance Officer at the Army School located at Langres. In April, 1919, he was promoted to the grade of Captain. He served at Langres until he went to Le Mans as Ordnance Officer of the inter-allied rifle matches, in April, 1919. He returned from France in August, 1919. In 1920 he was appointed warrant officer. Since January 10, 1921, he has served as Chief Clerk of the Ordnance Office at Fort Benning.

Mr. Floyd is a member of Fort Benning Masonic Lodge and the Scottish Rite Lodge of Columbus. He is commander of the Winfield S. Schley Camp of Spanish American War Veterans, and also Past Commander of the Department of Georgia, Spanish American War Veterans. He is Past Vice-President of the Fort Benning Sojourners. He is also Post President of the Fort Benning Warrant Officers' Association and a member of the Reserve Officers' Association.

Master Sergeant Walter Radler, 17th Ordnance Company, who also retired on April 30th after 30 years service, was joint guest with Mr. Floyd at a festival farewell dinner given by the ordnance personnel of Fort Benning, on Friday evening in the mess hall of the 17th Ordance Company. Nearly a hundred friends of the two retiring soldiers were present. After the banquet each was presented with a gold watch as a token of the esteem of their comrades. Captain John Huling made the presentation to Mr. Floyd on behalf of the 72nd Ordnance Company, and Captain Arthur H. Luse presented the gift from the 17th Ordnance Company to Sergeant Rader.

Mr. Floyd was also the recipient of a farewell gift from the members of the 2nd Battalion, 1st Tank Regiment. Major Allen F. Kingman, commander of the tank battalion, made the presentation.

Staff Sergeant Charles S. Kennedy, a graduate of the Ordnance Sergeant's Course at the Ordnance Field Service School, who has been on duty at Fort Benning since September, 1930, has been appointed chief clerk to succeed Warrant Officer Floyd.

Girl Scout Notes

Eleanor Bishop, Ruth O'Neal, Betty Bishop, and Anne Brown ushered. Elizabeth Ohme, Ann Yancey, Winifred Stilwell, and Mary Jane Davidson were picked for Saturday. The Troop is sorry that this is the last play of the year, for they have enjoyed "ushing" as well as the presentations.

MERIT BADGES

With the closing of Scouting, till September or later, so near, everyone is working furiously at badges of some sort. Right now the following have just been completed or in session. Health Winner, by Major White; First Aid, under Lt. Baird; Home Nurse, with Mrs. Banton, and Miss Hageman; Laundress, under Miss Huling; and mapping for First Class, which Col. Stilwell is giving this Sunday.

We are greatly obliged to these people.

P.S. May 27, which comes on a Friday, is the date of the Girl Scout Court of Awards. Put a ring around it on your calendar, and don't let anything stop you from coming!

RALLY AROUND THE FLAG, BOYS!

Which, Flag? As we have it now there will be about a hundred flags scattered around the reservation next Thursday, Friday and Saturday; so you can take your choice. Company "E" will probably wave the most flags having had previous experience last year, representing the "enemy" for the Fourth Corps Area and giving the troops "something to shoot at". We recommend that Company "E" plain crossed flags (similar to the Signal Corps) on their Tanks.

In addition to waving beaucoup flags we are to feed a "skeleton squad" (?) of around 500 students etc. from the school. Last year this was done at one point on the reservation but this year we're going to have to move around every day and it is rumored some several thousand of our 97,000 acres will be involved in the move.

We wish at this time to tell all our pals who have been unfortunate and are sick in the hospital, that we have missed them a lot and hope that they will recover soon. Remember fellows, spring is here; so you better get well quick and get out and enjoy yourselves.

At last the big love team of Gunter and Younts has started booking dates and they say the way future dates have been coming in, the boys hardly know which end they are standing on. Their first big opening date came off in the city of Auburn, Alabama last Sunday night and was it a big success? Well, just ask the boys; we know they will be just too glad to tell you all about it.

Sergeant "Bruvver" Sample can boast of having written the latest Fort Benning Song Hit—"Dishes, Oh Dishes! Please Let Me Carry You Away." Better brighten up the memory "Bruvver", who knows what might happen.

Congratulations to our baseball team for the fine showing that they made in winning from F-1. It's great work fellows, keep it up and that 1931 baseball championship will be ours.

"May 8th Is Mother's Day"—Boys it is but a week away, so let's sit down and write Mother a nice long letter before it gets to late. Remember every mother expects a letter from her boy on this day, so let's try to make her happy: She is the one soul that never forgets, so let's not forget her.

COMPANY "F-1"

The Company congratulates Hayes upon his having been appointed Corporal. Corporal Hayes was appointed vice Corporal Gustafson who has been on detached service at the Finance School in Washington since October, 1931, and is now transferred to that branch of the service. The Company feels the loss of a man of Corporal Gustafson's caliber but realizes that he may have greatly benefited himself by his transfer. Rewards of merit come to those who work deligently to the best of their abilities.

83RD F.A.

Major General Harry G. Bishop, while on a tour around the Fourth Corps Area to talk over Field Artillery matters arrived at Fort Benning early Monday morning and left for Auburn, Alabama Tuesday afternoon. At ten o'clock Monday morning he inspected the 83rd Field Artillery, at twelve thirty he had lunch at the Artillery Officers' Mess with all the officers of the battalion. Monday afternoon and Tuesday morning he looked over the post and conferred with several other commanders including Brig. General McCloskey commanding officer of Fort Bragg, who now is commander of the Fourth Corps Area Maneuver Camp here.

The third Chief of Field Artillery, Major General Harry G. Bishop was born in Grand Rapids, Michigan November 22, 1874, and appointed to the Military Academy from Indiana. Upon graduation in 1897 he was commissioned Second Lieutenant of Infantry. Less than a year later he was transferred to the 6th Artillery and served at Fort McHenry, Maryland, Washington, D. C. and Fort Conwell, North Carolina. In April 1899 he sailed for the Philippines and in the same year was promoted to First Lieutenant.

General Bishop was made Captain in 1901. In 1911 he graduated from the School of the Line at Fort Leavenworth and the next year he graduated from the Army Staff College.

From 1912 to 1916 he served as Major mostly at Fort Sill with the old Fifth Field Artillery. He was made Lieutenant Colonel in 1916 and in November of that year, he almost lost his life while at the Signal Corps Aviation School at San Diego, as a result of a forced landing in a remote desert region of Mexico.

In 1917 he received his Colonelcy and on June 26, 1918 he became Brigadier General, National Army with command of the 159th Field Artillery Brigade at Camp Taylor.

In August 1918, he went to France and returned in June 1919 to assist in the reorganization and opening of the Army War College.

In August 1922 he again went to the Philippines for three years and became Chief of Staff of that department. In 1927 he went to Hawaii where he remained until he was selected Chief of Field Artillery for a period of four years beginning March 10, 1930.

General Bishop has ever been an ardent student of all Field Artillery activities. He is an extremely progressive, vigorous and resourceful man with a cheerful and genial disposition and throughout his long career in the Army has held many positions of high importance and responsibility. Nobody knows the Field Artillery better than he, nor is better qualified to direct the destinies of the Field Artillery arm.

By the direction of the President, the distinguished service medal was awarded to Harry G. Bishop, brigadier general, United States Army, for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service. While in command of the 3d Field Artillery Brigade, during the battle of the Argonne-Meuse, and in the subsequent advance to Sedan, by his skill and able leadership, he rendered exceptionally valuable services.

"Sore Foot" Hodges was out on the Benning Highway waiting for a bus. On this partciular morning there was two busses. The first was loaded with whites and the second was for the negroes. The bus driver in the first bus started to pass Hodges up for the other driver to pick him up. On second thought the driver stopped some distance from him. Hodges came limping and demanded why the driver had not stopped sooner. The driver very gently explained the reason to him. Namely: He thought Hodges to be colored. Maybe Lee should shave more often to avoid similar mistakes in the future.

We intend to put in our application for an amateur detective. No, nobody stole our gal, but we are on the trail of an old paper sack. See Swell for particulars.

Corporal Goodwyn is the best. He can't play the field so Corp. Day goes out to patrol the right field garden. Yes, in his bare feet. Day says he always likes to go that way as it is them he feels at home.

Looks like we are having a little trouble getting into the winning column but the least can be said that we are good losers.

HEADQUARTERS COMPANY

We would like to call the attention of the fair sex to the fact that this is leap year. There are at present two eligible, young, dashing Bachelor Staff Sergeants running at large. This is the month of June—why not now? How about it S. B. (sonny boy)

Staff Sergeant Ransom has received the Purple Heart Medal and it is rumored that it will be presented formally to him at an early date.

It seems as if the regiment is preparing for another tennis tournament. We think that a better showing will be made this year, as some younger and better material has been added to the regiment; for instance Private Michem, Company "F," the champion of the 25th Infantry. He has not reported to the courts as yet, but, has been seen watching the play from the sidelines—a favorable sign. And by the way S. B. (sonny boy) looks on occasionally.

Corporal Vontress has been seen lately in the dugout during the regimental games. He will be interviewed and a report made on a later date.

Buck's and Beat-House are sure setting a pose for a Cpl. of Co. "E." The rumors are out Lord Perry, Buck's, and Meat-House are ordering themselves Tuxedo Suits, well of all reports three or four Tux's would not look bad where one was seen at a house. The Johnson Twins were seen by a Cpl. of Co. "E."

COMPANY "C"

The personnel of Company "C," required to fire the pistol, finished on May 2nd. The result of the firing were satisfactory—all men having qualified.

Privates Shivers and Franklin are still in the hospital, and at this time it is assumed that they are steadily improving in health. We welcome their presence in the company upon their release from the hospital.

After a steady barrage of paint in and around the company, one can now see the pleasing results of the skill of Corporal Hilson and Private Blockman, as brush wielders.

Pvt. 1cl. Thomas Members, our local scribe and philosopher, will soon receive his "Sheep-skin," as an award for three years of faithful service in the company. He is contemplating taking advantage of a furlough, for the purpose of travel and recreation—the latter first. Good

AT THE GRAND

SATURDAY, SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Presenting: "THE WORLD AND THE FLESH," with George Bancroft and Miriam Hopkins. Ruthless Red ruffian. Yesterday a serf, a slave. Today, master of his masters; possessor of his heart's desire. Yes, yesterday, a groveling stoker of the blackgang; today, the master drunk with power. Yesterday, a man of the gutter; today, ruler of all that he surveys.

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Presenting: "NO ONE MAN," with Carole Lombard, Ricardo Cortez, Paul Lukas and Juliette Compton (formerly of Columbus) in Rupert Hughes' best-seller novel adapted to the screen. Men at her feet yet where is the one great, god-like man to hold the heart of this dazzling, dangerous daughter of the rich. Dangerous to men. A flaming, flaunting, beautiful woman they cannot leave alone. One man thinks he holds her—does he? You'll never know until the last flaming scene in this fiery drama is told on the screen.

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY: Presenting: "DISORDERLY CONDUCT," with Sally Eilers, Spencer Tracy and El Brendel. Stock brokers bored her but law breakers thrilled her. A debutante from the inner circle who tried to live outside the law. She found the rogue's gallery more exciting than Who's Who. She had money. She had looks. And she had to have thrills. She got them and got away with them, until she met a cop who knew how to keep his mind on duty and off women.

AT THE ROYAL

(Beginning with Midnight show, Saturday, 11:15 P. M.)

SUNDAY, MONDAY AND TUESDAY: Presenting, "THE WET PARADE", with Dorothy Jordan, Lewis Stone and a strong supporting cast. Sweethearts are torn apart by it. Mothers guard their sons from it. Fathers warn their daughters against it. It touches you and you and you. So great its theme, so mighty its romance, it is twice the length of the usual picture. Do you ever applaud a picture? You'll cheer this one.

AT THE RIALTO

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY, May 6th and 7th: Presenting: the sixth of the popular "Bill and Andy" series, "TEXAS PIONEERS", supporting Bill Cody and Andy Shuford are Leroy Mason, Sheila Manners, Harry Allen, John Elliott and Chief Standing Bear. A dandy Westerner.

SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Presenting, "TRADER HORN", with Harry Carey, Edwina Booth, Duncan Renaldo, Mutia Omoolu and Olive Golden. She had once ordered him killed. The cruelest woman in all Africa—white Goddess of the savage Isorgi. She ordered him sacrificed in wild "juju" rites—and then the strangest romance in the world sweeps through this picture of 1,000 new thrills.

TUESDAY: Presenting, "THE PASSIONATE PLUMBER", with Buster Keaton. Everybody almost passes out whenever Buster is heard and seen and—but why go on. Nuf sed.

WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY: Presenting, "THE BROKEN WING", with Leo Carrillo, Lupe Velez and Melvyn Douglas. Truly a good picture and one that will hold your interest throughout.

The amazing events which followed immediately the assassination of Czar Nicholas and the evacuation of Russia's royal palaces by noblemen and aristocrats were screened today to help make a talking picture more authentic.

Four reels of actual scenes filmed during those red days were projected on a screen at the Paramount studios so that George Bancroft's next picture, "The World and the Flesh," which will show at the Grand Theater on Saturday, Sunday and Monday, could be realistically depicted. The showing was attended by the star, Director John Cromwell and representatives of the casting, wordrobe and architectural departments.

Under instructions issued several years ago by B. P. Schulberg, managing director of production, many reels and clippings from issues of Paramount News, the Pictorial and other scenic films have been indexed for research work, the only use to which it will be put. Some footage thirty yeras old is in the collection.

Each department selected scenes which best gave it the desired information. Single frames of the scenes were enlarged into eight-by-ten photographs and distributed to the departments.

The art department chose shots of the Black Sea port of Theodosia and of Russian freight trains for guidance in designing the settings and for the rebuilding and repainting of a train to duplicate a Russian one.

Many "clips" of individuals were enlarged and used as the basis of designs for the costumes. The clothes worn by Bancroft were designed after those worn in Paramount News by one of the Red sailor leaders, while Miriam Hopkins' was copied after the gown worn by one of the girls shown in a group of aristocratic refugees fleeing from the country.

"The Wet Parade" Strong Offering At Royal Theatre

Not since Cyrano de Bergerac flaunted his probsocis before his enemies, composed laudatory verses for it and even used it is a crutch to fame and glory, not since that day has there been such a friendship between a man and his nose as there is between Jimmy Durante and his horny beak.

Durante's nose, which is currently on view in "The Wet Parade," is a schnozzle of magnificent proportions, large, beaked and of an excellent color, shading from beet red to mahogany brown. It is a nose covered with many honors. Did not its owner win from Ernesto Lombardi, the baseball player, the Big Beak Championship?

Durante is modest in victory. Looking at pictures of his own nose compared with the olefactory organ belonging to his rival, Durante remarked in a tolerant voice:

"It's a shame to put a youngster like that up against a veteran."

Nose His Trademark

Durante's schnozzle, famous in song and story, is his trademark, but there is more to this popular comedian than a long nose. This rough and tumble artist among comics is a star's star, greatly appreciated by actors and actresses, the most critical of all theatre-goers.

His dressing room walls at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios are covered with autographed pictures of film celebrities. Prominent among them are pictures of William Haines, with whom he appeared in "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford"; Lawrence Tibbett, whom he supported in "The Cuban Love Song," and Buster Keaton and Polly Moran, with whom he formed the laugh trio of "The Passionate Plumber." Although he has never played with John Barrymore, this noted actor is also a great admirer of Mr. Durante and his schnozzle. After watching Durante perform in "The Wet Parade," Barrymore told him he ought to play Hamlet.

"Aw," said Durante, "I don't like to play those hick towns. I don't get over it in those place because they don't know me."

Asked what sort of roles he likes to play, Durante said:

"Crazy roles—anything I can jump around in. I can't stand still and deliver a line."

He is married, enjoys fishing, plays the piano, and his favorite musical number is "Indian Love Call."

6000 See Bozo And Smith Battle To Draw

"Pa" Stribling, diminutive father-manager of W. L. (Young) Stribling and Battling Bozo, as principals of a stable of pugilistics gentlemen reputed to "Fight from bell to bell", has show little, if any, change in demeanor in the last ten years. He perches at the ringside or works in a corner, drilling advice into the head of his fighter from the tap of the first gong 'till the tap of the final.

"Pa" was plainly irked at the manner in which Bozo disobeyed his instructions Tuesday night at Doughboy Stadium. He had Bozo's maneuvers for the night all mapped out and the Birmingham battler appeared to promptly ignore them.

"Look at him", the senior Stribling adressed me, "just look at him. I told him as plainly as I could not to begin clowning in the first round but to hold his stock in trade for later on in the fracas because he will have used it up and grow stale with the customers."

Whereupon "Pa" rubbed his palms briskly, a habit of his whenever he is sulking.

"Can the clown punch?", I asked.

"Some", said "Pa."

"Can the clown take it?", I asked.

"Some", said "Pa."

"Is the clown growing weaker?", inquired a man just back of us.

"Possibly—in the head!" said "Pa."

It must be downright disheartening to leap into your fighter's corner during rest periods, coax, cajole and cuss him and then, as soon as the bell sounds, see your fighter disregard everything you've just told him. The senior Stribling appeared to be in just such a predicament Tuesday evening and he grew garrullous as round after round wore on and Bozo wouldn't stick out his left or bring it up under the concrete chin of Mr. Smith but proceeded to wave at people in the audience, pose like a pitcher and look affectionately at Mrs. Bozo whenever she advised: "Come on, Bo!"

There's always plenty of horseplay at the ringside. Ordinarily staid per-

Fans Boo Semi-final Decision

They called it a draw this time betwen Walker (Cyclone) Smith, Benning's pride and joy, and Battling Bozo, Alabama pea picker, at Doughboy stadium on Tuesday night.

Smith fought. Bozo clowned.

The "Cyclone" was the aggressor all the way. He sayed on top of the rangy Birmingham boy for ten rounds and cramped Bozo's burlesque style. Bozo tied Smith up at infighting and brought the soldier up short many times with a left uppercut.

Walker should have stopped the Slagtown Clown. But Walker was too anxious—too much on edge. He missed too many haymakers—haymakers that found their mark with deadly precision in the "Cyclone" scrap with Russ Rowzey.

Twice, at least, the Alabamian traded furiously with Smith whenever the latter trapped him in corners. In the seventh the elongated monkey man stepped into Walker and swapped 'em toe to toe. Then, in the tenth and final round, Bozo hit Smith two for one. Of course it is doubtful if his punches had much steam but whenever you land one clean, so boxing rules say, there's a point for somebody.

"Pa" Stribling, Bozo's manager; "Ma" Stribling and W. L. (Young) Stribling were at the ringside. "Pa" and W. L. and Johnnie Wilson handled the Slagtown slugger. Bob Lawson, giant negro heavyweight who has fought the country's best, was among the men in Walker's corner.

Six thousand fans saw the battle.

Kid Baisden, Valdosta, Ga., and "Puggy" Weinert, Chicago buzzsaw, fought to a draw—so the judges decreed but 5,998 others who booed the verdict couldn't be wrong. It was Weinert's fight by a comfortable margin unless the judges based their opinion on the thousand and one lefts "Puggy" stopped and Baisden's ability to ride a velocipede that has never been surpassed but once in fistic history and that was when Mr. Eugene Tunney scrammed away from Mr. Jack Dempsey in their second skirmish.

Just where Baisden gets such a high rating is above this writer's head. He displayed absolutely nothing but a left all the way through against Weinert. His right might as well have been handcuffed to his trunks.

Against a portsider and a man without so much reach, Weinert would have shone far more brilliantly. But you can't always expect to fight men who lead with their right so the best thing to do is to train with boys who have them from either side.

Bunker Hill, Benning, won a technical knockout over Bobby Green, Fort Moultrie, in the third of a scheduled eight rounder. Hill is a good prospect.

"Grumpy" Gordy won a decision over "Red" Goss, substituting for Kid Weston, after five rounds of pleasing punching interspersed with Gordy's hilarious antics.

Frank Mackery, Benning, stopped Pollock Klaja in the third round of a scheduled four round prelim. Klaja was better at the beginning but Mackery found his stance in the second and followed through on every opening.

Hoyt Webster won a technical knockout over Bull Dog Mathais in a four rounder.

Kid Williams was awarded a decision over "Seaweed" Wilson. They fought the four round eye opener.

The show was splendid. Everything went off beautifully. The capacity crowd obviously was pleased. And a rising vote of thanks is in order for Captain Philip Fry, athletic officer, and his faithful assistants.

"Corn Griffin Challenges Bozo To Ring Battle

"Corn" Griffin, Benning lightheavy, issued a challenge to Battling Bozo, of Birmingham, last Tuesday night and rumors have it there is an excellent possibility of these two being matched for a bout at the post within the next three months.

The next fight, however, will in all probability find Ching Johnson, of A Co., 29th, Benning, meeting Irving Ashenazy, of Tampa. Negotiations in his direction are understood to have already been started.

Griffin is a good boy. In fact, Collyer's Eye, national fistic authority, gives "Corn" a rating of .238 and, furthermore, augments this with the candid opinion he is one of the three outstanding lightheavies that are coming up among the younger fighters today. Griffin will be 21, come July 4th.

A remarkable instance of Griffin's courage was displayed February 10th when he fought Tony Concella, of Tampa, in a memorable mauling match such as Jacksonville, Fla., fight fans have seldom been treated. Griffin's jaw was fractured in the fourth round and he went on to win seven of the ten rounds and a decision.

Two weeks previously, to give some Tampan had boxed a main bout in idea of the ability of Cocella, the Chicago Stadium against Yale Okum. A draw verdict was returned. Then, the following week, by some peculiar arrangement in matchmaking, Concella and Okum were rematched as semi-finalists on the Uzcusdun-Baer card in New York and Concella lost the decision. Two weeks ago Tony boxed Battling Bozo a draw at Charleston, S. C.

Griffin, who has been boxing since June, 1929, fought Walker Smith a year ago. Smith won the decision.

I. S. D.

Baseball practice will begin today. It is advisable that baseball candidates read the order a second time. It flatly states that players will be present for practice unless properly excused. In fact there will be no slufing by team members. To turn out a hustling baseball team the members of the team have to be hustling every minute.

Grady Tolle has picked up a jinx from some place. In his last three starts the little hurler has started off in good form only to have his team mates let men get on bases by errors and then some fellow come along and get a hit to drive in runs that should never have ben on base.

Tiny Cochran came about as near passing over the big divide as a fellow could without checking out when he battled a severe attack of pneumonia at the garrison hospital a few weeks ago. One can hardly believe this after seeing Tiny back on duty in the mess hall, but we are sure glad to have the old "Slumburner," back again anyway.

And Gabby Gable wanted to know who broke the handle off the Chamber of Commerce.

Tubby Dykes at first base and Jughead Cowan at third base will be a great combination. They should be lucky as they live in tent No. 13.

Bad News Goins has decided that he was never intended for an infielder and will try out for a berth on the mound staff this season.

The I. S. D. Bowling team added new laurels to their crown by winning the Fourth Corps Area bowling Championship in the tourney held at Fort Benning last week. They competed against teams from the 8th Cavalry, 29th Infantry, 22nd Infantry, 6th Cavalry.

PARDON MY MITT

sons unconsciously lose control of themselves, squirm in their seats, tilt your Kelly down over your eyes and otherwise abuse you in their delirious outbursts. They even grow very eloquent and address the performers in the hempen enclosure as palookas, second story men and tramps.

"Red" Keenan, embattled bantam who has eaten Uncle Sam's grub at Fort Benning for lo, these many years, basked in the limelight before the Smith-Bozo battle. He was introduced as the first fighter to meet "Young" Stribling in Columbus: "Believe it or not!" Keenan has remained a bantam, W. L. grew to a heavyweight. So when the announcer shouted: "Young" Stribling issues a challenge to 'Red' Keenan", hoarse ha, ha's swept the assemblage.

Keenan, in all seriousnes, used to be a good boy when he was in his prime and was Benning's premiere entertainer back when the post was in it's infancy. He was fast, could punch and had nifty footwork. His weakness was a glass jaw. "Red" would step in there and go like a blue streak until someone happened to jab him on the jaw, then he'd go out like a light. I've seen him look terrible in one bout and swell in another. One time he'd be "right", another he'd be "wrong." Like Sharkey, Keenan had his nights when Lady Luck smiled sweetly upon him.

Oh, yes, one thing more: I asked "Pa" Stribling who he liked in the coming titular squabble—Schmeling or Sharkey. He said he thought Schmeling would take the Boston sailor man but amplified his statement with the assertion: "I don't know."

Doughboys Hit Stride In The Last 3 Games

Hitting their stride during the past few weeks, the Infantry School Doughboys have been hitting the old nugget on the nose in their last three ball games. And they have also been playing heads-up baseball.

Last Friday the Doughboys visited at Lanette, Ala., for a return game with the Lanett A. C. baseball team. Gilbert did mound duty and it is a past story that the big fellow was really breezing the pellet by the Lanett sluggers. Nine batters went out by the strikeout route and only five safe bingles were registered against Gilbert's delivery. Airtight fielding back of Gilbert was also a leading factor in the 5 to 2 victory.

Buck Tinsley, center fielder, stole the show when he drove the ball over the fence in the fourth inning for a circuit clout with two Doughboys on the path ahead of him.

Sunday the Meritas baseball team of Columbus invaded Gowdy Field for a struggle with the Doughboys. Meritas came to the Upatoi Station with a string of wins over the best teams in this neck of the woods, including a win over the Columbus Foxes.

Paul Doss, Meritas southpaw, the hurler that humbled the Foxes, went to the hillock for the visitors. What the Doughboys did to his delivery is past history but it was plenty. Sixteen safe bingles and ten runs were chalked up by the army at the end of the ninth inning. The final score stood 10 to 4.

Speedball Holloway was on the mound for Benning and the lanky Gunner was in top form. His offerings kept the visitors feeding from his hand throughout the game and the Doughboys were never in danger.

Wednesday the Oglethorpe University Petrels arrived at Fort Benning for a two game series. The opening game proved to be a Petrel victory by a 6 to 3 count, but it was a hard fought game, the Doughboy fighting a stubborn uphill battle after the third frame when the Petrels shoved in four markers.

The disastorous third frame came in the form of a bad break with Grady Tolle the goat. Grady had eased through the first two frames without giving the Petrels any thing that resembled a hit. The first man to face him in the third was an easy out to the infield. Vance was safe at first on a bobble by Keys at second. Dixon sent a long fly to center that Tinsley would have taken with ease but he and Moon both raced for the ball and then stopped allowing it to fall fair. The result was three more clean hits that iced the old ball game.

Red Says Bye To Benning

William "Red" Keenan, king of the army bantamweight boxers for the past seven years, left Fort Benning last Wednesday for his new station at Barksdale Field, Shreveport, Louisiana. For the past eight years Keenan has been stationed at Fort Benning. Six years of his service was with the 29th Infantry, and two years with the 5th Signal Service Company.

Probably no enlisted man is wider known or can claim more friends in the service than the freckled face, sorrel thatched, good natured little Irishman. He was popular both as a soldier and a fighter. Although his willingness to fight anytime any where, inside or outside the ring occasionally put "Red", in a tight spot, his service record shows that he was and is an excellent soldier.

He first stepped into the spotlight of fightdom back in 1924 when he won the 4th Corps Area boxing championship. His climb up the fistic ladder carried him into the ring with such fighters as Pete Sarrion, Steve Stetson, Benny Regan, Jimmy Wilde, Quina Lee, and other top notchers, with Keenan turning in a long stringo victories against a very few defeats.

In the past two years Keenan has laid the gloves away and has done little fighting. As an instructor he has few peers as he was a master boxer and knows the game. Keenan was often referred to by sport scribes as one of the smartest boxers in the bantamweight division.

Keenan will probably never throw another glove within the hempen square but his ring battles will be the topic of conversation among his old admirers for years to come. His large host of friends join in hoping him the best of luck and success at his new station.

Columbus Women Sponsor Garden Tour on Mav 24

A Garden Tour, embracing all the most attractive and the best planned gardens of this community, is being sponsored by the Young Matrons' Circle of the St. Paul Methodist Church on May 24th from 10:00 a. m. to 6:00 p. m. A small admission will be charged for those wishing to make the tour and tickets may be secured by calling Mrs. John Martin at 1623-J in the city.

The following gardens will be open that day: Mrs. Abram Illges', Peacock Woods; Mrs. Tom Huston's, Green Island Hills; Mrs. Abbott Turner's, Wynnton Drive; Mrs. Roy Duncan's, "Spring Haven," River Road; Mrs. Reynolds Flournoy's, Wildwood; Mrs. B. H. Hardaway, Jr's., Warm Springs Road; Mrs. Clifford Swift's, Peacock Woods; Mrs. John Woodruff's, Woodcrest.

JOHN METCALF RETURNS

John Metcalf has just returned from New York bringing with him a whole carload of clothing in all styles and sizes which will be on sale at Metcalf Clothing and Hat Stores on Broadway. He assures you that you'll never find a better opportunity to buy what you want and what you need and that you'll find him just as helpful and willing as ever to see that you get satisfaction.

You all know Ed Cohn—he's been in the clothing business in this section for a long time—up until he left a few years ago, he had been selling clothing in Columbus for twenty years.

Mr. Cohn has assumed the managership of the Columbus branch of the Metcalf store and will be glad to see all of his old friends as well as any new ones.

After the Horse Show supper consisting of the following Menu was served: Apple pie, asparagus on toast, blue ribbon beer, butter, candied sweet potatoes, cream cheese, hot buns, lettuce, green olives, saltine crackers, sliced tomatoes, tomato catcup, chicken, lucky strike cigarettes and chancellor's cigars.

Guests for supper were: Major Schneider, Special Units Commander; Capt. Beatty, Commanding Service Company, Lieut. Westlund, Transportation Officer; Capt. Cushman; Lieut. Cambre and Lieut. Gould.

The supper was enjoyed by everyone and we want to compliment the Mess Officer and Mess Sgt. for their excellent taste in the preparation of Wednesday's Menu.

COMPANY "G"

Since the beginning of the Corps Area Maneuvers we've felt more like moving locker trunks to the woods and asking for a few days pass to come back to the barracks, rather than living in barracks and making an occasional visit to the woods.

Chronologically speaking, in each succeeding week, the maneuvers have extended, if only for a few hours, our stay in the woods. For the week ending May 7, we are in for 2 1-2 days. Beginning next week we'll extend that to 3 nights and almost as many days.

"E" and "G" companies with their full strength present for the first time in several weeks managed to trounce the erstwhile leaders rather soundly with "G" company taking the lead away from "H" company. To reach the top we had to trounce the strong 2nd Bn. outfit. Final score "G" Co., 7, 2nd Bn., 2, which made it two straight for Collier. Saunders return to the lineup bolstered us considerably. This necessitated the shift of Ramirez to the outfield, his old position. Oates has been badly missed in right field since his trip to the hospital with measles. Whether it's good or bad luck; we have been able to keep at least two of our squad in the hospital at all times.

Columbus Group Presents 3-Act Play To-night

The initial play of the Junior Catholic Dramatic Club of Columbus will be presented at the Knights of Columbus Hall at 12; 12th Street in Columbus.

Much hard work has been expended on the play by the characters and the director and the players are expected to turn out a performance which will be a credit to them, especially in view of the fact that practically all of the players have had very little dramatic experience.

The play "A Full House," by Fred Jackson is one that is well adapted to presentations of this kind and by groups such as this and is one that effectually combines elements of mystery and comedy into a charming whole which will be interesting and amusing.

Tickets for admission are 50c each and the play will start promptly at 8:15 o'clock.

Col. Willard Is Assigned To Presidio

War Department orders received at Headquarters The Infantry School on Thursday announces the assignment of Colonel Charles L. Willard, post quartermaster, to the Presidio of San Francisco, California. He is to sail from New York for his new station about June 18th. Col. Willard has been on duty at Fort Benning since June 25, 1928, and is at present on sick leave of absence.

Other assignments announced in War Department orders are as follows: Captain Ernest C. Adkins, to Indiana University, Bloomington, Indiana; Lieut. Joseph A. Kielty, to 18th Inf., Ft. Slocum, N. Y.; Captain John H. Deane, 1st Lieut. Harry D. McHugh and 2nd Lieuts. Carl F. Fritsche, Randolph B. Hubard and Dudley G. Strickler, to Phil. Dept., for duty with Infantry at Tientsin, China; Capt. Carl M. Ulsaker, to Philippine Dept.

Major Charles P. Stivers, instructor at The Infantry School, is assigned to the infantry of the 2nd Division at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, effective June 1st.

Capt. Harrison B. Beavers, adjutant of the 29th Infantry, is in receipt of orders assigning him to duty as a student in the 1932-33 advance course of The Infantry School.

Capt. Robert B. McClure, formerly an instructor at The Infantry School, and now on duty in China, has been ordered to join the 29th Infantry at Fort Benning.

BAND

And in those days came James Handy, teaching in the wilderness of Fort Benning. And the bandsmen were amazed and said, "What manner of soldier is this?" With an interesting conversation at it's climax inside the barracks Mr. Handy, soldier of fortune, upon seeing the Commanding Officer 2nd Battalion thru the window on his way to make an inspection of the bathing pool. being an old soldier and remembering that an officer should be recognized at approximately thirty inches, feet, paces or somethin', called out a ringing, penetrating and madening, "Ten Shun"! Mr. Handy paid no attention that the Major was outside and the men, himself included, were inside the barracks; no, not he. He "seen his duty and done it", even to the extent of causing the old vets who still believe in the afternoon siesta to arise, take up their beds and run or the equivalent.

Corporal Ruffin, saxophonist of the famous Jazz Pirates orchestra, after a special invitation from the Surgeon to visit him at the Post Hospital because of an affliction known as the "Mumps" arranged to take a few weeks vacation and is now a guest at that institution. Both the institution and Corporal Ruffin are doing as well as could be expected and Corporal Ruffin expects to terminate his visit, with the approval of his host, as soon as ediquite will permit.

"Brave Soldier Hero", or "Soldier Awarded Purple Heart". Pfc. Odell Butler had mental pictures of one of the above scareheads in all the leading papers of the country. While the 12:00 P. M. whale was wending it's way to the City of Fort Benning on Monday nite and the passengers therein resting serenely and comfortably Mr. Butler, ever ready observed some sparks flying from the exhaust and thot that the whale was on fire. Remembering that at some time in the remote past he had been taught somewhere in his General Orders that in case of fire he was to give the alarm, call the number of his post and give the location of the fire. Knowing that all of the Corporals of the Guards were at Fort Benning, six nautical miles from the position of the whale at the time he "seen his duty and done it". Our hero promptly notified the bus driver that the whale was on fire. The passengers, so rudely awakened from the slumbers and conversations, being well trained soldiers, remained in their seats as good soldiers will do in times of emergency. The driver stopped the whale, dismounted, looked over, under, around, behind and thru the whale but discovered no fire. He mounted his steed and delivered his precious cargo at Fort Benning. Thus passeth Butler's opportunity for a Purple Heart Medal.

The Band has received a number of new fox trots and is preparing them for concert season.

VOLUME II — FORT BENNING, GA., MAY 13, 1932 — NUMBER 3

Club's Farewell Performance Proves Best Show Of Year

By Mary S. Tucker

The Fort Benning Dramatic Club delivered a genuine hit last Friday and Saturday nights, winning a unanimous verdict of side-splitting laughs from an audience. of which the masculine half, at least, might well have been expected to doze off after several nights on maneuvers.

"Cradle Snatchers," a farce comedy which convulsed New York audiences for more than a year, might be considered a trifle broad for "family audiences." In fact, it is my sincere opinion that some of the lines would have caused a hardened Elizabethan to blush, but it is impossible for me to strike a pious attitude, since I was in a front seat both nights, laughing 'til I ached!

The story is familiar, of course, as road shows, stock companies and the movies have made it a classic but its humour has not become stale. The Fort Benning players are to be praised for striking the right pitch, with the necessary deft touch, for a comedy which skirts thin ice at times but which, thanks to the players' activities, never became offensive.

The "Snatchers" were splendidly cast. Mrs. Lewis as Susan Martin, Mrs. Arms as Ethel Drake and Mrs. Reeder as the resourceful Kitty Ladd. Mrs. Lewis is a gifted comedienne. She did very finished acting and her impersonation of the susceptible, not to say inflammatory Susan, was an outstanding performance. She was lovely in appearance and her voice was admirable.

Mrs. Arms had a splendid part, which she played with intelligence, keeping the puzzled Ethel just a few laps behind her adventurous companions, and portraying so cleverly her painful mental groping. Mrs. Reeder's Kitty Ladd was a nice impersonation, with less opportunity for comedy, but important as a foil for the eccentricities of the other two ladies.

The amateur gigolos, or boy-friends, were immense! Henry Winton, captured by Kitty Ladd, was played by Lieutenant Nourse. His actions as a "fixer" were humourous and were played in a convincing manner. The palpitating Spanish osteopath, Jose, was a sizzling role, done with considerable talent by Lieutenant Greeley, while Oscar, the great Dane, whose jaw alternately dropped in perplexity and gritted with determined efforts to please the coy Ethel, was played with a fine sense of comedy by Lieutenant Thompson.

The husbands, who went on "annual" duck hunts several times a season were played with realism, George Martin, by Major Leard; Roy Ladd by Major White and Howard Drake by Colonel Stayer. Anne Hall, as a chaperon and confidante was beguiling both to the duck hunters and the serious Henry Winton, and Mrs. Bowen was most attractive in this role.

The flappers, Elinor, Francine, and Jackie, were nicely acted by Miss Landon Reed, Mrs. Thompson and Mrs. Lanham. One of the most impressive butlers ever seen on the Benning stage was Lieutenant Hubbard, as Paul.

The settings were up to the usual high standard, the second act, in particular giving an effect of space and a glimpse of a garden that brought a spontaneous expression of delight from the audience. The light-

Flower Show Is A Big Success

The Columbus Flower Show, one of the most outstanding events of the past week, came to an end on Thursday afternon, after two days of exhibits that have surpassed those of any former show. The Benning Garden Club, of which Mrs. William T. Brock is president was represented this year by a shadow box, a glimpse and several other entries.

The glimpse, which represented a "Chinese Courtyard," attracted quite an amount of attention on account of its charming conception and make-up. It was prepared by Mrs. C. A. Hunt and Mrs. R. W. Pearson and consisted mainly of a moon-gate, bamboo thicket and small gold-fish pool with floating lilies.

Mrs. Hunt also won an Honorable Mention for her exhibit of snapdragons. Mrs. Brock was the winner of one first prize and one second prize, the former for her exhibit of windflowers and the latter for her jar of flowers arranged for a porch.

The exhibits, from fourteen different clubs, presented a beautiful picture, as they were arranged in the Exhibit Hall of the local fair-grounds. The show this year is considered an unusual success and the officials are well-pleased with the results obtained.

Last Dance Of Year Held Tonight

One of the largest social gatherings ever assembled in Fort Benning is expected at Biglerville Hall May 13th, to participate in the Cabaret Dinner Dance which will feature the final monthly party of the year under the auspices of The Officers' Club. Three hundred and thirty-eight members of The Officers' Club and their friends have reserved seats at tables for dinner in the spacious hall which has been arranged to resemble a typical French Cafe. Hundreds of fantastic captive balloons and myriads of colored serpentines play an important part in the hall and table decorations. The stage setting is distinctly Parisian with blue velvet drops and background of shadow garden effect.

A runway has been erected on a level with the stage extending to the the center of the hall and has been brightly illuminated with electric footlights. The Cabaret Show will open at ten o'clock after other guests who have planned dinner parties at The Officers' Club and in their quarters arrive.

The programme for the evening is as follows:

Introduction Ab Lib--Lt. H. S. Kelly
Master of Ceremonies

Military Tap ------Elizabeth Henry, Nelle Henry, Erna Brandt, Jane McEwen, Frances Reich.

Semi-Finals In Corps Area Tournament Played Sunday

By Bernard B. Swayze

Fort McPherson and the Sixth Cavalry were victorious in last Sunday's polo contests at French Field in the semi-final games of the Fourth Corps Area Tournament.

The Eighty-third Field Artillery team was spotted by the Fort McPherson team one goal, and then lost their fight to that mighty team to the tune of 8 to 4.

It was a long, hard, uphill fight all the way for the vanquished Artillery "Brave Hearts," as the only periods in which they were able to count were the fifth and last chukkers. Fort McPherson simply had the best mounts and besides, were in the possession of no mean playing ability.

From time to time the Artillery would make serious thrusts toward scoring, but the speed of the opposing mounts would check their every move. With the combination of Major Arnold and Lt. Bartlett, the Artillery team is always a threat to any team they may be pitted against, but it seems they were slightly off their stride for the semi-final game.

To the winners in this game must go all the credit for superb field generalship and stamina. Hard polo seems to be the by word of this truly great team, which will come in very handily for the final game next Sunday with the crack Cavalry team.

In the final chukker, the Artillery made a last bid for victory, when with the ample aid of Capt. Bevans and Lt. Draper the Artillery aces, Major Arnold and Lt. Bartlett ran the score from one to four. Polo like that period on the part of the Artillery would surely turn any encounter into victory for that deserving team.

In the last game of the afternoon, when the Cavalry trounced the Fort Bragg quartette to the tune of 10-7, after having spotted the Braggites three goals, the fans were furnished the thrills of seeing many goals made. (And it seems that this is the one thing that keeps the horse flies going to the polo contests all over the country).

Colonel Gordon Johnston of the Cavalry team covered himself with enough glory to last a lifetime by his excellent exhibition of horsemanship and polo ability. Colonel Johnston scored four of the Cavalry's ten goals, and easily took the honors of the day . . . . undivided.

The Cavalry held the Fort Bragg team scoreless until the fifth period, when Fleming rode a nice drive down the field for the initial counter of his team. He occupied the position of number four.

The lineups:

Ft. McPherson, No. 1 Wing, No. 2 Howard, No. 3 Shubert, No. 4 Baker.

Artillery, No. 1 Bevan, No. 2 Draper, No. 3 Arnold, No. 4 Bartlett.

Cavalry, No. 1 Hutchinson, No. 2 Herron, No. 3 Moore, No. 4 Johnston.

Ft. Bragg, No. 1 Waters, No. 2 White, No. 3 Whitmore, No. 4 Fleming.

Students Here To Study Forestry

Twenty-one students of the New York State College of Forestry, Syracuse, who are making studies of southern forests and forestry methods, arrived at Fort Benning Tuesday evening. The class is in charge of Professor Nelson C. Brown and will spend the several days during which they are to remain at Fort Benning, studying the forestry resources of the post, under his direction.

The students are billeted at the 24th Infantry logging camp near Sulphur Springs, where Captain Richard O. Bassett, officer in charge of the post forestry operations, has made preparations for their sojourn and where facilities to aid in their local studies will be at their disposal.

The class will be in camp at Fort Benning until May 19th, when it will begin its return journey to the north, passing through the Piedmont Belt of Georgia, North and South Carolina.

Arrangements for the visit of the forestry students to Fort Benning were made by Captain Bassett, who is a graduate of the New York State College of Forestry.

Russ Pool Opened With Many Improvements

BY MEDICAL INSPECTOR

In a stream or a body of water there seems to be an attraction which to most persons is irresistible. The manifestations of this fascination are innumerable. One of the most common is the urge which impels children, and grown-ups as well, to wade in water or to bathe or swim. Many of the most cherished memories of other days are those which recall the happy hours of childhood spent on the banks of a stream or in the old swimming hole.

The lure of the old swimming hole leaves a lasting mark and traces of it are to be seen in the mass movements which take place upon every opportunity toward the seashore or to the locality of any convenient body of water. So strong is the urge to be near water that communities to which suitable natural bodies of water are not readily accessible usually take measures to devise artificial substitutes for those features which nature has not provided.

Fort Benning is one of the many communities which have enhanced their natural attractiveness by the construction of conveniently located swimming pools, for although there are several streams and ponds on or near the reservation, none of them is suitable for the requirements of the garrison in whose recreational life aquatic sports have come to occupy an important position. Two large pools, one for the white members of the garrison and the other for the colored, have been the source of a great deal of pleasure and healthful recreation, and have in this way repaid many times the cost of their construction, which, by the way, was not borne by government appropriations.

The two pools have been immensely popular ever since they have been in operation, and their patronage has increased to such an extent that recently it became necessary to remodel them and to enlarge their facilities. Modernization of Russ Pool, the larger of the two and used by the white members of the garrison, has recently been completed, and with the splendid modern pool of the 24th Infantry, in its beautiful setting, the post has two bathing pools which sur pass, probably, any similar recreational establishment in the army.

The improvements to Russ Pool, which were completed just before its reopening early this month, are expected to enhance greatly its appeal to the garrison and to increase its daily patronage to a number not previously equalled. Already, indications are seen that the daily attendance will average about two thousand. Of course, not that many bathers will be in the pool at any one time, for the maximum number of persons permitted within the enclosure is limited to five hundred, but during the several periods which are alloted to different groups of the garrison, fully two thousand or more persons will have used the pool in the course of a day.

When so great a number of people immerse their bodies and exercise in a confined body of water of limited size, such as Russ Pool, it must be readily apparent to the most causual observer that certain rules must be adopted and a vigilant sepervision maintained in order to preserve the character of hte pool as a place for healthful recreation, and that its water may not become a germ-laden menace to its users. The officers who supervise the operations of the pools are thoroughly cognizant of the dangers which might arise from any laxity of their administration and have taken extraordinary precautions to maintain them in the most favorable sanitary condition. Their efforts, no matter how thorough or how conscientious they may be, of little avail, however, without the intelligent cooperation of every person who uses the pools and their equipment. Everything in connection with the pool, bath-house, showers, approaches to the pool, and the pool itself, is in spic and span readiness when the first bather of each group arrives.

The water in the pool is obtained from springs which formerly furnished the drinking water supply for the post, and its purity is assured by the addition of chemicals both before and after its admission to the concrete-lined basin. Just how long this condition of sparkling cleanliness will be maintained depends upon the bathers themselves.

Shortly before the recent opening of Russ Pool a set of rules for the guidance of its patrons was published. Framed copies, printed in large type, were also posted in the bath house and at other places in the vicinity of the pool. These regulations are intended only to protect the health of the bathers and to assure the continued maintainance of the pool as a post feature.

The regulations, nine in number, prescribe with unusual explicitness the procedure to be followed by each bather and enumerated certain classes of persons who are excluded from the pool. To many laymen unfamiliar with the sound medical reasons upon which they are based, the regulations may appear to be somewhat stringent, and because of the posibility that some members of the garrison may not fully informed as to their, intent, Major Homer L. Connor, med-

Girl Scout Notes

Cardinal Troop Picnic

Saturday the seventh, the older girls went on one of the most glorious outings in Scout history. Through the kindness and cooperation of Capt. Tuttle, transportation was furnished to a lovely swimming pool off the Cusseta road. There was not only clean water for bathing, but a diving pier and a row boat. A short swim worked up good appetites for the lunches the girls brought: weiners, hamburgers, buns, fruit, marshmallows to toast. Swimming, rowing, and sun-bathing filled the afternoon until the commodious machine-gun truck carried the Cardinals home at four.

CARDINAL TROOP MEETING

Most of the Tuesday session was spent in preparation for the overnight camping trip, beginning the afternoon of May 13. The members of this group worked on a stunt they hope to perfect for Friday evening around the camp fire. Mrs. Brown had everyone write down a list of food and equipment to be brought. Tell you about the trip next week.

CHILDREN'S HORSE SHOW

Announcement has been made to Girl Scouts wishing to enter it, of the Children's Horse Show to take place May 28. At this time, the cup, promised the Scout who has made the most prgoress in riding will be presented. We hope lots of the Scout "horsey set" will turn out.

MORE MERIT BADGES

Several Proficiency tests have been passed recently. Home Nurse, with Mrs. Banton and her assistant, has been finished. The Scribe badge is being completed as the individuals hand in their manuscripts to Mrs. Harrison. Lt. Drewry has passed judgment on a number of lovely pieces of leather for the Craftsman award. At the various and sundry schools, the faculties have looked up Girl Scouts' records to discover if they were eligible for Scholarship badges. Monday, Lt. Baird gave an interesting lecture for First Aid. At a number of small gatherings Mrs. Huling has been giving Laundress work. Mrs. Rose is still passing on Needlewoman and Dressmaker badges. Wednesday Mr. Austell, at the post garage, gave Motorist to the girls old enough to try for it. Capt. Hones is to give Pioneer very soon.

COURT OF AWARDS

It has been definitely decided that the Court of Awards will be May 26

If you have Girl Scout friends, be sure and come to this last event of the season. If you don't know any Scouts, but are interested in them, you won't want to miss the presentations. If you know neither Scouts nor anything about them, don't miss coming to see how greatly improved our cabin is, and what a lot the girls have accomplished.

RUSS POOL OPENS

ical inspector of Fort Benning, has discussed certain features of the rules for their enlightment.

"To begin with," says Major Conner with that frankness which characterizes the statements of military medical men, "any swimming pool is merely a large bathtub. The more people that use it, the dirtier the water becomes, the degree, of course, depending upon the relative cleanliness of the bodies of the bathers at the time they enter the pool, and their conduct after they are in the water.

"Under the very best of conditions when a pool is used only by the most fastidiously cleanly persons, there is a certain amount of the body excretion of each person constantly being involuntarily into the water. Suppose that there were no showers here or that Rule Four did not require that each bather take a bath with warm water an dsoap before entering the pool, what would we have then?

The major stopped to light a cigarette, and without waiting for a reply he continued: "This is what might happen. Some people might come directly from a golf game or from a hard day's work and dive into the pool, carrying on their bodies the accumulation excretions incident to their physical exertions and other activities during the day. These would raise the quantities of excretry matter normally present in the water of a swimming pool to a very high rate."

"It is important, too, that the bathing suit be completely removed during the bath, for if it is not, some of the particles from the body are sure to be caught and held by the fabric and to be later washed off into the

CHILDREN'S SCHOOL
Fort Benning, Ga.
May 10, 1932.

To the Pupils and Teachers of the Fourth Grade,

I wish to express my appreciation of the work done this year in editing the School News.

The pupils have shown good judgment in choosing, from the group, those best fitted to do certain types of work. They have had excellent training in selecting and re-arranging news. Some of them have visited the Ledger and have observed the entire process of a newspaper in the making.

To Miss Sanders much credit is due for her unselfish work on behalf of the entire school.

Sixty-two new members from January to May—the formation of a governing body when the class outgrew its system of organization—and estimated to be one of the largest if not the largest bible classes in the Army—such is the record of the Men's Bible Class of the Protestant Chapel at Fort Benning, Ga. The accompanying photograph taken last Easter, shows the Easter Sunday attendance of this class, together with its Superintendent, Chaplain Willis T. Howard, the Assistant Superintendent, Captain Loren A. Wetherby, and the teacher Corporal William H. Brewer.

The Class was formed at the Protestant Chapel last January with no organization to take over the duties of administration. Since then, however, the rapid growth has necessitated the formation of a board of governors to take charge of the management of the class.

The class meets every Tuesday evening to discuss the affairs of interest of the members, and, more recently, to enlarge the scope of the Young Peoples Endeavor Society, a bazaar was held that proved successful financially. At the meetings of the class, Corp. Brewer carries out a course of instruction in conduction of classes for boys and provides methods for developing teachers for the boys' Sunday School Classes.

The Chaplain has expressed the convincing fact that he has never known such a development as is underway through the widespread activities of the Men's Class. This class claims the distinction of being the largest class of its kind in the Army, and, if not quite the largest, then challenges any other class in the Army as to the general excellence of work it carries out and the Chapel environment it creates.

GUNBOTHAM'S SCHOOL DAZE

By J. L. G.

HEADQUARTERS IN THE FIELD BOOTS

The war is on. Some people haven't realized that it was ended, but as far as the Field Soldiers are concerned, it certainly has broken out all over again. Bedding rolls are taken only as a formality, and as Shugart says, the boys are "Fair Gunnin'." Ted Smyth, Inch Will, and Gawge Selman made a dairing cavalry raid on the opposing forces. Just as dusk was settling on the Upatoi, they dashed upon some onsuspecting Blue horsemen. Galloping at a furious pace, shooting their forty-fives and yelling, they reminded one of the serial movie of Buffalo Bill that runs at the post theatre. The Blues retreated and the three warriors cantered back proudly to their own lines. The outpost, consisting of Jimmy Johnson and some of his National Guard Reserve class, were expecting a cavalry charge, and as far as they could see, here it was. Into the dusk, they opened up on our erst-while heroes with all their weapons. Several umpires rushed up and declared the three horsemen to be casualties. What price glory?

Gunbotham had a hard time the first night. He and Shugart tied their horses to some saplings, and went up to the front lines. When they returned, no caballos could be found. Broadcasting profane and uncouth remarks to the Georgia winds, the two dismounted doughboys started the long hike home. A truck finally appeared, and the brunette driver asked the Lieutenants where the engineer plant was located. Neither knew, but they assured the chauffeur that it was in the direction that they had been hiking for so long. They climbed aboard, and drove off in a cloud of Bunny dust. Suddenly, before the one eye of their chariot, two steeds appeared. There was a familiar appearance about the beasties. "That's my plug," cried Zacharia Shugart. Dismounting from the car, he grabbed the reins of the animule. Lo, and behold, lower and beheld—here were Jimmy Wade and Ralph Tibbetts. "Well, hello, pals," said Ralph. "You certainly should thank us. We found your horses running loose just after we left you to hike back for chow, and so we caught them, after a long chase, and are now bringing them back to you." And in Texas they hang people for borrowing ponies that way.

So finally, in the dark, the grub bivouac was located and after several mess kits had been emptied of the good food that the tankers served, Gunbotham and Sugar started looking for bedding rolls. There were only a couple left and Gunbotham's was not to be found. As it was then early in the morning, we decided that John Harvey Kane wouldn't be down for his roll, so we borrowed it and made quite a downy couch in the back of the baggage truck. At ten minute intervals, Zach would moan profanely about how cold he was. Gunbotham finally got him quiet, and had just dozed off when the blonde beauty of John Harvey Kane peered over the back of the truck. Pleading, threats, and bribes were all of no avail, so the bed was re-rolled, as dawn put in its appearance. With the light came ossifers with their rolls to replace in the truck. Ah—revenge on the sleep disturber, Mr. Shugart! He was at the loading end of the truck, so Gunbotham, safe in the front end, yelled at each new arrival to throw the roll in hard. The Arkansas Pride stopped several before he finally piled out. Moral—don't take a bedding roll on maneuvers, and stay out of trucks that will be loaded early in the morning.

Zero Wilson's cavalry had themselves a time. Gunbotham happened to be on hand when the fast tanks counter-attacked the Blue cavalry, and from the interest, excitement and ardor of the combatants, you would have thought that it was a real war. Zero himself, quite wrapped up in the battle, galloped up behind two Blue machine gunners and pointing his rifle at the ennemuh, yelled at the top of his lungs, "You're dead now, both of you Blues. I gotcha, I gotcha, just make a move!"

According to Lou Hammack, Big Bull Bullock is having a hard time. Gunbotham is at a loss to know why Bill came home very upset and angry the other night—or rather, morning, and wrote poetry until four a. m. But Willie's troubles are not all poetic. The Field Distillery has a nice, gentle animal named Napoleon who bites, kicks, and paws at people. After he had kicked Gunbotham half way to the water tanks, and had knocked a soldier down, the still upset Mr. Bullcok hove into sight. Bill had hiked many miles with the Eighth Infantry, and he had perspired down to a mere 230 pounds. "Get that hoss out of my way!" growled Bill to Pvt. Oates, at the same time slapping Napoleon upon the opposite from the biting end. That was a tactical error, for Napoleon does not like to be slapped there. Anyhow, Mr. Bullock got a peach of a right hook, and as Napoleon outweighs William slightly, the poet was moved across the road. Yes, as Lou Hammack says, Big Bull Bullock is having a hard time.

The Student Cavalry heard the Blue troops trying to sneak up on them in the dark, and several daring ones, led by Brother Houseman, charged down on the ennemuh. However, the attack was called off when the attacked Blues turned out to be a pair of large, black pigs. The warriors' embarrassment was only equalled by that of a member of the Advanced Class who had his horse go down and roll over two or three times as they were crossing Randall Creek. Bill Deane can sympathize with them all, for his horse started bucking wildly, the cinch broke, Bill turned a front flip, and they are still looking for the horse. As General Sherburne, says, "War is Swell."

We don't mind chiggers, mosquitoes, no sleep, no bedding rolls, dirty clothes or sore feet but something ought to be done to prevent warriors from pulling stories like these on tired troops. Gunbotham, Sam Conley and Bob Ports were eating lunch. and Bimbo Carne hove into view. "Hey, Warriors," said he, "you're mounted hombres, I've a riddle for you. What is it that eats hay, drinks water, sleeps in a stall, and can see out of one end as well as it can see out of the other?" Gown, what is it?" said Sam.

"A blind horse," answered the Carne, and ducked behind a tree.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

The prevention and cure of tuberculosis depends on proper nutrition.

In the past twenty years extravagant claims have been made for special diets, but experience is teaching us, more and more, that the simple well balanced diet is all that is needed to keep our bodies healthy and at the top round of efficiency.

At the present time when many people are forced to subsist on a limited ration, the result can only be a lowered state of bodily well being which makes the catching of any infection much easier. Tuberculosis is sure to become more frequently reported just for these reasons.

Thus far the period of financial depression has not produced an apparent increase in tuberculosis in the U. S., but if we take the German experience during the war and later we must appreciate the importance of an inadequate diet as a cause of an increase in infectious disease, especially tuberculosis.

For years the treatment of tuberculosis was based on a farced diet of large quantities of milk and eggs. A noted authority on tuberculosis, states that the treatment of this disease reduced to a percentage basis is as follows: "Rest 80%; Food 10%; Fresh Air 10%.

Proper food is just as essential as fresh air and rest; if either of these is neglected the patient will suffer.

Now-a-days it is thought that a simple, well balanced diet which does not tax the organs of digestion or those of elimination is the best, and all that is necessary for either the sick or the well.

Therefore a diet which maintains at all times a proper nutrition of your body is the means which you use to prevent the contraction of tuberculosis and other infections.

The New Books

FIFTH ARMY

By General Sir Hubert Gough

Of the many war books which have been published since the armistice none can really appeal to cavalry officers to the same extent as this recent addition. Every pre-war cavalry officer knew Hubert Gough. He joined the 16th Lancers in 1888 and won the figure on English and Indian polo grounds, and in the hunting field, he had the best possible training to make a cavalry leader, and in the Great War how many of the high commands were filled by cavalry officers. The book is a "personal" narrative in all the senses of the word and written by one who has never been afraid to say what he thinks. The first seventy pages deal with all the cavalry work up to the time when trench warfare deprived them, except as a mobile reserve, of the greatest of their assets, "mobility." The charm of these chapters lie in the fact that there is no attempt to boast of successes, and failures are freely given in hopes that future generations will profit by their study. The book is called "The Fifth Army," but it is not till half way through it that they come into existence. The real facts of the Passchendaele battle will stir the hearts of those who took part in it, whose motto at the time was "theirs not to reason why, theirs but to do and die." As chapter succeeds chapter the interest increases, culminating in a plain statement of facts as regards the retreat of 1918 which winds up the most interesting of books.

RUSS POOL OPENS

As the purveyor of intimate stories of garrison life we take our duties seriously. That is why eleven o'clock Sunday morning found us on our way to the opening of Russ Pool equipped with a scrubbing brush and bar of issue soap. We didn't want to miss anything.

We were impressed with the Architect Golightly's new bath house and the added parking facilities. So far as we were permitted to observe the new sanitary regulations were being complied with. Being so soon after Saturday night, the turnout of adults was small but we predict that a few days more of summer weather will overcome all resistance to the meticulously prescribed preliminary ablutions. Certainly no habitue of yesteryear will be bold enough to absent himself or herself regularly. Such action is too likely to be interpreted as an indication of aversion to thorough going bathing.

The new arrangements seem to have provided for everything so far as purification of the bathers is concerned. On the other hand they leave something to be desired if Russ Pool is to be the social center that it has been in other years. Under the existing set-up spectators must either pass through the showers and ford a shin-deep foot bath or remain outside the enclosure. This feature seemed to irk fully dressed fathers and mothers who wanted to keep a parental eye on their offspring. It also operates to discourage the water-shy male gallery which assembles to award the bathing beauty prizes—not to mention the women who don't care for swimming but who just dearly love to know what is going on. For these interested and interesting non-swimming groups the Flare suggests a gate through which only the fully clothed may pass.

A MESSAGE TO GARCIA
OR HOW THE NEWS IS CARRIED FROM AIX TO GHENT

For a long while the Communications Group of the Versatile Second Section has successfully produced, to the satisfaction of all who have witnessed it, a signal communication demonstration which always seems to "click". At a tense moment in a situation which assumes that all the usual means of communications are "out", a welcome liaison plane glides gracefully into the picture and not only drops a message but picks up the reply and fades away as mysteriously as it appeared.

Those who have seen this demonstration have always wondered by what means this airplane is made to arrive at just the psychological moment. Obviously it cannot be hiding in the bushes,—or roosting in the trees, to appear upon cue or signal as does the man with the "five-year-old-belly-ache" in Doc Stayer's excellent three act play.

When this, demonstration was given before last year's company officers' class, the students were completely baffled at this magical appearance of an airplane. Major Patrick, the Big Chief Dit-Dah, had just finished saying, "In such a situation the only thing to do is to wish for an airplane"—and his last words were followed by the low drone of a plane, heading straight for him. One hot, half awake student, with his eyes bulging in amazement was heard above the awe-stricken class to stammer, "My Gawd, Major, try that on a keg of beer". They wouldn't have been more surprised if Major Patrick had plucked a few assorted red, white, and blue rabbits out of Lieutenant Murphy's hat!

Upon another occasion when presenting the demonstration before the Refresher Class, Maj. Patrick, at just the correct instant said, "Now if we only had an airplane", and here he was interrupted by a colonel who piped out, "Look, Major, there's one up there, ha, ha, ha", pointing to a plane gracefully hedge hopping Riley Ridge. Major Pat looked over his shoulder and registered that surprise born of long dramatic experience and looked for all the world as though an airplane was the last thing he expected to see. The entire class enjoyed the timely remark immensely for a few moments, then imagine the chagrin of our fun-loving colonel when the plane became an active participant in Major Pat's little three ring circus!

Now that the demonstration has been staged for the seventh and last time this year, the Dit Dah Gang has consented to explain, in an exclusive interview to a representative of the Flare, just what system of communication is employed in getting an airplane on the spot at a precise moment. Here is the scoop:

1. Mounted messenger leaves regimental command post. Since he makes no further appearance in the demonstration he goes back to the stables.

2. Pigeon is released with a message attached to his leg, and for some reason—possibly instinct—follows the path of the horse to the Stables.

3. At the Infantry School Stables an orderly put salt on the pigeon's tail, catches it, calls up his gal, the Skow's maid, and says, "Honey, put dar kittle on. Ah's got yo' all's dinnah".

4. Lieutenant Skow and family gather about the festive board and he carves and serves the fowl. All he gets for himself is the neck and a pair of drum-sticks.

5. Skow bites into a drum-stick and gets message capsule caught in teeth. In dislodging it the message is extracted. He reads it, jumps up muttering something to his distraught wife about "lost regiment", rushes to Lawson Field, mounts his trusty plane and glides over Riley Ridge just as Major Patrick says, "Now if an airplane, etc."

Lieutenant Raymond, Little Dit-Dah, reports that this system of communication has proved to be more reliable than radio.

Our attendance at the opening of Russ Pool was not unproductive of copy for we happened to sit in on the following incident:

SPRING

Spring has come and the birds are here.
Oh, what a beautiful time of the year!
The little brook babbles o'er the rock
And just by it bloom hollyhocks
Violets blue, roses red, blossoms shattering over your head.
Little squirrels run up and down.
Little birds fly all around.

MY DEAR MOTHER

Mother is the sweetest and kindest of us all,
Her loving care is ready whenever you might call.
She reads to us and sings to us in the nicest kind of way.
She neither scolds nor angers and is happy all the day.
She's the nicest kindest mother in the whole wide world to be.
I am proud that she's my mother, yes, I'm proud that it is she.

MY MOTHER

I have a very nice mother,
She has soft blonde hair;
She has little white hands
With fingernails pink
All standing in a row.

My mother has pretty green eyes,
My mother has children three
And is very kind to them.
She buys them clothes
She buys them food and drink.

My mother has soft red lips.
And when she is all dressed up
She looks like a princess in a fairy tale.

When my mother goes out in the woods,
Spring seems to welcome her;
The birds sing louder and sweeter,
The flowers burst into bloom
And the angels clear her path.

Boy Scouts

The Boy Scouts of Troop 11 held their regular meeting last Saturday with twenty-five boys, one official and three visitors present. The boys played baseball for a while in the morning, and in the afternoon, at 3:00 they played the Columbus Y. M. C. A., losing by the score of five to four. The batteries for the Scouts were (first four innings) Buster Luse pitcher and Bob Buffington catcher; and for the last three innings James Bonham pitcher and John Buffington catchre. We also had with us Alex Falligant playing short stop. The game was close and, were it not for several errors, we would have won.

Sunday we played the 24th Infantry boys (they looked more like men) and were beaten again by the close margin of 12 to 10, Buster Luse and Bob Buffington again the battery for the first three innings. For the last four, J. B. Bonham was showing the 24th boys how to pitch, striking out seven batters. John Buffington caught. The Twenty-fourth used three pitchers.

We have games with both these teams again and hope to get revenge. We also hope to have some spectators this time. The game will be played on Saturday, in back of Gowdy Field.

SERVICE COMPANY

The Service Company men who participated in the 29th Inantry Transportation and Horse Show did (as usual) take most of all the First Prizes. Prizes awarded were as follows:

Show Wagon: Pvts. Ballard and Wooten, 1st Prize .

Regulation Wagon: Pvts. Comer and Willoughby, 1st Prize.

Driving Contest: Pvts. Moncrief and Styles, 1st Prize.

Horseshoeing Contest: Pvt. Starnes, 2nd Prize.

Minor prizes of 2nd, 3rd and 4th are not mentioned except in the Horseshoeing Contest where there was only one representative.

After the Horse Show supper consisting of the following Menu was served: Apple pie, asparagus on toast, blue ribbon beer, butter, candied sweet potatoes, cream cheese, hot buns, lettuce, green olives, saltine crackers, sliced tomatoes, tomato catsup, chicken, lucky strike cigarettes, and chancellor's cigars.

Guests for supper were: Major Schneider, Special Units Commander; Capt. Beatty, Commanding Service Company, Lieut. Westlund, Transportation Officer; Capt. Cushman; Lieut. Cambre and Lieut. Gould.

The supper was enjoyed by everyone and we want to compliment the Mess Officer and Mess Sgt. for their eloquent taste in the preparation of Wednesday's Menu.

COMPANY "G"

Maneuvers of the 4th Corps Area are about to draw to a successful close. When we say successful, it is an impression made upon our higher commanders of the 4th Corps Area. From them has come nothing but commendation and praise. Not only should the regiment feel proud of such worthy praise but every company and man in the regiment. After all it is every individual's part that brings credit to his company, and the company which brings credit to the regiment.

Moving on towards another championship "G" Company entrenched herself stronger in first place in the 2nd Bn. Baseball League by trouncing "E" Company 7-3, Sunday afternoon. Corp. Collier let "E" Company down with two hits to chalk up his third consecutive win of the season. Look out Lefty Grove.

Bayonet training in all probability starts next week. A week of parries, jabs, and stabs. Here's to a 100 per cent qualification for "G" Company.

COMPANY "F"

Whew, this all day eating and running around the woods is hardly giving us all a chance to do a thing. This last maneuver was a pip.

As usual "F" company held the Ace high hand for the battalion. But we are used to that and do not mind it in the least. The more they give us to do on one of these maneuvers the better we feel. To be truthful with you, we would feel lost if we did not have the major part in that play.

The Fourth Corps Area Maneuvers are coming to a close, very soon all will be back to normal, with the regular routine of work every day. In some ways we are glad to have all this over with and then again after thinking it over, we sort of hate to see it end. It's mighty good to have all the visiting troops here with us to enjoy the things in this post that they have not at theirs'.

We've made some new friends and have met some old ones, and we do hope that they did enjoy their stay here.

Are we proud of that little cup we received the other day? I say we are. Volley ball is a great game and this company took to it like a duck takes to water. The result is that when the Regiment sponsored a game between the outstanding team in the 1st Bn. and Special Units and the outstanding team in the 2d Bn., (this

Herbert J. Copeland is not only the newest private first class in the Quartermaster Detachment but also a soldier who takes a great pride in his business ability. He is assigned to duty at the Fort Benning salvage warehouse and has taken such an interest in his work that numerous improvements have been made by him. These improvements have caused him to be given many compliments by various members of the garrison. He has developed a new system of storing material in the warehouse, so that it looks more like the shipping department of a large mail-order house—with all its neatly arranged shelves—than it does a place where salvaged army material is stored.

Last week, due to his conscientiousness in business matters, he had a great worry on his mind. He consented to act as agent for the collection of the sum of two dollars owed by another Quartermaster Detachment man to an I. S. D. sergeant. Whether many gray hairs have been added to Copeland's head recently is a bit uncertain, but it is certain that his having to pay fifteen cents bus fare in order to deliver the two dollars caused him many moments of grief.

Stanley W. Broom, who is famed for his ability to make fair maids' hearts beat a little faster, recently proceeded to the city of Montgomery, Ala., for the purpose of attending a baseball game. According to him the trip was a grand and glorious success. But when he returned to the folds of the Quartermaster Detachment he had let one bit of information about the game slip his mind. He could not remember the names of the teams that were playing.

The Mighty Grumpy Gordy, who recently has been in the hands of a receiver, is planning to see whether kangaroos are as good fighters as they have been cracked up to be. He intends, according to his own statement, to visit Australia in August. Possibly the Mighty Grumpy has been unable to find enough competition in Fort Benning, LaGrange, Eufaula and parts thereabouts, and desires to see what the kangaroos are able to do.

So far in the baseball standing we are tied with 2d. Bn., Hqrs. for second place. We still have another game to play with Company "G" the league leaders and something seems to tell this old Private that it is going to be a three-way tie between Hqrs., "G" and "F," after that game.

Cpls. Wilson, Krewson and Chambers were discharged in order, and all three have re-enlisted. Congratulations fellows, just a word to let you know that we are mighty glad to have all three of you back with us.

THEATRICAL ATTRACTIONS

Cinema Calendar

for Grand, Rialto and Royal

AT THE ROYAL

(Beginning with Midnight Show, Saturday 11:15 P. M.)

SATURDAY, SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Presenting, "THE MIRACLE MAN", with Sylvia Sidney, Chester Morris, Irving Pichel, John Wray, Robert Coogan and Hobart Bosworth. Dramatic yet tender. Meek yet majestic. Tearful yet joyous. "THE MIRACLE MAN" comes to engrave a new talkie experience on your heart. Up from the hurly-burly of greed and self. Up from a life of tinsel pleasures and sinful "fun"—she brings her man to a newer, higher world of wholesome bliss. A world where love and faith bring joys sublime. (Recommended by this critic.)

AT THE GRAND

SATURDAY, SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Presenting, "HUDDLE" with Ramon Novarro, Madge Evans, Una Merkel and Ralph Graves. Cad or hero? He thought football and college spirit a "racket" but he came through at the right time to prove his manhood to the world and to the only girl. She came to him alone, defying all campus rules . . . disgrace and dishonor faced them both. Here's a picture packed with drama and thrills, with actual scenes taken at Yale and at famous football games.

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Presenting, "HIGH PRESSURE", with William Powell, Evelyn Brent, George Sidney, Evalyn Knapp and Guy Kibbee. Powell's human dynamic in this one. Zowie go those screen conventions! Sock go the ways of making whoopee! Bang go the collar ad heroes! He's a boudoir bandit, Wall Street wolf and Broadway playboy all in one. His frenzied escapades will keep you breathless with excitement. It's the 1932 type of screen thrill.

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY: Presenting, "AROUND THE WORLD IN 80 MINUTES WITH DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS", with the inimitable Doug Fairbanks. Again Doug comes through, leaping continents, hurdling oceans, romping into the screen arena with a new, novel, flaring innovation in talking picture entertainment. Swing in with this cyclonic pageant of laughs, gags, thrills, romance and adventure. Different from anything you've ever seen before. 23,000 miles of laughs, gags, thrills and romance. Here's a lickety-split loop around this cockeyed globe with daring, dauntless, happy-go-lucky Doug.

AT THE RIALTO

SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Presenting, "LOVERS COURAGEOUS", with Robert Montgomery, Roland Young, Frederick Kerr, Reginald Owen and Beryl Mercer. Madge Evans is Montgomery's leading lady in "LOVERS COURAGEOUS". In the story Montgomery is a struggling playwright who falls in love with the daughter of an English admiral. To break up her affair with the poor youth, the girl is hastened into marriage with a titled barrister. However, on the eve of the marriage, she elopes with the impoverished author and—well, see this splendid picture for yourself. You'll like it.

RIALTO

OVER THE HILL

A drama that takes love from the cradle to old age and deals with many of its most important manifestations, "Over The Hill," Fox drama, marking the second screen appearance of that delightful pair of lovers, James Dunn and Sally Eilers and the return of the silent day favorite, Mae Marsh. Comes to the Rialto Theater, next Tuesday.

The love of a man for a maid, the love of a mother for her child; that of brother and brother, father and son, all have their place in this romantic story of a human heart.

The central story itself is two-fold telling the boy and girl romance between James Dunn and Sally Eilers, a romance that is said to exceed in heart touching appeal their magnificent portrayals in "Bad Girl" and the mother and son tie that binds Dunn to "Ma," the character played by Miss Marsh.

Based on Will Carleton's classic poems, the theme of "Over The Hill" is as true today as when it was originally written.

In addition to Dunn, Sally Eilers and Mae Marsh, a hand picked cast includes Edward Crandall, Clair Maynard, Olin Howland, Willima Pawley and Joan Peers. In the prologue of the picture which Henry King directed are a number of Hollywood's most capable juveniles.

ROYAL

THE MIRACLE MAN

Thieves, Swindlers, Pickpockets! A gang of wolves from a great city, marking a village for their Racket—the Good and Gentle for their prey!

Strangers to decency—scoffing at the laws of God and Man, they ridicule honesty and moral virtue.

In their greed for gold, they plan a counterfeited "miracle" with the cunning of their kind, plotting to despoil the one uplifting influence ever to touch their wretched lives.

They find themselves face-to-face with a Power too great for their twisted minds to understand—too strong for their evil scheming. Even their shriveled souls are touched—quickened by the Power of Goodness made manifest before their eyes.

Thus the powerful story of "The Miracle Man" unfolds, wherein the Good triumphs over Evil. It's a drama so perfectly constructed—so forcefully told, that it would have been great a hundred years ago, and still will be great a hundred years hence.

It tells a story of redemption that will stir the emotions and cheer the hearts of millions.

So overwhelming is the dramatic power of "The Miracle Man" that, in the old silent version, it brought instant stardom to Lon Chaney—made Thomas Meighan a great box office personality—Betty Compson a big favorite. Yet, great as they were, Paramount is confident that the players now enacting these same roles will not suffer by comparison.

Sylvia Sidney, for her exceptional performance in "Street Scene," "An American Tragedy," and "Ladies of the Big House," was showered with praise by critics everywhere. Many acclaim her the finest emotional actress in pictures.

Chester Morris appears in the role Thomas Meighan made famous. There is a lure about Morris that women like. He has good looks, broad shoulders, and an engaging personality. His first class ability is evident in such hits as "Alibi," "The Divorcee," "The Big House," and "Cock of the Air."

Irving Pichel has the power to catch and hold audience attention. As the Atheist in "The Miracle Man" he has a role that fits his splendid ability admirably.

John Wray, as the Frog, the part that made Lon Chaney famous, vividly personalizes the twisted soul and body of that infamous character.

Robert Coogan, child prodigy of "Skippy" and "Sooky," gives a poignant pathos to the character of Bobbie, the crippled boy.

Hobart Bosworth creates again the inspirational character of the aged Patriarch and faith healer, and touches dramatic heights in his portrayal.

Boris Karloff, the monster of "Frankenstein," brings asensational ability into his underworld character of "Nikko."

"Huddle," Dynamic Football Drama Features Novarro

Ramon Novarro attempts a radically different type of role in his new starring picture "Huddle," which will start Saturday at the Grand Theater.

His portrayal as Tony Amatto, tough Italian mill hand who enters Yale University, gives him an opportunity for some of the most aggressive and virile action of his career. He spent weeks with a coach to learn football technique. In scenes of varsity games, Novarro plays in a lineup with many famous All-American and noted stars including Ernie Pinckert, Jess Hibbs, Dale Van Dickel, Don Hill and others.

Many actual campus scenes at Yale University were used as an authentic background for the production which contains many of the old traditions of this famous institution. The celebrated Derby Day and various class activities are used as atmospheric details of the story.

Tony Amatto, portrayed by Novarro, is intensely proud and hot blooded with the fervor of the Italian race. He wins a scholarship while working in a steel mill and attends Yale against his father's wishes. His pride makes things very difficult for him until he becomes a football hero and wins athletic honors. He is accepted by many students but is still unpopular socially. Rosalie, daughter of the president of the mill in which Tony worked, is still his ideal but his boorishness has become insufferable to her.

The manner in which contacts and experiences help Tony to find himself forms a gripping theme for the picture which was adapted from Francis Wallace's story. The strong supporting cast includes such well-known players as Madge Evans, Una Merkel, Ralph Graves, John Arledge, Frank Albertson, Kane Richmond, Martha Sleeper, Henry Armetta, Ferike Boros, Rockcliffe Fellowes and Joe Saures. Sam Wood directed.

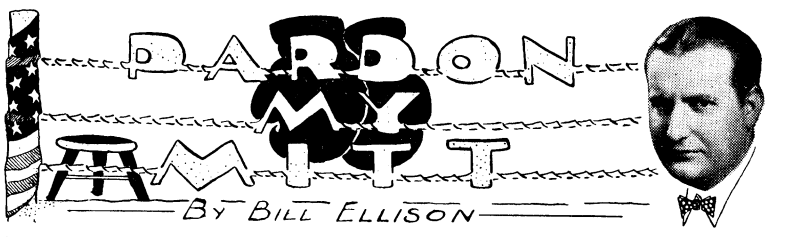
Doughboys Close Season With 11 to 7 Win Over Meritas Mills

Ably piloted by Major William F. Lee and Lieutenant Paul Kellam, the Infantry School Doughboys completed a schedule of twenty-three games last Saturday at Leebern Field, Columbus, with a 11 to 7 victory over the strong Meritas team.

During the past season the Doughboys faced the strongest college teams in the south and also participated in a pair of series with both the Columbus Foxes and Macon Peaches of the Southeastren league.

Although losing to the professional aggregations the army team played good baseball and was only beaten in close hard battles. Wee Grady Tolle dropped a four to one decision ot Columbus when his support faltered back of him. He held the Foxes to six hits and humbled their leading willow swingers with a nice curve ball and tantalizing change of pace. Tolle also held the Michigan State College team in check to win the deciding game of the series.

Gilbert, Medico right hander, turned in several spectacular games. Gilbert made a big show against the Peaches at Macon when he fanned 11 batters and forced the leaguers to go to the eleventh inning to win. Speedball Holloway enjoyed a big season, turning in four wins.



Draw up your chairs, all you wiseacres who purport to be in the know on things relating to fisticuffing. I would fain chat with thee of this man Schmeling and this man Sharkey. By the way, who do you like in the approaching squabble set for June 16 in New York to decide the heavyweight championship question? Some say Max. And, naturally, some say Jack.

I wouldn't advise my good friends to wager without first giving careful study to the records of the two men. It's all right to grow sentimental and says "Let's bring the heavy crown back to America" and all that sort of thing, but don't lay your dough on the mahogany without due deliberation. I have never been a great admirer of the garrulous gob but then I think he has been tormented entirely too much also. He can't help being a Lithuanian. Nothing dishonorable in being one, anyway. On the other hand, Sharkey shouldn't display such a lousy disposition without provocation.

I'm frank to admit this Schmeling-Sharkey thing is a puzzle for me. When Sharkey and Stribling met in Miami in the "Battle of the Itching Palms," Sharkey didn't do a thing to W. L. but barely outpoint him enough to take a decision. The sailor man didn't hurt the Georgian and he did not punish him to any extent. It was a rotten fight, to tell the truth, but the point I'm driving at is that Sharkey didn't set any houses afire with his killing punches. Now, Sharkey gets in the ring with Schmeling a couple of years ago and was all over Maxie like a tent in the first three rounds. He kept up this terrible pace in the fourth until Schmeling shouted that he had been fouled. That stopped the fight which, until then, Sharkey had won in a walk. Schmeling's friends said they believed Max when he said he had intended to allow Jack to do all the leading in the first four rounds and pointed to the fact that Schmeling, while hurt by Sharkey, was not in real distress and claimed. finally, that the foul was the "McCoy."

Sharkey then gets in the ring with Mickey Walker, Jersey's toy bull dog, and has his hands full holding the Mick down to a draw. Walker kept Jack stepping all of the time and gave him a lacing in some of the rounds. Of course, when Sharkey landed heavily on the Mick's jaw, it stung plenty, but never once did he put the toy bull dog down for keeps. Walker has never known the word, "quit," although I do not sanction the decision they gave him over the late lamented "Tiger" 'Flowers, Georgia deacon.

Next we find Schmeling in the ring with Stribling. Years ago, just like every other Southerner, I was all steamed up over Strib's prospects after he had given a good account of himself against the venerable Mike McTigue. But every time Willie the Strib would get in there against a good man he would invariably go to pieces like a last year's bird nest.

Fielding and hitting honors go to Buck Tinsley, sturdy centerfielder. Getting away to a slow start Tinsley hit safely three times in his first twenty times at bat. When he finally hit his stride he began hitting all kind of pitching and kept it up until the close of the season.

Dusty Newman, Medico youngster, did the brunt of the work behind the platter and the youngster came through nicely. He was given a rest after the return of Corwood Smith to the lineup. Corwood did splendid work both with his catching and stick work in the last games of the season.

A leading factor in the Doughboy drive centered around the work of Charlie Banks at third base. Banks, playing his seventeenth year of army baseball, kept the infield working hard and also turned in a total of twenty-eight base hits for the season.

Lose No Time

Members of the Infantry School team will lose no time out from playing as they return to their organzations to join the battalion teams for the coming intra-mural season which will open at Gowdy Field, June 6th.

ning, make-ups and stage furnishings were all very professional-like. The Dramatic Club is indeed fortunate to have such a host of good friends among the Columbus business firms, who cooperate so cheerfully and lend gowns, men's suits, handsome furnishings and draperies and even telephone and lighting fixtures.

And we should be on guard, also, that Sgt. Ebbers and Pvt. Higgins do not get snapped up by the Schuberts or Zeigfield himself, so effective is their scenery.

A farewell performance so well done as "Cradle Snatchers" made a fine conclusion for a most interesting season. The Director, Major Lewis, and his assistants, Mrs. Pilet and Lt. Caum, must receive our thanks and congratulations for an expertly produced and uproariously received comedy. The audience signified its approval with continuous laughter and the most prolonged curtain applause we have heard in two seasons.

pool, hailed Mike Montesinos.

"Would you mind telling my daughter that I want to see her a minute?" he asked. "She is the girl over there wearing a white bathing cap."

Ever ready to oblige, Mike plunged in and swam across. Arriving, he found himself in the midst of several attractive young women all wearing white caps. This was confusing but Mike used his judgment. After a survey of the field he marched up to Mrs. Rogers Williams, wife of the celebrated M. F. H.

"Your father wants to see you" said Mike.

Mrs. Williams registered surprise. "And where is papa?" she asked innocently.

Mike pointed out Major Catron, whereupon Mrs. Williams, radiating delight, put the lad on the right track.

Major Catron has not been interviewed. Of course, he, too, is complimented but his cup of satisfaction over being credited with such a charming grown up daughter may have been flavored with a dash of wormwood.

PROGRESS TOWARD MECHANIZATION

Word has just come to us that Tanker Brett and Inventor Negrotto are the people's choice to lead the Infantry School Hunt next year. The Flare approves—we wonder if it would make any difference if we didn't—but it can't help questioning the credentials of the new high priests of the Horse Cult. One of them is listed among the major prophets who pronounce funeral orations upon the cavalry and the other knows too much about machine guns and airplanes to concede that the mounted man is anything but an anachronism on the battlefield.

Of course it is quite possible for an M. F. H. to regard the horse as a recreational asset and a military liability, but it isn't in accord with the True Believers tradition. Ours has always been that an M. F. H. should be the ex officio champion of the horse in season and out of season for everything from the baby's pet to the arbiter of battle.

We hope for the best but we won't feel quite sure that the grand old Infantry School Hunt is safe from the inroads of mechanization until we see the Tanker and the Inventor in pink going over the first jump. We can't help being a bit fearful lest two such practical minded modernists decide to put the field in dungarees and have it follow the hounds in a Christie tank.

TENNIS GOES WESTERN

In the days of '49 the hardy miners and pioneers addressed each other by the affectionate term of "pard."

It is noted with interest that the tennis committee headed by Captain Bassett has reverted to this sound American colloquialism in designating the fairer half of the mixed doubles by the slightly more dignified term "pardner."

A member of the Erudite Fourth Section, being moved to comment in the hearing of Lieutenant Lynch on what appeared ot be a slight irregularity in the spelling of the more prosaic "partner," was informed in no uncertain terms by that eminent etymologist that "pardner" is equally correct. That settles it and Webster's New International Dictionary which does not list "pardner" and Funk and Wagnall's New Standard Dictionary which remarks "Dial. U. S., partner: a corruption" will be corrected accordingly. The Flare is all for the living, virile, he-man English as she is spoke by comic strip characters, cowboy actors, and tactful young athletes.

CITATION FOR THE WEEK

water of the pool. The bathing suit itself should be sterilized after each trip to the swimming pool, for it will always carry a certain amount of the excretions of its wearer and partciles from the water of the pool as well. The suit can be sterilized by dipping it in boiling water for several minutes."

"Rule Five," the major continued, "might at first appear to be only a prohibition against offensive actions, but there is more to it than that. It is designed as a protection against respiratory diseases. Few of these, of course, can exist at Fort Benning for any great length of time without being detected, but there is always the possibility that some one might be a carrier an dthus spread the germs of a disease. This rule was drafted primarily to minimize the danger from such diseases as tuberculosis, pneumonia, meningitis, measles, mumps, diphtheria, sore throats, sore ears, and common colds, any of which might be transmitted by the forbidden actions."

"The reasons back of Rules Seven and Eight ought to be obvious to anybody," Major Connor said. "They are designed to protect against possible others."

"Rule Nine is in the same class," he continued, "for it is intended to prevent the carrying of dirt and germs into the enclosure on the shoes of spectators. This matter, dropped from the shoes to the sidewalk around the pool, would adhere to the feet of the bathers and then would be washed off into the pool. Just another ounce of prevention."

"Prevention is also the idea back of Rule Two," continued the major. "If an attendant sees somebody violating a sanitary regulation or doing something which might endanger another, he asks him to stop doing it. And so far as rules are concerned, the attendant is always right!"

"Why don't we allow more than five hundred bathers in at one time? Well, for several reasons. In the first place, five hundred are enough in Russ Pool, and are about as many as the life guards can look after properly. Second, it is our unit of measurement to determine the bathing load of the water in the pool, which is changed once each week. The bathing load is the total number of groups of five hundred which can be accommodated in one week without contaminating the water to an objectionable degree. The pollution peak is purposely set very low, so that there is really little danger of any one's contracting an infection from the water in Russ Pool so long as the bathers cooperate in the observance of our rules. Besides, twenty-five pounds of liquid chlorine are released daily into the water of the pool as a disinfectant.

"Rule six? Well, who wants to eat in a swimming pool, anyway? And as for drinks, they're not necessary, as the body can absorb enough moisture through the skin to keep one from getting thirsty. Besides, if bottles were allowed to be taken into the pool inclosure the medicos would be kept busy treating feet cut by broken glass."

"Well, Major, you certainly have explained these rules in fine style, and have given excellent reasons for their existence. When you consider that the pool is used in common by four thousand men and a thousand women and children, it's plainly evident that these regulations are necessary. But there is one that you haven't mentioned—Rule One. What is your definition of a proper bathing suit?"

"H'm", said the major thoughtfully. "Speaking as a medical officer, and purely from a professional viewpoint, you understand, I would say that so far as sanitation is concerned, no bathing suit is a proper one."

"Why, Major! Really! And what about the rest of the rules?"

A twinkle appeared in the major's blue eyes. "No spik Ingleese," he said. The interview was ended.

24TH INFANTRY BAND

The Band Leader has designated this week as instrumental solo week and the boys are hard at it with a hard but varied and interesting program in the making. The solos are being prepared for concert season and include vocal, clarinet, saxophone, flute, piccolo, trumpet, trombone, euphonium and xylophone, several of which were written and arranged by the Band Leader assisted by Corporal Ruffin.

Corporal Ruffin has terminated his visit at the Post Hospital and may now be seen functioning with the Jazz Pirates.

The Happy Hearts orchestra played for the dance at the 24th Infantry Service Club Wednesday night.

The Five Hundred Club sponsored a very brilliant and enjoyable dance at the Service Club Monday night. The Jazz Pirates dispelled the harmony and the universal opinion of the guests that the music was quite the thing.

COMPANY "F"

Well the company came to the front again and put the old Sanitary Flag back where it belongs and that's no joke as the company was the first to win it when it first came into the lime light. And boy if you don't think we well earned winning that flag ask some of the members of the company, and if we had not won it, we were going over the hill in section column—always remember this that we can win anything we go after.

We have Private Hood back with us after a successful operation at Post Hospital, and now he is taking a 30 day furlough. Sgt. Lay is somewhat improved after having been placed in the hospital during the past week! also Pvt. Albert seems to be getting on nicely.

Well, everything seems to be going along well with the Johnson twins this week; but keep your ears and eyes open as they are planning on pulling off a smart trick, so if you see them with green gloves and a brown derby and driving a two-horse buggy don't be surprised.

Pvts. Alexander and Taylor are trying to get their revenge over the checkers. Taylor claims he is champ of the Regiment. But old man Alex says he is not. Things are a little still with the baseball team this week.

Brilliant Review Ends Annual Corps Area Maneuvers Here

All Troops Which Participated In Maneuvers Have Left Benning

The Fourth Corps Area Maneuvers, which occupied a whole month and brought to Benning practically all the troops of the Corps Area, ended Saturday morning, May 14th with a gigantic troop review.

All the troops which participated in the maneuvers, except the 69th Coast Artillery and the 6th Cavalry, which departed several days before the 14th, took part in the review, in addition to the entire combatant forces of the Benning garrison.

The troops were reviewed by Major General Edward L. King, and Major General Campbell King. During the review, which took place on Gordon Field, they were in command of Colonel Daniel G. Berry, who was assisted by a staff composed of Captains George C. Clark and Clough F. Gee and Lt. George F. Howell.

Every one of the various arms of infantry were displayed at the review and several other branches of the Army, which have come to be essential in modern warfare. Among the new weapons of offense displayed were the Christie and ordnance types of tanks, which demonstrated their speed and maneuverability to the reviewers.

The last of the troops who visited the Fort for the maneuver departed for Fort McClellan, Alabama, on Thursday morning. All other units had departed previously, going to their home stations.

Opening of Course Heralds Beginning of Post Tournament

The opening of the new Benning Golf Course heralded the first play in the club tournament, which will decide the Post champion. Qualification play will begin on Saturday, May 21, and will consist of thirty-six holes for each player. According to Lt. Col. H. A. Wells, who is in charge of golfing activities on the Post, seventy-five players have already signed up for the tournament and only five more are required to complete the five flights of sixteen playres each. All thirty-six qualifying holes msut be completed by Saturday night, May 21st.

On Sunday, May 22nd the first elimination round of 18 holes will be played and on Saturday, May 28, the second elimination round will be played. The semi-finals are slated for Sunday, May 29th and the finals will be played on Monday, May 30.

The rules governing play on the entire course have immediately become operative just as they were on the old eighteen holes. The lower nine holes, however, which are not included in the new course, are available for play for the ladies at any time.

The tournament for ladies will also begin in the very near future to determine the ladies golf championship of the Post. Prizes in the men's classes will be awarded to the winner and runner-up of each flight and the winners of consolation flight.

Maj. Gen. King Receives Letter Of Appreciation

HQ. FOURTH CORPS AREA
Office of the Corps Area Commander
Fort McPherson, Atlanta, Georgia
May 18, 1932.

Major Gen. Campbell King,
Fort Benning, Georgia.

My dear General King:

While I have expressed my appreciation to you personally for the great assistance rendered to my command by you and the officers and enlisted men under you, I desire to assure you again of my sincere gratitude for the splendid spirit of cooperation and for the efficient interest displayed by the entire personnel stationed at Fort Benning.

I was particularly well pleased with field exercises, as well as the demonstrations, and feel that they were all handled in a superior manner.

To me, the month spent by the the troops at Fort Benning is by far the most important period of their training. I feel exceedingly fortunate in being afforded the opportunity of this concentration at Fort Benning, where the troops not only have the advantage of instruction by your excellent corps of instructors, but where they can observe the splendid discipline, personal appearance, and training of your entire command.

The maneuvers this spring were most successful and were highly satisfactory to me, due largely to the great help received from your officers and men.

Please extend to your command my congratulations on the high state of training they have attained and on their excellent appearance on all occasions. In ad-

Fort McPherson Team Wins Finals of Polo Tournament

Score Of 4 to 3 Ends Close, Hard Fought Game In Finals Last Sunday

By Bernard B. Swayze

Rank and file turned out last Sunday afternoon to witness the contest between the Sixth Cavalry and the Fort McPherson polo teams, in which the Fort McPherson team won the contest to cop the tournament. The Fort McPherson team won over the Cavary by a score of 4 to 3, after the hard riding Cavalry had spotted them two goals by handicap.

The Students won over the Free Booters in the second game to take the honors in the consolation tournament by a score of 8 to 4. The Students spotted the Free Booters a one goal handicap.

The Cavalry-Fort McPherson game kept the fans thrilled throughout the contest, with many unexpected angles of the game cropping out now and then. The game was not without its savor of danger that makes the game so popular with the American sport loving world.

In the fourth chukker, Captain Wing, who played at the number one position for the McPhersonites, was struck a severe blow from a hit ball. The ball hit him near the base of the skull, and for some time it seemed as though he would lose his seat, but through excellent horsemanship, managed to calm his mount and return to the game. It seemed though, that he allowed them to call play again too soon as shortly thereafter, he tried to make a play for the ball, and due to his dazed condition, lost his balance and fell from his mount. It was not necessary, however, to remove him from the game, and lusty cheers were heard from many points, cheering his fortitude.

After the last game, tea was served at the Polo Club, at which time Major General Campbell King, the Commandant, presented the trophies. The Commandant congratulated the winning team on its accomplishments and merits and in affect said that due to the fact they had met and defeated six good polo teams, everyone must be convinced that the victors were a great team, and one of which the Corps Area should be proud.

The Commandant then presented the members of the Fourth Corps Area team with a silver loving cup each. The cups were presented in the following order: Captain A. G. Wing., Inf., Major R. M. Howell, F. A., Warrant Officer Shubert and Lt. J. K. Baker.

The Commandant then presented the loving cups to the Student team, this being the consolation trophy for the tournament. The members of the team receiving the loving cups were: Lt. O. O. Wilson, Inf., Maj. T. de la M. Allen, Cav., Lt. J. J. Matthews and Lt. J. H. Griffiths.

The Games By Chukkers

Ft. McPherson-Sixth Cavalry

The Cavalry opened up operations with a bang, after spotting the Corps Area team two goals by handicap. It all happened so fast the spectators hardly had a chance to see just how it all happened. The Cavalry took possession of the ball from scrimmage, and straightaway dribbled it down the field, and Lt. Moores very obligingly tapped it through for a goal.

Several Southern Players Will Come To Tennis Matches

Several replies to invitations to attend the Open Invitation Tennis Tournament to be held at Fort Benning June 2d, 3rd, 4th and 5th have been received by officials of the tourney, according to information received from Major H. B. Lewis on Thursday. Among those who have signified their intention of participating in the tournament, which has heretofore gained quite an amount of prominence as one of the best attended and best played of this section, are Joe Grier, Rome, Ga.; Wilmer Hines, University of N.C.; Jack Mooney, Atlanta; Claude Pritchett, Auburn, Ala.; Jack Simpson, Auburn. Robert Bryan of Vanderbilt and Kendall Cram, of Nashville, will probably also be among those who attend.

Invitations to play in the tournament were mailed to practically all the most prominent tennis players of this section but, up until noon Thursday forty-three had not replied. It is expected that the next few days will see answers to practically all these invitations in the hands of the tennis officials of the Fort.

In the tournament this year, Jack Mooney of Atlanta will defend his title won last year. Bryan Grant, who has heretofore shown some of the best playing on the Bennng courts has not as yet accepted or rejected his invitation. Wilmer Hines, the flashy player from the University of North Carolina, is expected to add extra zest to the playing, his former record at other courts having shown him to

Officials For Next Dramatic Season Have Been Elected

Officers of the Dramatic Club for the coming year have been recently appointed by the board of directors. Major E. F. Harding was elected president, Major T. B. Catron, vice-president, Mrs. Isobel Chance, Director, Capt. H. J. Golightly, Treasurer and Business Manager, and Lt. R. V. Murphy, Asst. Treasurer and Business Manager.

All except Major Catron have had considerable past experience with the affairs of the Benning club and have manifested great interest and enthusiasm in its work. Mrs. Chance has been with the Benning players for the past four years in a prominent position. She served as director for the period of 1930-1931. Major Harding, who has been three years with the club, was director in 1929-1930. Capt. Golightly and Lt. Murphy have only had a year's experience with the Benning Dramatic club, while Major Catron has not yet served a full year as a member.

The past season has been a very successful one and one that is considered by everyone a credit to the members of the casts of the various plays and their assistants. A total of five plays were presented, all of which won a great deal of praise from the Benning playgoers.

Friday 13th Bad Luck Jinxes Herald Last Week

By An Unbeliever

You don't believe in it? Well—neither did we, until the date of our last issue came hurrying on—much too fast to suit the tastes of our harassed office force.

It all began like this. The Herald associate editor, desiring a real good piece of news for the front page of the Friday the 13th issue just past, snatched eagerly at the suggestion of General King that an article on the recently reopened Russ Pool would be both timely and appropriate, and so the deal was sealed. So far all seemed fine and dandy, and it was. But Allah, always omnipotent, and sometimes amused at the scurryings of his charges here on earth, had different plans up his sleeve.

Lt. Yarborough's article, consisted, in the main, of an interview with Major Homer L. Conner, the medical inspector of our local post. Lt. Yarborough quite justly placed his dependence on the well known fact that the dictator of affairs concerning the health at Benning is always one of the early frequenters of Post Headquarters and lay in wait for him to interview him there.

Well, to make a long story short, Major Conner failed to show up at his usually early hour and finally ambled in shortly before nine on the morning in question. Lt. Yarborough got his interview.

Now, the next two steps, in the order of their occurrence, were to have been the presentation of the article to General King for his approval, and its being placed on one of the buses bound for town, all safely approved and ready for the Herald force to take care of it. But, "The best laid plans of mice and men gang aft agley," and this case merely was another proof of the statement that has brought immortal fame to Bobbie Burns. General King, not realizing that Lt. Yarborough had planned for the precious copy to leave Fort Benning on the 9:15 Howard Bus for town, returned it to him at a time which proved dangerously near the sailing time of the bus—so near, in fact, that Corporal Cunningham, Lt. Yarborough's able Public Relations Office assistant, missed the bus by exactly three minutes.

The copy was placed safely on the next bus, however and it was soon safely in the hands of the printers—that is, all but the last page—that had accidentally been left on the table in the office at Fort Benning by the young man who mailed the envelope to town.

It seems that the accidents and untoward happenings are multiplying pretty fast now but that isn't all. Lt. Yarborough had requested that if a by-line was to accompany the article, his name be spelled "Yarborough" and not "Yarbrough," and we don't blame him, either. No one likes to have his name spelled wrong on every possible occasion. Anyway, while the Herald was taking special care to see that the name was spelled right, the always omnipotent printer was taking great pains to see that the credit for the article was given to the "Medical Inspector," and the printer won out.

While all the readers of the Herald have the utmost respect for the journalistic talents of the Medical Inspector, as evidenced by the interest in his "Here's to Your Health" column each week, still everyone wants to see that credit should go where credit belongs. The Herald feels this way about it, too, and it is for this reason that we must take up our typewriter and tell all our readers about the real troubles of an editor who has to issue a paper on Friday the 13th.

And in conclusion, we must admit that this isn't the first time that the Friday the 13th jinx has caught us. We remember well the morning about six a. m. when we had just finished an all night session of work that we went out after locking the door of the office and found that chariot had one flat tire!

SHRAPNEL BURSTS

Last Thursday saw the end of the three day maneuver, with students in command, as well as the end of the Fourth Corps Area Maneuvers at Fort Benning. The students who have transferred to the artillery were with the artillery on this maneuver so as to get as much experience as possible before joining the 83rd on June 1st. There were also some infantry students, who expect to remain in the doughboys all their life, but who said that they greatly appreciated the experience of being with the artillery for three days. They especially enjoyed fording the Upatoi creek at night at a point where no one had forded it for several years.

Monday, Lts. Heriot and Grubbs went to Auburn, Alabama, to judge the competitive drill of the twelve R. O. T. C. batteries. The drill was regular Infantry drill, without the use of rifles. The batteries were very nearly the same so it was quite hard to pick out the best one.

Yesterday, the two firing batteries, again put on the firing demonstration, "Field Artillery in Attack." This time however more shrapnel had to be used substituted for shell since there were only about seventy rounds of shell on the post.

HQ., HQ. BATTERY & C. T.

This being the last week for the scribe we will endeavor to make this column as complete as possible.

Maneuvers of the 4th Corps Area have been brought to a successful close. When we say successful, it is an impression made upon our higher officers of the 4th Corps Area. From them come nothing but commendation and praise for the Battalion. After all it is every individual's part that brings credit to his organization and the battery's part that brings credit to its battalion.

Lt. Bartlett finally decided that the suit (model 1928) had seen better days, and journeyed to Columbus, Ga., to try and duplicate it at one of the leading clothiers for $12.50. We all hope that you were successful in accomplishing this mission, Lieutenant.

Cpl. Cherry, (entering orderly room) "Sgt. I want to get a three day pass starting Monday."

1st Sgt., "Where do you want to go?"

Cpl. Cherry, "I want to go to Griffin, Ga."

Pooch Derrick transferred this week to Hq. Battery 82nd F. A., at Fort Bliss, Texas. Capt. W. B. Weston who formerly commanded this battery is in command of Hq. Battery 82nd. F. A. McAuliffe and "Rat" Walters also left this week to join the same organization.

The school year is about to come to a close so the boys are thinking about a hike again this year. Sgt. McLeod, Cpl. Williams and Pvt. Vestal made a reconnaissance last week in the vicinity of Albany, Ga. From all reports the suburbs of Ragsdale expect us to lay a wire net again with the C. P. located near Blue Springs.

Cpl. Hurst and his liaison detail moved out to the vicinity of the last maneuver, to pick up some wire, and got lost in the Torch Hill Area. From all reports a negro woman directed Cpl. Hurst and his detail to the right road so that they counld proceed to camp.

1st Sgt. Sweger got discharged today and according to an old Hq. Btry. custom he passed out the cigars. We are proud that the first sergeant is reenlisting and will be with us for another three years. He expects to go on furlough to Harrisonburg, Pa., where he will fish and hunt in the mountains of Pennsylvania.

BATTERY "A"

There is a rumor circulating in the battery that one of our noble and red blooded Corporals has denied his birthright to the name of "Speedy" and desires the world at large to know that he is "Harmless." Also, that after his Army career is over he will retire to the nearest Monastery.

Pfc. (Slim) Dozier, after acting as Camouflage Sergeant during the last maneuvers, has decided to give up his career as horseshoer extraordinary, and adopt the former as his life work.

The Sultan, after a 30 day tour of Alabama and Tennessee, where he went thru many trials and temptations, has returned to his home station with glamourous tales of the West. Anyone contemplating of touring these two states will do well to consult the Sultan as to places of refreshments and detours that must be made to avoid entangling alliances.

There have been many rides and raids recorded in the history of this country, but we honestly believe that the famous rider Paul Revere and the equal famous raider Morgan would turn over in their graves with envy if they received word of the thrilling and dashing ride and raid made on Uchee in Alabama, by three members of this organization last week, in a T Model Ford. We understand that the people of Eastern Alabama wired the Governor for troops thinking Sherman had returned and no doubt Columbus would have done likewise if there had been no deep ditches on Crawford Road.

The hangover after the maneuvers is on the battery and with everybody trying to go on furlough, gunners examination coming up, material to the Fort McPherson knights tightened their defense, and played a more or less conservative game for the rest of the contest. They never took chances, but played that level-headed game that has so much helped them in this tournament. Neither team scored again for the remainder of that chukker.

Polo Tournament

The second chukker found both teams fighting for the upper hand. The Ft. McPherson team probably had the best of the breaks through this period, and had a couple of chances to push over counters, but old dame luck had a lot to say about that pair of goal posts. It seemed that the post would move from in front of nice drives, from time to time. The spectators began to take notice of the abilities of Major Howell of the Fort McPherson team, and of Colonel Gordon Johnston of the Sixth Cavalry.

It seemed for a while in the third chukker that the Cavalry had hit its stride again and would surely tie this game in a knot, but here again it was checkmated by the conservative playing of the heady poloist from Atlanta. Time and again the Cavalry would have nice chances at a goal, but Major Howell and company would have something to say about it. Then as from a clear blue sky, the Ft. McPherson team broke lose with a nice full field drive by Lt. Baker, and Major Howell scored for the McPhersonites. This put them back in the same position as at the starting of the game, with a two goal handicap.

Neither team scored in the fourth chukker, and the play was rather listless until Captain Wing was injured by the hit ball. After his rest, the period seemed to belong somewhere in a polo game, and things went along nicely for the rest of that period.

Fort McPherson scored her second Time, forty-two seconds.

It was nip and tuck thereafter, for and final counter of the game in the fifth chukker. It came after a nice bit of dribbling by Captain Wing and a nice drive by that same worthy poloist, and then Warrant Officer Shubert showed his ability as both a rider and a polo player, when he dashed into the melee and popped the winning goal for his team.

While the stands had been waiting for the Cavalry to hit their stride, the Cavalry team seemed to be completely unconscious of the fact that they had a stride at all. It was not until the latter part of the sixth period that they showed any serious threats at the enemy goal, after having scored one in the initial frame. Colonel Johnston set up a beautiful cross shot and Lt. Hutchinson promptly gave the ball the added momentum that was needed to count a goal for the horse soldiers. It was Lt. Hutchinson, who again scored in the final seconds of the last chukker, but his gallant bid for victory only availed a closer score, for before play had well begun from the scrimmage that follows a goal, the final bell had rung, and the deserving team from Fort McPherson had won her laurels.

The individual scores, by chukkers, in the consolation game, were as follows:

Wilson scored one goal in 2nd and one in third. Allen scored in second, third and fourth. Matthews scored in first, fourth and fifth. Total, eight goals.

Lockett scored in first. Nichols scored in third, fourth and sixth. Total, four goals.

83rd Field

clean and paint again and old Sol beaming down, it looks as if the short discharge and transfer clerk is going to be kept busy twenty-four hours a day. The fact is, if certain conditions continue the 1st Battalion, 83rd Field Artillery, will not be a part of the standing army but a traveling one.

Heard during maneuvers:

1st Officer: "I am going to send my photograph to the Blankety Blank Magazine and see if they won't consider it in the Good Looking Men's Contest."

2d Officer: "Send some of your ideas to Noah Numbskull, and I'm sure you will receive an answer."

We wish to recommend the following act as one worthy of incongruous consideration:

On the night of May 9, 1932, Corporal Brown, Charge of Quarters, was called to do a Paul Revere (after asking for the assignment) to Columbus, and notify the members of this orgnaization who were in the city that the battery would leave for parts unknown on the reservation at 3:30 a. m. This noble deed he performed with dispatch, husbands were forced to leave their wives and little ones, sweethearts were torn asunder and bachelor members departed from their clubs and haunts to no avail— the battery pulled out from the gun park at 8:00 a. m. Moral: "Move to a post where they do not have maneuvers—if you can."

Sgt. (Snufty) McCann says he never gets an opportunity to be alone with his Lizzie on account of Pvts. McCall and Sailers snooping. Go to the movies, Mac.

BATTERY "C"

The Corps Area maneuvers of 1932 have gone by and though they were lighter than the ones of the previous year, our battery was called upon and functioned in the true "C" battery fashion. The only disappointment we had was that we did not see Harmony Church or Ochillee during the last three days' maneuvers. These points have replaced Harp's Pond as the most visited and cursed places around Ft. Bennnig. Harmony Church and Ochillee attacks and defenses and the watering of animals are becoming a nightmare. We hope Headquarters finds a new hole with water or builds a new water reservoir, so we can forget about them.

We crossed the Upatoi during the night without the use of the engineers bridge. Everything crossed in great fashion, but we were glad to reach Torch Hill. During the same maneuvers we traveled about 50 miles but were never further than a stone's throw away from home. As long as our kitchen comes along we don't mind much where we go.

The review in honor of the two generals King was another successful event. We have passed reviews with horses for five years but on Saturday we went by the reviewing stand at a faster speed than we ever attained before. Those 105mm guns might be heavier but our horses surely don't show it. We heard rumors that these same guns are not so efficient during firing, but they look pretty well. If serge shirts and Stetson hats make a soldier, this man's army has plenty of them. Appearances is what counts, both for men and guns.

If the picture of Buffalo Bill continues much longer we will have some aspirants for the asylum in Milledgeville. With Bill Cowdy and Dave Archie as examples our corporals in the detail are doing some fancy work and are high tailing it to Columbus about every night. When the picture had shown the burning up of a shack our riders went downtown and burned up some mattresses and blankets and would have done further harm but the spirit of civilization prevailed just in time.

Clipping of horses, including manes and fetlocks, is no longer the job for ordinary soldiers in our battery. It has been pronounced an art and it takes long hours of instruction and demonstration before one is qualified to use a clipping machine. It won't be long bfeore we will have manicure girls at our stable barber establishment. Our stable orderly has been promoted to water boy and hands every man a dipper full of fresh and warm water during our rest period. All we need now is a negro boy to brush off our fatigue clothes after grooming and we are all set for something, what, we don't know and don't care. When one of our 75mm guns refused to go back into battery after oiling the slides it took the brains of our battery, including the BC detail, 30 minutes to figure out a way to handle the stubborn gun.

Boy Scouts

We held our regular meeting at the Scout Cabin at 4:15 P. M. Friday. There were 16 Boy Scouts and 1 official present. Four boys were excused because of a hike. We played "three deep." It was announced that the Boy Scouts will start their practice for the horse show. We were to play a baseball game last Saturday but there is something wrong and I think it's the swimming polo. We will have a game next Saturday with the 24th Inf. Boy Scouts.

We had an especially small meeting last Friday and not enough men for the baseball game. We hope this will not continue for there has been a big improvement in scout work and we hope neither the swimming pool nor anything else will stop it. We want all Boy Scouts to be present at the next meeting and we would like to have some visitors too.

WHO ARE THESE FRENCH?

FRIEDRICH SIEBURG

Because of some extraordinary quality of sympathy and sensitiveness, Friedrich Sieburg, who for some time was Paris correspondent of a German newspaper, has learned to know the French better, almost, than they know themselves. In judging them, he is lamentably torn between mind and heart. As a trained modern intelligence and a believer in international cooperation, Herr Sieburg is appalled by the backwardness, the inefficiency, the smugness, the narrow self-sufficiency of the French. He knows as well as the next person that France is an obstacle to the progress of Europe. And yet—in the same breath that he chastises—he admits that he would not have France change by so much as one slovenly concierge, that he could not face a world in which there was no longer a tradition of gracious, irrational leisureliness, that France is the last refuge of the independent human spirit, that "he will not venture to decide which is better—a perfect system of social services or an inexhaustible supply of bread and wine." On the serious side, Herr Sieburg has made a complete and searching analysis of France's psychology, of her claim to be the guardian of civilization, of her passion to defend, against all-comers, her cultural tradition and leadership. Far better than most politico-economic writers he clarifies the real causes of the tension between France and Germany. It is likely, however, that most readers will cherish his book for its enchantment, its devoted delineation of French life and ways. In learning to understand France, Herr Sieburg has also learned to write with a wit, grace, and sparkle which one thinks of as typically French.

Girl Scout Notes

OVERNIGHT CAMPING TRIP

Friday the thirteenth, unlucky? Not on your life! Friday, the thirteenth of May, fifty-odd Girl Scouts, two Scout Captains, and their four lieutenants assembled at the cabin. Into a huge truck were loaded some sixty bedding rolls. Into six machine gun trucks piled three score Scouts. Forty-five minutes ride, and this veritable army descended upon the Academic camp.

The explanation? This was the beginning of the reward of the Scout year: the hoped-for, worked-for overnight camp expedition. For it we are indebted to the Scout leaders, Mrs. Matchett, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Kellam, Mrs. Smith, Miss Stilwell, and Miss Seeley, who planned and managed it, and the Quartermaster, who provided transportation and mosquito netting.

As soon as the bedding rolls had been unloaded, there was a grand scramble to gather pine needles for mattresses, unroll the bedding, and set up the mosquito bars and nets.

After the Fire Patrol had gathered wood and built a huge fire, preparations for super were in order. The Cooking Patrol, for the sake of convenience, cooked all the hamburger in one enormous frying pan, the largest in captivity, being more than two feet across. If you have seen starved lions eat the first meal in a week, you have some conception of how the little Girl Scout angels went for hamburgers, buns, and fruit.

We were on the sixth course—same as the first—when a car drove up in the dusk. Several figures got out. A moment later, Mrs. Matchett blew a shrill blast on her whistle, calling the entire camp to attention. Tense silence, then—

"Girls", (reverent tone) "Sgt. and Mrs. McNulty have brought us," she said, "five gallons of ice cream!"

What screams of delight arose! Remindful, in this woodsy, dusky setting, of the victory cry of Tarzan the Ape Man. There was something about this ice cream that history may never repeat; everyone had as much as she wanted! In several dozen hearts, the McNultys have become Saint McNulty and his hallowed wife.

The Police Patrol picked up, swept up, cleaned up, burned up the abundant trash.

In the night shadows, the group drew about the campfire in a cosy circle. The Cardinals opened the ceremonies with an original song, their own, joint, nonsensical composition. There was a verse about every member of the senior troop. Girl Scout songs, silly song, songs in foreign languages, stories and jokes, not to mention toasted marshmallows, followed in enjoyable sucession. The Stilwell trio, Nancy, Winnie, and Allison kindly did a tap dance, which, remarkable thing, was sous music, and in perfect time!

It took a long time for the five dozen to get to bed. Ever try to tuck in that many? The pine needle beds were remarkably comfortable, and the night was lovely: clear, cool and still.

Most of the girls were up long before the sun reached the site. While they were eating their breakfast fruit, the giant frying pan put in another appearance. Bacon fried, eggs scrambled with it, and popped into buns made the neatest of camp breakfasts. Cocoa completed it.

The buses had not arrived by the time the bedding has been re-rolled, the mosquito nets folded up, and the place made scrupulously clean. Until they did, the girls sang, hunted for interesting plants, and caught up on lost sleep. The greatest source of entertainment was in the baby blue jay, rescued after he had fallen from his net. Mrs. Matchett took him home, and we heard only today of his unfortunate death. Funeral plans have not yet been announced.

Back at the Scout cabin, the tired and grimy gang gave three cheers for the people who made possible this delightful expedition. Both troops join here in thanking them countless times.

As only those Daffodils who were Second Class or over could go on this trip, Mrs. Matchett took the remaining members from a picnic-lunch Saturday morning.

CARDINAL TROOP

Since most of the troop were taking either swimming or photographer's Badge Tuesday, the Cardinal meeting was small and informal. While some of the girls swept the cabin for the Court of Awards, others filled in our scrap book of notes and souvenirs.

CHILDREN'S HORSE SHOW

Many of the Girl Scouts who took riding from Mrs. Arnold and Lieut. Moon last winter drew horses Thursday for the Children's Horse Show, May 28.

MERIT BADGES

Sunday and Tuesday, Sgt. Pope at Russ Pool gave Swimmer Badge. At the map reproduction room Capt. Liston gave Photographer's Tuesday. Pioneer, under Capt. Hones, was Saturday morning.

COURT OF AWARDS

This is a final invitation to those interested in Scouts or Scouting to attend the Court of Awards, May 26, Remember the date. Reserve it. We appreciate your attention and enjoy having you with us.

Lt. Dowdall Gives Illustrated Talk

"Along El Camino Real" is the subject selected by First Lieutenant Harry G. Dowdall, Infantry, of Fort Benning, Georgia, for a stereopticon lecture to be given at Knights of Columbus Hall (over Economy Drug Store) 12th Street, on Wednesday evening, May 25th, at 8 P. M., sponsored by the Catholic Club.

olic Missionary Society of Georgia.

The subject will deal with the founding of the early Spanish Missions of California , their romantic history and their influence in California today.

"El Camino Real" is the name of the principal highway running from South to North through the Golden State. It follows closely the route taken by the Spanish Padres who established the Missions. They wished to honor their king, so the road which led from Mission to Mission was called "El Camino Real"—the highway of the King.

Lieutenant Dowdall is not only a native of California, but was raised in the Mission Parish of San Francisco. Naturally, his information covering the Missions was gathered by personal contact.

Last Supper Dance Of Season At Polo Club

As the school year needs an end, the Officers' Club announces the final week's supper dance of the season for Thursday, May 26th.

This dance will be held at the Polo-Hunt Club with the tables on the porches, if weather conditions permit.

All table reservations have been subscribed. Last Thursday the turn in the weather forced the transfer of the supper dance from the Polo-Hunt Club to The Officers' Club lobby.

The Secretary hopes the weather will be warm enough next Thursday to permit the original plan being carried out.

Club Notes

A canopy at the main to The Officers' Club has been erected for the protection of those visiting the Club during inclement weather.

The Biglerville Mess will close after the evening meal of May 26th.

The Officers' Club Grill will be prepared to care for all boarders, and others, at regular meals until the end of the school year.

Benning Team To Participate In Atlanta Horse Show

A Fort Benning team consisting of four officers will compete in the annual Horseshow which will be held in Atlanta on May 20 and 21st. Major John B. Thompson, Cavalry, will be in charge of the team going to Atlanta. Besides these Mrs. John B. Thompson and Mrs. H. W. Brimmer will accompany the riders and take part in the events. The entire team is listed in a special order issued at Benning on May 16 are as follows:

Major John B. Thompson
Captain Frank M. Lee
Lt. Harold W. Brimmer
Lt. Hammond McD. Monroe

Eleven enlisted men will go to Atlanta with the officers, nine from Service Company, 24th Infantry and two from the 100th M. T. Company.

The Benning team made quite a reputation for itself at the Horseshow, Major C. B. Lyman, on his horse "Maui Girl" taking five first places and one second place. The entire team, which last year was much larger than that entered this year, captured a majority of the ribbons for which they were entered, a total of 57 per cent.

GUNBOTHAM'S SCHOOL DAZE

By J. L. G.

The wars are over, and the Field Soldiers have returned to the futuristic homes of Blocks 21 and 23. To the question of "who won the war?" the answer is undoubtedly "The chiggers." To warriors like Munson, Shugart, McHugh et al, these night operations are nothing new. In fact Long Jawn Griffith got more sleep on maneuvers than he ever gets when at home.

Moran broke out a growley the other day when he was commended during the critique for his communication job on the battlefield. Tuesday, General Joe Kielty publicly presented Moran with the "Order of the Red Faced Boy" and read the following citation: "With udder disregard for life and a full mess kit, Lt. Moran did, on May 10-13, perform his duties. His wire was of great value in tripping both cavalry and doughboys. His communication never did work, thereby preventing our brigade commander from accomplishing a poor plan."

Shugart pulled the worst one of his already-too-long career. Our striker's name is Fair, and on the recent reconnaissance ride of Gunbotham and Shugart, we came upon Private Fair, who was very busy shooting blanks at a Red flag. "Look," exclaimed Shugger—"Fair gunnin'."

We cannot drape this paragraph in enough black. Poor Lillyhoo Zilch, the athletic hope of the age, is no more. During our acquaintance with Lillyhoo Zilch, we always found her to be a very nice, well behaved rabbit. Gab Gab Rudolph was training Lillyhoo for the race against Gunbotham's snappy terrapin, Mr. Terrence Pin, by name. However, due to his excessive studies, Gab Gab was unable to train the beastie properly, so Kay and Bim Carne, who are famous for their hospitality, took on the good work. Lillyhoo was peacefully eating all of the flowers in the Carne's front yard, when the maid, who was on watch, had to answer the telephone. Poor Lillyhoo was enveloped by a roving dog, and all Block 21-23 is in mourning. The athletic engagement has necessarily been indefinitely postponed.

Madame "Annie Rooney" Vermette having told Gunbotham a good one on her husband "Gunman Joe," blond Adonis, breaks into print again. We hope they continue to try to get something on each other, for as soon as they do. they tell Gunbotham, and material is hard to get, now that this period of suppression is on the land. Anyhow, der Captain told Gunbotham that they were watching the searchlights work anti-air missions the other night. Madame Zuver, wife of the famed columnist and host, Count Pablo Zuvaloff, asked, "What are they looking for with those search lights?" Captain Vermette said, "An airplane." Whereupon his wife asked "Oh—have they lost an airplane?" Der Captain immediately called up Lt. Barnette, air man, and told him that Madame Vermette was worried, so would he please count his planes to see that none were missing.

Bob McBride, visiting fireman for the maneuvers, tells of a town in Carolina that is so badly off that the girls marry army officers for their money. Bim Carne, who usually gets off a pretty good one, ruined his reputation by telling about the man who had nothing to sit on at the polo game, but as he was very bored with his wife, he sat on the board. That was bad enough, but Jimmy Clinton, Tanker boxing boss, broke up the ses-

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

POISONOUS SPIDERS

Contrary to popular belief there are very few spiders that are poisonous to man. Only one variety of poisonous spider is found at Fort Benning where it is more or less common. This "black widow", the horn-glass" spider, or "shoe-button" spider is known to scientists as Lactroelectus Mactens.

The female, which is larger than the male is the spider that usually bites. When full grown she is about one half inch long, but perhaps with a leg spread of one and a half inches.

These spiders are usually shiny coal black in color and have brilliant red or yellow spots. The spots equal one or more on the back, while in front is one larger spot shaped like a horn glass.

The abdomen is rounded to resemble a black shoe button.

The name "black widow" is derived from the habit of the female of killing and instantly sucking the blood of the male after breeding has occurred.

The young spiders are gray in color and are very active in attacking plant lice or other small insects which are to be found on any vegetation.

This black spider is very ferocious and will attack anything which becomes entangled in its web.

The poison, like all other insect poisons is acid, and persons bitten vary greatly in the amount of reaction. Rarely a death has been reported from this cause.

Usually there is a stinging sensation and small spots appear at the site of the bite. Within a short time shooting pains and throbbing in the chest or abdomen begin which last for several hours. There is difficulty in breathing, vomiting, chills, and a dizzy feeling which may continue for two or three days. It may take two weeks to entirely recover.

Remember that spiders as a rule are beneficial to plant life and only rarely attack man.

If you are bitten by a spider make ever effort to capture it so that identification and proper treatment can be made by the doctor.

MAJOR ARCHIBALD V. ARNOLD

"Oranges for Attack, Bananas for Defense." So it is when you are placing your artillery in a map problem by the simple method of outlining an area in the shape of the above mention fruits. Claiming no originality of that expression Major "Archie" Arnold endeavored to take the mystery out of the Field Artillery. "Scrambled Eggs and Horse Feathers" might have been uttered by Colonel Stilwell when he announced the Field Artillery Specialist to discuss the use or non-use of the Artillery during the recent student commanded maneuver. With no intention of inferring that any of us might have done better we were reminded that not a shot was fired during the first twenty hours of the battle. Artillery Liaison Officer was A. W. O. L. from Brigade P. C. and only a miracle could have brought down artillery support for the co-ordinated attack etc., etc. Well, Red Durfee saved the day by his spectacular and ingenious fording of the Upatoi by the Artillery as a climax to the maneuver. In the face of all that however, the Advanced Class looks back on the Artillery Course as a profitable experience. There has been no more popular member of the faculty than the custodian of the book with the red cover.

"Let the Caissons go rolling along."

Captains Walter Sherfey and William L. Phillips have been in the Station Hospital for the past two weeks. Here's hoping that they will be in line when the sheepskins are handed out next week.

One by one they fell. It was interesting to watch the pure fall by the wayside when the marked problem in tactics were handed back. At the present writing, gossip indicates that there are not more than one or two whose grades have not been marred by a fat "U."

It has been a long time since we had the motor course.

---

Captain Arnold Funk has been in for a bit of razzing since it was publicly announced that he is to be the High Sheriff of Fort Benning upon graduation.

---

Major Terry de La M. Allen, popular student and Cavalry Soldier has walked out on us. Some business has prevented him from showing up at Kriz Hall during the past week. His last official act was to gallop Company C of the 8th Infantry three an a half miles under cover of Oswichee Creek and capture the Field Train of the 6th Cavalry as well as the Command Post of Major Denney McCuniff, commander of the Red Forces in the last maneuver.

THE FLARE LIGHTS UP THE MANEUVERS

Being primarily concerned with the production and revision of Infantry School Literature, we had no official connection with the Great War of 1932 other than that of a free lance observer and casual correspondent. We got around a bit, however, and made a few notes on points that the umpires missed. These, coupled with the reports of our efficient corps of volunteer agents, constitute ample material for a gripping inside story of the operations which will go down to posterity as one of our greatest unpublished works on the military art.

One chapter will discuss the functions of a cavalry screen in the machine age. This will settle once for all the much mooted isue of whether a motorized infantry outfit precedes its cavalry screen when it overtakes it or whether the cavalrymen ought to turn their mounts over to the horseholders and keep ahead of the doughboys by riding on the hood of the leading truck. It will also undertake to answer the question of who's screening whom when the infantry leapfrogs the cavalry and rides into its assault position in the style to which it is accustomed.

---

"These are Clan Alpin's warriors true
And, Saxon, I am Roderick Dhu."

Another chapter will analyze the tactics of Major Terry Allen, the dashing Advanced Class cavalryman who enveloped the Red Army's left flank with one company of infantry and nearly ended the war at one fell swoop.

The Reds marking the front line had left their flags behind and for the moment Terry's small Blue enveloping force had them outnumbered. Then Professor McCunniff came to the rescue of his hard pressed cohorts. Hastily breaking out a whole box full of red flags, each representing a platoon, he armed all available troopers with two each and sent them against the Blue flanking detachment from all sides. Meanwhile the Professor himself, with an armful of flags, charged down upon the valiant Terry and ordered him off the premises. Awed by the sight of a whole Red Army Corps which sprang from nowhere, even the intrepid cavalryman was made to behave.

Another chapter will deal with secrecy and means of obtaining it. For this chapter we have the historical illustration of the unknown lieutenant who commanded the tank company during the last Corps Area Maneuver.

After a long night made hideous by the tanks going off trucks and then clanking up and down the road for hours within easy earshot of the enemy, the tank lieutenant approached the brigade commander. Carefully picking his way to avoid breaking any twigs and thus alarming the alert foe, he came close to his chief and whispered, "When do you want the tanks, Sir?"

Of course our great unpublished opus will contain plenty of human interest stories. Among these will be the account of a near tragic incident in which Major Freehoff figured. The Major, in his favorite role of military observer, having fared forth at midnight to witness the crossing at McBride's Ford stopped off at the Veteran's Bureau at the 29th Infantry Camp to obtain information. Finding the entire organization wrapped in profound slumber the genial Secretary was moved to rouse Major Smith and his exhausted assistants to inquire the whereabouts of General Fuzzard, the distinguished soldier of fortune who was so much in the public eye a few weeks back.

For a brief space the playful Secretary toyed with the idea of dumping the sleepers out on the ground but happily his kindlier nature prevailed. Casting a reluctant glance over the sleeping occupants of the cabin. he withdrew. The next morning he learned that the Corps Commander, General E. L. King, was one of the sleepers whom he had contemplated rolling out on the floor.

The Conductor of The Flare, who was an eyewitness, but in no sense a party to the nefarious project, is not sorry that the Secretary thought twice before acting upon his intention. For, while it would have been a rare treat to see the Major do a running jump off the high bluff, it would have been no fun to jump with him.

We note with pleasure that the Fourth Section has succeeded in leaving one historical fact firmly implanted in the minds of all members of the Advanced Class. The maneuver which forced the withdrawal of the Blues across the Upatoi was recognized by all as a First Section Cannae with Professor McCunniff in the role of Hannibal.

DISASTER STALKS THE SHERIFF

Captain Wild Bill Tuttle, the well known preserver of law and order, has been having a bit of hard luck lately.

Not long ago he filled in for an absent member of the Thanatopsis Club and at the conclusion of the festivities drew the customary check. Then, being businesslike in all things, he carefully entered the amount on the stub. Later, in his oral repor upon the state of the union to Mrs Tuttle, he inadvertently misplaced th decimal point one digit to the left— a natural mistake which anyone migh make under the circumstances.

The next day Mrs. Tuttle, in drawing a check, noted the stub which th Sheriff had made out the night befor It was her check book which the ca tain had inadvertently picked up he went forth to beard the Thanato sis brethren in their lair.

A few days later, at the big revie a lady from the neighboring metro olis bumped the Sheriff with her ca ruffling his dignity and ventilating t seat of his breeches. The Sheriff mig have recovered quickly from the fo mer injury had it not been for t latter. As it was, he carried both wit him all during the entire review fro which his arduous duties as big sh traffic cop did not permit him to l absent.

As the Sheriff had dealings wi the Corps Area Comander and othe of high rank the rent in the seat his breeches caused him great embarrassment. Also, it drew considerable comment from the spectators, many of whom thought that the Chief of the M. P. was trying to introduce court etiquette when they observed him backing away from the Generals King, for all the world like a debutant withdrawing from the august presence of royalty.

COUNTER ATTRACTION IDEA

Mrs. Vermette, the well known actress, has a temperamental Scotch terrier who insists on making a bee line for the Commandant's lawn immediately upon being let out in the morning.

Fearing lest her pet run afoul of the MP's who are always on the lookout for canine violators of the law, Mrs. Vermette asked Captain "Plumb Dead" Whatley if he couldn't suggest some remedy for Shanter's morning dash into forbidden territory. Why she didn't take the matter up with Colonel Seeley or have Shanter psychoanalyzed by Colonel Stayer we can't say, but anyway it wasn't necessary. Captain Whatley knows his dogs as well his shrubbery and was ready with a solution.

"I'll tell you what you do, Mrs. Vermette" said the botanical expert. "You plant the same kind of bushes in your yard as the General has in his."

AT IT AGAIN

The Flare has learned that Major Paul Peabody, former Benning Matinee Idol and President of The Infantry School Dramatic Club, has been cast for a leading part in the forthcoming production of the Montgomery Players. That makes three for the current season. We are quite confident that Major Peabody is not threatened by any of the prosposed elimination bills so he must be acquiring this stock company experience in anticipation of the day when Congress will abolish the Army altogether.

ANODYNE

Speaking of elimination, officers who expect to be competing for civilian jobs should be thinking about taking up something for which ex-congressmen aren't specially suited. There may be a lot of competition in such fields. These are precarious days for government servants both appointive and elective.

The Class Tennis and Golf Tournaments are under way, and quite a lot of students have entered. The team of Hammack and Lee failed to enter the doubles, and that leaves the tennis outcome a very doubtful one. There is some talk of playing the academic department a game of indoor baseball outdoors. We feel sure that the First Section would be better at throwing horse-shoes.

Playing their best game of the year, the student mallet swingers whacked the bounding pellet by the enemy's red flags eight times, while the Freebooters collected but five. The entire team was on the ball. Major Terry Allen was all smiles at the end, and Zero Wilson was "on." It is rumored that a song about "somebody standing beside somebody else, on a rock" was heard well into the wee sma' hours Sunday night, but that's just a rumor, and Gunbotham wouldn't want anybody to accept it as a fact.

