Approximately four hundred children attended the school last year. It was opened on September 21st with a dedicatory address by General Campbell King, Commandant, who at the time paid tribute to the members of the Fort Benning personnel who conceived and carried out the idea of building the new building to house the school. Prior to that time, the children had attended classes in an old wooden building which stood near the Post Print Shop, and which constituted a serious fire hazard, besides being cramped and uncomfortable.

The new building combines the best features of school design, its plan being adopted with an eye to following out the general building scheme now being used at the Post. A large playground, fenced in with high fencing, has been provided for the children during recess hours, and the court also serves as a playground. The rooms are interconnected by the porch running completely around the inner court. The building was built by the Recreation Center Board, under the direct supervision of Captain Harvey J. Golightly.

An innovation, this year, will be in the course in Manual Training and Domestic Science, which will be given the pupils of the Sixth and Seventh grades. These courses will begin the first week in October, and will continue as regular subjects for these grades, as required by the Columbus Schols. Temporary buildings will be used at first, but the projected enlargement of the main building is expected to provide permanent housing for these activities.

For the convenience of those officers who desire to send their children to the public schools of Columbus, a bus service is maintained to provide transportation to and from school and those High School students who live on the post are also provided with similar transportation.

A recent circular, issued by Headquarters, the Infantry School, gives full information regarding the registration of children, medical examination, rates and hours of the school and also gives information regarding the Columbus Schools.

High Average Of Proficiency Shown

A high average of proficiency of gunners of the First Battalion, 83rd Field Artillery, stationed at Fort Benning, is indicated in a compilation of results of gunners' tests which were announced Friday by Major Clyde A. Selleck, battalion commander.

One hundred and sixty-two men who were examined under a new set of gunnery regulations, recently promulgated by the war department and placed in use for the first time at Fort Benning this year, emerged from the tests with the ratings of expert gunner.

Artillery officers regard the showing made by the enlisted men participating in the examinations as remarkable, for the regulations under which they were examined differ materially from those previously in use.

Coincident with the conducting with the gunners' ests just completed, operations plans were being prepared for test firings of the new 105 mm. guns recently received by the battalion, which is normally armed with 75 mm. cannon. They will take place some time in October.

Founding and Organization of Benning and Infantry School Make Interesting Story

The Infantry School, which many army officers are viewing for the first time upon their arrival for enrollment in the courses of 1932-33, stands preeminent in the army's professional education system. Although it has attained its present impressive physical form in little more than a decade, its eminence among military educational institutions is the slow product of evolution, the development of the best thought of generations of infantrymen.

FORMER HOME OF INFANTRY SCHOOL

Fort Sill, Oklahoma, which was the home of the Infantry School for the period of 1913 to 1918, at which time it operated more or less interruptedly, due to crises which came up on the Mexican border.

A complete history of The Infantry School would, of necessity, include accounts of all the infantry's efforts toward raising its professional standards and increasing its combat efficiency. Such a chronicle could not, in justice, fail to record the work of the many progressive infantry leaders of successive generations, whose thought and influence are manifested in the highly organized Infantry School of today.

Within the limits of a short sketch, such as this, only a few high-lights of the School's historical background can be depicted.

STEUBEN FIRST INSTRUCTOR

One of the first, perhaps the first, effectual measure toward the improvement of American infantry was that adopted by General George Washington when he engaged the services of General Baron von Steuben, a Prussian officer of experience and ability, to install a system of training in the Revolutionary army. One of von Steuben's first acts, after his recommendations had been accepted by General Washington was to organize officers into squads and sections and companies for instruction in the basic duties of the soldier. This very method of acquainting newly commissioned officers with some of their duties was used during our preparation for, and participation, in, the world war, and with some modifications it is still in use in certain of the courses of The Infantry School. The idea of organizing selected troops and using them for demonstration purposes also can be credited, so far as our service is concerned, to von Steuben, and today, a century and a half after von Steuben's time, we find his method still in use at The Infantry School, where model troop organizations are maintained and employed to develop and to illustrate the technic and tactics of infantry.

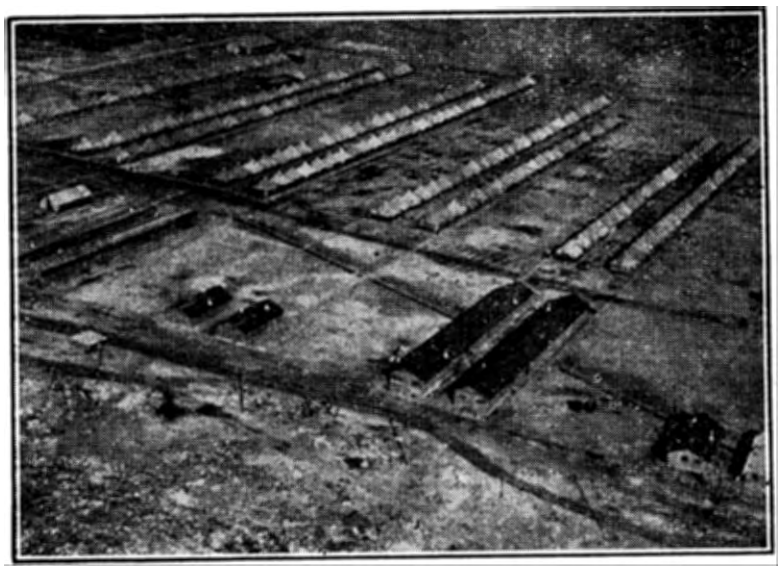
Whimsical legislation, which was enacted during the post-revolutionary war period, quickly undid the excellent work of von Steuben and others and left the army in a state of disorganization and denuded of leaders, a condition which was manifest at the beginning of the war of 1812. During the years that followed the tiny army was dispersed in numerous frontier garrisons, and little was accomplished toward improving its training until 1826, when Major General Edmund P. Gaines was authorized to establish an infantry post near St. Louis for the purpose of organizing an infantry school of instruction. Here, in 1826, was founded Jefferson Barracks, and the infantry's first school. The time, however, was unripe for such a venture, and in 1828, when the frontier wars with the Indians were claiming the attention of the army, the school was officially closed. This was the first concrete expression of the idea of a regular school to teach the technic and tactics of the infantry.

So far as practical results were concerned, the idea of an infantry school lay dormant for more than three quarters of a century, and it was not until the year 1907 that the first step was taken which led to the foundation of The Infantry School of today and later brought about the creation of Fort Benning. In February, 1907, Lieutenant General Arthur McArthur established a school of musketry, Pacific Division, at the Presidio of Monterey, Cal., for the purpose of raising the marksmanship standards of the Pacific Division. In the creating order a great deal of latitude was allowed in the scope of the school's work, and gradually it developed into an institution whose research extended far afield from purely mechanical marksmanship. Its work soon attracted the attention of the entire army and eventually it lost its character as a divisional school as plans were formulated and executed to expand it into a national institution. These plans resulted in the transfer of the school, early in 1913 to Fort Sill, Okla. There it operated, more or less interruptedly, due to the series of crises on the Mexican border which necessitated the dispatching of all available regular troops to the endangered points, and resulted in the cessation of the school's activities for protracted periods.

In July, 1917, the school's title was changed to The Infantry School of Arms, and its organization was greatly expanded in preparation for the training of large groups of officers and instructors for the emergency forces, which were being organized for the World War. Even with its reorganization and expansion the School was unable to serve the needs of the growing army, and in May, 1918, the machine gun department of the school was transferred to Camp Hancock, Ga. The lack of space for target ranges at Fort Sill led to the establishment of a supplementary school, known as the Small Arms Firing School, at Camp Perry, Ohio, in the same month.

MOVED FROM FORT SILL

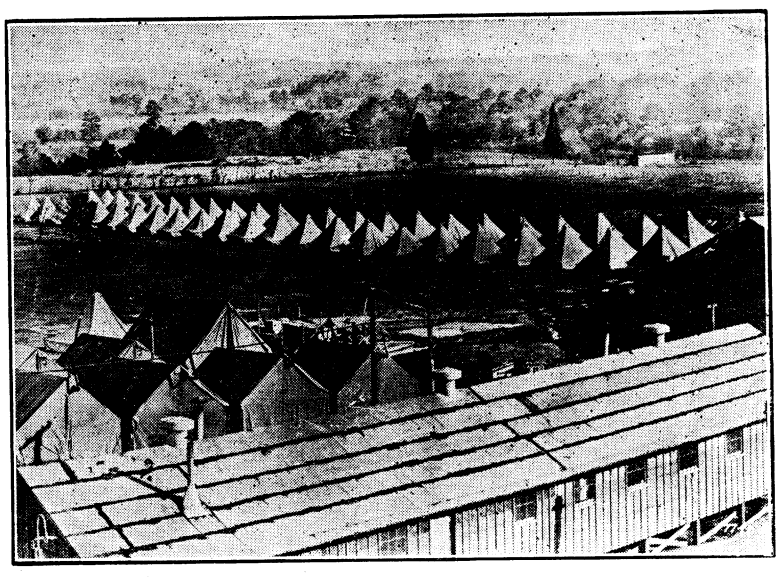
In October, 1918, the school was moved to a site near Columbus, Ga., where it was located temporarily on the Macon road, about three miles east of the city. The Small Arms Firing School was consolidated with the parent institution in the month, but the reunion of the school's dismembered parts was not completed until April of the following year when the personnel of the machine gun center was transferred to the new camp near Columbus.



FORT BENNING IN 1921

An air view showing a part of Fort Benning as it appeared in 1921, before the extensive building program had gone into effect. This shows the type of construction which housed a part of the personnel at that time.

The temporary site which the school occupied upon its arrival in October 1918, was formally named Camp Benning, in honor of Brigadier General Henry L. Benning, Confederate States Army, a prominent citizen of Columbus in Civil War days, and when the camp was moved to its present site in June, 1919, the title of Camp Benning was retained. Originally the school had been intended for the training of thirty thousand officers and men, and the area of the reservation was to have included 250,000 acres of land. The removal to its present site was made after a survey of lands in the vicinity of Columbus had shown that the land of the present reservation was best adapted for the construction of target ranges and for conducting other features of infantry training.



CAMP BENNING ON MACON ROAD

A scene at the Macon Road camp which was established temporarily during the war. The camp was later moved to its present location, immediately after the war, and was renamed The Infantry School.

After the close of the World War, reductions both in the training capacity of the school and the area of the reservation were made. After a long period of contention over the question of retaining the school as a permanent feature of the military establishment, Congress ended the uncertainty on February 20, 1920, when Camp Benning was authorized as a permanent military post. The title of the school was changed on January 30, 1920, to The Infantry School.

In 1922 the first plan providing for the transition of the camp to a post of permanent character was formulated, and in February, 1923, construction work began on the first permanent quarters, which were eventually to replace the cantoment types of buildings which had been built in November, 1918. Since that time construction of buildings of permanent character has progressed steadily, and under projected plans, by 1940

GUNBOTHAM'S SCHOOL DAZE

BY E. L. M.

THE DANCE MARATHON

The Dance Marathon, hard by the orange Nehi sign (and appropriately located just across the railroad tracks) has been a howling success, thanks probably to the truth in Barnum's indictment. Located first at Phenix City (where angels fear to tread) the entire ensemble was moved to Columbus—Phenix City police having made so many arrests that attendance fell off alarmingly.

In Columbus, where cars are not tagged merely for funds to pave the streets, the contest (?) drags wearily on. Led by the lady known as La Rue, a motley crew of uninteresting people perform pre-arranged antics before a full house of mill hands, while a scattering of Columbus and Fort Benning night hawks look on in boredom.

The fetid odor of stale cigarettes, unwashed bodies and dried sweat makes the drab spectacle on the dance floor revolting to the olfactory as well as the visual senses. Perhaps we were in a bad frame of mind when we went. But the lady, graceful as a cow moose, who did a "specialty" dance during a so-called rest period and then grovelled on the floor for pennies (while a hacha youth threatened her exposed flank with a rick rack) failed to please us. Nor did the young man, ostensibly dancing in his sleep, thrill us (as he did the crowd) with a vulgar and obvious fumbling at his belt. Nor did—but we've said enough. And if we've left you with the impression that the marathon dance has anything to recommend it, we've failed miserably in our duty as a critic.

The Colored Marathon, located (appropriately again) down on Front Street, near the river, is another story. A genuine effort to produce entertainment puts the spectator in a cheerful frame of mind as he watches the Rabelaisian antics of the contestants. They really try to make you like it—and you probably will like it if you have a taste for Hot Harlem. There isn't much contest—most of the evening is devoted to song and dance acts. High spots in the show (which apparently runs on until the spectators stop tossing nickels) were: The dusky crooner who does imitations, strums a mean guitar, and steps some fast footwork. The high-brown girl who out-gilda's Gilda Gray. The husky gal whose piano beating will get her to the Cotton Club—if her singing and dancing doesn't.

Yes, wander down there some night. But for the love of mike, don't take the children!

SOCIAL NOTE

Lest the capable conductor of Social Notes makes a grievous error in her quest for news, we hasten to point out that Lieut. Minhost Dowdall and sartorial splendor, it was but natural hosts at a " . . . formal party last week, later taking their charming guests to the Colored Marathon."

The two officers were sitting at the Club all dressed up in boiled shirts. Casting about for something to drive away ennui, one of them—we don't know who—suggested a visit to the Front Street Bacchanale (described elsewhere in this column).

Attired as they were in all their sartorial splendor, it was but naural that a regal grande-dame and her six charming daughters, feeling a bit out of costume in evening gowns, should pick out seats beside the well-groomed gentlemen.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

NOTES ON OVERWEIGHT

One-fifth of the American people are overweight.

Excess weight prevents an active, vigorous life; it is a threat to health and a long life. Young people who are "getting stout" will show good judgment if they change their manner of living as regards diet and exercise, so as to keep weight within normal limits.

The records of insurance companies show that excessive overweight reduces the expected length of life. This loss of years may be as many as ten. Diseases of the heart and kidney and blood vessels most always follow years of overweight. Diabetes is seen more often in those that are overweight. Hereditary overweight depends on heredity overeating.

Most cases of overweight are noticed first about the twenty-fifth year. Any unusual accumulation of fat which occurs at puberty, at the menopause, during pregnancy, or during recovery from an illness or operation, tends to become permanent. In some persons a disease of the internal glands is the cause of overweight.

As people grow older, physical activity grows less, but appetite remains the same or even increases. These people can control overweight. Reduced eating, especially of starches, sugars, and fats and their replacement by fruits, lean meat and vegetables is the first step in control.

Food, like coal is measured by the number of heat units in each pound. In the case of food these heat units are called calories. The average person at a desk job needs food valued at 2300-2800 calories a day. More than this amount means fat stored in the body. If less calories are taken the body loses fat. A safe reduction of weight depends on a diet so selected, as to its number of calories, that the loss of weight is about one or one and a half pounds a week. If controlled and well directed exercise is taken during this time flabby muscles become solid and firm. Drugs and glandular extracts (thyroid) are never safe to take except under the direction of a physician. The ultimate test of the diet is the scales.

The one stumbling block which prevents weight reduction is appetite. Determination and persistance are needed for success. If you have not these it is better never to begin reducing. Keep busy so you will not have time to think about being hungry. It is better to eat three meals each day than to omit one whole meal. It is better to reduce during the warm months. If you have had the courage to reduce your weight, persist in restricting that appetite for this is the only way to prevent a re-accumulation of fat.

In The Mirror

By Mollie Heilman

You've heard of string savers and paper bag put-awayers, but you are about to get acquainted with a new type of pest, the "mirror-lookiner," which is us.

Our idea is to give you a vision of yourself and of Fort Benning, as a newcomer sees it. We have our illusions about being the answer to Bobby Burns' prayer:

"O wad some pow'r the giftie gie us
To see oursels as ithers see us."

The lovely post swimming pool is the cause of one of the oddest phenomenon we have ever noted, that is, green-haired men. The 25 pounds of chlorine put in the pool once a week actually puts a good green tint on the blonde hair of those who swim there constantly.

Benning is probably the only army post in the states that boasts a monument to the memory of a dog. After a little inquiry, we found that every one has heard something about the monument, but no one knows the entire story. Maybe we don't either, but what we have pieced together is interesting and we offer it nevertheless. In case you haven't discovered the monument yet, it is tucked away in the academic area.

It seems that "Calculator" was a good soldier if there ever was one. He was a nondescript dog with but three good legs. Some undiscovered Will Rogers gave him the name of Calculator after seeing that he had only three good legs and noting that he always put down the three and carried one. The dog had no owner and took his meals where he found them. He came to the post in the morning by bumming rides, and rode back to Columbus in the evenings on the train, with the students. He grew into their hearts and became a welcome part of the post personnel. On August 29, 1923, he was killed by an automobile. The unknown who penned "Calculator's" epitaph makes softies of us all, whether we knew the soldier-dog or not, because a lump rises in our throat when we read that "he made better dogs of us all."

Speaking of animals, if you find a black and white stranger in bed with you don't kill it; it is the pet skunk belonging to the family of Col. Joseph Stilwell. "Moanie" (short for Ammonia), has been missing for a number of days and the four Stilwell children are much put out over its disappearance. It was missing once before, but turned up next door, in the basement of Colonel Bonesteel's home. "Moanie" is very valuable. She cost $5.00 new. It seems that Doctor Miller of the Columbus Cat and Dog Hospital can fill skunk orders at will. At present, however, the search for "Moanie" has spread. Post housewives are requested to shake pillowslips twice and officers are urged to look in their boots before donning them.

Judging swimming meets is getting to be a habit with Lt. Tommy Sherburne, artilleryman, who will judge his fifth on September 17, when Boy Scouts will compete. He will wind up his season of activity on September 24 by judging a Girl Scout meet.

Lt. "Bus" Howard has almost as many judgings to his credit.

TALES OF ADVENTURE

With the return of the Academic and compulsory furlough vacationists, we are getting not a few blood-curdling stories on the perils of the highways. According to the ladies who relate these hair-raising episodes, it is a marvel how any of us got back alive.

The stories tell of encounters with desperate looking characters who may have been bandits in disguise for all anybody knows. Or even if they weren't, they were probably potential assassins who were only restrained from robbery, murder, and worse by the steely look in the eye of friend husband. Mrs. Phillips has a thriller about a villainous looking pirate who tried to ride the Phillips' Packard off an East Tennessee mountain road. Two-Gun Tige, her prosaic husband, insists that it was only a hillbilly learning to drive a T Model Ford, but Mrs. Phillips knows better.

The prize adventure story, however, goes to Mrs. Harding. We can't bring out in cold print its full dramatic quality, but we'll do our best.

It was a dark and foggy night, about 4 a. m., to be exact, and the Harding's non stop—except for gasoline, food, water, and incidentals—flight had reached the loneliest part of a desolate mountain road. Buddy, the junior member of the expedition, being the most wide-awake member of the party, was driving and the nominal head of the family was dozing.

Suddenly the car whose tail light they had been trailing through the fog stopped and signalled for the Harding covered wagon to do the same. Buddy, not having been instructed to the contrary, obeyed the signal and the startled wayfarers found themselves confronted by two gentlemen of color, one of whom was holding his right arm behind him—a most suspicious and alarming circumstance.

The men professed to be out of gas and requested permission for one to ride on the running board to the next filling station, a mile up the road. All during the negotiations, the spokesman kept his hands behind his back. Our words are utterly inadequate to describe Mrs. Harding's feelings at this time during the subsequent ride to the filling station with the desperado on the running board clinging to the car with one hand while the other was presumably clutching the butt of a pistol in his hip pocket. Ask her about it if you have half an hour to spare and want a vivid word picture of what a woman suffers in the minutes during which she expects to be murdered in each succeeding instant.

At the filling station the man swung free of the car and then for the first time Mrs. Harding saw that his right arm was cut off at the shoulder.

Fortunately for the youthful chauffeur and the now thoroughly awakened husband, dawn came soon to terminate the irate heroine's far-into-the-night comments upon the utter incompetence of the Harding men folks.

FUZZARD FULMINATES AGAINST GOVERNMENT EXTRAVAGANCE

General Fuzzard, the Progrestatic candidate for President, was in a vile humor when we went to interview him on cabinet possibilities.

"What do you think of Ham Kelly for Secretary of State," we asked innocently.

"I'm not thinkin' of anybody for Secretary of anything," snorted the General, "except someone for the Department of Justice who knows how to apply the laws of the land so as not to make Bolsheviks out of honest citizens. Look at that liquor! It's so raw it burns my insides and I've been drinkin' everything from straight denatured alcohol to panther milk cocktails on my swing around the circle. What's more, I paid four dollars for a gallon of it and it was warm when it came. That's what comes of pourin' fourteen hundred gallons of good liquor out on the ground instead of confiscatin' it and distributin' it through official channels like they do most places. I'm for the statue quo the same as I've been all along. It's a great system for satisfyin' everybody. The preachers have their prohibition and us regular fellers have their liquor except when some sorehead enforcement agent pours fourteen hundred gallons out on the ground and creates a famine and runs up the prices. That's what I'm against. I'd almost as soon have the Canadian system where liquor is so high that a poor man can't afford to buy it and the rich pay in enough in excise taxes to run the government. That's better than pourin' out good liquor on the ground where nobody gets the benefit. That's sinful waste and government extravagance and when I get in office I'm goin' to put a stop to it."

"What is your plan for suppressing the liquor traffic, General?' we asked.

"I ain't goin' to suppress it," replied the General, "I'm goin' to confiscate every fourth run and what I don't need personally for medicinal and entertainment purposes, I'm goin' to sell to the masses at two dollars a gallon and run the country on the proceeds."

We withdrew from the General's presence wondering if perchance his approved solution of the much mooted liquor problem wasn't just as good if not better than that of the so-called major parties.

LAWN PARTY

The last issue of the Flare carried several inches of commendation for the public spirited citizens who have made the deserts around the new quarters blossom as the rose. It was obvious that an enormous number of man and woman hours had been spent on this enterprise during the summer and we commented favorably on the abundant evidence of a love of the beautiful in nature. Had we known to what extent some members of the garrison had given of their time and effort to beautify their little plots of ground, we should have waxed even more enthusiastic.

Take Colonel Hall, for instance. Shortly after his arrival he noted that his yard presented a somewhat scraggly appearance. It seems that there were too many varieties of grass competing for a place in the sun. We know how that is for we have at least three varieties on our estate and they give an effect of lack of uniformity which is displeasing to the military eye. For the head Quartermaster, charged as he is with a lot of responsibility for care of grounds,

Col. Knight Leaves To Take Command Of 26th Infantry

Fort Benning lost one of its best known and most able officers last Sunday when Colonel Harry E. Knight left the local post to take command of the 26th Infantry, Plattsburg Barracks, New York, a famous war-time regiment. Much of the credit for the smooth-running machinery of Fort Benning must be attributed to this officer, who for four years has been one of the outstanding figures in the official and social life of the post.

Colonel Knight came to Fort Benning in August, 1928, following his graduation from the Army War College, Washington, D. C., and assumed his duties as executive officer of The Infantry School on August 30.

Colonel Knight's military career began in 1898, when he enlisted as a private in Company K, 14th New York Infantry, on May 13, for service in the Spanish-American war. After less than three months of service as an enlisted man, he received an appointment as second lieutenant of infantry, regular army, on July 9, 1898. A short time later he was in the field with the 1st Infantry in the campaign against the Spanish forces in Cuba.

Soon after the capitulation of the Spaniards, he returned to the United States with his regiment, landing at Montauk Point, N. Y. It was there that he met Campbell King, now major general and commandant of The Infantry School, who, as a second lieutenant, was assigned to the 1st Infantry upon its return from Cuba. There began the friendship which led to Colonel Knight's selection three decades later for the important post of executive officers of The Infantry School.

COL. HARRY E. KNIGHT

A second tour of duty in Cuba began on January 1, 1899, when the 1st Infantry landed at Havana after having been stationed in Alabama for about sixteen months. Soon afterwards, Lt. Knight was transferred to the 5th Infantry, where he served under General Leonard Wood in the campaign against bandits and guerrillas in the Department of Santiago. Promotion to the rank of first lieutenant came while on this duty.

After nine months of campaigning in Cuba, the 5th Infantry was ordered to the Philippine Islands, where Lt. Knight participated in the campaign against Aguinaldo, the insurgent leader, in 1900-01.

At the conclusion of this duty he was transferred back to his old regiment, the 1st Infantry, and served with it on the island of Samar until 1903.

In the following year he was detailed as a student at the Infantry-Cavalry School, Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, and upon his graduation in 1904, he was assigned to the 5th Infantry at Plattsburg, N. Y. In December, 1904, he received his promotion to captain. Soon afterward he was transferred again to the 1st Infantry, with which he embarked for a second tour of service in the Philippines, arriving there in time to participate in the quelling of the Pula-

Col. Charles A. Hunt Leaves On Thursday For Fort Howard, Md.

Lieut. Col. Charles A. Hunt left Thursday for his new station at Fort Howard, Maryland. He will be joined the latter part of the month by Mrs. Hunt, who, with her son, Weyman Strother, is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rhodes Browne in Columbus. Mrs. Hunt plans to remain in Columbus until Weyman leaves the middle of the month to resume his studies at St. James near Hagerstown, Maryland. Both Col. and Mrs. Hunt have hosts of friends both on the Post and in Columbus who regret their departure. Mrs. Hunt has played an active part in the social and cultural life on the Post. She served as president of the Infantry School Woman's Club during the preceding year.

ROBERT LEE CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY WITH PICNIC AND MOVIE PARTY

Robert Lee, the young son of Capt. and Mrs. Frank Lee, celebrated his tenth birthday Tuesday at the horse show bowl, where a delicious picinc supper was served followed by games and contests. After supper the guests were escorted to the Post movies. Those enjoying Robert's hospitality were: Fred Ladd, Leonard Lindroth, Robert Wallace, Alec Stuart, Jimmy Ladd, Bill Morse, Lloyd Barnett, Bud Reeder, Harry Reeder, Robert Mangum, James Drewry, John Huling, Burton Lucas, John Rice, George Pope, John Selleck, Bill Clark, Ed Renth, Jimmy Falligant, Berry Falligant, and Vernon Elliott.

MISS NANINE WHEELER ENTERTAINS WITH DANCE AT POLO CLUB

Miss Nanine Wheeler, the attractive younger of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Walter Wheeler, entertained Saturday evening with a delightful dance at the Polo Club. The club was most attractive with its decorations of pine boughs. Dancing was from nine to twelve, the music being furnished by the 24th Infanrty orchestra. Miss Wheeler had as her guests about fifty-five members of the younger set.

MISS EMILY BROWN AND MISS MARY McDAVID HONOR GUESTS AT PICNIC

Miss Maxine Rife, Miss Louise Waddington, Miss Jane Lindroth and Miss Mary Wadsworth were the hostesses Friday afternoon at a delightful picnic supper at Jeff's Hole honoring Miss Emily Brown, who left Saturday for Denver, Colorado, where she will attend the Women's College, and Miss Mary McDavid who will leave Tuesday for the Alabama Women's College. Swimming and weiner roasting were in order during the afternoon. The chaperones were Lieut. and Mrs. James E. Bowen. Enjoying the picnic were: The Misses Emily Brown, Mary McDavid, Jane Lindroth, Louise Waddington, Maxine Rife, Mary Wadsworth, and Messrs. Bill Gay, Dick Pruitt, Al Seeley, George Griswold, Mike Montesinos, Howard Liston, Bob Besson, and Roy Bodine.

Today's Fashion

By VERA WINSTON

NEW VELVET WEAVES

Lots of new weaves in various fabrics. Velvet goes on and on and has several new weaves to show. Not content with its important position in the mode, and fashion's acceptance of the stapleweaves such as chiffon velvet and Lyons, clever designers have experimented and produced several most attractive novelties. These have been made up into lovely clothes ready for the social season that is even now upon us, as everything seems to be starting up this year sooner than is usually the case.

In today's sketch we show a delightful evening wrap made of one of the new velvets. It is a product of the French mills and looks exactly like ermine. It is most striking in this model by reason of the contrast provided by the black Persian lamb trimming. The draped, cowl-like collar of Persian lamb buttons in back. The bottom of the sleeve which is of the fur is very tight in marked contrast to the fulness above the elbow. This type of sleeve is attracting quite some attention and is very, very new.

Work Progresses Rapidly On New Club

Above is shown the Artist's conception of the New Officer's Club as it will be when finished. The work on the Spanish type structure, which is expected to occupy the course of probably another year, is progressing rapidly, and the foundations are nearly finished. The building was designed by a prominent New York designer, Mr. George A. Sheddan, and the plans were drawn by Mr. L. D. Raines, a well-known architect.

Officers returning for a second tour of duty at Fort Benning are witnessing the realization of the hope of those who pioneered the development of the big Post. The Officers' Club permanent building is actually under way. The foundation has been laid, and soon the walls will follow. It is estimated that before another year rolls by, the new club building will be completed and equipped, and that the Officers' Club of Fort Benning will take its rightful position as second to none among the officers' clubs of the Army.

For more than eight years a fund has been accumulating to defray the cost of construction. The fine new edifice will stand as a monument to those who served at Fort Benning. To these officers a debt of gratitude is due from the younger officers who follow, for they are the ones who will enjoy the benefits of the efforts put forth by their predecessors.

While it is believed that sufficient funds are on hand to complete the building, it is realized that if the equipment of the club is to be in keeping with the beauty of the architecture, additional funds must be raised.

The general design of the new building, prepared by George A. Sheddan, New York City, was approved by the Secretary of War, and the site was selected more than a year ago. The next step was the drawing of working plan. This was entrusted to a competent architect, Mr. L. D. Raines, who prepared a complete set of working plans under the supervision of Captain Carl H. Jabelonsky, Constructing Quartermaster. When finished, the plans received the approval of the Board of Governors of The Officers' Club and the Commandant. They were forwarded to the War Department, and were approved by the Secretary of War upon the recommendation of the Quartermaster General, early in February of this year.

Believing that no time better than the present for the construction of the building, the Board of Governors headed by Col. W. L. Reed, Inf., President, urged an early start. Major Campbell King, Commandant of The Infantry School, who has taken a lively interest in the enterprise, named the Recreation Center Board to erect the building. Early this summer ground was broken, and the work has been progressing steadily under Capt. H. J. Golightly, assisted by 1st Lieut. Aloysius O'Flaherty.

CENTRAL LOCATION

The site selected for the new club building is the area designated by the War Department for the permanent Academic buildings hence the new club will be centrally located both in relation to the school buildings and officers' quarters.

SPANISH TYPE BUILDING

The new club building will be of Spanish type architecture in keeping with the new buildings erected at Fort Benning. It will be a two story and basement structure, having a frontage of 250 feet and a depth of 127 feet. On the ground floor will be the main lounge, 45x95 ft. opening on a large porch at the rear, 14 feet wide. There will be a large porch at each side on the front of the building terminating in the center at the main lounge. Adjoining the lounge will be the dining room, card room and grill on the right as one enters the building; library and billiard room on the left. The interior will be given typical Spanish treatment with rough plastered walls, high-lighted and exposed, stained trusses and roof purlines. Stairways leading to balcony and sleeping rooms on the second floor will have iron and birch wrought balustrade. The floor of the lounge will be polished hardwood suitable for dancing.

MODERN GRILL

The Grill, 30x50 ft., will be located to the right of the main lounge, with a frontage of 50 feet along the front porch. It will be equipped with lunch counters, soda fountain, cigar stand, and sundry other departments with men's necessities. The Grill will have access through several doors to the front porch, card room and general office. Folding doors provided an entrance to the card room which may be thrown open thus becoming a part of the Grill. The Steward's office will be located directly at the end of the Grill, adjoining the Secretary's office.

DINING ROOM

The dining room 43x62 ft., located on the right side of the main lounge at the rear, will have access to the kitchen through the serving pantry and will have opening on the main lounge, card room, grill and rear porch. The floor will be polished hardwood suitable for dancing with a space reserved in the corner for an orchestra. The dining room will open on the rear porch through six French windows. The rear porch, 14x75, may be used in connection with the dining room for dining and dancing.

SPACIOUS KITCHEN

There will be a roomy kitchen, 29x38 ft., with modern equipment and access to the dining room and grill through serving pantry. Adjoining the kitchen will be a storage room 18x25 ft., with a cold storage plant 10x10 ft. and a loading platform. There will be direct service to the rear porch.

CARD ROOM

The card room, 28x30 ft., which adjoins the grill and front porch is so arranged as to be shut off from the grill by means of folding doors, or can be treated as part of the grill, when it is desired to use it as such.

BILLIARD ROOM

The billiard room, 30x34 ft., will give ample space for several billiard tables. This room will open on the main lounge, the library, and the barber shop. Passage-ways will make this room accessible to both front and rear porches and to the men's locker room, which is located in the basement.

LIBRARY

A room 30x43 ft. will be reserved for the library. This room will have a large fireplace at the end and will be finished similar to the main lounge. It will have openings to the main lounge, billiard room and rear porch.

GENERAL OFFICE

The general office, 20x39 ft., for the use of the Secretary and his staff will have all necessary office equipment for the operation of the building and the activities of the Club. This office will have access to the grill, front porch and outside of building.

LADIES' LOUNGE

The ladies lounge, 20x56 ft., situated on the north end of the building will be connected with the main lounge through the front porch or through passages to rear porch and the library. This room will have a large fireplace at the end and direct

Golf A Prominent Post Activity

AIR VIEW OF GOLF COURSE

FRONT OF NEW CLUBHOUSE

At the right is a recent photo of the newly completed Golf Club, front view, showing the porch. The Club is situated on the crest of a high hill near the Post and commands a magnificent view of several of the holes on the course.

Ranking as one of the foremost and popular of the recreational activities at Fort Benning, golf has firmly entrenched itself at this post and has been furthered by the excellent facilities provided for it here. The post has a very good eighteen hole course which compares favorably with the best in the south. The course was constructed under the supervision of Colonel H. A. Wells, and is a beautiful layout. The clubhouse was also recently constructed and is an excellent addition to the golfing equipment at Benning, replacing the old wooden clubhouse at the corner of the First Division Road and Wickersham Avenue.

The course is a par 72 and is 6106 yards in length. The following table shows the distances and pars for each hole:

| Hole | Distance | Par |
| 2 | 495 | 5 |
| 3 | 368 | 4 |
| 4 | 110 | 3 |
| 5 | 386 | 4 |
| 6 | 300 | 4 |
| 7 | 175 | 3 |
| 8 | 280 | 4 |
| 9 | 525 | 5 |
| 10 | 422 | 4 |
| 11 | 345 | 4 |
| 12 | 265 | 4 |
| 13 | 410 | 4 |
| 14 | 180 | 3 |
| 15 | 460 | 5 |
| 16 | 134 | 3 |
| 18 | 447 | 5 |

While both the layman and the expert are impressed at first glance with the golfing possibilities of the course, they are also struck by the beauty, both natural and artificial, of the layout. While the oldest part is only about three years old, it is in excellent condition. The greens are undulating and true and the tees are large and well grassed. Both the tees and greens are watered.

The course is laid out on the small hills and ravines east of the Station Hospital, but there are no steep climbs on the entire course. Number 6 hole is the steepest and has a drop of 135 feet from the tee to the green. The climb back to the 9th green and the clubhouse is gradual, and is not fatiguing in the least. Another feature of the course is the fact that numbers 9, 12, 16 and 18 greens come back to the vicinity of the club house, which is located on Smyth Hill.

Several tournaments are held yearly on the Fort Benning course, including many local ones, those with colleges throughout the south, interclub matches, the club championship and the Fourth Corps Area Championship. Trips are also made by a team selected from the club members to represent the club in out of town matches. During the past year, the team made trips to the Radium Springs course, the Tate Mountain Estates, and to Columbus. A ladies' team accompanied the officers' team to Radium Springs.

While no accurate number has been kept of the number of persons who play golf each day, the course is usually crowded during Sundays and holidays and in the afternoon during working hours. The greater number of ladies play in the morning.

The Golf Director is Major T. B. Catron, who succeeded Colonel H. A. Wells, when the latter left the post. In the elections to be held in the Fall the permanent director will be chosen and the other officers elected. Assisting Major Catron as members of the greens committee are Major George L. Kraft, Capt. Virgil Bell, Capt. H. K. Liston, and Capt. A. E. Burnap.

The course record is held at present by Frank P. Goss, local professional, with a 68. This included a 33 on the first nine and a 35 on the second. The amateur record is held jointly by Col. H. A. Wells, Major R. K. Sutherland and Lt. Brady with a 72. Major Sutherland is club champion with Lt. Brady runnerup during the past year.

Tank School Will Begin Courses Here

Organization And Equipment Among Finest At Benning

The opening of this school year is marked by one of the most notable changes in the organization of the Academic Department since the establishment of the Infantry School.

A new section, known as the Tank Section, has been added and important courses in tank subjects have been included in three of the established sections of the Academic Department.

The Tank Section of the Infantry School is a result of the removal to Fort Benning of the Tank School which was formerly located at Fort George G. Meade, Maryland. It has long been the desire of the War Department to combine at Fort Benning all courses of instruction pertaining to the tactics and technique of every infantry weapon. Until this year most of the instruction in tank tactics and all of the courses in the technique of tanks and their armament has been given at Fort Meade. A short course in the tactical employment of tanks has been given by the First Section of the Infantry School for a number of years but the time allotted to the subject was not sufficient to give Infantry officers attending the school a thorough knowledge of this important Infantry weapon. Until this year only graduates of the Tank School could be considered as having received a thorough course of training in the employment of tanks. Under the new organization all officers attending the infantry school will receive more thorough instruction in tank tactics, tank reconnaissance and tank gunnery.

The old Tank School was originally established at Fort George G. Meade on July 26, 1919 as the Tank Corps School of Instruction under Colonel H. E. Mitchell, Tank Corps, as commandant. It was intended primarily for the training of enlisted replacements for the tank units organized during the war and which were concentrated at Fort Meade. The officers course was of only two month's duration.

The school was later designated the Tank School when the Tank Corps was abolished and tanks became a part of the Infantry. For thirteen years the Tank School was operated at Fort Meade under a number of commands, among whom were such well known officers as Colonel (now Brigadier General) S. D. Rockenback, Colonel (now Brigadier Gen-

Head of School

COLONEL W. B. WALLACE

Colonel W. B. Wallace, Commanding Officer of the Tank School at Fort Benning, began his military career as a private in the 34th Infantry in May, 1898. He remained with this regiment from May to November 1898 and was then transferred to Company "G" 30th Infantry, where he remained until January, 1901, rising to the grade of 1st Sergeant.

While he was an enlisted man, he saw volunteer service in Cuba and later in the Philippines.

Col. Wallace was commissioned a 2nd Lieutenant in the regular army in January, 1901, and was then assigned to the 20th Infantry. He remained with this regiment until 1919, rising to the rank of Captain. From July, 1916, to March, 1917 he saw service as a major on the Mexican border, and, in 1917, was detailed to the War Department General Staff, to accompany General Tasker H. Bliss to France for the first session of the Supreme War Council at Versailles in December, 1917. He remained with General Bliss on the staff for the duration of the war and later when the latter was one of the delegates to the Peace Conference.

He was commissioned a Lt. Colonel, Infantry, in July, 1920, and was again on the general staff for the period from 1926 to 1930. He was commissioned a Colonel, Infantry in June, 1931.

Colonel Wallace is a graduate of the Tank School, class of 1930-31, after his graduation held the position of Assistant Commandant at the Tank School, Fort Meade, Maryland.

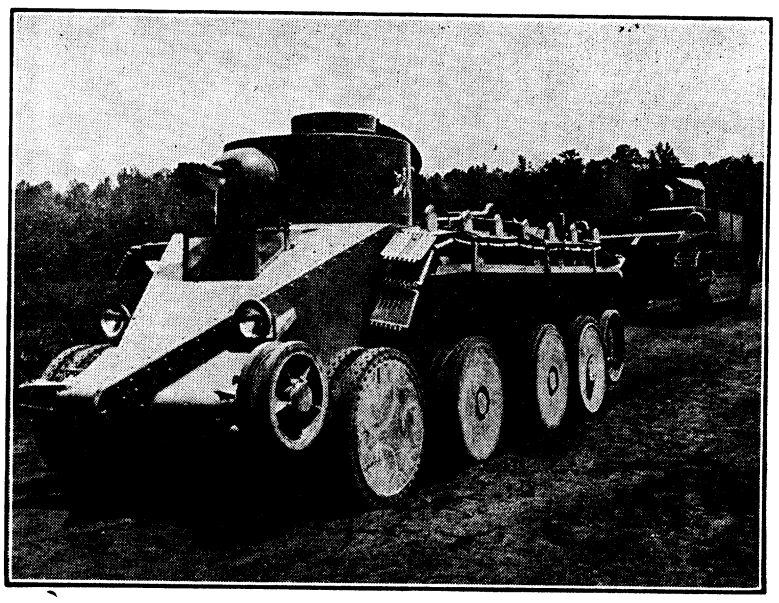
Mr. Christie Talks Here Recently On Tank Developments

Projected developments in tanks which will make those of the United States Army the fastest and most deadly weapons of that type in the world, were discussed by J. Walter Christie, noted American inventor and engineer, in the course of a lecture which he delivered on Friday before the faculty of the Infantry School at Fort Benning. Mr. Christie is the designer of the Christie tank, of which several have lately been built for the army, and with which a tank company at Fort Benning is equipped.

Mr. Christie gave a brief description of the salient features of his newest model tank, recently built in his factory at Linden, N. J., which is now undergoing tests preparatory to its being sent to Fort Benning for a series of demonstrations at the Infantry School. One of the greatest problems approaching solution in the construction of the newest tank is the reduction of weight, particularly that of the motor. According to Mr. Christie, the 450 h.p. motor in the new model tank is five hundred pounds lighter than the 350 h.p. type used in those previously built by him. Other reductions of weight have been made in the chassis and body the tank by improved design. In the gear boxes alone, one half of the former weight has been eliminated, and in the design of the body of the tank, which has been made much lower, a great reduction of weight has been accomplished. Increased stability while traveling at high speed has been given also by the lowering of the center of gravity of the cut down body.

The reduction of weight which has been accomplished in the new model, according to Mr. Christie, will permit the vehicle to carry armor plate one and one quarter inches thick without exceeding a full load weight of ten tons for the vehicles. Economy in operation and increased speed are also expected to result from the elimination of the surplus weight.

In recent tests of the tank it has traveled at sixty-five miles an hour on tracks, across country, and one hundred and twenty miles per hour on its wheels. It is claimed that the new tank can attain its highest speed of sixty-five m.p.h. within one hundred and fifty feet, from a standing start. The maximum speed of four Christie tanks now in the hands of troops at Fort Benning and which were designed in 1928, is forty-five miles per hour on tracks and seventy miles on wheels.



A photo of one of the Medium T-3 Tanks, the invention of Mr. J. Walter Christie, which have lent unusual flexibility and speed to the Tank branch of the Infantry Arm.

An increased road clearance is another important feature of the new model, which, with a clearance of twenty-four inches, exceeds by six inches those of older designs. Smoother action over rougher terrain is also possible, Mr. Christie said, with the new tank, each of whose eight wheels has an individual spring action of twenty-seven inches.

Dramatic Club Is Important Part Of Benning Life

The Infantry School Dramatic Club now is firmly established as a permanent institution at Fort Benning. No longer do we become members through a charitable sense of trying to help out a few enthusiastic theater bugs and a small group of aspiring actors.

The purpose of the club as stated in the Constitution is twofold. First, "to awaken and encourage an interest in dramatics, through the presentation, review, and discussion of acceptable plays;" and second, "to promote, through this medium, good fellowship and to add a worthwhile activity to the life of the garrison."

It only remains for one to attend a present-day production of the Dramatic Club, to realize that the above purposes has been accamplished to the fullest extent. The earmarks of amateurism, the stammering actor, caricature make-up, tottering scenery, and glaring lighting are relics of bygone days in our club's history. The productions in the past few years have been of such a high standard that the dearth of professional performances throughout the provinces has not been noticed. Fort Benning has been treated to plays excellently selected and artistically produced. True, all taking part are amateurs, from the director to the stage carpenter but, with over eight hundred members to be entertained and at least a third of that number ready to help, neither incentive nor capable talent is lacking. The results of the combined efforts of many interested people has been the production of theatrical hits which today Benning expects and will get from the Infantry School Dramatic Club.

Last year was the most successful year the club has had. This was not due to any particular individual or event but chiefly to the increased general interest and appreciation of the garrison which were inspired by former successful years.

The officers last year were:

President ——— Maj. H. B. Lewis
Vice President — Maj. A. F. Kingman
Sec. Treasurer —— Capt. W. S. Paul
Director ——— Mrs. E. D. Patrick
Business Mgr. —Capt. W. C. Phillips
Stage Mgr. ——— Lt. A. S. O'Flaherty
House Mgr. —— Capt. C. H. Owens
Publicity Mgr. —— Lt. N. C. Caum Play Reading Committee:
Mrs. J. L. Whitelaw
Mrs. H. B. Lewis
Major C. P. Stivers

This group worked hard and long but their efforts were not in vain if we are to judge by the general consensus of opinion.

For the season of 1931-32, the Club produced five three-act plays. "This Thing Called Love" headed this list followed by Barry's two plays, "Holiday" and "Paris Bound." "A Perfect Alibi," a mystery play and the screaming farce, "Cradle Snatchers," closed the season. It must be admitted that this was a most ambitious program but a high standard of excellence was attained.

This year, after a revision of our Constitution and a new assignment of duties for our officials, the following were elected to control the destinies of the club:

Executive Committee:
President ——— Maj. E. F. Harding
Vice President ——Maj. T. B. Catron
Director ——— Mrs. R. H. Chance
Secy.-Treas.-Bus. Mgr.
Capt. H. J. Golightly
Assistant ——— Lt. R. V. Murphy
Stage Manager —— Capt. Virgil Bell
Assistant —— Capt. H. N. Merrill
Assistant— Lt. A. S. O'Flaherty.

A more experienced group theatrically could not have been selected from the personnel of the post and, assuredly, this augurs well for the current year. The selections of the four plays for the coming season have not been announced but all will be three-act plays of a type which experience has indicated that the local audiences enjoy. The dates on which this year's plays will be presented are:

November 11 and 12
December 16 and 17
February 10 and 11
March 24 and 25

Fort Benning no longer needs urging to support their Dramatic Club, for interest in this worthwhile activity of the garrison's life is yearly increasing.

Membership tickets for the year 1932-33 have not been placed on sale, but some announcement, relative to the date the sale opens, will be made in the near future.

TANK SCHOOL ONE OF FINEST EQUIPPED SECTIONS OF INFANTRY SCHOOL

eral) G. D. Simonds, Colonel O. S. Eskridge, Colonel H. L. Cooper, Colonel C. H. Miller, and Colonel (now Brigadier General) J. K. Parsons.

When the Tank School closed last June to prepare for the move to Fort Benning the following number of officers had been graduated since the school was organized.

| Colonels | 2 |
| Lt. Colonels | 11 |
| Majors | 44 |
| Captains | 177 |
| 1st Lieutenants | 188 |
| 2nd Lieutenants | 30 |
| | 452 |

These include 15 Cavalry officers and one Field Artillery officer.

Colonel W. B. Wallace, Infantry, who has been assistant commandant of the Tank School since June 1931, comes to Fort Benning as Chief of the Tank Section. A brief sketch of Colonel Wallace's military career appears elsewhere in this issue.

The organization of the Tank Section is shown below together with the courses being taught in that section.

CHIEF OF SECTION
Colonel W. B. Wallace
SECRETARY
Captain S. S. MacLaughlin
(Also instructors in the Chassis Group)

TANK DESIGN GROUP
Major R. S. Lytle

This group will give instruction in the design of tanks past and present but will emphasize the tactical requirements of design as applied to the development of future tanks. A course in "Tank Studies" will also be given by this group. This subject which is given to students enrolled for the complete tank course, parallels the course in monographs given students of the Infantry School proper.

MOTOR GROUP
Major S. G. Henry
Captain L. L. Williams
Captain C. H. Farish

Major Henry and Captain Williams will give a very thorough course in the theory and practice of internal combustion engines and their accessories. Captain Farish will give the course in elecrticity which is designed to insure a thorough knowledge of ignition systems and their maintenance, including batteries.

TANK GROUP
Captain F. R. Williams
1st Lt. J. A. Holly

This group will give courses in Tank Chassis of the various types and tank driving, insuring a thorough understanding of the tanks now actually in use and also those in the development stage. These include the Christie, the Medium T-2, the T-1 E-1 the 23-ton tank as well as the well known 6-ton Light tank and the Mark VIII heavy tank.

CHASSIS GROUP
1st Lieut. G. DeV. Barnes

This course is intended to include everything about a motor vehicle except the power plant. The Chassis Group is provided with some magnificent equipment in the form of demonstration chassis and this is a very valuable course for any officer who may at some time be responsible for the care and operation of any class of motor vehicles.

In addition to the courses given in the Tank Section a course in Tank Tactics will be given in the First Section of the Academic Department by Major H. A. Wadsworth and Major W. L. Roberts, both of whom came from the Tank School, and Major Reeder who is well known at Benning having given the course in Tank Tactics for some years past.

In the Second Section, 1st Lt. E. C. Johnson, formerly of the Tank School faculty will give the course in Tank reconnaissance.

Griffin Slashes Way to Close Victory

John "Corn" Griffin was lucky indeed to be awarded a decision over Frankie Edgren Thursday night at the Post Gymnasium, in what was the hardest fight Corn has had in many moons. The house was packed to almost its capacity with enthusiastic fans, the opening bout having to be postponed for a short time to allow the fans to get seated.

The card was well supported by an excellent cast of fighters in the preliminary bouts. Action was shown from the opening fracas to the semi-final. It was here that the fights slowed up a little, but it was by no means a bad fight.

The main event had the fans primed for a show, and that is just what they got. Griffin slid out in the first round, feeling his opponent out, with Edgren doing the same. They were both respecting the other's abilities, as everyone could see. Nothing to write to congress about happened in this round.

Practically the same goes for the second round, with the edge going to Edgren, his left telling well on the strong Tanker. Griffin suffered him to come in with his sharp left hand, followed by rights to the head, and in return pounded on Edgren's body. Both boys were cool, and still feeling the other out.

Corn took the lead in the fourth round, pounding the cowboys body with piledriver blows. Edgren's side was beginning to turn a nice spanked baby pink at the end of the round. Edgren was showing the fans what a Sels-Floto clown was supposed to do in the ring, and was suffering for his pains.

Not having enough of his clowning in the foregoing round, Edgren came back in the fourth with a new selection of numbers. He would pose and cut up, and when Griffin thought he was a big bluff, he stuck out some snake-like lefts that burned the Tanker's face no end. At this juncture, Edgren decided to show that he respected the body blows enough to retaliate with some of the same kind. Edgren was in the lead at the end of this round.

The Cowboy seemed to be out for blood in the fifth, and that is what he got. He opened a small cut under Griffin's eye with a hard right to the face, and followed with several fast lefts. Griffin fought back hard, but Frankie was too clever for him to do any damage. Edgren's round.

Agitated to the boiling point by the antics of the clowning cowboy, Corn came out in the sixth with fire in his eyes. He slashed Edgren about something fierce, pounding over the kidney with hard right hand blows. He continually scorned the openings to the chin, prefering to work on the body. Griffin was more aggressive here than he has ever shown at Benning. Corn's round.

They both were battling hard in the seventh round, both trying to batter down the other with body blows. Edgren sank a couple of good hard blows to the stomach, but Corn was still working on that kidney location. It was telling on Edgren a little by then, but the cowboy seemed not to mind, electing to leave that portion of his anatomny open. Corn had the edge, but a very slim one here.

The eighth round was rather slow, with nothing of interest happening during its duration. Both were satisfied to swap punches at all times. Not enough real fighting in this round to give it to either.

The ninth round found Edgren fooling around a little too much, and Corn took good advantage of that. He repeatedly sank hard right and left hands to the body, and had Edgren dancing a good bit. Griffin took advantage of the openings and sailed in with all he had, Frankie fighting desperately to keep the big fellow off.

Back out there in the tenth and final round, the boys went at it tooth and nail. Edgren fought like a veteran, slashing the Tanker with left hands that seemed to materialize out of nowhere. His right hand was also strong, and had Corn in trouble several times, but the Tanker was slinging leather all the way. A good round of applause followed the bell, and several in the gathering yelled "Draw, draw," but the judges said it belonged to Corn.

The semi-final was rather slow, due to the fact that Kid Chauffeur elected not to move about, go in or do much fighting. He could hit, but seldom displayed any interest in that part of fighting. Batton was all over him at times, but the Kid was too tough to be stopped by that right hand of Cotton's.

Batton was anxious to fight, but could do nothing to make the big fellow move about. Chauffeur seemed to be as an overfed bear, electing to back up in a corner and protect himself.

He was picked as the one colored

Tennis Relieves Monotony Of Garrison's Routine

Tennis, in the past year, has assumed a commanding position in the field of sport at Fort Benning which is constantly growing stronger as the ranks of its devotees are augmented by eager converts to the game, and by the arrival of veterans of the courts from other stations. Tennis activities of Fort Benning are promoted by the Officers' Club, under whose sponsorship its popularity as a recreation has grown with remarkable rapidity. In the promotion of the game the Club has effected a most efficient organization of the several groups at the post who are followers of the popular sport, and its influence has extended into civilian circles as well. In addition to the regular posts meets the club has conducted several tournaments and exhibition games in which both civilian and army amateur players of note have participated, as well as some of the world's greatest professional players.

One of the most ambitious recent efforts of the tennis group was the exhibiiton at Fort Benning in which Big Bill Tilden and a galaxy of world famous stars appeared in February. Accompanying Tilden were Albert Burke, Roman Najuch, and Hans Nusslein, who collectively, held all the championships of Europe. Adverse weather conditions forced the holding of the exhibition indoors. Notwithstanding this handicap, the event attracted so much interest, not only from Fort Benning, but from all parts of Georgia and contiguous states, that arrangements were made for a second appearance of the group of professional champions in April.

The greatest event in local amateur tennis circles was the fourth annual invitation tournament which was held at Fort Benning in June. This assembled here practically all of the luminaries of the southern tennis world, and revealed some championship material among local players. One of these was Captain Richard O. Bassett, who, with Lefty Bryan, of Atlanta, captured the doubles title.

Dressed to Kill

Wearing cool-looking flannel shorts and floppy canvas hat, Henry W. "Bunny" Austin, British tennis star, atracted as much attention by his unusual attire as he did by the quality of his playing, when he defeated Cecil Metz, of Memphis, Tenn., in the first round of the national tennis championships at Forest Hills, L. I. Austin, who is the second seeded foreign player, won 6-1, 6-2, 6-1.

Tankers and Kells Swap Scores To Even Count in Series Play

The Kellys and Tankers got under way Wednesday afternoon in the play-off for League honors in the Intra-Mural League. The Kellys, after having won the first half in brilliant style, were slowed up considerably in the last half. The Tankers made a brilliant finish to take the Second Half honors.

The Kellys' loose fielding gave the Tankers the break that turned the first game of the series in their mitts. Eleven errors were chalked up by the luckless Kells, allowing the Tankers to win by a 13 to 9 count.

Big Bill Swantic, on the mound for the Tankers, besides holding the Kells

Polo Team Gets Early Start

The Twenty-ninth Infantry polo team, which has stolen a march on the other teams of the Post by beginning training early in the season. The team has already played three games. Left to right: Lt. W. C. Sweeney, Lt. W. W. O'Connor, Lt. C. W. Westlund, and Major L. S. Frazier.

Polo Gains Prestige At Benning As Public Becomes Horse Minded

Polo has been included among the popular sports at Fort Benning since 1920. There is now a polo club which is a member of the Southeastern Circuit of the United States Polo Association and which comprises in its membership four groups of the two teams each. These are the 29th Infantry, 83rd Field Artillery. the Freebooters and the Students' teams.

The pressure of military duties at The Infantry School limits sharply the time which officers can devote to polo. Another limitation is imposed by the lack of the approved type of polo ponies. Polo ponies comparable to the high priced animals bred especially for this sport by wealthy civilian patrons of the game do not exist at Fort Benning. Here the army officers who engage in polo have only the conventional types of army horses to choose from, and these animals are also used for a variety of purposes in military work. This practice differs from that of civilian polo clubs, who breed and maintain their mounts exclusively for polo.

Despite these handicaps the army teams of Fort Benning play a good brand of polo and have made creditable showings in some of the larger national tournaments. Fort Benning teams have also played at Pinehurst and Fort Bragg, North Carolina, Camden, South Carolina, Washington, D. C., Chattanooga and Atlanta, in addition to the usual games with civilian and army clubs located near Fort Benning. In 1928 the Fort Benning team won the War Department invitaion tournament at Washingon, D. C. This victory entitled it to play in the inter circuit Tournament at Chicago, but competition in this tournament was to strong for the army players whose horses were no match for the civilian owned thoroughreds.

At the present time polo is carried on as a sport and games between the several members of the post polo club are held twice a week and afford a popular form of entertainment for the garrison and civilian friends.

TENNIS RELIEVES MONOTONY

Another event of outstanding importance in the local tennis field was the spring tournament, which brought together contenders for post championship honors. Successful competitors in this were Captain James H. Drake, 24th Infantry, winner of the men's singles; Lieutenant Thomas L. Sherburne and Captain Drake, who were the winning pair in the men's doubles events; Mrs. LeRoy W. Krauthoff, and Lieutenant Sherburne, who won the mixed doubles, and Mrs. Howard W. Brimmer, winner of the ladies' singles.

An informal post tournament will be held this fall, probably early in October, which is expected to reveal some new additions to the post's aspirants for local honors.

Post players have appeared to advantage in some of the meets held by civilian clubs in Columbus and elsewhere. In one of these Lieutenant James E. Poore won the singles title in the tournament sponsored by the Columbus Y. M. C. A., and in another conducted by the Columbus Country Club, Lieutenant Leon R. Brownfield emerged with the title of city singles champion.

In addition to the post tournaments, outside matches were played between the officers' team and teams from Columbus, Ga. and Georgia Tech., in Atlanta. The Fort Benning team won both matches from Columbus, and won and lost one in the two matches with Georgia Tech.

The work of improving the tennis courts which has been carried on throughout the year, received a new impetus a few weeks ago when construction of the new clay court and another concrete-surfaced court was begun by a crew of workmen under the direction of Captain Richard O. Bassett. When this work is completed all courts will be inclosed with the new wire fences, and a new drainage system will insure the rapid drying of the clay surface courts after bad weather, while the concrete-surfaced court will provide an all weather court for the hardy players who will not allow the elements to interfere with their enjoyment of the game.

Garrison Gridsters Get Good Start For Intra-Mural Season

Unless the outside teams who have customarily come to Fort Benning to play the local teams return this year, we will have a long wait before we see the grid game in Doughboy Stadium.

Arrangements were completed last week, in the office of Captain Philip T. Fry, Athletic Officer of Fort Benning. for the Intra-Mural season to open on December 3rd. It will be a fast season when it does get started, however, as the teams will be required to play only one time around. Two games will be played each week end, starting with December 3rd. One game will be played on Saturday, and one Sunday. This will keep the teams in fighting trim throughout the gruelling test of the season.

Only four teams are entered in the league this year, the Special Units, 29th Infantry, electing not to enter the loop again. However, there are chances that the Special Units, the Infanry School, will enter a team, plans being on foot to that end now. The entrance of this team into the league will aid greatly in furthering football at Benning. They should be able to put out a strong team for their first year, with a few years in the league giving them a chance at championships in a short while.

HOW THEY LOOK

As things stand now, it looks as though the Second Battalion, 29th Infantry will cop the honors again this year. This is the one team of the post which has not lost a man from last year. They have added great strength and speed in picking up a few newcomers this season.

Lt. Pierce is indeed lucky in having this break this season. His material will be used to the same type coaching as they will have this year, with the possible exception that they may be using the Penn State type plays this fall. Last year, they picked up the double wing back formations from the Artillery, which were introduced to this section by Captain Frederick H. Gaston, a coach with wide experience. They will have Kjelstrom, satellite of the grid of bygone days, who will act as an assistant coach. His headwork and generalship will show only from the sidelines this year, but that is enough to insure them a good team. Kelly was a good horse,

TANKERS-KELLYS SWAP SCORES

in check at nine tallies, slammed out four bingles in his batting nightmare. Kiker, diminuitive center gardner behind him dropped out three for his stick work.

This puts the Kells in a bad spot now for the championship, and nothing but superb playing and hitting will give them the flag for the season.

The first seven innings of the game saw the teams battling along on even terms. Carnes on the mound for the Kellys was twirling good baseball but his support was shaky at all times. The Tankers copped a pair of runs in the first frame on a walk, one hit and a couple of errors. The Kellys sent over one run in their turn to bat. In the fourth frame the Kellys jumped on Lindsey's offerings for four bingles to score four runs. The Tankers came back in their turn and touched Carnes for three hits and registered a trio of markers to tie the score. The Tankers added one in the sixth to knot the count at six all.

In the eighth frame the Tankers shoved over one marker on a hit by Kiker and sacrifice hits by Lindsey and O'Brien, followed by a bingle to left field by Moon. Hull singled. Carnes was pulled with two gone and runners on first and second. Haines went in but was welcomed by Swantic with a line drive to right field, scoring Moon and Hull. McLane bingled into left field and Haines was taken out. Swantic scored on McLane's blow. Aiken went in for Haines. Sullivan walked on four wide pitches, Smith whiffed.

The Kellys went scoreless in the eighth. The Tankers came back in the ninth to score a trio of runs and take a 7 run lead. With the balance badly against them the Kellys staged a last desperate rally to score three runs but finished 4 runs late.

The box score:

KELLS GET REVENGE

With a wild flurry of hard hitting and numerous errors, the Kells dug the second game of the play-off series out of the dust to reverse the score with the Tankers, evening the count at one all, Thursday. The Tankers having taken the game Wednesday 13-9, the Kells came back yesterday and turned the score around, making everything even all around.

This series of five games has the ear marks of a wild and wooly affair, and speculation is running wild as to the outcome. It will only be a matter of who is first to recover from the way of errors, and that looks as though it will never happen.

Bill Swantic went to the mound for the Tankers. He failed to show the speed that has featured his former twirling and the Kellys touched his delivery rgeularly. The Kells drew first blood in the opening frame on a pair of bingles and a costly error by McCarroll in right field. The Tankers came back in the second frame to take a one-run lead. McLane led off with a double to left. Sullivan was safe at first on Kelly's wild heave to Prophet. Smith doubled to right field scoring McLane and Sullivan. Smith was thrown out at third base when he tried to stretch the hit to a triple.

A pair of free passes and a trio of hits gave the Kellys three runs in the third frame. Swantic came back in the fourth frame to fan three Kellys in a row. Both teams went scoreless in the fifth. In the sixth frame the Kellys jumped on Swantic's offerings to score five runs off four hits and a couple of costly fumbles. The Tankers came right back fighting in their turn at bat and three free passes by Collyer, a couple of hits and a trio of errors, to score five runs. Collyer was relieved in favor of "Gentleman Jem" Ward, during this barrage.

Swantic went up in smoke in the seventh and Rusty Rowan was sent to his rescue. The Kellys scored a pair of markers in the exchange. Rowan was touched for one bingle and two markers in the eighth. A walk and Smith's fumble at second let in the markers.

The Tankers rallied in the eighth frame to collect three bingles and in the ninth but Hull ended the inning with a high fly to Prophet.

The box score:

Third Queen Helen

It's a great year for Helens. We saw Helen Madison sweep the swimming laurels at the Olympics; Helen Jacobs do likewise in the national tennis championships and now here is Helen Fulton, of Chicago, with the trophy emblematic of the girls' national tennis title, which she won by defeating Bonnie Miller, of Los Angeles, in the final of the tourney at Philadelphia.

but he has run his race. More power to him.

TANKERS STRONGER

The Tankers will be stronger this year than they were last, but will lack that final punch it takes to make a championship team. Not enough new material has been injected into their machinery to give them this added impetus.

Don't figure the Tankers for mere second place material, though, for a couple of jokers in one deck can change the complexion of many a poker game, and these Tankers are good at digging up jokers. This man O'Brien, or whatever they call him, is a hard running back, we hear, and the Second Tanks have added greatly to Tankers' strength. Bill Swantic, the plunging back of All-Army fame, is back to back up that line, and when Bill gets his head between his shoulders to bust a line . . . . move the chain.

1ST BATS. FOR 3RD PLACE

With Stevens and Hamschire in the backfield, the First Battalion should be able to put a scrapping team on the field this year. They will not have power enough to take the Kells and Tanks into camp, but will be able to fight out close games for the edification of the stands. A few dark horses uncovered at the psychological moment could turn defeat into victory for them, nevertheless. The Irish have long been noted for their fighting and sticking abilities. They have started earlier than any other team at training, and will be in top form for the hard fight that is two months more in the offing.

They are building their team this year, and will have an entirely different form of football to offer the post fans than has ever been displayed by this gritty team.

ARTILLERY IS WEAKER

With the loss of several of their good players during the past year, the Artillery will probably tail the list of teams. A lot of young blood will be injected into their lineups this season, which will make the playing of that team more interesting.

Pooch Derrick's absence will be mourned by the fans, as will that of McAuliffe and "Rat" Walters. Then, too, it is doubtful whether Bill Mallard will be back there in the line fighting again. Bill, unfortunately, had his football usefulness nipped in the bud at the youthful age of thirty-two, due to a serious accident, injuring his face and nose. He has played two years in this condition, but is warned by doctors that it is dangerous to continue. He will be missed greatly.

TANK SECTION

In the Third Section, 1st Lt. D. W. Brann, assisted by 1st Lt. C. C. B. Warden, will give the course in Tank Gunnery.

The Tank Section is housed in the new concrete buildings on the south side of Wold Avenue, between Gillespie and Edward Streets.

The following non-commissioned officers and specailists include the administrative and supply group at Tank Section Headquarters and the groups of assistant instructors in the various courses as indicated. This non-commissioned personnel represents an exceptionally well qualified group of men to whose efforts is due much of the success of the Tank School in the post. They all come to Fort Benning from Fort Meade.

GRIFFIN GETS DECISION

fighter in the south who could lick Batton, so that must leave Batton the colored middleweight champion of the south today. He can surely sling leather when he has a target that doesn't run away.

In the main preliminary, Dapper Doyle, and Ernest Chambliss, Birmingham, proved what bantams can do to liven up an already good card. They worked at top speed throughout the fracas, and in the end, Doyle took the lead by a narrow margin.

Chick Liddell gave Jack Walden, Columbus, a nice boxing lesson for the duration of six rounds. This boy Liddell looks good, and will some day be on the top, fighting main goes. He is an excellent boxer, uses his head and can hit fairly well.

Shifty Schroeder took a close decision over Charlie White, Columbus, but had to take a lot of punishment to do it. White looked good in spurts, and had the Chick on the canvas one time for one count.

The curtain raiser was also a close affair, with Phenix Fourroux dropping the decision to Buck Walderman, Fourroux fought a gallant fight, elading in the early part, but went to sleep early in the second round Walderman slip over a haymaker twice to down him in this round. He fought back hard for the remainder of the bout, however, and it was only on the strength of the two knockdowns that Buck won the tilt.

It was a good card throughout the fracas, and the Athletic Association and Captain Fry are to be congratulated on giving the fans a fight of this type. Let's hope there are many more.

COLONEL KNIGHT GOES TO POST AT PLATTSBURG BARRACKS COMMANDING 26TH INF.

jan insurrection in the Island of Samar.

Returning with his regiment to the United States in 1908, Captain Knight was stationed for two years at Vancouver Barracks, Washington. Two years duty with the recruiting service in Kansas City terminated in 1912, when he rejoined the 1st Infantry and went with it to the Hawaiian Islands. In 1917, after completing 18 years of service with the 1st Infantry he was transferred to the mainland and assigned to station at Nogales, Ariz.

Promotion to the rank of major and an assignment to the first officers' training camp then being organized at the Presidio came soon after the entry of the United States into the World War.

He was appointed to the rank of lieutenant colonel, national army, in August, 1917, and a short time afterwards he was assigned to the 84th Division at Camp Zachary Taylor, Kentucky, with which he served for a year, first as regimental commander, and later as C-1 on the division staff. Promotion to the temporary rank of colonel and an assignment to the War Department general staff were received in 1918, and in 1919 he was assigned to duty with the army of occupation in Germany. There he commanded the 50th Infantry until its demobilization, and later was placed in command of the 5th Infantry, with which he returned to the United States in 1922.

In the meantime, on March 15, 1920, his temporary appointment was terminated. On July 1, 1920, he received his appointment as lieutenant colonel, regular army, and on the eighteenth of the same month he was promoted to Colonel.

In the following year he was assigned to the office of the chief of infantry, in Washington, D. C., where he was in charge of personnel affairs of the Infantry. Upon the completion of this duty in 1927, he became a student at the Army War College, and after his graduation in 1928 he was assigned to Fort Benning.

NEW SERIES OF BROADCASTS FOR NEHI

Starting Monday evening, Sept. 19, the Nehi Bottling Company will sponsor over station WRBL a new and unique program featuring the "Nehi Bottlers." This presentation will greet you over the air each weekday evening at 7:15. The Nehi Bottling Company just recently finished which you had the pleasure of listening to the Nehi orchestra, with John Henderson, vocalist.

In the new program starting Monday, the Nehi Bottlers will bring you valuable information concerning the newest Cola out, Nehi Cola, and the many attractive premiums you are offered for these Nehi Cola crowns. A guarantee of real amusement in this new Nehi program is assured.

CRAZY CRYSTAL PROGRAM

No doubt many of you who had radios on last Wednesday evening around seven o'clock were surprised to hear such sweet music eninating from the studios of WRBL. However, such music deserves due credit, and it goes to the Crazy Crystal Company of Mineral Wells, Texas. . . . The Crazy Quartet supplies the melodies on this transcribed presentation, representing the cream of the nation's talent. You'll enjoy this feature that will come to you each evening at seven o'clock. Listen in tonight.

ROWLENSON A REAL MIKE-IKE

If you are sitting back peacefully on some Monday, Wednesday, or Friday evening around 7:45 p. m. listening to your radio, and to a program of popular dance tunes played at the piano, then all of a sudden a voice pops up from nowhere crying, "Mammy," you can go right on smoking that pipe, or reading, for it's only Haddaway Rowlenson adding a bit of unexpected nonsense . . . . Mr. Rowlenson really enjoys his own program; there's really no reason why he shouldn't, everyone else seems to. Listen out for him over WRBL on these evenings.

HQ., HQ. BTRY., AND C. T.

Sgt. Osborn being in the hospital, we have a new acting Mess Sergeant, Cpl. Williams has taken over the job and is coming along fine under the able guidance of head cook, Jimmie Niblett. We haven't noticed any change in the quality of the chow so far, Red probably hasn't asserted his rank yet.

The dismounted review next Saturday has everybody hustling to get the kinks out of their legs from riding horses these many years. Cpl. Lee had to drill a squad with Smith as his number one, which was some job as neither Lee nor Smith can keep step.

Sgt. McLeod is greatly relieved since he found out that he didn't have to march as right guide.

Some twenty men turned out for the Bn. football team last week. These are all new men out of their own free will and trying to earn a place on the team left vacant by probably the best team this Artillery has ever had. The old-timers are turning out this week and are being put through their paces every afternoon by Capt. Gaston and Lt. Hall. The way things are being run now we should have another good team even though we lost so many of our best players.

BATTERY "A"

The men of the Battery have proved that they can soldier when they want to. From the looks of the Guard report, Battery "A" has won first place in orderlys. The made eighteen orderlys for the Battery. This goes to show that when Battery "A" wants to work it is hard to beat.

The Battery has two week's hard work coming soon, but from the way they are talking the men will enjoy the work. They will soon see at least one new town. The town to which they are going always welcomes soldiers and will be glad to see the Battery coming.

The boys who live there will have something now to show their parents, and something that the parents will always remember. So, boys, do not forget and spend all of your money, you will want to have a good time in Montgomery.

Pfc. Dunn, has just came off of a re-enlistment furlough from Ky. and says that times are hard and that was the reason why he re-enlisted. But you can't fool us, Dunn. You can't leave your team, (Big Dick and Darby).

Pvt. Hendry, one of our ladies' men, has just received a nice little present. Well, Hendry, you sure look good in the uniform you had on this morning, your blue uniform has become too small.

Pvt. Muscrove, our most noted man, nearly got Pvt. Booth in serious trouble by playing with the money and summing up short when he started to pay off. Look out, Booth, Abernathy is a tough guy.

Pvt. Neely has his old job back at Bn. Hq. The fact is, Stringfellow has a good bit of business to attend to in Tennessee and he left Pvt. Neely too see that the Battery comes on all right

Sgt. McCann has begun to love Pvt. Fuller, for every time Sgt. McCann goes on Charge of Quarters, Pvt. Fuller causes him some trouble of some kind. Well, Fuller, I want you to clean your gun until I can shave on the slide. Fuller, there's some rust on your clips.

Pvt. Holt and Pvt. Hadley have the floor when Pvt. Hadley will give Pvt. Holt four licks to his one. That goes to show what old Louisiana grows. I'd let you do all of the hitting if you will make me see Hazle.

Pfc. Ed Roper says that he is going to see if he can make a good living raising chickens. Look out, Ed, you will have to build a good many hen's nests.

BATTERY "C"

The gunners examinations have been completed and fifty men of our battery qualified as expert gunners. First Sgt. Workman crashed through with the best score, 99.57 per cent. Many more qualified than will draw the extra pay.

Corporal Anderson took a flying trip home over the week-end, but we doubt that his flying thru the windshield was a part of his plans. We understand he is doing very well in he hospital and we hope to see him back for duty within a few days.

We have heard of flagpole and tree sitters, but Corporal Bryant is the only roof garden-sitter we have met so far. He stayed on our roof continuously for four days to learn firing data. He would have made a perfect score but for the sun, which, with no shade on the roof, did its best to qualify him for the sunstroked class.

We are haveing close order drill every morning and the battalion is having its first dismounted review since we received the horses. One of our former Battalion Commanders boasted once that the 83rd could outride the Cavalry, outshoot the stationary Artillery and now we are to prove that we can outmarch the Infantry. A good suggestion might be to leave our spurs at home.

One of our bright boys already discovered some points for the Infantry in favor of the Horse Artillery. When at a halt or at rest, a doughboy does not need to loosen the cinches.

Outstanding

SGT. FELIX G. MATTHEWS

Sgt. Matthews is one of the outstanding men of Regimental Machine Gun Company, 29th Infantry. He was the first member of the Ft. Benning personnel to win one of the Herald premiums for selling fifty subscriptions.

TALE SPINS

Grumpy trains for tramp to new tenting grounds after suffering defeat in the Arena Splendid at the hands of gladiator Elmer.

Stapes says we have a G. M. C. Radio. Four cylinders?

Lt. Huggins does not choose to be embarrassed by the letters of invitations to view ladies' pretties by well meaning silk bazaars of Columbus. Wonder if he would accept a sealed proposal.

Cook lost three hours sleep and took on three gray hairs when the garage burned the other night.

Capt. Barnett is slowly regaining an erect posture after the terrible strain sustained under those massive bars.

We regret the loss of Lt. Brownfield our esteemed supply officer and most valuable collector of trophies. May old Dame Fortune ever smile on you and never her daughter Misfortune. Per and old toast.

N. Oseover.

COMPANY "F"

We had our "blow out" down on the Upatoi Creek. Barbecue and drinks galore. Had quite a bit of fun. Company prizes were awarded by the Commanding Officer for excellency in Rifle Marksmanship this year. We had a very interesting program; the most interesting number being the pie-eating contest. Six pies were placed on stools; six men had their hands tied behind their backs and knelt before the pies. Instructions were given and the starting whistle blew. The men started eating. The first man to finish his pie, stand, and whistle was winner. Pvt. Fortune was winner, Pfc. C. H. Johnson was second, and "Spark Plug," our shine boy, was third.

Wise was telling "Gimp" Bennett how he came to be so popular in Columbus. We haven't decided just what he meant when he said that Gimp had "it". Come on Allen, let us in on the secret.

Cpl. Costello had cigarettes. Believe it or not. With all apologies to Ripley.

And isn't Love a funny thing; or why is "Hi" Chambers going to Savannah so much? Be a good sport and tell us if you're in love Hi. We'll sympathize with you.

What's that noise I hear? Well, well, it's only "War-Set" Simpson coming up in his Ford. He has a permit to operate it on the Post. Atta boy War-Set,we always said you'd come out on top sooner or later. Keep up the good work.

Dan O'Connell took the class through recently and it was amusing to see the place bring out the men's "little boy" traits. On the tour of the candy manufacturing plant, the men scarcely watched the making of the candy, so anxious were they to find candy "ends" to eat.

When the Officers' Club gives a dance now the orchestra won't have to play from an adjoining room. A second-story partition is being taken out to permit the orchestra to play a balcony. A big improvement, the credit for which, we understand, goes to Lt. H. G. Dowdall.

One of the most interesting officers at Benning we've talked to is Capt. John Huling Jr., who got around to reminiscing the other night and told us about Gene Markey, the illustrious and clever writer who recently married Joan Bennett, the movie star. Markey was stationed at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, when Captain Huling was there. Even then, Markey was known as the most original wisecracker on the post. What he lacked in being a good soldier (and he decidedly did lack something), he made up in originality. All of which goes to show that if you are not just the kind of soldier your mother hoped you'd be, you still have a good chance to be a genius. Or sumpin'.

Dinner Marks End Of Range Practice For Company "H"

Company "H," 29th Infantry, commanded by Captain Grant A. Schlieker, entertained in the company mess hall Tuesday evening at six oclock with a chicken dinner. The company was present in its entirety, with class "A" uniforms.

The purpose of this entertainment was as a joint celebration for the end of the range season, bidding farewell to two old officers, and the welcoming of three new officers of the company.

Lts. Jack G. Pitcher and Christian H. Clarke were the officers to leave the organization. They are both assigned to duty with the Company Officers' Class for this year as students. The incoming officers to the company were Lts. Dickey, Brown, E. L., and Brumby.

Captain Schlieker welcomed the new officers to Company "H," impressing on them the fact that they were coming to an "A" number "1" organization. At his introduction, each officer arose for recognition.

An elaborate menu for the dinner was prepared by Sergeant Albert DePratt and his able assistants. Invitations were extended several outsiders of the company, and from the looks of the strange faces, they must have all accepted.

The Regimental Commander, Colonel John Toffey and his staff were present as was the Battalion Commander of the Second Battalion and his staff.

During the program of the evening the winners in the recent marksmanship season competitions were awarded their prizes.

There were some exceptional marks set this year by the Company, which is, by-the-way, high company in the Regimental Howard Clarke Trophy proficiency test.

Those receiving awards for their qualifications were:

| | Score |
|---|---|
| Cpl. Stevens, High Sq. Average | 327 |
| Corp. Poe, 2d Sq. Av. | 21 |
| Sgt. Cody & Pfc. Gray (tied) | |
| High man | 353 |
| Pvt. Cochran, High recruit | 322 |
| Pvt. Griffin, 2nd High recruit | 324 |

Captain Schlieker voiced his appreciation of the cooperation of the members of the company in making the past season 100 per cent. in qualifications. He stated that due to the fact that he was new at commanding an organization of machine gunners, he was rather skeptical as to what the outcome would be when he first took over the reins. But now that he has witnessed the remarkable performances of the past season, he has nothing to fear from an organization of this type, he has nothing to fear from an organization of this type, he added.

With such non-commissioned officers in the company as First Sergeant Norbert L. Craine, Sergeants Louis F. Cody, Frank Ryles, Albert DePratt, Robert E. Harkey, Ernest E. Allen, Pyles and Godfreys, not to mention the many efficient corporals of the organization, and loyal privates, company "H" is certain to come out on top in many of their endeavors.

Olympic Entry Is New Arrival Here

"Carrying a message to Garcia" is still the feat that it was when that phrase was originated, in the belief of Lt. Brookner Brady, new arrival at Fort Benning to attend the Infantry school, who had occasion to understand that term during the recent Olympic games.

Lieutenant Brady was one of three army officers to represent the United States in the Pentathlon, a five-section event of the Olympic games. The three competed against nine army officers and three civilians in the tryouts at West Point. The other two were Lieut. Richard Mayo, who won third place, and Lieut. Clayton Mansfield, who came in thirteenth. Lieutenant Brady placed eleventh.

The man who carried the message to Garcia encountered no more strain or difficulties than did the entries in the Pentathlon. Contestants were sent out as military messengers, through enemy territory, with important communications to deliver.

They started out on horseback, but the horses were supposedly shot out from under them. Mountless, they fought with sword and pistol. Conquering, they came to a river and were obliged to swim across. Those who succeeded in all those events, ran the rest of the way on foot in great haste to deliver the messages. Each event took one day and its toll of human energy.

Every conceivable type of hazard beset the way, Lieutenant Brady declares. The men were given strange horses to ride over a course consisting of 16 three by eight jumps with ditches and obstacles to clear. The country was rough and broken for three and one half miles. An especially trying in and out jump, representing a railroad crossing, was placed at the end of the course, to confuse the already tired horse and rider. Lieutenant Brady placed fifth in this event, against entries from all parts of the world.

The fencing consisted of one touch bouts with epee. Twenty-six men from all sections of the globe competed. A complete day of this fencing, from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m., put the men's nerves on edge in preparation for a hard day of shooting, when nerves are required to be steadiest. The shooting consisted of 20 shots at bobbing targets.

Lieutenant Brady came in third in the 330 yard free style swim. The running took place over a two and one half mile cross country course which included golf course bunkers and hills so steep that the runners were forced to slow down to a walk.

The two outstanding incidents of the Pentathlon, according to Lieutenant Brady, were: the breaking of the previous Pentathlon record in shooting by Lieutenant Mayo, who scored 197 out of a possible 200 shots, and the ruining of Dan Anthony, famous old government horse, who was ridden by a foreign entry.

Two natives of Sweden won first and second places in the Pentathlon.

CHRISTIE MAKES TALK ON PROJECTED IMPROVEMENTS

Improvements in the design of the tracks have eliminated much of the noise of operation, as well.

While the tank is primarily an infantry weapon, the chassis is so designed that it is adaptable to all services. The body, said Mr. Christie, can be made gas tight, and it is so designed that 75 mm. cannon or machine guns can be mounted as armament and still allow room for radio apparatus.

Mr. Christie also gave a brief description of his proposed attachment by means of which the tank can be picked up by a hevay airplane and carried toward its objective behind the enemy lines. At the selected landing point the tank motor is to be started and the tracks set in motion to give the tank the same land speed as the plane. A lever operated from within the tank is to release the vehicle from the plane at the proper time.

Mr. Christie was introduced to the officers by Major Sereno E. Brett, tank member of the infantry board, who has known the inventor for a number of years, and who has had the opportunity to observe Mr. Christie's progress in his pioneer work on developing a powerful tank for the United States Army. Major Brett stated that Mr. Christie had expended more than $400,000 of his fortune in his patriotic work.

WORK ON NEW OFFICERS' CLUB BUILDING PROGRESSING RAPIDLY

connection with the ladies' rest room and access to the beauty parlor and ladies' locker room through a passage from the right side. The interior finish will be rustic beam treatment for ceiling with rough plastered walls. The beauty parlor, adjoining the ladies lounge, will be 18x21 ft. and will be equipped as a modern beauty parlor. The locker room with showers is conveniently located in the basement and adjoining these will be quarters for the maids.

LARGE PORCHES

Great care was taken in providing ample space for porches. The large front porch will be in two parts extending from both sides of the main lounge. It will have a width of 14 feet and total length of 78 feet. This porch as well as the rear porch can be used for dancing. It will have a tile floor, rough wood ceiling beams, exposed and stained. The rear porch is similarly finished. This porch can be reached through the lounge, dining room, kitchen, library and passage leading to the ladies' lounge. At the north end of the rear porch a tailor shop will be located, 18x21 ft. It will have easy access to all parts of the building.

To Play Soon At Royal

MAURICE CHEVALIER

Cinema Calendar

for Grand, Rialto and Royal

AT THE ROYAL

(Beginning with Midnight show, Saturday, 11:15 P. M.)

ALSO SUNDAY, MONDAY AND TUESDAY: Offering "Love Me Tonight" with Maurice Chevalier, brilliantly supported by Charles Ruggles, Charles Butterworth and Jean MacDonald. A delightful concoction of Melody and humor in which the famous French singing star is at his best.

AT THE RIALTO

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY: Offering "Mystery Ranch," with George O'Brien and Cecilia Parker. Here is the sizzling speed in which the story moves: A beautiful girl-captive of "The Killer" and his murderous henchmen—rescued by a lone avenger amid the thunder of hoofs and the roar of six-shooters.

SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Offering "Red Headed Woman," with Chester Morris and Jean Harlow." Women on the screen must learn to take it on the chin." And Chester's latest victim of exemplification is Jean Harlow.

TUESDAY: Offering "Night Court," with Phillips Holmes, Walter Huston, Anita Page, Lewis Stone and Jean Hersholt. A sensational story of political corruption with Huston as the unscrupulous jurist. Miss Page is "framed" on a morals charge and sent to prison to seal her lips from judicial sleuths.

WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY: Offering "The Famous Case," with Joan Blondell, Leslie Fenton, Kenneth Thomson and other able players. "His body will be found in the bedroom of his home. Besides him will lie the bound and gagged figure of his beautiful wife—an inside story of an actual love slaying.

AT THE GRAND

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Offering "Jewel Robbery" with William Powell, Kay Francis and Helen Vinson. Brilliant rascals and romnatic, polished rogues. A fascinating vehicle marking the reunion of Powell and Miss Francis after a lapse of a year since their last appearance together.

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY: Offering "Westward Passage" with Ann Harding, Laurence Olivier, Juliette Compton and Irving Pichel. A story of divorce and second marriage that plumbs the secret heart of womankind.

THELMA TODD and BUSTER KEATON in "SPEAKEASILY"

GRAND

"JEWEL ROBBERY"

Ladislaus Fodor, author of "Jewel Robbery," by Warner Bros., starring William Powell and Kay Francis, is nothing if not original and consistent. In creating the robber character played by Powell, Fodor made sure that everything the robber did would be in thorough keeping with his suave, gentlemanly method of operation. Take the matter of quieting his victims after he has robbed them and insuring against their raising an outcry before he, the master robber, could make his get-away.

Most thieves reveal the fundamental brutality of their natures and the coarseness of their technique by the manner in which they dispose of their victims, before or after robbing them. They truss them up or gag them in an unnecessarily painful manner. If they show any resistance, they knock them out with a blackjack or a lead pipe. Now and then a high-strung, over-nervous robber has been known to wound and even kill, in a moment of pardonable excitement.

At what he deems the proper moment—usually after his victims have been relieved of their valuables—he offers them a cigarette. They may be in no mood for smoking, but a second, and warmer invitation from their host, backed by an eloquent revolver, and they light up.

As they cautiously take their first puff, the Robber's charming tones are heard reassuring them:

"My specialty. A pleasant harmless smoke.

They look at one another, incredulously, suspiciously. The Robber continues:

"Two puffs and you'll be hearing soft music . . . . the world will begin to revolve pleasantly . . . "

And presently it happens. The world suddenly takes on the aspect of a huge joke. The smokers begin to laugh, the more they laugh, the funnier everything becomes, especially the situation at which they were horrified a moment before. And in a few more seconds they are gone into some far-off land of dreams.

And The Robber makes his exit.

ROYAL

"LOVE ME TONIGHT"

A romance between a girl from an aristocratic family and a plain everyday tailor is "Love Me Tonight," a Rouben Mamoulian production, Maurice Chevalier's latest starring picture, which comes to the Royal Theater Saturday night.

Chevalier plays the tailor, with Jeanette MacDonald, his feminine lead in previous films, as the aristocratic young lady. Charlie Ruggles, Charles Butterworth and Myrna Loy have the chief supporting roles. Rouben Mamoulian, young director of stage and screen fame, was in charge of the production.

Like previous Chevalier pictures, "Love Me Tonight" is done in a whimsical and humorous vein. Chevalier, the tailor, is good natured and inclined to allow his clients' charge accounts to ride. When Ruggles, an irresponsible nobleman, orders and then fails to pay for 16 suits of clothes, he feels it's time to do something about the situation.

RIALTO

"THE FAMOUS FERGUSON CASE"

A wealthy man murdered after a quarrel with his wife; the wife involved with another man; a motive clearly apparent—and what's the answer?

That is "The Famous Ferguson Case," the new First National picture which will have its first showing Wednesday and Thursday at the Rialto Theater.

From advance reports it is, as one may say, a typical American murder mystery of the first magnitude—a screen presentation of a tragedy of real life and of the manner in which it is handled by the newspapers.

In fact "The Famous Ferguson Case" is said to be an authentic portrait of the actual workings of the press.

A veteran newspaper man, Courtenay (Brick) Terrett, who has covered most of the famous crime cases of recent years, wrote the original story of "The Famous Ferguson Case." Lloyd Bacon, widely familiar with journalistic theory and practice, was the director. The cast is headed by Joan Blondell, and in the lineup are Tom Brown, Adrienne Dore, Walter Miller, Leslie Fenton, Vivienne Asborne, J. Carroll Naish, Purnell Pratt, Russell Hopton, Kenneth Thomson, Grant Mitchell and many others.

MATA HARI

The Story of the War's Most Notorious Spy

Tall and lean, a lined face and heavy jowls, Dubois, the head of the French Secret Service, had the look of a man who, once he fixed his mind on a purpose, would never desist until he attained it. It was as Shubin had said. Having set his teeth, he could not let go. For the present, he had set his teeth in Mata Hari. He had observed her from a distance for some time and had drawn plenty of inferences from her travels and her connections and had traced plenty of information to the door of her boudoir. He considered that she had been responsible for the death of at least a regiment of soldiers. But he had no proof. And the lady was too kindly regarded in high official circles.

Another man and a woman followed Dubois who brushed the attendant aside as if he had been a flea.

"Madame, you doubtless know me. I regret to inconvenience you but we have knowledge that an important document which you ought not to possess is concealed upon your person. It will be necessary to search you."

"But it's an outrage," burst out the horrified old man with his eyes popping out of his head. "You have no right—on this soil . . . And besides the lady is a personal friend of the Colonel. She merely came in for a minute to see him. She—"

"Never mind, papa," interrupted the dancer brusquely. If he mentioned the note, she was lost. "It's no use arguing with authority. So. don't upset yourself . . . "

"But it's unheard of! It's not proper . . . "

"M. Dubois takes full responsibility." The secret service man pushed away the attendant.

"What must I do?" inquired Mata Hari of Dubois.

The old man was left red-faced and sputtering as Dubois indicated a screen in the corner. It had been put up as an ornament and did not hide the dancer's head or shoulders. She was very calm and obliging.

"I have my clothes made by Desquin," the men heard her say to the woman who conducted the search, "but they tear all the same . . . No, only the cuffs are lined because they're very heavy. Dear me, I'm afraid not much can be hidden in a chemise."

And so it went, a stream of half-mocking comment. Meanwhile, Dubois and his companion examined the chair she had been sitting on, looked sharply over the reception room and even scrutinized the neat pile of paper on the desk. Mata Hari had been shrewd enough to return the pen and ink. They could not well go any farther. The old man stood in the doorway of the main office and protested that he would bar the way.

"The lady handed you nothing?" demanded Dubois at length.

"Of course not! Why, she—"

At this moment, Mata Hari screamed. The attendant rushed to her, followed by the other two.

"It was the pin," said she, coming from behind the screen with the cuff of one sleeve raised to show the bloody streak. "You haven't any water?"

"Oh, my poor Madame! Certainly. Water. Ah, it's scandalous."

She breathed more easily when he was busy with the water.

"Nothing, sir," replied the woman to Dubois' look of inquiry.

"Sure?"

She shrugged and made it evident that she was.

"Do you do this often, M. Dubois?" inquired Mata Hari.

Conscious that the dancer had reason to gloat over him, the man replied grimly, "No, Madame, not often. Generally we just make arrests."

All three men took their departure. The attendant could not get over it. In the ensuing period which she spent with him to make sure that Dubois and his companions would not return, he apologized profoundly and declared that there would be diplomatic action. The dancer bade him not to mind. Dozens of half-formed schemes flitted through her mind, each to be rejected in turn. She was too much in the dark. For example, if one of Dubois' operatives had witnessed her meeting with Adriana, why hadn't theys earched her on the way? She guessed that they did not know of the meeting. But they had had such positive information that today she might visit Shubin with an important paper that they had been ready to chance an untoward intrusion. Somewhere there must be a leak. And it came into her mind instantly. Carlotta, the girl who had—committed suicide. How much had she told them?

Shubin? No. The opportune absence could not have been timed to facilitate a search, for his own sake, if not for hers. Nor could he, after last night, have had any idea that she would approach him again.

The boldest project suited the dancer best. Almost gaily, she asked for her note back, saying that it was too serious a matter leaving notes with all these extraordinary searches, and went out. The procedure had been a shock which she would not admit even to herself. It was one thing to be subjected to an indignity in England; another matter in Paris, where she made her home and kept her court.

Walking quickly away from the building with the letter in her purse, half-expecting to be stopped again and not oblivious to the fatal results of a fresh search, the simple success of last night, the nonchalance of the morning seemed a hundred eons away in time and space. Neverheless, it did not occur to her to falter, and when she had convinced herself that Dubois had indeed given her up for the present, there rose up n her renewed contempt for the French authorities, for authority of any kind. Never would she have permitted anyone in a similar position to escape so easily!

A clock in a jeweler's window informed the passersby that it was still morning, and a quarter of an hour's taxi ride sufficed to bring her to within a block of Shubin's house.

At first it seemed deserted. It stood on one of those Parisian streets which seem to have been left behind by a more remote age. The old stone houses are entered through courtyards and are very still. A taxi creates a terrific din on such a street; the sound of a bell or knocker is muffled in distant interiors and no one is abroad.

Receiving no answer to repeated rings, the dancer tried the door, which gave, and walked into the carpeted entrance hall and up a flight of stairs to Shubin's study.

It was a strange sight that greeted her. Shubin, with the coat of an unpressed uniform thrown over his blouse, his hair unkempt, slumped down before his desk on which lay a revolver.

He did not even look up. She went over and shook him with all the force of disgust and hard anger. It was on her tongue to cry out, "You fool!" for he had obviously been drinking, when he caused her to start back with the leap he made out of his chair.

She thought he meant to spring at her.

"What have you come for, you——! To be in at the death?"

"Have you gone out of your mind?"

"If I have, what's it to you?"

With an effort he straightened up, brushed the hair out of his eyes and returned the look she gave him. She put a hand against the back of the chair from which he had risen, a lovely old chair, the wood smooth as satin to the touch but cold and dark against her hand.

"But just tell me, Shubin," she said in a tone that she made as reasonable as she could. "what's happened to you? We've been friends for many months. Would you believe it that I came to your office to apologize this morning and . . ."

"No, I wouldn't believe that."

"But I did," she persisted in the same even voice, trying to reassure him as if he were a fractious horse. "And when have you ever known me to apologize? You treated me badly last night and naturally I resented it."

"Naturally." He sounded less stupefied, but he wore a very strange smile as he repeated, "Naturally."

"Naturally," he said again. "And therefore it was most natural that you should revenge yourself with the young man whom you admired so much last night, herein?"

Jealousy! Only that—again.

"Dear me, Shubin. You'll never have done with these scenes. I'm bored with them. So—goodbye."

But he grabbed her by the shoulders and swung her around face to face, so close that his breath, heavy with brandy, made her give a little grimace.

"This is a scene you'll wait for, you devil! I've been a traitor for your sake. But that's nothing. Oh, a mere trifle. Shubin, you bore me, so—goodbye. I've found a pretty boy whom I can turn to account. So—I can go now, Shubin. But you can't You won't! You'll stay! You'll accompany me to the hell where we will both roast in a few minutes. I planned to go alone. But the company of the fair Mata, that'll be more pleasant!"

The dancer's eyes swerved to the gun on the desk and then fixed themselves on Shubin's face. He had been rummaging in his pockets from which he now drew forth a fragile object, held unsteadily between thumb and finger for her inspection.

It was a wisp of gold leaf from the velvet cap she had worn last night.

Only the hand clutching her gloves, the fingers outspread on the back of the chair gave evidence to the stiffening of her body under this surprise attack. And her eyes, wide, cold, vigilant, which never relaxed their stare. She offered no reply, knowing she had but to wait.

"A mere nothing, isn't it? You are shrewd, my dear! But I am shrewd, too."

"How did you get this?" she demanded curtly. That was all she needed to know.

And he replied in a burst of laughter. "I had Rosanoff's rooms searched this morning—for proof. When Dubois told me you were not even faithful to me, no, I couldn't believe it! When I have damned myself for you—no! No woman could have a heart so black."

"Ah! That handsome young man," Shubin went on, "to be stood up against a wall and shot! For I know why you were there last night. Not for the pretty boy's sake alone. Not at all! Give me the papers!"

"I have no papers."

"You have! I know what you're here for! I know everything!" he shouted madly. Noticing the handbag on the desk, he tore it open so that its contents fell in all directions, and clawed at the letter. The thin sheet of paper with the code messages gave him great pleasure.

Meanwhile, the dancer stood as motionless as an animal poised for the spring.

"And now I'll call Dubois. The three spies will die together! You and I first, my dear, gracefully, with none of these trials and questionings. The pretty boy—alone. Ah! Sad!"

"He has nothing to do with it," she said in a slow voice. "You're mad, Shubin."

He cried out, "Yes! I'm mad! Quite mad! A traitor and mad!" and took up the telephone.

"Don't do it, Shubin! Don't do it!"

He gave the number and chanted, "Shubin. Mata. Rosan——"

At the last name, the muscles under the silken skin leaped forward, it seemed of their own volition. She seized the gun and shot.

Well Equipped Auto Department Functioning Here

The Post Exchange Auto Department is about one of the most completely self-contained and efficient organizations in the South, having such a variety of supplies and equipment grouped under one roof that it may justly make even such a broad claim as this.

The first, and perhaps one of the most important, of the departments of the Garage, is the filling station, located on Wickersham Avenue, and which supplies most of the gas and oil used at the Post. Here are sold, also all the tires and smaller accessories handled by the Garage. Both anti-knock and straight gasoline are sold, at practically cost price.

One of the first things that the visitor notices, after leaving the Filling Station, is the new Weaver Brake Tester, situated near the office, which gives full information concerning the condition of the braking power of each set of brakes, aknowledge which is of exreme importance to the driver, especially during rainy weather.

In the office is an official American Automobile Association branch. The Garage will also attend to getting a license for any customer desiring this service. Besides this the office provides a Notary Public for the convenience of those living on the Post or connected with the Army. The Garage is only authorized to deal with those connected with the Army except in case of emergency.

In the battery room is a complete outfit for charging batteries, also for putting them into first-class shape. The battery department is equipped for any kind of battery work necessary. The Garage sells Exide, Willard and Globe batteries.

Adjoining the battery room is a long series of rooms devoted entirely to general repair work on the car. This department cares for any motor or mechanical trouble which may occur and has a staff of competent mechanics, aided by up-to-date tools and machines to insure the best job possible. The general repair department possesses machines to reseat valves, a lathe for turning work, jacks for easy handling of cars and all other equipment needful for proper functioning of a unit which has so many varied and difficult jobs.

The Garage maintains a wrecker service which makes necessary calls almost anywhere, in fact, at least one call has carried the wrecker a distance of two hundred and twenty-five miles. There are very few other shops that can make such claims to excellent service as this and, to complete thestory, the service is available both day and night.

The supply department supplies all materials which are needed in everyday garage work, such as gaskets, battery connections and spark plugs, to mention a few. In fact, the Garage is so well outfitted and equipped that, with a little outside help on the larger parts, it could very nearly build a whole automobile.

Both washing and greasing are done at the garage, the greasing being done with Alemite and the oils used being Pennzoil. Mobiloil and QQuaker State. The greasing, as is customary in modern auto shops is done under pressure and therefore is done thoroughly. The cars are washed by well-trained men, and the process not only includes washing the body and glass-work of theautomobile, but also the cleaning of the underparts of the accumulated mud and grease deposits by the use of live steam under pressure. The washing and greasing are both done by experts and a near-perfect job is practically assured.

FOUNDING AND ORGANIZATION OF BENNING AND INFANTRY SCHOOL PRESENT INTERESTING HISTORY

the entire garrison and School establishment of Fort Benning will be adequately sheltered in buildings appropriate to the character of an institution of the importance of The Infanry School.

Since the establishment of The Infantry School at Fort Benning, many changes have been made in the organization of its academic department. Every change has been based upon experience, and has been made with a view to improving and extending the instructional scope of the school.

SCHOOL OPENS MONDAY

With the formal opening of the thirteenth academic year of The Infantry School at Fort Benning on Sept. 19 there will be ushered in a new era of professional progress for the infantry of the United States army which now, for the first time, has all of its specialized training courses centered in one institution.

For many years the army's foremost leaders and thinkers had advocated the consolidation of all of the infantry's school courses at The Infantry School, Fort Benning, but it was not until the summer of 1932, when the Tank School was moved from Fort George G. Meade, Md., and amalgamated with The Infantry, that their efforts were crowned with success. The former Tank School courses will now be conducted under the immediate supervision of the commandant of The Infantry School by the tank section, which has been added to the academic department. The training in the technical and tactical use of this infantry weapon of constantly increasing importance, will, from now on, be coordinated with that of other infantry studies. Many other advantages, both in training and administration, will also result from the consolidation, not the least of which will be effected in the cost of operating one school establishment instead of two.

Besides the enlargement of the basic organization of the school resulting from the addition of the tank section, a few minor changes have been made in the interior organization and allocation of subjects of the four other sections of the academic department.

NEW ASSISTANT COMMANDANT

Numerous changes in the composition of the faculty, including the office of the assistant commandant, have been made since the last session of the school. Col. Charles W.. Weeks, successor to Lt. Col. Geo. C. Marshall, Jr., as assistant commandant, will head the academic staff for the first time this year.

New instructors who have joined the faculty since last year include Colonel William B. Wallace, Lieutenant Colonel Charles H. Bonesteel, Majors Albert S. Dabney, Stephen G. Henry, Robert A. Lytle, William L. Roberts, John N. Robinson, Henry Terrell, Jr., Herbert A. Wadsworth, Benjamin G. Weir, Phillip S. Wood, Captains Mark G. Brislawn, Howard Clark, 2d, Alexander H. Cummings, Castle H. Farish, Michael Halloran, Frederick A. Irving, Malcolm F. Limbsey, Severene S. McLaughlin, George N. Randolph, Geroge H. Rarey, Frank R. Williams, Laurin L. Williams, Lieutenants George DeV. Barnes, Joseph A. Holly, Charles T. Lanham, and Ovid O. Wilson.

Major Emil W. Leard, formerly assistant secretary, has been advanced to the position of secretary, recently occupied by Major William F. Freehoff, and Captain Walter B. Smith, a graduate of last year's advanced course, fills the position of assistant secretary formerly held by Major Leard.

FIRST SECTION

The first section, whose scope of instruction covers infantry tactics, and those of supporting arms to include the reenforced brigade, infantry command and staff duties, the installation and operation of command posts, organization of infantry, the formulation of combat orders, and the collection of combat intelligence, will be headed by Lieutenant Colonel Joseph W. Stilwell. Major Robert B. Cole is to be secretary of the first section.

Assisting Colonel Stilwell as instructors are Liuetenant Colonels James B. Woolnough, John L. Jenkins, and Charles H. Bonesteel; Majors Charles P. Hall, Herbert A. Wadsworth, Henry Terrell, Jr., William L. Roberts, Vernon Evans, Lewis C. Davidson, Frederick McCabe, William F. Lee, Harry L. Reeder, Lloyd H. Cook, Thomas S. Arms, Hugh C. Gilchrist, Phillip S. Wood, and Neal C. Johnson; and Captains Francis G. Bonham, William Hones, and Henry J. Matchett, all infantry officers.

Specialists in auxiliary arms assigned to the first section as instructors include Major Archibald D. Arnold, Field Artillery, Major Benjamin G. Weir, Air Corps, Major John B. Thompson, Cavalry, and Captain Geoffrey Marshall, Chemical Warfare Service.

SECOND SECTION

The second section, of which Major Albert S. J. Tucker is chief, has the largest number and variety of subjects in which to conduct instruction. These include studies of supply, medical service, communications, topography and field engineering, reconnaissance, training, close order drill, military courtesy and customs of the service, Army of the United States, animal management and transportation, logistics, staff maps, horse-shoeing, and physical training. Lieutenant Robert T. Foster is secretary of this section. Instructors assigned to the second section include Major Albert S. Dabney, Medical Corps, Major Frank A. Heilman, Corps of Engineers, Major John B. Thompson, Cavalry, Major George L. Kraft, Infantry, Major Thomas G. Hearn, Infantry, and Major John N. Robinson, Infantry; Captains Willard S. Paul, George F. Bloomquist, Fred E. Gaillard, Mark G. Brislawn, James H. Drake, Howard Clark, 2d, John W. Blue, Joseph A. Nichols, and Michael E. Halloran, and Lieutenants Edward C. Johnson, Robert T. Foster, Julian E. Raymond, Robert V. Murphy, Hammond McD. Monroe, Landon J. Lockett, and Ovid O. Wilson.

THIRD SECTION

Subjects assigned to the third section pertain entirely to studies of infantry and auxiliary weapons. These embrace not only mechanical manipulation of the weapons but their employment in combat. Major Omar N. Bradley is chief of the third section, and Captain George N. Randolph is secretary.

Officers assigned to the third section as instructors include Major Claudius M. Easley, Captains Norman D. Cota, Elmer G. Lindroth, Oliver E. G. Trechter, Raymond E. Vermette, Frederick A. Irving, Lowell W. Rooks, George VanW. Pope, Burton L. Lucas, and Russell B. Reynolds, and Lieutenants Kameil Maertens, and Donald W. Brann, all of the infantry.

FOURTH SECTION

Military history, instructional methods, parliamentary procedure, psychology, public speaking, and editing manuscripts and instructional matter issued by The Infantry School are some of the subjects with which the fourth section is concerned. It also supervises and conducts stenographic and clerical courses for enlisted men, compiles the mailing list of instructional matter issued by The Infantry School primarily for the benefit of national guard and reserve officers, and also conducts the infantry extension courses, the latter being home study courses of instruction for regular, national guard and reserve officers.

Major Edwin F. Harding is chief of the fourth section, and Captain John A. Andrews is secretary. Instructors assigned to this section include Major Richard G. Tindall, and Captains William W. Eagles, Walter C. Phillips, Malcolm F. Lindsey, Alexander H. Cummings, Francis H. Wilson, John A. Andrews, and Lieutenant Charles P. Lanham, all infantry officers.

The new tank section's courses will deal with the operation, care and maintenance of motors, trucks and tanks, the operation of convoys, tank driving, batteries, and chassis of tanks, trucks and other military motor vehicles.

Colonel William B. Wallace, formerly on duty with the Tank School at Fort George G. Meade, Md., is chief of the tank section. Captain Severene S. McLaughlin is secretary. Instructors assigned to the tank section include Major Robert A. Lytle, recently a member of the infantry board, and Major Stephen G. Henry, Captain Severene S. McLaughlin, Lauren L. Williams, Castle H. Farish, Frank R. Williams, and Lieutenants Joseph A. Holly and George Dev. Barnes.

A plant for the reproduction of maps, a photographic laboratory, a drafting room, and an army field printing plant will also be in operation under the supervision of the academic department. Captain Howard J. Liston, assisted by Lieutenant George C. Mergens, will be in charge of these activities.

The school library, which comprises some twenty three thousand volumes on military subjects, will be available to the students for their research work. The library, of which Captain Francis H. Wilson is librarian, is under the supervision of the academic department.

PRACTICAL INSTRUCTION

Much of the instructional activity of The Infantry School is of a practical nature, and is conducted in the field where the theories and principles enunciated in the class rooms are applied to specific combat situations. For the purpose of carrying out these demonstrations of infantry methods and tactics, the academic department has available a number of selected troop organizations. The largest and most frequently used of these is the 29th Infantry, which is commanded by Colonel John J. Toffey. This regiment of two battalions is organized at war strength, its personnel numbering approximately seventy-four officers, and two thousand and fifty enlisted men.

Another infantry demonstration organization is the Second Batalion, 1st Tank Regiment, to which is attached Company F, 2d Tank Regi-

AUTO DEPARTMENT

Next to the washing and greasing rooms is the painting room. Here, if necessary, the whole automobile may be "done over" in any color or color combination desired and by a workman whose work is in the same class with that of the manufacturer. Great care is taken to insure satisfaction to the customer, the lacquers are applied in the most approved manner and one which has proved itself through trial. Beauty is of paramount importance in an automobile, and, as the paint job is largely responsible for the beauty of the car, the Garage makes it a point to insure a maximum of perfection in its work.

The work of the Auto Department is carried on under the supervision of Mr. Austell, who has been with it for ten years, since 1922, and who is the manager. Under Mr. Austell is a staff of forty-seven men, each expert in his line and selected for his experience and ability. This personnel, combined with the opportunities given by the modern and well-chosen machinery and supplies, is the surest guarantee of a good job.

to tolerate such a condition would be setting a bad example and Colonel Hall determined to rectify the matter in a big way.

Accordingly a large fatigue detail reported one morning at the Colonel's quarters and carefully dug out all of the Bermuda grass. Whether the Colonel specified that the Bermuda be eliminated, deponent sayeth not, but according to our informant it was. The operation reduced the number of varieties of grass left to two—nut grass and sand spurs, possibly—neither of which are highly esteemed by our leading horticulturists.

Two weeks later another large fatigue was observed digging up the other grasses and planting Bermuda.

We can't help wondering, and we suppose that our curious readers are also wondering, why the Bermuda was dug up in the first place. All we can say is that it is none of our business—nor yours. Our duty is to report the facts and we have nothing to add except a prophecy that Colonel Hall will ultimately have one of the best looking lawns on the post.

DECADENT ARTIST

Colonel E. F. Rice, Father of the Stadium Towers, having reported at Benning some weeks before Mrs. Rice, promptly sent her a plan drawing of their quarters. This, of course, is what every thoughtful husband ought to do, for wives get a big kick out of visualizing the layout and picturing just where the console table will look best, where Uncle George's picture should be hung and all that sort of thing.

Unfortunately not every husband is thoughtful and very few of them can draw anything more complicated than a check on the 11th of the month. Colonel Rice, however, is different. He is a whiz at drawing, having been Assistant Professor in that subject at the U. S. M. A. That is what makes it hard for us to understand why Mrs. Rice couldn't make head or tail out of the drawing he sent her. Maybe the Colonel included so much technical architectural detail that Mrs. Rice couldn't see the woods for the trees or maybe he had gone futuristic since the old days when he could really draw. At any rate, the Colonel didn't get any further with his art than an ordinary husband who simply works the old "wish-your-were-here" line. And that, of course, isn't very far. You've got to be good these days.

LETTER FROM A HOME TOWN BOY TRYING TO MAKE GOOD

Word had just been received that Capt. W. B. Tuttle, the popular (at times) Sheriff who preceded Constabule Funk in office, has been placed in command of the 2nd Brigade Machine Gun School at Pine Camp, N. Y.

The ex-Sheriff's rise in the world became known in his old home town through a letter to Weapons Expert Brann, one of his former golf and dog house associates. The letter for the most part is a plaintive "help me-Cassius-or-I sink" appeal for machine gun literature. We quote below an expurgated version.

Dear Don—O O o o o oh Don,

Listen Don, send me all the publications on M. G. work I should have (all the Benning dope). Charge any expense to my Book Shop account. Don't wait too long to do this—I have to make myself a machine gunner in a hurry! Send along several copies of 3-57-M Infantry School Pamphlet on Indirect Laying—An other thing, send me the dope on the Howard Clark Trophy test x x x Get me a Chapman protractor. Fix me up, Don boy, I am way deep in the rough.

Say, it is cold up here. O O o o o o! This regiment has no cotton season at all. I bought $40 worth of cotton uniforms just before I left and a linen civilian suit—bright boy!

Malin Craig stayed with us two nights—played my first game of golf with him—took him swimming in the lake O O o o o oh! Nearly froze x x x x then took him to the border.

Now, say, I'm in a "tight." Rush the dope to me on M. G. in a hurry or you may be subjected to a little long range indirect abuse.

Best regards to Newt and the gang.

Bill

Members of the garrison who ran afoul of Captain Tuttle in his official capacity as Provost Marshal will no doubt enjoy reading the above missive. As for his many friends, we hasten to assure them that we have known Bill a long time and aren't worried. He will pull through.

ment. This tank battalion is commanded by Major Allen F. Kingman and its personnel comprises approximately twenty-five officers and five hundred and twenty-five men. A platoon of Christie tanks, the army's newest and fastest weapon of this type, is included in the tank battalion.

A battalion of the 83rd Field Artillery equipped with 75 mm. guns is another demonstration unit frequently employed in the combat demonstration. This, with a strength approximately twenty officers, and three hundred twenty-five enlisted men, is commanded by Major Clyde A. Selleck.

Flight B 16th Observation Squadron, commanded by Captain Lloyd Barnett, represents the air corps at The Infantry School. This squadron of three planes is employed not only in cooperation with ground troops during simulated battle practice, but performs many other missions in connection with infantry research and development work, particularly in the field of anti-aircraft target practice.

The Chemical Warfare Service, whose smaller weapons are used extensively by infantry troops, is represented by Company C, 2d Chemical Regiment, which is commanded by Capain Geoffrey Marshall.

Practical problems in field engineering, fortification, and bridge building are illustrated by Company A 7th Engineers, which is commanded by Lieutenant Mark M. Beatner. One of the most popular and picturesque demonstrations of the year is the building of a pontoon bridge across the Chattahoochee by this company.

Field methods of the medical service illustrating medical supply systems and the care and evacuation of wounded in the field are conducted by the Medical Detachment, which is under command of Captain Max D. Talbot. A veterinary group of this detachment is also used to illustrate approved army methods of caring for animals.

The school courses which will open Monday, will be in progress until June 7, 1933. Other courses scheduled for 1932-33 include a refresher course designed for high-ranking officers which will open on Oct. 24, and close on Nov. 19. About twenty-five students will be enrolled in this course. A class for about twenty-five national guard and reserve field officers will begin on January 12, 1933 and close on February 16, 1933. About one hundred and forty students are expected to be enrolled in the national guard and reserve company officers' course, which will open on February 24, and close on May 24, 1933, and another national guard and reserve of ten students will be enrolled in the tank course from February 24 to May 17, 1933.

Several courses for enlisted men will also be conducted during the year. These will include a communications course for men of the regular army and national guard, February 9 to June 2, 1933; a course for motor mechanics January 3 to June 7, 1933; a reconnaissance course, November 16 to December 21, 1932; a stenographic course, Sept. 22 to May 12, 1933; a clerical course, Sept. 22 to February 24, 1933, and a school for horseshoers, November 1 to April 3.

TOWN TOPICS

We have often noticed that when a columnist, and even those who claim to be columnists, (among who we must be numbered) gives out of topics, he usually falls back on the old gag of harping on the troubles of the newspaper man and bewailing the fate that ever put him in a position where he had to grind out a certain number of inches every day, week or month. We'd do the same right at the present moment, if we could think of some sufficiently sanguinary and pungent adjectives with which to express our feelings.

The trouble is, not only are we confronted with the problem of not having anything to write, but we can't even complain about it! Like a dog wearing a muzzle and looking at bare bone—or something on that order.

We might even emulate our distinguished co-sufferer, E. F. H., of Flare fame, and make disparaging remarks about the hard-heartedness of the editor, but we can't see how that would help any, and it would only look like plagiarism on our part, so we'll let him suffer in his own corner, and we'll sulk in ours.

An observant young gentleman has noticed one singularity of late that escaped our eye, and (what is more to the point) reported it to us. Why we never noticed that Major Foos lives on Sigerfoos Avenue is a mystery to us, or probably we missed the connection. At any rate, the coincidence is worthy of mention.

Another thing. The houses of Rainbow Row have violated an old Benning tradition and each has its front actually facing the main street. Perhaps the Quartermaster had a nightmare one night and woke with a proper appreciation of the needs of hostesses who prefer to have guests enter through the front. At any rate, we'll have to watch future developments to see if the good example is being followed elsewhere in building the new houses.

We have definite evidence that the students who take the course for Bakers and Cooks which was the subject of some comment by the young lady who uses the mirror as a well of knowledge in the Herald each week, have to eat the food they cook. This seems to us a very effective way to ensure hard work on the part of those who aspire to culinary glory.

At this point we are going to forestall those wise-crackers who are certain to jump up and say that "columnists ought to be made to read their columns—then perhaps they would write better stuff." First lick is always the best, you know.

According to the latest news from the Democratic Headquarters, Governor Roosevelt's party is going to clean up the nation with a special sort of soap, neatly done up in a red, white and blue wrapper. From what we've heard, the Democrats would do better just to use a little G. I. soap, and there'll never be any need of another washing for the politics of the nation. And the slogan "Works best when wet" is certainly cute! We've heard that newspapermen do, too. (Please turn to page 4)

Benning Tankers Now Well On Way Toward Florida

A motor convoy, comprising approximately forty army trucks, in addition to three of the army's newest type of tanks, and carrying approximately twenty-five officers and four hundred and twenty-five enlisted men, departed from the main post at Fort Benning at one thirty, Tuesday afternoon, for a practice movement to Jacksonville, Fla. and return.

Major Allen F. Kingman, commander of the 2nd Battalion, 1st Tank Regiment, will direct the movement, which is to be the annual practice march of the Fort Benning tank troops. Company A, 7th Engineers, and a small detachment of medical personnel is accompanying the tank battalion. Major Kingman will be assisted by Captain Donald T. Spaulding, plans and training officer, and Captain Oscar J. Neundorfer, supply officer. Captain Robert J. Wallace is in command of Company E, 1st Tank Regiment, Captain Joseph A. Stewart will command Company D, and Captain Arthur C. Blaine will command Company F. Captain Leonard Murphy will command Headquarters Company. Company F, 2nd Tank Regiment, which is attached, will be commanded by Captain Walter A. Bigby.

Lieutenant Mark M. Boatner is in command of Company A, 7th Engineers. Other officers accompanying the convoy will be Major Harold A. Kirkham, Medical Corps, Captain Arthur Luse, Ordnance Department, and Lieutenant N. W. Squirrell, Infantry Reserve, of Columbus, Ga.

The convoy is expected to maintain an average speed of twenty miles per hour during the entire trip, and for convenience in handling on public highways and in order not to interfere with civilian traffic, it will be divided into three sections, whose units will travel at extended distances. The first section will carry kitchen equipment and food supplies. Troops will be carried in the second section. and baggage in the third.

On Wednesday evening Major Allen F. Kingman, commander of the 2nd Battalion, 1st Tank Regiment, and a number of the officers of the battalion, which is en route to Jacksonville, Fla., were guests of the Georgia Press Association at the Radium Springs Country Club, Albany.

The Tank troops and Engineers who are accompanying them on the motor convoy movement arrived shortly before noon at the camp on the northwest side of Albany which had been prepared for them by the Albany Chamber of Commerce which provided showers and electric lights for the soldiers. The troops arrived in a downpour of rain, but found a hot meal awaiting them which the kitchen section of the convoy had prepared.

The three Christie tanks which are making the trip to Florida attracted a great deal of attention in the city and a throng of visitors inspected them at the camp.

MAXWELL FIELD COMMANDING OFFICER MAKES VISIT TO POST

Lieutenant Colonel John F. Curry, commander of the Air Corps Tactical School, Maxwell Field, Ala., accompanied by Major Paul E. Peabody, operations officer , were visitors at Fort Benning on Thursday. The two air corps officers conferred with Major General Campbell King, commandant of The Infantry School on air corps and infantry troop training.

General King And Mayor Smith Are Speakers At School Opening Exercises

Two hundred and seventy-two students began their nine-month's work as students of the Advanced Class, Company Officers' Class and Tank School last Monday morning when Major General Campbell King, Commandant, officially opened the 1932-33 term of the Infantry School. The opening exercises were held in the auditorium of the Main Theater and was attended, in addition to the students and their families and friends, by a number of the other officers of the garrison. On the stage, besides General King, were Mr. H. C. Smith, mayor of Columbus, who made one of the addresses to the students, Colonel Chs W. Weeks, Assistant Commandant, member of the academic staff, and other officers representing Post Headquarters, and the various organizations on the post.

A lively military march, "The National Emblem", played by the 29th Infantry orchestra, was the opening number of the program, and the invocation, pleading for divine guidance of the purposes of the Infantry School, was pronounced by Chaplain John F. Monahan, Catholic Chaplain.

General King then read a message from General Fuqua, Chief of Infantry, congratulating the students of the coming year, and sending them his "best wishes for a pleasant and profi table year" at Benning.

STRESSES TANK SCHOOL

In his address to the audience, General King laid particular stress on the Tank School, expressing his pleasure in having them as a part of the instructional facilities of Benning. Likewise, he mentioned particularly the physical growth of Fort Benning through the building program now being carried out by the Quartermaster Department, saying: "To those of you who have been here before, doubtless, the physical changes that have taken place have been immediately apparent and are, of course, great improvements on the post as you last saw it. To those who have not been here before, the improvements may not be so apparent, but it is hoped that you will find it in every way a pleasant place to serve. All of you, whether or not you have been previously stationed here, have either directly or indirectly been connected with the school, and its graduates are familiar with its aims and purposes."

In organizing the faculty of the Infantry School, the most outstanding infantry officers of the army have been assembled at Fort Benning. "You will work under instructors who have been especially selected for their experience and training in the technic of Infantry," General King said, "These officers do not reserve to themselves all inclusive knowledge; they are fellow officers of our infantry branch. They have spent much time and labor in preparing the various courses, and they will make every effort to bring them to you in an interesting and understandable manner."

A PRACTICAL INSTITUTION

"The Infantry School is a practical institution. Its purpose is to teach you to think. No time is spent on the overemphasis of trivial details. It deals with the conditions of campaign and the battlefield as we anticipate them, judging from past experience and modern developments. Theoretical instruction is scheduled only when it is not possible to give practical work."

"The experience of commanding troop organizations in the field, ranging in size from the company to the reenforced brigade, and of exercising staff functions appropriate to these commands, awaits the student officers during their course at the Infantry School," General King told the officers in the course of his remarks. "In dealing with these highly trained units, you must not forget that you are preparing for the most important duty of a regular officer—that of developing and leading a national army of partially officers and men."

In concluding his remarks, the Commandant said, "Graduation from this institution is not an end in itself, nor is academic standing the sole proof of an officer's ability. The value of the Infantry School to the individual can only be measured by the character of his service after he has completed his course and gone to his new station. The high standards set by the graduates of this school are well known."

MAYOR SMITH TALKS

At the close of his address, the Commandant introduced Mayor H. C. Smith, of Columbus, who gave a talk in which he stressed the fact that the present classes are not coming to

Nominating Committee For Officers' Club Named By President, Col. Reed

The Nominating Committee to which is given the duty each year of posting the names of candidates for officers of the Officers' Club for the forthcoming year, had just been named by the president Colonel W. L. Reed. The committee is appointed to formulate a ballot which is to be sent each member of the club to be voted on; in which will be carried names of candidates for the offices of President, vice-President and two members of the Board of Governors.

Colonel John J. Toffey is Chairman of the committee, and is assisted by the following: Lt. Col. Thomas J. Leary, Major R. B. Harrison, Major Emil W. Leard, Captain F. H. Gaston, Captain Leonard Murphy and Captain John E. Hull.

The other three members of the board of governors are selected in different ways. One is chosen by the commandant, and acts as the personal representaive of the commandant at board meetings. Major Lewis has been chosen to succeed himself again this year in this position. The remaining two members are appointed, one by each of the two classes, Advanced and Company Officers, of the Infantry School. The ballots will be counted at the meeting which will be held sometime prior to October 25th and the names of the selected candidates announced.

Meanwhile, Colonel W. B. Wallace has just been appointed a member of the present board of governors to fill the unexpired term of Major R. K. Sutherland and was selected by the President, Colonel Reed, to fill the office of vice-president, succeeding Lt. Col. H. A. Wells, until the fall elections determine the permanent holders of these offices.

Maj. Gen. E. L. King Is Participating In Local Tournament

Major General Edward L. King, commander of the 4th Corps Area, with headquarters at Fort McPherson, Ga., arrived at Fort Benning Thursday morning for an unofficial visit to the post during which he will participate in the 4th Corps Area golf tournament which began Thursday. General King was met upon his arrival by Major General Campbell King, commandant of The Infantry School, and by Colonel Ephraim G. Peyton, executive officer. General Edward King will be the guest of General Campbell King during his sojourn at Fort Benning.

Brigadier General George H. Estes, commander of the 8th Infantry Brigade and Fort McPherson, and a group of officers from Fort McPherson and vicinity, arrived at Fort Benning Wednesday and registered for the tournament.

Nearly a hundred entries for the tournament had been received up to Thursday noon, and the list included the following named officers from other posts: Colonels Thomas A. Roberts, and Lewis S. Morey; Lieutenant Colonels Thomas H. Lowe, John W. Meehan, and Edwin F. Ely; Major George S. Woodard; and Captain Druid E. Wheeler all of Fort McPherson; and Major George L. Fediger, who is on duty with the R. O. T. C. unit at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, Tenn.; Captain Orrill, professor of military science and training Fulton County high schools, Atlanta; and Lieutenant Claude M. McQuarrie, who is on duty with the Georgia Military Academy, College Park, Georgia.

Qualifying rounds of the tournament were completed Thursday afternoon. First round matches will be played Friday and Saturday mornings on schedules arranged by the players. The second round of matches and the first consolation round are to be played Saturday afternoon. Third round matches and second consolations are to be played on Sunday morning, and finals are scheduled for Sunday afternoon.

LADIES HOLD TOURNAMENT

On Wednesday morning, September 28, the ladies of the post will participate in a nine hole "blind bogey" golf tournament on the new course.

The Ladies' Golf Committee, of which Mrs. James B. Woolnough is chairman, is perfecting plans for the coming season. Arrangements are being made for a number of new features which promise to make the 1932-33 season one of the most successful in the history of Benning golf. In her work, Mrs. Woolnough is being assisted by Mrs. Jesse A. Ladd, Mrs. Thomas S. Arms, Mrs. William W. Eagles, Mrs. Robert T. Foster, Mrs. Julian E. Raymond and Miss Harriet Atkins.

Reports indicate that there are still many of last year's golfers at the post and that a greater number of new members than heretofore is to be expected. Quite a few of the newcomers to the garrison have already been out to try out the new course and it has proved quite satisfactory to everyone who had played it.

The Committee has expressed the hope that every lady who plays golf at all will be present next Wednesday at 9 o'clock for the scheduled tournament, and each is requested to sign up beforehand if possible on the list provided at the Club.

Reception For Incoming Officers To Be Held On Commandant's Lawn Thursday

The formal reception in honor of the incoming students and other officers recently assigned to Fort Benning will be held on Thursday evening, Sept. 29, on the lawn adjacent to the quarters of the commandant.

The annual reception has become a popular custom at The Infantry School and serves to fulfill the requirements of military social formalities applicable to Fort Benning. Attendance at the reception is equivalent to an exchange of calls between the newly arrived personnel and others of the garrison.

For next Thursday's reception a large open air dancing platform will be set on the lawn and lights will be strung between the trees.

Major General Campbell King, commandant of The Infantry School and Mrs. King, will head the receiving line, which will include a number of other officers representing various departments of the Infantry School, commanding officers of troop organizations, and a group of foreign officers who are attending courses at the school.

In addition to high officers of the garrison, invitations to participate in the reception will be extended to a number of civilians representing the city and county governments.

Boy Scout Records Broken In Meet

The Boy Scouts of Fort Benning held their annual swimming meet last Saturday at 10 o'clock at Russ Pool. K. L. Berry was the outstanding star of the meet, winning three first places, breaking the former record in all three.

The first race was the fifty yard dash, which Berry won in the fast time of 30 2-3. Buster Luse was a very close second and Russell Wall came in third. The second event was the 25 yard breast-stroke, an exciting event, Russell Wall taking first place by beating Wot-a-Man Bonham by inches. Julius Evans came in third.

In the next event, the 50 yard back stroke, K. L. Berry came first again, with Buster Luse second and John Bill Barnes third. In the 25 yard cross-chest carry, Sam White defeated Tom Arms. The head-carry was also won by Sam White who again defeated Tom Arms. In the diving, Forrest Harding successfully defended his title by nosing out Art Barkhurst, with Puddin'head Wilson taking third place.

Mata Hari

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Mata Hari, famous dancer and enemy spy, makes an innocent accomplice of a young Russian aviator, Alexander Rosanoff, who is infatuated with her, in order to get some secret papers. In a jealous rage, her former lover, Shubin, Attache of the Russian Embassy, telephones to Dubois, the head of the French Secret Service, to prove that not only Mata Hari but Rosanoff are spies. In the midst of the call, the dancer shoots him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

AFTER THE SHOT

Shubin fell, carrying the telephone instrument with him.

After the fall there was a deep, plushy silence in the house. Little sounds sank into it smothered as if they were sinking into velvet. A creak of the stairs. The rustle of a curtain. Although the room was light, a sort of darkness filled it as if it were deepest midnight.

Mechanically, the dancer first picked up the telephone which lay beside the body and extricated the cord which had become twisted in his legs and laid the instrument on its stand. There had been not even a groan from Shubin, nothing but a sort of splutter. The wound she would not touch because she must have no blood on her. But she took the little mirror from her purse and, kneeling very carefully away from the deepening stain in the carpet, she held it in front of his mouth. There was no mist.

He was dead then.

And, precisely, saying over in her mind everything that she must not forget to do, she gathered up the evidences of her visit. The code message. The doubled sheet of paper. The envelope. Her purse. The few scattered articles it had contained—she counted them over. The hankerchief. Then—of course! The bit of gold leaf clutched in Shubin's hand.

She put on her gloves and wiped the gun all over with the tiny handkerchief. Jerking a piece of tapestry off a table, she rubbed the telephone instrument, the desk, the back of the chair to which she had held. These were not so important, for after all she had called upon Shubin only last

By VERA WINSTON

Sweet Clothes for Sweet Children

It isn't so long ago that night clothes and undies designed for children were strictly utilitarian in design, with very little to beautify them. A nightie was a plain white affair with just a touch of embroidery and the same description answered the rest of the undies. But o flate years there has been a pleasant and distinct change. Charm-little misses have made their appearing little pajama suits for charming ance and nighties in consequence have had to be dressed up. From France comes the most adorable lingerie for youngsters, dainty and delicate with beautiful embroidery and touches of fine lace; yet withal old-fashioned in cut and detail. Today we show a sketch of a little dressing gown for a youngster that is very lovely with its quaint air. It is in cotton duvetyn in pale rose pink. Its square neck is finished with a satin bow of the same color.

AN OPEN LETTER
Tuesday, Sept. 20, 1932
The Benning Personnel:

For 25 years, Humes have served the people of this city—a quarter of a century of satisfactory dealings, of staunch friendships, of vigorous accomplishment. Through fair and adverse years, through good times and bad, the constant onward march of this institution has not wavered. Never for an instant has our confidence in this friendly city faltered, never has our firm march of progress lagged.

Just a short while ago, chaos beckoned to this country. Public confidence shrieked its dirge for a lost republic, as cotton fell to 5 cents a pound, stocks and bonds had no buyers, national bankruptcy was the theme of the pessimists, and panic grew apace. Watchful waiting was the seemingly policy of a listless, haggard business world.

But not so at Humes! Twenty-five years of solid, hard won experience had taught us other things! Here was no apathy—no waiting for the worst; here instead was a bee-hive of activity—a busy hum and bustle as we prepared to grasp opportunity in a market that had crashed to rock-bottom! Expansion! That was our watch-word! A logical new field beckoned, new progress called—and Humes answered.

In the lowest market in our experience, this 25-year old music house bought furniture! Yes, quality furniture—at the lowest levels ever offered to man—a veritable gold-mine for those with the resources, the courage, the initiative to buy!

And now we are ready to open this new department. It's the same old Humes, offering you still another branch of service for your home—quality furniture, available on considerate, convenient terms.

Formal opening Thursday, Sept. 22.

Very truly yours,

Off Hand Observations

By McGoofus

The business of getting settled and started into a school year is likely to be a bit interesting if not exciting, even to the most schooled.

There are the old acquaintances to be renewed. Here is "An" approved solution: Light up the countenance to the beaming point with a happy smile of recognition and rush forward at a rapid walk (or double time) with the extended mitt and break into your conversation about so; "Well! Well!, how's the boy?' (This avoids the embarassment of not remembering the name). "I haven't seen you since.... My! fellow, you are looking well," (Or) "Say! fellow, you are looking kind of low, what's the trouble, haven't been working, have you? Maybe the last 5 kegs haven't agreed with you so well." You have put on (or lost) some weight haven't you?" "How's the family?" "When have you seen old whoosis? What did you have to pay for——(a certain commodity, at your last station?" "What have you been doing during the last ——— years? "Where are you living?" "Well we will be seeing you."

Most everyone has read Lt. "Red" Newman's recent excellent article "The Amateur Carpenter on Commutation". It would be interesting to know how many minor matrimonial disturbances, good golfing days spent in the back yard with hammer and saw, smashed thumbs, augmented vocabularies, and increased business for the second hand furniture dealers this article has caused.

Already there is a little argument on between the Tank class and the Company Officers class as to which is the sophomore class.

Lt. Ted Dunn is planning to organize a "Rick-Rack" Club.

The rick-rack fad means little one way or the other and will probably soon pass but more power to whoever it was who started the fad which has brought back the old fashioned match which strikes equally well on the seat of the breeches, the sole of the shoe, or the windshield of the car.

Many officers returning from foreign service are finding out for the first time just what the depression means. One such officer tells an interesting story of how it was brought forcibly home to him what havoc the depression has wrought. He had just disembarked in New York and was looking about for a little first night excitement. Someone recommended that he go to the Hollywood restaurant, give the headwaiter at the door two one-dollar bills as a kind of signal and ask for a table. He decided to do this but when he got to the address, the entrance to the place was so swanky looking and the headwaiter was such a tough looking egg that the two dollars seemed mighty measly. Remembering that he had been told that the bills were a sort of signal, the officer screwed up his courage, gave the wrong name, offered the bills and asked for a table. To his surprise, he was told that it could be arranged. When he returned some half hour later to claim his table and was conducted to a perfect ringside table right athwart the dance floor, he realized that the depression was on. He says that he was charged only two dollars for the dinner which he thinks was a very good one but unfortunately he can't be positive on that point since he was so busy observing how little the managers had been able to spend on costumes for the chorus that he can't remember exactly what was served.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

What is a square meal? It is the one that stuffs you so full that it seems that you cannot eat another mouthful? Is it the one that gives that satisfied the feeling? Many people think it is, but is not. A square meal is one that only supplies every need of the body. What may be good for one person is far from what may be needed for another. Growing children need far more tissue building food than older, less active persons. Among the older individuals, there is also a great variation in fod requirements which largely depend on physical activity. When more food is taken than is needed, extra work is thrown on the organs tha carry off waste. The less hard physical work you do, the less food you need to hold your normal weight. An excess of food which is not burned up in physical activity makes fat. Find out what your normal weight should be and hold it there. Control the appetite by the scales. Eat plenty of fruits and fresh vegetables. Uncooked vegetables, like lettuce or celery, should be included in the daily diet.

If you drink milk, that which is pasteurized is the only safe kind. Meat fish, eggs, nuts, beans, milk and cheese build tissue.

Sugar, fats, butter, cream, bread and cerals supply energy and heat.

Vegetables, fruits, and whole grains contain minerals and help to prevent constipation.

Vitamins are always necessary and are supplied by fruits, vegetables, or milk.

It never pays to overeat. It is foolish to follow food fads. Relax when you eat. Eat slowly.

"Laughter aids digestion: gloom and bad temper certainly ruin it." See your doctor if food does not agree with you.

TOWN TOPICS

Apropos of Gunbotham's hint to those who like a bit of "Hot Harlem" (it can be found, according to him, at the Colored Marathon Dance) we find a statement in a recent newspaper that the Harlem night clubs are the only ones in the "big city" that are doing any real business, and that they haven't even had a touch of the depression.

"Gandhi Begins Fast Unto Death" —headlines in newspapers all over the country. Wonder if it's because he doesn't like the food he was served in jail. In that case, the British authorities should let the chefs in the Officers' Club have a whack at him. It takes more than a starving Indian to resist the menu of the cafeteria, if one can judge by the number and celerity of the starving students who congregate there each day.

We'd greatly appreciate it if someone would tell us exactly why a certain officer in Post Headquarters was so carefully measuring some red-tape Thursday. To say the least this looks suspicious, and perhaps Capt. Funk should investigate, just on general principles.

If anyone wants a genuine whiskey sign, prewar, in original colors, and still plainly legible, we can tell him where to get it. Collectors of antiques might be interested. Those old-timers know how to build for permanence, we know of some houses which have not lasted as long as that sign has—or maybe it stands as a monument to lost hopes and hopeful future.

In The Mirror

By Mollie Heilman

Among the celebrities who have birthdays in September is General John J. Pershing. Not only was he born in September, but most of the important events of his life happened in that month. He was made a brigadier general in September, 1906; a major general in September, 1916; left France in September, 1919; was honored with the permanent rank of general the same month and was formally voted the thanks of Congress the same month. He retired from the active list in September, 1924, and he received significant honors and medals during September. The list goes on and on, but we won't.

Capt. Gene Lewis of Fort Benning thinks September is a great month too. It is his wedding anniversary. He left last week to annex the young lady in Texas. She is Miss Delight Stone, public health nurse of San Antonio, and is very prominent and popular in that city, figuring much in the newspapers because of her work among underprivileged children at Camp Laf-a-Lot, an annual summer camp maintained by the Elks. Each summer Miss Stone (Mrs. Lewis by now) selects the most neglected, skinniest children in San Antonio and sends them to this camp. It was at Camp Laf-a-lot that she became acquainted with Captain Lewis. (No, he wasn't one of the underprivileged children.) He was in charge.

They were to be married at Sequin, Texas, a little town just beyond Randolph Field, the West Point of the Air. They will return to Benning shortly to make their home. Little Gene Lewis, Jr. was "best man" at his dad's wedding.

Speaking of Texas reminds us of an incident that really happened in San Antonio. A youth from one of the little tucked away tank towns in Texas attended his first movie in San Antonio and went out, telling his uncle that inside the theatre there, they were squirting a picture on the wall.

Fort Benning said goodbye just recently to Lt. Sidney G. Brown, who went to Fort McPherson to teach the West Point Preparatory school there. He will be back in March, we understand.

Among the new arrivals at the Fort we find Lieut. Fred Giddings, national sabre champion, and Lieut. Russell "Red" Reeder, who will be remembered for his football activities, and athletic prowess at West Point long about 1925 or '26.

ORIENTATION PARTIES

The several sections of the Academic Department utilized the week just preceding the opening of the school to tell and show each other what they are doing to teach the Infantry Mind how to function.

The First and Fourth Sections being given to brevity, (Oh, yeah!) disposed of their instructional policies and programs in a couple of fifteen-minute talks. The other sections, all of which have a lot of stage props put on more elaborate entertainments.

Chief Bradley, of the Technical Third, demonstrated a new indirect fire method that even a field officer can understand. We hope that he didn't forget to send a description of it to Captain Tuttle in response to the distressed ex-Sheriff's all-inclusive appeal for "everything Benning has on machine guns."

We were properly impressed by the efficient performance of the Third Section experts but we were just a little disappointed in their year's arrangements in that no refreshments were served.

The Versatile Second Section had a good show as usual. Chief Tucker's Little Theater Group produced "Infantry Communications," an instructional comedy in four phases, which went over big with the gallery. The play was a Murphy and Raymond production, with Captain Brislawn in the role of announcer. The capable cast included new material in Captain Porter and Lt. Ferenbaugh. Sgt. Barney, Corp. LaBonte and Pvts. Easley, Cameron, Wright and Youngblood also hda speaking parts.

The Tank Section entertained in their elegant, new, and well-equipped plant. After listening to the enthusiastic Tank instructors tell what they teach, we are convinced that the officers taking the course will know everything about gas engines when they finish except how to meet the payments on a new car under the compulsory furlough plan.

Only one incident marred the perfect decorum of the visiting instructors. This occurred when Major Thompson discovered a salvage feed box being used as a cuspidor. The ardent Cavalryman took this as an insult to his branch—the cavalry is getting terribly sensitive where tanks enter into the picture—and was only restrained from creating a scene by being persuaded that the Tankers might have put the sacred receptacle to even baser use had they intended to be disrespectful.

PICNIC PERILS

Biblical students are, of course, familiar with the fate of the young man Absalom, who, fleeing on a mule from the battle in which his rebellious cohorts had been defeated, "went under the bough of a great oak and his head caught hold of the oak, and he was taken up between the heaven and the earth; and the mule that was under him went away." Later the hard-boiled Joab came up and bumped him off.

Captain Joe Vermette, the celebrated contract authority, had a similar experience last week only the end was not so tragic. Of course the Captain wasn't riding a mule. As a matter of fact, officers these days don't ride mules unless they happened to be in General Preston Brown's command, in which case they may have to. Capt. Vermette, on the historic occasion we refer to, was riding Capt. Monte Blue's runabout. We say riding it rather than riding in it because Capt. Blue was transporting a section of a picnic party to the 29th Infantry Camp and had a capacity load. All other available space being taken, Capt. Vermette occupied a precarious perch on the back of the rumble seat with his feet on the cushion.

After reaching the wood road, the contract authority's exposed position called for considerable skill in fending off overhanging branches but the Captain was doing nicely until the bouncing car careened under one that was too big to be lightly shoved aside. Joe caught it in time to avert a knockout but when the car jounced on, our hero was left in the predicament of Absolom, the son of David, "hanging between the heavn and the earth."

Evidently, the arboreal captain's presence wasn't essential to the success of the picnic for the other occupants of the rumble seat didn't think it worth while to mention the incident of his sudden departure to the preoccupied chauffeur drove on to his destination oblivious of the fact that he had lost a passenger. We understand that a prominent Dramatic Club official has approached Capt. Vermette with an offer of the lead in a stage version of "Tarzan of the Apes" but this, of course, may be mere hearsay.

UNFAIR COMPETITION

Mrs. Bonham, watching the Boy Scout Swimming Meet, noted the towering figure of post-Scout Master Arms, clad in a bathing suit, stalking among the young athletes who were to compete with her son in the forthcoming events.

"Who is that great big boy down there?" she inquired of an innocent-looking bystander, in a tone of deep resentment.

In view of the compliment, we are quite sure that the Scoutmaster will forgive Mrs. Bonham for not recognizing him through the confusing wire network that separates spectator from swimmer.

WHAT A MOTHER WORRIES ABOUT

Speaking of Mrs. Bonham reminds us that an otherwise pleasant summer was practically ruined by the fact that son J. B. seemed to have a bad case of laryngitis that he couldn't shake off. His voice was so hoarse and throaty that the watchful mother several times feared that he was on the verge of pneumonia. The alarming symptoms continued for five anxious weeks before the devoted mother suddenly woke up to the fact that the sturdy J. B. was threatened by nothing more serious than a chronic case of adolescence. In other words, his voice was changing.

THEATRICAL ATTRACTIONS

Coming To Rialto Tuesday

Marian Marsh in "Beauty And The Boss"

Cinema Calendar

for Grand, Rialto and Royal

AT THE RIALTO

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY: Offering "Sky Devils" with Spencer Tracy, William Boyd, George Cooper, and Ann Dvorak. A spectacular comedy of the air, a rapid-fire thrilling tale of three aerial musketeers, embellished throughout with breath-taking scenes. More than 50 planes, all fighting ships, rue to the type used by Germany and the Allies during the war are seen in this vehicle.

SUNDAY ONLY: Offering "The Age For Love," from Ernest Pascal's sensational novel, featuring Billy Dove, Charles Starrett, Lois Wilson, Edward Everett Horton and Mary Duncan. Produced after nearly a year of preparation, this picture carries out a bold, modern theme, packing a terrific wallop, reaching into the hearts and minds of modern-day persons with its graphically-portrayed problems of love and marriage.

MONDAY AND TUESDAY: Offering "Beauty and the Boss" with Mraian Marsh, David Manners and Warren William. Baron Von Ullrich, head of a great Vienna bank is a business man by day and philanderer at night. Thus he finds his beautiful but inefficient secretary has too much sex appeal and fires her—as a secretary.

WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY: Offering "The Vanishing Frontier" with Johnny Mack Brown, J. Farrell MacDonald, Evalyn Knapp, Raymond Hatton and others. Set in California in the period immediately after the state was acquired from Mexico by the United States, the picture is of a native, dissatisfied with the military government and who shows his disgust by preying upon the rich to help the poor

AT THE GRAND

SATURDAY, SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Offering "Blondie of the Follies" with Marion Davies, Robert Montgomery, Billy Dove, Jimmy Durante and other stars. A story of two New York girls who graduate from poverty in tenements to the extravagance and luxury of Park avenue. Closest of chums, yet bitterest of rivals, both seek to sacrifice their hearts when it comes to the love of the same man.

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Offering "Week-End Marriage" with Loretta Young, Norman Foster, Aline MacMahon, George Brent and Vivienne Osborne. Do you want love and freedom at the same time? Could you be a part-time wife—and keep a two-time husband? Could you stand a love diet—and be satisfied with a synthetic honeymoon? Then see this picture.

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY: "The Man Called Back" with Conrad Nagel, Doris Kenyon, John Halliday and Juliette Compton. A picture that takes you over the Orient, England, Malayan Islands and to the natives, where the hero's fondness for liquor and native women cause the whites to shun him.

AT THE ROYAL

(Beginning with midnight show, Saturday, 11:15 P. M.)

ALSO SUNDAY, MONDAY AND TUESDAY: Offering "Back Street" with John Boles, and Irene Dunne. Fannie Hurst's greatest novel, and believed, by many critics to be the greatest motion pictur eof the year. A story of a woman who gave up everything in her life for love, and a man who, in living two lives, gave nothing in return but affection. These two great stars, Boles and Irene have a brilliant supporting cast for this great picture. It is one that you should not miss, and is highly recommended by this paper.

GRAND

"WEEK-END MARRIAGE"

It wasn't so many years ago that people scoffed at the idea of sound in motion pictures. Now that that is settled, they are scoffing at the idea of recording odors.

If this ever comes to pass, actors and actresses will have to be careful what they eat for lunch.

For this reason, it was a good thing that odor was not recorded on certain scenes for "Week-End Marriage," Loretta Young's latest First National picture, which comes to the Grand Theatre next Tuesday.

They were filming some sequences for this picture at the old Vitagraph studio in Hollywood, far removed from the general center of activity. Rather than go out hunting for a restaurant for lunch, they invited an itinerant lunch wagon proprietor to bring his wares on the stage. His piece de resistance was a bucketful of deliciously prepared tamales, which everyone ate with gusto. They were very tasty and seemed marvelously seasoned.

But when the company got back to work and prepared to take some intimate scenes between Loretta Young, Norman Foster and Vivienne Osborne, these players couldn't talk to each other without wincing.

It seems that the tamales had been more than generously seasoned with garlic.

Conversaions among the crew were held with averted heads, but the players had to suffer for their art.

ROYAL

"BACK STREET"

"Back Street," the Universal picturization of the widely-read novel by Fannie Hurst, is in all essentials a faithful transcription of the book. according to a recent statement by John M. Stahl, who directed the picture and collaborated with Gladys Lehman in writing the screen adaptation.

This popular novel follows the life-long romance between Walter Saxel, a man with a wife and children, and Ray Schmidt, an unattached girl who sacrifices all else to an outlawed love affair. Irene Dunne plays the role of Ray, while John Boles is seen in the character of Saxel.

"The theme of the story, as presented on the screen,' said Stahl, "is exactly the same as in the book. To put it crudely though quite succinctly, the principal difference is that in the screen version the man doesn't belch at the table. In an effort to make more tender (and perhaps more understandable) the romance between the two leading characters, we have at certain points modified the theme and the action slightly, so as to remove some of the despicable qualities of Saxel. While the book rather played up his selfishness and stinginess, we have attributed his lapses more to thoughtlessness in the screen version, and thus, we think, have made him more the type of man who would hold the heart of such a girl as Ray throughout her lifetime.

"The exigencies of film production have also caused us to shorten her lifetime, though this involved no change whatever in the theme of the story. In 'Back Street' as a novel, Ray lives for 20 years after the death of Saxel, but in the picture she hardly lives for 20 hours. The death of the man brings to an end the romance between our two principal characters, and thus, in a sense, completes our story. From a motion picture standpoint, nothing is to be gained by following the career of the woman after the man's death has dissolved 'the eternal triangle,' the basis of the story."

After seeing "Back Street" at the Royal Theatre, take up the book again and compare it.

RIALTO

"BEAUTY AND THE BOSS"

"Beauty and the Boss," which begins a two day engagement at the Rialto Theatre next Monday, is based on a play which kept New York laughing for many months last season. On the stage it was known as "The Church Mouse," and starred Miss Ruth Gordon.

The instantaneous success of "The Church Mouse" soon had many movie producers bidding for the screen rights. Warner Bros., realizing that the story fitted perfectly with the personality and abiliy of Marian Marsh, oubid all other companies, and "The Church Mouse" was put into immediate production under the title of "Beauty and the Boss."

Miss Marsh plays the role of an efficient but unattractive secretary to Warren William for whom she has a deep admiration. But not until she learns all about the Love Methods of a Modern Girl does she win the eye and the heart of Mr. William. How she accomplishes this end forms the basis of the story.

Helmeted Warriors Drilling For Late Garrison Schedule

With the "Little World Series," ancient history, football now reigns supreme among the sports of Fort Benning "The home of the Infantry School.' Four teams of husky young giants representing the Tankers, Artillery, First Bats and Second Bats, are hard at work daily rounding into form for the opening of the intramural football league.

In the mean time there will be numerous football games between company teams to satisfy the football hunger of the fans. The Tankers promise the greatest company football ever played at Benning. Each of the company teams will play their regulars in the lineup, nobody barred. That means that when the Tanker company teams go to war that Knubb Bennett, Bill Swantic, Louis Joris,

Kells Outslug Tankers And Win Thumbs Down In Benning Series

Fort Benning's "Little World's Series," is past history. The Kellys dropped the opening game to the Terrible Tankers, 13 to 9, but came back to take three in a row and cop the bunting. For a championship series, the teams hung up a world record for runs scored. The two teams combined scored a total of 84 runs in the four games played.

