Baptist Church Holds Services in Spanish

BY SGT. CAROL AUBIN

Spanish-speaking protestants have been asked to attend special religious services held weekly in the Columbus-Fort Benning area.

Saturday evening worship services are held at 7:30 at the Benning Park Baptist Church (3601 Youmans St., Columbus), and Sunday at 10:45 a.m. at the Religious Education Center, Bldg. 2611, on post. These services are conducted by Reverend A. J. Silva from Atlanta.

Sunday school classes are held Sundays at 9:30 a.m. in Bldg. 2611. On Thursdays at 7:30 p.m. Bible study classes are held at the Benning Park Baptist Church.

According to SFC Raul Garcia, secretary of the Spanish speaking congregation, and a liaison between the civilian and military community, an average of 50 people attend the weekly services.

"Of course, with 50 per cent of the congregation military people, it naturally fluctuates," Garcia said.

Garcia, noncommissioned officer-in-charge of the property book division; the Candidate Brigade, explained, "We assist those Spanish speaking members of the military who are new to the Columbus area. When they first arrive, many are unable to communicate very well because their English is limited. We are there to help these people. If they want assistance of any kind, for themselves or their families, they may call me at any time."

Garcia's duty phone number if 545-5561. After duty hours he may be reached at 689-1756.

For Two Weeks Training

Four Reserve Units To Arrive in August

By Bill Hardin

Four United States Army Reserve (USAR) units will conduct two weeks of annual active duty training at Fort Benning during the month of August.

The units follow 13 others from the Southeastern states and Puerto Rico which conducted training here in June and July.

In addition to the Reserve units training here this month, two USAR schools each will conduct classes for two weeks in the Infantry Officer Advanced course for officers from across the entire country. Two similiar schools were here in July.

First to arrive will be the 833rd Adjutant General Company (Personnel Services) of Panama City, Fla. Training dates for this unit are August 3-16.

The 3273rd U. S. Army Hospital (Augmented) of Greenville, S. C., and the 128th Medical Hospital (Surgical) (Special Reserve Forces) of Tuskegee, Ala., will train here starting Aug. 10.

The 3396th Reception Station of Gainsville, Fla., begins a two-week stay here Aug. 24. The unit is scheduled to conclude active duty Sept. 6.

Chaplains Celebrate 194th Year

Fort Benning chaplains, along with a number of commanders here, attended a luncheon July 29 at the Fort Benning Officers Club.

Honored guests at the luncheon, held to mark the 194th anniversary of the U.S. Army Corps of Chaplains, included: Maj. Gen. George I. Forsythe, commanding general of the U.S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning; Col. Jim D. Kerisey, chief of staff; and Chaplain (Col.) James B. Murphy, Third U.S. Army chaplain.

Also Chaplain (Col.) Richard R. Bell, Third Army acting deputy chaplain, and Chaplain (Col. ret.) Gynther Storaasli, former Fort Benning chaplain.

Chaplain (Col.) Holland Hope, U.S. Army Infantry Center chaplain, welcomed the guests and presented a program depicting the work of Infantry Center chaplains.

Cameramen Make Airborne Film

The cameraman, Peter Voutsas, panned the 16mm color camera slowly across the field, capturing the airborne towers; tower committee buildigs and the sweaty trainees who were his subjects.

Director Pat Faye, watching closely, gave the word "cut," and the crew whisked the camera away to another part of the field for the next scene.

Assistant cameraman Jerry Calicchio brought over the huge umbrella to shade the camera lens from the late morning sun and the film ran as the airborne trainees went through their paces.

For the last three weeks, these men have been making a film on airborne training, from start to finish. The film, to be used for training and recruiting, is being produced by Steven Bastle for the Army Pictorial Center.

Between July 9 and Aug. 5, 10,000 feet of film was shot, about 10 hours running time. This footage will be cut and edited and the film will be ready for viewing in about three months.

The actors are all soldiers. The main characters are airborne instructors posing as trainees. Everyone who participates in the training program is in the film, including Col. Lamar A. Welch, director of the Airborne Department, USAIS.

Capt. Homer Krout and Lt. Paul Gleason of the Technical Operations Department, USAIS, are technical advisors for the film crew.

According to director Faye, "They are doing a great job." He says, "This is the best Army directing job I've had. I have complete confidence in the technical advisors.

Faye, who lives in Clearwater, Fla., has worked in television and motion pictures since 1947. He is a charter member of the Radio and Television Directors Guild and has directed such shows as "The Bishop Sheen Show" and "The Confession" series.

The airborne film is the fourth he has directed at Fort Benning in the last six months. He is also scheduled to direct a film on Pathfinder training while at Fort Benning.

AF Cadets Go 'Airborne' All the Way

The third and final group of U. S. Air Force Academy cadets to train here this summer, graduated yesterday from the Infantry School's basic airborne course.

The 142 cadets, as their classmates did, sacrificed three weeks of summer leave in order to attend the course.

Sculpture Contest Set For Arts, Crafts Week

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Soldiers with an artistic bent for sculpture will have a golden opportunity to demonstrate their creative efforts during the 1969 Army Arts and Crafts Week.

The week will be conducted at Army installations from Aug. 15 through Dec. 15.

This year's theme, "Today's Army Symbolized in Sculpture," encourages participants to create sculptures which depict Army life, tradition and missions and have special significance for the artist's home installation.

The Department of the Army will conduct Army-wide competition to select the three most outstanding sculpture designs submitted.

Evaluation criteria to be used by a panel of sculptors and craftsmen are: significance, impact suitability, originality and craftsmanship.

'Doughboy' Memorabilia Given to Post Museum

By Marian Jones

A battered suitcase containing World War I memorabilia has been donated to the Infantry Museum at Fort Benning by the Goodwill Industries of the Chattahoochee Valley.

Surrounded by an air of mystery, the suitcase contains the typical World War I uniform; dog tags, gas mask, pay book, canteen, steel helmet and sewing kit—everything to make the "doughboy" Image complete, including souvenir postcards from France.

The suitcase and its contents were discovered by the people at Goodwill when they were sorting through some donations brought in by one of their trucks.

According to records found in the suitcase, the soldier, Pvt. Walter L. Perryman, 712888, was a member of the 248th Aero Squadron. He entered the Army on Dec. 13, 1917 in Atlanta at the age of 22.

However, why the suitcase suddenly appeared in a Goodwill receptacle is unknown.

GUN IN HEAVEN . . . Barbara Hershey, as an Indian girl, cannot understand Glenn Ford's refusal to permit her to share his lodgings in MGM's "Heaven With a Gun," in which Ford portrays a gunslinger who trades his six-shooter for the gospel. The movie will first appear at Fort Benning Aug. 17.

Sellers To Act In 'Thief' Show

NEW YORK — He just happened to be there and Robert Wagner just happens to know him, so "Who'll Bid Two Million Dollars?" one of the new fall episodes which will be seen on ABC-TV's "It Takes A Thief," enjoyed the comic talents of one of the world's greatest: Peter Sellers.

Peter and his yacht were staying at Porte Ercole on the resort peninsula of Monte Argentario off Italy's western seacoast, where the adventure was being shot, when Bob got wind of it and called Peter.

Next day in Porte Ercole Peter Sellers broke up the crew and a handful of spectators doing his thing as a clerk in a maritime office scene.

The popular ABC-TV color series, which moves to its new Thursday night time period beginning Aug. 21 (10-11 p.m., EDT), is filming several new season's episodes this summer in the exotic splendor of such Italian places as Capri, Rome, Venice and Monte Argentario.

Hobbies Occupy Off-Duty Time

By 2nd Lt. James Hopson

Hobbies ranging from repairing old clocks to real estate speculation occupy the off-duty time of the men of the electronics committee of the U.S. Army Infantry School's Communication - Electronic Department.

An informal poll taken in the committee shows that the 15 men questioned shared 34 hobbies. Most of the men enjoy "normal" activities such as swimming, fishing, hunting and bowling.

Others, however, pursue such diverse avocations as cutting and polishing semi-precious stones (those who practice this skill are called "lapidaries"), writing poetry, locksmithing, ceramics and hunting mountain lions.

SSgt. Robert J. Fuller III made earrings, pendants and other jewelry from semi-precious stones before entering the service.

"We'd buy semi-precious stone in sheet form and cut it into the shapes we wanted, and then polish it," he said. "First we would buy a setting and cut the stone to fit it.

"One of the prettiest stones to work with is opal. As you turn the stone around, you see different colored reflections from the light," Fuller said.

Fuller also writes poetry. He said he started writing in high school and still writes occasionally when the mood strikes him.

SSgt. Marvin J. Bilka and his wife mold and paint ceramic pottery. Using molds from the Special Services craft shop, they form liquified clay into figurines, cups and dishes. They paint the "greens" pottery at home and return it to the craft shop to be kiln fired.

"Right now I am working on a 19-piece Nativity set," he said.

Others in the electronics committee who have unusual interests are CWO William C. Henke, who collects and repairs old clocks, and MSgt. Raymond J. Eubank, who is a locksmith.

Witty Hodge Conducts Post Self-Help Class

By Marian Jones

He has the dexterity of a magician, the zest of a Billy Graham and the ready wit of a Jackie Gleason.

M. M. Hodge is in his element each Thursday afternoon as he conducts the self-help classes of the Fort Benning Office of Engineers.

There is a post regulation which states that one adult member of any family moving on post must attend a two-hour class at the self-help school in Building 1819 on Laughlin Rd. within two weeks after signing for quarters.

Creating interest and enthusiasm in this type of audience is not one of the world's easiest jobs.

However, Hodge, chief of the Engineer consolidated schools, by using verve, wit and easy understanding, is able to charm his disinterested audience into forgetting to be bored.

Amid the laughter, they are absorbing well-organized instructions on how to properly maintain Army quarters by listening to advice on such subjects as caring for floors, relighting pilot lights on kitchen ranges, defrosting refrigerators, maintaing air conditioning units, operating thermostats and what not to put into garbage disposals.

He intentionally starts a fire by overloading a circuit and demonstrates how to open a locked door with aid of a pocket knife. After the latter demonstration he is quick to point out to the uneasy ladies in the audience that this method works only with inside doors.

As the students file out of the classroom, they are handed their "diplomas" — a necessity for do-it-yourselfers — a "plumbers' helper."

In addition to the classes for families, there are classes required for those who will maintain kitchen equipment in the post messhalls and classes on fire prevention and troop self-help.

Displays of the actual equipment used in familiarizing troops housing and mess halls are set up in the gymnasium by a representative of the manufacturer.

The self-help program is only part of the over-all picture of self-help devices offered by the Engineer office.

Through this program, begun here in 1958, occupants of family quarters and barracks may make minor repairs on their own.

This saves time and money for the engineers and enables the occupant to make the necessary repairs without having to wait for help.

Thus, engineering manpower is left free to do the more necessary and technical jobs.

Known nationwide, the Infantry Center self-help school frequently receives requests for lesson outlines, self-help regulations and pictures of training aids from other military installations.

Some examples of what the engineers mean when they say "minor repairs" in family quarters are replacing air conditioner filters, blown fuses and light bulbs as well as repairing leaky faucets. The necessary materials may be secured in Bldg. 408.

Troops may replace window sashes, window panes and doors and may lay tile. USAIC regulation 420-24 provides information as to the correct forms to be used and procedures to be followed when requesting materials.

According to Hodge, the Fort Benning self help program is successful due to the fact that it "offers the solution thereby eliminating the problem."

'Timmy the Tiger'

Officer's Book Tries To Relate To What Children See

By 2nd Lt. James Hopson

Infantry 2nd Lt. Gary L. Kupsak wrote a children's book because he felt that most literature directed at primary grade children does not relate to what the youngsters see around them.

Kupsak, who works in the evaluation division of the office of the U.S. Army Infantry School's director of instruction, says visits to grandma's farm and frolics on the lawn with Spot have no meaning to the child of urban America, whose world is not peaceful and pastoral, but rather the clamorous concrete big city.

Often grandma lives in an apartment house and the dogs the children see ride in the backs of police cars. The faces that city kids see are the black and yellow and red faces of all races, he said.

Kupsak included some of these realities in his book.

He wrote the book, "Timmy the Tiger," as part of his graduate work in educational psychology at Northwestern University in Chicago. His home is also in Chicago.

"I was interested in books geared to a child's level on topics that are not usually dealt with in children's books," Kupsak said. "Most children's books do not deal with controversial subjects—for example race relations."

"I wrote the book to explain to children that there are different kinds of people in the world and they must get along with all of them," Kupsak explained.

Briefly, the book is written from a tiger-s-eye-view. Timmy the Tiger was born in the jungle and lived among dark-skinned people. His white captors took him to an American zoo. He resented being uprooted from familiar people and surroundings and hated white men as a result.

Through the friendship of a white keeper, the resentment cooled. His observation of the pleasure he gave those who came to see him altered his outlook toward people of all colors and he found he was happier in the zoo than he was in his jungle home.

The book "shows that people can live together," he said. "And in order to be truly happy one must accept people as they are and get along with them."

A great deal of time and research went into the writing of the slim volume.

"I spent several days at three midwest zoos, observing how people react to different types of animals, especially in the cat family. And I took note of the type of people who came to zoos."

He studied other children's books to see how they dealt with controversial topics.

Several interested professors aided Kupsak in tailoring the book's language and thoughts to a child's level and an art student friend provided the illustrations.

After eight months of effort, the manuscript was accepted for publication by the combined North western University-University of Chicago press.

He confided that, although sales have been a little disappointing, "There are not too many bigger thrills than to work on something and see it published.

Renovators of Barracks Find Battle Scene Drawn on Old Wall

FORT GORDON, Ga. — The private liked to draw. A lot of privates do. But it was where this private drew and when that makes him a little bit different, a little bit special.

Pvt. Anthony Maniaci was stationed with the 12th regiment of the 4th Infantry Division at old Camp Gordon in 1942. He live in barracks located on 29th St. between Provost and 10th Armored Division Road.

Six months ago, those same barracks were being renovated — new walls, new plumbing, new this, new that — and when the old walls came tumbling down, a worker with a watchful eye noticed something different about one of the inner layers, long since plastered over.

On a section 10 feet long and 6 feet wide, there were drawings — C-47s, P-38s, and P-29s swooping overhead, paratroopers dropping through enemy fire, infantryman scrambling down below. In the lower right hand corner of the wall, Anthony Maniaci signed his name, his company and the year.

Gordon Turner of the Center Museum was called in to examine the drawings. He discovered that Maniaci had been with the "Ivy Division" that went on to become one of the famed fighting units of World War II.

The intervening years had taken its toll of the drawings. There were holes where nails secured newer partitions had been hammered. And time had dimmed the markings.

But there was history on the wall, and so Turner enlisted the assistance of Training Aids in restoring the find.

On Aug. 2, when the Ivy Division returns to Fort Gordon for its annual reunion, the mural will be displayed at the museum for the first time. It will then be placed on permanent display.

The Fourth Division was the first American combat forces to hit the beaches of Normandy on D-Day. They were the first allied troops to enter Paris during the liberation. They fought the war's bloodiest battle—in Germany's Hurtgen Forrest. And they were combat trained at Ft. Gordon.

Wheelis Wins Infantry Center Golf Tournament

By PFC Bob Vargas

Steve Wheelis, a second place finisher last year and now golf champion of Fort Benning for 1969 also won medalist honors at the 1969 U. S. Army Infantry Center golf tournament held at the Fort Benning Officer's country club, July 29-Aug. 4.

Wheelis was the low score medalist for 72 holes and the Championship flight winner with third and fourth round scores of 74 and 73, respectively. The flight champions were determined on the third and fourth round scores.

He won medalist honors by posting a 289 72-hole total.

His golfing career started in Jacksboro, Tex., where he began playing in the summer of 1958. He played golf well enough in high school to earn a golf scholarship to Texas Christian University, (TCU) where he was the number one man during his junior and senior years. He graduated from TCU with a BA in Business Administration. Asked if he intended to play in the Professional Golfers Association tour, he replied. "Thats a hard road, and if I'm good enough I'll take a crack at it, but I will remain with the game in one form or another."

Steve has played with some of the top names in the tour including Don Januery, Don Massengale and Hugh Royer.

During an invitational golf tournament in Decatur, Tex. on the 154h hole, par 5 he made a hole-in-two. Steve said, "everyone lives a hole-in-one but a hole-in-two is pretty unusual. After I teed off on the 15th fairway I found my ball and hit it. Anticipating a third shot, I couldn't find my ball and finally found it in the cup."

"Wheelis attributed part of his victory to the excellent condition of the fairways and greens, which are kept in the best of condition by greens superintendent, Lester Lawrence, and his crew.

Wheelis will be part of the team that will represent Fort Benning at the Third U. S. Army Golf Championship to be held at Fort Bragg, N. C., Aug. 11-15.

In the men's senior division, Thomas Brown, was the winner, by one stroke over Robert Hall, last year's senior winner, he posted a 327 total.

Selected to represent Fort Benning at the Third Army tournament were: Thomas Brown, Robert Hall in the men's seniors and Steve Wheelis, John Wordell, John Harkins, Charles Bridwell in the men's open division.

Last year's Benning team took the Third Army crown at Fort Rucker Ala. and will be defer its title this year.

The scores of the tournament are as follows.

The men's open division championship flight — 1, Steve Wheelis, 70, 72, 74, 73—289. 2, Daniel Scott, 74, 73, 75, 76—298. 3, John Wordell, 76, 76, 79, 77—307. 4, John Harkins, 78, 73, 79, 79—309. 5, Charles Bridwell, 78, 77, 75, 82—312. ROD AND GUN CLUB NOTES

By Bill Kloeb

CWO (ret.) Charles Webb caught an eight-pound four-ounce catfish at Victory Pond July 31 to win the catfish category of the July Fishing Derby. He was fishing with a rod and reel and using beef chunks for bait. The nine-pound four-ounce bass caught by Peter Swiderdk early in the month held up to win the bass contest. He caught the bass at Harp Pond on July 4. S-Sgt. Bobby McCarter became a winner for the second straight month with the one-pound eleven-ounce bream he caught at King's Pond July 27.

The August Derby got underway early with a seven-pound eight-ounce bass entry caught by Peter Swiderdk at Harp Pond Aug. 2. He was using a rod and reel and a purple plastic worm. Capt. Lawrence Glover, 27th Co., The School Brigade is leading the catfish contest with a three-pound four-ounce catch from King's Pond. He was using a rod and reel and shad as bait.

Both the early and late dove seasons have been announced for Georgia and Alabama. The Georgia early season will open at noon Eastern Standard Daylight Saving time Sept. 2 and run to sundown Oct. 4. The late season extends from noon Central Standard Time Dec. 20 to sundown Jan. 8.

Some hunters ask why the two states have split seasons. This has been a bone of contention between the hunters in the northern part of the states and those in the southern portion for some time with hunters in the central portions of the states literally in the middle.

The dove, a migratory bird, arrives in the northern part of the states first. Therefore the hunters in the northern part of the states want the season as early as possible so the birds are still in the area while the season is open. The doves don't arrive in the southern part of the states until later so the south wants the season to be scheduled as late as possible. The hunting in the central portion of the state suffers during both seasons. During the greatest part of the early season, the doves are still predominantly in northern parts of the state and the central hunters must be content with shooting local birds. By the time the late season rolls around most of the migratory birds have moved to the southern parts of the states.

It would appear that the solution would be to open the season in the various areas during the time that is best for the area but its not that simple. The dove is a migratory bird and the open season is controlled by the Federal Government. Georgia and Alabama are allowed approximately 70 days open season, usually between September and January. If any portion of the state is open on any day or days this counts against the entire state quota. So if the season were opened by section the overall number of hunting days would be drastically reduced for each region.

Of course each part of the state wants to have open season during the full quota allowed by the Federal Government. Under present laws there is only one way to do it — open the entire state for the entire season with each section taking the bitter with the better.

Racing Around

CHAVAGA Will Hold Slalom Rally Sunday

PUTTALS
By Snow Wilson

In any game you have to know the rules but it would seem that automobile racing rules should be pretty standard—but "taint" so.

So after visiting the Tri-County Speedway Friday night, I discovered just how little I knew about the roundy-rounds but thanks to the assorted relatives of Buddy Boswell who drives in the Hobby class I managed to find out what was happening.

And it was really happening that evening.

By the time the checkered flag dropped it was well after midnight. A spectacular four car crash had climaxed a series of smaller ones, two drivers and a crewman had been hauled off to the hospital and the main event was won almost by default.

They race two NASCAR classes called Hobby and Sportsman at Tri-County. The Hobby cars are limited to 210 or so cubes and a two barrel jug. The Sportsman are unlimited on cubes but can run only a single four barrel.

But, though the cars are not the prettiest in the world, their drivers manage to turn in some fairly decent times.

Tri-County is not the smoothest dirt track in the country but it's clay surface makes it almost as hard as asphalt and almost as dust free. It's come a long way, safety wise since last spring and the driver's tempers seemed to have cooled down a bit.

So if you are looking for an evening of racing close by take a drive out tonight but plan on making it a long evening. With rules such as the one saying in case of spin-outs all cars must revert to the positon they held at the time of the last green flag. With all the fender crunching going on a 30 la pevent can take quite a few hours.

But things never get too dull for the rugged men who manhandle the machinery are prone to get quite animated in their discussions on who bumped who coming out of the turn.

In the meantime sporty car people will be out in force this Sunday with a giant slalom behind the RC Cola plant on Victory Drive a piece of the area.

Drives a piece of the area.

THE FORUM
THE LOBOW

By Marc Reiff

One of the greatest basketball players of all times has departed the scene. Bill Russell, the mammoth center for the Boston Celtics has announced that he is retiring. By his own admission, he is turning down some quarter of a million dollars by not remaining in the game.

The desire has gone out of his game and as for coaching, who needs it? A coach on the sidelines can often spot some little weakness that can be easily corrected, but with Bill on the court the weaknesses turned into losses. The Celtics ended up in fourth place last year in their division and everyone counted them out. After all, who could beat the mighty Lakers, even if they had proven that they were not invincible. But Big Bill once again proved that defense is the name of the game. Perhaps the greatest defensive player of history, he has left his opposition in bewilderment.

The Lakers hit from the outside continuously—witness the scoring of Jerry West; but the inside was sewn up tighter than a drum. Russell dominated Chamberlain in all but a couple of the games and his presence demanded that the Lakers take the long shots. When Chamberlain went out with an injury in the last game, it was the end for the Lakers.

Russell goes out a winner, on top once again. Far too many fine players stay on past their prime and are only a hindrance to the team. Russell could probably play for a good many more years before anyone could call him over the hill but with the crop of big men coming up and the physical pounding he takes every game, why stay on? The center is the key to any good team and Russell is among the best. But his determination is gone and he knows sloppy play does no one any good. I do not think the Celtics will fold without Bill but it will be a good while before they win another championship or find anyone near as good as Russell.

N.L. Division Tighten Up

How about that Western Division race in the N.L.? Only two games separate the first five teams with only San Diego completely out of it. Cincinnati has the best hitting of perhaps all times and if the pitching comes through the remainder of the season, they could run away with the title. The 19-17 fiasco with the Phillies earlier this week proves that their pitching could use a little help. That's like saying the Titanic would have been alright if only that darned iceberg had stayed out of it's way.

Pitching is the mainstay of any club and the Reds just do not have it. But any time you can score 19 runs, it is a pretty safe bet that the game is yours. With hitters like Rose, Johnson, Perez, May and Beneh it is hard to be outhit.

Don't look now but is that the St. Louis Cards climbing up towards first? They are only 9½ games out but I wouldn't count them out yet. They are putting in a home stretch drive that could take them to the top. We have heard of the amazing Cubs, the more amazing Mets but the Cards have been silent. All they have been doing is winning.

The hitters are quiet except when the big run is needed, but they have been coming up with timely hits to win the games.

Greene is Look-Alike for Palmer

Bert Greene, a Georgia product, finished second in the Westchester Classic and looks to be a definite comer in pro golf. This was the world's richest tournament and he picked up $28,500 which is not bad for a couple day's work. His actions and movements on the course remind you of a younger Arnold Palmer. And like Palmer, he takes chances. With Frank Beard in the clubhouse with 275, Greene knew he must birdie the final hole to stay even. He went for the green in two but put his wood shot in the trap to the right. He ended up with a 20 foot putt but missed. Only 25 years old, he has a lot of time left for improving and in the future, do not be surprised to hear of the name Bert Greene in connection with the winning pots of other tournametns.

Lombardi Off to Winning Start With Washington

Vince Lombardi is making like a Messiah again, this time in Washington. Everyone knows of the power he held over the football world with his Green Bay Packers and now he is trying to build up the same winning tradition with the Redskins.

I do not think that anyone will underestimate the magnetism that seems to glow about his personage. It is quite possible that he is just the man to transform Washington into a winning ballclub. Last year they were 5-9 and had scored only 249 points to the opponents 358. The defense will have to undergo a transformation if they expect to topple Dallas this year.

Army Has Strong Team For National Matches

By Calvin Jensen

Several thousand civilian and military rifle and pistol enthusiasts from throughout the United States are converging on Camp Perry, Ohio, for the 1969 National Matches.

The matches divided into three categories; pistol, high power rifle and smallbore, will have in attendance some of the Army's finest shooters from the Marksmanship Training Unit, Ft. Benning.

Pistol favorites have to be SGM William Blankenship and SFC Robert Whitacre. Blankenship has been the National Pistol Champion six times, a feat duplicated by only two other people, former Army great Joe Benner and retired Detroit detective Harry Reeves. Blankenship will be trying to be the first person to win the crown seven times. He will have to dethrone Air Force's Maj. Franklin Green, present National champion.

Sergeant Whitacre has been runner-up several times during the National matches. He is a strong army shooter, consistently producing top scores.

The High Power Rifle category finds several shooters equal to the task. SFC James McQuien is a strongshooter, he showed his ability this spring by winning several matches during a western tour. S-Sgt. William Lee, who recently returned from Vietnam is a tough contender when he is on the mark.

Other Army hopefuls in both pistol and high power rifle include a host of new talented shooters, "tapped" at the conclusion of the All-Army matches. They have been training with the Army teams for the National Matches. All the men are products of the Army Marksmanship Training program within Army areas. They have felt the pressure of competition and have emerged as hard hitting competitors.

In the Smallbore events, Olympic medalist Maj. Lones Wigger and Lt. Dean Bahrman and M-Sgt. William Krilling would have to be given the edge. Both Wigger and Krilling are long tried experienced shooters. Bahrman recently traveled with the Army team to Europe and has blossomed into one of the Army's sure shots.

Though the All-Army teams have considerable talent and many hopefuls, no one is talking about the championships, at least not openly. The team members are going to let the scores speak for themselves.

Holds Distinguished International Shooters Badge

WAC Shooter Returns To Marksmanship Unit

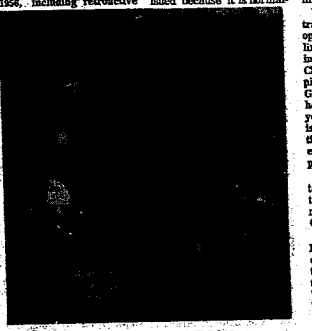
FT. MCCLELLAN, Ala.—In 1966 when the U.S. International Rifle Team asked permission to have a woman member on their team for the 1966 Shooting World Championships, the man in charge of the International Shooting Union thought it was a joke.

The United States team had won every event and was the undisputed champion in the rifle world. "Sure," he laughed, "if you want a woman on your team, go ahead and send one."

Capt. Margaret L. Thompson went with the team to Weisbaden, Germany, to compete in the major international marksmanship contest. On the first day of competition, Capt. Thompson captured the coveted Distinguished International Shooters Badge.

The badge is awarded by the United States to individuals taking first, second or third place in one of the three major marksmanship events. Only 110 awards of the badge have been made to members of the services and civilians since the badge was established in 1956, including retroactive awards dating back to the 1920's.

The badge is most cherished because it is normally so difficult to obtain, and can be received only once in an individual's lifetime.



MARGARET THOMPSON
Holds Distinguished Marksmanship Badge

In addition to the extraordinary skill required, opportunity is severely limited. The three qualifying events—the World Championships, the Olympics, and the Pan American Games—rotate. One is held each year for three years, and the fourth year is an off-year. Therefore, there are three chances every four years to compete for the badge.

"And most often the team-members selected for the major competitions already have the badge," Captain Thompson said.

The Olympics and the Pan American Games officially opened their doors to women on the rifle teams following Captain Thompson's success at the World Championships. In 1967 she became the first woman to win at the Pan American Games which were held in Canada.

The sharp-shooting captain just graduated from the WAC Officer Advanced Course and returned to the Marksmanship Training Unit, Ft. Benning, Ga.

"Our mission is to represent the United States in international competition, and the U.S. Army in national competition. We recruit, train and produce the best shooters, and develop better weapons. We make our weapons from scratch; each weapon is custom-made to the individual shooter," she said.

Capt. Thompson started shooting at the age of 11 as a member of the Junior Rifleman's Club in Topeka, Kan., sponsored by the National Rifleman's Association.

A pioneer in women's marksmanship, Capt. Thompson says: "You get real mad sometimes—being a pioneer. But I've had no battles with the Army. They took me with open arms. They accepted me as a member of the team, and that, I think, went a long way toward winning acceptance for women in the other counties."

Capt. Thompson is still the only WAC to wear the Distinguished International Shooter's Badge—but the door is open.

Army Team Wins Regional Shoot

The International Rifle team from the Marksmanship Training Unit, Ft. Benning, topped all competitors in the team matches and won both major aggregates during the Regional Championships, Baltimore, Maryland.

MSG. William Krilling, Lt. Dean Bahrman, Lt. William Rigby and Lt. Clifford Davis, combined their efforts in the four-man metallic sight team match to overcome the challenging All-National Guard team. Both Krilling, and Rigby produced top scores to lead the team to victory.

Rigby continued his torrid pace in the four-man Any Sight team match to lead his teammates Bahrman, Davis and Capt. James Krilich over the stubborn All-National Guard team. The Guard team set a new reserve record during the match.

Army's Krilling was out to win the match. He began by placing second in the prone portion of the metallic sight aggregate. He failed to place in the sitting portion but came back to win the kneeling and standing matches. This gave him a four point spread over his nearest competitor and the metallic sight aggregate.

Krilling, leading the pack of contenders for the championship, failed to place in the Any Sight Aggregate, giving him second in the Grand Championship.

Rigby took Krilling's place and won the Any Sight Aggregate and placed third behind Krilling in the over-all Championship.

Lt. Bahrman was the only other Army member to win any individual contests. He placed first in both prone portions of the metallic and any sight aggregates and first in the sitting portion of the Any-sight match.

Troop Command Wins Fast Pitch League

Center Troop Command won the first and second half titles to wrap up the championship in the Infantry Center Fast Pitch Softball League. The second half race was a tight one but in the last week of play Troop Command managed to out hit all rivals and stay in front.

The 10th Aviation Group was second with a record of 20 won-8 lost. The 197th Brigade who held second place until the last week faded and ended the half with a 19-11 record. Next came The Student Brigade with 15-5, the Army Training Center with a 6-22 record and Martin Army Hospital limped in with a 1-25 mark.

Archery Club Members Give Demonstration

Members of the Chattahoochee Archery Council of the Fort Benning Rod and Gun Club gave an archery demonstration to patients of Martin Army Hospital on the hospital grounds Wednesday evening.

Archery club members participating were; Bill Grinn, club president, Bill McWain, Roy Marshall and George Drake.

The demonstration, which lasted approximately 45 minutes included comedy skits and a narration by Guinn on the history of archery.

Thousands Benefit From Retired Activities Section

This is the second of a two-part series on Retired Activities Section. It deals with counseling of those who have already retired.

By Bill Hardin

Almost 6,000 retired members of the Armed Forces and almost 4,000 Armed Forces families in the Chattahoochee Valley area are aided by the Retired Activities Section, Personal Affairs Branch of the Adjutant General Section at Fort Benning.

Headed by Maj. Harold W. Spangler Jr., the office provides countless services for the men and women who have retired from active duty with the Army, and for their families as well.

These range from providing simple answers to questions via telephone and furnishing needed literature and forms to lengthy counseling sessions when required.

The needs of a retired member of the Army vary with the individual and from one family to another but whatever the need, the Retired Activities Section is able either to offer assistance directly or to direct the individual needing help to the proper person or agency.

Furnish Information

In response to requests, the section may furnish information concerning when it is correct and proper to wear the uniform following retirement or aid in making arrangements to procure assistance from the Veterans' Administration. It may help secure employment information or assistance in getting documents necessary for obtaining identification (ID) cards. The nature of the work requires employees who are versatile and highly qualified and who possess a dedication to "service."

"We assist in the computation of retired pay, give information necessary for conversion of government insurance policies, assist in arranging for participation in various types of education and training programs, explain privileges and rights and provide dozens of other services," Spangler said.

"To assist each person who comes into the office requires an average of 25 minutes. Naturally, some are taken care of and their problems completely solved in far less time; others require more. We set no time limit. We are interested in seeing that we do all that is possible in rendering our service," he said.

"Naturally, we receive more men than women here for our services, but there is a very high percentage of our time directed to women, especially to survivors, including dependent children, for educational assistance, ID cards, and special assistance for handicapped children," the major stated.

"With regard to the retired personnel we serve, the greatest number of people who come in are seeking retired pay and allotment information," Spangler said.

Reproduction of documents such as birth certificates, records of service, retirement orders, etc., is another example of services offered.

Services Offered

In connection with retirement orders, retired service members are urged to keep several copies, with other important documents, such as insurance policies, wills and deeds. If most copies have been used, Retired Activities will reproduce additional copies at no expense to the retiree.

Spangler says the one most important document to retired personnel and their dependents is the "Handbook on Retirement Services."

Reading copies are available in Retired Activities or personal copies may be ordered from the Bureau of Printing, Washington, D.C. 20315, for $1.75.

This document covers benefits ranging from correction or change of official records, pensions, military installation privileges, to survivor benefits for survivors of deceased retirees.

Major Cazantsis

MP Assignment Most Interesting To Greek

By Spc Mike Beck

Major George D. Cazantsis, a Greek officer studying in Infantry Officer Advanced Class 5-69, is an Infantry officer and has spent most of his career working with the Infantry. However, his most interesting assignment, he feels, was the three years he spent as the executive officer of a military police (MP) company in Athens, Greece.

The 37 year old major explained that the entire millitary unit was comprised of that one MP company. "Because it was an independent group," he said, "I had many and varied jobs and responsibilities. It was not a routine job."

The main purpose of the MP company was to keep Greek soldiers on leave to Athens out of trouble. To accomplish this, Major Cazantsis received special training in police work.

The company also had other "special" jobs. "Once at an exhibition, we had 13 people riding around on a motorcycle," he said.

A native of Mesologgi, Greece, Major Cazantsis was commissioned in 1955 after being graduated from the Greek Army Military Cadet School. He completed the Basic Infantry School in Greece before he began his first assignment as an Infantry instructor. He spent two years in Cyprus as the company commander in an Infantry regiment and one year working on the Army General Staff.

Another assignment Major Cazantsis once had was a position called officer in charge of Special Services. As he explained the job, it included the duties of a public information officer and a special services office. At the same time he was the assistant S-2 officer.

COMPUTER CORNER

By Bud Goode

Does baseball need a new statistic to replace the batting average?

Computer Corner says yes, and suggests that team batting average be replaced with a new statistic, B.E.T. (Batting Efficiency by Team).

If the purpose of the batting average is to predict your team's offensive ability and the number of runs they score, then B.E.T. is the better statistic.

Where batting average predicts runs with an accuracy of only 89%, the new B.E.T. stat predicts runs scored with an accuracy of 99%.

What is Batting Efficiency by Team? It is the total of three important percentages: 1) the percentage of batters who get on base; 2) the percentage of base runners who score; and 3) the percentage of hits which go for extra bases — a measure of power.

Which of the National and American League teams have the best batting efficiency as measured by this new B.E.T. figure? Computer Corner poured the season statistics (through games of July 15) into our Univac sports analyzer with these results:

AMERICAN LEAGUE

EAST	B.E.T.	WEST	B.E.T.
BOSTON	.825	MINNESOTA	.815
DETROIT	.781	OAKLAND	.803
BALTIMORE	.783	SEATTLE	.765
WASHINGTON	.772	CHICAGO	.783
NEW YORK	.718	KANSAS CITY	.709
CLEVELAND	.705	CALIFORNIA	.640

NATIONAL LEAGUE

CHICAGO	.818	CINCINNATI	.863
PHILADELPHIA	.769	ATLANTA	.778
PITTSBURGH	.762	SAN FRANCISCO	.771
NEW YORK	.748	HOUSTON	.769
MONTREAL	.715	LOS ANGELES	.759
ST. LOUIS	.709	SAN DIEGO	.637

Surprises? The St. Louis Cardinals should start using two hands. You can't compete for a pennant with a batting efficiency figure that is 11th strongest in a field of 12.

As for Los Angeles — if Batting Efficiency is a flag in the wind, then the Dodger's pennant is drooping.

Support AER Retirees Urged

Retired Army persons residing in the Columbus-Phenix City vicinity are being asked this week to support the Army Emergency Relief-Army Relief Society annual fund drive now underway at Fort Benning.

Over 3,200 retirees living in this area are eligible to receive financial assistance from this fund which came into being in 1942.

Nine Bakers Graduate From 197th Inf Course

Nine more bakers were added to the food service staff of the 197th Infantry Brigade last Saturday when Col. John E. Strever, Jr., congratulated his brigade baking school's most recent graduates.

Named as honor graduates was Spc4 Richard M. Fletcher of the 1st Bn., 211th Arty.

The two week course, started only last January, has already seen more than 60 new bakers complete the highly personalized course where veteran baking instructors instill in their students a pride of accomplishment in the almost lost art of baking.

With less than four men per instructor, a high standard of quality is maintained during the students preparation of more than 20 different types of pies, cakes, cookies, rolls and biscuits.

"I've taught at many baking schools during my 19 years in the Army's Food Service," said SSgt. Allen Graves who heads the school. "But this is one of the finest and most realistic."

The sergeant pointed out the 197th's baking school teaches use of 100 portion recipes whereas most schools limit the student to only 8 to 10.

"We start with the basic ingredients, not commercial mixes, and after an hour of theory covering all of the steps, from weighing and measuring each part to the final arrangement on the service line, the students then prepare the particular item we are studying."

All of the items the students are taught to bake are chosen from those appearing most frequently on Fort Benning's master menu.

"When one of our graduates returns to his unit he is capable of following the 100 portion recipes in the Army cook book," added Sergeant Graves. "And, with the little extras we teach such as decorating cakes for parties, he can be proud of what he serves his men."

OC's, 197th Battle Over Hills in Mock Combat

By Pvt. Robert Merkin

Pounding over the dirt road miles from the populated areas of Fort Benning, the one-and-a-quarter ton truck passes signposts pointing to CP 27. Finally an entrance lane branches off to the left and a large sign with replaceable posters reads:

CP 27
Assault of a Fortified Position
OCS

CP 27 is a problem area, better known as Bunker Hill. The afternoon phase take place around a heavily wooded hill surrounded on the north and south by the gullies of a creek system. First one platoon of officer candidates will charge from the south, then another from the north. On the hill slopes, the Aggressors, the men of Co. D, First Battalion, 58th Infantry, are dug into their positions in sandbagged foxholes. Their M-14's are keyed to fire blanks on automatic, they have gas grenades at the ready.

And during the morning and through their supper break, the Aggressors have booby-trapped their positions with almost invisible strands of wire connected to shrieking simulators. At the top of the hill in a wooden shack, an Aggressor with a field radio reigns supreme over a wooden panel with fifty toggle switches — each one linked to a charge of TNT in sandbagged and barbed-wire-protected demo pits.

Bunker Hill

The entire armament of the day-long war on Bunker Hill is designed to result in zero casualties, but no one said anything about not shaking a few candidates up a little. And a few charges of TNT popping off to your right and left gives a money-back guarantee to shake a fellow up a little.

A support jeep pulls up in front of the TNT shack and a lieutenant begins passing out cans of water and checking the positions of his men. Every once in a while, sporadic bursts of M-14 fire can be heard to the north and south. Replying to instructions from the main problem tower, the TNT shack operator flicks two or three toggle switches until one charges live and the roar of an angry TNT package is heard down the hill.

Skirmishes between the OCS and Aggressors have been going on all afternoon. The main OCS force is located in the bushes on the hill across the stream they'll have to cross to meet the Aggressors, and every once in a while from the Aggressor position you can see a figure dart from tree to tree on the other side of the gurge, and the Aggressors throw a little imitation lead that way.

In a group by a bunker, eight or nine Aggressors have formed a friendly circle around five T-shirted OCS prisoners. The Aggressors are giving the POW's the third degree, firing battery after battery of questions at the crew-cut, skinny young men.

"How much do you get paid?"

You Married?

"You married? How long you got to go in the school?"

"Why'd you go into OCS? Where'd you go to college?"

The prisoners answer amicably, with grins on their faces, explaining rigors of OCS, why they joined, what they want to do.

It helps to take their minds off what's going to happen to them when their commander finds out they've been captured.

And in the TNT shack, high-level negotiations are taking place over the radio. This has been a lucky day for the OCS troops — they've managed to snare three Aggressors. Before the main assault begins, a prisoner exchange is organized, and the five sheepish candidates are sent down the hill, back to their positions as the three liberated Aggressors head up the hill.

Over the radio, another voice crackle — the Aggressor commander.

"Do I read you correctly?" he asks, his voice full of mock wonder. "You exchanged three of our men for five prisoners?"

The TNT man radios an affirmative.

It's A Sad Day

"All I can say is, it's a sad day for our side. You should have kept four of them to make it fair." He ends the conversation.

And then the fun begins on the south side of the hill. The angry sound of blanks bottled up by blank adapters echoes through the woods as the OCS rifle platoon begins its charge through barbed wire defenses across the creek. Some carry M-14's with bipods, firing from the hip and shoulder, and a team rushes forward with an M-60 machine gun. Grenades of dense red smoke fill the garage, obscuring everyone from everyone else.

The TNT charges begin to thunder and shake the woods with a second-after-second regularity and the red smoke mixes with white smoke. Once in a while a simulator is set off and shrieks like a rocket passing overhead.

And finally the OCS forces pull up their secret weapon — flame throwers filled with water — the granddaddy of all water pistols.

Pull Back

A thing like that will make the hardiest Aggressor pull back.

It's hard to tell how many of the OCS would have actually made it up the hill, or how many Aggressors would have been out of the game under less controlled and friendly circumstances... But the war is called to a halt when about half the assault troops have made it to the top.

In the grove of trees by the TNT shack, the officer candidates assemble to march back to their debriefing area. The Aggressors assemble to have a smoke, wait for transportation back to the support area and home. And for the benefit of the Aggressors who got it full blast with the Father of Water Pistols, the clouds gather and it begins to rain.

A final sour-grapes attack is launched. An Aggressor team tosses a tear gas grenade at the OCS platoon as it marches down a forest trail.

Noise. Confusion. Commotion. A little coughing.

An observer among the Aggressors asks who won the problem.

"Heck," a First of the 58th sergeant says, "We did. We always do."

Captain Phillips Awarded DSC Posthumously

By SST. Carol Aubin

The Distinguished Service Cross was the highest of five decorations awarded posthumously to Capt. Henry R. Phillips during a special ceremony held here July 30.

Mrs. Brooks Q. Phillips Columbus, Ga., the captain's widow, also accepted the Silver Star with first Oak Leaf Cluster, Silver Star, Bronze Star Medal and the Purple Heart, all presented by Maj. Gen. George I. Forsythe, commanding general.

The Distinguished Service Cross, the Army's second highest decoration for valor, was awarded Captain Phillips for extraordinary heroism.

The citation read, in part, "Captain Phillips distinguished himself by exceptionally valorous actions when his company and a convoy that it was supporting were ambushed by two North Vietnamese battalions. Phillips flew to the scene of battle and jumped to the ground from his hovering helicopter amid intense enemy fire.

Led Counterattack

"As he was leading a counterattack to secure a landing zone for an ambulance helicopter, he and his men came under heavy rocket propelled grenade and automatic weapons fire.

"Securing four antitank weapons, he moved through the hostile fusillade to a point from which he was able to destroy a rocket propelled grenade team and an automatic weapons position.

"Once the casualties were safely evacuated, Captain Phillips led a small group of volunteers into the killing zone of the ambush to extract several remaining dead and wounded. He then organized withdrawals as darkness set in, and although wounded by an enemy rocket-propelled grenade, succeeded in leading his men to an allied compound."

The Silver Star, first Oak Leaf Cluster, was awarded the captain for heroism.

The citation read in part, "While moving to a night location, his company came under an intense enemy attack.

"Realizing that his company would be completely pinned down unless the column started moving, the captain exposed himself to a heavy volume of fire as he ran to the beleaguered platoon's position and urged his men to start retaliatory fire.

Friendly Troops Arrive

"Soon, the friendly troops began providing suppressive fire, allowing Captain Phillips to turn to the task of getting the column out of the killing zone. As he moved forward, he was seriously wounded.

"Unable to move and in intense pain, he shouted orders to his men and the column began to move.

"Shortly thereafter, two mortar rounds landed near Captain Phillips and he was mortally wounded."

The Silver Star was awarded Captain Phillips for gallantry in action.

The Bronze Star Medal was presented posthumously to the captain for "distinguishing himself by outstanding meritorious service in connection with military operations against a hostile force in the Republic of Vietnam."

The Purple Heart was awarded the captain for the wounds which he received resulting in his death on Sept. 22, 1968.

Special guests at the ceremony were Mrs. John T. Burke, Mr. Lem Sawyer and Chaplain (Col.) and Mrs. Holland Hope.

83rd ARCOM Trains For Two Weeks Here

Seven Army reserve officers from the Southeast Ohio - Kentucky area recently attended an active-duty summer training course at the U. S. Army Infantry School here.

The seven are members of the 83rd Army Reserve Command (ARCOM). Lt. Col. Mickey L. Brown of Columbus, Ohio, served as an instructor in the two-week program which, in conjunction with classes taught throughout the year near the officers' homes, leads to completion of the Infantry Officers Advanced Course.

The program is conducted to provide officers with a working knowledge of the responsibilities of field grade officer.

It prepares company grade officers for promotion to field grade positions within their reserve units.

The courses pertain to the Army Readiness system and include supply, unit management, tactics, equipment maintenance and personnel management.

Brigadier General Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the school, welcomed several Reserve groups at opening ceremonies.

Explaining the purpose of the summer training, he commented:

"It is incumbent upon the United States that we have the best trained soldiers in the world. That is the purpose of the Infantry School, and that is why you are here."

Attending the courses were: Capt. John W. Peterson, Capt. Rothwell K. Luntz, Maj. Richard B. Davis and Capt. Richard K. Anderson, all of Columbus, Ohio and Maj. John T. Lilley, Kent, Ohio, and Capt. Donald W. Thomas, Evlanger, Ky.

Bronze Star Presented To Parents

A Bronze Star, a Purple Heart and a Good Conduct Medal were awarded posthumously to Sgt. David C. Hogan and accepted by his parents, SFC and Mrs. Larry Hogan of Columbus, Ga., at a ceremony here July 30.

The medals were presented by Col. Talton W. Long, deputy post commander.

The Bronze Star Medal was awarded for meritorious service in connection with military operations against a hostile force in the Republic of Vietnam.

The citation accompanying the award read, in part, "He consistently manifested exemplary professionalism and initiative in obtaining outstanding results. His rapid assessment and solution of numerous problems inherent in a combat environment greatly enhanced the allied effectiveness against a determined and aggressive enemy."

The Purple Heart was awarded for the wounds which resulted in the sergeant's death.

Others attending the special ceremony were the sergeant's brother, Donald Hogan, and his sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Shirley of Columbus.

The Rev. and Mrs. Curtis Flowers of Columbus also attended.

Georgia C of C Will Visit Post August 14

A group of approximately 50 members of the Georgia Chamber of Commerce Executives' Association and their wives will tour Fort Benning Aug. 14.

Meeting in Columbus for their 1969 conference, the group will go first to Victory Lodge where they will be welcomed by Col. Jim D. Kiersey, chief of staff of the U. S. Army Infantry Center and a member of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce executive committee.

At Victory Pond they will witness a Ranger demonstration.

Two Laotian Sergeants Complete Radio Course

By 2Lt. James Hopson

Bounnhang Somphet and Khambou Isayachak, both sergeants in the Laotian Army, graduated July 30 from the field radio mechanics course here.

Each has spent about eight years in the service, and has attended the Laotian Signal School where they studied radio repair.

They are assigned to the Signal Depot at Vietiane, capitol of Laos. They were chosen by their unit commander to attend training in the United States from a group of six which completed a one-year English course.

Before coming to Fort Benning, they attended a stock control course at Fort Lee, Va.

From here they are going to Fort Gordon, Ga., where they will attend the field radio repair course to learn more detailed repair of radio equipment.

During the first four weeks at Fort Benning, they studied the fundamentals of electronics. This was followed by one and a half weeks of study with tactical frequency modulation (FM) radio sets, another one and a half weeks spent on radio teletype systems, and a final week with other pieces of communications equipment which might be encountered in the field.

Although the training is conducted using radios of U. S. Army inventory, it will still be useful to these Allied students since equipment similar to it is currently in use in Laos.

Both sergeants commented that the practical exercises were the part which they enjoyed the most.

They cited instances where the instructors were helpful in enabling them to overcome the language barrier and understand what was being taught.

Upon completion of training in the United States they will return to Laos to apply the knowledge which they have acquired to their work in communications.

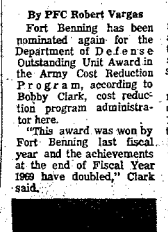
Benning Won Last Year

Post Nominated By DOD For Cost Reduction Award

By PFC Robert Vargas

Fort Benning has been nominated again for the Department of Defense Outstanding Unit Award in the Army Cost Reduction Program, according to Bobby Clark, cost reduction program administrator here.

"This award was won by Fort Benning last fiscal year and the achievements at the end of Fiscal Year 1969 have doubled," Clark said.



JOE P. JOHNSON

A total of 167 separate cost reduction actions were validated by the U. S. Army Audit Agency for a savings in fiscal year (FY) 1969 of $4,009,300 and a total savings over the next two years of $11,962,000.

Compares to Goal

This compares to goals of $758,200 and $2,023,900, respectively, established by higher headquarters.

Goals are set up annually and tri-annually for the installation. Fort Benning has achieved 529 per cent of its goal on an annual basis and 591 per cent on a tri-annual basis, Clark said.

The program had reached and exceeded its goals earlier in the fiscal year, when Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., then commanding general, said, "It looks like the thing we had better do is to establish a new goal for Fort Benning, regardless of the goal assigned by higher headquarters. Obviously, the present goal no longer serves to provide any sort of a challenge. Let's figure out a reasonable goal and have the revised goal as our objective at Benning."

CG Presents Plaque

Each year the commanding general presents a plaque to the activity which makes the most outstanding contribution to the cost reduction effort. In FY 1968, the award went to the U.S. Army Infantry School.

Part of Fort Benning's success in the program is attributable to the incentive Awards program, which encourages people to make suggestions pertaining to the cost reduction program, Clark said.

Suggestions vary from such proposals as the use of inexpensive training rounds in lieu of expensive artillery ammunition to the use of printed forms to sped up preparation and save manhours.

"Fort Benning's achievements under the cost reduction program in FY 1969 were the geatest since the program's inception in FY 1963," Clark said.

Highest Priority

The program is "a matter of highest priority and is given full and continueing support at all echelons," he continued, describing the policies which Fort Benning has set up for systematically effecting cost reduction.

"Its success will depend upon orientation of the maximum number of personnel, aggressive promotion and administration, and sustained, concentrated and creative effort by all personnel," Clark states.

The objective of Fort Benning's Cost Reduction Program is to develop and maintain a state of readiness essential to accomplish assigned missions and to operate at the lowest possible cost.

The program has three broad objectives: To buy only what is needed to achieve balanced readiness; buy at the lowest operating cost. It achieves them by establishing specific quantitative goals for each cost reduction area, formal reporting of performance against these goals on a quarterly basis, and encouraging personnel motivation.

With the implementation of this type of management, savings at all echelons should be above the set goals.

Outstanding Contributions

Among outstanding contributions by individuals are the following: A kitchen police contract revision was submitted by Joe P. Johnson of Columbus, Ga., Quartermaster division. it saved $807,927 in FY 1969 and will save a total of $2,423,781 over the next two years. This suggestion is being nominated for recognition at the Department of Defense (DOD). Johnson received a $1,000 cash award and an additional award is pending.

The use of a personnel data card as a tool in detecting unposted military overpayment for accrued leave, thereby precluding leave upon separation from service, was suggested by CWO Carroll E. Watson St. Petersburg, Fla., formerly of the quality assurance branch, Finance and Accounting Officer. This suggestion which saved $425,598 in FY 1968 and will save a total of $1,037,832 over the next two years, has been nominated for recognition at DOD. Nelson received a cash award of $1,500 and his action when the Third U.S. Army Commander's Management Improvement award for the first six months of fiscal 1969.

An audit technique now provided by regulation to aid in detecting unposted military leave was suggested by CWO Mars Wampler of Columbus, Ga, U. S. Army Transfer Point. A savings of $428,988 in FY 1969 and a total of $1,038,988 over the next two years is expected. He has a cash award pending.

denbaugh, who served as the representative of Maj. Gen. George I. Forsythe, Fort Benning commanding general, the men were served coffee and doughnuts, while four ladies who had come to meet the plane welcomed their loved ones back.

For Sp4 Jerry Clubb, it was a special welcome. His two sisters and mother had driven here from their home in Columbus, Miss., for the event. Sisters Judy and Zaida and mother Mrs. Zaida Clubb broke into tears of joy as the welcoming remarks ended and they had the opportunity to welcome their soldier home.

Among those present to welcome the group were representatives from the Third U. S. Army area headquarters at Fort McPherson, Ga., and from the 121st Army Reserve Command (ARCOM) in Birmingham, Ala., to which the unit was assigned after returning to its former status.

Serving first at Phu Bai from September to January, and then at Charlie Combat Base, the unit was involved in a pipeline petroleum operation which included the operation of bank farms among other duties.

All of the men returned home without suffering a single battle wound.

Six members of the company, who did not go to Vietnam when the unit was sent there, are being discharged this week from other posts over the country where they have been called to active duty.

While in Vietnam, several replacements for the company were assigned. According to Looney, these were all Regular Army soldiers.

The unit served as a part of the 259th Quartermaster Battalion (POL) while in Vietnam.

A gala welcome is planned for the men when they arrive in Greenwood, Miss., today at 3:30 p.m. EDT.

They will be welcomed by various local officials and Brig. Gen. Leonard S. Woody, commanding general, 121st Army Reserve Command, will present a plaque to the unit.

General Woody will also make a number of awards to several members of the unit. Men who have already received awards will be recognized and following the awards ceremony, refreshments will be served.

A total of 29 members of the unit received decorations and awards while in Vietnam.

Otis Allen, a civilian advisor for the Third U. S. Army area, will serve as master of ceremonies for the event. The 98th Army band of Fort Rucker, Ala., will play the National Anthem at the beginning of the ceremony.

Flak Jacket Saves Life Of Trooper

CAMP EAGLE, Vietnam (101st IO) — The value of the flak jacket has been proven to at least one 101st Airborne Division paratrooper.

Sp 4 Asbury Broadnax, Tampa, Fla., a squad leader in A Co., 2nd Bn., 506th Abn. Inf., was leading his men up Hill 937, defended by an estimated two battalions of North Vietnamese, when he heard the crack of an AK-47 rifle and felt a sharp pain in his back.

"I thought I was hit," Broadnax said, "but it was a burning stinging pain on my skin rather than in my body."

When a medic removed Broadnax's flak vest and fatigue shirt, he discovered that the bullet had lodged between the flak jacket and skin of the fortunate Currahee, causing only a burn on his back.

"I don't think I took it off for 24 hours after the fighting stopped," commented Broadnax. "I wear it all the time now."

Book 'Corrects Myths' About Military History

WASHINGTON (ANF) — "American Military History" is the latest addition to the Army Historical Series.

The book, edited by Dr. Maurice Matloff, is a one-volume history of the United States Army in peace and war — from its beginning in 1775 through operations in the Republic of Vietnam in 1967.

Published by the Army's Office of the Chief of Military History, the book is a reliable and thoroughly research presentation by 15 distinguished military historians.

The Army's chief of military history, Brig. Gen. Hal C. Pattison, notes in his forward that the contributions to this volume "have corrected myths that have become 'facts' over the years — there were no Minutemen present as the American Revolution erupted on Lexington Common at dawn on April 19, 1775. . ."

On the coverage of Vietnam, General Pattison comments: "It is of course especially difficult to write the history of a war not yet over, but Chapter 28, covering the action through the end of 1967, does reflect the research and on-the-spot observation of several able historians whose personal and professional views of the war are by no means uniform."

Rounding out the 28 authoritative chapters is a rich bibliography and a comprehensive index designed to satisfy both the casual reader and the dedicated Army historical buff.

63rd Company OC's Celebrate New Status

The 63rd Co., 6th Stu. Bn., The Candidate Bde., held an intermediate status party in the company area.

Guests of honor were Lt. Col. and Mrs. Grady Williams.

Special guests were Maj. and Mrs. Curtis L. Echols, Capt. and Mrs. James L. Burnham, Capt. and Mrs. Jack H. Jacobs and Capt. and Mrs. James Youndt.

The outdoor decorations followed the theme of "Up, Up and Away." Balloons of various colors flew from a gondolier basket. The dinner tables were decorated with miniature balloons.

Dinner music was played by 63rd Co.'s stage band, playing popular and light semi-classical music.

The evening program was two skits portraying those vital laundry runs from the point of view of the Officer Candidate wives. Then, turning the tables, a skit was given of WAC OCS with the men handling the details. The OC wives then sang "OC Boy" to the tune of "Georgie Girl."

The "Recycles," Candidates Bruce Hachett and Wayne Kelly, sang selections from Simon and Garfunkle.

Dance music was provided by "The Foremore," a local band.

New Brides Should See S.S. Office

"In the flurry of activities just before and after the wedding, our June brides could have overlooked one important place to register a name change — the Columbus Social Security office, says Robert E. O'Neal, Manager. It is necessary that a bride's correct name be shown on her social security card to make sure she receives credit for all earnings and social security taxes withheld from her pay.

Since a good many "Misses" changed their names in the month of June, O'Neal urged every bride to write or visit the local office and return her old social security card. "When we receive the old card in person, she fills out a simple form and we issue a new card to her before she leaves the office," he added. If the old card is returned by mail, a new card can be mailed in a few days."

The office is at 301 - 11th St. Hours are 8:45 a.m. to 5 p.m. week-days; 9 a.m. to 12, noon, Saturdays.

Two Retire In Double Ceremony

A double retirement ceremony concluded the active duty of two career soldiers from the U.S. Army Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency (CDCIA) here July 31.

Lieutenant Colonel Jay E. Castle of Fort Benning, received the Legion of Merit for his services as project officer and chief, doctrine and organization division, as chief, operations and administration division, and as executive officer, CDCIA, from February, 1968, to July, 1969.

Troopers Get Refresher Training

FSB BLACKHORSE — "Learning is a never-ending process," an anonymous scribe wrote. "When you think you've nothing else to learn, then you've got a lot to learn."

Perhaps this is what Maj. Bernard Loeffke, commander of the 2nd Bn, 3rd Inf, 199th Light Infantry Brigade had in mind when he ordered a series of refresher courses on night ambush tactics for his "Old Guard" infantrymen.

The program's debut was made recently with SFC David Redman and S-Sgt. James Towns narrating the lectures and giving field demonstrations.

Determined to find and correct deficiencies, Maj. Loeffke, SFC Redman, S-Sgt. Towns, and other battalion staff members have been accompanying ambush patrols at random to observe their operational procedure.

Concerning his personal experiences as an observer, Redman commented, "More noise discipline is needed, and more overall inter-element coordination and fire discipline too." He particularly stressed the latter. "One man — the patrol leader — should initiate the fire with a pre-set signal. Too often, when enemy movement is spotted, the troops become over-anxious and spring the ambush prematurely," he added. "Strict discipline is imperative here, if the ambush is to be at all effective."

And so, once the wrinkles in the operation are found, steps can be taken to iron them out. Initially, a planned lecture is given by Redman and Towns to platoon sergeants, platoon leaders, and squad leaders. "We tell them what we've found that seems to be wrong, and what to do to correct it," stated Redman. "We go through all the procedures of a night ambush, from the warning order to the de-briefing and critique the following morning. Of course," he admitted, "most of the stuff is already known, but rehashing the basics never hurts. That's what it's all about."

Following the classroom lecture, a field demonstration is held in the firing range at fire support base "Blackhorse." Involved is the most effective deployment of Claymore mines and utilization of trip flares for maximum effect.

Shortly after a field exercise with Delta Co. company commander Capt. George T. O'Malley commented, "I think it (the training) will really help. I particularly wanted the men to know the importance of element coordination and fire discipline. That's especially important when operating in small units like we do now."

On the squad level, Sgt. Ron Walters of Topeka, Kan., termed the effort "greatly beneficial." "We'd gone over much of the same material in AIT," Walters said, "but such courses are much more meaningful here in Vietnam. You know you're going to use what the instructors are teaching — may be that very night."

Despite all the indications of the success of the enterprise, Redman and Towns remain cautious. We're going out with each company soon after their lesson and demonstration," Redman said, "and compare their operational procedures before and after.' Only then will we know if all the work is paying off. It's results that count, he concluded.

Bullets Train Popular Forces

CAMP RADCLIFF, Vietnam (4th Div. ID) — Assembled around a small bamboo table, the 1st Battalion, 8th Infantry's Bullets commanders and civil affairs personnel, conferred with Maj Luu Kim Chau, An Tuc District Chief, Lt. Phuoc, his S-5 and village chiefs from the An Tuc District. The purpose of the meeting was to discuss their mutual pacification effort and plans for future operations.

The meeting introduced the new Bullet commander, Lt. Col. William E. Haas of Winchester, Ky., and two of his company commanders in charge of pacification, to the village chiefs.

Haas explained how the 4th Divsion battalion could help the villagers the most and brought out several points concerning recent attacks on their village by the Viet Cong.

Haas placed particular emphasis on effective night positioning of troops in the area surrounding villages to discourage VC attempts to enter the villages, increased support from individual companies by assisting in MEDCAPS and projects such as tree clearing, which will eliminate hiding places and secluded bases from which the VC operate, and special emphasis was placed on assisting and training Popular Forces (PF) and People's Self Defense Force (PSDF) to enable them to better protect themselves.

Presently the PFs and PSDFs are receiving training in such varied subjects as radios, patrolling and weapons. Once the chiefs feel their PFs and PSDFs have received sufficient training, joint operations are to be programmed to enable the Vietnamese forces to gain a thorough knowledge of our operating procedures and overall tactics.

Training the PFs and PSDFs to protect their hamlets and villages will accomplish a major goal set by the Bullet Battalion. One which will enable the PFs and PSDFs to provide for their own security and allow the 1st Battalion, 8th Infantry to move on to other priorities.

"Assistance, advice and training in village self improvement are important means used by our civil affairs program to help establish independence within the villages," stated Col. Robert Feist of Anoka, Minn., who is in charge of S-5 operations for the Bullets.

ROAD IMPROVEMENTS

Road Changes Will Help Traffic

By PFC Lee Myers

Work has started on a road improvement contract which will help the traffic flow to and from Fort Benning.

A contract has been awarded to widen Edwards and Ingersoll Sts., to straighten Sigerfoos Road where it doglegs next to old Russ Swimming Pool (new Russ Pond) and to continue the Lindsey Creek Bypass from U.S. 27, where it now ends, to Custer Road on post.

McMath-Trussell Construction Company of Columbus, was awarded the $1,592,647.44 contract. They have 450 days after they start in which to complete the work.

First, they will relocate eastward, the present Sante Fe Road from Lloyd School to Custer Road. This relocation will allow the new portion of the Lindsey Creek Bypass to be constructed over the present route of Sante Fe Road.

Ingersoll St. will be widened to three lanes from Dixie Road north to Weld Ave., the Main Post Theater intersection.

Edwards St. will be widened to three lanes from Dixie Road north to the Warehouse area and will then be continued through the Warehouse area north to 10th Division Road near the small animal cemetery.

Sigerfoos Road presently picks up the Benning Blvd. traffic and doglegs over by Russ Pond before it intersects with Vibbert Ave. near the Main Post Chapel. Instead of the dogleg, a new section of Sigerfoos Road will be built so that the Benning Blvd. traffic will have a straight drive over the Upatoi Creek bridge and up the hill onto Main Post.

Widening Ingersoll St. and Edwards St. from the present two lanes to three will allow for heavy use during the morning and evening. In the morning both Edwards and Ingersoll will have two lanes traveling south carrying traffic from Columbus. In the evening both of them will have two lanes traveling north towards Columbus.

Also, Edwards as it will connect with 10th Division Road, will furnish a smooth exit from the Main Post area to South Lumpkin Road.

The new portion of the Lindsey Creek Bypass will not bring that traffic directly onto Main Post; but that traffic will no longer have to make a left turn across U.S. 27, a 60 m.p.h. highway, to reach Fort Benning.

Lieutenant Fills In as Engineer CO

A few weeks ago, a young second lieutenant named David C. Blonigen was left holding the bag, and when he took a look inside the bag, he saw four and a half million dollars worth of engineering equipment.

At least that's what impressed him most about occupying the commander's chair of the 72nd Engineer Co. when the old CO and the executive officer both received orders to leave Kelly Hill for new posts. And when the arrival of the captain slated for the new CO slot was delayed, the athletic looking, dark-haired supply and property officer, 2nd Lt. David C. Blonigen, took command of a company of engineers and that multi-million dollar inventory.

"I'm glad to have this job before I get to Vietnam," the 26-year-old Florida-born officer said the other day between his numerous appointments and paper-signings. "As supply and property officer, I saw one aspect of running a company, but now I have to see the overall picture, the running of all the various sections.

"So far everything's running real smoothly," he explained without trying to conceal a grin. "This company has some good NCO's and I'm glad of that."

Drafted after a year of civilian construction work in Texas following his graduation from the University of Florida, Blonigen had no problem deciding what he wanted to do in the Army. As soon as he got the chance, he opted for Engineer OCS at Fort Belvoir, Va., and came to the 72nd Engineers, a unit of the 197th Infantry Bde., as his first assignment—little suspecting that a supply and property slot would "escalate" into his first command.

"Normally, I wouldn't have had nearly this much responsibility so soon," he commented. "I'm in charge of $4½ million worth of equipment"—he let out a small gasp of air to punctuate the inventory. "When I called my parents about my new job, they thought it was great, and said it would be good for me to have that responsibility."

The words "responsibility" and "leadership" creep into the officer's conversation spontaneously and often. "The way I feel about it," he said, "I was drafted. O.K. On the outside I want to be a leader. But wherever you are, you

Colonel Hoefling Becomes New Leadership Director

By 2nd Lt. James Hopson

Col. John A. Hoefling recently became director of the Leadership Department of the U. S. Army Infantry School here.

He succeeds Col. John D. White as director of the school's newest academic department. Colonel White has been assigned to the Republic of Vietnam.

Colonel Hoefling came to the post from Vietnam where he commanded the 2nd Brigade of the 101st Airborne Division.

A news release from the 101st states that "Colonel Hoefling's tour as commander gained particular notoriety throughout Vietnam as a result of his personal rivalry with a North Vietnamese Army commander, Colonel Than Trong Mot. Colonel Mot commands the 5th NVA regiment which was operating in the plains surrounding the Imperial capital city of Hue.

"Colonel Hoefling, called 'White Owl' from his radio call sign, regrets that he wasn't able to corner Mot, but boasts that 'we have inflicted heavy casualties on the 5th (NVA Regiment) and I doubt seriously whether Colonel Mot has much of a command left,' " the release continued.

While he was commander, Colonel Hoefling's brigade eliminated an enemy recuperation center on the coastal island of Vinh Loc and conducted offensive operations in A Shau Valley. The brigade also trained South Vietnamese forces and provided food, clothing and medical supplies to the civilian populace in its area of operations.

Born in Milwaukee, Wis., Hoefling, 44, is a graduate of the U. S. Military Academy and the Army War College.

He holds two master's degrees — one in business administration from the University of Alabama and another in international affairs from George Washington University.

His awards and decorations include the Silver Star with oak leaf cluster, Legion of Merit with oak leaf cluster, Distinguished Flying Cross with oak leaf cluster, the Soldier's Medal, Bronze Star Medal with three oak leaf clusters, Army Commendation Medal with five oak leaf clusters, Air Medal with "V" device for valor and 20 oak leaf clusters, the Vietnamese Distinguished Services Order, the Vietnamese Gallantry Cross with Palm, the Vietnamese Honor Medal, the Vietnamese Medal with Palm for Revolutionary Development and the Vietnamese Presidential Unit Citation.

Colonel and Mrs. Hoefling, the former Patricia Flynn and their three children, Peggy, 20, Kathryn, 16, and John, 13, live at 201 Lumpkin Road.

In Quarantine

OC's Fiance Spends Time With Astronauts

A woman spends five days in seclusion with 24 men and her fiance doesn't turn a hair.

This is a Space Age twist to an age-old story.

The woman is Heather Angela Owens, 23, a research technician at the Manned Spacecraft Center in Houston, Texas, and the fiance is a Fort Benning Infantry officer candidate.

Miss Owens was quarantined after she and three male technicians were exposed to lunar material when a leak developed in a line and sprayed the room where she was working.

The lunar samples had been gathered by astronauts Buzz Aldrin and Neil Armstrong during their recent moon voyage.

Miss Owens' fiance, Officer Candidate Thomas L. Phillips of 68rd Company, Sixth Battalion, The Candidate Brigade says that he has "expected something like the quarantine."

Miss Owens was released early this week from what she described as the best rest she had had in eight months.

strive to do your best. You apply your own ideas, you try to experiment. But one of the demands of responsibility is to temper that with sound judgment."

Blonigen assumed command when the 72nd was in the midst of building a Brigade PT field, now complete, and the men who built the bridge on the River Kwai could hardly have taken the pride in their work that Blonigen took in that field.

Despite the temporary nature of his CO tenure, Blonigen had barely moved into his new office before the shingle outside the 72nd's barracks bore his name. When his replacement arrives, presumably at the end of this month, the shingle gets repainted, and Blonigen will rotate back to the XO slot.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

By Bill King
King's Pizza On Call

Whenever you need a good cry anyway, chop lots of onions, freeze in cubes and store in a freezer bag. Next time a recipe begins "Saute chopped onion. . ." the time you save will cheer you up.

Asparagus Tip: Split the bottoms, tie stalks together and cook upright in a tall coffee pot. The tender tips and tougher bottoms should be done at the same time.

The American barbecue, which in parts of the country still means roasting a whole dressed beef or hog, got its name from the French "barbe-a-queue," meaning "from snout to tail."

Split burgers and tuck some blue cheese into each. Seal edges before broiling.

Centuries ago, wine with meals often served a dual purpose: To enhance the food for guests who were favored and to mask poison for those who weren't.

You're always a favored guest when you dine at

TROOP REQUEST

Wouldn't Gen. William C. Westmoreland's request in 1968 for an additional 200,000 troops substantiate the military's desire to escalate the war?

General Westmoreland did not request an additional 200,000 troops in 1968. The following chronology details what actually occurred in early 1968 in this regard:

Jan. 31-Feb. 4: — Possible recall of Korean troops from Vietnam in view of the Pueblo seizure and the raid by North Koreans on the residence of South Korean President Pak.

Feb. 3: — Former President Lyndon Johnson directed Gen. Wheeler to ask Gen. Westmoreland, "is there any reinforcement or help we can give you?"

Feb. 23-24: — Gen. Wheeler visits Vietnam and a contingency plan is developed on the assumption that there will be a change in strategy and a call-up of the Reserves.

March 26: — Gen. Wheeler meets Gen. Westmoreland in the Philippines. Gen. Westmoreland relays through Gen. Wheeler to the President that no major reinforcements are required.

March 28: — An augmentation of 13,500 additional troops was requested by Gen. Westmoreland and was subsequently approved.

In summary, Gen. Westmoreland did not request an additional 200,000 troops as reinforcements, but considered these for contingency planning on the basis of a change in strategy and major call-up of the Reserves.

VIETNAMESE GENERAL

In view of his having been photographed while emptying a pistol into the brain of a VC PW, why did the U. S. admit the Republic of Vietnam's Maj. Gen. Loan to Walter Reed General Hospital?

General Loan was not admitted to Walter Reed General Hospital. He was on official duty for his government in the Office of the Armed Forces Attache, Embassy of Vietnam, and, as such, was entitled to receive care in a military medical treatment facility without charge.

The U. S. has reciprocal privilege arrangements of this nature with some 57 countries. General Loan was seen as an outpatient and fitted with a leg brace, but, contrary to some reports, was never considered for a suite or VIP treatment at the hospital.

The U. S. did not pay for any part of the travel or associated costs incurred by General Loan.

VIETNAMESE EDUCATION

Isn't prolonging the war in Vietnam having an adverse effect on educating the young South Vietnamese?

Despite the impact of war, education in the Republic of Vietnam is flourishing. There are more children being taught by more teachers in more classrooms than at any other time in the history of South Vietnam.

In 1954, there were 500,000 attending elementary schools; in 1969, there are 2,000,000 or 80 per cent of the population in the 6-11 age group attending school.

"THE GREEN BERETS"

Didn't the U. S. Army subsidize the film, "The Green Berets," because it glorified U. S. involvement in Vietnam?

The U. S. Army did not subsidize "The Green Berets" — it charged the production company $18,623.64 for services provided during 107 days of filming at Fort Benning in 1967. The U. S. Army considers that it has been properly reimbursed for its assistance to the film.

U. S. Army Officers at Fort Benning maintain that training benefits were derived, even though the exercise provided support for the film.

A DOD directive waives the Bureau of the Budget requirement for recovering the full cost of any special services provided, if such services aid recruiting or public understanding of the Armed Forces. The U. S. Army considers that "The Green Berets" has aided recruiting and public understanding of the Armed Forces.

Salute With Pride

From pre-Roman times until our most recent moon landing the salute has been a part of the military man.

It is a matter of pride among servicemen from general to private, to salute willingly, promptly and proudly, as most recently displayed by Col. Edwin Aldrin Jr. when he and Neil A. Armstrong were contacted by President Nixon during their stay on the moon.

Since World War II (When saluting was misguidedly de-emphasized in some areas), the good soldier has stood out among his associates by his smart, correct and cheerful salute.

When he salutes or receives a salute he marks himself as a serviceman with pride in himself and his uniform.

As a serviceman he recognizes that the salute is a privilege enjoyed only by military men and is a mutual acknowledgement of comradeship in the profession of arms.

The specific origin of saluting is lost in antiquity. For centuries, however, men at arms have rendered fraternal and respectful greetings to indicate friendliness.

In early times armed men raised their weapons or shifted them to the left hand (while raising the empty right hand) to give proof of amicable intentions.

During the Middle Ages, knights in armor, on encountering friendly knights, raised their helmet visors in recognition. If they were in the presence of feudal superiors, the helmet was usually doffed.

In every case, the fighting man made a gesture of friendliness — the raising of the empty right hand. This gesture survives as today's hand salute, the traditional greeting among military men of all nations.

Like the original hand salute and doffing of the cap, the discharge of weapons, presentations of arms and lowering of the point of the sword were all intended to signify good will. In every case, the one so saluting momentarily rendered himself incapable of using his weapon offensively.

The descendants of these earlier gestures are the modern sword salute, present arms and gun salutes. Salute with pride and bring credit to yourself and your service. (AFPS)

World Changes

No matter where one is stationed in the military, he will often hear some old-timers saying, "The service just isn't what it used to be." And to this we most heartily agree.

The role of the military man has undergone many changes during the nearly 200 years of our country's existence as a nation.

However, the primary mission of the military man is still to defend this nation "against all enemies, both foreign and domestic."

But in today's hurry-scurry, tension-filled world, the military man must be much more than a combat-ready guardian of freedom.

He is diplomatic and is looked upon by the countries where he is stationed as a direct representative of the United States. He must also be teacher, humanitarian, scientist and public relations man in uniform.

In these capacities America's service personnel have proven extremely capable of meeting and accomplishing the task laid out for them. Whether seeking marauding Viet Cong, giving medical care in a disaster stricken town, teaching a class in English or domestic principles, the military man of today serves his nation well. (AFPS)

The 1st Platoon, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Norman M. Bissell, hosted a delightful luncheon at the Supper Club. The theme 'Bijou et plus de bijou' was artistically featured throughout the table decorations with styrofoam models each displaying an array of jewelry.

A jewelry fashion show was given by a local representative. Models were: Mrs. Harold F. Bray, Mrs. Joseph K. Dietrich, and Mrs. Edward E. Bailey Jr.

Honored guests introduced by Mrs. Thomas P. Hensler, social chairman, were Mrs. Lon D. Marlowe Jr., Mrs. William E. Mundy, Mrs. Wendell O. Doody and Mrs. A. J. Pisano.

The 2nd Platoon, under the chairmanship of Mrs. David H. Fournier, recently hosted a brunch at the Columbus Museum of Arts and Crafts. Gerhard Boech, a well known local artist, was the guest speaker. He lectured on 'French Impressionism,' using slides to give a more vivid illustration. A guided tour of the Museum concluded the program.