When they start eliminating second Looeys, Gunbotham is not going to try to make his fortune writing, because he'd starve to death. But millions are to be made in his "All Around Employment Agency." The students will all be placed in jobs for which they are suited. The following tenientes are already signed up—John Harvey Kane, professional polo player and instructor in radio. Key practices in a Back Bay night school. Bill Bullock will help him with the polo. McHugh is either going to be in the wrecking game, or a travelling salesman. Shugart and Rudolph will continue to run a night club. Munson will be a night watchman. Hammack will be a gigolo. Slowdrip Silverman will test Beauty rest mattresses. Homewood will be a Chatauqua lecturer. Martin will do cowboy numbers for the movies. Lanham will continue to play poker. Daddy Woods will stamp out forest fires. Trent will starve to death Kernan, Moscatelli, Selman and Lu will become gangsters. Nerts Dicks will be a Fuller brush man. Kengla and White will move pianos. Lowry will kill himself in an auto sooner or later anyhow, so he doesn't need work. Winn will be a pro football player, Inch Will will marry money. Gunbotham will publish the other jobs and the men who have been placed, at a later date. If you know of any possibilities, we'd be glad to have them.

AT THE RIALTO

SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Presenting, "BUSINESS AND PLEASURE," with Will Rogers and Jetta Goudal. In this one Will rallies to the defense of the much-maligned "Babbitt," a creature of the sarcastic, yet delightful soul, of Sinclair Lewis, famed author. Will is "Earl Tinker," Middle Western razor blade manufacturer. He embarks on a Mediterranean cruise with his jealous, nagging wife and resentful daughter, ostensibly on pleasure bent, although he actually has a very shrewd piece of business in mind.

TUESDAY ONLY: Presenting, "LADIES OF THE BIG HOUSE," with Sylvia Sidney, Gene Raymond, Wynne Gibson and a strong supporting cast. Too young to die! Their skins too white, their blood too red, their will to live and to love, too utterly unquenchable to say "surrender" to a Fate that would have crushed you—and a million others.

WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY: Presenting, "COMPROMISED," with Rose Hobart and Ben Lyon, Juliette Compton (formerly of Columbus, Ga.) Claude Gillingwater and Bert Roach. Too shameful to be remembered, too beautiful to be forgotten. Her lips still burn from that kiss that promised love, respectable motherhood and happiness—but ended in disillusionment, shame, loneliness. "COMPROMISED" is the vivid story of a girl who was ostracized becaused she dared to enter society by the back door.

AT THE GRAND

SATURDAY, SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Presenting, "NIGHT COURT," with Walter Huston, Anita Page and Phillips Holmes. They were so happy . . . like two love birds . . . and then she was framed by the agents of the Night Court. It's a true story taken from real life. A woman framed by a corrupt judge. For the first time in many months, a new, vital, throbbing idea has come to the screen. A mighty talkie entertainment taken from actual facts that occurred last year in New York City and which caused a nation-wide sensation.

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Presenting, "THE MISLEADING LADY," with Claudette Colbert, Edmund LOWE and Stuart Erwin. Kidnaped! Carried off, struggling, at midnight! Spirited by plane to a lonely hunting lodge. Chained up while her captor laughed. Is it all in fun? You'll say so when you see "THE MISLEADING LADY." She tries to mislead a HE-man into love—and gets herself into a peck of trouble.

AT THE ROYAL

SUNDAY, MONDAY AND TUESDAY: Presenting, "LETTY LYNTON," with Robert Montgomery and Joan Crawford. Two loves but only one of them was real. Put yourself in her place—a girl's dream of love realized, only to be menaced by a past indiscretion. It's thrilling, it's full of tears and laughs, it rings true because it IS true. Two great stars, surpassing former triumphs. Here is a romance in a thousand . . . . a thrilling, moving love story with the two stars at their very peak. The Joan Crawford of "POSSESSED." The Robert Montgomery of "PRIVATE LIVES." Here you find them together in a great romance.

"Letty Lynton" with Joan Crawford and Robert Montgomery in the principal roles will be the attraction at the Royal theatre beginning with a midnight show Saturday and continuing through Tuesday evening. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's sensational filmization of the Marie Belloc Lowndes novel is an intriguing drama of modern morals with a vivd climax in which the heroine is faced with the choice of loss of reputation or prison. Clarence Brown, who last directed Miss Crawford in "Possessed," screened this new romance of South America and New York. A notable supporting cast includes Nils Asther, the noted Swedish player, Lewis Stone, May Robson, Louise Closser Hale, Emma Dunn, Walter Walker and William Pawley.

Rogers Continues His Aviation Enthusiasm

Will Rogers, world famous comedian and humorist, now winning new fame on the talking picture screen in "Business and Pleasure" at the Rialto Theatre Sunday and Monday, is also one of the world's greatest aviation enthusiasts.

Rogers never takes a train, bus, automobile, boat or any other sort of conveyance if he can take a plane. And when you consider that he averages at least 25.000 miles of travel every year, in addition to his labors in films, that means considerable air mileage.

"It is astounding how you can hop around in an airplane," Rogers said recently, in discussing his hobby. "It certainly is the best way to see any country.

"For instance, a wealthy English friend of mine came over recently on a visit. He wanted to see as much as he could and had only three weeks in which to do it. So I laid out an itenerary for him.

"I suggested, after a couple of days of sight-seeing in New York, that he fly to Boston. Then up through New England and on to Montreal, back by way of Niagara Falls, then to Chicago. From there to Yellowstone Park, up through the Canadian Rockies and then down the Pacific Coast, returning East by way of the Grand Canyon, New Orleans, Atlanta, Charleston, Norfolk, Washington and back to New York.

"I heard from him after he completed the journey. He said he had seen so much that it would take him a year to get it all straightened out in his mind. That he felt he had seen more of America than if he had spent a year traveling on boats and trains."

Wheels of Justice Need Oiling Declares Director of Drama Exposing Courts

Justice, to be properly administered, must be as certain that the innocent are protected as it is relentless in convicting the guilty.

This is the view of W. S. Van Dyke, well-known director and student of criminology, who screened "Night Court," new talkie drama to be at the Grand Theatre Saturday, Sunday and Monday which depicts the daring theme of political corruption in a court of law. The picture is said to have been based upon allegations directed by investigating bodies against irregularities in the administration of magistrate's courts.

Cases Brought to Light

"The story is entirely fictitious, laying no claim to facts," the director pointed out. "However, from the reports of various inquisitorial groups we learn that cases of purposely misdirected justice to exist.

"A short time ago a police officer, pardoned from a penitentiary for a major crime, came out with the statement that he was convinced that at least ten per cent of the felons in that particular prison were not guilty of the crime for which they were convicted and should not have been arrested in the first place. Again, a former district attorney, freed from the same penitentiary, voiced similar belief. Instances of convicts being pardoned when the crimes traced to them were confessed and proved are frequent enough to be noticed.

"On the other hand, flagrant cases of the freeing of known criminals of charges of which they are generally known to be guilty, are reported in the press from time to time. There is an element of 'fixing' done for political or other considerations. That is a matter of common knowledge, although its activity has been curtailed to a very large measure by recent exposures, I am sure.

"We do not offer our picture in any sense as an expose. It has no particular locale. The characters are drawn from imagination. It is intended only as entertainment, a human drama that might happen."

Mark Hellinger and Charles Beahan wrote the play from which the film was made. The adaptation is by Bayard Veiller and Lenore Coffee. Heading the cast are Phillips Holmes, Walter Huston, Anita Page, Lewis Stone, Mary Carlisle, John Miljan and Jean Hersholt.

SERVICE COMPANY

News in the Company this week is about as plentiful as $12.00 a day jobs in a Bread line. "Cordwood" Smith has bought a "Lizzie" on the "pay all your life" plan, and is now debating with the Provost Marshal as to the possibility of operating it on the Reservation.

We might state in passing that "Minnie" and her shadow (Malcolm R.) are having plenty of marital troubles at the present time. Phone calls —threats and pleadings—the 9:45 bus —reconciliation. What price love?

Hearken ye, baseball fans, and let's keep an eye on the Spare Parts Base Ball Nine this season. With "Cordwood" on the receiving end and "Ziz" Huntley in the box, there should be plenty of interesting games.

COMPANY "B"

Hello everybody, here we are. Have not been in the Herald in quite a long time but hope to be able to supply the news every week in the future. One platoon of Company "B" was picked as an escort to march in the Confederate Memorial Day parade in Columbus on April 26th, 1932. Private Doyle arrived on the fourth from a ninety day furlough, I think he lost some weight but never mind, he will regain the loss after a few meals in the company. 'Tis bad the company base ball team has not clicked just yet, they have not had the right breaks but they will, and good luck to them. Private Arnold was discharged the tenth, and did not reenlist. He is going to try the outside for a while, but I think he will find the going a little rough, as you all know the depression is over now and the panic is on. Pvt. Cannon, an old timer in the company, just joined from the recruit center. Glad to have you back with us.

Now here is some real news for you, Sergeant Clarence C. Barr, of Company "B," was appointed orderly for Major General Fuqua, during his recent visit to Fort Benning.

Following is the letter received by Sgt. Barr:

WAR DEPARTMENT
OFFICE OF CHIEF OF INFANTRY
WASHINGTON, D. C.

May 9, 1932.

Sergeant Clarence C. Barr,
Co. "B" 29th Inf.,
Fort Benning, Ga.

My Dear Sergeant Barr:

I desire to take this opportunity to thank you for the splendid service that you rendered me as orderly during my recent visit to Fort Benning. Your duties were rendered in a splendid, military and courteous manner, and it was a pleasure to have had you as my orderly.

Sincerely,
Signed: Stephen O. Fuqua,
Major General,
Chief of Infantry.

COMPANY "F"

Well, it's all over with until next year—(maybe) and in a way we are glad and again we are not. Glad because we will have a chance to sleep in our good old bunks more nights than we have and sorry because the visiting troops are leaving. We've formed many friendships since their arrival and have met old friends.

Now, looking ahead (and not so far ahead) we see a target. On that target is a little Bull's Eye which we have been trying to hit for years with every shot that we send in its direction. This company for the last few years has held its own with the rest of the regiment in high averages for the season. We hope to do the same, if not better, this year. I for one am determined to better my score and I am positive that the rest in this organization are just as determined as I am. Anyway, here's wishing us all luck and good shooting.

This last demonstration was conducted by the Student Officers. The different organizations in the 29th were turned over to them. As usual our company upheld its name and did its very best. The officers assigned to the company were very highly pleased with the manner in which the men in the company conducted themselves while under their command. 1st Sergeant Lance was personally commended by Captain Renth for his fine cooperation. The officers assigned to the company were as follows: Captain Renth, Company Commander; Captain Barth, Umpire; 1st Lt. O'Conner, platoon; 1st Lt. Powell, 2d platoon; 1st Lt. Wright, 3d platoon.

Pfc. William L. Sims has just received his other stripe and we are sure that he is mighty proud of it. Any way we think he well deserves them and that he will make an excellent corporal. Congratulations Cpl. William L. Sims. Pvt. Peter P. Barron, who recently re-enlisted for this organization has been promoted to the grade of Private first class. Glad to see you get it, Pete, old timer. Here's wishing you luck in the years to come.

24TH INFANTRY BAND

Corporal Ruffin, 3rd alto saxophonist of the 1st orchestra, who visited the Post hospital for a few weeks, upon his release a few days ago praised said institution to the extent that Pvt. Riley, 1st saxophonist of the same orchestra determined to visit the well known hospital for first hand information. At this writing Mr. Riley is a boarder thereat.

Sergeant Huey, our internationally known euphonium player is practicing stenography and has acquired the heretofore unheard of speed of three words per minute. Sgt. Huey hopes to increase his speed to five words per minute between now and January 1st.

The band and both orchestras were prepared to entertain our visitors from Tuskeegee Institute with concert and dances Wednesday. Tuskeegee always entertains the band and orchestra royally and we are anxious to reciprocate.

COMPANY "C"

Private Finley Powell was recently admitted to the hospital suffering from causes unknown. However, all join in wishes for his speedy recovery.

Heard in the Field

Sgt. Kelley: "I wonder what time that kitchen will get up here to serve supper?"

Pvt. Gray: "Supper? They told me there wouldn't be any supper."

Sgt. Kelley: "Heck it won't. Don't you see all these officers out here—I know they're going to eat."

Pvt. Gray: "Well, if that's what you are figuring on, I'm afraid you're 'Burnt up.' This is a war game—not a parlor social."

Sgt. Kelley: "You might be right, Buddie, because I don't remember seeing any smoke coming from that rolling kitchen down the road."

As we go to press we should like to report that Private First Class Bess will be discharged on the 23rd, and is contemplating a furlough for about a month. Congratulations to you, old boy, you've earned it all.

---

Owens: "Well, I'm going to put in for a furlough soon."

Lee: "Where are you going?"

Owens: "West Point—I want to see my people."

Lee: "Gee, they tell me that's a beautiful place—on the banks of the Hudson—ain't it?"

Owens: "Banks of what Hudson? This place is low-land—wake up man, I'm talking about West Point, Ga."

Lee: "Oh, you ain't mad are you?"

Owen: "No, but I hate to see anyone so foolish. You should konw that I was speaking about Georgia."

---

The chess aspirants met for some instructions last week and for the first lesson they remembered the men quite well.

COMPANY "E"

The company wishes to thank and praise 1st Lieut. Winfred G. Skelton, for the pleasing and efficient manner in which he commanded Company "E," during his short period. Lieut. Skelton, took command October 31, 1931 and was relieved May 3, 1932.

We consider Company E far above the average company in the regiment or army, and partly due to the skill, ability and experience exercised by Lieut. Skelton as a company commander.

The Company Baseball Team has been crippled very badly, due to Pvt. 1cl Emile Landry, and Pvt. Amos Snowden, being out of the regular lineup.

Pvt. 1cl Landry was admitted to the hospital on April 20, 1932, suffering with a broken leg.

Both of the young men are missed very much, not only by the baseball team but by the entire company.

The quiet and efficient way in which they performed their duties, were highly appreciated. The company wishes them a very speedy recovery.

HEADQUARTERS CO.

Lord Perry and Cpl. Baugh have joined the Kindergarten from the looks of the company they were with last Sunday. We hope we will not have any more married men added to our Regiment.

The Base Ball team under the guidance of Meat House and Cpl. Fletcher have shown up very well. All positions have been filled except one, and that will be filled just as soon as a certain player get's off the cripple list. The entire team has the "let's go" spirit and boy, we are ready to go.

Every body seems to be well pleased at the way the Company did its part in the Maneuvers also its showing on review last Saturday.

Sgt. Lay and Pfc. Albert have returned to the Co. after being confined at Post Hospital. Thanks, for we haven't any one in the hospital at present.

Now that the Company has won the sanitary flag it looks as though we are going to keep it for a while for the Company in general has the clean up and paint up spirit. And boy, how we are painting and cleaning, without even being told to do so, is sure hot.

The Johnson Twins are on restriction this week. Cpl. Woods doesn't seem to have much success at his Tennis here of late. Maybe he doesn't eat his spinach.

After two years on the Swimming Pool, Cpl. Fletcher walked around the Pool last Friday after the Pool had 15 feet of water, lost his balance, and fell in.

Poor Pa. I don't mind washing the dishes or scrubbing the floors, but I'll be doggoned if I'll wear pink ribbons on my nightshirt to fool the baby.

ANOTHER FORD SOLD IN TANKS

Contrary to orders issued sometime ago forbiding automobile salesmen around the Battalion during duty hours, a deal of great interest to us all was consummated back of Headquarters last week. With his face beaming our mechanic par excellence, Captain Joe Gutkowski turned over to his rather dazed lieutenant, "Dick" Wheeler, one Ford, Model "T" less everything possible and still have it run. We don't know how much money changed hands but we do feel that Lieutenant Wheeler should not have agreed to accept this gift for anything less than the cost of towing it to the Salvage Dump. And, in all fairness to him, his labor in pushing the thing about is worth at least a good laugh. The automobile (????) in question may be seen in the Tank museum where it is being studied by archeologists in an effort to determine its probable date and ancestry. These men are at present divided into two factions. One of them insists Pharoah used it as a second mount while travelling daily from the palace to the Pyramids which he was building (probably out of salvage lumber) at the time. The other side feels this is a slur on Pharoah who they declare wouldn't be caught in such a vehicle when there were so many real chariots about. One youngster timidly remarked that perhaps Moses used it to herd his convoy across the Red Sea, though it may have been used by

Irving Ashkenazy, who terrorizes the beam to the tune of 215 pounds, who works out of tropical Tampa and whose countenance radiates at mention of his virtues while a pigskin preformer in the moleskins of the University of Florida, his dear old alma mater, has bargained for a nice little handful next Tuesday evening at Doughboy Stadium. On that particular evening, the citizen and soldier gentry amicable to prize-fighting will turn out en masse to see what sort of a showing Ching Johnson, of A Co., 29th, will uncork for the edification of his host of admirers in these parts.

If you know your Ashkenazy you know that the former rah rah boy has been engaged in 22 professional bouts since accepting his diploma and faring forth to make a living with his fists. Only once has a knockout appeared with anything like the stigma in his record and Tony Cancella, a man with no morals when it comes to winning a bout, was responsible for that. It is no disgrace to be stopped by a man of the calibre of Cancella for here is a gentleman who has draped his dukes in mauling massage all over the features of such cranium-creasing celebrities as Yale Okun, Battling Bozo, Corn Griffin and others of their ilk. Some boys who have met Tony are rather boastful of having had their heads almost knocked off by the Walloping Wop.

It is not my intention to devote the rest of this column to nonsensical nothings to Mr. Cancella, which I most assuredly could do if I were so mind, but if you care to know additional facts about Mr. Cancella, then it would not be amiss to discuss it with Mr. Tanks Grantham, boxing instructor at the post. Mr. Grantham can wax eloquent or just drawl along at the moderate rate of 500 words a minute about Mr. Cancella, an achievement worthy of some recognition in its own right.

Fight fans of this vicinity will be treated to a double wind-up Tuesday night that will surpass any former show of the season for slaughter and action. There is no doubt about fans getting their money's worth of action. For the first time Ching Johnson will go into action before the home folks against a heavyweight. Ching's former heavyweight battles have been fought away from Benning and all fans know of them have been newspaper accounts. He went down to Albany and almost murdered "Big Jeff" Carroll. It was a great fight and Albany fans are still talking of the soldier with the iron jaw and pile driving right hand. Over at Troy, Ala., a few weeks ago, Johnson knocked out Len Herring, a heavyweight that had formerly boasted of staying the limit with Stribling, Babe Hunt and other top notchers without taking the count. Ching stopped him with a right hand in the fourth round.

Johnson's opponent Tuesday night is another of the boys that is mentioned among the armor piercing punchers. Irving Ashkenazy, former Florida University football star, 210 pounds of bone and muscle. Ashkenazy has been fighting for two years and in that time has piled up a neat string of knockouts. He holds wins over Dewey Kimrey, Jack Tunney, Sammy Cohen, Joe Lohman and other good boys. On paper the visitor will be a big favorite, but in actual rocking and socking, Ching Johnson in a fav-

Smith and Cancella Fight To Draw

When Walker Cyclone Smith, Benning light heavy, crawled through the ropes to face Tony Cancella, Tampa heavyweight, in a ten round battle at Charleston, S. C., last Monday night, Charleston fight fans were laying even money that Smith would not last five rounds. They were laying their money on the strength of three previous showings made there by Cancella and the fact that he held a 17 pound weight advantage over Smith.

A motorcade of fans were over from Savannah, Ga., to witness the battle. These fans had formerly witnessed Cyclone Smith in action against Maxie Rosenbloom, Joe Knight and Eric Lawson and they lost no time in getting their bank rolls into action.

The outcome of the fight is past history. Smith was in there at the end of the tenth round and galloped to his corner as fresh as he was at the beginning of the fight while Cancella wobbled over and sank down on his stool well worn and battered.

It was a great fight. For three rounds Smith let Cancella carry the fight as he blocked, rolled and jabbed. Near the end of the third round Cancella dropped a low punch in Smith's groin that doubled him up in agony, the crowd offered sympathy as Smith took a rest, they howled frame up and other unjust accusations. Smith was offered the fight on a foul but refused, demanding that the fight be continued. In the fourth round they took the jolt of their lives, the underrated soldier turned from a back pedaler into a weaving demon that threw punches from all angles. Cancella was taken off balance from the force of Smith's rush from his corner in the fourth round and from then on South Carolina fans witnessed a fight that kept them in a storm of applause from round to round.

Smith did not have every thing his own way, this Cancella can fight. They swapped wallops to the body in closer, broke away and went into furious slugging flurries that saw both boys taking them on the chin. Smith gained the crowd as he drove his heavier opponent to cover in these frequent flurries. In the ninth round Cancella hooked a right and left to Smith's body as the soldier waded in, the crowd held its breath as the punches landed but broke into a roar as Smith swarmed in and rushed Cancella to the ropes under a barrage of hooks to the head and body. In the tenth round Smith carried the fight all the way and finished strong with the crowd on their feet. The judges voted a draw but the crowd booed the decision and cheered loud-

10-ROUNDERS FEATURE CARD

Although Ted copped the duke in their first clash, the odds are against him on this occasion. Rip had led the fight in their first clash until his eye was cut in the sixth round. Tetherton has trained for this fight as he never trained before and for once will enter the ring in splendid condition. His punches carry plenty of steam and he is stepping fast, in fact Goodrich will look slow against Rip when they get together if Rip continues his present pace.

The six rounder is just another main event. Wilmer Parker has hit the comeback trail and looks to be headed for the top on this occasion. This will be his second fight since returning to the ring. He began his comeback with a win over Marshall Cardwell at West Point last Friday night.

Parker is meeting Kid Peck of Atlanta. This boy is tough and a hard puncher and will give Parker a chance to demonstrate his comeback power. Wilmer Parker formerly fought as Blondy Parker, but there will be no more Blondy.

The preliminary card shapes up well. Cy Hollyfield swings into action against Red Goss in the opener. Frankie Vogt and Herb Yetmeyer battle for welterweight honors in the second bout. The main prelim will bring Dave Melfrod of Columbus and Stratton Smith of the Tanks together. This fight will no doubt be one of the best of the show. The show opens promptly at eight fifteen o'clock.

school, ankled it to a draw at the opening of Prof. H. C. Hancock's arena last Friday evening. Now they want to do it all over again to clear their conscience of any element of doubt that might exist as to the question of ring supremacy between the two. J. C. Sewell, a honey with the women because he tries to exhibit all of the latest dance steps at the one and only Casino as fast as they are released in the Bronx, won a decision by a nose over his ancient foe, Jack Walden, in the semi-final event that threatened to make the principal performers look like a couple of draft horses.

In a small cabaret in the Vieux Carre of New Orleans, where country folks and wild-eyed tourists squander money thinking they're having the times of their respective lives, sits Pete Herman, blind—totally blind—thinking of the days when he used to be bantamweight champion of the world; the same Pete who, at one time, was acclaimed the greatest of little men in the ring. Herman operates a cabaret now. His gloves have been suspended from a nail for eleven years. But from 1914 to 1922 he hammered his way to fistic glory and the fortune that comes to champions.

Away back yonder in 1914, he ceased being a prelim boy and commanded attention by winning an eight rounder from Abe Kagakoff in Memphis. Later he fought a main bout with Joe Wagner, in New Orleans, and won it handily. Thrice he fought Kid Williams, bantam champ. In the third fight he won Williams' champchampionship. That was in 1917. His eyes began troubling him afterwards and eventually blindness set in. He fought many battles when he was almost unable to see his opponents. Loud-mouthed gazelles shouteds "Thow 'im out, he's stalling!"

But poor Pete was so blind he just couldn't see.

I. O. U.

Time brings many changes among us poor mortals here below. Take for instance Sgt. John L. Booth and Sgt. Jeffie O. Willingham. There was a time when this pair of buddies laughed together, were blue together and in fact were almost as close as brothers. This was back in the days when Willie and John were just a couple of ornery corporals. Today both are three stripers, John a big shot over in the Second Section while Jeffie is known as one of the greatest landscape artists in the service, his lectures and articles on how to raise flowers and shrubbery have even found their way into print in local issues. Fame untied the bondage of friendship, their trails seldom cross and when they do meet it is a curt greeting and that is all. Some say success caused the breaking, another whisper has it that a "woman is at the bottom." Next week's edition will probably publish the facts as they are.

Sad Sam Stuart has begun slamming the agate to all corners of the field. Jug Head Cowan is beginning to tune the old arm down. Tubbah Dykes can see the right fielder without walking around Tubbah. John Heckert may be aging but that scamp is showing like a sixteen year old. Speaking of old folks, Mickey Sr., can turn the mit over to Mickey Jr., in a few more seasons. Dal Hawkins has a bum leg but it will be okeh by opening time. Wee Grady and Dippy Dappy Gibbs look like the top of the hurling list. Any way it is dollars to doughnuts that the I. S. D., will turn in some wins this season.

SMITH AND CANCELLA FIGHT TO DRAW

ly for Smith as he left the ring. Smith's path to the dressing room was blocked by admiring fans who grasped his hand and yelled his name as he passed through.

Back in the dressing room it was necessary for police to prevent a second battle between Smith and Cancella. A canvas separated the two dressing rooms. Cancella started the argument by telling Smith that if they ever met again that Smith would be carried away in an ambulance. Smith came back with the following remark, "Why you big Spaghetti Bender, you couldn't punch your way out of a paper sack." This enraged Cancella so much that he attempted to get through the canvas partition. Police finally quieted the argument and the boys were finally persuaded to shake hands. They parted as friends but it could be easily seen that both fighters were at the boiling point.

Charleston fans were clamoring for a fifteen round battle between Smith and Joe Knight, as soon as the Cancella-Smith fight was finished. The Smith-Knight battle will probably be held in Charleston early in June at the opening of Charleston's new twenty-thousand dollar fight arena.

SOUTHERN PLAYERS WILL COME TO TENNIS MATCHES

be a player of more than ordinary ability.

This year's tournament is expected to be carried out on a scale far larger than any the Benning officials have yet attempted. An added impetus has been given to tennis in the past year and a decided interest has arisen in the people of the communities surrounding the Post, which has been most encouraging to those in charge of tennis activities. The playing of Tilden and his associates on the local courts have already aided greatly in creating an added liking for this form of sport and the coming tournament is fully expected to send this enthusiasm to an even higher pitch.

We don't know what's on your mind. Anyway we wish you'd cheer up as it may not all be so, and we don't like for anyone to be so lonely.

Here's the Infantry Rifleman, with fixed bayonets so shiny and bright. With a grin on each man's chin as they hike through the sand, from the place where they camped that night. But as for us Tankers, we're as jolly as can be. We laugh at the sand, for we take it like a man. While we're in that old T-2. Tanks or Rifles, we prefer Tanks with thanks.

We understand that Private Coleman our hero in the last war between the reds and the blues had quite a time. According to what we hear he captured a whole regiment. In that case we report to the world that Tennessee doesn't have the only York.

Final Plans Made By Tennis Officials for Coming Games

More Of South's Leading Players Have Accepted Invitations To Participate

Besides the stars of Columbus and Fort Benning, over thirty of the Tennis luminaries of the South have responded to the invitations sent them to participate in the Annual Invitation Tennis Tournament, to be held at the Post on June 2nd, 3rd, 4th and 5th. About sixty invitations have been sent out, but officials of the racket game at the Post have announced that already a sufficient number have signed up to make this year's tournament one of the most interesting and successful ever held. Local tennis fans, according to the officials, are certain to see some excellent tennis in the matches which will occupy the four day period.

Jack Mooney, the defending champion will again play this year in defense of his title. This Atlanta boy showed some super-excellent tennis last year in taking this title and will probably carry on again this year in the same flashing way. Another player expected to create quite an amount of interest in the matches is Wilmer Hines, University of North Carolina star, whose spectacular playing has made his name a byword in tennis circles this year.

Play will take place on the Post courts as follows:

1st round singles, June 2nd, beginning at 10:00 A. M.

2nd round singles, and first and 2nd round doubles, June 2nd and 3rd, beginning at 10:00 A. M.

Quarter finals (singles and doubles) Saturday, June 4th, beginning at 10:00 A. M.

Semi-finals (singles and doubles) Saturday, June 4th beginning at 2:00 P. M.

Finals, singles and doubles, Sunday, June 5th, beginning at 2:30 P. M.

The tennis officias of the Post are as follows:

Chairman of Tenn is Committee—Major H. B. Lewis.

General Manager—Major R. G. Tindall.

In charge of grounds and property—Capt. R. O. Bassett.

In charge of officials—Capt. W. C. Phillips.

Business, receptions and entertainment—Capt. J. H. Drake.

The admission for the games is 50c per day and season tickets for all four days are $1.50 each. All members of the garrison and the public are cordially invited by the committee to be present at the matches.

The following are some of the outstanding players of the South who have acepted invitations to take part in the matches: Prof. Henry Adams, Auburn; Robert (Lefty) Bryan, Vanderbilt; H. N. Downs, Ensley, Ala.; Walker Reynolds, Anniston, Ala.; Joe Grier, Rome, Ga.; Hudson Hamm, Miami, Fla.; Al Ray White, Miami, Fla.; Wilmer Hines, University of N. C.; Harley Shepherd, University of N. C.; Jack Mooney, Atlanta (Defending Champion) Jack Simpson, Atlanta; and Claud Pritchett, Evergreen, Ala.

Post Entries Take Several Prizes In Recent Horseshow

Fort Benning entries took one third of their ribbons for which they entered at the recent Atlanta Horseshow, held at Piedmont Park in Atlanta. The team, headed by Major John B. Thompson, Cavalry, won two first places and two second places. The Light Weight Polo Pony event was won by Lt. Hammond McD. Monroe, on Julia Mac while Major Thompson wan the Officers Charger class on Mr. Downing.

The whole team, according to Major Thompson displayed the finest kind of sportsmanship, which showed up especially in one incident in which Mrs. Landon Lockett figured. In this instance Mrs. Lockett's horse, Fresno, took a bad fall on the brush jump while the Hunter trials were being made. Mrs. Lockett, though shaken up, remounted and finished beautifully displaying excellent sportsmanship.

Though the team this year did not win as many prizes as that of last year won, on account of the fact that it was much smaller, still it gave a very good account of itself. The events in which the members of the team won places were as follows:

Polo Pony, Light Weight—First taken by Lt. Monroe on Julia Mac, with Major Thompson on Mabuty, second.

Polo Pony, Heavy Weight—Second place taken by Major Thompson on Miss Gale.

Jumpers—Lt. Monroe took fourth place in this class with only one tip.

Hunters—Mrs. Thompson took third and Mrs. Brimmer took fourth place in this event.

Officer's Charger—Major Thompson won first place on Mr. Downing. Lt. Brimmer won fourth place on Miss Gale.

Touch and Out—Mrs. Brimmer on Crimperton and Lt. Monroe on Harry W tied for third place.

Polo Pony Scurry—Major Thompson, on Mabuty, took third place.

Ladies Jumping—Mrs. Brimmer took third place in this event on Crimperton on a jump-off after tying with two other ladies for first place.

The Georgia owned entries continually showed winning form during the whole course of the Show, and riders and mounts from neighboring states were left on the slim end of the pickings. The military horses took most of the jumping events, while the big share of walk-trot and gaited horse honor awards went to civilians. The Sixth Cavalry, of Fort Oglethorpe, the 22nd Infantry of Fort McPherson and the Fort Benning team all shared honors among the military set.

MONDAY, MAY 30, TO BE HOLIDAY AT POST

The Commandant has made May 30, National Memorial Day, a holiday at Fort Benning, when "all except the necessary guard and fatigue duties" will be suspended.

Diplomas Given To Best Class Since School Founding

Graduation exercises for the class of National Guard and Reserve Company Officers, which began its studies at The Infantry School on February 24th, were held in the main theatre at Fort Benning on Wednesday morning, May 25th. A large audience, which comprised members of the graduating officers' families and friends, and many officers and ladies of the regular Fort Benning garrison, attended the impressive ceremony. On the stage, in addition to Major General Campbell members of the Infantry School Fac-King, the principal speaker, were ulty and comanding officers of various units of the Fort Benning garrison.

The program opened with the playing ofthe Infantry march. "Follow Me", by the 29th Infantry band. This was followed by an invocation pronounced by Chaplain Daniel J. McCarthy, O. R. C.

General King, the commandant, then read a radio message received from Major General Stephen O. Fuqua, chief of infantry, congratulating the graduating officers upon the successful completion of their courses at The Infantry School. General Fuqua's message was as follows: "Please extend to the members of the graduating class of National Guard and Reserve officers my heartiest congratulations on their successful completion of the course of instruction at The Infantry School. Their intense interest in the welfare of our country, evidenced by their voluntary attendance at the school, is indeed gratifying to the infantry. As they return to their various organizations, with a clearer and fuller knowledge of the mission of their arm of the service, they carry with them the best wishes of the infantry, for continued success in both their civilian and military activities".

General King then addressed the graduates and reviewed briefly their course of instruction at The Infantry School, which he pointed out was all too short to acquaint the infantry officers with the details of their various wartime duties.

The commandant's address to the departing guardsmen and reservists was as follows: "I regret that this morning terminates your course and your stay at The Infantry School. We are all sorry that your duty has been completed and that our contacts with you as a group must terminate today. I am most sincere in saying this. All of us feel that we derive material benefit from the annual presence of this class at Benning, and this year has been no exception. As a matter of fact, while I am speaking in a personal vein, it is gratifying to learn from the faculty that your class has set a higher standard than any preceding. And the important point to this is, that you brought a higher standard with you—a splendid sign of the increasing efficiency of the National Guard and Reserve Corps.

"Three months is a very short time into which to crowd the many subjects and exercises that have been spread before you. However, I believe that this has been done in such fashion that it leaves you with a good working basis for futher development of

Assistant Secretary of War Will Be Principal Speaker

FREDERICK H. PAYNE

Assistant Secretary of War, who will make the principal address at the graduation of the Advanced and Company Officers' Classes of Fort Benning.

Frederick H. Payne, Asst. Secretary Of War, Will Address Students

A distinguished Washington visitor, Frederick Huff Payne, Assistant Secretary of War will make the principal address at the graduation on June 1st, of the Advanced and Company Officers' Classes of the Infantry School. The graduation exercises will be held at the Main Theater of Fort Benning on the morning of June first, when the officers who have been students of the Infantry School will receive their diplomas from the Commandant.

Mr. Payne will leave Washington by airplane on the morning of the 31st and arrive at Fort Benning in the afternoon, where he will be met with appropriate ceremony due his rank as Assistant War Secretary. He will be entertained at the Commandant's quarters and will later be the guests of Major General Campbell King, Commandant, Fort Benning, at a reception to be held on the lawn before the General's quarters. A review will also be held in his honor during his visit here, in which the troops on duty at the Post will participate.

Mr. Payne, Lieutenant Colonel, Ordnance Reserve, of 21 Congress Street, Greenfield, Massachusetts, is Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Greenfield Tap and Die Corporation. In addition, he has many important connections with both the financial and industrial world.

As a very young man he was a bank examiner in the State of Massachusetts. He rose rapidly in the financial world, becoming president of the Mechanics Trust Company of Boston in 1908, and later vice-president of the Federal Trust Company of Boston. Mr. Payne has been connected with numerous industrial organizations and since 1921 has been treasurer, vice-president, president, and chairman of the Board of Directors of the Greenfield Tap and Die Corporation.

He is ex-president of the Associated Industries of Massachusetts, chairman of the Massachusetts Division of the New England Council, and chairman of the newly created Massachusetts Industrial Commission. He is a member of the National Industrial Conference Board.

At the outbreak of the war, Colonel Payne entered the service of the United States and was commissioned a Major in the Ordnance Department and placed in charge of procurement activities in the Bridgeport District. He continued to serve after the close of the war in the settlement of war contracts in the Bridgeport District and performed these important duties with great credit to himself, the District, and the War Department. He has since taken a great interest in all matters pertaining to the industrial activities of the War Department. Since 1923 he has been the Assistant District Chief of the Bridgeport, Connecticut, Ordnance District and this has brought him in close touch with many of the problems of the War Department, especially in connection with its munitions program.

As the Assistant Secretary of War,

Specialists Class Graduates May 28

Brief graduation exercises, which will be held in Jiggs hall at 10:30 Saturday morning, will terminate a special course of instruction in army communications which began on February 9 for a class of non-commissioned officers of the national guard and a small number of enlisted men of Fort Benning.

The graduation of this class will release another increment, the second within the week, of citizen soldiers who are qualified to instruct their home organizations in the modern methods taught at the Infantry School. Forty-five non-commissioned officers of various state organizations and thirteen from Fort Benning units are included in the graduating class.

Diplomas and certificates of proficiency will be presented to the students who successfully completed the communications course, which included studies of modern army field telephone, telegraph, and radio equipment, and methods of installation.

Lieut. Colonel George C. Marshall, Jr., assistant commandant of the Infantry School, and Major D. Patrick, of the academic department, will address the graduating class.

Revellers Elect New Officials

At a special meeting ofthe Revellers club of Fort Benning on May 24, 1932, the annual election of officers of the club was made. It will be remembered that the club was formed by members of the 2nd Battalion 29th Infantry about a year ago for the purpose of sponsoring dances, plays, and producing vaudeville entertainment for

OFFICERS ARE GRADUATED

the ideas presented. It is quite a problem to decide what should be covered in the limited hours available. This limitation of time, however, is not abnormal; on the contrary it is quite normal, for it is what we must expect under the American military policy. The time will always be limited and the subjects and details to be covered will always be many. Therefore, the problems is to find the most expeditious and efficient manner in which to present the essentials. All trimmings, all methods involving laborious procedure, must be avoided. This, we endeavor to do at The Infantry School, and I believe that if you take nothing else away from here but the methods of instruction, your stay will have been justified.

"You have had an unusual opportunity. For three months large groups of regular army, national guard and reserve officers have served together here at Benning. I think we have a composite group, typical of the Army of the United States as established under the National Defense Act. You have now met the regular officer in his native habits. Heretofore, you have seen him on duty with the national guard or reserve corps, and possibly you have been associated with him during the war. Now, however, you are completing a tour of duty with regular troops and officers in their normal garrison life. All this should make for mutual understanding, harmony, team work and loyal cooperation. This state of affairs does not exist in every locality today, and it will depend, to an important extent, upon your influence after your return home, as to whether or not we are to stand as a united group, working toward a common national purpose, or whether we are to have antagonism and misunderstandings which might prove fatal to our citizen army in time of national peril.

"The elevation of the National Guard to a position where it forms, for all practical purpose, our first line of defense, has placed upon the guard a heavy responsibility. Gone are the days when precision in close-order drill and the ability to qualify as an expert rifleman completed the education of the Infantry soldier. The short courses you have just completed should have opened your eyes to the many-sidelines of our profession, and the vast amount of technical knowledge which is necessary for the instructor of our citizen soldiers. It is hoped that you will carry back to your regiment a determination to widen the score of your instruction and a better knowledge of how tao go about imparting instruction. With such brief periods for training as are available to you, it is vitally necessary that no time be devoted to nonessentials and that the most expeditious methods be employed.

"I urge each of you to continue your connection with the national guard or reserve corps. It sometimes happens that after officers have received the special courses at this school to prepare them for more advanced commands and duties, the government loses those individuals from active service. I hope this will not happen in the case of any of you gentlemen. You may find it somewhat difficult to maintain your continued interest in the inactivity duty training of the reserve corps or the periods of armory training of the national guard. It is not improbable that a correspondence course will seem rather tame by comparing with its maneuvers and other practical work in the field. I urge upon you, however, to avoid a loss of interest and to dedicate a portion to your time to an effort to disseminate to or pass on to others in the reserve corps or the national guard the military information and the instrumental methods you have acquired here.

"I hope you will take home to your military associates a clear idea of our efforts at Benning to benefit the citizen forces of our army, and that you will feel that the school will always welcome any appeal you make to it for assistance in your military work. Every member of the faculty is glad to help out in any way possible at long range, and we derive no small amount of satisfaction from renewed contacts with our graduates which indicate a continued active interest in the school and a respect for its standards.

"I would leave with you this suggestion. You gentlemen are much closer to the scientific, industrial, and social development of the country than are we in the regular army. In behalf of national defense you should not neglect your opportunities in this respect, particularly as the peace time army is unable to equip itself in accord with modern developments. For a long time to come we must use the arms and equipment of the world war. However, once we are involved in another war, the changes will come with startling rapidity. The interest you display in these possibilities in time of peace will be of potential benefit in preventing the shock of the inevitable change from being too great for our military system to absorb in war.

"And, now in conclusion let me say that it has been a pleasure to have you at Benning. I hope your departure will not conclude your association with us, but that you will continue to consider this as your school. I here and now extend to you a most sincere invitation to visit Benning whenever the opportunity may offer. And finally, on bidding you goodbye, let me wish each and every one of you happiness and success in your several callings."

At the conclusion of General King's address, the students filed on to the stage. where each was presented with his diploma by the commandant. After the presentation of diplomas was completed, a benediction was pronounced by Chaplain Frank L. Rosenthal, O. R. C., and the playing of "Auld Lang Syne" by the 29th Infantry band ended the graduation program.

GUNBOTHAM'S SCHOOL DAZE

By J. L. G.

HEADQUARTERS IN THE FIELD BOOTS

The wars are almost over—just a few more days and the Field Soldiers will be scattered to the winds. This will be Gunbotham's last chance to foist his weakly blah upon the class. The Reds and Blues will all be eliminated, and peace will reign on the banks of the Upatoi. The class athletic teams of dear old Upatoi Military Academy have been awarded their "Us", and the First Section formed most of the athletic council.

Gunbotham's All Around Employment Agency for Eliminated Army Officers has brought out several recommendations from various sources. The following students will be placed in jobs suited to them: Lodoen will sell Scandihoovian Health Biscuits. Ty Cobb will lobby for appropriations for soldier athletics. Web Anderson will conduct the sand-pile operations at a big children's playground. Monk Blair will become a minister of the gospel. Capt. Brown will go to Nicaragua and raise bananas. Bill Deane will demonstrate chewing tobacco. Pinky Burns and Douglas will teach sketching to Boy Scouts. Watts will skin mules. Muscatelli will be S-4 for Mussolini. Van Brunt will be a radio crooner. Bruce Easley will dig ditches again. "Zero" Wilson will demonstrate musical instruments at all hours. Mathews will spend all his time calling San Francisco on long distance. Lindsey will teach math at Vassar. Jim Winn will be a congressman from 'way down in Alabama.

Nerts Dicks was the "surgeon" in a recent command post exercise. Having forgotten his prescription pad, and having failed to operate on Axel Dobak with an axe, he didn't know just what he was supposed to do. The battalion commander told him to send him a report on the percentage of casualties every half hour. Here was his chance to shine, and the reports came in regularly. Kielty, Grace and Gray reported to Gunbotham that they totalled the percentages that Nerts reported, and the battalion suffered 238 per cent during the day.

Bim Carne is at it again. Munson was talking about all of the grades the school teachers were putting out. "They grade everything, it's a wonder they don't have the academic department grade the roads." That was bad enough, but Bim ruined the day, "They couldn't do that because the roads would then be full of 'U' turns."

* * *

Miss Elizabeth Audre Pullknot, sister of Mrs. Pinky Burns, wanted to assist the household. She tried hard to be domestic, but couldn't find much to do. However, she did notice that the "ICE" sign had accidentally been hung upside down to read „ICE", so she turned it up properly. The colored maid was very careless, because three days in a row the Charleston damsel had to straighten up the ice sign. But imagine her chagrin to find that her sister was going to shoot the iceman because he had only left twenty-five pounds of ice for the last three days—and then the magic formula of the ice sign was disclosed to her.

Gunbotham went on a party the other day that was a party. Miss Saaffaarraannss (we never can remember which letters are doubled in Triga Squeeze's name) and Master Wilson entertained at a wow of a birth-

TANKERS

SMILING LIEUTENANT CAN'T SMILE

What we have long believed to be a smile on Lieutenant "Robby" Robinson's face has turned out to be MUMPS. True he has often been know nto smile in the past but now he "dassn't" and not for a couple of weeks at least until all "danger" is passed. He claims that for once in his life he is getting a fair amount of "bunk fatigue," which is all very nice, but it is to be remembered that too much exercise of but one kind is likely to make one muscle bound. For instance too much walking enlarges the feet.

What ho! "Robby," hasten back and relieve our waning spirits with your merry giggle.

COMPANY "D"

After the last maneuvers and the Blues were chased across the Upatoi, the Tankers were all in unison in the remarks about the U. S. Doughboy Boy. what a life! All took an oath never to leave the good old Tank Corps. The life of a doughboy "ain't what it used to be."

There have been alibis and alibis, but we find we have it on record that we have the only soldier that was ever fined for not having a Pilot's License. Yes, we believe you, old boy.

Sergeant McKelvey and Corporal "Duff Hull," are now qualified to a membership in the caterpillar club. Tho not leaving the ship via parachute they left the rumble seat of the old "Ninety Seven," of Corporal Wright's Whippet, with arms and legs flying landing with only a few minor bruises. They both swore never again. "Sensored"

The Elmodel twins say that it is hard to long for, but a darn sight harder to forget.

COMPANY "E"

After putting everybody in the company on the "Old Gray Mare" about a write-up that appeared in our notes last week "My Pal" Woodall has now settled down tosome real hard brain work. The work in question is figuring out a way to keep out of work.

"Old Dan" says: "Could it be that you fellows are trying to kid me about this cat and kitten business."

From a sergeant in the company who is known to most of us for his dealings in 'pictures' comes the news that our 'big mess Sergeant' Fountain is now so far gone that there is only one way out and that is to marry the girl. I have always heard when an old head falls, he falls hard. How bout it Sarg?

Some of our boys say it is dandy work to take dry-runs with a machine gun but when itcomes to making dry-runs in drawing all your equipment for a twelve mile run with a Mark VIII tank and then don't make it, that's entirely another horse of a different color.

COMPANY "F-2"

Since having moved to our new barracks we find that we are having a lot more convenience. Nevertheless. boys, we certainly thank you for your kindness and respect shown towards us while quartering with you.

Humphrey, we certainly congratulate you on your recent appointment to Private 1cl. We know that you well earned it, that's the F-2 spirit. We know that we must work hard and accurately until we've reached and made the final goal.

Last week the following named men bid us farewell by the approval of their transfers: Private Wilson; Taylor and Holdbrook. Hate to see you. boys, go but if you think it is the best may you find the pot of gold at the end of your transfers.

The folowing men have joned the company during the past month: Privates: Pounds; Chesser; Shoemaker: Geddings; Grubbs; Stuart; Everheart; Brown and Snodgrass. All of which we are very proud and we must say that you sure know how to pick a good outfit. And we hope you are well contented.

COMPANY "F-1"

Anyone desiring to more familiarize themselves in "Beauty Culture" are requested and urged to make an appointment as soon as possible with "Pat" Leviner, who will demonstrate his new line and distribute samples of his already "Famous" Toilet Preparations. Don't pass this up, boys.

Wanted at once: Four cartons of dry matches and a half dozen Ever-Ready flashlights to assist in getting "Cy" Perkins and Gray Moore out of the F-O-G. Also a formula that will effect a cure for "Love-Sickness," for the same two gentlemen.

"Hightower": "When you guys learn to ??-?? drive like me, maybe you will get to make a trip or two to Atlanta, too." Toot-T-too - - - Toot-Toot.

Lawrence: "Believe it or not—I've got four and they all live on the same block.

he will have supervision over the procurement ofall military supplies and all matters pertaining to industrial preparedness for war.

In order to qualify fully for the position of the Assistant Secretary of War, Colonel Payne has resigned all the offices held in firms or croporations engaged in doing business with the Government.

Colonel Payne is married and has three children.

The War Department announced the promotion, on April 13, 1932, of Lieutenant Colonel Frederick Huff Payne, Ordnance Reserve, Officers' Reserve Corps, to Colonel in the same service. Colonel Payne was a major during the war, and has served as Lieutenant-Colonel, Ordnance Reserve for over nine years.

The experience gained by Colonel Payne in procurement and industrial mobilization activities as the Assistant Secretary of War particularly fits him for his duties in this grade in the Ordnance Reserve.

The New Books

RED MAN IN THE NEW WORLD DRAMA

By Jennings C. Wise

Far more has been written about the Indian from the white man's point of view than from the point of view of the Indian. This is a history of the white man's dealings with the Indians, written by a white man who knows them, but written distinctly from the Indian's point of view. As a lawyer Colonel Wise, the author, has had occasion to defend the Indian in the Supreme Court. His contention, which is probably ri,eutsh at htr tion which is probably true, is that the Indian was not a "fiendish savage" before the white man arrived, but whatveer traits he acquired came as a result of being tricked by repeated duplicity. The white man, with a few notable exceptions, in dealing with the Indians, did not consider himself bound by honor to keep his word given in honor; then, when the Indian resented this with increasing feeling, the white man more than resented the resentment and hated him for hitting back. A treaty with the Indian was only a temporary standoff, and was not meant to be kept after it had become inconvenient. It will do us all good to read this work and get an idea of how it all looked to the Indian. Colonel Wise does not mince words. He says the historians have lacked the moral courage to tell the truth: He tells it.

The Quartermaster Detachment now has a new acting supply sergeant in the person of Earl Sprangler. He is surely no recruit in this assignment, as he served as supply sergeant in other organizations for approximately seven years. He is unable to work cross word puzzles as rapidly as Harold C. (Spike) Malone but otherwise he seems able to hold down his new job in an extremely efficient manner.

Another improvement has been made in the mess hall to make the detachment more "home-like". Iced tea, lemonade and other cool drinks are now being served in glasses rather than the cups without handles of former days. This is a small change but appreciated greatly by members of the detachment, the 7th Engineers and the 86th Motor Repair Section.

The first of the proposed picnics of the organization was postponed on account of inclement weather conditions. But it is expected that an "outing" will be held at an early date, when the clouds don't seem so dreary.

On Caturday night a chicken supper will be given at the detachment mess hall in honor of Staff Sergeant Charles H. Prince, who will shortly be retired from the service. Sergeant Prince, who has had many years of service in the Quartermaster Corps, Cavalry, Coast Artillery and Infantry, the members of the garrison. Since the forming of the club a number of entertainments in the form of plays and vaudeville numbers has been sponsored by the club meeting with a great deal of success in every way. In addition two dances per month are given under the auspices of this organization.

New officers elected at the meeting were: President, Wm. C. Parker, Jr.; Secretary, Earnest Stephens; Treasurer, Paul Armstead; Entertainment Committee, K. P. Moore.

Plans for a pajama ball to be held at the spacious Gymnasium on June 1 were also made in addition to other business. Plans are now going forward to make this the largest of the social events of the month. Elaborate decorations are being made at the Gym and from the interest being shown it promises to be a success in every way. In addition to the dancing a special "Military Wedding" is to be held at the dance which promises laughter galore. Don't miss it! The public is invited.

In the easiest and best way. Let us show you how to do it most easily.

MOSQUITOES AND MALARIA

Everybody knows the little mosquito. In a climate such as that of Fort Benning all residents have good cause to appreciate the personal and affectionate attentions of these insects. There is no part of the United States in which mosquitoes are not to be found, but the problem is a big one only in those regions where there is to be found the type that carries the dread disease, malaria.

What is malaria? Malaria is a disease caused by a tiny germ which lives inside the red cells of the circulating blood. It is so small that only a powerful microscope is able to magnify it so that it may be seen. The disease has many names, such as "ague," "chills and fever" and the like. Many people think that malaria is not a definite disease but merely a "run down" condition of the body. They hold, perhaps, to the ancient belief that malaria is caused by impure air. That is what was always thought before modern science showed that malaria is a disease caused by this tiny animal parasite that lives in the blood cells. In fact the word "malaria" comes from the Italian words meaning "bad air". As a matter of fact, malaria is caused by bad air, but it is bad air only because it carries mosquitoes. This also explains the time honored fear of "night air" and the "vapors" or "miasmas" from swamps. Malaria is a serious disease for the late effects may never be overcome and even death may result. It begins with the well known chill. Here is what a malaria chill is like: The patient usually knows when one is coming on because a few hours before that time he is uncomfortable and has uneasy and unpleasant sensations over the body. The chill begins with the sufferer feeling cold and finally his whole body is shaken with violent shivering. His face looks cold and pinched and he is very miserable. This stage lasts about a quarter of an hour or longer. Strange to say at the very time the person feels so terribly cold, he actually has fever. Following the cold stage, there follows one of short flushes of heat and the whole body feels intensely hot. At this period, the patient may be unconscious or even delirious. Soon the patient begins to sweat and may be drench in perspiration in a short time. So sends the attack. There are several forms of malaria. In one the attacks come regularly every third day, in another every fourth day, and in still another the attacks may be at irregular times. Certainly, this description is not one that would make one want to have the disease. Nor is this all, if the disease is allowed to persist for a long time the whole body strength is undermined and there is great loss of weight and particular susceptibility to other diseases.

How does one get malaria? There is only one way. Unless you are bitten by the malarial mosquito you will never get it. There is no other way to get it. A well person can sleep in the same bed with a person who has the most serious form of malaria and he will never get it, unless a mosquito bites him. The mosquito bites first a patient who has malaria. This means that the tiny red blood cells containing the malaria parasite are taken into the mosquito's body. Here they undergo a complicated series fo changes and after a time a multitude of young parasites are hatched. Now if the mosquito bites a well person these young malarial parasites are injected by the mosquito's sharp beak into that person's blood and malaria results. It is interesting to note that only the female mosquito bites. In the mosquito family at least, "the feto male of the species is more deadly than the male." The blood is used in some way, not yet understood, in the laying of eggs. Mosquitoes eat only vegetable food.

How may one escape malaria? Only by being sure that you are not bitten by malarial mosquitoes. This means that you must, in a climate like this one, sleep always under a mosquito bar or in a screened room. There is no other way. The malarial mosquito bites chiefly at night.

How to tell the malarial mosquito: We have seen above that all mosquitoes do not transmit malaria. Other forms may, however, transmit other diseases such as yellow fever and dengue fever. Still other mosquitoes transmit no diseases but are no less annoying at the time of biting. The malarial mosquito known as the "anopheles" may be recognized from the fact that it seems, when at rest on a flat surface to be standing on its head. In other words the body is not parallel with the wall or other surface on which it is standing. The mosquito that does not carry malaria, and which is also plentiful hereabouts, is known as the "culex". When at rest its body is parallel with the wall or other surface on which it is standing.

How do mosquitoes hatch their young? The mosquito lays her eggs in water, either stagnant pools or running water, depending on the species of the mosquito. Don't think that only swampy areas may afford breeding places for mosquitoes. Clean water may sreve this purpose and the malarial mosquito prefers clean to dirty water. The eggs float about on the surface of the water and finally hatch into the well known little "wigglers" which may be seeen swimming rapidly to the bottom of the water whenever they are disturbed. If you have an old can or barrel in which mosquitoes are breeding, the "wigglers" will be seen leaving the surface if you should jar the barrel. The reason for this is simple. The "wigglers" also called "wiggle-tails" must breathe air. They have a little tube which they thrust through the surface and breathe air. They are holding their breath when they have to leave te surface. This explains why oiling the surface of the water will prevent mosquito breeding. The layer of oil prevents the "wigglers" thrusting the breathing tubes through and obtaining air. Thus they are suffocated. We try to oil areas of stagnant water

MAJOR IRA A. RADER

"I hope I will have the pleasure of serving with all of you again in the future", said Major Ira Rader instructor in air corps tactics when he finished his final official appearance before the class on the day of his marked problem. More of us are more air-minded tactically as a result of the Major's wide range instruction. Some of us bombed the bridges with observation planes, proof, perhaps, that we believe when observation planes have bomb racks, they shoud be used. Then again some of us really think that the birds who pilot the eye ships for the doughboys should be reclassified as "combatants" rather than the inferred grouping as a sightseeing ship.

Major Rader graduates with us this year having completed his four year detail as a member of the First Section. He expressed regret when he said good bye. His appearance on the platform that day however did not mark his last contact with us for on the past four Saturdays members of the class who desired were given a half hour flight over the Benning Reservation, Major Rader himself handling the stick in one of the three planes.

Our helmets are doffed to this Flying Major for his skill as a pilot. Did we know the full story of his long service we should posibly find that not a little of the development and progress of military aviation could be fastened to his wings. "Many more High Ceilings and Happy Landings."

The Fair Haired Boys who operated in Major Tommy Arm's C. P. and Ter. Ex. in the vicinity of Lumpkin Road and Gilbert Creek got a better break than the fellows operating under Majors Lee and Hearn. We heard John Gibson "crabbing" about the shortage of blackberries on the bush in abundance in the flat countryand little opportunity to look for them in the hills at the Water Tanks and Ford Hill.

---

Tom Hoy is telling a hair raising story about his experience with a rattlesnake during this week's sojourn in the field. George Wear declares himself an eye witness so we can measure the truth of the tale accordingly.

Major Terry Allen went to the Water Tanks last Monday and found the area deserted. A Monday morning haze evidently hung over Terry that morning for he came dragging into Kriz Hall asking where Major Lee's problem was being held. In the right desert but the wrong tent, Terry. You only missed it by one day.

CAPT. GROVER C. CLEAVER

Capt. Grover C. Cleaver, student in the advanced class at The Infantry School, died at Walter Reed General Hospital, Washington, D. C., on Sunday evening, May 22nd, according to a radio message received at Fort Benning from Major General Stephen O. Fuqua, chief of infantry.

Capt. Cleaver became ill and was taken to the Fort Benning station hospital on March 26th. His condition rapidly grew worse and, on May 17th, he was transferred to Walter Reed Hospital, where his death occurred. Septicemia was announced as the cause of death.

"To him who in the love of Nature holds
A various language."

—Thanatopsis.

At the importuning of that passionate nature lover, Major Pink Bull, we reprint below the only spring poetry that we have ever perpetrated on a long suffering world. Some of our charitable friends acclaim this our best poem. Most critics, however, prefer our shorter works—the shorter the better.

We wrote this when we were a student. We lived in town, of course, and somehow or other the beauty and variety of the local vegetation had eluded us until, one day, The Infantry Journal burst forth with a special Benning edition. That was our inspiration, for in it was a narticle which clothed with beauty the myriad botanical speciment which we had hitherto failed to notice. The lady who wrote that article (and she certainly can write) opened our eyes and our heart. Everything that grows is now sacred to us and we are loath to destroy any of the plant life that flourishes on the reservation. That is why we cannot be induced to uproot nut grass which abounds on our lawn or weed the flower bed. This may be stark sentimentalism but we intend to stick to it.

Never having taken up botany seriously, some of the trees and flowers mentioned in the article were strangers to us, but no trivial detail like that could extinguish our burning desire to immortalize the Benning flora in verse. Accordingly, we sat down with The Infantry Journal before us and ground out the following lines:

SPRING SONG

Fill me with sassafras, Bill,
And Georgia corn juice—
School is out, Spring is here, and I've got to cut loose;
And the purple wistaria covers the bowers
The tulips and hyacinths peer from the grass,
The jessamine lifts its sweet face to the showers—
Quick, William, the sassafras!
For to-morrow may find me at dawn
Playing tag on the General's lawn—
For I'm feeling, forsooth,
The elixir of Youth—
Though when he gets up, I'll be gone.
For I'm rarin' to go
Where the silky long leafed Georgia pine
And the Magnolias grow;
In this Georgia Forest of Arden,
In this Army Botanical Garden,
Where the woodsy smells hits you like wine,
So fill me with sassafras, Bill,
And Georgia corn juice
And introduce me to the wood nymphs
And then—TURN ME LOOSE!

I want to encourage my liver
And mount on a government steed
And amble down by the river
Where the woodsy trails lead;
I'll recline on the fragrant pine needles
Where the Upatoi flows
And the daffodil blows
And the bumble bee flirts with the Cherokee rose;
Where the Cardinal vies with the Chigger
And the sunset which crimsons the west;
Ah, there let me rest—
Restoring my sole and my vigor
In this Paradise blest.
For Benning and Eden are one;
And the mocking birds sing
With the madness of spring
And the crepe myrtle blooms in the sun.
So fill me with sassafras, Bill,
And Georgia corn juice,
And plant a few Eves in my garden
And then—TURN ME LOOSE!

The zinnias and cannas come after—
And the rich golden glow;
But there is a cottage I know
Where Spanish moss clings to the rafters
And the Judas trees grow.
In a country where life is serene
And the picturesque pine points the scene,
And it's there I would go;
For I yearn for a respite from duty
And my heart is essentially vernal,
And I want to submerge in the beauty
Described in the Infantry Journal.
For the cult of unfettered expression
With me has become an obsession;
All restraint is a curse
And Tactics a bore—

WHERE to GO ? WHAT to DO

Development Of Resort Is Interesting Story

By C. Armand Thorpe

Most of us have long deplored the fact that here in Georgia, the Empire State, we lacked an outstanding resort area, where our own people could go to find relief from the discomforts of summer heat, but it remained for Col. Sam Tate, business genius and executive, and one of the outstanding figures in American industry, to have the courage to expend vast sums of money to provide high up in the Blue Ridge Mountains of north Georgia, his native home, an ideal location for a summer playground.

In speaking of the plan and purpose of the development, Col. Tate has said: "Invitation to join in this undertaking must obviously be limited to persons of such social and cultural attainments, as will assure a colony of congenial neighbors in this ideal social and recreational center. This is in no sense a real-estate development pictured with any glamour of re-sale profits: hence, our purpose that invitation be extended only to persons of such financial ability as are comfortably able to make a permanent investment primarily to secure a summer homesite. Frankly the prime thought and intent in the minds of those who have planned this development, is not to make money out of it. It has seemed to us that a beautiful mountain property with its attendant healthful climate, pure water, and scenic grandeur, connected up by hard surfaced roads with the centers of population in Gerogia and surrounding states, made ready through the improvements as indicated for comfortable living and owned by a congenial company of three or four hundred of the South's outstanding families, is a condition eminently to be desired."

No, this not the Far West. The striking photograph was made from Connahaynee Lodge, Tate Mountain Estates, Jasper, Ga.

Work on the project was begun several years ago. Many columns could be written about those three years of construction and of the problems of engineering that had to be solved, but Col. Tate had called in eminent engineers to supervise the various phases of the work, and after the twelve mile road from Jasper to the top of Burrell Mountain had been built, making it possible to transport heavy machinery to the property, construction of the 18-hole Stiles & Van Kleek golf course was started, and work begun on the dam that was to impound the crystal clear waters of mountain streams to create Lake Sequoyah. Much credit must be given Luke E. Tate, Executive Vice-President, who has given much of this thought and energy to the execution and supervision of the project.

Today, the job has been practically completed, and in five hours driving time from Columbus, one can reach this 8,000 acre mountain Paradise, which lies 3,300 feet above sea-level, more than a thousand feet higher than Asheville, N. C., in The Land of the Sky. The motor route is via Atlanta, Marietta, Canton, and Tate, to Jasper. From this point, the route is over a picturesque all-weather road to the Estates, ten miles away. It's a beautiful drive, the grade is easy and again and again you exclaim at the inspiring beauties of nature and the unsurpassed grandeur of lofty mountain ranges.

The crowning glory of Tate Mountain Estates, is Connahaynee Lodge located atop Mt. Burrell, at an elevation of 3,300 feet. From this point the view is magnificent, and extends unobstructed in every direction. With good visibility, peaks sixty miles away are easily discernible. The Lodge, of massive hewn log construction, exemplifies the picturesque in architecture, is highly modern in appointment, and under its rough exterior are the refinements of the finest summer resort hotels. The spacious lounge, dining-room and ball-room, are beautifully furnished; the baths are of Georgia marble; and the bed-rooms, of which there are tweny-eight, are all that could be desired.

For those who desire something more modest in appointment, Cracow Cabin is avialable. This is located near the Trading Post at the entrance to the Estates, and has four large bed-rooms, each of which will accommodate an average family. The meals are excellent. Adjoining, is a small cabin of three rooms and operated in connection with Cracow.

The Mountain Estates offers practically every form of wholesale out-of-door sport. The 18-hole Stiles & Van Kleek golf course is one of the most picturesque in the country, and is the only course in the State, with bent grass greens. There are numerous natural hazards and water shots, to test your ability as a golfer. For

Beacon Beach is Open for Vacation

One of the surest signs of an approaching vacation seasons is the name of Tex Gilbert in the newspaper columns. The people who know of him, who are many, are reminded of the summer sports and the fact that the time for deep sea fishing, fresh water fishing, boat riding, swimming, surf bathing, dancing and all the kindred summer sports that make up the vacation season are now the order of the day and especially at Beacon Beach, at Panama City, Fla., where there is an abundance of the pleasures that make the summer season full of interest and enjoyment for the whole family from Dad down to the youngest of the children.

A more ideal spot on Saint Andrews Bay and the Gulf of Mexico could not be found anywhere, nor could a more ideal place for the above and many other vacation sports be discovered. The Pines Hotel, with its wide veranda facing the Bay and the new furnished cottages of Beacon Beach are a double lure to the vacation seeker, for he has his choice of the type of residence for his summer months and at the same time does not sacrifice even the least part of the sports that are commonly identified with a summer season on the seashore, especially a shore that is near enough to other places to possess double advantages.

Bus Lines Add Much To Ease & Pleasure of Modern Travel

Trips that show the traveler the very heart of the country, with all its beauty intact and every bit of it easily reached, these are the kind that may be had by those who choose the motor bus as their means of travel. Comfort, convenience, utility and every desire of the prospective passenger is fulfilled in this modern mode of travel, which follows the winding highways and byways to the most beautiful and picturesque spots of the land.

From a comparatively humble beginning the bus lines have built up an organization whose tentacles reach to every important city and town in the United States and whose time schedules allow a flexibility that is suited to the tastes of the most critical traveler. The Hood coach lines will take the traveler to any large point in the country on schedules that are comfortable and at prices that are almost unbelievable. The perfection of the buses used nowadays for these lines is attested by the fact that the Hood Lines have never had a major accident in their time of service, a truly enviable record.

The principal appeal to bus travel is the opportunity it affords to really see the passing countryside and to really get a correct idea of the beauty of the towns through which the bus passes. In contrast to the smoky, dull outskirts which are the usual limit of vision of those who travel by rail, the bus routes lead through the best residential and business districts of every city and thus are an education and pleasure on that account alone.

A notable instance is the city of New Orleans which is readily reached by bus lines. These can bring the visitor all the way from New York, in a minimum of time, through the beautiful Piedmont section over the mountains of North and South Carolina down to the Gulf of Mexico, without sacrificing any of the comfort or convenience so usually expected on a trip of this length. Then, too, the variety of scenes does much to eliminate the boredom of constant riding, while the radio equipment of each bus serves to while away the hours of travel.

Bus travel has today reached a stage of almost perfection in this country and it opens to the public a hitherto unknown wonderland of travel without at the same time incurring any higher or more difficult rates. A trip by bus is an insight into the life of the country as no other trip ever was and can be made without any of the attendant worry and preparation that is a part of traveling in a car or the monotony and high cost of traveling by rail.

OFFICIALS PLAN TO STEP OUT

With the hopes of avoiding the possibility of being mistaken for actual combatants, southern conference officials this season will be garbed in a standard uniform, as illustrated above by the Honorable Everett Strupper, veteran southern official and former All-American halfback at Georgia Tech. In the top photo, Strupper is seen wearing the entire official regalia, jacket and all, while in the lower picture he is shown with the jacket discarded, ready for action.

COMPANY "F"

Just recently another letter was forwarded to this organization thru the Commanding Officer, 29th Infantry from the Department of Experiment and the Infantry Board, commending the officers and men of the organization very highly for their cooperation and enthusiasm in completing the tests of the old and the new gas masks.

Our cafeteria system of feeding is becoming more popular every day. There is not a day passes but that we have some visitors with us looking over the system and tasting some of the dishes prepared by our cook force. Sunday, May 22, 1st Sergeant Lance was host to some friends from Columbus.

Are we proud and how! Why not? You should be two if you had in your midst such a celebrity as we have. He is none other than our most famous little dining room orderly, Henry (in person) Lugenbuhl. Pfc. Lugenbuhl has just received a notice from the Quartermaster General to the effect that his Purple Heart Medal was being forwarded to him. Pfc. Lugenbuhl is an excellent soldier and has yet to receive less than Excellent on a discharge. He served as a corporal during the World War, receiving wounds while in action. My only regret is that it has not arrived as yet and I am anxious to see what one looks like.

Our Recruits and last years unqualified men with the bayonet are coming along just fine and we are looking for an average of 100 per cent qualified.

—Stolier.

COMPANY "G"

With the Corps Area maneuvers over and the Students of the Infantry School preparing to graduate it seems that our system of training for the immediate future wil ltake on a decidedly different aspect than demonstrations and field exercises. But before the curtain does fall there is to be one more of Col. Major's (Combat principle, musketry and selection of a camp site) tests. The winner of this competition receives the Col. Duncan K. Major, Jr. trophy. If the competition is worth while going out for it is worth while winning. Such a trophy is representative and emblematic of exactly where G Company should stand inany competition.

G Company should make it's impression on the score boards this afternoon in the Bn. Track Meet with the greater part of the team composed of our won men.

H Company seems to have the jinx on us in baseball as a result of the trimming administered to us last Saturday. This game should be a lesson. It will take the remaining games now to cinch the Bn. gonfolan.

SHRAPNEL BURSTS

The last demonstration for the students of the Infantry School, during this school year, was fired last Thursday. Perhaps the last should be best but not so in this one, as the weather conditions prevented it from being as good as one sometime earlier in the year.

Because the troops worked very hard during maneuvers and hardly stopped until after the last school demonstration, last Thursday, the Battalion Commander declared last Saturday, a battalion holiday. He wanted to give them a break before starting the summer training, consisting mainly of pistol and gunners instruction.

The battalion was supposed to have a picnic last Saturday, in honor of the Bartletts, who left Tuesday for a three month's leave in Florida, before reporting to West Point to begin the next school year, but on account of rainy weather it was changed to a supper at the Artillery Club and the movies afterwards. We are all very sorry to see the Bartletts leave the 83rd but hope they will be pleased with their new station.

"A" battery is taking the Knox Trophy test this year and has been very busy for the past week. They did very well in most of the tests but will not know just how they compare with other batteries in the Army until the final decision is made next November.

Due to the short time available since maneuvers, the track team can't be expected to do wonders but they have taken advantage of every opportunity and it is hoped that they will come through with several places tomorrow at the final meet.

Among other things, the personnel adjutant has taken charge of the garden for the summer. The present officer in charge of the garden is taking a three month's honeymoon following his marriage next week. so he couldn't be bothered with a little thing like a garden.

BATTERY "A"

The Battery is very busy this week taking the test for the Knox Trophy, if Neely and McCall had gone absent a few more times Battery "C" would be doing that work this week in place of Battery "A".

Several members of the Battery are wondering whether or not Pvt. Luke Garrison will be able to find his way to New York, in about two weeks, while on his way to Hawaii.

From the amount of transfers, short discharges and furloughs coming from Battery "A", Captain Mangum evidently let it be known he was going to take a two months leave.

Notice: Members of Battery "A"; All men wanting transfers and short discharges had better get them in before the latter part of June as the remainder ofthe Battery is getting discharged per ETS in July and August.

Question: What is Corporal May going to do when he gets discharged? Pfc. Usher can probably give him a few tips.

We are wondering just what Corporal in Battery "A" has become so low as to have his little Class "A" card taken from him. Hush money evidently would not work in this case.

It is believed by some that Sgt. Cameron has been cheating on a certain Corporal in the outfit, and it is also known that a certain Corporal has been cheating on him.

We regret very much that the Officer firing the other day made a mistake and messed Corporal McRae up causing him to be off a hundred miles in deflection.

The "Kingfish" and "Sultan" haven't any thing out of the way to report for the last week.

BILL ELLISON, Editor

Benning Fighters Star On Good Card

The Hon. Grumpy Gordy—the one and only—was introduced to the assemblage at Tuesday night's cauliflower carnival at Doughboy Stadium crowd modestly. Attired in a suit of civilian clothes of brownish color and apparently good texture, with a stiff straw kelly adjusted on his head at a rakish angle, Mr. Gordy enjoyed sixty seconds of heaven as he basked in the mellow glow of the swaying electric lamps.

Mr. Gordy is a retiring sort of soul and never sets his stakes higher than he believes he is able to scale. He causually decided to chalenge Mr. Goodrich, Mr. Tetherton, Major Patterson, "Red" Lindsey, Mahatma Gandhi and, in fact, "any man in the world." Maud Farley, of North Highlands, then leaped into th aerena and promptly accepted the defi. Mr. Farley was, on one occasion, hit so hard on his jaw that is was fractured and, on still another occasion, was hit so hard on his jaw that it fractured one of his legs.

The Johnson-Ashkenazy squabble was remindful of the Dempsey-Willard affair. Ashgenazy towered head and shoulders above Ching and the soldier could have used a ladder advantageously in his effortc to reach the Floridan's face. Ashkenazy was sorely in need of some boxing experience. He was unable to obtain little, of any, sparring practice at the University of Florida where he was captain of the boxing team, because of his immensity. He is a student of journalism (or was before graduation) and next year intends to pursue his study of newspaper work at the Columbia University.

Tuesday night's show was replete with surprises. Frankie Vogt did not fight his usual fight and missed often. His timing was faulty. "Red" Goss, of the M. P.'s, held his own for three rounds but finished in a bad way with a show of claret at the nose. Kid Peck ran into a jarring drive to the chin in the first round and finished on the floor.

Johnson Scores Technical Kayo Over Ashkenazy

Ching Johnson, Benning, won a technical knockout over Irvin Ashkenazy, Tampa, in the sixth of their scheduled ten rounder and Rip Tetherton, Benning, won a decision over the veteran Ted Goodrilch, Atlanta, after ten rounds, in double windup bouts at Doughboy stadium Tuesday night.

For four rounds, Ashkenazy, with a weight advantage of 36½ pounds and a reach of some several inches, toyed with Johnson's schnozzle while Ching unsuccessfully endeavored to break down the Floridian's guard. When, in the fifth, Ching shifted his assault to the solar plexus, he softened Ashkenazy. Then, in the soixth, Johnson's trip-hammer right ended flush on the button and stunned the fast Tampan. Half a dozen more paralyzing rights and lefts rained about the head and Ashkenazy was literally out on his feet when Major Patterson, the third man in the ring (and a good referee, too, by the way) elevated Johnson's glove in token of victory. Another punch and Ashkenazy woul have dropped to the canvass with a sickening thud.

Tetherton fought a good battle against Goodrich but the soldier's backpedaling was not so pleasing. Goodrich was plainly irked by Rip's bicycling because Ted's underpinning are not what they once were. In the sixth Tetherton had Goodrich on the ropes and nailed him flush on the button at the bell. There was a hasty exchange of glances between referee and judges to determine whether or not Ted would be awarded the fight on a foul but the blow was allowed and both men went to their corners for the minute's rest. The blow at the bell was unavoidable and to have resorted to the foul ruling would have been a gross injustice to both Tetherton and Goodrich.

Cyclone Hollyfield won a decision over Red Goss in a four rounder; Dave Melford, Benning, cooped the duke over Stratton Smith, Benning, after four rounds and Frankie Vogt lost the verdict to Kid Yutmeyer in the curtain raiser.

Records Fall Fast In Preliminaries Of Track Trials

Records crashed right and left in the preliminary trials for Fort Benning's greatest organized athletic event of the year, the annual garrison track and field meet. The Thursday trials uncovered a superabundance of fine material in a widely assorted list of events and records which had stood for some time were broken down by

Compete at Benning

Jack Mooney (left) will defend his Fort Benning tennis title at the annual tournament on June 2, with several of his fellow Atlantians, also competing, one of whom is Malon Courts (right), another star. Invitations were sent to about sixty of the leading tennis players of the South to join in this tournament. Over thirty-one have accepted and will play in the four-day matches.

Weinert To Box Spivey is Rumor Passing Around

Jimmy Spivey, Columbus boy who made good in Florida, challenged "Puggy" Weinert, Benning buzz saw, to a duel with the dukes at Doughboy Stadium Tuesday night and, although no official announcement was forthcoming, ringside rumors were that Spivey and Weinert would do the main attraction in the next post punching bill, tentatively set for June 7.

Weinert has been seen in action but once at Benning. He fought Kid Baisden in the semi-final to the Smith-Bozo show and lost the decision. The verdict was very unpopular and it was the concensus of fans that the worst "Puggy" should have been a draw.

Weinert won himself a place in the hearts of every fan. The squatty little Chicago Polock beat Baisden to death at infighting and, in turn, absorbed considerable punishment from the Kid's long, straight left jab, apparently the only blow the man has in his repertoire.

Weinert warked at a disadvantage from a standpoint of reach. Baisden held him at bay with his tantalizing rakehandle left . . . for awhile he did —but whenever "Puggy" came inside that guard he hammered Baisden at will.

Spivey is reputed to be a classy fighter. For the last severa years he has been working out of Miami and ha sfought the best boys in that neck of the woods. A Spivey-Weinert battle should please the customers.

Records Fall Fast In Preliminaries

the determined efforts of the stars who will compete in the finals Saturday. High speed, smooth action and perfect coordination of mind and muscle were the contributing factors to one of the greatest record-breaking preliminaries ever held at the Post, when the boys from the different outfits when on a rampage and spilled the former marks in at least six events. While the soldiers have not come near any world's records, still their performance is far above the average usually reached in Army meets. The finals will be replete with thrills if the preliminaries are any indication at all of the caliber of performance the boys will maintain.

Duke Marquis, who rolled up the greatest number of wins in the annual 29th Infantry Track meet, upheld the honor of the 2nd Battalion by clipping a second off the former record for the high hurdles. He stepped this event in the remarkable time of 16 2-5, one second less than his record set in 1931.

The hundred yard dash proved one of the most sensational events of the afternoon when Dodd and Moon of the Tankers tied for speed honors with 10 1-5 seconds, cutting 2-5 seconds off the former Benning record for this event.

Pullen, another Tanker, showed a fast field an even faster pair of heels, and broke thetape in the 220 yard dash in the time of 24 1-5 seconds. This time cut 3-5 of a second off the old record.

Maxwell, big Second Bat discus tosser, heaved the circle a distance of 121 feet to add eleven inches to the former record. The other contenders were all grouped within a few feet of the winner. The Tanker, Cobal, stole the show with a javelin throw of 171 feet 6 inches.

The 220 yard low hurdles also saw another record go tumbling as Rivers of the First Bats hung up a new Post record of 27 4-5 seconds for this event.

THE NEW BOOKS

This long but interesting account—your reviewer expected to be bored but instead found himself "reading toward the dawn"—begins with the pre-Columbian adventures of the Scandinavians in America, and here Colonel Wise is more daring than most historians; he believes the white man was here in far larger numbers and over longer periods long before 1492 than they do. Few will agree with him. The remainder of the large book (611 pages) is a systematic history of every Indian campaign against the white man from the days of the Vriginia Colony to our own times. Only today is the Indian getting anything like a square deal. His chief friends in the government have been Franklin, Washington, Grant, Cleveland, Coolidge, and Secretary Wilbur. This book is more than well worth reading, and as a historical reference book it ought to be on the shelves of every library in the land.

CLOTHES MEET THEIR SEVEREST TEST!

IT was kind of this young New York couple to pose for this picture. The young gentleman is wearing the "Paddock" sport outfit made by Schwob. If you wintered at Palm Beach or if you expect to do Southhampton or Europe this summer, you will see well dressed men wearing the same kind of sport clothes shown here. Underwood & Underwood, the famous photographers, snapped this smart young pair leaning against a ship rail in order that you could see just how Schwobilt sport clothes *will look on you!

P. S. A WORD TO THE WOMEN. You will revel in the simple but chic ensemble the young lady in this picture is wearing.

By S. SCHWOB,
Pres. of The Schwob Co.

RECENTLY a leading automobile manufacturer made a statement to the effect that two years ago he would have said it was impossible for him to produce such a fine new model at his new price. That impressed me. It was literally true of my own business. For 20 years, I have been making fine clothes. But never before has this company offered the American public the unusual values mentioned here at our astonishingly low prices. The problem of making better suits at a lower price has been a difficult one. But the reward has been great!

AT THE RIALTO

SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Presenting, "SHANGHI EXPRESS", with Clive Brook, Anna May Wong, Warner Oland and Eugene Pallette. "SHANGHI EXPRESS" is a thriller. At the Pekin, China, railroad terminal stands the gaily painted "Shanghi Express", proudly spouting steam in preparation for the long pull to Shanghi. Down the platform stands a company of Chinese soldiers. There is danger in the air, for the rebels have threatened to attack the train.

TUESDAY ONLY: Presenting, "THE GUARDSMAN", with Alfred Lunt, Lynn Fontanne, Roland Young, Zasu Pitts and others. An actor and an actress are the toast of Vienna, widely acclaimed everywhere as the "happiest married couple on the stage". They kiss fondly on the stage as they bow off after tumultuous rounds of applause. In their dressing rooms and later, at home, it is seen that they have gotten a bit on each other's nerves. Here is a story that is truly different and one that you will thoroughly enjoy throuhout.

WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY: Presenting, "RESERVED FOR LADIES", with Benita Hume, popular English stage and screen star, and a strong supporting cast. Miss Hume is well liked by the English picture fans. Her recent performance in the picture, "HIGH TREASON", added materially to her popularity Her stage successes are numerous and included the recent London play, "SYMPHONY IN TWO FLATS", in which she played opposite Ivor Novello.

AT THE ROYAL

(Beginning with Midnight show, Saturday, 11:15 p. m.)

SUNDAY, MONDAY AND TUESDAY: Presenting, "SCARFACE", with Paul Muni, Ann Duorak, Karen Morley and Osgood Perkins. Lawlessness was his god. Everything came his way. Men fawned on him. Women clinged to his desire . . . until, drunk with money, power, loot . . . he challenged the red blooded heart of a nation which took up that challenge. feared him until he came between her and the man she loved. Then? Who would have thought that one frail girl would have sent this power-drunk terror tumbling to his doom?

AT THE GRAND

SATURDAY, SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Presenting, "SO BIG," with Barbara Stanwyck, Bette Davis, George Brent, Dickie Moore, Hardie Albright, Robert Warwick and Mae Madison. Barbara has brought it (Edna Ferber's world famous story of a woman's heart) to vivid, thrilling life with a swift rush of reality that holds you breathless. It's a woman's whole existence—her body—her soul—her love—her life—the secret places of heart. If you enjoyed Edna Ferber's "CIMARRON," you'll adore her "SO BIG." It's the main event of the picture season. How big is the emotional capacity of your heart? Can it hold the story of woman's whole existence? Can it hold the secrets of a girl's strange love? Is it big enough to withstand more dramatic intensity than the screen has shown in years?

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Presenting, "CARELESS LADY," with Joan Bennett, John Boles, Minna Gombell, Weldon Heyburn, Raul Roulien and Nora Lane. When a careless lady meets a carefree man—Oh! the things you'll see. This cutie had been married just enough to make her interesting. Neither maid, wife nor widow—but a dashing divorcee. Even her ex-husband fell for her. A shady reputation was all this wall flower needed to blossom out.

ROYAL

Karen Morley, who plays the feminine lead opposite Paul Muni in Howard Hughes' "Scarface," is one of Hollywood's newest screen sensations. She plays her first outstanding role in this picture, and as a result of this single performance is generally rated one of the most promising of the latest crop of actresses.

Miss Morley is a 1931 Wampas Baby Star, and is under contract to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, from whom she was borrowed by Howard Hughes for the assignment. She played minor roles in "Never the Twain Shall Meet," "Inspiration," and "Politics," before appearing in "Scarface,' which comes to the Royal theatre on Saturday for three days.

Miss Morley was born in Ottumwa, Iowa, and went to Southern California with her family when she was 13 years old. She graduated from Hollywood High School, and atended the University of California at Los Angeles. She quit college during her sophomore year to join the Los Angeles Civic Repertory Theatre and the Pasadena Community Playhouse, appearing in "Fata Morgana" and other stages successes.

Between her theatre engagements. she sought work at the motion picture studios. Clearence Brown gave her a part in "Inspiration" with Greta Garbo, her first screen role. which she performed with such artistry she was signed to a long-term contract by the M-G-M company. Subsequently she appeared in "Never the Twain Shall Meet" and "politics," giving couspicuous performances in each picture.

In "Scarface" she was giving her first real opportunity, which she utilized to great advantage by turning out a performance which critics are unanimous in praising.

RIALTO

"SHANGHAI EXPRESS

Small towns in southern California frequently have sudden increases in population when a motion picture troupe unexjectantly invades the place for location work. This happened recently when San Bernardino was practically taken over by actors, extras and workers for the filming of Harry Hervey's new story of the Orient. "Shanghai Express," which is featured at the Rialtotheatre, next Sun. and Mon.

In producing "Shanghai Express" more than 1000 people were transuorted to that town for filming scenes around the railroad station. and workers besides the director, Josef von Sternberg, and the leading members of the cast which includes Marlene Dietrich, Clive Brook, Anna May Wong, Warner Oland and Eugene Pallette.

"THE GUARDSMAN"

Roland young knows how to keep cool even under camera fire. During filming of a scene in the Alfred Lunt-Lynn Fontanne talking picture, "The Guardshman", coming to the rialtao Theatre, Young was required to enter a house wearing a heavy winter overcoat, muffled and gloves.

The day on which this episode was mad weas the hottest of the yeafr in California with the temperate sexeral degrees above a hundred. Young appeared immaculate as far as screen audiences were concerned for he never took his coat off.

If he had done so impromptu humor would have been continued to the sequence for all the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer player wore beneath were beneath were his trousers!

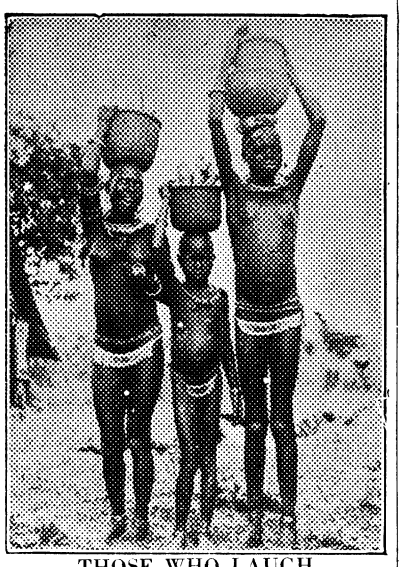
JUNGLE FLAPPERS



THOSE WHO LAUGH AT DANGER

"There is often an amusing side to experience in which real dangers are encountered," says Dr. Laurence M. Gould, who was second in command on the Byrd Antarcitc Expedition, and who plays a part in the film thriller 'Explorers of the World' now showing at the Grand.

"My first expedition was to Greenland," continues this famous explorer. "It was a complete tenderfoot outfit. When we were set down on the uninhabited shore of our fjord and after our ship had sailed away, we discovered that we had forgotten to unload a good part of our camp equipment, including forks, spoons, and cooking pots. We sent word for supplies to be sent from Holstensborg, 70 miles away.

"During that time another young professor and I were out in a canoe on the fjord. It had an outboard motor, and a mile off shore it turned over. The water was ice cold, we had on heavy clothing and besides, I couldn't swim.

"Then as we clung onto the canoe hopelessly on the verge of drowning, where no living person passed for years at a time, a boat-load of Eskimo women appeared and rescued us. It was a miracle if I ever saw one.

"How they laughed at us us! The men who couldn't manage their boat! And who were they? They were the women sent from Holstensborg to bring us our pots and utensils!"

The Flare

And I've got to have more—
And they tell me that Leavenworth's worse;
But here I can squander the hours
In a hot house of shrubbery and flowers,
So fill me with sassafras, Bill,
And Georgia corn juice.
Suround me with Naiads and Dryads
And then—TURN ME LOOSE!

M. F. H'S HONORED

At Jeff's Hole last Sunday morning The Infantry School Hunt staged its last hunt breawfast of the year.

The majority of those present had their appetites whetted by a brisk controlled ride but a few prominent citizens elected to sleep a little longer and make the formation by motor. One way or another, however, quite a large and representative group assembled. Among those present were Tanker Brett and Inventor Negrotto, the newly appointed Masters for next year. The Tanker was wearing the new experimental hunt uniform suggested by The Flare. This consisted of a loose fitting suit of mustard colored dungarees with a leather helmet to match. Instead of the customary huntsman's horn, the Tanker carried a large Stillson wrench. While not so picturesque as the traditional pink, the new garb is better looking than most beach pajamas that we have seen hereabouts. If Inventor Negrotto can devise a parachute attachment to be worn by ambitious novices riding in the first echelon, it may have quite a vogue.

Following the breakfast, Colonel Marshall presented the retiring Masters with beverage shakers—gifts from the devotees of the chase. The presentation speech was a masterpiece of adroit phraseology. It would serve as an excellent model for a politically and personally dry Congressman, up for reelection from a dry district, and suddenly confronted with the duty of presenting a hip flask to a faithful party wheel horse.

MARVELS OF SCIENCE

On the last night of the student manouvers. Inventor Negrotto was scheduled to conduct a test with flares. Ace Rader, standing just off the Lumpkin Road, was all set to observe the fireworks from the ground when Lieutenant Woods of the Company Officers' Class came stumbling through the underbrush in search of some well concealed command post or at least a road leading thereto.

The Aviator inquired sympathetically as to the cause of the disturbance and was informed by the apparently night blind lieutenant that he had no flash light and having "one hell of a time finding his way around in the dark".

"Well, if that's all your trouble", said the Ace, noting that the plane circing above had almost completed its preliminary maneuvering, "Maybe I can help you out. I'll have that plane drop a flare. Stand by. I'll have it for you in sixty seconds."

With that the Aviator made a few mystic passes and muttered a magic phrase. It looked like a case for observation and treatment to Lieutenant Woods, but before he could decide whether to run away or stay and take care of the patient, a ball of fire dropped from the circling plane and descended slowly earthward.

The barbarians who witnessed the celebrated Columbus (or whoever it was) and the eclipse incident were no more dumbfounded than Lieutenant Woods when he beheld the landscape lighted up for miles around in response to what looked like the incantations of a witch doctor.

"We do it with mirrors", explained the Aviator helpfully.

GOLF NOTES

Explorer Chance, one time golf champion of Benning and always a dangerous contender for the crown, was decisively eliminated in the first round of the current tournament. It was the Explorer's misfortune to draw Brother Leard for his opponent. For some reason Brother Leard has the Indian sign on the Explorer and, to make matters worse, the celebrated Leard luck was hitting on all cylinders. After watching his opponent sink four twenty foot putts and chip one in the cup from ten feet off the green, the Explorer blew up and the match ended with Leard five up and four to play.

Among the caddy chits turned in one day last week was one signed by Mrs. Bodine which had the significant word DAM scrawled across it.

Mrs. Bodine's explanation is that the caddy told her that DAM was his code name. Investigation developed that Mrs. Bodine's caddy for the day goes by the initials D E M but still the explanation doesn't quite explain. The Flare chooses to believe that the lady just felt that way after a bad afternoon.

CITATION FOR THE WEEK

To Sir Roger Williams and Squire Jared Wood, retiring Masters of Fox Hounds and unfailing producers of Flare copy, for their capable management of The Infantry School Hunt during the current season.

BAND

Mr. Rudolph Riley, our 1st alto saxophonist of the Jazz Pirates and also thirty three and a third per cent of the three Brown brothers is with us once more. Mr. Riley, as you remember, dear readers, was a guest at the Post Hospital for a few days and not being used to the social atmosphere thereat he terminated his visit with his host, the Surgeon, and may be seen, yea, even heard when the Jazz Pirates dispense their soulful and heartrending rhythm for song and dance.

The band has received several new selections and about twenty-five late fox trots which are being prepared for the ensuing concert season. Several saxophone quartette selections have also been received and will be featured at the concerts.

Our recreation room has begun to assume some semblance of a private living room and our long cherished dream which removed our recreation room from the fourth dimension to an actuality. In a few days we expect to be able to entertain our guests in an entirely satisfactory manner.

We expect to enter a team in the regimental field meet which will make history for the band and several first places are theoretically on our slate. Semper Paratus.

day party. Everybody had a good time except all the parents, and the four little boys Terry Allen fought with. Several mothers went home physical wrecks and Zero and Triggasqueeze were about wupped down when the last boodle laden youngster headed for home. Many, many birthday presents were given. Miss Saff received eight umbrellas. They had a game of "Pin the tail on the Don but they had to take Bill away from the marking job because he was getting full of pin holes, and the kids weren't scoring well on the other side. How were they to know? Young Wilson only hit two youngsters with his new bow and arrow, and Gunbotham and young Cooke ate six ice cream cones. That doggone Martin called it Jewish ice cream—and then he explained "Ice Cream Cohens."

COMPANY "C"

The trophies to be awarded to Company "C", for winning the Basketball and Volley-ball tournaments, have arrived, and considered quite suitable for their purposes. We are now out to capture the baseball honors. Look out.

From now on "Rags", I advise you to go to church alone, especially when you have no small change. You see, fifty cents is too much for contribution,and you know it; but, what else could you do, with fair lady sitting beside you?

Low-down: "I wonder when that boy is going to bring that Sunday paper?"

High Brow: "Today isn't Sunday—It's Wednesday."

Low-down: "Gee, whiz, and I took my bath last night."

And poor Father has a day, also 364 other days in the year.

Teamwork always make a good team, and "F" Co. has just that.

Well last week "Meat House" was seen with a week-end bag and a package, we don't know if he had rations or not, but later we found out that he was on a hurried trip to Atlanta to pay his final good-bye visit to Sadie Blake. After arriving at the Capitol City he became acquainted with a certain Bishop and was invited to dine with him; so to avoid disappointment he put in a phone call over a private phone, and the lady-lady permitted him to use it providing he left a five cent piece on the table. Some misunderstanding came about cutting off the radio as he was talking to a Bishop, the lady replied, "Meat House, put that five cents on the table, I don't care if you are talking to the lord, the depression is on."

Private Rucker has just returned from "Wire City". Hope he has a lesson out of his stay.

Corporal Fletcher has achieved the name as the Brown Bandit of the company. He can hustle more "Browns" than any one man in the company.

that cannot be drained.

Anti-mosquito work: The work of draining and oiling mosquito-breeding areas is highly important. Without such work the Panama Canal would never have been built. It is being done at Fort Benning but limited personnel and funds prevent its being as extensive as would be liked. Efforts are therefore devoted to anti-mosquito work in places that malarial mosquitoes breed. Secondary attention only is paid to the breeding places of non-malarial mosquitoes. This means that there are many, many mosquitoes here that we cannot present hope to destroy. Hence, bear in mind the statements about sleeping under mosquito bars when the bed-room or barracks is not screened.

Students of Infantry School Graduate Here On Wednesday

Secretary Payne Addresses Members Of The Two Classes Of Graduates

Ceremonies of dignity and simplicity, which were held at Fort Benning on Wednesday morning, brought to an official termination the regular courses of The Infantry School for the academic year of 1931-32.

Fredrick H. Payne, assistant secretary of war, and Major General Campbell King, commandant of The Infantry School, were the central figures participating in the formal program which attended the graduation of the 232 members of the advanced and company officers' classes.

The auditorium of the mian theatre, where the exercises were held, was filled to capacity by the members of the two graduating classes and their families and friends, and officers and ladies of the garrison.

On the stage, in addition to Secretary Payne and General King, were Lieutenant Colonel George C. Marshall, Jr., assistant commandant, and other high officers of the school staff and garrison. Mayor H. C. Smith, and city manager H. B. Crawford, of Columbus, represented the local municipal government.

The program began at 11 o'clock when the 29th Infantry band played the infantry song, "Follow Me", a composition by a former Fort Benning officer, Captain George L. King.

Following the musical selection, Captain John F. Monahan, Catholic chaplain of Fort Benning, pronounced an invocation.

Major General Campbell King, the first speaker, then read a radio message from Major General Stephen O. Fuqua, chief of infantry, which was as follows: "I deeply regret that I cannot be present at the graduation exercises of the advanced and company officers' classes of The Infantry School. Will you please extend to the members of those classes my heartiest congratulations on their having completed successfully the respective courses of instruction.

"The infantry depends upon these officers for a correct dissemination of the knowledge gained at The Infantry School and I am confident that they will carry with them a clearer and broader conception of the mission of the infantry and a more definite realization of its capabilities and limitations. On behalf of the infantry I extend to them best wishes for continued success in their future activities."

General King then addressed the graduates, reviewing in part their work at The Infantry School, and pointing out to them the professional importance of having become graduates ofthe army's greatest service school.

The address by M. R. Payne, which followed that of General King, laid emphasis on the importance of Benning in the eyes of the War Department and the evident ability of those officers who have been graduated from the Infantry School, whose knowledge gained here is one of the most valued assets of their whole training. Both speakers referred particularly to the part played by the wives of officers of the Army, whose devotion and helpfulness have greatly aided their husbands in the work they must undertake even in times of peace.

At the conclusion of Mr. Payne's ad-

Major Sutherland Again Captures Post Golf Crown

Major R. K. Sutherland again clinched his right to the Post golf championship this year as the tournament over the new course ended on Monday, May 30. Major Sutherland was winner of the championship flight and medalist, and upheld his title won last year. Play in the tournament marked the opening of the new golf course, and also the opening of the new club, which crowns the high hill to the left of the Hospital. The whole course has gained greatly by its removal to the new location, and the scenery and location of the new club make it easily one of the most attractive and beautiful of the buildings around Benning.

The winners and runners up of the various flights of the tournaments are as follows: First flight, Major Sutherland (winner); Lt. Brady; Consolation, Lt. King (winner), Capt. Pope.

Fifth flight: Captain Buracker (winner), Lt. Howell; consolation, Lt. Keiler.

Mrs. Kerr was winner of the first flight and medalist in the Woman's Golf Tournament, which was also played over the new course. The winners of fiights were sa follows:

First flight: Mrs. Kerr (winner), Miss Putts; consolation, Miss Atkins (winner), Mrs. Bull.

Second flight: Mrs. Cook (winner), Mrs. Simmonds; consolation, Mrs. Hanna (winner), Mrs. Fritsche.

Third flight: Mrs. Rooks (winner), Mrs. Skow; consolation, Mrs. Bell (winner), Mrs. Gilchrist.

Seventh Grade Of Children's School Graduates Friday

The members of the seventh grade of the Childrens' school of the post received their certificates of graduation from Major General Campbell King, this morning at 10 a. m. during a ceremony which took place on the rounds of the School. Twenty-five comprised the class which graduated and are now eligible to enter high school for another step in their education.

As a preiminary to the presentation of certificates, the sixth grade which is taught by Miss Lois Wells, gave a short play, "Mother Nature's Carnival," under the direction of Mrs. R. W. Pearson and Mrs. J. A. Ladd. Costumes were designed by Mrs. Max V. Talbot and Mrs. N. D. Cota. The characters of the operetta were as

Capt. Drake Wins Post Tennis Title In Recent Matches

The Spring Tennis tournament for 1932 is now history. The last two final matches were completed Wednesday afternoon, May 31, with the players displaying a generally higher brand of tennis this year than usual and very much deserving of more support from the galleries. The unusually large number of activities just at this time probably prevented a much larger attendance.

Several new names are among the winners this year, but the casual observer had selected these as odd bets early in the year and no particular event occurred to upset the dope. Captain Drake, as was anticipated, came through in great style to win the singles and, incidentally, the post championship, 6-4, 9-7, 4-6, 6-4. Last year's champion, Major Gordon, gave an excellent performance, but could not overcome Drake's cross-court, straight, low chop, and went down fighting. The best singles tennis of the tournament came in the semifinas when Captain Drake and Lt. Brownfield met. Some of the spectators felt that Brownfield had a good chance to carry through but here also the chop and Drake's extreme accuracy were too much for the aviator and the final result was then a foregone conclusion.

In the ladies singles Mrs. Brimmer, the last year's champion successfully defended her title and defeated Mrs. Krauthoff (nee O'Connell) in the finals, 6-3, 6-2. Mrs. Schneider and Mrs. Keiler are new players this year and it is predicted that they will be dangerous opponents in the future.

The men's doubles of the tournament proved the efficacy of betting on the dope for they went through exactly as had been expected. Captain Drake and Lt. Sherburne defeated Captain defeated Captain Bassett and Lt. Lynch in straight sets, 6-2, 6-4, 6-1, in the finals. In these matches again, the semifinals provided the greatest interest when Lt. Brownfield and Lt. Poore played the winners. This match was carried to five sets and at times it looked like anybody's game. Sherburne's service, however, proved too effective and the final score placed the Drake-Sherburne conbination on top, 7-9, 9-7, 7-5, 3-6, 6-2.

The mixed-doubles finals were completed in the last match of the tournament with some fireworks that were not exactly on the card for the match. Captain Drake, having won the singles and with his partner the doubles, was the big bet along with Mrs. Keiler, to win this event of the tournament also. But Nemesis in the form of Lola O'Connell-Krauthoff upset the dope in this particular match. Besides winning her service consistently, her game throughout was excellent and the Krauthoff-Sherburne team deserved their win 4-6, 6-2, 8-6. Mrs. Keiler played well but the men of the party seemed to be somewhat off, doubtless due to the fact that they were fatigued by the doubles which immediately preceded the last event.

Throughout the tennis matches, the brand of playing was on a high plane and was better than has been produced at Benning for several years and the posibility of additional new material for the next season makes the prospects for the game at the Post exceptionally bright.

Invitation Tennis Matches Bring Many Players To Post

Infected Foot Keeps Title Holder, Mooney, Out Of Preliminaries

The Fourth Annual Fort Benning Invitation Tennis Tournament is bringing together the greatest collection of racket-swingers that the Doughboy School has ever seen. Entries have been received from clubs, schools and individuals all over the south. When the semi-finals are reached on Saturday, the fourth of June, four of the South's best will battle it out for the coveted places in the finals, which will be held Sunday afternoon, at 2:30 sharp.

Advance dope gave Jack Mooney, Atlanta star, a good chance to repeat his last year's victory. An infected foot, however, kept him out of the preliminary games. The other aspirant to the cup. Wilmer Hines, University of North Carolina ace, is considered to have as good a chance as anybody. Benning pins its hopes on Capt. Drake.

Georgia Tech Will Enter Team

The championship Georgia Tech team will be down in force. They have appeared in matches at Fort Benning twice this year and they have some of the best college players in the south on their team. Harry Gault, who has made such a hit with local tennis fans in the last two years will display his smile on the Officers' Club courts again.

Fort Bragg Stars Arrive Early

Three officers from Fort Bragg were the first to arrive. They came early to play in the Corps Area Eliminations which will decide the army representatives who will go to Washington to play in the Army-Navy tryouts. Lt. Stokes, Lt. Ringsdorf and Lt. Evans are the Bragg entries; and they will also play in the Annual Invitation Tournament.

Local Players Entered

Fort Benning has entered the following players: Maj. Gordon, Capt. Drake, Capt. Bassett, Capt. Phillips, Lt. Poore, Lt. Sherburne, Lt. Brownfield, Lt. Grier, and Lt. Lynch. In addition Bert and Will Lyman, of the University of Alabama, sons of Major Lyman, will enter. They will play in the doubles together, and are expected to make a fine showing. Columbus is entering the Reverend Chaplin, Jake Maddox, Howard Dozier and Murray Calhoun.

Guests of Club

During their stay at Fort Benning, the visiting players will be the guests of the Officers' Club. Tank rides, trips around the post, swimming, riding, golf, movies and many other entertainments are scheduled. On Saturday the fourth, the players will be guests of honor at a Tennis Dance to be given at the Polo Club.

Major H. B. Lewis is in charge of the tournament. Major Tindall is running the matches, Capt. Drake is the Business Manager, Capt. Bassett is in charge of the courts, and Lt. Grier has the entertainment and reception committee.

Tragic Accident Claims Life Of Benning Child

One of the most tragic accidents to happen at Benning for several years occurred last Wednesday in Bradley Area, when Donald Charles Gonzales, 4, was killed and his twin sister, Dolores critically injured by an Army truck, driven by Private Alvin G. Holt. The accident occurred in the late morning and the boy died while he was being rushed to the base hospital. His sister was severely bruised and scratched and the officials at the hospital have expressed the fear that she might be internally injured. Funeral services for the little boy were conducted on Thursday afternoon by Captain John F. Monahan at the Catholic Chapel at Fort Benning and interment took place in the Post cemetery.

According to eyewitnesses of the tragedy, the accident was unavoidable, as the children, being apparently frightened by another approaching truck, did not notice that driven by Holt and ran into the side of his truck. The two were thrown under the wheels of Holt's truck and were injured by the whels. The truck was being driven from Lawson field to the main post, and the driver was accompanied by Pvts. Ralph H. McGarrity and Hoke S. Hall, both of whom have testified that the acident was unavoidable.

After the children were struck, the truck immediately stopped and the two were carried to the dispensary, where they received medical attention until the ambulance arrived from the Post Hospital.

The examination given at the hospital showed that the little boy suffered from a fractured skull and body injuries and that the girl was injured by scratches and possible internally. Her escape from immediate death was nothing short of miraculous in view of fact that the right rear wheel of the heavy truck passed over both of the children after they had been thrown underneath it.

A board of investigation, headed by Major T. B. Catron was appointed on Wednesday to inquire into the details of the accident but,up until the of going to press, nothing had been made public, The fact that the accident was declared unavoidable by eyewitnesses, however, will probably result in a verdict of acquittal.

Lt. Dowdall Goes On Irish Trip

Lt. Harry G. Dowdall, Secretary of the Officers' Club is leaving today on a trip to Ireland which will end on July 18. During this time Lt. Ralph Pulsifer, the Assistant Secretary, will become the Acting Secretary, taking Lt. Dowdall's place.

Lt. Dowdall will attend the Eucharistic Congress at Dublin while he is in the Emerald Isle, and will witness the canonization of two of his ancestors. one of whom suffered martyrdom for his faith in 1660. The Eucharistic Congress, an annual event, attracts Catholics from all over the

Miss Agnes Buffington -- Lt McConnell Are Wed At Beautiful Ceremony

The interest of a wide circle of friends among the army contingent was centered Thursday in the wedding of Miss Agnes Buffington and Lieutenant Glenn Bruce McConnell which took place four o'clock Thursday afternoon at the quarters of the bride's brother-in-law and sister Captain and Mrs. Robert G. Mangum.

Chaplain William T. Howard performed the impressive ring ceremony in the presence of a number of friends.

A program of music was rendered by Mrs. Robert Gilmore, of Troy, Alabama. Miss Porter sang "O Promise Me," and "I Love You Truly."

The bride, who was given in marriage by Captain Mangum, wore a gown of rose white satin with a rose white horsehair hat to match and carried a bouquet of white rosebuds and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Mangum who was her sister's matron of honor wore a gown of delicate pink chiffon with slippers and hat of blue and carried pink sweet peas.

Miss Nana Seely who was Miss Buffington's maid of honor wore a dress of delicate blue chiffon with contrasting hat and slippers of pink and carried pink sweet peas.

Lieutenant W. I. Ives was Lieutenant McConnell's best man.

After the wedding Lieutenant and Mrs. McConnell left for a three months' trip to Wisconsin and Canada visiting the groom's family. After September first Lieutenant and Mrs. McConnell will be at home at Fort Benning.

Fort Benning Girl Scouts Finsh Year With Fine Record

The Fort Benning Girl Scout Troop ended its season recently with a presentation of the awards to the girls of the troop who have earned them since the last Court was held. A large number of girls and visitors were present, a tribute to the organization of the troop. Next week the Herald will print the list of winners of awards and also the story of events which took place at the Court.

The Benning Girl Scout troop has gained much favorable comment for the splendid spirit which every member of the troop has shown and their willingness to work for the coveted honors. The troop has been held up as a model to other organizations of similar nature and is one that is well-deserving of the work that the troop committee and the instructors in Badges have expended on it.

Second Accidental Death In Two Days Occurs Yesternay

Private Jose Acosta, of Battery "A," 83rd Field Artillery was killed at Fort Benning Thursday afternoon when he was thrown from a horse he was riding.

Pvt. Acosta was practicing for a gymkhana which is to be held soon when the accident happened. An examination showed a broken spine and fractured skull were the resultant injuries from the accident. This makes the second death from accidental cause at the Post within two days.

SHRAPNEL BURSTS

The most important happening in the Artillery this week was the wedding of Lt. G. B. McConnell and Miss Agnes Buffington. Since Miss Buffington's family was already in the Artillery she should be use to the present surroundings but several other things in her life will change.

Lt. McConnell remained a bachelor much longer than the present Artillery bachelors expect to. Still, one never knows just when he will meet the right girl.

The happy couple left Thursday after the wedding on their honeymoon to Canada and all points north. The battalion hopes they have a most enjoyable trip and wishes them years of happiness.

Now that the school year is over we won't have any more demonstrations for awhile, so both men and officers get a chance to go on leave. There are four officers on leave, but we received five new officers this week, two of whom were Artillery officers, taking the course at the Infantry School and three who transferred from the Infantry.

Since we don't have enough men to run two sports at one time, we were unable to start baseball practice until Wednesday but if we are able to keep our new baseball diamond on Gordon Field, we hope to have a successful season. Lieut. Thomas is now on a month's leave but during his absence Lt. Cobb who transferred from the Tanks, has taken over the coaching.

BATTERY "A"

Captain Mangum is leaving us for a two months' leave and Lieut. Heriot for a twenty-five day leave. The members of the organization wish them a happy vacation (we also extend to Lieut. Haskell and Draper our heart felt sympathy).

It is not necessary to sound off Pay Day any longer, you will know the day. All men on furlough are hanging around that morning. They get their pay and beat the "Kingfish" out of a dinner, not so bad after all.

Cpl. "Harmless" Rogers the "Clipper" is staying around rather close these days. He is probably taking some medicine with a bad taste.

"Bug House Fables." A certian sergeant in the battery, a world war veteran, was asked the question if he knew how to put the piece in abatage and a very polite answer of NO was given.

It is thought by some that the executive and recorder are in danger when a certain Gunner Corporal is not in good form.

GUNBOTHAM'S SCHOOL DAZE

By J. L. G.

Sweet girl graduates all—there were no corsages worn with those cool wool uniforms, but the idea was the same. The Reds and the Blues will go to the gentle art of holding and squeezing, and the surely sanitated waters of Russ Pool will continue to gurgle sowly over the dam, not giving one. All will be quiet on the campus of the Upatoi M. A.

The indefatigable Zero Wilson had his hey-hey-day the other night. It seems that Foghorn O'Flaherty, he of the artistic temperament and bullfrog voice, was entertaining late. The radio was radiating, the boys and gals were dancing, the noise was great. The Shack Area known as Block 23 is far-famed and publicized for having certain denizens who care not for hilarity and racuous noise in the wee sma' hours. Several times has the Tuttle Detective Agency been called upon for special operatives during the course of an overly congenial gathering, when an irate lady decided that she wanted to sleep. So it was nothing new when the O'Flat 'phone tinkled, and this indignant female cried, "I want to speak to Lt. O'Flaherty." A very loud and easily audible "Sh-h-h h-h-h" was heard over the phone by the caller. People sensed the impending disaster and shushed slightly. To make a short story long, the gal raved on at length to O'Flat, telling him that she had been kept awake for hours, her babies were howling, and that enough was too much. The party took the hint when she added that she was going to phone for the law immediately. Hastily adjourning to the Bill Sassafras castle (he of the "epic pome") they held a critique. The learned tacticians there present all hit upon the same solution and the angry mob descended upon the house of Wilson, where the female impersonator was weak from laughter.

The Invitation Tennis Tournament is well under way, and some of the South's best racket wielders have been seen in action. Fort Bragg sent a team of warriors composed of Lt. Stokes, Lt. Ringdorff and Lt. Evans. The other two spend most of their time trying to hold Jimmy Evans down. There is something to the effect that Jim has put out a notice to the susceptible femmes that his power is far reaching, and we distinctly heard him tell a beautiful blonde that a tall dark man was coming into her life. He has been hearing about it regularly ever since.

Overheard on the tennis court: "What's the score pardner?" "It's five to one their favor, but we've got their morale now."

That's as bad as Bim Carne's remark about "Just because a man's on the staff doesn't mean that he's up the pole.

Tommy Thompson lost the championshp with his remark during the air corps lecture. "They don't put Armour on airplanes," said the Nordic rascal, "Because it isn't Swift!"

Bad too is George Hickman's definition: "A Disbursing Officer is one who disperses his troops all over in the field."

However, we can write no more after telling George Howell's story. "It seems," said George, "That recent experiments in the laboratories of General Motors tend to prove that gasoline and oil that has been aged for a long time is the best combustion agent to be had. This all goes to prove the old saying that there is no fuel like an old fuel.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

SUMMER COLDS

Colds may be acquired in any season of the year. Though more common in winter they are also seen frequently enough in summer to account for many cases of disability of varying duration and many admissions to hospitals. Even in summer, colds frequently lead to pneumonia, the most serious of communicable diseases that we have with us when contracted, as it affects the public as a whole. Hence do not think that you can take chances with colds even in the hot summers of Fort Benning.

Summer colds, like those of cold weather are of two kinds. The colds that you catch from other people and the colds that you take even though no one around you has one. People who have adenoids or infected tonsils or are run-down are likely to have either kind.

The germ which causes you to catch cold may enter your nose and throat from the air when an infected person talks, coughs, or sneezes. You may catch cold by using an unwashed glass, spoon, or fork, which has just been used by someone with a cold. The germs may be on your hands because you have touched something which has been handled by the person with a cold. Washing the hands before eating or before touching the face will help to prevent this.

In summer the taking of a cold without "catching" it from other people, is most frequent in those who have poor circulation or some local infection in the nose or throat. Recently there have been a fairly large number of persons at this post with sufficiently severe summer colds to make it necessary for their admittance to the hospital. Nearly all of these peo ple have neglected to follow the simple rules herein noted.

Sitting too long in a draft or in the shade in a wet bathing suit, too sudden cooling off after hard work or exercise; remaining exposed to the breeze of an electric fan (especially sleeping under a fan); and similar acts are apt to lead to the acquisition of summer colds.

Once a cold is acquired, whether it be in winter or summer, proper treatment is necessary. Early treatment is most important. If your head stops up, your back and legs ache, your eyes burn, and there is a tickling or soreness in the throat, and you have other signs of cold, such as sneezing or a running nose, you should start "first aid" right away.

Rest in bed if possible; take a laxative; drink plenty of cold water, and eat lightly of simple nourishing food. Other measures will be suggested by the doctor if you call him. Beware of the patent medicines sold as remedies for colds. Many contain drugs that are bad for the heart and may cause a "drug habit."

Help protect the other fellow; If you have a cold, cough or sneeze in a handkerchief (which shoud be boiled when washed) or in a cloth or paper napkin that can be burned, in that you will not give your cold to other people who have a cold, summer or winter, should stay by themselves as much as possible, because many other diseases start with what seems to be only a cold.

After thirty years of service, including double time for foreign service in Cuba, Staff Sergeant Charles H. Prince is ready for retirement. A chicken supper was given partly in his honor at the mess hall of the Detachment, Quartermaster Corps last Saturday night, and during the affair he was presented with a handbag by the Detachment Commander.

Staff Sergeant Prince will probably be retired as of June 30. He has already completed approximately 28 years of "straight" service in the United States Army. The first part of his service was spent in the Cavalry. He joined the 15th Cavalry on his first enlistment, March 18, 1904, and remained through two enlistments till September 30, 1909. The remainder of his service was spent in the Quartermaster Corps and Coast Artillery Corps.

Staff Sergeant Prince has always believed in seeing as much of the world as possible. During his service he never remained at one post more than a few years.

The Mighty Grumpy Gordy claims a new record. He insists that he and his friends consumed no less than nine packs of his Camels in one day. No auditor remained behind him to check his figures, but he refuses to place his figure one cigarete below nine packs.

The detachment has two new privates first class both of whom are in the commissary branch, Roy D. Stapp and Samuel Bernard. Bernard, who was the only member of the detachment who took the examinaton for staff sergeant in the detachment, made a passing grade a leter from the Quartermaster General showed, and will be plced on the eligible list.

THE ARMY AND THE ARTS
GENERAL FUZZARD REBUKES THE MUSE

From time immemorial, professional soldiers have been essentially rude men of action—tough customers whose business is the slaughter of their country's foes. This statement applies not only to the men in ranks but to the commissioned personnel of all the ages. The stern business of war is neither conducive to the development of artists and scholars nor to an appreciation of their works. The Roman centurion threw dice on the canvases of immortal Corinthian painters and his modern prototype, the Captain of Infantry see nothing more in Turner's Whale Ship than a smudge of pigments. Neither does a major for that matter, for we have seen it and that is what it looked like to us.

It is the same with so called literature.

True, Wolfe drifting down the St. Lawrence toward the fatal Plains of Abraham, quoted the famous lines:

"The boast of heraldry, the pomp of power,
All that beauty, all that life, ere gave Await alike the inevitable hour;
The paths of glory lead but to the grave."

And added that he would rather have written Gray's Elegy than take Quebec.

Wolfe, however, was a general officer and an exceptional one at that. Most army officers would rather take sixty CC of Castor Oil than read Gray's Elegy —let alone write it.

This is as it should be. What business have we to browze on the slopes of Parnassus when we haven't read half the training regulations? Admitting that training regulations have an anaesthetic quality which makes it almost impossible to read more than a page without falling asleep, even that doesn't excuse us for not going at it again when we cometo.

We knew a colonel once who made a rather pointed remark in our presence to the effect that he considered even a casual acquaintance with poetry to be detrimental to an officer's efficiency. He came fresh from the front, having been canned from the A. E. F., so he knew what he was talking about.

Ever since this incident, we have been convinced that poetry weakens the characterial fiber and tends to fatty degeneration of the primal instincts which win battles.

What shall we say, then, of an army officer who write poetry—real poetry, not trifling parodies on Kipling and Macauley such as we sometimes indulge in our baser moments? Consider this:

Say only this of him when he is dead,
"He saw proud eagles storming down the sky,
He heard the bracken break when beauty fled,
And wingless strove to fly."

Yes, the author of the above and even better lines dwells in our very midst, poisoning the ambient air with ideas.

Needless to say, we were surprised and shocked to discover this and we promptly resolved to invoke the power of the press to see if something can't be done about it. Our first step was to interview the distinguished soldier of fortune, General M. M. Fuzzard, who recently returned from the Shanghai front where his activities as head of an unofficial personally conducted volunteer salvage corps won him considerable notoriety. The General is familiar with conditions in our service, having spent several years in it prior to being cashiered and his opinion carries weight.

To our stock reportorial question "What do you know about that?" the General replied that he didn't know anything about it because it didn't make sense. "That's the trouble with the Army to-day", he snorted, "Too many highbrows. In the old Army an officer and a gentleman was a man who carried his liquor. Nowadays they don't pay no attention to fundamentals and a lot of young fellers get out o'hand just like this one. 'Heard the bracken break when beauty fled'. Imagine a man talkin' like that to a fatigue detail diggin' a latrine! They'd think he was goofy. If I had an officer like that under me, I'd put him to work doing something useful like takin' a physical inventory of all the property on memorandum receipt or checkin' clothing accounts. The only poet that was ever in the Army was a rum hound named Poe, and they kicked him out of West Point at Christmas. 'Proud eagles'—bah!"

Whereupon the General stamped angrily away in the direction of the telegraph office to serve as Director of Prohibition Enforcement at a twenty per cent reduction in salary—plus emoluments.

INITIATION

Major A. S. J. Tucker, having received official notification that he is to succeed Colonel Stayer as chief of the versatile Second Section, has been he central figure in two elaborate ceremonials, specially devised to feature his elevation to high office.

The first one which took him completely by surprise took place before of school. Major Tucker having mounted the platform to make an announcement, a phonograph in the locker room suddenly burst into appropriate airs and a solemn procession of representatives of the Great First Section entered the lecture room bearing the new chief's badges of office. These consisted of the well-known pink coat, yellow vest, black cap and other necessary equipment for the chase and with this raiment the embarrassed Chief of Section elect was duly invested. Then Colonel Stillwell brought forth the royal diadem and crowned him lord of all the manifold activities of his new office.

Colonel Stillwell also made a neat oration giving the bride away, as it were, and Major Hearn accepted the new chief in behalf of the "eighteen officers, two enlisted men and one female stenographer" who constitute the talented organization with which Major Tucker will be associated.

This would seem to have been sufficient hazing for the Major but the Second Section is thorough as well as versatile. At the Despidida for dress the graduating students filed across the stage and each was presented with his diploma by the Assistant Secretary of War.

A benediction pronounced by Chaplain Willis T. Howard, Protestant Chaplain of Fort Benning, and the playing of Auld Land Syne by the 29th Infantry Band, completed the graduating exercises.

Preceding the graduating exercises, a troop review, which comprised all combatant troops of the garrison was held before the assistant secretary of War on Gordon Field. Mr. Payne was visibly pleased with the precision of the marching units and the general appearance of the men.

world to the city in which it is being held and is always an occasion of great solemnity.

Lt. Dowdall will be missed by the personnel of Fort Benning while he is on his trip, even though his place will be most ably filled by Lt. Pulsifer. He has made himself one of the most popular of the officers of the Post during his time here and has shown himself, with his staff, fully capable of attending to the many duties which devolve on the Secretary.

To Be Retired

WARRANT OFFICER MACK EVANS

Warrant Officer Mack Evans, who has been on duty at Fort Benning since October 16, 1921, departed on Tuesday for Fort McPherson, where he has been transferred pending his retirement from active service which will take place within the next few months.

Mr. Evans was Chief Clerk of the Academic Department for about nine years, and for nearly a year has been on duty in the Fort Benning Provost Marshall's Office.

Mr. Evans began his military career on January 15, 1902, when he enlisted at Carthage, Tennessee, and was assigned to the 1st Infantry. It was in this regiment that he met Major General King who then was serving as a Lieutenant in the 1st Infantry. Colonel Harry E. Knight, now Executive Officer at Fort Benning, was also serving in the same regiment as a Captain. Mr. Evans served continuously with the 1st Infantry until May 2, 1918.

Some of his early service with the 1st Infantry was spent in the Philippine Islands where he engaged in the campaigns incident to the Philippine Insurrection on the Island of Samar in 1901-1902, and in the Pulajan campaign on the Islands of Samar and Leyte in 1907.

He also served in the Hawaiian Islands from 1912 until 1918.

He has occupied al the enlisted grades from private to 1st sergeant and color sergeant. In June 1918 he was appointed a 2nd Lieutenant of Infantry and assigned to Camp Gordon, Georgia. In August 1918 he was promoted to 1st Lieutenant, and while at Camp Gordon he served as personnel adjutant of the replacement regiment and as brigade and camp personnel adjutant. He was discharged from his emergency commission in 1920, and in January 1921 he was appointed a warrant officer and assigned to duty in the Camp Personnel Office at Camp Jackson, South Carolina, where he remained until October 1921, when he was assigned to Fort Benning.

Mr. Evans will be on duty at Headquarters Fourth Corps Area, Fort McPherson, for two or three months before his retirement, after which he expects to make his home in Atlanta.

NEWS OF THE SPORT WORLD

BILL ELLISON, Editor

Second Twin 10-Rounders Top Post Bill

Although it may be a trifle disturbing to such gentlemen as Jimmy Johnston, erstwhile free-lance promoter and now matchmaker for the Madison Square Garden, and still more disconcerting to the several hundred millionaires who have invested their hard-earned (yoo hoo) money in the venture, the fact remains, nevertheless, that no cases of suicide have been recorded to date on the part of fans who endeavored to obtain tickets to the June 21st melee between Schmeling and Sharkey and failed to obtain them. How come?

It seems that the New York sports writers have sickened of the sight. Maybe their conscience hurts them because it is a well known fact the last Schmeling-Sharkey thing was steamed up to the skies and what happened?—One of the biggest fiascos known in the annals of the ring racket was perpetrated upon the innocent and unsuspecting buyers of ducats.

Westbrook Pegler, sports columnist for the Chicago Tribune Syndicate, always outspoken where the Garden is concerned, in a recent column cast doubts upon Sharkey's right to fight for the title and discussed the general doubtful quality of the match.

As far as the newspapers are concerned they are not going to get caught in the Garden's net as they have done on other occasions, Mr. Williams believes, and, in a recent column he wrote of the matter thusly:

"Here these two young men have been working their very hearts out for more than a week, snorting and sweating under a beautiful May sun, and not one newspaper correspondent has moved into either camp to jot down the enthralling developments of the day.

"I suppose the newspapers remember that the last time Mr. Sharkey and the young herr met they perpetrated a huge fiasco and exited laughingly to divide $750,000 of the public's dough between them. The newspapers were wholly responsible for that $750,000 being in the box office. They were responsible to the extent that they encouraged attendance—as they encourage attendance to an event which promises to be worth while and of great public interest.

"In a sense they shared with the fighters the blame for the general dissatisfaction that followed, when an advertised fifteen-round fight for the championship of the world ended in the fourth round with one of the men on the floor crying foul. It seems that this time the newspapers intend to adopt a policy of watchful waiting. I am told you can't go wrong if you wait until the young men crawl between the ropes and then write about 'em."

COMPANY "A"

The company is preparing to send a crack team of runners and an unbeatable Tug-o-War team into the coming field meet. The mighty Spud is in charge of the runners and the Tug-o-War team. "I was out in the woods about 22 miles from Fort Benning and saw a large snake with two heads. At first, I jumped back as I was frightened. However, I kept my eye on him as he was in a coil, untli I could find a large stick with which to kill him. Upon reaching for a limb of a tree, I encountered another snake striking at me from behind. At this time the situation called for quick thinking, so I measured the length of the striking snake behind me, and as he struck the second time I grabbed him by the throat, and swung him around until he became exhausted, and just as I was looking around for the other snake I woke up." So Owens tells Lee—and how.

A certain gentleman wanted a cigar and had no money. Stealing was something that never occurred to him, so he resorted to clever legitimate means, thus, the explanation: He entered a drug store and asked for a ten cent bar of soap. Aftre receiving the soap he happened to see some lead pencils for ten cents each. He requested the clerk to exchange the soap for the pencil. The clerk made the exchange, as he reached the door he saw the cigar which he wanted at first. He obligingly asked the clerk to exchange the pencil for the cigar as he preferred the latter instead. The clerk gave him the ten cent cigar, which he at once began to smoke and walk out. The clerk hailed him and said: "Mr. you haven't paid me for that cigar"—to which the gent replied. "I exchanged the pencil for the cigar." The clerk then said "Come on, you didn't pay for the pencil." To this our gent replied: "I traded the soap for the pencil. At this time the clerk became irritant and remarked "Say—you pay for that soap and do it quick." Our man looked up and said: "Brother, I did not take the soap—now, what?" The clerk said nothing.

Mother, hang out the Service Flag—father's got a job.

COMPANY "G"

Bayonet training wrote its finals for the year 1932 with only five men out of the company to qualify. A most commendable record.

The Post Track Meet is a thing of the past. Those who saw the record Mile Relay run and won by the 2nd Battalion saw Woods at his best—running one of the fastest and most important legs of the race. To share with Woods in honors were Thompson, Prophet and Loper. Loper found himself at the completion of the high jump in a quadruple tie for 1st place.

Latest information from Bn., Headquarters states that "G" Company plays "H" Company for the Battalion Championship. May the best team win. With a strong company turnout that best company ought to be "G" Company.

schedule. We will go to the pistol range to get sunburned and use up our 50 rds. of ammunition and nobody cares whether it is a bulls-eye or not as long as his pistol fires. In order to stand the strain of making holes in the targets we are doing our daily dozen "pistol squeeze" exercises. The man who invented this exercise and sold the idea to the army surely was a wizard in dealing out punishment.

Preparations for the expert and 1st class gunners examinations have started and as the exams differ very much from those we have passed during the last four years we expect a brand new crop of experts.

The best qualified men, not to exceed 32 will get paid for their troubles and knowledge, the remainder of the qualified artillerymen will get a badge, so that we have to admit the depression has hit the army too.

Science, slugging and willingness will be injected into Tuesday night's leather entertainment at Doughboy Stadium. Fans will witness a double wind-up that should be packed with action.

Puggy Weinert, Benning Buzz-saw, will meet Jimmy Spivey, of Columbus and Florida, in the main ten rounder. Rip Tetherton, Benning, and Kid Baisden, Columbus, will scrap in the other ten rounder.

Spivey cannot slug. It is doubtful if he could punch his way out of a bag. But he is a smart boxer—and better be for Weinert can slug, and how! "Puggy" should beat Spivey's ears off, as far as heavy hittng is concerned, but the problem is going to be laying a glove on the oily Jimmy.

There's no reason why Tetherton shouldn't knock Baisden for a goal provided he steers clear of Baisden's left jab. Baisden has a pretty stiff punch but if you tie him up where there's no chance to shoot that long left from the shoulder, he's at a mighty big disadvtantage. He doesn't relish infighting. But at long range he's arsenic at tilting the head back and otherwise massaging the face a la leather.

Grumpy (the one and only) Gordy and Frank Mackery, both of Benning, are to perform in the main six round preliminary. Gordy's personality and quaint characteristics insures a good bout.

Warner Baxter at Grand

Cinema Calendar

for Grand, Rialto and Royal

AT THE ROYAL

(Beginning with Midnight Show, Saturday 11:15 P. M.)

SUNDAY, MONDAY AND TUESDAY: Presenting, "AS YOU DESIRE ME," with Greta Garbo, Melvyn Douglas, Erich Von Stroheim and Owen Moore. The strangest love story in the world—played as it can be played only by the screen's most thrilling star. A vanished bride . . . . and then from the gay cafes of Vienna comes Zara, the exotic dancer, to take her place. Was she the woman he had lost years before, or another come as an answer to his soul's craving? Her lovly eyes, smoldering with emotion, were the haunted eyes of a woman seeking escape from some secret tragedy of the past. Many men desired her—her heart she kept through the years for one alone.

AT THE RIALTO

TUESDAY ONLY: Presenting, "STRANGERS IN LOVE," with Frederic March, Kay Francis, Stuart Erwin and Juliette Compton. He was a black sheep but he turned white . . . . after he found it was nicer to be home with a lot of loving to do; than to roam with a lot of explaining to do. Excellent amusement. One of the swiftest, funniest of modern stories in this modish age. You'll agree.

WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY: Presenting, "GIRL OF THE RIO," with Dolores Del Rio, Leo Carrillo and a strong supporting cast. Darling Dolores, absent from the screen for two years on account of illness, makes a lorious comeback in "GIRL OF THE RIO." She has a role that was made to order for her—that of a cafe entertainer in a typical Mexican border town which is particularly colorful in view of the getting with its bustling industry of gambling games, vaqueros and cowboys at play and love and the inevitable drama of hates and passion possible only in this type of resort.

SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Presenting, "ONE HOUR WITH YOU," with Maurice Chevalier, Jeanette MacDonald, Genevieve Tobin, Charlie Ruggles and Roland Young. And now the Smiling Lieutenant becomes a doctor—a specialist who gives all of his feminine patients heart-trouble. Adoring women beg for his professional attention—and other attentions also. Their temperatures go up when he feels their pulse and his boudoir manner is wonderful.

AT THE GRAND

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Presenting, "AMATEUR DADDY," with Warner Baxter and Marian Nixon and Rita LaRoy. The daddy of "DADDY LONG LEGS," just as you like him again fathering a pretty girl, then falling in love with her and winning her heart in spite of all of the barriers the world could set between them. The kid he scolded was the girl he adored. Imagine Warner Baxter as a self-appointed daddy, coming to protect this adorable girl—and staying to love her.

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY: Presenting, "PRESTIGE," with Ann Harding and Adolphe Menjou. Ann Harding, the screen's pre-eminent actress. Not merely the lustrous star of "HOLIDAY," the adorable girl of "DEVOTION," but a woman playing with all heart in a great story. She found the meaning of love in sacrifice. Men sought her . . . . but she sought her man . . . through mountains and oceans separated them.

Gentlemen Prefer Charm To Brains

Can a man love a brainy woman?

The answer is yes—but he is not likely to, according to Mildred Cram, famous writer whose widely read novel, "Scotch Valley" has been translated into Warner Baxter's latest Fox drama "Amatuer Daddy", which opens Tuesday at the Grand Theatre.

"Women who think they are intellectually superior to their more companionable sisters," Miss Cram maintains, "usually are devils to live with. Full of ideas that come out of books, an dthat have no relation with life, they demand a higher grade of male than has yet made his appearance on this planet. Hence, the fequent victory of this companionable woman over her intellectual sister in matters of the heart."

Marian Nixon who plays opposite Baxter in "Amatuer Daddy" leaves the intelluctual plane for the more direct appeal of womanly charm, and succeeds in capturing his interest to the exclusion of all others in this amusing drama.

John Blystone directed the picture. The other players include Rita LaRoy, David Landau, Clarence Wilson, William Pawley, Frankie Darro and Joe Hachey.

RIALTO

ONE HOUR WITH YOU

Chevalier, Lubitsch, "One Hour With You." . . . and an excellent cast headed by Jeannette MacDonald are the chief selling elements of this lyrical comedy-romance.

Chevalier, of course, is the big thing . . . Chevalier singing, loving, laughing . . . and all else follows. The title is excellent for all kinds of personalized appeals, especially tied in with Chevalier. The public remembers Jeanette MacDonald as Chevalier's "queen" of "The Love Parade." The public wants to hear Chevalier sing; to see Chevalier's sly love-making. They get ALL of Chevalier in "One Hour With You" . . . with all the smart Lubitsch touches you roared at in "The Smiling Lieutenant."