The Kellys got out in front with the willow and led the Tankers in stickwork. The batting power of the Demonstration outfit was really responsible for their victory.

The Tankers had shown all season as the hardest hitting team in the league. In the first game of the series it looked as if the Tankers would run true to form as they drove out fourteen base hits off Barnes, Haines and Aiken. Red Lindsey on the mound for the Tankers was touched for 11 bingles but managed to keep out in front and bear down in the pinches. The Tankers won handily 13 to 9.

The second game was an upset. Bill Swantic, Tanker speedball artist, was expected to give the Kellys plenty of trouble. Instead, the Kellys jumped on his offerings to reverse the score of the opening game and win handily 13 to 9. Collyer, Kelly southpaw, proved to be the undoing of the Tanker sluggers.

Swantic came back in the third game but the Kelly batters rapped out an even dozen bingles to win 11 to 6. "Gentleman Jem" Ward was on the hillock for the Kellys and the slim boy was right.

The veteran Red Lindsey was sent to the mound by the Tankers in a desperate attempt to stem the tide of defeat in the final game. It looked like a good move as the Tankers got away to a six run lead off the delivery of Collyer and Aiken in the first frame. The Tankers were reduced to even terms when the Kellys came back in the second frame and tied the count. Lindsey went back for the third frame but was pulled when he walked the first man to face him. Segrest relieved Lindsey but was touched for several bingles. Rowan relieved Segrest in the eighth but the Kellys were out in front with a six run lead.

Boots Foster went to the mound for the Kellys in the second frame after Collyer and Aiken had both failed to check the Tanker sluggers. Foster was in splendid form and held the Tankers helpless during the remainder of the game.

The Kellys completely outplayed the Tankers. On the bases the Kellys ran wild. Saunders led the team with seven stolen bases for the series. He also led both teams in scoring, marking up eight runs.

The following summary of the whole series will show just how the Kells took the trophy with their sticks. Ten Kells batted .333 or better, while the Tankers only had four to top that mark:

Scarcity Of Good Boys For Main-Go Cancels Post Bout

Due to the fact that no suitable opponent could be found for any of the main-go boys at Fort Benning, the fight that was scheduled for Monday night has been called off.

Announcements were made that the next card to be presented by the Infantry School Athletic Association would be held October 4th. Plans are already under way toward the completion of a high class program for that date.

Puggy Weinert and Football Smith, who had been selected to fight the semifinal and windup bouts, have gone to Miami to show there on Monday night. This came after it had been decided not to have the fights at Benning. Smith will meet a young fighter by the name of Goudey, while the name of Weinert's opponent was not learned.

Fighting in the Miami ring is a break for these two boys that, in the event they make a good showing, will put them back where the clouds are rosy. Miami is one of the most popular rings in the south. In fact it is the "Madison Square Garden of the South" when it comes to fight promotion.

HELMETED WARRIORS WORKING FOR COMING SEASON

Dan Sullivan and all of the old timers will be in there battling, and it is going to be some battle.

Down in the 24th Infantry, the Happy Hearts are building a powerful machine with visions of victories over Tuskegee, Moorehouse and Clarke Universities. The Florida Institute which handed the Happy Hearts a lacing last season will be back for another battle.

Lieutenant Washington M. Ives, head mentor of the 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry, football team in 1931, has been reappointed to that position for this season. As pilot of the Kellys last year, Lieut. Ives steered them through the 1st Battalion shoals and lifted them over reefs and whirlpools formed by the bristling helmet of raging Tankers, to win the garrison football championship. Assisting Lt. Ives will be Lt. James R. Pierce, head line coach, Staff Sergt. Kjelstrom, assistant backfield coach, and First Sgt. "High" Davis, assistant line coach.

The Terrible Tankers will be piloted again this season by Lieutenant Elliott Watson. He will be assisted by Lt. R. S. Nourse, backfield coach, and First Sgt. "Red" Lindsey, assistant line coach.

Kells and Autoists Set For Columbus-Fort Championship

In order to settle all arguments that might arise, the Kells of Fort Benning and the Patterson-Pope baseball teams will lock horns at either Golden Park or Leebern Field at 2 p. m. Saturday.

Efforts are being made to hold the first game at Golden Park, but in the event the field cannot be obtained, the game will be moved to the Leebern Field.

The Patterson Pope are the city champions, while the Kells are the high moguls of Fort Benning. The series of five games will be played to determine the Columbus-Fort Benning champs.

As an added attraction, the 29th Infantry Band will furnish musical entertainment for the fans. Large crowds from both Fort Benning and Columbus are expected for the series of games.

The "Personality Gunners Examination" brought forcibly home the fact that it does not pay to change horses nor the examiner while in mid-stream. Oh, where are the gunners of yesterday?

Private Pollard who has long been known as a connoisseur of wines and fast motor cars evidently thinks there is going to be a shortage in safety razors and expects to corner the market on this commodity, as he now has in his possession fifty-nine razors of all makes and descriptions.

"Hot Poppy Muscrove," keeper of the Day Room, prognosticator for the battery, has decided that banking is not in his line and will devote the next few months to a memory course. Muscat, if the memory course fails why not try finger prining?

Pvts. Holt and Hadley, both artists and instructors in their respective lines, are busily teaching each other their secret of success, that is, Pvt. Holt is training Pvt. Hadley for the square ring, while Pvt. Hadley is teaching Pvt. Holt the bullfrog yodel.

HQRS. BATTERY

The cessation of the summer holidays has caused our battery shieks and newly married men a lot of worry. They haven't as much chance to jawbone rides now as they used to but they can still be seen leaving in squad formation every afternoon.

Our eminent barber John Latina was seen leading a fast life, in company with our embryo supply Sgt. Winnie Vestal and two sub debs from the vicinity of North Highlands.

Two of our cooks, Myers and Paul Davis entered into fistic combat over a girl, Lee J. Wright was the referee and reports that no blood was shed.

A board of inquiry was appointed to investigate the accident that Sgt. Dodd had over the week end. One bumper was lost in the excitement. No report has come in from the board yet but we think they are going to have Dodd hire a driver.

BATTERY "C"

The dismounted review was proof that besides ride, the Artillery can march. We might not all be in step, but we reach the line anyhow. Too bad so few men attended the review, but with so many Post and Battalion fatigue details this just cannot be helped. We have over one hundred men on paper, but they might as well be paper men for all the good they are able to do.

The winter schedule is again in force, and we are supposed to work all day and stand retreat. Otherwise there is very little difference, instead of cutting grass in the morning, we are cutting it now in the afternoon As long as we cut grass everything is o. k. and the army is doing well. It makes no difference, as long as the grass is cut, whether our men learn and know anything about artillery. As long as they are able to work a pick and shovel in peace time they are able to use guns in war time.

In the next race, the 50-yard breast stroke, our Bonham took first, Julius Evans second and John Bill Barnes third. The 25-yard back stroke was won by K. L. Berry; second, J. B. The meet was concluded with the presentation of ribbons and a speech by Major Arms.

We held our regular meeting Friday, with 24 present, and two officers. We played three deep and the swimming was discussed. We hope more boys, new and old, come next Friday so we can start two troops.

night and any finger marks which were traced to her might well be old ones. The gun caused her most concern. She went over it again and again. In the end she placed it near a limp right hand on the carpet.

All this time no movement had disturbed her and her absorption had been so great that she had not wondered about the servants. Subconsciously, it had been in her mind from the first that Shubin must have sent them out in order in order to arrange his morning as he had planned.

But now she heard the first stir of life below.

Steps running up the stairs.

Not a servant. Why should a servant run?

Treading firm and square, yet hurried, too, along the carpeted hallway. And pausing. As if the person could not decide what next to do.

With a thickness of heavy wood between, she stood and listened to the unknown, imagined him with all her might. The pause by the door. The look around. The hesiation. A slight, a very slight scuffle, as if he—might be turning back. A fraction of a second of the most complete, the most breathless, the most motionless silence, until even her steely nerves trembled, until she could endure it no longer.

She set her teeth, upper upon lower, so hard that they hurt her. She flung herself upon the door and threw it open.

And she stood face to face with the very last person whom she could have thought to meet—Rosanoff!

To Rosanoff, she grew suddenly strangely little and frail between the huge doors, one hand clinging to the closed half, one arm outflung and the knuckles of that hand taut on the knob, her profile outlined intense, stabbing white.

Each must have recoiled. Both must have spoken at the same time.

on to military terminology after from seven to ten years in the Army is nothing short of marvelous, as the following accurately reported conversation proves:

Librarian Wilson to Explorer Chance: "Well, Bob, I suppose you are a high-ranking corporal in the Advanced Class."

Explorer Chance (modestly): "Oh, no, I'm only a file closer."

Mrs. Chance (brightly): "So that's what I saw you carrying back and forth between the buildings this morning!"

what might be called a new school. since the site of Benning has been used since the sixteenth century as a training ground by various nations. The first, according to Mayor Smith, who also drew many historical parallels in the course of his address, were the Indians who used the territory immediately around the present site of the Infantry School as a training ground for their warriors. It was successively used by the French, who sent an officer here to study the Indian methods, by the Continental Army, in the person of Col. Marinus Willett, who was sent here by President Washington, for the same purpose, and is now used by the Army for its School of Infantry. Among the distinguished personages who have passed through here were Oglethorpe, Lafayette, Aaron Burr (who was brought through here after his capture in Mobile) and DeSoto, who passed near here in his explorations of this territory.

Mayor Smith also welcomed the newcomers to Fort Benning and Columbus in behalf of the city he represents and expressed the hope that their stay here will be both pleasant and profitable.

Following the mayor's address, the benediction was given by Chaplain Willis T. Howard, and the closing selection "Follow Me" was played by the orchestra.

THEY'RE MILDER

YOU would be astonished too, if you could see this machine that turns out 750 Chesterfields a minute . . . and every one as near perfect as cigarettes can be made.

But please bear this in mind. It is what happens before the tobacco goes into this machine that matters most. Rolling and packaging are important, but not nearly as important as the selection, blending and treatment of the tobacco.

That's why we keep telling you about the tobaccos used in Chesterfields. They're fine, mild, and pure tobaccos. We tell you about ageing and curing the tobaccos . . . about blending and cross-blending them . . . because they are things that count.

Chesterfields are milder. They taste better. Prove it for yourself . . . Just try a package.

TOWN TOPICS

Lt. Dowdall's efforts at improving the cuisine of the Officers' Club are meeting with extraordinary success—as witness the variety of dishes on the latest breakfast menu of the Grill. Even though his work is aided so materially by the vagaries of the typesetter, we can hardly credit the fact that the Club is to serve some of the following dishes (Copied from the first galley proof of the menu):

Tornado and Bacon ----------10c

(This is guaranteed to stir up your inside, and goes well, we understand, with a sauce made of Florida Hurricanes.)

Caviar Canopy ----------25c

Mushroom Chop Suey with Rice. Served or in cartoons to take home-40c

Baby Club Sandwich ----------20c

Adult Club Sandwich ----------40c

Even in spite of the fact that the printers sometimes make errors, we have no doubt that the chef of the Club could go a long way toward making up a few dishes to the above specifications. At any rate, we'd like to sample some of them.

We can hardly blame the man down in South Georgia who was bewildered by the sight of one of the Christie Tanks charging down the road at him. We had a glimpse, a very fleeting one, of Mr. Christie's latest edition of the super-speed land-battleship, and we entertain a very marked respect for its apparent formidableness. All things considered, we'd hate to meet one on a dark night!

Anyone who appreciates a really good mystery story will enjoy Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach's article in the latest issue of the Saturday Evening Post. His descriptions of rare manuscripts and first editions of famous detective stories is enough to make any collector's mouth water. And, we'd like very much to have the original manuscript of the "Murders in the Rue Morgue" ourselves. It would be quite a satisfying feeling to possess it.

For those who like anecdotes about the great and near great, we recommend Orton Tewson's "An Attic Salt Shaker" column in the Atlanta Journal. Though it only runs occasionally, it makes very interesting reading inasmuch as its stories are true ones about the famous figures of our own time and of the past few generations.

New Equipment for Bridge Building To Be Tested At Post

Fort Benning is to be the scene of a series of demonstrations and tests of new types of pontoon bridge equipment which Company "E," 1st Engineers, of Fort DuPont, Delaware, is bringing to The Infantry School. The engineers are expected to arrive at Fort Benning about October 1, and the tests which they are to conduct at the post will be in progress until March, 1933, according to information received by Major General Campbell King, commandant of The Infantry School, from the chief of infantry at Washington, D. C.

Three types of pontoon bridges will be used in the tests and demonstrations, which will be held on the Chattahoochee river and other streams on the Fort Benning reservation. One type of bridge, termed pontoon model, 1926, has a carrying capacity of seven and one-half tons. Another, also model 1926, has a capacity of twelve tons, and a third, heavy type, model of 1924, has a capacity of twenty-three tons.

The six-month test period at Fort Benning will be divided into three phases, the first of which will deal with the training of the personnel, and tests of the adjustment of the equipment. During the second phase the technical and tactical handling of the equipment will be studied, and during the third phase the use of the equipment in field exercises for all arms will be featured.

Every available opportunity is to be taken to train troops in tactical operations connected with the tests. One month will be allotted to testing the equipment under simulated war conditions as a part of tactical exercises involving the use of all arms. This will include ferrying operation, and the actual use of the various bridges as well as the tactical handling of troops in making the crossing.

Among the technical points which will be studied during the demonstrations at Fort Benning, are the maximum load capacities in smooth and rough water for all types of military transportation and guns, the effect of currents, free-board allowances, and other safety factors. The amount of training required to familiarize troops with their use, particularly as to whether the training requirements will be greater than for the older types of equipment now in use, and other such information as may assist in determining the military advantages of the newer types of bridges over the old one are other important points which will be stressed.

The tests at Fort Benning are to be concluded in time to permit the testing company to be back in its barracks at Fort DuPont on March 10, 1933.

A fleet of experimental army trucks is scheduled to arrive with the engineers for a two weeks' test at Fort Benning under the direction of the chief of infantry. The trucks are of a new model recently built by the Quartermaster at Holabird, Md., depot. Road tests of the new vehicles will be in progress during the trip to Fort Benning, and upon the conclusion of the tests at The Infantry School the truck train will be sent to Fort Bragg, N. C. for a ten weeks' period of testing under the direction of the chief of field artillery.

Not So Quiet on Coal Front

With machines at the ready, men of the Illinois National Guard are shown guarding a road leading to Peabody Mine No. 9, near Springfield, Ill., where over three hundred men reported for work as the mine reopened following the shut-down during the recent labor disorders. Soldiers dispersed small bodies of pickets with tear gas bombs.

Confusion Occurs In The Usage Of Section Names

Since the discontinuance of the Tank School at Fort George G. Meade, Md., and the transfer of certain of its personnal and equipment to Fort Benning, there has been some confusion in the use of terms employed by laymen to describe the section of The Infantry School which now carries on, with certain modifications, instruction formerly conducted by the Tank School. Frequently the appellation "Tank School" has been erroneously applied to the tank section of The Infantry School, which is now one of the five academic divisions, or sections, of The Infantry School. In an article appearing recently in a local publication, the chief of the tank section was erroneously entitled "Commanding Officer of the Tank School," and in another article allusion was made to the students of the "Tank School," an institution which ceased to exist several months ago.

In order to obviate, so far as possible, errors in the descriptive nomenclature of The Infantry School, the following synopsis of its organization is presented: The Infantry School is the special service school of the infantry where all specialized infantry instruction is included in the several courses of its academic department. The school operaes under the general direction of the chief of infantry, Major General Stephen O. Fuqua, Washington, D. C.

The Infantry School is under the direct command of its commandant, Major General Campbell King, who supervises and directs its operation in accordance with the plans and desires of the chief of infantry.

The assistant commandant, Colonel Charles W. Weeks, is the head of the academic department, which in turn is subdivided into five sections, each

Students Of West Point Preparatory School Leave Post

Thirty one ambitious young soldiers who aspire to become officers in Uncle Sam's army departed from Fort Benning Tuesday morning, September 27, for Fort McPherson, Ga., where they will be enrolled in the 4th Corp Area West Point preparatory school to continue courses of study which began at Fort Benning in July. Successful completion of the six month course at Fort McPherson will qualify the soldier students for the competitive entrance examinations for the military academy to be held in March, 1933.

Fort Benning's quota in the corps area school amounts to more than three fifths of its authorized capacity of fifty, the nineteen other students having been designated from various posts in the corp area.

The Fort Benning candidates for commissions are the survivors of a series of elimination tests which reduced the original group of aspirants from forty-six to thirty-one, and further reduction of their numbers probably will take place as the examination ordeals become stiffer.

Competition in the final entrance tests will be keen, as nearly all of the fifty soldiers are to compete for the seven appointments allotted for enlisted men of the 4th Corps Area, although a number of them have provisional congressional or presidential appointments.

Included in the group of Fort Benning students are several who are sons of army men. Among these are Alpheus H. Seeley, son of Lieutenant Colonel Burton A. Seeley, Fort Benning; George M. Griswold, son of Major Oscar W. Griswold, Fort Benning; Howard F. Liston, son of Captain Howard J. Liston, Fort Benning; Paul C. Gullett, son of Master Sergeant William C. Gullett, retired,

John J. McSwain Makes Inspection Of Fort Benning

John J. McSwain, chairman of the House military affairs committee, who is making a tour of inspection of southern army posts, arrived at Lawson Field, Fort Benning, at three o'clock, Saturday afternoon.

The congressman, who is making the journey by airplane, was delayed in his arrival at Fort Benning by adverse flying weather, which has disarranged the schedule of his itinerary.

Arrangements for the reception of Mr. McSwain at Fort Benning had been perfected on Tuesday when he was first expected to arrive, but the plans had been deferred at a late hour Tuesday, when it was apparent that the distinguished visitor would not arrive on that day. Troops which had been held in readiness all day Tuesday, to render honors and escort the legislator to post headquarters, were ordered to their barracks.

The formal reception of Mr. McSwain upon his arrival Wednesday followed plans previously arranged at Headquarters, The Infantry School. Colonel Fred L. Munson, acting commandant, Colonel Ephraim G. Peyton, executive officer, and Lieutenant Colonel Joseph A. Atkins, assistant executive officer of The Infantry School greeted him as he stepped down from the big army transport plane in which he is making the tour. At the same time, Battery "A", 83rd Field Artillery, commanded by Captain Robert G. Mangum, which was formed in line at one end of the landing field, fired a salute of seventeen guns in honor of the visiting committeeman. Preceded by a detachment of motorcycle military police, he was then taken by automobile to the main post, where a guard of honor, composed of troops from the 29th Infantry, and commanded by Captain Earle A. Johnson, was waiting to pay him further honor.

Mr. McSwain stopped to make a brief inspection of the guard of honor, and then, accompanied by Colonels Munson and Peyton, and Lieutenant Colonel Atkins, he started on a trip of inspection of the principal features of the post. Several matters relating to housing and construction activities at the post were discussed with Mr. McSwain during the inspection trip.

Mr. McSwain is especially interested in housing conditions and projected building programs at Fort Benning, and during the automobile trip around the post he viewed the construction recently compleled and visited areas in which other construction work is contemplated.

The itinerary arranged for Mr. McSwain included visits of observation to the Doughboy stadium, the post exchange, the school buildings in the academic area, post gymnasium, the main theatre, the quartermaster laundry, the quartermaster bakery, the tank park, the stable area, 24th Infantry area, the tank baracks, the new 83rd Field Artillery barracks, 29th Infantry barracks, the tent area, The Infantry School Detachment mess, and the quartermaster sawmill. An inspection was also made of the wartime cantonment buildings in Blocks 21 and 23, the houses in Block 18, the station hospital, and recently built quarters in Blocks 14, 16, and 40.

Reception Held Thursday Evening On Commandant's Lawn For New Officers

Major General Campbell King, commandant of the Infantry School, and Mrs. King headed the receiving line at the reception given Thursday evening in honor of the students of The Infantry School and other newly assigned officers of the garrison. The function, an annual affair, was held on the lawn adjacent to the quarters of the commandant, where festoons of colored lights were strung in the grove of stately oak trees, and a platform was placed in position for dancing.

Assisting General and Mrs. King in the receiving line were Colonel and Mrs. Ephraim G. Peyton; Colonel and Mrs. Charles W. Weeks; Colonel and Mrs. Fred L. Munson; Colonel and Mrs. John J. Toffey; Colonel and Mrs. J. DeCamp Hall; Colonel and Mrs. Walter L. Reed; Colonel and Mrs. William B. Wallace; Colonel and Mrs. Thomas W. Brown; Lieutenant Colonel and Mrs. Frank F. Jewett; Lieutenant Colonel and Mrs. Reginald H. Kelly; Lieutenant Colonel and Mrs. Thomas J. Leary; and Major and Mrs. Clyde A. Selleck, representing headquarters staff, the academic department, the 24th Infantry, the 29th Infantry, the Q. M. Corps, the Infantry Board, the Medical Corps, and the 83rd Field Artillery. Several foreign officers, including Captains Cesar L. Castano y Garcia, and Jose F. de Cardoba y Gomez, and Lieutenant Eugenio Bravo y Blanco of the Cuban army; and Lieutenant Chiao-Jang Wu, of the Chinese army, also assisted in receiving the guests.

In addition to the student officers and others of the garrison, the Officers' Club which sponsored the reception, invited a number of civilians, including life members of the Officers' Club, and several city and county officials.

Engagement of Miss Marchant and Lt. S. R. Hanmer Recently Announced

Of great interest throughout Army and civilian circles is the announcement of the engagement and approaching marriage of Miss Mary Virginia Marchant, of Denver, Colorado, to 2nd Lieut. Stephen Read Hanmer of Fort Benning. The bride-elect, who has been a popular visitor at Fort Benning as the guest of her cousins, Maj. and Mrs. Emil W. Leard, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Marchant of Denver, Colorado. She attended the University of Denver and is a member of the Pi Beta Phi sorority. Her fiance is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee F. Hanmer of New York City, and is a graduate of the 1931 class of the United States Military Academy. The wedding will take place in Denver in St. Barnabas church November 12th.

Bachelors Give Highly Successful Dance At Polo Club Last Saturday Evening

The first of a series of Bachelors Dances to be held this Winter began Saturday at the Polo Hunt Club. The club was transformed into a miniature football arena, the sides of the club house being painted to represent the grandstand and the floor the football field. At each end of the Club stood the goal posts. A large score board was placed prominently at one end, the score showing Army 17, Navy 14, as in 1922. Each light was shaded by a football helmet and streamers of yellow and black hung from the ceiling. To complete the very effective setting, the 29th Infantry orchestra wore football costumes. The guest list included members of the young married contingent, members of the younger set, their guests and escorts and a number of Columbus people. The committee representing the Bachelors Club this year are: Lieuts. Christian Clarke, Jack Pitcher, James Winn, Milton Pressley, Joseph Coolidge, Ernest Easterbrook, Robert Ports and Ralph Pulsifer.

MAJ. AND MRS. LEARD ENTERTAIN BEFORE RECEPTION IN HONOR COL. AND MRS. WEEKS

Maj. and Mrs. Emil W. Leard were the hosts Thursday evening before the Commandant's reception at a delightful dinner in honor of Colonel and Mrs. Charles W. Weeks, who have recently arrived on the Post. The table was graced by a lovely bowl of pink rose buds and pink tapers. Maj. and Mrs. Leard had as their guests Col. and Mrs. Weeks, Col. and Mrs. Ephraim G. Peyton, Col. and Mrs. William B. Wallace, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. James B. Woolnough and Maj. and Mrs. Maurice D. Welty.

MISS KATHERINE OBER HONOR GUEST AT DINNER

Miss Katherine Ober, the house guest of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. James B. Woolnough, was the honoree last Thursday evening at a delightful dinner given by her hosts. The guest list included about fourteen members of the young set and their escorts. After dinner the guests proceeded to the Post movies.

CAPT. FORSTER HONORS OFFICERS OF 1932 CLASS WITH DINNER PRECEEDING BACHELOR DANCE

Capt. George J. Forster was the host Saturday evening at a delightful dinner at the Officers' Club complimenting the officers of the West Point Class of 1932 who are now stationed at Fort Benning. Sharing honors at the dinner were Lieut. and Mrs. Lon H. Smith, Lieut. and Mrs. Henry C. Britt, Lieut. and Mrs. Earl G. Wheeler and Mrs. Houston P. Houser, Jr. The table decorations were roses furnished by the garden at Biglerville. Place cards representing various activities on the Post were used. After dinner the guests attended the Bachelors Dance at the Polo Club. Capt. Forster had as his guests: Lieut. and Mrs. Houser, Lieut. and Mrs. Smith, Lieut. and Mrs. Wheeler, and Lieut. and Mrs. Britt, the Misses Barbara King, Martha Hunt, Page Michie, Mary Cotton, Nancy Stilwell, Mollie Heilman, Mary Kline, Phyllis Sargent, Harriet Atkins, and Frances Dexter, and Lieuts. Ralph Pulsifer, Sidney Brown, Milton Pressley, Charles Decker, Ernest Easterbrook, Glenn Farris, Joseph Coolidge, Edward Barlow, Richard Hunt, William Moore, Edward Winston, Hugh Cary, Sewell Brumby, Grave Teller, William Bache, Orville McNulty, James Churchill and James Heriot.

Today's Fashion

By VERA WINSTON

Smart Clothes for Smart Youngsters

It has been such fun assembling clothes for the smart youngster. Really, when one thinks of the clothes for little girls that were considered the thing only a few years ago, one is amazed to see what strides this part of the mode has made. The new clothes combine certain characteristics of the mode with the latest ideas, without sacrificing for an instant that youthful charm and girlishness that should be the motif of every frock or suit for a youngster. Today we show a sketch of a perfectly lovely costume that would be ideal for any girl between the ages of thirteen to seventeen years. It is a knitted affair in gay shades of yellow, brown and red, for girls love color. The skirt and coat are of brown knit. The jacket buttons snugly down the front without a belt, a very smart and grown-up touch. There is a sleeveless striped sweater in red and yellow. For additional measure there is an under blouse of very thin wool in yellow. Both sweater and jacket go in for the smart square neckline, a change from the ordinary rounded line so much used for children's clothes.

COUNTRY CLUB TO COMPLIMENT BENNING OFFICERS SATURDAY

An event of outstanding interest will be the dance at which the Columbus Country Club will entertain on Saturday evening as a compliment to the incoming officers of Fort Benning and their ladies. Invitations are being extended to all new officers, who are members of the Officers' Club. Preceeding the dance, which will take place at nine o'clock, in the ball room, dinner will be served.

Dr. Rosenthal To Be Given Reception

In recognition and appreciation of more than twenty-five years of service, Dr. Rosenthal, rabbi of B'Nai Israel Temple, will be tendered a reception on Sunday evening, October 2nd, at the Harmony Club, by members of his congregation. Sharing the honor with the beloved rabbi will be Mrs. Rosenthal, who during his years in Columbus, has added her services to those of her husband. Dr. Rosenthal is also in charge of the Jewish services at Fort Benning and holds the rank of major in the Reserve corps.

The calling hours will be from 8 to 10 p. m. and all friends of every denomination in Columbus, Fort Benning and the surrounding territory are most cordially invited ot attend. Receiving with Dr. Rosenthal will be Rabbi and Mrs. J. Shulman, Herman Julius, president of the congregation, Mrs. Mark Sternberg, Mr. and Mrs. David Greentree, Mr. and Mrs. David Rothschild and other officials of the various Jewish organizations.

Dr. Rosenthal's service to Columbus has not been narrowed to those of his own faith, but has been a civic service from which the entire community has benefited. Possessed of a winning personality and a distinctly human appeal, Dr. Rosenthal has a nature which is one of the most lovable in the communities. In his ministrations, he has shown neither creed nor color, but has given generously of his time, his means and his talent, where they were needed. As pastor, friend and citizen, Dr. Rosenthal has won the respect and affection of the entire community, and his friends of Fort Benning are joining with others in wishing him many successful years.

Spider, New Fashion Designer

It was hard enough for mere man to keep his eyes straight ahead before, but now it is almost impossible. Fashion has decided that the spider's web furnishes a fine design for the newest printed stockings, and promptly took it over. Now it ensnares ankles instead of flies—and is the Spider's face red?

Service League Is Active Local Goop

One of the most progressive and active organizations of Columbus, in spite of its youth, is the Community Service League. Last year the members made and gave $2,000 to charity. Every dollar that is given is made by the League, and every dollar that is given, is given personally. The members come in direct contact with those they help and give not only money but their time and interest.

Just a year ago this September a group of prominent young women of the city met and organized the Community Service League. Their idea was to give their time and help to those less privileged than themselves and to aid in civic enterprises.

The president of the League is Mrs Theo Golden. The other officers include Mrs. B. H. Hardaway, Jr., Miss Sara Bussey, Mrs. A. Illges, and Mrs. Edward Swift, Jr.

In the single year of its existence the League has achieved a brilliant record. The first of the entertainments given to raise money for charity was a barbecue at the beautiful country estate of Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Hardaway, Jr. In February they sponsored a brilliant Mardi Gras Ball. The carnival spirit was carried out in the elaborate decorations and in the handsome costumes of the masked guests The children of the city were fascinated and delighted by the marionette show which the Atlanta Junior League brought to the city and which was put on at the Royal Theatre under the auspices of the Community Service League.

The largest civic undertaking of the League was Cotton Week which they sponsored jointly with the Lions' Club. Cotton and its products cannot be underestimated in their importance to the South, and there is no better way in which the merchants of Columbus could have been assisted. During the week there were displays by the manufacturers. The climax was the Cotton Ball and Fashion Show in which all the participants wore cotton clothes.

The service done for the community by the League has been chiefly for the underpriviliged children. They maintained during the winter a milk station at one of the schools for the undernourished children. Aside from furnishing the milk some of the members were present each day to manage its distribution. During the summer they kept open one of the play grounds where free milk was served.

The principal work, however, of the Service League has centered in the Orphans' Home. Through the League the children have been completely clothed for one year. Each child has been assigned to a member of the League who has given her the personal attention impossible in an institution. At Christmas time they were given a party with a tree with pres-

Reciprocity Plan Being Considered

An arrangement that promises to add much to the activity in social circles of Fort Benning and Columbus, is the tentative agreement between the Country Club of Columbus and the Officers' Club, which is now under consideration of the Board of Governors of the Officers' Club. The program was an outcome of a conference between Mr. Dudley Spain of Columbus and Lt. H. G. Dowdall Secretary of the Benning Club.

The first event listed on the program for the coming season will be a dance to be held at the Columbus Country Club as a greeting to the incoming officers of the post, and which will be held on Saturday, October first. The facilities of the Club's golf course will be extended to the new officers and ladies on the morning of the same day. As a return entertainment, the Life Members of the Officers' Club are to sponsor a dance on Saturday, October fifteenth at the Club at Benning.

The third event on the program will be the invitational dinner dance at the Country Club for the members of the Officers' Club on Saturday evening, November 5th. The Officers' Club reserves the right, according to the tentative schedule, to enterain wih dances at the Country Club in Thanksgiving week and Christmas week.

The two clubs will hold inter-club tournaments in golf, tennis and bridge, and the members of the Officers' Club are to be extended the privileges of the Country Club Golf Course, upon the payment of the regular $1.50 green fee.

It was further agreed that if certain members of the Country Club wish to participate in the drag, cat or fox hunts at Fort Benning, or to shoot on the skeet range, that the names of those persons should be given to the Secretary of the Officers' Club so that they may be granted permission to these on the proper occasions.

The secretary of the Officers' Club has announced that the Thursday evening supper dances at the Club will be resumed on October 6th.

LIEUTENANT PEEPS' DIARY

Monday, September 19th

Up with the sun and did scour my neck and ears that I might appear well on this, our first day in attendance at Mr. Benning's Boarding School for Boys. All agog over being made a corporal, which joy was at once curtailed at finding Louie McComas in the squad's back row. Ah, well, we shall not want for a morale man, at any event.

To the theatre to receive Benedicite from the Lords of the Upper Air and did depart therefrom feeling that seekers after knowledge are indeed welcome here; which glow of friendly feeling was later dispelled by wifely admonition for I had forgot the bread and ice.

Tuesday, Sept. 20th

Into the serious business of the curriculum today and it is beyond all believing how we students are eager to absorb all that is poured before us. No verbal or written expression escapes notice and all go diligently at once to perform the good precepts laid down. An interesting instance was that occasioned by the advice of the doctor to eat fruit with the skin on, which did cause some consternation at lunch time amongst those whose buckets contained bananas.

Wednesday, Sept. 31st

Up betimes to pore over statistics which do shew that altho Hosea did firstly interrogate an instructor, yet he at once fell behind Johnson, W. G., who was indeed undaunted by an early handicap and came from behind to lead presently in quantity of questions.

Today, as I handed in my sketch, I was reminded of Capt. Bloomquist's earlier exhortation to us: "Stand or fall on your own work," for mine did surely appear that I had done both to it.

To the Communications Group today and harangued by Lt. Raymond on the simplicity of Morse "Language." We were assured by him that any three year old child has a vocabulary of forty words and a grown man should be able to acquire one of like size without trouble. To which Moore replied that he would take his Dit-Dah machine home to his four-year-old and see which of they two would learn to use it first.

Thursday, Sept. 22

Convinced more than ever that Capt. Bloomquist's name is an alias for, Lord, whoever knew a "quist" to be so active manually; and one student did confide to me that an oversize derby and a "beaver" would not be unbecoming to the gentleman.

Did run a late this day of my embarrassment, which, however, was assuaged by the sight of John Stewart later than I, and with his rifle about his waist and his belt over his shoulder.

Some of our more able thinkers have been at great pains to determine how to heed the doctor's advice not to work or study for an hour after eating. Their composite opinion has been to petition the School board for the hour 11 to 12 a. m. in which to explore for and excavate the lunch box, leaving the noon hour for a much needed rest.

Friday, Sept. 23

To the Academy with less physical alacrity than is my wont, occasioned by "Tuffy" Easley's prescribed gyrations about a Springfield and by frequent unsoftened contacts with the good earth.

The timely lecture by our medical adviser on Tuesday last does yet continue as a topic of convere. As I look on it in retrospect, I am convinced that the School Faculty should have attended that lecture and heard his sound advice on alternating periods of activity with inactivity!! McComas did volunteer the remark that he was relieved to find the end of the week approaching for how he could make complete ablutions, the medico, in his talk, having advised against one's

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

The Prevention of Scarlet Fever

Many times I am asked about the value and benefit of specific inoculations in the prevention of scarlet fever. It is to be expected that cases of this disease will be reported this fall and winter. How to prevent your children from contracting scarlet fever is therefore a timely subject for discussion.

Some years ago there were high hopes that a specific cure and possibly a posiive preventive inoculation had been obtained. These hopes, as indicated by more extensive research, are not completely justified.

The cause of scarlet fever is a peculiar type of germ called "streptocci" which dissolves blood cells. These germs in their growth manufacture two kinds of toxins (poison) one of which causes the disease itself and the other apparently the complications, swollen glands, discharging ears, etc.

At the present time we have a serum which is standardized and effective in counteracting the effect of one kind of poison, the one which causes the disease. There is as yet not serum which is always effective in preventing the septic (pus) complications that so frequently follow or accompany the disease.

As regards cure therefore, scarlet fever anti-toxin works favorably in the majority of uncomplicated cases. Under ordinary circumstances only those cases whose temperature is above 102 degrees need to be given serum and then one dose is usually sufficient.

Antitoxic serum is not given as a preventive measure. For prevention a dose of scarlet fever vaccine is given in one arm while the other arm receives a dose of the Dick Test. If the Dick Test is positive (showing susceptibility) increasing doses of vaccine are given at weekly intervals for five weeks. After a period of three weeks more another Dick Test is given to see if immunity has been produced.

In the majority of children such a course of treatment will produce immunity. It is one which lasts for a variable period up to one year with the average child. Re-test and re-inoculation are therefore necessary whenever a child is exposed to scarlet fever. On the whole the results are not as satisfactory as those following diphtheria immunization.

Because of the fact that we have a serum which will cure scarlet fever in the majority of cases where it needs to be used, I see no present necessity for the wholesale attempt at immunization of children or other susceptibles. It is only in the presence of an epidemic that such a procedure would be recommended.

In The Mirror

By Mollie Heilman

You can't persuade a man to die by writing his obituary, neither can you get rid of a man by "writing him out of town," we've discovered. We sent Lt. Sidney Brown to Fort McPherson last week but he is still hanging around. The wind you heard whistlin' was us scuttling under the rug in embarrassment.

Among the new interesting army girls is Miss Phyllis Sargent, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. R. C. Sargent, who live on Eighteenth avenue, Columbus. Phyllis just came from Hartford, Conn., where she was a sob sister on a newspaper.

Which reminds us that there are a lot of unsuspected talents on the post. Lt. and Mrs. Eugene Moseley, newcomers, build miniature villages out of wood in their spare time. The newest one is expected to be finished by Christmas, veneer and all. Lieutenant Moseley is a '29 man from the point, and a flyer. Mrs. Moseley is an accomplished dancer.

Then there is the poetic side of Lt. Pressley, who, we have no doubt, could recite poetry till doomsday.

Lt. Ted Decker is remembered for his originality and cleverness in getting out a booklet on the Point. It is called "The Corps Has Gone To Hell."

Fort Benning points with pride to Lt. Hank Flood. a famous character at the Point, who is now a student here. Anyone who has heard him will attest to the excellent quality of his voice. In the Philippines, we hear, he is remembered for an incident that occurred in a cafe. The cafe's professional singer was being booed, so somebody thought up the idea of having a contest between Flood and the professional. Bets were put up and taken and Flood brought down the house.

Of course, we don't KNOW; we only heard.

Lt. Paul Freeman, nicknamed "Sex" by the '29 class at the Point because of his popularity with the women, has finally been captured. Lt. and Mrs. Freeman are among the most popular of the married set.

Lt. Charles Nathan Edward Howard Jr. (just plain "Budge" to you) is back from a visit with his parents at Washington, D. C. He's been gone three weeks, in case you lost track.

Have you noticed:

That Hyatt Bache, '32 manager of the Point Rifle team, and Lt. Wayne Barlow always bring their pipes to parties? A woman is only a woman, you know, but a pipe is always a good smoke.

Lt. Brookner Brady's talent for punning?

That Lt. Joe Riley has a flair for phrenology and other means of fortune telling?

That Bob Jewett, Colonel Jewett's son, plays the piano exceptionally well? And is always an asset to a party for that reason?

That Lt. "Cal" Coolidge is devoid of a "line"?

That Lt. Heriot has an inferiority complex?

"Better be damned than mentioned not at all."

WELCOME TO OUR COMPANY

The Benning Herald is becoming a veritable school for columnists. Hardly a week goes by but that some ambitious litterateur breaks out with a new line of impertinent comment on local events and celebrities. For a long time the only help we got in covering the intimate behind-the-scenes gossip came from the entertaining Gunbotham. His successor E. L. M., while equally talented, is less reliable in that he sometimes sacrifices his art to the military or social requirements of the moment. In other words, his adroitly phrased paragraphs don't always get to the printer on time. What the printer sometimes does to them when they do is another story, but one determined to succeed in journalism shouldn't mind an occasional outburst of typographic originality. Look at us. We have seen some of our choicest subtleties butchered to make a compositor's holiday, yet each week we send in our customary flock of literary lambs to the slaughter.

The Flare extends a hearty greeting to Miss Mollie Heilman's clever "In The Mirror"—the name is appropriately feminine—to the entertaining and informative "Town Topics," and to the unknown but unquestionably talented McGoofus, who burst forth in the last issue with his "Off Hand Observations." We wish you success and joy in your work. How anyone derives much of the latter from running a column, we don't know, but maybe you are different.

CRUEL JESTS

Cannonball Pierce, he whirlwind tennis novice and 29th Infantry bulwark, stands in a fair way to challenge Committeeman Ham Kelly's supremacy in the practical joke field.

It happened this way. An old aviator flame of the Cannonball's charming, globetrotting wife stopped off for gas at Maxwell Field and thought to send greetings to the Pierces. Lt. Pierce took the message and transmitted it to Mrs. Pierce who at the moment was spending one of her rare evenings away from home and fireside.

In transmitting the Flames message, the husband correctly read: "I'll drop off to see you," but neglected to add, "on the way back." He added that it might be a good idea to go down to the landing field to meet the knight of the air when he arrived; whereupon Mrs. Pierce in a whirlwind of excitement (you know how it is, girls) commandeered the services of one Captain Monte Blue to drive her to the field at once, forthright and forthwith.

Arriving, they found that no planes were scheduled to arrive from Maxwell or anywhere else. The landing lights weren't even turned on. Moreover, the man in charge evinced no intention of turning them on in spite of Mrs. Pierce's insistence that they ought to be lighted.

After listening intently for the drone of a motor for half an hour or so, the disappointed Mrs. Pierce permitted Capt. Blue to take her back to her interrupted game of contract. Calling up her husband for further ifnormation she was told in the Cannonball's most apologetic voice that the Flame's threat to stop off referred to his return trip.

As we go to press we learn that the Pierces are speaking again but it will probably be some time before a true entente cordiale can be re-established.

PANACEA

Rumor has it hat Miss Moon Mullins, stenographer to the Commandant, has introduced the rick-rack to the personnel at G. H. Q.

Adjutant General Lewis and his accomodating assistant, Adjutant Lovett, are reported to be quite enthusiastic about Mr. Houston's ingenious device for combatting the depression. Even Executives Atkins and Welty are said to be interested.

The Flare is rather intrigued by the possibilities of Miss Mullins' innovation. If all the higher headquarters can be inveigled into devoting hours to perfecting Rick-Rack tcehnique, the shock troops will have a lot less to worry about. Why not send a carload of rick-racks to Washpartment official and maybe one for Elliot Watson. He will be assised After dinner the guests were escored

Any business in need of a financial genius, efficiency expert, and manager will do well to have a business conference with a certain Corporal of this organization who is geting discharged next month. The reason: In three years he has spent only $9.53 for clothing. Name on request.

The exodus to foreign parts having been temporarily suspended, except by discharge, the "bullsheviks" and their followers are having a hard time amusing themselves. We suggest they take up the repeal of the 18th Amendment.

UNIQUE ALIBI

The following U. P. dispatch, now somewhat out of date, was carefully preserved for us by a friend who possesses a keen appreciation of what constitutes good Flare material:

GA. BANKER TAKES A LOOK

AT EAST RIVER

NEW YORK, July 31 (U.P.)—James L. Grier, investment banker of Columbus, Ga., has been summoned to explain to a court why he was on the fire escape of a woman's hotel at 2 a. m. today. When found by the hotel clerk Grier said he was trying to get a good view of the East River.

Lest some of our readers conclude that the item refers to our erstwhile fellow scandal monger, Leftenant James L. Grier, whose entertaining columns brightened the editorial page of the Benning Herald during the past year, we hasten to invite attention to the fact that the offending fire escape arist is catalogued in the police record as an investment banker. While it is true that the great bear market had made the versatile Lieutenant an involuntary investor in several issues, not even Jimmy's most ardent admirer or even Jimmy himself—which is equivalent to the same thing—would call him a banker. So, of course, that lets Gunbotham out. The name, the home address, and the fact that the escapade and the explanation have a distinct Gunbotham flavor fail to establish any connection of which is directed by an officer entitled "Chief of Section," who has an appropriate number of instructors and a secretary as assistants.

The secretary, Major Emil W. Leard, and the assistant secretary, Captain Walter B. Smith, are the administrative assistants of the assistant commandant.

The five sections of the academic department and the subject of their courses of instruction are as follows: First Section; tactics, to include the reenforced brigade, command and staff, command posts, organization, combat orders, and combat intelligence. The chief of section is Lieutenant Colonel Joseph W. Stilwell.

The Second Section; supply, medical service, communications, topography and field engineering, reconnaissance, training, close order drill, military courtesy and customs of the service, army of the United States, animal management and transportation. equitation, logistics, staff maps, physical training and horseshoeing. The chief of section is Major Albert S. Tucker.

The Third Section; infantry and chemical warfare weapons, musketry, combat principles of rifle and machine gun squads and sections, combat practice, and tank gunnery. The chief of section is Major Omar N. Bradley.

The Fourth Section; military history, instructional methods, public speaking, parliamentary procedure, psychology, infantry extension courses, editing, mailing list, stenography, and clerical courses. The chief of section is Major Edwin F. Harding.

The Tank Section; operation, care and maintenance of motors, truck chassis, tanks, tank chassis and batteries, convoy operation, and tank driving. The chief of section is Colonel William B. Wallace.

Thousands Visit Camp Of Tankers Near Jacksonville

About twenty thousand citizens of Jacksonville, Florida visited the tank troops encamped at Camp Foster, near that city last Sunday. A crowd of about eleven thousand witnessed the demonstration of the Christie tanks which accompanied the battalion on its practice march, a demonstration which was given for about one hundred and fifty reserve officers. The reserve officers also attended a lecture given by Major A. F. Kingman, on the characteristics of tanks and their tactical value as a military weapon.

One of the high spots of the Tanker's visi to the Florida city was the visit of inspection made by Major General Campbell King, Commandant, the Infantry School, Fort Benning, who made the trip to Jacksonville via air. General King was greeted by a salute of thirteen guns and was escorted to the camp headquarters by a guard of honor.

During their stay at Camp Foster, the officers and men who made the trip were elaborately entertained. The facilities of several local clubs were extended the officers and the men were given opportunities for swimming on the beaches near the city. The officers were given a deep sea fishing trip in the waters off the Florida Coast.

ted for open sale in the United States. Having read a few passages from the unabridged edition of this famous book, we can readily see its literary value, but at the same time are heartily appreciative of its destructive influence. We have no fear, however, for the morals of the younger generation, for they seem to have shown amazing ability to take very good care of themselves. We are quite sure, too, that the movies will offer the "Tales" a very stiff competition.

Lest anyone wonder whether one of the advertisers in the back of the special edition of the Herald was playing a practical joke, we may as well enlighten them now. The ubiquitous printer, or maybe it was the proofreader this time, very conveniently left the cut out when the page was being printed. thus giving the very novel effect of an advertisement without and advertiser. A local furniture dealer, Maxwell Bros. & McDonald was the victim.

Telephone Book To Be Distributed At Benning Soon

The Fort Benning telephone book is in the last stages of completion and will be delivered to subscribers to telephone service within the next few days, according to reports from the printer.

An unusual demand for these books has arisen this year and the work on them is being rushed as quickly as possible in order to offset the confusion caused by the many changes in numbers which are the natural consequence of the changes in personnel at the garrison. The new book will be more complete than the last, having maps and sufficient space in which to write the changes which may occur after its publication. Deliveries will probably begin not later than Wednesday, October 5.

between the culprit and the columnist. We shouldn't have bothered to reprint the item at all except that these features constitute what the high court of public opinion must regard as a remarkable coincidence.

ONCE AGAIN—THE VERSATILE SECOND SECTION

First in war, first in peace,
First in the throes of a birth-rate increase.

The individual and combined talent of the Versatile Second Section has been the subject of frequent admiring comment in this column. Somehow or other, Chief Tucker's motley crew manages to distinguish itself in every field of human endeavor. Ordinary, mediocre routine performance simply isn't tolerated in the Spare Parts Group. Whenever they go in for anything—and they go in for practically everything—they do so with the idea of hanging up a record and they usually manage to do just that.

Consider the latest achievement for instance—four babies in three months. To the best of our knowledge no other section, not even the First with all its numerous instructors—is even threatening the versatile Second's preeminent position in the birth rate Marathon.

The funny thing about this is that it is the new instructors who have put the Second Section so far out in front that the others seem to be hopelessly outdistanced. Perhaps having a baby or two is a form of hazing which the new instructors have to undergo before they are admitted to full membership.

Major Dabney, the new monitor of the physical well-being of the faculty and students, led off early in the summer with his New Testament twins, Mary and Martha. Then came Lieutenant E. C. Johnson, with a daugher, Margaret, born early in September. Credit for the latest addition, up until the hour of going to press, is due in part at least to Capt. Mark G. Brislawn, whose son Mark, Jr., arrived on September 23.

Apropos of Mark, Jr.'s arrival, we understand that Capt. Brislawn was severely reprimanded by Major Tucker for his failure to report the big news to his chief of section. It seems that the Chief, not knowing what had happened and seeing all of the members of his section smoking ten-cent cigars, thought that the Economy Bill had been repealed. Capt. Brislawn's excuse for his oversight was that the birth of another son is just an incident—not an event in his family—Mark being the fourth boy.

And that reminds us that the mechanized warfare enthusiasts have rejected the name "Mark, Jr." They insist that the new recruit be called "Mark IV." Capt. Brislawn has accepted the amendment but he was observed to recoil slightly when someone proposed the toast, "May his tribe increase!"

Program Postponed As Opponents Hide From Walker Smith

Danny Long and Puggy Weinert To Be On Next Card

Again the fights at Doughboy Stadium have been postponed because a suitable opponent for Football Smith cannot be obtained. Captain Fry announced Thursday that the next card to be presented at Benning would be on October 11th.

It begins to look as though it will be hard to pick an opponent for the "Cyclone" this time. Many fighters have been sought for the 29th Infantry slugger, but to date they have all managed to crawfish out of it in some manner. The Bull is seeing red. When the luckless fellow is found to meet Smith, he will meet unchained fury in the form of the Footballer.

While no announcemens have been made as to just who will be used to support the card, it is generally conceded by those who hang around the Gymnasium that Puggy Weinert, the Polak Buzz-saw will feature the semi-final act. When Weinert gets in there with any pug, he proceeds to make said pug look as much like a palooka as is possible. He never knows when he is licked, and keeps digging all through, rushing his man for all he is worth.

Puggy has been training hard at the Gym for a long time, and is in the pink of condition to take on almost any fighter the promoters might pick. He never tries to cull his opponents, a fight being the main thing he wants. Disgust always registers on his face whenever he meets an unworhy opponent. Modified murder is what usually follows.

Danny Long, too, is picked to meet some good fighter in the main six rounder. This is to be Danny's real test as to his sicking abilities.

I will be remembered that Danny is the one fighter at Fort Benning who has a real colorful back ground, having fought all of the good boys in his weight when he was known as the Texas Cyclone, and later as the Kansas Tornado.

Danny is the type of boy who goes in there and fights a style of fighting the local boys know nothing of. Danny will scorn an opportunity to bash a noodle, electing to drive his pile-driver blows to the body.

These blows are solid, and come with such regularity that it gradually weakens his opponent into submission. Long is by no means a tailender, or anything of that sort. He has fought for a long time, and fights now only because he loves to. He has known his share of glory, but can't leave the game.

This fight will be a test to see whether or not he has the ability left in his educated dukes to rise to the semi-final posiion on the cards presented at Benning. In the event he whips his next opponent, he will, in all probability, be matched with Rip Tetherton. It is generally conceded at Benning that Danny can take the Ripper like Grant took Richmond. However, there are the doubters.

The nex fight may or may not be held in the Gymnasium. It all depends on where the thermometer stands at that date. If it is raining, the fights will be inside, whatever the mercury says. In the event it is held out-of doors, it will be the last for this season to show in Doughboy Stadium, as the winter season always is shown in-doors.

Captain Fry is working hard to put on an excellent card for the next offering, but to date will not put out any definite information whatsoever.

Gowdy Field Stands Need New Coat

Yellow Paint Will Check-mate Alibi Artists Of Paint To Brighten Background

By the absence of errors on the part of most of the Kells last Saturday at Golden Park, it seems as though there is something wrong with the technique of Gowdy field. It is a settled fact that players who have heretofore played good baseball in other fields. have turned in rotten fielding averages on the Benning diamond.

Some of the players are prone to lay it to the fact that the infield has too much of a "turtleback" in it, giving the ball a peculiar hop when it passes the pitcher's position. While here is a good bit of common sense argument in this statement, it will not hold water. More fields than a little in the south have even a more pronounced hump than that of Gowdy Field. Still. there are not so many errors on these fields as here.

It seems as though the alibi artists have overlooked a good bet in the fact that the color of the Gowdy Field stands do not harmonize with perfect conditions. With the under side of the roof painted a pale green, there is no light reflection down on the tiers at all. To the player afield, it seems as though he is facing a huge black abyss. This is disconcerting to his vision, and when the ball is whacked a good solid blow, it is coming out of that black hole "hellbent" for election. The would-be fielder has no chance to check up on the speed of the ball, and is in a quandary as to just exactly where it is going. The results are that the player does not get in an advantageous fielding position, and drops the ball.

Yellow or cream would be a good color for the under side of the roof, as this color is not repelling to the eye, yet it refiects light into that dark space. It is believed that the fielding of the clubs next year would be greatly improved should this be done. Several of the players and coaches concur in the above statement, as will be found on a thorough canvass of the teams.

All in all. however. Gowdy is one of the most beautiful and best ball parks to be found in the south. It is the only known ball park in the world completely surrounded by a beautiful rose hedge, and is positioned take all the advantage of the sun possible. Only two players are bothered with old sol during the process of a game, the short stop and the third baseman.

Atheletic Program Of High Value In Training Of Troops

Athletic programs for the season 1932-33 are in course of preparation at Fort Benning. where outdoor sports and supervised athletics are given high value in the training of soldiers. Captain Phillip T. Fry, athletic and recreation officer of the post, has announced a general program as a guide for troop organizations in the preparation of their athletic training schedules.

Football looms big in the major sports. Already more than two hundred and fifty are training in the squads representing the larger troop organizations. The 29th Infantry has turned out two squads of fifty men each, and the Tank battalion and the Artillery battalion each has a fifty-man squad in the field. The 24th Infantry has sixty men on its football squad.

Coaches are pushing their men hard and expect to have their teams organized and in perfect playing condition long before the first game in the Fort Benning conference in December. In the program arranged for the 24th Infantry games several meets with southern colored college teams will be scheduled.

Basketball comes to the fore about January 15, when the intra-mural league series for the post championship will open. In the colored division the 24th Infantry will contend for honors with southern colored colleges.

Boxing always enjoys high favor at Fort Benning and has a large following of active participants and fans. In addition to the popular boxing shows, there will be an amateur boxing tournament commencing about March. This will be climaxed by the bouts which will determine membership of the boxing team. which will represent the post at the annual southeastern championship meet. The Fort Benning team took highest honors in this meet, held in Atlanta in 1930, and coaches of this year's team are hoping to repeat the achievement.

Baseball has a large following at the post, and when theintra-mural season opens in April there will be enough teams in the league's line-up to provide exhibitions of this popular sport about six times a week.

Track and field, commencing in May, will assemble the post's best athletes in a variety of tests of skill, speed, strength, and endurance in the Intra-mural series, which will be climaxed by the garrison meet to decide individual and collective championships. A separate series of field events will be run off by the 24th Infantry.

Aquatic sports have become intensely popular with the soldiers, and a number of speedy swimmers have been developed at the post. The spring opening of the pools next year will be followed by a series of competitive swimming events which will culminate in meets to decide regimental and post cahmpionships.

Griffin Is Winner Over Sullivan In Jacksonville Fight

John "Corn" Griffin is still marching on in his quest for pugilistic fame. Last Tuesday night he journeyed down Jacksonville way and added the scalp of Jimmy Sullivan to his already full belt.

Griffin snapped out and went to the front with Sullivan early in the first round. and battered the Eau Gallie boy all over the ring for eight consecutive rounds. It was in this eighth round that Griffin was awarded a technical kayo over his foe, having literally battered him to a pulp.

Griffin was supported on the card by two other Benning fighters from the Tank Corps. Stratton Smith lost a six round decision to Jimmy Murphy and Frank Mackery took a six round decision from Earl Rocky.

It is going to take a strong boy to stop Corn's march to fistic fame, and whoever that boy is will be a big threat at the crown. Corn's long arms and tremendous hitting power will hold him up before some of the best, as they have in the past. His wonderful stamina is another thing that makes him one of the greatest fighters Benning has ever produced. Watch him go.

Tennis Is Taken Up By 2nd Batts. As Other Sports Lull

Second Battalion Takes To Tennis As To All Other Sports

Always first in athletics as well as military accomplishments, the 2d battalion 29th Infantry again steps to the front in starting things. The latest sport being stressed is tennis.

A battalion tournament is being sponsored with the end in view of placing this interesting and popular sport on the same basis as baseball and football and other sports. The announcement of the tournament was greeted with enthusiasm; about thirty-five men turning out to enter.

A beauiful trophy will be awarded the winner of the singles while the doubles winners also will receive an award.

Results of first matches follow: Carpenter defeated Gay 6-2; Colbert won over Stephens 6-2; Jones stopped Darden 6-3: Johnson swamped Rogers 6-0; Williams beat Berry 6-4; Parker and Alderman drew byes.

Other matches had not been completed Wednesday, although the committee plans to complete the tournament by the end of the week.

On The Q. T.

By B. B. S.

WE HEARD a conversation the other day on the streets of Columbus relative to Fort Benning boxing. It made us stick out our illustrious chest, strutting our pride in public, bragging more or less about the fact htat we were an obscure member of the machinery that keeps the ball rolling, pugilistically speaking.

THE GENTLEMAN doing most of the talking is a well known citizen about town, and always is present at the fights at Benning. In his conversation, he very emphatically brought home to his small audience the fact that Benning gives more for the fight dollar than any other ring in these great United States.

NOW THAT IS a broad statement, but coming from one who is in on the know about things pugilistically inclined, we had to stop and listen in. He pointed out that at all of Captain Fry's shows things moved along in grand style. Never any of that waiting around for some palooka to change gloves and make a grandstand play for the pleasure of himself and the boredom of the fans. The fights move off in a very expeditious manner, said he, keeping an endless chain of fighters waiting on the line until the end of the bout.

THEN TOO, the fights are of such calibre that they constantly gain in popularity. Each fight finds new faces on the menu as well as in the ringside seats. A dollar is all the money one can outlay for one seat and that gets about five dollars worth of entertainment of the first water.

NOWHERE IN THIS country can one see such an offering of sporting entretainment for a one dollar, William, nay, not even half. Sometimes we wonder how these other rings get away with that kind of stuff they are throwing at the public for two, two and a half, and three dollars. Some day the public will realize that Benning is the premier fighing ring of the south, and there they will go for their entertainment.

PEOPLE TELL US that Sergeant Booth, of the I. S. D. is some pool shot, in his own estimation. Rocco Freteschi had a different opinion of the sergeant's pool shooting abilities. Now Booth will havea dollar and a quarter galloping across the northeast corner of his pay roll this month, while Rocco's is still blank.

SPEAKIN OF GUNS reminds us of shooting. Booth needed some neck ties to grace his shirt front while he was paying his social respects in the fair city of Columbus. Corporal Brewer had a few too many . . . . but let us tell it the way it was.

CORPORAL BREWER had struck up an acquaintance with an industrially inclined young lady, who made washable neck ties as a means of advantageously passing her spare time. It fell Brewer's luckless lot to be Salesman Sam, and Booth happened to be the only customer. Booth thought Brewer had left these diggins on furlough, and proceeded to try to chisel in, but luck was against him again. Brewer had made the promise that should the lady have the current turned on he would install his Radio, and when Booth called, he was informed the lady was in Montgomery. (It so happened that Brewer was sitting behind the door, laughing up his sleeve. when the young lady finally came out and told the sergeant that she recognized the full value of his neck tie, and would he please peddle his groceries in some other street).

IT HAS BEEN reported to this column that a certain sack of Eelbeck meal journeyed all the way to Ragsdale last weekend without mishap. The trouble came when Sergeant Archie McLeod tried to take the sack from the rear of the car for delivery. They do tell us that those Ragsdale streets have been rather mealy since then.

Autoists Will Plav Kells Double Bill

The Kells are primed to deal the Patterson-Pope team a lot of misery again this week at Golden Park for the Columbus-Fort Benning championship.

The two teams met last Saturday at the Columbus ball park to settle differences in the first two of the five game series. The first game was taken easily by the Kells, but the second game ended in the fifth inning at a 0-0 deadlock.

Both games were beautiful affairs, being played under circumstances that favored neither team. A good gathering of fans graced the stands for the opening game, and an even larger crowd is expected for this Saturday's game. A double header will be played.

That game out there at Golden Park tomorrow is going to be golden. Advance ticket sales have already indicated that the crown will be about twice the size of that last Saturday.

The Patterson-Pope team is favored to op the Kells this Saturday, as they have been practicing for he better part of the week on the type pitchers to be used by the soldiers. They already have shown that they have a good style of stick-work, and with the proper kind of delivery from the mound should take at least one of tomorrow's games.

Kjelsrom would not release anything concerning his line-up for the opening game tomorrow, but it is believed that he will start with about the same as he ended the Intra-Mural series a week or so ago. This is about the strongest team he can favor he fans with, and will be greatly to his advantage to take the two games.

Officials of the game had not been announced at press time.

Fort Mack Officer Wins Golf Trophv

Capt. Druid A. Wheeler, of Fort McPherson, Ga., won the Fourth Corps Area golf tournament held at Fort Benning during the week of September 19, when he defeated Captain Howard J. Liston 5 and 4 in the finals Sunday afternoon, September 25.

Captain Wheeler shot superb golf to defeat Captain Liston, and win the championship. It was the second time that Captain Liston had been runner-up in a tournament at Fort Benning. He lost to Major Richard K. Sutherland in the finals of the post championship golf tournament a short while ago.

Winners of other flights were: Lieutenant Colonel John F. Meehan, Captain Guy Hartman, and Lieutenant E. K. Purnell.

Officers from various posts in the corps area, numbering one hundred and three, took part in the tournament.

HEADQUARTERS COMPANY

Happy Long returned from a 90 days' reenlistment furlough from the dark part of Alabama.

Willie Harrison spent his 30 days' furlough in Fort Benning. Sergeant Harrison was on a furlough celebrating an increase in his family. Good luck, Sergeant, old pal.

Pfc. Roy Commander returned from his 60 days' furlough in Clio, Alabama.

Jethro B. Oates, Jr., is now taking the stenography couse in the Fort Benning School for stenographers and clerks.

Our First Sergeant, Larry Mitzen, made some high score on the golf tournament in the city last week.

Mitzen beat Edge Reid one of the big shots of the Columbus daily paper. He beat Reid 8 up and 6 to go. Hope you have better luck next time, Mitzen.

We are proud of our 29th Infantry Orchestra. The 29th Infantry Orchestra played last week, one of the series of dances they usually play the year around here for the Bachelors' Club, Fort Benning. Uniform was football. The players were all taped up to make it realistic. Warrant Officer Horton was cheer leader for the game. Regarding the uniform of this Orchestra during the season, they adopt the season's athletic uniform at that time, polo, basket ball. tennis or whatever is in season. This orchestra has been complimented by Colonel Toffey, the Company Commander, Captain Porter and our Band Leader, Warrant Officer Horton. We are also fortunate in having Mr. Horton as Band Leader.

COMPANY "B"

Of course our biggest piece of news is the winning of the Regimental competition among musketry sections. On the other hand that is not news. "B" Company always seems to do it. Sgt. Kern apparently didn't want to embarrass the other section leaders by winning by too big a margin so he spotted every other section in the regiment three points when he failed to establish a march outpost. And from then on he went thru the problem with scarcely a cut. (Well if we don't blow our horn who will?)

Sgt. Barr, the star tackle of the big first battalion football team, came home from the game with Norman College so badly banged up that he couldn't put on a uniform, but as some one girl in Columbus will testify civilian clothes didn't hurt him a bit.

We notice a member of the compnay has been badly wounded around the face and neck and are anxious to state that if a wild cat made the wounds, all soldiers should use extreme care in their treatment of these Columbus wildcats.

With the coming of the fall season when old jack frost makes his annual tour, when the pumpkins get their coat of tan that the modern girl of today strives all summer to attain, and tries all winter o cover up; when the by-word of the nations is football and not depression, then it is that the average American citizen finds education and entertainment by virtue of a medium that is as modern as time itself, radio. This year promises to be one of the most outstanding ones in the history of WRBL . . . The Voice of the Chattahoochee in Columbus, Georgia. With new faciliies, doubled power, and increased listener "Goodwill admirers of the local station can be assured that the fall and winter season will find programs of outstanding quality reaching them from the studios in Rose Hill. Merchants throughout this community are fast learning that it pays dividends to give entertainment in return for patronage extended them, and radio is rapidly proving itself to be the appreciative

Revelers' Club Postpones Dance Until October 12

Due to the absence of the 2d Battalion on a four day hike beginning on the fourth of October, the Revelers' dance scheduled for October 5th has been posponed until the following Wednesday evening—October 12, 1932. The dancing contingent is reminded that the Revelers will hold a Costume Ball at the Post Gymnasium October 31, (Hallowe'en) at which time the trophys for the Popularity Contest will be awarded. Plans are going forward to make this the most brilliant affair sponsored by the club. One of the two cups to be given is now on display in Pekor's window.

BATTERY "A"

After four years of honest and faithful service Pvt. Hugh Neely who has devoted much of his time and mental ability to the Batalion and its horses, gathered his books and pencil and went back to the little red school house. Good luck Neely.

We have had a number of changes in Ratings lately and we are glad to announce that Pvt. Eldwood Granger, the mule skinner, received one of the ratings of specialist sixth class. Stay with them Granger, old boy! for there will be a private first class open some of these days.

There are plenty of arguments and betting in the Battery about who will win the World series. We have heard Corporal Ruben Rogers say that the Yankees will win, no doubt about it.

Last Monday morning we had another man added to the morning report. Corporal Thompson, who has been away for sixty days has returned from furlough. While away, he was promoted to grade of Corporal. We all hope he will do better than that during these next three years.

Afer waiting, wishing, longing, for a long time Pvt. Algon J. Harvey having made Private first class a few days ago, is ready to announce that he will not buy out of the Army now, but is ready to Retire.

BATTERY "C"

Anyone observing the battery during mounted drill will doubtless notice that there is a lot of difference in the driving of the men who passed the gunners examination as drivers and those men who passed as members of the battery detail. A well known Artillery officer once remarked he could use boys for cannoneers but it took a man to drive.

With the excuse that the N. C. O.'s need practical experience, but with the fact that horses need to be taken out in draft, some of the sergeants and corporals of the battery detail were seen rodeoing around the gun-park. There will be a lot less back-seat driving from now on.

From time to time the QMC has a forced issue of food articles, which no mess-sergeant wants, but the QMC has accumulated a large stock and it had to be moved. We all received the other day an athletic ticket by the same route. Of course, like the QMC articles, most men are glad to receive these tickets, but one sometimes wonders what happens to the about $1200 —thus received by the I. S. A. A.

We are booked for an unusual demonstration for the Inf. School. Our battery will fire both 75 mm and 105 mm guns the same day. All the cannoneers to be used will be from Battery "C" and we expect that this demonstration will show the adaptability of artillerymen. The watering at the stables has undergone the well known variation of efficiency demonstrated at the stables. At least two NCO's and a stable sergeant under the supervision of a stable officer are required to water the animals. One of these bright mornings we expect to water the horses and mules with cups and saucers. We are now making a close study and will prepare some regulations on how to water horses by detail.

ings in the Academic area, and have proevd popular with the ladies, as well as the officers and enlisted men of the garrison.

Good bowlers are uncovered each year, and the competition between units waxes hot. New high scores for units have been set each year since th eerection of the alleys, and this year offers a good chance to all the more popularize the game here.

Many tournaments are held each year during the duration of the school months, much interest being manifest from all points of the post. Competitive scores are rolled each night, with hardly a night passing but what some aspiring bowler does the impossible . . . . rolling a scroe far beyond even his dreams.

the service, never having lost a single day. He was appointed sergeant on his first enlistment, having attained the grade of corporal after eighteen months' service.

Since being made he first sergeant of Company "G", Sergeant Smpson has gained many friends in the company. They swear by him loyally, having only words of praise for his personality and efficiency in the top kick's chair.

His record follows:

Born: April 12, 1904, Riverdale, Ga.

The past week at the radio station brought about an advancement for one of the members of the staff, in that Harry "Happy" Lee, the versatile and accomplished pianist was placed in complete charge of all program arrangements, wherever talent is concerned. Such qualifications deserve consideration, and Happy from now on will be Musical Director, so if you have a radio aspiration and want to take your turn at the old "mike", then get in touch with Happy and make your try. WRBL could use a Vallee or Bernie, and you may be just the one, who knows? Good Luck Happy, old boy.

THE MIGHTY GRUMPY GORDY

The Mighty Grumpy Gordy, in addition to his many other achievements, has recently become a fire eater. He has the honor of not having his rest at all disturbed by flames which destroyed the mattress and sheets on his official bunk.

Last Saturday nightt a squad room ofthe Quartermaster Detachment became filled with smoke. Soon it was discovered that Grumpy's bunk was aflame. There was a dash for water, and bfeore long the fire was checked, with a gigantic hole in Grumpy's mattress and a couple of ruined sheets as about the only damage.

But the Mighty Gordy, who cares nothing about such a little thing as fire, could not have his slumber disturbed. He claimed immediately back into the charred sleeping place. There was soot and water and about half a mattress. But Grumpy wouldn't be defeated.

There is however a man in the Quartermaster Detachment who desires to take from Grumpy one of his crowns. This man is no fire eater. He is instead a fire fighter—none other than Battling Bob Youngblood of Fire Station No. 1.

Batling Bob has already issued the challenge. It is necessary now only to complete arrangements for the big fight. After the encounter is held, the winner will most likely be signed immediately to participate in a main-go on some Tuesday night at the Fort Benning arena.

Some months ago Kid Scott of the detachment issued a challenge to the Mighty Grumpy, but apparently Scott could not come to terms about the percentage of the gate receips.

24th Infantry

Sergeants Homer F. Moseley and Alfred Williams have been appointed Technical Sergeants for the purpose of retirement. We cannot but wonder if there are any other service bands with three Technical Sergeants and two Staff Sergeants.

Now that the concert season is a thing of the past for the year of 1932 the band is hard at work preparing for the next concert season. Hard study is the vogue and music in all its phases is being studied with a view to perfection. Several old overtures and selections rearranged by modern writers have been added to the band library and an interesting winter band school term is anticipated by the band personnel.

With the opening of the 1932-33 Infantry School class the social season was also ushered in which means plenty of work for both orchestras of the Band. A large number of both popular and novelty numbers have been received. The orchestras and the men are hard at work morning, afternoon and night rehearsing them. Both aggregations are on their toes and prepared to render a very enjoyable program.

The second orchestra will soon issue forth arrayed in the splendor of new tuxedos which will do much towards furthering the morale of the men, thereby adding to the efficiency of the orchestra. The first orchestra will continue to alternate between tuxedos and the blazer and tam combination.

Speaking of tidings of gladness; Ask Private Rudd of his relief from detail with the Foreign Legion (Service Company).

We have a new additional amusement to the Company in the person of Pvt. Randall, alias "Snake," the Radio Dial Racer, he gets all the latest orchestras at the same time.

Pvt. Joe C. McCloud, known to the boys as High Private, was recently discharged and he was knocked out on the same night that Mickey Walker was knocked out. But he has taken on his new stack now and is doing fine. Keep the good work going on, Joe.

Pvt. Carrier Benard: known as "Chattering Chero," the great broken field runner, was thrown for such a loss, until his suit was thrown back in the store room.

We would like to know why Pvt. Wright Alexander have been singing the Love Sick Blues.

Our Company beauty contest went over big, the judges voting first place to "Doll Eyes" McDixon, second place "Ducky Wucky" (Fortson), third place to "Toothless Hal" (Foster).

Shorty, the little Mess Sgt., has a song he sings when the the Company comes in. Entitled "Close up solid!" We would like to know if we could get the Duke Ellington's Orchestra to play that song for him.

COMPANY "C"

The company mourns the death of the late Robert Armstead whose remains were escorted to his home (Florence, Alabama) by Sgt. George Williams.

1st Sgt. Curtis and family motored over to Atlanta, Georgia for the weekend and report that they enjoyed a wonderful time with friends and acquaintances.

We will admit that Corporal Washington has been quite an adventurer, having traveled all over the world. But, when he stated that he got a job driving a taxi in Venice—well, the lie was out.

Pvt. Warren received the thrill of his life while he was in one of the Eastern cities. Having entered a restaurant on a certain occasion, he gave his order to the waiter, who in turn bellowed out to the cook "Boil two from behind, and let 'em ride on a bale of hay." Shortly afterward our guest was served with an order of sour kraut and frankfurters on top. He says that he likes the eastern lingo, but everything is the opposite to what they say.

Rialto Books Revue

Here you have the chorus of Happy Ray's Revue, which comes to the Rialto Theater for performances Wednesday and Thursday.

Cinema Calendar

for Grand, Rialto and Royal

AT THE GRAND

SATURDAY, SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Offering "Pack Up Your Troubles," with Stan Laurel, Oliver Hardy, Jacquine Lyn, Mary Carr and others. Back to the front line trenches, to re-live anew the scenes of the greatest war in history. That was the experience of more than 1,000 World War veterans who were engaged to appear in this picture. A riotous comedy episode, well executed by Laurel and Hardy, seen as a couple of misfit buck privates in the awkward squad. Later, they scramble across the front lines to rescue a pal, and come back with a trainload of prisoners.

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Offering "Divorce In The Family," with Jackie Cooper, Lois Wilson and Conrad Nagel. A picture of the laughs, tears, heartthrobs of people we know and understand! Good-time parents go their way—but what happens when a child sees his mothes in a stranger's arms? See this picture that is taken from Life of the romance and drama that strange fate brings to adult lives.

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY: Offering "Nice Women," with Frances Dee, Alan Mowbray, Russell Gleason, Lucille Gleason and Marmel Myers. An involved tangle of young love and money, a sparkling screen play which abounds in situations filled with surprising twists. A strong cast in a thrilling vehicle.

AT THE RIALTO

NOW PLAYING: "Fast Companions," with Tom Brown, James Gleason, Maureen O'Sullivan, Mickey Rooney and Andy Devine. Fast horses—Fast workers—Fast action—in one of the fastest films that ever throbbed a heart. A story of Caliente days that will thrill you.

MONDAY AND TUESDAY: Offering "The Mad Genius," with John Barrymore, Marian Marsh, Donald Cook, Carmel Myers, and others. An astounding, unbelievable, unforgettable picture. His made creed—"Love murders genius! Wipe her out! There isn't a woman alive who wouldn't deceive and hurt the man who loved her—nor the man she loves—for a PRICE."

WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY: Offering "Scarface," with Paul Muni, Ann Dovorak, Vince Barnett, George Raft, Boris Karloff and Karen Morley. A sensational Howard Hughes epic of the underworld, presenting a striking study of criminal conditions in the United States.

AT THE ROYAL

(Beginning Saturday night at 11:15 p. m.)

ALSO SUNDAY, MONDAY, AND TUESDAY: Offering "Down to Earth" with Will Rogers, Dorothy Jordan, Irene Rich and Matty Kemp. An uproarious Rogers comedy plus a straightforward absorbing story of a family living above its means, and how Rogers brings his society climbing wife and children down to earth with his common sense and wholesome philosophy that has endeared him to millions. For the love angle there is the affair between Jordan and Kemp. Rogers, the one man who can still make America laugh, is said to be at his best in this picture.

ROYAL

Star of "Down To Earth" Is Always Occupied with work

Star of "Down to Earth" is always occupied or just "doing things"—10 pt

Unlike most stars of motion pictures, Will Rogers never has what might be called leisure time between scenes. No wait in the filming of a picture finds him actually waiting. He is occupied at all times, either professionally or just "doing thins."

He may disappear into his dressing room to read his extensive mail, letters that have been selected by his secretary from among the hundreds delivered to Rogers daily, some at his home, but most of them through the postoffice maintained by the studio.

At other times, Rogers may be found playing with his well-known rope and demonstrating to a mixed audience, the tricks he has mastered. Sometimes he may be observed in a far corner reading a newspaper, or a book, or, perhaps, writing his daily comment for his newspaper syndicate. On occasion, he may be discovered in his automobile, parked nearby. either pounding his portable typewriter or changing his clothes.

Frequently, during the filming of "Down to Earth," Rogers became loquacious and, during these periods, never lacked for an audience. He is always interesting and witty, no matter what his subject may be.

Rogers is democratic—nothing high hat about him. His associates with stars, with extras, with technicians and is just as much at home with presidents, diplomas and bankers. He is shy only in the presence of newspapermen and newspaper women.

Jackie Cooper Sets Unique Record In His Latest Picture

There was one record set while the Olympic Games were in progress that wasn't a part of those festivities. A small boy established an all-time endurance record by sitting in a Hollywood ice cream parlor for five hours—without ordering a soda or even indulging in an ice cream cone!

The young gentleman with such extraordinary fortitude was Jackie Cooper, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's child player, and it happened during the filming of the candy store scenes in "Divorce in the Family," to play at the Grand Theatre October 4 and 5.

An elaborate Hollywood fountain was used as a "location" for this scene, and Jackie and a crowd of children, some grownups, nad "Sparky" the dog were the dramatic personae. Jackie sat through the different camera "takes" before he was allowed to partake of the refreshments that were being served in the scene.

To further tantalize the young star's appetite there were about a hundred pounds of assorted candies in the "set."

"Gee whiz! I wish I wasn't a star!" commented Jackie as he watched the other youngsters. "They all get to eat and all I get to do is act!"

Happy Ray Brings Revue To Local Columbus House

Happy Ray, character comedian extraordinary will bring his dashing revue to Columbus next week for performances at the Rialto Theater on Wednesday and Thursday.

The Happy Ray Revue has had a very successful season this year, despite prevailing conditions which have forced other theatrical troups and attractions to disband in many instances, while the quality performance of others have suffered greatly.

Ray has notified Manager I. L. Shields of the Royal that he expects to bring his entire company here, and promises a real show for theatrical patrons.

Besides himself, as features comedian, the Revue will show the Brady sisters in tap and acrobatic dancing, the Kenutcky Blue Boys' hot stage band, Blair Camp, southland's blue singer, the male quartette of "Our happy boys," and Clara Barstow's Rhythm Girls Tap Dancing chorus.

MATA HARI

The Story of the War's Most Notorious Spy

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Mata Hari, famous dancer and enemy spy, makes an innocent accomplice of a young Russian aviator, Alexander Rosanoff, who is infatuated with her, in order to get some secret papers. In a jealous rage, her former lover, Shubin, Attache of the Russian Embassy, telephones to Dubois, the head of the French Secret Service, to prove that not only Mata Hari but Rosanoff are spies. In the midst of the call, the dancer shoots him. While Mata Hari is destroying traces of her visit, she hears footsteps on the stair and, opening the door, comes face to face wih Rosanoff..

Rosanoff found himself out in the corridor, his hands held tightly but firmly in her cold ones.

"My dear," (he could not be sure she said "my dear" so low did she speak) "I thought you were to fly to Russia today."

He found himself explaining where he had meant to question, and instinctively in a voice as hushed and hurried as her own, as if really they were both afraid of wakening someone.

"I've had a curious morning. I don't know what to make of it. They came with my instructions. It seems the receiver was off the stand. Then as I was ready to leave, a message came from Colonel Shubin. To call here. I did so. The man said Colonel Shubin was out. But to be sure and call again. Not to go before seeing him. I come here. No one here at all. No one answers. The door is open. I enter. And—and—"

"I don't know what to make of it," he repeated, more thoughtfully.

She was resting against him very gently in a sort of weariness, in a sort of relief, but never relaxing the grip of one hand on his arm. And that hand, together with her nearness and the full regard of eyes lucid, yet impenetrable, that did not leave his face, had a hypnotic effect on him. Insensibly, he felt himself yielding, softening—and forgetting.

"I've had a strange morning, too. Shubin's in there drunk, stupefied," she said. And as he moved, ever so slightly the hand tightened. "No, don't go in. He's not a pretty sight."

"But—but those were his orders—"

"Orders! He has no orders. A drunken whim. He sent me a note, too, that I must come at once."

Looking at him very intently, she said with a sharpness that cut through his bewilderment like a scalpel, "Look here, you had your instructions, had you not? They were important, were they not? You've delayed long past your time. Do you know that that would be called treason to your country?"

"I! I'm not a traitor—"

"No. Not willingly. But might you not be one if you delayed those messages? You know they're important, don't you?"

"Yes."

"Yes. Then go! To let the whim of a drunken sentimentalist keep you from your duty!" She was all scorn. And, suddenly, she was all grave, even sad tenderness. "And will you say goodbye to me?" she whispered.

He caught his breath. "It was you who said it—this morning."

"But do you say it now."

"Goodbye," said Rosanoff slowly.

"You don't want to kiss me?" It was a low statement without coquetry.

"I think . . . No."

"Why, Alexis?"

"Because it's only to make mock of me," he said with difficulty. "It's only to laugh at me again."

"No. Then you won't kiss me?"

"You don't love me!" he cried out.

She remained silent.

After a while, he repeated, "Goodbye," and took a few steps away like a man spellbound, having no real idea of where he was going. When he turned, the dancer stood motionless, her brooding eyes fixed on something far within.

"Alexis!"

"We may never see each other again," she said speaking with a strangely poignant clearness. "If something should happen to you. . . or to me. . . . I want you to know that —that—for the first time I wish my life had been different. I wish—No! Wait, Alexis. Listen carefully to what I tell you. I can't turn my life your way. . . . or take you mine. . . . But I wish, I wish, that—it could be so."

"Mata!"

Tearing herself away from his kiss, she cried out, "No! Go! Go now!"

"I'll be coming back . . . I'll be here on leave . . . "

"No, no . . . you mustn't! Goodbye."

"Kiss me again "Yes, I will. I'll live for that day!"

Kiss me again . . . and go!"

Shortly after Rosanoff had left, Mata Hari also departed from Shubin's silent house.

Her chauffeur, who had waited for hours in the Place Vendome, noticed nothing but that she was preoccupied and paler than usual. She was very late for her appointment. But she was always late. She dismissed him, which was also customary.

Half an hour later. she was sitting upright in a cab on the way to Adriana's smaller casino off one of the main boulevards. All her actions since parting with Rosanoff had been automatic. One would have though that her instincts would have worked for escape at once, and so they did, but escape in the torturous way to which they had been adjusted. To act as usual, to go the dressmaker's, to dismiss her car, and all the while to be escaping—that was her method. Her conscious mind took no part in this. She was thinking not of flight, but of death. Ironically enough, Shubin, who had failed last night to impress her with the idea of death had, by his own death, succeeded. She had seen it now, even touched it. Death was cold and—far away. Where was Shubin now?

Adriana understood as soon as he saw her that there had been a mishap. Not that she was less composed or less assured to the outward eye. But her lips were shut a shade too closely, the skin was stretched a shade too tightly over a head held a shade too high.

When they were in his office, she told him without preface of any sort.

"I've had to kill Shubin."

The dry, stony-eyed, elderly man listened as if it were the most ordinary affair in the world to the account of her morning, beginning with the search and ending with the shot. She did not omit Rosanoff's appearance, out of a sort of bravado, to show him how well she could rise to an emergency, but she did not tell how that had ended.

"You still have the paper?" was his first question.

She gave it to him and he at once struck a match and burned it in the ash-tray. Not content with that, he took the tray out himself and returned with it empty.

"It's of no further use to us," he explained. And he fitted together for her briefly and without emotion all the events that had transpired, cementing them with knowledge which he possessed and guesses whose acuteness she admired, until they formed

Simplicity Rules Her Life

Miss Ruth Etting

Former "Follies Beauty," screen favorite and nationally famous star of Chesterfield's Music That Satisfies Hour, Miss Ruth Etting, leads a comparatively retired life. Cocktail parties and late hours have no attraction for her. With her husband, known along Broadway as "Colonel" Snyder, who also is her manager, she seems perfectly content with week-end trips to some quiet resort, or answering her large fan mail, or selecting the songs for Chesterfield radio programs.

Miss Etting selects her songs with the greatest thought and care. With her it is not just a question of what songs she likes, but which ones are best suited for her voice and especially for the mood of the program. Of course she attends all rehearsals at the studio, but she rehearses daily in her apartment with her accompanist. No actress or singer ever took her work more seriously than Miss Etting from the placement of the microphone to her six hours of private rehearsal a week for her two fifteen-minute Chesterfield broadcasts.

But to get back to Miss Etting's mode of life. She usually retires early; whoopee parties do not play any part in her life; she enjoys the theatre and likes to entertain her friends on motor trips, dinner parties and frequently at "first nights" at the theatre.

She has two hobbies—one reading and answering her fan mail and the other collecting the curios and other gifts that her admirers send her. This latter interest has turned her apartment into a miniature museum where every gift, from ornately embroidered silk pajamas to some simple cooking utensils, has its own special place for display and each one is carefully numbered and dated, with its history attached to it.

As for her fan mail, Miss Etting takes intense pride and interest in it. She reads every letter and postcard and telegram that comes from her fans, who are legion, and she makes it almost a religious rite to answer all promptly and courteously. She is especially interested in the young people who seek stage, or screen, or radio careers, or those who, believing they have voices, wish to adopt the concert stage as a profession. When these turn to her for advice, Miss Etting feels it her duty to answer them sympathetically and yet she never fails to point out how hard is the road of the stage and screen and radio artist.

For a former Follies beauty Ruth Ettings life is anything but that generally pictured by the public. With her it is hard serious work coupled with the simplest mode of living and healthful pleasures and this perhaps explains why Miss Etting is the good trouper she is and why she puts across the intensely human and artistic appeal that she does twice every week in Chesterfield's Music That Satisfies program over the Columbia Broadcasting System.

QUARTERMASTER CAMP HAS INFORMAL OPENING

The new quartermaster camp which is located along the Upatoi had its informal opening on Sunday Sept. 25. Capt. Gee, who has been largely responsible for the building of the camp, was presented with a birthday cake containing one candle in honor of the camp's first anniversary.

A bride's cake and a charming silver bowl were presented to Capt. and Mrs. Lewis, the corps' most recent bride and groom.

The formal opening of the camp, which will probably be marked by a barbecue, will be held in the near future.

Cpl. Reaves' Squad Wins Much Coveted Honor In Regiment

Superior field leadership demonstrated by Corporal John J. Reaves, Company A, 29th Infantry, directing the tactical operations of his men under closely simulated wartime conditions during a series of competitive tests just concluded, has won for his squad the coveted title of Chief of Infantry's Combat Squad, 29th Infantry.

Announcement of the award to Corporal Reaves' squad was made on Friday by Colonel John J. Toffey, regimental commander, after a comparison of the results of the tests in which all rifle squads of the regiment competed. These showed that Corporal Reaves' solution of the problem displayed the highest qualities of leadership and the most approved methods of tactical employment of his squad in meeting specific combat situations. The problem, which was prepared by Captain John J. Albright, regimental plans and training officer, and Lieutenant Edward A. Chazal, his assistant, began with an assumed situation in an attack in which the competing squad was part of a larger force. This assumed situation was outlined to Corporal Reaves, after which he was left upon his own resources to cope with a series of emergencies such as might be expected to occur during a battle. One of these is an unexpected encounter with a surprise target representing a machine gun, and the subsequent action of the corporal in making his decision, issuing his order, the target were major factors in determining the rating given the solution.

Corporal Reaves' squad included Private 1st Class Almas J. Marcelle, Private 1st Class Earle B. Medley, Private Martin W. Benzing, Private Gordon T. Hendrix, Private Robert L. Roffey, Private Jasper D. Wade, Private Hezekiah Williams.

Corporal Reaves, whose home is in Eufaula, Ala., enlisted in the 29th Infantry at Fort Benning on Dec. 6. 1926, and has been a corporal since Nov. 7, 1928.

one pattern. Carlotta, the girl who had committed suicide, had been able to give Dubois only hints of what was going on before her sudden death. Dubois knew that it was a question of Russian messages. He knew that Shubin was involved. Dubois had apparently called on the latter to frighten him, to make him remorseful or, failing that, to trap him, through jealousy, into a betrayal.

"And Shubin, like a mad Russian, fell into the trap, though not in the way in which Dubois expected. When Shubin is found—dead—whether Dubois believes that he killed himself or that he was shot, it is obvious that he will warn the Russian authorities that the messages Shubin had in his possession previously had better be nullified and the code changed. All our trouble for nothing.!"

"I do not see how you could well have done otherwise," he finished blandly. "Under the circumstances, of course. But it is a pity you allowed these circumstances to arise. You say Shubin meant also to involve this young—Rosanoff?"

It was a question pointed by a sharp gleam from the cold gray eyes, and followed by one more direct.

"You are sure that you did not lose your head out of—or—pity—or—possibly something more serious—for this young man?"

"How dare you say that to me, Adriana! I to lose my head! It was necessary and now -- what's to be done?"

Stenographic And Clerical Courses Being Taught Here

During the years immediately following the World War there arose an increasing demand, particularly in the Infantry Branch, for enlisted men who were properly trained and who had the proper qualifications to do the personnel and other clerical work pertaining to various headquarters. Therefore, early in 1922, the chief of infantry at that time, Major General Charles S. Farnsworth, in an endeavor to alleviate the situation insofar as the Infantry Branch of the service was concerned, decided that a school for stenographers should be established where it would be possible to send enlisted men of the Infantry Branch of the service to properly train them for duty as clerks, not only in companies but in the various corps area headquarters and the office of the Chief of Infantry as well.

Having made the decision to establish such a school, the next question which arose was the location of this school. The Chief of Infantry found that he had two places at which the school could be located and over both of which he had control; one was the Infantry School at Fort Benning, and the other was the Tank School at Fort Meade, Maryland. The latter was selected as the site for the school, due probably to the fact that it was more centrally located than was Fort Benning, and also that the facilities for housing the school and personnel were at hand. Authority was therefore requested of the War Department for the establishment of this school and under date of August 3, 1922, the authority was granted, and the school opened its first term in September of the same year. Its purpose at that time was to train enlisted men as stenographers.

The advantages of this school were soon realized by the other branches of the service and, in 1923, the facilities of the school were made available to the Chiefs of all branches through the courtesy of the Chief of Infantry, and the class entering in 1923 comprised men from practically all the branches of the service.

Two courses are embodied in the school, a Stenographic and a Clerical. The curriculum is comprised of the following subjects: Stenography, Typewriting, Secretarial Studies, English, Spelling, and Army Administration. The duration of the Clerical Course is six months and the Stenographic Course, nine months.

The school—the first year of its establishment at Fort Benning, Georgia—has an enrollment of thirty-three students. Many of the students have come from distant posts to attend the school, one student even traveling from Presidio of San Francisco, California.

On Friday evening October 14 the League will entertain with their annual barbecue at the Hardaway's country home on the Talbotton Road. The affair will be characteristic of the "deep South." The barbecue dinner will be served in the traditional style at tables under the trees. There will be music by an orchestra for dancing, be-lanterned boats on the lake for rides, beautiful gardens for strolls, and the League guarantees Georgia moonlight at its most mellow and romantic. Fort Benning society is cordially invited. Tables may be reserved at the Officers' Club. To those unacquainted with the South the barbecue offers an opportunity for absorbing some of the essence of a section for its hospitality and entertainments.

BENNING HERALD

VOLUME II — FORT BENNING, GA., FRIDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1932 — NUMBER 24

TOWN TOPICS

The Herald, we have it straight, would appreciate it very much if Mc-Goofus would communicate with them directly and disclose his identity. It will be just between him and them. (To put it ungrammatical) And why? Well, the Herald has just disclosed that it doesn't wish to publish anonymous matter because it just isn't done in the "best of families."

Lt. Dowdall persists in his attempts to make the Officers' Club more and more like a big business. The latest is the inter-office communication system which connects the office with the chef and can be operated without any interruption from either end. The secretary gave us a demonstration the other day, calling the chef up on the instrument, which looks for all the world like a sample case with a screen in one side. In a moment the attendant's voice came back, so clear that once could even detect the southern inflection—viz: "Yassuh . . . . a' right, suh."

It seems to us that the Flare's little hints to the new writers in the Herald —particularly that part of his first article which spoke of seeing his "choicest subtleties butchered to make a compositor's holiday—was a little ill-timed to say the least, in spite of the fact that the genial conductor little suspected the lengths to which the compositors will go to uphold the honor of their profession. For, lo! when the article came out in print, the compositors had retaliated very effectively—they had a whole circus with the issue. The Literary Digest joke editor would have had an extra week's copy if he had obtained a copy of E. H. F.'s work for last week.

If we know the Conductor, however, the printers are in for a time with his ironical and subtly humorous comments on their makeup ability.

We had intended to warn the newcomers of the post of the extreme unreliability of Georgia weather—having had experience with about twenty years of it. But, we figured that someone would think we were just trying to fill up space, (we are, if you want us to be frank) and desisted. We have a little incentive now, however, and we'll cite one instance to prove our contention. The weather report in Post Headquarters predicted that yesterday would be cloudy and cold, when as a matter of fact, it was perfect football weather. And, anybody knows what perfect football weather is!

We know another tale about the vagaries of local weather conditions, one that might have ended very differently. A young man and his brother were stopping temporarily in Columbus one night about twenty years ago and had registered at one of the local hotels. One of them had gone to bed, but the other was undecided and had not. About that time, a cyclone came up, tore off the corner of their room, deposited a six foot log in bed beside the sleeper and rammed a stick-pin in the head of the bed about an inch or so. Whether the saying, "The good die young," would apply in this case, we don't know, but evidently the other, "Early to bed, and early to rise," came near to

School Instructors In High Demand For Talks To Reserve

Itineraries Arranged For Special Speaking Tours To Be Made This Winter

Officers of the Infantry School are again in high demand as speakers on military topics at branch schools which are about to open for reserve officers in various cities of the eight states comprised in the 4th Corps Area. Itineraries have been arranged for speaking tours of selected officers of The Infantry School who will appear as lecturers at the school sessions which will be conducted during the winter months for the reservists. The plan is similar to that carried out in the last year, which resulted so favorably that arrangements were made for its continuance this season.

Major Sereno E. Brett, tank member of the infantry board, and Captain William Hones, instructor in the first section of The Infantry School, are the first officers to be dispatched on this duty since the close of last season's reserve officers' schools in May. Both officers departed from Fort Benning on Monday.

Major Brett's destination is New Orleans where he will address reserve officers of the 87th Division on Tuesday. His topic will be "Mechanization" a subject on which he is one of the army's foremost authorities.

Captain Holmes' tour will take him first to Memphis, Tenn., where he will speak on Monday evening. "Combat Orders" will be the topic of Captain Holmes' address. Similar lectures on the same topic will be given to reserve officers at Gadsen, Ala., on Tuesday, at Birmingham on Wednesday, and at Anniston on Thursday.

Captain Russel B. Reynolds, machine gun instructor, will deliver a series of lectures on "Machine Gun Units in Battle" at reserve officers' schools to be held next week at Macon, and at Tampa and Orlando, Fla.

Other officers of The Infantry School who are scheduled to address the reserve officers' meetings during the coming season, are Major Thomas B. Catron, Major Richard G. Tindall, Major George L. Kraft, Major Frank A. Heilman, Captain Mark G. Brislawn, Captain Alexander H. Cummings, Captain Walter C. Phillips ,Captain William C. Lee, and Lieutenant Robert D. Murphy.

Test Unit Arrives Here Last Monday

Company "E" 1st Engineers of Fort DuPont, Delaware, comprising two officers and eighty-three enlisted men, arrived at Fort Benning, Monday afternoon. The engineers brought with them a large quantity of bridge material, comprising three types of pontoon bridges, which will be put through a series of tests and demonstrations at The Infantry School, which will be in progress for about six months.

Accompanying the engineers was a detachment of the Quartermaster Corps, comprising two officers and nineteen enlisted men, which is in charge of a fleet of new type army trucks, which are to be tested for a period of two weeks at Fort Benning before going to Fort Bragg, N. C. for further tests.

New Golf Queen and Trophy

Her dream of conquest at last realized, Miss Virginia Van Wie, of Chicago, smiles happily as she poses with the beautiful trophy emblematic of the women's national golf championship, which she won by virtue of her defeat of Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare in the final match at West Peabody, Mass. Miss Van Wie had reached the finals on two occasions previously, only to lose in the last stanza. Her defeat of Mrs. Vare by a score of 10 and 8 was one of the most decisive victories in the history of the tournament.

Officers' Club To Elect New Officers

Ballots Out Carrying Names Of Candidates Selected By Nominating Committee

The results of the annual election of officers of the Officers' Club will be made known on October 14th at the meeting to be held at the Card Room at 5:00 P. M. Ballots containing the names of candidates have already been sent out to the members of the club, by the nominating committee, headed by Colonel John J. Toffey.

Besides leaving space for the names of candidates which may be selected otherwise, the ballots contain the following names of members of the club as for the offices and for membership on the board of governors:

For President—Col. W. B. Wallace, Inf.

For Vice-President—Major T. B. Catron, Inf.

For members of the Board of Governors and Chairman of mounted activities—Major A. V. Arnold, F. A.

For member of Board of Governors and Chairman of House Committee—Capt. E. C. Betts, Inf.

In addition to the tabulation of results of the election, the question of proposed changes in several bylaws will be taken up. These changes require the presence of the voting membership of the club, and these members are requested to be present.

29TH IN FIELD

As a part of the training program for the 29th Infantry Colonel John J. Toffey, regimental commander, has issued orders which have taken the regiment into the field early Tuesday morning for a four day march.

I. S. D. Mess Holds Efficiency Record

Newest Mess Hall Holds Record For Twelve Consecutive Months

A remarkable record of efficiency in mess management was revealed on October 1 upon publication of the result of the medical inspector's rating of the thirty-two troop messes in operation at Fort Benning. For the twelfth consecutive month the highest award was given to the mess of the Infantry School Detachment, commanded by Major Thomas B. Catron.

The supremacy of the mess of the Infantry School Detachment was established in October, 1931, when a new system of serving meals was inaugurated upon the completion of a messhall which the men of the detachment themselves built. The system adopted by the mess embodies many of the features seen in civilian cafeterias, and these, in conjunction with numerous articles of labor-saving equipment, have combined to reduce the overhead and increase the efficiency and economy of the meeing.

The system was designed and installed under the direction of Major Louis E. Falligant, former commander of the Infantry School Detachment, assisted by Captain Leonard, former mess officer, and Sergeant Samuel Stuart, mess sergeant.

Sergeant Stuart has been in direct charge of the kitchen and dining room, of the big mess since its opening, and, during the past year, has maintained his mess at the high level of efficiency which has won for him the highest monthly rating in competition with thirty two other mess sergeants.

Fifteen Officers Enrolled In Course To Start Oct. 24

Two Benning Officers Among High Ranking Officers To Attend Class

Announcement of the assignment of fifteen officers of high rank as students in the Infantry School refresher course was contained in a radio message received at Fort Benning yesterday from Major General Stephen O. Fuqua, chief of Infantry, Washington, D. C. Two Fort Benning officers, Lieutenant Colonel Franklin L. Whitley, 24th Infantry, and Lieutenant Colonel Edwin Gunner, who is attached to the 29th Infantry, are to be included in the class.

The refresher course, which will open on October 24, and will be in progress until November 19, is especially designed to acquaint high ranking officers with the recent advances made in infantry tactics and weapons as a result of research and experiments conducted at The Infantry School.

The following is a roster of the refresher as announced by the chief of infantry: Colonels, Walter Krueger, 6th Infantry, Jefferson Barracks, Mo.; Elbert W. Foreman, 13th Infantry, Fort Devens, Mass.; James A. Marmon, 16th Infantry, Fort Jay, N. Y.; James M. Petty, 34th Infantry, Fort George G. Meade, Md.; Douglas Potts, Recruiting Officer, 2d Corps Area, Governors Island, N. Y.; Grosvenor L. Townsend, Professor of Military Science and Tactics, Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio; and Thomas S. Moorman, 22nd Infantry, Fort McPherson, Ga.

Lieutenant Colonels Edward McCammon, 13th Infantry, Fort Adams, Rhode Island; Rowan P. Lemly, Instructor Organized Reserves, Philadelphia, Pa.; Franklin L. Whitley, 24th Infantry, Fort Benning, Ga.; Thomas F. McNeil, Historical Section, Army War College, Washington, D. C.; Frances C. Endicott, Militia Bureau, Washington, D. C.; James H. Van Horn, Signal Corps, Washington, D. C. Edwin Gunner, 29th Infantry, Fort Benning, Ga.; and James M. Scammell, Infantry Reserve, Militia Bureau, Washington, D. C.

Christie Tank Seen Here In Recent Test

Demonstrations of the newest Christie model tank were concluded at The Infantry School on Saturday, when Mr. Christie departed for Linden, N. J.

On Friday Mr. Christie staged a demonstration for students of The Infantry School, and members of the Infanry Board and Department of Experiment. These consisted principally of exhibitions of speed on tracks and crossing of obstacles. The officers and other spectators were much impressed by the remarkable speed of the new tank, and the rapidity with which it attained its maximu speed of sixty-five miles on tracks from a standing start. Major General Campbell King witnessed the demonstrations and also rode as a passenger during one of the exhibitions.

Gen. and Mrs. King To Entertain With Dance

Major General and Mrs. Campbell King have issued invitations to members of the younger sets at Fort Benning to a barn dance to be given Saturday evening at the Polo Hunt Club.

The invitations were novel and immediately intrigued the imaginations of the young people who are preparing for an interesting and delightful evening.

Accompanying the formal invitation is the following clever verse:

"Now—
"Aprons and overalls, or similar clothes,
"Will be worn to this party, as every one knows.
"So, be ready and wait from 8:30 to 9
"At your home with your date.
"All will be fun because a truck will call for you.
"So don't miss a chance to sing and make merry
"As you ride to the dance."

The invitation list includes the young girls, bachelors and young married couples on the post.

MRS. GUNTHER HONOR GUEST AT DINNER

Maj. and Mrs. Henry Terrell, Jr. were the hosts at dinner last Saturday night at the Country Club as a compliment to their mother, Mrs. Harry Gunther of San Antonio, Texas. Red roses and ivory tapers were used as the effective decorations. Maj. and Mrs. Terrell had as their guests: Col. and Mrs. Charles W. Weeks, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Joseph A. Atkins, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Andrew D. Chaffin, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. John L. Jenkins, Maj. and Mrs. Maurice A. Welty, Maj. and Mrs. Herbert A. Wadsworth, Maj. and Mrs. Elbert J. Lyman, Maj. and Mrs. Frederick McCabe, Maj. and Mrs. Emil W. Leard, Maj. and Mrs. Lloyd H. Cook, Maj. and Mrs. John S. Switzer, Maj. and Mrs. Phillip S. Wood, Capt. and Mrs. George S. Wear, Capt. Arnold J. Funk, Capt. Leslie W. Brown, Capt. George J. Forster, and Lieut. Lyman Munson.

Hardaway Hall To Be Scene Of Charity Barbecue Friday, October 14th

All who are interested in attending an old-fashioned Southern barbecue will do well to investigate the one which the Columbus Community Service League will hold on October 14th at Hardaway Hall, the country place of Mr. and Mrs. Hurt Hardaway, Jr., on the Warm Springs Road.

This estate lends itself admirably to such an occasion as this, containing as it does within its boundaries beautiful pine groves, sunken gardens and a picturesque lake. These natural beauties combined with the full harvest moon (which has been promised by the League in collaboration with the Almanac) augur well for an unforgettable evening.

In addition to a real treat in the way of excellent food, there will be offered a few intimate glimpses of the freak life of Columbus. There will be music. There will be dancing. There will be boat-riding.

The gates to the grounds will be open at five o'clock. Food will be served to all those arriving before nine, but the dancing will continue for several hours after that time.

Several large Dutch Treat parties have already been formed both in Columbus and Fort Benning. These have been instigated primarily by those who remember last year's barbecue given by the same group and at the same place. Any one at Fort Benning desiring to make a reservation can do so at the officers' club, where tickets are also on sale. It is not necessary to have a table but in the case of parties it is desirable to reserve one.

The entire proceeds of the entertainment go to the several charities in which the Community Service League is interested.

Country Club Compliments Officers And Ladies Of The Infantry School

The Country Club extended greetings and a very cordial welcome to the officers of Fort Benning and their ladies last Saturday evening, entertaining with a beautiful dance as a compliment to the newly arrived officers. The dance, which assembled more than three hundred members of society among army and civilian sets, was the first of the series of reciprocal social affairs to be given by the Officers' club and the Country club.

The ball room of the club was beautiful with its decorations which accented the autumn season in its rich coloring. Large urns held sprays of pampas grass and under the shaded lights were arranged vases of poke berries and fall grasses.

Preceding the dance, dinner was served in the banquet hall, where the same scheme of decoration was used. Guests for dinner were seated at tables beautiful with autumn roses and daisies. At the center table the Country club had as guests officers of the Country club and leaders of Fort Benning.

A color note of yellow and green was carried out with vases of yellow daisies alternating with burning green tapers.

Seated at this table were Colonel and Mrs. Ephraim G. Peyton, Colonel and Mrs. Fred L. Munson, Colonel and Mrs. J. J. Toffey, Colonel and Mrs. Hammond, Colonel and Mrs. Walter Reed, Colonel and Mrs. J. DeCamp Hall, Colonel and Mrs. W. B. Wallace, Colonel and Mrs. Reginald Kelly, Colonel and Mrs. Leary, Major and Mrs. Clyde A. Selleck, Major and Mrs. Catron, Captain and Mrs. Betts, Mr. and Mrs. Robert McNulty, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Foley, Frank Lumpkin, Mr. and Mrs. J. Wright Brown, Mr. and Mrs. J. DuPont Kirven, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Ellis and Mr. and Mrs. Leighton McPherson.

LIEUT. COL. AND MRS. JEWETT SHARE HONORS AT DANCE

Lieut. Colonel and Mrs. Frank F. Jewett were the honor guests Friday night at a delightful dance at the Polo Hunt Club by the officers and ladies of the Special Units of the Infantry School. Before the dance a small receiving line was formed, those receiving were: Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Jewett, Maj. and Mrs. Thomas B. Catron and Capt. and Mrs. John E. Hull.

The Polo Club was attractively decorated with pine boughs and early fall flowers. Dancing was enjoyed from nine to twelve. Lieut. Col. Jewett, who has recently arrived at Fort Benning from Fort Howard, relieved Col. Daniel G. Berry in command of the Special Units.

Thursday Evening Dinner Dance Begins

The first of the series of dinner dances to be held this Winter began on Thursday evening at the Officers' Club. A great many improvements have been made over last year by Lieut. Harry G. Dowdall, secretary of the Club. In order to remedy the crowded conditions of last year, tables have been arranged in the library and in the grill, a mezzanine having been constructed for the orchestra. The bachelors will be allowed to use the Secretary's mess room for their guests. Judging by the number of reservations that were made last Thursday, this year's dinner dances will be an even greater success than those of the previous year. Among those entertaining were: Col. and Mrs. W. B. Wallace, Maj. and Mrs. Phillip G. Blackmore and a party of twenty, Maj. and Mrs. Thomas S. Arms and a party of ten, Maj. and Mrs. Claudius M. Easley and a party of ten, Capt. and Mrs. Burton L. Lucas and a party of ten, Capt. and Mrs. Lloyd Barnett and a party of ten, Lieut. and Mrs. Jesse L. Gibney and a party of ten, and Lieut. and Mrs. Clayton and a party of ten.

MRS. H. H. SLAUGHTER HOSTESS AT INFORMAL TEA

Mrs. Homer H. Slaughter was the hostess Friday afternoon at an informal tea at her quarters to meet the ladies of the 29th Infantry who have recently arrived at Fort Benning. Tea was served from four to six. The recently arrived ladies are: Mesdames John J. Toffey, Andrew D. Chaffin, Elmer F. Rice, John W. Foos, Ray E. Porter, William D. Powell, Edward J. Renth, John A. Otto, Morris B. DePass, Claude B. Ferenbaugh, Carl F. Duffner, George H. Decker, William W. O'Conner, Earl G. Wheeler, Lon. H. Smith, and Henry C. Britt.

MAJ. AND MRS. HEARN ENTERTAIN THURSDAY AT OFFICERS' CLUB

Maj. and Mrs. Thomas G. Hearn were the hosts Thursday evening at the dinner dance at the Officers' Club. In keeping with the color scheme of pink and green of the Club, pink roses, green candles and green mints were used as the table decorations. The guest list included: Maj. and Mrs. John N. Robinson, Maj. and Mrs. Phillip S. Wood, Maj.

Unique Idea Will Inaugurate Dances For Younger Set

A unique idea, which, if successful, will inaugurate a series of interesting and entertaining dances at Fort Benning for the younger set is being developed at present by Mrs. A. H. Dickerson, wife of Lt. A. H. Dickerson, a student in the Company Officers' Class, and Miss Anna Dozier, of Columbus.

The idea now under consideration will gather together the boys and girls between the ages of twelve and seventeen for dinners and dances to be held on a scale similar to those now being sponsored by "grown-ups" of the post. The music, arrangements, etc., will all be copied as closely as possible after those of the larger dances and dinners.

The movement is being fostered in order to encourage the interest of the younger dancers in ball-room dancing and etiquette and, according to those in charge of planning, will prove of educational value while it providing entertainment. The same idea has been successfully developed at several other Army posts, among which are Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, the Presidio of San Francisco and at Manila ,and has proved highly popular..

While the sponsors of the movement have not , as yet, carried it out of its early stages, it is receiving much favorable comment from those who have heard about it; and those in charge are expecting much more encouragement in the near future, when more definite arrangements can be made.

Girl Scouts Begin Work On Saturday For Coming Season

A large number of enthusiastic girls gathered Saturday morning to perfect plans for the work of the coming Scouting season.

Mrs. Henry J. Matchett is to direct the Fort Benning Girl Scouts, who are learning the happiest way to combine patriotism, outdoor activities of every kind, skill in every branch of domestic science and high standards of community service.

Every side of the girl's nature is brought out and developed by capable captains and lieutenants, who direct their games and various forms of training and encourage team work and fair play.

In the near future several national leaders will come to Benning to conduct a course of instruction for Girl Scout leaders.

At the meeting on Saturday, Mrs. Matchett introduced the troop leaders for this year and after a song of greeting by the Scouts, a receiving line was formed and each leader given a personal greeting.

Mrs. Thomas W. Brown as captain and Mrs. Herbert A. Wadsworth as lieutenant will direct the Cardinals.

Mrs. Paul Kellam will serve as Captain and Mrs. Frank A. Heilman as lieutenant of the Daffodils.

A new troop is being organized to be led by Miss Margaret Moore as captain and Miss Nancy Stilwell as lieutenant.

Boy Scouts

We held our regular meeting last Friday at the Scout Cabin. We opened the meeting by giving the scout laws. Captain Smith announced that we are to get our furniture and have the cabin fixed up. He then said that we had enough scouts to divide into two troops with Captain Berry as the other scoutmaster. Captain Berry's troop is to have the smaller boys, but we expect to have football, baseball, and basketball between the two troops.

The troop officers were divided between the two troops. The junior scoutmaster, John Buffington, and the senior patrol leader, J. B. Bonham, went to Captain Smith's troop while the quartermaster, Sam White, and the scribe, Buddy Harding, went to Captain Berry's troop.

We played steal the bacon and ended up a tie. Buster Luse's patrol and Bill Pearson's patrol won one and Gee's patrol and Bobby Arm's patrol won one.

Since we started two troops, we will have to elect new patrol leaders and troop officers.

Captain Berry's troop will meet on Thursday at 4:00 p. m.; Captain Smith's on Friday at 4:00 p. m.

We closed the meeting by giving the scout laws.

Scribe,
Forrest Harding.

A Smart Coat for a Little Girl

Coat of Reddish Brown and White

There is nothing nicer for youngsters than such color combinations as brown and white and blue and white; always smart; eminently suitable. Little girls of the smartest homes invariably wear them for general use. Today we show an enchanting coat for a little girl's mornings in school and afternoons in the park. It's of a reddish brown woolen in rough weave with creamy white lapin collar and cuffs. Fur also covers the four buttons that give the smart double-breasted effect. Two inverted pleats front and back, and deep cape-yoke—a charming touch!

LIEUTENANT PEEPS' DIARY

Monday, Sept. 26

To school, a living contradiction of the theory that rest and relaxation should renew our zest and vigor for our work. We are returned to man's second hate "with—satchel and shining morning face creeping like snail unwillingly to school." The quotation is a bit outdated for one cannot, after 7:30 a. m., creep these ten miles without being reviled as a traffic nuisance, or asked to write a short response to the Assistant Commandant.

The whole morning put in exercises with our gonnes, obeying the spoken word of Major Tuffy Easley: "Up and down, up and down." And I do contend that with no other equipment than rifles and shooting coats and a misleading name for the business, the Major could wax opulent reducing over-weight females with these rapid-fire exercises.

The afternoon gone in sketching a square of terrain beyond the Upatoi and I am still unconvinced that my error of running a stream across the road without the aid of a culvert, a sewer or natural drainage is more to be derided than Murphy's for he did discard clinometer readings in favor of optical estimations and did run his main stream uphill.

Anticipation of a mounted sketch on the morrow fills me with no delight, for, lord, I needs must put all my attention upon my mount. I can but hope that the instructor and the horse may agree on the area to be covered.

Tuesday, Sept. 27

J. Joseph Riley runs another late this morning. I doubt not that the explanation lies in the extra time that he must give to his moustache. He did ask one classmate "Can you give me any suggestions for its improvement (the moustache)?" To which the frank one did reply, "Yes, cut it off."

Tuesday, Sept. 27

The mounted sketch today, thanks to allah, turned out to be no two hour compromise between beast and compass, but a movement in column and at a walk. May the recording angel scratch it off the book that I had yesterday considered breaking into the hospital to avoid the event.

We who are assigned to the sixth platoon in riding have problems that others wot not of. But my chagrin at having to be so assigned was greatly assuaged at finding therein a marine, for, upon my word, I had believed them as capable afloat as afoot.

Wednesday, Sept. 28

To Shelton Range this afternoon for our first firing and pleased as much at catching my coach flinching on dummies as he had previously catched me.

Major Easley informs us that the rifle is the soldier's best friend and mine is at some pains to prove it to me by kissing me under the eye, an affection which I cannot reciprocate, especially as it was difficult to convince the good wife of the cause of the "shiner." I do believe that many folk are driven to confirmed prevarication through the increasing difficulty of having the truth believed.

"Air Photo Sketching" scheduled for tomorrow, and I do devoutly hope that it may not be done in the manner of the mounted sketching of yesterday, for I should be sadly at a loss to transfer to paper the terrain observed in an hour's airplane ride.

Thursday, Sept. 29

The "air photo sketching done today with results as suggested by Moore, who said, "I hope no one gets lost out here and needs my map to save himself." It is difficult to decide about this sketching. If in combat, maps were to be made at the speed I am these days making them, I might rightly be executed for aiding the enemy; and were I to take the time needed, the war would have gone and left me there. Ah, me!

Major Easley's introduction approaches the magic of Orpheus' lute, for not only do his animate subjects obey his "Up and down," but today I did find that the inanimate bull's eyes do so as well. It may well be that the idea will eventually spread to the target operators.

Somewhat mystified to account for the excessive traffic in Fort Benning streets until it dawned upon me that this day is payday.

To Gordon Field at eleven a. m. to witness Mr. Christie's new tank attain a speed of a mile a minute without as much oscillation as an escort wagon passing in revies on the same ground. The scythed chariots of Cyrus have been stepped up. It was easy to imagine this flying phantom in combat, spitting fire from one-pounder and machine guns, and the thought did mind me of a story, current in my youth when fire-fighting apparatus was horse-drawn and the engine was stoked with coal. Two Irishmen were spending their first night in a hotel in a large city. Wakened by gongs and whistles, Mike (the same one, but younger then) rushed to the window. "Pat," he called, "come quick! They're movin' hell! Two loads have gone by already!"

A member of the Advanced Class did vouchsafe the comment that he would like to drive the thing, tracks and all, down a street filled with road hogs—a most unchristian desire concurred in by most of us.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

Unnecessary Illness in Children

All parents should take special precautions to protect their children from unnecessary illness.

Diphtheria can be absolutely prevented. Toxin-antitoxin or toxoid treatment given to all children after the age of six months will protect your child from this dread disease.

Immunity does not always last, so the child should be tested every year and the treatment repeated if needed.

Smallpox is prevented by vaccination. A six months' old baby is not too young for this treatment. It should be repeated every few years, and always in the presence of an epidemic.

Common colds can be avoided. The younger the child the greater the need of its being kept away from older individuals who may carry disease. Teach your children to avoid those who cough or sneeze.

Tonsils often become diseased. Diseased tonsils hold germs which cause attacks of tonsilitis, or which may be carried to other parts of the body and cause a serious sickness. Adenoids, growths in the back of the throat where the nose and throat join, stop up the nose and make the child breathe through the mouth. These children are backward because of deafness. A running ear is dangerous. The only cure for adenoids is an operation. Diseased tonsils may be treated or removed.

In early childhood it is only a short step from a mild sickness to a serious one. It is therefore better to call the doctor for what may prove trivial ills rather than chance a twenty four hour neglect of a dangerous one.

In The Mirror

By Mollie Heilman

In a browsing mood the other day we strolled through the school library and talked to Sgt. Frank P. Crosby, who loves the 18,000 volumes so much that he has handled them for 10 years.

You can find out more intimate things about men in a library than you can by talking to them. For instance, Napoleon's Josephine is the most popular woman in the library. The book, "Josephine, The Great Lover," has been in constant circulation for two years. That is, it has never even seen a shelf, it's so in demand.

All the 18,000 volumes are nonfiction, with the exception of two sections of fiction which are almost nonfiction anyhow as they are based on historical facts.

The newest books are: "The Dandy Hun" by Konstantin Maglic; "Five Years Hard" by Brig. Gen. Crozier; "In The Line, 1914-1918." by Georg Bucher. All you will notice, are on the war.

Thirty-five books circulate a week, but next week Sergeant Crosby expects that number to rise to 100, as that is monograph week at the school.

Officers at Benning have a preference for psychology when they pick their own reading. If they can't get psychology, they go in for travel. And next in line of preference, according to he calls for the books, are languages and mathematics (of all things for light reading.)

The most popular of the new books include "More Merry Go Round," "The Education of a Princess" and "A Princess in Exile." Among the magazines: "The Infantry Journal," first; "The Army-Navy Register"; "The Literary Digest" and "Time." The library boasts magazines from England, France, Germany and Canada, too.

Something you'd never have known if we hadn't investigated: the library has three very rare military books that are never put in circulation. You can't get to them unless you are a Brigadier General or the President of the United States. One of them, published in 1794, contains the first drill regulation of the United States army. It was written during the Revolutionary War by a German who turned American. The oldest was printed in 1692 and is the second edition of a military journal. And then there is one from 1793 on "The Military Antiquities of the Romans in Britain, written by Major Gen. William Roy and published by the Society of Antiquities of London.

The most encouraging note in the whole library (that is, encouraging for the men), is the fact that the popular new book, "Seven Splendid Sinners," is written entirely about women. Does that prove anything?

And just to add a note of cheer to this statistical column, we wonder if you've heard of the tank school man, having his dinner of ham sandwiches out in the hills, who called out to an officer-friend to be more careful when he stepped over his lunch so recklessly in his number 12's. The careless stepper answered by saying that if he demolished a sandwich he'd give his brother officer one of his lettuce sandwiches. To which the ham-eater retorted: "I want to do more than graze this noon, thanks."

"Better be damned than mentioned not at all."

TYPESETTER'S FIELD DAY

In the last issue, our item on the possibilities of the Rick-Rack as an antidote for official, departmental and congressional predilection for too much concentrated thinking on what to do to the army appeared in a slightly mangled form. Possibly the inspired compositor feared a Congressional investigation. At any rate, he made our remarks perfectly meaningless and harmless by substituting for our conclusion a patchwork collection of sentences evidently taken from the society column, organization notes and news of the day. The result was a perfectly unintelligible potpourri which, to the compositor, undoubtedly appeared to be quite in keeping with the character and quality of our weekly effort. What became of our conclusion we were unable to discover. Possibly it was included in the Mata Hari serial. If so, we shall never know.

What the typographer did to us, however, was nothing compared to his headline reference to the Community Service League of Columbus as an "ACTIVE LOCAL GOOP". We know several prominent young women of the neighboring metropolis who aren't going to like this at all.

BARBECUE DE LUXE

Speaking of the Community Service League reminds us that we must not forget to make our reservations for their forthcoming "deep south" barbecue on the Hardaway estate. We attended this event last year and found it quite up to specifications. The food was excellent, the setting beautiful and the company delightful.

The advance notice of the party speaks of "be-lanterned boats on the lake" and "beautiful gardens for strolls"; it also states that the league "guarantees Georgia moonlight at its most mellow and romantic." Disregarding the syntax—it is probably just another typographical idiosyncrasy anyway—we hasten to do our bit for sweet charity by inviting the attention of those romantically inclined to the fact that the management is offering a lot for one dollar.

The advantage of informal alfresco soirees over the more or less formal inside functions like Biglerville dances are generally appreciated by the discriminating—witness the popularity of properly conducted picincs—and the Service League Barbecue is held in the midst of truly inspiring surroundings. To one arriving in a proper mood of appreciation, the scene takes on something of the appearance of a pagan festival. Personally, we delight in a background which is reminiscent of Greek mythology—"Better be a worm and feed on the mulberries of Daphne than a king's guest"—but those who adhere to more orthodox beliefs should find the picturesque setting no less attractive than we do. Indeed, these have a famous precedent for enjoying Hardaway grounds. Does not Genesis tell of the "Lord God walking in the garden in the cool of the day". Pagan, Mohammedan, or Christian, you cannot fail to take delight in the beauty of the place. Only an orthodox Jew who draws the line at barbecued pig need refrain from attending on religious grounds.

As for the promised moonlight, what a break for lovers—especially those who have found the object of their adoration obdurate. Take the girl to the party and trust that Shakespeare knew his women when he said:

"The chariest maid is prodigal enough,
If she unmask her beauty to the moon."

There will be music, dancing and special features which promise good entertainment for those who are not too much enamored of the animate and inanimate beauties on every hand to bother with such shallowness. It is whispered that Tracy Davis, big Insurance Wizard of Columbus and Fort Benning, is under contract to impersonate one of the "Home Town Freaks" and other local celebrities are to be similarly featured.

Incidentally, the proceeds of the evening go to carry on the charitable work of the League. It is a real depression opportunity. A genuine southern barbecue dinner, glamorous surroundings, dancing, side shows, and the satisfaction of knowing that the money for which you have received full value goes to a worthy charity. Flare fans who would fain gaze upon us in our lighter moments will find us on the grounds on October 14 from 5:00 to 9:00 and for some time thereafter. We expect to be in a good humor and autograph seekers will find us quite approachable. We may even lend an attentive ear to prospective Advanced Class monographers who want to make a favorable impression on the Fourth Section.

HOW THEY STAND IN THE WRONG SHOWER LEAGUE

One of our delayed reportorial activities since getting back to Benning was to inquire as to the status of the great wrong shower contest which was at a critical stage just prior to our departure in July. Sports enthusiasts will recall the exciting afternoon when Mrs. Sutherland and Lady Lucy Williams first tied the score and then broke the tie. It was about that time that we seriously considered giving up our academic leave and sticking around. The way things were going then, we felt inspired to try out for a place on the men's team.

Returning to Benning, we immediately sought an interview with Major Lytle, the official score keeper and head umpire of propitious exits. Strangely enough, we found him most reticent and noncommittal. Umpire Lytle's reserve was explained later when we learned from another of our operatives that Mrs. Lytle was one of the only two women who have been credited with a properly authenticated entry of the men's showers during the period of our absence. The identity of the other lady is shrouded in mystery, but we feel that we have enough evidence to credit Mrs. Robert J. Wallace with the achievement. If we are wrong in this, the error will be brought to our attention. Meanwhile, the fact remains that two women did enter the men's showers and both penetrated sufficiently far into the interior to be reasonably certain that they had not surprised a bevy of water nymphs.

Expert judges claim that they can tell how far a lady gets before discovering her error by the pitch of Topographer Bloomquist reports that this year's Freshman Class is made up of serious, earnest and ambitious young officers, and that their work has been conspicuously free of the acts of vandalism practiced by last year's hoodlums.

We personally know the capabilities of several Fun Loving Rover Boys in the Company Officers' Class, and cannot understand the listless apathy with which they are facing that time-honored old Benning custom, practical joking.

This column contemplates a series of instructive articles on How to Get at Benning, covering among other subjects: Blackpowder in Ash Trays: When to Burn Your Classmate's Map: Pine Cones and How to Throw Them: Tear Gas and the Ventilating System; Locking 30 Men in a Railroad Car; Etc., etc., etc.

MATA HARI

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Mata Hari, famous dancer and enemy spy, makes an innocent accomplice of a young Russian aviator, Alexander Rosanoff, who is infatuated with her, in order to get some secret papers. In a jealous rage, her former lover, Shubin, Attache of the Russian Embassy, attempts to telephone Dubois, the head of the French Secret Service, and prove that not only Mata Hari but Rosanoff are spies. The dancer shoots him, then disposes the gun so as to make it appear suicide. At this point. Rosanoff, ordered to fly back to Russia with messages, comes to see Shubin. Mata Hari persuades him not to enter and at last admits that she loves him. She goes for advice to Adriana, guiding mind of the enemy operatives.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

IN HIDING

Whatever Adriana believed, he kept to himself, shunning confidantes, women and satellites like the plague he said they were. He had a routine so regular, so seemingly innocuous as to have baffled any suspicion. Here, one would have said, was a man with nothing to hide. Else why could he always be found in more or less the same places at more or less the same hours, always correctly attired, urbane, if rather dry, with his gray face and his enigmatic eyes.

The morning he spent at his gambling house in town, the evening at the more luxurious Pavilion. He lunched alone and dined at his own quarters in the Pavilion, where sometimes he had guests. In the afternoons, he strolled on the boulevards, had his glass of beer or wine in various cafes, where sometimes acquaintances would come to sit at his table and chat with him. He appeared to be very much interested in books. He would often rummage among the book stalls on the left bank of the Seine and had a share apparently more for pleasure than for profit in a little second-hand book shop near the Odeon, run by an old woman named Durant.

In the weeks during which Shubin's death formed a subject of gossip and speculation in knowledgeable cricles, anyone concerned with Adriana's movements might have noticed that he went rather more often than usual to this little shop. He paid his visits openly in broad daylight. However, he had the means a his disposal to assure himself that no one was concerned.

After a talk with Mother Durant, an old French woman whose fluffy, snowy hair made a startling frame for her sour and battered face, Adriana would follow her into the rear of the shop where she had her meagre living quarters. Mother Durant would then come out ready to wait on the occasional customers. She sold other things besides books, stationery, and odds and ends of trinkets but kept all of her wares so haphazardly arranged that neither she nor anyone else could ever find anything. Perhaps that was why her shop was seldom patronized.

One afternoon. when Adriana appeared, Mother Durant had evidently been on the lookout for him through the window. She came to the door to meet him in some excitement and Adriana disappeared at once into the rear rooms.

It was dim in there. A clutter of old furniture threw dusty shadows on the floor, and on the wall. A woman dressed in a long, black garment could be seen standing in an even darker interior beyond a couple of steps which led up from Mother Durant's imitation of a living-room.

"Mata."

Adriana had to call her several times before she stirred. She was all in black and had a coat with a fur collar over her arm. Her face had grown thinner and somehow softer. Had she wept sometimes perhaps during all these weeks when she had nothing to do but think and read and wait for Adriana to come with news of the world that she could only see from a few feet of window at the end of the room? Mother Durante had very sharp eyes. And with Adriana the dancer was always cool and guarded.

"Were you going out?"

Mata Hari did not answer at first and then appeared to decide that speech could make no difference to her resolution.

Sequoyah Golfers To Invade Benning

The fifteenth and sixteenth of October will see the warriors from the Lake Sequoyah Golf Club, at the Tate Mountain Estates, Jasper, Ga., crossing drivers, mashies and putters with a picked team from Fort Benning on the Post Golf course. The Benningites will be after revenge this time, having been defeated about three weeks ago by the Sequoyah team on its home course.

The members of the team which will invade the territory of the defenders areas follows: Bob Martin, Layman Hunter, Epps Brown and Morgan McNeel. They will be accompanied by Mr. Luke Tate, Mr. J. Barnette and Mr. C. Armand Thorpe, all officials of the Tate Mountain Estates. While at Fort Benning. the visitors will be the guests of the Officers' Club.

Sgt. Friis Among First Sergeants In 29th

First Sergeant Hans Friis, Service Company, 29th Infantry, is possibly the oldest living member of the regiment. Six of his last seven enlistments have been in the regiment, having been with it at almost all of its various stations.

During the World War, Sergeant Friis was with the 29th Infantry in

1st Sgt. Hans Friis

Panama, and later moved with the regiment to Camp Beauregard, La. Part of his time during the Spanish American War was spent at Fort McPherson, Georgia. In all of his enlistments but two, he was discharged as a non-commissioned officer, with grade above corporal in all except one of those.

His record is as follows:

29th Inf.

HQ. CO., 29TH INFANTRY

Pfc. Commander and Corp. Easley took a trip down to Clio, Alabama, the last week end. This was Commander's home town. He must have fallen for some of those queens down here for he had just come back from a 60 days' furlough last week. It is rumored that Corporal Easley is going back to Clio.

We are all glad to see our top kick Houghtby back on the job as first sergeant. The Company had a barracks inspection by the Regimental Commander last Saturday and the company was in its usual high state of police, and we feel confident that Headquarters company will be first amongst the Headquarters companies.

An open invitation is extended to all to visit our day room which we believe is the finest in Fort Benning.

Headquarters Cmopany is staying back from the Regimental Hike around the reservation but is sending 11 men of the company and the Regimental Band, which is composed of 33 men and Warrant Officer Horton.

Corporal Edmunds is in charge of the orderlies and "Red" Burns is strutting his stuff on the hike. He says his feet got sore the first day of the hike, he must have got some sand burrs in his shoes on the way out.

We hope the men of the company are having a fine time on the hike.

I. S. D.

The burden of caring for the empty stomachs of the Detachment personnel has been lifted from our shoulders and now rests snugly upon the massive back of the long suffering Quartermaster Corps. Our mess hall will now be the chow hall of the Ordnance, Chemical Warfare, Tank School, Infantry School Detachment and numerous details that will be attached at different times for rations.

Under the recent changes the Cooks and Bakers School will take care of the chow for the new consolidated mess hall. Captain Daniel O'Connell, Q. M. C., has been appointed mess officer, with Master Sergeant Sidney C. Sprague, mess sergeant. The organizations will furnish their quota of kitchen police to carry on the work of scrubbing.

Sad Samuel Stuart, our former mess sergeant, is taking a thirty day rest up at his old home in the Tennessee mountains. Sam expects to do quite a bit of fishing and hunting while at home. They say Sam was once the champion "coon hunter," (?), of the mountains.

All ambitious hunters of the garrison are urged to attend the regular weekly shoots held at the Skeet Range, each Sunday morning. The range is the property of the Non-commissioned officers' club of the Infantry School Detachment, but the range is open to any one desiring to enjoy the sport of crashing the clay pigeons. Those that have no fowling pieces of their own may obtain same at the range. A gun and tweny-five shells cost only ninety cents. This covers all expenses. Hunters furnishing their gun and ammunition will be charged thirty cents for each twenty-five shots. This is to defray expenses of pigeons and trap setters.

ATTENTION
EVERYBODY

Bad News Goines just ankled in from the Pelican State. Yes Sir, Bad News made the trip from the Mississippi Delta, in the remarkable strolling time of 124 hours. The hike left Bad News on his feet again, but the youngster was still going strong when he crashed the chow line.

24th Infantry

COMPANY "A"

Private Marsh is worried about being put off the Football Squad. He doesn't think it is fair. Lots of us think we are being mistreated Marsh, when we are getting the right deal. Too bad. Eh what. Corporal Sellers seemed to think that you are too light but the boys of the company know different. Things in your head just go wrong at the right time. And don't think of Madame Freeman; why Co. "A" is depending upon her.

Very soon after Private Marsh was sent back to tackle the mules of the Q. M. corrall he saw Corporal Sellers with the big book calling off the names of the men who would probably compose the 24th Infantry's Football team. Private Marsh somewhat down and out after not having heard his name called said: "Since they pulled me Private Yokum just said that he needs three more years' training," but Yokum doesn't seem to know anything about making such a statement.

Everybody gives Company "A" an excellent name but believes that it could be even better if some one could manage to separate the company's favorite twins. Oh well, many strange things happen these days, if you don't believe it ask Private 1cl Witherspoon.

Why Private 1cl. Witherspoon was granted a sixty days' furlough but claimed that he was robbed, and wants the boys of the company to believe him. Of course we believe you Witherspoon, but how?

CHERO.

COMPANY "B"

The Mess Sergeants of Mess No. 1 have adopted a policy of economy. To be assured that the stews and what nots be devoured the cooks pour meat greases of all kinds on the stove to excite the appetite.

Drill days are here again and Pvt. Griffin (Mouth) has contracted sore feet. That's strategy Mouth.

Kid Shadow, (Cicero Spencer) some times called "Death" has been chosen as orderly for the commandant. The Company commander is proud of you Shadow. Soldierly and sterling qualities will always push you to the front.

Some things the company would like to see: (Red Eye) Taylor lose his pipe; (Goo Goo) Collins catch a forward pass; (Snake) Randall miss a meal; (Keg House) Joe White not hitch hiking to town.

"B" Company Gators have been splashing and splashing. but not in a pond. It was in white wash on post and pillars for the coming inspection.

Pvt. Gink Parker was detailed as cook at the Officers' Club Dog Kennells, but could not pass examination for food handler's certificate.

Private Rudd states that he likes football and would like to make the team, but wish there were no trips. We know why Rudd, but don't worry as the boys will see that she don't get lonesome.

The half holidays being over and drills and inspections being the program of the season, the company has settled down to win and keep the Co. Area Pennant and with the able assistance of our exterior decoration artist "Pest" Nickens we should run off with high honors.

COMPANY "C"

Now that the drill season started yesterday, many strange faces were seen in the ranks of the Company. It was noted that the men have not forgotten all that they have previously learned about drill, by their performance of yesterday.

Corporal Atkins is now on the threshold of the door of "Discharge and Reenlistment." Steps out on Saturday as a civilian, and steps in on Sunday a soldier. "Such is life—In again out again."

Sergeant Frank Toomer has been transferred to the Detached Enlisted Men's list, as Sergeant Instructor for the Ohio National Guard (Col.) Such an appointment is rare, and it is hoped that his services will prove successful while on this detail.

COMPANY "F"

In the past we have been tutored as a high pressure organization. At present we have a new Co. commander and we are out 100 percent to show him that we are not overrated.

Something new seen on the Co. Bulletin Board: (Pvt. John Doe—Dirty Bed—1 extra K. P.) Remember that the all day schedule is not in effect and as we are working all day there is no time for extra duy but Saturdays and Sundays and we are sure that you would like to be elsewhere on those most blissful eves. ## Harold Lloyd At Royal Harold Lloyd in "Movie Crazy" to show at Royal Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Cinema Calendar

for Grand, Rialto and Royal

AT THE ROYAL

(Beginning with midnight show, Saturday, 11:15 P. M.)

ALSO SUNDAY, MONDAY AND TUESDAY: Offering, "Movie Crazy" with Harold Lloyd and Constance Cummings. A hilarious comedy that is eliciting praise everywhere. Harold's arrival in Hollywood—the first chance to "act" in the movies. Difficulties, romance. He meets the girl—amusing difficulties. Gains friendship of producer's wife—and at dance with her rabbits, chickens, mice jump from Harold's pockets. Then the finale—the big scene of the picture. The leading man bawls him out—and there's a fight. It's a laugh riot—probably the best of Lloyd's career.

AT THE GRAND

SATURDAY, SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Offering King Vidor's spectacular production of "Bird of Paradise," with Dolores Del Rio and Joel McCrea. A play that swept the world has proven a triumph of the screen. A drama of forbidden love beyond the pale of white men's morals. Two impassioned souls—a millionaire's son and a flaming belle in an island paradise—overtaken by the inexorable law of Tabu in a terrific climatic catastrophe. Her savage kiss condemned him to death, but young love is greater than a tribal Tabu—and love had its way on the moon-drenched shores of Hawaii!

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY; Offering "Winner Take All," with James Cagney, Marion Nixon and Virginia Bruce. He wows 'em with wallops and they LOVE it! It is said to be 1932's big laugh and thrill hit. Jimmy Cagney in a million dollar action-comedy that will lift you right out of your seat with excitement.

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY: Offering "The Unexpected Father," with Slim Summerville and Zasu Pitts. They've got what it takes to make the laughs come in this good old hokum story of a bachelor father and a family named Smythe. There's the charming old mama and the hard-boiled daughter . . . the cute little waif and the simple maid with the heart of gold. A picture that was made for laughing purposes only.

AT THE RIALTO

NOW PLAYING: "The Rider of Death Valley," with Tom Mix and the Tony wonder horse, with Lois Wilson, Fred Kohler, Forest Stanley and Edith Fellows. The midnight pursuit across terror trail.

SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Offering "The Washington Masquerade," with Lionel Barrymore and Nils Aster. He sold honor for the Siren lure of Washington's most dangerous woman. Whisperings of intrigue, books that hinted about romance within the shadow of the dome—but never told before on the screen! Here it is, with all its throbbing, soul-stabbing thrill, revealing the inside of politics, telling its story of passions—in mile-a-minute pace.

TUESDAY ONLY: Offering "When a Feller Needs A Friend," with Jackie Cooper and "Chic" Sale. Your heart will ache, tears and laughs bubble forth, as you live this drama of the boy who learned to be a man. An adult picture that every parent should see, said to top "The Champ" in every way.

WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY: Offering "Safe In Hell," with Dorothy Mackaill, Donald Cook and Ralf Harolde. Flaming, seething, searing. Dorothy at her best! Fascinating woman of fire. Love had mocked her. Life had marked her. The most sensational character in years.

"MOVIE CRAZY"

Audience-tested! And audience-approved!

A label bearing those words might legitimately be attached to any Harold Lloyd picture. For none ever goes into circulation until it has been previewed before several audiences of varying types, and their reaction to it catalogued.

"Movie Crazy," starring Lloyd, with Constance Cummings opposite him, which comes to the Royal Theater, Saturday night, is no expection to that rule.

It was previewed in Fresno, Santa Barbara, and San Diego, Cal., immediately it was completed. As the result of the reactions of the three audiences, several minor changes were made before it was released generally.

There's a good reason for his insistence upon audience previews, Lloyd explains.

"One of the finest examples of this I recall," he says, "was with the early previews of "The Freshman." There was one scene in which the boy went to a big college dance in a tuxedo that was basted, and finally fell apart.

"We built up the situation by showing the old tailor making the suit suffering from dizzy spells while sewing it. We felt that we would not have to go so far as to pull the boy's trousers off completely, and at our first two previews we did not.

"We had a wonderful reaction up to the point where the pants should have come off. Then something happened—the audiences seemed to go cold. It was a matter that puzzled us completely, for we all felt it was one of our funniest sequences.

"After the second preview we had a consultation, and came to the conclusion that we had disappointed the audience. We had led them to expect that th beoy's pants would be torn off completely, and then failed to oblige.

"We remedied this before our third preview, with most gratifying results."

RIALTO

WASHINGTON MASQUERADE

He Looks Like Hoover—So He Got The Role

Its not every man who can be President for a day.

That honor fell to Tom Hackett, Hollywood character actor, during the production of "The Washington Masquerade," in which Lionel Barrymore and an elaborate cast are now playing at the Rialto Theatre.

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer drama of political life at the national capital includes a vivid reception by the President, with the diplomatic corps, high army officers and national and foreign statesmen in attendance. So the problem was to find an actor to play the part of President.

"Find me a man who looks like Hoover," ordered Charles Brabin, the director. In an hour the casting director produced Hackett, who looks enough like the President to pass for him.

HAS ENACTED POLICEMEN

Hackett has been playing small roles in Hollywood productions, usually enacting policemen or detectives. But the prominence given him by playing the President has put him in line fo rbetter parts.

The new picture is a vivid story of the "inside" in Washington politics, with Barrymore as a senator and political power who is lured into trouble by a woman lobbysti. A notable cast includes Karen Morley, Diane Sinclair, Nils Asther, Reginald Barlow, William Collier, Sr., William Morris, Rafaela Ottiano, C. Henry Gordon, Burton Churchill and Henry Kolker.

Lovely Star

Plays in "Bird of Paradise" at the Grand Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

Bird of Paradise" is perhaps one of the best known plays ever produced. The pathetic romance of Luana, a child of nature, who falls hopelessly in love with a white man, and as hopelesly sacrifices her love, required a setting in sympathy with the sublime character of her heroism.

That there could be no other setting than Hawaii was easily apparent to David O. Selznick, executive vice-president in charge of all RKO production. Thus the production wheels were set in motion. King Vidor, a master a subleties and poetic screen pharsing, was engaged to direct and the company made the long sea journey to Honolulu.

If there had been any doubts as to the wisdom of this expensive expedition, they were quickly dispelled. The natural beauties of Hawaii, with its waving palms, its placid, moonlight nights, its verdant, lush valleys, its beautiful seascape and rugged coast line were a delight to Vidor's eyes. There he set up his cameras under the direction of Clyde De Vinna, who photographed "Trader Horn."

Despite the handicaps of seasonal rains, the work of filming this screenplay of Richard Walton Tully's stage masterpiece progressed. Where the play was necessarily static because of the theatre's limitation, the film, immeasurably broadened the scope of the story.

DANCE AMID FLAMES

The barbaric beauty of the primitive Hawaiian mating dance was caught in all its wild, esoterie splendor. Amid a circlet of flames, Miss Del Rio undulates in the ominous night—a pathetic pawn of custom, waiting for some man to brave the fire and carry her off.

Joel McCrea rescues her—braves the menacing circlet of fire—and carries her off to a deserted, neighboring island, free from the dreaded tabus of her people. momentarily free to love the white god who captured her. Then the theme of "Bird of Paradise" weaves its inevitable destiny. Luana's people wish to sacrifice her to Pele, the volcano, for having broken the tabu against mating with a white.

Luana is torn between love for Johnny (Joel McCrea) and the primitive terror or sorcery, and in the end makes a magnificent sacrifice that is a classic in the annals of drama.

LAVISHLY DONE

In production, "Bird of Paradise" is tremendous in scope. No money was pinched to make it a realistic saga of romance. In this respect it is interesting to note that the company hired an entire village of Hawaiian primitives . . . all its occupants, men, women, babies, goats and dogs . . . for the spectacular mating dance scene.

2 Dead, One Hurt On 29 Inf. March

One soldier is dead and another probably fatally injured as a result of an accident which took place Thursday night while the 29th Infantry was encamped near Harmony Church on its practice march. Another of the soldiers who participated in the march was found dead on Thursday night when the Regiment began its movement to Harmony Church.

The accident which resulted in the death of Pvt. First Class Clarence J. Nance and the injury of Pvt. Charles E. Barrett occurred when one of the supply trucks was moving through the tall grass in which the men were sleeping. The driver of the truck failed to see the two men, on account of the depth of the grass and the vehicle passed completely over their bodies before he was aware of the fact. A passenger on the truck managed to stop the second truck of the line before it reached the two injured men.

The two soldiers were immediately loaded into an ambulance and carried to the station hospital, Pvt. Nance dying enroute. Pvt. Barrett's condition is pronounced as critical.

The second death occurred Thursday night when the troops were preparing for their movement toward Harmony Church. Pvt. James P. Collins was found dead in his blankets. having apparently died in his sleep.

On The Q. T.

By B. B. S.

AN OLD ARGUMENT stands that there is no such thing as a person being able to make his voice appear to come from some remote place without the aid of a mechanical device. Lt. Howard Johnson of the Athletic Office should be able to shed a little light on this subject since his experience several days ago with a ventriloquist. We promised not to spread it on too thick, but we are bound to relate a part of that nightmare.

ON THIS DAY, terrible in the memory of Lt. Johnson, two men came dashing up the stairs of the stadium tower in which the offices of the Athletic Association are situated. One of them asked permission to use the telephone to call the M. P. Section, as a crazy man was running wild, and was at that moment mounting the stairs. About that time, a voice from the stairway warned the occupants of the room not to move, or he would "get the whole bunch of you." Again the voice came, from a different location on the stairway. Lt. Johnson was desperate, rummaging in a drawer for a weapon. Up he came after a frantic search, brandishing a short length of iron pipe, ready to defend his life. It was then the noise resembling a pistol shot came, and Lt. Johnson was ready to face the Pearly Gates, with alibis already set for St. Peter's ears, but the ventriloquist could hold it no longer. They all had a good laugh. and the gentleman went his way, to frighten more little boys, and keep the enjoyment of a full life.

DUCKING THE GLARE of publicity, Mr. Grimes of the Post Exchange has been enjoying quite a bit of victories over the pool table route for a long time. Were it not for the rain the other day. which forced us to seek refuge from the deluge under the inviting shelter of the Service Club, we would still be none the wiser concerning the pillaging of purses by said versatile artist.

NOW AFTER ASKING guarded questions here and there, we were able to find that Mr. Grimes is considered one of the best pool shots of the civilian employees of the Post Exchange. They tell us that for a long time he has been hooking them all in the "Kelly" games, with such regularity that it has become a shame.

SPEAKING OF SHAME, reminds us that Mr. Grimes applied this word in pointing out one of his opponents. It seems as though Mr. Wilson shoots rather good pool, i. e., being on the winning side of the ledger often, but Mr. Grimes is of the opinion that he should be known as "Shame Shot" Wilson. Reports disclose that Mr. Wilson has handed Mr. Grimes some of the best trimmings he has suffered at the hands of his enemies, and the sidelines were pulling for just that. Mr. Grimes says that when Mr. Wilson makes a ball it is a shame, always going in the opposite pocket for which it was intended. They all count, though, and that is what hurts.

THE FLARE

the shriek, the violence of the exit and the depth of the blush upon emerging. Personally, we feel that the personality of the lady enters so strongly into the matter as to make all of these tests practically worthless. Some old-fashioned girls would be dreadfully distressed over getting one big toe in the men's foot bath, whereas a thoroughly modern miss or missus, who didn't discover she was in the wrong pew until she found herself sharing a shower, might cover her slight embarrassment by lighting a Murad and telling the guy to move over. Such being the case, the fact that eye witnesses certify that the blush worn by Mrs. Wallace (or whoever it was) was the deepest on record may mean much or little. Her performance, however, entitles her to have her name neatly inscribed on the bronze tablet that The Flare is going to have erected at the exit from the men's showers. All we need before going ahead with the work is a confession.

So far as we have been able to learn, the men did nothing while we were away to overcome the lead of the ladies in this important contest. The score now stands 5 to 2 with the season practically over. The girls are evidently more absent-minded than we men. Or shall we say they are more enterprising? Certainly no one but a boorish cynic would attribute their present decisive advantage to greater curiosity.

HUZZA! FUZZARD AND LEGGE!

At a supplementary convention held last week in the Phenix City Campaign Headquarters, Major Barnwell Legge was unanimously elected as Marathon Fuzzard's running mate on the Progrestatic ticket.

"After lookin' 'em all over," said the General in an interview following the departure of the delegates for their customary hideouts, "I decided that Barney looks as good as any. Most everybody that knows him likes him and once he gets into office, nobody else will never know him so that assures him stayin' popular. A vice-president don't need to be anything else as long as I'm alive and I know a couple of vice presidential candidates who ain't even that—not to mention any names. Barney's got ability, too, only he ain't always tellin' everybody about it like a lot of politicians I could mention. To listen to 'em talk, you'd think they was goin' to make the world over just as soon as they get in office and kick the bunch that's been in out. Personally, I don't see as how it's goin' to help any to kick out one crowd and turn a new bunch loose on the Treasury. That's been out of office so long that they won't have any restraint. My idea is to keep most of the present office-holders in their jobs only I'm goin' to put a few of my friends over 'em to see that we get our cut on the profits of government."

"What are you going to do for the Forgotten Man?" we asked.

"I just got through tellin' you," snapped the General, "I'm makin' him my vice-president.

SOCIETY HEADLIGHTS

As we go to press this dreary Wednesday morning, we hear that Mrs. Chaffin and Mrs. McKinley of the 29th Infantry have conspired with Mrs. Bonham and Mrs. Carl Anderson to hold an all night contract bridge tournament to-night. Light refreshments will be served at midnight and a breakfast of buckwheat cakes and sausage at 7:00 AM will terminate the orgy.

It seems that the 29th is scheduled for one of its famed night maneuvers and the two 29th wives got up this unique social event as an antidote for ennui. Personally, we consider the remedy worse than the affliction—if it be an affliction to have one's husband away for the evening—but people are different. We have been unable to uncover any excuse for Mesdames Bonham and Anderson. Possibly they are going out because their husbands are staying home. If so, we may be able to make a strong case for the defense if we should be retained as counsel.

Turkish tobacco sometimes runs hundreds of little leaves to the pound. In cigarettes it is used much as seasoning is in food, for flavor and better taste.

You know that seasoning has to be used right . . . just enough of it, not too much.

Chesterfield puts in just the right amount of Turkish tobacco—the best kinds—Xanthi, Cavalla, Smyrna and Samsoun. These are not merely blended, but cross-blended with ripe, mellow Domestic tobaccos.

Enough Turkish, not too much—that's one reason why Chesterfields taste better—why they have a delicacy of aroma you do not find in other cigarettes.

ENOUGH TURKISH BUT NOT TOO MUCH

Colonel Wallace Elected President of Club

TOWN TOPICS

A news item that will probably prove very interesting to every West Pointer at Fort Benning tells of the selection of Lieutenant Garrison H. "Gar" Davidson to fill the position of head coach of West Point football for the 1933 season. Major Ralph I. Sasse, the present coach will complete his four year tour of duty at the Academy next June and this season will be his last as chief director of Army football—for the time being, at least.

The selection of Lt. Davidson, as was explained by Major Philip B. Fleming, graduate manager of athletics, is in line with the policy now being enforced which requires the use of former Army players who are on the active list of the regular Army as coaches for football.

Lt. Davidson has announced that he will retain the style of offense and defense now being used by the Army.

Major Lewis, Captain LeToney and the whole staff of the Benning Herald are now heaving sighs of relief. Why? Well, the semi-annual struggle with the telephone book is over, and the much sought sources of general information are now in the hands of the users. There are maps in the back of each one, too, so those people who haven't yet learned the general topography of the post won't ring the wrong door-bell when calling.

We have never stopped to reason it out, but the present season holds a queer fascination for us that no other time of the year engenders. Probably the others are just as good, maybe they're better—it all depends on the point of view, but to us, the Fall is far and away the most interesting, romantic, and delightful season of the year. It is difficult to describe how it affects us, principally because we've never been able to write poetry, not even doggerel. And prose doesn't lend itself readily to descriptions of anything that affects one so profundly as we are aected by the Autumn. For this reason we won't attempt to tell you how we feel about it, and just leave it up to you to take it the way you please.

