103rd Company Makes Semi-Finals

The 103rd NCOC Co., 10th Stu. Bn., The Candidate Bde. advanced to the semi-finals for the brigade flag-football championship by defeating the 74th NCOC Co. 22-7 at Doughboy Filed.

The 103rd put together a spirited defense and a determined offense to remain untied and undefeated. The defensive unit of the 103rd Co. constantly pressured and harrassed the 74th Co. which accounted for two interceptions, a safety and a large amount of intimidation to the 74th Co.'s offensive unit.

While the defensive unit was upholding its portion, the offensive was putting points on the scoreboard.

The attack was led by quarterback Stephen Kennedy who connected with Candidates John Barksdale and Dale Portier for two touchdown passes and scored a conversion on a sneak play. Barksdale also scored on a run, thus giving him two touchdowns and the scoring leadership for the outing.

Longhorns Take First Place, Buckeyes Scuttled To Fourth

Texas' mighty Longhorns, making a colossal gain without even carrying the ball, stampeded into our 9uote 1ds' ON 9un nation's college football powers Monday as the roof collapsed on defending champion Ohio State following a stunning loss to Michigan.

The unbeaten Longhorns who marked time last Saturday while Michigan scuttled Ohio State's 22-game winning streak 24-12, displaced the Buckeyes atop The Associated Press weekly rankings in a landslide coup.

Texas, 8-0 with two tough regular season games to play, corraled 33 of 38 first place votes cast by a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters. Ohio State, named No. 1 on 31 of 39 ballots a week ago, did not receive a single first place call this time and toppled to fourth place, behind No. 2 Arkansas and No. 3 Penn State.

The new leaders totaled 748 points, a margin of 145 over the Razorbacks, whom they'll meet in a Dec. 6 showdown for the Southwest Conference title after their traditional Thanksgiving Day clash with Texas A&M.

Arkansas, also 8-0 and idle last week, held a 30-point edge over Orange Bowl-bound Penn State. But the Nittany Lions picked up three of the remaining five first - place votes after lifting its record to 9-0 by trimming Pitt 27-7.

Ohio State had 509 points, compared with 736 last week.

The other firsts went to No. 5 Southern California, 9-0-1 following a 14-12 nod over UCLA, and Michigan, 8-2, which soared from 12th place to seven on the heels of its Buckeye conquest. The Trojans and Wolverines will meet Jan. 1 in the Rose Bowl.

Missouri, Penn State's Orange Bowl foe, moved up one notch to the No. 6 spot, while Notre Dame held eighth and Louisiana State and Tennessee advanced one step each to 9th and 10th.

Missouri 31, trounced Kansas 48-21; Notre Dame 8-1-1, topped Air Force 13-6; LSU 24, smacked Tulane 27-6 and Tennessee, 8-1, outscored Kentucky, 21-26.

The Top Twenty, with first place votes in parenthesis, season record and total points, Points awarded for first 15 places, based on 20-19-18-17-16-15-14-13-12-11-10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1:

'Reckless Atwell' Hits Rodeo Trail

Among the men who were members of the recently graduated 104th Co. NCOC), 10th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade, Jimmy W. Atwell held a singular distinction in that he was a professional roedo circuit rider before entering the service.

Born in a small town located in the central Louisiana hills, Atwell cultivated a passtime of riding horses. The mode of life in the community was the raising of cattle, so Atwell learned the ways of horse and rider early in life. At the age of six, he was able to ride all day, and to enjoy it. By seven, he would be out in the stock pens riding a saddle bronc. Even at this young age, he began thinking of making riding a career.

Subsequently, an old friend taught him the art of throwing a lariat with accuracy and speed. Soon Atwell progressed to roping from a horse, By the age of twelve, he was known in the community as a daredevil with a horse and rope; thus he earned his nickname of "Reckless Atwell."

While in the 8th grade, Atwell spent the summer breaking and training his own filly. After attempting to ride the filly, he remarked that doing so was just about as hard as "balancing a basketball on the end of a broomstick." At this time a small rodeo came into the area, and he entered the calf-roping and bronc-riding contests, not realizing that many of the contestants were professional riders, but his patience and training payed off when he found himself in the finals. Although he admitted to being terrified, he ended up taking first place and top prize money.

In high school, sponsored by the Agriculture department, Atwell became the president of the rodeo team. He rode in amateur rodeos, traveling all over the state in order to do so. After placing third in the state amateur championship, he was encouraged to try his luck at professional riding. Thus, he joined the National Rodeo Association and the Rodeo Cattlemen's Association. By the time he had finished high school, he was making enough money from his riding to make his avocation into a vocation.

Beck Ties Record In International Trap Tournament

Army Sgt. James Beck unofficially tied the World's record of 297 birds out of 300 to run away with the championship in the International Interservice Trap Match fired here last weekend.

Beck finished the first day of the match by downing all 100 birds. The second day he dropped three birds for a two day total of 197 birds. Then he came back in fine form to down all his competitors, breaking 100 straight birds for his championship total of 297 birds out of 300.

Beck's 297 ties his previous high record and unofficially ties the World's record set by Kenny Jones in Weishaden, Germany.

Beck's closest competitors were his Army teammates Sp4 Stanley Carmichael and Sp5 Glen Everts. Carmichael placed second by breaking 294 birds and Everts broke 290 for third place.

Surfing Is Way Of Life for Candidate

"Hang ten!" "stoked," "wired," gremmie," "pipeline," "shoot the curl," "pipeline," "wipe out." Unfamiliar terminology to most people but to NCO Candidate Glen Dulaney, these phrases represent a way of life in which he reigns as one of the world's best.

Dulaney, currently a candidate in the 105th Co. (NCOC), 10th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade, is one of the kings in a highly competitive athletic cult — surfing. The year before last, he placed fourth in the U. S. "Last month's contest was the first U. S. Championship I've missed in eight years," he says. He has won several other events, though, and has been a contender in every major surfing contest in the world. But this is not at all surprising when one examines Dulaney's background in the sport.

As he puts it, "I've lived in California nearly all my life, and I've been surfing since I was ten, before the big surfing boom came along. He adds, "In those days, there weren't very many of us. Corky Carroll, who won the U.S. Championship in Huntington Beach this year, and Bob Coogan, who placed second last year, were both friends of mine in school. I grew up with the people who are currently the best surfers in the world."

In addition to being a renowned surfer himself, Dulaney is also-half-owner of Chicane and Dulaney Company, one of the most respected surfboard manufacturers in the country. But even though he is a veteran of the wave circuit, he admits to fallibility, as in his poor performance during last year's World Surfing Championships, which were held at Sunset Beach, Hawaii.

College the next year, Crumlish was once again out on the gridiron, but this time he was toeing the leather through the uprights from a distance of fifty yards. However, the head coach of that school's team told him that he could not play because of his relatively diminutive stature: Crumlish is 5'4" tall, and weighs 120 pounds.

Because of this setback, Crumlish turned back to a more "native sport" — soccer. He initiated and participated on the first soccer team at Valley College. Starting the team was easy for him since he had been playing soccer since the age of six in Scotland. The next year, Crumlish took further advantage of his athletic prowess and signed with Santa Monica, a semipro soccer team, on which he served as a utility player.

Diminutive Candidate Is Pro Soccer Player

How many persons have started a football career as the result of a casual remark? Or been kicked off a team while kicking fifty-yard field goals? Or landed a pro soccer contract by reporting to the wrong training field?

These situations do not arise for most people, but for Jim Crumlish, a graduate of the 104th Co. (NCOC), 10th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade, each of these events brought about marked changes in his life.

Several years ago Crumlish, a native of Green Oak, Scotland, started his unexpected football career while a student at Monroe High School in Los Angeles. Sitting down and talking to the assistant football coach, Crumlish made a somewhat deprecatory remark about the previous year's kicking "experts." When asked if he could do better, he jokingly replied, "Of course." The next day he was right out in the middle of practice, kicking the ball through the uprights. By the end of the season he had set a new city high school field goal record with a boot of thirty-five yards, thereby becoming the first widely publicized soccer-style kicker in high school. During the following season he hit 85 per cent of all his booting attempts.

At Los Angeles Valley

On his way to practice one day, however, a new circumstance opened up a whole new world for him. He found that it was the opening practice for the Los Angeles Wolves, a pro soccer team that was just starting in California. Making an immediately favorable impression, Crumlish was offered a one-year contract with the team, which he signed on the spot.

OC Hall of Fame Inducts Colonels

By Sp4 George Barks

Three colonels were inducted into the Infantry Officer Candidate School Hall of Fame.

Wigle Hall, home of the Hall of Fame, was the site of the first induction which honored Col. William P. Pipkin. Colonel Pipkin is the director of Allied Personnel at the Army Command and General Staff College, Ft. Leavenworth, Kan.

Col. Francisco J. Ramos, former commmanding officer, Second Bde. Training Center, here and Col. Arthur E. Sikes, assistant deputy chief of staff, Reserve Forces Headquarters, Third Army, Fort McPherson, Ga., were also admitted to the Hall of Fame in a ceremony at Wigle Hall.

In order for a person to be inducted in to the OCS Hall of Fame, he must be a graduate of Infantry OCS and be nominated for such membership.

In addition, he must have accomplished one of the following: Received the Medal of Honor; have achieved the grade of colonel while serving on active duty; been elected or appointed to an office of prominence in national or state government; or he must have been recommended for admission by the commandant of the Infantry School.

Center Offers Typing Course

The post's Army Education Center will offer a course in elementary typewriting from Dec. 1 - March 9.

Classes will meet Monday and Wednesday nights from 6:45 - 9:15 p.m. at Bldg. 35. There is no charge for the course and textbooks will be provided on a loan basis.

All military members are eligible and adult dependents may be enrolled if a sponsor is enrolled. Enrollments will be accepted at the center at 7 p.m. on Dec. 1.

KINSFOLK FROM AUSTRALIA

The Kinsfolk singing group performed for members of The Candidate Ride. The group originates from Australia and has performed several times during the Billy Graham crusades and on national television. Their music is the folk-Gospel type. They traveled to Columbus for the Leighton Ford Crusade.

'11 Bravos' Train To Fight as Leaders of Rifle Squads

They are called "11 Bravos"—a group of soldiers training in the Infantry School's Noncommissioned Officer Candidate (NCOC) Course.

The "11 Bravos" are men training for the military occupation specialty (MOS) 11B (Light Weapons Infantryman).

One of three such courses in the NCOC program here, the training is tailored specifically to fill the need for qualified fire team or rifle squad leaders in the Republic of Vietnam.

Other NCOCs at Fort Benning may train to be "11 Charlies" with MOS 11C (Infantry Indirect Fire Crewmen), or "11 Foxtrots" with MOS 11F (Infantry Operations and Intelligence). All receive specialized training tailored to the combat needs of infantry line units.

Men in the light weapons Infantryman course graduate each week. Since the program first got underway at Fort Benning, hundreds have proven themselves and the program in combat.

Their average age is 20.5 years. Their average education is above the high school level. Many have graduate degrees. Following 12 weeks of training at the Infantry School, they receive on-the-job experience with a stateside Infantry unit.

Five graduates of each class remain at Fort Benning for another 12 weeks to work as tactical noncommissioned officers (Tacs) with other NCOC candidates.

Graduation allows them to sew on the stripes of a sergeant or, for the top 5 per cent of the class, those of a staff sergeant.

As candidates, the "11 Bravos" are constantly observed, evaluated and counseled. Emphasis is placed on preparing the men for duty as fire team leaders in the rifle platoon, and on the fundamentals, methods, and techniques for operational employment of the rifle squad and platoon.

The "11 Bravo" course also places great emphasis on combat skills. The candidates gain an appreciation of patrolling and Ranger training. Instructors attempt to instill in their students a spirit of aggressiveness and self discipline.

Instruction covers combat elements from fire team and squad to brigade level. It includes subjects such as airmobile operations, Air Force operations, combat intelligence, map and photo reading, communications equipment and special and crew-served weapons.

Tactical NCOs help the candidates reach and maintain standards of the noncommissioned officer. Seasoned noncommissioned officers point out a candidate's weaknesses and strong points. They suggest constructive action for improvement.

Study periods are scheduled each evening.

Discipline is strict and physical training demanding. It is the belief of many officers connected with the program that the "11 Bravo" course has more demanding physical requirements than do similar programs elsewhere.

Candidates run their own companies through a student chain of command. It starts at the top with a student first sergeant and comes down through student squad and fire team leaders.

The candidates rotate the various positions and thus gain practical leadership experience with groups ranging in size from a small number of men to a full company of almost 200.

Some of the training of the light weapons Infantry noncommissioned officer is conducted in the classrooms of modern Infantry Hall. Most of it, however, is conducted in the field.

Many of the men in the course are not career soldiers when they enter training here. Their reasons and motivations for entering the course are many and varied.

Specialist Posts 966 In CBR Training Here

The second highest score attained by a graduate of Fort Benning's CBR school was made by Sp4 Thomas W. Bierl of the Infantry Board who completed the 3-week course of instruction here last week.

Bierl graduated with a score of 966 points of a possible 1000. The highest score attained by any previous graduate was 971.

Bierl received a special letter of commendation from the Infantry Center's CBR School for his academic achievement and also was presented a letter commending him for his accomplishment by Col. Charles B. Thomas, president of the Infantry material test board.

The assistant chemical engineer at the test board, Bierl is a graduate engineer from Clarkson College of Technology, Potsdam, N. Y. He holds a bachelor of science degree in chemical engineering from the New York School of Technology.

At the Infantry Board, which tests all weapons and equipment developed for use by the Infantry, Bierl has been primarily interested in determining CBR aspects of equipment during service tests.

Prior to entering the Army in 1968, Bierl was employed as the process engineer for Continental Oil Company, Ponca City, Okla.

The course was established to instruct NCOs in CBR and to train them for becoming instructors in their organizations. Major Edon Rippee is the post Chemical officer at the school while 2nd Lt. David Fellows is the school director and is in charge of the course of instruction.

Applications Open For Summer Jobs With Civil Service

The U.S. Civil Service Commission is accepting applications for summer jobs in Federal Agencies for 1970.

Applicants must be 18 years old. However, high school seniors who will graduate in June of 1970 will be eligible if they are 16 or 17 years old providing local or state laws do not prohibit 16 or 17 year olds from working.

Tests will be given on Jan. 10, Feb. 14 and March 14, 1970. Cut-off date for the Jan. 10 test will be Dec. 5, 1969. Applications will not be accepted after Feb. 4, 1970.

Training Center IG Says ROTC Need 'Imperative'

By PFC Chester Hilburn

"It is imperative that the ROTC program be continued as a major source of Army officer commissions — historically, the ROTC program has provided the bulk of Army commissioned officers."

Lt. Col. Gene E. Clark, Training Center IG — commissioned through ROTC at Northeast Louisiana State College—praised the program for the high caliber and quality of officers it has produced.

Clark chose ROTC because, "It fulfilled two goals. It enabled me to serve my country and at the same time receive the full benefit of a liberal education."

What is a major advantage of being commissioned through Army ROTC? "In my opinion," Clark said, "Army ROTC offers great depth in the study of military ideals, discipline and soldiering.

A distinguished military student and honor graduate from Northeast Louisiana State in 1953, the colonel earned a B.S. degree in physical education and sociology. He attended college on a football scholarship and was student body president his junior and senior years. Upon completion of his studies he earned a regular Army commission.

Commenting on the current assault against ROTC on college campuses, Clark said, "Actualy, ROTC has become a convenient whipping post for college demonstrators and agitators, who are looking for ways to demonstrate against the war. It is a minority force involved in this attack which has failed to achieve its primary goal of appreciably decreasing its rank. The intelligent elite of this country has continued its support of the program."

A native of Burkburnett, Texas, Clark assumed his duties as Training Center I.G. last July. The primary function of his office is to inquire into and report upon matters concerning the performance of mission and the state of discipline, efficiency, economy of the command.

"We are here to assist the personnel of our command in any way possible. This includes both military and personal assistance. If we cannot help an individual we refer them to someone who can," he said.

The colonel's wife, Mary Ann, is the daughter of Mrs. Mattie Wilkinson of 4120 18th Ave., Columbus, Ga. They have two children, Richard, 6, and Diana, 3.

Clark has been awarded the Bronze Star Medal, Meritorious Service Medal, Air Medal, Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry and Armed Forces Honor Medal.

Alabama Gives Free Car Tags To Servicemen

WASHINGTON (AFPS) —An act passed recently by the State of Alabama provides free license tags to members of the Armed Forces.

However, the following conditions must be met: (1) individual must be currently serving on active duty in the Armed Forces as an officer, warrant officer or enlisted member; (2) must be a resident of Alabama at time exemption is claimed and (3) must have entered active service from Alabama and was a resident of Alabama at the time of entering service.

Only proof necessary that the above conditions have been met is a letter from the individual's commanding officer or custodian of personnel records presented to the judge of probate or license commissioner in the individual's home county in Alabama.

Transition Called Key To Post-Service Job

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Every year thousands of U.S. Army personnel return to civilian life—all seeking different types of employment. In 1968, a program known as Project TRANSITION was established by the Department of Defense to provide these returnees with further education or skill training that could help them obtain meaningful employment.

Project TRANSITION is designed to assist servicemen who need more formal education or do not have civilian job skills. The objective of the program is to enable servicemen to compete for gainful employment after separation by providing them with counseling, academic and vocational instruction and job placement information. On-the-job skill training is also available under the Project TRANSITION program.

Project TRANSITION training is available at major Army installations in the continental United States. Training is provided by the Army, federal, state and local governmental agencies, business and industry.

Training is given in many different skills. Among these are auto and aircraft mechanics, electrician, draftsman, television repairman, welder, salesman, carpenter, mason, meat cutter and many more.

The values of Project TRANSITION are many in that it:

Affords individuals an opportunity to examine the many educational and vocational opportunities available to them when they return to civilian life.

Provides the Army with a means to contact, counsel, train and refer men for employment.

Provides a means to adapt a soldier's in-service training to the immediate needs of the civilian community.

Eliminates social and economic adjustment problems for many Vietnamera servicemen.

Details on Project TRANSITION are available at major Army education centers throughout the U.S. and soon will be available at education centers throughout the world.

Whether the soldier is a two-year draftee or a 20-year retiree, Project TRANSITION could be the key that opens many doors.

Many Raise Flight Skill In Program

Large numbers of Georgia veterans who hold private pilot licenses are taking advantage of the VA's flight training program, State Veterans Director Peter Wheeler said.

There have already been over 2,200 veterans in Georgia who have entered in training. Approximately 1,180 are enrolled at the present time. The training for commercial pilot rating is taking place in some 41 approved flight schools in Georgia.

Wheeler explained that the first requirement for a veteran to participate in the flight training program under the GI Bill is to hold a private pilot's license or its equivalent and be medically fit for a commercial license. "This," he said, "is to discourage training for Sunday flying or flying for hobby and to insure that the training is directed toward a profession as a commercial pilot."