Several original ceramic pieces made by the talented ladies of the 2nd Platoon were given as door prizes.

Honored guests were Mrs. Lon D. Marlowe Jr., Mrs. Stewart Miller, Mrs. Lisa Lisaroby, secretary of the museum, Wyndell L. Taylor, museum director, and Gerhard Boech.

Mrs. Thomas P. Hensler, wife of class leader, Maj. Thomas P. Hensler, is the social chairman and will be assisted by the following appointed committee members: Mrs. Leonard M. Pedersen, co-social chairman; Mrs. Charles C. McIntosh and Mrs. James M. Wisby, publicity; Mrs. Richard W. Damron and Mrs. Douglas E. Casey, reservations; Mrs. Emrey M. Gehlsen, treasurer; Mrs. Lem J. McLendon, bridge; Mrs. Philip W. Gaskins, thrift shop, and Mrs. Gerald E. Wilmart, hospitality and recreation.

Mrs. A. J. Pisano, wife of Capt. A. J. Pisano, 20th company commander, assisted in the organization of the class wives club.

"Who me?" was the response of WAC 1st Lt. Carolyn Hall of Colon, Mich., when Col. Robert M. Piper, commander of The Candidate Brigade, called a "Brigade Dining In" and invited her to attend. The Dining In, traditionally a stag affair, was attended by 299 male and 1 female officers. Hall was recently assigned to TCB as the assistant S-1 (personel officer). She is the first WAC officer to be assigned to TCB. She is a native of Colon and attended Ferris State College where she graduated with a degree in marketing. After receiving a direct commission in June, 1968, she was first stationed at Fort McClellan, Ala.

Christmas Bazaar Booth Planned by Wives Club

Christmas is just around the corner, or so it seemed, as the Medical Department Activity (MEDDAC) Officer's Wives Club gathered for a coffee at the Fort Benning Country Club.

On display at the coffee were samples of items the members could make for their booth at the annual Christmas bazaar sponsored by the Fort Benning Officer's Wives Club.

Mrs. Paul Walnes, MEDDAC club president, asked the wives to indicate which items they want to make so work can begin as soon as possible.

Mrs. John Mansfield was in charge of arrangements for the coffee and in keeping with the Christmas theme selected an arrangement of red carnations and white gladioli to decorate the table.

The Candidate Brigade's Wives Clubs Hold Coffees

"Today Blue, Tomorrow Gold" was the theme of the coffee held by the Officer candidate Wives Club of the 62nd Co., 6th Stu. Bn. The Candidate Bde. in the lounge of the Sightseeing Road Chapel.

This is a metaphor for the status of the candidates of the 62nd Company. The candidates are presently in their senior status approaching graduation.

The decorations were in keeping with the theme. The centerpiece on the serving table featured a tiger sporting an officer's cap, in honor of the Tiger Tactics Award which was recently presented to the 62nd Company. Skewers of fresh fruit, cake and punch were served as refreshments.

Honored guests attending the event were the Mmes. Curtis L. Echols, James L. Burnham, and Leslie Smith. Cadre Hostesses were the Mmes. James C. Gorday, Arthur L. Holmes, Gary P. Powers, and Joe H. Rufty. Candidate wives serving as hostesses were the Mesdames Thomas C. Adams, Lawrence H. Allen, Henry L. Berchak, Robert J. Huey, Russell Osborne, and Ralph M. Rochelm.

Speaking to the wives was Maj. Lesley E. Oden, finance officer, on the subject of the "Importance of Good Budgeting." Following Oden's talk, the group viewed a movie on transportation.

The 63rd (OC) Company Wives Club held its Senior Status Coffee in Fellowship Hall of Sightseeing Road Chapel.

The decor and the atmosphere were in keeping with the theme of "Hearts and Flowers". The decorations consisted of hand-made crepe paper flowers for the centerpiece and nametags. The centerpiece was composed of a wicker basket filled with paper flowers and pink hearts.

The first portion of the program was conducted by Capt. James Youndt, commanding officer of the 63rd Co. Youndt explained the different aspects of the upcomming senior status review on August 22. He explained how the review would be conducted and their participation in it.

Mrs. Youndt then followed with a discussion on protocol for both the senior status formal and the forthcoming brigade tea.

Mrs. Mitchell O'Nell then conducted a discussion on the use of the calling card.

The highlight of the event was the wives' introduction to Mrs. Robert M. Piper. The wives were delighted with Mrs. Piper.

Honored guests for the event were Mrs. Robert M. Piper, Mrs. Curtis L. Echols, Mrs. James A. Youndt, Mrs. Leslie Marshal, and Mrs. Donald J. Studler. Hostesses were Nancy Storey, Shirley Wilcox, Gail Stewart, Mary Housewright.

The Officer Candidate Wives Club recently held a coffee in the day room of the 94th Co. 9th Stu. Bn. TCB.

The decorations for the coffee were highlighted by a large map of the United States. On this map was indicated the home town of each of the wives. From these hometowns, pieces of string were stretched to Ft. Benning, revealing the diversity of regions represented, and distances traveled.

Complementing the map, both nametags and the centerpiece were in the shape of the state of Georgia.

The program for the coffee included a talk by Mrs. Roger Dimsdale on calling cards. She explained the proper use of the calling card and how many of the cards the wives would probably need. This talk was followed with a talk given by 2nd Lt. Jack Powell on the upcoming senior status review.

Gen. Westmoreland Praises Youth

"My conviction that our younger generation is capable and serious, motivated and dedicated has been reaffirmed," said Gen. William C. Westmoreland at the graduation review of the 2nd increment of basic ROTC cadets at Fort Benning this summer.

General Westmoreland, chief of staff, U. S. Army, addressed the 1,300 cadets, who had completed six weeks of active duty at the Army Training Center's summer camp, during his two-day visit here.

The general, who visited all of the U. S. Army ROTC summer camps in the country this summer, said, "My high regard for ROTC developed over the years — in three wars — has been reinforced by my observations this summer."

"Our national policy is peace. But we must continue to face the harsh realities of life," he said. "So long as nations continue to use violence or threat of violence in their relations with each other, our country must maintain a strong defense. ROTC is our major source of officers to provide this defense."

General Westmoreland awarded the camp commander's trophy, the highest award a cadet may receive, to David R. Maunz, who will be attending Georgetown University this fall.

The AUSA medals, awarded by Roy L. Smith, president of the local chapter, were presented to the two outstanding cadets of the 8th and 7th Bns., Ronnie E. Tarawa, University of Texas, and Thomas S. Kaczmarek, Marquette University.

Local graduates included the following:

—William E. Nichols, son of Lt. Col. and Mrs. William L. Nichols, Fort Benning, who will attend Chaminade College in Honolulu this fall.

—Billy T. Thornton, son of Maj. and Mrs. Billy G. Thornton, Fort Benning, and Norman L. Williamson II, son of Lt. Col. (ret.) and Mrs. Norman L. Williamson, who will both attend Gordon Military College this fall.

—Robert L. Carmichael Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Carmichael, Columbus, and Walter S. McGarrah, son of Mrs. Walter McGarrah Jr., Columbus, who both attend Auburn University.

—Garey C. Rozier, son of Mr. and Mrs. Julian B. Rozier, Columbus, also an Auburn student, who received awards for attaining high scores in his platoon on the physical combat and individual proficiency tests.

Columbus Reserve School To Conduct Career Course

Enrollment is now being held for a Command and General Staff Course conducted by the U. S. Army Reserve School in Columbus.

This career opportunity is being offered to Army officers on active duty and active Army enlisted men holding Reserve commissions by participation in an Army Reserve training program conducted at a local armory as well as National Guard officers.

The course is divided into two phases. The first phase extends from Sept. 15 through the end of May and consists of two-hour classroom sessions each Monday evening at the armory on Macon Road.

According to Maj. Brown Nicholson Jr., one of the instructors of the course, the classes are particularly aimed at the senior captain or junor major with six to eight years active service who is beginning to become career conscious and is "taking a real hard look at what the future holds for him."

Nicholson pointed out the classroom sessions close the gap between the instructor and student experienced in correspondence study with the Command and General Staff College by providing rapport with an instructor who is a graduate of the Fort Leavenworth-based school for career officers.

Known as the General Staff Officers' Course, the training use at Fort Leavenworth. Nicholson said the initial portions of Phase I training include the organization, mission, functions and capabilities of the Reorganization Army Division (ROAD), division and combat support and combat service support operations.

Phase II is held at a school administered by the Third U. S. Army and involves two weeks of concentrated effort on a university campus. Active Army students are eligible for two weeks temporary duty to the University of Southern Mississippi next summer.

Students are given an opportunity to select the most convenient time to schedule the temporary duty training period.

Criteria necessary for attendance in the course are six years commissioned service, completion of a branch career course and security clearance to include access to secret material.

Reserve officers on active duty as enlisted men must have held a commission for at least six years, have completed their branch career course and have a similar security clearance.

For additional information write Maj. Brown Nicholson Jr., Box 680, Columbus, Ga., 31901, or call Robert E. Hahn at 324-3411 or Maj. 3441.

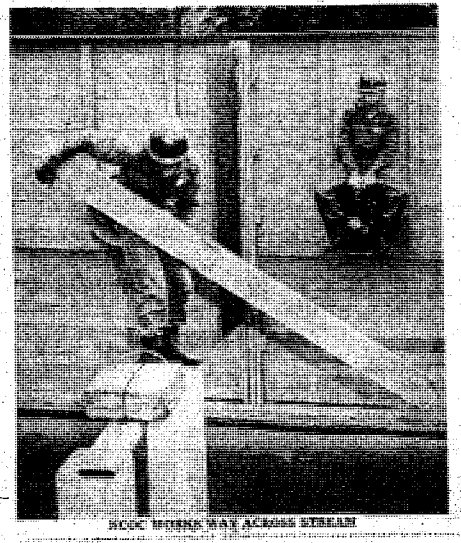
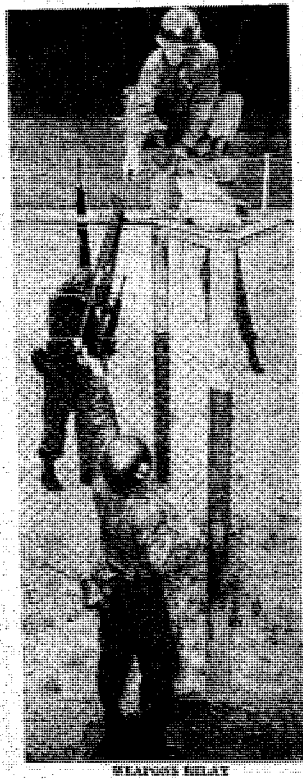
Students Tackle Course To Sharpen Their Skills

CANDIDATE STRAINS TO REACH DANGER AREA

Photos
By
PFC William Ames



MUST THINK WAY ACROSS STREAM



WEAPONS HELP

By 2nd Lt. James Hopson

The Germans used a leaders reaction course to determine which soldiers would become officers and which would carry rifles on the Russian Front. British boys must successfully complete it to gain entry into Sandhurst, the British military academy.

And Infantry School students tackle the Leaders Reaction Course (LRC) to test and sharpen their leadership skills.

The LRC is a series of 16 complex tactical problems that test a student's ingenuity, leadership skill and common sense. The problems require the students — who operate in small groups — to transport heavy loads across swift streams, to carry a "wounded" buddy across a river or to traverse a dangerous minefield.

Maj. James P. Hales, the Leadership Department's officer-in-charge of the LRC, said that officer candidates, non-commissioned officer candidates, infantry officer basic course students, ROTC cadets and other groups test their skills on the LRC.

The students are grouped into small teams. Two teams travel the course together — one team sits on the sidelines and heckles the other team, trying to complete a problem.

A 15-minute per problem time limit, strict rules and boundaries and harassment from fellow classmates force the students to perform under pressure. The teams operate under the supervision of officers who assign the problems, designate leaders from the teams and critique the teams' performances upon completion of the tasks.

"We do not use the course as a rest," Hales said. "The course is used to back up our classroom instruction. When the student gets out here he has an opportunity to lead his classmates in a real situation."

The students face tough problems on the course. Hales said that some problems are successfully completed no more than two per cent of the time, while others have a greater completion rate. All of the tasks can be completed within seven minutes, Hales stated, but most students have to scramble to meet the 15 minute deadline on each of the problems.

Throckmorton Speaks to OC's

COURTEOUS DRIVER . . . Mrs. Robert Szczepanski receives a $10 saving certificate and special automobile bumper stickers after being named a Fort Benning courteous driver. Presenting the certificate is Col. Talton W. Long, deputy post commander. (U.S. Army photo)

"Consider yourself my son while I speak to you." These were the words of Gen. John L. Throckmorton, commander in chief, U. S. Strike Command, MacDill Air Force Base, Tampa, Fla, at the graduation of Officer Candidate Class No. 25-69 in Marshall Auditorium.

The general's opening statement was related to the fact that the last opportunity he had to speak to a graduating class of Infantry Officer Candidates was in February of 1966. At that time his own son graduated from the OCS program.

General Throckmorton spoke on the principles of leadership:

1) Integrity — An officer must always be truthful.

2) Duty — One must be conscientious about a job.

3) Knowledge — It produces professionalism.

"The welfare of your men will be one of the most important responsibilities you will acquire," General Throckmorton said. In reference to the responsibilities the new officers would encounter, he added, "A tremendous challenge lies ahead."

Honored as the distinguished graduate was James L. Alexander of Waco, Texas. For his achievement, Alexander received a letter of commendation from Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the Infantry School, an engraved "Follow Me" statuette, an engraved "Follow Me" plaque and an engraved Association of the United States Army plaque.

He was also recognized as being a member of the commandant's list.

The 159 new second lieutenants were graduated from the 98th Co., 9th Stu. Bn., The Candidate Bde.

Police Follow Courteous Driver

The Military Police here follow many drivers and stop a few of them. One driver who is happy that the MPs followed and stopped him is 2nd Lt. Gary R. Parnaby of Jacksonville, Fla.

The MPs dropped in behind Parnaby as he left his company area, the 524th Personnel Service Co., Center Troop Command, and followed him across the Main Post, watching him at stop lights, through turns always driving under the speed limit.

Then the MPs stopped Parnaby and informed him that he was to be cited as a courteous driver.

Maj. Gen. George I. Forsythe, post commanding general, presented Parnaby a $10 U.S. savings certificate donated by the National Bank of Fort Benning with a letter expressing appreciation for his courteous attitude.

Also, Parnaby received two "Courteous Driver" bumper stickers which he can affix to his car.

NCO Graduates Hear Sergeant Describe Responsibility of Job

"You will find, as I found, that with rank will come responsibility, pressure, long hours, frustration and times when you will wish that you had never seen your new chevrons."

These were the words of MSgt. Richard D. Lockmyer, Intelligence sergeant of the Candidate Bde., Infantry School at graduation ceremonies of Noncommissioned Officer Candidate Class No. 5-69 in Marshall Auditorium.

Lockmyer said, "Being a good sergeant is not an easy task. For the leadership of men does not lend itself to cut and dried solutions in any situation. You will find, as I have found, that the way to success and self satisfaction is through hard work, compassion for your subordinates, loyalty to your superiors and doing your duty as well as you can under the most trying circumstances."

Honored as the distinguished graduate was Thomas A. McGavin of Arlington, Va.

For his achievement, McGavin received a letter of commendation from Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the Infantry School, an engraved "Follow Me" statuette, an engraved "Follow Me" plaque and an engraved Association of the United States Army plaque. Army Emergency Relief Aids Members of 'Family'

By Ron Argo

If a member of the Army "family" ever is down and out financially and doesn't know what to do, the answer might lie in Army Emergency Relief (AER). AER and Army Relief Society (ARS) aid many Army personnel and their dependents through emergency loans and grants.

AER has made 951 loans totalling $110,789.07 from January to July of this year, with 45 grants being awarded to add up to $7,070.10. That's $117,85.17 AER has provided for emergency relief for a six-month period at Fort Benning.

AER was established in 1942 by the Army as a program of voluntary contributions from Army personnel to provide emergency assistance when the need arises.

Cases which consitute the need for AER aid include losses of pay, delays on allowances or allotments, emergency medical and dental expenses.

AER officials rely on Army Regulation 930-4 for establishing how and to whom assistance will be given; however, each case is determined upon the individual factors involved.

A person cannot be given an AER loan or grant to help maintain payments on such luxury items as late model automobiles or color television sets. The individual's living expenses must be geared within his normal income, otherwise credit problems would not normally warrant emergency relief.

AER aid is given as an interest-free loan, an outright grant, or possibly a combination of both if it serves the best interest of the individual. In most cases loans are provided because military personnel prefer, and normally are able, to repay.

The AER assistance tides the individual over the emergency and helps him avoid deeper indebtedness due to unwise loan arrangements. A grant is given in extreme cases where it is evident that repayment would cause undue hardships.

The major causes in the Training Center for AER assistance, for example, are trainees who need funds for rent, food and payments of utilities until their dependents receive their first Class Q allotment checks; cadre personnel who accept overpayment prior to departing from overseas station and receive short pay after being assigned to Fort Benning; and enlisted men whose funds are stolen or lost.

That's where AER funds go, but where does the money come from? AER is supported through voluntary contributions from military personnel, repayment on AER loans and income from investments. James F. Schoonover, U.S. Army Infantry Center (USAIC) project officer, said $18,000 or 42 per cent of the anticipated contribution for the 1969 USAIC Campaign is in already.

Army Relief Society provides assistance for widows and orphans of Regular Army personnel with a minimum of five years' service. The program gives emergency support to the widow or orphan until other benefits or arrangements are effected.

AER made 2,244 loans totalling $279,859.61 at Fort Benning during 1968. Sixty-six grants added up to $9,405.50. All in all, $289,368.11 was provided by AER during 1968 for emergency relief to Fort Benning personnel and dependents.

COLONEL DONALD F. BARRACLOUGH

CTC Welcomes New Deputy CO

Center Troop Command welcomed its new deputy commanding officer, Col. Donald F. Barraclough, early this week.

Colonel Barraclough is no stranger to Fort Benning, having served here continuously since September 1963. Before moving to Center Troop Command, he served as chairman of the Small Arms Committee, Weapons Department, USAIS, then as executive officer for the entire department.

The colonel began his career as an officer here at Fort Benning, receiving his commission after completing Officer Candidate School in 1942.

He has since served with the 25th Infantry Division during World War II, and the 7th Infantry Division in Korea.

The colonel has attended the Command and General Staff College, the Far East Air-Ground Operations School and the Command Management School.

He has been awarded the Bronze Star with two oak leaf clusters, the Army Commendation Medal, the Purple Heart with two oak leaf clusters, the Combat Infantryman Badge, the Distinguished Unit Citation and the French Croix deGuerre with palm.

Lt. Col. Tatum Named 'Layman of the Year'

Lt. Col. Clifton M. Tatum, 4th Bn., TSB, commander, was awarded a plaque of appreciation and was named "Layman of the Year" by the brigade chaplains section.

Chaplain (Col.) Holland Hope, post chaplain, presented the award during a ceremony at 4th Bn. headquarters. Chaplain Hope said that he was "honored to participate in the ceremony" and cited the airborne commander for his "enthusiastic support as the leader of the Laymen's Prayer Breakfast."

The brigade chaplains recommended Colonel Tatum for the award to a board of chaplains who supervise the work of all chaplains in the Army.

The board agreed with the recommendation and honored the commander for his support. Colonel Tatum said that "because of the chaplain's enthusiasm, I got enthused."

Chaplain (Maj.) Robert D. Crick also presented the colonel with a small bible. He said the bible could be carried at any time, even while playing golf.

VA Program To Train Policemen or Firemen

A major new Veterans Administration on-the-job training program for Georgia veterans desiring to become policemen or firemen was announced by State Veterans Director Pete Wheeler.

The program, already underway in 218 cities in other states with 4,200 veterans enrolled, can be a big help to Georgia cities and counties having problems attracting qualified trainees for policemen and firemen, Wheeler said.

The program provides for $80 to $100 monthly in starting supplemental pay to the veteran above what the city or county would pay. Amounts vary according to the veteran's marital status.

Those veterans eligible for this training would be those eligible under the GI Bill. They must have had at least 181 days of active duty service; been discharged under conditions other than dishonorable, and have had service since January of 1955.

Wheeler said, "This program must be initiated by the city or county in a request to the Department of Veterans Service for assistance in meeting the established guidelines for approval of a program."

The guidelines call for a 13-month training period for policemen and a 14-month program for firemen. In both cases, Wheeler said, the veteran trainees would be instructed in duties common to any police or fire department.

Cities or counties interested in more information on the new GI Bill training program and how to establish a program of their own should contact Elmer Barfield or J. T. Handley at the Department of Veterans Service, State Capitol.

Retiring Sergeant Gives Pictures to Old Friend

After 23 years, SSgt. Montgomery Williams will retire from the Army in ceremonies Tuesday leaving behind an old friend and a handful of cherished pictures.

The pictures, taken in 1945, are of the 503rd Parachute Infantry Regiment jumping on Corregidor Island in the Philippines.

"Sergeant Mike," said Williams of his friend, Sgt. Maj. Michael Hostinsky," has wanted those pictures ever since I got them back in '47, but because of circumstances, I was never able to give them to him."

Hostinsky is a former member of the 503rd and has known Williams since arborne training in 1946.

After several years of separation, the two men were reunited at Martin Army Hospital here, where both are patients awaiting retirement.

118 Motor Pool Drivers Get Safe Driving Pins

Awards representing 465 years of safe driving were made here recently.

One hundred and eighteen drivers for the Transportation Motor Pool were presented safe driver pins for periods of one to 10 years.

Addressing the drivers at the awards ceremony in Theater No. 2, Maj. Desse O. Campbell of the Transportation Services Branch said they have compiled a remarkable record.

He told the drivers that motor pool accidents are only 1 per 40,000 miles driven.

"Without your dedication to duty, quick thinking and defensive driving, thank what our accident rate might have been," he said.

He told the drivers that the safe driving pins are but a small token of recognition and deep appreciation for their fine record.

The drivers received their awards from Lt. Col. James A. Theros, deputy chief, Services Section, U. S. Army Infantry Center.

'Big Brothers' Help Fatherless Young Boys

Picture yourself as a little boy, chubby or skinny, or as a boy who likes to fish, play ball, run or do the other things that little boys like to do. You need a friend — a male friend, a big brother of sorts to share your many adventures.

Army Community Services (ACS) at Fort Benning provides such a friend through the Big Brother Committee.

The committee, started by Capt. Patrick Travisa, attempts to match "Big Brother" volunteers with young boys who do not have a father, either because of death or overseas assignment. Boys who are dependents of active, retired or deceased members of the Armed Forces are eligible to participate.

In a typical case referred to the Big Brother Committee, both the mother, child and other members of the family are interviewed by an ACS social worker. If it is decided that the boy can be helped, then an attempt is made to match him with one of the volunteers on the committee.

All meetings of the brothers are carried on outside the home and may include bowling, fishing, swimming or any activity that the Big Brother feels might bring pleasure and benefit to the boy.

ATMOSPHERE, FINE FOOD ENJOYED

Coral Gables Can Provide Taste-Tempting Tour

CORAL GABLES, Fla. — A taste-tempting tour of the world can be enjoyed at the many fine and diversified restaurants in Coral Gables.

Visitors and residents alike enjoy the dining pleasures of France, Italy, the Scandinavian countries, Spain, Mexico, China, Cuba and, of course, American specialties ranging from the hot dog to prime western sirloin.

Although a relatively small community, Coral Gables has nearly 100 restaurants covering a full spectrum from luxurious to Spartan. The large number of restaurants, in proportion to a population of some 44,000, reflects Coral Gables' stature as a prestige community with ample facilities.

For those whose dish is continental, there are several award-winning restaurants to choose from.

The high point of dining pleasure — literally — is the rooftop 700 Club of the David William Apartment Hotel, where a 14th-floor location supplements culinary pleasures with an eye-popping view of a large chunk of South Florida.

An intimate spot in the evenings, the 700 Club is also a men-only luncheon gathering place. A quick trip in a chandelier-lighted elevator to lobby level brings one to the Chez Vendome, continental in cuisine and decor, where Danish Chef Erik Jorgensen presides over the preparation of such specialties as Tartelette Daoois, a delicious appetizer made up of a pastry shell with prawns; Belgian Asparagus in a light Shrimp Sauce topped with Hollandaise; Steak au Poivre and Pheasant Georgienne. An excellent selection of wines is featured.

Coed Folk-Rock Sings Christianity

Recently a "minority" group confronted crowds of officers and noncommissioned officer candidates here and won their approval in an overwhelming fashion.

"The Minority" is not a political faction or radical pressure group, but a coed folk-rock group from West Palm Beach, Fla., which spreads the message of Christianity through a musical medium which ranges from Bach to rock.

The teenage singing group was featured at the 1969 International Kiwanis Convention held at Miami Beach.

The group of young people, who have been featured on three record albums and have appeared in concerts from Miami to Ontario, as well as on television in over 50 states, presented two concerts at Fort Benning.

TCB Applause

The first program was witnessed by over 350 officer candidates from the 6th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade, while the second was attended by several hundred noncommissioned officer candidates. Both shows generated applause and praise from the candidates.

The shows catered to a spectrum of musical tastes. The 55 folk-singing young people presented a varied program of folk and religious music, which ran the gamut from an a capella Bach chorale to what can only be described as a "funky folk-rock riff." The rock sound was accomplished by the accompaniment of four electric guitars, electric bass, banjo and drums.

Explaining the use of folk-rock in a religious context, the "minority" leader, O. D. Hall Jr., says, "We believe that more people 'dig' rock than appreciate any other type music today. We must appropriate this means to declare to the love-searchers that 'without Christ love is not to be found.' "

The group had dinner with the 62nd Company (OC) and breakfast with the 94th Company (OC).

Participation Reported High For Bond Sales

Savings bond participation at the Army Training Center for the month of July was reported at 98 per cent.

This perceotage reflects a one per cent increase over the previous month of June, according to Milton Carroll, director of Safety, Education and Funds.

New Company Dayroom Opens With Air-Conditioning, Sofas

"Man, we never had it so good."

These were the words of a soldier who is currently a member of 1st Casual Co., The Candidate Bde., Headquarters and Headquarters Co., The Candidate Bde., U.S. Army Infantry School, the unit reputed to be the Army's largest company.

His statement was in reference to the newest addition to the company: A plush, air-conditioned dayroom replete with soft lighting and even softer sofas and chairs.

The new dayroom, specifically designed to be used by the almost totally transient population of 1st Casual Co., was opened during a ceremony in which Command Sgt. Maj. James A. Scott, of The Candidate Bde., cut the ribbon to the entrance of the dayroom.

Capt. William T. Ipock, commander, Headquarters and Headquarters Co., TCB, said, "It is something that 1st Casual Co. has needed for a long while. We care that these troops can have some comfort in their off-duty time."

The dayroom—the second one in the company—is a testimonial to the initiative of the men in the unit, according to SSgt. Demetrois DeVane, operations sergeant of the company.

"I can't give the men enough credit. The work that you see represented here was done with all casual labor, most of it in voluntary, off-duty time. In fact, even the materials were donated by many casuals who wanted to see the project succeed," he said.

A lived-in barracks only 22 days ago, the day room now is a plush, cool place of relaxation which features stained paneled walls, partitions between activity areas, a chaplain's corner, a TV room with color TV, a pool room with two tables, a reading room and a closet filled with almost every game imaginable.

The overall decor is subdued, with shaded lights, floor lamps and light colored, heavily cushioned sofas and chairs.

They are many tables—some for reading and writing, and others are designed for games such as cards and chess.

Movie Synopsis

THE ITALIAN JOB. . A light hearted tale without a message—a rip roaring account of a daring and hilarious bullion raid in Italy, carried out by Michael Caine and a motley gang disguised as football fans. The crime is master-minded from the safety of an English jail by the arch criminal mind of Noel Coward. The fun and thrills come fast and furious — you will have to see it to believe it!

THE BIG BOUNCE . . . A suspenseful drama of youthful misadventure which revolves around a young migrant worker (Ryan O'Neal) on a California cucumber farm, who gets fired for fighting and takes up with the psychopathic mistress (Leigh Taylor-Young) of the rich boss. They get their kicks from criminal escapades and romping about!

THE PRIME OF MISS JEAN BRODIE . . . Maggie Smith stars as a flamboyant, lonely, vulnerable and increasingly desperate teacher who both inspires and destructively manipulates her girls in a British school. A magnificient performance not to be missed.

Son--Wet With Pie and Melon Wins Prizes, Gives Them to Dad

By SpS Joe DePriest

"Ready, set, go"

Some eight chins and noses plunged through the pie crust, some eight eager tongues attacked the blueberries below.

The pie-eating contest had begun at the HHC, Training Center's unit fund party held Saturday at Defenders Park in Sand Hill.

The contestants were dependent children; the objectives were fresh blueberry pies courtesy of the HHC USATCI mess hall.

Pie-eating, as anyone knows, is an art and the children competing employed several different styles in the hard fought contest.

For example: the Splashdown method, which consists of directing the whole face smack into a pie and going from there. Or the Nibble, a more cautious approach, beginning with a rabbit-like nibble on the outside crust: girls and pint-sizers preferred this approach.

Whatever the style, when the judge ordered, "everybody stop, everybody un.", eight smiling faces had one thing in common: a deep blueberry blue splatter.

The winners, 14-year-old Harold Bailey, son of SFC and Mrs. Calvin Bailey, and Dennis Jones, 11, son of WO and Mrs. Jack W. Jones, beamed with pride.

Their prizes? A blueberry pie apiece.

The fun wasn't over. No sooner had the blue-berried contestants wiped their mouths than many of them signed in for Phase Two: the watermelon eating contest.

Ready, set, go again and seeds began flying in the summer sun and several minutes later the winner turned out to be the blueberry champ himself, Harold Bailey.

"I'm gonna give the pie and this," he said, shouldering the prize, a good-sized watermelon, "to my daddy."

HHC personnel and their families made a day of it Saturday: good food, softball, volleyball, some serious horse shoe pitching, a USAIC show "Stars of the Future" and a Philippine dancer.

A lot of fun. And, for some, a lot of pie and watermelon, too.

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

BY BILL KLOEB

The largemouth bass is the universal fish most sought by anglers throughout the continental United States and southern Canada. The largemouth is also fast becoming the most popular fresh water fish in Hawaii and Puerto Rico. This all-American is missing only in Alaska.

Largemouth are readily identified by the position of the jaw joint. It extends well back of the eye, whereas on the smallmouth and other type bass it is below or forward of the eye.

Feeding habits rang from finicky to voracious but even a fully fed largemouth often can be goaded into striking out of sheer orneriness. This dog-in-the-manager trait has put many lunker on den walls.

Largemouth tend to dip to deeper levels during daylight hours, lying off a point or dropoff. In shallower lakes look for them in the densest aquatic growth — lily pads or weed beds.

Experienced fishermen have found that old stumps, fallen trees and bridge supports are productive targets for the lures. In shallow lakes crawl a weedless worm or spinner garnished with a strip of pork rind across a bed of water lilies or weed bed.

There are three ways of fishing heavy cover: putting the lure in open pockets and along the edges, working over submerged growth, and dredging it right on through. All three methods require different techniques and generally different lures, and not all of them are likely to work on a given day.

The edge and pocket fisherman needs accuracy because he's likely to be casting nonweedless lures. Slow moving and splashy stuff is likely to attract fish from a considerable distance, even if they can't see the bait for the vegetation. Working a weed bed from far out may waste a lot of time over barren water. A raking retrieve nearly parallel to the edge is better.

The most delicate heavy cover fishing is done over submerged vegetation because the fisherman can't see exactly what he is doing. In fishing a surface lure, almost any kind will work, but when you want to fish underwater grass and weed beds with submerged lure, it's best to use one that is about the same weight as the water it displaces. It will hover.

Wigglers and weedless spoons go either over the top or right through the growth. Throw a wiggler into the heavy stuff, let it sink slightly then raise your rod tip and speed up the reeling. The lure comes to the surface and the spinner makes a surface splutter. When the lure comes to what looks like a pocket in the grass, lower the rod and let the lure drop toward the bottom, speed up reeling then surface the lure again with the lift of the tip.

While the largemouth inhabits waters all over the United States, their growth varies in different areas. In south Georgia and Florida fisherman brag about 12-to-16-pounders with occasional lunkers going to 18 to 19 pounds. In the central south a 10-pounder merits headlines and north of the Ohio River a six-or eight-pounder is considered a prime specimen. This is attributed to the longer yearly growing period in the south.

The official record largemouth was taken from Montgomery Lake, Ga., by George W. Perry on June 2, 1932. His prize weighed 22 pounds, four ounces, was 32½ inches long and had a girth of 28 inches. Three of the five species of fresh water bass records have been taken in Georgia or Asbama. A six and a half redeye was landed at Halawakee Creek, Ala., March 24, 1967, and an eight-pound eight-ounce spotted bass was taken from Smith Lake, Ala., May 3, 1968.

Rosetti Is Third in National Skeet Shoot

Specialist 5 Anthony Rosetti of the Marksmanship Training Unit placed third in the National Skeet Shooting Association World Championships at the Rochester Brooks Gun Club, Rochester, N. Y., last weekend.

Rosetti, a military shooter, firing with a disadvantage, ended in the shoot-off for the championship. (All military shooters were required to call for the bird with the shotgun at the hip starting position while civilian shooters already had their guns shouldered.)

His concentrated efforts downed 250 birds for the shoot-off.

In the shoot-off Rosetti looked like he was going to go all the way. He broke his eighteenth straight bird but rallied to hit the nineteenth. His 250 plus 18 put him in third place.

J. Bradford of Oregon went 37 straight birds before eliminating Paul LaPorte of Canada for the championship. LaPorte dropped his 36th bird and ended up in second.

Rosetti's third place win gave him the military class championship. His teammate Sp4 Jay Gerlich just missed the shoot-off and broke 249 birds to take second in the military class.

Pistol Team Sets Record In National

CAMP PERRY, Ohio (AP) — Two national records were set and one other tied Monday in the opening day of competition in the National Pistol Championships at Camp Perry.

The Army blue team whipped out an 1189-66x in the .22 caliber pistol match to erase the old mark of 1186-56x set by the Army in 1966.

The team was led by six-time national champion Sgt. Maj. William B. Blankenship Jr. of Richlands, Va. His teammates were SFC Robert Whitacre of Columbus, Ga., Sgt. Hershel Anderson, Tracy City, Tenn., and Sgt. Bonnie Harmon, Columbus, Ga.

Harmon also took a narrow lead in the battle for individual honors as he posted an 891-48x.

U.S. Netters Have Never Lost a Game

Army Stars Lead United States To CISM Basketball Victories

ATHENS, GREECE (ANF) — The U.S. Armed Forces basketball team, comprised of all Army starters, won the 1969 Conseil International Du Sport Militarie (CISM) basketball championship by defeating Greece 65-48 in the third and final game.

Sparked by the 16-point efforts of the forwards, Capt. Mike Silliman from TAGO, Washington, D.C., and Pvt. Kenny Washington from Fort Ord, Calif., the U.S. cagers' victory over Greece added to their undefeated record, unblemished since CISM net competition began in 1953.

In the first day of competition, the U.S. team romped over West Germany 79-42, while Greece rolled up an easy 84-57 victory over France.

In the second round, the U.S. team defeated the French armed forces 96-58, while Greece outscored West Germany 63-39.

The final day of the CISM basketball tourney netted the U.S. cagers the championship with their win over Greece, while France outlasted West Germany 56-50.

Following the games, an awards ceremony was held with the U.S. team receiving the gold medals for first place, Greece winning the silver medals for runnerup and France winning the bronze medallions for third place.

Other U.S. Army cagers who shared the glory of the CISM championship were Pfc. Harold Jeter from Fort Carson, Colo., and Pvt. Garfield Smith from Presidio of San Francisco.

Cautions On Fishing Hazards

The millions of Americans whose favorite sport is fishing were cautioned by the American Red Cross to avoid the hazards that may result in tragic accidents, as another fishing season gets under way.

"Fishing takes place in an environment where accidents can and do happen," said Robert M. Oswald, national director of Red Cross Safety Programs. "Our aim is to reduce such accidents as much as possible by pointing out the dangers, and encouraging fishermen to equip themselves with first aid and water safety training."

A special danger is that of prolonged immersion in cold water. Fishermen who fall into extremely cold water will lose body heat rapidly, thus reducing their ability to move through the water and save themselves.

"We advise victims of such accidents to get out of the water as soon as possible," Mr. Oswald said, "although in more favorable water conditions our advice is to stay with the boat."

He listed these further suggestions for fishermen's safety:

1. All fishermen should learn how to swim, know basic first aid, and carry a first aid kit on their fishing trips.

2. They should listen for weather forecasts and not go out when threatening weather is forecast.

3. Since fishhooks sometimes catch anglers as well as fish, the former should carry needlenose pliers, wire cutters, and a pocketknife in tackle boxes. Always keep hooks in covered containers.

4. Anglers, when casting, should make certain there is room to do so without hooking someone else. Always look before casting, and use an overhead cast when in a boat with others.

5. When going on a fishing trip alone, leave word where you will be and when you plan to return. However, it's much more safe to fish with a companion.

6. Do not fish in waters where there are swimmers, water skiers, skin and scuba divers.

7. Along the shore, wade cautiously to avoid slipping on unseen rocks or stepping suddenly into deep water.

8. Learn how to hold a fish properly while extracting a hook. Many species of fish have sharp teeth or fins that can cause painful hand wounds.

9. If you snag yourself deeply with a hook, cut off the line, bandage the wound, and head for the nearest doctor or hospital. Don't risk further injury while trying to remove a deeply imbedded hook.

10. In snake-infested country, watch where you step and sit, and what you touch. Wear high boots, because half of all snake bites are below the midcalf.

11. When fishing in channels or rivers, never tie your boat to channel buoys. It is illegal. These are traffic markers and must always be kept clear.

12. Never stand up in a boat while fishing, and always have a life preserver for every passenger.

Babe Ruth Team Gets Donation From Post

A $500 check was presented to the North Columbus Babe Ruth All Stars Tuesday by Fort Benning's commander.

Bill Sebastian, president of the North Columbus Babe Ruth League accepted the check from Maj. Gen. George L. Forsythe, commanding general.

The money, from funds contributed by all persons at Fort Benning for youth and community activities, will be used to help the Southeast Regional Babe Ruth League champions participate in the Babe Ruth World Series in Mattoon, Illinois next week.

Several of the youths are sons of Fort Benning soldiers.

Money was the main problem that the All Stars faced after their 9-2 victory over defending champion East Nashville Thursday Aug. 7, for the regional championship.

Official championship uniforms are required for series participation and the All Stars treasury had been depleted by the trip to the Southeastern championships in Nashville.

Travel expenses to Mattoon were another source of worry for coach Buddy Wright.

"We are all set to go to the World Series except for one thing," he said upon returning to Columbus after the Nashville victory, "and that is money."

With the contributions from both Fort Benning and the Columbus civilian community, the All-Stars left for Illinois Wednesday.

Their first game will be against the Pacific Southwest champs El Segundo of California Sunday afternoon.

The Series, in which a maximum of 10 teams may participate, is a double elimination contest with the finals scheduled for next Friday.

Wright thinks his 17 players have a good chance at the championship.

"We're going up there to win," he said earlier this week. "I still think we can take the title up there if we really want it."

Johnson Wins In Center Golf Tourney

Sergeant First Class Thurman A. Johnson, 41st Co., 4th Stu. Bn., TSB, won the second flight of the 1969 USAIC Golf Tournament.

The tournament was held at the Ft. Benning Officers Open Mess Golf Course July 29 to August 1. Competition was held in the men's open division and the senior division. Forty-seven personnel from the various major units participated.

SFC Johnson won the second flight of the men's open division with a score of 338 for 72 holes. Awards for the competition were presented on August 7 by Colonel W. B. Wisdom, then deputy post commander.

SFC Johnson has been playing golf since he attended Williston High School in Wilmington, N. C. He entered the Army after high school, and continued to play for the 11th Division golf team in Germany. He now tries to play at least twice a week.

The tournament was played on the difficult Pine Side of the Ft. Benning course. SFC Johnson says he "played a steady game in the low 80s" to win the tournament, and "had the most difficulty with the long par 3 holes".

For years we've had a perfectly good, used TV set in our garage. I sold it with a FAMILY WANT AD.

Records Are Broken in Little Camp Perry Matches

Records were broken as the Little Camp Perry matches, in preparation for the National Matches, concluded Friday on MacAndrews Range here.

The new shooters training with the veteran marksmen from the Marksmanship Training Unit established some impressive records.

S-Sgt. Earl Waterman took top honors in the over-all championship with a 978 score. S-Sgt. Elmer Mondon placed one point behind Waterman to win the new shooter category.

Army veteran SFC Raymond Calvez showed that experience counts. He demonstrated his ability with the bolt rifle by scoring a 382 for the Bolt Rifle Championship.

One of the longest standing records in rifle marksmanship, fired from the 1000 yard line and known as the Wimbledon Cup, was broken by S-Sgt. Daniel Krammes. Krammes steadied his rifle to pound away a score of 100 with all twenty shots in the smaller x-ring, plus an extra eleven shots in the center ring. The record was 100-20 plus seven. Krammes added four x's to the record.

In the second 1,000 yard match known as the Leech Cup, SFC Herbert Duncan ended up two x's shy of the record. His score of 100-16x won the match for him. S-Sgt. Anthony Leibhart won the Service Rifle portion of both 1,000 yard matches.

In the shorter range matches SFC Calvez fired twenty rounds down range in the Navy Cup match at 200 yards, slow fire, and ended up with a new national record of 196-7x, old mark was 193-3x. Calvez also captured the second of two 600 yard matches, the Air Force Cup.

SFC Charles Davis won the Coast Guard Trophy match, fired at 200 yards rapid fire. Mondon won the 300 yard Marine Corps cup match and Duncan took the first 600 yard Army Cup match.

Two records were set during the three team matches.

A new record was established in the Enlisted Men's Trophy team match by SFC Leslie Drake's team using bolt rifles. The team members Duncan, Calvez, S-Sgt. Pat Boyle, SFC Tolani Telesco, SFC James McQuien, and 1st Lt. Eric Sundstrom combined their efforts on the firing line for a 1758. Old mark was 1756.

SFC Harry Tharp coached six-man shooting team of McQuien, 1st Lt. Alfred King, S-Sgt. Martin Edmondson, SFC Lionen Lowe, S-Sgt. Ronald Way and Sp4 Michael Frazier in the National Trophy team to a new record. They bettered the old mark of 2077-65x by 6x's, 2077-71x.

The final team match, the Rumbold Trophy team match was won by SFC Kenner Ravencraft's six-man team. Members were SFC Richard Rebidue, SFC Charles Davis, SFC Clinton Stephens, S-Sgt. George Floyd, S-Sgt. Crowell and S-Sgt. Hector Andujar.

By Marc Reiff

Let's all give a big clap (just one please) for the signing of the big O.J. He has finally decided to honor the Buffalo Bills by signing his contract and condescended to show us all what the next super star of football can do.

This energetic young man milked all possible publicity out of his campaign for more money and it is now hoped by many (including the Bills) that he can produce up to expectations.

Buffalo was the AFL champion in 1964-65 and the Eastern Division leader in 1966 but hit rock bottom last season with a 1-12-1 mark. So many players were out with injuries that the only good to come of last season was that they had first crack at Simpson. Somehow, Bill (Earthquack) Enyart, the All-American fullback from Oregon State, was available in the second round and the pair should compliment each other extremely well.

Simpson carried the ball 355 times for 1,709 yards and 22 touchdowns at Southern California and Enyart bulled his way to 17 touchdowns in 23 attempts that netted him 1,204 yards.

With a healthy quarterback situation this year, the Bills are in a position to win back the title that they once held. Jack Kemp, the number one thrower, was removed by a knee injury during training period last year. Tom Flores underwent shoulder surgery and was lost for the season after starting only one game. Rookie Dan Darragh was hampered by injuries to his right arch, left ankle, throwing arm and ribs (did I leave anything out?).

Ultimately, the Bills called on Ed Rutkowski (who?) who has been a split end, running back, defensive safety, kickoff return specialist — and quarter-back, as a sophomore at Notre Dame eight years earlier.

But this year the Bills are counting on O.J. to help carry them all the way. His followers, notably Leroy Keys, Ron Johnson and Ted Kwalick waited with baited breath to find out how much Simpson would receive before inking their contracts. When word spread that the Bills were not going as high as hoped for, most of the collegians decided to sign before their own value decreased.

Simpson did the right thing of course. He might have been able to make it for awhile as a movie actor or singer but in a few years, his Heisman trophy would be getting rusty on his mantle and his name would no longer be a household word. A great football star should stick to what he does best — playing football and O.J. finally came to this realization.

IS BASEBALL DEAD? NOT BY A LONG SHOT

A currently popular theme among advocates of football is that baseball is dead. We hear of declining attendance, lethargic play by expansion teams, boring pitching duels, and slow, lengthy games.

In this, the hundredth year of professional baseball, I submit that baseball is truly finding a way to combat these ills. The current races in the National League are sweet testimony to this. As of this writing, the fifth place team in the West is only 4½ games behind the leader. The Reds, Braves, Dodgers, Giants and Astros are fiercely battling right down to the wire. If this is not a deterent to declining attendance, I am a monkey's uncle.

In the East, the Mets have been turning away fans at every home game and the same goes for the Cubs. These two teams have built up the most vocal fans in baseball. The Mets' fans even cheered Swoboda one game when he fanned 5 times. Try to tell any of them that they are a dying breed and you had better duck.

The young, well-heeled, with-it crowd has the corner on football but these are also the same ones who snap up all available tickets to the world series. Football has a much shorter season, is played once a week and is a violent contact sport that the young thrive on. But baseball also commands their attention. There are the steadfast fans on both sides and many who cross over.

Finance Wins League's Title

Headquarters and Headquarters Team No. 2 (Finance Section) won the overall ATC Slowpitch Softball Championship Wednesday night, Aug. 6, by defeating 7th Battalion in a play off doubleheader.

The playoff was necessary because 7th Battalion won the second half league title. Hq. and Hq. team 2 had won the first half league championship.

In the first game of the doubleheader, Headquarters Team banged out 11 hits to defeat 7th Battalion 6-3. M.-Sgt. Quinn was the winning hurler allowing 8 hits. In the second game Headquarters team again ripped 11 hits to defeat 7th Battalion for the championship, 12-2. M.-Sgt. Quinn picked up his second victory for the night, giving up just 5 hits. The ATC champions sent 12 batters to the plate in the 8th inning, scoring 8 runs in the outburst to sew up the victory. Sp5 Bud Wille led the hitting attack in the second game going 4 for 4 at the plate.

Both Hq. and Hq. Team 2 and 7th Battalion will advance to a double-elimination tournament on main post which will establish the post champion. Each league on post will have two representatives for the tournament with the exception of 10th Aviation Group and Martin Army Hospital. The tournament will run from August 18-29 and will be conducted at Gowdy Field with two games being played each night at 1830 hrs. and 2000.

Commenting on the general conduct of the ATC League play, Lt. W. R. Williams, Training Center Special Services Officer, stated "Interest and enthusiasm were high throughout league play. All personnel concerned, including fans and participants, displayed exceptional esprit de corps.

Racing Around

Flagging Worker's Life Not All Fun and Glory

By Snow Wilson (and envy)

Ever wonder how those people on a road race course corner get their jobs?

It's really pretty simple — they just asked for them.

Then, after a two hour course on which flag to use for each emergency, how to operate a good old Army double eight phone, how to get a driver out of a bent car before it catches on fire and the reasons for not pointing a dry chemical extinguisher at his face, they are ready for work and have a free pass to the race.

But if isn't all fun and glory.

Out in the Boonies

The novice "flagging and communication worker" usually finds himself way out in the boonies, armed with a broom instead of a flag, and saddened by the discovery he is not to use his camera under any circumstance.

Seems the old timers feel he'll be too interested in using the camera instead of the fire extinguisher when that accident does happen.

And after four or five week-ends and your hands are well calloused you may get to hold the flags. You also get a license that will get you into the big races without paying — but you have to work.

The Only Catch

The only catch to all is you have to join the SCCA before you can work.

A few of those nuts from Chavaga Region of the SCCA are taking off this evening for Pensacola where a Regional race is being held over the week-end. This is a non-spectator event and the only way to see it is by either driving, being part of a pit crew or working a corner so maybe its worth the effort.

In the meantime Chavaga's "Run-A Way" Slalom, held last Sunday at the James W. Blanchard Industrial Park on Victory Drive in Columbus, could only be described by the drivers as "GREAT!"

R. E. Linton of Montgomery, driving a 64 Vette, took the time of day with a 1:11.210 but was only four seconds faster than Sgt. Joe White who won the small sedan class in a Austin America.

Two Wheelers

If you are interested in the two wheelers, there is supposed to be a race tomorrow night at the Tri-County oval.

And tonight the Hobby and Sportsman NASCAR classes are running at Tri-County. If last week's 40 lap "demo derby," where C. L. King managed to beat "King" McDonald," is any indication, there should be action tonight.

Tomorrow night at the drag-strip over Phenix City way a gathering of the big horses of Alabama will take place. So, if big hairy engines making a lot of noise and wild looking machinery is your thing, that's the place to be.

Next week the big ones of the sports car field will be running at Selma, Ala., over a 2.69 mile airport course. This is a Regional-National Championship race and it's open to the public.

As mentioned before, it's best to know the rules and the event is not just a race but a bunch of races. Five races will be held on Saturday for drivers holding only regional licenses and five on Sunday for the more experienced with National tickets.

A Little Involved

After that it gets a little more involved.

A good example is the Group IV race where E-P Production, C-Sedan and C-Sports Racing cars are all on the track at the same time.

If you are really interested in the details, see someone in Chavaga as the classifications get pretty involved.

COMPUTER CORNER

By Bud Goode

Art Linkletter asked one of the eight-year-old kids on his television show to name his favorite Bible story. The younster replied, "David and Goliath . . . the little guy hit the big guy in the head with a rock and knocked him silly."

Asked Linklatter, "What moral do you learn from that story?"

Quoth the kid, "To duck."

Not many batters are hit in the head. But plenty of batters are hit by pitchers — on the elbow, arm or backside. During one week in July in the National League 19 batters were targets earning free rides to first base, and 17 were hit in the American League.

Thirty per cent of those 36 free base runners scored, costing the opposition pitchers 11 runs.

When the batter is the bulls-eye and is hit by the pitch, it may not raise his batting average. But it puts runners on base and it does score runs. And getting on base is the name of the game.

To measure the percentage of times teams get on base, whether by way of a hit, base-on-balls, or hit-by-pitch, Computer Corner poured the season statistics into our Univac sports analyzer with these results (games of July 22):

AMERICAN LEAGUE

EAST	ON BASE AVERAGE	WEST	ON BASE AVERAGE
BALTIMORE	.353	MINNESOTA	.347
BOSTON	.343	OAKLAND	.334
WASHINGTON	.330	CHICAGO	.317
DETROIT	.323	SEATTLE	.316
NEW YORK	.312	KANSAS CITY	.308
CLEVELAND	.305	CALIFORNIA	.293
	Average — .324

NATIONAL LEAGUE

CHICAGO	.345	CINCINNATI	.328
PITTSBURGH	.336	HOUSTON	.340
ST. LOUIS	.319	SAN FRANCISCO	.332
NEW YORK	.316	ATLANTA	.338
MONTREAL	.315	LOS ANGELES	.319
PHILADELPHIA	.315	SAN DIEGO	.287
	Average — .326

Only two teams are below the .300 mark in getting on base — California in the American League, and San Diego in the National. Surprises? Houston is reaching first base at a .340 clip, less than one percentage point behind the strong hitting Cincinnati Reds. And Houston is still improving.

The St. Louis Cardinals? Their bats are getting hot. But to win the 98 games and catch the Chicago Cubs, the Cards must play .764 ball down the season back stretch. The odds are long and against them.

97th Company Wins Slowpitch Softball League

The 97th Co. (OC), 9th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade, held off a late inning rally by the 71st Co. (NCOC), thereby winning the Candidate Brigade Softball Championship with a 2-1 victory.

The slow-pitch game, which was played before a large audience at Gowdy Field on August 10, was notable for the intelligent and co-ordinated defensive play which both teams exhibited throughout.

The 97th Co. was the first team to produce a run, this tally coming in the bottom half of the first inning. This lead did not last long, however, since 71st Co. struck back by scoring a run in the top of the second inning.

The fateful marker of the game came in the bottom half of the third inning, when OC Max E. Scott III scored the second run for the 97th Co., as he was driven in by a hit produced by OC Cecil S. Atchley Jr. This margin of one run lasted for the rest of the game despite a valiant attempt by the 71st Co. to rally in the last frame.

The winning pitcher for the 97th Co. was Gilbert R. Montano.

Bronze Star Presented To Sp4's Mother

By Sgt. Carol Aubin

The Bronze Star Medal with "V" device and the Purple Heart were presented to the mother of Sp4 Charles C. Walker during a posthumous award ceremony.

Mrs. Doris N. Gilbert of Eufaula, Ala., was presented the medals by Col. Talton W. Long, deputy post commander, during a special ceremony held to honor her son who was killed in action in the Republic of Vietnam March 29.

The citation accompanying the Bronze Star Medal praised Walker for "heroism in connection with a hostile force in the Republic of Vietnam."

"Specialist Walker distinguished himself by exceptionally valorous actions while serving as a pointman with Company A, 2nd Battalion, 1st Infantry Division," the citation read, in part.

It stated, "While on combat operations near the village of Tien Phuoc, the company was ambushed by an enemy force of undetermined size. With complete disregard for his own safety, Specialist Walker assaulted the enemy position and provided covering fire for the rest of his comrades.

"While maneuvering through the intense hostile fire, Specialist Walker was mortally wounded. Through his self sacrifice, he was responsible for saving the lives of many of his comrades," the citation said.

Walker, a 1967 graduate of Eufaula High School, was awarded the Purple Heart for the wounds he received in military operations which resulted in his death.

Also attending the posthumous ceremony were Joe Frank Walker and Kenneth Walker, brothers of the specialist, Mrs. Audrey Knight and Mrs. Helen Day.

OC Grad Commands Old Training Unit

By PFC George Burks

Fourteen years after he graduated as a second lieutenant from Officer Candidate School, Charles J. Mendoza returned to 54th Co. (Officer Candidate), 5th Stu. Bn., here and took two "giant steps" forward.

First, Mendoza was promoted to lieutenant colonel; the following day, he assumed command of the 5th Stu. Bn. of the Candidate Brigade.

Mendoza says, "It was a unique challenge to have been an officer candidate and a distinct honor to be taking over as commanding officer of the same battalion."

Improved OCS

Speaking of the Officer Candidate program, he feels that there have been great improvements because of the college option program and because of the number of prior service soldiers who are now attending OCS.

As an enlisted man, he served with the rank of sergeant in the 17th Infantry Regiment in Schweinfurt, Germany, in 1954. From there he was sent to OCS by (then) Col. Bruce Palmer Jr., the current Army vice chief of staff.

As an officer, Mendoza has served overseas tours in the Republic of Korea, Okinawa and the Republic of Vietnam.

Mendoza, since completing his training in OCS, has attended several other schools. They include airborne, Ranger, motor officer, pathfinder, advanced Infantry officer, language school, Special Forces, psychological operations and the U. S. Army Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

Mendoza received his bachelor of science degree in government (under the "Boot Strap" program), graduating cum laude from Campbell College, Buies Creek, N. C.

Outstanding Young Man

While in that school he was selected as the outstanding senior and was nominated by the alumni association of the college for the title of "Outstanding Young Man of America." He was awarded the title in 1967 by the American Junior Chamber of Commerce.

The colonel is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Mendoza of El Cerrito, Calif.

Volvo's reputation for holding up wasn't earned by breaking down.

It was earned by lasting an average of 11 years in Sweden, where it's tough being a car.

Of course, we don't guarantee that a Volvo will last 11 years in America, where being a car is relatively easy. But we do know that 9 out of every 10 Volvos registered here in the last eleven years are still on the road. When a car is built to last like that, it can be driven a long way before it reaches the breaking point.

So a Volvo not only lasts long enough to get you out from under car payments. It also works well enough to keep you from getting into mechanic payments.

Which means you can drive one a long time without ever reaching the broke point.

Department of State Needs Cryptographers

"A coup d'etat can triple your workload and keep you on duty around the clock," according to Foreign Service Communications Specialists who work at American Embassies around the world.

During crisis conditions maintaining the communications lifelines to State Department headquarters in Washington can be exciting business. Foreign policy is based on the cables they expedite and this vital technical support team takes great pride in their work.

At any of the department's 300 overseas posts, duties vary according to the size of the embassy or consulate. At small posts these communications specialists are in charge of the cable, file and pouch room, and at large posts they work in communications centers sending and receiving classified messages. Assignment to Washington or Bonn means working in the most modern, highly computerized terminal and relay stations in the world.

The U. S. Department of State has an urgent need for qualified young men and women to embark on Foreign Service careers in the communications field and for those who make the grade, the rewards are immeasurable.

By qualified they mean at least 18 months of actual cryptographic or teletype operational (non-supervisory) experience gained within the past two years, and in addition they must be high school graduates, at least 21, able to pass typing and clerical tests and agree to serve at any of 300 overseas posts.

They can be single or married with no other dependents than a wife at the time of application. They must be American citizens for a minimum of ten years and if married, wife must be an American citizen who has resided in the U. S. for at least two years.

Appointments are made to the Foreign Service Staff Corps and the entrance level of FSS-9 equates to GS-5 at an annual salary of $6,158. The outstanding employee can progress to FSS-2 with an annual salary of $15,812. Fringe benefits include a housing allowance at overseas posts, when government housing is not available, a cost of living allowance if life at post is more expensive than in Washington, D. C. and an additional 10 per cent to 25 per cent of base salary at posts where unhealthful conditions or undue hardships exist. Applicants with a foreign language who pass a fluency test receive extra pay.

Widow Accepts Awards

The Silver Star and a Purple Heart were awarded posthumously to Sgt. Carlton J. Johnson in ceremonies here.

Accepting the decorations was Mrs. Linda K. Johnson of Tallahassee, Fla., widow of the sergeant. She also accepted the Good Conduct Medal and Combat Infantryman Badge on her husband's behalf.

Johnson died of wounds received in the Republic of Vietnam March 5, 1969, when, during an enemy attack, he continously exposed himself to intense enemy fire to resupply his men with ammunition and help evacuate the wounded.

As the attack progressed a m m u n i t i o n was airdropped to the company but it landed forward of the friendly positions. Johnson moved forward twice to recover the badly needed ammunition. On his second trip he was mortally wounded by enemy small arms fire.

He was serving as a squad leader with Co. D, 3rd Bn., 8th Inf. 4th Inf. Div.

Prior to his death, Johnson had been awarded the National Defense Service Medal, Expert Badge with automatic rifle and motor bars, the Marksman Badge with rifle bar, Vietnam service Medal and Vietnam Campaign Ribbon.

WAC Cadet Officers Visit and Dance at TCB

The Candidate Brigade (TCB) played host to 140 Womens Army Corps (WAC) cadets from Fort McClellan, Ala., recently, entertaining them with a dance and a guided tour.

The WAC cadets are part of the College Junior Program similar to the men's Reserve Officer Training Corps.

The cadets are juniors from colleges all over the country. They are on active duty for four weeks of training and orientation.

A social evening for the ladies was held by the officer candidates of the 54th Company, 5th Student Battalion, TCB, at the Gold Bar Club.

After an introduction by Capt. James Jasper, 54th Company commander, dance music set the pace of the evening. The party gave the future officers a chance to meet their counterparts and to get an idea of military social life.

The next day began with breakfast in the OCS mess halls of the 52nd, 53rd, 54th and 55th companies. Following breakfast the cadets were given briefings and tours by the commanders of the companies.

Following the tours, the group visited Wiggle Hall, home of the OCS Hall of Fame. Here they received a welcome speech by Col. Robert M. Piper, commanding officer of The Candidate Brigade, after which a tour of the Hall of Fame concluded their visit to the Candidate Brigade.

1st Cavalry Division

Review To Open 3-Day Reunion

By SFC Richard Kemp

Nearly 1,000 members of the 1st Cavalry Division Association will officially begin the organization's 1969 reunion with a formal review on York Field before Infantry Hall today at 3:15 p.m.

The review will mark the start of three days of activities planned both at Fort Benning and the Ralston Hotel in downtown Columbus, the convention center.

Approximately 400 advance registrations for the reunion had been received Tuesday and early arrivals began signing in at the Ralston noon Thursday.

Those who came early had the opportunity to take the Callaway Gardens tour or Heritage tour Thursday afternoon.

Military buses from Fort Benning will provide transportation between Columbus and the post for those attending the reunion's various functions, which include a social gathering from 8 p.m. - midnight tonight.

Following a breakfast Saturday morning, the association members will journey from the hotel to Infantry Hall where Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, acting post commanding general, will welcome them.

While at the auditorium, they will see the tableau "I am the Infantry" and a "Big Picture" film on the 1st Cavalry Division.

During the remainder of Saturday, the events scheduled include a demonstration of the Airborne 5000 problem at Eubanks Field at about 10:50 a.m., lunch in unit messes at noon and a demonstration of a platoon in counter guerrilla operations at Higley Hill at 2:10 p.m.

The association members will then return to Columbus but will be back at Fort Benning at 7:05 p.m. for a dinner and dance at the Fort Benning Officers Club.

A former division commander, Lt. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, will speak during a memorial service planned for 9:30 a.m. Sunday at Marshall Auditorium.

See More Cavalry Stories On Page 10

This will be followed by a sky diving demonstration on York Field at 10:10 a.m.

The reunion will end following a two-hour business meeting starting at 11 a.m.

All Fort Benning officers and men have been invited to participate in the association's activities including Friday's social gathering which costs $2 a person and the dinner dance Saturday, costing $5 a person.

Those who desire to join the association may do so by paying a $10 fee for a life membership. Registration fee for the reunion is $3.

The central registration desk is located in the lobby of the Ralston Hotel.

In the event of inclement weather, the outdoor events planned for Friday and Saturday afternoons and Sunday morning will be cancelled.

Official host for the reunion is General Davis, who served with the division in the Republic of Vietnam before coming to Fort Benning.

Fort Benning Sends 700 To Aid Hurricane-Hit Area

By SFC Richard Kemp

Disaster relief efforts on the Mississippi coast are being conducted by more than 700 officers and men from Fort Benning in conjunction with the national concentration of resources to aid the area hardest hit by Hurricane Camille.

The Fort Benning contingent includes the 43rd Engineer Bn., elements of the 177th and 197th Aviation Companies, Martin Army Hospital and the Center Troop Command.

The first contingent left the post at 12:30 a.m. Tuesday with two water purification units capable of producing a total of 3,000 gallons of water per hour.

Other groups left later Tuesday and the remainder left Wednesday by convoy to Gulfport, Miss., where the most severe damage has been recorded.

A chronology of Fort Benning's commitment shows:

— Two 1,500 gallon per hour water purification units left at 12:30 a.m. Tuesday for Gulfport. This group included 2nd Lt. William E. Shook with six enlisted men from the 72nd Engineer Co., 197th Inf. Bde., and 2nd Lt. Charles M. Ladow with nine enlisted men from the 43rd Engineer Bn., 93ist Engineer Group.

— Three HU-1D helicopters left at 4 a.m. Tuesday, two for Gulfport to work with Red Cross officials and one for New Orleans to assist federal observers.

— A 100 kilowatt generator was flown from Lawson Army Airfield at 6:40 p.m. Tuesday by a C-124 Globemaster II to Gulfport. The aircraft was from the 445th Military Airlift Wing at Dobbins Air Force Base.

— The advance party from the 43rd Engineer Bn. left at 6:30 a.m. Wednesday for Gulfport. The main body, including a seven-man medical team from Martin Army Hospital, photographers and information specialists assigned to Center Troop Command, left later.

— Later Wednesday, three HU-1Ds from the 197th Aviation Co. and three CH-47s from the 177th Aviation Co. left for the municipal airport at Gulfport where they reported to the National Guard's operation center.

Safety Officer Warns Of Pedestrian Hazard

By Bill Hardin

Fort Benning's safety officer, Norman M. Evans, has issued a word of caution for motorists here.

Commenting on a recent accident at a neighboring Army installation which claimed two lives and injured 14 others, Evans said, "The extremely tragic accident has brought closer to home the possibility of what could happen here. Let us take note of this accident in which an Army sergeant drove his car into a group of marching troops and pledge to use more caution when driving in areas where troops are likely to be marching."

"Most incidents such as the one over the past weekend at Fort Gordon do occur at night. Motorists should exercise extra caution during the hours of darkness when they are fatigued and marching men are more difficult to see," Evans said.

The safety director also warned that with shorter periods of daylight in the coming months, the hazard of pedestrians on streets is increased. Caution by motorists also should be increased.

Evans extended his warning to pedestrians, urging them to be constantly alert for the unexpected, especially during the hours of darkness. He stressed the need for pedestrians to carry flashlights or reflectorized items when possible.

Walk on the left side of the road, facing traffic.

Wearing white such as a handkerchief tied around the arm if no light or reflectorized items of clothing are available.

Candidates Set Record For PCPT

To quote a cliche, "Records are made to be broken."

This was the case of the 9th (OC) Co., 9th Stu. Bn. The Candidate Bde. The Officer Candidates of the Company, commanded by Capt. Roger Dimsdale have established a new 9th (OC) Bn. Physical Combat Proficiency Test record of 441.4.

The company was led by such athletes as Candidate Gavin Riley, two-time All-American miler; however, the efforts of all were evident in the results.

Twenty-two candidates attained more than 475 points each and forty-four candidates exceeded the score of 465 points.

The test was the last for the candidates before graduation.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

King's Pizza On Call

Save the leafy stubs of carrots, turnips or beets to grow pretty, fernlike plants. Just put them upright on pebbles in a shallow pan in a sunny window. Water daily and replace dropouts when necessary.

Liederkranz, a true native American, was created in the Gay 90s by a New York cheese merchant after nostalgic German members of the Liederkranz Singing Society complained they missed a similar cheese from their native land.

CHEMICAL, BIOLOGICAL AGENTS

What is the U. S. policy regarding use of chemical and biological agents in the Republic of Vietnam?

The U. S. has never used biological agents and since World War I has not used lethal gas. In 1925, a treaty at the Geneva Conference called for the prohibition of war gas and bacteriological warfare. The treaty was not ratified by the U.S.; however, the U.S. has recognized its principles and objectives.

The U. S. uses riot control agents, e.g., tear gas — throughout the world and they are not included in the category of war gas. These are employed against selected military targets and not against areas inhabited by civilians.

The U. S. uses defoliants to destroy vegetation in order to clear areas habitually used for enemy infiltration. The use of herbicides by the U. S. has only temporary effects because the vegetation returns after a short period of time; and, like defoliants, their use is normally accomplished at the request of South Vietnamese officials and always only with the permission of the Republic of Vietnam government.

Two zoologists — Dr. Egbert W. Pfeiffer of the University of Montana and Dr. Gordon H. Orians of the University of Washington — visited Vietnam in 1969 to investigate the effects of defoliation at the request of the Society for Social Responsibility in Science. They reported that the effects of defoliants and herbicides were considerably less horrible than some lurid accounts have depicted.

Dr. Pfeiffer further reported that it was "completely unrealistic" for anybody to expect military commanders to forego the defoliating safeguards: "There is no question about it; they save American lives."

• • •

"HAMBURGER HILL"

Since the President reportedly has instructed General Abrams to maintain pressure on the enemy with a minimum of casualties, why do U. S. commanders in the field risk heavy casualties in such actions as "Hamburger Hill?"

Hill 937, or "Hamburger Hill," was not a unique combat experience in the Republic of Vietnam. It was, in fact, similar in many respects to other actions in previous years wherein the VC and NVA have elected or been forced to stand and fight. The mission of U. S. troops is to destroy or capture the enemy.

Had the U. S. commander in the field passed up the opportunity to destroy the enemy on Hill 937, he would have invited the destruction of his own forces at a place and time of the enemy's choosing.

The enemy on Hill 937 was deeply entrenched. Three hundred tactical air sorties and 10,000 rounds of artillery were committed. In the end, Infantry attacks were necessary to destroy or capture the enemy.

In summary, U. S. troops attacked Hill 937 because the enemy was located there; had they failed to attack, they would have then invited the enemy to attack them at a time and place of the latter's choice.

MESS HALL ONE, THIS IS MESS HALL TWO . . . . TURN YOUR EGGS OVER.

The Littering Problem

Litterbugs and littering are menaces. It costs U.S. taxpayers an estimated $500 million annually to remove litter from streets, highways, parks, beaches and other public property.

Military bases, once showplaces for spic-and-span tidiness, are now included in the litter areas. Although they are more rigidly controlled than our streets and highways, littering on our bases is a serious problem.

In addition to the enormous cost, litter, in whatever form it may be, is a health menace as well as a disgrace. It creates breeding grounds for disease-carrying insects and rodents. It is repulsive to those who remember the oases of cleanliness and beauty military bases once were.

The problem of littering is of far greater importance on military establishments where we live and work in a more confining situation. It is closely akin to the family unit. Thus, for efficient, smooth operation there must be a clean and healthy environment in which to live and work.

Disposal of litter is a costly problem, but this is minor when the overall loss of time and money is considered. For example: Check the dump area of any military establishment and you will find piles of soft drink bottles, perfectly good, reusable, returnable bottles — a great deal of loss in revenue.

These bottles get there by careless and indifferent personnel, both civilian and military, tossing them aside, either in or at trash cans or out of a car window.

Profit derived from the sale of soft drinks at many military establishments is credited to the recreation fund. So, military and civilian personnel who carelessly lose or discard refillable bottles are knifing their own pleasure and that of their co-workers.

Empty soft drink bottles and cans, although far from being the entire cause of the litter problem, greatly contribute to it.

Do your part in the war against litter by first accepting the fact that litter is filth in the making and as such should be disposed of in its proper place, not dropped at the individual's convenience to become a health hazard and eye sore. (AFPS).

Credit Union Promotes Thrift, Loans

The Infantry Center Federal Credit Union is a service organization, designed to promote thrift among its members and to provide a fund for the purpose of making loans to its members for useful purposes, at reasonable interest rates.

Formed in March 1956 by a small group of government employees and chartered by the federal government, the field of membership includes both civilian and military personnel.

To become a member a person must complete an "application for membership," pay a $1 entrance fee and open a savings account by depositing $5 or more.

Deposits to the savings account may be made by cash, check or military allotment. Deposits may be made as often and in any amount the member desires. Withdrawals, normally may be made as often and in any amount the member desires. Withdrawls normally may be made at time with only a one day notice.

Members receive dividends on their saving (currently 5¼ per cent per annum) and, additionally, he gets dollar-for-dollar life insurance with no additional cost (up to $2,000) if he is under the age of 55.

This means that if a member has $1,000 on deposit, his beneficiary would receive $2,000; the $1,000 he had saved and an additional $1,000 from the life insurance.

On loans, a member pays an interest rate that simply cannot be equaled by loan companies or most banks. The interest rate is a maximum of 1 per cent per month (12 per cent per year) on unpaid balance. There are no "add-ons."

The loan is insured at no cost to the borrower and there are no service charges. The interest rate on a new car loan is only ¾ of 1 per cent per month (9 per cent per year) on the unpaid balance.

Who Are Your Heirs?

Suppose you were to die while you are in the military service. Do you know who your heirs are?

Who will receive any money due you from salary or annual leave? Who will receive your life insurance?

One method for deciding these vital questions is the designation of a beneficiary of your emergency data form in your personnel file. However, even though it is a requirement, most personnel fail to keep this emergency data form up to date.

But the best way to assure that your heirs receive their inheritance, according to your desire, is through a properly executed will.

Some factors to keep in mind when making a will are the "natural heirs of your bounty." A man making a will should at least mention his children and the children of a deceased child, especially if he marries after making his will.

Where the will does not mention his children, or provide for them by settlement, they are called "pretermitted heirs." What is "mentioned" in a will may be a [illegible] but what will properly (AFPS) difficult question for a court to decide, especially in the case of a self-written will.

In many contested cases the courts have held that a will referring to children, relatives, or other heirs served well enough to show that the testator had his children in mind.

If the testator gives these persons a nominal amount, even one dollar, or intentionally disinherits them, as a rule they will have no claim to the estate. A will need not necessarily leave property to a child, though to do so may prevent lawsuits.

Some persons draft their own wills. These "holographic" wills are often contested because a homemade will often is difficult in complying with laws requiring the mention of children.

So, if you plan on drawing a will, which should be a must for everyone whether married or not, see your legal officer. Don't cause problems for your heirs. Make [illegible]

Silver Flowers

A sherry hour preceded the luncheon held in the Benning Room of the Main Officers' Club. Centerpieces on the tables were lavender and blue, pink and red artificial flowers dipped in sparkling silver focused between sterling Swedish candle holders containing potter blue candles.

In keeping with the color scheme, name tags designed as leaves edged in silver further depicted a "Silver Lining" motif.

Focal point of the decorations was a giant powder blue farewell card, shaped as a leaf laced in silver and featuring pink silver-dipped dogwoods. Inside the card, a message, written on parchment, wishing

Highlight of the pinning ceremony was the presentation of the flight wing charm to Mrs. Conrad by Mrs. Dale M. Liggett, wife of the deputy commander. Cystic Fibrosis Research Helped by Dinner-Dance

By Sgt. Carol Aubin

The second annual Cystic Fibrosis Harvest Ball will be held at a Columbus hotel at 7:30 p.m., Aug. 29.

The semi-formal dinner-dance will be sponsored by the Columbus Jaycees, and held by the Columbus Branch of the Cystic Fibrosis Research Foundation.

The branch composed of both military and civilian people, was originated by CWO Hubert L. Cox, just over two years ago.

Cox, presently assigned to Lawson Army Aviation Command as a maintenance officer, is the father of four children. The youngest of these children, Elizabeth Ann, 3, is a victim of cystic fibrosis and is this year's local poster child.

Lung Disease

Cystic fibrosis, according to Cox, "is a disease of the lungs and intestinal tract."

Cox also explained that one out of every 1,000 babies born is subject to being stricken with cystic fibrosis and that tests are presently being developed to determine prior to childbirth if the parents are carriers of the disease. Cox added that both parents must carry the gene.

The foundation is interested in raising enough funds to provide medical equipment, medication, and assistance to families with a stricken child.

Cox is presently interested in forming a parents' group. He explained, "Parents must be completely informed and kept up-to-date on all advances in medicine and equipment. It is important that we help each other all that we can. As members of the local foundation I'm positive that we can be of assitance to those parents who feel that they are alone with this problem."

Cox said, "Parents who discover that their child is a victim of this disease very often feels desolate and helpless. This is why we must reach them and inform them. There is nothing worse than no knowledge and, as a result, feeling that there is no help."

Infantry School Involves Wife in Husband's Career

By Marian Jones

The Infantry School is attempting to involve officers wives more completely in their husbands' careers.

Lt. Col. A. G. Norris of Washington, D.C. was here this week with a panel of six Infantry officers to interview officers attending the Infantry officers basic and advanced courses.

Norris is executive officer of the Infantry Branch, Office of Personnel Operations, Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel (DCSPER).

As a part of the week's activities, the panel of officers met with and listened to questions put forth by wives who are concerned about their husbands' careers in the Army.

According to Norris, these wives are mainly interested in the husbands having satisfying jobs in the Army. The question most asked is what can their husbands expect in the way of assignments.

The officer went on to say that wives nowadays appear more interested and more aware of what is taking place in the Army and its plans for their husbands.

Action Wives

These "Action Army" wives are not content to sit and wonder why the Army is sending their husbands to another duty station in the middle of a school year or why they have to go back to Vietnam for the second time.

They are, instead, asking why. And the Branch is attempting to tell them.

In return, these conferences with the distaff side are highly educational for the branch. It gives them a feeling of how people react and suggests areas for change.

These conferences were set up at Fort Benning to help wives communicate better with their husbands. Knowing the whys and hows of the Army will give military wives a better idea of how to assist their husbands with their careers.

The Infantry Branch thinks this husband-wife communication regarding the Army is important. From the response the conferences have received it is obvious that the wives do too.

PTA Seeks Members

Fort Benning's Parent-Teacher Association is seeking 2,300 members during the 1969-1970 school year, Col. George E. Ritter, PTA president and post veterinarian, said.

Representatives of the post PTA will accept new members and renew memberships at all eight schools during registration today, the colonel said.

Membership in the Fort Benning PTA was 2,104 last year, he stated.

"All parents of children entering schools on the reservation are encouraged to join," Colonel Ritter said.

Program chairman for the coming year is Lt. Col. Romolo Canarella. Scheduled activities will be announced so members may plan to attend.

Scholarships, Fund Raising Will Occupy First Team

Education scholarships, fund raising and qualification activities will constitute much of the principle business at the 1st Cavalry Association's reunion which starts today in Columbus and Fort Benning.

The association will award more than $25,000 in scholarships, according to officials, and they will decide on fund raising activities to carry on their scholarships.

Most of the scholarships help to educate children of men killed in the Republic of Vietnam.

Col. Alfred E. Stevens, the association registrar from Albuquerque, N.M., said a portion of the membership dues is programmed to sustain the scholarship fund.