Trucks Are Tested Over Hunt Course

A fleet of six experimental trucks, under the direction of Captain Burnap, were tested over the Hunt Course Wednesday morning. The fleet was accompanied by a Chevrolet truck and a Dodge four-cylinder used for cross-country purposes and familiarly termed the "puddle-jumper." Maj. General King, attended by several officers, witnessed the exhibiton on horseback. The trucks left a few minutes after nine o'cock and finished approximately two hours later after overcoming the numerous obstacles located on the ten-mile course.

Although only six trucks made the trial run, the entire fleet numbers fifteen, all of which the Advanced Student Class had the privilege of viewing early Thursday afternoon. The weight of the trucks varied from the smallest, weighing ten thousand seven hundred pounds, to the largest, which weighed seven and a half tons. All were capable of enormous capacity. Three different kinds of motors were installed in the trucks, namely, a Duesenburg motor, which is able to produce a maximum speed of one hundred and ten miles an hour on a good road, a Lycoming motor, the type of motor used by a large percentage of the bus lines, and several Hercules motors, renowned for their ability to withstand punishment. All the trucks had eight forward speeds, four in low range gear and four in high range. Each truck had two gas tanks holding as much in some cases as seventy gallons of gas in each tank, and all the trucks were equipped with air brakes save the one possessing the Duesenburg motor which had hydraulic brakes.

In the course of the trial run, the trucks exhibited great power. The experiment not only sufficed to test the calibre of the trucks but also the ability of their passengers to withstand a certain amount of punishment. The obstacles, which were numerous, took the form of ditches or hills.

Maj. Gen. Fuqua To Visit Benning

Major General Stephen O. Fuqua, Chief of Infantry, will be an official visitor at Fort Benning late this month, according to information received by Major General Campbell King, commandant of the Infantry School, from Washington, D. C.

According to present plans, General Fuqua will arrive in Columbus on the evening of October 25, 1932, and will proceed directly to Fort Benning, where he will be the guest of General and Mrs. King at the Commandant's quarters. General Fuqua will remain at the Infantry School until the afternoon of October 28, when he will depart for Washington. During his sojourn at Fort Benning General Fuqua will witness a number of demonstrations, and will inspect various activities of the School.

Glee Club Holds Initial Meeting

The Fort Benning Glee Club held its initial meeting of the current season last Monday evening at seven-thirty, the members of the organization convening in the Club rooms in Biglerville. Prospects for the coming year were exceptionally bright with over fifty members present, about one-third of whom belonged to the Glee Club last year. The membership is expected to increase gradually.

After the Club had concluded its singing exercises at the meeting last Monday, refreshments were served and plans for the future were discussed. The annual play, which is presented under the auspices of this organization, has not as yet been selected. It is definitely known, however, that Mrs. Wadsworth will act in the capacity of dramatic directress with Mrs. Pilet as her assistant, while Professor E. H. Vondereau will be the musical director of the production. Last year, the Glee Club, under the capable leadership of Colonel Reed, presented "The Red Mill," which proved to be a smashing success. Among those who attended the last meeting were several members of the Red Mill cast—Mrs. Gaillard, Mrs. Reeder, Capt. Bloomquist, Lieut. O'Flaherty, and Chaplain Howard.

Besides the large number of old members, there is an abundance of new talent enrolled in the membership of the Glee Club. In the course of the evening, Mrs. Eley rendered several beauiful solos. She is a musician of considerable training and experience, having been with the San Carlos and German Grand Opera Companies at different intervals in her career.

Maj. Leard, the President of the Glee Club, expressed himself as confident that the organization will have a very successful year.

General King Is Honorary Head

Major General Campbell King, commandant of The Infantry School, has been named honorary chairman of the council for boys' activities, the organization of which was announced at Fort Benning on Saturday.

Lieutenant Colonel Frank F. Jewett is chairman of the council, whose other members include Lieutenant Colonel Joseph W. Stillwell, Lieutenant Colonel Homer H. Slaughter, Major Maurice D. Welty, and Major Thomas S. Arms.

Lieutenant Colonel Charles H. Bonesteel is chairman of the court of honor, Lieutenant Robert P. Foster is treasurer, and Captains Phillip T. Fry and Clough F. Gee are in charge of athletics.

Major Edwin F. Harding and Captain Francis H. Wilson, were named as members of the publications committee.

Two troops of Boy Scouts and four Dens of Cubs are in process of formation at the post. Captain Walter B. Smith has been named as Scoutmaster of Troop 11, with Lieutenant

New President

COLONEL WILLIAM B. WALLACE

Colonel William B. Wallace, who is in charge of the Tank Section, of the Infantry School, the recently elected president of the Officers' Club. Colonel Wallace was elected by the members of the Club and his election was announced at the meeting held Friday night.

Hunt Club Opens Season On Sunday

A gala opening of the 1932-33 program of The Infantry School Hunt Club is scheduled for Sunday, Oct. 16th, when a drag hunt will be held. The field will assemble at the Polo Hunt Club at 7:30 a. m., and according to an announcement of the officials in charge, will move out promptly at eight o'clock.

Major General Campbell King, commandant of the Infantry School, is expected to be present to assist in launching the Club's new seasonal program. While the field is assembling, and until it rides off on its quest, the crisp morning air will resound with the notes of lively hunting tunes played by the 29th Infantry band. Upon the return of the huntemen, at 10 o'clock, a breakfast will be served at th Peolo Hunt Club.

Sunday's drag hunt is the first of a number of meets which the Club has scheduled for the coming season, and which, hunt officials state, will make this attractive recreational sport more popular than ever. The Hunt Club staff which has drawn up the season's schedule is composed of Major Sereno Brett, Major Archibald V. Arnold, Captain Sidney H. Negrotto, Captain John G. Brackenridge, Captain John A. Blue, Captain Joseph A. Nichols, Mrs. Frank V. Schneider and Mrs. Elliott Watkins.

Hunting, or riding to hounds, as the activites promoted by the Infantry School Hunt Club are more properly called, is regarded by many not only as an exhilarating form of sport, but animportant adjunct to the training of an army officer.

But let some of its devotees tell something of the lure of the hunt. The following account, outlining the Club's projected plans and discussing rules of the hunt, has been prepared by the hunt committee.

Succeeds Colonel Walter L. Reed As Club Leader

Colonel William B. Wallace, who commands the tank section of the Infantry School, was elected to succeed Colonel Walter L. Reed as President of the Officers' Club, for the term 1932-1933, at the annual membership meeting of the Club held last evening. Colonel Wallace assumes the duties of his office immediately. Colonel Reed is soon to leave for his new post, Fort Howard, Maryland.

Colonel Wallace is taking over the Presidency of the Club at one of the most momentous eras of its existence. The work on the new club building is progressing rapidly and favorable reports on the work show that its completion may be expected within about a year's time. In addition to the fact that a new club-house is being built, great strides have been made in the management of the club under the past secretary, Capt. E. L. Brine and the present secretary, Lt. H. G. Dowdall, serving under the direction of the retiring president, Colonel Reed. The fact that the Club has been put on a more business-like basis has assisted greatly in rendering a much more comprehensive service to its members, and the entertainments put on by the Club have been of the greatest importance in the social life of the post.

The wide range of activities which the Club handles is one of the principal reasons for the great amount of work necessary in order to keep its machinery running smoothly. In addition to the purely social activities fostered by the organization, it offers many conveniences to its members, the principal one of which is the Grill, located in the main building. The cuisine and service of the Officers' Club Grill place it among the best in this section and the officials of the Club have striven to put it on a paying basis and at the same time render a service that will be unexcelled by any other of this or nearby communities.

The other officers whose names were listed on the balots were all elected by the members. These were candidates for the vice-president and for membership on the Board of Governors to fill the positions of Chairman of Mounted Activities and Chairman of House committee. The candidates, Major T. R. Catron, Major A. V. Arnold and Captain Edward C. Betts, in the order named, will all fill these positions during the coming year. The nominating committee which formulated the ballots was headed by Colonel John J. Toffey, Commanding Officer, 29th Infantry.

In addition to the above-named members of the Board of Governors, four other members will serve on this Board. One is the personal representative of the Commandant, Major General Campbell King, at all board meetings. Major H. B. Lewis has been selected to succeed himself in this position. The others are selected by the members of the three classes from the classes of the Infantry School. These will be elected prior to Oct. 25th and will assume their duties immediately.

GENERAL KING ELECTED HONORARY CHAIRMAN OF BOY ACTIVITY COUNCIL

LeRoy W. Krauthoff as assistant. Captain Kearie L. Berry has been appointed scoutmaster of the new troop, which has not yet been assigned a number. Lieutenant Edward G. Winston has been named as assistant.

Captain Norman D. Cota has been appointed Cub Master, with Lieutenant Jack G. Pitcher and Master Sergeant John S. Stanford, as assistants.

A meeting of the court of honor was scheduled to take place Saturday, and other meetings are scheduled for each month until June.

HUNT CLUB OPENS SEASON ON SUNDAY

Purpose: a. The purpose of the Infantry School Hunt is to provide an interesting and invigorating form of recreation for the officers of the garrison and their families; to afford the opportunity for enjoying the pleasure of watching hounds work a scent; to improve ones qualities of eadership, courage, initiative and endurance; to afford the opportunity for studying the vast terrain of the reservation; to develop skill in cross-country riding; and to make social contacts in the gatherings incident to the hunt.

Hunting to hounds is not only one of the oldest sports known to man but is one that is probably siesasoL., but is one that is peculiarly well suited to the military service. The ancients laid great stress on this sport as a school for war, and the custom of combining the chase with war is still prevalent in many of the armies of the world. This is so, perhaps, because the physical and mental requirements of a good huntsman are strikingly similar to those required for military service. The pomp and pageantry that usually attends the chase is the outgrowth of customs developed through the cenuries and while they are still a part of the present day hunt, they must not detract from the art of the sport itself.

Season: The hunting season will begin on Ocober 16, and regular hunts will be held as given in the "Schedule of Meets" distributed to all members of the Officers' Club.

Eligibility: All members of the Officers' Club, their families and guests are eligible to participate in hunts, and are cordially invited to take an active part in this sport.

Classes of Hunts: All hunts will be organized into Junior and Senior Hunts according to the skill of the riders.

Junior Hunts will be conducted so that novice riders including ladies and children can ride with safety.

Senior Hunts will be such that only well qualified riders will be permitted to ride. Novice riders and children under 16 years of age are forbidden to ride in the senior hunts. All officers who have completed the course in equitation at the Infantry School are qualified for the senior hunts. A list of all other qualified riders will be published from time to time by the Master of the Hunt.

All hunts, unless otherwise noted in the "Daily Bulletin" will be Junior Hunts.

Groom Fee: A groom fee of fifteen cents will be made for each mount signed for on the hunt list, and will be charged to officers' account at the Officers' Club.

Catering Charge: A catering charge of ten cents will be made for coffee and doughnuts served at the start of each hunt.

Mounts: The hunt list will contain a list of horses that are available at the Infantry School Stables. All horses on this list are suitable for hunting. Private mounts may be used, and the horses of the 29th Infantry and the 83rd Field Artillery are available for participants from these organizations.

Precautions: While all Junior and Senior Hunts will be conducted so as to afford the maximum safety to all participants, the attention of all concerned is called to the number of shell holes, wells, wire duds, and other hazards that are encountered in cross-country riding on the reservation. The utmost care must be exercised in order to avoid accidents incident to these obstacles.

Children: Each child under sixteen years of age must be accompanied by one of its parents while riding in the hunt.

Hunt Rules and Safety Precautions: While the technique of hunting to hounds is governed largely by ancient cusoms and tradition, the greatest enjoyment will be derived from the chase, and accidents avoided, by observing the following simple rules and precautions:—

Remember that a hunt is not a steeplechase. The greatest pleasure is derived from observing the work of the hounds. Riding is only a means of increasing the pleasures of the hunt.

Always give the hounds the right-of-way.

Do not interfere with the huntsman.

Do not ride between the huntsman and the hounds. Do not ride ahead of the master.

Do not take jumps or other obstacles unless you know your mount and have had experience in jumping.

If you cannot control your horse, it is better to leave the field. If necessary, a member of the hunt staff will assist you in returning to the stables.

A good hunter is a careful hunter.

Be considerate of other members of the field.

Learn the names of the leading hounds and watch the skill with which they cast for and work a scent .

Do not ride a kicking horse—he has no place in a hunting field. If you are unfortunate enough to draw a kicking horse, keep him away from the other horses.

Do not ride close behind another horseman. If he goes down he has trouble enough without having someone else ride over him. Give the rider in front at least a thirty-yard lead. This will enable your horse to see where he is going and may save you a roll in the dirt.

"Ride your own line." That is when galloping across an open field abreast of several other riders, do not cut across in front of them, for it may cause their horses to fall. If you are on the left of the line stay on the left—at least until the next check. This admonition about cutting across the line applies also when riding at fences and ditches.

Do not crowd at a narrow gap, such as a clearing, a gate, or a panel of a fence. Wait your turn.

Obligations of the Field Towards the Master: The following extract from the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association best expresses what the obligation of the field toward the Master should be:—

"The position of a Master is really a pretty thankless one—particularly in this country where the mystic letters M. F. H. means so little to many people. If a man hunts his own hounds the pleasure derived from that makes for many hardships, but to the average Master there are many days of worry and many bitter disappointments that must be borne and anything that can be done by any member of the Field to help him and show him that his efforts are appreciated will be very welcome. Do not think that because you happen to be a new-comer at the game that he won't appreciate your thanks—or that he doesn't notice that you are trying to help or not to hinder. So as I have said, try to help the Master instead of hindering him, and by so doing you will help your own sport and everyone's else as well."

Football Races Becoming Even More Complicated

BY I. PREDICTUM

With the current football season now in full swing, it becomes increasingly more difficult to predict the outcome of the various intercollegiate football games throughout the country.

THE SOUTH

In the South, Tulane, minus Captain Felts, lost through charges of professionalism, and Francis Payne, star halfback, faces the Vanderbilt Commodores. Tulane should win but it is only fair to say that your prophet ventures this opinion with fear and trepidation in his heart. An upset is all too probable. Tennessee has the edge over the Crimson Tide representing Alabama, but the margin is very, very slight, Auburn, for the first time in many years possessing an eleven of championship caliber, is favored over Georgia Tech., although the latter team must be conceded a good chance for victory. Duke and Florida will defeat Maryland and Citadel respectively. Georgia should take North Carolina into camp, but will encounter a great deal of opposition, and the Tarheels, with their competent passing attack, have an outside chance. Kentucky and George Washington will also be numbered among the victorious elevens in the South this Saturday. Further west, Rice opposes Loyola and will win without difficulty, Louisiana State will defeat Miss. State, and Texas, just having administered a crushing defeat to Missouri 65-0, should win over Oklahoma, conquerors of Kansas.

THE EAST

In the East, Army faces Pittsburgh and will be out to avenge the stinging 26-0 defeat received at the hands of this same eleven last year. Both elevens are undefeated to date, but the Panthers have the edge. Colgate is favored over Lafayette, which held Dartmouth to a single touchdown last week, and Cornell should hold the rejuvenated Princeton Tiger in check. Columbia will have little trouble with Virginia but Dartmouth is scheduled to have difficulty with a strong eleven hailing from Pennsylvania. If, however, the Dartmouth offense clicks in the manner it is capable of doing, Penn will go down in defeat. Holy Cross and Fordham should trample Detroit and Lebanon respectively, and N. Y. U. will defeat Georgetown closely. Penn State will offer little resistance to Harvard. Navy, judging from its more or less sensational victory over Washington and Lee last Saturday, may be expected to win over Ohio, but the warriors from the Buckeye State are quite capable of upsetting the dope. Finally, Yale should succeed in hitting its stride against a competent but inexperienced Brown team.

THE MIDWEST

Michigan's highly-touted eleven, which in its two previous contests caused Michigan State and Northwestern to bow before its onslaught, meets Ohio State, and should take the Buck-

Columbus Club Presents Comedy

The Junior Catholic Club, of Columbus, will present its second performance of "A Full House" next Thursday evening at Chase Conservatory at 8:15 p. m. The play will be put on for the benefit of the Milk Fund, one of the principal Columbus charities.

The first performance of this play evoked much praise for the work of the Club, every member of which has had but very little experience with dramatic club work. The ease with which the cast adapted itself to the action and dialogue of the play were the cause of much favorable comment from those who witnessed its first performance and their second attempt is expected to rival their first.

The Milk Fund, which will benefit from the proceeds of the play, is one of the most active and worthy of the Columbus charities. Its work among the undernourished children of the community has been of great value and has been of untold value in combatting conditions usually existing among the unfortunate people of the nearby city.

Tickets for the play may be bought from members of the Junior Catholic Club or from members of the Milk Fund organization, of which Mrs. Max Rosenberg is president.

Mata Hari

Mata Hari, famous dancer and enemy spy, makes an innocent accomplice of a young Russian, Rosanoff. In a jealous rage, her former lover, Shubin, Attache of the Russian Embassy, attempts to prove to Dubois —Secret Service head—that both Mata and the Russian are spies. The dancer shoots him and disposes the body to make it appear as suicide. At this time Rosanoff discovers her at the apartment of the murdered man. Mata persuades him not to enter and goes into hiding. She later hears that Rosanoff has been shot. Now go on with the story.

"Yes. I was and am going out."

"What's this I hear about this new and complete madness of yours?" demanded Adriana, for once permitting his anger to be visible in his frowning face and intent eyes. "What sort of a fantastic scheme have you concocted, when I have made everything ready for your escape?"

"So Mother Durant got word to you?"

"Of course Durant got word to me! Did you think you would be permitted to go? How Durant, whom I have always given credit for sense, allowed you to inveigle her——"

"I made her!" cried the dnacer. "I'd have killed her if she hadn't!" she went on so passionately that Adriana, in spite of himself, took a step back. "And I mean to go. Do you think when he's wounded—when he's in a hospital—right here—right near me—only a short drive away—do you think I'd let you or anything or anybody keep me away? When he's in pain and calling for me and I think of him and hear him all the while I'm sitting here—alone—in this miserable little room? And when it's my fault! Yes, it is. I feel it. I shouldn't have made him put out his sacred lamp," she said brokenly. "I never should have done that! It was cruel. It's—it's hurt him . . . "

Garden Club Sponsors School At Columbus

The garden school which will be sponsored by the Marguerite Garden Club of Columbus will open from October 17th to October 21st at the High School Auditorium from 3:30 P. M. to 4:30 P. M. The school will be conducted by Mrs. Fletcher Pearson Crown of Decatur, Ga. Mrs. Crown is a graduate of the American Landscape School of Des Moines. Mrs. Crown is especially fitted for her subject of Southern gardening and soil, for being a Southerner herself, has had much opportunity to study at first hand. She will give a series of five lectures, Monday afternoon being on garden designs; Tuesday, Autumn-made gardens; Wednesday, bulbs; Thursday, sowing seed and plant propagation; and Friday, rock gardens. These lectures will all be illustrated and lovely souvenirs will be given. After the lectures refreshments will be served. The Garden Club wishes to extend an invitation to all members of Fort Benning. Tickets may be purchased from members of the club or at the High School, the price being $1.00 for the series of five lectures and fifty cents for one lecture.

Woman's Club To Hold First Meeting Of Year At Polo Club On Oct. 17

The Infantry School Woman's Club will open its active season on Monday, October 17th at 3:00 p. m. when they entertain at the Polo Hunt Club in compliment to the new arrivals on the post, to each of whom is extended a cordial invitation to become members of the Club. Additional invitations have been sent to the members of the executive committees and the presidents of the various clubs which comprise the City Federation, of which the Infantry School Club is a member.

A very delightful program has been arranged that will include short talks by Mrs. Peyton, the incoming president of the Club and by Major General Campbell King, Commandant of the Infantry School, selections by a stringed quartet from the Columbus School of Music and four dance numbers by pupils of the Agnes Harrison School of Dancing.

The guests will be received by Mrs. Campbell King, by Mrs. Peyton, Mrs. C. W. Weeks, and by the Executive Board. Mrs. Neal Johnson, chairman of the hospitality committee, and the members of the hospitality committee will be hostesses for the afternoon.

The next regular meeting will be held on November 7th at 2:15 p. m. at the Polo Club. At these regular meetings the minutes are read and the routine business transacted, after which an interesting program is given. Tea is then served with two members of the Club acting as hostesses.

During the past year the Club enjoyed a series of lectures by eminent speakers who were members of the faculties of various Georgia colleges. Such subjects as Modern Poetry, Psychology, History and Current Events were presented in an interesting way. Everyone who was at Fort Benning last year and heard the fascinating talk by Princess Der Ling was deeply indebted to the Woman's Club for their untiring efforts in bringing to the post such a stellar attraction.

The Literary Section is a branch of the Woman's Club which meets on alternate Mondays and specializes in the reviews of the best books of the current year. The meetings of this section are conducted on the open forum plan and are most delightfully informal.

Last December the Club gave a cash donation to the Welfare Council to provide toys for children of needy families.

Any organization which has, in the past, contributed so successfully to the social and intellectual demands of the post, has proven its usefulness beyond a doubt and it is desired by all concerned that every woman avail herself of the privilege of becoming a member of the Woman's Club for the year 1932-33.

BARBECUE AND DANCE AT HARDAWAY HALL DELIGHTFUL EVENT OF FRIDAY

The barbecue and dance which was held this Friday at the lovely Hardaway plantation was one of the delightful events of the week. Many novel and amusing fetaures were present which made the affair one of outstanding interest. "Barkers" drew the crowds to the "Society Circus" where freaks of all types were on display. Canoeing on the gayly lighted lake was enjoyed and dinner was served from five to nine, after which dancing was held on the out-door dancing pavilion. Many parties of congenial visitors from Fort Benning, Columbus and nearby towns enjoyed the festive evening. The proceeds from the barbecue will be used to carry on the splendid work of the Community Service League.

LITTLE MISS JEANNE PIERCE CELEBRATES FIFTH BIRTHDAY

Little Miss Jeane Pierce celebrated her fifth birthday Saturday with a lovely birthday party at the home of her parents, Lieut. and Mrs. James R. Pierce. Games and contests were enjoyed by the young guests and the main feature of the afternoon was the lovely three tiered birthday cake topped by five pink candles. The young guests were: Bertrand Pierce, Joanne Vermette, Mary Gabriel, Filicon Hornell, Patty Cook, Dorothy Brown, Betty Phillips, Elaine Golightly, Boling Buracher, Mary Louise Buracker.

MISS MOLLY BROWN HONOREE AT TEA

Miss Molly Brown, the attractive house guest of Miss Harriet Atkins, was the honoree Sunday afternoon at a delightful informal tea given by her hostess. Autumn flowers were used throughout the house. In the dining room, the tea table was laid with a lace cloth. In the center of the table a large bouquet of yellow and lavender flowers with tapers of yellow were used. The guest list included members of the young set, their guests and their escorts.

MISS HARRIET ATKINS ENTERTAINS BRIDGE CLUB

Miss Harriet Atkins was the hostess Friday to her bridge club with a delightful luncheon followed by two tables of contract bridge. Miss Atkins had as her guests the member of her bridge consisting of eight ladies. Those present were: Mesdames R. E. Vermette, Clayton Studebaker, George Howell, Orestes Cleveland, James Pierce, James Bowen, and Lynn Brady.

CAPT. AND MRS. POWELL ENTERTAIN AT DINNER AT OFFICERS' CLUB

Capt. and Mrs. W. D. Powell entertained a number of their friends at dinner at the Officers' Club Thursday evening. Before the dinner dance the guests were escorted to the Post Movies. The Powells had as their guests: Maj. and Mrs. D. H. Allen, Capt. and Mrs. J. J. Albright, Capt. and Mrs. W. B. Yancey, Capt. and Mrs. J. A. Andrews, Capt. and Mrs. E. A. Johnson, Capt. and Mrs Hamilton Thorn, Lieut. and Mrs. E. W. Ridings, Lieut. and Mrs. W. M. Ives and Lieut. and Mrs. W. J. Maroney.

MANY ENTERTAIN AT DINNER DANCE AT OFFICERS' CLUB THURSDAY

Among those who made reservations for the dinner dance at the Officers' Club Thursday evening were Lieut. and Mrs. C. T. Skow and twenty, Capt. and Mrs. E. G. Lindroth and twenty, Capt. and Mrs. J. A. Otto and twenty, Lieut. William Deane and eight, and two "no-host" parties, one of twelve and one of ten. The Club was attractively decorated in pink and green, pink roses graced the tables with tapers of green. Dinner and dancing were enjoyed from eight to ten.

Dance Compliments Country Club Members

One of the most important social events of the week-end will be the dinner dance at the Officers' Club Saturday evening given as a compliment to the Country Club members. The two clubs have arranged a co-operative schedule of entertainments whereby the members of one club may enjoy the facilities of the other without the necessity of membership. Saturday's dance will be the second of the reciprocal affairs: the first having been the dance a few weeks ago which complimented the officers and ladies of the Post.

The fourteen life members of the Officers' Club, who are sponsoring the event, hav eall made plans to attend. Several other reservations have aso been made.

Offhand . . . Observations

By McGoofus

Manifestations of a school year well under way: The peak load of morning traffic across the bridge and past M. P. Outpost No. 1 has shifted from 7:30 a. m. to 7:50 a. m. The front-row lads are slacking down on the questions, and bend low while we whisper it—some of them are weakening in their note taking zeal. Locker room chatter is settling down to talk of golf, bridge and what happened over the last weekend.

It is time for all good students to give thought to devising some filing system to take care of their numerous papers. There are so many systems on the markets and so many that may be improvised, that there is no reason why something cannot be found which will suit any taste as to elaborateness. First, there are the systems characterized by simplicity. If the good lady can be inveigled into surrendering a clothes closet to be used in this cause, the problem is practically solved. Each day when you get home from the weary grind, your filing worries can be rapidly dispensed with. Simply dump the contents of the brief case, pockets, and lunch box into the closet designated, being careful to fill successively from the bottom up and the back out. This will insure chronological sequence in your filing. For bachelors living on the post a neat adaptation of this system can be put into effect by substituting the Q. M. desk for the clothes closet. According to available data, the drawers will furnish storage space up until shortly before Christmas, and the clear space on top of the desk will not completely disappear before late April or early May by which time it won't matter much.

They tell us how those of us, including the ones not generally considered "screwy", are sometimes troubled by dreams of falling from heights, being beset by hideous reptiles, or of appearing at some fancy ball in more or less dress. What McGoofus would like to know, in order to add to a scientific collection of data is; how many pairs of yellow gloves and name plates were secreted in right hand breeches pockets at the Commandant's reception?

Girl Scout Notes

On Saturday, October 1st, we Scouts held our "Grand Rally," the first meeting of the year. Because of the big increase in the number of girls here this year, we now have three troops: the Cardinal Troop under Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Wadsworth; the Daffodils with Mrs. Kellam and Mrs. Heileman; and the newly created Pine Tree with Miss Moore and Miss Stilwell. With such a fine assortment of leaders and the wonderful elements of interest and cooperation in the girls, this Scout year ought to be the most successful one we have had.

CARDINAL TROOP

The first Cardinal meeting was held at the cabin on October 4th. The troop was divided into three patrols. Esther Weeks, leader of the 'Comet Patrol,' chose Ann Brown as her corporal and these girls are her patrol: Frances Lewis, Winnie Stilwell, Frances Swift, Mary Brandt, Julie Williams. The 'Lucky Lookout' patrol has Madeleine Matchett for its leader and Matile Griswold as its corporal. The rest are: Mary Jane Davidson, Serena Duncan, Virginia Wadsworth, Mary Lee Barnes, Minnie Ohme. Jane Kraft's patrol, the 'Jolly Jumpers', has Ruth O'Neal for its corporal. The rest are Elizabeth Evans, Miriam Mangum, Mary Ellen Robinson, Ann Yancey and Elizabeth Ohme.

Mrs. Matchett gave us a very interesting talk about Scouting, and the tests included in Scouting, and all the fun we're going to have next year. She then made a long list of things we wanted to do this year. The list includes merit badge work, handicraft, hikes (over-night ones, too!), picnics, basketball, baseball, games (for patrol points), and last but not least, "ushering" at the Dramatic and Glee Club performances! Boy, what fun we're going to have.

At the second meeting, held October 11th. we reviewed the Motto, Slogan, Promise, and Laws, and had a nice talk from Mrs. Brown about Scouting, and just as important, our appearance. The leaders, patrol leaders and their "corporals" had a court of honor, during which mysterious proceedings, the rest of us were out playing baseball. Following that, we played an exciting game of "balance the stick on the head relayed." It was very difficult, as the stick easily fell off with a strong wind blowing, and we had to go back to the beginning and start over! Jane Kraft's patrol won, with 10 points. At the end of 3 meetings the patrol with the most points is allowed to plan the next meeting.

Here's hoping we have a pleasure filled year, meaning of course, hikes!

PINE TREE TROOP

Wednesday the 5th of October was the first meeting of our new troop, the Pine Tree. The afternoon was spent organizing the patrols and getting straightened out. The scribe for this Troop has not been chosen yet, but will be soon, and then we'll have a longer write-up.

DAFFODIL TROOP

We had our first meeting on Friday, October 7th. At this time we voted on our new patrol leaders and our scribe.

At our court of honor we planned a hike for our next meeting.

We thank Mrs. Arnold so very much for the lovely screen for our cabin.

Personals

Lieut. Col. and Mrs. J. A. Atkins left Saturday for Washington, D. C. where they will stay a few weeks.

The Alabama-Tennessee game at Birmingham will draw a number of football enthusiasts from Fort Benning. Among those who will enjoy the game are: Capt. and Mrs. Raymond E. Vermette, Lieut. and Mrs. James E. Bowen, Lieut. and Mrs. James R. Pierce, Capt. Harvey Golightly, Lieut. Donald Brann, and Lieut. Jack Griffith.

Mrs. Hilton Chisolm and Mrs. H. J. Riess, of Columbia, S. C., have taken an apartment with Mrs. Dozier Pou on Front Street and plan to spend the winter. Mrs. Riess, who is the widow of the late Lieut. Riess, has many friends among the army contingent who will be delighted to welcome her. Mrs. Chisolm and Mrs. Riess are planning to have a showing of rare antiques and prints in their apartment.

LIEUTENANT PEEPS' DIARY

Monday, October 3

Two hours of lectures this morning on which to begin the day and we can but be grateful to the schedule maker for providing us not only time for sleep but even stimulation toward it.

Tuesday, October 4

Our last day of instruction in sketching and Captain Bloomquist did strive to polish off our technique with such exhortations as the one to "make the curves on the narrow gauge railroad smooth," but, Lord, that's a job for the section crew.

Thence into a lengthy whimsy on the relative values of ground features in sketching and dwelling at some length on the enthusiasm with which a class of Sketches at Fort Lincoln, North Dakota, found a contour to draw on their maps and the acclaim with which a lone tree was accorded a place of honor in the work. I know well the feeling, for having misspent my youth in a plains country, I was to contours as the Arkansan to shoes, full grown ere I knew of their existence. The habit, early acquired, of drawing contoursless sketches has, not even in Georgia, been fully dissipated.

The Captain ended his discourse with the comment that North Dakota is a good place to take sketching. To which I fain would have added "and leave it".

Wednesday, October 5

A cold and rainy day precluding our making the final graded sketch but there is little cheer in that. One cannot put off the instalment man by tearing a sheet from the calendar.

The noon hour brightened by the Howard-Stika vaudeville act which might well entertain a crowd of paid admissions albeit the audience would need be strictly censored at the door.

Thursday, October 6

Up very betimes, partly by reason of being my own lackey with fires to light, but mostly because my shivering did rock the bed with so much clatter that the infant in the next room awoke vociferously. And I did bethink myself of days of comfort in Block 23 when the steam popping off would lull me back to an additional drowsy half hour. There are advantages in living on commutation but arising at five of the clock to stoke the "Sunbeam" is not one of them.

While bumping about in my mild misery I did bestow a thought of compassion on the Twenty-ninth in their camp, though what comfort that might be to them I have no least idea.

The Omega of the sketching course reached today, and I doubt not that my grade will be from a neighboring portion of the alphabet. We repaired to the horizon and sketched back and I, becoming engrossed in passing contours under a road, completed but half the sketch—the half showing the streams running the wrong way. And so to Mattewan.

Friday, October 6

The evening spent at a local resort in amused contemplation of several contemporaries engaging in a flexing exercise by the coach and pupil method, and I was convinced that the coach by his demonstration profited more than the pupil. Amused also by the disappointment of one who left the bath house sorrowfully because he could find no one to scrub his back.

Saturday, October 7

To the Polo Club at nine of the evening to the Barn Dance in progress there and I was relieved to find, at last, an opportunity to wear what clothes I have without embarrassment. Greatly perturbed to hear that the party's sheriff had, in jest, handcuffed himself to a member of the party and, in earnest, been unable to reverse the procedure, my perturbation increasing with the simultaneous disappearance of my "femme." Much relieved to learn that the sheriff and a male were shackled together and were at that moment at M. P. Headquarters being disengaged, for Lord, I had been filled with visions of sitting up all night with the couple in front of a locksmith's domicile. And I had liefer brush the snarls from grizzly's coat than to comfort the girl's father with her so attached to another man. So great was my relief at the vanishing of these possibilities that it mattered me not to have her, in company with Beau Easterbrook, stroll in from the darkened south side porch.

In The Mirror

By Mollie Heilman

The army has always been infamous for its beans: "beans for breakfast, beans for dinner, beans for supper too," so when we toured the Special Units mess the other day we expected to see beans, beans, beans, disguised one way for salad, frozen for dessert and served plain for sustenance.

We looked too for that other army tradition, the poor k. p. who peels potatoes far into the night and sits forlorn, surrounded by mounds of peelings.

But you've guessed it, we saw neither. The menu of soup, four vege tables, green salad and rice pudding, worked up around hamburger steak and baked potatoes and there wasn't a disguised bean in the lot. The smells drove us frantic with hunger.

The much maligned potato-peeling k. p. was a machine! There was an electric dish washing machine too, which makes working in that mess look kinda simple. Six hundred men are fed in that mess every meal at the rate of 10 a minute, with less fuss than it takes to fry an egg. Everything was superclean and neat and easy to handle (except maybe those huge unbreakable cups). The articles in the kitchen are on rolling shelves and themen crossed and crossed again without bumping, reminding us of the ants we used to watch in Cousin Mamie's backyard. It looked so simple we wanted to suggest a Cooks and Bakers course for army women.

Pastries, breakfast rolls and cinnamon rolls were made in confusion—excuse us, profusion—more than we'd ever seen in one place before. And not a streak of dough on the baker's brow. Those men who do things so calmly and yet think they work so hard should come over to our house some time with us in a batch of biscuits!

The mess too, has in its midst what we'd term genius, but then the mess is so used to having things run smoothly that nothing is thought of the human dynamo who cuts bread. There is a bread-cutting machine, but they discarded it because this man (who has been on the job only two or three months) slices bread so much faster and better. It was the first time we had ever heard of anyone making a specialty of cutting bread.

And if you have been sympathizing with the poor unfortunate soldier who has to peel potatoes and eat beans all the time—that is, if you are still sympathizing, look at this menu for an ordinary breakfast at the mess: grapefruit, assorted cereals, fresh milk, fried bacon, rench toast, bread, butter and coffee. The men go right through that breakfast as though they had been delegated members of a clean-up committee. In case they don't realize it, that breakfast makes the Prince of Wales' own morning meal look sick. The Prince eats one three minute egg, bacon and coffee.

But to get back to the mess, the Special Units mess should be famous (or infamous) for its unknown artist, who decorated the blackboards with real life sketches of the students in class and on the field, demonstrating the attention that the instructor doesn't get. It has to be seen to be appreciated, so we'll only drop the hint and let you go see for yourself.

THE SOCIAL CALL

In spite of the fact that the Commandant's big reception to the students has been officially proclaimed the social equivalent of the first call and its return, there is still a certain amount of formal calling being indulged in. We call on our immediate commanding officers, new arrivals whom we have known at other stations, and maybe friends of our friends who have recently joined. Also, there is still a considerable amount of semi-official calling among the members of the same Academic Section and within the several organizations.

This bootlegging of calling cards is quite all right and serves a useful social purpose. Indeed, the device of the constructive call supplemented by a limited and reasonable number of actual calls seems to solve the problem nicely.

We should hate to see the grand old game of calling abolished completely. Who has not felt the thrill of achievement which goes with killing from twelve to twenty calls on a bright Sunday afternoon when everybody is pretty sure to be at the polo game, or some carefully selected night when Marlene Deitrich and Clive Brook are showing at the Main Theatre?

The psychology of calling has always interested us. The resolute purpose and stop watch schedule of a pair of serious callers testifies to both character and efficiency. Their objective is to leave cards on the maximum number of people and they refuse to be turned aside by such minor considerations as pleasant company and delightful hospitality.

Credit for this strict adherence to the cause must be given to the female of the species. The conscript male whose heart isn't in the work anyhow frequently shows signs of wavering if the callee wife happens to be a dazzling blonde, a striking brunette, or a flaming Titian. Also, in the halcyon pre-war days before the Constitution imposed restrictions on entertainment, he would give evidence of faltering if the host suggested liquid refreshment. The wife, however, can always be relied upon to assert herself and whisk friend husband out of temptation's way before his convivial instincts are fully aroused.

Another feature of the formal call technique which interests us is the matter and manner of leaving cards. Personally, we have always felt that calling cards justify their existence only when left on people who are out or when taken upon a tray by a flunkey to let the master and mistress of the house know that callers have arrived and who they are. The latter is the swanky way to receive callers, but it isn't much affected here at Benning. Usually the slightly disheveled husband in person answers the door, buttoning the last button of his coat as he turns the knob. It is obviously ridiculous to hand him the cards that the callers hoped to be able to shove under the door. The poor goof would not know what to do with them in the first place, and in the second, it isn't considered good form. As a result, the calling wife usually has the cards when she gets into the living room and from then on her main object in life is to get rid of them in the least awkward way possible. Mrs. Schnitz Schneider, prominent socialite of Long Island, Albany, Georgia, and Block 16, aptly compares the calling wife's actions in the situation to those of a hen looking for a place to lay an egg. Mrs. Schneider says that she half expects the characteristic cackle when the cards are finally deposited in the least inappropriate place on the premises.

Our psycho-analytical research into the strange manifestation of the calling complex has disclosed an accepted theory that the card rather than the call is the important thing. If the cards are left the call has been consummated—otherwise not. This explains the seemingly useless formality sometimes affected by the busy social leader who makes the rounds without leaving her car—merely sending in the cards by the chauffeur. It also explains the relentless determination of callers everywhere to leave their cards in spite of hell and high water.

HISTORICAL ILLUSTRATION

A unique case of card leaving recently came under the all illuminating spotlight of The Flare. It occurred on the memorable Sunday afternoon that Mrs. Tucker, the charming and talented wife of the Chief of the Versatile Second Section, fell over the garden hose and broke her ankle. Immediately following the accident, the Tucker bungalow became the center of violent activity. Chief Tucker, spurred to appropriate first aid effort both by the family responsibility and official tradition, rushed to the spot and, lifting the injured wife to her feet, started to help her to the house. Mrs. Tucker's injury, however, did not permit of a walking wounded classification and she promptly collapsed. Whereupon, the Major took her in his arms, like the true knight that he is, and carried her as far as the door where his strength gave out. Depositing his precious burden hurriedly and, according to Mrs. Tucker's account, none too gently on the threshold, the distraught husband dispatched son Buddy to scour the neighborhood for smelling salts while he himself dashed off in search of professional advice and assistance. Mrs. Tucker, overcome by pain, fainted.

At this critical stage of the proceeding two callers arrived at the Tucker domicile. Don't ask us who they were. For once we fail our public. Ever mindful of our responsibility to furnish names as well as facts, we made a noble effort to ascertain the former but to no avail. The heroine of our tale refuses to give them away. All we know is that they came, saw, and left their calling cards beside her prostrate form.

FUZZARD APPEALS TO THE WOMEN

In response to the insistent urging of his campaign managers, General Marathon Miltiades Fuzzard last week made his first formal bid for the woman's vote. Now that he has made a start, Committeeman Kelly, who has charge of the Progrestatic candidate's Muscogee and Chattahoochee speaking tour, is hopeful that he may be able to prevail upon the General to address the Fort Benning Woman's Club at an early date.

The General, in a radio speech over a county-wide hook-up over WRBL was brief and to the point:

THE FLARE

"Mothers, wives, sweethearts! I'm here to tell you that while I ain't ever been considered as a ladies' man, I've always admired the fair sex. In fact, I could tell you about a couple of blondes right here in Phenix City who could tell you as much if they're a mind to. Maybe I wasn't exactly in favor of givin' women the vote at first, but when I saw they was goin' to get it I was among the first to say 'Hell, let 'em have it.' And the facts have borne me out for, as far as I can see, things ain't any worse now than they were. Maybe they ain't any better either, but what of that? I've said all along and I say now that the women raise the standard of the electorate. Every time I see somebody's sweet old mother goin' to the polls to cast her vote for Milt Fuzzard I compare her to some drunken bums that I've seen go to the polls so cock-eyed they didn't know enough to vote for the man they'd been paid to vote for.

"And I want to say right here that this whisperin' campaign that's goin' around about me ain't got a word of truth in it. I've always been a respecter of pure womanhood and the sanctity of the home. The whisperin' campaign that I violated the sanctity of a lot of homes when I was in the Army is a dastardly lie. Them homes weren't any more sanctified than the Democrat and Republican conventions, and the parties they refer to was headed for the divorce court long before I came along.

"Maybe I ain't never been formally married, as they say, but I've been close to it, more than once. The closest I ever come to it was just before the Spanish-American War. If I hadn't left town in a hurry to join the service of my country, I'd probably be just as good a husband and father right now as any of the other candidates. As it was, the girl's old man only missed me by half an hour which is gettin' pretty close to the altar if anybody asks you."

The day after the General delivered the above epoch-making radio address, which Committeeman Kelly aptly refers to as his maiden effort, we found him at his campaign headquarters in Phenix City in a state of unbridled fury.

"What do you think they're sayin' now," he stormed, "They're sayin' that a ghost writer wrote that speech. George Forster couldn't have wrote that speech. Neither could Arnold Funk or Malin Craig. They ain't got the background."

Ed. Note: General Fuzzard's impassioned address to the women of Muscogee and Chattahoochee Counties was delivered two days before the publication of the following notice in the sprightly Official Bulletin of October 11.

FOUND.

A vanity case in door pocket of Captain Forster's car; evidently left there while he was on practice march. Phone 607 or 310.

Mayhap the Progrestatic candidate was a little hasty in assuming that Captain Forster lacked the necessary background to be the ghost writer of Fuzzard's magnificent tribute to the American women.

LET'S GET THIS RIGHT

Now that the office of the Chief of Infantry has taken up the matter of terminology as applied to The Infantry School and its several sections, the Flare is moved to say a word for the correct designation of one of Benning's suburban districts.

Perhaps the rose by any other name would smell as sweet but we object to Mrs. Bonesteele's reference to Rainbow Row as "The Colored Section" on the grounds that it might depreciate real estate values. Moreover, the Flare claims the credit for naming the newest suburb—we actually referred to it in print as Rainbow Row before we heard anyone else so designate it—and we are rather pleased with the alliterative euphony, the appropriate descriptiveness and the prompt and universal acceptance of the name.

The correspondent who addressed a letter to Major P. G. Blackmore, Rainbow Division. Fort Benning, Ga., did better than Mrs. Bonesteele, but we can't approve that amendment either. It is too reminiscent of the Argonne to apply to a generally harmonious residential quarter.

CHAMPION?

Captain Red Cummings, having devoted the summer to perfecting his golf game, has about despaired of ever becoming a serious threat to Eagle Eye Bradley, Explorer Chance, Publisher Liston and the other contenders for the crown. Of late weeks his fiery poll has ceased to light up the deep jungles which flank the upper nine, but let it not be thought that his ambition to achieve athletic distinction is dead. The Captain has merely transferred his effort to other fields of endeavor. Determined to excel, he has gone in for rick racking in a big way. So far as we know his high score of 163 has not even been approached by the adult rick rack enthusiasts. We cannot, however, proclaim him the official champoin of Fort Benning until we check up on the latest records from the children's school. It is quite possible that the experts in the 5th, 6th and 7th grades will laugh at his pretensions.

OFFHAND OBSERVATIONS

one of the local sartorial establishments recently looking at a piece of red goods. Tally Ho!, View Hallo! and What Ho!, it won't be long now.

Now listen, you would be Odd McMcIntyres, Heywood Brouns, and F. P. A.'s who have been helping to clutter the sheets of this journal, E. F. H. is right, it's getting to be an epidemic. If many more break into print, even the most long-suffering of the remaining readers will give up in disgust. If the reputation (and circulation) of the Herald is to be saved, something desperate must be done. Two courses of action are open; we must pull something sensational in an attempt to regain the reader's interest or entice a few more to join us in our scribblings and boost the slogan "One contributor, one subscriber."

Here is McGoofuses' solution. P. T. Barnum, Haldeman-Julius, Bernarr McFadden, Aimee McPherson or somebody has said, "You ask me what the reading public likes best of all. I say it is the story of any kind of contest involving combat. be it the story of a dog fight or a battle." That is the cue. We must stage a columnist's Battle Royal. Those gentle little jabs which have been passing back and forth between the writer of "Town Topics" and E. F. H. will not suffice. Some real old fashioned mud slinging is what's needed —so.—to your corners and come out fighting.

DRAMATIC CLUB MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN

Early returns from the preliminary drive for Dramatic Club membership indicate that the local Thespians will not lack for an audience this year. Of course, it is still too soon to assure prospective Barrymores and Chattertons that last year's membership will be exceeded but, knowing something of Vice President Catron's ability to put things over, we expect him to achieve his goal.

We know of no activity on the post that offers more for a dollar and a half than does the Dramatic Club. This year it is presenting four three-act plays. The net cost per member per play is 37 1-2 cents. This includes all conversational rights before and after production. This alone is worth several times the price of a membership ticket, for statistics show that 68 per cent of the social chatter at Fort Benning is about the latest Dramatic Club hit. In the rare instance when a show flops, this figure jumps to 92 per cent, completely routing the horse fanatics. You can't be a sparkling dinner partner unless you belong to the club and sit in on its performances. Our advice is for everybody to join now rather than eventually. It will save Vice President Catron a lot of trouble and obviate the impending demonstration of his high pressure salesmanship, which is sure to bring you into the fold anyhow.

AT THE GRAND

.....SATURDAY, SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Offerng First National's "Crooners," with Ann Dvorak, David Manners, Guy Kibbee and Ken Murray. A story that lays bare the lives and loves of popular entertainers at the glamorous night clubs. A modest young boy who has made such a success with his band in college that he takes all the players with him to "break" in on Broadway. Their vicissitudes with professionals, etc., bring ruin, but at last a drunk hands over a megapone, the leader "croons" and they're on the road to fame.

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Offering "Madison Square Garden" with Marian Nixon and Jack Oakie. A cross section of the life of New York—Manhattan's famed center of political, social and athletic lfe on the screen. Here is the story of a manager who brings wo proteges to the Garden. Their experiences—two girl telegraph operators as sweethearts—etc., binds together a vivid panoramic view of the ever-changing life of the institution. A real movie drama set against the kaleidoscopic background of New York's famed center.

AT THE ROYAL

SUNDAY, MONDAY AND TUESDAY: Offering "Grand Hotel," with Greta Garbo, John Barrymore, Joan Crawford, Wallace Beery and an all-star cast. Here's the year's most talked of film, featuring a galaxy of stars that have created a sensation wherever it has been shown. The picture that eclipses all previous stage and screen entertainments. Here you see Hollywood's aristocracy of stars enacting each thrilling role. Drama and heart breaks as never before in one picture, with one line that you'll remember—"You must not weep—you must forget—you must love!"

AT THE RIALTO

STARTING TODAY, AND SATURDAY: Offering "Hello Trouble" with Buck Jones, and Lina Basquette. He gives the desperadoes their due in this thundering tale of rangers, ranchers and romance!

SUNDAY: Offering "Unashamed" with Helen Twelvetrees and Lewis Stone. Never was a girl faced with such a choice! Her brother's life—her own honor—waited on her answer. A heart-rending drama that is fast and one that answers the old question—"Is a woman's reputation worth a man's life?"

MONDAY AND TUESDAY: Offering "Manhattan Parade," with Smith & Dale, of the Avon Comedy, Winnie Lightner and Chas. Butterworth. The story of a couple of crazy nit wits—the biggest leg and laff show on earth. Girls, gags, sights, color, lights, on top of legs and laffs, in every thrill the screen can offer.

WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY: Offering "Madame Racketeer," with Alison Skipworth, Richard Bennett, George Raft and Evalyn Knapp. Here's the most sought after woman in America—she's wanted by the police in 20 cities—"Madame Racketeer" will make you roar with laughter. A story of a woman who leaves every man she meets—the richer for having met him. You'll like Alison Skipworth in this drama.

RIALTO

With one of the most sensational trial sequences in the history of talking pictures, and with a mystery injected into an ultra-modern romance of the youth of today, "Unashamed," Bayard Veiller's latest thriller, comes Sunday to the Rialto Theatre.

The new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production is a dramatic story of today, in which its heroine, in her quest for thrills and romance, finds herself in the toils of a fate that forces on her the choice of her brother's life or the loss of her own reputation. One of the most elaborate courtroom sequences, played in an ultra-modernistic courtroom, is a vivid detail in the new story by the author of "Within the Law," "The Trial of Mary Dugan" and other stage thrillers.

Harry Beaumont Directed

Harry Beaumont directed the new production, in which an elaborate cast appears. Among the players are Helen Twelvetrees, in the role of the indiscreet heroine; Robert Young, who last scored in "The Wet Parade"; Lewis Stone, Jean Hersholt, John Miljan, Monroe Owsley, Robert Warwick, Gertrude Michael and Wilfred North.

The picture's dramatic highlights include the thrilling murder sequence, the quest of the detectives, and the amazing confession of the girl on the witness stand when she bares her past to save her brother from the executioner.

GRAND

The cast for "Crooner," a First National picture, which opens at the Grand Theatre Saturday, was selected with great difficulty because every one of the important players, with two exceptions, had to be excellent as well as actors.

This is because the leading players are members of an orchestra who have to produce jazz tunes as well as enact their individual roles. It was originally intended to have a double for David Manners, who plays the title role, but as he proved to be the owner of a splendid croon voice, the double was dispensed with.

The actors who play in the band are William Janney, cornet: Allen Vicent, first violin; Teddy Joyce, second violin; Edward Nugent, trap drums; Clarence Nordstrom, piano; Will Morgan, cello; John Harron and Summer Getchel, horns.

"Crooner" is a gay story of night club life with a thrilling romance, in which Ann Dvorak, in the leading feminine role, sets the masculine hearts aflutter. The picture is also full of pungent humor, as the author, Rian James, takes a fling at the inordinate conceit of public entertainers. Others in the cast include Ken Murray, Claire Dodd, Guy Kibbee, Sheila erry, Betty Gillette, J. Carroll Naish, William Ricciardi and William Halligan. The picture was directed by Lloyd Bacon.

Ann Dvorak whose popularity is increasing daily. Her role in "Crooner" will undoubtedly earn her another large contingent of followers.

ROYAL

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's research department was required to answer hundreds of questions during filming of "Grand Hotel," talkie version of the sensational Vicki Baum stage hit, which will be shown next week at the Royal Theatre.

What kind of music would be played by a dance orchestra in a Berlin hotel? What kind of a wagon delivers the bread in the morning? How do Berlin flappers dress? Do most men wear derbies or soft hats in Germany today? These were some of the less complicated of the eight hundred questions which the Culver City research deparment estimates it was required to answer during the screening of "Grand Hotel." Each answer, when information had been checked, was written in detail on memorandum slips sent to various production officials.

"Handle-bar Moustaches"

One of the problems was to verify details of house rules in a large German hotel. German switchboard workers, it was learned, invariably wear their hair in braids wound in coronet fashion about the head, affording them free hearing and allowing earphones to fit in snugly. The research department also assured Director Edmund Goulding and his staff that only hotel doormen or porters are permitted to wear "handlebar" moustaches in Berlin hostelries. "Grand Hotel" waiters are therefore all clean-shaven.

Sgt. McLeod is due for discharge next week, and he has accepted a position as a steamfitter. He has had quite a lot of experience with the radiators in the building.

Cpl. Cherry took his weekly pass to Griffin, Ga. We believe that he will move in the near future to Columbus, Ga., as transportation costs too much to Griffin, Ga.

The battery was relieved from fire guard Friday evening at six o'clock and I believe that everybody went to town.

John Latina our barber paid his weekly visit to Boyle's thirty acres and found quite a few of the boys engaged in playing checkers.

The battery is getting ready for the demonstrations that are due this week. We are ready to function a 100 per cent in any problem that the school may give us.

We wonder where our first sergeant was going the other night all dressed up in civilian clothes. We know that he wasn't going fox hunting.

Paul Davis and Jew Meyers paid their annual visit to North Highlands. Jew Meyers came near running himself to death when he heard a train coming down the avenue.

GAM.

BATTERY "A"

Extra: After spending a nice long Furlough in the Mountains of Tenn., Cpl. Harry Stringfellow has returned to his organization and reports a wonderful time. We are very glad to see you back at your old desk, Harry. Just carry on as before.

Lost: In Columbus, Ga., Hugh Neely, who left one night and has not returned yet. It is reported that Pvt. Neely is out making some political speeches, as he did once before.

It is thought by all members of the Battery that a loud speaker would be of no benefit, whatever, as Pfc. Dunn and Pvt. Chancey have wonderful voices and don't mind broadcasting at any hour of the night. We suggest that they select a more suitable program or a different brand of drink, especially for the latter part of the night.

Pfc. Thomas E. Smith is on one of his usual five day furloughs. Tommy will not have over five days at a time.

A casual observer from the Artillery noted, as the 29th departed on its four day hike, that the three officers who were attached to the battalion for three months last spring started the hike on horse back. May the good work continue. Our efforts have borne fruit.

BATTERY "C"

During the past week we had our first firing of the season with the 37 mm guns. "If the targets were larger, the ranges shorter and the damaging power of the projectiles greater, better results would be obtained," explained one of our future generals. Our gun squads for the 75 and 105 mm guns are rapidly approaching a standard of efficiency and the firing to be done sometime at the end of this month, should have satisfactory results.

The football season has started and seven of "C" battery men are at present members of the Battalion team. We know our veterans Mallard and Odom will make the first string, but we hope to see some of the young new men make good also.

"Monte Carlo" Rentz, after trying to find a system to beat card sharks in the Post for more than two years, finally made good. He is going on a furlough now to spend the hard earned winnings somewhere down in Florida. His success with the cards proves again the truth in the proverb "A quitter never wins and a winner never quits."

"Blackjack" Garretson again is leaving the 83rd F. A. This time his destination is the Philippines, where he is going to be a doughboy. We wish him all luck, but we have a feeling that he will eventually return again to the old 83rd.

With the presidential election still a toss-up and the prohibition question still not settled, the chief of our 4th Section has severed his connections with private cars and is investing again 4 bits a day with the Howard Bus Line.

We still hear fabulous tales about the old army, but here is one for that new army of ours. C. O. during rank inspection: "Sergeant, take this man's name." Sergeant: "Sir, I got no pencil." C. O.: "All right, get a camera and take his picture!"

The Quartermaster Detachment this week has been playing host to a group of visitors. Nineteen enlisted men of Holabird Quartermaster Depot at Baltimore, Maryland, who came to Fort Benning with experimental trucks, are making use of the facilities of the detachment during their stay. All of these men are members of either the First or Fourth Motor Repair Battalions. Captain Lloyd M. Garner, Q. M. C., has been in charge of the convoy detail.

The formal opening of the Quartermaster rest camp will be held on Saturday night. A very full program is being planned. The main features will be an old fashioned barbecue, which will be supervised by that well known culinary expert, Sergeant William H. Grider, and a dance. The detachment this year has held several dances. All have been successful, but this one, which will be coupled with barbecue features, promise to be more enjoyable than the others.

During the last week or so the detachment has had a large number of additions to its personnel. Most of the new members of the organization have been gained by transfer from organizations within the post, particularly the 29th Infanry. Among the recently transferred men are: Privates James H. Anderson, Robert C. Daniel, James A. Lindsey, Grover H. Metcalf, Gerard G. Murphy, Turner H. Nichols, and Sollie M. Stuart.

The detachment's acting supply sergeant, who also bears the title of chief of the supply staff, Earl M. Spangler, has just been appointed private first class. A similar promotion also been accorded Samuel D. Harris, who is the engineer of Fort Benning's grown-up locomotive, which isn't to be mistaken for one of the well known smaller variety.

Headquarters Company is proud of its bowling team, composed of Sergeant LeBonte, Privates Cameron, Bixby, Burns (Red), Richardson (one of the new bowlers who is taking instruction fine and is one of the best bowlers we have. When he learns all the tricks of the game—look out boys.) Then comes Hall, Wilhite and Chastain. Red Burns is another one of our boys who deserves special mention. Red has perfect control of the ball and he is fighting hard among the high men of the Post. And don't forget our old friend "Luscius"—another new devotee—in fact there seems to be some other attraction at the bowling alleys—but I suppose it is only the sport of the thing.

Our company orchestra is still putting out some good entertainment, under direction of Band Leader Horton. Last Saturday night they played a dance for the commandant and the commandant was well pleased with the music and the way the orchestra was dressed. The orchestra came out wearing big straw sombreros and red bandanas. They looked like real farmers. The tuba player had a plug of Brown Mule chewing obacco in his hip pocket to make things realistic. He wore big broad red suspenders.

Sergeant Mitzen won the Coca Cola golf tournament last week in Columbus. He won a nice trophy.

1st Sergeant Houghtby is a busy man these days, figuring out demonstrations for The Infantry School. He is getting one almost daily and some days two.

We have a new radio in he recreation room now and Pfc. Roy Commander says since the recreation room is being remodeled, they should hang an enlarged picture of his queen on the wall.

Pfc. Frank Youngblood and Pfc. Irenton Fuller have been promoted to the grade of Corporal and they make a grand rush for the NCO table at every meal.

COMPANY "C"

Sergeant Reed has recently returned to the regiment after a long detail with the State Militia of the State of Ohio. We are fortunate in having him assigned to the company, and wish him to feel that he is always welcome among us.

Private Wilborn's 1921 For Open-air Underslung plays upon the sympathy of all passers-by while parked at the parking line. Reminds one of a waif on a winter's day with no home to call its own.

Privates Crider and Blockman presented keen competition in the competitive drill yesterday afternoon. For a while one would think that those fellows were guled together the way they performed their drill. Blockman, I believe, was picked for the winner.

COMPANY "A"

Corporal Fritz, better known as the big blimp, received a special supper from Cashtown. Do you know who sent it to him? Who? Why his only buddie and close friend. If you eat this cooking you are bound to fall and fall hard. If you are in doubt about it just ask Corporal Fritz. Now this wasn't told to me, I only heard it. That buddie bought Corporal Fritz a big plate of collard-greens, one hog-jowl and a large pone of Georgia corn bread.

Will that make you fat? Just ask Corporal Fritz. That slum would knock an elephant to his knees. You should be very careful Corporal Fritz, we mean about what you eat.

FOOTBALL RACES BECOMING EVEN MORE COMPLICATED

eyes into camp. Notre Dame has a team this year reputed to be even stronger than the formidable aggregation Coach Anderson put on the field last year. One week ago, it verified this preseason information by trouncing the Haskell Indians 73-0. It expects to administer a similar dose to Drake this Saturday. Chicago is favored over Knox, Northwestern will defeat Illinois, Indiana will emerge victorious over Iowa, Minnesota should conquer Nebraska, although the Cornhuskers are reputed to have the best eleven in the Big Six Conference. Purdue, victors over Minnesota last week, should eke out a close victory over the Wisconsin Badgers. Michigan State will have no difficulty in conquering a decidedly weak opponent.

THE WEST

In the Far West, California will defeat Washington State, and Gonzaga should be an easy winner over Dak. Wesleyan. The Trojans will crush Loyola, a weak opponent, and Stanford's powerful eleven, thirsting after national recognition, will have no trouble with the West Coast Army.

MATA HARI

"My dear, I have never yet seen you hysterical," said Adriana in a tone of frigid disdain. "Perhaps, this solitude——"

If he thought that this would bring her to her senses like a dash of cold water, stiffen her into her old pride, he was doomed to disappointment. She interrupted him with a burst of laughter.

"Haven't you? What do you know of me, Adriana? What do you know of the soltiude and the suffering I've endured in rooms as miserable as this?"

It was true. He knew nothing. This was the first word he had ever had from her in all their acquaintanceship, in their necessary close connection, which referred to that childhood and girlhod which was only rumor. But it was hardly the time for curiosity.

Nevertheless, he swerved to different tactics.

"Come, be reasonable. In the first place, how do you know Rosanoff's wounded?"

"I read it in the casualty lists. Then I——"

"Oh, the casualty lists! Why, the man may be dead! If his plane was shot down, most likely what happened, then he's certainly dead——"

"He's not dead!" she cried at him, beating at him with one clenched fist. "He's not. I know it. Don't dare to say that he's dead!"

Catching her wrist and prisoning it in the vise of his fingers, Adriana said. "You love him, then?"

"Yes."

He let her go.

After a silence in which the dancer nursed her wrist and Adriana reflected, the latter began afresh.

"I've no objection to getting you news of him, my dear, if he's really in a hospital nearby. Durant says she called someone you know at the Russian Embassy. A very dangerous thing to do. You might have applied to me."

"Thanks. I'll get my own news of him. I don't see much danger that's not of your making. I should not have hid. I should have gone about, and if they questioned me, known nothing about Shubin's—suicide. You say it's rumored he killed himself for my sake. What's that to me? Several men have killed themselves for my sake. Why, they're not even looking for me—by your account And if I were going about, as usual, the matter would be quickly forgotten."

Smith Scores Technical Kayoe Over Johnson

Puggy Whips Kid But Is K.O'd. By Judges' Decision

Preliminaries Support Excellent Benning Show; Fans Are Pleased

Defying the predictions of fight fans, Walker Cyclone Football Bull Smith came out Tuesday night and battered his way to a victory over the technical kayoe route in his fight with Earl Johnson of Atlanta. Smith was never in trouble during the two rounds that Johnson was able to stay with him, taking the lead with the first gong, and sticking in there for a finish.

Smith looked like the old boy who used to bowl them over a year ago, and seems to be regaining his old form. He has perfected a style of attack that will be hard to beat, and he will surely have some tough boys shooting at him now.

The first round found Johnson in trouble, suffering from something-or-other, caused by the damaging left hand of Smith's connecting with the chin. He was down for nine counts, but able to get back and battle for the remaining fifteen seconds of the fight.

The second round was the end of all arguments, as Smith drove him to the ropes with a hard right hand blow, and rushed in for the finishing touches. Johnson was opt on his feet as the seconds threw in the towel, signifying a technical kayoe for Smith This was all well and good, for Smith would have surely taken the fight in another round by the K. O. method which is so lasting and decisive in the minds of a hungry fight crowd.

More daily departures . . . more service to more cities . . . terminals right in the heart of town . . . yet fares are lower over Hood Coach Lines than by any other way.

Judge's Decisions Discussed Concerning Tuesday's Program

By Bernard B. Swayze

At the fights last Tuesday night, considerable comment was going the rounds concerning the decision given in the semi-final bout of the night. Every person we talked to seemed to be of the opinion that Weinert had been robbed of a justly earned decision. Their arguments were decisive and conclusive, bearing out our contention that Weinert had clearly beaten Baisden in a beautiful fight.

It is indeed bruising to the morale to have hundreds of people sit and watch a fight of this type, and then see the decision go to another who is not entitled to the award. For that reason, we take this space to try to put before you the ideas of the judges and the referee concerned in the decision. We also want to take this opportunity to put before you the fact that we are of the opinion that Weinert won the fight by a good margin, and should have been awarded the fight. If our unqualified opinion is worth a grain of salt, please take it from us that no fighter who lands his blows on the elbows and shoulders can ever win a fight, while the man who is blocking those punches and retaliating as Weinert did, always wins.

In checking with the judges and referee, we find that Captain Charles W. Hanna was the only member of the trio who gave the decision to Weinert. Doctor Mahaney Wednesday morning pointed out that Baisden's body attack was effective, and that Weinert did not block all of the blows. (We saw only five slip by those elbows). It is understood that Major Lucius K. Paterson concurred in the opinion as set forth by Doctor Mahaney. We are sorry, indeed, that we can't agree with the judges, but after all, it might serve to all the more popularize Polak Buzzsaw. Anyhow, we hope so.

Captain Fry always likes to see a clean-cut decision, and is one of the ardent pushers of the game at Fort Benning. He puts his heart and soul in the programs, and it hurts him almost as badly as it does the fighter that these things do come up now and then. Give him your support.

THAT QUESTIONABLE DECISION

The Semi-final of eight rounds, featuring Puggy Weinert, the Polak Buzzsaw, and Kid Baisden was something of another color. There was more fighting in this one fight than is witnessed at ten ordinary programs. Even though Weinert out fought, was more aggressive and more sportsmanlike in all his action in the ring, the fight was ERRONEOUSLY given to Baisden, who was greatly astounded at the decision!

It seems that Puggy has a jinx hanging over him in the fight ring, but that makes no difference with him. He will be out there in the next fight he is allowed to appear in, giving the fans more value received for their money than any other fighter at Benning. He is that kind of a sport, and don't let it fool you. Some day, Puggy is going to win a fight by such a large margin that a blind man will have to admit that he is the winner.

The first round of that fight was rather even, but Puggy took a shade in the second. Baisden was a little in the lead for the third and they drew the fourth. Weinert was the leader in the fifth and sixth rounds, and won by a wide margin in the seventh. The eighth round could have been called a drwa, or maybe Baisden won it, it was close. PUGGY WON THE FIGHT, but BAISDEN GOT THE DECISION, so there . . . . Draw your own conclusions.

DANNY 'N THEM

The support bouts for the program were undoubtedly the best ever. There were four preliminary bouts packed as full of action as it is possible to pack into sixteen two minute rounds. The two six rounders scheduled proved to be four round affairs, due to kayoe decisions that left no room for doubt.

Danny Long and Lester Darby put up one of the prettiest fights ever seen in a Benning ring. It could be plainly seen that both fighters were giving their all, with Danny battling for a chance to eke out a decision over the hard-hitting Darby. Danny took the first two rounds in a breeze with his body attack, but got careless in the third round, and there went that hard right hand of Darby's, sending Danny to the resin for the count of nine. Danny was back and at him like dynamite, but too dazed to be very affective after that blow to his chin.

Breaking back for the fourth round, Danny was fighting with all that was within him for a break, but again Darby was too strong for him, and a technical kayoe was the decision.

Kells To Open Season At G. M. A.

The Second Battalion, 29th Infantry will send their team into action next Friday at Barnesville, Ga., against the Georgia Military Academy team, as a warming up game for the approaching season.

Already the Kells are showing a lot of power in their line, and with the addition of Pooch Derrick, erstwhile Artillery ball toter, have a formidable machine that will awaken envy in the hearts of many coaches this fall. Pooch has stamina, speed and football brains, and besides, can kick, pass and block with the best of them.

Tommy Thompson will be there again this year, as will Saunders and Prophet. All of these boys are fast and good blockers, with the possible exception of Tommy when it comes to blocking. He makes up for this deficit in his open field running and kicking. Saunders is equally as fast as either Pooch or Tommy, and is a good line plunger. He also eats up the slants and sweeps with vim, vigor and what have you. Prophet is as twinkling star himself when it comes to getting that yardage.

McAllister and Wilson are good ends, and will take care of their share of the plays that come their way. DePratt and Cappell are good, strong tackles, making holes for the offense, and stopping holes on the defense with regularity. Moody and Krewson will fill in the gap at guard, while Carlyn takes care of the pivotal position of center.

Blackstone and Darden are two good plunging backs who will make up

24th Infantry To Open Grid Season With Professionals

Strong Bear Team of Atlanta Meets Lt. Johnson's Happy Hearts

The Happy Hearts of the 24th Infantry will pry the lid loose on the Fort Benning, 1932 football season at Doughboy Stadium, Saturday afternoon, when they mix and mingle with the Atlanta Bears, colored professional football team.

The Happy Hearts boast a strong team this season with a powerful line and exceptionally fast string of backfield men. In their first showing of the season, two weeks ago, they held the strong Florida State A. & M. College on an even terms at Tallahassee, Fla., in a fast and well played game.

The Bears boast one of the strongest aggregations of colored football stars on any team ever turned out in the south. Former star players from Clarke University, Morehouse College, Tuskegee University and other colored southern schools. Mule Harrison, Stevens and other stars that have shown here on former occasions will be in the line up.

The Happy Hearts are sending a well drilled team against the professionals. Lt. Howard Johnson, who learned his football under Bob Folwell at the Naval Academy in 1923-24-25, has been driving the candidates from the Sunset Regiment at top speed for the past six weeks and his work is showing splendid results in the team.

:-: On The Q. T. :-:

BY B. B. S.

STRANGE THINGS do sometimes happen. We are told that it is news when a man bites a dog. Well, we have found both the man and the dog, figuratively speaking, and to us it looks like news.

NINE YEARS AGO, a young man by the name of Raleigh Graham was discharged from Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry, with insufficient funds to pay his indebtedness to the company fund. There was nothing to do about it, except to leave it be for the time being. The regulations required that the custodian get permission from the Comptroller General's office in Washington to charge the account off, and these things sometimes take as much as a year before the office gets around to the account, the Comptroller's office having many accounts to review during a fiscal year. It was finally reached, though, and the books were cleared, with no hard feelings existing anywhere.

NOW MR. GRAHAM happened to be the type man who hates adebt worse than a dog hates fleas. This week, Lt. James R. Pierce received a letter from Mr. Graham, enclosing the money owed the fund, with interest. Acts of this kind are always deserving of great notice, keeping in mind that the young man was in no way obligated to pay the money; yet his conscience drove him on.

His letter follows:

Hillsboro, Ky.,
Oct. 8, 1932.

Company Commander.
Dear Sir:

I am enclosing ten dollars which I owe the Company. Was in that company nine years ago. Left owing the Company five dollars which I want to pay with interest. Mail me receipt of payment.

Resp.
Raleigh Graham
Hillsboro, Ky.

P. S.. $9.52 is compound interest so just keep the whole $10.00.

AND LT. PIERCE'S reply:

Fort Benning, Ga.
October 10, 1932.
Mr. Raleigh Graham,
Hillsboro, Ky.
My dear Mr. Graham:

I am in receipt of your letter and the sum of $10.00 which was enclosed therein. The money was deposited to the credit of the Company Fund of this organization.

I would appreciate a further letter from you as to the circumstances connected with this debt. With the facts at hand, however, I wish to inform you that your honesty expressed in the payment of this sum is one of the finest acts which I have witnessed since I was commissioned some ten years ago. In accepting this money, I do so with the feeling that should I refuse you would not be satisfied.

Hoping to hear from you further, and that some day you will pay us a visit, I remain,

Sincerely yours,
James R. Pierce,

WE COULD ONLY DIG up one piece of scandal this week, and that isn't much. It does come to us, through a reliable source, however, that Eberhart of the Second Section, admitted to several of his most intimate friends that he was the most popular man in Fort Benning. To bear this out, he had one lady cast 15,000 votes for him. . . . Not bad . . . Not bad.

Sad Samuel Shuns Baseball's Money For Militarv Life

By AL DURDEN

Up where the Great Smoky Mountains rear their rugged peaks into the violet blue of the skyline and the swirling waters of the Tennessee River sweep gracefully northward to join the muddy torrents of the Ohio River, the "Old Stuart Plantation," lies nestled away from the busy hum and bustle of the outside world. Thirty-seven years ago, "Sad Samuel" Stuart first saw the light of day through the green shutters of the old farm house. Had Samuel been content to follow in the foot steps of his forefathers there is no doubt that today the state of Tennessee would be richer by one more prominent planter and booster while the U. S. Army would be minus the services of one excellent mess sergeant and star baseball player.

As a youngster, Samuel craved excitement. At the age of 19, he went out into the world to seek adventure. His first stop was at the recruiting station in Nashville. He was enlisted as a doughboy and assigned to Co. "C" 14th Infantry, for duty. When baseball season rolled around Samuel answered the call for candidates for the company team. The arm that had been trained to get "two squirrels with three rocks," soon gained Samuel a place on the team.

His career as an army baseball player reads like fiction. Samuel developed into one of the leading players in the service. Had it not been for the entry of this country into the World War, it is likely that Stuart would have been playing big league baseball. In fact, in 1916, he rejected an offer with the St. Louis Americans, to remain with the service as the dark clouds of war rolled toward America. Samuel failed to get "over" and join in the fracas, as he was far away from friends and comfort, on duty with the 14th Infantry, in the frozen fields of Alaska, as tough an assignment as many encountered on many fronts.

With the war over and peace restored, Samuel left the service to play professional baseball. The big fellow hit his stride in 1926-27-28, as a member of the Columbus Foxes of the Southeastern league. He was the "Babe Ruth," of the minor leagues and the idol of the children in the towns of the Southeastern loop.

In 1930, "Sad Samuel" returned to his first love, "The Army." He came back as a member of the Infantry School Detachment. There came a vacancy for mess sergeant and Samuel got the nod. How he made good is ancient history. For an entire year the Infantry School Detachment led the way among the mess halls of the garrison in the regular monthly inspections. And did he feed? The Infantry School Detachment mess held the reputation of being the best feeding outfit in the garrison.

At the present time Samuel is taking sixty-day furlough up in the Big Smoky Mountains. And with Samuel is Mrs. Samuel and their two children. After a couple of months "up home," Samuel will return and it is hoped that he will again be back in his old place in the kitchen.

ed too strong for Tommy Thompson of Columbus in the first six rounder of the night, pounding his way to a lead in every round. Tommy was game, but didn't have a chance with the big M. P. The fourth round marked the end of this bout as the referee tolled the ten-count over his unconcious form.

The four rounders were excellent in every respect. Ghost Ghastley was no match for the weaker Spear. Buck Spear is a good prelim fighter, but was against too much power in the form of the 29er. Ghastley took every round of this fight, despite the dogged opposition of Buck.

The curtain raiser was something for which the fans had not looked for. Young Griffin, a new comer to the Benning ring, decisively defeated Curley Cunningham of Columbus in four rounds. This boy Griffin will be good in a short while if he isn't ruined by inexperienced would-be helpers. Just leave him alone and he will come out on top in many another fight.

The judges for the fight were: Captain Hanna and Doctor Mahaney. The referees were: Red Lindsey for the prelims and Major Patterson for the semi-final and wind-up.

He-men like 'em Mild

You might think that a two-fisted fellow like the steel jack in the picture would like his tobacco strong. Not at all.

He wants his cigarettes mild and that's why he picks Chesterfields.

Mildness doesn't mean a smoke that's weak or flat or insipid or anything like that. In fact it's just the reverse. Two-fisted fellows as well as anyone else—men and women—want a cigarette that's mild . . . one that satisfies—and that's Chesterfield.

We believe that every smoker is looking for a cigarette without any "bite" or bitterness, and a cigarette that has a pleasing taste—and that's Chesterfield.

TOWN TOPICS

At last Biglerville is to come into its own politically! Long the subject of every thrust made at Benning, this settlement is on the verge of having a political representative of the highest type,—that is, if rumors flying about at the Officers' Club may be believed.

We hear that, at the unique entertainment to be given on Election Night at the Club, another election will be held which will determine once and for all the mayoralty of Biglerville. Ballots will be distributed and ballot-boxes provided so that the election may be carried on just as other ones are. And then, at the stroke of midnight the results will be made known.

Frankly this column is unable to even speculate as to the possible outcome of the election. We have heard opinions expressed on the subject and various possible candidates named, but one seems to stand out above the others. We can't find out whether he still lives in the famous Dance-hall sector of the Post, but we are reasonably sure. Anyway, Major Guy G. Cowen seems a very likely candidate.

Lt. Ralph Pulsifer also strikes us as being quite a bet, though he is a trifle inexperienced in civic organization. There is another candidate. whose name we could not learn, but we believe he lives at 507 Ingersoll St. The principal attributes of the latter seem to be his piano playing ability, which to us seem a bit inadequate to fit anyone for the responsible position of Mayor, especially since Jimmy Walker has left. We'll hope for the best, however, and may the best man win!

Other elections to be held the same night are those which will determine the most active practical joker and the biggest bore of Fort Benning. For the former, of course, two candidates stand out preeminently; Capt. Lloyd Barnett and Lt. Ham Kelly. Whether anyone else at the post stands a chance with these two in the field is a matter of conjecture, though we can't see how there is much possible room for argument. We might add, though, that the joker who made Capt. Barnette's bars is our choice for the third place. As to the biggest bore. we'd rather not venture an opinion.

The omnipotent "Daily Bulletin" again crashes through to score a bull's eye—this time in the role of miracle maker. In the issue for October 19th, we note the following item:

SUPER DANCES:—Reservations for Thursday evening supper dance should be made early with the secretary of the Officers' Club.

While the dances which are a weekly attraction at the Club are very good, everything considered, we can hardly credit them with being SUPER dances, even though every attempt is apparently made to make them so.

Another of the Special Orders sheets contains an apparently contradictory statement. That of October 10, issued by the 29th Infantry, contains the following item: (the italics are ours)

3. Private FLOYD A. SMITH, 6348964, Company G, 29th Infantry, is detailed on special duty with the Regimental Supply Officer, 29th Infantry, Labor Saving Room.

Company Officers End Record Firing

The Record Firing in Rifle Marksmanship for the Company Officers' Class was completed last Tuesday. The results were very satisfactory. One hundred and twenty-four officers participated in the competition; all were qualified. Of these, thirty-six became expert Riflemen, fifty-six qualified as Sharpshooters, and thirty-two as Marksmen. The average score per man was 295.75.

Lt. Vander Heide of the 6th Squad made the high individual score of 322. Lt. Murphy, 1st Squad, placed second with 319, and Lt. Peck and Lt. Howard tied for third with 316. Other officers who made very creditable scores were Lt. Smith, Lt. Thomas, Lt. Johnson, Lt. McCormack, Lt. Miller, and Lt. Mitchell.

The 15th Squad, under the leadership of Lt. C. E. Smith, placed first in the squad competition with an average score of 306.0. The 16th Squad, led by Lt. R. N. Young, was second with 305.5, while the 6th squad, headed by Lt. A. J. Regnier finished third with an average score of 300.2. The lowest score by a squad was 286.1.

These scores compared very favorably with the scores made by preceding classes. The average for the past five years have been as follows:

1931—296.3
1930—290.7

Soldier Gets Letter Of Commendation

Private 1st class Jack Matt, Company "C," 29th Infantry, is the recipient of a letter of commendation addressed to him by Major General Campbell King, commandant of The Infantry School.

During a study conducted by the Infantry Board, of which General King is president, to reduce the excessive load carried by the infantry soldier, the personnel equipment of Private Matt was used as an example.

"In its preliminary study of ways and means to reduce the excessive load carried by the Infantry soldier," said General King in his communication to Private Matt, "the Infantry Board has been greatly aided in its work by having in its possession for many weeks o complete equipment of Private First Class Jack Matt, Company "C", 29th Infantry."

"The extreme neatness, cleanliness, and general soldierly appearance of this equipment so impressed the Infantry Board as to impel the highest commendation."

"The Board desires to thank Private First Class Jack Matt for the use of his equipment during this long period."

General King's letter to Private Matt was transmitted through Regimental Headquarters, 29th Infantry, and Colonel John J. Toffey added his praise to that of General King.

Private Matt, who is twenty years of age, is the son of Mrs. Eva Matt, Barbreck, La. He enlisted in the army in April 1931 and has been a member of Company "C" 29th Infantry, since that time.

Three beautiful selections were rendered by the Scrap Iron Quartet, and refreshments were served after the meeting, which aws enjoyed by all those present.

The next meeting will be held Thursday October 27th at the Protestant Chapel at 7:00 p. m.

"Mick" In At Death Of Large Wildcat

Undoubtedly the most sensational running fight ever staged on the reservation between a dog and a wild cat took place last Sunday. The two contestants fought intermittedly for five miles and the battle soon resolved itself into a strugge to the death.

Captain Llewellyn D. Tharp and dog, "Mick," had sallied forth on a hunt late Sunday morning. About eleven 'oclock, Captain Tharp noticed that "Mick" was intensely excited, and a few moments later the dog had bounded off into the underbrush, nose to the ground, and travelling at a great rate of speed. Captain Tharp's first impression was that "Mick" was on the trail of a fox. While still about three-quarters of a mile away, he heard unmistakable sounds indicating a fierce struggle going on between the dog and his quarry, but by the time the Captain had arrived at the scene of battle, both had taken off again. Tufts of fur and the torn-up condition of the ground testified to the fierceness of the battle. Still further on there was evidence that the wildcat, with the strength born of desperation, had again turned on "Mick," and that a brief but bloody battle had ensued. The cat had finally managed to elude the dog, but with grim determination, "Mick" had first scented the wildcat, his quarry was brought to bay, now thoroughly exhausted, and had not Captain Tharp arrived soon afterwards, the dog

First Meeting With New Officers Held

The first meeting of the new Board of Governors of the Officers' Club took place at the Secretary's office last Friday evening. The formal naming of heads of the committees for the coming year was made as provided for by the recently adopted changes in by laws. Four department heads were officially appointed, as follows:

Governor in charge of Sports: (Including golf, tennis, gun club, etc.) Major T. B. Catron, vice-president.

Governor in charge of Mounted Activities: Major A. V. Arnold, Cav.

Governor in charge of House and Club Facilities: Capt. E. C. Betts, Infantry.

Governor in charge of Mess and Grill: Lt. Harry G. Dowdall, Secretary. The appointment of Lt. Dowdall as a governor is one of the changes brought about by the new bylaws, one of which provides that the Secretary, by virtue of his office, is a member of the Board of Governors, with full voting powers.

The President of the Officers' Club, Colonel William B. Wallace, during the course of the meeting directed the governors' attention to the fact that the chairman of the committee on each of the varied activities is to appoint a committee from the members of the Club to serve with him in driecting the work pertaining to his particular activities. Some of the committees which are to be chosen in this way are as follows: House, Entertainment, Hunt, Golf, Tennis, Gun Club, Bridge, Polo, etc.

Colonel Wallace also brought out the fact that regular meetings of the Board of Governors will be called during the coming season to take up the phases of work which the Board is expected to carry on. One of the principal of these will be the work in connection with the selection of furnishings and appointments for the new Club building, which is being built at the present time. Bids for these furnishings and appointments will be made up and mailed out to bidders as soon as they have decided on the style and type of appointments desired.

ENTERTAINMENT PLANNED

A novel entertainment will be the feature of election night, November 8th. at the Officers' Club, according to Lt. H. G. Dowdall, Secretary of the Club. Arrangements are being made to give the election returns in the Club as fast as they are tabulated, the electoral vote count and the standing of the candidates at all times up until midnight.

The returns are to be brought to the Club in three separate ways, over regular radios broad cast channels, over short-waves and over the long-wave station at the Post. Telegraph instruments will be installed at the Club itself so that the figures may be shown as fast as they are announced. Operators will be kept at the instruments at all times and the whole club will be given a newspaper atmosphere by the clatter of telegraph instruments and the tabulation of figures on the board to be provided for the purpose.

Another election will be held at the Club on the same night when the "Mayor of Biglerville" will be elected by popular vote on ballots to be provided especially for the purpose.

A Tweed Raincoat in Gay Plaid

Nowadays we don't grumble about rain, for the delightful new rainy-day togs almost outshine the fairweather clothes. Rain clothes for the youngsters are especially charming—just the thing to send sister to school in a jolly frame of mind. The old utility raincoat seems to be out. Instead we have veritable creations, full of color and beauty. The coat shown is typical. It is of waterproofed tweed in a gay plaid design with a square shoulder effect when closed. It is worn with a wool scarf inside and a gay little hat to match.

OFFICERS' CLUB ENTERTAINS WITH ITS WEEKLY DINNER DANCE

The Officers' Club entertained Thursday with the third of its delightful dinner dances. Many reservations for dinner were made; among those entering were: Maj. and Mrs. Phillip S. Wood and a party of ten, Capt. and Mrs. E. J. Lindroth and a party of twenty, and two "No-Host" parties of ten each.

DELIGHTFUL LUNCHEON GIVEN AT GOLF CLUB

One of the most delightful affairs of the week was the luncheon which was held Wednesday for the ladies of Fort Benning at the attractive new Golf Club. The luncheon table was arranged on the Club porch and covers for forty-odd were laid. A lovely bowl of yellow chrysanthemums was used in the center of the table. This luncheon marked the continuation of the "ringer" tournament which is being held. The ladies present at the luncheon were; Mesdames J. B. Woolnough, W. R. Wheeler, R. S. Lytle, R. L. Bodine, J. A. Ladd, T. B. Catron, G. L. Kraft, H. J. Liston, T. G. Newgord, F. M. Hyndman, W. B. Eagles, C. H. Owens, H. S. Kelley, A. P. Croonquist, Wilbur Elliott, G. E. Hull, A. H. Cummings, G. M. Wilson, L. ## Girl Scont Notes

CARDINALS

Tuesday, the 18th, saw the biggest meeting of the Cardinal Troop held in a long time. We now have twenty-four girls, with four patrols. The three new scouts are Beverly and Betty Thorne, the only twins, and Charlotte Fox.

The first thing we did was to form a circle and have the roll call. Then Mrs. Brown talked to us about the new girls and called the names of old and new scouts who, in turn, stood and were introduced. Then we played a game called "Restaurant". Two girls of each patrol were chosen as cook and waitress. The cooks sat in the other room, while the waitresses tried to remember what each girl in her patrol wanted to eat and drink, then ran and told the cook, who wrote it down. Jane Kraft's and Madeleine Matchett's patrols tied for winner, so they repeated it once more and tied again. They planned to fight it out next meeting.

Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Wadsworth decided that we need a new patrol. A ballot was cast and Winnie Stilwell is the new patrol leader. Her patrol members will be announced next week.

Mrs. Brown says that Mrs. Matchett has a wonderful surprise up her sleeve, and that we will hear about it soon! I bet it's something better than wonderful because I happen to know Mrs. Matchett!

DAFFODILS

We opened our Friday meeting with the flag ceremony and inspection. Betty Negrotto and Marion Bloomquist were flag bearers. Then getting down to business we named the patrols. The patrols, their leaders and assistants are as follows:

| Leader | Assistant |
|---|---|
| Ruth Crosby | Betty Negrotto |
| Dorothy Negrotto | Ann Kraft |
| Illis Lee | Jeannette Skow |
| Margie Hieleman | Alison Stilwell |

| Name of Patrol |
| Lone Eagle |
| Red Fox |
| White Owl |
| Penguin |

We had a visit from Mrs. Matchett. Her visit was so unexpected that there wasn't a dry eye in the cabin. Well, along with our troubles, we have laughs!

We were to go on a hike Friday, but two girls had to have birthdays, so we did not have enough girls who could stay the entire meeting to make a hike worthwhile.

I was about to leave out the most important part. We had a play from Ann Cota's patrol. It was to illustrate the Knots and the new name of the patrol. It was funny as can be. The act called the fox hunt was the funniest. Ann Cota came in as an English count, yelling for his red coat. About that time Betty Ann Albright came running in with the answer, "Yas, suh."

Well, this is all I can scrape up beside the good-night circle. "So long" until next Friday.

Beatrice (Boots) McNulty—Scribe.

PINE TREE

We Pine Trees are terribly interested in our work! The last meeting began at three, and we were so busy having announcements, organizing a new patrol, having patrol meetings, and reviewing and learning the Tenderfoot knots, that before we knew it, it was twenty minutes past finishing time!

Miss Tina Hinkley, a visitor on the post, who can both sing and play the piano, came to the meeting with our leaders and helped us very much with our songs. After a little practice we were singing so loud and lustily that Mrs. Matchett would have been delighted, and maybe a little astonished.

After working so hard on our knots we only had a very little time left, but it was enough to plan a hike for next time!

A.A.U.W. To Hold Meeting Wed.

The Columbus branch of the American Association of University Women is extending a cordial invitation to all eligible women of Columbus and Fort Benning to become members of the local branch. The intial meeting of the group for the autumn season, will be held in the auditorium of the Public Library next Wednesday afternoon, October 26, at 3:30 o'clock, and all eligible women who are interested in enrolling are invited to be present.

A small, but interested, group effected the organization in Columbus late in the spring with Miss Missouri Binns, president, Mrs. Wheeler Tolbert, vice president and membership chairman, Miss Myrtle Blackmon, secreary, and Mrs. Brown Nicholson, treasurer. Mrs. Mark Mote was largely instrumental in organizing the branch and will serve as program chairman for the year.

The A. A. U. W. is an association of college-trained women interested in the development of women's education and of professional opportunities for women. It numbers more than 35,000 members in 555 branches, with headquarters in Washington, D. C., and is a constituent member of the International Federation of University Women. Among the privileges offered are: eligibility for the graduate fellowships offered annually by the Association, membership in the International Federation of University Women with guest privileges at the European club houses, non-resident membership in the National A. A. U. W. Club in Washington City with the privilege of spending one month a year without expense, opportunity to join adult education study groups organized under the supervision of specialists, includes subscription to the quarterly Journal, opportunity to meet other university women with whom you have much in common, enables you in some measure to pay your debt to your college by using your influence for the maintenance of high standards and the assurance of fine opportunities in higher education for women.

Only the graduates of colleges and universities approved by the Association of American Universities are eligible to membership. National and associate memberships are offered. It is probable that many of the army ladies residing at Benning are eligible and it is hoped that they will enroll with the Columbus branch during their residence here. Those who are members of another branch are invited to become affiliated with the Columbus group for the year, and are cordially invited to attend the meeting at the Library next Wednesday.

McGoofus has flung down the gage, but we're hesitant about picking it up since it is liable to be as much of a boomerang as anything else. In this connection, however, we are going to point out one queer thing about E. F. H.'s "Flare" this week. By reading carefully, you will note that he has received a letter, purporting to come from neither sex and which is signed simply "An Admirer."

In his next, and explanatory, paragraph, the Conductor arbitrarily ascribes the origin of this piece of fanmail to a "she." What we can't figure out is by what process of telepathy the Conductor discovered the sex of his admirer? Maybe it was the handwriting, though we're doubtful. Such things are deceitful sometimes.

On the other hand, maybe the Conductor is still young at heart and still possesses enough attraction for members of the opposite sex to feel confident that his admirer would naturally be a lady. Or maybe he feels that only a woman would have enough tenacity of purpose to sit down and write to him. At any rate we'll leave it up to you to decide just what motives inspired him to describe his "fan" so well.

LIEUTENANT PEEPS' DIARY

Monday, Oct. 10

The announcement of Fire Prevention Week does give me leave to exert restraining force on Long, Ewing, and Stika for, verily, the hods from which they do incessantly draw clouds of smoke are indeed fit subjects of the week. Where there is smoke there is fire but in their cases were the fire in proportion, the locker-room had long ago been consumed.

Our first day of record firing with the rifle and I would that Major Easley's harangue to us before beginning could be perpetuated in eternal bronze. Yet perhaps it is as well that it has not been and he thereby saved some embarrassment. For myself, I did cast to the winds the hard work of the past two weeks and did commit every error in the book of the recruit. At rapid fire I found myself reloading as gracefully as a cub bear in a wasp's nest and altho I did pull the trigger hard and give each shot a good push with my shoulder, to increase its momentum, yet some shots failed even to reach the target.

And so to my domicile contemplating ruefully the amazing resistance of the human mind to positive instruction.

Tuesday, Oct. 11

To school at eight in my best bib and worst tucker that the photographer might chance to collect on his camera insurance. It does appear, from our supervisor's insistence, that this class picture is the most important item in the curriculum thus far. And he did adjure us to appear well-dressed from the waist up, but whether because he feels us capable of no better or because of the monotonous similarity of our nether halves, I know not. The picture taken with no further difficulty than a retake made necessary by Phelan's inopportune yawn obscuring two classmates on the first exposure. And I do devoutly hope that the print may be more than a mosaic of passport photographs as such group pictures are like to appear.

To the rifle range to complete the downfall begun yesterday. I am indeed unconvinced that Monday is a day on which to fire record for, Lord, the natural tendency to jump and run on each shot is but doubled by thec ondition of the week-end nerves. I did distinguish myself with a 285 score and thankful that it was no less.

Wednesday, Oct. 12

Our first day of machine gun instruction, at the conclusion of which we were issued guns to take home. And Evans did remark that if this tendency is not curbed, we shall, for the scheduled course in horseshoeing, be taking home an anvil and a horse. Maglin expects it to extend to the course in motors and is enlarging his garage. As for myself, I do thank the Lord that this is not the Tank Course.

Thursday, Oct. 13

Called upon this day for donations of a day's pay to the Community Chest Fund and the sentiment of the Class does range from acquiescence to donating one day of the payless month.

This night dedicated to the cause of map-reading. A fair, balmy night; one which set the coldest heart aflutter with romance. And were I 'to enumerate all things it gives me wish to do, there might be full a score, and map-reading not one of them. 'Twas on such a night as this that Leander swam the Hellespont, yet we assemble on Holliday Hill and pursue the agile azimuth.

It is bruited about the class that the night did so enthrall two of our number that they were, by a searching party, discovered sitting by the Water Tanks engrossed in romantic reminiscences of their first trip on the Albany night-boat.

Friday, Oct. 14

To school an hour later than is my wont for that the Academic Board did donate us one hour this morning for the four gone last night in map-reading. If a fair exchange is no robbery, then I do think that the next grand jury might return a true bill on this count.

Firing on the pistol range this afternoon, and, being especially exhorted by Captain Vermette to put cotton in our ears, McComas was moved to opine that it was but a hoax to get our ears clean.

Saturday, Oct. 15

A day of such rain that I am moved to believe that Mt. Ararat might be located in the Hills of Habersham and that Noah was one of the earliest inhabitants.

Amused at seeing Moore, while in the process of week-end relaxation, eating a potato croquette from his hand and with his fork vainly striving to dissect a buttered roll. Besides amusement, I did experience envy.

Lt. Peep

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

Undulant Fever

The people of America as a whole are not familiar with the diseases called Malta fever, Mediterranean fever, Gibraltar fever, or Cyprus fever. This fever which in its most common type is well characterized by the name undulant, which means periods of fever, sweats, and rheumatic pains with days between which are of more or less normal health. This disease has been more or less common for the past century all along the Mediterranean coast but it was not until 1887 that the specific germ which causes the disease was discovered. The goat through its milk transferred the disease to man.

In only isolated sections of America is it common for man to use goat's milk. In these sections, especially in Mexico and sometimes along the Texas border, typical cases of undulant fever have been reported.

Back in the 1890's dairy farmers began to complain of abortion in their cattle and it was found that this was an infectious disease caused by a specific germ. This disease has spread all over the country. From the infected cow, through the milk, a disease like undulant fever spread to hogs and man. It was not until 1918 that the germs causing Malta fever and contagious abortion were found to be so nearly related that ordinary laboratory methods could not distinguish between them. In this country during the past few years undulant fever has become more and more frequenty recognized. The infection is usually contracted by drinking milk from infected cows. It can however, be contracted by handling the excreta of infected animals or by handling the infected meat.

Prevention of this disease requires the testing of all animals, cattle, goats and hogs, and the elimination of reacting animals.

All persons who care for these animals, and those employed by packing houses, and those exposed to infection in laboratories or other ways should be inoculated.

Milk should be pasteurized.

During the past few years undulant fever has been reported quite often in the state of Georgia. The laws require that any cattle brought into the the state be tested for contagious abortion. This requirement does not however prevent the development of this disease in cattle that have always remained within the state. As a safeguard to your health all the cattle on the two milk farms which produce milk for sale at Fort Benning have been tested for the disease and all reactors have been elimination from the herds. As an additional safeguard our milk is pasteurized.

Offhand . . . Observations

By McGoofus

Hot zicaty! the Clark Gable turtle neck sweater has made its appearance among the gay blades to be seen about the stables and on the trails Sunday mornings.

The most useful and expressive phrase heard on the campus this semester—"Man, I am certainly strapped this month." This when translated means, of course, that the declarant is suffering from a bad combination of financial mishaps such as deductions under act of June 30, a bad run at cards, a new set of curtains etc.

In a recent issue, Miss Mollie Heilman paid tribute to "Calculator," the late mascot dog of the students. "Calculator" was a notable character in more ways than one. He was wily and intelligent as well as lovable. He would have little to do with individual students, never taking up with any particular ones. One night he would go home with one student for food and shelter and the next night with another. One cold winter night some student officers took him to the Cricket for supper. After supper, for some unknown reason "Calculator" decided that he would go back to Ft. Benning so posted himself on the sidewalk and began watching passing cars. Several officers, guessing what he wanted, offered him rides but he persistently declined until someone came along with a closed car.

The ladies are taking instruction in bridge, golf, riding and numerous other subjects. No doubt they all have a full schedule but it is too bad that they can't find time to get in a little map reading. Any husband who has ever tried to pilot the family transportation through a strange town to a designated point while the dear lady held the map and did the navigating will recognize the eminent need for such instruction.

McGoofuses' latest data collecting endeavor has been the gathering up and assigning of serial numbers to all wise cracks made at the expense of Benning's excellent narrow gauge railway system. The latest (see "Gunbotham's School Daze" issue Oct. 7, "Do not get off the cars while in motion") rates a serial number well up in four figures.

"Better be damned than mentioned not at all."

CONDUCTED BY E. F. H.

MORE ON THE SUBJECT OF CALLS

Our Emily Post article on the subject of formal calling has had at least one tangible result in that it brought us a fan letter. Maybe one letter isn't so much, but we can say, in all modesty, that should future articles result in a corresponding percentage increase in our fan mail, an extra force of clerks will be required to handle it.

We take pleasure in quoting the letter, not only because it flatters our ego but because it discusses intelligently another phase of the calling problem. It goes without saying, of course, that we are in hearty accord with the author's views. The crude male cannot be trusted with the delicate business of depositing the cards. At best, he would probably leave them in a used ash try and, at worst, he might demand that the hostess receipt him for them. Far better leave it to the wife to slip them behind the cushions of the divan where the maid will find them during the spring house cleaning.

Dear Flare:

While I am not in the habit of writing fan mail, I want to convey to you my appreciation of your latest issue in which you published the Manual of the Calling Card. Since your column is accepted in this household as the last word in what is going on, it has settled once and for all a question that in the past has occasioned many an argument, namely, who should carry the cards for the family.

It has always been my contention that the male is far too ungraceful fishing in his pockets and that the very awkwardness of his search prevents the unobtrusive slipping of the cards to the smoking stand as the niceties of the situation demand. On the other hand, the argument is put forth that since there are no pockets in the "what she goes calling in", she would have to carry the cards in a hand bag. Such being the case, it would be impossible to make more than a single duty call on one tour, as the bag would be forgotten at the first stop.

But now, dear Flare, I have weight behind my argument, and I intend to stick to my rights.

An Admirer.

Our intelligent and charming "admirer"—the non de plume assures us that she is both—brings up, inadvertently perhaps, another major issue. This is the matter of what might be called a rolling reserve supply of cards. We can recall a number of instances when our home life was shattered for an evening by the failure of our otherwise efficient calling companion to carry extra cards to leave under the doors of dark houses that weren't on the list for that particular campaign.

If a calling card weighed as much as a clip of .30 calibre ammunition, there would be some excuse for limiting the load on the calling wife to the exact number of cards that she expected to leave during the contemplated operation. The calling card, however, is both light and compact and we have never been able to understand why women persist in not carrying enough of them to take care of any and all favorable opportunities that arise. This may be a small point, but it is important. As long as the present view prevails that the interests of society are best served by having a man go on living with the same wife until death do them part, as many as possible of the little things that make men leave home should be corrected.

Our esteemed contemporary, Lieutenant Peep, in the last issue of his interesting diary, touched briefly upon an incdent of General and Mrs. King's Barn Dance, which the Flare thinks can stand a little elaboration.

One of the unique features of the affair was Lieutenant Baughman in the role of the Village Constabule. The constable's duty was to arrest vagrants and if a stag wasn't dancing when there were ladies sitting out, it was properly rgearded as prima facie evidence of vagrancy. Constabule Baughman wasn't doing much business because the debs, sub-debs, and young matrons were all so attractive that there were few slackers, but he finally grabbed Lieutenant Cooper when he was catching his breath between partners.

The proper police procedure was followed in handcuffing the culprit to his captor with a pair of bracelets borrowed for the evening from the MP's. After exhibiting his prisoner to the populace for a while, Constabule Baughman grew tired with his company and decided to release him. Not being adept in such matters, the actor constable broke the key in the lock and thereby gave a greatly undesired permanence to the bond between himself and his prisoner.

After vain and protracted efforts to sever the connection on the grounds, the now thoroughly disgusted pair adjourned to the office of the Provost Marshall. The local police force, represented by Corporals Harper and Smith, and Private Hapmaker, who was just coming off post, mistaking the situation for a genuine arrest by some rustic guardian of the law, jumped to assist in handling the recalcitrant prisoner. As Private Hapmaker swung around with his hand on his forty-five, Lieutenant Cooper, who had been holding back and pretending to struggle, cut the comedy with amazing suddenness and came along with becoming meekness to explain that it was all just clean fun.

Subsequent events, however, weren't so funny for there was no duplicate key to that particular pair of handcuffs and it was an hour and a half before the boys were unmanacled. By this time they were thoroughly bored with each other and the party was practically over. Whatever pleasure Lieutenants Baughman and Cooper got out of the latter comes from a feeling of satisfaction over furnishing a lot of amusement for the other guests. It really looks to us as if General and Mrs. King owe them another party.

PLOT THAT FAILED

Another episode of the General and Mrs. King's highly successful party stars Miss Harriet Atkins in the double role of leading lady villain and heroine.

In the great emotional drama, Miss Atkins was ably supported—or perhaps we should say instigated—by Lieutenant Tommy Sherburne, one of last year's Company Officers' Class incorrigibles.

It seems that Lieutenant Sherburne was intrigued by the latent possibilities in the straw slide by which the arriving guests were shot into the midst of the festivities. The enterpris-

Average of .875 Is Made In Forecast

The Herald's newest columnist came through with flying colors in his first effort. I. PREDICTUM, infallible football prophet, achieved the outstanding average of .875 last Saturday afternoon. This was all the more remarkable considering the number of upsets that featured the latest grid menu.

I. PREDICTUM ventured his humble opinion in thirty-five contests; three of these resulted in ties, twenty-eight predictions were correct, and only four were wrong.

In the South, the Herald prophet emphasized the fact that he is rarely capable of error by prophesying faultlessly the outcome of all noteworthy games. While Tennessee was repulsing Alabama 7-3, Vanderbilt was temporarily staving off the Tulane threat by holding the Green Wave to a 6-6 tie. Auburn remained in the running for the conference title by nosing out Georgia Tech., 6-0. Georgia deadlocked North Carolina 6-6. Kentucky was also victorious to retain its lead in the Conference race.

In the East, I. PREDICTUM stumbled thrice. Yale slipped back another notch or so by losing to Brown 7-2 Ohio was victorious over a none-too-strong Navy eleven 14-0, and Pennsylvania spoiled Dartmounth's string of victories by defeating the Big Green 14-7.

A fighting Army team surprised Pittsburgh, who were anticipating another victory such as the 26-0 one inflicted on Army last year, by outplaying the Panthers most of the game, and only the convenient presence of one Heller, star Pitt back, Prevented the Panthers from going down to ignominious defeat. Heller's accurate arm paved the way for two touchdowns via the air route and he scored a third one himself after a pretty bit of broken field running.

Final score: Pitt 18—Army 13. Colgate and N. Y. U. exhibited a tremendous amount of offensive drive in subduing Lafayette and Georgetown, both competent elevens, by one-sided scores. Princeton, for two years the doormat for the Eastern elevens edged further up the football ladder by holding Cornell to a scoreless tie.

In the Midwest as in the South, I. PREDICTUM'S average was perfect. Michigan won over Ohio State, Notre Dame crushed Drake, Northwestern trampled Illinois, and the Boilermakers representing Purdue nosed out Wisconsin by one point. Nebraska succumbed to Minnesota by the same slender margin of victory.

In the West, Washington State upset California while the University of Southern California was being held to a single touchdown by the gamest little fighting eleven in the country—Loyola. Stanford won, as predicted, without difficulty.

THE FLARE

ing lieutenant conceived the brilliant idea of adding to the gayety of nations by concealing a dishpan of water at the bottom of the slide. By the time the arrangements were completed, however, all of the guests had arrived and the problem became one of enticing some playboy to make a second descent via the slide just for the fun of the thing. Miss Atkins was cast in the role of the siren and Captain George Forster was picked for the victim.

Miss Atkins played her part well and soon convinced the unsuspecting Captain Forster that it was up to him to be "The life of the party" and slide down the chute. Accordingly, he mounted the scaffold and started the descent. Another second and the popular captain would have staged an impressive one-man tableau of Ponce de Leon in the midst of the fountain of youth, but just at this point, the leading woman conspirator suffered a violent change of heart. She screamed a frantic warning and the prospective sacrifice to Neptune applied the brakes in time to avert the impending catastrophe.

The lesson of this story, if it may be said to have one, is that women, in general, make unreliable confederates in the great indoor sport of practical joking. Perhaps this is why Commoner Malin Craig is still a bachelor. The wily artilleryman realizes, no doubt, that a wife would compel him to scrap his cherished collection of booby traps.

REPUTATION INSURANCE

Speaking of Captain Forster—he seems to be much in the public's eye these days—we have heard of at least half a dozen women who are afraid to advertise for recently lost compacts since the captain gave such wide publicity to the fact that one had been found in his car.

This reminds us of an incident which occurred at Leavenworth when we were studying to be a Corps Commander. The daily bulletin advertised the finding of a pair of pink teddies on the golf course and, for a month thereafter, no women would go near the Lost and Found Department even to inquire after Junior's missing school books.

BEST PLAY SAFE

One day last week, Comrade Lewis Davidson, in conducting a First Section reconnaissance party over the Corps Area maneuvers battlefield area, discovered a small pile of what looked like unexploded Stokes Mortar bombs.

With that wholesome respect which TNT inspires, Comrade Davidson picked his way forward and gingerly marked the spot with a red flag. Then he plotted it on a map and noted the coordinates.

Returning to the post, he notified the Ordnance Department of the menace to life and limb which he had found and implied that said department take the necessary action. Ever prompt to oblige and particularly so when notified of any high explosive lying around loose, the O. D. experts set forth at once in a truck well supplied with detonating materials.

Arriving at the well marked ammunition dump, the experts found the shells to be loaded with nothing more highly explosive than common sand.

This was told us as a joke on Comrade Davidson and his group of serious tacticians. Presumably a number of the faculty is supposed to know ex officio, ipso facto and possibly cum laude the difference between a loaded Stokes Mortar bomb and a sand-filled dud. Maybe so, maybe so, but we unhesitatingly acclaim Comrade Davidson's actions as entirely correct and proper. When riding or hiking over Benning's great open spaces, we prefer to know that we aren't wandering among unexploded shells that First, Second and Fourth Section experts have passed up as harmless. If the Technical Third says they are loaded with sand—all right. Otherwise, we'd rather have them removed from the premises even if we have to inconvenience our ordnance friends to do it.

ECONOMY RACKET

It is becoming more and more obvious that these United States are going into the red this fiscal year but the fighting Q. M. Corps is not to blame. It is doing its bit to balance the national budget, as the bills for current used in electrical refrigerators prove. Ours charged us with the use of current during two months that we were on academic leave and two weeks that we were waiting to have a defunct refrigeration unit replaced.

Our indignant investigation of the matter, however, has absolved the local office of all blame for what looks like a holdup. It is simply carrying out a regulation which was probably designed to keep the Army in a fighting mood.

I. Predictum Gives Tulane Slight Edge

BY I. PREDICTUM

If the Green Wave from Tulane expects to submerge Auburn his Saturday, it will have to display a better brand of football than that displayed on sundry other occasions. Both elevens are undefeated, although Tulane's record is slightly marred by a tie with Vanderbilt. Several elements enter into the choice of a probable winner. If the game is played on a dry field, for instance, Auburn's chances of victory will be much better by reason of its fleet backfield. Also, it must be remembered that Auburn has an added incentive to win, for once Tulane is hurdled, the arduous path to the Conference title will become comparatively clear. At present, it would appear that Casey Kimbrell, who leads the Conference in individual scoring, will be out of the Auburn line-up because of a bad cold; if so, his absence cannot help but be a severe blow to his team's aspirations for victory. Again, if Chet Wynne, Auburn mentor, can find an effective way of botting up the Tulane threat, Don Zimmerman, his troubles will be for the most part solved. Taking everything into consideration, therefore, your prophet concedes a slight edge to Tulane, but frankly admits that he has his doubts concerning the outcome.

In the three other games of much consequence in the South, Georgia Tech meets North Carolina. Kentucky clashes with Virginia Poly, and Vanderbilt will oppose Georgia. The Yellow Jackets of Tech are favored over their opponents, Kentucky's undefeated eleven should defeat V. P. I., also unbeaten, and Vanderbilt will be a touchdown or so better than Georgia, although the latter team is improving rapidly as the season progresses and may prove to be a real threat to the Commodores. Alabama will have little difficulty in winning over Mississippi, Centre will defeat Birmingham Southern with ease, and Duke should be able to conquer Wake Forest, despite Wake Forest's reputation as a giantkiller. Georgetown will win an easy victory over West Maryland. North Carolina State is scheduled to would have killed his victim in a very short time. As it was, Captain Tharp had to drag off "Mick" who had the wildcat pinned to the ground, and then proceed to put a bullet through the cat's head.

"MICK" IN AT DEATH OF LARGE BOBCAT

Very seldom will a dog, no matter how courageous, attack a wildcat single-handled. The wildcat is a fierce fighter and s said to possess a disposition so mean that it hates itself. But where other dogs would have hesitated, "Mick" plunged in boldly and was rewarded with the fruits of victory; for at the conclusion of the four-hour battle, there was no doubt whtasoever as to who was the victor. In fact, the wildcat was so weak that it was unable to make a dash for liberty when the dog was pulled off.

"Mick" is the offspring of an Irish terrier and an Airdale, both pedigreed dogs. He was one of eight puppies, all of whom were solidly black. One of "Mick's" distinguishing characteristics is a goatee which gives him an almost dignified appearance. He is about eight years old and weighs fifty-five pounds.

"Mick" has had a checkered and varied career. From the tender age of four months, he has been trained by his present owner, Captain Tharp. While still a pup, he showed evidences of becoming a splendid squirrel dog. Later he was taken out at night and taught to hunt coon and possums. Among his other accomplishments, he is an excellent duck dog; and while Captain Tharp was near Chesapeake Bay, an excellent location for duck hunting, the dog proved of infinite value.

"Mick" is exceptionally fast and agile and is for that reason well-adapted to wildcat hunting. He is a courageous fighter, and Captain Tharp recalls occasions when "Mick" has decisively beaten pit bull dogs much larger than he.

The wildcat brought to bay by "Mick" weighed twenty-eight pounds and was easily the largest ever killed on the reservation. It was on display in front of the Officers' Club Sunday night.

THEATRICAL ATTRACTIONS

They Loved The Same Woman!

As two men truly in love with the same woman, John Boles and Warner Baxter depict one of the most highly dramatic episodes in "Six Hours To Live," the new drama from Fox.

Cinema Calendar

for Grand, Rialto and Royal

AT THE ROYAL

SUNDAY, MONDAY AND TUESDAY: Offering "The Big Broadcast," with Bing Crosby, Kate Smith, Boswell Sisters, Vincent Lopez, Arthur Tracy, Stuart Erwin, Mills Brothers, Burns and Allen and Cab Calloway. A really human story of the secrets and events in the great studio of the air. The intrigues of station against station . . . roaring comedy . . . and through it all a down-to-earth convincing love story.

AT THE GRAND

SATURDAY, SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Offering "Six Hours To Live" with John Boles, Warner Baxter and Miriam Jordan. A famous scientist accidentally discovers a formula by which he can extend life for a period of six hours. "There can be no unsolved murders," he declares. "We will simply bring the dead to life, question him as to the identity of the person who did the killing, and the murderer is doomed." There ensues a dispute between the scientist and the police, thus adding a bizarre touch to the romantic drama.

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Offering "The Night of June 13" with Clive Brook, Lila Lee, Charles Ruggles, Gene Raymond and Frances Dee. Action of the pictue is set in a block of four adjoining houses in a suburb of a large city, where four families live their own lives in their own manners, until they suddenly discover that they are closely bound to each other.

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY: Offering "Is My Face Red" with Ricardo Cortez, Helen Twelvetrees, Jill Esmond, Robt. Armstrong, and Arline Judge. A newspaper columnist story that will hit the mark. He peeps into everybody's keyhole—but—prudently stuffed chewing gum in his own!

AT THE RIALTO

NOW PLAYING: Offering "Cornered" with Tim McCoy, Shirley Grey, Noah Berry and Raymond Hatton. A fast-riding, ready-gunned Tim laying down laws of his own. A romance that keeps time to the heart beats of high adventure. You'll very probably like this high-speed, double-barreled western, of a man who was cheated out of respect, forced out of office, because he let friendship come first.

SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Offering "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," with Marian Nixon and Ralph Bellamy. Everybody knows the story. Now you can see it picturized, a clean, sweet, pleasing love romance, in tempo with the wonderful book. A picture that children and grown-ups will enjoy to their heart's content.

TUESDAY: Offering "But the Flesh is Weak," with Robert Montgomery and Heather Thatcher. Love-making is brought to a new degree of perfection as he now woos one woman for her wealth, and another for her caresses. Here's something for the men to try, and feminine hearts to flutter over—Montgomery's latest screen success.

WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY: Offering "The Heart of New York," with Anna Appel, Smith and Dale and George Sidney. Here's the comedy that turned New York upside down with joy. A roaring riot of fun in the big town. The screaming story of a family of paupers who became millionaires. They moved in with the Vanderbilts, thought Rembrandt was a race horse and a lorgnette something to cut the lawn with.

GRAND

SIX HOURS TO LIVE"

Two old friends who had not seen each other for nine years were reunited in the filming of "Six Hours To Live," latest Fox production which includes Warner Baxter, Miriam Jordan and John Boles in its cast.

The friends are George Mairon, Sr. and Eugenie Besserer. Their last meeting was when they played in the silent version of "Anna Christie" in 1923. Marion had the part of old "Chris" and Mme. Besserer played the role which Marie Dressler had in the more recent talking picture version.

Both Marion and Mme. Besserer are veterans of the stage and screen, Marion boasting of more than fifty years as an actor. Mme. Besserer, a native of France, was first on the stage in an Ottawa stock company, eventually going to the Broadway stage. In pictures she has played featured roles in "The Yellow Lily," "Two Lovers," "Drums of Love," "The Jazz Singer," "Flesh and the Devil," "The Fire Brigade," "Madame X," "A Royal Romance" and "Seven Faces."

"Six Hours To Live,' which will be seen and heard Saturday, Sunday and Monday at the Grand Theatre, marks her return to the screen after an absence of two years.

RIALTO

Elissa Landi will play opposite Ronald Colman in Samuel Goldwyn's picturization of the famous dual personality thriller, "The Masquerader." Richard Wallace will direct.

"The Masquerader," contrasting drunkenness and sobriety in its leading male role pretty much the same way that "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" did drugs is being adapted by Howard Estabrook from the play by John Hunter Booth. Its original was in the novel by Katherine Cecil Thurston.

It is Mr. Colman's second picture of the season, following King Vidor's screen transcription of the international stage success, 'C'ynara,' known for a time under the title of "I Have Been Faithful." Kay Francis and a newcomer, Phyllis Barry, play opposite Mr. Colman.

On The Air

THE BIG BROADCAST

ROYAL

THE BIG BROADCAST

"The Big Broadcast," a romantic comedy set against the background of a radio studio, and featuring many of radio's greatest personalities in company with a cast of screen favorites, opens Saturday with midnight show at the Royal Theatre.

Bing Crosby, Kate Smith, the Boswell Sisters, the Mills Brothers, Cab Calloway and his Orchestra, Burns and Allen, Arthur Tracy (The Street Singer) and Vincent Lopez and his Orchestra, all of whom have radio audiences numbering millions, are cast with Stuart Erwin Leila Hyams and other movie players in the picture.

The story revolves around Crosby, Miss Hyams and Erwin. Crosby, in the film as in real life a radio favorite, is so fascinated by another woman that he never shows up at the studio in time for his broadcasts, and consequently gets himself fired. Erwin, in love with Miss Hyams, finds she loves Crosby, and in a magnificent gesture, buys the station and a network to restore the latter his job, for Leila's sake.

But Crosby remains irresponsible, and it is only after a big broadcast in which the other radio favorites are featured that the tangled lives of the three are straightened up.

The picture, written by George Marion, Jr., and directed by Frank Tuttle, is based on the play "Wild Waves," by William Ford Manley.

MATA HARI

"That suicide rumor is only a smoke screen, I'm sure of it, put up by Dubois. He's making his inquiries behind it. Listen to me, Mata!" said Adriana harshly. "These French are smarter than you believe. If you had been available you would have been arrested long ago—yes, and they wouldn't have let you go so quickly, if at all! Now, you are supposed to have gone on a little holiday, presumably with a new lover—not unusual for you. You sent for your clothes—I sent for them. They were taken to your house at Neuilly which I had opened for you by my own men acting as your servants. If they are questioned, they can say yes, Madame was there with her lover for a few days and then left. And if you are wise, if you do not succumb to a lunacy, in a few days you will be seen on the continent, in Holland, where you will be safe till this matter is forgotten. It's been difficult, but I have my arrangements almost completed.

"Your passport I found to be in order," he went on. "Good, I had arranged for you to motor to Havre and take a boat for Amsterdam. It has taken a lot of influence but I have been able to manage it so that there would be no trouble. And in Amsterdam you would report to D-14 who will find work for you for the present. You may wonder why I have worked so hard for you, my dear."

"Oh, no, I don't," she put in with scorn. "You're afraid if I'm arrested I'll talk."

"Perhaps. At any rate, it doesn't suit my plans to let you be arrested."

"And I tell you," she said, having recovered her poise, "it doesn't suit my plans to go to Holland at present. At least—not before I see him."

"You actually mean to go to the hospital?"

"Yes, I do. Don't you see I'm dressed? And you're delaying me."

"You're sure to be arrested!"

"I must see him."

Adriana made a gesture of profound incredulity.

Perhaps she mistook it for helplessness, for her voice changed. There was a note of pleading in it, as she searched that gray face for the least sign of sympathy.

HEADQUARTERS COMPANY

We are proud to know that the Fort Benning bowling team, which is entered in the tri-city bowling league in Columbus, has two of Headquarters Company men on it, Hall and Cameron and the following second line men who can replace the first team, Bixby, LaBonte, "Red" Burns and Richardson.

This team traveled to Columbus last week and played th efast bowling team of Central of Georgia. The team beat the Central of Georgia two best out of three games for the evening. Cameron was high man for the evening. They have played six games and won five of them.

They beat the famous Jack Key Team in Columbus last year and our team is stronger this year and we expect to beat them again when we play them later on.

We announce Pfc. Bishop as the winner of a bet with Corp. Fuller to see which one could stay away from Columbus the longest. Their self-imposed restriction lasted for three months two weeks and one day, till last Saturday when Fuller took the 12:30 P. M. bus for he wicked city (Bishop left also that same day but on the 1:15 P. M. bus.)

The Basket Ball Team of Hq. Co. started practice last Monday. Among the prospects for our winning team are: Tech. Sgt. Mitzen, Sgt. John LaBonte, "Ned" Walden and John Camp, the Cedar Key, Florida flash. The team is coached by 1st Lieutenant Ferenbaugh.

Corp. Frank R. Youngblood (Ex Sgt. Major of Fort McClellan, Ala. has everything at Regimental Headquarters Message Center changed to meet his demands.

Now that football season is here again the usual all week debates between "Red" Burns and "Slim" Cameron are in full swing and better than ever.

COMPANY "B"

Heard of one of the Infantry School's fancy and highly instructive (we're sure they must be) rehearsals: "I'll bet if I was planning a war I could think up one that didn't have so much walking in it. Shucks if you can't run you've got to fight, anyhow, so what's all this walking for?"

Turning out for a review seems to be a disastrous formation for this outfit. First Sgt. Brown made us all turn out and be inspected beforehand and darned if Cates didn't have on a cotton shirt. He got off a few brand new alibis and so missed an extra Sunday K. P. And then when the company was formed into eleven full squads, there was no place in ranks for Sgt. Brown or Sgt. Mintz, or Sgt. Wilkerson, and they were afraid they wouldn't be allowed to stand the parade and have the General review them. But after they had swaggered into barracks, telling the rest of us that we could have all the fun, it turned out that "A" Company needed more men, so they were allowed to put their belts back on and get their rifles out of the racks again and come out and join us.

What we can't understand is why some soldiers would rather go absent than get a pass. And probably Patton, Winfrey, and Shieder feel the same way about it now. All we have to do to get a pass is come into the orderly room and say "Sgt. Brown, may I please have a pass, if you please, sir?" And he says in a quiet tone of voice which can easily be heard on the top floor, "What the hell do you want a pass for?" But lo and behold that very afternoon our pass is waiting for us all signed by Captain Johnson and everything.

And light colored shoes seem to be another stumbling block. We should think it would be a lot easier to spend half an hour darkening new shoes than spending Saturday afternon and Sunday in the kitchen. Kendrick does, too, I suppose.

83rd F. A.

HQ., HQ. BTRY. AND C. T.

Sgt. McLeod was discharged this week and took on another stack with Hq. Btry. More power to you Mc.

Catfish Smith was sent to the service section to fill the vacancy of Sgt. McLeod for three months. He moved his bunk in the room with Sgt. Roper. Watch out Catfish, the room has to be mopped twice a week so you're the man.

Pooch Derrick and Sgt. McCallum have entered the Golf tournament at Rexview. They both qualified and expect stiff opposition next Sunday when the tournament opens.

Colin Pike is giving Bridge lessons. Every evening his pupils assemble in his room to be shown the fine points of the game. Sgt. Phillips was one of the victims and from all reports he heads the class. Catfish Smith thought that a grand slam was a punch in the nose.

We have a few new men in the battery and we all hope that their enlistment in this battery will be a pleasure for them.

BATTERY A

Our friend X-Cpl. May has been heard from. "The Wild Bull of the Everglades" is now located at Panama City, Florida. May is in the deep sea fishng business. Any how we knew that whatever business he was in, it was deep.

It is with regret we learn that our Supply Sergeant E. C. Brown is ill at his home on furlough.

Pvt. Frank W. Taylor has departed for a 30 day furlough up in the hills of East Tenn.

Pvt. Kelso Durham's furlough was cut short. Kelso, the 18th Amendment has not been repealed as yet. We wish you better luck next time.

Cpl. North, Acting Supply Sergeant has been busy this week with his steel Caps in the day and his social functions at night. We are wondering if he will be able to stand the pressure.

In a recent Qualifications Order received from Fort Bragg, N. C. we notice the famous brothers qualified as First Class Gunners. Pfc. Avery A. Owens and Pvt. Benny Owens of Hq. Hq. Btry. & Ct., 16th F. A., Most of us remember this pair, both having been in "A" Battery for years.

BATTERY "C" NOTES

The Battery staged a working party Saturday afternoon October 8, 1932, which was enjoyed by everyone but Corp. Odom, who was unable to ride out on the train and give the battery a demonstration of his skill as a news butch and losing ice boxes. Don't worry Corporal, your correspondence course may do you good.

After arriving on Sacket Hill, the battery was turned over to our barber, an ex veteran, who mmediately showed his ability of handling troops by turning them over to Lieuts. Webb and Stewart who sent out an advance guard at once, under command of Corp. Bryant, who assured the working body of troops that nothing would hinder hem from arriving safely at the place where the sand bags were to be filled.

The B. C. turned the first shovel of earth with the Gold Shovel and the contest for the first completed gun pit on the way. Second Section finished first, completing their pit according to required size in 40 minutes flat. The Third Section and B. C. Detail finished second. Finishing their pits in 40 minutes and .099 of a second, and thereby tying for second place.

The first prize was $2.00 of Post Exchange Coupons and one Carton of Cigarettes. Second prize was one Carton of Cigarettes.

While in the prime of digging gun pits the 24th Infantry Band played "I'll be glad when you are dug you gun pits you."

After finishing the first gun pits, the hard working crews were served with Barbecue, Doughnuts and Coffee, and then proceeded down the hill to the position of the 105 mm position, where a crew including the 1st Sgt., Supply Sgt., Gunner Corporals and cripples, were engaged in trying to dig in a clay bank making very slow progress.

Private Harris has crossed over the "Three Year Line" and twenty-four hours afterwards, he crossed back on this side, only to do the same thing again in the year of 1935.

Someone asked the Mess Sgt. what animal was of the most importance to the public? After much meditation, he replied, "a hog," because there is hardly any waste to his meat. Even his squeal is preserved in a phonograph record known as "The Barnyard Blues." Nope, no waste—I know.

"Coming events cast their shadows before." A certain member of this company was seen depositing some cash in the Ft. Benning bank. A very rare thing for this individual to do. Oh, yes, Christmas isn't far off. He is preparing himself to meet it. A hint to you also.

When leaves begin to scatter, chickens scamper; cats run for trees, and dogs bark—Look out Wilborn is backing out from the parking line.

BATTLING BOZO SIGNED TO SCRAP CORN GRIFFIN

RIP WILL MEET LESTER DARBY IN SEMI - FINAL

Capacity Crowd Expected To See Slagtown Freak Demonstrate

In selecting Battling Bozo to meet John Corn Griffin next Tuesday night in the Post Gym, Captain Phillip T. Fry has perhaps played his trump card for the enjoyment of the Benning fans. It was only after quite a bit of negotiation that the contract was signed, and that Bozo person is now in Benning, training hard for what he knows will be the fight of his career.

Griffin has been itching to get a crack at the Slagtown Freak for a long time, but something always came up to prevent the match. Now Griffin gets a chance to prove he can beat a clown and a fighter all at the same time.

Bozo, too, is glad to get a whack at the prominent chin of the Benning favorite; several times giving vocal evidence of that fact. He has said that of all the fighters at Benning, he would rather punch out a decision of "that Corn Person," and will make this his night to do his best to do it.

Now in meeting Bozo, Griffin has the toughest assignment he has ever been handed. The Slagtown Freak may clown and flirt with the ringside beauties, but he is every inch a fighter. His jabs are snake-like, and his hooks and crosses are something to sit up and take notice of.

Captain Fry may as well prepare to take care of a capacity crowd at the Gym that night, for the Columbus as well as the fans of the Fort will flock to the gates early to get their seats for the fight of the ages.

Punch and Counter-punch

Lester Darby, in his recent defeat of the greatest fighting heart of them all, Danny Long, will meet a real genius of the counter-punching art when he faces Rip Tetherton in the semi-final of eight rounds.

No better match could have been picked to fill the bill in this position than the one just mentioned. Rip is undoubtedly the hardest hitting fighter in Benning in his weight. Darby is in the same category among the

G. M. A. STOPS KELLS 7 TO 6

Barnesville, Ga., Oct. 21—(Special to the Benning Herald)—In a game filled with thrills, the Second Battalion, 29th Infantry of Fort Benning, Ga., went down in defeat before the strong opposition of the G. M. A. team here, 7-6. Prophet, Wilson, Derrick, Blackstone and Saunders were the outstanding performers of the visiting team.

The game was hotly contested throughout, Lt. Ives using most of his squad of 60 men, trying to discover the best possible combination to be obtained.

24TH INFANTRY MEETS STRONG TEAM THE 22ND

Speed Kings of the Happy Heart backfield, supported by a stone wall line, ripped holes in the highly touted defense of the Atlanta Bears, colored professional football team, to win at Fort Benning, Sunday afternoon, 14 to 0.

It was the first football game of the season at Fort Benning, and was also a big upset to local football fans. The Atlanta Bears, made up of former colored football stars, is rated as one of the strongest colored gridiron aggregations in the south. They were favored to win over the team from the Sunset Regiment by two touchdowns.

Surprise changed to admiration with the fans as the Happy Hearts took the play away from the Bears in the opening period of play and kept the ball in enemy territory throughout the period. A couple of 55 yard punts by Myers, Happy Heart halfback, put the Bears back in the shadow of their goal post in the second quarter. The Bears attempted a pass from a fake punt formation. Winston, Happy Heart fullback, raced over, pulled the pass down on the Bears' 30-yard strip and with perfect interference, raced through the opposing team for a touchdown. Myers kicked goal from placement.

Late in the third quarter the Happy Hearts opened a drive from midfield. With Barnes and Hale carrying the ball the soldier team drove down the field on straight line plays that never ceased gaining until Barnes crashed over center from the 4-yard strip for a touchdown. Again the toe of Meyers sent the oval spiraling between the goal posts.

In the final quarter the Bears raged at the Army line in a fruitless attempt to turn the tide but their charges were shattered against a solid wall of defense.

Weekend Schedules Starts Ball Rolling At Benning

Kells Play G. M. A.; Tanks Open Battalion Series; 24th Infantry Tackles Nashville Giants

With the coming of the week end, Fort Benning has livened to the call of the grid. The Second Battalion journeyed to Barnesville, Ga. today to test out their football machne. Sixty players of the Battalion team made the journey. Lt. Ives' team coach, decided to take the whole squad, rather than the twenty men bid for. He took along a field range to feed the players at the scene of conflict.

The Tankers open their Battalion series today. Two of the teams will meet in Doughboy Stadium this afternoon while two more will play tomorrow. Headquarters Company drew a bye for this weekend, and will play next week.

The Headquarters team is conceded to be the best of the league, but the other teams have strengthened this year. The new Tank company has a strong aggregation, with such stellar players as Anthony, Prusinosky, Kulikofsky, Lashevicki, McCullers, Staffer, and many others.

The Battalion will have the privilege of a pick from 125 men for the Battalion team that will be formed later on, as a result of these competitions. It also gives a greater number of men a chance at afternoon athletics, which is well worth while for the organizations.

The 24th Infantry will play their second game at Fort Benning tomorrow, meeting the strong Nashville Giants, southern colored champions of 1931. A good crowd is expected to attend th egames, as last Sunday's contest proved the Sunset Regiment to havea smooth-working football team.

Lt. Howard Johnson is to be complimented upon his efforts and results with this team, as he has produced the best team for the regiment in the last ten years. Great things are expected of this team this year, so watch them.

BOWLING TEAM WANTS CIVILIAN MEAT SOON

The Fort Benning Bowling team, composed of enlisted men of different organizations, is anxious to enter the foreign fields in campaigns. They are already entered in the Tri-City League in Columbus, having recently taken on the Central of Georgia team, defeating them the best two out of three.

They are very anxious to meet the Key team of Columbus in an early engagement, and will glady take on all challengers.

The team has been hitting it off in fine style winning five of six games played. The scores were as follows:

First tournament: a total pen fall of 2905 with Sgt. Davis scoring high with 242, and an average of 213 for three games. The second tournament found the Benning boys a little off, with a total pin fall of 2565 with Private Cameron of Hq. Co., 29th In- Glenn took high average iw7tl 9.h fantry scoring high with 213, Sgt. Glenn took high average with 179.

The team is composed of Sgt. Dezotell, Q. M. C., Sgt. E. C. Davis, I. S. D., Sgt. Heckert, I. S. D., Pvt. Cameron, Hq., 29th Infantry and Private Hall, Hq., Co., 29th Infantry.

HUSTON G O L F TOURNEY GETS FINE RECEPTION

Getting well under way during the past week, the TomHuston Peanut Company's golf tournament at the Rexview course found 60 golfers qualied at the end of the week for competition play.

With two more days to go, officials of the tourney announced that they expected to haveas many as twenty-five qualified before the end of the closing day for qualification, which is next Sunday.

Much interest has been manifest among both the golfers of Columbus and Fort Benning. The game has taken a permanent hold on the enlisted men of the garrison, as shown by the number already qualified for the tournament.

Among the soldiers who have entered the tournament, and have turned

BOWLING ALLEY SCENE OF MUCH INTEREST NOW

Officers' League Gets Under Way With Two Games Already Played

As the season progresses, bowling is coming more and more into its own in the Garrison. To date, seven officers' teams have been organized and two games of the schedule played.

This year the bowling alleys, situated in the Academic Area, have a more colorful crowd each afternoon and evening than any years since their erection several years ago. Higher scores are daily being turned in by the various players, and competition is waxing hot.

To make the competition more inviting to the participants in the game, various prizes are being offered for certain accomplishments.

For a score of 300, (a possible) a prize of $25.00 is being offered.

To the person rolling 200 or better the most times during a week 10 tickets will be given.

The high score for the week also receives 10 tickets.

For the winner of each flight in a month, the prize is $5.00.

For any lady bowling 200 or better a prize of $5.00 is offered.

Those holding high scores on the alleys to date are:

BY B. B. S.

BORN OF SPORTING blood, we are forced to at least give a little notice to publicity issued challenges of all types. Being of the type who enjoys peace in its tamest form, we like to pass up a few now and then, but the sporting blood is still there. What to do, what to do----ah we!

THIS FELLOW McGOOFUS, of the "Offhand" sector of this weekly battle, has issued a challenge to any and all writers (?). We take it up here, with the hope that some more competent person than ourselves will come to the rescue, as we know of no way in which to attack dear old Mack. He has insulted us! Imagine his nerve to put us in the same category as Odd McIntyre, Heywood Broun and F. P. A. ----Well, one can't be insulted by an inferior.

NOW WE THOROUGHLY expect to lose this fight, because we don't want to set a precedent. We have never won a single encounter of any kind, and don't care to break the golden chain of defeat here. We do, however, accept the challenge, and humbly pray the able assistance of all and sundry in this worthy battle. Allied we stand----divided we fall, you know, and after all, that challenge was issued to all concerned, but it is up to him, (Mack, of McGoofus, McGoofus and McGoofus) to start the offnesive movement, and we promise to stay on the defensive all the way. (We still think he's nuts.)

A LAST MINUTE notice from Lt. Howard Johnson pleads with us not to "mention that absurd ventriloquist incident again," and we promise. Thanks, Lieutenant, and may all the little ventrys keep away from your door, along with the long lamented wolf.

"FARMER" FRENCH, of "E" Company, 29th, has now entered from thence forth shall be known as "Kingfish Huey" French, exanother field of endeavor, and ponent of that rare specimen of politicians.

AND CORPORAL FOSTER of the communications section lost a knife worth, (offically) $1.42, and will have to pay for it some way. He has been noticed smoking "Depression Dust" for the past few days,----probably making up the shortage in his personal finances.

CORPORAL BREWER of the same outfit went to Birmingham to see the Alabama-Tennessee football game and lost his shoes, then went to a show at the Main Theatre and lost his hat. (Glad you didn't go to a Turkish Bath, Corporal).

YE OLDE NOTE BOOKE: First Sergeant Craine calls his Austin the "Beetle"----Sgt. Bauer is busily engaged in booking shows and reviews for the theatre goers of the 29th Infantry----Red Lindsey is still the "Grand Old Man" of the Tanks----"Lon Chaney" Reddock will probably step off a good bit of yardage for the Irish this year----And "Believe it or not," Jim Kelley was All-Hunyak center, or sumpin----And some things heard but not appreciated:----Sandpaper scraping on a concrete surface----China Berries dropping on an upturned tin tub during nocturnal hours----Horses eating grass beneath our window at the same hours----Cats on the back fence----And alibis to traffic cops.

RANKINGS ARE MADE OF ARMY TENNIS PLAYERS

From The Infantry Journal

Based on results of the Army tennis tournaments and Leech Cup tryouts held in June and July at the Army-Navy Country Club, the following is announced by the Army Central Tennis Committee as the individual singles ranking of the first seven regular Army tennis players competing in 1932. Several players who would have been entitled to a rating were not included because of a lack of sufficient data.

1st—Flying Cadet Dolph E. Muehleisen, Air Corps, Kelley Field, Texas.

3rd—Major R. C. Van Vliet, Jr., Inf., Camden, N. J.

4th—Major J. A. Dorst, Corps of Engineers, Washington, D. C.

5th—Captain J. H. Drake, 24th Inf., Fort Benning.

6th—2nd Lt. T. L. Sherburne, 83rd F. A., Fort Benning.

in scores good enough to get in for the money flights are: Pooch Derrick, "Keagle" Kjelstrom, "Squirrel" McCallum. Larry Mitzen, and several others.

The trophies offered in this tourney are well worth the efforts of even the leading golfers of the section. They are beautiful speciments of workmanship, and highly complimentar to the winners.

The tournament is open to all golfers of the amateur classes of this section, and all are urged to take part in it. The Rexview course is situaed on the River Road, about a half mile from the city limits, and is well situated for those desiring to enter the play. The greens are of "sand," a crushed rock that stays put, and gives a wonderful chance to improve the putting game. The fairways have been recently gone over and are in excellent condition. The hazards are real hazards, and to the man who gets over the two railroad hazards----good luck!

local civilian fighters. Rip wants to take Darby, and Darby wants to take Rip.

We shall see what we shall see.

Hearkening to the hue and cry of the pack, ye honorable fight fans, the matchmaker has at last put the one and only Grumpy. Grumpy Gordy back on the menu, and to top it all off with a nice coat of adhesive tape, Frankie Mackery of the Tanks is the boy who wll endeavor to trim the great Grumpy.

Mackery has always maintained that he could lick Gordy on even terms anywhere, any time. Grumpy has been of a different opinion. Mackery can hit hard, fast and a heap of them, while the great one is hard to hit. This fight will go the seven round route, with action throughout.

Ben Spivey and Bunker Hill will settle all differences in the only six rounder scheduled for the night. If Hill leaves a bit of his shyness back at the dressing room he will have a slight chance to take the more experienced Spivey. Ben is ay daeroFrbioft enced Spivey. Ben is already suffering a mental defeat at the hands of the hard-hitting 29er, and will be out there with all the all his cunning to stop this raging tiger.

Herbie Yetmeyer and White of Columbus will take on the second four-rounder of the card, which will be one of the features of the preliminary fights. The curtain raiser will feature Tut Tut Taylor and Kid McKoski. Taylor is of the Medical Detachment at Fort Benning and the Kid hails from Columbus.

PREDICTUM GIVES TULANE SLIGHT EDGE

go down in defeat before Florida, and Tennessee has a breather in Maryland.

Two undefeated, untied, and unscored on elevens meeting the East this Saturday when Colgate clashes with N. Y. U. Both teams have shown indisputable evidence of great offensive strength. Colgate's crushing defeat of Lafayette 35-0, after Lafayette had just held Dartmouth to a single touchdown the preceding Saturday was remarkable; no less surprising was the one-sided victory N. Y. U. won over Georgetown. Colgate should win, but the margin of victory will be slender.

Harvard's unbeaten aggregation meets its first genuine test of the season in Dartmouth; the Big Green should be overcome but only with difficulty and Harvard will have to play heads up football all the way. Army, who played a super-Pittsburgh team practically to a standstill last Saturday looks forward to administering a decisive defeat to a Yale eleven which is yet to break into the winning column, and will probably not be disappointed. Columbia will defeat Williams, and Holy Cross will conquer Rutgers. The Fordham Ram meets a formidable opponent in Michigan State, but should win. Pennsylvania will crush Lehigh and the Princeton Tiger has already begun licking its chops in anticipation of its first major victory in three years with Navy as the unfortunate victim.

In the Midwest, Notre Dame, fresh from its overwhelming victories over the Haskell Indians and Drake, faces a below-par Carnegie Tech team, and it is just a question of how big the score will be. And while your prophet is on the subject of Notre Dame, he is becoming more and more convinced each day that the Irish are heading straight for another National Championship. Although his modest nature quite naturally shrinks from incriminating himself in an assertion which will probably be questioned, he feels that he would be doing an injustice to his eager public if he did not give it the benefit of his superior observations.

Chicago will have the doubtful honor of pushing Indiana further down in the cellar position of the Big Ten Confernece. Michigan will have little trouble in subduing Illinois, nor will Iowa extend Minnesota. Nebraska and Kansas clash in a contest which may decide the championship of the Big Six. I. PREDICTUM favors Nebraska. Oklahoma, another aspirant for this same championship will probably down Kansas State.

Pittsburg will take Ohio State into camp and Wisconsin engages in a practice game with Coe, and there can be no other outcome save a Badger victory. Northwestern, who showed a startling reversal of form last Saturday against Illinois, faces a Tartar in Purdue, tied with Michigan for the lead in the Conference race. The outcome is very. very doubtful, with Purdue the favorite. This game, however, is as near a toss-up as any contest will ever be, and your prophet frankly concedes that Northwestern has an excellent chance to win. If it does, Michigan will have a clear road to the championship. One important fact influences your prophet's decision in favor of Purdue; the Boilermakers have everything to gain by winning and nothing to lose, and will therefore apply presure during every minute of what promises to be football classic.

In the Far West, California should able to eke out a close victory over Washington, Oregon should take Idaho into camp easily, and Washington State possesses a theoretical edge over Oregon State, but the issue is in doubt.

The mighty Trojans of Southern Californa, whose goal line is yet to be crossed this season and last year's Naional Champions, face Stanford in the outstanding game in the country this Saturday. Stanford has won five straight victories without a reverse and has an eleven this year reputed to rival the greatest teams that "Pop" Warner has ever put on the field. And although it rubs against the grain, your prophet is courageously going to throw caution to the winds and cast his vote for Stanford. More anon.

Maj. General Fuqua At Benning Last Week

TOWN TOPICS

Speaking impartially, we suppose the aerial demonstration was a success, though there were undoubtedly individuals in whom the stress of events engendered feelings even more warlike than was expected of them. Lt. Dowdall, for instance was immersed Wednesday in solving the problem of providing sustenance to the temporary visitors to the Post, how much of this, how much of that, and so on. (The business of being a secretary isn't what it's cracked up to be!)

Another who was feeling the strain of the past two days was the post publicity officer. (We'll refrain from mention of those whose tempers were frayed by the recent rain. See Gunbotham for commentary on Georgia climate.) The posts's news man was, from what we could see, wavering constantly between his duty to his profession and his duty to the continuous influx of persons seeking information, or guidance, or what not. He can tell you that escorting a newsreel man around the post is no easy job even though the results obtained are much more expressive than prose and do justify the amount of labor expended.

Another major activity at the post is getting slowly under full swing with the nominations of the candidates for the Mayor of Biglerville and for other posts of more or less prominence at Benning. The nominating committee formed for the work of making up a ballot for the fateful night of November 8 has been named as follows: Lieut. "Zero" Wilson, Lt. Pat O'Flaherty, Lt. R. L. Baughman, Capt. Bill Hones, Capt. H. L. Harries, Capt. H. N. Merrill, Lt. G. A. Clark, Lt. Bugs Raymond and Lt. Nelson.

The names listed for election in the principal event, for Mayor of Biglerville, are Capt. George Forster, Capt. R. M. Lawson, and Lt. Ralph Pulsifer. As for the other offices, only one has had candidates named, that of practical joker. Those suggested by the nominating committee for this important office are Lt. Ham Kelly, Capt. Phillip Fry, and Lt. Malin Craig, all of whom have somewhat notorious reputations for activity along the practical joke line.

The other offices which will be listed on the ticket are that of the Most Popuar Member of the Wrecking Crew, the Best Bull Thrower, and the Queen of the Platinum Blondes. The last is a fine exhibition of finesse which is but rarely displayed in any of the walks of life. Any ordinary nominating committee would have, unfortunately, disregarded the weaker (?) sex, but not this one. It fully realizes the potent possibilities of offending the better halves and forestalls it this way. It seems to us that this is one of the most outstanding examples of foresight that has appeared at Benning lately and the committee is to be commended for it.

Dramatic Club To Give First Play

"Pomeroy's Past" Will Be Given By Players On Nov. 11th and 12th

The Infantry School Dramatic Club will produce its first play of the current year on Armistice Day, Friday, November the eleventh. The play will have a two-day run, the second showing taking place the following evening, Saturday, November 12.

The production is a comedy in three acts entitled "Pomeroy's Past." It was played in New York a few years ago with Laura Hope Crews and Ernest Truex in the leading roles, and proved to be a smashing success. The playwright is Clare Kummer.

The two leading roles in the play, Pomeroy Chilton and Amanda Chilton, will be played by Charles Treat and Nelle Totten. Pomeroy Chilton is a well-to-do bachelor dominated by an old maid sister, for whom he has a wholesome respect. When Pomeroy falls in love with attractive Mary Thorne, played by Phyllis Sargent, he finds his tyrannical sister opposed to his marrying her. Mary, in desperation, becomes engaged to Edward Marsh, played by Brendan N. Greeley. Pomeroy then conceives the idea of adopting a child,

Some of the actors in the play are well-known to Fort Benning audiences. Lieut. Greeley took the part of the Spanish osteopath in "Cradle-snatchers," the last production to be presented last year by the Dramatic Club. Phyllis Sargent has had much experience elsewhere and Bertram Pierce played in "Is Zat So?" two years ago.

"Pomeroy's Past" is directed by Katherine G. Cleveland with Lynn E. Brady assisting. The play has been in rehearsal since October 1.

Refresher Class Begins Work On Six-Week Instruction Course

A group of sixteen field officers began their studies at The Infantry School as members of the refresher course after a formal welcome which was extended to them by Major General Campbell King, commandant, on Monday morning. The refresher course is a special program of training designed to acquaint high-ranking officers with the newest developments in infantry methods and weapons, and, for 1932, will be of five weeks duration, closing on November 19.

General King was the principal speaker at the brief exercises which inaugurated the opening of the refresher course. In addition to the new students the ceremony was attended by Colonel Charles W. Weeks, assistant commandant, and a number of other officers of the school staff and garrison.

Welfare Council Shows Fine Record

BY PATRICIA AYERS LYMAN

The Fort Benning Welfare Council has completed this month the first year of its existence as a branch of the Community chest committee.

The women of the Council realize that it is a tribute to their ability and judgment as well as a grave responsibiliy to have entrusted to them a generous allotment of funds from the Community Chest to be spent wisely, efficiently and sympathetically. It is not a task that is accepted lightly, but one that requires much time, effort and prayerful consideration. It is a work that is twice blessed, for those who give and those who receive, for after all there is nothing that quite equals the satisfying consciousness of duty well done.

Unlike most charity organizations the Welfare Council is able to administer its affairs without one cent of overhead expense. Women from every organizaion use their own cars to go to Columbus to investigate every call that comes. If the case proves worthy other trips are made to deliver food or clothing, to arrange to furnish coal, milk or pay hospital bills.

Soldier Dies, Four Injured On Friday

One soldier of the Twenty-Fourth Infantry is dead, two are seriously injured and two more less seriously hurt as a result of an accident which occurred about two o'clock Friday afternoon on the Columbus-Tuskegee highway while they were on their way to witness the game between the 24th Infantry and Tuskegee Institute.

Pvt. George Houston, Company "A," 24th Infantry was killed and Pvts. Eugene Parker and Tony Tate were in an unconscious state Friday evening as a result of the accident. Pvt. Henry T. Day, also of Co. "A," is in the Station Hospital at Benning with a broken leg and Pvt. Walter L. Johnson is at Benning with less serious injuries. Pvts. Parker and Tate are still in the hospital at Tuskegee.

The accident occurred while the Ford car in which the soldiers were riding attempted to pass a car from behind, while traveling at an estimated rate of about fifty miles per hour. The driver, Pvt. Day, lost control of the car, which ran into the embankment on the left side of the road, swerved over to the right embankment, swerved again to the left and finally turned over. The occupants were picked up by unidentified persons and taken to Tuskegee.

Troops Reviewed By Chief Of Infantry

Air Corps and Infantry Participate In Joint Demonstration On Thursday

During a review of the combatant troops of The Infantry School garrison, at Fort Benning, Ga., Thursday, October 27, 3,500 of the flower of Uncle Sam's army passed before Major General Stephen O. Fuqua, chief of infantry, and Major General Campbell King, commandant of The Infantry School.

Heading the long column of the marching troops was the 29th Infantry, whose war-strength battalions gave an impressive exhibition of the potential fighting power of an infantry regiment. The 29th Infantry is kept at war-strength in order to illustrate tactical methods developed and taught at the army's greatest service school. The regiment is used in experiments illustrating both tactical and technical development and is armed with the latest of infantry weapons, including a number of experimental models of machine guns and small cannon.

In its transportation equipment the 29th Infantry illustrates the transitional state of army transportation and it includes in addition to the old reliable four-mule escort wagon, a number of experimental types of motor vehicles.

Next in column was the 24th Infanrty, one of the oldest colored regiments in the service, which made brilliant military history at Santiago in '98.

Company "A" 7th Engineers, a small but highly efficient unit used in technical instruction and fortification work for the benefit of the classes of The Infantry School, was next in column.

Then came the 1st Battalion, 83rd Field Artillery, with its batteries of 75's and 105's, each gun drawn by six powerful draft horses. This also is a demonstration unit used to participate in the numerous tactical exercises conducted at The Infantry School.

The 2nd Battalion, 1st Tank Regiment, with Company "F," 2nd Tank Regiment attached, next in column, gave a vivid illustration of the rapid and varied development of the infantry's most powerful weapon. In his group were light tanks and heavy tanks the latter of wartime model, and a number of other types, including the new, fast, Christie model.

A moment after the tanks had passed the two generals at the reviewing stand, Flight B, 16th Observation Squadron, The Infantry School's air demonstration unit, swooped past at an elevation of one hundred feet, concluding the troop review.

After the troops had cleared the drill field, a battalion of the 29th Infantry, marched to Ingersoll street to participate in a joint air-corps-infantry tactical demonstration. The battalion marching in route column, was assumed to be part of a larger force, which was caught on the road by a group of attack airplanes. This problem illustrated the measures which the infantry would take to protect itself from low-flying airplanes while on the march. When the airplanes were sighted the alarm was sounded, and the infantrymen with machine

Offhand . . . Observations

By McGoofus

McGoofus has often heard that the wily members of the fairer sex make a point of being frequently in company with members of their sex whose index of pulchritude is somewhat lower than their own. They appreciate the value of contrast. There is a suspicion that the use of this trick is not confined wholly to the feminine sex. Lt. Hein, whose hair is getting noticeably thinner, has been frequently observed of late in company with Capt. Fairchild.

Wonder why Major Mulhall has been so singularly inactive this season?