"GIRL OF THE RIO"

Ever since the Irish mercenary soldiers used by Spanish hundreds of years ago linked Erin with the land of the Dons by settlement and intermarriage, Irishmen and Spaniards have made a famous combination.

But now there's a new link to the connection.

Herbert Brenon, from Dublin, directed RKO-Radio Pictures' production, "Girl of the Rio," current at the Rialto Theatre with Dolores Del Rio in the Starring role.

Cooling System Used at Rialto

Manager Alderman of the Rialto theater has an interesting announcement for the many patrons of his popular theater. He has put in operation a modern cooling system that makes the visitor to the Rialto forget that summer is at hand while he is watching a particularly interesting picture—such as may be seen every day in the week at the Rialto.

Immediately the patron enters the Rialto, there is a noticeable relief from the oppressive heat. The cooling waves of the cooling system come as a great relief indeed. The patron has but then to select his or her seat and enjoy the cinema entertainment.

The cooling system at the Rialto is modern and up-to-the-minute in every respect. You do not feel a sudden gust of breeze that passes off and then another a minute or so later. The temperature remains the same all of the time.

ROYAL

GRETA GARBO

Greta Garbo, who may always be relied upon for something different, appears as a platinum-blonde cafe singeer in her latest screen characterization as Zara in "As You Desire Me."

The new Garbo picture, which will open with a midnight show at 11:15 P. M. at the Royal Theatre to continue through Tuesday.

PLAYS DANGEROUS GAME

In "As You Desire Me," Miss Garbo enacts the role of a temperamental Budapest cafe entertainer who is mistaken by an Italian nobleman for the wife whom he thought to have been killed by invaders during the World War. In order to escape the demands of a ruthless novelist who has a hypnotic influence over her, Garbo resolves to enact the bluff of the nobleman's wife, a game which proves to be as dangerous as it is diverting. The novelist stops at nothing in his attempt to bring the erstwhile cabaret singer back into his power, and she is therefore forced to match her wits against his in order to defend her masquerade. The result is said to be the most adventurous, intriguing and romantic drama in which the fascinating Swedish actress has yet been seen.

The Flare

Colonel and Mrs. Stayer they put his successor through a technical examination which was ably designed to prove to all present that neither Major Tucker nor any other one man can ever hope to plumb the profundities of knowledge which the various committees possess. Of course the Major failed to pass but it was finally voted to accept him anyhow in order to save Colonel Marshall the embarrassment of having his appointee rejected.

The Flare ventures to predict that Chief-elect Tucker will make good in spite of the deficiencies show up in the examination. We fear, however, that in one respect he can never fill his predecessor's shoes. The faculty and student body aren't going to trust him to prescribe for their physical and mental ills.

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN UP-TO-DATE

It happened a long time ago but it's a true story and we must tell the world before the villain in the plot leaves the post.

It seems that the Infantry School Hunt, having decided to raise a crop of corn (staple, not beverage) to offset the high cost of aniseed, entered into a contract with one Ivy Thomas, a dusky agriculturist, to do the dirt farming. Squire Jerry Wood, then, as now, active in hunt affairs, was cast in the role of Simon Legree to oversee the plantation. Subsequent events lead us to believe that the Squire played his part well. Certainly Thomas developed a wholesome respect for his anger and thereby hangs our tale.

The relations between Jerry and Thomas (it took all of our character to resist linking the names as Tom and Jerry) had become somewhat strained when, one day, the Squire appeared unexpectedly at the humble door of his tenant. His mission on the day in question was the replacement of a culvert and he had brought with him in an escort wagon the necessary tools and a long rough pine box to carry the water under the roadway. He called for Uncle Thomas and brusquely bade him come along. Being a man of few words, the Squire vouchsafed no explanation as to the why and wherefore of the summons.

Thomas cast an apprehensive look at the wagon and then replied, "All right, Boss, I'se comin'. Jes wait a minute till I gits a drink of water." Whereupon he vanished around the corner of the house and that was the last Jerry ever saw of his man Friday.

Months afterwards Thomas was located over in Alabama through a letter writtenby him which began "Dear Gentler King." A representative of the Hunt Club was sent to interview him. At first Thomas seemed reluctant to explain his unusual action but finaly he loosened up and told all.

"You see, Boss," he confessed, "the Cap'n and me ain't been gittin' along so well when he showed up one mawnin' wif a wagon. The Cap'n he say 'com along wif me, Thomas' and he look mean when he say it. Then Ah looks inside that wagon and Ah sees a long box and a pick and a shubble and piece of rope. Then Ah knows what he's gwine do. He's got de rope to hang me wif, de pick and shubble to dig mah grave and the box to bury me in. An' Ah say to myself, 'No sah, dey ain't agoin' to lynch this niggah—not if Ah knows it.' So Ah goes aroun' de house to git a drink and Ah don' stop goin' till Ah gits over here in Alabam. No sah, Ah ain't goin' back to de Fort until dat Cap'in done gone and maybe not den."

WARNING

We have noted the protracted absence from the swimming pool of certain ardent devotees of yesteryear. We are reluctant to believe that any members of this enlightened community object to the prescribed preliminary bath with soap and water but something is holding down the attendance. We are toying with the idea of publishing a list of former swimming enthusiasts who no longer patronize the pool. Certainly such a list would attract attention to our column and it might be worth while even if we should have to leave town for a few days. Anyhow we are collecting our data and when we get it we strongly suspect that we shan't be able to resist the temptationto use it.

CITATION FOR THE WEEK

To Colonel Morrison Clay Stayer, retiring Chief of the Versatile Second Section, Surgeon to the Infantry School Hunt, Physician extraordinary to the Faculty and its family, Father Confessor to the Student Body, Doctor, Administrator, Doughboy—for five years of meritorious service, most of it over, beyond, and above the routine performance of duty, the Flare makes a solemn and sincere farewell salutation.

BENNING HERALD

VOLUME II — FORT BENNING, GA., FRIDAY, JUNE 10, 1932 — NUMBER 7

Three Hundred Cadets Here To Pep Up Post Activities

If the ROTC Students of this year's encampment are even half as active as those of last year, Fort Benning is in for a lively time, for the college boys invariably seem to put pep into the activities of the Post.

There are three hundred and seven here this year, representing five of the largest schools in the South. The cadets have already begun to get down to work and will have to crowd a lot of work into six weeks before they are given their clean bill of health as finished students of the Reserve Cadets' Advanced Class of Fort Benning.

Last year, among the activities which engaged the boys was the formation of a "musical ensemble" including a quartet and several instrumentalists. What the instruments were is better left unsaid, but a rumor says that they were of a type usually associated with moonlit nights and beneath-the-balcony serenades.

The signal corps last year were also the subject of an ugly rumor, which stated that the signalers took the unfair advantage of the engineers in a particularly irritating way. The latter, so the story goes, would be laboring to build a bridge while the communications men waited, and, of course were forcibly restrained from drinking as they would have liked. So the signalers, sensing the opportunity to be irritating, would up-end their canteens in plain view of the laborers and drink copiously and satisfyingly. Our authority for this is Captain Waine Archer, now in Hawaii, and former PRO of Fort Benning.

Captain Archer sent us another rumor, which, though it was never verified, still was a good story. It seems that two of the ROTC cadets, felt their duty toward one of the oldest traditions of the Southland, and made their "going to war" at Benning the occasion for the revival of an old southern custom. They brought along negro "body servants, suh." The names of the guilty ones, however, have forever remained undisclosed.

A climax which shows the undisputed stamina of the Georgia Tech students of last year is briefly given in the following statistical report of a trip undertaken by one of the boys on his motorcycle "Ignatz." (The statistics were compiled by their statistical officer.)

Elapsed Time: 43 hours.

Distance traveled: 1211 miles (Speedometer readings).

Social Engagements: Five hours.

Mechanical Work: Seven hours.

Sleep: None.

Meals: Few.

Recovery: (He was in a pretty bunged-up state) probable.

Colonel Toffey Now On Way To Benning

Colonel John J. Toffey, who has been appointed to succeed Colonel Duncan K. Major, Jr., as commanding officer of the Army's war-strength regiment, the 29th Infantry, is now on his way to Fort Benning from Governor's Island, New York, where he has been on duty in connection with the R. O. T. C. for several years.

Colonel Toffey will take command of the regiment some time in the near future and Colonel Major will go to Washington.

Local Boy Makes Good Over Radio

Add another name to the long list of celebrities which have emerged from the roster of Fort Benning's Hall of Fame and graved their place on the stone of immortality. This time we make special reference to the Great Grumpy Gordy who sprang a surprise on the long-suffering members of the Benning garrison last Tuesday with a rendition of several songs well-calculated to capture the fancy of the soldier-boys who happened to be listening at the time. We have heard the groans and lamentations of those poor unfortunates who were so unlucky as to be out of reach of the magic instrument which Grumpy chose as the proper medium for reaching his public, but we can give them a word of cheer, a silver lining to their clouds, for our hero performed so well that he has been invited to repeat at an early date. So pull up your chairs, boys, turn on the radio, and turn your dial to station WRBL, for you may be among the lucky ones who will be favored with Grumpy's second program on the air.

From what our correspondent at Fort Benning tells us the whole incident caused a furor at the post which has not been equaled for many days. Jim (that's his name, we'll keep the last name secret) says that he was in the Service Club when he heard a commotion and saw the entire personnel, the visitors and the customers of the PX Restaurant making a dash for the radio. Naturally he too followed the crowd and was just as surprised as the others when he learned that the far-famed Grumpy was about to regale the listerners with some of his selections.

The first was "River Stay Away From My Door" and was dedicated to the Quartermaster Department. To us this seems most apt, in fact, we could hardly suggest a better dedication under any circumstances. We hear that the Quartermaster Department enjoyed the program, too.

As his second number, our doughty hero chose that wide spread favorite "Somebody Loves You". This paean of love he dedicated to the Post-X Cafe, an incident, which, in view of rumors making their way about the Post, has caused many of the wise guys to crack a smile and wink. We won't tell the reader the details of this last, but just let him absorb some of the gossip which constantly circulates around the premises of Major Lyman's eating-house.

We don't quite get the connection in Grumpy's dedication of his last song, Maybe it is because we're not sufficiently familiar with either him or the song, but, at any rate, his dedication of "Was That The Human Thing To Do" to Grumpy "he-self" is a little beyond us. Time will tell, however, and we'll be listening in on his next broadcast to see if he won't be kind enough to explain his dedications as he goes along. Meanwhile between boxing and driving locomotives, practising and doing most anything, we'll leave the Great to the peaceful calm of the Benning summertime and let him plan his next program.

29th Complete Tests For Rifle Company Trophy

The training year 1931-32 for the 29th Infantry has just been brought to a close by a thorough and unusual test of rifle companies in a competition for a cup offered by the Regimental Commander, Colonel Duncan K. Major, Jr. The cup was inscribed "The Major, Sutherland, Albright Trophy for Field Efficiency of Rifle Companies." The last two names were included as a graceful compliment to the Plans and Training Officers of the Regiment who prepared and conducted this and other similar training tests. The test was so thorough in its scope that it is believed to merit comment.

Each company turned out with full field equipment and reached an initial point at a specified hour where a check for absentees and an inspection of the adjustment of equipment was made. The route and destination were then given the company commanders with instructions to make camp as for the night, upon arrival and display individual and organizational equipment. One hour after arrival at the destination the camp was inspected for completeness of installation and selected articles of individual and organizational equipment were checked.

The tactical situation was given out immediately after the inspection. The company was assumed to be a part of a battalion in reserve in a force in an offensive situaiton. A message from the Battalion Commander gave the information that the enemy was withdrawing and the battalion would move to the front in a sector on the flank of the advancing Blues; the company was directed to move at once to secure a commanding hill some 1,000 yards beyond the front line in its zone of action. The accomplishment of this mission required a movement toward the front followed by a deployment in a zone of action and an advance by compass over very rough ground and through extremely thick underbrush. The companies were graded upon the facility with which they carried out the task, the provisions for security, and their ability to maintain direction by compass and so arrive at the objective in the assigned zone. Upon arrival at the objective a message from the Battalion Commander was delivered containing an order for further advance by the battalion and assigning a mission to the company that gave the commander wide latitude in conducting his advance, although still restricting him to an interior zone of action. The terrain was such that changes in formation and varied employment of scouts were required in order to reduce the possibility of heavy casualties. After an advance of seven or eight hundred yards the company came under enemy rifle and machine gun fire which required a maneuver by platoon commanders of leading platoons, and which brought forcibly to the attention of all participants the necessity for proper security measures. This resistance having been outflanked, the advance was resumed for a distance of about 600 yards. At that point the company again came under hostile fire of sufficient power to stop the leading platoons and force a maneuver by the company commander. During the fire fight, ball ammunition was issued to one section to replace

Bryan Wins On Indoor Court In Tennis Finals At Benning

In spite of adverse weather conditions, the annual Fort Benning Tennis Tournament finished in a blaze of glory on June the fifth. In one of the hardest hitting matches ever seen on the local courts, the left handed smasher, Bryan, from Chattanooga, defeated the scrappy little Birmingham champion, Fred Andrews, 6-2, 7-5, 6-4. The match which was moved into the gymnasium because of rain, was replete with thrills. The wood court made the play so fast that at times the enthusiastic spectators were unable to follow the ball, and the hard serves just skidded off the boards.

Andrews Almost Wins Second Set

Volleying perfectly, Andrews led Bryan in the second set, breaking through the husky star's service in the ninth game. Time after time the Birmingham boy took the net to bite off Lefty Bryan's drives for angled aces. However, Lefty smashed his way through to a 7-5 victory, and kept up his consistent play to win the match and the beautiful trophies offered by the Officers' Club. This match was much more interesting, and was featured by more hard hitting than the recent Tilden exhibitions. Both Bryan and Andrews will prove to be great drawing cards next year, and as the popular Jack Mooney will be back, a fine tournament is assured. This year the tournament committee was very unfortunate, for Wilmer Hines, an outstanding player, was a casualty at Spartanburg. When he wrecked his automobile, and was unable to arrive in time for play. Jack Mooney was head umpire during the matches. An infected foot prevented his appearance on the courts.

Doubles Match Hard Fought

In the doubles championship, Bryan and Capt. Bassett won a thriller from Harry Gault and Andrews. The serving was so hard in this match that it was difficult to break through. In the exchanges, it took a real smash to win a point. Gault and Andrews started like scared jackrabbits and won the first set 10-8, then Capt. Bassett and Bryan won a long set, 9-7. With the score tied there was a stiff fight for the deciding sets. However Gault and Andrews were just nosed out in each, the scores being 6-4, 8-6. Capt. Bassett's serve was going strong, and he lost it but once during the match.

Preliminary Matches Interesting

Play in the early rounds brought out some excellent tennis. Murray Calhoun of Columbus won a three set match from Smith, of Mississippi A & M 4-6, 6-0, 6-3. Then he played his best game to defeat the hard hitting Boulware of Atlanta, 6-4, 4-6, 6-2. Lt. Stokes, of Fort Bragg won from Maddox of Columbus, 6-3, 4-6, 6-3. The feature match of the first round was Godwin's win from White, of Miami. The score was 6-4, 2-6, 6-3.

Major Gordon played excellent tennis to defeat Enloe of Atlanta 9-7, 5-7, 11-9, but he lost to Lt. Sherburne 4-6, 6-2, 6-3. The semi-final match between Andrews and Gault was very close, Andrews finally winning 6-3, 6-2, 3-6, 6-3.

Captain Drake was the only local player to reach the semi-finals. He played excellently, but Lefty Bryan defeated him 6-2, 6-1, 7-5. The last set was very close and most of the

Gas Masks Given Thorough Tests

A series of tests of a new type of gas mask, which has been in progress at Fort Benning for some time under the supervision of the Infantry Board, was completed on Tuesday, when 112 soldiers of the 29th Infantry, wearing the new gas masks, engaged in baseball games and other athletic sports to determine the field of vision offered to the soldier and to ascertain whether the protective device interfered with the physical exertions of its wearer.

Previous tests of the new type of gas mask had shown that it could be worn with comparative comfort and without interfering with the normal activities and duties of the soldier during marches, drills, target practice and in gas impregnated areas.

The new mask is an experimental type by the Chemical Warfare Service upon suggestion of the infantry, which desires to eliminate the necessity of individually fitting a mask to each soldier, which is now required when the present issue type of mask is used. By a proficiency cmfwyp vbgkqjcmf By a modification of the face piece and a new design of head harness, the experimental mask, which is termed the "universal face piece type" of, will fit more satisfactorily all sizes and shapes of faces, and will do away with the necessity of having five different sizes of masks, as is now required. The new type of mask will not only simplify the issue of the protective device to the troops, but will also simplify problems of manufacture and supply.

Colonel Marshall Will Leave Post Next Week

Lt. Colonel George C. Marshall, Jr. Assistant Commandant, who for the past five years has been head of the Infantry School, will leave about the middle of next week to go to his new station at Fort Screven, Ga.

Colonel Marshall, who has been an active member of the Rotary Club, was recently honored at the Rotary luncheon at Columbus as a farewell for both he and Mrs. Marshall. Colonel George F. Baltzell, who has been asociated with Colonel Marshall at various times over a period of 26 years, praised his military attainments during his career as an officer and the inherent ability which has brought these attainments.

Colonel Marshall had as his guest at the luncheon Colonel Charles L. Weeks, who will be his successor as head of the Infantry School.

Mrs. Howell Takes Over Herald's Society Column

Mrs. George P. Howell, of Fort Benning, will succeed Mrs. F. W. Sladen as the Society Editor of the Herald, having taken charge of that department this week. All those who wish to be represented in the society columns are requested to get in touch with Mrs. Howell.

Wedding Of Miss Skinner And Lieutenant Peter Calyer One Of Interest

A wedding of widespread interest throughout Army circles and Columbus society was that of Lieutenant Peter Calyer and Miss Pauline Skinner daughter of Captain and Mrs. Guy W. Skinner which was solemnized at 9 o'clock Sunday morning at The Woman's Club in Columbus. Chaplain Willis T. Howard performed the ceremony in the presence of a small gathering of friends and relatives.

In the west parlor of the Woman's Club a beautiful altar was improvised of ferns and vases of white spanish bayonet blooms and shasta daisies. White waxen tapers burned in silver candlesticks. Covering the mantel were baskets of fragrant magnolia blossoms. The altar was covered with a lovely Belgian lace cloth.

Before the ceremony Capt. Fred O. Wickham sang "Oh, Promise Me" accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Gustave Villaret. Proceding the entrance of the wedding party down the stairway and into the parlor, Mrs. Villaret played Mendelssohn's Wedding March from "Midsummers Night Dream." The little flower girls, Eugenia De Pass, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Morris De Pass and Mary Ellen Hoy, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Thomas A. Hoy preceded the bride, who on the arm of her father Capt. Skinner, was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Mr. Theodore Hodenstein Skinner, brother of the bride.

The tiny flower girls were adorable in organdy dresses patterened with tight basque and floor length skirts. They wore picture hats of horse hair and carried baskets of rose petals. Mary Ellen Hoy was in green, while Eugenia De Pass wore pink.

Mrs. Guy W. Skinner mother of the bride was chaming in a white georgette crepe gown cut floor length and fashioned along the newest lines. The gown was trimmed in the back with a black bow and Mrs. Skinner wore black satin slippers to match.

The bride's lovely blonde beauty was emphasized by her wedding gown of egg shell organdy made with long fitted lines and a very full skirt which swept the floor. She carried a beautiful shower bouquet of yellow roses and lilies of the valley.

Following the wedding ceremony a seated wedding breakfast was served upstairs where the color note of white was emphasized. The bride's table was overlaid with a lace cloth and in the center was the bride's three tiered cake embossed in white roses. Around the cake were placed small silver vases of white larkspur and shasta daisies, white waxen tapers burned in silver candlesticks. Seated at the bride's table were Lieut. and Mrs. Calyer, Capt. and Mrs. Skinner, Chaplain and Mrs. Howard, and Lieut. and Mrs. J. W. Clinton. Following a time honored Army custom the bride cut her cake with her husband's sabre. She then presented her bouquet to Miss Lois Kilgore.

Around the center table were placed individual tables seating four people. These were decorated with lace cloths and shasta daisies. Seated at these tables were; Capt. and Mrs. Villaret, Capt. and Mrs. H. O. Cushman, Capt. and Mrs. F. O. Wickham, Capt. and Mrs. M. B. DePass, Capt. and Mrs. G. A. Schlieker, Capt. and Mrs. R. W. Vermette, Capt. and Mrs. T. A. Hoy, Capt. and Mrs. George Wear, Lt. and Mrs. W. F. Dean, Lt. and Mrs. G. J. Gabriel, Lt. and Mrs. G. P. Howell, Mrs. Paul A. Zuver, Miss Lois Kilgore and Lts. Phil Draper, Bruce Easley, J. L. Grier, W. R. Currie, W. F. Caldwell, Henry Luongo, E. M. Houseman, D. C. McNair, Roy Silverman, and Noble Wiley.

Assisting in receiving the guests were Mrs. Charlton Battle and Mrs. William Blanchard of Columbus. Mrs. Battle wore a flowered chiffon gown while Mrs. Blanchard was in white crepe.

Shortly after the breakfast Lt. and Mrs. Calyer left by motor for Savannah where they will proceed to New York by boat. They will sail from the latter place on July 18 for Hawaii where Lt. Calyer has been ordered for station.

BATTERY "C" (FLORIDA)

For the first time since the founding of the R. O. T. C. camp on the Post, Florida is here in sufficient numbers to warrant a complete battery. The outfit is encamped 59 strong and occupies the coveted site traversed by the first company street.

The Florida battery is under the command of Captain John F. Hepner, F. A. (DOL). The staff of officers directing the activities of Battery "C" is rounded out with Captain Joseph P. Donnovin, F. A. (DOL) and First Lt. John F. Williams, F. A. (DOL). Both Captains Hepner and Captain Donnovin were stationed on the Florida campus prior to the marticulation of the present crop of "rookies." Lt. Williams is a recent addition to the military "faculty," having been transferred from Honolulu during the early part of the first semester.

According to present and pending K. P. assignments the Sunshine State (?) Battery stacks up as follows:

Joe Akerman, Garner Anchors, James Beville, Gainesville; Leo Bilinski, Monticello; Tom Blowers, Ocala; Louie Browning, Gainesville; Hugh Butner, Deland; Marcus Conant, Jacksonville; Albert Conner, Auburndale; Francis Conroy, Miami; John Deam, South Jacksonville; Harold Delp, Tampa; Arthur Evans, Vero Beach; Shaw Foster, Miami; Marion Gooding, Jacksonville; Harvey Haeseker, St. Petersburg; Sam Hand, Gainesville; Merton Hartman, Gainesville; Eddie Heimberger, Ft. Lauderdale; John Henderson, Tallahassee; Ralph Hoffmeyer, Jacksonville; Gerald Hostetler, Miami; John Johnson, Trenton; Harold Jones, Orlando; James Jones, Newberry, Roy Jones, Jacksonville; Henry Land, Apopka; Ed Lautz, Miami; Bruce Lehman, Miami; Hugh Logan, Tampa; Glenn Lucas, Bradenton; Andrew McLean, Pensacola; Louis McQuitty, Fort Myers; Stanley McDuff, Daytona Beach; George Morgan, Miami; Randall Musselman, Dade City; James Neefus, Rcokledge; Gene Nelson, Bushnell, John Patterson, Dunnellon; Bill Platt, Summerfield; Ray Renfro, Fort Myers; Irving Roche, Vernon; James Shackleford, Gainesville; Walter Shaffer, Winter Park, Ed Schweitzer, Miami; Charles Shephard, Gainesville; Paul Simmons, Plant City, Bill Simmons, Jacksonville; Joseph Smith, Tampa; Allen Stanwix-Hay, Jacksonvile; Tom Stevens, Gainesville; Lee Stone, Pierson; Charlie Trieste, Gainesville; Claude Walker, Coconut Grove; George Wentworth, Pensacola; Bill "Gene" Whitlock, High Springs; Fred Wilkes, Jacksonville; Reggie Williams, Tampa; Walter Woodward, Marianna.

Greek Lodges come in for a large representation with many of the 25th Florida chapters having brothers in attendance:

Joe Akerman is a member of the Pi Kappa Alpha group or in the vernacular of the social elite, just plain Pike. John Patterson of the same order. Three members of the glass eyed snake lodge give the Sigma Nu's a high percentage. Tom Blowers, Pat Conroy, and Hugh Logan are thusly affiliated.

From the Alpha Delta corner we have Al Connor, Eddie Heimberger, and Bill Simmons. Absent from the House of Minerva or just plain Sigma Alpha Epsilon are Marcus Conant, and Wabbo Woodward. The Southern Gentlemen sent John Henderson wearing a Kappa Alpha pin. A brace of Theta Kappa Nu's, Ralph Hoffmeyer and Jimmy Shackleford, are in the fold.

The Phi Delta Theta mob takes its advanced military through Harold Jones. The Alpha Gamma Rho "click" sent James Jones, Glenn Lucas, Randall Musselman; and Paul Simmons. Henry Land and Allen Stanwix-Hay are here with Sigma Lambda Tau pins. Ed Lautz walked in wearing a new Kappa Sigma emblem. Bruce Lehman is the solo from Phi Kappa Tau.

A trio of Beta Theta Pi's is composed of Stanley McDuff, George Morgan, and Reggie Williams. Then Delta Chi comes in with Joseph Smith and Bill Platt. Fred Wilkes comes under Beta Kappa colors while the list is rounded off with Gene Whitlock of the illustrious Alpha Tau Omega chapter.

"H" Company, Second Regiment of Scabbard and Blade has 12 regulars ready to function. The list includes Tom Blowers, Pat Conroy, Harvey Haeseker, John Henderson, Bruce Lehman, Andrew McLean, Louis McQuitty, James Shackleford, Allen Stanwix-Hay, Gene Whitlock, Fred Wilkes, and Reggie Williams.

The Florida delegation reports unofficially that plans for several functions and "herring tearings" are under way.

As for athletics, the prowess of the Florida group is at present indeterminate. A large group turned out at the first opportunity Tuesday afternoon to start a grind. Included in the sundry group were baseball men, diamond ballers, boxers, wrestlers, horse-shoe chunkers, court men, trackstres, tent poloists, and possibly a golfer. The swimmers and golfers have been frothing at the mouth for chances to indulge.

---

Several baseball men with the Gator outfit have been seeking work outs with regular squads prior to the formation of a R. O. T. C. camp. With the three or four varsity men reported present from Auburn efforts should be concentrated to bring about the early organization of an all-camp team. There is a possibility of games with many of the teams on the post.

GUNBOTHAM'S SCHOOL DAZE

By J. L. G.

Very soon now the son and fresh heir of the house of Gunbotham will hop into the family chariot and head for the North Countree. However, a phenix shall rise from the ashes of the weakly blah, for the pen of the far-famed Limon Munson will carry on. The Limey is well qualified to embarrass the denizens of King's county, and he certainly has the "nose for news" which we call the "message scenter." A philoxenist of no mean ability, he is the joy of every hostess who has a blonde visiting her, and as the handsome dark lifeguard, he sees them all, for who can stay away from Russ Pool this weather? And with the present growing fad to wear a smile for a bathing suit, the smile being held together by a wisp of wool here and there, little will be hidden from the Munson. So, when our time comes, we shall pass the baton to Limon.

The Fourth Annual Fort Benning Invitation Tennis Tournament was one of the outstanding events of the year. The finals between Lefty Bryan, of Chattanooga, and Fred Andrews, of Birmingham, was a wow, and they certainly smacked the ball. In doubles, our army had a finalist in the person of Capt. Dick Bassett, and he played a peach of a game to win with Bryan. The star pair of Gault and Andrews put up a real fight, and it was anybody's match until Captain Bassett smashed the last point in for a win.

Lefty Bryan sports a cap such as Al Capone's bodyguard might wear, and he soon earned the name of "Gangster" or "God's Gift to the Underworld." He will have a hard time living down that name for with professional kidders like Jack Mooney, Harry Gault, and Fred Andrews touring with him, his fame will live. Harry, on the other hand is held in his place by the promises of the gang to tell a certain little lady in Atlanta of his behavior. Having known Harry for several years and having met the young lady in question, Gunbotham can understand the full effect of these threats. Fred Andrews seemed quite interested in some of the local belles, and almost failed to get away on time. However, the real excitement starts when the journeyers cease their peregrinations and the Atlanta players reach home. Red Enloe, Harry Gault, Brine, West, Boulware, et al, immediately hie themselves to the house of Mooney, and there Mrs. Mooney is regaled with tales of Jack's misbehavior. A good time is had by all, except Jack.

Major Truman Smith, ex-Yale water polo star, tennis shark and fifteen minute talker, has taking ways. Six times this past week have officers burst wrathfully into the Fourth Section looking for Major Smith and their hats. It seems that the Major has walked off with the dome hangars of Col. Jenkins, Capt. Deane, Capt. Eagles, Capt. Woody Wilson, Lt. Buck Lanham, and last but not least Col. Marshall.

Bim Carne, the great story teller of Block 23, breaks into print again with the story of the gal who was talking to the soldier.

"Honey, do you care for horses?" asked the damsel. To which he replied.

"No, gal, I wait on tables in the officers' mess." And there's nothing you can do about it.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

RED BUGS

Have you escaped these pests called red bugs, chiggers or jiggers? If you have I am sure you never go where there are weeds, long grass or into the woods.

These insects (really not true insects, but related to ticks and spiders) live on the grass and weeds and bushes in the woods and fields during the hot months. Brushing against these plants during walks or lying on the ground is a sure method of taking on a few of these pests. The chiggers usually attach themselves to the exposed skin. They burrow into the skin and there die. The process of digging their own graves is accompanied by local redness and intense irritation which results in scratching. Then because the skin is broken by the fingernails there often follows a pus infection. The symptoms are first noticed some hours after the bugs are picked up and often the first night is spent scratching. People with tender skins, especially children and those of fair complexion seem more subject to these attacks than those of darker, tougher skins.

Often the rash is mistaken for hives, nettle-rash, or the bites of mosquitoes, or fleas; but by the mere fact that the irritation is prolonged into the second or third day we can be sure that red bugs were the cause and especially so if we find on the top of the red swollen area a small fissure or crack. In a few days the sores subside, but often with a small scab and a local pigmentation of the skin which lasts for a week or more.

Chiggers are found in all parts of Fort Benning reservation. It is difficult to say if any one place is worse than any other. And all places may be infested with these troublesome parasites. Blackberry and plum seasons are now here and one can almost be sure that the bushes, which bear these fruits, will be covered with these unwelcome pests.

Often one may avoid the ill effects of red bug bites if after exposure a bath be taken which contains either salt or a strong soap (issue soap). If however the bugs have entered the skin a bath will have no effect.

Sulphur is the sovereign remedy for these mites. It can be used in the form of powder shaken in the shoes and stockings to prevent the mite lodging on the skin or in the form of an ointment for the treatment of the bites.

For the general prevenion of red bugs the U. S. Department of Agriculture recommends—"Cut the grass, weeds, and brush as closely to the ground as possible, so that the sun can reach the surface of the ground. Spray with sulphur or a kerosene mixture in which sulphur has been mixed."

It is of course impractical to spray the whole Fort Benning reservation. Preventive measures are therefore to be taken as indicated by your own susceptibility.

I hope your skin is tough.

TENNIS GOES WILD

When sorrows come, they come not single spies,
But in battalions.

—Hamlet

Patriotic and constructive as ever, The Flare rushes to the aid of our harassed legislators with a practical suggestion as to how the difficult problem of army reduction and unemployment may be solved simultaneously. It is absurdly simple.

Require each army post to run an invitation tennis tournament.

Not only would the delicate question of officer-elimination be regulated automatically, but the construction industry would be immensely and immediately stimulated. Thousands of men could be employed at once in building padded cells. This is not mere theory. The Flare's suggestion is based upon the solid foundation of fact and it has a historical example to back it up.

On the afternoon of June 1, Adjutant General Lewis, his official tennis assistants, Post Champion Drake, Two-Gun Tige Phillips, and Captain Dick Bassett, together with his impressed assistants, Major Tindall, (formerly a humorist and co-conductor of the extinct Blunderbus) Lieut. Jimmy Grier, and Sergeant Davis, as well as numerous volunteer aides, all viewed the future with confidence and equanimity. The Fourth Annual Fort Benning Invitation Tennis Tournament was to start the next day and everything was hotsy-totsy. It was bound to be a go.

"Did you get anything further from Cram?" asked Adjutant General Lewis in regard to a crack Tennessee player whom the committee hoped would enter.

"No", answered Drake, "but we'll have Jack Mooney, and Wilmer Hines, Shuford, Lefty Bryan and Billy Reese. We have plenty of top notch players. Hines and Shuford are driving from North Carolina and may be late, but they'll be here."

At this moment the phone rang. Liaison Officer Grier reported:

"Mooney is here!"

"Fine," interrupted Adjutant General Lewis, rubbing his hands.

"But he has a sore toe and can't play in the tournament," continued Jimmy.

When the moans had subsided, Jimmy further explained that Billy Reese had found it impossible to come. The faces of the committee began to take a trace of that expression which they wear today.

The first day of the tournament brought only minor grief and Adjutant General Lewis lost only five pounds. The morning of the second day brought this telegram:

"Had auto smash-up outside Spartanburg. Shuford hurt. Won't be able to make the tournament. Sorry. We left our examinations early to get there."

(Signed) HINES

The tearing out of hair in handfulls did virtually nothing to alleviate the situation and, to make matters worse, it began to rain. Play stopped and players vanished. That of course stopped the rain and the problem thereupon became one of rounding up the scattered players. Adjutant General Lewis cruised about in his automobile, capturing athletes and returning them to the courts. He dragged one out of a tank and returned with him triumphantly, only to have him escape at the last moment. The tennis committee on this date requisitioned 1 wall, wailing, complete.

The woe encountered early in the tournament, however, was nothing compared to that reserved for the last day—the day of the finals. Sunday dawned bright and clear but it didn't stay that way. Some time before the matches were due to start it began to rain. Out to the courts rushed the tennis committee, Major Randolph Gordon, Aviator Brownfield and a few other enthusiasts and suggesters. It rained for five minutes and then it cleared for five minutes. It then repeated the process. Hope kept springing eternal to be followed at some two minutes intervals by a dull, dumb, dismal realization of the fact that it was raining again.

The canvas covers were placed over the court intended to be used, and an indoor court staked out on the floor of the gymnasium so the finals, in case of necessity, could be played there.

By afternoon it had stopped raining and the committee poured out to the courts. Hopefully they lifted canvas covers off the No. 2 court. The canvas had leaked and the court was in worse shape than if no covers had been used.

"You can play on this court if you burn it off with gasoline", announced a volunteer helper.

Capt. Drake dashed off for gasoline. Soon flames were soaring to the sky. Adjutant General Lewis notified the fire department not to be alarmed, and—some half hour later—the court was finally placed in condition for play. Meanwhile, however, J. Pluvius had completely ruined Adjutant General Lewis' fond hopes for a big gate.

Brushing aside financial worries—after all, what is money?—the committee began to take an interest in the drives and volleys. Then storm clouds came out of nowhere and a deluge descended upon the faithful. The only question about the tennis courts now was to decide on the kind of fish to stock them with and the matches were adjourned to the gymnasium.

There, before a few witnesses—so few that the whole affair might be considered confidential—the players completed the final matches, giving a splendid performance. When it was all over the committee dispersed, going their separate ways.

Adjutant General Lewis went off to write down his impressions of how to do it and how not to do it next year (paying particular attention to the idea of having someone else do it)—Major Tindall went back to completing an article he had been writing on Optimism—Capt. Phillips departed in disgust to pay off a horde of 22 clamoring ball boys—Capt. Bassett

In "SKY DEVILS" At Grand

SPENCER TRACY in Fox Pictures

Cinema Calendar

for Grand, Rialto and Royal

AT THE ROYAL

(Beginning with Midnight Show, Saturday, 11:15 P. M.)

SUNDAY, MONDAY AND TUESDAY: Presenting, "ARROWSMITH", with Ronald Coleman, Helen Hayes and Richard Bennett in Sinclair Lewis' splendid story of the same name. It is a story with a strong moral. It depicts Coleman as a young medical student who dreams of devoting himself to scientific research but who, nevertheless, finds time to do some love-making as well. The story was written by Lewis, the only American novelist to win the Nobel Prize.

AT THE GRAND

SATURDAY, SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Presenting, "SKY DEVILS", with Spencer Tracy, William (Stage) Boyd, George E. Cooper and Ann Dvorak. See planes tumbling thousands of feet through dizzy circles, ripping into haystacks, crashing to the ground, flying upside down, through buildings and hangars. The most dangerous stunt flying ever recorded by a camera. When you see the free-for-all fight in the cafe you'll say, like others have said, that it is the wildest fight ever staged in a picture.

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Presenting, "THE WOMAN IN ROOM 13", with Elissa Landi, Ralph Bellamy, Myrna Loy, Neil Hamilton and Gilbert Roland. Many times accused of love—finally accused of murder. A woman of mystery who was adored by men. A woman mad with love; a man with jealousy. A midnight rendezvous, in the room of an exclusive hotel, where the walls have ears, and eyes, a shot in the dark, and then the Question, Who was "The Woman in Room 13"? Miss Landi's role is that of a modern American divorcee, remarried, with an ex-husband whose only desire in life is to smash her new found happiness.

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY: Presenting, "NEW MORALS FOR OLD", with Lewis Stone, Laura Hope Crews and Margaret Perry. Do mothers know best when it comes to their daughters' love affairs? They wanted freedom—but didn't know what it was. A drama of new-fashioned children and old-fashioned parents. Jazz, sex and high speed—is that all that matters to our children today? Does modern youth have too much freedom? A girl and boy who wanted to live—and a mother whose youth had been forgotten.

J. B. Alderman Is Now At The Grand

J. B. Alderman, manager of the Rialto Theatre since September, 1930, took over the management of the Grand Theatre last Saturday, his place at the Rialto being filled by Mr. Johnson. Mr. Alderman has been connected with the Paramount-Publix Theatres for some years, coming to Columbus from Waycross, Georgia. His many friends wish him well in his new office.

'Sky Devils', Super-Comedy, To Begin Saturday At Grand Theatre

The most spectacular air film since "Hell's Angels" and the funniest comedy since "Two Arabian Knights" —that's the description of the latest Howard Hughes thriller, "Sky Devils," coming to the Grand theatre for a three-day run, beginning Saturday, June 11.

Thrilling? You'll see planes tumbling thousands of feet through dizzy circles, ripping into haystacks, crashing to the ground, flying upside down through buildings and hangars.

Funny? With Spencer Tracy and George Cooper as the life-guards—who couldn't swim—who became air heroes—though they couldn't fly! It's a riot! They were hell-cats in the air and ground-hogs when they lit. Richthofen's flying circus was a tea-party compared to these clowns of the air! They cracked up so many planes that they became enemy aces!

RIALTO

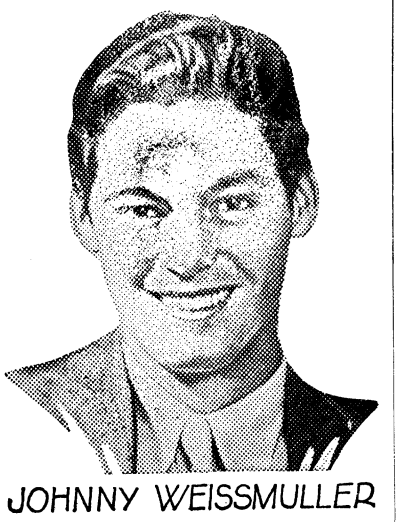
"THE MAN FROM NEW MEXICO," Tom Tyler's latest sensational action Western picture permits him to display his many capabilities as a Western star. Critics have declared that his latest picture combines the wonderful settings and cast of "Two Fisted Justice" with rip-roaring action of his speedy "Galloping Thru." Sunday and Monday they will play the sensational film which made such a tremendous hit at the Royal Theatre some few weeks back, "Tarzan, The Ape Man" starring the world's champion swimmer Johnny Weissmuller supported by Maureen O'Sullivan, Neil Hamilton and C. Aubrey Smith. Tuesday Joan Bennett and Spencer Tracy will appear in a picture which tells the truth about Beauty contests and the unlucky girls who win them. The title of this attraction is "She Wanted a Millionaire" and it has a great supporting cast including Una Merkel, James Kirkwood and Dorothy Peterson. Wednesday and Thursday marks the return to the screen of one of the silent screen's most popular stars, Pola Negri. The producers have chosen a story which gives Miss Negri a chance to display all her dramatic genius, her beauty and her superb brilliance. The story "A Woman Commands" seems quite fitting for such a personality as she.



JOHNNY WEISSMULLER

ROYAL

Ronald Colman and Helen Hayes in Samuel Goldwyn's "Arrowsmith"

RONALD COLEMAN AND HELEN HAYES IN "ARROWSMITH"

Portraying one of the most striking characters in modern American fiction, Ronald Colman comes to the screen of the Royal Theatre beginning Saturday with midnight show, in the title-role of "Arrowsmith," the motion picture which Samuel Goldwyn has made from the famous novel by Sinclair Lewis. Thus Colman fans will again have an opportunity to see him returning to serious emotional impersonations, after his recent successes in the line of light comedy.

Ronald Colman has, however, displayed a great versatility in his long screen career, and played great varieties of parts since he first left the legitimate stage for motion pictures. The romantic dash of "Beau Geste," the comedy melodrama of "Bulldog Drummond," the tragic seriousness of "The Dark Angel" and "Condemned," the light farce of "The Devil to Pay," have all shown different angles of the actor who has been called the premier performer of talking pictures.

"Arrowsmith" is, of course, his first appearance in the role of an American.

Supporting him in this transcription of Sinclair Lewis' master novel is a lengthy cast of famous names. Opposite him is Helen Hayes, the stagestar who triumphed recently on the screen in "The Sin of Madelon Claudet," and in major roles are Richard Bennett and A. E. Anson, both famous veterans of the legitimate stage for many years. Myrna Loy, Alec B. Francis, Beulah Bondi, Claude King, and Florence Britton are other well-known players who contribute to "Arrowsmith."

COMPANY "F"

It's been mighty calm and peaceful the last week or so, outside of the Test March and the parade there was not much of importance happening.

We did very well as usual in the Test March, but we are not satisfied with the results. The parade was a success as far as we are concerned. Two of our men received gold stars. Pfc. W. E. Patrick and Pfc. Rivers, both members of the winning relay team in the Post Track and Field meet.

Pfc. James Curry has just returned from a re-enlistment furlough. From all out-looks he had a great time. In fact he has gained weight instead of losing it. We'll welcome back to the company Curry and hope that you enjoy being with us as much as you did your stay at home.

Special Duty jobs are coming thick and fast now with the 1st Bn. going on the range Monday. And, oh, that Duty Roster with the few remaining privates and NCO's catching guards and fatigues so often.

All here are anxiously awaiting the 15th of July when we start taking our preliminary work for target season. The squad rooms are daily the scenes of men busily at work with their rifles, getting them into shape for range, trying on last year's shooting coats or making new ones. All in all we are satisfied that this company will turn in a more than satisfactory average for the target season this year.

Q. M. D.

The sun could have risen in the west on Tuesday morning and members of the Quartermaster Detachment would not have been more surprised than they were at a certain phenomenon. Immediately after dinner a group followed its usual custom of listening to Columbus famed voice of the Chattahoochee, station WRBL.

Through the loud speaker of the radio in the recreation room was ringing the voice of a crooner singing a sweet love ballad in an extremely tender manner. It might have been Bing Crosby or Rudy Vallee or another of those vocalists whom girls go wild over.

It however was neither of these famous personages. The sweet and tender voice heard was none other than that of the Mighty Grumpy Gordy. He has become well known for his fists and his ability to convince others that there's no better fighter in Georgia than the Mighty Grumpy, but it appears that Sir Gordy has gone after new laurels with his voice.

"Somebody loves you, I want you to know. Somebody . . . " These words were crooned in an extremely heartbreaking fashion. For some reason the Mighty Grumpy was singing them with a great deal of sincerity. Maybe the manner in which his crooning was done and the fact he had just purchased a feminine wrist watch mean something. They may mean that he might not go to Australia after all.

Postponed Fights Please Crowd

"Puggy" Weinert, Chicago's tobasco kid, mussed the patent leather hair of Jimmy Spivey, of Columbus and Florida, in the main event of Wednesday night's glove show at Benning and earned the decision after ten pleasing rounds.

Spivey, touted as far more scientific —wasn't, very much. He found Weinert just about as fast, and certainly willing to trade punches all the way. Jim worked a right jab effectively in the clinches while Puggy contented himself with chops to the solar plexus and whiskers.

Spivey's left eye was injured to begin with and his right peeper was ripped in the fifth. Both boys were guilty of low blows several times. All were unintentional. This writer credited Spivey with the third round while the first, second, fourth, sixth, seventh and tenth were even.

Rip Tetherton, Benning, and Kid Baisden, Columbus, battled ten rounds to a draw. The decision was unpopular, the writer, among others, being of the opinion Baisden should have won. Baisden won the first five rounds, Tetherton took the sixth, Baisden the seventh and Tetherton the eighth, nineth and tenth.

Baisden is a four round fighter. His left, a powerful blow, lands with regularity for that length of time but afterwards it slows down and he is virtually at the mercy of an opponent who closes in on him. Tetherton hit his stride in the seventh and almost knocked the civilian's head from his shoulders with straight rights. Rip's back pedaling for the first round was apparently in accordance with instructions from his handlers but it incurred the disfavor of all fans, nevertheless.

The great, great Grumpy Gordy won a decision over Frank Mackery after six rounds of milling that pleased the fans. Actually, the fighting itself was nothing to write home to the folks about but then Gordy's personality and popularity was there and—well, the customers ate it up and that's what counts.

Danny Long, Benning, won a decision over Wotta Guy, Benning, in a gory duel that ran four stanzas. Long was bothered by a cut right eye but he drove home some of the hardest punches that have been seen at the post this year.

Kid Webster, substituting for Ghost Ghastly, won a decision over "Red" Davis who, although his nose appeared to have been broken in the third round, refused to permit his seconds to toss in the towel, and finished very creditably.

Dapper Doyle, larruping Louisianan, only needed a minute to rock Monroe Spivey, brother of Jim and Ben, to sleep in the first round of the curtain raiser.

83rd F. A.

"SHRAPNEL BURSTS"

The First Battalion 83rd F. A. celebrated its one hundredth anniversary last Saturday June 4. Plans were made for an elaborate program but, on account of the death of Pvt. Jose Acosta, "A" Battery, last Thursday afternoon (who received a fractured skull, when he was thrown from a horse, while practicing for the anniversary day Gymkhana) everything except the address by Captain Partridge, was called off.

The Battalion assembled in front of Battalion Headquarters and Capt. Bevan introduced Capt. Partridge, (who is our new Adjutant and who was with the 83rd for several years at Camp Knox, Ky., some twelve years ago) as the speaker of the day and the oldest member of the 83rd.

Grumpy Gets Help From Audience At Fights Last Week

Another correspondent among those at Benning who keep us informed of the news of Benning tells us of the story of the spectator at the recent boxing matches, who got up and gave an imitation of the Great Grumpy Gordy crooning "River Stay Away From My Door." Just another indication of the growing popularity of the boy from the QM Department, particularly along the vocal line.

Capt. Partridge told the history of the Battalion starting with the Battalion of Mounted Rangers created by Congress in 1832 and continuing through the wars up to the present time. He also related several of his experiences, while with the 83rd at Camp Knox, Ky., which were very interesting.

Major Selleck was present and made a few remarks to the assembled battalion, this being his first chance to speak to the whole battalion for some time.

We are very sorry to say that the occasion had to end as it did—by Capt. Bevan telling the battalion of the death of a comrade, who died as a direct result of a horse's actions although he loved horses and was one of our best riders.

The R. O. T. C. from Auburn and Florida arrived Monday and started their six-weeks' summer training with the Artillery on Wednesday. Last year they only used our two firing batteries but this year they brought horses and material to make a third battery.

Headquarters Battery is taking care of the extra material so it will also be a firing battery for the next six weeks.

HEADQUARTERS COMPANY

The company is preparing for a successful athletic season—track, baseball and anything else that comes up.

We are glad to announce that our first sergeant is back and have noticed the improvement in the company already. When "The Bridge" gets behind a movement—it goes over.

Our old friend Gardner has turned over a "new leaf" in a well worn book.

It is requested that Sergeant McCauley stop blowing his horn, as any one, (deaf or otherwise) can hear his car coming, before getting in the danger zone.

It has been reported that Sergeant Miller lost his glasses and after an extended search in the company, found them on his forehead—out of harm's way.

J. A. has returned to duty after an abbreviated trip to Atltanta, Ga. (Week end special).

BAND

Alas, alack and woe is me. If ye have tears prepared to shed, shed them now. The concert season hath descended upon us. Ye olde motion picture fiends prepare to miss about five shows per week until September 9th. The record course will commence Tuesday June 7th and the firing will terminate on Commandant's lawn at 7:30 p. m. Friday nite, September 9th. One hundred percent qualifications are insisted upon by the bandleader. The band rendered a concert at the R. O. T. C. camp Tuesday evening which was well received by the students.

Private Robert L. Wade, the smiling bass player of the first orchestra has rejoined his comrades in arms (or rather instruments). Wade states that he enjoyed his furlough to the nth degree and declares that a man should avail himself of the reenlistment furlough traveling to distant parts of the country (as he did), making contacts with the worth while citizens of this great republic. He observed many interesting conditions while away and is fully qualified to recommend material changes which should be made in the government to aid the great financial and business depression. Mr. Wade travelled as far north east as Columbus, Georgia (overland) and even visited the Post Exchange and Commissary. Indeed, it is very interesting to converse with Wade since his return from his trip and that good humored gentleman invites all who desire to learn of far distant communities to visit him at his home.

The Band has gone back to nature. (No, not in dress). Daily rehearsal is held under the trees instead of in the Service Club which arrangement has thus far proved highly satisfactory.

Our track team (yes, we are entering one) is preparing for the contest to be staged Thursday morning and we firmly, yea, more firmly and most firmly believe that we will be well represented on the score board. The tennis court also received its quota from the band. Pvts. Penrose, McCray, Mason and Jones have given excellent accounts of themselves not to mention Mr. Decuir who was a constant threat in singles. Penrose is the popular choice for winner in the finals (singles and doubles for the men) which will cause him to be designated as the ranking player.

BATTERY "A"

All members of Battery "A" mourn very much the death of our friend and comrade Private Jose Acosta, and our deepest sympathy goes out to his family and friends in Mexico. Pvt. Acosta's death was caused by being thrown from his horse on June 2, 1932. Pvt. Acosta's remains were escorted by the 29th Infantry Band, Officers of the 83rd Field Artillery and the personnel of Battery "A," and were buried in the Post cemetery.

Captain Mangum and Lieut. Heriot of this organization are now on leave.

Lieut. Beishline who has been on Special Duty at the Post Swimming Pool, is back in the Battery for duty.

Privates Booth and Hadley left this week on a much looked forward to furlough. We are quite sure Cairo, Ga., and New Orleans, La., will get quite a treat out of these two young men. Others figure on leaving soon.

Private Lucius C. Garrison was transferred to the Hawaiian Department, we are wondering how "Luke" enjoyed his hike to New York. Pvt. Garrison was very sorry indeed not to have the company of Pfc. Roper with him.

Private Neely seems to have been up to some of his old tricks as he has been seen donned in the old Fatigue Clothes again.

We often wonder just whether Pvt. Pollard is liked by the Columbus Police Force or not.

On June 7, 1932, between the hours of 1:00 and 5:00 p. m. it was learned that we have numerous excellent scrub boys in the Battery.

The Battery fired 50 rounds on Monday June 6th in the last service practice of the training year.

The R. O. T. C. from Auburn relieved the battery of its animals for morning drill beginning Wednesday morning. There were no tears shed by the gun crew when the college boys gave Forward Ho: and pulled out with 60 or more horses for a march.

COMPANY "A"

Private Finney returned to the Company for duty from the Hospital and Private Nobles the same day reported to the Hospital and was put in.

The regimental baseball league will open soon and the Company will try and send a winning team on the field this year. We can win if the regimental players are not going to play.

COMPANY "E"

Corporal and Mrs. Rufus E. Williams, spent the week-end with relatives at Union Springs and Montgomery, Alabama, reports a very delightful time.

Depression

The sooner the people as a whole, stop singing depression, and start to work the better times will be for all, This is America and a civilized country. The rich man is not going to stand and see his brother die from starvation. Some one is always willing to help those that wrarant help. You will have to admit that there is not so much money in circulation but plenty of food, fuel and clothing. You cannot expect people to help you if you do not help yourself. Be a go-getter. Praying and hoping to god almighty is not going to put nourishments in the hand. God is a just God, he gave you your health and strength and it is up to you to do the rest. Old Man Depression has not been successful and as long as there is unity he will be defeated. You of us who seem to be a victim of this Old Man Depression, which you are not, begin singing a new song, and work on economic basis. Where are the one-horse farmers of yesterday? They are very scattering, left the farm and tackled the "Big Cities," entirely a new life to them. Why be a quitter, rolling stone gathers no moss. I hope that some of the readers of this article will atke heed to the above, and remember what ever you do, do with your might, things done by halves are never done right.

the blanks that had been used until that time and the section then continued to fire on the hostile position in accordance with fire orders already issued. The target consisted of a screen three feet high by 60 yards long camouflaged in such a manner that it constituted the apparent crest of the ridge on which the enemy was located, and made possible the scoring of all hits in the area rather than a few hits on individual silhouettes. It is believed that modern conditions require the placing of infantry fire in an area rather than the delivery of fire on individual targets and that scoring on that basis gives a better conception of the effectiveness of the fire of a unit.

That part of the problem involving the advance from the first objective was designed to bring out the necessity for proper use of the ground, it illustrated clearly the importance of changes in formation to make maximum use of cover, of varied methods in the employment of scouts and the fundamental conception that advancing infantry is subject to two great factors: enemy fire and the terrain, and that maximum skillful use must be made of the latter in order to overcome the former without suffering excessive casualties.

The above test is believed to furnish a true indication of the state of training of a rifle company from the company commander down to the private. It included a march, camp, inspection of equipment, movement of a line of departure, advance to an objective by compass, and attack of an interior unit, and a problem in combat firing. Its great value lies not only in the testing of the participating companies but in the instruction imparted during the exercises. The test was adapted from the Edwin Howard Clarke Trophy test for machine gun companies, and it is firmly believed that a competition of this nature for the rifle companies of the Army would greatly increase the efficiency of the Infantry.

went to bed—Capt. Drake went off to figure whether the club had lost $150 or $250 on the tournament, and Lt. Grier—believe it or not—went home.

THE PROFESSOR DEPARTS

Almost coincident with the appearance of this item there departs from our midst one of Benning's most esteemed citizens and a long time friend of the conductor of this scintillating cloumn. We refer to our neighbor and unfailing copy producer, Professor McCuniff. Readers of the Flare are familiar not only with his exploits but with his theories for the rehabilition of the cockeyed business world, for we have given both the publicity that the capitalistic press usually accords only to gangsters, thugs, and politicians. What our public may not know, however, is that the Professor was quite a gay and roistering blade in his youth before years and parental responsibilities weighed him down and cooled the burning ardor of his blood.

Time was when the Professor could carry on far into the night with the best. Late hours never seemed to lessen his efficiency as a battalion commander the next morning or his prowess as a polo player the next afternoon. He had stamina in those days—and talent. Indeed the name, Professor, which most of our readers no doubt assume attaches to his position as a member of the Faculty of The Infantry School, had a far different origin. It was won in musical field when the Professor first electrified a party by playing popular airs on an improvised instrument constructed of beer bottles filled to different levels. Yea bo, these were the days and it brings tears to our eyes to think about them.

Toward the close of this brave period of the Professor's life, at a despidida given at the conclusion of his tour in China, we read with great feeling a poem composed in his honor. We are going to take the liberty of reprinting it here, for the sentiment still holds even though the Professor has given up polo and no longer holds high wassail with the unregenerate.

FAREWELL TO McCUNNIFF

Your boat is on the river
And you've booked your passage thru,
But 'ere you go, McCuniff,
Here's a double health to you.

Three years we've served together;
(Would thew were just begun)
In fair and stormy weather,
We two have stood as one.

For you have no damn-fool notions
At which to take offence,
And your every act is leavened
With the yeast of common sense.

On horseback you're a centaur,
On the dance floor, you're a wow,
You're an asset at a party,
And I pay my tribute now.

I've seen you tight on cocktails
And I've seen you lit on beer
But drunk or sober, Denny,
I have seldom seen your peer.

Were't the last drop in the bottle
And I able still to think,
'Ere my brain refused to function,
'Tis to you that I would drink.

Comrade Hugh Gilchrist has been doing his bit to relieve the depression of the automobile and insurance business by diligently informing all local agents that Benedict McCabe, First Section bridegroom of ten days standing, is a hot prospect. As a result the Benedict's dovecote apartment in Columbus is being besieged by high pressure salesmen with Lincolns, Buicks, Nashes, endowment, twenty payment and straight life policies. Benedict and Mrs. McCabe are spending their honeymoon answering the door bell and the telephone, and it is only after business hours that the happy couple can look into each other's eyes and murmur in unison "at last we are alone."

McPherson Officer Addresses R O T C

"Citizenship" was the topic of two lectures which Chaplain Clifford P. Futcher of Fort McPherson delivered before the students of the R. O. T. C. camp and the regular instructors on duty with the encampment on Thursday.

Major Futcher is the author of manuals on instruction in citizenship which are used by the United States army in the instruction of recruits and at citizens military training camps and other encampments of citizen components of the army of the United States. Major Futcher's talk dwelt particularly on the broader phase of the patriotic duties of the American citizen in relation to national defence, and the American philosophy of government.

COMPANY "C"

Captain H. N. Merrill, has recently assumed command of the Company, and we desire to impress him as being a good organization by maintaining the same old spirit in all our military duties. It is hoped that his tour of duty with us will be a pleasant one. We welcome him heartily.

Captain William G. Murphy, who previously commanded our company for a period of about two years, is again with us, as attached to the company for duty. Itgoes without saying that we are glad to once again have Captain Murphy with us. Many pleasant experiences have been enjoyed by the organization while Captain Murphy was in command.

First Lieutenant James E. Poore Jr., who has been in command of the Company for the last five months, has recently left us to take advantage of a leave. and upon completion of said leave, he will most likely be assigned to the second Battalion for duty. We regret the loss of Lt. Poore, especially at this time, due to his introduction of chess to the company, and having to leave before he was able to instruct us in the science of this perpexing game.

Private Franklin was released from the hospital yesterday. He reports doing well and glad to be with us again.

Be on the alert for next week's issue of this paper. There you will get the "Low-Down" on Co. "C's" percentage (which will be 100%) of the Regimental Field Meet to be held tomorrow. Mercury and Hercules won't have a "Look-in" with our pointers and weight hurlers.

"Doughboy", Published Here, Just Completed By Printer

Yearbook Published By School Class Finished Recently At Columbus

The 1932 issue of the "Doughboy," a yearbook published by the National Guard and Reserve Company Officers' Class, of Fort Benning, has just been finished and copies of the book are being mailed to members of the class.

The book, which follows the general scheme of that of last year, is beautifully bound in an Infantry blue grain cover with a gold bas-relief of a running doughboy on the front cover, surmounted by the legend "Follow Me." The design of the cover is the same as was used in the first issue of the Doughboy ever published.

The inside of the book is printed in blue and black, and is made interesting by the use of many photographs of prominent Army heads, personalities on the Post, members of the class and various views of Fort Benning which were chosen as being typical of the Fort. Each of the organizations of Benning is represented by a section in the volume, even the Seventh Engineers and Flight "B," 16th Observation Squadron, each of which has only a small representation among the troops of Benning. A detailed description of the aims and methods by which each of the departments of the Infantry School functions is another interesting feature which will commend the book to those in search of a compendium of information regarding the Infantry School in an abbreviated form.

The "Doughboy." of which the present issue is the fourth, was, for the first time this year, published and financed entirely by members of the class, without any outside help whatever, except that rendered by the Herald in the purchase of cuts for reproduction in the book. All the material was gathered and edited by members of the class, who have accomplished an unusual feat in putting out a book of this type in the short time available.

The editor of the "Doughboy, 1932," was Captain Myron P. Lund, who was assigned by Associate Editors Lt. J. F. Phelan and Lt. Granger G. Sutton. Captain O. G. Layman was business Manager and Lt. Earl F. Cosby was Art Editor. Captain Paul A. Buttrick was the president of this year's class, having been elected by the members of the class.

'Gunbotham' Leaves Post For New Station, Successor Takes Up Job

Lt. James L. (Gunbotham) Grier, whose wise-cracks and minor scandals have amused the populace of the Post for quite a long time now, has left and his place will be taken by another of the news-hounds of the Post (name withheld to make his ferreting out news easier). Lt. Grier originated the "Gunbotham" column and built it up to its present point of popularity, and his successor gives every sign of making it even funnier. Hats off, Gunbotham, so long!

Colonel Marshall Honored by Review

Lieutenant Colonel George C. Marshall, Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School who departed from Fort Benning on Wednesday, June 15, for his new station at Fort Screven, Georgia was honored on Saturday morning by a review of the 29th Infantry.

The ceremony was held on Gordon Field and upon its conclusion the companies of the regiment were marched to the inner barracks square. There Colonel Duncan K. Major, Jr., regimental commander, introduced Colonel Marshall in a brief speech speech during which he reviewed of the high points of the assistant commandant's military career both before and during his tour of duty at The Infantry School.

In his reply Colonel Marshall congratulated the 29th Infantry upon the splendid state of efficiency and morale demonstrated in its work with the school during the past year. He commented especially on the work of the regiment in the field, the perfect march discipline invariably displayed, the uniform excellence of the scouting, advance guard and outpost work, and the precision attained in night movements and in the mechanics of deployments. He spoke in high praise of the regimental communications and supply service.

Colonel Marshall referred to the extensive influence exercised by the regiment on the army of the United States through the standards established for the training of thousands of regular national guard and reserve officers who received instruction at The Infantry School.

"A corporal of the 29th Infantry" said Colonel Marshall "is not merely a leader of seven men. He leads in the training of a hundred squads scattered throughout the country."

The fine spirit and loyalty to the tasks of the school displayed by the men in the ranks in all work for the student officers elicited a splendid tribute from the assistant commandant. The appearance of the regiment and its remarkable development in field efficiency he attributed in large measure to its leadership which had done much to improve the practical standards of field work at The Infantry School.

Colonel Marshall concluded his remarks with a tribute of appreciation to Colonel Major and his officers and men for their splendid contribution to the success of the past school year of The Infantry School.

Quartermaster Dept. Celebrates Anniversary

The Quartermaster Detachment of Fort Benning celebrated the 157th anniversary of the Quartermaster Corps yesterday with a picnic at the 29th Infantry Recreation Camp. The picnic was held under the auspices of the 100th Motor Transport Company, Quartermaster Corps, Fort Benning.

New Hostess Takes Command Recently At Service Club

By Bernard B. Swayze

"So pleased to meet you. Won't you please come inside and make yourself comfortable while we discuss our Club?" Right away, we knew we were to get some valuable information from one who was so punctual about looking out for our comfort.

Mrs. Agnes Corley Setzler is just the type of person who will make friends wherever she may go. She has the knack of getting acquainted without "whipping the devil around the stump," so to speak. Pleasure literally beams from the person of Mrs. Setzler, without any visible effort on her part. Her pleasant greetings to the few soldiers with whom she has already come in contact goes to show that she is the hostess for Fort Benning.

Your correspondent talked with her for about thirty minutes, and at the end of that time, we felt as though we had known her from childhood. She fairly invites confidence, and that is one of the chief requisites of a person in her position.

When asked how she likes Fort Benning, Mrs. Setzler replied, "You know when I learned that I had been selected to fill the vacancy at Fort Benning, I felt right away that an honor was being bestowed upon me. I thought what a nice thing it was being appointed hostess to the world's Largest Infantry School. and one of the show places of the South. I never dreamed it would be like it is here. I feel now like I am a hostess of Heaven." And she said it as if she meant it.

Mrs. Setzler comes to Fort Benning bearing many high recommendations; included among them are letters from Lt. Col. F. W. Menteen, U. S. A., Ret., Col. William L. Grayson, Fin. Dept., 2nd Corps Area., State Senators, and numerous others.

Her work previously has been with the Spanish War Veterans, whom she strongly defends at all times. She has a perfect right to this stand, as her uncle, Private John Corley, of the hospital corps, was killed in action by his own troops, in January, 1901, in the hills near Jiminez, P. I., as they were advancing to take up a position in these same hills.

The circumstances of the death of her uncle in related in the issue of March 22, 1901 of the Atlanta Semi-Weekly Journal, and through a letter written her grandmother by Captain W. McK. Lambdin, 40th U. S. Volunteers, who was his commanding officer.

Mrs. Setzler is an Honorary member of the Military Order of the Serpent, the only woman known to hold that signal honor. She is also an active member of the Ladies Auxiliary of the United Spanish War Veterans, and has been very active in giving aid to disabled veterans who were confined in the United States Veterans Hospital Number 48, at Atlanta, Georgia.

She has not mapped out any definite plans for the social activities on the post yet, rather waiting to make her reconnaissance more completely before attacking the social lions.

On coming to Fort Benning, Mrs.

Assistant Commandant Ends Five Year Tour At Benning

George C. Marshall

Lt. Col. Infantry, U. S. A., for five years Assistant Commandant and Chief of the Infantry School, Fort Benning, Ga.

Benning Officer Appointed Commandant At Ft. Screven Near Savannah

Colonel George C. Marshall left Fort Benning on Wednesday morning for Fort Screven, Georgia, his new station.

Colonel Marshall came to Fort Benning in October, 1927, as Assistant Commandant of The Infantry School and for the past five years he has continued in that office. The steady and material progress which the school has made during this period attests the high quality of his leadership.

When Colonel Marshall assumed the office of Assistant Commandant, the Infantry School was an efficiently managed, going concern, with a reputation throughout the army for turning out graduates whose usefulness as infantry officers had been greatly enhanced by the instruction they had received. The school, however, was young and the new head of the Academic Department saw possibilities for its further development. Not all at once, but gradually, during the years which followed, carefully considered modifications were made in the curriculum. Hand in hand with this went improved methods of instruction. The time alloted to subjects of minor importance was reduced and new courses which looked toward the next war rather than the last, were added. As a result of these changes, the significance and value of the Infantry School diploma has increased with each succeeding year.

Under Colonel Marshall, the emphasis on all instruction has been increasingly upon the practical as distinguished from the theoretical—upon tactics rather than technique. Fully appreciating the advantage that accrues to the Infantry School from the fact that there is stationed here at Benning the only war-strength infantry unit, he has sought to apply in the school the lessons learned with real troops on real terrain. Nor have the still greater facilities afforded by the corps area maneuvers of the past two years for testing school doctrine in the field been overlooked. Thus theory, based on the dimming recollections of a war which was fought fifteen years ago, has been checked against the fresh experience of participants in and observers of maneuvers conducted under simulated war service conditions. By these means the tendency of academic instruction to become increasingly theoretical has been effectively combatted. This continued insistence upon the practical is unquestionably Colonel Marshall's greatest contribution to The Infantry School and through the growing influence of The Infantry School, to the service at large.

Throughout his tour at Benning, Colonel Marshall has shown a lively interest in all post activities. He has supported every enterprise which had for its object the betterment of living and working conditions and the improvement of entertainment and recreational facilities. Many of the advantages which Benning now boasts

ROTC Weekly Will Begin Publication

As usual the monkey-business down in the ROTC Camp has started again, gaining its first real outlet to the suffering world in the ROTC weekly, the "Richochet." While this reporter does not set himself up as another of the many who feel themselves qualified as judges of newspaper standards, still, the preliminary peeks at the copy submitted for publication indicate a paper sure to rank, during its brief period of existence, fully as high as "Judge," "Life," and "Ballyhoo."

The professed intention of the editors, led by Harvey L. Haeseker, F. A. (Florida), is to provide for the delectation of the membesr of the camp those choice bits of gossip which are both interesting and printable. The usual channels carry much of it, in the natural course of events, but no member of the camp has as yet demonstrated enough vocal ability to inform the whole bunch at any one time, of the scandals that take place. Henry Clay might have done it. Daniel Webster might have done it. But the self-confessed failure of the ROTC is made plain by their founding the camp organ.

Meanwhile, the boys have been working hard at their instruction in the higher arts of warfare. Reports from the cadets who are taking the Artillery course, indicate a strong leaning away from that branch, especially when the Fort Benning sun begins beaming benevolently down on their labors. The social activities of the camp will reach their first climax tonight, when the Social Committee will put on a dance at the Officers' Club to which many guests from Columbus and Fort Benning have been invited. These dances have always been very popular and advance indications show an even greater interest in this one than has ever been in evidence before.

Betty Negrotto and Patty Bull Entertain Several Friends With Unique Party

Betty Negrotto and Patty Bull entertained twelve of their friends with a unique "Bicycle Treasure Hunt" on June 7th, at Patty Bull's house in Block 16. A typical series of the clues which were given to the six couples follows. This was the series given for group three:

First Clue:

"Go south from the school
To a grove of oaks,
Where lives Betty Negrotto
And all her folks."

This clue was written in Morse Code and lead to the Negrotto home. There the pair received the following:

|---|---|
| "A | Rustic |
| Dance | Hall |
| Near | the |
| Girl | Scout |
| Shack, | If |
| you | don't |
| hurry | up |
| you | won't |

snack!"

This led to the Polo Club and the clue marked Pair Three that was found there said:

"Pays it! There look but Glad you're know I Days many for
Of rid you're place A"

Reading backwards, this clue led to the school where an even harder one was found which said:

"Og! Etweenb wot oolsp
ayw ownd ni a alleyv ta a abinc ikel urso
herew het oyb couts allyr"

This tangled stanza, when deciphered, led to the Boy Scout cabin. It was unraveled by putting the last letter first. Then the next clue, found at the Cabin read:

"Southofthefirehouse
Whereoldgloryrides
Upinatree
Yournextcluehides."

This clue led to the tree nearest the flag pole. That unearthed there said:

"A few dots and dashes
Will confuse you a lot
But hurry and come
To our picnic spot."

This last clue was again written in the Morse Code and led to the Horse show cabin. The winners for first place were Dorothy Negrotto and Peggy Arnold, who were closely followed by Jerry Catron and Lucy Ann Schneider. When all the pairs had come in, supper was served and a few games were played.

Oak Mountain Springs To Open Season Next Sunday, June 19th

Picture a hotel nestled against the side of a mountain, with the wide rambling veranda which is so much a distinguishing characteristic of the architecture of the South, surrounded on all sides by wide-spreading trees which add beauty and quietness to the scene. Thus you have Oak Mountain Springs, a Georgia Resort, made famous by its mineral springs and its famous cuisine, either of which is far beyond the powers of ordinary description.

The mineral springs which come forth at this spot have much to recommend them, and their waters have been recommended for many ills. The principal curative of Oak Mountain is that which corrects the lassitude and ill-feeling which is a result of overwork and restores the vigor and energy which have proved themselves necessary in these times. The peacefulness and quiet of this resort are more than ordinarily restful and this resort has often been taken as examples and been praised in many quarters for its beneficial atmosphere.

Another of the points which is quoted as a recommendation of Oak Mountain Springs is its wonderful cuisine. All the vegetables and the chickens which are used at the hotel are products of the Oak Mountain Farm, and are therefore unexcelled in freshness and flavor. The chicken dinners have been especially highly praised, both for the delicate flavor of the fowl and the expertness with which they are cooked, and have made quite a name for themselves.

A large swimming pool is numbered among the other assets of the resort which rests its laurels chiefly on the three facts named here. The casual visitor—and the resident for several weeks—all are assured of an exceptionally good time, which, combined with the restfulness and natural advantages of the place, will all combine to make it one of the most enjoyable in a wide radius of Benning.

GUNBOTHAM'S SCHOOL DAZE

By E. L. M.

We intended to write our first paragraph in the inimitable manner of the Flare—with swell poetry at the beginning, and everything. The lines we sought were:

"The door burst open and into the room,
Strode Dangerous Dan McGrew"

or something. But the library was closed, and neither of the Benning poets would admit having heard of Service (who so palpably panders to the vulgar taste of the hoi-polloi).

But to get on with our story. The wedding was proceeding beautifully. The audience, in breathless silence, listened to the words of the minister, strained ears to catch a note of trembling in response of the bride, watched hungrily to see if the best man had lost the ring. Almost the end. "And if any person knows of any reason why this man and this woman should not be joined together with bonds of holy matrimony, let him speak now, or forever hold his peace." A thrill ran through the watchers.

Crash! The doors at the rear of the room burst open. Clutching cap and crop in his left hand, and the edge of the door in his right, a red-faced, panting young officer poised dramatically in the threshold. Strong men paled, women caught their breath in audible gasps. A fifteen year old girl swooned. Returning glare for glare. Jimmie Grier calmly proceeded to his seat . . . . late again.

One of the Fourth Section orators suggests a Fort Benning School Tax which, we have been given to understnad, will penetrate even the ragged pockets of the local bachelors. We see in this a thinly veiled attempt to increase the Benning birth rate, and we fervently hope that the few bachelors remaining on this post will not defend too vehemently the principle of no taxation with representation.

Which reminds us that Gunbotham Grier left a book to be returned to Major Leard. The guardian angel of students seems to have been trespassing upon Colonel Stayer's domain. For the well-thumbed volume is a work of that muscle-bound literateur, Bernarr McFadden . . . . and bears the interesting title "Manhood and Marriage."

Major Barnwell Legge, well known horseman, investigator for the Infantry Board, and inquisitor of the feline tribe (viz: "Pussy Cat, Pussy Cat, where has thou been?") suggests a miscellaneous shower for officers during the proposed month without pay.

To prevent excessive duplication of gifts—for instance Pork and Beans go for a nickel a can at the local meeting place this week—we suggest that the problem, being one of charity, be turned over to the Community Chest, and that the fourth Saturday of each month be designated "Garrison Shower Day."

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

SUNSTROKE AND HEAT EXHAUSTION

Weather conditions which prevail at Fort Benning during the months June to October, approximate or are worse than some parts of the tropics.

This therefore is an appropriate time to consider the effects of overheating on the human body.

Sunstroke is mentioned in the Bible. There are two types; heat exhaustion and heat stroke. Heat exhaustion is brought about by prolonged exposure to high temperature, especially when combined with physical exertion. One does not need to be exposed to the direct rays of the sun to bring the condition about, for it may occur at night or when working in a closely confined space. Artificial heat as is found in boiler rooms of steam ships. very often is responsible for attacks of heat exhaustion.

Heat stroke chiefly hits those persons, who work hard, while exposed to the sun.

Soldiers on hike with heavy equipment are liable to attack. Laborers in cities, especially those digging ditches are often overcome.

Sunstroke is more common among those who dring heavily; both beer and whiskey are aids toward acquiring this condition.

The person may be struck down suddenly with sunstroke and die within an hour. More often the condition has warning symptoms such as headache, a feeling of oppession and sometimes dizziness and nausea. It is highly important to pay attention to these preliminary signs of sunstroke. If it be found that the body temperature is high every effort should be made to reduce it by rubbing the body with cold water or even ice of the doctor can not be reached. In another type of case it will be found that body temperature is lowered; then it will be necessary to warm the patient with hot baths and blankets.

Anyone who has once been overcome by the effects of heat is thereafter usually liable to suffer attacks following exposure to temperatures which others do not mind in the least. Such people frequently become uneasy, have tight heads, slow up mentally whenever they encounter temperatures over 85 degrees F.

The prevention of sunstroke or heat exhaustion is exceedingly important,

Care must be exercised to prevent excessive overheating, particularly when exposed to the direct sun's rays. Even after one acquires a good coat of tan he must never lose sight of this fact. Remember that humidity, which is very high at Fort Benning, adds to the danger. When humidity is high the bad effects of high temperature are more quickly felt; when the air is dry you can stand a much higher temperature than when it is moist.

Overeating, over drinking, over work, and loss of sleep all contribute to make you less liable to withstand the effects of excessive heat. In my experience the loss of sleep is perhaps the one most likely cause. Eight to nine hours sleep each night is probably the one best method of preventing sunstroke or heat exhaustion.

COLONEL MARSHALL LEAVES BENNING

were initiated by him. He has been a vital force in the developing and maintaining the conditions which make Benning one of the most sought after stations in the army.

Colonel and Mrs. Marshall hold a high place in the esteem of those with whom they have been closely associated in Benning and Columbus and their departure is the occasion of widespread regret in the two communities.

NEW HOSTESS TAKES CHARGE

Setzler witnessed her first professional prize fight. She stated that she enjoyed it to the fullest extent, and intends to miss not a one during her sojourn here.

If the boys will just stop making those errors on the baseball field, she might be induced to help swell the crowds at Gowdy Field, for wherever she goes to the functions on the post, she is sure to have a large following.

Fort Benning is fortunate in obtaining the services of such an educated, cultured and well adapted hostess as she has obtained in the person of Mrs. Agnes Corley Setzler.

How old is the hostess, did we hear someone ask? Well, now, as young as she looks and all that, we are still too diplomatic to take chances on guessing at the age of any lady . . . . Would you?

COMPANY "E"

Company E has a motor boat which is being used by the boys on the week ends.

All the boys are busy these days taking over the special duty of the Regiment and Post while the 1st Battalion is shooting on the range.

Company E has a new Company Commander, Captain G. J. Forster. He is a fine fellow and likes all kinds of athletics. We enjoyed Lieut. Gibney as company commander. Company E has had good luck in getting good company commanders.

Dowden, D., is our new Corporal. Cary and Barnett are the new private, first class.

Corp. Tate is on a reenlistment furlough and is having a fine time at Atlanta, Georgia, he reports.

Company E has made more orderlies for the Commanding Officer 29th Infantry, than any other company during the period of November 1931 to present date, Company E having made 50 orderlies during that period, and still keeping up the good work.

Since Company "E" has been absent from these columns there has been several new assignments the last being Pvts. Beyer and Runner. Co. "E" welcomes these men with hope that they will put forth every effort to help keep Company "E" up to its high standard.

The members of Co. "E" desires, to see the Benning Herald become a greater paper and will help in every way possible to support it. And to promise to contribute to its columns each week the news of this organization—this not to say that the Benning Herald is not already a great paper and read by many members of this Co. with much interest.

Watch for Company "E's" column next week.

COMPANY "F"

Daily, except Sundays and Holidays, our recreation room is the scene of men comfortably seated on the big cushioned seats and rockers listening to the very instructive talk of Lt. Kengla.

What is he talking about? Why yes, of course, we should have known that. He is telling them all about the Automatic Rifle. And look how interested all seem to be. Ever since Pfc.

IT IS A GRAND OLD ARMY CUSTOM—BUT

The story of the week and one of the best bits of Flare material we have had in a long time concerns one Lieutenant James Clinton of the Tanks. We can't begin to do it justice but, on the other hand, we can't refrain from giving our public the essential facts coupled with the suggestion that they buttonhole the Lieutenant at the first opportunity and fill in the blanks.

It seems that Lieutenant and Mrs. Clinton were expecting a call from erstwhile intimate friends with whom they had served in the Philippines. One day last week, as the debonair Tanker was stepping from his bath, the Clinton maid announced that a man and his wife were outside in a car and wished to see him.

"Tell them to come in and sit down," commanded the Lieutenant, hurrying with his dressing lest he seem negligent in performing the rites of hospitality.

"I done tell dem to come in but dey say dey wait in de car," replied the maid.

"Just like the B———s," commented Mrs. Clinton who was also deshabille. "Hurry up and get down."

Hastily completing his toilet, Lieutenant Clinton rushed forth. There, sure enough, was Mrs. B———, holding a baby (the B———s had had a baby since Philippine days) on her lap.

"Well, it's certainly good to see you," cried the Lieutenant with enthusiasm, "where's Roscoe?" and with that he threw open the car door and gave the unsuspecting lady a resounding welcoming smack full upon the mouth.

Then his jaw dropped and an expression of dismay and horror suffused his countenance.

The lady was not Mrs. B——— but a total stranger and in the driver's seat sat a well known local merchant whose business relations with the Lieutenant, while pleasant, were hardly intimate enough to put the families on kissing terms.

We get our biggest kick out of this absolutely true story not when we picture the embarrassment of the hero but when we reflect upon the astonishment of the lady. The state of mind of all concerned was so confused at the time that even the Flare inquisitor couldn't get the facts on just how she took it but evidently she is a good sport. Indeed, there is at least some grounds for believing that maybe she rather liked it.

WE KNEW IT WOULD HAPPEN

Lieutenant James R. Pierce, better known as Cannonball Pierce, the Tennis Whirlwind, has been awarded the Banner Blue, with Streamers, for being the first man to invade the women's showers at Russ Pool. The Lieutenant, having taken his daily plunge, absently mindedly blundered through the wrong door on his way to the dressing room. He came to, 'tis said, at the first squeal but it was several minutes before the excited hubbub within subsided. Eyewitnesses have commented favorably upon the alacrity of the Lieutenant's exit and upon the rich scarlet color of his poor but honest face as he rushed out for air.

The experience, while no doubt embarrassing, has its compensation. For one thing Lieutenant Pierce is now in a position to scotch those rumors that the ladies are not complying with the regulations.

Since writing the above we have been reliably informed that Lieutenant James Heriot has entered a protest against the Pierce award on the ground that he, Heriot, is the real pioneer. Affidavits from a quartet of sub-debs have been filed in support of the Heriot claim.

The Flare has appointed a nonpartizan board consisting of Adjutant General Lewis, the bathing beauty expert, Major Homor D. Conner, chairman of the sanitary rules committee, and Life Guard Munson, arbiter of swimming pool etiquette, to investigate and submit recommendations. Colonel Stayer will be summoned before the board to testify as to the psychological reason, if any, for the current tendency of preoccupied lieutenants to pass up a perfectly good "men's entrance" for what is clearly labeled "women's exit."

THANATOPSIS CLUB MEETING

The Thanatopsis Literary Philanthropic and Evangelical Society, after several years of painful, untiring research, has definitely proven that the celebrated law of averages is a myth. It isn't only that Brother Leard is a consistent beneficiary of the club's philanthropic activities. This could be accounted for by the fact that he possesses clairvoyant powers which enable him to tell with uncanny accuracy whether other contenders have 'em or haven't. What put the hitherto respectable and comforting law of averages theory in disrepute is Emil's unfailing ability to get a play on every good hand that he holds. The boys never seem to be looking out the window when he has the cards. When he is sitting pretty with a full house it is a foregone conclusion that at least three optimists with flushes and straights will be out after him in full cry. Moreover, in the pernicious high-low games, when he holds a cinch hand for either high or low, there are always at least two well heeled brethren fighting each other other for the privilege of splitting the pot with him. This sort of thing has been going on for years and every practicing Thanatopsian now knows that the so-called law of averages is a delusion and a snare. As the boys are wont to remark at the conclusion of one of Brother Leard's demonstrations, "It's a Geeft."

Adjutant General Lewis has resumed his accustomed place after an absence of several months. The boys are doing everything possible to make him feel at home.

The latest Thanatopsis convert is Brother Bonham, who took the veil on June 5. Brother Bonham states that his withdrawal is only temporary. We have been given to understand that he plans to return to the fold after a month of fasting and meditation—this period of self-imposed discipline being designed to rehabilitate his morale.

At Rialto Theatre Sunday

Phillips Holmes, Nancy Carroll and Lionel Barrymore in Ernst Lubitsch's "Broken Lullaby", a Paramount Picture

Cinema Calendar

for Grand, Rialto and Royal

AT THE RIALTO

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY: Presenting "THE RIDING TORNADO," with Tim McCoy, in a fast and furious pictorialization of the "wild and wooly West." A stampede of a herd of wild horses, five hundred strong, with Tim in the midst, on foot, is but one of the thrilling scenes presented in his latest picture. As an added attraction, "CRAWFORD'S COMEDIANS," who will be remembered from a past showing at the Rialto, will present another program of the latest song, dance and skit hits.

SUNDAY: Presenting "BROKEN LULLABY," with Lionel Barrymore, Nancy Carroll and Phillips Holmes, with a strong supporting cast, including ZaSu Pitts. A big and distinguished cast and an entirely new plot idea. Do not miss seeing this picture.

MONDAY AND TUESDAY: Presenting "THE ROADHOUSE MURDER," with Eric Linden, Dorthy Jordan and Phyllis Clare, with Rosco "Stuttering" Ates included in a strong supporting cast. A storm—a desolate country roadhouse—mysterious characters—all provide a perfect setting for murder—and romance! A picture with a punch . . . don't fail to see it.

WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY: Presenting "SINNERS IN THE SUN" with Carole Lombard. With her, Chester Morris, who played the masculine lead in "Corsair," provide the romantic background for this strictly modern picture.

AT THE GRAND

SATURDAY, SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Presenting "THE MOUTHPIECE," with Warren William, Sidney Fox, Aline MacMahon and others. Here's high-voltage drama, carrying currents of terrific tension. You'll be stunned by its thundering force! They called him the "mouthpiece" because he could talk juries out of justice and women out of honor.

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Presenting "FIREMAN, SAVE MY CHILD," with Joe E. Brown. A rollicking comedy, full of typical Brown humor. For real entertainment, see Joe E. Brown in the funniest of all his comedies.

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY: Presenting "THE WISER SEX," wtih Claudette Colbert, Melvin Douglas, Lilyan Tashman and William Boyd. Woman against woman—with a man's life at stake! Blonde or brunette—which will he take? Both dames once loved him—which to forsake? See this drama of a man who lets love wait; and of a woman to whom he owes his life!

* * *

AT THE ROYAL

(Beginning with Midnight Show, Saturday 11:15 P. M.)

SUNDAY, MONDAY AND TUESDAY: Presenting "MERRILY WE GO TO HELL," with Sylvia Sidney and Frederic March, and Adrianne Allen and Skeets Gallagher in the supporting cast. She longed to hear him say—"I Love You"—and the best he could do was—"I think you're swell!" A cross-section of Humanity—through it flows hope, desire, faith and drama—and, in the end,—JOY!

Little Eva Big Girl Now

A prominent and beloved character of the American stage for fifty years prolonged a temporary retirement from retirement to accept her first talking picture part as the "mother" of Claudette Colbert in "The Wiser Sex." Paramount release which will show at the Grand Theatre, beginning Thursday for two days.

Effie Shannon, who at sixty-four makes her talkie debut to appear in a modern drama centering in the exploits of a girl who risks a hazardous life as a demimonde to secure evidence which will save her lover, made her first bold gesture in defiance of retirement last season to appear with Fay Bainter and Walter Hampden in the New York revival of "The Admirable Crichton."

It was in 1873 that Miss Shannon began her stage career, as "Little Eva" in "Uncle Tom's Cabin." From the time of her first successful encounter with histrionic ice floes, until the start of the present decade, the list of plays in which she has appeared reads like a history of drama.

Among plays in which she was featured and which may not have escaped the memory of the present generation, are: "Trelawney of the Wells," "L'Aiglon," "Her Unborn Child," "Good Boy" and "Merry Andrew."

RIALTO

If a big and distinguished cast and a new plot idea mean anything—(and a still, small voice from Hollywood says they do) "Broken Lullaby" should provide excellent entertainment for the patrons of the Rialto Theatre which shows Sunday only.

"Broken Lullaby," is based on the original French play by Maurice Rostand. It tells of the post-war events in the life of a former soldier in the war-time army. The principal roles are played by Lionel Barrymore, Nancy Carroll and Phillips Holmes.

Holmes is seen as the soldier of France—sensitive, romantic-minded, who, in the performance of his duty, kills a young German soldier during a big enemy drive. As soon as the deed is committed, he begins to suffer a profound remorse. From a letter on the person of his victim he learns the name of the dead soldier's German sweetheart, Nancy Carroll, and the name of the town in which she lives with the dead man's father, Lionel Barrymore, a stolid German nationalist who harbors a great hatred for all Frenchman.

Holmes' most recent picture was "An American Tragedy," in which he played the role of Clyde Griffiths. Barrymore was recently awarded the annual prize of the Academy of Motion Picture Sciences for his distinguished performance in "A Free Soul," Nancy Carroll was teamed with Holmes in "The Devil's Holiday," and "Stolen Heaven."

Others in the cast are Tully Marshall, ZaSu Pitts, Lucien Littlefield, Tom Douglas, Emma Dunn, and Frank Sheridan.

FREDRIC MARCH
with Sylvia Sidney in Paramount's "Merrily We Go to Hell"

The courage to refuse theatrical advancement greater than he was ready for is believed to be responsible for Frederic March's present screen prominence.

March and Sylvia Sidney are sharing honors in Paramount's "Merrily We Go to Hell," which is to be shown at the Royal Theatre 11:15 p. m. Saturday.

Although March now stands at the top of his profession, back of his experience as a stage supernumerary in road shows, stock with the New York Theatre Guild and finally in leading roles on Broadway.

Shortly after he began his career, William A. Brady offered him a contract which he turned down to go into stock. After he achieved prominence on his return to New York he turned down offers to go into silent pictures. It was after playing in "The Royal Family" that he became a talking screen actor.

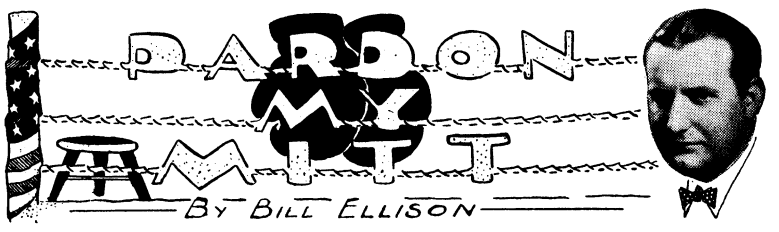
BILL ELLISON, Editor



Mr. Walker Smith and Mr. Tony Cancella, two well known gentlemen who manage to keep in good standing among the Southern cauliflower colony, will exchange pleasantries at a little leather soiree at Doughboy Stadium Tuesday evening and it reaches this column, via grapevine gossip, that somebody's face is liable to be lifted in the heat of the entertainment. Such a process of face lifting carries the subject's head, neck, shoulders and torso with it as it hurdles topmost hempen strands en route to the laps of the ringsiders.

Mr. Smith and Mrs. Cancella do not like each other, this state of dissatisfaction having developed at a ring party in Charleston some weeks ago in which the two gentlemen beat the other in the face for ten rounds to have the performance called even. For the first three rounds Mr. Cancella hit Mr. Smith with great frequency to the point of head, a deed that infuriates Mr. Smith noticeably, and in the fourth things began to take on an entirely different complexion for the remainder of the contest.

* * *

Mr. Cancella, it seems, was nothing short of an idol with the Carolinians and, weighing 193, towered head and shoulders above the soldier. Ringside customers made no effort to conceal their chagrin and disappointment when Mr. Smith entered the ring, going so far as to insinuate Mr. Smith was nothing short of a "set-up" for the swarthy boy from down Tampa way. Such did not prove the case, however, and the fight ended with both boys flailing away for dear life and the fans themselves were standing in chairs, on their neighbors' hats, coats, necks and other vantage points that presented themselves.

After the fistic function, Mr. Smith and Mr. Cancella repaired to the dressing rooms, a sort of stall-like building separated by simply suspending a canvas curtain midway on one side of which dressed Mr. Smith and the other, Mr. Cancella. It was while the boys were under a shower taking their ablutions, or something, that Mr. Cancella had the temerity to advise Mr. Smith: "I'm going to beat h—l out of you!" Such strnog talk naturally moved Mr. Smith to retort: "Why, you spaghetti bender, you couldn't punch your way out of a paper bag!"

It has never been determined just whether Mr. Cancella took exception to the allusion Smith made to his partiality to spaghetti or whether it was to his inability to punch. They do tell the story, though, of how Mr. Concella emitted a bullish snort of rage, drove his fist against the canvas partition and ripped it to the floor. There he squared off, with bare knuckles sufficing for gloves and a turkish towel sufficing for trunks, to glower and wish to the high heaven Smith would make a false move. Smith, as would be expected, did make a false move in assuming a belligerent attitude of his own, and the two pugs were in the act of resuming the ringside hostilities when a brace of bluecoats raced dramatically into the room and elevated their palms in holy horror that men should condescend to do such things in their fair state of South Carolina where a governor once inquired to the chief executive of a neighboring state about the length between drinks and where. since that time, folks have consumed so much corn out of fruit jars that they have rings across their noses, not from wearing spectacles—but from the pressure of the rim of the jars themselves.

Terrific Row Is Forecast For 21st

Although the stereotyped term, "grudge battle," has been over press-agented for many years now to enhance the gate receipts of inferior mauling attractions, I can, nevertheless, think of one such bout that is altogether on the level because, as hillmen solemnly aver, "thar's bad blood betwix both of 'em."

Yes sir, when your doughboy idol, Walker (Cyclone) Smith, the larruping Louisianan, begins glowering at Tony Cancella, tenacious Tampan, at Doughboy Stadium Tuesday night, his expression will not be for effect. No sir, he'll be wanting to knock Mr. Cancella for a row of fur-lined cuspidors.

Cancella, a tough boy, indeed, will outscale Smith as he did in Charleston, S. C., not more than a month ago when the pair punched to a draw verdict but which, if I've been informed correctly, should have been decided a victory in the soldier's favor. But stranger things than that have happened in a state where, if the former Governor Richards had had his way, "Blue" laws resurrected from musty tomes would have been exercised to prevent tired bankers and boiler makers from engaging in such evil practices as playing golf, shooting crap and drinking corn liquor from the mouths of fruit jars on the Sabbath.

Now listen! Barring unforseen and unscheduled developments, the main bout between Smith and Cancella will be a darb and not one to be overshadowed by the preliminaries.

Earl Johnson, sensational Miami school boy, and Earl Rocky, terrible tanker, have been put down for the eight round semi-final event of the evening and our esteemed friend Captain Fry assures all and sundry that this will be an extraordinarily good bout. Johnson has participated in something like 15 or 20 bouts since shelving his readin', writin', and 'rithmetic. Johnson is a tough nut to crack and the bout does, for a fact, have the earmarks of a "natural."

Wilmer (Blondy) Parker, Benning, and Jackie Harp, Warm Springs, are to do the entertaining in the six round preliminary. Harp has been seen in action twice at Fort Benning, having won a decision over Davis in a six rounder and kayoed Lydell in the fifth of their squabble.

Spot Webb and Tut Tut Taylor will do battle for four rounds and a couple of negroes, Eight Cylinder Olds and Robert Lee Brooks will perform in the curtain raiser. They fight two 3-minute rounds.

The number of bouts were reduced this time, Captain Fry announced, because round by round, blow-by-blow details of the Sharkey-Schmeling fight will be announced from the ring to fans in Doughboy Stadium.

Fights begin at 8:15 p. m.

Medicos Leading In Pennant Race

By Bernard B. Swayze

Now that the league is just starting, it is hard to pick a good team as winner of the pennant. Of course, some of the teams that have made poor starts have a chance to snap out of it and show fighting spirit for that mythical flag. For instance the Artillery.

That team has more fighting spirit in a minute than the scores have shown they would have in a year. Last week they battled the 1st Battalion to a draw for thirteen innings. It was in the fourteenth that the Irish got the upper hand and scored two runs and beat them out 4 to 2.

That was one swell game, and the fans who didn't go are sending in orders for one of those self kicking machines shown in old Schnapps chewing tobacco advertisements. Well, they need it, no end.

Holloway, losing pitcher for that wonderful game, twirled that horsehide around like it was a grape vine. His dazzling speed was enough to send seven would be Jimmie Foxx's back to the dugout counting doodle bug holes.

His pitching however, was countermanded by the same brand by Stewart and Stevens of the Irish. Their pitching was the kind that makes batters wish they could get them off the ground, but can't.

The Kells have been playing good baseball, but something goes against them every time they get a chance to win. That is just some more of those breaks that come in baseball, and if Kell himself and Barron keep up the pep, they will pop something in this league yet.

SHRAPNEL BURSTS

Major Selleck returned to duty last Friday after being absent for nearly three months due to being sick with pneumonia. We are all glad that he is feeling fine and able to come back to the battalion even though it is a very warm time of the year to take over the command.

So far the R. O. T. C. don't seem as lively as they did last year but everything is still new to them and also they haven't started their weekly dances yet. Their first dance will be tonight so just wait until that is over before judging them for liveliness.

Since the students of the Infantry School graduated June 1 instead of June 10, Lts. Sherburne and Cobb were merly attached to the Artillery for special duty until the date of their change of branch from Infantry to Artillery. On Friday, June 10th, these two Lts. became members of the Field Artillery, to remain as such for the rest of their army career, unless they are much more dissatisfied than they are now, after being with us for a few days.

The three officers from the 29th Infantry went back last Wednesday after spending a three months' detail in the Artillery. Although they were worked quite hard in order to have them learn some things about the Artillery in three month., we hope that they enjoyed the detail and will be greatly benefitted by it.

Due to Lt. Thomas' being on leave Lt. Cobb took over the baseball team and although he got a late start, the team has improved greatly. Lt. Cobb has been at Benning five years and has been several seasons of baseball so even though we lost the first two games, the second game of fourteen innings was a great improvement over the first and for that reason we expect to see the Artillery win some games before the season ends.

Sgt. Dodd has purchased a new Chevrolet Coupe and can be seen every week end at Boyle's Thirty Acres. A summer camp has been established there and Sgt. Dodd drew a square table out of the Supply room to be used during conferences with his staff. Cpl. Pike is aide-de-camp and also acts as liaisson officer, keeping Dodd informed as to the location of any new gunners.

MEDICOS LEADING LEAGUE

Old man Lindsey, grand dad of the Tanks, twirled a beautiful game against the Special Units, 29th Infantry, shutting them out while his batting cohorts were slamming the ball all over the lot to score twelve nice juicy runs.

Wee Grady Tolle will be out there battling for a win again this week, and will probably get it. His team is fielding fair now, and should improve. When Pop Heckert and "Slim Slam" Stewart, he of the Southeastern nightmare, get to hitting that pill right, base runners will come in for tallies.

The Kells and Greencords were rained out twice last week end, as there should be blood on the moon when they meet next Sunday.

All games will be played on Gowdy Field, beginning promptly at 1:45, except on days scheduling two games, when the first game will begin promptly at 1:15.

The standing of the teams to date, (Wednesday) are as follows:

THE FLARE

Captain H. J. Golightly. better known as Ruthless Newt, the Lone Wolf of Austin Loop, entertained last week. This time the host made no preliminary announcement of his single handed intentions. As usual, approximately fifty per cent of those present had an enjoyable evening.

The meeting sponsored by the Wolf was in the nature of a farewell benefit to Major Paul Stivers, one of the two remaining charter members. Brother Stivers left the following morning for other fields, taking with him the good will of the brethren and four dollars and fifty cents of their money.

The regular meeting of the current week was held in the palatial home of Chief Bradley. The host, who usually has a bad evening when he entertains, was wearing a shirt with zippers instead of buttons. "Just to make it easier for you vultures to take it off," he remarked by way of explanation as Brother Leard laid down three deuces against the Pot Breaker's Aces up.

GUNBOTHAM CHECKS OUT

On Saturday last, the eminent actor, athlete, socialite, and columnist, James Gunbotham Grier threw his trunk locker into the rumble seat, whistled to the dog and left Benning flat. When last heard from he was headed for North Carolina where he is scheduled to participate in a tennis tournament. Later he will compete in the Army Tennis Matches in Washington. His ultimate destination is the Philippines where he will assist the American proconsul to administer insular affairs. Before he gets there, however, he will have done a great deal, said a great deal more and at least six senior officers will have tried unsuccessfully to put him in what they are pleased to consider his place.

We shall miss our wisecracking contemporary. Gunbotham ran a bright and clever column which is quite a chore, if you ask us. What is more, he used tact and discretion in his handling of the material that came to his hand. If he hurt any feelings they must have been exceedingly tender—too tender, perhaps, for what Shakespeare refers to as the "rack of this tough world."

We understand that Gunbotham's mantle has fallen upon the capable young shoulders of his talented and versatile disciple, Life Guard Munson. If so, The Flare is still in good company.

CITATION FOR THE WEEK

To Colonel George C. Marshall, not so much for the great progress which The Infantry School has made during the five years of his forceful leadership as for the intensely human qualities which not even his high soldierly abilities and tireless professional zeal could altogether hide from his observing subordinates and friends.

THE DANCE TO KALI

Alexander Rosanoff, in the private service of the Czar, and Colonel Shubin, ranking Attache of the Russian Embassy, left their cab in the courtyard of a building on one of the most ancient and most aristocratic boulevards on the left bank of the Seine. The hour was ten o'clock of an evening in wartime, an evening lighted only by the dim twinkling of a few far-off stars and the headlights which shot two streams of white mist into the darkness. The shadows of the leaves of a tree stirred in this mist for a moment, the bulk of the house showed white as a skeleton. There was not a sound, not a glimmer from within.

The younger man, Rosanoff, not expecting the headlights to be switched off, was blinded for an instant and made an instinctive movement to reach the support of the wall.

Shubin's voice came to him in low, exasperated sounds.

"Don't make a racket! They'll come soon. Do you know that it is very indiscreet of us to be seen at this entertainment in wartimes?"

Which made Rosanoff laugh. For he felt that it was all to perfect. To have seen the dancer, whose fame had travelled from the European capitals to the barracks and hundreds of miles inland to Moscow and St. Petersburg, to have seen her in the ordinary way, on a stage in a glare of lights, to have come there with chattering people from a good dinner in a smart restaurant, would have been almost an anticlimax. The blackness, the silence, Shubin's reluctance, made far more fitting preliminaries. How these civilians enjoyed their spice of danger! Even Shubin, a matter-of-fact, agreeable man back home had grown tense and mysterious in Paris. But Rosanoff had arrived only that afternoon from the front and he knew and remembered that danger was prosaic.

Danger was a routine such as he had recently followed. It meant getting up before dawn, testing the engine, then flying over levels, over thin rivers, over war-torn fields, over cities, too, so high up that he could not see even a church-spire—flying tranquilly, almost going to sleep at the stick, yet always knowing that in a second he and the ship might be only two falling streaks welded together, perhaps, in flame. It meant delivering the documents in the sealed pouch, smoking a cigarette, sleeping off exhaustion, then waking alert for the next job. There was far more excitement to him in the anticipation of good meals, baths, comfortable quarters, beautiful women, above all, the sight of beautiful women, beginning with this little dancer who staged her appearance so well.

They had waited for about five minutes and Rosanoff was about to give Shubin the benefit of his reflections when the light from within the open door seemed to explode in their faces. A footman stared at Rosanoff and then saw Shubin.

"She has begun, Monsieur," he said.

He held another door ahead of them. They were in a circular room with a polished floor, full of light but quite empty. The next room was larger. It contained a gleaming buffet which reflected back the decanters, glasses and plates with which it was laden. People had eaten there, it was evident, and attendants had cleared away too hurriedly. But recumbent by the buffet was an object which caused Rosanoff to halt for a moment, startled. He thought that it was some bizarre ornament in keeping with the strangeness of the house. The object was slumped forward like an unusually large and very meagre rag doll. Silver-gray hair, elaborately curled fell over its face.

"What's that?" he exclaimed.

"Bah! The old Marquis de Signac."

At the same time, Shubin was opening the last door, and caught between his amazement at such decrepitude and his wonder as to what could follow in such a house, Rosanoff lost awareness of the moment of his entry. Shubin hustled him a little.

Then he was sitting on something cushioned which had no back to it, a bench, perhaps, in a faint, moon-steeped light which gave him a suggestion of faces all around but soon went out entirely. Then he heard music which seemed to come from nowhere, not music exactly, but a low, sustained musical wail, rising slightly, then subsiding, rising again, pinned with tiny, tinkling instruments here and there, as if they had been jewels. But the ebb and flow of the liquid wail was what held the ear. Sometimes it was almost piercing and the mesmerized nerves shrank from it, hot blood flowed to the head and left the body shudering with an inconceivable, icy excitement, and pounded against the tight skin of the head in time with the hidden beat of the music, until, at the bursting point, the wail would slowly fade to a throbbing moan, the blood would flow back deliriously. Somewhere Rosanoff had heard music similar to this, in an alley in Constantinople, in the shadow of the great turquoise Baths in Tiflis. It was music at the line where torture writhes in ecstasy. Then, suddenly, it ceased.

Two curtains at the head of the room stirred in an inexplicable breeze. They billowed first about the head, then the neck, then opened slowly to reveal the body of Mata Hari. She was moving toward an altar which the curtains had hidden. The altar bloomed with light, which, like the wind, had no source, and as she moved, this wind mowed down her veils, drove them back gently against her limbs and breasts.

A surprising thought flashed through Rosanoff's mind. How tall she was! It shocked him to remember that he had spoken of her as a "little dancer." He felt humbled; it was so stupid, so juvenile, to have come prepared for a little dancer. He understood that his eyes had been fastened on her and had been wrenched away. He knew this because he had been seeing nothing but the veils, the whiteness, and now he noticed a towering, ebony object, sleek and shining. The Goddess Kali, with many slim, stony, twining black arms like snakes. After that, he knew his eyes had returned, for he saw the Goddess Kali no further, and he realized that someone was speaking.

It was the dancer. Her voice gave him a further shock, so that he lost the first words while he was thinking that she was tall and her voice was grave. It was slow, deep, and without inflections. Every word was as fully rounded as every other word.

". . . dark goddess of destruction—who rules frenzy, cruelty, ecstasy and sin. . . "

The thinness of a veil fluttered from each hand to the floor of the altar.

And it seemed to Rosanoff that what she said was inexorable, the voice was inexorable, the hands that cast aside veil after veil, they were remorseless too.

"I dance for you as the bayaderes danced on the sacred terrace of the Temple Boro-Bodur, where I was born, in Java.

The sustained wail rose again. This time, the blood gathered in Rosanoff's throat, congealed in a hard lump. He was afraid to breathe and felt near to strangling. All was a mystic, fleshly white before his eyes. The woman and her swayings and the seductive flesh that she wore more proudly, more boldly with every motion, like a garment, like a dazzling dress of nudity, filled them. Sometimes she moved and there was blackness, his eyes could not follow her, they remained glued to the spot where she had been. She returned and filled them with luminous white.

She sank before the altar.

Rosanoff became aware that there was a golden glow in his eyes. When the dance had ceased or how long it had lasted he could not have told, but in the place where the altar had been, there were again two curtains of heavy Oriental stuff.

Rosanoff put a hand to his forehead. It came away wet, and the chill of the sweat brought him to his senses. There sat Shubin beside him with a face like a lump of tallow. Several men had gathered about a woman who lay on a bench. Rosanoff could just see her open mouth. She had fainted. All the men and all the women looked grotesque to him ,and it struck him that perhaps he seemed just as hideous to them after the dance.

But when he glanced again at his companion, Shubin looked as composed as usual. It had been the effect of the sudden lights.

Shubin said, "Now you've seen your little dancer, eh?"

Is Fight Game Being Commercialized?

Benning Briefs

It's a subject we hate to talk about but we feel that it is incumbent on us to put in a word or two about the weather, and particularly its relation to various members of the population of the Post. Anyone who has not been so badly floored by the unusually excessive heat as to have hidden himself from the ken of man, cannot help having noticed the anguished and woebegone faces of some of the kaydets down at the ROTC camp as they toiled in from a morning of wrangling horses. One would gather from their remarks that they weren't particularly fond of the equine species, either and some of the more radical of the students have even ventured the observation that the (supposedly) coveted commission wasn't worth the sweat and strain "wasted" on it.

Another and more forcible reminder of the extreme temperatures is the crowded condition of Russ Pool, which is certainly performing nobly in the terrific task of keeping down the average temperature and keeping up the tempers of the Benningites. A fair (and we mean this in two ways) slice of the population is always on hand in the pool, or taking sunbaths, though what the possible attraction in a sunbath is, we don't see.

Incredible, say you, and so did we at first, but a diligent inquiry proves the veracity of the report which comes up from the ROTC camp that Ten 5, Battery B, has the greatest combined height of any tent in the camp, 24 feet, 10 inches. The claim that the total shoe size is 48 is also given credence, though it's hard.

Congratulations to Captain Arnold J. Funk on his new job. (This is just an attempt to soft-soap him, in case - - - -, you know.) We hope he likes it, one look at "Wild Bill" Tuttle would convince anyone that the job must be one that anyone would like.

The Recreation Center Board has begun work on what will be its largest project, from a strictly architectural point of view. The excavations for the Officers' Club, which will be opposite the monument at the intersection of Wickersham Avenue and First Division Road, have been started and quite an amount of progress has been made.

* * *

Lt. Pulsifer, who is pinch hitting for Lt. Dowdall, reports that the Officers' Club business is getting along quite well. That's to be expected, when the Acting Secretary is one of the foremost zoologists and ornithologists of the Post, as winess the incidents of the canary and the rabbits.

The hot weather seems to have affected Captain Fry and Lt. Harmony a little, for they were putting on a milder version of the activities of the far-famed Thanatopsis Club yesterday morning in the Athletic office. For a more detailed explanation, we refer

Officer Who Saw Shanghai Service Is On Duty Here

Major George J. Rife, Veterinary Corps, who recently was assigned by War Department orders to the Infantry School, reported for duty at Fort Benning on Wednesday.

Major Rife recently has been on duty in the Philippine Department and with the American troops at Shanghai, China. He was on duty in Manila at the time orders were received by the 31st Infantry to proceed to Shanghai to defend American interests in the battle-torn areas. According to Major Rife, the troops had only eight hours in which to make their preparations for embarkation.

In this short period of time the regiment, which is equipped for tropical service, had not only to draw and load its rations, ammunition and other war supplies, but had to obtain winter clothing and uniforms for all its men and officers. This latter was furnished from the old war stocks remaining on hand in storage at Manila since the 31st Infantry returned from Siberia in 1920.

When the regiment landed in Shanghai, arrayed in the old war stock uniforms, its appearance suffered badly by contrast with the smartly uniformed British and other foreign troops on duty there. The 31st Infantry, whose regular station is at Manila, is ordinarily clad in smart cotton khaki uniforms and is regarded as one of the show regiments of the army, and he disadvantageous position in which the men were placed by comparison with other troops was felt keenly, particularly by the older enlisted men. Recent advices from Shanghai, however, indicate that with the advent of warmer weather the regiment expected to don its regular cotton khaki uniforms.

Society Formed By Protestant Chapel Group

Chaplain Willis T. Howard, of the Protestant Chapel, announces the formation of a Junior-Christian Endeavor Society, an auxiliary to the senior society functioning on the same program but embracing ages of children in the junior departments of the Sunday school. The Junior Endeavor is under the supervision of Corporal William H. Brewer, assisted by Misses Maxine Wolf and Paula Brown, who are the instructors and in charge of all activities of this department.

There have been two meetings, the last one having an attendance of about forty juniors. A very delightful program followed with scriptural parts and musical selections by the members. This society promises to be the outstanding organization at the chapel, so it is urged that all juniors of the Sunday School try to be in attendance at these meetings on Thursday evening of each week at six-thirty p. m. Religious education will feature the program of this society.

The Senior Endeavor at the chapel is about to be the recipient of another donation from a bazaar and carnival sponsored by the Men's Bible Class. This event will take place in the Post Gymnasium, Friday, July 1st, at six p. m., in which there will be numerous concessions, one of which will be a featured supper like the one that made the last bazaar such a success. There will be clowns with their funny antics, comical side-shows, baloons in variety, and a dance under the supervision of Mrs. Setzler, the new Post Hostess, who will also preside as hostess for the bazaar and carnival in general.

The big event will be a popularity contest conducted under the keen, guiding eyes of the most popular men in sport activities on the post; Master-Sergeants Wolf, Magoni, and McNulty. Who can estimate the interest that will

Last Contingent Of Tank School Men Arrive Here

The newest addition to the many courses included in the curriculum of the Infantry School has just been completed with the installation of equipment shipped from Fort George G. Meade, Maryland, for the Tank School which will occupy the most recently finished buildings on the post.

The men and equipment brought from the northern post will supplement the Second Battalion, First Tank Regiment, and Company "F," Second Tank Regiment which have been stationed at Benning. The latest arrivals, which came in last Monday, completed the moving of the Tank School to Benning and all the personnel, with the exception of two officers, who are on leave of absence, is now on the post.

The past several days have been occupied with the installation of the eighteen car loads of equipment which form a part of the machinery and apparatus used in the instructional courses of the School. The new buildings will house all of this equipment and the offices of the instructors will be housed in the office building just being completed.

Officers for the course, which will begin next Fall, are already being assigned and will become regular students of the Infantry School when the courses open.

Meanwhile, tests have been conducted with the Christies to determine their mobility. The tanks have been sent on several trips on the roads north of Benning, without their tracks, and have been tested for speed and maneuverability over long distances.

Majority of Writers Agree On Question Raised By Sharkey - Schmeling Bout

By Bill Ellison

I find it rather amusing—all this commotion about a reverse decision returned in the Schmeling-Sharkey squabble in New York. It would seem that the good American people had not yet come to the realization that the prize fight game, on a big scale, had long ago lapsed into one of the most commercialized rackets in the whole country today; an enterprise in which the clean sporting element is the last phase to receive consideration.

The low level to which the boxing business has degenerated was rather forcibly brought out when Mr. Alphonse Capone became a series of numerals in the federal penitentiary in Atlanta. Mr. Capone remarked in the presence of the chosen few in the confines of his special railroad car en route to Atlanta that it was his intention to become a model prisoner and in so doing he hoped to foster sports insofar as possible; that at one time he had been considered better than an ordinary pitcher in base ball and, too, he enertained much esteem for things fistic. He intimated that if it were agreeable with prison authorities, that boxing might flourish behind the penitentiary walls, adding in an offside remark that Mickey Walker would come at his beck and call, anytime, because of the close state of intimacy that existed between Mr. Walker and Mr. Capone.

Any student of the art of self defense could possibly have ventured a better guess as to the true outcome of the fifteen rounds of the Schmeling-Sharkey fracas than the three duly appointed judges. The battle itself was, I suppose, about the tamest heavyweight championship fight in the history of professional fisticuffs. Both Maxie and Jack must have had the appearance of a pair of sorry bums to the dear people who paid their hard-earned money in these times of depression.

Joe Jacobs manager of der Maxie, is not to be relied upon too strongly for veracity but his claim that the title had been pilfered seems to be more than justifiable. It is verry apparent that the powers that be in commercialized pugilism were dissatisfied with the German title-holder's ability to pack the cash customers inside the turnstiles. It is a settled fact he lacks that something Dempsey possessed while in his prime to make himself popular with fight fans. There was a last minute sell out at the New York fight, true enough, but a sharp reduction in the prices of admission was necessary in order to turn the trick. I think, too, that it was Sharkey, rather than Schmeling, that was responsible for the overflow of the new stadium because Sharkey is in his own right much of a showman and that is a quality essentially needed in a game that has lost its luster among thousands. Schmeling's stoicism doesn't click anymore than Tunney's austere mannerisms did. A champion that has little or no personality certainly isn't popular with the American masses and has no right, boxing officials long hence decided, to wear the regal vestments identified

Chief Willis' Garden Is One of Bright Spots of Post

By Bernard B. Swayze

Some one wrote a poem, and oh, what a poem! It is a pity it were not framed and placed in every home in the world, so great men have said. It contained ideas that have prevailed since the making of this world we enjoy living in today, and shall prevail for time to come.

With apologies to its author, permit us to reproduce said poem in its true form, as nearly as our abilities permit.

Let me live in a house
By the side of the road,
Where the races of men go by.
The Men who are good,
And the men who are bad,
As good and as bad as I.
I would not sit in a scorner's seat,
Or hurl the cynic's ban,
But let me live in a house
By the side of the road,
And be a friend to man.

Now it seems that Fort Benning's present fire chief has adapted this poem as his everyday creed, and displays material proof of that fact.

Nothing is more friendly to a grouchy disposition than nature's beauty, and Chief Willis has taken advantage of that truism in endeavoring to make the landscape more pleasing to the wandering, modernly critical eye.

His colorful arrangement of petunias, galdioli and zennia, along with many roses and other bright blossoms, has brought many favorable comments from the daily passers by.

Several years ago, Chief Willis set out four cedars that have grown large enough to ease the abruptness of the blank wall presented to the eye on the east side of the Fire Station. Chief Willis states that these four trees have had a harder time remaining in circulation than any trees on the post. First a water main had to go under them. This time Mr. Willis induced the workmen to tunnel under, and leave his trees alone. Then came Ingersoll Street, with its new coat of pavement. This time his pleadings could not stop the contractors. The roots were cut badly, but his constant care speedily brought the trees back to normalcy.

Then to top bad matters, a huge sewer chose the trees by which to lay its course to the commons, and under it went, delaying the growth of four of the most beautiful trees on Fort Benning Reservation.

There on the corner, hiding the Chief's vegeable garden full of tomatoes, cabbage, onions and what shall we have for lunch, stands the daddy of all the weeping willows on the post. The railroad changed its right of way once to stunt the growth, but determination on the part of Mr. Willis and his willing firemen cohorts kept it alive and going.

The chief, being a modest individual, will not grant an interview, so we can't tell much about his personal life and activities. This has forced us to deal with only the facts that lay open to the eye, but venture to say that were we permitted to pry into his private life, there would be found a character and soul as beautiful and colorful as that haven to tired eyes created by his natural genius.

Marriage of Lt. Wiley and Miss Bates of Interest In Military Circles

Of great interest throughout both Army and civilian circles was the marriage on June 16th of Miss Catherine Bates, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bates of Jacksonville, Florida and Lieut. Noble J. Wiley which was solemnized at the Church of the Good Shepherd in Jacksonville. The Rev. C. A. Ashby, rector, performed the ceremony in the presence of a gathering of friends and relatives of the young couple.

As the strains of the bridal chorus from "Lohengrin" sounded through the church the bridal party entered. The first to enter were the two ushers, Milton Foley and Jack McKinnon and they were followed by the groomsmen, Lieut. Milton Pressley, Lieut. Thomas L. Sherburne and Lieut. Robert Ports, all of Fort Benning and Cadet Charles H. White, Jr., of Washington, D. C. a cousin of the bridegroom. The three lieutenants wore the full dress uniform and Cadet White wore the cadet full dress. The bridesmaids then entered as follows: Misses Virginia Griggs, Hulit Wiley, sister of the groom, Emily Hessler, and Carolyn Arnold. They were followed by the maid-of-honor, Miss Mildred Bates, sister of the bride.

The bride was escorted by her father by whom she was given in marriage, and they were met at the chancel steps by the bridegrom and his father, Col. Noble J. Wiley, who served as his best man. Lieutenant Wiley and his father also wore the full dress uniform of the Army.

The charming young bride was lovely in her wedding gown of soft ivory satin, fashioned with a molded silhouette and graceful skirt, forming a semi-train in the back. The fitted bodice formed a high round neckline, which was edged with tiny clusters of orange blossoms and the sleeves were fashioned leg-o-mutton style. Her veil was simply fashioned of tulle. Caught at the base of the cap was a short veil of old Spanish lace, which formed a double train over the tulle. Her flowers were a sheaf of calla lilies showered with lilies of the valley.

A small reception for the members of the bridal party was then held at the home of the bride's parents. The bride's table was covered with a handsome cloth of silk damask and was centered with a wedding cake embossed in orange blossoms and lilies of the valley. Placed at either end were silver candlesticks, holding ivory colored tapers and clusters of lilies and fern decorated the table. The bride followed the Army custom and cut the cake with her husband's sabre.

Later in the evening, Lieut. and Mrs. Wiley left on a wedding trip. They will return to Jacksonville in about ten days to remain until July 16th, when they will leave for a tour of the North and East before sailing from New York on July 27th for Hawaii, where Lieut. Wiley has been ordered for station.

On The Q. T.

By B. B. S.

Some up and coming song writer should get on his horses write a song and call it "Singing in the Squared Circle," and turn it over to Grumpy Gordy for introduction to the musical world.

Since making his debut in the musical world over the radio, the Grumpy one has been regularly worked by the local station, WRBL, (the voice of the Chattahoochee). Some of the fans have even been overheard to say that they had heard The voice of the Chattahoochee, and that they would never forget it.

The column sent a reporter down to interview Grumpy on the subject of his singing, and the dope he brought back would choke a cow.

When asked what he was going to do about his fighting since becoming so much in demand on the air, Gordy replied, "I think I'll just put in a challenge to fight all the prelim boys at one time, winner take the gate receipts, and call it a day on fighting."

You may not think the Grumpy one would get in there at all, but the column is laying dollars to doughnuts that he would.

When asked why he decided to take up yodeling over the radio, Grumpy said that he had been fighting for a long time, and only a few times had he heard the birdies sing. He decided to sing for the public, and relieve their suffering, musically, and at the same time, please himself with his harmonious efforts.

As a parting remark, Grumpy shot back, "And remember to tell 'em that a Mike can't fight back." Grumpy wins.

GUNBOTHAM'S SCHOOL DAZE

By E. L. M.

The wave of picnica and mumps sweeping over the Post has almost reached epidemic stage. Even at our age, we're not sure which we'd rather suffer.

Backed by our Army women (who, in all graduation addresses, are the Backbone of The Service, God bless them) the mass picnic is reaching the peak of its development here at Benning. Not since Mrs. Leary's cow kicked the lantern and made Chicago take to the woods, have entire communities gone native, sprawled in poison oak and shared their meals with hordes of insects.

There is muttering among the men—but only in dark corners. Resentment is piling up, but they avoid speaking of it—even as plain men avoid speaking of the Queen's legs and the King's death.

We pray for a prophet to rise from the masses and help us throw the yoke from a harassed and suffering populace (male, mature) that Department Regimental and Section picnics may become a horror remembered only in the lean hours before dawn and that men may eat his daily bread in peace, sanitation and comfort.

All of which reminds us that Captain and Mrs. Eagles set their teeth, girded their loins, and attended a recent section picnic wearing boots, citronella, and a sheter tent.

With two misprints in our first four paragraphs last week, we felt a bit discriminated against, until we glanced through a recent copy of the Herald. Social notes gives us the interesting information that Lt. E. A. Gans is spending a few days with his parents, Lieut. and Mrs. William Bullock. And Bill Ellison's ballyhoo of Tuesday's grudge fight between Walker Smith and Tony Cancella tells us that "Mr. Smith and Mrs. Cancella do not like each other." Ho hum.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

PURE WATER

Water is a prime necessity of life. Though not technically classed as a food it is an essential article of diet. In nature water comes in contact with many surfaces and therefore is particularly liable to contain impurities.

ure water is a chemical curiosity. It does not occur in nature. All water in nature contains impurities. Water may also contain the germs of disease and thus is a common means of the spread of certain diseases.

Water composes about 70 per cent of the entire body weight and its importance to the system therefore cannot be overrated. The amount of water required by a healthy adult in 24 hours is between two and four quarts, besides about a pint and a half taken with the solid food.

There are several sources of water including (1) rain water; (2) surface water; such as that from ponds, rivers, lakes, etc., and (3) ground water, such as that from springs and wells.

Rain Water is the purest. It is really water that has been distilled by nature. It receives impurities from the air and from various substances with which it comes in contact on the earth. Because rain water is soft it is useful for the laundry and the absence of lime renders it desirable for cooking. It is often stored in cisterns in small towns and in the country. Cistern water is good if the roofs from which it is drained are kept sanitary and if the cisterns do not leak. A leaky cistern is a dangerous thing. Impurities seep in through the leaks and contaminate the water inside. Rain barrels, once so popular, have been found to be more harm than good as they offer such excellent places for mosquito breeding.

Surface Water is safe only if the streams or lakes, etc. from which it is taken have been protected from pollution. Streams are the natural sewers of the regions they drain. Most of our large rivers flow throguh more than one state and therefore a city in one state may find it impossible to protect its own water source. Many cities dump their sewage into rivers, sometimes without thinking that possibly some city further down stream may wish to use the same river as a source of their water. For example Atlanta discharges the city sewage into the Chattahoochee River, which later supplies the drinking water of other cities, though fortunately proper filtration protects cities like Columbus. There is a natural tendency for flowing streams to purify themselves but too much reliance must not be placed on this. It is necessary to have the water tested to be sure that there has been no contamination. The same may be said about lakes. Here at Fort Benning our drinking water comes from the Upatoi Creek. The stream flows through the post for about seventeen miles before it reaches the point of intake for the water supply. Thus we have it in our power to protect our own supply of the water that we drink. This is the reason that the Commandant has decided that there may be no swimming in the Upatoi Creek nearer the post than the point where Randall Creek flows into the Upatoi. Of course the water here is properly filtered and treated chemically to purify it, but it is well to be on the safe side when we think of the serious distresses that may be transmitted by water.

Ground Water or the water drawn from the ground by means of wells or springs is usually satisfactory as far as impurities are concerned. The surface water is greatly purified as it percolates through the soil. This is particularly true when the soil is sandy as it is here. The soil can remove great quantities of pollution if there are no cracks or crevices. Cracks and crevices are quite common in limestone soil, so that in such country there are special problems in sanitation that must be considered. Here at Fort Benning there are many good wells and springs. The water has been tested and found to be pure, but the danger is that at any time the "drainage area," that is the surface from which the water drains into a particular well or spring, may become polluted and shortly thereafter the well or spring will be found to be contaminated. Of course one never knows when such contamination has taken place. Efforts are made to keep such surface areas free from pollution but one cannot be sure. For this reason people are advised not to use water from unknown wells and springs for drinking. If a well or spring is to be used regularly, the water will be examined upon request so that we may know jsut how that particular water supply stands. Therefore we can cooperate in keeping it pure.

It is particularly important for those who contemplates going on camping parties, hikes through the country or trips into places where the quality of the water is not known, to realize that water borne disease include some of the most serious known to medical science.

Here are some of the diseases which are transmitted through impure water: typhoid fever, cholera, dysentery, and many others less well known ailments.

Remember that any water can be made safe (provided it is not from a well containing dangerous chemicals) if it is boiled. There are no chemical wells or springs, even harmless ones at Fort Benning, except Sulphur Spring near Camp Liscum. Water may also be rendered safe by chlorination, as all who have been near an Army camp probably know.

A good drinking water should be without taste or odor. But do not think that the reverse is necessarily true. Many waters that are without taste and odor and which comes from beautiful little rippling streams, may contain the germs of serious disease. It is not too much to say that all waters should be regarded with suspicion until their innocence has been established.

be aroused in this under such direction?

The board in charge of the carnival is a follows: Corp. Brewer, Governor, Director of Religious Education at the chapel; assistants, in various committees — Finance, Concessions, Preparations, Entertainment, Business, Advertising, and Solicitations, under the supervision of Corp. Vick, I. S. D., Pvt. Hamilton, 29th Inf., Pvt. Tankersley, 1st Tanks, Sgt. E. Gilmore, I. S. D., and Miss Maxine Wolf, respectively.

All those who attend the chapel are requested to phone in at 336 to help in any manner they choose.

Tickets will be available Monday, June 27th, on which there will be a saving if purchased in advance.

Services at the Protestant Chapel are as follows:

SUNDAY

8:30 a. m. Morning Worship
9:30 a. m. Sunday School
6:30 p. m. Senior Endeavor

Of especial interest are the sermons by Chaplain Howard at morning worship hour, directed to young men. An invitation is extended to every soldier on the post to hear the reasonable conclusions of these sermons.

Every officer connected with this post, who attends church at the chapel or elsewhere in the city, or who is in favor with the program of the Men's Bible Class to raise the morale of this post to the highest standard in the army, will contribute in a large way to encouraging these soldiers now active in this worthy endeavor if they will phone the chapel office at 336 and inquire about what they can do to help in this program. Capt. Beatty, Service Company, 29th Infantry, addressed this class last Sunday morning and the response to his talk was encouraging.

THE FLARE LAUNCHES A THIRD PARTY

This is the open season of conventions, plaforms. keynote speeches, pointing with pride, viewing with alarm, nominees, candidates, favorite sons, steam rollers and the myriad other manifestations of political clap trap which go to make Democracy's greatest show on earth.

Thoroughly up to date as ever, The Flare is entering the lists. Having observed the well meaning but futile efforts of representative governments at home and abroad to deal with the problems which face our industrial civilization, we are convinced that our approved solution for saving the country is as good as if not better than those put out by the politicians. For one thing, our platform involves no tinkering with complex economic forces by deliberative assemblies which know nothing about them. Herein we believe lies its greatest merit. It isn't that there isn't something that could and should be done, but the burning questions of what to do and how to do it are problems not likely to be solved by popular vote. Our plan is to let the great American people decide on issues which can't make any great difference and leave the rest to our candidate.

We submit below a few of the planks which our platform committee drafted after a long and exhaustive executive session on the golf course:

1. We advocate strict observance of the Ten Commandments by the masses. While the inelligents may be permitted reasonable latitude in their interpretation of these long established rules of conduct, we believe that it would be a step backward to relax their application to the hoi polli. If they continue to break them they should be compelled to suffer the pangs of conscience—if they have one.

2. We favor the McCunniff four hour day, especially as applied to the armed forces of the United States.

3. We stand for complete autonomy as regards landscape gardening. Those who like it shall not be restrained in their activities and those who don't shall not be reproached for a lack of civic spirit.

4. We maintain an uncompromising position in opposition to public gum chewing exhibitions by attractive women.

(Note: This need bother no one since the act of gum chewing per se automatically relegates an attractive woman to the group unaffected by this prohibition.)

These are just a few of the principles upon which our great new party is founded. More are to follow. Meanwhile, those who have read thus far are wondering, no doubt, where our party stands on the most controversial issue of the day. On this we prefer to let our candidate speak for himself.

And now, ladies and gentlemen, if the highly intelligent Flare audience permits us to introduce to you our standard bearer, that peerless leader and silver tongued orator, Brevet Brigadier General Marathon M. Fuzzad, the people's choice for president. General Fuzzard!

"Friends and fellow citizens, unaccustomed as I am to public speaking, I have consented to employ the brief time at my disposal to tell you what I think of Prohibition. Personally I have always been able to take it or leave it alone, but what of the thousands of people who make an honest living out of the present state of the union? I refer not only to the struggling manufacurer of fusel oil tendin' his fifty gallon still in the heart of a mosquito infested swamp, but to the gainfully employed enforcement agents who will be swellin' the bread lines if we abolish their means of livelihood. Think of their wives and children and then think of the probablecost of a quart of Bourbon if the government slaps a big tax on it! Who would go back to the open saloon with its 15 cent drinks when three weeks old corn liquor is sellin' in Atlanta for two dollars a gallon, delivered? I'm for resubmission of the 18th Amendment all right but I ain't in favor of doing anything to raise the price of the necessities of life while the depression is on. I ain't sayin' that conditions is ideal—there's still too many stills bein' broken up before they are worn out and there's too much money bein' paid out for protection which increases the price to the ultimate consumer—but things might be a lot worse. Le's keep the statue quo while we have it and quit pussyfootin' about it. If them high hats who are hollerin' for repeal ain't satisfied with the stuff they're getting, let 'em change their bootlegger and shut up. This ain't no time for rockin' the boat."

It looks to us as if General Fuzzard had stolen a march on both the major parties by putting on a prohibtion plank that will truly satisfy everybody if they will only look at it in the right way.

MEMORIAL OF MYSTERY LAKE

A couple of weeks ago a congenial company of sportsmen, including such well-known local characters as Committeeman Kelly, Mr. Austell, the tire and gasoline magnet, Merchant Prince Hanna and Promoter Phil Fry, spent a more or less quiet week-end at Mystery Lake.

Always on a fishing trip there is someone who insists upon fishing, and on this occasion it was Promoter Fry. Pausing only for a bit of light refreshment he commandeered a boat and was soon whipping the surface of the lake in a demonstration of casting which Committeeman Kelly describes as remarkable. It wasn't so much the handling of rod and reel that impressed the onlookers. What they marveled at most was the Promoter's foot work and balance. Committeeman Kelly offered odds on each cast that he would go overboard, but it was not until the fifth or sixth that the angler made good.

There was no rushing to the rescue (the general feeling being that the Promoter deserved to drown) but when he came ashore, dripping like old Triton himself, the soft hearted Kelly insisted on dry clothes and proper precautions against pneumonia. He even tried to persuade Fry to go to bed between hot blankets but the Promoter was not to be kidded that way. Neither was he to be dissuaded from his fishing, for as soon as he had changed clothes he gathered up his paraphenalia, got into the boat

Mata Hari

CHAPTER II

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Alexander Rosanoff, an aviator in the Russian secret service, delivers a packet of confidential papers to the Russian Embassy in Paris and persuades Colonel Shubin, ranking Attache, to take him to see the famous Mata Hari perform an exotic dance. NOW GO ON WITM THE STORY

He got up and Rosanoff followed him. He wanted to answer Shubin's irony in kind, and he could not find any casual words. Instead he could find only questions. Who is she? What is she? Is she really Dutch, as they say? Was she born in Java, as she says? He was ashamed to ask. He would not have the older man think that he could not discuss a dancer like a meal, with epicurean discrimination and nothing else. He was afraid he would sound too enthusiastic, perhaps even too fervent.