"We need to strike gold," he said. "There's a real need to raise enough money to sustain this education program. We now have a start and a lot of fine people interested in the program.

Support often comes from the soldiers in the combat areas.

One such soldier, Sp4 Bill Ellis, who has served in the Republic of Vietnam with the active duty chapter of the 1st Cavalry, will sing at reunion festivities tonight.

All money from the sale of a record which Ellis has recorded will go to the scholarship fund.

His record, "Freedom Bird," features four songs in the language of the foxhole.

SP4 ELLIS WILL SING

Dance Set For Teens

Members of the Fort Benning Teen Club will serve as hosts for teenage dependents of the 1st Cavalry Division during the division's reunion which lasts until Sunday.

A picnic and pool party is planned tonight from 8-11 p.m. on the patio at the Teen Square.

Saturday night there will be a dance from 8 p.m. until midnight with music furnished by a local band.

Bus transportation will be provided from downtown to the Teen Square for the 1st Cavalry's teens.

Facilities at the square, including the pool and game rooms, will be available for the visitors' use throughout their stay here.

Only those post teens with club cards will be allowed to participate in the activities.

College Adds Two Degrees

Columbus College has been given approval by the Board of Regents to establish a B.A. degree with a major in psychology and a B.S. degree with a major in medical technology.

The Regents said the major in psychology will strengthen the college under-graduate curriculum and provide a program of study for students who wish to seek a graduate degree in psychology.

The major in medical technology will enable the college to meet the increasing need for medical technologists in hospitals and other medical facilities.

TCB Awards Ceremony Honors Five Companies

We are strangers in this country...
During our hectic days
We may pass without noticing
Our rewards for coming here.
We can easily see the blisters of war
On the flesh of the land
But the people themselves
Carry our prize.
Those who are free to work their farms
To harvest every substance for their lives
The greatest of which may be
A substance of determination
To rebuild what has fallen
These are people who possess the attributes of their country
You see the strength of the mountains in their hands
The clarity of mountain waters in their eyes
The determination of the forests in their faces.
Our reward for coming here is to see these people at peace
We are helping to keep harmony in their lives.

INFANTRYMAN STATUE

Building Director of Statue Dies at 61

By Ida Evans

Col. (ret.) John M. Woestenburg, who directed the building of the 12-foot tall Infantryman statute at Fort Benning, died Aug. 14. He was 61.

He was pronounced dead on arrival at The Medical Center after an apparent heart attack. He lived at 3229 Flint Drive, Columbus.

The colonel undertook the designing and building of the statue symbolizing the Infantry motto, "Follow Me," at the suggestion of Gen. Paul L. Freeman Jr., then post commander.

He supervised the building and approval of models and then the construction of the statue in shops of the ordnance shop which he directed.

Secretary of the Army Wilbur P. Brucker dedicated the statue May 3, 1960, at the original location in the Officer Candidate School area.

A plaque placed on the base of the statue, now located in front of Infantry Hall, reads, "Supervision of the project was exercised by Col. John M. Woestenburg, Ordnance Corps., and his assistant, Charles O. Crowder. Actual construction was accomplished by — PFC Manfred Bass, sculptor and designer, and PFC Karl VanKorg, assistant sculptor. The model was Officer Candidate Eugene J. Wyles."

Associates recalled that the colonel held a patent on the miniature version of the statue, which is presented to important visitors.

Proceeds from the royalties from the statuette's sale at the Infantry School Bookstore are signed over to the Infantry Museum, another of the colonel's interests.

WAC Officer Leaves For Vietnam Duty

By Sgt. Carol Aubin

"I strongly feel that enlisted service is a valuable asset of WAC officers," said Maj. Patricia S. Ernst, deputy chief of personnel services division, Office of the Director of Personnel.

"The female seems to require a greater personal understanding than the male," Maj. Ernst explained. "Having served in an enlisted status, the officer gains a greater insight to the women's problems. Having had like experiences and similar feelings, she developes a greater compassion for her women and their problems."

Maj. Ernst, the senior ranking Women's Army Corps officer here, will leave in September for assignment in the Republic of Vietnam.

Mixed Emotions

"My new assignment will undoubtedly offer a greater challenge than any other I have had," she said. "My duty assignment will be determined upon my arrival in the country at Long Binh."

"Although I am looking forward to my next duty station, I leave Fort Benning with mixed emotions," the major said. "It is difficult to leave the finest associations I have ever had."

"This has been, without doubt, the most pleasurable and responsible assignment of my career," she said.

Deep Respect

Maj. Ernst has been assigned here since June, 1967.

"The greatest attainment of one's military career is to serve with great people for whom you have nothing but the deepest respect — that sums up exactly my last two years here," the major said.

The major entered the military in 1954 in Milwaukee, Wis., and was commissioned in September, 1959.

"My first two years were spent in enlisted status. I had planned to complete law school following my discharge," Maj. Ernst explained and said, "I did go back to school, but the Army had really taken hold by this time. I found readjustment to civilian life extremely difficult, and realized that my interests did not coincide with the interests of others."

Advisor

As deputy chief of Personnel Services Division, Maj. Ernst has varied duties, which include preparing correspondence for the command group, advising the Officers Wives and the Noncommissioned Officer Wives Clubs, acting as a liaison between the command and various club functions, as well as serving as WAC Coordinator.

"As WAC Coordinator, I brief the command on WAC activities and serve to coordinate the WAC activities between this command, Third Army and Department of the Army," she explained.

"My assignment here has made me tremendously aware of the role of the Infantryman. I fully appreciate his task, and find his overwhelming importance incredible," she said.

"I sincerely hope that I shall be assigned here again. I have enjoyed my tour here, and I will truly miss Fort Benning and the Infantry, Major Ernst concluded.

Artillery Unit Tests Training

The true test of a combat unit is combat, where the results don't take four or five days to process.

But an artillery unit won't ever get the chance to take the test that counts until it passes its stateside preliminaries again and again.

Last week the 1st Bn., 21ith Arty, 197th Inf. Bde., was out in the field on its annual Army Training Test. Closely watched and umpired by the 7th Bn., 18th Arty., the 1st was put through its paces to check its proficiency in a nuclear incident, gas warfare, internal security, mobility communications and — naturally — its ability to hit a target with its 155 mm howitzers.

"You have live shells going over people's heads in an artillery situation," said Command Sgt. Maj. Kenneth R. Emerson of the umpire unit. "You can't fool around with a thing like that. You can't send artillery units into combat that don't know what they're doing. The first mistake would be too costly."

Under the scrutiny of the umpire officers, the batteries went to work, covered their positions and reacted to each new problem and situation with flexibility and precision.

As far as the test results were concerned, the batteries kept themselves alive and they delivered the high explosive goods on time.

The 1st is a National Guard unit, based in New Bedford, Fall River and Middleboro, Mass. Reactivated for active duty in April 1968, the unit moved to Fort Benning and remained here.

Courtesy Wins $10 For Moore

Sgt. Delbert L. Moore, drill sergeant at Co. E, 9th Bn., 2nd Bde., Army Training Center, was cited by the Military Police here as Fort Benning's Courteous Driver of the Week.

Col. Talton W. Long, deputy post commander, presented Moore a $10 saving certificate, donated by the National Bank of Fort Benning, and a set of bumper decals proclaiming him a courteous, safe driver.

In a letter to Moore, Maj. Gen. George I. Forsythe, post commanding general, noted, "... you are doing your part to promote accident prevention and to make driving a more convenient and pleasant task for Fort Benning motorists."

When asked how he was chosen for the award, the drill sergeant explained that one afternoon he was followed by a Military Policeman from an NCO Club to Harmony Church. After noticing that Moore practiced the rules of defensive driving, the MP nominated him for the honor.

Texas Reserve Unit Arrives for 3 Weeks

By SFC Richard Kemp

The arrival of the advance group for the 4151st Houston United States Army Reserve School marked the fifth year of active duty for the unit at Fort Benning.

The Texas unit, commanded by Col. Glenn L. McDuffie of Houston, arrived for a three-week tour of duty.

The last two weeks will be devoted to instructing 200 Army Reserve and National Guard Infantry Officers in Active Duty Training phases II and VI.

The staff and faculty of the school includes 53 offices, 4 warrant officers and 36 enlisted personnel, one of whom is a WAC sergeant first class.

The school was activated on Nov. 1, 1950, and has been an important link to officers furthering their military education for promotions and retention in the service.

Courses include logistical management courses, national security management courses, an NCO Academy and MOS training for enlisted personnel to qualify them to occupy table of organization and equipment and temporary duty positions in units.

The student officers attending this year's active duty phase of the branch officers advanced course represent a wide variety of civilian occupations such as business executives, engineers, salesmen, researchers, farmers and many others.

The Reserve school is backed by materials, classrooms and resident personnel of the U.S. Army Infantry School. Material used in home-station Reserve duty training is also furnished by the Infantry School.

Capt. Kay Takes Over As CO of Scout Dogs

By Spt Marc Reiff

Well trained, well schooled and well traveled could aptly describe the new commander of the Scout Dogs. In the process, he has had just about every job in an Infantry battalion.

Capt. Bruce F. Kay began his career as an enlisted man in February, 1962, but soon realized that an officer's life was the one he wanted. One year later, in February, 1963, he completed OCS and received his commission.

Adventure and travel, which he had wanted, was soon to happen. His first assignment was Germany where he stayed for three years.

"I was stationed with the 3rd Infantry Division first as a platoon leader, then as a Recon platoon leader and finally transferred to S-3," he said.

Returning to the states, he attended Special Warfare School and Lanugage School in Monterey, Calif., in preparation for a tour in the Republic of Vietnam.

"The school training was hard, but well worth it," said Key. "The language training that I received was invaluable in my dealing with the Vietnamese people."

Returning to the states, Kay was sent to Fort Knox, Ky., where he became commander of a basic training unit. The Army then sent him through the Armor Career Course.

The Armor course "was very enjoyable as it presented me with the opportunity to enhance my realm of varying Army methods in another branch other than Infantry," he said.

AER-ARS Drive Reaches $18,439

By PFC Paul Miller

Contributions to the joint Army Emergency Relief and Army Relief Society (AER-ARS) 1969 Fund Drive at Fort Benning as of Aug. 12 reached $18,439.88.

This is 43 per cent of the $43,000 sought in the campaign that started July 22.

Funds obtained by the AER-ARS will be used to aid servicemen, both active and retired and dependents at Fort Benning who may encounter heavy financial burdens.

Recipients are chosen as to need and the money may be presented in the form of grants or loans.

Last year the AER-ARS handled 2,310 cases at Fort Benning, paying out almost $290,000. Of this, $9,400 was in the form of grants that will never be repaid.

Money that is returned from loans is used again to aid other needy servicemen, widows and dependents in the Fort Benning area.

From Jan. 1 to June 30 of this year, the joint agency already helped more than 200 dependents on the road to financial stability. During this period, $7,070.10 in grants has been distributed and more than $110,000 was loaned.

According to records, 170 members of the 197th Inf. Bde. received help from AER-ARS funds this year. Nine of these were given aid in the form of grants.

The society draws its cases from all brigades, departments and agencies at Fort Benning.

The full color series offers an inside look at some of the worldwide activities of the Army.

Footage for the documentaries comes from a wide range of Army sources: From Vietnam combat film to on-location shooting across the United States, to historical sequences from the extensive film library at the Army Pictorial Center in Long Island City, N.Y.

Local Artist To See Again His Plaster Covered Mural

[illegible] extensive renovation of [illegible] old barracks.

[illegible] during [illegible]
[illegible] Fort Benning
[illegible] Regiment, 4th Infantry Division, 1942.

Pvt. Anthony Maniaci today is Tony Mani, the director of the Columbus School of Art. He shortened his name in 1949 because "people were always misspelling and mispronouncing it."

Contest Winner

During his Army days he painted and drew whenever he had a chance. It paid off for him when he won Fort Gordon's post-wide art contest in 1942.

"For winning the contest I was given three months special duty painting a mural for the Main Post Service Club on the theme 'Our New Army'. It shows how the Army was changing over to mechanized warfare from the foot soldier," said Mani. "It was supposed to be hung there permanently but I don't know where it is now."

Painting a large mural requires extensive preplanning, preliminary sketches, and tryouts before work can begin on the final product.

Barracks Wall Sketch

"The largest and most convenient place to do the preliminary work was on the wall of the barracks, so that's were I did them," he said. "I don't remember specifically what drawings I put on the wall, or how extensive they were, but I sure am anxious to get down to Fort Gordon and see them again."

The mural was placed on display during the 4th Division's reunion held at Fort Gordon, Aug. 2, after being restored by the Training Aids Section. The work will become a permanent exhibit at the center Museum at Fort Gordon.

"One thing I'll bet they don't know is that the tank commander in the lower left hand corner was posed for by Gen. George Patton. I got him to do it when we were on training exercises with the 2nd Armored Division," said Mani.

He first found out about his rediscovered art work through an article in the Aug. 8 issue of the Bayonet.

"Yes, it was a big surprise, like something out of the past," he said. "But, the article made it sound like I was sent with the division to Europe for the invasion of Normandy, but actually I was sent to Fort Benning."

At Infantry School

Because of his extensive infantry training and artistic talents Mani went to work at the Infantry School as an illustrator and remained here until 1944 when he went to the Pentagon to work as a counter-intelligence agent.

He returned to Columbus after his discharge in 1946 and he and his wife, Robbie, founded the Columbus School of Art.

Mani's work can be seen all around Fort Benning.

A mural he did originally for the old Infantry School Center is on display at the Infantry Museum, and a mural he did in 1963 decorates the Fountain Room of the Main Officer's Open Mess.

He's been an artist his entire life.

He received a scholarship from the Leonardo De Vinci Art School in New York City at the age of nine, graduated from the New York School of Fine and Industrial Arts, attended the New York Art Teachers Institute, and studied at the New York Metropolitan Museum and the Grand Central Art School.

Other Lost Art?

Mani doesn't know if there are any other lost art works, long since covered over, waiting to be rediscovered, but Mani believes there could be.

"I was stationed in a lot of places: Fort Devons, Fort Dix, Camp Croft, Fort Jackson, Camp Davis, Fort Meade, Fort Myers, Fort Gordon, and there may be some right out there at Fort Benning," he said with a smile.

Scouts Go Canoeing, Cycle for 50 Miles

The scouts of Troop 37, under the direction of SFC Arthur J. Wahner, NCOIC of The Student Brigade Gymnasium, recently returned from two weeks of camping, canoeing and bicycling.

Members of the troop, sponsored by the 4th Student Bn., earned merit badges in cycling, camping, cooking, canoeing, archery and rowing while on the trip.

The scouts moved to several campsites to work on the badges. At Victory Pond they received canoeing instruction.

They cycled for about 50 miles during the course of the campout.

SFC Wahner, scoutmaster, has had the troop for three years. He himself was a scout in 1929. He is a master chutist and holds stars for jumps in Normandy and Holland.

Teenage 'Volunteens' Help Post Clinics and Hospital

By Tere Davis

[illegible] to do with free time during the [illegible] summer months is often a [illegible] for some teenagers. One group of Fort Benning girls solved this problem by offering their services as Red Cross "volunteens."

Approximately 300 women and teenagers serve 3,000 hours per month as Red Cross volunteers on post.

The volunteens, starting at age 15, work primarily during the summer months in wards, numerous clinics and recreation centers.

A few volunteens are following the example of mothers who serve as volunteers.

Third Summer

Catheryn Harvey, a 17-year-old volunteen, is the daughter of Mrs. Clinton Harvey, chairman of Martin Army Hospital Red Cross volunteers. She is completing her third summer in the program working as a receptionist and clerk at the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat Clinic.

Nancie Piper is the 15-year-old daughter of Mrs. Robert M. Piper, post chairman of volunteers. She became interested in the work after listening to the experiences of her two older sisters, who also worked as volunteens. She said that she has enjoyed her work at the Well Baby Clinic and plans to continue next summer.

Other volunteens use their service as a summer pastime between school terms.

Three Days a Week

Dianne Welsh, a 19-year-old student, began her first summer with the Red Cross as a volunteer for two afternoons per week. After finding her work in the pathology lab so enjoyable she extended her time to three days per week.

Playhouse Invites People To Act

A meeting will be held Monday at the Fort Benning Playhouse for persons interested in forming a theatre group workshop at 7:30 p.m. in Building 1287, behind the Infantry Museum.

All persons interested in any phase of theatre production and operation are encouraged to attend. People with little or no experience are wanted as well as theatre veterans.

Everyone who attends the meeting will have a hand in forming the group. Some possible activities of the group will be to plan future shows to be done at the Playhouse, conduct play readings, or suggest improvements they feel could aid the theatre here.

Since January of this year, the Playhouse has produced a variety of different plays. Audiences here have seen a drama — "The Subject Was Roses," a musical — "The Fantastics," and a comedy — "Pajama Tops."

Anyone interested who is unable to attend the meeting next Monday night, please contact Sp4 Boh Hanley, entertainment specialist, at 545-2992.

'Dancing on Moon'

When they told me about it, I thought they were kidding.

"Dancing on the moon?" I said. "Are you kidding?"

Nope. The Army Training Center is dancing on the moon.

How, you ask, will anyone ever get that high?

Come mingle with a silver star or two and find out.

ATC is dancing on the moon, Sept. 13, Main Officers Open Mess.

Ovation Given London Symphony

BY THEODORE GARGIULO

EDITOR'S NOTE: Theodore Gargiulo is the music director for Special Services. He has conducted operatic and symphonic pieces and has guest conducted the Army Field Band.

An artistically and financially successful appearance of the London Symphony Orchestra was presented smack in the middle of August!

The concert was a benefit for the Springer Opera House restoration fund sponsored by the Springer Opera House Guild and "Paladin" Clason Kyle.

This happening has justified faith in the community to support its demand for high quality entertainment and cultural activities during summertime, a period generally considered a poor risk for such events. Summer months may mean vacation time from work and institutions of learning, but that Columbus desires to put culture and live entertainment in moth balls for July and August, "Ain't Necessarily So."

The all romantic program included Tchaikovsky's "Fantasy Overture, Romeo and Juliet," Brahms' "Variations on a Theme by Hadyn," Wagner's "Meistersinger, Prelude to Act One" and "Siegfried Idyll" and Richard Strauss' "Der Rosenkavalier Suite."

The orchestra's luxurious texture and equally lush compositions were avidly devoured by the audience. A magnificent ensemble, indeed, and a sumptous feast for the ears. No need to describe the impeccable technique, their musical excellence is a "fait accompli," as demonstrated in these selections.

Though contemporaries, Wagner, Brahms and Tchaikovsky were rivals and musical enemies. Nevertheless, and despite their human flaws, mankind benefits from the genius of those creative artists and their musical expressions.

Jascha Horenstein conducted with experienced control and clearly defined tempos. He knows his orchestra and they executed the printed score with precision and dynamic expression, even when the conductor gave no physical indication, which was generally the case.

Horenstein's control of the orchestra was managed with his right hand alone, his left hand served as a shadow of his right most of the time. However, in the "Siegfried Idyll," he demonstrated and communicated phrasing and feeling and both hands became most expressive. His conducting here recreated most effectively Wagner's orchestral tone painting.

As a fitting close, Maestro Horenstein and the orchestra responded to the applause and standing ovation of the capacity audience by playing the American and English National Anthems in honor of the "Claw and Paw."

Enlistedmen's Wives Take Daughters to Tea

The wives of the 9th Bn., The Candidate Bde., enlisted personnel held a coffee in the dayroom of the 97th Co.

Members brought their daughters as guests.

Mrs. Samuel L. Kealoha, chairman of the wives club, stated that it was hard for many of the wives to attend their functions because of difficulty in finding babysitters for the children. Therefore, the problem was solved by including the children in the function.

Talented Soldiers May Win $25

If you are a soldier with talent — a musician, comic, dancer, actor — Special Services offers you a chance to perform in the monthly entertainment contest.

This month's contest will be held Aug. 30 at 7:30 p.m. at the Main Post Service Club.

Winners will receive $25 cash and finalists are offered a chance to apply for participation in the Third Army Showmobile, sponsored by Third Army Special Services.

The entertainment section of post special services is seeking as much talent as possible, according to Theodore Gargiulo, music director.

Plans are being made for a series of performances at the Fort Benning Playhouse during October, in which local talent will be used.

All interested persons may get entry blanks for the contest and information about the October performances from any of the post service clubs.

Wheelis Is Runner Up in Third Army Tourney

By PFC. Bob Vargas

Steve Wheelis, the 1969 open golf champion at Fort Benning, fired a 289 to gain second place in the Third U.S. Army golf tournament at Fort Bragg, N.C., Aug. 11-15.

Winner of the event was Jim Conace of the Fort Jackson, S.C., golf team, with a 288.

Conace entered the fourth round with a two-shot lead, but was challenged stiffly by Wheelis, the Fort Benning ace.

Conace turned the front side in one under par 35 despite a double bogey seven on the par five 613 yard fourth hole at Stryker. Wheelis parred the hole and the two were separated by only one shot. Conace birdied the second hole to temporarily take a three-shot advantage. Wheelis was four shots off the pace at the turn after shooting a 37.

On the back side, Conace faltered with a 39 while Wheelis continued his steady pace with an even par 36.

Conace hit an iron shot on the 16th hole to turn the tide. Wheelis bogied the 18th but it was not enough for Wheelis to take the title. Conace squeaked it out on some clutch shots for the victory.

Among the other members of the Fort Benning team participating, Cliff Tatum won the second the senior B division flight of the championship crown, with a closing 83 and Thomas Brown won for a 336 total.

SFC (ret.) James P. Cavins is leading the catfish contest of the Fishing Derby with the Eight-pound four-ounce entry he caught at Victory pond Aug. 10.

Peter Swiderdk, winner of the July bass contest, is still leading the August contest with the seven-pound eight-ounce bass he took from Harp Pond Aug. 2.

To date no bream have been reported for the August contest. This is first time in the two years Rod and Gun has been running the derby that we have gone this far into the month without an entry for each division of the derby.

For the information of interest newcomers to the post,, we'd like to explain the mechanics of the Fishing Derby. The Fort Benning Rod and Gun Club is sponsoring a monthly derby from April Through October. Prizes are awarded each month to the fisherman catching the largest bass, bream and catfish.

To enter the derby you must be a member of the Rod and Gun Club, register at the club before going fishing, catch the fish from one of the post ponds and register your catch at the club upon returning. Those finishing fishing after the club has closed may register the catch the next day.

Many anglers have a firm opinion that the phase of the moon has everything to do with whether or not the fishing is good but not all look at it in the same manner.

The big controversy does not center on the time of day as much as on the time of the month. A certain group of anglers believe fish are more cooperative when the moon is waxing fat while just as many believe a waning moon has more influence on the feeding habits of the finny tribe.

This does not indicate that all these fellows are night fishermen. What they say is that what the moon does at night is important to how the fish will act during the day or night.

As far as we know, there has never been any scientific research to prove which of these theories will hold more water than the other and even if the technical people did come up with facts to substantiate one claim or the other, we are certain they could never convince a dyed-in-the-moonbeam fisherman.

Then there is a group that maintain that the time to fish is when you can regardless of whether its day or night or the moon is waning or full and its been our observation that this last group are the fisherman who catch the most fish.

If it's catfish you are looking for, the place to go is Victory Pond. This 25 acre Pond, located on Eighth Division Road approximately seven-tenths of a mile northwest of the intersection of Eighth Division and Hourglass Roads has a black top access road in excellent condition.

As a result of a survey conducted by the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife in 1965 the pond was stocked with 50,000 cbannel catfish. A feeding schedule was initiated in accordance with recommendations of the Bureau. The fish have responded well and while the average fish is about three pounds some fish up to 12-pounds have been taken from the pond this summer. The most efficient baits are doughballs, steak chunks, chicken liver and other chicken intestines not necessarily in that order. Its a good idea to carry several kinds.

Subsequent to 1965, stockings of several thousand fish have been made each year with another stocking scheduled this fall. Last spring 40 flathead catfish each weighing over 20-pounds were stocked in this pond to reduce the population of bullhead catfish.

One bad thing about this pond is that the number of days it can be used for fishing are restricted by the heavy use it receives for amphibious training conducted by The Infantry School. Be sure to check with the Rod and Gun Club before going out.

Army Team Captures Pistol Trophy Match

The All-Army Pistol team from the Marksmanship Training Unit at Ft. Benning was well represented by its members at the National Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio, last week, dominating the team matches, setting a new record and placing third in the over-all individual championship.

SFC Robert Whitacre of the Army team faced stiff competition but continued his up hill battle to total an aggregate of 2650 for third place in the National Pistol Championship. PO1 Donald Hamilton of the Navy won the National Championship for the third time.

SSgt. Bonnie Harmon placed first in the .22 caliber individual championship with a score of 881-48x. Sgt. Maj. William Blankenship shot a 199-11x to take first place in the Center Fire rapid fire match.

The Army contingent firing in clear and mostly calm weather divided into several teams and won victory after victory, to show that the Army shooters are the best.

In the .22 caliber team championship, Army International Blue team came in first ahead of Army's second team which placed third. Harmon led the team with score of 298. SFC Hershel Anderson also prodnced a score of 298 but with a smaller x-count. The two other remaining team members were Whitacre and Blankenship, they fired 297 and 296 respectively, which made a grand total of 1188-68x for first place and a new national record. The old mark was 1186-56x set in 1966.

The Army made it a clean sweep in the Center Fire team match. Army Blue came in first followed by Army International Blue placing second and Army Gray coming in third. SSgt. Floyd Thompson with 291, SSgt. Jimmy McCauley with 292, SSgt. Merriweather Jones with 290 and SFC Hezekiah Clark with 289 made up the winning score of 1162-53x.

The Army team topped their victories by winning the coveted National Trophy Team Match with a score of 1136-36x.

Wigger Repeats Win In Perry Matches

The All-Army marksmen from the Marksmanship Training Unit, Fort Benning, walked away with victories during the Smallbore Rifle Position Championships at the National Matches, Camp Perry, Ohio.

As the smoke cleared Maj. Lones W. Wigger Jr., walked away from the firing line having successfully defended his championship in the position championship. Wigger fired a score of 316-189x for his fifth position championship. He has held the title in 63, 65, 68 and 69.

1st Lt. Phillip D. Bahrman followed his Army teammate by placing second with a score of 3160. MSgt. William Krilling was right behind Bahrman with 3158 for third, giving the army a clean sweep in the championship.

In the team matches the Army took one first and placed second in the other team match.

The Army team marched into the any sight team match and captured the first and second spots. Army Blue team fired away for a score of 1566. Army's second team Army Red fired a 1564 giving the Army first and second in the match.

Army blue fought to overcome Air Force in the metallic sight team match. They managed to come within one point of the Air Force score firing 1553. Air Force took first with 1554, Army Blue second and Army Red took third.

THE FORUM

By Marc Reiff

I ran into my old friend Mr. Sources the other day in a small drinking establishment in Columbus. For those of you who are unfamiliar with my friend, he is the Most Knowledgeable Expert in the world of sports in the United States and Canada and is forever being quoted ("According to Inside Sources . . . ") by magazines and newspapers before important sporting events to predict what the outcome will be. A mathematics genius as well as a rabid sports enthusiast, Mr. Sources spends a great deal of his time travelling through the countryside researching events which he feels are variables which, in the end, will influence the results of football games, track and field events and golf tournaments.

Mr. Sources has spent so many years telling the sporting future (the last time he was wrong, in fact, was over the Swaps Nashua horse race, and he blames that on an unusually innaccurate weather forecast from St. Louis) that he not only knows every athlete, but is able to practice an uncanny form of extra-sensory perception with them. When a Little League pitcher in San Diego comes down with a bad case of elbow chips, Mr. Sources feels it as well, and is thus able to gauge just how badly a football player's injury will affect him in the upcoming season. Once, when a famous race horse injured its leg, Mr. Sources felt a similar injury so deeply that he had to be restrained from having himself destroyed by the ASPCA.

So it was with a certain feeling of awe that I approached this Jeanne Dixon of the gymnasium, and, overcome by curiosity, began immediately by asking him what he was doing in Columbus.

"I have come," he announced mater-of-factly between sips of a Julep, "to see what Hurricane Camille is going to do in this fair city, so that I may better judge what the outcome of the 1972 Olympic Games will be."

I knew it was useless to ask what the correlation between the two events could possibly be; it would have been like King Kong asking Einstein to explain the special theory of relativity to him. So I went into more factual matters.

"What team," I inquired of the Ping Pong Prophet, "have you pegged to take the National League Pennant?"

Inside had obviously been at the bar for some time, for normally getting information of that nature from him is as difficult as getting a Go-Go dancer's unlisted phone number. But he was quite talkative. "Taking into consideration the varying degrees of complexity of the problem, the inconsistencies displayed so far by the teams involved makes me pause." He paused. "But whenever I program the software of this question, the punch cards keep coming out: 'Cincinnati Reds.'

I asked him to pardon my abysmal ignorance and mathematical impuissance and shed me some light on what that meant in layman's terms.

"Well, in the terms of common parlance," he explained, "it means that the Reds have enough hitting power to cream anyone that has the guts to walk out on the field against them. Chicago will probably sneak by St. Louis at the wire for the Eastern Division title, but the Reds will make short work of them in the pennant playoff. But the situation doesn't leave Chicago too forlorn. After all, no one thought they could do anywhere near as well as they have at the beginning of the season."

"And the American League," I asked, biting my knuckles in astonishment, "what will happen in the American League, Mr. Sources?"

"Here . . ." he stopped for a moment and began thoughtfully stirring his Julep with his pinky. "Here we have a case not so much of who will defeat whom, but merely a case of by how much. In other words, Baltimore is destined to slaughter Oakland in a very unfriendly manner, after which all the Orioles will write books explaining how easy the whole thing was."

Now I had come to the big plateau, the $64 question, and I wonder how many other earth-shattering pronouncements had come from similarly modest surroundings. "Oh Wizard of the Diamond," I asked him calmly, "Which of those teams will take the World Series?"

Busch Is Runner Up

Dunn Wins Blankenship Trophy

Keith Dunn, Fort Benning, came from behind to defeat former teammate and defending champion Ronnie Busch, also of Fort Benning in the Third Annual Fort Benning Junior Golf Championship.

The 54 hole tournament, open to all golfers under 18-years-of-age features the presentation of a perpetual trophy donated by MSgt. William Blankenship, six-time national pistol champion.

Dunn shot a 76-72-74 for a three-day total of 222 to edge out Busch who had a total of 222.

As tournament winner, Dunn will hold the Blankenship trophy for the next year. In addition he received another trophy for his fast growing trophy case.

Ed Kelley, Fort Benning, won the second flight of the 16 to 18 age group division. Ismail Akman, Fort Benning, was runner up.

Terry Anton, Fort Benning, won the first flight of the 13 to 15 age group. Second place went to Wade Burford, Columbus Country Club.

Tommy Anton, Terry's twin brother, won second flight of the 13 to 15 age group. Kevin Daniels, Sand Hill Golf Course, was runner up.

Randy Davis, Lakewood Country Club, won the championship of the third flight. Kit Kitchen, Fort Benning, was second.

The 10 to 12 age group first flight was won by Grady Oxford, Fort Benning. Kenny Knox, Columbus Country Club, was runner up.

Jay Witak, Fort Benning, won second flight of the 10 to 12 age group and Cliff Tatum, Fort Benning, won the second place honors.

In the longest drive competition, Dunn won the 16 to 18 age group division, Chuck Johnson, Green Island Country Club, the 13 to 15 group and Grady Oxford the 10 to 12 group.

At the conclusion of the tournament, trophies were awarded by Col. George E. Ritter, Fort Benning Country Club Golf Committee president, and Howard Holbrook, club professional.

USACDC Wins TSB Slowpitch Championship

Behind the stingy pitching of Maj. Merrill Stelle, superb fielding of Maj. Joe Goss and timely hitting of Sp4 Mike Boynton, the USACDC Infantry Agency team defeated the 2nd Ranger Co. 8-1 to become the TSB Slowpitch Champions.

Steele, maintaining his 1.00 ERA by permitting only four hits, was amply supported by errorless fielding, led by shortstop Goss who time after time stole base hits from the frustrated Rangers.

The game was close until the 3rd inning when the Infantry Agency unleashed for five runs. Goss led off the inning with a single to center and was advanced to second on single by Maj. Robert Demont. Boynton then doubled scoring both runners.

Consecutive singles by PFC Kim Cuniberti, PFC Ephra Walker, Lt. Bill Camp and Steele produced three more runs before the side was retired.

Twin Brothers Confuse Sports Parachute Club

Members of the Fort Benning Sport Parachute Club were puzzled recently when one of their group seemed to be two places at once.

The apparition was actually the appearance of a twin brother of one of their members.

Jack Buckley, a long-standing member of the club, has a twin, Mike, who arrived at Fort Benning recently for Airborne training, and caused quite a confusion.

Jack Buckley is a student at the Scout Dog Platoon in the Off Leash Phase.

The brothers are from Framingham, Mass., where they attended Northampton High School.

Jack came to Fort Benning in January, 1969, after completing basic training at Fort Gordon, Ga., and advanced individual training at Fort Jackson, S.C.

Mike came to Fort Benning from Fort Gordon where he has been stationed since entering the army in September, 1968. He hopes to become a member of the U.S. Army's Sport Parachute Team, The Golden Knights.

Both the brothers have over 600 jumps logged and hold a USPA class C license.

The Forum

"If the pollen connt stays as high as it has so far," he muttered, "then my dough is on the Reds."

"But the Reds have no pitching!" I cried, and the withering stare he shot my way told me immediately I was out of my league.

"So who needs pitching?" he scoffed. "If team A gets 17 runs and team B gets 19, team B will win. How's that for a classy theory? Rose, Johnson, Perez, Bench and May — the only thing that could prevent them from grabbing the Series is possibly an invasion from Mars."

So now it can be told — the prediction of the century — "According to Inside Sources . . . "

All Fort Benning regional licensed drivers are also expected, for only a few more events are scheduled in the Southeastern Division of SCCA this year, leaving little time for the drivers to qualify for National licenses.

Although the big eliminator with highest posted speeds went hands down to Camille last week, Keith Hodge of Hartsville, Ala., was the local hero.

Running an Oldsmobile, Hodge, the national record holder in T-Stock, turned a 16.14 at 71.20 miles per hour to become the stock eliminator in Phenix Dragway's Alabama State Championship last Saturday night.

Second place was taken by John Tharpe of Phenix City in his former national record holder in G-Stock, the "Red Light Bandit."

The big hairy street and super stock eliminator class was won by Sam Carroll who smoked the asphalt quarter in 11.36 at 126.76 m.p.h.

Camille also went on to win at Pensacola's Corry Field regional sports car race when that event's Sunday races were cancelled. Over 50 cars showed up at the Naval Air Station race course, but were able to get some practice on Saturday, however.

In the meantime up at the new Michigan International Speedway, rain also cut short the "Yankee 600" and Dave Person of Spartanburg, S.C. got the nod in his '69 Ford at the end of 165 laps and won with the ridiculous average speed of 115.508 m.ph.

When the flag came down Pearson was drying off the course with laps of 158 m.p.h. and Buddy Baker in a '69 Dodge was only three seconds behind.

Stateside rallying isn't considered by most as a speed event, unless you are a contestant, off course and trying to make up time, but things are changing next year. Way up in Minnesota, in the late fall of 1970, the first FIA-sanctioned rally (European Style) for the United States will be held over snow-covered logging roads.

One local rally navigator is already making tenative plans for that one, but is looking for a better driver. Right now she is rated at 14th in the Southeast Division of SCCA but she may have some problems getting another driver. (As her husband I'm not going to let her go running off to the wilds of the North with just anyone.)

And the weather scored another wipe-out when it rained Saturday night at Tri-County Raceway making the clay a little too gooey for bikes.

The two-wheelers are going to give it another try this Sunday afternoon with more than 60 motorcycles expected to enter.

Although T-County is not exactly flat, the local hot shoe artists are billing Sunday's event as such for lack of another description.

Seventy five riders from as far away as Louisana and South Carolina, were ready to compete last Saturday night and all said they were coming back for Sunday's event.

Three races are scheduled, 150 cc, 250 cc and open, with the novice and experts lumped together. It's not sanctioned by the AMA but money seems to talk louder than points so you can expect a lot of experts to show up.

In the meantime the regional-National Sports Cars races are still scheduled for Selma, Ala. The two day event this Saturday and Sunday is drawing cars from all over the United States and will be run over a 2.69 mile airport course. A great many

Orienteering Trails Are Scheduled

Nominees are being sought by the Special Services office here for individuals to compete at the 1969 U. S. Armed Forces Orienteering trials being held at Quantico, Va., Sept. 4-14.

A contestant is expected to select the most expeditious route in completing the prescribed circuit.

Individuals entering the competition should be qualified experts in land navigation and must be able to post a time of 30 minutes or less for a five mile course.

Those who are interested in the contest should apply to the Special Services office so that their names may be submitted to the U. S. Continental Army Command, Fort Monroe, Va. Entries must be submitted to the Special Services office (Bldg. 394) today.

The Army has been staging similar contests for many years known as military stakes.

However, the normal military stakes competition includes testing in military skills and knowledge and the orienteering competition is limited to land navigation and cross-country running.

For further information, contact the Special Services office (Tel. 545-3604).

COMPUTER CORNER

By Bud Goode

Mix 40 pushups with 50 squats and 5 minutes of wind sprints and you have a Vince Lombardi recipe for a holiday.

Lombardi has a reputation as one of the NFL's greatest coaches. But he inherited a Washington Redskins team whose defense had more holes in it than old lace.

How far up the ladder must Lombardi bring his defensive squad to make them competitive? And how far to make them a winner?

According to Computer Corner, one of the important defensive statistics in pro football is the number of times your defensive line clobbers the opposition quarterback. When the passer is tackled, the series of downs stands to be lost, and the team is forced to punt. The N. Y. Jets-Baltimore Colts Pro Bowl game is a good example. The Colts' Earl Morrall was dumped three times in the first quarter—and the handwriting was on the ball.

How did the Washington Redskins' line perform last year in getting to the opposition quarterback? Computer Corner poured the 1968 statistics into our Univac sports analyzer with these results.

COASTAL DIV.		CAPITAL DIV.
Los Angeles	13.9%	Dallas	12.0%
Baltimore	10.4%	Philadelphia	6.4%
San Francisco	8.4%	New York	5.9%
Atlanta	7.5%	Washington	5.9%
CENTURY DIV.		CENTRAL DIV.
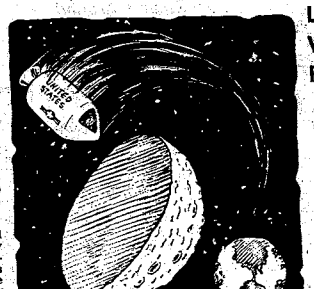
St. Louis	11.0%	Minnesota	14.0%
New Orleans	9.3%	Detroit	10.7%
Pittsburgh	6.4%	Chicago	9.1%
Cleveland	6.0%	Green Bay	8.6%

League Average—9.1%

Last year the Washington Redskins' defensive line dumped the opposition quarterback only 5.9% of the time.

If coach Lombardi is setting goals for his defensive line, they must improve by 50% to reach league average. To top the 12-14% figures set by L.A., Dallas and Minnesota, the Redskins must double the number of times they dump the opposing passer.

That's a big order to fill in one year, even for a coach of Lombardi's stature.



HOUSTON—YOU'RE NOT GONNA BELIEVE THIS!!

Murdock Wins Perry Rifle Championship

The prone portion of the small bore rifle competition finished at Camp Perry, Ohio, after four beautiful days of warm and calm weather.

Capt. Margret Murdock of the Marksmanship Training Unit at Fort Benning, who was until just a matter of weeks ago Capt. Margret Thompson, became the woman champion of the 1969 smallbore competition.

Murdock, however, did not have an easy victory. At the beginning of the matches Miss Deborah Davis of Dallas, Texas, was in the lead but at mid point Murdock came from behind to take a two point lead.

The two point lead was challenged by Davis and the competition really began. The two point lead dropped to one and finally to no points. The deciding factor was the x ring counts.

Davis was behind the champion with a 487x while Murdock had three more with 490x rings to take the Remington Trophy as the winner in the women's division of the competition.

A well-earned reward for a champion who came from behind and then being faced with hard competition to stay in there won the championship.

The Army placed one of its teams in first place and one in second place acing out the Army Reserve team and other competing teams in the Metallic Sight Team Match.

The U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit International Blue Team won the match with a score of 1596-111x followed by another Army Team, the International Alumni Team, which had a score of 1596-103x only 9x difference.

Colonel Receives His Insignia Late

After 26 years in the Armed Forces of his country, a man might not mind waiting a few weeks to be promoted to colonel. But it is exasperating to have to wait two months after the promotion to wear the new rank insignia.

Col. John S. Howard, a Liberian officer studying in Infantry Officer Advanced Class 6-69, received his promotion orders here in June.

The promotion was effective June 1. However Colonel Howard did not have the Liberian colonel insignia with him.

He wrote home requesting that his family send the appropriate insignia as soon as possible. Nearly a month after the initial letter, and two months after the promotion, the insignia arrived.

To help celebrate the occasion, and as a recognition of the honor of being promoted to colonel, Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the Infantry School, pinned one of the insignia on Colonel Howard's uniform during an informal ceremony in General Berry's office.

Lt. Col. Donald H. Evans, Colonel Howard's social sponsor, pinned on the other insignia.

Colonel Howard, who was at Fort Benning in 1958 to take the Associate Infantry Company Officer Course, has spent most of his career working with the Liberian National Guard.

Prior to attending the course here, he was the chief of the Reserve Officer Training Corps on the General Staff of the Liberian Army.

The Candidate Brigade Acquires Display on Lawn Outside Chapel

By Sp4 George Burks

The Candidate Bde., (TCB) Chapel, located on Sightseeing Road across from the 6th Stu. Bn. (OC), has acquired a permanent display to grace its grounds.

The display which is located on the lawn in front of the chapel, is designed to represent the religious interests of the entire Candidate Brigade. It consists of a large white cross which lies in the center of a circular rock structure, the bulk of which is filled with a fine, green gravel, thus accentuating the whiteness of the cross.

At the rear of the circle, embedded in the stone are the guidons of the various companies in the TCB, which flank the centrally-located Christian flag and the national colors.

The project is the fruition of an idea put forth earlier this year by Col. Robert M. Piper, TCB commanding officer.

The colonel had indicated his desire to Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Merlin Carothers, the brigade chaplain, that a suitable Christian symbol, in the form of a permanent lawn display, be constructed on the brigade chapel grounds by officer candidates.

Chaplain (Maj.) Everett J. Thomas made preliminary sketches and scale drawings of an approved project and work was passed to the battalions asking for assistance with the construction.

The 92nd Co., 9th Stu. Bn., TCB, responded with a group of workers, all under the supervision of Lt. John Riggs.

Veterans Administration Offers Education Benefits

EDITOR'S NOTE: Veterans Administration (VA) benefits are one way America says thanks to its veterans. This is the first in a series of articles describing — only generally — VA benefits. Additional information is available at VA offices, military posts and American Embassies in foreign countries.

Washington (ANF) — What educational benefits does the Veterans Administration offer former soldiers?

Foremost is help in meeting school costs, but educational and vocational counseling are also available.

Under the Veterans Readjustment Benefits Act of 1966, as amended, veterans falling into the following categories are eligible for educational benefits: (1) those who served on active duty at least 180 days, any part of which occurred after Jan. 31, 1955, and were not released from service dishonorably (2) veterans released from active duty after Jan. 31, 1955, for a service-connected disability and (3) servicemen still on active duty who have served at least two years.

The amount of money a veteran can receive depends on whether he is a full or part-time student and whether he has any dependents.

For example, a fulltime student without dependents may receive $130 a month; with two dependents he is eligible for $175 each month. Part-time students with no dependents can obtain $60 per month.

The Congress is presently considering substantial increases in educational allowances, so more money may become available.

The VA can also help veterans cover the costs of correspondence school and farm cooperative, flight, apprenticeship and on-the-job training.

Each eligible veteran may receive one and a half months of educational assistance for each month he served on active duty after Jan. 31, 1955. This assistance will not extend beyond 36 months.

Since most secondary schools and colleges are based on a nine-month school year, the veteran can receive financial aid for four years.

For the veteran who has previously received VA educational benefits and desires them again, a longer period of financial assistance, a total of 48 months, is possible.

Any public or private school at the secondary level or above may be approved for training. An approved medical residency course would qualify an eligible veteran for educational assistance as long as the course is approved by the state approving agency.

Educational programs outside the United States may be pursued only at approved schools.

An eligible person may select any program of instruction or training at any school which will accept and retain him as a student or trainee.

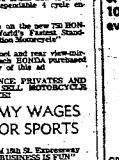
We guarantee you happiness and peace of mind for 30 days or 1000 miles. Whichever comes first.



You get this guarantee only if you buy a used car with our little sign showing in the window.

That's our 100% guarantee.*

It simply states that for 30 days or 1000 miles (whichever comes first) if anything goops out that the guarantee said wouldn't goop out, we'll fix it free.

Including replacement parts and labor.

So now you know how to look for a good used car.

And something just as important.

How to stay calm while doing it.

*The dealer guarantees 100% to repair or replace the engine, transmission, rear axle, front axle assembly, brake system and steering gear, for 30 days or 1000 miles, whichever comes first.

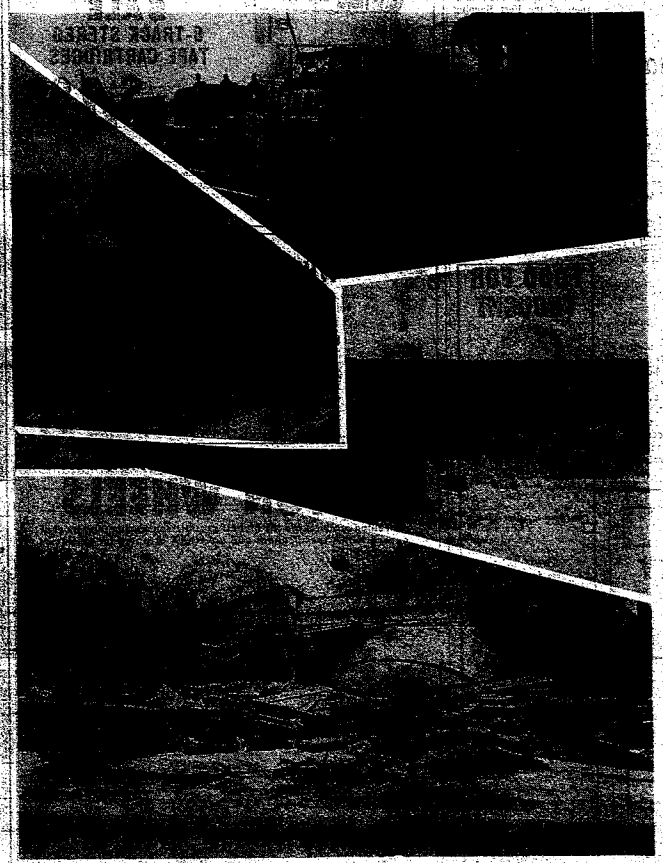
1,000 Troops 'Go to War' on Gulf



Soldiers Work At Cleaning Up Hurricane Area

More than a 1,000 Fort Benning soldiers have "gone to war" on the Mississippi Gulf Coast, battling the immeasurable destruction in property and lives left in the wake of Hurricane Camille.

Long convoys of soldiers and their equipment moving nonstop from here to the Gulf Coast area consisted of engineers, medics, scout dog handlers, cooks and experts in such tasks as water purification and grave registration.

Other Fort Benning soldiers flew to the area either to provide helicopter aid or to furnish special equipment.

Once the soldiers arrived in the Gulfport area, the battle required 24-hour shifts of work, including:

—Removing heavy debris and garbage;

—Disposing of dead animals;

—Operating water purification generators;

—Flying drugs and supplies to inaccessible areas and transporting the sick and injured;

—Hunting for the missing;

—Feeding the hungry.

Soldiers from here who arrived in the devastated area most recently were 150 men in Co. D, 518th Engineer Bn., 83rd Engineer Group, Infantry Center Troop Command.

Commanded by Capt. Brian R. Parr, the company took with them 40 five-ton dump trucks and six front loaders in a 76-vehicle convoy.

Other groups sent include 680 officers and men with the 43rd Engineer Bn., 81 officers and men with 15 helicopters in the 10th Aviation Group, a seven-man medical team from Martin Army Hospital, a scout dog platoon of

General George Forsythe Takes New Command

By Marian Jones

Maj. Gen. George I. Forsythe, former post commanding general, will assume command of the Combat Developments Command (USCDC) today in ceremonies at Fort Belvoir, Va.

General Forsythe will replace retiring Lt. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, who assumed command of USCDC in July, 1967.

A farewell ceremony was held here on York Field earlier this week to honor General Forsythe.

In a short speech during the farewell ceremony, the general said that Fort Benning has a way of making people amount to something.

He said that what he had learned and the strength he had drawn from being here was partly responsible for his leaving this post for the responsibilities of his new command.

General Forsythe has been nominated by President Nixon for the three-star rank of lieutenant general.

After thanking the men of the salute battery and honor guard of the 197th Inf. Bde. and of the 283rd and 291st Army Bands for their support, he concluded his remarks by saying "Aloha, not goodbye—but until we meet again."

At the end of the ceremony a flyby of two UH-1 helicopters from the 10th Aviation Group flew over the field and hovered in front of the reviewing stand. The messages "Good-by George and Betsy" and "congratulations" were written on the sides of the Hueys. Emblazoned on the side of one helicopter were three stars denoting the rank of lieutenant general.

Following the ceremony at York Field, a reception was held in the main ballroom of the Fort Benning Officers Club. Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, acting commanding general, presented Mrs. Forsythe a gift from the ladies and officers of the Infantry Center.

The official color portrait of the Infantryman Statue which stands in front of Infantry Hall was presented to General Forsythe.

General Davis is serving as acting commanding general of the center and Fort Benning until the arrival of Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott early next month.

Gen. 'Slam' Marshall Speaks to Officers

"General 'Slam' Marshall, reporter, historian, soldier" — is the way Brig. Gen. Sidney Berry, assistant commandant of the Infantry School, introduced the best selling author and retired general.

Brig. Gen. (ret.) S. L. A. Marshall was here to speak to four classes of the Infantry Officers' Advanced Course (IOAC).

The general, who was wearing the "screaming Eagle" patch of the 101st Airborne Division and a black eye-patch, has five books on the market. Two of them, "Ambush" and "Battles in the Monsoon", are about campaigns in the Republic of Vietnam.

The general described to the officers the "mystique of command," which he said happens when the men realize their leader has some quality they don't have.

"A man who lacks leadership will in time be detected as a counterfeit by his men," he warned.

General Marshall said decision making is always a leap in the dark. Decision making, he said, "is the resolution of a dilemma. You may lose some time but if you never run the risk, you're never going to win."

While speaking on his early enlisted service and lessons he learned, he listed three of these lessons.

The first was that life is too short; the second is that if a person knows one-half of one per cent more about a given field, he can have a reputation for being an expert, and the third is that a person does not discover truth, it discovers him.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

By Bill King
King's Pizza On Call

All boys and girls should know that boysenberries were named after Rudolph Boysen, the American horticulturist who created this delicious hybrid of blackberries and raspberries.

So, those forgotten leftover rolls are now stale? Wrap them in a damp towel and refrigerate a few hours before reheating in oven.

A San Francisco bartender was said to have originated the martini in 1860 at the request of an an adventurous thirsty customer on his way to Martinez, California.

Don't overlook your blender when it comes to chopping nuts, grating chocolate, making fresh breadcrumbs or scrambling eggs for a crowd.

The size or roughness of an avocado has no relation to quality. Choose the one that's bright with few dark spots and is slightly soft rather than hard.

VIETNAMESE CASUALTIES

Is it true that more Americans are being killed in the Republic of Vietnam than are South Vietnamese?

More members of the Republic of Vietnam Armed Forces (RVNAF) have been killed than have members of the U. S. Armed Forces. Official figures released for the period Jan. 1, 1961, through June 14, 1969, indicate that 36,378 members of the U. S. Armed Forces have been killed. Official figures released for the same period indicate that 80,741 members of the RVNAF have been killed — better than a 2-1 ratio.

Also, the RVNAF total does not include thousands of paramilitary personnel who have been killed. In summary, for every U. S. soldier killed in Vietnam, there have been more than two RVNAF soldiers alone killed.

• • •

VIETNAM PROGRESS

After years of receiving U. S. support, what evidence is there to indicate that the Republic of Vietnam government has made progress?

The Republic of Vietnam now controls more of rural South Vietnam than at any time since 1964. Less than 10 per cent of the population in South Vietnam live in areas controlled by the Viet Cong. The number of returnees from the enemy side is setting records, more than 17,000 this year alone.

The National Police continue to maintain urban security and reduce terrorism. More than 70 per cent of the Republic of Vietnam Armed Forces are volunteers and are fighting with remarkable bravery and tenacity.

• • •

SPECIAL FORCES MISSION

What is the mission of Special Forces?

The mission of Special Forces is to plan and conduct unconventional warfare operations; plan, conduct and support stability operations; plan and conduct direct action missions.

• • •

SPECIAL FORCES STRENGTH

What is the strength of the Special Forces broken down by major groups?

The total strength of the Special Forces is approximately 10,000. The numbers assigned to the various groups are as follows:

3d, 8th, 7th Gps at Fort Bragg — 3,000
5th Gp in RVN — 3,000
8th Gp in Panama — 700
10th Gp in Germany — 700

LOOK MAN! I DON'T KNOW ABOUT ANY MANEUVERS, I WAS JUST PASSING THROUGH ON MY WAY TO THE MOTORCYCLE CONVENTION

Accident-Free Record

By Norman Evans
Safety Director

There can be no more appropriate time to try for a perfect accident-free record at Fort Benning than on Labor Day.

We have come close, but close only counts in the game of horse shoes as the saying goes.

There is much in our favor as we attempt to record an accident-free holiday weekend.

We have trained hundreds of drivers in the principles of defensive driving and each command has made a special effort recently to promote safety.

We have been on the verge of a perfect holiday weekend, accident wise, so why not try to make this one, the one we have been trying to accomplish for so long.

We almost recorded a safe holiday weekend over the long July 4 weekend. Although we did not record a single fatal accident, there were three soldiers injured. Had it not been for this single auto mishap, which involved soldiers traveling beyond their legal pass limits, it would have been a perfect weekend.

It is appropriate that so much emphasis is placed on motor vehicle safety, especially during these holiday periods, because it is in automobiles that the majority of our accidents occur.

During these holidays, recreational areas are in full use, and far more than the usual number of persons are engaged in water sports. Here, too, is an area in which there is a need for observing the rules of safety.

Regardless of where you may choose to spend your holiday, it is necessary to observe common sense precautions.

Remember that highways are usually crowded during holiday weekends and the drinking driver is frequently encountered. Both conditions tend to increase the chances of your being involved in an accident.

The individual driver or participant in a sporting activity usually has some control over the possibility of becoming involved in an accident.

Common sense and the application of a few fundamental rules of conduct will help greatly in our effort to record an accident free Labor Day weekend.

It can be done, and I challenge each of you to help see that it is done this weekend.

Partners In Progress

Instead of a day to honor the working man, as established 75 years ago, Labor Day has become just another time to get away from work.

This is unfortunate when one considers the tens of millions of working men and women who have played a major role in making this nation the richest and most productive country in the world.

We in the military have a special debt to the working man. In times of war and national emergency, he has joined us in meeting the threats of aggression, either by laying aside his tools and joining our ranks, or providing us with the essential supplies and equipment to accomplish our mission.

The American working men and servicemen are strong partners in making this the most progressive, safest and greatest nation in the world. (AFPS)

Kindergartens, Reading-Speech Center To Aid Schools

By Marian Jones

When the Fort Benning Childrens Schools open Sept. 2, parents who are entering their children into the schools again this year will find there have been some changes made in the system since last year.

This Sept. for the first time, the community idea for kindergarten has been established at the post.

Kindergartens have been set up at four post schools instead of being located at the Patch School as before. An effort is being made to have children attend the school nearest their home and the school where they will also begin the first grade.

WOMEN'S NEWS

Child Development

Another first for the Fort Benning school system is the Child Development Center which has been installed at Patch School.

At the center will be teachers who will help with reading difficulties, a speech therapist and a guidance director and assistant who will direct the various programs.

Children who are identified as having special problems with reading will be transported once a day to Patch School where there will be three teachers, specially trained in solving reading problems, to help them with the difficulties they are having.

According to Dr. Joseph Conforti, superintendent of schools here, children selected for the reading clinic will be those who are reading below their grade level.

This remedial reading program will cover fiction, non-fiction, reading problems in mathematics, social studies and science.

Small Classes

The program will begin Sept. 8, giving the educators time to identify those children who need help.

The children will be divided into three groups to study in 1 and ½ hour sessions. There will be no more than 15 children per class. The phonetic approach to reading will be used as opposed to the sight approach.

Miss Ruth Massey, director of guidance and William Abrahamson new assistant guidance director will have their offices located at the center and the speech therapist Miss Elizabeth Sigler will be there at least one-half of the day to help with any speech difficulties a child might have.

In addition to the above teaching aids, agencies of Martin Army Hospital will be made available to work with the children from a mental and physical standpoint.

MP Officers Wives Have Evening Coffee

Military Police Officers wives gathered recently at the provost marshal's quarters where Mrs. Eugene J. Murdock, wife of the provost marshal, entertained with an evening coffee. She was assisted by Mrs. Ben C. Yarbrough who presided at the coffee service.

During the evening, plans of the MP wives' project for the OWC Christmas bazaar were discussed and approved by the group. It was also agreed that donations for the white elephant booth, and contributions for the Army Community Services food locker would be collected at the Sept. meeting.

Mrs. Murdock announced that OWC membership cards were available, and informed the group of the forthcoming Red Cross training course, and urged their participation in other activities.

Farewell gifts were presented to Mrs. Hugh Schutte and Mrs. Dale Sterrs, whose husbands will leave shortly for duty in Vietnam, and Mrs. Aaron Miller who will accompany her husband to Hawaii.

The military police officers wives meet each month for an evening coffee, and invite all MP officers wives in the area to join them regardless of their husband's duty station.

School Fashion Lights Luncheon

Back-to-school fashions and a surprise birthday celebration shared the spotlight at the Training Center officers wives luncheon at the Fort Benning Supper Club.

Mrs. Oscar E. Davis, wife of the Training Center commanding general, was presented a lighted birthday cake as the wives sang traditional birthday greetings.

The school fashion forecast was given by Mrs. Charles Pemberton, who pointed out that the basic browns, blacks and greys will be brightened by reds and greens. "Watch for purple, too," she said, "it will be very good this year."

Colorful Outfits

Five-year-olds Richard Clark and Jennifer Pigeon with Christopher Pigeon, 6, and Patricia Goss, 8, joined Mary Jane Betts, Lynn Trimmer, Cathy Hatcher, Judy Segars and Deborah Peabody in modeling the colorful outfits.

In keeping with the theme, little red schoolhouse replicas, giant pencils and big red-paper apples decorated the tables. Headquarters wives were the luncheon hostesses, with decorations designed and made by wives from the Operations and Training section.

With Mrs. Davis at the head table were Mrs. Robert Hatcher Jr., Mrs. Richard Maeder, Mrs. Francisco Ramos and Mrs. Reynold Johnston.

Newcomers

The newcomers welcomed to the Training Center were: Mmes. Hatcher, Donald Segars, Gene Clark, Thomas Jacobs, William Joyce, Daniel Moy, Joseph Barkley, Russell Smith, James Hendry, Jacob Trevino and Lacey Tyler.

Mrs. Davis was assisted by Mrs. Hatcher in presenting Training Center charms to the department members: Mmes. Billy Thornton, Paul Fowler, Antonio Mendiola, David Jauregui, Michael Thomas Jr., Mark Christopher, Donald Handy, John F. Adams Jr., and Sylvester Stemsley.

Senior-Status Formal Held

The 51st Officer Candidate Co., 5th Student Bn., The Candidate Bde. held its senior-status formal in the Fort Benning Officers Club.

The guest of honor, Col. Robert M. Piper, commander of the Candidate Bde., and the company cadre, the candidates and their guests enjoyed an evening of entertainment and dancing in an atmosphere of a "Spanish Castle," the theme of the party.

A seven-minute film produced by the 51st Co. Wives Club showed the ladies wearing officer candidate uniforms, undergoing a day's training in the company area supervised by the tactical officers. The music for the evening was produced by the "Unpolished Brass."

65th OC Company Wives Go Back to 'Gay '90s'

If, on a recent evening, you were strolling through the nearest antique shop, you might have been surprised to find yourself in a locale completely different from the one you thought you were in.

Actually, you found yourself in attendance at the intermediate status party, held by the 65th Co. (OC), 5th Student Bn., The Candidate Bde. The decor and mood suggested that you had suddenly stepped back nearly 80 years into the era of church socials and barbershop quartets. The time was "The gay 90s," and the place was the "Darktown Strutters Ball."

The atmosphere, created by artful decorations and music, beckoned all to journey back to a period of ice cream parlors, Clancy's Bar, and player pianos; of Saturday evenings in the park, where one could listen to the band play such tunes as "Laura Lee" and "Beautiful Dreamer"; of attending the county fair, and of going on picnics in the country with your favorite girl. The decorations were realistic: One was certain that the old grandfather clock which stood in the hallway had, in reality, turned back the hands of time.

Past to Present

One room seemed as though it had somehow been transported from the past into the present. It was complete with a forty-foot bar, stained glass windows, Tiffany lamps, antique paintings, brass spittoons, aluminum mirrors, and a bartender who had—what else—a handlebar moustache. All of this was complemented by music from an old piano and a banjo.

Outside the company a dressmaker's haven—an old-fashioned county fair—blossomed into existence. It featured an authentically designed gazebo which housed a band. You could also enjoy the traditional comestibles to be found at a fair. There were booths dispensing ice cream, melons, candied apples and soft drinks which were sold at the 19th century prices of five cents per glass. The waiters were attired in striped vests, pin-striped shirts, and garters, all topped off with jaunty straw skimmers.

KIN THOA NGUYEN

Girl Helped to College

Miss Kin Thoa Nguyen, a resident of the Republic of Vietnam, came all the way to Georgia just to attend Columbus College.

Miss Nguyen, nicknamed "Peggy" by her American employer in Saigon, is staying with Chaplain (Capt.) and Mrs. Thomas R. Fraker and their family at Fort Benning. Chaplain Fraker is assigned to the Student Brigade Airborne Chapel.

Peggy was introduced to the chaplain by the manager of the P.X. where she was working in South Vietnam. She explained her problem to him. She had quit school to work, and could not return due to Vietnamese law.

During the next year, the chaplain rotated back to the states and made arrangements with his unit to raise funds to send her to Columbus.

Finally, in June of this year, Peggy made the long trip to Fort Benning, and she will begin classes at Columbus College in September.

IMMEASURABLE DAMAGE ALONG SHORE

Troops 'Go to War'

15 dogs and 18 men and a 24-man emergency field kitchen.

The 43rd Engineers arrived Aug. 21 and immediately began working in 24-hour shifts. Divided into five companies, the Engineers worked near Biloxi and in the areas of Poplarville, Picanune, Lumberton, Purvis and Gulfport.

They have disposed of tons of dead animals washed up on the shore near Biloxi and cleared roads, operated water purification generators and disposed of waste and garbage in the other four areas.

Records of the Engineers near Biloxi showed that in the first two days alone they disposed of 18 tons of animals.

Graders, bulldozers and other large pieces of equipment were used to clear hundreds of miles of debris and to move more than 360 tons of garbage.

Early this week the Engineers moved into D'Iberville in an effort to restore two large bridges that provide access to the isolated community.

Lt. Col. Henry A. Pate Jr., 43rd Bn. commander, said, "You have to translate that (our work) into individual soldiers doing the hardest, most miserable labor you can imagine, under the kind of conditions there are here to see why I'm proud of these young Engineers. They're eating C rations, sleeping where they can . . . (in) rain, heat, whatever comes."

The 10th Aviation Group, which brought eight UH-IDs, two OH-13s and five CH-47s, has flown countless missions of mercy to bring relief to victims of the hurricane.

These aviators, many Vietnam combat veterans, have flown drugs and medical supplies to areas inaccessible by road and transported sick and injured to hospitals and clinics.

Other missions have involved transportation of potable water and food supplies and reconnaissance of extremely remote areas to see if residents need medical treatment.

During one mission, 125 persons were moved from a home for the aged to a medical facility. All were litter cases. H-13s have also been used to help power companies restore electrical service by spotting downed lines and directing repairmen to trouble-spots.

Maj. Charles F. Hatfield, the group's S-4, said the men were "going ahead with all haste" to perform what they consider an essential mission.

The 26th Scout Dog Platoon has had the grim job of hunting for missing bodies in piles of debris.

Army S-Sgt. Aaron Foster, non commissioned officer in charge of the scout dog team, said they will stay on the coast as long as they prove useful.

The platoon is staying at the Gulfport Naval Construction Base where the German Shepherds are sleeping on tennis courts and the men in the base jail. They are operating from Naval Construction Headquarters in nearby Pass Christian.

Water purification experts from the 72nd Engineer Co. of Kelley Hill were sent to the Bay St. Louis area with a 1200-gallon-per-hour capacity water purification van. Two 10,000 pound truck-mounted generators were also flown from Fort Benning to the Gulf area. The generators were used to reinstate waterworks.

A 4th Bn., 69th Armor, 197th Inf. Bde., team supplied the area with an emergency field mess capable of feeding 1,200 people for 72 hours or half that many for an indefinite period.

Colonel Mowery Becomes Ground Mobility Director

By 2nd Lt. James Hopson

Col. Lawrence L. Mowery recently became director of the Ground Mobility Department of the Infantry School here.

Colonel Mowery comes to the Infantry School from Vietnam, where he spent two years with the 101st Airborne Division.

During his tour, the Colonel held three different positions with the Screaming Eagles:

He commanded the division's Third Brigade for 15 months of which five were in CONUS. Colonel Mowery's men cleared the air base at Ben Hoa and the surrounding area during the 1968 Tet offensive. They operated as a semi-independent unit, fighting under the operational control of the 4th and 25th Divisions as well as the 101st, he said.

For four months, Col Mowery directed the division's support command.

His final job with the 101st was as chief of staff. He served as chief of staff during the division's struggle for Hill 937, known as "Hamburger Hill."

Colonel Mowery is no stranger to Fort Benning and the Infantry School. During World War II, he attended Officer Candidate School and Parachute School here.

He also served in the school's Airborne Department during the middle 1950's. Two division jump schools were in operation at Fort Bragg, N. C., and Fort Campbell, Ky., at that time, and the bulk of the Army's airborne troopers trained at the two other posts.

The airmobile warfare concept, which has proven highly successful in Vietnam, was developed in part by the Airmobility Group of the Department during Colonel Mowery's tour.

He noted some changes in the Infantry School, the greatest change being Infantry Hall, completed in 1964.

He also sees significant changes in the Ground Mobility Department since he left Fort Benning in 1968.

"The emphasis in the department when I was here before was training motor officers and NCOs. Now most of the department's efforts are directed to teaching command maintainance management leader courses. The only mechanical training we give is to Track Vehicle Mechanics students," he said.

"The department has made the transition from a limited technical instructional department to one carrying the greater load of teaching leaders maintainance management."

Colonel Mowery does not forsee making any sweeping changes in the Ground Mobility Department.

"I will only change as progress indicates that change is required," he said. "At present I have been throughout the entire department and I am relatively satisfied with the maintainance management instruction being provided our leader students."

Colonel Mowery, born in Salt Lake City, Utah, is a member of the Infantry OCS Hall of Fame.

1st Cavalry Association

Reunion Leaves Many Memories

By PFC Paul T. Miller

Business and festivities ended, members of the 1st Cavalry Division Association, who met here in their 22nd annual reunion, can reflect on the events of the three days.

One will remember the beauty and precision of the officer candidate companies at the retreat Friday evening: The wave of white gloves fluttering back and forth, back and forth, as the 51st and 92nd Companies marched past the reviewing stand.

Remember Tom Whittenberg? Whittenberg of Weatherford, Tex., was the elderly gentleman sitting on the front row during the review. Wearing the garb of the old 1st Cavalry of the early twenties, Whittenberg stood tall and straight as Old Glory passed by.

Although it was a day of chilling rain at Fort Benning, spirits were not dampened. "The weatherman must not have been a member of the Cav." voiced a former sky-trooper.

In an address at Marshall Auditorium, Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, acting post commanding general, welcomed the association to "the home of airmobility."

"I want you to consider this 'Cav Country,'" General Davis told the group. "We hope to make your stay as pleasant as possible."

The welcoming review on York Field was highlighted by a parachute drop.

For the older members who did not serve in Southeast Asia, a film was presented which provided a greater insight into operations of the 1st Air Cavalry in Vietnam.

Many of the former cavalrymen will be able to relive their memories of the past weekend in pictures as shutters were active, especially during Problem 5,000, presented by the Airborne Department at Eubanks Field.

Braving the rain, instructors sent their jump troops through 30 minutes of accelerated airborne training, demonstrating how men are taught to parachute out of planes.

Also presented under Problem 5,000 was a rappelling demonstration, illustrating the effectiveness of present day airmobility. By sliding down several long ropes, a squad of troops showed how one should properly exit a helicopter hovering 60 feet above the ground.

Scholarships were presented by the 1st Cavalry Association to children of deceased 1st Cav. members.

A dinner party at the Fort Benning Officers Club will hold the most endearing memories for some.

The party provided a welcomed opportunity to meet new faces and to swap a few old war stories. The chatter from around the club can still be heard:

"We were moving up toward Pleiku from the south when . . ." said one young captain. An old timer countered with, "Yeah, we ran into something like that during the Luzon Campaign."

During a balmy Sunday morning, when all is still—quiet and peaceful—perhaps months or even years from now, members of the Association will recall the solemness and pageantry of the 1st Cav memorial services at the Georgia Welcome Center and in Marshall Auditorium.

The honor guard from Co. C, 1st Bn., 29th Infantry, stand poised, unflinching, with their weapons at parade rest. An order is given, weapons are raised and a volley of shots rings out across the surrounding meadows.

The Memorial Fountain, presented by the city of Columbus in memory of the departed members of the 1st Cav, dances high in the air, glistening in the mid-morning sun.

The prayer of Lt. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, the first commander of the 1st Air Cavalry in Vietnam, still echoes in the minds of his listeners: "O Lord, lest I go my complacent way, help me to remember that somewhere out there a man died for me today. . ."

And so, the First Team has departed. The curtain is drawn and the reunion is over for the horse and skytroopers, but the memories remain.

Thoughts of Cav Country will always return. Perhaps it will be the sight of a helicopter zipping across an open sky; perhaps a re-run of "Combat" on television. There will always be some catalyst to stir up the memories of the three days spent in Cav Country.

In any event, it is hoped that the memories last until next year's reunion which will be held in Boston, Mass.

REENLISTMENT BONUS PRESENTED

$44,000 Given for Reenlistments

Maj. Robert G. Shain, company commander of the 177th Aviation Co., 10th Aviation Group, recently extended the oath of enlistment to five enlisted men of his organization for a total reenlistment bonus of $44,000.

The recipients were Specialists 5 Thomas Hughes and Roberto Rosas and Specialists 6 Ralph Heming, Edward Glinski and Joseph Rubado.

Hughes, Heming and Glinski, having completed tours of duty in the Republic of Vietnam, returned to the 177th as their present duty assignment. This is unusual in that all three were former members of the 177th before going to Vietnam.

S-Sgt. William Ensley, the unit reenlistment counselor, said, "For those three guys, this is a real homecoming and a prosperous one."

All three are married and their wives, with children, remained in the Columbus area during their twelve month tour.

Hughes, Heming and Glinski received the maximum $10,000 bonus and variable reenlistment bonus. Rubado received $9,680 and Rosas drew $4,320.

Radio Personality Attends Officer Candidate School

By SP4 George Burks

He has spoken to more than a million people at one time; his job has brought him into contact with such figures in the public eye as former Vice President Hubert Humphrey, Diana Ross and the Supremes and Aretha Franklin; he has made a career out of filling what would otherwise be known as a "pregnant pause" or "dead air."

He is Officer Candidate Leroy Johnson, 93rd Co. (OC), 9th Stu. Bn. (OC), The Candidate Bde.

Before he entered the Army, and subsequently, the OCS program, Leroy Johnson was a disc jockey, radio announcer and public personality in San Diego, Calif.

This city is the site of radio station XEGM, which Johnson helped his brother to establish after leaving high school.

Candidate Johnson says that working with record promoters was a daily matter for him. On some days, it brought him into contact with such luminaries of the recording industry as The Temptations, Jerry Butler and Aretha Franklin.

He was frequently called upon to be an emcee for concerts given in the San Diego area, concerts which featured such persons as Diana Ross and the Supremes and Moms Mabley. He recalls Diana Ross as being "aloof, both onstage and off."

2 Colonels Will Retire In Ceremonies Today

Col. Jack P. Haywood, post engineer, retiring after 23 years of active service, will be honored in a ceremony to be held in the commanding general's office at 2 p.m.

Colonel Haywood also will be presented the Army Commendation Medal for outstanding services in his present duty assignment.

Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, acting post commanding general, will make both presentations.

FILM CREW, PLANNERS
Civilians, Military Work Together

Crew Makes Pathfinder Film

The Pathfinders, one of the most elite groups in the Armed Forces, are getting their training put on film for posterity.

The camera crew, directed by Pat Fay, is the same group of men who recently finished making a film about airborne training at Fort Benning.

All of the films they have made here vary from the normal training films in that each has a plot and a story which follows along with the training. They are in color and have musical sound tracks. They are a great improvement over the cut and dried training films of the past.

The purpose of the pathfinders is to mark landing and drop zones. In any situation where aircraft are deployed, they must be "the first ones in and the last ones out."

In order to do this, they must be qualified parachutists and experts at land navigation.

The film will capture all of this. In fact, the camera crews went up in a plane themselves to follow the men as they parachuted.

The Pathfinders were organized prior to the landing at Normandy. Since then, they have led an illustrious career.

The film will help future Pathfinders to continue this tradition.

Phenix City Plays Host To 4 Vietnam Veterans

Phenix City and the Phenix City-Russell County Chamber of Commerce showed their appreciation to four Vietnam veterans during festivities this last week.

The soldiers honored were: Sp5 Bobby Powell, 22; PFC George E. Raines, 19; SSgt. Dennis Duncan, 20 and Sp4 Sam E. Thomas, 26.

The men are all patients at Martin Army Hospital.

The soldiers spent three days fishing, swimming, boating and just relaxing in the Alabama sun.

The program, designed to provide rest and entertainment for small groups of Vietnam returnees, will continue on a regular monthly basis.

Infantry Board Honors 3 Persons for Performance

By Rex Ellis

In recognition of their outstanding performance of duty, three members of the Infantry Board were honored when they were awarded certificates of achievement and outstanding ratings in the office of the Infantry Board president.

Officially commended and recognized for their outstanding workmanship, efficiency and overall contributions to the successful operation of the Infantry materiel test board were William Gilmer, Wilbur Burr and MSgt. George Jenik.

The three men were presented their awards by Col. Charles B. Thomas, president of the Infantry Board, in the presence of test division chiefs and fellow workers.

Gilmer, aircraft mechanic for the board's aircraft, was awarded an outstanding rating and sustained superior performance of duties certificate for the period of May 1, 1968, through April 30, 1969. He was commended for his exceptional drive and initiative.

Through his vast knowledge of aircraft maintenance and experience he has been able to maintain the aircraft in superior flying condition with the least amount of down time thus preventing any delays in airborne testing.

Gilmer has over 30 years of maintenance experience and has been employed with the test board since September, 1966.

Burr, budget analyst in the Management and Budget Division, was cited for his contribution to the efficient operation of the test board through his knowledge of the Army management systems and successful management of all funds received by the Board.

Burr has been employed at the Infantry Board years of federal service since 1965 and has over 20 employment.

Indians Tour Post, Meet Pvt. Roundstone

By 2nd Lt. James Hopson

Pvt. Wayne Roundstone, Lame Deer, Mont., a full-blooded Cheyenne Indian at Fort Benning for Airborne training, met at Eubanks Field with 20 other Indians who were touring the post.

"How do you feel?" one of the visitors asked.

"You look real good. You scared?" Roundstone said he was not.

"We're proud of you, real proud," a woman said over and over.

Roundstone smiled when he learned that Miss Indian America, Winona Hauri, a member of the group, was part Cheyenne. The two young people chatted as the adults in the group look on approvingly and the handful of youngsters admiringly inspected Roundstone's gear.

Mrs. Addy George said that her son-in-law, also an Indian, is a paratrooper at Fort Bragg, N. C. Mrs. George is an Uchee Indian. The Uchees originally inhabited this area and a stream on Fort Benning is named after the tribe. Mrs. George said she intends to settle in Columbus.

Nathan Little Soldier, part Mandan and part Arickara Indian, said he fought in Europe as a forward observer with the 89th Infantry.

"I marched across France and half of Germany. The men used to kid me about my name, but they learned to respect it," he said gravely.

A young boy with a ring in his ear thought he might go Airborne.

The Indians visited here as part of WRBL-TV's "Salute to the First American Week" program, a seminar on Indian customs and problems, held annually in Columbus.