Read General Hagood's story of General Wood and preparedness which appeared in last week's Post. In addition to being an excellent tribute to General Wood, this article gives some idea of the obstacles which have confronted those who have labored for the security of this nation. Some of the sidelights are especially interesting and amusing. General Hagood tells why the machine gun became a cannon and then an automatic rifle, how Admiral Cowie had to discard his fur coat when there was a pay bill before Congress, and how General Ainsworth always wore a seedy black frock coat while congress was in session. Most amusing of all, is the story of the old timer who proposed to revolutionize the system of coast defense by doing away with the fixed-coast batteries and replacing them with sharpshooters who would be armed with high powered rifles and stationed near the channels which mark the entrances to our important ports. They would pick off the pilots of hostile war ships by shooting through the "breathing holes" of the steel conning towers.

Observations concerning the Flag Race: A beautiful afternoon but a bit warm. Riders arriving early to strike up a hasty acquaintance with mounts which chance had given them. Some did not succeed in making this first acquaintance a cordial one. Lt. "Steve" Stephenson, the polo player, decked out in a gay turtle-neck sweater of infantry blue takes a spill before leaving the ring. Charming spectators in the stands come to encourage their riders just as the ladies of another day must have gathered at the lists to watch young fools break their heads and lances for a smile. Lt. "Bugs" Raymond doing a Graham McNamee with the microphone. Evidences of nervous tension among the riders and why not, for everyone has seen news reels depicting what may happen in point to point races. The threat of comic gymnastics of an unknown nature must have been disquieting. The scramble out of the ring. Field artilleryman Ely sloughing through mud half way to his knees trying to recapture his mount within five hundred yards of the start. Wheelbarrow pushers starting at a run an dending in a wheezy walk. News that Major Arnold's mount had collapsed. News that Lt. Bill Dean, one of the gamest riders competing, had had a painful fall. Tom Finley, his mount had gone completely haywire. The artillerymen win in a cloud of dust and so forth but pay only a little the rise of three to one on the pari-mutuel.

Startling Upsets Feature Grid Menu

Several startling upsets in collegiate football circles helped to bring I. PREDICTUM'S average for the week down to .786. In the south, Auburn surprised even its most ardent followers by trimming Tulane 19-7 and thereby pulling the champion off the pedestal it had occupied since 1928. Auburn's victory was emphatic. In another upset Virginia Poly nosed out Kentucky 7-0 to remain undefeated. North Carolina State obliterated Florida's aspirations for the Conference title. and Vanderbilt managed to stave off the Georgia threat. Tennessee reserves crushed Maryville 60-0.

In the East. Colgate launched a bewildering attack against New York University to defeat the wearers of the Purple 10-0. N. Y. U., undefeated until last Saturday, was outplayed hopelessly in every department of the game. The "Red Raiders" from Colgate, boasting an uncrossed goal line to date, thus clearly established themselves as one of the strongest, if not the strongest, elevens in the East.

Harvard, in its first real test of the season, managed to defeat Dartmouth 10-7, aided by a generous sprinkling of lucky breaks. The Big Green fought a courageous battle but the fickle dame, Luck, turned the tide against them. Pennsylvania won an easy victory over Lehigh to remain in the ranks of the undefeated.

Pittsburgh can now understand why Army, a much underrated eleven in the beginning of the season, gave her such a fierce battle Saturday before last. The Army team ran roughshod over Yale and at the final whistle was on the long end of a 20-0 score. The Eli never had a chance. The remarkable thing is that the score did not run into bigger figures, for it hardly indicates Army's margin of superiority over Yale.

A fighting Navy team held favored Princeton to a scoreless tie, and the Tiger may consider itself lucky at that. Several times Navy came close to scoring, but each time failed to come forward with the necessary punch. Michigan State dislodged Fordham from its unbeaten standing in a surprising upset.

Pittsburgh's aspirations for a National Championship received a severe setback when Ohio State held the Panther eleven to a scoreless tie.

In the Midwest, Notre Dame crushed Carnegie Tech. under an avalanche of touchdowns, the Irish winning by the one-sided score of 42-0. Coach Anderson experimented with a plentiful supply of reserve material and did not find it wanting. Backfield after backfield was rushed into the fray, and the first team line saw little action. Northwestern tied Purdue 7-7 in a last mnute rally when the Wildcats, with the aid of two long passes, began a sixty yard march to the Boilermaker goal-line which ended in a touchdown. Fullback Olsen kicked the extra point that tied the score. Michigan continued to sweep all opposition aside by rolling up thirty-two points while Illinois was accumulating a goose-egg. Nebraska and Oklahoma were still undefeated in the Big Six Conference after contests with Kansas and Kansas State respectively. Chicago defeated Indiana, as the Herald prophet predicted although the Hoosiers were favored.

In the Far-west, Southern California overcame its first obstacle in the path of the Western Coast championship when Stanford was conquered 14-0. "Pop" Warner's proteges, although they entered the game as favorites, turned out to be no match for the Trojans. In defeating Stanford, Southern California showed a tremendous amount of power, hitherto undisplayed. The Trojan goal-line is yet to be crossed. California won over Washington by the slender margin of a single point, 7-6, and Washington State defeated Oregon State by the very same score.

South To See Hard Battles This Week

BY I. PREDICTUM

Georgia Tech's one-sided victory over North Carolina makes it doubly difficult to predict the winner in the Vanderbilt-Georgia Tech fray this Saturday. Vanderbilt is the probable victor. Undefeated Tennessee is expecting a great deal of competition from a Duke eleven which possesses decidedly more power than is generally accorded them. Tennessee should win with difficulty. Alabama is favored over Kentucky, who succumbed to V. P. I. last Saturday 7-0, and Georgia should defeat Florida.

Auburn meets Mississippi, the team which gave Alabama so much trouble a week ago. Auburn is the choice by two or more touchdowns. Texas Christian should be able to repulse Baylor and Rice is a heads-on favorite over Creighton. Sewanee will bow before the onslaught of Louisiana State. Texas should have no trouble with a disappointing Southern Methodist eleven and V. P. I. will defeat Washington and Lee with consummate ease. Tulane will crush South Carolina.

In the East the Columbia Lion, hitherto unbeaten, faces Cornell whose record is also unblemished save for a tie with Princeton. Cornell will be strengthened by the return of Ferrara, star half-back, to the line-up. The game is a toss-up with Columbia slightly favored.

In another battle of undefeated teams, Harvard's Crimson horde will oppose Brown. Harvard should win. Fordham, who suffered her first reverse of the season against Michigan State last week, will defeat Boston College handily. Dartmouth is two or more touchdowns better than Yale, who is still striving desperately to break into the winning column. Penn-

Girl Scont Notes

Cardinal Troop

My, but we Scouts are getting along! We're doing nearly everything now. Today Mrs. Arnold came up to the cabin to tell us about the riding this year. She says that there are two hundred boys and girls that want to ride, and sixty available horses! We hope that they will be able to work things out all right however.

Our meeting was packed full of useful things, such as practising the Scout salute, an important and seemingly easy item. A few funny positions are taken, mostly with the elbows out to the side.

Mrs. Brown made some announcements and then gave out the registration cards. Next week we'll have the list of merit badge examiners, so we can get right to work on our various badges.

We now have four patrols, but the new one has not yet been named. It's leader is Winifred Stilwell, whose assistant is Mary Ellen Robinson. The rest are Virginia Wadsworth, Mary Lee Barnes, Anne Yancey, and Elizabeth Ohme.

Daffodil Troop

Well, Friday's rolled around again, and the third meeting of the year. We started off with the flag ceremony and inspection. Peggy Arnold and Anna May Huling were flag bearers, and Lyllis Lee gave the order.

It was a very busy day for the Scouts of Troop No. 2. Everybody was given a slip of paper and a pencil. They wrote the names of the badges they would like to pass. Then we played "Eliza crossing the ice." Ann Cota's patrol came in first with Margie Heileman's second.

Beatrice McNulty

Pine Tree Troop

That saying, "more fun than a picnic"! We had more fun than any picnic at our meeting last Wednesday, which wasn't really a meeting, but a hike. Trail blazing and following, marshmallows—and—but I'm getting ahead!

We left the cabin in two groups, with Phyllis Partridge's and Barbara Monroe's patrols in the lead. We went across the old golf course to Block 40, tying grasses and piling stones and making arrows along the way. Then we followed the road that goes by the filter plant, still making signs and writing notes calling attention to the gorgeous views and lovely auutmn leaves.

Finally we came to a clearing that suited us perfectly, and immediately began collecting pine needles and brushwood for the fires. The patrol points this time were for the best fire, clearing, and the "putting out." Then we planned to hide, and see if the other group would turn in, following our arrows. In the meantime, we had sent a girl back to give us a bob-white whistle when the other group was in sight. We could hear her whistling, and then there was a silence, because the other group stopped for a moment to listen to what they thought was the golden voice of the Bob-White! We heard them laughing along, but they didn't come. Soon we found that from a danger signal (a pile of three stones), the top one had fallen to the right, meaning turn to the right; and having a road right there they had gone on to the right!

The four patrol fires were soon built and lit and roasting marshmallows for us! The sun insisted on going down, do what we might, so reluctantly, we lifted our baggage and marched on. (The baggage consisted of a First Aid snake bite treatment, happily not used on Wednesday.) We formed patrols, and marched to some Scout tunes, which shortened our homeward hike considerably.

Glee Club Selects "The Debutante"

The Fort Benning Glee Club held its third meeting of the year in Biglerville last Monday evening. At this meeting, the members of the organization decided upon an operetta to be presented under the auspices of the Club later in the year. The title of the operetta is "The Debutante," written by Victor Herbert. This same musical show, when produced in New York some years ago, had a long and successful run.

Active practice for the operetta will start next Monday night and the play will be cast within the next two or three weeks. Professor Vondereau is in charge of the musical rehearsals.

If present plans materialize, the operetta will be presented on the tenth day of March. There will be rehearsals from now on every Monday night until Christmas.

Committees Are Named For Club

The committees have been appointed to direct the various activities of the Officers' Club, according to information received last week. These committees are to determine the extent in some cases, to which each activity will be emphasized and to carry on the work of directing its policies. Those elected are as follows:

Golf Committee

Major G. L. Kraft, Captain Virgil Bell, Capt. R. S. Miller, Capt. H. J. Liston, Capt. A. E. Burnap.

Polo Committee

Major N. C. Johnson, Captain Edward C. Betts.

Hunt Committee

Major Sereno E. Brett, Captain S. H. Negrotto, Capt. J. A. Nichols.

House Committee

Capt. A. B. O'Connell, Capt. A. J. Perry, Capt. G. J. Forster, Capt. E. W. Lewis, Capt. H. J. Golightly, 1st Lt. George Lightcap, 1st Lt. G. J. Gabriel, 2nd Lt. T. L. Sherburne.

Entertainment Committee

Major Alfred Mordecai, Captain William Hones, Capt. Marcel A. Gillis, Capt. R. M. Lawson, Capt. Lloyd Barnett, Lt. Mark M. Boatner, Lt. J. E. Raymond, Lt. E. F. Easterbrook, Lt. R. A. Ports.

Tennis Committee

Major H. B. Lewis, Capt. J. H. Drake, Capt. R. O. Bassett, Capt. W. C. Phillips.

Trapshooting Committee

Captain S. L. Buracker.

Bridge and Chess Committee

Major T. S. Arms, Capt. H. J. Matchett, Capt. Raymond E. Vermette.

Officers selected to represent the classes of the Infantry School on the Board of Governors of the Officers' Club are as follows: Advanced Class, Major John S. Switzer, Jr.; Tank Class, Capt. F. J. Heraty; Company Officers' Class, 1st Lt. G. L. Dewey.

The Grapevine Telegraph

Ever since Barbara King had a Barn Dance and introduced the Post to informality via a truly agrarian chute the Grapevine Western Union has been taking lots of wires. The Grapevine Operator came up in an ingratiating way a few days ago and confided that he thought a few should be published. We hastened to oblige . . . the Operator was really a very charming person . . .

What about these coon hunts? We hear they are increasing enormously in popularity; that flashlights alone are used; and that invariably the Hunters return minus several couples. Sounds fairly incriminating! Have you been on any of these "hyar" hunts?

And speaking of Coon Hunts when two pore helpless little coons were rudely awakened the other night and shaken from their slumbers on the branch of their chosen tree there was said to have an awful stir and confusion on the part of the dogs. Finally one young captain was seen to emerge breathless from among the dogs. Really, need one be quite so bloodthirsty? Captain, how could you?

But the whole accusation can't be put on one person. It seems that the majority of the feminine members of the party, instead of retiring decorously behind some sheltering bush and waiting for the worst to be over, were on the other hand the closest to the coons and the first to drink in all the gory details. The subject of Coon Hunting seems to have taken a sufficient beating. Now, just let anyone dare to be seen on another Coon Hunt. No, the Herald does not belong to the S. P. C. A. in spite of all such indications. . . .

Today's Fashion

By VERA WINSTON

A Coat of Deep Brown, Trimmed With Beige Fox.

As good as a fashion parade is the street scene just now, offering a procession of clothes as lovely as one might ask to see; all wearable and carefully chosen—a parade of the season's successes. The most attractive coat shown here is in deep brown, with a trimming of beige fox. The collar of fur extends to a most original fur trimming at the elbows, while the belt at the back extends only to the side seams.

PAN-HELENIC LUNCHEON DELIGHTFUL EVENT OF WEEK

One of the most delightful events of the week was the Pan-Hellenic picnic luncheon which was given Tuesday at the attractive cabin of Mrs. J. B. Woolnough for the college women and members of the different national sororities. About twenty-five ladies assembled at Mrs. Woolnough's quarters and from there motored out to the cabin where an informal picnic luncheon was served. Those that wished played contract bridge later. The hostesses at this affair were Mesdames J. B. Woolnough, Robert Wallace, C. H. Owens, R. J. Nelson and H. C. Granberry. One of the aims of this luncheon which was the first meeting of the Pan-Hellenic since last summer was to welcome the new members who have recently arrived at Fort Benning. Similar affairs will be held every month.

HALLOWE'EN PARTY AT OFFICERS' CLUB THURSDAY ASSEMBLES LARGE NUMBER GUESTS

A large number of guests assembled at the Officers' Club Thursday evening to enjoy the Hallowe'en dinner dance. The club was appropriately decorated in the Hallowe'en spirit. Crepe paper affects of black and orange were used and decorating the tables were jack'o'lantern pumpkins and bright autumn leaves. Among those reserving tables were: Maj. and Mrs. G. L. Kraft and 20, Capt. and Mrs. Lloyd Barnett and 20, Capt. and Mrs. C. H. Jackson and 10, Capt. and Mrs. W. C. Phillips and 20, Capt. and Mrs. J. H. Hinwood and 10, Lieut. and Mrs. R. G. CONTRACT AWARDED

The contract for shades and curtain rods to be placed in the nine new N. C. O. quarters being built by McIver Construction Company has been awarded to the MARTIN FURNITURE CO.

This is the fourth contract of this nature that has been given Martin's because of the high quality of their goods and the low prices required by the government. This same company placed shades in the Medical Detachment Hospital, the 29th Infantry Barracks and the Tank Barracks, this probably being the largest single order ever placed for shades in the Southern States.

The line of furniture carried by Martin's is of the same quality as their shades and their prices relatively low. Before buying go in and see their goods.

GUNBOTHAM'S SCHOOL DAZE

BY E. L. M.

"Now remember," greeted Topographer Bloomquist in reviewing map-reading for the advanced class, "use oranges for attack, bananas for defense. It's easy, see? Make a nice little circle—like an orange, for artillery in the attack. Slap down a good old banana for your defensive fires. Just remember it that way. Simple. Oranges for attack—bananas for defense. Easy, isn't it? Got it? Oranges for attack, bananas for defense. Yes, Captain Ross, you have a question?"

"Yes," said Capt. Fay Ross, "where do you get them? I mean, what you've been talking about. Those orange pencils?"

We've been fed up with this column for some weeks. A wealth of material worthy of comment has come to hand but we haven't been able to use it.

If we say what we think about that charity barbecue E. F. H. will slap our ears down—because he ballyhooed it, and the Lord knows he enjoyed it anyhow. To remark that Col. Throttlebottom is that way about Mrs. Schmaltz would obviously be courting disaster. Our personal opinion of the Georgia climate, or of the Thursday night dinner dances, or of a lot of things, valuable as we consider it—would undoubtedly provoke a flood of comment from the High Command, being as it were a negative morale factor.

No, we're sort of damned to a policy of turning a spotlight on the foibles and blunders of the helpless.

You see, we can't:

"The shuddering breath of blackened night falls down
Upon the earth and drapes a sombre gown
Over the wanton nakedness of Day."

The Flare does enough of that already—poetry, we mean. Nor can we say, for instance, that movies should be obscene and not heard. McGoofus pulls those bum gags to the point of saturation.

To remark that "Lt. Carl Westlund has the ducky-wuckiest roadster. And he calls it Yellow Peril" would be stealing thunder from the Mirror. "Some impressions Autumn in central Georgia . . . Demonstration week . . . Fallen arches . . . A cold drizzle of rain down the back of the neck . . . mud slipping softly over shoe tops . . ." Town Topics has a copyright on that stuff and he can keep it, anyhow.

Ah well—we have fun once in a while. For instance, the prima ballerina of the Dance Marathon raised cain at the Herald office because of Gunbotham's recent heartless remarks.

And Topographer Bloomquist (how that name bursts into print these days!) repeated to the company officers that they're the best class he's seen at Benning—a fine, earnest well-behaved group of young students. And that not in the entire group could be found such a—such a—well, any how, he meant that Gunbotham wasn't there. So at least two people have been reading this column.

Transportation of the nine-hundred odd (and we mean odd) six-ton tanks now in the service has become a mere bagatelle and tank carriers are now a thing of the past, according to the statements of "Christie" Spettle, motors expert now on duty at Benning.

"The first step of the problem is already solved," reports Spettle. "Shucks, I can knock off both tracks in fifteen seconds. What I'm working on now is how to run 'em without tracks. Watch me!"

Mike Heraty feels that the sooner the old tanks are busted up and plastered with I. C. signs, the better we'll all be.

"But they've got their points," says he. "You can free wheel 'em, you know. And backwards, too."

Captain Bill Hones, after dinner speaker par excellence, and impresario whose annual demonstration of the life of Major Kombat Orders brings lusty applause, remembers with satisfaction the simple ceremony following last year's demonstration week when he was awarded, for gallantry under fire, the tin guidon of the 10th squad.

"Yes," he said dourly as we watched

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

CANCER

Cancer can be cured in its early stages. Cancer is not contagious, nor is it in itself hereditary.

About one woman in eight and one man in eleven, of those that reach the age of forty, die of cancer.

The menace of cancer lies in the fact that in its first stages there is no pain. Its victims do not often know that they have the disease until it is well developed.

THE DANGER SIGNS: On the skin, cancer often begins as a wart, mole, lumps or scab. It may begin in an unhealed sore or old scar. Lumps in the breast are especially suspicious. If you have any of these things, watch them. If they change in appearance or size see the doctor at once.

Cancer inside the body often gives signs before a lump can be seen or felt. Increased or irregular discharge or a return of flow after the change of life in women, or blood in the urine of men are always suspicious.

Cancer of the stomach or bowels is more difficult to discover.

A health examination every year helps to find these danger signals.

Medicines are useless in the cure of cancer. Surgery often cures in the early stages. X-ray and Radium are of value and effective in certain cases.

To cure cancer it must be destroyed. This must be done early or it will destroy you. "He who hesitates is lost." Act now.

Lt Peep's Diary

Monday, Oct. 17

To school with laggard step bethinking me of Captain Trechter's final word to us at Automatic Rifle Class last Friday. "See you Monday. Functioning." Oh me. Well, he shall see us.

Most proud of myself for that I could in machine gun work this day replace the barrel plunger and its spring without mishap. None but my good wife can appreciate the feat albeit her appreciation is somewhat dulled by a pierced lamp shade and greasy spots on the window curtains. After I had plucked the thing out of the fireplace. from behind a book case. and off the bridge of my nose she did quiz me as to the range and accuracy of the piece, and much taken aback to find that it is only a part and not the weapon itself.

Explanation in detail by one of our learned masters on the difference between cams and lugs. This followed by a definition of camming. And it was with difficulty that one of our chief questioners was restrained from calling for a dissertation on lugging. But being so restrained he did ease his mind by relieving himself of the story of the bride who went into a meat market and asked for a chicken. The butcher said: "Do you want a pullet?" And she did reply: "No, I wanta carry it."

And so to lunch considering the wide range of subjects covered by the Infantry School.

Tuesday, Oct. 18

Impressed this day with the reason for the Academic Department medical office and personnel. One Andrew Hamble of the Company Officers' Class did drill with his machine gun with so great an abandon that he was near unable to recoup for the afternoon's work. In his exuberant dismounting of tripod he catched his thumb between trunnion pin and cradle; at "Load" he engaged his finger with the bolt in the feedway; and shortly afterward did drop the tripod on his foot.

In peace one learns the deadliness of the implements of war.

Wednesday, Oct. 19

Up betimes for that it is my day to drive the car. There are occasions when I could wish to take this course by correspondence.

Laughter in the assembly hall when Regnier, being in a befogged state, did report himself absent. And, but for the din that followed, I no doubt should have heard the time honored response to such reports, "march off your absentees."

A gorgeous afternoon on which to go map reading in the field. If the Treasury must take pay from me then I do hope that it is upon such days as this that they would take it. This hope engendered partly by the benevolent state of mind into which the weather puts me and partly by shame at accepting pay for an outing in the woods and a free bus ride. Yes, surely, today is one of this month's payless days.

Thursday, Oct. 20

In a great stew this morning to get myself arrayed in woolen clothes. Forced by my auto companions to ride to school in the rumble seat and it was as well I did for it did almost completely ventilate away the odor of moth balls in my military soldier clothes.

The first half of the morning enlivened by movies of the automatic rifle at work, a most interesting and well received feature. But that the short subjects were entirely missing the show might have been acclaimed a max. As it was presented it might indeed be suitable for the Advanced Class but we younger folk crave Terrytoons and Silly Symphonies as well.

The urge to play upon the words used in our daily work seems irresistible. The work on stoppages with the automatic did inspire Bus Howard to comment that he had let his cook go "because of a first position stoppage—failure to feed." Yet she had been still in his employ had he been afflicted by another first position stoppage—failure to fire.

ANOTHER FAMOUS RIDE

History is replete with famous rides—Mazeppa's, Paul Revere's, and Sheridan's, just to mention a few—but it records none exactly like the one pulled off by Senores Rodriguez and Castano on the occasion of the Advanced Class night treasure hunt. We are fortunate in having an eye witness account by War Correspondent Captain George Bloomquist, supplemented by the dictaphone recorded conversation of the heroes themselves.

The thunder of hoofs and strange apparitions of flashlights piercing the darkness between the ears of two galloping horses; a cloud of dust in the darkness and a trampled instructor from the second section yelling with pain—it was only the Castilian Caballeros Rodriguez and Castano of the Advanced Class checking gratefully and happily into Station B.

Spoke the instructor holding his bruised knee and digging the dust from his eyes: "Where in the world have you two been during the past hour?"

"Captain," replied the Dons in the happy elated voices of local dramatic club stars, "We have had the most unusual experience. We left Station A in the 23rd Infantry Woods, it was a beautiful night; the stars—oh, the stars—

"Yes, yes go on"—urged the Instructor.

"We rode on a trail, straight as the light from the rising sun—it was beautiful—the trail and the stars and the trees—anyhow, we rode and far away we saw a light on the ground. Oh, this is fine—let us hurry and check in, so they will know.'

"Then, Captain, it was strange; we cried out in the dark, 'here we are, we are here—Rodriguez and Castano'—We get down from the horse—and it was strange—we have come to the same place from which we started, and that is why we're a little behind the schedule."

PERMANENT SET

It has always been the pride and boast of The Flare that its stories are true and that it supplements the facts with the names of the high performing parties. We intend to adhere to this policy but occasionally we encounter a conspiracy of silence as regards the names. Witness our recent failure to obtain those of the officer and lady who left cards on Mrs. Tucker as she lay in a swoon on her doorstep.

Now we have another tale which would bring its heroine deserved, albeit undesired, publicity if we only knew who she is. Mrs. Jack Thompson, prominent horsewoman and sparkling conversationalist, vouches for the authenticity of the incident but, like Mrs. Tucker, she refuses to identify the party.

It seems that thrifty Mrs. Hoosis had a dress that was no longer required but was much too good to give away. Accordingly she offered it to the maid at an attractive price. The maid, after a critical inspection of the garment before her mirror brought it back to her mistress.

"How do you like it?" queried Mrs. Hoosis.

"I likes it just fine," replied Desdemona, "Yes ma'am, it shore is a beautiful dress and it ain't been used hardly any. The only thing I has agin' it that it looks like it's jes a little bit rump sprung."

NIGHT RIDE AWARDS

Prizes awarded by the engineer group at 1:00 p. m. Monday, in Kriz Hall, were distributed by funster Harry Kelly of the class at the daily reunion, as follows:

To Captains Lambert and Ring, who left their horses, close to Zero Wilson's orderlies, and, scorning the smoke-infected regions of Fiske Range, proceeded on foot to Station C, thereby bringing great Kudos to themselves. Not content, however, with taking cover in the deep rifle pit, as Captain Gaillard with a lantern was doing, they then returned under great danger to the busses thinking to ride home in comparative comfort. Here, at the suggestion of a hard hearted instructor who implied that they had not spent sufficient time in the saddle, they mounted up again and disappeared into the night. At 1:00 a. m. they themselves bedded their fiery chargers in the stables where sad eyed Wilson paced the floor. For this meritorious achievement they reecived one black and silver flashlight, corrugated.

To Major Rodriguez and Captain Castano for general "all around" excellence as previously noted, a silver-plated double action, long range flashlight.

COLONEL, HOW COULD YOU!

"What kind of a dog is that?" asked Colonel Weeks of Mrs. Merrill.

"Well," replied Mrs. Merrill doubtfully, "His mother was a pointer and his father was a setter."

"Ah, I see,—a poinsetter," chortled the Colonel.

WHAT THE FROZEN DESSERT FIEND SHOULD WEAR

Captain Daniel Ross, one of the Advanced Class Bachelors who boards at Dowdall's Tavern, is the undisputed ice cream eating champion of Fort Benning if not of the entire Army. His daily routine performance consists of one or two double portions for lunch and dinner with a few cones between meals and maybe a modest single helping to top off a good breakfast.

On the first day of our early fall cold snap, however, the Captain's messmates noted that he not only omitted his customary morning ice cream ration but even neglected to order any for lunch.

Mine Host Dowdall naturally assumed that the fall in temperature was responsible and openly commented on the fact that even so confirmed an ice cream addict as the Captain would have to regulate consumption according to the thermometer.

That afternoon, however, Captain Ross was discovered at the soda fountain making up for lost time.

"I thought the cold weather made you go off the ice cream diet, but here you're at it again" remarked Mine Host. "Is there any explanation?"

"Sure," replied the general Captain. "I went home this noon and put on my heavy underwear. Now I can eat all I want."

SAFETY FIRST BARITONE

While featuring Captain Ross, we must not fail to mention that he has hit upon an infallible method for keeping from falling to sleep while driving a car. It is quite simple, too. He sings at the wheel.

THE FLARE

One evening last week Promoter Phillip Fry accepted an invitation from Captain Ross to go into town with him. The day had been a hard one for the Advanced Class for there were only a few lectures and the boys hadn't been able to get in the customary allowance of extra-nocturnal slumber. As a result, Captain Ross was quite drowsy and had to take special precautions to keep awake. Accordingly, he sang all the way in, all around town and all the way back.

Promoter Fry states that he didn't mind the open road concert—much. He contends, however, that the Captain's crooning propensities make him an undesirable companion for cruising city streets.

THE HUNT SEASON OPENS

The Flare congratulates Inventor Negrotto and Tanker Brett on the first hunt of their regime. It was a well managed affair, designed to give the less expert lover of the chase an opportunity to see the work of the hounds.

There were no casualties and the only serious breach of etiquette which came under direct observation was Lieutenant Duffner's warning cry of "Fore for that hole." To apply the terminology of a plodding game like golf to the noble sport of hunting is reprehensible, of course. If that sort of thing is allowed to continue some crude barbarian might refer to a "cover" as "the rough" or even call a jump a "hazard." In extenuation of Lieutenant Duffner's offense, however, it should be said that he only arrived at Benning last summer and hasn't been out much among the horsey set.

POLITICAL NOTE

Lieutenant Lyman Munson, our talented contemporary whose occasional contributions to literature appear in Benning Herald under the nom de plume of Gunbotham II, was among those who visited Warm Springs last Sunday to greet Franklin Roosevelt.

This is the first indication we have had of the literary lieutenant's active interest in politics. We have always assumed that he held to the true mercenary soldier attitude and didn't give a whoop which party furnished the next commander-in-chief. Indeed, we are still so convinced that such is the case that we won't condemn him for unethical political activity until we have gone carefully into the possibility of an ulterior motive. Maybe he went along just for the ride.

REPLY TO TOWN TOPICS

In the last issue of the Benning Herald the youthful conductor of Town Topics ventured a few satirical remarks anent our assumption that a fan letter signed "An Admirer" was of feminine authorship. He implied that only our vanity caused us to jump at the conclusion that the writer was a woman.

True, the letter did not proclaim the sex of the writer in so many words. Neither did the handwriting give the clue, for the letter was typed. Moreover, when we reread the letter after Town Topics came out with his asparagus, we could pick no single characteristic of it that might be catalogued as positive proof of the feminine hand. Does this indicate that perhaps we were wrong in assuming, without even pausing to make an analysis, that a woman wrote it? It certainly does not.

An experienced tracker doesn't require a succession of outlined footprints to follow a trail. Neither does a man who has lived a reasonable number of years—say twenty-two—require specific admission as to the sex of a letter writer—fan or otherwise. If there be no deliberate attempt at camouflage one can usually determine this sometimes important point by inspection.

Just then Brady and Davidson pulled off a wrestling match, cheered on by Brunke, McDaniel and Stika.

The sentence was never completed. The great producer moved on in relief, secure in the knowledge that from wild men like these could easily be picked an all-star cast for the annual celebration of the Anniversary of the Battle of Opossum Creek.

tion of physical suffering the committees are frequently striving to mend aching hearts and recreate usefulness for discouraged families. However, members of the Council realize that modern relief work is a science, not an emotion, that they must know who the needy are, be sure that their claims are deserving and adapt the funds available to the peculiar needs of each case.

Relief For Children

Relief for little children who through no fault of their own have been made destitute carries the greatest appeal to most people. It is true that couples should never marry until they are able to support a family but no matter how great a wrong the parents have committed, it is the duty of the men and women of Fort Benning to see that the children of our soldiers are taken care of in this period of stress. Weeks of privation will leave marks on a child's physical welfare and mentality for years to come.

So mothers who have worked in the mills and department stores for years are without work. It is seldom that the Council receives a call from soldier families living on the Post but the following report given by Miss Julia Lincoln, the nurse on duty in the attending surgeons' office in Columbus makes one realize that the need in town is not surprising.

White families receiving treatment:
435 wives
430 children
30 dependents

Colored families receiving treatment:
209 wives
93 children
5 dependents

In addition to Miss Lincoln, Miss Edna Beyrer, Miss Nora Freeman, nurses at the Post Hospital and Mrs. Sereno E. Brett, who is a graduate nurse and did social service work in New York are assisting in building up undernourished children and mothers.

The Parent-Teacher Association and the Welfare Council are co-operating in seeing that every child of school age is furnished books, tuition, transportation and suitable clothing. The P. T. A. will collect outgrown toys, which will be repaired or painted by the firemen on the Post and the school children at the Post school. These will be distributed at Christmas time by the Welfare Council.

Wonderful Response

The community has given a wonderful response this year to the appeal for used clothing for women and children. Garments may be left at Building 109, Academic Area, or at the home of Mrs. Robert T. Forster, chairman of the Clothing Committee. Representatives of the Student Officers' families in Columbus, Mrs. Donald T. Beeler, Mrs. Frances J. Heraty and Mrs. Harrison B. Beavers and Fred E. Gaillard representing Student Officers at Fort Benning will call for clothing when notified. Girl Scouts may leave clothing at the home of Mrs. Henry Matchett and Boy Scouts at the home of Mrs. Norman D. Cota. Both organizations will give credit for a kind deed daily for this service. Mrs. Setzler, hostess at the Servcie Club is a member of the Council and will also receive clothing.

Mrs. Henry Clay Michie, chairman of the Employment Committee receives the cooperation of the entire council in her effort to find work for needy mothers. The Welfare Council owns a sewing machine which is kept in constant use. On account of the continued unemployment situation, no loans will be made to enlisted men this season except in case of a death in the family or some other dire emergency. The really deserving soldiers repay the Council in small installments when it has been necessary to furnish aid for their wives and children.

The following members of the Supply Committee will purchase food for Thanksgiving and Christmas baskets which they will pack and send to indigent families: Mrs. James B. Woolnough, Mrs. Lewis C. Davidson, Mrs. William B. Wallace, Mrs. Reginald H. Kelley, Mrs. Thomas W. Hammond, Mrs. Vernon Evans, Mrs. Hammond McD. Monroe.

The members of the transportation committee: Mrs. Thomas W. Brown, Mrs. Oscar W. Griswold, Mrs. Huston J. Banton, Mrs. George O. Clark, Mrs. Geoffrey Marshall, Mrs. Norman D. Cota and Mrs. Robert J. Wallace will have charge of delivering the baskets and also furnishing transportation for patients who cannot afford bus fare to attend clinics.

After receiving funds allowed by the Community Chest Committee, the Welfare Council asks for nothing more except used clothing and furniture nor seeks to raise money through any means.

Generous Contributions

However, in order to enlarge the scope of activities sponsored by the Council, several individuals and organizations contributed generously, during the past year.

The Daughters of the U. S. Army, through a gift of $140 made from a rummage sale enabled the Council to give a wool sweater to all women and children in need. Another rummage sale is to be held by the Daughters in November. The Woman's Club and Post school children gave lovely toys for the Christmas baskets.

A check for twenty dollars from Mrs. Joseph W. Stilwell and one for ten dollars from Mrs. William M. Chapman enabled the Council to purchase new shoes and books for the school children. Mrs. John J. Toffey recently donated a refrigerator.

Mrs. Thomas W. Hammond, a new member of the Council is going to give everybody "a chance for charity" by purchasing a new Ford and giving the entire proceeds from its disposal by raffle to the Welfare Council Milk fund and other vital needs.

The officers of the Welfare Council for the ensuing year are: Mrs. Elbert J. Lyman, president, Mrs. Thomas B. Catron, Mrs. Jesse A. Ladd, vice presidents, Mrs. Edward C. Betts, secretary, Mrs. Charles H. Owens, treasurer.

Advisory Committee: Mrs. Campbell King, Mrs. Charles W. Weeks, Mrs. Ephraim G. Peyton, Mrs. George F. Baltzell.

The following committees answer all calls that come from members of the organization they represent.

Twenty-ninth Infantry: Mrs. John J. Toffey, Mrs. Andrew D. Chaffin, Mrs. Homer H. Slaughter, Mrs. Earle A. Johnson, Mrs. John Albright, Mrs. Morris A. Wimberly, Mrs. John M. Brown.

Twenty-fourth Infantry: Mrs. Fred L. Munson, Mrs. Roger B. Harrison, Mrs. Marcel A. Gillis.

Medical Department: Mrs. Lucius K. Patterson, Mrs. Stanley W. Mathews, Mrs. Samuel A. White.

Quartermasters Corps: Mrs. J. De Camp Hall, Mrs. Eugene M. Lewis.

Eighty-third Field Artillery: Mrs. Clyde A. Selleck, Mrs. Clayton H. Studebaker, Mrs. George H. McManus.

Special Units: Mrs. Frank H. Jewett, Mrs. John Huling, Mrs. Clough F. Gee.

Veterinary Corps: Mrs. Burton A. Seeley.

Tank Regiment: Mrs. Allen J. Kingman, Mrs. Russell Nelson.

Air Corps: Mrs. Lloyd L. Barnett.

plete the morning, and I was at some pains to make out whether profuse perspiration in the class was caused by the woolen clothes or ignorance of responses to the questions. Some merriment and some consternation in class when, at the limit of the "assemble pistol" time, the command was to "Lay your pisols on your desks." One unsuccessful student did so promptly make compliance that a miscellany of unconfined springs and gadgets were laid, instead, against the ceiling. Peace hath her menaces no less abhorred than war.

Some members of the class astir over the Flag Race to be held on the morrow. For myself, such doings leave me cold. I would as leave be boiled in oil as to be required to gallop, steaming, over the reservation collecting bits of muslin for two hours. And as for doing it voluntarily—! For, Lord, after all the frenzy where is one but at the starting point and I am capable of that without a horse nor any perspiration, and much capabler of sitting down to my evening's repast.

THEATRICAL ATTRACTIONS

Hugh Herbert and Tallulah Bankhead in "Faithless"

Cinema Calendar

for Grand, Rialto and Royal

AT THE ROYAL

Beginning with a Hallowe'en Dance in the lobby at 9:15 o'clock Saturday Night

ALSO SUNDAY, MONDAY AND TUESDAY: Offering "Smilin' Through" with Norma Shearer and Fredric March. One of the sweetest and tenderest love stories of the age. A pathetic struggle of young hearts against old hates . . . love that seems doomed to die the mment it is born . . . as hauntingly beautiful as some remembered moonlight garden . . . alive with lover's whisperings. Here's a picture you really will enjoy.

AT THE GRAND

SATURDAY, SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Offering "Faithless" with Tallulah Bankhead, Robert Montgomery and Hugh Herbert. Put yourself in this star's place . . . beautiful, wealthy . . . suddenly penniless . . . could you gamble your soul like her to save the love she held more precious than millions? Her gowns will fascinate the ladies, and her acting will hold the men.

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Offering "Miss Pinkerton" with John Blondell and George Brent. Here's one of the world's prize novels adapted to the screen. You see Miss Blondell as a hospital nurse and Brent as an inspector. A supporting cast consisting of Ruth Hall, Holmes Herbert, Donald Dilloway, Mary Doran, Henry Gordon, Elizabeth Patterson and Blanche Frederici augurs well for the production.

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY: Offering "The Phantom President" with Jimmy Durante, George M. Cohan and Claudette Colbert. A political comedy, dealing with a presidential campaign; a medicine-show barker hired to impersonate the famous Cohan, as the candidate, and, on falling in love with the candidate's girl, Miss Colbert, there is an amusing and dramatic climax. The play had a successful tryout engagements in several cities, Cohan quitting the play to go to Hollywood and make the picture.

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY: Offering "White Eagle" with Buck Jones and Barbara Weeks. Redskins ride the ranges in warfare. A thrilling tale of the Old West, with Buck as a Red "Brave" risking his life for love.

SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Offering "Devil and the Deep" with Tallulah Bankhead and Gary Cooper. Twenty men sent to the bottom of the sea for one woman's sin. Diving toward death in a sinking submarine with a mad-man in command. A maniac who lured his wife and her sweetheart aboard for the most savage revenge that ever punished love.

TUESDAY: Offering "Bachelor's Affairs with Adolph Menjou.

WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY: Offering "The Dark Horse" with Warren Williams, Bette Davis, Guy Kibbe and Vivienne Osborne. Hilarity is just around the corner. Congress is going cuckoo. Senators are doing handsprings on the White House steps. Republicans and emocrats are slapping each other on the back. The whole darn nation is nutty about Hollywood's hilarious burlesque on the political parade.

RIALTO

"BACHELOR'S AFFAIRS"

Arthur Fierson, handsome young actor who plays an important role in the Fox comedy, "Bachelor's Affairs," coming soon to the Rialto Theatre, is a descendant of an ancient Viking family. He was born in Oslo, Norway.

Pierson came to the United States when he was four years old and was educated in Seattle. He studied agriculture at the University of Washington, intending to become a farmer, but gave up this idea when the stage began to attract him.

When he was turned down for a role in a college play, he decided to become an actor and, some day, come back home a leading man. He kept his plans to himself and carefully mapped out a campaign. He went to San Francisco and into training at the Players' Club. Later he appeared in a number of Little Theatre plays and his good work won him a part in a road company playing "So This Is London."

This took him back to Seattle, where he enjoyed the satisfaction of demonstrating to his former school friends that he had been a victim of poor judgment when he was refused a part in that college play. Pierson added polish to his work by playing in stock in Seattle, Portland and Denver and he became a leading man in a company in St. Louis.

GRAND

"FAITHLESS"

Introducing Tallulah Bankhead and Robert Montgomery — Hollywood's newest combination of screen lovers. They appear together for the first time as co-stars of "Faithless," which starts Sunday as the feature picture at the Grand Theatre.

Miss Bankhead was borrowed from Paramount to play the feminine lead in this drama of the penniless rich, based on a story by Mildred Cram. It is her first engagement away from the studio which brought her from the London stage to screen stardom.

Best Suited Playmates

To add lustre to the occasion, Mero-Goldwyn-Mayer selected Robert Montgomery for the jaunty hero of the story. Montgomery recently appeared opposite Marion Davies in "Blondie of the Follies." He has also played leading man to Norma Shearer, Greta Garbo and Joan Crawford, and stood forth in his studio's opinion as the personality best suited as a "playmate" for the exotic Miss Bankhead.

This combination brings together two stars who suggest in the public mind the sense of smartness which the story of "Faithless" requires. It is a romantic tale of two young members of the "idle rich" who become stepchildren of the depresson, and find thiemselves suddenly struggling in the whirlpool of presentday economic adversity.

ROYAL

"SMILING THROUGH"

Norma Shearer has turned her back on her screen past. In "Smilin' Through," her latest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production which will be shown beginning Saturday at the Royal Theatre, Miss Shearer has a role far removed from those which have taken her along the bypaths which lead away from convention.

Miss Shearer's role in "Smilin' Through" is frankly tinged with sentimental romance. It is completely devoid of that sophistication which marked her characterizations in "Strangers May Kiss," "A Free Soul" and "Strange Interlude."

The story abounds in pathos. Ever since Jane Cowl first presented it on the New York stage, it has served as the model by which sentimentality in drama is measured. "As sweet and poignant as "Smilin' Thriugh" has come to be a phrase by which critics point their comparisons.

In thus turning to wistful romance, Miss Shearer sheds the "women of the world" character for the first time since the peach blossom fragrance of "The Student Prince," in the old days of silent films.

In "Smilin' Through" she portrays two different girls whose romantic experiences affect the life of one man at an interval of fifty years. First, as Moonyeen Clare, in 1868, she is the betrothed of a young English Aristocrat, played by Leslie Howard.

MATA HARI

The Story of the War's Most Notorious Spy

WHAT HAS HAPPEND SO FAR

Mata Hari, famous dancer and enemy spy, makes an innocent accomplice of a young Russian aviator, Rosanoff, who is infatuated with her. In a jealous rage, her former lover, Shubin, Attache of the Russian Embassy, attempts to telephone to Dubois, the head of the French secret service, and prove that not only Mata Hari but Rosanoff are spies. The dancer shoots him, then disposes the gun so as to make it appear suicide. At this point, Rosanoff, ordered to fly back to Russia with messages, comes to see Shubin. Mata Hari persuades him not to enter and at last admits that she loves him. In hiding, she learns that Rosanoff has been shot down and lies in a nearby hospital.

"It's not that I—wish to endanger you, if my arrest will do so. Be assured, if they arrestme, I will never involve anyone else. But I must see him, just for a little while, just to show him, if he's hurt, that I'm sorry,

"I was only trying to remind you, my dear, that a spy in love is a tool that has outlived its usefulness."

"I'm not afraid of your threats," replied Mata Hari.

"That's evident," said Adriana curtly.

He continued as if he were musing out loud. "You remember that poor Carlotta, my dear—the woman who committed suicide. I think she was in love, too. My dear, ours is a very exacting profession. Sometimes I wonder why I ever went into it, don't you? The pay is poor compared to the risks. If we fail we die an ignominous death. We are permitted no personal life, no friends, no emotions of our own."

"What's the point of all this? What are you driving at?"

ana. He's the first one who's not like the others. And I know what pain is, I've always known it—but I not heartless——" forgot. This recalled it. And I'm He's not much like the others, Adri- I meant it when I said I loved him. that it wasn't just in mockery, that

"You've had your orders!"

At that, she gasped with the strength of her contempt and burst out, "Orders! What do I care for your orders? You'll not intimidate me. I'm not Carlotta! I'm not like the rest of your underlings—I'm Mata Hari! I'm my own master. I'll work with you no longer! I resign!"

Mother Durant ran in from the shop.

"Not so loud. People will hear."

"Very good, Mata," replied Adriana, "I accept your resignation.'"

When the dancer had rushed out, Mother Durant said in blank amazement, "And you let her resign?"

"My dear Durant," Adriana returned, "you ought to know—the only way to resign from our profession is —to die!"

Mother Durant, having lived a long while and witnessed many uncanny coincidences, said no more, but did as she was bid.

Once in a taxi and on her way, Mata Hari regained command of herself. If it had not been for the plain black coat, so different from the costumes she wore to attract instead of to avoid attention, she might have seemed like her accustomed self, being driven on an accustomed errand, glancing just as arrogantly, if warily, to one side, then the other—rather like some strange, beautiful, dangerous animal in a forest, which is at the same time on guard against its enemies and on the alert to seize its prey.

But this attitude lasted only for a short time. She sat back and pulled her collar closer about her face. The fur was warm, too, as well as good to hide in. It was foggy weather, drizzling, penetrating. The bookstalls were empty, the Seine a purplish-gray dreary stream, and the magnificent bulk of public buildings, historic palaces, were huge shadow shapes. Before the long drive was over, the dancer was huddled deep in her coat, her eyes closed, her mind a prey to forebodings as gray and unseizable as the fog.

Death! Death! Since she had fired the shot that killed Shubin, it had been ever in her thoughts. Death clung to all that was dear to her. To Rosanoff. Suppose the casualty lists had been wrong, and the man at the Russian Embassy mistaken, or ignorant or Mother Durant had misled her. Death clung to Rosanoff for he was dear. It clung to herself as she breathed, for the mere fact of breathing was precious. She wanted to live. And she knew well enough the meaning of Adriana's hints.

The sadness of death was in every aspect of the great chateau which had been converted into a hospital, in the sodden grounds, the trees that shed drops of water, the flags hanging limp and chill in the rain.

Inside, everyone was low-voiced, hurried. She got a visitor's pass without difficulty, but it became evident that no one would take the time to answer questions. Holding the pass in her hand, she was left to find her own way along the corridors.

Nothing moved, nothing sounded there. A single electric globe overhead struggled with the gray-tinged daylight from a distant window. A nurse passed, swift, silen,t in her felt-soled slippers, impersonal as fate. She carried a tray of bandages and surgical dressings. The very portrait of a modern, war-time Fate, Mata Hari thought, as she brushed by, averting her eyes and searching and searching for the special door.

Room Thirty-Six. This was it. Someone was playing a violin in a ward. The ice-sweet woe of the Ave Maria of Shubert penetrated into her veins, made her shiver and cower against the door. Her hands were so cold in the black gloves.

She tried to chafe them, held them against her cheeks which were faintly warm. But it was not much use because the blood ran chill in her veins. Nor did the powder which she dabbed as an afterthought over her face conceal its color.

Rosanoff sat by the window with a blanket over his knees and his back to the door. Hs head and part of his forehead were bandaged as if he were wearing a wadded, white cap. But he sat erect in the invalid's chair and seemed absorbed in watching the great drops of moisture form on the window-pane and dissolve in sudden litte rivulets.

"Is that you, Sister Theresa?" he said without turning at the sound of the door. "That's the Belgian playing again, isn't it? He plays well, I think, don't you?"

As he heard no answer, he said again, rather impatiently. "Sister Theresa! It's you, isn't it?"

"Alexis."

He did turn his head and at the same time rose with such a wrench that he dislodged the firmly tucked blanket. But his eyes which were uncovered fixed themselves on a point several feet to the side of her and never wavered. The pupils were distended as if he were determined to see, as if, by straining them, he imagined that it was possible to see.

When she next spoke he knew that she had realized that he was blind.

He tried to go to her.

But it seemed to Mata Hari of the utmost importance, the first thing she could do for him, to get him back into the invalid's chair, and she ran and took him in her arms and settled him back as if he were a baby and fiercely tucked him in again and wept soundlessly all the while.

"I didn't want you to see me like this," he muttered, half to himself. Then his fingers came away wet from her cheeks. "It's nothing to cry about." he said, stroking a tear away hard. "Why, I'm happy. Happier at this moment than I've ever been in my life."

"Of—course." She tried again and this time her voice was steady. "Of course,. I'm silly. We're both happy. We've everything to be happy for."

And after a little while with care she was able to talk quite cheerfully, quite as if she did not believe anything had happened and by a defiance of reality was certain to outwit it.

"Of course, you'll see again. Why, your eyes look perfectly well and strong. What do the doctors say?"

She could see that if she gave him this hope, he would cling to it. But he would not yield quickly, he would not seem to yield at all. It was for him to tell her the truth, trusting that she would deny it and by her denial make it easier for him not to believe either.

"Oh, you know what doctors are. Thev're not very optimistic."

"The fools!" She thrust doctors aside, with great scorn, just as he had hoped she would. "What do they know—these little provincial doctors! I'll get you great specialists. They'll make you see."

"Well, I don't know," said Rosanoff conscientiously. "It was one of those trench mortars . . . a bit of metal lodged in . . . "

"Don't say it! Don't think of it! I don't care about any ridiculous bit of trench mortar, I know you'll see. And while we're waiting, I'll see for you. I'll be your eyes. I'll never leave you again, never!" repeated the dancer, and at the same time the thought of her own predicament which had quite gone out of her mind clutched at her again. but she thrust it forcibly away. "Never!' she insisted. "I never will."

"Do you remember that—you promised to marry me once? That night. In my house. Do you remember? I —couldn't be quite sure you meant it somehow, or wouldn't change your mind afterwards. But you did promise. You did mean it, didn't you?"

And for a brief moment she was almost glad he couldn't see, couldn't notice the shame and contrition which overwhelmed her. So it was that which she had agreed to so lightly and couldn't quite recall afterwards, that which she had answered without the wish to hear, her mind set upon the papers in the next room, a task now so distant and so trivial! She was tormented with the thought of the past.

"Oh, yes! Yes, of course, I remember! Of course, I mean it! Indeed we'll marry and we're going away—were going away together, do you hear, the moment they let you out of here. Away from the war. And all the trouble and misery."

"We'll go—we'll go to Java," she whispered with her arms around him. "It's so charming there, so old and strange ,and the sun, everything's alight, not like the fog here and the miserable thin rain . . . "

"Do you know," said Rosanoff dreamily, "I'm beginning to see your face . . . they say the blind can see with their fingertips."

It was not very long afterwards that the entrance of the Sister obliged Mata Hari to leave. The dressings of the wounds on his head had to be changed. Before the elderly woman in her starched bib and sunbonnetlike nursing cap, Rosanoff and the dancer exchanged their last farewells. The dancer assured him she would write at once, every day, until she could come to see him again, for it appeared that she had arrangements to make if she were to wind up her affairs. Theresa promised to read the letters.

The rain had stopped. A poor sort of sun with a great effort had managed to grope its way through the fog and though it made not much impression on the grayness and could do little to dry the drenched leaves, still the walk down the drive to the gate was pleasanter than previously. She felt peaceful now that the strain had been relaxed and she knew the worst that had happened. He wasn't dead at least and plans that included both of them began to ferment deep in her mind.

Griffin Gets Draw With Bozo In Close Fight

DARBY TAKES COUNT AS RIP COPS SEMI-GO

Bunker Hill and Ben Spivey Steal Show

BY BERNARD B. SWAYZE

Corn Griffin is a good fighter. He is the best fighter at Benning and many other places, in his weight. He is not a better fighter than Battling Bozo, that freak of all fighters, who laced Griffin all over the ring for minutes at a time last Tuesday night in Doughboy Stadium. Corn Griffin was lucky to get that decision called a draw, and the public knows it.

That was a good card out there this week, and here's hoping they get many more just half as good, for then they will revive the boxing game to where it was several years ago at our beautiful garrison. There were seven fights in all, and none of them could be called a flop. Fighting of the first water took place in each individual quarrel, and in several there was enough fighting to take care of a large divisional offensive movement.

All this is to let you know that there is no rebellion on the part of your servant in things concerning fighting, and all that goes with it. (Mostly black eyes and bleeding noses). It is our intention to show you, (in our unqualified way), just how good that fight was, and then let you decide what you may.

The Fight By Rounds

In the first round, Bozo came out with a bag of tricks and slap-stick broadsides that literally split the sides of those who had not previously seen the freak in action. From others, these antics brought hisses, and requests for him to open up a bag of new ones. Corn belted him good a couple of times, (by actual count), and won the round, Bozo electing to clown some more.

Being fed up on his clowning for a while, this Bozo person came out for another round, and decided to fight, but the soldier was a bit too strong for him. Corn punished him a lot with rangy left hooks and right hand blows to the left ear. Corn was away in the lead at the bell.

The third round seemed to bring back recollections to the Slagtown Freak of by-gone fights, and he was back in there, studying the style of this hard-hitting Tanker, and earned a draw for that round.

Round four, and Bozo had found his course of procedure must be changed, so in he went, and proceeded to punch Griffin good in the clinches, working a wicked right hand up under Corn's chin. He repeatedly did this, but Corn was working hard with that right hand to the head. Bozo started in on an attack on a weak eye, and worked hard, having blood oozing from a cut over this member at the bell . . . Bozo's round.

The fifth round was a repitition of the preceding one, with Griffin possibly getting in better blows than before. BBozo's in-fighting was something about which to marvel. His peculiar style of fighting was telling on

Tanks Open Battalion Series; "E" and "F2" Win First Games

In games filled with thrills, the First Tank Regment's football series got off with a bang last weekend that was heard from one end of the post to the other. Heads-up football was played in both games that were played, with spectators being kept on the guessing end all the way through.

The opening game of the series was a hard fought affair between the "E" and "D" company elevens, and revealed some valuable material to be used on the Battalion squad this year. Good football was displayed by both teams, with forward passes figuring mostly in the scoring of both touchdowns registered by the "E" Company team. The final score of this game was 13-0.

Bill Swantic, erstwhile star of the long since mourned All-Army team of '25 and '26, figured prominently in the scoring of the "E" Company counters, as did Bobbie Brown, powerful grid man of the Tank Battalion team.

The first counter came in the second period, resulting from a pass from Swantic to Brown, placing the ball on "D" Company's 25 yard line. It was here that the "E" Company warriors put forth their best efforts, and drove the opposition back. Swantic plunged over for the first counter.

The second score came out of the clear ozone, when Big Bill swept a nice pass down the field to the waiting arms of Bobbie, who dashed over the goal line for the final 6 pointer. Swantic kicked goal.

But there was more real fight Saturday, when the two "F" Companies tangled arms and legs. "F1" were the champs last year, often being referred to as the "Red-headed Chmaps". "F2" are showing on the local grid this year for the first time. There's your incintive, and here's your game.

Taking the field with this new bunch of Tanker football players the garrison has been hearing so much about, The "F2's" smacked into that wall of defense set up by the redheads, and played them off their feet for the greater part of the game, keeping them on the defensive most of the time.

However, "F1" did not have the power in several instances to punch over the score that looked so near, and were forced to relinquish the ball on downs.

It was in the last stages of the game that the break each team had been looking for came, and "F2" snatched the chance. A punt went haywire off the toe of Smith, and the "Northerners" forthwith swept it down the field.

Reports were not quite clear as to who made the touch down, but all were agreed that one of the two "Irishers" counted the marker; Prusinoski or Kulikofski . . . you pick 'em.

An excerpt from the Tank Weekly's account of that game follows: For "F1", we must say that the boys worked hard, and showed real fight through out the game, and at one time a touchdown was only one yard away; but the line of "F2" would not yield and held the "Red Heads", who had to let the ball go over to "F2" on their one yard line. It was a great game, and a real fight.

DOG AND TIGER TICKETS ON TAP

Tickets are now on sale at the Officers' Club for the Georgia-Auburn game to be played in Columbus November 19, according to a statement issued by Mr. Joe Foley, in charge of sale and distribution of the pasteboards.

It is well to make your reservations early this year for the game, as all indications point toward a sell-out for the fracas. Never before has this yearly conflict attracted as much interest as this year. Georgia has drubbed the Tiger so relentlessly in the past that

TANKERS PLAY 2 GAMES TODAY

There will be two games of football played tomorrow afternoon at the Tank's football field. These are the third and fourth games of the Battalion Series, to determine the championship.

Good crowds were out last week to witness these traditional struggles, and larger crowds are expected this week. Headquartres Company, drawing a bye last week, will go into action for the first time tomorrow. They are conceded a great chance to cop in the series this year, and all eyes will be on them in their first game.

HAPPY HEARTS PLAY TUSKEGEE

The 24th Infantry last Saturday handed the Nashville Giants a thorough drubbing, 52-0. Never were the West Enders threatened, using subs freely throughout the game.

Lt. Johnson is pushing the team hard, trying to whip them in shape for a real conquest for southern colored football honors.

Today, they are playing Tuskegee, facing a team of worthy qualifications. If they get over this strong team without a score being made against them, they will truly be threats for the crown.

Coaches, Please!

It is urgently requested that all organizations of the garrison, having football teams this year, cooperate with this department in furnishing the public with favorable publicity in things football.

Your team deserves thorough support of the fans and the newspapers, and with the thorough cooperation of some individual in each organization, the HERALD is in a position to aid greatly in the promotion of the sport.

All communications to the HERALD should be sent through the Public Relations Office, thereby meeting all requirements of the Garrison Regulations covering this at Fort Benning.

GREENIES AND REDLEGS WORK PROGRESSING

Diligent Training Is Watchword Of Teams

The 83rd Field Artillery has been working hard for the past few weeks endeavoring to rejuvenate a well slumped team. With a good count of new faces on the field for early workouts, it looks as though they are going to pull a rabbit out of the hat before the season is over.

CHECKING UP ON Captain Fry's golfing the other day revealed quite a bit about the game to us. We happened up on him at the eighth tee, and casually asked how much distance he was expecting on his drive. He just as casually answered, "Oh, about one hundred and fifty yards or feet." Well, it was——feet! Which all proves that there is one thruthful golfer living to tell the tale.

even some of the former Georgia fans are pulling for the ravaging Tiger this year. Auburn is favored to cop the contest, but it will be only after a fierce struggle that the Bulldogs will relinquish their claim to supremacy of the two schools.

This will be the first chance for many of the members of the Garrison to witness the champion Tigers in action this year, which alone should be an inducement for their attendance.

The Georgia-Auburn fracas will be the classic of the south this year and the resulting ceremonies and indulgencies taking place in Columbus on that epochal night will be something to go many miles to see. Students, alumni and laymen will stroll the street, whooping it up for all they are worth, and those who miss the fun will always regret it.

GRIFFIN AND BOZO DRAW

Corn quite a bit. Corn's face was a sight at the bell . . . . Bozo's round.

In this, the sixth, round, Bozo was after the big Tanker like Bill Cody chasing down a lost article. He caused the big fellow to sag a bit at the knees over in his own corner with a right to the button that smacked of disaster for the idol of Benning. Constant jabbing on the part of the funny man won him this round.

Round seven found Griffin getting back into the fight, and in the early part of the round, he worried Bozo with a right hand that would have surely put the Birmingham fighter out of the running had he not elected to go in close to get in his punches. He tied the Tanker up here, and continued to pile up points . . . . Bozo's round . . . (this IS getting monotonous.

Round eight was an almost exact reproduction of seven, with Bozo holding his lead throughout the canto. Bozo's round.

Corn was determined in the ninth, and came out fighting like a bear. He tore into the clown with all the force of an onrushing freight, but Bozo was able to tie him up to where he could do nothing but fume. Bozo got in a few more of those short jabs to the face to take the round by points . . . . maybe, anyway, call it even, if you must.

The tenth disclosed unchained fury in the form of the big Tanker, and he was out for the kill. He had Bozo in trouble throughout the round, with hard body blows and attacks to the head that would fell an ox, but the dopey nut wouldn't fall. Bozo landed hardly five blows n all the attempted exchanges of the round, but he staved off a defeat by K. O. with his wonderful stamina and fighting instinct. He was never groggy.—Corn's round.

Decision . . . . a draw.

And did Rip Tetherton hit Lester Darby? Whew!! After going down for the count of seven in the second round, Rip was up and at him in the third and fourth rounds like nobody's business. Of course, Rip played his own game, going away a lot, but he beat the strong Darby youth to the punch with precision. In the fifth he bowled Darby over and out, like a candle, piling glory on his own ebon head, and breaking Darby's schnozzle.

But Bunker Hill and Ben Spivey stole the show. They went six of the fastest rounds ever stepped at Benning, putting up the appearance of young tornadoes. It was tit for tat for a long time, but in the end, Spivey had a slight edge over Bunker, and a game, glorious fighter lost a decision to a worthy opponent.

Who turned Frank Mackery loose on that unsuspecting Grumpy Gordy for seven rounds? Man what a lacing Grumpy did take at the hands of that Tanker! The Quartermaster hasn't found out what it was all about yet. Grumpy can't tell them—eyether!

Herb Yetmeyer and Charlie White went back for almost four rounds, but Yetmeyer won a technical kayoe in the fourth spasm of a glove slinging act deluxe.

Tut Tut Taylor opened the proceedings of the night by lacing Kid McKoski all over the ring for four rounds. Tut looks like he is on his way to better bouts.

GREENIES AND REDLEGS

possibly the best coach to be found anywhere in the army, the team has wonderful chances of overcoming their pre-season handicap of losing three players by transfer. While there will be a radical change in the positioning of the players this season, the Redlegs have a wonderful chance to show something before the close of the season.

No pre-season games for this team has been announced yet. Their conditioning will probably all be done on the training field, and not in competition.

While all is quiet on the Irish front, it is suspected that they are grinding away with might and main, building up quite a team this year. New players have been injected into the game for the Greenies, and if rumors mean anything, they are going to bowl something over before the close of the season.

Each afternoon, they may be seen out there on their portion of the reservation, training as hard and as diligently as any college team ever thought of doing. They are out there early, and come in late, with sweat streaming from their cheerful faces, but with an expression of determination that cannot be denied.

Reddock and Stevens should show up right smart this year with a few good blockers in front of them. There are two dark horses over there too, that we have been unable to uncover, but will have them by the horns by next week.

Sergeant Banks Gets Ball Trophy

1st Sergeant Charles A. Banks, of Company C, 29th Infantry, is the recipient of a silver trophy cup which was awarded him in recognition of his services as captain of the baseball team which won the Hawaiian Division and Hawaiian Department championship.

The prize award was established in 1930 by Sergeant Carpino, Headquarters Company, 21st Infantry, to be given annually to the most valuable baseball player of the 21st Infantry.

While stationed in Hawaii prior to his assignment to the 29th Infantry, Sergeant Banks captained the 21st Infantry regimental team and played third base in twenty-seven games in the Schofield league, three in the department series, and two with the Navy team. His conspicious ability as a baseball player in these games led to his selection as the most valuable baseball player of the regiment.

Hallowe'en Dance At The Benning Service Club

The members of the Fort Benning Service Club are giving a Hallowe'en Dance at their club Friday evening October 28.

Prizes will be awarded to the couple wearing the most attractive costumes for the occasion.

Invitations will be sent to the ladies by the hostess, Mrs. A. C. Setzler.

Battling Bozo and wife were week-end visitors at the Service Club the past week.

Mr. Johnny Hylan was also a visitor at the Club over the weekend.

Bridge is gaining in popularity daily among the members of the enlisted personnel of the garrison. A club is now in the early stages of formation, and would-be addicts are requested to communicate with the hostess.

guns, transportation and all, deployed on both sides of the road and took up antiaircraft fire against the planes, from below.

In the afternoon the same problem was repeated near Humphries Hill, the only difference being that live ammunition and bombs were used by the aircraft against the ground troops, which were represented by pasteboard targets. Eleven attacking planes participated in this demonstration, while several other airplanes carrying observers and photographers circled above the field. With the three planes of the 16th Observation Squadron stationed at Lawson Field, there were sixty-four planes at Fort Benning Thursday, among which were representative types of the armys newest and fastest pursuit, attack, and bombing planes.

In addition to the four classes of officers of The Infantry School, the demonstration was witnessed by a class of officers from the Air Corps Tactical School, Maxwell Field, Ala., who flew to Fort Benning Wednesday morning.

Revelers will Hold Fourth At Gym

On Monday night, Hallowe'en, at the Post Gymnasium, the cats, witches, and other Hallowe'en entertainers, will run rampant and jolly jovial humor will hold sway. Every effort is being made to make this the most enjoyable affair held at the Post in many mons. Much interest is being shown by both the post and Columbus dancing contingent.

Beautiful prizes have been donated by the following concerns: Hubbard Hardware, Pekor's, Miller Taylor Shoe Co., Howard Bus Line, Standard Tailoring Company, and others.

Another item of interest is the fact that this dance marks the close of the Popularity Contest which has been running for the past two months to determine the most popular young lady and gentleman attending the Revelers' dances. At this dance the trophies will be awarded the winners in the contest.

At present Miss Dorothy Hensley and Tommy Thompson are leading the field. However, in both cases there are about ten other contestants close on their heels and it is impossible to say who will win. In the past votes have been given with each admission ticket and most of the votes have been withheld, probably because the holders wished to retain them until the last night in order that no one would know their standing. At the Hallowe'en dance no votes will be given away but will be sold in order to see just how popular the contestants really are. The trophies are very valuable and well worth winning. They are given by the Revelers Club in an effort to promote more interest in dancing, and, as is the custom of the club, to give their guests something out of the ordinary. Aall of the dances and entertainments sponsored by the Revelers has met wih much success. If advance interest can be counted as meaning anything the Hallowe'en dance will be the outstanding entertainment sponsored by the club, or by any organization at the post. The spacious gymnasium has been repainted a light color and will be appropriately decorated for the occasion. Hallowe'en decorations will be used on the walls and orchestra stand, and should blend in beautifully with the many colors and hues of the costumes of the guests. Attractive and interesting favors, masks, horns, rattles, and other fun-makers will be given the guests and a carnival of fun and enjoyment is expected by the committee.

Little Known Anecdotes About Famous Football Teams

By I. Predictum

This one is told on Freddy Linehan strapping Yale guard of two years ago. The Eli had just invaded Georgia with dire results. The Georgia Bulldogs had run roughshod over Yale, who until that time boasted of an undefeated team. The Eli backfield including the glittering Albie Booth, had been stopped repeatedly at the line of scrimmage.

It was a very disconsolate Yale squad which boarded a northbound train that evening. To make matters all the worse, the train developed some sort of engine trouble and stalled a few miles outside of the State of Georgia.

At this inappropriate moment, a Yale alumnus, slightly mellow under the influence of Georgia corn, wandered back into the car where the Yale squad was located looking for his good friend, Freddy Linehan, Yale guard.

The alumnus found Freddy suffering from a bad attack of the blues, but was not so easily turned back. Slapping his unhappy friend heartily on the back, he exclaimed jovially,

"Hello, Freddy, are you going north?"

"No," came the surly answer.

"Well, then, are you going south?"

"No."

The alumnus was quite taken aback by this surprising attitude of his friend, then ventured the following question.

"Are you going anywhere?"

"No, I'm not going anywhere," was the reply.

"Put him in the Yale backfield," advised the now thoroughly peeved alumnus stalking off with all the dignity he could muster.

failing, the lecture was resumed. Flaming Flanagan squirmed in his chair, mopped a dripping brow—moistened no doubt by the zeal with which he had conducted the search. A moment later he muttered imprecations—and snuffed out with his hands the blazing cause of all the smoke. It is assumed that the origin of the flames which destroyed the left leg of his coveralls was spontaneous combustion.

Martin's Is Furnishing Shades For New Quarters

The nine new N. C. O. quarters now under construction will be furnished with shades and curtain rods by the Martin Furniture Company of Columbus. The Martin company has furnished more of this material to Benning than any other concern in the south, and have given complete satisfaction with their goods.

Previously the Martin company was awarded the contract for furnishing this material for the 29th Infantry Barracks, the Hospital and the Tank Barracks. This reported to be the largest order of its kind ever placed in the south.

Martin has served Benning since its organization long since, and satisfaction has been their main object throughout their transactions.

chuckling over it. At the first meeting of the Ladies' Riding Class, a short speech was made to those about to begin taking lessons. "And, now," said the officer in charge, "about wearing clothes!" But we realize his intentions were of the best!

There's only one thing that seems to be wrong about these elections that Lt. Dowdall is sponsoring at the Officers' Club on the night of November 8th. However, Roosevelt, Biglerville, everyone seems to be included. But what about woman suffrage . . . the ladies seem to have been completely forgotten and the Grapevine Operator feels a bit wistful about that. Or are they at least going to be allowed to vote? Lt. Dowdall, some particulars on this subject, please!

And, by the way, here's an inside wire on this election night business at the Club. We hear there are going to be no less than eight radios in circulation in different parts of the building (No one will be able to avoid the issue) and looking down from the balcony, where the orchestra usually rests itself, will be three adding machines and one man with a megaphone. Could more be asked for?

These wires seem to be piling up . . . but one last one has just come in that can't be resisted. Did you hear about the second lieutenant at the steak supper, given Wednesday night in honor of General Fuqua, who ate six steaks in a row, then had to stop because his teeth got tired? May we suggest that he consult his dentist immediately?

HEADQUARTERS BATTERY

Sgt. McCallum and Cpl. Pike are playing in the Rexview Golf ournament. Cpl. Pike plays in the ninth flight, the Santa Claus flight. We all hope that you win it Pike!

Sgt. Roper was mounted this morning for a demonstration, the first time in ten years and then didn't get a chance to display his horsemanship, the demonstration being called off on account of the rain.

Paul Davis was seen carrying a full basket of vegetables down town the other evening. We wonder whom he was taking the basket to. From all reports he carried it to 111 Seventh street.

John Latina has opened a beauty parlor in connection with his barber shop. He specializes in arching eye brows. Jew Meyers and Sheik Holt were his first customers. Jew Meyers looks like Greta Garbo and Holt looks like Clara Bow. We all hope that the ladies won't fall too hard for these shieks.

Cpl. Hurst is again in the limelight. He took a three day pass last week to North Highlands and spent Saturday night in the bleachers of the ball park in the northern part of the city. It must have been hard sleeping on the benches. Hurst, you should have slept in the pitcher's box.

The battery has been working over time for the last week. Reviews, demonstrations and other things have kept the men at work all day. Everybody worked without any growls. That's the spirit we have in Headquarters Battery.

We welcome Lt. Grubbs to the battery and we all hope that he will enjoy his stay in a good organization.

BATTERY "C"

Sgt. Miller was discharged October 16th and has reenlisted for three more years with Battery C. Sgt. Miller has completed nine successive years with our battery, and has an excellent record in the battery. We are all glad to have him with us for another three years. Sgt. Miller with his family will motor to Woodruff, S. C. in November to spend their vacation with parents and friends.

The horse shoers, saddler, stable orderly, wagon drivers and day-room orlerly pushed aside their work last Tuesday and turned out with the battery so that "C" battery could turn out a complete battery of 75mm guns and a battery of 105mm guns for a demonstration for the Infantry School. Although battery "C" is only a peace strength battery, it organized two batteries and managed to fire both batteries excellently.

Sgt. Tharp, Pfc. Hiers, and Carmany have returned from furlough. They all report that they had a good time, but that everything on the outside is still very dull. Prosperity may be just around the corner but what corner no one knows. Around the corner where the Recruiting Office is, may be a GOOD CORNER to look for.

Private Wallace Stewart, the one who got his picture and name in the Columbus papers, says the next time he goes down town he is going to wear a steel helmet and a catcher's mask. Speedy was hit by a Coca-Cola bottle that some-one carelessly threw out into the street.

The BYPU boys are in the limelight with an entirely new game which was started at a weiner roast not long past. The game of "Drop the Handkerchief." Pvt. Holt being the swiftest of the three horseman naturally won the cup. Cpl. North won the title of being the boy with the "Bed Room Eyes", and, by the way, a young lady gave him this title. Pvt. Barbera, the title of being the man of Mystery with the lost wrist watch. Pvt. Barbara will have to purchase another wrist watch in order to keep pace with his honorable colleagues.

COMPANY "B"

The demonstrations seem to be going all right. Well, they should. We rehearsed them so much that Sgt. Tarver says all he has to do is say, "Regiment on The March," to his shoes and they are so well trained that they take him twice around Gordon Field and he never even has to wake up.

Last year Tulane had a man named Dalrymple, and every time his name was mentioned in Georgia or Alabama everybody from Catfish Smith to Kingfish Potlikker Huey Long ran into holes and hid. This year the big green First Battalion has three such names. After this football season is over all we will need to do is yell "Barr", "Horton", or "Simmons", at the Second Battalion or Tanks, and laugh while they crawl under their beds and into their wall lockers. When the green 1st Battalion basketball team won its championship last year, a "B" Company man, Corporal Sheppard, was one of the brightest of its stars; and this year with two "B" Company stars, it looks like another clean up. And there are nine more almost like them on the squad.

COMPANY "G"

Well, well, look who's here. Good Old "G" Comp. and in full swing jus' rarin' to go. Folks it's best to be late than not be there at all and that's us in person. Our chief reason for staying away so long is that we have had so much to happen to us in the last two months that it has been almost impossible to keep you posted with what we were doing.

Let us look over the pages and see just what has occurred. Retirement of 1st Sgt. Plumber,—Supper in honor of 1st Sgt. Plumber and the winning platoon for the entire range season.—Supper for the Second Battaion Baseball Champions,—and last but not least promotion of Sgt. W. Simpson to 1st Sergeant.

Ye scribe has just recently arrived in this Company, but what he has seen of it so far he likes very very much. The officers are of the finest, one could not ask for better, the enlisted personnel are fine, hard-working men who seem more like a large happy family than a gathering of warriors.

As that old saying goes, "Early to bed, early to rise, makes a man Healthy, Wealthy, Wealthy, Healthy . . . . Oh well what's the difference you know what I mean and "G" Company is Healthy in body, and Wealthy in. happiness. honor, work, rank, discipline, good men and versatility.

Corporal Hammons has returned to the company for real duty after about a year of sliding around as a waiter, his waiting ability failed him in these late days and he was compelled to throw up his hand and cry "Oh boys, it has got me."

Corporal Murphy Beau Brummel of all times came in from the city a few mornings ago in a very mysterious looking car, he was put off of this car in a very mysterious way, on a fly of course, as though he was a noted gangster making his dash for liberty. Stop Murphy, look and listen the hawks will get you.

Somebody remarked, that "C" Company could hold a pretty good line while marching to music. That's easy, the members of the company have an ear for musc, and if you don't believe it—just visit a Wednesday night dance, and see them shaking the light fantastic. Believe me, they're good.

Pvt. Glover (our great philosopher) says, "When a fellow has nice clothes, a car and several lady admirers, he is alright." Pvt. Betts, replied by saying "Give me the money, and the rest will take care of itself."

"I have that pleasure, sir."

"Well," said the customer, removing the cigar from his own mouth and gazing at the official fixedly, "five years ago I dined here, was unable to pay my bill, and you kicked me out."

"Very sorry, indeed sir," said the manager with a perturbed, apologetic look, "but I am sure you will understand. This business . . . "

SOUTH TO SEE HARD BATTLES ON GRIDIRON THIS WEEK

sylvania will cause a weak Navy team to bow before her in defeat and the margin of victory should be decisive. In an outstanding intersectional game, Princeton meets Michigan, boasting a record that marks it as possessing one of the best elevens in the country. The Wolverines are anticipating a rather easy victory, and far be it from your prophet to disagree with them.

Army will defeat William and Mary, conquerors of Navy, decisively. Holy Cros will easily defeat Catholic, one of the smaller unbeaten teams. New Hampshire and Rutgers are favored over Lowell Textile and John Hopkins respectively.

In the Midwest, Wisconsin clashes with Ohio State, who held the powerful Pittsburgh team to a scoreless tie, and Northwestern matches its offensive drive against that of Minnesota. The Wisconsin Badgers appear to have a hypothetical edge over the gladiators representing Ohio State, but anything may happen in this game. Northwestern is in for a hard afternoon against Minnesota, and will have to apply plenty of pressure to win. The outcome is doubtful with the Wildcats slight favorites.

In the outstanding game in the country this week, the Notre Dame Ramblers meet their first genuine test of the season in Pittsburgh. The Irish in the three games they have played thus far have amassed the total of one hundred and seventy-seven points, or an average of fifty-nine per game, all the while holding their hapless opponents scoreless. Pittsburgh boasts a victory over Army and a long string of wins. Notre Dame should win this game by two or three touchdowns despite the great strength of the Panthers.

The Purdue Boilermakers are scheduled to face the purple-clad eleven representing N. Y. U. in an intersectional game. This contest will go far to prove the relative football strength of the East and the Midwest. Purdue, one of the strongest teams in the Big Ten Conference, should come out on top.

Chicago will seek its second Conference victory over Illinois. Chicago should win. Kansas has a "breather" in St. Louis, although the latter team can hardly be called a set-up. Nebraska meets a strong Kansas State eleven, and the Cornhuskers look like winners. Michigan State, fresh from its surprising victory over Fordham last Saturday, is a heavy favorite to conquer Syracuse. Oklahoma, an aspirant for the Big Six championship, will successsfully repulse the Oklahoma Aggies.

In the West, Stanford will be hard put to defeat U. C. L. A., an eleven which is yet to taste defeat this season. Stanford will be forced to play heads-up football all the way to win this game. California should have little difficulty in turning back Nevada and Whitman will hardly prove a match for Washington. Washington State is several touchdowns better than Montana. More anon.

"Look here... this is Chesterfield tobacco. Notice its lighter color... you don't see any dark heavy types, do you? I guess that's why Chesterfields are milder.

"I'm told that uniformly lighter color is due to cross-blending. It sort of welds all the tobaccos into one.

"And here's something else. Notice that these long shreds are all cut the same width. It stands to reason they burn smoother and cooler.

BENNING HERALD

VOLUME II — FORT BENNING, GA., FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1932 — NUMBER 28

TOWN TOPICS

Latest news of the great mayoralty contest which will determine the chief executive of Biglerville tells us that Lt. Ralph Pulsifer is in the lead. This was to be expected, however, for the Assistant Secretary of the Officers' Club is noted for his tact and diplomacy throughout the home of the Infantry School.

Lt. Pulsifer has not yet formally stated his platform, but several points of it have been made clear to date. Among the salient ones are the following:

1—The candidate has expressed himself in favor of having sidewalks for the convenience of the officers who are endeavoring to maintain perfect sartorial appearance. The type used in Block 23 won't do, but there must be a connecting sidewalk between the door and the car of the officer, so that he will have no difficulty in maintaining the spic-and-spanness of his costume in muddy weather. (See Gunbotham for commentary on Georgia Climate).

2—The candidate is in favor of a ruling suppressing radios on all but one night each week, when they will be permitted to run full blast.

3—Pianos in houses of Biglerville will be prohibited, if the leading candidate is to have his way, particularly those which are being used to run up and down scales.

The picked octopus at the Club is giving the officials quite a bit of worry. To say the least, it is certainly a bizarre object, and one that is likely to inspire fear in the minds of those who have not been forewarned. Perhaps that is the reason why it has been rejected as a gift by the Academic Museum and by the Officers' Club. At the present moment Lt. Dowdall is using it to frighten away bulldogs from his office and reports that it is unusually effective in its role of terror inspirer.

As an alternative to destroying it, we would suggest that it be offered as a bridge prize. Certainly it would be a rather different prize and would undoubtedly be of quite as much use as the greater number of bridge prizes which are usually given. But, on the other hand, it isn't much good decoratively. Perhaps it wouldn't be so good after all.

Orton Tewson, in the Atlanta Journal, tells of an interesting passage from the mmeoirs of General Peyton C. March, Chief of Staff, United States Army, during the World War.

According to the story, certain influences were brought to bear on President Wilson "looking to the abolition of the salute." "And," says the General, "he actually was persuaded to write a letter to the War Department on the subject."

"The fact is," adds the general, "that in the Army it is just as mandatory for the officer to return the salute as it is for the soldier to salute first. It is mutually obligatory and not different in significance from the raising of the cap by a student of Princeton when the president of Princeton, Dr. Wilson, passed him.

Polo Season Will Open Sunday At French Field: Two Games To Be Played

Four Teams Of Benning To See Action In Games Scheduled For Sunday Afternoon

There will be polo, and plenty of it at French Field Sunday afternoon, beginning promptly at 1:30. Two games will be played during the afternoon, all four teams being represented.

The four teams represented each year at Fort Benning are: The Artillery, 29th Infantry, Students and Freebooters. While it is of much interest as to what players will represent the Students this year, it is generally conceded that they will have a good team on the field this year, as they have always been in the competition with all four horses.

Major General Campbell King will be present at the opening game, and will toss in the first ball, officially opening the season. Parking space is available for those desiring to remain in their cars to witness the game, and sizeable grandstand space is always available.

Last year the competition was close throughout the season, having the teams in good condition for the Fourth Corps Area tournament held at Benning in the spring. Three of the teams retain their old players this year, and should show some good improvements in the type of play.

Major Arnold, however, will be with the Freebooters this year. after having been with the Artillery last year. Other members of the Freebooter team are: Major Thompson, Captain Blue, Captain Gee, Lieutenant Monroe, Lieutenant Luckett, and Captain Nichols.

A few new ponies have been added to the string of the 'Booters, and with the list of handicap players listed, should be able to turn the trick this year.

The 29th Infantry will be led into the fray by Major Frasier, who is a veteran at the game. Captain Beatty,

'Pomeroy's' Past Will Be Dramatic Club's Offering

"Pomeroy's Past," a comedy in three acts, by Clara Kummer, will be the initial production of the year by the Infantry School Dramatic Club. Armistice Day, Friday, November the eleventh, is the date set for the first showing, the second performance taking place the following evening, Saturday, November the twelfth.

"Pomeroy's Past," with Laura Hope Crews and Ernest Truex in the leading roles, proved to be a great success when produced in New York several years ago.

Except for Mrs. Pierce, the cast is composed of players who are new to Benning audiences. It is an experienced cast, however, and, with Mrs. Cleveland directing it, Dramatic Club patrons are assured of a fine performance.

To avoid congestion, it is urged that those who are in a position to attend the Saturday performance do so. Experience has shown that there is less competition for the best seats on that evening. The doors will open at 8:25 p. m., and the curtain will rise at 8:45 p. m., twenty minutes later.

Georgia-Auburn To Play At Columbus In One Of South's Football Classics

BY GORDON TACKLE

From the barracks to the sedate quarters in Rainbow Row every topic of conversation turns to the Georgia-Auburn classic of November 19. Sentries know but one watchword—Tigers and Bulldogs.

Classmen are drawing strange hieroglyphics on the charts, instructors are clawing the density of routine and barking out problems in true grid fashion. Enlisted men acknowledge the insignia of the jungle and the old barnyard with a significance equal only in that of the silver and the gold.

To assure immediate court martial suggest a phrase foreign to the garrison that has no bearing on the contest! Fort Benning is manoeuvering toward a very definite point. The Municipal Stadium is as certain as was the Argonne and the Marne.

Eat 'em up Tiger; Give em Hell Georgia is written across the mast. And the post is solidly in attune with the spirit of the occasion. The personnel and every cohort feel a tingle in the vein. An epic of the decade is in the offing. The annual grid battle between the warriors of Auburn and the knights of Georgia University for the first time in ten years will show a demonstration that will thrill from the 50 yard strip to the goal.

When thousands pack the stadium for the football game on the 19th, khaki will be spangled across that vast arena bespeaking the same lively interest always manifest at Benning when the gladiators of the Plains and Athens are scheduled to take the field.

In yesteryear there was an enthused, loyal band of ardent Benning grid fans at the game. This year there is every reason to believe that the Post representation will exceed all previous record. When one purchases the necessary credentials to witness the spectacle there is an expectancy of myriad thrills and the books are wide open for favorable comment.

Not since the day, long years ago that Mike Donahue left the Plains has Auburn presented an aggregation so powerful as the 1932 Tiger. Here, indeed, you have a ferocious man eater. Auburn has been running places and clawing victims unmercifully. Football has developed into an art; and art is only seen in victory.

For the first time in a decade the Tigers will come to Columbus favored to win over the Bulldog. On the other hand Georgia is known always to point toward the Auburn game. Their showing against the Florida Gators last Saturday gives warning that strength is embedded, and the long years of intense rivalry assures one of the fastest, hardest fought grid battles since relations between the two schools were opened.

Tickets for the Georgia-Auburn game are on sale at the Officers' Club and at the Post Exchange. You can do yourself no greater favor than assuring presence at the contest. The Tiger and the Bulldog will entertain in every way.

First Hunt Of Season Draws Largest Crowd Ever To Assemble At Benning

24th Infantry Celebrates Last Week On Sixty-third Anniversary of Founding

Ft. Benning's colored regiment, the 24th Infantry, celebrated (Tuesday, Nov. 1), the 63rd anniversary of its organization. The 780 men of the regiment were given a holiday and special holiday dinners, at which the soldiers entertained their families, were served in the company messhalls after a brief program which was held in the regimental service club, and during which the men were addressed by Colonel Fred L. Munson, regimental commander.

Colonel Munson reviewed briefly the history of the 24th Infantry from its organization through the consolidation of the 38th Infantry and the 41st Infantry on Nov. 1, 1869, through the frontier Indian campaigns, the Spanish-American war, and its subsequent service to the present time.

Following Colonel Munson's address, Sergeant William McCauley of Company B, the regiment's oldest soldier, who is nearing sixty-five years of age, made a talk to his comrades on the theme of clean soldiering. The regiment's newest recruit, Private Arnold Baker, also of Company B, made a brief talk, giving his impression of army life.

The 24th Infantry is a part of the regular garrison of Fort Benning, and assists in carrying the overhead of The Infantry School. It is organized at peace-strength, with two active battalions, comprising thirty officers, two warrant officers, and seven hundred and eighty enlisted men.

The regiment is commanded by Colonel Fred L. Munson, and Lieutenant Colonel Franklin L. Whitley is second in command. Major Peter P. Salgado is in command of the 1st Battalion, and Major Roger B. Harrison, commands the 2nd Battalion.

Lieutenant Colonel Louis A. Carter, Chaplain, is the only colored officer assigned to the regiment.

Lt. Col. Lewis, Former Benning Officer Is Dead

Lieutenant Colonel Evan E. Lewis, Assistant Chief of Staff, First Division, General Staff Corps, died suddenly Monday, October the thirty-first, in his quarters at Fort Hamilton, Brooklyn.

Colonel Lewis was born on the twenty-fourth of November, 1885, in what was then the Dakota Territory. He graduated from West Point in 1907. He was decorated with the Distinguished Service Cross and received three citations for gallantry in action during the Aisne-Marne and Meuse-Argonne offensives in the World War. He served in France with the 26th Division.

Colonel Lewis was stationed at Fort Benning for four years 1925-29. For the first three years of this period, he held the position of Head of the Military History Committee, and the last year acted as Chief of the Fourth Section. While here, he acquired a large circle of friends, to whom the news of his passing came as a severe blow.

Infantry School Hunt Club's Inaugural Meet Vividly Described By Diana Chase

On the Sunday morning which opens the 1932-33 season of The Infantry School Hunt nearly 200 enthusiastic followers of the chase, with their relatives and friends, assemble at the Polo-Hunt club for the inaugural chase. Eager and expectant, for the whole season is before them with its prospects of glorious moments, the like of which can only be enjoyed in the field of hunting, the groups of well appointed ladies and officers and the scarlet-clad hunt staff, make an attractive, animated picture. Coffee and biscuits are served, while one of the two bands, that of the 29th Infantry, plays appropriate hunt airs.

At five minutes before eight, after a few words of caution from the Master, Captain Sidney H. Negrotto, the largest hunting field ever assembled at Fort Benning is poised for the start. Promptly at 8:00 o'clock, the Master nods to the Huntsman, who moves quietly out, the hounds clustering about his horse, as the band of the 24th Infantry strikes up Bucalossi's Hunting Scene. Two whippers-in, with thongs uncoiled, ride on either side of the pack. Led by Captain Negrotto and Major Brett, the large field, resembling a cavalry regiment, rides close behind, while Major Arnold manoeuvers the juvenile contingent to points of vantage. Everything clicks with precision. The organization and control are well-nigh perfect, as well they might be.

The field rides to the top of Maxey Ridge and checks to watch the uncoupling of the hounds and the cast for the drag in the plain below. There is a cheer from the Huntsman, a crack from the thong of a whipper-in, then a note from a hound that silences the chatter and brings everyone to attention. Fifteen couples are off in perfect form, to follow the course of a carefully laid drag which presents to the field a series of panoramas and displays the excellent scenting qualities of the hounds. As the field moves over the scenic drag course against a background of gold, scarlet and brown woodland, the spectators are thrilled by the pageantry of color and action displayed in accordance with the best traditions of the chase.

After the eight mile run the field assemble again at the Polo-Hunt Club to discuss the pleasures of the chase over a delicious breakfast while appropriate music is played softly by the 24th Infantry band, nearby.

The next meet of the Hunt Club will be held on Sunday, November 6 for both the junior and senior members. The juniors will assemble at the Infantry School Stables at 5:00 a. m. for a fox hunt, while the seniors will meet at the Polo-Hunt Club for a brisk run over the drag course, Breakfast for both will be served at 11:45 at the Polo-Hunt Club.

A midnight blue coat trimmed with gray astrakhan.

It's one of the most difficult things in the world to choose a coat if one has decided to buy a new model, becuase there is such a wide range to choose from, all lovely and extremely reasonable in price. There are some very luxurious models, but if one is buying a coat to do duty for more than one season it is better to select a more simple model, not "dated" with characteristics that mark the season's things. For instance, the coat shown in the sketch would be just the thing for various occasions for quite a time. It is of midnight blue smooth woolen and is trimmed with inside vertical tucks and an attractive double collar of gray astrakhan. Gray and blue are always a happy color scheme.

CAPT. AND MRS. PHILLIPS ENTERTAIN AT DINNER BEFORE COUNTRY CLUB DANCE

Capt. and Mrs. Walter C. Phillips were the hosts Saturday evening at dinner at the Country Club to a congenial party of friends. The table was charmingly decorated by a large silver bowl of pink rose buds and tapers of pink. After dinner the party proceeded to the ball room of the Club where dancing was enjoyed. Capt. and Mrs. Phillips had as their guests: Maj. and Mrs. B. G. Weir, Maj. and Mrs. Henry Terrell, Maj. and Mrs. F. W. Huntington, Maj. and Mrs. L. H. Cook, Maj. and Mrs. Forrest Harding, Maj. and Mrs. J. S. Switzer, Capt. and Mrs. Ralph Lovett, Capt. and Mrs. M. B. DePass, Lieut. and Mrs. Edwin Post, Lieut. and Mrs. N. C. Pilet, and Lieut. Lyman Munson.

PERSONALS

Lieut. and Mrs. James R. Pierce have as their guests, Mrs. H. J. Weeks of Washington, D. C. and Miss Kathleen Orndorff of Birmingham, Ala.

Capt. and Mrs. George O. Clark have as their guests Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Magana of New York and Capt. and Mrs. C. E. Fenters, who have arrived at Fort Benning for duty from Honolulu.

Girl Scont Notes

CARDINALS

Time is going fast! Here we are in November already! We're up with the month, though, because every girl in the Cardinal Troop is a Tenderfoot (or more). Next we'll begin work on the Second Class test, having had the last of the Tenderfoot knots today.

We signed up for our (maximum five) badges also, and when I read up and down that long list of examiners it makes me realize how much time so many people are giving to us Scouts.

The Dramatic Club plays are beginning soon, so we'll draw for ushers next week.

On Saturday we're going to lay and follow a trail, to a place good for cooking "Angels-on-horseback"!

PINE TREE TROOP

Last Wednesday we had our flag ceremony to begin the meeting and I think that our leaders are quite pleased with the way we are progressing. Different girls are chosen each meeting for the Color Guard (though they always have to be the neatest and cleanest in the Troop) for which points are given the patrols.

Then we sang songs. Tina Hinkley again favored us with her presence and we had a fine time. "I'm Going To Leave Old Texas Now" seemed to be the favorite, and though there are eight verses, we sang them all.

After that some of us practised signalling under Marguerite Moore's able teaching, and the Second Class Scouts trained the girls working on their Tenderfoot tests. Everyone is working hard and I believe that most of them will pass the test at the next meeting.

Last of all we had our good-night circle and all went home after a happy meeting.

Scribe—Barbara Monroe

DAFFODIL TROOP

Friday was a day of surprises for the Daffodil Troop. After the P.-T. A. party we reported to the cabin and from there went to the field in front of the Polo Club. There we ran relay races and played for about half an hour. Back to the cabin—surprise No. 1. Mrs. Matchett had come to see us—and were we glad!

Surprise No. 2. A lovely Hallowe'en party, given by Beth Murray's mother and father. The nicest sandwiches and good hot cocoa and then huge red apples were served. What a gorgeous time we had. Mrs. Balch assisted Mrs. Murphy.

Surprise No. 3. We have a new Lieutenant — Mrs. Skow — Jeanette's mother. Isn't that grand?

After singing a couple of songs we said goodnight and thanks for a very wonderful time.

The Grapevine Telegraph

Lots of wires this week . . . . a hard week this past one . . . . almost too many demonstrations and too many dances . . . . Something should be done about it all . . . . And time out called for those who like to sleep! By the way, there are a few people like that around here, aren't there?

Something decidedly sporting about going riding these mornings. In the first place there's always the horse . . . . He can usually be called on for a few momentary shocks . . . . and then there are firing practises that seem to be part of the day's entertainment. Something nice and unexpected about them, too. Thunder on the left—all of a sudden—and with one concerted leap on the part of the rider's heart and the horse's rear feet, one realizes one has strayed where one shouldn't. Nice thing about these morning rides, we recommend them.

Polo playing isn't all shoving into the other man's horse! There was something very earthy about it last Saturday afternoon. All the players and their pals had a dig. Jolly, that. And one lad appeared with a pick- . . . . just for variety and general helpfulness in filling up the holes. And the diggers had a tea afterwards . . . . There is always a happy ending if you stick around long enough.

Hallowe'en last Monday night in case you hadn't heard . . . . Other people realized it, it seems. Almost a tragic situation on our hands. You know these little boxes housekeepers put their orders in for the commissary? That stand out in front of houses? Well, a troup of juvenile ghosts seemed to be aware of them, too.

Tuesday morning found strange and twisted orders in many of the boxes that had been forehandedly filled Monday night. The Commissary is still trying to straighten the situation out—and a few families confess to being in a positively foodless state . . . . Well, no more Hallowe'ens for a year, now.

Daughters Of United States Army Hold First Meeting Of Season

The first meeting of the year of the Fort Benning Chapter of the Society of the Daughters of the United States Army held yesterday at the home of Mrs. John B. Thompson, president of the local Benning chapter, marks the beginning of a new and energetic fall program for the members. The first activity planned, besides the all important one of welcoming newcomers, will be a rummage sale to be held on November 27th, the proceeds of which will be given to some Post welfare organization.

Great interest will be evinced in the Society this year because of the reorganization and change in the constitution brought about in 1931 under the very able leadership of Mrs. Thomas W. Brown, National President of the D. U. S. A. Since then there has been a great increase in membership and in interest.

Ten chapters now replace the original four; over five hundred members have succeeded the small original group; while a large sinking fund promises to tide the organization over the depression. The latest chapter to be formed will be that of Governor's Island which will be known as the New York branch and will be headed by Mrs. H. M. Jones.

Fort Benning saw the birth of this as yet very young Society, when, in January of 1928, Mrs. Charles D. Roberts gathered together a group of girls and women whose common interest was their army childhood and environment Her purpose was mainly that of renewing and continuing old friendships and of making new ones in a society so shifting and therefore so

Monday, Oct. 4

Thru the haze still hanging over me I did this morning observe that the schedule-maker was once a student. Why else did he so obviously reverse the usual daily procedure of two hours in Jiggs Hall followed by two hours drill on the field? Ah, the sly fox, well recalling his own student days, did see the need to early dispel the fog with violent exertion at drill. It is hard to hide motives from this prying class.

Drill followed by training with the machine gun in Immediate Action. Yet with all the remedies extant not one is yet known for "Student still fails to function." It may well be that the schedule-maker can some day supply that formula too.

Captain Lucas did exhort us to employ more spare hours at home in mounting and dismounting gun and tripod, which request did stamp him on my mind as a bachelor; for Lord, no benedict would even think of suggesting such when it must be done in the house. And there it would have since the dark falls daily ere we arrive chez nous, precluding outdoor rehearsals. Yet as I view the thing unbiasedly I can but think that a "U" in machine gun were highly preferable to marital dissolution.

Our only solution may be to erect a portable, electric lighted edifice with a sod floor, the which can be sent calling upon all members of the class. And I doubt not that with a half hour stop at each place a great many homes could have been visited between evening mess and reveille.

Tuesday, Oct. 25

So thoroly imbued with an unchristian spirit this morning that I could laugh at Monk Mitchell for having forgot the key to his locker; the more so when he did return with a hammer and begin to break open Triplet's locker. And I did regret the appearance of Triplet on the scene in time to prevent sabotage albeit Monk's incoherent attempts at explanation did naught to allay my merriment.

Wednesday, Oct. 26

Upmost betimes that we might not be later than eight o'clock in arriving on the scene of a garrison review. The threat of a cold, damp rain to dispel the formation was accomplished, whereupon we were inserted under an impromptu schedule and the wheels continued to roll.

Still puzzling over Major Kraft's remark that two million dollars for the National Guard was by Congress, in 1908, doubled to eight millions; for though my years of service be not many, yet experience tells me that Congress might have doubled two millions to three but never to eight.

Treated this afternoon to as admirable an exhibition of an Advanced Guard action as we may see in many moons. A bit amazed to hear the Explanation that no machine guns were forward in the formation because they might be lost; for, Lord, if that were carried to its logical conclusion we should fight all our wars by correspondence.

Thursday, Oct. 27

Considerably thrilled by the spectacle of all the troops of this post assembled and reveiwed, I fear me I shall never attain beyond the stage of mine years old for I am always stirred by sight of marching men and sound of martial music; this morning greatly so.

With native nonchalance I did neglect to observe that this was a two-shirt day and wore butone, to the prejudice of my attention during the demonstrations. It is my belief that did the man with the microphone realize how difficult he makes it for the telling of anecdotes during these demonstrations he would magnanimously withdraw. During the break some semi-congealed students did secrete themselves in the pontoons, which were nearby, to avoid the chill wind and, falling asleep in the interior warmth, did thereby also avoid further instruction.

This afternoon to Sackett Hill to witness a platoon in attack. Somewhat disgruntled at being required to walk a thousand yards to put myself in the platoon leader's shoes. In full accord with a youngster of ten who

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

Hobbies

Do you realize that idle minds create discontent and trouble.

Give up that dream of life without cares or work. Only a busy life is a happy one. Idleness soon gets tiresome and then begins the loss of will to live. To be healthy you must be so busy that you have no time to think of yourself. Get a job, if possible, that you like; one that holds your interest.

Good work to be continued day after day, and year in and year out, depends on a relaxation of mind and body that change and play can give.

A daily dose of work followed by a thoroughly good time at play keeps one young. Worries and cares are forgotten for a time. Strain is relieved and that tense feeling disappears.

Play helps to postpone the infirmities of age. So I say get a hobby. Have several hobbies. Find some work or play that is entirely outside the serious work of life and make every effort to excel all others that have the same hobby.

I doubt not you recall friends who have retired from business or professions at the age of 50 or thereabouts who have died in a year or two. I venture that these men did not have a hobby.

Apparently healthy at retirement, looking forward to years of play and enjoyment, these men, because they had discounted the benefits of play and hobbies in their earlier years, cannot get up the steam to take on new things. They are old before their time. Loafing soon gets tiresome. Mental and physical deterioration advances rapidly. Luckily for themselves and family they soon die.

Get a hobby. Enjoy life all your alloted years.

Offhand... Observatinos

There is an interesting article in the November number of the "American Mercury" entitled "Officers and Gentlemen." It is not what you might think it would be.

In the coming elections, this column will support Capt. Phil T. Fry for the office of Practical Joker. Only a few of the reasons for this decision can be announced here. Before you vote for another however, consider the following: "Phil T." is the handsome athletic officer and is plenty big enough to take care of himself in case any of his practical jokes should backfire; he probably knows more than he has told about the ventriloquist trick which was recently perpetrated on Lt. "Skeets" Johnson; and lastly, when properly provoked he sings a rich warm baritone.

The combination walking and leaning rest canes which made their appearance in such numbers during the demonsration week proved a disappointment. The first sight of students bracing themselves against these flimsy looking contraptions sent the local tricksters into ecstasies of gleeful anticipation for they had visions of what would happen if a swift kick should be applied to the base of the cane at just the right place or if some means could be found to make the collapse in reverse. Nothing happened. The points of the canes invariably imbed in the earth so well that the best kickers could not displace them suddenly enough to bring the user to grief, nor could anything be done to make the patent seats unfold beyond the horizontal.

While on the subject of tricks and jokes, mention should be made of an incident which has just transpired over in the Tank Section. Long years ago the picturesque Bill Dean fell into the habit of using a certain expletive. It was something like, "Well I'll be a sad so and so." The use of this expression grew upon him until it came to play a major role in his vocabulary. Without it, he was as helpless in conversation as an armless Yiddish merchant. Bill decided to eliminate it. The ever watchful "Okie" Wade and "Lou" Storck saw their opportunity and finigled poor Bill into a wager that he could not go a year without using the expression. Then Wade and Storck set about to trap him. They offered a twenty percent cut to any student who could offer conclusive proof of Bill having used the forbidden words. If Bill slammed the door of a tank on his fingers or sliced a drive on the golf course, he would invariably find one of his tormentors within hearing with ears cocked. The thing began to get on his nerves. It ruined his bowling game for there was no way to ease the pressure after making a bad roll. He had been making five or six dollars in prizes every month but his earnings there dropped to nothing. He tried to buy off but "Okie" would have none of it. Finally one morning while the trio were driving to school it happened. Wade ditched the car and Storck broke two springs jumping up and down with elation.

VEST POCKET ESSAY ON DRAMATIC CRITICISM

Next week, the Infantry School Dramatic Club gives its first play of the current season. For the past two months some twenty members of the garrison have been rehearsing, building scenery, assembling properties and otherwise preparing a varied collection of animate and inanimate essentials for a theatrical production. Meanwhile, at least twenty other members of the garrison are putting up with whatever mild or severe manifestations of the artistic temperament these activities engender in the dramatically inclined half of the family.

Now don't jump to the conclusion that we are going to burst into a paean of praise for the noble sacrifice that the actors, directors, stage manager and others are making for the entertainment of the garrison. That isn't why they do it. They do it because they get a kick out of it. If their efforts receive even a modest amount of appreciation they are fully compensated. They are probably foolish to go to so much trouble and labor for one brief exhibition of ability, talent, gall or whatever it may be, but when you think of it, most really worthwhile people are doing just that on the stage of life all the time. Think of the time and effort that goes into the winning of a $1.50 cup at polo, tennis or golf—or even into a lesser golfer's utterly futile achievement in breaking ninety.

The local players, however, are not so much the subject of this essay as the local audience. The latter includes many types running all the way from the conjugal or dinner guest conscript, to whom all amateur dramatics are anathema, to the enthusiast who thinks that any amateur who can walk across the stage without falling down is a second Edwin Booth or Ellen Terry, as the sex may be.

For the conscript we have only sympathy and for the enthusiast only praise, but for certain other types, we have feelings that are neither charitable nor flattering. For the supercilious critics hailing from the gas light circuit who seek to bolster up a scanty theatrical background by panning a really creditable performance we have a cordial dislike. Also we are irritated by the moron who thinks it excruciatingly funny that Captain "29th Infantry" as Lord Dimwit is making love to Mrs. "First Section" as Lady Whiffletree.

Please don't misunderstand us. If the show is lousy or Captain "29th Infantry's" performance is terrible, we believe that the paid-up subscriber to the Dramatic Club has the privilege of saying so. We think it better form, in the general case, to express an adverse comment as an individual opinion rather than as a positive statement of fact as: "I didn't like the play" or "I didn't care for Captain "29th Infantry's" interpretation of Lord Dimwit. If, however, you are one of those frank persons who are averse to polite phraseology, say it anyway you want to, providing always, that it really was as bad as that. Moreover, if Lord Dimwit's love-making is more reminiscent of the Albany night boat than of Shrewsbury Manor, laugh your fool heads off but don't snigger just because in real life he happens to be your next door neighbor. There is nothing funny about that. It may be a real tragedy for him.

BELATED RECOGNITION

For several weeks past, Comprador Golightly, better known to the Thanatopsis Brotherhood as Single Handed Snarve, the Lone Wolf of Austin Loop, has been wearing an aggrieved air on the rare occasions when he deigns to appear in our presence.

By our customary skillful and diplomatic approach we finally elicited the reason for his resentment. Early in the month of October, the Comprador made a hole in one which had not been given proper publicity. Why the Comprador should regard us as his private press agent, we don't know, but since he does we hereby make his belated acknowledgement of his great achievement.

The shot heard round the golf course was made on No. 4. Golfers Brann, Barracker, Lindroth, Easley, and Cota witnessed the accident—also eight more or less trustworthy caddies.

The Lone Wolf, after an appropriate exhibition of delirious joy, finished the remaining holes in the customary sixes and sevens with an occasional eight. Visions of dozens of golf balls, numerous cartons of cigarettes, a set of matched clubs or so, and the Lord knows what else in recognition of his remarkable performance filled his thoughts.

Arriving at the club house, he inquired greedily for the spoils of war, only to learn that big business wasn't putting out these days. Mine Host Dowdall, noting the Wolf's crestfallen expression, came hopefully forward with the pickled octopus which he has been trying to find a good home for, but the Comprador declined this with a shudder. There are some prizes worse than no prize at all and preserved octopi fall easily within this classification.

TANG OF THE SEA

A few weeks back Tanker Brett returned from a fishing expedition off the Florida coast. The trip had been a highly successful one and the Tanker made a generous distribution of his fine catch among his friends. Among those to receive one of the genial Tanker's nature-in-the-raw fish dinners was Major Jesse Ladd a fellow desk slave in the Infantry Board.

Now it so happened that at the time of the receipt of the fish Mrs. Ladd was away. Since the fish would not keep until her return, the resourceful Major decided to let the cook prepare them under his supervision. These were especially fine fish and he wanted them right. Accordingly he interviewed the man who had caught them.

"Say, Jimmy" he remarked, "These are salt water fish aren't they?"

"Right out of the gulf" replied the Tanker.

"Then I'd better have 'em soaked overnight before they are cooked, hadn't I?" queried the Major.

erans of Foreign Wars which assembled in his Phenix City office to interrogate the Progrestatic candidate as to his stand on the bouns.

"I hear they're sayin' a military man don't make a good President," he commented. "They're sayin' that us military are too arbitrary and high handed to get along with Congress. Havin' been in an Army once, you all know that's a lot of baloney but anyway, wot the hell? What I want to know is who ever said anything about gettin' along with Congress? I got other ideas. When I'm elected, I don't intend to get along with Congress. Not me, I'm goin' to get along without it. That's what I'm goin' to do. What this country needs is a Mussolini and the first thing I do when I get elected is take away their hip flasks. If that don't bring 'em around, I'll have my Secretary of the Treasury stop payment on their mileage vouchers. I ain't goin' to have Bob La Follette and Smith Brookhart tellin' me where to get off. I learned how to handle insurgents when I was in the Islands. We civilized 'em with the Krag, just like the song says and I can do it again."

"What about a bonus for the veterans of the Army of Pacification?" asked a grizzled warrior who looked as if he had recently been on a hard campaign.

"You'll get it, Buddy," replied the General. "A dollar a day for every day on sick report not in line of duty is my program. That'll keep out the undeserving cases and even up things for fellers like you and me that the Army treated kinda rough when we was in it."

WASTED

Benning's genial merchant prince, Captain C. W. Hanna, while inspecting the Main Exchange, hesitated for an unthinking moment before the show case in which an enticing array of Fuller brushes was displayed. The display included floor brushes, hair brushes, clothes brushes—in fact, everything from radiator brushes to toothbrushes and the Captain was visibly impressed. Noting what he took to be a covetous glance cast in the direction of the hair brushes, the up and coming salesman promptly unleased his most eloquent high pressure sales talk.

He displayed in their most appealing aspect half a dozen attractive styles suitable for all makes of both new and second-hand hair. He proclaimed the virtues of the Fuller product in sounding periods that rivaled the best efforts of Demosthenes and Cicero. Then, fully confident that whatever feeble sales resistance his victim still possessed was about to crack, he brought out his latest advance 1933 model with adjustable bristles, stream line chassis and sliding handle to suit the hand of the user.

As in a trance, the thoroughly hypnotized Captain removed his head dress to mop his fevered brow, disclosing a dome as devoid of any semblance of hair as the proverbial billiard ball.

The salesman gasped, gulped, and hurriedly put away his wares. It was at least an hour before he recovered his equilibrium.

GRAPEVINE TELEGRAPH

We hear there are two schools of thought on the Hedge situation. Some people want 'em and some don't, but the "dont's" seem to be in the lead for in the other day's bulletin we read, as follows: "Hereafter no individual will plant a hedge on the reservation without authority of headquarters." Now, will you be good, all you surreptitious hedge planters!

Fan mail for Major Harding has been coming in—and is the rest of the staff jealous!! And now it seems a very attractive blonde has been making enquiries as to whether the above mentioned gentleman is married or single. Well—what this newspaper business won't do—the power of the pen—and all that sort of thing!

Who's casting slurs on the fair Army name? Recent articles in the New York Times states that only criminals and illiterates are not allowed to vote in the United States. Just where does that place the hundred thousand souls in this country's Army . . . . We leave you to decide for yourselves.

Funny things happen around the stables . . . One lady, entered in the Ladies' Riding Class, was given a blank form to fill out . . . was asked to check whether she was novice, average, or experienced rider. The said lady checked novice . . . She was then asked how many years she had ridden, and wrote down twenty-five . . . . Now, we appeal to you . . . Have we had too much Georgia corn—or well, anyhow, we'll let this subject drop.

Whistles . . . . yells . . . . and lots of scudding hoofs—yes, there was a polo game on Sunday afternoon for the first time this year. There were two, in fact. One at 1 p. m. and a second one at 3. We heard one man's name being yelled about a bit but we won't mention it. And the games are going to continue.

Ever been to the Officers' Club at eight a. m. on a morning after? Sorta pitiful sight. Waiters wandering around in the writing room looking mildly unhappy. "Boy, this is a turrible looking place for a reading room." They could hardly fight their way across the room there were so many cigarette butts and packages that had once been full. Chesterfields were in the lead . . . . Now, you adherents of Wings and Targets, how about getting busy and putting your brand in the lead at some of these Morning After Affairs . . . .

Yes, sir, now we know there were too many parties last week . . . . At the final flare up last Saturday night one lady lost her evening bag . . . . and advertised for it in the Daily Bulletin. And six different people appeared, each with a different portion of the said bag. Yes, even the bag itself eventually came into the light . . . . Hard times these, on rhinestone evening bags . . . .

Rummage Sale next Wednesday and Thursday at the Protestant Chapel. Don't miss it. The Army Daughters are sponsoring it and all contributions are acceptable . . . Heres a solution, Lt. Dowdall, for some of that Collection of yours!

Deplorable Situation Facing Secretary

Dowdall Pleas For Help In Face Of Insurmountable Difficulties As Lost Articles Multiply In Number

Something very touching and even a trifle pathetic has been going on at the Officers' Club . . . Have you ever climbed the stairs to the office of the Secretary? Has he ever shown you. with a helpless look in his eye, the baffling collection of the Lost and Found articles which he is forced to harbor in his office? The sight is a sad one, the articles come from all over. The Theatre, the Officers' Club, the Polo-Hunt Club, the main road, the path the Hunt follows, from nowhere and everywhere. Ads put in the Bulletin, advertising the presence of these strayed possessions, often go unanswered and the Secretary finds himself saddled with an ever increasing pile. Sad, this, very sad . . .

This year's crop is said to be a good one, especially for so early in the year. Gloves lead the list. Strangely enough there are even pairs of gloves . . . . a nice pair of white kid, and only slightly soiled . . . a dashing black gauntlets stitched in white and known to the connoisseur as fantaisie . . . . and one stray cotton glove with just enough Georgia mud upon it to give it a greatly needed air of nonchalance. And many more gloves, lying unheeded and uncared for in the Secretary's office drawer . . .

And then the compacts! There aren't so many of them for they seem to number among the necessities. Hands may go ungloved but noses may never be seen unpowdered. Only two compacts, so far, remain unclaimed—one, a rakish looking silver specimen, the other a red enamel affair that has surely seen better days. A dozen, at least, of these feminine accessories are found after every dance, but only a few rest uncalled for. The same may be said for the lip stick situation. Only one—a product of Tangeelies—unused, we trust—in the aforementioned desk drawer.

And before we leave the ladies . . . two handsome ear rings grace the collection. Not mates, of course, but still, very commendable jewels, one of crystal. one of rhinestone, both in all probability, of Woolworth. (Although here let it be said for the honor of the Collection that last year at least six very beautiful cameo brooches remained unclaimed to the end.) And a flaming scarf of a soft fluffy substance, and another in a dismal shade of grey, lie draped on top of an otherwise impeccable filing case. All these things have an unwanted, uncared for air. For them there is something distinctly unhospitable about the office of the Secretary.

But the piece de resistance—and we really wonder who ever had the nerve to wear it—is an ultra dashing checkered riding cap, obviously male and wih the tag "Buckingham, London" inside of it. For the first time we have a clue as to why some things remain unclaimed. . . .

And finally, one sturdy looking fountain pen. A nice fat, black one with a gold rim around it. Do you need a new fountain pen? Here's your chance.

So much for this fall's collection of the Lost but not yet Found. It is a promising one, says the Secretary, for so early in the season, but it has by no means reached the heights attained by that of last year. For instance, so far as no automobiles have been left unclaimed at the Club and that, in 1931, was a common occurrence. And then, too, no fur coats, no sweaters, have been left. True, there have been difficult for friendship as that of the Army.

Since that time the D. S. U. A. has grown steadily. Under Mrs. Brown's reorganization plan, wider functions and purposes have been recognized to cope with the growing membership. A new constitution has dealt with these new probems; the natonal headquarters of the D. U. S. A. will soon be moved to Washington, where a more permanent office may be established.

The value of he D. U. S. A. is most noticeable in large cities such as Boston where Army women are scattered in different parts of town and have little opportunity of meeting each other informally. It also gives an opportunity to Army daughers who have married civilians to maintain some contact with Army life.

In Post life the Society has also proved beneficial as a nucleus of congenial people and as a means of carrying on a certain amount of charitable work. Ultimately the leaders of the D. U. S. A. hope to develop it into a sort of an organization which will be loyally maintained by Army women and which can be readily called upon in any national emergency.

Curves And Slants From The Organizations

COMPANY "E"

Even though the absence of news happenings of Company "E" have been sorely neglected there has never been a moment when some fine article showing either new achievements, honors, promotions, or character could not have received the literary talents of some cub reporter.

To start a summary of the many events brings on a decision of what are the best to relate. It is best to start with the close of range season and the elaborate dinner supervised by the finest Mess Sergeant in the 29th, Sergeant Philip H. Bell, a program completed by Lieutenant Decker and attended by the Batttalion Commander and the new and old Officers of the Company. After that hilarious dinner, time is found intervened with the promotion of two men—Privates First Class Frank S. Irvine and Mercer J. Cliett to the rank of corporal, one old timer, Private Leon D. Jones discharged for Foreign Service, the discharging of Private James S. Norris, the re-enlisting of three discharged men, Privates First Class William Ritchey, Privates Eugene Gillian and Edward Ketcham and the transferring of Privates Ovie Ray and James Henderson from Companies "B" and "D" respectively.

Company "E" shared modestly with the compliments bestowed upon the whole Regiment in regards to the five day practice hike held recently. The compliments given by one who was highly pleased by the efforts of every one in appearance and discipline could not equal the compliments thought by the men of the Company for their Captain, George J. Forster, who found time always to care for his men, and the once mentioned mess Sergeant with his staff of cooks who were always ready with a hot meal whenever camp was pitched. Here a little remembrance should be put forward for that excellent Sergeant in regards to the march that started in the wee hours of the night. With only forty minutes to go and the night air chilled to a slight frost this Sergeant from a cold stove had coffee boiled and ready to serve in less than twenty minutes for 193 men. Things of this sort are very seldom mentioned but 'things' like that make men in this army realize that there are many praises unsung for this group of unselfish men called cooks.

During the dinner held for the dismissal of Range Season the Company was proud to note that Sergeant Davis scored higher than any other man in the Regiment for the rifle. Private Roderick McLeod was the second highest man in the Regiment with the automatic rifle.

The above is not a synopsis of the occurrences of the Company for many things could be told that would reveal the fine spirit and morale of Company "E."

HQ. CO., 1ST BN.

During a brief respite from a whirl of demonstrations, collection sheets and what not, we will now proceed to keep our perusers interested in some local "dirt" from the interior of the Old 1st Battalion "Dope Bucket."

Firstly, we might voice ourselves loudly and vigorously by saying that our Company Basketball team is rounding into shape for the coming season and are offering our wares to any team that may wish to scrimmage us. We already have two or three games on our schedule and future melees may be obtained by calling No. 64 and asking for Pvt. Ray, he is one of the main cogs in our quintet of "Rock-passers." "Nuff for that."

Everyone is percolating O. K. in this outfit. "Droopy" is still drooping around hither and yonder in quest of new victims. Pvt. "XX" still monopolizes the radio on Saturday night, selecting one of the Tennesseean Hill Billy orchestras as 1st choice and harassing other members of the organization with selected bits of harmony dedicated to Hiram Skildinger. Route No. 3, Hockersville, Texas. Ladies and gentlemen, the next number will be a choice bit of harmony entitled "Keep the Skillet Greasy." Harold Ray will accompany us on the old guitar, by cracky! Understand Mr. XX we are not trying to "Hand you any Stuff" but a word to the wise is sufficient. Give us a break on Saturday ngiht Thanks!

The new pass word around this company, is "stuff," if you are not "Stuff," well, you just aren't in the race at all. The other day a certain dashing young man in this organization was sitting in the orderly room, incidentally he was charge of quarters, when the phone rang loud and long. Upon answering it some sweet young thing asked for Private X, (we will call him this, otherwise he may be embarrassed), upon receipt of the answer to her query that Pvt. X was out on demonstration, she said, "Well that is too bad, tell him that "Stuff" called. Hence the name. So we all waxed indignant and went upstairs, to bed, and tore up all our letters to Santa Claus. "Nuff sed." Now isn't that silly?

Oh!!, we almost forgot to mention our new aggregation of string pickers, Harp enthusiasts, and "Boop, Boop a dooers," that this company has recently acquired. This show is not a regular performance but can be seen and heard any night between lulls and business hours in "Ye Olde Barber Shoppe." These programs are sponsored by none other than the colorful master of ceremonies, Pvt. Wallace C. Gallman. O. K. Chirago, on with the show. We might add that the treasurer of this fantastic orchestra is Pvt. "Gabby Street," Taylor. As you know he was one of our leading baseball coaches. Private Arlin M. Tomlinson, our erstwhile barber, and as some folks remark, a stomp down good one, is the manager of this unique show. Three cheers for the "Gulley Jumpers." Booo!, booo!, booo!

But aren't you tiring of all this nonsensical chatter? I know you are so we will suffie. See you next week.

Until then, adios, au revoir, or any other form of farewell. At the sound of the next musical note it will be exactly time for ye scribe to don the blue serge and hie to the dance.

BONG!!!

"Well, I'm "scramming."

HOBBS

BATTERY "C"

The battery had a dismounted inspection last Saturday that went over excellently. Everybody had on a good looking, good fitting uniform and was all shined up. One close look at Battery "C" and no one has to wonder why so many of our men make orderly at guard mount.

Besides being good Artillerymen, the men in our battery are good housekeepers too. They are proud of their new home and keep it spick and span from the basement to the top floor. This statement can be verified by visiting officers from different branches of the service who have looked through the barracks in the last few weeks while the battery was out at drill or demonstration and unaware of the inspection.

at a dance our young Adonis Bill (Smoky Joe) Boren was voted the most popular man in the post. Gosh, I wonder how it feels to wake up every morning and see the beautiful loving cup smiling down at you. Come on, Smoky, tell us all about it.

Every one seems to be in good humor nowadays, and I can't tell whether it's because they are satisfied with themselves or if it's the effect of Pay Day. Anyway we are mighty glad to see so many smiling faces around the barracks.

Our mighty warriors of the gridiron have been gathered in one group . . . and what a group, I must say. Can't sleep any later than 8 o'clock now that they have gained possession of my dominion. Oh, well some day I repay them for such dirty tricks as odorizing the squad room with sweaty uniforms.

Old man weather gave the battery a break Wednesday when we had plenty of demonstrations scheduled. The horses gave us the horse-laugh when after being all shined up and ready to go they were unharnessed and tied to a line, and like the old army, the men did bunk fatigue while it rained.

Everyone heard about the working party "C" battery had a few weeks ago. Well, we had another party last Sunday. We had a chicken supper with music furnished by the 24th In-

COMPANY "H"

"Tarheel" Saunders, one of the best known athletes in the Post, is now in Company "H" having made a mutual transfer with Corporal Leo Tyler.

Due to the fact that "Cooter" Carter had such a strenuous time on pass, he has been assigned a tentative berth in the Fort Benning "Hotel."

We see "Sandy Hook" leading a mule quite a lot lately. The only difference between this and home is that here it's not between sun-up and sun-down but between sun-up and recall.

We are forming a company basketball team and should have one of the best in the regiment. With such a line-up as this: Saunders, Fuller, Lee, F., Slocum, Dowden, Poe, Miller, Gray, and Carter (when he turns in his tentative bunk at the "wire city").

We notice that since Sgt. Allen has taken over charge of the Recreation Room he has heard nothing but complaints. What's the matter "Al"?

Allen, C. has not been seen lately in a Chevrolet Sedan. We wonder what's wrong—a flat tire or—sum'pn?

Service Club Is Scene Of Dance

The members of the Fort Benning Service Club entertained at a Hallowe'en Dance, Friday evening October 28 in the Club. Several hundred guests enjoyed the evening. The Club was transformed into a bewitching scene with its profuse Hallowe'en decorations. The guests were given caps, and other appropriate souvenirs, which added much to the gayety of the occasion. Prizes were awarded by the judges Mr. Sgt. C. H. Bussey and Mrs. Bussey, Mrs. G. F. Anderson. Music was furnished by the 29th Infantry orchestra. The guests were received by the Club Hostess, Mrs. A. C. Setzler.

A dance will be given at the 29th Infantry Recreation Club, Friday evening, November 4.

Sergeant Bauer is sponsoring the dance and Mrs. A. C. Setzler will act as hostess.

RARE BEEF

A cowpuncher ordered a steak at a restaurant. The waiter brought it in rare—very rare. The puncher looked at it and demanded that it be returned to the kitchen and cooked.

"'Tis cooked," snapped the waiter.

"Cooked," said our friend the puncher, "I've seen cows hurt worse than that get well."

'Hi' Davis Receives Another Medal

By JACK B. GIBNEY

Another medal has been pinned to the breast of 1st Sergeant Edgar C. Davis, Company "E," 29th Infantry; holder of the D. S. C., contender, at the national matches at Camp Perry, Ohio, expert rifleman, and outstanding athlete during the time that he has been at Fort Benning.

SGT. EDGAR C. DAVIS

At a regimental parade last Saturday morning (Oct. 29), Colonel John J. Toffey, commander of the 29th Infantry, awarded Sgt. Davis the medal to be presented to the best rifle shot of the regiment, which honor "Hi" won with the excellent score of 331.

Sgt. Davis has won the title of "peep-sight prince" in the past, and the story of his achievements as a star baseball and football player, together with his abilities as a coach in almost any sport that soldiers contend in, is well known, and the best that could be said would only be a repetition of the many times that he has broken into print before.

With all his resplendence and glory as an outstanding luminary of the demonstraion regiment, however, "Hi" is still "Hi" to his friends, and continues to be the same efficient, pleasant, and well liked top-kick that he has been for the last seven years.

Reveler's Club Ball Is Success

Hallowe'en night the Revelers Club of Fort Benning entertained the dancing set of Columbus and Fort Benning with a most successful prize costume ball at the spacious gymnasium at the fort. Dancing was enjoyed by the guests from 8:30 to 12. Prizes were awarded during the evening for the best costumes.

This was a very hard task for the judges as there were so many beautiful and attractive costumes, there being about two hundred guests in costume. Miss Dorothy Hensley, dressed in a Witch's costume—with broom to match—finally won the judges' decision and was awarded a lovely five-year diary. Mrs. Beaudreaux, wearing a stunning cat costume, came in for a prize as did Miss Do Allen, Mrs. Alma Lee Slaughter and Mrs. William Parker. For the gentlemen, Audrey Pfister won first prize, with Pokey Flynn and Bill Fannin taking second and third, respectively.

The prizes were very attractive and useful and were presented for the occasion by The Schwob Co., Howard Bus Line, Hubbard Hardware, Sport and Luggage shop, Miller-Taylor and Chancellor's. A beautiful silver loving cup was presented to Miss Dorothy Hensley and Mr. William (Bill) Boren, winners of the Revelers Popularity contest. Miss Hensley has led the ladies in the contest almost from the start and it was no surprise that

Lugenbuhl Is Most Decorated In Co.F

Private 1st Class Henry J. Lugenbuhl of Co. "F" 29th Infantry has had a very interesting and varied life.

PVT. FC. H. J. LUGENBUHL

He was born in Lutzenberg, Germany in September, 1896, and came to the United States at the age of eight.

He first enlisted in the Army at Chicago, Illinois in July, 1916, and assigned to Jefferson Barracks, Missouri. He was later assigned to Co. "C" 23rd Infantry; then stationed at Douglas, Arizona.

He went overseas with the 23rd Infantry and was engaged in the following battles: Chateau-Thierry sector from June 5, 1918 to July 8, 1918; Aisne-Marne Offensive from July 15, 1918, to July 20, 1918; St. Mihiel Offensive from September 12-15, 1918; Meuse-Argonne Offensive (Champagne Front) from October 8, 1918 to November 11, 1918. He was wounded by a fragment of shrapnel in the right shoulder blade. He served in the Army of Occupation in Germany from January 5, 1919, to July 18, 1919.

He returned to the United States in August, 1919 with the 23rd Infantry. He was discharged from the 23rd Infantry at Camp Travis, Texas, on November 3, 1919. He reenlisted and

IN a very few days the male of the species will be frantically and furtively purchasing silk stockings. The devoted swain will have his eyes peeled for a likely looking Watch. Angelic looking husbands, softening under the influence of the holiday season, have even been known to buy washing machines for the over-worked spouse. All of which suggests that this is the time for the astute merchants to spread their advertising story in the pages of the Benning Herald, which comes under the eyes of well nigh all the populace of Benning.

When her husband discovers the situation he orders her from his home, and she is compelled to make a decision that leads to a highly dramatic climax.

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Offering "The Purchase Price," with Barbara Stanwick and George Brent. A powerful romance and drama of a night club singer transported to the Dakota wheat belt. George Brent, the screen's new sensational leading man is at his best.

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY: Offering "Night after Night" with George Raft, Constance Cummings, Wynne Gibson and Alison Skipworth. A vehicle from the story "Single Night" by Louis Bromfield. A dramatic story of a house of drama—and its people. Mysterious, thrilling and romantic.

RIALTO

"SKYSCRAPER SOULS"

One of the most novel films of the year, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Skyscraper Souls," is coming to the Rialto Theatre, Sunday and Monday.

Cast, direction and a crackling good story combine to make it the most absorbing kind of entertainment. A New York skyscraper—the world's tallest building—serves as the theatre of action, and out of he toil and strife of is occupants the screen playwright has thrown into relief a series of little dramas which, suddenly converging, become one single torrent of drama.

Exceptional Cast

Don't miss this novel dramatic treat. Not only does the story hold you in a vise like grip, but the cast of players is as fine as could be imagined. There is Warren William as the millionaire owner of the building who precipitates the disaster that engulfs all the others; Maureen O'Sullivan, a little stenographer who plans to leave her boy friend and go away with the millionaire; Norman Foster the bank clerk who is surprised that Miss O'Sullivan doesn't consider his $50-a-week adequate for marriage; Anita Page as a dress model; Jean Hersholt as a diamond merchant; Greogory Ratoff, George Barbier—and any number of others.

ROYAL

"RED DUST"

Clark Gable and Jean Harlow, platinum blonde charmer of the screen are seen together for the second ime in their careers in "Red Dust," sensuous drama of Indo-China, which heads the program at the Royal Theatre, Beginning Saturday night with a midnight show.

Miss Harlow payed opposite Gable in one of his first important pictures, "The Secret Six." Since then, both have been catapulted to major fame. She recently changed the color of her tresses for "The Red Headed Woman," and Gable scored an outstanding hit in "Strange Interlude."

Based on Stage Hit

"Red Dust," based on Wilson Collison's successful stage play, is a romantic adventure story laid amid the rubber plantations of Indo-China. The screen version was filmed on a pretentious scale with one of the largest settings ever constructed at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios.

The plantation setting alone occupied an entire sound stage and contained eight seperate rooms built Porches, mat roofs, and fooring of rough hewn timber construction were duplicated from photographs of buildings i the little known district which serves as a locale for the plot.

Acid Process Shown

Suporting Gable and Miss Harlow in "Red Dust" is caast which features Gene Raymond, Mary Astor, rester, Harvey and Wllie Fung. Thme picture was directed by Victor Fleming, one of whose recent productions was Douglas Fairbanks' "Around the World in 80 Minutes."

MATA HARI

The Story of the War's Most Notorious Spy

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Mata Hari, famous dancer and enemy spy, makes an innocent accomplice of a young Russian aviator, Alexander Rosanoff. In order to protect him from her former lover, Shubin, who is about to telephone Dubois, the head of the French Secret Service and involve Rosanoff, the dancer shoots Shubin. But Rosanoff comes to see the latter. The dancer persuades him not to enter and sends him on his flight to Russia with messages, admitting that she loves him. He is shot down. From her hiding-place, she hurries to him heedless of the threats of Adriana, guiding mind of the enemy operatives. Rosanoff is blind. Mata Hari promises to marry him and go away with him.

After turning to Mother Durant's shop, she would consider what she had to do.

Two women came out of the gate. One was old and one was young. The younger one held her handkerchief to her face. Mata Hari, who was about to pass them, saw that she was weeping and pitied her. Out of regard for her sorrow, as one unhappy person to another, she let the woman precede her. A man seemed to have been waiting for the two. He had thin, drooping mustaches and held his hands in his pockets. As he women came out, however, he only stared at them and then limped away, quite slowly.

The dancer noticed that he limped out of sheer habit, because for such a long time her senses had been trained to watch for just such personal features, for a look, a movement, a word, which might lead to the recognition of an accomplice. The porter at the Pavilion, in Adriana's employ, limped too.

And quite without volition she paused within the gate. It was as if her subconscious mind had sent out a thrill of warning to which her muscles responded while her ideas still took no particular shape. But not for long. She saw the man return, still slowly, still limping. She knew him. She was sure it was the porter. She knew why he had come.

Two gendarmes came up with a jaunty step, their blue capes swinging. A brief respite in which she could hunt for an escape. No. Better than that. The porter approached.

In a rush of terror, with a little cry she ran out between the gendarmes.

"Gentlemen! I appeal to you! That man has been molesting me. I've been afraid to go to my cab."

The gendarmes look from her to he porter, whom her action had tak-

POLO STARTS SUNDAY WITH TWO GAMES

Lieutenants Westlund, Clarke, Gould, O'Connor and Griffith are other members of the team. They started training early this year, playing some weeks ago in Atlanta, and should be able to give a good account of themselves.

The Artillery, with their excellent string of ponies will be battling this year to regain the top of the heap. They will be led by Captain Bevan, last year member, with a good collection of younger players. Captain Partridge, Lt. Heriot. Lt. Draper, Lt. Ports, Lt. Grubbs and Lt. Haskell will be there to give an account of themselves.

French Field has been ploughed up and re-sodded for the season, and is in good condition. The club has had civilian workmen working on the sod for a good while now, and the field promises to be even faster than last year.

Don't forget the date and time: Sunday, November 6, at 1:30 P. M.

DEPLORABLE SITUATION FACES SECRETARY

caps and scarves, gloves and compacts in plenty, but surely there is something measly and insignificant about these things in comparison with past records.

What to do with the Collection has been a problem which the Secretary has had manfully to face each year. With ingenuity, he meets it in a different way each year. Last year, for example, he donated the contents to the Community Chest. Of course, as he admits, it was hard on the Community Chest. What could they do with a pair of gants fantaisie or a riding cap a la Buckingham? Still something had to be done to relieve the congestion and allow the staff enough bills. . . .

This year something more ingenious is being planned. Perhaps a bazaar, or even a Surprise Party, held right at the Club due to the fact that last year one soldier strained his back carrying the unclaimed articles over to the Community Chest. In any case, the situation is certainly one worth consideration. Stop and think. we beg of you! Have you left anything unclaimed at the Officers' Club? This problem, even more pressing than the depression, cries for a solution.

she won. On the other hand it was very much of a surprise to the guests for Mr. Boren to come out to the front at the last minute and win by 3,000 votes over his nearest rival. Not that such popularity was not deserving —but his many feminine admirers simply didn't come to the front until the eleventh hour.

Nevertheless a splendid time was had by all; those who won the popularity were elated, those winning prizes for their beautiful costumes were happy while those who came and merely partook of the fun festival and dancing were thrilled with the evening's fun. The trophies will be engraved and placed in the Revelers trophy cabinet and will be on display at each of their dances. Upon being won the second time the cups become the property of the winner, it is announced. The club was honored by the presence of many new guests, including some out-of-town visitors.

Major Lyman S. Frasier, Honorary President of the club, was present, and enjoyed the evening with the club members.

en quite by surprise. She was obviously a lady, and the man was so dazed as to seem guilty.

One of them collared him.

"What are you up to, old man?" demanded the other.

The taxi which had been ordered to wait, stood a short distance down the street. Hurrying to it, sick with relief, she flung hersef in, sat back against the seat and gave a sort of groan. If only they wouldn't let him go till it had started!

A face took form within the interior. A hand was laid on her arm. And, as in a nightmare, she heard a voice she remembered speaking from a body that had not yet emerged into her cognizance.

"Madame, I have a warrant for your arrest."

Then Mata Hari realized that the man was Dubois.

COURTMARTIAL

The trial of Mata Hari took place at night in the courtroom of the Assizes and was conduced with the utmost secrecy by the members of the Third Courtmartial. The room was large, the people allowed in it few. The defendant, her advocate; the prosecutor, the members of the Court, M. Dubois, and the guards. The lights high up glared upon the faces of the accused and accusing and left the rows of vacant benches stranded in shadow. Because of the weight of the evidence and names involved and the importance of not revealing the mechanism of the spy systems, even the sentries outside were not permitted to approach the closed doors nearer than ten paces.

Dubois had begun his first examination of the dancer by demanding brusquely, "Tell me how long you have been in the German Secret Service." And when she replied with equal curtness that she could not tell him that because she was not and never had been a spy, he had returned again and again to the attack, even calling her by the number with which she was identified in the German lists, "H 21, when did you first become a spy in the enemy's pay?" his animus had not sufficed to break her down.

But the methods of the prosecutor, prompted by Dubois, though more bland, were more businesslike and more concrete. He ascribed to her transactions which she had undertaken and carried through, her actions as observed by the Allied Secret Service bureaus in various countries and asked her how she could explain these actions on any other count but that of her hidden occupaton.

Wasn't it true that when she had been in Madrid, occupying a room in a hotel next to that of a German agent, the latter had wired to his colleague in Amsterdam for money to be paid to H 21?

"Yes," she answered without hesitation, even with a shade of hauteur. "I am not French. I have the right to have friends in other countries even among those at war with France. The German was my friend. I had need of money in Madrid and he offered me some. I do not know where he got it."

But why had he ordered it paid to H 21, which, declared the prosecutor, was known to be her official number.

"It is not known to me," she retorted. "And it is not my business if the German wished to get from his country the money with which to pay my debts.

Her counsel, Maitre Caron, an old and devoted friend, attempted to take her hand as evidence of his admiration and encouragement. She drew away from him, standing alone.

She was beautifully dressed—her maid had brought her clothes—and no whiter than usual and stood up very tall and slender. The days spent in a cell in St. Lazare since her arrest had not told on her in the least. When she spoke, in her alluring, low voice, she looked at the members of the courtmartial in turn out of those heavy-lidded eyes to which so many descriptions had been devoted. A number of the men had met her in the past, a few would have paid court to her if she had cared or so she believed. There was an unshakable assurance in her attitude, for in her heart of hearts, she could not for a moment credit any of them with a desire to be her enemy. Dubois, perhaps. No other of these men, no man, could care to see her die, no matter what she had done. And as Maitre Caron had pointed out time after time, there was no direct evidence against her on any count.

Maitre Caron, himself, swore by her innocence. The white-haired old man had almost wept in her cell to think that one so beautiful, so entrancing, so guiltless, should be subjected to the discomfort of even a few days in prison. He would save her. He insisted he could. All her friends would come to the rescue, too.

Nevertheless, as the questions became more specific, hemmed her in, he cast anxious glances at her to see whether they were having any effect on her nerves. But she seemed to be unshaken. Sometimes, indeed, she had to pause for a moment to consider the reasonableness of her answer when they struck too near home, when, for instance, they inquired about the submarine affair, mentioned the time she had caused the death of an important French agent in Belgium, and her successful efforts to learn through her aviator friends the routes by which airplanes were dropping Allied agents behind the German lines in Belgium.

Once she looked down and moistened her lips. Dubois had declared that she was known to have been responsible for the death of at least fifty thousand men—poilus in trench holes; sailors hundreds of feet below sea level, remote from all human life in the compartments of submarines, officers shot at dawn for their comthat morning, an unfortunate coincidence which might befall the most innocent. But no one had seen her enter or leave and later she had kept an engagement with her dressmaker. These were not the actions of a guilty woman. His client had been "indiscreet—yes. Unmoral—yes. But a spy —no—a thousand times no! And guilty of so foul a crime as the shooting of a dear friend in, as the prosecutor had tried to prove, the pursuit of her nefarious business—never!"

All Colored Fight Scheduled For November 14

Young Jack McVey Sought For Cotton Batton In Main-Go

Benning fans will probably have a chance to see a real world's champion in action on the night of November 14, if plans go through matching Cotton Batton with Young Jack McVey. This fellow McVey has been picked by the official sports magazines of the country as the colored middleweight champion of the world, and all accounts of his previous fights have been humdingers.

In bringing this fine fighter here to meet Batton, it will be a match with the recognized world's champion fighting the recognized colored middleweight champion of the south. Batton has been picked by Collyer's Eye as the fighter to sport that undisputed privilege, and they seldom, if ever miss in their picks.

Batton has been training hard, expecting a chance at another big shot, and now he is in the pink of condition. He is without doubt the smartest colored fighter ever to adorn the ring in the south, boxing all the way, and fighting like a demon in the pinches. Publicity does not phase him, and for that reason he should go a long way in the hempen ring.

Recognizing the value of matching these two fighters, The promoters now have plans underway to bring Walt King, of Florida here to meet Seldom Heard in another ten-rounder on the same card. Heard has met some of the best colored heavies of the south, and has taken quite a few of adversary, being gigantic in satture adversary, being gigantic in statue, and packs a wallop that would knock the head out of a fifty gallon molasses barrel.

These two fighters alone will pack in the ducat holders, and it looks as though the Gym will be crowded that night.

In support of the card, the promoters will lineup an all colored card that will bring down the roof. All fights of this nature in the past have been crowd pleasers, and this promises to be no exception.

The Gymnasium will be well lighted for the occasion, and almost as accessible to the fans as Doughboy Stadium. Comfortable seats will be available, and the fights will all be more easily observed, due to the structure of the building.

Headquarters Wins Over "F1" In Fast Contest Saturday

In their opening game of the season, the Headquarters company team of the Tanks rode rough shod over their fighting opponents, the "Red-Heads" of "F1" to win 33-0. Last Saturday at the Tanks field.

Too much praise cannot be given the fighting Headquarters bunch, as their team work was something about which to marvel. They have been likened to the spokes of a wheel, all going around together in order to make the unit work.

"F1" fought back with valiant fight, but were no match for the determined warriors of the Headquarters ball toters. It was a great game, and came as a great surprise to those who witnessed the game.

All advance dope points to the Headquarters Big Boys to win the Battalion championship, but "E" company will have something to say about that tomorrow, however, when the two meet for the first time.

In The Dressing Room

Little Known Anecdotes About Famous Football Teams

BY I. PREDICTUM

In the days of yore when Gene McEver, one of the greatest of Tennessee half-backs, was cast in the role of star, the Tennessee football squad made its accustomed trip to New York, there to engage in combat with the purple warriors of N. Y. U. Arriving several days before the game, the Volunteer coach deemed it expedient to hold a practice in the Yankee Stadium to acquaint the players with the scene of the impending conflict.

Several New York University players decided to wander over to the stadium and witness the session.

During the practice, one player, with a big No. 36 on his back, stood head and shoulders over his teammates in brilliancy. He cavorted around the grid-iron with the fleetness of a deer, threw passes with extraordinary accuracy, punted beautifully, and exhibited broken field running that recalled the best days of Red Grange.

The N. Y. U. representatives stood in open-mouthed wonder at this awe-inspiring performance. Finally one of their number could restrain his admiration no longer, and walking up to a Tennessee player, not actively engaged in the practice at the moment, exclaimed exuberantly,

"Gosh, that guy McEver sure knows his football, and I don't mean maybe."

"Who you talking about, buddy?" came the startling reply.

"Why, that No. 36 over there."

The Tennessee player spat disdainfully.

"Hell, man, that ain't McEver, that's McEver's substitute."

Good football players, like good soldiers, never die; they simply fade away. And if you don't put any stock in this maxim, you should have been right there on the spot to see that player fade away.

Boy Scouts Open Grid Season With Snappy Victory

The Fort Benning Scouts opened their football season at Fort Benning, Saturday afternoon with a 13 to 0 victory over the Columbus All-Star Scouts. It was a beautiful game and a hard earned victory.

Benning drew first blood in the opening quarter. Barkhurst, Post quarterback, got loose on a spinner play, and romped 30 yards to a touchdown. He was given splendid protection by the interference running of the entire team. Barkhurst added the extra point with a goal from placement.

In the third quarter the Benning team opened a drive from their 40 yard srip that only ended when Buddy Horton went crashing off tackle from the five yard line for a touchdown. Barkhurst failed to kick goal from placement.

Both the Benning Scouts and Benning Cubs boast fast and well drilled football teams this season. Much credit for the teams go to Mr. Sgt. Jack Stanford, team coach. He has been untiring in his efforts to put the teams in top fighting form and judging from the work of the Cubs last Saturday, his work has not been in vain.

Trojan Ace

Hank Schaldack, Southern California halfback.

'E' Company Takes 'F2' In Brilliant Grid Tilt Saturday

Fighting back doggedly to the last ditch, the strong "F2" team yielded to the "F" last Saturday 6-0. It was a well played game throughout, with both teams threatening all the way.

"E" Company's touchdown came early in the first period of the game after recovering a fumble on "F2's" 32 yard line. A few rushes and the ball was over for the only counter of the game.

After this score, both teams seemed to tighten up, and the remainder of the game was fought practically on even terms. Much credit is due the "F2" team, as they proved their worth time and again during the game. It was just a case of the breaks going against them in that fateful first period.

"E" will have their hands full tomorrow in meeting the strong Big Boys of Headquarters Company. The game will probably come off at about 3:00 PM.

Two Games To Be Played Tomorrow On Tankers Field

Tomorrow afternoon Benning football lovers will have the privilage of witnessing a real gridiron struggle. The game will be played on the Tanks field, and will mark the introduction of 66h and 67th Infantry athletic encounters since their redesignation as such. No longer can the Tankers be referred to as such, for now they are the "Ironclad Doughboys".

Anyhow, the first game will be between the old "F2" and "D" company teams, while the second game will throw Headquarters and "D" together. The last game will probably start about 3:00 PM, and will no doubt be the deciding game of the series. Neither of the two teams have yet been defeated, but somebody has got to suffer, unless it all ends where it started —a deadlock.

Upsets Continue As Herald Prophet Strikes New Low Level

Football experts all over the country took a terrific lacing last Saturday as startling upsets spotted the grid menu for the day. First and foremost was Pittsburgh's defeat of Notre Dame. The Irish went into the game a 3-1 favorite and heralded as possessing one of the finest elevens in the country. For three perods, Notre Dame hammered at the Panther line; then came the storm. Within two minutes, Pittsburgh scored thirteen points to the great delight of a partisan crowd, and the game was won. By their victory, the Panthers clearly indicated that their eleven will be a serious contender for national honors.

As a result of the frequent upsets, I. PREDICTUM'S average for the day slipped to a new low, .758. The Herald prophet, however, draws consolation from the fact that the other great prophets in the country fared as poorly.

In the South, Vanderbilt repulsed Georgia Tech. in a game replete with thrills. A fighting Duke team fought a favored Tennessee eleven practically to a standstill and the Vols were forced to the limit to win by the scant margin of three points, 16-13. Kentucky gave Alabama the same kind of trouble, and when the final whistle blew the score read Alabama 12, Kentucky 7. Georgia crushed Florida 33-12. With two minutes to go, undefeated Auburn was faced with a tie score with Mississippi, but the timely intervention of Hitchcock, splendid Tiger back, gave Auburn the victory 14-7. Tulane barely nosed out a scrappy South Carolina eleven 6-0. Virgnia Poly and Louisiana State both kept their slates clean by easy victories.

I. PREDICTUM successfully prophesied the outcome of all important games in the South.

In the East, a long pass by Montgomery, flashy Coumbia quarterback, sufficed to give Columbia a close victory over Cornell. Harvard exhibited none of the power it had displayed in previous encounters, and, as a consequence, bowed to Brown 14-0. Boston College surprised even its most ardent supporters by upsetting Fordham 3-0; no less surprising was Yale's defeat of Dartmouth. Lassiter, star Yale back, was mainly responsible for his team's victory. Pennsylvania repulsed Navy successfully by a score of 14-0., but it was only after a hard battle that the Wolverines of Michigan defeated the Tiger of Princeton 14-7. Army again showed great strength in downing William and Mary, the conqueror of Navy, by the decisve score of 33-0.

It was the results of the games in the Midwest that caused your prophet to tear his hair and gnash his teeth. First of all, the Pittsburgh Panther clawed Notre Dame, and when the result of this game became known to I. PREDICTUM, it was as a foreboding of evil. Minnesota defeated Northwestern 7-0. Then Chicago succumbed to he dteermined attack of Illinois and the Oklahoma Aggies thoughtlessly contributed to I. PREDICTUM'S general woe by defeating Oklahoma.

Ohio State, already inured to tie games, battled to another deadlock, this time with Wisconsin. This week-

Happy Hearts Win From Tuskeegee In Biggest Upset Yet

Five thousand football fans sat silent and speechless with surprise in the stands of the Tuskegee Stadium Bowl, in the opening quarter of last Friday afternoon's football game as an unheralded 24th Infantry football team rushed the powerful Tuskegee Tigers off their feet in a furious attack that carried the Tigers into the shadow of their own goal post and was climaxed by a smashing drive through the center of the line that sent Barnes, Happy Heart back, across the goal line for a touchdown. Meyers failed to kick the extra point and the score board showed Happy Hearts 6, Tuskegee 0, in the first five minutes of play.

As Barnes smashed over the Tiger goal line the stands came to life and a continual roar of cheering went up from both sides of the field. As the teams lined up for the kickoff the Tiger shock troops were rushed onto the field and Tiger fans settled comfortably back in their seats to witness the slaughter.

The final three and two thirds quarters of that game wll go down in history. A light Happy Heart line turned back charge after charge of the raging Tiger. Tiger passes fell incomplete or were batted down by a Happy Heart. During the first, second, and third quarters Tuskegee raged and smashed at the army defense. On two occasions the Tiger offense carried the crimson Happy Heart line back to the twenty feet strip and then founda mountain in their way.

In the fourth and final period the Happy Hearts took the play away from the tiring Tigers, went on the offensive and battered the Tuskegee team unmercifully. In the final minutes of play the once mighty Tiger proved to be a badly beaten kitten that limped sorely through the final smashes and limped off the field battered, beaten, and crushed.

The Happy Heart backfield matched the Tigers in speed, trick plays and passing. The line plunging and ball toting of Collins, Barnes and Meyers were some of the highlights of the game while the Happy Heart line held like a stonewall on defense and clearly outcharged their heavier opponents on the offensive.

The showing of the Happy Hearts this season has been one of the biggest upsets in southern colored football. Last season the Infantry could not get going and failed to make any headway against fast opposition. This season the team from the Sunset Regiment has been coached and drilled by Lieutenant Howard Johnson. To date the Happy Hearts have played a total of four games and have suffered only one defeat. They dropped their opening game to the Florida A. and M. 9 to 0. The Atlanta Bears, colored professionals, fell 14 to 0, the Nashville Giants were landslided 43 to 0, and now Tuskegee's scalp has been added, 6 to 0.

The Happy Hearts are still in for several tough battles. Clarke University, Moorehouse College and Morris-Brown College still stand in their way and none of these teams can be called easy.

Herald Prophet Picks Duke To Best Ole Kaintuck - - Maybe

BY I. PREDICTUM

I. PREDICTUM surveys the imposing array of football games scheduled for this Saturday with something akin to a prayer in his heart. With the current season rounding into November, only twenty elevens, big or small, remain undefeated or untied. Of these, Colgate, an Eastern team, leads the list, with Auburn a close second. Colgate and Southern California are the only aggregations still unscored-on.

In the South, undefeated Virginia Poly will make an effort to maintain its precious standing against formidable Alabama. Both elevens boast a victory over Kentucky. But whereas Virginia Poly faced Kentucky with its full strength, the Crimson Tide was handicapped by the loss of the main cog in its machine, John "Hurry" Cain, one of the South's outstanding candidates for All-American honors. With Cain back in the lineup, as it is hoped he will be, Alabama should be able to win this important game.