While the Veterans Administration will not pay the full cost of flight training it will pay 90 per cent of the cost.

Payments to the veteran are made monthly and he is charged one month's eligibility for each $130 paid him. Veterans desiring more information about the flight training program may contact the nearest field office of the Georgia Dept. of Veterans Service.

EARTH MOVERS READY BY-PASS EXTENSION

Earth moving machinery gouges Fort Benning's terrain as workers rush the $1.5 million extension of the Lindsey Creek by-pass on the reservation. Contractors McMath and Trussell have displaced tons of soil since their employes began the major traffic artery link-up two months ago. Post motorists are looking forward to completion of the work. They expect the extension to ease traffic flow during peaks hours. (Photo by SFC Al Pendleton)

R. W. Small Is Top Graduate

Second Lt. Richard W. Small was named distinguished graduate of Officer Candidate School Class No. 37-69 in exercises in Marshall Auditorium, Nov. 5.

For his achievement, Small received a letter of commendation from Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the Infantry School, an engraved "Follow Me" statuette, an engraved "Follow Me" plaque and an engraved Association of the United States Army (AUSA) plaque.

Night Vision Instruments Light Up Darkness for Soldier on Battlefields of Today

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Foot soldiers call it a "starlight scope," the order catalogue a "night intensifier" and official Army parlance calls it "night vision." Regardless of the terminology, night vision instruments enable today's soldiers to see in the dark.

The development and use of night vision devices have altered the character of modern warfare. No longer can the enemy hide himself or his activities under cover of darkness. No longer can he find security in the dark of night. Whether on land, in the air or on sea, night vision equipment puts Army soldiers "one-up" when it comes to nighttime observation and reconnaissance.

A night vision scope looks like a telescope. When a soldier views an object through a night vision scope, he sees a bright, magnified image — no matter how dark the night.

The scope absorbs existing light from the moon or the stars and amplifies it, much as a public address system amplifies sound, thereby removing the cloak of secrecy so often surrounding darkness.

Night vision instruments complement detection equipment now in use, like infrared detectors. There is no known defense against detection by night vision scopes, and there is no means of determining that such a device is being used.

In the field, night vision scopes are hand carried by troops. They are used as weapon sights or for surveilance.

Larger scopes are used as crew-served weapon sights and for ground and aerial reconnaissance. A crew-served night vision scope can be mounted on a tripod, a machinegun, a tank.

Night vision research and development is conducted at the U. S. Army Electronics Command Night Vision Laboratory, Ft. Belvoir, Va. The "home" of night vision supply, service and maintenance facilities is at Sacramento Army Depot, Calif.

Headquarters for both activities is the U. S. Army Materiel Command.

Veterans Claims Increase

COLUMBUS — "The Georgia Department of Veterans Service's workload of service to veterans in this state has more than doubled in the past 8 years," State Veterans Director Pete Wheeler said here.

Speaking to the state convention of the Disabled American Veterans, Wheeler said, "A comparison of the yearly activities reveals a continuing increase in the number of Georgia veterans and dependents seeking the services of this agency of state government.

The cause of the increase can be contributed to two major factors: the increasing number of veterans being discharged from the Vietnam War which is now over 15,000 a year in Georgia, and the advancing age of World War I and World War II veterans requiring the need for greater service."

These contacts with field offices and the Claims Staff are inquires from a veteran, his family or dependents about a claim, problem or the need for general information and are usually in the form of written, personal or telephone contacts. They usually result in a claim for a benefit or in some other way utilize the services of this department.

Records reveal that contacts have increased from 250,225 in 1961 to 443,546 in 1968, an increase of over 70 per cent in an 8 year period. At the same time, monetary benefits and services to the veterans of Georgia increased from $136,573,000 in 1961 to $280,095,000 in 1968, an increase of 104 per cent. During the same period, the number of employees of the department decreased.

Wheeler concluded, "These figures readily show that this department is doing twice the work of eight years ago with twice the results with fewer people. We will continue to offer quality service to the veterans of Georgia with the lowest possible cost to the taxpayer."

THE VA is the largest independent government agency, employing more than 147,000 full - time people with about 87 per cent of this staff assigned to the Department of Medicine and Surgery.

Mechanics Course Features Practical Work, Classes

A student in the seven-week ground mobility track vehicle mechanics course must tune a 12-cylinder Diesel engine displacing 1,790 cubic inches.

He learns to repair a sturdy drivetrain designed to absorb some 1,000 foot-pounds of torque and to recover a 56-ton armored vehicle stranded in the field.

But these practical exercises are only a small part of the course which includes many hours of classroom, shop and field instruction.

According to Capt. Gerald W. Hass, senior faculty advisor, instruction covers three general areas — the automotive system, the fire control system and hull and chassis components of track vehicles.

Some of the specifics taught include engine principles, cooling and lubricating systems, valve adjustment, carburetion, fuel and electrical systems, troubleshooting and recovery of stranded vehicles.

Classes average about 45 students. Hass said this allows a teacher-pupil ratio of one instructor for five students.

"Most of the students come to the school as privates," continued the captain, "and quite a few of them graduate as specialists. It all depends on their academic showing."

Most of the school's facilities are located on main post but one activity at Harmony Church enables students to acquaint themselves with the M60A1 tank, the M113 armored personnel carrier, the M578 and M88 recovery vehicles and the M109 self-propelled howitzer.

Successful completion of the course demands the student pass five written exams and one practical exercises test. If he passes, the student is awarded the PMOS 63C20 and if he passes with "a high average, the specialist 4 rating.

At Martin Army Hospital

Green Beret Trainees Develop Skills

Among the group making rounds with Martin Army Hospital doctors these days are Special Forces trainees from Ft. Bragg, N.C., undergoing "applicatory training."

The noncommissioned officer in charge of the plans operations and training division at the hospital, SFC Billy G. Marts, explained "These people come here after they finish a 10-week course at Fort Sam Houston similar to the medical specialist course but with more in-depth training."

The 10 weeks at Fort Sam Houston constitute Phase I, which is the first of a three-part training program in the medical field.

Approximately five classes a year graduate from the seven-week Phase II training at Martin Army Hospital. After graduation, the students return to Fort Bragg for Phase III, which consists of six months of laboratory work and practical application exercises.

"While they're here," Marts said, "they are assigned to plans, operations and training division and attached to the Medical Company at Kelley Hill for quarters and rations. They make all formations and stand inspections and reveille along with the medics at the company."

The plans and training division separates Phase II into seven one-week courses in each of the main departments such as outpatient clinic, emergency room, orthopedics and pediatrics.

Each Special Forces trainee is assigned to one doctor who he observes and assists.

Legion Chapter Honors Sgt. Oscar E. Berven

Glenn H. White, senior vice commander of American Legion Post 35, Columbus, presented a $50 U. S. Savings Bond to Sgt. Oscar E. Berven, 2nd Brigade Drill Sergeant of the Quarter at the U. S. Army Training Center, Infantry.

A Columbus resident and drill sergeant in Co. E, 6th Bn., Berven also was awarded the Association of the United States Army (AUSA) Trophy. This award is made each quarter by the outstanding drill sergeant in the 1st and 2nd Brigade by the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter.

Graduating with the battalion was Co. E, 4th Bn., 1st Bde., whose Pvt. David A. Gray claimed the American Spirit Honor Medal, the highest trainee award. Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, Training Center commander, presented the medal.

Also, Lt. Col. William G. Riggs, 7th Bn. commander and the reviewing officer, recognized the company, commanded by Capt. Reese D. Thomas, for completing the entire eight-week cycle without an AWOL.

Honored for achieving the highest overall training and proficiency ratings was Co. D, 7th Bn., whose commander, Capt. Dennis M. Dalton was awarded the Brigade Commander's Trophy by Col. Robert T. Richmond.

Candidate Brigade Honors Pair For Highest Ranking As NCOCs

Richard G. Turner, a native of Melrose Park, Ill., took the top three honors at the graduation of Infantry Noncommissioned Officer Candidate Class 2-70, in Marshall Auditorium Nov. 18.

Turner earned the titles of distinguished graduate, academic graduate, and leadership graduate, making him the top man in the 102nd Co., 10th Stu. Bn., The Candidate Brigade.

For his achievement, Turner was promoted to staff sergeant. He also received a letter of commendation from Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the Infantry School, an Association of the United States Army (AUSA) plaque, a "Follow Me" statuette, and a "Follow Me" plaque.

The class graduated 175 new sergeants.

First Sgt. Forrest E. Chestnut, 74th Co., 7th Stu. Bn., The Candidate Bde., was the guest speaker at the graduation of 152 new sergeants from 86th Co., 8th Stu. Bn.

For his achievement, Carpenter received a letter of commendation from Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant, The Infantry School, an engraved "Follow Me" statuette, an engraved "Follow Me" plaque, an engraved Association of the United States Army (AUSA) and was promoted to staff sergeant.

"Ordinarily, I don't pick up hitch-hikers!"

ORDINARILY, we'd ask more money for these reconditioned late-model beauties . . . but we need room . . . so we've tole priced them all for quick clearance. Come see, come save.

STUDENT MEETS RANGER MASCOT

OC Unit Roster Said Unique

There is 2nd Lt. Ralph C. Greaves, San Diego, Calif., who won recent North American and National sailing championships.

Jazz musician 2nd Lt. William E. Dawson is a veteran trombone and clarinet player who has played with the Ray Anthony band.

And 2nd Lt. David Green, Johnson City, Tenn., was named 1968 College Photographer of the Year. Greene, a recent graduate of the University of Missouri, has sold pictures to both Look and National Geographic magazines.

One of the world's largest private butterfly collection belongs to 2nd Lt. George F. Austin, Glendora, Calif. He holds a bachelor of science degree from San Diego State College, San Diego, Calif.

Finally, 2nd Lt. David N. Stockford, who has a master's degree in special education from Rhode Island College, was president of the Christian Youth Fellowship organization for New York, New Jersey and the New England states. He was also an administrator in the state of Maine.

Officers Named To XO Posts

Lieutenant Colonels James O. Cravens and Aldric M. Hayes have assumed duties as executive officers of the Army Training Center's 1st and 2nd Brigades respectively.

A veteran of Korea and Vietnam, Cravens also saw combat duty in World War II while in the U. S. Navy. His other overseas duty includes two tours in Germany.

Cravens earned his Army commission through ROTC at Western Kentucky University and has attended the Army's Command and General Staff College.

His awards and decorations include the Bronze Star, Army Commendation Medal with two oak leaf clusters and the Joint Service Commendation Medal.

A native of Florida, Hayes earned an engineering degree from Tuskegee (Ala.) Institute. Commissioned in 1951, he has attended the Command and General Staff College.

World Of Sports

By Virgil Powell

SWEATY ATHLETES THROUGHOUT THE LAND are banging heads in a smashing, crashing, bashing manner calculated to wiggle the needles in those earthquake seismographs. These collegians definitely do not want to die for dear old Rutgers. They want to live for the dear old pros and the dear old pro bonuses.

A sure-fire way for a football player to get into the big bracket is to win the Heisman Trophy. This is the award given annually to the gridder elected by sports writers and broadcasters as the very best of the varsity crop.

The Heisman Trophy has a long and honorable history. It was originated in 1935 by New York's Downtown Athletic Club. In those days, the honor was nearly everything. Pro football, struggling to keep alive, was not flinging bags of gold at untried rah-rah boys.

BUCKING FOR BUCKS

But now the Heisman winner (and his agent, of course have a sharp talking point when they step to the bargaining table. If a fellow is the very best, why shouldn't he get the very best money?

Shouldn't he?

Well, a spoilsport named Hugh Brown of the Philadelphia Bulletin has been checking on the matter. He mentions that quarterback John Huarte won the award in 1964 and wangled $200,000 from the New York Jets. Still, it seems that somebody called Joe Namath became the Jets' quarterback.

Jimmy Brown, perhaps the greatest ball-carrier ever, was an also-ran for the Heisman, as were Tommy McDonald, John Brodie and Jon Arnett.

Hugh McElhenny and Ollie Matson, two pros who still make coaches drool, were passed over in their year. The guy who beat them out, Dick Kazmaier of Princeton, decided not to play for pay.

Dick Butkus, maybe the best linebacker in the world, got beat for the Heisman by Huarte.

Some "greatest players" of past years have been Terry Baker, Steve Spurrier, Billy Cannon and Joe Bellino. But the biggest prize to come out of the Heisman Crackerjack box — until and unless Orange Juice proves to be full of pro vitamins — was Paul Hornung, the Golden Boy of Green Bay's golden years.

LOOK OUT! WOMAN DRIVER!

Smokey Drolet wants to drive in the Indianapolis 500. What makes this notable is that Smokey is a woman and no female has ever entered that auto race up to now. If she makes it and wins, there'll have to be an adjustment in the award presenting ceremony.

Customarily, a beauty queen kisses the winner. Now they'll have to have a beauty king handy, as well. Maybe Joe Namath will be available. Or Hawk Harrelson. Or Tiny Tim.

AN ACE IN THE HOLE

Can you make a hole-in-one and lose the hole? A rule book nut says you should because "golf consists in playing a ball from the teeing ground into the hole by successive strokes." One stroke is not successive strokes, says he. No way.

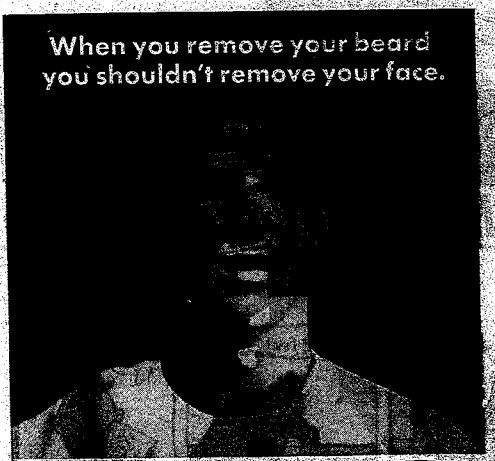
When you remove your beard you shouldn't remove your face.



Today's super-duper razor blades are meant to cut whiskers. They can also do a job on the skin underneath the whiskers.

To help keep you from butchering yourself—this is the reason for Rise.® And why we put a thin lubricating film into it that gets between your blade and your skin.

Put Rise on your face before you shave, and maybe you won't have to put toilet paper on your face after it.

THE GAME OF SEVEN GOOFS

These two drawings look alike, but actually differ in at least seven subtle ways. Check your answers with those printed upside down.

Answers: (1) The sleeve of woman above can't be indented. (2) The cover under bathing pedestrian is different. (3) The same woman is carrying a purse in opposite hand. (4) The woman getting in car is wearing a different collar. (5) The lamp post in back is bent. (6) The lamp post in back is bent. (7) The person in woman behind is a different color.

Bet you didn't know...

The first military aircraft ever used in combat was Colonel Thomas Selfridge Page Davidson in May, 1898. It carried a soldier and weighed hundreds of pounds more. The vehicle was powered by a three-cylinder, air-cooled engine. It had a crew of four, seated back to back. It was and was capable of making a 500- or 600-mile. Lieutenant General Henry H. Arnold was so impressed by the reconnaissance possibilities of this strange aircraft that he ordered that the type of aircraft should be provided with similar equipment. The first aerial mapping photographic camera had been made.

The first U.S. Military Academy graduate to be killed in military action occurred in the War of 1812 against Great Britain. His name was George Rosers, and he was a lieutenant under the command of Captain Nathan Heald whose detachment was attacked by a vastly superior force of Indians on August 15, 1812, at Fort Dearborn, near Chicago. Rosers killed two Indians in hand-to-hand combat before he was mortally wounded. Even then, he continued the fight on his knees, until the last moment.

And did you know...

If you've been yearning to visit a certain area overseas, here's your chance to combine pleasure with business!

Oversea Area of Choice is a reenlistment option that makes it easy to select a particular oversea duty station.

If you are a first termer, with at least eight months of service behind you—or in grade E-6 or below within 90 days of your discharge date—and are qualified in an MOS for which an oversea requirement exists—this great opportunity is open to you.

If you are otherwise qualified—and the idea of foreign travel appeals to you—get in touch with your Career Counselor. Chances are... he'll have just the ticket you've been looking for!

Your future, your decision...stay ARMY.

Give your girl the Rapid Shave treatment

1st week
The Come-On
Start shaving with Rapid Shave. Rub it in. The rich, cream lubricant will tell him you're feeling romantic.

2nd week
The Build-Up
Keep using Rapid Shave. The cream wears in, softens the toughest beard. Lingers on for you.

3rd week
The Clincher
Now you're in with Rapid Shave Menthol Mint. A little extra and that's really warm lingers on for you.

P.S. If things get too hot, stop shaving. For the fourth week? That's outta his bristle.

No socket to it.

If you were always near a socket when you shaved, that would be one thing. But you aren't.

So you need a shaver that goes anywhere. A shaver like the brand-new battery-operated Norelco Cordless 20B. With floating heads that fit the curves of a man's face.

And self-sharpening blades, that shave close and smooth every day. The unique Norelco rotary action keeps the blades sharp while it strokes off whiskers. Every time you shave.

The Norelco Cordless gives you close shaves anywhere. Up to 30 days of shaves on only 4 penlight batteries.

It's small enough to fit your pocket.

All ready to sock it to your beard.

Norelco®
Even on a beard like yours.

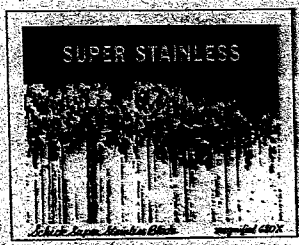
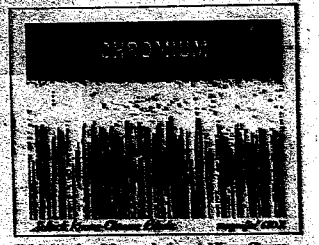
(even our own)



Super stainless is not complete protection against corrosion. This, for instance, is a magnified section of a plastic-coated Schick super stainless edge after three shaves, magnified 600 times. It's rough, pitted, corroded.



This is a section of the same magnified 600 times. Chromium edge after three shaves. Not a pit, not a corrosion. As you can see, chromium is the hardest, smoothest, most durable thing for shaving.

Only Schick Krona-Chrome has the chromium edge.

Post Tops Goal For 12th Year In UG Campaign

By Marion Jones

The Fort Benning United Givers Fund campaign which began on an upbeat Sept. 26 with ceremonies in Marshall Auditorium has ended on a victorious note.

It was announced this week by campaign officials that the post will exceed its goal of $255,000 by nearly $1,000.

All but 12 units out of 63 reached a goal of 100 per cent of their fair share. The contributions of these 12 varied from 48 to 97 per cent, according to James Schoonover, UGF project officer at the post.

Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott, commanding general, expressed his pleasure at the above figures and stated, "I'm proud of our people here at Fort Benning, especially the lower grade officers, enlisted men and civilian personnel who make up the majority of our post population."