COLD NOSED MASCOT

CU CHI, REPUBLIC OF VIETNAM — A puppy was enlisted as a mascot by a vehicle track retriever crew of Co. A, 2nd Bn., 4th Armor, 25th Inf. Div.

Civilians and Infantry Combine Their Efforts

TAY NINH, REPUBLIC OF VIETNAM — In the first action of its kind, men of Bravo Company, 4th Battalion, 9th Infantry, 25th Infantry Division, combined efforts with the Vietnamese Civilian Irregular Defense Group (CIDG) in the area to spend three days and nights combing the southern edge of the Renegade Woods, south of Tay Ninh City.

The CIDG is made up entirely of volunteers who wish to rid their area of Viet Cong and North Vietnamese infiltrators. They have no time obligation and can quit at any time.

On the first day, Bravo Company and the CIDG went by eagle flight to the edge of the woods. The first lift assaulted the thick woodline. From there the company and Vietnamese soldiers chopped their way through the heavy jungle to their rendevous point.

Soon after the ambush patrols had gone out the second night, Viet Cong moved in and tried to surround the combined command post. Captain Hai of the CIDG went out with four of his men to gain reconnaissance information on enemy locations and strength. At least a platoon, dug-in and ready to fight was reported by Hai.

Artillery forward observer 1st Lt. Don Bradly of Peoria, Ill., dropped artillery to within one hundred yards of the command post on information given him by the CIDG commander.

"I knew it was close so I told everyone to stay low and then I put it right where the Vietnamese had spotted the enemy," said Bradly. The allied troops found dug-in enemy positions the next morning right where the artillery had landed. The enemy had been driven off.

Captain Ronald J. Cabral of Fall River, Mass., commanding officer of Bravo Company had high praise for his CIDG allies.

"They were about as aggressive as any group over here," he said. "During the three-day operation they would go out of their way to make contact."

"It really gives you a good feeling to see these Vietnamese beside you day and night; it really makes you see that the people are with you, because you know they are volunteers," added Staff Sergeant Leonard V. Simpson of Antioch, Calif., platoon leader for Bravo Company.

Ranger Instructor Led Surprise Assault

By PFC Jim Doherty

A former instructor in the Infantry School's Ranger Department here recently led a daring pre-dawn raid on a Viet Cong coastal sanctuary that has seriously limited the enemy's security in his coastal bases.

Capt. Robert H. Smith who served here and at the Mountain Ranger Camp in 1968 led a select group of 22 volunteers from Co. A, 4th Bn., 21st Inf., in an amphibious assault on a Viet Cong base about two miles north of LZ Charlie Brown.

Leaving the deck of the U. S. Coast Guard Cutter Point Glover at about 1:30 a.m., the platoon paddled two rubber boats ashore. Smith skirted the beach for 300 feet before moving up a rocky trail to a small plateau near enemy bunkers.

Attack Signal

Using only hand signals, he brought his troops up on line, and pointed to his radio-telephone operator who banded him a white star cluster which would signal the attack.

As the star cluster burst and the first illumination rounds went off above them, a shrill whistle blown by the captain pierced the air. The troops swept on line through the bunker complexes, destroying them with hand grenades.

The raiders met little resistance and the Viet Cong were quickly flushed from their holes.

Mission Accomplished

Four minutes after reaching the objective the mission had been accomplished.

Because the raid called for an immediate withdrawal, no accurate body count of enemy dead was possible, but there were no American casualties in the head-on assault on the long-held VC enclave.

In a letter to Col. Y. Y. Phillips, director of the Ranger Department, Smith acknowledged the importance of his Ranger training to the success of the assault.

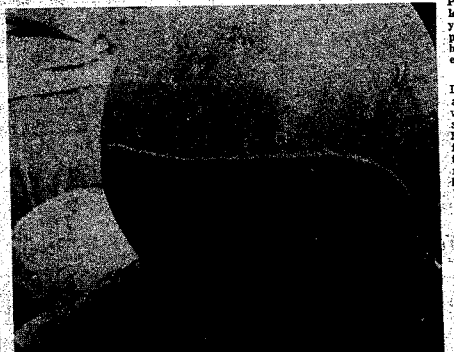
Successful Operation

He termed the assault "an extremely successful operation conducted by elements of my company, utilizing the principles I learned as a Ranger student and for 22 months as a Ranger instructor."

Smith's battalion commander, Lt. Col. Donald Hanson, who has also served here in the Ranger Department, saw considerable military value in the techniques used in the assault.

"This operation has added a new dimension to the operational capacity of the 11th Brigade and places a limitation on the enemy who can no longer ignore the sea approach," Hanson said. "These coastal sanctuaries can no longer afford them the security they had previously enjoyed."

TO THE SURPRISE ATTACK



MARK OF AN AK-47

CU CHI, REPUBLIC OF VIETNAM — feet in front of his armored personnel Spc4 Conklin of New Haven, Conn., had a carrier and creased his helmet with an close call on a recent sweep with the 1st AK-47 round. "I don't want to think about Bn. (Mechanized), 5th Inf., 25th Inf. Div. it," said Conklin.

New Theatre Group Selects Musical, 'Guys and Dolls'

By 1st Lt. Fred Vollrath

The newly formed theater group at the Fort Benning Playhouse has selected "Guys and Dolls," a musical comedy by Frank Loesser, as its first production for the fall season.

It will be directed by Grady Smith, currently an instructor with the Infantry School.

"Guys and Dolls" was selected primarily because we felt it would be a good show to put on for the soldiers and the talent we have available is musically oriented. It isn't a technically difficult show to get on by a new group" said Bob Hauley, an entertainment specialist at the playhouse.

The group was founded at the main post entertainment center in order to provide continuity in theater production on post.

Start from Scratch

"Previously each show was a one shot affair," said Hanley. "We would get the actors, technicians and crew together to put on that one show and then after it was over everyone went their own way. When we wanted to produce another show we pretty well had to start from scratch again."

Hanley hopes the group will give interested people more opportunity to do more things, more often, in theater.

"People shouldn't get the impression this is only for people with extensive experience," explained Hanley. "We need people with varying degrees of experience. All we really require is interest and a willingness to get the job done."

First Meeting

Forty-five people attended the first meeting. They ranged from people with up to fifteen years experience, some of it professional, to those who got their first taste of theater production that night.

The group will meet again at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the Entertainment Center, Bldg. 1237, located behind the Infantry Museum.

They hope to plan a comedy or drama for the Third Army Tournament of Plays scheduled for the end of February, select a name for the group, plan an agenda and decide tryout dates for "Guys and Dolls."

Invited

"Anyone who missed the first meeting but is interested in joining us is certainly invited to come," Hanley said.

Additional information is available at 545-2982.

Sunday TV Documents 'Korea'

"The Big Picture," a series broadcast at noon Sundays on WRBL, TV 3, documents the courage and sacrifice of the American soldier.

This Sunday's show is "Korea: Revisited."

In the summer of 1950 the forces of communism unleashed an attack upon the Republic of Korea causing death and destruction.

The United Nations answered the attack with a multi-nation fighting force which drove out the enemy and set up a shield behind which the people could rebuild.

"The Big Picture" presents a look at the Republic of Korea today to show the progress and development of the nation and its people.

Veteran College Loans Given in Police Science

Columbus College has been awarded an initial $16,400 by the U.S. Department of Justice to be used for loans and grants to students in the police science program.

Clark Aldridge, college director of financial aid, said the award may be increased to $39,600 for the academic year depending upon congressional approval of additional funds.

Meanwhile, according to Joe Webb, police science director, the initial award will be used for up to $1,800 academic year loans to fulltime students, or $200 quarterly grants to part-time students.

Webb said the college hopes to double the enrollment of 57 students last year in police science. A special effort is being made, he said, to interest young men who have just completed military service. The college already has the largest program of its type in Georgia.

The grants are usually made to area police officers who attend college on their off time and are working toward the two-year associate degree, while loans are made to full-time students pursuing a four-year degree.

'Peanuts' Comic Strip Inspires Musical Hit

The world of theatre is a world of glitter, spotlights and glamour for most performers. To one man, however, being a performer means leading a dog's life.

That man, Alfred Roberge, can be seen at the Alliance Theatre in the beautiful new Memorial Arts Center in Atlanta until Sept. 14 where he is playing Snoopy, the fantasy-stricken pooch, in "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown."

'Peanuts'

These will be the only Southeastern performances of the National Touring Company of the New York production of the Peanuts musical hit. Wherever the Company has appeared - Honolulu, Detroit, Cleveland, St. Louis - theatregoers have enjoyed watching Roberge as Snoopy while he sings such humorous songs as "Suppertime" and "The Red Baron" while pretending he's a World War I flying ace shooting down his infamous rival.

He is a loyal friend to the neighborhood kids including the crabby, conceited Lucy who constantly belittles Charlie Brown; Patty, a rope-skipping little bundle of nerves, Schroeder, a someday-famous pianist; Linus, who clutches his blanket and sucks his thumb throughout the show, and — of coirse — Charlie Brown, the famous little boy failure. The musical is based on the Charles M. Schulz comic strip, "Peanuts."

A young man with a great deal of acting experience behind him, Roberge has appeared in productions of "My Fair Lady," "Pirates of Penzance," "Naughty Marietta," "Irma La Douce," "Camelot," "110 In the Shade" and a summer circuit tour of "South Pacific." In addition, he has appeared off-Broadway in "Lord Jim."

Television viewers have also seen Roberge — and not as a dog — in appearances on the daytime drama, "Love of Life." He is a graduate of the American Musical and Dramatic Academy and studied acting with Philip Burton.

Roberge likes his role of Snoopy. "He is a middle-aged mongrel with hound qualities and long, floppy ears, as I imagine him," he said. "He knows a lot more about life than the human kids in the show. Like Walter Mitty, he revels in dreams of a glorious one." According to the Cleveland Plain Dealer critic, Peter Bellamy, "Alfred Roberge is so convincing as a dog that by the end of the show some people swear he is a dog."

Shakespeare Film Sermon Will Be Shown Sunday

A sermon adapted from a Shakespeare play and filmed will be shown Aug. 31 at 6:30 p.m. in the Sightseeing Road Chapel.

The film sermon, "A Pound of Flesh," was produced in full-color by Bob Jones University, Greenville, South Carolina. The thirty-minute film sermon features Dr. Bob Jones Jr., president of the university.

Before the release of this production, Dr. Jones said, "Great art is in line with the Word of God. The greatest artists have used their talents in dealing with Scriptural subjects. Someone has said that Shakespeare's works 'are studded with quotations from the Bible as the evening is studded with stars,' but here for the first time on a film, at least one of his plays has been used as an example of the truth of the text, 'by the work of the law there shall no flesh be justified.'"

The idea of using Shakespearean quotations and references is common in the sermons of most great preachers, but the idea of including a whole act of a Shakespearean play to illustrate a Gospel sermon is something else. It is the sort of thing that can be done through the medium of the film sermon.

Katherine Steuholm, the director of the production said, "In the film sermon, we cannot, indeed, we must not, be bound by the rules of pulpit presentation. The camera itself suggests new approaches and affords new opportunities."

USMA Graduates Will Picnic

A picnic for graduates and former cadets of the U.S. Military Academy will be held at 5 p.m. Sept. 7 at the Special Services Recreation area on 2nd Armoured Division Road.

The event is being sponsored by the West Point Society of Fort Benning and Columbus.

College and High School Classes Taught on Post

The younger set will not be the only ones taking part in a school "sit in" this September, as on-post university and high school classes are also scheduled to begin.

Registration period for American University Courses is Sept. 2-12. The fall term courses start Sept. 15 and end Nov. 6.

Application and registration for university courses must be made through the education centers on post.

For active military persons tuition assistance is available upon application. The Army will pay for 75 per cent of the total cost of a course. Tuition fee is $69 each course, or $23 per credit hour. The cost to the individual is $17.25.

Dependents, retired military personnel and Civil Service employees are required to pay the total tuition fee.

American University classes are scheduled four evenings a week, with two classes each night starting at 6 p.m.

The American University here is a branch of American University, Washington, D.C., and credits attained are accepted by a majority of national colleges.

For information on the courses at both high school and university level, contact the Education Center, Bldg. 35, 545-4532.

Choral Guild Will Audition All Singers

The Columbus Choral Guild will hold auditions Thurs., Sept. 4, from 5 to 8 p.m. at St. Luke Methodist Church, 1104 Second Avenue. Their first rehearsal will be Monday, Sept. 8, at 8 p.m. The auditions are open to all singers in the area. For further information, call the director, Horace E. McFarland at 327-4943.

The Columbus Choral Guild is a community chorus which draws its membership from Phenix City, Ft. Benning, Auburn, Lafayette, as well as Columbus. The group was founded four years ago by McFarland. They have performed on local radio and TV, in both the Three Arts Theatre and the Springer Opera House and at the Columbus Square Mall.

They have sung such works as Handel's "Messiah", Orff's "Carmina Burana", Vivaldi's "Gloria", Pergolesi's "Magnificat", Britten's "Ceremony of Carols", and Faure's "Requiem" as well as folk songs, spirituals and Broadway show tunes.

This year's program is the most exciting and challenging yet. December 16th at 8 p.m. they will give a concert at the Springer Opera House.

Small Games Tourney Planned

By Pvt. Steve Zimmerman

The 1969 Infantry Center Small Games Tournament will be conducted at Briant Wells Field House and Doughboy Stadium from Sept. 15-19 to determine the post championship team and individual champions in horseshoes, handball, badminton and table tennis.

Teams of four for each event (total 16) may be entered. The units eligible include: 197th Infantry Brigade — all units assigned and attached; the Student Brigade, the Candidate Brigade and the U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit (combined); the Center Troop Command, the U. S. Army Infantry Board, the U. S. Army Combat Command Infantry Agency (combined); U. S. Army Training Center and Reception Station (combined); the 10th Aviation Group — all units assigned and attached; Martin Army Hospital and attached units and Lawson Army Aviation Command (combined).

Each team of four may compete in singles and doubles in the sport for which they are entered. However, in order to schedule concurrent competition in all four sports, individuals cannot be entered in more than one sport. The individual and doubles team champion in each sport will be determined by single elimination.

The championship team and runner-up will be determined by total points accumulated in the tournament. In the event of a tie for first or second places, co-champion or runner-up teams will be declared.

Points will be awarded as follows:

Units entering a full team (16) will be awarded an additional 20 points. However, each of them has to play in order for the points to be awarded.

Each team member will receive 10 points for each event entered (10 points for singles and 10 points for doubles — total 20). Again, the individual has to play in order to receive the extra points. Also, no points are awarded for forfeits or byes.

One point will be awarded for each singles or doubles team match won up to the finals (those who draw byes will be awarded 2 points for their initial win). The winner in the finals will receive 5 points and the runner-up will receive 3.

The Special Services officer, who is responsible for the conduct of the tournament, will furnish officials, equipment, rules and awards.

Horseshoe competition will be held at Doughboy Stadium (Bldg. 394) with the other three events to be held at Briant Wells Field House (Bldg. 933).

Units desiring to enter must submit notification to the sports director at Bldg. 394 not later than Sept. 1.

Units should also have a roster ready by Sept. 8 when a scratch meeting will be held by the sports director at Bldg. 394 at 10 a.m. Drawing will be conducted there to determine pairings for the first rounds of play.

THE FORUM
THE FOOTBALL

By Mark Reiff

In pro football, the losing team will always expound on the theory that exhibition games do not count in league standings and are only a training period for the rookies. But don't fool yourself, they are as hard fought and bloody as a regular season game.

With all the first year men trying to win a berth on the club, mistakes are numerous and the true strength of a team is not always easily discernible. Los Angeles is being beaten regularly in the worst way; through their famous defense. Once the regular season starts and the veterans take over, things should revert to normal.

Assessing the teams of the Western Conference at the present therefore has to be done on past performance and current rookie hopefuls. Overlooking the phenomenal Super Bowl classic, the Baltimore Colts were the National League's best team in 1968, and one of the senior circuits most well organized squads in years. They rank again as the prime contenders for divisional, sectional and league honors. At quarterback, their one-two punch of Unitas and Morrall is devastating.

With Morrall winning player-of-the year award and the league passing title, and Unitas apparently healthy, the only foreseeable problem will be which one to play. The defense is solid but they do have three scheduled starters beyond the 10-year mark in pro football. The elite receiving corps is back in full force and should continue to give defenses the fits.

LA Sharp as a Razor

Los Angeles has been as sharp as a razor the last couple of years but can not get out of the shadow of the Colts. They are a sound team and are formidable on defense, even thought they are acting more like sheep than rams in the exhibition games so far. The acquisition of Bob Brown did not come cheap but the experts figure Brown is worth it, considering him the best offensive tackle in football.

Gabriel is dependable and durable, two prime assets in a quarterback and he can do it all. At 6 foot 4 inches and 230 pounds, he can pass long and short and is a running threat anytime he tucks the ball under his arm and takes off. Rookies like Larry Smith and Jim Seymour can be calculated on to receive much attention and he should have good first years in the NFL.

Pack Will be Back

The Central Division will continue to be the most competitive in the NFL and the battle will continue where it left off last year between the Packers, Bears and Vikings. Green Bay's "The Pack Will Be Back" signs should remain fluttering in the breeze for the next few years as they strive to rebuild a team built on the memories of past glories.

Age and a succession of low draft choices have brought the once-proud dynasty down to everyman's level. There is still much talent remaining but it is now spread out and slowing down. The offense has youth and flair but the defense is becoming more porous all the time. A sign posted in the locker room by Vince Lombardi tells the story; "THE GREATNESS OF THE GREEN BAY PACKERS IS NOT THAT THEY NEVER FALL BUT THAT THEY RISE EVERY TIME THEY FALL." The rise will be a gradual one in the years to come.

Minnesota bounced into the division title last year with two victories over the Packers and who is to say they will not do the same again? They are a sound team except for the quarterback slot. Joe Kapp did a respectable job but he was not impressive. Gary Cuozzo will be given a long, hard look and King Hill is always a possibility. Brian Dowling, a high draft pick from Yale can not be discounted as he was an exciting passer in college, though unheralded in the Convertie bracket in the right circumstances.

SFC John Kingeter, a member of the Army's Running Boar team, Marksmanship Training Unit, Ft. Benning, firing against the World's finest boar shooters, placed third in the individual championship. His score of 250 was only two points off the winning pace set by a Swedish shooter.

An improved Russian team caught the U. S. team in a shooting lull during the team championships. The U. S. team shooting below their average managed to place second in the team match with 638 as the Russiau's won it with 654.

The dove hunting season opens at Fort Benning Sept. 6 and runs through Oct. 4.

Hunting will not be permitted on Mondays, Tuesdays or Fridays.

For the first two days and the last day of the hunting season will be permitted over the entire reservation. During the remainder of the season, it will be in accordance with the controlled dove hunting program which specifies:

Thursday — hunting permitted between Central of Georgia R. R. and the Chattahoochee River.

Saturday — hunting permitted between Buena Vista Road and Moore Road (east).

Sunday — hunting permitted between Buena Vista Road and Moore Road (west).

A bag limit of 18 per day, with a possession of 36, has been set.

In the Alabama portion of the reservation Central Daylight Standard Time is in effect; in Georgia, Eastern Daylight Standard Time is used. When Daylight Time is in effect, shooting will begin at 12 noon Daylight Time.

Clearance to enter area for dove hunting will be governed by maps posted at the Rod and Gun Club (Bldg. 4050), Provost Marshall (Bldg. 215) and Range Control (Bldg. 2621).

Army Spec. 5 Beats Olympic Medal Winner

The Army shotgunners from the Marksmanship Training Unit, Ft. Benning, Ga., showed perfection in International type shooting during the Grand American Trap Championship "The Grand-daddy of trap matches" in Vandalia, Ohio last week.

A three way shoot-off insued as the fourth and final round of targets concluded in the 100 target International Championship. Olympic Gold medalist Rossini of Italy found himself facing two tough competitors Scando of Canada and the Army's Sp5 Stanley Carmichael for the shoot-off.

Scando was the first to drop out of the shoot-off after he missed his twenty-second bird. It looked like it was going to be a knock-down, drag-out battle between Carmichael and Rossini. Then surprisingly Rossini dropped his twenty-fifth bird and Carmichael made a direct hit giving him the championship over the Olympic medalist.

The preliminary 100 target International match held the day before the actual championship proved to be an exciting match as two army shooters, Sgt. James Beck and Sp4 Glen Everts tangled with Air Force shooters; Ken Robinson, Tom Garrigus and Green in a shoot-off for the preliminary championship. All three men fired straight breaking all one hundred birds in the preliminary match.

The five men approached the line for the shoot-off, each one to their assigned station. Shotgun blasts began to ring-out as targets were called for. Green stationed himself for his 25th target, called and missed, placing him fifth. Now the sides were even, two Army shooters against two Air Force shooters. Twenty-six targets later Garrigus missed his fiftieth bird to place fourth.

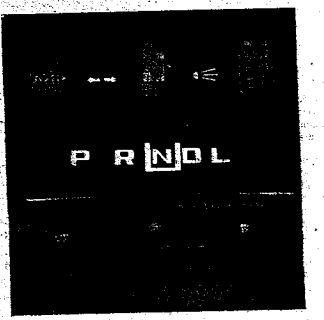
Unlike some foreign cars, Volvos can shift for themselves.



Volvo comes with an optional automatic transmission.

The automatic transmission it comes with is strong enough to handle twice as much horsepower as the Volvo engine puts out.

This means that if you spend $180 extra for a Volvo with automatic, you shouldn't have to spend another penny on automatic transmissions until you buy a new car.

Which shouldn't be until a very long time from now. Over 95% of all the Volvos registered in the United States in the last 11 years are still on the road.

So if a stick shift is all that's been keeping you out of a car that lasts long enough to get you out from under car payments, come on over and get into a Volvo.

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

By Bill Kloeb

The first half of the Georgia dove season will open at noon Sept. 6 and close at sundown Oct. 3. The first half of the Alabama season will not open until noon Sept. 22 and will close at sundown Nov. 10. During the open season, shooting will be permitted from noon until sundown.

The Rod and Gun Skeet and Trap ranges will be open from 10 a.m. until dark Aug. 30 and 31 and Sept. 1 to provide hunters an opportunity to sharpen shooting eyes.

On the reservation, shooting will be controlled by area. Shooting will be permitted in designated areas Saturdays, Sundays, Wednesdays and Thursdays. Hunting will not be permitted on Monday, Tuesday and Fridays. Exceptions to this will be that hunting will be permitted over the entire Georgia portion of the post on the first two days of the season and the last day of the season and on the Alabama portion of the reservation the first day and the last four days of the season.

Regulations outlining areas open for hunting may be obtained at Range Control, Provost Marshall or Rod and Gun Club offices. It will also be necessary to register at one of these offices prior to hunting.

Few birds are more exciting or more frustrating than the elusive mourning dove. He flies fast and not necessarily straight, especially after he has been shot at a couple of times. The chief secret of bagging them is to use about twice as much lead as you think is required. Another good piece of advice is not to compare your expended shells with the number of birds in your game bag. You may just quit in disgust.

The best way to hunt doves is to locate fields, resting areas and waterholes where the birds congregate. Since the opening day usually produces the best shooting, it is best to make your reconnaissance prior to that time. When you look for the birds, also look for concealed shooting positions within range of these places or if you really want to be sporting, you can choose a point on a flyway between one of these locations. Most doves shot early in the season are local birds and their habits can be fairly accurately charted. Later most of the doves will be transients migrating South.

Doves move in flocks, customarily feeding during the morning, resting after midday and then visit watering places before flying back to their roosts. Since they seldom arrive at the water holes until very late in the afternoon, hunting is limited to a short period at the water hole.

The lone hunter will do well to take his stand near an isolated tree in or near the field for doves often choose such a place to land and reconnoiter prior to dropping to the ground. Decoys hung in the tree or placed on the ground produce good results. The most exciting action, however, comes when a group of gunners are spaced around a field. This keeps the birds moving and results in fast and sometimes furious shooting.

Hunting changes later in the season when migrant flocks which remain in the area only a day or two are the targets. Fields, resting areas and waterholes which have been productive before may now be completely abandoned and areas that provide good shooting one day may be birdless the next.

Scouting is even more important in the late season than early in the season.

When hunting dove, it's best to wear camouflage clothing. If you don't have a camouflage suit, wear dark colored clothes. Light clothes shows us very well against the dark background of the ground and is more likely to frighten the birds away before you can get a good shot.

Because of the speed of the dove in flight, we recommend a 12 gauge shotgun with a modified or open choke. Hunters who are proficient at bagging quail will find themselves at a disadvantage using the small 16 and 20 gauge for hunting doves. Use 7½ or 8 shot in high base loads and bring plenty with you. You'll need them if you see doves.

Army Rifle Team Wins National Competition

The Army team looked good as scores were compared during the final day, walking away with the top two team matches and the best individual during the National High Power Rifle Championships, Camp Perry, Ohio.

Highly honored soldier at the award ceremony was SSG. Terry Daughterly. He was presented the Daniel Boone Plaque for winning the overall championship in the National Trophy Individual rifle competition. His winning score of 489 also qualified him for the high Infantryman in the match being presented the 25th Infantry Division trophy and the high Army shooter winning the Associaton of the U. S. Army plaque.

In the battle of guns, during the Enlisted Men's trophy team match, Army Combs team named in honor of their coach MSG Roy H. Combs came out on top.

The five-man team was a group of experienced shooters with a reliable coach, which set out to win the match. As they began to fire as a team it was warm and breezy. Each team member worked at producing the best score possible and their efforts paid off as they took first place in the Enlisted Men's trophy team match with a score of 1750.

SFC James McQuien led the team as high man along with SSG Harvey Skinner, SSG Willie Jordan, SSG Earl Waterman, SSG Elmer Mondon and SFC William Lee

In the National Trophy team match the Army Combs team switched one man on the team and came up with a winning score of 2903. Firing team members were McQuien, Skinner, Jordan, Waterman, Mondon and SSG Martin Edmondson.

Healthy Gale Sayers

Chicago has a healthy Gale Sayers back and therein lies the story of the Bears. They finished a strong 7-7 second, ahead of the hated Packers, to the surprising Minnesota Vikings last season.

The Bears did not particularly distinguish themselves, statistically, either on offense or defense. But they had the knack of being competitive and could come up with the big play when needed. The quarterback situation is a little cloudy but the drafting of Bob Douglass of Kansas should help relieve the tensions somewhat. But a passer rarely makes it his first year and the Bears not only have to find someone who can throw with authority but people to catch the ball when thrown as well.

All in all, the Central Division of the Packers, Vikings, Bears and Lions should be an exciting one to watch.

Sergeant Describes Race At Selma as 'Fantastic'

By Snow Wilson

Asked to describe the Regional-National Sports Car Races at Selma, Ala., last weekend SSgt Mike Scott exclaimed "fantastic."

Mike, who normally helps forecast the weather down at Lawson Field, is a career worker and is working on his national license.

Over 100 cars entered the two day event that saw the 30 minute "main," or Group 5, won by Charlie Kemp in a Shelby GT350 who took the lead after three laps of the 2.69 mile "T" shaped airport course.

Thrills, however, were found in the Group 4 race where the line-up included MGAs, MGBs, Sprites, Midgets, Porsche Super 90s and Speedsters and a Zink Alpha. A well prepared 1275 cc Sprite held the lead for the first 20 minutes and then blew his engine coming down a long straight letting a speedster take over.

For the blood thirsty, Meredith Watts, in a TR3 proved a show of shows when he went into turn two a little too deep, went broadside, rolled three times, then went end over end twice and ended it all by rolling over again. Although Watts car was totaled the safety equipment held and he wound up with only a broken arm and a few nicks and bruises.

Although Saturday's Regionals were cut to only 15 minutes, the Formula Vees provided the excitement with two cars changing the lead two or three times each lap.

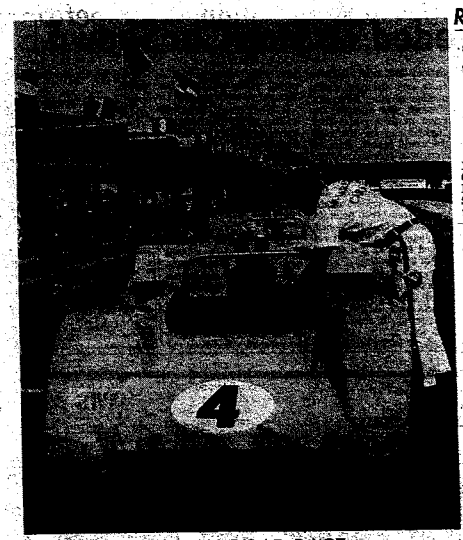
The Group 5 Regional was also livened up by a pair of Camaros and Kemp's GT350. Unable to qualify because of time, Kemp, and one of the team Camaros, had to start at the back of a 30 car pack but had roared their way to second and third when the 15 minutes ran out.

And for all the disappointed bike fans this Labor Day weekend should make up for the time you spend running back and forth to Tri-County Raceway. The elements were just a little too much for that clay surfaced track last week so all races were off.

But three "Three Star" AMA sanctioned motorcycle events are scheduled this weekend within riding or driving distance:

All are flat track one half mile races with one Saturday night at Lawrenceburg, Tenn., another Sunday on the Athens, Ga., fairground course and the last on Monday at Gadsden, Ala., on the Green Valley Raceway.

In the meantime Tri-County is going to make up for lost time with races, Hobby and Sportsman classes, scheduled for Friday and Saturday nights, motorcycles on Sunday afternoon and another four wheeler on Monday.



$50,000 ROAD RACE

This weekend Elkart Lake, Wis., will be an international field of stars. Show above the scene of the $50,000 Road America is the McLaren M-8A, the car that dominated Can-Am, a 250-mile road race featuring nated last year's Canadian-American races.

Lieutenant Is Volleyball Champion

The officers of the 50th Company (OC), 5th Student Battalion have reported a "net" gain in terms of recently assigned personnel: The newest tactical officer in the company is a veteran of the championship volleyball circuit. His name is Second Lieutenant William Jacobsen (Honolulu, Hawaii).

Lt. Jacobsen, a recent graduate of the 9th Student Battalion (OC), has been playing high-caliber volleyball since the age of twelve. He attended Bedford High School in Honolulu, from which he went on to the Church College of Hawaii (Lake Oahy, Hawaii), where he played on the volleyball team for four years.

He admits that his first years on the team were good ones, but that 1968 was an exceptional year, both for the Church College team and for him. During that season, The Church College team, which plays "colorful" volleyball because of its unique form of bright red shorts with large yellow flowers, had battled its way to second place in the NCAA National Collegiate Championships.

They then went on to participate in the National Open Championship against fifty-five other teams from all over the country. This tourney is open to all teams, both amateur and semi-professional.

Against such stiff competition, The Church College team, led by Jacobsen, took fifth place. It thereby placed above all other collegiate competition. It was in this same year that Jacobsen was recognized officially for his net prowess, for he was named Honorable Mention Collegiate All-American in volleyball. His feelings on the subject: "That was a good year."

Airborne Trainers Host 15 New York Youths

Fifteen young men between the ages of 15 and 19 arrived at Fort Benning recently for an airborne orientation. They are all civilian youth members of the Airborne Associaton of New York.

The trip is sponsored by the New York Chapter of the Airborne Association. Although the boys did not jump at Fort Benning, several of them are chmists.

While they were here, they saw the training that their fathers, all ex-paratroopers, went through.

2od Lt. David T. Kluz, airborne ground committee instructor, met them and acted as escort officer for the group. He saw that they were comfortably billeted at 42nd Co., 4th Stu. Bn., and supervised their activities during the next few days.

During their stay, the young men observed problem 5006, a rapelling demonstration and a parachute drop at Fryer Field. They also participated in airborne training and Pathfinder training.

From Fort Benning, they continued their airborne orientation at the Labor Day Leap Fest, Fort Bragg, N. C.

Time Needed To Stop Car Shown

How quickly can you stop a car? How far will a vehicle travel after the driver becomes aware of an emergency situation which requires him to bring his vehicle to a complete halt as soon as possible?

These were two of the questions answered by men of the Fort Benning Safety Office at a demonstration of reaction time and stopping distances.

The event was held at the Mcman Heliport in Kelley Hill. Using both passenger cars and trucks, the safety officials placed a small device on the front bumper of each vehicle.

Before it was driven, the various unit safety officers from over the post, and a number of other interested persons who attended the event made a guess. They guessed how far the vehicle would travel after the alert was sounded, before the driver was able to react and apply his brakes.

They also guessed the distance the vehicle would travel from that point to the place where it stopped completely. Estimates ranged from 22 feet to 129 feet at 30 m.p.h.

After the guesses were recorded on a large black board for all to see, the vehicle was driven down the runway, in front of the audience, at the selected speed. A safety officer riding with him pulled a string which triggered the bumper mounted device.

A blank chalk loaded 22 caliber bullet fired, marking the pavement where the alert was given of the simulated danger. When the driver applied his brakes, he triggered the other barrel of the device, causing the pavement to once again be marked with chalk.

The distances between these two points showed how far the vehicle traveled during the reaction time. Military policemen, who participated in the event, measured the distances and recorded them on the chalk board where the estimates had been recorded before the run was made.

They also measured the distance from the point where the driver began to apply his brakes to the place where he finally stopped. The sum of these two, the reaction time and the skid marks to where the vehicle actually stopped, is the total stopping distance. The average distance was 109 feet at 30 m. p. h.

Reserve Group Returns Home

By Sgt. Carol Aubin

"Our primary interest here at Fort Benning is exactly the same as yours, to get you home," Col. Charles H. Reidenbaugh, commanding officer, Infantry Center Troop Command, told 94 Reservists following their arrival here from the Republic of Vietnam.

Members of the 231st Transportation Corps (Medium Boat), St. Petersburg, Fla., commanded by 1st Lt. Joseph P. Vetrano, were the first of two increments scheduled to arrive here for deactivation.

As the men stepped down from the plane, they heard a musical welcome provided by the 29lst Army Band and, in a "final" formation, they made their way to a nearby hanger where they were officially greeted by Colonel Reidenbaugh.

The colonel noted that this would be the last Army post they would see while still on active duty status, and he briefed them on their activities during the next couple of days. The men's records were completely processed and a new uniform was issued to each individual.

Several members of 1st Bn., Center Troop Command, the host battalion, were present to greet the Reservists, including Lt. Col. Edward E. Crow, commander of the battalion.

Their overall feeling was conveyed by one of the men leaving to get some sleep, "We're glad to be home —we're tired—and that is the first fresh milk we've had in a year."

Phone Calls Home Become Very Special to Trainee

By Sp5 Joe DePriest

Quarters, nickles and dimes toll their way into a pay phone.

And magically, there it is, over what seemed light years in distance: a familiar voice from home.

You have just entered the Army and are taking your basic combat training at Fort Benning's Army Training Center. It's been a long day and a strenuous one at times.

Now, at dusk, the pace has slowed a bit; chow is over, you've a million and one things to do at the barracks, but still you have a little free time and you've decided to wait your turn at the telephone booth near the company area — call home, see how they're doing; just say hello.

Others have the same idea. They are standing or squatting, making small talk or counting their change, glancing toward the phone booth and the fellow in it, keeping tabs on the length of his stay there.

The booth door opens. Nobody home, says a young trainee. Forgot it was grocery night. They won't be home till eight.

Everyone tries to remember something: Is this the night the person he is calling is at church, the supermarket, bowling, the movies?

Sometimes you can't help overhearing conversations — someone gets carried away inside the booth, you hear it whether you mean to or not.

Hey honey, yeah, it's me. Uh-huh. I love you too.

You hardly believe it but your turn comes at last. Hello's how are you's are said, and three minutes are over before they began.

You've forgotten what you said. Whatever it was, it couldn't have been enough.

Reserve Unit Serves At Benning Hospital

By Pvt. Steve Zimmerman

For the third consecutive year, the 327ard U. S. Army Hospital, a Reserve unit, is on active duty at Martin Army Hospital (MAH).

Under the command of Col. Charles E. Yeargin, the unit augments the hospital's patient capacity by 300 beds.

The 85 members of the company (65, including 10 officers, are here now) receive medical training at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., and serve two weeks active duty at installations throughout the South.

The 327ard is based in Greenville, S. C. Its active duty schedule, usually in midsummer, enables MAH to handle more patients at a time when accidents are most prevalent.

Working in such diversified areas as the orthopedic ward, the intensive care ward, the emergency room, the pediatric ward, the kitchen, supply and services, pharmacy and the administrative office, the Reservists afford invaluable assistance to the regular staff.

In addition to Colonel Yeargin, the staff includes: Lt. Col. Frances Wells, chief nurse; 1st Lt. James A Trammell, administrative officer; Maj. Raymond Cates, executive officer; Capt. Larry Kowalski, training officer; Capt. Donald Dunlap, detachment commander; Capt. Seth Heimlick, public Information officer, and Sp6 T. L. Bradford, chief wardmaster

WINNERS OF FREE TRIP TO DESTIN

18 Win Rest at Destin

Eighteen men from The Student Bde. (TSB) spent four days away from duty at the USAIC Destin Recreation Area.

These men were the first winners in a new program at TSB designed to provide lower grade bachelor personnel with the opportunity to go to the recreation area.

The eighteen men chosen to go included an NCOIC and two bus drivers.

The recreation area is located near the town of Destin, Fla. Personnel from TSB will be chosen to go to Destin each month.

Men chosen for the program will stay in the 18-man, air-conditioned barracks located there.

Motorboats, fishing poles, athletic facilities and a 38-foot cabin cruiser will also be available for men taking part in the program.

The area also includes cabins, campsites and a trailer park for normal use by USAIC personnel.

Widow Accepts Medal

The Bronze Star Medal was awarded posthumously here to SSgt. William J. Cousar.

Col. Talton W. Lang, deputy post commander, presented the award to the sergeant's widow, Mrs. Jean H. Cousar in a brief ceremony.

Mrs. Cousar and her daughter, Martha, listened as her late husband was cited for "outstanding meritorious service in connection with ground operations against a hostile force in the Republic of Vietnam."

Musical Chairs Is The Game

By Marc Reiff

In the game of revolving musical chairs, all parties are finally seated.

It all started in June of 1967 when then First Sergeant Franklin Hance left D Co. 1st Bn. 29th Inf., 197th Inf. Bde., for Vietnam. He was replaced by Platoon Sergeant Arwon Blankenship — for awhile anyway. Blankenship had been a platoon sergeant for the 1st Bn. 29th Inf. since August 1965.

After serving a year in Vietnam, Hance received orders to return to D Co. and to resume duties as First Sergeant there. About two months before Hance was scheduled to return, Blankenship received his orders for Thailand.

After one year there he too received his orders stateside, back to the 1st Bn., 29th Inf. as First Sergeant again. This time Hance was moving up to Sergeant Major of the 197th Support Battalion.

At the present time, both men are comfortably situated and expect no further changes.

"D Co. 1st Bn., 29th Inf., keeps me very busy", says First Sergeant Blankenship. "Due to the daily commitments we never know which way we are going. We are a training aid for the Infantry School and we are used in films, as aggressors, tests of infantry boards and all types of demonstrations. There is no room for error in our work," he added.

5 Vietnam Veterans Receive 2 DSCs, 3 Silver Stars

By Marian Jones

In an awards ceremony held on York Field, two Distinguished Service Crosses (DSCs) and three Silver Stars were presented to five veterans of the war in the Republic of Vietnam.

The medals are the Army's second and third highest awards for valor, respectively.

Presenting the awards was Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, commanding general of the Infantry Center and Fort Benning.

Receiving the DSCs were Capts. Martin Beach and Dennis C. Tomcik.

Beach, is assigned to the 197th Infantry Bde. In addition to the DSC, he also holds two Silver Stars.

While serving as commander of a battery section at Fire Support Base Mahone II in Binh Duong province, which had come under heavy enemy rocket and mortar attack, Beach ran through the barrage to alert his gun crews.

A rocket propelled grenade struck within the parapet of one howitzer, wounding all the members of the section. Beach immediately assisted the wounded and then manned the howitzer until a new crew could be formed.

Then, while moving from section to section, he was wounded in the foot by fragmentation from a rocket grenade. Despite his painful wound, he took charge of a reaction force and assaulted the enemy, who had overrun a perimeter bunker.

After re-securing the fortification, he directed the firing of beehive rounds on the advancing enemy.

Only after the assailants had withdrawn did he allow himself to be medically treated.

Tomcik, the second recipient of the DSC, is assigned to the Infantry School's Leadership Department. This award is the second DSC Tomcik has received.

In December, 1968, Tomcik, while commanding his company on a reconnaissance-in-force mission in Kine Hoa province, left with eight men to locate hostile activity.

Approaching a small hut, he spotted a Viet Cong and wounded him with a burst of rifle fire, but the enemy managed to escape. During the pursuit while searching a dwelling, Tomcik heard voices and stepped outside where he confronted three armed Viet Cong, whom he shot and killed.

Fifteen to 20 Viet Cong suddenly opened fire and Tomcik returned the fire, killing one of the advancing foe, enabling his own men to withdraw.

General Talbott To Arrive Soon

By Marian Jones

A major general who has served in combat with the 1st Infantry Division in the Republic of Vietnam longer than any other commander will arrive here next week to take command of the U.S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning.

Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott will be welcomed to the post by a formal change ceremony at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday on York Field. The event is open to the public.

He assumed command of the "Big Red One" after the battlefield death of Maj. Gen. Keith L. Ware.

During General Talbott's command, the division operated from the Saigon suburbs to the Cambodian border and in War Zones C and D. The division participated in the Toan Thang Campaigns and the battles of Loc Ninh, An Loc and the Fishook.

The division gained renown for its notable success in Atlas Wedge which stopped the enemy's 1969 Tet Offensive and for its contributions to the 1968 Accelerated Pacification Campaign as well as the opening for the first time in five years of the 65-kilometer road to the capitol of Phuoc Long Province, Song Be.

In October, 1968, General Talbott accepted for the division the highest unit award of the Republic of Vietnam, the Gallantry Cross with Palm.

He was born in San Jose, Calif. He began his military career as a Citizens Military Training Corps trainee at the Presidio of Monterey in 1936 followed by ROTC at the University of California at Berkeley where he majored in political science.

The general was initially commissioned a second lieutenant of infantry in the California National Guard on March 3, 1941, with simultaneous entrance on active duty at Chico, Calif., with the 50th Infantry Division.

He was commissioned a second lieutenant of Infantry in the Regular Army on Feb. 20, 1942. On March 7 of that year he was transferred to the initial cadre of the 90th Infantry Division at Camp Barkley, Tex.

He remained with this division through World War II, rising from platoon leader to infantry battalion commander.

In 1943 he attended the wartime Infantry officer advance course at Fort Benning.

During the Normandy Campaign, he was a rifle company commander. For his service he earned the Silver Star and Bronze Star Medal. The Silver Star was for personally leading a sueceseful patrol against a nest of three machineguns which for 24 hours had cut off a neighboring battalion.

Gen. Talbott To Arrive

He assumed command of the 1st Bn., 35th Infantry, during the Battle of the Bulge and helped to restore the front lines to the position held prior to the German attack.

At the beginning of the Battle of Central Europe, he assumed command of the 3rd Bn., 35th Infantry. On VE Day, he led his battalion back from Czechoslovakia to become the first U.S. commander of Grafenwohr, Germany, and its training area.

In 1947, General Talbott was assigned to Headquarters, U.S. Forces Austria in Vienna. From there he was transferred to Fort Benning to attend the regular advance course of the Infantry School.

After serving as military assistant to Secretaries of the Army Frank Pace Jr. and Robert T. Stevens, he attended the 1954 class of the Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

He left there to become deputy commander and executive officer of Task Group 7.2, Joint Task Force 7, at Eniwetok, Marshall Islands, in the Western Pacific. There he participated in parts of two atomic test exercises.

In 1955 he was assigned as the senior Infantry instructor at The Signal School, Fort Monmouth, N.J. In January, 1957, although his basic branch was Infantry, he became the secretary of The Signal School, serving in that position until July, 1958.

After being promoted to the grade of colonel in 1958, he attended the National War College at Fort Leslie J. McNair, Washington, D.C., graduating in 1959.

He became senior aide and executive officer to Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer when General Lemnitzer became chief of staff of the U.S. Army.

He accompanied General Lemnitzer as his executive officer when General Lemnitzer was named chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff in 1960. He continued in that capacity when General Lemnitzer was named commander-in-chief, European Command, on Nov. 1, 1962, and supreme allied commander, Europe, on Jan. 1, 1963.

General Talbott departed Supreme Headquarters, Allied Powers, Europe, (SHAPE) to become the commanding officer of the 2nd Bde., 24th Infantry Division (mechanized) at Augsburg, Germany, in 1963.

Upon completion of his tour as a brigade commander, he was transferred to become the assistant chief of staff, G3, of Headquarters, Central Army Group, a NATO Headquarters near Heidelberg, Germany.

He held this position until he was promoted to the grade of brigadier general and transferred to become assistant division commander for Operational Readiness of the 5th Infantry Division (Mechanized) at Fort Carson, Colo., in February, 1966.

In March, 1967, General Talbott was transferred to Headquarters, U.S. Continental Army Command, Fort Monroe, Va., to become first, the assistant deputy chief of staff for individual training, and then, the deputy chief of staff for individual training.

In April, 1968, he became assistant commander and later commander of the 1st Infantry Division in Vietnam.

On Aug. 1, 1969, he received the second star designating the rank of major general.

His awards and decorations include the Silver Star with two oak leaf clusters, the Bronze Star Medal with oak leaf cluster with "V" device for heroism, the Air Medal with 20 oak leaf clusters, the Purple Heart with two oak leaf clusters, the Combat Infantryman Badge and the Croix de Guerre with Silver Star.

General and Mrs. Talbott, the former Nell Coughran of Brownwood, Tex., have two children, Marinel and Stephen Clark.

General Talbott replaces Maj. Gen. George L. Forsythe, who departed the post recently to assume command of the U.S. Army Combat Developments Command at Fort Belvoir, Va.

The Supreme Court's "O'Callahan" decision said a serviceman may be tired in military courts only if the offense is "service-connected." What has been the effect of this ruling on the conduct and number of recent military courts-martial?

The "O'Callahan" ruling has altered the conduct of courts-marial in that it is now essential for the trial counsel, in many cases, to make an affirmative showing of those facts which make the offense "service-connected."

That is, in trials for offenses which are not by their nature military offenses, the government must show the facts which provide the necessary element of service connection. Although it is too early to determine the final effect with complete accuracy, the decision has not materially reduced the incident of trials by courts-martial.

• • •

Is the Department of Defense studying the "O'Callahan" decision? Any conclusions?

Military lawyers in the Office of the Judge Advocate General of the Army, as well as in the Navy and Air Force, have been studying the decision since it was announced. Firm conclusions concerning the new parameters of court-martial jurisdiction can not be made until after there are more opinions from courts on the subject.

The decision itself did not attempt to define the limits of military jurisdiction, but concluded merely that the "O'Callahan" case before the court involved action beyond those limits.

For several reasons, including anticipated litigation and the dearth of guidance from the majority opinion in "O'Callahan," the services are taking the position that the decision is not retrospective in operation.

• • •

Have the services or the Department of Defense defined a "service-connected" crime? Where does the definition stand, what does it include?

There has been no official definition of a "service-connected" crime promulgated by the services. As a matter of policy, the judge advocates general of the services have taken the position that the "O'Callahan" decision should be limited to cases arising within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States which clearly do not involve service connected offenses. Each case will have to be considered on its own particular set of facts.

• • •

According to the present construction of the "O'Callahan" decision, under whose jurisdiction would the following cases fall?

Serviceman living on military installation steals from another serviceman on the installation — military.

Serviceman living on military installation steals while in uniform, on duty, off the base — military.

Serviceman living on military installation steals while off duty, off the base — civilian.

Serviceman living off base steals on base — military.

Serviceman living off base, steals off base, from another serviceman — military.

CHAPLAIN TIMOTHY MEARY ADDS A NEW DIMENSION IN SPIRITUAL DEPTH PREVIOUSLY UNKNOWN IN TODAY'S ACTION ARMY

'Blind Man' for a Week

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Morgan B. Lawrence, a member of 33rd (OC) Co., 9th Stu. Bn., The Candidate Bde., was studying toward a bachelor of arts degree at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles before entering the Army. He voluntarily became a "blind man" for a week, during a research project done for the Institute of Urban Ecology at the university in cooperation with Services For the Blind, Inc., of Santa Ana, Calif. The following remarks are a first-person account of this unique experiment by Lawrence.)

• • •

"I sit on the edge of the couch, my blindfold firmly in place; it will not come off for one week. I am starting a research project to determine the social and physical implications that the loss of sight has upon an individual.

"The predominant senses I have are those of sound and touch. I become aware of sounds first — the traffic in the street; voices in the back of the building; those talking in front of me. I am hesitant as my teacher, Jim Stone, leads me through the building and fits me with a cane.

"'. . . the cane is an extension of the arm,' he explains. 'With it you determine textures of the pavement to tell whether you are on the sidewalk, in a parking lot, or in the street . . .'

"We stand on the sidewalk, close to the curb. You feel the brush of wind as the traffic passes by. '. . . you tell which direction you are headed by the sound of the traffic. You are going down the sidewalk straight when the traffic is parallelling you. Sounds easy, let's try it . . .'

"He yanks me back just as I walk into the street. After a few hours, I master the cane. Why is my program (training) for people at the school who still have trouble after a month or so of training. The answer is that there is no psychological trauma connected with my blindness. These others have lost jobs, friends and families along with the loss of their sight.

"There is still a great (though unconscious) stigma placed on those who are blind. There is still the feeling that the non - sighted are totally helpless. It is easy for the blind person to pick up this attitude and apply it to himself. Many blind schools foster it by having their students weave baskets and make brooms.

Services For The Blind, Inc. has no sympathy for the non-sighted. They attempt mainly to restore the person's confidence and self-respect.

". . . Keep your head up. Your back erect. Step out with confidence . . .'

"After three days I had developed certain blind mannerisms: stooped head and shoulders, not looking at the person who is talking, and I had started to withdraw into myself. But they worked me out of these blindisms.

"Now we start advanced mobility training. Crossing busy intersections; going to unfamiliar shopping centers. Listen to the lights; listen to the traffic to stop and proceed briskly across. You must really trust people. Imagine my surprise when weeks later I learned that my teacher is ninety per cent blind!

"You learn to mark your clothes for patterns and colors. You learn how to eat without appearing like a pig with your fingers on the food. You learn how to enjoy television, movies and plays. You learn that you can still be a useful member of society.

"If you are confident in yourself, then your blindness is almost forgotten by those with whom you are dealing. Only an insensitive few will comment on you, and you can laugh off their lack of good manners."

Bonds Aid Individual, Country

United States Savings Bonds and Freedom Shares are the keys to your future and the future of America.

In the same way that Savings Bonds strengthen the future of your family, they help strengthen America and further the cause of freedom.

As members of the Armed Forces you can see first hand how vital a sound Savings Bond program can be and how it affects the cause of freedom, at home, in the Republic of Vietnam and throughout the world.

Remember, the purchase of Savings Bonds and Freedom Shares is more than just a safe investment for your money.

It's an investment for a future that can mean a new home, a new car, a college education or a hundred-and-one other things for you and your family.

It's also an investment that will help the United States meet the problems that face our country both at home and abroad.

It's really an opportunity for every American to participate directly in the affairs of our nation, no matter how small the share might be.

A large percentage of the fighting men in Vietnam today are making regular investments in Savings Bonds and Freedom Shares.

They are not only laying their lives on the line in support of freedom, but are further demonstrating their faith in our country and the principles of freedom through their monthly purchases of Savings Bonds.

Are you carrying your share?

While planning your future, include the future of your country and buy United States Savings Bonds and Freedom Shares. (AFPS)

Decorating on a Dime Helps the Family Budget

WOMEN'S NEWS

NEW YORK (NAPS) — Decorating on a budget can be a challenge, but for the imaginative homemaker and the smart shopper there are literally countless ways to create delightfully distinctive rooms and lend new personality to your home without spending a lot of money.

Special Nook

For instance, to create a special dining nook or breakfast room, mark off the area with a floor lamp, a folding screen, a bamboo room divider or a group of tall plants. Paint the background area a bright color, hang a group of framed prints, posters or a grouping of wall plates. Paint the chairs to match the background color or cover them with bright fabric.

Use red-patterned bandannas at random in some of the diamonds. With black gimp cover all the lines — and with them the edges of the bandannas.

Another treatment for "dead" wall space — why not decorate it with your own "family tree"? Working from a paper pattern, outline a tree on the wall — any shape or variety, but make sure there are sufficient limbs and branches. Paint the tree trunk and branches with flat brown paint. Then cut out leaves of various sizes and shapes. A mirror suspended from one of the bedspreads, towels, washcloths, shower curtains and bath rug. And there are countless decorating tricks that can come from coordinated linens. When redoing your bath, for instance, cover a wastebasket, tissue holder and apothecary jar with towels of the same pattern or a coordinate solid color.

Matching Curtains

And for the bedroom, why not matching draperies or curtains. King-size sheets contain 4½ square yards of seamless fabric! With so much to work with, making draperies, curtains and other large items becomes a breeze! Just cut to the right size, and for a finishing touch add ball fringe in white or a matching color. Then hang the curtains easily with pleater hooks.

To create a dollhouse theme for little girl's room make a colorful dollhouse doorway as the headboard behind her bed. Use plywood strips for the outline of the dollhouse and insert two or three shelves in the "doorway," on which she can display her dolls.

point out that the quickest way to change the entire look of a bedroom or bath is by introducing a "one look" — one pattern coordinated on sheets, pillowcases, blankets,

OWC Tea Will Be a 'Happening'

Activities ranging from karate lessons to modeling lessons and from art to bowling will be offered members of the Officers Wives Club this fall at a "happening" on Sept. 17 at the Main Officers Club from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m.

The "happening" is a tea which will open the fall season for the OWC. At the tea ladies will have an opportunity to meet with various representatives of more than 40 activities available to members of the world's largest officers wives club.

Ladies who are not already members of the club will have an opportunity to join at the tea.

The 1969-70 elected members of the OWC executive board will be introduced at the tea. They are Mmes. Malcolm R. Baer, president; Robert S. LaMonte, 1st vice president; James Wheaton, 2nd vice president; Charles H. Reidenbaugh, 3rd vice president; James L. Heathcock, recording secretary; Richard N. Thrower, corresponding secretary; and William G. Griggs, treasurer.

Hostesses for the tea are the ladies of the Academic Staff, the Airborne Department and the Dept. of Instruction, Non-resident.

Infantry Basic Course Officers Wives Meet

Amid the clatter of coffee cups and within the tone of friendly introductions, the wives of Infantry Officer Base Course 3-70 recently attended their first get-together, an orientation at the Officers Field Ration Mess.

Preceding the coffee, a bus tour familiarized the newcomers with many of Fort Benning's facilities.

Lt. Col. William E. Mundy, commanding officer of the 2nd Stu. Bn., delivered a welcoming address to the wives with advice on military protocol, a wife's role in helping her husband through IOBC, and other practical aspects of life at Fort Benning.

Following Mundy's speech, Mrs. David Hill introduced distinguished guests, Mmes. Billy Vaughn, Lon Marlow Jr., William Munday, Stuart Miller and Ralph Short and briefly outlined the schedule of upcoming events.

After the speeches the wives enjoyed a get-acquainted coffee hour.

Wives Meet over Coffee to Plan, Schedule and Discuss

The wives of the Infantry Officer Advance Course platoons held their August coffees.

First Platoon

First platoon's hostesses were Mrs. Earnest R. Downing Jr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Caruso. Mrs. Charles Kendal of Opelika, Ala., a houseguest of Mrs. Downing, and several of the staff members' wives were guests.

Plans for the August luncheon were finalized and models for the fashion show were selected.

After the business meeting, a makeup demonstration completed the program.

The hostesses for the second platoon were Mrs. Norman W. Gill Jr. and Mrs. Paul S. Kalwoski.

Mrs. Donald Gardner, recreation chairman, reported on the various activities being organized. These include an arts and crafts show in February, couples bridge, golf lessons, and a lecture series entitled, "Crises in America."

Also, it was decided that the September luncheon, to be sponsored by the platoon, would include the heritage tour arranged through the Georgia Welcome Center.

The third platoon wives were guests of Mrs. Melvin Rupp and Mrs. Bryan Robbins.

Mrs. Charles Banks presented the schedule of activities and classes, and plans were made to select a program for the October luncheon. Plans for the September coffee were made also.

Guests of the platoon were Mrs. Walter Nelms and Mrs. Bill Dollins, mother of Mrs. Walter G. Mitchell.

Fourth Platoon

The fourth platoon's coffee and cake were provided by Mrs. William C. Montgomery, Mrs. Tommy C. Stiner and Mrs. Rob C. White.

Mrs. Herbert L. Alford discussed plans for a future platoon picnic and a report was given by the recreation chairman, Mrs. Antonio Vaillasenor.

Formal Will 'Dance on Moon'

Good grief, Charlie Stakes, what's all the hammering about?

Haven't you heard, Ruth Brock? ATC's going to dance on the moon!

Oh? . . . suurre, and I'm "Moon-maid," too.

If you can't believe it either, Capt. Oliver H. King says, "Come see for yourself. Grab a shooting star and swing on down on a moonbeam at ATC's formal ball!".

Maj. Paul J. Gross and Maj. James F. O'Brien have plotted and planned, and you can tell from all the hammering, sawing and painting that is going on at 10th Bn. Headquarters that the 1st Bde. hosts are getting ready for the liftoff.

That will be Sept. 13 at the Main Officers Club. ATC's going to dance on the moon.

But Capt. King, what's happening in the locked workshop?

Shh . . . it is secret. First Bde. is not telling anybody until 6 p.m. Sept. 13. Come see . . . swing on a star or two at ATC's formal ball.

TCB Wives Hold Coffee

The officers wives of The Candidate Bde. headquarters held a coffee recently.

The coffee was held in the home of Mrs. Stanley N. Millard with Mrs. Everette J. Thomas serving as co-hostess. The business consisted of making plans for the forthcoming Christmas Bazaar.

Honored guest for the event was Mrs. Robert M. Piper. Mrs. Charles J. Mendoza and Mrs. William T. McIlrath were welcomed as newcomers into the wives club.

Junior Army Daughters Will Hold Coke Party

The Junior Army Daughters of America wish to extend an invitation to all girls who are in high school and the daughters of active, retired, or deceased officers in the U.S. Army, to attend their annual "Get-Acquainted" coke party.

The coke party will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday in the Supper Club of the Fort Benning Officers Club. The purpose of the party is to give new-comers an opportunity to meet the members of the club.

At the present time, the girls of JADA are looking forward to and planning the biggest event of the entire year—the annual Christmas formal.

The organization's officers are Ginny Vaughn, president; Gayla McKenzie, vice president; Nona Ghent, corresponding secretary; Pam Turner, treasurer; Lynn Huff, historian; and Karen Kitchen, chaplain. Other members of the board are Barbara Muller, Suzie Neal, Jean Pfotenhauer and Allison Murray.

Husband-Wife Theme Expressed in Luncheon

"The Gold Bar — Blue Garter" was the theme of the formal luncheon held by the Officer Candidate Bde. The luncheon was held in the Corregidor Room of the Main Officer's Open Mess.

The theme expressed the relationship between husband and wife and the influence a wife has on her husband's career. Development of the theme was reflected in all aspects of the luncheon.

The programs and menus provided for each attendant were composed of miniature paper officer dress blue uniforms which, when opened, revealed the agenda for the affair. The napkins, the color of Infantry Blue, were rolled with lacy, feminine light-blue garters around each one.

To further demonstrate the link of husband and wife, each wife received a diploma symbolizing that both marital partners were actually graduating.

'Age of Aquarius' Seen Rising Over Senior Statuu Party

Members of 63rd (OC) Co. 6th Stu. Bn., The Candidate Bde., celebrated attainment of senior status by holding a review and party.

The review was held on York Field. Reviewing officer was Maj. Gen. John Norton, commanding general, U.S. Army Aviation Systems Command, St. Louis, Mo.

A reception for visiting friends and relatives of the candidates was held in the company day room.

18th Week

"The Age of Aquarius" was the theme of the 18th week party held in the evening.

Aquarius is the sign of the Zodiac which symbolizes peace, love, brotherhood and good will. The constellation Aquarius seems to be in the outline of a water bearer. The sharing of water in ancient times was the sign of a strong bond of friendship. The necessity of water to life, and the spring as its only source, represented brotherhood. The candidates of the 63rd Company chose "The Age of Aquarius" as an appropriate theme, for "The ultimate goal of humanity is peace."

Contributing to a visual and environmental interpretation of the theme was a statue of Aquarius. The basic color was dark blue, complimented by light yellow and red. The theme colors were reflected in the centerpiece on the head table, which consisted of flowers with an Aquarian sign in gold. Colored lights added to the atmosphere.

Entertaining

Entertainment for the evening was varied. "The Recycles," a 63rd company group, provided music along with the "Mad-Rigal" from Columbus.

The honored guest for the evening was Col. Robert M. Piper, commander of the Candidate Brigade.

'Follow Me to the Circus' Highlights Luncheon

Heeding advice to "Follow Me to the Circus," the wives of candidates in the 54th Co. (Officer Candidate), 5th Stu. Bn., The Candidate Brigade, held a luncheon in the Corregidor Room of the Fort Benning Officers Club.

Carrying out the circus theme, clowns decorated the invitations, and the name tags were in the form of exotically jewelled circus elephants. Program covers featured a carrousel with a pony formed by gold and silver officer insignia.

Small carrousels decorated with yarn pompoms brightened the tables, and an elaborate circus train was featured on the head table. Gold trapezes hung in shadow boxes along the walls.

A trill of a whistle and a crack of a whip kicked off a three-ring show, "Fashion on Parade."

Mrs. Darrell Pearson, dressed as ringmaster, and Mrs. Mitchell Scott, as a clown, assisted the models. Mmes. Lester Bowen, Richard More, Douglas Pearce, David Reece, Ronald Stevens, and Craig Walker modeled the new fall styles.

Honored guests were Mrs. Robert M. Piper and Mrs. Charles J. Mendoza. Special guests were Mrs. Robert F. Goodrich and Mrs. Robert Oglesby.

Mrs. Glenn Borden spoke on the activities of the wives group while their husbands have been attending OCS. She presented a bud vase in appreciation to Mrs. John F. Keever, and a punch bowl to the company from the club. Mrs. Keever then presented diplomas and gold bar pins to the candidates' wives, signifying that they, too, are graduating.

A Soldier's Face . . .

'The price of liberty,' wrote Thomas Jefferson, 'is eternal vigilance.' And for nearly 200 years, American soldiers have carried the burden of providing that vigilance so that their homeland might remain free. The strain, the weariness, the pride and the determination are written on the faces of young Americans fighting in South Vietnam today, just as they were written on the faces of their forefathers in the battles of the past.

Captain Gets Medals in Pairs

By Spt Ron Johnson

Capt. John E. Ooley, 43rd Co., 4th Bn. (ABN), The Student Bde., isn't happy just getting one medal. He isn't even happy getting several medals at one time. He gets them in pairs.

Col. Lon D. Marlowe, TSB commander, awarded Ooley with a pair of Silver Stars, a pair of Bronze Stars, and a pair of Purple Hearts. The captain was also awarded one Air Medal.

All the awards were earned during the period July 1968 to July 1969 while the captain was serving as a platoon leader with Co. A, 3rd Bn., 8th Inf., 4th Inf. Div., in the Republic of Vietnam.

He received both Silver Stars for his actions while under enemy fire. He was wounded on both occasions but continued to lead his men.

He received a Bronze Star Medal with "V" device for providing cover fire from an exposed position during an air strike.

He actively participated in more than 25 aerial missions to earn the Air Medal.

Ooley is at Fort Benning to attend airborne training with 43rd Co. He began the course once, but one of his wounds reopened, forcing him to postpone the training.

Undaunted, he will begin training in a new class Monday. After he gets his wings, he will go to Germany.

A native of Springfield, Mo., the captain attended Southwestern Missouri State College. While there, he was a member of the Kappa Alpha Fraternity and earned bachelor of science degrees in art and education.

'Hamburger Hill' Leader Joins Infantry School Staff

By 2nd Lt. James Hopson

The man who won a Distinguished Service Cross leading the fight for "Hamburger Hill" has recently joined the staff of the Infantry School.

Lt. Col. W. F. Honeycutt of Columbus and Charlotte, N. C., is the new deputy director of the School's Leadership Department.

He returned recently from the Republic of Vietnam where he commanded the 3rd Bn., 187th Airborne Infantry, 101st Airborne Division, the unit charged with the responsibility of eliminating the North Vietnamese Army base camp positioned atop Dong Ap Bia Mountain, "Hamburger Hill."

Colonel Honeycutt said that the elite 29th North Vietnamese Regiment was deeply entrenched in a bunker complex that formed three concentric circles around the hilltop.

"We knew they were somewhere in the area but we had no idea they were dug in that way," he said. "The 29th had come down from North Vietnam after a year's training. They all had brand-new equipment."

The NVA regiment operated a training area, a communication center and a headquarters group on the hill.

The 101st rained tons of ordnance onto Dong Ap Bia during its week-long battle to the top. Aircraft from the Air Force, Navy and Marines as well as Army helicopter gunships flew more than 100 air strikes on the hill. Division artillery and mortar platoons continually blasted the hilltop.

The 101st threw the firepower of all the weapons in the infantry's inventory into the furious battle. The wooded hilltop was scalped of all vegetation.

"My theory is to use everything you can put onto the enemy," the colonel said. "Why use soldiers when you can avoid it?"

But Colonel Honeycutt found that above all, the North Vietnamese feared the infantry soldier.

"The NVA do not like the rifleman because he is the guy who goes up the hill and does the job. We used a lot of artillery and air strikes, but the soldier was the most effective weapon," he said.

He had high praise for the men in his command:

"We never had a single man refuse to fight. We had men wounded two and three times that wanted to stay with their battalion and fight."

"My lieutenants and captains were very knowledgeable and did a fine job. There was no lack of courage among any of our leaders," the officer affirmed.

Colonel Honeycutt also praised the noncommissioned officers trained in the Infantry School's Noncommissioned Officer Candidate Program.

The colonel's men fought their way up the hill three times and were twice repulsed. On the third trip up, the American assault scattered the North Vietnamese and forced them off Dong Ap Bia.

"It was the first time I had seen American troops — men and officers — engaged in hand-to-hand combat with the enemy, right down in their bunkers," he said. "The NVA broke and ran away. They were a disorganized bunch of people."

A veteran of two combat tours in the Republic of Vietnam, the colonel served the first one in 1966 with the 1st Cavalry, Air Mobile, and the last one, which he completed prior to his present assignment, with the 269th Combat Aviation Section.

A native Alabaman, Colonel McIlwain was born in Mobile and he calls Butler, Ala., home. He attended the University of Florida and the University of Southern Mississippi, graduating from the latter with Bachelor of Science and Bachelor of Arts degrees.

Entering the Army in October 1946 at Pensacola, Fla., he served one tour as an enlisted man and returned to civilian status to continue his schooling.

Upon receiving his commission as an ROTC graduate in June 1951, he had his first duty as a second lieutenant at Fort Benning where he attended Basic Infantry Officers Course.

Upon completion of this training, he was assigned duty in Germany as a platoon leader in the 109th Infantry. During this tour he advanced to company commander and then executive officer of the 109th.

Colonel McIlwain has over ten years of overseas duty, including a tour in Korea, one in Japan, two in Germany and the two in Vietnam. During the tour in Japan, he served as an enlisted man and while there with the 11th Airborne Division, he accomplished glider training at the Yamoto Flying School.

A senior Army aviator, he is also dual rated, having completed his fixed wing training in 1956 and his rotary wing in 1958.

His decorations include the Silver Star, Legion of Merit, Distinguished Flying Cross, Purple Heart with oak leaf cluster, Air Medal with 21 oak leaf clusters, Presidential Unit Citation and the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry with Palm and Silver Star.

Veterans Receive Medals

(Cont. From Page 1)

The men who received the Silver Stars are Spt Charles R. Burnes, Spt Enoch L. Glover and PFC Robert A. Lanford.

Burnes is assigned to Headquarters, Reception Station.

While Burnes' company was conducting a combat sweep, it encountered a well-entrenched North Vietnamese Army force. Burnes immediately maneuvered his men toward the enemy position and directed suppressive fire on the emplacement.

Under covering fire, he moved to a position from which he was able to silence the bunker with several well-placed hand grenades.

As the company resumed the sweep, the company commander and three other men were wounded by hostile machinegun fire. With complete disregard for his personal safety, Burnes manenvered on the emplacement and again came under intense fire.

On Feb. 14, 1969, Glover, who is presently assigned to the 197th Infantry Bde., was providing security for his point element when the company was engaged by a large enemy force.

Although wounded by the enemy fire, Glover placed suppressive fire on the enemy. Crawling through a hail of fire, he reached a position from which he could accurately engage the enemy.

The intensity of his fire enabled a squad to flank the enemy's positions and force them to flee.

Langford, the third recipient of a Silver Star, is also assigned to the 197th Infantry Bde.

When Langford's company was taken under fire from enemy positions in a heavily fortified bunker and pinned down, he maneuvered to within 50 meters of the enemy bunker.

After springing to his feet and discharging several magazines of automatic rifle fire into the enemy position, Langford dashed to his armored personnel carrier and secured several hand grenades.

He then crawled back through the enemy fire toward the hostile position. Again exposing himself to hostile fire, he pulled the safety pin on one of the grenades and charged the enemy bunker.

Though the enemy fired continuously at the advancing Langford, they were unable to stop him as he hurled the grenade and hit the ground.

OC Hall of Fame Inducts New York Draft Director

By Sgt. Lancaster Hewson

The Infantry Officer Candidate School Hall of Fame enshrined a new member in ceremonies held in Fort Benning's High Hall.

Col. Delbert M. Price, commander of the Combat Arms Training Brigade, presided over the induction ceremony of Col. Talton Brokaw, state director of Selective Service for the State of New York.

CHANGE OF COMMAND

After graduating from Infantry Officer Candidate School in 1942, Colonel Brokaw was commissioned a second lieutenant and assigned to the 184th Infantry.

Colonel Brokaw served as an Infantry unit commander, participating in campaigns in the Aleutian Islands, Marshall Islands, Ryukyus, The Phillippines and in the occupation of Korea.

He now holds the Silver Star, Bronze Star Medal with oak leaf cluster with "V" for valor, Purple Heart, Combat Infantryman Badge, several service awards and the Phillippine Presidential Unit Citation.

Discharged as a captain in 1946, he was appointed as an Infantry captain in the Reserves.

Receiving a Bachelor of Science degree in physical education at Ithaca (N. Y.) College in 1948, he became director of athletics at Proctor (Vt.) High School where he was head coach until 1950.

He was recalled to active duty in 1950 at the beginning of the Korean War. For 17 months, Colonel Brokaw served with Headquarter, First U. S. Army, as a unit instructor with the Reserve components.

In 1952 he again entered active duty as a Reserve officer with New York Headquarters Selective Service System.

Serving as operations officer, state field officer and deputy state director, Colonel Brokaw received a presidential appointment as state director of Selective Service for the State of New York (exclusive of New York City).

He was promoted to colonel in the Adjutant General Corps in May, 1967.

In order for a person to gain admission to the Hall of Fame, he must be an OCS graduate who meets one of four prerequisites: He must have attained the rank of full colonel while on active duty; he must be the recipient of the Medal of Honor; he must have been elected or appointed to an office of national prominence; or he must be recommended for admission by the commandant of the Infantry School on the basis of outstanding service.

Office Reflects Busy World of Lt. Col. Richard Munn

By PFC Paul T. Miller

As one enters the office of the headquarters commandant, he is immediately confronted with a vibrant, pulsating atmosphere that reflects the busy world of the man in charge, Lt. Col. Richard A. Munn Jr.

Colonel Munn oversees the operation of three basic branches in his office: The Billeting Branch, the Headquarters Service Branch and the Infantry Museum Branch.

The Billeting Branch provides for the operation of bachelor quarters and post guest houses.

According to Munn, Fort Benning has three post guest houses and six guest cottages. The guest houses and cottages are available to friends and relatives of enlisted men, as well as officers and are operated on a "first come, first serve basis." Reservations are not accepted.

Quentis Fagan, supervisor of the Billeting Branch, pointed out that these accommodations are very inexpensive to the Fort Benning visitor.

An adult may stay at any one of the three guest houses on post for as little as $1.50 per day. Cottages, which are said to be very popular, rent for $6 a day.

The Headquarters Services Branch provides supply and services for elements of the headquarters staff. One of the main functions of this branch is to procure, maintain, issue and account for supplies and equipment under the jurisdiction of the headquarters commandant.

The headquarters commandant's office also receives complaints pertaining to building maintenance and janitorial services in Bldgs. 4, 5, 35, 1628 (Civilian Personnel Office) and 110 (Post Office).

Colonel Mumn emphasized that his office only acts as a "funnel for complaints."

The colonel noted, "Whenever we receive a complaint, we can only notify the appropriate action agency. For instance, if the plumbing goes bad, we give the engineers a call and see that they get the job done."

Colonel Munn considers the Infantry Museum Branch to be one of the more interesting aspects of his office. It is his ultimate responsibility to establish and maintain a collection of historical property that would depict the history, traditions and development of the United States Army, Infantry, U.S Army Infantry School and Fort Benning.

"The only problems we have with the museum," said the colonel, in his soft southern voice, "is the lack of personnel on a continuing basis."

We are authorized three civilians and no military personnel," he said. "It simply is not enough."

The commandant spoke of plans for a new museum, with fund raising kick-off tentatively scheduled for 1970.

Some 2,500 people work in Infantry Hall daily. This results in a heavy influx of vehicles every morning.

"The biggest problem is parking at Bldg. 4 is that of concentration," said the colonel. "Everyone seems to want to park in the east lot, because it is the direction from which most arrive."

He went on to say that "some motorists will park illegally on this side of the building, because there is a lack of spaces, even though there may be plenty of spaces available on the west lot."

The colonel announced that he has asked for expanded parking facilities at Infantry Hall and hopes to have his wish realized sometime next year.

Colonel Munn leaned back in his chair for a moment and smiled congenially. If it is possible to describe features of a soldiers's face, let us say that the colonel wore the look of a man who works hard, but likes what he is doing.

94th OC Company Receives Top Award

For the candidates of the 94th (OC) Co., 9th Stu. Bn., The Candidate Bde., the week of Aug. 25-30 was not only an eventful one, but was also a period in which they reaped the fruits of their labor.

The second event of the week was the presentation of the Tiger Tactics Award to the company on York Field Aug. 29. The award was presented by Lt. Col. Alexander H. Hunt, deputy director of the Company Operations Department, Infantry School.

PICTURE OF THE PERSON FOR STATUE

'Follow Me' Statue Model Has Unique Interests

FORT CAMPBELL, Ky. — Maj. Eugene J. Wyles, who posed for Fort Benning's "Follow Me" statue in 1959, is an officer with many unique interests.

Wyles, presently 7th Bn., executive officer at Fort Campbell, Ky., has begun work to help underprivileged children, adopted an Indian boy and recorded Country and Western songs he has written.

He has also written and recorded two other singles which will soon be released under his recording name of Gene Wyles. He cannot read music so he tapes his songs and sends them to his manager in Hollywood, who puts the sounds into written songs.

The father of an adopted Indian boy, Tommy, the Louisiana native is himself an American Indian.

With the proceeds from his records, Wyles started the Associates Fund in 1966 to aid underprivileged children of all races in the United States.

He first became involved with the plight of the Crow Indians in his wife's home state of Montana. He then envisioned an Infantrymen's Center for Underprivileged Children and his heart goes out to needy types everywhere.

He and his wife Vigama also have two other children, Linda and Kenny.

He entered the Army in November 1949 and served with the Tactical Operations Center of the Capital Military Assistance Command in Vietnam from May 1968 to May 1969.

He was attending Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning when he spent much of a three month period posing for the statue.

General Berry Joins OC's In March Through Swamp

The candidates of the first platoon of the 65th (OC) Co., 6th Stu. Bn., The Candidate Bde., were recently involved in a rare treat.

The 65th Co. was having its first tactical problem with the Ranger Committee. The first platoon, being a portion of the problem, was in the assembly area checking equipment and making all preparations for the onset of the action.

Their portion of the operation required them to move out at 8 p.m. and journey approximately 2000 meters through heavily wooded terrain and swamp.

Enthusiasm and morale was high for the mission, but not necessarily because of the composition of the problem but because word had been passed that Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the Infantry School, and his aide, 2nd Lt. Harry Grace, would be joining the candidates on their mission.

General Berry and the candidates moved out on time. During the movement, the general made his rounds, observing all aspects of the formation. Point men, flank men and others within the formation found themselves at one time or another visited by the general.

The mission proceeded without incident until the platoon came upon one of the many Fort Benning swamps. Anticipation grew concerning General Berry as one by one the candidates relinquished themselves to the miry grips of their cold, vicious surroundings.

But all anticipation was satisfied when General Berry said, "I'm with you all the way" as he slowly but surely submerged the lower portion of his body in the black muck.

Grace also proceeded to help the candidates through the obstacle.

After a successful completion of the mission, the general addressed the candidates. His remarks dealt mainly with the problem and its relation to the future.

"Leading men over difficult terrain at night," he said, "is one of the most difficult tasks an officer can undertake."

70% of Goal Collected For AER

Cash donations of over $30,000 have been received in the Army Emergency Relief (AER) drive to provide funds for emergency grants and loans to needy soldiers and their families.