In another outstanding contest, the Duke Blue Devils face Kentucky. Banking on the great showing Duke made against Tennessee last Saturday, your prophet favors Duke. Tulane, despite the lack of scoring punch it displayed last Saturday, should defeat Georgia Tech. The North Carolina Tarheels will have no difficulty against Florida unless the Alligators show a sudden reversal of form which is very doubtful.

Auburn rests, as Tennessee, relaxing after its bitter battle with Duke, takes on Mississippi State. The Vol victory shoud be decisive. Vanderbilt will repulse Maryland successfully, and the powerful Furman eleven will defeat Wofford. Louisiana State. its record thus far unblemished by defeats, should win over South Carolina, disregarding the latter eleven's noteworthy stand against Tulane last week.

North Carolina State will have no trouble with Davidson. Centenary will undoubtedly defeat S. E. Teachers, but the Mercer-Centre game involves difficulties. Basing his choice on past performances, I. PREDICTUM favors Mercer. Texas reigns favorite over Baylor as does Rice over Arkansas. Texas A. and M. should nose out Southern Methodist, although the law of average proclaims the latter as a probable winner. Texas Christian, fresh from an easy victory last week, has a "breather" in Simmons. Virginia should defeat Washington and Lee and William and Mary will down W. M. I.

The East will see many powerful teams in action this Saturday. St. Mary's, one of the strongest elevens on the Western Coast, comes east to demonstrate the football superiority of the West. Fordham is the hapless victim. In another inter-sectonal game, New York faces the Georgia Bulldogs. Unless an upset results from this encounter, lay all bets on the eastern team.

One of the most colorful battles in this section of the country will be the Army-Harvard game. The Crimson has been pointing for this contest, but the Army is nevertheless heavily favored. If the West Point eleven clicks in the manner it is capable of doing, it should win by at least three touchdowns.

Brown's unbeaten machine will be forced to the limit to defeat Holy Cross, also undefeated. With the result of the Harvard-Brown game of last week foremost in his mind, I. PREDICTUM concedes a slight edge to Brown, but has his fingers crossed in case he is wrong. Columbia should continue along the primrose path at the expense of Navy.

The Pittsburgh Panther, having disposed of Notre Dame, casts hungry eyes in the direction of Pennsylvania. The Penn eleven is yet to experience the stigma of defeat, but Pittsburgh, by virtue of its surprising victory over Notre Dame last week, is favored to win.

The Red Raiders of Colgate, boasting the best record in the country to date, will easily crush Mississippi College under the impact of its powerful offense. Cornell, aggrieved because of its loss to Columbia last Saturday, will take its stored-up spite out on little Albright. Plucky New Hampshire must inevitably succumb to the superior power of Dartmouth and the Princeton Tiger will sharpen its claws at the expense of Lehigh. Temple will defeat the downtrodden Haskell Indians.

The most important game in the Midwest finds Northwestern pitted against Ohio State, and this contest is the chief source of I. PREDICTUM'S worries for the week. Suffice it to say that the out-come is a toss-up. Both elevens are due, and it is just a question of which one will click. Simply because he has to, your prophet casts his vote for Northwestern with three rousing cheers for Ohio State.

Coach Anderson of Notre Dame, thoroughly disgusted with his eleven's showing against Pittsburgh, has made several changes in his starting line-up. Notre Dame will enter the game against Kansas this week in a very bad frame of mind. Chalk up a decisive win for the Irish.

In Big Ten Conference struggles, Purdue will emerge victorious over Chicago by at least three touchdowns, Wisconsin will defeat Illinois decisively, and Michigan should have no trouble with Indiana.

Oklahoma will defeat Missouri easily. Nebraska is heavily favored over Iowa and Kansas State should take Iowa State into camp. The powerful Minnesota eleven will administer a decisive trimming to Mississippi and the potent attack of Michigan State will snow South Dakota under. Dayton and Detroit are favorites to defeat John Carroll and Marquette respectively. North Dakota will trample on a prostrate Morningside. The Oklahoma Aggies, conquerors of Oklahoma, will overcome Tulsa with ease.

In the Farwest, undefeated, untied, and unscored-on Southern California faces a real test in California. Your prophet has a queer feeling that an upset is in the air, but lacking the courage of his convictions, prophesies a close victory for U. S. C. Washington State will conquer Idaho by about thirty points. Oregon is favored to defeat Oregon Stae, and should accomplish this end. Stanford, after suffering two defeats in as many weeks, meets another strong opponent in Washington. Here, again, an upset is not improbable, but Stanford should win. Loyola and Santa Clara will administer decisive defeats to New Mexico and Coll.

ly routine of tie games must inevitably get on the Buckeye nerves. N. Y. U. suffered its worst defeat in eight years when the Purdue Boilermakers representing the football interests of the Midwest as opposed to those of the East, ran up a score of 34-9 against their purple-clad opponents.

Nebraska won another conference victory, this time with Kansas State as the reluctant victim. Michigan State further demonstrated the football superiority of the Midwest over the East by turning back Syracuse 27-13.

In the Farwest, the University of California in Los Angeles maintained her unbeaten record by adding the scalps of other western elevens. It must be remembered that I. PREDICTUM conceded U. C. L. A. a good chance for victory; that realization, at least, acts as a soothing balm to the mental unrest engendered by the outcome of a large portion of Saturday's football games. California, Washington and Wash,ngton State, experienced no difficulty in winning their respective contests.

very effectively to the tune of "Oh There Ain't no Flies on Auntie."

If you recall, a few weeks back McGoofus issued a plea for a columnist Battle Royal to liven things up a bit. "Flare" and "Town Topics" responded nicely. E. L. M. of "Gunbotham's School Daze" took three weeks to think up something and then came out with a broadside, which might well have been titled, "All out of step save E. L. M." He doesn't like the work of any of the other columnists. There is no denying that he crashed through with the desired fire works. Really he shouldn't have made it so hard on himself but since he did, a muzzleburst to Limoncito (by all means look up the Spanish). Let's look over his column for last week. Hs says, "We (editorial we) have been fed up with this column for some weeks." So have we all, brother. He alludes to a hypothetical "Col. Throttlebottom" being that way about a hypothetical "Mrs. Schmaltz." Where does he get all those delightfully humorous names? Throttlebottom and Schmaltz, those names seem to reek slightly of the Moon Mullins comic strip. Give him credit for disguising "Plushbottom" by changing it to "Throttlebottom." The latter, by strange coincidence, is the name that Nate Gershwin gave to the vice-president in his hit "Of Thee I Sing." McGoofus has rather comprehensive reports on the extra-curriculum activities of "Limoncito" but hopes that it will not be necessary to publish them.

TOWN TOPICS

It won't be long now before Columbus will be seething with the football crowds, colorful, excited, enthusiastic. The annual Georgia-Auburn game originated in Columbus, and has been a part of the town ever since. As a matter of fact, one could hardly recognize it as the same town while the students, rooters, bands, etc., are here.

Football history has been made here, too. Famous teams, famous players, have alike appeared here in days gone by and each year the games become more colorful than ever. This year, too, the game promises many thrills—even more so than for some time past, since a team of championship caliber will be matched against one that is bent on stopping it at all costs.

One word of warning, however. Don't park your car near the stadium unless you anticipate a lot of traffic—bad traffic at that.

Warning—to all who do not desire publicity: Don't ask the conductor of the Flare whether or not he has received any fan mail.

Capt. Yarborough's practical joke with the oversize shoulder bars apparently turned into a boomerang, for the Publicity Magnate was seen last Saturday wearing them on the occasion of his advancement.

Most of us didn't know, a few weeks ago, when Captain Barnett appeared in the burdensome bars, that Captain Yarborough had made them and given them to the Ace. In fact, knowing the Publicity man as we do, we'd hardly suspect him of conceiving such a project.

There are quite a few, too, at the post, who suspect that Captain Yarborough was wearing that raincoat last Saturday with the intention of conceiling the bars but Ham Kelly upset that plan, if such a one were in the Captain's mind, by loudly calling everyone's attention to them in the Post Exchange. We can not, of course, prove that the raincoat was worn with the express intention of hiding the bars—in fact, Captain Yarborough emphatically denies it, but we must admit that it looks mighty suspicious.

Another thing—it looks almost like an election bet—we would suspect it if it were not for the fact that the whole incident took place three days before the election.

Fort Benning is blossoming out with public speakers and politicians. One would hardly think that the Army would prove a very good training ground for professional politicians, but the speeches made in the Officers' Club last Tuesday are a very fair indication of the versatility of the Infantry School and the variety of its courses. It seems to us that the Fourth Section could use some of these budding orators in expounding some of its problems and in training monographers in the proper presentation of their speeches, but we hesitate to suggest that to the Chief of Section. He might think we were kidding him.

Armistice Dav Celebrated At Benning In Customary Manner

Armistice Day will be observed at Fort Benning on Friday as a holiday, during which all duties except guard and other necessary overhead will be suspended.

Military honors in memory of the war dead will consist of a national salute of twenty-one guns, which will be fired at noon by a battery of the 83rd Field Artillery. While the salute is being fired all traffic will be stopped and all military personnel out of doors will stand at attention.

The national flag will fly at half-staff from reveille until the first gun of the national salute is fired when it will be hoisted to full-staff.

Troops will enjoy special holiday dinners in their respective mess-halls.

Fort Benning troops will also aid in the celebration of Armistice Day at Tallahassee, Fla., where a platoon of Christie tanks belonging to the 67th Infantry (Medium Tanks) will be exhibited.

'E' Company Recipient Of Letter Of Commendation

Captain George J. Forster, "E" Company, 29th Infantry, was the recipient of the following note in recognition of the gratuitous services he and his company rendered to polo in improving Shannon Field:

"On behalf of the polo players of the garrison I wish to express the deep appreciation we all feel for the generous contribution to polo you and our company made yesterday in working on Shannon Field. I consider your

Major S. A. White Honored Highly

High honor in recognition of his extensive scientific knowledge and experience in the medical research field has been conferred upon Major Samuel A. White, Medical Corps, assistant surgeon at Fort Benning, by his selection as chief of the medical research department of the chemical warfare service, United States Army.

The appointment of Major White to his new position which will become effective about January 1, 1933, was made by the Adjutant General upon the personal request of Major General Harry L. Gilchrst, chief of the chemical warfare service, and with the approval of Major General Robert U. Patterson, surgeon general of the Army.

Major White is a native of Georgia, where he was born on June 15, 1887. He received his M. D. degree from the University of South Carolina in 1912, and in 1916 he was graduated from Johns Hopkins University. He was graduated from the Army Medical School in 1917, and a few years later he becamean instructor at the same institution, and served six years in that capacity. He entered the Army as a first lieutenant, Medical Section, O. R. C., in February, 1917, and received his appointment in the regular army in August of the same year. He was promoted to Captain in November 1918, and was advanced to his present rank of Major in April, 1919.

Inclement Weather Proves Barrier To Tennis Tournament Matches

Inclement weather over the week-end made it impossible to run off the first round matches of the handicap tennis tournament as scheduled. It is hoped that these belated first round matches may be played off in the course of the present week, weather permitting.

Because of the insufficient number of entries, there will be no ladies handicap tournament unless one is decided upon later. The Ladies' Tennis Committee, however, has arranged a ladder. Approximately two dozen women players are ranked on this ladder according to their degree of proficiency. Each lady must defend her position at least six times; she is permitted to challenge the player ranked two steps above her. Mrs. Dorothy Lynch heads the woman's ranking.

The list determining the handicaps of the participants in the men's tournament, with the possible exception of the first ten ranking players, is admittedly inaccurate. The Tennis Committee has as yet had no opportunity to pass judgment on the brand of tennis played by many of the entrees. The tournament, however, should provide the Tennis Committee with a fairly accurate basis for ranking the players on the post according to their ability. There is, of course, a tentative ranking; this list can easily be revised at the conclusion of the present tournament with a view towards making it more accurate.

The chairman of the Men's Tennis Committee is Major Lewis. Captain Bassett and Captain Drake comprise the other members.

Captain Drake, post tennis champon, is ranked number one. Bassett, Sherburne, and Lynch follow in that order. There are twenty-six entries in the tournament. The method of determining the handicaps of the various players is rather complicated. An example, instead of a detailed description, will serve to illustrate the method. If Drake, number one, were to play Rudolph, number fourteen, the difference would be thirteen. Rudolph would then receive a handicap of thirteen points, or one in each game until his handicap was consumed. A detailed account of the system used is to be found on the bulletin board located in the tennis courts.

Besides the men's singles and doubles tournament, there is one now in progress for boys, aged fourteen and other. If present plans come to a head, there will also be a mixed doubles tournament.

I. S. D. Operating Under New Plan

The Infantry School Detachment, containing the largest aggregation of enlisted specialists in the army is operating under a new administrative organization, which becomes effective upon the approval of a study and recommendation of a board which has had the matter under consideration for some time.

The new organization, which also changes the name of the detachment to the Infantry School Provisional Battalion, divides th e men into two companies, known as the first company and second company, and also provides for an administrative staff for the battalion commander, Major B. Catron with a number of enlisted assistants, whose duties correspond to those of noncommissioned staff officers.

Captain Benjamin B. Bain has been designated S-1, S-2, public relations officer, and agent finance officer, and Captain Charles W. Pence will perform the staff duties known as S-3, S-4, athletic and recreation officer, and police officer.

Sergeant George Mowry has been designated acting battalion sergeant-major, Sergeant Herbert O. Richardson is acting battalion supply sergeant, and Sergeant Frank A. Smith, is acting battalion police sergeant. Other enlisted assistants on the battalion staff include Privates James A. Gibbs, and Private Earl N. Cosner, acting

Pulsifer Elected Mayor Of Biglerville

Honorary Title Bestowed Upon Assistant Secretary Of Officers' Club After Stirring Speech Tuesday Night

A fever of excitement gripped the vast assemblage in the Officers' Club last Tuesday evening. Politics was everywhere the topic of discussion. Ballots were distributed. The biggest event of the year in the estimation of many was to take place. The Mayor of Biglerville was to be elected.

At the precise psychological moment, Lt. Ralph Pulsifer stepped up to the improvised platform, placed his hand majestically on the microphone, and began his harangue of the audience. "No Mud" was the slogan he carried with him into battle. The salient features of his speech were regulation of the hours when a radio would be permitted to function in full blast, sidewalks in Biglerville, roads paved with brick instead of mud, and the elimination of window shades because they did away with much of the scenic attraction for which Biglerville is reputed to be famous. He urged that all pianists (he stumbled over the pronunciation of this word, but eventually made a nice recovery) obtain licenses before disturbing Biglerville peace. Occasionally he had to pause in the course of his speech to let the applause die down.

In the pandemomium that followed the conclusion of the speech, Maj. Lewis requested that his candidacy for Bull-slinger be announced. This was done.

Major Harding was then prevailed upon to introduce Lieutenant "Ham" Kelly to his eager public. Lieut. Kelly had conducted an extensive campaign for the office of Practical Joker. With becoming modesty, the lieutenant-politician disdained to go before the microphone. Unfortunately, at the very moment when the renowned practical joker began his speech, he was seized with a violent attack of laryngitis. Nothing daunted, he continued in the face of this tremendous handicap. In the middle of his speech, the attack left him and he burst forth with a flood of finest oratory.

The audience proved very appreciative of the noble sacrifice the worthy lieutenant had made and applauded him loudly when his speech came to an end.

Captain Lawson, not to be outdone by his political rival, Lt. Pulsifer, had himself introduced by Major Lewis, and then took the floor. Captain Lawson admitted that he was a self-made man. Charges to the effect that he was not an American, and therefore ineligible for the mayoralty of Biglreville, he declared were false.

At a tender age, he had been bereft of his mother and was left in the care of a "harsh and unscrupulous father." He then proceeded to recount some of the hair-raising experiences of his childhood. The audience was plunged in sorrow when he told how his cruel father had ordered him to "go, and never darken his door again." Continuing even in the face of this adversity, he went to the big city, by name Columbus, where he gradually developed into the fine type of man he is today, this by his own admission. If elected, he promised to work in harmony with his distinguished though less famous colleague, Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

Shortly after this noteworthy effort, Maj. Lewis went up to the platform to announce the result of the vote. Lt. Ralph Pulsifer had the greatest gift in the eyes of Biglerville bestowed upon him by receiving the office of Mayor. Captains Lawson and Forster received honorable mention. Lt. Kelly was an overwhelming choice for Practical Joker with Major Kraft and Lt. Malin Craig second and third choices. The Second Section came through with flying colors in the voting for the office of Bull-thrower. Captain Bloomquist had this high honor bestowed upon him, with Captain Halloran of the Horse, and Capt. O. O. Wilson close upon his heels. Maj. Harding, Maj. Lewis, and several others also ran. Miss Brita Jabelonsky was elected Queen of the Platinum Blonds.

In the pandemonium that followed, Lt. Pulsifer was discovered patting himself on the back.

In the course of the evening, it was further decided that Franklin Delano Roosevelt would be the next President of the United States.

Post Public Relations Officer Is Abvanced

Benning's publicity officer, Captain L. W. Yarborough, reecived official notification last week of his promotion. Captain Yarborough has acted in the capacity of publicity officer since September, 1931.

Captain Yarborough has shown much efficiency in handling an assignment calling for an unusual amount of tact and diplomacy, and has done a great deal to create an accurate picture of the Infantry School in the eyes of the civilian population of the surrounding territory and in the eyes of other Army posts.

Infantry School Dramatic Club Opens Season Tonight With "Pomeroy's Past"

The Infantry School Dramatic Club will open its season on the nights of November 11th and 12th with "Pomroy's Past," a comedy in three acts by Clare Kummer. This production, which was played in New York a few years ago by Laura Hope Crews and Ernest Truex in the leading roles, scored a huge success. It is an amusing story of a young bachelor, Pomeroy Chilton, who tries to escape, and succeeds, from the apron-strings of his domineering old maid aunt, Amanda. His various efforts to escape cause many complications but end in his finally marrying his childhood sweetheart, Mary Thorne.

The three principal characters will be played by Lieut. Charles Treat, as "Pomeroy." Nellie Totten, as "Amanda," and Phyllis Sargent, as "Mary Thorne." With the exception of Mrs. J. R. Pierce and Lieut. B. M. Greeley, this cast will be an entirely new one to Fort Benning audiences. Mrs. Orestes Cleveland, the dircetor, has been associated with the Dramatic Club for several years, both as an actress in "Holiday" and as the director of "Capt. Applejack."

Attractive Accessories in Leathers.

The shops are now replete with most attractive accessories, as well as lovely clothes. Shoes, gloves, handbags, belts, and neckwear are available in styles to suit every type, and in buying you must consider each item in relation to the rest of your wardrobe. We have sketched some of the latest and most attractive accessories. The hat of antelope suede with sailor brim is trimmed with a gold buckle and a perky little bow of the leather. The brown suede belt has a tortoise shell buckle. The bag, of pouch shape with odd fastening, is of brown alligator piped with gold. It can be used for sports or more dressy wear. The shoe, of alligator. combined with chocolate colored kid, is a splendid type of shoe to go with a suit or sports coat, or even a coat for general day wear. Shoes are rather plain this season, depending on exquisite leathers, fine, aristocratic lines and harmonius details. Novelty shoes are eschewed by the correct dresser.

Lieut Dowdall Will Talk To Sojourners

One of the colossal and most impressive spectacles of modern times, according to many observers, was the Eucharistic Congress which was held in Dublin, Ireland, this summer. A Fort Benning officer, Lieutenant Harry G. Dowdall, who visited in Ireland at the time, and attended the gigantic religious assemblage, will relate his experiences and describe his impressions of the event at the Polo-Hunt Club on the evening of Tuesday, Nov. 15.

All members of the Fort Benning garrison, including the ladies, and friends, are invited to attend Lieutenant Dowdall's lecture, which will be delivered under the auspices of Fort Benning Chapter No. 8, National Sojourners, commencing at eight o'clock.

Scenes of the religious processions in Dublin and other views of places in Ireland visited by Lieutenant Dowand will describe during his lecture, of lantern slides which he has prepared to illustrate his talk.

Among the scenes of the Congress, which Lieutenant Dowdall witnessed and will describe during his lecture, was the landing of Cardinal Lauri, papal legate to the Congress, at Cobh, and the extraordinary public reception accorded the church dignitary upon his arrival. Another scene which made a vivid impression upon Lieutenant Dowdall was the assemblage of 250,000 pilgrims in Phoenix Park, at Dublin. This enormous crowd was addressed by speakers by means of loudspeaking equipment, disposed at convenient places in the gathering.

Gigantic choruses, composed of Sodalities of Europe and representing modern and medieval nations, and each arrayed in native costumes of their respective periods, sang hymns

Tense moments at the Officers' Club, too, a few days before elections. Sunday—in fact—an uninvited visitor installed himself under the Club—a visitor wearing a conventional black coat with a long white stripe down the back. Perhaps the outfit is familiar to you . . . Anyhow he wasn't hard to identify . . . He had a personality which soon penetrated the entire Club from the remotest recesses of the Reading Room to Dan emerging to give Curb Service . . . In vain was a live chicken placed seductively outside the porch . . . in vain, rustling, threatening noises to scare the guest away. Sometime Monday he left . . . with the terrifying prospect that he would probably return Tuesday night to cast his ballot for the Mayor of Biglerville . . .

Something very suspicious about this Women's Tennis Tournament . . . First a notice appears in the Bulletin saying insufficient entries will not allow the feminine part of the tournament to be held . . . and hten, al of a sudden, a new lease on life, and apparently the Women's Tournament is revived with all of 18 entries. Very suspicious and we hear lack of consultation in the first place with the proper persons is to blame . . . Careful—hereafter—you gentlemen on the Tennis Committee . . .

Decidedly diminutive quality about the Ladies' Riding classes these mornings . . . early hours . . . too much rain . . . nasty disposition of horses . . . Just what does seem to be the trouble?

Really valuable, these riding classes, though. Especially the little talks before the class begins. Learned all about the horse's anatomy at 9 a. m. the other morning . . . all about flanks and chestnuts and burrs . . . or some such things . . . "And now," concluded Major Thompson pleasantly, "if you ladies must be horsey over the bridge tables, you can at least be correctly so!" Score one for all riding instructors!

And what were post reactions to all this election excitement? Well, we heard worth preservation . . . Lt. Ham Kelly, emerging Wednesday morning was heard to remark with feeling . . . "To hell with this Democratic election. I expected to find a bottle of beer with the milk on the porch this morning." Too bad, Ham . . . lots of sympathy, however . . .

Not only are hedges being brutally torn from the Post but other things, it seems are harassing the Post garden hounds. All this business in Austin Loop—a whole system of trenches being dug—all to install a new telephone system—is really upsetting the tournament to be held . . . and then, gardener of the Loop—has really been touchingly heroic about it, . . . and has even told Lt. Lanahan that he is eager to plant vegetables and a few discreet flower beds on the edges of those particular ditches behind his quarters. We commend such spirit!

Along with other tournaments—just to keep in the spirit of it all we hear there is going to be a Bridge Tournament at the Club. November 11th is the day; adies to compete at 8 p. m.; gentlemen to play at 8 in the evening. Everything to be very much according to Hoyle—or is it Culbertson?—for the Club is an official member of the United States Bridge Association. Duplicate Contract will be played—which means that during the evening everyone will sooner or later receive the same hand. No alibis about "luck" to be allowed and official referee to be present to smooth all ruffles. Sir, we offer you your condolences in advance—and may the foxiest players win . . .

Brownies Enjoy Hay-ride to Gravel Pits On October 22nd.

Saturday, October 22, was a big day for us Brownies! Tawny took us on a hay-ride down to the old gravel pit. We sang songs and talked on the way and had loads of fun.

Before lunch we built a little log cabin out of twigs and pine needles. It had a stone path down to the "ocean," where we had a bathhouse and a well with a darling bridge across it. From there a path led to the "park" and then again to the cabin.

By the time that was finished, it was near noon, so we ate our lunch with big appetites. At about two-thirty we reached the Scout cabin, after one of the jolliest days in the year.

Cardinal Troop

Tuesday, November 8. There was a surprise for most of us in the Cardinal troop! An overnight trip to the Academic Camp! The purpose is to pass the Pioneer's Badge, so only those who signed up for it may go. But you few who didn't—never mind; you're going on a hike with Mrs. Matchett the same day!

Everyone was glad to see Mrs. Matchett at our meeting; she came to make announcements about the hike and riding, but most important—to invest some Tenderfoot girls. One was our Lieutenant, Mrs. Wadsworth, who, we hear, learned and passed the Morse code in twenty-four hours.

Today we received our song shets, and with the aid of these, we sang loud and long. We really wish Mrs. Matchett could have come earlier and heard us.

Daffodil Troop

Last Friday our Scouts started at 3 o'clock as usual, and everyone was present. The first thing we had was inspection and then the pledge of allegiance to the flag and the promise. Then we sang the "Promise Song" and "Oh Beautiful Banner." Then we went to our Patrol corners and had a signalling game of Cities. Mrs. Kellam sent all the new girls into another room where they studied for "Tenderfoot." Betty Ann Allbright signalled for us and after we were finished we handed in our papers to the patrol leader's aid. Ann Cota got hers in first with 10 points and Dorothy Negrotto's patrol got theirs in second with 5 points.

Then Mrs. Kellam talked to us a little and then we formed a "Goodnight Circle" and sang some songs. After this we were all dismissed except the patrol leaders. We stayed around the cabin while they had a meeting. And after they had finished they told us what to do for next meeting and we went home.

Pine Tree Troop

Last meeting we were kept very busy training Tenderfoot Scouts and practising signalling.

We took turns sending words back and forth to each other which helped a lot of us who haven't passed Second Class.

I tell you folks, these tenderfoot girls are certainly working hard and when they get their Girl Scout pins they will have really earned them. But I know they will have their reward for we have been promised all sorts of exciting things by our leaders when all of the girls are working on their Second Class test.

"E" Company, being on fire guard Wednesday, which necessitated its remaining on the post, Captain Forster undertook on his own initiative the improvement of Shannon Field. On Tuesday, he and his non-commissioned officers reconnoitred the field thoroughly. Then on Wednesday morning the entire company went to work. By the time it had finished, the field was greatly improved.

battalion clerks, Corporal Lawrence H. Flesch, mechanic, and Privates Fred T. Riley, and Elmo T. Wiggins, assistant.

The first company will be under command of Captain Pence. Sergeant Smith will be acting first sergeant. The first company will include all enlisted men on duty with the academic department, the range officer, and battalion headquarters with the exception of the acting battalion sergeant-major, one clerk and a permanent mess personnel.

The second company will include all enlisted men on duty with the quartermaster, Special Units, Headquarters, signal officer, recreation center board, recruit center, department of experiment officers' club, athletic office, chaplain's offices, military police section, post headquarters, and the acting battalion sergeant-major, clerk, and permanent mess personnel. Captain Bain will command the second company, and Privtae Geibbs will be acting first sergeant.

The reorganization is expected to inaugurate a more efficient economical administrative and supply system. both in their own tongues and in Latin.

LIEUT. DOWALL WILL TALK TO SOJOURNERS

The Congress impressed Lieutenant Dowdall as a marvelous example of organization. The entire affair went off smoothly according to schedule. Spectacular nightscenes during which streets were brilliantly illuminated, and search-lights equipped with special lenses which projected religious slogans and images upon the crowds, added to the impressiveness of the great religious meeting.

Before leaving Ireland, Lieutenant Dowdall made a tour of the rural districts and spent some time in the Killarney lakes region, and the beauties of these localities will be described and illustrated during his lecture.

Lieutenant Dowdall's lecture is one of a number of interesting talks which will be given during meetings of the Fort Benning Sojourners during the winter months. At the last meeting on Oct. 18, which was preceded by a dinner at the Officers' Club, Captain Morris DePass, jr., of the 29th Infantry, made an interesting talk upon his experiences in China.

LIEUTENANT PEEP'S DIARY

Monday, October 31.

It is these Monday mornings which do set one athinking on nature's vagaries and inconsistencies, the prime example at hand being the contrast between myself and my young son, he waking with a smile and exceeding joie de vivre to be heard for blocks. It profits him relatively nothing, and I, to whom such might be profitable, am glum and sour until the day be half gone.

To Davidson Hill in a driving rain to witness a battalion in attack demonstration. So convincing was the demonstration of preparatory fires that were a defender being thus beset I know I should early feel discouraged and go away—far away.

A touching exhibition, indeed, and by ten-thirty there was not a dry leg inthe place. An announcement that the Assistant Commandant had called off the remainde rof the day's schedule gave rise to a "Weeks for President" movement which is entitled to serious consideration.

We did climb aboard the special train (our car appropriately enough for the day, a gondola) in high spirits and were yanked Post-ward, the journey being embellished by rudimentary lessons in navigation by Watson of the Marines.

It is sure that the Assistant Commandant need feel no trepidation in granting to us a half holiday such as this one for I doubt not that every student utilized it fully to catch up on his home-work.

The high light of this day to me: Red Reeder's remark during the artillery concentrations, the laying of smoke screens and firing of tracers by machine guns; "It's all very fine but it absolutely spoils my Fourth of July."

Tuesday, November 1.

Off again on our cook's tours, this tim eover a defensive sector. These groups following their leaders with the little blue guidons do mind me of nothing so much as a flock of chicks traipsing after a blue sunbonnetted farmer's wife. And I suppose the figure might be carried on to their eager devouring of the grains of wisdom dropped by the leader en route.

Intrigued by the tanks demonstration, ably ballyhooed by Major Kingman who did even serve coffee between exhibitions much in the manner of a Los Angeles realtor. But he in reality had no need for such resorts to sell us the Christie, its performance accomplishing that result unaided.

Wednesday, November 2.

Back to our rut, the demonstration orgy being concluded. Well, one cannot have cake daily in these times of stress. Bread pudding must have its day.

Thursday, November 3.

To school this day in a great stew about machine gun graded test which is for this day. Before the morning gone I did discover myself to be some three weeks late in my perturbation for I did, knowing little for certain, so scramble that little as to make it indistinguishable from that of which I knew nothing. Yet altho my errors were myriad albeit I did set up my gun in "Action" on the wrong target and did otherwise variously gum the detail yet I did not catch my neckie in the gadgets so as to become permanently fixed to the gun as did Burger; nor have the tripod collapse at the first two mil tap as did Smith. And I do believe that Wu achieved as much disruption to his "Action" as any one when, his gun refusing to traverse for a normal tap, he did haul off and smite it with such vehemence as to dislodge the elevating pin and butcher his hand with great flow of gore.

To a social gathering this evening and greatly amused at Miller when, surveying his plate at dinner (but with his mind some leagues away) did inform the hostess "This reminds me of Porto Rico after the hurricane" he being even more astonished than she upon hearing the words. And I do think that he by virtue of this thing does take the lead toward winning "Social South paw" of the class.

Friday, November 4.

Treated to a most entertaining vaudeville this afternoon by the versatile Second Section. The subject was "Communications" but had it been Dietrich and Garbo in "Sin" the interest of the class had not been greater. The Dramatic Club need wander no farther afield for its personnel than to enroll todays demonstrators, Lt. Ferenbaugh of the 29th did greately amuse the class with his portrayal of the communications officer, albeit he did, with his hands, quite completely personify his nickname of Feinbaum. And I do think that his stage presence might be improved by a bucket of bricks in either hand.

The afternoon enlivened further by the collapse of a section of bleachers without injury to any one due mainly to the vocal efforts of Dick Thomas who did urge "Get off it, you jackasses," and so spurred a sluggish crowd to faster movement—and in his direction.

The first squad of the second platoon having lost at pistol shooting to the first squad of the first platoon did this day pay their four dollar bet by formal presentation to the winners of a sack filled with sawdust and four hundred pennies; Baughman presenting to Murphy while both squads stood at "Present Pocketbooks."

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

BLOOD PRESSURE

A little leaflet gotten out by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company defines blood pressure "as something persons over 40 worry about".

This same leaflet goes on to say "do not worry about blood pressure, if you must worry do it before you are forty".

There are two general kinds of high blood pressure, one called functional or emotional where nervousness, anxiety, worry, fear or excitement are the direct cause; the other is organic and follows prolonged fevers, germ diseases, overweight, chronic poisoning, overwork and overliving.

To avoid high blood pressure one has therefore to avoid emotional upsets just as much as possible, but above all one must slow up in this great American game of get-there; slow up on the over-indulgence in work, food, alcohol and tobacco. Relax, give your mind and body a daily rest. Get your quota of sleep and don't put off seeing the doctor and dentist at regular intervals for a complete examination. Don't neglect little pus infection and above all don't put off having that bad tooth seen to. Chronic kidney trouble gives a high blood presure. This is one of the things which follows contagious diseases or prolonged bad habits in the eating or drinking game. So if you want to prolong a useful life change those habits when advised by your doctor.

The up-to-date doctor does not worry about blood pressure—his only concern is it's cause—follow his advise if he finds something wrong. What ever you do don't worry, this only increases your troubles.

Gunbotham's School Daze

BY E. L. M.

At noon on election day the only score posted on the club bulletin board read: "New Ashville, Mass.: Hoover 23, Roosevelt 6.

Ted Dunn eyed it for a moment, winked at Beeler, and attached a zero to the six. Just as Ted replaced the chalk, Colonels Weeks and Wallace led half a dozen Columbus Democrats into the room.

"Yes, gentlemen," said Colonel Wallace, turning toward the board, "I can prove that Hoover is leading. Just look at . . . "

"Let's scram!" muttered Beeler.

They did.

Major Lytle, at the tag end of a hectic period of assigning monograph subjects to the Tank Class, neared the bottom of his list with visible relief.

"Here's Topic 14. Lieut. James is the only officer who's asked for it. 'Conception of the characteristics of a satisfactory power plant for a combat tank of from seven to eight tons weight of the Christie type with a road speed of 60 M. P. H. and an average cross-country speed of 30 M. P. H.' No one else wants it? Then it goes to Lieut. James. Any objections?"

"Yes sir, I object!" said Bill Dean, with his tongue in his cheek.

The Major sighed. "All right, Dean, what's the matter?"

"I just don't think he's capable of handling the subject, sir."

Mr. Mencken tells us that at the bottom of every approach to the gods, even in the most enlightened societies of today, lies the ancient motive of propitiation; the worshipper seeks avoidance, escape, imunity, pardon, mercy.

However Gunbotham, on the carpet (not, thank God, as a worshipper!) before one of the lesser satellites of the Herald, faces the task of forming a retort to McGoofus' slightly ungrammatical, certainly undignified, decidedly juvenile attack of last week with more of distaste than of humility.

Obvious distortion of meanings to suit one's own ends can hardly be called ethical procedure. Nor is trivial and impotent sniping at minor issues the hallmark of good criticism. Wiping the mud from our eyes, we scorn the weapons of McGoofus.

But we point out to the excitable conductor of Offhand Observations that his suggestive, rather hysterical threats to publish reports on the "extra-curriculum" activities of Gunbzotham smacks of the methods of the K. K. K., screened as McGoofus is by a cloak of anonymity.

A SOLDIER PASSES

This week the conductor of The Flare steps out of character to pay a wholly inadequate tribute to Colonel Evan E. Lewis, who died at Governor's Island on October 31st.

Even to those who knew Colonel Lewis but casually, the news of his death brought regret, for there was that about the man that inspired liking from the first—a liking which deepened steadily with better acquaintance. To those whose privilege it was to know him well, the word of his passing brought deep and genuine sorrow.

"E-Square" Lewis was a true-to-type professional soldier in the highest sense of the term. He possessed to a notable degree those soldierly qualities which have made professional armies effective since the days of Alexander's Companions and Caesar's Centurions. He served brilliantly in many capacities during his twenty-nine years in the Army, but always his preference was for duty with troops. He looked upon his commission not as a guarantee to a comfortable existence, but as a charge to follow the career of his choice in the performance of those frequently unhonored and unsung services to civilization which regular armies do as a part of the day's work. He cared little for glory and less for praise. His only ambition was to do the job well and he performed every duty that way. It was his sufficient reward to know that he had done so.

Colonel Lewis, within eighteen months after his graduation from West Point, saw his first action and in it acquired that reputation for coolness under fire which was an outstanding characteristic of his battle record during the World War. This was in Mindanao in 1908 in a campaign against the Moros. Two years later, while engaged in fighting the great forest fires which swept the northwest in the fall of 1910, he rendered conspicuous service in the protection of life and property in a threatened district. These episodes of his early military career were the subject of favorable—even enthusiastic—comment by others. To "E-Square" they were just routine duty.

The World War took Colonel Lewis to France early in 1918 as a temporary Major of Signal Corps. Infantryman that he was, and knowing that he could render more useful service with his own arm, he importuned higher authority to assign him to the command of an infantry unit in a combat division until he finally gained his point.

Assigned to the 9th Infantry in April, 1918, he served with the 2d Division during April and May. From May to September he was with the 104th Infantry of the 26th Division. Gassed in action on July 22, he returned later to the same division to command the 102d Infantry during the Meuse-Argonne. In May, 1919, at the age of thirty-three, he was promoted to the grade of Colonel. He was one of the youngest officers of the American Army to attain that rank in the Infantry—a distinction which he won solely on his battle efficiency.

Numerous decorations and citations attest the valor of this brilliant fighting soldier. Foremost among these was the award of the Distinguished Service Cross and oak-leaf cluster with the following citations:

"Major, 102d Infantry, 26th division. Being second in command of the assaulting troops, he displayed great bravery and rare initiative. While under terrific artillery and machine-gun fire he organized scattered units, established and organized positions in depth, set up liaison from front to rear, and in hand-to-hand fighting personally led his men, inspiring in them a confidence and tenacity of purpose that were productive of success."

Oak-leaf cluster: "For act of extraordinary heroism in action near Beaumont, France, November 10, 1918. Commanding his regiment, he personally led the advance of his front line, under a heavy artillery and machine-gun fire, and gained the absolute confidence of his troops by his example of courage and coolness."

He received three silver-star citations for acts of gallantry near Marcheville and Riaville, France, September 25 to 26, 1918; north of Verdun from October 18, 1918, to cessation of hostilities, and during the second battle of the Marne, July 18 to 25, 1918.

His foreign decorations included the Legion of Honor, The Croix de Guerre with two palms and the Italian War Cross with two silver citation stars.

Such is the brief, cut-and-dried, official war record of one of the finest soldiers that ever wore the American uniform.

Subsequent to the war, Colonel Lewis served on the General Staff and in the Office of the Chief of Infantry. He graduated from the Advanced Class of The Infantry School in 1924, from the Command and General Staff School in 1925, and from the Army War College in 1930.

During the years 1925 and 1929, Colonel Lewis was on duty at The Infantry School as chairman of the Military History Committee and Chief of the Fourth Section. Those whose student years fell within this period will remember him best, perhaps, for the brief and effective tying-in talks by which he wove the monographs into a connected pattern of the story of warfare. For "E-Square" Lewis possessed the gift of being able to say much in a few words and of saying it in a way that caused the points he made to stick fast in the memory.

The Army can ill spare "E-Square" Lewis. Experienced in war and a keen student of its history, inspired by an active interest in his profession, and endowed with a marked capacity for clear and accurate thinking, he was eminently qualified for high leadership in peace or war. Moreover, his ability was not offset by freak ideas, nor was his judgment distorted by prejudices. Modest almost to a fault though he was, and tolerant though he was of the opinion of others, he had that quiet sureness of himself which inspires the confidence of superiors and subordinates. He had all of the important attributes of true leadership and had another great war come within his lifetime or had the last one continued another year, he would have risen fast and far.

It is not because of his high soldierly qualities alone, however, that Colonel Lewis held a large place in the hearts of all who knew him. Able and better known—though surely not better—soldiers will travel the road to Arlington with few to care, but the word that "E-Square" has answered the final call carries a burden of real grief to American garrisons in both hemispheres. His tolerance, his broad human sympathies, and his good fellowship endeared him to his comrades in arms everywhere. His untimely death leaves a gap in the ranks of his contemporaries that cannot be filled.

"He was a man, take him for all in all,
I shall not look upon his like again."

Undefeated Teams Are Matched Tomorrow On Nations Gridirons

BY I. PREDICTUM

Several teams are destined to be toppled from the pinnacle of football fame when the dust rises from the many gridirons of the country this Saturday. The current season is rounding into the home stretch with only fourteen elevens still undefeated or untied. Chief among these is Colgate in the East and Auburn in the South. Colgate. along with Brown and Pittsburgh, is competing for the honor of opposing the University of Southern California in the Rose Bowl game this year. One of these two teams is sure to be eliminated when Brown and Colgate clash Thanksgiving day.

In the South, Auburn and Tennessee still remain in the running for the Conference championship with Vanderbilt treading closely on their heels. In the outstanding game in this section of the country Saturday, undefeated Tennessee faces the Commodores. Vanderbilt is reputed to possess a tower of strength on the defensive but to lack a very capable offense. Dixie Roberts is the big Commodore threat. Tennessee, on the other hand, has at times shown a very strong offense lead by Beattie Feathers, candidate for all-American honors. Tennessee will win, probably by a touchdown, possibly two.

Georgia Tech faces another strong opponent this week in Alabama. The Crimson Tide will probably have "Hurry" Cain back in the line-up against the Yellow Jackets. The contest should be close with Alabama favored. Auburn meets considerable opposition in Florida, but should win by a fairly decisive margin.

Kentucky, who has proved a thorn in the side of many Southern elevens this fall, may surprise Tulane, but to accomplish this end, she will have to display a better brand of football than hitherto exhibited. Tulane will win. Zimmerman, who defeated Georgia Tech last week will undoubtedly play a big part in the victory. Georgia will down Clemson by at least two touchdowns, although the Tiger will prove to be a stubborn foe.

Undefeated Louisiana State meets one of the best second rate elevens in the South in Centenary. This will be another victory for the protegees of Biff Jones. North Carolina faces a tartar in Davidson, but should defeat its opponents. Duke, fresh from its decisive win over Kentucky, will emerge victorious over North Carolina State.

Furman may upset S. Carolina but, unless it does, the Gamecock will overcome their opponents, undefeated in southern circles. Rice and Arkansas should defeat the Texas Aggies and Southern Methodist. Virginia Poly should rout the forces of Virginia. Texas Christian and Texas oppose each other in a game which will decide the championship of the Southwestern Conference. Both boast excellent records thus far. Texas Christian is undefeated besides having scored more total points than any other team in the country. The game will be close with Texas Christian winning a narrow victory.

In the East, Army, who in this prophet's estimation has one of the very best elevens in the country, will easily defeat North Dakota State. The Columbia Lion and the Brown Bear will stage a battle royal this Saturday in what may turn out to be the hardest fought game of the week. Both teams are undefeated or untied. Columbia boasts of victories over Cornell, Navy, and Princeton; Brown has defeated Yale, Harvard, and Holy Cross. The game is just about a toss-up with Columbia in the role of favorite.

The dark green of Dartmouth will merge with the dark red of Cornell and when the process of merging will have been completed, the red should be the predominant color. In other words, your prophet favors Cornell to defeat Dartmouth. Colgate should maintain its perfect record at the expense of Syracuse. Carnegie Tech will overcome Xavier. Boston College should have little difficulty in repulsing West Maryland.

Fordham, late conquerors of St. Mary's, enters the New York University game as favorite. Fordham should win but the margin will be close, not more than two touchdowns at the very most. Holy Cross should be enabled to win over Harvard, but the Crimson warriors are able to put up a far better struggle than they did against Army last week. Villanova, possessing one of the best smaller teams in the East, will defeat Detroit.

In an eastern classic, Yale will oppose Princeton. Neither team has had a very good season. The Eli has only a victory over Dartmouth to its credit. On the other hand, Princeton has shown much latent power against such fine teams as Columbia, Michigan, Cornell, and Navy. This latent power came to a head last Saturday when the Tiger overwhelmed Lehigh 53-0. Both Princeton and Yale will be intent on victory. I. PREDICTUM prophesies a Tiger victory possibly by as much as three touchdowns.

Maryland will extend Navy every bit of the way and may possibly win, but Navy is the favorite. Lafayette will overcome St. John's and Rutgers should triumph over Lehigh. Bucknell is favored to win over Washington and Jefferson. Temple should defeat Penn State.

In the Midwest, contests are scheduled for this Saturday which may change the entire football outlook. Chief among these is the Pennsylvania-Ohio State encounter. Your prophet frankly admits that this game has him stumped. A tie is not improbable. On the basis of past performances, however, I. PREDICTUM casts his lot

I Predictum Raises Average To 870

The somewhat gratifying results of last Saturday's football games caused I. PREDICTUM'S average for the week to soar to .870. He predicted forty-nine games in all, three resulted in ties, forty were prophesied correctly.

In the South, the Herald prophet predicted the winner of all but one contest successfully. Tulane turned back Georgia Tech 20-14 chiefly through the efforts of the brilliant Don Zimmerman, who made all three of his team's touchdowns. Duke defeated Kentucky 13-0 as Virginia Poly bowed before Alabama 9-6 in her first defeat of the season. Auburn and Tennessee, co-leaders in the Southern Conference, won easy victories. Vanderbilt had difficulty with Maryland but won by two touchdowns. Louisiana State kept its slate clean by winning over South Carolina in a hard-fought game.

North Carolina experienced more trouble than they had been anticipating with Florida but eventually won out 18-13. Other winners in the South were Texas, Rice, North Carolina State, Mercer, William and Mary, and Texas Christian. Washington and Lee defeated Virginia in a decided upset.

In the East N. Y. U. just managed to beat a stubborn Georgia foe by one touchdown. St. Mary's came east with a blaring of trumpets, went back unheralded, after suffering a 14-0 defeat at the hands of Fordham. Pittsburgh and Pennsylvania met in a colossal struggle between two undefeated elevens. A last half rally sufficed to give Pittsburgh, conquerors of Notre Dame, the victory. Army showed more strength than they had hitherto exhibited by crushing Harvard under an avalanche of touchdowns 46-0. Before the game, Harvard was conceded a fairly good chance for victory, but shortly after the contest started, all doubts were dispelled as to the ultimate winner. West Point far out-classed their opponents.

Colgate remained the only unscored-on eleven in the country after Saturday's games as she downed Mississippi 32-0. The Princeton Tiger clawed frantically at Lehigh, won an overwhelming victory 53-0. Columbia managed to nose Navy in a thrilling contest. Final score, Columbia 7, Navy 6. The Haskell Indians did surprisingly well against Temple, holding their powerful opponents to a 14-14 tie. Cornell and Dartmouth won easy victories over Albright and New Hampshire respectively. Brown remained undefeated after turning back Holy Cross 10-7.

In the Midwest, Ohio State clicked against Northwestern, winning 20-6. Michigan defeated Indiana in a close game 7-0 as the other aspirant for Conference honors, Purdue, was impressive in crushing Chicago 37-0. Wisconsin was extended in its game with Illinois 20-12, but Minnesota easily defeated Mississippi. Notre Dame encountered a stubborn foe in Kansas but the powerful running attack of the Ramblers was too much as the Irish won 24-6.

Iowa startled Nebraska by putting up a valiant fight through every minute ofthe game between the two universities. Nebraska won by the slender and indecisive margin of a single point, score 14-13. Missouri upset Oklahoma as Detroit won a close victory over her traditional rival, Marquette. Michigan State won over South Dakota 20-6.

In the West, Southern California gave further evidence of her great strength by overcoming a powerful California eleven 27-7. In this game, California gained he distinction of being the only team thus far to cross the Trojan goal-line. Stanford lost its third game in a row with Washington administering the defeat. Oregon had a close shave with Oregon State but won 12-6. Santa Clara and Washington State defeated Coll. Pacific and Idaho.

Col. Munson Col. Peyton Depart To Attend Reunions

Colonel Fred L. Munson, commander of the 24th Infantry, will departed from Fort Benning on Wednesday for Washington D. C., where he will attend the annual reunion of the veterans of the 7th Divisions, Colonel Munson, who commanded the 34th Infantry, 7th Division, during the World War, is president of the association of former officers fo the 7th Division. The 7th Division, with which Colonel Munson served overseas, was assigned to the Pouvenelle sector near Thiacourt, on the extreme right of the line during the Meuse-Argonne drive.

Colonel Ephraim G. Peyton, executive officer of The Infantry School, is to depart from Fort Benning on Tuesday to attend a veteran's re-union in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, on Armistice Day. At Pittsburgh Colonel Peyton will be the guest of honor of former enlisted men of the 320th Infantry, 80th Division, which he commanded over-seas during the World War, and who are now members of the Federated War Veterans Societies of Pittsburg and Allegheny.

After attending the reunion of the former enlisted members of his regiment at Pittsburgh, Colonel Peyton will travel to Baltimore, where he will be entertained by the former officers of the 320th Infantry, who served under him over-seas, and whom he trained at Fort Myer, Va. upon the entry into the army as members of the first officers' training camp.

Colonel Peyton will be absent from Fort Benning about ten days.

Mata Hari

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Mata Hari, famous dancer and enemy spy, makes an innocent accomplice of a young Russian aviator, Alexander Rosanoff. As her former lover, Shubin, is about to telephone Dubois, the head of the French Secret Service and involve Rosanoff, the dancer shoots Shubin. But Rosanoff comes to see the latter. The dancer persuades him not to enter and sends him on his flight to Russia with messages, admitting that she loves him. He is shot down. From her hiding-place she hurries to him, finds him blind and promises to marry him. But Mata Hari is arrested as she leaves the hospital.

Many men were suspected of complicity in her manoeuvres; all sorts and conditions of men gathered in army and navy and subjected not only to the insidious betrayals of treachery and espionage.

"And those men," finished Dubois, "we must remember! Those men we must avenge!"

There was a silence. Those members of the Court who had not seen front line service themselves, had intimate connections with men who at that very moment might be in the midst of agony and horror, might lie at the point of death.

But it was a question of far more concrete evidence than this, the prosecutor began again, of a far more specific crime. Was it not true that she had been very friendly with the deceased Colonel Shubin. Attache of the Russian Embassy?

For this Mata Hari had been thoroughly prepared.

Yes. She had been his very good friend.

And was it not a fact that she had dined with him the evening before his death?

"Certainly," she admitted. She dined with him very often.

WE SALUTE ARMISTICE DAY

Mere words cannot express, nor human minds measure our debt to those men who served in the Great War and who dedicated their lives to the cause of everlasting peace. It is our duty to insure this everlasting peace, if only as a fulfilment of the task which they began on the battlefields of France.

Let us, by our firm support of the National Defense, assist in preventing a repetition of the disaster which cost them their lives. Let us make Natonal Defense synonymous with National Preparedness and thereby dispel the threatening war-clouds forever.

Stars In "Doctor X"

Cinema Calendar

for Grand, Rialto and Royal

AT THE GRAND

SATURDAY, SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Offering "Doctor X" with Lionel Atwill, Fay Wray and Lee Tracy. X marks the spot where you'll find this entertaining, thrilling picture. Guaranteed to out-thrill the screen's past masterpieces! Different! Sensationally unusual. It's said to be the "Something New" in entertainment that you've been waiting years to see. A strange story revealed with a star cast.

TUESDAY and WEDNESDAY: Offering "He Learned About Women" with Stuart Erwin, Alison Skipworth and Susan Fleming. He had fifty million dollars, but had never been kissed. And then he met "Madame Racketeer" and her pal and they taught him. But it's all in fun, and what laughs! Though he did learn about women.

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY: Offering: "Payment Deferred" with Charles Laughton, Varree Teasdale, Maureen O'Sullivan and Dorothy Peterson. As a stage play, it made two continents gasp! Now with the amazing facilities of the talkie camera, this absorbing drama has grown in thrills! Steel your nerves, sharpen your wits, for the greatest mystery thriller said to have ever reached the screen. You'll espcially remember the Toast of Terror: A tinkling glass lifted high . . . and a fear crazed man becomes a murderer . .

AT THE ROYAL

SUNDAY, MONDAY AND TUESDAY: Offering "Trouble In Paradise" with Miriam Hopkins, Kay Francis, Herbert Marshall and Charlie Ruggles. They made their garden of Eden, until the snake shook them a Paradise Cocktail and their "Angel" took a run-out powder. He handed both his Eves a Big Red Apple . . . but one was wormy. Here is a romance for every woman whose heart beats faster in the moonlight . . . for every man who wants arms that cling and caress. Just one modern paradise . . . just one Adam . . . just one apple . . . and just two Eves. That makes two hours of love and laughter.

AT THE RIALTO

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY: Offering "The Law of the North" with Bill Cody and Andy Shuford. A tale of sensational shooting scrapes, the machinations of a crooked saloon-keeper, and his eventual exposure at the hands of a man who had trailed him through devious by-ways to an eventual retribution in a melodramatic climax.

SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Offering "Guilty as Hell" with Victor McLaglen, Edmund Lowe, Richard Arlen and Adrienne Ames. There is a warning: Watch the Killer,—you'll see all, you'll know all, but the police know nothing. You'll get shivers, laughs and thrills galore as you witness the amazing proof that murder will out!

TUESDAY: Offering "Madame Racketeer" with Alison Skipworth, Richard Bennett, George Kraft, Evalyn Knapp. Her fingerprints are on the hearts of four husbands—and her fingers are in the pockets of 100 other victims. You'll roar at the funny way she makes each "honey" pay.

WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY: Offering "The Painted Woman," with Spencer Tracy and Peggy Shannon. A story of the South Seas, of pearl-fishers and beachcombers. There were two loves—married to one man . . . living in fear of another . . unwanted love from the past . . . lure of the South Seas brings adventure, romance, tragedy.

GRAND

"The "curious camera" is responsible for much of the feeling of suspense created in the new First National's all Technicolor mystery melodrama, "Doctor X," coming to the Grand Theatre beginning Saturday.

Director Michael Curtiz has named it that because he puts the camera in the place of an interested and curious person, poking it into dark hallways and mysterious closets, investigating this and running down that and trying as best it can to solve the mystery.

"It sometimes happens," Curtiz explains, "that an audience at a mystery melodrama showing becomes irritated because the characters seem to stupidly avoid investigations which would almost obviously bring to light some pertinent fact. So, in "Doctor X" we use the camera to satisfy the audience's curiosity, by letting it look into the most suspicious corners and do the things any member of the audience would do in its place in trying to find the solution of the mystery.

"It is just what we say it is. It is a 'Curious Camera.' I do not know that it has ever been used before just like this. We think it adds greatly to the suspense of our picture."

"Doctor X" is a Warner Bros. picture adapted from the stage play by Howard Comstock and Allen Miller.

The cast is headed by Lee Tracy, Lionel Atwill, Fay Wray, John Wray, Preston Foster, Arthur Edmund Carewe, Robert Warwick and many others. Michael Curtiz directed.

ROYAL

Ernst Lubitsch's "Trouble in Paradise," which is said to establish an entirely new technique for motion pictures, has been booked for the Royal Theater, where it will open Saturday at 11:15 p. m.

Miriam Hopkins, Kay Francis, Herbert Marshall, Charlie Ruggles and Edward Everett Horton play laeding roles in the picture, a witty farce adapted from the play by Laszlo Adalar, Viennese playwright.

With easy good humor, the picture first shows the establishment of business, social and emotional rapport between Miss Hopkins and Marshall, two super-super crooks who prey in suave fashion upon European society. Then it follows them through their most exciting adventure—the bamboozling of Miss Francis, svelte Frenchwoman who possesses more money than the Bank of France.

It is in this adventure that Marshall is almost empted to turn from paths of wickedness into respectabiliyt, for his victim dispays charms to which he is easily susceptible.

The struggle between Miss Hopkins, on the one hand, and Miss Francis, on the other, for his affection, leads to a highly amusing climax.

The film marks the second important movie appearance of Marshall, Broadway and London stage favorite, since his return to Hollywood. His first was opposite Marlene Dietrich in "Blonde Venus."

TROUBLE IN PARADISE

RIALTO

Edmund Lowe and Victor McLaglen have gotten rid of their shadows.

The buddies of "What Price Glory" worked with Richard Arlen and other members of the cast of "Guilty as Hell," a murder farce adapted from the successful play, which comes to the Rialto Theater Tuesday, without ever being trailed around the set by their shadows.

It was the result of the introduction of a new "glass wave," a new lighting device which difuses light so broadly that no sharp outlines are thrown on the stages. It consists of a plate of clear glass, about an inch thick, with its inner and outer surfaces waved like the surface of a lake on a windy day. It is fitted over the front of the 500-watt incandescent spot lights, and it has the same effect on a beam of ight that a spray arrangement has on a jet fo water.

The "glass wave" was used experimentally for several months before seeing actual service for the first time during the filming of "Guilty as Hell."

The picture, done in comedy manner, presents Lowe and McLaglen as a police reporter and a detective, respectively, engaged in the task of solving a murder mystery. The audience sees the crime being committed and knows who is guilty, but Lowe and McLaglen make many a ridiculous bungle before solving the case.

As a play, "Guilty as Hell," written by Daniel N. Rubin, enjoyed a long run on Broadway last season.

McVey Will Battle Batton On Monday Night

All Colored Card Highly Interesting To Local Fight Fans

BY SWAYZE

In picking Jack McVey to battle Cotton Batton next Monday night on the All-Colored program, Captain Fry has put a brilliant shade on the fight game at Benning. It will serve to all the more liven up the interest already shown in the post bouts, and will draw attention from far and near.

While McVey is recognized as the colored middleweight champion of the world, he will meet no easy opponent in Cotton Batton. Long since, Batton has been placed at the top of the heap of colored middleweight group in the south, and this is his one big chance to come from down under and show the world his wares.

Cotton is the type of fighter that goes in to win, and comes out satisfied only when his hand is waved to the cheering throngs as the victor. He is by far the prettiest boxer to ever show in this section, barring none, and along with it he can hit and take them like nobody's business.

The odds are all in favor of McVey taking the fight, but it will be no easy matter for him to cop over this beautiful boxer from the sunset regiment.

McVey has fought and won over such opponents as Geo. Nichols, Lon Scozza, Wesley Ketchell, California Young Terry, and scads of others. According to releases from New York, McVey is the greatest non-stop fighting machine since the days of Joe Walcott, and that is going some. He has been fighting in both the welerweight and middleweight divisions,

All-America?

This high kicking young gentleman is none other than Jimmie Hitchcock, whose name is on the lips of every football fan in the south today as possible All-American material for this year. Truly, Jimmie has been piling up points, and generally making himself a nuisance for the opposition this year, and it would not be surprising in the least for him to be picked for the All-American halfback position.

In The Dressing Room

Little Known Anecdotes About Famous Football Teams

By I. Predictum

Two years ago Tulane boasted of an exceptionablly good team that overcame with ease all opposition in the South. She was even being considered as a prospective national champion. That was before Northwestern came out of the North with her Rentner, her Russell, and her Bruder.

"Hank" Bruder was considered one of the best backs ever enrolled in Northwestern University. In the game with Tulane, he ran wild, scored both of his team's touchdowns as Northwestern won 14-0.

Shortly after the game it was discovered that "Hank" Bruder had contracted small pox, was, in fact, afflicted with the dread disease before the contest with Tulane. This knowedge proved a source of worry to Northwestern officials, who immediately sent the following telegram to Tulane:

BRUDER HAD SMALL-POX DURING RECENT GAME WITH TULANE STOP ADVISE LOOK OUT FOR YOUR PLAYERS.

Nothing daunted, the Tulane officials confidently wired back their response.

NO NEED FOR WORRY ON OUR PART STOP NO TULANE PLAYER GOT CLOSE ENOUGH TO BRUDER TO CONTRACT SMALL-POX.

Ten Pins Tumble As Experts Strike On Benning Alleys

The Infantry School bowling devotees have been rather active during the past month, keeping the pins tumbling with regularity throughout the month of Ocobter. Last month disclosed a gain of about 200 per cent over the games played during the same period last year, with interest mounting each day.

The officers' league has gotten under way, and to date the competition has been interesting for all engaged. The Enlisted Men's league, too, has mounted in popularity with the bowlers, and to date they have turned in some remarkable scores.

New high scores are being turned in daily, prizes being awarded each month for those accomplishments.

The new high scores are as follows:

Ten pins—Officers, Lt. Dean 259; Ladies, Mrs. Smith 235; Enlisted Men, Pvt. Hall 279.

Duck pins—Officers, Capt. H. Fry 166; Ladies, Miss Allen 145; Enlisted Men, Sgt. Dezotell 211.

Winners of flights for the month were:

| | Average |
|---|---|
| 1st—Lt. Kelley | 247 |
| 2nd—Chap. Howard | 229 |
| 3rd—Pvt. Barron | 199 |
| 4th—Tech. Sgt. Burns | 149 |

The league standings are as follows:

Officers' League

| | Pct. |

Two Beautiful Games Turned In By Tanks In Battalion Series

Tanker gridiron warriors mixed and mingled in mortal combat last Saturday afternoon on the Tanker field in two thrilling, hard-fought and well played games of football. Company "F" Second Tank Rgt., defeated Company "D" First Tank Regiment, 13 to 7, in the opening struggle. In the nightcap the veteran line of Headquarters Company was ripped and shredded by the smashing drives and aerial attacks of the Company "E" backfield, with Bill Swantic at the helm, gallantly supported by Mathews, Stearns and LaBlanc. Company "E" won 7 to 0.

Company "F" Stops "D" In First Game

A large gathering of fans including the officers and enlisted men of the organization with a goodly sprinkling of visitors, lined the sidelines of both sides of the field. The opening game found teams of companies "D" and "F" facing each other.

The first six minutes of the opening quarter saw both teams see-saw backwards and forward with no noticeable gains. Late in the opening quarter Prusinosky got loose around "D" company's right end and galloped to the "D" company 30 yard strip before he was downed. O'Brien made 7 yards at right end. Lafkovitch bucked center for 4 yards and a first down on the 19 yard strip, as the quarter ended. Two plays at the line failed. On a double reverse, O'Brien got loose and slipped through the defense for a touchdown. O'Brien failed to kick goal. "F" 6, "D" 0.

Company "D" took the kickoff and came back fighting. Line smashes with McKelvey, Baggett and McKnight lugging the pellet, carried Company "F" steadily backward to their 20 yard strip. On an attempted reverse, McKelvey fumbled and Prusinosky fell on the ball. O'Brien sent a long punt booming down to Company "D's" 30 yard line and the battle went back to midfield.

The end of the half found the teams battling like two strange tigers, in midfield.

The third quarter was a hard fought, scoreless affair. In the fourth period the battle grew fiercer as the "Old Liners" fought furiously to overcome the early lead of Company "F" and stem the tide of defeat.

Headquarters Bows To "D" In Nightcap

The second game was one of those brilliant gridiron battles between well matched, high speed football machines that never accept defeat. Before the kickoff the yellow jersied team of veterans from Headquarters Company were top heavy favorites. Before play had hardly got underway

:-: On The Q. T. :-:

BY B. B. S.

THINGS ARE looking up for Sgt. Booth these days, or rather people were. He was up a tree, both in the election and in actuality. He bet the wrong way, and then went to the woods to climb a big tree. Reports are contrary as to how long he remained up, but all are certain that he came down.

TOMMIE THOMPSON wants sell some police pups; . . . has 'em advertised, too; but he wants to keep 'em all to play with. He'll probably make as much money at that as the "Two Black Crows" did with their stock farm.

POOCH DERRICK'S bulb looks as though someone had been pounding it. Probably he's trying that old "blue nose" game again, and got a little of his own medicine.

BEFORE WE FORGET it, let us promise you something. Jack Johnson over in "C" Battery, 83rd, said something the other day down in the lobby. As soon as we have imported an interpreter we will give you the full details. Joe Reginski of the Recreation Center Board looks like a good prospect for the job. "Gimme a armer, zome nells, a oo by eavy and a oodizzle," Joe.

SERGEANT McNULTY WANTS his name to appear in print. We have been helping him out all we could, and think Mack is going to make a go of it. Now we promised Sergeant McNulty that we would keep his name out of this column, and to date have done very well at it. Any one discovering Sergeant McNulty's name in this column will do a great favor by notifying us of same.

FELIX, (THE CAT) Matthews, over in R. M. G. can still tell those tales about the "Arkansas Traveller" with great ease. Sometimes we suspect him of a bit of personal insertions. Well, it goes over big, and that's all that counts. He bet wrong on the election, too.

JOHN FAULK still has that Regimental Headquarters bunch eating out of his hands. The way he feeds that company is something for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals to look into. Chicken! . . . Bahh . . . Who wants chicken, nohow?

RABBITS AND SQUIRRELS, squirrels and rabbits. It will soon be time to be out there pegging away good money at the elusive creatures again, and scores are waiting for the chance. Bet Sergeant Sweger over in Headquarters Battery gets his share again this year.

BILL SWANTIC, erstwhile All-Army football player, has injected more pep into that bunch of players of his than was used to manufacture the first jumping-jack. He has simply done wonders with a tail-ender team, and this year they are going for the championship like "Snakes" Bryant to the chow hall.

LINE FORMS on the right. Woah, Sergeant! No bucking the line, we all want good tickets to the Georgia-Auburn game next week.

Fighting is his business, and he goes at it like he meant nothing short of modified murder. And what he did to Roy Dunn is history in the ancient form. He is under the management of Charlie Rose, of New York City, who is one of the "Big Five" among fight promoters and managers. This should suffice in explanation of what the ring worms may expect of him.

Seldom Will Be Heard

In completing the top positions of the fights, the promoters could not overlook the hitting ability of Seldom Heard, most popular colored fighter to ever be shown at Benning. Heard can hit like hard times, and can take it better than the farmers have during the depression, (which was awful). He measures six feet-two, and will scale the beam at around two hundred.

Willie Bush will do everything in his power to stop this "Manifest Freight," Freight," and is well able to cope with the situation. If all advance dope doesn't go haywire, Seldom will be sleeping "among the sweet peas" before the night is over. However, his ability to hit might pull the big soldier through the rough before the end of the fight. This fight will be eight rounds.

Tiger Thompson will go to war with P. G. Carson for six, (or less) rounds in the top prelim, and Tiger tries to get his man. Tiger says that those initials of Carson's just stand for "purty good," but he will have to do better than that to take the Jungle Cat's pelt.

Lightning Lige and Tarzan Nelson will furnish all the amusement in the other six rounder of the night. They have been wanting one another's scalps for a long time, and after a bit of persuasion, induced the promoters to give them a licensed opportunity to do a little private assault with intent to render "hors de combat" . . . or sumpin'.

Willie Branch has singled out Dick Russell, (no politics involved here), for his next victim. The consensus of opinion around the westender's hangout is that Branch will have plenty of opportunity to "Flow on, sweet . . . sumpin'," during that fight. Branch, however, is confident of a win. and will give the fans a run for their money.

Six Cylinder Olds will crank up and go places with Explosive Banks, if Banks doesn't decide to explode early in the curtain raiser. Both will be battling for a chance at a bigger piece of money, and the sooner one is laid to rest, the better the other will be satisfied.

All in all, indications point to a huge success on this card, it being the first regular scheduled "All Colored" card in a long itme. Fans will not forget that the last program of this type was everything predicted for it, and this will be no exception.

COMPANY "F" WINS

Company "F" got a break early in the quarter when Prusinosky intercepted a pass and carried the ball down to Company "D", 30 yard strip. A trio of line bucks and an end run by O'Brien, put the ball down to the 19 yard line. A pass, O'Brien to Prusinosky paved the way for the second touchdown. Prusinosky sent the pellet over the bar for the extra point on the kick from placement.

Staging a desperate drive in the last three minutes of play, the Company "D" team drove down the field on smashing plays that ended only when "Cueball" Smith crashed over for a touchdown. The extra point was added when Company "F" was penalized for being offside on the kick from placement. The gun ended the game with Company "F" winning 13 to 7.

UNDEFEATED TEAMS MATCHED TOMORROW

with the Buckeyes. Notre Dame will defeat Northwestern probably by two touchdowns.

The mighty Panther eleven faces powerful Nebraska. Nebraska is far in the lead for the Big Six Championship. Pittsburgh has overcome Notre Dame, Army, and Pennsylvania, all exceptionally strong teams. Pittsburgh has the edge in a game which may turn out to be a rout. Minnesota, one of the most formidable elevens in the Midwest, meets a worthy opponent in Wisconsin. The margin of victory will be slight with Minnesota on the long end of the score.

Michigan should repulse Chicago by a decisive margin. The Wolverine has not hit its stride in its last two games and the Chicago game will be a splendid opportunity. Illinois and Indiana are destined to put up a nip-and-tuck battle between two fairly mediocre teams. Indiana should win a close game. Purdue will defeat Iowa, the eleven which gave Nebraska so much trouble last week. Missouri will probbly be still suffering from the shock of its upset victory over Oklahoma, and in this dazed condition, should prove no match for Kansas.

In the Far West, the undefeated Trojans of Southern California thirsting for further victories face Oregon, also unbeaten to date. Both elevens have defeated Oregon State. Another win for U. S. C. should be the outcome of this encounter. Oregon State will take the measure of Montana. Washington, conquerors of Stanford (although defeating Stanford is no longer considered extraordinary) is favored over Washington State. The latter university, however, has a powerful eleven which is quite capable of upsetting the dope. California is favored over Idaho. Loyola will crush Whittier, and Stanford at last seems in a fair way to win a game as she meets the California Aggies. More anon.

And hadn't she qurareled with him that night because he had refused her information? "And later you feared that he might denounce you?"

"I quarreled with him, yes," said the dancer coldly. "That is, he quarreled with me. It is ridiculous to assume that there was any question of information. That evening, in Paris, there were doubtless thousands of quarrels between good friends, for the same reason—one or the other was jealous."

A sort of smile went around the courtroom. Only Dubois and Mata Hari remained sober.

"Colonel Shubin was jealous?"

"Yes . . . "

"With reason, perhaps?"

"Perhaps—if you are interested."

I. S. D. NOTES

Recent changes find Major Thomas B. Catron in command of a battalion, Captain B. B. Bain and Captain Charles W. Pence, company commanders and Master Sergt. George Mowry, our popular top kick, now a battalion Sergeant major.

Sgt. John Booth, one of the rare Hoover boosters of the past election, lost everything but his appetite on the recent election. After putting all of his earthly possessions on the success of Hoover, the sergeant then wagered Mr. Sgt. George Mowry a wheelbarrow ride from the main gate, with an escort of four motorcycle policemen. Friday morning this procession will get underway with Booth at the wheel.

Corporal Millet has finally realized that there is a certain amount of pleasure alloted to each human during this life.

Plans are now underway for the holding of a pocket billiard tournament between teams composed of players from the organizations of the garrison. The Greencords should boast one of the strongest teams in the garrison, with such players as Hamilton, Barnes, Stuart, Sosbee and others to choose from. Aside from boasting a half dozen of the best shots in the garrison, we also have the finest equipped pool room to be found in this neck of the woods.

"Sad Samuel" Stuart has returned from furlough and is now on duty over at Gowdy Field. Samuel is a valuable man around Gowdy Field at any season of the year.

Although having to share honors with several other outfits, we still boast that we have the neatest and best feeding mess in the garrison. Captain O'Connell and Master Sgt. Sprague seem to have what it takes to handle a mess that serves six hundred men with three hearty meals each day.

"Poppa" John broke all speed records in a dash in and out of every tent in the area. "Poppa" got away to a flying start from the recreation room, entered and came out of every tent on each side of he street, ran over "Mule" Hess in the scrimmage and was back in the recreation room changing clothes in the short space of seven seconds.

Corporal Marshall E. Taylor, financial magnate of the Quartermaster Detachment, is spending most of his spare moments these days looking at retirement orders. He doesn't yet desire to retire personally, as he has approximately 26 more years to do before he will have completed 30 years of honest and faithful service. But he does want some first three grade man in the Quartermaster Corps to retire. He doesn't care who or where the retiring man is. He merely wants a vacancy, as he happens to be No. 1 on the eligible list for staff sergeant, which goes into effect on November 1.

If Corporal Taylor does not decide to stay in the army thirty years, he should get into politics and become secretary of the treasury. The inhabitants of this country then would be sure that their funds would be safely guarded, at least, if he watched over the public wealth with as much care and conservatism as he watches over his own. He considers a savings account in one of New York City's largest savings banks as entirely too dangerous and speculative. The interest rate of 4½% is to him dangerously high. He feels sure that any money invested at more than 2% is unsafe and speculative in the extreme.

The Mighty Grumpy Gordy has probably had enough of convention. Too long has Fort Benning been having four, six, eight and ten round bouts at the post stadium. Ordinary fighters would be satisfied with engagements containing one of these number of rounds. But not the Grumpy. He had to have a seven round bout. He had it. He wants to fight nine rounds sometime.

Full Text Of Mayor's Address At Election

Ladies and Gentlemen, I come before you this evening as a candidate for Mayor of Biglerville on an anti-mud platform. Perhaps it would be better for me to say that I stand on a raft instead of a platform, for I feel I could survive longer on a raft during the winter period than on a platform which is liable to be submerged. During this arduous campaign it will be noted that although we have plenty of mud in Biglerville I have not resorted to mud slinging. I do not intend to resort to it now at the closing hour in this campaign despite the fact that Mr. Quartermaster, County Superintendent of roads, continues to pave our streets with mud instead of rocks.

If elected, I intend to surround myself with men of great foresight—those able to see through a cloud of dust in summer and those who have the foresight to provide for themselves suitable types of transportation facilities in winter. As an example, one of my supporters, a feller citizen of Biglerville, had the great foresight to build for himself a boat which he keeps in his quarters for any emergency. This citizen's name may be had upon application.

I am in favor of the continual presence of a class of Refresher Officers as Biglerville's guests for it has been noted that our main highway between Biglerville and the Capitol at Benning is given considerably greater attention while such officers are there.

I stand for the beautification of Biglerville. I am in favor of gardens and lawns and while I am on this subject let it be understood that fields of weeds do not constitute lawns in spite of the fact that these have so been designated by the County Sheriff who takes pleasure in handing out red tickets to our guests who happen to park their cars adjoining our quarters, claiming that such parking of cars on lawns (Spare the word), is a violation of Post Regulations.

I am in favor of sidewalks—sidewalks that are useful—sidewalks that go somewhere—all with non-skid surface, and let it be understood that I am not in favor of the kind of sidewalks that are folded up and put in the basement at 9 o'clock every night.

I am in favor of noiseless strikers—the kind that can build fires in the early morning without awakening sleeping occupants of our quarters.

Now the question of loud speakers and radios is a most important and perplexing one. While I will not endeavor to control them I am in favor of better co-ordination among our radio fans in Biglerville. We should designate, "Loud-Speakers Night" in the same order as married folks in our neighboring village designate "maid's night out" evenings. It should be agreed that some nights should be reserved for sleeping, even in such a wideawake village as Biglerville.

I am in favor of requiring all amateur pianists, especially those who are practicing scales, to apply to the City Council for license before they start to disturb the peace of our fellow citizens.

While the question of window shades is an important one it is realized that an ordinance to prevent sightseers from looking into our quarters would destroy one of the great thrills furnished by the Citizens of Biglerville, yet I believe something should be done about it. Probably a sort of peek-a-boo window shade would solve the problem and would make the game more interesting to our nocturnal sightseers.

These. Ladies and Gentlemen, are a few of the panks in my raft and on these I stand, hoping they might float me in to the honorable office of the Mayor of Biglerville.

I thank you!

Back on the air again with a delightful presentation of Who's who and What's what in Headquarters Company.

Although our mecernary, antagonistic and egotistical nature has obliterated the friendship of our many friends, regard last week's article, we will endeavor to counteract the feeling by writing a more foolish article this week thereby claiming all rights to the title of the "craziest scribe" recently relinquished by Jack B. Gibney of the Infantry School Detachment, formerly of Hqs. and Hqs. Co. 1st and Second Battalions.

This week we will start by offering as our first section; Wilmer, (pause), Wilmer Parker and his North Carolinians in a beautiful number entitled, "You're So Different From The Rest", of course Wilmer offers the vocal refrain. His crooning voice is an asset to any orchestra. Keep up the fire "Blondie".

Everyone is wondering. Wondering what, we ask? Well here's the dope. Pvt. Norman Harris Hobbs, (if you please), has changed his tactics for some reason or other and instead of a slumming "Shack-man" he has turned toes down and can be seen enjoying the warmth of the recreation room.

Pvt. Malvin L. Snead has transferred to this organization from Company "D", 29th Infantry and we are extending him our heartiest welcome.

As we sit in our recreation room writing this entry, the greatest games of all games is being played in the North corner of our cozy habitude. McGaha versus Sartain, two of the company's foremost checker players, (to hear them tell it), anyway "Mac" has his checkers lined up in "double wing back formation," (we don't know what that means but that is what he had anyway). Pvt. Sartain, commonly Jesse, tries a line buck but is tackled in his tracks for no gain. "Mac" tries an off tackle play, falling leaf or something of that sort but only suffers the loss of two kinds for his trouble. (Executed by Sartain). McGaha retaliates with a lateral pass that is good for four kings and the game. The crowd cheers wildly while Mac rises, bows with great dignity and retires to the seclusion of his heaven in the clouds, (The Intelligence Platoon squad-room). Don't fail to read the next chapter of this thrilling story in next week's issue of the Benning Herald.

A lot of fellows in the company have requested us to give them a little publicity. Better not get us started we might wrangle over your weak points.

Oh! Before we forget it, let us mention the visit that the Klux Klux Klan recently paid to Sgt. McGaha. Our advice is to lay off of that vile stuff, we saw pink elephants prettily adorned in Blue nighties one night, ourselves.

At a recent company intelligence meeting the C. O. asked Pvt. Terpening to give a sentence with the word "Vespers" in it. Pvt. Terpening said, "When you talk about these crabby old sergeants it must be done in the softest of Vespers". Ha!

We are closing now, thanks for your kind attention, everybody, I hope that you managed to live thru this conglomeration of, well, you name it, if so we will be back with you again next week at the same time.

So as the Chicago gangster said to the cop as he turned his machine gun on him: "I hope I'm not boring yuo."

Officer, Capt. Yarborough had been the editor of the Infantry School News, had been one of the officers to accompany the Gold Star mothers to France and had served as Post Gardener. He is also the co-author of a History of Fort Benning, which was written in collaboration with Major Truman Smith, formerly of the 4th Section.

24th Inf.

COMPANY "A"

The Beau Brummel of the company is sick in the hospital. We are very sorry and hope for his speedy recovery.

Private 1cl. Roosevelt Johnson has returned from furlough he states that he had a pleasant stay and a nice time, but if he calls making cane syrup a pleasant stay that beats us.

Private 1cl. Edward Soule has transferred to Washington Barracks; hope that he will like his new home. We hate to lose you, but if you think things will be better, God speed and good luck.

Willie C. Fritz.

COMPANY "C"

Sergeant Williams has secured a furlough and is motoring to his home in Savannah, Georgia, to visit his relatives and friends.

Private Wilborn states that since his car is of the "open air, underslung" type, he feels that it would be advisable to allow it to remain on the parking line during the winter, and grace the highways with it next spring, as the last thing in "Sport model".

When you receive the ball, Harris, you are permitted to attempt to cross the opposing team's line for a gain. A football line is not restricted—the blocks are. Don't forget.

Owens opines that hunting used to be a Sport with him, but, now it is a business proposition.

Hall says: "The fellow who wrote the song, 'Lord You Made the Night Too Long' must have been placed under arrest in quarters awaiting the action of his company commander the next morning."

They say that it is possible to judge the type of an individual by the kind of movies he attends. If that is so Company "C" has many questionable soldiers in it, because they believe in the gangster reels.

You never return for the object you forget—rather the object you remembered. Apologies to Ripley.

TWO BEAUTIFUL GAMES

fans realized that Bill Swantic and crew were loaded with surprises. Swantic with three fast, hard hitting youngsters back of him, displayed one of the fastest, smoothest working backfields of the season. This combination crumbled the defense of the slower Headquarters team in the first four minutes of play and scored a touchdown on flashing end runs and a complicated aerial attack. It was Swantic that smashed openings in the line, but it was the twisting, demoralizing loose hipping of Mathews and Stearns that put the oval down in the shadow of the veteran's goal line.

Stearns and LeBlanc proved to be wizards at getting out in the open spaces to pull down Swantic's bullet passes. The first offensive drive carried Company "E" well down into Headquarters' territory. A pass, Swantic to Mathews put the ball on the 9 yard strip. With Headquarters on the alert for a pass, Swantic took the ball on a lateral pass, broke clear and romped over the last white marker. Swantic sent the pellet over the uprights for the extra point and a 7 to 0 advantage.

The remainder of the game was a furious, scoreless struggle. In the second quarter Headquarters threatened and camped on Company "E", 20 yard strip, but saw their chances go glimmering when Stearns cut over and intercepted Valery's pass to Sullivan, and run it back to the 30 yard strip before he was finally pulled down.

Knub Bennett, the Tanker battering ram, was sent in to break holes in the concrete defense of Company "E" in the last quarter but the valiant Tanker failed to dent the stone wall of defense.

Although losing, Headquarters put up a gallant battle. It was a case of speed and youth against age and experience and youth was served. Vallery, Bennett, Sullivan, and Love starred in the backfield for the losers. Brown played a whale of a game at end and Langford showed a great game at guard, in fact the entire team played great football and only lost to the better team.

Three players stand out for the winners. Swantic, veteran all-army star, played one of the greatest games of his career. He was ably supported by his running mates, Mathews, Stearns and LeBlanc. Mathews and Stearns, playing their first year of army football were the sensations of the game. As a ball carrier this boy, Mathews, has few equals in the garrison. Stearns and LeBlanc played a splendid game on offense and defense and the pass grabbing of this pair was sensational. Stearns also recovered two fumbles by the opposing team.

Both games were hard fought and well played and the splendid show of sportsmanship by all players, as well as their brilliant exhibition of playing is a credit to the entire organization.

BENNING HERALD

TOWN TOPICS

As the date for the Georgia-Auburn game approaches, enthusiasm on the post increases proportionately. Fort Benning has suddenly blossomed forth with an astounding number of self-styled football experts who modestly admit that they are on a par with Grantland Rice and I. PREDICTUM.

All in all, Saturday afternoon should turn out to be a gala occasion. The military display before the game that is being sponsored by Fort Benning authorities will be unique and will afford citizens of Columbus rare entertainment. An added attraction will be the ceremony dedicating the imposing new entrance to the stadium to the world war heroes.

Those who are intending to be present at the game are urged to get there early for two reasons, first, to avoid the traffic jam which is always an integral part of every big football game and, secondly, to witness a spectacle which will well be worth seeing.

A simple way to fill up this column would be to classify the typographical errors that appeared in last week's issue of the Benning Herald. The concluding paragraph of the article dealing with the reorganization of the Infantry School Detachment is a classic example of what we mean. It read:

"The reorganization is expected to inaugurate a more efficient economical administrative and supply system, both in their own tongues and in Latin."

Which all goes to prove that the United States Army is rapidly attaining a high degree of culture.

And speaking of Lieut. Dowdall's talk to the Sojourners, we understand that the distinguished lieutenant was seen in a new role on that occasion, aside from that of proprietor of Ye Olde Taverne and collector of assorted octapi. It appears that Mine Host is even more in his element as an Irish Folk Song singer. More power to you, Lieutenant Dowdall, who would have thought that you were so versatile in your accomplishments?

Biglerville has been confidently expecting great things of its mayor-elect and now it looks like it won't be disappointed. We have it from a reliable source of information that the august Mayor of Biglerville was reported wandering aimlessly around Headquarters last Thursday in an endeavor to obtain a large quantity of towels—yes, towels. Those "in the know" are prophesying a big clean-up day in Biglerville before the week is over.

Little Peggy Ramsey practically stole the show from the other more experienced actors and actresses last Friday and Saturday. Her fine performance has been given due credit elsewhere, but another bouquet won't hurt her reputation.

The 1932-33 dramatic season was ushered in auspiciously enough by the production "Pomeroy's Past." Those who attended one or the other of the two showings are almost unanimously agreed that a finer performance from an amateur cast would be hard to find anywhere.

Sojourners Hear Talk By Dowdall

The monthly meeting of the Fort Benning Chapter No. 8, National Sojourners was held at the Polo Hunt Club on Tuesday evening. A large number of Sojourners and their guests and a number of visitors, representing the Knights of Columbus of Columbus and Fort Benning were present.

The feature of the evening was the talk given by Lt. Harry G. Dowdall, Secretary of the Officers' Club, on his experiences during a recent trip through Ireland and his attendance at the Eucharistic Congress at Dublin. Lt. Dowdall used a series of lantern slides to illustrate his lecture and gave descriptions of every scene. Of special interest were his visits to Blarney Castle, Killarney Lakes, Dublin, and other points famous in Gaelic song and story. The address was punctuated by frequent use of Irish dialect and interspersed by tall stories, a recitation of an Irish poem, and the rendition of an Irish folk-song. There was much of interest and instructional value in the talk, since Lt. Dowdall dwelt at some length on various customs of the Old Country and gave excellent descriptions of different points of interest.

Among the pictures shown were those of the Eucharistic Congress, some of which brought out forcibly the immensity of the ceremony and the careful precision with which the whole proceedings were handled. Upwards of one million people were present at one of the ceremonies, a crowd which presented a very fine example of perfect behavior and orderliness. The military bearing and discipline of the Irish Free State Army were also the subject of special comment.

A special meeting of the Sojourners will be held at the Cricket Tea Room at 7:00 p. m. Tuesday, November 22, for the purpose of initiating candidates into the Daniel Morgan Camp Heroes of '76.

Marines To Play Second Battalion

Realizing her dreams of a fortnight, the Second Battalion will get her chance to go in against the mighty "Jireens" tomorrow week, November 26. The Marines have been pointing toward the Second Battalion for a long time, and now the time has come to settle that mythical dispute.

The game will be played at Memorial Stadium in Columbus, between the 2d Bn., 29th Infantry and the Paris Island marines for the benefit of the American Legion Charity Chest and the Fort Benning Community Chest. It is being sponsored by the American Legion Post of Columbus and a group of Columbus business men among whom are: Tony Sampson of the Metropolitan Cafe, Edgar Chancellor of Chancellor Company, Rex Hubbard of Hubbard Hardware, and L. C. and A. F. Kunze of the Columbus Office Supply Company.

Backed with a strong running attack, the blue clad boys in the line will strive to prove the strength of the mightiest Doughboy team to ever be organized at the post. Saunders, at one half and Prophet at the other will be able to go places, and will

Dramatic Club Scores Hit With First Production Of Current Year

To write a review of an amateur show and be truthful without evasion or mental reservation is a most difficult proposition for it requires covering ground on which angels fear to tread. The President of the Dramatic Club, knowing of no other fearless angel, called on me and, true to type, I responded. I shall go cautiously, however, and those who didn't care for the Pomeroy's Past —if there be any such—are doomed to disappointment if they expect me to announce to the world that Zenobia Zilch had certain idiosyncrasies of enunciation and that Zebulon Zilch should have kept his hands in his pockets part of the time instead of waving them in the air all of the time. Such faults are inconsequential. The play was a hit and it was exceedingly well done by all hands. My space limit is insufficient to permit me to do full justice to an excellent performance by a capable cast. Why should I use a part of it to snipe at minor violations of the professional actor's technique?

The Director (Katherine Cleveland), the Assistant Director (Lieut. L. E. Brady) and every member of the Cast of Pomeroy's Past are individually and collectively entitled to the highest praise for successfully producing Claire Kummer's play. That it was successfuly produced was evidenced by the genuine enjoyment experienced by the entire audience. It was a most difficult play for amateurs to put on successfully and whoever selected the play started the director and cast off with a tremendous handicap. The stuff was there but every bit of it had to be brought out for the play might easily have gone sour. That Mrs. Cleveland and her cast succeeded in bringing it out so effectively is evidence of capable direction and loyal and competent support.

The lines and action of the vehicle imposed upon Amanda (Nelle Totten) and Pomeroy (Lt. Treat), the delicate task of putting the play over in the style which our critical audience has become accustomed to. Less skillful work on the part of the above mentioned co-stars would have resulted in drags, dead stops, and a general flop. Seldom indeed has it been my privilege to witness an amateur actress give as spirited and effective performance of a difficult role as that given by Mrs. Totten and Lt. Treat, as the dominated brother, was equal to every occasion. I therefore award the Croix de Guerre with two palms to the Combat Team of Corporal Cleveland and First Class Fighting Privates Totten and Treat.

Phyllis Sargent as Mary was lovely to look upon, her stage presence left little to be desired, and her voice was surpassingly agreeable to the auditory senses. I regret that she did not have more opportunity to display her histrionic ability. Were I to write the play I would certainly give Mary more to do and I would never, never make her cry.

Felicia Howell as Francesca essayed a most difficult role. Any part involving a dialect is difficult, and particularly so when a born and bred South Carolinian is required to speak with an Italian accent. Francesca got away with her part beautifully, and was convincing in her portrayal. Sometime I hope to see her in a play

Handicap Tennis Tournament Is Well Under Way; Other Matches Planned

The Handicap Tennis Tournament is now well under way. All first round matches have been played and several second round matches have been run off. By the end of the current week, it is hoped that the survivors may be in a position to enter upon the third round.

In the first round ofthe Men's Tournament, Blackmore won from Tindall by default; Giddings defeated Pierson 6-2, 9-7; Newman won from Wampler easily 6-1, 6-0. Wilson won from McCleave 6-3, 6-4; Terrell won from Lovett in three sets 2-6, 6-1, 6-0; Poore downed Gavin 6-3, 6-2; Lynch drew a bye; and Drake defeated Rudolph 6-0, 6-0.

In the second bracket, Bassett defeated Evans 2-6, 6-2, 6-1; Sherburne won from Calhoun; Lt. Harding drew a bye; D. P. Harding defeated Howze 6-0, 6-2; Irving won from Tibbett 6-1, 6-2; Winston won from Blair 6-3, 10-8; and Phillips and Graves drew byes.

In the second round, Blackmore won from Giddings by default; Poore defeated Terrell 9-7, 6-2; Lt. Harding won from D. P. Harding 7-5, 6-1; Irving defeated Winston 6-1, 6-2; and Phillips won from Graves 6-3, 6-3. Several second round matches have yet to be played.

In the Men's Doubles, Bassett and Newman overcame Evans and Evans 3-6, 6-1, 6-2; Evans and Wilson won over Pierson and Tibbett 6-3, 6-2. In the second bracket, Drake and Sherburne won a hard-fought match from Irving and Phillips 6-4, 6-2; and Tindall and Poore defeated Lynch and Harding 6-3, 6-3.

In lieu of a regular handicap tennis tournament, a Ladies' Ladder has been arranged. Any player may move up the ladder by challenging and defeating a player not more than two places above. An additional requirement is that all players must play at leastt six times before the end of the tournament to hold their places in the ladder. The tournament has been divided into two flights; a prize will be awarded to the winner and runner-up in each one.

A Ladies' Doubles Tournament has also been arranged.

In the Boys' Singles Tournament, Richard Tindall, Jr., and Julius Evans are the only two entrees who have advanced to the semi-finals at this writing. In the Boys' Doubles, Tindall and Evans defeated Buffington and Barnes to enter the finals.

The results of the Men's Singles Tournament has clearly indicated that the ranking is inaccurate. This is a natural consequence inasmuch as the Tennis Committee up to the present time has not had the opportunity to pass judgment on a number of the new players to the post.

The first five ranking players in both the Men's and Ladies' Ladder are as follows:

| Ladies' Ladder | Men's Ladder |
|---|---|
| 1. Mrs. Lynch | 1. Drake |
| 2. Mrs. Schneider | 2. Bassett |
| 3. Mrs. Eagles | 3. Sherburne |
| 4. Mrs. Keiler | 4. Lynch |
| 5. Mrs. Gaston | 5. Poore |

Horseshow To Be Held Next Week

The informal horseshow of the Infantry School will be held on November 26 at the Infantry School Stables at 1:00 p. m. The purpose of the show is to encourage the novice riders of the Post, to develop the experienced riders and to afford recreation to the spectators.

There will be fourteen classes in the show, covering practically every phase of horsemanship, for officers, ladies and for enlisted men. Children under sixteen years of age are not allowed to participat i ey n aone allowed to participate in any of the events of this show, as one will be held in the spring, according to a circular issued at Headquarters, the Infantry School.

The officials in charge of the Show are as follows: Major J. B. Thompson, Cav., Supervisor; Captain J. W. Blue, Inf., Manager; Lt. H. M. Monroe, Inf., Asst. Mgr. and Clerk; Capt. J. A. Nichols, Inf., Collecting Ring; Capt. M. E. Halloran, Inf., Gate No. 1; Lt. L. J. Lockett, Inf., Gate No. 2; Lt. O. O. Wilson, Inf., Property; Lt. Col. B. A. Seeley, V. C., and Major J. G. Rife, V. C., Veterinarians. The judges are to be announced.

The Horseshows held at Fort Benning are always among the most colorful and picturesque of the activities which feature the School season. since the equestrian courses play such a large part in the curriculum. They are increasing in popularity, as evidenced by the large number of riders which are turning o ut, and those of the current year are expected to be fully as entertaining as any ever seen here.

Benning Soldiers To Demonstrate

BY JACK GIBNEY

Strains of martial music from the organization band of the largest regular regiment of the United States army will open the football classic of the year when the band of the 29th Infantry march into the Memorial Stadium Saturday afternoon at one o'clock.

Sweeping down the field they will take up their position at the farther end of the stadium, there to play in a platoon from Company C, 29th Infantry, and to set the time while the boys of the "demonstration" regiment give an exhibition of close order drill as it is performed at the Infantry School.

Following this the platoon will go through their paces in a physical drill with the rifle. "Butts' manual" as the drill is known, is a special form of calisthenics used in the army, and the sight of almost a hundred men moving in unison is one of the features of the day.

An exhibition of co-ordination in which the riflemen go through the manual of arms without a spoken command is the last of the fancy drills to be performed by the platoon from Company C, at the conclusion of which they will retire to the end of the field to re-form for the last, and most thrilling, of Fort Benning's contributions to the day's program.

Flanked on each side by a Christie tank, the latest, fastest, and best types of armored mobile equipment used by the army, the doughboys will make an assault march on a nest of machine guns and 37 mm. cannon a.

Today's Fashion

A robe that should be the joy any school girl's heart.
By VERA WINSTON

The shops just now are showing the most attractive nighties, dressing gowns and bath robes for youngsters in place of the utilitarian, rather drab looking garments that used to be considered right for a child. Psychologists assert that drab, unhappy looking clothes give sensitive children an inferiority complex that makes itself felt in later years. And remembering some of the unhappy looking children we have seen, looking so sad in their ugly clothes, we can well believe this. But, it's all very different now as you have probably noticed.

Today we show a sketch of a bath robe that should be the joy of any school girl's heart. It is of French blue flannel with smocking as decoration. This smocking is done in navy and white and goes all round the yoke in back and only partly in front. The buttons are self-covered.

Personals

Maj. and Mrs. Lloyd H. Cook have as their house guests for the Georgia-Auburn game, Maj. and Mrs. Roger B. Williams of Fort Oglethorpe.

Lieut. and Mrs. Edwin D. Post have as their house guests Col. and Mrs. R. D. O'Brien of Fort McPherson, for the weekend.

Lieut. and Mrs. A. H. Dickerson have as their house guests for the Georgia-Auburn game Lieut. and Mrs. Percy Hunt.

DRAMATIC CLUB SCORES HIT WITH FIRST PRODUCTION

Dr. Trebus Hemingway (Chaplain Monahan) was cast for a part in which he had to portray himself. This is one of the most difficult things in play acting, particularly when, as in this case, a gentleman of the Cloth is called upon to portray a gentleman of the Cloth. The role calls for a characterization which brings out by accentuation the distinctive characteristics of a padre, and it is only human for a person in Chaplain Monhan's situation to tone down those very characteristics instead of emphasising them. I therefore award another Croix de Guerre to Chaplain Monahan for a difficult portrayal exceedingly well done.

Edge, the omnipresent butler, was convincingly well handled by Captain Albright. Captain Albright has never been a butler in his life, has probably never had one and if the pay cut persists, may never have one. That he interpreted the part of Edge so capably in spite of these handicaps is evidence of real ability.

Burtram Pierce, as Hilda, made a most attractive nurse. She has an easy stage presence and a charming speaking voice. A patient would never want to get well with Burtram Pierce's Hilda to hold his hand. Moreover you could count on her in a crisis. She didn't even get overly excited when telling about the Villanous Flynn carrying off her charge in a high powered car.

And that brings me to Mr. Flynn, the A. & P. Cowboy from Colorado with an overpowering penchant for Francesca. Lt. Ferenbaugh played in a fitting and accomplished manner. He was well cast for the part and at no time did I fear for the safety of Trebus Hemingway while Flynn was running around with the reverend doctor tucked under his arm.

I am saving for the last my words of unqualified praise for Peggy Ramsey who took the part of Frances in the twin team of Frances and Francis. Surely the grown ups in the cast will not resent it when I say that Peggy's little scene in the second act was a high point of the show. For so youthful an actress to say so many lines without once giving the impression that she was speaking a piece is a rare achievement. Peggy has real stage appeal and I hope that her father and mother are as proud of her as I am.

The show was beautifully staged and lighted and the costuming and make-up were excellent. It would be difficult to improve upon the drawing-room scene designed by Captain Bell and his helpers and appropriately set by Katherine Brady. As for the lighting which was very well handled, we cannot refrain from a word of commendation on Lieutenant O'Flaherty's wandering light switch. No matter what spot on the wall the preoccupied player touched the lights went up or down as desired. It was undoubtedly a great convenience.

And finally we salute the sometimes forgotten men and women—all women in this instance—who constitute the off-stage assistants whose efforts mean so much to the success of a play. Isobel Chance, Meriam Beavers, Ethel Halloran and Martha Watkins did an exceptionally good job in making up the cast without overdoing it and if Dorothy Ferenbaugh failed to provide anything essental in the way of properties, we failed to notice it.

Everything considered, Pomeroy's Past started off the current dramatic year in a manner which augurs well for a successful season. Director, cast and all concerned are entitled to our thanks for two evenings of excellent entertainment.

Girl Scouts

Every Girl Scout in Fort Benning joins me in expressing the most sincere thanks to Miss Page Michie, whose efforts have produced for us three most beautiful progress charts. At the top of each is the Troop crest, a Cardinal, a daffodil and a pine tree. At the left are the pictures representing the names of the patrol.

Each painting is artistically original, being the own work of Miss Michie, who is also examiner for the Artist badge. Again we express our appreciation for this wonderful contribution to Girl Scouting at Benning.

CARDINAL TROOP

We're getting more and more Tenderfoot girls in our troop. Before long we'll all be second class and then what glorious times we will have! Today Betty and Beverly Thorn were invested. I really admire Mrs. Brown a lot, for not getting them mixed, they look so much alike. The rest of us are still figuring out a way t otell them apart.

Girl Scout Headquarters has sent our Captain a questionnaire, asking us about what we want to do "when we grow up," and our favorite types of women. It was very interesting, and to find out what the girls of today are thinking about.

The meeting was so filled with songs, the flag ceremony, and a court of honor, that before we knew it, it was a quarter of six!

DAFFODIL TROOP

We had our first investment on Friday, November 11. At this time Mrs. Heileman, one of our lieutenants, Marion Kelly, Betty Ruth Rarey, Mary Fox and Mary Jane Merrill all became Tenderfoot Scouts.

Did you ever try signalling by winking Well we are going to try it very soon. We signal quite well with flags and today we signalled with our hands, playing a game called "Secret Pass Word." Margie Heileman's patrol came in first, scoring 10 points, Dorothy Negrotto's second, scoring 5 points, and Ann Cota's third, with 3 points.

We had one new girl, Patricia Elliott, join our troop today and we also had a visitor, Bernice Ayers. Of course Patsie is coming every time and we hope Bernic liked us well enough to come again.

I'll bet you didn't know that many people were interested in Scouts, but if you could have seen our list of Examiners you would think different. Of course with all these wonderful Examiners we wanted to take all the badges before the first Court of Awards. But we can't—we have so little time. Just watch us for the next one though.

We are very grateful to all these lovely people for giving us so much of their time and talents and please remember that if we can ever do anything for you, we are always ready more than willing.

PINE TREE TROOP

Last Wednesday we again worked hard and had fun while doing it. Our Captain and Lieutenant took all the girls who were working on their Tenderfoot Test and both taught them and passed them. They mus have done a lot, for nearly all the girls passed, and those that didn't went to Miss Stillwell's house next Monday, and finished up. I believe there is only one girl in the Troop now who has not passed her Tenderfoot test, and she just joined at the last meeting.

The other girls played signalling games with Winnie Stillwell and Tina Hinkley, who very kindly came to help our leaders. In one of the games we played we formed a circle and each girl was given a certain letter. Two a's were given, two L's, two R's, etc., two girls having the same letter. Someone was blindfolded and put in the center of the circle. Then a certain letter was signalled and they had to change places. The one who was caught had to be blindfolded and try to catch someone else.

Then we had our flag ceremony. (You see, this meeting was mixed up as we had quite a lot to do.

Last we had our usual good-night circle and Court of Honor, and everybody went home after a busy meeting.

Army Daughters Hold Rummage Sale

The Army Daughters, Fort Benning Chapter held their annual rummage sale on November 9th and 10th. We feel that the sale was a great success as the sum of $137.60 was raised. This money has been turned over to the Welfare Council for Mrs. Lyman to use at her discretion to cover some of the most urgent needs during the coming winter. We all know that there are a great many demands upon the welfare and we are very glad to feel that we can be of some assistance in this worthy work. We want to thank all those on the post who so generously contributed rummage and to Kayser-Lillianthal who very kindly donated several articles. We also thank Chaplain Howard for letting us use the Sunday School Room of the Protestant Chapel to hold our sale. The Rummage Sale answers two purposes. It enables a great many people to buy at a minimum cost and acquire things that they could not otherwise afford. The proceeds go to help other very needy persons. The demand was greater than the supply this year so please bear in mind that this sale is an Annual Affair and save what you can spare towards this very worthy cause.

President, D. U. S. A.,

Mata Hari

Mata Hari, famous dancer and enemy spy, makes an innocent accomplice of a young Russian aviator, Alexander Rosanoff. As her former lover, Shubin, is about to telephone Dubois, the head of the French Secret Service and involve Rosanoff, the dancer shoots Shubin. But Rosanoff comes to see the latter. The dancer persuades him not to enter and sends him on his flight to Russia with messages, admitting that she loves him. He is shot down. From her hiding-place she hurries to him, finds him blind and promises to marry him. But Mata Hari is arrested as she leaves the hospital. At the courtmartial, her lawyer moves for acquittal, pointing out that no one has seen her in Shubin's rooms the morning of the slaying.

Another smile. Mata Hari's eyes narrowed and she threw back her head as if she were gratified by the success of her thrust.

Had she not on the morning of his death come to visit him in his office with papers on which she needed his help?

"I came to visit him in his office intending to make up our quarrel. I valued his friendship. I did not wish to lose it Since M. Dubois had me searched here, he can doubtless inform you whether I had papers or not."

But, insisted the prosecutor without a sign of irritation, the attendant in Colonel Shubin's office now said that she had left a note on the Colonel's desk just before the search. And afterwards, she had asked for the letter back again. Why, if it were just an innocent message to the Colonel to say she had been in—and since she so valued his friendship she would wish him to know that she had sought, by this means, to renew

Monday, November 7

Anticipation of a short week followed by a three-day week-end does somewhat moderate the Monday blues. Verbally the anticipaters put it "Oh boy, Friday off, Saturday off, Sunday off!" Which did move me to surmise "And Monday off—to the hospital."

Our store of knowledge enriched by the first hand information exuding from members of the Advanced Class whose speeches did give rise to the thought that if the word "now" had been struck from the language this period had been cut short by one-third.

To the Communications Group at nine of the clock and there treated to a review of electricity and magnetism in an hour and a half. For myself who thinks ohm is a place to go I do believe that Lt. Murphy stands in need of a very high potential to overcome my Monday morning amperage of thought and resistance to instruction. As for reviewing this subject for me, if two weeks are not available for it then a good hour and a half might this day have been saved.

Tuesday, November 8

From eight till twelve at the hands of Sahara Sam. He does impress me as being possessed of a secret sorrow. Mayhap he is still frustrated in his search for the activities of his energetic man on a motorcycle.

Our most varied course was, this morning, further extended to include a short period on cleaning spitoons. I do hope that the graded test will require no practical work for the usual demonstration.

Peck, having been cited for involuntary retirement, does offer for sale an almost new pair of Peal boots, the which he says, his poor success at craps precludes his paying for anyhow. If elimination strikes the army I do hope that crapshooters who use no dice will not be overlooked.

Wednesday, November 9

Into the mysteries of International Morse in earnest this day and I doubt not that from now henceforward we shall be carrying, as Maglin says, dit sandwiches in our lunches; a dit sandwich being a dit between two dahs. Maglin did further distinguish himself when the talk sudddenly shifted from athletics to code and he was asked if he was any good at it. Quoth Bill "Sure. I'm a six letter man."

Mr. Roosevelt is a man of action I find for, having only yesterday been elected, he has already raised our standard of living, butter and bacon at the commissary being up in price.

A bit puzzled by a paper in my box which at first sight did appear to be a set of new conventional signs for field fortifications. But that it took me five minutes to recognize the graph as the horse show bulletin, it had reposed in the trash can five minutes longer.

Thursday, November 10

To Shelton Range to complete our record firing with the automatic rifle. I could wish that my Scotch lineage did not so perniciously force itself to the van for to it I am sure is due my propensity for saving ammunition, especially at rapid fire. Yet I suppose that additional rounds could only increase the mottled appearance of my target, which did look for all the world like a fresh shirt after the morning grapefruit. I have no least idea singled out for a horrible example but if they do show me up but once more the Field Artillery has gained a lieutenant.

This, our last session under the Cheer Leader, was carried on into the moonlight with a demonstration of and a talk on experimental automatic weapons which we might more readily and certainly more comfortably have received over the radio at home.

And so away to observe over the week-end. Major Dabney's admonition in his lecture on "Sanitation" that "water should be looked upon with suspicion."

Friday, November 11

My day rest broken by scouting to determine the truth of the report that Bill Triplet's Thursday night gallantry did temporarily furnish competition to the Rialto, aid to the D. S. C., and entertainment to two minions of the law.

Saturday, November 12

A night spent in stoking the Sunbeam with a consequent loss in disposition and no great gain in house temperature. And I was greatly minded of the local realtor who has Fall assured me that it "doesn't get cold in Georgia. Most houses use only fireplaces for heat, and that proves it." Since the tropics and Georgia summers have reduced my blood to water I greatly fear that one of these nights it will freeze in my veins and produce a plumber's bill which is not covered by my contract. And so to the coal-shed.

Lieut. Peep.

By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

Parrot Fever

Psittacosis or parrot fever is being reported in various parts of the United States. During the winter 1929-30, there were recorded 163 cases with 33 deaths.

There is just one way to avoid contracting this rather fatal disease—keep away from parrots and parrakeets. This is the advice of the U. S. Public Health Service.

Southern California has reported the largest number of cases in recent months. Practically all other cases reported from all over the country have been traced to breeding aviaries

Anti-freeze Mixture

Just a reminder that the use of wood alcohol (methanol) in automobile radiators is dangerous. Inhalation of the fumes of wood alcohol may cause death.

Don't use anti-freeze mixtures that contain this poison.

Moisture and Heat

Many of us suffer during the winter months from overheated rooms. We close the house to get warm and forget that proper ventilation and moisture are also needed for our comfort.

A pan of water on the stove or radiator will add much to our well

Looking over old letters, diaries, and check stubs is seldom advisable. When viewed through the all powerful hindsight, the sheer and unadulterated dumbness of many of our past acts is bound to stand out in bold relief. The sad part of it is that if we are honest with ourselves, we cannot escape the realization that a like number of our current brilliant passes will appear just as asinine ten years hence.

it—why, in that case, had she retrieved the note?

It was his smoothness that gave Mata Hari pause, and Maitre Caron, too, accustomed to the tactics of the courtroom, sensed in this a warning. That particular kind of patience denotes the consciousness of strength in reserve, a hand not yet revealed, an ace up the sleeve. It is the calm before the sudden storm which may wreck the ship.

Instead of answering the question by another sally aimed at Dubois, the dancer decided to treat it with apparent seriousness and candour.

"The letter I wrote to Colonel Shubin consisted of just a line or two saying I was sorry for last night and wished he would ring me up. There was nothing else in the envelope. After I was searched, the indignity made me angry. I felt that Colonel Shubin should take better care of his visitors; I decided he should really apologize to me, and as I knew the attendant would tell him I had called, on an impulse, I took the note and went away. Surey, if it had contained anything serious, I would not have cared to walk around with it after a search."

"Where did you go after that?"

She knew that she was on treacherous ground here, and she answered with great care as close to the truth as possible. "As nearly as I can remember, I took a taxi in order to go to a hotel for lunch. Then it was such a pleasant day I decided to get out and walk. I walked for quite a while, thinking of some dances which I had in mind and I was so engrossed that I found I had long passed the hotel. I had something to eat in one of the cafes and hurried back to keep an engagement with my dressmaker."

"We have a statement of a taxi-driver to the effect that he drove you that morning to within a block of Colonel Shubin's house. He had seen you dance and recognized you."

"Better be damned than mentioned not at all."

SECOND SECTION CONTROVERSY

For the past two weeks the conductor of The Flare—whose activities are nothing if not varied—has been functioning in an informal judicial capacity.

Lieutenant Ditdah Raymond and Captain Monte Blue, mindful of the power of our poison pen to make and break reputations, have appealed to us to tell the world the true story of how the Refresher Class came to be reported lost on the morning of their inspection of the stables. This might be easy were it not that the stories differ violently on all of the major points. In the vivid picture portrayed by the voluble communications expert, Lieutenant Raymond appears as a bright star, alert, up-and-coming young officer while Captain Blue has the role of a slow-witted oaf whose crass blundering caused the Secretariat of The Infantry School (represented by Brother Emil Leard) to throw a fit. The horse member's less colorful version pictures Captain Blue as a cool, calm, collected, intelligent and highly capable fellow and Raymond as an excitable, light-waisted, blatherskite whose job as dry nurse to the Refreshers is too big for him.

The controversy had its inception in a telephone call from Captain Blue which mentioned the Refresher Class. This much is known. Where the call came from and what it said are matters of dispute. Either justifiable or without provocation—depending on who is telling the story—this call caused Brother Leard to jump to the conclusion that one whole bus load of Colonels and Lieutenant Colonels had gone astray. Lieutenant Raymond, who was in the office at the time, describes the situation as follows:

"Imagine my feelings. For weeks I had mothered my Colonels as a hen mothers her chicks. I had been mindful of their every need. Their welfare and happiness had been my deepest concern. I had watched over their diet by day and put them to bed by night. I had supervised their goings and comings. Within that very hour I had given the driver of their bus explicit instructions to take them to the stables. And they were lost—lost"!

Rushing out of Brother Leard's presence the distraught Lieutenant ran into the driver of the bus. Without waiting to ascertain the facts, our hero tore into him for not taking his Colonels to the stables as ordered. The astonished driver made a valiant effort to explain, but anyone who has ever tried to get the floor while Lieutenant Raymond is talking knows that the berated chauffeur never had a chance to tell his story until the Lieutenant ran out of breath. When he finally got an opening he relieved the tension considerably by stating that he had delivered the Colonels to their proper destination. Meanwhile a second telephone call had eased Brother Leard's mind on the same point and peace reigned in the office of the Assistant Commandant.

Lieutenant Raymond spent the rest of the morning in tracing the uproar to its source. By noon he had a substantial case against Captain Blue which he generously turned over to the Flare for publication. Meanwhile Captain Blue got wind of the conspiracy to make him the goat and took the stand in his own behalf.

The Raymond version of the case against Blue is this. Having been deputized to meet the Refreshers at the stables at 8 AM, he arrived somewhat late, resplendent in shining leather and brass, with yellow gloves and riding crop to match. Not seeing the class on the premises, he had called the Secretary's office to see what had become of it. Five minutes later he discovered it making the rounds and sent back word to call off the search parties.

According to Captain Blue's own story he had no duties on the morning in question, did not go to the stables at all and telephoned the Secretary's office merely to find out if the Refreshers were going to inspect the horse billets that morning in order to pass the information on to Major Thompson.

Lack of space necessitates the omission of most of the recriminations, and we submit the case to the jury of our highly intelligent public with-

SOCIETY HEADLIGHTS

(With apologies to Felicia Howell)

At a recent social gathering of the Great First Section, the leading—or more correctly, the only—after dinner speaker was Major (former Captain) Francis G. Bonham.

Major Bonham, having that day received his long deferred payless promotion, was introduced in Colonel Stillwell's best manner and responded in his own worst.

"I feel honored indeed to be called upon to address this brilliant assemblage," began the Army's newest Major, getting off to a fairly good start, "And I feel honored in having been honored at being thus honored and I mean to do all that lies in my power to deserve the honor. Having attained the field officer grade, I shall devote my life to acquiring a field officer's figure—"

"How's that! How's that!" interrupted a voice from the far end of the table. The Major turned a frowning eye upon the heckler and then sat down in confusion.

The heckler was Colonel Weeks.

Another casualty of Colonel Stillwell's party was Major Bill Lee.

The dashing Major sat on a long splinter during the course of a rousing round of musical chairs. Anyone who has ever played musical chairs at a Horse Show Cabin party will agree that the Major's severe flesh wound was received in action.

OFFICERS' CLUB JOLTINGS

The Flare is pleased to announce that Mine Host Dowdall has succeeded in reducing his unsolicited private menagerie by one.

Some weeks back, as patrons of the club will recall, an unusually potent specimen of mephitis mephitis went into what it was feared might be winter quarters under the floor of the lobby. Mine Host promptly set the best minds of the Officers' Club Staff to devising ways and means for eliminating the unwelcome resident. This was productive of a number of ingenious schemes whose only defect was that they didn't work. The obvious device of a long pole was productive of nothing more than some additional positive evidence that mephitis, like the star spangled banner, was still there. The most courageous dogs on the post refused to come to grips with so dangerous a foe. Smoke and poison gas only brought on a counter barrage.

The Flare

Next Mine Host tried to entice his uninvited guest into the open by tying a chicken near the entrance to his or her abode. This failed also and Mine Host was in despair over the prospect of a long series of unattended Thursday night dances. Had Colonel Reed been president of the Club, he would have solved the problem easily by tearing down the building, but Colonel Reed was at Fort Howard and Colonel Wallace would not sanction such drastic action.

Then one day mephitis left of his or her own accord, as the case may be, and Mine Host's careworn face resumed its accustomed genial smile. True, he still has the octopus on his hands, but, compared to a live skunk, a pickled octopus is no trouble at all.

ASTRONOMICAL PHENOMENON

The conductor of the Flare, being a temperate man who can take his riding to hounds or leave it alone, did not assemble with the true believers at 5:00 AM on Sunday last. One of our undercover agents was there, however, and sent in the following feature story:

"Early Sunday morning, as the gay followers of the hounds gathered a the stable, the moon—full, luminous and gorgeous, was slowly sinking in the northwest. To furnish additional light for the nocturnal equestrians, the electric lights at the stables were turned on. One of these lights, so tilted and elevated as to throw its beams in one's face as one enters the stables, happened to be in close proximity to the slowly sinking moon, to which it bore a striking resemblance. Captain Brackinridge, the romantic artilleryman, seeing the twin luminaries, was startled. He approached a charming young lady. "Do you see what I see?" he asked in a low, confidential, and slightly nervous voice. "Yes," came the sweet reply, "Isn't the moon gorgeous!"

"But how many moons do you see?" the still dazed captain asked.

"Why only one, silly, the other is an electric light," replied the fair young maiden.

"Then which is the moon and which the light?" countered the captain—gazing on the strange phenomenon in wonder.

"In the meantime a number of the gallant huntsmen had gathered about the couple to view the newly discovered satellite. Since no argument could be reached as to which was the authentic moon, Sir Sidney Negrotto, M. F. H., arbiter of hunt customs and traditions, was called upon for a decision. After a learned exposition of Einstein's theory of relativity, Sir Sidney noting that the group was equally divided in their contentions, made the non-committal decision that half the contenders were right and half wrong.

"The two moons evidently had a demoralizing effect upon Captain Brackinridge, for when the field galloped up to Harp's Creek, it found the gallant artilleryman, unhorsed. Raiments tattered and torn, plastered with much mud and decorated with scratches, standing like Horatius at the bridge defending himself against the onslaughts of the Etruscans."

Ed. Note.—Sir Sidney Negrotto, the earnest advocate of safety first in hunting, informs us that Captain Brackinridge's spill does not spoil the no casualties record which the present masters are so anxious to maintain. The official casualty list takes no account of spills by members of the hunt staff nor the involuntary dismountings of the master's daughter, Betty. And speaking of the latter, we are informed that Betty made a unique "Prince of Wales" on Sunday when her pony, Buster, decided to go between two trees. There being no room for the rider, Betty slipped smoothly over Buster's croup and landed on her feet. If the grown ups can learn to take their spills as gracefully, the Hunt Surgeon—if we have one this year—will have little to do.

CITATION FOR THE WEEK

To Katherine Cleveland and the capable cast of Pomeroy's Past for starting off the current dramatic season with a play that clicked.

Nation's Football Teams Are Facing Crucial Contests

With the 1932 football season rapidly nearing its completion, many of the nation's foremost teams are faced with crucial games this Saturday. I. PREDICTUM will also venture to pick the winners of the contest scheduled on Thanksgiving Day in this issue of the Herald.

Southern California, having proved its superiority on the coast, now looks forward to the Rose Bowl game and Notre Dame. The all-conquering warriors of Coach Howard Jones must, however, defeat Washington, before earning an undisputed right to oppose an eastern eleven in the Rose Bowl classic. The winner of the Colgate-Brown battle to be staged on November the twenty-fourth will in all probability be the Trojan opponent.

In the south, Auburn faces an up-and-coming eleven hailing from Athens, Georgia, which eleven is intent upon shattering the championship hopes of the Tiger. Auburn to date is undefeated and untied. Georgia, on the other hand, has suffered several reverses. Nevertheless, a close game will result when the two elevens come into contact with one another. Present indications point to an Auburn victory by one touchdown, certainly not more than two, and an upset is not unlikely.

Georgia Tech, fresh from its great victory over Alabama, will defeat Florida decisively. The present Yellow Jacket eleven is another Golden Tornado in the making. Duke will make every effort possible to atone for the defeat she suffered at the hands of North Carolina State last Saturday by whipping North Carolina.

Texas Christian, greatly favored to win the Southwestern Conference title after its defeat of Texas, faces a stubborn opponent in Rice, but should triumph ultimately. Texas will win over Arkansas with difficulty. Bucknell will be victorious when it clashes with the much-defeated Georgetown aggregation. Centre will undoubtedly prove superior to Georgetown, Ky.

Washington and Lee will succumb to Maryland. South Carolina will crush Citadel and Tulane will administer a similar dose to Sewanee. Sou-

Weekly Average Of Grid Forecaster Lowers In Upsets

After the debris that resulted from last week's football games had been cleared from the nation's gridirons, title races in four conferences were virtually over with as many others still in doubt.

Utah in the Rocky Mountains, Texas Christian in the Southwest, Nebraska in the Big Six, and Oklahoma Aggies, are almost certain champions, although all have at least one more conference hurdle to overcome.

There were plenty of surprises in last week's results in nearly every sector of the football battleground but most of the decisive action was fought in the southwest, south, and east.

In the southwest, Texas Christian smothered the heralded offensive of Texas, launched two drives of its own, both of which resulted in touchdowns to win with 14-0. The Horned Frogs still must meet Rice and Southern Methodist. Rice, faced with a fine chance to figure in a possible triple tie for the championship, suffered a disastrous 14-7 defeat at the hands of Texas A. & M.

Tennessee and Vanderbilt battled each other to a scoreless tie as Auburn, leading contender for the Conference title, put another step forward in her march to the championship, by defeating Florida 21-6. The Tigers, undefeated this season, broke Florida's five year winning streak over the Plainsmen. If Auburn can get by Georgia this Saturday, the title road will be clear, for the South Carolina game, which follows, is not seriously threatening the brilliant march.

Kentucky's Wildcats rode on the crest of Tulane's mighty Green Wave for over three quarters, but just as they appeared to have won they went down, 6-3, under an irresistible onslaught led by the flying Dutchman, Don Zimmerman. Ralph Kercheval's brilliant punting staved off imminent defeat time after time until, in the closing minutes of the game, Zimmerman broke loose for a 62 yard run which put his eleven in a scoring postion.

Georgia Tech's second team brought woe to Alabama with a 74 yard run by Chick Galloway early in the game and a remarkable stand the rest of the way to win 6-0.

North Carolina State surprised its most ardent admirers by handing Duke a 6-0 defeat. Virginia Poly continued on its march, interrupted by Alabama last Saturday, to win over Virginia 13-0. Furman turned in an upset over South Carolina. North Carolina defeated Davidson but not decisvely 12-0. Louisiana State received its setback of the current season as Centenary unceremoniously trampled on its aspirations for an undefeated season.

In the East, Colgate and Brown continued undefeated, the former beating Syracuse 16-0, while Brown nosed out Columbia, previously unbeaten, with an eighty-yard fourth quarter march. Holy Cross outplayed Harvard for three periods, then had a relapse as the Crimson cashed in on their one scoring opportunity to upset their opponents 7-0.

Yale fought Princeton to a 7-7 tie when an infuriated Tiger was repelled by three separate goal-line stands made by the fighting Eli. Pittsburgh met unexpected competition in Nebraska, were outplayed most of the way, and were lucky to emerge with a scoreless tie. A forward passing attack that started on its own 27 yard line and culminated in a touchdown gave Fordham a 7-0 victory over New York University.

Army scored in every period of the game with North Dakota State and buried the Bisons under an avalanche of eight touchdowns 52-0. The Army attack repeatedly found good holes in their opponent's line and went through for long gains. Cornell's vaunted offensive was too much for Dartmouth, and the Big Green were forced to succumb to a 21-6 defeat. Navy won its first major victory of the season, completely outclassing Maryland and taking the state classic.

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Offering "Expert" with Charles "Chic" Sales and Dickie Moore. Here you have general Nuisance leading the laugh parade. World war veteran. A gay old dog who couldn't be heartbroken . . . hero of many heart battles . . . wearing the wounds of those he loved and left. "Chic" Sale is the Expert. Real good at making you laugh. See him.

THURSDAY: Offering "Love Me Tonight" with Maurice Chevalier, Jeanette McDonald, Charles Ruggles and Charles Butterworth. As the Paris shopkeeper who's got what you want!

ROYAL

Pat O'Brien, who plays one of the principal roles in Columbia's dramatic film, "American Madness," showng Thanksgiving and Friday at the Royal Theatre, reared his Irish pan in German Milwaukee in 199 on the day that was later to be celebrated for the signing of the armistice that ended the World War.

He was playing the young juvenile in German Milwaukee in 1899 on the second act the juvenile hides in a trunk on the stage. The lid stuck. The leading woman entered at the moment that panic seized O'Brien because his trunk lid was stuck. The leading woman saw the trunk cavorting about the stage, this way and that because of O'Briens efforts to break open the lid. The audience howled.

O'Brien's most famous roles were Maxin in "Overture," William Bolitho's play about post-war Germany—which was O'Brien's last stage role—Hildy Johnson, which he made famous in the screen version of "The Front Page," "Hell's House," "Flying High," Final Edition," "The Strange Case of Clara Deane" and now American Madness," for Columbia.

The cast of "American Madness," in addition to Walter Huston and O'Brient, includes Constance Cummings, Kay Johnson and Gavin Gordon.

RIALTO

Charles (Chic) Sales and Dickie Moore, co-featured in "The Expert," Warner Bros. picture coming to the Rialto Theatre next Tuesday and Wednesday will be starred in their next pictures as a result of their characterizations in "The Star Witness' and "The Expert."

The success of both pictures caused Warner Bros. and First National pictures to make each player a star. Dickie, six years old, will be the youngest star in Hollywood on release of his next picture, "Rags To Riches." Sale's first starring vehicle will be "Competition."

In "The Expert," Sale again portrays an old man, using virtually the same make-up utilized in "The Star Witness." Dickie Moore appears as an orphaned waif befriended by Sale and eventually taken with him into the Home for the Aged, admission to which was gained by a technicality as a result of a by-law permitting admission to "gentlemen under ninety."

As Old Man Minick, Sale meddles into the life of his son and daughter-in-law, with whom he has come to live in the city. He tried to run things, to tell women how to raise children, and to "reform" in a thousand other ways. His good intentions, however, go astray, to the vast enjoyment of audiences. His role gives him an opportunity to present wholesome humor, drama and pathos.

The large cast of "The Expert," which was directed by Archie Mayo, incudes Lois Wilson, Earle Foxe, Ralf Harolde, Adrienne Dore and Walter Catlett, as well as thirty-three veterans of stage and screen in the roles of Minick's cronies.

Q. M. D.

There is much talk these days of the possibility of currency inflation, and the resulting increase in prices over the country. Apparently in the Quartermaster Detachment this inflation has already taken place. Water in the organization last week reached a new peak price of $5.00 a gallon. This was the common, ordinary, every-day H2O. At least that is the price two members of the detachment paid for it. Neither got much of a bargain, but both Joe Galloway and James L. Parrish hope for a drop in price in the near future.

Marshall E. Taylor of the detachment was once upon a time a corporal. Now he is wearing the biggest pair of staff sergeant stripes he could purchase in local markets. He was appointed to the third grade on the first of this month by the Quartermaster General. First Sergeant Gross is now awaiting word from him as to the proper time to order from Sears-Roebuck a cuckoo clock for a wedding present.

Members of the detachment are wondering what Judge Cotton and Tiger Stone will have to talk about, now that the presidential campaign has come to a close. Possibly what is now needed is a race for mayor of North Highlands. If Grumpy Gordy could be persuaded to enter such a race, the general opinion is that he'd win by a landslide. He would not need to make any campaign addresses. All he'd need to do would be to croon some of his heartbreaking love ballads, and at least all of the feminine element would stumble over each other to put an X by his name on the ballot.

FOOTBALL FORECASTER LOWERS AVERAGE IN UPSETS

by a score of 28-7.

Detroit showed plenty of power in turning back the powerful Villanova eleven by the decisive score of 2-12. Detroit penetrated the opposing line consistently all afternoon.

In the midwest, Michigan whipped Chicago 12-0 to keep her record clear of defeats. A step behind the Wolverines was Purdue, who trimmed Iowa 18-0. Michigan faces Minnesota this week. If she overcomes the Gophers, the Big Ten title will rest in her hands beyond a shadow of a doubt. But should Minnesota do the unexpected, and it is not without the realm of possibility, and defeat the Wolverines, the championship will go to Purdue. Thus, it can readily be seen that the conference title hinges entirely on the outcome of the Minnesota-Michigan game. In other Big Ten games, Wisconsin tripped Minnesota 20-13 and Illinois upset Indiana 18-6. Wisconsin's better aerial offense and defense provided the determining margin in the first of these two games.

The University of Pennsylvania Saturday tasted Ohio State's sample of Western Conference football to the sting of a 19-0 defeat. The Buckeyes pounded away for three touchdowns and only once allowed the Quakers to come within scoring distance. Notre Dame uncovered plenty of power in overwhelming Northwestern 21-0. Melinkovitch of the Irish provided the outstanding feat of the brilliant contest by running ninety-nine yards to a touchdown on the opening kickoff. Oklahoma and Kansas both won Big Six victories, defeating respectively Iowa State and Missouri.

In the far west, Oregon's strong outfit offered little resistance to Southern California and the Trojans won a notable 33-0 victory. Washington and Washington State played a scoreless tie as Stanford was winning its first game in four weeks over the California Aggies. Stanford's big red football machine crushed their opponents 39-0. California beat Idaho 21-6 and Orgeon State conquered Montana 35-6.

As a result of the frequent upsets throughout the country, prophets fared remarkably poorly. I. PREDICTUM was no exception, as his average plunged to comparative depths, .684.

I. S. D. NOTES

The recent reorganization of the Detachment has given the commanding officer, Major Catron, time for recreational pursuits. He has just finished a three day fishing trip to Dead Lakes, and tho no visible results were seen around the organization, it is hoped that the family larder received the expected addition.

And continuing the theme of recreational pursuits (?) the major departed on Wednesday morning for a lecture tour to the reserve officers of Knoxville and Chattanooga, Tenn. Page Mr. Cook of Tours, Inc.

And still another one to take advantage of the excellent work of an able staff of enlisted specialists (see Benning Herald, last week) was Master Sergeant George Mowry, who took a three day pass to visit the Old Homestead at Mariana. Possibly to get everything lined up for that old time home-coming on Thanksgiving. A good time was had by all, and Sgt. Mowry was back at the job bright and early Monday morning.

Gibney, of the public relations office, wishes it stated that the attempt, recently made by a certain embryo scribe in the 29th Infantry News Notes, to steal the title of "craziest writer" from his minute stack of laurels, is one of the most picayunish attempts to gain unearned prestige that has come to his notice in some time. Such an act of petty larceny, however, is only what could be expected from such a quarter, and is not to be confused with the earnest endeavour to win the honor, such as that being carried on by the conductor of "Town Topics" or the author of "On the Q. T." The general factotum of the publicity department has requested that a challenge be issued to the above mentioned dust-digging recorder of 1st Bn. Hq. Co. to meet him at any and all times in open warfare conducted within the columns of this journal, and may the best man carry home the cast-lead plaque inscribed "etaoin shrdlu."

It is rumored that Sgt. Al Durden is taking up a collection to install a telephone for a certain stenog at Headquarters. Ask Al, he knows.

Bill Fanning is about to make his annual expenditure of ninety cents, count them, for repairs on the antiquated gravel-agitator with which he tours the highways and byways of the reservation. The vehicle affectionately known as "Hazel," is limping along on one, so Bill intends to make contact at a few points (ouch).

Add unexplained mysteries: Why was Barney Knox seen on "Jawbone Corner" one afternoon last week. And why the hurried dash on his part in a daily attempt to catch the 12:45 bus for town? 'Splain dat, please!

BAND

In the verbal straw vote of the recent Presidential election by the members of the Band, the Republican party was overwhelmingly defeated. It was also voted to create a public office for Pfc. Monroe Lee our eminent statesman and lawyer. In addition to Mr. Lee's above mentioned qualifications he is a bass player in our band.

The band journeyed to Tuskegee Institute last week where the annual football game between that team and the 24th Infantry was played which ended in a victory for the Happy Hearts. The Band furnished the music and about eighty-five percent of the morale.

Our orchestras were busy as follows last week: Monday nite, Pierce's Auditorium, Columbus; Tuesday nite, Polo Club, Wednesday nite, Polo Club and 24th Infantry Service Club; Thursday nite Officers' Club; Friday nite, Service Club No. 1. Otherwise there was very little to do at nite.

COMPANY "G"

The Company Scribe has returned from a short tour visiting several of the local towns. He reports that the experience was great in that it afforded him a chance to appreciate his reenlisting, upon seeing a few people work so hard in the field.

Word has been received from Sergeant Williams that he has long ago arrived in Savannah, Ga., which place was his destination when he started out for the trip in a car which he practically had built himself. This news was encouraging as many of us doubted he would arrive home without some mechanical trouble.

Batton Punches Out Decision Over Jack McVey

Kavoes Mark Good Card At Post Gym On Colored Card

Stepping fast all the way, Cotton Batton punched out a clean-cut decision over Jack McVey, of New York, last Monday night in the Post Gym. Batton was never in real trouble throughout the fight, keeping his left hand in Jacks face constantly.

Batton, of course, fought his regular style of fighting, keeping on the defense at all times. His counter-punching was something about which to marvel. That right hand would flash over to the chin and back like an automatic hammer. Time and again he would set McVey back on his heels with stiff left jabs that would have stopped any ordinary fighter.

The whole card was a good show, with only one slow fight, and it had its redeeming points. The curtain raiser was maudlin, but the remainder of the fights made one forget all about it.

Seldom Heard displayed wonderful stamina in coming from the floor every round for five rounds of the scheduled eight round semi-final. Willie Bush simply had too much left hand for the rugged soldier, and Heard can verify that.

It was pitiful the way Heard would come up from the canvas and try to slip over a sleep producer to the chin, but Bush was a bit too smart for him. Heard would get going strong, and in would come that frightful left hand, and Heard would listen to the birdies for a while, and then up again and at him like Jazz Magoni umpiring bases . . . on his toes. In the fifth round, however, Seldom had to postpone hostilities to a later date, the count of ten being pronounced then and there over his kneeling form.

P. G. Carson sung a trip-hammer at Tiger Thompson early in the second round and that ended the fight for these two. It landed right on the bulb, and now Thompson is trying to find out what it was about. Well . . . there'll be another time.

Pointing For Georgia

Boots Chambliss, mainstay in the Tiger line, will be in there tomorrow at Memorial Stadium, doing his bit for Auburn. Boots has played stellar football all this season, and will probably stand out in tomorrow's play in the line.

Lightning Lige was giving Tarzan Nelson fits in the tummy when the Judges awarded the fight to said Nelson on a foul. It looked as though the blow in question was legal as they make them, but people see differently all the time. The judges were close to the ring, and should know what thy were talking about.

Willie Branch and Dick Russell were at one another's throats for four rounds, and in the end were back where they started from. It was a draw, and a good one at that. Time and again it looked as though first one and then the other would be able to pass over the knockout drops, but it was not to be . Maybe they will be matched again sometime in the near future.

Six Cylinder Olds must have blown a cylinder head right after cranking up, or maybe Explosive Banks put TNT in his gasoline. Any way, he was scratched at the starting line in the first round, and is now in the garage for repairs.

Two Polo Games Scheduled To Be Played At Post

After a week's postponement on account of inclement weather, the Fort Benning Polo season opened last Sunday at French Field with a round robin. All four teams participated in the afternoon's sport.

The poor condition of the field. due to recent rains, and other conditions made the play rather slow, but brought to light much valuable talent to the individual teams.

Two games will be played Sunday afternoon starting at 1:30. Parking space will be available for those desiring to remain in their cars while the games are in progress.

The Students flashed wonderful form in the short time they played last week, and will probably give good account of themselves this year. The 29th Infantry team has been working together longer than any of the other teams, giving them a small lead in form over the other teams.

The Artillery is a little behind the Free Booters in form and play, but are expected to snap out of it soon. Good games have always been turned in on French Field, because of the system of handicapping the individual players lending more interest to the game than would be otherwise.

Irish Drop Game To Bowden Last Week Six-Nothing

The Fighting Irish of the First Battalion, 29th Infantry journeyed to Bowden Armistice day and played Bowden College a wonderful game of football. The game was a close affair, being played on even terms until the closing of the last period, when Bowden slipped over a touchdown, making the score 6-0, where it stood at the end of the game.

Stevens and Reddock were powerful threats for the soldiers all through the game, but were unable on several occasions to convert their gains into touchdowns.

Everyone was well pleased with the game, and that evening the members of each team and the coaching were roundly entertained by the student body.

The Irish are now ready to stand and give the toughest kind of opposition all they want in the Intra-Mural league. The coaches are confident that the Irish will have a better team in the field this year than that of last year, and that was some team.

In The Dressing Room

Little Known Anecdotes About Famous Football Teams

By I. Predictum

This episode occurred in the days when Hickman, All-American, performed in the line for Tennessee.

Tennessee was playing New York University. At the end of the game, which the Volunteers won, "Chick" Meehan, N. Y. U. coach, was haranguing his eleven in the dressing room. Having noticed the stellar play of Hickman, he wished to find out just how good Hickman was from one of the players own lips. So he called upon the man who would naturally know more about him than any other—the man who played opposite him. The following conversation ensued:

Said "Chick" Meehan: "This Hickman was a pretty tough baby, wasn't he?"

"When you say that, coach, you don't know the half of it. I'll say he was tough."

"Just how tough was he?"

The big two hundred pound guard pondered the question for a moment, before he replied.

"Well, coach, he was so tough that when he called me a damned Yankee, I pretended I didn't hear him."

Added Attractions At 29th Dance

For the first time in fiive years, the members of the 29th Infantry orchestra will have the privilege tonight of participating in one of the regimental dances without blowing his lungs to thunder.

The dance held tonight in the 29th Infantry Theatre under the auspices of the 29th Infantry, Sergeant Bauer in charge, will have as musicians Shim Carlson's Miamians. They have played to dances all over the south, and wherever they have played, return engagements have been arranged.

In addition to the added attraction of a new orchestra, there will be a stage show worked in during the intermissions. The feature atraction of the stage show will be the Kim-

Happy Hearts Win To Continue March For Sou. Crown

A hard driving Happy Heart football team, sent the strong Edward Waters College Gators down to a 13 to 12 defeat in a hard and well played game of football at the Doughboy Stadium, Armistice Day. Friday's victory leaves the Happy Hearts in the running for championship honors in southern colored football. In fact the 24th Infantry team is the only team to defeat the Tuskegee Tigers this season.

Boasting a line that held against opposing drives like a stonewall and a backfield that ripped and charged until the Gator line was ripped to shreds, the Happy Hearts took the play away from the visitors and clearly outplayed them throughout the game. Barnes, Meyers and Hale were the big guns of the Happy Hearts' driving power. The entire Happy Heart line was a concrete defense with no individual stars.

The game opened with Holton kicking off for the Gators. The Happy Hearts failed to gain on two plays from their 20 yard strip and Meyers booted out of danger. The teams marched up and down the field as Holton and Meyers exchanged punts with no noticeable gains. With the ball on their 40 yard strip the Gators

BY B. B. S.

Taking everything into consideration, we should, offhand, say that Sergeant Bill Cody gets better looking each day. Maybe it would be better to say he is easy on the eyes to some luckless soul who has lost a mess kit. Bill can always find a way to help the other fellow out of a difficulty, and strives to do it as often as is good for the victim.

For some reason or other, we are always thinking of our rations, and at this time we can think of no more appropriate man about which to comment along these lines than Sergeant Frank Morrow of "A" Company, 29th Infantry. You should see his meals! They are regular spread-feasts, as they used to say back on Wallashalogue Creek, where the cows used to get bogged in the fall when grass had become short. Excuse it please! We were talking about mess sergeants, weren't we? Well, he is up among the best, and you may lay to that.

Give us time, now, and we'll think of something to put in this paragraph . . . Oh! Sergeant Bauer, down about the 29th Infantry Theatre is throwing a big blowout for the regiment tonight. He's got the Kimbrell Sisters and all that thrown in with the dance. They say that the Kimbrell Sisters are the southern rivals of the Boswell Sisters, in that their harmoney is excruciating to the most exacting degree.

Jack Harper, (snaggled toothed genius of army gridirons), will be out there battling with the rest of the post this year. He is barking signals this year for the Artillery, and has old Skipper back there with him. Skipper went right in that line, and with his speed and fortitude make a name back there with the ponies this year.

The Tank Weekly is getting out some mighty good editions this year, due to the tmiely efforts Lt. A. A. Goodwyn and Corporal W. B. Stearns. Wide-awake reporting on the part of members of the organizations has turned it into a mighty enightening sheet. More power to the Tank Weekly.

Haven't seen Staff Sergeant Warren Lantz of the Finance much lately. Warren used to labor mighty diligently with the Infantry School News in the days before Congress took a hand and converted it into a Benning Herald. Call around sometimes, Lantz, and let us compare notes a bit. Might be we would agree once in a while.

Speaking of loyalty, Major Frasier of the 2nd Bn., 29th Infantry staff is certainly out there pulling for that wonderful football team of his. Pointing toward the "Jireens" for their first test has the boys all on edge, but the Major is out there battling with them, trying to keep up the pep. He certainly believes in his "boys."

HAPPY HEARTS CONTINUE MARCH

opened a drive. Holton got loose and was stopped by Hill on the Happy Heart 40 yard line. On the next play Holton shot a long pass to Gilmore, substitute end, who took the ball on the 8 yard line and lunged over for a touchdown. Holton failed to kick goal. Score, Gators 6, Happy Hearts 0.

The Happy Hearts began driving from their 30 yard strip, following the kickoff. Cavalryman Barnes picked holes in the opposing line and was unstoppable. Myers crashed off several gains and Collins piled up yardage on two brilliant end runs. The Happy Hearts completed five first downs but were stopped by a 15 yard penalty in the shadow of the vistors' goal post. Holton kicked and it was the Happy Hearts' ball of the 50 yard strip as the quarter ended.

Second Quarter

On two plays Barnes gained 13 yards and a first down on the visitors' 37 yard line. Line smashes brought another first down on the 28 yard strip. A penalty put the Happy Hearts back to the 43 yard line. Lieutenant Johnson pulled Barnes and Meyers from the backfield and sent in Underwood and Hale. Baugh and Collins were also pulled and Lee and Phillips sent in to make a fresh backfield. The change bore fruit. With Hale and Phillips lugging the ball the Happy Hearts marched down the field on a steady drive that ended when Hale crashed over for a touchdown. Hale kicked goal and the Happy Hearts were lead

KELLS PLAY MARINES

be greatly aided by the cunning of Pooch Derrick and Blackstone or Oiakri.

Lt. Ives, coach of the Kells, (as the Second Battalion is dubbed), feels that he has the greatest scoring machine the team has ever produced. The strength of the ends and tackles are wonderful this year, while the center of the line remains as always, almost impenetrable.

There will be Carlyn at center, or Jim Kelley, equally as good, and these boys can play that position. They are strong and fast, having a lot of experience behind hem. Of the two, Kelley is the faster and larger, measuring about six feet, and weighing around 180 pounds. He has picked up the system of defense as taught by Lt. Ives very rapidly, and will in all probability see service against the Leathernecks.

Moody and Krewson will flank whoever is at center, and will show great stuff through the game. Krewson is the smallest guard to play in this district. He will scale the beam around 145, but he is all muscle and nerve. He has played a wh ale of a game at Benning for the past three or four years, and shows no signs of slowing up yet. Moody is the type who never shows fear, no matter how hard the opposition, and digs in all the way. They make a wonderful pair.

DePratt and Cappell will probably start at tackles, stopping the plays before they getstarted being their motto. The ends will probably be McAllister and Marquis, which is enough said.

No reports have been received as yet from the camp of the Marines as to what players will be brought here, but they have been raising general cain all up and down the East Coast for the past four weeks. Some of their games have been played under adverse conditions, but always the Islanders gave a good account of themselves.

Tickets for the game are on sale at Fort Benning at the Officers' Club, Post Exchange, Athletic Office, Book Shop and all Orderly Rooms. . . . Jawbone. It was decided that the changes.

Third Quarter

The first string backfield went back in for the third quarter. The teams exchanged punts with no gain. Near the end of the quarter the Happy Hearts took to the air. A short pass Baugh to Barnes gained 7 yards and a first down on the visitors' 40 yard line. A pass Meyers to Lee was batted down. On the next play Lee shot a pass 30 yards to Baugh, who was downed on the visitors' 8 yard mrak. Barnes twisted through the line for 8 yards and a touchdown. Meyers failed to kick goal. Score, Happy Hearts 13, Gators 6.

Fourth Quarter

The Gators came out fighting in the final quarter. Several times they tried an air offensive but each time it was smothered by the Happy Heart defense. With three minutes to play. Two completed passes with Holton hurling and Bennett receiving put the visitors deep in Happy Heart territory. A 15 yard penalty put the invaders on the home team's 14 yard line. A pass Holton to Bennett and a twisting sweep around right end gave the Gators their second touchdown. On an attempted quarterback sneak, Holton carried the ball over for the extra point and a tie score but the play was called back and the Gators penalized for off-side. An attempted pass fell short and the Happy Hearts were leading, 13 to 12. The last minute of play saw Winston intercept a Gator pass on his 30 yard line. The Happy Hearts were smashing at the Gator line as the gun ended the game.

HEADQUARTER BATTERY

It seems that the boys are enjoying their wood clearing detail in the vicinity of Bouton Hill. It looks rather good to see the boys line up for that good chow that Sgt. Osbon sends out every day.

If Sgt. Dodd doesn't stop getting so many phone calls, we'll have to install a new phone for his private use. Maybe he can find time to let Cpl. Hurst use it for a few minutes.

It now appears that John Latini our battery barber is the king of shieks. From all reports he is related to the late Rudolph Valento and all the girls know it.

Sgt. Sweger's mother and sister are visiting the post and will occupy quarters in Block 18. We all hope that their visit will be a pleasant one.

Several men have applied for permanent leather class "A" passes. The ones in use won't stand the test of being used every night. Cheery, Watson, Barentine and Chavis. Others in need of a pass of this kind see the saddler by noon November 30, 1932.

Lt. Studebaker has charge of the Artillery Horse Show Team agin this year. The team was a great success last year under his supervision and we all hope that this year will still be a greater success.

Cpl. Pike and Sgt. McCallum are still playing their usual game of golf every Sunday when the weather permits. Cpl. Pike played old man Shredded Wheat, a cousin of the Smith Brothers, last Sunday morning and beat him one up and two to go.

Two weeks ago the battery enjoyed a pig hunt in the vicinity of Weem's Bottom. Several pigs were caught and we expect to have a barbecue in the near future. Private Shove got lost from the pack and somebody captured him for a wild hog. and brought him to camp. For the last week his meals have been served to him from the mantel in the day room.

NATIONS FOOTBALL TEAMS ARE FACING CRUCIAL CONTESTS

thern Methodist should repulse Baylor.

In the East this Saturday, Harvard meets Yale in what invariably turns out to be one of the most colorful games of the year. Neither eleven has displayed exceptional power this year. Yale boasts only of one victory. Harvard last week defeated the powerful Holy Cross team 7-0, although the Crimson were outplayed in every period. The contest is a toss-up, with I. PREDICTUM casting a reluctant vote for Harvard.

The Fighting Irish of Notre Dame, still smarting with the defeat handed to them by Pittsburgh, will beat Navy just as decsively as they did Kansas and Northwestern, if not more so.

Army meets a good second rate eleven in West Virginia Wes., but so was North Dakota State a good second rate eleven. Draw your own conclusions. Pittsburgh and Columbia will encounter little opposition in Carnegie Tech. and Syracuse. Villanova should emerge victorious over undefeated Temple, but the outcome of this game is doubtful.

Boston College regularly defeats Boston University each year. This year should prove no exception. Holy Cross will conquer Manhattan. Lafayette will down Lehigh.

In the midwest, undefeated and untied Michigan faces fast and powerful Minnesota with the Conference Championship hanging in the balance. Michigan, bceause of its great record and because of the potential power it has displayed on sundry occasions, is the favorite, but an upset is all too probable. This game almost qualifies as a toss-up, and the Wolverines will have to display a better brand of football than that exhibited against Indiana and Chicago to win. Should Michigan lose, Purdue, a short step behind the leaders, will be the recipient of the championship for the Boilermakers have a comparatively easy opponent in Indiana.

Other Big Ten games find Ohio State opposing Illinois and Wisconsin pairing off with Chicago. The first named should be the winner in each case by a fairly decisive margin. Northwestern will defeat Iowa and Kansas should be victorious over Kansas State. The Michigan State powerhouse faces a formidable opponent in Detroit, conqueror of Villanova by a one-sided score. A genuine battle royal should ensue with Michigan State, by virtue of her tremendous scoring punch, winning the victory.

Iowa State will take Drake into camp. Utah, prospective Rocky Mountain champions, will defeat the Colorado Aggies. Ohio University will win over Ohio Wes. beyond a shadow of a doubt. Grinnell will be smothered by the Oklahama Aggies.

In the far west, the Golden Bears of California meet the Stanford Indians. The winner of this epic contest is conjectural and your guess is as good as mine. Your prophet, however, frankly admits that he is just about fed up with Stanford. Some time ago he picked Stanford to win on three successive Saturdays, and she lost each time. One vote for California. Fordham, determined to make further conquest of the West, meets Oregon State, one of the weaker elevens on the coast this year. Playing a "hunch", I. PREDICTUM picks the western eleven despite the fact that the Rams boast a victory over powerful St. Mary's.

Gonzaga will triumph over South Dak. Santa Clara will defeat the Olympic Club. U. C. L. A. is heavily favered to whip Montana.

THANKSGIVING DAY GAMES

In the South, Tennessee meets its traditional rival, Kentucky. Tennessee has the better record, being undefeated. Precedent, however, would indicate a tie game. In the last five games these two elevens have met, three have resulted in ties. The Vols should win but the margin will be slight.

If Vanderbilt's vaunted defensive can hold "Hurry" Cain, brilliant Alabama half-back, in check, the Commodores chances of winning will be greatly enhanced. A scoreless tie is not an impossible outcome of this game. Vanderbilt should win by a hair.

Undefeated Centenary should overcome Arkansas with some difficulty. Texas is favored to defeat Texas A. & M. Furman, with an excellent record behind it, will nose out Clemson and may win decisively. Virginia Poly will crush V. M. I. Maryland and North Carolina State will triumph over John Hopkins and Virginia respectively. North Carolina State will add another scalp to its belt, that belonging to South Carolina. The Oklahama Aggies will defeat Arizona with some to spare.

In the East, the battle between Brown and Colgate is the cynosure of all eyes. Both elevens are undefeated or untied; in addition Colgate is the only team in the country that has survived the current season without having her goal-line crossed. Brown has faced the more formidable opponents of the two. In the course of the season, she has overcome Yale, Harvard, Holy Cross, and Columbia. Colgate has defeated N. Y. U. Brown has a fast, shifty backfield, with an abundance of scoring punch. Colgate possesses a very capable defense backed by an extraordinarily fine offense.

Cornell will launch its powerful offensive on the cohorts of Pennsylvania. A scoreless tie may result from the encounter. Cornell has a slight edge. The purple warriors of N. Y. U. will easily down Carnegie Tech.

In the Midwest, no very important games are scheduled. Marquette will crush Drake, Nebraska will cinch the Big Six Championship by defeating Missouri, and Dayton will win the annual game wth Wittenberg.

In the far west, St. Mary's should defeat Oregon closely, not by more than a touchdown at the most, and the University of California in Los Angeles should win a slender victory over the powerful Washington State eleven.

The mighty Trojans of Southern California have only Washington to overcome before gaining a clear right to the title of coast champions. Your prophet would consider it blasphemy to choose any other winner but U. S. C. More anon.

BENNING SOLDIERS TO DEMONSTRATE

the opposite end of the stadium. Rumbling and clanking, the tanks will move forward, directing their deadly fire at the enemy in an attempt to crush all resistance, while the foot troops will try to capture the hostile sronghold with a rush attack. Blank ammunition will be used to add realism to the mimic warfare, and the victor of the military battle will be decided when the last shot is fired.

BENNING HERALD

TOWN TOPICS

We happened to overhear the following choice bit of conversation at the Georgia-Auburn football game last Saturday. During the entire last half our attention was divided between the contest itself and the slightly mellow disputants behind us. Three people were involved in the discussion, one a Georgia rooter, one an Auburn fan, and the third a woman, the wife of the rabid Auburnite. The score at the half, as our readers will doubtless remember, was seven to nothing in favor of Georgia.