"The UGF campaign has proven once again the inherent good, generosity and responsiveness of our young people — given a reasonable understanding of a need. My congratulations to all," the general said.

Col. Talton W. Long, deputy post commander and the post's UGF campaign chairman, said he was "very grateful for the wholehearted support of the commanders and the commendable effort of the project officers and key men who insured the success of the campaign."

Out of the approximately $206,000 contributed at the post, $140,000 will go to the Columbus-Phenix City-Muscogee UGF campaign.

The remainder of the amount will stay here to aid the Youth Activities Center, the post's dental health program and the Army Community Services Welfare Program.

Order Gives 2 Brigades To School

In a series of moves designed to increase the efficiency of the Infantry School, the former Student Brigade has been designated as The School Brigade and The Candidate Brigade (Provisional) is now officially The Candidate Brigade, U. S. Army Infantry School.

In the same general orders The Infantry School Battalion (ISB) was named the 1st Battalion with subordinate units 10th through the 18th Companies replacing the old ISB Companies A, B, C, E, G, F and H respectively.

Until the early part of 1968 there had been only one brigade in the school — The Student Brigade. The necessity for two brigades became obvious with the establishment of the NCO candidate program.

At that time The Candi-

Colonel Lauds 'Tremendous Men' During Promotion Ceremony

By Sgt. Carol Aubin

"One does not attain the rank of colonel alone. I owe this promotion to many tremendous men with whom I have been associated, and to all of them I am sincerely grateful," said Alexander H. Hunt following his promotion to colonel here.

During a special ceremony, held in the commanding general's office, Colonel Hunt's wife, Velma, and Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott pinned on the insignia of the new rank.

Colonel Hunt, chief, staff section, Infantry School brigade and battalion operations department, was assigned to Fort Benning in April and served as deputy director, company operations department until October when he was assigned to his present position.

Prior to his arrival here, the colonel was in the Republic of Vietnam assigned as battalion commander, 3rd Bn., 22nd Inf, 1st Bde., 25th Inf. Div. from August, 1968, through February, 1969. He had previously served consecutively as the brigade's executive officer and commander between March and July.

Colonel Hunt served as an enlisted member of the Marine Corps from July, 1945, to November, 1945, in the United States and with the Pacific Fleet Marine Force. He joined the Army in 1948

The colonel has served as assistant Army attache to Laos, training and staff officer for the U. S. Military Mission in Liberia, and professor of military science at Virginia State, Petersburg, Va.

Colonel Hunt has attended the Intelligence and Language School, Washington, D. C., the Armed Forces Staff College at Norfolk, Va., and the Command and General Staff College, Ft. Leavenworth, Kan.

He received a bachelor of science degree from Texas A and M University at College Station, Tex., in 1948.

His decorations include three awards of the Silver Star, the Legion of Merit, the second award of the Bronze Star Medal for meritorious service, and the Bronze Star Medal for valor.

Also ten awards of the Air Medal, two awards of the Army Commendation Medal, the Purple Heart, the Republic of South Vietnam's Gallantry Cross with Bronze Star, and Gallantry Cross with Palm.

The Hunts have two children, Cheryl, 13, and Cela, 11. Both of the children attended the ceremony held in honor of their father's promotion.

Council Asks Assistance For New Arrivals

The Fort Benning Company Grade Officers Council has recommended that further steps be taken to assist newcomers arriving at Columbus Metropolitan Airport and the bus station in reaching the post.

At its monthly meeting the council asked that a welcome station, or a liaison team, or specific directional signs be set up at the airport and bus station for the convenience of incoming personnel.

Also, it was suggested that military transportation be made available at the two facilities to get incoming personnel to the post.

During the meeting Capt. Judith Keim from personnel services division, Directorate of Personnel, appeared before the council to give a briefing on the AWOL-desertion problem.

It was announced that several moves have been made to reduce the AWOL-desertion rate, including seminars at Third Army and Fort Benning for discussion of the problem.

Captain Keim said junior officers can assist in reducing the AWOL desertion rate by being knowledgeable of the problem, by using good leadership and by making suggestions on ways to prevent AWOLs.

The council recommended that junior officers be given a briefing on the AWOL desertion rate and that all junior officers receive professional instruction on how to counsel and

PLAQUE TO RETIREE
Presented By General Talbott, Left, To Col. Joel M. Hollis

Ceremony Marks End To Army Career

Colonel Joel M. Hollis, formerly of the weapons department in the Infantry School, retired in a ceremony here Nov. 25.

He was awarded the third Oak Leaf Cluster to the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding service.

The colonel came to Fort Benning from Norfolk, Va., where he served as chief, subsidiary activities, Atlantic Command (CINCLANT), from August 1966, until July, 1967. He was director of the weapons department here for the past 27 months.

Colonel Hollis previously served at Fort Benning as director of the small arms, department of the Infantry Board from November, 1965, until July, 1967.

The Bronze Star Medal, the Air Medal, Army Commendation Medal, and Combat Infantryman Badge are included in his awards and decorations.

The colonel was born in Atlanta, Ga. He received a bachelor of science degree from Presbyterian College, Clinton, S.C., in 1938. In 1965, he received a master of international affairs degree from George Washington University, Washington, D.C.

Included as special guests at the ceremony were Maj. Gen. (ret.) Joseph H. Harper and his wife. General Harper is a former Fort Benning commanding general.

Also present were Mrs. Hollis, the colonel's wife, and his daughter.

"how to listen" by someone trained in counseling.

Also, it was suggested that junior officers exercise their authority more in dealing with AWOLs, especially in the case of a first offense.

"In particular, extra duty can be most effective where rigidly supervised and enforced by junior officers and senior NCOs," the council said.

The council's next meeting has been scheduled for Dec. 17 at 1:30 p.m., Room 647, Infantry Hall.

The changes became effective at the post Nov. 26.

According to General Order 100, which effects the redesignation, no reorganization is to be made in the remaining battalions.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

By Bill King
King's Pizza On Call

December 6, the feast of Sinter Klaas or St. Nicholas, is called "Little Christmas" in The Netherlands. Cookies baked on molds of the saint's image are given to children who have been very good.

Omelets can be spectacular as desserts too. Add sugar to the egg mixture before cooking—and preserves to one side just before folding. Sprinkle with powdered sugar and liqueur and ignite!

An ideal steak is aged (meaning not so bright red in color), marbled with fat and soft to the touch.

The eminent biographer, Dr. Samuel Johnson, once declared: "Claret is for boys, port for men and women, and brandy for heroes."

Men, women, boys and girls all appreciate the superior food at

SENIOR PROMOTIONS

How many enlisted men and women in grade E-7 were selected for promotion to E-8 by the board which met earlier this year?

According to DA Circular 624-81, there were 4,29 men and women selected for advancement to master sergeant or first sergeant. DA began promoting from this list in October. The first to be promoted were through sequence number 318. The 4,290 total includes 306, or about 7.5 per cent, selected from the secondary zone.

DRILL SERGEANTS

Is it true drill sergeants can be promoted up to staff sergeant without regard for time in service or time in grade?

Yes, promotions may be made to drill sergeants below the grade of staff sergeant without regard for these qualifications but within the DA promotion quotas for each grade. These promotions are given to those cited for outstanding duty performance or for ranking as the top graduate at a drill sergeant school.

ON-THE-JOB TRAINING PAY

Under the present provisions of the GI Bill Veterans Readjustment Benefits Act, what are the monthly payments to men and women for on-the-job training?

For the first six months, the payments are $80 with no dependents, $90 with one dependent and $100 a month with two dependents. Payments are reduced proportionately for each succeeding six-month period, reaching a level of $20, $30 and $40 for the fourth and any succeeding six-month periods.

CHAMPUS

How will I know if my doctor is affiliated with CHAMPUS?

Sponsor or patient can ask at time of initial contact whether or not the physician and - or other source of health care will accept the patient under CHAMPUS.

SUBDUED INSIGNIA

What is the status of the changeover to subdued insignia?

The "must" change, scheduled to become effective worldwide July 1, has been scrubbed. Army acknowledgement of the suspension came this week.

Because of the inability of manufactures to deliver the subdued insignia, the Army said, the date of the changeover has been suspended. "A new date will be established upon receipt by Department of the Army of the availability data," according to DA Message 905420.

DEBT FORGIVENESS

Does the Army have debt forgiveness provisions for its officers and enlisted men?

Generally, the Army does not remit or forgive debts of officers; there are certain provisions for enlisted personnel. Those on active duty are considered under AR 37-125, administered by The Adjutant General; those out of service are considered under AR 27-41, administered by The Judge Advocate General.

Speed Trap!

By James Blount

The greatest single accident problem at Fort Benning is that which involves a privately owned motor vehicle. More deaths and more personal injuries occur in such vehicles than in any other circumstances.

One such accident occurred earlier this year, and came very close to becoming a multi-fatality mishap. Three cars were involved, and a total of eight soldiers were injured.

The accident occurred when two cars were apparently speeding on Highway 27. The vehicles topped the crest of a hill, and suddenly the driver of the outside vehicle saw a car in front of him. He applied his brakes locking the wheels.

The vehicle left 30 feet of skid marks on the pavement before it left the highway and continued along the shoulder of the roadway. It traveled 740 feet down the shoulder before re-entering the highway. It continued another 40 feet before the driver was able to reapply his brakes so that the vehicle again went into a skid.

The skid marks this time measured 77 feet before the car again left the highway on the right and continued for another 30 feet before turning approximately 25 degrees to the right.

The car then skidded to its left another 18 feet, and struck the rear of the vehicle which had been traveling in front of it when the cars topped the hill, causing the slower moving vehicle to burst into flames.

The car, still out of control, then managed to go another 65 feet while making more than a complete turn around on the highway, still turning in a clockwise direction.

Next the front of the vehicle collided with the right side of the third car, the car which had apparently been racing with this automobile as they came over the hill.

The car then continued for another 40 feet as it turned clockwise for more than another complete turn.

The first car was ripped into two pieces, with one section coming to rest on top of the other.

The eight were taken to Martin Army Hospital, where four were examined and treated for bruises and lacerations and released. Another man suffered a fractured shoulder and lacerations and was admitted to the hospital.

The driver of the first vehicle sustained multiple lacerations over the body and possible internal injuries. He was admitted to the hospital for approximately four months.

Join the Conservatives!

Being a conservative these days is much more than a political trend. Webster may not agree with our definition of the word "conservation" — but to the Armed Forces it also means M-O-N-E-Y.

How? Through simple thoughtfulness. Military conservationists save our Department of Defense millions of dollars every year. Why can't we help them?

There are literally thousands of ways of applying conservation methods to our daily routines, and there are plenty of signs around if we only look for them. Many go unnoticed because we've seen them so many times before. Example: "Watch your step." "Put the lights out." "Drive carefully." "Don't let that faucet drip." "Beware — high voltage." The list is endless.

Everytime we save money, we are helping our government. But, how does a "Watch your step," sign save money? It's easy. A broken leg, arm or hip takes weeks to heal. It also requires hospitalization. You can't work, but the government still pays you. Your hospital care also costs money.

On the brighter side, if you don't get hurt, the money you save in other areas of conservation is a help to the Department of Defense.

To stress the point a little — if each man and woman in the military services were to save our government just one cent a day — that totals a whopping $12,775,000 annually. And, in the current vernacular, "That will buy a lot of bay."

So, be a conservative, pick up that piece of trash, put that light out, don't smoke in bed, stop that leaky faucet; just confribute your fair share each day to stop waste in any area you can think of. That is not asking too much of anyone.—AFPS

White House Reports

(On June 27, 1969, the President concurred in the conclusions and recommendations of a special task force looking into the problems of narcotics, marihuana and dangerous drugs. The portion of this report relating to marihuana is being reprinted for Bayonet readers. This is the third of a seven part series dealing with marihuana.)

EFFECTS

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—Dr. Stanley F. Yolles, director, National Institute of Mental Health, speaking on the mental and physical effects of marihuana, said:

"The muscular incoordination and the distortion of space and time perception commonly associated with marihuana use are potentially hazardous, since the drug adversely affects one's ability to drive an automobile or perform other skilled tasks."

"We still do not know enough about the long-term effects of marihuana use. As in the case of tobacco, it is possible that there are serious consequences of chronic use which will only become apparent through careful, longtime studies," he said.

A 1965 report on drug dependence for the World Health Organization describes the nature of marihuana intoxication in the following terms:

"Among the more prominent subjective effects . . . are: hilarity . . . carelessness; loquacious euphoria . . . distortion of sensation and perception . . . impairment of judgment and memory; distortion of emotional responsiveness; irritability; and confusion. Other effects, which appear after repeated administraton . . . include: lowering of the sensory threshold, especially for optical and acoustical stimuli . . . and aggressiveness as a possible result of various intellectual and sensory derangements; and sleep disturbances."

In small, low potency quantities marihuana may act as a mild euphoriant and sedative somewhat similar to alcohol. In relatively high doses psychotic-like phenomena, quite similar to those associated with LSD, use, have been reported. Recurrences of the marihuana state (flashbacks) without actually taking the drug again have been reported. These recurrences can be anxiety provoking. Unlike the stronger hallucinogens, such as LSD, which produce psychotic reactions in almost any individual.

Despite marihuana's long history—spanning thousands of years and many cultures—there has been comparatively little sound research on this drug. Only four laboratory studies investigating marihuana's immediate effects on humans have been reported in the American scientific literature. The first of these was done with a group of 34 soldiers in the Canal Zone. A second study, reported in the 1944 LaGuardia Report, is based on 72 prisoners' responses to marihuana extract. In 1946, a small number of chronic using prisoners were studied. A more carefully controlled study recently produced a report on some laboratory work with marihuana in humans done partially with NIMH support.

All of these studies generally found loss of inhibitions, and feelings of relaxation and self-confidence together with some mild impairment of thinking and coordinated performance. It has also been demonstrated that THC, when administered in a sufficiently high dosage, will cause a psychotic-like state, similar to that induced by LSD.

Benning Thrift Shop Helps Consumer and Consignee

Fort Benning's Thrift Shop is one of the country's largest military outlets for used merchandise.

Located in Bldg. 1230, one of the wooden structures in the vicinity of the Officer Wives Club Lounge and the Milk Bar, the Thrift Shop is open each Tuesday and Thursday from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. It is also open on the first Saturday of each month from 9:30 a.m. until 2:3 p.m.

The Thrift Shop has a three - fold purpose. Earnings, after expenses, go exclusively to the OWC Welfare Fund; hence the shop qualifies as a nonprofit organization.

The shop also fulfills a need for the personnel here — both consumer and consignee. It provides an outlet for usable, often high-quality goods for families on the move and it furnishes shoppers with inexpensive, reliable merchandise.

The Thrift Shop is operated under the guidance and control of the OWC. The chairmanship for the shop has traditionally been assigned to the club's third vice-president.

Mrs. Charles Reidenbaugh is serving in this capacity for the second year and has worked with Thrift Shops at Ft. Dix and in Japan when her family was stationed in Zama, Japan.

Mrs. Reidenbaugh's office is far more than honorary. As Thrift Shop chairman, she serves as liaison between the OWC Board and the Thrift Shop. She is responsible for sound business practices and the activities of all employes throughout the operation.

She is assisted by the store manager, Mrs. Robert Leon, and the bookkeeper, Mrs. Robert Whitt. These two ladies are the only salaried employes.

Mrs. Leon has been with the Thrift Shop for two years and Mrs. Whitt has been keeping the books since 1961. These ladies are emphatic in their praise of the outstanding work done by volunteers here.

Workers usually volunteer through various unit organizations by offering their services to the commander's wives or to individual Thrift-Shop chairmen within the unit. Ladies who give their time often become fascinated with the shop and its people-oriented merchandise.

There are ten regular, committed volunteers other than the staff workers. They are Mmes. Benjamin Purcell, Ben Yarbrough, Robert Shilling, Douglas Tucker, John Haynie, James Pruitt, Hattie Weeks, Cedrick Woodruff, Robert Williamson and Allan Mercereau.

The stock of the Thrift Shop is almost universal in its appeal and is in good condition. Army families who wish to keep household goods pared to a manageable quota are much more likely to get rid of usable furnishings and clothing than more permanent families without the bother of weight allowances for moving. Although the Thrift Shop is operated primarily for the service family, civilians are also allowed to shop here.

The manager explains that while the workers are careful to take merchandise that is in good condition, they do not encourage new commodities in the store as this would be competing with retail stores and would be defeating the purpose of the Thrift Shop.

WOMEN'S NEWS

Mrs. Acuff Announces New Exercise Classes

Mrs. Earl Acuff, OWC's slim and trim (exercise) chairman, announces a new class. The class, now in session, will run through Feb. 11, with two weeks off for the holidays.

The location for the Slim and Trim operation is Bldg. 1231, which houses the School of Dance.

The ladies who have taken this exercise are enthusastic about the results obtained through group exercise (usually about 25 students per class) and about the instruction.

The group is divided into a beginning and an advanced class. Both classes meet on Mondays and Wednesdays, with new students starting at 9:30 a.m. and more advanced ones at 10:30 a.m.

The cost of the eight-week course is $7 with reduced rates for those ladies taking the course for a second time.

Artillery Wives Eat Lasagne

The Officer Wives Club of the 2nd Bn., 10th Arty, 197th Infantry Bde., held their monthly meeting at the home of Lt. Col. and Mrs. William W. Berry.

The highlight of the evening was a lasagne dinner where the ladies welcomed to the brigade, Linda Ajjar and Betty Mills.

During the meeting which followed the dinner, the club members elected Bonnie Parker as public relations chairman and Chris Folley as treasurer.

Jewels and Hats Shown To Geographical Club

"Jewels and Hats" were presented at the monthly meeting of the Geographical Wives Club which was held at the Main Officers Club.

The Thanksgiving Day theme was carried out in colors of orange and gold with centerpieces of pinecone turkeys decorated with jewels. The head table held a large gold branch tree laden with sparkling jewelry.

The program consisted of a hat show sponsored by a local Columbus store and a jewelry demonstration by a national chain.

Hostesses for the function were Mrs. John Byrnside, Mrs. George Sykes and Mrs. John Price.

New members were introduced: Mmes. Thomas Tegeder, Michael McCullough, Duane Powers, Franklin Horton and Roy E. Lindquist Jr.

Plans were made to hold a children's Christmas Party on Dec. 20 at 2 p.m. at the Main Officers Club.

The next regular meeting of the club will be held on Dec. 17. For reservations or information on either function phone Mrs. Thomas Curtin 687-1534.

COUPLE PLANS WEDDING
Capt. Roberta Britten, 2nd Lt. David Yoder

'Do You Date Lieutenants?' 'Yes,' Said the Captain

Two months after they met, 2nd Lt. David L. G. Yoder proposed to WAC Capt. Roberta A. Britten — in front of her desk in the G-2 section of Fort Benning's Training Center.

Exactly a week later, she accepted — in Infantry Hall.