Although the audience had been silent during the dance there was shortly a hum of talk. Even the woman who had fainted recovered and explained in a quick, light voice about her "migraine," and the odor of the flowers in her corsage. Rosanoff did not know any of these people, but Shubin bowed now and then.

"You prevailed upon me to come here," Shubin insisted, "against my better judgment and when, as you know, I should be at work. You said you could not leave Paris without seeing Mata Hari dance. Now that you have seen the Circe of Europe—not a word. Are you disappointed?"

They were in the little salon, where the servant was dispensing hats, cloaks and sticks. Some men formed a group about the door, and one of them remarked, "All the same—in war time—while men die. . . "

"Oh, well," said another with a tolerant shrug. "Some dance and some die."

"And some will do both."

Shubin turned his head and exchanged bows with the last speaker. The footman opened the door.

It had begun to rain, a soft, mild drizzle, which affected Rosanoff pleasantly. The air felt very fresh and now that he had seen a little of what the discreet hangings and the heavy walls of this seemingly close-shut city concealed, he was alert for more. The fact that Shubin had unbent released his eagerness.

He heard himself saying, "Do you know Mata Hari?"

He was not answered. Shubin went on to his car in apparent complete forgetfulness of his companion and his former banter. He gave an order to the chauffeur and then spoke almost as curtly to Rosanoff.

"I must go back. You can amuse yourself, I imagine. Report tomorrow night at my house for roders."

The young aviator was left standing, at a a loss, but in the next instant relieved. Shubin's brusqueness was no doubt due to the thought of the night's work ahead, decoding the messages Rosanoff had delivered and preparing the new ones. He would not be Shubin right now for the world. The rain fell on him softly, a murmur of voices by the door was enchantingly gay. It made him think of that Paris to which his father had sent him with his tutor not long before the war, a Paris of gentle, rosy sunsets, of flickering, feathery leaves, and the students and their girls, arm in arm, walking along the quays.

On an impulse he beckoned to one of the chauffeurs, not quite wishing to ask but compelled to.

"Can you tell me, which is Mata Hari's car?"

He was prepared to find that the chauffeur did not know. But the man pointed to a maroon-colored car and said:

"That is Madame Mata Hari's."

In a lower voice, the driver added, "I can take you, Monsieur. This is a taxi."

To Rosanoff, who had had only the vaguest plan beyond inquiring, this seemed an omen. A fatalist, like so many Russians, he abandoned himself to coincidence. Leaving the details to the chauffeur, he began to enjoy in perspective the zest of the pursuit. Shortly after, Mata Hari came out accompanied by several men in uniform and stepped directly into her car. Then his driver leaned back to tell him that he had heard her say, "The Pavilion, where Madame goes frequently." Rosanoff was delighted, for it had occurred to him that a private residence or Mata Hari's own house might present many difficulties to his entrance. Now there were none that he could see and he appeared to be headed for an exhilarating interlude.

There was no traffic at all on the Faubourg. He could just make out the car ahead and he though but was not sure that at intervals he heard the throb of a car following. They crossed a bridge, the stone arches above and their reflections in the black mirror of the Seine forming perfect circles. Rosanoff tossed his cigarette into the water and a shadow arch broke into little ripples. Ahead of them lay the Place de la Concorde. At this point they met other taxis, there were a few lights and some people in the streets, and they lost the maroon-colored car. The driver, however, seemed sure of his direction. They turned up the Champs Elysees and had gone on quite a long time, the way growing dimmer and dimmer. As Rosanoff was about to question the driver, the crunch of wheels on gravel told him that they had arrived.

They were in front of an old house half hidden by trees. It looked imposing but a little shabby and there were no particular signs of gayety other than flickers of light at the upper windows. Rosanoff had half a notion that the driver had tricked him. He did not believe that Mata Hari would waste her exoticism on this desert air. Nevertheless, the man had departed, he was alone on the street and with a sinking premonition of disappointment, he went in.

A flight of steps led from the street level to a cloakroom and a desk just as in a provincial hotel. An attendant pushed a pen and a book toward him.

"You are a member, Monsieur?"

"No."

"You will have to register, please."

The attendant then indicated that the gaming-rooms and the bar lay across the hall.

As soon as Rosanoff had gone, however the servant transferred his name to a card and, leaving the desk, chose a door which was partly concealed by a wooden screen. It opened into a small, bare office. Two people stood there, Mata Hari, leaning against a desk, smoking, and Adriana, the owner of the place. Adriana was short grey-haired, with frozen gray eyes and a little gray goatee. The man silently placed the card before him and went away.

Mata Hari

"Alexander Rosanoff," he read, "Do you know him?"

"Not yet."

Mata Hari wore a jewel-encrusted collar about her neck from which her dress fell away. Sometimes she moved and lazily shrugged the pendent golden width of one sleeve into place on one shoulder. The other was hidden and both sleeves hugged her arms to the wrists. Sometimes she leaned forward, the width slid off the shoulder. Her glistening back was bare to the waist. Below, the dress shone like a burnished armour. Her eyes were half-closed against the smoke.

Adriana, who appraised her charms professionally, said, "You look very well tonight, my dear."

To which she replied without emotion, "All the same, I am sure I was followed. Do you know that Dubois came to see me dance?"

"He's watching you?"

"Ever since the submarine job . . . I'm afraid the French authorities are very much annoyed."

"Hm. You knew about that affair . . . and I knew—"

"And Carlotta. If I were you, I'd look into Carlotta."

"I will. And into you, too," said Adriana simply. "Tell me this: If you thought you were being followed, why did you come here tonight?"

With a hint of malice she replied, "Because I was told that you wanted to see me particularly and because you've always taught me that personal danger is never to be considered in the performance of duty."

"You enjoy it, don't you?"

"What else do you think I do it for? The money? I have my choice of bank accounts."

"Still, thirty thousand marks for a few papers is a great deal."

"To me, no!" she said superbly. "No one would dare to offer me less! Many have offered me more. I have my court and my courtiers, the decrepit de Signac, Caron with tears streaming from his eyes at will, Ambassador B—— you have but to see him eat to form an opinion of him—the Prince with the eyes of a pig and the mouth of a coward, a grand duke, a great musician. And I hate them all! I am bored with all men."

COMPANY "E"

Almost every man in the company has put in for a fishing permit this year. I don't know whether it is the warm weather that is causing the boys to think of shady places or not. There is plenty of good fishing on the Reservation. So brush up on your fish stories boys. "High" Davis, our top kick and champion fisher, has been out several times this year. It seems that the biggest fish got away from him two weeks ago.

We have the following men in the hospital: Corp. Johnson, C., Pvt. Polk, Pvt. Norris.

They will be up and around in time to help Company E win another trophy for being high score riflemen of the 29th Infantry. Company "E" was high Company in the Regiment last year.

Company "E" baseball team is composed of Foreman, one of our good batters and outfielders. Akin is taking a bit of rest these days. He is one of the get away men.

Tinsley is going strong in out field and slugging well. When he goes to bat you hear them say "There's poison at the bat."

Ward is doing some extra good pitching.

Dean (better known as "Nine Ball") is making a good first baseman. Coach is considered an important man at that juncture.

Newton is one of our coming baseball stars.

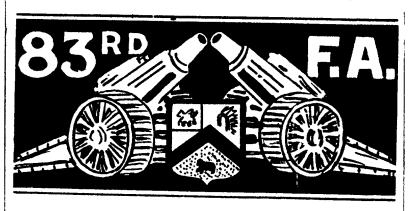
It has been unofficially reported that The Alabama Power Company stocks are on the increase, due to Corporal Oscar Feagin's recent visits to Pineapple, Alabama, which runs up this Pa-in-Laws light bill. We believe Feagin will fall victim to cupid's K. O.

Sergeant French has again met the girl of his dreams. Why don't you marry the girl, French? Sergeant Joe Poisso is still on the job at athletics around the company. He is keeping in trim for the swimming meet in the near future.

"Big Shot" Gurley's productive wad is practically exhausted (and how).

"Nine Ball" Dean had some tough luck in the game with the Richland Bears vs. 2nd Battalion. The 2nd Batts won 5 to 3. They would have won 6 to 3 but "Nine Ball" only made two bases on one of his famous circuit clouts. The old timer has seen his best days.

Private Graves is the post lightweight champion boxer for this year.



SHRAPNEL BURSTS

Since the Gunners examination is not as definitely indicated this year as in previous years, it has taken some time to pick out the subjects and have the two firing batteries decide on same. Still, the examination questions have at last been mimeographed and gunners' instruction has started in earnest. Lt. Howard spent every afternoon for several weeks apparently writing up gunners' examination but we have our doubts as to just what he was writing.

After visiting in Troy, Alabama, for several days Captain Mangum has returned to Fort Benning, to spend a little more of his leave before leaving for Washington and points east.

Lt. Heriot will return from Savannah tomorrow after spending almost a month near the ocean. He certainly was lucky to be near Savannah Beach while it was so hot for us here.

COMPANY "G"

Company records, morning reports, and duty rosters show that Company "G" still remains the stony bulwark of the Quartermaster Corps.

Capt. Wimberly left Sunday morning for a short leave to Little Rock, Ark. He will probably have something to tell us of the prevailing conditions between Benning and the Ozarks, when he gets back.

The play off for the championship in baseball of the 2nd Bn. if plans run smoothly, and there is no rain, should come off this coming Saturday. There's many a slip between the playoff and the championship. We hope to shake off the "H" Company jinx and make a bid for our third championship of the year; namely, football, track, and baseball.

COMPANY "H"

We cut quite a path in the 2nd Battalion's victory over the 1st Battalion Friday. Sgt. Bob Harkey pitched six scoreless innings allowing only one hit and that hit in the last of the tenth inning. Pvt. "Si" Slocum poled out a long single in the first half of the tenth inning scoring two men and putting the game on ice.

Private Harris T. Sollie has been appointed Private First Class.

Private Lewis E. Myers has been transferred to the 72nd Ordnance.

Private Riley Collins has been appointed Private First Class.

Private George W. Thomason has been transferred to Fort Sam Houston, Texas, to the 23rd Infantry.

The company has just been relieved from fire guard. Luck was with us this time as it rained every day or night we were on, and we didn't get a call.

Lt. Ports spent most of last week in Jacksonville, Fla., during which time he helped Lt. Wiley take that final matrimony step. Lt. Ports says that while there he had to sleep under two blankets so it was quite a surprise to come back to Benning and find it so hot. He really doesn't know what he missed last week.

Lt. Lynch left for Washington, Tuesday where he will visit his father-and mother-in-law, Major and Mrs. F. K. Ross, until tomorrow when he starts trying out for the Army tennis team.

Through the courtesy of Lts. Barnett and Brownfield, most of the officers of the battalion were priviledged to take a twenty-minute airplane ride last Thursday and Friday. Everyone was quite surprised at the number of points they could locate on the ground from a height of 5000 feet.

The Battalion baseball team seems to be improving a little every day, winning their first game Monday. If they continue to improve they should be in good shape about the time of the tournament.

BATTERY "A"

Pfc. Brantley is back with us from the hospital he has spent the last five months "gold bricking," as the rest of the outfit say.

"Goofie" Hadley is on furlough in New Orleans swimming in the Mississippi river, or at least that is what Boone thinks he s doing.

The King Fish has no reports to make this week except that he pulled the first Latrine Guard as Sergeant of the guard since he has been in the army, and he has been Mess Sergeant for twenty-eight years.

The Sultan has been restricted to quarters for the last two weeks and he hasn't anything to report, except that it is best to wear Sergeant chevrons if you have them, especially if you are out on the range.

The next day after the "Big Fight" few of the boys were smoking "Ready Roll" cigarettes and the rest had long faces. I wonder why.

Capt. Mangum was at the battery for a few minutes last Monday. He was pleased with the appearance of the men. He hopes when he returns from his leave he will find that all the men getting discharged are reenlisting for another three years. But that is just hoping, for five have already put in for special assignment to foreign service.

HQ., HQ. BTRY. AND C. T.

The battery is busy with gunners' instructions. The faculty consists of all the officers assisted by four N. C. O's who are carrying on the work on a scheduled basis. The classes are divided so that the men have four periods in the morning.

Sgt. Tate, our radio sergeant, is enjoying a thirty day furlough with his bride in Columbus, Ga. The battery extends its best wishes to Sgt. and Mrs. Tate.

Sgt. Dodd and Cpl. Pike journeyed to Harris County for the week end on a fishing trip. From all reports the trip was very successful, plenty of fish were caught and cooked by Cpl. Nahring who was a member of the advance party. They are figuring on leasing a lake located in the vicinity of the Steam Mill Road and establishing a fish camp for the N. C. O.'s of the battery.

The latest bulletin reveals the fact that Cutrer's boots are still unclaimed and will be turned over to the Salvation Army, if they can find anyone who wears 16 EE.

Sgt. Phillips has returned from Ft. Sill, Okla., where he completed a course in Communications and is now instructing the men in the latest methods used at Sill.

The admiral who was conducting an examination for the navy, was addressing the candidates. "Who, in your opinion are the three greatest sailors in history?"

"I'm sorry, sir. I did not catch your name when I entered the room," remarked the stude, "but the other two are Paul Jones and Nelson."

Slow Fights Disappoint Fort Benning Crowd

"Ching" Johnson May Fight Edgren

Negotiations are underway for a bout between Ching Johnson, Benning, and Frank Edgren, Wyo., cowpuncher, for the night of July 18th, at Doughboy Stadium, according to Captain Philip Fry, post athletic officer. Fans have yelped for another glimpse of Ching since he met Irvin Ashkenazy, elephantine Floridian, who folded like a portable phonograph.

Judges awarded Walker (Cyclone) Smith, Benning, a decision over Tony Cancella, Tampa, after ten rounds of tame, listless, uninteresting embracing last Tuesday night. The fight was about the poorest exhibition this writer has ever endured on the reservation. There were nomoments of excitement. No spectacular leather flurries. And the decision was just the reverse to what it should have been.

Fans were all keyed up for a gory "grudge" duel with the dukes, in which Smith and Cancella would fight like tigers. They fought, instead, like tabbies. Cancella, recuperating from a siege of influenza, was not in form. He found Smith's style of crouching and remaining in a shell rather hard to fathom. He hesitated tofire at Smith's head and break his hands. His most effective blows were rights brought up sharp to the eye and round house punches delivered amid the rushes. Walker kept a tantalizing left in the Tampan's face.

This writer gave Smith but one round—the fourth. Cancella won the second, eighth and ninth. Others were even.

Earl Rockey, Benning, 167, lost a technical knockout to Earl Johnson, 166, Miami, when he went down in the fifth claiming he had been hit in the groin. Nobody saw a low blow except in instances when Rockey himself delivered them earlier in the bout.

Blondy Parker, Benning, was awarded a draw with Jack Harp, Warm Springs, although Harp seemed to have the better of it. Both boys appeared to be in poor form—especially Parker who has either gone far back or was experiencing an "off night."

Spot Webb, Benning and Tut Taylor, Benning, went four rounds to a draw. This was a very mediocre match, spoiled by Taylor's shoving tactics.

Eight Cylinder Olds and Battling Brooks, a couple of coons, did everything but bite each other for four rounds. They called it even.

Round by round, blow-by-blow details of the Schmeling-Sharkey bout in New York were broadcast. Fans were of the opinion the German was entitled to at least a draw.

The great, great Grumpy Gordy, Benning's own, was called to the microphone and sang the "middle stanza" of "River, Stay Away From My Door." They gave him a good hand.

The 24th Infantry Band, a negro musical organization, helped spice things up by their excellent music.

The show as a whole, while inferior to the calibre usually seen at Benning, cannot be blamed on Captain Fry or his assistants. All they can do is match 'em—what the boys do after they get in the ring is, of course, beyond control of the athletic association.

Medicos Still In Lead After One Defeat By Tanks

By Bernard B. Swayze

There have been quite a number of upsets in the league since last week, and on the other hand a couple of set-ups.

The Tankers took the Medicos down to the tune of 7 to 6, ousting them from the coveted position of the undefeated team, never-the-less, leaving them in command of the situation, with four won and one lost.

Their game was almost as uninteresting as watching someone else fish. Errors were made from all corners of the field, and at times, the fans were ducking, thinking they would be hit with the next thrown ball.

The Artillery has improved its averagfie, by two wins during the past week, taking one from the Special units, and one from the I. S. D.

All the boys are rounding into shape fast, and with a couple more weeks, should be playing ball in good form.

The Kells are looking up, with hopes of taking the lead soon, while the First Battalion are right on par with them. The Artillery is favored to finish in the first division, with the Special Units trailing the first half.

The pitching this year has been nothing short of phenomenal for Army baseball, but this hot weather is going to tell on some of them.

The new find among pitchers is Zelinski, newcomer to the I. S. D. and should be placed in a class with Ward, Harkey, Holloway and Gilbert. The League standings are as follows:

| | W. | L. | Pct. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Medicos | 3 | 1 | .750 |
| 1st Bn. | 2 | 1 | .666 |
| 2nd. Bn. | 3 | 2 | .600 |
| Art | 2 | 2 | .500 |
| I. S. D. | 1 | 3 | .250 |
| S. U., 29th | 0 | 3 | .000 |

Is Boxing Meeting With Disfavor?

with the heavyweight division.

Boxing is sinking to a mighty low level in Columbus. The game would stand a little cleansing at home. There are three arenas in operation right now and the class of shows to be seen at them are, as a rule, very, very obnoxious. The same old faces appear every week and fans have every reason in the world to believe many of the bouts are "fixed" among the mugs before they ever appear in the ring. One fighter was matched for Thursday night of this week in a main event at one of these so-called fight arenas and the same fighter was matched for Friday night—one night later—for the principal bout at another so-called fight arena. Just how the management of the second fight emporium figured the fans could see a first rate performance from a man who had fought himself out the night previously is, I must say, a trifle mysterious to me.

The nation-wide slashing of prices and extra-this-and-that offers by retail clothing stores makes us wonder if the Quartermaster Corps will ever fall in line and offer soldiers two pairs of pants with each coat.

Cinema Calendar

for Grand, Rialto and Royal

AT THE ROYAL

(Beginning with Midnight Show: Saturday, 11:15 P. M.)

ALSO SUNDAY, MONDAY AND TUESDAY: Presenting, "STATE'S ATTORNEY", with John Barrymore, Helen Twelvetrees, Jill Esmond, William (Stage) Boyd and Mary Duncan. He knew all the tricks of law and women and made them both his mistress. Thrill with Barrymore as he tears a witness to pieces . . . sways a jury with smashing eloquence . . . trims a chiseling politician . . . or loves with the fire that's made hi mthe envy of all men. (Especially recommended by this paper).

AT THE GRAND

SATURDAY, SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Presenting, "SOCIETY GIRL", with James Dunn and Peggy Shannon. The battle of the classes—typified by a unique romance between an unlettered boy and a thrill-seeking social butterfly—froms the theme of "SOCIETY GIRL". A good picture.

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Presenting, "WHEN A FELLOW NEEDS A FRIEND", with Ralph Graves, Jackie Cooper and "Chic" Sale. The pathos of a boy's struggle to conquer fear and thus overcome a physical handicap provides the dramatic appeal of this highly interesting picture. The child star has his most effective role in which he is seeen as a boy who longs to play a share in the "back lot" activities of his friends but who is scorned by the other kids because of his leg brace.

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY: Presenting, "MYSTERY RANCH", with George O'Brien and Cecilia Parker. Here is a story that embodies all of the old West's flavor; wild, hard-riding cowmen, straight-shooting gunmen. It is packed to the brim with action but there is still room for a romantic love story to be interwoven as the film unwinds.

AT THE RIALTO

NOW PLAYING: Presenting, "THE FALSE MADONNA", with adorable Kay Francis. In this picture Kay starts out as an enemy of society, but ends the stor yas a gloriously sympathetic heroine. You'll enjoy Kay in this one as you've never enjoyed her before.

RIALTO

MONSTER IN MAKE-UP HALL OF FAME

The wall of Universal City's famous "chamber of horrors," its well-guarded, secret makeup room, is now graced by the photograph of another immortal of the great paint art—Boris Karloff.

Karloff's fiendish, scientifically-created monster of "Frankenstein" has been accorded the place of honor in the mysterious little sanctuary by the little band of makeup experts who have given the screen its weirdest creatures.

Karloff's monster hangs side-by-side the photographs of Lon Chaney's "Hunchback of Notre Dame" character; his "Phantom of the Opera" fiend, his diabolical Chinese of "Outside the Law"; and his sinister cripple of "Shadows." Bela Lugosi as "Dracula" occupies a prominent position on the eerie wall, as do the phootgraphs of Neil Hamilton in the "The Cat Creeps" characterization, Carlos Villarias as the Spanish-version "Dracula," Conrad Veidt in "The Man Who Laughs," and Edward Robinson as the Charlie Young of "East is West."

Karloff and his closely guarded monster make-up can be seen at the Rialto theatre on Sunday and Monday with Colin Clive, Mae Clarke, John Boles, Dwight Frye, Edward Van Sloan and Frederick Kerr completing the cast.

GRAND

"SOCIETY GIRL"

"Society Girl," Fox drama presenting James Dunn as a ring hero hopelessly in love with a pampered pet of society, and with Peggy Shannon in the title role, will be the featured screen attraction at the Grand Theatre on Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

Dunn, whose rise to a prominent position among the leading male players of the cinema began with his superlative performance in "Bad Girl," will again be seen as a representative youth from the masses in this romantic comedy. As a contender for the middleweight title, heis once more enabled to use the diction of the side walks that made his characterization of the inarticulate husband in "Bad Girl" one of the outstanding performances on the screen.

The locale of the story, which revolves around the romance of Dunn and Miss Shannon, is supposedly New York City although it may be any large city in America. After their meeting at a lawn fete given by Miss Shannon at her Southampton country home, the fighter and the society girl begin a whirlwind courtship that soon entangles them in more trouble than either had bargained for. Spencer Tracy as Dunn's fight manager and closest pal, is the one to resent the constant intrusion of Miss Shannon into the routine of the training camp. His orders are not carried out and Dunn receives a terrific beating in the ring.

How this situation is cleared up and the three once again reunited in friendship and love makes up the balance of the film drama.

Barrymore Stars In Dramatic Role At Royal Theatre

With John Barrymore in the role of a romantic lover and gallant fighter, a new picture which combines all of the elements of modern screen entertainment opens at the Royal Theatre next Saturday with a midnight show. It is RKO Radio's "State's Attorney," and it presents a great cast in an absorbing timely story which has been given flawless direction by George Archainbaud, the man who directed "The Lost Squadron."

Sharing cast honors with Barrymore is the blonde and beautiful Helen Twelvetrees. It isn't often that one picture presents two stars of this quality in roles seemingly made to order for their talents.

The peculiarly fitness of the production for Barrymore and Miss Twelvetrees lies in its combination of gay and tender romance with tense drama. Barrymore is given every opportunity to display the qualities that have won him the designation of "the great lover" and he takes full advantage of them. He also rises to the heights that have won him fame as a dramatic actor in the tense courtroom scenes. An emotional actress of rare ability, Miss Twelvetrees has an exceptional outlet for her talents in the role of a girl who prefers love to a wedding ring.

The picture concerns a brilliant criminal attorney who becomes a relentless and fearless prosecutor when drafted into the public service. A devil-may-care sort of fellow with vast personal magnetism, he is much sought after by women but remains true to the girl he befriended in night court, until he meets a rich society debutante. As his professional reputation grows, through the sending of a notorious murderess to the gallows, his romantic complications also increase.

A climax is attained during a murder trial which sees Barrymore seeking the neck of the underworld leader he once defended. It is a scene rich in soaring dramatic values. It starts when the girl he loves takes the stand and he is forced to cross-examine her. The crashing heights are reached in his burning plea to the jury.

and went at it again. This time he tried to prevail upon his benefactor, Kelly to accompany him, but the astute committeeman, smelling a rat, resisted his blandishments.

Five minutes later, Fry made his second voyage of discovery to the bottom of the lake.

Convinced at last that the prime perquisite for acquiring skill in the noble art of casting i s a firm and solid foundation, the stubborn Promoter devoted the balance of the week end to the more enjoyable features of such outings.

THINGS WE NEVER KNEW TILL RECENTLY

That Lieutenant C. T. Lanham, besides being the only poet who has been able to survive the shavetail ordeal of an Army Career, was once a chess fiend with enough of reputation to obtain a match with Marshall, the champion of the United States at the time. The Lieutenant didn't win the match but he drew one game out of three which isn't so bad.

That Major Truman Smith has had the unique experienceof having played bridge with the Pope.

It happened this way. When the gargantuan Major was in upper Silesia in 1921, he indulged in a few quiet rubbers with a Papal legate, one Monsignor Ratti. To quote the Major, whose appreciation of dramatic values is never dormant "And the next time I saw him he was on the throne of St. Peter in Rome."

INFORMATION BUREAU

Colonel Barry inspecting the Aviation Unit was making the usual welfare inquiries as to previous conditions of servitude, present living conditions, and the like.

"How long have you been in the service" he inquired of Private Holt.

"Two and one half years, sir", was the reply.

"Where were you last stationed?" continued the colonel.

"In Hawaii, sir", replied Holt.

"How do you find the mess?" was the next question.

"Right down the road sir—straight ahead—that large building on the left", snapped Private Holt in his best military manner.

The Colonel smiled and the inspecting group passed on—all except one disgusted top sergeant who waited behind to say something very personal and private to Holt about rookies who pull boners in front of the Commanding Officer.

ART EXHIBIT NO. 3

At 5:45 PM, June 19, Lady Lucy Williams, prominent young society matron, and wife of the celebrated Sir Roger Williams, broke into the scoring column with a beautifully timed entrance into the men's shower at Russ Pool.

Whereupon the jeering section, which included several of Benning's most boisterous and ribald males (Major Snyder, Major Lytle and Explorer Chance) led by Adjutant General Lewis' famed bathing beauty connoisseur, staged three-minute demonstration which shook the welkin.

Up to the time of going to press The Flare investigator had not been able to obtain an interview but we understand that Mrs. Williams was favorably impressed with the statuesque display of spray draped manhood.

REAL GASOLINE

The source of a certain fortune was under discussion.

"He made his money in Coca-Cola, didn't he?" remarked Mrs. Harding.

"Oh, no," said Mrs Jones, "He made his in Woco-Pep.'

"Well, I knew it was some soft drink," asserted Mrs. Harding, well pleased that she had come so close to it the first time.

CITATION FOR THE WEEK

To Major Truman Smith, departing head of the Military History Committee of the Erudite Fourth Section,—soldier, scholar, and high-powered lecturer—for four years of constructive labor which has resulted in setting a new mark in the effective instruction in his specialty.

Benning Briefs

We must rise and apologize for the errors which seem to have attracted so much attention, particularly as evidenced by Gunbotham's searching disclosures. But the very fact that the "conductor" of the swimming pool has found the errors is proof that he had to read the articles to find them, and we feel very flattered. Or maybe, we should say, the "conductor" of the Flare should feel very flattered.

Sergeant McN——y, Sergeant Major of the ROTC Camp, wants us to abandon our usual role for a short space and take up that of a reformist. With so much of that same spirit in the air right now, we should be able to do our reforming very easily, but we find it extremely difficult, nevertheless. But, to get down to brass tacks, the Sergeant wants us to spread a little propaganda to the effect that, while the canteen at the Camp is not apparently prospering, still Newsome is not only prosperous-looking but his very manner displays that freedom of spirit which is the natural consequence of a full pocketbook.

We felt decidedly in the need of a Murad when Lt. Howard Johnson, now of the Athletic Office, made the statement that he was "a little leary of the press." We don't see how anyone could possibly believe that newspapers were working for anything but "the people's best interests," and of course we felt embarrassed that we should seem so untrustworthy. Or, maybe, Lt. Johnson has seen the effects of the little paragraph on the Thanatopsian propensities of Captain Fry and Lt. Harmony last week.

Social Note: Captain "Mark" Hanna, Capt. Philip Fry, Capt. A. B. O'Connell, Lts. Ham Kelley, Stump Richards, Cecil Grimes, Charlie Sheen, Frank Olver, and Frank Bickerstaff are leaving today for the Muscogee Club, in the Dead Lakes, Fla. The group has adopted the slogan "Look Out Little Fishes, Here We Come." The best available reports have it that Capt. Fry is going along to disprove the statements of the Flare of a couple of weeks back and Steward Grimes is to look over the Lakes as a possible producer of fishy epicureanisms for the Benning tables. Another party will consist of Major O. N. Bradley, Capt. Walter A. Smith and the two bankers Mr. C. C. Willis and Bob Hall.

Sergeant McN——y, of course you'd never guess, has asked us to drop in a line or two to spur the memory of Harvey Haeseker and make him produce some copy. O. K., Sergeant, here y'are.

Nine Successful West Point Candidates Leave Benning

Several Benning Boys Are Numbered Among Those Who Leave

Nine young men of Fort Benning, successful candidates in the competitive examinations for appointments to the United States Military Academy, departed from the post this week for West Point, N. Y., where they will report to the superintendent of the military academy, as cadets, on July 1st.

Four of the young men, one of whom is the son of a local army officer, were enlisted members of organizations stationed at Fort Benning and are the successful competitors for four of the six army appointments allocated to the Fourth Corps Area. Three of the other appointees were also enlisted men who have obtained presidential or congressional appointments through competitive examinations, and the remaining two, sons of Fort Benning officers, have obtained their appointments in the same manner.

Private Eugene R. Patterson, Company E 1st Tank Regiment; Private Frederick Bell, also of Company E 1st Tank Regiment; Private Frederick H. Gaston, Hq. Co. 2nd Bn. 1st Tank Regiment; and Private James R. Gunn, Regimental Machine Gun Company 29th Infantry, are the four successful contenders for the army appointments. Private Patterson is the son of Mrs. Maggie R. Patterson of Clinton, Mississippi; Private Bell is the son of John R. Bell, of Troy, Kansas; Private Gunn is the son of Mrs. C. F. Holcomb, of Jacksonville, Fla.; and Private Gaston is the son of Captain F. H. Gaston, 83d Field Artillery, Fort Benning.

Private William B. Macy, Cannon Co. 29th Infantry, son of Louis W. Macy, New Bedford, Mass.; Private John H. Michaelis, Hq. Co. 2nd Bn. 29th Infantry, son of Mrs. Louise H. Michaelis, Lancaster, Penn.; and Private Clarence E. Gooding, I. S. D., son of Mrs. Lee Tayloe, of Clarksville, Texas, are the three soldiers who have obtained their appointments through congressional competitive examinations.

Charles Billingslea, son of Col. and Mrs. Clarence J. Manly, recently of Fort Benning is the recipient of a presidential appointment, and Donald R. Bodine, son of Major Roy L. Bodine of Fort Benning, received a congressional appointment.

All of the young men, except Private Gooding, attended the West Point coaching course at Fort Benning last summer. The class opened with 38 members, and within six weeks eliminations had reduced the number to thirteen. These students then were enrolled in the 4th Corps Area West Point preparatory school, whose class comprised, in addition to the 13 students from Fort Benning, 47 from other posts in the corps area.

The Fort Benning students were conspicuously successful throughout the course, and of the thirteen, four were chosen to fill places allocated to enlisted men of the 4th Corps Area. The two remaining vacancies were filled by men from other posts.

Private Patterson, who last January, reached the finals in the southern selections for a Rhodes scholarship, led the classes both at Fort Benning and at Fort McPherson in algebra. Private

29th Infantry Loses Another Of Old Guard

The 29th Infantry lost one of its oldest noncommissioned officers on Thursday, June 30th, when Staff Sergeant Joseph H. Coggin, of the Service Company, was placed on the retired list with thirty years active service to his credit.

Sergeant Coggins enlisted in Co. H, 2nd Infantry in October, 1903. Subsequently he served in Co. A 12th Infantry, in the 28th Recruit Company, and in Co. C 8th Infantry, until June 1914. From 1914 to 1919 he was a member of the quartermaster corps.

On March 31st 1920 he enlisted in the Service Company 29th Infantry at Fort Benning, and has served continuously with that company until the present time.

Sergeant Coggin's foreign service includes three tours of duty in the Philippine Islands, the first extending to March 13th to Sept 15th, 1906; the second from Aug. 1, 1909 to Feb. 15, 1910; and the third from March 4, 1912 to June 30, 1914.

During the World War he was commissioned in the grade of 1st Lieutenant, quartermaster corps.

Colonel Duncan K. Major, Jr., regimental commander, in publishing the order pertaining to Sergeant Coggin's retirement from active duty paid high testimony to his services with the regiment. "His record of service, loyalty and application to duty is an enviable one, and is one to be emulated by all men wh have the best interest of their country and themselve: at heart," said Colonel Major. "Th congratulations of the regimental com mander and the entire command are tendered Staff Sergeant Coggin upor the completion of his long service and cordial good wishes are extended for his future success and happiness in his well earned retirement."

As a final tribute to Sergeant Coggin the 29th Inantry held a regimental parade in his honor at 4:30 p. m. Thursday.

Camp For Boys Being Maintained by 29th

The 29th Infantry is conducting a camp for the boys of the regiment between the ages of eight and twelve years, at their Recreation Camp on Randall and Upatoi Creeks, which commenced Saturday, July 2nd, 1932. In addition to the sons of officers and noncommissioned officers of the regiment a number of other boys of the Post are attending as guests of some of the 29th Infantry boys.

The Camp is under the supervision of Captain Horace O. Cushman, 29th Infantry, assisted by Lts. Jack G. Pitcher, 29th Infantry and Lt. E. L. Brown, 29th Infantry, Corporal Hoffman, Co. H., and Cpl. White, Co. F., 29th Infantry. An attractive menu has been arranged which is being prepared and served by Co. F. 29th Infantry.

A program of sports and instruction is arranged to occupy the boys from breakfast at 7:00 until they are in bed at 9:00.

The following boys are attending:

ROTC To Stage Track Meet On Visitors DAY

Saturday, July 2nd, has been announced as visitors' day at the R. O. T. C. camp of Fort Benning. A varied and comprehensive program has been arranged for that day, the high spot of which will be the Track and field meet to be held in the Doughboy Stadium beginning at 7:30 in the morning. Many of the students have made prominent places for themselves among the annals of Southern sport and the talent brought out by the meet is expected to make it a fast and interesting display of athletic ability and one that is very likely to upset some of the Post records.

The events announced on the program by Major Franke, commanding officer of the camp are as follows: 100 yard dash (heats), 220 yard dash, 440 yard dash, one mile run, 440 yard relay, 120 yard low hurdles, sack race and shoe race, in the track events and high jump, shotput, discus, broad jump, javelin throw and tug of war in the field events.

After the meet the medals for the winners of events will be presented by Dr. M. L. Brittain, President of Georgia Tech, who will be one of the guests of the day.

At noon, the visitors, about 150 of whom are expected, will be entertained at lunch in the two mess halls of the camp, and the camp will be open t othem for the remainder of the day.

The students of the ROTC Camp have been kept unusually busy during the past week in the course of their field instruction work. The Engineer Company has been engaged in the construction of pontoon bridges across the Chattahoochee, the first a light footrbidge support by kapok floatsr, which was thrown across on Monday morning and the second a heavier and more substantial one with regular pontoons. Practice for the building of the second was carried out for two days before it was built and a race against time in the construction of the bridge took place on Thursday, after it had been built and dismantled. Ninety-one students were engaged in this work under the direction of Captain R. W. Grower, Grower, who was assisted by Lieutenants John M. Harman and Howard Kerr.

The Field Artillery students were engaged in firing exercises under the direction of Captain Edward S. Ott, commanding Battery "A," Captian Walter A. Metz, commanding Battery "B," and Captain John F. Hepner, commanding Battery "C." Four days of the gunnery practice took in subcaliber firing by the use of the 37-mm guns which are attached to the regular 75-mm field pieces. Regular service practice, with shrapnel, will be held on Friday and Tuesday of next week.

Lieut. Oscar C. Maire was in charge of technical instruction of the Signal Corps unit, whose studies embraced wire and radio divisional communications.

Departing Commander To Be Given Farewell Review On Saturday

Colonel John J. Toffey will take command of the 29th Infantry next week, succeeding Colonel Duncan K. Major, who has commanded the regiment for two years. Colonel Toffey arrived at Benning last Wednseday, and was assigned to temporary duty at Headquarters until he is to take over command of the regiment.

The official farewell to the departing commanding officer of the regiment will be given by the officers and men of the 29th Infantry on Saturday morning at Gordon field, when the entire organization will hold a mounted parade. The men will be garbed in the newest uniforms, and the entire transportation units will be turned out for the event. The battalions will march past the departing commander in mass formation. Colonel Major, during his two years with the regiment, has introduced many innovations and the regiment has commanded no small amount of attention from both the Army and civilians of the surrounding territory.

The officers and ladies of the regiment will give a farewell dance and party at the 29th Infantry recreation camp on Tuesday evening, July 5th, in honor of Colonel Major.

Colonel Toffey, who has been in charge of ROTC affairs at Headquarters, Second Corps Area, at Governor's Island, New York, began his military career shortly after the outbreak of the Spanish-American War, and was appointed a 2nd Lieutenant of Infantry, July 9th, 1898. He was promoted to 1st Lieutenant in March, 1900; to Captain in January, 1904, and to Major in May, 1917.

In August, 1917, he accepted an appointment as a Lieutenant Colonel of Infantry, National Army and was promoted to Colonel, National Army in May, 1918. In July, 1920, he reverted to the rank of Lieutenant Colonel, regular Army, and on the 12th of the same month was promoted to Colonel.

Colonel Toffey is a native of New Jersey, where he was born, September 9, 1874. He was a member of the initial general staff corps eligible list and is a graduate of the Infantry-Cavalry School, class of 1904.

He brings to Benning a reputation as an able handler of men and his term as commanding officer is expected to be as productive of results as that of Colonel Major, who, however, has set a very high standard for any officer who succeeds him, with his close application of training and organizational ideas.

General E. L. King Makes Short Visit To Post

Major General Edward L. King, commander of the 4th Corps Area, made a brief and informal visit at Fort Benning on Monday. He was received by Mjaor General Campbell King, commandant of The Infantry School, and after spending several hours at the post he departed late Monday afternoon for Anniston, Alabama. While at Fort Benning General King inspected the activities of the R. O. T. C. camp and observed the students at bridge building, field artillery firing and signal corps installation.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Alexander Rosanoff, an aviator in the Russian secret service, delivers a packet of confidential papers to the Russian Embassy in Paris and persuades Colonel Shubin, ranking Attache, to take him to see the famous Mata Hari perform an exotic dance. Laer, fascinated by the woman, he follows her to a gambling casino where she had gone to meet Adriana, owner of the resort, and an enemy spy.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"Too many victories, my dear. A surfeit. You're capricious, a little mad . . . and we have work on hand. Is Shubin still among your admirers?"

"Shubin! Oh . . . how simple, Adriana!"

"Not so simple. It is a question of shipments of munition from Archangel," he said in a matter-of-fact tone. "We want the ship lists and the ports of embarkation. I am informed that Shubin got them today."

"You will have them tomorrow," she replied in the same tone.

Adriana lit her a fresh cigarette. She did not leave through the door behind the screen but through an ante-room in which she opened another door that led to the ladies dressing-room. No one was there but the maid. Mata Hari nodded to her then regarded herself with intense, searching earnestness in a full-length mirror. She then crossed the hall to the bar.

Rosanoff was sitting at the bar, disconsolate, when he saw her. She was incomparably graceful, incomparably practised. She knew just how to place her foot so that the pliant golden stuff like a limber golden skin clung smooth about a thigh. Her every movement was a challenge to the dress to cover her, an unselfconscious reminder of the beauty unveiled in the dance, the more stirring to the senses in that the dress did actually hide it.

She took a chair two places away from Rosanoff, apparently without even noticing him, and it was then that he discovered that he had not observed her face. At the dance he had too dazzled and too far away. Now, her profile was toward him. The light melted over it and into the skin, and he found that the longer he watched it the more he was powerless not to watch it. It was not that the face was so lovely. He could admire a beautiful face without warmth, acknowledge its perfection and forget it. But hers was one of those faces which have the power of drawing the eye, similar to flowing water, with the suggestion of a scarcely perceptible mobility.

Some men had inevitably gathered about her at the bar. Among them, Rosanoff recognized the old Marquis de Signac tottering on legs as thin as broomsticks. He envied him, for the old man like the rest knew Mata Hari. She insisted that he drink a toast to her in champagne.

"But I'm not allowed champagne," the old man demurred. "It's bad for my heart."

"One little sip, papa!"

"But it's bad for my—"

"That's where my lips have been."

She put the glass directly to the Marquis' lips. He drank and choked. Rosanoff found that she could laugh. He laughed, too.

She then turned and looked him full in the face, a long, impersonal, heavy-lidded stare, as if she were examining a statue in a museum and would then go on to the next statue. Her eyes did, in fact, travel on.

The next instant she exclaimed brusquely. With an elbow she had upset her glass. The wine was spilt in a wide puddle across the mahogany of the bar. A man with a pointed gray beard called a waiter and said, "I hope it hasn't spotted your dress, my dear."

But Mata Hari appeared already to have dismissed the incident from her mind.

"You say you never gamble, papa?" she inquired of the Marquis. "Good. Then I shall gamble for you. I feel lucky."

Rosanoff moved behind her to the tables as if pulled by a string. At first there were no other vacant places and he took up a position where he could watch her and hear her.

"We'll start with five thousand," she said.

"Five thousand?" repeated the Marquis weakly.

"Isn't that enough to begin with?"

"Faites vos jeux!" called the croupier.

She lost it all and Rosanoff thought that the Marquis would faint. Mata Hari declared, "We'd better have another five thousand." She seemed to be going through a routine mechanically and paid no attention to the play. This time, there was a slight delay before the croupier made his announcement. One of the "pretty ladies" of which there were the usual number scattered among the tables, proffered the croupier a ring in exchange for chips. The man declared that it was against the rules.

"It's worth twenty thousand francs," insisted the girl. "I'd sell it for ten."

She held it up. The ring had a single, large stone in a queer, square setting.

"What an odd ring," Mata Hari said. "Let me see it."

She examined it with some interest, while the Marquis looked eloborately away. She then returned the ring, and the girl, gathered up her empty handbag and left the table.

Again the croupier called, "Faites vos jeux!"

Again Mata Hari lost. But this time she was annoyed. She brushed the remaining chips to one side and got up hastily.

"There's no pleasure in losing," she exclaimed.

The heavy gold skin of her dress just brushed the cloth of Rosanoff's uniform and emitted an electric spark like a cat's back when it is stroked.

He was desperate with helplessness for he felt sure that she would soon leave, yet all the approaches he could think of seemed too clumsy.

"My dear, you look sad. Did you lose, too?"

Rosanoff started out of his reverie and recognized the girl as the one who had offered the ring at the chemin de fer table. Involuntarily, he glanced at her hand and saw that she still wore it. She was a hungry-looking little thing, rather like a famished bird of prey.

"You had no luck, then?" he said, indicating the ring.

"No. Never any luck. But come," she said, drawing her arm through his," we will console each other. You had no luck either. I see it in your face."

"No, but wait—what did you want for your ring?"

Surprised and none too pleased, the girl retorted, "Not your beaux yeaux alone, my dear, I can assure you." "What an ideal!" she said. "As if it is not enough to lose at cards, one must lose at love, too. I am not a jeweler, selling rings!" She paused in what appeared to be the extreme of indignation, then finished quite calmly.

"Ten thousand francs to you, my dear, because you are a handsome young man with a sweet little mustache and a Russian, n'est-ce-pas?"

"I haven't ten thousand francs on me," said Rosanoff with a sigh.

"What! And you're a Russian! But all Russians are rich!"

"If you would let me have the ring," he pleaded, "I will give you all the money I have on me and send you far more than the remainder in the morning——"

But she burst out laughing in a way that made Rosanoff flush to his ears and declared that indeed, yes! she knew such promises.

There was obviously no clemency to be expected from her and Rosanoff had turned away sure that his only plan was blocked when she came flying after him.

"Listen," she said. "You want this ring for a girl, don't you? Yes, that's always the way. No sooner do I have a piece of jewelry presented to me than I am obliged to sell it and it goes to some other woman. Well—there's no use struggling against one's fate. How much money have you?

After a prolonged search through his pockets, he produced barely five hundred francs.

The girl made a little clucking sound of disappointment. Then, suddenly, she thrust the ring into his hand. "Here, take it. Mind you send me the rest in the morning! Send it here, to Mlle. Clothilde."

"Oh, I will," he said eagerly. "Upon my word of honor!"

"Upon his word of honor!' And when he left she was still muttering between ripples of bitter mirth, "Indeed yes! . . . . Upon his word of honor . . . honor!"

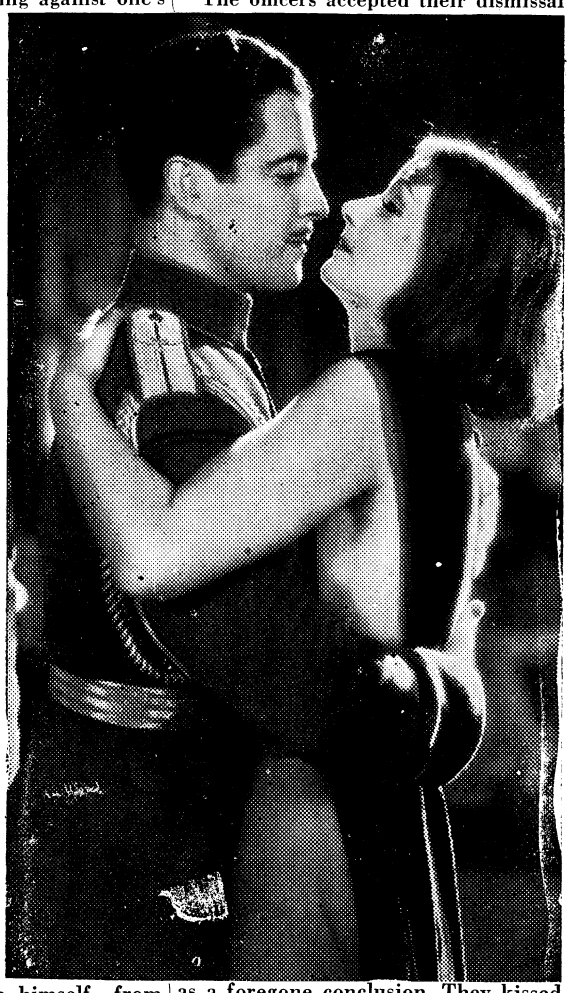
The bargain had taken perhaps five minutes to conclude, but to Rosanoff it had seemed interminable and he could hardly restrain himself from running through the rooms to find out whether the dancer had already vanished. In one of the alcoves near the bar he caught sight of the familiar golden dress and he was none too soon, for she and the officers who had accompanied were making plans for departure.

After the cocotte's shrill soprano, Mata Hari's grave, deep intonation was like a powerful drug—an aphrodisiac. The old Marquis had dozed off, and the officers suggested that they leave him and go on to breakfast. The dancer, however, said no, that he was an "old darling" and it was way past his bed-time, and she shook him, but gently.

"Come, papa," she said. "Wake up—we're going home."

And Rosanoff's heart sank to his boots. From the familiarity of her tone he guessed that they were going home together—the old wreck and the golden woman. He had been a fool not to anticipate something of the sort. But why one so senile? Were there not enough young men in Paris wealthy enough to please her?

The officers accepted their dismissal as a foregone conclusion. They kissed her hand and she swept past on the arm of the old man, who still blinked with sleep. A servant bundled him into a multitude of wraps, while Mata Hari stood by, shoulders, throat and dress hidden by her furs, only the profile showing as motionless in relief as if it were stamped on a medallion.



And, at the last minute, Rosanoff could not, would not, let her go.

Mata Hari

"Mademoiselle—I beg your pardon—just one moment."

"Yes?"

He stammered with the shock of being actually addressed by her, face to face.

"A little while ago—I happened to overhear—you admired this ring."

"Why—yes."

"You admired it—and— and I thought you might like to have it. Please accept it—as a token of my profound admiration."

Whether she was amused by his flounderings or touched by his obvious infatuation she decided to put him at his ease.

"I hope you haven't cut that woman's throat," she said, smiling but not yet accepting the ring.

"I didn't have to," replied Rosanoff more freely. "I merely bought it. For you."

The dancer looked him up and down curiously. He thought that she was even a little flattered and he plucked up enough heart to return the look with undisguised, if not too bold, fervor. Slowly, she took the ring out of his hands and slipped it on her finger.

"How clever of you!" she said, lost in some reflection. Then, raising her eyes, "It's charming."

The Marquis came up, ready for the street.

"Very well, my dear, we can go."

All in a moment it happened. Her face glowed, it almost dimpled with fun, as she turned upon the old man and said sweetly. "My dear Marquis, after all I have decided not to take you so far out of your way. It's such a bad night for your lumbago."

"This kind young man," and she put a hand on Rosanoff's arm, "is seeing me home. Good night, my dear." And Rosanoff found himself being gently but compellingly guided to the cloakroom and the stairs.

Mata Hari had a house in Neuilly which was almost as famous as its owner. She had collected therein the fruit of a not inconsiderable knowledge of the more obscure Orient and had arranged her possessions, it was said, with a great deal of taste. Instead of turning in that direction, however, she bade her chauffeur drive back to town and once more Rosanoff traversed a portion of the Champs Elysees, truly Elysian Fields, now that the dancer was at his side.

He was filled with delight and a sense of triumph all the more heady in that it was so unexpected. She was more enchanting in submission to his kisses than as the aloof woman in gold or as the disciple of Kali.

Her house was in complete darkness and the lamp which she turned on in an alcove accentuated rather than punctuated the thick black. He felt for her in the gloom and she disengaged herself with a laughing protest.

"Really, you are the most——"

"How can anyone be so young!" she said softly, and, taking him by the hand, she guided him over an expanse of gleaming floor until they reached a low archway. Here she lit another lamp, revealing a sort of boudoir, all arches, silken hangings, and queer circular benches for seats.

"Sit down here," she said, "and don't move till I come back."

"I'll go with you.'

"No! No!" she insisted, laughing. "You must sit here and stop following me about. Promise."

"Very well, I promise."

She remained a moment, studying him with a detached sort of tenderness.

"You are a very nice boy. What did you say your name wac?"

"Alexander Rosanoff."

"Alexander Rosanoff. I shall call you Alexis. You promise not to move from this chair—Alexis?"

"I promise."

Mata Hari gave him a little pat of approval on the cheek, and parting the hangings within a second archway, she disappeared. A light showed between the folds of the curtains. Rosanoff was in a fever of passion and impatience. Sometimes he forgot that he was not supposed to stir and rose to go to her, but always he returned to his seat! he was afraid to cross her whim.

At length she called to him and he started up.

"Don't come in!"

"No, no. I'm not."

There was silence.

"Alexis . . . ' from the bedroom.

"What?" he said eagerly.

"There is an incense burner on that table under the mirror. Do you see it?"

"Oh, yes."

"Have you matches?"

"Yes."

"Light it." . . . . "Is it lit?"

"Yes."

"Give it to me."

He almost flew with it to the hangings.

"But you mustn't look," she said gravely. "Close your eyes or you'll be blinded."

Black silk on panelled walls. Black wood on the dais upon which a black bed stood. Black velvet on the floor. Across the bed, oven silken pillows, a narrow coverlet of white fur. On the wall behind the bed a Buddha, embroidered in solid colors, squatted amidst the outlined, silvery branches of a huge panel. An Indian lamp hung over the bed.

Mata Hari who stood before the hangings, had released pale gold hair to fall about her cheeks.

It was as she had predicted. He was dazzled for an instant like a man with the sun in his eyes, for through the black lace of her garment and amid the ebony shadows of the room, the nudity of her body shone like white-gold.

The incense rose and wavered about her in tremulous coils.

She stretched out a naked white arm for the burner.

When Mata Hari awoke the next morning, she observed with satisfaction that Rosanoff had gone. This was as it should be. She gave the young man credit for his experience in not plaguing her with renewed protestations of his love. Pleasure was for the evening and the night.

He was really a charming young man, the Russian, but there were so many attractive young men in Paris, especially in these times, and so many of them approached her at the tea dances in the fashionable hotels which she frequented or blurted out their adoration at soirees when she danced. Afterwards, she forgot their names if not their faces, or their names, unless they could be of use to her.

She was a bit annoyed with herself at this incident, anyhow. Rarely did she permit her plans to be deflected and certainly not by some obscure youth. Rosanoff had done her an injustice. She had had no intention of going home with de Signac. The old man was devoted to her, as she said, "one of her court," while in return she tolerated him with an indulgence composed of affection and contempt. She believed that she had recognized a French secret service man at the Pavillion last night ( the wine had been spilled to attract Adriana's attention to him) and she had meant to deliver the Marquis to his home as a blind and then go on to Shubin's where, ever since Adriana's instructions, her real interest had been concentrated.

No matter how it suited her to play her part of the moment, Mata Hari had a keen mind, a clear grasp of objective fact, and an immense amount of resolution. Her lovers were seldom perspicacious enough to note that her body was strong as well as seductive, the muscles as limber from steadfast training as those of an athlete. It was her awareness of her own vitality which gave her such command over herself, kept her senses alert, her nerves cool behind the mask.

She sprang out of bed and called to her maid.

"Marietta, is it morning or afternoon?"

"Good afternoon Madame. It's half

Dispensary Dope

The Dispensary boys have been busy for the past week, examining Candidates for West Point. This might be a good time to start a "Warm Mit," You know all of these candidates will be "Shavetails" some day.

Staff Sgt. Dotson is enjoying a few days up in "God's Country" (Western North Carolina).

We have a new man on our roll call now, Sgt. Allison, (better known as "Sammie"). He relieved Sgt. Nations in the Medical Inspector's Office. All we ask of you Sammie, is to stay around two nights a week.

Feet-Locker Gilbert is doing some nice pitching for the "Pill-Rollers."

Pvt. Noe and Pullen are seeing very much of Columbus, since they bought a little Ford roadster. They seem to have some trouble about who is to have the car each night. Go on boys, and have your fun, but please don't fuss so much.

Sgt. Henery: "Have you heard the new song?"

Red Davis: "No, what is it?"

Sgt. H.: "There ain't no more."

Then you're sure to be satisfied!

CAR appearance counts . . . so it's up to you to keep your car always at it's best . . . and we're your best means of doing that!

The Quartermaster Detachment's school boy for the preceding eight months came home with an excellent report card.

Corporal Marshall E. Taylor, who recently completed the course of instruction at the Quartermaster Corps School, Philadelphia, seems to have received great benefit from his instructions. He passed the professional examination for the grade of staff sergeant given at the school with a grade far above the average, 90.92%.

This grade will put him high on the staff sergeant eligible list, which will be published sometime this summer. A study of the average grades seems to indicate that Corporal Taylor will be among the first ten on the list and therefore will have an excellent chance of being promoted among the "first three grades" sometimes this year.

The new eligible list will not go into effect until November of this year.

The only two members of the Quartermaster Detachment who stood this examination for staff sergeant, supply made passing grades. Samuel Bernard, who underwent the examination in Fort Benning, will also be placed on the list.

Wilton B. Childress, former cook of the detachment, will soon be headed for Panama. A "short discharge" will be given him and he will depart for the air service.

Every time we take a dish back in the kitchen to be refilled, over at "D" Co. Tanks, the cook on duty sings, "There ain't no more?"

Pvt. Carlisle was returning to Post from a three day pass, when an old lady boarded the same train and wanted a berth. Big hearted C. let the lady have his berth, and got off the train and spent the night in a hotel. Knowing that he would be late for duty, he sent his C. O. the following telegram. "Won't Be For Duty Tomorrow, Just Gave Berth to an Old Lady."

Mess Sgt.: To cook on duty, "It is real hot today guess we had better give the boys some "Chillie." --

Pvt. Alsup (On sick call): "Major Patterson my breasts hurt, would you like to get blood tested?"

Red Floyd: Say, Red I would like to go to Hollywood."

Red Davis: "Yes, you should, Bull Montana is retiring."

Pvt. Smith, the Dispensary Pharmacist, busy as usual making the army movie star. Epsom Salts.

On The .Q .T

By B. B. S.

Private Tuten, of the I. S. D., better known to his associates as Little Willie, is gaining prestige rapidly. Now he isn't a seeker of publicity, possessing a nature of the type desiring to be left alone. It behooves us, however, to pass on this morsel of scandal, that you might better know this wolf in sheep's clothing.

It seems that Tuten was out with Corp. Daddy Brown, of the same organization, and after whiling away the time as uninterestingly as two could muster the courage to attempt, they became hungry. Now "the snooper" says that when he found them, Tuten was cooking a concoction of peas and rice, known in the rural districts as "hop john."

Facts in the case show that the Tuten and Brown had placed the preparation on the table for service, all windows and doors had to be locked to keep the cat in. It was then said cat took matters in her own hands, so-to-speak, wrecking three window panes in her sudden flight . . . . Shall we call it a CAT-astrophe?

It is rumored that Pvt. Tuten went to Fort Monmouth to learn something about communication, but it seems as though he has switched off to the Cooks and Bakers.

It is requested that anyone desiring to learn how to prepare the dish known as hop john may call at Tent 14 at any time between the hours of 1:30 and 5:30 p. m.

Popular gossip has it that "Kidney Foot" Monahan of the Air Corps, is becoming somewhat of a songster. His latest rendition came when he and Lacy went to town recently, "K. F." was forced to bomo out the strains of "Sleep, Baby, Sleep."

Sgt. Booth has acquired a new name. Booth is on duty with the Second Section, but the boys have a hard time keeping communication with his various movements.

It seems that Booth has recently been prone to represent himself to a certain member of the fairer population as a sailor, known as Brown. Sailor Brown Booth seems like a good name, and some of those in the know will be heard to refer to him as "Sailor" Booth.

It is reported that Sailor's girl presented him with a watch, and in the presentation address, properly punctuated, told him that she would love him as long as the watch would run.

One day, not so long since, Booth's watch stopped, and he immediately went to the phone, called a certain number, and made the proper inquiry as to her future intentions toward him.

Nehi Company Offers Valuable Bridge Booklet

The Nehi Bottling company, of Columbus, has inaugurated a unique idea with its plan to help hostesses of the local communities in their problems when entertaining. In pursuance of this idea the company has recently made the services of a hostess available to anyone who feels the need of such experience, with no charge to the entertainer.

Another valuable service recently initiated by the local Nehi Company is that of furnishing one of Ely Culbertsons booklets "Culbertson On Contract" to those who purchase either twelve bottles of "Rums Dry" Ginger Ale for $1.50 or twenty-four bottles of Nehi Cola for $1.00. Mr. Culbertsons ability as a bridge player has long been recognized and his book is ample evidence of this ability.

Since 1922 he has developed, with the able assistance of his wife, Josephine Culbertson, the famous "approach" system of auction, which he originated, subsequently extending it to contract.

He is editor-in-chief of "The Bridge World," a monthly magazine which is the controlling influence on bridge in America. He is the author of "Contract Bridge Blue Book" and Culbertson's Summary," famous best sellers. He is President of the National Bridge Association. He is captain of the famous Contract "Team-of-Four" which won the International Matches (October, 1930) against England and other champion matches.

Of his wife, Mr. Culbertson himself says - - - "Without her tireless cooperation the task of contributing toward building up this profound intellectual game would not have been adequately, if at all, accomplished."

The book furnished as stated above by the Nehi Bottling Co., sells for $1.00, and this company therefore is rendering a real service to bridge players by making it easy to obtain the book merely by purchasing some of their products.

Three days after last Tuesday's Waltzing Contest in the boxing arena, the following advertisement was inserted in the Herald:

WANTED: Dancers For Marathon Dance. Must be good dancers, attractive, in good physical condition.

We strongly suspect that shrewd promoters counted the house and decided that the addition of lights, music and beautiful girls would draw even a bigger gate.

It is rumored that several of Bennings prominent leather pushers are demanding the inclusion of the Schottische and Fandange in the Phenix City contest, feeling, of course, that their fancy footwork will give them a decided advantage.

May we point out to these ambitious young aesthetes that the word "marathon" implies no small physical effort—and that after all, one should be in condition.

SOCIAL NOTES

One of the most enjoyable affairs of the week was the 29th Infantry Ride-Swim-Breakfast held last Sunday at lovely Jeff's Hole. Events which you will not see chronicled under the Social Highlights heading were:

(1). Roman Holiday. Mrs. Catron, wife of the prominent I. S. D. Chieftain, stubbed her toe while frolicking in the crystalline waters, much to the amusement of several male guests (who no doubt robbed birds' nests and pulled wings off butterflies when they were small boys, anyhow.)

(2). Murad Advertisement. Young Allbright, son of the well-known S-3, rushed up to a mixed gathering of the socially prominent, waving in his arms a garment which was—yes, children, it was daddy's drawers!

"Hey, dad, why dontcha put these on?"

NOTES ON THE DEPRESSION

The tales of Depression Hardships coming to us daily remind us of morbid moments spent reading Defoe's "Journal of the Plague Year."

Young Mortimer O'Conner, son of the local pole flash, was left to his own devices in the men's dressing room while his daddy toyed with Russ Pool sanitary regulations. Carefully rinsing off the soap (in compliance with the provisions of Paragraph 4), the senior O'Connor slipped into his suit and returned for his two-year old.

Young Mortimer was not to be found.

"Hey, Mort!" yelled daddy, more or less in the tone of the "Leave it, I've got it!" so often heard on the polo field.

The only response was a crunching sound from a dark corner of the room. Investigation disclosed the fact that young Mortimer was manfully attempting to finish off a partly devoured pale pink cake of aniseptic soap.

While the child wailed for more, aromatic spirits of ammonia and a few minutes rest brought Lieut. O'Connor back to a state approaching the normal.

"It's the depression" mournfully said George Crosby, Fort McPherson aide-de-camp. "The poor kids have to eat something, you know."

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

HOOKWORM DISEASE

The cause of hookworm disease is a parasitic intestinal worm. These worms fix thmeslves on the lining of the small bowel and there set up small hemorrhages. The female lays eggs which are expelled in the bowel discharges. If these bowel discharges are carelessly disposed of on the surface of the ground, the soil becomes seeded, the eggs hatch, and the young worm effects an entrance into a new host usually through the skin of the feet. Practically every person who goes barefoot in this part of the country has hookworm disease.

The disease is quite slow in its progress. There is a progressive, gradual loss of blood which causes anemia, loss of strength, and general weakness. The gradual increase in the number of worms brings about a corresponding increase in the anemia and a severity of symptoms.

There is no apparent individual or racial immunity to hookworm infection, all persons exposed to contaminated soil become infected. The degree of the infection varies according to the amount of contamination in the soil and with the closeness and length of time each person is in contact with that soil. Some persons do not acquire hookworm disease even though they are infected with the worms. This means that the number of worms is so few that they do not cause symptoms. This type of infection is the kind that can keep infecing others. In other words they are "Carriers" of infection whose careless habits result in a polluted soil.

Hookworm infested soil prevails throughout the south. Rural communities are more highly infected than cities. This disease where ever it may be constitutes a grave menace to those who live in that locality. The debility and anaemia from the loss of blood from the hookworm bites in the intestine bear a direct relationship to working capacity. Where hookworm infection prevails the true value of any force of laborers or workers can easily be measured by simple tests which show the pigment (hemoglobin) content of their blood.

Prevention of the spread of hookworm disease is entirely a matter of sanitation. If the intestinal discharge of all persons were properly disposed of, there would be no young worms six to eight years (the usual life of six to eight years (the usual ife of the parasite in the intestine) the worms already in the bowel would all be discharged and the disease would automatically disappear.

The soil on the Fort Benning Reservation is to a greater or less extent highly polluted. Personal prevention demands that you avoid contact with the soil. Protect the bare skin. Wear shoes. Infection by mouth through food or drink is so rare that it need give you no concern.

WHAT PRICE ECONOMY

"For what we are about to receive may the Lord make us truly thankful—Amen."

Whenever army officers and the adult membres of their families congregate these days the chief—yea, almost the exclusive—topic of conversation is the impending economy bill and the disturbing leave clauses which our intelligent statesmen have written into it.

The reason for the pay cut that all honest and faithful government servants are to receive during the course of the coming fiscal year is obvious. Since the Army and Navy got no increase in the heydey of prosperity when Congressmen were taking care of themselves and other voting wageslaves, we may not consider a reduction of our unraised salaries either just or equitable but at least we understand it. The government has to reduce expenses and a reduction in the pay of its employees by the furlough or any other plan does the trick. So far, so good—or so bad—depending on whether you are the government or an employee.

What we don't comprehend is the reason for the no-leave-with-pay proviso as applied to the uniformed services. It saves the government nothing since no one is going to take any more leave without pay than the one compulsory month which the law provides for. The only worthwhile end it achieves is to afford sharpshooting Congressmen, hostile to the Army and Navy, the sadistic satisfaction of knowing that they have succeeded in inconveniencing and irritating a few Admirals, Colonels, Captains and Lieutenants who have accumulated leave that for good and sufficient personal reasons they want to take in this blessed year of Our Depression III.

As Iago might have said:

"Who takes my pay takes trash:
'Tis something—nothing; 'tis mine, 'tis his;
The Q. M., Club and PX get it anyway.
But he who filches from me my earn'd leave
Robs me of that which not enriches him
And makes me sore indeed."

And what of the poor devil whose only opportunity to take his compulsory leave may be in July or August? According to the best available interpretation of the pending legislation this bird will start the fiscal year right by taking a month's "blind" all at once. This reverses Colbert's famous aphorism on the correct theory of taxation: "To pluck the goose so as to yield the greatest amount of feathers with the least squawking."

As long as the government is going to dock us one month's pay we can't see what difference it makes to the government whether they take it in July or next June or a little bit each month. It will make a whale of a difference, however to the hard pressed defenders of the faith who has to live, and maybe support a family, whether he be on leave or not.

Perhaps all of the needlessly harassing provisions of the great economy bill will be either eliminated or modified so as to permit its sufficiently unpleasant features to be administered with a minimum of irritation but, at this writing, we don't feel warranted in advising our faihful readers to expect much in the way of cheering news from Washington. It's a fairly safe bet that Aide-de-Camp Malin Craig won't be calling up his friends on this July 1 to wish them a "Happy Fiscal Year."

GEMS FROM THE THESES

This is in the nature of a somewhat belated recognition of the profound philosophy which a single year of association with the great minds of the Infantry School Faculty developed in the sterling young men of the late Company Officers' Class. (Note:—We used the word advisedly as it was the well-known custom of this distinguished Company of Caesars to stroll into the class at from three to five minutes after the bell.)

The following observations on life and other major matters were culled from the theses submitted near the end of the course.

ON OPPORTUNISM

Unlike Condi who hated the moral decay of his surroundings, Marlborough was quick to take advtantage of such conditions.

ON WAR

War is an honorable profession.

Warfare is described as man's greatest vocation and as an art.

However, there are three prime problems which are forever eternal in the breast of peace or war, administration, mess, and supply and training.

ON A DISTINGUISHED RAKE'S PROGRESS

Cronwell was a lazy and dull boy while at school. At college he did a little better. However, he did make great progress in debauchery and soon became a gambler, bully and rake of note.

ON INFANTRY IN CAMPAIGN

During war, one of movement, a soldier is on the way 360 days of the year. The other five days are the only ones left for fighting.

Jackson would rather lose a man by marching than ten in battle.

ON THE CONSEQUENCES OF THE HUMP

In the future the marches will be conducted by junior officers. The present company commanders are getting old and already there is a precipitable demand for other means of locomotion than feet. (Ed. Note.—This looks like a gratuitous insult to the Advanced Class).

ON BIOLOGY

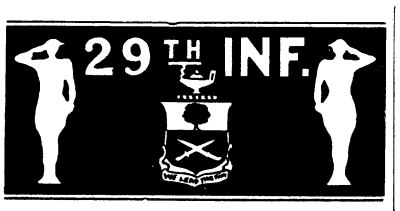
At this point a lead is taken from any successful business concern and

(Please Turn to Page 12)



Next Monday July 4, 1932, will be celebrated as usual with a big dinner and all duty will be suspended except guard. The Fourth of July comes at a most convenient time this year, following Saturday and Sunday.

We have an 18 horsepower 4 cylinder motorboat in the company for the boys to run the ducks down with this season. This is the fastest motor boat on the Chattahoochee. There are boat races at Bartlett's Ferry on the Fourth and they will be interesting.

One of our big shots, Pfc. Justice, was discharged Sunday but he has taken out a stack for three more years.

Acting Corp. R. B. Williams has taken out life insurance but he says do not make it effective until after he is promoted to corporal.

Platoon Sergeant Henry Mathews, better known as "Big Liz," of the 2nd Platoon has purchased himself a Ford roadster, whcih he named "Reveille Maud." He says "Reveille Maud" is one of the best buys that he has ever made.

Supply Sergeant Higgins of the Company has one of the swellest supply rooms in the Regiment. Anyone interested in a real supply room and how it should be kept come around and take a peep.

Private Cliett, Company Clerk, alias Savannah Sand Crab, and Bugler Friloux are taking week end and Fourth of July passes. They said they were taking advantage of the holidays and the railroad one cent rates.

"Big Shot" Carry, one of the Company slum burners after communicating with Honorable Huey P. Long, U. S. Senator and several other senators and high officials from Washington, has declined his transfer back to his hom at Galveston, Texas, after having the opportunity of transferring, on account of his present place. He says Company E is the best organization in the Army.

HQ. CO. FIRST BATTALION

During a brief respite from "hold and squeeze" tactics we will endeavor to inform our perusers that Headquarters Co. 1st Bn. is still in existence, yea, very much so. Our first group has completed its record firing with very satisfactory results. From a total of twenty-five men, two qualified as experts, thirteen sharpshooters and ten marksmen. Should I have said "high marksmen?" Anyhow the average score for the 25 was 291. Step up, 2nd Bn. Hq., and tie that.

During our "McNabb" season the following conversation wa soverheard.

"When the Lieutenant says "Dummy Ammunition load" don't try to stick your head in the chamber. That means you Pvt. Ballard.' Have a "leff" on "Antoin.'

It seems like all the boys in the company are trying to acquire one of those "smart tans" that are prevalent on this reservation. We believe that James Hendry has nosed into the lead with Cpl. "Ducky" Doucet bringing up closely in the rear with a few shades difference: and last but not least Cpl. Mills Oneillion's shady "phsog" looms into view thereby claiming all rights to third place. Nuff sed.

If anyone cares to "listen-in" on some choice conversation just visit the pits between the hours of nine and ten o'clock. A. M. and listen to the debate, Durden vs. Clark, I mean it is something really worth while.

The "magic carpet" will now take us back to the 600 yard firing point. Hurrah!

The Intra-Company volley-ball games have about reached their climax with the following percentages listed.

Benning Briefs

information to fill a column has always been the newspaperman's lament but we're proud to say thatwe've at least held off saying anything about the National Conventions, so far, and wlil try to restrain ourselves as long as possible. There's too much other editorial opinion, much more ably expressed, to justify our writing our own views. And, anyway, our readers would probably not be interested, even if they've managed to read this far. So long.

By the time that this is published the championship will be decided. The winner of this series will be given a three day pass and a free ticket to the Main Theatre. Come on you "spark-in radio section" let's go to Headland, Alabama.

Oh! by the way, have you heard Mike Carpenter's theme song?

"No," I'm going to California, where they sleep out every night."

Luck to you Mike. Here's hoping that the proverbial wolf is conspicuous by his absence from the door. Yea Bo, Headquarters Co. now signing off. Will be on the air again upon the arrival of the longed for "cinnamon rolls."

Fine Pitching; Poor Fielding Feature Games

By Bernard B. Swayze

The past week has found baseball tightening up as far as the positions of the teams are concerned. The fielding has been of the rottenest thinkable type while the pitching has been far above average.

In some instances the hitting has been nothing short of phenomenal. For instance, there is Prophet, first sacker for the Kells. Sam got four hits for five tries one day, and the next game, delivered three for four. That is battling well over the seven hundred mark, and was the big factor in giving him the lead in batting averages for the season.

Prophet takes the lead, with eleven hits for twenty-two chances, while Sullivan has five for ten, knotting the averages at .500, leaving the hitting honors to Sammy.

The Medicos and Second Battalion are tied in a knot on top of the league, both teams having taken first place five times, while they each lost one. This gives both teams an average of .833.

The Tankers and Irish are in a deadlock at .500 ecah, winning three and losing three. This sent the Artillery down two games while the I. S. D. gained two, putting the two teams in a position where they will cast mean looks at one another until the tie is broken from .333 per each.

Now the Special Units have a good ball club if those boys ever learn to field a ball. They have fair pitchers, and one of the best catchers in Potter. (Their stickwork, led by Banks, the daddy of third basemen at Fort Benning is irreproachable). Some day soon they are going to cause a bust up with a bunch of wins, and leave that .116 inthe cellar where it belongs.

These baseball vultures who play every day, have been after us for something in the way of batting averages. Get out your handkerchiefs, boys. Take it on the chin like an old woman, for here they are, and there is now way you can help it.

The averages are those .300 or better. No player is in this list who hasn't been tobat more than nine times. Next week there will be fewer in the list, and some of you fellows can come out of the dozens, so to speak.

Edgren Is To Box Ching Johnson On July 12th

Negotiations have been perfected for Ching Johnson, Benning, to meet Frankie Edgren, of Wyoming, in Doughboy Stadium on the night of July 12th, according to Captain Philip C. Fry, athletic officer.

Edgren is known to be a tough man in the ring and Johnson should have a much harder time disposing of him than he did Irvin Ashkenazy, of Florida, the last time Ching appeared in the stadium. Johnson is training both of his dukes in order that he may punch with equal steam with either of them. This accomplished, he will be hard to handle.

Cotton Batton, hard-hitting 24th Infantry fighter, will battle "Panther Jim," of Pittsburgh, in the eight round semi-final. This should be a war from start to finish as "Panther Jim" is known to be a regular wildcat in the ring himself.

Good preliminaries are also being lined up and every effort will be made to shape up one of the best boxing shows presented at Benning in a long time. Hard hitters will be given the preference over boys relying on their scientific knowledge this time and the crowd should get more of a kick out of the program.

24th Infantry

Our recreation room is fast passing from a fondly cherished dream to an actuality. No pains have been spared in changing this barnlike room into a beautiful and restful lounge where one may relax in comfort, and many pleasant hours are anticipated therein by the entire band personnel.

We have been fairly busy since the last issue of the Herald having played four dances, four concerts and a parade for the R. O. T. C. students. This with our daily practice keeps us in good playing condition.

A lady of Fort Benning suggested to the writer that the staff sergeant's Ford be dubbed, "The Shuffle Along." Wonder why?

Both orchestras have changed their winter costume for a light summer uniform with each orchestra leaning towards white flannel trousers. These uniforms seem to be quite the thing as far as appearance goes and as for comfort they are the real thing.

Pvt. Slone Williams is enjoying a reenlistment furlough and has been as far from the post as Columbus and Albany, Georgia. He reports depression as being a fact and not a dream.

The bathing pool is proving to be quite an attraction for two members of the Three Brown brothers but the public is wondering why the third member is always conspicuous by his absence.

The Band Leader fractured an ankle playing tennis last week. This, dear friends, explains the boot and shoe worn by the above mentioned.

Baseball Players Wanted. All enlisted men who can run, jump, play football and baseball or do any athletic stunts, have a standing invitation to reenlist or transfer to the "House of David." We assure you a Square Deal.

SHRAPNEL BURSTS

The most important event of the week was the arrival of an eight pound son to Lieut. and Mrs. Lucas, on Wednesday morning. Although the father just recently transferred to the Field Artillery from the Infantry, we hope that the son will grow up to be an Artilleryman. The proud father upheld the custom of passing around cigars among the officers of the battaion. Although this is the first baby that has been born in the battalion for some time, the officers, who smoke, certainly enjoyed the cigars and acted as if they wished something like this would happen more often.

Perhaps we can profit by the mistakes of the Tanks before they played the Medicos in baseball. It was learned that two of the Tank baseball players reported to sick call and were sent to the Hospital the day before they played the Medicos. For that reason, the Artillery will put out an order to the effect that no Artlilery baseball player will report for sick call during the week preceding the game with the Medicos.

Lt. Heriot returned from leave last Friday but was put on Post Special Duty today as an instructor in the enlisted men's West Point preparatory course. This week he has been safety officer for the R. O. T. C. firing and although he got quite tanned in Savannah, the sun out on Davidson Hill has almost blistered him.

Monday July 4th will be a Holiday for most every one except "A" Battery who will fire the salute of 48 guns.

BATTERY "A"

The battery has started gunner's instructon. We are getting instruction in maneuvers limbered, service of the piece, firing data etc. It is a great life if you don't weaken. It keeps your mind off of desertion.

The Sultan isn't trusted any more, the charge of quarters has to sleep in the same room with him. Well, Sultans were never trusted anyway. By the way folks, the Sultan happens to be supply sergeant.

The Bolsheviki has asked for two passes in three years. He was refused the first pass and when he asked for the second pass to go home over the week end he was put on a week's K. P. The Kingfish reports that he is going to give Bolsheviki a "Square Deal." The reason for the "Square Deal' was due to the fact that the Kingfish made the remarks that he wasn't worried over any man that didn't weigh over 170 lbs. Bolsheviki weighed over at the Q. M. yesterday and weighed 172 1-2 lbs.

Pfc. Dunn, better known as "Dynamite Dunn," was discharged the 27th, and had in for a special assignment to Hawaii, but since they put him doing charge of quarters he reenlisted for "A" Battery. Good luck "Dynamite" would like to see you get the couple of stripes.

Sorry to say, but we won't have any more gold bricks in "A" Battery, especially the acting Corporals, when they give an order they will have to draw pay for it. We're glad of that, we will have several more to do watering details, table waiters and K. P. Thanks for that order.

Pvt. Neely has been staying in reading the paper and seems to be in a hevay fog, can't imagine what's wrong.

"Sex Appeal" Muscrove has been getting entirely too many phone calls lately. He must be giving the girls a treat, by telling them about the trip to Washington. Slow down Hot Stuff, give us poor boys a chance.

If any one wants tofind out any points about the Championship fight, call Cpl. Rogers, Pvt. McCall and Kingfish about it, they can give all the information you would like to know.

At Royal Starting Monday

GRETA GARBO, JOHN BARRYMORE, JOAN CRAWFORD, WALLACE BEERY and LIONEL BARRYMORE in "GRAND HOTEL"

Cinema Calendar

for Grand, Rialto and Royal

AT THE RIALTO

SUNDAY: Presenting, "THE MIRACLE MAN," with Sylvia Sidney, Chester Morris, Irving Pichel, John Wray, Robert Coogan and Hobart Bosworth. He grips her arm in a steel-like clutch . . . "you're going my way—or else!", he snarls . . but he can't scare her She's under the spell of "THE MIRACLE MAN"—and she realizes that one day her man too must bow to the power of a will more strong than his own

WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY: Presenting, "STEPPING SISTERS", with Louise Dresser, Minna Gombell, Jobyna Howland and William Collier, Sr. You'll laugh from the hips up while these thundering, blundering ex-chorines kick the props and property out from under the four hundred. Three retired chorus girls go society, mingle with the snobs but tingle with the snubs.

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY: Prescenting, "GHOST VALLEY," with Tom Keene and Merna Kennedy. This is an innovation in Western pictures. It is also a shocker film that is the current vogue. The story concerns a sinster conspiracy to gain control of an abandoned mine.

AT THE GRAND

SATURDAY AND SUNDAY: Presenting, "NIGHT WORLD", with Lew Ayres, Mae Clark, Boris Karloff, Dorothy and many others. What goes on behind the gay music and carefree festivity of Broadway's night clubs? What takes place behind the silken drapes and softened lights?

MONDAY AND TUESDAY: Presenting, "ATTORNEY FOR THE DEFENSE", with Constance Cummings and Edmund Lowe. This is the story of the erratic and dramatic life of a man, who as a public prosecutor, turns persecutor to reach the Governor's chair, until the death of an innocent man turns him disgustedly away from the district attorney, moves in the most active court in the world—New York City's criminal court.

WEDNESDAY ONLY: Presenting, "SKY BRIDE", with Jack Oakie, little Robert Coogan and Richard Arlen. A real airplane thriller. See some of the most hair-raising airplane stunting ever recorded for the screen.

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY: Presenting, "DESTRY RIDES AGAIN", with Tom Mix. The popular screen cowboy appears in his first talkie. You'll enjoy him all the more when permitted to hear Tom's voice. This is an extraordinarily good story, too.

AT THE ROYAL

(Beginning with Midnight Show, Saturday night, 11:15 P. M.)

SUNDAY: Presenting, "FORGOTTEN COMMANDMENTS" with Sari Maritza, Gene Raymond, Marguerite Churchill and Irving Pichel. Are marriage vows something to be sneered at? Is there no protection for those who want love, love that is loyal and fine?

MONDAY, TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Presenting, "GRAND HOTEL", with Greta Garbo, John Barrymore, Joan Crawford, Wallace Beery, Lionel Barrymore, Lewis Stone and Jean Hersholt. Two shows daily: 3:30 P. M. and 8:30 P. M. More detailed account of picture elsewhere in this issue. This paper strongly recommends "GRAND HOTEL".

RIALTO

"THE MIRACLE MAN"

"'The Miracle Man' proved far more interesting to work on than the average picture because there is only one part in the entire production which may be called a straight role," said Director Norman McLeod recently.

He poins out the diversity of characters as follows:

Sylvia Sidney plays a girl crook, hardened against life, cynical and scheming, who changes under the spell of the Miracle Man.

Chester Morris is a two-fisted, brutal leader of a gang of crooks, a scoffer at anything good in life until his regeneration.

Irving Pichel is seen as an atheist who defies the power of God unti his own son is cured by a miracle.

John Wray, as The Frong, is an obvious character actor with his body twisted into grotesque shapes.

Robert Coogan is a pitiful little crippled boy.

Ned Sparks appears as a "deadpan" pickpocket.

Hobart Bosworth is the beloved, kindly, religious faith healer.

Boris Karloff has another of his weird character roles as the half-caste menace.

Virginia Bruce, as a frail invalid, and Lloyd Hughes, as the millionaire brother, both have character parts.

Florine McKinney, as the sweet, unsophisticated daughter of Frank Darien, the character hotel owner, has the lone straight part.

GRAND

"SKY BRIDE"

Flying a plane that carries a motion picture cameraman engaged in the filming of fast action air scenes for an aviation picture ranks with the most difficult assignments a pilot might receive, according to Captain E. H. Robinson, technical advisor on Paramount's new air adventure, "Sky Bride," featuring Richard Arlen, Virginia Bruce, Jack Oakie and Charles Starrett, which is the Grand theatre's attraction for next Wednesday.

No matter how difficult the stunts of the performnig flyers may be, the pilot of the camer ship is called upon to execute far more difficult tricks, he said.

This pilot must keep out of the way of the ship maneuvering before the camera, but he must always keep his plane in position to allow his cameraman the most advantageous shot of the action.

Robinson, who has served Paramount before as technical advisor on "Wings," "The Legion of the Condemned" and "Young Eagles," is piloting the camera ship engaged in capturing thrilling air action for "Sky Bride."

Famous Novel In Picture Form Begins At Royal

Director Edmund Goulding knew exactly what impressions he was attempting to create and what audience reactions he was expecting when he began actual filming of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's all-star "Grand Hotel," which comes to the Royal Theatre Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

A visitor to the "Grand Hotel' set imediately became impressed with the authentic atmosphere and the bustle and stir of it all and jotted down his impressions:

Outside a frigid gust from the snow-peaked mountains . . within, a stuffy warmth . . laden with many smells . . perfumes . . cigarettes . . hot lights . . it is the Yellow Room . . otherwise a rathskeller . . in the Berlin hostelry made famous by Vicki Baum . . but which doesn't exist . . no hotel as lavish as this one . . the settings Cedric Gibbons designed for the new film . . here is a grand circular motif . . gold . . black . . silver . . red . . striking tones . . sharpiy contrasted in modernistic panels . . what a crowd of Continentalities . . where did the casting office round up such realistic human atmosphere for the settings? . . Girls . . the Berlin boulevard type . . men . . sophisticates . . suave . . can they be only extras?

There is Director Edmund Goulding . . in a pullover sweater and light trousers . . hoisted to shoe-top length . . harried of appearance . . and who wouldn't be? . . what with Garbo . . Beery . . two Barrymores . . Crawford . . and dozens of others in his cast . . Dave Snell and his orchestra are mounted upon a circular dias . . high above the heads of the dancing throng . . what an idea for a New York night club . . and such a bar . . circular too . . and high stools must be five feet off the floor . . Lewis Stone's make-up is ghastly on one side of his face . . he plays the shell-shocked doctor who keeps asking for messages . . and none ever come . . floor lately, something is wrong somewhere.

The members of the organization are wondering how they can raise the price of the dance. Hendry says, wish they would put out Jaw Bone tickets.

The men in the Detail and 4th Section have a window and a half assigned to each man, and believe me they guard it like they would their best girl.

Every time some one knocks on the Orderly Room door, the First Sergeant says, "Sorry but we're not approving anything, because each and every one wants to put in for a short discharge or a transfer.

BATTERY "C"

The Gunners' instructions and examinations are progressing slowly but are showing results. The new way in which the instructions are conducted, and the better arrangement of groups adopted for the examinations, gives each man a chance to increase and improve his knowledge in his specific duty and should be of great benefit to the battery.

We are still awaiting the verdict as to our trip to Albany. We like to make this trip not only for the honor of firing the salute on July 4, but also because the people of Albany have treated the men of the 83d with so much consideration on previous trips. Our firing on the pistol range has ceased, no more ammunition. For the one arm the artillery-man has to his disposal in his own defense, the War Department has no more ammunition. If the cost of the .45 calibre ammunition is too great, the War Department might adopt the following kind of ammunition for rifle and pistol ammunition. Make wooden bullets, both for rifle and pistol, use the same brass cartridge case, and a little amount of powder to send the bullet on its way. Bullets as here prescribed are in use in various foreign countries. A wooden rifle bullet will penetrate a paper target up to 100 meters, so a wooden pistol or revolver bullet can be used for the regular ranges used for pistol and revolver firing.

MATA HARI

past one."

Mata Hari felt really ashamed. She had wasted one whole day by a reckless caprice, for it was impossible to arrange her business with Shubin at the Embassy.

"Bring my chocolate now," she said curtly. "And then ring up Colonel Shubin and say I will dine with him tonight in his rooms. I don't wish to speak to him. Say I am in my bath."

The maid had already opened several boxes of flowers. None of them were important, all were the usual tributes that began the day—except one This box Mata Hari's eyes chose immediately because of its distinctive shape. However, she could never be sure that she was not mistaken until she had counted the exact number of orchids and made certain that the card which lay among them was of the us ual kind of paper.

Some words had been scrawled upon it, a French proverb the equivalent of the English exhortation to "make hay while the sun shines." It might have meant anything or nothing.

But when the dancer took it to her dressing-table, she picked up one of the square bottles, seemingly like all the other bottles thereon and poured a little of the fluid, which smelled like a heavy perfume, on the card. And after a little while, other words appeared faintly between the lines of the proverb.

"They" would be waiting tonight. Just that.

These words, too, might have had the most ordinary connotations. It was hardly necessary to destroy the card (which she did, however, setting fire to the bits among the incense in the burner). Trust Adriana to be prepared for every alternative! He had, of course, kept his operatives near Shubin's house last night, in case she might need to pass on the documents, and the card was both a warning that she was finish the work tonight and a reassurance that he would supply her with help.

The warning made her angry. Although she deferred to Adriana's shrewdness, and knew that he had much authority, she considered him merely a useful go-between. She couldn't be always running to Spain or Holland and it was dangerous to have her trips end too frequently in dancing engagements in Berlin or Vienna. But she could consult with the highest authorities if she cared to! She was certainly of far greater importance than the run of operatives whom Adriana had in his charge, nor would she permit him for a moment to act as if she were accepting orders from him instead of relayed messages.

THE FLARE

the material put in the best possible condition to allow environment to gain the upper hand before heredity can assert itself to any marked degree.

MINOR CORRECTION

Last week we ran a story about Promoter Phil Fry's deep-sea diving adventure. It came out under the heading "Memorial of Mystery Lake." Some of our heads are intended to be subtle but in this case the printer extended subtlety to the point of obscurity. What we wrote was "Mermaid of Mystery Lake."

PERFECT RECEPTION

Mrs. H. B. Lewis, whose talent for clever, penetrating and sometimes devastating comment on people and things is well recognized, had just invited a group of friends to hear the opening of the Democratic Convention over the radio. (a as in at.)

"You won't get anything but static in this weather," remarked a disinterested bystander.

"Oh that's all right," replied Mrs. Lewis, "You will think it's the Democrats."

ANYTHING TO GET OUT OF IT

The protective devices which the male of the species employs in his effort to escape the soiree of packing for a move are many and varied. One of the most ingenious we have heard of recently was invented by Sheriff Tuttle, the celebrated golf-course detective. The Sheriff arranged for a protracted series of dental appointments to coincide with the peak of the crating activities.

ABSENTEES FROM RUSS POOL

Some time ago we threatened to publish the names of former Swimming Pool addicts whom the exacting sanitary regulations—or something—is restraining from their accustomed skitterings in Benning's bathtub.

We have had to proceed carefully in this matter for fear of libel suits. Moreover, Life Guard Munson, who is the only one in a position to say positively whether some suspect has or has not been in this year, seems to regard knowledge acquired in the performance of his official duty as strictly confidential.

It is only where we have special sources of information or through inadvertent confessions that we can be sure.

To date the only names we are prepared to publish are Colonel Charles Hunt, Mrs. E. F. Harding, and Miss Landon Reed. Send in your nominations for the honor roll and we'll investigate.

REAL BIRDIE

Lieut. Willis S. Matthews, a recent arrival from foreign parts, has lost no time in achieving local fame.

While playing golf with Prospective Mandarin Carl Fritzche he made one of the most unique shots on record. Driving from No. 6 tee, he sliced one into the rough. There is nothing unique about that—but wait. After a somewhat protracted search, Lieut. Matthews found his pill beside a dead quail—still warm and unquestionably killed by the ball.

This brings up an intricate legal point and furnishes a nice mathematical problem.

Does Lt. Matthews get called on the mat for killing game out of season and without a permit?

We leave it for the mathematically inclined to figure out under the laws of probability and chance what kind of a bad break the quail got.

At the last meeting of the Thanatopsis Club the scientific brethren estimated that the event is even less likely to be duplicated than the loss of four consecutive pots by Brother Leard.

DEPARTURES AND ARRIVALS

The Exodus from Benning is in full swing. Among those who have either left or are leaving for stations elsewhere are many of our most respected and distinguished citizens. Colonel Knight leaves shortly for Plattsburgh whither also goes Sheriff Tuttle to preserve law and order along the Canadian border. Colonel Stayer shoves off in early July after five years with the Doughboy School. Colonel Major and Golf Champion Sutherland are scheduled to leave about the same time. Colonel Willard and Colonel Marshall have gone and Ned Sherburne, P. Stivers, Sir Roger Williams, Truman Smith, Pat Patrick, Jared Wood, and Adjutant Toole. Secretary Freehoff, Ace Rader, and Pink Bull left this week. All of these well known members of our happy community with the exception of Colonel Major Stivers take with them families who will be greatly missed in the social activities of the year to come.

Saying good-bye to old friends is one of the penalties of an Army career, but fortunately the regrets which attend these partings are alleviated by the reasonable expectations that we may be serving again next year with those who are leaving this.

For instance, that well-known and popular Benningite, Captain Ralph B. Lovett, who left last year, is back again for another hitch—this time as assistant to Adjutant General Lewis. The Flare regards this both as a happy circumstance and a favorable omen.

CITATION FOR THE WEEK

To Major Bill Freehoff, retiring Secretary of The Infantry School, Baiter of Section Chiefs, but a staunch cooperator withal, for three years of meritorious service in an important and exacting office.

"Light One for ME"

It's pretty hard to be around a Chesterfield and not want one. That tempting aroma tells you the truth. It says . . . "Here's a milder cigarette. Here's one that tastes better."

Sure . . . there's a good reason. Several, in fact. Chesterfields contain the finest tobaccos grown.

These tobaccos are not only blended, they're cross-blended in Chesterfield's own special way. They are rolled in the purest paper that money can buy. Grown right. Cured right. Blended right. Made right. Packed right. That's Chesterfield.

In fact there isn't any way for a cigarette to be purer, milder or better tasting.

No wonder so many millions of smokers say "THEY SATISFY."

Benning Briefs

We promised the further details of the fishing trip we wrote about last week, but will have to hold off another week until we gather more evidence. We can say, though, that Captain Fry apparently made up for his sins of former days and brought home the fish on this trip. Of course he had good help, but that couldn't possibly be all of it.

Another publishing company has gone bust. The "Daily Graphic, Inc." of New York has just filed receivership papers according to a story in another of the New York papers, listing liabilities of over $700,000 and assets of less than $200,000. The "New York Evening Graphic" is published by this company. This paper was the discoverer of Walter Winchell, who later made himself through the "Mirror" and was the first to use composite photographs, later so much used in journalistic work.

A paragraph in one of Lt. Yarbrough's exposes of Benning Life gives us the information that Lt. Julian E. Raymond has been assigned to the I. S. D. We recall, a few weeks a few weeks ago, whe nthe radio expert and poet of the Second Section was making his preparations for the writing of a monumental work on communications. He had applied for his leave and got it, and was at that time thoroughly at his ease in badly-fitting knickers and an old polo shirt. Sticking out of his back pocket was a rolled up order showing that his leave had been granted, and on the order his name had been underlined. The Radioman's explanation of his keeping the order so close by was quite a lucid one. "When one of my superior officers comes up to me," said the Lieutenant "and says, 'Lieutenant Raymond, you are improperly attired', then I'll just whip out this order (Here the Lt. suited the action to the words) and show him my name."

He seemed very practiced in whipping out the order, too, by the way.

We don't know where the Flare's candidate will finally decide to hold his convention, but we're willing to bet that if he has been reading the papers, he will go straight for that brewery which has just applied for a charter with the intention of opening up immediately on the repeal, if any, of the Volstead Act and has already begun installing machinery to produce the famous German beverage. We'll say this, however. General Fuzzard seems to have quite a wide and varied experience and we'll bow down in our lesser knowledge to his omnipotence.

* * *

And another thing, the Flare wants to know who the Shakesperian scholar is who so kindly corrected the quotation from Iago when it was intended to be incorrect?

Officer Of Turkish Army One Of Those Aided By Benning

A request of an officer of the Turkish army for instructional matter published at the Infantry School, affords another example of the worldwide renown of the American infantry's foremost educational institution. Lieutenant Tahir, Effendi, 1st Company 7th Infantry Regiment, Istanbul, Turkey, is the officer who is undertaking the study of American infantry methods through the medium of the various publications issued by The Infantry School.

The consignment of books was shipped to the Turkish officer last week by the Bookshop and included a large assortment, covering such subjects as combat intelligence, military sketching, night operations, offensive combat, preparation and use of ground, the solution of map problems, preparation of tactical problems, the tactical employment of the rifle company in combat, the tank platoon in attack and many others on the tactical employment of infantry units. Included also was a manual for the guidance of officers.

The Turkish officers' request for printed matter from the Infantry School is the third which has been received at Fort Benning within the past few months from foreign countries. A Russian military school at Blagoveschensk, Siberia, submitted the first application and another request for printed matter was received recently from the Transcaucasian city of Tiflis, Georgia, U. S. S. R.

Knowledge of the Infantry School and its instructional methods is being disseminated in a number of foreign countries through the detail of foreign officers as students at Fort Benning. Since the academic year of 1923-24, 25 foreign officers have been graduated from regular courses of The Infantry School. These include 13 of the Cuban army, 5 of the Chinese army, 3 of the Irish Free State army, two of the Mexican army and one each of the German and Japanese armies.

These figures do not include a number of foreign officers who have been attached to troops of the Infantry School garrison for instruction.

The acceptance of foreign army officers as students at The Infantry School is in accordance with reciprocal arrangements which are maintained with various foreign governments and which are regarded as a valuable asset in the fostering of international friendships.

Col. Bonesteel Is Attached To 24th Infantry

Lieut. Col. Charles H. Bonesteel, who arrived at Fort Benning July 5th, from Washington, D. C., where he was on duty at the Army War College, has been attached to the 24th Infantry, for duty with troops. Colonel Bonesteel's duties with the 24th Infantry will run concurrently with those of the first section, academic department of The Infantry School, to which he has been assigned as instructor in tactics, until December 31st.

Two Officers Of 7th Engineers Receive Praise

Commendation for their part in an unusual experience which happened on May 9 on the Fort Benning Reservation, has just been given two officers of the command here at the post. Second Lieutenants Walter K. Wilson and Stephen R. Hanmer were recently the recipients of letters of commendation from Major General Campbell King, Commandant, Fort Benning, Ga., for having shown exceptional resourcefulness and quick-thinking in saving the life of one of the soldiers of Company A, 7th Engineers, which Lt. Wilson commands, during the maneuvers which were held at Benning this Spring.

The matter was brought to General King's attention through a letter written by the father of Private F. Kingdon Schaefer, calling attention to the action of the two young officers and requesting that recognition be given that action. In his letter, Mr. Schaefer said:

"The action of these officers was more than commendable, as it required the highest courage. They first had to overcome the fear of serpents handed down to us from antiquity; second, it was an act unaccompanied by any of the heroics usually attending the saving of human life. Above all, it required the courage of taking their lives in their own hands, for were there the least abraisions in their mouths, their lives were forfeit."

The incident which drew this attention occurred on the night of May 9, when the Seventh Engineers were encamped on one of the wilder section of the Reservation, which already has a reputation for having many species of venomous snakes. The men were sleeping in small groups on the ground and Pvt. Schaefer had spread his blankets and rain coat with Pvt. Brown in a little hollow. About two o'clock in the morning, he was awakened by something gliding over his leg and kicked out. Then he felt the fangs of a snake and almost immediately a sensation of numbness set in, creeping up his leg. His buddy, Brown, applied a crude tourniquet, using his belt, and tightening it around the victim's leg, just above the wound.

The two officers, who had been sleeping about a hundred feet from Pvts. Schaefer and Brown, were awakened by the noise and hurried to the scene of the accident. They immediately took charge and, slashing around the punctures caused by the fangs, sucked the blood from the wound, alternating with each other, while arrangements were being made to take Schaefer to the hospital. At the hospital, anti-venom treatment was administered, and in six days, Pvt. Schaefer was pronounced cured.

Colonel Charles F. Morse, surgeon in command of the station hospital, stated: "The officers acted in the belief that the patient was in mortal danger. They apparently gave no thought to the possible danger to themselves and, as a matter of fact, had no way of knowing whether the act of sucking the wound might or might not be dangerous to them.'

In his letters, General King stated:

Benning Swimmer Stars In Meet Held At Rome, Georgia

Wins Two Events

PRIVATE TANNEHILL

One of Benning's best swimmers, holder of several post records, who has just taken two first places and one third place at the Southern A. A. U. Swimming meet held at Rome, Georgia. Tannehill last year took five places in the annual Post swimming meet.

Charles M. Tannehill, Headquarters Company, 1st Tank Regiment, broke into prominence in southern swimming circles when he garnered two first places and one third place in the Southeastern A. A. U. Championships and Olympic trials at Rome, Georgia, on July 4 and 5. Tannehill's performance was considered remarkable in view of the fact that it was his first appearance in fast company, and that he had only been in training for three weeks while other contestants had been swimming the entire year.

Star performers at the meet included Miss Louisa Roberts, national junior backstroke champion, who negotiated the 100 yard course in 1:16. (The men's record at Fort Benning is 1:25). Ish Williams of Rome, an Olympic Games certainty, won the 100 yd. free style event in 58 seconds. (The Benning record, held by Tannehill, is 1:02.) Neely of Emory University won the 100 yard breast stroke in 1:17, ten seconds better than the Benning record.

Tannehill was leading in the Junior 50 yard free style until the last twenty feet, where he struck the ropes marking the lanes, lost a full stroke and dropped back to third place. He won his next even, the 440 yard junior free style in 6:30, excellent time considering the fact that the event took place in a driving rain.

In the senior 100 yard free style Tannehill again had trouble with the ropes marking the lanes. Even with the winner, Ish Williams, at the 55 yard turn, he struck the ropes three times on the return trip and finished fourth, trailing Williams of Rome, Russell of Birmingham, and Mooney of Pensacola. This event was won in the fast time of 58 seconds.

The grueling 880 yard free style was the prettiest race of the meet. Tannehill had never, even in practice, attempted the sixteen trips over the 55 yard course. At the end of the sixth lap four of the seven entrants were far behind, Pasco of Pensacola holding a ten yard lead over Tannehill and Louis Tucker of Chattanooga. By the tenth lap, Tannehill and Pasco were swimming a dead heat, with Tucker half a lap behind. At the end of the fourteenth lap the two leaders were swimming stroke for stroke—and several thousand spectators were yelling their heads off. On the last two laps the Benning swimmer opened up, and with a remarkable burst of speed won his race by a twenty yard margin—and with it the 880 yard championship of the Southeastern A. A. U.

Prominent coaches predict a brilliant future for Tannehill as a distance swimmer. This writer will go further and predict that with proper training, the Benning swimmer will break the Southeastern record in next year's A. A. U. meet at Birmingham and move into the limelight of national recognition.

Last year the young Tanker practically won the Post swimming meet single-handed, taking five first places and smashing several Post records to shreds, an outstanding performance in view of the talent available at Benning. His performance at Rome, however, has done even more to raise him in his swimming career and is attracting much favorable comment at Fort Benning.

SHRAPNEL BURSTS

The Fourth of July proved to be a very quiet day for the Artillery except for the boom of the salute fired by "A" Battery. Although some of the officers decided to leave over the week-end, most of them stayed here and enjoyed golf and swimming.

Lt. Howard thought it would be quite nice to spend the weekend near the ocean so he took off Saturday afternoon for points east.

The left head light on his car was smashed a bit while he was parked in front of "C" Battery Saturday morning, so he had to wait to have it repaired and consequently didn't get a very good start. He was also on the road most of the time he was gone, but returned with a report of a most enjoyable trip.

Lt. and Mrs. Beishline left last Friday to spend a month's leave at their home in Pennsylvania but at that time did not know whether or not, the leave would be without pay. Just the day after they left Post Headquarters received word that all officers would have to take one month's leave without pay, so telegrams were sent to all officers on leave from this post.

This information was quite a blow to most people and especially to Lt. and Mrs. McConnell who are way up in northern United States and expected to have a three months' honeymoon, returning in September.

Because of the post order allowing only one enlisted man to be used in the Battalion Garden after July 1st, the Garden officer has hired a negro man to live at the garden and help cultivate same.

HQ. HQ. BATTERY & C. T.

The rope man paid Cpl. Cherry a visit the other afternoon. Some say that he took the radio away with him.

We all enjoyed the 4th of July. Several of the N. C. O.'s attended a barbecue at Jacob's Cut, Alabama. The music was furnished by Honey Boys Quartette and Cpl. Pike gave an exhibition dance which was enjoyed by all.

Our 1st Sgt. has left on a 60 day furlough to be spent in the hills of Pennsylvania hunting and fishing. Sgt. Ryan from Ft. Bragg, N. C., a former member of this organization, is going to accompany him north to hunt and fish.

If anybody in the battalion can furnish any information as to the whereabouts of two bicycle tires, get in touch with Pvt. Skipper.

Cpl. Wright, Pvt. Hale and Cook Meyers took the evening off to go chicken hunting. It was almost dark, they couldn't see the road very well and ran into an old man's corn patch. Cpl. Wright worked his miniature radio set and sent out an S. O. S. call for help. Cook Meyer, in the mean time, called the old man an A. P. O., just then the sun went down.

The battery still has time for a little gunners' instruction along with the R. O. T. C. work. We all hope that they enjoy the work as well as we do.

Weenie Vestal made a hurried trip to Boyle's Thirty Acres the other night and ran into a wire fence, cutting his eye and skinning his face. The committee is investigating the facts of the case and from all reports Pvt. Vestal will have a lot of explaining to do when the case is called.

"C" BATTERY

Our gunner-instructions have come to a complete standstill. With the various details for fatigue to take care of, there is no one left in the battery to take instruction. However we hope there will be some time this summer to finish these instructions as the respective $5.00 and $3.00 for expert and first class gunnery come in very handy.

The men returning from their furloughs all tell us about the hard times on the outside; this will have effect on the re-enlistments of our short timers.

The telephone in our dayroom has been very quiet lately and rings very rarely. With our sheiks on furlough and two in the hospital, "C" battery business with the fair sex is showing the setback of the depression.

Sick call has been very large for the past week, the reason for this is that Major Patterson (the salts man), Col. Morse and a few more are spending a week in Fla. Just wait for the fish tale they will tell.

Glad to see Staff Sgt. Dotson back on the job, he can tell us all about sun burn now. Poor fellow he had to stay in bed for three days with his back and arms. (Who can go to bed without their back and arms?)

Maybe we should put this under "Believe it or not." On the fourth of July, Sgt. Henery put on civies and went to town. Just wait, he will be going to town plenty of times, once he meets the girl he is always talking about.

Pvt. Woods, a former 29th dust agitator, is driving the "22" while Pvt. Pullen is away down in Fla. digging worms. Oh, well, Pullen might get to fish one day and dig worms the rest.

Our "Pill Roller" ball team is still up on top, what we want to do now is stay there. Come on out fellows help the big team win.

Red Davis: "Say, Floyd, tell us all about Warm Springs, are there any fish in it?"

Red Floyd: "Sure, I used to be in it."

Last Saturday morning while the sun was just peeping out over the hills, Bowden the big Georgia Cracker and Allison the tar heel took off for the little city of Atlanta. About

GUNBOTHAM'S SCHOOL DAZE

By E. L. M.

This columnist (thanks for the bird!) having been on D. S. over the week-end, Picnicers, Boxing Promoters, Polo Players, and Benningites in general may breathe more easily. For the Ears That Hear All—and print little—have gleaned absolutely no scandal this week.

We returned from Rome, Georgia, with a lot of stories that can't be told and one report on the activities of the younger generation. Rome, being in the heart of Georgia, and Georgia being the hub of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the center of the Baptist Belt, dancing on Sunday is never tolerated, being considered, quite naturally, a crimson splash in the eyes of Yahweh. But youth will be served. And it has become costumbre in Rome to start dancing at 12:01 a. m. Monday. When the Romans sleep we do not know. Yes, we attended the Monday morning affair, and had a delightful time. A delightful time, until the sun got high—and hot—and we realized that Father Time has taken his toll and that such endurance contests had best be left for younger and more sprightly souls.

Punster Grier would be shamed into silence in Rome. For all its citizens—whether of high or low estate—wisecrack at every available opportunity. Perhaps the tendency was developed in defense of the statute sent by Mussolini a few years ago. It stands in front of the City Hall. You know the end—a lady wolf, with Romulus and Remus sitting around, hungry-like. Yes, they need a sense of humour.

But to get back to our story. A seven-year-old kid was gravely watching the A. A. U. swimming championships. The swimming lanes were marked off with rope and the ropes held afloat by a lot of white bobbers. The kid turned to us with his tongue in his cheek.

"Say, mister, I been watchin' them trot lines all mornin', and I ain't seen a bite yet."

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

LARVA MIGRANS

Lsat week we told you something about hookworm disease; how infection was entirely dependent on coming in contact with the young worm. Soil pollution with the bowel discharges of an infected person resulted in eggs being deposited on the ground which after a period of days developed into young worms (larvae). These larvae entered any person whose bare skin, usually the feet, came in contact with them.

Larva Migrans (creeping eruption) is a very near relative of the ordinary hookworm disease. In fact it is a hookworm disease that is found only in dogs, cats and other small animals. A different host has resulted in modifications of the worm. It infects the human in a modified way, in that the young larval are unable to, or any rate do not, penetrate beyond the human skin. In the human hookworm the larval go through the skin into the lymphatics and veins by which they are carried to the heart and then to the lungs where they crawl out into the air spaces. From the air spaces the worm goes up the trachea and finally reaches the gullet down which it crawls to a last reach the small intestine where it attaches itself to the lining, completes development, and starts to reproduce its kind.

The dog hookworm does this same sort of a journey in the case that the new host is a dog or cat, but prvoided the new host be a human the journey is greatly modified and never complete. The young larval enter the skin of man on any exposed surface. The younger the person, the more tender the skin, the more easily they enter. At the site of intrance there results a small, reddened raised spot. After the elapse of some hours this spot begins to move. In twenty four hours the movements may amount to an inch or more and behind is left an irregular raised line perhaps a quarter inch wide. The movement is greater at night and it itches very severely. If there was ever an itch to drive one crazy this is it. This is what the dog hookworm does to man. There may be only one worm or hundreds all working along at the same time in the skin of the hands, face, arms, buttocks, legs and feet. The burrows extend from day to day until the winding pathway measures 6, 8 or even 15 or 20 inches until the worm finally seems to wear itself out with its wanderings. In two or three weeks it gives up the ghost and dies. Loss of sleep, intolerable itching combine to make this disease one of physical and mental torture. Scratching causes secondary infection and therefore adds its part to a suffering which seems to have already touched the peak of human endurance.

I venture to state that every dog at Fort Benning is, or has been, a victim of hookworm disease. Knowing this fact it seems almost needless to point out that our soil is heavily infested with eggs and larval.

To prevent children, who are the most easily infected, from acquiring this disease it is necessary to do two things (1) destroy, or impound all dogs and cats in limited areas. (2) Keep children with bare skins off the ground.

If dirt must be played in, have a protected sand pile and have the sand sterilized.

He painted a graphic story of the clash between the defense and prosecution and his audience was sitting in the atmosphere of a musty court room whose conduct was stiff and lifeless on account of the gloomy attaches. It was while Captain Fry was warming to his climax that he suffered the misfortune of say the wrong thing at the wrong time, or the right thing at the wrong time, or something. ### THE POLITICAL PLOT THICKENS

The Third Party Movement launched by the Flare is gaining strength rapidly and by the end of the current week it will have enough members to hold a convention. It has been definitely decided to hold the convention in Phenix City. Atlanta was favored at first, possibly because of General Fuzzard's recently published statement that corn liquor was selling for $2.00 a gallon in that progressive city, but all opposition to the Alabama Metropolis subsided on the General's assurance that he could get all he wanted anywhere at the same price.

We have given a great deal of thought to the name under which our party will march to victory. We wanted a name that would attract voters without scaring off contributors to the campaign fund. General Fuzzard, our candidate for president, put it even more plainly in one of our many conferences on the subject. "Get a name that will pull in the jack" quoth he. "If we get enough it don't matter who wins the election". We rebuked the General (an unaccustomed privilege we assure you) for his defeatist and mercenery attitude, to which he replied that if we couldn't talk things over among ourselves without dragging in a lot of obsolete moral principles we could take our damned party and go jump in the lake—or words to that effect.

After much deliberation and discussion we have finally decided to adopt General Fuzzard's suggestion to call our party the Progrestatic Party. You won't find the name in the dictionary but, as the General says, "None of our supporters are going to look in any dictionary anyhow. It's a great name. It ketches the fellow who wants to make a lot of new laws about things he knows nothing about and it appeals to theconservative guy, like myself, who wants to keep things in the statue quo, so far as may be."

The choice of an emblem to go on the ballot was quickly settled. General Fuzzard insisted on an owl and we agreed when he gave his reason. "I'm going to do my campaigning at night, ain't I? Besides the owl's a wise old bird who don't say much but brings home the bacon. That's me, all over."

The most important thing yet to be decided is a party slogan. We want something snappy like the one recently suggested for the Republicans by the Chicago Herald Examiner, "Don't change toboggans while you're going downhill".

ROMAN HOLIDAY AT RUSS POOL

"Better is the sight of the eyes than the wandering of the desire."
—Ecclesiastes VI, 9.

The great mixed bathing contest between the girls and the boys reached an exciting stage on June 30th. At the opening of the pool for the afternoon swimming hour the score stood two to one with the men in the lead. Faithful readers of this column will recall that Lieutenant Pierce and Heriot stole a march on everybody by scoring early before the possibilties of the adjoining showers situation were fully appreciated. Their lead was cut down when Lady Lucy Williams, visiting young matron, invaded the masculine preserves but for nearly two weeks thereafter the contest languished.

Early in the afternoon swimming period of the 30th, however, Mrs. Laurin T. Williams (wife of the newly arrived Tank Instructor and no relation to Lady Lucy) while ostensibly drying her face with a bath towel, got past the "Men's Exit Only" sign without being challenged. Once across the Rubicon of the foot bath she dropped the blindfold, gave one startled look, uttered one horrified "Omigosh" and emerged, blushing, to receive the customary ovation from the organized jeering section on the steps.

A short time later, at 4:50 p. m., to be exact, Mrs. R. K. Sutherland broke the tie by penetrating clear to the men's shower room proper, at an opportune moment, when each of the six uncurtained sprinklers were vainly attempting to conceal a local run-of-mine imitation of an undraped Greek god.

Mrs. Sutherland screamed, as good social usage requires, and retired—slowly backward according to one version, like a shot from a gun according to her own.

Witnesses: Maj. Lytle (as usual)
Mrs. Jack Thompson
Lady Lucy Williams
(who led the cheering)
Lieut. John T. Whitelaw
(who was standing in the shower nearest the door)

How Mrs. Sutherland got as far as she did is something of a mystery, as she was not wearing her distinctive dark glasses at the time. Maybe it is just character. Be that as it may, however, the girls now have the boys one up.

RETRACTION

In our last issue we published a list of former swimming enthusiasts whose absence from Russ Pool this season has been noted by our ubiquitous agents. The inference that they might be reluctant to conform to the present stringent sanitary regulation was but thinly veiled. In our list Colonel Charles Hunt's name, like that of Abou Ben Adhem (may his tribe increase) in Leigh Hunt's celebrated poem, led all the rest. This would have been altogether fitting and proper—for Colonel Hunt used to be one of the pool's most consistent patrons—had our promise that he had not been seen among the bathers this year been true. It so happens, however, that the swimming Colonel slipped one over on us by resuming his daily plunge about four days before we featured him in The Flare. That makes us owe him our humble apology, complete, and we readily accord it the same prominence that we gave the original citation.

The life of an amateur columnist is hard. We get it going and coming. Having written our apology to Colonel Hunt for including him in our list of conscientious objectors, we receive first hand information that Mrs. Stayer is deeply offended because her name was not among those cited. Mrs. Stayer insists that she was a regular attendant last year and that she objects to a sanitary shower bath jsut as much as Mrs. Harding or Miss Reed.

While on this subject we might say that in order to be listed as a consci-

Alexander Rosanoff, an aviator in the Russian secret service, delivers a packet of confidential papers to the Russian embassy in Paris and persuades Colonel Shubin, ranking Attache, to take him to see the famous Mata Hari perform an exotic dance. Later, he follows her to a gambling casino where she had gone to meet Adriana, owner of the resort and an enemy spy. Here she is told of the papers and promises to get them from Shubin. Yielding to a whim, she permits Rosanoff to make love to her. But in the morning she is annoyed that she has shirked her task.

It did not lessen her exasperation to be made aware of voices in the boudoir. Often men bribed the servants, forced themselves in upon her; she was accustomed to every trick of approach, to every madness contingent upon refusal. But really—on a day like this—which she needed to have clear—! And such an amiable young Russian of whom she had been thinking so kindly because he had sense enough to take his departure without arousing her!

Meanwhile, the colloquy went on in the boudoir.

"Is Madame up yet?"

"Is she expecting you?"

"No but I know it'll be all right."

"But you can't come in here, sir! You must wait in the drawing-room."

"That'll be all right. Tell her it's Alexis.

The dancer could have imitated every word of this from memory, even to the gestures of apology and helplessness which Marietta made as she was swept aside before the ardor of the suitor, even to the little glance of triumph which the suitor would not be able to refrain from giving the maid when she, Mata Hari, out of sheer impatience to have it over with, would call, "Very well, Marietta."

Poor young man! He did not know what was in store for him!

His nice face, all shining with candid eagerness, his hands stretched out impetuously for the welcome he was so sure of, gave her a slight pang. He was so happy! Best to get it over with at once.

Swinging away from her mirror, she met him with a brutal demand. "What have you come back for?"

And he did not understand at all. He went right on, silly and happy. "I had to see you. I had an errand to do this morning, and then I rushed right back to you."

"Oh, Mata," he burst out, overwhelmed at his first sight of her in full sunshine, "you are so beautiful!"

"Yes, yes, but why did you come here?"

"I couldn't help it. Out there, the birds were singing, and there was a softness just like spring in the air and—and my heart was so full of you I had to come back and tell you that I love you . . . and take you to lunch."

"Very pretty, but it's almost two and I have an engagement."

This time her irritation became apparent to Rosanoff. He had enough penetration to know that she wasn't being in the least coy. She simply didn't want to see him!

Some of the buoyancy went out of him.

"But Mata you can break it. I must take you to lunch."

"I told you I have an appoinment."

For the life of him, he could not see what he had done to offend her. Women were unaccountable but even so there was no reason. . . . He decided to be masterful.

"And I told you to break it."

This was the everlasting straw. Mata Hari sprang up.

"You are a conceited fool!"

"W-What?" he stammered.

"You're the most conceited, idiotic boy I've ever seen."

It wasn't possible! But it was.

"I can't imagine," she went on dispassionately, "what makes you think I've given you the right to burst in here and waste my time."

At last Rosanoff recovered himself sufficiently to speak.

"I'm sorry. Last night you told me that you loved me."

"Did I? That was last night. Today I'm very busy."

She rang for the maid.

At this Rosanoff could not restrain an incredulous exclamation. She saw by his face that he was shocked beyond belief, not alone by the dismissal but by this ultimate rudeness. But now it was too late. She meant to finish what she had begun.

"Marietta, show the gentleman out."

In a quiet voice, Rosanoff said, "You are quite right. I have been a fool. I won't make this mistake again."

Nor did he commit the faux pas of turning on his heel.

He bowed quite correctly, leaving Mata Hari, if he had only known it, rather inclined to reinstate him in her esteem, if not her affections.She had to admit that his exit had been fully as insulting in its dignity as her rejection in its bluntness, before she forgot him wholly in the absorbing affair of making her toilette.

For a concentrated business it was. Ever since she had learned that glamour could mean a career, she had worked relentlessly to preserve the spell now that it had been cast. Whatever made for the mystery surrounding her had been retained, whatever interfered with it, cast off, erased with such a will that it was impossible to decide where, in her own recollection, truth left off and fancy began.

Was she really the daughter of a Dutch shopkeeper? No one had ever learned this from her lips. To the world, to her acquaintances, to her intimatse, perhaps even to herself, she clung to the account that she had been born in Java, where her parents, high-caste Brahmins had dedicated her to the service of a temple. Her dances were part of the temple ritual. Her name, Mata Hari, meant Eye of the Morning. She had been in Java—that was certain. She had studied the religions of the Orient, that, too, was evident. People who attempted to confuse her with their questions were obliged to admit as much.

Had she really been married to a Scotch army officer and been beaten, divorced, known hunger and every privation, as was rumored? It was perhaps the most complete tribute to her reticence that even her maid could not obtain the slightest clue that her past had differed in any way from which she chose to acknowledge.

She had one regret which she freely admitted, that she had not based her life more on her considerable talent for the dance. Her distractions had begun to pall on her; men she had begun to find either troublesome or wearisome. When she told Adriana that she had become a spy for the excitement, she was not lying. It was the only game left—a glorious game!

At seven o'clock, returning from another appointment, she dismissed her car and took a taxi to Shubin's quarters. He had had a table set intimately for two in the living-room. He came forward while the servant was still announcing her and seized her hands.

"If I'm late, it's because my sleigh was pursued by wolves."

"Ah yes, those wolves! They took you for a Russian naturally in your pretty costume."

She sat down at the table, throwing aside her loose wrap. "Brr!" she said, "I am frozen ot death in your Russia."

Shubin knew that it was only an excuse for him to order a fire so that his man would have to leave the room.

CHAPTER V

The Quarrel With Shubin

The dancer did not come to the point as soon as they were alone, however. Although she was sure of Shubin, still it was advisable to be tactful with him. He had given her much information. But often in the past she had been obliged to nurse him through periods of remorse when, in the depths of Russian melancholia, he had promised to become not only useless to her but dangerous.

Men were so queerly foolish, sentimental. A man had to cling to his pride and his honor even if he could do so only by lying to himself. A woman would dispense with pride and honor quite simply, without giving them a thought, if, by so doing, she thought she could get what she wanted.

So Mati Hari had made Shubin feel that to be a traitor really required much more dash and courage than to be loyal since it was so much more dangerous.

They talked like old friends. Noticing that he was reluctant to touch the vodka, she suggested a toast and took a sip or two herself. Ordinarily she disliked the fiery stuff:

It was Shubin after all, who precipitated their discussion. He told her that he had had a visitor from the French Secret service.

"Dubois himself, no doubt?"

"Yes," he said after a moment.

In that case she anticipated that the matter would not be quite so simple as she had told Adriana. She thought quickly, rather exhilarated. It was much more fun to match wits and overcome obstacles.

"Yes," she replied in a tone of indifference. "I rather expected something was in the air. Dubois came to see me dance last night and I believe he had me followed to the Pavilion. As if I were not prepared for all that! Did he question you about me, my poor friend? Is that why you are so dejected?"

When she came over to him and patted his hand, Shubin gave a deep sigh and looked up at her, pleading as if he wished to be released from some torment.

"Mata! He is in earnest and that grim bulldog, once he has set his teeth, will never let go. I overheard him last night. He said, 'some will dance and die."

On The .Q .T

By B. B. S.

The column was in a quandary all last week. It seems that Sgt. Sailor Booth doesn't like publicity of the kind he likes to turn in on others. He accused the column of being partial to his enemies but far be it from us to separate the sheep from the wolves. Shoot 'em all in, and if they are printable, we will print it. If they are not fit for the press, then we will change them a little and print them anyway. Our motto is, "Stretch the truth as far as possible without breaking it."

Now the reporter who shot this one in on Sailor kinda knew what he was talking about. He referred to Sgt. Booth as one of the outstanding men of the I. S. D., and a man who always tried to make his associations with the better class of people, (in the North Highlands district).

Ye scandal monger reports that this heartbreaker, better known as "Sailor Brown" or "Daddy" Booth was seen talking with the famous sales lady of Second Avenue. It has been noted since then that a dull greenish color shows in the form of a band on his ring finger. Wonder why?

If you want he inside dope on "Love Making," or "Love at First

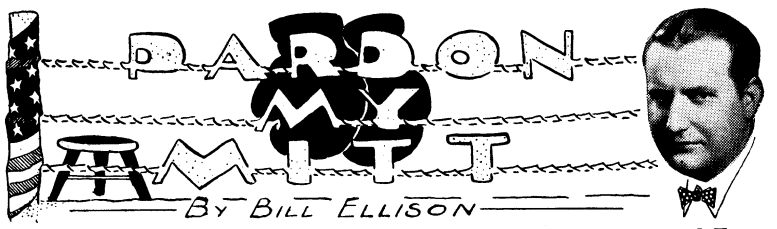
BILL ELLISON, Editor



I have long realized that to err is human. It may be, too, that my eyesight is failing. But, try as I might, I cannot see any good reason to get all excited over a young man like Jack Harp, of Warm Springs, Ga., who opposes Blondy Parker, a doughboy, on the last fistic card at Benning.

* * *

Now, I learn to my amazement, that Harp has been dubbed welterweight of the South, a mythical title boasting about the same value as the title of a Russian count all run down at the heels and mooching dimes for sinkers and java along along some metropolitan main stem.

* * *

Just where Harp annexed such an honor is doubtful, unless he discovered it while exploring the rubbish along Pugilistica's back alleys. It is quite possible the young man from Frank Roosevelt's summer home town has a sense of humor. It is possible, too, that some other gentleman bestowed the title about Harp's neck, stepped into the shadows and died of convulsive laughter.

Surely Mr. Harp must know that he is taking in a lot of territory to call himself welterweight champion of all these Southern states. It seems to me you can find some fairly good boys down around Miami and Tampa. In romantic old New Orleans you'll find some prelim boys good enough for anybody's main event. Lots of 'em are welters. There's a good boy or or so around Atlanta. Charlotte, Winston-Salem, Louisville, Memphis and Houston and Dallas and Birmingham like to pull up their chairs and tell you of their respective pugs who know a little something about the manly art of modified murder. Yet Mr. Harp rates head and shoulders above them—so I've just read.

That's what makes it rather difficult to understand—his miserable showing against Blondy Parker. I heard no one referring to Mr. Harp as the welterweight champion of the South at the time although I did overhear many uncomplimentary appellaions such and "Ham and Egger," "Palooka," "wart," "pea-picker" and "go to it, country boy, you're better than he are!"

entious objector to the present requirements for a thorough-going bath before entering the pool one has to have background. He or she must have had a reputation as a fairly regular devotee of the dog paddle, side stroke, or flutter kick, as the case may be, before the present regulations were in effect. As everybody knows, there are many members of the garrison who do not avail themselves of the swimming pool now and who never did. Major Robert Lytle contends that these deserve special mention in that they were conscientious objectors even to the lax rules of other years but we cannot admit this. Some of them have sinus trouble.

HOT AND BOTHERED

Those congressmen whose idea of economy is to harass the army and navy must be blissfully happy. If being up in the air made members of other branches eligible for flying pay, the great Economy Bill would mean an increase instead of a cut for everyone except the aviators.

There is no depression in the Benning rumor industry. It has no unemployed problem. Indeed, all hands are working overtime and you can hear anything from a straight tip that officers changing station will be reduced fifty files in grade to authentic information that anyone taking leave will be shot at sunrise.

As we are contemplating taking leave if we can do so without its costing us our commission, we are vitally interested in all the latest stories. Having been in the army quite a while we know enough to discount seventy-five per cent of all Post Exchange gossip but the strain is beginning to tell. At Russ Pool, in the office, at home, and on the street, we hear these tales of impending calamity. When we trace these down we find that there really isn't anything new and that nobody really knows anything but the deadweight of partially enlightened but highly articulate public opinion is getting us down. We have been postponing our departure on leave from day to day from sheer fright.

We've got to get away from all this talk, however. Granted that only the filthy rich and the foolhardy are taking any chances, we are going to shove off pretty soon. We hope that you will all attribute our courage to the assurance that goes with vast wealth and that you will tell our creditors.

ATTENTION LIGGETT AND MYERS

Thomas Fields, the accomodating attendant at the Officers' Cub, has a son born in May. The usually perplexing problem of a name was quickly solved. It is Chester.

CITATION FOR THE WEEK

To Sheriff Wild Bill Tuttle, retiring Provost Marshal, for the marked courtesy and efficiency shown by the Military Police in the discharge of their duties during his regime and from the rare combination of ability, discretion and tact shown by their chief in the administration of his difficult office.

Cowboy To Meet Ching Johnson In Ten-Rounder

Since Ching Johnson's flailing fists slammed Irvin Ashkenazy's mammoth hulk around in May, doughboy and civilian alike have chanted . . .

"We want Ching . . . We want Ching."

With Captain Fry's kflind permission they'll see him Tuesday night against Cowboy Frankie Edgren, the wild and wooly broncho buster from Cheyenne, Wyoming.

If Johnson disappoints his followers it will certainly be the first time. He is a hard-working, two-fisted fighter who never slows down a minste. He's on top of his man from the word go and big Bob Lawson, whose name is well known to every fistic celebrity in the land, has been one of Ching's faithful trainers for the last several weeks.

Benning fight audiences prefer punchers to the scientific sort of scrappers who waltz gracefully about the ring, shifting their big brown eyes in the direction of acquaintances in the crowd and deliver a blow that wouldn't dent an egg at intervals. They like to see a couple of gorillas get in there and hang bruising blows on each other's pan sufficient to cause the receiver to settle in the resin while their heels are aimed at the starry canopy overhead.

They'll see another couple fo hard hitters in Cotton Batton, pride of the 24th Infantry, and "Panther" Jim of Pittsburgh, Pa., and a product of Mr. Roby who has earned the distinction of bringing nothing but good fighters to the post.

Bunker Hill and Tommy Thompson, the former a flashy soldier and the latter a Columbusite, are on the next preliminary. Hill hits 'em and they stay hit. Thompson has been making a very good showing himself since getting into the bruising business.

Chick Liddell and Stratton Smith are booked and this should be an entertaining little battle i nits own right. Herbert Yetmeyer and Sandy Huff are matched and there will also be two more bouts.

The show will begin at 8:15 p. m. in Doughboy Stadium.

Punk Baseball Shows In Intra-Mural Race

By Bernard B. Swayze

"Men may come, and men may go, but I go on making errors for ever," seems to be the motto of most all the Benning baseball players. They miss-um, thren throw 'em away, and then try to eat the ball. When are they going to stop?

The Artillery has blown up too many times to mention, after starting the season like a sure winner. The I. S. D. has picked up wonderfully, and if they can stop their arguing among themselves they will make some team smoke for the last half of the season.

The Medicos have almost a cinch on at least a tie for first place for the first half of the split season. They lead now with seven won and one lost for an average of .875. They are trailed by the Second Battalion with six won and two lost, averaging .750. If the Second Battalion wins from the Medicos, they will have a chance at a play for the league leadership for the first half. If they lose, their chances are nil.

The First Battalion is in third place with .500, whooped up by the Terrible Tankers at .428. The Artillery, I. S. D., and Special Units are knotted at the bottom of the league with averages of .285 each.

The best game turned in for the past week was the twelve inning affair yesterday afternoon between the Special Units and the Second Battalion. Errors were rampant during the first half of the game, causing the Kells to lose to the Black Pirates in the twelfth, 6 to 5. The Kells were completely disorganized, and looked like Ned in the first reader.

They used sixteen men for the game, and ran the scorer nuts. The book had one square inch that was not written on.

Next week promises better baseball, giving the fans a break they have long been waiting for. The teams will be battling next week for positions as they never have before, and there will be a little air-tight baseball. The Special Units looked like a million dollars Thursday afternoon in the latter part of the game, taking everything on the go and making it good.

ROTC Track Meet Held Saturday

The R. O. T. C. Camp held its track and field meet last Saturday as a part of its program for Visitors' Day at the Camp. The track and field events were held in the Doughboy Stadium, beginning early in the morning and continuing until midmorning. A large crowd of spectators were witnesses to the events, which brought out some fine talent considering the types of entrants which took part in the events.

Fourteen events were held, with Battery "C" taking the largest aggregate number of points, 45. Battery

AT THE GRAND

SATURDAY, SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Presentin, "THE MAN FROM YESTERDAY," with Claudette Colbert and Clive Brook. A quick courtship, a quicker honeymoon, and a husband who, even more quickly, disappears from the life of his affectionate wife. These are some of the ingredients—and there are more just as copiously packed with heart-tugging drama—in "THE MAN FROM YESTERDAY."

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Presenting, "YOUNG AMERICA," with Spencer Tracy, Doris Kenyon, Tommy Conlon, Ralph Bellamy, Beryl Mercer and Sarah Padden. Different outlooks on life are represented by Tracy and Kenyon as a young married couple; Bellamy as the kindly judge of a juvenile court; and young Conlon as a boy everyone considers "bad." In this splendid picture, young Conlon gets his first featured role.

TODAY, FRIDAY, JULY 8th: Presenting "DESTRY RIDES AGAIN," with Tom Mix, Zasu Pitts, Claudia Dell and others. At last—Mix in his first talking picture. The greatest of all the Western stars is coming back in one of the most romantically exciting cowboy pictures ever screened. He is bringing with him Tony, his wonder horse, and a fine cast in a real Western production.

AT THE RIALTO

TUESDAY: Presenting, "THIS IS THE NIGHT," with Lily Damita, Charlie Ruggles, Roland Young and Cary Grant. The hottest mixed-up roar since wives put Cupid's bows on their lips. Charlie Ruggles with plenty on the hip. Lily Damita with plenty of "It." Roland Young clowning around. Cary Grant stealing their time. Grand plot. Hot songs. Get a load of it and enjoy yourself immensely.

WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY: Presenting, "THE SILENT WITNESS," with Lionel Atwill, Greta Nissen, Helen Mack, Weldon Heyburn and Bramwell Fletcher. He dared not speak though headlines screamed "guilty." Why did murder end the hectic love-life of this gorgeous blond? Why did her young lover's father forbid him to talk? Why did the boy consent to hide what he knows?