Georgia rooter: (at start of third quarter) "Harry, do you honestly believe that Auburn is going to win this game. Answer me straight from the heart."

Auburn fan: "Aw, take another drink of Coca-Cola.

Georgia rooter: "I might concede Auburn a chance if the team wasn't so dumb. Why, a scientist tried to probe the brains of the Auburn players before the season started to find how intelligent they were and all the probes were either dulled or broken."

Auburn fan: "Yeah? Well, you're always shooting off your mouth about how brainy Mott is. The other day somebody put a dime under a telescope and asked Mott to look through the lens and say what is was. You know what Mott said? He said he didn't know for sure but it looked like a manhole cover.

Wife of Auburnite: Honey, where is that man running with the ball? Oh, did you see that? He didn't need to throw him down so hard. This is simply dreadful, and, Harry, you're making such a fool of yourself. I wish I hadn't come."

Auburn fan: "I wish I hadn't brought you. Get down in front, you overgrown elephants. Why the hell did you come all the way to a football game to get into a fight? You could have got into a fight at home."

Georgia fan: "Hitchcock is one of the worst punters I ever saw. He's being outkicked by at least twenty yards. Who ever suggested that bush-leaguer as an All-American?"

Auburn fan (now throughly irate): "Hitchcock a bush-leaguer? (Horror-stricken) Man, you're blind. Take another drink of Coca-Cola and get hep to yourself."

(At this moment, Hitchcock runs eighteen yards through a broken field to score a touchdown. Extra point is placekicked.)

Auburn fan: "You make me sick. Now, what do you think of Hitchcock, my boy?" (Patronizingly)

Georgia rooter: "Same as I always thought."

Auburn rooter: "Here, take another drink of Coca-Cola and brace up." (hands him a bottle that does not even remotely resemble a Coca-Cola bottle, but we will pass over that.)

Wife of Auburnite: Harry, will you stop making a fool of yourself. Everybody is looking at you, and laughing. Yes, laughing. I'd be ashamed of myself, if I were you."

Auburn rooters "Well, you're not me, and besides that's Joe they're laughing at."

Georgia rooter: "What's the matter with that Georgia line? They don't seem to be holding at all."

Auburn fan: "Oh, a punk team always withers in the last half. You

Four Families Imperiled When Fire Guts House

Fifteen lives were imperiled and property valued at several thousand dollars was destroyed in an early morning fire which partially burned a four-family wooden apartment house at 507 Quiri Street, last Sunday. As nearly as can be determined, the fire broke out at four o'clock. The prompt response of the fire depratment, who arrived at the conflagration a few minutes later, probably averted a tragedy.

For a while it was feared that the fire might spread to the flimsy and highly inflammable buildings in the district formerly known as Block 23, but the efficient work of the firemen in subduing the flames prevented what might have been a catastrophe.

The fire, of which the cause has not been determined, originated in the second story apartment occupied by Lieutenant Harry W. Halterman, his wife, and their infant child, and spread rapidly towards the other three apartments in the building. The flames quickly travelled through the attic and were breaking through the ceiling of the second floor apartment occupied by Lieutenant Robert A. Ports, and his two sisters, Miss Margaret Ports and Miss Elizabeth Ports, and their house guest, Miss Helen Bach, when the firemen arrived. They were aroused by the firemen whose timely action probably saved them from being trapped in the blazing building.

Flames also burned their way into the first floor apartment directly under Lieutenant Halterman's quarters and did considerable damage there. Lieutenant Eugene W. Ridings, his wife, and infant child, the occupants of this apartment, left the building when awakened by the flames. The fourth apartment, on the ground floor, was occupied by Major Dan D. Howe, his wife and their three year old child; Mrs. Mahlon Kirk, Mrs. Howe's mother, and Mrs. Katherine Douglas, their house guest, who made their way to safety through dense clouds of suffocating smoke.

Fire companies from two stations were dispatched to the blaze when the alarm was given at 4:10 a. m. When the firemen arrived three minutes later, flames were shooting high into the air. Five heavy streams were quickly directed onto the flames which were under control within twenty minutes and completely extinguished within an hour. The battle against the fire was carried on with great hazard to the firemen, and their efficient work in saving the building from entire destruction is highly commendable.

Damage to the building was estimated at $2.500 while the damage to the contents will amount to several

Turkey Day Celebrated At Benning In Customary Army Manner

Fort Benning observed Thanksgiving yesterday in the manner decreed by tradition in the Army. Major General Campbell King issued orders which suspended all duties except the necessary guard and fatigue duties for the national holiday, and the classes of the Infantry School were given a day's holiday.

All companies, batteries and similar organizations served special holiday dinners in their mess-halls with turkey as the piece-de-resistance. Many of the soldiers had members of their families and friends as guests.

Aviation Pioneers Honored

With Old Glory flying proudly over it, the beautiful granite memorial, shaped like a wing, to Orville and Wilbur Wright, America's pioneers of avaition, is shown after its unveilng on the spot where the brothers made their first flight near Kitty Hawk, N. C. The unveiling ceremony was performed by Miss Ruth Nichols, New York aviatrix, who is shown in insert as she made the dedicatory address. A large gathering of notables in aviation and government circles attended the ceremonies.

Benning Is Foremost In Tennis Field

Fort Benning's encouragement of tennis as an exercise for the maintenance of physical fitness has placed the post in a foremost position in this field of sport and has attracted favorable attention in high war department circles.

F. Trubee Davison, assistant secretary of war, in a letter to Major General Campbell King, commandant of The Infantry School, expresses his approval of the cultivation of tennis as an army recreational activity, and compliments the showing made by Fort Benning players in the army tournament conducted under the auspices of the Army Central Tennis Committee, in Washington, D. C., this year.

"As chairman of the Army Central Tennis Committee, I wish to express to you the appreciation of the Army Central Tennis Committee for the excellent turn out of tennis players for the Leech Cup competition this year," says the assistant secretary of war, in his letter to General King. "I note that eight of the twenty-three leading players competing come from the Infantry School, indicating that the game is being given full encouragement and support. Aside from the production of superior players, we believe that the time spent by officers and their families and by enlisted men in this sport will furnish increasing dividends in standards of sportsmanship, health, and morale."

Fort Benning players referred to by Mr. Davison as competitors in the Washington tournaments are Captain James H. Drake, Lieutenant Leon R. Brownfield, Captain Randolph Gordon, Captain Richard O. Bassett, Lieutenant Thomas L. Sherburne, Lieutenant James L. Grier. This group of players was selected from a "ladder" of twenty players who had completed a series of elimination trials extending from September to July, and who had participated in the post championship and invitation tournaments of Fort Benning in June.

Refresher Officers Graduate Here

An address by Major General Campbell King, commandant of The Infantry School, featured the brief exercises which brought to a close the refresher course of The Infantry School at two o'clock Friday afternoon. General King spoke of his pleasure in having had the high ranking officers as students for the four week special course and pointed out the professional advantages which accrued to every officer attending the Infantry School as a student.

Colonel Charles W. Weeks, assistant commandant, and other members of the academic department, were present at the formal closing of the course.

Members of the graduating class are: Colonels Albert W. Foreman, 13th Infantry, Walter Krueger, 6th Infantry, Joseph A. Marmon, 16th Infantry, Thomas S. Moorman, 22nd Infantry, James M. Petty, 34th Infantry, Douglas Potts, Infantry, Grosvenor L. Townsend, Infantry; Lieutenant Colonels Francis C. Endicott, Infantry, Edwin T. Gunner, Infantry, Rowan P. Lemly, Infantry, Edward E. McCammon, 13th Infantry, Thomas F. McNeill, Infantry, James H. Van Horn, Signal Corps, Franklin L. Whitley, 24th Infantry, Joseph M. Scammell, Infantry Reserve, and Major John R. D. Matheson, Corps of Engineers.

Boy Scout Court Of Honor Holds Examinations For New Members

The court of Honor of the Fort Benning Boy Scouts convened in the Scout Cabin at 9:00 a. m. Saturday morning, to hold Tenderfoot examinations for applicants for membership.

Among those present were Lieutenant Colonel Bonesteel, Infantry, Major Dabney, Medical Corps; Major Bonham, Infantry; Captain Bevan, Artillery; Captain Owens, Infantry;

Gen. Fuqua Places Stress On Work Of Infantry Scool

The accomplishments of The Infantry School, commanded by Major General Campbell King, occupy a considerable portion of the annual report of Major General Stephen O. Fuqua, chief of infantry, Washington, D. C., which has just been made public.

General Fuqua's report, which covers the fiscal year ending June 30, is devoted largely to accounts of experimental and research work in the field of infantry weapons and tactics, carried on and developed at the Infantry School.

One of the most important events of the year, among infantry activities, General Fuqua states, was the transfer of the Tank School from Fort George G. Meade, Md. to Fort Benning, and its absorption as an integral part of the Infantry School, in which it has become the tank section.

"The tank has long been recognized as one of the important infantry weapons," says General Fuqua in his report. "For that reason its characteristics, tactical employment, powers and limitations must be understood by all infantry officers, and the knowledge will become general only when the tank and its armanent are treated at The Infantry School exactly as are the other infantry weapons."

More uniform tank instructions throughout the service are expected to result from this amalgamation, General Fuqua stated. Improved instruction in field exercises involved in the use of tanks, and fresh impetus to a consideration of their tactical use, both in the offense and defense, has resulted from the transfer to Fort Benning of Company F, 67th Infantry (Medium Tanks) whose equipment includes several tanks of recent design, he said. General Fuqua pointed out that the 29th Infantry is the only regiment in the United States army with a fully motorized battalion. "This is the only fully motorized battalion in the infantry" General Fuqua said, in referring to the 2nd Battalion of the 29th Infantry, which with a platoon of the Cannon Company and a battalion section of the Service Company, is equipped with types of the army's newest models of trucks, most of which are of the four-wheel drive type. "It is the infantry experimental unit in motorization, particularly in the field of organization, motor vehicle type, and tactical experiment."

Referring to tests carried on at Fort Benning under the direction of the Infantry Board, General Fuqua stated that satisfactory progress in the development and tests of new arms and equipment for the infantry, was being made. his is particularly true, he said, in the case of the infantry tank, the semi-automatic shoulder rifle, the 37mm. gun, and the infantry mortar.

The study of infantry defense against attacks from low-flying aircraft has received a great deal of attention at the Infantry School, and in this the American infantry, said General Fuqua, has progressed farther than the infantry of any foreign army.

Other subjects in which the infantry has made decided advances as a result of studies and experiments carried on at Fort Benning are the new infantry drill, for which regulations have recently been distributed to the regular army and national guard for a service test; the new machine gun marksmanship course; musketry and

Mata Hari, famous dancer and enemy spy, makes an innocent accomplice of a young Russian aviator, Alexander Rosanoff. As her former lover, Shubin, is about to telephone Dubois, the head of the French Secret Service and involve Rosanoff, the dancer shoots Shubin. But Rosanoff comes to see the latter. The dancer persuades him not to enter and sends him on his flight to Russia with messages, admitting that she loves him. He is shot down. From her hiding-place she hurries to him, finds him blind and promises to marry him. But Mata Hari is arrested as she leaves the hospital. At the courtmartial, her lawyer moves for acquittal, pointing out that no one has seen her in Shubin's rooms the morning of the slaying.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

It was a slight shock to her, and she faltered the least bit. How glad she was that she had walked from Shubin's house back to the car!

"It may have been so," she said after a moment. "I do not remember where I left the taxi. I did not notice."

After a few more questions in regard to letters found in the search of her house—all of which she explained with perfect calmness—the prosecutor sat back, and Maitre Caron rose to move for her acquittal on the ground of lack of direct evidence to show that she was a spy, had other than a friendly connection with Shubin or had even been in his house the day of his death.

With many gestures, now raising his voice impressively, now lowering it wih a tremor of emotion, he begged them to believe that he was as loyal a Frenchman, as true a patriot as any of the members of the Court, he begged them to remember that he had practised his profession for forty-one years and had a great deal of experience with crime. His client might have been driven to within a short distance of the Colonel's house

"The chivalry of France cannot and will not on such slender, such unsupported evidence, indeed such a lack of evidence, brand a beautiful woman, a neutral subject and a great artist as a spy and a common criminal!"

The old man sat down, exhausted, and applied a handkerchief to his brow and to his eyes The guards had been moved by his fervor, but the members of the Courtmartial stared at Mata Hari with blank faces and the dancer looked straight back at them as if challenging them with all the confidence of a clear conscience.

The prosecutor then nodded to Dubois, who stepped forward.

Dubois spoke. The man had a voice as hard as granite, but there was emotion behind it, nevertheless. He, too, he said, loved his country just as deeply as Maitre Caron, and he considered Madame Mata Hari a menace to France. He had made immense efforts to secure proof that would be necessary to convict her. Always hitherto she had eluded him. But this time he had made sure; he had stopped up every loophole. There was no lack of evidence to show that she had been in Colonel Shubin's house. On the contrary there was the best evidence possible, the testimony of an eye-witness. The testimony of a man who had seen her come out of the room in which Shubin lay dead!

"That man I can produce. He is in a hospital at present. He is blind. His name is Alexander Rosanoff."

Mati Hari appeared to have grown taller, more gaunt, to tower above the accusing Frenchman. Her taut hands were pressed against her sides. At the sound of Rosanoff's name she went ashen white. She started to speak and could not. She put a handkerchief to her lips.

They were all waiting for her to recover.

In a moment, Dubois would resume his discourse and ask the court to summon Rosanoff. She had to speak.

Her voice had grown dull as if for the first time she realized her fate and yielded to it and would make no more effort.

"It is not necessary to produce him." There was a long pause which seemed filled to all the people in the courtroom by a deep, inaudible sigh.

"I plead guilty to the charges made by the court. I—shot Colonel Shubin . . . I am guilty."

She sat down. The procedure was quickly resumed but with little help from Maitre Caron who was almost voiceless with amazement and despair. Mata Hari would not answer him. Not until the members of the court filed out, one by one, to consider the verdict, did she glance up. It could be seen that she looked at each man intently as he passed by. Did she have a last flash of hope that perhaps in the end they would be lenient? Not death but imprisonment? Did she believe that after all these men would not be able to condemn her to death —no men would—she had too much power over their senses and their imagination?

She leaned toward the heart-broken Maitre Caron and patted his hand.

"My poor child!" he moaned. "I know you are innocent. Ah, Mata! Such courage! Such love! To sacrifice yourself on the altar of love!"

The dancer soothed him as if he were a child, smiling a little. She understood quite well that she had made her choice not so much to spare Rosanoff as to spare herself. To have him divine how she had tricked him in the past, to see him bear on the witness stand the agony of realization that it was he who might be the means of killing her—that would be too great a shame, too great a pain for her.

In France, in trials of this sort, it is not the custom for the Court to announce the verdict. This is left to an attendant.

The clerk stepped forward, crying the words of the usual formula:

"Judgment in the name of the French people!"

The guard was called out and Mata Hari set before them.

"Present Arms!"

The clerk then informed the prisoner that she had been found guilty and said: "The Court sentences you to be executed in such manner as the military authorities may provide."

Mata Hari heard him through in utter calm and silence. As she turned away, her lips twitched slightly.

They permitted her to rest for a moment. Maitre Caron, who was weeping, offered her the smelling salts and the pathetic chocolates which he had provided for — an emergency. She pushed them away.

"I do not need these. I am not a baby. I shall be brave."

They led her out of the courtroom.

"That one is a good soldier," an old guard muttered to his neighbor in line. "She will know how to die."

It was her accolade.

But later in the bare cell she sat with her cape huddled around her as she had set on the long, dreary drive to the hospital when death had never been out of her thoughts. The nuns could not console her. She was not resigned to death. She would accept it, but only because she must, when she must—if she must. She could not yet quite grasp the thought that it was so close to her, and Maitre Caron encouraged her to repel the idea. The old man had determined on a fresh attack from a different angle. He would use his influence. He would go to the President of the Republic himself, if necessary, and he could surely get a stay of sentence and have the execution put off and put off till perhaps the end of the war, when passions would have cooled and there would no longer seem any reason to shoot an entrancing and innocent woman.

"For I know you are innocent," insisted the attorney. "Morally, if not legally. You say you killed Shubin to protect your lover, who would have been branded as a traitor by Shubin out of sheer jealousy. When the war is over, my dear child, this will be a splendid defense."

"Look upon this only as an imprisonment," he urged her. "Do not relinquish hope! You have been wonderful in your fortitude. Continue to be so. I will save you. I swear to you."

Almost he convinced her. But she made him promise that no matter what he did or didn't do for her, one duty he must not neglect. He must make sure that Rosanoff was kept in ignorance of her arrest, her sentence and, if so it must be, her execution. He must get her permission to write

IN a very few days the male of the species will be frantically and furtively purchasing silk stockings. The devoted swain will have his eyes peeled for a likely looking Watch. Angelic looking husbands, softening under the influence of the holiday season, have even been known to buy washing machines for the over-worked spouse. All of which suggests that this is the time for the astute merchants to spread their advertising story in the pages of the Benning Herald, which comes under the eyes of well nigh all the populace of Benning.

Handicap Tennis Matches Are Now In Final Stages

The Handicap Tennis Tournaments now in progress are rapidly nearing completion. As this article is written, Drake and Sherburne will oppose Bassett and Newman Thursday afternoon in the finals of the Men's Doubles. A hard-fought match should be the result of the encounter. The Bassett and Newman team advanced to the finals by defeating Evans and Wilson. Evans and Wilson, wtih a big handicap, won the first set easily 6-1, but their opponents came back strong to win the next three sets 8-6, 6-2, 7-5.

Drake and Sherburne, number one ranking doubles team, disposed of Tindall and Poore 6-4, 1-6, 6-2, 6-4 in another close match. The winners were extended all the way.

In the Men's Singles, Newman entered the semi-finals by winning over Blackmore 9-7, 6-1. Poore will play the winner of the Drake-Lynch match.

In the other bracket, Irving and Phillips engaged in an exciting match which Irving finally won 6-3, 8-6. The victor will oppose the winner of the Bassett-Sherburne match. Bassett is the number two ranking player on the post while Sherburne is just a step behind. This should prove an excellent match.

In the Mixed Doubles Tournament, only two matches have been played as this is written. Mr. D. P. Harding and Miss Eleanor Bonesteel defeated Mr. Howard Wampler and Miss Willa Wampler in a first round match 7-5, 5-7, 6-4.

As the Drake-Keiler combination, which ranks first on the list, drew a bye, Harding and Bonesteel next engaged this pair and were defeated but only after a hard-fought match.

The losers won the first set at 6-4, while Drake and Keiler annexed the next two 6-4, 6-1.

In the Boys' Tournament, Beatty, by defeating Gee 6-1, 6-1 earned the right to oppose Tindall in the semi-finals. In the other bracket, Drake, who defeated Maertens 6-0, 6-0, will play Evans who won over Bonham 6-3, 6-0.

In the Boys' Doubles, Evans and Tindall are already in the semi-finals. That combination will play the winner of the Beatty-Drake vs. Maertens-Pope match.

A Woman's Doubles Tournament is at present only in an incipient stage.

Forecaster Lifts Mark Up To .903

The results of last Saturday's games were instrumental in raising I. PREDICTUM'S average to a new high, .903. There were few surprises.

The Herald prophet predicted an Auburn victory over Georgia by one touchdown. Final score: Auburn 14-Georgia 7. At the half, Georgia led, and an upset seemed imminent. The Plainsmen, however, came back strong in the last half and scored two touchdowns to win the thrilling contest. Georgia Tech encountered stubborn opposition in Florida and, in addition, the Yellow Jackets were not exhibiting the stellar brand of play that enabled them to defeat Alabama Saturday before last. As a result, only six points seperated the winner, Georgia Tech., from the loser, Florida, at the end of the gruelling game.

Duke won its first victory over the North Carolina Tarheels since 1893. A Duke punt, which hit a Tarheel first and was then downed by one of the Blue Devils, gave the ball to Duke on their opponents twenty-two yard line. At this point, the North Carolina coach ran onto the field to protest the decision of the referee. A fifteen yard penalty was inflicted on the Tarheels, and Duke went over from the five yard line.

Texas Christian overcame another conference opponent in Rice, and Texas also was victorious, winning over Arkansas without difficulty. Much-beaten Southern Methodist lost its third conference game, succumbing to Baylor 19-0.

Tulane reserves easily defeated Sewanee 26-0, as South Carolina, who will attempt to stop Auburn's championship march next Saturday, crushed Citadel.

In the East, Yale exhibited great strength in mastering Harvard to the tune of 19-0. The Crimson was outplayed from start to finish. The fighting Irish of Notre Dame were held to two touchdowns by the powerful defense which Navy showed to good advantage. Army second and third-stringers eked out a 7-0 victory over West Virginia Wes.

Holy Cross and Columbia found it rough going in the mud and as a consequence were held to scoreless ties by Manhattan and Syracuse respectively. Pittsburgh was extended to defeat Carnegie Tech 6-0.

The powerful Detroit eleven found Michigan State a little too strong and were forced into defeat by a score of 6-0. Detroit had previously won over the strong Villanova eleven which last week handed Temple her first defeat of the year 7-0. Boston College humbled Boston University.

In the midwest, Michigan defeated Minnesota 3-0 in a hard-fought game to retain the Big Ten Championship. Both elevens were obviously intent upon winning a game which had a most important bearing on the conference title. A fumble by Jack Manders, star Minnesota full-back, near the end of the first half put the Wolverines in a scoring position. With thirty seconds to go, Newman's educated toe sent the pigskin whizzing through the cross-bars to give his eleven a 3-0 lead which it never relinquished.

The Purdue Powerhouse overcame Indiana without difficulty. The Boilermakers finished the season undefeated and with only a tie with Northwestern marring their otherwise perfect record. Illinois was defeated by Ohio State by the score of 3-0. Wisconsin was easily the victor over Chicago. Northwestern showed what it is capable of doing when the whole eleven clicks by crushing Iowa 44-6. Iowa was the team which fought Nebraska practically to a standstill two Saturdays ago.

Utah won the Rocky Mountain Championship for the fifth consecutive year by decisively defeating the Colorado Aggies, while the Oklahoma Aggies finished first in the Missouri Valley Conference by trimming Grinnell.

In the far west, Stanford and California fought to a scoreless tie. Fordham won its second victory over a Western eleven by nosing out Oregon State 8-6. The University of California in Los Angeles turned back

Girl Scout Notes

Cardinal Troop

After inspection and a little lesson about the flag ceremony, Mrs. Brown turned the meeting over to Jane Kraft's patrol, the Jolly Jumpers. The group with the greatest number of points during the month has the opportunity to plan the next meeting. This honor was received by the Jolly Jumpers for this month.

We played the compass of "ships," with three girls playing the part of ships and another three guiding them by instructions. Then came the exciting "bumps," where all the girls sit in a circle. A chair is left empty, with one Scout as "it." As the girl on the left takes the empty chair, "it" tries to sit in the vacant seat, which travels in a circle, as each girl moves to the right.

We all enjoyed that game thoroughly, but we had to stop, so then sang songs in a good-night circle.

Pine Tree Troop

Last Wednesday's meeting was the best we have had yet. Because—Mrs. Matchett came! She came to present the tenderfoot pins to the ones who have passed their test. We also had a Brownie Fly-Up, but I will tell about that later.

When Mrs. Matchett came into the cabin, she saw not only the members of the Pine Tree Troop, but the Pack of Brownies and five girls from the Daffodil Troop as well. We all sang "How do you do Mrs. Matchett" and then she sang it back to us.

Them we had the Brownie Fly-Up. Jacqueline Thompson, Martha Jane Rooks, and Frances Kellam "flew up" and we all hope they are going to enjoy the Girl Scouts as much as they did the Brownies. We know they will make fine Scouts for they were all good Brownies, and it is a rule that a good Brownie is always as good

Thanksgiving Celebrated At Officers Club With First Dinner-Dance Of Season

Thanksgiving was celebrated this year on Wednesday, Thanksgiving eve, at the Officers' Club by the first dance of the season. Dinner and dancing were begun at eight and dancing was continued until twelve. The decorations for the Club were in true Thanksgiving style with pumpkin lights and turkey gobblers decorated the table. A record number of reservations were made, among those entertaining were: Col. and Mrs. J. DeCamp Hall, and twelve, Maj. and Mrs. Vernon Evans and thirty, Capt. and Mrs. Leonard Murphy and thirty-five, and Lieut. and Mrs. Joseph P. Cleland and ten.

LIEUT. DOWDALL GIVES DESPIDIDA FOR LIEUT. PULSIFER

Lieut. H. G. Dowdall was the host Wednesday evening at the Thanksgiving dinner dance at the Officers' Club honoring Lieut. Ralph Pulsifer who leaves shortly for Hawaii. The table was most appropriately decorated for a farewell party, the center piece being a gayly colored miniature ship, representing the "Republic" which will take Lieut. Pulsifer to Hawaii. The place cards were streamers which floated from the ship. Lieut. Dowdall had as his guests a group of friends of Lieut. Pulsifer. They were: Maj. and Mrs. H. B. Lewis, Capt. and Mrs. W. L. Bevan, Capt. and Mrs. Harvey J. Golightly, Lieut. and Mrs. D. W. Brann, Miss Harriotte Atkins, Miss Hazel Burford, Miss Frances Cheney, Miss Caroline Hageman, Capt. H. W. Caygill. Capt. Peter LeToney, Capt. A. B. O'Connell, and Lieut. George Lightcap.

CAPT. AND MRS. M. A. GILLIS HOSTS AT DINNER AT OFFICERS' CLUB

Among those reserving tables for the Thanksgiving dinner dance on Wednesday night were Capt. and Mrs. Marcel A. Gillis. The table was charmingly decorated with four silver bowls containing fruit and nuts, two bowls in the center of the table and two at the ends. Silver candlesticks with yellow candles were in between each pair of bowls. Covers were laid for thirty-five. The guest list included: Col. and Mrs. F. L. Munson, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. F. L. Whitley, Lt. Col. and Mrs. W. R. Wheeler, Maj. and Mrs. Roger Harrison, Maj. and Mrs. O. W. Griswold, Maj. and Mrs. Alfred Mordecai, Capt. and Mrs. J. P. Gammon, Capt. and Mrs. K. L. Berry, Capt. and Mrs. Geoffrey Marshall, Capt. and Mrs. R. H. Garity, Capt. and Mrs. J. H. Hinwood, Capt. and Mrs. C. W. Hanna, Capt and Mrs. M. E. Halloran, Lieut. and Mrs H. M. Monroe, Miss Elizabeth Munson, Maj. Peter P. Salgado, Capt. Guy Hartman, Lieut. C. H. Dicks and Lieut. E. D. McLaughlin.

MAJ. AND MRS. W. F. LEE HOSTS AT DINNER AT OFFICERS' CLUB

Maj. and Mrs. W. F. Lee were the hosts Sunday evening at a delightful dinner party at the Officers' Club. The table was decorated with a large silver bowl of yellow chrysanthemums and tapers of corresponding color were used. Covers were laid for eighteen. The guests were: Col. and Mrs. C. W. Weeks, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. J. W. Stillwell, Maj. and Mrs. M. D. Welty, Maj. and Mrs. J. W. Foos, Maj. and Ms. J. M. Robinson, Maj. and Mrs. W. L. Roberts, Maj. and Mrs. H. A. Wadsworth, Maj. and Mrs. Barnwell Legge, and Maj. and Mrs. Omar Bradley. After dinner the guests were escorted to the Post movies.

29TH INFANTRY DANCE HELD FRIDAY EVENING AT POLO HUNT CLUB

One of the most enjoyable events of the week was the dance given by the 29th Infantry regiment at the Polo Hunt Club Friday evening. Dancing was enjoyed from nine to twelve, the music for dancing being furnished by the 29th Infantry orchestra. Many delightful dinners were held preceding the dance. The guest list included members of the 29th Infantry, former members bachelors of th Poest and their guests.

CAPT. AND MRS. E. J. RENTH AND LT. AND MRS. WILLIAM O'CONNOR JOINT HOSTS AT DINNER PRECEDING INFANTRY DANCE

Capt. and Mrs. Edward J. Renth and Lieut. and Mrs. William W. O'Connor were the joint hosts Friday evening at a dinner party preceding the 29th Infantry hop at the Polo Club. The dinner was held at the quarters of Lieut. and Mrs. O'Connor and throughout the house yellow and rust chrysanthemums were used. The guests were: Capt. and Mrs. J. J. Albright, Capt. and Mrs. H. O. Cushman, Capt. and Mrs. Earle A. Johnson, Capt. and Mrs. Adrian Orrill, Lieut. and Mrs. J. E. Bowen, Lieut. and Mrs. G. P. Howell, Lieut. and Mrs. Washington Ives, Lieut. and Mrs. H. P. Houser, Miss Eleanor Bass, Lt. J. M. Chappell, Lt. C. L. Decker.

Evening frock of broadcloth trimmed with white tulle.

By VERA WINSTON

Broadcloth is gaining steadily in popularity after its long absence from the mode. A most striking example is apparent in the evening frock shown in the accompanying sketch. The evening frock is of black broadcloth and it is trimmed with pleated white tulle at the shoulders and hips. The shoulder crests accentuate the slim line of the frock.

OFFICERS' CLUB SPONSORS DANCE AT COUNTRY CLUB

The Officers' Club was the sponsor of a dance at the Country Club Saturday evening. This is the fourth of the reciprocal affairs that have been given. These dances have been very popular, both with the Fort Benning and the Columbus people and Saturday's affair was no exception. Many reservations and "no host" parties for dinner were made preceding the dance.

MISS ELEANOR BASS HONOR GUEST AT DINNER PRECEDING COUNTRY CLUB DANCE

Miss Eleanor Bass, the attractive house guest of Lieut. and Mrs. G. P. Howell, was the honoree at a dinner Saturday evening given by her hosts at the Officers' Club preceeding the dance at the Country Club. The table was graced by a silver bowl of yellow and white chrysanthemums, yellow tapers were used to complete the decorations. Lieut. and Mrs. Howell had as their guests: Miss Bass, Miss Harriotte Atkins, Miss Frances Cheney, Miss Phyllis Sargent, Miss Tina Hinkley, Miss Ann McClure, Lieut. William Moore, Lieut. J. M. Churchill, Lieut. W. C. Sweeney, Lieut. A. W. Dannemiller, Lieut. James Woolnough, Lieut. Milton Pressley, Lieut. James Luckett, and Lieut. J. J. Winn.

WEDDING OF MISS VIRGINIA MARCHANT AND LIEUT. HANMER OF INTEREST THROUGHOUT ARMY AND CIVILIAN CIRCLES

The wedding of Virginia Marchant and Lieut. Stephen Read Hanmer which was solemnized last week at Denver, Colorado, will be of interest throughout Army and civilian circles here. The bride was gowned in the same dress her mother wore as a bride.

The ceremony took place at 8 p. m. in St. Barnabas Episcopal Church. More than 200 guests were present. Rev. Charles Brady officiated.

The bride, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Marchant, was given in marriage by her father.

Miss Virginia Mitchell was maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Misses Louise Hansen, Elizabeth Riddle, Frances McCarthey and Eleanore Jones.

Robert Marchant, brother of the bride, was best man. The ushers were Jack Tolman, William Bosco, Rudolph Savage and Lester Bartsch.

Passing years gave the satin of which the bridal gown is fashioned an ivory tint. Otherwise it was unchanged since worn by the first bride. It has a snug-fitting gasque and high neckline. The bell-shaped skirt forms a long train.

A billowy ivory tulle veil fell from the cap of lace. In her arms Miss Marchant carried a bouquet of ivory roses, gardenias and valley lilies.

The maid of honor wore a Madam Butterfly pink velvet frock. It was made with puff sleeves and floor-length skirt. Her turban and slippers were blue velvet. She carried pink rosebuds.

The bridesmaids were gowned like the maid of honor, only the color scheme was reversed. Their gowns were blue and their accessories pink. They also carried pink rosebuds.

Entrances to the pews in the church were decorated with bouquets of white and pink flowers. Slender white tapers flickered on the pews in the center aisle. The chancel was festooned with huge baskets of shaggy white chrysanthemums. The nuptials were read by the light from candelabra.

After the church service, a recep-

Benefit Party And Style Show To Be Held In Columbus

Several hundred bridge players will assemble at the Industrial High School auditorium on the afternoon of Friday, December 2, for the benefit party and style show, sponsored by the Muscogee County Parent-Teacher Council. The game will begin at three o'clock, and the style show, interspersed with dance numbers, will follow.

The price for bridge players and tea guests will be twenty-five cents, and tickets may be purchased in advance from any P. T. A. president. All who plan to attend are invited to purchase their tickets as soon as possible. Six hundred tickets have already been issued and these are selling rapidly, and the party promises to be one of the most successful and most largely attended social events of the early holiday season.

The spacious auditorium of the Industrial School will be decorated in holly and bamboo, with the Christmas motif. More than twenty handsome favors will be awarded, and a prize ham and a prize cake will fall to some fortunte guests. After the game, home-made cake and charlotte will be served. Special entertainment will add to the pleasure of the tea guests, who will be cordially welcomed.

A cordial invitation is extended to the bridge players of Columbus and Fort Benning. Tickets may be purchased or phone reservations may be made with any of the above chairmen, or Mrs. B. E. Pulliam, ticket committee, or with any P.-T. A. president.

Grapevine Operator slipped up last week---or rather down—to Florida---star jasmine---Spanish moss---banyan trees---and royal palms---we recommend the country---sure cure for what ails you and a true test for the inner workings of any car---Our faith in Florida garages is shattered, though ---but maybe we didn't have any in the first place---

Too bad about these fires---and at four a. m. of all unpleasant hours---Can't things be a little more conveniently arranged. But saddest of all---and really touchingly pathetic was another fire that went on at the same time---On the road to Columbus, a small stucco shack burned all alone with no one to do anything about it or even to look on---A house without a fire department—It was outside the government reservation but not within the city limits. Georgia, we hear, is dotted with just such chimney stacks (Surely this shack has a chimney stack left) where houses used to be ---Land of lost houses, this—as well as nice red clay---How we love nice wet red clay!

Do you number among the Post Pigeon lovers?---If so, beware! We hear there's a new pigeon menace abroad---Captain Whatley is not only warring against hedges but has been seen with a gun---now that the hunting season is on---winging guileless pigeons---But saddest of all, some of Lt. Lanahans' prize carriers have disappeared this past week and Lt. Lanahan is bemoaning their loss and thinking dark, suspicious thoughts. All Post detectives are invited to enter in the hunt---

The Provost-Marshall's been hunting too—quite legitimately, though, as befits a Provost-Marshal---Wild turkeys, we hear, and as early as three in the morning---Says he hasn't caught any yet---Doesn't sound so well for the head of the Benning Police Force---

Thanksgiving---and the Officers' Club celebrating with lots of decorative foliage plundered from adjacent trees and a supper dance lasting till twelve o'clock---almost too much excitement for one week and the Secretary and his staff feeling quite whipped---Good training, though, for Christmas week---We hear there are to be at least six dances, breakfasts, lunches, dinners, a day---At least sixty visitors---and one nervous breakdown---Hospital getting special rooms ready for all victims.

Great exodus this week-end---for the Army-Notre Dame game---well, that is, we do know of at least one family and one second lieutenant who have gone---And one couple arriving ---Welcome back, Steve, and we hope you're enjoying your new quarters---

And here's something to be thankful for---most appropriately scheduled for Thanksgiving morning---a Paper Chase beginning at 9:15 a. m. at the Polo Hunt Club---the spirit doesn't last though. The next Hunt on Sunday morning to begin at 5:30 a. m. as usual---these early hours must even depress the hounds---

And before we finish---Just one last wire---Have you heard how to tell who rates on this Post? Just wander into headquarters—very hospitable place—any time you have a spare moment and examine the chairs at the different desks. Lo---All those who rate have brand new swivel chairs---They just arrived this past week and are gleaming, new and good to behold. They roll across the room on ball bearing rollers and have a nice padded cushion---Such are the true deserts of greatness---(This is really a fact).

LIEUTENANT PEEP'S DIARY

Monday, Nov. 14

A day of self recrimination for that I had so neglected my study of the automatic rifle. My negligence, I doubt not, is by now the public property of the Third Section for I did display its results with graphite on wood-pulp and turn it in as a graded test. The singleness of purpose which I displayed by insisting on disassembling the weapon at some stage of the test well night overwhelmed me, the more so upon discovery that stripping at the point selected was definitely not desired.

Tuesday, Nov. 15

It was Yoicks! and away to the communications laboratory to learn a brand new meaning for staggering. At some pains to determine the relationship between this morning's work and that scheduled for Friday—pole climbing—but without enlightenment. The book, in discussing splices, states that a good lineman can make 40 knots in an hour. Fitzgibbons of the opinion that this is an excellent speed, for a battleship can make but 20.

Wednesday, Nov. 16

This morning enlivened by firing on the landscape targets and climaxed by a competition between two squads.

Cue-Ball Gus Regnier did lead his squad to victory over Snowshoe Andrew Gamble's before a well-organized cheering section. Of Gamble's squad a Regnier rooter did say "Not a chance for a rabble like that—a Chinaman, a marine and Gaither, commanded by an Eskimo."

Treated this day to an innovation by the versatile Second Section (which follows the modern newspaper trend of publishing the Sunday edition on Saturday afternoon) when the approved solution appeared on the bulletin board about two hours in advance of the quiz. The Second Section has presented, to me, the approved solution for conducting any course and its simplicity does cause me wonder that no one had heretofore considered it as a possibility. I do hope that its spread to other sections will not be unduly hindered.

Thursday, Nov. 17

The morning begun with a bang, Sahara Sam being with us again. Positively amazed when he said "Now the procurement rate I stated in 1920 was predominate." And to me it had seemed no longer ago that 1930 that he stated it.

To the code room once more to determine whether dah dit dit or dah dah did dit. The old saw that "there is always room at the top" should be amended by substituting "the bottom" for "the top" and add "in the code room," so efficient has been the instruction.

The "knob tie" being discussed in wire class, one of the sotto voce questions was "Just where is the knob with reference to the tie?" To which Watson allowed as how in the average individual it is just above.

The class in stitches over Lundquist's cartoon of a Company Officers' Course student enroute to an hour of musketry to be followed by an hour of automatic rifle and another of communications work. Authentic in detail as far as equipment was concerned, clipboard, field glasses, compass, alidade, sketching board, Springfield, automatic rifle, and TE-33 being shown on the student, yet I did think the uniform exhibit a bit lacking, there being only two complete changes being carried.

Friday, Nov. 18

Rain foisting upon us indoor work in lieu of scheduled outdoor caused Major Cota, our musketry Capone, to remark that we would "have some indoor shooting." But Lord, we have that in any indoor course. Stephenson did distinguish himself by announcing that he had an idea but didn't know where he got it, going on from there to explain it. I am in no way in agreement with the uncouth fellow who could not understand how it could have stayed so long alone for I am sure Steve has a lot of good ideas if he could only think of them.

Monday, Nov. 21

Greatly fatigued at the close of our most strenuous day since rifle marksmanship when Maj. Tuffy Easley did exhort us "up and down; up and down." And this pernicious doctrine has quite thoroly permeated the Third Section, Lt. Maertens foisting upon an unwilling Monday morning class the same words to different music in his antiaircraft marksmanship course. So great his enthusiasm for this exercise—for others—that he might have continued on thru the noon hour but for missing his own repast. Hurt did voice class sentiment with his contribution that Lt. M. must be a fine tunneller, he is so good at running things into the ground.

The afternoon spent on Davidson Hill to listen again to the theme song "Up and down" as promulgated by Captain Drake in his pole climbing course for wire linemen. This work as amusing as instructive, and no great stretch of the imagination was needed to see that Johnson, W. M., going up and down trees with the safety belt dangling behind him in realistic fashion was a credit to his ancestry. His reversion to type could not be called complete because he worked at low heights whereas, by his own statement, his forebears were educated in the higher branches. I do think, however, that there have been firemen in his family tree for to descend he did encircle the trunk with arms and legs and slide to the bottom sans climbers, sans form, and sans some square inches of cuticle.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

Influenza

Influenza is a communicable disease spread by contact with the discharges from the nose and throat of a person having the disease, or from a carrier, usually by coughing and sneezing.

A carrier is a person who is able to give a disease to someone else, but who is not himself sick. Anyone might be a carrier.

How May Influenza Be Avoided?

Avoid crowds when the disease is prevalent. Walk to work as much as you can. Get all the sunlight you can. Go to bed early. Don't get overtired. Be sure the room where you are is always well ventilated. Drink plenty of water. Don't let your system get clogged up. Exercise out of doors. Keep away from all persons who are coughing and sneezing. Don't let them sneeze, cough, or talk in your face. Keep away from persons who have coughs and colds. Wash your hands frequently and always before eating. Be sure dishes and glasses are washed in boiling water. Avoid the common drinking cup and towel.

Keep Fit—Protect Others

If you feel hot or chilly or have pains in your eyes, ears, head, or back, see a doctor. Report to the Garrison Dispensary, or call the attending surgeons. Avoid giving the disease to others. Cough and sneeze into your handkerchief, or what is even better, use old cloths, or paper napkins that may be burned after use. Have your room always well ventilated.

If you get influenza STAY IN BED until the doctor tells you you can get up, or for three or four days after you feel perfectly well. It is better to be away from the job for a few days than forever. Always remembre, "COVER YOUR MOUTH WHEN YOU COUGH OR SNEEZE."

Keep fit if you are taking care of someone with influenza.

Wash your hands immediately after handling the patient or anything soiled with discharges. Do not allow visitors in the room with someone who has influenza. Burn or boil cloths soiled with discharges. Scald all dishes and glassware used by the patients.

Offhand... Observations

By McGoofus

The time has come:—to get the Georgia-Auburn, Roosevelt-Hoover posters off the automobile; to do a lot of talking about dogs, guns and birds even if you don't do any hunting; and to start worrying about Christmas presents.

A careful selection of Christmas presents can go a long way towards offsetting the probable scaling down of funds available. After all, a moderately priced, well chosen gift is more in keeping with the spirit of the occasion than a more expensive one purchased at random. The successful gift is one which will reflect an intimate knowledge of and consideration for the personal tastes of the one for whom it is intended. 'Just a book' is usually the sign of last minute, make-shift shopping but a book on a subject in which the recipient is partcularly interested, makes a perfect gift. If little brother has a pooch, send him a dog leash; if dad is fond of hunting, send him a half dozen boxes of shells or if he is a golfer, make it a half dozen balls; if dear auntie's greatest interest in life happens to be her garden, send her some rose plantings; if the young lady fancies herself an equestrienne, send her a riding crop; if they have no special interests, send flowers, candy or good cigars but don't send 'just a book,' handkerchief, socks or ties.

The number of last-year's hats and overcoats to be seen, even among the collegians, at the football game was significant of something.

Wonder what percent of officers have read all the books in the library on the shelf marked "First Period Reading?"

Capt. Lawson, Lts. Grubbs and Sherburne represented the army nobly in competition with some three hundred Georgia and Auburn undergraduates at the post-game scrimmage which took place in the Muscogee Club last Saturday evening. Only the best of broken field runners and line plungers could hope for more than three dances per hour or four steps per dance. Be it said that they did not falter.

CONDUCTED BY E. F. H.

GOOD HOUSEKEEPING

Among the sometimes annoying virtues which numerous, otherwise estimable, women possess is the picking-up habit. We have suffered much from this trait. It is by no means an unusual experience for us to have the shirt that we have draped neatly over the back of a convenient chair while we are putting on our socks, whisked away and hung on some out of the way hook in the clothes press. We used to spend precious and exasperating moments looking for it, thinking that we had mislaid it, and afraid to say anything for fear that we might be making an admission of senility. Now we simply bawl out, "What in hell did you do with that shirt" and thereby save much time and trouble.

As a historical illustration of how far this pernicious picking-up habit may go, I might cite an experience of a youthful Saturday night visitor at the Harding flop house.

J. B. Bonham was spending the night with his pal Buddy. Mrs. Harding, when she went into the room to see that the boys were covered up, noted that J. B. had rolled up his underwear and stuck it in his pocket. Upon inquiring of Buddy the next morning as to the reason for the unusual proceeding, she was informed that one two previous visits J. B., upon rising, had discovered that his underwear had been picked up and sent to the laundry.

DOMESTIC SALVAGE DEPT.

Another incident, somewhat related to the above, and involving the same dramatis personnae, occurred recently.

On leaving the house one morning Mrs. Harding handed us a pair of shoes to be left at the Post Exchange to be half-soled.

Two days later we brought the neatly repaired shoes home only to be informed by an offspring that they belonged to J. B.

Four courses of action are open to us:

1. Try to collect from Major Bonham.
2. Try to get it back at the next meeting of the Thanatopsis Club—a hazardous undertaking.
3. Keep the shoes until one of our own children grows into them, if ever.
4. Charge the cost of repair against the wife's allowance.

After prayerfully considering all four courses we decided, according to the customs of man in like cases, to adopt the fifth, to wit: to tell our troubles to the world through the medium of the Flare and forever after hold our peace.

WAIL FROM THE SKEET RANGE

At the handicap and blind bogey skeet shoot held last Sunday morning, Captain Pete Le Toney won two of the three turkeys whose destiny was not subject to the arbitrary and pitifully inadequate (ask anybody who didn't win a turkey) handicaps assigned by Messrs. Hodges, Bradley and Buracker. In other words, Captain Le Toney was unbeatable in those contests where luck rather than skill supplemented by the unintentional generosity of the handicapping committee, was the decisive factor.

As Captain Le Toney is a bachelor there was a lot of curiosity among the skeet shooting fraternity as to what he will do with two turkeys. Several pertinent suggestions smacking somewhat of ulterior motives, were offered as to a suitable disposition of one or both birds, but the Lucky Captain was noncommital. Personally, we hope he gets a stomach ache.

Our idea for a unique and appropriate turkey shoot would be to handicap the competitors according to the size of their families—say three targets per member. We might win a turkey under some equitable arrangement like that but we've practically given up hope of ever getting anything in one of these Scotch handicaps. Several years ago when the committee broke down and gave us our proper handicap we happened to win a turkey and since then Chief Omar Bradley and the other Satraps of Skeet have us catalogued as a Chiseler. You might think they'd relent on account of the depression but you don't know 'em. Anybody who has ever won a turkey from under their noses might just as well spend all future Sunday mornings in church.

BETTER THAN AN XMAS SAVINGS ACCOUNT

Last year Major Arms and Captain Matchett organized and promoted the great contract tournament. Prominent among the winners were Major Arms and Captain Matchett.

This year's tournament was also promoted by Major Arms and Captain Matchett. An examination of the list of winners disclosed the names of Major Arms and Mrs. Matchett.

Both tournaments were nicely timed to just precede the early Christmas shopping campaigns of the Arms and Matchetts.

CORRECTING AN OMISSION

In the review of Pomeroy's Past published in the last issue of the Benning Herald, we failed to note any mention of the work of one Lieutenant B. M. Greeley as Edward. It was plain that our old friend, the compositor, had slipped again for there was an obvious hiatus where the review jumped from the page one to page three. As we were under the impression that Edward was pretty good, we went to the trouble to look up the reviewer's manuscript to see if he agreed with us. There we found the following:

"Lieutenant Greeley as Edward gave ample evidence that the stern requirements of the company distinction as a Thespian."

We take this to mean that the well remembered Spanish osteopath of Cradle Snatchers had done a good job in his somewhat lesser role in Pomeroy's Past. The paper may have failed to mention it, but the reviewer had given it proper recogniiton. We are satisfied.

WE CAN'T UNDERSTAND THIS EITHER

Captain Bill Hones is in receipt of a letter from Major Roger Williams' adjutant requesting all of the Infantry School literature on Combat Intelligence.

As Sir Roger was the 1st Section specialist in that subject last year, Capatin Hones is wondering why his adjutant is requisitioning the printed and mimeographed word when he might drink at the fountain of all available knowledge on this important military subject.

Mrs. Lambert Is Now Improving

Friends of Mrs. Lambert will be interested to learn that she is at present convalescing from injuries suffered a week ago last Tuesday. Her condition is reported as very satisfactory. Mrs. Lambert is the wife of Captain Barret D. Lambert, a student officer residing in Columbus.

nosticators contributed twenty-five cents apiece was won by Majors Cole and Cook.

Lieutenant Robert V. Murphy, the hustling assistant business manager of the Dramatic Club, came closest to the correct figures for the electoral college totals, but Promoter Cole, upon comparing the actual morning-after returns with his own paper, decided that the grand prize should go to the contestant whose prediction came nearest to the result by states. As luck would have it, Major Cole happened to be the winner under this ruling. Unfortunately, however, Major Lloyd Cook had figured it all out exactly the same way and, when the two major prophets cut for the pot, it was the outsider who won.

AIR ODYSSEY ENDS IN DOG HOUSE

We forgot to mention in our last issue that Brother Emil Leard had returned from a protracted business and pleasure visit to Washington. Brother Leard was ferried to the capital by Aviator Barnett. According to the carefully corroborated stories of pilot and passenger, foul weather delayed the departure on the return journey for over a week. This version would be more convincing to Mrs. Leard and Mrs. Barnett were it not for the fact that Benning enjoyed several delightful days during the week that the air voyageurs were being refused clearance from Langley Field—as alleged.

Incidentally, Brother Leard neglected to clean out his pockets before reporting to headquarters and two soiled powder puffs found therein didn't act as oil on troubled domestic waters.

That Brother Leard, who is regarded by his fellow scientists of the Thanatopsis Club as one of the most astute psychologists that ever filled an inside straight, should be guilty of such an oversight is well night beyond comprehension.

FUZZARD MAKES POST ELECTION STATEMENT

Faithful readers of the Flare have been wondering, no doubt, what happened to Marathon Miltiades Fuzzard in the great democratic landslide. Realizing that the General's many admirers would prefer to hear from him in person, we obtained the following statement as soon as he had recovered sufficiently from his post election hangover.

"You can tell the world," said the General belligerently, "that I wasn't licked. When I saw how the Benning experts was all predictin' in Bob Cole's election pool that the Democrats was goin' to sweep the country, I got busy and made a dicker with Jim Farley to swing my large personal following to my friend, Frank Roosevelt. That's how he got them big majorities everywhere. Maybe I couldn't have been elected myself on account of bein' too arbitrary, like my enemies say, but I'm the guy that put Franklin D. over big, and don't you forget it. I would not be surprised if he made me Secretary of War or something. Personally, though, I'd just as soon have a job as Prohibition Agent while they are waitin' to repeal the 18th Amendment. This campaign used up all I had and I've gotta stock up before they make hard liquor legal and expensive."

"Do you think that the Democrats will restore prosperity?" we asked.

"I don't know whether they will or not" replied the General, "but if I was them, I wouldn't. That's one thing the Democratic Party ain't never been able to stand."

CITATIONS FOR THE WEEK

In spite of our scathing criticism of the handicapping committee of the Gun Club, we are going to award our citation for the week to Highgun Hodges, Old Eagle Eye Bradley, Explorer Chance, and the new handy man, Captain Sam Buracker—not so much for staging an interesting sporting event on Sunday last, as for their consistent and effective efforts which have resulted in building up another enjoyable Benning activity.

—E. F. H.

Benning Cats Lead Dog's Life; Plentv Of Wild Cats Here

There are, on the Fort Benning Reservation, a great number of wild cats, an even greater number than in almost any other part of Georgia. Only one thing can account for this peculiar situation . . . and that is the treatment which domestic cats receive on the Post. The situation it has been found is so deplorable as to drive any cat—let alone a Benning cat—we say it regretfully—wild.

First of all only a limited number of people may keep cats. Block 21 and Block 23 are forbidden the gentle, purring pleasure which a cat may bring to any household. Not theirs the joy of letting out the cat, of preparing the morning saucer of cream . . . or is it milk? But suffice it to say that felines are thus coldly thrust out of a very important part of the Post.

But this is not all. The experiences through which any legitimate domestic cat must go, in order to remain upon the Post, are harrowing, to say the least. In the first place, the proud owner must visit the Post Exchange, buy for seventy-five cents a bottle—or perhaps a package—of vaccine, take the cat to the Veterinary Hospital, and suffer with the cat all the tense moments of vaccination for rabies. The cat may then be given a tag to be worn on its collar or harness, as the case may be, whenever it goes abroad. As though this were not enough to break the spirit of any cat, this performance must be carried out not once but annually.

Further post orders state that no cat may go in the swimming pool. We feel this to be an unnecessary admonition, adding injury to insult. And then, too, all cats, states the order, must be clean and trained not to annoy. The tragedy occurs when a family leaves the Post and, in a moment of forgetfulness, leaves their cat, too. The cat then falls back upon the status of an alley cat and has absolutely no standing in the face of the law. He is then fair game for the Military Police. And this is a trying future to look forward to. No cat can be sure of the steadfastness of his owner; all cats at Benning must live in a state of perpetual dread!

The danger is greatest when the periodic check-ups occur. Then the M. P.s have orders to shoot all untagged cats. They are not even taken to be impounded—unpleasant word—and there to be advertised in the Bulletin in hopes that their wandering owner will put in an appearance. Is it any wonder then that there are so many wild cats in the vicinity of Benning? Col. Marshall, in a recent investigation, found that domestic cats took to the woods and in one generation were transformed into wild cats. We fully believe Col. Marshall when we review the Cat Situation on the Post!

TANKERS

TANK TALKS

Home of the Tanker means Maryland. If not his birthplace at least it was the scene of his childhood and the place where he got his early training. After lording it over his domain for ever so many years he was suddenly jerked out by the roots and transplanted in the heart of Dixieland far from his native habitat. And that was pretty tough on the Tanker, or so he thought. And then they took his name away from him and gave him a number, and his sorrows were many. But he busied himself tidying up his new home and arranging his household goods.

Then the far-flung boast of Southern hospitality made good its promise and they came in numbers to see this new member that had sprung up in its midst. And they liked what they saw and said, 'Good. But wouldn't it be better if you had more things in these beautiful buildings, newer things? Isn't there something that we have that you might like?"

Here was a welcoming that the Tanker understood. He had longed for those lovely things that he had seen in the shop windows but had long since despaired that they would ever be his before they had passed through the hands of many, and he said, "Yes."

And the Southern Genii rubbed his lamp and a Ford V-8, new and shiny, appeared. He waved his wand and a Chevrolet, gorgeous in its show-room colors, rolled through the open door. He rubbed his finger and a cut-away Dodge sturdily floated its power on the floor. He rubbed his hands and a Studebaker wheeled in free. He wished for more and Buick and Oldsmobile called out, "Make room for us, we, too, are on the way." And Cadillac's latest V-12 engine came asking for a place. All this and more.

And the Tanker looked back at Maryland and sighed. He looked at his new equipment and swelled with the joy of possession, and he grasped the hand that was extended to him and clasped it with a grip that tried to tell what was difficul for him to express; how much his welcome meant to him, how from now on his hat was off, his vote was for the Automotive Fraternity of Columbus.

FORMER TANKER WRITES ABOUT TANKS

The October issue of "The Pointer" the monthly magazine of the Corps of Cadets of the United States Military Academy, carries the first of a two part article on Tanks by Cadet Yarborough. It will be remembered he received his appointment to West Point while a member of Headquarters Company of this Battalion. The article, a very excellent one deals with the history of Tanks and their development in the armies of the world and is entitled "From Pluteus to T-1E6."

DOINGS OF THE COMPANIES

While we have nothing very startling to report this week; nevertheless nobdoy seems to have been exactly idle about the Battalion. On Tuesday the Refresher Class assembled at Holliday Hill where Captain "Joe" Stuart turned over his tanks to them for driving and firing. Co. F-67 took all members of the class for rides in their various tanks. Everybody was very enthusiastic over the show. On Wednesday Captain Blain turned over his outfit three platoons strong to students of the Tank School for a training problem on Riley Ridge. On next Tuesday Company "D" will again function for the School in a demonstration of concealment and camouflage and on December first will show how tanks move into an assembly position at night. In addition to the above companies are busy preparing for the General Inspector who starts his annual inspection tomorrow.

NEW NON-COM OFFICERS

Promotions have picked up quite a bit lately, especially in Company "E." This week we have three more to report. They are Privates First Class James Nobles and E. C. Brackett promoted to Corporal while Corporal Thomas D. Hedgecock has again reached the grade of Sergeant. Congratulations all of you. Remember there is always a place for a good man at the top of the ladder.

SWIMMING AWARDS

Wednesday morning the Battalion Commander presented to the men present on the Post the Swimming awards for 1932. The awards were as follows:

Tank swimming suits for: Pvt. Charles M. Tannehill, Pvt. Henry J. Thorne, Jr., Pvt. George M. Griswold, Pvt. Herbert B. Jones.

Tank Swimming Coats for winning points in the Post Meet:

Corporal Armand J. Parr, Pvt. Herbert B. Jones, Pvt. Julian W. McCarthy Pvt. Charlie H. Cason, Pvt. George M. Griswold, Pvt. Bennie W. Hill, Pvt. Charles M. Tannehill, Pvt. Henry G. Thorne.

Tank Swimming Jerseys with small letter "T" for being on Bn. Team:

Pvt. Clarence L. Knapp, Pvt. Ward B. Waits, Pvt. Carroll C. Guerry, Pvt. Paul Gullett.

As coach of the 1932 Battalion Swimming Team 2nd Lt. Leroy W. Krauthoff was awarded a Tank swimming Coat.

---

Pvt. Wilson: "I was late to dinner last Sunday and the mess sergeant saved me the tenderest part of the chicken."

Pvt. Hardy: "What part was that?"

Pvt. Wilson: "Some of the gravy."

---

Chaplain: "You should be saving half the money you earn."

Pvt. Randolph: "I don't get that much."

29TH INF.

COMPANY "C"

Just a few lines to let the boys know that Company "C" is still a member of the Two Nine army, and, if I'm a judge, a mighty fine outfit.

The First Platoon did it's stuff at the Georgia-Auburn football game, and from all accounts, the show was a great success. The men of this platoon deserves much credit since it required a lot of hard work to make the drill a success. Sgt. D'Entromont had two squads that did the fighting, and did they fight! (Don't ask me, I didn't even see the game). It must have been some battle, two squads capturing four machine guns, but they did it!

The Company Basketball Team played the Cusseta High School Tigers, and received a neat trimming, 33 to 10. Not bad, with only one Cusseta boy playing, and the rest from all parts of Ala. and Ga. Whatsa difference?

Pfc. Parham (better known as Chin) has just left on a 45 day furlough to be spent in, or around (mostly around) Newnan, Ga. Boy, will the girls get a treat? You don't know the half of it. A boy with a mustache like his (John Gilbert style) is the reason girls leave home.

Pfc. Daigle, Company Clerk, is interested in the purchase of some magazines, eh, Daigle? And since when did Shorty Randall get to be Mess Sergeant? Nuff said, gotta go get mixed up with this chow. See you next week.

Sgt. Bob Reaves.

"Jimmie" Johnson Is Appointed Sergeant

One of the satellites of the 29th Infantry again makes news. Corporal James "Jimmie" P. Johnston, Company "D," is mentioned in Special orders of Colonel John J. Toffey as being appoitned Sergeant upon the recommendation of Lieut. Eugene W. Ridings, commanding Co. "D." Sergeant Johnston was discharged on August 1st, 1932, and on the following day took on another stack, his last before retirement. The last discharge was Johnston's tenth, all with Character Excellent.

Promotions have been coming very rapidly to the "Old Sergeant." Upon re-enlistment, Johnston took his three month furlough, returning October 31, last. On November 3, Special Orders announced that Private Johnston was appointed Corporal, and now, two weeks later, another order appointing him Sergeant. Such meteoric rise indicates the calibre of the man.

One of the many distinctions Sergeant Johnston holds is that he was the first man to have been appointed Private First Class in the 29th Infantry. That occurred in 1916 in Panama when he was a member of Regimental Headquarters company. His service with the 29th dates back before that time. He first enlisted for the 29th in April, 1915 and, but for one enlistment with the 33d Infantry in Panama from 1923 to 1926, he has served with the Demonstration Regiment since that time.

His service with the colors, however, antecedes his first assignment to the 29th by many years; for, on June 17, 1904, when he was not quite twenty-one, Johnston enlisted in the 2d Cavalry. That tour was followed by two more in that same branch. To show the versatility of the man, the service record shows that he then chose to serve a term with the Ordnance Corps. It appears that that was the only way at the time that he could get service near his old home. Born and raised in Boston, Mass., Watertown Arsenal was as near as he could get to home. He had prior to that time had arduous service in the Philippines,—where in two separate tours, he had spent approximately four years,—and in the Cuban Pacification.

Forty-nine years old on his last birthday in September, Sergeant Johnston has seen a varied career. A Sergeant during the World War, he served with distinction with his present Regiment on the extremely difficult and important duty of guarding the Panama Canal. After the World War, when the Regiment was designated as the Demonstration Unit for the Infantry School, it had to be recruited up to war strength again. Sergeant Johnston, in charge of a detail of seven non-commissioned officers, was sent to Fort Slocum to secure recruits. In three weeks he shipped approximately 1300 men to Fort Benning.

Sergeant "Jimmie" Johnston is easily one of the most popular and best known men in the 29th Infantry, known not only within the Regiment but throughout the Post as well.

Corporal Hugh Coleman New Sergeant In 29th Inf.

Upon recommendation of his Company Commander, Capt. Grant A. Schlieker, Colonel John J. Toffey has appointed Corporal Hugh D. Coleman a Sergeant in Company "H," 29th Infantry. Born in Bibb County, Georgia, on June 27, 1907, he now resides in Columbus.

Sergeant Coleman enlisted for "H" Company on November 22, 1926 and has served with that organization continuously since that time. He was discharged a Corporal from his first enlistment and received his third stripe before the expiration of his second enlistment. Several times qualified as an expert gunner with the machine gun, he is a valuable man to his company.

COMPANY "C"

The entire Company is contemplating a big day for Thanksgiving, since it is rumored that the Mess Sergeant has again acquired his good-natured smile, after a long period of that serious expression about the kitchen.

In the near future several of our Beau Brummels will take on a new appearance since the Supply Sgt. has been notified by the Q. M. that several special made uniforms have been received for Co. "C." Look out fair ladies, don't let the "Scenery" fool you. They are the same old "Heart Racketeers."

The fact that Pvt. Warren doesn't visit the dances quite so often here of late doesn't necessarily mean that he has quit. Its just because "The Dancing Daddies" are no longer popular, especially after marriage.

Company "C" is one independent organizaiton. We have representatives of practically every profession or trade. For instance: Clerks, Cabinet Maker, Carpenters, Auto Mechanics, Typewriter Mechanics, "Doctors," Musicians, Cooks and everything else save a chess player.

OFF HAND OBSERVATIONS

They are at it again over in the Tank Section. Remember how Wade caught Dean short in a little wager? Now Wade seems to be somewhat in the soup. Dunn, knowing Wade's propensity for snapping up bets, went over to see Nick Robinson, who has just returned from a course at the U. of Southern California. Nick must have put out some "little known facts of physics" for Dunn returned all primed. He offered to bet Wade that the weight of a man riding upward on a rapidly accelerating elevator increases. Wade, scenting more monkey meat, readily took him up. For the past week Dunn has been studying Einstein and relativity and has proved to his own satisfaction that weight, gravity and inertia are one and the same. He says that the bet is as good as won but to date he has not succeeded in teaching Wade enough Einstein to persuade him to turn over the five.

Thanksgiving Day games have been predicted by the prophet in the November 18th issue of the Herald.

Stanford-Army Picked To Win In Saturday Games

Very few contests are scheduled for this Saturday. The outstanding game in the country finds undefeated Pittsburgh pitted against one of the stronger elevens on the Western coast, Stanford. The Indians have not had a very successful season, losing three games. The loss of Ernie Caddell, elusive half-back, whose brilliant broken-field running dazzled Dartmouth last year, will be a severe blow to Stanford. Pittsburgh will enter the fray with practically full strength.

The Panther record is very impressive. Her schedule was an exceptionally hard one. In successive weeks, she was called upon to face Army, Ohio State, Notre Dame, Pennsylvania, and Nebraska. Five stronger teams could hardly be found anywhere. Yet, when these five games had been played, Pittsburgh still boasted of an undefeated eleven. Army, Notre Dame, and Pennsylvania, all met defeat at the hands of the Panthers, and all until the day when they played Pittsburgh were unbeaten and tied. Nebraska and Ohio State were held to scoreless ties.

And in the face of this awe-inspiring record, your prophet is going to pick Stanford to win this most important intersectional game. The Indians are due to reach their top form any time now; in addition, Pittsburgh has been under the severest kind of fire all season. Every eleven no matter how fine, usually has at least one let-down per season, and the time is ripe for the Panthers to have a relapse.

In the south, Tulane will mar Louisiana State's undefeated conference record to give Auburn a clear and undisputable lead in the title race.

Texas Christian will clinch the Southwestern Conference championship by overcoming Southern Methodist, probably by four touchdowns. Rice will defeat Baylor. Davidson will have difficulty with little Wake Forest but should win. Duke will put the finishing touches on a fine season by crushing Washington & Lee.

In the only two games of much importance in the east, Army faces its traditional rival, Notre Dame, and Holy Cross faces its traditional rival, Boston College.

Army and Notre Dame have one thing in common—they have both been defeated by Pittsburgh. The two teams are evenly matched in all respects. Both have an abundance of reserve material. Both have fast, shifty back-fields. Both have powerful lines.

Outside of its defeat by Pittsburgh, Army has won every one of its games with ease. So has Notre Dame. Army has not been scored on save by the Panthers. Neither has Notre Dame.

A scoreless tie is the most logical outcome, and if anyone wins, it should be Army.

The Boston College-Holy Cross game is almost as hard to pick. Both elevens can be very good at times; likewise, they can be mediocre. Takinga shot in the dark, Holy will win.

In the midwest, Marquette will win over Drake.

In the far west, Gonzaga should boost its winning average at the expense of Montana. Loyola, the little college which held mighty Southern California to a single touchdown, faces Santa Clara. A close game should result from the encounter with Santa Clara winning a one-touchdown victory. More anon.

"Report," said the O. D. at taps inspection.

"We're all in," said Quarterback Harris, "and that's the truth."

Cyclone Reverts to Old Form for Frankie Palmo

Many Strange Mugs To Show On Next Benning Fight Card

Cyclone Smith will again come to the forefront as a mauling battling terror in his fight Tuesday night with Frankie Palmo of Cincinnati. Smith has declared it quits with trying to make a boxer out of himself, and is well content to again take up his old tactics of digging in and scrapping like a Mexican Bull.

Palmo rates high in and around Cincy, and if for no other reason than that, fans must look on him as an attraction to the Benning ring. During the depression, fighters in and around that burg must keep on the go all the time to be in demand, and to get rated at all, and this boy has been getting a lot of calls up there lately. All of the boys who amount to anything in his weight up there have been called on to meet him, and in each instance, he has given a good account of himself. He comes to Benning highly recommended, and will probably go ten fast rounds with the pride of Fort Benning.

Puggy Weinert and Spot Spittle will please the fans for eight rounds of good fighting. It is bound to be good with Puggy in there, as he always makes his opponent fight, whether or not he wants to get in there at all. Spittle is the one boy brought here to meet Puggy who has a chance to stop the Polak Buzzsaw, and this time, it is not apt to be a decision that defeats the Buzzer.

It will be no easy matter for this invader to cop over our Puggy, as he is the toughest, most consistent, and aggressive fighter to ever grace a Benning ring. A treat is in store for about sixteen hundred ring worms on this night, so don't miss it.

Baldy Query . . . now that name might sound queer, but he is a fighter of the first water, just on his way south for the winter month. You know these pugs do duck the north when the geese fly south. In passing, he figured he may as well add the scalp of Chick Liddell to his already full belt, so there you are.

Chick is no setup for anyone his weight, as has been proven in the past, and will be in there, hooking, jabbing and slugging from bell to bell, and this fight alone will rival the final and semi-final for action.

Shifty Schroeder has his hands full to the brim in his opponent, Kid Bowen of Washington, D. C. Bowen comes of the old fighting stock, almost every male member of his family at one time being of the cauliflower variety Bowen. He is among the best in the family, and if eastern press dispatches are to be taken at their face value, he will give Schroeder . . . well . . . some trouble.

Ghost Ghastly and Kid Owens will mix for four rounds of action and hailstorm never before witnessed in a four rounder at Benning. Walden is out to bring back the Ghost's crown to his hosts of followers, and will come close to doing it.

Young Griffin and Tommy Walden will open the negotiations for the night in the curtain raiser. Griffin's only previous show at Benning was something for the fans to sit up and take notice of, and will probably show them more Tuesday night. This young fellow is an up and coming fighter, and will bear watching, and will be a good number to lay your shekels on in the future.

Happy Hearts Continue March To Southern Crown

Fort Valley Succumbs To Powerful Soldier Team, 21-13

The Happy Hearts football team of the 24th Infantry, continued its drive toward first place among southern colored football teams with a 21 to 13 victory over the Fort Valley Normal Institute, at Fort Benning, Saturday, November 19th.

The Happy Hearts, coached by Lt. Howard Johnson, have far surpassed all expectations this season. With a powerful line and a fast backfield, the team has fought its way to victories over the leading college gridiron teams of the south, including Tuskegee Institute, Edward Waters College and others.

West-Enders Add Scalps Of Miles Memorial College, 21-6

Alternating between a battering line smashing attack and a brilliant, deceptive aerial offensive, the Happy Hearts of the 24th Infantry, rolled up a 21 to 6 victory over the Miles Memorial College football team at the Doughboy Stadium, Thursday afternoon. It was the first defeat suffered by the Miles Memorial team this season and gave the Happy Hearts a strong claim to southern colored footbal championship honors.

The score heardly describes the game. The visiting team staged a stubborn uphill battle and fought gallantly during the first half. Early in the third quarter the consistent battering of the Happy Hearts began to tell and the entire second half saw the visitors fighting desperately on the defensive.

Cavalryman Barnes, halfback, Myers at fullback and Tillis at left end were the big guns of the Happy Heart drive. The teams exchanged punts with no gain in the opening half. The Happy Hearts took the oval over their 38 yard line. Collins got loose on a wide end run and was stopped on the visitors' 47 yard strip. Barnes twisted through for seven yards on a beautiful reverse. Meyers snapped a long pass to Tillis, who was stopped on the 11 yard line. Three smashes at the line failed. Tillis took Meyers' pass on the goal line and fell over for a touchdown. Barnes kicked goal from placement for the extra point.

The Happy Hearts shoved over a second marker near the end of the quarter. Taking the ball on their own 30 yard line the Happy Hearts drove to the visitors' 40 yard strip on line drives by Barnes and Collins. Meyers dropped back to the 45 yard line and shot a long pass to Tillis, who picked it out of the arms of two Miles players and crossed the goal line for the Happy Hearts second touchdown. Barnes' toe brought the extra point.

The visitors staged a counter attack in the second quarter. Opening a drive from midfield they began a determined march toward the Happy Heart goal line. Jenkins snapped a pass to Fields that gained 18 yards. Brown skirted right end for 22 yards on a double reverse. A short pass put the oval on the Happy Heart 7 yard mark. Brown crashed off right tackle for a touchdown. A bad pass from center spoiled the chances for an extra point.

The Happy Hearts scored again in the third quarter. The visitors lost the ball on their 40 yard strip when Jenkins fumbled and Vaughn recovered. Hale got 8 yards on a quarterback sneak. Collins swept around his own left end to place the ball on the visitors' 9 yard line. Barnes went off left tackle for a touchdown. Barnes again placed the oval over the bar for the extra point.

During the final quarter the Happy Hearts played safe and smothered every thrust of the visitors. The game ended with the Happy Hearts winning 21 to 6. Thursday's game completed the Happy Heart schedule for 1932. The team, coached by Lieutenant Howard Johnson, is the strongest team ever to represent the 24th Infantry, and is rated as the strongest colored football team in the country.

Little Known Anecdotes About Famous Football Teams

By I. Predictum

The late Knute Rockne was a master of psychology and there is little doubt but what his thorough knowledge of the subject was a contributing factor in his rise to fame.

Perhaps the greatest football team that Rockne ever coached was the one which starred the Four Horsemen. Comparatively little known were the Seven Mules and this anecdote pays tribute to the memory of the stalwart Notre Dame line known by that name.

Notre Dame wen tthrough the entire preliminary season without a defeat. So great was the success of the team and so publicised were the Four Horsemen that they were soon in the early stages of what is known in football jargon as the "swelled head".

Knute Rockne, noting the situation, decided to take steps to rid his star players of the "swelled head". So, in the most crucial game of the year, he started his first team backfield (the Four Horsemen) with his second team line. Rockne had anticipated the result of his startling action. Time after time the Four Horsemen were stopped at the line of scrimmage. And each member of the quartet couldn't understand why he was being held for no gain every time he carried the ball. At the beginning of the second period, Rockne sent in his first team line (the Seven Mules). Walking up to the Four Horsemen, the center said scornfully, "Here are the Seven Mules. Now let's see what you 'swellheads' can do."

The Four Horsemen were quick to note the difference. There were holes now where there weren't any before. And the morning papers tell how the Four Horsemen had suddenly gone wild from the second quarter on to wi nanother great victory, but the Seven Mules were mentioned not at all.

But the lesson that Knute Rockne, the great psychologist, had taught, remained fixed deep in the memory of the Four Horsemen who for the first time realized that a large part of their fame was made responsible only through the presence of the Seven Mules.

Thousands Roar As 29th Demonstrates At Football Game

By AL DURDEN

Saturday, November 19th, the powerful football machines of Georgia University and Auburn, clashed at the Municipal Stadium, Columbus, Ga., in the feature gridiron classic of the southern football season. Twenty thousand football fans from Georgia, Florida and Alabama, lined the stands to witness the battle between the rival teams. Hundreds of former World War veterans were numbered in that vast throng. Men that faced machine gun and shrapnel fire during 1917-18, and then returned home to take up their duties in civilian life and carry on as before. There was an additional attraction to the program, but none of that tremendous crowd of fans were prepared for the thrills that would be furnished, ere the helmeted warriors took field.

Thirty minutes before the game and the stands were packed. Somewhere below the south goal a bugle sounded. As fans looked in the direction of the sound a roar of cheering and hand clapping arose among the fans at the south gate. A band struck up a quick snappy march. Fans expected to see the red and black of Georgia or the orange colors of Auburn come marching in, instead the 29th Infantry Band in neat olive-drab uniforms with white dress caps and white gloves, swung into the gateway and the ramparts of the stadium trembled as the crowd sent up a long roar of cheering for the "Regulars."

Marching in perfect formation behind the Band, came a platoon of Infantrymen. The old timers in the stands began to find their voices as the boys with, "mud behind their ears," came on with the steady, easy stride of the "Pride of the Service." For the next ten minutes the crowd in the stands were held spell-bound with admiration as the platoon of doughboys went through their paces. First came the "Butt's Manual," carried through every movement, perfectly timed to the music which was rendered by the 29th Infantry Band. The troops marched off the field midst thunderous applause.

Norman Park Wins Over Kells In Early Morning Game Yesterday

NAVAL AIR STATION PLAYS KELLS SUNDAY

The Pensacola Naval Air Station football team will fly to Fort Benning Sunday morning to take on the strong Kell team in the afternoon at Doughboy Stadium. They are bringing power and speed with them, and it isn't in the form of airplanes either. They have been wreaking havoc up and down the Florida Coast for the past six weeks, and are coming to Benning to get a little more fresh meat, if you will excuse the expression.

Stinging from the defeat handed them yesterday morning, Lt. Ives' team will be out there fighting with its old-time form to redeem themselves in the eyes of the public. That defeat has done more to bring the team to life than any other one thing that could have happened. They now realize that if they do not hang together, together they will be hanged, or something like that.

Too much individuality was displayed in that game in Memorial Stadium for them to win, and now they are out there this afternoon, fighting to regain that old confidence that goes with teamwork, and cut out the foolishments.

A good game is promised at Doughboy Stadium, and a good afternoon's enjoyment for the fans. The Tanks will be there watching, to see what they have, and so will a goodly number of fans.

The Second Battalion, floundering over its own shoestrings, yielded to the onrushes of a gallant Norman Park College squad yesterday morning at Memorial Stadium, going down in defeat, 12-7.

It looked at the beginning of the game as though the Kells would sail to a safe and sure victory, as the first punt of the game was returned by Sap Saunders, behind some beautiful blocking, for 35 yards. Then again he shot off tackle for a long gain, but here they struck an invisible ray, or something, and the Norman Park boys tightened up their chin straps and went after them. Poor blocking and next to no tackling at all were the main factors in the defeat of the spirited Kell teams.

The first quarter the Kells threatened the Norman goal, but were stopped by their own men in the line of scrimmage. Prophet was losing his head in the close places, failing to call the right plays, when he had plenty of room for them. Norman Park did not threaten the doughboys goal line in this quarter at all.

Going into the second period at a scoreless deadlock, the Kells rushed over a few quick gains, and were then momentarily held by the fighting college boys. A long pass, McAllister to Wilson was good for 35 yards and a touchdown. Prophet kicked the goal.

Norman was aroused after this, and started passing with reckless abandon, completing them at the rate of four out of five. McMullen was doing most of the tossing for the invaders, and standing on his fifty yard line, he tossed a beauty to Moore who raced the remaining ten yards for a touchdown. The try for ponit failed.

The half ended with the score 7-6.

Racing back into the game at the beginning of the third period, the Kells looked as though they would score, but again poor blocking stopped the backs before they were well started. Tommie, Saunders, Prophet and Derrick may as well have been so many sticks running with the ball. It was as futile as that. Norman came out again, after a few bad kicks, by the Kells, and got the ball down to the 12 yard strip. Three plays and the ball was on the six inch line and first down. The Kells held steadily for three tries, but on the fourth Culp ploughed over the center for the winning score.

He's Cautioning Blondie

ROBERT MONTGOMERY and MARION DAVIES in "BLONDIE OF THE FOLLIES"

Cinema Calendar

for Grand, Rialto and Royal

AT THE RIALTO

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY: Offering "The Spirit of the West" with Hoot Gibson, Doris Hill, Hooper Atchley and Lafe McKee. The great cowboy hero of the west rides again . . . packing a hundred new thrills in this surprise story of novelty, inrtigue, daring, comedy and romance. He faces an apparently impossible handciap, to which he finds a solution, by 'whittling down' his opponents until they are his size.

SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Offering "Blondie of the Follies" with James Gleason, Marion Davies and Robert Montgomery. You have been reading this serial that is still running in The Record. Now see the picture. It glorifies the soul of a show girl . . . fighting primitive passion . . . because of a stolen kiss . . . taking you to the hot spots of Broadway and New York's night life!

TUESDAY: Offering' 'Good Sport" with Linda Watkins and John Boles. The story of a husband who wandered . . . and a wife who wandered . . . and a wife who wondered why. A modern, clever, fast moving story that gives the lowdown on lowdown husbands and unwed but not unwooed ladies.

WEDNESDAY AD THURSDAY: Offering "The Strange Love of Molly Louvain," with Ann Dvorak and Lee Tracy. Just a girl of the night . . . a second-hand sweetheart . . . a woman with one guiding instinct, the common right to love and be loved. Ann Dvorak is said to be at her best in this picture with Tracy.

SATURDAY, SUNDAY AND MONDAY:O ffering "Hold 'Em Jail" with Bert Wheeler and Robert Woosley. The cuckoo birds are jailbirds now. All-American halfwits in a t-star prison riot. Here is the goofiest gridiron contest ever filmed by football's greatest "drawbacks."

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Offspring "The Night Mayor" with Donald Dillaway, Evalyn Knapp and Lee Tracy. Politics was his profession . . . love was his pastime. He could make laws and enforce them . . . but he wanted to play too . . . to be nice . . . naughty . . .to live—laugh—and love. That is Lee Tracy as the Night Mayor.

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY, Dec. 1-2: Offering "The Mask of Fu Manchu" with Lewis Stone Boris Karloff, Jean Hersholt and Karen Morley. Here you see the genius of torture. In his palace of mystery, no mind could withstand its secrets—nor the Oriental intoxication of his beautiful daughter. A picture reputed to hold 1,000 thrills and shudders.

AT _ THE _ROYAL

(Beginning 11:15 o'clock Saturday night)

ALSO SUNDAY, MONDAY AND TUESDAY: Offering "Bring 'Em Back Alive" Frank Buck's picture of the jungle that wins plaudits wherever it is shown. You'll see Buck capture a baby elephant with his bare hands. You'll see a 30-foot python at death's grip with a Bengal tiger . . . the man-eating cat entering the native village . . . daring capture of rarest reptiles, the monitor lizard . . . and the supreme thrill of all time, the finish fight between the kings of the jungle, tiger and black panther. Every foot of the picture was actually made in the Malayan jungle country. Frank Buck has brought you a thrilling episode of the jungle haunts. And its all first hand, pictures of the real thing.

So what can a poor prison wardens daughtre do about boy friends? Surrounded by men, she still is as isolated from romance as if she were a lone castaway.

The "neighbors" are not the kind of chaps a girl's parents would care about having her seen with. And she can't ask any boys from the outside to drop in at the prison for a week-end. They mightfear they would get no return ticket.

Even should she be tempted, it really wouldn't be safe for her to become interested in a prisoner. He might be up for bigamy. Or imagine her embarrassment at learning that he was serving time for shooting his sweetheart.

Despite all these dangers, blonde Betty Grable takes a chance by starting a romance with a prisoner in "Hold 'Em Jail," the RKO-Radio comedy now showing at the Grand Theatre Sunday and Monday, with Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey in the starring roles. Love, she tells her warden father, Edgar Kennedy, laughs at locksteps, jeers at jails, and even applauds her becoming some man's ball-and-chain. Especially when the hero of the romance is a handsome star of the penitentiary football team.

Miss Grable isn't the only one to find romance in "Hold 'Em Jail," Edna May Oliver, who plays the warden's austere but ticklish sister, has her light moments of sentiment.

Wheeler and Woolsey are the male principals in these affairs of the heart, and the love scenes are sweet interludes to them from the rough and tumble business of being mauled on the gridiron for the glory of their up-the-river Alma Mater.

Others in the cast of the comedy inspired by the exploits of a penitentiary football team are Rosco Ates, Paul Hurst and a score of famous college gridiron heroes.

RIALTO

"Blondie of the Follies," the latest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer release at the Rialto Theatre Sunday and Monday, is another example of what this producing firm can do in the way of combining excellent story with superb acting and directing.

Marion Davies and Robert Montgomery prove their competence to head a cast which includes such players as Billie Dove, Jimmy Durante, James Gleason, Zasu Pitts, Sidney Toler and Douglass Dumbrille.

Hold 'Em Jail

The two goofy "drawbacks", Bert Wheeler and Bob Woolsey present a football classic.

ROYAL

The fascination which wild animals in their native habitat hold for picture audiences never has been more clearly demonstrated than it is being demonstrated by Frank Buck's "Bring 'Em Back Alive," which will show at the Royal Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. If a yesterday's audience may be taken as typical, "Bring 'Em Back Alive" has an appeal unlike that of any conventional film production—whether it be comedy, or society, gangster, or fictional drama.

Adventure, strife and comedy run throguh this astonishing wild animal picture, in which everything is real, unstaged and unrehearsed. Fact once more proves more astonishing than fiction—and there can be no doubt that "Bring Em Back Alive" is fact. Anyone who witnesses the death struggles between the crocodile and black leopard, the python and the man-eating Royal Bengal tiger; anyone who sees the shots of the elephant herd and the pathetic plight of the lost baby elephant; anyone, indeed, who sees any part of "Bring 'Em Back Alive" knows that the picture which the Van Beuren Corporation has produced is the real thing.

It is impossible to convey in mere words the thrills of "Bring 'Em Back Alive." It is known that several of the sequences in this R-K-O Radio picture were the result of weeks of patient waiting, and they have demonstrated themselves to be well worth waiting for.

"Bring 'Em Back Alive" has such a diversity of convincing jungle episodes that it will be of interest not only for its sure-fire entertainment value but also for its education worth. It is a practical lesson in natural history for young and old. It shows also the strange peoples of distant worlds —the pictures were made in the Federated Malay States. Everyone will thrill to the unprecedented action shots, and learn a thing or two about the real jungle.

Edmund Goulding follows his triumph in "Grand Hotel" by another superlative example of direction. His was no mean task, covering a range of action which included glimpses of New York tenement life, backstage episodes in the Follies, gay Broadway parties in night clubs, luxurious apartments and on board a yacht. His attention to detail and his knowledge of comedy as well as dramatic values have, in this case, had an unusually happy result.

Intra-Maral Football Season Will Open At Doughbov Stadium Saturdav

Benning Boy Scouts Have Clean Slate

The Benning Scouts continued their unbroken string of football victories for the season with a 14 to 0 victory over the Columbus Scouts at the Doughboy Stadium last Sunday afternoon.

The lighter Benning team proved entirely too fast and tricky for the invaders. On defense the army line was unbreakable and on offense their fast charging swept the visitors off their feet.

Buddy Horton, Benning backfield ace, scored both touchdowns. The first marker came in the second quarter on a long pass from E. Barkhurst to Horton. Again in the third quarter Barkhurst punted to the visitors 10 yard line where the ball was downed. On the first play the Columbus Scouts fumbled and Barkhurst fell on the ball. Horton on a reverse play got loose and crashed over for the second touchdown. Barkhurst kicked goal from placement for the extra points.

THOUSAND ROAR AS SOLDIERS DEMONSTRATE

Up at the north end of the field things began to happen. The old-timers looked and then rubbed their eyes to be sure that they were not seeing things. Men in uniform with steel helmets and gas masks at the "alert," were sitting up machine guns, no mistake. There they were, black ugly muzzles, tripods, boxes with belts of ammunition. The guns were set up in the twinkling of an eye, belts of ammunition in place and the gunners snuggling down behind the guns in business like fashion.

Down at the south end of the field a line of doughboy riflemen broke from cover and began hitting the dirt as they came up to the line of skirmish. Things were happening now. The machine guns began to sing their death song, another line of doughboy riflemen swept out and spread out at perfect intervals, the steady crack of the 30-30's were answering the rattle of the machine guns. The first line swept forward as their support doubled their fire. Came another roar from the south end, two speedy, trim built Christie tanks moved up on each side of the advancing doughboys. The roar of the 37mm guns from the armored tanks joined the rattle fo the riflemen and the battle raged.

The tanks kept pace with the advancing riflemen. Somewhere up at the north end the enemy brought a couple of 37 mm's into action. (The old timers up in the stands were living over again the days of Bellau Woods, Chatteau Thierry and the doings of the days of 1917-18.) The first line of the advancing doughboys moved forward, as they came up again there was a glitter of steel, the crowd held its breath as they drove forward with fixed bayonets. It was over in a moment as the first line of doughboys moved past the machine guns and breathed a tired sigh of relief. The battle was over, up there in the stands the people were simply going mad, football was forgotten as they watched the red flame spurt, heard the rattle and roar of the weapons of war and saw those boys move forward into the face of those spitting guns the same as the American soldier has always done during the building of our glorious country and the making of our history.

With the battle over the opposing armies assembled over on the Auburn side lines and settled down to enjoy the gridiron battle between Auburn and Georgia. Up in the stands the "Old-Timers," were at it again. Even during the heat of the game one could hear occasional rifts of arguments as to the prowess of the "Rainbow Division," and other well known units that took part in the big struggle "Over There."

Doughboy Stadium will soon be flying her flags of conquest, signifying a game in progress within her portals. Bands will blare, and banners will flare, as the jersied combatants go after one another's throats, forgetting the hardships of intensive training periods, intent on rushing the spheroid over the little white lines, each play being, in their minds, a potential touchdown.

Doughboys will clash with Doughboys, but the Artillerymen alone remain to be trampled by their brethren of other days. This year, the long praised Tanks will have to take the field as the "Iron Clad Doughboys," that being their pet name since War Department orders have placed them in the Infantry. The 66th and 67th Infantry units stationed here will combine to make a football machine that will more than likely top the heap this year . . . . that is if the Kells don't snap out of it right away. They looked bad yesterday morning against the Norman Park College group.

This game gives the First Battalion their first chance in many moons to romp over the blue decked Kells, and anything is liable to happen when these ancient foes crash in that Stadium. Norman Park only beat the Irish by two touchdowns, and the Kells by one, so take it all with a grain of salt and go on out there to see a good game.

The Artillery, alone, seems to be out of the running for championship honors this year, but Captain F. G. (Pop) Gaston is liable to turn loose some awful dynamite at any time. There is no more efficient coach on the reservation, and wherever you see three coaches congregated, his name is on the lip of each one. His system is to teach football, and then let the players play what they have learned.

Free Booters Bow To 29th; Students Capture Artillerv

The first polo games of regular length played this season, were turned in last Sunday on French Field as the 29th Infantry took a hard fought eight chukker game from the Free Booters, seven and six; and the Students romped over the 83rd Field Artillery, 13 to 0. In general, the play was much faster than in the week before, when the four teams participated in a round robin. The field, however, is not in proper shape to allow top speed playing, and probably will not be for a couple more weeks.

The 29th Infantry, after using a considerable number of re-mounts, were extended to the limit in order to win over the Free Booters in their eight period affair. A beautiful off side play by O'Connor, along with his fiery attack and the beautiful defensive play of Cushman, were great aids to a win. Thompson and Lockett were the outstanding players for the Freebooters, fighting hard all the way to break the deadlock, but were unable to furnish the final punch.

The Second game of the afternoon saw a hard hitting Student team down the fighting Artillerymen. The all-star group of the Student team was enough to defeat a far superior team than that of the Artillery, and they will bear watching through the rest of the season. The Artillery flashed beautiful form at times, and gave evidence of being able later on to develop a powerful defensive team, and with the addition of a few more ponies, will be able to crack the ice for a few wins this season.

Among the newest of the Artillerymen who stood out in the game were Heriott and McMannis. Just give them time, and they will put a team on the field that will be a real threat against any kind of opposition.

and Captain Paul, Infantry.

The Tenderfoot examinations were given to the following named Scouts who passed the test, which covers a number of subjects, with flying colros; Jackson Ayers, Wendall Bevan, Lewis Davidson, Delbert Munson, Oscar Nuendorfer, Jack Pearson, and Max Talbot. After the examinations the Court of Honor congratulated the Scouts on their success and the marks they had made.

Merit badge examinations were given Robert Arms in 1st Aid, and Tony Arms in Public Health.

Lieutenant Colonel Jewett, chair man of the council of Boy Scout activities, was present during the entire examinations, and took an active part in the proceedings.

It was proposed to hold the next meeting of the Court of Honor on December 10.

combat practice; and anti-tank defense.

The infantry, which under the National Defense Act of 1920, was allotted a strength of 110,000, and which has now a strength of 40,331, faces a further reduction to provide its quota of the fifty increment of the increase of the air corps this year.

"The effects of these reductions on an existant depleted infantry strength, are evident" says General Fuqua. "The infantry today is functioning, not only without a factor of safety, but undermanned."

That the infantry will carry on as usual, even under the most adverse circumstances, is indicated by General Fuqua's statement "The infantry has survived this impoverishment by great tenacity of purpose, improvisation, and ingenuity."

GIRL SCOUT NOTES

Scout. With the help of the girls from the Daffodil Troop (who came especially for the occasion) we sang a song to the Brownies called "Who Is This All Dressed in Brown."

After the Brownies went home we had a Flag Ceremony with Ella May Pryer and Patty Green for the flag bearers. Then the Patrol Leaders brought forward their girls to be presented their tenderfoot pins.

Mrs. Matchett sang some songs with us and then we played a game called 'Miss Jenny Jones,' which was loads of fun and warmed us up. Then Mrs. Matchett had to go, but she promised to come back again some time, and we are all looking forward to that meeting.

The P.-T. A. sent some dolls up to the cabin for the Girl Scouts to dress, so we drew numbers from a hat and as our turn came, chose a doll to dress for the unfortunate girls. And, much to our Leader's pride—every girl in the Pine Tree Troop took a doll home. We think both the girls who receive the dolls and the ones who helped to dress the dolls will have a very happy Christmas, don't you?

Every cloud has its silver lining and the disastrous fire which partially burned a four-family wooden apartment house in Block 23 was not without its touch of humor. This one is told at the expense of Lieutenant R. A. Ports, who occupied the second floor of the apartment house. Lieutenant Ports had just retired after attending a party of some sort and, being in a state of exhaustion, slipped off almost immediately into a heavy sleep. Shortly afterwards, the fire broke out and the omnipresent Fire Department arrived on the scene. One of the firemen rushed into Lieutenant Ports' bedroom, seized the lieutenant roughly by the shoulder, and endeavored to acquaint him with the facts of the situation in as brief a time as possible. Slowly the sleep-befogged lieutenant responded to the incessant and feverish urging of his tormentor. But his first words fell upon startled ears, for through the almost indistinguishable mutter that escaped our hero's lips, the amazed fireman made out the following:

"Don' wanna play polo. Go 'way. Don' wanta play polo."

MATA HARI

to him. With the attorney's help, she would play a part for the benefit of the blind man.

Thus it happened that Rosanoff received a long-awaited letter from the dancer. Sister Theresa read it to him.

"Dearest—I shall not be able to see you or even to write to you for some time to come. But don't be alarmed. Asudden attack—nothing really serious—has caused me to be removed to a sanatorium for treatment. . . "

And she went on to say that she had commissioned a friend of hers, a Monsieur Caron, to visit him with news from time to time, that he must not worry about her in the least, that she was not in pain and thought of him all the time and waited only for the day when they could see each other again.

It was a long letter but Rosanoff followed with absorption each and every syllable of it. He would have liked the nurse to read the periods and commas, and when she was done he begged the nurse, in some shame for he was aware that she had a thousand tasks to perform, to repeat it to him—"just once."

He liked especially the part where she said that she was not in pain.

"I am not in pain. I think of you all the time. And wait for the day when we can be reunited."

Not long afterwards he received the expected visit from Maitre Caron, who kissed him on both cheeks and called him "my son." Mata was quite comfortable. The doctors thought that she might need an operation, oh a very minor operation, but this was not at all certain. They were hoping that it could be avoided. If not, then Maitre Caron had been instructed to do everything possible to arrange for Rosanoff to come to her beforehand.

"Not that there is anything to fear," the attorney hastened to assure him. "But it will be such a good excuse to get the hospital authorities to let you —visit—each other." Maitre Caron somehow avoided the word, "see," rather to Rosanoff's amusement. "You understand, Mata thinks of you and longs to—have you with her—all the time."

Truly, in her prison room, there was nothing the dancer so longed for or had so much in her mind as the blind soldier. Not even the expected release. Maitre Caron could bring her no definite news, the nuns noticed that she sat more and more quitely on her hands folded, waiting, remembering perhaps. If this grim compartment of stone recalled to her other sad times of waiting before she had come to Paris to dance, no one else knew. Only once she told the nuns that she had always believed that it was better to lead on earth a brief and intense existence than to "drag oneself through a senescence barren of beauty."

On the day before the one set for the execution, the lawyer had an appointment with the President of the Republic. It was a last resort. The warden and the nuns knew of this and were as tense with sympathy and suspense as if the reprieve were to be brought to them. Mata Hari, however, busied herself with sorting her possessions.

At length she looked up from a suitcase with a gesture of helplessness and said to the nuns, "What can I give you? You don't want jewelry. You can't use clothes."

The younger nun murmured, "There's nothing. We have everything we need."

"Everything you need!" repeated the dancer. "Is that possible?"

"We serve God," the other nun said, "and are content."

Mata Hari looked from one to the other wonderingly. The younger nun was rather pretty and very gentle; there were tears in her eyes for the dancer. Could she have been like that? If she had it to do all over again—from the beginning?

"No," she said aloud. "This is how I am. This is how I had to be. No! I must play my part as it is given me to play it and—take care to make my last performance the best!"

The younger nun gave a little sob. Mata Hari went and put her white hands on the nun's black shoulders. "There . . . little sister . . . that's nothing to cry about . . . You have both been so kind and tender to me though in your eyes I am a great sinner."

When the other sister went out into the corridor to see if the lawyer might have arrived, the warder pressed into her hands a flask of cognac—for the lady—"in case the reprieve didn't come." Smelling salts were no good. This was the real stuff. His grandfather had laid it down in Napoleon's time.

Chesterfields are Milder—

Chesterfields Taste Better

As smokers become more experienced, they demand milder cigarettes. Chesterfields are milder. Their mildness is just as much a feature as the beauty of their package.

The tobaccos are mild to begin with. Patient ageing and curing make them milder still. And Chesterfields contain just the right amount of Turkish—not too much—carefully blended and cross-blended with ripe, sweet Domestic tobaccos.

Chesterfields are milder. They taste better. That's why "They Satisfy."

TOWN TOPICS

The departure of Lieutenant Ralph Pulsifer, popular Mayor of Biglerville and Assistant Secretary of the Officers' Club, for Hawaii early Friday morning is an occasion for regret. While stationed at Fort Benning, this officer established an enviable and meritorious record. Whatever he did he did well, and this columnist feels that he is merely echoing the sentiment of the entire garrison when he bids him farewell.

Lieutenant George E. Lightcap will fill the executive position occupied by Lieut. Pulsifer in the Officers' Club. Best of luck, Ralph!

Wednesday morning, Captain Betts, sitting placidly at his desk at Headquarters, received the disturbing news that a fire had broken out in his residence on Austin Loop. The effect that this announcement had on the captain was instantaneous. Not a second did he waver. Two courses of action were left open to him.

(1) He could reach his house by car, which was parked just outside Headquarters, or

(2) He could temporarily discard dignity and arrive there by foot.

With the quick decision of a man accustomed to such emergencies, Captain Betts unhesitantly chose the second course. Passers-by were startled by the flying figure of a man sprinting swiftly down Austin Loop and gaining momentum every moment, True, the sprinter was not wearing the conventional track garb but the cumbersome army uniform worn instead did not seem to be a serious draw-back. The amazing apparition rounded into the home stretch, finishing with a burst of speed that would have mortified Frank Wycoff or Charlie Paddock had they been present.

Unfortunately, there was no one nearby who had the presence of mind to time Sprinter Betts in his swift dash down Austin Loop. So whether the Benning Pheidippides succeeded in establishing a new record for the 220 yard dash will never be definitely known. But one thing is certain—he couldn't have been far from it.

The fickle dame Weather has been bent on impeding the progress of all the handicap tennis tournaments. For a while, it appeared as if the tournaments would be completed regardless of existing weather conditions, but even the most rabid tennis fans hesitated to get out in a driving rain for the sole purpose of whacking a little white ball to and fro.

Now at last it seems that the tournaments which have been in progress at least two weeks longer than expected have a fair chance for ulti-

Monographs Are Given By Advanced Class Students

Analysis of military operations on various fronts during the World War, was the center of attention on Wednesday, of the advanced class of The Infantry School, whose studies of military history are being directed by Major Edwin F. Harding, chief of the fourth section, academic department.

The operations of the British Expeditionary Forge from August 17 to August 27, 1914, were discussed in detail by four officers, members of the class.

Captain Charles F. Cooper was the first speaker who gave a resume of the British concentration in Belgium, and the battle of Mona from August 17 until midnight of August 23-24.

The battle of Le Cateau was discussed by the two following speakers.

Captain Wilbur J. Fox, the next Captain Macey L. Dill, and Lieutenant James C. Fry. Captain Dill's discussion opened with the operation beginning at dark August 25, and covered the period until noon of the following day, and Lieutenant Fry continued the discussion of the battle from noon August 26, until dark August 27.

Activities of American Marines in Nicaragua formed the basis of an account of the personal experiences of a Marine officer acting as a company commander of the Nicaraguan National Guard, which was recited by Captain John C. Wood, U. S. Marine corps during the military history periods on Thursday. Operations in the Central American republic in April, 1931 was the subject of Captain Wood's talk.

Other speakers on Thursday will be Captain Howard W. Lehr, Lieutenant Charlie Q. Lifsey, Captain Barrett DeT. Lambert, Captain Edgar H. Keltner, and Captain Don C. Faith. The operation of a large trained army in the early stages of the war will be the topic which will be discussed in five parts by the speakers, and will be based upon the first Battle of the Marne, beginning on Sept. 6, 1914 and continuing until Sept. 12.

Co. Officers' Class Makes High Scores In Record Firing

High scores in record practice with the automatic rifle were made by members of the company officers' class of The Infantry School, according to orders made public today by post headquarters.

Second Lieutenant Francis E. Howard, led the group of one hundred and twenty-three officers, who fired the course, with a score of 646. A second lieutenant also led each of the two other qualification groups, the highest score in the sharpshooter class being that of Second Lieutenant Daniel F. Walker, 499. In the marksman's group Second Lieutenant James S. Luckett led with a score of 437.

Included in the group of one hundred and two experts are two marine officers, two officers of the Cuban army, and one of the Chinese army. Among the eighteen sharpshooters are one marine officer, and a field artillery man.

Seal of Approval on Seals

President Hoover is shown in the garden of the White House with three child health crusaders who had delivered the Chief Executive's quota of Christmas Seals to aid the annual campaign of the National Tuberculosis Association. Just before the picture was made the President released homing pigeons which carried his official endorsement of the campaign to the association headquarters in New York.

Technique And Fine Points Of Polo To Be Explained in Series of Articles

Major Archibald V. Arnold, Field Artillery, in the first of a series of articles on polo, explains the system of handicapping players and teams, and gives the handicap ratings of several Fort Benning players. In subsequent articles, Major Arnold, who is a member of the Fort Benning Committee, will discuss the game both from a technical and a spectator's viewpoint.

POLO HANDICAPS

By Major A. V. Arnold, F. A.

The Polo Handicap Committee at a recent meeting surveyed the activities of polo players and made recommendation to the corps area polo representative of handicaps to be carried by post players for the coming season. These were based on observed play during last season and this season.

These handicaps will be incorporated in the list of handicaps of Army players of the United State Polo Association.

The handicap is based on the individual's polo playing ability. This can be analyzed further. He must be consistent, sure, accurate hitting at all speeds. He must be able to contol the ball, hit to the distance and point on the field. Long hitting alone is not always as valuable as accurate hitting. A short accurate shot may be of greater value than longer hitting not so well-controlled. The player must be a good horseman. He must be able to train and develop his ponies so that they are easily controlled at all speeds. The ponies must be well disciplined and well conditioned.

The player must have game sense, aggressive spirit, appreciation of cooperation with other players, knowledge of team work and ability to play it; together with a knowledge of the generalship of the game, tactics, and strategy.

The handicap is a relative ranking based on 10 goals as the best. Hitchcock, captain of the American team which played in the international matches is said to be the best polo player in the United States, and perhaps in the world. His play at 10 goals gives us the high on the scale that runs from 1 to 10. The player starts at 0 and as he develops in hitting, riding, and team play, he is considered for an increase in handicap. This handicap may be considered as his value to his team in goals he can score, but this is not always a true viewpoint. He may be only a one goal player, but he may have the leadership and ability to fit into the team work so that the team plays better than its rating in handicap. The handicap shows the player's relative rating as an individual, and is used in some games to give a basis for evening up the play.

To arrive at the handicap of a team the total of the individual handicaps is taken. In instance, Team A has one player handicapped at two goals, two handicapped at one goal each, and one no goal man. The team handicap is the sum of the individual handicaps or four goals. This team is to play Team B. having two two goal players, and two one goal players. Team B has a team handicap of six goals, or two goals more than Team A. A will start the game with a credit of two goals, this advantage being because they have a lower team handicap. Thus, by a consideration of individual handicaps the team handicap is arrived at. This team handicap gives a basis on which to match teams and give the weaker an opportunity to play with a stronger team with a fair chance of winning. If the teams are

Tournaments Are Resumed After Delay By Weather

Another period of bad weather hindered the completion of the handicap tennis tournaments, but it is hoped that most of the tournaments will be completed by the end of this week.

In a decided upset. Captain Phillips and Mrs. Evans defeated the high-ranking Lt. Sherburne and Mrs. Schneider, in straight sets 6-3, 6-3. This was a first round match. Phillips exhibited a very good branfid of tennis in this match and his partner, Mrs. Evans, made several beautiful lobs to capture points.

Lieutenant Lynch and Mrs. Lynch, highest ranking woman played on the post, were not extended in their match wth Captain Lovett and Mrs. Wallace. The first set was taken at 6-2, and the last at 6-3. The winners played very good tennis.

Lt. Newman and Mrs. Luse won by default from Lt. Gavin and Mrs. Gavin.

With the exception of these three matches in the Mixed Doubles Tournament, no other matches in other tournaments have been played because of the inclement weather.

Many interesting and important matches are scheduled fo rthe week-end. Outstanding among these is the Bassett-Sherburne match which will be played probably on Saturday. Irving and Newman are the only two competitors in the Men's Singles Tournaments to reach the semi-finals so far. Captain Drake, number one ranking player on the post, defeated Lieutenant Lynch by scores of 7-5, 6-2.

Very few matches have been played in the Woman's Doubles Tournament to date.

Benning Boxers To Stage Exhibition For Gov. Roosevelt

President-elect Roosevelt and the patients of Warm Springs, Georgia, will see some of Benning's best exponents of the art of pugilism in action Tuesday, December the sixth. An unusual boxing exhibition will be presented by the Athletic Department of Fort Benning at that time, the bouts being from two four rounds in length. There will be no admission charge.

Top-notchers who will be seen in the ring at Warm Springs will include Corn Griffin, Cyclone Smith, Puggy Weinert, Liddell, Goss, and many others. All are professionals.

Next Production of Benning Thespians To Be Mystery Play

The Infantry School Dramatic Club will present its second play of the current year on December 16th. and 17th., Friday and Saturday. "Cock Robin," a mystery play in three acts, is the title of this production. The cast, which includes Lt. Aloysius E. O'Flaherty, who played the male lead in "The Perfect Alibi," Captain Harvey J. Golightly, who appeared in "Paris Bound" last year, and Lt. Col. Elmer F. Rice, who has appeared in many plays in Fort Benning, has been working hard under the direction of Mrs. H. A. Wadsworth.

A daytime dress of purple triple sheer.

By VERA WINSTON

Purple and gray are two hues that are attracting much attention just now. Both colors have staged a comeback after an absence ot several seaons and both are slated for more general wear next spring. Purple and gray and purple with white are two good combinations that should be seen within the next few weeks. The frock depicted in today's drawing is in purple triple sheer, and features a most interesting and unusual collar which croses over and snaps in back. The puffed sleeves are intercsting too.

Girl Scouts

Cardinal Troop

Our Tenderfoot girls are working rapidly toward second class and know almost all about the compass and the Morse code.

Today we had a compass competition, each patrol with sixteen papers with the points of the compass printed on them. We arranged them in a circle, as near correct as we knew, and were given points for our weekly scores.

Mrs. Brown showed us how to hold the signalling flag and taught us a few letters; also some simple words.

She then passed some of the girls in observation, as part of the second class test. The meeting ended in the singing of several jolly songs, which we plan to sing on hikes. Among them were Mary Ann McCarthy, My High Silk Hat, and John Jacob.

Daffodil Troop

On Friday, November 25, Ann Cota took over the Girl Scout meeting, as her patrol had won the most points during the month of November. Following the usual flag ceremony was a treasure hunt. When all reported in, it was found that Dorothy Negroto's patrol had won the prize of ten points. After this the girls separted into two groups. The tenderfoots and their helpers went into the back room while the first and second class scouts played signalling and guessing games until the tenderfoot girls joined them. Then all sang songs in a good night circle.

Marian Bloomquist, Scribe

Pine Tree Troop

Last week the Cosy Corner Patrol Leader and her assistant planned the meeting because the Cosy Corner Patrol had the most points in winning games and so on.

The first thing we did was to play a game called "I Am Thinking." Next was Bird Riddles and some were tricky.

Then we played a game rather like musical chairs. It was called "Safety Spots." Little pieces of paper were put all over the floor. We had to dance around and when the music stopped we had to touch a Safety Spot. A Spot was taken out each time until there was one spot and two girls.

Fourth was a game called "Nature Squares." Each patrol had a slip of paper on which she was to write (her patrol helped) a flower, tree, bird, animal, and insect beginning with M, O, T, A, B. That is, a flower beginning with M, a tree beginning with M, etc. The same with O, T, A, B.

The last was called "Sardines." Funny name for a game wasn't it?

One girl was given five minutes to hide. Then when the time was up they all started to hunt for her. If somebody saw her she was to wait and hide with her when no one was looking. If somebody else saw them she was to join them and so on until the first four girls in a patrol were there. They won.

Those were all of the games we played.

Now what do you suppose happened?

The Leader who had planned the meeting brought in four paper sacks filled with pop corn all popped. One sack for each patrol.

She had two prizes, one for Safety Spots and the other for Bird Riddles. Phyllis Partridge won Bird Riddles and was given as a prize a box of candy.

Lillian Evans won Safety Spots and the prize was a cellophane belt.

It was a pretty nice meeting wasn't it?

LIEUTENANT PEEP'S DIARY

Wednesday, Nov. 23.

To my humble thatched dwelling at the close of the day's session filled with mixed emotions whether to give thanks for the approaching Day or to rejoice that there is but one Sahara Sam to require hours of homework during vacation. If the size of the present assignment compared to the number of vacation days is a true criterion I cannot but devoutly hope that his course may be completed before the Christmas holidays. Major "Capone" Cota might be included in my prayers except that his assignment of homework requiring a mere brace of hours does render him ineligible of consideration.

Thursday, Nov. 24.

Up very betimes, foregoing my usual holiday habit of late rising, that I might witness the insertion, by the good wife, of The Bird into the oven. Did he in life present but half the imposing figure he did make at this moment (surpassed only by his table appearance) he had been king of the flock.

A part of the morning spent meandering about the kitchens and dining halls of soldier messes. Annual observation of the phenomena of these places on holidays does in no wise diminish my delight at seeing G. I. cars full of roasted turkeys in the process of being carved; young mountains of snowy mashed potatoes being divided into smaller hills for serving; oyster stew in plenty to drown the mess force without crowding; lakes of brown gravy in pans covering a half acre of stoves; one one side, insult irreparable to the bird of birds, a few baked hams; barricades of hot biscuits awaiting the onslaught of K. P.'s armed with serving platters; tables already set and laden past groaning with "horse doovers"; cakes decorated to shame Sheba's queen; platters of salad and two kinds of pie, and all in such profusion that for my life I could see no square of space whereon to set the food when it should arrive from the kitchen. And so to my quarters again to operate on The Bird and all the fixin's—including bicarbonate of soda.

Friday, Nov. 25.

The date does remind one that the open season for gift guessing is again upon us. And I must not again neglect Aunt Beulah as of last year for altho it was but accident it did have the earmarks of design, not easily explained away and her with a cool hundred thousand.

Apprised this day by the daily press that one Critz, a first cousin of the late Smith Reynolds, "was found shot through the head and seriously wounded in the bathroom . . . ", the one thru the head not having the desired effect, apparently.

Saturday, Nov. 26.

Up betimes and in a better spirit than of yesterday, the bicarb having proved most efficacious.

Sunday, Nov. 27.

Greatly taken by a description and an illustration in the Sunday gravure sheet of a bridge table which shuffles and deals the cards. Such device coupled with the automatic bidding and playing devices now rampant should allow a contract foursome to get their playing done while they attend the movies. And I do think this to be the sensible thing to relieve bridge of its drudgery and to leave the players their unimpaired faculties to concentrate on the post-mortem.

Wednesday, Nov. 28.

Major Cota in fine fettle this morning and more full of humor than is deserved or expected of a Monday. Some to do over the wearing of name plates which Triplet does explain as likely occasioned by some student impersonating an officer. Did discover, quite by accident that Robins is a bridge player of experience when he, after reading the announcement in the daily bulletin, muttered something about "a paradox—that bridge party in the Harmony Club."

Home in high spirits for having received an "S" in automatic rifle, which spirits were quickly curbed upon coming face to face with my Post Exchange bill. I am not so imbued with the thirst for knowledge that I would not cheerfully trade the bill for a U—or even a V.

Tuesday, Nov. 29.

Intrigued by the optimism of our overlords as displayed in the daily bulletin reading ". . . the wood duck . . . comes straight in . . . uttering its plaintive, piercing 'whoo-eek' for some distance before alighting. By order of the Commandant." Now we are cognizant of this, as doubtless is the Commandant but can Headquarters be quite sure of the word getting around to the ducks?

And so to my quarters in hope that I may not have to shovel snow from the sidewalks.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

CHILD HEALTH

The mother who helps her child to establish steady habits is laying the best possible foundation for good general health, for steady nerves, and the power to resist disease.

Growing children need a great deal of sleep to offset the mental strain of just growing.

Start the child right. Encourage its self development. Cultivate those old fashioned virtues of self control and obedience. Without these virtues you cannot get a child up early enough in the morning for an unhurried breakfast. This sort of day's beginning should become a habit and should set the pace for the entire day. Make the breakfast simple, but nourishing and satisfying and do not let the child hurry.

The age of the child governs the amount of sleep he should have. Those from the ages of 6 to 8 need 12 hours of sleep every night. Those from 9 to 10 need 11 hours; those from 11 to 13 need 10 hours; those from 14 to 16 need 9 hours.

Some need more. The child who gets too little sleep soon shows the effect of it. He becomes tired in school hours and therefore inattentve. His nervous strain is increased. He is unable to keep up with the other children. He is more susceptible to colds and illness.

The more sleep, the less illness is the general rule to remember.

TOWN TOPICS

mate completion in the near future. The present cold spell is not likely to dampen the enthusiasm of the tennis adherents on the post, who bear hardship like stoics, at least as far as this sport is concerned.

Student officers are not the only ones who are groping along the walls of knowledge here at the post. The Woman's Club, not to be outdone by mere men, recently held a meeting in the Card-room of the Officers' Club to discuss the pros and cons of the new contract bridge scoring rules. Elaborate charts were drawn up, blackboards were covered with a maze of intricate figures. To the casual observer, it must have seemed that a Council of War was being held or something on that order, for nothing was spared in an effort to provide the scholastic atmosphere. Unfortunately, such phrases as "Vulnerable" and "Not Vulnerable" gave the whole story away.

It is reported that Major Arms, Benning's bridge expert, was very relieved when not called upon to instruct the thirsting-for-knowledge woman's class in contract bridge.

The popularity of the Officers' Club is readily apparent when one considers that only eighteen officers in Fort Benning are still unnumbered among the members. This is the highest percentage of enrollment since the establishment of the present Officers' Club in 1919.

A foursome consisting of Majors Bradley and Lewis and Captains Chance and Hugh Evans recently went on a hunting trip in South Georgia. Explorer Chance tells this one on Captain Evans.

Three crows and a hawk were under observation when suddenly a farmer shouted frantically "Kill the hawk." Captain Evans, always quick to oblige, drew aim and fired, bringing down not the hawk but one of the crows. Explorer Chance, drawing a natural conclusion, deduced that the worthy captain was in ignorance as to the difference between a hawk and a crow. Captain Evans, on the other hand, was emphatic in his denial of what was to his mind an unjust accusation. So whether the captain's aim was faulty or whether he actually did nto know the difference between a hawk and a crow, will probably always remain one of the great unsolved mysteries.

Christmas Week means Holiday Week to almost everybody, but to the personnel of the Officers' Club, it means that the effort put out ordinarily must be tripled. For example, there will be three dances that week instead of the customary one. Teas, suppers, and other social functions will keep the staff of the Club working continually from five-thirty in the morning until twelve at night.

Lieut. Pulisfer Leaves Friday For New Assignment

Lieutenant Ralph Pulsifer, assistant secretary of the Officers' Club, Fort Benning, Ga., concluded his duties at Fort Benning on Thursady preparatory to his departure tomorrow for New York, where he will board an army transport sailing for the Hawaiian Department on December 22nd.

Lieutenant Pulsifer has been on duty at Fort Benning since September 17, 1829, and upon reaching the Hawaiian Isladns will be assigned to the Infantry, Hawaiian Department.

PRESENCE OF MIND

It is said of Napoleon that he could spring from the soundest sleep into the instantaneous possession of all his mental faculties.

The great Block 23 fire of two weeks ago has supplied plenty of evidence that not all of our otherwise brilliant young lieutenants possess this Napoleonic characteristic. The story of how Lieutenant Ports received the news that his house was on fire has already appeared in print. Town Topics scooped us on that. Readers of that promising column will recall that the sleepy lieutenant shook off the rescuing firemen and rolled over, muttering "Go way, I don' wan' to play polo."

As a matter of fact, Town Topics only got half the story for Lieutenant Ports, even after being shoved out of the blazing building into the chill morning air, was still far from being alert. The salvaging of his household goods was in progress, however, and he wanted to do something to help the worthy cause. Accordingly he plunged back through blinding flame and strangling smoke. Spectators, admiring his bravery, assumed that he had for a few minutes later he emerged, choking, with nothing in his hands but wearing on his head his brand new polo helmet.

Now comes a similar story on Lieutenant Gene Ridings. When awakened by Mrs. Ridings with the startling information that the building was on fire he showed almost as little interest in the matter as Lieutenant Ports. Finally made to comprehend, however, that the occasion for his rude awakening was somehing more serious even than missing an early formation with the justly celebrated demonstration regiment, he sat on the edge of the bed and struggled mightily to shake off the lethargy of slumber.

"The house is on fire" cried Mrs. Ridings frantically. "Get the baby and get out."

"I'm coming" replied the lieutenant struggling to his feet with an effort, "but I don't see why we have to disturb the baby. Les let him stay here."

HUNT CASUALTY

Major Lucius K. Patterson, the genial medico with the hypnotic power, and Captain Joseph A. Stuart of the Tanks, having finished a hard afternoon of quail shooting, prepared to start for home.

The Major started his Ford and put it in gear. There was a slight lurch forward but beyond that no movement. As the engine appeared to be working perfectly, the Major, mystified at the strange behavior of his trusty mount, tried again with the same result. Then he tried reverse, but the Ford was as reluctant to go backward as forward.

At this stage of the proceedings, Captain Stuart suddenly came to life.

"What did I do with my gun?" he exclaimed, pawing excitedly among the sundry articles of hunting equipment.

"How should I know?" replied the Major as he climbed out of the car to see what was the trouble. "I have enough to do to take care of my own."

Both mysteries were solved simultaneously when Captain Stuart's favorite pump gun was discovered tightly jammed between the spokes of the wheel.

It was a sad tanker captain who relieved the mangled remains of his cherished fowling piece from the unaccustomed function of acting as a brake for a Ford. It was still a weapon but it looked more like a boomerang than a gun.

Major Patterson did what he could to cheer the Captain up.

"You've got a gun now that you can shoot around trees with," he commented. "Next time we go out maybe you'll be able to make some of those shots you've been missing all day."

FAULTY PROVING GROUND

Adjutant General Lewis, in addition to being an executive, actor, bon vivant, and athlete of note, is also a resourceful, albeit generally unsuccessful, small game hunter.

Now one of the genial adjutant general's problems for the current season is to obtain all of the advantages of shooting over a good dog without buying one. The impounding of a hunting dog having been reported at headquarters, Nimrod Lewis thought that the problem was solved. If no one claimed the dog, he stood ready to give it a good home, provided, of course, that it knew its stuff.

Major Lewis, however, had no intention of accepting a pig in a poke. In order to assure himself that the dog he was about to adopt was worthy of his humane interest, he repaired to the pound and took the interned pointer out for a day in the field. The dog worked beautifully and the major was delighted. In the flush of his pride and assurance of ownership, he decided to call his gift from the gods "Goofus" after the historic buck which the boys of the Thanatopsis Club pass from hand to hand. Visions of a quail a day for thirty days rose before his eyes. Such pleasant musings, however, came to an abrupt end when the bird hound, after an hour or so of faultless performance, vanished.

The distraught Adjutant General whistled, called, and combed many acres of territory to no avail. Then, just as he was debating whether to continue the search into the night or give up and return to a dogless home, he spied Goofus cavorting joyously about the skirts of a woman whom the major recognized as Mrs. Thompson, wife of Sergeant Thompson, well known to Benning residents, as a mighty hunter before the Lord.

Major Lewis almost embraced Goofus in his enthusiasm over the reunion and he was profuse in his thanks to Mrs. Thompson for her apparent interest in his dog.

"I can't understand, however," said the major, "why he ran away from me and came to you."

"I can't either," said Mrs. Thompson. "unless it is because he happens to be my dog."

The crestfallen Nimrod renounced his ownership gracefully, but it was a disappointed Adjutant General who told us this sad tale that evening.

"And to think," he concluded, "that with all of Benning's ninety-seven thousand acres to hunt in, I had to pick that locality to hunt in."

THAT GREELEY ITEM

The Benning Herald compositor evidently has a deep seated personal grudge against Lieutenant H. B. Greeley, the serious minded young actor who portrayed the part of Edward in the recent Dramatic Club production of Pomeroy's Past.

Annoyed by the compositor's deletion of the play reviewer's flattering reference to Actor Greeley's performance, we endeavored to make up for the omission by quoting from the critic's manuscript in our own eagerly awaited column. The compositor let it by this time, but in such a mangled form that the subject of the comment cannot tell whether he ought to thank the critic for his few kind words or sue him for libel.

We are getting stubborn about this thing. We hereby serve formal notice on the editors, typesetters, proof readers, printer's devil and all other employees of the Benning Herald that we intend to keep on resubmitting this item till it appears as written.

"Lieutenant Greeley as Edward gave ample evidence that the stern requirements of the Company Officers' Course do not preclude acquiring distinction as a Thespian."

Now all together, men. Let's get this right.

PLAT THAT FAILED

In last week's Turkey Tournament, Golfer John Jenkins, finding himself matched with the renowned Liston, was confronted with the problem of doing something to offset his opponent's masterly technique.

Remembering Napoleon's maxim that the moral is to the physical as three is to one, Colonel Jenkins took counsel with himself to devise ways and means for giving his competitor an unfavorable moral set-up. Knowing Captain Liston to be averse to the spot light, he arranged for a small but select gallery to follow the match and prevailed upon Lieutenant Mergens to have the motion picture camera on hand to shoot several hundred feet of the faultless Liston form.

The match was played amid the subdued murmerings of the admiring gallery and the disconcerting clicking of the camera but the imperturbed Liston wasn't fazed. Neither the presence of his contemporaries nor the realization that he was leaving a record for posterity could take his mind off his game. If anything, he did better than usual for he shot a 76. The Colonel's ingenious goat-getting plot was a flop.

INFANTRY SCHOOL HUNT INFORMATION SERVICE

Last Saturday night Sir Sidney Negrotto M. F. H., having retired at 8 o'clock in order to be bright and fresh for the 5 AM hunt scheduled for the morrow.

At 11 p. m. the insistent jangling of the telephone roused him from dreams of baying hounds, thrilling "runs" and beautiful "views." Sir Sidney, thinking it must be some emergency, dragged himself from his warm, comfortable bed to answer it.

Mrs. Schneider, one of the Lady Whips, was on the wire.

"I just called up to find out what time the hunt starts" said Mrs. Schneider smartly.

"Five o'clock" snapped Sir Sidney and "Bang" went the receiver as he slammed it on the hook.

Lady Whip Schneider did not appear at the hunt. Sir Sidney fears that he may have been just a trifle too brusque. He has written to Dorothy Dix to find out just how a Master of Fox Hounds ought to handle such a situation.

PICKING ON THE CRIPPLES

Once a year Corporal Campbell, I. S. D. and Private Kingsberry, of the Tanks succeed in breaking into the exclusive company of those mentioned-or-damned in the Flare. Their passports are their hunting permits. This year they qualify by virtue of the peculiar game taken on their last expedition. Their bag consisted of one three-legged squirrel and one blind 'possum.

Tank Talks

By Capt. L. L. Williams

CARDBOARD TANKS

It was some years back that Hollywood built the first cardboard tank. So successful was it on the silver screen that Aberdeen has seized upon and perfected the idea. A whole armful of beaverboard was sent to Fort Benning and delivered to the Tank Chassis Group. When properly pieced together it became the hull and turret of a prospectve Christie Tank. Not one but several of these hulls were thus pieced together. The idea was a master stroke of genius.

In the past our pilot models have been built something like this. The user wants a tank with a certain performance, so much room and so many guns. The man who has to design on this specification finds that it is impossible to give the user all that he wants and he cuts a little here and leaves off a little there, finally the completed tank is delivered into the hands of the service. Granted that it has the desired performance it probably is far from what the man who has to ride in it would lke. Hence the cardboard tank.

Before letting the contract for the new Christies these several model hulls were constructed and sent to the user for his approval. With a pair of shears and a pastepot the Infantry Board was able to make all the changes that seemed desirable. The only stipulation the designer made was that the board wouldn't change the size of the hull where it had to fasten on to the chassis. Bevond that the sky was the limit. Now everybody is satisfied and at no particular expense. All that remains is to bundle up the approved solution, pin the blueprints to it, give it to the lowest bidder, and in time the perfect tank will be ours.

BATTERY ATTENTION!

Now that the carburetors and air cleaners of our future army mechanics have been thoroughly investigated, it won't be long before the floorboards will be up and the batteries get their due share of punishment. Brooks, Farish, et. al., have started them on the way to being battery conscious. And how about you? Are you getting battery conscious these days?

Everything has been lovely so long as the warm weather lasted, but with a few successive cold mornings, more than one hand crank has had to be resurrected. Cold weather, cold engine, cold oil, give a battery no mean job in the morning. A little continued application of the starting button and she won't turn over at all. Don't keep your foot on the button until this happens. Take it in short spurts, a few seconds at a time. If everything is right with this engine it ought to start soon. If it won't, look for trouble somewhere else. But even if it does start you are probably gradually draining the battery until it becomes too weak to turn the engine over at any time. A little figuring will show you what's happening inside the battery.

When the engine is stiff on a cold morning it may take anywhere from 350 to 500 amperes to turn it over. Let us take an average of 400. Let us assume that it required 30 seconds of properly handicapped, the play over a series of games should result fifty per cent victories for each team.

Because there is such a wide variance in each handicap division and because the development of team play makes for winning teams, the handicap is not always the criterion of the best team. However, it gives the best available means for making play fair and even.

Remembering that Hitchcock, the best American player, is handicapped at ten goals, we find that several army players have developed until they are well up on the handicap scale. Major C. C. Smith, Cavalry, Captain C. H. Gerhadrt, Cavalry, Captan C. A. Wilkinson, Q. M. C., and Captain P. P. Rhodes, F. A., are rated as six goal players.

Captain G. E. Huthsteiner and Lt. M. M. Jones, Cavalry, carry five goals.

In the handicapping of army players there are four six goal players; two five goal players, eighteen four goal, forty-nine three goal, one hundred and forty-six two goal, and four hundred one goal players.

To arrive at a comparison of the game at Fort Benning we find on the handcap list four two goal players, fifteen one goal and twenty with no handicap. Lieutenant Ben Jacobs, who played with the 29th Infantry team up to 1931, is rated this year as a four goal player. Major Terry Allen, Cavalry, of last year's advanced class, rate a three goal man.

Due to the experience of last year's play some of the players have had an increase in their handicaps. Lieutenant Westlund, 29th Inf. has been raised from the one goal class to a handicap of two, and the following named players have been rated with a handicap of one goal: Lieutenant Stephenson, Captain Halloran, Lieutenant Sweeey and Capt. Cushma.

It is expected that with another season's play many among other the Fort Benning polo players will have developed up the scale of playing excellence and will find themselves being classed in the higher division.

cranking to get started. You have drained 200 ampere-minutes from the battery. You now run to the office, which we will say totals ten minutes of running. During this time the generator was charging the battery at a rate of 12 amps. You have replaced 2 ampere-minutes, except we must deduct about one-third for electrical loss in overcoming battery resistance, etc. The average battery has a capacity of somewhere around 90 ampere hours. If the above is a fair cample, it won't be long now.

The next step is the service station battery shop. A better idea is to let them look it over before this happens That extra ten minutes in the morning is much better for the disposition than hand-cranking your way to work.

I. O. D.

We are glad to see Master Sergeant Otis Glenn on the outside again after a stay in the Station Hospital with an attack of "flu". The Greencord bowling team will be considerably strengthened by his return to the lineup. At the time of his illness, Sergt. Glenn was in third place among the leading bowlers of the garrison.

Recent activities in the art of scrubbing and shining on the part of Mule Hess, has been the source of much comment by his tent mates. The secret is now out, Mule has been bucking for an additional stripe. A vacancy is going to occur over in the Weapon Section in a short period and Mule has his eye on the opening. Well it is a poor soldier that has no ambition and Hess is showing the proper stuff. "ATTABOY MULE."

A glance at the bulletin board over at the Post bowling alley, shows the Greencords leading by a nice margin in the enlisted men's bowling league. Our second team is not doing so bad. At the present time the Blues are perched safely in fourth place and promise to be further up in the percentage column by the next writing.

Heard at inspection:

Sgt. Smith—"Pull your feet back Pvt. Gable."

Pvt. Gable—"Them feet don't belong to me, they belong to Pvt. Knox in the rear rank."

Sgt. Don Isham is getting punch drunk. According to reports he has been noticed answering telephones when no phone has rung.

This boy Gibbs is having all of the luck lately. First he is promoted to acting top kick. A few days ago he was promoted to the grade of sergeant. Nice going Gibbs, we are all for you.

Private McElveen, galloping policeman, recently returned from a 60-day furlough up in the Carolinas. Mack tells us that they are still using the same old grape vine as transportation across the hollow between home and the railroad station.

HQ., HQ. BTRY. AND C. T.

The Inspector General completed his tour of inspection of this battalion Wednesday, Nov. 23. From all reports the battery lived up to its old standing of being one of the best batteries in this battalion. The Battery Commander was well pleased with the outfit as a whole and wishes to take this opportunity to express his appreciation for the interest that the men showed in their work.

Foots Cutrer returned from a 45 day furlough spent near New Orleans, La. Boy, did the grils get a treat? You don't know the half of it. A mustache like his (John Gilbert style) is the reason that Hilda left home.

The following promotions have been made this week: To Be Corporals, Wilburn J. Roper and Frank Andrews: To be Prvates First Class, Archie C. Underwood, Chester Cameron and Eldwood Granger.

From the announcement in the Society Section of Sunday's paper, it seems that Private Barbera believes in the old adage, "Two can live as cheap as one". We wish you luck, Barbera, but I have my doubts after the ledger is balanced.

Beginning the first of the year the Personnel Section will be moved back to the Batery and Headquarters will be in the Orderly Room. The numerous Insurance Brokers will discontinue their allotments at the Battery

The Quartermaster Detachment has a new corporal in the person of Grover Mizell, who was promoted to that grade a short while ago. Corporal Mizell has already demonstrated that he is extremely conscientious in the performance of his duties. As an example of his desire to do everything right, members of the detachment are citing an episode of a few days ago. It so happens, according to the information received from sources believed to be reliable, that on a chilly morning shortly after his new appointment, Corporal Mizell discovered himself in Columbus a very short while before the hour of 6:00 a .m. In order to keep from missing reveille, he chartered a Howard Bus Line taxi at a cost of $2.50, more or less, to bring him to the post. The vehicle sped him to Fort Benning. He arrived on time. But once inside the post, he came to the realization that it was Sunday morning.

Though the weather man kept the Quartermaster Detachment from having its picnic that was scheduled for last Sunday and was postponed on account of wet grounds, this event will take place, provided the weather remains satisfactory, on Sunday after next, December 11.

MATA HARI

The Story of the War's Most Notorious Spy

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Mata Hari, famous dancer and enemy spy, makes an innocent accomplice of a young Russian aviator, Alexander Rosanoff. As her former lover, Shubin, is about to telephone Dubois, the head of the French Secret Service and involve Rosanoff, the dancer shoots Shubin. But Rosanoff comes to see the latter. The dancer persuades him not to enter and sends him on his flight to Russia with messages, admitting that she loves him. He is shot down. From her hiding-place, she hurries to him, finds him blind and promises to marry him. But she is arrested. At the courtmartial, when Dubois announces that he can produce Rosanoff to prove she was in Shubin's rooms, Mata pleads guilty in order to keep the truth from her lover. She is sentenced to die. Rosanoff thinks she is in a hospital, awaiting an operation. And her lawyer hopes for a reprieve.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

It was night before the lawyer came.

A man over sixty and in feeble health, the strain of his final exertion had brought Maitre Caron to a state of collapse. He made no attempt to keep back the tears, nor could he meet Mata Hari's eyes. Indeed, he could barely stand.

"My dear child . . . " he managed to stammer.

But one glance at him had been enough to give her the answer which he could not utter.

"No."

A pulse began to beat in her throat and choke her. She took several quick breaths.

The old man wept. "I tried everything . . . "

"I know you did," she told him, coming quickly to his aid. She drew him down into a chair. The older nun grasped the smelling-salts in one hand and the cognac in the other. Mata Hari reached for the latter, poured some into a glass and held it to the lawyer's lips. "Here . . . take a sip of this . . . . it'll do you good." And the warder who had contributed his precious cognac in the interests of a beauitful woman watched with amazement the spectacle of a prisoner soothing her lawyer for his failure to obtain a reprieve. Never had he seen anything like that!

"I spent a whole hour with the president . . . " poor Maitre Caron stumbled on "he is one of my oldest friends . . . but——"

"I know. I know. Never mind. My dear old friend! And what about . . . Alexis?"

Maitre Caron's face brightened—a little.

"Oh, that is arranged just as you wanted it. I brought him with me. He's waiting downstairs."

"Why didn't you tell me?" cried the dancer. "Oh, bring him, bring him to me, quickly!"

She ran about the cell and smoothed her dress and patted her hair and scented herself from an atomizer. She wished for just a second that he could see her. The black velvet was becoming—when she sent for it, she had said to the nuns, "I'll need a warm dress, it's chilly at dawn." She was wan but it suited her and her hair was folded softly away from her face.

"The young man is blind," Caron said to the nuns. "I've told him this is a sanitarium. You must be careful. And not a word of this must leak out. It's highly irregular. There would be dreadful complications."

"Oh, go, Caron, go! They understand."

After Caron had left, the warder cleared his throat and announced in his stiffest military tone, "Madame, I'm leaving the door unlocked so that the visitor won't hear the rattle of the lock."

"God bless you!" she said. He went out.

In a few moments the two men returned with Rosanoff. His face was all a-glow and in his hand he carried a little bouquet of roses. That little bouquet broke her heart.

"Love, my love!" he cried out, when she called his name. They were in each other's arms.

In a very gruff voice, the warder said, "Come, nurse, we will look after the patient in the next room and leave these young people alone."

Perhaps the older nun would have hesitated, but the other gave her a beseeching look and urged her out with a gentle pressure on the arm. Outside, she did protest.

"This is most irregular. Our instructions were——"

"She'll be all right. Please, Sister Angelica!"

"Let them alone," said the warder defiantly. "Tomorrow she'll be dead." And he closed the heavy door very gently behind M. Caron.

Mata Hari and Rosanoff sat very close on one of the cots and kept their hands entwined.

"And if the operation is successful how much longer—will they keep you here?" he wanted to know.

"I don't know. Not long. We can go away and be married—in Switzerland."

"And we'll never let anything separate us again. You are telling me the truth?" he said suddenly. "It isn't a dangerous operation?"

She assured him it was nothing. Nothing at all.

"I'm glad of that. But even so, I can't bear to think of it."

"Promise you won't worry about me.'

"I'll try not to."

She had been wondering how to prepare him just a little, and she went on, with a catch in her voice. "You know what operations are . . . even the slightest of them . . . there is always the chance . . . promise . . . . if something should happen to me, you'll not grieve too much, you'll take care of yourself . . . you'll carry on."

"Of course, I promise," he said, smiling, because it occurred to him that after all she was afraid and it was he who would have to comfort her now. So he made his voice very gentle and coaxed her not to think of it. "Nothing can possibly happen to you. They're very competent, the doctors. Darling you mustn't be afraid."

He kissed her and petted her. It was pleasant to be in the position of the one with the most strength, in spite of his sightless eyes. "You're not afraid when I told you, are you?"

"No. Not when you hold me."

All through the night, the warder, who kept watch, could hear the murmur of voices when he approached the cell door. He took care not to come too close.

Mata Hari spoke about Rosanoff's eyes because she could see that hope had taken root in his mind and he counted on her to nourish it. She had been talking to a great friend of hers, she said, a famous doctor.

"—and he said that the best eye-specialists were in Vienna. Though, of course, that won't be of much use to us until the war is over. But I made him write down all the names, and I gave the list to M. Caron and he has promised to keep it safe for you—"

"But you'd go with me?" he broke in, alarmed.

"Of course, I'll go with you. But I'm so silly, I wanted him to keep it in case—anything happened. You'll remember that he has it?"

"You're still afraid," Rosanoff accused her. "Look, darling, I've been through it. I can tell you. The anaesthetic's unpleasant. That's all.

He was not aware of the dawn. But Mata Hari saw the sun rise gray in a misty sky. It looked as if it would clear, though, and be a very pleasant day. She heard footsteps in the stone corridor and rose and said that she ought to get ready. She brushed her hair and twisted it up again, and put some powder on her face and made herself generally neat. Oh, if only he could see her just for one little second! Not the cell and the cots and the barred window, but just her alone. It entered her mind that it was a pity she had not known before how black and pallor and simplicity became her, and she gave a little laugh to think how foolish that idea was now.

Rosanoff believed she had got over her scare. But her voice seemed a bit shaky as she said good morning to the nuns and told Rosanoff the doctors and nurses had come for her.

"Don't be frightened, dear," he repeated. "I'll wait right here until the operation is over."

"Oh, no, you mustn't! I don't want to the hospital. And he'll let you know at once . . . just how I am."

"Darling, you are afraid," cried Rosanoff in great concern, fumbling in the dark to get to her.

Cyclone Smith Wins Decision Over Palmo

Benning Whirlwind Barely Noses Out Clever Opponent

Puggy Weinert Defeats Spot Spittle In Gruelling Semi-Final

A boxing card more replete with thrills and action is seldom to be seen than that witnessed at the gymnasium last Tuesday night. In the main go, Cyclone Smith of Fort Benning won a close and hard-fought decision over Frankie Palmo, Cincinnati lightheavy. The decision of the judges in favor of Smith was greeted with jeers and boos by the audience, many of whom thought Palmo should have won.

Rarely has a cleverer boxer than Palmo been seen here at the post. At times, the Cincinnati battler made the Cyclone look like a gentle breeze, tying him up almost at will. Palmo's weaving, bobbing, and rolling tactics caused Smith to miss frequently.

In the second round an overhand right to the jaw sent Palmo to the canvas, but he was up without a count. The third round found both fighters about even but in the fourth, fifth, and sixth rounds, Palmo's superior boxing gave him an edge.

In the eighth round, Smith came back strong, landed heavily several times, to take the round by a clear-cut margin. The next round also went to Smith.

Up to this time the fight had been practically even with Smith easily showing himself to be the harder hitter and Palmo clearly outboxing his opponent.

The tenth round found both fight-

INTRA-MURAL SEASON BEGINS

Saturday afternoon the 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry, and the 83rd Field Artillery football teams will meet in Doughboy Stadium to open the intramural season at Fort Benning, and set in motion the annual battle to decide the title-winner of the football series at the Infantry School.

All of the teams entered in the series have been working and pointing toward the championship cup, some of them starting their training as early as midsummer, some of them going through an intensive schedule of games with outside civilian teams, and still others depending on a minor series of inter-outfit games to whip their men into shape and develope a combination that will ride to victory over whatever competition should be offered. One or two of the teams have already been seen in action at the post, fans of the sport have watched another in action in the battalion games, and still another is listed as a dark horse on the roster of title contenders. But it is doubtful if anyone has taken the trouble to observe and make public a rating of the four teams entered in the race, or any potential decision as to the manner in which they will finish the season.

There are two teams, which, as has been the case in years past, will undoubtedly be at the top of heap to finish the scrap for the cup when the whistle blows for the last game; that of the 2nd Battalion, the Kelly's, defending champions, exponents of the end-skirting, pass-tossing, wide-open attack school of football; and in the other corner, the eleven of the 66th and 67th Infantry, heretofore known

In The Dressing Room

Little Known Anecdotes About Famous Football Teams

By I. Predictum

Harvard was being heralded as possessing the strongest eleven in the east. In the early part of the season, she seemed to verify this opinion by breezing through her first two or three preliminary games, winning handily in each case. Her next contest was to be played against little Centre, whom all regarded as a set-up. Newspapers predicted an overwhelming victory for Harvard; general opinion failed to concede Centre even an outside chance for victory.

Centre had a pitifully small squad, headed by the incomparable "Bo" MacMillan, whose name has since gone down in the annals of football history.

Shortly before the game started, the Centre coach gathered his players about him in the dressing room. Instead of haranguing the squad, he merely said simply,

"Boys, all I want you to remember is that every member of that Harvard team votes a straight republican ticket."

The old-timers will recall the democratic landslide that took place on the memorable afternoon of the Harvard-Centre football game.

One of Jerry Dalrymple's outstanding accomplishments was his ability to diagnose the plays of the opposing eleven, and then to step in and stop them. Georgia was playing Tulane when Dalrymple suddenly noticed that "Catfish" Smith, Georgia star end and pass receiver de luxe was missing from the lineup. The Georgia center was just in the act of snapping the ball back when Dalrymple rushed up and slapped it. A five yard penalty was inflicted on Tulane, but any misgivings which the penalty may have caused were assuaged when the great Smith was seen emerging sheepishly from the sidelines where he had been hiding.

Dalrymple's action undoubtedly staved off a touchdown play which would very likely have been successful. A long pass to Smith would have left the Georgia end a clear field.

HAPPY HEARTS TO PLAY GIANTS

The Happy Hearts of the 24th Infantry will meet the Nashville Giants Saturday afternoon at Nashville, Tenn. in the final game of the season. The Nashville Giants, last year's colored champions of the South, took a 52-0 trimming from the Happy Hearts earlier in the season. A closer games is expected to result from the encounter Saturday.

The Happy Hearts, coached by Lt. Howard Johnson, have shown a strength that was not forseen at the beginning of the current season and have now established themselves as one of the best, if not actually the best colored football aggregation in the South. Boasting a powerful line and an exceptionally fast back-field with plenty of reserve material, the Happy Hearts have defeated the leading college elevens in this section of the country, including Tuskegee Institute, Edward Waters College, Fort Valley Normal Institute, Miles Memorial College, and others.

A deceptive airial attack and a battering line smashing offensive has been responsible for a large portion of the victories.

BOWLING VERY POPULAR SPORT

Bowling looms as the outstanding indoor sport at Fort Benning during the winter months. Both an officers' league and an enlisted men's league has been organized. Close competition featured by brilliant play has helped to add interest and bring out large galleries to witness the play at the Post bowling alleys in the afternoons and evenings.

In the Officers' League the Instructors (A), are out in front with 12 wins out of 15 games. The Advanced Class is in second position with Headquarters team trailing in third place. The illness of Captain Phillip T. Fry, Headquarters' high point man, has weakened last season's champions but the race is hardly begun as yet and many changes will no doubt occur ere the finish.

The Greencords are out in front in the Enlisted Men's League. Both the Special Units and Second Bats of the 29th Infantry are giving the Greenhats a close battle for first place honors.

Bowling fans will be given a treat Saturday night when the enlisted men's team of Fort Benning will clash with an all-star bowling team from Atlanta, on the local alleys. The Benning team bowed to the Atlanta team, at Atlanta, one week ago by the narrow margin of four points. They expect to reap revenge with the visitors in their own back yard.

Corn Griffin KO's Pavalec In Eighth Round Of Main-Go

Pavalec Almost Floored Max Schmeling Last June In Sparring Match

Corn Griffin, popular Benning battler, added another scalp to his belt when he knocked out Jerry Pavalec last Tuesday evening in the eighth round of a ten round bout. The fight was staged in West Palm Beach, Florida, under the auspices of the American Legion.

Griffin went into the ring as the underdog. Not only was he outweighed by almost thirty pounds but his opponent had an impressive record behind him. Once, while Pavalec was sparring partener for Max Schmeling, World's Heavyweight Champion, the Greek clouted Herr Max with a terrific right behind the ear. This blow was heard all 'round the fistic world. Momentarily, the Champions knees buckled beneath him and had he grab-

INTRA-MURIAL SEASON BEGINS

as the "Terrible Tankers", and always the followers of the line-bucking, steam-roller tactics of the good old days. But this year they have changed their strategy, and the team that will meet the Irish of the 1st Battalion on Sunday afternoon will be composed of a stonewall line and a squadron of light, fleet, "pony" backs, that. if they travel behind good interference, should run any opposing secondary defense into the ground. The influx of new players from Company F, 67th Infantry, and additions by way of the recruiting sergeant, have added several new faces to the Tanker ranks that will most likely be well known before the season is over. Starnes, All-state center from Marshal County High, Alabama, is playing in the backfield of the golden tornado, and looks like an addition to the hall of football fame in these parts. He is light, fast, and one triple threat man who doesn't fumble, stumble, or creep. Then there is Wadsworth, who played on the rat team at Georgia Tech last year, and fills the position at right tackle for the Tank team. Arnold of the Artillery of last year, is also with the ironclad doughboys this year, and is expected to give a good account of himself. And of course, there is the always dependable old guard, represented by Swantic, Joris, Vallery. Stewart, and Smith, all of whom need no introduction to Fort Benning. It is a fast running back field in the rear of a powerful line, and with a little cooperation and a game under their belts, they will make the other football mentors sleep uneasy these chill nights.

The 2nd Batts, who started out the season rather poorly, have made few recruits this year, but these are players of the first water. Derrick, the same old "Pooch", is wearing a blue jersey and breeches when he lugs the oval this year, and is counted on heavily in the scoring combination of the Kelly's. Too many ball-carriers. and a lack of cooperation, hampered the 2d Batts in their first two games with outside teams, but they started to click last Sunday against the highly rated Naval Air Station team from Pensacola, and if they have improved as much in the past week as they did in the two days between their first two games, they will make the outcome of the series very doubtful.

The "Fighting Irish"! Dark horses of the season, losing every one of their pre-season games, crippled by injuries; they nevertheless boast a strong combination that has the dopesters puzzled, and are feared mightly by the coach of the Tanker team. As yet they have not been seen in action at the post, and what part they will play in the fracas for first place is one that is difficult to predict. Stevens, counted on heavily in the backfield, is laid up in the hospital, but Reddock, the old war-horse, and Jordan, a newcomer, will be in there to give a good account of themselves and gallop through the holes torn in the opposing lines by Barr, veteran of many campaigns.

The Artillery, held back this year by a lack of material, and the fact that what material there is mostly composed of green men, look like the underdogs. But sometimes it is the underdog that comes out on top. Beginners, if lacking in experience and knowledge of the fine points of a game, geerally make up for this defect by possessing an abundance of enthusiasm and a store of tenaciousness that frequently baffles the old-timer who husbands his strength and bolsters it by cunning. The mainstay of the Cannoneers most probably will be Harper, and there is a chance that they will be led to victory by his slash-style of play.

Allowing for no upsets of the well-known dope bucket, however, it seems to be between the Kelleys and Tankers, with a very very slight edge going to the latter. For after all, they have nothing to lose by defeat, and the name and title of Post Champions, The Infantry School, Fort Benning, Ga., will be their's if the gods of chance are smiling.

Fighting Irish Of Notre Dame Snow Army Under 21-0

The curtain is about to fall on the 1932 football season. The majority of the nation's elevens have already completed their schedules and only a sprinkling of post-season games remain to be played.

In a battle of undefeated teams that took place on Thanksgiving Day, Colgate and Brown took the field against each other. Colgate besides being unbeaten had the distinction of being the only major eleven in the country still unscored on. Brown, on the other hand, had the unique record of having spoiled the perfect record of four teams—Yale, Harvard, Holy Cross, and Columbia.

No sooner had the game started when the crimson-trousered players of Colgate unleashed a powerful offensive which had the effect of completely disconcerting their opponents. Brown staged a game, uphill fight but the deceptive attack of Colgate was too much and she went down to defeat by a score of 21-0. In this impressive manner, the "Red Raiders" put the finishing touches on a perfect season, undefeated, untied and unscored on.

Nebraska won the Big Six Conference championship without sustaining a single defeat. Missouri, the last obstacle, was overcome without difficulty. For the fifth consecutive year, Utah finished first in the Rocky Mountain Conference by turning back the forces of the Colorado Aggies by a score of 16-0.

In the Far West, Southern California overcame Washington 9-6, while the University of California in Los Angeles was being put out of the running by Washington State 3-0. This gave the Trojans an undisputed right to the Pacific Coast Championship.

In the South, Vanderbilt went down to defeat before Alabama by three touchdowns. John "Hurry" Cain dominated the play from beginning to end, putting in a final, impressive bid for All-American honors.

Notre Dame rose to great heights last Saturday in her splendid win over Army 21-0. Pre-game opinion called for a close, hard-fought game, with "breaks" deciding the ultimate winner. But shortly after the whistle blew that sent the two elevens into battle all doubts were dispelled. Notre Dame was unbeatable on this occasion. Drive after drive she launched in the direction of the Army goal. The first was stopped by a great goal-line stand on the Army four yard line, but the second, the direct result of a long pass, was good for a touchdown.

Time after time, Army backs hit the Notre Dame line for no gain. The Rambler wall was impenetrable.

The West Pointers were clearly outplayed and outsmarted and the Irish deserve all credit for a wonderful victory. The win over one of the East's strongest teams bodes ill for undefeated Southern California when the two tradiitonal rivals clash on Decmeber 10.

Clear out to Palo Alto journeyed the Panthers, were rewarded by a victory over the Stanford Indians by a score of 7-0. No eleven in the country has faced a harder schedule than that faced by Pittsburgh this year, and for a team, no matter how good, to run through such a schedule and still be undefeated at the end is well nigh unbelievable. Yet Pittsburgh has done just that.

Stanford is not the strongest team on the coast by any means whatever. She has only one conference victory to her credit. But she is sufficiently hard to defeat to permit any eleven to consider a win over her a worthy conquest.

In the south, Tulane's crippled eleven was beaten by Louisiana State 14-0, while Georgia and Georgia Tech. were fighting to a scoreless tie.

In the next week's issue of the Benning Herald, I. PREDICTUM'S average for the entire season will be announced. In addition, there will appear a brief resume of the 1932 football season.

I. PREDICTUM, Herald football prophet, having been approached from several quarters, finally decided to pick an All-American eleven. His choices for the mythical team will appear in print for the first time in the Christmas edition of the Benning Herald, coming out on the sixteenth of December.