It began at a classified briefing last July, when Yoder asked his bride-to-be if she dated second lieutenants. The answer must have been an emphatic "yes" because on Dec. 15 the couple will be married in the Alumni Memorial Chapel at Michigan State University, East Lansing, Mich.

If rank isn't enough to confuse the issue of who is going to be boss, it's worth noting that whereas Captain Britten received a direct appointment in 1964 after graduating from Michigan State University with a bachelor of arts degree in sociology, Yoder boasted eight years' service, including tours in Germany, Okinawa and Vietnam, being commissioned last June through Infantry Officer Candidate School.

The couple made wedding arrangements to coincide with Yoder's graduation from Pathfinder School. Maid of honor at the ceremony will be Marilyn L. Britten, sister of the bride. Capt. Michael A. Davidovich, Fort Benning, will be best man. The pair will visit Yoder's home in Norwich, N. Y., before settling at 1612 Bowman St., Columbus.

The groom-to-be has orders assigning him to Korea in early April and Roberta Britten obviously would like to make it a combined operation.

Regardless of whether she receives a similar assignment, she has every captain's dream — her very own second lieutenant.

Wives Club Hosts Mrs. Sidney Berry

Mrs. Sidney B. Berry was the guest of Mrs. John Geraci and the wives of the Company Operations Department of the Infantry School at a luncheon held at the Supper Club here.

The club was skillfully decorated for the occasion with candles, greens and festive Christmas arrangements.

During the meeting, Mrs. Mona Williams, representing a local florist, demonstrated how to arrange both live and artificial greens and flowers.

Hotesses for the luncheon were the ladies of the Map Reading Committee. A ceramic planter, made by Mrs. Martin J. Hackbart, was offered as a door prize by the ladies.

Mrs. Jack Whitted presented the head table arrangement to Mrs. Geraci as a farewell gift. Mrs. Geraci's husband will soon be transferred to the Ranger Department of the Infantry School.

Farewells were bid to Mrs. John Geraci and Mrs. William Chandler of Headquarters; Mrs. Donald C. Pavlik and Mrs. Harry L. Hammond of Company Tactics; Mrs. Hackbart, Mrs. Don Lutz and Mrs. Donald Sampley of Map Reading and Mrs. Michael Pumphrey and Mrs. Lyndel Porterfield of Platoon Tactics.

RANGER WIVES, SPEAKER
Mrs. Y. Y. Phillips, Mrs. James E. Price, Paulk

Terrell Paulk, Dance Instructor, Talks at Ranger Wives Luncheon

Guest speaker at a Ranger Wives luncheon was Terrell Paulk, instructor of the Officers Wives' Club School of Dance and co-director of the Springer Ballet Theater.

Three of Paulk's students, Mrs. Sonja Manzy, Miss Sandra Ortiz and Miss Ladner Liles, also talked.

The luncheon was held at the Supper Club of the Fort Benning Officers Club.

Graceful, multi-colored dolls decorated the tables showing the hours of work by Mrs. James E. Price Jr., Mrs. Jennings B. Thames, Mrs. Joseph Almaguer and Mrs. William Hagan. The head table was decorated with a platform of gathered pink net displaying a pair of pink ballet slippers.

The proper teaching methods and the performance of the ballet commands were demonstrated by Paulk and his graceful students.

Mrs. Grace Whitehead, Paulk's accompanist, also entertained the ladies with a piano selection, "Hungarian Rhapsody." Mrs. Whitehead was a concert pianist from the Philippines before coming to Fort Benning.

Mrs. Y. Y. Phillips, wife of the director of the Ranger Dept., thanked Operations and Plans, Third Ranger Co. and Supply and Budget Wives for hosting the luncheon. She spoke on the recent and future activities of the Ranger Wives.

Mrs. Phillips also welcomed new Rangerettes, Mmes. Richard Pack, Travis Shelton, Richard Smith and James Bouldin. Farewell was said to Mrs. Jennings Thames.

Officers Wives Hold Meeting At Dorchak's

The November coffee of the Support Battalion Officers Wives (197th Infantry Bde.) was held at the home of Mrs Steven Dorchak. Thanksgiving, of course, was the theme Mrs. Dorchak chose to carry throughout the evening.

The women discussed plans for a Christmas party and then held a raffle for a lovely silver dish. Mrs. Riley Lane was the winner for the second time.

Newcomers were Mrs. Willis Murdaugh, Mrs. David Cox and Mrs. Amos Hough. This month's coffee will be held Dec. 11.

Comm-Elect Dept. Ladies Honor Mrs. John McKinney

Mrs. John B. McKinney was honored by the Communications - Electronics Dept., wives at a farewell coffee in the Mirror Room of the Main Officers Club.

The autumn theme was emphasized in the orange and brown decor of the room as well as the subtle hues of yellows and reds appearing in the table appointment of chrysanthemums accented with cattails.

Mrs. Paul M. Johnson, representing the department ladies presented an elegant silver pitcher to Mrs. McKinney.

Mrs. McKinney was attired in a brown princess dress which was tastefully complemented by a beautiful orchid presented to her by Mrs. John M. Kaljna, who, along with Mrs. James W. Lowe and Mrs. Shelton V. Peters, acted as serving hostesses for the affair.

To better remember the occasion Mrs. McKinney received a collection of photographs taken during the festivities and arranged on a giant farewell card which was also signed by the ladies in attendance.

The occasion served as a fitting farewell and remembrance for Mrs. McKinney who will be living at 946 Sycamore, New Shrewsbury, N.J., where her husband will be employed by International Telephone and Telegraph as director of plant and engineering.

Children Will Party

Children of soldiers and civilian employees at the Training Center will be treated to free movies, candy, apples, oranges and a visit from Santa Claus Dec. 20 at 9:30 a.m.

The Christmas party for dependents 12 years of age and under will be held at Theater 3 in the Sand Hill area.

According to ATC's Command Sgt. Maj. Acy Akridge approximately 1,500 dependents are expected to attend the event.

Dependents of former ATC members now serving in the Republic of Vietnam are invited also. Reservations should be made by noon Dec. 15 by calling 544-7233 or 544-7514.

Red Cross

Volunteers Hear General Talbott

BY Spt Paul Miller

Families and friends watched proudly as 111 ladies graduated from the fall basic course for American Red Cross volunteers.

Addressing the graduates in Marshall Auditorium, Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott, commanding general, said, "To serve one's fellowman is as high a calling in this plane of existance as we'll see anywhere."

In concluding his remarks the general said, "We are in your debt to thank you for what you've done and what you will do in the future."

Presiding at the ceremonies was Mrs. Robert M. Piper, post chairman of volunteers. Chaplain (Col.) Holland Hope gave the invocation. Administering the volunteer pledge was Mrs. E. J. Murdock, recruiting chairman of volunteers.

Lt. Col. Anne Rose, chief nurse at Martin Army Hospital, presented each volunteer her distinctive Red Cross cap as Mrs. Talbott, honorary post chairman of volunteers, pinned the ladies with the small Red Cross insignias.

In accepting the graduating class, Col. Martin A. Pfotenhauer, director of Medical Department Activities (MEDDAC), said, "Volunteers are the most important asset to the Red Cross. These very important people number three million throughout the world."

The ceremonies also included presentation of service tabs and letters of appreciation to 41 veterans of volunteer service.

Men Cautioned

Women To Shoot on Firing Range

All men of the area are cautioned to avoid the Muscogee County police firing range the morning of Dec. 13 because women will be out there in force learning how to defend themselves with the family blunderbuss or six shooter.

The morning shoot-out is the second part of a short course for women, only over 16-years-old, which begins at Columbus College at 7:30 p.m., Dec. 10 and is designed to acquaint them with the art of self defense.

Instructors, of course, will all be men. They include Professor Joe Webb, director of police science at the college; Assistant Professor Charles Moorman, police science department; Professor James Dwyer, assistant professor of history and former Army judo expert, and Dr. J. F. Burgess, director of the college's Continuing Education Program.

The first class will meet from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., Dec. 10, in the Howard Classroom building on campus. This session will cover means of personal self defense and what can be done in event of attack as well as prevention of attack and crimes in the home.

The second session on the firing range will be held Dec. 13 from 9 a.m. until noon. Class members will bring their own family hand guns along with ammunition and learn how to use guns properly, effectively and safely.

Registration fee for the five-hour course is $4. Additional information may be secured by calling the Office of Continuing Education at the college, 561-5134.

Authentic Scene Named Best In ATC Contest

By Betty J. Kemper

A captain from Missouri and staff sergeant from North Carolina combined their talents and memories of home to set the scene for an original replica of the first Thanksgiving.

Competition for the annual mess hall decoration award in the U.S. Army Training Center, Infantry, prompted Capt. Russell K. Smith Sr., company commander, and SSgt. William W. Hester, mess sergeant, Co. B, 5th Bn., 1st Bde., to create the display. With the help of trainees and cadre of the company, the exhibit was completed in ten days.

"I've been to museums and paid to get in and it wasn't as realistic as this," remarked battalion commander, Lt. Col. George R. Giles. "Not one detail has been forgotten," he said, as he pointed out a bird's nest in the eaves of the mud-insulated log cabin.

The one-room log cabin, complete with furnishings, dominated the scene where a training aid figure in pilgrim dress stood by the doorway. Inside, a pot-bellied stove, vintage phonograph and clock, kerosene lamps and authentic table, chairs and a bed, provided the decor.

Home-canned fruits and vegetables sat on the shelves and outside, a log table was laden with food. Beside the table were two more training aid figures, one dressed as a pilgrim, the other an Indian.

On Thanksgiving Day, Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, ATC commanding general, visited the display and presented a plaque to Hester, recognizing the first place winner in the contest.

The general was so impressed by the scene that he returned later in the day with his family.

Maj. Gen. Orwin Talbott, post commander, also toured the area Thanksgiving Day. Smith showed him the butter churn, complete with butter, a well with an old oaken bucket and an antique pitcher and washbowl, a corncrib, and a corn sheller.

Turkeys, chickens, two pigs, two horses, ducks and rabbits, along with a goat and a baying hound, borrowed from neighboring farms, added to the display.

Behind the cabin, a scarecrow kept watch over a cornfield and further back in the woods, a pot of stew simmered over an open fire near two Indian-type teepees.

Spt Stephen C. McMichaels, authentically dressed as a founding father, patrolled the street in front of the display and chatted with amused visitors.

"We started with just the 'house-raising' and decided to add a few animals and the cornfield to make it realistic," said Smith. "Before we knew it, the whole company was interested in the project and we decided to utilize everyone's suggestions. Several cadre brought antiques for us to use and the trainees all were interested in helping with the work."

The task, which had lasted well into the night before Thanksgiving, paid handsome returns in the form of hundreds of impressed visitors to the company area, a plaque for the company mess hall, and official congratulations from the post and training center commanders.

SOUND BOOTH IN INFANTRY HALL

School's Sound Branch Tunes In Infantry Trainee

By Sp4 Paul Miller

"Speak Up. . . . Can't hear ya. . ."

Remember the cries? It was not too long ago that most classes were conducted in the Army without the benefit of adequate public address systems. If an instructor did not have a strong set of lungs and vocal chords, then it was time for him to lay aside his chalk and pointer.

The Sound Branch, under the director of operations of The Infantry School here, makes it possible for students to both hear and comprehend what the instructor is saying.

Begun in 1941, the Sound Branch has pursued the mission of providing "equipment, recordings and portable lights for the U. S. Army Infantry School."

By 1958, Sound had grown to such an extent that it eventually broke off from its parent office to become more or less an entity in itself, employing 86 military and eight civilian personnel.

The branch is divided into seven major units. These are the operations unit, field sound unit, special sound unit, recording unit, maintenance - supply unit, generator repair unit and electronics maintenance unit.

Fort Benning is one of the few military installations that maintain mobile public address units to follow the troops into the field. At all hours of the day and night, olive drab trucks, somewhat resembling old Army ambulances, can be seen rolling about the post, weighted down with amplifiers, speakers and other sound equipment.

The portable sound system, dispatched by the operations unit, follows the troops to classes in the field to assist instructors or to York Field to make it possible for speakers to be heard at ceremonies.

Elements of the sound branch can be found in almost every "nick and cranny" of Fort Benning. On Eubanks Field, audio goes airborne to communicate with "jump students" suspended high above on the 250-foot jump towers.

At one time at Fort Benning, reveille and retreat were sounded by buglers stationed at different areas of the post. Today, the sound branch awakens the troops with the recorded sounds of a bugler, from speakers mounted atop Infantry Hall. At night the same speakers signal the day's end with the playing of "Taps."

As one enters the sound branch recording studio on the first floor of Infantry Hall, there is a feeling of "Nashville" all about. Confronted with switches, dials and meters, it is easy to imagine that it is a top recording studio.

The recording studio is maintained by the branch for use by all Infantry School instructors. Instructors are permitted to use whatever imagination they wish in preparing special audio effects that would stimulate their lectures.

A complete record library is also available, containing numerous sound effect albums.

The special sound unit is most noted for its work on the unique presentation of the epic poem, "I am the Infantry." The poem, dramatically illustrated with visual and audio effects, tells the story of the American Infantryman from Colonial days to the present. The presentation is staged at graduations and on other important occasions at Fort Benning.

This unit is responsible for any extra, or special equipment that is necessary for an effective presentation in classes at Infantry Hall.

The electronics maintenance unit not only keeps sound equipment operating at all times, but also designs and builds equipment to meet special needs.

If a certain size amplifier is needed, for example, it is often easier and cheaper to construct one from available parts than to purchase one on the open market.

This work is accomplished through the highly technical hands of Sam Adams, equipment specialist in electronics.

TURKEY!

The traditional Thanksgiving feast gets the undivided attention of the younger set who worry little about adding an inch or so about the waist line. Their interest was captured Thanksgiving Day in the mess hall of the 1st Battalion, Center Troop Command, where military families sat down to a huge turkey dinner beside the men who staff the headquarters and Infantry School. In the photo at right, CSM Gerald F. Ellis, of the Troop Command helps his son William dig into a drum stick. At bottom, the faces of Michael Kvicala and Ellie and Carol Bisantz reflect their approval of the finished product, ready for the table. (Photos by SSgt. Betty Farmer)

Point Candidates Start Medical Exam

Candidates for admission to the U.S. Military Academy, West Point, N. Y. will be undergoing medical and physical aptitude examinations at Fort Benning to determine their qualification for admission with the class entering the Academy in July, 1970.

Examinations are being held at 41 other Army, Navy and Air Force installations.

The examinations are limited to candidates who have been authorized by the admissions officer, West Point, Colonel John L. Stroever Jr., commanding officer of the 197th Infantry Brigade, said that the local examining board cannot authorize young men to take the examinations.

It is estimated that 1360 new cadets will be admitted this year. About 75 per cent of the total is alloted to senators and representatives in Congress. Smaller quotas, all of which are service connected, are provided by law for enlisted men of the Regular Army and of the Army Reserve Components.

Also eligible are sons of deceased or disabled members of the Army Forces, and sons of former service members with service connected disabilities of 100 per cent, and honor graduates of honor military or naval schools.

Presidential nominations are available for sons of members of the Armed Forces with eight years continuous active duty (other than active duty for training) and sons of Regular armed forces active or retired personnel receiving retired or retainer pay.

FRENCH GENERAL SEES XM203 SYSTEM

Chief of Staff Approves Action Combining Enlisted Promotions

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The Army Chief of Staff Gen. W. C. Westmoreland, has approved combining permanent and temporary promotion systems for enlisted personnel into a single system which makes no reference to permanent or temporary status.

Under the new system, advantages of the previous permanent and temporary systems have been retained, and administrative requirements have been reduced.

Promotion criteria to grades E-4 and above will remain in effect as outlined under the previous temporary system; advancement to grade E-2 and promotion to grade E-3 will follow the old permanent system.

One-grade promotion up to grade E-7 upon completion of 28 years of service and requirements for board action to reduce an E-5 or above for inefficiency are retained.

The new system removes administrative requirements incident to the previous permanent system such as posting of records, maintenance of a duel system, calculation of permanent promotion dates and issuance of warrants.

Under the dual system, the so-called temporary promotion had always been the meaningful one in terms of increased pay, change in status, increased responsibility and change of insignia.

The permanent system served no useful prupose that could not otherwise be compensated for by adoption of a single system.

Army Asks New Motto For Corps

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The U. S. Army Transportation Corps is looking for a motto from among its thousands of personnel and will give a $200 U. S. Savings Bond to the winner.

Deadline for entries is Feb. 28.

The need for a TC motto was revealed by Army Chief of Staff Gen. William C. Westmoreland in a speech to transportation school students at Ft. Eustis, Va. He said the corps needed a motto to exemplify its "outstanding spirit, accomplishments and objectives."

Submit entries to the chairman, Transportation Corps Motto Committee, Office of Doctrine Development, Literature and Plans, Army Transportation School Ft. Eustis, Va., 23604.

Ambush Problems Highlight Training for RVN Duty

By Sp4 Robert Merkin

There are some overseas assignments where all a soldier wants to know is how much personal gear he can have shipped over, what kind of housing he will be living in, what tourist sites there are to aim his Instamatic at and whether it is a good idea to bring a suit and tie.

And then there is combat duty in the Republic of Vietnam. A soldier wants to know a little more about that.

When a Fort Benning soldier gets his orders for "over the pond," he also gets an invitation to attend four days of RVN (Republic of Vietnam) training, courtesy of the Army Training Center and the 197th Infantry Brigade's Co. A (Ranger), 75th Infantry, an airborne unit attached to the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry of Kelley Hill. The ATC takes the Vietnam-bound personnel for two days and qualifies them in M-16 rifle marksmanship, then turns them over to the 75th Rangers.

The Ranger-taught phase of RVN training takes place in a recently cleared area behind the Kelley Hill Service Club, which might explain why some men have had their dentures rattled by a deafening roar while they were having a bumburger in the cafeteria. The classes, small or large, are an Army cross-section: officers and enlisted men, privates and master sergeants, Infantrymen and cooks, chaplains and Signal officers, clerks and artillerymen — anyone who is on his way to Vietnam.

Here they are introduced to the "niceties" of the war in Vietnam, the type of enemy and enemy action they will be facing, and how to react to it.

They learn it from SSgt. Johnnie Riley, a 173rd Airborne Brigade veteran, in classes and demonstrations on the ambush, how to use it, how to avoid it, and what to do if it cannot be avoided.

As he begins by pointing out that the ambush is the oldest form of military operation, a soldier suddenly pops out of a spider hole at his feet and blasts away (with blanks) at the class, then makes for the woods.

Through the morning class, demonstrations by the Rangers animate his lecture. An "aggressor" force pulls an ambush from tall grass concealment on a patrol coming up a path and wipes out the patrol. The aggressors come out of the grass to check their kill. One of the "dead" pops up and does away with an aggressor or two.

Lesson One: People have been know to play possum. Approach enemy casualties from the blind side.