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY: Presenting, "DARING DANGER," with Tim McCoy. So nervyq even his enemies admired him. But there was no escape from his vengeance if they double-crossed him. A rip-roading picture old and young alike will enjoy.

AT THE ROYAL

(Beginning with Midnight Show: Saturday, 11:15)

ALSO SUNDAY, MONDAY AND TUESDAY: Presenting, "WHAT PRICE HOLLYWOOD," with Lowell Sherman, Neil Hamilton, and Gregory. Here's a heart-gripping drama of the world, the flesh and the movies. She lived in Fame's glass house and the world watched her every move. She bought fame, luxury, Paris gowns, and paid what her world demanded . . . . But were the winnings worth the cost?

YOUNG AMERICA

Hundreds of books, plays and motion pictures have been turned out in recent years dealing with home life in this hectic age. The faults and virtues, the pleasures and pains of domestic existence today have been discussed from every conceivable angle—except one.

That one is the angle of boyhood. How the youngsters of the nation regard our modern scheme of things and our high-pressure mode of living constitutes a viewpoint that few writers have touched. Yet it is of vast significance to adults as well as to the youths who in a decade or two will be running the country.

What do these young people think of marriage and divorce today? Of our new educational theories and methods? Of their home surroundings in this age of radios and fast cars and prohibition and mothers' clubs and dozens of other outside interests undreamed of thirty years ago?

Such questions are said to be answered in a vivid and unforgetable manner in a new screen offering that Frank Borzage, the maker of "7th Heaven," "Bad Girl" and "After Tomorrow" recently directed for Fox Films. Presenting a survey of the whole complex situation from the viewpoint of two fourteen year-old boys, Borzage has turned out what is claimed to be the finest picture of his career in "Young America"—a picture that has aready aroused the enthusiasm of millions of theatre-goers for its clever entertainment, and the admiration of juvenile authorities and educators for its fearless handling of the facts.

With such celebrities as Spencer Tracy, Doris Kenyon, Beryl Mercer, Ralph Bellamy and Sarah Padden in the leading adult roles and two juvenile screen "finds," Tommy Conlon and Raymond Borzage, as the youthful heroes, this film opens at the Grand theatre next Tuesday and Wednesday.

ROYAL

WHAT PRICE HOLLYWOOD

A vivid vignette of Hollywood and its environs, replete with the glamour and striking color of the "nation's most picturesque city," is authentically presented in RKO Pathe's new Constance Bennett starrer which opens at the Royal Theatre Saturday with midnight show.

Miss Bennett is versatile in her splendid enaction, revealing propensities for the humorous with as much of her capabilities for the dramatic. She surmounts her portrayal of sophisticated wit of "Lady With A Past," and embraces the humanly emotional drama of her past successes.

Notables Highlight Swell Support

A host of screen luminaries is responsible for the splendid portrayals among the supporting cast. Lowell Sherman as a director couples a barrage of laughs with effective drama that is emotionally touching; Gregory Ratoff contributes sheer comedy as a producer, and reveal shis talents for humor with the equal finesse of his drama of "Symphony of Six Million," Neil Hamilton is the cleancut lover, brilliant in his depiction of Miss Bennett's husband.

Frank Revelation of Filmdom

Every phase of film colony life from work to play is frankly revealed in this tale relating the meteoric rise of a waitress to the heights of success as a film star. In "What Price Hollywood" you may dine in the Brown derby restaurant, loll on the sands of Malibu Beach, or attend a swank premiere at Grauman's Chinese Theatre. If you prefer, you can visit the studio to see a picture in the making, spend an afternoon at a Beverly Hills mansion, swim in its luxurious ultra-modern pool, ride on its bridle path, promenade on Hollywood Boulevard or view a horse race at Agua Caliente.

RIALTO

JOHN BARRYMORE and KAREN MORLEY in "ARSENE LUPIN"

ARSENE LUPIN

An auspicious event of the 1932 Lupin," presenting John Barrymore screen season is the opening Sunday and Lionel Barrymore in the first at the Rialto Theatre of "Arsene joint appearance of the celebrated stars in a motion picture. Karen Morliey, John Miljan and Tully Marshall have important supporting roles in the production, which was directed by Jack Conway, who last scored with "Paid."

The well-known mystery stories of Maurice Le Blanc which idealize the debonair French thief, Arsene Lupin, supplied the motivation for the first appearance together of the two Barrymore brothers, although the picture is more directly based on the Paris stage success on which Le Blanc collaborated with Francis de Croisset.

Has Sophisticated Humor

The screen version, which is said to be concerned as much with sophisticated humor as with the unwinding of the clever mysteries perpetuated by the master thief of Paris, also emphasizes the romantic love affair between John Barrymore as the thief and Miss Morley as the police spy who poses as a countess in order to track down the elusive drawing room criminal, but subsequently endangers her reputation in order to protect the charming robber.

Lionel Barrymore's role as the detective is said to outshine even his effective work in "Mata Hari" and "A Free Soul," and it is his oft-baffled attempts to catch the gentleman-thief, who resorts to the most amazing disguises and tricks to elude detection, that results in most of the picture's dramatic moments.

Settings Are Elaborate

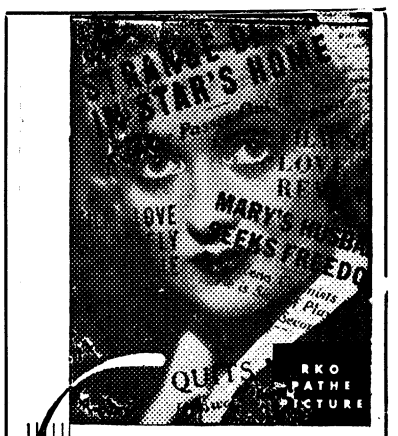
What are said to be some of the most expensive settings built at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios were required for "Arsene Lupin," whose action takes place largely in those homes, clubs and restaurants of Paris which are representative of the fashionable gatherings of the French metropolis. Of additional intreest as reproduction of the interiro of the French police laboratory in which is shown the manner by which detection of criminals is aided by means of masks which emphasize every feature of a suspect's face and of plaster casts which provide measurements of every part of the body.

The climax of the story takes place in a replica of the famous Louvre Art Gallery of Paris, a reproduction which entailed collection of hundreds of paintings. It is here that John Barrymore effects his master disguise as a flower seller and from which ultimately he makes a sensational escape.



She paid the price of fame to a public that wanted its pound of flesh!

29th Infantry

COMPANY "G"

Old Sol continues to beat down in spite of the incessant rain, and from his present position in the skies there is jsut about enough heat in the middle of the day to boil the hardest egg a Fort Benning hen could lay.

If asked to express an opinion, expert opinion, I believe would hope for more sun and less rain for the coming target season beginning about the middle of this month. If rifle companies suffered for the want of good light as badly as do Machine Gun Companies for their recrod firing, and rain continues to come down as it has, we would just about finish our target season in time for the Corps Area maneuers next spring.

"G" Company lost a most crucial game to Bn. Hdq. in the playoff for the Bn. championship. We have no kick. It was a good game and we feel Bn. Hdq. will represent the Bn. well in the playoff for the regimental championship.

COMPANY "E"

Daivdson, James A., went to New York and reenlisted for Panama; got so disgusted around New York that he decided to come back to Company "E" 29th Infantry. So he packed up and here is again with us.

WHEREAS THE GUNNER MAKES A COMEBACK

Some say that once a fighter has left the game, he can never come back. Here is a good tobacco-chewing argument for you. Two bags of Beech-Nut will turn the trick.

The hardest hitting fighter to ever show at Fort Benning is on the way to a comeback, and he looks good for sore eyes, or what malady have you. His left is working double duty, while that famous right is rounding into shape.

He has fought and defeated the best the South could offer, and is a dangerous threat at the present writing for all boys under 170 pounds. He will make the trip back along comeback's trail, and show the ring worms of what mettle he is made. Oh! for more fighters of the grit, integrity and necessary fortitude of the Pride of the 29th Infantry, Albert "Gunner" DePratt.

ISSUE HANK SOME CANTEEN CHECKS

Hank Drawdy, famous paper arm pitcher of the Artillery, now retired from the game, seems to want a few canteen checks. Hank likes his checks pink, green, brown or purple trimmed in bright yellow. All he wants is checks.

The other afternoon Hank was staring off into space, day dreaming, when, without provocation, he popped out with, "Monday is the eleventh, isn't it?" Someone agreed. "Saturday is the ninth, isn't it." All agreed. Hank smiled and left the arena.

The only deductions we can draw is that Hank knew all the while that Sunday was the tenth, and that they would issue canteen checks on Saturday, the ninth. Gonna buy a Rolls, Hank?

"A" was next with 40, Battery "B" with 28, Engineers with 24, and the Signal Corps with 5. The winners, or winning teams of each even were as follows:

Hundred yard dash—Turk, "B," (10.4); one mile run—McQueen, J. E., "B," (4.49); 120 yard low hurdles—Simmons W. P., "C," (15); 220 yard dash—Grant, "A," (25); 440 yard run—McQueen, W. Discus—Arthur, "A," (112 ft. 5 in.); Tug-of-war, Battery "C"; 440 Yard relay—Battery "B."

frame crawled the other morning for being in improper uniform for fatigue.

Corp. Feagin, Oscar, took off yesterday on a fifteen day furlough to Pineapple, Alabama. We wonder just what he will accomplish while away.

"High" Davis, the top kick, took an emergency pass to Miami, Florida, and Sergeant Millard F. Matthews was acting first sergeant in his absence.

Quite a few men were on pass during the Fourth of July and the week end. Corp. Rains was celebrating his Fourth at Fort Mitchell and someone stole his switch key and he had to borrow another man's "You drive it" to get back to the Fort.

We are all anxious to get on the range and make our qualification.

McDonald our famous truck driver, has reenlisted and taken out a stack for three more years. He has also purchased himself a Chevrolet.

We have a new Corporal in the company this week, Corp. Williams, R. B. He is to be made at Headquarters 29th Infantry on Wednesday, July 6, 1932.

We are all sorry to lose Colonel Major this week. Hope we will like our new Colonel Toffey as well.

Our baseball team is winning all their games, that is, all except one to the Medicos. We are looking for revenge on that team next week. We have two teams in the city league and nine ball Dean looks great on second base except he seemed to have a spring in his back and he could not stoop over. All balls went thru his legs.

24th Infantry

Coming events cast their shadows before them. What, oh what is to become of us? Technical Sergeant David C. King husband of Mrs. David C. King spent the week end visiting the sick and afflicted. Yea! He did even so. And the half has not been told. Feeling so uplifted and benefited by this benevolent gesture, his soul expanded and feeling at peace with the world, the said Sergeant passing one of the several Houses of The Lord in Columbus heard the beautiful strains of, "Almost Persuaded" wafting hither and yon in the cool evening breeze and he did harken and straightway enter the Church. Truth is stranger than fiction.

The Band is well represented in the invasion of Tuskegee Institute where the 24th Infantry players will do battle via tennis raquet. The occasion is the Southern tournament and several strips of the proverbial "bacon" are expected with the heroes upon their return with their shields. Players from the Band are Privates first class Laurin Decuir, David Mason and Charles Penrose.

Armed with authority from the Band Commander, Captain M. A. Gillis, who is heart and soul in the 24th Infantry Band recreation room, Sergeants William W. Hodges, Alfred Williams and Corporal Harvey Rhodes soared forth into the city of Columbus, Georgia intent upon buying at least a thousand dollars worth of furniture for about two hundred bucks which the Band Commander had authorized the three musketeers to spend in an effort to bring our long awaited day room up to the standard of the lobbies of the most up to date hotels. To say these three modern merchants of Venice did well would be to put it mildly; these men did themselves proud and with the advent of the piano and pool table and hundreds of other incidentals into our lounge we believe it will be second to none in the army.

At the present writing the Shuffle Along is still shuffling and is a lasting monument to Mr. Henry Ford.

At this time dear readers and at the next note of the gong this station BAND will sign off leaving the air until the same date next week at which time we hope that the powers that be, aided by our Congressional and Senatorial fathers will have solved the problem of how to pay the writer his accrued pay from the 1st instant, to say nothing of that which materialsizes in the future.

COMPANY "A"

The Company has just received from Tank School Detachment three of the old gang, namely Sergeant Sargant, Pvt. 1cl Soula and Pvt. Fitzpatrick.

The target season has just started and you ought to see the boys trying to beat their last year's scores. Last year some of the boys didn't do so well, but enthusiasm is great this year and all are likely to go over big. Some of the boys are willing to stake their all on beating his fellow comrades' last year's score.

The baseball team is trying hard to leave the bottom when the next half is played. The first half was a jinx to the team, they say.

COMPANY "C"

In view or the fact that the company was engaged in target practice, we still maintained the old dance spirit and entertained with our usual dance on last Wednesday night. We wish our guests to know that we appreciated the large attendance despite the rain.

"Holding and Squeezing" seems to be quite the popular phrase during the target season. To one who might not be familiar with the meaning, we shall make it clear. It simply means "Good wishes" to the man going up on the firing line.

We are glad to have Sgt. Toomer and Corp. Murray with us again after their long stay at the Tank School, Ft. Meade, Md. They report many interesting happenings in the eastern cities.

BENNING HERALD

VOLUME II — FORT BENNING, GA., FRIDAY, JULY 15, 1932 — NUMBER 12

Benning Briefs

We promised last week some of the more lurid details of the recent fishin trip to the Dead Lakes in which "Ham" Kelly and Captain Fry participated. We have it on the authority of one of the most keen observers at Benning that this trip was fully up to expectations, and, in the absence of the far-famed conductor of the Flare, we'll endeavor to shed some light on the incidents which made up the trip.

The Flare, several weeks ago, brought to the attention of Benning some of the diving talent of the post, in the person of the Athletic Officer. This is just and proper, for if diving doesn't come under the head of athletics, we don't know where it does come. (Ours, however, all comes out flat). But, it seems that Capt. Fry did his fancy diving while still garbed in the raiments of civilization, a very unwise thing to do, as it is hard on clothes. The fact remains, though, that he did.

Lt. Kelly, so the story told by our correspondent goes, evidently must have admired the athletic officer's success and tried to emulate him. While he was busily fishing, and the line was bobbing up and down, suddenly he decided that the hook and line method was too slow and that the other method was more efficient, for he went over head first into the black depths of the Lakes. What the fish did when he saw this apparition coming, is not recorded, but, if it was a lady fish, we have no further doubts.

Another juicy story of the trip brings out the fact that Captain Fry (He's coming in for quite a lot of publicity, isn't he?) retired to the cabin after a morning's fishing and stayed there for the rest of the trip. We can only conjecture, as regards this incident, that the Cap'n was either ashamed that Lt. Kelly was a better diver than he was or that he does not like the waters of the Dead Lakes, particularly as a swimming pool.

* * *

O. O. McIntyre, in the latest issue of Cosmopolitan, brings out a bit of homely philosophy from an old timer. "I've had a lot of things to worry about" says the old boy "but most of them never happened." A most appropriate bit of wisdom, we call it, in view of the present times.

* * *

The trick grass and weed burner that invaded the Post last Wednesday was "the stuff." It made quite a sideshow, but we'd hate to meet it on a dark night. Might prove a little weird.

We've heard of farm relief and unemployment relief, but now we know what "Army relief" is when we hear the contented sighs chasing around the Post as the news comes that there will be no cut in the officer personnel of the Army.

* * *

Lt. Gunbotham has run out on us and we can't find him. He failed to come through with his copy this week and, on investigation, we found that he had gone on a month's leave. Most unkind, we say, and hope that our readers won't miss his temporary departure from our columns too much.

Benning Soldier Killed In Wreck Of Motorcycle

Corporal Willis E. Cunningham, of the Infantry School Detachment, at Fort Benning, was killed while riding his motorcycle on the Macon Road about six miles from Columbus. Corporal Cunningham, according to reports, was riding at a high rate of speed toward Columbus, when his machine left the road on a downhill curve, ran back on the road, and finally left the road again. The rider was probably instantly killed, his neck and right arm were broken, and his skull probably fractured.

The accident occurred at about 3:30 Thursday afternoon, while Corporal Cunningham was returning to Fort Benning. He was accompanied by another soldier and by the son of Doc Brooks, of Columbus, at the time of the accident.

Corporal Cunningham was the son of M. C. Cunningham of Bellmore, Ohio, and was on duty at the Public Relations Office of Fort Benning, which position he has held for several months. He first enlisted with the 31st Infantry in 1919 and served in Siberia under Lt. LeRoy W. Yarborough, who is now Public Relations officer of the Post. He returned to the United States for service with the Coast Guard on the Pacific Coast and was stationed at San Francisco. He was transferred to the 96th Division and was in the Finance Department, stationed at the Philippine Islands from 1922 to 1925. He was stationed at Tientsin, China with the 15th Infantry from 1925 to 1927, and while there he served as an associate editor of the "Sentinel." He was discharged in 1927 after which he worked with the American Express Company until his reenlistment in 1929, with the 7th Infantry in Alaska. He came to Fort Benning in 1931 and worked with the Infantry School News until its suspension in April, after which he was assigned to the Public Relations Office.

Corporal Cunningham conducted a column in the Herald until recently, when it was discontinued, and had written several articles for the columns of the paper. For the past few months he has served as a member of the Public Relations Staff under Lt. Yarborough.

Contract Awarded For Construction Of New Quarters

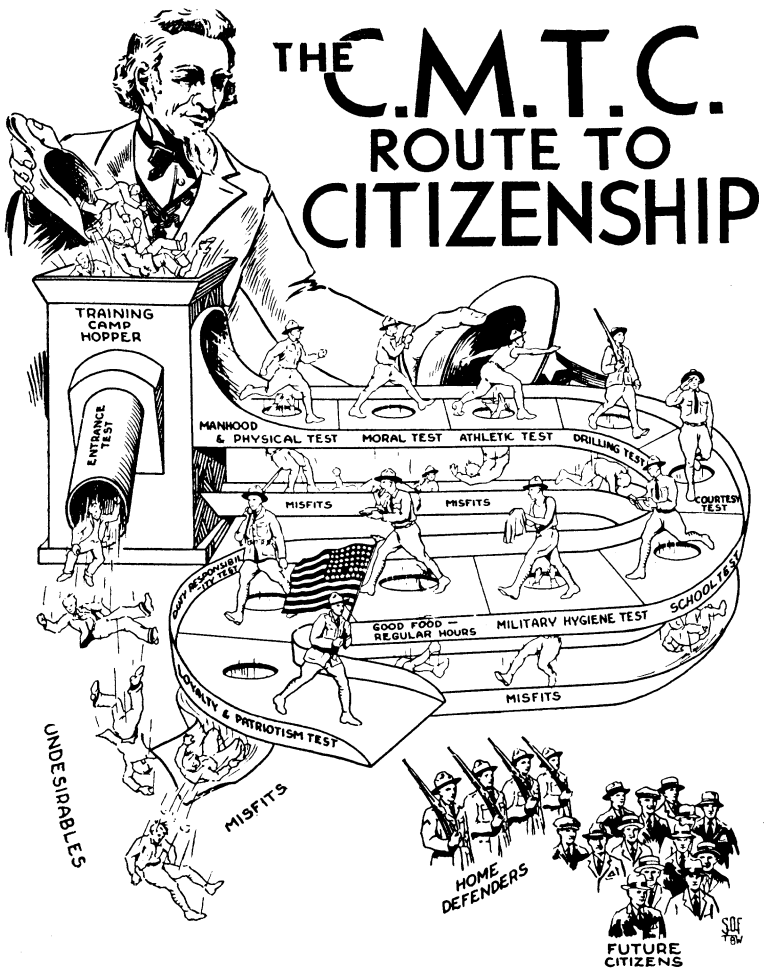
Construction of nine quarters for noncommissioned officers and 90 smaller buildings to be used as garages is expected to begin at Fort Benning within the next few days under the terms of a contract which was awarded on Tuesday by Captain Carl Jabelonsky, constructing quartermaster, to Donald McIver of Atlanta. Bids were received on the project several weeks ago from a number of local contractors and have been under consideration in the construction division of the Quartermaster General's office which today instructed Captain Jabelonskey to award the contract to Mr. McIver whose bid was $62,589.86. Under the terms of the contract the buildings must be completed within 120 working days.



Armed with broader knowledge, and inspired by new ideas of citizenship, more than four thousand young Americans of southern states returned to their homes this week upon the conclusion of a one month period of voluntary training in the seven Citizens' Military Training Camps of the Fourth Corps Area. Similar camps in other parts of the country, which are now in progress or are about to begin, will give the same training to thirty-four thousand other young men. Altogether, the camps of 1932 will add reinforcements numbering 38,000 to the civic forces which are girding themselves to carry on the fight against lawlessness, organized hoodlumism, gangster rule, and corruption of government.

This drawing is a father's conception of the process through which he saw his own son pass, in company with the sons of hundreds of other men, and emerge, at its conclusion, stamped with the approval of a severe and precise evaluating system. The artist who drew this picture is also a Major General in the United States Army, a fact which lends further interest and emphasis to his description of his son's progress in the lessons of citizenship.

In composing his picture, Major General Stephen O. Fuqua, Chief of Infantry, has taken for his inspiration one of the marvelous machines which are used in American industry to insure the perfection of its products and to maintain their superior standards. He has likened the training program of the Citizens' Military Training Camps to the operations of one of these machines which sorts The articles which pass through it, evaluating and separating the good from the bad, discarding the misfits, the imperfect, all those which do not measure up to the specificaion standards set for the finished product. Only the best survive the selective process, all the others fall out of the procession before the goal is recalled. They remain in line just long enough to exhibit a flaw which each of the several searching and progressively severe tests in the series is designed to reveal.

The artist has drawn an imaginary machine designed for mass production of responsible citizens and has shown in detail its operations from the moment it receives its raw maerial to the time when it discharges its finished product. Raw materials, in the form of untrained individuals, are fed into the hopper. There the obvious misfits and undesirables are quickly separated and discharged. They do not even get into the main part of the machine. After this first sorting, those that are left are passed into the mechanism and there they meet their first test, which determines their physical fitness for the rigorous regimen which is to follow. The weaklings, the unfit, fall out here, and they are shown falling through the aperture whose gap represents a gauge which quickly reveals their deficiencies. The survivors of this test find other ordeals awaiting them as they pass through the machine, each of which is a pitfall for the unwary or the inept. Near the end of the machine is shown a finished unit which has passed through all of the testing processes and is ready to take its place with the others which have been approved. These are then shown in two roles for which they have been prepared—home defenders and future citizens.

The artist has entitled this picture "The C. M. T. C. Route to Citizenship," but he could have with equal propriety and correctness entited it "The R. O. T. C.," "The National Guard," or "The Regular Army Route to Citizenship," for American military training and American citizenship training are synonymous.

Reserve Officers' Training Camp Ends Its Session

The Reserve Officers' Training Camp which opened at Fort Benning on June 6, with a total personnel of three hundred and seven members, will officially close on Saturday July 16, with presentation ceremonies, in which the students will receive their medals for athletic events, their marksmanship badges and their certificates of attendance at the camp. Commissions as 2nd Lieutenants in the Reserve Corps will be presented at the same time to seventeen of the cadets who have been in attendance at the camp.

The instructional facilities of Fort Benning have been placed at the disposal of the officials in charge of instruction for the cadets and they have received training in practically every field of elementary work in Field Artillery, Signal Corps and Engineer branches. Athletic instruction has also played a prominent part in the routine of the camp, and teams representing divisions of the camp have contended in field and track events and in baseball games on several occasions.

The students at the camp represent colleges in Georgia, Alabama and Florida, the largest group having come from the Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn. The University of Florida and Georgia Tech are also represented by groups of students.

During their course at Benning the cadets have had actual field work with the guns, equipment nad horses of the 83rd Field Artillery, the seventh engineers and the signal corps instructors. Firing, building of temporary bridges and instrucion in communication were among the divisions of the course which was given the cadets as a part of their training, which covers a period of six weeks. Marksmanship has also been one of the points which is stressed by the officials of the camp.

On Saturday the students will turn in their equipment to the Post storeroom and will police the camp area thoroughly. The graduation ceremonies will take place in the morning and Major Gustav H. Franke will present their commissions to the cadets whose proficiency has qualified them for this award. The following students will receive commissions:

Jack S. Ganttjs, Signal Corps
John McGregor, Signal Corps
Daniel A. McKeevor, Jr. Signal Corps
Thomas A. Manning, Signal Corps
Tarver S. Murphy, Jr. Signal Corps
Jack S. Murray, Signal Corps
Morris T. Reed, Signal Corps
Lawrence B. Short, Signal Corps
Withers Birdsong, Engineers
James W. Cantrell, Engineers
Robert C. Hanson, Engineers
Cecil W. Mullin, Engineers
Joseph M. Plant Jr. Engineers
Ben A. Bentley, Field Artillery
Lawrence F. Camp, Field Artillery
Herbert Harris, Field Artillery
William Johnson, Field Artillery

The last of the weekly dances which have been a feature of the social life of the camp will be held tonight and will be sponsored by the Scabbard and Blade Society, which has several representatives among the students at the camp. The last of the instructional activities which will be given the students will be a tank demonstration at the Tank Park this afternoon and

Radium Springs Is Famed Over South

On the Apalachian Scenic Highway, 4 miles from Albany, Ga. is the popular Radium Springs Resort, formerly known as Blue Springs. This resort has become famous for its healthful radio-active springs. Yet, strange as it may seem, no one seems to know precisely what health properties are characteristic of these waters.

Many springs waters, in seeping through rocks to their outlets, become impregnated with healthful minerals, and this is evidently true of Radium Springs. A dip into these radio-active waters helps to relieve nervous irritation and fatigue with the result that the bather or swimmer has a refresh-

In this High-pressure Age smokers want a Milder Cigarette

WE LIVE in a fast-moving age. We work harder . . . play harder . . . travel quicker. And we smoke more cigarettes.

But there's this about it: They have got to be milder today. In this high-pressure age, smokers don't like strong cigarettes.

About four miles of warehouses are filled with mild, ripe, Domestic tobaccos, stored away to age for two years to make them mild and mellow for CHESTERFIELD Cigarettes.

To make sure that CHESTERFIELD is a milder cigarette, the greater part of 90 million dollars is invested in the tobaccos used in CHESTERFIELD. These tobaccos are "Cross-Blended."

This "Welding" Together—or "Cross-Blending"—permits every kind of tobacco used in the CHESTERFIELD blend to partake of the best qualities of every other type. It's the same principle that Burbank used in crossing different fruits to make a still better fruit.

CHESTERFIELDS are milder . . . never harsh . . . and that's why, in this high-pressure age, more smokers, men and women, are changing to CHESTERFIELDS every day.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

SNAKE BITE

Several varieties of snake whose venom is poisonous to man are found on the Fort Benning Reservation. Twenty-five milligrams of venom has been considered as the dose fatal to a man weighing 150 pounds.

The average diamond-back rattler injects 220 milligrams at one bite; the average cottonmouth moccasin injects 150 milligrams or six times the fatal dose; the average copperhead about 45 milligrams, or 2 fatal doses; the red rattlesnake 60 milligrams or 2 fatal doses; the average pigmy rattlesnake 6 milligrams or 1-4 the fatal dose.

There is a difference in the poisonous properties in the different kinds of venom. Venom from the water moccasin is the most poisonous; that from the ground rattler the least.

The most common place for snake bite is on the legs. Three times out of four the lower extremity is the location of the bite. About once in four times the bite is on the hands or arms. Bites on the head or body are fortunately rare, only three times in a hundred. When one is bitten by a poisonous snake several things are immediately noted: (1) a profuse bleeding of the wound; (2) a fiery pain; (3) rapid swelling; then follow nausea vomiting and signs of shock, rapid pulse and collapse. Death may occur within forty minutes. It therefore follows that treatment must be begun at once if we hope to save the victim of snakebite.

TREATMENT

(1) Prevent a fatal dose getting into circulation. This means placing a tourniquet above the bite. The tourniquet must be loosened every 20 minutes to reestablish circulation and prevent gangrene. Then above the bite cross cuts must be made to allow free bleeding to wash out the venom. As the swelling increases there should be made more cross cuts around the edge for this is where the venom is mostly absorbed. Suction should be applied first to the bite and later to the cross cuts ot help remove the venom. Suction apparatus consists of a glass bell and rubber bulb, such as a breast pump. Suction should be kept up for 20 minutes every hour even for 24 hours and when without mechanical equipment perhaps one may take a chance with your mouth and lips. This may be considered first aid.

The patient should be rushed to the hospital for it is there that antivenene can be given. Antivevene is the only treatment that will neutralize the venom in the circulation. Antivenene as manufactured in the country is a horse serum which contains neutralizing substances against the venom of all varieties of rattle snakes, the moccasin, and the copper head. Antivenene should be given as soon as possible after the bite. When given early and in sufficient dose it will prevent a fatal outcome. At it is perhaps never possible to administer anivenene immediately at the time of the bite, we must never forget that the first aid treatment is of the utmost importance. Without this first aid we can not save the life of the victim, or at least only rarely, even with the aid of antivenene.

To prevent snake bite it is necessary to remember that most always they occur on the exposed surfaces of the body. When you go into a region infested with snakes guard your legs with high boots or stiff leggins, and don't explore bushes, rocks and ledges with the bare hands until you poke around them with a stick. In marsh wear rubber boots hip high.

With the exception of the diamond back all snakes will run away if given the chance. Kill all poisonous snakes. Save king snakes, racers, black snakes and others for they kill and eat rattle snakes of a smaller size. Turkeys, hawks and owls kill poisonous snakes.

RADIUM SPRINGS

ed, exhilarating feeling of renewed health and vigor. Other famous springs in the United States noted for their health properties are Saratoga Springs and Sharon Springs at Hot Springs National Park; while travelers abroad often visit the famous springs at Aix-la-Chapelle in the Rhine province, and Baden-Baden in Germany.

The Indians called the famous spring at this South Georgia resort "Skywater" because of the peculiar blue color of the water, which almost defies description. Every minute of the day and night 70,000 gallons of clear, blue water gush forth from the bowl of the spring. This amounts to more than 4 million gallons an hour, or 50.400,000 gallons a day, which is enough water for a city of nearly 500,000 inhabitants.

According to the United States Geological Survey, there are nine states having springs of the first magnitude. One of the largest is located in the State of Idaho, where from the walls of the Snake River Canyon a thousand springs, forming veils of silver lace upon the grim walls of black lava. These springs, which enhance forty miles of the canyon, could furnish 120 gallons of water a day for every person in all the cities of the United States of over 100,000 inhabitants.

The temperature of springs is nearly the same as that of the underground rock over which the water flows. Cool springs, such as Radium Springs (with a never-varying temperature of 68 degrees) have deep sources whose temperature is not affected by climatic changes, and which varies but little throughout the year.

Surrounded by cool cypress trees and sweet pine woodlands, Radium Springs Resort has an 18 hole championship golf course as well sa many other attractions which, with its famous radio-active springs, make this resort one of the most popular weekend and vacation spots in the South.

$650,000.00 APPROPRIATED FOR NEW BARRACKS

The new barracks to be built at Fort Benning have come much nearer realization with the appropriation of $650,000.00 for their construction, according to information recently reaching the Post from Washington.

And They Said It With Poetry

Riley wrote of a place for swimmin'
Where boys grown men could dip,
Without dodging the eyes of Wimmin,
Who would call it a social slip.

He wuzent speakin' of Jeff's Hole, we know
Way back on Hobnail Creek,
Where some soldiers like sometimes to go,
Say once or twice each week.

'N' wasn't down on the Upatoi,
By that windin' rocky trail,
For they often ride old Jim, ol' boy,
A feller aint got the chance of a snail.

He knew a soldier didn't have a chance
To slip off while it's cool
And slip off his denim pants,
And play in that placid pool.

Where can a feller find a stream
'Way back, and well secluded,
So's a feller can dive, 'n plunge, 'n scream
And know the wimmin aint intruded?

The above was inspired by a rather jocular person, who while scouting for subject matter for the column, ran into a delicate situation.

Four members of "H" Company 29th Infantry had gone last Monday out to that famous Jefferson's hole to take a private dip in its placid depths. They made it all right, having the time of their lives during that short period of abandon that seldom comes into a man's life. It is grand to foster a back to nature movemen, including the matter of creek-hole swimming holes, where a man can just swim without thinking all the while that his bathing suit is a little too tight.

It comes to us that these fellows didn't have any bother about a bathing suit's being tight, and were happy as larks. Just as they had finished their plunge, and were preparing to come back to the post, they heard a car horn honk. This speeded up the matter of dressing, but it seemed to accelerate the movement of the approaching car.

They had about gotten a good start, when up drove the machine and of course all the occupants weren't men. This was the time to be nonchalant, but Sergeant Ryles didn't have a M— to light. Sergeant DePratt, being a little fast on the enrobing act, had little to worry about, he just smiled. Poor Sergeant Allen. Too excited to move, and had to be shoved under the back seat double quick. What happened to Corporal Barnett? Well . . . they had to burn the woods and sift the ashes to find him. It is rumored, unofficially, that this is what started the forest fire that got loose from the Range Guards.

2D BN. HQ. COMPANY

We haven't been represented in this column for sometime due to the fact that we did not have any news; but now we have so much that it is doubtful whether or not it will miss the well known wase basket. Anyway—here goes: First we will proudly point out the fact that this company has been declared the winner of the coveted "E," thereby signifying the fact that we are the best Headquarters company in the Regiment for the year 1931-32 and have the honor of wearing the letter "E" on our blouse for one year. This is quite a disinction and one we are proud of, as it could only be accomplished by the hard work on the part of every member of the organization throughout the year. One thing that makes the victory especially sweet is he fact that we beat our old rivals 1st Bn. Hq. Co., by the overwhelming majority of 66 points. They should know who is the best Hq. Co. in Uncle Sam's war now—if they ever had any doubt about it!

CONDUCTED BY E. F. H.

CONDUCTOR OF FLARE DEPARTS

The distnguished columnist, E. F. H., braving congressional enactments, and possible interpretation thereto by the Comptroller of the Treasury, departed on leave on July 8th.

Before leaving he left a check to pay his bill at the Commissary. A careful scrutiny of this otherwise piece of legal tender revealed the fact that no signature appeared thereon.

Several conjectures have been made as to the cause of this slight omission:

(1) It was a scheme to avoid payment of the iniquitous two-cent tax.
(2) It was a plan to avoid payment of the account.
(3) He hoped the check would be charged to a general fund kept at the bank for such purposes.
(4) He just forgot to sign it.

THE SERVICE WIFE

The recent issues of the Academic Library Bulletin (Captain Howard Wilson, Editor) lists the more important magazine articles according ot the tenor of their content.

Some time back our attention was invited to Captain Wilson's classification of an article in The American Mercury, "The Service Wife" under the head of "Morale." An investigation developed the fact that the offense was intentional on the part of the editor—being designed as a subtle joke on the ladies. Like most subtle jokes, however, this one fell flat and Editor Wilson got only one rise. Either the women don't read the Academic Library Bulletin or they have decided to ignore Mrs. Watt's not altogether fair analysis of the life of service women folk. To be sure, the article was inadvertently complimentary in spots, but its main purport was decidedly otherwise and, at the time it came out, some of the girls were quite incensed about it.

The author of "The Service Wife" related a number of interesting anecdotes about army social life, the substantial truthfulness of which we do not dispute. Indeed, we might have supplied her with some additional ammunition of the same character had she asked us. She also had a lot to say about service entertaining, with which we are in accord, insofar as it pertains to the formal, routine, competitive variety. In justice to our army women, however, it should be noted that even our most formal affairs are not one whit more deadly than similar functions in other walks of life.

One thing that seems to gripe the lady is the fact that service wives, when they get together, prefer to talk about "the latest orders, one's neighbor's grocery bills or his morals and the price of his car and his servants," rather than about art and international affairs. "Gradually," says she, "even the most intellectual are engulfed beneath the flood of petty gossip, of facile friendships or fribbling pleasures." Really, somebody out to write and tell her about our Woman's Club.

We are forced to wonder at what stations the author of "The Service Wife" got her data. Either she was most unfortunate in the garrisons she served in or she didn't get invited out much with the really worth while people. Or perhaps she suffered under both handicaps—which might account for the wholly distorted picture she paints.

In psychoanalyzing Mrs. Watts—having nothing but her article to go by—we are forced to conclude that she is a militant intellectual who is resentful toward the service because it didn't appreciate her special line. We suspect that she had a mission in life and got mad because she couldn't hold her audience at cocktail parties. There are people, you know, who prefer to get their information about world affairs from current literature rather than from their dinner partners.

Granting that our really good parties are not designed to develop character or increase knowledge (although one can learn a lot if one keeps one's ears open), they are much to be preferred o any which might have for the piece de resistance a serious minded service wife "fresh from a trip abroad or a stimulating winter in New York, longing to talk of Briand or Toscanini, the opera or Paul Morand." Personally, we shouldn't begrude a few minutes of party time spent in discussing Briand with a good looking girl and we might even listen politely to an attractive woman talking of Paul Morand long enough to find out what his particular racket is, but that isn't exactly our idea of whoopee. When we go to a party we want light, laughter, comraderie, good fellowship, beauty, variety, charm, wine, women, song and whatnot—anything but uplift.

And so it happens that after reading Mrs. Watt's indictment of service wives, we felt rather well satisfied that those we know best are as they are rather than superior women after the author's heart, who would turn our social gatherings into free for all forums for the enlightenment of the unfortunates who can't escape them.

Maybe it's just the tired business man complex asserting itself, but we are like that.

General Fuzzard Discusses Vice-Presidential Possibilities

General Fuzzard, the Progrestatic candidate for president, is looking about for a likely runnng mate.

"I've been looking 'em over" he remarked as he bit the end off of one of Pulsifer's Specials, "and I can see several likely possibilities right here at Benning. Me being an army Officer myself, as it were, having served in the Spanish American War with Sam McCants, some may have objections to another military man on the ticket, but objections don't cut any ice with me.

"Take Major Barnwell Legge for instance. There's a he-man who might be able to fill my shoes if some Bolshevik bumped me off, which I hope he won't. What I like about Barney is that nobody has anything on him, He's been around here for two years without even being mentioned in The Flare. It ain't because he never does anything, either. He's discreet, that's what he is, and we need him on the ticket. There is some other good material hereabouts, but right now Bar-

Mata Hari

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Mata Hari, famous dancer and enemy spy, undertakes to get some secret papers from her lover Shubin, Attache of the Russian Embassy in Paris. Shubin has been unnerved by a visit from Dubois, the head of the French Secret Service, and refuses o discuss them. But before leaving his house, Mata Hari meets again a young aviator, Alexander Rosanoff, whom she has permitted to make love to her and dismissed.

"Oh . . . oh . . . what drama in a simple statement! Why, of course I will dance and die. Don't we all die?"

But Shubin saw that she did not in the least believe this, any more than any healthy person believes in death.

"But you will die, Mata," he insisted, trying to impress her with the seriousness of her position. "He knows a great deal about you. You are strongly suspected. He knows that on the day of the declaration of war you lunched with the Prefect of Police in Berlin and drove with him all afternoon through the crowds . . . "

"My dear friend! But I could explain that perfectly! The Prefect of Police supervises the theatres. There had been some complaint about my dance to Kali—there are prudes everywhere—and he came to see for himself. When a functionary so important to one, for he could have banned the performance, invites one to lunch and drive—what's one to do?"

"But it's more than that! Dubois says that you are always in the company of soldiers, especially aviators. No sooner does one of these men come to see you on leave, than it is apparent that the enemy has received fresh information. How would you explain that?"

"I wouldn't attmept to explain that! There are no worthwhile men here who are not soldiers, and I find aviators most charming. I don't expect you to sympathize with this. You are so infernally jealous. But I am sure Monsieur Dubois would."

"It's a pity," she said lightly, "that I have had no opportunity to converse with Monsieur Dubois.'

"You are likely to have that opportunity soon—and repent it!"

"My dear Shubin!" Often she bluntly called men by their last names, man-fashion. "Are you threatening me?"

At this point the servant came in to make the fire. They fell into a silence which was welcome to the dancer, at least, for it gave her time to reflect. A queer thought occurred to her. That Dubois suspected Shubin was, of course, obvious. But that would be an exceedingly grave matter. Shubin was not only very well-connected but not under French jurisdiction; his home, his office stood on diplomatic ground, Russian ground. Moreover, Dubois would realize Shubin was just a tool. Could it be that the French Secret Service was striking at her through Shubin, that he had been approached in the hope that he would say or do something to betray her? He would never shield himself behind her skirts, she did him the justice to believe. But—but he could be trapped.

(To Be Continued)

29th Infantry

We would also like to announce that we have in the company a new arrival in the person of Sammie Cook, better known as "Cookie," who promises to be a coming welterweight champ of the world. But it seems he is rather wild with his promises. Cookie has been looking for some sparring partners lately and someone recommended the well known Cooter Carter, who has fought every man in the battalion with the exception of his company commander, and lost to all of them. It seems that Cooter resented the fact that Cookie wanted to use him for a sparring partner. Why, Cookie, haven't you heard of Cooter Carter—the man with the face they like to punch, (and most of them have—with the result that it has more indentions in it than the rock of Gibraltar—and just as much shape). It's a well known fact in the Battalion that Cooter has fought at least 500 fights and lost 501 (fought one fellow twice in Panama City on the hike and got beat twice). And so the argument got so hot that the result was the boys betook themselves over to the Gym, followed by half the Battalion, and there and then to decide who was who and why. Two seconds after the boys donned the mitts the place was filled with more gloves, according to Cookie, than a glove factory. It seems that Cooter led with three rights and two lefts to the jaw and Cookie neatly blocked them wih his chin, which was the wrong thing to do under the circumstances. There was a sickening crash as Cookie did a Blondy Parker through the ropes and lit ten feet away. It seems, also, that Cookie had enough but McAllister, the referee, pulled a long count (the fact is he actually helped Cookie to his feet as he counted over him), and insisted that Cookie still had a chance for the championship. This was refused by Cookie and so the championship went to the mighty Cooter Carter. It was then discovered that Cookie had lost some of his molars—nine to be exact—as the result of blocking with his face. He was rushed to the swimming pool and the stomach pump retrieved ten perfectly good teeth for him. The question has now arisen as to the source of the extra tooth, as Cookie only nine and found ten. It is believed that he secured the extra one while in the nose dive across the canvas, one which had been lost by Bull Smith in the fight with Sailor Grant back in 1926. Cookie says he intends sending the tooth to the Smithsonian Institute to be placed along side of Lindbergh's plane and the Venus de Milo.

COMPANY "E"

Company "E" is making a great record these days. We have not had a desertion or a trial in three months in the company.

Corporal Tate was around the Company this week still on his 90 days furlough. He is expecting to turn in soon from his maneuvers. Cook Runnels has returned from his furlough and he must have had a great time for he came back with his lips all plastered up.

While the first sergeant's clerk "Sand Crab" Cliatt, was on a three days' pass, he almost burned the typewriter down making out all the work. Our Pool Room man, Freeman, said he cooled the typewriter off with his helmet.

Graves was transferred to 2nd Battalion Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry.

"Husky" Milligan, one of our student bakers is training every day now with the Cooks and Bakers School and says when he gets out of the Cooks and Bakers School he is going to take up fighting. We all hope he will make good at his new trade.

Sergeant Arevalo is a busy man these days trying shooting thru the barrack windows and the porches and it is believed that he will be the hardest man for the top kick to beat on the target range.

Edgren Gets Decision In Rotten Show

Johnson Outfought By Westerner

A flashy, two-fisted attack unleashed in the first and ninth rounds enabled Frankie Edgren drug store cowboy from old Wyoming, to win a decision over Ching Johnson, of Benning, in the main event of last Tuesday night's card at Doughboy stadium.

Edgren demonstrated to the amazement of all and sundry, that he could punch with either hand by catching Ching on the button in the first and settling him in the resin for a short count. Johnson finished the round reeling and rocking on his heels while sharp lefts rattled off his head like rain. Had the Wyoming wild man pursued this pace in the second session, there is little doubt he would have crumpled Ching on the canvass for keeps. But Edgren didn't. At the end of the initial canto a smallish, swarthy young manager from old Mexico might have been observed grinning and chatting animately into the ear of Frankie. These expostulations between rows of snow white molars obviously advised Edgren to slow down and carry the soldier along to give the customers a run for their money. Then, to the astonishment of all, Frankie came out of his corner in the second—not with head lowered for the "kill" many shouted for, but with a light, terpsichorean movement that might have gone for an imitation of the dance of the seven veils or a grotesque movement among that strange colonist of Nudists that confound policemen in various sections of Europe.

Edgren paled the clowning of Batlin' Bozo into insignificance. While fans screamed:

"Use your left again . . . . let go with that one-two of yours . . . . ride 'im cowboy" and other expressions characteristic of addicts to the prize ring, Frankie Edgren staggered around the ring, rolling against the ropes, his head falling first to one side and then to the other much the same as the neck of a fowl that has just felt the keen edge of an axe and, to tell the truth, acting in the most scandalous manner an exponent of jab and jolt has ever exhibited in a ring at the post.

This sort of thing went on round after round. Fans appealed for action and Ching tried desperately to accomodate them but it was no use. Edgren wound up in imitation of a base ball pitcher, strutted an instant like a barroom bouncer of old, shuffled his dogs like a marathon dancer and ended the strange performance by plunging half way across the ring and into the ropes as though he intended doing a Steve Brodie into the laps of the ringsiders. Holy Cow, but it was terribe! Some arose and walked from the stadium.

The thing began to get on the nerves of Major L. K. (Good Referee) Patterson who, despite his excellent judgment and other commendable qualifications as the third man in the ring, always elicits a Bronx cheer from the assemblage whenever he intones in deep bass: "Round four, coming up . . . . round six, coming up . . . . etc." So along about the eighth the major tapped Mr. Edgren on the shouder and admonished him on something or other that apparently wasn't very complimenary, intended, of course, to convey to the cowboy that Joe E. Brown, Ed Wynne and El Brendel are still recognized as comedians of a calibre sufficient to uphold their profession and it certainly is not considered the best etiquette in pugilistic circles to make a fool of oneself in the hempen enclosure because fans prefer murder to clowning every evening in the week. Naturally this did not set well with the man from Wyoming and he retaliated with a jumble of wild and wooly phrases far more disconcerting than the love licks he offered his foe.

The admonition had the effect for which it was intended, however, and in the ninth Mr. Edgren leaped from his stool and knocked Mr. Johnson down just three times before the gong signaized the conclusion of the round. The tenth found Ching exerting every effort to prevent going back to the canvas for the final count, and effort that was rewarded.

Cotton Batton, 24th Inf., Benning, knocked Panther Jim, of Pittsburgh, colder than a mackerel in the third round of their scheduled eight rounder. It was Batton all the way. The best thing Jim displayed was a lightning-like backhand right in the clinches that licked out like a serpent's tongue.

"That was a nice fight," a spectator complimented Batton as the latter leaped from the ring.

"Yes sir," Cotton retorted, "he just got a little anxious and a little careless."

Meanwhile the Panther was being removed from the ring—feet first.

J. C. Sewell, of Columbus, won a decision over Bunker Hill, Benning, in a fast six round main preliminary. Hill appeared to be overconfident and Sewell worked on him in the clinches. J. C. has improved much since this writer watched him begin his career about six or seven years ago.

Chick Liddell won a six rounder over Stratton Smith. Liddell had too much reach on Smith. Men with rake handle rights and men with short, chubby arms should never be matched when the matchmakers have other material available.

Ghost Ghastly stopped Herman Williams in a four rounder after Williams had gotten away to a big start.

Herbert Yetmeyer won over Sandy Huff in the second bout of the evening. The crowd enjoyed this one.

A second after the bell chimed in the first round, Dummy Nix, of Columbus, hung a haymaker on Babe Herman and the Babe went out like a light.

Batting Improves As First Half Of Season Nears End

Again baseball is looking up, so-to-speak, with the errors gradually becoming fewer as the ball rolls by. It seems that the batters have decided to make it better for the fielders and get clean hits.

The past week has turned in some of the longest hits of the season, among them two home-runs, one by Banks of the First Battalion and one by Hayes of the Special Units. These have been excelled only by Gilbert's hit out of the Park, week before last, as the score sheet goes.

The only horrible game was turned in yesterday afternoon, when the Tanks played the Special Units. The score of that nightmare was eighteen to 13, with the Tankers getting credit for a win. There were besides the thirty-one runs, twenty-six safe hits and twenty-one errors. Outside of that game, they have all been up to standard for this hot weather.

The pitching in going into a slump or the batting averages have a little to say about it. There are very few free passes, considering the time of season, etc.

The Medicos are still in the lead, trailed by the Second Battalion. The First Battalion is waiting for something to break as they can sep into a first or second place, but have little chance for that.

If the Kells beat the Medicos this week, they will be tied for first place, and will have to play off a short series for the first half pennant. If they lose, phooey! . . . The Medicos have it all to themselves, mostly Gilbert, the pitching ace of the past.

Unless the Artillery gets generous, the I. S. D.s have last place cinched. You never can tell, however.

The team standings appears below, and are correct up to and including Thursday, July 14.

| | W | L | Pct |
|---|---|---|---|
| Medicos | 8 | 1 | .888 |
| Second Bn. | 7 | 2 | .777 |
| First Bn. | 5 | 5 | .500 |
| Tanks | 4 | 6 | .400 |
| Special Units | 3 | 6 | .333 |
| Artillery | 3 | 7 | .300 |
| I. S. D. | 2 | 6 | .250 |

Dispensary Dope

Major Patterson has been so busy with sick calls for the last week that he couldn't tell the boys any fish tales, we all know he is going to break out with some real long "Fla. Jokes" just as soon as he can get caught up. Any way we are glad to see the Major back on the job.

Pvt. Bowden of the Medical Inspectors' Staff, is counting the days; three years is enough for any man to stay in Benning, says Bowden. He had better stick around for one more stack with the Pill Rollers, these "Gold-Bricking" jobs are not to be found all over the Army.

Something has come across Sammy, he never has much to say like he used to the little "Blond Baby" in Atlanta sure has him up in the air. Oh well, all is fair in love and war.

At Royal Beginning Saturday

Cinema Calendar

for Grand, Rialto and Royal

AT THE ROYAL

(Beginning with midnight show, Saturday, 11:15 P. M.)

ALSO SUNDAY, MONDAY AND TUESDAY: Presenting, "RED HEADED WOMAN", with Jean Harlow, Chester Morris, Lewis Stone, Lelia Hyams and others. Thousands have read Katharine Brush's best-seller novel, "RED HEADED WOMAN". Now thousands will want to see it on the screen with the novelty of Jean Harlow playing the title role with her famous platinum-blonde hair changed to red. Is the red-headed woman different fro mother women? Wives. Sweethearts. Beware, the red-headed woman is in town!

AT THE GRAND

SATURDAY, SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Presenting, "MAN ABOUT TOWN", with Warner Baxter and Karen Morley. With the eyes of the nation centering on Washington and its activities, a screen romance against the background of diplomacy and intrigue in the capital comes as a timely offering. Baxter and Conway Tearle are tried and true friends through years of work in the secret service, but the discovery that both are in love with the same girl complicates matters and turns friendship to hatred. From this point the story waxes exciting and maintains the interest to a thrilling climax.

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Presenting, "ALIAS THE DOCTOR", with Richard Barthelmess and Marian Marsh. The theme of this story envolves about the character of two boys, foster brothers—one of whom cares only for the frivolous things of life, while the other accepts all the duties and responsibilities, carrying out the obligations placed on him, even to the sacrifice of his love and his honor.

* * *

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY: Presenting, "COCK OF THE AIR", with Chester Morris, Billie Dove and Matt Moore. The sotry, an original, concerns the exciting love-match between the romantic ace of the American air service, played by Morris, and the toast of Paris, enacted by Miss Dove. The complications which ensue when the master and mistress of romance meet on common ground form the basis of an amazing and highly spiced tale of love and adventure in a World War background.

AT THE RIALTO

NOW PLAYING: Presenting, "HELL FIRE AUSTIN", with Ken Maynard, ace of Western stars. His only angle on life and love was to live on the square—to spare honest men and turn hot lead on the other sort. He lived a hair-trigger life on the hair-line of range law.

* * *

SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Presenting, "STREET SCENE", with Sylvia Sidney, William Collier, Jr., Estelle Taylor, David Landau and one of the strongest supporting casts assembled in a long time. Not so much with the street but more so with the people whose lives radiate from its rusty brownstone houses, is the play concerned. A girl who knows her mother is unfaithful, an insensitive, cruel father, a cynical old Jewish socialist trying to read a purpose into life, young love trying to rise above the squalor and misery, a lonesome woman, hungry for someone to talk to and—well, it is acclaimed one of the best of pictures.

ROYAL

"RED HEADED WOMAN"

The greatly-anticipated appearance of Jean Harlow, transformed from platinum blonde to a red-head, will take place at the Royal Theatre beginning Saturday, with a midnight show. Miss Harlow makes her red-headed bow in the title role of "Red Headed Woman."

It is a type of role particularly suited to her talents, for Miss Harlow has an indisputable flair for portraying the type of woman who can twist men around her fingers. In this instance she reveals not only a keen instinct for the demands of her characterization but a fresh acting personality as well.

Many Comic Episodes

You are going to like "Red Headed Woman," both in the story and in the person of the girl who plays the title part. It is a difficult role for it is the portrait of an unscrupulous woman. In bringing the Katharine Brush novel to the screen, Metro-Goldwyn saw fit to use the humorous talents of Anita Loos for the adaptation. The result is a lightening and softening in places, so that what could have been stark realiy becomes more pleasant entertainment.

Chester Morris is a likeable Bill Legendre, Jr., and plays with an amorous light in his eyes, which explains his weakness for the physical charms of the red-headed Lil Andrews. Lewis Stone is deft as Legendre, Sr., while Leila Hyams, Una Merkel, Henry Stephenson, May Robson, Charles Boyer and Harvey Clark add an atmosphere of competence to the surrounding roles. Due credit belongs to Jack Conway as director.

RIALTO

"HELL-FIRE AUSTIN"

Another Tiffany Productions' western starring Ken Maynard and his wonder-horse, "Tarzan," is playing at the Rialto Theater today and Saturday with Maynard in the title role of "Hell-Fire Austin."

Austin, an ex-rodeo rider, and his buddy, an ex-saloon bouncer, return to the west after receiving their discharges from the army. Instead of being received with a brass band at the train, however, as he has been bragging, they are met with an invitation to join the chain gang on the county roads to work $4.00 worth of food for which they could not pay the restaurant proprietor.

Having discovered Hell-Fire Austin is working on the chain gang, Mark Edmonds the local financier, gets him paroled to have him ride in the coming cross-country sweepstakes.

Ken learns, however, that Edmonds is double-crossing Judy Brooks out of her horse, "Tarzan," so that he cannot run in the race, and leaves him flat to join Judy's ranks.

After a series of thrilling adventures in an effort to elude Edmonds and his gang, Ken hides Tarzan in a hotel room until just in time to enter the race and win it for Judy. The cross-country sweepstakes race is one of the most exciting scenes in the picture.

In support of Maynard, the "Hell-Fire Austin" cast includes Ivy Merton, Alan Roscoe, Jack Perrin, Lafe McKee and others. Forrest Sheldon directed from his own story.

First Salesman: "What shall we do?"

Second Salesman: "I'll spin a coin. If it's heads, we'll shoot a game of pool; tails, we go to the movie and if it stands on end, we'll call on a customer."

---

"So you've bought a used car, eh. What's the most you ever got out of it?"

"About five times in one mile."

WARNER BAXTER

Man About Town Stars Warner Baxter In Lead

In that small and select Hollywood colony that traces its rise on the screen through the prize ring, Conway Tearle is in a class by himself. For him there was no vacillating between the stage and the ring, no alternating between acting and fighting. Conway Tearle was a prize-fighter, and when he decided to become an actor, he forgot completely about padded gloves and canvas floors.

Although he is a native of New York City, Tearle got his first engagement at the Drury Lane Theare in London and it was only a short time later that he appeared in support of such stars as Sir Charles Wyndham, Mary Moore, Ellen Terry and Lena Ashwell.

He came back to the United States in 1907 and made his American stage debut with Grace George. Later he appeared with Ethel Barrymore, Billie Burke, Viola Allen, Julia Marlowe, Emily Stevens and Helen Mencken among other outstanding women of the stage.

In 1914, Tearle and Ethel Barrymore made their screen debuts together in a picture called "The Nightingale" and directed by George Irving. It was the beginning of a screen career in which Tearle played leading roles with Mary Pickford, Colleen Moore, Corrinne Griffith, Alice Terry, Barbara LaMarr, Clara Kimball Young, Norma Talmadge and many other stars. His outstanding work was achieved with Mary Pickford in "Stella Maris" and in "The Great Divide." Others of his pictures were "Dancing Mothers," "Black Oxen," "My Official Wife," "The Lady Who Dared," "The Lost Zeppelin," "Evidence," "Altars of Desire" and "Gold Diggers of Broadway."

Stage work has occupied most of Tearle's time recently. He went back to motion pictures to play in "The False Madonna." His latest is an important role in "Man About Town," at the Grand Theatre Saturday, Sunday and Monday with Warner Baxter in the leading male role and Karen Morley in the featured feminine role. Others in the cast are Lilian Bond, Alan Mowbray, Leni Stengel, Lawrence Grant and Halliwell Hobbes.

DEPRESSION, HUH?

A Scot was engaged in an argument with a conductor as to whether the fare was 5 or 10 cents. Finally the disgusted conductor picked up the Scotchman's suitcase and tossed it off the train, just as they passed over a bridge. It landed with a splash.

"Mon," screamed Sandy, "isn't it enough to try and overcharge me, without trying to drown my little boy?"

83rd F. A.

After being informed that this month's leave would be without pay, Lt. and Mrs. McConnell haven't as yet, returned from their honeymoon, but we expect them to return soon.

Lt. Bartlett, who was on leave in Florida expecting to remain there until time to report to West Point early in August, returned to duty with the 83rd last Friday. He didn't care to lose a month's pay at this time and might also want some more leave before July 1933. We are sorry that the vacation had to be shortened but we are glad to have the Bartletts back with us even for a short time.

Lt. and Mrs. Lynch returned last Thursday from their trip to Washington, D. C. where Lt. Lynch was trying out for the Army Tennis Team. After being away for about three weeks it is quite warm to start in working hard, all of a sudden, but in a few days Lt. Lynch will be settled down and back to work in earnest.

BATTERY "A"

We are very much pleased to have as a member of Battery "A" no other than 1st Lt. W. A. D. Thomas who was transferred from Headquarters Battery.

Lt. Beishline and wife are on a month's leave, visiting relatives in Pennsylvania.

Pfc. Dock Abernathy was discharged on July 6th and reenlisted. He is now on a 60 day furlough, at he big city of Forsythe, Ga.

Our Casual Detachments, Pvts. Johnston, Thompson and Bolton get discharged this week. There is some question as to whether or not the Panama boys will reenlist or not.

As per usual Battery "A" is on Fire Guard and the entire Reservation around Cusseta is trying to burn down. This weather and fighting fire will burn down most anything.

On July 13, 1932 the Kingfish was on charge of Quarters. He will hold this job down O. K. provided he does not lose his glasses. Should he do this he is likely to mistake a 45 for a 75.

"C" BATTERY

Our student gunners are progressing very well and we should have several experts in the battery before the end of this month. We miss the machine gun tower and the windmill in Bradley's Area for targets, but these losses are offset by the two radio towers which serve very well as aiming points.

The wilderness in front of our barracks is being plowed and leveled. You fellows doing this heavy work in the hot sun deserve a lot of credit, and when next year we have a beautiful lawn, we will have forgotten the hard labor and appreciate the soft and cool grass to rest on after the day's work is done.

Our star remount trainer has been given the assignment of training the twenty previous service horses from Ft. Sill, Okla. There is no shade at all in Okla., and men and animals returning from the wide open spaces, can be classified as sun-stroke. However our corporal horse tamer does not expect any trouble, as he has spent many hot days training jackasses in Panama.

In our army life we have stretched picket lines between guns and caissons, between limbers and wagons, between trees and poles, but the other day we stretched a picket line along our stationary picket line at the stable. Just for practice we presume.

HQ. HQ. BATERY AND C. T.

Five members of the battery have passed the required examination as gunners in the Field Artillery. We expect to have that many finish each week. The men that pass the examination this year will be well qualified for any job in the battery.

Pvt. Crawford received a short discharge this week and is bound for New York City where he will board a transport for the Hawaiian Islands. He expects to take his old job back as orderly for Lt. H. E. Baker a former member of this battalion.

Pvt. Osbon was promoted to Sergeant and is now in charge of the mess. We have the best feeding outfit in the battalion if you don't believe it come over and have dinner with us.

Sgt. Dodd and Cpl. Pike are enjoying several afternoons at Britton's swimming pool, located in the hills of Alabama. They also dance each evening so if you happen to visit Britton's swimming pool some evening you will no doubt see Pike dancing with a fair damsel from Columbus, Georgia.

The second dance of the Quartermaster Detachment of this year, which was held on Saturday night at the organization area turned out to be as much of a success as the first, which was held several months ago.

Seven Happy Hearts of the 24th Infantry furnished the music, which was looked on by those present as the only thing hotter than the weather. Several vocal selections were rendered by the detachment's famed crooner, the Mighty Grumpy Gordy, who does a little fighting these days as a sideline amusement.

The Mighty Grumpy was also present in the role of one of the Detachment's sheiks and lady killers, and was right in competition with Solly Baker famed far and wide for his heart breaking tendencies, wrestling and hitch hiking.

The affair was pronounced a success from beginning to end in spite of the extremely hot weather.

Corporal Marshall E. Taylor, a recent graduate of the Quartermaster Corp School at Philadelphia, is looking forward with great eagerness to November of this year. At that time, in all probability, he will receive his warrant from the Quartermaster General as Staff Sergeant.

Any one that wishes to take a course in "How to Eat Watermelon" just write or come to see Pvt. Wood. Last Sunday he had a car load of girls from Ala. out here showing them the "Art of Water Melon Eating."

Corp. Graham is another newcomer to the Dispensary, he is taking over where Pvt. Bowden leaves off.

????May we ask who was that beautiful blond girl we saw Sgt. Henery playing tennis with last week. I guess it is O. K., some one said she was from Atlanta. That will have to be looked into. Henery and Sammie both having a blond from Atlanta. "Where do you get that stuff?"

the cadets will afterward visit the tank barracks.

The Camp has been under the command of Major Gustav H. Franke who has been assigned by a staff of officers and men made up largely of members of the Benning personnel. Among those on the staff are 1st Lt. Carl E. Anderson, as supply officer, Camp Daniel O'Connell as mess officer, and Sgt. Patrick J. McNulty as Sergeant Major for the camp.

24th Infantry

COMPANY "A"

The first echelon of the company completed the 1932 Rifle Practice Friday, July 8th losing only one man. Cheer up Mathieu, the girls will still love you and your mighty dollars.

Through some great mystic power yet unknown to any man living, Corpora Fritz was able to qualify. We hope you will be a good sport and give the dope to Sgt. Nathaniel (Gruntney) Jones.

The second echelon began firing on "Blue" Monday, July 11th. We hope the boys will shake "it" off and come through 100 per cent. Private Freeman, (better known as Madame Freeman) has the boys puzzled over just how he happens to spend $22.00 of his $22.05 pay each month. Good work Madame, keep it up. The company base ball team will soon begin working out for the second half, and boys, Corp. Fritz swears they are going to be troublesome with Soule (Rider) on the mound. We have all our bet on you Soule.

COMPANY "F"

Pvt. Mitchell Johnson, (Meat House) has been given "One more Chance" as he has begun to go to town pretty often. Just a ittle while ago he said that he was "Thru with wimmen" but he must have changed his mind.

Pvt. Geathers while on guard last night was heard singing "River stay away from my door." Wonder what soldier around here is named "River."

Lost one Corporal. After due search he was found encamped on the Finance Officer's door step and he said that he was going to stay there until the Bill passed Congress and that they were not going to balance the budget with any of his money. Corporal Devaughn was discharged recently and has reenlisted for three more years.

The Company is looking forward to break the record in rifle mraksmanship this season.

These are the days when a man hates to sell his car, even though the outgo for the upkeep is more than the income.

BENNING HERALD

VOLUME II — FORT BENNING, GA., FRIDAY, JULY 22, 1932 — NUMBER 13

Benning Briefs

We promised, several weeks ago, some definite evidence of the success of Lt. "Ham" Kelly on his comparatively recent fishing trip to the Dead Lakes. Well, here it is, the young man in the above photo is holding up the Lt's. catch, and you can see by the proud expression on his face that he too is reveling in the pleasure that the Lieutenant must have had in landing such a whopper.

We have it straight that this is actually the catch of "Ham," but we wouldn't for the world divulge our source of information. He's too likely to prove a more fertile producer of copy about the famous fishers of the Benning tribe.

And, while we are on the subject of fish, we might pour the balm on Lt. Kelly's soul by admitting that we weren't even able to catch but one fish out of the whole ocean, while on a trip to Port St. Joe that occupied the whole of the week. Even though sharks were fairly plentiful, we couldn't hook one of those bait-grabbers, while the crabs of the sea-botton operated on our pieces of mullet so expertly that only one little pig-fish rewarded our heartfelt and sunburned efforts.

* * *

For anyone in search of sand, especially in all the food, in the shoes, in the automobile—everywhere—we recommend a camping trip down to the St. Joe section of Florida. The Sahara Desert could take a lesson from that section of the country—and when one combines mosquitoes so big that the natives use them for can-openers, scorpions that crawl into bed with the camper and numberless flies of every description who take a whack at one every five minutes—then one has a pretty fair picture of a camper's life in that country.

All in all, though, we would stand all that again for one more night with the moon glinting over the surf, with the water's pounding lulling one to sleep and with the sea-breeze sending its cooling softness over all.

Anyway, the nights were beautiful and peaceful, even if the days were just the opposite. In giving the above list of pests, we might add, we didn't add the names of those of the sea who help to make life more miserable stingarees (sting rays), jelly fish,

Benning Receives Explanation Of "Economy Act" Provisions

Some clarification of the muddle of army administration caused by the ambiguities of the unprecedented restrictions of the recently imposed "economy act" was seen at Fort Benning on Wednesday when a War Department radio message, relayed to Fort Benning by Headquarters Fourth Corp Area and summarizin the effects of certain features of the bill upon the military service, was received at Post Headquarters.

Official intrepretations of the manner of applying the provisions of the act to the military service which are contained in the message put an end to the perplexity of the officials charged with the execution of its mandatory requirements and divested it of the shroud of uncertainty which has obscured the provisions affecting pay and leaves of absence of military personnel.

The summary of the decisions on these two subjects is as follows: All commissioned officers and all members of the Army Nurse Corps and departmental and field employees receiving annual compensation at the rate of more than $1,000 per annum are subject to restrictions with leave with pay.

Enlisted personnel are exempt.

For all personnel except those exempted, all rights to annual leave with pay are suspended during the fiscal year 1933, irrespective of whether the leave rights heretofore have been granted by statute or allowed within administrative discretion.

The term annual leave includes ordinary leave, leave on half pay and refers to all vacation leave of absence with pay for each year, whether based on the calendar, fiscal or service year, for the personal pleasure, convenience or benefit of the officer or employee. It applies also to all leave accrued or earned and unused prior to July 1, 1932 and to graduation leaves granted this year's class at West Point.

The only absences from duty with pay to which it does not apply are academic leaves of instructors of serv ice schools and instructors and cadet at West Point during vacations; sick leaves; the leaves granted by law to government employees to attend organized reserve and national guard training camps.

Leaves granted officers to be retired for physical disability by action of a retiring board are to be designated sick leave.

Deduction for the payless furlough will be made of 2 1-2 days pay each month whether or not any furlough is taken. If more than 2 1-2 days furlough are taken in any one month the whole time will be taken without pay. After 30 days' pay has been deducted no further reductions will be made unless more than 30 days' furlough are taken.

Major Welty Arrives To Succeed Major Rose

Major Maurice D. Welty who recently arrived at Fort Benning from Washington, D. C., where he was on duty with the militia bureau will be officially designated on Wednesday as assistant executive officer for mobilization plans and training,

New Facilities Are Planned For Post Water Supply

Fort Benning's water supply facilities are to be augmented by a storage basin which is now being dredged on Amory Creek near the auxiliary plant and which will add one and one half million gallons of water for domestic purposes at the post. A steam shovel crew employed by the post quartermaster has been working on the new basin for several days and will have it ready for the reception of water within the next few weeks.

Excavations for the new group of non-commissioned officers quarters were begun on Wednesday by subcontractors. Building materials are being assembled on the ground by other contractors and work will go forward on the erection of the buildings upon completion of the excavation in about three weeks. Nine sets of quarters for non-commissioned officers and 88 garages are to be erected under contract.

In anticipation of the approval of the provision of the relief bill providing for an appropriation for erection of barracks at Fort Benning, a board of officers headed by Major Thomas B. Catron is making a study of the probable interior design of the new structure with a view to proper allocation of space to the organizations which are to occupy it.

Son Of Benning Officer One Of Class Of 366

WEST POINT, N. Y., July 22—Frederick H. Gaston, son of Capt. F. H. Gaston, Ft. Benning, Ga., who was sworn in as a cadet at the U. S. Military Academy here on July 1st, has been assigned to the second Company by Major General W. D. Connor, Superintendent. The total strength of Gaston's class is 366.

For the next six weeks Gaston and his classmates will receive an intensive course of instruction in various military subjects including both drills and lectures. Early in August, the class will be absorbed into the Corps of Cadets and will participate in the impressive parades which are held daily.

In the middle of August, the new cadets will take a five day practice march through the foothills of the Catskills, southwest of West Point. During the march they will live in shelter tens and eat from rolling kitchens.

The academic year will open September 1st. Classroom work will start at 8:00 A. M. and will extend until 3:00 P. M., with an hour's intermission for lunch. Drills and compulsory intramural athletics will take up another hour in the afternoon. For the academic work the class will be divided into sections of from ten to fourteen cadets and each man will be required to recite in each subject every day.

Reserve Officers Begin Two Weeks of Active Duty Work

Approximately 240 reserve officers, ranging in rank from Colonel to Second Lieutenant and representing various reserve regiments and other organizations of southern states, are due to report at Fort Benning on Sunday to begin a two-week period of active duty training.

Engineer, chemical warfare and infantry reserve units are represented by the officers who will attend the camp. There will be about 129 engineer officers of whom two are colonels, two lieutenant colonels, nine majors, nine captains, and 107 lieutenants. The chemical warfare service will be represented by one major, three captains and 37 lieutenants. Heavy tank units of infantry will be represented by two lieutenant colonels, three majors, four captains and 61 lieutenants.

More than 200 reserve officers who are participating in a two-weeks' program of active duty training at Fort Benning were given their physical examination at the station hospital on Monday morning to determine their fitness for active service. Following the examinations, the officers were engaged in drawing their personal equipment and other supplies and becoming settled in the tents which they will occupy for the next few weeks.

Active training started in full swing on Tuesday morning for the three combatant arms represented by the reservists. Colonel William B. Graham will be in charge of the instruction of officers belonging to heavy tank units. Engineer officers will be instructed by Major Leon F. Lyon, and Major Victor Parks, Jr., will be in charge of instruction in chemical warfare methods.

More than 200 reserve officers attended a demonstration of the rifle company in attack with supporting weapons which was staged on Davidson Hill Wednesday by Company E, 29th Infantry and detachments of the cannon company of the same regiment. Captain George J. Forster was in command of the troops during the demonstration.

For many of the reservists, most of whom are commissioned in technical arms it was their first view of war strength combatant units in action and the men of the demonstration company were roundly applauded at the conclusion of the demonstration.

Colonel George E. Vidmer, executive officer of the 87th Division, will be the regular army officer in command of the encampment. Members of his staff will include Captain Frank A. Deroin, adjutant, Lieutenant Carl E. Anderson, supply officer, and Captain Daniel G. O'Connell, mess officer. Other regular officer personnel on duty with the encampment will include officers who are regularly on duty with the reserve units as instructors, and others of the Fort Benning garrison who will be detailed for the period of the camp. Among the latter will be included officers and enlisted men of Company A 7th Engineers and Company C 2nd Chemical Regiment.

Relief Bill Gives Large Sum For Benning's Work

Funds amounting to $813,000.00 probably will be allocated for construction at Fort Benning under the terms of the relief bill which is awaiting signature by the President.

The largest item is the sum of $650,000.00 which is to be appropriated for the erection of a barracks building to house the Special Units. The building will be of the curtel barrack type and similar to the others previously erected at the post.

Extensive improvements of the flying field at Fort Benning, which will cost about $163,000.00, will be made if the appropriation authorization is approved. These include a hangar to cost $88,000.00, a gasoline storage system, $10,000.00, a heating plant, $20,000., concrete aprons, $20,000.00 and other improvements to the landing field and building area amounting to $25,000.00.

The permanent barracks building will give modern living quarters to several hundred men who have been housed in tents for more than ten years, and the contemplated improvements at the Infantry School flying field will give Fort Benning one of the best equipped army airports in the south.

Purple Heart Is Awarded to Four Benning Tankers

The Purple Heart, the army's newest and yet oldest decoration, established by George Washington, and revived by the War Department in 1932, has been awarded to four non-commissioned officers of the 1st Tank Regiment at Fort Benning. The decorations are being given to the local soldiers in recognition of services rendered on the European battlefields 14 years ago. The men who are to receive the purple heart are Sergeant Thomas J. Gaus, Headquarters Company, who was gassed at St. Mihiel on September 11, 1918, while serving as a private in Co. H 26th Infantry; Corporal Ellie Tapley, Headquarters Company, who was wounded by shrapnel on February 17, 1918, while serving as corporal of Company F 18th Infantry; Corporal Richard P. M. Scott, Company E, who was wounded by shrapnel fire on October 11, 1918, while serving as a Private Company C 2nd Machine Gun Battalion; and Corporal James M. Edwards, Company E, who was wounded by shrapnel on July 28, 1918, while serving as corporal of Company M 167th Infantry.

Lt. James J. Winn Is Aide decamp To Commandant

Major General Campbell King, commandant of The Infantry School, issued orders on Thursday announcing the assignment of Lieutenant James J. Winn as aide de camp. Lieutenant Winn formerly was a member of the 29th Infantry and recently graduated from the company officers class of The Infantry School.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

The Cost of Milk

Many times in recent weeks the question has been asked "Why do I have to pay 13 cents for a quart of milk at Fort Benning when I can buy the same amount in Columbus for only 10 cents?"

The answer is, that the cost of production, handling, and delivery of the safe milk which we require at Fort Benning is greater by three cents than the cost of production of the milk ordinarily sold in Columbus. With the exception of the milk from one concern all milk sold in Columbus is raw milk. Raw milk is not a safe milk, even though it be of "certified quality," except it be boiled or cooked before consumption. To safeguard the health of the entire population of Fort Benning it is required that all milk sold on the post be pasteurized.

The process of pasteurization kills the bacteria (germs) which might convey disease.

Milk causes more sickness and deaths than any other single food, possibly more than all other foods combined.

Milk conveys a greater amount of infections than any other food. Bacteria grow rapidly in milk: that is they increase from a few hundred or a few thousand to many thousands or several million in the short time of a few hours provided conditions of temperature are right. Any temperature above 50 F allows this rapid increase of bacteria and the higher the temperature up to 98 or 99 the more rapid the multiplication. This bacteria growth causes decomposition or souring of the milk.

It is practicably impossible to obtain milk from any animal which does not contain bacteria. Some bacteria, in small numbers, may therefore be considered as normal. The effort of all supervision of dairy plants and farms is directed therefore to methods of production and handling of milk and milk products in such a manner as will add the fewest number of additional germs to the milk. Any thing that the milk comes in contact with, even to the slightest degree, if it be not sterile, adds more bacteria. Therefore as a result we can say that a bacterial count of any milk is the only true criterion of the cleanliness of that milk. Clean milk is necessary for the continued good health of all who drink it, and especially is this true of babies and young children. It is among these that the benefits of milk supervision can easily be shown in the health statistics of any community. Summer complaint, cholera morbor, diarrhoea, or gastro enteritis are not now the common causes of deaths of small children as they were 25 years ago. These facts are cited to show the reason for requiring a clean milk supply. The things that the milk producer and dairyman have to do to produce and deliver such milk add materially to the cost to the consumer, but we can be sure are worth the added expense. In the long run one will more than save the added expense in less sickness. At Fort Benning for the past several years it has been the policy to give one firm the exclusive righs for the sale of milk. Last year a thorough investigation of the milk business was made by two different communities of officers. As a result of their work there has been a reduction in the price of milk from 17 to 13 cents or 31 per cent.

In July last year bids were received from milk dealers for the exclusive sale of milk at Fort Benning. As their milk had to be produced under certain rather rigid conditions at the farm and had to be pasteurized, bottled and delivered to the consumer under other specified conditions it was found that only two milk dealers were qualified to submit bids.

Of these two milk dealers the firm which submitted the lowest bid was given the contract.

Milk varies greatly in its sanitary quality and its value. The sense of sight or of taste can not detect these differences. It is only by laboratory tests that milk can be graded.

Our contract calls for "grade A, pasteurized milk."

Milk of this class contains 4 per cent fat, which comes from cows free from disease as determined by tuberculin tests and physical examinations by a qualified veterinarian, and is produced and handled by employes free from disease as determined by medical inspection by a physician. The milk is produced under sanitary conditions, such that at the time of delivery the bacteria count shall not exceed 10,000 per cubic centimeter. The process of pasteurization is under official supervision. The dairies from which this supply is obtained score more than the required 80 required on the U. S. Bureau of Animal Industry score card.

The milk dealer who now supplies milk to Fort Benning obtains milk from only two dairies, both of which have always exceeded the requirements.

As stated before there was only one other firm which could contract to deliver milk to Fort Benning of grade A pasteurized quality. This firm had last July several producers and of these only one was then and is now qualified to produce milk of the quality demanded by Fort Benning.

Pasteurized milk of "grade A" quality, which is only sold in bottles and delivered to Fort Bennnig costs three cents a quart more to produce than the raw milk which is sold in Columbus. It is a safe milk. Day in and day out for 365 days in the year it will continue to be as safe a milk as can be obtained under our requirements.

At the present time there is no other milk in this vicinity which can always be considered safe except it be boiled or cooked before consumption.

Our advice to milk consumers of Fort Benning is, not to take a chance with milk from any source except that allowed to be delivered at the post.

The question of price as regards milk should never be the first consideration in its purchaser. A cheap milk is never safe; an expensive milk may not be safe.

We believe that our present milk supply is the best and safest obtainable in this vicinity.

etc. That name "jelly fish" is extremely misleading, for they are "the stingingest critters in the whole blamed ocean," to use the expression of the one member of the party whose misfortune it was to meet one in its angry mood.

* * *

Our column this week must, necessarily, be rather short of Benning news, but we heard one true story concerning an ROTC student of Tech who was unfortunately embarrassed while visiting some friends. It seems that the friends had a little girl of an inquiring nature, who continually plied the guest with questions. In pursuit of knowledge when he asked the boy, who had on his uniform,

"What soldier is that?"

Our friend told her, and also explained why he was wearing the suit. Finally the little girl asked:

"Do you carry a gun?"

The guest gave an affirmative answer.

"Then you're going to be a gangster, ain't you?"

At this juncture our story must end, for our friend frankly admitted that he was in no position to commit himself further on the subject. It stands to reason, though, that the young lady had never seen the cartoon which ran on The Herald's front page last week.

83rd F. A.

Immediately upon return from a month's honeymoon, Monday, July 18 Lt. and Mrs. W. E. Hall came to Fort Benning and joined the 83rd F. A. We are very glad to welcome them into this Battalion and hope that they will enjoy being here as much as we enjoy having them with us.

Lieut. Sherburne returned Monday afternoon from D. S. at Washington, D. C., where he was trying out for the Army Tennis team. We are proud to know that he made the team and went through the eliminations up to the semi-finals even though he didn't get into the finals.

Capt. Mangum returned to duty yesterday. He returned to Fort Ben ning Monday but decided that he must get used to the weather here before going back to duty. While enroute from Washington, D. C. to Fort Benning, he found a place in North Carolina where the temperature didn't rise above 88 F and it was very cool at night. Too bad he couldn't have brought some very cool nights back with him.

The Artillery had four men to start preparatory courses for West Point. Although there is a very small number who will go on to Fort McPherson this fall we hope a good percentage of these four men will get a chance to complete the course.

The twelve remounts that the artillery recently received, are all really remounts in the true sense of the word but they are coming along nicely under the guidance of Lt. Bartlett.

The Battalion Garden Officer was quite surprised Wednesday morning, when he was looking over the garden and noticed a skunk, just ten feet away from him, eating a cantaloupe. The skunk just sat there and looked around for awhile then decided it was time to leave and leisurely left the garden. This skunk didn't even leave any smell behind it, so it must also feel the effects of the depression.

Lt. Draper has been patiently waiting for orders to go to France on a language detail ever since the Appropriation Bill was passed. If he doesn't receive orders soon, we will have to send him to Paris on a pleasure trip.

"C" BATTERY

If the present standing of the score for expert and first class is any indication of the final result the difference between the highest and lowest men will be very small. So far only tenths of points are being lost and this

VACATION PROGRAM

We are decidedly out of touch with the situation along the Upatoi, and the next few issues of The Flare may prove to be dull reading for those who are interested only in authentic post scandal. To abandon our reportorial duties just when the garrison seemed about ripe for an attack of midsummer madness looks almost like desertion but we felt an impelling need of a change. Also we have undertaken the nervous obligation of being the Boswell to that renouned statesman and profound philosopher General Fuzzard who is now touring the North and East to observe the state of the union and to combat the growing demand of the ever misguided people to repeal the 18th Amendment. The General is standing unsteadily on his wet plank of "Inebriation without taxation" and insists that he will fight it out on this line if it takes all summer.

Of course if the lady devotees of Russ Pool invade the men's showers en masse we are bound to hear of it and may have some pertinent comment to make thereon. Routine stuff, however, like the reporting of the regular meetings of the Thanatopsis Club and the weekly citation for meritorious deeds will have to await our return to Benning. Meanwhile we shall endeavor to enlighten you on national officers and developments in the field of art and letters.

It may not be as exciting as a first hand interview with the newest members of the Hostess' Delight Club on a vivid description of Mrs. Eyeful's reaction to the sight of a nude male under a shower bath but think of the educational and uplift influence!

PERMIT US TO INTRODUCE—

Speaking of developments in the world of letters, our startling announcement of several weeks back to the effect that the Army had at last produced a real poet and that Benning was his station was received with composure to say the most. The equanimity displayed over this bit of man-bites-a-dog news can be accounted for only by assuring that people didn't read the item or that they didn't believe it, or that they thought we were just boasting.

Now we want to say right here for the benefit of these who thought that we were boosting our own stock, that we didn't have ourself in mind when we proclaimed a real army poet. We did write a few heroic poems once but they were designed not as immortal literature but to enliven (or depress) cocktail parties in the foreign land where we happened to be serving at the time. The young man we had in mind writes verse of a different character and (yes, we admit it) of infinitely greater merit. How he does it in addition to his other duties we don't know but he fact remains that he has written a number of short poems which definitely establish the fact that he has the divine spark.

We intend to introduce our readers to him gradually. We realize that only a few queer, albeit not unintelligent, people read poetry these days and we don't want to scare off our readers by too frequent resort to the wealth of good material that we have found in the published and unpublished works of our talented contemporary.

We submit herewith a sample called:

REMNANTS

I have made a little world
From things such as I,
Cast aside as broken
And destined to die.

I have built a little house,
Carefully and long,
With ugliness outside
But inside . . . . song.

I have made a Joseph's coat,
Colorful and thin
With patches of beauty
Sewed wrong side in.

And when I walk at high noon
Thru the market place
I thank the God that gave me
A long straight face.

We don't know what you, gentle reader, will think of his, but personally we think it adds tone to our column.

ON "FURLOUGH"

True to our threat expressed in a previous issue, we left Benning simmering in summer heat and stewing in a welter of pay and leave rumors. We escaped the rumors, although we cannot altogether forget their dire purport but we didn't escape the heat. As a summer resort, Southern Ohio has little, if any edge, on Georgia. So far as we are concerned personally, however, it has one great advantage over any other locality under the American flag. We can subsist on the country—a consideration which outweighs all others in these days of pay cuts and reduced allowances.

Sheriff Tuttle and his adoring family formed the advance guard for our personally conducted expeditionary force. The Sheriff spent several days investigating law enforcement conditions in Ohio before moving on to Plattsburg. The ex-Provost Marshall of Benning is well known to the local constabulary, having been arrested by him two years ago when he was visiting a local celebrity whose name modesty forbids us to divulge.

The Sheriff played nineteen holes on several of the neighboring golf courses and achieved quite a reputation for long drives and tall stories. And it might be mentioned in passing that he used his golf contacts to put over some excellent propaganda against the passage of the pending bill to eliminate two thousand officers. His system is original and highly effective. Having given the prospective subject ample opportunity to observe what manner of man and golfer he is, he intimates that, in the event of two thousand officers being eliminated he will be one of them. He then signs a paen of praise for the subject's community and intimates that he might settle in it if the bill goes through; whereupon the subject promptly eases himself to the nearest telegraph office and wires his congressman to kill the elimination proviso and save the only by men who went up in the first groups. The instructors now have a better idea of what answers the various questions require, and can give the students information accordingly.

We finally went to the pistol range to complete our firing. The depression in the army must have receded.

Another trip to Warm Springs, Ga. is in the making and if everything goes right and we can induce fifty men of the battery to eat less cheese, this trip will be this coming Sunday.

The other day a group of men of our battery taking the Detail instructions were seen climbing into trees. We first thought it was a challenge to those who do not believe in evolution, but later we found that this is part of their instruction.

Give the swimming pools a rush . . . and be at the height of fashion in a suit bought here!

On The Q. T.

By B. B. S.

Speaking of hot weather, how do these gritty baseball players have the fortitude to get out there these steaming days? Fans never seem to think of the discomfort the boys who furnish the entertainment go through with. You might be a little warm, but they are boiling.

Give the boys out there on that plate grid a little hand, and help them over these stuffy, hot days.

When these box fighters crawl into that ring out in Doughboy Stadium Tuesday evening, there will be a gathering of fans there to see a show. That is just what the timber selected to feature on the program is capable of giving. You can bet your bottom dollar these boys will scrap, for there is an incentive . . . . the right to keep their coveted positions in the local rings.

John Corn Griffin, the scrappiest 'Gator to ever come this side of the Everglades will be there to prove that he has never quit the ring . . . . just taking a forced layoff.

Griffin looks more promising than he ever has before.

---

Watching the boys work in the Gymnasium leads us to believe the fans will see the greatest all action card ever presented to the Benning public. There is a dollar's worth of fun in the training ring each afternoon just watching those youngsters work.

Dapper Doyle would be a good show in there with any pug. He throws leather in his training as though he wants a kayo over any mug who puts up a duke in front of his face. He has to be cautioned repeatedly not to go at it seriously.

---

Gunner DePratt has been mauling sparring partners about over the ring unmercifully. His right hand has developed back into the old form the rings will so fondly recall. As related by one of the by-standers who knows the fight game from start to finish, "The Gunner doesn't look a bit like a 'has-beener,' but on the other hand appears to have a very, very bright future." It is true that the Gunner doesn't give the least inkling of an impression that he is through with the ring. His timing and hitting is almost perfect, and with a litle more attention to his boxing, will be ready

Dispensary Dope

If it isn't one thing it is two, for the poor "Pillrollers" to do. First we have the R. O. T. C., now they are gone and now the O. R. C. We know what to do for them, paint 'em with iodine and give them two CC.

Some one asked me the other day if a "ring worm" had teeth. It is hard to believe but I saw where one had bit a girl the other day. (Just between you and I, I think it was a real man that bit her).

All the M. D. ball players are down hearted for a few days, but they can't give up the ship yet, we will show the 2nd Bats that our team is the best.

Red Floyd: "Does Governor Russell of Georgia live in Georgia?"

Gilbert: "Sure he does, he lives in Waycross."

Floyd: "I thought so, but wanted to be sure."

Now then for the big puzzle, who is this blond from Atlanta. We all saw Sammie get with her Saturday and go off, then Sunday she was talking with Henery and making eyes at him. He took up a lot of time with her and told her godo bye. We would like to know if his could be the same blond that Henery played tennis with. It must be the one that Sammie went to Atlanta to see.

Sammie has had to be still for the past few days, his litle brother is here from N. C.. and watches him. We know it goes hard with Sammie to stay away from his dates more than one night.

Bowden is gone, but by no means forgotten. Just wait he will soon be back to Benning trying to get back in with the "Pill-rollers."

Sorry to say, but our "Salts Man" Major Patterson is sick in Quarters with malaria. We miss you Pat, hurry up and come on back.

Who believes that the No. 13 is lucky? Sammie must have something to say to that. He gets a "Special Delivery letter" which takes 13c to mail it. Not just now and then but most every day. Some girl must have plenty of money to spend on a tramp like him.

Red Scott: "Okey, Pullen, if you think I am the one that turned you in for driving your car on the post, just come down in the woods with me."

Pullen: "No no, Scott I know it wasn't you, any one with nice red hair like you have couldn't do a mean trick like that."

Sgt. Henery: I'd like to know why it is that I have to do all the work around this place. and never can get Sgt. Dotson to help me?"

Red Davis: "That is easy to figure out, Sgt. Dotson is a big fat Staff Sgt. and you are the Baby Sergeant of all the hospital."

Sgt. and Mrs. Dotson. Sgt. Henery and Burch Allison motored down to Radium Springs last Sunday to meet Miss Laffew and Miss Smith of Atlanta, Sgt. Allison and Corp Hayne who had spent the week end in Albany.

Red Davis is going to turn in all of his whites. He says they are bad luck especially when you wear them by the M. P.'s office after retreat.

It has just come to light why Pvt. Smith of the Dental Staff, gets so much mail, if you don't know the reason just take a look at his "cute little mustache.

Miss Peters, who relieved Miss Freeman with the Attending Surgeon: "I never have had so many babies to tend to in all my life."

Sgt. Taylor the S. P. had to do a Sunday charge of quarters last week, now that was a real heart breaker.

Major Patterson is sick in quarters, wonder if he is gold bricking? Try some good old salts, Major and come on back to duty.

THEATRICAL ATTRACTIONS

At Rialto Theatre Sunday, Monday

Eddie Cantor...star of "Palmy Days"

Cinema Calendar

for Grand, Rialto and Royal

AT THE RIALTO

NOW PLAYING: Presenting, "BEYOND THE ROCKES," with Tom Keene and Rochelle Hudson in a heart-thumping action tale. Death and danger at every turn yet he dared to uncover the public enemies of frontier days. Wilder than man hunt is this amazing story of a woman bandit.

SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Presenting, "PALMY DAYS," with Eddie Cantor. He is supported by Charlotte Greenwood. In this one Eddie is the unwilling assistant to Yondo, leader of a band of crooks, who runs a fake fortune-telling business, which includes crystal gazing, palmistry, astrology and spiritualism.

TUESDAY: Presenting, "DANCERS IN THE DARK," with Miriam Hopkins, Jack Oakie, William Collier, Jr., and Eugene Pallette. A half-good girl with love in her eyes . . . disloyal bandleader . . . a young sax player who cares . . . handsome hoodlum in a "jam" . . . a blare of music to drown the sound of a murder-gun. A swell picture.

WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY: Presenting, "DEVIL'S LOTTERY," with Elissa Landi, Victor McLaglen, Paul Cavanagh, Alexander Kirkland and Barbara Weeks. Love followed this woman like an evil fate. Men were dice in her hands. The warmth of her kisses—the perfume of her hair—the sinuous curves of her body enticed them to a dangerous love.

AT THE ROYAL

(Beginning with Midnight Show Saturday, 11:15 P. M.)

ALSO SUNDAY, MONDAY AND TUESDAY: Presenting, "THE RICH ARE ALWAYS WITH US," with Ruth Chatterton, Bette Davis, George Brent and John Miljan. At last! The right story for Ruth Chatterton. Her most emotional role since "MADAME X."

ADDED ATTRACTION: Dancing in the lobby, Saturday, from 9:30 p. m. to 11 p. m. Music by the Georgians. Regular admission prices include both dancing and picture program which starts immediately after the dance.

AT THE GRAND

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Presenting, "THE TRIAL OF VIVIENNE WARE," with Joan Bennett and an exceptionally strong supporting cast. Circumstantial evidence comes close to sending a beautiful society girl to the electric chair.

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY: Presenting, "STRANGERS OF THE EVENING," with Zasu Pitts, Eugene Pallette, Lucien Littlefield, Tully Marshall, Miriam Seegar and Theodore Von Eltz. A baffling problem of murder and marriage involved in a maelstrom of merriment.

ROYAL

If you ask Ruth Chaterton, star of First National's "The Rich Are Always With Us," which shows at the Royal Theatre next Saturday night at 11:15, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, who she considers her best friend, she will reply without a moment's hesitation:

"Emil Jannings."

But for Jannings, the screen might still be without its "First Lady" and Ruth Chatterton still producing and starring in her own plays on the stage

Against her will almost, Ruth had been persuaded to take a test for Josef Von Sternberg's picture, "The Docks of New York." She was wholly apathetic about pictures at that time, but in her characteristic fashion, put everything she had into the test. It failed to appeal to Von Sternberg, however, and the test was relegated to the vaults, there to lie gathering dust for weeks.

Then Jannings began seeking his leading woman for "The Sins of the Fathers." The vaults were ransacked for any test that might interest him. Ruth Chatterton's, among others, was run for him and at its conclusion the delighted Jannings rushed forward and kissed the screen.

He did not know who she was, but he knew he had found his leading lady. On the set, the great Jannings took delight in initiating Miss Chatterton into all the secrets of screen technique that he had mastered. He predicted her present ascendency as a celluloid star.

RIALTO

Victor McLaglen's role, that of an ex-prizefighter, in "Devil's Lottery," the Fox dramatic production in which he heads Elissa Landi's all star supporting cast and which opens its local engagement next??

He was the champion heavyweight of Eastern Canada and James J. Corbett, who saw him fight at Seattle, Washington, predicted the highest ring crown would some day grace his head. The records show McLaglen once fought Jack Johnson a non-decision bout, but soon after this event, the World War broke out and Vic transferred his fighting activities from the ring to the battlefield.

It was at the National Sporting Club in London, shortly after the war, that McLaglen was discovered as the perfect type for pictures. His most famous screen impersonation was that of Captain Flagg in the Fox pictures, "What Price Glory" and "The Cock Eyed World."

In addition to Miss Landi and McLaglen the cast of "Devil's Lottery" includes Alexander Kirkland, Paul Cavanagh, Barbara Weeks, Beryl Mercer and Herbert Mundin. Sam Taylor directed the production.

The Eyes Have It!

During the filming of "Palmy Days" which comes to the Rialto Theatre for two days, Eddie Cantor paid a visit to an eye specialist who offered to operate upon the comedian's pop-eyes to take the stars out of them.

"Let me look after you and I'll have your eyes looking the same as any ordinary person's within two weeks," said the specialist.

"That's fine" said Cantor, "but who's going to earn the money for the wife and kiddies?"

Innocent Persons Display Signs of Guilt, Say Police

Police investigators state that, contrary to common belief it is the innocent person who, when accused of a crime, blushes and stammers and otherwise shows sign of asserted guilt rather than the guilty one.

Going on the premise that the guilty person is on guard against a reaction that might arouse suspicions the police reason that it is the innocent person who will become confused when he is surprised by an accusation.

In Tiffany Productions' mystery laughmaker, "Strangers of the Evening," coming to the Grand Theatre Thursday and Friday so totally unusual are the reactions of the different suspects that the police investigators become too confused to use logic. For instance, after working for days on clues to the murder of Frank Daniels, the police are baffled by the appearance of a man, suffering from temporary amnesia, who has a "queer" feeling that he knows where a murder has been committed. When accused of being the murderer he readily agrees that he might have done it, but queries as to whether someone else might not have done it. The finger of suspicion points strongly towards this "unusual" attitude towards accusation confounds the detectives so completely that they let him go.

The cast of "Strangers of the Evening" includes Zasu Pitts, Eugene Pallette, Lucien Littlefield, Tully Marshall, Miriam Seegar, Theodore von Eltz, Warner Richmond, Harold Waldridge and many other well known names. It was directed by H. Bruce Humberstone.

Donald Cook, young attorney in love with Joan Bennett and defending her against a murder charge in "The Trial of Vivienne Ware," tells her he saw her going into the murdered man's house just before the crime was committed. 1PC

Staff Sergeant Andrew S. DuVall, without whom the Quartermaster Detachment would hardly be the Quartermaster Detachment, has decided to turn over a new financial leaf. Being an employee of the United States Government, Sergeant DuVall recently had emulated the actions of Uncle Sam in operating at a deficit. But since efforts have been made to get the budget balanced, he has decided that he, too, must follow suit and begin operating with a surplus. How long it will take the government to get a surplus is uncertain. The same is true with Sergeant DuVall, but both are making gallant efforts.

The detachment has a new chief of the organization garden in the person of Archie W. (Red) Whidden. Whidden recently has been a member of the Fort Benning crew of fire fighters, but will now change his occupation to that of battling weeds in turnips. This assignment is no new one to him, as he has had considerable experience in the detachment's "farm."

The Mighty Grumpy Gordy has again registered a complaint. He insists that this column is not doing right by him. Last week his name was mentioned in connection with the Quartermaster Detachment's dance held a short while ago. He was perfectly satisfied with the statement that he was right in the competition with Solly Baker as one of the organization's chief sheiks, but he became extremely worried when his crooning was not mentioned. 'Tis true that the Mighty Grumpy did croon at the dance, and in his usual heart breaking fashion. He is still considering giving up fighting and concentrating on singing. He has decided that he'd rather compete with Bing Crosby than Jack Sharkey—possibly because Crosby is more popular among the feminine sex than Sharkey.

and able to take on the best to be found.

The Gunner is the old mauler who socks them, and lets them stay socked. The bets are even that the entire personnel of "H" Company, 29th Infantry will turn out in mass to witness the fracas. That is one organization that backs up its fighters one-hundred per cent.

The only "low down" addressed to the column this week was to the effect that Archie (Errors) McLeod was still making them for the Artillery team. That man can surely drop more balls han a pea dropper can peas in a day's run. His hitting and hustling is still good, and when he stops making those "bumbles," as "Lucy" Phillips, the outfielder calls them, he will be batting a thousand in the eyes of the column.

Perhaps that crooked arm has something to do with it all.

Their Voices Strike Popular Chord

The Boswell Sisters—Vet, Martha and Connie

In a popularity contest conducted by a New York newspaper the Boswell Sisters walked away with the first prize in the harmonizer's class, rolling up a total vote of 21249. The contest, which began May 16th, closed July 4th and the nearest rivals for the honor won by the Chesterfield stars polled 7,598 votes.

A ballot was published in the newspaper daily for 50 days, which gave the girls from New Orleans an average of practically 425 votes a day in the Greater New York area, covered by the newspaper's circulation.

The Boswells, Connie, Vet., and Martha, as they are known to their radio audience, from Main to Hawaii and from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico, expressed the greatest delight with their success when the silver cup was presented to them. Connie, speaking for her sisters and herself said: "We are happy indeed to have been among the winning artists in this contest. We wish to extend our sincere thanks to our rado audience for the honor done us. Our work on the "Music That Satisfies" program is a pleasure in itself, but this just doubles our pleasure."

PURPLE HEART

We take great pleasure in announcing the receipt of orders awarding the Purple Heart to Sergeant Thomas Gause of Headquarters Company. Sergeant Gause is the first person in the Battalion to receive this decoration. The Battalion congratulates him.

SWIMMING

On August the twelfth the swimmers of the Battalion are to have their first opportunity of the season to demonstrate their prowess in the water. An athletic memorandum published last week by Headquarters has set that date aside for a Battalion Swimming Meet in which each company will enter a team. There will be nine events affording opportunities for all the various types of swimmers. Points will be awarded for the first three places only (5-3-1) the two relay races (400 yard relay and 300 yard medley) will receive double the number of points awarded in each place (10-6-2).

These are fine afternoons to spend at Russ Pool and you have less than four weeks to get into training for this meet. So get on the job and get yourself into shape to win for your company and secure a place on the Battalion Team.

COMPANY "E"

BLABS FROM THE FIRING LINE

At this time we wish to commend Corporal R. P. H. Scott who has been notified that he will be awarded the "Purple Heart." Corporal Scott is one of our "Old Soldiers" and is liked by every one in the Company. We also wish to thank him for the shot gun he is giving away to the man who makes the highest score during the range season and who draws less than a corporal's pay. This means that the only ones who have a chance will be from a first fifth down to a buck private. Boys the gun in question is a $25.00 prize, and is well worth fighting for.

Schwob Company Shows Increase

Old established manufacturer of men's clothes shows unit increase for first six months of this year.

The Schwob Company, with retail stores throughout the South and home office in Columbus Ga., has made a remarkable showing in Ready-to-Wear suits for the first six months of this year. Unit sales show an increase of nearly 5 per cent for the six months period ending June 30th as compared with the same period last year. These figures take on even more importance when it is learned that the Spring Season of 1931 was the best in the company's history up to that time.

In an interview with Mr. S. Schwob, president of the Schwob Company, he said, "While our sales last year were close to the million mark, we are not what you might call a big concern. In this respect, I think we are somewhat fortuntae, because it is my opinion that the little fellow under the sun is today in a better position than the big concern. He is able to adjust his business to meet changing conditions much quicker than is the case with large companies. In view of the reduction in price of raw materials and close attention to operating expenses, we have been able to uphold the quality of our merchandise and at the same time make prices that fit today's budget. This, plus a good size sum for newspaper advertising, accounts for the showing this company has made."

In commenting on prospects for this Fall, Mr. Schwob said, "I predict that conditions will improve somewhat this Fall throughout the South. We are now making our Fall clothing, and our Fall advertising campaign, which will be one of the largest in our entire business career, has already been laid out. We take these steps with confidence, and look to the future with courage, believing that there are still ample opportunities in store for business concerns in America."

Denning and Griffin to Scrap Tuesday

Splendid Ring Go Is Promised By Fistic Followers

Jake Denning, who rules the roost in his division in the Carolinas, and Corn Griffin, who commands the respect of all tin earred gentlemen at Fort Benning and other points South, will settle the little question of supremacy at Doughboy Stadium next Tuesday evening.

Denning and Griffin are scheduled to fight ten rounds but it is the general concensus they won't for the very simple reason either can knock over a horse when the mood so moves them to do so assault an innocent and unsuspecting filly.

Gunner DePratt, the terror of old, is going to board the "Comeback Special" by meeting Grumpy Gordy, the "River Stay Away From My Door" boy. The fans are assured of a show when this pair squares off, lowers an instant and then lunges into action. DePratt used to be good —very good, until Stiles Attaway discouraged him. He then suspended the gloves in the pugilistic parlor where they have been collecting dust all these years. Now, after taking them down, fondling them, caressing them and admiring them, the Gunner has decided that they might be of service to him after all. And look what a tough customer he has decided to try them out on.

Dapper Doyle, a boy good enough for a main go (provided the fans appreciated light boys on the top bout) will meet Kid Chambliss in a six rounder that should be o. k.—that is, if Chambliss can get going before Doyle cuffs him around with those dynamic sts of his. Doyle came from Louisiana—New Orleans to be specific—where punks just launching their cauliflower careers are tough enough for the average main go.

Kid Holyfield and "Red" Goss, fiery-thatched M. P. will tear around the ring hitting each other wherever they might, for six rounds, or less. Rumors are there is no bortherly feeling between these men.

Danny Long and Kid Cumbaa are booked for four rounds. Long has been to the wars many, many times and certainly should be able to take care of himself on this occasion. Cumbaa, he will learn, is not a set-up.

Branch and Wright are down for four rounds in the curtain raiser. Both will fight. So that's enough to satisfy any customer.

Captain Philip C. Fry and his assistants feel they have lined up a strong card this time. They have certainly done everything in their power to see that the fans are given a run for their money and the indications are that patrons will leave the stadium intoning:

"Wasn't that a humdinger, though?"

Medico Victories Due to Good Team Work On Part Of Players

When the Intra-Mural baseball schedule was being arranged at the first of the 1932 baseball season, many baseball fans were a little bit skeptic concerning the placing of the Medicos in the class "A" league. Numerous fans and critics went so far as to state that the Medico outfit would be lucky to break into the win column and could rate them no better than the cellar position.

To date the Medicos have been the high light of the first half of the pennant race. Major L. K. Patterson was appointed manager and team coach. With four years of college baseball and seven years as a player and manager in the professional ranks, Major Patterson developed a team that has burned up the league and left fans and critics staring popeyed at the pace setting Medicos.

All credit for the team's success does not go to the coach. The Medicos are not an all-star aggregation but they are fighters with but one thought, and that to win. Teamwork has always been a leading factor in a team's success. The Medicos show consistent team work and razzing, disputes and arguments among the players on the bench or in the field is unheard of.

Gilbert, big hurler, is the king pin of the team. Possessed of a dazzling speed ball, a wide breaking curve, a nice change of pace and also splendid control, he is no doubt the leading hurler of the garrison.

Newman, battery mate of Gilbert, is only a youngster, but he holds the big twirler's zippers in a nonchalant manner that makes the hard ones

Intramural Teams Engaged In Last Minute Struggle

After running over the score-book of the league, we find that the first half hasn't presented such bad baseball after all. The book shows some brilliant recoveries, and also some unforseen slumps that have completely turned things topsy-turvy.

The Second Battalion is now leading the league in averages, but the Medicos have a wonderful chance to come up to them for a first half tie. They will, no doubt, if the weaker teams in the leagues don't continue to play true to form, and upset the dope again. Each time that a strong team has been slated to win in a walk, the weaker teams have set them down.

The Kells are favored to take the series, in the event one is played to settle the leadership question. They are only selected on their superior pitching staff for a series. Gilbert can hold them for one game, but the question remains, can he do it for a series of games? Barnes is a good pitcher for the Medicos, but the Kells pound that pill too hard for the second selection of the pill rollers. At the worst, next week promises baseball of the first water, and the stands will no doubt be packed to witness the last minute struggle of each team in the league.

The Tanks are playing only passive baseball, neither making a threat at going places, up or down, content to remain on the half way mark. They have been strengthened by the addition of Bill Swantic, who is adept at catching as he is on the mound. Bill will burn some recruits pants this last half, and no fooling.

Hot weather seems to have Lindsey, as does he age of Kjelstron, the Kelly ace of older days. Prophet is hitting for the lead up around five fifty, but is being pushed by several. The batting averages will be available for the first half next week.

The team standings:

A.P.I. Men Star In R.O.T.C. Track Meet At Post

AUBURN, Ala., July 22—Placing in 12 of the 14 events, students from Alabama Polytechnic Institute carried off major honors in the annual Fort Benning, Ga. R. O. T. C. track and field meet. The Plainsmen representatives were first in seven events, earned a tie for first in another, were second in six, third in five, and scored in all of the matches except the shoe race and tug-of-war.

Bob Arthur, Birmingham, a candidate for Auburn's four major athletic teams during the 1931-32 term, was the individual star of the meet with firsts in both the shot put and discus. Porter Grant, Dothan, a sterling football and a crack baseball player, and Emmett and Ross McQueen, ace distance runners from Tallassee, were runnersup to Arthur for high scoring honors. Grant was first in the 220 and second in the 100, Emmett McQueen was first in the mile and second in the 440 and Ross McQueen breasted the tape first in the 440 and was second in the mile.

Auburn's other scorers were Scott Turk, Nelson Ga., first in the 100 and a member of the winning team in the 440-yard relay; Robert Lee Carlson, Heflin, first in the javelin; Hugh Cameron, Auburn, a tie for first in the high jump; Sam Mason, Tallassee, a stellar outfielder, second in the javelin; J. H. Suydam, Birminghma, second in the shot put; Joseph Hurt, Tuskegee, second in the cake race; Lee Johnston, Langdale, a consistent football center, third in the 120-yard low hurdles; Marshall Caley, Marion Junction, third in both the 440 and broad jump; Theodore Clarkson, Gadsen, third in the sack race; Euland Rushing, Prattville, third in the javelin, and Dan Rencher and Forney Renfro, both of Opelika, and Cash Stanley, Montgomery, other members of the victorious 440-yard relay quartet.

Medicos Depend On Teamwork To Win

look easy. His whip to the bags has also gained him the respect of opposing base runners.

Orgeron at first base, is far from a shining star, but he fields his position nicely and few errors have been chalked to his credit. He is also capable of collecting base hits when hits mean runs. Reddock at the keystone sack and Massey at short form a smooth working combination that will rival any pair in the garrison. Cummings at third is a little weak with the willow but his work around the hot corner has been ace high.

The outfield is well patrolled. Barnes in left and Greene in center are a nifty pair of ball hawks. Greene has failed to come through at bat but his fleet legs and sure fingers have robbed opposing batters of numerous hits in his territory. Barnes is a nice hitter and dangerous base runner. "Ole Man" Mosley is rather slow over in right field but the old boy wields a willow that makes every hurler in the circuit dread his appearance at the plate with runners on the path.

It looks very much like the Medicos are due for a shot at the post season series. Their defeat by the Kellys last Saturday afternoon was a heart breaking affair, and only the toughest breaks of the game brought the reverse. Man for man, team for team, the Medicos boast one of the strongest combinations in the garrison.

I. S. D.

Although forced back into second division during the first half of the pennant race, the Detachmenteers have finally began to hit their stride and unless something unforeseen occurs should be out in front when the teams come down the home stretch in the final games of the last half.

To begin with the team has finally started hitting. Against the Tanks the Detachmenteers laid on the old hoss apple, hit the offerings of the veteran Red Lindsey, to all corners of the lot to come from behind and overcome a five run lead to win. Monday afternoon the Gunners were humbled 7 to 3, and that hardly tells the story. Led by Sad Samuel Stuart, the Greencords rapped out just 19 base hits. Pop Heckert collected a trio of these smacks.

Sad Samuel busted four safe bingles, Mickey McCarthy put his 133 pounds of brawn back of one of Holloway's benders and bounced one off the score board for a triple. Cooley dropped three hits in safe territory and it looks as if the youngster is going to be a threat to hurlers in the final half. Tolle seems to be as much at home in the outer garden as on the mound. "Wee Grady," lets nothing hit the earth in left field. Zupke, big right hander from the Tank School arrivals, promises to turn in quite a few wins before the end of the season. The big boy can really pitch.

Besides busting the nugget, Peppah Martin is playing a jam up game around the short field. It looks as if "Peppah" will be finding himself at third and the peppy ex-Tanker is going to be a big factor in the Greencord drive.

Pfc. Gibbs, country clerk, has sprung a brand new one in the possum hunting line. He was discovered out in the wilds of Torch Hill a few nights ago. He said that he was possum hunting. When asked where his dogs were at he stated that he never used dogs but that he always "still hunted" for possums.

Sergt. McPherson has an alarm clock that he seems to care for very much. He carries the clock to town with him every night and returns with it every morning. The question is, "Why not leave the clock in town during the day." Or probably Mac has a new boarding place every night.

During the past week the following promotions have been made: Corporal Jesse H. Mann to the grade of sergeant; Pfc. J. H. Parkerson to the grade of corporal.

Suspense is a terrible thing. Recently a certain officer of the Greenhat outfit, stepped down on the gas and let his car out a few notches above the speed limit. Thirty minutes later the office phone rang and he was told that the Provost Marshall desired conversation with him. He took the receiver expecting to hear the worst, imagine his relief when it was just a friendly call.

"Poppa John" is back in the recreation and the ivorys are again clicking. Well tipped cues, smooth tables and plenty of chalk go a long ways in adding to the pleasure of a game of pool.

COMPANY "E"

Company "E" is preparing every day now for the 1932 range season. We believe that the 2nd Battalion will triumph over the 1st Battalion very easy due to the fact the 1st Battalion didn't get many experts.

Eddie J. ampbell has struggled along thru the jungles to Washington, D. C. on his french leave in an effort to balance the budget—it appears that he was successful for the payroll for the army is available for the fiscal year 1933.

Our prizefighter, "Kid" Underwood, has been having tough luck lately, in his last twenty-five bouts he has won the title of "One Round Underwood" (turns one round before he kisses the canvas—KOed). Someone asked "Kid," "Why don't you start fighting sometime" he replied "How do you expect a guy to fight when they don't let him get started."

Jim Dutton volunteered to umpire a baseball game for the Kelly's Sunday and after making a few personal decisions he almost got mobbed by the pop bottle method. Anyway, the Kelly's won a double-header.

After a strenuous week entertaining the girls down town with their new Chevrolet, Sgt. Bell and Pvt. McDonald have declared a few days vacation. It was reported that Sgt. Bell felt matrimonially inclined one night last week and because McDonald refused to act as best man the ceremony was postponed indefinitely.

Company "E" swimming team is rounding into shape for the coming swimming meets this year and they expect to capture the greater part of the honors. The team is composed of Sgt. Poisso, Pvts. Parke, Depriest and Stewart, M. G. and a few more who are a bit slow about announcing their candidacy.

We regret very much to see Lieut. Bowen leave us, Company "E" will always remember him as a fine officer in every respect.

COMPANY "F"

Well, here is dear old "F" Company again; and with a new scribe. Our old scribe, Pfc. Stolier, has been transferred to 2nd Bn. Hq. Co. Best of luck to you, Ben.

At last Cpl. Vines, our Mess Sgt., has been promoted to the grade of Sgt.; and Pfc. Cappell to Cpl. Pvts. Liddell and Rayburn have been promoted to Pfc. Congrats to you boys.

Since the last writing we have had several new men added to our Roster. We wish them the best than can come their way; also that they will like this old Outfit as does ye scribe.

Range season is here again. We begin our Range work on the 25th. According to all symptoms and reports, it is going to be very hot. But what do we care for hot weather? We've had it before and survived, and we can do it again. The boys have been busy for the past week getting their shooting coats ready. Every one seems to be eager to get on the Range. We all hope to make high scores.

Pfc. Rowe seems to be rather popular at a certain residence in town. We are wondering what causes his popularity. He won't tell, but we can guess. Go to it, Ruben, but be careful.

A Quartermaster Sgt. reported that we had a monkey running loose. We investigated and found out that it was only Yassney.

BAND, 24TH INFANTRY

Now that our national fathers have seen fit to make provisions for the boys in olive drab to enjoy the many pleasures made possible with the generous salary of $21.00 per, breathing, in spite of the humidity has been made much easier and we may hold our heads high once more.

Technical Sergeant David C. King, our dashing first sergeant has been discharged, held up his right flopper and received the usual 1095 days and has availed himself of an extended furlough of ten days during which time he intends to tour the country from coast to coast. It is believed that he intends to leave for New York on the eighth day of his furlough returning to Benning on the tenth day.

We are sorry to learn that Mrs. King, wife of our illustrious first sergeant is on the sick list and we sincerely hope for her speedy recovery. It is believed by the writer that the shock of the said first sergeant attending church last week was too much for the good lady.

Private Slone Williams, well known drum artist of the first orchestra has returned from a 30 day furlough which was utilized in visiting points of interest in the United States. Mr. Williams visited extensively in Columbus and Fort Benning, Georgia.

COMPANY "A"

The company has just completed a very successful Record Practice season on July 16, 1932, every body made the desired qualification but certain drones as usual. The famous AHLU as usual has failed to make the necessary 306. What a pity. The mighty J. L. has at last attained the height of a MM, you ought to have seen him in his elegant pose at the standing posiiton. The sight was worth seeing but he came through with a score of only 19.

COMPANY "G"

From target pullers to grass cutters to Quartermaster specialists, to manning the wagons of the service Company seems to be the lot of "G" Company. But beginning Monday of next week, July 25—there will be another story—target pullers will be taking the sandbag rest, grass cutters will be taking the sand bag rest, and everybody else will be taking the sand bag rest. All of which is an indication that we have reached the midsummer mark, in our military training as well as the heat wave.

Word during the past week from Headquarters has been received stating that Corp. Johnson has been awarded the Purple Heart, a distinction for Corp. Johnson of which we are justly proud.

During the past month our strength has been increased by the addition of about ten recruits. They include Stanfill, Bailey, Baker, Bordelon, Yattaw, McGee, Cales, Key, and McLane practically all being previous service men.

COMPANY "C"

Now that the shooting season is over, we hear no more "Wise-cracks" about who can and who can't. Many of the "Cans" of last year proved themselves to be the "Cant's" for this year. Therefore, Kid Tite, your place with us is safe. You'll do better next year.

The 1st Sgt. is rather skeptical about his moniker being published in the paper. However, I'll take a chance on my throne, and say that he too framed an alibi for not making expert rifleman. Oh, yes, he is still a sharpshooter.

Attention Ball Team

I'm going around "tellin' the cock-eyed world," about the ability of your playing, and you fellows go out and let Co. F, give you the "Bums' rush" from the diamond. Wake-up and get together, you can do it—win a game or two, so that I won't be nominated as the "Ananias Reporter of the Regiment.

Some one asked me what was the difference between a good big man and a good little man. At that time I didn't reply. However, after some observation, I have concluded that this example might answer the question. Now, Worham—What the heck would members look like trying to knock down the Mess Sergeant with his fists? Speak now or forever hold your peace.

MATA HARI

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Mata Hari, famous dancer and enemy spy, undertakes to get some secret papers from her lover Shubin, Attache of the Russian Embassy in Paris. Shubin has been unnerved by a visit from Dubois, the head of the French Secret Service, and refuses to discuss them. But before leaving his house, Mata Hari meets again a young aviator, Alexandor Rosanoff, whom she has permitted to make love to her and dismissed. Mata Hari has expected to use Shubin, also, but suspects that enemy secret service agents are striking through him at her.

"Shall I serve dinner now, sir?"

"Oh, I must get warmed first!" protested the dancer. "My teeth are chattering—and so are Monsieur Shubin's."

Shubin took the hint and dismissed the man.

"What did you mean—my teeth are chattering?"

"I meant that you are a coward," she said briskly. "You have had a little chat with Dubois and you are in a great pother about it."

"Mata! Its for you!" he exclaimed, wounded. "Its because I know what this will lead you to. To be shot as a spy, when one is so young and so beautiful. It's not good to think of. Trust me, Mata—take some advice from me—I am much older than you, and besides I adore you—give up these activities which, in the end, will finish you. After all, Germany is not your country. If you must have excitement, why not work for us—for the Allies?"

Was this another suggestion from Dubois?"

"Do you know what the English said when they had my effects searched in London?" she demanded. "They were surprised to find me so dignified! I used no gestures! I made no attempt to seduce them! They were amazed that I was not a giggling, little cocotte, without brains, without breeding, I who come of a lineage that lived in palaces when the English were groveling in caves! And I am to work for such people, indeed!"

"They are never tactful, those English," murmured Shubin, who understood how her vanity had been hurt. "But the French——"

"Oh, the French! In France, they look upon me as a woman, a beautiful woman, an accomplished dancer, no doubt. But in Germany, when I dance, they worship me as a goddess!"

She rose and warmed her hands at the fire, breathing quickly with the vehemence which she was prepared to display.

"Even you, Shubin, who know me and in whom I have had great faith, even you think nothing of playing me false because—what does it matter?—I am only a woman. Very well, I shall know how to defend myself against you in the future."

This threat that he would lose her, which had never failed to agonize him, now made him cry out: "But what is it I've done to you, Mata? I am repeating what Dubois told me, I am . . . "

"I know what you are doing! You are attempting to pull the wool over my eyes, for you know very well that I am aware that you have had fresh dispatches from Russia."

"No——no——I——"

After a long pause, Shubin said heavily, "I can't. No, I can't discuss those with you, Mata."

"I have already dishonored myself for your sake. Don't—don't," he begged, "ask it——no——"

As if he could touch her! She was adamant.

"Honor! Honor! To refuse a favor to a friend who has trusted to your friendship! That's honor, isn't it? she flung out at him so passionately that he was too confused to protest against the speciousness of her accusations.

Seeing him so humbled, she gave a final twist of the knife.

"You are a coward. You're afraid for your skin, my friend, that's all there is to it."

"I am not thinking of myself," said Shubin gloomily. "I am a lost man—a traitor. I shall shoot myself one

Brownfield Defeats Drake At Columbus

Benning Briefs

Carrying comfort to an extreme, we call it, is the idea of some of the officers of the Benning garrison. Lt. Dowdall tells us that he had an interesting flare-back from one of his improvements in the Officers' Club. It seems that the Secretary, "Mine Host" as the Flare so quaintly puts it, had ordered new seats for the cafeteria in the Club with backs, to ease the tired dorsal sections of the post military magnates who drop in for a chat and a bite. His announcement of this welcome change and display of the folder illustrating the seats brought for the interesting information that this change would not be so popular with some of the Club habitues who were in the habit of having the tops of the seats taken off and warmed in the oven before putting them to a more practical use.

* * *

Lt. Johnson's education is improving. He has now, with the able assistance of Captain Fry and Lt. Harmony, discovered the difference between a Post Exchange coupon and an Officers' Club chit. We had always thought that anyone who had to see them even rarely would know them in an instant, but the Lt. is different and it has taken several weeks in the Athletic Office to acquaint him with this important fact.

* * *

The Athletic Officer's newest addition has also made further strides in learning the rudiments of training at Benning, having, in a recent moment, discovered that the Athletic Office is not a part of the Recreation Center Board, despite the fact that most of its mail is addressed via the builders of Benning.

* * *

Another article on this page describes the newest proposed addition to the land forces of the Army, the flying Christie tank. If some intentive genius would just discover a way to train the mosquitoes which infest certain sections of Florida, he would have a truly formidable weapon, for these warriors seemingly never suffer from mechanical trouble, and their bark is certainly not worse than their bite!

* * *

By the way, it looks as though Twitty's cartoons which so vividly describe certain aspects of Benning life may be resumed. In spite of the fact that the creator of "Sweet Army Life" and "Harry Blitz" has departed for greener fields, we may still be able to freshen his memory of the post and get some more of his illustrated ideas about Benning.

* * *

Lt. Dowdall, who recently returned from Ireland, had a most refreshing experience on his return, when he was met at the gate by a reception committee acquainting him with the fact that he was to appear immediately before the Economy Board. And all this in spite of the fact that he hadn't even rolled his shirt-sleeves down!

Golf Club Being Formed By Group Of Enlisted Men

Golf at Fort Benning has received another boost that will aid greatly to add impetus to the progress of the game. The enlisted men of the post who have shown interest here-to-fore in the game of cow pasture pool, have formed a club, with permission to use the Officers' Club Course.

To date, there are twenty-six qualified members to the club, with efforts being made to stretch that number to thirty-two by the first of next week. The membership fees are nominal, being within the limits of all grades desiring to play. This movement should receive the support of all lovers of the Scottish game, and will add more color to the Garrison's recreational life.

Three of the officers of the club have been selected and installed in their respective capacities. Master Sergeant Harry M. Foster is the president. Technical Sergeant Larry Mitzen is vice-president and Master Sergeant Albert Dowling is Secretary.

As soon as the required thirty-two members are enrolled, the tournament will be played. This is to be a handicap affair, and it will be necessary to have the members as early as possible to fairly determine their respective handicaps.

In determining the handicap to be given the contestants, the five best scores of the contestants will be taken by which to set the handicap.

The tournament will be played in four flights of eight players each. There will be, besides the winners trophy, a medalist for low qualifying score, one for each winner and runner-up for each flight and consolation prizes in each flight.

Some of the players have already turned in scores of eighty and less, showing that the game has truly taken a foothold on the enlisted men of the garrison. With the tournament being played under the handicap rules, it should attract much attention, and serve to make it a closely contested affair.

It has been requested by the officers of the club that those desiring to take up the game, and join the club, communicate with any of the above listed officers. You are urged to make your applications early to avoid disappointment to yourselves.

Three Cuban Officers Enrolled as Members of Infantry School Classes

Authorization for the enrollment of three Cuban officers as students in the 1932-33 classes of The Infantry School was received at Fort Benning on Wednesday from the Secretary of War.

Captain Jose F. de Cardoba y Gomez and First Lieutenant Eugenio Bravo y Blaco, Cuban Army, will be enrolled in the company officers' course and Captain Caesar L. Castano y Garcia, Cuban Army, will become a member of the advanced course.

Flying Tanks Proposed As Newest Implement For Modern Warfare

A tank with wings which will enable the death dealing machine to soar through the air to its destination back of the enemy's lines, there to carry on its deadly mission of destruction, is the vision of Walter J. Christie, builder and designer of the army's newest and fastest tanks, several of which are now at Benning. An article in a recent issue of one of the scientific magazines graphically illustrates the principles which are being carried out, and gives several illustrations of the inventor and his staff at work on the tank.

Major Sereno E. Brett, tank member of the Infantry Board, and Captain Llewellyn D. Tharp, of the department of experiment, both of Fort Benning, have received orders despatching them to Rahway, New Jersey, to inspect the newest model of the flying tank which Mr. Christie has just completed and which he proposes to demonstrate to the Army officers. According to information received here, the flying tank is somewhat similar to the present Christie tank used in the Army, but has a number of added features which make it one of the most remarkable military weapons ever built in this country.

A pair of detachable wings, an airplane propeller, and a 1000-horsepower, Hispano-Suiza motor are expected to convert the tank, which weighs about five tons without armor or armament, into a flying machine. The operating crew is to consist of an aviator, and a tank driver, in addition to the gunners, engineers and mechanics.

The flying features are devised to provide a rapid means of transportation of the tank to the scene of action, where the detachable wings will be dropped off and the tank employed as an ordinary land tank.

The idea of the inventor is regarded as visionary by sceptics, but in view of the remarkable accomplishments of his other tank, which was similarly regarded a few years ago, conservative army officers are withholding judgment on the flying tank.

Meanwhile the Officers Reserve Corps members who are stationed at the Post were given a formidable display of mobile military power, comprising nine types of tanks, yesterday by the tank forces at Benning. The diminutive Ford tank, weighing three tons, and the massive Mark VIII tank, scaling at 44 tons, were at the extremes of the fighting units which were shown the civilian-soldiers of the reserve tank corps now at the post.

The demonstration began in the morning with a talk on tank organization which was given by Major Allen F. Kingman and the students then made an inspection of tanks and equipment. The visiting officers were then taken to the tank course, where they witnessed stunt driving of the tanks over the obstacles and barriers of the Tank Park. Included in the driving exhibitions were the Christie, Medium T-2, the 6-ton Franklin, the T1E3, the T1E2, the T1E1, the T1, and the Ford and the Mark VIII tanks. A cross country Cargo Carrier, operating on tracks and a 6-ton special tractor were also included in the demonstration. Captain Donald P. Spalding also gave a lecture on the characteristics of the different types of tanks.

Better Fire Protection Is Latest Achievement Of Three Communities

Another link in the chain of cooperative effort is the tri-city community of Fort Benning, Columbus and Phenix City, has been forged, in the opinion of authorities at the military post, by the completion of the standardization of the fire fighting equipment of the two latter cities.

The establishment of uniformity of the equipment has increased three fold the efficiency of the fire preventive measures in the large area occupied by Columbus, Phenix City and Fort Benning, by making it possible for any of the three communities to render assistance to the others in the event of a major conflagration.

A representative of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, who visited the post on Wednesday, found that the equipment of the Fort Benning fire department conforms in every respect to the standards set by the National Board. The post fire department equipment comprises two pumping engines and two combination chemical and hook and ladder trucks, all motor driven. These are manned by a regular crew of twenty-nine men. A pressure of 70 pounds per square inch is maintained in the water mains which feed the numerous fire hydrants at the post.

Fort Benning's fire fighting equipment was standardized during the latter construction period of the Camp Benning cantonment in 1919, through the efforts of Ben H. Willis, a former member of the Columbus Fire Department, who was appointed chief of the Camp Benning Fire Department at that time. During the thirteen years of his leadership of the Fort Benning department Chief Willis has maintained it at a high degree of efficiency. Fire losses at the post have been remarkably low, sometimes amounting to only a few hundred dollars a year despite the flimsy and inflammable nature of a large number of the buildings.

Columbus has called for assistance from the Fort Benning Fire Department only once, according to Chief Willis. That was in 1922 when a large cotton warehouse was destroyed. This conflagration taxed the resources of the city fire department and threatened to become general. Fort Benning sent a fire engine and fifty soldiers under Chief Willis to help. The engine was not required, as the city firemen had succeeded in checking the fire by the time the soldier firemen arrived, but the soldiers rendered valuable service in salvaging property

Upset Places Post Player In Finals Against Howard

An upset that came as a surprise to most of those who have maintained interest in the Columbus Invitation Tennis Tournament, was the smashing defeat of the Benning Champion, Captain James H. Drake, by Lt. Leon R. Brownfield, also of Fort Benning. Lt. Brownfield, according to observations, played an unusually brilliant and smashing game, winning his match in straight sets, 6-1, 6-3, 6-3, while his opponent was apparently very much off his game. Captain Drake was conceded more than a good chance to win the tournament, but his defeat leaves Lt. Brownfield as the sole contender for singles honors from Benning.

In the other matches of the semi-finals on Thursday, Dozier Howard defeated Henry Swift in a long drawn out match. Howard and Swift played five sets, before the winner was decided, Howard taking the first, Swift the next two and Howard the last two: 6-0, 2-6, 4-6, 6-4, 6-3.

This places Lt. Brownfield and Howard as the two finalists in the match which will be played next Sunday to decide the championship and the winner of the trophy offered in the tournament.

In the doubles games played on Thursday, Captain Drake and Lt. Brownfield defeated Major Tindall and Lt. Poore, all of Fort Benning, 6-1, 6-4; Captain Bassett and Murray Calhoun, defeated R. W. Chaplain and Mark Rosenberg 5-7, 6-3, 6-0. Until his spectacular defeat in the earlier stages of the tournament, Mr. Chaplain was given the best chance to win the tournament, and his opponent's victory, came as a distinct surprise to most of the spectators.

In the remaining doubles games, yet to be played, Lts. Sherburne and Lynch will play Captain Bassett and Murray Calhoun while Captain Drake and Lt. Brownfield will play Dozier Howard and Henry Swift. The doubles finals will be played on Saturday, while the finals in the singles will be played Sunday. Handsome trophies have been offered the winners in the matches.

New Officers Assigned At Benning As Result Of Economy Act Passing

Another curious effect of the "economy act," one of whose provisions deprived the West Point graduates of their customary leave of absence after four years of gruelling work at the Academy, is seen at Fort Benning in the assignment of a group of 20 young second lieutenants, recent graduates, to the 29th Infantry. The addition of this group swells the authorized number of officers of this regiment from 82 to 96. In addition to the new lieutenants the 29th Infantry has a number of other officers who were caught in the entanglements of the economy act and attached for temporary duty. These include 12 infantry officers, four marine officers and one officer of the Cuban army. The 29th Infantry with a strength of

SHRAPNEL BURSTS

The most important event of the week was the Caisson Ride, Tuesday afternoon, given the two recently married couples of the Battalion (Lt. and Mrs. G. B. McConnell and Lt. and Mrs. W. E. Hall.)

Lt. and Mrs. Hall arrived here Monday a week ago but were not given a Caisson ride at that time because Lt. and Mrs. McConnell were expected back and arrived here last Friday in time to get in on the same ride.

Most everyone on the post will agree that these two couples were given a royal welcome to the Artillery by means of the customary Caisson Ride. Although most of the ride was on the concrete street, there were a few bumps now and then to break the monotony of it.

With motors instead of horses a caisson ride wouldn't be a caisson ride and this one was no exception. Besides the six horses pulling the caisson, Lt. McConnell's private mount "Glendower," carrying a set of wheel harness, was led along behind. Glendower may be a pony to some people but he is a great big horse for such a little man as McConnell. Still, the horse has one redeeming feature in that he could easily be used to pull the Caisson.

Lt. Craig was attached to the 83rd last Monday, for temporary duty. Since he expects to go on leave next week, he may not be with us very long but we are glad to have him with us and hope that he will, at least, have time to see the new 105 m.m. gun.

Even though we don't expect to have to help the Marines, the Battalion Commander has decided that everyone should know how to swim. Therefore, starting next week Lt. Sherburne will conduct a class in swimming for all non-swimmers in the Battalion.

HQ., HQ. BATTERY AND C. T.

Sgt. McLeod, one of our expert gunners, set up a Battery Commander's Telescope the other day and had to have help to take it down. He said he forgot the combination.

Our battery barber and one of our cooks decided that they would enjoy the evening by riding out to Boyle's Thirty Acres to attend a dance. The barber mentioned the fact to a certain party that he couldn't take a chance. We wonder what chance he was taking?

The gunners instruction is progressing very rapidly. To date we have about 25 qualified men. We expect to finish up in the next two weeks.

We welcome Lt. Hall to this battery, and hope that he will find his tour of duty a pleasant one.