Forecaster Picks Army To Win Over Navy Team Today

BY I. PREDICTUM

At this time each year, sportswriters all over the country are engaged in the arduous task of picking an All-American team. In forthcoming issues of the Herald your prophet will very humbly present his selections.

As always there is present an array of talent, perhaps more bountiful than in former years. Last year, the majority of the prophets were agreed on an All-American back-field consisting of Barry Wood, Marchmont Schwartz, Ernie Pinckert, and Gaius Shaver. This year, the task of picking a backfield is not so easy. Nor are the choices for the positions in the line definitely decided.

Several important contests are scheduled for this Saturday, outstanding among them being the ever-glamorous Navy-Army game. Army rules the favorite. Defeated only by Pittsburgh and Notre Dame, beyond all doubt two of the greatest teams in the country, she is backed by an imposing record. Harvard was humbled by the one-sided score of 46-0, and Yale was defeated by the decisive margin of three touchdowns.

Navy, on the other hand, has not had a very successful preliminary season. She has been beaten by William and Mary, whom Army defeated 33-0, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Columbia, and Notre Dame. Princeton was held to a scoreless tie. Her only two victories were registered over Maryland and W. & L.

The Navy. however, have been rapidly improving since the start of the season. Columbia was lucky to emerge with a victory and Notre Dame was held to two touchdowns, this alone attesting to the potential power of the Navy.

Nevertheless, an Army victory should result from the encounter, with the winning margin two or three touchdowns.

The Galloping Gaels of St. Mary's will oppose the Crimson Tide of Alabama in another outstanding game. St. Mary's possesses one of the most powerful elevens on the coast. Alabama by a touchdown.

Men saw in her eyes an invitation . . . that her pride repudiated. Her lips offered what her heart denied! In answer to her accusers she said "You think marriage to a man I do not love will make me good—well, I think that's the rottenest thing any girl can do."

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY: Offering "Two Against The World" with Constance Bennett and Neil Hamilton. The blazing truth about the love murder that shocked and rocked the world.

GRAND

Within their confines of sombre prison walls, what do those souls in agony and despair think? What do they say? What do they do?

The answer to that question makes the drama, and teaches an everlasting lesson, n "The Last Mile" at the Grand Theatre Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

Based on one of the dramatic sensations of the stage, "The Last Mile," in picture form, drives home like a mighty sledge hammer the value of the restraint of human passions.

It will tell you what they think. It will tell you in powerful terms what they say. And in tense, dramatic, moving action you will see what they do!

Sam Bischoff directed this World Wide film with a superlative cast including Howard Phillps, Preston Foster, George E. Stone, Alec B. Francis and many others of equal note.

ROYAL

Will Rogers will be seen and heard in a new type of role when "Too Busy To Work," his latest Fox picture, comes to the Royal Theatre Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. Rogers has been seen on the screen as a plutocrat, an ambassador, a successful business man and in various gilded surroundings in his previous pictures, but in "Too Busy To Work" he appears as a wandering vagabond without a place to lay his head.

This role is said to afford him opportunities for both comedy and pathos that he has never before enjoyed in a film.

The love interest in the picture is furnished by Marian Nixon and Dick Powell. Miss Nixon recently scored successfully in "Amateur Daddy," "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" and "Winner Take All," but Powell is practically a newcomer to the screen. He comes from the New York stage and made his film debut in "Blessed Event."

PEOPLE have to a large extent ceased giving frivolous, useless gifts. A savings account is a gift for which the interest as well as the appreciation increases as the years go by.

RIALTO

As a timely offering to audiences craving comedy on the screen as never before, the hilarious farce, "Speak Easily," featuring Buster Keaton and Jimmy "Schnozzle" Durante, opens at the Rialto Theatre Sundays and Monday amidst roars of laughter and applause.

These two capable funsters, who started their antics together in "The Passionate Plumber," have become the outstanding mad-cap comedy team in pictures. The situations between them never lag and the action is kept moving at hectic speed.

ADVENTURES OF PROFESSOR

Their new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer vehicle is an adaptation of Clarence Budington Kelland's story, "Footlights," which concerns the adventures of an absentminded college professor, played by Keaton, who inherits a million dollars and goes out to see life. On his way to New York he picks up a broken-down musical show with Jimmy, a piano player, portrayed by Durante. Their theatrical adventures in the big city provide many side-splitting incidents.

The chorus numbers in the backstage sequences are especially effective and feature some of the latest Broadway routines staged by Arthur Appell, well-known New York dance director. When the show is thrown into an uproar by the antics of Keaton and Durante in the production, the . . . audience joined in the merriment with unrestrained laughter.

The supporting cast is headed by Ruth Selwyn, who recently played with Marion Davies in "Five and 8en" and "Polly of the Circus."

Warrant Officer Hubler Retired

Warrant Officer Jacob W. Hubler, Quartermaster Detachment, Fort Benning, Ga., was retired from active service, Nov. 30, 1932, after having served thirty years with the U. S. Army. His period of service shows a record that carries the highest marks of efficiency and faithfulness. He was held in the highest esteem by his superior officers and numbered his friends of the service as a host.

Warrant Officer Hubler first enlisted in the service at Philadelphia, March 14, 1902. He became a member of the Coast Artillery and served his first three years with the "Cosmoline Slingers," at Fort Hancock, New Jersey.

Tiring of the quiet life of the artillery, he took on for his second hitch with the 8th Infantry. With the Doughboys, he saw service in the Phillippine Islands, during 1905-6. It seems that the Doughboys failed to bring him the brand of service that he liked best and his next hitch was with the 14th Cavalry. The Yellowcords proved to be the outfit to his liking. He remained with the cavalry until the United States entered into the World War, and so well had he carried on as a cavalryman he was commissioned a first lieutenant, July 13, 1917.

With the war over and the reduction of the army, he was discharged from his commission, October 29, 1919, and then appointed warrant officer. Since that time he has been on duty with the Quartermaster Corps at Governor's Island, Hawaiian Department and Fort Benning. Since arriving at Fort Benning, in August, 1932, Warrant Officer Hubler, has made a host of friends.

With his service complete, he and Mrs. Hubler have left Fort Benning, for Santiago, Calif., where they have a cosy home prepared to spend a rest that is a just reward for honorable and faithful service.

CYCLONE SMITH WINS DECISION OVER PALMO

ers intent upon doing some damage. The result was a fast, hard round, with honors about even, the round possibly going to Palmo by a shade.

In the semi-final, Puggy Weinert took the aggressive from beginning to end. The decision was clear-cut and went to Weinert, although Spittle showed himself to be a capable opponent. The fight was an eight-rounder.

In the first round, Puggy came in fast, shot a left and a right to Spittle's midsection which sent him to the ropes. Weinert's aggressiveness gave him the round by a fairly large margin. In fact, there were only two rounds during the entire fight where Spittle might possibly have earned a draw. Furious in-fighting featured the bout.

Weinert waded in time after time to send his opponent to the ropes and had him in a bad way several times. Nevertheless, Spittle put up a great fight and the battle was no walk-away for the popular Puggy.

Baldy Query and Chick Liddell engaged in a fast, six-round bout, the decision going to Liddell after a very pretty fight. Both scrappers came out fast, and the round was as near to a draw as any round could possibly be. In the next four rounds, Liddell outboxed his opponent to win each of the rounds by a slender margin. The sixth round easily went to Liddell. The judge's decision was in favor of Liddell.

Query, a product of Knoxville, Tennessee, showed plenty of ability in his first appearance at Fort Benning.

Shifty Schroeder of Fort Benning scored a technical knockout over Eddie Bowen of Washington, D. C. in the fifth round of a scheduled six-round bout. Bowen was a top-notcher some time ago, but a long lay-off from the ring hadn't helped him any. Schroeder kept flicking his left hand in Bowen's face, then taking the aggressive to land telling punches. The first round on Schroeder hit Bowen with everything but the gymnasium water bucket. By the beginning of the fifth round, Bowen had absorbed a bad beating but kept plowing in courageously. He seldom took a backward step in an exhibition of splendid courage. He was still plowing in when the referee stepped in to award Schroeder a technical knockout.

In the feature four-rounder, Grumpy Gordy clowned his way to a clear-cut decision over Kid Owens in a bout which met the whole-hearted approval of the crowd. Gordy was never in trouble and won as he pleased.

Young Griffin continued his steady march upwards by ending any aspirations Tommy Walden might have had for victory in the third round. A right cross to the chin turned the trick. Up to that time, Walden was giving Griffin considerable trouble.

The entire boxing card was a thriller from start to finish.

GRIFFIN DEFEATS PAVELEC

bed Pavalec with both hands, he would have collapsed. Shortly afterwards, Jerry was fired for "hitting low". Hype Igoe, well-known sportswriter, says of the incident:

"But I liked the free and healthy shots that Pavalec took at Max's jaw. The one that he landed a few days ago almost spilled the crown-bearer.

When Pavalec came back for his second days work with Max, the spectators were agog. The word had gone around that Jerry didn't give a tinker's damn about Max or his title. If he could smack Max down in a training camp why it would go as a pretty capable piece of business.

It was Max himself who cut Jerry's terms as a sparboy short. After the first round on Thursday, a round in which Pavalec dropped a couple of honeys on Max's jowls, the champion came back to his corner after the bell saying:

"Barba—send Barba up here".

That was the type of battle Griffin was up against. In the second round. Pavalec landed heavily on Corn's jaw, sending him to the canvas. The Benning fighter weathered the storm that followed, clearly showing his ability to take it as well as to give it. In the next few rounds, Griffin began the process of whittling away the huge weight advantage his opponent had on him. Finally in the eighth round, he put Pavalec down for the count.

The test of any fighter is to be on the receiving end of a wallop such as the one Pavalec handed Griffin last Tuesday night, and still come back and win as Corn did.

The knockout of Pavalec followed a win over Pietro Corri, hard-hitting Italian heavyweight the week before.

MATA HARI

(Coninued From Page 7)

She took his head in her hands and kissed him.

"No. I'm not . . . . Goodbye, my beloved."

"But you sound so tragic."

"Goodbye, my beloved," she said as gaily as she could. "Is that better?"

'I assure you, dear, it won't hurt you. See, you close your eyes and take a long deep breath—like this—and that's the last thing you know. And when you wake up it's all over. Really . . . you'll see . . . it won't hurt at all."

The warder stood at the door, blinking hard, and the two nuns with downcast heads in their black veils. Mata Hari gave each of them a mute pressure of the hand.

"I'll remember," she called back to Rosanoff, who remained motionless, looking in the direction from which her voice came and smiling for her saying "A long deep breath . . . and that's the last thing you know . . . Goodbye."

In the corridor, Maitre Caron waited with Captain Lafarge. Dubois, and the officer of the guard. The six soldiers of the escort were below with bayonets fixed. All of them hated their task, it was obvious. Even Dubois, who stood out from among them in his civilian clothes, looked very yellow.

She spoke to him, as the loser to the victor.

"I am ready."

Dubois bowed to her. Captain Lafarge stared straight ahead like a good soldier.

She let Caron embrace her and kiss her forehead. She was wet with his tears and one dripped saltily onto her mouth. With Rosanoff not far behind, it was impossible to talk, but she made a gesture at once imperious and imploring, to commend the blind man to the old advocate's care. He understood at once and stepped back and put his arm about Rosanoff's shoulder to steady him.

As she was descending the steps, her lover realized that she was going away—that they were all going away. He grasped the rail and in his pathetic eagerness to follow her with his body, since he could not with his eyes, would have thrown himself down the stairs if not for Caron.

There was no daylight in the corridor, but they had still to traverse a sort of dining-hall studded with wooden benches, and here the first hint of the ever-rising sun crept in likea white shadow. Here they were near the entrance to the courtyard and far away from Rosanoff.

After that there was the courtyard. And Mata Hari thought that the difference between life and death was only a difference in time. Only a short while ago she had reckoned in years and later in months, then it had been days and yesterdays it had been hours. This morning it had been minutes, and now it was only a question of a few seconds. To reckon in eternity. To be without time. No time at all! What vast and icy Unimagineable lay beyond the region where a second counted!

Mata Hari was shot on a chill morning at Vincennes. Her last words were:

"It's not as good a house as I'm accustomed to. But I'll do my utmost to make this last performance the best."

VOLUME II — FORT BENNING, GA., FRIDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1932 — NUMBER 33

TOWN TOPICS

"Now all together, men. Let's get this right."

With this final, impressive exhortation to the compositors and typesetters of the Benning Herald did the conductor of the Flare conclude the comment following the caption "That Greeley Item.'

True, E. F. H. has been criticizing and flaying the compositors and typesetters periodically, so there was nothing particularly unusual about his recent burst of indignation. In fact, the linotype expert of the Herald has become so inured to the calumny heaped upon him at regular intervals by the Flare, that he expressed himself as grieved not long ago because no mention was made of him in the issue of the twenty-fifth of November.

But to get back to the subject. The sublime exhortation of E. F. H. bore fruit. With meticulous, painstaking care, the typesetters made certain that the article entitled "That Greeley Item" would appear in print, just as E. F. H. had written it.

When the first copy of the Benning Herald came hot from the press, we seized upon it, filled with a sense of having done our duty faithfully and well. We were taken aback, dumbfounded, stupefied, rendered speechless with consternation to discover that, despite our precautions, an error had appeared in "That Greeley Item." There was no mention in it of Lieutenant B. M. Greeley, who actually did take part in the play "Pomeroy's Past." Instead, a certain Lieutenant H. B. Greeley was lauded to the skies. A perusal of the telephone book confirmed our suspicion. A mistake had been made. The thought—say not so—that E. F. H. had made a mistake never occurred to us.

We heartily upbraided the linotype man for his seeming stupidity. The latter, being a conscientious soul, looked stunned for a moment. Then, almost as if he regretted doing it, he began a search for something, emerging triumphant a moment later holding the original Flare copy in his hand. The damning evidence, he said, was there before our eyes. It was hard to believe, but proof after proof finally established the guilt of E. F. H. The mistake occurred in the original Flare copy and was not due to carelessness on the part of the Herald compositor.

The exhortation "Now, all together, men. Let's get this right," shows that E. F. H. has the proper spirit. But we feel that he should at least cooperate with the compositors in their efforts to have the item come forth in a correct form. That would be the only fair solution to the problem.

We are of the opinion that the incident should be given a little pub-

Dusk to Dawn—Coast-to-Coast Air Express

* * * * * *

Eighteen-Hour Freight Service Between Atlantic and Pacific Undertaken by New Company with Fleet of Crack Planes and Pilots.

Air express service between New York and Los Angeles on a daily schedule of less than eighteen hours will begin on December 12 with a fleet of specially-built plane and a corps of crack pilots, it has just been announced by officials of the newly formed Air Express Corporation. Thus, to such a point has the march of progress advanced that is it now possible for an orchid plucked while still wet with California dew to be worn the same night at the Metropolitan Opera in New York, and that's speed. The planes to be used in the undertaking are Lockheed Orions, of a proven commercial speed of 170 miles per hour, with retractable landing gear to cut down wind resistance. The corps of pilots who will handle the controls of the aerial express wagons are nationally known. Among them are Clyde Panghorn, who flew the Pacific, L. L. Bowen, a veteran with more than 5,000 hours at the "stick" and Buddy Jones, of Texas, another birdman with a national reputation. The vice president in charge of operations is Vance Breese, who is nationally known for his work in the development of high speed air planes. The company will carry only express shipments between New York and Los Angeles. The goods compartments sealed at one terminal, will remain unopened until the other is reached. With the exception of a change of pilots at Wichita, Kan., he plane to go straight through on the trip both ways.

Excellent Conduct Of Men Commended

The generally excellent conduct of the enlisted men of Fort Benning while on pass in the adjacent civil communities was the subject of a communication published to the entire garrison of The Infantry School on Wednesday by Major General Campbell King, commandant.

General King expressed his gratification upon the receipt of reports which indicate that the high standards of discipline which characterize the performance of the 5,000 soldiers in their military duties at the post, were also evidenced in the governing of their conduct while off duty.

The commandant's commendatory order was based upon reports of arrest by military and civil police, and numbers of cases brought to trial in civil and military courts, of which there was almost a total absence for the period covered by the reports, which refer particularly to cases arising from pay-day indiscretions.

"This is an enviable record for a command of this size," said General King," and indicates that the enlisted men are guarding the good reputation of Fort Benning."

Wild Boars Give Hunt First Chase

BY DIAN ACHASE

The devoted followers of the hounds enjoyed to the fullest the exhilarating thrills of the chase on Sunday morning when they gave old Reynard a brief respite and went in pursuit of the wily wild boar.

The morning was well-nigh perfect. There was a sharp tang in the air when the hunt moved out, but the rising sun softened this just enough to leave it zestfully cold. Scenting was excellent and hounds and horses were in fine condition.

The first covert drawn was on McMurrin Branch. Hounds hit the scent promptly and carried it well. Within twenty minutes a 250 pound hog was viewed on the edge of Williams Wood. In a few minutes the quarry appeared in the open. The field galloped over some rough country to form a circle around the hog and hounds. As the field closed in they dismounted and assisted the huntsmen in making the attack.

The next cast was made in a covert

Post Officer May Go To 44th N. G.

Unofficial news of the selection of Colonel John J. Toffey, commander of the 29th Infantry at Fort Benning, to become commander of the 44th Division, New Jersey National Guard, with the rank of Major-General, was received at Headquarters, The Infantry School, Tuesday.

The announcement, which was transmitted by the Associated Press, came from Trenton, N. J., and stated that Governor A. Harry Moore had made the appointment, which will be subject to confirmation by the New Jersey senate, which will meet in January.

No official information concerning the appointment of Colonel Toffey to the New Jersey National Guard has been received at Fort Benning. In the even of approval by the war department of the appointment, it is probable that Colonel Toffey will be assigned as instructor of the New Jersey National Guard to act in that capacity while awaiting confirmation of his appointment as major-general by the New Jersey senate. After this action confirming his appointment it is believed that Colonel Toffey will retire from the regular army in order to devote all of his time to the duties of his new office.

Colonel Toffey came to Fort Ben-

Colorful Play To Be Given Dec. 16 By Dramatic Club

The Infantry School Dramatic Club will present "Cock Robin,' a mystery play in three acts by Elmer Rice and Phillip Barry, on Friday and Saturday, the sixteenth and seventeenth of December. The play was first produced on January the twelfth, 1928, at the Forty-Eighth Street Theatre in New York City.

"Cock Robin" is a mystery play, baffling in the nth degree, thrilling, colorful, and humorous. It is unique in that it is a play within a play.

The role of George McAuliffe will be played by Lt. A. E. O'Flaherty, who needs no introduction to patrons of the Dramatic Club. McAuliffe is the hard-boiled director of the amateur group putting on a play for the benefit of the Cope Valley Hospital.

Captain H. J. Golightly, also well-known to Benning audiences, will portray Julian Cleveland, a lawyer by profession, taking the part of Black Tom in the benefit play. Lt. P. D. Ginder as Richard Lane is in love with Charlota Maxwell, the wilfull and attractive daughter of Helen Maxwell, played by Mrs. Marjories Albright. Miss Eleanor Harding, one of Benning's sub debs, plays the role of Carlotta.

Colonel E. F. Rice, takes the part of Clarke Torrance, and Lt. B. W. Brady, that of Henry Briggs.

The role of Handcock Robinson, the handsome villain, will be played by Lt. D. H. Hundley. Lt. W. H. Brunke as John Jessup, is the bosom friend of Richard Lane, and Alice Montgomery, played by Katherine Brady, is the social leader in the town and chairman of the amateur group putting on the benefit show.

Major T. B. Catron as Dr. Grace is the uncle of Carlotta and the brother of Helen Maxwell. He is an important character in the development of the play. Katherine Cleveland, who has been prominently associated with the Dramatic Club for three years, will portray Maria Scott, efficient and officious assistant to McAuliffe.

Mrs. A. H. Wadsworth is the director of "Cock Robin."

Tony Sarg, Well-Known Illustrator To Visit Benning

Tony Sarg and his marionettes will appear in Fort Benning sometime around the middle of January under the auspices of the Parent-Teachers Association. The performance has been made possible by the Infantry School Dramatic Club who underwrote the guarantee.

Tony Sarg himself is one of the greatest showmen in the United States and he especially caters to the entertainment of children. He has written about thirty books, profusely illustrated and his comic illustrations in the Saturday Evening Post are well-known.

He will give a matinee and evening performance. A feature of the performance will be the demonstration afterwards of how it is done.

MEDICAL CORPS DINNER DANCE HELD AT POLO CLUB

Mrs. B. A. Seeley, Mrs. T. J. Leary, Mrs. R. W. Pearson and Mrs. M. V. Talbot were the hostesses Monday evening at a dinner dance to about fifty-four of the members Medical Corps given at the Polo Hunt Club. The table was appropriately decoraed with green and red holly interspersed by silver candlesticks with tapers of red. The guests asembled for dinner at 7:30 after which dancing was enjoyed, the music being furnished by the 24th Infantry orchestra.

In keeping with the decorations for the dinner, green foliage and red berries were used to decorate the Polo Club.

Today's Fashion

Knitted things dot the road to smartness.

By VERA WINSTON

This is certainly a season wherein knitting needle acts as the signpost to smartness. Every important shop is showing sections devoted to all sorts of knitted things ranging from whole suits to cunning little cap and scarf sets. A woman who is handy can easily make her own, since so many shops have experts engaged to give women all the details of various new patterns. Today we show a smart series of knitted things produced by a most important house specializing in this sort of thing. First is a knitted hat and scarf in brown combined with striped knit in such shades as brown, yellow, red and green, a most cheerful affair for a dull day in the country. Next is a knit glove for sports wear with a rolled cuff of striped knit. The good-looking handbag favors the same knit fabric and color combination. A knitted set such as either of those shown, is a very smart touch for country or sports wear.

Girl Scouts

Cardinal Troop

Tuesday, December 6

We had a busier meeting than usual today full of announcements, games and instruction. Mrs. Brown, who went to a leaders' meeting in Atlanta, told us of the doings of other Girl Scouts in this state.

In one city the girls had cleaned and furnished an empty house, on it and turned it over to the Welfare Society for girls who were out of work and needed homes. Then again, some girls are doing playground work, or amusing the children in Orphan Asylums. It is really wonderful the way so many people will give up their time unselfishly for the good of others.

All the Benning Scouts have a treat coming Friday and Saturday. Miss Parks, our regional director is coming for a visit and will preside over our rally in her honor on Friday. On Saturday all the mounted Scouts will do their best for her. I know that Miss Parks also has a big treat ahead of her.

During our meeting, we played a very instructive game, called Post Office. This was announced and a gasp ran through the room. However, it is a signalling game, very helpful to those who know their code as well as the beginners.

After passing the remaining Tenderfoots on observation we drew slips for ushers at the next Dramatic Club play, Cock Robin, to be given December 16 and 17.

Daffodil Troop

Last Friday after all the Girl Scouts had gathered at the Girl Scout cabin, they started on the first hike of the year. Each patrol was given a name of a tree to find and the first patrol that found its tree was given ten points. Margie Heileman's patrol won for a member of this patrol found a Sassafras tree, which was the tree they were to find. After the other patrols had found their trees, we separated into two groups—the girls who Mrs. Kellam was going to pass in fire building and the First and Second Class Scouts. The latter played relay races and "Breaking China Walls" until Mrs. Kellam called us all together for the good-night circle.

Pine Tree Troop

Last meeting was spent mostly in compass games. So after our flag ceremony we were allowed ten minutes in which to study the eight points of the compass. When ten minutes were up we lined up in patrols. Then a circle was drawn on the floor and slips of paper with the eight points of the compass written on them were placed in the middle. Then each girl in the patrol had to run up, turn over the top piece of paper and place it in its proper positiion.

Then—we played the same thing with eighteen points of the compass! That was pretty hard and some of us got tied up. But theones who saw the mistakes corrected them and so it wasn't so bad after all. Phyllis Partridge's patrol won the five points for first placeand Barbara Monroe's patrol won three points for second place.

With all the announcements and business at the beginning of the meeting, our time was almost up, so we all went outdoors and ran a few relay races before our good-night circle. The patrol leaders had their court of honor meeting and finished planning a hike for next meeting—if it doesn't rain.

LIEUTENANT PEEP'S DIARY

To Hook range to complete our musketry firing and to play, as it turned out, at cowboys and Indians. An excellent pastime on a chill morning as I did discover but one which should be discontinued upon the appearance of perspiration. Had it been so discontinued I had not now to regain a pound and a half.

Jordan in a state about his shooting coat, not for its loss per se but because it did carry his name plate and he is in consequent doubt as to his identity. Todd does have the approved solution for the name card situation. The plate, often forgotten in changing from blouse to shirt to shooting coat to unionalls, he does carry in his breeches pocket arguing that he is reasonably certain always to have his breeches with him and so also the tag.

Thursday, Dec. 1

There now begins the time of the month when my yen to receive mail is quite satiated. The gorged mail box leaves only to be desired some slight deviation from routine in the enclosed expressions. I cannot but feel utterly bored to read and reread "My dear sir, Unless . . ." There is no originality in the business world!

Well pleased this morning to complete Major Cota's practical course in musketry. On the inevitable graded test I did acquit myself with more eclat than is my wont in such affairs; and had I but estimated a five hundred yard range as something over three instead of a paltry two-fifty I might now point with a modicum of pride to my handiwork.

The afternoon gone in a tactical walk during which McNerney did emphasize the "sit" in "situation."

Friday, Dec. 2

The morning enlivened and enlightened by the public speaking of McComas, a benefit which had heretofore been conferred only on long-suffering members of his own squad. It is now agreed in his squad that he is "get-away' man since he does get away with murder, the fact being substantiated when, after prolonged argument with the instructor, he did get to ride the two miles back home in the Academic official car.

Saturday, Dec. 3

To the Horseshow, contrary to my established custom, and there entertained for a space by the comedy team of Mrs. Thompson and Mrs. Arnold with a mule and a pony in a sketch which might be termed "Horseplay."

The afternoon gone in settling upon each of my creditors his meet and lawful share of my monthly stipend. To do this by check, which was my use of yore, was of no great moment. But now with deliverance in cash it is a feat of no little effort, yet so inured to the process have I already become that I find myself saying "Thank you" upon the return to me of the receipted bill.

Sunday, Dec. 4

Lord's Day which I did fruitfully use to complete the master schedule of training for tomorrow's session with Sahara Sam. For dinner this day a most delectable ham but my enjoyment of it lessened by the thought that there will be for the next week no thrill of surprise upon opening the noon lunch.

Monday, Dec. 5

The general situation of the class and their training schedules this morning was quite comparable to the local situation of Gaither who found himself in the last week of his training year with eight hours of calisthenics on his hands. He did with promptness and vigor give his company two full days of calisthenics for, as he said, "to prepare them for the summer training camp period." For myself, I did find my schedule like to Carpenter's pistol when assembled—with enough bits left over to make a second one.

At machine gun drill in the Stadium today a cloud of smoke arising from one side of the stands caused rife speculation as to the possibility of the extracting of another day's pay in the event the stadium burned to the ground. It is hard to outdo a lieutenant in anticipaing financial exi-

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

This is the time of the year when measles is likely to develop. An increased number of cases are expected because it always seems that this disease becomes more common whenever there is an epidemic of influenza. Most of us wrongly think of measles as a disease that does not amount to much. We therefore do not take the precautions we should to prevent its spread to others. Measles is a dangerous disease. It causes many deaths. As a rule the older the patient the more serious the disease. Measles is highly contagious and mostly so during the period before the breaking out with the rash, when there is only sneezing, running at the nose and a slight cough.

The child appears to have only a common cold, so the mother who sends her child to school or allows him to play with other children at this time is helping to spread disease to other children.

Protect your children; protect other people's children. Discharges from the mouth, nose and ears spread the disease. The germs are contained in the little drops of moisture which travel 4, 5 or 6 feet whenever the patient coughs or sneezes. For this reason only the doctor or the person who is nursing the patient should enter the room.

Be careful of the younger children; those below school age are more likely to develop pneumonia as a complication.

Eye, ear, lung and kidney complications are fairly common with or following measles. It is therefore a good plan to have these organs checked up a few months after recovery. Your child's future health depends on your thought and care, so again I repeat—keep your child away from other children whenever he shows the least sign of illness; protect other children.

Offhand... Observations

By McGoofus

Those who will be forced to spend the holidays at Benning or Columbus due to lack of travelling funds or nearby 'visitable' friends need not consider themselves unfortunate. Few places offer such opportuities for a delightful and economical Christmas.

The Officers' Club Grill has been carrying "hot ovaltine" on the luncheon menu. A good hot drink of ovaltine, a warm classroom, and a drowsy afternoon session—the insomniast dream!

What a pity some arrangement cannot be made whereby those Lundquist cartoons depicting army and student life could be published so that more might enjoy them. A picture is worth a thousand words and one good cartoonist can do more to portray the high and low lights of our existence than a whole flock of bum columnists.

There is a famous vaudeville team in our midst which has also been keeping its light and cheer too much under a bushel. This has reference to the team of Howard and McKinney, better known as "Bus" and "Mac." Those who have seen them in Color Line Performances and Hundredth Night Shows, or better still, those fortunate few who have seen and heard them "ad libbing" in the Cantina of Chinaman Charlies, Paja, R. P. will attest their excellence. McGoofus would not hesitate to guarantee the efficaciousness of their work to even counteract the low state of morale begotten of grey winter days, lingering colds, the pay cut, and an overdose of writs.

Locker-room chatter: Little enough about orders for future assignments as yet, but wait until after the holidays.

The greatest compliment which one army man can pay to the ability of another is to say; "he has plenty on the ball." The greatest compliment which he can pay to another is to say; "he is a good man."

Everyone is familiar with the harmless type who is forever ready with glamorous stories of his "pre-service" occupations and adventures. Every pest has its particular enemy, so the entomologists tell us. This one is no exception. His exterminator is the quiet bird who goes around with a note book and without making any fuss, tabulates these Munchausen episodes until a ridiculous summation has been recorded. Then the trap is sprung. Capt. "Flaming" Flannigan tells the story of some officer who must have been at least 102 years old when he entered the service.

INFANTRY SCHOOL HUNT

the field split into several groups each headed for a hog. In the chase that followed, little Peggy Arnold captured a ten-pound shote, while Captain Brackinridge overtook a five-pound suckling. A thirty-pound boar hog gave a good chase for both hounds and horse.

A third covert was drawn on the Oswichee. As hounds worked the covert a 300-pound sow emerged from the thicket and headed in the direction of Jorrocks Grange, and for more than an hour skilfully eluded hounds and field. She was finally cornered and captured several miles away.

The hunt took us over some of the prettiest country of the reservation, and some of the runs called for the greatest skill in cross-country riding. The juvenile contingent was skillfully maneuvered by Major Arnold so as to be in on every kill. (The quarry is not killed in a boar hunt, but is cornered, captured, and hog-tied) Incidentally, the hog puts up a game fight and is no mean opponent for either hound or man.

The field was led by Major Brett, while Captain Negrotto and Sergeant Tweed hunted the pack.

"Better be damned than mentioned not at all."

CAT CALL

We have been informed that Mrs. Brock, the wife of one Captain Brock, presented Mrs. Zuppann, the wife of one Captain Lloyd Zuppann, with a cat to which the giver was greatly attached. Indeed, Mrs. Brock thought so much of her pet that before parting with it she took special pains to insure its proper care and treatment in its new home. Mrs. Brock, so 'tis said, was most specific as to the methods to properly and safely guard the life and limb of this precious animal. The transfer was duly made, however, and everyone was apparently happy, the former owner because she had found what she believed to be a good home for the cat, the new owner to become its proud possessor.

A few days passed; the cat failed to appear. Mrs. Zuppann searched and searched in vain for her pet. Finally word reached the former owner that the cat was lost. Whereupon, to the surprise, horror and consternation of the neighbors, Mrs. Brock suddenly appeared in front of the Zuppann mansion armed with one large carving knife (Q. M.) and one sharpener for same and proceeded with dexterity and agility to sharpen said knife. The streets were cleared for action. No one knew what would happen next. To the neighbors, Mrs. Brock's strange activity had the sinister aspect of Shylock whetting his knife prior to extracting his pound of flesh from the bosom of Antonio. There followed several moments of breathless suspense which was only relieved when Mrs. Brock ceased her blood curdling activities and assumed a pose of triumph as the precious cat crawled slowly from under the building.

An explanation of the unusual scene made everything perfectly clear. Mrs. Brock, it seems, had formerly used this procedure to summon the feline to her. To the cat, the sharpening of the knife was mess call, for the signal had been a prelude to the slicing of a bit from the family porterhouse for kitty. What could be more simple and effective?

Now, whenever Mrs. Zupann's cat strays from home, as cats sometimes do, especially on moonlight nights, Mrs. Zuppann has only to walk along the street sharpening a carving knife and, presto, kitty appears. There is no occasion whatever for the neighbors to get excited.

EMBARRASSING SITUATION

One day, not long ago, Captain W. B. Smith, the Assistant Secretary of The Infantry School, found on his desk a longhand draft of a letter to General Preston Brown to be typed for the signature of the Assistant Commandant.

Six months of unremitting warfare against split infinitives and misplaced adjectives under the tutelage of that arch pedant, Brother Emil Leard, had made the Assistant Secretary somewhat critical and he was not pleased with the literary style of the draft. Believing it to be the crude work of some obscure minion of Adjutant General Lewis, and not wishing to be party to the signing of an unworthy composition by his chief, he took the letter in to Colonel Weeks to get authorty to revise it to conform to the best secretarial form.

"This is a rotten letter somebody at post headquarters fixed up for you" quoth the Captain. "I don't believe we want to send anything like that to General Brown."

Colonel Weeks was mildly surprised. "Here, let me have another look at it" he exclaimed. "I didn't think it was as bad as that when I wrote it."

Captain Smith spent the rest of the morning in wondering what, if any, openings there are in civilian life for a well meaning secretary.

GEOGRAPHICAL MYSTERY SOLVED

The order changing the name of Bouton Hill to Singleton Hill and Singleton Hill to Bouton Hill caused quite a flurry in academic circles. The famous Tennyson quotation, "Theirs not to reason why", to the contrary, members of the ancient and honorable profession of arms invariably want to know "how come". They are trained to obey regardless, but they do so more cheerfully when they know the why and wherefore.

The order had barely landed on our desk when Buccaneer Brann called in to ask if, in our opinion, the change was inspired by the fact that it had suddenly been discovered that the larger hill had been named for the lower ranking officer.

Why Buccaneer Brann picked on us as the logical interpreter of the will of high command, we don't know, but since he asked us, we undertook to find out. Various theories were advanced, one of the most reasonable being that the change was brought about at the instigation of the Great First Section for the purpose of confusing the Advanced Class on forthcoming marked problems.

Neither of these theories is correct. The Technical Third Section is responsible. For years its fire problems have been shooting up the Bouton Monument, which has had to be protected by sandbags. Now a monument which has to be kept surrounded by sandbags can hardly be said to function as a memorial and the powers that be confronted a problem. Something had to be moved. It is obvious, of course, that they could not move the hill. According to the Scriptures, faith can remove mountains but nothing, either in Holy Writ or Army Regulations, concedes the same power to the Commandant of The Infantry School. The Commandant can, however, move a monument and, since it is easier to do that than it is to build a new machine-gun range, it was decided to solve the problem that way. To switch the names of the hills in order that the monument might mark the terrain feature named after Major Bouton, as it was designed to do, was merely an administrative detail.

Now, is everybody satisfied?

HIS MASTER'S VOICE

The present Advanced Class is a serious-minded group, if mention in this column may be taken as a criterion. To date no member of that august body has made this more than equivalent of the front page. Now, all at once, two of the boys break into print.

The first Advanced Class item concerns Major Allen, who, at a recent

(Please turn to page 5)

The Flare

out-door exercise, was invited by Impressario Bill Hones, who was standing at the microphone, to step up and answer a question. Major Allen, who was within a few feet of Captain Hones at the time, promptly turned and double-timed to the sound car. Luckily the car was only about 100 feet away. Had it been a little farther, say 220 yards, the Major would have had to do a full quarter mile and might have been too out of breath to answer, by the time he had finished the round trip.

WHO HELD THE SACK?

Even the Military History Committee, which knows practically everything about all of the campaigns that have ever been fought, from the day of Joshua to those of Sandino, can learn something new from listening to the monographs. For instance, Captain Jackson gave a totally new insight into the character of the Turkish defense of Gallipoli when he came out with a statement to the effect that "the hills were full of Turkish snipe shooters".

SALVAGE

One day last week Lieutenant Lightcap of the tanks, who has something of a nautical bent, went for a row on the famous Upatoi. In docking his craft upon his return, he managed to upset it, thereby causing the Lieutenant to do a graceful Annette Kellerman into the icy water.

Now it is something of a feat to upset a rowboat without making an elaborate effort to do so, but this was really the least remarkable feature of the Lieutenant's unique landing operation. As he approached the dock he was holding the keys of his car in his right hand and a screw driver in his left. When he pulled himself ashore the keys were somewhere on the bottom of the creek and the screwdriver was in his pocket.

What the aquatic Lieutenant can't understand is how the screwdriver got into his pocket. Perhaps it was something of the same psychology that impelled Lieutenant Ports to rescue his polo helmet and leave more valuable possessions to the flames. As the old saying goes, "Lieutenant's aren't what they used to be—and never were."

HUNT TERMINOLOGY

Early Sunday morning, when the first wild boar was "viewed away", the dashing Mrs. Studebaker—the newest of new whips of the hunt staff—could not thnik of the correct "view halloo" for a wild hog. In the excitement of the chase and her eagerness to be helpful, she called out to the Master, "Oh, Sid, what shall I halloo?"

The irate Master, pushing over some pretty rough country to head-off the quarry, shouted back "Pig — HOG — SOW — BOAR — TALLY-HO — ANYTHING", each with a rising inflection.

Mrs. Studebaker acepted the Master's inferred rebuke meekly, but if Sir Sidney doesn't cut out being so short with his lady whips, there will be a couple of vacancies on the hunt staff before the season is half over.

TOWN TOPICS

licity to show to the world at large that even the great are not entirely immune from making mistakes.

Passers-by have been startled more than once by the spectacle of a group of enthusiastic and vociferous student officers cavorting with abandon in front of Kriz Hall. The interest of all concerned is centered on a ball which must be returned over the net even at the risk of a broken neck or a sprained ankle.

After every class, a large number of student athletes repair to the volley ball court, there to indulge in the exciting sport known by that name. Judging from the volume of noise, competition must be keen and spirited.

No doubt a big drawing-card and something to work forward to would be a volley ball match between the officers of the Advanced Class and Company officers. We understand that such a match was staged last year and resulted in a win for the Company officers.

A unique feature of the Christmas festivities at the Post will be the singing of a Mass composition by Armond Gumprecht, a celebrated organist and composer of Washington, D. C. Prof. Gumprecht is the father of Mrs. L. D. Tharp, wife of Captain L. D. Tharp, Infantry. When the members of the Catholic choir first heard the composition played they unanimously declared for it. It is said to be replete with beautiful melody. It is one of the simpler Masses by this noted composer.

Cinema Calendar

for Grand, Rialto and Royal

AT THE ROYAL

(Beginning with midnight show at 11:15 Saturday)

ALSO SUNDAY, MONDAY AND TUESDAY: Offering "Tess of the Storm Country" with Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell. You will love these lovers more than ever in this delightful story of the New England Coast, the girl who wafted into the life of a carefree millionaire and gave his life a new meaning.

AT THE GRAND

SATURDAY, SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Offering "The Conquerors" with Richard Dix, Ann Harding, Edna May Oliver and Guy Kibbee. You'll enjoy the work of these two great stars, Richard and Ann together.

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Offering "This Sporting Age" with Jack Holt, Evalyn Knapp, Hardie Albright and Walter Byron. Here is the story of a sportsman and polo star who had his hands full warding off the hot-cha attentions of two of Hollywood's most attractive vamps. Col. Hugh Drury, one of the most noted polo players of the last decade appears in this picture and you'll like the work of Evalyn Knapp and Shirley Palmer. A fast moving, thrilling episode that sees Holt immortalizing the oldest game known to man.

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY: Offering "Hat Check Girl" with Sally Eilers, Ben Lyon, Ginger Rogers, Arthur Pierson and Monroe Owsley. After reading the column by this name that appeared at intervals in The Record, you'll enjoy the opportunity of seeing the "Hat Check Girl" on the screen. In reading this entertaining column in this paper from time to time you learned many secrets of Broadway and Hollywood.

AT THE RIALTO

TODAY AND TOMORROW: Offering "Between Fighting Men" with Ken Maynard and Tarzan, the wonder horse. A story about sheep in the cow country. Gun smoke in the air and two leather-faced punchers fighting for the rights of the "open range." A fast moving western that should amuse and thrill.

SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Offering "70,000 Witnesses" with Phillips Holmes, Dorothy Jordon, Charlie Ruggles and Johnny Mack Brown. They all stared with terror but none saw the killer. The picture propounds the question: Who dared commit this astounding crime? Who matched his stealth against 70,000 witnesses? How did the hand of death reach the star half-back as he darted down the open field in the year's big game? And thus you'll see a real football picture filled with mystery.

TUESDAY ONLY: Offering "Doctor X" with Lionel Atwill, Fay Wray and Lee Tracy. A great mystery thriller in perfect technicolor. Guaranteed to out-thrill the screen's past masterpieces. Different! Dazzling! Sensationally unusual—the something new in entertainment. The strange phenomenon of a mysterious cult.

WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY: Offering "Rackety Rax" with Victor McLaglen, Greta Nissen and Nell O'Day. The story of the blackjack and hijack boys muscling in on college football . . . the gang from the gas house and the gals from the night clubs go collegiate . . . in a cheering, jeering, boisterous, roisterous, spine-tingling, rib-tickling comedy riot. Take out laugh cramp insurance and attend.

Movietown Chatter

To a modern person, a bath is an incident.

Not so to the Roman gentleman of 64 A.D., however. His bath comprised many luxurious stages.

According to data gathered by Paramount's research department for production of Cecil B De Mille's "The Sign of the Cross," the Roman nobleman's daily bath routine was as follows:

Entering the "insula" (private bath), he was set upon by two "balnetores" (muscular masseurs).

STEPS IN BATHING

The next step was the 'ephebias," a place for water sports similar to a gym pool of today.

Tiring of this, the Roman repaired in turn to the—

Unctorium—to be perfumed.

Laconicum—to clown a spell with water nymphs.

Elaeothesium—the last portion of the water bath.

Tepidarium—a slightly warm room.

Frigidarium—a cooler place.

Triclinium—where breakfast was served.

Velarium—a lounge where the gossip of Rome was exchanged.

Cubiculum—where he luxuriated in a short nap.

Rather amusing, the case of that bit player who was arrested the other day for forgery. After straightening the thing out—it was really a misunderstanding—he came raging into an attorney's office. Before the lawyer's eyes, he flourished a newspaper headline: "Extra Man Arrested For Forgry." He demanded that a suit be filed against the newspaper—the grounds that they had called him an extra man.

Greta Nissen insists it didn't mean anything when she went to Victor McLaglen's party with Weldon Heyburn. They're still estranged, she says, and she is living at a hotel . . . Miriam Hopkins and Claudette Colbert are among the first to inaugurate the new winter season at Palm Springs . . . Humorist Robert Benchley is heading back to New York. He played two bits in the R-K-O picture, "Sport Page" and wrote some dialogue for Constance Bennett's "Rockabye." . . . Polla Ann Young has been going places with Houston Branch. It will be Bartlett Cormack, associate producer, in the future . . . Part of the prize won by Kathleen Burke in her selection as Paramount's "Panther Woman" was a five weeks' stay at the Hotel Ambassador, with all expenses piad.

'Ft. Allen' Magic Citv For Picture 'The Conquerors'

A town inhabited only after night fall; deserted before dawn of eacl day.

A town that one day is a scattering crossroads hamlet, the next day is a thriving little city, and during following weeks becomes an active, teeming segment of a metropolitan area.

A town in which there is no unemployment. In fact each resident received good pay for his nocturnal residency.

A town without municipal offices, without taxes, jails or schools, without class distinction; a town without a woman's club. . . . A town not even on the map.

Such a town was Hollywood's latest cinematic community; a novel and unique set carefully planned and meticulously built for a picture forming the chief screen offering from the camera capital this season.

The town of Fort Allen, Nebraska, as it was and is during four distinct periods of national growth, was created of wood and stone and brick as a background for RKO-Radio's "The Conquerors," with Richard Dix and Ann Harding co-starred.

Fort Allen is introduced in the picture as authentic records show it to have been in 1873. This data was obtained chiefly from the Nebraska State Historical Society and from the files of the studio research department itself. In this embryonic state Fort Allen is the typical sun-baked middle western hamlets as our grandfathers knew it.

Twenty years later Fort Allen is shown as a rapidly growing community in a rich farming center, a likely route-point for the first railroad through that country. The building of the railroad, the arrival of the first train, are dramatic highlights touched upon by Director William Wellman.

Hollywood's "Fort Allen, Nebraska," covered many acres of rolling ground at the great Radio Pictures' ranch, which is to the north of the film city over famous Gahuenga Pass.

A Lovely Pair

"Blow the Man Down," "Ranzo" and other old-time sailor chanteys seldom heard in this era of steam and motor ships will be featured at the Royal Theatre next Sunday Monday and Tuesday with the opening sequences of "Tess of the Storm Country," the new Janet Gaynor-Charles Farrell offering.

These chanteys, picturesque if not always melodious, played an important part in the handling of the old wind-jammer, as their surging rhythms aided the crews materially in the arduous work of heaving anchors or furling sails. With the assistance of A. L. Laur, captain of the three-masted Metha Nelson, aboard which the initial scenes of the picture were made, Director Alfred Santell succeeded in recording several of these salty songs as a novel background to the action.

RIALTO

A mystery melodrama without benefit of wind, rain or lightning is almost unique in screen history, but "Doctor X," First National's exciting Technicolor picture, coming to the Rialto Theatre, Tuesday and Wednesday, has that added distinction.

Dramatists from Shakespeare's time down have almost invariably called on nature for help in the building of melodrama. The elements have always been considered legtimate aids in setting an atmospher of mystery and suspense. The old stage mechanic outdid nature at her worst in staging thunder storms such as were never heard in fact and in making the wind howl in a way that would shame a South Seas hurricane.

But the material used in "Doctor X" was considered effective enough without adding unnecessary weather complications for heightened drama.

Happy Hearts Win All But Two Of Season's Contests

24th Infantry Eleven Contender For Championship Honors

The Happy Hearts of the 24th. Infantry completed a fine season last week. Doped at the outset to have only a fair team, the Happy Hearts, coached by Lt. Howard Johnson, soon established themselves as one of the best, if not actually the best, colored football aggregations in the south.

The Happy Hearts started slowly, losing a close game to Florida A and M in the initial contest of the season.

Down from Atlanta came the Atlanta Bears, colored professional team, favored to win over the team from the Sunset Regiment by two touchdowns. Instead a rejuvenated Happy Heart backfield, supported by a stone wall line, ripped holes in the highly touted defense of the Bears, and emerged with a great 14-0 victory. The first touchdown was made possible when Winston, Happy Heart fullback, intercepted a pass, while the second was the result of a relentless drive from mid-field.

The Nashville Giants, last year's colored champions of the south, succumbed to the powerful attack of the Happy Hearts by the one-sided score of 52-0. The Giants were disconcerted after the first touchdown and fell easy prey to the scoring parade staged by their opponents.

Tuskegee, with an undefeated eleven, was the next opponent to face the warriors of the Sunset Regiment. The game was played in the Tuskegee Stadium Bowl. Five thousand fans sat speechless with surprise as an unheralded 24th. Infantry football team rushed the Tigers completely off their feet in a furious attack that carried the Tigers into the shadow of their own goal posts and was climaxed by a smashing drive that sent Barnes, hard hitting Happy Heart back, through the center of the line for a touchdown. The extra point was not made.

For the next three and two-thirds quarters, Tuskegee raged and smashed at the army defense, but the light Happy Heart line turned back charge after charge. Passes were batted down by the defensive players. At the end of the game, the once mighty Tiger limped off the field, a badly beaten kitty. Score: Happy Hearts 6, Tuskegee 0.

Edwards Waters College brought up a strong aggregation to face the championship-bound Happy Hearts in the next game and was only beaten after a hard and well-fought game. Barnes, Meyers, and Hale were the big guns for the Sunset Regiment eleven in this contest. The 'Gators scored the first touchdown and this seemed to infuriate the Happy Hearts who launched a determined drive. A fifteen yard penalty staved off a touchdown and the Gator punter kicked out of danger as the period ended. In the second quarter, Hale scored for the Happy Hearts who now led 7-6. A pass and a line buck was good for another touchdown in the following quarter with Barnes lugging the ball across the goal line. Edwards Waters scored in the last quarter but failed to make the extra point and the scoreboard read 24th. Infantry 13, Edward Waters 12, at the end of the game.

The Happy Hearts continued their drive toward the championship by defeating the Fort Valley Normal Institute 21-13 in a game replete with thrills. The Happy Hearts outplayed their opponents throughout the fray. Next to fall before the onslaught of the 24th Infantry was the Miles Memorial College football team, which went down to defeat by a score of 21-6. The Happy Hearts scored twice before their opponents knew what was happening, but a counter attack in the second quarter resulted in a touchdown for the Miles Memorial eleven. During the last half, the 24th Infantry kept their opponents continually on the defensive.

A post-season return game with the Nashville Giants resulted in the second defeat of the year for the Happy

EXHIBITION AT WARM SPRINGS

The boxing exhibition sponsored by Fort Benning, which took place at Warm Springs, Ga., Monday evening, offered the patients of the Foundation rare entertainment. Several of Benning's best boxers were seen in action.

Keen disappointment was felt when President-elect Roosevelt failed to put in an appearance, as anticipated. An announcement was made in the course of the evening to the effect that the goveror could not be present, regretted it. but hoped everyone would have an enjoyable time none the less.

The hall where the exhibition was to be held was well-filled by eight o'clock. A temporary ring had been erected.

All bouts, of which there were eleven, were scheduled for three rounds. The referee was Sgt. Lindsey with Sgt. Magoni acting as announcer. Eight ounce gloves were used and no decisions were rendered.

In the first bout of the evening, Walterman stepped a fast three rounds with Goss. Then "Chick" Floyd and "Battling Scercivitch, gave a skilful exhibition of some of the finer points of the game-feinting, blocking, counter-punching, and rolling with punches. During this second bout, Colonel and Mrs. Peyton arrived.

"Tut-Tut" Taylor and "Ducky" Polawada next entered the ring, followed by "Chick" Liddell and "Cowboy" Vallery. The last two fighters gave the spectators a real treat.

In the next bout "Sandy" Huff and "Dapper" Doyle went at it hammer and tongs for three rounds. This bout was very pleasing to the crowd. The two boys slugged heartily in the center of the ring most of the time.

After this fight, the 24th Infantry Quartette rendered several songs, the first of which was entitled "I Got Shoes", followed by "My Darling Lulu" and "Lawd, You Made The Night Too Long". The burst of applause that followed the conclusion of these three pieces and the request for encores was ample proof of the reception of the quartette by the patients.

"Shifty" Schroeder then engaged

In The Dressing Room

Little Known Anecdotes About Famous Football Teams

By I. Predictum

The powerful 1930 Notre Dame eleven, which won the mythical country championship that year, was playing Pennsylvania. The Quakers proved entirely incapable of checking the tremendous driving offensive of the Fighting Irish, who scored touchdown after touchdown. With only a few seconds of actual playing time left before the end of the game, Notre Dame led 53-7. Shortly before the gun, a long pass was completed for another touchdown.

The Irish lined up, Carideo back, to try for the extra point. It was at this point that the keynote of optimism was struck by a Pennsylvania rooter, seated in the top tier of the stadium. "Block the kick! Block the kick!" he shouted vociferously, just as if the whole game depended on Penn blocking Carideo's placement kick. Nevertheless, despite the optimism of the fan, the kick was not blocked and Notre Dame won 60-7.

This anecdote is a tribute to the benchwarmers, the football players wherever it goes, scrimmage with it, take all the hard knocks, and never get into a single game.

Two elevens were scrimmaging. One team was in a scoring position, fourth down, and five yards to go for a touchdown. Turning to one of the plays sitting huddled on the bench, a chronic benchwarmer, the coach of the team said,

"Andrews, what would you do in a situation like that?"

"Well, coach," replied the player dismally, "I think I'd just shift my position on the bench."

This concludes a series of anecdotes by I. PREDICTUM.

SHERBURNE - DRAKE CHAMPS

Drake and Sherburne defeated Newman and Bassett in the finals of the Men's Handicap Doubles Tournament last Saturday afternoon. The scores were 6-1, 6-3, 6-8, 6-3. The winners started off as if they were going to make short work of their opponents, winning the first set easily with the loss of only a single game. The second set also went to Drake and Sherburne, but the third set, very hotly contested, was won by Newman and Bassett. In the concluding set, the champions ran up a 5-2 lead, with Sherburne serving. The latter lost his serve to make it 5-3. With Newman serving, Drake and Sherman annexed the first three points, their opponents made it deuce, and then the champions ran out the match.

All the players exhibited good tennis. Capt. Drake, ranked number one on the post, played a flashy game from the volleying position and made several excellent placement shots.

In the Men's Singles, Poore lost to Drake after winning the first set at 6-3. Drake rallied to win the next two by scores of 6-3, 6-2.

Drake's next singles match will be with Newman. The winner of this match will enter the finals.

In the Mixed Doubles Tournament, Irving and Eagles who drew a bye in the first round, defeated Evans and Philips 4-6, 8-6, 6-3 to enter the semi-finals. Evans and Phillips had previously turned in a surprise win over Sherburne and Schneider.

Evans and Phillips won the first set of 6-4, and led in the second set, 4-2. Mrs. Evans lost her serve, and Mrs. Eagles won hers, to tie the score at 4-4. The set was finally won by Eagles and Irving at 8-6. The third and deciding set also went to the latter pair by a score of 6-3.

TANK TEAM TO OPPOSE KELLYS

The Golden Tornado of the 66th Infantry (Light Tanks) seem to have no sympathy for the difficulties that surround the organizing and choosing of a team of championship calibre from the four contestants for the cup in the Fort Benning Intra-mural Foot Ball League.

After the surprising upset last Sunday, when the Tankers lost to the Green Wave from the 1st Bn., 29th Infantry, it was to be supposed that they would remain nicely in their niche and let the athletic committee and a few budding sports writers make some tentative decision as to the name that would be engraved on the season's trophy.

But such a thing is the farthest thought in the world from the minds of the aforementioned athletes. Hard work, furious scrimmages, and intensive signal practice has been the order of the day since the last recent defeat, and the Golden Tornado is all set to swamp the Kellys from the 2d Battalion with a maze of new plays that have been kept up the sleeve for this occasion . It was intended to reserve these ground gaining perplexities to cinch the championship for the Tankers, but now they will be used to wallop the boys in blue, and attempt by defeat to drive the athletic committee into the nut ward. For if the Tankers beat the Kellys, and the Kellys beat the Irish from the 1st Batt, what a grand mixup and merry go round that will be. And it is entirely possible that such will be the outcome, for the iron clad dough-boys have one particular play that results in another touchdown every time the first string pulls it in scrimmage, and even when the scrubs work it in a practice.

The Kellys in turn, have not been doing anything to make life easy for hard working newspapermen. Injuries of the squad caused them to lay off the scrimmage this last week, but they were out there one afternoon showing the world how it was done in the infantry. The rest of the time has been devoted to signal prac-

Herald Forecaster Reviews Football Season Now Ended

By I. PREDICTUM

The colorful 1932 football season is almost over. Only two major contests remain to be played, the Notre Dame-Southern California annual classic and the Rose Bowl game. But, with few exceptions, the college schedules have been completed and a resume of the season is in order.

Much, of course, depends on the outcome of the two games mentioned above. Until they have been played, there can be no mythical national champions.

In the East, Colgate, from several standpoints, reigns supreme. Her record testifies on her behalf. Two hundred and forty-four points were rolled up by the "Red Raiders of Chenango," while her hapless opponents were being limited to the sum total of nothing. Her schedule, it is true, was not exceptionally difficult New York Universty and Brown were the two most difficult obstacles to hurdle. The Purple eleven was defeated 14-0, and Brown, unbeaten until the game with Colgate, went down to a stinging 21-0 defeat. The Brown game, itself, is ample evidence of the formidable strength of Colgate.

Pittsburgh went through a dfficult schedule without one defeat being chalked up against its record. The Panther's victims numbered Notre Dame, Army, Stanford, and Pennsylvania, all powerful elevens. Scoreless ties were played with Ohio State and Nebraska. Pittsburgh certainly has ample right to lay claim to the national title.

Yale, Harvard, and Princeton, at one time the Big Three of the East, were subjected to frequent humiliations during the course of the season. The Crimson especially were a very downtrodden eleven the past year. Beaten by Yale and Army by one-sided margins, and trimmed decisively by Brown, only victories over Holy Cross and Dartmouth soothe her wounds.

Princeton, facing a tough schedule, did better than she has done for two years. No major contests were won, but Michigan, Columbia, and Navy all felt the impact of the Tiger. Yale had the worst season she has had for many years, but a victory over Harvard acted as balm. If the Eli defeated Harvard, all is considered well and Yale certainly ran roughshod over the Crimson two weeks ago.

Columbia, Brown, Fordham, Cornell and Penn all had good seasons. The Fordham Ram nipped St. Mary's 14-0 and a week later defeated Oregon State. Columbia was defeated by one point by Brown and was held to a scoreless tie by Syracuse in the mud. These two games alone mar her record. Cornell was beaten by Columbia, but conquered Penn and Dartmouth.

Army had a fine team this year, one of the best in the east. She suffered only two defeats, one at the hands of Pitt and the other at the hands of Nore Dame. One-sided victories over Harvard and Yale stamped her at once as a powerful team. Last week West Point culminated the season with a smashing victory over Navy.

In the south, Auburn and Tennessee stood head and shoulders over the rest of the competing elevens. Auburn was well on its way to the conference championship when a last half rally by South Carolina spiked her undisputed right to the title. The game finally ended in a 20-20 deadlock. Tennessee, by virtue of facing a harder schedule than Auburn, should be given whatever edge there may be when consideration for championship laurels is opened. The Vols, under the excellent coaching of Major Neyland, won every game save one, a scoreless tie with Vandy.

Alabama steadily improved in the course of the season, climaxing their season with a great 20-0 victory over Vanderbilt, and a 6-0 win over powerful St. Mary's in an intersectional game. Fans are wondering how Georgia Tech ever managed to defeat the Tide.

Louisiana State was the only conference eleven undefeated and untied by conference teams at the end of the season. From one standpoint, therefore, she has a clear right to the title. On the other hand, Louisiana State has been defeated twice and tied once by non-conference elevens. With the exception of Tulane, the conference opponents she has beaten have not been top notch teams.

Georgia and Georgia Tech will probably be very much in evidence next season. A little experience for the many green players on both teams will do wonders.

In the southwest, Texas Christian, with a powerful forward wall and a fast backfield, swept aside all opposition to cop the conference title. In her conquest of the southwest, Texas Christian rolled up more total points than any other eleven in the country. Texas was runner-up in the conference. When the Longhorns of Texas met Texas Christian in the all-important game, a game which was to decide the championship, the latter eleven won a 14-0 victory.

In the midwest, Michigan won the undisputed championship of the Big Ten and emerged with one of its most successful seasons of modern years. It was the thirteenth title in Wolverine history and the fourth undisputed championship. Michigan defeated a stubborn Minnesota team 3-0 to capture the title in the wind-up of the season.

The warriors of Purdue swept through their season undefeated but with a 7-7 tie with Northwsetern to blot their record. Consequently, they finished in second place with Wisconsin, the surprise team of the conference, third, Ohio State fourth, Minnesota and Northwestern tied for fifth Illinois sixth; Chicago and Indiana in a deadlock for seventh and Iowa last.

The season witnessed the passing of "Old Man" Stagg, who saw the last

The BENNING HERALD takes pleasure in announcing the season's average of I. PREDICTUM. In a season replete with upsets occuring at regular intervals, the prophet nevertheless maintained a consistently high average. His mark of .830 eclipses any returns that have yet to come in from sports writers all over the country.

In the special Christmas edition coming out on the sixteenth of December, there will appear I. PREDICTUM'S choices for an All-American eleven with comment on ceah individual player. It will be the prophet's valedictory article.

Worm Turns as 1st Batts Win

By LT. RICHARD H. SMITH

Despite their philandering with the output of Tin Pan Alley the Tankers' borrowed Discord Dukes were unable to banish the ennui that settled over their surprised sponsors Sunday afternoon when the turning worm of the Fort Benning gridiron proved itself to be a lethal ruminant. After sixty minutes of futile activity the Terrible Tankers departed from Doughboy Stadium as unhappy as Mohammedans at a hog calling contest, leaving a startled audience to swallow its skepticism and to digest a 12 to 0 victory for the First Battalion.

Although the lines of both teams fought capably throughout the game the aggressiveness of the green forward wall more than compensated for its inferiority in weight and shook a shifty backfield loose when yardage meant most.

Employing Rockne and punt formations the Decker coached aggregation launched a pass attack featuring Jordan, Smith and Reddock that twice placed them within scoring distance. In one instance the Tankers arose to their vaunted valor, when in the third period, after Horton had plunged to the one yard line they held relentlessly for a full quota of downs.

Shortly thereafter Reddock took a pass from Jordan to begin the first touchdown drive. Sweeping right end, Jordan gained five yards and took the ball out of bounds. With play resumed in the shadow of the goal posts a defense-bunching thrust at the tank center paved the way for an off tackle slash and tally by Jordan. The try for point failed.

Threatened by defeat the Tankers displayed for a brief ensuing period a defense-bunching thrust at the Tank prowess. Led by Stewart, McKelvey, Mathews and Starnes they rapidly seized doughboy territory, pounding tackle from punt formation and injecting confusion from a double wing back shift. Their march, however, ended disastrously for them.

TANKERS LOSE TO 1ST BATTS 12-0 IN UPSET SUNDAY

back of the 1st. Batts, was easily the outstanding player on the field. A newcomer to the ranks of the Irish, he displayed brilliant field generalship and was the spark in the team's offensive.

The contest was one of the best seen in Doughboy Stadium this year. Shortly after the kick-off, Jordan threw a long pass which caught the Tanker defense napping and which was good for forty yards. Line plays were of no avail, and Jordan punted, the ball being downed on the Tanker five yard line. Jarvis punted out of danger to the midfield. Jordan promptly skirted the end for a first down, but a fifteen yard penalty on the next play offset the gain. The Tanker line was breaking through fast, and as Jordan cut back to throw a pass, he was tackled for a fifteen yard loss. The quarter ended with the ball in the 1st Batts' possession on their own forty yard line.

The second of two passes was successful and the ball was advanced to the Tanker forty yard line. Jordan then broke loose, and after some pretty broken field running, was brought down from behind by Matthews on the twenty yard line. The Tanker defense tightened up and took the ball on downs. A long pass from Jarvis to Matthews was successful, but Matthews fumbled the tackle, the ball being recovered by the Irish. Jarvis intercepted a pass and went to the thirty-eight yard line before being stopped. An exchange of punts found the ball near midfield as the half ended. No score by either team.

Simmons kicked off to the five yard line but Vallery of the Tanks brought it back to the twenty-seven yard line. Two end runs and a line buck went for a first down. Jarvis fumbled on the next play and the ball was recovered by the 1st. Batts in enemy territory. R. M. Smith took the ball on a reverse play, and was only downed after he had advanced the ball twenty yards. Jordan raced around end for eight more. Horton made it a first down on the Tanker five yard line. Here, the Tank defense tightened up and four plays through the center of the line succeeded in only bringing the ball to the one yard line. Jarvis punted behind his own goal posts to the thirty-eight yard line. A pass over the scrimmage line to Reddock was good for a first down, with the ball going to the Tank seventeen yard line. A spinner play, with Horton carrying the ball, was good for another first down to the three yard line. A line buck was stopped for no gain, but Jordan, on the next play, knifed off tackle for a touchdown. The placement for extra point was blocked.

The Tankers elected to receive the ball, and launched a terrific offensive. The quarter ended with the ball on the thirty yard line, in Irish territory, after a long dash by Matthews and a few concentrated line plays.

At the start of the last period, Matthews slid off tackle for eight yards and a line buck made it a first down. The Irish line held and a pass was attempted by the Tanks. It was an ill-starred decision, for Reddock, Irish back, intercepted the pass, and being excellent interference, ran eighty-five yards for a touchdown. In his jaunt down the field, he shook loose from three or four tacklers. The extra point was not made and the score 12-0 in favor of the 1st. Batts.

Desperate passes by the "Terrible Tankers" were then launched. One was good for a long gain, but another was intercepted as the game ended.

The game was replete with thrills. The white-helmeted, green jerseyed warriors of the 1st. Batts clearly outplayed the "Terrible Tankers." For the Tankers, Matthews starred, and in a lesser role, Starnes. Stuart and McCalbey were outstanding in the Tanker line. For the 1st. Batts, Jordan was easily the star but the whole backfield should be given credit for a great game. To pick out one or two individuals who shone in the line would be unfair. The entire forward wall of the Fighting Irish displayed rare excellence.

The Tankers have an abundance of potential power. Poor interference was one reason for their defeat. Tank backs were continually colliding with players of their own team and this slowed up their attack tremendously. A poor pass defense against the aerial attack launched by the Irish was another reason for their loss. But it is safe to say that the Tankers, as far as pure power is concerned, have as much, if not more, than any one of the intra-mural eleven.

Despite added safeguards in the rules, death again took heavy toll of football players in the United States during the season now drawing to a close. Records show thirty-seven succumbed to injuries received in games on sandlot, club, municipal, high school, and college gridirons. With most high school schedules completed, the total for the year will probably fall well below the record number of fifty fatally injured in 1931.

The new rules, passed last spring and designed to ward off any such casualty list as that of last year, seems to have been successful in organized college and university conferences where games are played under stricter officiating and better coaching.

Reports on sandlot, neighborhood, and some high school games indicate some of the deaths might have been avoided if there had been closer adherence to the rules and better medical supervision.

The new rules, brought into effect at the beginning of the current season, prohibited flying block as well as the flying tackle. The wedge formation was also discarded as dangerous. Statistics had previously revealed that the larger portion of deaths resulting from football were due to the flying block, the flying tackle, and the wedge formaiton after a kick-off.

Only five deaths were reported on college gridirons the past season.

DOUBLES MATCH

Bassett and Gaston will next meet Drake and Keiler and the winner of this match will become the finalist in the lower bracket.

George Beatty, Jr. won a surprising victory over Richard Tindall, Jr. in the finals of the Boy's Singles. The winner won a closely-contested first set by the score of 7-5, lost the following set 1-6, and rallied to take the third and deciding set by a score of 6-3. Both contestants played very good tennis and there was little to choose between them.

Evans defeated Drake 6-0, 6-1, for the right to oppose Beatty in the finals.

In the Boys' Doubles, Evans and Tindall, after defeating Maerton and Pope easily 6-0, 6-0, will play Beatty and Drake next.

The Woman's Doubles Tournament is progressing slowly.

1ST BATTS WIN

a flat pass to the right the pigskin sailed into the arms of defensive back Reddock who, aided by Stansell, departed immediately for the far goal line, reaching the double stripe after covering some ninety yards of hotly contested turf. Again the try for point proved futile.

Deadly blocking and tackling characterized the Green conquest whereas the big Gold team was deficient in the former department of the game, but well versed in the latter. The determination of both teams lifted the contest well above mediocrecy as testified to by the spectators who proclaimed it to be a thrilling spectacle.

Reddock, Jordan, Hunt, Barr, and Simmons, although bright in the First Battalion Kleig lights, were only gears in a balanced machine that worked smoothly in a concerted effort to claim its share of the rouge that colors the cheeks of the Goddess Victory.

EXHIBITION AT WARM SPRINGS

"Herby" Yutmeyer in a fast three-rounder. This bout was also a crowd pleaser.

But it is safe to say that it was the next bout on the program which the spectators enjoyed most of all, "Grumpy" Gordy vs. Long. Gordy clowned to his heart's content and had the crowd in gales of laughter. His opponent soon got into the spirit of the thing, and, between the two, they managed to keep the spectators laughing. Gordy's ferocious wind-up amused the fans. But it was when the two apparently forsook boxing and started to wrestle that everyone present became hilarious.

The next fight found "Ghost" Ghastly trading punches with "Blondie" Parker. There was plenty of action in this bout. "Kid" Whatley, amateur middleweight champion of the south, stepped three fast rounds with Clyde Milan.

The following bout, between "Puggy" Weinert and "Bunker" Hill, was full of action from start to finish. The fight was stopped in the second round when a cut was opened up above "Puggy's" right eye, which bled profusely, and necessitated the curtailment of the fight. "Puggy" was still full of vim and raring to go, but the powers that were deemed it expedient to stop the fight so there would be no further risk to the injured eye.

The 24th Infantry Quartette then sang three more selections. The first was entitled "Twilight Village Bells", the second "King Jesus Is A-Listening", and the last, a solo, "Wouldn't It Be Nice?"

The patients were next given a rare treat when "Cyclone" Smith and Corn Griffin appeared in the ring together. To avoid posible injury to either fighter, training headgear and regulation training gloves were used. The boxers mixed it up for three rounds.

At the conclusion of the exhibition, thanks were extended to the officers, newspaper men, and enlisted men who participated in the exhibition.

A buffet lunch was served afterwards in the hotel dining-room free of charge.

RESUME OF HAPPY HEART SEASON

Hearts. The final score was 6-0. The game was close throughout, although the Happy Heart team was facing terrific disadvantage. The Nashville Giants, being a professional eleven and having learned a lesson in its first meeting with the West-Enders, had had time to obtain reinforcements and launched a much stronger eleven on the field than before.

A fast, shifty backfield and a stalwart forward line is the basic reason for the success of the Happy Heart eleven during the completed season. In the backfield, Cavalrymen Barnes, Meyers, and Hale were outstanding although every member of the two backfields that Coach Johnson was able to put on the field performed exceptionally well. The line was virtually a stone wall, and every player on it deserves a great deal of credit.

Much of the success of the eleven is due to the coaching of Lieutenant Howard Johnson. Under his supervision, the team developed from just a fairly good eleven to the strongest colored football team in the south and perhaps in the country.

TANK TEAM TO OPPOSE KELLS

tice, a number of new plays have been developed, and the entire squad is athirst after the scalps of their ancient and honorable foes.

All in all it should be the game of the year, for upon it will depend whether the "d Batts cop the pennant," and give the Tankers a shutout on the honors, or whether the Golden Tornado remains in the running, and jumbles the whole affair up by a win.

Giants Defeat Happy Hearts

The 24th Infantry football team journeyed to Nashville for a return game with the Nashville Giants last Sunday, Dec. 4 and dropped the contest by the close score of 6-0.

It was a greatly revamped team that faced the Happy Hearts, one that did not in the least resemble the aggregation that lost the first game at Fort Benning by the score of 52-0. Harder hitting, tougher fighting, and faster running players completed a pass early in the first quarter for the only score of the game. It was by far the hardest game that the boys from Benning faced this season, and was marked by a considerable number of penalties on both sdes.

The 24th team threatened a number of times during the game, and though they outplayed the southern professional champions of he colored league, making eight downs to Nashville's four, they could not take the ball over into the end zone.

Ballard, colored All American center, and Hunt, 190 pound fullback, were the outstanding stars for the Nashville organization, forming the basic forces on the attack, and plugging holes in the line when the 24th had the oval. King, Hodges, Wiggins and Lee were the outstanding stars for the Happy Hearts, who have only lost one other game this season.

FAMED FORECASTER REVIEWS FOOTBALL SEASON NOW OVER

of his Maroons close out his forty one years at the University of Chicago in defeat. The 70 year old veteran was forced into retirement on account of hi[illegible]ge.

Nebraska is the Big Six football champon for the third time in four years, and the Cornhuskers missed national recognition by losing to Minnesota 7-6 early in the season. The only other mark against the Huskers' record, which, however, is more of an asset than a liability, is the scoreless tie with the mighty Pitt Panthers.

Oklahoma and Kansas were tied for second in the conference, with a rush overwhelming its first three opponents by over crushing scores. Then came disaster with Pittsburgh inflicting a 12-0 defeat on the Ramblers. Kansas was defeated, Navy was vanquished, Northwestern was overcome, then Notre Dame reached its peak against Army, defeating the powerful eleven by three touchdowns.

Despite the defeat by Pittsburgh, which is attributed to overconfidence, Notre Dame is considered one of the best, if not actually the best, team in the country. The Southern California-Notre Dame game will throw a light on the entire football situation.

Utah won the championship of the Rocky Mountain Conference by defeating a fighting Colorado Aggies team 16-0. The Utah triumph established a five year unblemished record in conference competition for the champions who have not been defeated by a conference opponent since 1927.

In the far west, Southern California again emerged the undisputed champion of that section of the country. Washington State, the University of California at Los Angeles, and Washington followed in that order. St. Mary's, Santa Clara, and Loyola, of the smaller teams on the coast, had good years.

It remains for Southern California to uphold the cause of the west against Notre Dame and Pittsburgh. If she succeeds in both cases, which is probable, the Trojans for the second consecutive time will earn a clear right to the country championship.

"This is my first case," leered the lawyer as he went into a huddle with the bootlegger.

Review Scheduled For Saturday

A review of troops, in which all combatant units of The Infantry School garrison will participate, will be held on Saturday, December 10 at 9:00 a. m., before Major General Campbell King, commandant.

The ceremony will take place on Gordon field, south of the 29th Infantry barracks, where ample parking space will be set aside for cars of civilian spectators. Colonel Fred L. Munson, 24th Infantry, will be in command of the troops during the formation. On his staff will be Captains John E. Hull and Guy L. Hartman.

Units which will participate in the review will be the 29th Infantry, the 24th Infantry, Company A, 7th Engineers, 1st Bn. 66th Infantry (Light Tanks) with Company F 67th Infantry (Medium Tanks) attached, 1st Bn. 83rd Field Artillery, and Flight B 16th Obesrvation Squadron.

24th Inf.

At this writing the Reporter asks to be spared for the absence of the usual humorous notes found weekly in the news column of the Benning Herald for this company. The reason for the above request is due to a rush in the preparation of records etc., to be turned over to the companies by January 1st 1933. However, it is hoped that by the next publication of the Benning Herald many of the old familiar names will again appear in humorous escapades.

ning in June 1932 ,to take command of the 29th Infantry, the army's only war strength infantry regiment, which is used for demonstration purposes at The Infantry School, and the command of which is considered one of the best assignments in the army. Prior to his assignment to Fort Benning Colonel Toffey was in charge of R. O. T. C. affairs at Headquarters, 2nd Corps Area, Governors Island, N. Y.

Colonel Toffey began his military career shortly after the outbreak of the Spanish-American war, and was appointed a 2nd Lieutenant of infantry, July 9, 1898. He was promoted to 1st Lieutenant in March, 1899, to captain in January, 1904, and to major in May, 1917.

In August, 1917, he accepted an appointment as lieutenant colonel of infantry, national army, and was promoted to colonel, national army, in May, 1918. In July, 1920, he reverted to the rank of lieutenant colonel, regular army, and on the 12th of the same month was promoted to colonel.

Colonel Toffey is a native of New Jersey, where he was born on September 9, 1874. He was a member of the initial general staff corps eligible list, and is a graduate of the Infantry-Cavalry School, class of 1904.

Amazed to learn from Professor Raymond today that the biggest thing in the world is its cross section—and I had believed it to be the odor of Ewing's pipe. Raymond does display a laughable naivete at times as when today he did counsel me to "forget all about inductance." Just as though I still had it to do. The afternoon made quite complete when, after a discussion of phantom circuits and simplexed lines, the Professor announced "and if you simplex on a phantom you get a symptom."

But I got a headache.

HEADQUARTERS COMPANY

Headquarters Company is winning first place in everything they get in these days. Our mess is the highest rated mess in the 29th Infantry. Sgt. Falk has been handling the Army Messes for over twenty years.

Sgt. Murphy and Corp. Easley are taking advantage of their 90 days reenlistment furloughs. Sgt. Murphy has been improving his standing position at firing while on his furlough. He shot two boxes of shells and killed five quail.

Our Company basket ball team composed of Tech. Sgt. Harrison, Sgt. LaBonte. Walden, Hayes, Camp, Patterson and Madre has the Battalion basketball championship cinched.

Corp. Fuller is going to make his residence in Opelika, Alabama, upon the expiration of his term of enlistment. It is reported that a big attraction is here for him.

The Post Bowling team which is composed partly by Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry, Hall, LaBonte, Cameron, have taken first place in the first flight of the Columbus League and are now tied for second place in the second flight.

One of Sgt. LaBonte's high scores is 229.

We are all wondering who the Benning Boys will present the trophy to.

Corp. Youngblood, our message center chief, is a happy man these days. The reason has just leaked out; he has a bicycle to carry his messages around to the various activities. He is also making a strong effort and praying every night that a telephone will be installed in his office. Good luck old boy we hope you get the phone then we will be seeing you!

Message center runner Bishop is having his fun with the bicycle also. I noticed some of the cement broken around message center which was broken by his falls from the bike, he also seems to have a hard time getting around. He says that some day he will be able to compete with Message Center Runner Kirkpatrick, who seems to be an expert on the wheel.

COMPANY "E"

Company "E" is still a member of "The Demonstration Outfit" and glad of it.

We have just completed road working, wood clearing, and damming the Upatoi Creek at the 29th Recreation Camp, and I think everybody was well pleased with the way the men put out on those jobs. Everyone from the lowest ranking private to the company commander worked hard until the jobs were finished.

For some cause our outstanding soldier, Sgt. Henry T. Gurley was picked to supervise the damming of the creek at the 29th Infantry Recreation Camp, we have a hunch that the showing he made supervising the road working was so perfect that he must be a master engineer and fell heir to the job. Anyway we are all proud to have a Big Shot like Sgt. Gurley in the Company.

The Second-Bat. played an excellent game of football against the "Galloping Gunners" Saturday. I will say that everyone played almost a perfect game. There was only one mistake, and that was when the coach failed to put in our famous tackle. Of course that was only a small error that the coach made. Better luck next time Cpl. Bass, you may get in the extra game.

A fan yelled "Say, Coach, when does Slocum go in," and one of the players raised up and said, "I think he goes in on the six o'clock bus."

Sgt. Arevalo and Senator Gurley had a short conference the other day and it was found out that Sgt. Nat was asking the Senator when Congress would meet again, I guess the Senator told him for "Nat" got a three-day pass for the purpose of visiting Washington. His admission—well we did not find that out.

66th Infantry Is Commended On Athletic Ability

The exceptional proficiency displayed by members of Company "E" 66th Infantry (Light Tanks), formerly known as Company "E" 1st Tank Regiment (Light), in aquatic exercises as part of their athletic training program, has resulted in the award of a certificate of affiliation with the life-saving service of the American National Red Cross.

The certificate was issued by national Red Cross headquarters at Washington, D. C., and bears the facsimile signatures of President Herbert Hoover, president of the Red Cross, and Mabel T. Boardman, secretary. Accompanying the certificate of affiliation, which also authorizes Company "E" to act as a life-saving corps under the Red Cross regulations, is an authenticated roster containing the names of the soldiers who passed the senior life-saving tests and thereby qualified their company for membership in the life-saving corps.

The documents were received by Frank A. Cashel, field director of the American Red Cross, Fort Benning, and were turned over by him to Major General Campbell King, commandant of The Infantry School, for transmission to Captain Robert J. Wallace, commander of Company "E," 66th Infantry (Light Tanks). A letter of commendation from General King, praising the performance of the soldiers in qualifying as members of the life-saving corps, was sent at the same time.

Following is a list of the soldiers whose records in the qualification test resulted in the awards Private Joe H. Clements, Corporal Lawrence R. Gunter, Private 1st class Otis Ham, Private Joseph Hill, Private 1st class James E. Griffin, Private 1st class, Edd W. Johnson, Private 1st class Herbert B. Jones, Private Robert J. Killebrew, Private 1st class Julian W. McCarthy, Private William R. Matthews, Private 1st class Howard K. Murphee, Private Lawrence W. Nefler, Corporal Seaver T. Null, Private Homer R. Pope, Corporal William Scott, Private Olen P. Wadsworth, and Private Elmer E. Wood, all of Company "E."

Corporal Armond J. Parr, local examiner of the life-saving service of the American Red Cross, conducted the tests under which the qualifications were awarded.

TOWN TOPICS

Disaster impending . . . with most of the one hundred and ten eligible bachelors evacuating around Christmas time . . . and an army of debs and sub-debs arriving from schools and colleges for the holidays. If fate is what it's cracked up to be, the bachelors will all have left twenty-four hours before the invasion begins. Now isn't that too bad? Something should be done about it . . . in fact, we know of one fond mother . . . visualizing the situation with keen feminine intuition . . . who has taken the matter into her own hands . . . and admonished her loving daughter to bring her favorite boy-friend with her when she comes.

The worm has turned . . . time was when there were five or six bachelors to every eligible female . . . now everything will be reversed . . . and the bachelors will find out what it is to be mobbed . . . next thing you know girls will be stagging to dances . . . and asking the men for dates.

Reason for all this being . . . that the bachelors on the post want to get even with the pay-voucher . . . not such a trival reason when you think about it . . . and are taking their payless furlough while the taking is good.

Well, bachelors, you're in for it now . . . here's hopng you survive the rush.

Frequently advertised in the Daily Bulletin throughout the past week have been the fancy packages, containing admirable Christmas gifts for young women, on display in the Beauty Parlor of the Officers' Club.

Last week two timid bachelor officers climbed the rickety stairs leading to the second floor of the Officers' Club and dubiously approached the door across which was words "Beauty Parlor" unmistakably blazoned. A hurried consultation was held. A detective, lurking in the vicinity would have immediately suspected the officers of being fugitives from justice, so furtive and stealthy were their mannerisms. Finally one officer, the bolder of the two, cautiously turned the knob of the door and inserted his head in the opening. A cursory examination of the room revealed nothing but some dusty furniture. There was, however, another door, but the now thoroughly disconcerted lieutenant, fearful of what he might behold, felt his courage, temporarily bolstered by the comforting presence of a partner-in-crime, oozing from every pore, gave way to an irresistible impulse to evacuate the premises at once. Another consultation was held, after which it was decided to seek the aid of that ever-obliging secretary, Mine Host Dowdall who, stirred by compassion, saw to it that the officers reached the Beauty Parlor without further embarrassment.

Those who saw "The Bird of Paradise" last Sunday evening at the Post Theatre will remember the vivid scene where the heroine bade her lover a final, lingering farewell aboard the schooner. The hero, in a swooning condition, had just demanded water, and the problem of the heroine was how she could bid him goodby and at the same time administer to his needs. Seizing upon some kind of fruit, she sucked the liquid out of it and transferred it from her own mouth to his.

We know of two at least who were visibly impressed by the scene. A young woman to all apperances a bride, leaned over to her escort, to all appearances a groom, and whispered in his ear ,"Say, that's an idea."

Welfare Council Carring On With Christmas

* * * * * * * * *

Active charitable organization, under leadership of Mrs. Lyman, is making extensive preparations to provide toys and food for unfortunate families.

The Fort Benning Welfare Council is doing more than its share this year to provide a merry Christmas. Under the capable supervision of Mrs. E. J. Lyman, the president of the organization, well-oiled machinery has already been set in motion.

During the Christmas holidays, the Council is particularly active, more than ever this year because the need is greater.

A spirit of cooperation, appropriate with the occasion, exists. The community is determined that there will be no empty stockings on Christmas, and to insure this consummation, is sparing neither time nor effort.

At present, the children of the officers on the post are bringing their toys to school. Those in need of repair will be renovated. The post firemen have generously offered their gratuitous services, and will paint and touch up old and dilapidated toys. The Girl Scouts have also agreed to help, and will dress the dolls. This cooperative spirit shown by the firemen and the Girl Scouts cannot be too highly commended.

The sacrifice of the children on the post who are voluntarily giving up their own toys that others, in more need, may enjoy them, is also commendable. It is a fine tribute to the children to say that they delight in making the sacrifice. The spirit of give rather than the spirit of receive is the predominant sentiment.

The toys are being collected under the supervision of the Parents-Teachers Association of which Mrs. Thomas B. Catron is president. Afterwards, the toys will be assembled in the Welfare Rooms located opposite the Post Office, where they will be made ready for distribution. On Christmas day, Mrs. E. J. Lyman will trial an Army truck loaded down with the gifts, in her car, and will personally supervise the distribution.

The Red Cross and the United States Daughters of the Army are cooperating with the Welfare Council to provide a happier Christmas. The United States Daughters of the Army recently gave a rummage sale and are now enabled to send out thirty-five baskets containing food and gifts. Clothing will be contributed by the mothers on the Post. This same procedure was followed on Thanksgiving Day.

The following members of the Supply Committee will purchase food for the Christmas baskets which they will pack and send to indigent families: Mrs. James B. Woolnough, Mrs. Lewis C. Davidson, Mrs. William B. Wallace, Mrs. Reginald H. Kelley, Mrs. Thomas W. Hammond, Mrs. Vernon Evans, and Mrs. Hammond McD. Monroe.

The members of the Transportation Committee: Mrs. Thomas W. Brown, Mrs. Oscar W. Griswold, Mrs. Huston J. Banton, Mrs. George O. Clark, Mrs. Geoffrey Marshall, Mrs. Norman D. Cota, and Mrs. Robert J. Wallace will have charge of delivering the baskets.

Most of these baskets will go to the children of enlisted men residing in Columbus, of which there are four hundred and thirty white children and ninety-three colored children.

On the afternoon of the twenty-fourth, there will be a Christmas Tree at the post theatre. Candy and other Christmas goodies, in keeping with the occasion, will be distributed at that time. Major John F. Monohan, Catholic Chaplain, will supervise the affair. Mrs. Vernon Evans is chairman of the Woman's Committee which is composed of Mrs. William F. Lee, Mrs. William W. O'Connor, Mrs. George H. McManus, Mrs. Homer H. Slaughter, and Mrs. Robert J. Whatley. The committee will provide, fill, and distribute red stockings to all children on the post who are present at the entertainment. The fruit and stockings are being given by the Community Chest Fund, another organization cooperating to make Christmas at Fort Benning a happy one.

In addition, the companies are going to invite the enlisted men's wives to the Christmas dinners.

Cordial Relations With Merchants Is Indicated In Note

Indicative of the cordial relations existing between the merchants of Columbus, Ga. and the personnel of Fort Benning is the action taken at a recent session of the Merchants Association, Inc., of Columbus, endorsing the Post Exchange activties of Fort Benning, notice of which was conveyed by Major General Campbell King, commandant of The Infantry School, in a letter from Hoke S. Wilkinson, secretary of the Merchants Association, Inc., Columbus, Ga.

"The secretary of the Merchants Association, Inc., has been instructed to mail to you, copy of a recent letter that this Association has sent to several senators and congressmen. The letter and list to whom same was mailed is attached herewith for your information". said Mr. Wilkinson in his letter to General King. "The Merchants' Association, Inc., considers it a pleasure to be able to render any service to Fort Benning, and we trust that the action taken by the Association will meet with the approval of the entire personnel of the post."

The resolution adopted by the Merchants Association is as follows:

"Resolved: That it has come to the attention of this Association that at the last session of Congress regulations were passed that greatly curtailed the business of the Post Exchange at Fort Benning, Georgia, thereby causing a great deal of inconvenience to the personnel of this post. The Merchant's Association of Columbus, Georgia, hereby goes on record as endorsing and recommending the operation of a Post Exchange with buying priviliges extended to officers and their families and enlisted men and their families, both retired and active in all branches of the military service. That the president of this Association be instructed to write letters to various Senators and Congressmen requesting their influence and support in this matter".

News of the action of the Columbus merchants was received with gratificaton by the personnel of the post. Major General Campbell King, in acknowledging receipt of Mr. Wilkinson's advises concerning the Associations' action, said "It is a source of great satisfaction to me to realize that the Merchants Association of Columbus feel such a keen interest in the welfare of Fort Benning, as indicated by their voluntary and unsolicited efforts to secure a bettering of conditions".

Christmas Music Will Be Feature Of Services In Both Chapels At Fort Benning

New Type of Class "A" Honor Pass Is Being Prepared

Photographers have been busy at Fort Benning for several days making individual photographs of the 5.000 soldiers of The Infantry School garrison. The pictures are being made as a result of recommendations of a board of officers headed by Colonel Fred L. Munson, 24th Infantry, for the adopton of a new form of identification card to be used by soldiers while off duty.

A uniform type of Class "A" pass is being supplied for the entire command, and for issue to soldiers whose conduct entitles them to the most liberal pass privileges. The card is blue, and is about two and one-half by four inches in size. On the front will be printed the name of the unit to which the soldier belongs, and the designation "Class 'A' Honor Card" together with a brief quotation from garrison regulations which defines the period during which the pass authorizes the soldier to be absent from his duties at the post. The name of the bearer and the signature of the commanding officer of the unit to which he belongs also appear on the face of the card. In the upper right hand corner the soldiers' photograph will be affixed, over which will be impressed the regimental seal or other form of authentication.

On the reverse of the card will be typed the soldier's name, rank, army serial number, name of the organization to which he belongs, and the date of issue of the pass. Below this will appear the signature of the soldier, and of his company commander, and a notation to the effect that the holder of the pass has been instructed in military courtesy, and the regulations under which the card is issued.

Upon the completion of the photographing, and the preparation of the new cards for issue, the old cards will be withdrawn and the new system will go into effect upon a date to be announced by the commandant.

Midnight Mass Will Be Celebrated At Catholic Chapel On December 24th

In keeping with the time-honored Christmas custom a mid-night Mass will be celebrated at one minute after mid-night on Christmas Morning at the Catholic Chapel.

The ladies of the Altar Society are preparing appropriate decorations for the chapel of holly and greens and a miniature of the Stable of Bethlehem will be installed.

The Mass at mid-night, which will usher in the day honoring the birth of Christ, will be "Messa Cantata sung by Chaplain John F. Monahan. The choir, under direction of Mrs. L. D. Tharp, organist, will render a Mass composed by Armand Gumprecht. The members of the choir are: Soprano - Mrs. John F. Gleaves, Mrs. Harold W. Beard, Mrs. Glen H. Anderson; Alto - Mrs. Andrew Petrosky, Miss K. Kendall; Tenors, Lieut. Harry G. Dowdall, Guy Bigby; Basses - Lieut. Louis B. Rutte, Joseph Sikarski. Preceding and following the Mass Christmas carols will be sung. Other Masses on Christmas will be celebrated at 8 and 10 o'clock.

Christmas music will be sung at the Protestant Church, Sunday, the eighteenth of December. A special anthem by the children's choir entitled "Cradled in a Manger" and a duet "Oh Heavenly Love all Love Excelling" by Sir J. Stainer, rendered by Mrs. H. W. Beard and Cpl. W. H. Brewer will be sung at that time.

On Christmas morning the Primary Department will render special Christmas music including "A Christmas Legend" and "Away in a Manger". The Church Service will follow and wll include the following anthems "The First Noel" by the members of the Men's Bible Class, "Bethlehem's Plains" by a selected quartet, and "Once in Royal David's City" by the children's choir.

Novel Departure to Be Employed At Tree Celebration

By Chaplain John F. Monahan

A novel departure from the usual Christmas custom at Fort Benning has been decided upon for this year. In former years every child of the garrison received a present from Santa at the Christmas Tree celebration. This year, a splendid entertainment, with songs, dances, and a tableaux appropriate to the season, will be presented at the Post Theatre, under the direction of Mrs. Robert Chance, by talented members of the youngest set. Old Santa himself will be on hand to give each boy and girl a big package of Christmas goodies, gathered for him by Mrs. Vernon Evans and her able corps of assistants. There will be no presentation of individual gifts of toys and other presents to the children this year. In place of this old custom, the boys and girls of the garrison have taken seriously the counsel that "it is more blessed to give than to receive", and for weeks past have been collecting their unused or outworn toys and playthings for the Fort Benning Parent-Teachers Association. This group, aided by the men of the Post Fire Department who have been busy with tools and paint and brush, has put all the children's donations into first class shape, and has turned them over to the Fort Benning Welfare Association, which will distribute them, together with other welcome gifts, to the families of the needy, on Christmas Day.

COURSE IN CHEMICAL WARFARE BEGUN

A course of instruction to train officers and non-commissioned officers in defensive measures against enemy employment of battlefield chemicals, and in the tactical use of non-toxic chemicals and smoke, was begun at Fort Benning on Monday, under the direction of Captain Geoffrey Marshal, Chemical Warfare Service.

The class is composed of one officer from each battalion of the combatant units, and one non-commissioned officers from each company or similar organzation.

Mystery Play Is To Be Given At Theater To-Night

"Cock Robin, play in three acts, will be presented by the Infantry School Dramatic Club Friday and Saturday nights, December 16 and 17.

"Cock Robin" is a mystery play, baffling in the nth degree, thrilling, colorful, and humorous. A murder is committed, and the identity of the guilty person will keep the spectators guessing.

The cast, with one or two exceptions, is an experienced one, and has been improving rapidly under the capable direction of Mrs. H. A. Wadsworth. Dramatic Club patrons are assured of a fine performance.

THE CAST

George McAuliffe, Aloysius E. O'Flaherty; Julian Cleveland, Harvey J. Golightly; Richard Lane, Philip D. Ginder; Hancock Robinson, Daniel H. Hundley; John Jessup, William H. Brunke; Alice Montgomery, Katherine Brady; Carlotta Maxwell, Eleanor Harding; Helen Maxwell, Marjorie Albright; Clarke Torrance, Elmer F. Rice; Henry Briggs, Brookner Brady; Dr. Grace, Thomas B. Catron; Maria Scott, Katherine Cleveland.

Fort Benning And Columbus Society Plan Gala Events For Holidays

GALA HOLIDAY SEASON PLANNED FOR FORT BENNING AND COLUMBUS SOCIETY

A brilliant and gay holiday season is planned by Columbus and Fort Benning society, one that will begin the week preceding Christmas and will come to an end with the colorful New Year's Eve balls to be staged at the Country Club at the Officers' Club.

First comes the Christmas dinner dance at Fort Benning featured by the dragging in and lighting of the Yule log that is to furnish cheer for the holiday season. This takes place at the Officers' Club on December 22nd.

December 23 the younger high school sets will be entertained as guests of the J. S. D. club. The guests dancing party will take place Friday evening at the Big Eddy club with the parents of the members as chaperones.

The dance will honor the four new members, Misses Beth Knight, Ann Brown, Francine Joy and Elvie Scarborough.

On Christmas Eve Miss Agnes Harrison will entertain the members of her ball room classes with a dance at the Muscogee Club. The grand march will be led by Miss Elvie Scarborough and Jamie McDuffie.

There will be special Christmas favors and entertainment during the intermission. Music will be furnished by an orchestra.

Christmas Eve at the Officers' Club will be featured by the annual party with a surprise for each member. Carols will be sung by the guests and the garrison carol singers will visit the club as they make their tour of the fort.

The most brilliant of the holiday dancers will be the Cotillion Club's annual Christmas ball which will take place at the Country Club at one minute past midnight on Christmas evening. The invitation list will include members of the younger social sets.

There will be a large number of visitors coming especially for the dance, features of which will be the Cotillion club and Pan-Hellenic lead-outs.

Preceding the dance the Cotillion Club will entertain with a dinner, the invitation list to include the members of the club, their escorts, their visitors and former members and their husbands.

December 26 the O. A. O. club will entertain with a dance at the Big Eddy club, the invitation list to include the high school and younger college sets. Members of this club are Misses Virginia Woodruff, Helen Swift, Ann Morton, Margaret Cooper, Neville Saul, Ann Wade, Julia Wade, Lucy Bowers, Madelyn Fletcher.

The first of the Pan-Hellenic balls will take place on December 26 at the Country Club. The fraternity men of the city will act as hosts and the dance will be featured by lead-outs for the various fraternities.

December 27 the Officers' Club at Fort Benning will entertain with a dinner dance at the Country Club.

The second Pan-Hellenic dance takes place on December 29 and on the same evening the Officers' Club at Fort Benning will entertain with its annual Christmas ball.

The Musketeers will be hosts at their Christmas dance on December 30 at the Country Club.

The two clubs, the Country Club and the Officers' Club, will entertain with brilliant New Year's Eve balls on December 31, at both clubs the spirit of carnival reigning.

In addition to these dances there will be innumerable private parties which will serve to make the week a brilliant one.

WEEKLY DANCE AT OFFICERS CLUB THURSDAY ENJOYED

The weekly Thursday evening Supper Dance was thoroughly enjoyed. The Club was decorated in the true Christmas holiday spirit with Christmas greens and bunches of red berries.

There were a number of reservations made. Among those reserving tables were Major and Mrs. A. N. Arnold and twenty; Major and Mrs. Mueller and twenty; Major and Mrs. W. F. Lee and twenty; Capt. and Mrs. L. L. Williams and twenty; Lt. and Mrs. Lynch and twenty.

LT. AND MRS. LYNCH ENTERTAIN WITH MOVIE AND SUPPER PARTY

Lt. and Mrs. Lynch were the hosts Thursday evening to a party of friends at the Supper Dance at the Officers' Club. Preceding the dance the guests were escorted to the post movie. The guests list included Maj. and Mrs. C. A. Selleck, Capt. and Mrs. W. L. Bevan, Capt. and Mrs. F. H. Gaston, Lt. and Mrs. C. H. Studebaker, Lt. and Mrs. George McManus, Miss Ella Brackenbridge, Capt. J. C. Brackenbridge, Lt. T. L. Sherburne, Lt. C. E. Howard.

FORT BENNING BACHELORS GIVE FIRST DIVIDEND DANCE

The Fort Benning Bachelors entertained at the Polo Club Saturday evening with their first dividend dance of the season. Plans have been made to give four such dances.

Music was furnished by the 24th Infantry Orchestra. The Club was appropriately decorated in the Christmas holiday spirit with green pine boughs and bunches of red berries.

Many delightful dinner and informal parties preceded the dance. The guest list included members of the debutante set, their guests and escorts and members of the younger married set.

Capt. W.L.Sherfev Is Retired From Active Service

The many friends of Captain Walter Lee Sherfey of last year's advanced class will regret to learn that he was retired from active service on November 30 on account of physical disability incident thereto. Captain Sherfey has an excellent record as is attested by the following letter received by him from the Chief of Staff of the Army:

WAR DEPARTMENT
Office of the Chief of Staff
Washington, D.C.
December 5, 1932.

Captain Walter L. Sherfey,
U. S. Army, Retired,
402 College Street,
Jonesboro, Tennessee

My dear Captain Sherfey:

I note with regret your recent retirement from active service on account of physical disability and desire to commend you on behalf of the War Department, for the faithful service you have rendered the country.

A review of your record shows that you have been an officer of ability and good judgment, and the commendatory remarks on your record are silent testimony of the esteem in which you are held.

Now that you have entered your new sphere of life, I trust your health will improve and that the future will bring you many years of happiness and prosperity.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) DOUGLAS McARTHUR
General,
Chief of Staff

Off. Club Plans Large Number Of Holidav Affairs

Christmas festivities at the Officers' Club will begin as early as Thursday, December the twenty-second with the ceremony of lighting the Yule log. The regular Thursday evening supper dance will also be included in the program.

The lighting of the Yule log originated in England and was symbolical of Christmas time.

The members of the Hunt Club, with Major Brett and Captain Negrotto, joint masters of the fox hounds, leading the procession, will participate in the ceremony. The Whips will be decked out in the full hunting costume with all the accoutrements. The huntsmen will then drag onto the dance floor a special log cut for the occasion. A blazing brand, supposedly a remnant of last year's log, will be used to light the Yule log.

The lighting of the Christmas Tree will follow immediately.

The hunters and huntresses will have a special table and will take part in the festivities of the evening.

On Chrismas Eve, between eight and twelve o'clock, the reception of the Secretary, Lt. Dowdall, will take place. In the course of the evening, there will be a big surprise, but the exact nature of the surprise is not known.

A Drag Hunt will take place on the morning of the twenty-sixth, and the following evening the Officers' Club is putting on a dance at the Country Club. The music for this occasion will be furnished by the 29th Infantry Orchestra.

On the twenty-ninth, a Christmas party for Santa Claus will be held. Gifts will be distributed to everybody who will appear in person.

On the morning of the twenty-first, a Treasure Hunt will take place. The hunters will start from the Polo Hunt Club and look for treasure hidden somewhere on the reservation.

On the evening of the same day, there will be a Carnival dance, ushering in the new year.

Girl Scouts

This last Wednesday we didn't do very many things, though we spent a lot of time doing signalling and observation.

So, after the Flag ceremony, we divided; the ones who hadn't taken observation stayed in the big room and the rest of us went in the small room to practice signalling. We received e, i, s, h, t, m, o, and learned four new letters; g, b, a, n. The rest of us were doing observation. About twenty things were put before us. We were given five minutes to look at them and then they were taken away and we listed as many of them as we could remember. We were then told to look at theobjects between two nearby telephone posts. These we had to list also, as many as we could remember.

We had our goodnight circle and went home after a busy meeting.

CARDINAL TROOP

My, but Christmas is getting near! But the Scouts are ready for it, what with practising carols to be sung on Christmas Eve, and planning parties galore. The larger pack of Brownies is giving one for the other pack, and each of the Scout Troops is having an individual party. I guess we're all going to have a pretty gay vacation!

Mrs. Cota very kindly came to our meeting Tuesday to help us with Christmas Carols, which are going to be very successful, I know. This flu epidemic is wrecking everything. Only half the Cardinals were present today because of it. Those absent who were to usher Friday and Saturday were given substitutes, and I'm sure they'll be sorry to miss the play.

DAFFODIL TROOP

Last Friday's meeting was probably the biggest event the Girl Scouts will have this year. Miss Parks, our regional director, visited us as well as the other troops and their leaders.

We went on with the usual flag ceremony and inspection, before our guests arrived, then we all went outside and formed a horseshoe. Each troop chose a song to sing for Miss Parks. After this, we all went into the cabin and sat around in a circle, while Miss Parks talked to us about Girl Scouting, how to go about it, and how it can help us. When she had finished, she taught us a new song, then we sang two which we knew in the goodnight circle.

We all enjoyed Miss Parks' visit and hope that she can come down to see us again.

Regional Director Of Girl Scouts Is Recent Visito. Here

The visit of Miss Katherine Parks of Atlanta, regional director of the Juliette Lowe region gave added impetus to Girl Scout work at Fort Benning.

Miss Parks assisted in forming the following community committee: Mrs. A. W. Brown, chairman, Mrs. C. W. Weeks, deputy chairman, Mrs. A. V. Arnold, Mrs. J. W. Stilwell, Mrs. H. B. Lewis, Mrs. H. H. Slaughter, Mrs. L. S. Partridge, Mrs. E. J. Lyman, Mrs. Omar Bradley, Mrs. De Camp Hall, Mrs. J. B. Woolnough, Mrs. T. B. Catron, Mrs. F. V. Schneider.

At a meeting at the home of Mrs. Henry J. Matchett, local director of Fort Benning's Girl Scout activities, Miss Parks outlined the work of a community committee and stressed the importance of this committee assuring the continuation of Girl Scout work at Benning and from the ever changing personnel securing leaders and making possible the proper training for leadership.

LIEUTENANT PEEP'S DIARY

Wednesday, December 7

Such a to-do about electric devices and their wiring diagrams as I hope never again to be concerned with. Professor Raymond at drawing blackboard pictures of resistance, inductances, batteries, ear muffs and choke coils until the air was full of spots before the eyes. The collective heads of the class were whirling so that had they been generators they had developed sufficient A. C. to light the post. As for myself, the only point of the discourse that I did fully understand was the erasing of the blackboard for, Lord, the extent of my electrical knowledge is that my own circuit does have its total resistance concentrated between the ears.

The class has gone ahletic, two horseshoe pitching courts being formally opened this day. Of all the dedicators Dickerson did most creditably acqiut himself with good pitching. The country lads do have an inimitable knack!

Thursday, December 8

A day of some moment to Robinson, he being detained from classes to assure himself of the safe arrival of Nick, Jr. Considering the mental state of a father on such a day I do declare that an unfair advantage was taken by those who would pose over the telephone as the Mayor of Columbus extending congratulations and an invitation to lunch on the morrow, or as the registrar requesting Nick's appearance at Cusseta at 10 of the morning to register the birth.

It sticketh in my mind that young Robinson is the third mascot for the class since the opening of school, Uhrbrock and Murphy having previously failed to distribute cigars.

Friday, December 9

Stephenson to school this morning in something of a state over having had his house robbed. Outwardly sympathetic to him but, Lord, I do think that any lieutenant who has money in the house does not pay his bills. And I do also think that were the same event to transpire at my quarters I should feel flattered and not hurt. Indeed it might be profitable to engage a night worker to give me lessons on my own house since normal means of finding cash in it have failed.

I might have recommended to Steve the efficacious preventive measures practiced by Stewart and Robinson who flout the Infantry School Hunt by staging nightly coon hunts in proximity to their quarters and discharging firearms with such vigor that even callers dare not approach on peaceful missions.

Monday, December 12

To Hook Range bright and early—well anyway early—to continue machine gun marksmanship. The first exercise prescribed by Major Irving involved grouping by the use of shot group pictures. I know not whether by accident or by design the major did designate the "Blue Series" but it was none the less appropriate. A bit mystified by the good major's statement that "the theory is that you can kill a man only once." I had believed that before now careful laboratory tests had removed that idea from the realm of theory. But my experience in the matter is limited; for which I do thank God.

Greatly chagrined at missing an episode in the early part of Capt. Brislawn's session following the lunch hour. It being my habit (induced no doubt by a succession of one o'clock sessions in code practice) to nap from one till one-thirty. I did not hear the Capt. address a question to me. My wide awake squad succeeded in arousing me in time to observe Peck (who had doubtless

Some Uses of Red Blood Cells

We are all familiar with the appearance of blood and are aware that it is "thicker than water." The appearance of blood under the microscope, however, is somewhat unexpected. The most prominent object is a number of pale yellow discs—the red blood cells, which float about in a colorless fluid. They are made up in chemical composition largely of iron in the form of hemogoblin.

The primary functions of the blood are to carry oxygen from the lungs to the tissues and to carry carbon dioxide from the tissues to the lungs.

A man may be distressed by going upstairs or running for a street car, not because his heart or lungs are inadequate but because his blood is unable to carry enough exygen or is unable to prevent his tissues from becoming too acid. A blood count will determine whether he has a normal number of red blood cells but they may not contain the normal amount of hemogoblin, so that it is essential also to measure the hemogoblin concentration. Fortunately this is very easily done since hemoglobin has a strong red color.

One of the ways in which the red blood cells can be made to discharge their hemoglobin and the blood thereby hemolyzed (dissolved) is by the process of disintegration of the cell membranes by specific hemolysins. Use is made of this process in the laboratory in performing the Wasserman test for syphilis. If the specific hemolysin used disintegrates sheep's red blood cells the reaction is negative. If no destruction of sheep's red blood cells he reaction is negative. If no destruction of sheep's red blood cells results, the reaction is positive.

Another use of red blood cells is as food for the blood-thirsty tribe of bacilli. The members of this family like blood in their food and imbibe it in their growth. The most important member of this tribe from man's point of view, now that the influenza bacillus has been relegated to the background as an etiologic factor in epidemic disease, is the exciting whooping cough bacillus. This bacillus is considered the cause of that dreaded disease of childhood, pertussis, commonly known as whooping cough.

DRAMATIC CLUB TO PRESENT SECOND PLAY OF SEASON.

The Infantry School Dramatic Club will present the second play of the season on Friday and Saturday evenings, Dec. 16 and 17. The play will be "Cock Robin," a mystery play in three acts by Phillip Barry and Elmer Rice. "Cock Robin" was first produced year before last in New York at the 48th Street theatre. It is a play that is both mysterious and exciting.

The role of McAuliffe, the hard boiled director of the amateur group will be played by Lt. A. E. O'Flaherty who is well known to Benning audiences.

Captain H. J. Golightly, also well-known to Benning audiences, will portray Julian Cleveland. a lawyer by profession. taking the part of Black Tom in the benefit play. Lt. P. D. Ginder as Richard Lane is in love with Charlota Maxwell, the willful and attractive daughter of Helen Maxwell, played by Mrs. Marjories Albright. Miss Eleanor Harding, one of Benning's sub debs. plays the role of Carlotta.

Colonel E. F. Rice takes the part of Clarke Torrance. and Lt. B. W. Brady. that of Henry Briggs.

The role of Hancock Robinson, the handsome villain. will be played by Lt. D. H. Hundley. Lt. W. H. Brunke as John Jessup, is the bosom friend of Richard Lane. and Alice Montgomery. played by Katherine Brady, is the social leader in the town and chairman of the amateur group putting on the benefit show.

Major T. B. Catron as Dr. Grace is the uncle of Carlotta and the brother of Helen Maxwell. He is an important character in the development of the play. Katherine Cleveland, who has been prominently associated with the Dramatic Club for three years. will portray Maria Scott, efficient and officious assistant to McAuliffe.

Mrs. A. H. Wadsworth is the director of "Cock Robin."

MOTORIZATION PROGRESS

A couple of weeks ago, Tanker Brett gave us a private demonstration of the experimental cross country truck which he wangled out of the Chevrolet Company. As everybody knows, Tanker Brett is one of the masters of The Infantry School Hunt and his idea of a suitable light truck is one that can follow the hounds. The one he has will do it. He took us up hill and down dale, through brush, over logs, and across ditches. The truck can do everything that an Irish hunter can do except jump a fence. This, the Tanker contends, is of no consequence since the truck can go right through a fence. Moreover, the truck knocks down and passes over trees up to and including four inches in diameter, which is better than any of The Infantry School mounts can do. Only the record of the post hospital can tell how many hunt casualties might have been avoided had our horses been able to knock down even medium sized trees.

Of course, the main purpose of Tanker Brett's experiments with cross country transport is to develop something that will put the infantry soldier abreast of the machine age in which we live. There is no reason, however, why the time honored custom of adapting military equipment to our sports should not be followed in this case. We offer the suggestion that, in addition to senior and junior horsemen, the new masters of the hunt create a third classification to be made up of those who cannot ride at all. These could be mounted upon the Tanker's Leaping Lena. Sprinkle a few pink coats among the passengers and give one or two of them trumpets and we have a modern tally-ho, which has the advantage over its ancient prototype in that it can go right along with the field.

Tanker Brett, mechanization enthusiast that he is, knows nothing better than to startle the populace by some demonstration of his chariot's efficiency. Returning from one of his early trial runs, he elected to approach his house through the semi-primeval forest in rear of the Rainbow Row suburb. Crashing through the trees and underbrush, he arrived at his back door well satisfied that he had given the neighbors something to talk about. How true his reflections were came to light some days later. According to the whispering campaign launched, keen but ill informed witnesses of the incident came to the conclusion that tThe Terrible Tanker had returned from an off-the-reservation party in such a condition that he couldn't see the road. We hope that an explanation in such a reputable column as the Flare will satisfy anyone whose mind still harbors any doubts as to the Tanker's sobriety.

LOCHINVAR

We owe our public an apology. We have not been covering the Sunday morning hunt events personally, thereby missing a lot of first-hand Flare copy. These affairs are usually replete with incidents which deserve to be immortalized in this permanent record of the private lives of Benning's most representative citizens but of late our reportorial urge had not been strong enough to overcome our Sunday morning inertia. Perhaps a series of late Saturday night parties is responsible but the psychological explanation of our absence from these gatherings of the horsey set does not lie in that alone. We just naturally dislike turning out on the one morning of the week that a man with responsibilities can take his ease in his home with clear conscience.

Let it not be thought, however, that the Horse Worshipers can get away with murder just because we don't happen to be with the field. We have our spies everywhere and, sooner or later, the stories of the hunt find their way to our sanctum. One such belated, but truly worth while, tale of adventure has recently come to hand.

It was the day of the paper chase and Mrs. Gee, expert horsewoman though she is, was having pleny of trouble with her mettlesome charger. Finally she went off—how and why is no definitely known. The field swept by, intent upon the paper trail and the distant goal—all save one gallant knight in whose breast the medieval idea of chivalry still lingered. It was Major Bodine who halted in his mad career to assist the lady in distress. Dismounting, he lifted Mrs. Gee into his saddle. Then, mounting behind her, he set off in pursuit of the field.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Gee's daughter, Gerry, had succeeded in recapturing her mother's horse and, after a short ride tandem, Mrs. Gee again essayed a solo flight on her own mount. But it was not for long, for ten minutes later, her horse stepped in a hole and fell.

Once more Mrs. Gee was afoot and once more Major Bodine came to the rescue. This time, however, Mrs. Gee's horse refused to be caught and our dashing heroine finished the ride on the chivalrous Major's lap.

Following our usual custom, we have investigated the case thoroughly and can state positively that there is no truth in the widely circulaetd rumor that Mrs. Gee's second spill was intentional.

WHAT THE WELL DRESSED DIANE WEARS TO A PIG HUNT

When Squire Jared Wood left Benning the conductor of The Flare felt like going into deep mourning. His most prolific copy producer was gone and it seemed hardly possible that the new detail could furnish any one so helpful to a struggling amateur columnist. Recently, however, a promising candidate for Jerry's reguar space in this weekly chronicle of important event has come to the fore and the outlook is brighter. Mrs. F. V. Schneider has been prominently mentioned three times this fall, which is a most excellent showing for a new arrival.

Lady Whip Schneider's most recent bid for Squire Wood's place in the sun was made on the morning of the celebrated wild boar hunt.

For several days preceding the hunt the sparkling Official Daily Bulletin (Lewis and Lovett, publishers) carried a notice which advised every one to wear old clothes and requested each huner or huntress to bring a piece of rope. Also the Masters issued numerous oral warnings to the effect that this would be a rough party—not a full dress affair. So, when the field assembled at 7:00 a. m. on the bright Sabbath morning, it looked more like a lynching bee than an Easter parade. As may well be imagined, Mrs. Schneider created a real sensation when she appeared in the midst of that tacky assembly attired in snappy pink coat and immacualte white breeches and carrying a swanky hunting whip. As a Hunt Official, Whip Schneider evidently believed in dressing for the part in spite of Daily Bulletin and oral warnings.

Somewhat reluctantly Mrs. Schneider allowed herself to be persuaded to change her costume while the hunt waited. We suspect, however, that her day was ruined. To most women, sport clothes are more important than the sports and the pink coat which our lady and gentlemen hunt officials wear is undoubtedly the most inspiring sports raiment ever devised—with the possible exception of that affected by Spanish bull fighters. We don't blame Mrs. Schneider for wanting to wear it, even on a wild boar hunt, and we don't blame her for keeping the hunt waiting a little longer than necessary while she changed into the drab habiliments suitable for engaging in a wrestling match with a pig.

Last Spring, when Mrs. Schneider had been here but a few weeks, she one day took occasion to reproach us for not having mentioned her in our better be damned that not column. Our polite reply was that we were only waiting until she should do something which merited distinction. Now that she is making good in a big way we are doing our best to make up for our early neglect. Indeed we have been doing so well as the lady's publicity agent that we feel that she owes us a fan letter.

PROVERBIAL PLUMBING TECHNIQUE

Major Robinson's furnace having become hors de combat, Utilities was notified and, in due course of time four repair men, appeared on the scene. These set to work with promptness and dispatch, dismembered the furnace and spread it out on the lawn for an autopsy.

Now it so happens that this misfortune occurred in the midst of the early December cold snap and Mrs. Robinson and family shivered while the jury debated as to the extent of the damage and the nature of the repairs needed. Finally, after some discussion, the caucus broke up and the repair crew vanished, leaving the dismantled furnace still scattered about the premises.

When the repair men returned an hour later they found Mrs. Robinson exceedingly wroth.

"Where have you been all this time?" she demanded. "Don't you realize that we are freezing to death with this furnace out of commission?"

"Had to get a bolt to fix it with," replied the No. 1 repair man.

"But why take the other three men with you?" persisted Mrs. Robinson. "They might have been doing something while you were gone."

"Well, you see," explained the plumber cheerfully, "I didn't know just where in the storeroom this special kind of a bolt was, so I took them along to help me hunt."

ARMS AND THE DOG

Patsy, the celebrated Arms' pup, already enjoys the unique distinction of being the only dog in the world who has been twice mentioned in the Flare. This makes the third time.

Major Arms, confident of Patsy's many fine points, entered her in the Columbus Dog Show. He was holding her proudly, waiting for the judges to come along, when a man walked up and asked, "What kind of a dog is that?"

Major Arms replied politely that Patsy was the offspring of a long line of wire-haired Scotch terrier ancestry.

When the prize winners were announced, Major Arms noted with surprise and indignation that the questioner was the owner of the prize-winning dog in the wire-haired Scotch terrier class.

Major Arms is not sure whether the man is just ignorant or whether he was trying to insult Patsy or whether he was trying to get away with propaganda to influence the judges. He feels, however, that he and Patsy have both been high-hatted.

CANDY MAKER

Major Thomas B. Catron, inspecting the I. S. D. storeroom, noted several sacks of sugar which somehow had received a drenching during the recent rains.

The Major, intent upon salvaging the sugar, directed the cooks to dry it out in the oven. He rescinded his order, however, when the mess sergeant gently hinted that such a procedure would be inadvisable unless the Major contemplated throwing an old fashioned taffy pull for the I. S. D. boys.

NOTE: Major Catron strenuously denies that he directed the drying of the sugar in the oven. He says it was salt. However, Adjutant General Lewis, who gave in the story, says that he can produce half a dozen reliable witnesses in support of it.

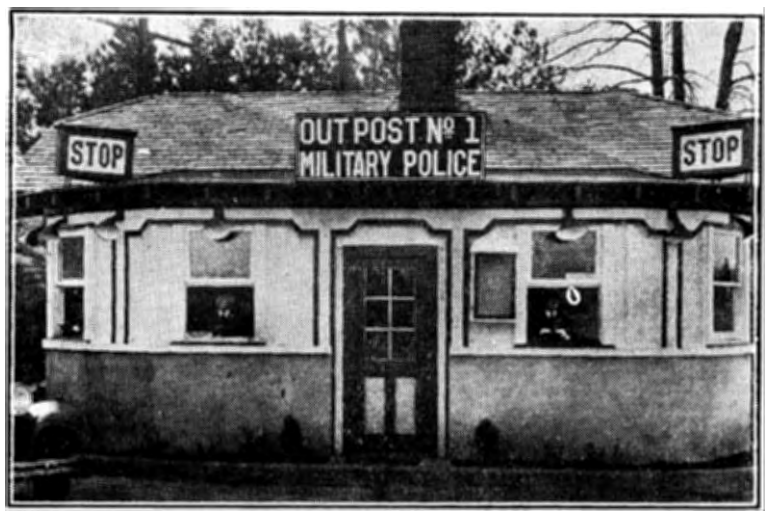
Military Police Are Called Upon To Perform Very Wide Range Of Duties

"Who won the War"? Fourteen years ago this was the opening remark of a taunt, which with its answer, "The M. P.s", and its concluding note, vulgarly described as the "birdie", designedly precipitated personal combat almost as frequently as it was uttered. Justifiedly or not, it was the reflection of a wide spread hostility which had been engendered against a fine body of soldiers who faithfully carried out the duties with which they had been entrusted. Perhaps in the performance of their myriad necessary duties, many of which were distasteful to themselves, and offensive to those against whom their orders were enforced, the actions of some individuals of the military police were characterized by objectionable overzealousness or lack of good judgment. Then too, these mens duties brought them into contact with the average American's resentment against restraint of his individual actions, particularly that which tends to circumscribe his personal pleasures. The indisputable fact remains that the services of the military police played no little part in the success of American arms in the recent World War. The enforcement of rear area traffic regulations, which insured the orderly progress of personnel, ammunition, food and supplies to the front, the safeguarding of enemy prisoners, the maintenance of order among troops in rest or leave areas, and the detection and prevention of crime and the apprehenson of criminals, were but a few of the major duties which military police performed with notable credit. Theirs is a proud record of service, and it will endure in the annals of America's military achievements.



A scene showing Outpost No. 1, past which practically all cars entering or leaving the Post must proceed.

At Fort Benning a splendid body of military police is performing its peace time duties with the same efficiency and devotion to duty which characterized the work of its war time prototypes. The large population of Fort Benning, the vast extent of its reservation, and the similarity of many of its administrative problems with those of a modern city, require the maintenance of an organization corresponding to a city police department to enforce the numerous regulations which insure order among the inhabitants of the post, the safeguarding of lives and property, and the supervision of the great flow of automobile traffic. Fifty men, carefully selected from the four thousand white troops of the garrison, constitute Fort Benning's police force, which is officially designated the Military Police Section, Infantry School Detachment. This group of men is commanded by Lieutenant Nunez C. Pilet, assistant provost marshal. Captain Arnold J. Funk, a member of the Commandant's staff, is the provost marshal, and is the responsible head of the military police and the range guards, the latter being a small group of non-commissioned officers invested with special authority to enforce various regulations pertaining to large areas on the reservation.

The organization of the provost marshal's office is similar to that of a city police headquarters, with its various departments or sections each in charge of a man of appropriate qualifications. In one of these is kept a register of all motor vehicle owned and operated by residents of the post by military organizations. The issuance of driver's permits, post license tags, and the examination of drivers and mechanical inspections of vehicles, are duties of this section.

Another section is charged with the registering dogs and cats and issuing of license tags for them, which are done only after the animals have been immunized against rabies. The impounding of animals found running at large is another duty of this section. A register of domestic servants employed in the Garrison is also kept in the office of the provost marshal. This is done to safeguard the health of employers by requiring the servants to undergo periodical physical examinations, and to protect employers against possible loss through the employment of dishonest or incompetent servants.

Then there is another section which directs the work of the traffic policemen, and the patrols, and which maintains a group of men in readiness to respond to emergencies. Each time a fire alarm is sounded several military policemen are dispatched to the scene to clear the way for the fire department and to establish and maintain fire lines. Periodical motorcycle patrols and others on foot augment the various guards to insure the safety of residents of the post and the protection of their property. Another group furnish guards for school buses to ensure the safe conduct of children to and from school.

Of all the groups of military police none comes into closer contact with most members of the garrison than the men assigned to traffic duty. These men, some on motorcycles patroling the roads, an dothers on foot regulating traffic at street intersections, perform their work with an efficiency which might well be envied by the police department of many a city. The visitor entering the post by the main paved road from Columbus will probably see one of these traffic men as soon as he passes reservation line, where frequently a motorcycle man will be observing the flow of traffic and checking the speed of the passing vehicles. Upon crossing the Upatoi the visitor will find himself approaching Outpost No. 1, which corresponds to a police substation. Here a small group of military police in charge of Corporal Arthur H. Nolle, inspects and supervises the heavy flow of traffic which daily amounts usually to about two thousand cars at this point. Although it may not be evident to the casual visitor, each car is scrutinized by the military police at the outpost, its license number recorded, and other points noted before it is permitted to pass. Should there appear to be any irreglarity, the car is detained and an investigation is made at once. Among the duties of this group of military police at the outpost are the exclusion of unauthorized or undesirable persons, the prevention of the smuggling of intoxicating liquor, the prevention of removal of government property from the post authority, the prevention of unauthorized departure of military personnel from the post, and the prevention of enlisted personnel from leaving the post in improper uniform.

After passing the outpost, the visitor will likely encounter several traffic policement during his progress through the post. Here he may be held up while waiting the traffic officer's signal to cross a street intersection; there he may be guided away from a one-way street or a forbidden parking area. In all of his contacts with the military police he will find them ever ready to aid and advise, ready to furnish cheerfully such information as is at their command, and to display the utmost courtesy in the enforcement of the orders with which they are charged.

Not all of the work of the military police is pleasant, and occasionally they are called upon to take into custody persons charged with military offenses. This duty is discharged quietly and unostentatiously, and with as much consideration for the malefactor as is possible without lessening the necessary authority and control over him. The most cordial relations exist between the Fort Benning military police and the local civil authorities, which pleasing state of affairs facilitates the administration of military justice in the cases of transgressors whose offenses are committed in the adjacent civil communities. These, forunately, are few in number, and are usually only charged with misdemeanors. Instead of being detained in the city, these cases are turned over to the military police, whose representative, Sergeant Philip Wald resides in the city and cooperates with the civil police in the handling of cases made by them against military personnel.

Supplementing the military police section, is the group of range guards, or mounted military policemen, each of whom is a non-commissioned of-

Station W4ABS Used By Infantry School in Communications Instruction

It is possible that you have gone for a stroll through the Academic Area in the vicinity of the Second Section and have been amazed at the network of radio antennae overhead. The business ends of all those wires terminate in the Academic Department Radio Station, known the world over as W4ABS. This station is owned by the school and operated by the Radio Section of the Communications Group, 1st Lieut. J. E. Raymond in charge.

The station is maintained for the purpose of giving additional transmitting and traffic handling practice to the assistant instructors and to selected member of the National Guard Enlisted Specialists Class who are qualified operators, and incidentally to serve the personnel of Fort Benning. W4ABS is a member of the American Radio League, the network of amateur radio stations which handle all messages of this kind, and whose members have stepped into the breach many times in cases of emergency by providing means of communication when all other ways have been destroyed or temporarily disrupted.

Thousands of radio contacts have been made during the few years this station has been on the air. These contacts have included stations scattered the length and breadth of the United States in forty-four foreign countries. Several schedules are maintained with reliable stations in all parts of the world which serve as a traffic outlet for messages originating at Fort Benning or picked up from other station for relay. W4ABS is known, nationally and internationally, as one of the finest and most efficiently operated radio statios of the 36,000 amateur radio stations in the world.

The main transmitter is a commercial product of the latest design. It is about six times as powerful as our local broadcast station, WRBL, but of infinitely greater range, because of the fact that the messages are sent in code rather than vocally. The world is our backyard so far as distance is concerned, and it is just as easy to talk to Australia as to Atlanta. This "talking", of course, is done in the Morse code—the common language of radio operators. To the uninitiated, it all seems very wonderful, but to those who handle the key at W4ABS it is an endless thrill. Imagine wiggling a key up and down a few times, turning on the receiver, and hearing some station thousands of miles away come right back at you, ready for a "rag chew" or to take messages! It is not the thrill that comes "once in a lifetime"—it happens many times a day and far into the wee hours of the night at W4ABS. As soon as the day's work is done, the operators of the school go to the station to handle the traffic which accumulates during the day—messages that have been 'phoned in, sent in by messenger, received by mail, or collected from the student officers.

Handling personal messages for the garrison personnel is a real pleasure, for the operators not only enjoy the work but derive an added stimulus from the knowledge that they are rendering a worthwhile service. Recently an officer from the Tank Section, The Infantry School, phoned in a message for a person in Balboa, C. Z. Fifteen minutes later the radio operator called the officer and gave him an answer to his message. Most of the messages handled are addressed to persons in the Philippine Islands, Hawaii, China, or to Army Transports enroute between those points and the States. Although delivery is not "guaranteed" as in case of commercial station, the percentage of messages delivered is exceptionally high.

In the rear of the station is the shop where the station equipment is repaired and much of the equipment is built. The operators spend many hours at the work-bench working out experiments in the design of receivers and transmitters. Sergeant Huggins, the Chief Operator, recently constructed a small transmitter of spare parts and on the first test on the air he "hooked" a sation in Madrid, Spain. This on less power than is required to light a 50-watt lamp! Corporal Chilton, just to pass the time away, has completed a vest pocket edition of the large station transmitter,—almost an exact replica in miniature—and using very low power it has shown a great performance record. Corporal Eberhardt when not driving the "loud talking wagon" around the reservation, accompanying student classes, builds efficient transmitters and receivers, tries them out, then tears them down to get the junk to start new ones. Pvt. Hammond, besides being a "heavy duty man" on the key, spends his spare moments planning tall stories to spring on some operator miles away, and nothing gives him greater delight than a tall story contest with any operaor who is willing to juggle the truth with him. Pvt. Lytle is the station secretary, statistician, and trouble-shooter. When he can't be found at the work bench, exterminating "bugs" in the station equipment, he is at the secretary's desk handling correspondence. One of his jobs is the exchange of "wall paper" (acknowledgement cards) with stations which have been in communication with W4ABS and who write in for similar cards from the Benning station.

Out of all this experimentation come many useful ideas for the Infantry School. One of the outstanding accomplishments of the Radio staff is the building of the sound truck which is used in many of the instructional lectures in the field. The technical equipment of this truck was built almost entirely from equipment of the Radio staff and it was designed and assembled under the supervision of Lt. Raymond, who is in charge. Another task entrusted to the staff of W4ABS is the care and maintenance of the field telephone and field radio equipment of the Infantry School, one that requires a high degree of skill in the handling

Corporal Frank Chilton, one of the operators of radio station W4ABS, is shown here at the receiver through which come all the messages handled by the station. Directly in front of him, on the table, are the keys used in sending messages.

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY: Offering "Chandu, The Magician" with Edmund Lowe, Bela Lugosi, Irene Ware and Henry B. Walthall. Said to be the greatest all radio mystery thriller as a new screen sensation. Its wierd . . . chilling . . . thrilling . . . The voice of peril! The eyes of terror! Chandu takes you thru a maze of magic

AT THE RIALTO

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY: Offering "McKenna of The Mounted" with Buck Jones and Greta Granstedt. Indomitable will in the service of the law. Loss of reputation—censure and humiliation to track down a murdering gang of outlaws. And he outfights, outsmarts and outrides his enemies.

SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Offering "The Sport Parade" with Joel McCrea, Marian Marsh and William Gargan. In the sport profession his bread was buttered on the back! And that's where the ex-college wrestling champ always fell . . . until the right little girl, with tears in her eyes, put her hard earned dough on the ra-ra. A great picture of all phases of sports.

TUESDAY ONLY: "Crooner" with Ann Dvorak, David Manners, Ken Murray and Guy Kibbee. He wrecks happy homes . . . by special permission of the copyright owners. This Casanova of the air waves has caused more domestic entanglements than all the movie stars put together. Take a peek at his private life.

WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY: Offering "The Golden West" with George O'Brien, Janet Chandler and Marian Burns. Zane Grey's great story on the screen. A story of pioneers battling their way through cruel hardships to win a new empire in the Golden West.

Expensive "Razzbery" Feature Of Picture Showing At Grand

"The "bird", otherwise known as "the Bronx cheer," "the razzberry," and "the Hollywood sasulte," is a phenomenon which Ernst Lubitsch, noted movie director, regards with high esteem.

Lubitsch spent six days and a lot of effort in picturng this peculiar sound for "If I Had a Million,' drama starring Gary Cooper, George Raft, Wynne Gibson, Charles Laughton, Jack Oakie, Frances Dee, Charlie Ruggles, Alison Skipworth, W. C. Fields, Mary Boland, Roscoe Karns, May Robson, Gene Raymond, Lucien Littlefield and Richard Bennett, playing at the Grand Theatre Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

He constructed a set which covered an entire stage at the Paramount Hollywood studios.

One hundred and seventeen shiny mahogany desks, as many typewriters, tlephones, and other desk paraphernalia as were necessary for authenticity, were installed in it.

Over 100 players, "business men" types, were set down in it.

A special camera crew and crane were employed.

And only four words weer spoken.

All this was to give an opportunity to one player to give "the bird" to another.

"If I Had a Million" centers around an eccentric millionaire who distributes his fortune among nine persons whose names he has chosen at random from a city directory. Romance, irony, comedy, and tragedy flourish in the wake of his beneficence.

RIALTO

"The Sport Parade" which comes to the Rialto Theatre Sunday and Monday is the kind of picture that uses action, not words, to tell 'its story. It's the type of diversion we can whole-heartedly recommend to entertainment-sekers slightly wearied of full-dress drawing-room drama with the diction as refined as the raiment.

The red-bloodde, lusty, speedy material that makes up the subject matter of American sport pages, forms the background for this production, which presents Joel McCrea, William Gargan, a newcomer to films from the New York stage, and Marian Marsh in the leading roles, although good old reliable Walter Catlett, as the high-pressure promoter with low ethics, is by no means to be overlooked.

The story presents the two handsome, healthy young men as they leave college, where they have been heroes and inseparable pals for four years through one conquest after another on gridiron, diamond and track.

Briefly, there is an honest, sincere study of the plight of the college hero, who goes out into the world with his chest loaded with medals only to find out that yesterday's college hero is today's forgotten man.

ROYAL

Film fans who have expectantly awaited Clara Bow's new picture were amply rewarded when "Call Her Savage," first of the flame-haired star's productions for Fox, opens at the Royal Theatre with midnight show 11:15 Saturday night.

She is far lovlier than ever, more poised, dignified, and has a certainty and confidence which should re-establish her as the one really great star of the screen.

The story is a stormy-plotted romantic drama affording her every opportunity for a full display of her emotional ability, from the head-strong wilfulness of her youth to the sublime tenderness of mother love. Through flirtatious courtship days, a hasty and repented marriage, and the reckless, carefree escapades thereafter, Clara leads three men a merry chase in the picture.

"Call Her Savage" was adapted by Edwin Burke from Tiffany Thayer's novel of that name and was directed by John Francis Dillon.

ficer. These men are charged with the enforcement of certain regulations pertaining to safety precautions against forest fires, and the protection of game. There are twelve men in this group. Eleven of them are in charge of certain outlying districts and each man is responsible for an area of approximately 8.000 acres.

The present military police section is a development from an organization of early Fort Benning days known as the miltary police company. At one time the military police company was a guard company composed of details of men from the 29th Infantry, 15th Tank Battalion, 83rd Field Artillery and Infantry School Detachment. This guard company totalled 131 enlisted men, including a military police work both in Columbus and Fort Benning, and the duties of the main guard and prisoner guard at Fort Benning. The plan of maintaining a military police company as a provisional guard company to perform all police and guard duties subsequently was abandoned and the military police section was reorganized as a part of the Infantry School Detachment. Progressive reductions of personnel since that time have reduced the strength of the section to its present strength of fifty men.

In all the garrisons of The Infantry School there is no group of soldiers more punctilious in the performance of their duties, or more consistently courteous in their everyday dealings with the Fort Benning public. They are but human, however, and are subject to ordinary human limitations and reactions, of which fact a moment's consideration should allay the irritation of the average hasty critic of the Fort Benning military police.

Revelers to hold Bridge Party and Dance Dec. 21

Always on the alert to do something to please their public, the Revelers Club announces the sponsoring of a dance and bridge party at the Post Gymnasium, December 21, 1932. Prizes will be awarded for high scores. At this time "Amateur Night" will be observed by the Revelers also. It is planned to have this feature of entertainment regularly at the second dance of each month. At this time anyone who might have any talent in any line—singing, dancing, acting or any entertaining feature will be given a chace to perform. A prize will be given those putting on the best performances. It will be remembered that a very successful amateur show was staged last season by the enlisted personnel. As yet no plans have been made for another show of this type this season but it is expected there will be such and it is expected that members of last year's success will take advantage of this opportunity to prepare themselves and also win a prize.

It is announced by the President of the Revelers that the bridge party will not delay the dance in any way. One end of the large gymnasium will be arranged with bridge tables for the bridge fiends while the dancers will occupy their usual part of the building. All who wish to play are requested to notify the president of the club, Corporal Parker, phone 522 or 605, in order that a sufficient number of tables may be ready. No charge is to be made for playing. Dancing will begin at 8:30 P. M.

RADIO STATION W4ABS

of the delicate parts of the equipment. Still another is the maintenance of the equipment used in teaching the students of the Company Officers' Class and the National Guard Classes the fundamentals of radio and telephone communication. The greatly increased necessity for rapid communication modern warfare necessitates a high degree of perfection in instruction and in the equipment used for instruction, and the work done by the men of the radio section is one of much importance. The men themselves serve as instructors in certain phases of communications work.

As an instance of the work done for the instruction of the Infantry School students, the buzzer practice sets employed in teaching of codework were all constructed and tested by the men of the radio section, under the direction of Sgt. Huggins.

Amateur radio is one of the most absorbing hobbies in existence for in its many different phases it covers everything from stamp collecting to modeling a king. People are met and friends made all over the world with nothing but invisible rays cementing the bonds of friendship. Most important of all, amateur radio has been a dependable emergency communication link in sectionalized catastrophes such as floods and storms, where all other forms of communication have bowed to the elements. The Army and Navy encourage amateur radio operation and are actively engaged in training civilian and amateur operators in the technique of military and naval radio practice, so that a large reserve of operators will be available should a national emergency arise. National Guard organizations throughout the country are building amateur radio stations and thus give valuable all-year training in traffic handling to their operators which it otherwise resrticted to a few days at the annual encampment. It is here that Fort Benning performs a valuable service, for it provides instructional facilities for National Guard Officers which will enable them more easily to re-instruct their men in the fundamentals of communication.

Radio station W4ABS is always open for inspection, and visitors are welcome at any time.

Brilliant Run By Prophet Gives 2nd Batts Victory 7-2

Under a threatening sky, the Golden Tornado and the Kellys of the Second Battalion battled through four quarters of grueling football last Sunday afternoon. For three periods of the game, the blue-jerseyed backs of the Kellys battered relentlessly at the stalwart Tanker line but to no avail. Then, in the closing minutes of the game, Prophet, the Kelly ace, caught a punt on his own thirty-eight yard line, eluded two tacklers, and headed down the sidelines. After a brilliant bit of broken field running, he passed over the last chalk line to bring victory to the 2nd Batts by the score of 7-2.

After the game had started, the two elevens engaged in a punting duel with little ultimate advantage to either side. The Tankers finally took the ball in their own territory, and battered the opposing line for three consecutive first downs. An intercepted pass ended the determined march, but the Kellys found the Golden Tornado line impenetrable and were forced to the ball on the 2nd Batts ten yard line, kick. Another exchange of punts put but a seventy yard kick set the Tankers back to their own territory. The quarter ended soon afterwards.

At the beginning of the second period, the Kelly ace-in-the-hole, Prophet, went into the game. A pass to Prophet was good for an eight yard gain, but the Tanker line held. A beautiful punt by Joris went out of bounds on the one yard line. Thompson kicked from behind his own goal posts to the

One Southern Star On Herald Prophet's Team

All-Star Team Lists Players From Every Part Of United States

BY I. PREDICTUM

In picking his all-American eleven two factors have been taken into consideration, the standing of the player's team and the value of that player to his eleven. The task is a tremendous one. From the wealth of outstanding players in the country, eleven must be picked who stand head and shoulders above their fellow players. The candidates must then be sifted, weighed, as it were, in the balance, and those who are found deficient in any one department of the game must be discarded.

It seems impossible to pick all-star elevens on any other basis. In my selections, it is possible that there may be players who individually are not equal or superior to other players in the country, but who have nevertheless been important cogs and absolutely vital to their teams.

My all-American along with the alternate and third teams was chosen after a survey which covered every football camp in the country.

There have been an abundance of fine ends. Paul Moss of Purdue is perhaps the best end in the country. Joe Skladany, of Pittsburgh, a bulwark on defense, and a superb pass receiver is another excellent wingman. Joe Martinez-Zorrilla, fiery Cornell end, was a very good reason why Cornell only met with one defeat in the course of the season. Dick King, Army, rated almost unanimously by the experts as the greatest end in the country up to the time of his injury, must be given consideration, and David Nisbet, Washington, and Hokoff, Nebraska, starred throughout the season in their positions.

Moss of Purdue is unquestionably the outstanding candidate for all-American. Besides being an excellent pass receiver, he is a fine blocker, and practically all of Purdue's reverse plays depended on his blocking as a basis. His kicks, when he was called upon to handle the punting for the Boilermakers, averaged forty yards from the line of scrimmage.

For the other end, I have chosen Joe Skladany. A great defensive end, a deadly tackler, an efficient blocker, and, above all, a fine pass-receiver, he was a tower of strength in the Panther line. The Army, especially, will verify my choice. Skladany was a shining light in the Army game, and, had he not been present, the Panther would not still be boasting an unbeaten eleven.

Dick King of Army, one of the finest ends seen in action this season, must be given a berth on the second team. His brilliant play, up to the time he received an unfortunate injury, was the talk of all sports-writers. Martinez-Zorrilla, a shade under Skladany, received the other position.

Notre Dame and Southern Calfornia monopolize the selections for tackle position. Krause and Kurth of the Fighting Irish have few equals as a tackle pair. Big, strong, fast, and powerful, they wreaked havoc among the backfields that opposed them during the past season. Both players had been hardened in the fire of competition before the season began and played inspired football, the chief reason for Notre Dame's great defensive strength.

Tay Brown and Ernie Smith, both of Southern California, fitted like a glove in Coach Howard Jones' complicated system of line play which demanded a continual flow of power from the tackles on the offense as well as the defense. Both combined tremendous forward drive with the mobility that is essential to good tackles. Coach Jones admits that the principle reason for his team's success the past season was due to Captain Brown and Ernie Smith, two really great tackles.

Howard Colehaur and Fred Crawford of Penn and Duke respectively starred sufficiently to gain themselves a position on the third team.

Summerfelt of Army and Corbus of Stanford are the choices for guard positions although competition for this division of such calibre as Bob Smith of Colgate, Vaught of Texas Christian, Gailus of Ohio State, and Rosenberg of Southern California.

Seldom are guards singled out for the rousing cheers of the crowd. Throughout the season, Milton Summerfelt, Army captain was in the glare of the spotlight. A roving guard and a relentless spotter of forward passes, he roamed far and wide behind the army line. A great blocker, a fine tackler, and an inspiring leader makes Summerfelt's choice for the position almost unanimous.

Out on the west coast, Bill Corbus, dubbed the "Baby Faced Assassin", was providing entertainment for the followers of Stanford. His spectacular knock-em-dead style of play intrigued spectators but disconcerted Stanford's opponents. In fact, he spent so much of his time in the opposing backfields that many were in doubt as to which team he was playing on. Rather small as guards go, Corbus has a pile-driving charge, knows how to use his hands effectively, and on the defense is well-night impregnable.

Bob Smith of Colgate has the distinction of captaining Colgate's great team the past season. A tower of finest offensive guards in the country. His brilliant play earns him a berth on the second team along with John Howard Vaught of Texas Christian. Vaught is fast, smart, and aggressive, the rugged type of player who loves the going when it's tough.

Pete Gracey of Vanderbilt, choice for center, is a rangy defensive player and a shrewd diagnostician, exceptionally smart against passes. He hits with the impact of a 13-inch projectile. His snapping is perfection; he is a brilliant down-field blocker; and thus is invaluable when a back gets into the clear. Laurence Ely of Nebraska is another great center. A brilliant, blocker, an accurate passer, he is also a fine offensive player. Charles Bernard of Michigan, roving center, backs up the line beautifully and was the reason why Michigan's opponents succeeded in pushing over only two touchdowns in the course of the entire season.

There is a wealth of candidates for backfield positions. Dark-haired Harry Newman figured directly in the scoring of eight of Michigan's twelve touchdowns. He started five out of those eight scores by forward passes and made the others on runs of his own. Without Newman providing the winning spark, the Wolverines might have been just another football team.

Newman displayed throughout a difficult season brilliant field generalship. His handling of punts was exceptionally high class, and his defensive work was above par. His place-kicking ability won Michigan's final game against Minnesota, which gave them the conference championship.

Cliff Montgomery of Columbia, an excellent field general, an elusive runner, and an accurate passer, merits his selection on the second team. Soleau of Colgate, one of the very finest blocking backs in the country, is selected for the third eleven.

ONE SOUTHERN STAR IN HERALD PROPHET'S TEAM

The half-backs, Heller of Pittsburgh and Zimmerman of Tulane were unquestionably the standouts of a season that produced a large number of competent backs.

Warren Heller's passing made possible many of the Panther victories. Besides being an exceptionally accurate passer, he is a fine pass-receiver, hits a line with force and fervor, blocks with uncanny skill, and once he gets into an open field, it is almost imposible to bring him down. Heller is the best all-round back in the country.

Versatile Don Zimmerman of Tulane is the choice for the other halfback position. As a broken-field runner, it is doubtful whether he is excelled by any player in the country. Singlehanded, Don defeated many of Tulane's opponents this year. His passing (he is probably the best passer of the year), his line smashing, and his defensive work mark him as one of the greats of football.

Frank Christenson, captain of the Utah team which won the Rocky Mountain championship, is fullback. Los Angeles football experts placed him at the head of their lists when they saw that he was the only player to make consistent gains against the powerful Southern California eleven.

Christenson has scored an average of 10.5 points in each conference game for three seasons. He led scorers in the circuit in 1930 with seventy-eight points, in 1931 with seventy, and this season with fifty-eight. The record speaks for the man.

George Sanders of Washington State is another great half-back. So is Jimmie Hitchcock of Auburn. Both men are fast, shifty broken-field runners, good passers, and excellent defensive players. Melinkovitch of Notre Dame hits a line like a ton of brick and can snake through a broken field despite his two hundred pounds. He fits very well in Notre Dame's unique system of play. Horstman of Purdue, the slashing type of runner, Berry of Illinois, Beattie Feathers of Tenenssee, "Hurry" Cain of Alabama, Lassister of Yale, Stafford of Texas, and countless others deserve recognition for excellent play during the past season.

Among the many results of valiant efforts being made by the Government and by ardent nature lovers to preserve the wild life of the nation, and particularly the game life, is the Benning preservation, which is almost unique in a section of the country where conservation is not a generally accepted theory. Although no efforts have been made to stock this preserve as yet, still the game is given opportunity to multiply in certain restricted areas of the Reservation, and is increasing, particularly among the rarer forms of wild game. It is to be hoped that in the future the authorities of the Post will be enabled to stock the reservation with other forms, such as pheasants, and the streams stocked with fish of various kinds.

The Fort Benning Game Conservation is one of the finest of its kind in this section of the country. It is estimated that 75,000 of the reservation's total acreage of about 97,500 belongs to the Game Conservation.

The reservation is divided up into areas, each under the personal supervision of a range guard who is held responsible for the particular area which he patrols. There are eleven game wardens under Sgt. George E. Friend, the Chief Range Guard. These wardens, when on duty, are armed with shotguns and carry instructions to kill all predatory animals.

GAME CONSERVATION IS CARRIED OUT HERE

There are certain restricted areas where hunting is not permitted. These areas vary each year, and where there may have been hunting in one particular area last year, the same area may be restricted this year.

An area is burned off each year under controlled burning which will encourage quail and doves to settle there. Efforts are continually being made to encourage game. For example, about five acres in Weem's Bottom have been planted with sesbania, quail food.

Living on the reservation are forty-two tenants. These tenants are required to plant one acre each year in peas, corn that is not harvested, et cetera, on the edge of the acreage left for the birds. Tenants are not allowed to hunt nor to possess firearms and are permitted to have only such dogs as are registered at the office and are used by their owners solely for the purpose of protection. The tenants are also supposed to clear ten additional acres of ground each year, for game is more plentiful in cultivated areas.

These tenants cultivate their ground under the supervision of the range guard in whose area the tenant lives. They pay an annual rent of about five dollars, but are required to assist in keeping unimproved roads in good order. All the tenants are colored with the exception of one.

The popularity of hunting on the post is readily apparent. This year to date, two hundred and twenty-one permanent hunting licenses have been issued which doesn't take into account the large number of daily permits that are issued at Headquarters. In all probability, there have been at least three hundred daily permits handed out.

Plans are now underfoot to form a Fisherman's Club, to be established primarily for the encouragement of the sport. At present, fishing is not an organized sport as hunting is. No licenses are necessary for fishing and there have been few organized efforts to preserve fish. If present plans materialise, the dam at Harp's Pond will be rebuilt and stocked with fish obtained from the State Hatchery. the conservation might well prove to be a fisherman's paradise if steps are taken to organize the sport.

The hunting season regularly furnishes the humor-monger with a wide variety of anecdotes. Many have already been given publicity in the Herald.

One hears how Maj. Lewis, Captain Funk, Lt. Pilet, and two others journeyed up the Chattahoochee river in a boat chartered for hunting purposes, how the motor stalled when the hunters were ready to make the return trip, the frantic efforts to put it into working order, and the return trip made with the aid of an improvised spotlight. Says Major Lewis "I haven't been warm since."

Two officers went hunting on land belonging to a farmer. The farmer not only expressed himself as willing that they hunt on his land, but volunteered to go with them. The farmer led the procession. One of the hunters stooped to pick up something, at approxiately the same time the gun carried by the farmer spouted flame. The second in line estimated that the bullet passed through the precise place where his head would have been had he not stooped. The farmer apologized, bewailing the absence of a safety on his gun. Again they went forward, the farmer thoroughly admonished not to load his gun until the dog pointed. A covey was located. The farmer swung around and started shooting. Both officers fell face forward on the ground. They never had occasion to regret their precautions. The bullets, as it was, were dangerously close. The farmer's gun changed hands rather abruptly after this episode.

The uncertainness of hunting is evidenced by the fact that Maj. Harrison and Capt. Berry succeeded in locating eight coveys in one day. Returning the next day to the same spot, they found none.

Major White had four or five hen turkeys come close enough to bite him, but failed to locate the gobbler.

Major Terrill was very enthusiastic because he had seen turkeys go to roost. The major and a companion made plans to go out and make a kill or two, but thought to locate the spot on the map first to find out the best way to get at the turkeys. Disappointment was keen when they discovered that the turkey roost was right in the geometrical center of the restricted area.

These are just a few of the typical ancedotes which help to make hunting as popular as it is on the post.

thirty yard line, the ball being returned eighty yards. The Tankers were unable to gain and a kick went over the goal-line to give the ball to the Kellys on their own twenty yard line. Unable to gain in their turn, a good punt gave the ball to the Tanks in their own territory. Derrick intercepted a pass, and after some beautiful broken field running, returned the ball to his own forty-seven yard line. An exchange of punts was disastrous to the 2nd Batts who were forced back into the shadow of their goal posts. A touchback near the end of the half gave the Golden Tornado two points.

After the game had reopened in the second half, Prophet shook loose around left end for a forty yard gain to the Tank twenty-two yard line. The Tanks were penalized half the distance to the goal line. On a reverse play, Prophet went to the six yard line. The third quarter ended with the ball on the five yard line, fourth down.

A pass from Prophet bounded out of the hands of the receiver and the ball went to the Tanks. A punt went out of bounds on the twenty yard line. The 2nd Batts were unable to gain through the line and resorted to passes, one finally going over the goal-line. The Tankers were unable to make any headway and punted. Prophet took the kick on his own thirty-eight yard line, eluded two tacklers, and started down the sidelines. Squirming, side-stepping, he seemed to ooze through the mass of would-be tacklers that encompassed him. Twice he was almost stopped, broke loose each time, to continue goalwards, finally going over for a touchdown. The extra point was kicked.