Almost 70 per cent of AER's $43,000 goal had been collected by last Friday evening.

The drive is scheduled to end Monday.

Not one penny of the money given to AER will be used to handle administrative expenses. The AER office in Washington, D. C., invests 25 per cent of the donated money and administrative expenses are paid from interest earned on the investment.

Last year, contributions from Fort Benning soldiers enabled AER to provide 2,350 military families with grants and loans totaling almost $290,000.

General Speaks To OC Grads

Maj. Gen. John Norton, commanding general, U.S. Army Aviation Systems Command, St. Louis, Mo., was the guest speaker at the graduation of OCS Class No. 26-69 in Marshall Auditorium.

General Norton gave both long-term and short-term advice to the 154 new second lieutenants graduating from the 61st Co., 6th Stu. Bn., The Candidate Bde.

Theater Group Interest Grows

The newly formed Fort Benning Theater group will meet Monday, at its usual time and place, 7:30 p.m. at the Playhouse behind the Infantry Museum.

Dates Set

The musical comedy, "Guys and Dolls," has been picked by the group as its first production. Grady Smith, director of the first show, this week set the dates for tryouts and opening night.

Tryouts for "Guys and Dolls" will be Sept. 22-26 at 7 p.m. and Sept. 27 at 2 p.m.

Opening night for the four night run will be Nov. 19.

Smith said that in setting the tryout dates he took into consideration when the scripts will arrive and the time he needs to familiarize himself with the script.

"Approximately eight weeks are needed for rehearsals," said Smith. "So, Bob Hanley of the Playhouse suggested a mid-November opening."

Great Interest

Hanley said that the people at the Entertainment Center were very pleased with the amount of interest people have been showing in the new group. He invited others who wish to join to call 543-2992 for further information.

Cub Scouts Take Physical Test

The Cub Scouts of Pack 232 hit the physical training field at 45th Co., 4th Stu. Bn., TSB. The scouts took their annual physical fitness test lead by incoming packmaster SFC Thomas N. McCall, S-1, TSB.

The pack, sponsored by the Tillenhurst Elementary PTA, is in the Yupaha District of the Chattahoochee Area Council.

Executive members of the district and council viewed the fitness tests and took part in the monthly pack meeting.

The meeting was held after the tests were completed at the Russ Pool Pavillion. Certificates were awarded to all scouts who participated in the tests and other boys received awards for their activities during the month.

Members of the Webelos were given the Athlete Activity Badge for passing the tests.

The physical fitness test consisted of five events. Some of these were similar to the military P.T. tests, including the run, dodge and jump event and the horizontal ladder.

All the events were supervised by 45th company cadre.

Chaplain Russo Stays Available for Trainees

"It really means a lot to a young trainee to see a chaplain in the field," said Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Nicodemus A. Russo, new Training Center staff chaplain.

Chaplain Russo, who was 1st Bde. chaplain prior to assuming his present duties, is the only Catholic chaplain in the Training Center.

The Brooklyn native emphasizes the importance of a chaplain's continued availability to trainees.

Seventeen religious services are held each week in the Training Center and average attendance is estimated at 2,500.

Father Russo was instrumental in beginninga Tuesday night mass in the 1st Bde. area, increasing the opportunities for worship available to trainees and Training Center personnel.

Chaplain Russo is a 1943 graduate of Marquette University in Milwaukee, Wis., and earned his theology degree from St. Bonaventure College in 1946. He was ordained in 1948.

His last assignment was as Post Chaplain, Ft. Greely, Alaska. Overseas assignments have included chaplain duties with the Military Assistance Command in the Republic of Vietnam and 4th Armored Artillery, Germany.

'I'll Get the Watermelons Later, Right Now Get Me Some Artillery!'

By PFC Paul T. Miller

1st Lt. Ronald E. Hinze, currently serving with the Americal Division's 2nd Bn., 1st Infantry in the Republic of Vietnam, celebrated his 25th birthday with a watermelon festival.

Hinze, of Manchester, Ga., and formerly assigned to the Academic Records Section of the Infantry School, received the Georgia melons from his wife, Susan, as a birthday gift.

The trans-Pacific watermelon shuttle began when Mrs. Hinze wrote the Atlanta Constitution and requested assistance in sending the perishable product.

Air Melons

The editors of the paper began making telephone calls and arranged for Delta Airlines and Pan American Airlines to fly the melons to the West Coast and then across the Pacific.

They also enlisted the aid of Maj. Gen. Robert R. Linville, chief of staff of the Third Army area, who arranged for the movement of watermelons in Vietnam.

Melon Sabotage

Hinze, a long time lover of watermelons, had been notified of the precious fruit and was supposed to pick it up at the 196th Brigade basecamp at Landing Zone Baldy when the Viet Cong attempted to sabotage the mission.

"I knew the watermelons were coming in for me," Hinze grinned, "but when the battalion called to ask my situation, all I could say was, 'I'll get them later — right now, get me some artillery!'"

The following day, Hinze received the two large melons from Red Cross volunteers at the division's headquarters.

"My men and I have been looking forward to getting ahold of these," Hinze said. "We're all kind of excited about getting watermelons here, and I can tell you now that there won't be too much left in a couple of hours."

The comments by Hinze's former cohorts here were numerous and varied. While looking at pictures of Hinze receiving the melons, one man said, "The lieutenant looks good, but will you look at that 'Doughnut Dolly'!" Another voiced, "How's he going to eat all that anyway?"

Hinze departed for Vietnam last March after approximately 18 months of duty here.

Satirists Film First To Find Story

The $64 question in film circles in London and Hollywood is: What's it all about Dave and Pete?

The versatile David Frost of TV has gone into film production with his satirist friend Peter Cook and they are refusing to reveal the plot of their feature, "The Rise and Rise of Michael Rimmer," shooting in London.

While Frost continues his lips-closed act, Cook, who is the star and screenplay writer, claims with deliverate evasiveness: "We started filming to find out what the story's all about. One picture is worth a thousand words and we thought 'Let's shoot it and view it. Then we'll understand."

Movie Synopsis

FINIAN'S RAINBOW — This musical combines Irish whimsy and folklore with social satire and the music of Burton Lane. Petula Clark plays Fred Astaire's daughter. Dancing, comedy and songs for the whole family.

THE NIGHT THEY RAIDED MINSKY'S — A colorful and fast moving comedy depicts the birth of burlesque in New York's lower East Side. The laughter falls around that famous night when the costume fell off the bellydancer and accidently introduced the strip tease to polite society.

HELL'S BELLES — A cowboy has his motorcycle stolen and he goes to regain the cycle from a gang of hoodlums. He pursues them and their obsessed leader across a desert.

THE DEVIL'S BRIDE — A band of Satanists, with witchcraft and black magic, confront the supernatural forces of the powers of darkness. The powers of darkness are unleashed.

MACKENNA'S GOLD — Legend says the gold rich canyon existed in Apache country. The local marshal is the only living person to know the location of the gold. Adventure, gold, hungry bandits, cavalry and Apaches.

Kazan Films Classic Triangle

Elia Kazan is out to show that a man can love two women at once and shift his affections back and forth between them.

The setting for his thesis is the motion picture "The Arrangement," in which Kazan prodnced and directed. Kazan points out that he is not taking sides in the two-love issue.

"I don't say a man is entitled to love two women at once, nor that it will necessarily work out if he does. I am only saying that it is possible, and even sometimes probable, that a man can divide his love between two women."

Army Chessmen Drill For All-Service Match

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Army chessmen are now preparing for the 10th annual Armed Forces Chess Tournament to be held in the American Legion's Hall of Flags, Washington, D. C., Nov. 7-15.

Sponsoring the interservice tournament again will be the American Chess Foundation.

This year's tourney calls for each service team, consisting of six finalists, to meet in 12 rounds of team play for the Thomas Emery Championship Trophy.

Since the Army gained permanent possession of the Emery cup last year by winning the tournament three years in succession, there will be a new Emery award for 1969.

Anyone on active duty is eligible to try out for a berth on the service team. Army finalists will be selected on the basis of U. S. Chess Federation ratings, major command tournaments and other records indicating their abilities. Unrated players desiring to obtain USCF ratings should apply directly to the USCF, 479 Broadway, Newburgh, N. Y. 12550.

Those invited to participate in the chess tournament may be given administrative absence from their units and will receive $16 per diem from the ACF for the nine days in Washington.

More information can be obtained from recreation officers of commands, USO facilities, or by writing to Army Special Services, TAGO, 2461 Tempo A, Washington, D. C. 20315.

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

Held at Sand Hill

Beck Wins Golf Tournament

By Bill Kloeb

Peter Swiderdk, son of M-Sgt. (ret.) Benidict Swiderdk, came through to win the August bass contest of the Rod and Gun Club with an 8-pound 8-ounce entry caught Aug 23 at Harp Pond using a plastic worm. Earlier he had registered an 8-pound entry caught in the same place.

The catfish contest was won by SFC (ret.) James P. Gavins. He caught his winner, an 8-pound 4-ounce entry, at Victory Pond on Aug. 10.

Capt. Gaylon L. Klobe struck pay dirt at Harp Pond, using a fly rod and worm to land an 8-ounce bream.

The September Derby got off to a good start with a 6-pound 13-ounce bass and a 12-ounce bream being registered. CWO (ret.) Jay M. Cochran registered the bass from King's Pond and S-Sgt. Howerton Howard caught the bream from Harp's Pond. Howard was using a catalpa worm, a very popular bait for bream at this time of the year.

Probably more bass are taken on plastic worms than any other artificial lure. This lure is both effective and widely used. The method most effective in using this lure is to cast it out to a likely place, let it sink to the bottom, then retrieve it slowly using twitches of the rod to get the desired effect. If the bait is retrieved too fast it tends to float toward the top and is not crawling the bottom where it is the most effective. The angler holds the line with one finger while working the line over the bottom. As soon as he feels a strike the angler releases the line and allows the fish to run with the lure. When he feels the fish has had sufficient time to get the lure in his mouth, he takes up the slack and sets the hook. Fishermen differ as to how long to allow the fish to run with the lure.

Some anglers rig the worm with two or more hooks. These fishermen try to set the hook immediately when a bass strikes the bait and have good success. Other anglers rig the bait with only one hook and try the same thing and have very little success. The additional hooks give the multi-hook fisherman a decided advantage. Its hard to have the will power to wait but in the long run you'll hook into more fish if you give them a chance to get the bait well in their mouths before you set the hook.

The Georgia Fish and Game Commission have found a new use for old automobile tires that are no longer suitable for automobiles or needed for childrens swings. They are being used to build artificial reefs along the Georgia coast to improve fishing. Three reefs are the first of a five year plan of the Commission to improve fishing in the estuarine areas of the state.

Sites selected for construction are the estuaries of the Hapton, Tybee and Timmons rivers. Each reef will be built from the shore out and will extend to where the water is approximately 20 feet.

According to fish biologist, shellfish such as clams and oyster and other food organism will attach themselves to the tires and attract small bait fish who in turn will attract larger fish.

A commission spokesman said the reefs are being put in the estuaries so they would be accessable to small boats. All the reefs will be marked.

The Fort Benning Labor Day Golf Tournament ended with Clyde Beck, a retired master sergeant, winning the championship flight.

Beck had scores of 79-77-76, for a winning total of 232 on the 72-par course.

SSgt. Patco Rowe was second at 239.

Milt Husky, a sergeant at Co. A, Infantry Center Troop Command, was the medalist winner, shooting low score of 78 for the first 18 holes. Though this gave him a temporary one-stroke lead over the eventual winner, Husky could not maintain it and eventually finished far behind.

Overtaking the leader with a final round 2-under-par score of 70, MSgt. (ret.) Richard G. Souders was the winner of the first flight. His 54-hole total was 239.

In the first day's competition in this flight, three men were tied for the lead at 81: Sgt. Maj. (ret.) Lee Howard, Sgt. Maj. Winston Kelly and Spc William Todd. Souders, however, came on with a strong round on the second day to come within four strokes of the leader (Howard, at 165). His final round, 79, was much the best, and it pushed him into the lead and the championship. Howard could manage only an 80 to finish second at 245.

Sgt. Duane Woods of Headquarters and Headquarters Co., Infantry Center, led all the way in the second flight to take the trophy by 11 strokes. His scores were 86-83-70 for a total of 239. SFC Thomas Dellinger was second at 250.

The third flight was won by Sgt. Maj. Lloyd Daniel with a three-round total of 268. Daniel is with Headquarters, 4th Bn., Training Center Infantry.

The leader here after 36 holes was Sgt. (ret.) Ed Sundie with a score of 139. Daniel was five strokes off at 185. With a final round of 83, Daniel was able to take the championship by two strokes over Sundie who had a final round of 90 for a total of 270.

Spc Michael Henry of 524th Personnel Service Co. led all the way to take the championship in the fourth and final flight. His scores were 96-94-88 for a three-round total of 278. Sgt. Maj. (ret.) Jim Fierro was second with 286.

Six Army Shooters Defend CISM Title

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Six Army shooters will blaze into action at Granada, Spain, Monday through Sept. 14 as members of the U. S. Army Marksmanship Unit from Fort Benning sight in on the 16th Conseil International Du Sport Militaire (CISM) Shooting Championship.

Long-time CISM pistol champ, Sgt. Maj. William B. Blankenship, will draw a bead for another gold medal, along with SFC Robert D. Whitaker.

Army riflemen will include Maj. Lones W. Wigger, MSgt. William E. Krilling and SFCs Patrick J. Boyle and James L. McQuien.

Heading the U.S. shooting delegation at Granada will be Col. Robert F. Bayard, commanding officer of the Army Marksmanship Training Unit. Rounding out the Army delegation will be Lt. Col. Frederick J. Kieffer (USA-Ret), the rifle team captain, and retired Army WO Oscar W. Weinmeister, the pistol team captain.

The U. S. shooters are the defending CISM champions, having won the bulk of the gold medals in last year's shoot-out at Fontainbleau, France.

A new area wherein the U. S. marksmen have not yet been tested is the military shooting event. This event, developed recently by the Scandinavians, who are heavily favored in this competition, entails shooting under simulated combat conditions in an extremely abbreviated time limit.

At least 15 member nations are expected to compete in the championship shooting matches, according to CISM's chief of information, Bill McNamara.

Safe Hunting Should Be Primary Concern

"Hunting is a great sport and more than 20 million Americans participate in it. The number of hunters increases each year," said Lt. Col. Dale M. Liggett, vice-president of the Fort Benning Rod and Gun Club.

"With the fall season almost upon us, more and more hunters will be indulging in various forms of the sport. This, therefore, is a time when hunters should take stock not only of their equipment, but also of their knowledge of the rules which apply to hunting safety," he continued.

Liggett stated that hunting helps promote good wildlife conservation. "By controlling overpopulation, game remains healthy and in balance with natural food supplies," he said.

On another note, Liggett said, "Taking to the woods and fields is relaxing and healthful and provides lots of thrills and excitement, but a full bag is not the only goal — safe hunting should be the primary concern."

"We recorded more than a dozen injuries here at Fort Benning last year directly related to the use of firearms," Liggett continued. "Most of these were off-duty accidents."

He pointed out that almost all hunting accidents could be avoided with more preparation, more knowledge and more care.

He suggested that, before starting a hunting trip, hunters should follow the eight basic rules of preparation listed in a pamphlet obtainable at the Safety Office in Bldg. 2804. Included also in the pamphlet are the 12 basic rules for safe gun handling out of doors; and the basic rules of safe gun handling in the home where safety is also very important.

"Hunting accidents are caused by lack of knowledge or failure to apply knowledge," Liggett said.

Concluding, he again pointed out the pleasures of hunting and added this word of advice, "Enjoy the sport and keep it fun by making it safe for yourself and others."

Lady Bowlers Will Organize Post Leagues

The Officers Wives Club Bowling League will open the 1969-70 season at the Main Post Bowling Center on 18 Sept. at 9:15 a.m. when averages will be established.

Former members who have already signed up, will have priority. All other ladies, interested in joining the league must contact one of the following officers: Dottie Harris — 545-3395; Flo Roberts — 545-1109; Hanna O'Brien — 545-3095; Zell Roach — 687-2025.

Mr. Dyes, manager of the Bowling Center, may also be contacted 545-4272.

Regular league bowling will commence Sept. 23.

New Tactical Officer Was Volleyball Champ

The officers of the 58th Co. (OC), 5th Stu., Bn., have reported a "net" gain in terms of recently assigned personnel: The newest tactical officer in the company is a veteran of the championship volleyball circuit. His name is 2nd Lt. William Jacobsen of Honolulu, Hawaii.

Jacobsen, a recent graduate of Officer Candidate School here, has been playing high caliber volleyball since the age of 12. He attended Bedford High School in Honolulu, and Church College of Hawaii (Lale, Oahu), where he played on the volleyball team for four years.

He admits that his first years on the team were good ones, but that 1968 was an exceptional year, both for the Church College team and for him.

During the season, The Church College team, which plays "colorful" volley-ball because of its uniform of bright red shorts with large yellow flowers, had batted its way to second place in the NCCA National Collegiate Championships. They then went on to participate in the National Open Championship against 55 other teams from all over the country. This tourney is open to all teams, both amateur and semi-professional.

Against such stiff competition, The Church College team, led by Jacobsen, took fifth place. It thereby placed above all other collegiate competition. It was in this same year that Jacobsen was recognized officially for his net prowess, for he was named Honorable Mention Collegiate All-American in volleyball. His feelings on the subject: "That was a good year."

M.P. Company Takes Center Slow Pitch Title

The Infantry Center's post-wide slow pitch softball tournament was completed when the undefeated 198th M.P. Co. edged Headquarters and Headquarters Co., 1st Bn., 58th Infantry, by a score of 3-2.

Both the winners and the runners-up received individual trophies and a team trophy at a ceremony in Briant Wells Field House.

Winners and runners-up of the USAIC major unit fast-pitch softball league also received trophies.

The Center Troop Command was the winner and the 10th Aviation Group the runner-up in that league.

Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, commanding general, presented the awards.

BY MARC REIFF

The Capital Division of the Eastern Conference could provide some surprises for National Football League fans. For the past few years, the Dallas Cowboys have been riding herd on the other teams and have been ending up on top. But this could be the year when the Redskins beat the Cowboys. And I do mean Redskins.

Led by Vince Lombardi, the Washington Redskins could keep President Nixon on Capital Hill rather than in Los Angeles. They have all the attributes of a championship team, starting with a coach. There is really no reason to delve into Lombardi's record with Green Bay. But he brings with him the spirit of winning, which many observers have felt the Redskins lack. He managed to bring Sam Huff out of retirement, no mean task by itself and has tried to build up the secondary by obtaining Tom Brown from the Packers.

The offense is a sparkling gem which glows bright most of the time. One of the finest passers in football, Sonny Jurgensen, is the nucleus around which the entire club is built. He can turn defeat into instant victory with just a few simple flicks of his wrist. To compliment him, there are such fine receivers as Charley Tayler, Jerry Smith and Bobby Mitchell.

The linebacking is weak and the defensive line could be the one clog in attempting to take the title away from Dallas. It will be interesting to see Lombardi remake the team in his image.

Dallas must be considered the primary threat to retain the division title. But with Don Meredith retired, things could just fall apart this season. It takes time to readjust to a new quarterback, and it may take the Cowboys several seasons to find the right replacement for Dandy Don.

But then it must be hoped that the quarterback of the future for Dallas will not have the stigma of "loser" attached to him. Meredith led the white hatted Cowboys to the brink of victory a number of times only to blow it in the crucial game. He was an excellent passer but the final solution to victory always seemed to come after the game was already over. This may well be the year that the Cowboys bit the dust and the Indians take over.

The Century Division should be a so so battle for second place as it has been for quite a number of years now. The other teams in the division should be extremely happy to see Cleveland depart to the AFL next year. Aside from the money which Cleveland brings to the games (stadium capacity of 84,000 and always a drawing card) there can be no doubt that St. Louis for one would like to have a clear shot at the title.

But the Browns should be able to handle any minor uprisings in the Century Division. St. Louis has been like a little dog barking at passing years acting brave but knowing that if the leash ever broke they would not have a prayer against such a foe. With the signing of Ron Johnson, the Browns may have found a replacement for Ernie Green. At least, the slack will be taken up some. Leroy Kelley has progressed into the finest runner in either league. His overall average has steadily increased since he became a regular and Jim Brown may one day be finding himself second in the record books.

Jerry Rhome may be the big filler in a sticky situation. At quarterback, the Browns found Bill Nelson to be quite able but the question arose as to the need for Frank Ryan. Reliable sources give the impression that Ryan could be done. His arm has never been the same since it was broken and last year was a near disaster for him. But there seems little way to stop the Browns from going all the way in the division, conference and perhaps even... (Super Bowl??)

Racing Around

Rallyist Will Go to Tennessee

By Snow Wilson

I doubt that many people would class rallying as racing. However a good segment of the some 17,000 members of the Sports Car Club of America consider it the reason for their membership.

So what is it other than a hunch of nuts driving around on a Saturday or Sunday afternoon, following a set of instructions that are absolute gibberish to the average person, going 20 m.p.h. on highways designated for 60 m.p.h. and 60 m.p.h. over roads designed for 20 m.p.h. and getting so frustrated as a result that team members often refuse to talk to each other for a week after some events?

As defined by Article 3, Section A of the SCCA Rally Regulations, a Rally is an "automotive test in which precise driving and navigational skills are stressed. Each car must individually follow a prescribed common route at specified legal and reasonable average speeds."

From that point on things get a little confused for most laymen but there are two classes — A-Equipped and B-Unequipped. The route itself is measured down to 1-100 of a mile and time is computed to 1-100 of a minute. Competition is fierce in both classes with some rather expensive computers used in Class A.

One, made by Heuer Robo, I claims to be a "completely transistorized precision calculator" good to .01 minutes and featuring a "fast add" for time and mileage, an adjustable odometer, plus or minus 10 per cent odometer correction to 0.1 per cent and reading to within 5 feet (.001 mile).

The real brains run in Class B where only one odometer is allowed and it must be a non-compensating unit reading to miles or tenths of miles. But the slip stick artists, — the consistant winners using two circular slide rules with a correction device — are almost uncanny in their ability to interpolate to 1.100 of a mile and often beat the teams with the computers.

So what's in it for the spectator? Nothing.

But the contestants do have fun. Rallyists are the party type, and if you're interested head up to Monteagle, Tenn., stop Cumberland—Mountain this weekend. Another big one will be held later this month, Sept. 27-28, at Huntsville, Ala., starting at the Kings Inn.

Bowling Center Will Organize Leagues

Manager Ed Dyes said the Bowling Center is currently organizing its Winter League schedule and all men and women who can roll, throw, toss or push a bowling ball down the alley are invited to join in the competition.

According to Dyes, the Winter League season begins in September and will end in April or May.

Those who play in a required number of games will be eligible for city and state competition in the spring.

Children between 7 and 18 years of age wishing to learn the game may attend free bowling clinics Saturday, Sept. 13 and Sept. 20. The season for the younger set will be kicked off Sept. 27.

As for adult training, Dyes noted that men and women may receive lessons and assistance any day between 1 and 5 p.m.

The Fort Benning Bowling Center is open Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 11:30 p.m. and on Sunday from noon to 11:30 p.m.

Pasarell Takes Interservice Tennis Title

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Army Spt Charlie Pasarell, the nation's seventh-ranked tennis player, won the Riseley Bowl, awarded to the top Open Singles competitor in this year's Interservice Tennis Tournament held at the Army-Navy Country Club, Arlington, Va.

Pasarell, from San Turce, Puerto Rico, downed Air Force Lieutenant Brian Chaney, 6-1, 6-4, 3-6 and 6-1 to capture the Riseley Bowl for the Army's 10th win of that award since 1945. The 1968 winner of the Riseley Bowl was Army 2d Lt. Arthur Ashe, now one of today's top tennis players.

Pasarell, who was just named to the Davis Cup team for the United States, is stationed at Air Defense Command's 1st Region near Newburgh, N. Y.

The Army racket team, defending champions this year, was eliminated by the Air Force for the tourney's top team award, the Leech Cup. The Air Force clinched the Leech Cup by whipping Navy four games to three in the final round of the singles and doubles competition.

Army PFC Bob Davis, Kensington, Va., lost to Chaney, 6-1, 6-4 in Leech Cup competition. Pasarell won his match by beating Air Force Lieutenant Jim Parker, 6-4, 6-8 and 6-3.

This year's Interservice Tennis Tournament was hosted by Fort Myer, Va.

Matches Held at Lackland Air Force Base

Harmon Is Second in Interservice Pistol Tourney

Army pistol shooters from the Marksmanship Training Unit, Fort Benning, grabbed second in the individual championship and placed second and third in the over-all team championships at the 11th Annual Interservice Pistol Championships at Lackland, AFB, Tex., last weekend.

Army's SSgt. Bonnie Harmon challenged the National Pistol Champion PO1 Donald Hamilton of the Navy for the lead and the championship. As the smoke cleared and the last relay walked away from the firing line, Harmon's tallie fell one point short of Hamilton's total.

Harmon had to settle for second with 2681 and Hamilton won the championship with 2682. Neither Harmon nor Hamilton won an individual aggregate in tallying their championship score.

Army's SFC Hezekiah Clark fired an 892 for the .22 caliber crown. Teammate SFC Hershel Anderson won the .45 caliber aggregate with an 885 and TSgt. Hubert Legg of the Air Force took the Center Fire aggregate with an 881.

In the over-all team championships, a surprising U.S. Navy team produced the top score of 3501 for the championship. Army's MTU Blue and MTU Gray teams, plagued with problems throughout the matches, placed second and third respectively.

MTU Blue put together a score of 3493 while MTU Gray had a 3489 in the over-all championship.

The three team matches were shared by the services. USMC Blue won the .22 team match, USAF Blue won the Center Fire team match and USN won the .45 team match.

Seat Belts Pay Off For Nine

It pays to wear seat belts.

Buckling-up before driving won nine motorists $5 each during a pre-Labor Day safety check held in the Sand Hill area by the Training Center, (ATC), Infantry safety officials said.

A total of 223 motorists were stopped over a two day period. Fourteen were wearing seat belts, according to M. L. Carroll, ATC safety education and funds director.

Funds, supplied by the Main Post Safety Branch, were available to award nine of the 14 safety-conscious motorists $5 in cash.

Every motorist stopped got a consolation prize: a plastic litter bag. And those who missed out on the cash got a useful reminder: it pays to wear seat belts.

Men from All Walks of Life Strive for Common Goal

By PFC Ron Argo

Louis Hinton was an English teacher in Korea. David Heath, a radio disc jockey. James Hennefer was a Phi Beta Kappa and law student at Yale and Charlie Williams worked in the Job Corps.

These men and many others from all walks of life now have a common denominator—the Army.

From Blaine, Me., to Hawaii, Puerto Rico and Tombstone, Ariz., they have come to participate in phase one of their military career—basic combat training.

The recruits are a composite of all ethnic groups, religions and social and economic classes from the U.S. and its territories. They represent virtually ever kind of American citizen.

An examination on the individual level reveals that even with the great variation of personalities, an attitude of aggressive willingness is a common trait among the soldiers in basic training.

"It's kind of good," said Pvt. William Rad, opera singer, "to get back in shape."

Read, who received his masters degree from Eastman School of Music in New York, has sung for the Metropolitan Opera House and the New York City Opera House. A student of Italian, French and German, he has played the role of Sharpless in Puccini's "Madame Butterfly," sung Mozart, Wagner, Verdi and contemporary English opera.

"Now," chuckled Read, "I'm used as a utility piece for counting cadence, but I'm losing my voice. I've sung in many positions," added Read with a broad grin across his face, "but never from a front leaning rest position."

Pvt. Louis Hinton, a Peace Corps volunteer who taught English in a Korean junior high school for two years, finds basic training an experience comparable to his two year tour abroad.

Hinton was graduated from St. Louis High School, Honolulu, Hawaii, in 1962. He earned a bachelor of arts in history from Texas Christian University this year where he served as president of Sigma Phi Epsilon social fraternity for two years.

"It's a fantastic educational experience," said Hinton, whose father is a colonel in the National Guard, "to live in another culture after 20 years of your own."

"I went there weighing around 220 and lost forty pounds in practically no time. But there the problem was adjusting to the diet.

"I guess the main thing I gained," Hinton said, "was a respect for real difficulties, of things like poverty. I'm thankful I was born an American."

"When I finish basic training and advanced individual training," said Pvt. Douglas Hamilton, 20, from Huntsville, Ala., "I'm going to jump school where I will get my wings and be an airborne trooper."

The variety of background among these soldiers is phenomenal. But now the past has been put aside for a common goal —learning the fundamental skills of the infantry soldier.

New Sergeant Major Joins Infantry Board

A much decorated combat Infantryman and veteran of two wars has taken over the top enlisted position at the Infantry Board.

Sgt. Maj. George E. Mooe Jr., assumed the duties of the Infantry Board's sergeant major upon his arrival here this week.

A veteran of World War II and the Vietnamese war, Mooe has a background of 25 years of service experience to help him in his new job. He entered the Army in February 1943 at Brooklyn, N.Y., and served with the 2nd Ranger Bn. in Europe.

In the European Theater of Operations, Mooe crossed the channel with the invading forces and stormed the beaches of Normandy in June '44.

Following the battle on the beaches, Mooe continued with the invaders through the hedge rows of France and across lower Germany into Czechoslovakia. All total he participated in five campaigns including the Christmas Battle of the Bulge. Ardennes operation.

In the Republic of Vietnam with the 196th Aviation Group of the 101st Airborne Division, the battle proven veteran participated in the Vietnam counter offensive phase IV and Counter Offensive phase V along with a third campaign which was underway when he departed.

The veteran soldier has been decorated with the Bronze Star Medal with oak leaf cluster, Army Commendation Medal with oak leaf cluster, Unit Citation, Combat Infantryman Badge, Ranger Tab, Vietnamese Service Medal and the Vietnamese Campaign Medal with the 1960 device along with the usual ribbons and medals awarded for service, longevity and good conduct.

Mooe is married to the former Miss Viola Petersen of Statesville, N.C.

100 Applicants Per Month Sought for Post Officer School

By PFC Paul Miller

Fort Benning's objective for applications to Officer Candidate School is approximately 100 per month, considerably less than last year's quota, officials at The Candidate Bde. announced.

The OCS Program at Fort Benning is designed to develop small unit leaders through a rigorous six-month training period, emphasizing leadership, academics and physical fitness.

Upon graduation, the candidate receives the gold bar of second lieutenant and a commission in a given branch.

The top three graduates in each course are guaranteed their choice of branch.

The drop in the quota of applications to OCS reflects a downward trend at other posts across the nation. According to the Department of the Army, the revised output for OCS for fiscal year 1970 now stands at 11,822.

The total input requirements by schools now in operation are as follows: Infantry OCS, Fort Benning, 7,438; Engineer OCS, Fort Belvoir, Va., 5,208; Artillery OCS, Fort Benning, Okla., 3,474.

Bronze Star Presented To Sp4's Parents

The Bronze Star Medal with "V" device for heroism, first oak leaf cluster, a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious service and a Purple Heart was awarded posthumously to Sp4 Elton L. Jennings Jr. and accepted by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elton L. Jennings Sr. of Macon, Ga., at a ceremony here.

The medals were presented by Col. Talton W. Long, deputy post commander.

The decoration for valor was awarded for heroism in connection with military operations against a hostile force in the Republic of Vietnam.

The citation accompanying the award read in part, "While working in the village of Tho Loc, the second platoon uncovered a large number of tunnel complexes. Disregarding the danger involved, Specialist Jennings volunteered to search the tunnels. Armed with only a .45 caliber pistol and a flashlight, he entered each tunnel and made a thorough search of the area.

Others attending the award ceremony were the soldier's sister, Joan, and his brothers, Charles, Edward and Kenneth.

GEN. TALBOTT: THE ULTIMATE GOOD FORTUNE

Post Welcomes General Talbott

By Marian Jones

A formal honors ceremony on York Field Wednesday officially welcomed Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott to the post.

General Talbott, the new commanding general, U. S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning, comes here from an assignment in the Republic of Vietnam as commander of the 1st Infantry Division, the "Big Red One."

General Talbott told the crowd welcoming him that the command of the Infantry Center was "the finest reward" of his military career.

He termed his new assignment "the ultimate good fortune" for an Infantryman.

Praising Fort Benning's ties to Columbus and Phenix City, the general promised to "further the outstanding relationship" developed by his predecessors.

Following the playing of "Ruffles and Flourishes" and "The General's March" by the 283rd and 29ist Army Bands, under the direction of CWO Dean A. Schutz, General Talbott was greeted by a 13-gun salute.

Men from Battery C, 1st Bn., 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Bde. formed the salute battery and honor guard. Commander of Troops was Capt. Dennis R. Foley.

A welcome reception in the main ballroom of the Fort Benning Officers Club followed the ceremony at York Field.

General Talbott replaces Lt. Gen. George I. Forsythe, who departed the post recently to assume command of the Combat Developments Command at Fort Belvoir, Va.

In the interim, Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, commanding general of the Army Training Center, served as post commander.

Chaplain Mask Allows Trainees To Conduct Worship Services

By Sp 5 Joe DePriest

Chaplain (Capt.) Robert Mask caught a cold, found himself "clinging to a straw" and had an idea.

The idea — allowing trainees from the Training Center's 5th and 10th Battalions to conduct periodic worship services entirely on their own — became a reality.

And Chaplain Mask hopes it can continue.

"It all started," Chaplain Mask said in his office in the Sand Hill Chapel 4, "When a Private Rodney Benton, a trainee in Co. D, 10th Bn., 1st Bde. came after worship one Sunday and said he would like very much to have the opportunity to preach sometime since he was a licensed Baptist minister.

"I said well, I would be glad to give him the opportunity at one of our Sunday evening services — which are a kind of do your own thing service, really.

"One Sunday morning I came in with a throat raw as sandpaper and a bad cold. I was scheduled to preach two services that morning and didn't think my voice could last one. Benton happened to be there . . . I saw him . . . knew I was clinging to a straw but asked him to bring a short message at one of the services."

Benton's efforts impressed Chaplain Mask.

"During the weeks that ensued, Benton, an out-going individual, organized a group of friends and formed a small gospel choir and presented a

Engineers Come Home From Gulf

By PFC Jim Doherty

Fort Benning's 43rd Engineer Bn. returned earlier this week from an emergency relief operation on the hurricane ravaged Mississippi Gulf Coast.

A 700-man convoy was met by a band and welcoming party at Eddy Bridge on the Chattahoochee River near Lawson Field.

The 43rd had left Fort Benning Aug. 20, three days after the Gulf coast had been shattered by 190-mile-per hour winds and 20-foot tides from Hurricane Camille, the most powerful hurricane ever to strike the U. S. mainland.

For three weeks, the 43rd cleared roads, removed debris and disposed of dead animal victims of the storm.

Supporting the engineers' efforts were two aviation companies, food service teams, a medical team from Martin Army Hospital, scout dog teams from the 26th Scout Dog Platoon and generator and power source units.

Lt. Col. Henry A. Pate Jr., the 43rd's battalion commander, said upon his return that the coast is now in "considerably better" shape.

Utilities have been restored, telephones are in service and many shops and businesses have reopened, he said.

But debris and collapsed buildings still dominate the region and "it will be some time before the area is restored to any real semblance of normalcy," the Colonel explained.

The Colonel said he is "extremely proud of how the men performed their mission under difficult circumstances."

Working 24-hour shifts until their last week, they moved a total of over 30,000 tons of debris, cleared over 500 miles of road and disposed of over 28 tons of dead animals, he said.

The battalion is part of the 921st Engineer Group, Center Troop Command.

Co. D, 818th Engineer Bn. will remain in the Gulfport region until early next week.

The scout dog teams and aviators returned here last week.

Colonel Assumes Secretary Duties

By 2nd Lt. James Hopson

Lt. Col. John B. Blount has recently assumed duties as secretary for the Infantry School here.

He replaces Col. Billy M. Vaughn, who is one of 24 senior Army officers selected to receive aviation training at Fort Rucker, Ala.

Colonel Blount returns to the Infantry School from the Republic of Vietnam where he served as a deputy brigade commander, battalion commander and assistant chief of staff for personnel of the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile).

His assignment as secretary marks his third tour at the Infantry School. In 1961 he attended the Infantry Officers' Basic Course. Following duty in Korea and Fort Dix, N. J., he returned to the Infantry School for the Infantry Officers' Advanced Course and Airborne training. He then remained at the school as an instructor.

The colonel is a graduate of the Army Command and General Staff College and the Armed Forces Staff College. He holds a bachelor's degree from the University of Rhode Island and a masters degree in business administration from the University of Miami, Coral Gables, Fla.

His awards and decorations include the Silver Star, the Legion of Merit, the Bronze Star, the Air Medal with "V" device and seven oak leaf clusters, the Purple Heart and the Combat Infantryman Badge with Star.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

King's Pizza On Call

Arachis hypogaea is the real name of a favorite food that some Americans call earth nut, ground nut, monkey nut or goober—but most of us call it the peanut. Pass the arachis hypogaea butter, please.

A zesty, easy dip: Just stir powdered Italian salad dressing mix into sour cream.

One pound of meat, whatever the kind and not counting fat or bone weight, serves four. A steak may be a better buy than the same weight of less expensive meat with more fat, bone or waste.

The daiquiri was invented at the famous Floridita, once Ernest Hemingway's favorite Havana restaurant.

By pursuing weapons and doctrinal development, was the U.S. partly responsible for increased U.S. involvement in the Republic of Vietnam?

The decisions to intervene in Vietnam and then to expand, intensify and escalate the war were made by the U. S. civilian leadership. The primary responsibility for implementing these decisions was given to the U.S. military and, within the political and operational constraints established by the civilian leadership, the military did actively pursue weapons and doctrinal development in Vietnam.

In summary, the varying degrees of U. S. involvement in Vietnam were based on decisions by the civilian leadership and the military was the primary instrument for implementing those decisions.

How many hours of instruction does a soldier in the U.S. Army receive on communism?

The minimum amount of instruction on communism required for a soldier in the U. S. Army is two hours which is normally taught when the soldier is completing advanced individual training. After the soldier is assigned to a unit, he may receive additional instruction on communism or subjects related to communism per the discretion of the unit commander. Of course, officers receive additional instruction on the subject when they attend the various service schools throughout their career.

Do recent changes in the Universal Code of Military Justice provide for bail?

What is the Department of Army policy concerning the call up of professional football players for active duty training at the beginning of the football season?

The policy on annual active duty for football players is the same as that for every other member of the Army Reserve. An individual who is a troop program unit member is required to perform annual active duty training with the unit to which he belongs unless excused or deferred by the commanding officer.

The bulk of active duty training is scheduled during spring, summer and early fall because during this period there is less disruption of the average man's civilian job.

Pentagon Encourages Education

One of the most admirable pursuits of the Department of Defense is its urging military personnel to further their education.

The encouragement by the Pentagon is designed to offer personnel the opportunity to perform their assignments more effectively, prepare them for more responsibility and to increase their chances for promotion and better living.

The importance of education for the Armed Forces is evident by the high education levels already existent.

Defense-wide, 78 per cent of the commissioned officers have college degrees, 61 per cent have completed some college work; 23 per cent of the enlisted personnel have completed some college work, approximately 2 per cent have college degrees, 83 per cent being high school graduates.

Thirty years ago a high school graduate, with ambition, could land a job — and a good job — without too much difficulty.

Not today.

In these times, almost the first question asked by a potential employer is: "Where did you go to school?" And he doesn't mean high school. He means, from what college were you graduated.

The young man today who does not have a college degree is virtually destined to a lifetime of lower-pay. With a college degree, plus ambition, the sky's the limit.

For those with ambition — forget it.

For those with ambition, the road is wide open — it's up to you. The opportunity for a college education is available to anyone who really wants it.

Take it — and good luck. (AFPS)

New Jersey Private Formerly Counseled Drug Addicts

By Spt Chet Hilburn

"Feelings of inability to cope with life — fears of inadequacy — these are patterns of frustration often seen in the drug addict."

Pvt. Samuel R. Skean, a rehabilitation counselor for the New Jersey State Rehabilitation Commission before entering the Army, traced these behavior patterns of the drug abuser.

Skean, a 1968 graduate of Rutgers University in couseling psychology, is taking basic combat training in Co. E, 5th Bn., 1st Bde., Army Training Center.

"Combinations of difficult home situations — an absent father and domineering mother for example — are other patterns that make up a drug addict's past", he said.

"The function of the New Jersey Commission is to make these people productive citizens once again by contracting services for them which we feel will improve their capacity to hold down a job."

Services rendered for the drug addict by the commission include contracts for job placement, private and group therapy, medical aid and education. Fees are paid by the commission except in instances where the patient has the means to do so on his own.

Skean described a drug as "a manifestation — a mechanical device for the user to run away from reality." He outlined four methods that have been used in treating the addict.

Psychotherapy is the classicial method of treatment. Largely it has been unsuccessful, having the best results with addicts suffering neurotic disorders. It involves the application of various forms of mental treatment including hypnosis, suggestion and psychoanalysis.

The second method is treatment of the addict by former addicts. This method has been highly successful when the cooperation of the patient is attained. The patient undergoes a social relearning process, living and working with other addicts.

The third treatment is "methadon maintenance." The patient is taken off heroin and readdicted to methadon — a drug which does not produce a "high or euphoric effect." The addict pays $3 a week for the drug. The new concept is designed to detar the drug addict from committing crimes in order to supply his physical need."

The fourth method, and the one that has been entirely successful according to Skean, is punitive. It involves the arrest and consequent jailing of the addict.

"The incarceration of the drug abuser has never worked as a cure for him — it has only alienated him further from society, making his situation even more intolerable after being freed."

The former rehabilitation counselor described his job as both highly rewarding and frustrating."

"It's such a long road back for the drug abuser — each step he takes is difficult and unsteady. After they leave us, they're on their own again. We, therefore, seldom see the fruits of our work. However, the realization of knowing you've reached down and offered a hand to another human being in trouble is quite rewarding."

Skean is from Headquarters Co., 78th Division National Guard Unit, Edison, N. J.

First Sergeant Pippin Speaks at Graduation

First Sgt. James E. Pippin was the guest speaker at the graduation exercises of Noncommissioned Officer Candidate Class No. 47-69 in Marshall Auditorium.

Pippin is the first sergeant of the 54th (OC) Co., 6th Stu. Bn., The Candidate Bde.

"By demonstrating the desirable traits of a good leader and the proper application of the principles of leadership, you will get the reaction you want from not only your men, but from your superiors as well; because you have demonstrated that you are not only interested in accomplishing your mission, but you are concerned with your men as well. Then when the time comes for you to issue an unpopular order, you won't have to worry about the reaction of your men," he said.

Being honored as the distinguished and leadership graduate was Gary W. Britton, New Port, Ore. For his achievement, Britton received a letter of commendation from Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the Infantry School, an engraved "Follow Me" plaque, an engraved "Follow Me" statuette and an engraved Association of the United States Army (AUSA) plaque. He was also promoted to staff sergeant.

Decor on a Budget Challenges Wife

WOMEN'S NEWS

NEW YORK (NAPS) — Decorating on a budget can be a challenge, but for the imaginative homemaker and the smart shopper there are literally countless ways to create delightfully distinctive rooms and lend new personality to your home without spending a lot of money.

For instance, there are countless decorating tricks that can come from coordinated linens. When redoing your bath covet a wastebasket, tissue holder and apothecary jar with towels of the same pattern or a coordinate solid color.

Another idea for the children's room — frame hand towels or washcloths that match the colorful pattern of the bedspread, sheets and pillowcases. Patterns like "Jungle Hunt" and "Children of the World," specially designed for youngsters' rooms, can be made into adorable and inexpensive wall pictures to match the room.

Perforated Panels

Perforated plywood paneling can provide a versatile wall for any room in the house. From the perforations you can hang clocks, lamps, art and shelves. There will always be space for additions, and the wall decorations can be changed at will.

An uninteresting wall space can be given a new personality when covered with a wallpaper that simulates brick. To add to the illusion, from floor to ceiling run lengths of wood stained to give the impression of wall beams.

Speaking of the kitchen, now you can coordinate towels, pot holders, toaster covers — even your own apron. Traditional stripes, gingham patterns, Amish prints, fruit and vegetable themes — any one of these new ideas in kitchen-coordinates can inexpensively add a decorator flair to this often neglected room.

After a bit of experimenting, you'll come up with your own budget-decorating ideas. So just let your imagination go to work — and save your money!

Schools Will Conduct Student Physical Exams

In coordination with the Assistant Superintendent of Schools of Muscogee County, a program has been established for school physical examinations for children of military personnel.

All head start, kindergarten and first grade students will receive a complete physical examination.

For children who attend off-post schools these will be conducted during the months of September and October by routine appointment with the pediatric clinic, Martin Army Hospital Annex. Appointments will be made through the central appointment desk, 544-1066.

School Nurse

Physical examinations for children going to school on-post will be conducted as scheduled by school nursing personnel.

Any student in a higher grade who has not had a complete physical evaluation must have an examination. Such students will be scheduled in routine fashion after first grade and kindergarten students' physicals are completed.

Immunizations should be completed for all school children by today.

Others Routine

Physical evaluations will be completed on a routine basis, extending beyond that date. Children of military personnel living outside of Muscogee County will be scheduled in the same priority.

Monthly Coffee Held by Wives

The monthly coffee of the wives of the 2nd Bn., 10th Arty., 197th Inf. Bde., was held at the home of Mrs. Wayne F. Rickert. Mrs. James R. Albright joined with Mrs. Rickert as co-hostess for the coffee.

Mrs. William W. Berry and Mrs. Robert N. Morrison presided over the meeting. Projects for the Ft. Benning Officers Wives Club Christmas Bazaar were discussed and decided upon by the group.

The 197th Inf. Bde. luncheon for Oct. was also discussed and a decoration committee was formed which includes Mrs. Wayne F. Rickert, Mrs. James R. Albright, Mrs. Robert Adams, Mrs. George Ruggles and Mrs. Charles C. Hunt. The ladies also appointed Mrs. Grayson Broom as the new treasurer for the wives group.

Guests at the coffee included Mrs. Fred Rickert and Mrs. Harold Feiple, visitors of Mrs. Rickert. Goodbyes were said to Mrs. William J. Staffa, whose husband is leaving for a tour in Vietnam.

CUPCAKES

Backyard barbeques, picnics — even "stay-in-the-house" meals take on a festive flair when you serve petite, blueberry-filled cakes baked in party-colored paper liners. Plump, juicy berries dot the rich yellow cake, contributing that fresh flavor your guest will know is homemade.

Quick-mix Blueberry Meringue Cupcakes eliminate the need to make a fluffy frosting. The egg whites left from the cake batter are quickly whipped into meringue, swirled on each cake, sprinkled with berries and baked until golden.

Since flour is the main ingredient in all baked goods, be sure you use the best — enriched flour. Essential B-vitamins, thiamine, niacin and riboflavin plus the minerals iron and calcium are added to self-rising flour to keep your family in good health. And convenient self-rising flour already contains leavening and salt in the correct proportion, to make your baking easier.

BLUEBERRY MERINGUE CUPCAKES
12 cupcakes

1¼ cups enriched self-rising flour*
⅓ cup sugar
¼ cup shortening
½ cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
3 egg yolks
1 cup blueberries
Meringue Topping

Stir together flour and sugar. Blend in shortening and milk. Beat 2 minutes on medium speed of electric mixer or 300 strokes by hand. Blend in vanilla and egg yolks. Beat 2 more minutes. Fold in ¾ cup blueberries. Fill paper-lined muffin cups 2-3 full. Bake in preheated 350 Degree oven 15 minutes, or until done. Frost with Meringue Topping and sprinkle on remaining berries. Bake 8 minutes or until golden. Cool.

Meringue Topping

3 egg whites
½ teaspoon cream of tartar
6 tablespoons sugar

Beat egg whites with cream of tartar until foamy; gradually add sugar, beating until stiff peaks form.

*Spoon flour into dry measuring cup; level. Do not scoop.

Advanced Course Class Holds Hawaiian Luau

The officers and wives of Infantry Officer Advanced Course 6-69 held a Hawaiian luau at the Officers Country Club.

The purpose of the luau was to get all the officers and wives of the entire class together for one big party. Island type decorations accented the theme, and everyone wore costumes. Each person was presented a lei to build the atmosphere.

Capt. Frank Till won the contest for best costume. Till was dressed as an American tourist in Hawaii. Mrs. John Dean won the contest in the female category.

Guests at the party were Col. William A. Patch, Lt. Col. William Munday, Lt. Col. Gerald R. Rose and Capt. David A. Talbert. Colonel Rose was guest speaker, entertaining with humorous anecdotes about members of the class and their "infamous" actions.

A meal of chicken with Hawaiian style trimming was served. Music for dancing was provided by "The Unpolished Brass," a versitile group from Atlanta.

BALLET

Carrie Christie, daughter of Lt. Col. Chester I. Christie, is instructed in ballet form by Terrell Paulk, ballet instructor. In addition to ballet classes, the OWC Dancing School offers tap and jazz.

MODELING

Wives' Fall Tea Will 'Happen'

Representatives of more than 40 activities for wives will enroll OWC members at a 'Happening' Sept. 17 at the Main Officers Club. The 'Happening,' the OWC fall tea, will be held from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. All officers wives are invited to the tea and reservations are not necessary.

KARATE

Classes in the art of Karate are being offered OWC members for the first time this fall. Mrs. Rudy Perkins demonstrates a classic hold on Lott Bartee, a second degree black belt from Auburn, Ala., who will instruct the class in self-defense. Ladies are welcome to attend the tea where they will have an opportunity to join OWC. (Photos by Ken Prater)

CHARM

A student in one of OWC's charm classes, Mrs. Richard F. Ward, checks her weight at end of the course. Ladies taking the course are "weighed-in" at the beginning of classes and given proper exercises and diets to help them either gain or lose weight.

Surgeon Says:

Wasp, Bee and Hornet Kill More Than Snakes

Mother Nature has equipped many of her members with amazing variations of defense mechanisms. The stinging insects are probably familiar to everyone. This group of insects consist of the honeybee, the paper wasp, the yellow jacket, the hornet and the fire ant.

They represent the most specialized order of insects and, in this area of the country, produce the greatest disease and death.

These insects with their miniature equivalent hypodermic needles and syringes have excellent technique in giving shots. They are able to deliver their medication rapidly and efficiently but unfortunately not painlessly.

They are for the most part considered social insects but not sociable.

The Wasp

The wasp is distinguished by its fusiform, hairless body which is tapered gently at both ends and linked with the thorax by a thin waist. They are black or dark brown in color and may have yellow, red of white striping.

They tend to build their nests in tree branches, around houses, sheds, eaves and porches. The nests are small flat open combs made of brownish or grayish paper. There are usually only a few individual wasps associated with each nest.

They usually sting only if touched or brushed while in flight or on the nest. Some are aggressive and easily angered.

The Hornet

The hornet and yellow jacket are quite similar and distinguished from the wasp only by the abdomen, the anterior portion of which is almost square and fits closely to the thorax.

Both are more hairy than wasps and coloring may be black and white or black and yellow. It is not possible to differentiate a yellow jacket from a hornet by its color since some hornets have yellow markings, however, a detailed examination of the face will show the hornet to have an extra black plate between the lower edge of the eye and the mandible.

The habitat of these two insects is an additional distinguishing feature. The hornet constructs a large gray or brown paper football shaped paper nest on branches, under eaves of houses or against a wall, usually 5-10 feet above the ground. The yellow jacket locates the nest under the ground, between the walls of buildings or under stones. Yellow jackets are seen in large numbers near rotting fruit, garbage areas and at picnic grounds. They are quite irritable and are likely to sting anyone who is near them.

Hornets are particularly aggressive, sometimes attacking without provocation the unwary person who ventures too near the nest.

The Bee

The honeybee or apis is smaller and quite different in shape from the wasp and the hornet. Their bodies are small, stocky, brown or black in color, covered with hair and possess round abdomen.

Their nests are located either in artificial hives or in natural nests found in enclosed areas, under floors, or in hollow trees. They are frequently seen at their work on flowers.

They may sting if irritated or if stepped on. Only the female bee stings, and only the bee leaves its stinger in the skin.

The large and cumbersome bumblebee rarely attacks his tormentor unless the nest is stepped on.

More Killed

According to a recent survey more persons in the United States are killed each year by insects stings than by snake or spider bites.

From 1949 to 1959, 298 persons were known to have died from insect stings. Bees were responsible for 124 deaths; wasps were next with 69; yellow jackets followed with 22, hornets with 10 and of special interest here in Georgia, fire ants 4 deaths.

The time interval between sting and death recorded in 206 of the 229 fatalities was less than an hour. In a more recent study of 2,606 insect stings, 630 were recorded as severe general reactions, e.g. generalized swelling and itching and/or respiratory effects. Over 50 per cent of these had never been stung previously.

The majority of incidents involved males below the age of 20 and occurred in August. About 55 per cent of the persons recording a moderate to severe reaction to the sting gave a history of having other allergy problems, e.g. asthma or hay fever.

The type or reaction to an insect sting is quite variable. There are two large categories or reaction, first those reactions occurring immediately following the sting, called the immediate type of reaction.

This reaction occurs within the first 30 minutes following the sting and may involve only a local reaction, e.g. pain, slight redness and slight swelling at the site of the sting only. It can be more severe and consists of swelling of the entire area involved, e.g. arm, leg, face, neck with hives, asthma, a generalized itching sensation, shock and if untreated death.

The second large category of reaction is called a delayed response and usually occurs hours after sting and consists of pain in the joints, swelling of the arms, legs, face, a skin rash and fever. Any reaction in a person other than pain and slight swelling at the site of the sting should be considered as evidence of hypersensitivity or allergy to the insect venom and is reason for concern.

Severe Reaction

The problem of the severe reaction is made more intense by at least three factors. First the sensitive individual may be only casually concerned or unaware of his allergic state. In a person allergic to insect stings there is a progressive degree of severity when there is a lapse of weeks or months between stings.

Second, as the severity of the reaction to the sting progresses, the interval of time between the sting and the onset of symptoms shortens in an alarming manner. The average time between the sting and a severe and often fatal reaction is 10 minutes. The patient must have seen his physician prior to the sting and have his medication with him to take immediately.

Third, the problem is complicated because the insect sting usually occurs in an area where the victim is geographically remotely located and where prompt medical aid is not available, again illustrating the need for prior evaluation by a physician and the importance of having his medication on hand.

Busy Stitching, Knitting Makes Gift Items

By Mary Lou Braswell

Christmas in September? Looks that way when the Training Center officers wives get together, because they're busily cutting and stitching, knitting or pasting . . . making a variety of gift items for the Officers Wives Club Christmas Bazaar.

Bits of bright felt are being docked with braid, sequins and beads, and shaped into cherry bottle covers. Advent calendars are being fashioned from felt.

Styrofoam ice buckets are being converted into elegant bun warmers and plastic straws shaped into polyhedral stars. Straw cornucopias also are being trimmed for the holiday season.

Many of the wives are knitting colorful yarn animals and clowns. Others are making party aprons, fabric scissors bags and even fabric trimmed stationery.

Scissors, pins, needles and glue are much in evidence as the wives rush to finish these and many other projects before their mid-November completion date for Christmas Bazaar items.

Infantry Board Officers Plan Festivity Tonight

An early fall festivity in the form of a "Hail and Farewell" cook-out party is planned for officers and their wives of the Infantry Board tonight at the Infantry Center Recreation area, it was announced by Col. Charles B. Thomas, president of the Infantry materiel test activity.

The gala evening outdoor party will introduce the round of fall social affairs for the test activity and will be an occasion for welcoming officially the newly assigned officers and their wives to the organization while at the same time bidding a fond farewell to those leaving for future assignments and recognizing them for their achievements at the test board.

Scheduled to be held at the recreation area on 2nd Armored Division Road beginning at 6 p.m., the evening's activities will consist of games, contests, square dancing, the cook-out barbeque and special recognition of honored guests.

Master of Ceremonies for the program will be Colonel Thomas. He will introduce the honored guests and present awards to departing members.

The members of the test board with their wives were asked to rendezvous at the recreation area early enough for the games and contests to begin promptly at 5 p.m., thus permitting the barbeque to start at 5:30 p.m.

The square dance will follow the cook-out. Caller for the do-sidos will be L. B. Hixson, principal of the Benning Hills Elementary School.

VISITORS COME TO SEE TRAINEES BECOME SOLDIERS IN CEREMONIES AT ATC

Celebration Begins Today

ATC 'Birthday' Causes Memories

"It seems like a long time," mused 9th Bn. Command Sgt. Maj. Nathan Hoover. "A lot of cycles have come and gone since we opened the Army Training Center (ATC) here."

Hoover's memories of the late summer of 1965 when the Training Center was first organized were spurred by the center's fourth Organization Day observance which begins today.

The 4th "birthday" activities will begin this morning with graduation ceremonies for the 2nd Bde. Provisional Bn. and will be culminated Saturday night with an officer's formal ball.

First Bde. Command Sgt. Maj. S. D. Dorner and Staff Sgt. Maj. Gerald W. Comer, with the adjutant general's Trainee Personnel Division, shared Hoover's recollections of those frantic weeks in 1965 when young men first came to ATC for basic combat training.

Remembered vividly was the shortage of people. Even drill sergeants were "borrowed" to meet the first cycle of trainees. Supplies, facilities and equipment, too, were extremely short, with ingenuity and long hours stretching to fill the needs.

"There weren't any training aids," Hoover said. "The drill sergeants blocked out instructions on sheets of paper until materials could be made up."

Staff Sgt. Maj. Henry Gris, now with the G3 Committee Division, also remembered many changes in training in the four years:

These changes included new types of training such as instruction in rapid, instinctive "quick kill" shooting, encouragement of trainees to consume more water to accustom them to jungle-type duty and the phase I of m16 rifle marksmanship for men scheduled for advanced individual training in combat arms.

Despite these changes, the drill sergeant's role has remained the same while more than 175,000 basic trainees have been at ATC. The drill sergeant still maintains the pre-dawn to after-dark days that the Training Center's first personnel experienced.

Some of the most recent additions in the center have enhanced the off-duty enjoyment of personnel, their dependents and ATC visitors.

These include Theater 3, which seats 1,000 people in air-conditioned comfort, and the new Defender's Park, in front of ATC Headquarters, where families can visit leisurely with trainees.

This year, for the third successive time, the center also maintained the nation's only basic ROTC summer camp. Billeted in the Harmony Church area of the 2nd Bde., the cadets underwent active duty training in lieu of two years of on-campus study.

Organization Day activities this year will be both athletic and social.

Following the graduation today which opens the "birthday" celebration, the center's annual cake-baking contest will be held.

The cakes, baked in Training Center mess halls, will be judged according to appearance, originality and taste by Mrs. Oscar E. Davis, wife of the ATC commanding general, Mrs. Sara Spano and Mrs. Lois McCosh.

Saturday a physical competition and a variety show along with the formal ball will highlight the Organization Day observance. Unit formations to reacquaint the troops with the history of the center and a picnic for trainees and guests will also be held.

Physical competition for the Brigade Commander's Trophy will feature the training officer relay (one-mile relay for training officers only), drill sergeants relay, tug of war (one 15-man team per battalion) and the 150-yard man-carry with teams composed of officers, drill sergeants and trainees.

A trainee variety show at the Sand Hill Service Club will begin at 3 p.m. Saturday and in the evening the ball will be held at the Main Officers Open Mess.

ARMY TRAINING CREST

Editorial

We Commend ATC

"It wasn't until I came to Nam that I realized how important basic training really is," a young Specialist 4 wrote from a hospital bed to his old company at the Army Training Center last July.

"If I could have realized how Nam is then, believe me I would have really gotten all I could from basic training," he wrote.

Each month, thousands of young men (the figure for both September and October is 29,000) are drafted, eventually to serve as replacements for thousands who preceded them and return daily from Southeast Asia.

Preparing men of different sizes and varying degrees of physical condition for the rigors of combat in a hot, humid climate is the task begun by 12 basic training centers throughout the country.

Fort Benning's Training Center, established to meet the requirements of the Republic of Vietnam, will observe its fourth anniversary this weekend.

Commanded by Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, the center has trained more than 175,000 recruits in the basic skills of rifle marksmanship, hand-to-hand and bayonet fighting, military courtesy and military justice.

Combat-tested cadre set the example and enforce discipline in an 8 - week introduction to the early - rising, hard-working Infantry.

It's not an easy job. Hot, tired and bewildered by the different life, new trainees move sluggishly unaware that what looms as eight long weeks really is a very short time in which to learn techniques basic to their ability to survive and function in combat. Drill sergeants provide a sense of urgency.

Slowly at first, then more quickly, trainees learn to function as a company, marching together, living together, working together until the day they graduate together and shed the name "trainee" for the title "soldier."

And as soldiers, personal opinions lose relevance when compared with the mission to do as one is told. The important matter becomes how well a man has been trained for the task he must accomplish. His life and the lives of others may depend on that.

Now is an appropriate time to recognize the people, most of them combat veterans, who train young men who soon may have to fight. In that spirit we commend the U.S. Army Training Center on its fourth anniversary and urge it to continue doing well its most important job.

Training Crest Says 'This We'll Defend'

The Crest worn by all permanent party personnel at the Army Training Center is approved for wear by all trainer personnel assigned to U. S. Army training activities.

The snake, motto, scroll and armor are adopted from a design of the Department of the Army.

The snake, breastplate and armor also appear on the original seal of the U. S. War Office, 1778.

The 13 stars forming the border represent the original States. A torch in the center symbolizes liberty.

The breastplate in the center consists of two items: armor and jupon, a tunic worn by ancient warriors over the breastplate.

The coiled rattlesnake is derived from the original "Don't Tread on Me" serpent, a symbol of American independence during the 18th Century. Combined with the torch and breastplate, it indicates readiness to defend.

The scroll, which the snake grasps with his tail and teeth, is inscribed: "This We'll Defend."

This inscription summarizes the meaning of all the symbols: Determination, devotion and readiness of the American Soldier.

Capt. Erla Lutz Assumes Command of Post WAC's

By Sgt. Carol Aubin

"This is one job that I have truly looked forward to and I am really very glad I was assigned here at Fort Benning," said Capt. Erla L. Lutz, new commanding officer of the WAC Co. 1st Bn., Center Troop Command.

The WAC captain, from Tucson, Ariz., entered the military service in 1963. "I was enlisted at that time and served as a company clerk, an administrative NCO and a first sergeant during my four year enlistment," she said.

Upon receiving her commission she served as platoon leader at Fort McClellan, Ala.

"The most important prerequisite for an officer who becomes a commander is compassion — a true feeling for people and this is especially true if you are a female officer and are in command of women," Captain Lutz said.

She explained that prior to her assignment here, she spent two years as a recruiting officer at the Recruiting Main Station, Syracuse, N.Y.

The captain attended the University of Arizona.

She officially assumed command of the WAC Company on Sept. 2 from 1st Lt. Mary N. Lewis.

Lieutenant Lewis commanded the company from June 3 to September when she was assigned to Wurtzberg, Germany.

Girls' Army Posters Stir Up Commotion

When Brigitte and Laurie Larsen designed some homemade posters to help their father in his new career counseling job, they little realized the commotion it would stir up.

And last week the two girls were honored at a cake cutting ceremony that saw Lt. Col. Steven Dorchak Jr., commanding officer of the 197th Support Bn., give his congratulations for having the posters selected for use throughout the Third Army.

Daddy is SSgt. Marvin G. Larsen, who was recently assigned career counseling duties for the 197th Support Bn's Co. B.

Colonels Trade Jobs At ATC

Lt. Col. Gerald G. Wilson officially assumed command of 1st Bn., 1st Bde, USATCI, in a ceremony at 1st Battalion Headquarters, Sand Hill.

He succeeds Lt. Col. Charles R. Rawlings, who will assume Colonel Wilson's former position as G1 for the Training Center.

A native of Wisconsin, Colonel Wilson enlisted in the Marine Corps in 1948 and was commissioned through ROTC in June, 1953, as distinguished military graduate at St. Norbert College, DePere, Wis. He has served with the 31st Inf., 24th Inf., 1st Cavalry Div. and 3rd Inf. Div.

Colonel Rawlings, a Texan, entered the Army in 1953 on graduation from Texas A and M University, College Station, Tex. He has served in Korea, Laos, Germany and Vietnam, and is rated a senior Army aviator and parachutist.

Medal of Honor Holder Attends IOBC at Benning

By Marion Jones

A Medal of Honor holder, who recently received a direct commission to the grade of first lieutenant, is now attending the Infantry Officers Basic Course (IOBC) at Fort Benning.

1st Lt. Drew D. Dix, who was commissioned in ceremonies last week at Fort Bragg, N. C., won the nation's highest award for valor while serving in the Republic of Vietnam.

On Jan. 31, 1968, the former enlisted man was serving as a unit advisor in Chau Phu, Chau Doc province. Two heavily armed Viet Cong battalions attacked the province capital city of Chau Phu.

The resulting fire fight left the city in complete breakdown and fragmentation of the defenses of the city.

Dix, with a patrol of Vietnamese soldiers, was recalled to assist in the defense of Chau Phu. Learning that a nurse was trapped in a house near the center of the city, Dix organized a relief force and successfully rescued her.

Being informed of other trapped civilians within the city, Dix voluntarily led another force to rescue eight civilian employees located in a building which was under heavy mortar and small arms fire. He then returned to the center of the city.

During this portion of the attack, Republic of Vietnam soldiers, inspired by the heroism and success of Dix, rallied and commenced firing upon the Viet Cong.

While moving in the open building, he was subjected to intense automatic rifle and machinegun fire from an unknown number of Viet Cong. He personally assaulted the building, killing six Viet Cong and rescuing two Filipinos.

The following day, still on his own volition, he assembled a 20-man force and though under intense enemy fire cleared the Viet Cong out of the hotel, theater and other adjacent buildings within the city.

Foreign Officers Visit Ft. Benning

By PFC Jim Doherty

Field grade officers from Morocco, Australia and Ecquador visited here this week.

Lt. Col. Fenniri M'Hamed, assistant commandant of the Royal Military Academy, Moroccan Armed Forces, arrived with four other instructors for a four-day orientation tour of the Infantry Center and School.

He met with Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, then post commanding general.

Following this briefing he viewed demonstrations of ambush techniques at Walter Hill and Airborne training at Eubanks field.

Scout dog training and the leadership reaction course were also on the colonel's agenda and he visited a Columbus television station, a shopping center and the Bradley Museum.

Maj. Bryan M. Hughes, an Australian exchange officer at the U.S. Army Armor School, Fort Knox, Ky. was here to study mechanized Infantry training techniques.

He received special orientations on the use of the mechanized Infantry battalion task force in area defense, riverline and retrograde operations.

He also participated in discussions with representatives of the Infantry School's Company Operations Department on the problems of mechanized armor in Infantry support

Infantry brigade road security and convoy operations in the Republic of Vietnam were also discussed.

Col. Alfredo Gandara Aguirre, acting director of the War Academy Ecuadorean Armed Forces, led a group of 20 officers from the Academy who arrived for a three-day orientation visit to the center and school.

After meeting with Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the Infantry School, Colonel Aguirre viewed demonstrations of the school's use of computer-assisted instruction and television teaching techniques.

After visiting the Ranger Department and viewing Airborne training at Eubanks Field, the Colonel toured several Columbus plants, businesses and shopping areas.

Next week Fort Benning will play host to a contingent of Italian officers.

The five-man group will arrive here Sunday for a three-day tour. The visit is part of a 19-day tour of Army bases throughout the U.S.

Included in their tour of the Columbus area will be a meeting with the Muscogee County Commissioners at the County Courthouse Tuesday.

Trainees Make Old Music With New Boots in Dust

By Sp 5 Joe DePriest

New boots are making music in the dust. The tune is an old one: your left, your left, your left right, left.

That new left boot better hit the dust when the drill sergeant says so, says left, left, your left right left.

Four platoons of trainees maneuvered slowly, rhythmically, in and out of step, by the numbers, right, left, backward, forward around a dusty field.

They were learning to march.

The voices of drill sergeants counting cadence blended into a quartet of commands.

"One, two, three, four. . left, right, left. . column right. . to the rear. . half-step. . march."

"OK, when I give you that left, I want you to stomp it — you're looking good now. Left!"

Thump.

"Looking good, looking good."

The senior drill sergeant, SFC Theordore Blanding, Co. D, 1st Bn., 1st Bde. watched the orchestration of feet and voices.

"Most of the trainees catch on fairly quickly," he said. "Trainees are given 24 hours of drill and ceremonies during the 8-week training cycle in which to catch on and perfect the movements."

"They're getting the feel for it now," said 1st Lt. Keith Sherman, Co. D training officer.

"Somebody's always out of step now. It's new. They're learning along with the change of directions — column lefts and rights, the 30-inch step, the 15-inch or half step. They are taught to sound off as their left foot hits the ground to increase coordination."

"Each drill sergeant has his own technique for teaching drill and ceremonies. Repetition, of course, is the key," said Sherman.

Repetition is a left and a right and a left, right, left boot square in the dust and keeping the proper interval, swinging the arms properly as you march along, around and about that field you get to know by heart, feeling yourself turn smartly right or left in response to the drill sergeant's command, column left, there you go, easy as you please, pick up the step, picking it up, picking it up, marching, getting the feel, making a soldier.

"One day," said Sherman, "these trainees will all sound off together and . . ."

The chorus of boots beat out its rhythms — thump — some in, some out of tune with the drill sergeant's cadence.

("Your left, your left, your left, right . . .")

". . They'll be in step," said the lieutenant.

("Left!") and the boots came down, making music.

'Mame' Plays at Night At the Springer Theater

"Mame" is playing.

The new girl came to town and fun's her game. You can meet her every night at 8:30 at the Springer Opera House through Sept. 27.

The musical show is bright, big and brash.

Joan Stumhofer stars as the madcap Mame who suddenly finds herself the guardian of her orphaned nephew Patrick.

She throws herself into the job with great verve but also with great lack of orthodox child-rearing methods, for Mame's philosophy is that "life is a banquet" and there's no need to starve.

The scenes shift from Mame's Beekman Place apartment in New York to Beauregard Jackson Pickett Burnside's plantation in Georgia.

Special Ceremony Held for New Captain

Promotion ceremonies were held at the Infantry Board for newly promoted Capt. Leo E Nelson, Special Projects officer in the Personnel and Administration Division of the Infantry Materiel Test Board.

Nelson was recognized in a special ceremony held in the office of Col. Charles B. Thomas, president of the Infantry Board.

Staff members and personnel of the test divisions were present to congratulate the new captain following the official pinning of new rank insignia on Nelson by Colonel Thomas.

Returning from a year of duty in Korea where he served as a reconnaissance scout platoon leader with the 2nd Bn. of the 23d Infantry, Nelson was assigned to the Infantry Board in June.

He was assigned earlier to the Infantry School in 1967 and 1968 to attend the Basic Infantry Officers Course and Ranger School.

The young captain is a graduate of Northeastern University and holds a Bachelor of Science degree. He entered the Army through the ROTC program and was commissioned in July 1967 upon his entrance to active duty at Fort Devens, Mass.

'FIGURES IN A LANDSCAPE'
Water Snake Writhes in Shaw's Hand

How Can an Actor Earn $250,000 Each Movie?

HOLLYWOOD — Robert Shaw, who earns a quarter of a million dollars a movie, laughed at the question. It was: How can you EARN that kind of money?

"I know a lot of people feel it's unfair that actors should get so much for what they see as being so little work," he said, "and they are right in a way but wrong in another.

"First of all the economics of Western society — which I may or may not agree with — decree that sums of this order are payable because of the returns. But what many people do not realize is the way the money is sometimes earned.

"They hear of scandals, divorces, huge alimony payments, yachts, private airplanes and all the trimmings of what the man in the street must see as the nonsensical high life of a group of people who are grossly overpaid. That, admittedly, is to a large degree true but there is more to it."

Shaw, who is starring in "FIGURES IN A LANDSCAPE" now being shot near Malaga, Southern Spain, said: "Take this production. It is an excellent example.

"We are working in what is sometimes appalling heat. The temperatures are normally well over 28 c. but we often work on locations which are natural sun traps. There are dried up river beds where the sun beats down into what becomes a reflector and the temperatures soar.

"We began shooting about seventy miles from here right on the snowy peak of the Sierra Nevada, well over ten thousand feet high. We were looking down on the clouds. The sun was brilliant and bounced like a hard ball off the snow. Everyone was burned."

Composers-Arrangers Showcase Pays Money for Original Music

The Fort Benning Phase of the second All-Army Composers-Arrangers Showcase will be conducted now until Nov. 24.

The showcase, open to all persons on active duty, is "designed to provide incentives for self-development of composers and arrangers among military personnel."

Directors of the showcase also hope that the competition will provide needed recognition of competence on the part of members of the Army.

Seven Classes

Competition is in seven classes: Original composition for full stage band; original composition for small stage band; original vocal composition and accompaniment for small stage band; and original song-melody line, lyrics and cord symbols (any style).

According to the Special Services office, one $500 Series E U.S. Savings Bond will be awarded each first place in the full stage band classes, and one $500 bond to the first place in the experimental class. One award of $300 in Series E U.S. Savings Bonds will be awarded each first place winner in the song, small stage band or combo classes.

Compositions and arrangements are presented in the form of a single-tract recording, recorded at 7½ inches per second.

Entry Forms

Entry forms, which may be obtained at service clubs, libraries, the Special Services Office and the Entertainment Center, must be submitted no later than Nov. 24.

Military Bases Help Youths

MEMPHIS, Tenn. —The tenacity of a young Episcopal minister, the cooperative spirit of Navy men, the generosity of a local charity and a national brewery, have combined to launch a new concept in summer aid to underprivileged youth.

The Navy Youth Service Program, initiated in Memphis, Tenn., enables youth from disadvantaged neighborhoods to spend weekends on military bases, enjoying their recreational facilities and military living.

The boys live in Navy barracks, awake to the bugle at reveille and hit the sack at taps. They play softball, swim and participate in other recreational programs on the base.

Country-Wide

Started a year ago in Memphis, the program is destined to spread throughout the country.

The Rev. Donald E. Mowery, executive director of the Episcopal Church's Youth Service in Memphis, Inc., last summer sought and was granted full use of the facilities at the Memphis Naval Air Station, the nation's largest inland naval base. Shelby United Neighbors (SUN), a local charity, threw its support behind Mowery's plan for a "vacation camp" for 600 underprivileged youngsters from the inner city neighborhoods.

Top Navy officials and the Department of Defense are moving to adopt Father Mowery's plan throughout service installations.

Mowery's initial success brought the Jos. Schlitz Brewing Co. into the picture. The company, which is noted for its "Send A Boy To Camp" activity, is working with Father Mowery to set up a Memphis-type program at the Pensacola (Fla.) Navy Base. Schlitz is building a $60-million brewery in Memphis.

The Air Force Strategic Air Command at nearby Blytheville, Ark., has opened its facilities to Memphis youngsters.

Indoctrination is the first order of the day when the group arrives from Memphis. Each group of 25 is broken into two squads — each headed by an assistant counselor known as a "lieutenant." Each is under the leadership of a head counselor, known as a "captain." Youth Services in Memphis provide the counselors, who are assisted by four service men assigned by the Navy.

Physical fitness training and courses are the important elements of the program, with instruction from base marines. The base chaplain conducts sessions on moral guidance.

Continuing

Last summer's program was a continuous cycle — youngsters came, participated, left. Each youngster who participated in the program received a certificate.

The summer program, part of Youth Service in Memphis' overall operation, provides counseling to the youngsters throughout the year.

The Memphis effort was initiated under the direction of Rear Admiral E. E. Christensen, Chief of Naval Air Technical Training.

Father Mowery looks forward to a time soon when his brain child will be initiated throughout the country's military bases.

Racing Around

Big Racers Will Run at Talladega, Ala., Sunday

By Snow Wilson

Taking a tip from old bike rider Jackie Stewart, who just won the European Championship for F-1 automobiles at Monza, Italy, last Sunday, local motorcyclists have taken up four wheels with a flourish.

Among the drivers at Tri-County's half-mile dirt roundy round last week were Buddy Boutwell, Awbrey Rhodes and would you believe Jimbo Elliott of Bultaco fame.

Jimbo even got himself a win by taking the second heat in the hobby division. How's that for a guy who believed for years the only way to race was with the engine between your legs.

Another name also showed up causing the sporty car set to look anew at the money end of local racing, when Casey Thompson ran in the sportsman division.

But let's face it. It will be a little while before the newcomers to the crash-and-bang style of racing served up at Tri-County and LaGrange will have the experience to really compete with drivers such as the Renfroe brothers, D. L. King and Eddie McDonald.

The new faces however will add a lot to the local racing scene.

If you're interested, races are held at Tri-County on Friday nights — if it doesn't rain.

In the meantime the sport car set, namely CHAVAGA, Sports Car Club of America (SCCA) is holding another of it's championship slaloms this Sunday on the Blanchard Industrial Park asphalt (that's the old King Aviation on Victory Drive). These are strictly time trials, in the lower gears, with one car on the course at a time and the winners get nothing but trophies.

But one heck of a lot of nuts seem to enjoy this type of thing (including myself) and entries are expected from Atlanta, Montgomery, Auburn and Albany in addition to the Columbus people.