The class goes on. More ambush rules. If you have to pull a hasty ambush, let the enemy go unless he spots you. A poorly planned ambush can bring more trouble on you than on your enemy.

Riley briefs the class on the types of ambush, from the line formation ambush (easy to outflank) to the V-formation, which is almost impossible to escape from. Fortunately, he says it is difficult to find suitable terrain for this one.

And then comes the clincher. What should you do when you are caught in an ambush? You have been marching along the path or convoying down the highway, and suddenly the lead starts to fly and it all seems aimed at you. What next?

Captain Dennis Foley, commander of the 75th Rangers, takes over the class. "There are three things you can do when you find yourself in an ambush," he says. "You can head away from the ambush. But that still leaves you in the killing zone. That doesn't help at all, it just gives the enemy more time to get you.

"Or you could run to the right or the left, run laterally," he continues, "and what does that do? That increases the enemy's chances of hitting you significantly. The third thing to do is the last thing you'd ordinarily think of doing, but it's the only thing that'll save you from being completely wiped out. You charge the ambush. If you make it into the middle of the ambushers, they can't hit you without turning around and hitting their own troops. And you might be lucky enough to make it completely through, get behind them and hit their rear security."

Someone asks if, in actual combat conditions, men follow that advice and charge the ambush. Maj. Raymond Rau, S-3 of the 1st Bn., 29th Inf. says, "Darned right they do. My last tour in Vietnam, our battalion was ambushed ten times in one week. We took heavy enough casualties as it was, but we would have been completely annihilated if we hadn't assaulted that ambush every time."

After the bleacher session, the class is broken down into two groups, one group to take up ambush positions in the nearby woods and the other half to simulate a jungle patrol.

The patrol is broken into two platoons, Vietnam-bound lieutenants in charge of each. Foley, who has served in Vietnam with the 101st Adn. Div., the 1st Air Cav., the 9th Inf. Div. and the Second Field Force (LRP), goes along to supervise, point out blunders and coordinate his training unit.

Every few minutes, the first platoon's point man hits a concealed trip wire. A booby trap simulator screeches away and Foley pronounces the luckless point man "dead." "Turn your helmet around," he says, "and let's have another point man up here."

The first platoon approaches a clearing, the new point man hits a trip wire, and as another point man comes up to take his place a dozen or more stand around to gape at the booby trap.

A sniper in a tree takes the opportunity to fire away, and Foley smiles as his students learn another lesson. Six or seven more helmets are turned around.

A bridge across a stream presents the next object lesson, and after a short discussion of pros and cons the platoon leaders decide to head upstream a ways and ford at a better place, one with less chance of an ambush. Security is set out, but as the platoons cross the stream, a thunderous barrage of small arms fire rips through the forest. It is a full-scale ambush.

In the critique that follows, Foley points out the mistakes that both sides made.

The ambushers sprung the trap prematurely, giving the patrol time to react and defend itself. But the patrol was too spread out and had difficulty coordinating itself and coming to the front to get its fire power out.

The ambush group heads off to become the patrollers, and Foley sets the first group up in an ambush around a small Vietnam-style village.

Five men are put in foxholes around the village and a sniper is sent up a tree to wait for the new patrol.

"Here's what's going to happen," Foley grins. "The patrol will head up the hill and take fire from the foxholes. They'll take the ambushers in the foxholes, then run into the tree sniper and take him out. Now, the village is near the parking lot and the mess area. Everyone in the patrol will know that the class is just about over, it's time for chow. They'll stand around and poke through the village, looking at the booby traps, thinking about dinner, trading stories, laughing. I'll lower this red flag."

"That's when we spring the big ambush and wipe 'em out. It happens every time when you drop your security," he said.

After chow, the ambush lessons continue. The men are put on trucks and ambushed in convoy. They pile out and charge into the woods, to Foley's surprise and delight.

"The only thing wrong," he explains afterward, "is that a few of you hopped off the trucks and dropped to the roadbed to return fire into the woods. This is why you should not have done that."

He raises his hand and a machine gun clatters from behind a tree down the road, sweeping up and down.

Back on the trucks, the convoy stops short when the road cuts through a ravine. The platoon leaders decide against driving through the ravine. Instead, the company is split up into a small security force for one bank and a larger group to go across on the other bank.

It was a good decision. When the company is reunited on the other side of the ravine, a Ranger sergeant touches two wires together, and high explosives rip the ravine to shreds.

The rest of the afternoon sees the instructors put the men through a river crossing ambush, teach them how to get up a cliff and train them in setting up their own ambushes.

Foley finally dismisses the group and commends it for "playing the game" with enthusiasm.

"A lot of you," he explains, "aren't going to line companies over there. You might be clerks or cooks, you might be in artillery batteries or armor. But sooner or later you stand a good chance of moving along a road, moving out. And when you do that, you stand a good chance of being ambushed. And when that happens . . ."

Spokesman States Veterans Aid Rises By 8.2 Per Cent In Georgia

Monetary benefits and services to Georgia veterans and dependents through the Veterans Administration amounted to over $303 million for fiscal year 1968-69, State Veterans Director Pete Wheeler said.

This compares with $280 million in the preceding year and represents an 8.2 per cent increase, Wheeler said.

While all benefits were up for the year, compensation, educational benefits and medical services reflected the largest increases.

Compensation to living veterans and dependents of deceased veterans amounted to $38.7 million, up over $5 million from the prevous year. Compensation is paid to the veteran or dependent survivors as a result of the veteran's disability or death suffered in the Armed Forces.

Pension benefits to veterans and dependents were up by over $3 million to nearly $50 million for the year. Pension benefits are paid to veterans permanently and totally disabled not as a result of military service and to elibigle survivors of veterans who died of non-service connected causes.

Insurace benefits from all veterans' insurance programs amounted to almost $14 million, burial allowances were over $1 million; educational benefits were up by $4 million to $12 million 300 thousand; and grants for specially adopted automobiles for certain severely disabled veterans was $143 thousand.

There were 7,405 guaranteed and direct VA home loans valued at $135 million, up $5½ million from a year ago.

Operating funds for VA medical facilities in the state increased by $3½ million to reach $32 million for the year.

Wheeler noted that increases in veterans' benefits indicate a growing number of veterans in the state needing service. Presently the state's veteran population is over 500,000 and growing by 25,000 or more each year.

Wheeler also said that the advancing ages of World War I and World War II veterans bring benefits more sharply into focus, particularly compensation for service-incurred disabilities and the need for more hospital and medical services.

'Acquire Intangibles'

Colonel Started Career With ROTC Commission

By Sp4 Ron Argo

The Reserve Officer Training Corps., celebrating its 150th anniversary this year on college campuses, is the source of the commission held by Col. Robert P. Hatcher Jr., Training Center deputy commander who entered the Army 29 years ago.

Colonel Hatcher was assigned here last July after a 3-year tour with the U. S. Army Europe, Office of the Inspector General, in Germany. He was graduated in 1940 from the University of Georgia, Athens, with a bachelor of science degree in commerce.

"Back then there was one of two choices in the ROTC program at the University of Georgia," Colonel Hatcher said. "Either Infantry or Cavalry. The Cavalry was well equipped. They kept 200 horses on campus. And even though I was in the Infantry we were required to learn how to ride a horse."

Colonel Hatcher, who was wearing the uniform when he was 14 years old, said that in advanced ROTC "we were paid around 25 cents a day. And it helped."

After attending five years at a high school where ROTC was mandatory, he went to North Georgia College in Dahlonega, now one of the essential military colleges in the U.S.

Colonel Hatcher was one of the few graduates to return to North Georgia in a military capacity. He served there from 1958-61 as Professor of Military Science.

Regarding the lengthy training a potential officer must undergo before being commissioned, Colonel Hatcher said ROTC produces a well qualified leader.

"Anything done extensively will create better results," he said. "I think it is better to have military training in a completely academic atmosphere. And the aspects of training that are not accessible on campus like bivouac and firing a weapon are learned during summer camp."

Colonel Hatcher feels that any man who participates in the ROTC program during college is going to "acquire intangibles on which no price tag can be placed. He is going to get more for the money he is spending for a formal education because he will graduate a much better individual."

He believes that ROTC teaches a man "discipline, accelerates maturity in him and creates an acceptance of responsibility."

Guard Unit Returns Home

An Army National Guard unit, the 35th Surgical Hospital (Mobile) Dec. 1 reverted to the control of the Adjutant General, State of Florida, at their home station, Miami.

The unit came on active duty May 13, 1968, and was assigned to Fort Benning.

The 87-man hospital was attached to the 34th Medical Bn. under the Medical Department Activity (MEDDAC) as a supplemental TOE medical unit.

The men participated in proficiency training at Martin Army Hospital, and in misssion support training while on active duty.

Survivors of Servicemen Get Higher Allowances

New benefits and increased monthly allowances were authorized effective Dec. 1 for eligible survivors of active duty and retired servicemen.

For survivors to be eligible for the increased benefits, the death of active duty servicemen must be determined to have occurred in the line of duty, and for retirees, due to service connected disability.

These new provisions are included in Public Law 91-96 which was signed into law by President Nixon Oct. 27, 1969.

In effect, the law revised the formula previously used to compute payable benefits and liberalized other provisions pertaining to Dependency and Indemnity Compensation (DIC).

The new law does not change the benefits currently authorized to be paid dependent parents or to children when there is no eligible widow.

In addition to prescribing increased rates, the law also provides the following:

1. If the surviving widow has one or more children below the age of 18, the DIC shall be increased by $20 monthly for each child.

2. The surviving widow shall, in addition to monthly DIC payments, receive an additional $50 per month if she is:

a. A patient in a nursing home, or

b. Helpless or blind or so nearly so that she requires the regular aid or attendance of another person.

Under the current method of computation, benefits were based on a variable scale for each pay grade. For example, the surviving widow of a Sergeant First Class could receive a maximum of $201 and a minimum of $162, depending on the serviceman's length of service.

Under the new provisions, this widow will receive a flat rate to be paid all eligible survivors W Grade E-7 $206.

VA Benefit Application Requires Adhering To Established Deadline

WASHINGTON (ANF) — In applying for Veterans Administration benefits, certain deadlines must be met.

Retirees have from their date of retirement:

120 days — To retain insurance protection by converting Servicemen's Group Life Insurance to an individual policy without examination. Members must apply to any private participating insurance company.

1 year — From date of VA disability rating notice to obtain Government Life Insurance because of service connected disability.

1 year — To file for service-connected disability.

8 years — To complete education. (Course must be started in time to finish in 8 years.)

9 years — To complete vocational rehabilitation (9 years from discharge except certain cases of serious disability or delay in establishing eligibility.)

10 years — To obtain loan. (Plus one year for each 90 days active duty. Benefits for all World War II veterans expire July 25, 1970; Korean War, Jan. 31, 1976.)

No limit — To file compensation claim for injury or disease. Filing must be made within one year to receive compensation retroactive to retirement. Otherwise, it is in effect only from date of filing.

No limit — To file pension claim, non-service connected.

No limit — To obtain VA hospital care.

No limit — To obtain assistance in finding employment or job-training program.

No limit — To convert term insurance.

Sp4 Named Top Soldier In Rangers

The Ranger department of the Infantry School has recently adopted the policy of presenting a "Soldier of the Month" award to the enlisted man who exhibits the highest degree of proficiency in various categories of military knowledge.

The recipient of November's Soldier of the Month award is Sp4 Hubert Kainer.

Kainer is assigned to 3rd Ranger Company and works in the department's headquarters section as a clerk-typist.

Before entering the Army, Kainer earned a B.A. degree from the University of Houston (Texas) while attending school at night and working as a loan supervisor during the day.

Kainer is married, has one child and, upon completion of his service obligation, intends to return to his former job.

Specialist 4 Robert Sorenson was the Ranger October Soldier of the Month. Both Sorensen and Kainer placed second in competition for the honor of Soldier of the Month for the Student Brigade.

Medals Given H. P. Kendrick Posthumously

The Bronze Star and Army Commendation Medals for valor and the Purple Heart were awarded to CWO Homer P. Kendrick posthumously in a ceremony here.

Presented by Col. Talton W. Long, deputy post commander, the medals were accepted by Mrs. Maggie Kendrick, 3029 Hendrix St., Columbus, his widow.

Mister Kendrick was killed in action in the Republic of Vietnam.

He distinguished himself on Feb. 23, 1969, while serving as a brigade maintenance officer in the 82nd Artillery. On that date, his battery received heavy volumes of enemy fire, after which the perimeter was over-run by an enemy force.

PFC Leads Class With Two Honors

Winner of two top honors, PFC Harry M. Bingaman led graduates from field radio mechanics class No. 5-70.

Bingaman was honored as the distinguished honor graduate and as one of two academic honor graduates.

In ceremonies held at Infantry Hall, a total of 56 graduates heard Sgt. Maj. Frederick E. Eastmoore, of the Infantry Center's directorate of communications and electronics, speak.

SCHOLARSHIP FOR SOLDIER'S SON

Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott Shown With Award Recipient

Society Awards $1,500 Scholarship

A framed scholarship certificate worth $1,500 was presented by Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott to 5-year-old Keven John Smiley, whose father was killed while serving with the 1st Infantry Division.

General Talbott flew from Fort Benning, where he is commanding general, to Fort Stewart, then traveled by car to the home of the boy's grandparents near Ludowici, Ga., to make the presentation.

Keven's father, Sgt. James E. Smiley, was killed in the Republic of Vietnam on March 16, 1966, while serving with the 1st Infantry Division, commanded by General Talbott before he came to Fort Benning.

The Society of the 1st Division has already arranged a $1,500 scholarship for another of Sergeant Smiley's sons, James Tarvey Smiley. He is now in St. Joseph School in Atlanta and will receive special corrective speech therapy at an Atlanta school as soon as a vacancy is available — all because soldiers from the 1st Infantry Division "look after their own."

"This makes me prouder of my 1st Infantry Division patch than even my tours in combat with it," said Capt. William P. Petersen, who accompanied General Talbott to Keven's home.

Petersen, an instructor in the Infantry School said, "We (the division) take care of our own. Every son of a man killed with the Big Red One is eligible for this scholarship and that's the only qualification."

General Talbott said scholarships valued at a total of about $500,000 have been presented by the division.

The Fort Benning chapter of the division's society has announced that it is participating in a drive to raise funds to include the daughters in its scholarship program.

Colonel William A. Patch, chief, tactics group, Brigade and Battalion Operations Department, is president of the Fort Benning chapter. The chapter has scheduled an open party starting at 5:30 p.m. today at NCO Annex No. 1 near Lawson Army Airfield.

Society Chapter To Meet Tonight At NCO Annex 1

A film on the World War I - World War II history of the First Infantry Division will highlight a meeting of the Fort Benning chapter of the division's society Friday night.

The meeting, which will begin at 5:30 p.m., in the NCO Club Annex No. 1, is open to all veterans of the Big Red One in the Columbus - Phenix City area.

Capt. (ret.) Mike Kelty, curator of the Cantigny War Museum, will show the film.

A progress report of the Big Red One Society's scholarship fund will also be discussed at the meeting.

The society has already awarded over 500 scholarships to sons of fallen members of the division. Plans are underway to expand the fund to include daughters.

The scholarship trust fund is administered by the First Division Scholarship Fund Foundation which was established in 1967.

Persons or organizations wishing to make a donation to the fund should make the donation payable to "Sons of the First Division Scholarship Fund."

Water, Water But Troops May Soon Float

Fording

When the Monsoon rains come to Vietnam, swelling the rivers and canals, soldiers have to use any method available to cross them but someday soon they may take to water as easily as ducks.

Currently under study by Combat Development Command (CDC), Fort Belvoir, Va., is a water flotation unit that will support a 200-pound soldier wearing 50 pounds of equipment.

Responding to requests from soldiers in the field for such an innovation CDC envisions a means to provide safety for weak swimmers on water crossing operations.

The flotation piece will prevent a soldier's head from entering the water and permit him to fire his weapon from the water. Plans call for the device to be light-weight, compact and reuseable.

One model under consideration is a C-shaped tube that fits around a soldier's waist where it can be attached to his suspenders or pistol belt.

TANDEM-ROTOR DESIGN UNDER STUDY

Shown is an artist's concept of a tandem-rotor helicopter with a quadricycle gear, one of several designs under study for use by the Army as a heavy lift helicopter. A major feature of this configuration is a loadmaster's station located in a forward landing gear fairing. From this station, the loadmaster could control the helicopter's approach and hover during cargo hook-up and delivery. The loadmaster's station can be seen in the front gear fairing at left in this drawing, prepared by the Boeing Company's Vertol Division.

ROTC Cadets Learn Flying In Spare Time

FORT MONROE, Va. — Nearly 900 college students enrolled in the Army ROTC program are learning to fly in their spare time.

The Army ROTC Flight Instruction Program, an extra-curricular program at 182 of the 283 colleges and universities offering Army ROTC, is available to cadets (normally college seniors) in the ROTC Advanced Course.

The Army pays for flight training for selected cadets who have an aptitude for flying and meet required qualifications.

The flight instruction is given by a civilian flying school near the college, which has the approval of the Federal Aviation Administration.

Students receive a basic instruction in the principles of flying in small, fixed-wing aircraft. They learn through practical application the theory of flight, basic instrument and cross country flying, meteorology and federal aviation regulations, all of which prepare the students for a private pilot's license.

Each student receives 35 hours of ground instruction and 36½ hours of in-flight instruction.

Cadets successfully completing the program are required to enroll in Army aviation training when they are commissioned and ordered to active duty.

Safety Director Warns of Winter Hazard

"With colder weather and winter almost here, there are many hazards to be alert for. Naturally wet and iced over streets, highways and bridges are near the top of the list. There is, however, another cold weather or winter hazard that is quite dangerous, and which each year claims many lives. It is carbon monoxide poisoning," said Norman Evans, Fort Benning safety director.

Evans stated inhalation of this gas causes more deaths than all other toxic gases combined. He said the death toll from carbon monoxide poisoning is increasing steadily every year.

"The threat of such poisoning is often taken far too lightly here in the South, due to the milder winters," Evans said.

"A leak in a car's muffler or manifold, the window rolled up and the motor running sets a death trap. Many times this happens as a motorist waits for someone, and the car is sitting still. The fumes come into the car with the person or persons totally unaware of the presence of the deadly gas," he said.

"Often occupants of a car are overcome by the gas before they realize that the fumes are present," Evans said.

The safety director pointed out that even some new cars have leaks in the exhaust system, which creates a dangerous condition.

Evans explained that pure carbon monoxide is odorless, colorless, tasteless, and nonirritating.

"It is a good idea to have frequent checks made on the car's exhaust system to be certain that there are no leaks. Another safety precaution is to avoid following too closely in bumper to bumper traffic. It is also wise to leave the car windows open a bit for ventilation," Evans said.

"Unvented heaters in mobile homes are especially a cause for great concern. With tight windows and no ventilation, and with vents not open a deadly situation is created. The lethal gas often causes death before the persons who are exposed to it are aware of its presence," Evans stated.