Sgt. Dodd and Cpl. Pike are still trying to wear the new off that Chevrolet Coupe. The girls in town know the sound of the horn, especially in the vicinity of 8th street.

Paul Davis, one of our efficient cooks, was seen carrying two cabbages up Broad Street. We wonder where the cabbages were cooked, Paul?

BATTERY "A"

In the last few days we have had several members to leave the organization by reason of honorable discharge: Pvts. Bolton, Johnston, Thompson and Treadaway. As yet, none of these men have re-enlisted for Battery "A."

There are several more to be discharged in the next three days, Pfcs. Shepherd, Usher and Pvts. Caldwell, McCall, and Pfc. Hoob. Pfc. Usher and Pvt. McCall are leaving for Hawaii and there is a doubt in several people's mind whether or not they will return if there is a good supply of "Hay" in Hawaii.

The members of Battery "A" were overwhelmed with joy at the return

A GOOD THIRD MAN

With the return of Lieutenant John W. Harmony, fight promoter de luxe, to the ring as the third man, immediately comes better and faster fights and fighting.

Lieutenant Harmony knows more about the fight game than possibly any other man at Fort Benning today. He went far in the amateur ranks himself, and since coming into the army, has been prominent at all posts at which he has served, as a live-wire fight promoter. He not only handles himself well in the ring, but does his work in an efficient manner, breaking the boys when they clinch, forcing the fight out in the open.

We hope to see more of Lt. Harmony out there as the third man in the future. He adds greatly to the value of the cards.

DEPRESSION AT BENNING THE BUNK

At last the depression has hit the Fort Benning fight programs. The lack of attendance, however, has not come through the soldiers. The members of the Garrison have been very generous, according to records compiled at the Athletic office, in their support of the fights.

Captain Phillip T. Fry, Athletic Officer, expressed his appreciation of the fact that the enlisted men have not fallen off in their attendance at the programs in the least. Where the slimness of the crowds has shown most, was in the attendance from Columbus. It is there that the depression is telling on the gate receipts.

The odds are on, however, that the next card, featuring Bob Godwin, tenth contending fighter for the light-heavyweight crown, matched with Walker Football Louisiana Cyclone Smith will pack them in. Not only will the fans travel from Columbus, but from mnay of the neighboring cities. A goodly gathering of Atlanta sports fans will probably grace the event with their attendance.

This man Godwin packs them in wherever he shows, and against such an opponent as he has in Bull Smith will no doubt help the gate to swell to un-heard of proportions.

SOCIAL LION

Mr.——Newsome, social lion tamer of the recent R. O. T. C. Camp, is back at his old stand in the Post Exchange Soda Fountain. (Ladies please take notice).

With his usual unconcern for the whereabouts of his rivals, Mr. Newsome is again dispensing sodas, cigars, plow points and boot-jacks, not to mention the myriad other articles that can now be bought at drug stores.

Nothing seems to perturb his good humor, and it is gratifying to see the old heart-breaker back on the job. (I'll take a little orange in mine, please, Mr. Newsome.)

Dispensary Dope

Baseball is no more a good game for the Pill-Rollers, they are all out of form and trying to see how many games they can lose. The big team did look like a million dollars for a long time and still aims to take the last half. (If we can find some ball players).

Capt. Banton is the new "Iodine and Salts man." He is taking Major Patterson's place while the Major is sick.

Pvt. Jones: (On the sick call) "Capt., I have an ingrowing toe nail."

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

How To Live on Little

Under this title the New Haven, Conn. Department of Health published recently an article which is so timely that it is here reprinted for your benefit.

"The burden of extreme economy always falls on the mother in the home. She must not only assume the responsibility of stretching the food dollar to meet health essentials but she must present this food in its most appealing form. Which the money available for food allowed for a freedom of choice, all the fresh vegetables in season could be purchased and a wide selection of fruits, as well as the choice of more tender cuts of meat. With the shrinking of the family budget, however, personal tastes and preferences must often be sacrificed to meet actual needs. The tender cuts of meats must give way to lower priced cuts, the balance shifting as it were, from the hind to the forequarter of the animal. Beside being cheaper, forequarter cuts are tougher, and so require longer and slower cooking. But this the wise housewife knows, and she stands ready to use these as a basis for stews or pot roasts with their accompanying vegetables. She can still further economize by buying a smaller amount of such meats depending on their flavor to make their "one dish meal" successful. By the use of the more common vegetables—carrots, onions, turnips, cabbage—as well as a liberal amount of potatoes she has practised still further economy since the full flavor and mineral content of each vegetable has been retained in such a dish.

"This is the season of the year when eggs are cheapest, so their widest possible use should be encouraged. Eggs can well be substituted for meat, and in some respects they are even more valuable. Combined with milk in custards in which some cereal, rice, bread, tapioca, etc., has been incorporated to increase the caloric value, eggs play an important part. Added to a bean loaf, popular in "food conservation" days, eggs give added protein value.

"Milk must be retained at all costs, and ways must be found to avoid monotony by varying its use. Cheese, rich also in calcium and protein, can well be used as a cheese sauce with milk on toast and this will please even the younger children. Tomatoes can be added at times to give variety, and chopped eggs can replace the cheese occasionally.

"The dried vegetables such as peas and beans are valuable additions to the low cost diet. Using salt pork as a source of fat, and molasses to give a rich flavor, baked beans make a splendid "one meal dish" when supplemented by a raw cabbage salad, or raw shredded cabbage and grated raw carrot well seasoned. The left over beans pureed can be made into a delicious bean soup to which tomatoes have also been added. Scalloped potatoes and cheese made with milk form another valuable "one meal dish," while two or three kinds of vegetables, carrots, onions, cabbage and potatoes with a small amount of chopped meat make a tasty and nourishing hash.

"An attempt should be made to furnish fresh fruit—oranges, apples, bananas, as often as possible, but when the price makes this impossible, tomatoes should be used more often—such as scalloped tomatoes, cream of tomato soup or even stewed tomatoes with bread and butter.

"While cereals and breads could easily be made to furnish sufficient calories for the family, these must not be used to the exclusion of foods just mentioned, since they are deficient in growth and health essentials. In the low cost menu, cereals and breads should be of the whole grain variety.

of Captain Mangum to the Battery from leave. Capt. Mangum, from all indications, enjoyed his leave very much. As I am of the opinion it is quite a rest to get away from the Battery once in a while, I guess that is the reason for so many desiring furloughs.

The following members of the Battery returned from furlough this week 1st Sgt. Taylor, Sgt. McRae, Cpls. Mixon, McRae and Pvts. Burns and Treadaway. We wonder what became of the fish the McRae boys were going to bring back.

There are several applications in this Battery for Pfc. S-6, Usher's job at Bn., Headquarters in this Battery. They should be well qualified for the use of the mop as there has been enough experience along that line since moving in the new barracks. The cry now is give us back our huts.

There is a vacancy for the official "Bulshevik" of the Battery now that Pvt. McCall is leaving. I am of the opinion the race is between Pvts. Neely and Boone.

The vacancies of Cave Men of the Battery were filled by Sgt. Cameron and Cpl. Brown.

BATTERY "C"

We have had our picnic in Warm Springs, Georgia. It was an enjoyable holiday and if Governor Roosevelt should be elected we can say we have been swimming in the same pool as the President. The weather was fine till we started on the return trip, however the rain had no influence on the general spirit. The spring water had a different effect on the various members of the battery. We appreciate the courtesy of the Howard Bus Line for furnishing us three buses without charge.

Several of our men got discharged and a few broke traditions and did not re-enlist with us. Well, we live in a free country, and everyone can do whatever he believes best, so we wish them luck wherever they may go.

Gunners examinations are still in progress and the first groups have nearly completed their instructions and exams. The score of most of them will be close to 100 per cent.

Fort Meade arrived on the Post on Monday. Maj. Roberts will be assigned with the Academic Department as an instructor.

Miss Mary M. Merrick of the Station Hospital has received orders assigning her to Hawaii. Miss Merrick is to depart from the Post early in October.

Second Lieuts. Everett W. Barlow, William H. Bache, James K. Woolnough, John C. Street and Henry C. Britt, graduates from the West Point class of 1932 have reported at Fort Benning for station.

you soldier?"

Pvt. B.: "I have the trench mouth."

Lt. G.: "Okey, Griffin paint him with iodine and mark him duty."

We all think that Lt. Straube will make a very fine father from the way that he was carrying his little baby the other day. (Will the big baby be a dentist like his father?)

What do you think of a fellow that would run off to Atlanta for the week end while his brother is here visiting him? Well here is the reason, Sammie never would get up for breakfast until his brother came and now he gets up each morning. (What a brother; he is better than the bugler and charge of quarters!)

Miss Peters: "I want to see that bald headed Staff Sgt. in the basement."

Smith: "You'd better not call him that, he still has a few hairs left."

Gilbert: "Where was you the other night? I saw you leave here in "civies" and didn't get back until the next morning?"

Sgt. Henery: "Oh, two hours a night is enough for any good man to sleep, so that is the reason I was out so late. I was trying to find Sammie!"

Charlie Reddick: "Say, Gilbert, why don't you pitch ball?"

Gilbert :"What is the use, Newman never will catch them, and when they are hit you won't stop them so I might as well start pitching horse shoes."

Red Davis: "Say, Floyd, why don't you save your money and buy a mule?"

Red Floyd: "I don't want to go back on the farm."

Red Davis: "I didn't mean that kind of a mule, I mean the mule you drink."

Otto Wood: "I'll go in on it."

Sgt. Allison: "Give away to the right there boys, here comes Corp. Graham, the proud father of an eight pound girl. Congratulations, Ole Man.

Alsup:" Say, Carlisle, how about you and I going on the farm as partners?"

Red Davis: "What! Do you want Carlisle for a partner, to plow him instead of a mule? You'll have to have some big harness made."

Carlisle: "Sure I use to do that before I came to live with Uncle Sam."

We are about to lose three of our best boys, "The Three Mosquitoes," Pvts. Pullen, Vaughn and Griffin are talking of going into tire repairing business. With a new invention, a portable shop. They carry it on the little Ford.

Now something will have to be done about all these trips to Atlanta. Sammie goes off each wek end and comes back so sleepy that he can't work for two days. We think he has gone color blind, he has a blond girl up there, but something happened and he was seen with a red head on Saturday night, out in one of the parks.

Can any one tell us where Sgt. Dotson found "What-a-Man?" He thinks the world and all of that little piece of wood.

This is bad when a brother takes his own brother's girl away from him. Burch Allison has been seen over at the finger wave shop each day since he came down.

"Better be damned than mentioned not at all."

—John Wolcot.

NEWS FROM THE ECONOMIC FIRING LINE

(Special to the Flare from Washington, D. C.)

The excited state of the Infantry mind resulting from uncertainties over the pay and leave situation finally impelled the Flare to send its best correspondent to find out what is really what at the seat of government. That is why we are here, right in the same city with Herb Hoover, Charley Curtis and all the big shots. We haven't formally interviewed anybody yet, except a few underlings at the War Department but, if necessary, we will insist upon an interpretation of the Great Economy Bill from the President himself. We know that nothing less than a signed statement from Mr. Hoover will convince the Russ Pool legal department that going on leave isn't tantamount to formal resignation from the Army.

We hope, however, that some sufficiently authoritative interpretation will spare us the necessity of waiting around too long. Accomodations at the Bonus Army Camp aren't any too good and we can't impose on our friends forever.

When we blew into Washington last on July 18, we were suffering under the disquieting assumption that we weren't going to draw much pay for the month of July. Indeed, we had already prepared the draft of a form letter to our creditors, explaining that the joke was really on them. We are pleased to announce, however, that we won't have to use it. For once the tired service school instructors get a break. The Comptroller has decided that academic leave doesn't have to be counted as payless furlough. This decision proves what we have always contended—namely that even a democratic form of government is capable of occasional intelligent action.

ALUMNI NOTES

Former Benningites are thick around Washington. A lot of hometown boys have made good pounding clocks in government offices and we saw quite a few of them. They all have many friends at the dear old Upatoi M. A. and we feel confident that our readers would like to know all about them and what they are doing. Unfortunately, however, even the Flare's most ruthless investigator isn't able to supply the desired information. We had only two or three days to hang around the War Department and it takes time to find out such things. Somehow we got the impression that a good many of them weren't doing anything but we know this can't be correct. Indeed, we suspect that it was just a bit of propaganda to stimulate enthusiasm for a desk in Washington.

Among former distinguished Benningites that we saw and talked to was Colonel Butcher, former high-powered Benning executive, who is leaving shortly for the great open spaces of Utah.

Major Bennie Ferris, ex-president of the Infantry School Dramatic Club, who keeps in close touch with the situation along the Upatoi through the columns of the Benning Herald and Major Hobbs, who fought in the Blue and Red war of 1927-28 with us are still working for the Chief.

We also talked with Captain Malasky, who helps run the Infantry Journal and had a pleasant chat with two old-timers, Majors Marshburn and Uhl.

Last, but not least, we interviewed Colonel E. F. Rice, who is returning to Benning this year to do a bit of real soldiering with the 29th. Colonel Rice, during his last term at the Infantry School, was prominent in dramatics, and was active in all civic enterprises. For instance, the towers which make the Doughboy Stadium so inspiring are something of a monument to his interest in local affairs for it was largely through his efforts that they were built. Of course, we don't mean to imply that the Colonel did the work but he kept urging the project until the Recreation Center Board finally built towers to get rid of him.

In the interview which Colonel Rice granted the Flare correspondent, he outlined a plan for further improvement of Benning's most impressive structure. Our advice to Contractor Golightly is to go ahead and fix it up the way the Colonel wants it, for until he does so, the Lone Wolf of Austin Loop will hardly have time to attend even the weekly meeting of the Thanatopsis Club.

BENNING BRIEFS

seem to be holding the colors of the post very high, even the younger element holding up its head in the games. We have in mind particularly the fine performance of Richard Tyndall, Jr., who defeated his opponent in the first round, playing, according to reports, a jam-up game, against an opponent older and more seasoned.

ON THE Q. T.

---- ---- A PLEA FOR COPY

Now that the conductor of this column is out of the army, and struggling among the ranks of the great army of nickle grabbers, we will need a little help in data for the column. Will you kindly help? Remember, the motto of this column, "Nothing but the truth, even though you have stretched it to the tearing point," still holds good. We want to help you, so please help us help you. (A little mixed up on the helps and yous, but it serves the purpose sufficiently . . . . we hope).

NEW OFFICERS ASSIGNED TO REGIMENTS OF BENNING AS RESULT OF ECONOMY ACT

2048 enlisted men now actually has assigned for duty 103 officers.

A similar effect is noted in the organization of the 24th Infantry whose authorized officer strength of 37 has jumped to 66. The enlisted strength of this regiment is 801.

The newly commissioned second lieutenants who will join the 29th Infantry are: James K. Woolnough, Earle G. Wheeler, Everett W. Barlow, Richard J. Hunt, William B. Moore, Delbert A. Pryor, Edmond M. Rowland, Edward G. Winston, Hugh T. Cary, Sewell M. Brumby, Graves C. Teller, Richard H. Smith, Lon H. Smith, William H. Bache, William A. McNulty, Dan Gilmer, Henry C Britt, Orville W. Millikin, Thomas R Hannah and James M. Churchill.

Q. M. DETACHMENT

A member of the Quartermaster Detachment has thought of a plan by means of which the assets of the Infantry School Athletic Association may be increased considerably. This idea is the product of Frank Kirksey, who has been famed in Fort Benning for a long time as a steam shovel chauffeur.

His idea is to have a main-go on a Fort Benning fight card with one of the maulers as none other than Frank Kirksey. He is confident of a crowd of at least 2,000 to see the battle.

Kirksey however has concluded that there is one hitch in the plans of such a bout. The main event on Fort Benning cards, according to custom, must last ten rounds. The rounds somehow doesn't appeal to Kirksey a great deal. He'd prefer to stay in the ring five rounds at the most. Four, to him, would be better. More than five rounds would require an unusual amount of physical effort, and Kirksey feels that the customers would get as much for their money in five rounds of his fighting as they would in ten rounds of a battle between the usual sluggers who appear in the main events of fights in the local stadium.

Exactly who Kirksey has in mind as his opponent is unknown, but he is certain that a bout between him and some other lightweight would add dollars to the ISAA treasury.

Kirksey has stated officially that he will be content with 50 per cent of the gate receipts. His main object, obviously, is to help the athletic association.

"COMPANY "E"

With another week begun and with greater expectations for the best range season ever, Company "E" continues to march. As the members of this organization stood in a farewell formation for Col. Churchill on Thursday. It could be easily seen that the men were somewhat crestfallen as they paid this farewell tribute to one of the best Battalion Commanders the Second Battalion has had. We all hope that he is as well satisfied with his new duties as he said he was to command the 2nd Bn. The members of Co. "E" are very eager to carry out Col. Churchill's last wish relative to getting into the money on the range this year.

The members of this organization seemed very joyous over the fact that the Kells were victorious in the first half of the baseball season and will be in full support of the Kells when they begin on the second half, so let's go Kellies and win.

The boys are wondering why "Grouchy" John Bridges goes around whistling here lately, that's easy to explain—just take a look at the "chow that our Mess Sgt. Bell prepares. Does he feed? and how! That chow is so good that it will make a forty year old jackass act like a one year old colt.

Our tailor, "Half-Pint," has been reduced from 6th Cl. Sp. for being late about opening the tailor shop and his rating has been given to Pfc. Googe, assistant mechanic.

For several nights in the last two weeks the company has been disturbed by some peculiar noise of an unknown source. Some of the Company's "sleuths" got busy about locating the noise, it was difficult to find out who or what was making this disturbance—they patiently watched and waited, tip-toed and snooped around, held their nostrils aloof to sniff the atmosphere—finally came a startling discovery—it was only Sgt. "Nat" Arevalo taking his midnight Rapid Fire Exercise.

We extend a warm welcome to Lt. Woolnough, who has just joined the company, and hope he will like the company.

COMPANY "F"

It seems that the weather gets hotter with each succeeding day; but, no deaths have been reported in this outfit due to heat. Come on fellows we'll make it.

Pfc. Armstrong was discharged and has reenlisted. Here's hoping that you have an enjoyable furlough. And we have lost another bugler by reason of discharge. None other than Bill Cox. Pvt. Cowart will be discharged soon. He has permission to reenlist for the Eighth Infantry, at Fort Moultrie, S. C. Sure hate to see you leave, Bennie. At the rate the boys are getting discharged we will have to recruit a new Company unless they reup. Better stick around, boys, until this depression is over.

The House Detective, Pvt. Mount, seems to be working rather hard on another mystery. A cockroach was found in a dying condition by Mount. Before he could get the name of the murderer, the cockroach died. Mount is on his trail, and woe be unto him when he is caught.

We have three more officers attached to our Company. One 1st Lt., and two new 2nd Lts. They are: 1st Lt. Triplet, 2nd Lts. Bache and Barlowe. This gives us a total of twelve officers. Quite a ranking outfit, eh?

We have three young men that aspire to become officers, viz: Cpl. Carpenter, Pvts. Gay and Mauldin. Here's wishing you boys success.

Sears Is Offering Fine Opportunty

A unique service is being offered to the people of Benning this week by the Columbus branch of the Sears Roebuck and company, when it offers a special sale of Allstate tires especially for the auto owners of the Post.

Mr. Thomas, the manager of the local branch, is breaking a long-established precedent of the corporation by his prolongation of the tire sale, and is offering values in tires that have never before been equalled in this section. The mass production and sale methods of the Sears-Roebuck and Company have enabled the branches to make such outstanding offers and the local manager's interest in Benning has been the deciding factor in his continuing the sale especially for the benefit of Benning people.

ED COHN INVITES BENNING FRIENDS TO VISIT STORE

"You'll get exactly what you buy . . . . what you pay for . . . . what you want" says Ed Cohn "when you buy at Metcalf's Clothing and Hat Stores. Mr. Cohn is the manager of the local branch of the Metcalf Stores, and should be in a position to know. The Metcalf company has built up a reputation in several cities for the quality of the goods it sells and the reasonable prices it charges but has never yet overcharged on any article nor sold an article that was below standard. Mr. Cohn has made quite a name for himself in Columbus for his honesty and fairness with his customers and he cordially invites everyone to meet him at the Metcalf Clothing and Hat Store on the west side of Broadway.

"And They Thought I Was Dead"

"STRANGERS OF THE EVENING" Showing at the Grand today for the last time.

Cinema Calendar

for Grand, Rialto and Royal

AT THE ROYAL

(Beginning with midnight show, Saturday at 11:15 P. M.)

ALSO SUNDAY, MONDAY AND TUESDAY: Presenting, "THE WASHINGTON PARADE", with Lionel Barrymore, Karen Morley and Nils Aster. He sold honor for the siren lure of Washington's most dangerous woman. The camera reaches into the Washington scene . . . . and brings you one of the greatest dramas of modern times. Then there's Barrymore, the screen's idol, in his best role since "A FREE SOUL".

AT THE GRAND

SATURDAY, SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Presenting, "ROAR OF THE DRAGON", with Richard Dix, Gwili Andre, Arlene Judge, Zasu Pitts and others of equal renoun. Flame and sword and bloodlust sweep the war torn land. A woman crumples in the path of yelling fiends. Strong men quail in terror as the Tartar strikes.

TNESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Presenting, "THUNDER BELOW," with Tallulah Bankhead and Paul Lukas. One woman in a tropical jugle . . among many men. One woman with a husband she doesn't love. One woman with a tumult of emotions pounding within her for another man's love . . . and that man eager,, ardent, passionate . . . yet restrained. A woman whose beauty overpowers the senses . . . whose glowing, high-passioned love makes every fibre of her too-beautiful body quiver . . . yet starved for a love that convention denies.

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY: Presenting, "MAKE ME A STAR", with Joan Blondell, Stuart Erwin, Zasu Pitts and Ben Turpin. This story is Hollywood. Anything can happen in Hollywood. And everything that's Hollywood happens in this picture. All the romance, the yearning, the amition, the desires, the blind faith . . . of the screen struck boy and girl whose hearts are set on a career on the screen . . . is packed, poignantly, tragically, laughingly . . . in "MAKE ME A STAR".

AT THE RIALTO

NOW PLAYING: Presenting, "HIGH SPEED," with Loretta Sayers and a strong supporting cast. Thrill crashing on thrill in a racing story that speeds faster than time.

SUNDAY: Presenting, "THE UNHOLY GARDEN", with Fay Wray, Estelle Taylor and Warren Hymer in a George Fitzmaurice production. An unshaven and disheveled Ronald Coleman without his Striped trousers, his Oxfordian speech or his Chesterfieldian manners, is the not inconsiderable promise in "THE UNHOLY GARDEN".

MONDAY AND TUESDAY: Presenting, "LADIES OF THE JURY", with Edna May Oliver, Rosco Ates, Jill Esmond and Ken Murray. Here you will find fun from the first bang of the gavel. The screen's giddiest comedians sit in judgement . . . write laughter into the records . . witnesses howl in glee.

WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY: Presenting, "THE BIG PARADE", with John Gilbert and Renee Adoree. The greatest film ever made, it now returns greater and finer in sound. Let no one miss this opportunity to live through one of the most thrilling of life's experiences.

GRAND

ZaSu Comical in "Roar of Dragon"

ZaSu Pitts is a good example of just how topsy-turvy life can be in Hollywood.

Once hailed as the screen's greatest tragedienne by no less an authority than Erich von Stroheim, outstanding director and actor, she is now recognized as one of the screen's greatest comediennes. Her first entrance in a scene is invariably a signal for mirth.

ZaSu is getting her customary quota of laughs in "Roar of the Dragon," RKO Radio picture, which stars Richard Dix, at the Grand Theatre, Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

ROYAL

"THE WASHINGTON MASQUERADE"

Who takes precedence, the daughter of a former president or the sister of an existing vice-president? How does the wife of a speaker of the House fit into the social scheme of things at a big Washington social affair? How do they "grade" foreign potentates in order of their rank, and what are the rules?

These are just a few of the perplexing questions research experts struggled with in filming social sequences of "The Washington Masquerade," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's sensational drama of Washington politics, which comes Saturday with a midnight show to the Royal Theatre with Lionel Barrymore heading an outstanding cast.

Strict Social Rules

Social rules are strict in the national capital, and dozens of problems arose in staging the president's reception done in perfect replica of an actual affair, the great formal dinner and other sidelights on official life at the capital. Hundreds of people appear in these scenes, as well as in the dramatic episodes in the Senate Chamber where Barrymore wages his dramatic fight for the common people ,and later bares the whole structure of lobbyist political control in the smashing climax before the Senate committee.

"The Washington Masquerade" is based on Henry Bernstein's play "The Claw" in which Lionel Barrymore scored one of his greatest stage successes. Barrymore repeats his original role in the screen version of the drama which was adapted by John Meehan in collaboration with the noted political writer Samuel G. Blythe, and was directed by Charles Brabin.

Karen Morley plays opposite Barrymore and the cast also includes the new screen "find" Diane Sinclair, Nils Asther, Reinald Barlow, William Collier, Sr., William Morris, Rafaela Ottiano, C. Henry Gordon, Burton Churchill and Henry Kolker.

RIALTO

"THE BIG PARADE"

The rare treat is in store for Bennin moviegoers starting Wednesday at the Rialto Theatre, for "The Big Parade," King Vidor's masterpiece, has been reissued by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with sound effects and will be shown at this theatre for two days.

Time has not lessened the effectiveness of this picture which will go down in history as the most stirring and realistic story of the World War. Its tremendous scenes are given added interest through being heard as well as seen for now we not only see the gripping episodes in which the American soldiers stalk through Belleau Wood in the face of terrific machine-gun fire to be mowed down like so much hay, but hear the guns, airplanes explosions and incidental sounds as well.

Patriotic Fever Realistic

Sound has also been employed to advantage in the scenes in which the hysterical fever of the populace is at its height at the beginning of the war with its parades, flag-waving, good-byes to the enlisted men and other manifestations of the patriotic fervor. Again the sound of the moving trucks and marching men adds thrills to the stirring sequence in which Renee Adoree, as the French girl, looks for John Gilbert as the regiment moves to the front, finds him at the last minute and sinks to the roadside clutching the old shoe which he has thrown her.

The humorous scenes, in which Karl Dane as the champion tobacco-chewer of the company and Tom O'Brien as the hardboiled corporal figure, are also given added laughs by the addition of sound.

Nothing to Equal It

As a moving, tender and gripping story of the experiences of an American soldier, "The Big Parade" has never been equalled in either silent films or the talkies. The performances of both John Gilbert and Renee Adoree in this picture are considered among the outstanding portrayals of the screen. With its beautiful musical score intact and with the additional thrills of sound synchronization this picture will again grip the thousands who first viewed it in the silent days while for those who missed the original production—it will prove a revelation.

"If Europe has another fight, the war won't last but one fortnight."

"You're right on that. For Uncle Sam is going to tell them all to scram the next time that they want some dough to help finance a little woe. The last time that they changed the map, we paid the whole bill for the scrap. We saved Great Britain, also France, and then they kicked us in the pants."

Uncle Sam has learned a lesson so have lots of FORD owners who fail to bring their car to us for regular inspections.

BAND

And it came to pass in the City of Columbus, Georgia, a babe was born and this babe was destined to become a leader of men. And people came from afar to see him and bring him presents. This babe grew and waxed strong and passed from youth into manhood and everyone knew the Mr. Harold McCray. He enlisted in the 24th Infantry and thru a matriculation of organizations of the regiment he finally honored the band by becoming a member thereof, where his fame soon spread thruout the land. The mighty Harold! The wonderful musician McCray! He aspires to be a solo performer of great note and what he aspires generally transpires, so, my dear readers, he is still destined to become a leader of men.

The "Shuffle Along" (the Staff's Ford) has ceased to shuffle. Mr. Wysinger parked his gas wagon in the Columbus Fender and Body Works, in a diliapidated and thoroughly epileptic condition and when he unparked it lo and behold! he had a car.

Since our recreation room has been completed and the new regulation pool table placed therein it has become one of the most popular haunts in the regimental area for the tired business soldier as well as the world champion pool players (I beg your pardon) cue artists.

Privates First Class Roosevelt Davis and Samuel David will become separated from the service next week but for a few hours only. They will both raise the right hand and say, "I do," whereupon they will receive 1095 days.

Duties of the band for today: Section and band ensemble from 7:30 to 11:00 a. m., regimental parade at 3:55 p. m., from the parade to the bathing pool, from the pool to supper, from supper to concert from 6:30 to 7:30 p. m., from concert to the Polo Club, short concert, from there to band barracks where both orchestras will change clothing and prepare to play for a dance or rather some dances, one at the 24th Infantry Service Club 9:00 to 11:00 p. m., and the other at the Polo Club 9:00 to 1:00 a. m. After that there will be no further duties for the band until Reveille. Pretty soft, say we.

WILLIAM W. HODGES.

COMPANY "A"

The Manager of "A" Company Baseball Team has sent in his resignation and he hopes the new manager will win the three remaining games left to be played, if they don't win under the new management it's just a team that needs better material in the different positions.

The company adjutant has failed to make a mark for himself on the range this season. Sorry, old boy, but wish you better luck next time.

COMPANY "C"

When an individual comes before the public as an authority on any matter of importance, such individual naturally assumes an attitude accordingly. Now, Cook Worsham, receiving much publicity as an aspirant for the Infantry Team, of course, made it known to his company associates, that the making of Expert Rifleman was a matter of mere play. However, when record shooting started, and the required score was not made by our hero at certain ranges, there was, of course, a reason to offer; and believe me, there were plenty of them. As near as the reporter can remember the excuse at 200 yards standing, was that our "Nimrod" was trying an experiment to take back to Camp Perry next year—thus the score of 34. The next happened at 500 yards. Falling down there, he opined that his shooting coat suddenly became unbuttoned—imagine it—but, still being game he states that he didn't ask for an alibi run, however, he got one with no better results with the coat buttoned. After reaching 200 yards rapid fire (with alibis all down the range) with his scores impossible to make expert—our rifleman sought a crowd and bent over in apparent agony (faking) stating that his appendix had busted, but that he would continue shooting, despite the fact that he was warned to go to the hospital by his sympathizers. Well, the climax came and Worsham is a sharpshooter, and still lives with a "Busted Appendix"—Oh, where's Barnum's Big Show?

We sell you a car and will buy it back in nine months and pay you cash for it. We keep a nice line of Chevrolets and Fords along with other makes, on hand. Our new car line is Pontiac, Oakland and Franklins.

PERSONAL POINTS

During the last two weeks the Battalion has picked up four officers and lost one. Captain Fairchild is attached to Headquarters Company, pending the opening of the Tank School. Lieuts. Gustin McA. Nelson and James C. Horne have reported from last year's class at the Tank School and have been assigned to Company "E." Lieut. "Joe" Holly, a tried and true friend of the Supervising Editor arrived for duty from the Mechanized Force at Fort Knox, Ky. and was immediately snapped up by the Tank School as an instructor before we even had time to assign him to a company. We regret that we have to lose him.

Godwin Signed For "Bull" Smith; Fight Attracts Much Attention

Addicts of the cauliflower industry will have the chance of a lifetime to see what is known in pugilistic circles as a "natural" on the next card at doughboy stadium.

Captain Phillip T. Fry announced last Tuesday night that Bob Godwin, tenth ranking lightweight contender for the crown, would show at the Stadium on that card. Godwin has accepted the proposition offered him, and replied in turn that he would arrive at Fort Benning at an early date to begin his training grind in preparation for his ten round mill with Football Smith.

In picking Smith as Godwin's opponent, the fight officials have pitted the two boys that will give enough action to please the most fictitious ring worms. Smith, of all the local talent, and the talent of the surrounding territory, will give Godwin the best battle, and stands better chances of punching out a decision over the popular Cairo boy.

It is interesting that Godwin and Joe Knight, ninth ranking fighter in the same weight, come from the same town. They both started off fighting around the same time, and have remained about on equal terms all the way through. The rise of these two fighters in the ring have been nothing short of spectacular.

It all seems curious that Godwin bears somewhat of a striking resemblance to Young Stribling, the fighting Georgian who dealt Jack Sharkey so much misery in Florida. He has all the appearances of a veteran both in still photos and in action.

The fans are truly set for this fracas, and will no doubt receive the thrill of their lives when Football Smith trys to knock the props from under this rising fighter. According to the ring magazines, Smith will have a little handicap in going in against this top-notcher, but Bull is the type of man who turns the tables on almost all the fighters slated to defeat him. The two boys fight a style that will set the fans on their illustrous left ear, and those missing it will be sorry to the end.

The officials are striving to arrange a card of preliminaries to match the popularity of the two topnotchers. Fighters are now clamoring to get on in Doughboy Stadium, and it should be an easy matter to make an all-time top card out of the next one, which is scheduled for August 9th.

Primed to Punch With Smith Aug. 9

Here you're privileged to gaze upon Bob Godwin, of Cairo, Ga., and incidentally, a pug who is rated tenth by Ring magazine and the New York Boxing Commission, who squares off with Walter (Cyclone) Smith, pride of Benning, in the main event of August 9th, in Doughboy Stadium. Godwin will probably furnish Smith the toughest opposition he has yet encountered. Fans are assured a battle from the very beginning.

DePratt and Gordy Steal Show With Flashy Semifinal

Long John Corn Griffin stepped out with a nifty left hook to the midsection Tuesday night in the first round, and stopped Jake Denning from ever entertaining a hope of clambering over the Fort Benning Terror. It was as beautiful a piece of boxing as has ever been shown by Corn, and proved his right to claim more power for his left hook. He is rightfully proud of that hook that spells so much misery for his opponents, and should go a long way with it.

The card as a whole was a jam up affair, filled with thrills from the starter's gun on. Leather flew from all corners of the ring, and it looked as though some of the boys had grudges up there in that square of modified warfare.

Gunner DePratt and Grumpy Gordy stole the show with their eight round semi-final. Gunner got Grumpy early in the fourth frame, hanging scalp number one on his belt in his start back to fame aboard the "Comeback Special."

De Pratt seems to have retained the old ability to hit hard, with such force that Webster didn't give us enough adjectives to tell jsut how hard he can hit. Ask Grumpy.

From the opening round, the gunner was out there warring for a kayo, never letting the Grumpy person rest a second, thumping rights and lefts as fast as a windmill. He was never in trouble from the quarters of Grumpy, only being riffled by the fact that Gordy has such sticking qualities

Greencords and Gunners Start Out Season With Wins On Opponents

By "AL"

The final half of the Intra-Mural baseball season opened Tuesday afternoon with the Detachmenteers winning over the Medicos 8 to 1. It was a Greencord victory and no mistake. but the score should have been very much closer. In fact Wee Grady should have turned in a shut out while a trio of runs should have been the limit of the winner's scoring.

Tolle twirled a splendid game. He kept the Medico's four hits well scattered and was complete master of the situation. He also was blessed with brilliant support back of him.

Gilbert also twirled a splendid game and allowed only five hits. The real reason for the Medicos showing can be charged to Newman, catcher. One of the finest young prospects in the garrison, Newman supprised his hundreds of admirers by deliberately quitting under fire. Instead of getting in there with his usual pep and ginger. Newman played listlessly, allowed a passed ball to roll to the stands and then stood still while two runners scored. We all have bad days and it is to be hoped that Newman will let that be the last day of that kind for him.

It appears now as if the final half is going to be a closely bunched affair. The Greencords loom as big threats. The Irish boast a splendid team that has never hit their stride. Both the Tankers and Special Units have their sights set high and these teams are plenty capable of coming through.

The Galloping Gunners held down the cellar position during the first half but threaten to be a dark horse in the final spurt. Lt. "Ty" Cobb has taken over the managerial reins of the Gunners and started out with a victory over the Kellys. Lt. Cobb knows baseball, and is also a strategist. He is blessed with a couple of splendid hurlers in Holloway and Morris and can also boast a hard working, fighting catcher in Ridley. Although weak on hitting the Gunners promise to be a menace to opposing pennant hopes.

I. S. D.

There is no reason why the Detachmenteers should not hold the position they now occupy in the final half of the pennant race. The opening game over the Medicos placed us at the top of the list and there we must remain.

"Wee Grady" certainly had those Medicos feeding from his hand for nine innings. His hook was breaking beautifully and when he slipped a fast one across it looked about the size of a marble to the batter. And, lest we forget, that gang out there back of Grady was playing jam up baseball. "Peppahs" Martin had rather an off day at short but none of Peppah's bobbles caused any harm and he is forgiven. Pop Heckert and Sambo Stuart were cutting up like a pair of colts around first and second It is a sight for sore eyes to see a pair of old timers cavorting around like that. Aside from catching a fine game of baseball, Mickey McCarthy garnered his regular base hit during the melee. Speaking of hitting, that boy Reddick certainly came to life with a bang, his triple and double places him at the head of the batting as to stay in there and weather three rounds of that punching, banging storm.

Gordy proved he has the fortitude to weather punishment and give the fans a run for their money, never forgetting his fighters instinct to stay there and fight to the last breath.

In the last stages of the third Round, DePratt opened a cut over Gordy's left eye that completely blinded him in that member. Then a sharp left to the midsection, followed by a hard right to the same region, dropping Gordy for the count, only being saved by the bell.

This seemed to infuriate the Gunner, bringing him out with blood in his eyes. Out he sailed, staging a terrific head and body attack. A powerful left hook to the stomach ended the war and the contestants folded their tents and left the theater of operations. (However, they had to unfold Grumpy before he could fold his tent).

Ernest Chambliss took a close decision over Dapper Doyle in the main preliminary. Some of the fans seemed inclined to give the decision to Doyle, some a draw, but all of them booed the decision as it was given.

It was a good fight, however, and all who hadn't their money's worth by the time the bout was over, should have gone home earlier anyway. They didn't want to see a fight after all.

Doyle was slugging, bobbing and blocking beautifully, always driving into the Slagtown Slugger. However, Chambliss was there with a nice body attack, and on this the judges must have based their decision. Chambliss can certainly mix, and should go far in the better rings of the country in a couple of years.

The judges, Red Lindsey, (the refferee) or somebody got the blind staggers when it came to giving a decision on the Goss-Holyfield affair. These two boys mixed from the word go, and gave the fans a show well worth the money, and more. Goss went too hard and fast for Holifield, lashing him from all corners. Goss had the upperhand all the way, taking all rounds, but the judges or the Referee gave the decision to Holyfield, for which act they were heartily booed from all over the stands.

Danny Long, the Texas Tornado, proved too much for young Gordon Cumbaa of Columbus. Since Danny came to the 83rd F. A., he has not been taken seriously enough by the fans. This boy has a background, and is not through by a long shot. He fights a style that will whittle down better opponents than the Worthy Cumbaa.

Cumbaa had the ability to stick the limit, four rounds, but was too far outclassed by the veteran. Danny had him going all the way, but had to work hard to the body for a decision. He paid little attention to the head, but pounded the body with blows that would fell an ordinary ox.

The curtain was raised by two colored fighters in a four rounder. Willie Branch of the 24th Infantry gave K. O. Wright a tough battle of it for the limit, but the decision went to Wright. Wright's second was comical sidelight to the whole show, with this timely warnings and urgings to use "Dat leff, use dat leff."

The fans were well pleased with the fights, and will remember that war from the date of its declaration.

list for the new half, and he is one sweet fielder.

Tanks Grantham is really the spark plug of the team. His endless line of chatter is really doing good and besides Tanks is also playing heads up baseball around the hot corner. The old hidden ball trick that Tanks and Heckert pulled was one of the high lights of the game.

Callahan is patrolling the center garden like a big leaguer. Cally is off with the willow but he can hit when he is in form. Coley looks better all the while over in left. The long, lanky boy is plenty awkward looking but he covers plenty of ground and is developing in to a dangerous willow wielder.

Zelinski was cooling on the bench during the Medico fracas but the big boy will probably do his stuff against the Kellys. He has a world of stuff and is plenty cool under fire, a little support and Zelinski will turn in his share of wins.

able to publish the results next week. After the way Expert and First Class qualifying scores have been raised this year it appears that if you don't get a full night's sleep before firing on the range each day you won't be in the money at all and that the limits on the number of men drawing qualification pay are more or less superfluous. Nevertheless the fact remains that only the best men will pull down extra money. So it is entirely up to you whether you do or you don't.

On Tuesday Companies "D" and "F-1" got under way with their firing, each taking half the range. When they concluded their practice they were followed by Co. "F-2" which carried the conclusion of the range season to about September the first or perhaps a little later as the Supplementary Season will follow directly on the heels of the regular season. This augurs well for our hike which will not be likely to start before the middle of September at the earliest, when the hot weather will have begun to wane.

MATA HARI

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Mata Hari, famous dance rand enemy spy, undertakes to get some secret papers from her lover Shubin, Attache of the Russian Embassy in Paris. Shubin has been unnerved by a visit from Dubois, the head of the French Secret Service, and refuses to discuss them. But before leaving his house, Mata Hari meets again a young aviator. Alexander Rosanoff, whom she has permitted to make love to her and dismissed. Mata Hari has expected to use Shubin, also, but suspects that enemy secret service agents are striking through him at her. Shubin evades her attempts to worm information from him.

"Oh, well," she said at length, as if the whole business had grown too distasteful to pursue any further, "we may as well have our dinner, then."

By the time they had reached the dessert course, she had, by means of a little flattery, a little wine, a skillful indifference, brought him almost to his customary state of submission. Now it only remained to make him understand that the price of her favors was no light one and she was in the midst of some cool manoeuvering to that end, when the servant, to her surprise and amusement, announced Rosanoff.

"Ah, yes, there's a young man who would not leave Paris without seeing you dance," remarked Shubin.

She thereupon laughingly insisted that of course the young man must be introduced and Shubin humored her.

Thus it happened that Rosanoff made another formal bow to the dancer. He was silent, while Mata Hari, in a spirit of mischief, could not refrain from murmuring, "But the young man's face looks so familiar!"

Rosanoff's eyes returned contempt for her insolence and for the familiarity of her tete-a-tete with Shubin.

"You asked me to report here, sir," he reminded the latter, standing at attention.

"Yes. You are to keep to your rooms, and there will be instructions communicated to you in the morning as to the hour of your departure."

He added a few words in Russian.

As soon as Rosanoff had gone, however, Mata Hari reproached the attache.

"Really, Shubin, you are too tiresome! To dismiss so abruptly such a charming young man! One of your new secretaries—isn't he?"

"No, no, Mata. That doesn't show your usual skill, my dear. That's quite too obvious a question. Though as an aviator, the young man would no doubt interest you."

Aviator! Aviator! He would be flying somewhere tomorrow then.

"He does interest me."

"I am ready to believe it," he said, suddenly harsh, "though you are so pat with assurances of your faithfulness. But the young man will be unavailable for the present, I am afraid. He is going back to Russia tomorrow.

Flying—to Russia—tomorrow. And with information, of course. Shubin with his patent secrecy—his orders in Russian!

"A pity!" she murmured. "I am so tired of old men."

Stung to the quick, Shubin rejoined, "I know that you have no further feeling for me since I will no longer supply you with what you demand. And supply you I will not. I have sent the papers out of my rooms. They are safe from you. Tomorrow they will be in Russia. And my lips are forever sealed!"

"In that case," said Mata Hari, "I can go."

There is always a sensation of surprised delight when the missing part of a puzzle, after much figuring, slips suddenly into place.

This sensation Mata Hari felt when, as she deftly added one and one—the nice young aviator flying to Russia in the morning and ordered to keep to his rooms meanwhile—the papers no longer in Shubin's possession—Shubin's statement that the messages would be safe in Russia tomorrow—the unknown quantity leapt into her mind and made a total of four.

BENNING HERALD

VOLUME II — FORT BENNING, GA., FRIDAY, AUGUST 5, 1932 — NUMBER 15

Benning Briefs

Our intrepid and lion-hearted zoologist, Lt. Ralph Pulsifer, who intersperses his bursts of animal and nature study with sessions of managing the Officers' Club, has again crashed into the scene. This time he is in the role of amateur aviator, and, in a very interesting letter to the Secretary, relates his experiences in his first cross-country trip. He was on leave and Lt. "Barney" Barnette, one of The Infantry School's High-Fliers had promised him a "hitch" as far as Dayton o nhis trip to Kansas, where our hero has watched the tall corn grow for lo! these many years.

* * *

The trip had a very inauspicious beginning. The two voyageurs were driven back once by the threat of clouds on the far horizon and had to make a later start under better conditions. These finally came and the two finally left the Post, not forgetting to make certain preparations which Lt. Pulsifer deemed important. It is to be noted, however, that he left his pets behind, possibly because he didn't want them to suffer from high altitude sickness, or because he wished them to continue thriving in the healthful, if hot, air of Benning. But we'll let that pass. The pair got started finally.

* * *

It was over the mounains of Tennessee that the incident happened. Lt. Pulsifer heard the motor emit a few warning coughs and continue wheezing steadily but attached no special significance to the incident. The mountains rose high and the clouds swung low; rain pelted the two. The motor continued its slightly interrupted note. Lt. Barnette turned around and covered his nose with his hand, and our young hero nodded genially to his host but paid no attention to this cryptic sign. Finally, after fifteen minutes of riding with a "conking" motor they reached the airport, where Lt. Pulsifer was rudely awakened from his bliss of ignorance by the entertaining information that he and the pilot had nearly been subject of examinations for entry in the Caterpillar Club. It seems that the motor of the plane held on just long enough to give us a story.

* * *

We'll bet anyone that Lt. Puslifer returns to Benning via good, solid earth. Not too much, though!

We've heard a story which well illustrates the principal points in instructing the Looies on the finer points of how far to go in betting against superior officers, the case in hand being that of Yancey vs. Dunkleberg and Gibney. And, since the Q. T. column of the Herald has expressed a depression desire to obtain a set of golf clubs cheaply, we suggest that he, too, read further.

It seems that Lts. W. E. Dunkleberg and J. L. Gibney had somewhat scornfully suggested a round of golf with Captain W. B. Yancey, who is succeeding Captain Horan as commanding officer of Co. "F", intimating that the latter hadn't a chance against their own omnipotence. Captain Yancey, feeling very righteous indignation, promptly took on the two upstarts and the round was played on the Benning course. At the summing up of the scores at the end of the round, it was found that Captain

Visiting Masons Luncheon Guests Of Company "F"

The Annual Fourth District F. & A. M. convention met at Fort Benning Lodge yesterday, and were served the noon day meal at "F" Company, 29th Infantry.

This convention meets once each year at the Lodge to which the Master of the convention belongs, which in this instance, threw the convention meeting at Fort Benning at Fort Benning. Master Sergeant William F. Stewart, Worthy Master of the convention, is a past Master of the local lodge, and at present is the Secretary.

The convention takes in a large group of Masonic Lodges, consisting of those in what the old fourth congressional district. The eastern boundary of this district is Carrolton and it reaches west to Columbus. The northern and southern boundaries are about the same distance apart.

Captain Loren A. Wetherby is the present Worshipful Master of the Fort Benning Lodge, and was among those present in the motorcade that inspected the post after lunch. Many other Benning Masons were in the group of one hundred and fifty who are likely to long remember the repast set for them under the able supervision of Mess Sergeant Horace J. Vines, one of the regiment's leading mess heads.

Company "F" is commanded by Captain John P. Horan, who has been with the organization for the past two years. The meal was served the visiting Masons by the new expeditious cafeteria system, inaugurated by Captain Horan since he took over the company.

The meal served was of the ordinary Company "F" variety, no pains being taken to "put on the dog" for visitors. These menus will appear often on the fare of mess sergeant Vines, as will be attested to by the members of the organization.

The menu which was served the visitors follows:

Breaded veal cutlets, tomato sauce, baked beans, candied yams, cream gravy, early June peas, lettuce salad, sliced tomatoes, sweet mixed pickle, ice cream, cake, lemonade.

The cooks on duty for the service of the meals, were: head cook 1cl McDuffie; assistants, Pvt. Moomaw, Pvt. Bingenheimer.

Golf Tournament Plans Are Rapidly Pushed

Golf is swinging into its own among the enlisted men of the garrison, now that the Enlisted Men's Golf Club has been organized. Enough members have been recruited just about complete the arrangements for the qualification play for the tournament.

The tournament will be played under the auspices of the Officers' Club, and will be played on its course. The course is in good tournament condition, being almost always of that type course, and those of the dubs carrying heavy handicaps will have little to alibi about. Alibi orders will be played off during the first snow storm of the season.

The club officials announced yesterday that they were anxious to arrange the details of the qualification play as early as possible, in order that they might get well under

3 Prominent Officers Arrive At Benning During Past Week

Colonel Fred L. Munson, newly assigned commander of the 24th Infantry, joined his regiment on Wednesday, succeeding Colonel Lochlin W. Caffey. Colonel Munson, now the senior officer at Fort Benning, also asumed command of the post, replacing Colonel George F. Baltzell as acting commandant.

Colonel Munson came to Fort Benning from Clemson Agricultural College, Clemson, South Carolina, where he was in charge of the R. O. T. C.

At the age of 21 Colonel Munson enlisted as a private in Company A 6th Infantry on January 11, 1893. He quickly demonstrated qualities of leadership and soon was promoted to corporal and then to sergeant. He was holding the latter rank when he was discharged on June 21, 1897, to accept a commission as 2nd Lieutenant of infantry which he had won by competitive examination. He served during the Spanish-American war as a 2nd lieutenant and later during the insurrection as 1st lieutenant to which rank he was appointed on March 2, 1899. He was promoted to captain on January 2, 1902 which rank he held until July 1, 1916 when he was promoted to major. From August 1917 to December 21, 1917 he held the temporary rank of lieutenant colonel and on the latter date was promoted to the grade of colonel temporary. He received his permanent commission as Lieutenant colonel on May 27, 1920 and as colonel on July 1, 1920. From October 1915 to April 1918 he was on detail in the quartermaster corps. Colonel Munson is the holder of a silver star citation for gallantry in action.

Colonel Caffey, former regimental commander of the 24th Infantry, has been assigned to headquarters staff for temporary duty.

COLONEL WEEKS ARRIVES

Col. Charles W. Weeks, new head of the acadameic department of the Infantry School, arrived at Fort Benning Thursday from Urbana, Illinois, where he was on duty as professor of military science and training at the University of Illinois. Colonel Weeks is the successor to Lieutenant Colonel George C. Marshall, Jr. who left Fort Benning several weeks ago to take command of the 8th Infantry at Fort Screven, Georgia.

Colonel Weeks is another of the army's leaders who have started at the bottom of the military scale and have fought their way upward, step by step, to positions of eminence. In 1898, upon his graduation from the University of Nebraska, and two weeks after the outbreak of the war with Spain, he enlisted as a private in Company F 2nd Nebraska Infantry. Soon afterward he was promoted to sergeant, and was serving in that grade when he was demobilized in October at the conclusion of active hostilities with Spain. A few months after his return to civilian life, he won an appointment to the regular army in competitive examination, and received his commission as a second lieutenant of infantry on June 1, 1899.

On February 2nd, 1901, a little more than a month before the general insurrection swept the Philippine Islands, he was promoted to captain, having served in a number of posts in the meanwhile. He was still serving as a captain when the United States entered the World War, and on July 28, 1917, was promoted to major.

War time promotions to the ranks of lieutenant colonel and colonel followed in rapid succession, and he was placed on duty in the historical section of the war plans divisions of the general staff where he rendered important services until the end of the war.

After the war he reverted to his former rank of major, regular army, and on July 1st, 1920, was promoted to lieutenant colonel. His advancement to colonel was made on July 8, 1928.

Colonel Weeks was a member of the initial general staff list, and served again on the general staff in 1920 and 1921. He is an honor graduate of the Army School of the Line, class of 1911; of the Army Staff College, class of 1912; and of the Army War College, 1920.

LT. COL. HAMMOND HERE

Lieutenant Colonel Thomas E. Hammond, recently on duty with the 16th Infantry at Governors Island, Nwe York, arrived at Fort Benning on Monday and was assigned to the headquarters staff.

Colonel Hammond is one of the most widely known officers in the army, and is especially well known to members of congress. From 1920 to 1922 he was liaison officer between the War Department and Congress and again performed this duty, which involved coordination of army legislative affairs, from 1926 to 1928.

Organization Of Reception Committee Nearly Finished

The reception and housing committee of Fort Benning has completed its organization for the handling of the incoming classes for the 1932-33 school year.

Space has been alloted by C. E. Arnold, manager of the Ralston Hotel, for a Columbus office, which is expected to be open from September 8-20, incl. As in the past, the Real Estate Board of Columbus will have a representative in the Ralston Hotel office, and this year the Southern Bell Telephone Company and the Georgia Power Co. will also place representatives there for the convenience of the incoming students.

Studnts arriving for the new school year prior to the date of opening of the office at the Ralston Hotel will register at the office of the assistant commandant on the post. After September 8, the incoming students may register at the office in town and make all other necessary arrangements for their personal convenience there.

The housing committee has obtained a list of houses from owners and is prepared to give reliable information concerning living conditions in Columbus. The army clause requiring 30 days notice prior to termination of lease is continued as a feature of local rental agreements.

Fort Authorities Urged To Assist In Economy Work

Economy and thrift, long watchwords in army administration, will be emphasized to a greater degree than ever before in the administration of Fort Benning during the present fiscal year. Local post authorities, ever alert to prevent wastage, are subjceting to severe scrutiny every transaction involving the expenditure of government funds and materials with a view to conserving the government funds and materials with a view to conserving the government's interests and observing also the spirit of the injunctions for economy imposed both by legislative restrictions and by mandate of the War Department.

The spirit with which Fort Benning and the army as a whole will lend its effort toward the rehabilitation of the national finances is indicated by a letter written by General Douglas McArthur to various army commanders in which he points out the necessity for the loyal cooperation of all members of the army in the interests of governmental economy.

General McArthur's views on army economy, as expressed in a copy of a letter received at Headquarters The Infantry School are as follows:

"The Congress, early in 1931, appropriated for the support of the Army for the fiscal year just completed, prescribed amounts which had been practically normal during several previous years It soon became apparent, however, that the government's income was falling off sharply, reflecting the depression which was enshrouding the nation. Immediately orders were issued directing economies along every possible line throughout the military establishment. As a result large savings were made. Not only did this result in savings during the last fiscal year, but the same economies were reflected in building the new budget.

"The Army now enters a new fiscal year with funds available for its support reduced about fifty-five million dollars. Fortunately for the nation, the Army's manpower has not been further reduced. This manpower must be kept at the high state of training and morale, and all must be accomplished at a lower average cost per officer and man, regardless of the difficulties involved. I am convinced that this will be done not only in good measure but with a fine loyal spirit, and cheerful cooperation with all agencies in practicing and effecting economies to the end that the Army may contribute its full share to the efforts being made to resore normal conditions. Commanding officers throughout the service will give this question continued study and attention. Every project arising within their respective jurisdiction will be analyzed to determine that it is a necessary activity and that it is administered in full keeping with the spirit of this letter. Order, economy and thrift in the handling of government funds and government property will be emphasized in order that the army may not only function efficiently under decreased allowances, but that it may bring about additional savings wherever possible to the treasury of the United States.

Sloan-Dulaney Wedding In Hawaii Of Interest In Fort Benning Society Circles

The marriage of Mrs. Virginia Huguet Sloan, daughter of Colonel and Mrs. Adolphe H. Huguet, and Lieut. Robert Leroy Dulaney was soleminized Friday evening, July 15th, at the Post Chapel, at Schofield Barracks, Hawaii. The chapel was banked with white chrysanthemums, asters, snapdragons, and easter lillies. Maj.Albert Matthews, chaplain of the Hawaiian Division, officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of silk lace, ashes of roses in color over a slip of peach satin. The gown which was worn with a short jacket was cut low in the back with a broad girdle of beige satin. Her hat was a copy of a French model in ashes of roses tulle with an uncurled ostrich ornament under the brim. She carried a floral muff of gardenias.

The bride's sister, Miss Julie Huguet, was her only attendant. Miss Huguet wore o gown of orchid mousseline-de-soie over pink crepe-de-chine with a low cut surplice of orchid taffeta which tied in back with a bow. Over this, she wore a short jacket of orchid taffeta. Her hat was of orchid mohair with a blue velvet ribbon looped in back under a pink gardenia Her bouquet was of pink roses and purple and orchid sweet peas made up in quaint old-fashioned style.

Lieut. Francis J. Graling acted as best man. The four ushers were Capt. George Daughtery, Lieut. Thomas J. Wells, Lieut John P. Evans, and Lt. Maury Cralle.

After the ceremony a wedding dinner was served at the Halewa Beach Club. Tables were decorated with white gardenias, white roses, and white gladioli, while green tapers were used. Music for dancing was furnished by the 19th Infantry orchestra. The three tier bridal cake was cut by the bride with her husband's sabre.

The guests at the wedding were: Colonel and Mrs. Huguet, Capt. and Mrs. Daughtry, Capt. and Mrs. E. E. Rudelius, and Capt. and Mrs. R. C. Wright, Lieut. and Mrs. R. B. Anderson, Lieut. and Mrs. C. H. # Mata Hari

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Mata Hari, famous dancer and enemy spy, undertakes to get some secret papers from her lover Shubin, Attache of the Russian Embassy in Paris. Shubin has been unnerved by a visit from Dubois, the head of the French Secret Service, and refuses to discuss them. But before leaving his house, Mata Hari meets again a young aviator. Alexander Rosanoff, whom she has permitted to make love to her and dismissed. Mata Hari has expected to use Shubin, also, but is unable to worm definite information from him. Now go on from here.

Why, of course, Rosanoff had the papers and was guarding them tonight!

And what was she to do? There was no question but what she must get the papers. Her pride would never permit her to report a failure to Adriana, especially one due to her own negligence, for this would not have happened yesterday. And here was a challenge to her skill.

Only—where did Rosanoff live?

She did not particularly regret her action of the afternoon and she had every confidence that she could undo it. If only she could find the young man in the haystack of Paris! If only she had not taken it for granted that he was so unimportant! Whatever had made her do that?

Down the wide, tree-shaded street, a taxi chugged along rather slowly. When it had reached a spot not far from her, the driver seemed to have some engine trouble. He got out and peered into the hood. He stamped his feet and rubbed his hands, but did not look around. The dancer hugged the shadow of a wall. And after a second the taxi went on.

In a little while the taxi appeared around the corner again. And at about the spot where it had previously halted, it paused once more. The driver appeared to have some fresh engine trouble.

Now, Mata Hari had made certain that this was no coincidence. But she signalled as she would have to an ordinary taxi and waited for the man to speak first.

Selecting Period Furniture

By Eleanor Ross

No longer do we fill a room with chairs and tables, or a suite, and call it completely furnished. We wouldn't be permitted to, even if we didn't know any better, for friends and relatives fill our heads with hints about Empire, Victorian, French Provincial, Queen Anne or Georgian periods, until our senses swim with visions.

Primarily, of course, you want your little castle to be a home rather than a museum, but if you do want to furnish it in some special period, be wise and consult an interior decorator. His service is not a luxury, as many have discovered, but a practical investment. The decorator derives his or her profit from commissions on goods bought for you, and through connections with wholesale houses ofte nis able to obtain grand bargains.

WHAT "PERIODS" ARE

The decorator will get only what is needed, if you desire to furnish as you go along and the wise bride will do just that. Then, as the years pass, the home is made more and more beautiful by lovely pieces picked up here and there. Of all collecting hobbies, none is so rich in returns as collecting lovely harmonious things to beautify the home.

Before you decide on any period, take into account your house and its location. A safe choice is French Provincial, good for almost any suburban home, informal and adaptable. Remember that the living room should be definitely of the period selected, and the dining room, too, if possible. The other rooms may vary, but with not too strongly marked deviation from the keynote style.

And don't be scared by talk about "periods." It all means just a definite convention, or style, of furnishing. Get to know the various periods. Buy magazines that deal with home decorating and see how beautiful a room is when, for example, it is of the Empire or Regency period. See to it that Hepplewhite, Chippendale, Sheraton and our own Duncan Phyfe are more than mere names to you. Learn to recognize and appreciate the originals and the marvelous reproductions of the work of these master craftsmen.

This brings us to the question of antiques, and I would advise you not to buy many. It is impossible to furnish entirely with old pieces, anyway. If you can get one or two fine original pieces of the period you select, count yourself fortunate. Reproductions are marvelously well done, and your decorator easily will find for you pieces that vie with originals in beauty and workmanship, yet do not cost a small fortune.

"EASY TO LIVE WITH"

If you furnish without professional advice, be careful, for the going has many pitfalls, whether you incline to the old or the modern. Even the latter is not at all easy to work with, although it doesn't present dangers of anachronisms.

For a nice little cottage in the country you can't do better than Early American. If your house is in the suburbs and not glaringly new, the Georgian period is beautiful, gracious and mellow.

See to it that, whatever style you use, the result is harmonious and "easy to live with."

FOOD POISONING

A better name for this condition would be food infection, for it is almost always the result of bacterial infection of meat, milk, cheese, or other milk product, or even of some vegetables such as the potato.

The condition is often called "ptomain poisoning"

Usually some six to twelve hours after eating an infected food the symptoms begin, but they may come in two or three hours or be delayed for even three days.

The first signs are stomach or intestinal distress and usually appear suddenly as nausea, vomiting, abdominal pain and diarrhoea. The pain is often the first sign. The severity of the symptoms vary in different individuals even among those who have eaten the same amounts of poisonous food. Usually the attack is over within twenty four hours but with some the prostration lasts for several days and may even cause death.

Most cases occur in the summer time. Germs cousing the infection grow in the food before it is eaten. Temperature at which foods are kept is the all important facts in preventing the growth of germs. If your ice box is always keeps food at a temperaturebelow 50 degrees F. and you have formed the habit of constantly keeping foods in that ice box you have done your part in preventing food infection in your home. When foods can not be kept at a temperature which prevents bacterial growth (below 50) there is only one thing to do, —plan your buying of perishable foods so that you use them all up the same day.

Remember, too, that the more a food is handled and the longer it lies around the greater the chance of its becoming contaminated.

If you keep this fact in mind when away from home you will never order at a resturant or hotel any food during the hot weather such as meat pie, sausage, meat balls, chopped meat or some other food that has been warmed over for it is these foods that are the most handled and the most often cause of poisoning.

Cooking of food must be thorough and should be finished just before serving. Cooking is a safe guard. Cleanliness and freshness must be watchwords.

MATA HARI

"Madame, the weather is most inclement," he said.

She then got in.

"I am to tell you we have traced the papers and to drive you there."

Really, Adriana was almost worthy to give her orders! He left nothing undone, he was ever on guard against the unlucky chance. All the same, she examined the driver before replying. Fortunately, she was able to recognize him under the disguise and at that she relaxed.

"Are you sure we're not being followed? Is there any one at the window, perhaps?"

"No, Madame, there is no one in the street and I have seen nothing. I am quite sure."

"They're at the young Russian's, I suppose."

"Exactly, Madame. It's not far. I am to tell you that the concierge is asleep, the men have keys and will let you in, and they will come later at your signal."

"But they can't take them anyway —because in the morning . . . "

"Oh, no, Madame. They will be returned before morning."

"And the signal?"

"When the lights go out."

All this time they had been traveling at the swiftest speed of a Paris taxi, which is no mean one, and the dancer was jerked from side to side. It was hard to make herself heard above the noise of the engine, but she was intensely curious to learn by what trick Adriana had managed to locate Rosanoff, and she repeated her query until the driver took notice.

"Madame, I drove him from your house to his this morning, and he has been followed ever since."

Of course, she knew that Adriana often had her watched by his operatives. She had realized that he was aware of her delinquency when he sent her the orchids. Still, it was officious of him, though so fortunate in this instance. She made up her mind that it must come to a battle between them sooner or later when she would show him that she would insist on following her own course.

She was prepared for the two men who materialized like two ghosts from a patch of shadow. One of them pointed to where a light burned in an apartment three flights up before they let her in. There was no need for further conversation.

Climbing the stairs, for she detested these self-operated lifts that were just as likely as not to leave one stranded between floors, Mata Hari reflected with a superb assurance that the young man was about to get a most pleasurable surprise. Her lids dropped more sensuously over eyes grown a little brighter and a faint smile rose to her lips from the wells of her secret thoughts. The ring that he had presented to her was still on her finger recalling the embraces of the previous night.

And when Rosanoff opened the door, wearing a Russian smock of heavy silk, the dancer decided that she found him even more handsome than in his uniform and quite as much to her liking.

"Well . . . here I am," she announced easily . . . and a moment later, "Aren't you going to let me in?"

The incredulous confusion on his face amused her. He gaped! Instinctively, he moved aside to let her enter.

Quite at her ease, she sauntered past him noticing the books, the pictures, the carved oak table, the portrait of the Czar draped with the Russian flag, casting her eyes at a stand against the wall, on which lay a black portfolio. The stand was of black wood and the case, flung there so casually, might have seemed of slight importance to an inexperienced person, else why was it exposed? It made Mata Hara recall a story she had read somewhere in which the police had searched a house from top to bottom, time after time, for a letter only to find that all the while it had reposed in plain sight on a rack. She knew she had discovered what she wanted.

"What a charming little place you have! But then you must be often in Paris to keep your own quarters here."

Rosanoff had regained his voice, if not his poise, and he asked in a strangled tone, "Why did you come here?"

"Mmm . . . to see you."

"You finished your rendezvous early," said Rosanoff with a bitterness that burst forth in spite of himself, a bitterness which the dancer caught at once and which met her wishes.

"No. I ran away from it. Because I saw you . . . I'm afraid Shubin was in a temper about it."

"I can't make you out!"

"I can't either," she admitted.

"This morning," he went on, "you acted like——"

"——tonight I find you alone with ——"

"Alexis, you mustn't think . . . unpardonable thoughts. Shubin is rich and influential. He's an old friend of mine, and he is often very helpful. Surely, to dine with an old friend, to exchange a kiss and a clasp of the hands for old times' sakes—is there any harm in that?"

It came into Rosanoff's mind that he had heard that so potent was the enchantment in which she held her lovers that even after she had deserted them, they remained her devoted friends. If that were true, how could he, whom she had sought out, resist her? In the tumult which her nearness engendered in his senses, he forgot to be puzzled as to how she had found him, he forgot the wound to his pride in the morning. She had only to touch his hand, look into his eyes and say caressingly, "Well, then, my dear? I've said I'm sorry. Aren't you glad I'm here?" and he was lost.

As for the dancer, it gave her a sort of sensual gratification just to play with him, to let him embrace her, to draw away, to feel the strong pull of his senses toward her, to taste her victory.

Meanwhile, she had always in sight the fact that the men below were watching the windows. She could not see them, of course, but their suspense was ever-present. It was a strange thing, her mind—one part of it voluptuously languid, almost drowsy, as she returned passion for Rosanoff's passion, for she drugged herself as well as her victims—and the other part lucid, matter-of-fact. The Englishmen who had noticed that she was business-like had really shown some knowledge of character.

At length, she disengaged herself and, Rosanoff following her about, she looked over the room again to see if by chance she had missed any difficulties. But it was a quite simple room. There was a door to the bedroom, not draperies—a very good thing.

She noticed a photograph of an old man and in a niche close by a lamp burning before an ikon.

"Who is the old gentleman?"

"My father."

"I like his face. And this, she said just to be saying something, "is a picture of the Madonna."

"The Madonna of Kazan," said Rosanoff, pleased at her interest. "My mother made a pilgrimage to the Cloister of Miracles to get it for me. It's more than a hundred miles from our town. She walked all the way."

"Indeed! What does it do? Bring you luck?"

"It guards you from evil. I had to go down on my knees at the altar and promise I'd keep a perpetual flame burning before it."

"And have you?" she inquired.

"Oh, yes."

Something in the way he said it made the dancer look at him curiously.

"You're a funny boy."

"Who loves you!" declared Rosanoff.

"Do you, indeed?"

"I love you as one adores sacred things," he said in a low voice.

This was a game she played very prettily when she chose.

"What things?"

ABOUT THAT CHECK

The July 15th issue of the Benning Herald, which has just caught up with us, carried an item in the Flare which wasn't passed by the Board of Editorial Censorship. It relates of an unsigned check which we left to pay our Commissary bill.

The unknown but strongly suspected author of the item gives several plausible explanations for the deed but fails to give us credit for an ingenious precaution against the threat of a payless payday for July. When we left Benning, you see, we did not know that academic leave would not be counted as payless furlough. We did know, however, that some loyal subordinate would step forward in an emergency and pay our bill in order to preserve the honor of the Erudite Fourth Section. We therefore omitted our John Hancock from the check.

Everything worked out as planned and our one-time brother columnist, R. G. T., paid the bill. By the time the unsigned check was returned to us we were practically certain that we were only scheduled to lose the normal eight and one-third per cent in July and R. G. T. was promptly reimbursed. Had the Comptroller-General's decision been adverse, however, R. G. T. might have received only our thanks and a certified I. O. U.

What we didn't count on was the publicity. Having left such an opening we can't blame anyone—particularly if he had to advance any money—for writing us up, but we think he went too far in putting the item at the head of the column. Had we known he was going to do that, we might have gone through with our original idea of declaring a personal moratorium.

INTERVIEW WITH AN OLD FRIEND

We have been pretty much on the move since our last contribution to the columns of the Herald, traveling by air whenever an itinerant Army plane had a vacant seat going in the direction we wanted to go. We visited Washington, New York and West Point and are now back in Ohio resting up in preparation for an unusually heavy crop of monographs.

Having fixed things up with Mr. McCall so that the fatigued instructors of Benning and the other service schools could take academic leave, we hastened to West Point to confer with Professor McCunniff on the economic situation. We found the Professor, now Plans and Training Minister to the U. S. C. C., busily engaged in perfecting a project to inoculate the kaydets with all the latest First Section theories, but still intensely interested in selling his Four Hour Day Depression Cure to all major and minor political parties.

"What this country needs," said the Professor, settling back in his Lincoln and lighting the cigarette which we were only too glad to supply, "is less efficiency and more jobs. The Army is on the right track. See that prisoner manicuring that hedge and the sentry watching him? There we have two men employed, doing half a man's work, whereas, in civil life, employers are trying to make one man do two men's work. Am I right, or ain't I?"

We heartily agreed that the Professor was right and promised to use our influence to persuade General Fuzzard to incorporate the Army's supervised labor system into his platform. Then we gently led the conversation into other channels and had an enjoyable visit.

PUBLIC RELATIONS ASSIGNMENT

Speaking of General Fuzzard reminds us that we have been neglecting our solemn duty to give our public a brief history of the man who appears to be just as good a bet as any for the Moses who is to lead the Children of America out of the wilderness of Depression. No presidential candidate can hope to succeed without a good biographer and the General has shown commendable judgment in appointing us to perform this office for him. Moreover, he has given us a free hand in interpreting his interesting but somewhat checkered career to the electorate. "Tell the truth," he commanded when he gave us our instructions, "but don't be a damned fool about it. For instance, it ain't goin' to do no good to dig up that embalmed beef mess of Spanish War days and, as for the Teapot Dome business, my motto is to let a sleepin' dog lay!"

Assuring the General that we can be discreet in the interest of a noble cause, we set about collecting data on the early life of the Progrestatic candidate and are now ready to publish the salient facts to an eagerly waiting world. Since we are too far away from Benning to run down local happenings of interest to our readers, this looks like a good time run the first chapter.

GENERAL FUZZARD'S BIOGRAPHY

Marathon Miltiades Fuzzard was born of poor but honest parents in the early seventies. The Fuzzards are an old American family, the first New World ancestors having come to Virginia when King James sent over the first shipload of hand-picked colonists from the debtor's prisons.

There is some question as to the exact location of the General's birthplace. His father traveled a good deal prior to settling down for a ten year term in Atlanta and the General's recollection of this most important even in his life are a trifle confused.

"I remember my mother's telling me once that my old man had to get out of Alabama about that time." he remarked, "but I ain't sure whether the old woman went with him to Mississippi then or later. I hope she waited because I don't hanker to have people think that I'm a brother Elk of Ross Collins. It's bad enough trying to explain that just because Tom Heflin and me was both born in Alabama is no sign that I'm a political buddy of his'n. My old man spent five years in Joliet, Illinois, before he came south, anyway."

General Fuzzard is also uncertain as to the why and wherefore of his unique Christian name. "The old man had a Greek pardner once in the restaurant business" he explained, "but I don't think that had anything to do with it. I think that they got the name out of a book, the way Professor McCunniff did when he named his daughter."

Little Marathon, like all good predestined candidates, was raised on a farm. He helped his father tend the still at the early age of six and before he was fifteen he could pick off a way during the early part of the month. Complications, such as inclement weather, might set in later on and greatly detract from the possibilities of a good tournament.

Among those recently recruited to the ranks of golf, we find First Sergeant Edgar C. Davis, a man who has excelled at every form of sport he has ever taken up. It remains to be seen what can be done at this Scotchman's game.

As has been shown by the attendance of enlisted men on the courses open to the public in Columbus, the game has a good foothold on their patronage. Only time will bring the game with them to where it belongs. Some of the recent recruits to the game have already broken ninety on the Columbus courses, while some at Benning have been lower than eighty.

Corporal Pike and Sergeant McCallum of Headquarters Battery, Eighty-Third Field Artillery are looked on as the next additions to the club. Corporal Pike shoots a consistent game at about 93 on the Rex View course, while McCallum throws his out of the ditches to push him at 94. Squirrel will break ninety if his opponents ever look the other way at the right time.

SHRAPNEL BURSTS

Lt. Draper took leave last Friday, for his home in Troy, N. Y. where he will await orders to go to France on a language detail. In case he doesn't get orders within the next month he will return to the 83rd Field Artillery, but if he does receive orders while on leave, he will be gone for several years. It is hard for anyone to sit still and wait for something to happen when he expects it any any time and Draper is no exception. After calling up the radio station about three times a day every day since the Appropriation Bill was passed, he decided that it had gone far enough and that he should go home and take a rest.

The Bartletts left Sunday to spend the remainder of their month's leave, without pay, in Michigan, before reporting to West Point. Since Lieut. Bartlett was here only a short time he didn't take his battery back but, being a wonderful horseman, he was put in charge of the twelve remounts. The remounts were turned over to individual officers Saturday, and are coming along nicely, due to Lt. Bartlett's having started them off properly.

Lt. and Mrs. Beishline returned, Monday, from visiting relatives in Pennsylvania.

Two officers represented the Artillery, Tuesday evening, at the lecture by Dr. Raffalovich and the singing by Veniamin Blinov. The post, as a whole, wasn't very well represented but everyone missed a great deal by not being there. These two men are expected to put on another program sometime next week and it will certainly be worth while finding out about it and going to hear them.

BATTERY "A"

The spinning industries of the south will no doubt start to operate on a full time basis if the rest of Uncle Sam's Army will follow in the salvaging of clothing (I. S. D'ing) as this organization did several days. Several reasons have been advanced for this movement and all seem plausible to wit: To give employment to the unemployed, the need of rags and waste by the organization to clean material, to deplete the Government War Stock on hand, to advance the price of cotton and to lower the clothing allowance money each soldier will draw at the end of his enlistment. Pfc. Usher could not stand the pressure of having to dispose of clothing that had protected him from heat and cold for years and therefore started the back-to-Hawaii movement.

The pseudo Damon and Pythias friendship between the two Corporals has at last dissolved and Corporal Speedy is now doing his commuting to Columbus and back with Mr. Howard. Somehow it did not have the earmarks of a 50-50 basis.

Corporal Ridley begs to announce that due to a physical calamity he will be out of circulation in Georgia and Alabama for one month. The rumor can not be verified but it is whispered around that he talked in his sleep.

Pfc. Tillie Sailers has declared that the summer holidays are all the bunk inasmuch as he is having to spend the afternons studying a blue print so it will be possible to build a regulation step ladder for the 1st Sergeant. Please do not weaken any of the rungs, for a swallow of Beechnut is no picnic.

According to Cpl. Stringfellow and Pfc. (Acting Ass't Supply Sgt., High Keeper of the Athletic Equipment) North, the maneuvering grounds of Alabama are strewn with duds and they suggest that the men of this post be guided accordingly.

"Thou shalt not fly, or else" by the girl friend is why Pvt. Thompson returned to the fold.

Pfc. Roper refused his special assignment to Hawaii on account of having been reared in the interior of Alabama never having learned to swim and water being a sickening sight.

The worst never happens is a trite saying, but how true! And, while there was no public demonstration, by the personnel of the battery upon Captain Mangum's return to the battery, we know for a fact that a heavy load has been lifted and optimism has superseded pessimism. Please don't go away—Again.

revenue officer at three hundred yards as well as any grown man in the county. This experience equips him to understand the problems of the small farmer as well as the manufacturing and distributing interests. Indeed, it is not too much to say that General Fuzzard's early training has given him an insight into the two leading industries of the country which is not equalled by any other candidate in the field.

Q. M. D.

The member of the Quartermaster Detachment who has probably more nicknames than any other inhabitant of Fort Benning has decided to procure for himself a schedule of street cars running in the city of Phenix City, Alabama. Leonard K. Osburn (which is his real name and one which he is very seldom called) not many days ago failed to appear at Fort Benning.

To explain his absence he gave an excuse which obviously no one could fail to accept.

He declared that he was waiting for a street car. The whole trouble about the situation, according to an explanation given by his agent, Henry Hahn was that he was waiting for a street car on a street on which no street cars ran.

How many tickets Osburn had in his pocket to pay for his ride is uncertain. He has a sort of kind feeling toward transportation companies and seems to like to purchase about two or three times as many tickets to make a trip as are required, his desire being most likely to help rid the country of the depression. This habit was brought out forcibly in one of his recent trips to Birmingham on which he was forced to procure four tickets to get to that city and back to Columbus.

Even the Mighty Grumpy Gordy, whose fame is far and wide and extends even as far as Eufaula, Alabama, has his troubles. Being a man of the world—a fighter, an operator of locomotives and a crooner of heartbreaking love ballads—he must of necessity become involved in financial affairs, and at times these affairs become rather complex and troublesome. His latest financial worry has to do with a newspaper. Big business men these days are having considerable difficulty with the newspapers they own. Some of them cannot even make necessary payments on supplies when these payments are due. The Mighty Grumpy has also felt these effects in the newspaper world and has found it impossible to keep up his payments to the newsboy for the Columbus daily.

3 PROMINENT OFFICERS ADDED TO BENNING PERSONNEL

During the World War Colonel Hammond was on duty at G. H. Q. served also on the staff of the First Division and for a portion of the time commanded a regiment. For his services in this capacity he was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal.

Colonel Hammond was appointed to the Military Academy from Oregon in 1901, and was commissioned a second lieutenant in June 1905. He was promoted to 1st lieutenant in March 1911, to captain in July 1916, to major in July 1920 and to lieutenant colonel in April 1929.

While a cadet he was one of West Points star football players and in later years was on duty several times at the Academy as football coach.

Colonel Hammond was a member of the initial General Staff Corps eligible list and is a graduate of the Army War College, class of 1923, later serving as instructor there.

THEATRICAL ATTRACTIONS

"SHE'S NO LADY"

James Gleason, George Bancroft and Wynne Gibson get-to-gether, in a humorous scene from "LADY AND GENT", coming to the Grand Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

Cinema Calendar

for Grand, Rialto and Royal

AT THE GRAND

SATURDAY, SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Presenting: "LADY AND GENT," with George Bancroft, Wynne Gibson, Charles Starrett, James Gleason, John Wynne, James Crane and Billy Butts. "LADY AND GENT" is a romantic story of lovable characters. Certain incidents in the story deal with prize- fighting and pugilists and is a red hot picture all the way through.

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Presenting: "MURDERS IN THE RUE MORGUE," with Sidney Fox, Leon Waycoff, Bert Roach and others of equal calibre. One of the strangest motion pictures ever shown. You will say the same things that thousands of others have said as soon as you have seen "MURDERS IN THE RUE MORGUE." Based on the story by Edgar Allan Poe. It is a picture which you will not want to miss. It forms a milestone in the art of the motion picture in that it is perhaps the most astounding story o reach the screen.

THURSDAYANDFRIDAY: Presenting: "MILLION DOLLAR LEGS," with Jack Oakie and a flock of beauties, along with such famous comedians as Ben Turpin and Hank Mann. It makes you laugh about the Olympic games now in progress in California. And what a cast they selected to make you grin constantly. Some of Mack Sennett's Keystone cops are in it and one amusing situation follows another until you'll find it difficult to keep from rolling out of your seat and into the aisle.

AT THE RIALTO

NOW PLAYING: Presenting: "SON OF OKLAHOMA," with Bob Steele. Here's a real He-man story of how a waif of the wastelands became a man of destiny. A lonely child lost in the vast spaces of the great Oklahoma deserts. The secret trail of the desert gold mine. "Shotgun" Mary, a woman who shot it out with desperadoes. These are simply a few of the numerous red hot situations that occur to keep you guessing in "SON OF OKLAHOMA." You'll surely like it.

* * *

SUNDAY ONLY: Presenting: "TONIGHT OR NEVER," with Gloria Swanson and a strong supporting cast. "TONIGHT OR NEVER" is a Gloria Swanson returned to the emotional tempo of her first talking picture, "THE TRESPASSER," or the earlier silent, "SADIE THOMPSON."

* * *

MONDAY AND TUESDAY: Presenting: "THE STRANGE CASE OF CLARA DEANE," with Wynne Gibson, Pat O'Brien, Frances Dee and Dudley Digges. She had the courage to kill for her child. She gave her heart, her joy, her happiness, her life—to a girl she never knew. She deserved so much; life gave her so little. She shot—but Justice pulled the trigger. Can you, who are without love, lost honor, condemn her? Not murder—but justice.

* * *

WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY: Presenting: "THE BROKEN WING," with Lupe Velez, Leo Carrillo, Melvyn Douglas and George Barbier. Shocked, memory gone, who is he? He had dropped from the clouds. His airplane wrecked. Uninvited he had dropped into the home of the most tantalizing, most alluring senorita imaginable. And she—but here is a picture you will have to see for yourself to appreciate it.

LUPE VELEZ TAUGHT HERSELF THE ART OF STAGE DANCING

WON IMMEDIATELY POPULARITY IN MEXICO CITY BEFORE BEING DRAFTED FOR PICTURES

Lupe Velez, tempestuous spirit of the land of tabasco sauce and cayenne pepper is not a cinematic accident. She was well acquainted with the footlights of the best theatres in Mexico City before she ever stood before the lens of a motion picture camera. Lupe is Castilian-Mexican and was born in San Luis Potosi, of an aristocratic family of affluence and prominence, and well educated.

In childhood she showed pronounced dramatic talent, and had an incessant urge to dance—a natural outlet for her youthful vigor and vibrant temperament. It is almost as natural for Lupe to dance as it is for her to breathe. It is an expression of her personality which has won for the title of "champion gloom dispeller," affectionately bestowed by her associates.

Victor Fleming, who directed one of her former pictures, said at that time: "Lupe is the best morale doctor imaginable. Whenever she is not working before the camera, she busies herself entertaining the other members of the company. Seemingly tireless, she will sing and dance for hours, while everyone who is not otherwise occupied, gathers around her. Gloom and that girl simply can not stay in the same vicinity."

Lupe very early in life determined to go on the stage as a dancer. She is what is called a "natural." Her finely shaped feet and slender limbs jumped to the cadence of any old song or melody, and her steps fairly beat the tattoo of notes, while the swish of her skirts and the sway of her body vividly expressed the motif of any musical composition.

Lupe really trained herself for the stage. Starting with the Mexican folk dances she absorbed the dance technique. At a grand opera ballet or a musical comedy, her quick eye caught the pattern of steps with unerring accuracy, so, when she finally made her entrance upon the musical comedy stage of Mexico City, she had something to offer and that something was instantly recognized as talent. She promptly became a musical comedy favorite, was shortly thereafter "discovered" by scouts from Hollywood and quickly became a cinematic personage of importance.

In "The Broken Wing," which comes to the Rialto theatre for two days, beginning Wednesday of next week, she features with Leo Carrillo, Melvyn Douglas, and George Barier in an intriguing sweetheart role with a Spanish flavor, similar to "Hell Harbor," "The Wolf Song," and "The Cuban," in which pictures she won the praise of critics and wide public esteem.

GRAND

MURDERS IN THE RUE MORGUE

One of the strangest motion pictures ever shown in Columbus is Edgar Allan Poe's "Murders in the Rue Morgue," the Universal drama which will open an engagement tomorrow at the Grand Theatre.

In the gruesome weirdness of its story, and in the exciting events which follow one another in quick succession, this screen play constitutes a contribution to the screen which is nothing short of remarkable. Is power to work on the emotions of an audience is simply terrific, and it will be many a day before its like is seen again. It literally "out-Draculas Dracula," and this comparison is particularly appropriate since Bela Lugosi, who played the title role of "Dracula," is also seen as the menacing Dr. Mirakle of "Murders in the Rue Morgue."

Lugosi's characterization is full of sinister power, and stamps him as a past master of roles which call for the ultimate in villany. The pricipal feminine role is played by Sidney Fox, a tiny miss whose beauty and ability make her an ideal choice for the part. These two characters are outstanding in the picture, while an important role is also played by Leon Waycoff, who makes his screen debut in "Murders in the Rue Morgue." Other members of the cast who do good work are Brandon Hurst, Bert Roach, Betty Ross Clarke, Noble Johnson, D'Arcy Corrigan and John T. Murray.

The story is sufficiently filled with startling incidents to satisfy the most avid theatregoer. The half-demented Dr. Mirakle is the owner of a gigantic ape, whose blood he is attempting to introduce into the veins of a living girl, in order to prove his theories regarding evolution. After causing the death of several girls by his mad experiments, Mirakle comes in contact with Camille (played by Miss Fox), a girl who unhappily excites the animal affection of the ape. The efforts of her sweetheart are of no avail in preventing a terrible tragedy, and the pictures closes with a wildly exciting series of events on the rooftops of Paris, with the citizens in the streets below literally frozen with horror.

"Murders in the Rue Morgue" is a picture which you will not want to miss. It forms a milestone in the art of the motion picture in that it is perhaps the most astounding story to reach the screen. Director Robert Florey has produced a picture of remarkable qualities, with excitement maintained at a high pitch throughout its length.

Company E is getting hardened up for the target season and the boys are rounding into fine shape. We won the cup for first place in the Regiment last year and it looks as if the gate is open for us again this year the way the boys are putting everything into it.

The following ad appeared on the company bulletin board last week, "Lost one shaving brush, it was a good one, sort of an heirloom—reward" signed "Dalby." Sgt. Dalby said he had had that brush a mighty long time to lose it so easy.

Cpl. Dobson is discharged by the purchase route and says he is going back to old Tennessee.

Corporal Swords is down in the wilds of Louisiana on a reenlistment furlough of 90 days.

Goble Davis was discharged per ETS and is on a big excursion or 90 days tour. "Kid" Underwood, one of the pugs from Goble Davis' stables is expected to slump even more now as his promoter is on this 90 day tour.

Corporal Wood with a couple of the boys (Pvt. Carter and Boyd) went out in the vicinity of Lanett, Alabama recently, seemingly on a tactical problem or something of that nature. They seemed to have enjoyed it very much with the exception that Corp. Wood and Private Boyd met with capture and spent two days in one of Alabama's finest hotels. Pvt. Carter, the "Getaway" man, reutrned to the safety zone unmolested.

Corp. Raines has purchased himself a pencil with the large end the size of a dime. Some asked why such a big pencil and he replied "Regulations require that triangles be coverer with the large end of a pencil" and it don't say what kind of a pencil. He says, "I want all my men to be sure and qualify".

24th Infantry

BAND

Coming events cast their shadows before them. Yea, verily; for whatsoever ye dreameth shall transpire. Pvt. Anderson, smilin' trombonist of the first orchestra journeyed to Columbus, shopped in the city's leading stores, wended his way to the abode of a friend and while there decided o rest his weary bones. Mine host, seeing Anderson sleeping so soundly and with a countenance wreathed in smiles as tho the sleeper was at peace with the world and everything therein, hesitated to awaken him so ole Rip slept on and on, dreaming that the entire band was absent from rehearsal. Result, Pfc. Anderson absent.

Now that the "Shuffle Along" (Wysinger's Ford) is no more dubbed by that titte, thanks to the Columbus Fender and Body Works, and we, the members of the Band had concluded that we were thru with traps, when along rolls one Pfc. Carl Jackson in a real "Scuffle Along."

Privates First Class Decuir and Penrose are from duty to D. S., Atlanta where they will enter the Southern Tennis Matches. Great things are expected of these two gents on the courts.

Pfc. Sam David was a civilian for a few hours on the 2nd instant but being a seady young man he deposes and sayeth, "The army is what I don't like anything else but".

Orchestra No. 2 will play for a dance at Service Club No. 1 tonite.

Tech Sgt. King will move into the quarters recently vacated by Master Sergeant Eldridge, Quartermaster Corps, retired.

COMPANY A

The company awarded prizes to its best shots and coaches on Monday the 1st. Many a soul was made happy and many a soul made glad.

Pvt. Jeff D. Pierce the company's highest shot for this year and the highest shot in the Regiment last year was discharged a few days ago and and left for his home. Pierce was a good soldier in every respect, he also was the company barber, and his work in that line was unsurpassable. He couldn't be beaten when it came to fixing a man's face up. We hope if he ever returns to the army he wont forget Company "A" his first company. Sorry to lose him but we must give him our good wishes in return for his excellent service as a soldier.

Dispensary Dope

This is the one big week in each month for our boys, we can tell that "pay day" has been here. Everybody tries to come on sick report, we give 'em a good shot of "Army Tonic" and send 'em back on detail.

Who was it said that the Pill Rollers couldn't win a ball game? They loked mighty good out there Tuesday with the Tanks. Sorry to know we have to do without Newman for a few days; he is sick in hospital.

Major Pearson is back with the Dental Gang, after a thirty days leave.

Major Patterson who is sick in hospital with malaria, was seen out on the hospital sun garden about four A. M. The nurse asked him why he didn't go on to bed. He said "That crazy O. D. down stairs is trying to make me sleep under a mosquito bar, and I am not going to do it."

Red Davis left the 1st for Sunny Tennessee. As he was telling all of the boys "So long", Red Floyd broke down like a child about ten years old, when his father is scolding him. Davis told Floyd, "That will be okey, Red, I am coming back and if I have a good time, you can go to worm Springs".

Something has come across Sgt. Henery, he is staying in most every night and reading. We would like to find out what type of book he is reading.

Bud Allison: (Sammie's brother) "Well boys, I have had a wonderful time down here, would like to stay longer but them N. C. mountains are calling me back home. I would soon get fat if I stayed down here."

Bog Smith: "Yes, you're looking better since you left all those rocks and have been walking on level ground for two weeks".

We thing that Sgt. Dotson should get himself a new watch. He came in one morning to take sick call thinking he was ten minutes early, then when he looked at the clock he was only fifty minutes late. Henery told him that would be okey, that he had the sick books all made out but one.

Pvt. Noe: "Nurse, I would like to get off today, you contend to all the dressings whie I am gone, can't you?

Nurse: "Yes, I think I can dress, I should know how I am old enough!

Pullen had a letter from one of our Ex-Dispensary boys down in Panama, Alton Bowden. He is trying hard to get back in Benning, said there was no place like home sweet home.

Corp: Graham: "Why do they call N. C. the Land of the Sky?

Bud Allison: It is so high up there."

Smih: "Yes, it is so high, so Saint Peter can keep a good look on all those Tar Heels."

"How to become a peroxide blond. Only two (2) show tickets for a complete course, on how to become a peroxide blond. By Dr. Justin C. Smith, the galloping Dentist." (This boy knows, he tried it himself)

Here's a good one, an M. D. gave O. R. C. two CC of C. C. S. . What is the answer to this? A common ole cigarette cough.

Miss Peter asking one of the patients in the waiting room to come in: "Youall come on in." Then when all the patients start in with her, she tells them she only wanted one. A patient: "Well you said 'You all' come in".

Action-Filled Card Features Smith-Godwin

Thirty-Six Rounds Slated For Fans On Next Tuesday

The Athletic Association has assured the fight public of a card full of action next Tuesday night in Doughboy Stadium in the completion of their card. In signing the boys for this fight, particular care has been taken in selecting the contestants and matching them according to their merits. Thirty-six rounds of fast and furious milling will feature the card from the opening gong to farewell.

Walker "Cyclone" Smith will top the card, facing none other than Bob Godwin, ace of the Southern light-heavies, and incidentally rated as tenth contender for the crown. Smith, realizing that this is his one chance to rise higher in the ring, will no doubt be in the best condition of his varied career. On the other hand, Godwin will take no chances on being stopped by the fighting doughboy, and will give the fans a treat for which they have long waited.

Smith has been a steady plugger for a long time, taking his fights as they came, all the while keeping his fair weather eye cocked at the top-notchers. This is his chance to prove his worth, and his many ardent backers are expecting him to shoot great guns at the Cairo sensation.

Godwin will have in mind that, in the event he is displaced by Smith, his prestige is shot. His chances at rising in the ranks of the light heavies will be hampered by about ten fights at a climb-back up that long ladder, and he will fight like a gunny sack full of inebriated wildcats to keep away from that bundle of dynamite.

Of course, Godwin is favored to win, but the local fight fans know of Smith's ability to do the unexpected. They will be there pulling for the "Bull" as he is fondly referred to by his staunch supporters, to come through and measure this giant of the upper strata. It will be a great fight, and the preliminaries will strengthen it no end.

The semi-final, featuring Rip Tetherton, ace counterpuncher of the local pugs, with Jack Harp, Warm Springs' meal ticket, will be second in action to the final only. Tetherton has long been a favorite with a goodly portion of the Garrison fans, and will be battling besides for his right to fight on the top again. He can hit, but Jack is tough. Jack can hit, but Rip is tough. Where does this all get us? Well, it will get a lot of us out there to witness that program of blood and thunder, and try to tie them away!!!

Frank Mackery and Dynamite Dunn will settle all arguments in the main preliminary of six rounds. Mackery is back in good fighting condition, as exemplified in his knockdown over Gordy in one round of training at the gym. He floored Gordy twice in that one round, and proved then his ability to box and hit. He has been training with Gunner DePratt, and incidentally, picked up quite a bit during the last four weeks. Dunn hails from West Point, Georgia, and has an enviable record. This fight is slated as a natural.

The four round preliminaries will be featured by hard fighting, and plenty of action. Ghost Ghastly and Lester Darby will storm the center of the ring for four rounds, but will probably be topped by the action displayed by Spot Webb, who meets White of Columbus in one of the same length. All these boys will soon be six round material, and some of them will go to the semi-final class.

The curtain will be raised by two colored fighters, showing Lightning Lige against Chero Pete. Lige hails from the 24th Infantry, while Chero Pete comes from the Nehi Company of Columbus. These two always put on a good fight, with the tabs standing about even at this time.

ACTION.....PERSONIFIED

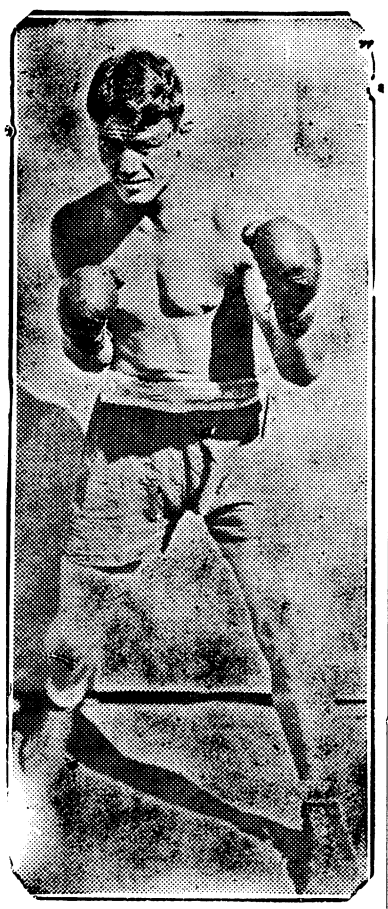
BOB GODWIN

Tenth ranking heavyweight in the world, who will come from Cairo, Ga. to meet Walker (Cyclone) Smith, of Benning, in the main event of a fistic show in Doughboy Stadium on Tuesday evening. There will be thirty-six rounds of boxing on the card.



WALKER (CYCLONE) SMITH

Smith needs no introduction. You see him above, and know what he can do. His aggressiveness should put him out in top form Tuesday night, when he strives to take the top rung of success' ladder from Bob Godwin Godwin will have his hands full, for Bull is all set for the fight of his career out there in Doughboy Stadium.

Race In Final Half Of Season Appears Close

BY A. D.

The final half of the Fort Benning baseball pennant race looms as a close hard fought affair that will only be settled at the wire. The past week has been featured by upsets and stubbornly fought games.

The Irishmen came out with a rush to take the opening August game over the Spare Parts, 4 to 1. Old Man McGaha, veteran of hundreds of diamond duels, shook the kinks out of his ancient wing and bamboozled the Spare Parts batters for seven innings without allowing them the semblance of a run and giving up just two widely scattered bingles. Gardner twirled a splendid game for the losers and was touched for only six bingles.

The Medicos came back strong Tuesday and humbled the Tankers, 6 to 4, in a nip and tuck affair that was anybody's game until the final out in the ninth inning. Gilbert hurled nice baseball but go himself in the hole several times due to his own wildness. He walked three men in a row in the sixth but settled down and pulled out. Again in the ninth the Tankers loaded the sacks but Gilbert whiffed Griffin and caused McLane to fly out to the outfield to end the misery.

The Tankers played a splendid game but Lashkovici weakened in the fourth frame and allowed the Medicos to collect four bingles in a row to score three runs before he was relieved by Lindsey. Red pitched his usual steady game but could not turn the tide.

Wednesday the Detachmenteers jumped on the Galloping Gunners to score an 11 to 1 victory. Grady Tolle was in top form and would have been

Tenth Ranking Heavy Up Against Benning's Pride

By Bill Ellison
(From The Phenix Record)

Bob Godwin, of Cairo, Ga., and Walker (Cyclone) Smith, Benning bruiser, will knock a little next Tuesday evening at Doughboy Stadium in the main event of a glove grude.

Until Godwin started traveling the country ruining the hopes of aspiring tin-earred gentlemen, the modest town of Cairo squatted unheralded and unsung in the Georgia sunshine amid the canebrakes. Now you hear folks who talk out of the corners of their mouths refer to Cairo, Ga., as though it were Cairo, Egypt. That's what Bob has done for his home town.

And until Mr. Smith began bruising boys all over the South you seldom heard the name of Monroeville, La., mentioned except by shiftless Cajuns and slick political henchmen of Senator Huey P. Long, whose latest escapade is lecturing the state of Arkansas for a woman senator-to-be. But you can hear folks talk about that little dot on the map of Louisiana today, yes sir-e-e-e!!!!

Bob Godwin bears a great resemblance to Willie Stribling, erstwhile king of the canebrakes, but aside from that he has no serious handicaps.

Godwin has been rated all the way from fourth to tenth ranking heavyweight of the whole wide world. His buddy, Joe Knight, is reputed to be ninth ranking heavyweight of the whole universe. So when Bob and

Fort Benning Representative:

George Herman Ruth, idol of youngsters, hero of sports sheets, and king of clout, faces dethronement; that is, he is sure to lose his home-run crown. Sitting snugly on the pinnacle of fame, the Babe will be a watchword with the kiddies for a long, long time: sports writers will grind out ems and ems, columns and columns of copy for another hundred thousand or so editions; but Jimmy Foxx will surely and deliberately relieve him of his home-run championship belt for 1932.

This young, versatile aggressive ball knocker of the Philadelphia Athletics well deserves the honor —a worthy successor to the mighty Bambino. Playing heads-up ball all season, whether at first base, on the hot corner, or any other position, Foxx has truly made the boys who patrol the American pastures watch their mittens. Whaling out 41 circuit clouts with the season only two-thirds gone, Jimmy is expected to rap out another score or so to break the Babe's honor year. Nor does praise for young Jimmy Foxx stop here. A look at statistics for the junior loop reads like an almanac given over exclusively to Connie's ace player. He has stolen about every batting honor of the league.

And will it be harder for Ruth to force the Colonel's signature to those fat, juicy $75,000-up annual contracts now that the crown is gone? Yes and no. The Babe had a pretty hard time coming to terms with the Yanks when he signed the last agreement. He's getting older, his general batting and playing, of course has suffered, and each year he is bound to lose just a little of that "gate appeal" so strong with the great swatter. The prestige being taken over by Foxx naturally will hurt, though Ruth will be expected to continue being the biggest drawing card in either circuit for quite some time, IN THE EVENT HE DOESN'T RETIRE.

Through it all, the Yankees go on and on. What does it matter that the Babe is some dozen home runs behind his rival? What matters if his batting average topples from yesteryear's mark? The Yankees go on and on. Just as surely as Jimmy Foxx dethrones Babe Ruth for the home-run crown of 1932, the New York Yanks will lead the pack when the boys wind down the home stretch for the wire next month. The Athletics will die a courageous death, and the Cleveland Indians will chant war songs to the end, but the Yanks cannot be stopped. Not in 1932. Not stopped, unless Gomez undergoes amputation of his left arm and that old cast-off Sewell boy drops dead, and Gehrig and Chapman and Combs are deported.

In the National League is about the same story. The Pittsburgh Pirates seem to have the Cubs at low ebb. And while the "firing" of Manager Hornsby was aimed to give Chicago that needed impetus to dash by the Pirate Crew to pennantville, destinies are so uncertain. Carey's chickens, and lively roosters, at that, are really on the wing. With a five-run lead the boys are, in boxing vernacular, sitting right pretty. Of course one hard series could do a lot to that lead. Especially a series of Cubs and Pirates. And a dove could wreck an airplane.

Nearer home, in the Southern league it isn't so easy on the "wise birds" who generally make monkeys of themselves at picking winners, even when they appear so easy and certain. Memphis, while leading the pace-setting Chattanooga lads, is by no means in a comfortable position. We had rather hoped that "Nooga" would romp home with the flag this season. And they may yet. Cousin Engels, the guy who came down from Washington and the Senators, has given the Southern League its most colorful team in years. A real showman, in baseball things, Engels has played with attendance records, and pleased the paid customers. He deserves a win.

Yancey had won sixteen out of the eighteen holes, and had decisively proved his own superior ability.

The match, as summed up by our statistician, reveals the following effects:

Captain Yancey won sixteen holes at 10c per hole, a total of $1.60. (In normal times this ain't so much, but now it make quite a hole in one's bank-roll and should prove quite a lesson to the two guilty ones.)

Lt. Dunkleberg has announced his intention of laying off of golf for two months and then staging a comeback by beating his erstwhile opponent.

Lt. Gibney has announced that he has a free set of golf club for the first man to come along. (Q. T. note.)

2nd Bn. To Hold Swim Meet On 6th

The Second Battalion, 29th Infantry will have their annual swimming meet tomorrow afternoon at Russ Pool, beginning promptly at 1:30 p. m.

An interesting schedule has been mapped out, and the entrants are anxiously awaiting the starter's gun. There will be many entrants, crowding the roster from top to bottom. The Hundred Yard free style will probably have less starters than any other event, there being more interest in the others.

The meet, according to schedule, will be as follows:

400 yard relay
100 yard back stroke
50 yard free style
400 yard free style
100 yard back stroke
100 yard free style
*Fancy style diving
200 yard free style
300 yard medley relay

*The fancy style diving will consist of seven dives, four compulsory and three optional. The four compulsory dives will be: front swan, back dive, running forward jack knife and a back jack knife.

The medley relay race will be with three men on each team. The first man must swim 100 yards with back stroke; the second with the breast stroke while the last 100 yards will be with the free style.

Trophies will be awarded the winners.

Second Half Race Appears To Be Close

by Grantham and Martin in the seventh frame.

The Gunners were weakened by the loss of Ridley, their first string catcher. Thornhill worked behind the platter but lacked the headwork of the veteran. Three Gunner pitchers were used but none seemed to be able to put the pellet where they wanted it. Holloway and Morris were in the lineup but neither was sent to the hillock.

Tenth Ranking Heavy To Be Matched With Smith

Joe alight from a rattler a-homecoming bent, the merchants of all ten Cairo stores close in recognition of the occasion and the town marshal leads a brass band to do the thing up brown.

Smith has not been seen in action since his bout with Tony Cancella, of Florida. This was a slow fight and, incidentally, far below the expectations of the assembled fans. Neither boy extended himself. Smith appeared to have been drawn. Might be he overtrained.

Preliminaries at the post are always pleasing and Captain Fry, it appears, has been fortunate in securing the services of another lot of boys willing and waiting for the gong.

On The Q. T.

By B. B. S.

FROM WAY DOWN in Texas comes our first fan response to the column. It serves to give us that far-reaching feeling, or something on that order. Fort Bliss is a long way from Benning, yet the Herald has it's friends in all parts of the world.

* * *

JOHN J. McAULIFFE, beloved by many at Benning, accompained by Sherman (Pooch) Derrick and Henry W. (Rat) Walters, departed several months back from Fort Benning, having as their destination the Eighty-Second Field Artillery, stationed at Fort Bliss, Texas. Their hosts of friends at Fort Benning and Columbus tried in vain to deter them from their avowed determination to journey to the border post. They have gone, but their spirit of friendship shall remain forever.

NOW FOR NEWS of them—

McAuliffe writes that he is enjoying the environment ever-so-much, taking everything in as it comes. We learn that they are well satisfied with their new choosing, but would like to come back to Benning to visit friends in the late fall or early winter. It would be good to see those boys back here, even though it were for a short visit. The three of them are playing baseball, and the team to which they belong is ahead in the league. It seems that Pooch is a pitcher now, being of the first water. Rat is catching, while John is chasing them in from third base. (Says he may hold that position as long as no one gets out between third and home.

IN THAT LETTER, Mack makes reference to Gunner DePratt and his comeback. The gist of that part of the letter follows: "It will be gratifying indeed to read in the Benning Herald of the Gunner's successful comeback. You know, he was the boy to put Fort Benning boxing on its financial feet once, and he can do it again. We are all for the Gunner, and no foolin'."

* * *

IT SEEMS AS though Mack was right. The Gunner has, and still can, put Benning fights up to the top. He has a loyal following, and with the support of Walker Smith, Corn Griffin, and the myriad other good fighters at Benning, they can make Fort Benning boxing shows the most popular in the three Southeastern states.

* * *

AS AN AFTERTHOUGHT, let us add that Mack requests that anyone desiring to write him at the border post, may reach him at Headquarters Battery, Eighty-Second Field Artillery. He adds the good will of the three of them to everyone at the largest Infantry School in the World.

* * *

WE NOTE recently that our friend, Mr. Robert Flournoy, (Bob to you), has been transferred from the Soda Fountain to the Main Exchange. We hope he enjoys his sojourn in that branch, yet we miss him from among the tumblers of soft drinks and pecks of ice cream. Where has your pride gone, Bob? Can't you hear the wailings of your cash customers? Why suffer us wonder as to your present where abouts, and why for?

* * *

MR. NEWSOME IS fast gaining your position in the hearts of the straw thieves, nickle squeezers, and what else is there in the squirt faucet.

* * *

THE QUESTION now arises . . . Who will draw better in the ring with Griffin, Battling Bozo or Frankie Edgren? The column is open to all discussions, and urges the fans to send in their ideas, or other peoples' ideas. Help up take a vote on this important question, as it is causing entirely too much argument, and we want to do something about it.

* * *

WE ARE STILL waiting for copy for the column, so if you want to the coals, just send in the dirt on see your worst friend raked over him . . . Finis.

BENNING HERALD

VOLUME II — FORT BENNING, GA., FRIDAY, AUGUST 12, 1932 — NUMBER 16

Benning Briefs

Practically all of you know Gunbotham, and those of you who don't, should. His infectious humor, his digs at his classmates and his "omnipotent G-2 bird" have made him a name in the Herald. So, after he had escaped for a while (He went on leave without letting us know!) he has promised to resurrect the School Daze column and again regale the population of the post with his observations on life in general and his classmates and instructors in particular. (By the way, he's also known among the hostesses of Benning as the "Blonde's Delight," or maybe his fellow picnic-sufferers have just been stringing us!).

* * *

Another candidate has presented himself for the fisherman's column. This column, dedicated to those lovers of the Izaak Walton sport, will attempt to list the names of fishermen of Benning whose bad luck (or it might be bad fishing) has sent them home grieving because they were so unfortunate as to catch not a single fish.

* * *

Sgt. J. H. McNulty, guardian angel of the R. O. T. C.'s and O. R. C.'s of recent residence on the post, is the latest candidate. He made a trip down to the Land of Flowers, nationally known as the place where the fish leap into the boat, but failed to entice a single denizen of the deeps to honor his larder. The Sergeant doesn't give any reason for his failure to persuade the finny tribe to take his bait, and anyway, that isn't necessary, for the mere fact that he was unsuccessful is enough testimonial to guarantee his candidacy for the honor of joining the club.

* * *

For the benefit of those who are curious, we are herewith giving the names of those who have so far made the grade without being blackballed and are now full fledged members of the "Non-fisherman's Club of Fort Benning":

Lt. Harold S. (Ham) Kelly
Sgt. J. H. McNulty
The Conductor of this column.

* * *

Friend Newsome has asked us just why the Herald always manages to sling a little mud his way instead of boosting, his particular complaint being that he is in the need of a little shove upward, now that he is buried in the midst of all the responsibilities of running the Soda Fountain. Well, Newsome, (somehow, we've neglected learning the Chief Soda Jerker's first name) here you are. Newsome's OK, everybody!

* * *

We were privileged to chat a little with Dr. George Raffalovich, who will speak on Mussolini tonight at Columbus. Dr. Raffalovitch is a very pleasant, well informed talker, and we have a very decided idea as to his ability as a speaker, if his manner on the speaker's stand is as likable as that in an informal mood. And, by the way, Mr. Blinov is singing our favorite song at the program tonight, the "Song of India" (Rimsky-Korsakow). Both of them recently gave a program at Benning and will probably give another some time in the Fall.

Officers For New Classes of School Already Arriving

Officers for the 1932-33 classes of the Infantry School and the Tank School are already arriving at Benning and Columbus to prepare for the opening of the school. A total number of 257 officers will comprise the three classes of the schools, a gain over last year of approximately twenty-seven students. The moving of the Tank school to Benning is largely responsible for the gain in the number of students.

The work of the classes will probably begin on the 19th of September, with opening exercises as is customary.

Officers who are arriving are being assisted in several ways to adjust themselves to the new surroundings and to settle themselves in new quarters. Last year about seventy of the students were forced to rent houses or apartments in Columbus, due to the fact that the quarters on the Post then under construction were unfinished. This year, in spite of the fact that the quarters being built then have been finished, approximately the same number of officers will have to live in town, on account of the increase in attendance at the classes.

The Advanced Class this year will have 103 members, the Company Officers Class will have 116 and the Tank School will have thirty-eight students. This year will be the first year that the Tank School has carried out any work in its new station, and preparations have been going on for the past two months in order to be ready for the students when the classes open.

Biographer Of Mussolini To Appear At Columbus With Russian Singer

A program of rare interest will be given at the Chase Conservatory of Music in Columbus Friday night at eight o'clock when Dr. George Raffalovich, biographer of Mussolini, will lecture, and Benjamin Dmitri Blinov, young Russian tenor will give a group of Russian and other songs, repeating their program of August 2nd, at Fort Benning.

These two visitors are touring some of the southern states singing and lecturing. Dr. Raffalovich is the author of several books and hundreds of articles on international politics. Few lecturers and writers have had a more varied career. He has been a writer for French magazines in England, contributor of encyclopedias on Russian affairs before the war, Italian correspondent for Indian daily newspapers, editor of an American newspaper in Rome, Italy. The last war found him in the mountains of Hungary and left him in the American army. He is a fascinating talker, and can address his audience in English, French or Italian. A Frenchman by birth, he has been an American citizen since 1918 when he was in the U. S. Army. He has very high connections in his native country, being a nephew of Count Chaptal de Canteloup, of the Bishop of Paris and of the International President of the World's Associations of Nurses. Since the publication of his biography of Mussolini, in 1922, he has followed the career of the Italian leader with much attention. Dr. Raffalovich has often predicted that 1933 will be the crucial year for Europe. He is convinced that Mussolini is the most

Family to Attempt Ocean Hop

The Hutchinsons, America's best known "flying family," pose in front of their new twin-motored Sikorsky amphibian in which they will attempt to fly the Atlantic soon. Col. George Hutchinson with his wife and two daughters, Kathryn, eight, and Janet, six, will take off from Washington with London as their destination. They plan stops at Labrador and Greenland.

A radio operator and co-pilot will accompany the "flying family."

Soldier Rides 795 Miles On Bicycle To Re-enlist Here

Pvt. John Lytle, formerly of the Radio Section, I. S. D. has recently added another record to the garlands already acquired by members of the Garrison. Several days ago he astonished the members of his section, from which he was discharged some time ago, by turning up at Benning after all track of him had been lost for about a week. The startling apparition which finally emerged as John Lytle was riding a bicycle, his pants were worn out and both he and the bicycle were in a rather dilapidated condition.

The circumstances which led up to these events were no less startling. Lytle, having been discharged from the Army, took a fling at civilian life for a while, but decided that the Army was a much better and safer place for him. So, being in Cleveland and not having sufficient train-fare home, he invested all his money in a second-hand bicycle and two new tires and set forth for Benning.

His account of the journey shows that it was mostly plain sailing. He was not hampered by bad weather for a single day on the 795 mile journey, and, though he was forced to sleep out under the stars every night, he survived remarkably well.

His clothing and bicycle, however, were unable to stand the journey as well as the rider, and he had to secure a new pair of pants one time on the trip, since the first pair wore out completely. His second pair was worn out also, when he reached the post. Lytle also wore out the seat of his bicycle, and used the first pair of pants as substitute seat until he could reach here.

Lytle's record-breaking ride of 795 miles for a reenlistment has undoubtedly set a new precedent in reenlistment journeys, though his example has not, as yet, shown any sign of influencing others. Still, it speaks well of the post and the Infantry School, when a former member of the personnel will willingly face the prospect of such a journey to reach here.

Major Rader Goes To New Post At Headquarters 4th Corps Area

Major Ira A. Rader, for some years a prominent figure in the military circles of Benning in his capacity as First Section instructor in aviation, has been assigned recently to the Corp Area Headquarters at Fort McPherson, where he will be in charge of aviation activities of the Area. Major Rader is one of the nine surviving members of the first Army Aviation Service and piloted his first plane in 1914.

Major Rader was the near victim of an airplane accident at Benning a short time ago, the first of his career as an Army pilot. He was making a flight over the reservation with

29th Infantry Is First Post Team To Open Season

By Bernard B. Swayze

Sure and swiftly, mid the clattering of thousands of pounding hooves, the polo season is approaching its opening date at French Field. Only cool wheather will serve to hasten its full bloom again for the local horse minded fans of the modern sport of kings. And what a sport!!

Already, the 29th Infantry team has played one game. They journeyed to Atlanta last week to play the strong Fort McPherson team, but due to inclement weather, had to postpone the game until Wednesday.

Before a good gathering of Atlanta enthusiasts, the four horsemen of the Demonstration Regiment pounded hard to stave off defeat at the hands of the Fort McPherson aggregation, but to no avail. The bullet-like driving and hard playing Fort Mack team was well out in the lead at the end of the game, and the blue jacketed horsemen were forced to retire from the field of battle on the little end of a 14 to 4 score.

The only spill of the game came among the ranks of the Fort Benning poloist. Lt. Sweeney, at number one for the 29th Infantry team, collided with the goal post in a hard-fought play, and slightly wrenched his back. This was the first time the team as a whole has played together, and they will probably develop into a formidable foe for the other Garrison poloists during the approaching season.

The team was comprised of: Lieut. Sweeney at number one, Lt. O'Connor at number two, Lt. Westlund as captain of the team was at number three, and Major Frazier at four. Captain Cushman was with the team, but was used as a substitute only, for about half the game.

Only cold facts about the game are available, and, for that reason, we are unable to give a detailed outline.

Sergeant McCarthy has French Field in excellent condition for the approaching season, having ploughed and rolled it thoroughly, re-sodding it where it was needed. A perfect carpet of grass now adorns a five field, and the season should give better polo than the excellent work of last year.

Herald's Expansion Policy Receives First Impetus In Last Issue

The "expansion policy" which was the subject of recent comment in the Herald finds its first expression in this and last week's issues of the paper.

The use of King Features Syndicate news and fashion mats in these issues is the principal important step taken by the Herald in expanding the scope of the paper in order to make it more interesting to the average reader on the Post. A larger and more comprehensive sports page, combined with the advantages given by the use of the mats, is expected by the publishers to make a paper of real interest to all of the readers. The use of such a mat service and the making of the sport page occupy such a prominent position in the paper has never before been attempted in a Benning paper, and these innovations are therefore totally unprecedented in a publication of this type.

Today's Fashion

By VERA WINSTON

The Popular Lace Ensemble

Other materials may wax and wane in popular favor, but lace keeps in the spotlight of the mode. At any evening affair one sees several lace frocks, all graceful and lovely. Lace packs so well that it is in great demand by the woman who plans lots of week-end trips. A lace frock will emerge from the suit case without a wrinkle. It needs only shaking and hanging up to be fit to grace any assembly, no matter how distinguished or smartly dressed. Black lace is ever popular, but lately many colored lace frocks are seen, ranging from pastels to deep shades of red or brown. Very new and attractive is the lace ensemble in the sketch. Its dark green lace of a Chantilly pattern covers its deep back decolletage with a short cape that ties in a bow in front. The frock is fitted to the knee, then flares to the hem, and has a velvet girdle with jeweled buckle.

If you have not already done so, come in and meet Sam Neel. He is a nice, congenial sort of fellow after all—a home-town man. Previously Sam was with the Westbrook store for sixteen years selling Star Brand Shoes. Westbrook went out of business, then Sam Neel had the opportunity to take over the Star Brand Shoe acct., because he knew they were the best money could buy. Now Sam Neel owns the shoe department in the Westbrook Building.

Since Mr. Neel took over the shoe department, the business has been steadily increasing. Mr. Neel lays it all to the fact that he is selling Star Brand Shoes, because Star Brand Shoes are Better.

On The Q. T.

By B. B. S.

NOTHING IS MORE touching, than to see a fighter, physically unfit for the occasion, come into the ring and give the fans a show for their money, rather than disappoint them. Fans must always appreciate this in a fighter, as it is long talked about. Things like this often border on beauty, if beauty ever entered the fight ring.

* * *

THERE WAS A fighter out Arkansas way who was of the type fighter just referred to. He always tried to give the fans just a little more than they bargained for. His public was there to see him fight, and no matter what the trouble, Rube would fight.

* * *

WE ARE SPEAKING of none other than Ruby (Roughhouse Rube) Johnfight public. Rube was the lightweight son, who has paid his all to the grim reaper for his sense of loyalty to the champion of Arkansas, and a popular one at that, and Rube couldn't see any sense in his not showing before a house in Tulsa, Oklahoma two weeks ago. He didn't stop to think about that carbuncle that had developed under his arm on the eve of that fight. He just went in there and fought like a tiger for ten rounds, dropping the decision to Cullen Williams.

* * *

DURING THE PROGRESS of the fight, Rube was struck on that carbuncle, and blood poisoning set in. Despite the frantic efforts of the doctors at Fort Smith, the gamest, scrappinest little fighter of the Ozarks succumbed to the creeping death caused by that blow on an infected spot. The rings of that section will long mourn the passing of such a game fellow and true sportsman.

* * *

AND HERE'S OUR former First Sergeant, out in the column for a little airing. First Sergeant Norbert L. Craine is still the top kick down in Company "H", 29th Infantry, and a good one at that. Ask the boys. He is one of the boys, taking part in the organization activities, and making himself more popular as the days go by.

Now he has broken out with a new fad. He is congratulated in this issue for being the first person at Fort Benning to own a 1932 model Austin. He claims a lot of things for this midget automobile, but they are verified. He has made two trips to Atlanta, and states that the time on both trips was satisfactory. Economy, too, came in for its share of praise.

* * *

PEOPLE WHO maliciously misrepresent the facts in the case are asked NOT to submit to this column anything for publication. Stretch the truth as far as you might, but please think of the feelings of the other fellow a little. If you go off and fight some place, just come in and ask us not to publish the results if you feel you have been shamed in defeat. Yet, on the other hand, please don't report you have won when you haven't. We always try to check up, and then we might think you had been reversing the truth on us. Grumpy—Please note.

INTO OUR LIVES and associations, from time to time creep new and interesting personages, to make life worth more for having lived it. These people serve to keep us fit for the things that might come our way, that in some way make us think our lot is hard. They give us the heart to battle those things, and make us more determined that we have had a selfish viewpoint on life.

* * *

BERGER LINDH is the type of man who makes us think what a thankful lot is ours, with our members completely efficient. Mr. Lindh comes to us from the north, bringing his radiating personality along with him. And incidentally, Mr. Lindh brings some new fangles in the way of chow.

* * *

THE OLD SETZLER restaurant on Benning Road, near the banks of Bull Creek, has fallen into the hands of Mr. Lindh, after quite a bit of planning on his part for that transaction. His menus are the type that make you wish you had room for more, and they usually come back.

* * *

NOW MR. LINDH is a former soldier, hence the long talk about him. He is a member of the American Legion and of The Disabled American Veterans of the World War. He was a former member of the Ordnance Department, and was also a Chemist and Physicist with the Chemical Warfare. His experiences during the World War were all technical, keeping him on this side.

* * *

ONE AND A HALF years ago Mr. Lindh suffered a stroke of paralysis, and since then has been partially disabled. Prior to this time, Mr. Lindh was a social worker for ten years. Now Mr. Lindh is now following an old hobby of his, cooking, and the way that baby can dish up the chow is no mean accomplishment.

MATA HARI

CHAPTER VII

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Mata Hari, famous dancer and enemy spy, undertakes to get some secret papers from her lover, Shubin, Attache of the Russian Embassy in Paris. But Shubin has been unnerved by a visit from Dubois, head of the French Secret Service, and refuses to discuss them. When she learns that the papers are in the possession of a young aviator, Alexander Rosanoff, who is infatuated with her, she goes to his rooms, informing her confederates on the way.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Always their silly honor! "I come last?" she inquired offended.

"No—no! You come first . . . before anything."

"Before God?"

After a pathetic struggle, he brought out the word, "Yes."

Mata Hari regarded him with something that may have been pity. He did seem so in earnest. To admit that she came before God was, she could see, sacrilege to him. And yet the word, "yes," had been wrung out of him. He was badly burnt!

With a smile that promised to reward him, she bade him in a soft voice to put out the lights. The blood rushed to his head. He obeyed till the room was in darkness save for the glitter of the lamp before the ikon.

It may have been the glow on the gentle head of the image that annoyed her. It may have been that

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

The Meat Grinder: What a useful implement this is, "the meat grinder." By its use we are able to cut the cost of living, for with the aid of the grinder the cheaper cuts of meat are made nutriitous and digestible. Just now it will help to solve the problem of lowering the cost of living that confronts most of us. We all like meat and especially beef. Beef steak is usually our ideal of the proper meat when we can afford it. But these days seldom is that ideal possible.

A well chosen piece of beef chopped in the grinder makes an excellent substitute provided the meat is fresh and the grinder is clean. Do you ever look at the meat grinder used by your meat market? At any up to the minute market you will probably find that the grinder is well taken care of, clean and in perfect condition. In the careless market you will find that the remains of the last grindings are left in the machine unprotected from flies and heat. During the hot weather it takes only a short time for meat to turn bad. The spoiled meat left in the machine goes to the next customer, whose meal is therefore disappointing, to say the least. The extreme of the picture is, of course, food poisoning.

We advocate the use of hamburger, but the customer is entitled to fresh, clean meat cut in a machine that is always clean and wholesome.

Customers should watch that meat grinder.

MATA HARI

she thought even this faint light would be dangerous to her confederates or might be reflected on the window pane and confuse them as they waited below. Or it may have been a last caprice to test her power.

But as Rosanoff took her in his arms, she detached herself and pointed to the lamp.

In the gleam of the lamplight, her face, looking up at him, the slender column of her throat, one shoulder from which the velvet had slipped, were as if modeled after a Greek statuette, but warmly so, like a marble with the glow of life breathed into it.

All this Rosanoff worshipped with his eyes for the lovely work of art it was at the same time that he went blank with astonishment at her request.

"The Madonna's Lamp?"

"Yes. Put it out," urged the dancer.

The light showed pale on his face as he shook his head.

"Don't you understand it's a holy lamp? I swore to keep it burning!"

The understanding that the act would be really dreadful to him, that he would expect certain punishment to follow, made her, if anything, firmer. With an amazement that matched his own, she inquired, "You won't do that for me?"

"But why?" cried Rosanoff. "What can the lamp matter? Why do you ask me to?"

To this she replied inflexibly. "To see if you love me as you say . . . before honor . . . before God . . . "

"I do, Mata—I do!"

"Then put it out," she said in a softer tone.

He gave an anguished groan. Mata Hari almost regretted having started the stupid duel. Particularly as time was so short, the men must be waiting impatiently in the cold, or even worse, they might be on their way up. She did hope that they would have sense enough to listen for voices before they made an attempt on the door.

"But why—why?" he besought her again.

Torn between her anxiety to get the undertaking under way and her need to add another victory to her score, her voice came forth as a long-drawn sigh. It sounded to Rosanoff like a sigh of passion wrung from her.

"I want to be sure."

"But I'll do anything—anything!"

"I'm going," said the dancer with a quite unaffected finality, for she did not dream that he would relinquish her.

And, indeed, after an instant, in a sort of terror he murmured a prayer and blew out the flame. She let him carry her into the bedrom.

Her one thought was how to find a way to advise her confederate of the location of the portfolio. Not but what they could not find it for themselves if they looked around, but when they had so little time and were obliged to work with such stealth, every bit of aid she could give them was precious. After her eyes had become accustomed to the darkness, she glued them to the not-quite-shut bedroom door, trusting that some signal would be given that she might heed, or that her keen ears might catch some slight noise, the click of a latch perhaps. But—nothing—except the whisper of Rosanoff's voice, murmuring endearments in the darkness. How she would have liked to ask him to be quiet!

At length, she had to take the chance of taking it for granted that the men had arrived and making them understand.

In a clear voice, as loud as she dared, she called out, "I left my cigarette case on—the little stand—in the other room. No . . . never mind . . . one of yours will do."

Her reward took the form of a faint ring of light within the crack of the door. A flashlight, she guessed. It lingered for a couple of seconds. And in that brief interim Mata Hari truly realized how swiftly yet with what intense slowness time could pass. It was not that the dancer was in the least afraid. On the contrary, she had never been aroused to such a pitch of exquisite, tingling aliveness in which every nerve in her body seemed to emit a spark of energy. But all sorts of ideas had the time to wing through her mind quite slowly and forcefully, without hurrying in the least. Suppose Rosanoff should be attracted by the suggestion of light, too, in spite of her care? Suppose she was unable to prevent him from investigating. Would he kill her, defend her or betray her? Not betray her, of that she felt certain.

likely leader to establsh peace and organization in that old, war-shocked continent. That re-organization Dr. Raffalovich assures his audience, is highly desirable. the only alternative being war and chaos.

While touring with Ben Blinov, Dr. Raffalovich is also preparing a series of articles on: "A Frenchman looks at the South."

Benjamin Dimitri Blinov, born of Russian Orthodox parents in Razan, Russia, led a peaceful life until the Revolution. His father was a priest in the Orthodox church and "Benny," as he is known to his American friends, sang in the choir. His father was killed in the Revolution and he and his mother fled with other refugees. His mother died on the overland trip, leaving the twelve year old boy.

Six years later he found himself finishing High School in Harbin, Manchuria, earning his own living by odd jobs, and singing in cabarets and choirs. He met missionaries who told him of Emory University in Atlanta, Georgia, was issued a "student's visa" and then sang his way as he went to Fusan, Korea, and Yokahama, Tokio, Honolulu, across the Pacific, and the continent. He reached Atlanta and matriculated in 1928 at Emory. He is now singing his way through college.

His sympathetic interpretation of the wild gypsy love songs, the blustering marching songs of the Cossacks and the melodious appearance, affords a delightful experience, heightened by his appearance in native Russian costume.

The public is cordially invited to attend the concert and lecture Friday evening at eight o'clock at the Chase Conservatory of Music.

Tickets are on sale in the office of the Protestant Chapel in care of Corporal W. H. Brewer, asssitant to Chaplain Howard; at several stores in Columbus and at the door of the Chase Conservatory before 8 p. m.

REFLECTIONS ON THE PAY CUT

We have received the first of our twelve (we hope that it will be no more) compulsory furlough plan pay checks. We had to notify our good friend, Captain Perry in writing that we were alive on July 31st to get it but we got it. The main question now is to decide to which of our creditors to pass on the reduction.

We get little sympathy from our civilian friends, all of whom have either taken salary cuts of considerably greater proportions or losses in business which make our eight and one-third per cent cut seem trivial. Occasionally we encounter some distraught and disgruntled business or professional man who implies that there is a social injustice in the fact that the Army loses only one month's pay while he hasn't made a cent in six months. That is our cue to open up and remind him that he and his ilk drew down more jack in the 1927-29 boom than a major of infantry makes in ten years. We invite his attention to the fact that in the years of prosperity from 1922 to 1929 that he was sitting on top of the world while lieutenants, captains and even magnificently compensated majors and colonels were contending against increased living costs on a pay schedule based on the commodity index of 1908. We tell him that the only time that the average army officer has a chance to take up the notes he signs to pay for extraordinary and emergency expenditures made during good times is during a period of depression when it doesn't take every cent he gets to live in a manner befitting his station. We further tell him that we are accepting our cut with reasonably good grace, but that we object to having some one whose chief complaint is that he has do drive the same old sixteen cylinder Cadillac for two years, simply that our reduced pay check is a fine example of governmental extravagance. Then, if he happens to be a pretty good friend of ours, we tell him to take his grouch and go to hell. Not infrequently our mild display of temper causes him to miss a two foot putt, thus offsetting to some degree our inferior brand of golf.

WE TOLD YOU SO!!

"Of all sad words of tongue or pen,"
(Aw, finish it yourself)

On several occasions during June and early July of this year we had the temerity to comment on the existing stock market possibilities to a few intimate friends of known gambling propensities whom we suspected of having a few hundred dollars stowed away in the old sock.

Our theme song was to the effect that the current situations offered the best gambling proposition ever presented to the great American come-on public. The list was full of opportunities to buy issues which, in the boom days of 1929 had sold between fifty and a hundred and fifty, at less than five dollars a share. Our contention was that the chances that any of the listed issues selling below par would pass out of the picture entirely were not over one to ten, whereas the long, full possibilities offered odds of ten, twenty, or even fifty to one. As regards the market's quick turn potentialities, we argued most eloquently that the rebound from the extreme depression lows would carry many low priced issues to double their current selling prices almost overnight. In other words, we pointed out a gambling opportunity that carried only a remote chance of losing the original stake, an excellent chance of doubling it within the short space of a couple of months, and a fair prospect of a real killing if one chose to play for the long pull.

Having thus enlightened our politely bored listeners, we informed them that we had followed the market for twenty-two years, that we had lost a good deal more than we had made, and that we were generally wrong on predicted performances. We reiterated, however, that the current quotations offered the best opportunity we had ever known for a man with a little cash and a little courage to make a killing.

We are quite certian that no one followed our suggestions. As a matter of fact, we were not anxious that anyone should. We have given buying advice before (we charge nothing for the service) only to see the issues recommended for purchase go down and down, sometimes with a trusting friend riding them. We didn't even act in accordance with our fixed opinion, except in a very small way. In extenuation of our failures to do so, however, we feel compelled to state that it was lack of cash rather than lack of confidence that caused our "native resolution" to "lose the name of action."

Now, let us consider what has happened. Within one short month, any number of low priced issues have doubled and not a few that we yearned to purchase have trebled. International Telephone and Telegraph, which sold at 2 5-8 in June, touched 8 3-8 last Saturday; American Rolling Mill was 3 and went to 10. Montgomery Ward, which hit low of 3 1-2, closed at 12 1-8 on Aug. 6. Warner Pictures, which looked like a vanishing American at fifty cents a share, has gone to 2 5-8. A fifty dollar bet on that dubious cripple could be cashed this morning for $250—not bad, not bad!

In the devastated railroad field a small and timely commitment might have netted even more. Western Pacific common went from 1-2 to 3 1-8; Pere Marquette from 1 3-4 to 7 1-2; Baltimore and Ohio from 3 3-4 to 9 5-8. Rock Island 6 per cent preferred from 2 to 9.

Or consider the Standard Oil issues (who ever heard of a Standard Oil Company going under?) which have increased in price from seventy-five to one hundred per cent. But what's the use? Our intelligent readers and their occasionally intelligent columnist never get in at the bottom. Even Chief Eagle-Eye Bradley, who possessed an uncanny genius for hitting the approved solutions of Leavenworth problems right on the nose, has been wrong on the stock market almost as often as we have. Military genius and financial intuition seldom, if ever, keep steady company. The officers whom the pay cut affected least are those who put their loose change in savings banks or government banks.