Registration for the event starts at 11 a.m. with the first car off at 1:15 p.m. Entry fees are $3. for SCCA members and $4. for guests.

If you are interested in seeing the big ones run this week-end, head up to Talladega, Ala. It will be the initiation of the newest addition to NASCAR's Grand Nationals.

With the new surface they are still putting on the track, the big oval should be the fastest in the world.

But don't look for the new Dodge Charger Daytona, it's the one with a wing on the back and fiberglass shovel nose, to run. Ray Fox, who seems to have the last word about which Dodge will run, doesn't feel the new Daytona has all the nuts and bolts sorted out so he is putting Bobby Johns on the Alabama International Speedway aboard a faithful old Charger.

You might as well start accepting slower course times next year.

At a meeting of the Automobile Competition Committee of the U. S. (ACCUS) and auto manufacturer represenatives last month, both groups agreed, almost unanomously, that stock car racing should go back to being STOCK. This, and several other proposals, will be the basis for new rules affecting NASCAR, SCCA and USAC races of so called sedans.

The idea, those attending the meeting say, is to bring big time racing within the financial scope of those who want to race.

Personally I'll wait for the final rules inasmuch as the manufacturers still want to run what they call modified production cars — whatever that means.

Oh, by the way, if you're looking for a new car, try Baker up in Atlanta. They are having a sale on De Tomaso "Mangustas." Only $11,500 — each.

But if I had that kind of money, I'd wait for the new Mercedes C-111 Sports Coupe. It's just as well that I'm doing some wishful thinking for the Wankel engined two seater, shown off to the public for the first time, at the Frankfurt Germany Auto Show, will not be produced for public sale. And that's a real shame for it can accelerate to 60 in 4.9 seconds and has a top end of 160 m.p.h.

In the meantime Jay Hills, out in California, wants to sell his McLaren MK8B for $14,500. (I guess even if you own a McLaren, you can't beat McLaren.) And Dean Moon wants to practically give away six complete 355 CID DOCH Ford Indy Engines at only $5,900 each.

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

There were no changes in the status of the Rod and Gun Fishing Derby last week. CWO (ret.) Jay M. Cochran still leads the bass contest with his six-pound thirteen-ounce entry from King's Pond and SSgt. Gilbert Howerton leads the bream competition with his twelve-ounce catch at Harp's Pond. To date no one has registered a catfish for the month of September.

Angling is the most popular of all America sports. Each year anglers spend about four times as much money as spectators and participants of all other sports combined—including baseball, football, basketball, racing and track, but excluding hunting which ranks second in popularity. It is estimated that one out of five Americans fish at some time or another. Whether they fish once a year or several times a week they require equipment.

Whether you are an occasional fisherman or one who lives for the sport, and many do, you hope to catch fish when you go fishing. A little knowledge of the places where fish are likely to be and their habits will make possibility of success more likely. This knowledge and the ability to handle equipment and bait are reflected more in empty or full stringers than luck.

The first question is when to fish. The obvious answer to this is when the fish are hungry and this is about the extent to which luck influences fishing. If you get out to your favorite fishing pond, lake or river and the fish aren't hungry it makes your job harder but not impossible. Experienced anglers will get up fish even when they are not hungry. For example, the nature of the large mouth bass will make him strike at a lure properly presented out of pure anger.

All the waters of a pond, lake or river will not be productive at all times of the year or even at all times of the day for that matter. Most fish move to deeper, cooler water during the day. During these times it's best to use a deep diving lure or live bait. The trick here is to determine at what level the fish are located. Some anglers use the temperature system to determine the depth of fish.

Experts have determined the various temperatures preferred by various species. The temperature fisherman lowers a thermometer at five foot intervals until the preferred temperature is reached then adjusts his gear accordingly. Bass, crappie and bream will seek water having a temperature of from 60 to 90 degrees Fahrenheit. The catfish, being a bottom feeder will always be found on the bottom. During the evening larger fish, such as bass, will leave the deeper holes to chase schools of small fish, sometimes even driving them on to the shoreline.

When fish are in the deep water one of the most effective baits is a live minnow. The size of the minnows used depends a lot on the size of the fish caught. Many anglers use minnows too small to attract any type fish. When fishing for bass, minnows should be at least three inches long and preferably longer. Fishermen going for the lunkers use minnows up to seven or eight inches long.

With the cooler weather of fall, fish leave the deep cool water and cruise along the shore line hunting food. Frogs are favorite food of bass at this time. Frog-like plugs cast near the shore from a boat and permitted to rest a moment before the retrieve is started often provide good results. Try to move the lure like a frog moves. Where vegetation is not too thick the lure can be thrown onto the bank then jerked into the water to simulate a frog jumping or a fresh killed frog can be placed on a weedless hook and bait-cast into lily pads, pulling the frog up on pads then pulling him off to simulate the movements of a frog.

Three Army Soldiers Compete For U.S. Pentathlon Team

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Three Army lieutenants are vying for the final berth on the U.S. Modern Pentathlon team at the three-nation invitational meet now in progress in Rome, Italy.

These competing in Rome are Charles Hardage, Pasadena, Calif.; Scott (Zach) Taylor, Portland, Ore.; and 2nd Lt. Chuck Richards, Tacoma, Wash. All are stationed at the Modern Pentathlon Training Center, Fort Sam Houston, Tex.

The Rome invitational, a preliminary to the World Pentathlon Championships in Budapest, Hungary Sept. 21-25, will see Switzerland, Italy and the U.S. competing.

Ricards broke his own world pentathlon record in the 300-meter swimming event during the U.S. Modern Pentathlon National Championships recently completed at Fort Sam Houston.

His new world swim record now stands at 3:24.5, five-tenths of a second off his old mark. The new mark is the third that Richards has set in modern pentathlon swimming since 1968.

1st Lt. William Curry, Drexel Hill, Pa., who finished third in the National championships, will make the trek to Budapest representing the U.S. as will Paul Pesthy, the national champion and his runner-up, Bob Beck.

Pesthy and Beck are former servicemen pentathletes, and both are from San Antonio, Tex.

Pesthy's championship this year makes him a three-time winner of the modern pentathlon, and only the second pentathlete in history to win three titles.

Maj. Jim Moore, now serving in the Republic of Vietnam, won the championship in 1963, 1964 and 1968.

Modern Pentathlon consists of five completely diverse events. The first, and most dangerous, is riding a strange horse over a 1,000-meter course with an assortment of jumps and obstacles; fencing all other contestants with the electrical epee in one-touch bouts with a three-minute time limit; shooting at a turning target with a pistol; swimming 300 meters cross-country over varied terrain.

Mothers are needed to act as troop leaders and assistant leaders. If leaders are not found for those who have been transferred, the Girl Scouts will have to place some girls on waiting lists until there are openings in troops that do have leaders. Volunteers should call their troop organizer.

Judo

A new judo instructor is being obtained to replace the present instructor who is leaving Fort Benning. Time and date of judo classes will be announced in the Daily Bulletin and the Bayonet. A new program in the Junior Judo Rank System is being developed which will permit advancement through the 12 degress of the Junior Judo System.

Six Time Winner

Hardgrove Will Defend Golf Title

By Pvt. Steve Zimmerman

The Officers Fall Golf Tournament begins at the Officer's Country Club Sept. 21. It will run through Oct. 19 with each participant required to play at least one match per week.

A 36-hold play-off will be played in the championship flight to determine the club champion and runner-up.

About seven flights of 16 players each are expected. The pre-tournament favorite in the championship flight is Lt. Col. (Ret.) George Hardgrove.

Since 1959 Hardgrove has won the tournament six times (including last year.) In 1960 Maj. (Ret.) Robert Himes won it (he was runner-up last year). In '62 and '63 Billy Martindale won it; he is now a professional.

Though the tournament will be conducted using match play, the flight members will be determined by each members current handicap. Hardgrove has a scratch handicap.

The nearest players to him in the championship flight are: Maj. C. E. Bridwell, with the Ranger Dept., USAIS, who has a handicap of one; Maj. (Ret.) Robert Himes, who has a handicap of two and will be trying to reverse the order of last year's finish and Maj. (Ret.) Orville Folkerts and Maj. (Ret.) Roy Turgeon, who both have handicaps of three.

To make the final rounds more interesting, the matches will be arranged so that the one-two golfers in each flight won't face each other until later rounds.

The winner and runner-up in each flight will receive trophies.

The Officers Fall Golf Tournament has been held every year (with the exception of the war years) since 1928. Past winners include retired General of the Army Omar N. Bradley in 1933 and former Army Chief of Staff George L. Decker in 1934.

THE FORUM THE FORUM

By Bob Merkin

"I don't know much about art," said the freckle-faced high school lad after sneaking into his first "X"-rated Swedish movie, "but I know what I like."

It's the same way with me and sports. I may not know a rebound from chukker, but I know what, and whom, I like in sports.

Mainly, I don't go to a sporting event to be put to sleep. And the fastest way I know to put people to sleep in a stadium or on a course or court is to field a team or an athlete so colorlessly perfect that all element of the challenge against superior odds is removed from the game.

Another good way to make pillow sales go up at sporting events is to continue the trend of the sixties toward faceless, plastic non-personalities without histories, all of them as clean as the driven snow.

Now I would not necessarily like to see eight-year-old boys collecting bubble gum cards of athletes who also happen to be convicted arsonists and hit-and-run drivers, but I think public relations attempts to show the average athlete as a struggling divinity school student are unrealistic and actually harmful to sports.

If the golden era of baseball, for example was tre era of Babe Ruth and Ty Cobb, then I think it's relevant to point out that Babe Rnth was an obese, hard-drinking, overeating man who struck out with frightening regularity, and that Ty Cobb was one of the most hated ball players of all time for his rather unorthodox — and brilliant — base running techniques, and the legends about spiked players waiting for Cobb outside the stadium with baseball bats after games are numerous.

In other words, these great baseball figures were quite human, and the fans loved them for it.

Today the game of baseball itself is a choreographed ballet of scientific near-perfect (snore), and even worse, its players, with few exceptions are barely recognizable from one another. Only a few superpitchers are capable of grabbing headline and public interest, and off the mound, the only figure in baseball worth calling a colorful, appealing, and slightly audacious ball player is Ken Harrelson, "The Hawk."

In a slump or on a spree, Harrelson is not afraid to be himself or let the world know that he's not made out of cardboard. No matter how he's batting, the fact should be plain that "The Hawk" is worth a cool million in box office publicity for any team.

And in football, any coach or manager who would deny that a large percentage of Joe Namath's meteoric appeal to the public is his "swinger" image and an occasional on-field goatee or Fu Manchu would be a fellow without a whole lot of dollars-and-cents sense. People enjoy watching Harrelson and Namath because they get a vicarious enjoyment of life from these to uninhibited young men.

There is a lot more to sports than simply winning, at least when you want to attract an audience. In fact, as unrehearsed as it was, the most emotional and involved moment I can recall in sports was a moment of losing — when Italian golfer Roberto di Vincenzo lost an international golf tournament because his partner had put the wrong score down for him on the scorecard.

One didn't know whom to feel sorrier for, the partner who looked as if he wanted to crawl into the locker room and shoot himself, or di Vecenzo himself. With a smile that must have been harder to find than a light switch in a dark, strange room, di Venzo looked at a few million golf fans through a television camera and said softly, "I'm a stupid."

Simply put, humans are what sports are all about. And di Vicenzo, heaven knows was a heck of a human.

• • •

And a brief word about human and another moment of losing. Last week at Forest Hills, Australia's Rodney Laver defeated America's Arthur Ashe Jr., in the men's singles semifinals of the U. S. Open Tennis Championship. An unexpected foot fault call lost a point for Ashe and was credited by some with disrupting his game — rhythm and speeding him toward the sad end.

This black-and-white statistical result hardly puts a dent in my belief that Arthur Ashe Jr. (a former Army lieutenant) is the finest tennis player in the world today, no matter how many times Laver beats him.

If this sounds illogical, so be it, but when you consider that Ashe simply does not have the meat on his

WAC Capt. Defends Top Rifle Title

WASHINGTON (ANF) — WAC Capt. Margaret Murdock (formerly Margaret Thompson), Topeka, Kan., has successfully defended her Smallbore Rifle Position Championship title for the fifth consecutive year during the national matches just completed at Camp Perry, Ohio.

Captain Murdock added another "first" to her credit by becoming the first woman to win that title five years in a row. She is also the first woman ever to compete in the World Shooting Championships, the first woman to compete and win at the 1967 Pan American Games, and is still the only member of the Women's Army Corps to wear the Distinguished International Shooters Badge.

The sharp-shooting captain recently completed the WAC Officer Advanced Course and has now returned to the Marksmanship Training Unit, Fort Benning.

frail frame to pound a tennis ball like a cannon the way Laver or Clark Graebner can, and yet still manages to defeat Graebner and hold his own against even the mighty Laver, you find yourself considering quite a lot.

Ashe is also simply the quickest, coolest, most versatile tennis player in the solar system and can return the ball in the most embarrassing corners — the corner where his opponent are not. The speedy Ashe also drives most tennis players quietly bananas by maintaining a mean temperature of — 30 degrees during the most heated volleys and wearing the type of poker face that Hitchcock psychopatic murderers have. You simply cannot figure out what's going on between his ears.

Ashe's only major conquests left before the record books jibe with what I already know are, therefore, the powerful Laver and Australian Tony Roche, who has managed to knock Laver down five times in seven shootouts. I don't think they have long to wait before they, too, fall by Ashe's wayside.

Candidate Has Varied Sports, Arts Interest

Would you develop your football coordination by blowing a horn and tapping your foot? This is the case with Officer Candidate Ronald E. McCrary of the 94th (OC) Co., 4th Stu. Bn., The Candidate Bde.

McCrary is a native of Tulsa, Okla., where he attended Bristol High. During his tenure with Bristol, McCrary set a pattern of accomplishments which would extend into later life; however, the accomplishments were made in completely diverse areas.

At Bristol, McCrary made his mark in the football world. Playing at the halfback position, he proved himself worthy of being named on the all conference and all-state football teams. He set both school and conference records in most yardage gained in a game and gained in a season.

In track, he was again named to the all-conference and all-state teams and became the Oklahoma state high hurdle champion.

For his efforts, McCrary was offered and accepted a football scholarship to attend the University of Tulsa.

As a sophomore he was nominated to the collegiate All-American football team; however, a broken ankle sidelined him for the remainder of the year. But his success for the two preceding years opened the door to a professional career.

In track McCrary was named to the All-Missouri Valley Conference track team and distinguished himself by becoming the Missouri Valley Conference 100-yard dash champion. McCrary stands at 6 feet 2 inches tall, weighs 212 pounds and streaks through the 100-yard dash in 9.4 seconds.

However, even though McCrary is an accomplished athlete, there is another side to his story. He is a professional musician. McCrary doesn't play a guitar in a local combo or the washboard in the nearest mountain group; instead, he played the concert tuba. He played for two years with the Tulsa Philharmonic Orchestra and also performed with the Tulsa Young Peoples Concert and was selected as one of two individuals to represent the Southwest United States in a European performance.

What women like about the Rover 2000 Automatic

Stepping in and stepping out.
No big deal really. It's just simpler because the floor is four inches below the door sill and the doors open w-i-d-e.

Room—with a view.
Once seated, there is a great amount of room for leggy legs. A lot of headroom, too. The view from all windows is excellent and uninterrupted.

Seating arrangements.
The two front bucket seats can be adjusted to the contours of any female shape. They go forwards and backwards, adjust from English upright to chaise longue.

Big wheel.
The steering wheel is larger than is usual, which makes it easy to turn and ladies like that. It can be moved up or down. When the car is still, the steering is a little stiff; just stiff enough to remind the driver to look behind before pulling into traffic.

Shifting and handling.
Some ladies don't like shifting and with the Rover automatic transmission, they don't have to. And, if they want to, it can be just as manual as they please. The car handles effortlessly; holds the road like a leech. It's a snap to park—it turns circles inside most other cars. Yes, even a VW.

Easy to read.
The speedometer is the ribbon type, unmistakably clear to read and placed so as to reduce the difficulty of refocusing when glancing from road to speedo and back. A bold red brake light on the dash tells a lady: (1) the handbrake is on or, (2) the level of the braking fluid is low. High beams can be flashed, with headlights on or off, by flicking a lever on the steering column.

The quiet type.
The Rover is quiet inside save for the engine's reassuring purr. Thick wall-to-wall carpeting absorbs lots of noise. There is, however, a loud built-in sound which ladies with children appreciate—the loud click behind the driver's ear when someone unlocks a rear door from inside.

Out of gas?
Nothing to worry her pretty head. A reserve fuel tank switch on the dash gives her an extra thirty miles or so to find a gas station.

About those dents.
Say someone biffs the Rover in a parking lot, what then? It's a relatively simple garage task to remove the dented panel and replace it—Rover's nineteen body panels are simply bolted on.

Know more.
If you want to know more about the Rover 2000 Automatic come in or call. (We'll even tell you what men like about it).

2,000 ROTC Scholarships Available for Students

HEADQUARTERS, THIRD U.S. ARMY, Fort McPherson, Ga. — Some 2,000 Army ROTC Scholarships will be available to students entering college or continuing their college education during 1970.

Army ROTC scholarships, which are offered on a competitive basis, pay for the students' tuition, textbooks and lab fees and provide $50 per month subsistence allowance for the length of the award. During a six-week summer camp period, the student receives one-half the pay of a second lieutenant.

Here is a breakdown of the 2,000 Army ROTC scholarships:

. . . 1,200 four-year scholarships to outstanding male high school students who plan to enter college for the first time in the fall of 1970. This is 400 more than were awarded in 1969.

. . . 400 three-year scholarships to outstanding college students who have completed their first year of Army ROTC instruction. This is the first time that the Army is offering three-year scholarships.

. . . 600 two-year scholarships to outstanding college students who have completed two years of Army ROTC instruction.

These awards, added to the Army ROTC scholarships now in effect, will bring the total to 5,500 in effect next year.

The students winning an Army ROTC scholarship may attend any of the 270 colleges and universities offering the four-year Army ROTC program. Upon graduation from college and successful completion of his Army ROTC studies, the scholarship student is commissioned as a second lieutenant.

The high caliber of the young men who receive Army ROTC scholarships is indicated by their high school records.

Of the 800 high school students who won four-year scholarships this year, 735 — or 91 per cent — ranked scholastically in the top 20 per cent of their graduating classes.

special program along with our regular choir.

"Benton did such a fine job I felt I should let him give a sermon during regular services. I proposed he organize a service from start to finish . . .using 10th Bn. personnel from usher on up."

Trainees from various companies in the 10th Bn. held two services one Sunday morning and attendance, the Sunday evening service included, averaged some 650 persons — a "good crowd," according to Chaplain Mask.

"The services went very smoothly. . .and they were meaningful, too, I think. One of their own men is bringing the sermon — a man who's been through the same trials and tribulations of basic — so to speak — as they have.

"I'd like to make this a regular thing each training cycle. The problem, of course, will be finding a qualified preacher in each cycle. . so far we've been fortunate — we have an ordained minister in the up-coming cycle."

Chaplain Mask is already looking ahead to expanding opportunities for individual trainee talents during the Sunday evening worship service.

"There is usually no message during this service," he said. "We call it a 'back home' service — I don't know exactly where that term came from — but it's a much less formal service. We have a 30-minute period for hymn singing: trainees are welcome to try solos or participate by playing a musical instrument if they have a talent.

"I say there is no message — we hope the message comes through in various ways, through the actual participation of the trainees themselves."

AUSA

Local Unit Said Best

By SFC Richard Kemp

The Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning chapter of the Association of the U. S. Army (AUSA) for the second consecutive year has been named the association's Best Chapter Overall.

The local AUSA unit also has been named the winner of the award for the greatest membership in-put between July 1, 1968, and June 30, 1969. It is the second straight year for this award, too.

Chapter President Roy Smith Sr. received notice of the awards from Lt. Gen. C. G. Dodge, AUSA executive secretary, by mail.

Louis T. Kunze Jr., president during the period covered for the awards, will accept one and Smith the other during the association's annual convention in Washington, D. C., next month.

Smith said both will be delivered Oct. 13, just before the keynote address by Secretary of the Army Stanley R. Resor at the Sheraton-Park Hotel.

In 1968, the local chapter was rated first in four categories. These were Best Chapter Overall, Largest Overall Membership, Greatest Membership In-Put and Most Active in Pursuit of AUSA Objectives.

The chapter was runner-up for the awards for Greatest Civilian Membership In-Put and Best Overall Projects. It won honorable mention in three other categories and was cited for commendable performance in two more.

The annual convention of the association will be held Oct. 13-15.

Besides Kunze, other officers last year were Roy L. Smith Sr., first vice president; Joe J. Flowers Jr., second vice president; Col. Jack P. Pollock, secretary-treasurer, and Lt. Col. Douglas B. Tucker, assistant secretary-treasurer.

This year's officers in addition to Smith are Flowers, first vice president; Col. (ret.) Jacob L. Riley, second vice president; Pollock and Tucker.

Gen. Connor Praises Youth Fighting in Vietnam War

Lt. Gen. Albert O. Connor, speaking at Fort Benning earlier this week, praised the ideals of young Americans fighting in the Republic of Vietnam.

General Connor, commanding general of the Third U.S. Army, was speaking to the Columbus Chapter of the Military Order of the World Wars at the Fort Benning Country Club.

The general said stories of dissident youth should be contrasted with "the fact that over 200,000 of our young kids have asked to serve for this country in Vietnam."

Over 60,000 soldiers have extended their Vietnam tours each year, he added.

The general traced the Army's buildup of forces in Vietnam and praised the stateside forts for meeting the training challenges involved.

"Not only did we have to expand the training base and give it a priority equal to or sometimes even ahead of Vietnam," he explained, "but we also had to meet a 400,000 annual deployment figure without Reserve mobilization until 1968 when we called up only 20,000 men and 75 units."

General Connor, who assumed command of the Third Army on Aug. 1, spent two days at Fort Benning.

Besides speaking at the country club, he also conferred with Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott, post commanding general, and inspected training activities.

Included in his inspection tour was a visit to the main post barracks and mess hall renovation of the 43rd Co. 4th Stu. Bn., The Student Bde., the Custer Terrace Commissary renovation project and the new NCO quarters construction project.

Another renovation project he visited was the Sand Hill barracks and mess hall of Co. B, 5th Bn., 1st Bde.

The reception station and the 197th Infantry Brigade were also on his inspection agenda. At the 197th, officers he visited with included Lt. Col. Johnny J. Johnston, commanding officer of the 1st Bn., 29th Inf., and Col. John E. Strever Jr., commanding officer, 197th Infantry Bde.

RESERVE DEFERMENT

Can an Army ReserVist, who is filling his Reserve obligation in the U.S., satisfactorily get a deferment of up to 36 months from his Reserve commitment if he goes overseas to work?

A Reservist, who goes overseas to work, can get a deferment from his commitment only if he has completed initial active duty training and is desirous of becoming a temporary fulltime missionary.

Certification must be provided by a recognized church body. The man must also sign a new enlistment agreement under terms which will insure that he will complete the amount of Reserve service which was required on his original enlistment.

If a man (other than the missionary described above) moves to an overseas area and is unable to continue his satisfactory participation in a troop program unit of the Reserve components, he becomes categorized as an unsatisfactory participant. He then is subject to involuntary order to active duty for a period of two years, less any active duty for training (not Reserve Training).

Reserve units do exist in Europe. Troop units are filled as to quotas. Only staff and faculty are accepted in the Reserve schools and all manning spaces are now closed.

Rifles Rejected

How many Harrington and Richardson M16's have been rejected by the Army? What defects caused these rejections? Is there a penalty clause in the contract? When does the Army expect H and R to resume production?

Five lots totaling approximately 5,000 Harrington and Richardson rifles have been rejected.

The rifles were rejected because they failed to pass function, endurance and accuracy tests. They also failed to pass final exams because of defects such as discolored (improper finish) upper and lower receivers, defective barrels, defective bolt carriers, improper lubrication.

The contract does not have a penalty clause. At this time there is no plan to penalize the contractor for failure to meet production schedules. H and R is required to absorb all costs incurred in the correction of the deficiencies.

The Army plans to accept up to 6,000 of the rifles this month after the firm corrects the deficiencies and complies with quality assurance standards.

CHAMPUS--Health Program

Many Army families want and need more information about CHAMPUS, Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services, especially the cost-sharing aspects of the program.

The following questions and answers contain basic facts about CHAMPUS for all eligible persons — active duty members, dependents and retired personnel.

WHAT IS CHAMPUS?

CHAMPUS is a program under which beneficiaries (those persons elegible for benefits) may receive a wide range of civilian health care services, with the government paying a significant share of the cost.

Who is eligible for CHAMPUS benefits?

—Spouses and children of members serving on active duty under orders which do not specify a period of less than 31 days.

—Retired members (and former members) entitled to retired, retainer or equivalent pay and their spouses and children.

—Spouses and children of members who die while serving on active duty or while entitled to retired, retainer or equivalent pay.

(Dependent parents and parents-in-law are not eligible for any type of civilian health benefits regardless of the circumstances under which the care is furnished. However, care can be furnished in military medical facilities.)

Are all health care services payable under CHAMPUS?

No. While the range of benefits is great, not every health care service is payable. Examples of those services not payable under the program are domiciliary or custodial care, dental care (except as a necessary part of medical treatment), spectacles, hearing aids and well-baby care.

Does the government pay the entire cost for authorized health services?

No. CHAMPUS is a cost-sharing program. The government pays a significant portion of those charges determined to be reasonable and the patient pays the remainder. A charge is allowable under the program if the charge is determined to be reasonable.

How are the charges determined to be reasonable under CHAMPUS?

Claims for payment are submitted to civilian agencies which are under contract with the government to serve as fiscal agents for the program. In determining if a charge is reasonable, the fiscal agent takes into account the customery charges of that hos the physician and the prevailing charges of other physicians in the community for similar services.

If the care furnished involves unusual circumstances and professional effort, this also is taken into account.

Hospital charges are considered to be reasonable when they are the customary charges of that hospital.

How much of the charge must the CHAMPUS beneficiary pay?

Spouses and children of active duty members must pay:

—For inpatient care: The first $25 of the hospital charge or $1.75 a day, whichever is greater, for each incident of hospitalization. The government pays the remainder of the reasonable charges.

—For outpatient care (e.g. visits to the doctor's office or clinic): The first $50 (deductible) each fiscal year, plus 20 per cent of the charge over $50 deductible. However a family with two or more eligible beneficiaries receiving care pays only a maximum of $100 deductible each fiscal year, plus 20 per cent of the charges over $100. The government pays the remainder of the reasonable charges.

All other eligible beneficiaries must pay:

—For inpatient care: 25 per cent of the hospital charges and fees of professional personnel. The government pays the remainder of the reasonable charges.

—For outpatient care: The first $50 (deductible) each fiscal year, plus 25 per cent of the charges over this amount. However, a family with two or more eligible beneficiaries must pay only a maximum of $100 each fiscal year, plus 25 per cent of the charges over $100. The government pays the remainder of the seasonable charges.

Do all civilian sources of health care participate in CHAMPUS?

No. Participation in the program is entirely voluntary for the physician and all other sources of health care.

What if a beneficiary obtains care from a physician or other sources of health care who chooses not to participate in the program?

Under these circumstances, the patient would have no choice but to pay the bill in full. The patient may then submit a claim for reimbursement for the government's share of the allowable charge, attaching to the form a receipt marked "Paid" and signed by the source of care or an authorized agent. Such receipts must indicate specifically the name of the patient, diagnosis, service provided (and dates thereof) and the charges. Drug receipts must indicate the name of the patient, the prescription number, the date filled and the amount charged. In the case of insulin, no prescription number is required, but the receipt must specifically state that it is for insulin.

Where can a person get further information about CHAMPUS?

Additional details may be found in AR 40-121, "Uniformed Services Health Benefits Program," Feb. 15, 1967, and DA Pam 360-505, same subject, June 23, 1967, or may be obtained by contacting one of the following:

—The surgeon's office or the medical officer of the nearest military installation.

—A family doctor or local hospital.

—The Executive Director, Office for the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services, Office of the Surgeon General, Department of the Army, Denver, Colo. 80240.

Domestic Action for the Country

Not all challenges to the military are on the battlefield.

In the Republic of Vietnam, thousands of servicemen have learned that Civic Action rates high on the list of military operations. Closer to home, nearly everyone is aware of the militarys pioneering efforts in assuring equal rights and opportunities for servicemen.

Now, another challenging area has been singled out: Domestic Action.

This is not just a "hearts and minds" project. Domestic Action is designed to link the Defense Department's vast resources with those of other government agencies and private institutions to overcome some of the serious domestic problems which face the nation.

The chairman of DOD's Domestic Action Council Roger T. Kelley, assistant secretary of defense, sees Domestic Action as a "vital dimension of national security."

He says the military should and must be involved in programs that help fight domestic ills.

Camp Concern, for example, at the Naval Training Center, Bainbridge, Md., is now in its second year. Camp Concern is a massive summer program for underprivileged youngsters from Baltimore's poverty areas. It was initiated by the Navy and the Office of the Baltimore mayor, with cooperatioon from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and the Office of Economic Opportunity.

Camp Concern didn't grow into being just because someone picked up the batslecry "Domestic Action." It started to get closer to the people it serves: the American public—the community.

For the people of Bainbridge, the key to success was initiative and a strong sense of purpose.

That same key is available to every serviceman. It needs only to be turned to put action into Domestic Action. We hear of Civic Action in the hamlets of Vietnam. At home it is Domestic Action. We all have a major share in this country's welfare.

Learn what your post is doing in the Domestic Action area and see where you can lend a helping hand. The next step is up to you. (AFPS)

Welcome Center Helps Visitors Locate Basic Trainees

By Sgt Joe DePriest

"Is this where I come to locate my son?"

If he's taking basic training at Fort Benning's Army Training Center, yes, you've come to the right place: the Family Welcome Center at Sand Hill.

You'll get a cordial, courteous welcome and the help you require in locating the person you came to see.

"We do anything we can to help the visitors," said Sgt. James A. Collins, one of Welcome Center's four staff members.

"Often you'll see parents walk up to our door and hesitate a while; they'll look back at the Family Welcome Center sign, stare at it as if they weren't sure they were at the right place," Collins said.

"We just step out on the porch and invite them in; try to make them as comfortable as possible and see what we can do to help them."

"We extend the same courtesies to everyone," said SSgt. Irwin White, non-commissioned officer in charge.

Besides providing directions to a trainee's unit — and even issuing maps of the training area — Welcome Center personnel call the unit, determine when the person in question will be through training for the day and whether he has company, training center or post privileges.

If, for some reason such as extra duty, the trainee is unable to leave the company area, the Welcome Center assures an opportunity for a brief meeting which will not interfere with the trainee's duties.

Visitors are briefed on the location of picnic area, guest houses, service clubs, snack bars and theaters in the Training Center area and throughout the post if they have sightseeing in mind.

The Welcome Center building itself accommodates visitors as they wait for a meeting with a refreshment room, game room, television viewing and reading areas.

Another Family Welcome Center which serves the 2nd Bde. area on weekends only, is located at Harmony Church.

"It's a very interesting operation here," said White.

Weekends, holidays and training graduation days bring the greatest influx of visitors. Often unusual situations arise."

Collins recalled one lady who arrived at the Training Center to visit her son before he arrived.

She entered the Welcome Center one afternoon, announced that her son was at the Fort Benning Training Center, that he'd been here two weeks and she wanted to see him. The lady didn't know her son's unit. Repeated attempts at tracing the name yielded nothing.

"After a few hours of checking, we finally discovered the young man was still at the induction center in another city and hadn't been sworn into the Army yet," said Collins.

Gold Star Wives Experience Their Group In-Depth

WOMEN'S NEWS

Frank Lynch, professor of psychology at Jefferson State College, Birmingham, Ala., and also serving with the State of Alabama in Vocational Rehabilitation, was guest speaker at the monthly dinner meeting of the Chattahoochee Valley Chapter of Gold Star Wives of America.

Lynch presented a program that was an unusual deviation from the expected recitation of a guest speaker. Instead, Lynch conducted a sort of workshop by gathering ladies present into small groups and teaching them ways to know themselves and each other better.

After everyone got over their nervous giggles and settled down to the serious business of really exploring in depth what they thought about themselves and others in their individual study groups, it turned out to be an exciting and interesting evening.

Former Monk

Formerly of Philadelphia, Pa., where he served as a monk for five years at St. Charles Seminary, Lynch received further education in his field of psychology from St. Joseph's College, also in Philadelphia, and later at the University of Alabama at Tuscaloosa.

ALLIES

Mrs. James R. Tremayne, club president, announced that Mrs. Peter S. Knight was chairman of the Ditty Bag project. Members who helped with this project met at Mrs. Knight's home to help stuff the bags which will be sent to Vietnam and given out at Christmas time there.

Other announcements included the monthly coffee which will be held on Tuesday at 10 a.m., at the home of Mrs. Gerard M. Wynn; bowling, which would be held at Victory Lanes Monday at 7 p.m.; bridge, which was held at the home of Mrs. John W. Clayton and the Red Cross training class which will be held Oct. 7 and 8.

Widows

If there any military widows in this area who would like information about any of these activities, or who would like to join the Chattahoochee Valley Chapter of Gold Star Wives, they may contact Mrs. James R. Tremayne at 687-1276 or Mrs. Billy J. Nave at 297-2138.

Next month's meeting, tentatively scheduled for Oct. 8, will have as hostesses Mrs. Thomas J. Barrett and Mrs. Billy J. Butner.

Airborne Officers Wives Open Autumn Season

Hostess Mrs. Eugene D. Hawkins welcomed the wives of officers of the Airborne Dept. into her Stewart Avenue home for their monthly meeting.

Co-hostess Mrs. David G. Jesmer served coffee in colorful cups of red and gold to commemorate the coming autumn season.

Mrs. Lee D. Ellis, Jr., wife of the deputy director, welcomed newcomer Mrs. Harry M. Hillman.

Door prizes were won by Mrs. John L. Jett and Mrs. James C. Bagley, Jr.

Mrs. Ellis announced that the Airborne Department monthly social to be held tomorrow will be a square dance.

The ladies turned in their completed projects for the OWC sponsored Christmas Bazaar and closed the meeting by bidding a fond farewell to Mrs. James C. Bagley Jr.

TCB Ladies Set Gracious Table

The art of setting a gracious table for various occasions was demonstrated to the ladies of The Candidate Bde. at a luncheon at the Ramada Inn in Phenix City, Ala.

The program, which followed a "chef's choice" buffet luncheon, was called "Entertaining with Rozell and Larry." It featured Mrs. Rozell Fabiani, hostess of "The Rozell Show," and Larry Fair of a local gift shop.

Using five table settings as illustrative material, the ladies were shown how to coordinate colors and materials to create an appropriately decorous setting for a range of occasions.

Mrs. Fabiani had baked five pastry desserts to complement the decor of the five tables. She discussed the character, preparation and purpose of each item, all of which enhanced, in both color and shape, the floral settings of the tables. The five displays illustrated such occasions as "The Country Breakfast," "An Informal Luncheon Down South," "The Slumber Party," "The Tea" and "The Formal Table."

Fair demonstrated at each table the color coordination and appropriate use of floral settings, china, silverware and crystalware. A portion of his setting for "The Tea" featured a silver tea ensemble backed by a floral arrangment of 15 pink sensation roses, while deep-red colored crystal goblets carried out the dominant pink motif.

Both Mrs. Fabiani and Fair pointed out many instances in which one can successfully employ what is readily available in the home to create an artful and decorative table setting for almost any occasion. They stressed the point that ingenuity, not necessarily the pocket-book, is the key to noteworthy decoration.

The luncheon was sponsored by the ladies of the 10th Stu. Bn., The Candidate Bde.

Wives Hear about Dangers in Drugs and Hair Spray

By Sp4 Chet Hilburn

"People who eventually involve themselves with drugs and barbituates are unconsciously asking for help — help from someone to solve a deep-seated emotional problem."

Steve Ross, provost marshall narcotics lecturer, was guest speaker at the Training Center NCO Wives Club monthly meeting. He emphasized the danger of anyone with emotional conflict experimenting with hallucinatory drugs.

"A person who first tries a drug, narcotic or barbituate just for kicks and then continues to use them over a period of time has pushed the panic button — he has sounded an alarm for help. Unable to solve the conflicts within himself, he is seeking confidence in someone he can respect and trust."

Hangup

"The Hangup" — a film portraying the drug addict as a person insecure and unsure of himself — was shown to the NCO wives by the narcotics lecturer. The film, providing an insight into the entangled lives of three users, described their experiment with marijuana first and the path each took, leading to degeneration.

Marijuana, Ross pointed out is non-habit forming but often leads its users to a need for a stronger lift out of the real world into one of dreams and fantasy. "Marijuana can also cause chromosome damage," Ms. Ross said. The chance of a miscarriage is eight per cent greater for a user in comparison to a non-user. There is also a three per cent greater chance of having children born with mental disorders for marijuana users."

Other dangers women are likey to come in contact with, Ross said, are contained in hair sprays and finger nail polish.

"Both hair spray and nail polish contain petroleum distillate — an ingredient which can block the air passages in a small, closed-in area, a bathroom for example, and consequently cause suffocation." Ross indicated, however, that is harmless when applied in a spacious properly ventilated ar

3 Volunteer Soldiers Live in Solitude Atop Mountain

By Spt Weldon D. Jolly

QUAN LOI, Republic of Vietnam (1st Bde, IO) — Nui Ba Ra, a mountain once shrouded in legend and superstition, presently has three very real 1st Infantry Division soldiers.

PFC Danny McLain, Long Beach, N.Y.; PFC LeRoy Farley, Tulsa, Okla. and Sgt. Joe Vasquez, Chicago, all man radios atop the 2,200 foot mountain in Phouc Binh province.

The mountain top also inhabits some 26 Montagnard Regional Forces, who help in defending the mountain from enemy attack.

The three volunteers lead a solitary existence except for an occasional voice crackling from a radio below or the welcome helicopter bringing them supplies each day.

If nothing else, the view from Nui Ba Ra is magnificent. On a clear day, the entire northwestern portion of the Republic of Vietnam can be seen to the Cambodian border. In addition, the mountain's legendary counterpart, Nui Ba Den, looms off in the distance against the western horizon.

Tradition has it that a god posted his two wives on the mountains in an effort to resolve the women's differences. The wive's joint task was to watch the borders for possible foreign attack.

Nue Ba Ra, itself, is fairly inaccessible. Three-fourths of its base is covered by dense jungle vegetation and a fire support base is positioned at the base of the moutain as further insurance against any enemy force from attempting to scale the steep mountainside.

The two [illegible] connected nei[illegible] dition, but also in reality for Farley. He has a twin brother on Nui Ba Den who is doing much the same job.

"We both volunteered for this type of work, and we both got it," he said. "Even though we were both trained to do the same job, we were sent to different mountains to work."

McLain, team leader on Nui Ba Ra, said he was making the best of his time on the mountain.

"We have a lot of time to think up here," he said [illegible] of our Montagnard neighbors."

He brought out a stringed instrument made of bamboo and began plucking a simple tune.

"This is a Duate," he said, "I learned to play it by watching the Montagnards. We are all learning how to communicate with each other up here."

At dusk, Vasquez perched atop one of the mobile units used for shelter.

"I'm king of the mountain!" he exclaimed playfully.

'Buddy Program' Pairs Off Former Enemies in Field

By PFC Charles Zewe

CAMP ENARI, Republic of Vietnam (4th Div. IO) — They were enemies, now they're "buddies."

A paradox? Not quite, for that statement is the essence of a new Famous Fighting Fourth Infantry Division program in which former enemy soldiers training to be Kit Carson Scouts are befriended by American soldiers, who in turn become their "big brothers" in the field.

Named the "Scout Buddy Program," American volunteers and Kit Carson Scouts are paired off at the division's Camp Enari training detachment in the last days of the scout's two-week training cycle.

Theirs is a quickly-made kinship which will be combat tested only days after they first nervously shake hands and stumble through the pronunciations of their mutually strange sounding names.

Kit Carson Scouts are recruited from former enemy soldiers who rally to the government of the Republic of Vietnam. After a training period, they return to the field with U.S. units to aid Americans avoid potential enemy traps and to guide them to stores of equipment.

Capt. Gary Olsen, Niles, Ill., a PSYOPS officer who was instrumental in bringing the program to the Famous Fighting Fourth Division, explained that the friendship idea was conceived by the Marines in I Corps.

"We found that when a scout would go out to a unit prior to the buddy program," the captain explained, "the first contact they would have with their American comrades was in the field. He would be all by himself . . . totally new and totally alone. He wouldn't have a friend and no one else around who could speak his language."

Now American soldiers are injected into the scout's training four days from the end of the cycle. They attend classes and field training together and spend their spare time touring the base camp, taking in movies, USO shows and going to the EM Club.

"It all makes for a strong friendship which pays off when they go the field," Olsen said, "because the scout feels like a member of the unit."

Minor problems such as the language barrier and "odd" tasting C rations, which are not quite the scout's usual diet of rice and fish, are quickly overcome.

Foremost among the problems, however, is the question of acceptance by other members of the platoon or company to which the scout is assigned.

"Here's a soldier out in the field," said Captain Olsen, "and you're telling him to accept his former enemy—the guy he may actually have fought only weeks before; naturally there's going to be some built-in resentment."

'BRIDGE TRACK' STRETCHES OUT TO OTHER SIDE

'Bridge Track' Helps Vehicles Cross Stream

TAY NINH, Republic of Vietnam (25th Infantry Division) — With the rainy season fast approaching, mechanized Infantrymen of the 4th Bn. (Mechanized), 23rd Infantry, 25th Infantry Division received a new Army innovation to help their armored personnel carriers cross swollen streams.

The new device is nothing more than an armored personnel carrier with a portable bridge mounted on it. A hydraulic system was added to manipulate the folding bridge.

The simplicity of the portable adds to its effectiveness. The Tomahawks operate in rough terrain where a complicated machine might break down.

The official nomenclature of the bridge is Armored Vehicle Laumabet Bridge, but the Tomahwks have nicknamed it the "bridge track."

Sgt. Emmett Simpkins, Radcliff, Ky., "bridge track" platoon sergeant, was impressed with the new machine. "At first I had my doubts, but after we tested it I changed my mind. On our first mission, a sweep near Tay Ninh City, we had to cross the small Rach Tio (Nail) River. The 'bridge track' worked like a charm," said Simpkins.

School Weapons Department Tests Guided Missile System

By PFC Jim Doherty

An experimental surface attack guided missile system was tested here by members of the anti-tank missile committee of the Infantry School Weapons Department and engineers from the McDonnell Douglas Astronautics Company, the weapon's manufacturer.

The XM-47 "Dragon" is a lightweight anti-tank weapon that can provide the infantryman with a defensive capability against enemy armor.

It will eventually replace the 90mm recoilless rifle.

Developed under the direction of the Missile Command, Redstone Arsenal, Ala., the "Dragon" can be carried and deployed by one man.

Although it weighs only 27½ pounds, the "Dragon's range is more than twice that of the 90 mm recoilless rifle. It can penetrate any known armor. Fired from a recoilless launcher, the missile's trajectory is tracked by electronic devices. An electrical error sensor within the tracker automatically generates corrective signals to the warhead if it is not directly on target. A guidance wire connects the projectile to the tracker.

Designed mostly to provide the Infantryman with an effective defense against hostile armor, the "Dragon" can be used in an assault role against field fortifications, heavy weapons and other hard and soft point targets.

The gunner does not have to consider range or speed of target. His only job is to keep the target centered in the cross-hairs of sights.

To date the weapon has been fired 48 times without a miss.

Human factors engineers from McDonnell Douglas accompanied the test teams here. Republic of Vietnam combat veterans simulated actual combat situations with the weapon and suggested minor modifications.

Their suggestions will be considered and appropriate changes will be made at the company's Titusville, Fla., plant.

Pontiac's 70's

Surprised that Pontiac's setting the style for the umpteenth straight year? Of course not.

But you may be a bit dazzled to find out that Pontiac finally outdid Pontiac.

Take Bonneville. From the strong, new bumper grille to the standard 455 under the hood, it's a rouser.

Inside: instant limousine. So luxurious some of the traditional big boys are already screaming.

One of the nicest things we could have done for Grand Prix's luxury was to leave it alone. We did. But we popped in a 455 V-8 for you to order. (It's an old Pontiac proverb that luxury should have power.)

Enter LeMans Sport. A brand-new series in the Pontiac stable. Wait'll competition sees it pull the new 400-cubes-under-the-hood trick. We'll show you that one if you check the right box on the order form.

By now, you've spotted our '70 GTO. But maybe you haven't heard it. A sound so lough we've thrown modesty to the wind and dubbed GTO "The Humbler."

This is Pontiac '70. And we figure this is the way driving's going to be. So why wait?

Rangers Entertain Guests, Demonstrate Their Skills

Members of the 2nd Ranger Co. at the Mountain Ranger Camp near Dahlonega, Ga., recently held an open house.

After a briefing by the camp cadre, the guests took a tour of the area, including the new PX and commissary. Then buses carried the Rangers and their families to the mountaineering area of the camp for an outdoor barbecue.

On the barbecue were roast beef, ham, hot dogs and hamburgers along with plenty of potato salad and soft drinks. Although picnic tables were available, most of the people sat on the grass to eat the meal.

Demonstrations of the various Ranger skills were given during the afternoon.

First was a demonstration of hand-to-hand combat. The history of hand-to-hand from the days of the caveman to the present was given with skits.

Later, rapelling demonstrations were given from a 60-foot cliff and a helicopter. Rapelling is a method of rapidly descending a rope.

The Rangers also showed the guests how to handle large snakes, just as the Rangers are taught during their training.

Other demonstrations were given in land navigation and mountaineering.

Lieutenant Assigned to Infantry Bo ..d Gets Silver Star

The Silver Star, our nation's third highest combat decoration, was presented to 1st Lt. Richard D. Windsor of the Infantry Board during formal award ceremonies at the board's Headquarters Company Area.

Three other combat veterans of the conflict in the Republic of Vietnam and members of the Infantry materiel test board were honored along with Windsor when they were awarded the Bronze Star Medal, the Air Medal and the Army Commendation Medal.

Recipients of the medals in order were Maj. John D. Jackson, Sgt. Robert Watson and SFC Kenneth L. Davidson.

The combat veterans were decorated by Col. Robert A. Robbins, deputy president of the board.

Windsor, a test officer with the Supporting Weapons Test Division, earned his Silver Star as the result of action he encountered while leading his platoon on a combat assault against the armed enemy.

In advancing on a hill position near Tien Phuoc last March, the platoon was suddenly pinned down by intense enemy fire. Assessing the situation, Windsor directed his men in an attempt to flank the enemy.

While in this maneuver, he noted that a co-attacking platoon was suffering heavy casualties, including the platoon leader. Windsor maneuvered his men to reinforce the beleaguered unit and draw the enemy fire from the wounded men.

With complete disregard for his personal safety, the young lieutenant stood up in the face of the enemy barrage to relieve pressure on his fallen comrades lying in the open. Despite the enemy fire impacting all around him, Windsor ran toward the hostile position throwing hand and smoke grenades to enable the casualties to be evacuated.

Although wounded by enemy fire, Windsor refused to be treated until everyone else was removed from danger.

At the time of the action which resulted in his decoration, Windsor was serving as a platoon leader in Co. A, 2nd Bn., 1st Infantry, 196th Infantry Bde. A native of St Louis, Mo., he entered the Army in March, 1967 and was commissioned through OCS at Fort Benning in February, 1968.

Jackson, plans and data officer in the Combat Conditions Test Division of the Infantry materiel test board, distinguished himself by meritorious service while serving as military liaison and planning specialist to the United States Embassy Mission Warden Office, Republic of Vietnam.

He was responsible for maintaining close liaison with the highest level of government and civilian agencies in the combat theater. He was particularly commended for his thoroughness and initiative in the administrative details under the stress of continual area warfare.

Watson, a test NCO with the Field Equipment Test Division, was decorated with the Air Medal for meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight on an airborne assault mission Dec. 19, 1968. He was serving as a gunner with Co. D, 1st Bn., Airborne, 506th Infantry.

The Army Commendation Medal was awarded to Davidson for his heroic action on Feb. 23, 1969, while serving as Operations Advisor, Mobile Advisory Team 39C, Military Assistance Command. He operated an outpost radio during a heavy enemy attack and guided aerial support into the besieged area, thus inflicting great damage upon the striking force.

Realizing there were numerous wounded in the action, he called for an evacuation aircraft and assisted in carrying the wounded to the landing zone. He was also cited for his action in saving lives during the evacuation by performing first aid including external heart massage on one casualty.

SFC BURROUGHS CUTS TREE DOWN TO SIZE

Airborne Instructor Runs Tree Surgeon Business

By Sp4 Ron Johnson

SFC Allen V. Burroughs, 41st Co., 4th Stu. Bn., TSB, hopes that his two professions won't clash mid-air. He is not only an airborne instructor, but a tree surgeon.

Actually, Burroughs began preparing for his work as a tree surgeon before he began his 21-year Army career. He began cutting timber as a boy in his hometown of Alapaha, Ga. He gained his first experiences with trees while logging and doing pulp wood work.

Then military tours and training interrupted his other interest. He toured Korea then came to Fort Benning in 1952. He began working for the airborne department and stayed there in various capacities except for 40 months in Alaska and a tour in Vietnam in 1967.

Burroughs resumed his work with trees in 1962 when he was employed with a local tree service firm. While there, he combined his knowledge of logging with the more delicate operations of planting, feeding and shaping trees.

In 1966 the sergeant got insurance and a loan to purchase [illegible] since built up the business to the point where he employs eleven men and makes more money from tree work than he does from his regular salary.

The biggest part of his business is trimming and removing trees although he also shapes, plants, braces and generally doctors trees. He says that spring is the best season of the year because, "that seems to be the time when people want to get outside and shape things up."

His biggest problem is that most of the work is in residential areas where there is little room to fall trees.

Burroughs will retire this January with over 21 years service. He has had a distinguished military career and has been awarded the Silver Star Medal, Bronze Star Medal, and Purple Heart among other medals.

In January Burroughs will begin to expand his new career. First, he wants to get licenses to work all over the states of Georgia and Alabama.

Then he plans to go into logging and pulp as well as tree surgery.

The sergeant plans to reside in Columbus with his wife Betty and their three children.

Fund Handles $2 Million For Recreation, Morale

By PFC Lee Myers

The Central Post Fund at Fort Benning handles money — more than $2 million in Fiscal year (FY) 1969 alone.

It receives money from the profits of operation of motion picture theatres and post exchanges. It disburses that money to unit funds and to special projects. And it accounts for those funds to the central post fund council.

During FY 1969 the Central Post Fund here disbursed $2,062,157 for the morale, welfare and recreation of the serviceman and his family at Fort Benning.

The Central Post Fund does not receive cash directly from the theatres and exchsages here at Fort Benning. The Army and Air Force Motion Picture Service and Exchanges send their profits to Washington where the Army's portion is placed in the Army Central Welfare Fund.

From the Central Welfare Fund, every month, $2.05 for each serviceman is sent out to all the Army commands.

The Third U. S. Army Welfare Fund receives from the Army Central Welfare Fund this $2.05 for each serviceman under its command. The Third Army Welfare Fund retains $1 and distributes the remainder, $1.05, to each installation within the Third Army.

Thus, Fort Benning's Central Post Fund receives $1.05 each month for every soldier stationed here.

The Central Post Fund retains 55 cents out of that $1.05 and distributes 50 cents per man to unit funds on the company level to be used for morale, welfare and recreation.

So, profits from theatres are exchanges sent to Washington are returned to be spent on three levels: 1) by the Third Army; 2) by Fort Benning; and 3) by each company.

At the company level, the purpose of the unit fund is to enable the unit fund custodian, usually the company commander, to get articles or services not available from appropriated funds, which contribute to the well-being of his troops.

The unit fund is spent by the unit fund council which is made up of the unit fund custodian and at least two enlisted men (E-4 or higher) from the company.

The unit fund council spends its money so that "equitable benefits accrue to all military personnel of the unit." Mainly, the unit fund money is spent on the company's dayroom activities and on company parties.

At the installation level, the Fort Benning Central Post Fund uses the 55 cents per month per soldier for post-wide projects. With this money, the fund supports all Fort Benning service clubs, libraries, arts and crafts shops, gyms, sports fields and bowling lanes — as well as the veterinarian clinic, Destin Recreation Camp, Sand Hill golf course and the Youth Activities Center.

The installation level funds are administered by the Central Post Fund Council which includes the deputy post commander; director of personnel; director of logistics; deputy commanding officer, Training Center; commanding officer, 10th Aviation Group; chaplain, Infantry Center; post engineer; commanding officer, 197th Infantry Bde.; commanding officer The Student Bde.; commanding officer, The Candidate Bde.; Special Services officer; commanding officer, Infantry Center Troop Command and the custodian of the Central Post Fund.

'Fun and Games' Mark 'Birthday'

By Mary R. Braswell

Rarely does a basic trainee's schedule call for "fun and games." But that was the order of the day at the Training Center's 2nd Bde.

The occasion was the observance of the Training Center's 4th Anniversary, and trainees, drill sergeants and officers alike competed with and against each other in relays and races at Stroup Field in Harmony Church.

The 9th Bn. commanded by Lt. Col. William G. Carter, won two events — the tug-of-war and 150-yard man carry — to win the Brigade Commander's Organization Day Trophy. The presentation was made by Col. Francisco J. Ramos, 2nd Bde. commander.

First place in the remaining events was split with 6th Bn. taking the drill sergeants one-mile relay, 7th Bn. winning the cake - baking contest and 8th Bn. scoring first in the training officers one-mile relay.

In the 1st Bde. at Sand Hill an awards ceremony was conducted during a 4th Bn. NCO review. SFC Ernest Lucas, Co. D, 4th Bn., 1st Bde., was awarded the Bronze Star and Sgt. Yamon J. Fort, Co. C, 4th Bn., 1st Bde., was given a Certificate of Appreciation.

After the review and ceremonies, trainees and guests toured an exhibition that included a UH-1 helicopter, various armored vehicles and self-propelled artillery.

Second Bde. activities began with the presentation of the brigade history to the trainees at reveille. After breakfast, company competition was conducted throughout the battalions.

Horseshoe and basketball games were going on in one area while in another there were table tennis and pool competition, football throw, spoon race and softball throw.

Sixth Bn., commanded by Lt. Col. Earl C. McCrary, engaged in four events — reveille race with trays of ice for the losers, three legged race, frog jump relay and a tug-of-war with losers sliding into a mud hole. Co. D took first place in three events and was announced the overall winner for 6th Bn.

The varied field events ended at noon, with guests invited to eat in unit mess halls.

By Sp4 Lynette Herseim

The commemoration day of the second anniversary of the establishment of the Non-commissioned Officer Candidate Course (NCOC) was held in the area of the 7th Stu. Bn., the Candidate Bde. (TCB).

An organization day luncheon was hosted by the 72nd Co. in their mess hall. The 72nd Co. was the first NCOC company.

Honored guests were Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the Infantry School; Col. Robert M. Piper, TCB commanding officer; Lt. Col. Edward C. Radcliff, TCB deputy commanding officer; Lt. Col. Charles J. Mendoza, 5th Bn. commander; Lt. Col. Grady W. Williams, 6th Bn. commander; Lt. Col. Ralph J. Huber, 8th Bn. commander; Lt. Col. Robert W. Muller, 9th Bn. commander, and Lt. Col. William T. McElrath, 10th Bn. commander.

Also in attendance were Command Sgts. Maj. Charles H. Fletcher, post sergeant major; Bob L. Williams, Infantry School sergeant major; James Scott, TCB sergeant major, and the sergeants major assigned to TCB.

Lt. Col. Roddy L. Smith, 7th Bn. commanding officer and the Organization Day Host, gave a brief history of the NCOC program dealing with the concept and the breakdown of the battalions. After the briefing General Berry and Colonel Piper were invited to light the candles on the ceremonial cake. The cake was designed with an NCOC crest which had "Second Anniversary" and two candles in the center.

Capt. Phillip Hannah, commanding officer of 72nd Co., along with 1st Sgt. Richard W. Mathews, cut the cake with a sabre and presented a piece of cake to the honored guests.

As a result of the Republic of Vietnam situation and the increasing need for Infantry junior non-commissioned officers, the Army established the Infantry Noncommissioned Officer Candidate Program on Aug. 11, 1967.

The mission of this new program was to train selected enlisted personnel to become qualified fire team and rifle squad leaders.

The 7th Stu. Bn. was selected to organize the first NCOC companies and on Sept. 2, 1967, was redesignated the 7th Stu. Bn. (NCOC) with seven companies.

The very first noncommissioned officer candidate class of 200 students was assigned to 72nd Co. which officially opened on Sept. 5, 1967, and graduated 116 noncommissioned officers on Nov. 25, 1967.

Since that time more than 6,000 graduates have joined the noncommissioned officer ranks from the 7th Stu. Bn.

The Organizational Day athletic events took place following the luncheon. These included Round Robin volleyball and basketball tournaments, boxing, tug-o-war, racing and single competition contests.

A severe case of upper respiratory infection (URI) nearly prevented a hospitalized officer candidate from receiving his commission on time.

However, Walter W. Waisath Jr., Tacoma, Wash., attired in the blue pajamas and robe traditionally worn by the patients in military hospitals, was administered the oath of his commission in the URI Ward of Martin Army Hospital.

His commission was only one day behind the graduation of the rest of his classmates from the 55th (OC) Co., 5th Stu. Bn., The Candidate Bde.

Airborne General, Lieutenant Meet

By Marian Jones

Two Airborne officers got together at a recent meeting of former members of the 101st Airborne Division.

One of them entered the Army 30 years before the other was born.

The elder of the two, Brig. Gen. (ret.) S.L.A. Marshall, who entered the U. S. Army in 1917, is one of the country's leading military historians. He was at the post recently to speak to Infantry School advanced course students.

During the afternoon he paid a visit to a meeting of former members of the 101st Airborne Division at the post's parachute officers lounge.

Although he is qualified to wear the patch of many combat organizations, General Marshall that day had elected to wear the "Screaming Eagle" patch.

Also present at the meeting was 2nd Lt. Mitchell M. Zais, son of Lt. Gen. Melvin Zais, XIV Corps commander in the Republic of Vietnam. Zais, a 1969 graduate of the U. S. Military Academy, had just two days prior made his first military jump.

He remembered meeting the famous general several years before. After earning his jump wings, Zais plans to complete Ranger training at the Infantry School.

Parents Accept Medals Posthumously for PFC

By Marian Jones

The Bronze Star Medal with "V" device for heroism and the Purple Heart were awarded posthumously to PFC James H. Rehberg in ceremonies here.

Accepting the medals were his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Rehberg of Lake City, Fla. They were accompanied at the ceremony by their daughter, Chavis, and by PFC Rehberg's close friend, Bob O'Quinn.

Rehberg died of wounds received April 28 in the Republic of Vietnam.

While Rehberg, as assistant gunner of a 105 millimeter howitzer, was engaged in a routine fire mission, approximately 150 North Vietnamese supported by mortars, machine guns and rocket-propelled grenade, launched a massive ground attack.

Quickly directing the 105 at the assaulting enemy, he worked to place beehive and high explosive rounds into the enemy ranks and frequently exposed himself to the hostile barrage to obtain resupplies of ammunition.

Soon, a rocket propelled grenade hit his position causing several casualties and setting the position on fire.

Although painfully injured, he helped evacuate his stricken comrades to a nearby howitzer. As he was using his rifle to provide covering fire for the more seriously wounded, he was killed by an exploding enemy stachel charge.

Prior to his death, he was awarded the National Defense Service Medal, the Vietnam Service Medal, Vietnam Campaign Ribbon and the Sharpshooter Badge with automatic rifle and rifle bars.

South Vietnam's Boy Scouts Try To Instill Citizenship

By PFC Paul Miller

"We expect a little bit of enemy activity around An Khe this weekend, so we're having to move the Camporee site to Tuy Noa."

The scene is a Boy Scout meeting in Quinhon, South Vietnam. The Scoutmaster, a South Vietnamese, has just informed his boys, rather nonchalantly, that the Camporee that [illegible] scheduled to have in the morning.

[illegible] Americans in America [illegible] other [illegible] weekend [illegible] Vietnam [illegible] Camporee [illegible] Vietnamese [illegible] boys.

"The objective in the South Vietnamese program is basically the same as that of the American, British and French programs," he said.

"We try to instill within the boys the qualities of citizenship and character . . . and that of duty to God and Country."

No Firearms

Operating scout troops in a war zone can keep a scout leader on his toes.

Walker said that before planning a hike or any kind of outdoor activity, the area first had to be checked out thoroughly by intelligence agents. According to the colonel, scout leaders were not permitted to carry firearms of any kind on their outings.

"There was one instance," he noted, "where I was supposed to conduct Woodbadge training among some of the adult leaders, but we had to cancel it due to enemy activity in the area."

Lack of Adults

The colonel faced many of the same problems in Vietnam that are experienced by scout executives in the United States. "Our biggest problem," he said, "was the lack of adult male leadership."

Walker said that most of the men are concerned with the war effort and are on the go too much to take on a scoutmaster's position. American servicemen do not assume direct positions of leadership within the South Vietnamese Scouting Program. They merely act as advisors.

"The language barrier that existed between me and my leaders did not make my job any easier," reflected the veteran scouter. "I had an interpreter with me most of the time, and he quite often had to be as well up on the subject as I was." The colonel said that there was always the worry that the wrong emphasis might be placed on the wrong words, causing his message to be misconstrued.

American Customs

"Often we'd employ the aid of American servicemen, who have had some experience with Scouting," he continued. "These men would work, as I did, with the Vietnamese leaders." The Colonel went on to say that these Americans had to be careful not to let American customs and traditions seep into the Vietnamese program.

"There was one instance," he said, "where an American advisor had led his troop in an Indian War dance." While the Indians are part of the American heritage, they are not part of the Vietnamese heritage, the colonel pointed out.

While in Vietnam, Walker served with the Quinhon Support Command of the 1st Logistical Command. It was his unit that kept the Vietnamese Boy Scouts in supplies. "Whenever they received any kind of equipment from us, we tried to make them feel that it wasn't a gift . . . as if they had earned it in some way."

Walker, a 29-year veteran of Scouting, is currently serving as District Commissioner of the Fort Benning District, Chattahoochee Council.

According to the colonel, the problems here are not much different from those problems back at Quinhon. Still he is confronted with that age-old question that all Scouters face, "Where's all of the adult male leadership going to come from?"

Three Trainees Spoof Their Drill Sergeant

"If you see a snake," said the drill sergeant "salute and go around it."

The "drill sergeant" was Pvt. Kenneth Hildebrand, Co. E., 4th Bn., 1st Bde., doing impressions at a trainee talent show held at the Sand Hill Service Club, as part of Training Center Organization Day activities.

It was largely a 4th Battalion show, as about 100 trainees and their relatives heard Pvt. John Seay, Co. A, play an accordian solo and accompany Pvt. Harry Perkins, Co. E, who sang "Tonight."

The mood of the program changed rapidly from the James Brown-like singing of emcee Pvt. Anthony Crews, Co. B., 5th Bn., 1st Bde., to the pensive mood of folk singing Privates Richard Yanda and Dean Sproul, both of Co. E, to a drill sergeant spoof by Privates Tom Ingraham, Gold Lawrence and Woodie Moses, all of Co. D.

Pvt. Robert Fejes, accompanied on the guitar by Pvt. Edward Graham, sang "Maria." Both are from Co. D.

Members of the rock band which accompanied emcee Crews were Pvt. Don Alexander, drummer, Special Training Company, and Privates Steve Harmon, Dwight Eaton and Hanry Edmonds, guitar players from Co. E, 10th Bn., 1st Bde.

Shortening Plays Butter Cream At Training Center Cake Bake

By Sp5 Joe DePriest

"You can have a beautiful cake, but if it doesn't have the taste — a good one—then you don't have anything."

A cake-maker was speaking: Sp5 Larry Stewart whose ornamental, butter-cream icing creation not only had the looks, but the taste. He had just landed second place in the Training Center (ATC) baking contest, part of 4th Organization Day observance last week.

Stewart, from Co. D, 5th Bn., 1st Bde., described himself as a self-made baker.

"I observed," he said, "And every chance I got, I'd scribble down some notes while I watched bakers at work. I've picked up a few trade secrets along the way; I don't tell any of them, though."

First place winner, Sp6 Robert Kenoyer of Co. D, 7th Bn., 2nd Bde., got his cake making experience through more formal channels. He learned the basics at a pastry and decorating school held at Ft. Mead, Md.

Hard Work

All the contest entries boasted their share of imaginatin and hard work.

There were Third Army and Training Center emblems worked out in colorful icing, a rifle range scene; a bouquet of roses, a drill sergeant's campaign hat and much more. All in the finest detail. All good enough to eat.

Mess sergeants and cooks admired each others work ("There's a cook down at the 1st Brigade with a secret icing recipe — he won't talk about it") and tried to answer occasional questions from visitors.

SFC Donald Dove, mess steward for Hq. and Hq. Co., was expounding on the virtues on shortening over butter cream icing. Finally he concluded, "You just can't explain how the cake is made; you have to work with it; see it."

Step Aside

One mess assistant was asked if he had made the cake by which he was posted. "Nope. The mess sergeant made it."

Had the assistant helped?

"I had a little to do with it. I stayed out of his way."

PTA Will Hear General Talbott

Members of the Fort Benning Parent-Teacher Association will hear Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott, post commanding general, speak during the organization's first business meeting Sept. 30.

The meeting will start at 8 p.m. in Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall and will feature music by the 29ist Army Band, and a color ceremony by Girl Scout Cadette Troop 193.

The PTA here is seeking to surpass the 2,104-member total attained in the 1968-69 school year and will locate tables in the main lobby where room mothers from the various schools will sell memberships to those who have not yet joined.

In addition to the speech by General Talbott, the initial program of the 1969-70 school year will include a business meeting conducted by Col. George E. Ritter, PTA president, and introduction of school administrators by Dr. Joseph Confortl, superintendent of schools.

Chaplain (Col.) Holland, Hope, post chaplain, will lead the invocation.

Other PTA programs planned for the coming year include: On Nov. 13, an open house at all schools featuring "American Education Week"; on Jan. 27, an address on "Child Growth and Development" by Dr. Harold J. McNally, University of Wisconsin; on April 14, a curriculum fair with classroom exhibits at all schools; and on May 12, installation of officers.

Colonel Ritter said all parents of children enrolled in Fort Benning schools are encouraged to join the PTA and may obtain additional information from the administrative officers at each of the schools or from their children's teachers.

Had a 195 Average for the Tournment

Fort Benning Soldier Captures Georgia State Bowling Title

By PFC Paul Miller

Spt James M. (Mike) Ladd, of Des Moines, Iowa, a programming specialist in the office of data systems, Infantry School, sat relaxed behind his desk.

His left hand carefully thumbed the newspaper articles lying on the desk blotter and his mind seemed to still be with the tournament — the Georgia State All Star Bowling Tournament—that he won with a total pin fall of 4,681.

"I never thought I'd catch him," said Ladd, describing his efforts to defeat Jim Maxey of Atlanta, who led in the finals by as many as 133 points.

"I was so far back at the start that I never expected to take him."

Maxey rolled a 4683 total. He has held the state's scratch all-events title in the previous years.

Ladd was able to overcome Maxey in the final five game series, by rolling eight consecutive strikes in the second game for 253. He later opened the third game with six strikes to go ahead of the Atlantan. He had a 195 average for the 24-game tournament.

"This was the first time I've bowled in adult leagues," explained Ladd. "Before, I had always bowled in junior and student competition."

Ladd was seleed along with five other top bowlers in the Columbus area to represent the city in the state contest. The field consisted of 54 bowlers from throughout the state.

Ladd began bowling at the age of 13 in Des Moines, Iowa. During college he was a familiar sight on the alleys as a member of the University of Illinois bowling team.

When asked whether he considered turning professional after his Army service, the husky Iowan replied, "No, not at all. I don't really think I'm good enough for that."

Ladd has no plans to enter any major tournaments at present. "I plan to keep myself active in the local competition," he said.

The Georgia State All Star Bowling Tournament was just inaugurated this year and will continue as an annual event.

The new champ hopes that surrounding states will take up the idea so that a district contest can be established.

There were two changes in the standings of the Rod and Gun Club Fishing Derby last week. SSgt. (ret.) Edward Saunders now leads the catfish contest with a three-pound nine-ounce entry he caught at King's Pond Sept. 8.

He was using meal worms. SSgt. James Stevenson, 3rd Ranger Co. has the best bream so far this month with the one-pound-four-ounce entry he caught at Patterson Pond Sept. 13. CWO Jay Cochran, who was leading the bass contest last week with a six-pound entry brought a seven-pound three ounce lunker into Rod and Gun Club Spet. 8.

Hunters in Stewart, Quitman and Randolph Counties must be alert for Fort Benning soldiers training in these areas off the military reservation.

Military uniforms are of subdued color and difficult to recognize in woods and underbrush.

Hunters must be absolutely certain of their targets. They must not fire until they have positively identified their target and have made sure no one is in their line of fire.

That the dove has become the most popular game bird sought by hunters in the United States comes as no surprise to most outdoorsmen. They've driven miles, hidden for hours in any cover they could find, dodged crowds of hunters, burned up cases of ammunition, hit some doves and missed many more.

When its all over, whether they limited out or barely got enough to make it worth while to heat the pot, the dove hunter is ready to go again when someone says they have a good dove field staked out.

The dove being a migratory bird comes under the control of the U.S. Bureau of Sports Fisheries and Wildlife. The bureau along with the various State Sport Fisheries and Wildlife Agencies are constantly studying the dove population to determine methods for propagation of the species. This year the southeastern states have been authorized to increase the bag limit from 12 to 18 to determine the effect hunting has on the dove population. According to reports the raising of the limit has had little effect, at least locally. The local doves have not yet flocked and the migratory doves have not yet arrived in the area. As a matter of fact on opening day there seemed to be more hunters than there were doves. This situation should improve as it gets cooler up north and the doves begin the Southern migration and local doves complete their late hatch.

One of the most interesting and misunderstood wild creatures to be found in Georgia and Alabama is the Bobcat. The bobcat or wildcat as it is sometimes called gets it name from the short, stubby tail which averages from four to six inches. The average size of one of these animals is three feet in length and about two feet high at the shoulder. A large bobcat will weight 20 pounds with the exceptional specimens reaching 40 pounds. Bobcats are shy and wary creatures seldom seen by man. This is probably the main reason he is often considered a predator. The fact is that the bobcat performs a very useful function in keeping the wild creatures of nature in balance. His primary diet is cotton rats and other small rodents, while helping to prevent the overpopulation of rabbits and the outbreak of disease.

The bobcat is not much of a traveler. He will usually stay in an area of two to three miles and sometimes an area even smaller when food is plentiful.

The bobcat provides good sport for hunters with dogs and predator callers also have fine sport with the bobcat.

Bobcats have been completely wiped out in many midwestern states because residents in these areas feared the bobcat as a predator of their chickens. Fortunately sufficient amounts of wild land are still found in Georgia and Alabama today to support bobcats and many other species of wildlife. Each exists without causing damage to the other.

MTU Shooter Holds Three Top Badges

WASHINGTON (ANF) — One of the Army's "biggest guns" is Sgt. Maj. William B. Blankenship, head coach of the pistol team at the Army Marksmanship Training Unit.

Blankenship is a six-time National pistol champion, and is the only man in the Army on active duty who holds the three highest shooting awards given by the United States.

He has been awarded the Distinguished Pistol Badge, the Distinguished Rifle Badge and the International Distinguished Shooting Badge.

Blankenship, who has been shooting competitively since 1953, is also a champion on the international shooting circuit. He won the World Center Fire Championship at Weisbaden, West Germany, in 1958 and shot his way to gold medals in the 1967 Pan-American Games in Winnepeg, Canada.

In addition to his shooting and coaching duties, Blankenship is also an Army instructor. He conducts clinics for shooting clubs and Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC) units throughout the U.S.

CISM Draws Best Sportsmen From Forty Nations

WASHINGTON (ANF) — tions. Blend in their Take sportsmen of the knowledge of physical Armed Forces of 40 na- training and conditioning in addition to sports for the sake of pure competition.

Mix in a spirit of comradeship with the diplomacy of good will ambassadors.

Stir until only the "cream of the crop" prevails, and you have the basic ingredients for the Conseil International Du Sport Militarie (CISM).

Organized only 21 years ago, CISM has come of age and grown into the ultimate of the military sports world.

CISM sports receive high diplomatic recognition throughout the world with a number of athletic events personally hosted by heads of state.

Many sports championships are sponsored by CISM, which has been recognized by the Department of Defense as being on a par for U. S. military participation with the Olympics and Pan-American Games.

Seen By Millions

Since its inception, CISM has sponsored more than 325 international championships, ranging from fencing to marathons, for more than 36,000 military athletes.

More than five million spectators, from Europe to North and South America and all the way to Pakistan and South Korea, have cheered their individual fighting men to victory in CISM competition.

CISM team sports cover basketball, soccer, water polo, volleyball and a new sport, orienteering (finding a way through unfamiliar countryside, using only a map and compass, in a given time period). Individual competition is sponsored in fencing, swimming and diving, shooting, track and field, wrestling, boxing, parachuting, judo, modern pentathlon and cross-country running.

The CISM Military Pentathlon, primarily for ground troops, consists of shooting, an obstacle race, grenade throwing, combat swimming and an eight-kilometer (five-mile) cross-country race. This grueling competition is designed to test the combat readiness of a squad.

The Emblem

Symbolic of the structure and goals of CISM is its official emblem. This red, blue, gold and silver crest consists of a globe (portraying CISM's international nature), a sword (for its military aspect) and a laurel wreath (eternal symbol of athletic prowess).

Surrounding the wreath are five linked red rings representing the five points in a maxim of French writer Jean Giraudoux, himself a famous military athlete. This maxim, officially adopted by CISM, is "Sport means peace; Sport is the opposite of war; Sport is a curse for war; Sport is international; Sport brings nations together."

Beginning with five character member nations in 1948 (France, Belgium, Denmark, the Netherlands and Luxembourg), CISM has grown in size and stature to its present 40 members. An additional 22 nations have expressed interest in CISM membership.

Although Iron Curtain countries are not CISM members, many of them are invited to participate in sports competition throughout the world.

Leads in Research

As CISM grew over the years its scope of activities also increased. In addition to sports championships, CISM has taken the lead in world research in physical fitness and athletic training.

The CISM Academy, located in Brussels, Belgium has conducted important research on diet, medical control of athletes, physiology, philosophy, psychology of sports, coaching, training and physical conditioning. Its library is one of the world's largest athletic archives.

As a result of its research, CISM has been instrumental in gaining world - wide recognition of the use of bead protectors for boxers.

Through its annual sports competitions, clinics, research and manual assistance programs, CISM helps bridge the language and cultural barriers that separate men.

It brings together the military men of the Free World on the friendly field of sport and promotes mutual understanding and respect among its 40-member nations.

THE FORUM THE FORUM

By Bob Merkin

The incredible (adj., Not credible; unbelievable; seeming too unusual or improbable to be possible.) performance of the New York Mets will be greeted by most baseball fans, of course, with wild enthusiasm in the eternal quest for an underdog who can slay the dragons with one rabid munch. I can't honestly say that I don't feel this enthusiasm myself, but I also have something of the instinct which makes parents cherish their slightly flawed children, and because of this, I must declare that I also miss the Old Mets.

The tons of printer's ink that have been used on the Mets in recent weeks have included several touching histories of that very separate team of seasons past. For a few of those seasons I found myself in New York, and it is my sociological theory that the Old Mets had a great deal to do with improving living conditions in that sinking Metropolis by virtue of their unique approach to the ancient and honorable game of baseball.

Even the most aggressive, Neanderthal taxicab drivers developed a wandering, hypnotic glaze to their eyes when their dials were turned to a Mets game, and surely more than one little old lady trying to cross Third Avenue at 42nd Street owe their lives to the stupefying effect a radio broadcast of the Mets' outfield behavior had on the Yellow Cab Huns.

Social workers were simply forced to look at problems of harrassed apartment dwellers with a more understanding outlook during the Golden Bat Tarnished years of the Mets. The Mets caused so much sympathy from the Staten Island Ferry to Washington Heights that some of it simply had to spill over into every day life.

Everything about the Mets was geared to losing in those days. It was standing policy to show feature length films on an outfield screen if the games were rained out so the fans would have something to do to occupy their time and not wander, lonely and forlorn, through the streets of Queens.

But of all the wonderful memories of the Mets, who held the banner higher (lower?) than Marvelous Marv Throneberry?

Time Magazine reminded me that during Marv's reign, New York kids wore sweatshirts that said "Vram," which of course was their hero's name spelled backwards. He was so bad that people cheered. And of all the stories I've heard about the man with the perpetual sheepish blush, none so touched me as a piece written by columnist Jimmy Breslin, recounting that Black Day when — horror of horrors — the New York Mets let poor Marv go.

After eighteen paragraphs delineating Marv's more inflamous blunders, some of which will go down in history chiselled in some permanent form of Jello, Breslin described the miserable moment itself. Marv walked through the reception room toward the owner's office to get the bad word, and committed his last blunder on the Mets' payroll. He couldn't open the door to the owner's office, and stood there fumbling with the door knob for twenty seconds. Finally Manager Gil Hodges leaned over and opened the door for Marvelous Marv.