Awards Made To 6 at MAH

Four letters of appreciation and two official commendations were presented to Martin Army Hospital employes by Col. Martin A. Plotenhauer, commanding officer, in an awards ceremony at the hospital.

Presented for newly-adopted suggestions, the letters went to Lt. Col. Arnold E. Tyndall, SSgt. Joe N. Flynt, SFC James M. Richrdson, and Kenneth R. Harris.

Elizabeth J. Woods received $150 and an official commendation for sustained outstanding and superior duty performance.

Milton D. Flatt was officially commended for outstanding performance.

Movie Synopsis

ME, NATALIE . . . This film explores an 18-year-old girl's quest for identity. Patty Duke is Natalie growing up in a world where she can find few links, where what is reflected in her mirror overshadows the beauty within.

IF . . . Three non-conformists flaunt authority in a posh English boarding school. The three are then brutally flogged.

HANG 'EM HIGH . . . Clint Eastwood stars as an escaped lynch victim seeking to track down nine men who made two mistakes.

DON'T RAISE THE BRIDGE, LOWER THE RIVER . . . Jerry Lewis tickles your ribs.

A LONG RIDE FROM HELL . . . On the way to be sold at market, a herd of horses from the stud farm is seized by horse-thiefs. Following a train wreck and gold robbery, two brothers are arrested by the sheriff.

"BATTLE OF BRITAIN"

Local Choral Guild Will Present Concert

The Columbus Choral Guild will presents its Christmas Concert Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the Springer Opera House under the direction of Horace E. "Mac" McFarland.

Assisting in the concert will be the Infantry Chorus of Fort Benning under the direction of Gary Bogle.

The Choral Guild will sing the "Magnificat" and "Cantata 142 For Us a Child Is Born" by J. S. Bach (1685-1750).

Assisting will be the following members of the Columbus Symphony: Harry Kruger, director; Arthur Cotruvo and Mrs. Paul Weise, violins; Mrs. Winston Burow, viola; Ron McCreery, cello; Winston Budrow, bass; Natalie Kruger and Monique Harrison, flutes; Arthur Collanni and Dan Rogers, oboes; Paul Weise, trumpet; and Jim Fletche, timpani. John C. Miller will be at the harpsicord.

Soloists will include: Marline Brugger, soprano; Susan Mullin, soprano; Barbara Freeman, mezzo soprano; Doyle Register, tenor; and Terry Killingsworth, bass.

The "Magnificat" was composed in 1723 probably for Christmas. This was soon after Bach came to Leipzig. The text is from Luke 1: 46-5. There are five choruses interspersed with solos, duets and a trio. The music of the final section is the same as for the first movement which unifies the whole work.

The "Cantata" contains three choruses and a bass, alto and tenor solo.

The concert is free and the public is invited.

PARADE WILL BE TELEVIZED
Scene From Last Year's Parade

22nd Parade Will Climax Youth Festival in Florida

CORAL GABLES, Fla. — Traditional and little-known "Holidays of the Year" will literally dance before the eyes of some 100,000 spectators and a national television audience when the Junior Orange Bowl Parade rolls through Coral Gables Dec. 29.

Climaxing the nation's largest youth festival, the 22nd annual parade will reflect a massive new dose of showmanship injected especially for the first national telecast. Troupes of teenage dancers will accompany each newly expanded theme float carrying out the parade theme in sound, color and movement.

The parade, which will have a delayed telecast New Year's morning over the NBC network, is only one of many sports and entertainment events planned mainly for youngsters. Even the queen who reigns over the festival cannot be over 14-years-old.

Football, fireworks and festivities open the festival at the Junior Orange Bowl Football Classic Dec. 13 at Central Stadium, just outside Coral Gables. Rival league champions in 75, 95 and 115-pound divisions will battle it out for the titles. A big fireworks show, an appearance by the famed TV bear "Gentle Ben," marching bands and the Junior Orange Bowl Queen and her court will highlight a between-game show.

A brand-new event for the Junior Orange Bowl—bowling — takes the spotlight Dec. 20 and 21 at Calseum Lanes in Coral Gables. A total of 288 of Florida's top junior bowlers will vie for honors in the inaugural, which will choose boys' and girls' champions in three age groups: 9 and 10, 11 and 12 and 13 and 14. Orange-shirted winners will ride the bowling float in the parade.

The focus is on tennis the following day, when an expected 300 junior stars take to the courts at Salvadore Park and three other locations. Tennis competition will continue through Dec. 26 with Christmas off. Last year, 250 youngsters from 19 states and nine foreign countries took part in the singles and doubles competition for boys and girls 12 and 14 and under.

Eagle Scout Badge Awarded

Roger Montgomery, son of Lt. Col. (ret) and Mrs. Raymond Montgomery, was awarded the Eagle Scout Badge in a Court of Honor ceremony here Nov. 24.

Montgomery, a member of Fort Benning's Troop 27 of the Chattahoochee Boy Scout Council, was presented the high ranking award by Col. Earl C. Acuff, district chairman of the Boy Scouts, and his mother pinned the badge on his uniform.

Lt. Col. John Walker, scout district commissioner, later spoke to the boys pointing out that approximately one per cent of all scouts attain the rank of Eagle. He also mentioned that Roger's "climb" was not over, stating that his climb in responsibility has just started and that he would be called on more and more to display his leadership ability.

The other scouts who received promotion and awards were:

Investiture of Tenderfoot Scouts: David Jesmer, Scott Foster, Jim McConnell, David Robinson, John Reitz, Phillip Blakenship, Donald Walburg.

Promotion to 2d Class Scout: Gary Jordan, Howard Paris.

Promotion to Star Scout: Bruce Boettcher, Charles Jordan, Peter Orsez.

Chapel To Show Religious Film

"The Tony Fontane Story," a true story of one of the world's greatest singers will be shown at Harmony Church Chapel No. 3 Bldg. 4486, Sunday at 6 p.m.

Filmed in Hollywood by Youth Films, the teenage division of Gospel Films, Inc., the movie presents Tony Fontane's personal testimony about the importance of Jesus Christ to a person's life.

Keeping Up With the Joneses

By Marian Jones

Did you know that Atlanta, only 92 miles away via Highway 85, is one of the nation's top ten cities for sightseeing?

At least that's what the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce says and we're inclined to agree.

To begin with, there's the Regency Hyatt House which boasts the world's largest hotel lobby. The lobby is an architect's dream. Take a ride up to the revolving Polaris Lounge on the glass elevator.

For key holders, Atlanta is a city with a Playboy Club. It's in the Downtowner Motor Inn and has the same physical attractions as all Hugh Hefner's other clubs.

Downtown Atlanta is a shopper's paradise with some of the South's largest department stores. One of these stores now has the world's largest Christmas tree on top of its roof. Try to figure out how they got it up there.

Underground Atlanta is another not-to-miss spot. It is preserved below the viaducts of modern Atlanta and is alive with restored architecture which houses shops, nightclubs, restaurants and lounges.

History buffs will be fascinated by a visit to the Cyclorama, a panorama of the Battle of Atlanta complete with music and narration. The Cyclorama is located in Grant Park, the home of one of the most modern zoos in the nation.

Recent history is stressed in the sites that were part of the life of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Ebenezer Baptist Church, Morehouse College, his home and the headquarters of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference can be seen in Atlanta.

A must is a visit to Six Flags Over Georgia which we believe rivals Disneyland. Six Flags has closed for the winter but will reopen in the spring.

If you want to see hippies, Atlanta has some although we believe they're weekend hippies from Georgia Tech and Agnes Scott. Anyway, in case you're interested, the place to see them is on 10th Street and in Piedmont Park.

OLD MASTERS

Meanwhile if you have to spend the weekend in the Fountain City (that's Columbus in case you didn't know), there's a preview opening Sunday of Old Master Paintings at the Columbus Museum of Arts and Crafts.

The paintings are on loan from New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art for a period of one year.

HUNTING AT CALLAWAY

Now that quail hunting season is well underway, we want to tell the hunters about the opportunity to hunt on Callaway Gardens's 1,000 acre preserve. The gardens furnish guides and excellent quality working dogs to each party.

Hunters leave from Callaway Sportsman's Lodge adjacent to the hunting preserve. Rental guns and shells are available at the lodge. The season ends March 31. For further information call 324-2234.

CHRISTMAS BAZAAR

Tomorrow will offer another opportunity to complete your Christmas shopping. The Noncommissioned Officers Wives Club will hold its bazaar at The Top Five Club from noon until 4 p.m.

Especially recommended is the "Country Store" where cookies, cakes, candies and other home-baked goodies will be on sale. An added attraction will be Santa Claus who will be there to talk with the children.

ROCK FABLES

The rock music version of "Aesop's Fables" continues this weekend at Springer Opera House. Tonight's performance begins at 8 p.m. with matinees tomorrow and Sunday at 2:30 p.m. Admission is $1.

Allied Students Glimpse American Cultural Life

By Sp4 Frank Valk

The Allies spent the afternoon viewing the amateur art show and shopping in the stores in the mall.

"I thought the paintings were very good, considering that the artists were amateurs," Maj. YANG Chae Il of Korea commented.

Yang was a distinguished Allied graduate of Infantry Officer Advanced Course, Class 4-69 and is taking Airborne training before returning to his country.

In the new Fine Arts Building on the campus of Columbus College, the students heard the famed international pianist, Eugene List, and also the premiere performance of the Columbus Symphony Orchestra.

Commenting on the concert, Capt. Pham V. CHIEU of the Republic of Vietnam said, "I speak not only for myself, but for all the Vietnamese officers in saying that the concert was outstanding. First, the music was very nice and very sweet. It was quite different from the music we heard at the homecoming dance after the football game last month. This is the first time in many years that I had heard this type of music.

"Secondly, I enjoyed watching the women and young people playing in the orchestra, since in my country the women and children do not play music.

"Thirdly, we appreciated the concert pianist greatly. It wasn't like he was playing the piano alone, but as if there were many people playing it at once. I like the music he played, and the way he played it was like the wind."

The next concert the Allies are scheduled to attend will be a family Pops Concert, by the Columbus Symphony in the Fine Arts Building Dec. 14.

Talent Contest Set for Dec. 13

The monthly Fort Benning entertainment contest, which provides the opportunity for talented individuals to win extra cash, next will be held at 7:30 p.m. Dec. 13.

Three cash prizes of $25 each will be awarded to the three best entries in the contest at North Harmony Church Service Club.

Winners of the last entertainment contest, held at Kelley Hill Service Club, were: First place, PFC Walter Buchanan III, Co. A (Ranger), 75th Inf.; second place, 2nd Lt. DeWitt Brown III, 24th Co., 2nd Stu. Bn.; third place Sp4. Bernie Salter, Hq. Det., 1st Bn., OTC.

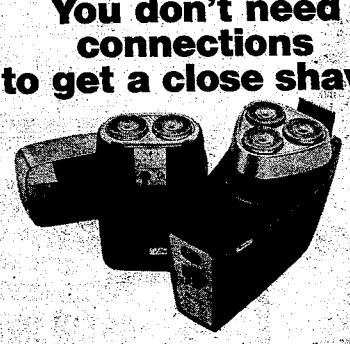
You don't need connections to get a close shave.



Most people think you need connections to go places.

But here are two shavers that can go anywhere. And shave there. Without connections.

The brand-new Norelco Cordless 20B never needs a connection. It'll give you up to 30 days of inspection-proof shaves anywhere. Because it delivers close Norelco shaves on only 4 penlight batteries.

It's an entire shaving kit all by itself. Even has a mirror in its cap. And fits your pocket like a pack of cigarettes.

Our Rechargeable Tripleheader 45CT only needs a connection about once every three weeks.

It gives you almost twice as many shaves per charge as any other rechargeable. And it shaves as close or closer than a blade in 2 out of 3 shaves.

You see, it's got floating heads that fit the curves of a man's face. And inside those floating heads are 18 self-sharpening blades that shave close and smooth every day. The Norelco unique rotary action keeps the blades sharp while it strokes off whiskers. Every time you shave.

And besides that, the Tripleheader has a pop-up sideburn trimmer.

The Norelco Rechargeable.

Or the new Norelco Cordless.

Now who says you can't get places without connections?

Coffee Planned To Honor Band On Anniversary

The Columbus Chapter of the Piano Technicians Guild will host a coffee Dec. 13 commemorating the 100th anniversary of the 25ist Army Band.

Representatives from Fort Benning and local groups have been invited to the coffee which will begin at 11 a.m. in the Holiday Inn on the Phenix City Bypass.

Adult Scout Leaders Train Boys 'To Become Men'

"We are training boys today to be men tomorrow," 750 adult Boy Scout leaders were told at a pot-luck supper at the Columbus Municipal Auditorium.

An annual event, the supper honored the adults "who guide the men of tomorrow" — Cub and Boy Scout leaders.

Col. Earl Acuff introduced General Talbott as a man "active in scouts for a number of years" adding that he has applied the "same dedication to the Army."

General Talbott, an Eagle Scout, spoke to the audience on adult scouting.

"Those of us who have been scouts very often, if not always, have special concern for our scout leaders," he said. "Without their drive and push the kids would not have a chance to make the grades in scouting."

"We are training boys to be men of tomorrow. There has not been a time in the history of our country when we needed to emphasize this more."

"Getting involved today, we do not fully appreciate the significance of tomorrow. Our challenge is very real. We must energize young people for tomorrow," General Talbott pointed out. "We, who are adults with training, have substantially a greater responsibility than we have ever had before."

At the supper, hosted by Chattahoochee Council Fort Benning District, Boy Scouts of America, a number of unit leaders and volunteers were recognized for their services during the past year.

Among these was Mayor J. R. Allen who was presented an appreciation award by Russell F. McLean for his work as chairman of the "School Night for Scouts," which saw around 1,500 boys given the opportunity to become scouts.

Lt. Col. John Walker, district commissioner, presented units 37, 54, 176 and 227 with round-up banners and certificates for having recruited the most new members during the past year. Units 227, 237, 217, 238 and 276 also received awards for their drive.

National Camping Awards were received by units 37, 134, 135, 217 and 237 while Summer Time Pack Awards were presented to units 27, 37, 39, 57, 54, 123, 227 and 238 for "keeping summer activities going and kids interested in scouts."

Training Awards for participation in the den mother training program were presented to Mrs. Barbara Cook and Mrs. Jean Markham.

A special presentation was made to Walter Cook for his service to scouting during the past year and John Walker received the District Chairman Statuette.

High Schools Enter New Drama Festival

Five Columbus high schools have entered the first annual drama festival set for Dec. 12 in Fine Arts Hall at Columbus College.

Dennis Ciesil, assistant professor of theater and festival director, said the schools and their entries are:

Pacelli, "The Love Philtre of Ikey Shownstein;" Hardaway, the second act of "Inherit the Wind;" Baker, scene from "Blithe Spirit;" Jordan, "Occurrence at Owl Creek Bridge" and Kendrick, excerpts from "Thurber Carnival."

The day-long schedule of drama presentations will begin with Jordan at 9 a.m., followed by Kendrick at 10, Pacelli at 11, Hardaway at 2 p.m. and Baker at 3.

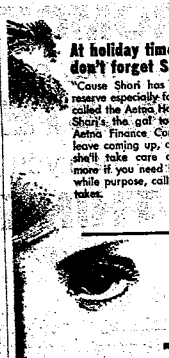
Each school will be limited to one hour which will include setting up and striking the set.

Three judges will determine the two best performances and these will again be presented at 8 p.m. that same evening in a bid for the top award. Other awards will be given for the best actor and actress and the best character actor or actress.

The public is invited to the evening performances with an admission cost of 50 cents to help cover cost of the festival. The morning and afternoon presentations will be open to all free of charge.

The three judges will be William Crowell, assistant professor of speech at Columbus College, Mrs. Douglas B. Tucker, former German stage and screen actress, and Miss Lynda Skeloe, resident director of "Pixie Players" children's theater in Mobile, Ala.

Ciesil said he plans to make the drama festival an annual event to include all high schools in the district as well as those in Russell County and Phenix City.



At holiday time don't forget Shari.

'Cause Shari has set aside a large cash reserve especially for the holiday season. It's called the Aetna Holiday Fund.

Shari's the gal to call for extra cash at Aetna Finance Company. If you've got a leave coming up, or you want to buy gifts, she'll take care of you—$100, $300 or more if you need it. Money, or any worthwhile purpose, call Shari—she's got what it takes.

MIA'S SISTER

Tisa Farrow, 17-year-old sister of actress Mia Farrow, will make her motion picture debut in Cinema Center Films' "Homer" as a sensitive girl finding herself alienated from the world around her. Tisa, who was a fashion model before turning her attention to acting, bears a striking resemblance to her famous sister.

Chess Players Tie for Crown

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The tenth annual Armed Forces Chess Championship Tournament ended with Army and Air Force teams tied for first place, with 43½ points each.

The sea services (Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard) trailed with 21 points.

PFC Steven D. Hebensee from Fort Bliss, Texas, led the field in individual scores, winning 10 of the possible 12 points, to become the individual champion for 1969.

291st Army Band Provides 'Afternoon of Relaxation'

By Spt Paul Miller

It was an "afternoon of relaxation" at the Main Post Theatre here Nov. 23 as the 291st Army Band presented a concert as a special Thanksgiving holiday treat.

"Take your shoes off and relax," said WO Brian D. Arnold, director of the band, to his listening audience. "Forget the past; don't worry about the future. Today we hope to provide you with an afternoon of relaxation."

The audience, composed of approximately 800 officer candidates, their wives and tactical officers, swayed to the band's special arrangement of "Fiddler on the Roof," which included "Matchmaker, Matchmaker" as well as other tunes from the Broadway hit.

Many were seated on the edge of their seats to follow the tender notes in a medley from "Man From La Mancha."

Worthy of mention is the outstanding skill of 1st Sgt. Clinton Edwards on the saxophone as he played "Soliloquy for a Trumpet." The saxophone seemed to add a certain flare to a song that was written for a trumpet only.

Following intermission, the band presented the stirring "Battle Hymn of the Republic" which still continues to arouse emotion in both young and old alike.

The concert concluded with Sousa's famous "Stars and Stripes Forever" followed by the familiar OCS Alma Mater (Cornell Alma Mater).

The afternoon concert was sponsored by the 5th Bn. of The Candidate Bde., commanded by Lt. Col. Charles J. Mendoza.

BAR IT

Sandy Ritter says, "Horizontal bars trim your torso, but when it is cold do not grab the bar or you will burn your fingers."

ARC Warns Of Dangers

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Watch Christmas toys for built-in booby traps, warns the American Red Cross. Even the most innocent-appearing toys might turn Christmas cheer and happiness into a child-injuring tragedy.

Robert Oswald, director of Red Cross Safety Programs, said some toys on the market can slash, puncture, burn, choke, maim and even kill.