THE FLARE

HOT WEATHER NOTICE

But for the weekly arrival of the home town paper, which appears to be holding up extremely well during the dull summer months, when nothing much happens and nobody cares, anyway, we have had almost no contact with Benning and its inhabitants, What little we do hear from our special field agents leads us to the startling conclusion that the well known hinges of hell are comparatively cool. One of our few correspondents describes life along the Upatoi as follows:

"Benning still swelters under an unremitting sun. With practically all the 'talent' gadding about in search of cooler climes, the place appears moribund. The golf course and the pool are still populous. Red Cummings and I inhabit the former, rain or shine. The girls, particularly those addicted to one piece, sun-back, sun-front, brassiere-type swimming ensembles pay court to the latter. The summer bachelors sit in glum apathy thru the stirring westerns and "selected short subjects" of the local talkie palace. Bitter battles are lost and won on the relative torridity of quarters. Thru some strange perversity of the human soul, those who find that their vaunted temperatures is several degrees below that claimed by their neighbor, go away sullen and disgruntled. They take it as a personal defeat."

The above will hardly qualify as news among the suffering galley slaves whom freak legislation has kept chained to the oar, but it is rather well put. Moreover, it will bring joy to the faithful subscribers of the Herald who happen to be enjoying cool mountain and ocean breezes. Students of obsolete theologies will recall that such cheering boosters of the righteous and Godly life as Cotton Mather and Jonathan Edwards, held firmly to the theory that the delights of the saints resting on Abraham's bosom were enhanced by the spectacle of the tortured souls of the damned. Something of this perverted psychology still clings to the race. We aren't entirely free from it ourself.

SHRAPNEL BURSTS

The Battalion Athletic Officer received the red bathing suits in time to start swimming instruction last Monday. Lt. Sherburne is getting along nicely with this swimming course and finds that many more men can swim than he thought could do so. There are only about 8 per cent who cannot qualify by swimming fifty yards. These men will first be taught to swim and then all of them will be given some instruction in diving, Red-Cross life saving and also some help in perfecting certain strokes.

The Personnel Adjutant left his morning for his home in Kentucky. He will be gone for twenty days, spending a few days with his brother and friends in different parts of Pennsylvania. While he is gone this column will be written not as he wrote it but as it should be written, we hope.

The substitute officer in charge of the battalion garden was relieved Monday by the regular garden officer who recently returned from leave. Now that our regular farmer is back everything should run smoothly and the vegetables will probably grow and ripen over night. Too bad this officer had to be away and leave a substitute, who seemed to know nothing about a garden, grew more weeds than anything else and was unable to please every one. Still marriage and honeymoon are great events in most everyone's life and one cannot be doing duty at such a time.

BATTERY "C"

The higher element of NCO's has completed the gunners exams. The scores made were all above 98 per cent which is very high considering the difficulties of the exams. This may look discouraging to the remainder of the battery, however it is still everybody's game to come in on the $5.00 per month expert pay. Anyhow practically everyone taking the exams ought to pass the 85 per cent mark which makes him an expert, if it is in name only. For those men who did not go with us to Albany on various hikes, it might be pleasing for them to hear that the expert badge is worth fully $4.00 in Albany. Our four Riverdrive musketeers got their payday dates mixed up, and started to celebrate payday one day ahead of time. Rules and regulations in Columbus are different on paydays and the boys could not be here when the pay formation held in the battery. Anyhow they will receive two pays the end of this month.

The short-discharge epidemic has now reached our battery too. So far no one has succumbed, but when even McKenzie has been affected by the tropical sunstroke oratory it seems necessary to send out some missionaries who can give the true facts about those so-called southern paradises.

Dispensary Dope

All of the Medical boys are walking around on air, since Gilbert put the 1st Bats on ice with a no hit no run game last week. That was a game to put down in history, in fact, it is already down, we are glad the Pill Rollers can get credit for the first "No hit, no run game" played in Benning. All we need is a little team work and the 2nd half will be ours. Come on boys, step on the gas.

Sgt. Henery: "What is wrong with your arm soldier; how did you cut it?"

Corp. Heith: "A butcher knife slipped up there and cut me."

Sgt. Henery: "I think you'd better get a chain and fasten that knife up, at nights."

Doctors say it is healthy for a person to drink eight glasses of water each day. I think all of the Dispensary boys should be healthy, all we get to drink over with "D" Co. is water. It never runs out.

Maybe this should come under the "Lost and Found." Any way we are trying to find out what happened to

THEATRICAL ATTRACTIONS

Coming To Rialto This Week

Ronald Colman in Samuel Goldwyn's "Arrowsmith"

AT THE GRAND

SATURDAY, SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Presenting, "A PASSPORT TO HELL", with Warner Oland and Elissa Landi. This is the story of a beautiful woman who marries a young army officer to avoid imprisonment in a detection camp, and later discovers that she is in love with his best friend. Flrting to ease the motony and boredome she faces in an African jungle village, the wife of this officer finds herself in a tight, to say nothing of dangerous predicament.

* * *

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Presenting, "TAXI", with James Cagney in a role that fits him like a boxing glove. He is supported by Loretta Young, George S. Stone and Guy Kibbee. He's tough, but how you'll love him. You've got to be handy with your mitts in the taxi game. Here you see the red-headed wonder in a bigger hit than "BLONDE CRAZY". He'll take you on hte most breathless ride you've ever experienced.

AT THE RIALTO

NOW PLAYING: Presenting, "TWO-FISTED LAW", with Tim McCoy. There's the devil to pay when dynamic Tim rides for justice. They steal his ranch and frame him for robbery and murders—but he outsmarts, outfights and outrides them. He had his own law for outwitting his enemies. A real thriller you'll enjoy from beginning to end. Not a dull moment.

* * *

SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Presenting, "ARROWSMITH", with Ronald Colman and Helen Hayes. This picture is based on Sinclair Lewis' novel of the same title and carries a moral to it that is sure to hold the interest of the movie-goers locally. Since Mr. Lewis is one of the most eminent living American novelists, with famous works like "Main Street", "Babbitt" and "Dodsworth" to his credit, most of his books have been filmed at one time or another. But "ARROWSMITH" is the first picture made from a Lewis novel which the author has publicly approved.

TUESDAY ONLY: Presenting, "THE GREEKS HAD A WORD FOR THEM", headlining Ina Claire and supported by David Manners, Madge Evans, Joan Blondell and Lowell Sherman. From the beginning—even from the beginning of the stage run—questions have arisen as to what it was the Greeks had a word for. Fans will learn now that the word is 'hetaera", meaning blondes on the loose. In fact, the Greek "hetaera" and the modern so-called "gold-digger" appear to be sisters under the skin.

* * *

WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY: Presenting, "WHILE PARIS SLEEPS", with Victor McLaglen, Helen Mack, William Bakewell nad Rita Roy. A picture in which Paris tells its secrets. Paris after the last sightseer goes home. There are exact replicas of actual hangouts and hideaways of the famous Apaches—a Paris that has never before been screened.

Royal Theater To Reopen After 1st Of Next Month

The Royal theater was closed Tuesday night and will not be reopened until Saturday, September 3, with a midnight show beginning at 11:15 p. m, according to City Manager Shields of the Lucas and Jenkins chain in Columbus.

While the local popular playhouse is closed for the ensuing thirty days, arrangements will be made for giving the Columbus movie patrons one of the best fall and winter picture programs that have been enjoyed here in years.

Among the feature productions to be shown in Columbus in the near future are Marlene Deitrich in "Blond Venus," the four Marx Brothers in "Horse Feathers," Maurice Chevalier and Jeanette MacDonald in "Love Me Tonight," Harold Lloyd in "Movie Crazy," Clark Gable and Miriam Hopkins in "No Bed of Her Own," "The Big Broadcast" featuring many of the leading radio personalities, Marian Davies and Robert Montgomery in "Blondie of the Follies," George Raft and Nancy Carroll in "Night After Night," Marie Dressler and Polly Moran in "Prosperity," Buster Keaton in "Speak Easily," Laurel and Hardy in "Pack Up Your Troubles," Clark Gable in "China Seas," a picture featuring John, Lionel and Ethel Barrymore, Norma Shearer and Clark Gable in "Strange Interlude" which will be road showed, Norma Shearer and Fredric March in "Smiling Thru," Will Rogers in "Down to Earth," Charles Farrell and Janet Gaynor in "The First Year," Peggy Shannon and Spencer Tracy in "The Painted Woman," Tallulah Bankhead and Gary Cooper in "Devil and the Deep," Gary Cooper and Helen Hayes in "A Farewell To Arms," Ralph Bellamy and Marian Nixon in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," George Bancroft and Wynne Gibson in "Lady and Gent," Jack Oakie and a host of well known comedians in "Million Dollar Legs," and many others to be announced later. The above are only a few of the pictures to be released by Paramount, Metro Goldwyn Mayer, and Fox. The features to be released at an early date by Warner Brothers, United Artists, First National, R. K. O. Radio, R. K. O. Pathe, Universal, Columbia, World Wide, the majority of which will be shown in Columbus, will be announced later.

GRAND

"A PASSPORT TO HELL"

The plot of "A Passport to Hell," the Fox picture which began an engagement of 3 days at the Grand Theater tomorrow, unfolds an unusual and thrilling romance set in the wilds of Africa.

It tells the story of a woman embittered by hate, who marries a youthful army officer to save herself from imprisonment in a detention camp. It tells how, after he has left her in the solitude of a shack-like, insect-infested home on the edge of the jungle, she finds real love for the first time in her life with a fellow-officer of her husband.

Elissa Landi portrays the leading role and gives the best performance of her screen career. She has a part that is perfectly fitted to her splendid emotional abilities. She is particularly effective in her romantic scenes, but scarcely less so in other spots demanding the quality of acting of which she is mistress.

Paul Lucas gives a sincere portrayal of the other man and Alexander Kirkland is at his best in a sympathetic role. Warner Oland, minus his almost traditional Oriental make-up, appears in a role that he handles with his usual finesse. Others deserving mention are Donald Crisp, Earle Foxe and Vera Morrison, a little negro girl playing the part of a native servant.

The picture was intelligently directed by Frank Lloyd and the scenic effects are little short of amazing.

Joe E. Brown, who will appear in the "Tenderfoot,' soon to come to the Grand Theater.

Original Covered Wagon Used In Making Picture

There were plenty of covered wagons around Hollywood some years ago, but nowadays Samuel Goldwyn's production staff had difficulty in finding an authentic specimen when they needed it for the opening sequence of "Arrowsmith," the picturization of Sinclair Lewis' novel, which comes to the Rialto Theater on Sunday and Monday. Eventually they had to borrow a real covered wagon which had actually crossed the plains in '49 and now stands on permanent exhibition in front of the Santa Barbara Mission in Santa Barbara, Califoria.

There was some doubt at first that the old veteran would be able to run long enough to get the film taken, but axle-grease and new tries rejuvenated it to such an extent that it would probably be able to cross back again to the East tomorrow.

Ronald Colman plays the role of the crusading young doctor in this United Artists picture version of "Arrowsmith," supported by Helen Hayes, Richard Bennett and A. E. Anson.

Pvt. A. M. Smith of the 1st Tanks: "Say, Alsup, what all have you fellows got over there in that big building? I want to come over and take a look." As Smith passed by the dressing room he closed his eyes, next he saw the Medical Inspector's office, ran up stairs, sat down in the dentist chair and asked for a hair cut and shave. It's hard to say what that boy might have done if Lt. Gabriel hadn't given him gas then and there.

Things are mighty still around the Dispensary since Red Davis went away.

This may sound bad and in fact it is bad. Our Sammie left here Saturday afternon and stayed out all night. Some one said they saw him over in Ala. at the Marathon dance. Then, Sunday, he made a quick getaway for Manchester, we sure would like to find out what is calling him up there. Could it be the same blond?

Roving Minstrel hits Chesterfield Trail.

Arthur Tracy, the "Street Singer"

When Arthur Tracy, "The Street Singer", (aptly described as a melody vagabond) stepped before the microphone in Chesterfield's "Music That Satisfies" hour, Tuesday night, August 9th, at 10:00 o'clock (E. D. T.), a voice and character of exceptional interest was brought to the coast-to-coast radio audience.

Tracy began singing when but a boy of six years. Born in Philadelphia twenty-seven years ago, it was his delight as a child to stage impromptu recitals in the yard of his father's home, and the clear, strong, young voice earned many a penny from appreciative neighbors.

So great is the range of his voice that he is frequently asked whether he is a tenor or a baritone and for this question Tracy has a reply of his own "I am a 'baritenor'." And because he sings in twelve languages, with the accent of a native in each, thousands of radio fans have written to nationality. His usual reply is, "I'm international." Arthur Tracy finds genuine enjoyment in singing and thousads of radio fas have written to say that they feel the singer's pleasure. "You sing as though you love it," they say. Tracy attributes his popularity as the Street Singer to this gift of sharing his enjoyment with his radio audience.

His hobby is collecting songs and of these he has more than 6,000 in many languages—German, Polish, Pussian, French, Italian, Spanish, and others—even Greek.

His personal tastes are simple. He is fond of the country, enjoys horses and dogs and rowing, prefers to drive his car himself, and is a hard worker at the one job that counts with him—his music. He does not want to be thought of in any other terms. "I can say it best," he declares, "in American slang: I'm just a guy who likes to sing."

Mr. Tracy will sing every Tuesday at 10:00 (E. D. T.) for Chesterfield's "Music That Satisfies" program.

29th Infantry

Well, here we are, the grand old Headquarters Company, all settled down to do a year's work, under the newly assgned Company Commander and Company Officers, which we hope will be an outstanding phase in the history of the 29th Infanry. With all our new equipment, good chow, and cooperative group of men, we feel that we are on the way to bigger and higher standards which are prized so highly by the 29th Infantry.

To start with, we are represented in the Special Units baseball team by four of its outstanding members, namely: Cpl. Hayes, Cpl. LaBonte, Pfc. Easley and Pfc. Chastain. These men bring the glory of sportsmanship not only to our company and our team but to themselves individually. "Dock" Easley seems to be especially interested in publicity for our local papers, maybe those bus checks he has been issuing out help to promote that, but any way he is worthy of the praise.

On the recent inspection of masses we held second place in the Post and we are making a big fight for that first place.

HEADQUARTERS CO., FIRST BN.

Good morning everyone. We are glad to be back with you again for a few brief minutes to relate our last escapades. Everything has been more or less "humdrum" for the past few weeks—oh, you know the feeling! Most of the men in the company are on special duty and that makes things seem a whole lot more monotonous.

The communication platoon has recently completed the job of painting the squadroom ceiling and from the looks of the place it seems that the painting detail tried mighty hard to adorn the wall with grotesque illustrations depicting scenes from the painting "Sunrise" or "The Moonlight Scene", the latter being the most popular inasmuch as the spots stand out on red brick like cats' eyes on a dark night. Now you tell one!

We haven't anything to say about the intelligence platoon right at the present time but believe me when we do dig up some dirt—watch your step!

Now after shooting the bull we will get down to business and tell you the news.

Privates first class Malphus, Altom and Turner have been discharged per expiration term of enlistment and have "taken off" for parts unknown. You had better stay with us boys; we will enjoy your company for another term.

COMPANY "B"

Sweet army life, sweet army life,
Oh, how we love thee so;
'Cause we have no home in this wide world,
No other place to go.
Sometimes you'll hear a growler sigh,
"When I get out I'm goin away;
But when he draws that final he'll say,
"Gim'me the bonus, I'm here to stay".

Godwin Puts Bug On Smith In 7th Stanza

Tetherton Laces Harp In Semi-Go Of Benning Show

Bob Godwin, Georgia's latest light-heavy glove sensation, proved conclusively that he is of championship contender timber by handling Walker (Cyclone) Smith, of Benning, as though he were an infant and then stopping him in the seventh round, in the feature event at Doughboy stadium, Tuesday evening.

Smith heard the doleful ten toll for the second time in his career. With both eyes practically closed, his face sore and swollen, he dropped into the resin after Godwin had followed a barrage of blows to the face with a sharp, dynamic left hook to the chin that sent Smith's mouthpiece spiralling from the ring among the spectators in the fourth row at the ringside.

The "Cyclone" was game—no mistake about that. He fought the same type of fight that had proven too good for a long string of boys in the last several years. He crouched, went into a shell and came out with roundhouse rights on the breaks. Two such swings grazed Godwin's head. A dozen missed their ever shifting target by fully twelve inches.

It was simpy a case of science overwhelming the slugging type of fistic competition. If Godwin was breathing hard when the fight ended, it could not easily be detected. You might have confused him with a dancing master. He glided about the ring, hooked with a two-handed attack and was out of harm's way when "Cyclone" blew his force into thin air. The most beautiful tactics were employed by Godwin occurred during the numerous clinches. He performed the feat of pinning Smith's potent right to his side and worked his own trip-hammer right to the face a half a dozen times before the referee pried the men apart.

The soldier was plainly confused. For one thing, he couldn't keep track of his tormentor because he couldn't see him through almost closed optics. For five rounds Godwin aggravated and wore the doughboy down with sharp rights and lefts to the face that rattled like rain. In the sixth he followed his tremendous lead by opening up with that stinging left and countering with a right that was almost as good. He hooked one to Smith's face in that round that caused the Louisiana "Cyclone's" knees to buckle. From then on it was simply a case of measuring the soldier off for the killing which occurred early in the following round.

Three thousand soldiers and civilians marveled at the ease and grace with which Godwin polished off a tough boy who has stood his ground with such men as Maxie Rosenbloom, Battling Bozo and Tony Cancella.

The semi-final, in which Rip Tetherton, Benning, won a gruelling eight round decision over Jackie Harp, of Warm Springs and self-styled welter champion of the South, was one of the most gory and glorious battles ever seen on the reservation. This writer is compelled to retract previous written accounts of Harp's showing against Blondy Parker in view of his splendid performance against doughty Tetherton. The Warm Springs boy was accorded a rousing ovation as he left the ring. He ended the last two rounds with his face a crimson mask that shed its color to his opponent and the referee, Lieutenant Johnson.

Harp sank to his knees twice in the third round under a fusilade of rights and lefts to the head. He was up at nine after the first knockdown and was resting through the count when the bell sounded shortly after he had been floored a second time. Seconds worked furiously with him during the rest period and had revived him considerably when the gong sounded, signalizing the beginning of the fourth spasm. Harp surprised everybody by becoming the aggressor for the remainder of the battle. He even had Rip riding backward at times. Jackie absorbed a horrible lacing but demonstrated to the most skeptical that he has that certain something that successful men of the prize ring must possess—gameness.

Frank Mackery, of Benning, was awarded a decision over Dynamite Dunn, of West Point, in the six round main preliminary. Both boys appeared fat, slow and tired from the second round on. They embraced every second and Mackery slid a thousand punches harmlessly off Dunn's shoulders in a vain endeavor to connect while the West Point boy held on for dear life. It was a tame, uninteresting bout.

Jack Darby, of Columbus, a brother of Lester Darby, received a decision over Ghost Ghastly, of Benning, after four heated rounds. The verdict was very unpopular—and rightfully so. This scribe believed, and many others believed, that the worst Ghastly deserved was a draw. One of the judges was soundly booed for the rest of the evening.

Charlie White, of Columbus, and Spot Webb, of Benning, fought four rounds to a draw. Webb walked away with White in the first round but Charlie came back to hold his own very masterfully. He ripped Webb's right eye and this bothered the soldier.

Lightning Lige, of Benning, took a decision over Chero Pete, of Columbus, in the four round curtain raiser. There was nothing spectacular about this bout but both boys were willing and threw plenty of leather during their stay in the spotlight.

Captain Phillip T. Fry, post athletic officer, proved conclusively—once again—that he used excellent judgment in the arrangement of fight cards. This fact was demonstrated by the attendance and the calibre of bouts shown. It is certainly a relief to be able to see a jam up show like the one presented Tuesday night for it tends to raise the public's confidence in boxing and those connected with it.

Official Scorer Komments Kutely On Behalf Of Umps

By A. Durden

Umpires Dennis and Wolfe have been officiating at Gowdy Field for the past two seasons. During this itme they have been called every name known to the irate fan within the boundary of the English language. There is really no telling what monikers have been applied in Polish-Giddish and other foreign tongues. Whatever grievance a player may have, he usually works out his feeling on the ump. The fans glower down on the ump from the stands and beg for his blood.

In the meantime Dennis and Wolfe take the field each afternoon, withstand the torturing rays of a midsummer sun, take all the abuse thrown their way, give their decision to the best of their ability and seldom ever murmur or show any sign of resentment over the many nice boquets thrown their way.

If there is a heaven, (and we know there is) surely there will be a little restful spot reserved for the umpires where the raving fan and rabid player cannot disturb their rest in the sweet forevermore.

During the second half of the baseball season quite a few fans have been getting a big kick seeing Kjelstrom and his crew take several lacings. In fact several of the games have been lost when the teamwork of the Kellys would go to pieces. These fans will laugh the other way in another season. With the first half tucked away the Kellys are experimenting and building. Every game in which they take part few players complete the game, substitutions are sent in every inning and naturally there is no teamwork. It is not a case of the Kellys going to pieces, it is just a case of building and preparing for another season.

Tannerhill Stars Again As Tanks Holds Swim Meet

The Second Battalion, 29th Infantry and the Tanks have already completed their swimming meets, preparatory to the post competiiton to be held in the near future. Good material was uncovered in each meet for the battalion to enter the competition.

The Second Battalion held their meet Saturday, July 6th, with Company "G" placing first. Company "E" was second, with "F" bringing up in third place. The races for this meet

TANKERS AND SECOND BN. HOLD SWIM MEET

were not timed, but brought out much speed in the competiion.

The Tankers held their meet yesterday afternoon, with a fair attendance. Tannehill of Headquarters company was first in the individual scores, taking three first places. Company "E" won first place for the company competition, flashing many newcomers to the ranks of the swimmers.

Many new swimmers were shown in the Second Battalion meet, with their prospects being bright to win in the post meet. The Twenty Ninth Infantry will hold their swimming meet on September 20th, with three battalions participating. The second Battalion is favored t owin this meet.

Good time was turned in by the Tank swimmers, with Tannehill slated to take honors in individual score for the post meet. This boy can swim, and no foolin'. His distance swimming is nothing short of phenomenal.

The company has completed a very successful range and musketry season and is now parading the various guard posts to the tune of "The General Orders".

The last musketry problem on Sacket Hill will long remain in the memories of many men as a very "warm number"—a counterpart of that dreadful second day on the Americus hike. Now that it is over we look back on a hard but fruitful period in the training of a Doughboy.

Pvt. Harry Rivers was discharged recently. He is reviewing the forgotten beauty of the old farm for a while before winding his way to new fields of action. Good luck, Harry.

COMPANY "G"

The range season with the week of preliminary is well begun. Jawbone for a few days and the "A" group will be in the midst of record.

The target season has found new acquisitions to the Company in the way of officers as well as men. The last turnover from the Recruit School brought "G" Company thirteen new recruits from a variety of different branches of the service. Lindsey comes from the Hawaiian Islands—Holland from the Quartermaster and Mullenix from the Artillery.

A loss which the company will surely feel is the loss of Captain Wimberly from command of "G" Company. His new duty as our Regimental Adjutant will be watched with pride by "G" Company with the hope that his new duties will be as pleasant as our prior service was with him.

Coming to us highly recommended as our new company commander is Captain DePass, who during the past year attended the Infantry School. We hope that the vigorous cooperation tendered to Captain Wimberley will continue for Captain DePass in his new undertaking.

Congress has contributed its part in increasing the personnel of "G" Company, by ordering the 1932 Class from the Academy to report for duty at their respective Posts. As a result Lieutenants Britt, Gilmer, and Smith have joined us. A cordial welcome is extended to them by the company.

COMPANY "H"

We've finally developed a baseball team in the company that's hard to beat. We played Service Company a game last Sunday morning and defeated them by the score of 5 to We have a scheduled game with Acme Laundry of Columbus next Sunday morning.

Our Section Indoor Baseball League wound up with the First Section, First Platoon leading with the percentage of .800. They won 4 games and lost one. Just can't beat this fellow, 'Goat' Farmer, when he's right. And the trouble for the rest of the teams seems to be that he's always right.

We have had quite a number of men to be discharged during the past few days. They are all reenlisting without furlough, the reason being that we're on the range and that extra $5.00 or $3.00 means plenty.

The last half of the Intra-Murial league penant race looks like a bunched affair with the Greencords holding a first position place. There is no reason why we should not go all the way down the stretch up in front and then come through to break the tape.

Mickey McCarthy is working like a big leaguer behind the platter this season. It is Mickeys best year in several seasons. Grady Tolle is also his old self again. If that good right wing of Tolle's will just hold up we are sitting pretty. Zuke will also turn in some ball games. He was a little wild in his last start but he has got plenty of stuff.

What we really need is base hits. Give this layout a shower of base hits and the pennant will be brought home at the end of the season. But somebody will have to start swinging the willow to collect these said base hits. Sam Stuart, Pop Heckert, Tanks Grantham, Mickey McCarthy and others have been swinging bats for years, it is time that they began hitting the old nugget.

BENNING HERALD

VOLUME II — FORT BENNING, GA., FRIDAY, AUGUST 19, 1932 — NUMBER 17

Benning Briefs

The "Uplift Idea' so often the butt of jokes, has received a death blow in the Officers' Club. Lt. Dowdall reports that the fair patrons of the Beauty Parlor have complained about the type of magazine which is supplied them, particularly for use while they are under the dryer. As one young lady remarked:

"What we want is movie magazines." Something that will interest us."

It seems as though the Secretary's attempts to provide the "better class" of literature are doomed to an early failure.

Why the young ladies particularly want the magazines which so charmingly depict our screen heroes and heroines is a matter of conjecture. Do they want to look at the handsome young men or the beautiful young actresses? Do they believe in the power of suggestion, and hope that they might possibly gain inspiration from the well-posed and well-beautified beauties of the silver sheet? Or do they just want to look at pictures? If it's the latter, why don't they read the National Geographic Magazine? Figure it out for yourself.

* * *

Then there's the officer who asked the Club's attendant for "rat-trap cheese." The attendant had never heard of it, but the officer insisted on this particular variety. He tried "swift" cheese ("Swiss" seems to be beyond his pronunciatory powers) and all the other unheard of cheeses he could think of but none were acceptable. Finally he referred his case to the Secretary who directed him to supply the customer with "plain, American, garden variety of cheese."

* * *

T. N. T. is no good for filling wells. That was the opinion expressed by one of the officers who is engaged at that task at the present time. Blasting powder—dynamite—or almost anything else—but trinitrotoluene—no sir! What with horses falling down the abandoned wells and members of the Company Officers' Classes using them as (unexpected) concealment, the post authorities have decided that they are too great a menace to the personnel of the post, hence the demolition.

* * *

Chaplain John F. Monahan, Catholic Chaplain, at Benning, is now a major, having received official notification of his promotion to that rank. Father Monahan has made a great many friends at Benning by his energetic work at the Chapel, as has Chaplain Willis T. Howard and his staff at the Protestant Chapel. As a matter of fact, it would be hard to find a post whose religious needs are more carefully taken care of.

* * *

And then we have the instruction in the saving of the physical end of lives. The last course in life-saving for this year is now being held at Russ Pool. This course, which is used to instruct enlisted men in the art of life-saving, covers a variety of subjects—the 4-mile swim, free style, the back and side stroke, a front dive and the retrieving of objects from eight feet of water.

(Please turn to page 10)

Improvements At Officers' Club Are Under Way

In connection with the work of the Economy Board, and in an attempt to carry out the ideas of the officers composing the board, the Officers' Club is now undergoing several changes in preparation for the coming social season of Benning. The facilities for handling dances and parties of members of the club and their guests and for supplying meals for the students of the 1932-33 classes are being expanded, so as to make the work of the Club more comprehensive in these fields.

The principal improvement being made is the partial remodeling of the old building so that the weekly supper dances, which are held each Thursday night during the season, may be more easily held there. Lt. Harry G. Dowdall, Secretary of the Club, said recently that the use of the old building for these dances will enable the officials to reduce the cost of entertaining, and consequently there will probably be a much greater response. The dances held last year were almost invarably oversubscribed, the maximum number permitted being 140, while the Club will be able to accommodate about 200 this year.

The grill, which is used to a large extent by officers of the classes for their noonday meal, will be enlarged by the addition of about ten feet of space to the front end, occupying the space where the porch formerly was. When this addition is completed, those officers, numbering about thirty, who formerly had their lunch at Biglerville Hall, will be accommodated in the Grill and Biglerville will be closed until the coming of the National Guard and Reserve Officers' Classes.

The reading room will probably be converted into a secondary Grill-room for use during the dinner dances and, with the increased space in the Grill, will permit the use of the entire central floor for dancing. The orchestra stand is being raised to allow increased space for the dancers, yet still provide as nearly perfect acoustics as possible.

All these changes, together with the almost total elimination of elaborate formal affairs is expected by the management of the club to greatly decrease the cost of entertaining especially for those who give dinner parties at the club for their friends, as has been the custom. The ventilation system of the main dance floor will be improved, so as to keep the dancers as cool as possible, and the Secretary is now working on a plan to provide for open-air dances, if these prove feasible, during the early Fall season.

Major Howland and Capt. Horan Leave Fort

Two well-known Fort Benning officers departed from the post for duties at other stations.

Maj. William A. Howland, a graduate of the 1931-32 advanced course of The Infantry School and recently on duty with the Tank section academic department, departed for New York where he will board a transport for the voyage to the Hawaiian Islands. Upon arrival at Honolulu he will be assigned to the Infantry of the Hawaiian department.

Afishing Bound—Not for Votes

With his campaign for re-election safely launched, President Hoover dug out his old clothes, rods and reels and, with a few close friends, fared forth to fish for something besides votes. Here is the Chief Executive with Secretary of War Patrick Hurley as they left Washington on the inspection boat, "Sequoia" for their short fishing vacation in the Chesapeake Bay.

Lt. Colonel Rice Now At Benning

Lieut. Col. Elmer P. Rice, recently on duty in the office of the Chief of Infantry, Washington, D. C. reported at Fort Benning on Tuesday and was assigned to the Second Battalion, 29th Infantry.

Colonel Rice was on duty at Fort Benning from 1926 ot 1928 as an instructor in the second section, academic department. While on that duty he carried on a number of experiments and acted as observer for the infantry board during a series of tests of sound projectors to be used in connection with training films. The tests were conducted at the laboratories of Electric Research Products Co., New York City, in 1928. At that time the experiments comprised tests of sound training films designed to illustrate infantry instructional methods in the solution of tactical problems, the instruction of the machine gunner, the operation and organization of the infantry battalion headquarters and headquarters company at war strength, and the infanry battalion in defense. One of the results sought by the use of training films was the simplification of disseminating infantry instructional methods to reserve and national guard units at remote places, ad making authentic interpretations of infantry school available without the necessity of sending officers as lecturers. Colonel Rice is a graduate of The Command and General Staff School, class of 1925, the Army War College, class of 1929, and of the advanced course, The Infantry School, class of 1924.

Well-Known Officer Comes Here

Captain Pierre Mallett, field artillery, who recently was graduated from the Field Artillery School at Fort Sill, Oklahoma, reported at Fort Benning on Monday for assignment to duty while awaiting the opening of the classes of The Infantry School in September.

Captain Mallett formerly was stationed at Fort Benning with the 83d Field Artillery, and was one of a group of Fort Benning officers who was assigned to duty with the first pilgrimage of American war mothers and widows to cemeteries and battle fields of Europe in 1930. During his first year of duty with the pilgrimage, Captain Mallett acted as conducting officer for the tours of groups of pilgrims, and later served with the American Graves Registration Service in Paris. His second year of service with the pilgrimage was spent in Cherbourg, where, as port officer, he was in charge of disembarkation, reception and transportation arrangements, and of embarkation of the pilgrims for their return to the United States. Captain Mallett will be a student n the advanced course, 1932-33.

General King Returns To Post After Vacation

Major General Campbell King, Commandant of The Infantry School, returned to Fort Benning on Monday after a short leave of absence which he spent at his home in Flat Rock, North Carolina.

29th Inf. Team Betters Record At McPherson

By Bernard B. Swayze

Thundering over the turf in truce Cossack style, the gallant Twenty-Ninth Infantry quartette again bowed to the hard-driving, swift attack of the charging Fort McPherson polo team last Sunday in Atlanta. Only after a bitterly fought battle did the invading doughboys relinquish claim on the game that went to the conquering Corps Areaites to the tune of 7 to 5.

It was an exciting, hotly contested game from start to finish, with the gallant forces of the 29th Infantry bending every effort to stem the tide of defeat. It was a much better team that faced the 22nd Infantry four last week than the one which lost to them the previous Wednesday. Still another game remains to be played to complete the three-game schedule at Atlanta, and with the same improvement as has been shown during the past week in the ranks of the local team, the Fort McPherson team is in for a trouncing next Sunday. It will be a game well worth the trip to Atlanta to witness.

Many will recall that the Fourth Corps Area four, showing here during the last maneuvers, displayed the flashiest of the gathering of teams. Their speed and dexterity in riding their speedy mounts amounted to enough margin for them to take games already conceded to the opponents. This team is still intact, and will remain that way for some time to come. Their mounts have, in the past, been far superior to those of the opponent, but the 29th Infantry has succeeded in shaping out some mounts of no mean ability during the last layoff. Their offensive is composed of good players, and with a little more training, will be able to take everything in sight this season.

The teams playing at Atlanta were as follows: Atlanta: Captain Wing, No. one, Mr. Shubert, No. two, Major Howell, No. three, Lt. Baker, No. four. Fort Benning: Sweeny, one, Lt. Westlund, two, Lt. O'Connor, three, Major Frazier, four, Lt. Clark and Captain Cushman, substitutes.

The fans are anxiously awaiting the call of the bugle that will sound the clarion note, gathering the post poloists about French Field this fall, sending them off mid a shower of hooves and dust, chasing that little white bamboo pellet. Auto horns will bellow forth their symphonied aproval of good plays, while fans will sit breathlessly, waiting to see what will happen in a dangerous play, exuding sighs of relief when the play ends without an injury.

Approval will shine in their faces when some able poloist recovers from an injury, electing to remain in the game. Their cheers will sound from the proximity of the First Division Road, heralding the tidings of good games to those who elected to stay home, and listen to the radio.

The prayer of the polo fans will probably be interpreted as some thing like the following, when in reality they are giving vent to their feelings in sighs and occasional stretches of the yelling propensities of their lungs.

"O! ruler of the seasons, Bring back our long waited for cool weather. Bring us polo, in all its glory, manifesting all those attributes of true manhood, which makes life our one cherished privilege here among mortals. Bring us our gallant mounts, with

Colonel and Mrs. Munson and the Misses Munson Share Honors at Dance

Colonel and Mrs. Fred L. Munson and their two daughters were the honor guests Saturday evening at a delightful dance given by the officers and ladies of the 24th Infantry at the Polo Hunt Club.

Those in the receiving line were Colonel and Mrs. Munson, Colonel and Mrs. Lochlin W. Caffey, and Lieut. and Mrs. C. F. Whiteley. The guests were introduced by Capt. Marcel A. Gillis, adjutant of the 24th Infantry.

The Polo Club was most effectively decorated in festoons of spanish moss and zinnias.

During the dance a refreshing punch was served. Music was furnished by the Regimental Orchestra.

MISS ADELYN MANGUM AND MR. L. B. MANGUM HONOR GUEST AT LAWN PARTY

A delightful event of Friday evening was the lawn party at which Capt. and Mrs. Robert Mangum entertained at their home complimenting their house guests, Miss Adelyn Mangum and Mr. L. B. Mangum of Dallas, Texas. The Mangums' lawn, where a buffet supper was served, was charming with its decorations of Japanese lanterns. After supper dancing was enjoyed by the sub-deb set while the married couples were escorted to the post movies.

The invitation list included: Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Burton Seeley, Major and Mrs. George Rife, Major and Mrs. John W. Foos, Lieut. and Mrs. Lynch, Lieut. and Mrs. Glenn McConnell, the Misses Maxine Rife, Emily Brown, Esther Foos, Louise Waddington, Mary Wadsworth, Virginia Wadsworth, Betty Gaston, Virginia Ellis, Adelyn Mangum, Mary Mangum and Messrs. Dick Welty, Bob Besson, Robert Buffington, John Buffington, L. B. Mangum, Dick Pruitt, George Crandall, Harold Caldwell Foos, Al Seeley, Red Allen, Howard Liston, Mike Montesinos, and George Griswold.

MISS KATHLEEN ORNDORF HONORS COTERIE OF CHARMING VISITORS WITH BRIDGE LUNCHEON

Miss Kathleen Orndorf entertained Saturday at the home of her sister and brother-in-law, Lieut. and Mrs. James R. Pierce, with a delightful luncheon in honor of Mrs. Charles R. Smith of Fort McPherson, Mrs. Richard Mitchell, and Miss Marion Fellows of Philadelphia.

The luncheon table was laid with a beautiful point-de-venice cloth and a bowl of roses, zinnias, lilies and other summer flowers were used. After luncheon, bridge was in order.

Miss Orndorf's guests were: Mrs. C. R. Smith, Mrs. Richard Mitchell, Mrs. Lynn Brady, Mrs. Gerald Gabriel, Mrs. James Bowen, Mrs. Orestes Cleveland, Mrs. George Howell, Miss Marion Fellows and Miss Louise Waddington.

MISS DOROTHY RUSS AND MISS BETTY BACCHUS SHARE HONORS AT DANCE

The Polo Club was the scene Friday evening of a delightful dance given by Lieut. and Mrs. Felix A. Todd and Lieut. and Mrs. T. L. Dunn in honor of the Dunn's two house guests, Miss Dorothy Russ and Miss Betty Bacchus.

The 24th Infantry orchestra was engaged for the evening and dancing was enjoyed from 9:30 to 12:30.

The guest list included the honorees, members of the young married contingent of Fort Benning, their guests, and members of the younger set and their escorts.

MISS MARION FELLOWS HONOR GUEST AT PICNIC

Miss Marion Fellows, attractive house guest of Lieut. and Mrs. Gerald Gabriel was the honoree Thursday evening at a picnic given by Lieut. and Mrs. Gabriel at the 29th Infantry camp. Swimming followed by a picnic supper was enjoyed.

The guests included: Major and Mrs. Sereno Brett, Capt. and Mrs. R. E. Vermette, Capt. and Mrs. Clough Gee, Capt. and Mrs. Guy McKinley, Lieut. and Mrs. W. A. D. Thomas, Lieut. and Mrs. Lindell Straube. Lieut. and Mrs. Carl Anderson, Lieut. and Mrs. Richard Mitchell, Miss Marion Fellows, Miss Kathleen Orndorf, Maj. Emil Leard, Capt. Arnold Funk, Lieut. Thomas Moran, and Lieut. Carl Robinson.

FAREWELL PICNIC GIVEN FOR LIEUT. AND MRS. JOHN W. HARMONY

Lieut. and Mrs. Orestes Cleveland and Lieut. and Mrs. George Howell were the joint hosts Friday evening at a farewell picnic for Lieut. and Mrs. John W. Harmony who left Monday for the University of Maryland. The picnic supper was held at the 29th Infantry camp where swimming and dancing were enjoyed. The guests were: Lieut. and Mrs. Lynn Brady, Lieut. and Mrs. John Harmony, Lieut. and Mrs. James Bowen, Lieut. and Mrs. James Fry, Lieut. and Mrs. A. J. Evans, Lieut. and Mrs. C. R. Smith and Mrs. Sarah Brady.

MISS LOUISE WADDINGTON ENTERTAINS WITH PICNIC

Miss Louise Waddington entertained Saturday evening with a delightful picnic at Jeff's Hole for a few of her friends in the younger set. The guests motored out to Jeff's Hole where swimming followed by a picnic supper and a weiner roast was enjoyed. Lieut. and Mrs. James Bowen and Lieut. and Mrs. George Howell acted as chaperones. The guests were: The Misses Maxine Rife, Emily Brown, Mary McDavid, Jane Lindroth, Betty Gaston, Ruth Bay, Elizabeth Beatty, Kenneth Kendall, Adelyn Mangum and the Messrs. Al Seeley, Dick Pruitt, Bob Besson, Roy Bodine, Jack Colter, Caldwell Foos, Bob Nelson, George Griswold, Howard Liston, George Crandall, Stout Hyatt, and Junior Beatty.

Today's Fashion

By VERA WINSTON

A Frock for Late Vacati

Lots of us are taking late vacations, so news about smart clothes for yachting or beach wear is welcome even while the cables are already buzzing with flashes on Autumn clothes now being shown abroad. For a vacation at a shore resort or on a boat, it is nice to wear clothes that have something of a nautical effect. They are always very youthful and fresh looking, and that is what we want for our holiday togs, isn't it? This week's sketch shows a dress that's just the thing for wear on a boat or by the bounding waves. It is of white shantung, a material that has had such a successful revival this season, and is decorated with rather large bone buttons. The navy braid is laced to give it the proper nautical touch, and the gob hat completes the salt sea look.

MISS JANE CLEVELAND CELEBRATES WITH PARTY

One of the delightful events of the very young set this week was the party on Sunday that Jane Cleveland gave to celebrate her tenth birthday. Supper was served on the lawn at five thirty after which the young guests were escorted to the post movies. The birthday cake was a lovely tiered one with ten pink candles. The guests were: Mary Frances Kelly, Helene Matchett, Lilian Evans, Schofield Waddington, Jack Albright, Phil Haisley and John Cleveland.

COMPANY "E"

This week found Company "E" in the midst of a bus yrange season. At the finish of the 1st group's firing there were some happy ones, some surprised, and some dissatisfied. All who saw Sgt. Arevalo make that possible at 200 yards rapid fire saw a very interesting and exciting performance follow with Sgt. Arevalo in the capacity of "Master of Ceremonies." Anyway, should Sgt. Arevalo have missed getting the possible by one point, his score would not have been that of an expert rifleman. Sgt. Bell was one of the surprised ones—he qualified however. We are very proud of our "Top Kick," 1st Sgt. Davis, and his score of 331, and hope that score will bring home the bacon for him in winning the Regimental prize of $10.00 offered for high score. We think it is safe in so far as winning high score in the Company is concerned unless "K. P." Moore or "G. I." Ragsdale beats it. The only man thta really had a chance with Sgt. Davis in the 1st Group was Pvt. Huff, the 335 man of last year with a score of 35 standing at 200 yards. In some mysterious manner he only came out of the rush with MM. Some seem to think that he shot too much with his mouth in lieu of his Springfield. Boy! if Huff had only made a good score standing last year no telling what his total score would have been.

Someone got a miss in the 1st platoon and "Sad Sam" Jones was pulling the target; Sam immediately told the telephone orderly to tell the man on the firing line that he got a miss at 9 o'clock. Lt. Pressley took it up with "Sad Sam" and asked him how the h—ll did he know it was a miss at 9 o'clock? Sad Sam answered saying, "When the bullet passed here it was exactly 9 o'clock."

It may interest the members of the company to know that Cpl. "Bob" Tinsley's squad of the 3rd platoon has the highest average at the end of the firing of the 1st group with an average of 304, next in line comes Cpl. Lamb's squad of the 1st platoon (Pvt. Johnson, C. in charge) with an average of 302, last comes Cpl. Dowden's squad of the 2nd platoon averaging 228. Close competition in the wind-up is expected and all are eager for the finis to arrive so the winning squad can be determined and Company prizes therefor awarded. The 3rd platoon is way out in front for high platoon in the company.

Golly, I almost forgot to mention that we have several requests from team supporters, outfielders and whatnot. Here they are:

Dear Editor:

Re: The Benning Herald volume 2, number 16.

John Lytle being retiring in nature and reticent concerning personal achievements (if any) failed to consider the notoriety his bicycle trip would cause in Military circles until said notoriety was forcibly presented him thru glaring print in a recent issue of The Benning Herald.

Since considerable attention has been directed to two pairs of worn out trousers and a worn out bicycle seat cover, the owner is willing to offer them as a display for the edification of Military Personnel (and newspaper men) in any recognized Military Museum designated by your paper.

Awaiting disposition of aforementioned articles I beg to remain

On The Q. T.

By B. B. S.

OUR IDEA OF a real pleasant job is that which Mr. Linkwald now holds down with the Post Exchange Restaurant. Just look at the good food he has a chance to smell, taste and eat there in that most inviting of Army restaurants! And how that boy can throw up a menu that will make your mouth water!

* * *

HE HAS, BESIDES this pleasant slant on the job, the privilage of association with the beautiful, pleasant young ladies who wait upon the trade. Never have we seen such an array of feminine pulchritude lined up behind one chow counter than that with which Mr. Linkwald is treating his eating public. Their smiles radiate pleasantness toward every customer they wait upon, and we'll be blamed if it doesn't look as though they get a real enjoyment out of every bite you partake of in that haven of hungry souls.

* * *

MR. LINKWALD IS no amateur in the art of cooking, himself. Before going to Benning as steward of the restaurant, he was in the same position at the Ralston Hotel of Columbus. He was previously at the Officer's Club, Fort Benning, Biglerville Mess, Fort Benning, The Carling Hotel in Jacksonville and with the Clyde Steamship Lines. This should be enough recommendation for almost any cook, but "Linkey" as some are already calling him, has the backing of hundreds on the post, and we think he will shoot great guns in his newest undertaking.

THENCE WE JUMP over to the Library in the Service Club. It seems as though romance and happiness is twining itself about the personage of a couple, and it is all hard to believe. Sly looks may sometimes be misleading, but it isn't often we find those things as misleading as we are lead to believe. It seems as though a Corporal in the Library has been seen hanging about one of the prominent counters of the post, and a dark-haired lass is in danger of being completely captivated by those alluring eyes. Tut, tut, tut, Corporal Aldredge.

THEY DO TELL us that Bob Brown over in the Service Company gets excited every time he gets a letter with a Mississippi post mark on it. Some times he turns red behind the ears, and at other times his anger waxes hot. Wonder what is all the trouble over in the Magnolia State?

* * *

YOU KNOW Mr. Brown, that is our stall too, and anything you might say or do will be used against you.

To Organize Your Kitchen

By Eleanor Ross

Check up on your kitchen. If the household is to be run as a business concern, which it really is, surely the kitchen, which is the heart of the home, must function perfectly.

Do you go over your cooking utensils from time to time, eliminating those that are not in perfect working order? You should, or you will find, some day when there is important cooking to be done, that you are minus a necessary utensil.

See to it that the kitchen contains utensils suitable for various types of cooking and various temperatures. Stock some cast-iron vessels, and have some heat-proof glass for roasting. Inspect your aluminum pots and pans. If any are discolored, cook tomatoes, rhubarb, lemons or other acid fruit in them. You will find that makes them as bright as when purchased.

INSPECT ENAMEL WARE

Inspect carefully any enamel ware you may have and throw out anything that is even very slightly chipped. If you get any new enamel ware, place it in a larger pan of cold water, bring it to a boil, and after boiling well let it cool while still in the water. You will find that the utensil will not chip, for this process certainly does toughen enamel.

See to it that the household cutlery is in perfect shape, and wherever you can, eliminate cheap grades of steel. Knives of low grade steel soon become blunt and useless. Have a carving knife of high-tempered steel and a small vegetable knife with a thin blade of fine steel, so that it will cut small parings. It's an economy. Use the cheaper knives you have replaced to do the rougher work of the kitchen, such as turning food on a griddle or frying pan, and save the finer ones.

See to it that usable corkscrews and can openers are on hand so that there is no need to use a good knife to open bottles or cans.

Wire baskets are essential for frying and as food strainers. Pastry, bread and meat boards should be in perfect condition, and there must be a supply of wooden spoons for mix-

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

Summer Colds

During the past month there has been admitted to the hospital an increasing number of persons ill with head colds, sore throats, "grippe" or "flu." Hhese may be called summer colds all rght but are really not different from those that we catch in winter. The discomfort of summer heat added to the disability caused by the infection make them worse; recovery seems longer. Summer colds, like winter colds, are of two kinds; those you contract from others and self. People who have infected mouths, tonsils, sinus trouble, chronic ears or are run down are liable to have either kind.

The germ which causes the cold enters your nose or throat from the air when an infected person talks, coughs or sneezes. You may catch the cold by using an unwashed glass, spoon or fork which was used by someone with a cold. The germs may be on your hands because you touched something that has been handled by the person with a cold. Washing the hands before eating helps to prevent this.

In the summer some people with poor circulation or those with infected noses or throats seem to infect themselves. These individuals can not sit too long in a draft or in the shade in a wet bathing suit. They can not cool off too suddenly after hard work or exercise. Nor can they expose themselves to an electric fan with out developing a cold. Once a cold has begun, whether it be in winter or summer proper treatment is necessary. Early treatment is the most important. If your head stops up, your back and legs ache, your eyes burn, and there is tickling or soreness of the throat, and you have other signs of a cold, such as sneezing or a running nose, start treatment right away.

Rest in bed if possible; take a laxative; drink plenty of water and eat lightly. Other measures will be prescribed by the doctor if you call him. Don't take patent medicines for colds; some contain dangerous drugs.

Protect others when you have a cold. Cough and sneeze in a hankderchief (which should be boiled when washed) or in a cloth or paper napkin which can be burned. People with colds should stay by themselves for that is the only hope of preventing its spread to others.

Now after talking out of our heads for the last few minutes we will relate a little company data.

Upon the recommendation of their Company Commander the following named men of this organization are appointed Privates First Class: Privates Davis, Smith, H. C., and Smith, A, J. We are always glad to see well deserved appointments. May your climb upgrade be rewarded with more chevrons. Also upon the "okeh" of the C. O. the following are rated Specialists Sixth Class, Pvt's Mauldin, Herring, Jones and Weaver.

Pvt. Arlin M. Tomlinson has transferred to this outfit from Company "G," 29th Infantry. We are mighty glad to have this man in our company as he is an excellent barber and a neat soldier.

Well, my dear readers, we are closing our week's edition. The scribe is suffering from a shortage of basal ganglia, accounting for the foolish entry this week.

HEADQUARTERS COMPANY

Look at that First Battalion Baseball Team go!! Watch out championship! We are at the top of the list now after nosing out the Terrible Tankers in a "slugfest" last week. Charley Bank's hot liner to McLane in the 8th frame was the deciding factor in this game. As is the wont of the best of athletes, "Mac" let the ball get by him; that, coupled with Stevens pitching was responsible for the win. Ray's star catch of Lindsey's hot liner was one of the high-lights of the game. Say you'd better watch that boy, he'll reduce plenty of batting averages.

Some folks contend that pitchers don't hit, but get an earful of this; when that boy Pat Stevens lays on a ball he really poles it. In the last two games, namely, Second Bn. and Tanks, this young "fella" Stevens came thru for the "Greenies" with two terrific smashes to left field, scoring men ahead of him. That was nothing tho' in comparison to the retirement in order of the hard-hitting Tankers in the 8th stanza of this slugging-bee. Thereby this scribe feels perfectly authorized to utter this well known phrase, "wotta man." McGaha, veteran spitball artist started on the mound for the Irish and when "Mac" smears the slippery-elm on the old agate it really cuts "di-does." He was relieved in the 3rd by Hamscher, that hard-hitting knuckle ball king who whiffed several of the would be Ruths and Gehrigs with "stuff" that would make "Gawge" Earnshaw turn green with envy. Delano (Speedball Delano) replaced Hamscher on the rubber, he, in turn being relieved by our young hero, Pat Stevens, whose brilliant pitching goose-egged the "naughty Tanks" for the remainder of the game. Don't forget tho, fellows, that a team needs plenty of support, so let's turn out and give this old 2 one 9 our heartiest cheers. Our next game will be played August 25, so let's make our attendance 100 per cent strong.

REG. MACHINE GUN COMPANY

Lt. James S. Luckett, will depart on a well earned leave of absence after this week. Lt. Luckett has made many friends and base ball players since he has been member of the R. M. G. Co. Being head coach of the Special Units, Bn. 29th Inf. base ball team for one year, Lt. Luckett has proved to all the base ball fans that hard work and careful knowledge of the essentials of base ball has been given every member of this team. Anyone can easily see that the Special Units base ball team is one of the outstanding teams in Ft. Benning, any time you want to see a good clean game of ball just come over to Gowdy ball field when the Spare Parts are on schedule.

After Lt. Luckett returns from leave he will attend the student officers' class for one year then we hope to have him assigned to this battalion again as baseball coach. Anyway, the same old spirit will be carried on throughout the team, for that's something we all have and will keep, no matter if our coach has had to leave us for a while. We all regret very much to lose Lt. Luckett, every man in the company wishes him a grand and pleasant vacation up in N. C.

Lt. Jasper J. Riley, is also enjoying a leave of absence. Lt. Riley will be a student officer this year after he returns from leave. He will be missed by every one in the company. We all wish Lt. Riley a pleasant vacation and hope we can get him back to be our leader in some of these wild hog hunts. Lt. Riley is a lover of animals and a great outdoor sport when it comes to catching wild hogs like we catch them in R. M. G. Company.

1st Lt. Edward A. Chazal was seen this week giving the N. C. O.'s a thru test in T. O. G. Cpl. O. J. Petty found his mistake after he discovered they had the gun zeroed on a window pane that was out.

Our stable Sgt., F. P. "Dutch" Berrish, has been too busy to eat a square meal lately. Sgt. Berrish, Cpl. McCullough, and all the stable personnel have been doing their bit to make R. M. G. Co. stables the best in the corrals. Sgt. Berrish is getting on the good side with all the animals, he gives them a great big kiss the first thing every morning. Atta boy Dutch! get things all set for a big hog hunt soon.

Mess Sgt. James R. Large, has declared war on cockroaches and flies. Just the other day he busted a cockroach in the needle with a G. I. can, this same cockroach made no come back. So all the flies must have gotten scared and jumped in the fly traps, for we haven't been able to see any in the mess hall lately. Take a look at our fly traps on the porch some time. Good work, Jimmie.

Sgt. Edgar A. Tiner, one of our T. O. G. Sgt's has just recovered from the effects of a bad wisdom tooth he had pulled at the hospital recently.

Pvt. Yancy Waddle, our company truck driver, was seen driving a G. I. bunk over the squad room the other night.

Sgt. Frank White, Special Units base ball pitcher, and Cpl. Curtis "Egg" Emmons, 1st Squad Leader, engaged in a water fight last Sunday evening. Both boys got all wet and had to stop on account of Egg getting water in the eye.

Pvt. Earl C. Grow, company carpenter, can cut a groove in a board with his thumb nail. Better use your chisel, Grow.

Pvt. Harold E. Bradford, company cook, has taken on another three year stack. We believe H. E. knows too much about this army chow to take a chance at a free lunch counter.

Cpl. Joe E. Jones, company clerk, recently transferred from Cannon Company, has been following along in the foot steps of Cpl. Valtin, our former company clerk. Cpl. Valtin was discharged in June and decided to remain in civilian life a while.

Sgt. C. B. Coates, was located in the company truck after a careful search the other day, smoking one of Cpl. "Squash' Petty's cheap cigars. Boy, what a treat. Give me one!

Orderly room clerk Pvt. Settles, scorched off the typewriter ribbon writing about real romance in the good old days.

Cpl. Ladson I. Geddings, and Cpl. Winifred Tidwell, were noticed wear-

WE RECEIVE BENNING CALLERS

On Sunday, last, the secluded retreat in which we are endeavoring to recuperate from the mental and physical strain of furnishing a weekly column in the Herald, was brightened by a brief visit from two Benningites, Explorer and Mrs. Chance. They were headed for the Explorer's home, in Springfield, where he misspent most of his youth. Since the depression will prevent all but a few of the Explorer's many friends from fleeing to the mountains and seashores in anticipation of his arrival, it looks like a hard week ahead for Springfield. We really should be present in our official capacity to report on the old home week ceremonies. Maybe we shall be —you never can tell.

The Chances were traveling in Mrs. Chance's snappy Ford runabout. We are reliably informed that they recently became a one car family, when the Explorer's antique second mount disintegrated on the road between an obscure fisherman's paradise in dampest Florida and Block 23. This bit of news was a real surprise to us for the Explorer tried to sell the car to us last spring, before he got his orders to Advanced Course. It seems incredible that such a perfect piece of machinery in May should be junk in August. Perhaps it is just as well that we displayed the necessary amount of sales resistance. True, we made out our last efficiency report on the Explorer in June, but as a member of the Advanced Class, he has a monograph to write this fall. Had we purchased the car, we fear that the spectre of its battered mechanism might rise ike Banquo's ghost to take the Explorer's mnd off his work.

The Chances brought welcome news of Benning, but little of the sensational character that we look for on the trail of copy. As usual, the local celebrities are either so good or so careful as to make the filling of our column a chore of first magnitude.

About the only item that might qualify as Flare material was the startling information that Life Guard Munson, successor to Gunbotham, and popular social lion cub, has forsaken the bathing beauties and chlorinated waters of Russ Pool for the sterner summer occupation of teaching the Libian Footguards how to make expert on a reduced ammunition allowance. Perhaps the conveniences of the 3:30 a. m., rising hour appeals to the Lieutenant—it obviates the necessity of going to bed after a late party—but we choose to credit the sacrifice to professional zeal. We assume, of course, that the erstwhile arbiter of aquatic deportment had Byron's immortal lines in mind:

"You have the Pyrrhic dances yet,

(Please turn to page 5)

THE FLARE

Where is the Pyrrhic phalanx gone?
Of two such lessons, why forget
The nobler and the manlier one?"

O, yes! The Explorer did mention that one of the members of his Florida fishing fiasco was our old friend, Major Lynn Roberts. Major Roberts is well and favorably known at Benning, partly as a result of our efforts as a conductor of scandal columns similar to the Flare. Mrs. Roberts was prominent in Dramatic Club activities and ran a thriving kitten exchange on the side. Indeed, most of the Tom and lady cats whose love-making propensities inspire the profane imprecations of light sleeping Benningites are the direct descendants of a prolific mamma cat that belonged to Mrs. Roberts. We bear no malice, however, and the Flare hastens to be among the first to welcome Major and Mrs. Roberts back home.

General Marathon M. Fuzzard, having been unanimously elected to head the Progrestatic ticket in November, is still undecided as to a running mate. That the General is giving a lot of painful thought to this important matter is evidenced by the following memorandum which we found on his desk at the Phenix City headquarters, along with an empty gallon jug and other campaign accessories. We print it below in order that the local aspirants to political glory may get some idea of where they stand. There is no question that the General will dictate who is to have second place on the ticket, just as he has dictated everything else in connection with his campaign. A few of the more orthodox members of the party once resented this tendency, but their feeble protests were quickly silenced.

"Wot the hell!" roared the General; "Wot this country needs is a strong man who can carry his liquor and tell everybody where to get off. I spent too many years in the military service to let anybody tell me anything. When I was in the Islands in the days of the Empire, I ran a province and nobody got away with anything but me. Anybody who objected got lined up against the wall. If it hadn't been that I got court-martialed, I'd have settled this Philippine independence business for good and all."

That ended the opposition to General Fuzzard's somewhat arbitrary methods, but we are getting away from our story. We promised to print his memorandum and we are going through with it even if it means the blasting of a lot of political hopes and proud reputations.

Confidential Memorandum

Adjutant General Lewis—executive and diplomatic experience running the Infantry School Dramatic Club. Record as president of same indicates for farce comedy. Would get a kick out of presiding over senate.

Eagle Eye Bradley—all round weapons expert. Next administration is going to need one. Extensive stock market experience. (mostly bitter). Would cinch the margin clerk vote.

Major Schnitz Schneider—Name would capitalize growing sentiment for legalized beer without committing party to a program for restoring them soft drinks.

Major R. G. Tindall—Too radical. Believes in dividing all the jack equally. Would want too big a slice of the government profits.

Brother E. Watson Leard—Too conservative. Only bets on a sure thing—except for advertising purposes.

Captain George Bloomquist—Dialect expert. Once wangled a substantial professional discount out of Charlie Dana. Might pull in the Jewish vote in a couple of nation wide hook up speeches. That would sure put us over.

Lieutenant Ham Kelly—fine politician but talks too much for a vice presidential candidate.

Major A. S. J. Tucker—good vote-getting type. Democratic background, but we might be able to keep it out of the papers.

Major Barnwell Legge—same as above. Still one of the best possibilities.

Major Selleck—comes from Vermont and must have Republican connections. Can't use him.

Senator Borah—Lots of ability but probably couldn't stick to any one party till after the election.

Colonel Walter Reed—

At this point the General's handwriting, which had been growing worse and worse, became completely illegible. This is unfortunate, for he was just getting into the rank.

OPTIMIST

We see by the Herald that Captain Woody Wilson, popular extra man at Benning social gatherings, has joined the ranks of the Benedicts. That is what we call a fine gesture of contempt for the pay cut.

MATA HARI

The Story of the War's Most Notorious Spy

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Mata Hari, famous dancer and enemy spy, undertakes to get some secret papers from her lover, Shubin, Attache of the Russian Embassy in Paris. But Shubin has been unnerved by a visit from Dubois, head of the French Secret Service, and refuses to discuss them. When she learns that the papers are in the possession of a young aviator, Alexander Rosanoff, who is infatuated with her, she goes to his rooms, informing her confederates on the way. Her confederates then successfully steal the papers while Mata distracts Rosanoff's attention.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

She could not believe that any man who had been under her sway cuold ever bring himself to do her an injury. None ever had. Not long ago a French officer, whom she had beguiled into working with her had been caught in his treachery and tried. Adriana had been in a fever lest he should turn informer in exchange for a reprieve. He knew that Dubois was exerting every effort. But Mata Hari stood firm in her assurances that the man would not say a word to harm her. She was correct. The officer died without speaking.

Rosanoff would never betray her. Defend her, perhaps? She believed the mad Russian might do so and then shoot himself for having endangered his country by his infatuation. No, she believed that he would kill her and then himself. In any case, he would surely kill himself in the horror and agony of his disillusion. She would not blame him if he killed her.

This took only a few instants and then the flash went out and she heard the slightest of sounds which confirmed her impression that the men were going . . . had gone.

The point of her cigarette was like a tiny red eye afloat in the blackness and Rosanoff's, beside it, made a twin glow that bobbed up and down with the motion of his lips. The poor young Russian had been making plans to which she had doubtless replied after a fashion for he seemed to have got her consent.

"We'll be rather poor for a long while, but some day I shall inherit all my uncle has, and then we'll be quite comfortable."

The darkness hid her smile as she replied, "Don't you think, darling, we might wait until the war is over?"

"No—I don't. I can't have you going about all sorts of places—with other men. . . . You must see that."

What plan had she agreed to, exactly? She was sure she hadn't the slightest idea.

"Of course I see that," she said a trifle dryly.

"You darling! I can't believe you are really here beside me in my own place—that you are really going to belong to me . . . forever."

So she had promised to belong to him forever. Well, that was quite a customary promise and nothing at which to demur, only she had the feeling that somewhere in the few minutes that had passed she had made an abstraced reply to some other query that was not quite so usual.

"It's almost too wonderful to be real!"

The danger gave a low laugh, drowsy, almost tender.

"I'm very real . . . See . . . "

The two points of light moved nearer and in a little while described similar arcs as they were cast aside on the tray.

The next morning, Mata Hari was the first to rise. It was just past dawn when she got up to remove the ringing telephone instrument from its stand and thus to still it. She guessed that Rosanoff's instructions were already on the way and this might be a means of delaying them. During the night Adriana's men would have been busy photographing the documents, decoding them, copying the most important extracts. Her work was done. Shubin's defection was a pity in a way because if he could not be cajoled out of his resolution—and, of course, their quarrel last night had not made this easier—she would have to find some other means of getting the information with which he had been able to provide her. On the other hand, she could not regret his change of heart. To get the papers unknown to Rosanoff had proved a much more thrilling episode than to have had them passed ovr to her by Shubin.

She went to see whether they had been returned. As she stepped into the living room, she met face to face the man who had been in the act of replacing the portfolio. By the tautness of his lips, his eyes, the jerk he had made just before he realized it was she, she knew that his hand was on the gun in his pocket. If it had been Rosanoff——

He passed her a slip on which Mata Hari read: "At nine. The Champs Elysees" in Adriana's handwriting. She nodded and returned it and on the man's exit began to dress with great dispatch. She felt sleepy, hurry and unbrushed. Dear me! it was a pity the young man hadn't an extra toothbrush. An ikon, but no extra toothbrushes.

And then, about that ikon. The Madonna's white face stared at her humbly from the wall. He had his silly eternal lamp! But she was not without her own superstitions and remembering that she always kept in her apartment, and a Javanese saying that she whispered to herself before she did her dance, and others of the same nature—she was seized with compunction. It wasn't that she wanted to have anything happen to the young Russian. She thought, I shouldn't have made him put out that lamp. No. That wasn't really necessary.

In turning away from the mirror, after pulling her little velvet cap firmly over her hair, she backed into a table and sent a tobacco jar crashing to the floor. She could hardly contain a cry. Damn the luck! After all this trouble, to have awakened him!

But no, the poor devil was sleeping through it all, with an arm under his heand and his hair all tousled over his forhead. It was a touching sight, she reflected, with some irony and yet with the pity which a sleeping person, deaf to all harm and unable to defend himself, engenders. Having meant to make her escape with

MINNA GOMBELL in Fox Pictures

Cinema Calendar

for Grand, Rialto and Royal

AT THE GRAND

SATURDAY, SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Presenting, "REBECCA OF SUNNYBROOK FARM," with Marion Nixon and Ralph Bellamy. Escape from reckless, ruthless rackets and sordid crooks . . . . tinseled women and beady-eyed gigolos . . . into this glorious romance of honest lovers . . . as refreshing as a mountain breeze. Get happy wtih these lovers. Thrill to the joy of these happy sweethearts who won over the town gossips when they lost their hearts to each other.

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Presenting, "BACHELOR'S AFFAIRS," with Adolph Menjou, Minna Gombell, Arthur Pierson and Joan Marsh. A pulsating platinum blonde lured him to the altar—but the halter broke. She lured him into double harness but he kicked over the traces. Adolphe Menjou is a howl as a gay old dog. He woke up to find his dream girl was a headache. There wasn't a kick in a carload of his kisses—but his bank roll packed a wallop.

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY: Presenting, "MAN WANTED," with Kay Francis, Kenneth Thompson and David Manners. No girl with leap year ideas can afford to miss the first Warner Bros. picture starring the screen's most beautiful siren and a fair creature recognized as Hollywood's best dressed woman. Not recommended for innocent young girls.

AT THE RIALTO

NOW PLAYING: presenting, "STEADY COMPANY," with Norman Foster, June Clyde and Zasu Pitts. A boy with a wallop. A girl with a heart. A love story of the city with struggling youth battling upward. A romance of "just folks" —like you and you and you. A picture to make your pounding heart keep pace with its throbbing humanity. She started in a Rolls Royce and finished in a truck. And then she was keeping steady company. You'll find "STEADY COMPANY" a sure cure for what ails you.

SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Presenting, "MERRILY WE GO TO HELL," with Sylvia Sidney, Fredric March, Adrianne Allen, "Skeets" Gallagher and others. "MERRILY WE GO TO HELL" is an adaption of Cleo Lucas' "best seller" novel, "I, JERRY, TAKE THEE, JOAN." Love can cheapen as well as beautify. Here is a picture that is a vindication of every woman that ever loved. Romance that starts in fun . . . . must it end in unhappiness?

TUESDAY ONLY: Presenting, "FREAKS," with Wallace Ford and Lelia Hyams. Harry Earles, the famous midget of "THE UNHOLY THREE," is really the inspirer of "FREAKS," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's bizarre mystery of the sideshow. After "THE UNHOLY THREE," Tod Browning, the director, tried to think up a picture in which Earles could play a leading role . . . . and hit on "FREAKS."

WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY: Presenting, "WEEK ENDS ONLY," with Joan Bennett and Ben Lyon. She lived two lives. Friday to Monday she was entertaining and ornamental at a rich man's parties. Tuesdays and Thursdays she was a poor artist's inspiration. Her system worked until she got her dates mixed. Love wasn't in her contract as a paid guest. But could she leave it out?

FREDRIC MARCH
with Sylvia Sidney in Paramount's
"Merrily We Go to Hell"

HIGHLIGHTS FROM "MERRILY WE GO TO HELL"

Two stars of major brilliance!

Sylvia Sidney and Fredric March shine together in a drama of tense realism.

A drama depicting reckless modern youth—burning life swiftly—laughing uproariously — dissipating thoughtlessly.

Youth with everything to win—flaunting conventions—playing with love—gambling with destiny.

Here is a drama in which Fredric March, a master artist, portrays the devastating scourge of a careless appetite for carousing. He stakes talent, love and happiness against the vicarious pleasures of riotous living—then near tragedy jerks him back to sanity.

Love enters the story adroitly. In callow youth March falls in love with a girl. It was a transient affair, but it raised in his mind an ideal, which in later years complicates his marital life with Sylvia Sidney—and almost leads to tragedy. And thus unfolds the vivid drama of a love triangle interspersed with humor, wild iving, pathos and a gripping climax.

Sylvia Sidney gives a splendid portrayal of the young wife who reverses her own headstrong course, and valiantly fights to stem the course of her husband's irresponsible life. Her final act of tragic portent definitely establishes herself as the primary interest in his life, rather than the false idealism born of an early infatuation.

Adrianne Allen, glamorous blond beauty of the English stage, who recently featured in the Broadway stage show, "Cynara," plays the siren role with the subtle effectiveness of a trained artist. A new face on the American screen, attractive and intriguing, with a charm that's distinctly English.

Sylvia Sidney, in "Ladies of the Big House" demonstrated a surprising capacity to portray intense emotionalism. Her work in this picture of the screen's outstanding feminine promptly raised her to the front rank talent. Her recent work as feminine lead in "The Miracle Man" further demonstrates her strength and versatility in roles of stirring power. Her fan mail is one of the largest in Hollywood's stellar colony, and shows her to be a distinctly talented star.

Bellamy "Act" Is Detec- ed ByMarian Nixon

It was Marian Nixon who succeeded in seeing through a very clever idea of Ralph Bellamy's by which he sought to impress her with his knowledge when they began filming "Rebecca Of Sunnybrook farm." It was their first picture together, and also the beginning of their acquaintance.

Bellamy, realizing that he would better understand Marian's interpretation of "Rebecca" if he understood her personally, racked his brian for a week for a way to capture her interest. When the company arrived in Santa Cruz, where the exterior scenes of the picture were made, Bellamy hit upon the idea of escorting Marian on a visit to the big trees, which he had heard her say she had never seen.

Accordingly, he slipped away during the first afternoon and spent over two hours with the guide, listening to and memorizing the historic and interesting details of each of the giant redwoods. Then, on the next afternoon, he offered to act as host to Marian, Director Alfred Santell, and a party composed of other membres of the cast. In the grove, Bellamy stopped before each tree and proceeded to rattle off facts and data about it, all the while keeping a careful eye on Marian to note her reaction.

She Consults Guide

True enough, Miss Nixon was absorbing every word Bellamy said; but she, too, has an alert mind, and her long experience with actors has taught her to recognize a "performance" when she sees one. And this, most decidedly, was a "performance."

Without saying anything of her suspicions, Marian dropped behind and began to walk with the guide.

"Did he really study and learn about these trees in a book," she asked sweetly and with all innocence "or has he been here before?"

"Why, he was here all afternoon, yesterday. I thought you knew,' replied the unsuspecting guide.

Marian rejoined the group of listeners to Bellamy's "spiel," this time with a sparkle in her own eyes.

When the visit was over and everyone else was praising Bellamy for his amazing knowledge of the gigantic sequoias, he turned expectantly for Marian's opinion.

"Was that a five, or a ten, you gave your friend, the guide, yesterday afternoon?" she asked naively.

MATA HARI

all possible speed and no farewell she took the time to write two or three notes before she found one that was graceful enough. "It is morning now and I have come to my senses. I will not see you again." No. That one she destroyed because it was so brutal. No more harshness like that of yesterday. After all she would never see him again and he had done her a favor, if he did not know it.

When she at last took her departure she left one line behind her. "The shortest roads are the sweetest."

And another thing—she came back from the door to relight the Madonna lamp.

The fresh early morning air woke her up thoroughly. It was delicious to be alive, pleasant to have the consciousness of a difficult job well performed. At her house she had her breakfast and changed her clothes, and on the stroke of nine, was driving in her car along the Champs Elysees.

Adriana affected not to notice her until she had called to him several times, and then to be surprised. Indeed, they chatted, he on the curb, she from her car, so that anyone could hear them.

"How do you happen to be about so early in the morning, my dear?"

"A rehearsal. No one thinks I ever work, but I do. I am planning some new dances."

Meanwhile, they were watching to see if anyone had taken notice of them. There were not a great many passersby on the avenue at this hour. An officer turned to stare at the well-known face of Mata Hari. But there was nothing to fear from him; he was only curious.

"If you're going my way, I'll drop you."

"That will be very nice of you." drawled Adriana as he stepped into the limousine and it moved off.

No Fish Story

Above you see Mrs. Patrick J. McNulty, holding the giant rattle snake killed in Florida. The snake came near biting Mrs. McNulty, and but for the timely interference of a man near by, would have been bitten. The snake had 19 rattles.

BY AL DURDEN

The rattlesnake is probably the most poisonous reptile that inhabits North America at the present time. Unless first aid is administered at once the results of its bite are fatal. The one redeeming feature of this reptile is the fact that the rattlesnake always gives a warning with its whirring rattlers before striking the death blow. In most cases the victim becoming excited at the deadly warning will dash wildly within reach of the dreaded fangs, and the speed of the reptile's strike is second only to chained lightning.

A few weeks ago Mrs. Patrick J. McNulty of Fort Benning was visiting her mother at Lutz, Florida. While walking in an orange grove near the house one afternoon she was startled by the warning whirr of a rattlesnake. At first the sound seemed to come from beneath her feet. Mrs. McNulty stood perfectly still for a moment while she looked to find where the reptile was. She finally discovered him coiled under a small bush a few feet away. She lost no ime in moving in the opposite direction and calling for help. The accompanying picture shows Mrs. McNulty with the reptile after its head had been severed. It was one of the largest ever killed in that section of the country and had 19 rattles.

The rattlesnake is found throughout the United States. It belongs to the family of the Viperine snakes, called the Crotalidae, the face is marked with a large pit or depression on each side, between the eye and nostril. This dreaded reptile is a native of North America, and is remarkable for the singular termination to the tail from which it derives is popular name.

At the extremity of the tail are a number of curious, loose horny structures formed of the same substance as the scales and varying in number according to the size of the reptile. It is now generally considered that the number of joints on the "rattle" is an indication of the age of the reptile, a fresh joint being gained each year immediately after the change of skin and before it goes into winter quarters.

There is however another opinion that exists among the less educated which gives the rattlesnake the vindictive spirit of the North American Indian, and asserts that it adds a new joint to its "rattle" whenever it has slain a human being, thus bearing on its tail the fearful trophies of its prowess as the Indians wore the scalps of their slain foes.

When in repose, the rattlesnake usually lies coiled in some suitable spot, with his head lying flat, and the tip of its tail elevated in the middle of the coil. Should it be irritated by a passenger, or feel annoyed or alarmed, it instantly communicates a quivering movement to the tail, which causes the joints of the rattle to shake against each other, with a peculiar skirring riffle very much like the sound of the escaping steam of a railway engine.

The rattlesnake is slow and torpid in its movements and seldom attempts to bite unless it is provoked, even suffering itself to be handled without avenging itself. When about to inflict the fatal blow the reptile seems to swell with anger, its throat dilating, and its whole body rising and sinking as if inflated by a bellows. The tail is agitated with increasing vehemence, the rattle sounds its threatening war note with a sharper riffle, the head becomes flattened as it is drawn back ready for the stroke, and the whole creature seems a very incarnation of deadly rage. Yet, even in such moments, if the intruder withdraw, the reptile will gradually lay aside its angry aspect, the coils settle down in their places the flashing eyes lose their lustre, the rattle becomes stationary, and the serpent sinks back into its previous state of lethargy.

It is rather curious that the rattlesnake varies much in its powers of venom and its irritability of temper according to the season of the year. During the spring months it will seldom attempt to bite, and if it does strike a foe, the poison is comparatively mild in its effect. But after August, and before it seeks its winter quarters, the rattlesnake is not only more fierce than at any other time of the year, but the venom seems to be of more fearful intensity, inflicting wounds from which nothing escapes with life.

The rapidity of the effect of the rattler's bite depends necessarily on the part which is bitten. Should the points of the fangs wound a moderately large vein or artery, the venom courses swiftly through the blood and the victim dies within a few minutes. But if by chance the fang should pierce some fleshy or muscular part of the body, the poison does not have such rapid effect, and the injured may be saved by timely administration of powerful remedies. There seems to be no specific remedy for the bite of this reptile, as the effects vary accordingly to the individual who happens to be bitten, and the state of health he sufferer may be at the time. Immediate suction, however, and the unsparing use of the knife, appear to be the most efficacious means of neutralizing the poison and strong ammonia and oil have been employed with good results.

The general color of the rattlesnake is pale brown. A dark streak runs along the temples from back of the eyes, and expands at the corner of the mouth into a large spot. A series of irregular dark brown bands are drawn across the back, a number of round spots of the same hue are scattered along the sides, upon the nape of the neck and back of the head.

Rattlers are to be found throughout this section of the country. Several large reptiles have been killed on the Fort Benning reservation. A few months ago a soldier was bitten by a rattlesnake while the troops were on maneuvers at Benning, and only prompt work saved the man's life. In this case the wound was ripped open with a knife and then two young lieutenants took turns at sucking the venom from the wound. The officers were later cited for this remarkable piece of work in saving a life.

Double Wind-Up Shows At Arena For Third Time

Tuesday night brings together a large portion of the Johnson clan in Doughboy Stadium. These fights are expected to give the fans even more scrapping, (if that be possible), than the last card held at Benning.

In the top ten rounder of the double-wind-up affair, Ching Johnson will go to war with Bull Johnson, Atlanta bulldog of no mean ability. Ching is a hard hitter, and tough. His defeat at the hands of Frankie Edgren has not served to slow him up in the least; if anything making him pack on more steam and power in his training. Ching looks good now, and by Tuesday night should be in the pink of condition.

These two boys are both in for the hardest fight of their ring history. They both know the other can hit, and that it will go to the man who pushes over the most and hardest punches who will be on his feet at the end of about the sixth round. Both are young, tough and willing to fight, and should keep the fans on their feet for the length of the fight.

In the first ten rounds of the night, Earl Johnson of Miami will clash horns with no less personage than Tom Blanton of Birmingham. What this Slagtown mauler holds to make him think he can win over the hard hitting Earl will be displayed that night. Many experts give the Birmingham youth the edge in the scrapping, but on the other hand sage old heads bobble in disapproval. They claim that Blanton will not have the chance of a feather in a whirlwind with this fellow Earl Johnson on his neck.

So you can easily gather that this melee will be a bang-up affair. Don't bet your money on either, for it looks as though the judges will have a hard time of it in giving the decision. A lucky blow may end the matters early in the fight, however, but which lad will be on the receiving end is another story.

None of the boys on the card are over the age of twenty-one, and have a great deal of experience behind them. Some already have reached the stage of being classified as veterans and will be able to show the fans ring generalship seldom seen at Benning.

Since showing at Benning some four weeks ago, Bunker Hill and J. C. Sewell have revamped and reorganized their feud on the lines of modified murder. Sewell took the nod over Hill in their last battle, and it has served to rumple the complacence of Mr. Hill no end.

He swears revenge is to be his this time and that Mr. Sewell will pack a sore chin for months after he gets rid of him. On the other hand, Sewell is of the opinion, "Once a dud, always a dud," and is out to prove that his line of thinking is right. These two boys will travel over the six round route, or less.

Set Record in Gold Cup Classic

The Delphine IV, owned by Horace Dodge is shown with her pilot, Bill Horn, of Newport News, Va., and Mechanic McKenzie, after their victory in the annual Gold Cup Regatta, America's speedboat classic, at Montauk, Long Island. The Delphine set a new mark of 58.06 miles an hour in winning the classic. Inset shows C. F. Chapman (right), chairman of the American Speedboat Association, presenting the trophy.

Twenty-Ninth Infantry Will Hold Annual Swimming Meet At Russ Pool

Beginning tomorrow morning at 9:15, the Twenty-ninth Infantry will hold its annual swimming meet at Russ Pool. Three battalions of the Pride of the South Regiment will be entered in the events, and some good swimming will be offered the lovers of that sport.

Speedy swimmers will match their speed with one another, while the distance swimmers will match both speed and endurance to see who will take home the coveted trophy. Divers will exhibit their wares to a fare-thee-well, with no slouchy divers competing.

During the past year quite a number of excellent divers have been developed in the Doughboy regiment, and this phase of the meet will attract quite a bit of attention.

The Second Battalion is picked to win over the other two battalions of the regiment, but will have no walk away in the meet. These doughboys are out after one another's throat, and there will be plenty of spray flying in the contests.

The following bulletins, published at Headquarters, 29th Infantry, under date of August 9, 1932, and signed for the C. O. 29th Inf. by the Adjutant, is reproduced for the information and guidance of those concerned:

A Regimental Swimming Meet will be held at Russ Pool, Saturday, August 20, 1932, at 9:15 a. m. A trophy will be awarded winning Battalion. Prizes will be awarded winners of each event. Competition is restricted to enlisted men.

The events for the meet and the order in which they will be run as follows:

400 yard relay, 100 yard breast stroke, 50 yard free style, 400 yard free style, 100 yard back stroke, 100 yard free style, fancy diving, 200 yard free style, 300 yard medley relay.

The conduct of the meet will be governed by the rules of the A. A. U. except as noted below. Competitors are limited to three individual events.

The medley relay will cover a 300 yard course, three men to a team, each man to swim 100 yards. For the first 100 yards the breast stroke will be used, for the second 100 yards the back stroke will be used, and for the final 100 yards any stroke other than the breast or back stroke may be used.

The diving will consist of seven dives by each entry, the four dives prescribed below and any other three dives that the entry may elect.

Prescribed dives: plain front or swan, back, running forward jack knife, back jack knife.

Points will be awarded as follows: Individual events; 1st—10 points; 2nd—6 points; 3rd—2 points.

Radium Springs Play To Begin

RADIUM SPRINGS, Ga., August 19—In less than a week Radium Springs will be the mecca for more than 200 of the leading golfers in the southeast, and plans for the sixth annual Radium Springs invitation tournament August 24-27 are moving steadily forward under the supervision of Hugh Moore, widely known golf

Final Plans Made For Golf Tourney

Final arrangements have been made in connection with the Enlisted Men's Golf Tournament to be held on the Officer's Club course during next week and the week following. The flights have all been arranged, and the qualifying scores will all be in during the later part of the week, Sunday closing most of the qualifying rounds.

The tournament will be played under the customary handicap rules, hereby making the competition keen throughout. Sergeant Larry Mitzen has been very instrumental in the forming of the club, and states that he expects to see the interest to pick up during the progress of the tournament.

The Officer's Club has limited the number in the club to fifty, and at present, they carry thirty-two on their rolls. This will enable eighteen more of the followers of the Scottish pastime to enter into the competitions which are expected to wax hot ere the club reaches its first anniversary.

Prizes will be given the winners in each flight, as will also be given the runner-up in each flight. Low medalist will be rewarded in the qualifying rounds, while a consolation trophy will be played for. A handsome trophy will be given the winner of the tournament, which is something to look forward to.

Those already belonging to the club and will play in the tournament are listed below:

Sgt. Joseph Biando, Pvt. Hammond D. Caldwell, Sgt. L. N. Chitwood, Cpl. Marvin B. Cook, Roy Dotson, Sgt. E. A. Dowling, Cpl. H. L. Ellis, Sgt. Harry M. Foster, Cpl. Jack B. Gibney, Sgt. James M. Hamilton, Sgt. J. R. Holihan, Sgt. Dewey Klenn, Cpl. B. C. Mercer, Sgt. R. W. Miller, Sgt. Lawrence Mitzen, Sgt. Marcus O. O'Neal, Cpl. Thomas P. Reaves, Sgt. W. B. Safford, Sgt. Sidney S. Sprague, Cpl. Edwin D. Steyerman, Sgt. G. E. Still, Cpl. W. C. Wright, Sgt. B. Silvermaster, Sgt. E. C. Davis.

WE NOTICE THAT First Sergeant Norbert L. Craine is now confined in the station hospital. Wonder if the little Austin has run down his throat? You know he went up there with a sore throat, and the doctors might find one there.

DURING HIS ABSENCE in the hospital, Sergeant Frank Ryles is acting First Sergeant of Company "H," and making a very nifty job of it at that. All the boys like Frank, which makes his job all the more pleasant. Power to you, Four Eyes.

NOW THESE FISH stories are something of another color. Sergeant A. L. Bagley comes to us about a tale concerning a fishing trip out to Fry Lake. He tells us that he caught a nice two foot . . . alligator. He even went so far as to tell us that he had the 'gator to prove it by.

* * *

THEN WE WENT to him for the proof, but lo! and behold. Said 'gaitor had made his get-away two days previous to our visit. Don't try to spoof us, Tolbert, fish stories never ring true.

POPULAR OFFICERS LEAVE FOR NEW STATION

Maj. Howland first came to Fort Benning in 1922 as a student in the Company Officers' course. His second tour at Fort Benning began in 1928 following his graduaiton from The Tank School at Fort George O. Meade, Md., when he was assigned to the First Tank Regiment.

Captain John P. Horan, who has been stationed at Fort Benning for the past four years, first as student officer, and later as commander of Co. F 29th Infantry, left the post on Tuesday for Fort Leavenworth, Kansas where he will be enrolled as a student at The Command and General Staff School. Captain Horan is the author of a set of provisional machine gun company inspection regulations which was used in 1918 by several combatant divisions. He is also the author of a brochure on company mobilization methods based upon practical tests in this subject conducted by the 29th Infantry.

UPSETS FLY FAST IN POST LEAGUE

Medicos Making Sensational Comeback

BY AL DURDEN

During the past ten days the Fort Benning fans have been treated to up-sets, hurlers' duels, slugging matches and umpire chasing. The First Bats started things humming last Saturday when they humbled the Kellys, 7 to 4. This was a corking good game with the Kellys out in front until the eighth frame when the Irish went on a rampage to hit every thing thrown their way and score a total of six runs before they were finally headed.

The Special Units handed the Gunners a 4 to 1 lacing. Gardner was in top form and allowed the Gunners only 3 hits. Jakie Morris twirled good ball for the losers but miscues back of him was responsible for his defeat.

Bill Swantic twirled the Tankers to a 3 to 1 victory over the Greencords in one of the neatest hurling duels of the season. Bill was in great form and really shaded "Wee Grady" for first honors.

The Medicos walked on the lowly Gunners to the tune of 8 to 4. Gilbert held the Gunner sluggers well in check allowing six bingles. Cherry was knocked out in the fourth frame. Odom relieved him and held the Medicos in check during the remainder of the game. With a little more experience Odom will be a big help to the Gunner twirling staff.

Two old rivals, the First Bats and Terrible Tankers, battled furiously in a nip and tuck affair that finally ended with the First Bats riding on the big end of a 7 to 6 score.

Three runs in the second inning proved enough for the Special Units to defeat the Greencords, 3 to 1. Both Zuke and White hurled brilliant baseball but the Spareparts stuck stubbornly to their two run lead and refused to be bothered.

The Greencords came back strong against the Irish and handed them their second defeat of the season, 4 to 2. Tolle out hurled Pat Stevens in another diamond feud to take the victory.

The Medicos continued to hold the Indian sign over the Kellys, trimming them 5 to 4, in a fast hard fought affair. Foster traveled the full route for the Kellys but Gilbert gave way to Barnes when he injured his leg in the sixth frame.

The Tankers jumped on the Gunners to lace out 14 base hits and score 14 runs. The Tanker sluggers poled out four triples and three doubles during this barrage. Red Lindsey whiffed 10 Gunners and also smacked out a triple. Duffer Hull hit two triples and two singles in his four trips up.

The Medicos are leading the chase at this writing but as the pack turns into the home stretch there are many things that may happen.

GOLFERS TO GATHER AT RADIUM SPRINGS

professional, who recently assumed charge of the Radium course.

Under Moore's supervision the beautiful 18-hole layout is being made more attractive than ever before in its history. The fairways and greens are cut and trimmed daily and the heavy undergrowth in the deep rough has been cleared. New grass has come through on the greens and the rolling, sloping putting surfaces resemble green carpets in the center of Mother Nature. Bobby Jones, king of golfers, said that Radium's course was one of the best designed courses he has ever played on, and it bids fair now of becoming one of the country's most beautiful courses.

Golfers from six states will compete in the coming invitation tournament, Floyd (Bubber) Alford, manager, announces. Alford is in charge of advance reservations for the meet, and he is daily receiving a large number of inquiries from followers of the old Scottish pastime from Tennessee, the Carolinas, Alabama, Mississippi and different points in Georgia.

Radium's invitation tournament has been termed the "grand finale" in southern golfdom circles, as it provides the player with an opportuniy of playing in one last big meet before he puts away his war clubs for the winter season. Increasing numbers of leading amateur golfers are taking advantage of this opportunity each year, and present indications are that the largest field in Radium Spring's history will compete for coveted honors at the coming tournament.

Committees in charge of the tournament plans are leaving nothing undone to make the visiting golfers' stay at Radium Springs a pleasant one. When not engaged in playing golf the participants can take a swim in the radioactive waters of the beautiful Radium Springs, indulge in a tennis match, partake in a trapshoot at the attractive Radium gun traps, said to be the most beautiful in Georgia, take a canoe ride down the Radium creek, play cards in the casino lounge room, and dance in the casino ballroom. It will be anything but a lonesome time for all who attend.

The course will open for practice to tournament contestants without charge beginning Saturday, August 20. The entrance fee for the entire tournament is $5. and caddy fare for all rounds will be 65 cents for 18 holes. The golf calendar calls for the qualifying rounds of 18 holes for flights of 16 on Wednesday, August 24. A medal will be awarded the low medalist. First round matches will begin Thursday, and play will continue through Saturday with the lowest 16 in the qualifying round constituting the championship bracket that will fight for the championship now held by Howard Lilliston, of Albany.

ing and stirring. Wooden forks, too, are useful.

MAKING A CABINET

Dish mops should be clean. Replace as soon as old or worn. If you haven't a food chopper, invest in one. It has unlimited uses as you will soon discover, when making rissoles from left-overs. Get a palette knife or spatula—grand for turning foods in frying pan or on griddle, and two strokes with its thin, flexible blade will clean a mixing bowl.

Stock up with dishes and glass towels, and keep a supply of paper towels. You'll find many uses for them.

Organize your kitchen. If you haven't a kitchen cabinet, create a unit that can be used as such. Put an old kitchen table in a convenient corner and group shelves on the walls around it. Saucepans can hang from its sides or from the shelves. Many an old book case has been pressed into kitchen cabinet service with excellent results.

SGT. MATTHEWS WINS SUBSCRIPTION PRIZE

Sergeant Felix G. Matthews, Supply Sergeant, Regimental Machine Gun Company, 29th Infantry, is the first of the Fort Benning personnel to win one of the subscription prizes offered by the Herald for selling fifty subscriptions. Sgt. Matthews will be given a fountain pen and pencil desk set as the prize for his work.

Sergeant Matthews has won honors before at Benning. In 1928, while he was in Company "H," 29th Infantry, his cart won first place in the machine gun cart competition and repeated this feat several times. This was the main event, in the competition at that time. Sgt. Matthews enlisted on October 27, 1925 and was then assigned to "H" company, 29th. He was appointed corporal on June 16, 1927 and Sergeant on July 23, 1930. He was assigned to the Regimental Machine Gun Company when it was formed and has been with it ever since.

He is a native of Anderson, Tennessee, but was born in Tracy City, in the same state, on February 18, 1907. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Matthews who are now residents of Anderson. Sgt. Matthews is another example of the value of the Army in training the men of the country for both military and civil life and has made the statement that he intends to spend the "next twenty-three years of his life in the Army." Some record!

will furnish high class entertainment for six rounds in the first fight of that length. Milford will be remembered as the boy who took the lead from Seely, the "Sag," after Sag had won twelve in a row, Dave came very near to scoring a kayo over the husky Pill Roller in their fight. Fighting hard, Seely was unable to take the lead from the gritty Milford, and lost the decision.

Fans will remember Liddell as the scrappingest piece of fighting machinery seen in this neck of the woods in a long time. He is the type who will tear into a circle saw, if he thinks he has a shadow of a chance to come out breathing. This fight will no doubt stand you on your illustrous left ear.

The two four rounders picked for the card will feature to fast bouts. The top four-rounder will present Tony Viggins and Walkaway Tillman, two boys who have not shown heretofore. Viggins is the type fighter who knows nothing but plug, plug, plug, while Tillman is just what his name implies . . . . He will walk away with anything that even looks as though it intends to interfere with him. He then starts in to take it apart to see what makes it tick.

The curtain raiser brings back our old friend, Dummy Nix, the fightingest deaf and dumb boy in the world. Nix is matched to meet Tut Tut Taylor, a stumbling block to most any prelim boy at Benning. If Taylor leaves his stage fright in the dressing room. he will be able to take Dummy. If he doesn't, then the birdies will sing for Mr. Taylor, for this boy Nix sure packs a mean wallop. # I. S. D.

"Dad" Richardson, our popular supply sergeant, recently returned from a forty-five days' leave to his home at Buffalo, New York. It was the first time that "Dad" has been away from the outfit in many moons and his return was gladly welcomed by the entire outfit.

Sergeant Jeffie O. Willingham, has deserted the ranks of the bachelor class and is now a settled married man. The wedding came as a big surprise to the many friends of Sgt. Willingham, as he had kept it a secret from his closest friends. Mrs. Willingham was formerly Miss Jimmie Lou Yarbrough of Columbus. The young couple is widely known and claims a host of friends in Columbus and Fort Benning. Their many friends join in wishing the best of luck and happiness in the future.

Sgt. Joh Booth and Corporal Brewer, are planning a trip to Alexander City, Alabama. There are no movies at Alex City and the fishing is poor down there, there can be but one attraction for this pair and that as usual is "The Ladies."

Brooks, latest outfield arrival, came through in a pinch against the First Bats and slammed out a double to send in a pair of runs. Myers has showed a nice game at first and in the outer garden. His stick work is not so good but he has ability. Hosterlee has shown well in the outfield and is also a corking good infielder. He gets power back of his drives and is due for base hits.

The outfit has grown so fast that it was necessary to move the orderly room over a couple of streets so that the staff could be in the middle of the activities.

Just a word. The I. S. D. staff under Sgt. Frank Smith, continues to keep things looking neat and clean around the area. Of course this takes plenty of work but work never hurt any one.

COMPANY "A"

Oh boy, "A" Company has two men in its midst that are very eccentric when it comes to the ladies. Both of them have a chronic case of that thing we call Squaw Trouble. Beau Brummel Johnson takes his case very easy, considering the atmosphere surrounding it.

The holy clergyman, "Loving Sam from Alabam," who stood his ground for about one enlistment, broke loose about ten months ago, bringing to light all his hidden thoughts about lovecraft. He once said he thought that the Company knew what he was talking about. The slogan is "smile and the world smiles with you; cry, and you cry alone." Our advice to you old boy is, don't make any more dashes until you are sure you are right. Your greatest enemy is jealousy, if you can't take don't give! So be calm, better luck next time.

We lose. When Lt. Pulsifer started out via airplane on his trip home, we predicted that he'd probably return by train. As a matter of fact, we offered a bet on it. And we lost, for the genial cigar-monger of the Club returned by one of the larger air transports, and got a big kick out of it, too.

SHRAPNEL BURSTS

One little boy nearly created havoc in Block 14 teaching his new dog to "play dead" when asked the question "would you rather be a doughboy or dead." He escaped with his life when he told the neighboring Captain that a snap of the fingers brought him back alive to the greatest Infantry School on Earth.

The basic officers have been diligently acquiring the technique, and probably the temperament of artists during the past week. From every hilltop, they have eagerly searched for hidden targets and viscous mils in an effort to piece together a recognizable panoramic sketch of unchanging scenery and blistering mirage.

If the present rush of business does not subdue, our lawyer is going to have to acquire a suite of rooms in a large office building with elevators and everything. We're grateful that the major part of his business comes from outside the battalion. Somehow we suspect that right now he wishes he had been born a brick layer or something.

BATTERY "A"

After four years of extensive, intensive and arduous duty the acting assistant Supply Sergeant, Battery Recorder, and Potentate Keeper of the Athletic Equipment has at last achieved his desire to wit: a Corporalship in the Galloping Artillery. Therefore Corporal North begs to announce to the World and Florida, that he is contented and that during leisure hours he will hold open house for all his friends at the New Artillery Barracks on First Avenue. But, that after having checked up on all Army Regulations and Training Regulations he can find no precedent where a Corporal who ranks him has the right to dispossess him of his room and refreshments on Saturday night.

Sgt. Gilbert: "Sgt. Brown I would like to be issued the largest watering trough in existence."

Sgt. Brown: "Why? Have you gone into the horse and mule business?"

Sgt. Gilbert: "No. But I must learn to swim so if you will issue me the trough I can learn at home."

The Wild Bull of the Everglades, Corporal May, received his discharge last Sunday and immediately set forth for the interior of Florida with the best of intentions to remain a civilian. Good luck Red, but be careful and do not become a squaw man.

We expect a wholesale weeping, wailing and gnashing of teeth in Columbus and vicinity this week for the sad and woeful news is that our extraordinary assistant cook, Pfc. Clanton is leaving all of his faithful and dear friends for the wild and wooly Philippines. His last will and testament reads as follows:

"Being of an incongruous mind I leave all my blonde friends to my esteemed colleague Daniel Boone, and to my buddy in crime, Corporal Brown, I leave the brunettes. May they never be lonesome nor without a telephone number. To District of Columbus Muscrove I leave all my superior rights to the day room telephone."

HEADQUARTERS BATTERY

Sgt. McCallum being on furlough up in New York, it falls on us to take over this scandal column.

It is with great pleasure that we take over his job as it will give us a chance to get even with him for some of the undue publicity he has been giving us.

Since he has been gone a lot of unpaid bills have been coming in daily, so we know that the rope man will be waiting to greet him when he returns.

Cpl. Cherry made a hurried trip to Griffin this month, from all reports in the Atlanta papers they had a very pleasant honeymoon trip. More power to Lyrup.

From the vicinity of 9th Street comes the report that Sgt. Dodd has been doing some fine relief work for the unemployed girls by buying several pairs of shoes, we know that they will be appreciated.

We wonder what Sgt. McLeod was doing in Albany payday night in a model T Ford.

Several reports have come in but nothing authentic.

Since the order came out requiring all men to go swimming we have discovered some exceptional aquatic stars in this battery.

Sgt. Phillips, Tate, Niblett and Fields were all outstanding swimmers and divers.

Too bad they were too late to get in the recent Olympic games.

Anyway, they will be a great help to the Bn. during the coming swimming meet.

Joe A. Galloway, of the Quartermaster Detachment, who, in Fort Benning is known as official day room orderly and chauffeur of the organization truck, and in the city of Columbus is recognized as man-about-town, has let it be known in a very forcible fashion that he owns his own clothes and has sufficient wearing apparel to fulfill his needs.

Recently Galloway, who, in addition to his numerous other duties and worries, handles the detachment tailor shop, attended a fight on the post in his own clothes. It has been proved beyond doubt that he possessed full rights to all the garments in which he was clad. But it so happens that a member of another organization, with whom Galloway had had some business relations in the tailor line, viewed Galloway at this fight in a coat that he thought must surely be his. He did not keep his thoughts to himself but expressed them.

Naturally this charge did not please the detachment's man-about-town. The entire cause of his ire was the hint that he did not have a wardrobe complete enough for his every need. It so happens that the charges were discovered to be all a mistake, and therefore the reputation of the detachment's connoisseur of women and epicurean living has been saved.

In this depression some queer things have happened, but the Hon. Willie C. Gordy, who is also at times called the Mighty Grumpy, has brought out possibly the most unusual result of the economic catastrophe. News boys these days are better off financially than great prize fighters, says Grumpy. Such is the result of the depression. The Mighty Gordy admits modestly that he is a great fighter, but he insists that he needs $1.80 much more than a newsboy does.

TOWN TOPICS

Not many of those at Benning now can remember the old days on the river, and our own memory is pretty hazy on the subject, but there are certain incidents of the river steamers trips up and down the Chattahoochee that still stand out clearly and distinctly.

The boats are practically all gone. The John W. Callahan Sr., the John W. Callahan, Jr., and the Chipola have ceased their thrashing up the shallow stretches for all time, and only the latter is still in commission. To those of us who love leisure, call it laziness if you will, there was nothing more ideal than the week's trip down the Chattahoochee to Apalachicola and back. The warm days, the moon-filled nights, or even the stormy times, all of them had a certain romance which has been eulogized many times in songs and stories of river-steamboat-travel, but which have to be experienced to be appreciated.

We recall one incident of the trip, which has been strengthened in our memory through many repetitions. The boat would be steaming leisurly along between green banks, with threads of waterfall veiled over by the maiden-hair fern on either side, when there would suddenly appear an alien color—a glaring white, someone's handkerchief—on the bank. Accordingly, the pilot swung the vessel over toward the prospective passenger and, amid a small flurry of excitement, the waver was taken aboard. This method of hailing the boats was common along the river, and almost invariably was effective. When it wasn't, the unlucky hopeful passenger was forced to wait for the next boat.

Another high spot of the journey was the house which stood in the middle of a broad field far down in the backwoods of Florida. What optimistic owner had built it, or who had lived in it, we never knew, and it was never occupied, as far as we could ever find out. The sinister aspect of the house, with its great staring windows and the quietness and darkness of the surrounding forest, seemed to make it a very appropriate place for the location of a murder plot, and it reacted accordingly with the passengers of the boat.

All of us have at one time or another ridden on a boat, and most of us will remember the appetizing meals which boats serve. Why only boats should serve the most attractive meals is a puzzle; perhaps they work on the principle that most of the passengers will not be able to eat after the first day out. At any rate, the Chattahoochee steamers were no exception to this rule, for the cooks on the boats were the best that could be obtained and they could certainly cook! In fact, the meals were the most important parts of the day in the routine of the life on the boats.

A thousand stories could be written about the steamboat days on the Chattahoochee, and many have been written, but none of them could possibly capture the glamour brought up by the sleepy motion of the boats, the roustabouts' chorus as they loaded fuel, the intricate beauties of the passing scenery, or the soft, warm nights on the deck of a slowly moving steamer far down in the deep wilds of the South.

Mollison's Westward Trans-Atlantic Solo Ranks Among Greatest Feats in Aviation History. British Air Ace Has Enviable Record of Successes.

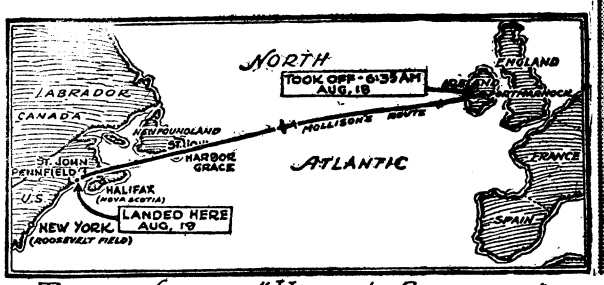
"HEART'S CONTENT"



TRAIL OF THE "HEART'S CONTENT"

MR. and MRS. J. A. MOLLISON.

When Captain James A. Mollison landed his tiny plane, romatically named "Heart's Content," at Pennfield Ridge, New Brunswick, after a 30-hour battle with the elements, the daring young Britisher had completed a feat that goes into aviation annals as one of the most notable in history—ranking with the flight of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh from New York to Paris. Mollison is the first man ever to make a solo flight westward across the vast wilderness of water, which proved the grave of many daring airmen who attempted the feat. The young flyer has many other records to his credit. In 1931 he flew from Australia to England in less than 9 days. And last March he made the dangerous flight from London to Capetown, South Afrca in 4 days, 19 hours. He is married to Amy Johnson, a celebrated aviatrix in her own right, holder of the distance record for women. Mrs. Mollison, or Amy Johnson, flew from England to Australia last year, a distance of 10,000 miles. She wanted to accompany her husband on his Atlantic flight, but hubby vetoed the idea. It is believed that it was to prevent her going that Mollison had emergency fuel tanks installed to take up all available space in the tiny craft. The action probably saved his life, for when he abandoned his plan of flying direct to New York and landed at Pennfield it was found that his gas was all but exhausted.

Tests Being Made To Improve Tanks

The speed, range of action and general fighting power of American army tanks will be greatly increased if experiments now being caried on by commercial automobile manufacturers lead to the production of a practical Diesel type of motor suitable for general automotive uses, according to Colonel William B. Wallace, chief ofthe tank section the Infantry School, who returned to Fort Benning yesterday after observing the production of the Packard and General Motors companies plants at Detroit.

Officials of the Packard plant discussed at length with Colonel Wallace their progress in the development of the Diesel engine as motive power for high speed, heavy cargo trucks. Models built in the companies' laboratories indicate that the problems are nearing solution and that the Diesel type of engine will soon be supplied generally to commercial automotive purposes.

Colonel Wallace's observations were based upon his official interest in the probable military value of the improved Diesel motor for the propulsion of military vehicles or weapons and paricularly high speed tanks, several types of which are now in the hands of troops at Fort Benning and are undergoing tests under the direction of the infantry board.

If the development of the Diesel motor advances sufficiently to make it practicable for commercial uses it

Tiny Plane Makes Epochal Flight Westward Across Atlantic From Europe

NEW YORK, August 25—When the tiny, silver gray Puss Moth plane of Captain James A. Mollison landed at Pennfield Ridge, about 500 miles from here after a 30-hour battle against the wild forces of nature that rule over the Atlantic, another notable achievement had been written into the annals of aviation—the first westward solo flight across the Atlantic had been successfully accomplished and the little craft, romantically named "Heart's Content", had entered the exclusive class of Lindy's "Spirit of St. Louis."

Although the flight over the North Atlantic has been made from the European side eight times in all, only on three of those occasions had even larger ships with relief pilots been able to make the trip—much more difficult than that from the west—without stops.

Many brave and expert flyers have gone down to their death in the vast wilderness of water while attempting the feat. Notable among these martyrs to progress were Nungesser and Coli, two French war heroes.

The first plane to make a successful non-stop flight from east to west was the Bremen in 1928, which Count Gunher von Huenefeld, Herman Koehl and their Irish companion, Colonel James FitzMaurice, flew from Portmarnock Ireland (also Mollison's point of departure), to Greenly Island, Labrador.

Interesting Map Shown At Post

A copy of a map of Chattahoochee County as it existed in 1869 is an interesting addition which was made this week to the historical records of Fort Benning through the courtesy of Miss Kate Rogers of Cusseta. Miss Rogers who is historian of Chattahoochee, and is engaged in preparing a history of the county, visited Fort Benning on Saturday to examine records at the post to assist in her historical research work. Sensing the historical value of the document, which has been in her possession for some time, Miss Rogers loaned it to the military authorities to be copied.

The map was "made by the authority of the state" by B. W. Frobel, superintendent of public works, in 1869. It is drawn to a scale of ninety chains to the inch, slightly more than one mile to the inch. Some of the principal roads of the county, according to a notation on the sheet, were plotted from "Buler's map of the state," while data defining the positions of others were furnished by James Castleberry, ordinary of Chattahoochee county in 1869. Conspicuously shown is the Federal Road, which was surveyed and improved in 1811 by Lieutenant James M. Luckett, U. S. Army, and with which are associated many incidents of historical significance in the development of Georgia from an English colony to a sovereign state. With the exception of a portion of the Lumpkin road and of the highway near Cusseta, few of

Tankers' March Begin Sept. 20

The Tank Batalion, comprising the Second Battalion, First Tank Regiment and Company "F-2," will leave Fort Benning, on September 20th for its annual practice march, which will take it, this year, to Jacksonville, Florida and will occupy a total of thirteen days. The Tankers will leave the post on the morning of the 20th and will go to their destination via Harmony Church, Albany, Ga., Valdosta, Ga., Lake City, Fla., stoppng at each of the above mentioned places. The return trip will bring them back to Benning by approximately the same route. The Battalion will cover a total of 635 miles on the trip.

While at Jacksonville, the visitors will be at Camp Foster, the camp of the Florida National Guard, about ten miles from the city. The camp is supplied with permanent electric lighted mess halls and kitchens. A concrete swimming pool is within one hundred yards and the reports from Florida announce good fishing from the camp dock. Transportation will be maintained daily from the camp to Jacksonville and salt-water fishing trips are being scheduled for the men.

Last year the unit made its trip to Pensacola, via Maxwell Field, Montgomery. The men were constantly entertained by the personnel of the Naval unit stationed there and made expeditions to the points of historical interest in the vicinity. The trip last year was made by motor transport, as will that of next month, but was 265 miles longer than the projected one Thirty motor vehicles were required for the transportation of the men and equipment.

As was the case last year, the unit will make a stopover at Albany, Ga. The people of that city were much impressed with the morale and bearing of the men of the Battalion and have extended a cordial invitation to them to make the second visit. The battalion will be in camp at Camp Foster for five days. The Tank Battalion is commanded by Major Allen E. Kingman, and Captain D. P. Spalding is in charge of arrangements for the trip.

Col. Peyton Coming To Benning Soon

Major General Ephraim G. Peyton, commander of the 30th National Guard Division, which comprises state troops of Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Tennessee, has completed the annual field training of his division and has submitted his resignation as major general to become effective August 31 preparatory to assuming the duties of executive officer at Fort Benning.

Colonel Peyton was given his assignment as senior instructor of the 30th National Guard Division on July 9, 1929 and later, by agreement between the governors of the four states whose troops form the division, was selected as its commanding general.

Accompanied by his family, Colonel Peyton is expected to arrive at Fort Benning soon after September 1 to familiarize himself with the duties of his new office, which he will assume upon the departure of Colonel Harry E. Knight, the present incumbent, about September 11.

White Marocain and Black Fox

Marocain, a successful fabric season after season, is ideal for the important dress or costume for either day or evening wear. It drapes beautifully, has good body and is especially nice for thin suits. To-day we show a most exquisite costume, grand for town, or for the country on a sunny day. It is in white marocain, and has a simple jacket with a puff at the elbow and a black fox border. The blouse has a surplice collar in gored sections. Paris favors white trimmed with black fox.

MATA HARI

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Mata Hari, famous dancer and enemy spy, undertakes to get some secret papers from her lover, Shubin, Attache of the Russian Embassy in Paris. But Shubin has been unnerved by a visit from Dubois, head of the French Secret Service, and refuses to discuss them. Learning that the papers are in the possession of a young aviator, Alexander Rosanoff, who is infatuated with her, the dancer goes to his rooms and makes love to him while her agents abstract the papers, copy them and return them at dawn. Mata Hari then steals away to meet Adriana, a fellow spy.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"I don't know why Adriana, but I still have the distinct feeling that I am being followed."

Mata Hari spoke in a quite casual tone, leaning back against the cushions of the limousine. The chauffeur was fashionably exposed to the weather without. Besides, he wasn't French, he was a Swiss and impersonal about the war.

"Yes?"

"Yes. I've seen no one, at least not since that night at the Pavilion, and yet——. By the way, nothing's happened there?"

"Nohing at all. Except a rather unpleasant incident last night. Carlotta committed suicide. In the dressing room. I think the girl must have been in love."

The dancer gave him a quick look, not without a trace of scorn. If he did not wish to confide in her, neither had he any reason to suppose she would be put off with such a transparent lie. She knew well enough that spies caught cheating their friends suffered the same fate as spies caught by the enemy.

"You don't trust me, do you?" she couldn't help saying.

"No. Nor any woman. Sooner or later, all of you lose your heads and get into trouble and for a nothing, too, for a man, for a fancy. And one day you'll do the same. You'll betray yourself; you'll betray me, for the excitement of the thing—and get

HEADQUARTERS BATTERY

Cpl. Hurst got discharged last week and was gone three days before he decided to come out and reenlist. His whereabouts during his time is unknown except for the fact that he was seen picking Jimson weeds for his girl, who it seems was troubled wtih asthma. He had so many of these said weeds in his car that it looked like a loaded hay float.

Cpl. Lee, who has never been known to go with a girl or even write to one, took a pass and journeyed up into the hills of Tenn. As soon as he got back he starts in writing to a fair damsel up there. We wonder what is the cause of all this change on his part. Anyway this is leap year, so Vester you should make the most of it.

BATTERY "A"

It is with regret that we lose one of the best Officers that we have had in "A" Battery in many years, Lieut. Phillip H. Draper, Jr., who shipped to France on the 17th. May he have the best of luck in learnng the French language, and the best wishes of every man in the organization goes with him.

Sgt. William L. Gilbert seems to think that the body is evidently heavier than water, because every time he gets in he heads for the bottom of the pool. But he has his friend Pvt. Hadley who comes to his rescue in the nick of time. "Soup," here's hoping you learn to swim.

BATTERY "C"

The gunners examinations are still the big thing in the battery. So far about twenty men have passed and another fifty ought to pass for the end of the month.

For some reason or other the gunners examinations are not receiving the interest they have had during previous seasons. Maybe the idea of no pay has something to do with this.

GUNBOTHAM'S SCHOOL DAZE

HOLE IN ONE

On Saturday afternoon Captain R. E. Vermette, pistol ace, poker shark and dean of local bridge players, garnered further laurels in the field of sport when he sank his tee shot on the 110 yard 4th hole of the new golf course. This first hole-in-one on the re-vamped course was witnessed by Captains Crim, Reynolds and Rooks.

Captain Vermette wears his new honors with becoming modesty and, save for a feverish glint in his eye, seems to have entirely recovered from the shock of achievement. Lady Ann Vermette, now a golf widow of the first rank, informed a representative of the press that her husband, under the stimulus of his recent feat, hopes soon to break 90.

During the absence of the conductor of the Flare we can't resist the temptation to muscle in on his favorite hunting ground, the Daily Bulletin. We salute the unknown soldier who last Saturday was frank enough to write the following theatre announcement:

"THE MOUTHPIECE"—Poison; Enough to kill a dozen men.

And his "ARROWSMITH"—the story of a doctor beautifully done by Ronald Colman packed the house with gold-bricks looking for a new gag to pull on Major Patterson.

One morning last week when Harrison's Battalion was sweating in the dust of Shelton Range all three lieutenants ran lates. The major, considering his former post as sheriff of Wahiawa and Mayor of Hiliewa, showed plenty of the milk of human kindness. Fitzgibbons, just returned from the Land of his Fathers and the Blarney Stone, got away with the old gag about the alarm clock that didn't go off. Jordan, ex-M. P. who still wears crossed pistols to help him out of tight places, explained that he shut off his alarm in his sleep. The third culprit, thinking fast, said that he'd put his clock on the other side of the room so that he couldn't choke it off, and, by golly, it was so far away that he couldn't hear it.

Came the dawn—the next one—and our three young soldiers discovered with high elation that the major was plenty late. In fact, another three winks would have made it an absence.

"You think you used up all the alibis, huh? Well, listen to this one. Late last night my little girl came in and said "Daddy, I've been fixing your alarm clock." She fixed it all right—for seven o'clock. And if I catch any of you bachelors trying to get away with a story like that . . !"

"HOW THE BUDGET WAS BALANCED"

On the sixth of July, in the Third Year of Depression, the price of stamps leaped to three cents. On the ninth of July a young Benningite who had been rendered non compos mentis by the rigors of a Georgia summer, and had missed too many boats anyhow, lapsed long enough to place a two cent stamp on the place where a three cent stamp should be. The envelope was addressed to a prominent post activity, and its contents were destined to slip under the wire on that holiest of days, the Tenth of the Month.

Our young officer, remembering the disgrace that had fallen on the head of the Walter Winchell of the Flare, checked loose ends, found all bills paid, and headed blithely north—where newspapers carry something more than obituaries, and bootleggers something more than corn.

On the twentieth of July there ar arrived in the wilds of Maine an official looking envelope. The local postmaster and the town's other five citizens, gathered at the store to see the train come in (and to read the post cards for delivery) were much intrigued.

The arrival of another franked envelope on the morning of the twenty-first plunged the town in a fever of exctement. Conjectures were many—one old guy (fishing) wagered that the addresse was none other than Mayor Walker's missing secretary, Mr. Sherwood.

Our hero drew his mail importantly, and, under cover of darkness, replied by indorsement hereon.

August ninth found him searching with Banker Willis for a certain cancelled check, that a laugh might be had at the expense of his inquisitors. The search failing, two new checks were written.

On August nineteenth was delivered—for 3 cents—an envelope containing the harassed check of July ninth.

And we have decided that in the future all our bills will be paid by hand. Because, discounting personal mental anguish, we feel that the government hardly got a break—even if that one cent was run up 1,300 per cent.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

DIPHTHERIA, ITS PREVENTION

Each year at about this time we renew the campaign to prevent the disease diptheria. These days very few of us realize what a terrible disease it used to be. Only recently, in New Haven, Conn., there occurred the first death in four years from this disease. I quote what the mother of this dead boy has said: "He was such a strong, healthy little fellow, my baby boy. The nurses from the Board of Health urged many times that he be given the Schick Test and toxin-antitoxin, but Arthur was so strong and well I thought I was doing best for him by leaving well enough alone. Somehow I did not think of diphtheria as a danger. I had not heard of any cases or deaths. It did not seem so near as other diseases that children have. Now I know differently. Diphtheria is a horrible thing and my plea is to all mothers is that they have their little ones given protection."

All children six monhs of age or older should be given this protection. Practically all children under the age of five years are susceptible to diphtheria. They do not have to be Schick Tested before the preventive inoculations are given. With older children us both killed."

"Unless I kill you first," he finished evenly, opening his cigarette case and offering it to her.

She took one with a smile. It suited her quite well that Adriana should recognize the fact that they were instinctive antagonists. She had never been abe to think of him as a man and she knew that he never regarded her as a woman, so she excepted him from those men who had been charmed by her and could never afterwards harm her.

They were moving down the boulevards when Adriana slipped into her hand the thin sheet that had been one of the fruits of the night. She folded it quickly and thrust it into an opening in the seam of the lining of her sleeve.

"This, which I take to be the lists, is in a devilishly complicated code," he said. "I could make nothing of it last night. No doubt, Shubin has the key and can."

"If Shubin is ready to behave. I dare say you've heard he's had a visit from Dubois." Adriana nodded. "But I'll find a way. I've other means . . . And that will finish it."

"Yes—for the present. You did a good job last night, a pleasant one, too, I trust."

"Most unpleasant," stated the dancer.

"A lot of trouble for nothing, perhaps. Still, with proper treatment, that young Russian may prove useful."

"No," she replied, rather to her own surprise. "No—he—I believe he'd be too hard to manage."

"Don't tell me, my dear, that you would be unable to manage a young man who is obviously enamoured of you."

OLD MAP IS LOANED TO BENNING OFFICIALS

the routes shown on the sixty three year old map as principal roads remain as such today, and many of them have been almost entirely obliterated during the passage of six decades. Of the net-work of streams, the only natural topographical features shown on the map, many have also disappeared. The importance of the numerous streams in the community life of that day is indicated by the great number of water power mills whose positions are shown on the map. Most of these, like-wise, have succumbed to the ravages of time, and the only one remaining on the Fort Benning miliary reservation is at Eelbeck, which operating its quaint old grinding stone by a huge water wheel, still serves the inhabitants of that little community.

TOWN TOPICS

One might add, too that the Fort Benning soldiers got a great kick out of seeing the steamers stuck on the sandbars near the reservation and always turned out to razz the passengers as much as they could, until the boat was floated.

We hate to see Mayor Jimmy Walker getting so much notoriety for his (supposed) indiscretions. It is a poor testimonial to the general intelligence level of the people of this country, that they should have to turn to the lurid descriptions of a trial like that for their enjoyment. We are probably prejudiced by our own liking for Jimmy, but we do think a lot of a man who can face adversity with such a smiling face and jaunty air. The term "Happy Warrior" can be applied to more than one man in the Democratic party.

And, speaking of the Democratic party, Roosevelt is faced with a tough problem when he gives his decision on the Walker case, for Jimmy is highly popular and highly unpopular at the same time, and the Presidential candidate is truly on the horns of a very perplexing dilemma when it comes to handing down his verdict.

TRIALS AND COMPENSATIONS OF A COLUMNIST

We recently read in some paper that Walter Winchell's present contract to write a daily column of gossip and running comment on things in general rings him a salary of one thousand dollars a week. We also recall having read somewhere that Arthur Brisbane's pitiful stipend for disseminating misinformation in terse paragraphs was $75,000 a year. At the time, we considered these talented gentlemen pretty well paid for their labors, but the longer we struggle with the problem of furnishing thirty odd inches of Flare copy weekly, the more we incline to the theory that the agony of filling so much space daily cannot be adequately compensated by a salary check, however large. We should like to try it for a couple of weeks at a thousand per, but we know we should be glad when the editor fired us.

Speaking of being fired, we have been hoping that the prevailing tendency to cut expenses might induce the Benning Herald to lay us off, but so far have had no luck. Meanwhile, our weekends are being ruined by the thought that on Monday we must get our weekly conrtibution in the mail. To date we haven't missed an issue in spite of the fact that the usual sources of copy in the form of authentic reports upon the breaks and blunders of our Benning constituents are denied us. In their absence, we have discussed the stock market, the pay cut and even the weather. We have reported the triumphal progress of General Fuzzard toward high political preferment and we have reprinted selections from the unexpurgated works of the only Army poet in captivity. At times we have the feeling that some of our stuff isn't exactly what our public wants but we console ourself with the thoughts that subscribers to the Herald pay only $1.50 for 52 issues. Even if they don't read the Flare—an absurd hypothesis—they are getting more than their money's worth.

Sometimes we receive a bit of encouragement. This morning, just as we were settling down to our weekly task, with all the joyous abandon of "a quarry slave, scourged to his dungeon," we were handed a letter from one of last year's most famous monographers, Captain Walter Lee Sherfey. Sherfey had taken the trouble to write us a letter to tell us that he enjoyed the Flare. No, gentle reader he didn't ask us for any favor and as he remarked in the letter, his "monograph grade has long since been recorded."

Having read Sherfey's kind words, we changed our mind about letting at least a couple of weeks go by without our customary chatter.

FUZZARD FAVORS CANCELLATION

General Fuzzard, the Progrestatic candidate for president, took the center of the political stage last week when he came out emphatically in favor of universal debt cancellation.

The epoch-making pronouncement, made at the convention of the United Installment Buyers Association of America, was received with unbridled enthusiasm. In his stirring address, the General fearlessly prepared a plan for reviving business which, so far as we know, no other candidate had had the temerity to advocate.

"I've been asked to say something about the allied debts," said the general, "and I'm goin' to say a plenty. I'm sayin', wot the hell, that's what I say. Wot's the use of tryin' to squeeze blood out of a lot of turnips like the Frogs, and the Wops and the Limeys, who ain't got any money and ain't likely to have any and even if they had they ain't goin' to hand it over to us. But that's neither here nor there. What this country needs is cancellation of private debts. Everybody I know owes money to the banks, if his credit used to be good, or to everybody else if it ain't, and nobody can spend any money to buy things because everytime he gets any his creditors take it away. How are you goin' to revive business that way, I ask you? I know a lot of people who could buy a new car or a new suit, or a porterhouse steak now and then, if some bankers wasn't on his neck all the time to make him pay up interest and cut down the principal. Instead of loanin' you some more like a public spirited citizen, so that you could start the wheels of industry he wants to take the shirt off your back."

COMMENTS ON NEWS OF THE DAY

All we know is what we read in the Benning Herald

We note with satisfaction that the abandoned wells which abound on the reservation are being blown in, filled up and otherwise made safe for mounted Democracy.

Since the Infantry School classes of the future will be composed of increasingly younger men, there is no longer any good reason for the wells to remain open. As long as there was a fair prospect that some lieutenant colonel or colonel would fall in one and give us all a file, we were content to take our chances with the others, but the odds now run too strongly in favor of the junior officers. Indeed, with such a preponderance of captains and lieutenants on the post, is a field officer looking for quail, figs, wild grapes or whatnot constituted a bad insurance risk. It would be so easy for an active young officer to conceive the brilliant idea of reducing the hump by pushing him in one of the abandoned wells and covering him up.

The last issue of the Herald carries a front page story about Mine Host Dowdall's Officers' Club Dance expansion program. Don't bother about this on our account, Harry, unless you intend to suspend the music during the chicken pie course. Twice last year somebody ate ours while we were doing a duty dance number.

Other people who reach the front page of the August 19th issue were President Hoover, Secretary of War Hurley, General King and Lieut. Col. E. P. Rice. We assume that the Lieut. Col. mentioned is our old friend E. F. Rice, although we hardly recognized him in such distinguished company.

We are wondering if the story about Mrs. Lewis refers to our neighbor, the wife of the celebrated Adjutant General. We repeat it for the benefit

CAPTAIN MOLLISON MAKES LONG TRIP IN TINY PLANE

with three companions, made the flight in 1930, but they only reached Harbor Grace in the first hop. And in the same year Captain Dieudonne Costes and Maurice Bellonle, French airmen, made the trip from Paris to New York. However, the planes used in those flights were much larger and more powerful than the little Puss Moth flown by Mollison.

Though Mollison had not prevously attempted an Atlantic flight, at 26 he has an enviable record as a distance flier. In 1931, he flew from Australia to England, a distance of approximately 10,000 miles, in less than nine days, thereby establishing a record. Incidentally, Mollison's bride of the month, Amy Johnson, a celebrated aviatrix in her own right, covered the same course, but in the opposite direction, making a record flight from England to Australia.

Mollison accomplished another great distance flight last March, when he flew from Engand to Capetown, South Africa, in 4 days, 17 hours, setting a new time mark for the flight between the two points. During this flight, the daring aviator crossed over 2,000 miles of the Sahara Desert and down the west coast of Africa over endless jungles and swamps. He saved much time by taking this route, but if a mishap to his plane had necessitated a landing in any of those bad stretches the great flight would have ended less happily than it did.

It was on the completion of the Capetown jaunt that Mollison and Amy Johnson, who was at his goal to welcome him, announced their engagement. At that time, too, the young airman made known his intention of making a round trip flight across the North Atlantic to New York, and, thrilled by the idea, his bride-to-be told the world that she would accompany him. But the gallant captan evidently did not believe in placing his daring young bride in jeopardy, for he rigdly set his face against her trans-Atlantic aspirations.

It is believed that Mollison's action in filling up all available space in the tiny craft with emergency gas tanks, leaving barely sufficient room for the pilot, was to forestall any attempt his bride might make to wheedle her way into the plane at the last minute. Whatever the reason for the act, it undoubtedly saved his life, for despite the big load of gas he carred at the takeoff, his tanks were sadly depleted by the long fight against head winds and fog off the Newfoundland coast. And when he landed here they contained less than ten gallons of the precious fuel.

The Infantry School Detachment mess hall is still rating first place in the regular monthly ratings. There is no doubt that our mess would remain in the present position if rated with the mess halls of the entire Army.

Permanent kitchen police is the one thing that we have needed for a long time. Members of the organization are mostly on special duty and a man is needed on the job every day. Quite a few of the fellows that are assigned to work that will not spare them during the week have been forced to do their kitchen police on Sundays. There is no question that every one will gladly sign the form on the bulletin board. If we have a man in the outfit that is so cheap that he refuses to sign it will be worth many times the small amount involved to learn this piker's name and whereabouts.

Knights of the green cloth, are urged to drop into the recreation room and take a look at the pool tables. They will not have to be urged to chalk up and roll a game. The tables have been levelled and new cushions and covers have been put on. Two dozen new cues and three sets of new balls with six new cue balls have been added. "Poppa John," has everything ship-shape and it is a pleasure to spend an hour "clicking the ivories."

Say, fellows, why not lay off Pop Heckert. For eighteen years he has been out there in the infield playing baseball and nobody will ever tell you that Heckert was not giving his all. For the past four seasons the "Ole

COMPANY "H"

The company is now engaged in company practice. And the less we say about it, the better.

Our baseball team played at Woodruff Field in Columbus last Saturday and lost a hard fought game to the Columbus All Stars, the score being 7 to 6. We held them scoreless until the seventh inning but their last inning rallie were a little bit too trong for us. "Frog" Peloquin got his little finger dislocated in this game.

Sunday we played the Jordan City Lions a doubleheader at the Post. We won both games, the score being 14 to 9 and 3 to 1. The second game was called at the end of the fifth inning on account of rain.

We wondered why a certain fellow, whose moniker is "T. C." wanted to go to Phenix City Sunday night. But now we don't blame him. Boy, she's a "honey."

And another thing. Cheer up, Paul, November 26 is not so far off.

COMPANY "G"

Last Saturday's parade was pretty much of a parade for "G" Company. Sergeant Carlin, Corporal Latham and Corporal Woods received the battalion trophies for football, track and swimming. Anything the battalion has had to offer in the way of trophies during the past year, "G" Company has staked claim to. Every stake thus far has brought Sterling (silver is as good as gold.)

Prophet, S. T., Prophet, J. L., Daniels, Smith., W. E., Cooper, W. J., Latham and Polewoda from the very start had the battalion swimming meet of two Saturdays ago well in hand. This added the third and final championship of the year for "G" Company.

The "A" group dropped only four men during the range season for a company average of 285. The "B" group should start its record Monday for 285 or better.

Lieut. Smith, R. H., is making a try for the Air Corps at Maxwell Filed, Alabama this week. Lieut. Britt was off for ten days, but long enough to bring back a wife. Mrs. Britt and Lieut. Britt, welcome to "G" Company.

COMPANY "E"

Company "F" is still going strong with its range work; the automatic group has completed record firing and did exceedingly well—out of 35 men who fired the record course 26 made expert, 8 made sharpshooter and one made marksman. We have a good reason to believe that we are high-company in the regiment with the automatic rifle. Pvt. McLeod made high score in the company—627. The 2nd group of Springfield riflemen will complete record firing this week and we are in high hopes that they come out with some excellent scores.

We have two new corporals in the company. They are Cpls. Ernest N. Browning and Willie E. Joiner—three new privates first class, they are Pfcs. Andy J. Brown Leonard K. Strickland and Floyd C. Slocum. Private Floyd D. Caulfield has been rated specialist sixth class—congratulations boys.

of those who read only the Flare and the advertisements and then throw the paper away.

"Mrs. Lewis, you say you can't stop the car! Good Heavens!"

Mrs. Lewis, "It doesn't make any difference. There's no place to park anyway."

Now, when we departed on academic leave, the Mrs. Lewis we knew didn't drive a car, but, if she has been learning to do so during our absence, there is no reason why she couldn't be the heroine of the above anecdote. Indeed, the reply of the lady is so characterstic of the well known expert at clever repartee that we suspect the worst.

THEATRICAL ATTRACTIONS

Coming To Grand Next Thursday

EDWARD G. ROBINSON

Cinema Calendar

for Grand, Rialto and Royal

AT THE RIALTO

NOW PLAYING: Presenting, "THE GAY BUCKAROO," with Hoot Gibson, Roy D'Arcy and Merna Kennedy. Hoot plays the part of Clint Hale, a New England boy, who has grown up in the West but has kept the Yankee ideals of hard work and economy. A red hot picture from beginning to end.

* * *

SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Presenting, "HUDDLE," with Ramon Novarro and Madge Evans. Novarro portrays the role of Tony Amatto, mill hand in a large steel mill who wins a scholarship to Yale University. His efforts to adjust himself to a strange social environment by the right of brawn and athletic achievement are a stirring basis for the story.

* * *

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Presenting, "SCANDAL FOR SALE," with Rose Hobart, Claudia Dell, Pat O'Brien and Charles Bickford. The cast is enough to insure great entertainment and a great picture.

ADDED STAGE ATTRACTION: Ches Davis' CHICAGO FOLLIES.

FRIDAY: Presenting, "THE WET PARADE," with Walter Huston and Dorothy Jordan. One of the most interesting cinema vehicles released this year—and that's saying something.

AT THE GRAND

SATURDAY, SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Presenting, "DEVIL AND THE DEEP," with Tallulah Bankhead and Gary Cooper. The picture is set in a port on the north coast of Africa. Miss Bankhead is cast as the wife of a submarine commander, who is insanely jealous of her. She meets Cooper and falls in love with him, to discover later that he is a new member of her husband's crew. When the husband discovers the situation, he gets the two of them aboard his vessel, heads it for a freighter, and turns the controls over to Cooper just as it crashes. The sub sinks, and while it is lying crippled on the ocean floor the two men battle with their wits for the woman. The role of the husband is played by Charles Laughton, noted British stage star, who makes his first screen appearance in this picture. ("DEVIL AND THE DEEP" is highly recommended by this paper.)