So with a turn of the knob, Hodges opened a veritable Pandora's box of fearsome victory. The New York Mets are winners now, and in my humble opinion, New York City will be the poorer for it.

Sic Transit Gloria Mundi, which means that when Marv, who was always a little sick, took the Transit home from Shea Stadium, on Monday a chorus sang a hymn titled "Gloria."

Radio Student Won Junior World Wrestling Championship

Radios, rodeos, and wrestling are the three "r's" in the life of Pvt. Daniel E. Warren. Right now, his interests are focused on radios. He is assigned to Co. H, ISB, TSB, where he is taking the Field Radio Mechanics Course.

He had plenty of opportunity to ride in rodeos back home in Prineville, Ore. Central Oregon is cattle country and the Pendleton Round-up held there each year is one of the biggest rodeos in the country.

Compared to wrestling though, the first two "R's" are hobbies. At wrestling, Warren is a champ. In 1967 at the State Wrestling championships, he took third place in high school style, second place in free style and first place in greco-roman style.

The same year he won first place at the western division of the Junior World Championship in San Louis Obispo, Calif. Then on the national finals of the championship in Chicago.

An elbow broken in practice prevented him from attending the world championships.

He began wrestling in the 7th grade and has been in 500 matches since then. He still holds the high school records for pins and wins. At the state championships, his record was 29 matches, 24 pins and 28 wins. After high school, he was offered scholarships to a dozen different colleges.

He came in the Army last April, and took basic training at Ft. Fort Lewis, Wash. He's at Fort Benning for his advanced individual training. Then he's going to try to get on the Army wrestling team.

TSB Begins League Play

The Student Bde. Flag Football League began its season this week with each team playing two games. The schedule has been arranged so that each team plays on Tuesday and Thursday.

Teams in the league include the 3rd Ranger Co., HHC, TSB, Co. A, Co. B, Co. C and Co. H from ISB, 41st Co., and Martin Army Hospital. The top two teams will enter the post playoffs Nov. 17.

COMPUTER CORNER ON SPORTS

By Bud Goode

Remember the line ". . . because of the nail the shoe was lost . . . because of the shoe the horse was lost . . . and because of the horse the war was lost."

In the National League West there are five contenders. Four of them are going to lose the race.

What are the contenders' weaknesses — the one 'horseshoe nail' which will cost them their pennant?

For Cincinnati and Atlanta it is Clutch Pitching. The Reds are allowing 33.1 per cent of all opponent base runners to score, weakest in the league. Atlanta allows 32.6 per cent of opposition base runners to come home. Only Cincy is weaker.

Compare the Red's poor 33.1 per cent Clutch Pitching figure with the other contenders — Los Angeles (27.7 per cent), San Francisco (29.1 per cent), and Houston (29.8 per cent). The Reds and Braves are more than 5 per cent weaker than the other contenders.

You can't win a pennant with pitchers who are last in line.

The horseshoe nail for the Dodgers, San Francisco and Houston is the lack of power hitting. Compnter Corner poured the season statistics into our Univac sports analyzer to measure the percentage of hits which go for extra bases. These weighted figures for the contenders put Cincinnati on top with 12.5 per cent; San Francisco, 9.5 per cent; Atlanta, 9.4 per cent; Houston, 8.3 per cent; and Los Anetes, 8.3 per cent.

Only St. Louis (8.2 per cent and San Diego (7.6 per cent) are weaker than L.A.

Using Computer Corner's figures, Atlanta and Cincinnati are scratched from contention in the National League West, leaving the field to San Francisc, Los Angeles and Houston. The Dodgers have the edge.

Brickhouse Wins Inaugural Talladega 500

By PFC Lee Myers

TALLADEGA, Ala. — Richard Brickhouse, a farm boy now racing Grand National stock cars, said, "I figured this was a golden opportunity for me to win a race."

He figured and he won.

But the glory of the inaugural Talladega 500-mile race was tarnished — 30 of NASCAR's top drivers trailered their cars and drove away Saturday evening before the race. They claimed the available tires were unsafe at the speeds their cars were capable of running on the new speedway.

The race itself had at least 34 lead changes as two of the new Dodge Daytonas, driven by Brickhouse and Bobby Isaac, three Dodge Chargers, driven by Jim Vandiver, Ramo Stott and Dr. Don Tarr, raced Tiny Lund in a Ford.

After each pit stop for tires, all of the pit crews were careful to signal their driver how badly the tires were blistering.

Brickhouse, when he was stretching his lead three laps from the finish, turned laps at 195-196 m.p.h. but the race average was only 153.778 m.p.h. as the leaders pitted often for new tires.

Isaac, the one factory-backed driver in the race, stopped 10 times to take on 21 tires during the first 150 laps of the 188 lap race. His last stop for tires put him a lap behind the leaders and he was unable to make up the distance.

Tiny Lund blew his engine and Tarr lost his cooling water.

The finishing order was Brickhouse, Vandiver, Stott and Isaac.

A total of 51 entries drove in CHAVAGA Region of the Sports Car Club of America's championship slalom run Sunday at the James Blanchard Industrial Park on Victory Drive.

Allen Shimell of the Atlanta region, driving a 1967 Sprite, won the time of day trophy and a racing jacket with a time of 1.39.667.

Second fastest was Philip Carrin, driving a fuel-injected 327 Corvette with a time of 1.41.845.

Other class winners were: class 2, Carl Starkes; class 4, Tom-W.hipple; class 5, Don Heath; class 6, John Burns; class 7, George Beckerman, and modified, Hamlin Pakrodooni.

Special trophies, awarded to the fastest BMW and fastest Porsche courtesy of a local foreign car dealer, were won by John Burns and Bill Harris, both of Atlanta.

Pony League Coach Schedules Games With Freshmen

As the team went through its conditioning drills, SSgt. Wayne Westover, A CO. ISB, commented, "I wish I had it when I was a kid." Westover's comment was in reference to the Pony League football teams which will begin playing on Sept. 23 at Doughboy Stadium.

He will be coaching the Red Devils this year and trying for another championship. Last year's team won the Pony League title.

With a six-game schedule on hand Coach Westover goes above and beyond by scheduling games with the freshmen teams of the local high schools. He played with the Army football team at Fort Knox, Ky. and is much interested in the youth of today. You can always find him after duty hours helping the young men, whether it's football, baseball or basketball. "I find the work both exciting and self-satisfying."

Training Center Starts Company Football League

Training Center (ATC) company level flag football competition got under way Sept. 9 with Headquarters Team 1 (Finance) meeting Headquarters Team 3 (Committee Division).

Committee Division won the first contest by a 6-2 score. In a second game that night Reception Station scored a touchdown, extra point and safety to defeat 5th Bn. 9-7.

On Sept. 10 Special Training Company won by forfeit over 7th Bn. In the second contest Headquarters Team 2 (AG) defeated 9th Bn., 12-0 with 9th Bn. having three touchdowns called back because of penalties.

In games played Sept. 11, 6th Bn. defeated Finance 25-14 and Committee Division won over Special Training Company by a 12-7 score.

All ATC league games are scheduled on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights of each week at 7 p.m. and 8:15 pm. through Nov. 7.

The team with the best won-lost record upon completion of league play will represent ATC in the Infantry Center Flag Football Tournament to be held Nov. 17-18.

Rod and Gun Club Provides Many Facilities for Its Membership

By Pvt. Steve Zimmerman

The first thing one notices about the Rod and Gun Club is the perpetuity of it. The lodge is rugged rather than quaint. Tucked in the woods between an archery field and a skeet and trap range, this solid, burnt-wood cabin could only be the home of a sportsman.

True, the plush interior is missing; chandeliers are not in evidence. But the plaid-shirted sportsman has traditionally asked for little more than a place to buy supplies, a place to warm himself after a day of hunting with a hot mug of chocolate, a place to sit and talk about the size of this bass or that deer . . . the ones that got away.

The Rod and Gun Club has all this.

It is run for the benefit and convenience of Fort Benning personnel. But visiting military personnel can come and pick up a Georgia or Alabama state hunting and — or fishing license and a seven-day permit for about $2.50. Also, there's limited membership which is open to all. For $8 a person can use the archery and skeet and trap ranges and the facilities of the club. Personnel here can come to the club and pick up their fishing and hunting licenses and participate in those sports exclusive of the club.

The Rod and Gun Club not only provides these facilities but also facilitates the procedure.

Membership in the club is $4 annually. It is all-inclusive (provided the member has a hunting and a fishing license): The controlled hunting areas, the numerous lakes, the one trap and four skeet ranges, the 5-star field archery range, the facilities of the club itself — the member is entitled to all this.

There are presently about 5,500 members in the club. The Board of Governors would like to double, even triple that number.

The Rod and Gun Club is a self-sustaining organization which depends for its funds on the membership fee and token charges for rentals (e.g. it costs $1 to rent a rowboat for the day).

It is governed by a 14-member Board of Governors which in turn is broken down into committees covering the activities of the club plus a finance committee, an advertising committee, a facilities committee and publicity committee. The board members are determined by the amount of club members each major unit has in the club. New board members and a new president are chosen annually.

Lt. Col. Charles R. Rock is this year's president. His philosophy, and the club's, is to "Provide members with benefits to match what they put in."

ATC Mess Hall Wins Food Award Third Time

The mess hall at Co. C, 9th Bn., 2nd Bde., ATC, presented an appeitizing scene. The well-lighted, shiningly clean room was brightened by drapes and flowers. Most of all, the aroma of good food filled the air.

The soft clatter of untensils quieted as Lt. Col. Dean Mulder, brigade XO, moved to the center of the hall and said, "Men, Co. C has won the 2nd Bde. Best Mess monthly award for the third time. Two more times and you get to keep the plaque permanently. This must mean you're getting pretty good food. . .is it?"

A resounding "Yes, Sir" and bursts of applause from the trainees shook the frame building.

The mess steward, SSgt. Harold Williams was joined by Capt. Joseph F. Czech Jr. in accepting the plaque and stating their determination to gain permanent possession of the award.

Unlike some foreign cars, Volvos can shift for themselves.

Volvo comes with an optional automatic transmission.

The automatic transmission it comes with is strong enough to handle twice as much horsepower as the Volvo engine puts out.

This means that if you spend $180 extra for a Volvo with automatic, you shouldn't have to spend another penny on automatic transmissions until you buy a new car.

Which shouldn't be until a very long time from now. Over 95% of all the Volvos registered in the United States in the last 11 years are still on the road.

So if a stick shift is all that's been keeping you out of a car that lasts long enough to get you out from under car payments, come on over and get into a Volvo.

5 ITEMS TESTED SIMULTANEOUSLY

Simultaneous Tests Effect Cost Reduction

With the cost of living going up and prices in general spiraling to unheraled heights, it is refreshing to hear of an operation that has effected a cost reduction.

That is what the Field Equipment Test Division of the Infantry Board at Fort Benning has accomplished.

Through careful planning, close coordination of effort and full utilization of test personnel, the test division has succeeded in completing six of its recent tests with support troops allocated for two tests.

By using the integrated approach (testing multiple items simultaneously), the number of manhours of borrowed labor during the months of March and April this year was only 23,846. This was a savings of $51,097.94 over the allocation.

In further economy measures this fiscal year, the test division chief, B. F. Spitzmiller, explained that they have incorporated five tests into the integrated approach.

These tests include the service test of Loadcarrying Equipment, the military potential test of the Lightweight Helmet, the service test of the Special Infiltrator Vest, the product improvement test of the Bayonet Scabbard and a check test on the Lightweight, Collapsible Intrenching Tool.

All five of these tests are being performed simultaneously utilizing only the manhours allocated for the first test, that of the service test of the Loadcarrying Equipment.

Through the testing of multiple items simultaneously, the division hopes to realize an estimated cost savings of substantially more than the previous savings attained last spring, Spitzmiller said.

Safety Belt Campaign Leaves 91 Richer

Many Fort Benning motorists are $5 richer as a result of the recently completed "Safety Belt Campaign."

Designed to encourage the motorist to use a safety belt, the campaign has been termed a tremendous success by the post safety director.

"We hoped to increase the number of persons wearing safety belts and thereby reduce the number of fatalities and personal injuries suffered in motor vehicle accidents," said Norman M. Evans the Fort Benning safety director.

Evans pointed out that other benefits from the campaign were also derived. He stated that commanders of the various major units participated in several spot vehicle checks and made awards themselves. "This stimulated added interest in the unit safety program," Evans stated.

From May 8 on through Labor Day, 91 motorists, both military and civilian, received the $5 awards when checked and found to be properly wearing a safety belt.

The money for the awards came from the Central Post Fund and the Community Activities Association.

"We are planning to conduct a similar campaign prior to the year end holiday period," Evans commented.

"Benefits of our campaign tend to be borne out by the reduced number of deaths in motor vehicle accidents involving Fort Benning persons during the campaign," he said.

Colonel's Wife Helps 400 Orphans

By Marian Jones

For Betty Moul Tisdale every mile from Vietnam to this Army post is measured in joys and heartbreaks she has encountered on her trips to an orphanage near Saigon.

Mrs. Tisdale is the wife of Martin Army Hospital's chief of pediatrics and stepmother to his five active sons.

The petite brunette and Lt. Col. Patrick Tisdale were married two months ago in services at the post chapel in which Sen. Jacob Javits of New York gave the bride away.

But Mrs. Tisdale's real story begins in 1959. It was at this time that she called the hospital in New York in which Dr. Tom Dooley was a patient, to volunteer her secretarial services in helping answer some of his voluminous mail. He changed her life. Working closely with Dr. Dooley, she was influenced by his strong desire to help the people of Southeast Asia.

After Dr. Dooley's death in 1961, she decided to take a trip to the countries in which Dr. Tom Dooley had performed such miraculous work. She visited India, Thailand, Vietnam and Hong Kong.

In 1963 she became private secretary to Senator Javits. By 1964 she had saved enough money to visit Southeast Asia once again. This time her desire was to visit India and talk with the Tibetan refugees who had fled there to avoid Communist aggression.

Here she listened to tales of racial extermination — what the Chinese were doing to completely wipe out a whole race of people. She met the Dalai Lama's family who had escaped Tibet and were living in Northern India.

From India she traveled to Laos where she spent weeks with the members of the Dooley medical teams often in remote areas of that country.

In 1966 she made another trip, this time directly to the Republic of Vietnam and the An Lac orphanage—one that Dr. Dooley had helped to found. An Lac, which means "Happy Place," was being run by Madame Vu Thi Ngai, a former resident of North Vietnam who had escaped in 1954 when the Communists overran her country and killed her husband.

Using her own personal fortune until it was depleted, Madame Ngai gathered together as many orphan children as she could and appealed to the Americans who were then at Haiphong. A young Naval lieutenant, Dr. Tom Dooley, was successful in securing an old French army barracks in Saigon for the orphanage.

It was to the children in this orphanage that Mrs. Tisdale became known as Co My which, literally translated, means "Miss America," and Co Ngoan, "Miss Sweet." And it was to this orphanage that she knew she must keep returning.

In 1967, again using her vacation time and lunch

Campaign Kickoff Set

By SFC Richard Kemp

Soldiers and civilians kick off the post's participation in the 1970 United Givers' million dollar fund drive here today with a ceremony starting at 1:30 p.m. in Marshall Auditorium.

The campaign will last through Nov. 21.

A total of $914,348 has been approved for the 1970 budgets of 34 participating agencies, representing an amount 18.2 per cent greater than the 1969 goal and 15.4 per cent more than the figure raised in the fund drive last year.

No dollar goal is set at Ft. Benning where United Givers fund drives are keyed to the goal of 100 per cent participation based on each individual's fair share response.

Unit project officers, team captains and key men are expected to attend the kickoff ceremony to hear

60 Radio, TV Women Tour Post, Meet General's Wife

By Sgt. Carol Aubin

Approximately 60 members of the American Women in Radio and Television, Chattahoochee Chapter, visited here Thursday.

The women, radio and television personalities throughout the South, are attending a Southern Conference in Columbus.

In keeping with the theme of the convention, "Our Southern Heritage," they visited The Home of The Infantry and were briefed on the Infantry yesterday, today and tomorrow.

"The Spirit of Fort Benning," a film depicting today's "largest Infantry Center" was also viewed by the special guests.

Lunch found the ladies in an Officer Candidate dining hall chatting with the future Infantry officers and discussing the modern techniques of today's Infantryman.

At the conclusion of their visit to Fort Benning, they stopped at "Riverside," home of the commanding general, where they were greeted by Mrs. Orwin C. Talbott.

Riverside, originally built as a plantation home by Arthur Bussey in 1909, remains standing with Southern graciousness and has served as the commanding general's home since Maj. Gen. Charles S. Farnsworth commanded the post in 1918.

Local radio and television personalities attending the conference included Rozell Fair Fabiani, chairman of the convention; Penny Leigh, president of the American Women in Radio and Television and Patsy Avery.

Fund Drive To Begin

(Cont. From Page 1)

Other agencies include Armed Services YMCA, Fifth Avenue USO, Boys Club of America, Boys Club of Columbus, South Columbus Boys Club and Phenix City Boys Club.

Also Boy Scouts, Cerebral Palsy Center, Columbus Lay Society, Georgia Diabetics Association, Community Counseling Center and Christian Fellowship Association.

Others are Community Service Association, Empty Stocking Fund, Christmas Activities Association, Fifth Avenue Community Center, Girls Club of Columbus and South Columbus Branch and Phenix City Girls Club.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

By Bill King

King's Pizza On Call

Quick way to soften cold butter to spreading consistency: Invert over it (for a few minutes) a small bowl that has been rinsed in very hot water.

Poet John Tyler Pettee wisely wrote: "Pray for peace and grace and spiritual food / For wisdom and guidance, for all these are good / But don't forget the potatoes."

Hearty dip for hungry teens: Mix and heat a cup of canned chili con carne with a half cup of grated cheddar cheese. Serve with corn chips.

If you can't wait for the soup to cool, remove the fat by wrapping ice cubes in a clean linen towel and skimming the towel over the soup's surface. Fat will cling to the towel.

Melba sauce, the delicious raspberry-flavored sauce used in desserts, was named after the acclaimed Australian soprano, Dame Nellie Melba.

You'll be acclaimed, too, when you treat the family to a delicious dinner at

SOLDIERS STUDY TYPEWRITING IN GROUP CLASS

Education Opportunities Available

By MSgt. Homer Henderson

Your future depends on your education and the Army wants your future to be successful. Substantial educational opportunities are available to you while you are in the Army. Your awareness of these opportunities can be both economically and socially beneficial to you.

If you were a high school drop-out when you entered the Army, you should be familiar with one educational opportunity, the High School General Educational Development Test. This battery of tests is a five-part examination, consisting of broad educational subject areas, on the high school level.

If you complete all five parts satisfactorily, you can earn the High School Equivalency Certificate issued by the United States Armed Forces Institute. Every state in the union recognizes this certificate in lieu of a high school diploma.

If you have a high school diploma or an equivalency certificate and are interested in education at the college undergraduate level, you should apply for the General Examinations Test Battery of the College Level Examinations Program.

Your application must be made in person at the Education Center. These tests in the area of English composition, social sciences, history, natural sciences, humanities and mathematics, if successfully completed, give you the equivalent of 30 hours towards a baccalaureate degree.

You also have the opportunity to advance your education through correspondence study. Forty-six universities and colleges throughout the nation participate in this program.

Approximately 6,400 courses are available through correspondence. These courses may be obtained either on a college, vocational-technical, or high school level. Students pay approximately 50 per cent tuition and the government pays the remainder.

The Armed Forces Institute also offers a wide variety of correspondence courses on all levels of education. You are eligible for this program if you have been on active duty for 120 days or more. A nominal fee of $5 covers the cost of enrollment and the cost of the first course. Additional courses are offered without charge upon successful completion of the first course.

Another way in which you may finish your work towards a degree is through the Fort Benning branch of the American University. Classes are scheduled during normal off-duty hours. The Army will pay 75 per cent of the tuition fee for military personnel who participate in this phase of collegiate study.

Amount paid by the Army is $51.75 with a cost of only $17.25 to the student. Tuition fees are to be paid upon registration. Application for tuition assistance will be made on DA Form 2171 available at the Education Center.

Courses also may be taken through Columbus College, however cost will vary. Enlisted men do not incur any extended service obligation by accepting tuition assistance. Dependents may attend these courses but are required to pay the full tuition of $68.

Also you may obtain two calendar years of college training at an accredited college or university of your choice. In order to receive two calendar years of schooling, you must reenlist for a period of six years. If you desire, you may elect Harmony Church.

Red Cross Volunteers Needed in Clinics, Wards

The American Red Cross is now conducting a fall recruiting drive for volunteers at Fort Benning dental clinics, veterinary clinics and hospital wards and laboratories.

Volunteers are needed for both clerical tasks and patient care.

All new volunteers must take special Red Cross volunteer courses. The first course dealing with the history and purpose of the Red Cross will be given Oct. 7 and 8 in the conference room on the second floor of Martin Army Hospital from 8:45 a.m. till noon.

A special hospital orientation course will be given Oct. 10, 12, 14, 17 for volunteers who wish to work at Martin Army Hospital.

This course will be taught by trained Red Cross workers and members of the Martin Army Hospital staff.

Further workshops in specialized volunteer work will be offered later in the fall.

Those interested in volunteering are requested to apply at the Red Cross Field Office on the corner of Vibbert and Ingersoll Streets today and Wednesday.

Mrs. Robert M. Piper, chairman of volunteers, urges those who intend to register for Red Cross volunteer training to do so for this course since this will be the only opportunity until the first of the year.

Mrs. Charles W. Hendrickson hosted the monthly coffee for the 197th Inf. Bde. headquarters officers wives at her home with homemade pastries, fruit punch and coffee.

The wives welcomed a new arrival, Mrs. Lawrence R. King.

Business discussed at the gathering included an upcoming Red Cross orientation class which several of the ladies voiced interest in attending and the wives program of volunteers to work in the Post Thrift Shop which operates a uniform and merchandise exchange.

Mrs. Hendrickson and Mrs. Bruce Kay volunteered their services to the Thrift Shop which benefits the Post Chaplain's Fund and a scholarship plan.

Also discussed at the coffee were plans for the Christmas Bazaar for which ladies plan to make pillows to be offered for sale.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Gerald G. Coady on Oct. 8 and will be a "pillow workshop" for the bazaar items.

'Memories Are Made Of This'

"Memories Are Made of This" was the theme of the coffee given by the Officer Candidate Wives Club of 63rd Company, 6th Stu Bn., The Candidate Bde.

Honored guests were Mrs. Grady W. Williams, Mrs. James A. Yount, Mrs. Leslie Marshall and Mrs. Donald Studler.

Hostesses were Mrs. Clifton Patty, Mrs. Robert Moody, Mrs. Glenn Pierce and Mrs. Bruce Whitman.

Capt. James A. Yount, commanding officer of the 63rd Co. spoke to the ladies on finance and military transportation.

A collection of the Zodiac signs, repesenting the past months spent in OCS, decorated the name tag table.

Art, Car, Food and Golf Activities To Inform Wives

Several of the Officers Wives Club (OWC) activities are still open in case members were unable to attend the fall tea and sign up for their favorites.

Mrs. Bryon Hendricks, OWC art instructor, said there is still room for several children in her Saturday morning class. Mrs. Hendricks has degrees in both art and education and was employed by the St. Louis County School system as an art teacher prior to her family's move to Fort Benning.

The class now in progress will last six weeks and will cost $10 per child plus $2 for supplies. It is held at 9 a.m. on Saturdays at the OWC Lounge. Further inquiries may be made by calling Mrs. Hendricks at 687-4312.

Self Defense

Of great interest to wives will be the new self-defense oriented exercise classes that will begin Monday. These classes will be non-strenuous with emphasis on individual physical improvement and development of body tone.

All ages are invited. Ladies can progress at their own speed. The OWC has hired two instructors for this program. Both men are karate experts. At the first meeting they will give demonstrations of what the ladies can expect to learn in the classes. This exhibition will be free and there will be no obligation to attend further classes. Regular classes will be taught on Mondays from 7 to 9 p.m. at the OWC Lounge.

Mrs. Robert LaMonte, OWC activities chairman, can provide further information (689-3844).

There will be four one-hour classes given by "Mac" Masciovicchio in Security Car Care. The course will include pointers on how to save money on car maintenance and what new-car warranties really cover and many other such mysterious car-related items.

Classes will be held at the OWC Lounge at 9:30 a.m. for four Wednesdays beginning next week. The class will cost members 50 cents to cover minimum operating costs.

The Ladies Golf Club Championship Tournament will be held at the Country Club for three days, Sept. 30 - Oct. 2.

The OWC has made a special effort this year to include the working wives in its fall activities. One of the classes taught especially for the ladies is a night gourmet cooking class. This has been one of the best-received classes taught.

OWC FALL TEA

At the Officers Wives Club fall tea, Mrs. Malcolm Baer, far right, president of the club, displays a pocketbook which was handmade for sale at the OWC Christmas Bazaar. From left are Mrs. Sidney B. Berry, wife of Brig. Gen. Berry, assistant commandant of the Infantry School; Mrs. Oscar E. Davis, wife of Brig. Gen. Davis, commanding general of the Training Center; Mrs. Orwin C. ATC Witnessed Spaceman Visit

"Wait a minute . . the door's opening. I see a hand. Ladies and gentlemen, you are witnessing the arrival of the first alien to set foot on planet Earth." It was the first alien family.

The silver-suited "alien spaceman," 1st Lt. George D. Hey, had brought wife Linda and 2 - year - old daughter Kathy to the Main Officers Open Mess to wish the Training Center a happy fourth birthday.

After the little girl had presented a birthday card to Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, center commander, Hey joined Mrs. Davis and the General dancing with Mrs. Hey to open ATC's "Dance on the Moon."

Infantryman Pledge

Earlier, Davis had welcomed Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott, "a real soldier . . . a combat Infantryman," with a pledge to "produce the greatest Infantryman in the world."

"Ours is not a long heritage, but it is certainly a significant one," he said. "The soldier we receive in Vietnam is the best I've seen in three wars. Much of what a soldier stands for begins here."

Imaginative decorations set the mood for the evening. Foil-covered stars hung from the ballroom ceiling and five-foot paper mache "moon surface" painted dark shades of green and purple and illuminated by phosphorescent lights, lined the walls. During the reception, color moon scenes taken on the Apollo 11 flight were projected onto a screen placed on the balcony overlooking the ballroom.

Sergeant Statuette

The only traditional decorations were the place settings — bronze, 9-inch tall plaster-of-paris drill sergeant statuettes, complete with whistle and "This We'll Defend" crest.

After a 20-minute performance by the Infantry Chorus and arrival of the space family, 253 center officers and their ladies danced to some very familiar earth music.

Geographical Wives Hear How To Mail Snacks

"Gifts for Daddy" was the main attraction for the monthly meeting of the Geographical Wives Club held at the Officers Club.

Bruce Livengood of a local business concern offered many flavorful snacks for the women before the buffet dinner.

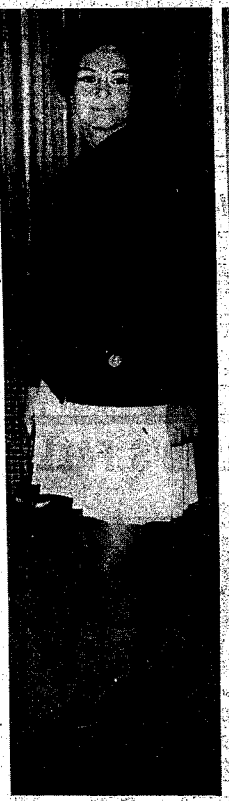
Afterwards, Livengood explained which of the items would be best for mailing long distance to husbands for various occasions. From many years of experience in preparing and mailing packages to such places as Vietnam and Korea, Livengood offered suggestions as to which food items are real favorites and are asked for "time and time again." With Christmas right around the corner, he also discussed mailing deadlines to various parts of the world to ensure packages are sent out in time.

Hostesses for the dinner were Mrs. Edwin Livingston, Mrs. Leo Mercier, and Mrs. Richard DuMont. Name tags and table decorations were replicas of some of the favorite food items that were on display.

Mrs. Thomaa Curtin, club chairman, bid farewell to Mrs. Powell Johnson and Mrs. Pyor Dougherty whose husbands are returning from Vietnam.

Welcomed were newcomers including Mmes. Gene Fluke, Richard Gilem, Robert Brown, Stefan Domashewsky, Terrence Robinson, Jose Martinez, Larry Cardell, Stephen Riddle, William Jordan, Donald Parnell, Joseph Pielcher, Robert Luck, Howard Herron, Larry Atwood, Joseph Adams, William Ditchfield, Caryl Marsh, Robert Pickett, Thomas Trombley, Joseph Pullano, Peter Verga, and Vincent Pacelli.

The next meeting will be held on Oct. 15. The club also voted to hold a children's Halloween party on Oct. 25, from 2 to 4 p.m. at the Officers Club. Anyone interested in attending these functions may make reservations by calling Mrs. Thomas Curtin at 687-1534.



FASHION SHOW

A fashion luncheon was hosted by 4th Stu. Bn. officers wives for The Student Bde. Wives. Mrs. George G. Shapinas, left, models a white pleated skirt with a cranberry tunic blouse and gold chain belt. Mrs. James R. Jackson, right, models the latest in pant-suits, a hounds tooth fabric in brown and white check. Crepe paper flowers using fall colors decorated the Supper Club. Other models were Mmes. Mrs. Tisdale Hopes To Give Talks on 'Happy Place' money she had saved, she made another trip to Vietnam and the orphanage. She arrived in the country Dec. 23, 1967, and returned to the States at the end of January.

During the five weeks she was there, this energetic young woman was able again to help the more than 400 children and babies in the orphanage, to recruit more help for An Lac through the Armed Forces and to see again the need for help as Dr. Dooley saw it.

Upon her return to the United States she established An Lac Orphanage, Inc. Former officers, doctors and civilians who had served in Vietnam and who helped An Lac while there, offered their services to the new organization.

Norman Cousins, editor of the Saturday Review, is honorary chairman of the board of directors. The Board of Advisors lists such names as Senator and Mrs. Javits, Malcolm Dooley, Mrs. Norman Cousins, Ambassador and Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge, Congressman John O. March and Sen. Milton Young. Mrs. Tisdale is president of the corporation.

Once more, for the fifth time, during Christmas of 1968, she returned again to Vietnam and to her beloved An Lac—this time carrying a collapsible baby bed along with toys, diapers and other contributions. Her Christmas gift from Madame Ngai was a baby nursery—clean and new—the first tangible results of Mrs. Tisdale's efforts to help the children of the orphanage.

Mrs. Tisdale estimates that it takes $2,000 per month to take care of the children. Being taken care of means being kept alive.

This amount goes to feed, clothe and educate the children and to build new facilities for the orphanage. However she states that so much more is needed. The children do not receive the proper food. They need a high protein diet and meat is very scarce. Once in a great while, they will have meat to mix with their rice but it is seldom coming. Milk is diluted by rice water to make it go around.

Babies die from a lack of food, lack of medical care and lack of love. "When you pick up an American child, it wiggles and smiles," she said. "When you pick up the Vietnamese orphans, they just lie there." She went on to describe how they didn't smile, hold up their heads or kick off the covers the way normal American babies do. A high percentage of them die, Mrs. Tisdale said.

Madame Ngai stresses independence and is determined that none of the children will ever have to beg. She teaches sewing to both boys and girls and the boys are taught carpentry. All are taught English.

There is a religious-like fervor in Mrs. Tisdale's voice when she speaks of the foundation. "I could be there and love the children but that doesn't help feed and clothe them," she stated.

In addition to helping the orphanage by working there approximately seven weeks a year, scrubbing and doling out skimpy rations of watery rice-gruel, Mrs. Tisdale gets out and passes the word. She gives slide talks to various women's and civic groups, writes letters and campaigns for funds.

She admits she has become an accomplished "scrounger." She has found items for the orphange ranging from a jeep to volunteers to repair a roof. She even found a family in Virginia willing to purchase an artificial eye for a little boy.

According to her, no gift is too small or too insignificant to be sent to An Lac.

For Mrs. Tisdale now, there is but one special doctor in her life — Dr. Tisdale, whom she met at An Lac in 1967. A 1950 graduate of the U. S. Military Academy, Tisdale was then medical battalion commander of the 1st Infantry Division.

The orphanage had become as dear to him as it had to his wife and he spent many volunteer hours helping to give much-needed medical care to the children. "I knew I could never marry just anybody," she stated, "and when Pat asked me to marry him I couldn't believe it."

Since Colonel and Mrs. Tisdale were married in July, she has also become the mother to the colonel's five young sons.

"I want to lecture and show my slides to church and civic groups in the Columbus-Fort Benning area," she states. "People don't realize that the Chinese think nothing of time. They have long-range plans for the taking over of Vietnam. Up until recently it was the rice-bowl of Southeast Asia. These people in Vietnam who we are helping have to learn gradually by example and with our help they will have a better life."

Persons who wish to schedule Mrs. Tisdale for a speaking engagement may contact her at 102 Eames Ave., Fort Benning, or phone 689-5730.

Top NCO's Meet General Talbott

At a reception and luncheon meeting at the Sand Hill Noncommissioned Officers Club, Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott met with the post sergeants major who will be serving with him during his new assignment as post commanding general.

Command Sgt. Maj. Charles H. Fletcher, post sergeant major, introduced General Talbott, who then expressed to his new "comrades-in-arms" his pleasure in being at Fort Benning.

General Talbott went on to challenge sergeants major to use their experience in helping him run the post.

"If you see someting that needs improving or if you have a suggestion, help me help the post by bringing it up through proper channels," he stated.

The general concluded his remarks to the men by saying, "Together, there is nothing we can't do. Separately, we are just spinning our wheels."

EXHIBIT DEPICTS SLING LOADING OPERATIONS

Pathfinders Train With Sling Load

By PFC Paul T. Miller

Man has spent a major portion of his time on earth striving to develop faster and more efficient means of transporting his goods and cargo.

It all began with the wheel, which led inevitably to the cart. The cart gave way to the horse-drawn wagon, which eventually evolved into the truck. The burden, which man originally had to bear alone, was now less of a burden.

Wartime generally necessitates innovations of its own—one being the helicopter sling load.

Often it becomes necessary to transport supplies in the jungles as an external load, or sling load, suspended on a cable from a helicopter.

According to Col. Lamar A. Welch, director of the Airborne Department of the Infantry School, "Sling loads are being used extensively today in Southeast Asia."

Sling loads are utilized in any one of four situations: When the cargo compartment of the helicopter is too small for the load; when the center of gravity limitation of the aircraft is exceeded by the characteristics of the load; when the maximum speed of loading and, or, unloading is a requirement; when the conditions on the landing site prevent touchdown of the aircraft.

The Army's CH-47 (Chinook) helicopter is generally used in most of the sling loading operations. "The copters usually carry 16,000 pounds," said Capt. Charles L. Presnell, assistant director of the Pathfinder Committee, "however, in Vietnam we try to keep it down to 8,000 pounds."

The Airborne Department here recently introduced sling load instruction into it's Pathfinder Course. The course consists of four and a half weeks of training, of which eight hours are devoted to the teaching of sling loading techniques.

The instruction taught by the "black hats" of the Airborne Department involves a six-hour block lecture on sling load procedures and two hours of practical exercise at the helicopter landing zone.

Five Medals Awarded Posthumously to Beebe

By Pvt. Steve Zimmerman

The Silver Star, the Bronze Star Medal, Bronze Star Medal with "V" device, the Purple Heart and the Good Conduct Medal were awarded posthumously to SSgt. Larry C. Beebe.

Col. Talton W. Long, deputy post commander, presented the awards to the staff sergeant's widow, Mrs. Janice M. Beebe, in a brief ceremony.

Accompanying the widow were her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Scrimpshire; her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Orton, and her sister-in-law, Mrs. J. L. Scrimpshire.

Beebe served in the Republic of Vietnam from March 10 of this year until his death on May 3. On March 31 he was serving as a platoon sergeant with Co. A, 2nd Bn., 39th Infantry Bde. on a reconnaissance in force mission in Dinh Toung province.

"After his platoon came under attack, Sergeant Beebe spotted several Viet Cong hiding in a small canal waiting to ambush his unit," the citation read. "Disregarding his own safety, he braved a barrage of hostile fire to assault the enemy position. The intensity of his fire forced the Viet Cong to flee the area, and undoubtedly saved many friendly lives." For this action Beebe was awarded the Silver Star.

On the night of May 3, Beebe, again serving as platoon sergeant, was on an ambush patrol in Dinh Toung province. "After his patrol became heavily engaged with a large enemy element, Sergeant Beebe courageously took up an exposed position to effectively engage the hostile soldiers. Although the enemy directed an intense volume of return fire at his position, seriously wounding him, he continued to engage them until he succumbed to his wounds," according to the document accompanying the Bronze Star with "V" device for heroism which was awarded to Beebe.

The Bronze Star was awarded for "outstanding and meritorious service against a hostile force in the Republic of Vietnam" and the Purple Heart for the wounds which resulted in his death on May 3.

Beebe was a native of North East, Pa. The sergeant's widow lives in Columbus.

New Drill Sergeant Feels 'Great' About Training Job

By Sp5 Joe DePriest

Sgt. Michael Lyons wanted to be a drill sergeant.

Perhaps the thought first entered his mind during basic training some 11 months ago . . . or maybe it was during his four years of ROTC classes at Chicago's Lane Technical High School.

He doesn't remember exactly.

"But I wanted to be a drill sergeant. I wanted to deal with people. This is very important. A drill sergeant shapes a man's impression of the whole Army."

Lyons glanced at the hat in front of him: "It feels great to be a drill sergeant."

The 19-year-old Chicago native recently was Honor Graduate at the Third Army Drill Sergeant Academy, Ft. Jackson, S. C.

Now he is first platoon sergeant here in Co. C, 10th Bn, 1st Bde. and for the next six months will undergo on-the-job training as a drill sergeant before officially being awarded the distinctive campaign hat.

Lyons wears the campaign hat during his on-the-job training period. "After working for it," he said, "You're proud to wear it."

The six-week course at the drill sergeant academy is a condensed version of basic combat training. It is more demanding because more is expected of each candidate.

"Each aspect of training is approached from the aspect of you as a drill sergeant — how you would teach it," said Lyons.

Candidates are required to give classes before groups of fellow students and instructors.

They are expected to go one step farther than the requirements they would place on trainees — from physical training to personal appearance.

"You set the example," said Lyons.

Before the current training cycle begins, Lyons has been "getting the feel" for his new job by giving short classes in drill and ceremonies at the Reception Station.

Thailand General Visits Benning

A 15-gun salute and honors ceremony officially welcomed to the post, Lt. Gen. Sa Nguan Jittalan, assistant director general of the Thai Police Department.

He was greeted by Maj. Gen. Irwin C. Talbott, post commanding general.

During his three-day visit to the Infantry Center, General Jittalan observed the leader reaction course at Dixie Village, Airborne Problem 9,000 at Eubanks Field and Airborne training.

He received an Officer Candidate School briefing and toured the OCS area.

He traveled to Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., to observe Ranger training firsthand.

Accompanying the general was police Maj. Gen. Dumrong Powchaya and police Col. Srisak Jinerawat. State Department escort was William H. Baumann.

Consolidation Set for Aviators

A consolidation of command, operational and maintenance functions of all Army aviation organizations here will become effective Oct. 1.

Effective with the reorganization, all Army aviation units located at Fort Benning will be under the command control of the 10th Aviation Group, commanded by Col. Foy Rice.

The reorganization will cause the Lawson Army Aviation Command to be redesignated the Lawson Army Air Field Operating Detachment.

The move is in line with the continuing attempts of the Infantry Center and Fort Benning to obtain maximum results with minimum costs and personnel expenditures.

TRAINEES ENTER DANGER ROUTE

Trainees Go With Caution On Benning 'Jungle' Trail

By Sp5 Joe DePriest

Open the bamboo gate with caution. Be alert. Be ready.

You're on the Danger Route.

A sign in Vietnamese above that gate says so ("Su Nguy Hiem Duong"), but you can't read Vietnamese and won't know what it means until the gate swings open and a dummy grenade explodes.

Basic trainees who walk the simulated "jungle" trail on the Malone 20 Individual Tactical Training range know, of course, that it is a lesson in Viet Cong-type booby traps. Nevertheless, there are a few surprises along the way.

The Danger Route, which was designed and constructed by Committee Group cadre of Malone 20, is an attempt to introduce trainees to types of booby traps and at the same time hammer home what cadre call "a sense of urgency" about these traps. Emphasis is placed on caution, care, checking out even the most obvious situations.

The jungle trail is a training bonus given concurrently with regular tactical training at the range.

Two NCOs — one in front, another in the rear of the formation — accompany each group along the short trail which winds through the Georgia woods. If the group passes a simulated booby trap without discovering it, the rear NCO triggers a flashing light or similar warning that lets trainees know they missed something.

SFC Davis Allen, a veteran of two tours in Vietnam, recently led a group along the trail and explained each item.

The menace of punji pits was emphasized by a camouflaged trampoline which sinks several inches when an unwary trainee steps on it. Allen then showed the men an example of what the trampoline pit could have been: a punji pit with stakes that, in Southeast Asian jungles, could be made deadlier with drops of poison or human waste.

One man found an American grenade on the path and picked it up. Later in the demonstration, the trainee had an opportunity to throw the recovered grenade at a "Viet Cong" who appeared in the undergrowth.

"In an actual combat situation," said Sgt. Allen, "this grenade could have been planted by the VC who took out the delay fuse; when the lever is released, it explodes. A casualty results."

Before crossing a narrow, wooden bridge, Allen explained the importance for checking:

"Make sure it isn't rigged to collapse with a certain amount of weight."

SFC Dillard Named Top Career Counselor

SFC Morris W. Dillard, career counselor of The Candidate Bde. (TCB) has been recognized as Outstanding Career Counselor for fiscal year 1969.

Dillard, a native of Flat River, Mo., boasts one of the highest ratios of reenlistments in the Army. In the year he has been with TCB, he has retained 89.8 per cent of all single terms, with a Continental Army Command (CONARC) objective of 23.3 per cent.

Of all career personnel he has retained 88.7 per cent. CONARC's objective for these were 80 per cent.

When Dillard came to TCB in August 1968, the office was credited with only six reenlistments for that month. In June, 1969, that figure was increased almost 10-fold to 57.

Dillard resides at 827 Rosa Drive in Columbus with his wife, Miriam. He has three sons, Paul Timothy, 4; Jonathan A., 19, and Stephen M., 22, a sergeant in the Marine Corps.

When asked how he ever let the Marines land his son, Dillard replied, "Well, if I hadn't been in Germany at the time, things might have been different."

UNIFORM DAY

Boys from the Lt. Col. James Anderson family will be among many Boy Scouts throughout the local council that will be wearing their uniforms to school Wednesday. Although Christopher, in the wheel chair, injured recently when hit by an automobile, may not be able to attend school, he will sport his Cub Scout uniform around Martin Army Hospital. From left to right are James, Mrs. Anderson, a civilian nurse at MAH, Christopher, William and Stephen. Colonel Anderson is chairman of the patrol committee, Ranger Dept., Infantry School. The Andersons have eleven children, eight of whom are active in the Girl Scout and Boy Scout programs.

Scout Neckerchiefs, Caps Will Be Worn Wednesday

Boy Scouts of the Fort Benning district, as well as other districts within the Chattahoochee Council, are urged to wear their uniforms to school Wednesday.

According to Russ McLean, chief executive of the Council, the uniform day is a part of the "Fall Roundup of Boy Power - '76," an eight-year campaign designed to interest boys in scouting.

"By wearing their uniforms, the boys will be promoting scouting in our region," said McLean. He also noted that the event will get the scouters accustomed to wearing the garb in public.

Not only Boy Scouts are asked to don their neckerchiefs and caps, but also the younger and older scouts, members of the Cub Scouts and Explorers.

The scout executive explained that "Boy Power-'76" is a long range recruiting campaign, lasting eight years. The target date of 1976 was chosen because of its significance of being the 200th anniversary of the United States.

"Youngsters born at the start of the campaign will be eight years old (the beginning age of Cub Scouts), at its culmination in '76," McLean noted. "We are thus able to get a rough estimate of the available boy crop in the future."

McLean said that his organization always strives to attract at least 25-33 per cent of the available boy crop, eight through sixteen years of age.

A similar campaign, Man Power - '76, is also being conducted, parallel to Boy Power - '76, in an effort to recruit more adult leaders into the Chattahoochee Council.

Cub Scout Pack To Hold Carnival Saturday

Cub Scout Pack 54 will hold a penny carnival Saturday at 3 p.m on the James B. Key school grounds.

Midway games and shows will entertain.

Melvyn the International Magic Clown, who has performed before the king and queen of Thailand, will perform feats of magic.

Door prizes will be given all afternoon with seperate drawings for barbeque grills, a transistor radio and other prizes.

Ed Ceely, the packmaster, has agreed to be a target in one of the games called "Sock It To the Cubmaster." If a ball is pitched through a hoop, a pail of water can be thrown on the cubmaster.

Chattahoochee To Test Scouts

Fifty-four Boy Scouts from the Fort Benning District of the Chattahoochee Council will put their skill and energy on the river today as they compete in a 65 mile Canoe-A-Thon on the Chattahoochee.

Three Days

The three day race is being sponsored by the Chattahoochee Council of the Boy Scouts of America and by the Activities Council of the Fort Benning District.

One hundred and six boys and 53 canoes will be arriving at the starting line, Dolphin Marine Landing, Columbus Docks, at 3:30 this afternoon. Starting time of the race is scheduled for 4 p.m.

The contest will end Sunday providing the boys don't take a wrong turn at one of the creeks along the way. Destination is Cowikee Creek Landing at Eufaula, Ala.

Practice Makes

Many of the scouters have already been out on the river to practice the coming event. "Sure, it'll be kind of tiring," said one youngster, "but it's going to be a lot of fun, too."

A trophy will be presented to the winner, with plaques going to second and third place teams. All of the boys will receive commemorative patches to wear on their uniform.

Power boats, manned by race supervisors, and equipped with life jackets and megaphones, will be provided by Center Troop Command.

16th Group

Officials do not foresee any accidents, but if one should present itself, the 10th Aviation Group will be prepared, with an emergency helicopter evacuation team scanning the river at all times.

Representing the Infantry School will be 2nd Lt. Jeff H. Martini, public information officer, and PFC James Doherty, information specialist. Although the two claim to have little or no experience in canoe competition, Martini did hold the Canoeing Merit Badge as an Eagle Scout.

"We'll give them a fight for their patch," says Martini, who has named his ship "The STP Boys Life Special."

The two men from the Information Office will be covering the race for "Boys' Life," a monthly Boy Scout magazine.

Picnic 'Highlights the Year'

By SFC Richard Kemp

More than 1,800 persons attended the annual picnic of the Columbus - Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the U. S. Army (AUSA), described by chapter president Roy Smith as "one of the highlights of the year."

The picnic featured an hour-long program of demonstrations of scout dogs and their handlers, Rangers and sky diving. Chapter members packed the bleachers beside Victory Pond to watch the demonstrations.

Music by the 29ist Army Band and free pony rides and games for the children were additional attractions of the picnic, held under rain - threatening skies.

Appreciated

Before the demonstrations began, Smith spoke briefly to the group, expressing his appreciation for their participation in the event.

He introduced officers of the chapter, including Joe Flowers Jr., first vice president and Colonel (ret.) Jacob Riley, second vice president.

The chapter president also introduced Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott, post commanding general. Smith said, "We have always had the cream of the crop" assigned to command the Infantry Center.

Referring to the announcement that the chapter had been selected for the second consecutive year as the association's "Best Chapter Over-all," Smith said, "We are proud of the organization and proud that the local chapter received these awards."

Congratulations

General Talbott told chapter members he was pleased to be back at Fort Benning and congratulated them for the honors awarded to the chapter by AUSA.

Special guests at the picnic were more than 60 underprivileged children of the area who were entertained by the Infantry Officer Candidates of the 52nd Co., 5th Bn., The Candidate Bde.

The local chapter chartered a bus to transport the children to and from the picnic. While at the picnic site, the children were escorted by members of the company.

Free Dinner

The 164 candidates of 52nd Co. commanded by Capt. Bruce W. Palmer, met the youngsters at Victory Lodge.

Coordination for selecting and bringing the children to the picnic was done by the local Salvation Army.

The children had a free barbecue dinner and soft drinks.

The 52nd Co. has 100 per cent of its Officer Candidate strength carried on AUSA membership rosters.

THANKS TO AUSA

'The Fabulous Sixties' Will Highlight Television

NEW YORK — "The Fabulous Sixties," a series of ten one-hour color television specials highlighting the most exciting, significant and memorable events of the years 1960-1969, is being released for world-wide distribution by ABC Films, Inc.

Each of the specials focuses on a different year and examines historical events, personalities, art and social milestones, show business trends and sports accomplishments of this extraordinary decade.

"The Fabulous Sixties," produced by Hobel-Leiterman Productions, Ltd. in association with CTV Television Network of Canada and ABC Films, Inc., is currently in production and has involved nearly a year's preparation and pre-production research.

All stories selected merit particular significance and were chosen from each year's events by film researchers who scanned thousands of hours of news, documentary, and entertainment footage.

A substantial portion of the series has been designed as pure entertainment, using segments of theatrical movies and filmed coverage of sporting events.

Producer Phil Hobel describes "The Fabulous Sixties" as a lively, unique series. "It will be entertaining as well as meaningful," he adds.

Robin Hood, Alive and Well, Left the Forest To Go OCS

By Spc James Swink

"Little John, fetch the easel. Maid Miriam, bring the paints. I'll gather up the brushes and we'll make haste to the heart of the forest to catch the first rays of the morning sun as they filter down through the outstretched limbs of the tallest oaks."

Although it is a little beyond the reach of imagination to picture the legendary rogue Robin Hood as an artist, the Officer Candidates of the 65th Co., 6th Stu. Bn., The Candidate Bde., have no difficulty making the association.

Candidate Robin Hood is the creative genius of the 65th Co.

Hood, a native of the forest of Chattanooga, Tenn., attended the University of Chattanooga where he majored in commercial art. While in school, he was employed by an insurance company and two newspapers in advertising and photograpry departments.

His artwork has been shown at prominent exhibits including several Hunter Gallery exhibits in Chattanooga, the annual Chattanooga Arts Gala, the St. James Court Annual spring art show in Louisville, Ky., and the Fort Knox and First Army art and photo contests.

He won first and third place and several honorable mentions in the two latter contests and his portfolios are now enroute to the Continental Army shows.

When asked what he thought of OCS, Hood said that his only regret was that the Army didn't offer qualification in the long bow.

Kentucky Officer Candidate Receives Direct Commission

Walter E. Blackburn Jr., of Murray, Ky., became a second lieutenant in the Chemical Corps via a direct commission.

Blackburn, who had already completed 19 weeks of training with the 94th (OC) Co., 9th Stu. Bn., The Candidate Bde. was tendered the oath of his commission by Capt. Roger Dimsdale, the company officer of the 94th Co.

The ceremony took place in the company dayroom.

A graduate of Murray State University, Blackburn holds a bachelor of science degree in chemistry. He will shortly be attending schools at Fort McClellan, Ala., and Fort Lee, Va. His ultimate assignment will be with the Red River Army Depot at Texarkana,

Winners To Fight in Third Army Matches

Special Services Schedules Boxing Tournament

By Pvt. Steve Zimmerman

A post-wide call is out for soldier-boxers who would like to represent Fort Benning at the Third U.S. Army Novice Boxing Tournament to be held Nov. 24-28 at Ft. Jackson, S.C.

A boxing program will be conducted from Oct. 1-Nov. 21 to train and select qualified boxers for the tournament. Based on participation in the program, boxing smokers (play - off matches in each weight class) will be held to determine who will represent the post at Fort Jackson.

Unit commanders are responsible for providing qualified personnel the opportunity to train and compete in the program.

Martin Army Hospital will be providing medical personnel for pre-bout examinations and ringside attendants during scheduled matches.

The U.S. Army Infantry Center (USAIC) Special Services officer is responsible for the conduct of the program.

All qualified male military personnel on active duty here are eligible to participate. Those not qualified include basic trainees and Infantry School students (unless their respective commanders allow them the time to train). Also, participants must verify in writing that they have amateur status and must not have competed in an organized boxing contest (military or civilian) prior to the start of the 1969 USAIC Boxing Program.

However, personnel who have competed in professional or amateur matches may participate in the program as coaches, trainers and, or, managers.

To provide participants with the opportunity to train and condition, training sites have been established at the Student Brigade Gym (Bldg. 2632), located on Indianhead Road and at Harmony Church Field House. Qualified instructors and boxing equipment are available at these sites during the afternoon and evening hours.

Personnel desiring to train and compete in boxing matches may register with the attendant on duty at the training sites.

Weigh-ins and physical examinations will be held on the morning of each day of competition.

Trunks, robes, headgear, shoes and other protective items will be furnished by the Special Services officer.

Officials for the matches will be provided by the Special Services officer.

The 1969 official AAU rule book for boxing will govern competition.

Individual awards will be presented to boxers representing Fort Benning in the third Army tournament.

Eleven weight classes to be contested are:

Light Flyweight — 106 lbs; Flyweight — 112 lbs; Bantamweight — 119 lbs; Featherweight — 125 lbs; Lightweight — 132 lbs; Light Welterweight — 139 lbs; Welterweight — 147 lbs; Light Middleweight — 156 lbs; Middle weight — 165 lbs; Light Heavyweight — 178 lbs; Heavyweight — over 178 lbs.

THE FORUM THE EDITOR

By Marc Reiff

The current war being waged between the ABA and the NBA will, no doubt, eventually end up the same as the past conflicts confronting the AFL and the NFL. That is, a complete merger whereby both leagues embrace and call each other brother.

At the moment though, some nasty things are being said across the borders. At first, it was a simple case of luring opposing players to the side of the ABA. When big Lew Alcinder was lost to the NBA, many thought that the ABA would fold, but the opposite effect has been true. They have been trying even harder to get the established stars of the NBA. While this is a pot of gold for the players it has caused no end of problems to the owners.

It is hard to censure the fledgling league in their attempt to survive, but a rash of recent incidents must be deemed intolerable. Inducing college players with eligibility left to jump into the arena with pros must be condemned. College stars such as Pete Maravich and Charlie Scott will undoubtly be much sought after when they graduate but all means let them finish college. Spencer Haywood, the champion of the U. S. Olympic team was recently signed by the ABA and thereby may have given up his chance to finish college forever.

Football has an agreement with all the colleges in the nation that a player will not be signed until his class has graduated. If a scout is caught approaching a player, the pro team will be black listed from all campuses. The annual draft has become the law book where teams are concerned and gives the worst teams the advantage they need to build a better club. Basketball, at least in the case of the NBA, has followed this tradition for many years.

While the case of Haywood has been called unique, this situation should not be allowed to spread. Haywood, a sophomore in college, is the sole support of his family and while he was in college he maintained that he was not doing his job for them. Yet with a lucrative contract awaiting him upon graduation, a loan could have been arranged with a bank. The jangling of dollar signs in front of a player is quite an inducement to jump college, but long range plans must be kept in mind. While money can buy quite a number of things, it will not last forever.

Supposing Haywood is hurt his first year as a pro and can not continue the game, what then? The money will soon run out and he has flubbed his chance at a college scholarship. The pros do not pay for a would be super star who cannot live up to expectations. Ergo, no money, no job, no education.

Colleges should keep a wary eye out for those scouts who promise instant glory and fast money. While it is up to the individual to determine his future, the colleges have a role to protect them. College can mean a great deal more to these young men than the promise of an easy buck.

The football season has gotten off to a fast start with a few major upsets already being registered. The World Champion New York Jets have looked like anything but and Kansas City seems the heir apparent, at least to the AFL crown. Predictions for the week to come are:

ST. LOUIS over CHICAGO
NEW YORK over DETROIT
CLEVELAND over WASHINGTON
PHILADELPHIA over PITTSBURGH
BALTIMORE over MINNESOTA
DALLAS over NEW ORLEANS
SAN FRANCISCO over GREEN BAY
LOS ANGELES over ATLANTA
BUFFALO over DENVER
KANSAS CITY over CINCINNATI
HOUSTON over MIAMI
NEW YORK over SAN DIEGO
OAKLAND over BOSTON

Gen. Talbott Throws First Ball of Season

By Sgt. Carol Anbin

Four hundred boys, clad in their football best, trailed by little girls in cheerleader outfits and accompanied by parents, coaches and fans, cheered their way across Doughboy Stadium Tuesday night as the Fort Benning Youth Activities football season officially opened.

The first ball of the season was thrown into the stadium by Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott, post commanding general, followed by cheers and growls that would make the Rangers smile with pride.

The football field was an impressive sight as each team decked in their colorful fresh uniforms was presented to the spectators. It made one wonder what the uniforms would look like at the end of the season.

The 291st Army Band provided pre-game music which included selections from various college Alma Maters and those tunes familiar to the sportsman's ear.

The invocation for the official ceremonies was given by Chaplain (Col.) Holland H. Hope, post chaplain.

General Talbott greeted "the mighty footballers of Fort Benning" and told the boys that even if not every game is won by points, it is "won by learning, through playing the game and playing it the right way."

The first game of the season was between the Benning Bombers and the Browns, both members of the Pee Wee League. The Browns won 21-0.

Atlanta Braves Announce Ticket Sale for National League Series

The Atlanta Braves are now accepting ticket orders for the 1969 Championship Series.

The first two games of the series for the National League pennant will be played in Atlanta Oct. 4 and 5, if the Braves win the Western Division title.

"We are putting on extra employees and we're confident of capacity crowds at these two games," said Bill Bartholomay, chairman and president.

Tickets will be sold only by mail order application and orders postmarked before, Sept. 17 will not be accepted.

Each envelope must contain one person's order only.

Tickets will be sold only in sets of two and no person may order more than two sets. The entire application of a person ordering more than two sets will be returned.

A set of Championship Series tickets, the Braves explained, is one ticket for each of the two games.

A stamped, self-addressed return envelope at least four inches by nine inches in size must accompany each order.

Prices are: Field Level, $14 per set; Upper Level, $10 per set; Pavilion Level, $10 per set; Upper Pavilion Level, $6 per set.

Each order must include $1 for handling charges.

Pasarell Wins Johnson Trophy At Forest Hills

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Army's top tennis player, Spc4 Charlie Pasarell, added another prize to his collection recently when he was awarded the William J. Johnston Trophy at the U. S. Open Tennis Championships held at Forest Hills, N. Y.

The nation's seventh-ranked tennis player received the trophy for sportsmanship and his contribution to the game.

This was Pasarell's second trophy in two months. He also won the Riseley Bowl for the Army in open singles play in the 1969 interservice tennis tourney held this summer at the Army-Navy Country Club, Arlington, Va.

Pasarell, 25, San Turce, Puerto Rico, is currently stationed at the U. S. Army Air Defense Command's 1st Region, Newburgh, N. Y.

No personal checks will be accepted, the Braves emphasized. Payment must be by certified check, cashier's check or money order.

By Pvt. Steve Zimmerman

The U. S. Army shooting team all members of the Army Marksmanship Training Unit of Fort Benning, won a total of 10 gold and three silver medals in the 10th annual Conseil International Du Sport Militaire (CISM) Shooting Championships at Granada, Spain.

The United States team, in its successful defense of a title which it captured last year, was pitted against 188 competitors from 14 CISM member nations.

The Army shooters won three rifle and three pistol team championships. In the international rifle team event the United States shared top honors with Finland, shooting identical scores of 2160. Each received gold medals.

In individual competition, SFC Robert D. Whitaker won the international pistol championship with a score of 589. Staff Sgt. Maj. William B. Blankenship was second.

Maj. Lones W. Wigger won the international rifle championship with a top score of 556.

Golf Pro Doyle Turns In Shoes for Boots

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Golf pro Ken Doyle has made a temporary trade — golf shoes for jungle boots.

Doyle, 23, now a supply sergeant with the 199th Light Infantry Bde., the Republic of Vietnam, turned pro just before entering the Army.

As an amateur he competed in many golf tournaments. In the West Virginia Open he won first place in the amateur competition, while Slammin' Sammy Snead took top honors in the pro ranks.

A shooter in the low 70s, Doyle continued playing golf after he entered the Army. Stationed at Fort McPherson, Ga., as assistant golf pro, he played in many one-day tourneys in Georgia, Alabama and Florida.

Doyle, from West Hartford, Conn., still practices his game whenever possible.

"Golfing is my career," he explained. "I hope to keep in practice so that I can compete in tournaments again when I return to the states."

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

There were no changes in the status of the Rod and Gun Fishing Derby last week. SSgt. (ret.) Edward Saunders leads the catfish contest with a three-pound nine-ounce entry, SSgt. James Stevenson is ahead in the bream category with a 20-ounce entry and CWO Jay Cochran's seven-pound three-ounce bass is the largest registered this month.

The special archery deer season begins in Georgia Oct. 1 and closes Oct. 25. In Alabama the season opens Oct. 15 and closes Jan. 12. Georgia archers may also hunt during the regular gun season which opens Nov. 1 and closes Jan. 3.

Only long bows with a minimum pull of 40-pounds will be used to hunt deer. The use of the cross bow is prohibited. All arrows used for deer must have a recognized hunting type head with three or more cutting edges.

A special archery license is required in Georgia. They may be obtained at Rod and Gun Club headquarters. Hunters are required to bring all deer to the Fort Benning check station located at Bldg. 5883, Harmony Church. Prior to hunting, hunters must register at the Rod and Gun Club headquarters, Provost Marshal Office or Range Control Office.

The first half of the Georgia dove season closes Oct. 4. On that day hunters are permitted to hunt over the entire Georgia part of the reservation. The first half of the Alabama dove season opened Sept. 22 and will close Nov. 10. The amount of real estate the reservation has in Alabama is small compared to that in Georgia but the Alabama area has several good dove fields. We hope the Alabama season will produce more doves than the Georgia season which was very unsatisfactory as far as local hunters were concerned.

The evenings are getting cooler but the days are still warm and the hunter or fisherman going afield can still expect to encounter snakes. They are usually abundant at this time of the year. Their favorite habitat is in heavy brush along the edges of fields and along the banks of ponds and streams. But this doesn't mean these should be the only places you should be on the lookout for them.

Many outdoorsmen will kill any snake on sight but in doing this they sometimes do themselves a disservice. Only a small number of snakes are dangerous to man and they are a most effective controller of rats and other pests.

The deadly snakes native to Georgia are the rattlesnake, copperhead, water moccasin or cottonmouth and coral snake. Species of rattlesnakes found are the eastern diamond back, timber rattler, pigmy rattler and the canebrake rattler.

All rattlesnakes as well as copperheads and cottonmouths are of the pit viper family of snakes. They can be distinguished from other types by several characteristics. Each has a depression or pit between the eye and the nostril. The heads of these snakes are broader than the body and when viewed from above appear to be shaped like a broad arrow point. The eyes of the pit vipers are enlongated with a cats eye type pupil, while other type snakes have round eyes.

The coral snake, the only poisonous snake native to Georgia not from the pit viper family can be distinguished by broad rings of scarlet and black separated by narrow yellow bands. To distinguish the coral snake from ther similarly-colored non-poisonous snakes remember the old saying, "red touch black, good for Jack. Red touch yellow, kill a fellow".

Not all of the poisonous snakes native to Georgia inhabit this area. The timber rattler primarily inhabits the wooded mountainous regions of North Georgia, the coral snake is rare and will only be found in the southernmost regions of the state and the cottonmouth is rarely found north of a line generally running from Agusta, Macon and Columbus.

A cautious hunter or fisherman stands little chance of being bitten by a poisonous snake. Use common sense when you go afield. Wear boots and stay out of thick brush whenever possible. Step on a fallen log or similar object before you step over it. Look before you put your foot down. Don't reach into hollow logs and other holes that might contain snakes.

Should you or a buddy be unfortunate and be bitten by a poisonous snake, the recommended procedure is to apply a tourniquet between the bite and the heart, have the victim remain quiet, call for evacuation or go to a medical facility.

Team Will Go To Canada First

Williford Will Represent U.S.

Army lieutenant William D. Williford, from Fort Benning, Ga. took seventh place in the first Interservice Orienteering Championship at Prince William Park, Va., Sept. 12.

The race, staged at a park which is adjacent to Marine Corps Base, Quantico, Va., featured an eight-man team of Quantico Marines and a five-man Army squad. It was the first organized American competition in orienteering, a popular European sport which combines cross-country running with pathfinding.

The top seven finishers at Friday's race will represent the United States at the 1969 Conseil International Du Sport Militaire Games in Switzerland, Sept. 28 through Oct. 3.

The sport is basically an effort to run a designated compass course in the shortest possible time. The orienteer is given a map with checkpoints marked on it. Using his compass, he must go to each checkpoint in the correct order. How he plots his course is strictly up to him.

In addition to being an excellent runner and map reader, the orienteer must be able to make instant decisions and keep calm despite the strenuous mental and physical demands of the sport.

Quantico's Physical Fitness Academy became interested in the sport last year, and because of its obvious military values, hopes to eventually incorporate some aspects of it into Marine Corps training.

Before the meet in Switzerland, the orienteers will challenge some teams in Ontario, Canada. Accompanying the Americans will be Marine Gunnery Sergeant Cyril Day, an instructor at the Physical Fitness Academy and one of the nation's top orienteering instructors, who will act as trainer.

Weight Lifter Held College Title

By Spc George Banks

Pedro Mercado, a Non-commissioned Officer Candidate here is a classic case right out of the typical "before and after" genre of advertising; he is, in fact, a veritable walking monument attesting to the power of protein and personal physical fitness.

Mercado, a native of Mayaguez, Puerto Rico, is not a person in whose face one would kick sand. The 20-year old soldier stands 6 feet 2 inches tall, and weighs in at a compact 192 pounds. This is a radical change from when he was 16 years old and weighed a mere 110 pounds. He claims that he was motivated to build up his body through weightlifting and gymnastics because people were constantly calling him "skinny."

The results of his crash "bulk-up" campaign are obvious: He has won five trophies (two for bodybuilding and two for weightlifting), including the top slot in 1968's Junior Competitive Power Lifting Contest in Puerto Rico. In that match, he achieved the following results: Dead lift — 455 lbs; Bench Press — 225 lbs; and the Full Squat — 340 lbs.

Throughout his lifetime, Mercado has sought to disprove the theory that the avid weightlifter is axiomatically musclebound, and therefore incapable of being a skilled competitor in any other sport. In 1965, he was a member of a high school volleyball team which placed second in overall standings in Puerto Rico. Later, while a student at Colegio de Agricultura Artes Mecanicas, Puerto Rica University, Mercado made his mark as a gymnast. During the same period, Mercado received karate instruction, from which he emerged with a 7th degree white belt. Finally, in March, 1968, he was named "Mr. College" in a body building contest at Mayaguez A&M (Artes & Mecanicas).

Mercado, who is an ardent skin diver, plans to attend Ranger and Airborne schools upon completion of the Noncommissioned Officer Candidate program. It is likely that he will surprise his supervisors when they tell him to knock out some pullups; the last time this happened, Mercado jumped up, grabbed the high bar, and proceeded to execute 20 perfect inverted push-ups. He does admit that a pull-up is a challenge — if it is done one-handed.

Mercado is a member of 81st Company, 8th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade.

Dragsters Will Battle for Big Prize Money

A $10,000 eliminator meet believed to be the largest drag racing event ever held in Alabama, has been scheduled for the Phenix Dragway on Oct. 4 and 5.

The event will be run in conjunction with the $10,000 meet in Atlanta the following week-end and should draw many of the nations fastest top fuel cars.

TENNESSEE BO-WEEVIL
Preston Davis Drives Entry In Phenix City Race

A prize fund has been set up for the fuel dragsters, with only the 16 fastest cars being eligible for the eliminations set for Oct. 5. All dragsters must be qualified by 10 p.m. Oct. 4. About 25 dragsters are expected to compete for the 16 places. A speed in excess of 200 miles per hour will probably be required to qualify.

The top eliminator will receive a check for $2,000 in addition to qualifying money and a special bonus of 10 per cent will be paid for cars participating in both the Phenix City and Atlanta meets.

Four of the fastest dragsters running have already been entered in the Phenix City meet. Included is Raymond Godman's famed "Tennessee Bo-Weevil" which will be driven by Preston Davis. In the most recent "Nationals" held over the Labor Day Weekend at Indianapolis, Ind. Davis drove Godman's car to 228.13 miles per hour, the second top speed of the meet from a standing start quarter mile acceleration time.

Pete Robinson, from Atlanta, who pilots a dragster called "Tinker Toy" has also entered the meet. Pete won the World Championship in 1966, the Nationals in 1961 and briefly held the top fuel national record set at the Phenix Dragway in April 1967.

Another top car fresh from the All-American Championship in Bristol, Tenn. will be the car of Jim Nicoll of Los Angeles, Calif.

Jerry Coley, owner of the Phenix Dragway is looking forward to a new strip record, elapsed time record and the largest crowd ever to gather for a drag race in Alabama.

Gates will open at 10 a.m. on Saturday with a special portion of the eliminator being run on Saturday night. The gates open again at 8 a.m. on Sunday with the top fuel eliminations starting at 1 p.m.

The admission for Saturday is $4 with $1 addition for a pit pass and on Sunday $5 general admission and $2 extra for a pit pass. There is a 50 per cent discount on general admission tickets for military personnel.

2 Board Personnel Get Money for Suggestions

Suggestions by military personnel and Department of the Army civilian employees of the Infantry Board at Fort Benning were rewarded in the form of cash awards and letters of appreciation.

Those recognized for their suggestions were SSgt. Watson J. Stark and Mrs. Ann W. Hill.

Mrs. Hill, clerk-stenographer in the Small Arms Test Division of the Infantry materiel test board, was awarded $15 for one suggestion in which she proposed the establishment of a suspense system for the large volume of recurring reports in the Logistics Division. She had formerly worked there.

The adoption of her suggestion has increased the efficiency, improved operations and eliminated unnecessary administration in the division.

Not one to let her first suggestion become her last, Mrs. Hill also saw the needs of change when she visited the banks at Fort Benning each week and submitted a second suggestion. She suggested that the doors to the 1st National Bank and Columbus Bank and Trust Company be relinged to swing out instead of their inward swing.

She theorized that this would possibly prevent a congestion incident should there be an emergency evacuation of the buildings, such as caused by a fire or for other reasons for hurried exodus.

For this suggestion she was presented a letter of appreciation and commendation for her thoughtfulness and insight. She was praised for eliminating the potential safety hazard and thus improving morale of patrons of the two establishments.

Stark was awarded $25 for his suggestion of relocating file cabinets in the Supporting Weapons Test Division in which he is operations sergeant. Through his planned relocation of the cabinet in the central working area for Mrs. Katherine Bross, clerk - stenographer in the division and himself, many steps were saved thus creating greater efficiency within the division.

Stark was presented his award in the office of Col. Charles B. Thomas, president of the test board, while Mrs. Hill was awarded her check and letter by Lt. Col. Arthur R. Wichmann, chief of the Small Arms Test Division.

Aussie, U.S. Majors Get Chance to Swap Duties

An Infantry Center major will swap places with his Australian counterpart as part of a unique exchange sponsored by the Infantry Branch, Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel (DCSPER), Department of the Army, Washington, D. C.

Maj. Frank Phelan of Rensselaer, N. Y., will leave in October for Ingleburn, New South Wales, a suburb of Sidney. He will be assigned there as instructor of Australian Army tactics at the company and brigade level. Part of his duties "down under" will be to give advice on U. S. tactics and to evaluate field exercises and perform general liaison work.

His counterpart in the exchange program, Mickey Bindly will be assigned at Fort Benning to the Brigade and Battalion Operations Department (BBOD) at the Infantry School, Phelan's previous assignment.

Phelan's family will accompany him to his new assignment. They have been invited to visit the Australian Embassy in Washington, D. C., before departing for Australia.

THE GENERAL SHERIDAN—AIRBORNE ASSAULT VEHICLE

'Sheridan' Provides Power, Mobility

By Bill Hardin

The Infantry School affords an opportunity for officer candidates and students in the Infantry Officer Advanced Course to learn about combat ground operations from hand-to-hand combat to the employment of the General Sheridan and its Shillelagh missile.

For the latter, instruction is given by members of the Armor and Mine Subcommittee of the Weapons Department's Anti-tank and Missile Committee.

During this instruction, it is emphasized that if, in the past, the U.S. had been called upon by an ally to provide the support of an armored vehicle processing the firepower and mobility of a tank, it would have taken weeks, possibly months to transport such a vehicle to the battlefield—the reason being that these vehicles would have had to be transported by ship.

However, with the advent of the M551 Armored Reconnaissance Airborne Assault Vehicle—the General Sheridan—there is a vehicle with firepower greater than that of a tank and mobility greater than that of an armored personnel carrier. The General Sheridan enables troops to be on the field of combat within days, possibly hours.

Studies began in the mid-1950s showed that improvement of American armored vehicles was needed in the areas of both firepower and mobility. It was further determined that a need existed for a vehicle which could deliver a higher degree of first round hit-kills than existing equipment.

The study also revealed that there was a need for a vehicle which could be transported by aircraft, be air dropped and be amphibious, as well. The General Sheridan incorporates all of these capabilities.

Combat loaded, it weighs almost 17 tons. The fastest armored tracked vehicle in our inventory today, it is powered by a 300-horsepower Diesel engine which enables it to reach a top governed speed of 45 m.p.h. Possessing a fuel capacity of 156 gallons, the General Sheridan can attain a cruising range of 375 miles, based on secondary road operation.

The main armament is the 152mm gun-launcher, which fires both conventional ammunition and the Shillelagh missile. Two machine guns serve to augment the firepower of the turret giving the vehicle its own screening capability.

The basic load of the new vehicle is 10 missiles, 20 conventional rounds for the big gun, 3,000 rounds for the 7.62mm machine gun and 1,000 rounds of ammunition for the .50 caliber machine gun.

The students learn there are four types of the Shillelagh missile. These are practice, short range, extended range and a new round which can be used to fire at both short range and long range targets. There is much about the Shillelagh which remains classified, including the range of the missile and its penetration capability.

The General Sheridan has a night firing capability as well as the normal daylight firing capability. For night firing of conventional ammunition, a passive type sight has been provided. In addition, to provide better night fighting capabilities, a Xenon searchlight kit has been developed.

Safety Office Requests Cooperation of Parents

A request for parent cooperation has been issued by the post Safety Office.

Safety Director Norman M. Evans said, "Parents may help promote safety for their children by keeping them in their quarters until eight o'clock each school day morning."

"Children will still have a half-hour to reach their first class," he explained. "They will not be out in the heavy traffic which prevails each morning until the 8 a.m. work starting time for most civilian and military persons over the post."

An official in the office of the provost marshal agreed. He said the danger of a child being struck by a motor vehicle would be greatly reduced if parents will cooperate in this matter.

He explained it would be of benefit to his military policemen who are extremely busy at this hour with the handling of the traffic.

Private's Scores Startle Everyone

By Mary R. Braswell

When Pvt. Jim Ambos of the Training Center's Co. A, 8th Bn., 2nd Bde., completed his GED tests, his scores startled everyone but himself.

He achieved a 99 percentile on three sections of the test, 96 per cent on a fourth and his lowest score was 90 per cent.

According to Charles Maffett, director of the Sand Hill Educational Center, Ambos' scores are better than any he has ever seen.

But they were not good enough for Ambos, who expressed disappointment with the 90 per cent score. An independent student who pursued his own goals, he was in the 11th grade at Melbourne, Fla., when he quit high school.

His studies there had included development of his natural linguistic abilities through courses in Spanish, French and Russian. He also was interested in science and had worked with another student on a research project that won first place in regional competition and third place in the Science Fair sponsored by the National Science Foundation.

Pleased to obtain his GED certificate, Ambos will graduate from basic training this week and plans to apply for OCS as soon as he arrives at his advanced training site.

Capt. Lacy J. Tyler is Ambos' company commander.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Ambos, 23 Vesta Circle, Melbourne.

Coosa Valley Fair Ribbon Cut by Silver Star Winner

Sp4 Charles L. Burnes Jr., Rome, Ga., who recently was awarded the Silver Star, cut the ribbon officially opening the 21st annual Coosa Valley Fair in Rome.

He was given a key to the city by Bruce Hamler, city manager, and presented a special commendation from Georgia Gov. Lester Maddox by Zell Miller, executive secretary to the governor.

Burnes was presented the Silver Star for heroic actions while serving in the Republic of Vietnam. In part, the citation read: "While Burnes' company was conducting a combat sweep it encountered a well-entrenched North Vietnamese Army force. Burnes immediately maneuvered his men toward the enemy position and directed suppressive fire on the emplacement.

Silence

"Under covering fire, he moved to a position from which he was able to silence the bunker with several well-placed hand grenades.

"As the company resumed the sweep, the company commander and three other men were wounded by hostile machinegun fire. With complete disregard for his personal safety, Burnes maneuvered on the emplacement and again came under intense fire.

"Despite enemy fire impacting all around him, Burnes rushed to the aid of his comrades. He remained in an exposed area until medics arrived and then assisted in carrying his fellow soldiers to a secure rear location where they could be evacuated.

Saving Lives

"His courageous actions were directly responsible for saving the lives of his comrades and contributed to the success of the mission."

Burnes is now stationed at the Reception Station where he serves in the procurement branch as an administrative supervisor dealing in career counseling.