He recommends a toy with features painted in non-toxic paint or with decorations crimped on my machine.

"These are fastened so tightly they are nearly impossible to tear off. Also avoid rattles which may crack into jagged pieces and cut a child," Oswald warns.

The best rule is "don't give a toy smaller than your child's fist" and select toys with rugged construction.

USO Pal Day Program Planned in St. Augustine

The St. Augustine and St. Johns County, Fla., Untied Service Organization (USO) Council will play host tomorrow to all military personnel, members of their immediate families and girl friends of servicemen beginning at 8 a.m.

This will be the twelfth annual USA Pal Day program in St. Augustine.

Plans include admission to Marineland and to all the other tourist attractions there, free sightseeing trips on trailer trains and a free ham dinner at the Lyceum from 3:30 to 6:30 p.m.

The only requirement is that service personnel must be in uniform for identification purposes.

Dependents of servicemen overseas or on other duty may take advantage of the hospitality by showing their family identification cards.

College football will see its most important game of the season being played this Saturday at Razorback Stadium in Arkansas. The numbers one and two teams in the nation meet to decide the national championship. With Ohio State now out of contention, Texas and Arkansas battle for the top spot and both teams have excellent reasons to believe themselves the best.

Arkansas has an offense that has been adequate but improving all season long. Most of the team are juniors and only the adept leadership of quarterback Bill Montgomery keeps them from bogging down. But time and again he gets them out of holes and he can be counted on to come up with the big third down play. He is a strong passer and was one of the most sought after players in his senior year in high school. Alabama put the pressure on him and Bear Bryant did his best but just could not convince the quarterback to play for his school.

In 1964, the University of Arkansas took a piece of one national title and their coach, Frank Broyles, is hoping that this team is even better. But he is keeping a closed lid on that subject until after the game this weekend. It was postponed until December 6 for the benefit of national television and this may just be in the Razorbacks favor. They have been building up for this one game and seemingly have not yet reached their peak.

Two fierce ballcarriers, Bill Burnett and Bruce Maxwell, were exhibited on TV last week and they may give Texas fits. Burnett ran over, under, around and through opposing defenders and if he was looking ahead to the Texas game, he certainly did not show it.

The Texas offense is one of the most potent in several years. They have been running up large scores all season in a bid to overcome Ohio State for the number one spot.

The Razorback defense is one of the best in the nation while Texas has the best offense. Which is better, a

Attention Hunters

Recently two Fort Benning hunters sustained gunshot wounds, one fatal, while climbing up to or down from a deer stand in a tree. Experienced hunters always clear their guns of ammunition prior to crossing ditches, fences or other obstructions, scaling embankments, getting into a vehicle or climbing to or from an elevated deer stand. Some carry a cord to raise and lower the unloaded gun to and from an elevated stand.

Hunters should also use the buddy system when hunting so that help can be called if one becomes disabled.

©1969 THE BAYONET AND J-MAR PRODUCTIONS

It went down to the final game last week, but when Oakland whipped the Jets, the Bayonet staff edged Fort Benning's general officers by one game (31-8 to 30-8). BG Oscar E. Davis, Marion Jones and the redoubtable PFC Predicto led the way with 11-2 marks. With only the Texas-Arkansas game remaining on the collegiate slate, PFC Predicto leaps into the professional ranks this week while awaiting the arrival of the big bowl season. (Predicto will be covering the fluoridated water and hydraulic pump bowl in Sariba, Ariz., which this year features the Valdosta Mining Academy and Northeastern Missouri State Teachers College A M at Clinton.) This week the Bayonet staff is matched against the Comptroller (R A Division). Next week Predicto's alter ego, 2nd Lt. Patrick D. Lafferty (an indefatigueable helper and sometime picker himself) moves to a new assignment. Descending upon the wide world of sports in Southeast Acta, Lafferty (Predicto is demanding a promotion for his man) will be covering the hotly contested bowl games.

great defense or a great offense? The question will soon be answered.

In a preview of the two powers which will meet for the Western Division title, Minnesota and Los Angeles play each other this weekend. The Vikings have the highest scoring offense in professional football and have allowed opponents the fewest number of points. All season long we have heard the accolades of the Rams defense but here is a vote for Minnesota to demolish Los Angeles. The Vikings have the far better offense and Roman Gabriel should spend quiet a lot of time on his back.

MTU Team Sets Record

The National Rifle Association (NRA) announced today that the United States Army Team has set a new national open and service record with the rifle.

Six Teams Entered In League

Major Unit Cagers Start Play

By Steve Zimmerman

USAIC major unit basketball gets under way tonight with three games scheduled. The six major commands (ATC, CTC, MEDDAC, TCB, TSB and 10th Aviation Group) each have a team entered.

The season will run through February 20 with three games being played on Tuesday and Friday nights. Competition will be round robin with each team meeting its opponent four times over the course of the schedule.

The team that has won the most games at midseason (January 20) will be recognized as first-half champions. Play will continue on from there with the selection of a second-half champion using the same criteria. These two teams will then meet in a best two of three series to determine the post champion (should one team win both halves a play-off will not be necessary).

Two games will be played at Briant Wells Field House every Tuesday and Friday night starting at 6:30 p.m. and 8 p.m. respectively. The third game will be contested at Kimbrow Gymnasium at Sand Hill at 7 p.m.

Tonight, CTC will play ATC at 6:30 p.m. while TCB matches TSB, at 8 p.m. At Kimbrow, MEDDAC will be meeting 10th Aviation Group at 7 p.m.

On Tuesday, December 9, MEDDAC will play TCB at 6:3 p.m. and CTC will meet TSB at 8 p.m. At Kimbrow, ATC will play 10th Aviation Group at 7 p.m.

Next Friday, December 12, 10th Aviation Group takes on TCB a 6:30 p.m. while CTC challenges MEDDAC at 8 p.m. The game at Kimbrow features ATC and TSB at 7 p.m.

Sand Hill Golfers Win Turkeys

At least half of those golfers who participated in the Thanksgiving Turkey Golf Tournament at the Sand Hill Golf Course came away with table fare for the big feast. Played on Nov. 22 and 23, a total of 36 golfers teed off and 17 were awarded the big prize.

The medalist winners (low scores) for the two days were Tolani Teleso and Dick Workman on the 22nd and 23rd respectively in the sidelight competition, Don Moon won a turkey in the first days play when his first drive wound up twelve inches (closet in the competition) from the par three second hole. On the second day Raphael Crofford won the turkey when his first drive wound up 3½ feet from the par three fourth hole. In addition, Jerrell Wright won a turkey for the dubious honor of having the highest two day total score (219).

The winners and runners-up in each of the five flights also received turkeys. In the championship flight the winner was Tom Ray; the runner-up Lee Howard.

In the first flight the winner was Gene King; the runner-up Ken Ravencraft. The second flight winner was John H. Dickson. The runner-up was Archie Wamplar.

In the third flight the winner was Will Chambers, the runnerup Lloyd R. Daniel. The fourth and final flight winner was Jim Fierro, the runner-up was Ellis Austin.

Range Sgt. Bags Ten Point Buck

SFC Willard D. Roy wasn't surprised recently when he brought down a deer in his own "back yard."

Roy is the combat indoctrination NCOIC at Malone 19 and was hunting between the impact areas of Malone 19 and 21 (his "back yard") when he came upon the 10-point, 150-pound buck.

"It's the first deer I've ever shot here on the reservation," said Roy, who was taking advantage of the good hunting offered by the ranges on weekends and holidays when troops are not in the area.

"I had seen the buck before," the sergeant continued. "I was out for him and used a 12 gauge shotgun loaded with buckshot to bring him down."

Roy said the hunting at Malone ranges is as good as most other places on the reservation. Contrary to some beliefs, the deer haven't been frightened off by the continual firing.

Now, with a freezer full of venison for the winter months ahead and Christmas just around the corner, Roy is looking for a recipe that makes deer taste like turkey.

Moody Wins PGA Award

Former Army Sgt. Orville Moody climaxed a barracks-to-penthouse story, being named player of the year by the Professional Golfers Association.

The pudgy 14-year-veteran won the U.S. Open in June, just 20 months after hitting the pro tour at the age of 34. Moody joined El Paso friend Lee Trevino to capture the World Cup for the United States in last month's matches in Singapore.

"I played golf most of my time in the Army," Moody admits, "but I just had to get a discharge when all this money became available on the pro tour. Trevino says he's the world's richest Mexican. I must be the world's richest sergeant."

YAC Presents Football Awards

By Sp4 Paul Miller

Football sponsored by the Youth Activities Center (YAC) came to a stirring close last week as the four leagues completed a season that has provided a bundle of exciting moments for the boys, their families and numerous spectators.

Much of the excitement stemmed from the unbeatable Colts, Team No. 5, which completed play in the Doughboy League with an 8-0-0 record. It was the only team in YAC Football to shut out all opponents.

The Doughboy League held a play-off game Nov. 23 between the Packers and the Knights for the runner-up position in the league, with the Packers copping the honors.

Team No. 3, the Lions, captured the Biddy League title with a 5-1-0 record. Pee Wee League Champion team No. 1, the Browns, had a 9-1-0 record and among the older youmsters, the Trojans, Team No. 4, won with a 3-1-2.

The YAC season began on September 23, with 475 boys divided into 19 teams. By the season's end last week, 77 games has been played in the Fort Benning community.

Teams possessing the highest won-loss percentage at the completion of their regular season schedule were declared the champion and runner-up teams.

Individual awards were presented to boys of the championship and runner up teams in special ceremonies Nov. 28.

Each boy who remained with his team for the duration of the season will receive a participation reward upon returning his uniform to Youth Activities Supply, said W. F. Dunham, YAC director of athletics.

ROD AND GUN CLUB

Georgia is the Quail Capitol of the World. Other states may grow more peaches or more cotton, but none grow more bobwhites per acre than Georgia. The section of the state that long ago captured the undisputed championship of the quail hunting world for Georgia is centered on the large plantations near Albany and Thomasville in Southwest Georgia, although fine quail hunting is found all the way across South Georgia to Waynesboro on the South Carolina border, which has long been known as the Bird Dog Capitol of the World, and is the site of the famous field trials.

Generally speaking, this quail-rich country is the upper and lower coastal plain of South Georgia, once under the ancient sea, now a relatively flat area where extensive farming operations and pine groves extend as far as the eye can see. This land is tailor-made for quail, with just the right mixture of woods, brushland, tall grass and cropland, the four essential requirements of good quail habitat to furnish the birds food and protective cover from predators and weather.

This is the land that attracted the late president Eisenhower and many other famous or wealthy hunters to Georgia each year, and which will continue to exercise its magic attraction for years to come, as long as men are fascinated by the surprise of a covey hursting into flight. The names of these quail hunting plantations are legendary: Blue Springs, Nilo, Ichaway, Kinderlou, Di-Lane and many others. Their owners and guests are among the luckiest and most elite groups of hunters in the world, where talk of bird dogs and shotguns is sandwiched in between the business discussions of multimillion dollar financial and industrial empires.

The fabulous quail hunting found on these plantations is a result of the happy combination of three essential ingredients: good habitat, time and money. Unfortunately for the average landowner or quail hunter, without all three, equal results can't be obtained elsewhere.

Most of the plantations are owned by large corporations or individuals who make their money in other areas, using the plantation almost solely as a recreational area for entertaining business guests, although some farming is conducted with livestock and timber operations. But ideal conditions for quail are created at the expense of maximum income for the other activities, the reverse of the usual priority on most farms and lands.

Basically, the quail is a farm game species that thrives in and around cultivated lands, although some quail are found in woods, swamps, brushy areas and grasslands. For this reason, the bobwhite thrived during the period when most of Georgia was cleared of timber for heavy agricultural operations like growing cotton and other row crops. Quail flourished by eating the highly nutritious seeds of weeds that invariably grew as an unwanted by-product of rowcropping. At the same time, the prevailing practice of burning the piney woods floor to produce better grazing for cattle and hogs greatly stimulated the growth of partridge peas and beggarweed, two staples of the bobwhite's diet.

While this happy set of circumstances prevailed, excellent quail hunting was readily available to even the most casual hunter. In open country, the birds held well on the ground, waiting to the last minute to fly for cover. But today the picture has changed drastically in many areas. Once cultivated fields have been sown to pasture grass, which doesn't produce as many or as desirable seeds as the weeds around a cotton plant did. Many of the woods areas are now grown up above eye level in gallberries, palmettos and other undesirable species for quail that make visibility difficult at best. Also, many acres of open land have either been planted in pine seedlings or have been allowed to slowly return to a wild, brushy condition, until growing trees shade out the small seed producing plants in the ground.

The result has been a rapid decrease in the amount of good quail hunting land in Georgia, which is reflected in a steadily declining number of quail hunters and the total bag of quail that they take each year. For instance, in the 1962-63 season, a survey made by the State Game and Fish Commission indicated that 135,000 Georgians hunted quail a total of 1,234,000 days, bagging 4,058,000 birds, which made quail hunting Georgia's most popular type of hunting that season. But by the

Muniz KO's Opponent To Win Boxing Crown

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Sp4 Armando Muniz, Ft. Bragg, N. C., kayoed one opponent and decisioned another to lead the U. S. team to first place in the 1969 Conseil International Du Sport Militaire (CISM) boxing championships recently completed at Salonika, Greece.

The American boxers battled their way to three gold, three silver and one bronze medal to win the CISM boxing championship. France and Germany placed second and third respectively.

Muniz, from Artesia, Calif., racked up the 52nd win of his boxing career. His latest win was his 22nd by knockout. Muniz was fresh from a KO win in Las Vegas, Nev., over Russia's Aldraschid Abdramanoff at the Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) matches.

Other U. S. Army boxers who aided in the CISM championships were Sp5 William Hawthorne, Ft. Knox, Ky.; Sp4 George Coley, Ft. Polk, La.; and Pfc Tommie Lee Roland, Ft. Bragg.

Forty-seven fighters representing France, Germany, Greece, Ivory Coast, Morocco, Tunisia and the U. S. made up the CISM matches.

3rd Rangers Win Post Flag Football Championship

By Pvt. John Waring

A perfectly thrown pass in an overtime period gave the 3rd Ranger Company, TSB an 8-6 victory over the 524th Personnel Company, CTC, and the Post Flag Football Championship.

The Rangers and 524th gridders had battled to a 6-6 tie when time ran out, forcing the contest into overtime. On the first two plays from the midfield stripe, the Rangers pushed the 524th team seven yards into their own territory. Two more plays ensued and the ball remained in 524th territory. But a 25-yard pass, gobbled up by a 524th receiver apparently spelled defeat for the Rangers. Then on a final play of the game the Ranger quarterback calmly tossed a 20-yard aerial to a wide receiver who ran a down-and-out pattern past the midfield marker.

The Rangers had scored early in regulation time, taking the opening kick to near their 40-yard line. Two runs and two passes and the Rangers were knocking on the door. A Ranger halfback pulled in the short pass that notched the first touchdown of the championship game.

It was a punting game from this point as neither team could penetrate the other's defense. The 524th had the edge in the kicking department and slowly inched into Ranger territory. Midway through the second half the 524th offense found the groove and moved to the Ranger two-yard line. The Rangers held for three downs but a pitch-out pass play gave the 524th a tally on fourth down.

The Rangers, who were undefeated in the tournament, had already turned back the 524th team 9-7 in the preliminary round. The 524th won a second life by blanking the 41st Airborne Co. 12-0 last Saturday. If they had won Monday night the tournament would have gone to a showdown on Tuesday. But the well-disciplined Ranger machine could not be stopped.

Airlines Use Military Form Verifying Leave

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Some commercial airlines use DD Form 1580, Military Authorization for Commercial Air Travel, to confirm a soldier's leave status and thereby entitle him to a reduced military fare.

Soldiers flying commercially while on leave or within seven days after discharge from service should arrive at the airport with at least five copies of the form.

A soldier should request the person approving his leave to initiate DD Form 1580 if he expects to use commercial air travel. If copies of the form are not attached to leave orders, ask for them.

Chavaga Schedules Annual Awards Banquet

By 2nd Lt. Jeff Martini

This weekend culminates the finest and most unique season in Nascar history. Lee Roy Yarbrough, who has re-written the records books with his seven superspeedway victories and over $200,000 in winning earings purses, is threatening to add to his laurels with a win in the final superspeedway race of the year. Also trying to break back into the winners circle will be Dodge, who has only the Talladega 500 victory in its superspeedway bag. The Charlotte National 500 was the first heads-up duel between the Dodge Daytona Chargers and the Ford Talladega Thunderbirds. Can like Junior Friend Kiharo, can Bragan duplicate last season's performance? Will some Nascar super tracks?) and after tossing the lead back and forth a Ford, driven by Donnie Allison outlasted brother Bobby (in a Dodge) to take the checker.

Rockingham's American 500 was more of the same with Lee Roy coming up victorious. And now the last big one — this weekend at the new Texas International Speedway. Because of the high banking, speeds will probably be in the high 170's with a race average in the high 160's. This columnist will bring back an in-depth report on the results of the Texas 500.

Also this weekend the Chavaga Chapter of the Sports Car Club of America will have its annual awards banquet tonight at the Phenix City Holiday Inn. Highlight of this evenings festivities will be the announcement by past regional executive Web Sullivan that his super Cortina is completely illegal and is actually powered by a hidden Judson super-charger.

The Holiday Inn management has promised to have a Phenix City fire truck (Chevy-powered) present to dampen any overly enthusiastic "spirits."

On the Scene: Richard Petty, now a Ford star may soon be back with Plymouth next year. Rumor has it that "Mister Goodwrench" intends to get back with Plymouth's new '70 "Superbird" (a Dodge Daytona'd Road Runner). Other possible Plymouth drivers are Talladega winner Richard Brickhouse, Wisconsin's fastest driver Dave Marcis and California's Dan Gurney.

Last week Dodge star Charlie Glotzbach was shot by one of his ex-employes. He is reported to be in satisfactory condition.

These two spicy delights will be representing an oil company at Texas International Speedway this Sunday. Ann Romeo, a former Model of the Year, will join Cheryl Johnson, former Miss Dixie, to welcome the winning driver to victory circle. They'll also welcome "Racing Around" to the newest of Nascar's superspeedways. (Photo by 2nd Lt. Jeff Martini.)

1967-68 season, only 121,698 hunters still sought quail for 980,288 days, bagging only 2,498,587 birds, placing quail hunting in third place behind squirrel and deer hunting.

Although the coastal plain of South Georgia will continue to be Georgia's finest quail hunting territory, good quail hunting is found in the few remaining areas of the Piedmont that still have a row crop agriculture, or on areas of recently cleared out timberlands before the young bushes and trees reach maturity. While there is some quail hunting found in Northwest Georgia, declining agriculture there is adversely affecting the quail. Because of the heavily wooded nature of the North Georgia mountains and the coastal-Satilla Terrace few quail are found in either region.