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Presenting, "THE IMPATIENT MAIDEN," with Lew Ayers and Mae Clark and strong supporting cast. This is the strong story of a girl who was willing to go the limit for a boy who wasn't. It's absolutely one of the season's best productions. "THE IMPATIENT MAIDEN" sheds much light on the feelings and artifices of a sophisticated girl who thinks she knows all about love—until she meets a new kind of man.

* * *

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY: Presenting, "TWO SECONDS," with Edward G. Robinson. Metropolitan critics have hailed Robinson's performance in this picture as one of the brilliant achievements of the dramatic season. In "TWO SECONDS" he portrays John Allen, a hard-working iron worker who is a victim of circumstances. Those who think they have taken the measure of Robinson as an actor haven't seen anything until they witness his performance in "TWO SECONDS."

RIALTO

"THE WET PARADE"

There's plenty of entertainment for the entire family in "The Wet Parade," which opened last night at the Rialto Theatre, for here is a picture which not only reveals an intimate, tender romance, but unwinds a plot which carries a punch in every episode.

Based on an essentially modern theme, it depicts the turmoil of modern living, contrasting the fast, hectic life of today with the period before the World War when such things as night life, sophistication and political corruption did not occupy quite so much on the front page of the daily newspapers.

Has Sensational Episodes

There are sensational exposes with dramatic incidents which will keep audiences on the edge of their seats. The picture also has its gayer side, but through it all is an engrossing insight into American life of today, a feat made all the more remarkable by the fact that in directing this picture Victor Fleming never lost sight of the entertainment angle.

Southern plantation life before the World War is dramatically shown in the first episode, whchi is in a measure a prologue. It is here that Lewis Stone in a brilliant performance depicts an aristocratic landowner who is brought to ruin by drink, leaving his daughter, Dorothy Jordan, and son, Neil Hamilton, practically penniless.

The story then moves ot New York and introduces Walter Huston as a drunken ward politician whose son, Robert Young, tries in vain to keep his father respectable. Circumstances bring Miss Jordan and Hamilton into contact with the politician and the natural hatred of liquor shared by the Southern girl and the sopabox orator's son gives them a point in common which ulitmately develops into romance. The coming of the war, the enactment of prohibition and the sensational second Wilson campaign are all vividly echoed in this sequence.

The third angle occurs after the war showing the rise of bootlegging to a prosperous industry, financed and entrenched in politics. It is here that Huston offers one of the most effective performances of his career as he sinks lower and lower in the grip of drink until he finally murders his wife in a half-crazed moment. The various threads of the narrative are now brought together and the story closes with a smashing climax.

Chicago Follies To Be At Rialto For Couple Davs

Ches Davis and his "Chicago Follies" will return to Columbus for an engagement Tuesday and Wednesday at the Rialto theater. This is absolutely the best stage show to have visited this section this year and will be remembered by theater goers who attended during the engagement early this year at the Royal.

Ches Davis and Gene (Honey Gal) Cobb are outstanding black face artists. Davis has been taking shows out for many years in the South and Cobb was a headliner with the famous Neil O'Brien Minstrels.

Ina Baker knows rhythm and she knows dances. She will execute some of the same steps that brought her into the limelight with the "Vanities" and with the four Marx Brothers in "Cocoanuts," in New York.

Dolly Taylor has a brand of jazz all her own that is certainly unique. Buddy Ryan is supreme himself in light entertainment.

The eight Dixie dancing darlings are an eyeful. They know their dancing.

The scene and costume investiture of the Chicago Follies is elaborate and provides a perfect setting for unusual attractions.

The Chicago Follies entertain from the first through the final moment. There's never a dull moment. Feminine pulchritude will abound. Swinging out of New Orleans, this company met with instantaneous success. Audiences have clamored for their return wherever they have shown. And, no wonder—The Chicago Follies click.

Ches Davis and "Honey Gal" Cobb are survivors of the days when minstrelsy enjoyed its palmiest days. Neither have deterioated an iota, either. Fact is, both gain in popularity the weeks and months roll on and on.

The Chicago Follies singing stage band provides the music acompaniment for this superb stage attraction. There are few bands on tour with the versatility necessary to combine real harmony singing with red hot rhythm and these boys are among the select few.

You'll not gamble by seeing Chicago Follies. They'll please here as they've pleased everywhere they've filled engagements.

GRAND

"DEVIL AND THE DEEP"

A woman with a past is Tallulah Bankhead.

The blonde star of the stage and screen, featured with Gary Cooper in "Devil and the Deep," which comes to the Grand Theatre Saturday, Sunday and Monday, admits that she's been keeping somethng from her public. But she's willing, now that it's far enough past, to let the public in on the secret.

It is that she made her screen lebut as a beauty-contest winner. But it happened years ago, when she was a school girl in Washington, D. C., and had nothing to do with her entrance into talking pictures a year ago after scoring a sensational success on the London stage.

Miss Bankhead, 16 yards old at the ime, was living with her father, Congressman William B. Bankhead, in Washington. When a magazine inaugurated a beauty contest with a chance in the movies promised the winner, she saw in it the opportunity to gratify her one ambition—to become an actress.

But so timid was she about the matter that she sent in a photograph of herself without her name. And she said nothing about it to her family.

Months later, when the prize winners were announced, her picture appeared with them, under the caption, "Who Is She?" Frightened, her first impulse was to keep silent about the affair. But she finally mustered up courage enough to discuss the matter with her family. They agreed to let her go through with it.

And so, after announcing her identity to the magazine, she went to New York with her aunt, Mrs. Arthur G. Lund, as chaperone, to play minor parts in several films.

She didn't like it particularly—principally because they were minor roles. After a few pictures she quit to begin a career on the stage that took her to New York and London stardom.

Eight years later she came back to the movies . . . . and this time not in minor roles.

In "Devil and the Deep," she plays the role of the wife of a submarine commander, intensely jealous of her, who sinks his craft with her and a suspected lover on board as a means of revenge. Cooper plays the role of the lover; Charles Laughton, another noted London stage sar, the role of the husband.

"Horse Collar"
Let me have those roses now
While life is worthwhile living.
Why wait until you see how
And what others have been giving?

You're the one to start the ball,
Rolling down generosity's sloping plane.
Now is the time to take your fall,
And ease someone else's aching pain.

Just lift it to my prominent nose,
So I can sniff its pollenation.
You cheap skate ! ! It is a rose.
I wanted a big carnation!

THE ABOVE IS our own brain child, so please read over it fast. Just save us some of those roses you were going to hurl at us after we were dead, and let your spoiled vegetables come slow now. We do not entertain any hopes of receiving a carnation . . . . yet.

SOME FUNNY things happen around the Post Ex Soda Fount these days. It seems as though some of the dispensers of daily thirst killers are reverting to their childhood pranks. They were noticed the other day having a joyous time learning the tricks about playing with a Rick-Rack board.

MASTER SERGEANT MAGONI, (Jazz to you), was noticed off in a corner, taking it all in. (A little sleuthing on our part revealed that Jazz was the proud owner of the Rick-Rack board in use by the soda jerkers). He came out of his shell however, to witness a demonstration by a salesman. Jazz discovered, as he let the world know it, that the salesman could change hands with the thing and not miss a lick.

* * *

FOOTBALL IS NOT so far around the corner. We will have it with us before we know it, and then is when the fun begins. It takes a sport to play football, and a better one to take a licking and like it. It is a man's game, and tends to separate the men from the boys.

* * *

IT IS RUMORED that there will be only three teams in the Intra-Mural league this year. Why for? If the league is made up of only the two 29th Infantry teams and one from the Tanks the season will be entirely too short. One way to remedy that would be to make each team play two games with the others.

* * *

THEN THERE IS the Artillery with a handful of gallant galloping gunners to put a team on the field. The Special Units, 29th Infantry has some good material, as has the Special Special Units, The Infantry School.

* * *

FOOTBALL IS A MAN'S game, with the emphasis on the man. Let us all get out and dig for the good of the game and turn in some good fall sport.

Enlisted Men's Bridge Club Formed Recently

An Enlisted Men's Bridge Club has been formed recently at The Service Club, Fort Benning, and the necessary equipment has been ordered so that the members of the club may begin participation in its activities. Six bridge tables have been bought and are being delivered to the Service Club as part of the equipment.

The Bridge Club plans to begin play in the very near future, and to play on alternate Friday nights. On the other Fridays dances will be given at the Service Club. Mrs. C. A. Setzler hostess of the Service Club, is in charge of the arrangements.

Reports indicate that those in charge of the dances given at the Club are highly pleased with the cooperation given them, especially at that given on last Wednesday night. Another will be held tonight and all those interested are urged to come. Music is furnished by the 29th Infantry Orchestra.

"Tale Spins"

Koby played hookey from correspondence school the other night—Sent in an empty envelope.

We wonder if Moneyham has forgotten—"Singe Barnett."

Mrs. Willingham: That's Cottage pudding, dear.

Sgt. Willingham: I thought it was something like that, I just bit into a shingle.

Suggestive Names:
Crater, volcano; Jordan, auto; Anderson, fairy tales;; Maxwell, coffee; Harward, bus; Lacy, film; Moneyham, banks and butcher shops; Hall, corridor; Holt, tractor; Bailes, bundles; Ichord, eye string; Sellers, auctioneers; Cook, boil; and last and less but not least Hohl, nothing entirely surrounded by something.

Dispensary Dope

Sorry I couldn't be with you last week, but I had a call to make up East. (East Point) Maybe I should get a Sunday's K. P. for being A. W. O. L.

Let me add a few words for the ball team, all the boys look mighty good out there; from the way they are going now we will take the second half. That was a nice game this week where Gilbert shut the Green Cords out.

Pvt. Pullen lost his mother Sunday, he is now away on a ten day furlough.

Sgt. Henery has a painful ankle, he sprained it while playing tennis this week; guess he will be laid up for a few weeks. This will give him a good chance to teach Big Smith some more about chess.

Our nurse Miss Freeman is back on the job with us after a month of night duty and a few days of leave. Glad to see you back Miss Freeman.

Waned to know: What is wrong with a fellow that goes to town and loses his suit and has to come back with a pair of white paints. This has happened to Red Floyd the last two times he went to town.

bugler, has purchased himself an automobile or in better words a "Ford". We are all deeply concerned about his safety when he gets under that steering wheel—some have suggested that it would be a good idea to put some good life insurance agent wise to the drastic actions Archie has taken to reduce the cost of transportation between here and Butler, Ellaville and Americus, Georgia. "G. I." Ragsdale happened to be on hand as Archie attempted to crank the motor of his tin can and told Archie to pull the "choke" out—Archie to pull the spark instead—Results: A broken starter and the roar of Archie's baritone voice.

REGIMENTAL MACH. GUN CO.

On August 29, or Monday next, to be more explicit, the Regimental Machine Gun Company, 29th Infantry, will celebrate its first anniversary. The mess sergeant, James R. Large, will not disclose the menu with which he will treat the members of the infant organization of the 29th Infantry, but the bets are even that fried chicken will play a prominent part in it.

The company has enjoyed one year of even tempered service, and is to be congratulated on their enviable record already established. Great things are yet in store for this organization, as they are well trained men, having been picked for the task from other organizations of the post.

During the progress of the birthday celebration break-down music will be furnished for the entertainment of the members of the company and their guests by a prominent string band of the Garrison. This musical body is composed of Sgt. Alton Ballard, M. P. Section, Cpl. Bennett Ates and Pfc. R. K. McDonald, 1st Tanks.

Private McDonald is known as "The man who sold the old gray mule," and wherever he goes now, must resell said decrepit quadruped. Mack will probably sell the mule again for the edification of the assembled company next Monday evening. He has formerly sold this mule at the Post Theatre, over the radio station, WRBL. He always receives a great ovation wherever he auctions the mule off. He sold her for thirty dollars in his appearance at the Main Theatre. He is a former member of Regimental Machine Gun Company. (McDonald, not the mule).

Ching Halts "Bull" Abruptly In Fourth

Earl Johnson Batters Tom Blanton To Win Technical Kayo in Seventh

In the double ten-round wnd-up card held at Doughboy Stadium last Tuesday night the Johnson Clan cut loose with some real he-man fighting to please an enthusiastic gathering of fans. Ching Johnson, in the top flight, eased over the sleep producer to kayo "Bull" Johnson, the Atlanta blacksmith, in the fourth frame, re-establishing his supremacy among the heavy sluggers. Earl Johnson, Miami school boy, beat down the resistance of Tom Blanton, gritty Birmingham boxer, winning on a technical K. O. in the 7th, sending him away to slumberland early in the 7th stanza.

The fights were generally good throughout the card. Young blood was matched, all contestants being under the age of twenty-two. Sluggers were the main meat on the menu, and the fans were treated with their money's worth of real fighting, with none of the boys putting on a marathon dance contest for the edification of the followers of the ring.

Due to the inclemency of the weather, the two top bouts were put on a little early, leaving Saginaw Seeley and Dave Milford to fight the last bout of the night. The program would have been just as well complete without the addition of these two disappointment artists. After seeing some real fighting, it was griping indeed to see two fighters who were not willing to give the fans a run for their money.

In the top-notcher, Ching was out there after the hide of "Bull" Johnson, and kept that target in front of his good right hand constantly. After leading "Bull" a merry life about the ring for two rounds, however, taking a lot of punishment from the hard-hitting Atlantan, Ching changed his tactics in the third.

He dropped from the chin to the body in that third round, and punished the big boy something fierce for the duration of the period. It seemed as though the soldier would surely score a kayo with body punches, but toward the end of the round, Ching raised his barrage and landed squarely on the chin of the blacksmith, sending him down in a daze. It would have surely been curtains, but the bell stopped the count before it started.

"Bull" was back in the fourth, seemingly fresh, but Ching started after the mid-section again, then raised his attack again, and suffering from the effects of a hard right, followed by a left and another right to the button, was out like a candle.

TOO MUCH FOR SLAGTOWN SCRAPPER

From the beginning of the second ten round affair, it was evident that Earl Johnson was a bit too strong for Tom Blanton, Slagtown cauliflower artist. Tom was game and anxious to give the fans what they came to see, but was unable to do little more than stay in there for seven rounds. Blanton can box better than the Miami Swede, but the Swedes are tough. Johnson is no exception to the rule . . . he is as tough as they come.

Blanton's stinging blows did not seem to slow the Swede up much. In he would come with a left hand that snapped out like a black snake whip, cutting the young 'Bamian terribly about the face.

In the sixth round, Johnson stepped out, and literally battered Tom to the canvas, but the bell saved him also. Blanton was back in the seventh, seemingly fresh for more punishment, but Johnson went after him like a floor. His seconds htrew in the towel, giving the fight to Johnson on a technical K. O. That game, gritty Tom simply had to stay down for ten. tiger, and again battered him to the

In what was scheduled as the main preliminary, Saginaw Seeley and Dave Milford waltzed to a decision that went to Milford. Milford seemed willing to fight all the way, but who can fight a waving reed that won't fight back?

Bunker Hill and J. C. Sewell went back for six rounds of milling that stood every fan on his feet. These boys seem to hate the sight of the other, and were fighting with blood in their eyes. Hill could get nowhere with Sewell when it came to boxing, so he stepped out and slugged the first two rounds into his grasp. The third was fairly even, with Sewell taking the shade in the fourth and fifth. The sixth round found them scrapping for a kayo, more leather flying than an expert could keep track of. It looked lke Hill's fight, and that is just what the judges decided. A great fight, as these two boys will always give the public what they want . . . action!

Dummy Nix proved too fast and tough for Tut Tut Taylor, battling Medico, in their four round bout. Taylor was anxious, even a bit too much so, to ease over the sleeping potion to the Dummy. This left him wide open for the sharp lefts and damaging right hand. Nix took advantage of every opening, and was able to outpoint the Medico in the end. This fight was a crowd pleaser deluxe.

Tony Viggins and Earl Tillman opened the festivities for the night, Tillman being easily the victor. This was a four round melee, and was packed with comedy. Viggins would miss, try to pop his fingers with gloves on, then say . . . well, the Greeks had a word for it. We don't understand many foreign languages. However, if this boy Viggins had connected many of those haymakers, Tillman would probably be pushing up daisies by now.

An old timer was introduced from the ring. Willie Ptomey, dear to the hearts of the local and foreign fight public, was on hand to witness the fracas. Willie now lives in Columbus, and is a sight for sore eyes. His public gave him a grand ovation as he was introduced from the ring, proving they will always reserve a soft spot in their sport-loving hearts for the braveheart of all the pugilistic profession.

Artillery Injects Fun in Swim Meet Of Much Interest

The Eighty-Third Field Artillery held its swimming meet yesterday afternoon at Russ Pool, in preparation for the post swimming meet. Battery "C" copped the honors of the day, after a closely fought battle by Battery "A." Headquarters Battery tailed the list for the first time in many, many moons, which was one upset of the day.

Instead of having a reguar A. A. U. swimming meet, the redlegs took it into their own hands and made it an aquatic Gymkhana. Fun was had by all, including the spectators.

Of course, the regular swimming events took the greater part of the day, leaving the fun makers to come in with their broadsides to relieve the monotony. A beauty pageant was one of the main events of interest.

Each battery entered a beauty con-

The girls are holding cups presented by the president of the U. S. Lawn Tennis Association.

Aquatic Sports Come To The Front; Two Meets Scheduled For Next Week

With the closing of the summer season, comes the grand rushes to Russ Pool, and its cooling, restful and enjoyable waters. The bathers take their daily dozens on the shores of Benning's most delightful summer playground, then dip into its very bosom for the refreshment that can come only to those who participate in aquatic sports.

Next week will present those followers of the sports of the pool with a most varied program. On Wednesday the pool will be the scene of much activity as the children's and ladies' swimming meet gets under way. Much interest has been manifested in this meet, as at the close of the program, the graduates of the summer courses in swimming will be awarded their diplomas by the Commandant. General King will also present the ribbons given to each swimmer who places in the events.

Already the roster of the swimming officials is crowded with the entries in the meet. This meet will probably be the largest of its kind held at Benning in the history of Russ Pool. The new bath house adds greatly to the comforts of the swimmers, and makes everything more pleasant in general around that popular body of water.

Seating arrangements are now under way to accommodate the large crowd of spectators who are expected to attend. Music will be furnished by one of the Garrison bands, which will add greatly to the attractiveness of the meet.

At the same time as the above announcement was issued by Captain Phillip T. Fry, president of the Infantry School Athletic Association, the announcement of the Garrison Swimming Meet to be held on Saturday, September 3rd at the same place.

Captain Fry stated that interest is mounting high in the garrison meet, in which enlisted men alone are allowed to enter. This year the Tankers are going to be pushed hard to win. The Second Battalion has uncovered some valuable swimming material, and should push the Tankers to the limit, and possibly win over them.

Of much interest will be the fancy diving contests. The Second Battalion will have their colors flying high when they place Wallace, diving wonder of the garrison, out there as their representative. Many already concede him first place in this event. He will be pushed hard by Parr of the Tanks, who will probably place second. This event alone is well worth attending

Medicos are Slated To Cop Second Half In Post Ball Loop

It looks very much like the Medicos are on top to stay in the final half. They are away out in front with six games in the winning column and one in the red, with only three more to play. Still the Terrible Tankers and First Bats are driving strongly and both teams are dangerous.

The play of the Medicos back of the splendid pitching of Gilbert and Barnes has been the big factor in their success. The Medicos are not a very hard hitting team, but their defense is strong. Although most of their games are won with small scores, they are always able to hold the opposition well in check.

The First Bats present another great defensive team with a string of weak hitters. The Medicos are really stronger at bat than the Irish. This advantage is carrying the Medicos along on top at the present writing. Had the Irish been able to hit, they would be riding the crest, instead of their Medico rivals.

The boys that really bear watching are the Terrible Tankers. This outfit was slow in getting started, but the Tanks have arrived. Bill Swantic has rounded into shape and is pitching

2nd Battalion Regimental Meet Easily Last Saturday At Russ Pool

The Second Battalion gleaned the field last Saturday at Russ Pool, winning the Regimental swimming meet in a crawl. The triumphant Second Battalion scored a total of 78 points out of a possible 89. The First Battalion was second with 7 counters, with the Special Units bringing up the rear with 4.

Individual high score went to Private First Class J. Prophet, of the Second Battalion. He was awarded a pen and pencil set for having placed first in three events and being a big factor in the winning of the 300 yard medley relay race.

Colonel J. J. Toffey, regimental commander, presented the trophies and awards on the steps of the newly completed bath house. He commended the teams entered upon their fair play and true sportsmanship, and then presented the awards.

the meet to witness.

Officials are looking for two records to collapse in the meet. The two events for slaughter are the 400 yard and 100 yard free style numbers. Swimming of the best will be witnessed in these two events, and will add greatly to the program.

Tannehill of the Tanks will also be on hand to show the swimmers of the Garrison what real swimming means.

testant, and the figures they did cut. Imagine what Red Taylor looked like in an overstuffed bathing suit . . . . Sergeant Underwood as an old lady and cook Bopp as a lady. It was a scream, and is worthy of the notice of film producers.

The awards in the beauty contest went as follows.

1st, Sgt. Underwood, 2nd, cook Bopp, and 3rd Pvt. Taylor. Awards were presented the winners by Major C. A. Selleck, Battalion commander.

MEDICOS STILL LEADING IN SECOND HALF

winning baseball. This has lightened the burden on the Red Lindsey's shoulders and now this youngster will be going greater than ever. And the Tankers really have the heavy artillery. Swantic and McLane are the big guns of the offense. Cueball Smith, Haynie and Daniel Sullivan keep opposing twirlers in a tough spot and all are dangerous with the willow. O'Brien has not been hitting so well but is a good waiter and is a terror on the bases. Kier, Moon, Pike and other Tankers are not hitting so well but there is more hitting power with the Tankers than with any other team, and the Tankers are also playing heads-up baseball. Anything may happen down the home stretch.

The Kellys took the first half and are sitting back looking on. Don't judge the Kellys by their present play. When the series opens the Kellys are going to be the favorites to cop the bunting.

The Greencords started the last half like a house-afire but have cooled off until they are now out of the running. The Greenies have the makings of a good team but need a large infusion of young blood.

The season of 1933, should bring out a powerful Special Units baseball team. The team this season has shown power but has been handicapped by team awkwardness. Made up of ambitious youngsters, the Special Units will be at the peak of their game in another season and should be foremost among the first string teams.

The Galloping Gunners are in the mud up to their hubs and just can't seem to get going. This really is the msytery team. Jackie Morris and Holloway are two of the outstanding twirlers in the garrison. Morris is by far the outstanding southpaw. Ridley is as good as any catcher and both the infield and outfield show flashes of play that is equal to that of any team. Still the Gunners are losing. It looks as though the spirit that has kept the "Caissons Rolling," for all of the past years has entirely disappeared.

I. S. D. NOTES

Man," has been going back. We don't last always. His arm is not what it used to be, he is out there now giving his all and it is not enough. Don't be a bunch of poor sports and sit and razz Heckert. Give the fellow a hand. He is not forcing himself at second base. No one had rather go up in the stands and watch a game and enjoy it than Heckert. He is out there because there is no one else that will do as well. Get a youngster on second and no one will root louder for the team than Heckert.

Mule Hess has returned from a two months leave. Mule has been visiting the home folks out in exas. The trip must have done Mule quite a bit of good for he came back and hustled over to the gymnasium and began training. The big fellow has a wallop and could put us on the map in the fight racket if he would only get in there and go to war.

Members of the non-com club are planning a pinochle tournament. At the present time there are half dozen couples that figure they are unbeatable. Pairings will begin within the next few days and play will start as soon as all entries are in.

It has been announced that the Infantry School Detachment would enter a team in the amateur boxing tournament this year. This is good news for we have several boys that are anxious for a chance and will be only to glad to come out for the team. It is high time the Greencords stepped out and murdered the idea that quite a few of the outfits have about this being a non-combatant outfit.

VOLUME II — FORT BENNING, GA., FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1932 — NUMBER 19

TOWN TOPICS

The residents of Block 14 are now well aware of the fact that the Post Publicity Officer is the proud possessor of a new radio. Does it work? And how! (Note: This item was contributed).

Captain "Bill" Hones' roving eye has again captured an item of interest to the readers of the Herald. The last one, the cartoon which emphasized "Red" Ansley's change of employers, had to be doctored a little so as to bring out the point more clearly, but this is straight, and will probably interest many. The clipping is reproduced exactly as it ran in the Army and Navy Journal:

"Capt. L. B. Puller (1st Lieutenant, USMC), and the guardia patrol of the Central Area in the Jinotega Department had six contacts with bandits between August 12 and August 19. One group was led by Salgado, another band of eighty men was under Juan Altamirano, but the leaders of the other groups were unknown. Total bandit casualties in the contacts were seven known killed, and many wounded. Arms, ammunition, correspondence, food and mscellaneous supplies were captured by the guardia."

A most amusing bit of unconscious humor on the part of one of the Columbus papers was observed recently by us. The previews of the picture "Guilty As Hell" were being shown. The final panel of the advertising was flashed on the scheen bearing the legend (or one close approximating it) "YOU be sure to find out who is 'Guilty as Hell'". And this was followed by the familiar propaganda "Try Columbus First".

It seems that Columbus is capable of supplying anything, even persons who are "Guilty as Hell".

A recent press release from Lt. Yarbrough makes mention of the fact that Block 23 is rejoicing in its new cement pavements. Well, we don't want to throw mud on their innocent pleasure, but just wait until someone slips and takes a tumble on the cement! Then, what will they say!

* * *

In spite of the fact that the Officer-in-charge at Russ Pool is supposed to possess an unusual amount of perspicacity, Lt. Krauthoff's customary sang froid seemed to have deserted him momentarily last Wednesday when he announced that one of the first places in the Ladies and Children's Swimming Meet had gone to "Miss" Dorothy Lynch, instead of "Mrs." Dorothy Lynch. He recovered gracefully, however, and the show went on.

* * *

Major Elbert J. Lyman, head of Scout activities at Fort Benning, is making his preparations for another big year of Scouting at the post. The last year saw the award of the Herald cup for the most representative Scout, and the cup will be awarded again this year to the boy winning the honor this year. Benning has an unusually fine bunch of boys, and this movement has meant a great deal in developing their sportsmanship and good-fellowship among them.

Work On Theatre Is Nearly Finished

The work of remodeling the Main Garrison Theatre, Fort Benning, which was udertaken several weeks ago by Captain Carl H. Jabelonsky, Constructing Quartermaster, is rapidly nearing completion, and all that remains to be done is the laying of the asphalt, tile floor in the lobby, and the installation of new blowers for the ventilating system, all of which will be completed by Sept. 15.

The interior of the building, which originally was an airplane hangar, has been improved by the addition of a ceiling, new lighting system, and special panelling designed to improve the acoustics. Walls and ceilings have been attractively decorated, and it is said by visitors that the Fort Benning theatre is now one of the most attractive in the Army.

Excavations and foundations have been completed for the new 24th Infantry theatre, and erection of the steel frame of the new structure began on Tuesday. The new theatre is expected to be finished in time for its opening about Christmas.

83rd Completing Test Of Gunner's

Individual gunners examinations for the artillerymen of the 83rd Field Artillery are nearing completion under the direction of Major Clyde A. Selleck, battalion commander. The examinations of soldiers in Headquarters Battery will be completed on August 31, and those of Batteries A and C, on Sept. 10.

A course of artillery instruction especially designed for enlisted men preceded the examination now in progress, and which when concluded will determine the soldiers' qualifications for gunners ratings and special pay for proficiency. Under a recent war department ruling which prescribes the procedure of conducting the examinations, approximately eighty per cent of the examination subjects are assigned by the battery commander and the remainder twenty per cent are optional with the soldier. These subjects include studies of artillery material, the duties of the gun squad, the care and management of draft animals, the care and use of range finders, sights and other instruments, the computation of firing data, map-reading, telephone, telegraph, and radio instruments, and the general duties of cannoneers.

Maj. General King Makes Study Of Administration Methods At Fort Bragg

Major General Campbell King, commandant of The Infantry School, departs on Monday for Fort Bragg, N. C., where he will make an inspection, and a study of the post administration methods with a view to coordinating principles of post administration. General King will be occupied at Fort Bragg for about five days. During his absence Colonel Fred Munson has been acting commandant.

Crowning New Doubles Champs

Where there's a victory, there are always spoils and those go to the victor. So here are Keith Gledhill (left) and Ellsworth Vines, new doubles champions of national tennis, as they received the trophy emblematic of their victory from President Guild of the Longwood Cricket Club, Brookline, Mass. Gledhill and Vines defeated Johnny van Ryn and Wilmer Allison, defending champions to annex the title.

Former Benning Officers Finish Work Of Translating War Papers

A huge volume of translated German war documents, the work of two former Fort Benning officers, has been received at Headquarters, The Infantry School from the historical section of the Army War College, where the work was prepared.

Lieut. Col. Bertram W. Cadwalader, formerly of the 29th Infantry, and later a student in the advanced course of 1929, and Captain George L. Morrow, who was station at Fort Benning from 1922 to 1925, first as an instructor in the department of military art, and later as a member of the 24th Infantry and a student, are the two officers who performed the bulk of the laborious task of preparing the large volume of official war records. Colonel Cadwalader, prior to coming to Fort Benning, was stationed in Germany as a representative of the historical section of the Army War College, and carried on most of his assembling the documents in Potsdam. There he worked in company with Colonel Lewis Sorley, another infantry officer, and Col. Carl H. Mueller, cavalry.

Captain Morrow, an expert linguist, made all the translations of the mass of official German documents, which, in the volume just received at Fort Benning, comprises operations maps, and war diaries of German combat organizations with which the First Division came into contact in its operations in the Aisne-Marne sector, and particularly near Soissons, in July and August, 1918. These include records of the Seventh and Ninth German Armies, the Thirty-ninth Reserve Corps, the Thirteenth Army Corps, the Eleventh Bavarian Division, the Fifth, Twenty-eighth, Thirty-fourth, and Forty-second Infantry Divisions, the Forty-sixth Reserve Division, and the Sixty-fifth and Ninety-second Reserve Brigades.

Captain Morrow's translations include many secret messages and other documents which vividly depict not only the German military operations but the steady decline of morale and an apparent realization of the defeat which was awaiting the German armies confronted by the irresistable advance of the American troops. In one of the secret dispatches from the 115th Infantry Division to Headquarters of the Thirteenth Corps, the commander refers to the poor physical condition of his troops, due to fatigue, illness, and poor shelter, and states that he can no longer guarantee the line will hold in the face of another attack.

An entry in the diary of the Fifth Division refers to their first identification of the Second American Division through the capture of prisoners on July 18, and the presence of the First American Division was said to have been discovered on July 21 by the same means.

In giving an account of the German withdrawal, which was made under pressure of the Allied attack between Soissons and the Marne of July 18-19-20, the diary asserts that the crown Prince had ordered a methodical withdrawal a day before the attack began.

Major Catron Is Now Golf Director

Major Thomas B. Catron, Commanding Officer, the Infantry School Detachment, is acting golf director at Fort Benning, having assumed that office on the departure of Colonel H. A. Wells and will hold it until elections sometime in the Fall.

The temporary committees that are at present functioning as a part of the golfing organization at the post are as follows:

Greens Committee: Major Catron, Capt. Bell (Maintenance), Captain Liston, Captain Burnap.

Handicap Committee: Major Kraft.

A team of four officers will probably represent Fort Benning in the coming tournament to be held at Tate Mountain Estate on the 17th and 18th of September. This team will be selected in a local tournament to be held at Fort Benning and a return match will probably be played here in the Fall.

The Corps Area tournament will be played at Fort Benning sometime after September 18th. This tournament annually attracts a large number to this post to engage in play and this year will probably attract an even greater number of visitors.

An improved caddy system is in use at Benning and has drawn many favorable comments from those who have seen its operation. Three classes of caddies are kept, with provision for promotion for those whose work has been excellent.

Col. Caffey Retired From Active Duty

Colonel Lochlin W. Caffey, recent commander of the 24th Infantry, departed from Fort Benning on Wednesday, upon his retirement from active service, after more than thirty three years' service. Colonel Caffey came to Fort Benning on July 1, 1930 to take command of the 24th Infantry, and he held that assignment until a few weeks ago, when he was succeeded by Colonel Fred L. Munson. Prior to coming to Fort Benning, Colonel Caffey was in command of the 22d Infantry at Fort McPherson, Atlanta.

Colonel Caffey's military career began as an enlisted man on May 11, 1898, when he became a corporal in Co. A, 2d Georgia Infantry, which was being organized for service in the Spanish-American war. He served with the Georgia regiment until November, 1898. In September, 1899, he enlisted in the 40th United States Infantry for service during the Philippine insurrection, and was successively promoted to sergeant and 1st sergeant before he was discharged to accept an appointment as second lieutenant on May 18, 1900. He was mustered out of the volunteer service of June, 1901, having received an appointment as first lieutenant of infantry, regular army, in February. He was promoted to captain in March, 1911; to major in August, 1917; to Lieutenant Colonel, July 1, 1920 and to colonel, July 1, 1927. During the world war he held temporary appointments as lieutenant colonel and colonel.

Colonel Caffey was a member of the

The Frock With the Jacket

The frock with the jacket continues to dominate the mode for early Autumn. We all seem to think that it is early enough to get into our full-length coats. Lots of dark brown is being worn, often allied with eggshell or beige, a very charming color combination and next in popularity to black with white, so far as present indications seem to show. Surely clothes were never more entrancing than those offered this Autumn.

Today we show a very charming frock, a model that will pay for itself many times over in service and beauty. It is in very dark brown silk tricot with a tiny eggshell satin Peter Pan collar and large satin puffs coming from between the set-in sleeve. It is worn with a packet that repeats the puff on the sleeve in the cloth that exactly matches the color of the tricot frock. There is a stitched suede belt that buckles at the side.

MISS BETTY GASTON ENTERTAINS WITH DELIGHTFUL PICNIC AT RUSS POOL

One of the enjoyable events of the past week was the picnic and swimming party that Miss Betty Gaston gave at Russ Pool. The guests arrived at the Pool at eight o'clock and swam until half past ten when a delicious picnic supper was enjoyed. Those enjoying Miss Gaston's hospitality were: The Misses Virginia Ellis, Elizabeth Beatty, Emily Brown, Mary Lou Tindall, Louise Waddington, Betty Welty, Jane Lindroth, Flora Nelson, Esther Weeks, Eleanor Bonesteel, and Messrs. Dick Welty, George Crandall, Dick Pruitt, Caldwell Foos, Jack Coulter, Mike Montesinos, Al Seely, Bob Leech, George Griswold, Bud Chaston, Howard Liston, Junior Beatty, and Roy Bodine.

MATA HARI

The Story of the War's Most Notorious Spy

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Mata Hari, famous dancer and enemy spy, undertakes to get some secret papers from her lover, Shubin, Attache of the Russian Embassy in Paris. But Shubin has been unerved by a visit from Dubois, head of the French Secret Service, and refuses to discuss them. Learning that the papers are in the possession of a young aviator, Alexander Rosanoff, who is infatuated with her, the dancer goes to his rooms and makes love to him while her agents abstract the papers, copy them and return them at dawn. Mata Hari then steals away and meets Adriana, a fellow spy.

---

But she met the flattery with a little grimace of annoyance. "Oh—he has ikons and eternal lamps—he's religious. And then, he's quite a baby. It's too easy. No fun."

"You're not, by any chance, sorry for him?"

"Heavens, Adriana! He's nothing to me. What a strange inquisitorial mood you're in today!"

The owner of the Pavilion had also another gambling-house, much more obscure, off one of the Boulevards. The dancer accompanied him to his office there where he warned her again.

"Careful they don't take that away from you."

"Never fear."

Ordering her chauffeur to turn back, she then stopped for a few minutes at the house of the man who arranged her music. It was true that they were contemplating a new series of dances and Mata Hari could almost have wished that she were going to spend the morning in the concentration of hard preparatory work. The excitement of last night had faded and in its stead came a puzzling kind of dissatisfaction. Was this going to bore her, too? Heady as the taste of danger was, in between were long periods of routine when, from among her following of soldiers, she culled those who were valuable, extracted from them bits of information and passed these on to Adriana. After a while, she did not even need to extract. The men would do anything just to see her. There was a young British officer who had dogged her footsteps with all sorts of pathetic promises and she had allowed him to trail after her until he had proved to be of little use. But even now when he had a leave, he came to Paris and

EASY WINDOW CLEANING

By ELEANOR ROSS

There are some household jobs that all of us dread and yet we should all be able to do them. One of the most detested of all tasks is that of window washing. When the window cleaner does it, the whole affair seems so delightfully simple and we begin to wonder why we should spend money to have so simple a task done. And we remember the time that we did wash the windows and all the effort we put into it and the mess that we made. Well, today let's face the task of washing a window without flinching and see if we can't make it simple, if not interesting, by discussing a method that needs the least effort and yields the best results.

The Proper Method

First of all dust the window and the surrounding frame and wood work thoroughly. Then take a pail of tepid water and a soapy rag well wrung out and wash the wood work well. Go over it with cold water. almost dry. Now for our window. If there are any paint spots on the glass, a little vinegar will remove them. Take your rag wrung out in tepid water and wash the glass inside

Chesterfield Program Hours Are Changed

A new idea in daily broadcasting will be inaugurated Tuesday, September 6, when Chesterfield's six-day a week "Music That Satisfies" program will be heard at two different hours.

The purpose of this change is to give those who for various reasons might find it inconvenient to tune in at 10:00 P. M., E. D. T. an opportunity of hearing each of the three Chesterfied programs at an earlier hour. This, so far as is known, is the first time a six-day a week program has ever been put on a two-time schedule.

When this alternating schedule goes into effect, September 6th, the series starring Ruth Etting, the Boswell Sisters and Arthur Tracy, the "Street Singer," will be heard thereafter at 10:00 P. M., E. D. T., on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays and the same artists will be heard at 9:00 P. M., E. D. T., on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. The sequence of the artists' performances will not be changed but their time schedules will be altered as follows (all E. D. T.):

RUTH ETTING—Wednesday, 10:00 P. M.; Saturday, 9:00 P. M.

BOSWELL SISTERS — Monday, 10:00 P. M.; Thursday, 9:00 P. M.

THE STREET SINGER — Tuesday, 9:00 P. M.; Friday, 10:00 P. M.

TREATISE ON TERMITES
or even
BAD CESS ON TERMITES
(If you get what we mean)

The numerous, pale-colored, soft-bodied social insects of the family Termitidae received no end of publicity a few years ago when the Depart of Agriculture published an erudite paper on Termites. Certain pertinent extracts were broadcast for the benefit of the Services, perhaps the best of which was the terse description of insect habits. . . . "They undermine the home." Wags, in ribald jest, promptly applied the name "Ter*mite*" to a few contemporaries who were suspicioned of being not above a mild bit of philandering.

The term has rapidly broadened in its application, and we find that at Fort Benning the termite has fallen from his high estate and has become not the wolf who leaps in ravening but the jackal who by sly and cunning tricks snatches from the fireside such morsels as are left unguarded.

The habits of the termite cannot be discussed in the wholesome Benning Herald. His technique, if chicanery may be dignified by the term sacred to the heart of the Third Section, is, because of its very simplicity, difficult to describe. Perhaps the reader can best be served by a study of the following sad case which occurred last night, or Saturday night, or any damn night.

"Captain (. . . Lieutenant) Lawson (. . . Westlund, Sweeney), meet Miss Glotz," said Jack Griffith, or Jack Walker, or anybody but the three termites recognized above.

"Miss Blitz, you said?" hinted Sweeney (Lawson, Westlund).

"No, Miss Glotz," said the beautiful blonde.

"Ah yes, G-l-o . . . ?" hinted Westlund (Sweeney, Lawson).

"o-t-z Glotz," finished Griffith.

"Ha, ha, ha! of course. Glotz! Why, we've met before! You live in Wynnton, on Benn . . . "

"No, you've forgotten,' interrupted the sweet young thing. "I live on Fourth Avenue."

"Of course. How stupid of me!" leered Lawson (Westlund, Sweeney). I remember now. Your phone number is 9237."

"No, it's 54 . . . . "

"Thanks, old pal," smiled Sweeney (Lawson or Westlund, as the case may be), taking out a fat notebook and adding just one more address to the amazing total.

Less than a week after Captain Vermette sank his tee shot on the 4th hole, Captain K. L. Berry ruined the afternoon for the rest of his foursome when he made an ace on the 16th hole. Old hunters will receive the news with disappointment, for Captain Berry is spending every possible moment on the golf course and has deserted two perfectly good bird dogs in pursuit of doubtful thrills among the divot diggers.

While Lieutenant Harry Dowdall, on pass from the Officers Club, worried in for Ireland about his enlarged waist line, Lieutenant Hamner, Engineer and snake hunter, watched nervously what appeared to be a fast shrinking torso. Both officers spent an uncomfortable summer—one actually cut down on starches and the other was reported contemplating a daily ration of cod liver oil.

Relief was considerable—and mutual—when it was discovered last week that tuxedo coats had been exchanged since June.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

YOUR CHILD

The school bell is about to ring. Is your child ready to start without the physical handicaps that are so often neglected?

The progress that each child makes in school depends on many things, one of the most important of which is the factor of good health and his ability to keep in good physical condition throughout the year.

Parents should ask themselves the following questions: "Is the vision and hearing of my child normal?" No child can make progress without these. "Are the teeth in good condition?" Toothache and arithmetic do not mix. Dental infection may stunt growth. "Are my child's tonsils and adenoids normal?" Diseased tonsils and adenoids cause many ills. "Is my child's back straight?" Are his feet normal? Is he well nourished and normal in weight?" Start now to remedy these handicaps before school begins. "Is my child protected against diphtheria, typhoid fever, and small pox?"

The conditions incident to school life expose your child to contagious diseases. Some of them can be prevented by inoculations or vacinations. Early in the school year medical officers will make a physical examination of all children attending the Post Schools. This examination will take place at the schools and will furnish answers to the above questions. Notice of defects found in your child will be sent you, following which you can consult with the attending Surgeon for the remedy.

and out. Take off moisture with the same rag, rinsed and wrung dry. The thing is to see that the cloths are well rinsed and wrung as dry as possible. Now for our polishing. Take a wad of tissue paper and polish the glass until it sparkles, which will not take long with this method. Lots of workers prefer the tissue-paper polisher to a chamois wash leather. And if you rinse and wring the rag well, only the one rag will be necessary.

Washing Lace Curtains

Even if one isn't very interested in the trends of interior decoration, even a casual survey of the furniture shops will reveal the fact that house furnishings and decorations have gone Victorian. Perhaps this is in keeping with the feather boas and fringe that marks the new fashions.

So now that Victoria is victorious in the home as well as in fashions, it is quite evident that lace curtains are coming back. In fact, several stores report that they have recently sold out their entre stock. And so if you have, or are planning to use lace curtains, here is a tip for washing and hanging them that has just been given to me. for readers of this column, by a famous decorator. Wash the curtains in several waters until all the dirt is out. Make a clear, thin, hot water starch and pull curtains through this solution. Squeeze starch out well. Put curtains, while still wet, on the rod and replace rod. The whole trick is to pull the curtains into shape and position while they are yet wet. They'll be dry in ten minutes. They will hang more beautifully and gracefully than ever before. Never iron lace curtains. By this method, you'll keep them for years without even one tiny hole in the net and they will always look handsome.

"Better be damned than mentioned not at all."

RANDOM THOUGHTS ON CELESTIAL PHENOMENA

One thing that we haven't used so far in our efforts to keep the Flare burning during our protracted (for these days) absence from the source of intimate items about people we all know is astronomical phenomena. Such stupendous facts as the size of Betelgeuse, the distance of the spiral nebulea, the speed at which the component parts of the exploding universe are rushing toward outer space, and the alleged salary of Constance Bennett have been spared the devastating comment of our corroding pen.

Two factors have fortified our restraint in this matter. In the first place we don't know much about them and, in the second, we have a strong suspicion that our readers wouldn't be interested. Not that either of the factors taken separately or in conjunction would withold our hand—far be it from such. We frequently write most convincingly and talk most eloquently on subjects we know nothing about—the stock market for instance—and we refuse to abstain from uplift just because we don't think people are interested. The greatest reward of uplift is realized only when the exhortations of the uplifters fall on deaf ears. For them the uplifter becomes one with the major and minor prophets and saints and experiences, in a mild but none the less satisfying form, the bitter-sweet pangs of martyrdom. The chief reason why we haven't written upon these matters before is because they aren't news. It may be true that the universe is exploding, as Sir James Jeans says it is, but, according to his own statement, the process has been going on for billions of years already and will continue for billions of years longer before everything goes haywire. The matter doesn't qualify as one of the great issues of the moment and we can't do anything about it, anyway. It is something for our extremely remote descendants to worry about, not us.

The recent eclipse of the sun is in a different category. We couldn't do anything about that either, but, since it is a current event, it deserves honorable mention in this up and coming column. If we didn't say something about it, our faithful readers might think we were taking a siesta when it came off.

True, it was only a partial eclipse as viewed from Ohio, and Georgia—Eastern Canada would have been a better place to see it from, for more reasons than one—but, since a lot of us may miss the next American appearance, we hope you all saw this one.

We usually refrain from criticising celestial appointments, but it does seem a pity that ringside seats for a big time number like an eclipse of the sun are usually located in some out of the way place like Africa, South America or the South Sea Islands. Of course, the principal use of eclipses in times past has been to give explorers and adventurers with a bit of scientific information a chance to escape from the toils of native medicine men by imposing upon the minds of the untutored savages, but we feel that it is time that the American People got a look-in. Here is a great opening for Democratic statesmen who are hunting for new faults to pin the Republican administration.

It is fortunate for the race that the eclipse of the sun is a transient thing, lasting only a couple of hours. There are other eclipses which we should like to watch and we could endure it if these were total and permanent. We list a few:

The Depression (Bound to occur sooner or later).

The Bear Market (Maybe this one has started).

Prohibition (Fairly good prospects).

The Pay Cut (This would help most of all).

Brother Leard's Thanatopsos Luck (No chance).

The Flare (That's how we feel every every time we sit down to write it).

THE DEFENSE RESTS

Our Monday morning fan mail brought a welcome missive from a former Benningite and neighbor, Mrs. D. E. McCunniff, wife of the versatile Professor, whose reputation as a tactician and explorer and economist we did so much to further in this column. The envelope contained a bit of clever verse by Margaret Fishback, which we reprint below for the benefit of husbands and wives who never know when to go home. Attached to the clippings was a brief notation in Mrs. McCunniff's own hand, which read:

"Nothing personal about this, old dear!!"

The remark is obviously ironical but we can't see how it applies to us. We are practically always ready to leave the gayest parties at three o'clock. All we have protested against in the past is the tendency on the part of certain otherwise charming people to break up lively gatherings of congenial spirits at half-past ten—just when things are beginning to get good.

HOME, JAMES, HOME

When orchestras pipe down at three
And everyone is pleasantly
Exhilarated, I contend
That's a good time for things to end.

Instead of which, there's always some Determined reveller who's come
To the conclusion that we must Prolong festivities or bust;

Who will suffer others to Leave when they've seen a party through,
Whose loud insistence hugs the dregs
Of music, drinks, and scrambled eggs.

Why must there always be that one
Diehard, who will not let the sun
Come up alone, who lumbers on
His elephantine way till dawn?

I may be militantly prim,
But God! When people get so grim
About their merrymaking, I Fell less inclined to laugh than cry.

restatic Candidate for President, conformed to political precedent by making the customary pre-election attack on Wall Street.

"Wot the Hell," snapped the General into the microphone of the public address system, "A poor man like me scrapes ogether a little jack and invests it in good faith in some sound stock like Western Union Railroad on a conservative ten point margin, and the next day some whippersnapper of a margin clerk calls him up and tells him he's got to put up more because his stock is down six points. Then, if he can't put up, he gets sold out and the market goes up twenty points. Or maybe he does put up and in that case the stock keeps on goin' down until the investor ain't got no more to put up. A poor man, especially if he's a military man like me, can't beat that sort of racket. What we've got to have in this country is government regulation of the stock market so as somebody can tell which way it's goin'. That way the poor man has a chance. When I get in office, I'm goin' to issue the orders for the stock exchange and I'm goin' to let the army officers and other dubs get their pickin's just the same as the big financiers, only they'll be out of it because they'll all be sellin' the market short when it's goin' up and goin' broke the same as you and me under the old rules. And wot's more, I'm goin' to put a tax of a dollar a work on margin calls, and if them whippersnapper margin clreks don't like it, I'll line 'em up against a wall the way I did when I was in the Islands, in the Days of the Empire."

Leading stocks sold off several points when it was learned that Fuzzard was to speak against the moneyed interests but the market recovered as soon as the full import of his plan was realized. The usual number of amateurs were whipsawed in the process.

SURVIVAL OF THE FIT

We note with pleasure that Gunbotham II has resumed his entertaining column upon the manners and customs of the community. When we heard that our gifted contemporary's summer headquarters had been moved from Russ Pool to the target range, we feared for the worst. We know from experience that target ranges do not afford the best environment for the growth of budding literary genius. It takes a hardy plant indeed to endure long continued exposure to the direct rays of broiling sun for even the best brain doesn't function when scorched on top. Moreover, the incessant noise of rifles going off scares away the elusive muse and to watch a carefully instructed boloman take windage the wrong way in record practice makes a sensitive soul incapable of logical thought for at least a week.

That Ex-Lifeguard Munson's talent for pertinent comment has survived the vicissitudes of arduous duty with troops practically assures the incoming Tank School class of a capable scribe to chronicle the high aims and misdemeanors of the faculty and the bright sayings and doings of the students.

On The Q. T.

By B. B. S.

THEY TELL US this one on Corporal Jack Johnson of "C" Battery, 83rd: "At one time, although he is a Belgian, Jack was in the Russian army. His uncle put him there, insisting that he become a great soldier. Jack needed money, as did all ambitious soldiers in those days, but Uncle Abner was tight like that.

Jack hit upon an idea, and wrote home in this manner: "Dear Uncle—I am such a success in the army they have promoted me to the cavalry, and I must have money for a horse".

This was a good idea, for all Russian military men must buy their own mounts. After a long wait, Jack received the following reply to the dig: "Dear Jack—The letter in which you ask for money, I didn't get. Don't be such a success as they might promote you to the navy, and I ain't got money for a battleship".

SOMETHING AWFUL is going to happen at Gowdy Field ere the baseball season is over, according to the local daily of recent date. We want to be on hand to witness what ever it is, as Webster is unable to enlighten us onthe subject. Let us quote them on their views of the possible outcome of the last half race:
"Should the Medicos drop their next games and the Irish come through with a trio of victories it will mean opdihtrxneters shrd ocmf ocmfwyop a play off."

It looks as though the boys are going to have to wear gas masks for that part of the season to stave off destruction.

IT NOW APPEARS likely that the boys trying to get off to a flying start on the Enlisted men's Golf Tournament are going to be halted at this late date owing to the fact that they can't get just two or three more members to turn in their scores for the qualifying round. Just a case of a few bashful divot diggers not being willing to make a sacrifice for the benefit of one of the finest games ever evolved.

THE TOTS STOLE the day at Russ Pool Wednesday morning. It is a marvel the way these youngsters take to water these days. We remember how long it took us to learn to keep our equilibrium in the creek holes, and shudder when we think what would have happened had we dived off the bank backward into deep water. Well, times do change, and that is one reason we say the depression has to lift soon . . . before time gets in a rut.

WE STILL THINK the majority of Umpires should be muzzled even while on the streets. Don't get us wrong, but Master Sergeant Maxmillian F. C. Wolfe deserves a lift. He

Cinema Calendar

for Grand, Rialto and Royal

AT THE ROYAL

(Beginning with a midnight Show: Saturday, 11:15 P. M.)

ALSO SUNDAY, MONDAY AND TUESDAY: Presenting, "THE FIRST YEAR", with Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell. The seventh heaven of the first year. Their courtship . . their wedding . . and that unforgettable first year . . with all it's tenderness, heartaches, headaches and comedy . . . it's near-tragedies and glorious moments of patching quarrels with thrilling kisses. Charlie as a hasty husband and Janet as an inexperienced wife. Fumbling through the mistakes of that first year. Making mountains out of misunderstandings Thrilling to the fun of making up.

AT THE GRAND

SATURDAY, SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Presenting, "GUILTY AS HELL", with Victor McLaglen, Edmund Lowe, Richard Arlen and Adrienne Ames. The picture makes sport of the conventional murder thriller by developing as a comedy, instead of a mystery. Lowe and McLaglen try to solve a murder that the audience sees committed at the opening of the film.

* * *

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Presenting, "LOVE IS A RACKET", with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. Doug has the role of a young New York columnist, a Walter Winchell type, who misses freely with gangland and the people of the stage and screen. He is madly in love with Frances Dee, who plays the role of a show girl; but the two hundred a week he gets for writing his column isn't enough for France's maiden aunt, who thinks in terms of thousands, not hundreds.

AT THE RIALTO

NOW PLAYING: Bob Steele in another of his typically western pictures that find favor with all audiences. The title is "TEXAS BUDDIES".

SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Presenting, "LETTY LYNTON", with Robert Montgomery and Joan Crawford. She thought all men her playthings—until fate took a hand. Can a woman love many men, then really love only one? Modern society, the younger generation and a terrific harvest from past indiscretions figure in a kaledoscopic romance in "LETTY LYNTON." The story of that of an heiress, whose preoccupapations with the new "feminine freedom" entangles her in a dangerous affair with an ardent South American lover. When she ultimately leaves home for her true lover, an American, she is followed by her former lover and is subsequently involved in a scandal which results in the South American's death with all fingers pointing to her as the murderess. The outcome makes for an intriguing drama of the firs torder, giving both Miss Crawford and Montgomery every opportunity for effective portrayals.

TUESDAY: Presenting, "ARE YOU LISTENING?". with William Haines and Madge Evans. Bill Haines plays his first serious role. Can you imagine it? The activities of a national radio broadcasting station form the background for the engrossing story told in "ARE YOU LISTENING?". It delves into the less familiar behind-the-scene aspects of the "radio racket".

Royal to Reopen Saturdav Evening With Great Bill

After having been closed all this month, the Royal theater will be reopened to the public Saturday night. During its period of inactivity, the playhouse underwent a number of renovations, among them redecorations.

Manager Brewer will have a splendid program to offer Royal patrons on opening night. There'll be dancing in the theater lobby and mezzanine floor, with music furnished by the New Georgians, from 9:30 P. M. to 10:30 P. M. after which three will be stage entertainment until 11:15 P. M. the time for beginning the picture program.

And what a picture to get started with: "The First Year", with Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell. This presents tender situations and merry complications in the first year of married life.

With shorter hair now in vogue, Janet Gaynor has appeared in the favorite haunts of the screen smart set wearing a new hair arrangement that seems destined to become accepted styles.

Her hair is especially luxuriant and of a rich copper-brown shade. It lends itself admirably to the new brushed back hair style which reveals the hair line, either on the forehead,the neck, or all around the head, as fancy wills.

Miss Gaynor has had her hair cut since her return from Paris, where quite short hair is the mode of the women. The new arrangement, similar to her "Delicious" bob, which swept the realm of the debutantes last winter, is soon to be seen in "The First Year," her latest Fox production. She has had about two inches of hair cut from its length. Her hair is parted on the right side and falls in its natural wave all around her head in horseshoe shape. On either side the hair is brushed back, revealing the hair line. The rather heavy bank which characterized the "Delicious" bob has been reduced to an ethereal bang that softens the forehead hair line. Across the back of her neck the hair line is visible from ear to ear. The ends ofthe hair are finished in innumerable curls that roll upward, youthfully.

Paramount Makes 900th Picture

Showing one each day, it would take nearly two years and a half to display 900 feature-length motion pictures.

But it takes 20 years to make that many pictures.

"Guilty as Hell," a murder comedy featuring Edmund Lowe, Victor McLaglen and Richard Arlen, which comes to the Grand Theater Saturday, Sunday and Monday, is the 900th picture to be produced by the Paramount studios since their founding in 1912.

Its production was a landmark celebrated by the studios with a banquet attended by stars, directors, writers, executves and office workers.

Careful recor ls on the number of pictures made at the studios have been kept since 1915, when each film produced was given a number. The first picture on which a record remains at the Paramount studio is "The Squaw Man," which was Number 5.

Previous to 1915, motion picture production was a hit-or-miss proposition. As half-reel pictures expanded to three reels and then to feature length they were turned out without records. But in 1915, when the industry organized itself on an efficient basis, and as the feature-length film became the most important form of entertainment, the record system was introduced.

Paramount's No. 900, "Guilty as Hell," is an adaptation of Daniel N. Rubin's play, which enjoyed a long run on Broadway last season. Lowe and McLaglen are cast as a police reporter and a detective, respectively, who set out to solve a murder which

"Letty Lynton" To Show Again In Columbus

"Letty Lynnton" with Joan Crawford and Robert Montgomery in the principal roles is the attraction comfiing Sunday to the Rialto Theatre. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's sensational filmization of the Marie Belloc Lowndes novel is an intriguing drama of modern morals with a vivid climax in which the heroine is faced with the choice of loss of reputatio or prison. Clarence Brown, who la directed Miss Crawford in "Possessed," screened this new romance South America and New York. A notable supporting cast includes Nils Asther, the noted Swedish player, Lewis Stone, May Robson, Louise Cosser Hale, Emma Dunn Walter Walker and William Pawley.

the audience has seen committed. Their bungling toward a solution provides many amusing situations before they are finally successful.

Sgt Plummer Being Congratulated

Master Sergeant Bert Plummer, 29th Infantry, is shown here being congratulated by Colonel John J. Toffey, commanding officer, 29th Infantry on his retirement at a review held recently in his honor in the Cuartel.

MATA HARI

haunted all the places where she appeared.

He was just as guileless as the young Russian, Rosanoff, just as infatuated, yet in his case she had had no compunction. Having tried to use him and found that it wasn't worth the trouble, she refused to see him. Well, neither had she any pity for Rosanoff! Of course not. She had dismissed him; it was only because of the papers she had gone to his rooms. If she did not mean to try to mould him to her uses it was just as she had told Adriana; because it would be too easy. No fun. Realizing that she had been staring at his ring, she turned it around so that the jewel was hidden.

It was ridiculous of her to think of routine—as if every second of this ordinary drive wasn't replete with risk. The incriminating paper in the loose, heavily-embroidered sleeve of her jacket meant certain death if it were found on her—and if she could not get away. But to carry proof that couldn't be explained and couldn't be lied out of was sometimes an unavoidable necessity even for he prudent Adriana.

By this time, they were not far from the offices of the Russian Embassy. The chauffeur was ordered to wait for her at her dressmaker's in the Place Vendome, and she made sure he had gone before she proceeded on her way. It was easier to take note of pursuit while walking. Purposely, she loitered, looked in windows, stopped to make a purchase, but could trace nothing to confirm her suspicions.

Only when Mata Hari got into the lift leading to Shubin's office did she have an odd feeling of sureness that her instinct had been right. Perhaps he—the special man—hadn't even troubled to follow her, was waiting her here. Perhaps they had some information today of all days.

In the corridor, she knew. She heard footsteps, turning a corner, then thudding behind her on the thick carpet. It was too late to retreat, and it would be foolish too. for they would not care to search her on Russian ground. Could they arrest her? With Shubin there to protect her? With her hand on the knob, she paused and glanced over her shoulder. The man had paused, too. He was studying the carving on a door.

An attendant met her in a little private waiting-room full of gilt tables and sofas. Once Mata Hari had been able to do him a very great favor and when he saw her his wrinkled old face broke into smiles of admiration and humble gallantry.

"Madame, it is a long time since we have had the pleasure. And just this morning when the Colonel is not expected!'

"Oh, you know it's only last month—or was it last month?—that I came and had a ong chat with you" remarked the dancer in a friendly manner while her eyes clung to the door and she made a rapid adjustment of her plans to Shubin's absence. It didn't do to be nervous. If there was a way out, she would find it. "It's a pity about the Colonel. I wanted him to take me to lunch. Perhaps I could leave a note for him."

"Certainly. Certainly. Make yourself at home."

Edgren Looms As Griffin's Next Opponent

Batton Will Meet Tough Battler In Semi-Final Fracas

Although Captain Fry will not at this time release any information pertaining to the next fight card at Doughboy Stadium, speculation is running rampant as to who the contestants will be. It is understood that arrangements are being made to give the fans another card full of action for the next show, packing a little more action into each bout in an attempt to make it the premium affair since the days of Willie Ptomey and Gunner DePratt.

It is no idle rumor that John Corn Griffin has been picked as the top-notcher on the next program. Corn is in good fighting trim, but is necessarily laid up for a short spell due to a recent tonsilitis operation. He is about ready to settle down to the old training grind and get in shape to take the toughest boy Captain Fry can find for him.

It is thought that Frankie Edgren will be the boy picked to do honors with Corn. In the event he is chosen, the Athletic Association has nothing else to worry about re. the attendance that night, with the possible exception of weather conditions. Either of these boys should pack a house, and with the two matched to exchange wallops, it is a dead cinch that the house wil be overflowing for the fight.

Edgren packs a wallop, and is no mean boxer. He is somewhat of a clown, and for that reason the fans would like to see his block knocked off and handed the crowd ss a token

Wotta Man is Grumpy (the Great) Gordy

Ah, but what a guy the gentleman whose likeness is reproduced above happens to be. He, my friends, is the mighty Grumpy (the Great) Gordy, of Benning, who meets Kid Baisden, Valdosta sensation, at Hancock's Arena on Friday night. Gordy is the boy who made the song, "River, Stay Away From My Door", famous in these parts.

In this corner you see Grumpy, Grumpy Gordy, Fort Benning's most popular dispenser of pugilistic entertainment! How do we know it? Well, he told us so himself, and when Grumpy says anything, we are compelled to believe it. You can tell by the earnest look on his face that he never cheated in a horse trade in his life.

Grumpy tells us further that as a fighter he is the best fireman on the Benning Reservation, culling none. He has the push and fuel it takes to go over the top of the hill, and that is just where Grumpy is headed, over the hill.

Now don't get us wrong. The great Grumpy isn't headed for a spell at being A. W. O. L., but is on the other hand going to take a fling at making Kid Baisden wish he were somewhere else than in that ring in Hancock's Arena tonight. Grumpy says he has the stuff it takes to make Baisden climb through the ropes and cry for warm milk. He says that what he will do to those lips of the Kid's is nobody's business, and that he can lick anybody his weight in this neck of the woods, as a chaser.

When Grumpy sticks out that old long fishing pole left hand of his, some fighter is going to connect with the other end in a rather abrupt manner. One of his haymakers is enough to put Maud, Atlanta's famous elephant, in a trance . . . or sumpin'.

Just bear in mind, we know all the above to be the truth, nothing but the truth, so help us over the fence, for the great one told us so himself.

Pigskin Beckons Gridiron Warriors As Football Season Nears Opening

High up above the ramparts of the Doughboy Stadium, an oval shaped leather pellet shoots skyward and then comes down in a long, graceful spiral to land in the arms of a green jersied runner, who tucks it under his arm and flashes down the field on winged feet. From down the field a pair of burly tackles bear down upon the speeding runner, for a moment it resembles a game of tag as the ball carrier weaves in and out, cuts back, loose hips and changes his pace to throw off the charging tacklers. Swift-as the spring of a coiled rattler, a tackler plunges. A beautiful tackle, just above the shoe tops. The runner is down, pellet still tucked safely under his arm. From down the field comes the rasping voice of the coach, "Nice run, Red." "Nce tackling there Smith, but hit 'em harder, treat 'em rough."

It is the beginning of football practice. Only a few days and Gowdy Field will be as silent as the tomb. All the pomp and glory will be moved to the chalk marked field and towering ramparts of the Doughboy Stadum. There during the winter the fans will shout themseves hoarse as rugged army footbal machines rage and tear into each other in gridiron duels that are only won by brains, grit and muscle.

And it looks as if we are going to have a football season that will go down in history. The Tankers loom as a power this year, even at this early season. Their backfield will feature three players that would no doubt be picked for all-army honors. Knub Bennett, power driving fullback, will be doubly dangerous this season with Bill Swantic, as a running mate. It is claimed that Swantic hits as hard or even harder than Bennett. Daniel Sullivan, veteran rock of the Tanker back garden will be in there in most of the tornadoes. O'Brien, (as we know him) is a new comer that will bear watching. This boy can step the century in ten flat, and they do say that he is a night-mare to opposing tackles. Louis Joris, Frank Vallery, Love and other star backfield men are also out for duty for the Tanker team. The Tanker line has always been strong and this year will be no exception. Quite a few of the old timers will give way to youngsters, but these youngsters are mostly veterans that have been priming for several seasons.

The strength of the Kellys will also be more greater than it was last season. Buck Tinsley will no doubt see his best year at fullback. Kelly will be active in piloting the backfield. Blackstone, formerly of the First Bats, will

Benning Juveniles Steal Spotlight In Entertaining Meet at Russ Pool

The little fellows and ladies, of the Garrison came to the front Wednesday morning at Russ Pool and furnished all with a half day of real entertainment. The races were closely contested in nearly every event.

Russ Pool was lined with a good sized crowd of spectators who were as full of pep as the contestants. Not a race went without its full quota of enthusiasm.

The little fellows took the honors of the day in annexing the interest of the show. Their swimming proved that the instructions given at Russ Pool each year are of great advantage to those who avail themselves of the opportunity.

The following results are as released by Headquarters, The Infanrty School. Outstanding among the events was the 25 yard free style race for little girls between the ages of 6 and 8 years of age. Little Nancy Eagles led the group and crossed the line a winner in 27 seconds. Elizabeth Wallace came in second. Mary Yancey, age 7, led the little lassies across the finish line in the 25 yards, back stroke race. Eleanor Kingman came in a close second.

In the 25 yards, free style for girls between 8 and 10 years of age, Frances Kellam took first honors in 21 seconds flat. Martha Jane Rooks was second by a split second. In the 25 yards breast stroke, Virginia Pope breasted the tape in front with Celeste Berry second. Little Miss Kellam came back to take first place in the fancy diving for the young ladies of this class with Mary Neundorfer, second.

A small army of youngsters between the ages of 6 and 8, competed in the 25 yards free style race for boys. After a flash of splashing and spluttering Ralph Wall came in in front with Tom Berry a close second. Tom Berry copped the 25 yards back stroke with Billy Spalding second. Tom Cota took the 25 yards breast stroke with Billy Spalding in second place. Ralph Wall won the fancy diving, John Cleveland took the second honors in this event.

Ann Kraft took top honors in the girls' class between the ages of 11 and 13 years. In the 25 yard free style Ann came in first with Betty Negrotto a close second. Ann came back to nose Helen Kellam out in a beauti ful finish in the 25 yards back stroke race. Ann Mae Huling won the fancy diving contest with Marguerite Wolfe taking second honors.

K. L. Berry, Jr., was the outstanding star among the boys in the 11 to 13 yeras of age, class. Berry copped the 25 yard free style, well out in front with George Bell second. Berry led the pack in the 25 yard

Kellys Retrench For Second Half Pennant Pursuit

The past week of baseball at Fort Benning has brought several upsets. The Irish finally came to life and celebrated their awakening with a 6 to 3 rout of the Medicos. Gilbert, Conductors are firing overtime and raging Irish sluggers. Pat Stevens twirled one of his best games for the wearers of the green and was never in danger.

The Tankers have really began to roar. The big guns of the Caterpillar Conductors are roaring overtime and heir trail is being marked by triples and three baggers. Tuesday afternoon the Tankers proceeded to break all former records by poling out three circuit clouts in one game. Two of these wallops cleared the right field wall. Duffer Hull collected two and Baldy McLane accounted for the other. Bill Swantic, third party of the long range trio, presented a triple to the day's bingling. The Kellys were the victims.

Just at the present time it is hard to say just what team will play the Kellys for the post season championship. The Medicos are on top but both the Tankers and Irish are thundering away at their heels.

The Tankers carry the offensive power. If they continue to hit they are going to be hard to stop. They carry a pair of excellent twirlers in Lindsey and Swantic, and Rusty Rowan, portsider, is still able to go the route. Daniel Sullivan, catcher, does not show much style but he is one of he hardest working catchers in the loop and above all he is a fighter.

The Irish have one of the leading curve ball pitchers in this section of the country in Stevens. He has not been going so good all season but flashed old time form in recent games. Delano has speed and a good curve. Old Man McGaha, with proper support, will be dangerous against any outfit. Reddock looks the best back of the platter. The Irish are weak with the willow. A little more offensive power and they would be unstoppable.

The Medicos have been the sensation of the league all season. Fans have predicted that they would crack up. They are still showing the way. Big Gilbert failed to come through in his last game but that boy has plenty of stuff and will win more ball games. Barnes is a nice curve ball pitcher and also has a nice baseball head to think with. Newman is one of the smartest young catchers in the league.

The Medicos are also blessed with several dangerous hitters. Barnes, Gilbert and Mosley form a trio of batters that hit all kinds of pitching. In a series of games the Medicos will hold their own with any of their rivals.

The Kellys with the first half tucked under the belts, are preparing for the championship struggle. At the present time they possess the strongest defensive team in the loop in the field but have no pitching staff. Haines turned in a nice game a few days ago and the lanky boy will probably be their main-stay in the series. Pyle has a nice curve ball but the veteran has lost the old zipper. Foster has plenty of stuff on the agate but is also lacking in steam. "Gentleman Jim" Ward looked like the berries for this season but failed to come through.

With good pitching the Kellys look like favorites over any of their rivals with the exception of the Tankers. If the Tanker hitting continues they may prove the sensation of the season.

Army-Navy Resume Amicable Relations for Next 3 Years

Eligibility Rules Disregarded In Contract

Franklin Field, Philadelphia, will be the scene on December 3rd, of the resumption of the old Army-Navy feud.

Since December, 1927, these two service institutions have refrained from playing one another, due to difference of opinion as to eligibility of the players. While the Military Academy stuck to their guns, saying each cadet had a right to play on the teams, regardless of how long he played elsewhere, the Naval institution just as strongly adhered to the three year rule.

Now everything is settled for the annual classic in football to be played between the two teams without any strings tied to the proceedings. A contract has been signed with the two institutions whereas they will play for the next three years, with no questions asked.

Since 1927, the teams have played two games in opposition, the Army emerging in each contest the victor. In 1930, the score favored the Army 6-0, and in 1931 they turned the trick with a neat 17-7 count.

It is all well and good that these two mighty aggregations of gridiron warriors should be brought together again in friendly combat. Those last two games were played solely for the benefit of charity, and since they were playing one another regardless of the circumstances, reconciliation seemed to be inevitable.

Now that the arrangements have been made, and contracts signed for this classic, all the fans will have to do is wait until the third of December rolls around to settle that all important question: "Can a Navy Goat whip an Army Mule?"

Swimming Champs To Be Determined At Russ Pool Sat.

Benning's Annual Swimming Classic of Much Interest Interest This Year

Beginning tomorrow morning at 8:30 o'clock, the annual Garrison Swimming Meet will get under way. This meet promises to be of more interest than any other meet ever held at Fort Benning, as the competition will be more distributed than heretofore.

Of course, the Tankers and Second Battalion will be in on the first and second places, but who will be first, is the question. Many favor the Tankers, judging from their past actions. Some of the students of aquatic sports, however, give the Second Battalion a more than even chance to cop the honors of the day.

During recent months, the Second Battalion has recruited men to their swimming ranks that will add greatly to their chances to win the carnival. They have some fast swimmers, who will place high in the racing events, while their diving chances are far in advance of those of other organizations.

The Tankers have all their strength in the distance swimming and will probably concentrate on that one phase of the meet. They will place one man in the diving contests, which will bring the decision of the meet down to the relay.

The relay is the event that has decided more contests than any other division of organized sports. It is this hard, grinding test that the skill of the cream of the fighting teams must pit their all in an effort to eke out a win for their team, and will give the spectators more to look at than the rest of the meet combined.

PIGSKIN ARTISTS BEGIN WORK

prove a terror to opposing line. Tommy Thompson, Sanders, Swede Oikra and other seasoned veterans will be big factors in completing one of the finest backfields the Kellys ever boasted.

Little is known of the Irish at the present time but it is a safe bet that they are not letting any grass grow beneath their feet. A large number of youngsters from foreign service have returned to the First Bats during the past year. It is rumored that there is quite a bit of football material in this group. Add several high speed players to last year's Irish team and they are going to be a dangerous combination.

The Galloping Gunners are quite on the subject. They sent one of the strongest teams of all times out last season but the team failed to function and finally crumpled. Only a remnant of that team is left for this season and the Gunners will be badly crippled unless they are able to rebuild with new material.

The Special Units of the 29th Infantry, may or may not have a team. If they have a team it will hardly win a pennant but it is a safe bet that the Pirates will be out there fighting. Fans still remember the unseasoned Pirate team of 1930, that failed to win a game but that crossed the goal line of every opponent.

back stroke. Edward Johnson gave Berry a great fight in this race and was a close second. Berry took his third first place, defeating Arthur Wolf in a close finish first honors for fancy diving.

Jane Kraft took high point honors among the girls' class of 14 to 17 years of age. Marion Vien won the 50 yards free style with Betty Gaston second. In the 50 yards back stroke, Esther Weeks went out in front to take first honors with Jane Kraft in second place. Jane Kraft won the 50 yard breast stroke, leading Louise Waddington, winner of second place, by a full second. Nancy Stillwell won first honors for fancy diving with Ruth O'Neal second.

Mike Montesinos proved to be the big shot in the class of boys of 14 to 17 years. Mike took first place in both the 50 yard free style and 50 yard back stroke. Henry Barkhurst finished second in both events. Jr. Beatty won the 50 yards breast stroke with Earl Barkhurst second. Beatty won the fancy diving contest with Montesinos second.

Miss Nancy Stillwell took top honors in the Ladies Class, Dorothy Lynch came home first in the 50 yard free style with Peggy Ward second. Mrs. Eagles won the 25 yards free style with Mrs. Cota second. Nancy Stillwell easily won the 50 yard back stroke. Mrs. Bowen finished second. In the 50 yard breast stroke Mrs. Bowen and Miss Stillwell fought it out in a close finish with Mrs. Bowen winning.

Well, it's al over at last. Range work, we're talking about, and we are going to celebrate one of these days with a big supper. The third platoon is high, with the second platoon low. The low platoon does the work for the supper, the next low entertains, and the high one sits back and enjoys the whole thing. And we certainly have some hot entertainers, musicians and comedians. We're looking forward to a very interesting program. High score man is Sgt. Barnes, with a score of 320.

We have one new Sgt. and two new Cpls., viz: Sgt. Harvey White, Cpl. Carl Cooper, and Cpl. William Singletary. Congrats, fellows. Some new Pfcs., too: Ellis, Andrews, and Skates. Pvts. Herrington and Wofford have been promoted to Specialists sixth class.

It seems that the boys are taking the advice of ye scribe seriously and reenlisting. They know a good thing when they see it. I think that old Meal Ticket looks rather good at this time. Well boys, we're glad to have you stay with us for three more years.

We're glad to have Pvts. Mount and Braswell back with us after a short time in the hospital. We also hope to have the other boys back soon.

If Cpl. Cappell doesn't stop getting so many phone calls, we'll have to install a new phone for his private use. Maybe he can find the time to let Pfc. Skates use it for a few minutes. What do you say Skates?

of mute evidence that he is not the king of contenders. Corn Griffin is the local man who should be able to do that thing. With a left hand as heavy as the Tanker it would be hard for anyone to lose a fight.

Then out of the scramble of the possibilities for the fight comes one Cotton Batton of the 24th Infantry, who, as you know, can box rings around any colored middleweight fighter in this neck of the woods. Cotton has a style of fighting that is hard for any of the younger colored fighters to fathom, much less come to even terms on the wnning side.

With all this in view, the athletic officials are bending every effort to secure real competition for this excellent fighter. It has not leaked out as to just who will be his opponent but it is understood that the wires are hot between here and Miami, trying to trace to his lair some member of the gentry of color who is willing and able to stand before Cotton for at least six of the eight rounds in the semifinal.

Fans are breathlessly waiting the lifting of the cloth of secrecy about the approaching card, and will heave a sigh of relief when the officials finally release the story to the public. Come a couple of weeks we should see some real fighting in that there "bull pen."

TOWN TOPICS

Capt. Barnett, of 16th Obsn. Sqn. fame startled the habitues of Post Headquarters Thursday by appearing on the scene with his new shoulder bars, about four inches long, glaringly denoting the fact that he has recently risen to a higher rank.

On investigating this alarming phenomenon, your correspondent discovered that the aviator was wearing them as a result of an agreement which sounds suspiciously like an election bet, though there was no money up on it. Apparently someone had dared him to wear them, and he swore he'd do it. Therefore his presence around Headquarters was visual evidence of the fact that the clique of aviators is very conscientious about keeping its vows. (To some of those who may, on some future occasion, have to make an aerial trip in the company of one of the Post's bird-men, we recommend the foregoing method of ensuring a safe journey.)

The informant who so kindly tipped us off to Captain Barnett's strange behavior, also added the somewhat doubtful suggestion that we look into the matter deeper, hinting that perhaps Ham Kelly might have had a finger in the pie somewhere along the line. Ham's joking streak, as is very well known, has been known to show up in just such cases as this, and he seemed, indeed, a very likely instigator of the plot. But, on calling up the new-fledged captain, this writer was very positively informed that the jokester this time was the Post Publicity Officer, crashing into print again, who had conceived and executed the idea, and had even gone so far as to make the bars!

And, when one considers that Lt. Yarborough was the little bird that tipped us off to the whole business, even going so far as to post the name of Kelly for culprit, one begins to wonder if the Publicity Magnate hadn't tried to kill two birds with one stone—i. e.; pull a fast one on the conductor (with apologies to E. F. H.) of this column, and hang a good one on Ham.

Fort Benning and Muscogee County are at last becoming color-conscious. This streak of modernity is beginning to show itself everywhere, being possibly an outgrowth of magazine articles on the harmonious lighting effects being conceived for the buildings at the World's Fair to be held at Chicago. Our only warning to the exponents of this latest type of culture, is . . . . don't go too far. We'd hate to see the stadium painted pink, the gymnasium blue, or green roads, such as we've heard existed somewhere in this country. This method of educating the populace into color-consciousness may be effective, but we'd like ours in smaller doses!

For the benefit of those who would like to know the occasion for this outburst of superfluity, we point to the red, blue and yellow lights on the Brown Street Viaduct, the brilliant colors on the sign on the Fourth Section building, and to the houses of that already famous street "Rainbow Row."

Germany Planning World-Wide Air Service

Object of Captain von Gronau's Flight Around the Globe Is to Make Survey of Arctic Route, Linking Germany and North America with the Orient.

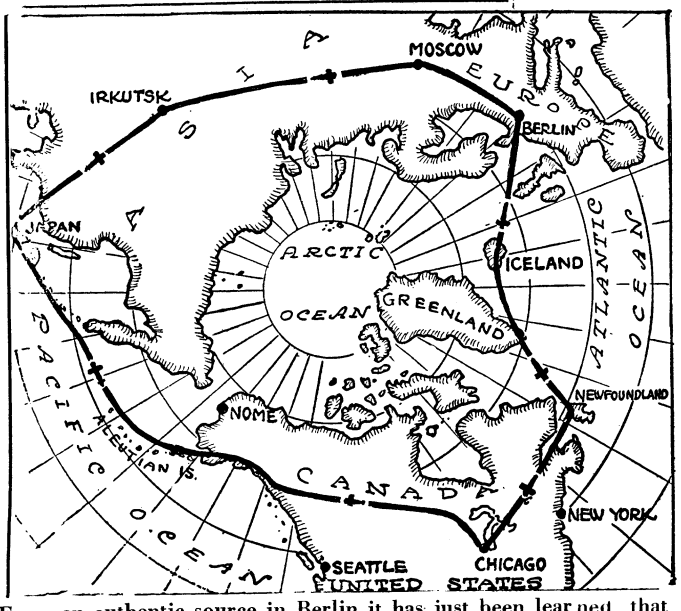
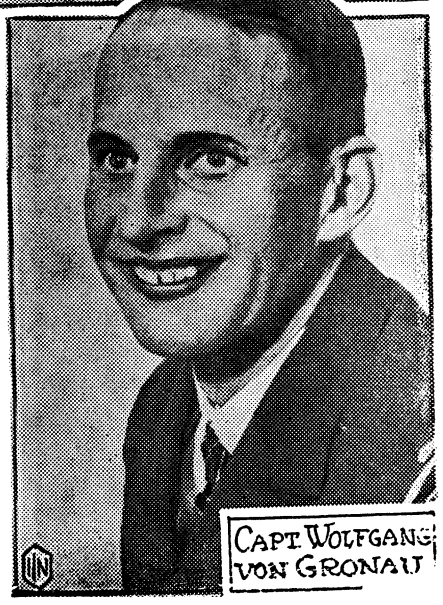
VON GRONAU'S ROUND-THE-WORLD PLANE





From an authentic source in Berlin it has just been learned that the seemingly purposeless 'round-the-world flight of Captain Wolfgang von Gronau and his two companions is of vital interest to his country. The German ace, who has made three successful flights from Europe to the United States, is engaged in collecting data for a proposed air mail and passenger service linking Germany with North America and the Orient. For years, ever since aviation began to take giant strides ahead, Germany has toyed with the idea of a trans-Atlantic air service. But it was with lighter-than-air craft that she always speculated. However, the success of von Gronau in making three trips to the United States in a Dornier Wal flying boat, via the Arctic route, turned attention to the possibilities of that type of craft. The route followed by von Gronau on his trips to this country has been by Iceland, Greenland and Newfoundland. He reported that with the establishment of proper refueling stations at designated points along this route a regular service is practical. The map above shows the route which von Gronau is now engaged in surveying. The Pacific water jump is practically the same route taken by Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh last year, when he flew to Japan and China. At that time Col. Lindbergh reported on the possibilities of a seaplane service between the United States and the Orient.

Chapel Guild To Entertain At Post On September 14

On the evening of September 14, between the hours of 7:00 p. m. and 12:00 p. m., the Garrison will be entertained by the Protestant Chapel Guild at the Post Gymnasium. The entertainment will be in the form of a chicken dinner and dance, with no efforts being spared to insure the success of both. Aside from the dinner, fun and amusement will be the order of the day, every one being invited to attend with full intentions of enjoying a most pleasant evening.

Mrs. P. J. McNulty will be present as hostess to the guests, while Mrs. J. S. Fuller is in charge of the committee for entertainment.

The Chapel Guild was recently reorganized at Fort Benning by the wives of the enlisted men, and has made fast progress toward forming into one of the leading organizations of its kind to be organized on an army post.

Music for the dance will be furnished by the 29th Infantry Orchestra. This alone will assure the guests

Lt. Col. Jewett Takes Command Of Special Units

Lieutenant Colonel Frank F. Jewett, recently on duty with the 12th Infantry Fort Howard, Md., arrived at Fort Benning on Tuesday and was assigned to duty as commanding officer, special units, succeeding Colonel Daniel D. Berry, who departed from the post several weeks ago, in the latter capacity.

As commander of the special units, Colonel Jewett will have under his jurisdiction The Infantry School Detachment, Company C, 2d Chemical Regiment, Company A 7th Engineers, Flight B, 16th Observation Squadron, Detachment 5th Signal Service Company, the 17th and 72d Ordnance Companies, the 86th Motor Repair Section, the 100th Motor transport Company, Detachment Quartermaster Corps, and Detachment Finance Department, comprising in all approximately twenty five officers and six hundred and ninety men.

Colonel Jewett was appointed a second lieutenant of infantry in February 1900, and was promoted to first lieu-

Commander Of Post's Air Forces Becomes Captain

The promotion of Lieutenant Lloyd Barnett, commanding officer of Flight B, 16th Observation Squadron, Fort Benning, to the grade of captain, was announced officially in war departments orders received at Headquarters, The Infantry School on Wednesday.

Captain Barnett has been stationed at Fort Benning in command of the local air corps demonstration unit since June 24, 1930, and since that time has directed numerous air corps tactical missions and demonstrations in cooperation with ground troops for The Infantry School.

The promotion of Captain Barnett was made after twelve years of service as a first lieutenant, the long period of service as a subaltern being due to the stagnation of promotion in the army. Captain Barnett enlisted in the Aviation section, Signal Corps on April 12, 1917 and was commissioned a second lieutenant, air service, on May 16, 1918. He served overseas during the world war, and after his dis-

Inventor Of Fast Tanks Is Recent Visitor At Post

J. Walter Christie, noted American inventor, whose designs of fast tanks and armored cars are attracting the attention of armies of the world, was a visitor at Fort Benning, on Thursday. Mr. Christie, who is the guest of Major Sereno E. Brett, tank member of the Infantry board, during his visit at the post, called upon Major General Campbell King, commandant of The Infantry School, at his headquarters, and discussed with him some of the features of his latest model fast tank, which is now undergoing tests at the Christie plant at Linden, N. J., and at Fort Eustis, Va., and which probably will be seen at Fort Benning within the next few weeks.

One company of tanks at Fort Benning is already equipped with Christie tanks, which have already upset many conceptions of tank methods and tactics through their remarkable demonstrations of speed and maneuverability. Mr. Christie's latest tank differs in some respects from those now in use at Fort Benning, particularly in the size and weight.

Recent tests of the newest model have exhibited a speed of a hundred and ten miles an hour, and in a cross country demonstration of the vehicle, it leaped a fifty foot stream while traveling at a speed of about forty-five miles per hour.

Ceremony Marks Observance Of Lafayette's Birth

A brief, informal ceremony marked Fort Benning's observance of the one hundredth and seventy fifth anniversary of the birth of General Marquis de Lafayette, distinguished French soldier who aided the American colonies during the struggle for independence. The exercises took place at the monument on Lumpkin road which commemorates the visit of General Lafayette to Georgia in 1825.

Major Maurice D. Welty of Headquarters Staff, represented General King, the commandant, at the exercises which included the playing of the Marsellaise, the laying of a wreath on the monument, and the playing of the Star Spangled Banner by the 29th Infantry Band. The ceremony took place at five o'clock, upon the arrival of Mrs. Fay Gaffney, representative of the local branch of the D. A. R.

Colonel Shuman Inspects Theatre

Colonel John B. Shuman, of the Adjutant General's office, where he is in charge of the Army Motion Picture Service, was a visitor at Fort Benning on Thursday. While at the post Colonel Shuman inspected the remodeled main garrison theatre and viewed the the progress of construction of the new 24th Infantry theatre. Colonel Shuman departed Thursday afternoon for Fort Screven, Ga.

Cinema Calendar

for Grand, Rialto and Royal

AT THE ROYAL

(Beginning with Midnight show, Saturday, 11:15 P. M.)

ALSO SUNDAY, MONDAY AND TUESDAY: Offering, "HORSEFEATHERS", with the four Marx brothers—Groucho, Harpo, Zeppo and Chico—outstanding comedians of the day. On grand horse-laugh kicks gloom where "X" Marx the spot. A romance of love among the wild oats . . . or what will the harvest be? Sense? Neigh! Neigh! But a buggy load of laughs tuned up with songs and glorious with gingery girls. A picture that's all tickle and giggle. But why elaborate on a Marx picture. Every release of these four shatters box office records everywhere. (Note: Strongly recommended by this paper).

AT THE RIALTO

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY: Offering, "DESTRY RIDES AGAIN", with Tom Mix and his famous horse, "Tony". Says Tom: "Howdy, boys! I'm ridin' again. Good old Tony is with me, snortin' and pawin' aroun' crazy to get goin'. What we won't do them rat-faced scum that framed Destry ain't worth talking about. We're on the prod. Watch out for us."

* * *

SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Offering, "AS YOU DESIRE ME," with Greta Garbo, Melvyn Douglas and Eric Von Stroheim. The adorable Greta plays the part of a Budapest cafe singer in thi sone. And, too, she's a platinum blonde. The settings are extraordinarily beautiful.

* * *

TUESDAY: Offering, "AROUND THE WORLD IN 80 MINUTES," with Douglas Fairbanks. Some strange and unusual experiences are recorded, among them the feat so celebrated with the street fakirs of India who make a rope hang in midair, unsupported, while the magician's boy ascends it.

* * *

WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY: Offering, "ALMOST MARRIED", with Alexander Kirkland, Violet Heming and Ralph Bellamy. The weirdest, strangest love story of the year. A brilliant musician's mind gives way—leaving him with a mania to kill the woman he loves.

AT THE GRAND

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Offering, "STREET OF WOMEN", with Kay Francis and Roland Young. A love story that would startle Paris. Her romance shocks society—wrecks a marriage—shames her brother. It tears the heart of the daughter of the man she loves. Yet she calls it beautiful.

* * *

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY: Offering, "TOM BROWN OF CULVER," with H. B. Warner, Tom Brown and Richard Cromwell. In this picture you'll find youth on parade. It is just such a picture that will hold your interest every minute.

QUEER QUIRKS OF MARX FOUR DISPLACE CHRISTIAN LABELS

Arthur, Julius, Leonard and Herbert Marx are four of the best-known comedians in the world, but you've probably never heard of them.

They're known to you as Harpo, Groucho, Chico and Zeppo, respectively. Collectively they're the Four Marx Brothers, and you may see them in "Horse Feathers," their latest picture, at the Royal Theatre beginning Saturday night.

It was at Gilesburg, Ill. that Arthur, Julius and Leonard suddenly became Harpo, Groucho and Chico.

Art Fisher, one of vaudeville's leading monologists, was playing poker with them after the show one night. He gave them the titles—Groucho, because Julius always looked so serious; Harpo, because Arthur always strummed the harp; and Chico, because Leonard's ability to dispose of fried chicken was well known.

The fourth Marx Brother at the time was Milton, who retired during the war and was succeeded by Herbert. Milton was nammed Gummo, because he always wore rubbers, then called gum boots. And Herbert, when he took Gummo's place, took the title Zeppo.

"SKYSCRAPER SOULS"

"Skyscraper Souls," a spectacular drama in which the lives of thousands of persons who work in New York's largest building serve as a kaleidoscopic background, will open Saturday at the Grand Theatre with Warren William and Maureen O'Sullivan heading an outstanding cast.

Floor by floor to the summit of its 102 stories, that skillful architect of the drama, Director Edgar Selwyn, laid the structure of a series of climaxes, of unexpected triumphs and despairs which summarize the lives of those mad pursuers of the American dollar—the office workers of a modern skyscraper.

"Skyscraper Souls" follows the modern trend of motivating screen drama through the background. "Grand Hotel," "Union Depot" and "Transatlantic" were forerunners of this type. But the skyscraper, according to Selwyn, is the most ideal of all backgrounds for this purpose, because it is a perfect microcosm of the life of a metropolis. It teems with every phase of human endeavor. There are to be found the rich and poor, the great and humble, the old and young—all eking out their lives in a common pursuit of money.

Various Lives Entangled

In adapting the story from Faith Baldwin's novel, "Skyscraper," the dramatists, C. Gardiner Sullivan and Elmer Harris, show how the machinations of one man or a group of men can entangle all the separate lives of the skyscraper occupants in a single web of disaster. But in the end, it is the skyscraper itself which dominates.

"ALMOST MARRIED"

Four Broadway stars, players who climbed to the very apex of theatrical fame, will be seen in the leading roles of the Fox Picture, "Almost Married" when that spine-chilling drama opens

Miss Heming, who, incidentally, created the role of "Rebecca" in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," endeared herself to New York theatre-goers in "3 Faces East" and "The Rubicon," and played with George Arliss in the original production of "Disraeli."

Kirkland won his fame with the New York Theatre Guild in such successes as "Wings Over Europe," "L'aiglon" and "R U R," while Bellamy played in "Town Boy" and "Roadside." "Almost Married" marks the second picture in which Bellamy and Kirkland have played together, their first joint screen effort being "Surrender."

Dinehart is a star of the Belasco school. After making his debut in "The Girl of the Golden West," he rapidly rose to leading parts and then to stardom in "Applesauce," "The Marriage Bed," "Lawful Larceny" and "Cheaper To Marry."

BEAUTY AND THE LUNATIC are Violet Heming and Alexander Kirkland in the new Fox thrilling drama, "Almost Married." IPC

Since going to Hollywood he has appeared in the screen productions, "The Brat" and "Good Sport."

"Almost Married," heralded as a "human" mystery thriller, revolving around a "devil's triangle," the focal point of which is a mad musician, played by Kirkland, whose ruling obsession is that love can be fulfilled only by the murder of the one he loves. William Cameron Menzies directed the production.

INFORMAL DANCE AT 29TH INFANTRY CAMP SUCCESS

Among the delightful affairs of the week was the informal dance Saturday evening held at the attractive 29th Infantry camp. During the evening a receiving line was formed to welcome the newest bride and groom to the regiment, Lieut. and Mrs. Lon H. Smith. Many informal dinners were held before the dance which was attended by the officers and ladies of the regiment and their guests.

COLONEL AND MRS. JOHN J. TOFFEY HOSTS AT DINNER BEFORE 29TH INF. DANCE

Col. and Mrs. John J. Toffey were the hosts Saturday evening at a delightful dinner at the Officers' Club preceeding the dance at the 29th Infantry camp. The table was graced by a silver bowl of pink radiance roses and tapers of corresponding colors were used. The guest list included: Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Andrew D. Chaffin, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Homer H. Slaughter, Maj. and Mrs. John W. Foos, Capt. and Mrs. Horace Cushman, Capt. and Mrs. John Albright, Capt. and Mrs. Norris Wimberly, Capt. and Mrs. Russell Reynolds, Maj. Lyman Frasier, and Capt. Arnold Funk.

Jack Pitcher, and Messrs. Robert Jones, Robert Foos, Roy Bodine, Dick Welty and James Newgord.

Today's Fashion
By VERA WINSTON

Ideal Clothes for Schoolgirls

It is a delight to step into the section of the store that is devoted to girls of schoolgirl age, and handle the splendid clothes designed for the young lady of tomorrow. It must make every middle-aged woman envious to look at the wearable, smart little dresses and then envision the heavy, oldlooking clothes that she was forced wear. The clever people who design children's clothes are apparently psychologists for they seem to know just what will please a youngster and make her look trim and smart and yet keep her juvenile charm and freshness.

Today's sketch shows a typically smart example. It is in a lovely shade of marron, the fabric, wool crepe. Epaulettes are extended to form a cape collar in back. For color accents there are white angelskin satin bows and white buttons. No little girl will ever develops an inferiority complex wearing a frock of this type. And the clothes selected for children have more to do with this than the average layman suspects.

MISS EMILY BROWN ENTERTAINS WITH SUPPER PARTY

Miss Emily Brown attractive daughter of Col. and Mrs. Thomas Brown, entertained Saturday evening at the home of her parents with a delightful buffet supper and dance.

Zinnias and other mid summer flowers were used as the decorations. Miss Brown had as her guests a few of the members of the younger set. They were: The Misses Maxine Rife, Louise Waddington, Mary McDavid, Jane Lindroth and Messrs. Roy Bodine, Bob Besson, Al Seeley, Dick Pruitt, Bud Cheston, George Griswold and Jack Coulter.

GUNBOTHAM'S SCHOOL DAZE

BY E. L. M.

In rehabilitating Block 21, the Quartermaster faces a job no easier than the prize package handled by Hercules when he cleaned up the Augean Stables. Dozens of carpenters are repairing doors and walls where generations of lieutenants have whiled away the hours throwing punches, chairs and other lieutenants in divers tests of beaverboard's resistance to penetration. Whole squads of painters are splashing away at the ceilings—paying particular attention to the dark splotches where the gingerale shot higher than expected. An anvil chorus of hammering, plus the too frequent rasp of saws, renders afternoon sleep even more difficult than it is under normal conditions—viz: two hundred radios going full blast.

Perhaps lack of sleep accounts for the irascibility of a prominent bachelor who complained vociferously at the recent animated discussion of the movie, "Horsefeathers."

* * *

Captain Lawson and Lt. Westlund, headliners in last week's expose of termiting, have pointed out to the Herald that they are mere followers of a system originated, perfected and practiced by Lt. Augustus W. Dannemiller, social satellite of the 29th Infantry. Leading in the race for first position honors—yes, dozens of unsolicited and unpaid for names come to us daily—are the inseparable cotillion leaders, Lts. Pulsifer and Lightcap.

* * *

Not to be outdone by the Flare in its search for young Army poets, we've racked our memory and finally recall in its entirety a ballad composed, sung and almost forgotten in a single night. The prose inserted among these stirring lines crept in to mar the flawless meter during a few rash moments when okolehao was substituted for lukewarm saki. Yes, the more we think about it, the more we think we've found a genius. Besides, our man teaches a sound moral lesson in words that the readers of this column can understand. Which, after all, is—well, it's something.

* * *

Beekman came from Boston,
A scion of Back Bay.
He gazed on other people
In a patronizing way.
He came to Honolulu
To raise the moral tone
Of thousands there, benighted—
And resolved to keep his own.

"Lift up the white man's burden
And preserve your moral tone."
Was the burden of the messages
That Beekman brought from home.

The tinkle of laughing voices. The ping of somisan. The whisper of the trade winds in the palms. Yeah, you've guessed it. A Japanese tea house. Sure, he went alone. And again. And again.

For he'd found a new diversion
Midst the flowered, panelled walls.
In the glow from charcoal brazier
Sits a maiden who enthralls.
A laughing, sloe-eyed maiden
Pouring out his cup of tea—
And the shades of Back Bay gibbered
For she was a Japanee!

Nice goin', Bill. How about a fast one? Skoal! An' lissen—let's sing the next verse to Bible Tales. You know —"Old Folks, Young Folks, Gather 'Round An' Hear—"

There were days of artful planning,
There were nights of plans awry.
There were pleadings, there were urgings
That were answered with a sigh.
Then, firm arms and body breathless,
A promise fraught with bliss,
And Suzeki, sweet and tender,
Answered—with a kiss.

"Me think you very nice man.
Me like stop by you.
But we not stop long here, now.
No sir—no can do!"

Suzeki smiled—didn't she Bill? An' let's have a snort. Cheero! What will we have her say? How's this? "Maybe tomorrow we go Kailua, eh?"

There were hours of fevered waiting,
Of anticipatory bliss.
There were moments when he doubted—
But the doubting was amiss.
The time is fast approaching.
He stops to get his hat,
And, to calm his pounding pulses,
With the yard boy stops to chat.

Nose a trifle sunken,
Pock marked face agrin,
Cracked and dirty hands,
A scar upon his chin.

Whoa, Bill. That's not so hot. Well, yeah, just one more. Um-m-m good stuff! How's this line? Ito, the yard boy, bowed low. . . .

"I like to catchem pay now.
My girl I like go see.
She work by Japanese Tea House,
On beach by Waikiki.
She very fine girl I think, sir.
Her name, sir? Suzeki!

Then a tried and outraged conscience
Came to life with pangs reborn.
Through Hell's own fire went Beekman
By a million devils torn.
But he still was far from Boston,
Though no longer much alone.
For he travelled with the multitudes
Who've lost their moral tone.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

NOTES FOR NEWLY ARRIVED PERSONNEL

Each year we print in this column advice on general Sanitary Conditions at Fort Benning and indicate the important things you should know to prevent illness in your self or family.

These apply to all members of the Command, those living in Columbus as well as those having quarters on the Post.

CLIMATE—Subtropical, about eight months of the year are hot. Humidity is high. Plenty of sleep is the best method of preventing mental or physical breakdown.

WATER SUPPLY—The post and city water supplies are both excellent. Water from any other source may be polluted and dangerous. It should not be used for domestic purposes until it has been examined and declared safe.

FOOD—Food products especially meats sold by the commissary and post Exchange are inspected by the Veterinarian. Dairy products sold on the Post are from inspected sources and are believed to be safe. Be sure you know the quality of these products if you buy from other places.

MILK—Only pasteurized milk is safe. Only pasteurized milk is allowed to be delivered at Fort Benning. If you can not obtain the post supply, the Foremost Dairy in Columbus is the only other concern that sells pasteurized milk.

ICE CREAM—The only kind authorized for sale on the post is made from pasteurized milk and cream.

VACCINATION—(a) Small Pox is fairly common in this vicinity. Vaccination to prevent this disease is therefore important. If you have not been vaccinated within the past year have it done immediately.

(b) Typhoid is also quite common. All persons between the ages of 2 and 45 should be inoculated. If you or your family have not completed two courses of injections, do it now.

DIPHTHERIA—Parents are urged to have their children tested (Schick Test) to find if they are susceptible to diphtheria. Children under the age of five are practically all susceptible to this disease and should be immunized. Older children need testing to find if the immunity be lasting. If it is not they should be re-inoculated.

HOOKWORM—The soil throughout this part of the country is contaminated with the eggs of hookworm and other parasites. It is inadvisable to allow children to go barefooted.

COMMON COLDS—Very prevalent and very contagious, it is rather expected that one of the first things you do on joining this station is to catch a common cold. Remember that the earlier you isolate yourself and the earlier you start treatment the less likely you are to spread the disease to others.

CHILDREN'S SCHOOL—Parents are advised not to send children to school when ailing. Teachers at the Post Schools are instructed to send children home on the least suspicion of illness or of a contagious skin disease. Medical Officers conduct at the Post Schools a physical examination of all children early in the school year.

SERVANTS—All servants at Fort Benning are required to obtain a permit. This permit will not be issued until the Attending Surgeon certifies that the servant is free from contagious disease. Military personnel not living on the post are entitled to have their servants examined by the Attending Surgeon in Columbus.

DOGS AND CATS—All dogs and cats must be registered. They must also be inoculated against rabies.

SNAKES—Poisonous snakes are more or less common. A curative serum is kept at the Hospital for the treatment of snakebite. Prompt, early treatment will prevent fatalities.

MEDICAL ATTENTION—
Attending Surgeon, Post.
Office—Dispensary "A".
Office hours: 8:00 A. M. and 1 to 2 P. M. except Saturdays, Sundays and holidays when the hours are 11 to 12 A. M. Inoculations and Vaccinations (Women and Children only) are given Mondays and Saturdays at 9:00 A. M. Baby Clinic—Wednesday at 9:00 A. M. Colored Servants Examinations—Tuesdays and Thursdays, 9:00 A. M. House Visits—Requests for visits to persons unable to come to the office for treatments should, if possible, be made before 9:00 A. M.
ATTENDING SURGEON. COLUMBUS—Office—Doctor's Building, 1310 Broadway, Telephone 255.
Office hours—11 to 12 A. M. and 2 to 3 P. M. except Thursdays, Saturdays and Holidays and Saturday and holidays the hours are 10 to 11 A. M.

CONDUCTED BY E. F. H.

MORE UPLIFT

Our present policy as conductor of this column is to publish from time to time something really worth while. It may be original with us, but the odds are against any such radical departure from our accustomed vein. The best bet is that it will be someone's else.

As previously stated in this column our versatile garrison has among its members a real poet. Now a poet is like a prophet in many ways, the most striking being that he is not without honor save in his own country. Thus it happens that our poet is better known, as such, among the publishers of good literature than he is among the rough soldiery with whom he associates. The following selection, for instance, was published in the Herald Tribune Sunday Magazine several years ago, and the author received something more for it than a mere honorarium. We mention the sordid commercial transaction in order that our clients may know that we aren't trying to foist upon them some literary tyro whose stuff isn't good enough to get by with the professional critics.

Some day we may tell you the name of our poet but not yet. Once more however, we assure you that it isn't us. We aren't that good.

FOR A TOWN WITH AMBITION

"Watch us grow! Watch us grow!"
Cymbals clash and bugles blow.

Why would you procure a crown
Of steel and concrete for this town
Whose lovely brows have known the bliss
Of laurel leaf and clematis?
Why would you shut out the day
With sky-tall tombs of leprous gray?
Why would you shut out the night
With cruel swords of blinding light?
Surely you can hear the song
Of these old roads that dream along
Aware of neither time nor haste;
Old men they are who slowly taste
The rich, rare wine of olden years.
But lo! Your metal giant appears
And where they moved a greasy girth
Of asphalt scars the patient earth.
Have you no thought for this sweet air
Of pungent pine and maiden hair
And acrid wood smoke, blue and thin,
That you would bring your engines in
To vomit soot on rose and tree
On church and home, on you, on me?
Is there no beauty in your dream
That you would choke this clear, swift stream
With power mills, with power slaves,
Where now the weeping willow waves
And silver trout flash brightly thru
The faintly fragrant crystal blue?

Yet here where maples, row on row,
Dream deeply of the long ago,
You'll build tall temples to your pride
When this small town is crucified.

"Watch us grow! Watch us grow!"
Cymbals clash and bugles blow.

SOME THOUGHTS UPON RETURNING FROM LEAVE

Our vacation, if we may call it that, is over. Unlike a good many Army officers of our acquaintance, we never find time hanging heavily on our hands when on leave. We invariably manage to keep so consistently on the jump that it always seems quiet and restful to be back on the job. The foregoing remark leaves an opening for some wise-cracking associate to come in at this point with an obvious "naturally" or "why not, or "of course," but we'll let it stand. It is enough for us to spoil such a highly original remark by anticipating it.

Benning isn't a hard place to come back to—even from a pleasant and more or less carefree leave of absence. Unfortunately, we happened to check in soon enough before the Herald goes to press to disqualify an alibi for not furnishing our customary contribution and yet not long enough to get the low down on all that has happened while we were away. This practically ruins the first twenty-four hours, but it can't obscure the fact that Benning is really a delightful station. Just as soon as we grind out the required volume of copy, we intend to set about enjoying as many of its facilities for a happy existence as we can.

Our first brief inspection of the post reveals almost unbelievable progress in the beautification of the grounds surrounding the new quarters. Block 16, with the exception of our lawn, which is badly in need of a hair cut and manicure, looks like a well-kept park and Rainbow Row isn't far behind. In spite of all the propaganda which the Flare has put out from time to time, people have gone ahead planting, trimming, mowing and cultivating until the once barren wastes left by the new construction have been transformed into a botanical paradise. It grieves us a little to think that our influence is so slight, but, after seeing how well things look, we are really glad that nobody paid any attention to our anti-gardening campaign. We take off our hats to Captain Whatley and the individual home-builders whose combined efforts have done so much for Benning scenery. We haven't much talent along that line ourself but we approve it in others.

THE FLARE

Come to think of it, maybe our articles upon landscape gardening may not have passed unheeded after all. The present style in exterior decorating runs to broad expanses of greensward. That is what we have contended all along.

To judge from the marked absence of scandal which we find after nearly two months away, we are almost forced to conclude that Benning has become either excessively virtuous, exceedingly discreet or commendably closemouthed. We can't quite believe, however, that any of these conditions has come to pass. It just ain't natural. The fault must be with us. We probably haven't seen the right people yet. Wait till we confer with Mrs.—— but perhaps we'd beter not mention any names. You know anyway. She lives in every block.

Speaking of scandal, there is a dirty rag called the "Ohio Examiner" which is causing a lot of excitement up in the dear old Buckeye state where we spent most of the summer. It makes a business of publishing all the back-fence gossip it can pick up. Like the Flare, it uses names either in the clear or very thinly disguised. Somehow or other, we failed to get written up in it and thus lost another fleeting opportunity to become famous. This oversight, however, should not prejudice anyone against the paper. Maybe we didn't do anything to merit the distinction. We shouldn't have mentioned the matter at all except to absolve ourself of any personal animus toward the sheet. What we started out to say is that if the editor gets clear of all the indictments now standing against him, it might be a good idea for the Herald to bring him down here to run a real column. Gunbotham II, Town Topics and the Flare could lay off and watch the circulation mount—until the military authorities gave a swift demonstration of how to deal with that kind of freedom of the press.

MOVIE TITLE

Captain Howard Wilson, Librarian and recent bridegrom, brings in this one. Please don't hesitate to interrupt, if you've heard it:

The filming of Hawthorne's "Scarlet Letter" was in progress and the production and directing staff was in heavy executive session over the manner of a title. As always, something thoroughly up-to-date possessing a stronger box-office lure than the author's original name for the story was being sought. Various possibilities were proposed but the prize for originality and punch goes to the bright young college man who suggested that they change the name to "How Hester Won Her 'A'."

TOUCHE

Our daughter just breezed into our sanctum with a stimulating messgae from Miss Betty Gaston, Titian-haired sub-deb. Betty had just remarked that she was glad that we were back on the job because the Flare was pretty lousy during the summer while our substitute, whoever he might be, was writing it. Gracias, senorita, we never missed an issue!

CHAPEL GUILD TO ENTERTAIN WITH DINNER AND DANCE SEPTEMBER 14TH

of a nice evening of entertainment, as these musicians are a group of talented professionals in their lines.

If the Guild were promising only a chicken dinner, it would well deserve the crowd. As an added inducement the dinner is being given in conjunction with an up-to-date dance. It will pay well in dividends of joy and pleasure, as the proceeds will be used by the Guild for its worthy cause.

The admission price is fifty (50) cents. Canteen checks good. Tickets are on sale at all orderly roms.

The officers of the Guild are as follows:

President ——————Mrs. P. J. McNulty
V. President————Mrs. John Crandall
Secretary ——————— Mrs. Johnson
Entertainment—Mrs. James S. Fuller

The menu:

Roast chicken, giblet dressing, potato salad, sliced tomatoes, lettuce, celery, macaroni and cheese, coffee, lemonade, bread.

Dinner will be served from 7:00 p. m. to 10:00 p. m.

Dance from 8:30 p. m. to 12:00 p. m.

MATA HARI

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Mata Hari, famous dancer and enemy spy, undertakes to get some secret papers from her lover, Shubin, Attache of the Russian Embassy. But Shubin has been unnerved by a visit from Dubois, head of the French Secret Service, and refuses to discuss them. Learning that the papers are in the possession of a young aviator, Alexander Rosanoff, who is infatuated with her, the dancer goes to his rooms and makes love to him while her agents abstract the papers, copy them and return them at dawn. Mata Hari then steals away to get a document from Adriana, a fellow spy, for Shubin to decode.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Before the writing desk in the corner, he held a chair for her to sit, he fussed with a pile of papers and envelopes for her to choose from, he complimented her in a deferential way on her dress and her beauty, of a wrinkled neck and thought how marvellous it would be if one could wring it. And all the time she had to smile and respond, at least in monosylables, her eyes never moving from the door. At length, he had done with hanging over her and went back to his own little table where he took up a newspaper.

That which is most obvious and naked to the eye, precisely this the eye may miss altogether!

It was one of Adriana's most oft-repeated aphorisms. To which he added, however, that good judgment was the better part of boldness. That time Mata Hari's belongings had been searched in England, she had outwitted them by submitting without protest, by answering all questions willingly, by showing that she had in her possession not one false-bottomed trunk, not one paper or letter that would not bear examination. But then she had had nothing incriminating with her except her mind—and except the bottle of fluid disguised as perfume for revealing

Griffin-Edgren Bout Of Much Interest

Batton-Chauffeur Picked To Battle Hard In Semi-Go

Prelims Greatest Ever Staged In Benning Arena

Fans have been relieved of their anxiety as to when Frankie Edgren, the Wyoming Cowboy would meet Benning's own, John "Corn" Griffin. It has all been arranged that these two prime fighters should lock horns next Tuesday night at Doughboy Stadium. The signing of these high class fighters to top the card was a nice move for the benefit of the fans, and is supported by a fine semi-final and preliminaries of the first water.

Local fans are about evenly divided as to their choice as to who will win in next Tuesday night's fracas, and speculation is running high. Some lucky follower of the sport will cop a good cup of coffee when all bets are settled. Edgren can box, and he can punch, but Corn is a mean boy with that left hook to the body, and that is the only thing the Cowboy is open to.

Corn can box and hit, but is a fish for a strong right hand, and that is the one thing Mr. Edgren brightens up a bit in all his training. It looks as though Corn will have the fight of his life, and will have to stay in there every second to earn a decision.

If the husky Tanker ever lands that wicked left hand followed by the right to the button, it will be another cownurse looking for a good place to lay down. On the other hand, if Corn runs into that hand . . . . goodnight!!

It will be remembered that Edgren is the boy who put the quietus on Ching Johnson, Benning mauler of no mean ability. He is the boy who whipped great fighters of the Northwestern part of these United States, and worked Eastward. He is a fighter with color, and can give a good account of himself. The bets are even, however, that brother Edgren will not be in there clowning with our Corn at any time during the fight.

SEMIFINALS GREAT

Captain Fry has been lucky indeed in securing the services of Kid Chauffeur of Miami. The Kid ranks as one of the best colored middleweights in the South today, and will probably stop Batton. This is one thing the local fans don't believe can be done at an early date. They are right, ac-

Tankers Ride the Waves to Victory

World Records Crowded By Soldier Swimmer To Take Annual Garrison Swim Meet

It was "Tank" day at Russ Pool, Fort Benning, in more ways than one when the aquatic stars of the post met in the annual garrison swimming meet Sept. 3.

Dashing, splashing, paddling their way to victory and placing two men in every event but one, the human fish of the Tank Corps finished the afternoon with a nineteen point lead over their closest opponents, the Second Battalion, 29th Infantry.

It was almost a dual meet between the two teams, only one other entry taking a point, when the First Battalion, 29th Infantry, copped a lone third place in the 100yd. back stroke. All of the existing post records were broken, and several of the recorded timings, though unofficial, came close to the Southeastern A. A. U. records.

Tannehill, of the Tanks, was his usual scintillating self in the events that he entered, winning every one with such a margin of safety that he seemed to be swimming by himself. None of the first places were fought for, and most of the battles for points that brought the spectators to their feet were those for seconds and thirds.

The upset of the day came when Tannehill scratched in the 50 yd. free style, and a dark horse, Herrington, of the Second Battalion, took it in the fast time of 25⅗ seconds, the only first place that the Tanks lost in the whole meet. Another upset occurred in the 100 yd. back stroke when Latham, Second Batalion, 29th Infantry, the favorite, lost to Griswold of the Tanks, whose time of 1.19 3-5 comes close to the world's records for fresh water pools.

At the conclusion of the meet Major General Campbell King presented the winners with their medals and congratulated all the contestants on their efforts during the afternoon.

Results follow:

400 yd. relay: won by Tanks; 4.29 2.5. Thorn, Griswold, Jones, Tannehill. Second 2d Battalion, 29th Infantry.

100 yd. breast stroke: Thorne, Tanks, 1.24 4.5, Eckman, 2nd Battalion 29th Infantry, Parr, Tanks.

50 yd. free style: Herrington, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry, 25 1-5. Jones, Tanks, McCarthy, Tanks.

400 yd. free style: Tannehill, Tanks, 5.26 4-5; Prophet, J. L., 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry; Hill, Tanks.

100 yd. back stroke: Griswold, Tanks, 1.19 3-5; Latham, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry, Glidewell,1s t Battalion 29th Infantry.

100 yd. free style: Tannehill, Tanks, 57 4-5; Herrington, 2nd Battalion; Cason, Tanks, and Prophet, J. L., 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry tied for third.

200 yd. free style: Tannehill, Tanks, 2.27 1-5; Prophet, J. L., 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry, Cason, Tanks.

300 yd. medley relay: won by Tanks, Griswold, back stroke, Thorne, breast stroke, Tannehill, free style, 4.10 1-5, second, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry.

Diving: Parr, Tanks, Wallace, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry, Jones, Tanks.

Total points: Tanks, 58 1-2, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry, 35 1-2, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, 1.

Benning Pugilists Greatly In Demand In Foreign Arenas

Johnson Loses To Ashkenazy; Long Takes Leo Bailey By K. O.

Danny Long got away to a good start at Fairfax, Alabama, last Saturday night, and stopped Leo Bailey in the third round of a scheduled ten-round battle. Danny punished his man terribly, right from the opening of the first round. His body punches were too much for the tough Leo, and down he went, and out, like a head lamp on a model "T" Ford.

The fight was put on at Fairfax by the local American Legion Post, and was well attended.

It seems as though Ching Johnson is slipping and slipping fast. He went over to Eufaula, or somewhere, the other night and let Herman Ashkenazy pound him to a pulp. Maybe he had better rest up a bit, as it seems that he has been taking on a little too much work lately.

Ching is a game fighter, and we hate to see him discouraged in his hey-day.

Bunker Hill fought J. C. Sewell on the same card, and what he did to Mrs. Sewell's son was nobody's business. Hill says he has the bug on Sewell, and will take him any time in a walk. Their fight was a semi-final affair of eight rounds.

Another Benningite showing on the card was Ghost Ghastly, who took a decision over Kid Laskey in a fast six rounder.

It all goes to prove that Benning fighters are gaining in popularity in other rings.

Terrible Tankers Push Medicos For Second Half Lead

Kellys Prepare For Playoff At An Early Date

As the teams round into the home stretch the race for last half championship honors has developed into a three cornered duel between the Tankers, Irish and Medicos. The Medicos hold a slight lead at the present time but the Tankers look the stronger of the three teams and are favorites to break the tape.

The form being shown by Lindsey, veteran Tanker hurlers, and the hard hitting of the entire Tanker team has put the Tankers in their present high standing. The Irish have a team that is powerful in spots but carries a couple of weak links that will be a big hindrance in the final spurt. To add insult to injury, the Irish will have to finish the race minus the services of Joe Reddock, in first string catcher. Joe had a finger broken in the game against the Tankers.

The Medicos show signs of a slump. This may or may not be. If the Medicos can hold the pace for just a few more days they will be in the bunting but the final games are going

By B. B. S.

LT. JOHNSON of the Athletic Office has allowed himself to be taken in on the latest bargain of the season. When Lt. Harmony left Fort Benning, he had serious intentions of turning "Sadie," his antiquated daughter of the world renowned "Elizabeth," over to the Salvage Dump. He found, however, that Lt. Johnson was frequently deprived of transportation to and from the office, and now Lt. Johnson is ten dollars and three cents poorer, while Lt. Harmony is off somewhere. taking life easy on the ten spot. (It is understood that the three cents were for the automobile and the ten dollars for the privilege of owning the machine.

FROM THE TONE of the majority of the organization news published in this week's issue of the HERALD, it would seem that this is the feasting season with the boys. Anyone not throwing a feed for someone this week is not in it. To top it all off, we are proud possessors of "invites" to the function, and have taken the matter up with our landlady. If she will give us the proper deductions for those eating sessions, we will more than likely have our feet crammed under some worthy table during the feasting season.

cording to the way Cotton has been conducting himself in the ring during the past three months. It seems as though it is next to impossible to get a man who can even interest him.

Chauffeur's handlers claim they have a strong man on the boxing end of a pile driver, and he well looks the picture. He is built well, and works nicely in the gym. Can he stop the terror of the Twenty-Fourth?

PRELIMS RED HOT

These top fighters will be supported by twenty rounds, additional fighting by the preliminary boys. This part of the card alone is well worth the price of admission.

In the main prelim, Dapper Doyle and Kid Chambliss will mix for six rounds of real fighting, and fighting of a kind seldom seen at any of the better rings. Both these boys always please the fans, fighting from the word go.

Call it a draw, and let's go home.

The other six rounder will have as much action as the above two fighter's bout. Jack Walden and Chick Liddell will mix for six rounds or less . . . . probably less. No good feeling exists between these lads of the leather pushing industry.

The two four-rounders will bring together Shifty Schroeder and Kid White, Phenix Fourroux and John Walderman.

3-CORNERED DUEL DEVELOPS IN BASEBALL RACE

to be nerve wrecking affairs.

The Second Bats slowed the Medicos up in a hectic affair during the past week. Both teams hit hard but Patsy Barron, Kelly third sacker, seemed to have the Indian sign on Gilbert and blasted bingles with men on at two critical times and the "Big Medico", dropped a game.

The Irish and Tankers really put on a war when they came to grips Tuesday afternoon. The Tankers won and they fought hard to win. The Irish fought gamely and were given winning twirling by Stevens, but seven fumbles were costly. Three men were injured during this struggle. Joe Reddock had a finger broken by one of Steve's benders. McLane was hit by a thrown ball at second base and the Tanker star was out for

I. S. D.

Sure is good to see "Wee Grady" out of the hospital and looking his old self again. It looked bad that day out there at Gowdy Field when Gardner's fast ball hit him over th eheart and Grady went down in a crumpled heap. Just to prove what baseball fans think of our little hurler, the telephone at the hospital was working over time with querys as to Grady's condition and the calls were by fans from every outfit in the garrison.

Mr. Sgts. George Mowry, Jazz Magoni, and Maxie Wolfe, were strutting their stuff over in Eufaula, Ala., at the big fight show last Monday night. They certainly seemed to be enjoying themselves and those boys were the original "big shots." Jazz handled the megaphone and the way he made the local fans sit up and take notice was just like "nobody's business." Fact about the business when Jazz introduced our one and only John Corn Griffin, the crowd edged forward intheir seats, looked Corn over with admiring eyes and then broke into a burst of applause for the future light-heavy champion of the "Wor-r-l-d-d." And it was also noticeable that at the end of every announcement Magoni received a round of applause from the fans.

Sgt. Wolfe was appointed as one of the fight judges, and his decisions were okay. Top Kick Mowry came in strong as a judge at the dance held after the show. Owing to the fact that his feet are out of commission, he was appointed as judge of the prize dancing and also of choosing the most b-e-a-u-tiful girl present. He was okay on picking the lady but he voted for Maxie Wolfe in the dancing contest and booked a loss.

Company 'H' Gives Farewell Dinner

On Monday night, September 12, Company "H," 29th Infantry will be the scene of a lively farewell dinner. The Company is giving this dinner as the climax of their range season, which will end on that day, and also in honor of Lts. Jack G. Pitcher and Christian H. Clarke, who are leaving the company.

Lts. Pitcher and Clarke will leave the Company and join the Company Officers' Class for the season of 1932-33. They are well liked by the members of the organization, being backed to a man. Many will sorrow at the parting of the ways, but Sergeant DePratt, mess sergeant deluxe, has fixed that all up.

As will be seen by the following menu, a gala time will be had by all. The menu: Half fried chicken, shoestring potatoes, French buttered peas, lettuce, tomatoes, Thousand Island dressing, pie a la mode, lemonade or coffee, Parker House rolls and butter.

COMPANY "G"

A brief lapse of two weeks has expanded, the news bag to magnanimous proportions. Last week the "G" Company press had news for the hungry world, but its news reported was caught in a storm, i.e.; a collection sheet, payday and a musketry problem.

Now to enlighten the know-nots. Loper, finished high score for the Company in the rifle for the Perrys. He was closely followed by Sgt. Sherman, Sgt. Taylor, and Corp. Hill, Corp. Hill taking the high score prize for the non-Perry men. And who should win the recruit prize for '32 but Daniels, (the Company "G" Austin). Daniels' score missed expert by one point. Great shooting by a little man who is handicapped by size but not by lack of courage.

Loper, not content to carry off the high score in rifle, made high score for the regiment in automatic, (you can't keep a good man down).

To cap a most successful range season, and as a parting farewell to Sgt. Bert "Bull" Plummer, a great chicken dinner was served last Saturday, numbered among our guest were the Regimental and Bn. Commanders, and their Staff. The entire affair ended a huge success thanks to the work of the Cooks K. P.'s and Sgt. Boren, "Bull's" parting shot with the Company was a bulls eye.

The new "Bull" is none other than Sgt. Simpson, who now adorns the throne left by Sgt. Plummer.

The Post meet turned out to be Prophet vs. the Tanks and Latham, Daniels, Cooper, Smith, Polewada, and crew.

MATA HARI

so-called invisible writing. This she had brought out with the rest of her toilette things and displayed with the same poise, no more, no less, than the rest. They had never suspected it.

Now, she pretended to search for hre handkerchief and feeling in her loose sleeves, slipped the folded paper out amongst the sheets on the desk. She doubled a piece of note paper, made some play with her pen, inserted the folded sheet and, thrusting the two into an envelope, sealed it and rose.

"May I put it on the Colonel's desk?"

"To be sure, Madame. On top of his letters where it will be the first thing he sees."

Blinking and nodding to assure her that he understood a little affair between lovers, the old man accompanied her into the main office where she had to place the unaddressed envelope on top of the pile. It did look fearfully white and conspicuous. However, she trusted that whatever was done, no one would dare to investigate Shubin's desk.

There remained the opening in the seam, which was simple. As she was going out behind the attendant, she folded back her cuff and tore at the lining. It was fine silk, but she pulled hard.

She gave a little cry. "Look, papa, see what I've done? How careless of me! You haven't a pin?"

Perhaps the man didn't mean to come in at all. If he waited for her outside and searched her elsewhere, so much the better. On the other hand, he must feel that she had come here with some object in mind.

Quite ten minutes had passed. Torn between a conflict in judgment —would it be better to go and abandon the paper to the mercy of whatever happened or to stay within sight of it and learn what would happen? —The dancer could come to no decision. To go meant that it might not be possible to retrieve the lists. In any case it was just as perilous, for the old man might be questioned on her departure. He was an old fool and would surely mention the note.

"What do you hear from your son?" she inquired, starting him on a subject that was bound to be endless.

"He's alive and well in a nice, quiet sector, thank to your influence," he said fervently. "Oh, Madame, we'll never forget you for it. My wife says a prayer for you every night . . . "

"I need it," said Mata Hari, sotto voce.

" . . . Ah, it is good to know that there are ladies so gracious who interest themselves in others," the old man went on as if a flood had been released. "You see, he is our only hope. . . "

When the door opened, Mata Hari was sitting with her back to it and chatting with the attendant. She looked up, naturally. The first man to enter was Dubois.

Co. 'F' Barbecue Is Set For Today

Company "F," 29th Infantry, always seems to do everything in a big way. Hence the barbecue on the Upatoi Creek near Marne Road this afternoon at 1:30. Three kinds of meat will be prepared by Mess Sergeant J. Horace Vines, and his able assistants. Mutton, beef and pork will play a big part in the elaborate menu prepared for the occasion of occasions.

Company "F" is commanded by Captain William B. Yancey. The reason for the barbecue by the Company was the result of an agreement entered into by the members of the Company.

The winning platoon on range was to be treated by the two losers. The platoon placing second was to furnish the entertainment for the day . . . . and somebody lost.

The First was last and the last was first, in reality. Last place went to the first platoon, second place to the second platoon, while the third platoon sits around and eats barbecue mutton, beef and pig.

The Regimental and Battalion Commanders and their staffs have been invited to be present at the function.

Officers' Club Is Prepared To Care For Incoming Class

The newly arrived officer soon realized what an important part The Officers' Club plays in the daily life of all concerned at Fort Benning. Its many facilities reach out to accomodate him and his family in numerous ways.

Since its organization in 1919 The Officers' Club has made a steady advance; always adjusting itself to meet the needs of the Post, and especially the needs of the Student Officer.

Its main building is located in the midst of the academic area where it can be of service to the Student Officer every hour during the day. Its Grill, Barber Shop, Tailor Shop, Reading Room and Rest Room maintain a schedule to meet the needs of the Students. Its Beauty Parlor, Grill and Lobby are constantly at the service of the Officers' families. This year an Officers' Mess has been added to the Grill for the accommodation of the bachelor officers.

In many ways the Officers' Club, Fort Benning, differs from other Officers' Clubs. One outstanding feature is, that all the clubs which have charge of social and recreational facilities are combined in one. It is not necessary therefore that an officer who wishes to play polo must join the polo club, and one who wishes to play golf must join the golf club, etc. Here in The Officers' Club is found six clubs in a single membership. They are: the Social Club, the Polo Club, the Golf Club, the Tennis Club, the Gun Club and the Hunt. A member of The Officers' Club may be a member of all six clubs without paying dues other than his dues in the Officers' Club. Even in the matter of golf, he pays no greens fee so long as he is a member of the Officers' Club.

The custom of holding weekly dances in the lobby of the Officers' Club on Thursday evening will be continued during the present academic year. Additional construction work in the main Club has enlarged the facilities so that greater numbers can be accommodated at the weekly hop.

The Officers' Club Grill is proud of its service. Here food is served at all hours at prices as low as possible, consistent with quality and service. Incoming officers should know that the Grill maintains a catering and delivery service. A phone call to the Grill will bring prompt delivery to officers' quarters. Hostesses will find every facility for entertaining guests at dinner, either at the Club or in their homes, through the catering service of the Club.

As the year progresses announcements will be made for the opening of the Hunts which are held on Sunday mornings and for the opening of the Skeet Range on Humphrey Hill, also on Sunday mornings. The golf course is open to members at all times, likewise the tennis courts. The post tournament in polo will be announced soon.

During the winter months there will be tournaments in bridge and chess. Also inter-club tournaments between the Officers' Club members and the members of the Country Club, Columbus, Ga., in bridge, chess, tennis and golf. A reciprocal plan in operation between these two clubs will make it possible for the members of the Officers' Club to entertain at the Country Club on certain occasions without pyament of an extra fee. The details of this plan will be announced in the near future.

The Board of Governors of the Officers Club points with pride to the erection of the new Officers' Club Building now in progress and requests the newly arrived officers to inspect the work. The erection of this new building is being conducted by the Recreation Center and it is anticipated that the building will be ready for occupancy in about twelve months.

To the Members of the Advanced, Company Officers', and Tank Courses of 1932-33:

The doors of The Infantry School are about to open again for the reception of a large group of infantry officers who seek to explore the broad fields of the school's instructional courses.

For many of the younger student officers their enrollment at The Infantry School represents the first step forward in their professional careers as infantrymen, while for others it brings within sight the common goal toward which all good infantrymen are striving in their quest for broader knowledge and proficiency in the technic of their arm.

The successful completion of a course of study at The Infantry School is a mark of distinction on the record of any officer, and to those who enjoy the enviable privilege of enrollment in the school's classes and are about to undertake that achievement, I offer my greetings and congratulations.

CAMPBELL KING,
Major General, U. S. Army,
Commandant.

Colonel Ephraim G. Peyton, Ft. Benning's New Executive Officer Begins Work, Succeeding Colonel H. E. Knight

Colonel Ephraim G. Yeyton, newest addition to the Headquarters Staff of Fort Benning, assumed his new duties at the post on Saturday September 10, succeeding Colonel Harry E. Knight, who has been assigned to command of the 26th Infantry, Plattsburg Barracks, New York. Colonel Peyton has recently been on duty as senior instructor and commanding general of the 30th National Guard Division, which is comprised of state troops of Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee.

Colonel Peyton, in his new assignment, will begin his second tour of duty at the Infantry School, his first occupying the period from 1921 to 1925, when he was a director in the department of military and, for a portion of the time, a director in the Department of Experiment. He also served as polo representative for the Infantry School during a part of his former service here and was attached to the 29th Infantry for a short time prior to his attending the Army War College in Washington.

Before his assignment to Fort Benning, Colonel Peyton has had a long career of distinguished military service, particularly in executive positions, in which he has held many responsible posts, and his work in these positions has been repeatedly commended. His selection for his present post was made by the Adjutant General at the personal request of Major General Campbell King, with the approval of the Chief of Infantry.

Colonel Peyton's military service began on June 15, 1895, when he was appointed a cadet in the United States Military Academy. In February, 1899, following his graduation from the military academy, he was commissioned a second lieutenant of infantry, and two years later was promoted to first lieutenant. In March,

New Executive

COLONEL E. G. PEYTON

1907, he was promoted to captain, and assigned to the 18th Infantry. Three years later, he was detailed to the Philippine Scouts with the rank of major, in which capacity he served from 1910 to 1912. While on duty with the Philippine Scouts he participated in numerous field operations against hostile Moros on the island of Jolo during the insurrection of 1911-12. Upon the conclusion of this campaign he was highly recommended by the governor of the Moro province for his able cooperation with the civil authorities in the disarmament of the Sulu Moros. He was also commended for his ability by John J. Pershing, then a brigadier general, under whose command he served on the Mexican border from 1913 to 1915 as a captain in the 18th Infantry.

In May, 1917, a month after the United States entered the World War, he was promoted to major, regular army, and in August of the same year, was advanced to the temporary rank of lieutenant colonel, national army. Ten days later he was assigned to the 320th Infantry, 80th Division, composed of southern troops, which was being assembled at Camp Lee, Petersburg, Va. In May, 1918, he sailed for France with his division, which went into training in the British sector Arras, where he remained until August. In the meantime, on July 30, he was advanced to the rank of colonel, and placed in command of the 320th Infantry, which he commanded during the St. Mihiel offensive and in the Meuse-Argonne. For gallantry in action in this latter drive, he was cited in divisional orders, and for his courageous leadership and his refusal to leave the field after being temporarily blinded by gas, was later awarded the silver star by the War Department. His executive ability and his skilful leadership of his regiment was also recognized by the War Department's award of the Distinguished Service medal.

After the armistice he served with the American commission to negotiate peace, and commanded the military personnel on duty with that body. His services on this mission were highly commended by Robert Lansing, former Secretary of State, in a letter to General Pershing.

Upon his return to the United States he was assigned to the Third Division, at Camp Pike, Arkansas, where he served until the summer of 1920, when he was placed in charge of recruiting activities in Mississippi, following representations made by senators and congressmen of that state that a change in the administration of the recruiting service was desirable.