A 1965 graduate of West Rome High School, Burnes attended Shorter College and Auburn University before entering the Army in 1967. He is due to be discharged from the Army in December and will continue the study of electrical engineering at Auburn University.

Colonel, Son Jump Together From Plane

By PFC Paul Miller

"Make room for daddy, because father knows best." That was the sentiment when an airborne student here was joined by his father in making his first jump.

Col. Charles E. Garwood, chief of the Doctrine and Organization Division of the Combat Developments Command, Infantry Agency, decided to accompany his son, 2nd Lt. Charles E. Garwood III, and other airborne students aboard an Air Force C-119.

For the colonel, a "master parachutist," the jump was something of an occasion, for, in addition to the fact that he was parachuting with his son, the exit from the four-engine plane marked the 100th jump of his career.

Lieutenant Garwood is a recent ROTC graduate of East Tennessee State University in Johnson City.

TCB Honors Sp4 Oberfeld

Sp4 Kirk Oberfeld of Columbus, Ohio, has been named Soldier of the Month for the Candidate Bde. for the month of September.

Oberfeld is assigned to the S-2 section of The Candidate Bde. Headquarters. He is a graduate of Kalamazoo (Mich.) College where he received a bachelor of arts degree in political science in 1967.

The Soldier of the Month is judged on several points, including appearance, poise, military knowledge, skill in duty and knowledge of current events.

Oberfeld is a son of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Oberfeld of Grand Rapids, Mich.

Specialist and Mrs. Oberfeld are currently residing in Columbus.

Officials Warn Of Unsafe Fams

Unit maintenance officials have been warned by the Directorate of Logistics that unsafe fans may now be in use in some Fort Benning buildings.

The failure of the weld between the pedestal and the base and possible loose blades make the fans a potential safety hazard, the directorate said.

Five Reservists Re-Up For Three Years Each

By PFC Lee Myers

Boasting a total of 79 years of military service — 64 in the U. S. Army Reserve — five Reservists here on two-weeks active duty for training signed up July 22 for another three years each.

All are members of the 3345th U. S. Army Hospital Augmentation, a Reserve unit with sections in Montgomery and Birmingham, Ala., commanded by Col. Henry E. Askin, a medical doctor and general practitioner in Alexander City, Ala.

The five are:

The assistant chief ward master of 3345th, with a quarter-century of service, SFC John E. Franklin who is a traffic manager for a manufacturing company in civilian life. He is the elder statesman of the group, having served in the European Theater during World War II.

A millwright in Birmingham, S-Sgt. Connis J. King, who has 17 years of service and is assistant mess sergeant.

The medical supply sergeant, Sp7 Chris F. Walters, who is a Birmingham postman with 16 years service including a tour in Korea in 1951-52.

With 12 years of service, SFC William H. Nix, the mess sergeant. In civilian life, he is meat manager of a grocery market in Birmingham.

Youngest of the group is Sp5 Curtis Mitchell with nine years of service. He is first cook in the 3345th and an odontology assistant in Birmingham.

The active duty capability of the 3345th is to augment Martin Army Hospital here. In the event of mobilization or if the patient load reaches a critical level, the unit reports to Fort Benning.

The Reserve duty capability of the unit is to assist four civilian hospitals in Birmingham.

Sergeant Major Speaks to Class

Staff Sgt. Maj. Thomas E. Fitzpatrick was the guest speaker at the exercises of Noncommissioned Officer Candidate Class 6-69 in Theater No. 3.

Fitzpatrick's remarks were directed to the 175 new sergeants graduating from the 103rd Co., 10th Stu. Bn. The Candidate Bde.

"You, as well as I, have the responsibility to each other as sergeants and noncommissioned officers to properly conduct ourselves so as not to bring discredit upon the U.S. Army and the corps of noncommissioned officers," he stated.

Honored at the graduation as the distinguished graduate was SSgt. Robert E. Mars, Kenosha, Wis.

For his achievement, Mars received a letter of commendation from Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the Infantry School, and engraved "Follow Me" statuette.

EXTRA SPECIAL! 1966 FIAT "1100" Station Wagon $395

BARRINGTON MOTOR COMPANY

1101 4th Avenue — "FIAT SALES & SERVICE" — Phone 323-1881

THE BAYONET

SERVING . . . FT. BENNING, GEORGIA—HOME OF THE U. S. ARMY INFANTRY CENTER

VOLUME XV — SEPTEMBER, 1969 — NO. 175

"HE'S THE GREATEST football player who ever lived—and remember, I saw Jim Thorpe, Red Grange and Bronko Nagurski. I saw all of 'em."

The speaker was silver-haired and authoritative. His young listener was impressed. I can't for the life of me remember who that authority was, but the young listener was me. And the player he was talking about was Doc Blanchard, then at the height of fame at West Point.

From 1944 when he entered the Military Academy, fullback Blanchard led the Cadets to three undefeated seasons, including shut-outs against Notre Dame, 48-0 and 59-0. Blanchard was a pile driver up the middle, (Mr. Inside) and he teamed up with elusive halfback Glenn Davis (Mr. Outside) in a literally unbeatable combination.

BOMBS AWAY!

Now, at 45, Col. Felix A. Blanchard is director of tactical evaluation with the headquarters of the 12th Air Force at Bergstrom Air Force Base in Texas. Before this assignment, he was a fighter-bomber pilot. In his last tour of duty he logged more than 100 combat missions in Asia, with 84 of them over North Vietnam, before the bombing halt.

Today the Colonel's interest in football is lukewarm, but it's likely to heat up as he watches the progress of a sophomore end at North Carolina whose name is Felix Blanchard III. Young Felix is Doc's son.

An irony is that the man who became perhaps the greatest grid star in Army history might, instead, have become the greatest grid star in Navy history. Blanchard had tried to enlist in the Navy V-12 program but got turned down because of a childhood eye injury. The Army drafted him, put him in the ground school of the Air Force and from there it was onward and upward.

Some old timers think Blanchard would have made it big in the pros, ranking with Jimmy Brown as a ball-carrier. But Doc decided to stick with his military career and expresses no regrets. ★

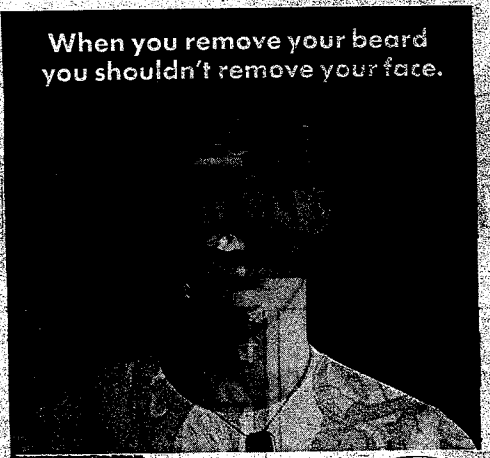
When you remove your beard you shouldn't remove your face.



Today's super-duper razor blades are meant to cut whiskers. They can also do a job on the skin underneath the whiskers.

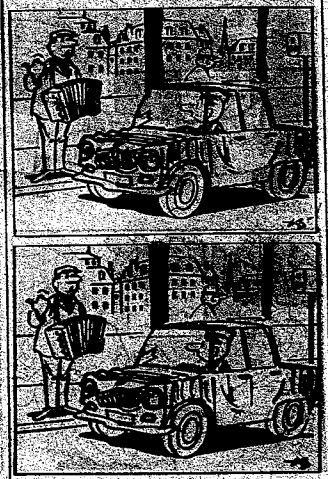
To help keep you from butchering yourself—this is the reason for Rise.® And why we put a thin lubricating film into it that gets between your blade and your skin.

Put Rise on your face before you shave, and maybe you won't have to put toilet paper on your face after it.

Save Face.

THE GAME OF SEVEN GOOFS

These two drawings look alike, but actually differ in at least seven subtle ways. Check your findings with the answers printed upside down.



Solution: (1) The cap of the accordion is smaller. (2) The tip of the third finger of the accordionist is visible. (3) The pompom on the left is different. (4) The pattern on the hood of the hood is lower, on the right. (5) The headlight, left, is more round. (6) The right hand of the driver is indented. (7) The right side of the front door is indented.

Bet you didn't know...

And did you know...

If you'd rather be doing something else in the Army, or serving in some other part of the world, the choice is yours. When you reenlist. And you might not have to wait.

Reenlistment options offer you your pick of schools, training or station. And the chance to pick up some extra money, too. You may be able to get the duty you want along with a regular bonus and a Variable Reenlistment Bonus.

Check it out. See your Career Counselor.

He'll help you change course if you think you should. Tell you what you might be better qualified for... A new MOS. A different branch. Another duty station. And he'll tell you how much cash you'll get.

He might also tell you that you can reenlist right away. Without finishing your current hitch. The choice is all yours. Maybe sooner than you think. Maybe right now. Look into it.

Your future, your decision... stay ARMY.

KICKING IT AROUND

with Buck O'Brien

BEN FRANKLIN MADE MANY PITHY OBSERVATIONS like, "There never was a good war or a bad peace."

Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman got into the quote books with three words, "War is hell!"

Will Rogers and Bugs Baer said, "America never lost a war or won a peace conference."

Such phrases are variously known as maxims, adages, proverbs or wise sayings. They are supposed to contain basic truths. One line not yet included in Bartlett's Familiar Quotations is, "Don't trust anybody over 30."

Those of us who are 31 and still trustworthy consider that rather severe. Yet, when you consider some of the truisms handed down by the greybeards, it's easy to see that some distrust would edge its way into the mind of the thinking youth.

For instance, we've all been told, "Two heads are better than one," and "Many hands make light work." But if the job is botched, some smarty sneers, "Too many cooks spoil the broth." Variation: "A giraffe is a horse that was put together by a committee."

* * *

If "love is blind" how can there be "love at first sight?"

If "faint heart ne'er won fair lady," what is the good of being meek and inheriting the earth?

* * *

Obviously, a good many adages cancel each other out. So here's a game. Consider each of the following aphorisms and see if you can recall one of its opposite.

1—You can't teach an old dog new tricks.
2—Absence makes the heart grow fonder.
3—The bigger they are, the harder they fall.
4—A rolling stone gathers no moss.
5—Look before you leap.

* * *

To be fair to yourself, give a few minutes thought to the above and try to come up with the contra-maxims before you read on. Did you do that? So read on:

1—You're never too old to learn.
2—Out of sight, out of mind.
3—A good big man will always beat a good little man.
4—Go West, young man.
5—He who hesitates is lost.

* * *

Sometimes the gagsters take hold of a revered adage and show that it isn't invariably sensible. B. Franklin is credited with "Early to bed and early to rise makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise." But, really, the rich guys sleep 'till noon. Johnny Carson, who stays up late, is reasonably healthy, reasonably wealthy, and wise enough to remain so. And as one latter-day comer of sayings says, "Early to bed and early to rise and you rarely meet any important people."

Unfortunately for sleepy heads, army buglers still go along with old "Poor Richard" and his early-to-rise dictum. But was Franklin so smart, after all? He didn't even know enough to come in out of the lightning, did he, gang?

Poet Alfred Lord Tennyson write, "'Tis better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all."

And then Cartoonist Tad Dorgan gave his own shorter version: "'Tis better to have loved and lost—much better."

Many old sayings are discredited in our day. "Feed a cold, starve a fever," isn't sound medical advice. A good balanced diet is better in either case. . . "Neither a borrower nor a lender be," if adhered to, would put the local building and loan banks, auto manufacturers and fly-now, pay-later airlines out of business. "Silence is golden" would kill all disc jockeys, play-by-play announcers, politicians and top sergeants.

51 YEARS OF TRAINING

Fort Benning has been training American soldiers since October, 1918. In the top picture, Infantrymen are here to train for the World War I expeditionary forces. About 39 years later Infantrymen here, middle picture, are preparing to fight in World War II. Today Infantrymen, bottom picture, train here before meeting combat in the Republic of Vietnam.

Post Notes 51st Year

By Marian Jones

On Tuesday the world's largest training center for the Infantryman will be 51 years old.

Camp Benning was founded on Oct. 7, 1918, to meet the manpower needs of Gen. "Black Jack" Pershing's expeditionary forces

On Oct. 6 troops began arriving at the camp site which had been established on Macon Road near Columbus.

The camp was officially born the following day.

Twelve days later, on Oct. 19, a ceremony was held officially designating the Army post as "Camp Benning," named after an outstanding lawyer-turned-soldier from Columbus; Confederate General, Henry Lewis Benning.

A monument, presented by the Columbus Chamber of Comunerce, marks the site where Camp Benning was born.

One of the post's first commanders, Maj. Gen. C. S.

President Cites 43rd Engineers

By Spt James Doherty

A Presidential letter of appreciation, thanking the soldier-engineers of Fort Benning's 43rd Engineer Bn. 81st Engineer Group, for their hurricane emergency relief efforts last month, has been received by Lt. Col. Henry A. Pate Jr., battalion commander.

President Richard Nixon's letter, praising the 43rd's immediate response to the damage and destruction caused by Hurricane Camille, noted that the 43rd's record "is one which the entire nation greatly admires and deeply appreciates."

"You and your associates and all those who have helped in this effort should be very proud of the high standard which has been achieved," the President wrote to Pate.

"I hope you will pass along this word of thanks and commendation from me and all Americans — to all who helped make that achievement possible," the President added.

The engineers arrived in the Mississippi Gulf Coast area Aug. 21, four days after the area had been hit by 196-mile per hour winds and 24-foot tides from the most powerful hurricane ever to strike the mainland of the United States.

For three weeks they cleared roads, removed debris and disposed of dead animal victims of the storm.

Working 24-hour shifts until their final week, the engineers moved a total of over 45,000 tons of debris, cleared over 500 miles of road and disposed of over 28 tons of dead animals.

Supporting the engineers' efforts were two aviation companies, food service teams, a medical team from Martin Army Hospital, scout dog teams from the 26th Scout Dog platoon, generator and power sotrce units and more engineers from Co. D, 518th Engineer Bn.

600 Attend Post Kickoff For United Givers Drive

By SFC Richard Kemp

Approximately 600 unit project officers, team captains and key men heard a trio of community leaders speak in a ceremony marking the start of the 1970 United Givers fund campaign at Fort Benning.

The three were Jack A. Bell, president of the Columbus Gas Light Co. and drive chairman, James A. Byars, president of Jordan Mills and president of United Givers Fund, and Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott, post commanding general.

The ceremony was held in Marshall Auditorium at Infantry Hall, headquarters of the Infantry Center.

Bell challenged the group to look behind the scenes of the 35 agencies participating in United Givers. He told them that it is their responsibility to explain the why and how of United Givers.

He urged them to take tours of the agencies to better understand the needs.

"If you go behind the scenes, you will feel so much better about your part in this campaign," Bell said.

He cited the growth of the communities served by United Givers and the increase in population as causing a growth in the UG agencies and an increased demand for their services.

Byars thanked the group for the "wonderful job you have done in years past and that you will do this year."

He said if everyone knew of the needs of the UG agencies "they would consider nothing less than their fair share."

General Talbott said before the kickoff ceremony he had pledged to Byars and Bell "we here would see to it that Fort Benning would continue its tradition of going over the top in the United Givers campaign."

The general noted two thirds of the post's families live off the military reservation where they are part of the community, that hundreds of Fort Benning children attend high school in Columbus and that all of Fort Benning's population have close business and social ties with the area.

Fort Benning's fair share goal is $205,000. Of this amount, one-third will remain at the post to support three agencies benefiting the military population only, General Talbott said.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

By Bill King

King's Pizza On Call

Tuna salad tastes just as good in a hot sandwich as in a cold one. Top open sandwich halves with cheese slices and toast under the broiler.

Savor a tasty combination of canned asparagus and cream of mushroom soup. Add a dash of nutmeg before serving.

If dinner company includes a very young child, smooth a "place mat" of transparent wrap over your fancy tablecloth where he is to be seated. You'll both enjoy a more carefree dinner.

In 1911, during excavation of a Roman house built about 300 A.D., a sealed jug was found in a cellar. Archeologists analyzed its contents and discovered the oldest beer on record.

Latest statistics say that the average American family of four consumes more than two and a half tons of food annually.

You'll always be sure of your share of delicious, well prepared food at

Services Will Advise Soldiers on Loans, Purchase Agreements

Our government is constantly endeavoring to help you from being cheated when you buy products that are unreliable or unsafe.

Likewise, it tries to help you when you sign credit purchase agreements for merchandise and money.

In the latter case, when you take out a loan, you are actually buying money from the lender. You agree to pay him an "interest" for the term of the loan, while you repay it.

Public Law 90-321, passed last year, affects about 90 per cent of all credit business in the United States — or more than $100 billion a year. This bill is known as the "Truth in Lending" law and requires full disclosure of all finance charges covering the purchase of cars, consumer goods, personal loans and virtually every charge that is part of a credit transaction.

However, our government cannot be looking over your shoulder when you sign a purchase agreement. But, it does provide the information that can help you before you sign the contract.

One such booklet is DOD Pa-10, entitled "Credit: master or Servant?" You can get a copy through normal channels within your service.

If you have the slightest doubt about the intricate terminology of the contract, which is one of the reasons for "misinterpretations" of the agreement you may sign, see your legal assistance officer. His knowledge of law and his assistance may save you hundreds of dollars.

Don't be "taken in" by buying or borrowing in haste. Legal Assistance Officers' files are jamed with "I thought it meant..."

One such case involves a serviceman who borrowed $1,000 on a long term contract. The company required that he take out an insurance policy with an affiliated company on himself and his wife.

After the company put the squeeze on him later for payment, it was discovered the cost of the loan, interest charge, carrying charge and insurance of the original loan was 700 per cent — or $7,000. He had signed the contract. The man had to pay.

Don't rush into signing a contract. Read it carefully. If it is too complicated, let your legal assistance officer see it.

And, get the booklet, "Credit: Master or Servant?" It was written specifically for you. It could save you a lot of money — and headaches. (AFPS)

MORTALITY RATE

What is the percentage of mortality rate among wounded admitted to medical treatment facilities? It was less than 3 per cent a year ago.

The mortality rate percentage has been holding at 2.5 per cent.

What does the Army propose to do with 4th Bde., 82nd Airborne Division?

Present plans envision that the 4th Bde. of the 82nd Airborne Division will be inactivated upon return to Fort Bragg of the 3rd Bde., now in the Republic of Vietnam. The net result will be the redesignation of the existing 4th Bde. to the 3rd Bde., with no appreciable change of strength at Fort Bragg.

VETERANS CENTERS

More than a year ago the Veterans Association announced the establishment of United States Veterans Assistance Centers in 21 major cities throughout the country. Are these USVACs still operating?

Yes, and they are staffed by representatives of the VA; Civil Service Commission, Department of Labor and other agencies. They are now more effective than ever.

FAMILY BENEFITS

What benefits are being offered next of kin of missing or captured personnel?

Each individual service has the primary responsibility for the familes of these men. And in the case of every family in which there is a family member in a missing or captured status, the paid allotments as designated by that individual, are continued to the family.

Plan Ahead for a New Career

By MSgt. Homer Henderson

Introduction

It is human nature to wonder about the future and what is in store for us. It's also human nature to want to do something about it. This means we need to think and plan ahead to the time when we complete our military obligation and enter civilian life.

Our purpose here is to acquaint you with some of the benefits availliable to you which will make your transistion to civilian life an easy one. But remember this: These benefits and compensations are rewards for honorable service. The type of discharge you receive is vitally important to your future.

Cold War GI Bill

The Cold War GI Bill defines those eligible for benefits as anyone with more than 180 days of active service for other than training purposes, any part of which was served on or after Feb. 1, 1955, separated from the service with an honorable discharge or under honorable conditions.

Perhaps the most talked-about benefits offered by the Cold War GI Bill are the educational benefits for the eligible veteran.

Under the bill, veterans may pursue courses at colleges and universities; vocational, business and technical schools; high schools and correspondence schools.

Veterans may choose any approved program of education needed to reach their educational, professional or vocational goals, to include part-time training.

The bill provides eligible veterans with up to 36 months' education. This will cover four school years of nine months each for a veteran who has served on active duty for at least two years after Jan. 31, 1955. If the veteran has served less than two years, then they may receive one and one half months of schooling for each month, or part of a month, served on active duty on or after Feb. 1, 1955.

The law grants educational allowances to help eligible veterans meet the cost of tuition, fees, books, supplies and equipment and other school needs. The allowances are provided in monthly payments, as follows:

Full Time Attendance — no dependents, $130; one dependent, $155; two dependents, $175; each additional, $10.

Three Quarter Time — no dependents, $95; one dependent, $115; two dependents, $135; each additional, $7.

Half Time — no dependents, $60; one dependent, $75; two dependents, $85; each additional, $5.

Loan Guarantee Benefits

Under the Cold War GI Bill, eligible veterans may obtain GI loans made by private lenders, or, in certain designated areas, direct loans made by the Veterans Administration.

These loans may be made for the purchase of homes; to make alterations, repairs or improvements in homes already owned and occupied by the veteran; to purchase farms or farm supplies such as livestock, machinery, feed and seed; to obtain farm working capital; or to refinance delinquent indebtedness on property to be used or occupied by the veteran as a home or for farming purposes.

Direct loans may be made by the VA; however, these are granted only for the purchase of homes and farmhouses.

Other Benefits

Under the Cold War GI Bill, the provisions of the Veterans Preference Act for federal employment have been extended to cover veterans who have served on active duty for more than 180 consecuitve days since Jan. 31, 1955.

Veterans preference in Civil Service allows a 5-point preference for those having served the required amount of time on active duty and having received a discharge under honorable conditions. A 10-point preference is given to veterans with a service-connected disability.

Hospital care from the VA on a bed-available basis for treatment of nonservice connected conditions is available to veterans whose sole service has been since Jan. 31, 1955, if such veterans are unable to meet the cost of hospital care from personal funds, hospital insurance, or other sources.

This benefit is in addition to the long-standing government practice of providing VA hospitalization for the treatment of service-connected disabilities.

The foregoing provisions of the Cold War GI Bill are but a few of the many benefits to be gained by today's soldier as a result of military service, but it must be remembered that one of the first questions you will be asked when you start applying for one of these benefits will be "What type of discharge did you receive?"

Project Transition

Several months prior to completing military service, soldiers can receive special training to prepare them for civilian jobs in government and industry. This is known as Project Transisition.

The purpose is to assist servicemen approaching ETS to convert existing skills to productive use in civilian employment, or to obtain skills, and to find and enter a job.

To be eligible to participate in the program the individual must be an enlisted man with from one to six months' service remaining, a volunteer for the program, and able to complete a course of instruction prior to expiration term of service.

New priorities went into effect on April 1, 1969.

Categories were established to give first priority to individuals with service-connected disability.

Second category is given to soldiers ineligible to reenlist for other than disciplinary reasons.

Third category goes to personnel with no previous civilian job skill, occupation or civilian related military training.

The last category includes all individuals not included in the first three categories but desirous of acquiring a new skill regardless of status. Personnel in this category must train during off duty hours only.

Counselors

All servicemen approaching the end of their tours of service are faced with the need to make decisions on the opportunites that lie before them, but they differ widely in their readiness to make these decisions.

Some have well-defined, realistic plans into which they can easily fit job information supplied to them; others have vague or unrealistic plans, and need considerable assitance in determining what they want or need in the way of employment after they leave the service.

Project TRANSITION provided for a counselor system to aid participants in reaching realistic and wise decisions and job placement.

American Painting 1900-1950 Exhibited at Columbus Museum

An exhibition of 30 paintings by Americans painted after the turn of the century will be lent for display to the Columbus Museum of Arts and Crafts by IBM's department of arts and sciences.

GUITAR PLAYER
By Max Weber

The paintings will be exhibited Oct. 5 - 28 at the Columbus Museum, 1251 Wynnton Rd.

A great shock came in 1908 when an exhibition called "Eight Americans" was shown at the Macbeth Gallery in New York.

The Eight

The outburst which greated the exhibition of The Eight seems out of proportion today. Though it was directed mainly at the artists whose robust delight in the colorful aspects of everyday urban life seemed unbearably vulgar to the critics of the day, it resulted in the group's being known as the Ash Can School.

The painters of the Ash Can School were revolutionary in their introduction of lively subject matter pertinent to contemporary life, but the experimenters whose work was even more revolutionary were those who introduced not new subject matter but new approaches to art.

During the depression years of 1930's American painting took on an added dimension of social comment and there was a conscious return to the American scene in reaction to European sophistication.

Expatriates

The disruptions of two World Wars not only sent American artists home from Europe, but also brought many European artists to America and led toward the internationalization of the arts which exists today.

The tradition of experiment was strengthened to become dominant in the 1950's with the full development of action painting and the emergence of the leadership of the New York School.

SOLDIER'S RETURN
By Jack Levine

Beneath the superficial waves of fashion which agitate the current artistic scene, the same spirit of individualism of the early years of the century has continued, whether manifested in futher experiment in abstraction or further exploration of the naturalist tradition.

It is the spirit which gives vitality as well as continuing variety to the arts today.

WOMEN'S NEWS

Scarfs Change To Bows To Add Neckline Beauty

A sewing demonstration was the highlight of a luncheon given by the Noncommissioned Officers (NCO) Wives Club at the Sand Hill NCO Club.

The program was put on by Mrs. Adron Cason and Mrs. Truett Cates of a local fabric shop.

The members were shown a variety of ways to change scarfs into belts and bows and add beauty to necklines of simple dresses and to hats. Pointers were given as to how to develop a complete wardrobe by sewing a few items.

The members and their guests were invited to join sewing classes to be held in nearby Columbus.

Activities discussed included the Christmas Bazaar, newly formed bowling league, exercise classes, golf classes, and sewing classes.

Hostesses for the luncheon were Mrs. Daryle Hovey, Mrs. Robert Bugh, and Mrs. Jesse Davis.

Modeling hats and wardrobe accessories were Mrs. Thomas Fish and Mrs. Cates.

Wives Hear of Mod, Mod World of Community Service

By Mary R. Braswell

The Training Center officers wives were introduced to the mod, mod world of Army Community Services (ACS) at their luncheon at the Supper Club.

"It's a happening, an 'in' thing here on Post," said Mrs. Raymond Kampe, director of ACS volunteers, as she sketched the varied activities of the three year old program.

A film illustrated many of the services provided including assistance with allotment problems, citizenship lessons, free baby sitting, and the food pantry. Mrs. Kampe told of the ACS Big Brother program established to help provide a brother and father image for children of servicemen who are overseas.

Lt. Alan Rogers, the Army Emergency Relief officer, and Mrs. William D. Hartsock, assistant director of ACS volunteers, accompanied Mrs. Kampe and participated in presenting a full picture of the ACS program.

The luncheon hostesses, First Bde. wives, carried out the ACS theme with table settings of miniature trees bearing ACS symbols.

At the head table were Mrs. Oscar E. Davis, wife of the ATC commanding general; Mrs. Omer Pigeon; Mrs. Richard H. Mader, Mrs. Kampe, Mrs. Robert P. Hatcher Jr., Mrs. Herbrt G. Peabody and Mrs. Robert T. Richmond.

Newcomers welcomed to the Training Center were Mmes Earl Shaffer, Hans Knoff, Jack Jones, William Cargo, Michael Cavanaugh, Robert E. Tripp, Alfred Falcon, Victor Hamilton, Steven Rumpf, William B. Fage, Joe Webb, Paul McDaniel, Lesley Witmer, Jac Wessell, Dana Maynard, Thomas Hicks, Arthur Hicks, Patrick M. Lunch, Frank J. Stipech and Richrd Weber.

Traditional Training Center charms were presented in farewell to Mmes. Theodore Kowalczyk, Paul Shake, Alfred Thomas, Leonard Miller, Douglas Ritchey and James Pogue.

General Talbott Speaks to PTA: 'Association' Can Help Children

By SFC Richard Kemp

The key word in the name, Parent-Teacher Association, is the word "association," Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott, post commanding general, said Tuesday evening.

Speaking to members of the Fort Benning PTA, the general said parents and teachers are not in a competitive situation striving to determine what is wrong with the role the others play but they must associate together for the betterment of the children.

The event was the first business meeting of the Fort Benning PTA for the 1969-70 school year. It was held in Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall with members of Girl Scout Cadet Troop 193 and the 291st Army Band taking part in the program.

Teacher Parents

General Talbott addressed his remarks "chiefly to parents;" noting he has had "an unusual association with the PTA."

He said his four grandparents and both of his parents were teachers and that he has been attending PTA meetings since he was a child.

The general stated that by joining together, parents and teachers can assure that children have the education they deserve to have.

Contemporary living is more sophisticated and more involved, a trend that will continue, he said.

Children must be aware of and fully prepared for the complications of the situation of tomorrow, General Talbott said.

He added, "We must make them masters of the situation, not mastered by the situation."

Parents Encouraged

The general said, "I solicit and encourage participation by all parents in the PTA."

In the only business activity of the evening, the group approved a $2,665 budget for the current school year.

10th Bn. Wives Hold Coffee

The noncommissioned officers wives of the 10th Stu. Bn., The Candidate Bde., held their coffee in the 10th Co. dayroom.

Mrs. James McDonough spoke to the ladies on future activities within the club.

Mrs. John Johnson hosted the coffee.

Leadership Wives Lunch and Watch

Forty ladies of the Infantry School Leadership Department Wives attended a luncheon and fashion show Tuesday.

Festivities began with a social hour at the home of Mrs. John A. Hoefling. From there, the ladies adjourned to a local department store's patio auditorium for a cold plate luncheon. Small tables covered with dark green tablecloths each held a bouquet of orange, gold and brown crepe paper flowers.

Following the luncheon, newcomers and departees were recognized. Among the newcomers welcomed were Mrs. Weldon F. Honeycutt, wife of Lt. Col. Honeycutt, deputy director of the department; Mrs. Fred H. Mahaffey, wife of Lt. Col. Mahaffey, chairman of the Leadership Committee; Mrs. Robert Farris, wife of Lt. Col. Farris, chairman of the Management Committee; and Mrs. George E. Palmer, wife of Lt. Col. Palmer, charman of Conditioning - Combatives - Drill Committee.

Mrs. Hoefling, honorary president, presented the first printed copy of an illustrated poem entitled "The Army Wife" to Mrs. Fernando L. Diaz-Ball, special guest of the group. Mrs. Diaz-Ball illustrated the poem, which will be used as a departure gift for all members of the Leadership Department Wives Group. Attached to the bottom of the framed copy given to Mrs. Diaz-Ball was a brass plate engraved "With Sincere Appreciation, Leadership Department Wives Group, Fort Benning, Georgia."

The ladies then said a farewell to Mrs. James T. Campbell, first president of the Leadership Department Wives Group. Mrs. Hoefling presented a copy of "The Army Wife" to Mrs. Campbell.

The fashion show was narrated by Mrs. James B. Gaylor. The models were provided by a local charm school.

CH-54 EASES EQUIPMENT DOWN

GI's in Vietnam Aid Gulf Victims

CAMP EAGLE, Republic of Vietnam (101st 10) Living up to their motto, "The Task is Ours," men of the 326th Engr. Bn. (Ambl.), have donated more than $1,200 to aid the Gulf Coast victims of Hurricane Camille.

"I was really surprised and pleased at the enthusiasm the men showed towards this fund drive," said Chaplain (Capt.) Donald J. Robinson, Wyandotte, Mich.

Chaplain Robinson said he developed the idea for the fund drive, which he called "Operation We Care Too," after hearing about a similar program sponsored by Bob Hope.

"I figured if the people back home could do it, we could too," he explained.

The chaplain began his campaign by passing out leaflets explaining the needs of the people in storm-battered Mississippi. Then he and the battalion commander, Lt. Col. Thomas M. McClelland, went around to speak to the men.

"We explained that men in Vietnam often get gifts, packages and letters showing that people back home support them," Chaplain Robinson said. "We suggested that this could be a chance for the men to show that they support the people at home too."

"The men really got behind the idea," Chaplain Robinson noted. "They put up collection boxes in their clubs and even helped collect from men out at fire bases. They were great."

The chaplain said that more than 50 per cent of the men in the battalion contributed.

The money collected during the drive will be personally delivered to Mississippi Gov. John Bell Williams by a member of the 326th Engineers who is rotating home. Logistic and Engineer Equipment Officer Capt. Byron Woosley, Jackson, Miss., will present the governor with a check for $1,200 and a letter signed by the unit's commanding officer. Woosley will also carry a letter signed by many of the contributors.

FOUL HUNT

Taking a lesson from nature's water creatures, a trooper from Delta Company, 2nd Bn., 14th Infantry, 25th Infantry Division, waddles through a paddy outside Fire Support Base Patton II. The Golden Dragons were on a foul hunt — for wild Charlie in the area.

Catcher-Lieutenant Recalls Playing Days

CU CHI, Republic of Vietnam (25th Infantry Division 10) Spending a year in the Republic of Vietnam keeps a lot of ardent baseball fans away from their favorite sport and from April to October it's not uncommon to hear a few moans from the more passionate bleacher bums.

But pity poor 1st. Lt. Calvin S. Fisk, assistant S-1 officer for the 25th Infantry Division's 2nd Bde. at Cu Chi. If Fisk weren't in the Army and in Vietnam, he might well be playing in the major leagues for the Baltimore Orioles.

"I've played baseball for as long as I can remember," said Fisk, a native of Charleston, N. H. "I started learning to catch the ball when I was three years old."

From then on, Fisk's baseball career escalated through the sandlots, Little League, junior and senior high schools, Babe Ruth League, American Legion and college ball at the University of New Hampshire mixed with summers in a strong amateur circuit, the Cape Cod League.

"Cape Cod Baseball was very important to me," Fisk recalled. The players were often older and more experienced, from all over the country, and I picked up a lot of valuable tips while playing in a league covered by a number of major league scouts."

Fisk, a catcher, started a successful career at New Hampshire by hitting .424 as a freshman and by the end of his junior year, the Orioles had offered him a contract.

"Playing pro ball was something I'd looked forward to all my life, but I wanted to finish my schooling, so I decided not to sign," Fisk said.

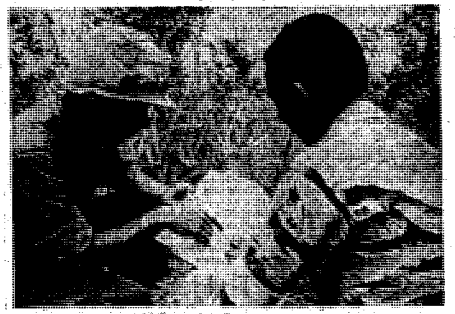
The Orioles wouldn't give up that easily, however.

After Fisk graduated in 1966, the Orioles again asked him to sign. When spring training rolled around in 1967, Fisk was at Baltimore's Florida camp.

Fisk impressed Oriole officials enough to get a shot at the team's Class A Florida State League farm club, the Miami Marlins. He made the most of the opportunity, hitting .296 and swatting five home runs in his first year of pro ball.

Right now Fisk is more concerned with meeting suspense dates than baseballs, and is catching more clerical errors than would-be base stealers.

"I've kept in good shape since I entered the Army," Fisk says. "My arm is strong and I'm still throwing well; only my hitting is a little rusty."



CAPTAIN, VIETNAMESE TALK
Capt. Van Pamelen, Left, Vietnamese

Captain Speaks Nine Languages

LZ CENTER, REPUBLIC of Vietnam (AMERICAL 10)—Somewhere under the steel pot of Capt. Bodewijn W. Van Pamelen, Haziet, N. J., lies an adroit aptitude for grasping languages. The current intelligence officer (S-2) for the AMERICAL Division's 3rd Bn. 21st Infantry, has nine languages under his helmet.

Born and raised in the Dutch East Indies, Van Pamelen was required to speak fluent French, German, English, Italian and his native language, Dutch, as a prerequisite for graduating from high school.

His schooling, however, was interrupted when the Japanese invaded the Dutch East Indies. With other Dutch citizens, he was evacuated to a POW compound near Singapore. Only seven years old at the time, he attended a nearby Chinese school and proceeded to learn that language.

After two years of captivity, the captain was released, returned home, and completed high school. Next he attended the University of Indonesia where, in order to learn the courses at the school, he first had to learn the Indonesian language and afterwards Malaysian.

When he transferred the next year, he attended the University of Holland.

Following his graduation, the captain attended the University of Denver as an exchange student for one semester to earn the equivalent of an American degree. During this time he decided that he wanted to remain in the U. S. as a citizen.

He joined the Army to speed the process by four years, applied for Officers Candidate School (OCS), was graduated and assigned to the Special Warefare Center at Fort Bragg, N. C. It was here, during six months instruction, that he learned Vietnamese.

988th MP's, Children Kick Off United Givers Fund Drive Early

By Sp4 Ken Sturzenacker

The 988th Military Police Co., Center Troop Command (CTC), started its United Givers Fund Drive with a tour of Fort Benning with two children from the Cerebral Palsy Center in Columbus.

The children, 5-year-old Scottie Vann and 5-year-old Vicki Parks, arrived at the 988th MP training room in time to pass out paychecks to several members of the company.

After a visit with Col. Donald C. Barraclaugh, deputy CTC commander and CTC project officer for United Givers, the children were taken to the Provost Marshal's Office.

There they were treated to cake and orange juice, and given a tour of the building, including the operations area, the MP desk and the detention cell. The children met Col. Eugene Murdock, provost marshal, and members of his staff.

In brief ceremonies at Colonel Murdock's office, the children were made honorary MP's and their mothers were presented with white corsages.

On leaving the Provost Marshal's office, the touring children switched from Colonel Murdock's sedan to the jeep of Capt. John Brunson, 988th commander. Captain Brunson accompanied the children throughout the morning.

Scottie and Vicki were then taken to the Airborne Department's jump towers, where they watched various phases of airborne training.

After touring the Infantry Museum and the Lawson Field area, the children were treated to a turkey dinner with all the trimmings at the 988th MP Company mess hall.

Boy Scouts Compete In Canoe-a-Thon Race

By Sp4 James Doherty

More than 100 Boy Scouts competed last weekend in a 65-mile canoe-a-thon race down the Chattahoochee River from Columbus to Eufaula, Ala.

The seventh annual race, sponsored by the Chattahoochee Council, Boy Scouts of America and the Fort Benning District Activities Council, began Friday afternoon at the Dophin Marine Landing and ended shortly after noon Sunday at the Eufaula Docks.

Overnight campsites were provided by local scouting authorities.

The first leg of the trip extended from the Columbus Docks to Fort Benning's Bradley Landing. After camping out overnight near the landing, the Scouts started the longest leg of the trip, a 28.5-mile paddle to Florence Landing, Ga.

The final third of the race, begun after Protestant and Catholic church service Sunday morning brought the Scouts twelve more miles to Cowikee Landing, Eufaula.

Elapsed total times on each leg of the race were compiled by the Scout officials.

First place winners in the 14 to 17 age group were William Speakman and Wayne Wabner with a total elapsed time of 11 hours and 20 minutes.

In second place were Mike Ranieri and Joe Everman.

Kelly Griswold and Andy Gatsis won first place in the 11 to 13 age group with an elapsed time of 13 hours and 23 minutes.

Second went to Steve Skillie and Mitchell Hunter.

Forty-six canoe teams completed the race.

Support boats and an evacuation helicopter were provided by the 10th Aviation Group here.

Benning Enters Its 52nd Year

(Cont. From Page 1)

Farnsworth, on his first day in command at his new assignment stated, "My goal is simple. It is my hope and ambition to make Fort Benning the largest and most influential Army post in the United States."

It was quite some time, however, before General Farnsworth's goal would be realized. The War Department had already disapproved his memorandum announcing Camp Benning as a permanent post and although he referred to the post as "fort," it was, in fact, recognized only as a temporary camp. In spite of this beginning, it did not take many years for the post to establish a firm reputation as the "Home of the Infantryman."

All the resources of this post are directed toward one goal — to produce the world's finest combat Infantryman."

In terms of personnel 45,000 soldiers compose the total station complement. Over 9,000 civilian employes work on the post. There are over 46,000 dependents of military personnel and an additional 4,000 families of retired personnel make their home in nearby civilian communities.

The original 85-acre tract has been expanded to the fort's present acreage of 182,251 or 285 square mile, south of Columbus.

A number of major activities support the Fort Benning misssion.

One of these is the Infantry School. Total student output for FY 1970 has been programmed for 68,020.

There are 20 courses presented and 318 classes.

Another major activity is the Training Center where basic training is conducted. Each week 880 new soldiers are graduated and a like number are being processed into the Army.

The superlative description, "largest," comes into use frequently when talking about units at Fort Benning. The post houses the world's largest Infantry brigade — the 197th Infantry Bde. with a total complement of over 6,000 men.

One of the nation's busiest airports is the post's Lawson Army Airfield. This airfield controls some 200,000 take-offs and landings each year.

Another important activity is Martin Army Hospital, a modern medical facility which provides medical treatment not only for active duty personnel but for a large retired segment of the nearby civilian communities as well.

Tenant activities which are incorporated into the post's military environment are the Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency which determines how the Infantry of the future will be structured, equipped and will fight; testing what the Infantryman will fight with is the Army Materiel Command's Infantry Board.

Additional activities are the U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit and the U.S. Infantry Human Research Unit, which conducts studies and research in devices, motivation and leadership among the Infantry.

It has been 51 years since General Farnsworth farsightedly outlined his bold plans for the future of the "Home of the Infantry." There is now little dissent that Fort Benning is one of the world's most influential military establishments.

NEW CEMETERY OFFICE

Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott, post commander, cuts a ribbon opening the new Post Cemetery office at Fort Benning. The brick office, near the entrance to the cemetery, will be staffed from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., seven days a week, to assist visitors to the cemetery.

Outstanding Ratings Awarded 3 Civilians on Infantry Board

By Rex Ellis

Three Department of the Army civilian employes of the Infantry Board at Fort Benning were honored in the office of the president when they were awarded outstanding ratings for high quality performance in their work.

Receiving recognition and certificates of achievement were Mrs. Helen Blumhagen, Mrs. Jean Massey and Mrs. Myra Morris.

The presentation of certificates was made by Col. Charles B. Thomas, president of the Infantry materiel test board.

Mrs. Blumhagen, clerk-stenographer in the Combat Conditions Test Division, was cited for her professional skill, resourcefulness, initiative and sound judgment which relieved her superiors of time-consuming, administrative details.

She received a quality step promotion for her outstanding rating.

Mrs. Massey, clerk, Military Personnel Branch, Personnel and Administrative Division, was commended for her exceptional knowledge of policies and procedures pertaining to personnel management along with her unusual administrative ability, foresight and mature judgment. She was also awarded a quality step promotion for her outstanding achievement.

Mrs. Morris, editorial clerk, Operations Division, was recognized for her exemplary degree of professionalism and knowledge demonstrated in the superior quality of her editorial accomplishment.

Mrs. Blumhagen has been employed in Civil Service for ten years, five of which have been with the Infantry Board. She is the wife of Maj. (Ret.) Robert P. Blumhagen. They have a son and daughter in Columbus high schools.

Mrs. Massey has served in Civil Service for over three years, all at Fort Benning, with the last two years at the Infantry Board. Her husband is CW4 Lewis Massey, Operations Officer, Det. A, 3rd MP Gp. The Massey's have two daughters and a son.

Mrs. Morris has been employed in Civil Service for twelve years, all of which have been with the Infantry test board. Her husband is Staff Sgt. Maj. Hugh Morris, Operations sergeant major of the 2nd Training Bde, Training Center.

2-Year College Grads Can Join OCS Program

Graduates of two-year accredited junior colleges can now enlist for Army Officer Candidate School.

Graduates with at least 60 semester hours of credit are qualified for officer training under this new policy, temporarily in effect.

Previously, a degree from an accredited four-year college was a prerequisite for the OCS enlistment option.

Letter Congratulates Benning on 51st Anniversary

Lt. Gen. Albert O. Connor, commanding general of the Third Army, has sent a letter to Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott, post commander, congratulating Fort Benning on its fifty-first anniversary.

General Connor's letter said, "Fort Benning, as the 'Home of the Infantry,' enjoys world-wide fame, not only among those in the United States Army who wear the historic crossed rifles, but also among thousands of Infantry officers and men from the free world's armies who have trained here."

Fire Prevention Week Set Oct. 5-11

By Pvt. Steve Zimmerman

The postman may always ring twice, but the fire alarm never temporizes. There is nothing leisurely implied in its constant clanging.

Rather, it represents an urgent call to which countless firemen have learned to respond by conditioned reflex. Its charismatic quality equals the dangers it implies.

Fire is a death and damage dealing hazard and its dangers should never be underestimated.

It is with this in mind, with an eye towards educating the public, that next week has been designated Fire Prevention Week at Fort Benning.

"More than 26,000 pieces of literature will be distributed next week as part of our effort to get the message across, said Gilbert A. Ward, Fort Benning fire chief.

"We want to promote fire consciousness and instruct people in the most prevalent causes of fire and the ways to prevent them," he continued.

Like the seven warning signals of cancer, the ten most common causes of fire here are something that too many people are unaware of. In both cases, the facts are readily available.

Listed in order of their frequency, the 10 causes are: Discarded lighted smoking material; dumping hot ashes onto combustible material; children playing with matches; short circuits in electric wiring and equipment; vehicle fires; overheated electrical motors; incendiarism; overheated grease; malfunction of heating equipment; and unauthorized use of gasoline.

Fort Benning's large population includes not only soldiers but many women and children. This makes the task of educating and protecting the population much greater.

This is the task of the post's six fire companies, under the command of Chief Ward and Col. David B. Conard, post engineer and fire marshall.

It is only when one considers that 74 fire fighters spread out among four fire stations are protecting 4,512 buildings comprising 22,500,000 square feet and that last year there were only 14 fires on the reservation and no fatalities, that their excellence can be appreciated.

Chief Ward said it was due largely to last year's excellent Fire Prevention Week program that fires were kept to a minimum, and this year's program is expected to accomplish as much.

Lectures and demonstrations are scheduled next week for troops stationed in the following areas: 197th Infantry Bde., 58th Infantry Parade Field, Headquarters Co. area, Crosbie Road, at 3:30 p.m., Monday; Training Center Training Area 4 DC, at 10 a.m. Tuesday; Gowdy Field, Main Post at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday; Training Center, Training Area 2 E at 10 a.m. Wednesday; Martin Army Hospital, at 2:45 p.m. Wednesday; Gowdy Field, at 9:30 a.m. Thursday; Center Troop Command, 1st Bn. area at 1 a.m. Thursday; Training Center, Training area 2 E, at 10 a.m. Friday; 197th Infantry Bde., Presidential Square, Rear of Bldg. 9057, Kelly Hill, at 3:30 p.m. Friday; Training Center, Training Area 4 DC, at 10 a.m. Saturday.

In addition lectures and demonstrations for school children at Fort Benning have been scheduled as follows: Faith School, Monday; Edward A. White School, Tuesday; Dexter School, Tuesday; McBride School, Wednesday; Loyd School, Thursday; Wilson School, Thursday, and Wilbur School, Friday.

Also, fifth grade pupils from the schools have been scheduled for tours through the Infantry Center Fire Prevention Museum (Bldg. 1819) on the following dates: Dexter School, Monday; Edward A. White School, Tuesday; Loyd School and Wilson School, Wednesday; Wilbur School, Oct. 9; and McBride School, Oct. 10.

Other aspects of the program include:

(1) Participation by the post's fire department in a Fire Fighting Equipment parade in Columbus Monday.

(2) Distribution of coloring books on Fire Prevention to kindergarten, first and second grade pupils.

(3) Distribution of fire prevention pamphlets for school children to take home and use in an inspection in which the child acts as junior fire inspector and the parent as assistant inspector.

He also met with Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the Infantry School, to discuss developments in Infantry training.

Following a luncheon at the Fort Benning Officers Club, General Linnell returned to Fort Gordon.

Decorations Awarded Captain Posthumously

The Bronze Star Medal and the Purple Heart were posthumously awarded to Capt. Robert A. Young Jr. in ceremonies here.

Mrs. Christina L. Young, Columbus, the captain's widow, accepted the decorations from Col. Talton W. Long, deputy post commander.

He was killed in action April 15.

Couple Who Met at Show Again Play 'Guys and Dolls'

By PFC Lee Myers

A Fort Benning couple, who met last year while playing "Guys and Dolls," will play two of the leads in the Playhouse production of the musical which opens Nov. 19.

Ron Johnson and his wife, Tricia, have two of the "Guys and Dolls" leads, but they do not play opposite each other. Tricia plays the female comic lead while Ron plays the male-romantic lead.

The Johnsons met during a production of "Guys and Dolls" at Fort Benjamin Harrison. In that production Ron played the other male lead and Tricia was a chorus girl while understudying the role she will play here.

They were married after the play closed when Ron was transferred to Fort Benning.

Ron's theater experience includes over a year at the Portland Civic Theater appearing in "She Loves Me," "Paint Your Wagon," and "Carnival" while directing productions and teaching acting to the amateurs in the Civic Theater.

Singing Wife

Tricia appeared in the Fort Benjamin Harrison production of "Guys and Dolls" and has sung with bands in the Indianapolis, Ind., area.

The female-romantic lead will be played by Lannie Russell who has appeared in "Sound of Music," "West Side Story" and "Oliver" among others.

The male-comic lead will be played by Bob Hanley who has extensive theater experience in New York on the straw hat circuit. He has previously played the other male lead in "Guys and Dolls" in a college production. Also, Bob was an extra in the movie, "Me, Natalie," currently released and showing in Columbus.

The story of "Guys and Dolls" shows gambling on Broadway in the early 1950's. Sky Masterson is the street's biggest gambler and Nathan Detroit is the organizer of a floating-established crap game.

The complete cast is:

SKY MASTERSON — Ron Johnson

The Early TV Bird Can Get the Award

Local early bird TV fans have an opportunity to be awarded five hours college credit in elementary mathematics.

Columbus College is cooperating with the CBS Television Network and Channel 3 in offering credit for the Sunrise Semester series, "Adventure in Mathemaical Thinking."

The video classroom, originating from Washington Square College of New York University, will be aired from 6:30 to 7 a.m. Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays. The subject will correspond to a freshman course in elementary mathematics now offered by the college.

Another course to be broadcast on alternating mornings and covering principles of geology will not earn credit because the college does not at present offer a corresponding course and no provisons are made for lab work.

Dewey Cash, associate professor of mathematics, will administer the video math course, and students who participate will be required to successfully pass both a mid-term and final examination.

Sunrise Semester math applicants will register in Room 104 of the Howard Building on campus between 7 and 8 p.m. Monday. A $10 registration fee will be required in addition to $45 for residents of the state and $100 for non-residents.

Before the end of the course each "Sunrise student" will be required to submit a transcript of high school credits as well as their college entrance exam test score in order to receive credit.

Students formerly enrolled in college will be advised as to their individual requirements when they make application.

SPECIAL STUDENTS' SCOUT TROOP
SFC Pendleton Helps Adjust a Neckerchief

Special Students Join Scouting

By Sp4 Ron Johnson

SFC A. L. Pendleton and his wife, Sandra, are scoutmaster and den mother, respectively, for a scout troop. The only problem is, they aren't sure what kind of a scout troop it is. In their troop they have boy scouts, cub scouts and a few girl scouts.

All of the kids are in special classes at Edwin A. Wood School in Columbus. The Pendleton got started with the kids when Sandra was substitute teaching at various schools in the area. One day she was asked to fill in for a teacher who worked with the kids in the special class, all of whom have similar low levels of achievement due to mental disorders.

Sandra soon realized the fulfillment that comes from working with these kids, and decided that she wanted to help them even after she quit working as a teacher. So last May, she and Sergeant Pendleton decided to form a scout troop for the kids.

Everyone in the class is in the troop, and they all have uniforms. Every Thursday afternoon they gather in the Scouting room, repeat the scout pledge, and carry on numerous scouting activities supervised by the Pendleton's and the teachers.

Police Stop OCS Graduate

Call it a second honeymoon or a delayed graduation present. A recent graduate of Infantry Officer Candidate School and his wife got a pleasant surprise when stopped by the Columbia, S.C., police last week on Highway I-26.

First Lieutenant and Mrs. C. Kenneth Sutton of O'Fallo, Mo., were the lucky couple honored by the city of Columbia in connection with a new visitors-relation program sponsored by the Greater Columbia Chamber of Commerce.

The Suttons were treated to a two-day package by the "Ambassadors Committee," which has labeled the program "Treat a Columbia Tourist."

Tour and Dinner

At the Chamber of Commerce, Lt. and Mrs. Sutton received a two-hour guided tour of area historical attractions, including the State Capitol, from the city's official tour guide service. The young couple then had dinner, viewed the current attraction at the Columbia Dinner Theatre, and were interviewed by Station WOLO TV.

After spending the night and having breakfast at a local motel, the Suttons received a full tank of gas courtesy of an oil company and a car wash as a gift from another business concern.

The Suttons agreed that the program was a "grand idea" and they would long remember the hospitality shown them.

Class 24-69

Lt. Sutton graduated Aug. 1 as a member of OCS class No. 24-69.

The couple left Columbia to drive to New Jersey to depart for a tour of duty in Germany.

TV Documentary on Army Begins Nineteenth Season

"The Big Picture," now in its nineteenth season, is a series documenting various phases and departments of the Army.

This Sunday's show on WRBL, TV 3, at noon is "Call Me Mister."

"Call Me Mister" is about the highly qualified men and women of the Army who wear the insignia of the Warrant Officer. These officers provide special talent in such fields as photo-mapping, automotive maintenance, flying, nuclear power plant operations and many others.

The first film to be released in November is entitled "The Golden Knights." This production documents the story of the U. S. Army Parachute Team. These extraordinary men thrill thousands of spectators every year, both at home and overseas.

"How Sleep the Brave," first released in the 1964-65 season, has been brought back for a second national run. The film, which will be shown in November, is a memorial to those American fighting men who have lived and struggled to preserve our freedoms and ideals and who now rest in honor in Arlington National Cemetery.

Gospel Team Plays for TCB

"The New Dimensions," a Gospel Action team from California, 32 talented young Americans, appeared before The Candidate Bde.

Performances were held at both the Sightseeing Road Chapel and Harmony Church Chapel.

"The New Dimensions" is a group of singers and instrumentalists chosen from several different colleges and universities to assist Evangelist Richard Jeffers in a series of youth rallies across the United States.

The choir and orchestra are under the direction of Dick Jeffers who has already established himself as an outstanding musical director in the Northwest.

The musical program included many contemporary Christian songs as well as the favorite old hymns of the church.

In addition to conducting youth rallies in many of the great auditoriums of our nation, "The New Dimension" are also appearing at several military bases for the benefit of those serving in the Armed Forces.

Officer's Son Attends The Citadel

CHARLESTON, S.C. — Terry E. Juskowiak, son of Col. J. L. Juskowiak, was among some 600 freshmen who have complete "Plebe Week" at The Citadel.

Following traditions evolved at the military college since its founding in 1842, freshmen cadets are indoctrinated during a week of concentrated training prior to the return of upperclassmen. This enables the new cadets to take their places as members of the South Carolina Corps of Cadets.

ROD AND GUN CLUB

By Bill Kloeb

There were no changes in the Rod and Gun Club Fishing Derby last week. SSgt. (ret) Saunders won the September catfish contest with a entry of three-pounds nine-ounces. The bream category was won by SSgt. James Stevenson with a 20-ounce entry and the seven-pound three-ounce catch of CWO Jay Cochran won the bass contest. Winners may make arrangements to pick up prizes with Tom McCoullough, custodian of the Rod and Gun Club.

For the information of newcomers to the post, we'd like to explain the mechanics of the Fishing Derby. The Rod and Gun Club is sponsoring a monthly derby through the month of October. Prizes are awarded the fishemen catching the largest bass, bream and catfish. To enter, you must be a member of the Rod and Gun Club, register at the club before going fishing, catch the fish from one of the post ponds and register your catch at the club upon returning. Those fiaishing fishing after the club is closed may register their catch the next day.

The Rod and Gun Club Annual General Membership Meeting will be held in the club snackbar at 4:30 p.m. Oct. 17. The purpose of the meeting is to present the annual report to the membership. Refreshments will be provided. All members are invited.

Despite the claims loudly announced that the mail order controls passed in December 1968 would effect only criminals and not ordinary shooters and hunters the act incorporates quite a few restrictions on transporting and shipping weapons and ammunition.

With the hunting season rolling around again it seems a good idea to review some of the more common situations which are bound to arise.

If you wish to travel aboard any common carrier (airline, railroad or busline) with your legally owned gun you must notify the carrier in writing beforehand as ascertain under what conditions you may do so. You may travel interstate in your car with your weapon but state and local laws are getting into such a tangle that it is advisable to carry with you any pertinent papers and carry the weapon unloaded and in a lockable section of the car.

It is illegal to ship a gift weapon for a relative or friend from one state to another. You must take the weapon to a licensed gun dealer and have him it to a dealer designated by your relative or friend. Expect to pay both dealers for their efforts. You cannot drive to the other state and present the weapon personally.

You may not legally buy a weapon or trade with a buddy from another state. A dealer within your own state cannot ship a weapon you have ordered by mail or phone without an affidavit from you stating your receipt is legal under Federal, state and local laws and naming the chief law enforcement officer in your town. For personnel living on post this would be the Post Provost Marshal. For personnel living off the post it would be the local chief of police unless the buyer elected to have the weapon sent to his unit on post, then it would be the Provost Marshal. If you drive over to purchase the weapon at the store this rigamarole can be eliminated.

There are no Federal residency requirements for the purchase of ammunition but of course certain states (Illinois and New York for example) have identification requirements which must be met. If you plan to go on an out of state hunt or shoot it is advisable to inquire as to the local and state laws of the area to which you are going.

Dealers and manufactures of handloading equipment cannot legally ship reloading components such as powder, brass or primers out of state. Under the act such components are considered whith ammunition.

Middle Aged Couple Win CHAVAGA Race

By Snow Wilson

Residents of swank Green Island Hills in Columbus are used to weekend tourists gawking at their homes, but the visitors last Sunday probably left them mystified.

But they shouldn't feel too bad for participants in Chavaga's Regional Rally were just as mystified with the maze of roads through those beautiful hills as they tried to find the final check point of a 180 mile course.

And proof it isn't the type of car that counts, but the ability of the driver and navigator to stay on course, came as first place trophies were handed to a middle-aged couple driving a huge Mercury Colony Park station wagon — with three kids in the back.

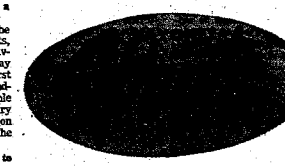
Second place went to Web and Shirley Sullivan in a Ford Cortina and Third went to Paul Cohen and Ralph Hopkins of Fort Benning in a Lotus Elan.

Oh yes — my wife Ann and I were the middle-aged couple.

Chavaga, the local region of the Sports Car Club of America, will hold it's monthly "test in the floor" Slalom event next Sunday, October 12th, at the Blanchard Industrial Park on Victory Drive. It is the type of event that gives the average driver a chance to blow his pipes out — without getting a ticket. Registration and tech inspection usually starts at 11:00 a.m.

For nearby NASCAR Grand National races this week-end, drive over to Augusta where a 100 miler is taking place tomorrow.

Don Fleenor's famed "Hurricane Hell Drivers," generally considered the top automobile thrill show in the business, will put on a special performance at the Tri-County Raceway Sunday.



The show, featuring 28 spine tingling acts will get underway at 2:30 p.m. and run for approximately two and one-half hours.

In addition a demolition derby has been scheduled to start after the "Hell Drivers" demonstration.

A little further north, at Huntsville, Ala., SCCA regional races will be held this Saturday and Sunday, and, if you have the car and want to get your racing license, head down to Savannah for an SCCA race driver's school.

ON THE SCENE

A 250-mile Nascar stock car race at North Wilkesboro, N. C. this Sunday will be the second heads-up confrontation between Nascar Prexy Bill France and the Talladega 500 boycotting Professional Drivers Association (PDA). Richard Petty, all - time stockcar win champ and PDA "head honcho," stated last week that France has exerted too much "influence" on the Nascar track owners, and he must be shown that the drivers can and will "stick together." Oct. 12 will be the next superspeedway race — the Charlotte National 500.

Watkins Glen, N. Y. will be the scene of the U. S. Grand Prix, featuring the fastest open-wheeled, single seat racing cars in the world. Scotland's Jackie Stewart, the MOD SCOT, has already sewn up the World Driver's Championship with his split second victory in the Italian Grand Prix last month. Mario Andretti, who just won the '69 USAC (Indy Car) Championship will be at the Glen to challenge the world's best drivers.

The "Flying KIWI's," Australian's Bruce McLaren and Denis Hulme, might be trying for a racing first. If they play their cards right they could end up in a tie for the Can-Am title. The last "super sportscar" race is set for Nov. 9 at College Station, Tex.

Chevrolet still leads Ford in the SCCA sporty sedan racing series (TRANS-AM). Look for both Furd and Chevy to give their all in the last race of the series this week-end at Pacific Raceways in Kent, Wash. RA gives the nod to Roger Penske's Camaros for the win and series championship.

Hunters Endanger Troops Training In Hunting Areas

With the hunting season now in progress, hunters are warned that military personnel are undergoing Ranger-type training in Quitman, Stewart, and Randolph Counties. If you are hunting in these counties, be certain of your target before shooting. Practice safety first while hunting. The military personnel in the area will be difficult to see because of their OD uniforms and camouflage.

TSB Gym Features Trampoline

By Ron Johnson

The Student Brigade Gym has put a little bounce into its recreational program with the acquisition of a trampoline.

Says 2nd Lt. William D. Smith TSB Special Services Officer, "The acquisition of the trampoline is the result of cooperative efforts of Post Special Services and TSB toward the goal of providing expanded recreation facilities for the benefit of those using the brigade gymnasium."

The trampoline is the only one on post. SFC Arthur J. Wahner, NCOIC of the gym, hopes to begin evening classes soon for "rebound tumbling" as trampoline performing is called. He says that the problem now is finding enough people at one time to act as "spotters" to catch anyone who might fall off the trampoline. If six men are available for spotters, accidents can be avoided.

Rich Harris, in his book, "Physical Education and Rebound Tumbling," states "To the authors knowledge, there has never been an accident in rebound tumbling resulting in injury where there was an organized program set up with sound methods of progression and under the direction of a conscientious teacher who realized the responsibilities of supervision." The objective of the TSB gym is to set up an accident-free program such as this.

Originally, trampolining was "a performance by an acrobat on stilts" according to Compton's Encyclopedia. It has since evolved into the popular net sport we know today. Rebound tumbling is recommended to develope balance, increase flexibility and lithe-ness, and as a conditioner for other sports.

Training Center Company 1st Sgt. Won Olympic Gold Medal

Edward Crook Jr., 1st Sgt., Co. D, 9th Bn., 2nd Bde., Training Center, because of his athletic record, was one of 16 Republic of Vietnam veterans selected in 1968 to represent Department of the Army in a National Pilot Speaking Program.

In a six-month speaking tour of the Southeastern U.S., Crook, 1960 Olympic Gold Medal winner in boxing, spoke of the conflict in Vietnam, concerning its history, people, land, villages, our objective there, eventual goal and the enemy we face.

The first sergeant emphasized to high school, college and civic groups that many of our objectives are being realized in Vietnam. "Since giving the South Vietnamese up-to date weaponry and instruction in modern warfare, we have been able to turn over more of the burden of war to them."

"The United States will be able to increase its troop withdrawals as the South Vietnamese Army continues to become more formidable," Crook said.

The first sergeant, in addition to distinguishing himself as a public speaker, has established an outstanding record as a sports figure in the Army.

A gold medal winner for the 1960 American Olympic Boxing Team, he has won more than 300 inter-service fights while losing only 12 since joining the Army in 1951. His wins include more than 200 knockouts and TKO's over various middle-weight opponents.

In 1956, while stationed at Fort Benning, he captured the National Golden Gloves (middleweight) Championship. Crook took the title by winning eight straight matches in the two-day elimination tournament held in Chicago.

From June 1954 to June 1960 the first sergeant was on the Interservice and All Army light middleweight and middleweight teams.

Crook was on the 1960 Olympic Boxing Team with Cassius Clay and has an interesting analysis of the former world heavyweight champ.

"I first met him in 1959 in the Cow Palace at San Francisco. We were there for medical checkups before flying to Rome, Italy, for the Olympic Games. He was cocky and arrogant—always trying to be the center of attraction."

"Clay was re-writing standards of good boxing—he did everything wrong, but did it well. Hardly anyone, however, pictured him as becoming the world champion."

Crook said two major assets later led Clay to the world heavyweight championship.

"Clay possessed uncanny speed. He could move away from a punch without raising his hands from his sides and at the same time retaliate. His punching power was tremendous. Lightning combinations of both right and left were a specialty of his."

The first sergeant will not acclaim Clay as the "greatest," however.

"Rocky Marciano and Joe Lewis were both better boxers. They had the speed and power of Clay with the addition of knowing how to box with skill instead of just daring."

As to Clay's future in boxing, Crook said, "I doubt if he will ever return to the ring again—neither the National Boxing Association nor the Muslim Religion would al-

THE FORUM THE LOBOW

By MARC REIFF

Just as baseball fans have been asking if the New York Mets are for real, football zealots are now questioning the Minnesota Vikings. They taunted Baltimore's highly thought of defense and left it as porus as swiss cheese.

It was a reenactment of the Viking of old overcoming the staunch coastal bulwarks of Europe. The only thing which Baltimore could look forward to was the clock running out and the game film being burned in a flash fire.

I imagine some of them hoped they would wake up and find that they were really having a nightmare the night before the game.

The clock did run out but not nearly quick enough. It was like Custers last stand all over again with the same ending. The Colts were annihilated. The execution was deliberate and gruesomely slow.

Except for the fact that the announcers assured us that these were the real Colts, many people would have suspected that the whole team had been kidnapped and a high school team substituted.

The familiar number 19 was throwing passes but the trouble was, when he did connect (which was not often), they fell into the hands of the Vikings. The first quarter was turned into a shambles and the rest of the game reminded one of something out of a Shakesperian comedy. For Viking fans of course, it was their finest hour.

Other upsets were prevelant in last weeks games. Cincinnati's surprising second year Bengals, held Kansas City and scored their third straight triumph of the season. The Bengals matched their entire winning total of last year and the main reason was quarterback Sam Wyche who had been bothered by a sore arm. Last year they had used running plays nearly 60 per cent of the time but that situation is now being altered. With Paul Robinson healthy (AFL rushing champion and Rookie-of-the-Year) they could very well be a spoiler team this season.

The Champion New York Jets lost their second game of the season but look for them to bounce back big over Boston. Namath hit on 29 of 51 passes for 344 yards but the Jet defense was nothing to brag about. They will be out to prove that the Super Bowl Victory was no fluke and Boston does not have the personnel to stop them.

Detroit may be another surprise team this year. Last season a number of injuries to key people put them at the bottom of the pile but with the strong running attack of Mel Farr and Nick Eddy they could be tough. They are a young team with only one player on the starting offensive unit over 30. I look for them to upset the Browns this coming Sunday. While it will probably be a low scoring game, the defense of the Lions should be better than the Browns.

lew it."

Crook's record as a football standout for the Army almost matches his boxing skills.

From 1953-56 he played left halfback for The School Bde. at Fort Benning, starring on a team that never tasted defeat during a three year period.

Joe Fortunato, former fullback for the Chicago Bears; Yale Larry, standout quarterback of the Detroit Lions, and Frank Cush, All-American guard from Michigan State, were a few of the members making up the star-studded team.

Since joining the Army in 1951, the first sergeant has been decorated with the Silver Star, Bronze Star Medal, Army Commendation Medal, Air Medal, Cross of Gallantry with gold star and Vietnamese Service Medal.

He was recently presented the Silver Star by Brig. Gen. Oscar Davis, ATC commanding general. Crook earned the Silver Star while serving as first sergeant with Co. C, 4th Bn., 173rd, Airborne Bde. in 1967.

Guthrie Acts as New Head Of Nonresident Instruction

By Spd James Doherty

Developing nonresident instruction as a vital tool in the education of Infantrymen is the job of Col. William R. Guthrie, Honolulu, Hawaii, the new head of the Infantry School's Department of Nonresident Instruction.

The department prepares the instructional material used in Reserve commissioning courses, Army Reserve Courses, Noncommissioned Officer and Officer Candidate School Reserve training courses and Reserve Officer Training Corps courses on the nation's college campuses.

Colonel Guthrie credits the "flexibility of the program" with providing a steady stream of qualified officers and NCOs.

The written materials, combined with either summer training at Fort Benning, weekend traning near local Reserve unit head quarters or correspondence courses, provide nonresident and Reserve soldiers with a means of making the most of their military obligation.

The department also prepares correspondence courses that can earn a Reserve commission for a soldier now on active Army duty.

Updating and revising the Army ROTC curriculum to meet the needs of the next generation of college youth will also be a part of Colonel Guthrie's new job.

Increased emphasis will be placed on the academic aspects of military training, the colonel says, with special attention given international affairs and the role of the Army in both domestic and international problems.

Colonel Guthrie comes to Fort Benning from Korea where he was commander of the 2nd Bde., 7th Infantry Division.

A 1945 graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Colonel Guthrie was graduated from the Infantry officer basic course here in 1945 and the Infantry officer advanced course in 1952. He served here from 1963-1964 as an instructor in the Infantry School.

Among his awards and decorations are the Legion of Merit with one oak leaf cluster, the Bronze Star Medal with "V" device for heroism and one oak leaf cluster and the Combat Infantryman Badge.

Atlanta could very well upset the Colts but the smart money is on Baltimore. The Falcons have shown they can possibly beat any other team but so far the big push has not been added. One of these days look for them to pull the big upset. They have not been badly beaten all year which has been somewhat of a surprise. They looked good against the Rams and if not for a key fumble by Paul Gipson they might have added another touchdown.

Minnesota should continue to roll and not even the Pack should stop them. There is no need to further discuss the Vikings but the Packers just do not have men to retake the title. They barely beat the San Francisco 49ers by one touchdown and this was largely due to an 87 yard kickoff return by Dave Hampton, an exciting new rookie.

Predictions for the coming week

San Francisco over Washington
Baltimore over Atlanta
Dallas over Philadelphia
Detroit over Cleveland
Minnesota over Green Bay
Los Angeles over New Orleans
St. Louis over Pittsburgh
Oakland over Miami
San Diego over Cincinnati
New York over Boston
Buffalo over Houston
Kansas City over Denver

How to get two cars in a one-car garage.

Every Rover 2000 Sports Sedan has nineteen bolted-on body panels. Seventeen are made of steel and cover everything except the trunk and hood. The trunk and hood lids are deliberately aluminum because they need to go up and down and aluminum is lighter than steel. The panels are really there to keep out wind and weather and to look pretty. They have little to do with the strength of the car. That lies within the body, as is well known to avid readers of other Rover advertisements.

One outrageous advantage of this set-up is a rather unusual custom option. You can, if you have the inclination and about $1,200, have a spare set of panels put on in another color. You might like a dark set for winter and a bold bright set for the summertime. Or you might like a set for every season. It depends on the size of your pocket and your ability to get bored easily.

However, one set is a good deal cheaper than buying a second car; it keeps neighbors in agonies of curiosity, relieves mild cases of boredom and, in effect, gives you two cars.

Both of which you can keep in one garage.

For more information, see your Rover dealer: (If you have a two-car garage, by the way, we'll be happy to sell you a second Rover.)

Parachute Riggers Allow 'Zero Defects'

"Until men grow wings," parachute riggers must live, think and practice a policy of absolute "zero defects" in their work.

This comparatively small group of men with large responsibilities is assigned here as part of The Infantry Center's Quartermaster Services Division.

Just as the sensitivity of their jobs set them apart from other soldiers, so does their bright red "baseball caps" and rigger's badge worn above the right breast pocket.

The parachute packing branch here, which has its primary mission support of the Infantry School Airborne Department, is authorized three officers, 121 enlisted men and 16 civilians.

The packing of the parachutes is done by the enlisted men, who may be called upon to pack as many as 1,000 parachutes in a day.

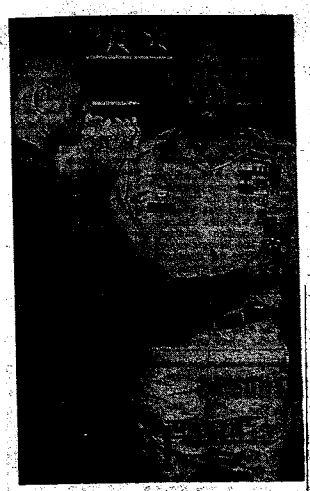
A rigger's requirements are many, and an above the average man is recruited in order for him to be able to complete the training.

He first must complete airborne training and earn his parachute badge. Then he volunteers to attend the 12 week Parachute Packing Maintenance and Air Delivery Course at the Airborne Department of the Quartermaster School at Fort Lee, Va.

Upon completion of the course, and assignment to Fort Benning, he works in one specific phase of the operation, and thus his speed and proficiency are greatly increased during his on-the-job training.

The riggers here pack and repack mostly the Army T-10 personnel parachute, and the T-10 reserve parachute, the chutes used by the Airborne Department for training basic Airborne students.

They also pack the T-10 maneuverable 6-13 cargo parachute and the B-12 freeback parachutes, the latter being the ripcord type used by Army pilots. In addition, the J-1 parachute which is used by students in tower training, also comes to the riggers for maintenance.



LEGION OF MERIT

The Legion of Merit for meritorious service was presented to Col. Andrew J. Gatsis, formerly of the Brigade and Battalion Operations Department of the Infantry School, by Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the school. General Berry praised Colonel Gatsis for devoted service to the school and his contributions to the training program of his department. Signature Makes Captain Famous With His Students

By 2nd Lt. James Hopson

Capt. Ray D. Wire has the most famous name at the Infantry School.

More than 10,000 students at the school read his words as closely as they scan their pay vouchers; they unquestionably adhere to his decisions; they praise him; they curse him. He controls their lives from reville to taps. Every week of training begins and end with his signature.

Wire is the Infantry School scheduling officer.

He has responsibility for programming the activities of about 60 classes enrolled in the 20 courses offered by the Infantry School. He directs the distribution of copies of the class schedules, bearing his well-known signature to each student.

Weekly, his office cranks out between 165 and 180 pages of class schedules—a four-inch thick stack of papers that tells the student when to wake up, when and where to go to class, what to wear and carry, when to eat, study, take a break and in general accounts for virtually everything the Infantry School student does.

Wire is chief of the scheduling branch of the Class Scheduling and Requirements Division, headed by Lt. Col. Louis A. Harris. The division is part of the school's Office of the Director of Operations and Logistics.

The schedules start in Infantry Hall's "rainbow room", named for the thousands of brightly-colored cards that line the walls of the room. Each card represents a class period offered by one of the school's academic departments to a student group at a specific time.

Personnel in the "rainbow room" insure that the scheduled classes fulfill the requirements outlined in the programs of instruction for each course offered. For example, the program of instruction for the officer candidate course might require that the OCs learn FM radio operation during a certain week of training. The scheduling officer must see to it that FM radio classes are planned for the specific week.

"We try to schedule our classes in sequence and as near to the day they are programmed in the POI as possible," Wire said.

Once the cards are arranged in the "rainbow room," representatives from the academic departments and The Student and Candidate Rdes. check the cards to determine the requirements on their respective units and insure against conflicts or problems that occasionally arise.

When the departments and brigades are satisfied with the schedule, other members of the scheduling staff arrange for classrooms, ranges, problem areas, sound equipment, transportation and the thousand other details involved in planning classes. Again, conflicts must be resolved.

Two groups cannot sit in the same classroom or ride the same trucks at the same time. Support troops cannot be spread too thinly among the tactical problems. The same audio-visual equipment cannot be employed two places at once. The school schedule is a vast mosaic of parts which must interlock perfectly.

Last-minute schedule changes give Wire his biggest headache. He said that his office cannot make one small change without rearranging the entire school schedule so that the parts again mesh correctly.

The captain said his principle concern in scheduling is to benefit the students:

"Our policy is that, if it helps the student, we want to do it. It is the student we are concerned with."

"I would like to have all our classes in Infantry Hall, where it is comfortable and convenient, but sometimes transportation problems, availability of classrooms and other conflicts prevent us from doing exactly what we would like," he continued.

Wire said that open time is scheduled to allow flexibility and to give the students some break time. The scheduling branch tries to avoid planning exams the morning following a night problem. For officer and noncommissioned officer candidates, Wire said he tries to schedule lunch in the field in the candidates' afternoon training area to give the men maximum free time after lunch.

Harris, division chief, mentioned that although Wire is officially the scheduling officer, and although the public sees only his signature, there are several other key members of the scheduling staff:

Raymond Brown, the military training specialist, has operated the "rainbow room" since 1944. Working first as a soldier and now as a civilian employe, Brown has become expert in shuffling the thousands of colored class cards and developing workable schedules from them.

Thomas Lands manages and schedules terrain usage for the 75-80 outdoor problems the school offers. He has worked for the scheduling branch since 1948.

Mrs. Susan Smith is the schedule and data coordinator. She maintains and updates requirement cards on the more than 2,000 different periods of instruction the school gives.

Classroom coordinator Jacob Dehaan insures maximum utilization of the Infantry School's classroom facilities. Harris said that Dehaan keeps the 200-man classrooms in Infantry Hall in use 87 per cent of duty time.

He added that most educational institutions manage no more than 75 per cent utilization of their facilities.