The Tankers filled the air with passes. One was intercepted by Saunders who raced to the twenty yard line. The game ended soon afterwards.

VOLS GET NEWSWRITERS' CHOICE FOR S. C. CHAMPION

One of the most tumultous seasons in Southern Conference history has ended without a generally recognized champion and with Tennessee, Auburn, and Louisiana State partisans joining in the cry for a share of the honors. The finish finds three team's unbeaten with the conference, but two of these, Tennessee and Auburn, have played tie games.

The other, Louisiana State, won all of its circuit battles, but a short schedule combined with two defeats and a deadlock in non-conference conference contests have caused many experts to frown on the Tiger's claims.

A poll of prominent sportswriters from every prominent state indicates Tennessee will be awarded the newspaper decision. Experts from thirty-one newspapers participated in the poll and twenty-two of these voted for the Volunteers who won six games, lost none, and tied one.

COMPANY "E"

Hello world this is "E" Company back on the air with good news.

We have been hard at drill this past week learning this three deep monkey drill. I think everybody has caught on to the drill pretty good except Tidmore. He remarks this Army is becoming too fast for him. I think he would learn to drill better if he would only keep away from Post No. 5 and stop annoying the sentry at night, seeing that he is still on the job around the bank.

Sergeant Mathews, H., wants to know how Sergeant Dalby's dog can set a bird and the bird wasn't there. This information will be greatly appreciated by Sergeant Mathews. As it happened Sergeant Mathews and Private Hood went hunting the other day and had good luck. Someone asked Sergeant Mathews how many squirrels they killed. He said, "We killed eight, Hood killed seven and crippled one and I killed the crippled one."

Joe Berryhill is going to quit playing tackle on the 2nd Battalion football squad and start playing in the backfield for he says he has got that mighty river drive.

Sergeant Bell our mess Sergeant, and a mighty fine one at that, asked Red Smith the Cook could he make jelly roll. Smith replyed, "You know I can't make jelly roll for it won't do anything but shake." Private Poisso Jr. wants to know if there is anyone who wants a special duty job giving him black eyes when those new class A passes come out, for he had two shiners when the pictures were made and they're well now and he is afraid he can't get out the gate.

Our basketball team is coming along fine and it looks certain that we are 1933 Regimental Champs again. We have been Champions eight years straight. I think that is a very good record. If any Company team would like to play us just call 607 and ask for Sergeant Poisso and arrangements will be made.

Water-Tanks During Repair Period

A photo showing the extensiveness of the work by which the water tanks supplying water for the Post were recently repaired and put in perfect condition.

An excellent example of economy, resulting in a considerable saving to the government, is afforded by a survey of the costs of reconditioning the three 100,000 gallon wooden storage tanks on Ebbert Hill, the work of which was completed a few days ago by a force of workmen under the directio nof Colonel J. DeCamp Hall, post quartermaster.

In the overhauling of the water tanks, which have been in use as a part of the post water supply system since 1919, it was necessary to replace most of the underpinning supporting the tanks, and a portion of the tanks themselves.

The entire cost of the project, including a large quantity of lumber produced by the post saw-mill, was approximately $4,200. Had the work been performed by contractors, it is estimated that $7,500 would have been required to complete it, or about $3,300 more than the same job as executed by the quartermaster.

"I want a good cook for my country house," Mrs. Blosswel informed the manager of the employment bureau.

"Have we anyone here who would like to spend a day or so in the country?" inquired the manager.

Q. M. D.

The Quartermaster Detachment has recently added to its personnel a number of new faces, all of them being gained by transfer from other organizations in the post. New names on the roster include Privates Willis J. Patrick, William R. Barksdale, Howard D. Hill, Jesse C. Greene and Byron D. Perrett.

Technical Sergeant James L. Roberts, who has become well known in Fort Benning during his stay at the post, has recently departed for Fort Barrancas. Florida, his new station.

In this column about six months ago the retirement of Saff Sergeant Charles H. Prince was announced. For some reason there was a mix-up in the computation of Sergeant Prince's time completed, and the Adjutant General's office discovered that he was not due for retirement until December, 1932. There is now no doubt that he will complete 30 years of honest and faithful service, including double time for foreign service, this month.

History Of 24th Infantry Is Replete With Tales Of Bravery And Courage

The 24th Infantry was organized on Nov. 1, 1869, through the consolidation of the 38th Infantry and the 41st Infantry, which in themselves were remnants of the four original colored regular regiments which had been authorized under a special act of Congress, on July 28, 1866.

During the first three decades of the regiment's career, it garrisoned many different army posts, most of which were situated on the Indian frontiers. Although the 24th Infantry was not called upon to participate extensively in the Indian campaigns, the regiment experienced such a variety of duties in the field that it soon acquired a high reputation for efficiency throughout the country.

When the Spanish-American war broke out in 1898, the highly trained and efficient colored regiment was one of the first to be sent to Cuba. It was there that the 24th wrote a new page in military history, and demonstrated the sterling qualities of the American negro soldier. At Santiago the gallant 24th faced unflinchingly the withering fire of the Spanish Mausers, and although a white volunteer regiment was demoralized and unable to advance against the Spanish position, the colored regular regiment pressed forward to the final assault and capture of the enemy's stronghold. In this battle the 24th was brigaded with two other white regular regiments, the 9th and the 13th, in Wikoff's brigade, in the division commanded by General Kent, who formerly had been colonel of the 24th. Soon after the action started, Colonel Wikoff, the brigade commander, was killed, and few minutes later, his successor, Lieutenant Colonel Worth, was seriously wounded. Five minutes afterward, the third successive brigade commander, Lieutenant Colonel Liscum, was shot down. Despite the loss of their higher commanders and the severe casualties among the ranks and company officers, the 24th Infantry and its associates swept aside the enemy's resistance and occupied the strong position on the top of San Juan Hill.

During this engagement, the regiment, which had a strength of twenty-three officers, and five hundred and one enlisted men at the beginning of the fight, suffered a loss of about eighteen percent.

Credit for the victory at San Juan was shared equally by the 24th Infantry and four white regular regiments. In a citation subsequent to the battle, General Kent, the division commander, stated "Credit is almost equally due the 6th, 9th, 13th, 16th and 24th regiments of infantry." This exploit of the 24th was also made the subject of a special report made by the adjutant general of the brigade and was featured by the war correspondents with the army as one of the striking events of the day.

Other glory was to be won by the 24th in Cuba, but although it was not to be achieved on the field of battle, it was to prove more costly in lives and entail greater sacrifice than the feat of arms before Santiago. Deadlier than the Spanish were the tropical diseases which soon scourged the American invaders, and far more difficult to conquer than were their human antagonists. Little was known then of the causes of the diseases or of the methods of combating them, and soon great numbers of American soldiers were laid low by attacks for which they had no defense. Hospitals were filled to overflowing with sick and dying soldiers, untouched by shot or shell, but assailed inwardly by a terrible, invisible enemy far more deadly. Death stalked everywhere and the army soon found itself crippled by the tolls of the horror which slew without distinction.

The 24th occupied the trenches on San Juan Hill until July 15th, when it was ordered to march to Siboney, where a large field hospital was established to care for the great numbers of yellow fever and typhoid fever victims. Here the colored soldiers acted as nurses, orderlies, and caretakers of the great pest camp. Despite their own illness they performed this task with rare ability and devotion to duty. Of the sixteen officers who arrived at Siboney only three were fit for duty and of the 456 men only twenty-four secaped the attacks of fevers. At one time 241 of their number were down with yellow fever or typhoid fever. Late in August, when the 24th was relieved from Siboney, only 198 men were able to make the march to the transport which was to take them back to the United States.

The humanitarion services of the 24th at Siboney were acclaimed universally. Major General Nelson Miles, then chief of staff of the army, said of their services at Siboney, "But of certain unusual features mention cannot be omitted . . . A regiment of colored troops, who having shared equally in the heroism as well as the sacrifices, is now voluntarily engaged in nursing yellow fever patients and burying the dead." Captain Merrill W. Ireland, who in later years became Surgeon General of the army, stated that practically all of the men of the 24th who acted as nurses came down with yellow fever.

After a few months recuperation in the United States the 24th was dispatched to the Philippine Islands to assist in quelling the insurrection. There it was split up into small detachments which fought in widely separated localities in the jungle campaigns. These opreations and the construction of the roads and guarding of lines of communication occupied the regiment until 1902, when it was returned to the United Sates, where it performed routine peace duties for several years.

At the time of the Mexican disturbance the 24th was stationed at Columbus, N. M., and in March, 1916, it was incorporated in the Pershing punitive column which penetrated deep into the territory of our southern neighbor. It remained in Mexico assisting in guarding the long line of communication until Feb. 5, 1917, when it was returned with other troops and began training for probable overseas in France. Although the 24th was not selected for overseas service it furnished many specialists and noncommissioned officers for colored organizations which were sent to France.

On October 9, 1922, the 24th arrived at Fort Benning, where it has become one of the important cogs in the mechanism of The Infantry School. Here it performs a number of duties which have neither glamor nor romance and its reward consists largely in the satisfaction of duty well performed and of the appreciation of those for whom they render service. Were it not for the 24th Infantry the demonstration of The Infantry School would lose a great deal of their effectiveness, for the overhead which is now carried by the colored regiment would have to be performed by the demonstration troops.

"Semper Paratus"—Always Ready" —is the motto of the 24th Infantry, for despite the numerous and varied duties which it performs, it carries on its combat training with little interruption; and were it again to be summoned to the field of battle, it doubtless would add new chapters to its history as brilliant as those written at Santiago.

Be that as it may I did stay awake long enough to note the instructor taking several minutes to point out on a map the four corners of a rectangle by reference to points "half an inch below the E in Gettysburg," etc. I was at some effort to restrain myself from calling his attention to the pretty red lines called co-ordinates by which he might have designated the corners in half a minute. The Capt. has no confidence in Capt. Bloomquist as a pedagogue or else none in us as pupils. That himself is a potential pupil of The Typographer would, of course, be treason to mention publicly, and I should not think of doing it for he is an estimable man and has a kind face.

Seldom have we seen a better amateur play than that presented by the Infantry School Dramatic Club players last Friday and Saturday evenings. We thoroughly enjoyed every minute of "Cock Robin", and we are not merely being fulsome. Particularly were we impressed with the finished performance of Lieutenant O'Flaherty as McAuliffe.

The episode of Captain Yarborough and the goldfish has recently come to our ears. Lieutenant Lanahan, it seems, had inherited a few choice goldfish when he moved into his new quarters on Lumpkin Road not long ago.

Now the lieutenant is no goldfish-lover. In fact, it must be said that he regarded them as a nuisance, so cast an eye about to discover someone who would generously relieve him of the responsibility of maintaining them. Whether Captain Yarbrough volunteered to take the goldfish or whether the honor was conferred upon him independently by Lieutenant Lanahan, we do not know. But the fact remains that the captain found himself in possession of four pedigreed goldfish, descended from noble ancestry.

But, hold on—did we say in possession of them? If so, we are in grievous error, for the next problem that confronted Goldfish-lover Yarborough was how to get his piscatorial friends out of a deep pool.

To extricate them by trickery was entirely out of the question, although we hear that for a while the worthy captain was entertaining the ingenious scheme of attaching a juicy worm to the end of a string and then dangling it temptingly before the eyes of a hungry goldfish, the assumption being that the unsuspecting goldfish, driven to a state of frenzy, could then easily be lured to the bank where he would lay flabbergasted, thoroughly mortified. The rest would be simple. But we understand that Captain Yarborough gave up this plan when he learned that the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Goldfish might intervene on behalf of the goldfish.

Another plan presented itself to the prolific brain of Captain Yarborough. He obtained a man-hole pump from somewhere and began the tedious process of draining the pool. Lt. Lanahan volunteered to help him and the two set to work. The scheme bore fruit. After some hours, the angry goldfishes (we presume they were angry at this invasion of their personal liberty) were left high and dry, and were transported without more ado to other waters.

Casualties—Lieutenant Lanahan got his feet wet and came down with the flu. and one goldfish caught a bad cold which, it is feared, is developing into pneumonia. Latest reports indicate that the goldfish is in a critical condition.

Christmas Greetings

The year 1933 has been another year of successful accomplishments by the Infantry School. High standards of efficiency, discipline and training have been maintained. The results obtained in all units and departments of this command are highly gratifying and pleasing to the Commandant, who realizes that they are due to the loyal, energetic and efficient efforts of all individual members of the garrison. As the year draws to a close, he desires to express to each officer, army nurse, warrant officer, enlisted man and civilian employee, his appreciation of their loyal efforts and to extend to each of them and to their families, his sincere good wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Col. Toffey Leaves; Col. Persons Will Command 29th Inf.

Colonel John J. Toffey, former commander of the Twenty-ninth Infantry, departed from Fort Benning Wednesday after a short period of a few months as commanding officer of the demonstration regiment of Fort Benning. Colonel Toffey was honored Monday afternoon at a parade of the regiment, and a tea-dance was held at the regiment's headquarters in honor of Colonel and Mrs. Toffey after the parade.

Colonel Toffey will be stationed at Trenton, New Jersey, as an instructor in the New Jersey National Guard, pending the confirmation if his appointment as Maj. Gen., 44th Division New Jersey National Guard. Colonel Toffey received news of his selection for this post several weeks ago, but official confirmation of the appointment has not been made.

Colonel Persons, who will head the regiment, is in command of one of the Army Transports and will be relieved from ship duty to assume command of the Benning regiment.

Post Planning For Christmas Season

The Christmas season at Fort Benning has been marked by great preperations for the Yuletide celebration. The feast will be observed in a religious way at both the Catholic and the Protestant Chapels. Three Masses will be celebrated at the Catholic Chapel, the Midnght Mass, at 12:01 Sunday morning, at 8:00 and at 10:00 a. m. The Mass at midnight will be featured by a program of special music by the choir, which is directed by Mrs. L. D. Tharp. The ladies of the Altar Society, headed by Miss Nora Freeman, have gathered holly and greens for the decoration of the Chapel, and a realistic Crib of Bethlehem is being installed. At the Protestant Chapel the Primary Department of the Sunday School will render Christmas music, including "A Christmas Legend" and "Away in a Manger," on Christmas morning. The Church Service will follow, and will feature "The First Noel," by members of the Men's Bible Class," "Bethlehem's Plains," by a selected quartette, and "Once in David's Royal City," by the Children's Choir.

The Post Children's Christmas Tree, always a gala celebration, will be held

Board Will Study Requirements For Security At Post

One of the first administrative projects to be undertaken at The Infantry School after the expiration of the annual Christmas holiday period, will be a study of the guard requirements and other matters in connections with security of personnel and safety of property, which will be inaugurated by a board of officers which was appointed yesterday by Major General Campbell King, commandant.

The entire subject will be thoroughly studied and the report and recommendatons of the board will cover all points affecting the efficiency of the guard and its responsibility for the enforcement of regulations for the safe-guarding of personnel and property, economy of organization, and the ceremony of guard mounting.

Lt. Col. Frank F. Jewett, commander of the Special Units is president of the board, and will be assisted by Captain Wendell L. Bevan, 83rd Field Artillery, Captain Donald P. Spalding, 66th Infantry (Light Tanks), Captain Guy C. McKinley, 29th Infantry, and Captain Kearie L. Berry, 24th Infantry.

Who Killed Cock Robin? Mystery Is Solved By Players

The question was answered last Friday and Saturday evenings at the Main Theatre when the Infantry School Dramatic Club produced the second offering of the current season. The local Thespians made a most auspicious start with "Pomeroy's Past" in November. With "Cock Robin" they swung into their stride and showed mid-season form. The quality of entertainment thus far dispensed bespeaks a highly successful year for Benning's theatrical activity. We await their further productions with keen anticipation. Reports indicate that the Executive Committee has made a well balanced selection of plays with something to appear to each element of the club's large membership.

"Cock Robin," a mystery-comedy from the pen of Elmer Rice (not of the 29th Foot) and Philip Barry clicked from curtain to curtain. It was a success, measured by anyone's yardstick and was well up to the Dramatic Club's standard, which is high.

For this excellent production chief credit is due Antoinette Wadsworth, the Director, and her assistant, Lt. Col. Rice. Although new to local dramatic circles, Mrs. Wadsworth showed by her capable direction and painstaking attention to detail, the result of a great deal of past experience with other dramatic groups. Her play, not an easy one to handle, moved with smooth and well-timed precision.

The Director was fortunate in the cast asigned to her. While many of the characters were protrayed by persons new to Benning audiences, the concensus of opinion is that the play was admirably cast.

To Lieut. O'Flaherty we extend congratulations and our appreciation for a splendid performance. As McAuliff he had one of the "fattest" parts ever written for a man and he made the most of it. As the play is written, it succeeds or fails by his efforts and it certainly did not fail. His portrayal of the character assigned him and his performance throughout left nothing to be desired. His actions, pantomine and control of his powerful, resonant voice, showed him to be an accomplished actor. We acclaim his performance as one of the outstanding characterizations of the past three seasons. Not only did he carry this heavy lead with credit but we note from the program that he was also Stage Manager, Electrician and in charge of scenery and furniture. Surely a heavy load for one man to carry yet he did it all well.

Katherine Brady as Alice Montgomery, the "Mrs. Pampinelli" of a Little Theatre group, found instant approval with her audience. Her characterization was logical and cosistent throughout. Indeed it is not too much to say that her handling of her important character part could hardly have been improved. Her curtain speech before the second act, so admirably done, was distinctly one of the high spots of the production.

Benning's best known character actress was cast in a part admirably suited to her talents. Katherine Cleveland as Maria Scott, "the girl with the camera eyes", registered in a big way from the moment of her unusual appearance from the back of the house until the final curtain. With her usual verve and concise diction

Benning Society Prepares For Many Festivities And Parties During Holidays

INFORMAL XMAS EVE PARTY AT OFFICERS' CLUB TO DRAW LARGE CROWD

One of the most delightful affairs of the holidays will be the informal Christmas Eve party to be held at the Officers' Club. The festivities will start at eight and last until midnight. The big attraction of the evening will be the Christmas tree laden with gifts to be dispensed by a real Santa Claus to the guests. Much amusement will be caused by the nature of the gifts to the grown people who become children for the evening. The Club will be decorated in all the lovely colors of the Holidays, around the walls will be red and green holly wreaths, while from the ceiling will be festooned garlands of red and gren. Around the chandeliers will be draped Christmas holly and wreathes.

THURSDAY EVENING SUPPER DANCE AT CLUB ENJOYABLE AFFAIR OF CHRISTMAS WEEK

The Thursday evening supper dance at the Officers' Club was made particularly enjoyable by the charming decorations of the Club. Holly wreaths and red and green garlands festooned the Club. Alternating red and green lights decorated the walls, while the main feature of the evening was the Christmas tree. The orchestra balcony was banked in holly with hidden Christmas lights. Throughout the grill holly wreathes were used and a small decorated Christmas tree was enjoyed by the bachelors in the grill.

CHRISTMAS AT FORT BENNING

on the afternoon of Saturday, December 24th, at the Post Theatre, commencing at 1:30 p. m. A splendid entertainment with songs, dances, and tableaux appropriate to the season will be presented by talented Post children, under the direction of Mrs. Robert Chance. At the conclusion of the entertainment, Old Santa Claus himself will appear, with a big package of Christmas goodies for each boy and girl of the garrison.

The Fort Benning Welfare Association, under the capable direction of Mrs. E. J. Lyman, co-operating with the Fort Benning Parent-Teachers Association, of which Mrs. Thomas B. Catron is president, has taken care of the children of needy families in a way that is a novel departure from the methods of previous years. The ladies of the Parent-Teachers Association have collected unused, outworn, and slightly damaged toys from generous boys and girls of the Post, and with the assistance of the men of the Fort Fire Department, has put them in first class condition. These toys they have turned over to the Fort Benning Welfare Association, which will distribute them to the children of less favored families on Christmas Day, together with the Christmas Baskets for the needy, which the Welfare ladies have always provided most generously.

It has been the aim of all the organizations at Fort Benning to see that every member of the big army family enjoys a Merry Christmas, and with the care that has been exercised, it s confidently expected that there will not be a single boy or girl, or a single family of the garrison, that will not be able to share bountifully in the spirit of Christmas cheer that pervades the entire military community at this glad season.

But the fact remains that the captain found himself in possession of four pedigreed goldfish, descended from noble ancestry.

But, hold on—did we say in possession of them? If so, we are in grievous error, for the next problem that confronted Goldfish-lover Yarborough was how to get his piscatorial friends out of a deep pool.

To extricate them by trickery was entirely out of the question, although we hear that for a while the worthy captain was entertaining the ingenious scheme of attaching a juicy worm to the end of a string and then dangling it temptingly before the eyes of a hungry goldfish, the assumption being that the unsuspecting goldfish, driven to a state of frenzy, could then easily be lured to the bank where he would lay flabbergasted, thoroughly mortified. The rest would be simple. But we understand that Captain Yarborough gave up this plan when he learned that the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Goldfish might intervene on behalf of the goldfish.

Another plan presented itself to the prolific brain of Captain Yarborough. He obtained a man-hole pump from somewhere and began the tedious process of draining the pool. Lt. Lanahan volunteered to help him and the two set to work. The scheme bore fruit. After some hours, the angry goldfishes (we presume they were angry at this invasion of their personal liberty) were left high and dry, and were transported without more ado to other waters.

Casualties—Lieutenant Lanahan got his feet wet and came down with the flu. and one goldfish caught a bad cold which, it is feared, is developing into pneumonia. Latest reports indicate that the goldfish is in a critical condition.

Warrant Officer Horton has the following experience to relate. Last week, he entered the Post Exchange to make a purchase, leaving in his car several bundles containing Christmas presents and a copy of the Benning Herald. On returning to his car, he discovered that the copy of the Herald

Christmas Greetings

The year 1933 has been another year of successful accomplishments by the Infantry School. High standards of efficiency, discipline and training have been maintained. The results obtained in all units and departments of this command are highly gratifying and pleasing to the Commandant, who realizes that they are due to the loyal, energetic and efficient efforts of all individual members of the garrison. As the year draws to a close, he desires to express to each officer, army nurse, warrant officer, enlisted man and civilian employee, his appreciation of their loyal efforts and to extend to each of them and to their families, his sincere good wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

CAMPBELL KING
Major General, U. S. Army
Commandant

Col. Toffey Leaves; Col. Persons Will Command 29th Inf.

Colonel John J. Toffey, former commander of the Twenty-ninth Infantry, departed from Fort Benning Wednesday after a short period of a few months as commanding officer of the demonstration regiment of Fort Benning. Colonel Toffey was honored Monday afternoon at a parade of the regiment, and a tea-dance was held at the regiment's headquarters in honor of Colonel and Mrs. Toffey after the parade.

Colonel Toffey will be stationed at Trenton, New Jersey, as an instructor in the New Jersey National Guard, pending the confirmation if his appointment as Maj. Gen., 44th Division New Jersey National Guard. Colonel Toffey received news of his selection for this post several weeks ago, but official confirmation of the appointment has not been made.

Colonel Persons, who will head the regiment, is in command of one of the Army Transports and will be relieved from ship duty to assume command of the Benning regiment.

Post Planning For Christmas Season

The Christmas season at Fort Benning has been marked by great preperations for the Yuletide celebration. The feast will be observed in a religious way at both the Catholic and the Protestant Chapels. Three Masses will be celebrated at the Catholic Chapel, the Midnght Mass, at 12:01 Sunday morning, at 8:00 and at 10:00 a. m. The Mass at midnight will be featured by a program of special music by the choir, which is directed by Mrs. L. D. Tharp. The ladies of the Altar Society, headed by Miss Nora Freeman, have gathered holly and greens for the decoration of the Chapel, and a realistic Crib of Bethlehem is being installed. At the Protestant Chapel the Primary Department of the Sunday School will render Christmas music, including "A Christmas Legend" and "Away in a Manger," on Christmas morning. The Church Service will follow, and will feature "The First Noel," by members of the Men's Bible Class," "Bethlehem's Plains," by a selected quartette, and "Once in David's Royal City," by the Children's Choir.

The Post Children's Christmas Tree, always a gala celebration, will be held

Board Will Study Requirements For Security At Post

One of the first administrative projects to be undertaken at The Infantry School after the expiration of the annual Christmas holiday period, will be a study of the guard requirements and other matters in connections with security of personnel and safety of property, which will be inaugurated by a board of officers which was appointed yesterday by Major General Campbell King, commandant.

The entire subject will be thoroughly studied and the report and recommendatons of the board will cover all points affecting the efficiency of the guard and its responsibility for the enforcement of regulations for the safe-guarding of personnel and property, economy of organization, and the ceremony of guard mounting.

Lt. Col. Frank F. Jewett, commander of the Special Units is president of the board, and will be assisted by Captain Wendell L. Bevan, 83rd Field Artillery, Captain Donald P. Spalding, 66th Infantry (Light Tanks), Captain Guy C. McKinley, 29th Infantry, and Captain Kearie L. Berry, 24th Infantry.

Who Killed Cock Robin? Mystery Is Solved By Players

The question was answered last Friday and Saturday evenings at the Main Theatre when the Infantry School Dramatic Club produced the second offering of the current season. The local Thespians made a most auspicious start with "Pomeroy's Past" in November. With "Cock Robin" they swung into their stride and showed mid-season form. The quality of entertainment thus far dispensed bespeaks a highly successful year for Benning's theatrical activity. We await their further productions with keen anticipation. Reports indicate that the Executive Committee has made a well balanced selection of plays with something to appear to each element of the club's large membership.

"Cock Robin," a mystery-comedy from the pen of Elmer Rice (not of the 29th Foot) and Philip Barry clicked from curtain to curtain. It was a success, measured by anyone's yardstick and was well up to the Dramatic Club's standard, which is high.

For this excellent production chief credit is due Antoinette Wadsworth, the Director, and her assistant, Lt. Col. Rice. Although new to local dramatic circles, Mrs. Wadsworth showed by her capable direction and painstaking attention to detail, the result of a great deal of past experience with other dramatic groups. Her play, not an easy one to handle, moved with smooth and well-timed precision.

The Director was fortunate in the cast asigned to her. While many of the characters were protrayed by persons new to Benning audiences, the concensus of opinion is that the play was admirably cast.

To Lieut. O'Flaherty we extend congratulations and our appreciation for a splendid performance. As McAuliff he had one of the "fattest" parts ever written for a man and he made the most of it. As the play is written, it succeeds or fails by his efforts and it certainly did not fail. His portrayal of the character assigned him and his performance throughout left nothing to be desired. His actions, pantomine and control of his powerful, resonant voice, showed him to be an accomplished actor. We acclaim his performance as one of the outstanding characterizations of the past three seasons. Not only did he carry this heavy lead with credit but we note from the program that he was also Stage Manager, Electrician and in charge of scenery and furniture. Surely a heavy load for one man to carry yet he did it all well.

Katherine Brady as Alice Montgomery, the "Mrs. Pampinelli" of a Little Theatre group, found instant approval with her audience. Her characterization was logical and cosistent throughout. Indeed it is not too much to say that her handling of her important character part could hardly have been improved. Her curtain speech before the second act, so admirably done, was distinctly one of the high spots of the production.

Benning's best known character actress was cast in a part admirably suited to her talents. Katherine Cleveland as Maria Scott, "the girl with the camera eyes", registered in a big way from the moment of her unusual appearance from the back of the house until the final curtain. With her usual verve and concise diction

Benning Society Prepares For Many Festivities And Parties During Holidays

INFORMAL XMAS EVE PARTY AT OFFICERS' CLUB TO DRAW LARGE CROWD

One of the most delightful affairs of the holidays will be the informal Christmas Eve party to be held at the Officers' Club. The festivities will start at eight and last until midnight. The big attraction of the evening will be the Christmas tree laden with gifts to be dispensed by a real Santa Claus to the guests. Much amusement will be caused by the nature of the gifts to the grown people who become children for the evening. The Club will be decorated in all the lovely colors of the Holidays, around the walls will be red and green holly wreaths, while from the ceiling will be festooned garlands of red and gren. Around the chandeliers will be draped Christmas holly and wreathes.

THURSDAY EVENING SUPPER DANCE AT CLUB ENJOYABLE AFFAIR OF CHRISTMAS WEEK

The Thursday evening supper dance at the Officers' Club was made particularly enjoyable by the charming decorations of the Club. Holly wreaths and red and green garlands festooned the Club. Alternating red and green lights decorated the walls, while the main feature of the evening was the Christmas tree. The orchestra balcony was banked in holly with hidden Christmas lights. Throughout the grill holly wreathes were used and a small decorated Christmas tree was enjoyed by the bachelors in the grill.

CHRISTMAS AT FORT BENNING

on the afternoon of Saturday, December 24th, at the Post Theatre, commencing at 1:30 p. m. A splendid entertainment with songs, dances, and tableaux appropriate to the season will be presented by talented Post children, under the direction of Mrs. Robert Chance. At the conclusion of the entertainment, Old Santa Claus himself will appear, with a big package of Christmas goodies for each boy and girl of the garrison.

The Fort Benning Welfare Association, under the capable direction of Mrs. E. J. Lyman, co-operating with the Fort Benning Parent-Teachers Association, of which Mrs. Thomas B. Catron is president, has taken care of the children of needy families in a way that is a novel departure from the methods of previous years. The ladies of the Parent-Teachers Association have collected unused, outworn, and slightly damaged toys from generous boys and girls of the Post, and with the assistance of the men of the Fort Fire Department, has put them in first class condition. These toys they have turned over to the Fort Benning Welfare Association, which will distribute them to the children of less favored families on Christmas Day, together with the Christmas Baskets for the needy, which the Welfare ladies have always provided most generously.

It has been the aim of all the organizations at Fort Benning to see that every member of the big army family enjoys a Merry Christmas, and with the care that has been exercised, it s confidently expected that there will not be a single boy or girl, or a single family of the garrison, that will not be able to share bountifully in the spirit of Christmas cheer that pervades the entire military community at this glad season.

Offhand... Observations

By McGoofus

Goofy Statistics: Having extracted nothing from a mail box (which is costing good rental money) other than Christmas cards and advertisements for a solid week, McGoofus set about consoling himself by compiling some more Goofy Statistics. After several hours of manipulation, he obtained a series of tabulations indicating the sad and fantastic plight of a hypothetical student officer who had, from the beginning of the school year, 'taken advantage' of all the wonderful offers, opportunities and bargains which concerns had made to him through the medium of circular letters.

This student, by the end of November, found himself in possession of a fleet of automobiles varying from the most expensive and latest model eights to used cars purchased at twenty-five dollars each. He had become a stockholder in cooperations which were (according to their prospectuses) engaging in money making activities varying from money lending to cultivating oysters. He had acquired a library consisting of books ranging from the encyclopedia Britannica to five cent editions of the classics. He had subscribed to so many magazines that was missing, the bundles untouched. A diligent search failed to reveal the newspaper. Warrant Officer Horton was very indignant at what he termed "petty thievery", could not help wondering why the purloiner did not take the Christmas presents as well.

We cannot condone, of course, thievery of any sort, but we do feel that the thief, in this case, showed a remarkable sense of discriminatiaon. The desire to read the Benning Herald must be urgent indeed when one resorts to "snitching" a copy in order to glance through its hallowed columns. The editors of the Herald feel flattered.

Things seen repeadedly in comic strips but never really believed . . . .

Major Connor appeared in public the other day wearing a piece of string about his finger. Despite the obvious reluctance of the distinguished medical officer to explain the presence of the incriminating bit of hemp, we have learned from an authentic source that Mrs. Connor had taken this drastic step to supplement the memory of her husband.

Conclusion—if more housewives followed this same procedure, they might get better results.

Friday, Dec. 20.

What a glorious time we had today! A regular gay Christmas party, wih a lighted tree and a Santa Claus, whose voice reminded me peculiarly of Virginia Tucker's. Virginia is home for the holidays and was a guest at our party.

First we had a skillful, breathtaking game where bean bags were thrown for holes marked five and ten. The Dawn Patrol won with fifty points, and received movie tickets and prizes.

The other games were "Fruit Basket," musical chairs and "Grab the Bark!"—all very exciting. After these Santa distributed the gifts, and we had pop corn and ice cream cones, greatly enjoyed by everyone, including the old gentleman!

LIEUTENANT PEEP'S DIARY

Tuesday, Dec. 13

The state of discipline of the class aptly epigrammed by Eddie Post who did admonish his platoon thus, (following the company commendar's "Route Step, March") "Louder, you birds, route step has been given." But his voice was lost in the roar of conversation. I do agree with Eddie that there is not a sharp enough change of tone to mark the transition from "Attention" to "Route Step."

Wednesday, Dec. 14

The rain this morning, to my complete chagrin, having prevented machine gun firing, I was somewhat assuaged in my grief upon being treated to a performance with the cipher device by Captain Brislawn. My store of knowledge enriched by the single fact that key words for use with the cipher device should have no military significance such, Giddings says, as Baughman or Quartermaster Corps.

My woe at being denied instruction with the machine gun does become acute when I consider the state of my tap, for Lord, even with daily practice it does vary from one to six mils in direct proportion to the number of slices of toast for breakfast.

Thursday, Dec. 15

An hour in the code room left me with the awful thought that my need is not for additional code practice but for elementary education, being unable to write eight words a minute.

The rest of the morning devoted to "Abbreviated Wire Nets" on Gordon Field and but for the intervention of the lunch hour I might now be comfortably ensconced in a padded cell. It was, to me, a trifle upsetting to ring one of the front line battalions and immediately have an ear drum taken away by nine switchboard operators asking "What member is calling?" and another nine requesting, in aggrived tones, as to why the this and that I didn't stay off the line. It was, I am most sure, possible to talk to everybody on the field by ringing once on any line. To that fact no doubt is due the outgrowth of the less confusing method of communication by shouting from one station to the next while the wires are idle.

Friday, Dec. 16

McComas again in the public eye, he having this day stationed a box of La Cabbajas with the company clerk in celebration of a junior edition of McComas weighing in at "eight pounds, bedside." This event does place the eighth squad beyond reach of any other in number of recruits added to the class, this, too, despite the fact that two of the squad, being bachelors, are ineligible for the official statistical column.

A marked problem in "Training" for this afternoon did leave me quite exhausted, for Lord, it is worse than a treasure hunt to chase four missing hours through twenty-three subjects and forty two weeks but to find two Saturday inspections in one week. It might be slower but at least as certain a method to let the company clerk find the error when he makes the drill schedule for that week.

Saturday, Dec. 17

The fire in Ohme's quarters this morning did set me a wondering as to whether his answer in the future will be as it has been in the past to the question "Shall we smoke?" "No thanks, I'm not that hot."

Jordan still at thinking up ways to defend the north bank of the Chattahoochee as his combat problem had required. From the lay of local geography it appears to me that his retorts are but replies and not answers.

Sunday, Dec. 18

To the writing of Christmas cards and quite amused at myself for the good joke I have played on the post office force. I did write fifteen souvenir postal cards and put the identical same message on each.

Monday, Dec. 19

To school feeling lower than the price of wheat and in no wise improved in morale at sight of Major Kraft's solution of Friday's marked problem in Training. I can, however, feel one satisfaction. My solution altho undoubtedly also a "U" will get no such wide spread publicity as his. His failed to correspond with practically all the good solutions in the class.

The high light of the communications exercise today was the buzzer-phone discussion between Moore at brigade C. P.—code name Table—and an operator at one of the regiments—code names Tom and Tub. The messages were about as follows, Moore wishing to know on which regimental line he was tied in;

Moore: Buzzy Is this Tom?

Other Operator: No this is Peck.

Moore: OK Tub.

And so the first blow was struck.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

Bootleg Milk

A recent editorial in the Journal of the American Medical Association on this subject is so pertinent to local conditions at Fort Benning that I shall abstract it and pass it on for your benefit.

The present business depression has made individuals and families try to reduce the cost of living. Some reductions, luxuries for instance, may do more good than harm. Others, such as a limitation of diet or the buying of inferior food products, especially milk, may do serious harm.

One does not have to emphasize the importance of milk in the diet of children. We do however emphasize the importance of the kind of milk you buy. You, the consumer, have a most vital stake. A safe milk is the need of your children. Improvement in the quality of milk costs money. The cheapest milk is produced at the smallest cost, usually on small farms without equipment or the proper care. These small dairy farms make a sanitary problem in the milk industry and a public health problem for the community.

These dairymen do not understand the dangers of impure milk. They have not the needed capital to introduce the necessary preventive methods if they should understand them.

Good, clean milk must come from healthy cattle. Many farmers resist progressive measures. The introduction of pasteurization produced a battle that still rages and nowhere more than in this vicinity. There is no disputing the fact today that pasteurized milk has as great a food value as the raw product.

Economic influences and emotional reactions confuse the issue of pure milk.

With the depression this issue is more apparent than it was in the prosperous years. The result is illegal or bootleg milk in some communities. Price is the sole consideration on which this milk is offered or purchased. The product is not supervised as to production or handling. If it were, it could not profitably be sold at the price advertised.

Many outbreaks of communicable diseases have been traced to raw milk; only rarely is this true of the pasteurized product. Most bootleg milk is raw.

Persons with reduced incomes offered what appears to be good milk at a reduced price, are easily persuaded that they make a legitimate saving. Others, able to pay a fair price for a product of good quality, buy at panic prices to satisfy an impulse toward saving. Any person who deliberately goes beyond the boundaries to buy food products which are not produced, handled, delivered and sold under enforced sanitary regulations is needlessly exposing himself, his family and especially his children to infectious diseases.

This practise is not only unhealthful but is in the long run costly.

It is also, quite obviously, a serious handicap to the honest milk dealer who is trying to hold his business up to high standards during these difficult his study looked like a news stand. He was so thoroughly insured, that for the good of his dependents, he he could no longer afford to live. Providing that he could find some way to devote all his pay to retiring the obligations which he had made, he might hope to be out of debt a few years after retirement.

It is remarkable what modern sales methods plus credit can accomplish. The fact that a man is in debt and being hard put to it to meet current bills comprises no impasse for investment salesmen. They will lend him the money to invest in their concerns.

SEASON'S GREETINGS

This year, as last, we are sending our Christmas greetings through our column. Maybe it's a bit Scotch (we don't even pay advertising rates, let alone increased postage) and it lacks the personal touch, but it has its advantages. For one thing it saves a lot of wear and tear on our social secretary and, for another, it comes under the eyes of a number of estimable people with whom we are not on a Christmas card exchange basis.

We are quite sincere in wishing all faithful readers of The Flare a Merry Christmas. In spite of a general impression to the contrary, we don't enjoy writing this column. Our compensation for what to us is a real chore is derived from occasional indications that people do read it. Without that assurance, the grinding out of our weekly effort would become an unmitigated bore that twice our munificent space rate could not tempt us to endure.

We are genuinely grateful to all who read the short and simple annals of our fellow citizens as they appear in our local adaption of a home town paper. It flatters us that they are mildly interested in what we write. We, of course, realize that what we write is quite inconsequential. It has to be. In steering the good ship Flare between the Scylla of hypersensitive feelings and Charybdis of official displeasure, we pour a lot of oil on the agitated waters. This deprives our passengers of a lot of the kick that would otherwise go with the voyage but we are convinced that this policy is to the interest of everybody in general and your pilot in particular. Should we cut loose some day with a composite imitation of H. L. Mencken and Walter Winchell, the result would be the most widely read and commented upon issue of the Benning Herald to date—followed by sudden change of station for an amateur columnist. We like Benning too well to risk that.

Those who like criticism of the military establishment in the raw should consult the congressional record. Those who have a taste for really torrid gossip will have to satisfy it, as heretofore, at bridge parties and the Post Exchange. We cater only to a public that is satisfied wih strictly legal, one half of one percent comment on people and things. We shall carry on with that and try to make you like it. Meawhile, to those who do—and even to those who don't—we wish a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

FUZZARD ON ENTERTAINMENT

Now that the political campaign is over General Fuzzard is devoting his spare time to philosophy.

"I saw in Society Headlights where you were the dinner guest of Major and Mrs. Greetums last week," we remarked by way of getting the General started. "Mrs. Greetum is famous for her original parties."

"Well I don't know about that," growled the General. "After dinner we played 'twenty questions' and 'coffee pot' 'till I like to died of ennuyee. I can stand a round or two of twenty questions, but the next time a simmerin' jane asks me if I like to coffee pot I'm going to give her an earful."

"You prefer contract, I take it," we suggested.

"Not by a dam sight" replied the General. "I never had the time to take that up seriously and besides, if I'm gonna gamble, I'd rather play poker with a bunch of men. They're better losers and the conversation has got some variety. Contract ain't sociable and I lose a couple of friends every time I play it."

"How about mahjongg?" we ventured.

The General looked as if he might be about to have a stroke of appoplexy.

"And musical chairs, we added hastily.

"A little musical chairs ain't so bad for a sports clothes party" said the General controlling himself with an effort, "but it's a dangerous game as my friend Bill Lee who got impaled on a splinter will testify. The same is true of 'bump.' It might be fun to have the girls sit on your lap but you don't get no choice as to who it's goin' to be and some of 'em are pretty hefty."

"I suppose you've played 'murder'" we murmured.

"Plenty of times" replied the General "and I've seen women throttled by Jack Thompson that thought they had really been murdered. At a murder party I went to last year somebody nearly broke Mrs. Phillips' leg with a chair. It's got possibilities but it's a little rough. Personally I prefer they're playin' that any out at the post. I suppose they're afraid they'd be talked about—and they would be. Somebody always suspicions that somebody else ain't taking the game seriously. When I used to play sardines I followed the rules like they told me until I found out that there was a lot more to it than I had been told about. About that time somebody's husband or wife got mad and the crowd I was goin' with stopped playing it. I've always felt that I might get more enjoyment out of it now that I've got the idea."

"They're reviving some of the old-time children games, I see" we remarked, just to keep him going.

"Some of the worst" snorted the General. "Take 'Consequences' for instance. You write down some adjective and a couple of names of present company and a lot of other hooey and then you gotta listen to a lot of obvious off color stuff and nearly die a laughin' when you come to the end and learn that the consequences was twins."

"What do you think of the brain teasers?" we asked.

"I get a kick outa some of them" replied the general. "My brain ain't anything special but I don't mind tryin' it out occasionally. The games oughta be new though and you don't wanta overdo 'em."

"I understand that Major Arnold goes in for athlete parlor games" we commented.

"He did 'till he broke a lady's jaw when he was at Leavenworth" chuckled the General. "That pretty nearly cured him. He had a lot of stuff that was fine for training a football team but it didn't go over so big at tea parties. Those big he men didn't know their strenth."

"What about dancing and the movies?" we asked.

"I've spent some pleasant evenings both ways" replied the great philosopher "and some punk ones. It all depends on the dance and the movie. Your dance oughtn't to be too big and there oughta be plenty of stags. Of course it's gotta be informal and you

"WHO KILLED COCK ROBIN?"

she carried her audience with her from situation to situation and made the part of the "dowdy, meddlesome" assistant to McAuliff one to be remembered.

The juvenile feminine lead, played by Eleanor Harding, was handled in a most excellent manner. Judged by the standard of experienced adults, her performance was entirely satisfactory. Considering her youth and comparative inexperience, her capable handling of business and lines was nothing short of remarkable. Added to beauty of face and figure was her attractive and well modulated voice. We particularly liked her portrayal of the various emotions called for by the action of the play. She is a new face on the dramatic club stage and the club is to be congratulated on the discovery of such an attractive and competent ingenue.

Playing opposite Eleanor Harding in the male juvenile lead was Lieut. Ginder. His selection for this part was another example of the excellent casting of the play. His looks, costume and make-up assisted him materially in portraying his part with just the right amount of youthful exuberance.

Captain H. J. Golightly, as Julian Cleveland, the lawyer who takes charge of the amateur murder investigation, gave the forceful interpretation of his important part which the script called for. He had much to do and say and he did and said it exceedingly well.

Major Catron, a new-comer to the local stage, handled the role of Dr. Edgar Grace in a manner indicative of the ability to play important and varied parts. He has a fine voice and a talent for effective pantomine. His transition from the roistering blade of "the play within the play" to the kindly, agitated old gentleman that he was supposed to be in real life was particularly well done.

Colonel E. F. Rice was properly assigned to a part which carried much of the comedy. As Torrence, he contributed materially to the success of the production, and proved to our present Benning audience that his reputation as one of the leading Dramatic Club actors of yesteryear is well founded.

Let us not forget the detested villain. The "heavy" part of this production was handled by Lt. Hundley in such manner as to cause him to be cordially disliked by the audience before he had been on the stage more than a few moments. What greater praise can be given? We should like to see him cast again as the heavy villain in a play where his realistic death does not occur until the final curtain.

It is regretted that allotted space will not permit of going into the details of performance of the supporting members of this large cast. This reviewer has long felt that an amateur production succeeds or fails by the so-called minor supporting parts. The recent production was fortunate in having its minor roles well taken and its success was heightened by the performances of Marjorie Albright as Helen Maxwell, Lt. Brady as Henry Briggs, and Lt. Brunke as John Jessup. All were well cast and carried out their assignments with conviction and consistency. We sincerely hope that their use in these relatively small parts will not prevent their being cast in larger parts later in the season where their evident talents could have more opportunity to be displayed.

A word for the unseen and unsung heroes of the back stage. Our dramatic organization has been so fortunate in its stage carpenters, scene painters, make-up artists and other technical staff that the result of their efforts is apt to be taken for granted. In "Cock Robin", not only would the set do credit to a professional stage but the lighting and off-stage effects were excellent and timely and added materially to the general excellence of the production.

In addition to the usual stage effects, Cock Robin required costumes. This important feature of the production was in charge of Miss Barbara King and high praise is due her for the picturesque 18th century effect which the costuming provided. Of course, Miss King did not make the elaborate colonial outfits in which the actors and actresses appeared but she furnished the costumers with color sketches which needed only to be followed in order to insure accurate and colorful period dress.

This reviewer is taking off for points South on legislative furlough, before this alleged review can appear in print. In our absence we hope that, for our sins of omission, E. F. H. will blame the compositors and type-setters of the Benning Herald, as is his wont.

Again we congratulate The Infantry School Dramatic Club on an excellent production and for their valued contribution to the winter program of Fort Benning.

want a good crowd. As for the movies, they ain't very sociable, but if they're good I'm for 'em."

"You don't give a hostess much of a break" we remarked. "After reading this interview they'll be in despair. Suppose you tell us what you consider a really good party".

The grand old man sighed.

"We don't get many like I like best any more" he said. "Where somebody sits down at a piano and plays and maybe two or three stand around it singin' and there's a group somewhere else talking or maybe listening in to the music and there's another group out in the kitchen and nobody pays much attention to anybody else. Maybe you have a few special things in the music line and maybe you have a few stunts but mostly everybody does what they please and nobody has any responsibility and everything's free and easy like."

"That kind of a party isn't so easy to throw these days" we remarked.

"They never was easy to throw" replied General Fuzzard. "Generally parties like that just happen. I'm only saying that I wish they happened oftener."

BIG WEEK-END

"Tis pleasant sure to see one's name in print."—Byron.

On page 3 of the program for "Cock Robin" at the top of the cast of characters we have "George McAuliff—Lieutenant Aloysius E. O'Flaherty, Jr."

On page 5 at heading the staff for the play we see "Scenery and Furniture—Lieutenant A. E. O'Flaherty", and "Stage Manager—Lieutenant A. E. O'Flaherty".

On page 6, under technical staff, we find "Assistant Stage Manager—1st Lieutenant A. E. O'Flaherty", and "Electrician—1st Lieutenant A. E. O'Flaherty".

There can be no disputing that the talented Lieutenant was the head man in that show. What is more, he functioned admirably in the several capacities listed and won new laurels as an actor and pillar of The Infantry School Dramatic Club.

On the day following the performance, Mrs. O'Flaherty presented her

Tommie Thompson Plays Hero Role In Great Victory

Long Jaunt In Third Period Turns Tide In Favor of 2nd. Battalion 6-0.

Tommy Thompson, scintillating Kelly halfback, played the hero role in a smashing 6-0 victory over the Irish of the First Battalion last Saturday afternoon. Circling around his own right end behind beautiful interference, he shook off would-be tacklers, side stepped Horton, and raced 65 yards for a touchdown. The triumph gave the Second Battalion its second consecutive championship.

A roar of applause greeted the two elevens as they took the field. Cooter Carter gathered in the Irish kick-off and advanced the pigskin to the forty yard line before being hit by Pressley. Carter was injured on the play and forced to leave the game. Prophet ran the ball to the 47 yard line, but there the Irish held and Prophet kicked. Jordan, brilliant Irish leader, took the punt and ran it back to the 37 yard line. Smith was stopped at the line of scrimmage, but a twenty-five yard penalty on the play put the First Battalion team back in the shadow of their own goalposts. Jordan punted to the forty yard line, Prophet making two yards before being dropped.

Darden was stopped for no gain. McAllister heaved a short pass which was good to the 30 yard line. A line buck made it a first down. The Irish were penalized five yards for off-side. Derrick, on a line play, was smothered. On last down, a pass was knocked down by Jordan and the ball changed hands. Prophet took Jordan's punt on his own 45 yard line and after some pretty broken field running almost managed to shake himself loose. He was finally brought down from behind on the 15 yard stripe. Derrick started around right end but was thrown for a loss. On the next play, the Kellys got their signals mixed and the pass from center found no receiver and rolled to the 30 yard line where it was recovered by a Kelly back. Darden dropped back to throw a pass but was thrown for an eight yard loss. A poor kick went out of bounds on the twenty-five yard line. Jordan was again forced to kick after several line plays were stopped at the line of scrimmage. Prophet was downed by Stansell on his own 35 yard line. Prophet started wide around right end on the next play, but was hit hard and fumbled, the ball being recovered by Jordan on the 30 yard line. For the first time in the game, the Fighting Irish found themselves in Kelly territory.

Jordan was sliced off tackle for eight yards. Horton smashed through for a first down, taking the ball to the 20 yard line. Jordan added three

PRESS HONORS MISS DIDRIKSON

The country's sport experts experienced no difficulty whatever in singling out the feminine performer most entitled to recognition as America's outstanding girl athlete of 1932.

Mildred "Babe" Didrikson, Texas "wonder girl," double Olympic Champion, and, in the opinion of many observers, the greatest all-round athlete her sex has ever produced, won the distinguished honor.

Out of a total of 199 votes cast in the second annual Associated Press poll, Miss Didrikson received 77, nearly 40 per cent.

Her nearest rival, Helene Madison, Seattle's record breaking champion of all women free-style swimmers, polled 45 votes to finish a good second. Another far-westerner, Helen Wills Moody, queen of the tennis courts for years, occupied third place with 21 votes.

In a close contest for fourth place, the new national golf champion, Virginia Van Wie, of Chicago, emerged with a three-vote margin over Eleanor Holm, slim and pretty champion of the backstroke swimmers. Their totals were 16 and 13.

Miss Didrikson's performances were ranked by many sports observers as superior, relatively speaking, to the accomplishments of any masculine stars of the year. Her vote, too, was larger than that accorded to Gene Sarazen, picked as the outstanding performer among the men.

The Texas girl, all by herself, won or tied for first place in a half dozen events in the national women's track and field championships, collecting enough points to win the team title. She captured the Olympic javelin throw and 80-meter hurdles with world-record performances and finished second to Jean Shiley in the high jump.

Andy Kerr, coach of the Colgate eleven, was amazed to see Miss Didrikson throw a 40 yard pass, was completely dumbfounded when the 127 pound marvel of her sex stopped a 182 pound fullback dead in his tracks.

Grantland Rice was so impressed with her golf ability that he urged her to enter national championship tournament. She drives a golf ball further than many men stars, well over 200 yards.

She is a wonderful basketball player and wrestles and boxes as well as most men.

The Fort Benning bowling team upset the dope bucket with a sensational victory over Atlanta Eagles at Atlanta, Staurday, Dec. 17th, by a margin of 87 pins in a five game match. The final score of the game: Benning 4403, Eagles 4316.

In the Capital City Handicap Tournament held at Atlanta, December 16-17, Sergeant E. J. Trott of the Fort Benning team, took third place in a field of 90 of the leading bowlers of the south. Others of the Benning team bowled as follows: Sergeant E. C. Davis 982; Private John Zeman 947; Private W. T. Hall 884; Master Sergeant O. R. Glynn 867; and Sergeant J. W. Labonte 786. Sergeant Trott bowled 994, to take third place.

HAPPY HEARTS HONOR COACH

Officers of the 24th. Infantry, several guests, and members of the Happy Heart football team celebrated the closng of the 1932 season with a turkey dinner at the Company "G" mess hall last Wednesday evening.

A silver trophy was presented to Lieutenant Howard Johnson, football coach, by the members of the team. The lieutenant in his acceptance speech stated that he would always regard the trophy as his most precious possession.

E. E. Farley, secretary of the Negro Y. M. C. A. of Columbus was the donor of a silver football presented to Colonel F. L. Munson, regimental commander, as representative of the Happy Hearts. Mr. Farley said that, in his opinion, much of the success of the team was due to the fine coaching of Lieutenant Johnson, whose inspiring leadership fired his eleven to great heights in the course of the season. He congratulated the whole team on their successful season, the most successful in the history of the 24th. Infantry.

The captain of the Happy Hearts was the first speaker on the program. He, too, praised Lieutenant Johnson as well as the members of the team.

Lt. Rudolph, acting in the capacity of toastmaster, then called upon Lieutenant Johnson to say a few words. The coach asserted that he never had a group of more willing workers under him than his 1932 eleven. He praised the spirit of the men which he held was directly responsible for

SARAZEN WINS COVETED TITLE

Gene Sarazen, holder of the British and American open golf championships, was honored with the title of the outstanding American athlete of 1932. Returns from the Associated Press poll give him 53 votes.

The country's experts cast a total of 297 votes in the second annual contest to decide the year's greatest performer. The honor last year went to "Pepper" Martin, world series hero of the St. Louis Cardinals.

The voting disclosed the popularity of Olympics track stars. Three of them gained places in the first ten, Eddie Tolan, sprint star, "Jarring Jim" Bausch, who won the decathalon, and Bill Carr, 440 yard star. All three made record-breaking performances in winning their events in the Olympics.

Ellsworth Vines of California received 36 votes to place second in the poll. Vines was the number one ranking tennis player in the U. S. in 1932 and defeated many tennis celebrities, among them Cochet, whom he defeated in straight sets at Forest Hills in the finals of the American championship.

Jimmie Foxx, first baseman on the second place Philadelphia Athletics,

Tankers Win First Victory Of Season Over Gunners 26-0

Golden Tornado Hits Stride As Gunners Go Down To Crushing Defeat

In the final game of the 1932 foot ball season at Fort Benning, the "Terrible Tankers" handed the Gunners ofthe 83rd Artillery a 26-0 lacing last Sunday afternoon. The Golden Tornado displayed its best form of the season in this contest and completely humiliated a courageous but outclassed Artillery eleven. The score indicates the superiority of the Tankers.

Only sixteen players were out in uniform for the Gunners, who were suffering heavily from injuries. A deceptive mixture of aerial attacks and smashing line plays disconcerted the Gunners and shattered their defense.

The Gunners fought their opponents to a standstill in the first quarter and the gun found the two elevens in midfield with no score for either side. In the second quarter, the Gunners weakened under the formidable Tanker assault. Matthews, star Tanker back, more yards. Horton lost yardage on a reverse play, but Jordan made a running pass to Horton which was good for four yards. Both sides were offside as the quarter ended. Score: Irish 0, Kellys 0.

Jordan's pass rolled over the goal-line, and the Kellys took the ball on their own twenty yard line. A quick kick went to the 35 yard line, Jordan returning the pellet three yards. Horton made five yards through the line, but a fifteen yard penalty forced Jordan to punt. Prophet returned the kick to mid-field and on the first play skirted right end for a first down. Derrick ploughed through for a yard. McAllister's 25 yard pass was intercepted by Jordan who was downed in his tracks. Jordan punted to mid-eld and Prophet promptly ran it back to the 30 yard line. On a spinner play, Prophet was stopped for no gain. Derrick's pass to McAllister was knocked down. Another pass was also unsuccessful and the green-jerseyed gladiators took the ball on the 40 yard line. An Irish pass was intercepted by Derrick. A fifteen yard penalty put the ball on the 30 yard line. Derrick made 5 yards, but the Second Battalion sustained a fifteen yard penalty on the next play. Nothing daunted, Derrick started around left end, cut back through tackle, and advanced the ball to the 32 yard line. A long pass was knocked down. Derrick punted out of bounds on the 10 yard line. Jordan's kick was out of bounds on the 30 yard line. Thomas skirted wide around end for five yards, then made it a first down around the other end. Prophet made three yards, but Thompson was thrown for a loss. A pass from Prophet to Derrick was good to the 5 yard line, but there was a fifteen yard penalty on the play. For the remainder of the quarter, the honors were even. Score at end of first half: Irish 0, Kellys 0.

The Irish held and the ball changed ran the ball back to the 30 yard line. A poor kick went out of bounds on the 33 yard line. Two line smashes yielded no gain and a fifteen yard penalty inflicted on the Irish took the ball back to the 47 yard stripe. A pass to Reddock was good to the 38 yard line. Jordan kicked out of bounds on the 25 yard line. Prophet raced around right end for six yards, but lost yardage on another end run. Prophet punted to Jordan who brought the pigskin back to his own 47 yard line. The successive line smashed a first down. Jordan's running pass to Reddock was successful and Reddock advanced the ball to the 30 yard line for another first down. Moses lost seven yards circling left end. Darden intercepted a pass and galloped 65 yards behin good interference. He was out in the clear and it looked like a certain touchdown, but Jordan's beautiful tackle from behind brought him down on the eight yard line. The Irish held, Saunders failing by a matter of inches to put the ball over on last down.

Jordan kicked out of danger to the 45 yard line, but Prophet flipped a short pass over the line of scrimmage to Saunders, who crossed the Irish goal line on a 30 yard sprint. The play was called back when Marquette was called for clipping from behind, both Reddock and Jordan were injured and forced to leave the game.

The Irish hed and the ball changed hands. The green-jerseyed warriors were unable to gain through the line, Horton punted far into enemy territory. Thompson went into the game at this point, and on the first play, received the ball from center. He skirted wide around right end with Berryhill, Wilson, and Cappell, running interference for him. Out in the open, he shook loose from two tackles, sidestepped the safety man, Horton, and crossed the goal-line standing up. Prophet's dropkick for extra point was short and the score stood, Kellys 6, Irish 0. Thompson was removed from the game. The quarter ended with the ball on the Irish 20 yard line just after the kick-off following the touchdown.

In the final quarter, the air was literally filled with Irish passes in a desperate attempt to even the count. The Irish, unable to gain through the line, punted. The Kellys made one first down and then were held by the Irish and the ball passed over to their opponents. The Irish found the line impenetrable and resorted to passes, but seldom did one find its mark.

Near the end of the game, Jordan, limping from an injury, and Reddock and Smith, also hurt, went once more into the game in a final, desperate effort to pull the contest from the fire. Jordan dropped back four times to throw long passes, but each time the pass went astray. The game ended soon afterwards with the Kellys hammering at the Irish line. Final score: Kellys 6, Irish 0.

The fans were treated to a bit of comedy during the halves which enlivened a game that needed no enlivening.

For the Irish, Jordan was outstanding. The diminutive First Battalion quarterback played a great game and it was his stellar play which accounted for the stubborn resistance his team showed against the furious attack of their opponents. Prophet and Thompson shone for the victors. Both lines performed very capably and there was little to choose between them. It was a great game and the winners deserved to win.

I. PREDICTUM, the Herald football prophet, whose average for the season of .830 is still unexcelled, has again been prevailed upon, this time to pick an all-Benning eleven. The players selected for the honor are listed below, but the prophet is reserving his comment on each individual until the next issue. Lack of space does not permit the insertion of a special article at this time.

When a timid reporter of the Benning Herald first approached the distinguished sport writer on the subject, he received a gruff refusal, but in the end, I. PREDICTUM agreed to the proposal. So Benning sport enthusiasts will once more get the benefit of the prophet's rare judgment on matters pertinent to football.

TANKERS WIN OVER GUNNERS

took a long pass from Sullivan on the twelve yard line and raced the distance to the goal-line for the first marker. The ball was bucked over for the extra point. Several minutes later, Sullivan threw another pass, this time to McKelvey, who went twenty yards for a touchdown. The try for point was unsuccessful. Near the end of the half, the Tankers started a drive from their own forty yard line which culminated in a third score. Again the extra point was not made.

The Gunners held the Golden Tornado scoreless in the third period, but near the end of the final quarter, Smith took the ball on the Gunner 30 yard line, after a poor kick, and, behind excellent interference, ran the ball back over the goal line. The extra point was added when the Gunners were offside on the play.

Dan Sullivan played a beautiful game for the victors. His passing accounted for three of the Tanker touchdowns and his generalship was faultless. Brown, Tanker guard, was outstanding in the line, and blocked a punt which made possible one of the touchdowns.

Harper, brilliant Gunner quarterback, played a great game for the losers and ripped off several beautiful runs. Skipper, at full back, also played a prominent part in the Gunner attack. Harper, with a losing team, has exhibited remarkable football throughout the current season and deserves to be rated with the best of Benning backs.

Scene From Rialto Show

"HORSE FEATHERS"

Above is a scene in "Horsefeathers" featuring the Four Marx Brothers, and which comes to the Rialto Theater Sunday and Monday.

Cinema Calendar

for Grand, Rialto and Royal

AT THE ROYAL

(Opening Christmas Eve, 11:15 P. M.)

ALSO SUNDAY, MONDAY AND TUESDAY: Offering "A Farewell To Arms" with Helen Hayes, Gary Cooper and Adolphe Menjou. "Let's love tonight," they said. "There may be no tomorrow.'" The picturization of Ernest Hemingway's world famous story . . . of two who began in passion's reckless abandon . . . with a love that grew until it heeded neither shame, danger nor death. The inspiring record of two souls lost for love's sake.

AT THE RIALTO

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY: Offering "End Of The Trail" with Tim McCoy and Launa Walters. Forced out of service—branded a renegade—he gives his life to clear his name and bind the friendship of redmen and white.

SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Offering "Horsefeathers" with The Four Marx Brothers. Just one long college yell of joy as they clown with the co-eds—pester the profs—caper over the campus—and turn a championship football game into a roaring riot. The boys will make you laugh till you limp.

TUESDAY ONLY: Offering "Is My Face Red" with Helen Twelvetrees and Richard Cortez. He peeked through every keyhole, but stuffed chewing gum into his own. From Harlem on the north to Broadway on the south, he dished the evening scandal in a morning tabloid chatter column.

WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY: Offering "The Heffner-Vinson Revue" a delightful stage show with 20 clever artists and beautiful chorus girls. The presentation includes southern blues singing, tap dancing, ace comedians and hot stage band. On the screen "Strange Justice "will be offered with Marian Marsh and Reginald Denny.

AT THE GRAND

SATURDAY ONLY (Dec. 24th) offering "The Age Of Consent" with Dorothy Wilson, Arline Judge, Richard Cromwell and Eric Linden. What is virtue? A new generation shouts the answer at 80 miles an hour. The girl who thought she had to be bad to make good at "The Age of Consent."

SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Offering "No More Orchids" with Carole Lombard, Walter Connolly, Louise Hale and Lyle Talbot. His love was worth millions to the beautiful heiress of this picture, who gave up a fortune to be rich in love. So she forgot her wealth and became just a woman—madly in love.

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Offering "Virtue" with Carole Lombard, Pat O'Brien and Mayo Methot. He married her for what he thought she was—and then discovered what she had been. What happens when a man learns of his wife's past. You'll find one answer here, of a girl with a dark past who tries to become a girl with a bright future.

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY (Dec. 29-30) Offering "Wild Girl" with Charles Farrell, Joan Bennett and Ralph Bellamy. Defiant and untamed, a lone girl in the world of men, dared to love a man hunted by the law, and her first kiss changed her from a child of nature to a woman who dared defy primitive justice to save the man she loved.

GRAND

"Save Me! Save Me!" Cries of danger emanating from the "No More Orchids" set on the Columbia lot, where Carole Lombard was playing opposite Lyle Talbot in the society heiress story of a girl determined to get her man, brought everyone within earshot to the rescue.

The situation however, proved no more alarming than Miss Lombard's sudden experience in the saddle of an electric horse. The huge exercise machine, weighing half a ton, unexpectedly lurches its rider forward at an alarming pace.

The lever was set at the fastest speed when Miss Lombard touched the button.

"No runaway horse is as bad as that!" exclaimed Carole, endeavoring to regain her equilibrium.

The scene in the picture, opening Sunday at the Grand Theatre, takes place in the ship gymnasum, where Mss Lombard goes in pursuit of Tony, played by Lyle Talbot.

RIALTO

STAGE SHOW AT THE RIALTO ON WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY

The Heffner-Vinson Revue will be on the stage at the Rialto as an added attracttion Wednesday and Thursday. This musical revue, consisting of twenty artists, comes to Columbus after a very successful tour of the Southern States. In the organization of the Heffner-Vinson Revue first consideration has been given to talent, and this show boasts of more real names and exceptionally fine artists than any other seen in Columbus in may a month. The revue will be found fast and spicey, with plenty of good looking girls, snappy songs and steps, excellent comedians, and beautiful scenery. Included among the artists of the show are two blues singers that are far better than anything that has played in Columbus in some time. They are the type that hold you in your seat with the magic of their singing. In addition to these there is a dance team that is well versed in all of the latest dance steps.

distinguished husband with a fine new boy, to whom the proud parents have given the grand old Czecho-Slovakian name of Dennis.

It will be noted that O'Flaherty wisely postponed the blessed event until the show was over—thereby creating a precedent which we commend to all expectant mothers who have the misfortune to be married to dramatic club stars in rehearsal. Of course, an old trouper like Lieutenant O'Flaherty isn't going to be thrown off his stride by any such trivial circumstance as the birth of a son, but it might make a less experienced father and actor slow on his cues to have someone rush up to him just as he was going on stage with the news "It's a boy." And think of what would happen to the show should the announcement be twins! The possibilities are too awful to contemplate. Better follow the O'Flaherty precedent and wait 'till the show is over.

HE SEEMS TO AFFECT THEM THAT WAY

A short time gao, Mrs. Guy McKinley, returning from a movie—a Maurice Chevalier picture—fluttered unannounced and unexpected into Colonel Chaffin's house singing "Oh, Isn't It Romantic" with great verve and feeling.

The chanson came to an abrupt and somewhat lame end when the blythe prima donna espied Mrs. Chaffin.

"Oh," she exclaimed, "I was just dropping in for a game of bridge with Mrs. Atkins and I thought this was her house. And really, I want you to smell my breath to prove that I haven't been to an off-the-reservation party either."

Mrs. Chaffin graciously accepted the explanation without testing the evidence. It was quite obvious that her unintentional guest was intoxicated with nothing more unauthorized than Hollywood's irresistible shiek. What a man!

Zippers have been successfully grown on bananas and string beans, but the latest Xmas wish heard is that of Tiny Cochran of the mess hall staff, who wants Santa Claus to equip the Xmas turkeys with zippers to aid in dressing them.

Pfc. Bache has already resolved on his New Year resolution, he will not turn out for any more monhly inspections in long trousers.

Quite a flurry of baseball players have arrived during the past month with the new enlistments. Recruit center is now the stamping grounds of the athletic officers of the different organizations. The Greencord outfit is getting a break owing to the fact that most of these young athletes are just out of prep schools and are adapted to clerical work, which of course makes them ideal for the Infantry School Detachment. It is rather tough on our opponents, but such is life.

Corporal Eberhardt reports that his recent visit to the staff in Washington, D. C., was a very pleasant affair and highly satisfactory.

Barney "Warhoop" Knox has been noticed recently looking over numerous motorcycle catalogues. Guess the old "Speed Demon," is preparing to swap in the old bicycle for a speed chariot.

We sure have got to get busy with our basketball team. The other outfits are working overtime and Jan. 30, 1933, is not far away. We have plenty of material and so let's get going.

Dear Santa: Please bring me a package of love powders and three bottles of face beautifier. Also six bottles of Hoyt's Perfume.

Your little boy.
Gabby Gable.

Things that never happen: Sgt. John Booth absent from chow. Red McLane buying drinks for the house. Kykendall calling on one par. Lon Chaney with money. Flournoy with cigarettes. Gibbs failing to kill all the wild game that crosses his trail while hunting. Rocco Frateshi with nothing to worry about.

Fat Franz at short field and we have the next championship baseball team. You can never tell.

The Quartermaster Detachment sponsored another successful dance last Saturday night in the mess hall of the organization. The Mighty Grumpy Gordy officiated as master of ceremonies in his usual manner. One attendant at the affair requested that the 24th Infantry Orchestra play "I Wish You Were Dead—You Rascal You" and dedicate it to aforesaid master of ceremonies, who, with a modest blush, accepted the honor and continued to enliven the gathering. Some persons were said to learn that the detachment's social lion, Ira Jebub Clenney, was not among those present. It seems that another important social engagement in the city of Columbus prevented his attendance. One should not blame him for his popularity.

The detachment has a new member of the first three grades in its midst. He is Technical Sergeant Geroge Hibard, who swapped stations with Technical Sergeant James E. Roberts, recently ordered to Fort Barrancas, Florida.

Staff Sergeant Charles H. Prince has departed on furlough, ostensibly to visit Muggins Mountain and view with delectation the cooling waters of Mud Creek, of which he often yearningly speaks with much gusto and eloquence. When he returns, unless his retirement application gets switched in a mail car to Los Angeles instead of Washington, he will be placed on the retired list and repose in peace where the rooster's crowing takes the place of the reveille whistle.

the majority of the victories.

Colonel Munson, in accepting the football presented by Mr. Farley, congratulated the team on its sensational record, lauded the sportsmanship of the players, and commented favorably upon the spirit shown throughout the season.

The Happy Hearts dropped their initial engagement of the season and also a post-season contest with the Nashville Giants, a professional team of high standing. The record of the Florida Aggies, who defeated the Happy Hearts in the opening game, is not impressive enough to merit championship recognition, leaving the 24th Infantry as the logical amateur champions of the south.

The team and its coach is to be congratulated on its splendid record.

was fourth with 33 votes. In the official American League averages which were disclosed recently. Foxx grabbed off three individual leaderships. After crowding Babe Ruth's homerun pace for the year in which the Yankee slugger set the major league record of 60, Foxx slipped just a little behind and finished with 58. He led the league in scoring with 151 runs, and his total base collection of points behind Dale Alexander, Boston 438, was much the better. He was three first sacker, in the race for the batting championship of the league, amassing an average of .364.

Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig, both New York Yankees, were other athletes who ranked high in the poll. Harry Newman, all-American quarterback and Michigan star, polled the largest number of votes among football players with 12. Don Zimmerman of Tulane, also all America, got two votes.

Tony Canzoneri, lightweight king of the professional pugilists, received more votes than any other boxer.

HQ. BATTERY

Headquarters Battery has recently added to its personnel a number of new faces, all of them being gained by enlistments. New names on the roster include Private Jones, Nix, Risner and Sesson.

The battery has received several Christmas cards from former members of this organization and we all appreciate the fact that they still think of old Headquarters Battery.

Cpl. Pike is the author of "What the well dressed soldier should wear" Oxford grey suit, Clark Gable sweater, Suspenders, (Green) Grey hat, grey overcoat and grey spats. The girls in Columbus will be treated to a great surprise when Cpl. Pike attends the Christmas eve dance to be held at Boyle's Thirty Acres.

BATTERY "A"

The following men have been added to the organizaion this week; Privates Thomas O. Adams, Woodrow W. Chaney, Elvard V. Evans, William H. Glenn, William W. Lamb, Jr., Richard J. Landry, Harry P. Scruggs and James O. Taylor.

Private Ben F. Jones of the 2nd Field Artillery, Panama has been transferred back to the states and assigned to this organization.

Corporal Andrews and Privates Barney Brock and James Brock left this week for south Alabama on a 30 days furlough.

The famous Private Kelso Durham of the third section has returned from furlough. He was very anxious to get back in order that he may look out for his Private Mount. Private Durham is very fond of horses.

BATTERY "C"

With our regular Herald Correspondent being discharged and anxious to reenlist the regular "bull" from our Fort Sill graduate has to be omitted this issue, but we will try to substitute in a suitable manner.

Whenever a bulletin is published in the battery for attendance of some service school, we have our regulars to put in for same; these men are not only anxious to learn something but more anxious to get out of work. So far about half of our NCO's have put in for the Stable Sergeant's course in January 1933; the exception is our Official Barnyard Corporal Doyle. What he does not know about barns and horses is not in the corrals.

We have daily schooling of jumping with horses from the BC Detail. One of the students; "Lieuttenant, I don't know how to jump." Lieutenant in charge: "The horse does not know either, so go ahead."

During the last few days about 10 recruits have been assigned to our battery. In the old army, from every 10 recruits, at least nine came from the farm; now from every ten, maybe one is graduated from a team of mules while the others give as their profession everything from vice president down to janitor.

TOWN TOPICS

In a recent issue, we expressed the fear that there would be a sad dearth of eligible bachelor material during the Christmas holidays. Apparently our earnest admonition had effect One debutante, at any rate, took no chances. She invited almost every bachelor in her acquaintance to a party to make certain that the proportion between male and female would at least be on a fifty-fifty basis.

To her surprise, every bachelor showed up. Result was that there were ten bachelors to every two debutantes or a ratio of five to one. Oh, well. . .

The Yule log in the fireplace of the Officers' Club was completely consumed by Christmas night. It burned all night Thursday, was allowed to go out Friday morning, was relit Saturday afternoon, and burned until Sunday night. Now, those who made successful wagers as to how long it would be before the log would be entirely burned can go about collecing their bets.

One officer, whose feet are customarily enclosed in size twelve shoes, was checking over his uniform for the Commandant's reception on New Year's Day. Finding that his boots were in a rather dilapidated condition, he set out on a quest to obtain a new pair, but encountered difficulty. There were none in his size. Feeling acutely the exigency of the situation, he telegraphed his foot measurements to Chicago, was rewarded by a telegram which read something like this.

ASSURED BOOTS WILL ARRIVE SATURDAY.

It would be too bad, wouldn't it, if the boots didn't fit after all that?

The Officers' Club is anticipating an assemblage of three hundred for he New Year's celebrities. At the same time, many are wondering why the dance could not be held in the Biglerville building which is larger and more commodious. The answer is simple. The Biglerville building, a brick superstructure, has been condemned by the Quartermaster.

We do not know whether the caustic comments of the recent Mayor of Biglerville, Lt. Pulsifer, apropos the bad condition of Biglerville roads had anything to do with it, but Skinner Avenue, the road leading directly to Biglerville has been resurfaced and otherwise repaired.

The linotype man again crashed through last week. The statement "The year 1933 has been another year of successful accomplishments by the Infantry School" stared every reader of the Benning Herald squarely in the face. This time, the linotype expert had made absolutely certain that nobody would fail to note the fruit of his endeavor by wisely making the mistake in the featured article on the front page.

Twenty-Ninth Infantry Completes Regimental Training Exercises

Maneuvers In Field Are Used Determine Combat Training Efficiency Of Regiment

The 29th Infantry on Friday completed a series of regimental training tests which were conducted for the double purpose of determining the combat training proficiency of the organizations and to observe the conduct of troops in the new organization which is now undergoing a service test in the 2d Battalion. Lieutenant Colonel Andrew D Chaffin, temporary regimental commander, supervised the tests.

One platoon from each rifle company, supported by machine guns and howitzer weapons was separately engaged in the test problem, which required about two hours in each case and involved an advance of approximately 2,300 yards in the attack movement.

The problem assumed a daybreak attack from an outpost position occupied during the night. The initial problem for the platoon leader was to issue an attack order after making a decision as to the employment of his platoon and determining the route of his advance. Soon after the jump off, the leading elements of his unit came under fire of rifles and machine guns from a hill in his zone of advance. Having a hill to cross with routes affording varying kinds of cover, the immediate problem was to get the troops beyond the first obstacle. Once in the woods beyond, the next situation involved getting fire superiority by the platoons own fire power and by requesting necessary supporting fires in order to capture the high hill in the foreground. Numerous situations were supplied by umpires to limit the platoon leaders' activities in order to bring out desired actions on his part and to show him the dangers of violating certain tactical principles. If tempted by excellent cover to invade deeply the zone of action of adjacent units, he was shown the location of the imaginary units. Assumed casualties designated by umpires vividly illustrated to section leaders their errors in judgment and improper movements and formation of their sections.

On the two hour attack a great variety of situations were encountered which tested to the utmost the team organization of each platoon and supporting unit.

Of particular interest was the handling of the new type of organization with which the 2nd Battalion is experimenting and which gives a platoon leader control of three sections, instead of two, as under the present regular organization. Each section is composed of a rifle squad and a light machine gun squad, which, for the present, will use the automatic rifles until a new type of light machine gun is available. Two light machine guns in addition to rifles are included in the armament of the squad. Its personnel consists of two ammunition carriers (armed with a pistol), three riflemen and a corporal in addition to the machine gunners.

Soldiers Donate 1,000 Free Meals To Poor Of City

Voluntary Contribution Sets New Precedent Here In Supplying Poverty-Stricken

One of the most outstanding acts of wholesale generosity which has been exhibited in recent years came as a result of a movement last week among the enlised men of several organizatons on the Post. By voluntarily giving up two full meals, one on Christmas and one on Monday, the soldiers made one thousand poverty-stricken people of Columbus happier on Monday, when the latter were served a meal consisting of a savoury stew, bread, butter, jam and coffee at two stations in the nearby city. The meals were cooked at Fort Benning and were transported to Columbus in rolling kitchens, where they were served by soldiers under the direction of the Salvation Army.

Fire Department Is Praised By P.T.A.

Fort Benning's soldier fire department has been the recipient of numerous commendations for its efficient fire fighting ability. These encomiums have been justly earned in the performance of its normal duties of preventing destruction of life and property by fires.

Now the fire department is appearing in a new role, and its conspicuous ability displayed in its most recent activity, has resulted in a series of additional commendations. Recently the Fort Benning Parent-Teachers Association canvassed the post to collect discarded or surplus toys in preparation for its Christmas plans. Most of the toys required repairs or decorating in order to make them serviceable and attractive to the prospective recipients, the children of army families of slender financial resources. The work of rehabilitating the toys was taken over by the Fort Benning Fire department, and carried to a most successful completion.

Mrs. Thomas B. Catron, of the Parent-Teachers Association which directed the work of distributing the toys, was so pleased with the work of the firemen that she addressed a letter of commendation of their work to the commandant, General King, in turn, forwarded the commendatory letter through military channels to Chief Ben T. Willis. Mrs. Catron's letter was as follows:

"The members of the Fort Benning Fire Department have just finished helping the Parent Teachers Association to provide a Christmas for the children of needy Army families. They renovated a large number of toys collected for this purpose. Their work was excellent and deserves the highest praise. Speaking for the Fort Benning Parent Teachers Association I desire to thank and commend the men."

Variety Is Principal Feature Of Christmas Celebration at Benning

Religious Services, Big Dinners and Charity Programs Are Features of Holiday

Celebration of the year's greatest day, Christmas, was marked at Benning last Sunday by the continuation of old customs and the inauguration of new ones that make this day the most joyous of the year.

The customary Christmas dinner was served to the men of each company of the organizations stationed here and to their guests of the day, with turkey as the piece de resistance much in evidence. Even the prison mess served an elaborate meal on that day and, in some instances, men serving terms in prison received additioal good conduct credits as Christmas gifts.

The comparatively recent custom of having electrically illuminated Christmas trees was also in evidence here, reaching its culmination in the lighting of a great pine just above Outpost No. 1 at the Upatoi bridge. This was brilliantly lighted and was surmounted by a silver star of Bethlehem which was visible for some distance.

Religious services also played a prominent part in the Christmas celebration at the Post. Both the Catholic and the Protestant chapels and the 24th Infantry Service Club were the scene of special programs of Christmas music and a Midnight Mass was sung at the Catholic Chapel by Chaplain John F. Monahan, Pastor. The program of Christmas music was directed by Mrs. Llewellyn D. Tharp. At the Protestant Chapel, the primary department of the Sunday School entertained with special Christmas music and other groups gave appropriate selections.

The annual Christmas Tree Celebration which as a feature of the Holiday season at Benning, was held last Saturday under the direction of the Welfare Council, one of the prominent charity organizations of the post. A program of songs, dances and tableaux appropriate to the season was presented a number of the children under the direction of Mrs. R. H. Chance. Toys were made available for the underprivileged children of the Post through the efforts of the Parent-Teachers Association which gathered together old toys and had them repaired by the children of the Grade School and by the firemen. A number of surplus toys were also sent to the Associaion in Columbus for distribution in that city.

Regimental Small Bore Rifle Squad Selected In 29th

Men of Group Will Shoot Telegraphic Matches With Marksmen of Other Posts

Selection of a group of marksmen who will constitute the regimental small bore rifle squad was announced today by Lieutenant Colonel Andrew Chaffin, 29th Infantry.

Teams selected from the group will participate in small bore rifle competitions both locally and nationally, the latter being termed telegraphic matches. In the telegraphic matches each team shoots upon its own range and the results are announced by telegram, the shoot being conducted under regulations devised for this type of competition.

Those composing the 29th Infantry small bore squad will be Lieutenants Orestes Cleveland and William B. Moore, 1st Sergeant Edgar C. Davis. Company E, Staff Sergeant William C. Kjelstrom, Headquarters Company, 2d Battalion, Sergeants Beck and Bannister of Company A, Rogers of Company B, Corporals Wills, Haywood, Hanners, and Bales, of Company A, Palmer of Headquarters Company 2d Battalion, Caden and Sims of Company F, Wilson of Company G, and Doucet and LeJune of Headquarters Company 1st Battalion; Privates Blackmon, Burling Hensley and Stroher, of Company A, Morton and Tomlin of Company B, Loper of Company G, and Puckett of Service Company.

Famous Owner Of Marionette Show To Come To Post

Good news for the kiddies—and the grown ups as well! Tony Sarg's marionette show is coming to Fort Benning, and according to present plans, will give two performances on January 20, in the garrison theatre.

Tony Sarg, one of America's foremost illustrators, whose clever drawings are familiar to readers of the leading weeklies, spends a great deal of time in bringing to life members of his picture characters, by means of the marionettes or animated dolls. To the younger generation, at least, Tony Sarg is as famous for his creation of the marionettes as he is for his accomplishments in cartoon illustration. It is said that the performances scheduled for Fort Benning will appeal to the grown ups as well as to the children.

The Fort Benning Parent-Teachers Association is sponsoring the movement to bring the marionette show to Fort Benning. It is probable that the Parent-Teachers Association of Columbus will be invited to participate, but plans in this direction have not yet been completed.

Merit Badges Are Awarded to Scouts

Four Merit Badges were awarded scouts of the Benning Troop at the meeting of the Court of Honor held Saturday, December 17th. Four boys also were successful in passng examinations for the Tenderfoot badge.

Those awarded merit badges were Sam White, First Aid, Public Health; Robert Jewett, Stamp Collecting; Charles Owens, Pathfinding. Kenneth Hodson, Warren Drake, George Pope and Phillip Wood became Tenderfoot Scouts.

Today s Fashion

A suit of rough tweed-like wool in dark brown.

By VERA WINSTON

THE SUIT has become a permanent member of our wardrobe, with the arrival of suits for winter wear. Spring and autumn suits are old stories by now, but the popularity of the suit in thin silk or sheer throughout the summer opened the eyes of the various manufacturers to the posibility of the suit for all-year-round wear. Heavy tweeds and woolens of other weaves, plentifully bedecked wih fur are worn by many women in places where winter is not so fierce. Very often a tweed topcoat of a loose, swagger cut, is worn over such suits, giving additional warmth.

Today we show a grand outfit that should be splendid on days that are not too violent or cold. The model is done in a rough tweed-like wool in dark brown. It has a Peter Pan collar and cuffs of glossy seal and there are matching cuffs of the seal on the gauntlet gloves of brown meet the closing of the trim little jacket. There is nothing bulky in the appearance of the suit, although it is of heavy material.

Norman Brokenshire Tunes Up Chesterfield Radio Stars for the New Year

The vast army of radio fans who are always looking for something new in the broadcast sky will be treated to a stellar display when Chesterfield's 1933 programs go on next week. Six nights a week—every day except Sunday—at 9:00 p. m. Eastern Standard Time, stars of comedy, music and song will come through the Columbia Broadcasting System over the largest coast to coast hookup in radio.

Tom Howard and his partner George Shelton are new to the either waves. An exclusive Chesterfield find, they are reported to have turned down some attractive stage offers, including one with "Of Thee I Sing," for an opportunity to present a new comedy team idea on the radio. Theatre goers all over the world are familiar with Howard's famous comedy sketch "The Spy," introduced in the "Greenwich Village Follies" of 1928. It subsequently won the N. Y. Critics award as the best comedy sketch of the year and was translated into many languages. Howard is a real "scoop" for Chesterfield. In the past ten years the famous comedian's time has been filled to capacity with stage and movie productions, and he was finally persuaded to carry his inimitable drolleries into the realm of radio. The team of Howard and Shelton makes its radio debut on Tuesday night, Jan. 3, and will be on every Tuesday and Friday thereafter. An added feature on those two nights will be Elizabeth Barthell, novelty singer, in special vocal numbers.

Ruth Etting, who as Chicago's "Sweetheart of the Air" rose via Ziegfeld's Follies and other stage successes to be America's "Queen of the Air," will continue singing those heart-throb ballads for Chesterfield fans on Mondays and Thursdays. The voice that made "Ten Cents a Dance" a nation-wide hit over night opens up the new year for Chesterfield the evening of Jan. 2.

Bing Crosby, who seems to conquer all fields of popular entertainment, makes his debut as a Chesterfield star next Wednesday night. The romantic baritone's latest triumphs were in Hollywood, where he starred in the "Big Broadcast" and other pictures. Crosby's Brunswick recording of the song "Please" from that movie outsold all other Brunswick records during the month of October, and for the past nine months Crosby's recordings have been the best sellers among individual vocalists.

A nightly feature of Chesterfield's stellar series will be Lennie Hayton's Orchestra. Hayton is another Chesterfield discovery—one of Broadway's younger successes. Under Chesterfield's sponsorship Hayton will make his first appearance as a Star Conductor, well qualified by his experience as former asstant conductor for Paul Whiteman and musical arranger and accompanist for various radio and stage headliners.

Norman Brokenshire, Chesterfield's popular Master of Ceremonies, promies the year's outstanding fifteen-minute shows to his thousands of followers. "Like Chesterfields," says Brokenshire, "this new lineup is sure going to satisfy!"

Kirven's Store Will Open In Near Future

The $35,000 fire which played havoc with the stock and fixtures of several departments of Kirven's Department Store, has caused the temporary closing of the entire store, according to an announcement by the manager. The blaze, which occurred last Tuesday morning, was, indirectly, the cause of damage to the drapery department, the shoe department, and the yard goods department, besides causing damage in the stock room and to fixtures. Water was the principal factor in creating the greater part of the destructive work, but the smoke which flooded the building was another prominent contributing factor.

The management of the store will be reopened as soon as possible. A great deal of work has to be done to properly ascertain the amount of damage and rearrange the stock so as to eliminate that which is completely destroyed. Until the finsh of this work the store will remain closed, and will be opened again at the earliest possible date.

Womans' Club Will Hear Prof. Wallace

A meeting of the Infantry School Woman's Club will be held Monday afternoon, January 2nd, at 2:30 p. m. at the Polo-Hunt Club. Professor Wallace will lecture to the members of the Club.

Marriage of Mr. W. E. Austell Announced

LIEUTENANT PEEP'S DIARY

Thursday, December 22

My great perturbation over the machine gun graded test somewhat mollified before the test began for I did find in my box a letter from the Assistant Commandant to the effect that my work during this first term has been eminently satisfactory. Now, if I can but insure the arrival of the news at Major Irving's ears perhaps my answers on the test will be forgiven.

Announcement that Santa Claus would be in the code room until two o'clock today did inspire many of the class to go as far as the door, fully prepared to be met by a certificate of proficiency with a red and green ribbon on it and continue on their way rejoicing. Bitterly disappointed at being required to take the test first, several of the class slumped down on the stairs and wept.

For myself I do feel that if Santa was in the code room he got engrossed in making strings of dits with which to decorate Christmas trees for he did fail completely to show up in Assembly Hall No. 4 for the graded test in wire communication. Upon my soul there were times during that test when I felt sure that I had, by error, strayed into the wrong building and was being subjected to inquisition on a subject to which I had never been exposed. Finished with it at last after considerable shovelling thru the ash-heap of my mind, but Lord, I should as leif expound upon the principles of midwifery as to write it again. It is difficult to say on which I should display the more magnificent ignorance.

Friday, December 23

Off to the village to do my well procrastinated Christmas shopping and aglow with the spirit of the occasion which same did leave me after my fourth encounter with flocks of cackling hens perfectly parked in the exact center of busy doorways. The only adequate punishment that my exasperated soul can desire at the moment for such inconsiderate people is to require them to stand barefooted for a week in entrances built of hot bricks.

Sunday, December 25

The long anticipated Day and, as ever, fraught with joy and content. It does require some slight imaginative stretch to see Christmas in a day without snow but that is doubtless due to my boyhood in the heathen north. Much delighted with a gift of a pair of silver bars from my mother-in-law who did confide that she had been at some pains to decide on that style for me, it having been a temptation to her to get me some good looking silver stars on display at the same place.

Tuesday, December 27

Off to a picnic without lunch and like a great oaf did spend the afternoon in vain and vainer endeavors to extricate the Peep chariot from a mud hole. Getting stuck in the mud has some analogy to riding a runaway horse—one doesn't realize it until the catastrophe is in full bloom. There is a little bag of tricks that the victim always performs with perfect confidence in their ability to stop the horse or budge the car. When the series produces no visible results the tricks are repeated, a little more hastily, a little more breathlessly, a little less confidently. Finally the full gravity of the situation dawns on the performer and he finds himself reduced to observing for and utilizing an emergency landing field, in the case of a runaway; or to calling for the wrecker in the mired car situation. And so it is with me, It did, however, fill me with mild chagrin when, in the gathering gloom of a threatening rain, the Post Exchange wrecker arrived but to announce that if the traction were so poor as to preclude my escape he could see no good military nor business reason why he should similarly trap his machine under pretense of helping me. And he departed with the admonition to get a team of mules to yank the car out, and for aught I know, charging me for a trip to deliver this sage counsel.

It being now fully dark I did repair to the haunts of the best trained night workers on the post, secretly hoping that they had, since July 7th, become lonesome for their accustomed lightless and sleepless prowls. Positively amazed at the display of Christmas spirit, for almost at once the 1st Bn. Hq. Co. truck was loaded with Hobbs and Brown, Weaver and Knight and I know not how many others of the same outfit and augmented by a gang of cheerful volunteers from B Co. headed by the doughty Sgt. McGuire, and before I could say "Damn the mud" again they had me high and dry and ready to roll once more. It couldn't have been entirely the spirit of helpfulness engendered by the season. Perhaps it was the normal spirit of the men. It may not be too bad an outfit to serve with after all! At any rate I do hope that every man who so cheerfully helped me out of my plight may get stuck in the mud so that I may similarly help him. —Lieut. Peep.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

Rules Which Help To Prevent Colds

(1) Stay away from people with colds. Don't be part of a crowd in poorly ventilated rooms, theaters, or other meeting places.

(2) Keep your body built up. Eat nourishing food; sleep eight hours; exercise every day, in sunshine when possible; drink 6 glasses of water daily; have a daily bowel movement.

(3) Train your skin to stand changes in temperature. The morning cold bath, or at least a chest and neck sponge, followed by a brisk rub iis an excellent habit.

(4) Wear sensible cothing. Keep comfortable. In overheated houses only light clothing is needed. Put on extra wraps for out of doors.

(5) Breathe through your nose. Air is filtered as it passes through the nose.

(6) Have diseased tonsils, adenoids and bad teeth removed.

(7) Wash your hands often—always before eating. Brush your teeth at least twice daily.

(8) Live and work in well ventilated rooms. A temperature of 68 degrees F. is better than one over 70. Overheated rooms cause more colds than underheated ones. Open the windows to change the air twice a day. If there be dust or fumes wear a mask.

(9) Walk to work.

(10) Sleep with the windows wide open.

(11) Keep your feet dry.

(12) Cool off gradually. An electric fan or cool breeze may start a cold.

(13) See a doctor. Anyone who takes cold often, or easily; anyone who has a cold hang on needs a thorought going over; his health needs watching.

TALLY-HO

Two weeks ago, the Flare, in commenting upon Commander Brett's experimental cross country truck, suggested the possibility of commandeering the vehicle for The Infantry School Hunt. Maybe we weren't entirely serious . . . we seldom are, you know . . . but the enterprising Hunt Staff pounced on the idea as if it had emanated from the Chief of Infantry. Commander Brett lets no opportunity pass to impress the popular mind with the efficiency of motors and Sir Sidney Negrotto welcomes ideas with enthusiasm. Within the week, our lightly made suggestion was translated into a novel reality for, on the December twenty-sixth hunt, the motor tally-ho went into action.

The unique vehicle drew up at the Polo Hunt Club to a fanfare of trumpets. Captain Breckinridge in a brief and stirring address proclaimed its merits to the waiting throng and the more venturesome spirits piled aboard. Then Commander Brett. attired in the conventional pink, took the wheel, and the tally-ho set off in pursuit of the baying hounds.

There were some twelve or fourteen passengers in all, mostly perched on the somewhat precarious looking seats which had been constructed in the body of the truck. Mrs. C. H. Harding, the senior member of the party, and Betty Ann Brett, the junior, were honored by being allowed to sit beside the driver. Mrs. C. O. MacNeely of Columbus and Howard Wilson, the son of the Librarian, had less comfortable but more stable seats on the floor. Other charter members of the first motor tally-ho party on record were Mr. Page, Mrs. and Mrs. T. S. Cowen of Albany, N. Y., Mrs. and Miss Estridge and Hazard Estridge. Mrs. Arms, . . . most appropriately arrayed in a striking red ensemble which she insisted had been designed by her Parisian dressmaker especially for the occasion . . . occupied one one of the front seats and lent much color and eclat to the gathering. All in all, it was an imposing and inspiring spectacle.

Commader Brett gave his passengers some real thrills in the course of demonstrating that his newest mechanical plaything is an ideal sightseeing bus for the Infantry School Hunt. Once when it failed to negotate a slippery slope and the Tanker permitted it to slide backward fifty feet or so to get a fresh start, several of he ladies made hurried preparations to bail out. Again, there were shrieks of protest when the nature loving chauffeur abandoned the driver's seat to step off and pick violets without stopping the forward progress of his juggernaut. These well staged episodes, coupled with such routine procedure as going through heavy underbrush and knocking down middlesized trees, made the ride in the Tanker's chariot a real experience for the covered wagon girls who dared to take a chance with the Army's premier tank handler.

It was a revelaton to all to see what the improvised tally-ho could do in covering unfavorable ground. Incidentally, the passengers got the best picture of the hunt that it is possible to obtain. Some day, we want to take a ride in the gasoline tally-ho just to see what a hunt looks like. In riding to hounds in the traditional manner, we have always been so much occupied with our horse that we catch only occasional glimpses of the event in which we are participating.

Last Spring, when it was announced that Commander Brett and Inventor Negrotto were to be the Masters for the coming year, we predicted that The Infantry School Hunt would be pretty thoroughly mechanized before they got through with it. The Tanker, in particular, loses no opportunity to make converts to his gas engine religion. The recent successful demonstration of a motor tally-ho is undoubtedly his most clever piece of insidious propaganda. If we were a true Horse Worshipper instead of a benevolent skeptic, we should institute proceedings to prevent his using his high office of Master of Fox Hunts to undermine the tottering faith of those most reluctant to see man's age old companion of the battlefield displaced by a factory product of steel and rubber. What would Squire Jerry Wood say to such a violation of M. F. H. ethics?

WAR CORRESPONDENT

It goes without saying that the conductor of the Flare covered this historic event described above. We rode a white horse misnamed Easy ,which had been hand picked for us at the drawing by no less a hunt dignitary and horse expert than Sir Sidney himself. Easy's gait and jumping ability were satisfactory but his periodic attempts to buck us off were disconcerting. They gave us a feeling of insecurity at times which probably matched the sensations which Mrs. Arms experienced on the high seat of Commander Brett's tally-ho.

We cannot refrain from questioning Sir Sidney's motive in selecting Easy for us. We suspect that he wanted to test our qualifications for membership in the senior hunt. At any rate, Easy gave us quite a ride. We nearly spoiled the excellent record for spilless hunts of which the present masters are so proud.

GRAND HOTEL

Our Fort McPherson correspondent sends in this one.

Captain "Woody" Wilson, the scholarly Academic Deparment Librarian, being held overnight in Atlanta, decided to avail himself of the comfortable and reasonably priced accommodations of the Hostess House at Fort McPherson.

Having located what he took to be the Hostess House, the weary Librarian wandered through the halls thereof looking for the room clerk. Finally, he encountered a woman in uniform. She appeared to be mildly surprised at discovering our hero on the premises.

"What do you want?" she inquired.

"I'm looking for a place to sleep," replied the Captain.

"I'm sorry," said the lady sweetly, "but you can't sleep here. This is the nurses quarters."

TIMELY INVESTMENT

Cast thy bread upon the waters: for thou shalt find it after many days. —Ecclesiastes 11-1.

At the last meeting of the Thanatopsis Club for the year 1932, Brother Emil Leard and Explorer Chance contributed handsomely to the Christmas funds of the members who have been able to last out the first six months of the pavless furlough plan. "Freshmeat" Kellam was the principle beneficiary.

Cinema Calendar

for Grand, Rialto and Royal

ROYAL

(Beginning with midnight show, 11:15 Saturday)
ALSO SUNDAY, MONDAY AND TUESDAY: Offering "No Man Of Her Own" with Clark Gable, Carole Lombard and Dorothy Mackaill. The hero of this picture (Gable) was a hit-and-run lover! A reckless, gambling, man-sized attraction—women might fight for him, but personally he preferred a cigarette to any dame. And when it came time for the woman—he tossed a coin, a real gamble for what he wanted. Heads . . . his for tonight;—tails . . . she was his forever. Said to be his greatest vehicle—a smashing romance, with high drama across the card tables.

GRAND

SATURDAY, SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Offering "Man Against Woman", with Jack Holt, Lillian Miles, Walter Connally and Gavin Gordon. A fast moving story of an ingenious New York Detective, and his vicissitudes with a gang of Gotham crooks. His honor, disgrace, and return to fame in the end makes a thrilling vehicle.

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY: Offering "Sherlock Holmes" with Clive Brooks, Ernest Torrence and Miriam Jordon. Conan Doyle's detective masterpiece, with Clive Brooks in the leading male role. How "Sherlock Holmes" deals with American racketeering methods in London will intrigue you, especially if you like thrillers. Miriam Jordon has the female lead, while Ernest Torrence plays the part of Moriarty, arch enemy of Holmes.

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY: Offering "Evening For Sale" with Herbert Marshall, Charlie Ruggles and Mary Boland. A Viennese musical romance—the hero with empty pockets in his uniform and empty arms asking for love. The picture has a new musical background, described by Stuart Walker, director as being the first step in building new art form in pictures. The picture also is a precedent for Charlie Ruggles, of "Gentlemen of The Press" fame, and renown for his role of the "drunkard" in various films. Ruggles doesn't get a drop in "Evening for Sale".

RIALTO

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY: Offering "Renegades Of The West" with Tom Keene, Betty Furness and Roscoe Ates. Fierce, action-packed, red-blooded drama of the raw, rugged Rockies. He got himself sent to prison so he could get the man who killed his dad . . . and win the girl he loved.

SUNDAY AND MONDAY: Offering "Afraid To Talk" with Eric Linden and Sidney Fox. What if this happened to you? Lovers torn asunder by the murder-lust of men who stopped at nothing to gain their end . . . two young hearts pitted against ruthless tyranny in the picture that will thrill you to the core; a picture of a Scarlet City unmasked.

TUESDAY ONLY: Offering "Faithless" with Tallulah Bankhead and Robert Montgomery. Could you stand the test? Put yourself in her place . . . beautiful, wealthy . . . suddenly penniless . . . could you gamble your soul like her to save the love she held more precious than millions? She said there was no price too great to pay for the man she loved . . . cast away jewels, lived in poverty, a million sacrifices for him. You'll laugh, weep, thrill and triumph with this pair.

WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY: Offering "Me And My Gal" with Spencer Tracy, Joan Bennett, Marion Burns and George Walsh. A girl don't know what to do . . . if she lets a fellow maul her, he thinks she's no good . . . and if she doesn't, he thinks she's old-fashioned. A picture that has comedy, romance, action and drama.

RIALTO

With the announcement of the booking of Universal's "Afraid to Talk" to play at the Rialto Theatre Sunday and Monday, Columbus is assured of a widely heralded film, said to present the most revealing expose of a phase of the life of our great cities ever screened.

This unusual timely screen drama is laid in a great American city. A hotel bell boy is its victim and its hero. He is married. He is young, hopeful full of the joy of life and planning ahead for his young and too pretty wife. Suddenly he is clutched in the vise-like coils of a system that is the denpair of most great cities. He is innocent, but he is a midget compared with the thing that has him in its grasp.

But the power of his captor lies in the power to make men silent. They are all afraid to talk. Suddenly this badgered and beaten bell boy finds his tongue. With his wife a prey to untold dangern, he rises to tremendous heights of heroism and fights back wih the only weapon at his command in a drama of remarkable intensity.

At the Rialto

Spencer Tracy and Joan Bennett in a scene from "Me and My Gal" opening at the Rialto Theatre next Wednesday and continuing through Thursday.

ROYAL

Clark Gable will come to the Royal Theatre beginning Saturday at 11:15 p. m. and continuing Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, in the leading role of "No Man of Her Own," a new drama in which the popular star is supported by two leading women, Carole Lombard and Dorothy Mackaill.

Gable has the role of Babe Stewart, suave card sharp and devil with women. Because he tries to walk out on her, Dorothy Mackaill, his come-on for his card games, threatens to turn him over to the police, and he is forced to leave town until she cools off.

In a small town, he meets Carole Lombard, so bored with small town life she's ready for anything. They take a gambler's chance—flip a coin. Gable loses and has to maryy her. To the girl, however, the marriage is the real thing, and before he knows it, the hard-boiled gambler is beginning to fall in love. There is, however, the ex-girl, Dorothy, to be taken care of when the newly-weds get back to New York.

Coming To Grand

GRAND

Jack Holt is one picture star who doesn't care what the locale of his screen story happens to be just as long as it's crammed full of action.

In the air, on the water, undersea, the western plains, the field of sport and the drawing room, Holt has sampled them all. Now "Man Against Woman," his newest Columbia picture, which comes to the Grand Saturday, Sunday and Monday, brings him right into the middle of the maelstrom that is life in a big city, but lives up to his fast and furious formula with a vengeance.

Holt's has been an outdoor, healthful life from the very outset. Even his birthplace has a romantic ring—Winchester, Virginia. A graduate of Virginia Military Academy, Holt started work as a civil engineer with a railroad. This job took him into the ranching section of the country. Before long, he decided he would rather be around horses and work as a cattle-puncher than be an engineer.

Prophet Comments on All-Benning Team

Company 'A' Wins Well Played Game From 'G' Company

Company "A" First Battalion, defeated Company "G" Second Battalion 20-13 in a very well-played game in Doughboy Stadium last Saturday afternoon.

The two elevens were evenly matched. "Red" Wilson, all-post end and captain of the championship Second Battalion team, and Prophet, broken field marvel and another all-Benning selection, were outstanding for the losers while Jordan was easily the best player on his eleven.

Prophet's brilliant broken field running accounted for both of his team's touchdowns. Time after time, he spun off long gains through the line or on wide end runs McAllister also excelled in carrying the ball.

It was Jordan who brought about the downfall of the strong Company "G" aggregation. His accurate passing paved the way for two markers and he made the other himself on a run. He also shone defensively.

The backfield talent on both teams made the two lines at times look weak, but, on the whole, the forward walls performed capably.

With the score deadlocked at 13-13 and only a few minutes to play, a tie seemed the only logical outcome of the game. The First Battalion eleven obtained the ball near the middle of the field and Jordan dropped back to pass. The pass was successful and two or three successful line plays put the ball in a scoring position.

The Second Battalion line held and again Jordan faded back. A long pass was successful and the receiver crossed the goal line standing up. The extra point was good to make he score 20-13. The game ended soon afterwards.

Jordan, Prophet, Mathews, and Harper In Backfield

I. Predictum's Post Eleven Boasts Powerful Line and Fast Backfield

By I. PREDICTUM

The all-Benning eleven, announced officially in the most recent issue of the Herald, was selected on the same basis as the All-American team which appeared in the Christmas edition. That is, the candidate was chosen only after two factors were taken into consideration, the standing of the player's team and the value of that player to his team.

"Red" Wilson, who captained the championship Second Battalion team, qualifies easily for one end position. This player was not only a source of inspiration to his teammates but also starred both offensively and defensively. A good pass receiver, he was a deadly tackler and a fine interference man. Opponents of the Second Battalion were always careful to avoid his end whenever possible.

McElvey of the Tankers, an outstanding athlete in other branches of sports as well as football, gets the call for the other wing over his teammate, Love. Both ends starred more or less consistently. McElvey made several beautiful tackles in the course of the season and was a bulwark on defense, a vital cog in a stone wall line. On the offensive, he was equally dangerous.

Wadsworth of the Tanks and Barr of the First Battalion are the choice for tackles. "Red" Wadsworth, weighing in the neighborhood of two hundred and twenty-five pounds, starred defensively throughout the season. Both players combined tremendous forward drive with the mobility that is essential to good tackles. Wadsworth was particularly fast in getting down under punts and then smothering the safety man. Barr was a deadly tackler.

Guards seldom get the attention they deserve from the crowds; yet they play an important role in any system of line play, however complicated. The past intramural season brought to light a number of competent guards, from whom it is difficult to choose two who were sufficiently outstanding over their fellow players to merit selection on the all-Benning team.

Afer much consideration, I. PREDICTUM decided to present the laurels to Stewart of the Tankers and "Dusty" Rhodes of the First Battalion. Both players were disconcerting to their hapless opponents. Efficient tacklers and impregnable on the defense, they left little to be desired. Their brilliant play helped the cause of their respective teams a great deal more than at first is apparent to the disinterested observer.

Carlyn of the Second Battalion is an almost unanimous choice for center. His passing was near to perfection and he was continually in the thick of the line play. A tower of strength defensively, he was exceptionally brilliant on the attack. Centers who had the misfortune to oppose him last season will verify the selection. He hits with force and fervor and is a rangy defensive player.

ALL-BENNING TEAM

End—Wilson, 2nd Bn., 29th Inf.
Tackle—Barr, 1st Bn., 29th Inf.
Guard—Stewart, 66th Inf.
Center—Carlyn, 2nd Bn., 29th Inf.
Guard—Rhodes, 1st Bn., 29th Inf.
Tackle—Wadsworth, 66th Inf.
End—McElvey, 66th Inf.
Quarterback—Jordan, 1st Bn. 29th Inf.
Halfback—Mathews, 66th Inf.
Fullback—Harper, 83rd Artillery.

Four backs stood head and shoulders over all other candidates. Prophet of the Second Battalion, Harper of the 83rd. Artillery, Jordan of the First Battalion, and Mathews of the Tankers. Three were quarterbacks, and to insure the recognition of each player, I. PREDICTUM found it necessary to shift the candidates around.

Jordan of the First Battalion was the individual star of his team. Fast as greased lightning, he was probably the best passer in the league and it was this ability of his to pass that time after time turned the tide in favor of his team. His kicking, although not exceptional, was at times very good. There is little doubt about the quality of his field generalship, for in this department of the game, he excelled particularly. Defensively, he also starred. Football enthusiasts will remember his numerous tackles, made at times when it seemed that the runner was sure to get away. He seldom missed a tackle.

Jordan, a veritable triple threat man, was the spark plug of his team, a continual source of inspiration. Because of his outstanding ability in every department of the game and because of his brilliant generalship on the field, I. PREDICTUM selects this player to lead the all-Benning team as quarterback.

"Poss'm" Prophet was beyond doubt far and away the best broken field runner in the circuit. Once in the open, it was almost impossible to bring him down. Anyone who has seen his star gather in a punt and then direct his interference down the field will verify my selection of him as half-back. Time after time Prophet caught punts, started in the direction of the goal line, no matter how distant, and failed to stop until the last white line was crossed. He, too, was a triple threat man of no small merit.

Mathews of the Tanks, a newcomer, soon received the attention of the football fans. He could buck a line or skirt wide around an end with equal ability. Especially did he shine as a pass receiver. Tacklers found it difficult to bring him down once he obtained the ball. He not only was conspicuous as a ball-carrier but also was a fine blocker and interference man.

Harper of the 83rd Artillery starred consistently for a losing team. The Gunners failed to win a game but in every contest, Harper made his presence felt. He was probably the best defensive back in the league and plugged holes in his own line with abandon. Once an opposing ball-carrier got past the Gunner line, the next problem was how to get by Jack Harper.

On the attack, he was by far the outstanding threat in the Gunner backfield. He could run, pass, or kick, and had he been with a team that had finished higher in the standing, there is no telling how much he might have starred. He cannot possibly be be kept off the all-Benning team without doing him an injustice.

To the great many of those who performed excellently throughout the season and still failed to gain recognition on this team, I. PREDICTUM extends congratulations and regrets that it is not possible to satisfy everyone. He said once before and he says now that the selection of any all-star team is bound to be unfair in some respects.

Maj. Gen. King Presents Trophy

SPORTS

Major General Campbell King, commandant of the Infantry School, presented the championship team of the Second Battalion, 29th Infantry, with a regulation size silver football, mounted on a silver pedestal, at the Doughboy Memorial Stadium Friday morning.

The ceremony was conducted in a military fashion. The Second Battalion marched into the north entrance to the field with the regimental band leading the striking procession. As the head of the column filed through the entrance, the band began playing the stirring battle song of "Johnnie Reb" (Dixie). Swinging along in perfect rhythm to the music, the Battalion marched around the field and then formed in a box formation with the members of the football squad in the center, facing the south stands of the stadium.

After the battalion had been positioned, Colonel Elmer F. Rice read a telegram from Colonel James M. Churchill, formerly of the 29th Infantry. It was a message of congratulation to the Batalion on its brilliant achievement in again bringing the football championship to the organization.

Before presenting the trophy, General King commended and congratulated the team a as whole on its splendid performance throughout the entire football season, the brilliant demonstration of fighting spirit, and the fine sportsmanship displayed during the period of competition that won the trophy and the championship against opposing football teams composed of equally hard fighting, clean playing army athletes.

"Red" Wilson, team captain and a member of the Herald's all-Benning team, stepped forward to accept the trophy from General King while his team mates stood stolidly at attention.

This season's victories gave the Kellys their second consecutive championship. In 1930, the Kellys were forced to divide honors with the Terrible Tankers, when those two powerful football machines fought to a 7-7 deadlock in the deciding game were coached by Lieutenant James of the season. The 1932 champions R. Pierce, Lieutenant Washington Ives, and Lieutenant Churchill.

In the first game of the season, the Kellys met and defeated the Gunners of the 83rd Artillery by a one sided score. In this contest, the Second Battalion showed a great deal of power, a fast shifty backfield led by the flashy Prophet, and a formidable line The Tankers were the next aggregation to oppose the Kellys. In a hard fought game, the green-jerseyed warriors again emerged victorious. The First Battalion proved incapable of ending the determined march of the Kellys in the direction of the championship and succumbed by a score of 6-0.

Lest it be thought that Brother Leard has suddenly turned philanthropist or that Explorer Chance is breaking out with a severe attack of sweet charity, we hasten to state that the sum distributed was in the nature of a small dividend amounting to approximately six percent on their semi-annual collections from the members who have only a bowing acquaintance with Lady Luck. The distribution had all of the earmarks of fish bait, put out at the psychological moment to discourage unwelcome New Year resolutions on the part of wavering brethern.

CITATION FOR THE WEEK

To Major and Mrs. R. W. Pearson we award this week's Flare medal for civic spirit and artistic achievement. The beautifully lighted Christmas tree which decorated their lawn constitutes a cheerful Christmas beacon for all who pass that way.

Amateur Boxers Work Out Daily For Tournament

Amateur leatherpushers are working out daily in the gymnasium for the annual Benning amateur boxing tournament that will be held early in February.

Boxing teams representing the 1st Battalion, and Special Units Battalion of the 29th Infantry, the 2nd Battalion, 66th Infantry, the 1st Battalion, 83rd Artillery, and an independent team composed of boxers of the Special Units of the Infantry School, will be entered in this tournament.

Lieutenant Howard R. Johnson, assistant athletic officer, has arranged to train a special class composed of men from the smaller units who desire to enter competition. This team will be known as the Outlaws.

At the present time over two hundred candidates have entered the competition. Of the number now working out, probably seventy-five will enter the tournament. Many of the original two hundred will probably have dropped out by that time. The elimination tournament will definitely decide who will gain regular berths on the Infanry School boxing team that will be entered in the Southeastern Amateur tournament to be held in March in Atlanta.

At last the Quartermaster Detachment is to get the master sergeant it was alloted last year. Technical Sergeant Richard L. Montague, Q. M. C., has been assigned to this station as replacement for Technical Sergeant Huna Putchkoff, and Sergeant Montague is No. 1 on the eligible list for the highest enlisted grade. He is expected to arrive in Fort Benning about the beginning of the new year.

Sergeant Montague is not at all unknown in Fort Benning. He and Mrs. Montague have friends here as well as in posts in all parts of the country. They are coming to this post from Fort Adams, R. I. During his twenty-seven years of active service, Sergeant Montague has been a member of the Cavalry, Coast Artillery, Infantry and Quartermaster Corps.

Orders announcing the retirement of Staff Sergeant Charles H. Prince, Q. M. C., have been recently published by the War Department. Sergeant Prince is as yet undecided definitely where he will make his home after retirement.

Sergeant Henry P. Forrest, Q. M. C., recently ordered to Fort Benning from the Philippine Department, will arrive in Fort Benning on March 18, if he decides to take all the delay which he was authorized. Sergeant Forrest has been a member of the Quartermaster Corps since 1926 and is a native of Virginia.

29TH INF.

HEADQUARTERS COMPANY

Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry enlisted men willingly did without two meals during Christmas to feed the needy people of Columbus, Georgia. There was enough saved here in Fort Benning and sent to Columbus to feed a thousand people. As a result we were all happy over it as the old saying goes "If you want to be happy give something away."

"Slim" Cameron voluntarily gave his two meals allright but he went along with the trucks to take it down, so he probably got his anyway. His one meal is equal to about that of five people.

This was one of the best Christmas and holidays following that we have ever had here at Fort Benning. We had one of the finest dinners we have ever had. Also our mess hall was the best decorated mess hall in the post.

Our message center chief, Corporal Youngblood, has been on a Christmas furlough and came back telling us of his trip home to see his son. He must have some boy if he is everything his daddy says about him is true.

Our assistant chief Corporal Fuller has become a regular down the house man. It seems as if his room mate is not taking good care of him. You had better keep him in "Jimmy" or you might lose him.

We have heard many good remarks about our company orchestra which has been playing every night somewhere during the holidays.

One of the bandsmen "Ranta" was telling of a recent party to Harris county where he had got a chicken and boiled it for 30 hours and it was still so tough they had to throw it away. They were unable to bite it at all.

We are all glad to know that our supply sergeant, Sergeant Riley has reenlisted for another three years.

HQ. CO., FIRST BATTALION

Well, folks, our holidays are just about over, and we will soon have to resume our regular duties again. The radio ops are getting restless, the wire men have far away looks in their eyes and our erstwhile message center section is bemoaning this dreadful inactivity so prevalent during these holidays.

Several of our girl-struck shieks have taken off for parts unknown to see their good hons, (so to speak) and others are enjoying the beauties of our company day room by playing pool, pinochle, dominoes and what have you? Before we forget we want to tell the world that we have the only the original "Rhythm Club" in Fort Benning. Are you ready Gang? (Answer) Ya man!! Up to the ceiling, let's play all night, whassamatta Rhythm Club?, let's get going, we are losing time.

Incidentally the aggregation of crooners are composed of none other than the non-pareil "Blondy" Parker, then the farmer boy, Hiram Hobbs and last but not least "Ripper" Ray, the only and original whistling baritone. Are you listening Fort Benning?

Say haven't you heard? Well, here's the "dope"; we have the greatest little Basketball Club in Fort Benning. This Club has christened themselves "Brady's Bombers" in honor of our manager and coach, 1st Lt. L. E. Brady. This team consists of the folowing named men; Harold, "Ripper" Ray, Mike Carpenter, Larry Perry, Leonard Knight, "Norm" Harris Hobbs, "Frank Merriwell" Snead, "Humming Hummell" and "Ducky" Doucet.

In our initial game we emerged on top by beating the fast Seale High School Quintet. Our next game was with Columbus Industrial High School was a closely contested affray, the Bembers winning by a one point margin and let me tell you folks that was a game. Our third contest was with the Columbus Textile Boys and in that game! Ha, this is so funny! The score was 33 to 32 in favor of the Mill Boys with about two seconds to pay. Frank Merriwell Snead sunk one in the old hoop from the middle of the court winning the game by a one point tally. Three cheers for Malvin.

Anyone wishing to engage in a practice game call our Team Captain, "Ripper" Ray at No. 604 and details will be arranged.

Well, folks, as we have stated before our holidays are just about over and we are suffering from the effect of the monotony. In fact the old gray matter refuses to function.

We'll say adios but not without extending our New Year's Greeting to all members of the garrison.

24TH INF.

The 24th Infantry, Fort Benning's crack colored regiment, will lose one of its highest ranking non-commissioned officer and oldest members on December 31, when Technical Sergeant Homer F. Moseley, of the regimental band, will be retired from active service.

Sergeant Moseley's army career began during the Spanish-American war, when he enlisted on August 23, 1898, in the 7th United States Volunteers, and with which he served until February 28, 1899. After the war he returned to civil life and six years later enlisted in the band of the 25th Infantry. This was on February 13, 1905, and he served continuously with the 25th Infantry until February 5, 1913. On the following day he reenlisted in the band of the 24th Infantry, completing his service with that organization on July 17, 1917. His next enlistment in the 24th Infanry was on July 18, 1919, and he has served continuously with the 24th until the date of his retirement.

Colonel Fred L. Munson, regimental commander, in a formal order announcing Sergeant Moseley's retirement, commended him for the long and faithful service which he has rendered to his country. "The retirement of Technical Sergeant Moseley brings to a close a long, valuable, and active career as a soldier of the United States. This service is to be emulated by all men who have the best interest of the country, the army and themselves at heart," said Colonel Munson. "The congratulations of the regimental commander and the entire regiment are tendered Technical Sergeant Moseley upon the completion of his long service and cordial good wishes are extended for his future success and happiness in his well-earned retirement.

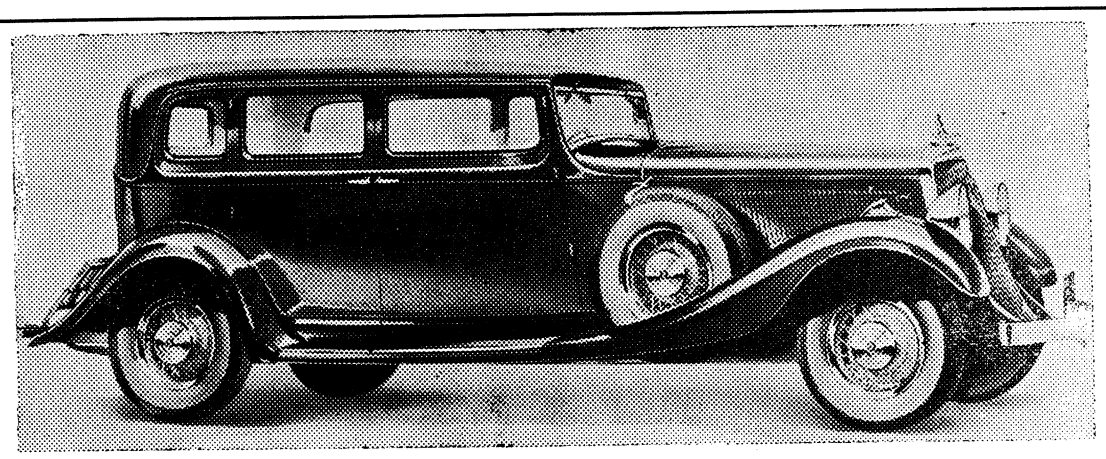
Many Important Improvements Feature New Studebaker Commander



"Slamming on the brakes" is unnecessary in the new Studebaker modes now on display at Columbus. A new principle used in the braking system of the Studebaker gives "power braking," eliminating the danger of suddenly applied brakes and the fatigue which si a result of improper use of the brakes. Among the other advantages brought out with the newest models are the automatic choking and starting mechanism, which assures starting under the most difficult conditions, and the automatic heat control which gives perfect combustion at all times.

Beauty is another of the outstanding features of the new Studebakers and Rocknes. Radical departures from generally accepted motor car design are evident in several places in the newer models, and the cars, as a whole, follow the slim streamlined design so popular at present. The principal change in design is seen in the new fenders, which eliminate the drop to the engine and, instead are run directly over to the hood. This one feature alone does away with an undesirable recess which, heretofore, has always been one that is hard to keep clean and in good condition.

Engagement of Miss Clark to Lieut. Bache of Interest to Many at Post

The announcement of the engagement of Miss Marie Louise Clark to Lieut. William Hyatt Bache was made at a delightful luncheon given by Miss Clark's parents at her home.

Miss Clark, the attractive daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Robert W. Clark, of Sarasota, Florida, has a host of friends at Fort Benning. She will be remembered as having visited Lieut. and Mrs. Lon H. Smith here last winter. Miss Clark is a graduate of the Class of 1932 of Sarasota High School and is now attending the Florida State College for Women at Tallahassee. Lieut. Bache is the son of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Bache of Greenville, Florida and is a graduate of the United States Military Academy class of 1932.

Plans for the wedding have not been completed though it is expected that the wedding will take place this summer.

MAJ. AND MRS. LEE ENTERTAIN FOR MAJ. AND MRS. LEGGE

Maj. and Mrs. William C. Lee were the hosts Wednesday evening at a delightfully informal dinner at their quarters complimenting Maj. and Mrs. Barnwell Legge who leave shortly for their new station in Tientsin, China. After the dinner the guests were escorted to the Post movies.

WOMANS CLUB MEETS WITH INTERESTING PROGRAM AT POLO HUNT CLUB

The monthly meeting of the Womans Club was held Monday at the Polo Hunt Club. After the usual business meeting Dr. R. K. Wallace of the Warm Springs Foundation gave a most enjoyable talk on flowers and birds of the section of the country. Mrs. W. H. Reeder and Mrs. Fred Gaillard sang a duet, Mrs. R. W. Pearson playing the accompaniment In keeping with Dr. Wallace's talk they chose for their songs "Trees" and "By the Waters of Minnetonka."

During the business meeting Mrs. H. W. Reeder was elected the new chairman of the program committee to relieve Mrs. Barnwell Legge who leaves shortly for China.

Plans were also made for the next meeting in February.

MRS. BOWEN ENTERTAINS BRIDGE CLUB

Mrs. James E. Bowen was the hostess to her contract bridge club Friday afternoon entertaining the club at luncheon followed by two tables of bridge. Mrs. Bowen had as her guests Mrs. R. E. Vermette, Mrs. Lynn Brady, Mrs. Orestes Cleveland, Mrs. G. P. Howell, Mrs. C. T. Lanham, Mrs. Selina Waddington, and Miss Harriotte Atkins.

Today's Fashion

The separate skirt and blouse, augments the youthful mode.

By VERA WINSTON

The blouse and skirt for dinner wear is a fashion that is fast becoming popular, ever since it was shown by an important couturier in Paris. It is a charming mode and an ex-remedy youthful one. And certainly a splendid change after years and years of nothing but frocks. It is a fashion that is of course the outcome of the popularity of the suit, and we all expect it to gain greater momentum in the early spring. Lots of smart Parisiennes wear a separate blouse and skirt beneath their fur coats, very often a sweater-blouse if the day be inclement.

For the Young Woman

Today we show an attractive example of the new fashion, most suitable for a quite young woman. The blouse is of silk jersey in a soft peach shade and is worn with a black broadcloth skirt, cut circular. The belt of the skirt has an antique gold clasp in back. This would make a most attractive and quite inexpensive costume for the girl at college. A more dressy version of the skirt and blouse costume is that which consists of a blouse of supple lame and a skirt of marocain or triple sheer.

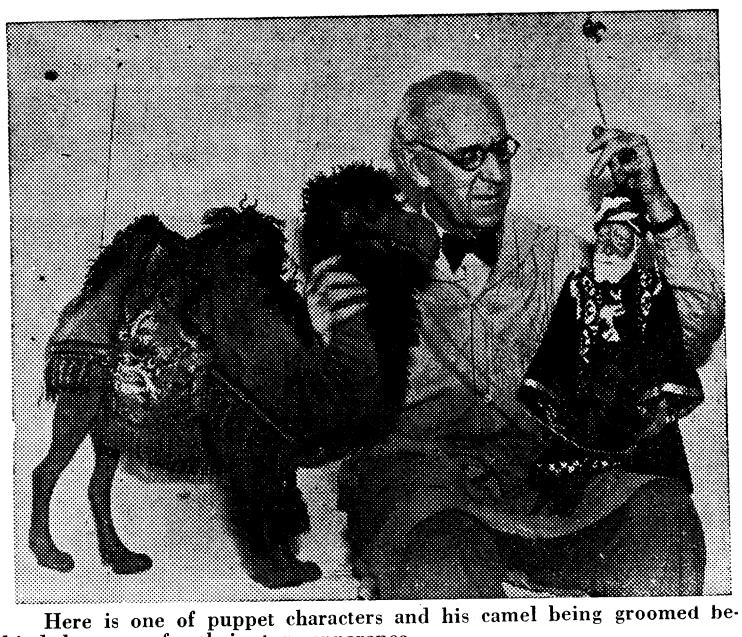
Tony Sarg's Marionettes To Be Shown At Post Theatre On January 20th



Here is one of puppet characters and his camel being groomed behind the scenes for their stage apparance.

Fort Benning folks, big and little, have an entertainment treat in store for them. On Jauary 20th memories of childhood's happiest hours will be recalled to spectators of Tony Sarg's marionettes' presentation of "Sinbad the Sailor" and "The Merry-Go-Round," the latter being a composite playlet comprising scenes from "Rip Van Winkle," "Alice in Wonderland," "Rose and the Ring,' and other old favorites.

Both plays will be presented in the Main Theatre; "The Merry-Go-Round" in the afternoon, beginning at three o'clock; and "Sinbad the Sailor" in the evening at eight. Each performance will last about two hours.

The afternoon performance of the "Merry-Go-Round" is designed to appeal especially to the children, and for this reason is composed of excerpts from some of the outstanding scenes in the best-remembered of childhood stories. Plans are under way by the Fort Benning Parent-Teachers' Association, which is sponsoring the local appearances of the marionette players, to authorize the dismissal of the 850 Fort Benning children from their school-room a little earlier than usual in order that they may arrive on time for the play. A similar plan is expected to be proposed before the Columbus schools through the medium of the Columbus Parent Teachers' Association in order that children from the city may have the opportunity of attending the afernoon play. As the main theatre seats approximately 1450, several hundred children from the city can easily be accommodated in addition to those of the garrison. It is also probable that the Howard Bus Company will operate special buses with reduced fares for children from the city on the day of the performance.

"Sinbad the Sailor," one of the favorites of the fascinating Arabian Nights stories, will be enacted primarily for an adult audience by the little puppet players in their evening performance. This presentation is said to be one of the most elaborate of the several marionette productions created by Tony Sarg. The cast of characters numbers twenty-eight players in addition to a number of minor characters and animals, the latter of which include an elephant, camel, dokeys, horses, sheep, and dogs. Then there is a fish, and last, but not least, the Roc, the great bird who figures so prominently in Sinbad's extraordinary adventures. The characters are of course arrayed in costumes appropriate to the time and locale portrayed by the story, and the stage setting, in Oriental style, are in harmony.

Behind the scenes are eight talented people who skillfully manipulate the strings which animate the puppet players and project their voices so that each of the puppets appears to be speaking its own line.

In his adaptation of the Arabian Nights' story, Tony Sarg has invested it with the artistic touch which has made him one of the best known of American illustrators, and throughout the performance there is a series of elaborate illustrations of some of the prominent episodes of the story. Among these is a beautiful tableau of a ship-wreck at sea, with novel lighting and mechanical effects; the appearance of the Old Man of the Sea; the meeting of Sinbad and the king; and the presentation of the magic saddle; the adventure with the shark under water; and the encounter with the great Roc in the air. In the grand finale, which takes place in the court of Harounal Raschid, Sinbad is saved from summary execution and his adventures are ended happily by the beautiful princess.

"Sinbad the Sailor" is at present playing in the 48th Street Theatre, New York, and two other marionette shows are fulfilling engagements in the same city. In engaging Tony Sarg's marioettes for their Fort Benning appearances, the local Parent-Teachers' Association is bringing to the post a metropolitan attraction and America's foemost show of this character.

Girl Scout Notes

Cardinal Troop

Tuesday, Jan. 3.

Our meeting was taken up almost entirely by signalling practice. We studied the alphabet carefully and then were given sentences to figure out. Although some of us are not as far along in the code as others, this constant practice will get us so that we are just about perfect.

The other troops did not have meetings last week because of the Christmas holidays.

Service League Will Give Playlet

The Community Service League will sponsor the play "The Little Princess" on Saturday, January 14 at three o'clock at the High School Auditorium. Mrs. Emmet Cockrill's School of Creative Dramatics will take the roles of this delightful play which is an adaptation of Frances Hodgson Burnett's story "Sara Crewe."

All of the children of Fort Benning are invited to share the pleasures this party with the Columbus children. Many attractive features have been added since the play was postponed in December on account of influenza. There will be a souvenir for each child as well as a prize for the boy and girl who hold the lucky number. The price of admission will be twenty-five cents.

New Uniforms To Be Supplied For Benning Soldiers

Fort Benning soldiers, whose neatness of personal appearance has been the subject of numerous commendations, will present an even nattier appearance in the near future, when the new type of serge and elastique uniforms is made available for issue.

In order to assure a satisfactory fitting of the individuals to whom the new uniforms are to be issued, several sets of "try-ons" have been sent to Fort Benning from the Quartermaster Depot in Philadelphia. Each set contains a number of different sizes of garments to be used in determining the proper size of the new type of uniform to be issued, and by the use of the "try on" sets, it is estimated that about seventy per cent of the men can be fitted from stock sizes without any alterations, and about twenty percent with only minor alterations. The remaining ten per cent will be fitted, if necessary, by special measurement uniforms, cut to order.

The use of the "try on" sets is expected to obviate much of the delay which has been experienced in the past in procuring individual uniforms through the special measurement system, and to effect economy in the cost and distribution as well.

Woman's Club

On Monday, January 2, the Infantry School Woman's Club held its initial meeting of the 1933 season with Mrs. Thomas B. Catron and Mrs. Homer H. Slaughter as hostesses for the afternoon.

Mrs. Ephraim Peyton, President of the club, conducted the business meeting wherein matters of interest to members of the club were discussed and announcements made of the meeting of the literary section and the bridge section.

The program for the afteroon was one of unusual interest to all who attended. Prof. Wallace, a patient at the Warm Springs Foundation, gave an informal lecture on birds and insects and by his thorough knowledge of his subject and his very delightful personality held his listeners fascinated through the entirety of his talk. The interest was evidenced by the flood of questions that were asked him by various members of the audience.

Mrs. Harry Reeder and Mrs. Fred Gaillard, who are well known to the personnel of the post for their musical talents, gave two very delightful vocal duets, "Trees," and "Pale Moon" —they were accompanied at the piano by Mrs. R. W. Pearson.

A social hour followed the program at which time the hostesses were assisted at the tea table by Mrs. Vernon Evans and Mrs. Reginald Kelly.

LIEUTENANT PEEP'S DIARY

Sunday, January 1

Henry Shute's "brite and fair" does most aptly describe the day. The more welcome because of the lowering skies of the past fortnight. Up as betimes as this morning's hour of retiring would permit only to find myself as stiff as sunflower seed brought on I do greatly fear by excessive jumping for balloons at the Officers' Club at midnight. All things must come to those who wait for with all my exertions I did achieve naught but the soreness and to upset Colonel Wallace in my quest for a balloon whilst my good wife who stood quietly in a corner did acquire two in good condition.

Off for the post where we did assemble to exchange the day's greetings with the Commandant. My already impaired eyesight in no wise improved when smitten by the reflected light from the class boots and brass. Such resplendence I had not thought the class capable of and doubtless the exhaustion from this effort will not be dispelled until graduation day.

In furtherance of the clouded state of all present, Young did give us "Fall in" and "Count off"—a rather complicated maneuver all things considered—and then marched us off by "Right Face." Forward March."

Treat did come wondering by in such a vacant state that I felt constrained to assure him that he had arrived at Fort Benning and was at the moment in the midst of the Company Officers. He confided that he would like to dismount and shake hands with me but having lost a horse that way since dinner last night he could not bring himself to do it. Overmuch pleased when he found that the right glove was to be removed and carried in the left hand at the formation since he had brought two lefts.

The last day of vacation for which I do devoutly thank Allah; and I can but disagree with the pseudo philosopher who said that a change of occupation is a rest. My own case, happily, is not comparable to that of the student who, when asked if he had enjoyed the holidays, straightforwardly replied "I don't know. Ask somebody who was with me."

It is now the forty-sixth hour without rain and I do presently expect to hear that a new Quartermaster has been installed, the old one being relieved for negligence in conducting the precipitation.

A deal interested in reports of the Third Section turkey shoot and in special of the incident during which the turkey (with greater sagacity than he is commonly accorded) did fly directly at Captain Trechter. The cheer leader had forgot his own sage counsel to us but a few weeks back and had neglected his BDA. The gun was not loaded! A colleague shouted "Don't shoot. The gun's not loaded." To which the cheer leader did reply as he threw the piece to his shoulder, "Can't help it. The bird won't wait." BDA is good stuff for even after loading the piece refused to respond while the safety lock was on.

Red Reeder exceeding elated over the newfound possibilities of his hunting dog, Frank, which did without coaching come to a full point on a rabbit coat. Red foresees increased income from renting out Frank to shoppers for ermine coats to insure them against fraud.

Tuesday, January 3

Up very betimes as if greatly refreshed by the happenings of the past week.

Major Tuffy Easley is with us again this time (and quite appropriately) as the head man in a subject whose main characteristic is throwing. I doubt not that we shall all enjoy the course in grenades, it is so short. In his preliminary throwing the Major announced that after this course we should be free of the Rifle committee and might with impunity toss up our hats and cheer. I do feel that such sentiment shall not be mine for, Lord, who then will there be to laugh at.

So impressed with and enthused over the bayonet instruction by Growler Maertens that I did at home later spend upwards of an hour practicing facial expression before a mirror, ferocity of countenance. or as I heard one student phrase it "the facial stance," being the keynote of the training.

Wednesday, January 4

Urgently exhorted by Tuffy to improve our form in grenade throwing for, said he, form is the greatest factor the same as in golf and (added Giddings sotto voce) the Vanities.

At some loss to explain the ready laughter which followed the Major's story about the hippotamus for, Lord, the last time I did attempt that story for a group of students my only response was a request to "Please pass the salt."

Off Hand Observations

By McGoofus

By McGoofus

As was to be expected, there are many stories told of long and fast drives (automobile) made during the holidays. Dickerson is reputed to have made it from Miami to Columbus in one day between the hours of 5:00 am and 9:00 pm. Ramsey drove from New Orleans to Benning in about the same time.

In driving through the south, one can hardly fail to notice the comeback which the horse and mules are making as a means of transportation. Low prices for farm products and high priced gasoline explain this.

Buggies and saddles have been dug out of storage and put back into use. The younger generation knew these only as museum pieces. The latest thing in animal-drawn transportation is a sort of sulky made by fastening shafts and a seat to the axle and wheels of a discarded automobile. Ten of these were counted on the road in one day.

Arthur Brisbane would attach great significance to the farmers converting the car which they bought in good times into what, not so long ago, was considered an outmodel means of travel.

It does us good to get out occasionally and see, first-hand, what our civilian friends are doing and thinking.

TOWN TOPICS

Your columnist wishes you a very happy New Year.

A most novel New Year's greeting was the one which prisoners in New York's crowded alimony jail sent out to their wives.

"We wish the little woman a happy New Year—and wish she were here."

With the passing of 1932. it is reported that there is a nationwide state of mind of "feeling better." Call it blind American optimism if you will, but there is no getting around the fact that it is a feeling which may do a lot to eradicate existing economic evils and bring about better days.

After all, what we downtrodden victims of depression need more than anything else is a little confidence, and confidence in one's own ability, in the ability of others, has yet to spring from pessimism. Pessimism is a depressant, optimism a tonic.

Bewildered and puzzled inhabitants of the planet Earth will be relieved to know that the terrifying theory propounded by the distinguished scienists Eddington and Jeans to the effect that the universe is running down is very likely at fault. Richard C. Tolma, California Institute of Technology, is reassuring on the point involved.

Our universe, too, has its cycle, its periods of deflation and inflation. Tolman aptly compares the cosmos to a drunken man. It booms along for a while and then deflates. But like the drunk, who seems to be guided by the hand of Providence, it keeps on going and will continue to do so.

The New Year's night celebration at the Officers' Club ushered in 1933 very auspiciously. Your columnist was amazed, on entering the club near the zero hour last Saturday night, to see dignified and austere majors and colonels cavorting with abandon on the dance floor, uttering unseemly noises, and acting for all the world like ten-year olds.

"O Mores, O, Tempora!" He was almost afraid to sit down for fear one of the aforementioned majors or colonels had surreptiously placed a tack on his chair and was fiendishly awaiting nearby for the inevitable outcome.

The floor was so crowded that, during the supper hour, the management

Where polo acquired the reputation of being a game for tea-balancers and coffee-coolers is a mystery. It must take more than social ambition to make a man spend his sunday mornings batting a ball about a cage and his afternoons pulling a horse around a muddy field. What is more, polo players take risks that would make the hardiest football player think twice. Just the other day, poloist Jack Griffith took a spill which must have been no picnic but the chances are that he will be at it again as soon as he is able to climb aboard a pony. They deserve whatever tea and cookies they get.

ADVANCED CLASS RODEO

Half a league,
Half a league,
Half a league—onward!

Echoes from the last pre-Christmas mounted terrain exercise of the Advanced Class bridged the holiday gap and are still reverberating throughout the Academic Area. If Explorer Chance were a distinguished poet like Tennyson instead of being merely a distinguished historian, monographer and deep sea fisherman, he would have produced, long since, an epic, ballad, or at least a sonnet immortalizing the memorable event. As it is his colorful prose version is a classic of sorts—worthy to be cast in the eternal type of the Flare for the fact that seventy per cent of it is unprintable.

As we get the story from many sources, the Advanced Class having solved the day's problem, was informed that members could ride back individually to the point where the horses were to be turned over to the orderlies. The day was raw, some of the horses had been recently clipped, and all were impatient and restless from hours of standing around in the cold. The signal to return individually was, in effect, a command to charge. The noble one hundred set off at a gallop, stringing over the terrain behind the leaders—down hill, through brush, and over ditches.

Balaclava lived anew in the wild ride which followed and the historical parallel was given added reality as saddles were emptied and elderly Majors and captains went down as though before whiffs of invisible canister.

The route traversed part of the drag hunt area and here the Light Brigade found jumps to the right of them, jumps to the left of them, and, when lucky, jumps behind them. The cannon of the famed Tennyson poem could scarcely have been more effective in dismounting the riders.

Space does not permit us to give a complete casualty list but we cannot pass on to other themes without touching upon a few incidents of the famous ride.

Captain Caygill, upon finding himself unexpectedly confronting one of the drag hunt jumps, failed to coordiate his idea as to how it ought to be taken with that of the horse. In the resulting melee the rider ended up astride the jump in a jarred and bewildered condition. out of which he beheld, as through a haze two riderless horses bounding ahead in stirrup to stirrup formation. The sight almost convinced the confused captain that he must have been doing a bit of Roman riding, but this delusion was dispelled when he looked behind him and discovered Captain Rennagel, also afoot. After all it was Benning, not the Circus Maximus.

Another incident worthy of commemoration concerns Captain Cooper. This caballero had struggled with his horse all afternoon and by the time the mounted charge was staged he was jollywell fed up with his company. Our war correspondent reports that Centaur Cooper, suddenly dismounting, —whether voluntarily or involuntarily, deponent could not say for certain— loosed upon his beast a flood of invective that would have done credit to a veteran muleskinner. "You blankety blank so and so", he shouted. I've ridden you as long as I'm going to". Whereupon he planted a well aimed boot quite high on the rump for a man with short legs and sent the horse flying off in the general direction of the stables.

Captain Cooper was quite a way from home but he probably had it figured out correctly that the net wear and tear would be less if he came in afoot.

"Then they rode back
But not—not the six hundred."

BACKGROUND TO ORDER

For two years Captain Two-Gun-Tige Phillips has been touring the provinces with a lecture on the situation in the Far East. The Captain's address has come in for a lot of favorable press comment. One thing that is responsible in part for its popularity is its timeliness. Every time Lecturer Phillips takes it on the road, the Japanese stage a new demonstration of some kind to remind the nervous world that China and Japan are playig with matches in a power magazine.

Simultaneously with Lecturer Phillips' departure last Wednesday on his midwinter Chautauqua tour, the Far Eastern situation flared in the headlines. Luncheon club and after dinner America is thereby made conscious of the existence of such out of the ordinary geographical names as Jehol, Shanhaikuan, and Chinwangtao, and the stage is all set for the Captain's forthcoming address. In the present instance, the scenic effect is especially appropriate, for Lecturer Phillips has been all over the most recently disturbed area.

This sort of thing has happened so often that we are beginning to suspect collusion. The fact that Captain Phillips is personally acquainted with a number of high ranking Japanese officers lends color to the suspicion. Moreover, it would not be hard to believe that the Japanese, in the absence of a better excuse. might be quite willing to take another fall out of China just to accommodate a friend.

WARM PARTY

We missed Mine Host Dowdall's Christmas dance ceremony of bringing in the Yule Log but we understand it was a great success. The Infantry School Hunt with pink coats, baying pack and everything, brought in the log to the tune of "A Hunting We Will Go," and other lilting airs.

While the log was being lifted into place—a bit of heavy work which fell to the lot of Artillerymen Arch Arnold and Sir Sidney Negrotto, big, strong, silent men, both—Commander Brett stood by holding aloft the flaming torch with which to light it—making a fairly successful effort the while to look like the masculine prototype of Liberty enlightening the world. It was a picturesque and inspiring tableau, reflecting great credit to Mine Host Dowdall's genius for showmanship but it nearly resulted in disaster when the commander's torch singed the whiskers of

Two New Troop School Courses To Begin Here

Two troop school courses, entirely separate from the courses conducted by academic department of The Infantry School, will begin at Fort Benning, on Tuesday.

A mess management course of approximately one month's duration opened with a class of officers representing post headquarters, 29th Infantry, the 83rd Field Artillery, and 7th Engineers. Captain Phillip T. Fry, Infantry, and 1st Lieutenant Glenn B. McConnell, 83rd Field Artillery were named as instructors.

Those composing the class are Lieut. Harry G. Dowdall, headquarters staff; Captain John J. Albright, John A. Otto, George J. Forster, and Morriss B. DePass, jr., and Lieutenants Carl F. Duffner, James D. Sams, Sidney G. Brown, jr., Milton H. Pressley, jr., Anthony S. Howe, Julian M. Chappell, John M. Brown, Augustus W. Dannemiller, Glenn A. Farris, Robert D. Johnston, Charles N. Howze, Ernest F. Easterbrook, Edward K. Purnell, Charles L. Decker, Joseph B. Coolidge, Joseph K. Dickey, Eugene L. Brown, and Houston F. Houser, jr., all of the 29th Infantry; Lieutenants Charles E. N. Howard, John R. Beishline, 83rd Field Artillery; and Lieut. Stephen R. Hanmer, 7th Engineers.

A school for stable sergeants, stable orderlies, and candidates for stable sergeant, whose course will include studies of the treatment of minor injuries, and diseases of animals, was also started on Tuesday, by Lieutenant Colonel Burton A. Seeley, Veterinary Corps. This course will be in progress until March 1, and the class composed of stable sergeants of al mounted organizations, stable orderlies, and other selected men.

Regimental Personnel Sections Are Disbanded

The disbandment of the personnel section of the 9th Infantry was effected on Tuesday, when all company clerks were sent back to their companies, and all personnel records of enlisted men were transferred to the custody of the various company commanders.

Lieutenant George P. Howell, who has been personnel adjutant of the 29th Infantry, has been relieved from that office and announced as assistant adjutant.

Other units at Fort Benning are completing the transfer of personnel records to companies in compliance with the recent war department order which abolishes the regimental personnel office. The order is designed to reduce paper work and simplify administrative overhead.

Medicos' Mess Noses Out Special Units In December

The mess of the Fort Benning station hospital edged the Special Units mess out of first place in the monthly competitive inspection conducted by Major Homer L. Connor, medical inspector, for the month of December. The Special Units mess, until recently, had maintained an unbroken record of leadership in theinspection scale for a year.

Benning Again Extending Aid To Needy Persons

Upon the arrival of the shipment of clothing consigned to the adjutant general of the state of Florida a few days ago, Fort Benning's participation in the army's movement to extend aid to the needy and destitute entered into its second calendar year.

The army's present movement toward assisting in the alleviation of distress by the utilization of salvaged and surplus clothing, and other articles which could be usefully employed for the purpose, was initiated early last year, when large numbers of cots and blankets were loaned to responsible welfare agencies, and quantities of articles of clothing were sold to them at nominal prices fixed by the war department.

Fort Benning, as the largest military post in the southeastern United States, was selected as one of the depots from which the supplies were to be distributed, and since the first shipments were made last year, large numbers of articles of clothing, such as coats, breeches, shoes, underwear, socks, overcoats, and other articles have been shipped to the representatives of the welfare agencies designated by the governors of several southern states. These agencies, after altering the garments to remove their distinctiveness as uniform clothing, distribute them free of charge to the needy of their regions.

"Bob" Birdsong Returns To Post Early In June

The many friends of Pvt. Robert Birdson, formerly of Company E, 29th Infantry, but now a member of Company F, 15th Infantry, stationed at Tientsin, China, will learn with pleasure that Bob will be with us at Benning, early in June.

According to a letter just received from this youngster, he is yearning for Fort Benning and the "olde gang," again. He writes that China is okay but that the U. S., is the one and only place and further states that for the man in the service that there is no place like the Upatoi Station.

Bob stated in his letter that he would like very much to rejoin Company E, 29th Infantry, when he returned. It would probably be a nice feeling for him if he knew that "Top-kick Hi" Davis seemed pleased to learn that Bob had a hankering for the same old outfit, in fact Hi, kinder put on one of his easy going smiles as he stated that he would be glad to have the wander back again.

Classy Clothes Shop Is Open In New Location

The Classy Clothes Shop, one of the most popular clothing stores of Columbus is reopening in its new location on Broadway. The new building is setting an example for convenience and beauty in that city.

The management has expressed its pleasure at the splendid cooperation the company has received from the Benning personnel, and the belief that this cooperation has been largely instrumental in the former success of the firm. All its customers and friends are invited to the formal opening of the store, which will take place today.

The Classy Clothes Shop has built up a considerable reputation for the quality and economy of the merchandise it sells and the managers announce that they will continue the policy, in the future, which has won them so many friends in the past.

Curtain Rings Down On Post Athletic Events of 1932; Future Encouraging

By JACK GIBNEY

The outlook for the athletic year at Fort Benning in 1933 is extremely bright, as regards the quality of competition, and the number of sports to be indulged in. A number of first class players in all sports will make their debut at The Infantry School, many of them from colleges and high schools throughout the south who have entered into army competition via the recruiting officer.

Captain Phillip T. Fry, post athletic officer, has laid plans to furnish fans of fistiana with two cards of the highest quality each month. The rise of Corn Griffin to fame in the squared circle, and the tried and proven ability of Cyclone Smith is sure to bring the cream of southern boxers to the post sometime during the year, as both of these boys are serious barriers to any leather pusher with championship ambitions, in the light-heavy class. Cotton Batton, southern colored middleweight champion, is to get his final test before he trys the calibre of national championship competition when he meets Gorilla Jones in the first outdoor show at Benning. Chick Liddell, Blondy Parker, Rip Tetherton, Young Griffin, and other up and coming youngsters are also to show their wares in their climb up the ladder.

Baseball promises one of the best seasons seen here, and Dame Rumor whispers that several of the latest recruits are from Class B professional leagues, and quite a number from ranking college and high school aggregations. Last year's veterans are all present, and much is looked for when the fungo bat comes out of the mothballs.

Amateur boxing is at present holding the lime-light at the University on the Upatoi. Approximately 150 Simon Pures from the different organizations of the station are rounding into shape for the coming tournament in February, the winners of which will compose the Benning team that will meet the leading southern amateur boxers in the Southeastern Tournament in Atlanta, March 15, 16, 17.

The new golf course has developed into one of the finest links in the south, and many of the officers of the garrison are ranked among the leaders in Army golf circles.

Tennis, as always, is going to be one of the most popular sports for the individual, and teams equal to, if not better than, those of the past are expected to display their wares during the coming year. The apperance of "Big Bill" Tilden, with his troop of professionals, among which were several of the European champions, did more to heighten the interest in Benning than almost any single factor. In addition to the matches held by the Officers' Club, the enlisted men of the post have shown a liking for the game, and a tournament held in the 2d Battalion, 29th Infantry, brought more than 33 soldier contestants into action. Especially is this fact notable, when it is considered that tennis, to the soldier, is comparatively new, and it is hoped that the spring of 1933 will find the boys out in greater numbers than last year.

One of the newest sports that is breaking the ice at the post is the time-honored game of the English public school; soccer. It is a game that soldiers enjoy, and the degree of skill that has been achieved in one year can only be realized by witnessing one of the closely fought games. This year another post league, with more teams entered, and stiffer competition to be met.

Polo will continue till the 1st of March. Four teams are fighting it out for post honors, and will give many thrilling exhibitions of riding and sport during the rest of the winter months.

Altogether, it looks like a year of