Of all the five major types of hunting in the state, quail hunting is the hardest to obtain permission for, especially if the landowner is a quail hunter himself. This situation is complicated by the fact that almost all of Georgia's publicly owned areas or private lands which are open for public hunting are woodlands, which support few bobwhites. Another problem is the fact that a fairly large acreage of open land is needed for even a small number of quail hunters. As a result, few small farms are large enough to support much quail hunting.

For the out of state hunter with a short period of time to spend who doesn't mind paying for what he gets, Georgia's twenty commercial quail hunting preserves are probably the best answer. While preserves primarily offer hunting for pen-raised quail during their special six-month season, many of them have some wild bird hunting as well during the regular quail season, which normally opens about November 20 and runs through the end of February.

In addition to guaranteed shooting, most quail preserves include a guide and a pair of well-trained bird dogs in their price, which may range from $35 for a half a day's shooting to $100 a day or more, sometimes depending on the number of birds shot or released, since there is no limit on a quail preserve for pen-raised birds. Some of the preserves also have facilities for meals and lodging at extra cost. Many also feature shooting for pen-raised pheasants. A few have duck shooting ponds, and some even hold dove shoots for wild birds during the legal seasons.

WAYNE ZAHN

Will Give Bowling Exhibition At Post Lanes

Wayne Zahn, winner of the 1968 $100,000 Firestone Tournament of Champions and "Bowler of the Year" for 1966, will be at Ft. Benning's Main Post Bowling Alley Dec. 10 to both display and match his skills on the lanes with the best of the post's keglers.

Besides the exhibition and match play, there will be open bowling and a question-and-answer period during which Zahn will be available for comments.

The program will run from 7-10 p.m. Free refreshments will be served and door prizes will be drawn.

Zahn, a resident of Atlanta is the fourth leading money-winner in professional bowling. He has been seen frequently on television on the "Pro Bowlers Tour" program.

Zahn has won eleven PBA tournaments, including the PBA National Championship last year.

He also has to his credit one sanctioned (i.e. in tournament competition) 800 series and four sanctioned 300, or "perfect," games. His latest 300 game came during the San Jose Open in January of this year.

PGA Fall Golf Tour Hooks Into an Empty Rough

HONOLULU (AP) — There are signs — small signs, perhaps, but guideposts nevertheless — that pro golf's lucrative fall tour may be in trouble.

The problems are manifold: weather, competition with pro and college football, shrinking galleries, dwindling television interest. While potential sponsors — hands clutching bills of large denominations — are pounding on the PGA door for a chance to lure the tourists to summer events, the interest in the fall tour appears to be waning.

—The Haig was canceled this year.

So was the Cajun Classic.

NBC-TV decided against national television coverage of the Hawaiian Open.

The San Francisco Open, under new sponsorship this year, is reported to have lost some $50,000.

The fall tour, that portion of the schedule that follows the break around World Series time is a six-stop affair this year with about $800,000 up for grabs.

Not too long ago it was a three or four stop schedule, with purses in the $35,000-$50,000 range that drew only a handful of the top names and a flock of the lesser lights who were gunning for a spot in the top 60 money winners to gain their exemptions for the following year.

It was a fun-and-games time, jovial and relaxed.

But this year some of the strongest fields of the year have been assembled, lured by the big purses.

Arnold Palmer played the first four, Jack Nicklaus the Sahara and made his first apperance in the Kaiser. Billy Casper played two of the first four. Chi Chi Rodriguez refound his game. Leading money-winner Frank Beard was on hand. Gene Littler abandoned his antique cars, came out of obscurity and made a couple of stops.

But the galleries stayed home presumably glued to the television set and weekend football. It was cold and unpleasant in San Francisco.

Galleries were very small, despite beautiful weather, in the Sahara at Las Vegas. But that is not believed to be a major factor in the thinking of host Del Webb, who's just as happy to see the crowds at the gambling tables.

There is some doubt that San Francisco will be on the 1970 schedule. Haig, unlikely to return. The Cajun, once the last stop on the schedule but no longer in that position, is a question mark.

Bill Dauer, executive vice president of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce which sponsored the San Francisco Open, denied that the open was in trouble.

"We'd like to have the same October date next year," he told the San Francisco Examiner. "I think we'll do better the second time around.

"Our losses will not exceed $10,000. Actually, they will be closer to $5,000. I hardly believe the caliber of sponsors we have will be worried in the slightest.

The players want the tour, as witness the fields. But to support the purses that draw the players, sponsors need crowds and-or television money.

Neither seems to be too anxious to contribute.

$500 to Civilian Employe Tops Lengthy Awards List

Johnson had previously received $1,000 for the suggestion which is expected to save the government $801,400 a year. He proposed an improvement to the plan for providing kitchen police personnel for the mess halls.

The $500 award was authorized by Third U.S. Army and was presented by Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott, commanding general.

General Talbott also presented $115 each to Lt. Col. Charles W. Rock and CWO (ret.) Clyde R. Bowyer Jr., both of the US. Army Training Center, Infantry.

Others who received cash awards for work improvement suggestions included:

Also Mrs. Barbara L. Farmer, supply control and storage office, $155; John L. Baggett, Engineer office, $150; Walter L. Daw, Third Army training aids center, $150; Randall S. Gordon, service office, $145; and James M. Maxwell Jr., services office, $140.

Others were: James A. Crouch, Engineer office, $140; Eddie L. Oates, service office, $135; James E. Oswalt, maintenance office, $130; Lee R. Trevathan, family housing office, $130; and Edwin H. Kneuppel, Engineer office, $125.

The remainder were: John A. Welch, maintenance office, $120; Walter W. Rinehart, Maintenance Office, $120; Bradley Jones, supply control and storage office, $115; Lt. Jim Melton, Center Troop Command, $110; James M. Porter, services office, $110; and Gerald L. Cook, Engineer office, $110.

In other offices, Col. C. W. Youngman, director of Logistics, Infantry Center, presided over a series of incentive awards ceremonies.

Outstanding ratings were presented to John M. Rayburn of the maintenance office, Clyde L. Powell and Richard B. Smith, both of the supply control and storage office, Paul A. Mooar of the supply center office; Mrs. Mary J. Clark of the Office of the Post Engineer, and Jack H. Blalock of the Purchasing and Contracting Office.

Receiving an outstanding rating and quality step pay increase were Donald E. Coodroe, who received a $446 raise, an Robert L. Wisor, $255, both of the purchasing and contracting office, and Paul E. Bartlett, $164, of the Engineer's office.

Outstanding ratings and sustained superior performance awards went to Mrs. Dorothy G. Streetman, $290, of the services office, and Herman R. Bailey, $150, of the supply control and storage office.

Sustained superior performance awards of $200 went to Harold O. Watson of the maintenance office, William J. King of the services office and Reuben Holloway of the Engineer's office.

Cash awards for adopted suggestions were presented to Osiel Lunsford of the maintenance office who had two suggestions adopted for a cash award totaling $125. Jack E. Edmundson of the same office had two suggestions adopted for a cash award totaling $50. He received a letter of appreciation for another suggestion.

Also receiving cash awards for adopted suggestions were Donnell Freeman and James S. Williamson, $34 each, and Jimmie L. Wyrick, $80, all of the maintenance office, Samuel L. Jones of the services office, $65, Mrs. Andrea M. Stanfill of the supply center office, $50, and CWO Edward S. Williams of the maintenance office, $40.

Cash awards of $25 were presented to Leonard M. Salie of the maintenance office and Miss Karen L. Horan and Mrs. Lula C. Sanders, both of the services office. Receiving $15 each for a joint suggestion were Mrs. Beatrice R. Buckener and Mrs. Alva E. Chambers, also of the services office.

Letters of commendation for adopted suggestions were given to CWO Hubert L. Cox, John M. Rayburn, George W. Nihart, Charles D. Caldwell, Tommy Howard, Mrs. Sandra J. Swafford, John H. Cline, Joseph E. Compton and Henry J. Holmes, all of the maintenance office.

Also receiving letters of commendation were Elbert Arrowood, Mrs. Korin J. Mason, Mrs. Frida Fleenor, Mrs. Vivian J. Keefe, and Mrs. Margarette S. Brown, all of the services office.

Others from the services office who received letters of commendation were Maj. Burt K. Murrie, James M. Porter, Maurice E. Germaine, Kenneth E. Sylvester and Mrs. Geraldine T. White.

From the supply control and storage office were Mrs. Marian B. Burns and Mrs. Mary B. McCain and from the family housing office, Mrs. Anne L. Thompson, all receiving letters of commendation.

Guard Battalion Returns To Home

On Dec. 2, the 197th Inf. Bde. lost one of its highly prized battalions — the 1st Bn., 211th Arty., now traveling back to New Bedford, Mass., for deactivation.

In May, 1968, these National Guardsmen were sent to Fort Benning for training. Of the 530 men who were called up, 267 went to the Republic of Vietnam. Of 26 officers, 22 have seen action in Vietnam.

Major Lee C. Smith, Jr., commanding officer, said that the entire battalion will again be remitted in Massachusetts on Dec. 12. "The men who were sent to The Republic of Vietnam, have been recalled and are being sent directly to New Bedford," he said.

The 190 soldiers left at Fort Benning heard Col. Malcolm R. Baer, the Adjutant General, read the order from the President of the United States officially deactivating the battalion on December 13.

After an opening prayer by Chaplain (Major) Leland A. Richardson in Marshall Auditorium and the reading of the order by Colonel Baer, Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott, commanding general, addressed the battalion.

"Since you were called to active duty, you have served during a period of constant stress. You have served as a 155-towed battalion for deployment where you were needed. . .and served well," the general said.

The battalion is one of the Army's nuclear strike capability units and has participated in two conventional massive fire power demonstrations while at Fort Benning.

Events Mark Cycle's End

Unique ceremonies marked the graduation of more than 800 soldiers from the Army Training Center's 4th Bn. and Co. B, 8th Bn. Lt. Col. Thomas S. Dumire, 4th Battalion commander, was joined by SFC Frederich Morawietz in trooping the line.

A saber Morawietz wore distinguished him as an honor graduate of Fort Jackson's drill sergeant school.

The occasion doubled as a first training cycle for the 4th Battalion drill sergeant and the last cycle for Dunmire, who has been reassigned to Washington, D.C.

Capt. Patrick M. Lynch, commander of Co. B, 8th Bn., was presented the honor company award, while SSgt. John V. McFadden won the outstanding drill sergeant award and Sgt. Lawrence Davis, the outstanding assistant drill sergeant award.

The American Spirit Honor Medal, the highest trainee award, was presented to Pvt. Paul M. Graves, Co. D, 4th Bn., by Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, Training Center commanding general.

DRAFT FOR DRAFTS MECHANICS

Vehicle Repair Done With Expert Guidance

By PFC Chester W. Hilbur

"Those guys really know their business."

Specialist 4 John Williams had taken his Mustang to the ATC Automotive Craft Shop last week to make engine repairs. The source of a loud knock had been puzzling him for some time.

"Just can't seem to spot the trouble," Williams told Robert T. Shelby, civilian employee in charge of the shop.

An aircraft mechanic in the Air Force for 22 years, Shelby tuned in a keen ear right to the source of the knock. "You've got a busted piston," Shelby said, pulling a sparkplug wire from the distributor cap.

Later, while in the process of tearing down his engine, Williams found the mechanic to be correct.

With more than 100 total years in automative repair, the four technical advisors who supervise ATC Craft Shop No. 6 seldom are wrong. Their job is to advise and even assist any persons on post (including active, retired and Civil Service employees) with automotive and truck engine repairs.

Facilities at the ATC shop include complete sets of tools for any type of engine repair and overhaul. Fourteen bay areas provide the working space along with an outside facility for welding and body work.

What are the requirements for use of the shop's facilities? Only a craft card which is issued, giving the responsibility of any tools checked out to the user.

A vehicle may be assigned to a bay up to three days unless unforeseen difficulties arise. In such an event, additional time is allowed to make repairs.

For any parts that need to be ordered, the craft shop issues discount slips which are honored by nearly all Columbus merchants, according to Shelby.

Educators Represent Benning At Meetings

Dr. Joseph T. Cooforti, superintendent of the Fort Benning children's schools, and Rupert C. Nunally, principal of William H. Wilbur School, attended the 74th annual meeting of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools.

The meeting was held in Dallas, Tex., Nov. 30 - Dec. 3.

The children's school system was one of the 25 school systems approved by the Commission on Elementary Schools in Georgia for continued accreditation by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools at the meeting.

The association is organized exclusively for educational purposes. Its object is to improve education in the South through exercise of leadership and through the promotion of cooperative efforts between colleges, schools and related agencies.

The Fort Benning Children's Schools were first accredited in 1963.

In other activites, seven members of the Benning Education Association of the children's schools were delegates to the extraordinary representative assembly of the Georgia Education Association at Warner Robins High School Nov. 22.

The assembly was held for the delegates to vote approval or disapproval of a new constitution.

Congress Authorizes Junior ROTC Increase

FORT MONROE, Va. — Army Junior ROTC, a citizenship and military instruction program in high schools, is being expanded.

In response to public interest, the Congress has authorized an expansion of this Army program to 650 units by school year 1970-71. The Navy and Air Force were authorized 275 units each by this time.

The program teaches students good citizenship, self-reliance, leadership, loyalty and discipline. The military instruction which carries no obligation of any kind for military service in the Army can be beneficial to the student in a civilian or military career.

From 251 units in 1964, the program has grown to 585 high schools and nine military schools with an enrollment of more than 100,000 students. These schools are located in 38 states, Guam, Puerto Rico and the District of Columbia.

Eighteen additional high schools have been accepted into the program and will begin training in 1970. Applications from other schools are being processed. The Army's ceiling of 650 units should be reached without difficulty.

High schools participating in the program conduct an elective or required three or four-year ROTC training course, which includes instruction in weapons, drill, marksmanship, military history, leadership, first aid and other basic military subjects.

High school graduates who complete the Army Junior ROTC program can enter active service as privates; E-2, rather than as recruits whether they voluntarily enlist or are inducted into the Army.

Training Center Closes March 31

FOUR WILL REMAIN OPEN
Training Center Headquarters Located In Sand Hill Area

As part of the phaseout of 100 basic training companies on three posts, Fort Benning's Army Training Center will close by March 31, Secretary of the Army Stanley Resor announced a week ago today.

Final closing date for the Reception Station is Jan. 31.

The reduction, permitted by lower draft calls the past three months, will save the government an estimated $5.5 million annually.

In addition to the 40 basic training companies here, the cutback includes 30 basic companies and 10 Infantry AIT companies at Fort Gordon, Ga., 30 basic companies at Fort Bliss, Tex., 10 Infantry AIT companies each at Fort McClellan, Ala., and Fort Lewis, Wash., and five combat support training companies at Ft. Huachuca, Ariz.

Here, the phase-out will involve 303 officers, 1597 enlisted men and 191 civilians. Of the military, drill sergeants will be most affected, according to inactivation instructions published this week.

Prior to attending briefings on assignment options available, each will be required to indicate a preference for Ft. Jackson, S. C.; Ft. Bragg, N. C.; or Ft. Campbell, Ky.

The briefings also will "outline the procedures to be followed by drill sergeants faced with hardship or compassionate conditions aggravated by the possibility of transfer from Fort Benning," the instructions read.

"To the extent possible," all other enlisted men and officers will be reassigned to units here. Similarly, the future of the 191 civilian employes will be determined by the number of "positions now vacant within the installation," and officials stress an effort will be made to find jobs for as many as possible.

Ranger Col. Y. Y. Phillips To Retire Jan. 31

By Pvt. Steve Zimmerman

Colonel Y. Y. Phillips, director of the Ranger Department since February of this year, was honored at a retirement dinner held at the Officers Club. He will retire Jan. 31.

Guest of honor at the dinner was Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the Infantry School. In giving the main speech of the evening, the general cited Colonel Phillips for possessing four of the basic characteristics of a good soldier: Sentimentality, pride, value of the individual and a sense of serving something larger than himself.

Reflecting upon his years and assignments in the military, Colonel Phillips said that his jobs had been "easy," adding, "a good outfit carries itself." Colonel Phillips left the Ranger Department Dec. 8.

Among the "outfits" Colonel Phillips has served with (after enlisting in the Army in 1945 at Camp Robinson, Ark.) are the Rangers, Infantry School's staff department, (now brigade and battalion operations department), and company commander and S3, 2nd Bn., 30th Inf., both at Fort Benning. Colonel Phillips attended Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning, graduating in October, 1945.

After serving as a platoon leader with the 3rd Bn., 16th Inf. at Camp Roberts, Calif., until January, 1947, he went on inactive status until March, 1951.

During this time, he attended Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tenn., where he received a bachelor of arts degree. He also has a master of business administration degree which he received in 1961 from Syracuse (N.Y.) University.

In addition to OCS, Colonel Phillips' military education includes graduation from the Infantry Company Officer Course, the Infantry Officer Advanced Course, the Airborne and Ranger Courses, the Command and General Staff College, Ft. Leavenworth, Kan., the Armed Forces Staff College, Norfolk, Va., and the Army War College, Carlisle Barracks, Pa.

The colonel's overseas assignments include tours in both Korea and The Republic of Vietnam.

His decorations include

CSM Frank C. Plass Named Brigade's Senior NCO

By SP4 Mare Reiff

Frank C. Plass has taken over the 197th Infantry Brigade's top noncommissioned officer position, filling a vacancy created when his predecessor, CSM Joseph Chickini, left for duty in the Republic Vietnam.

On a gray and chilly morning, the two command sergeants major reviewed elements of each battalion of the world's largest Infantry brigade.

Colonel John E. Strever Jr., commanding officer, was the reviewing officer for the ceremony at Presidents Field.

Of his association with Chickini, the colonel said, "He is a professional, a man of conviction, he doesn't hesitate to give commanders the kind of advice he thinks is needed. His first thought is always to his men of the brigade. Promotions and time off are all sparked by Command Sergeant Major Chickini: Wherever he goes, the unit will be much richer."

A plaque was presented to the outgoing command sergeant major. It bore the crest of each battalion.

Plass currently is on his fourth tour of duty here at Fort Benning. In August of this year, he returned from Vietnam and became the senior sergeant of the 1st Bn. 29th Inf.

Plass is a combat veteran of three wars. In World War II, he fought with the 2nd and 5th Inf. Div. in Europe and in the Pacific Theater with the 12th Cavalry of the 1st Cav. Div.

In Korea, he served as battalion sergeant major of the 8th Cav., 1st Cav. Div.

Plass was born in Missouri and first entered the service in Oct. 1939 at Jefferson Barracks, St. Louis with the 6th Infantry.

Among his decorations are the Silver Star, Bronze Star Medal with two oak leaf clusters, Army Commendation Medal with two oak leaf clusters, the Air Medal with 34 oak leaf clusters and the Combat Infantryman's Badge with two stars. He also holds the Cross of Gallantry with Bronze Star and the Honor Medal First Class, both from the Republic of Vietnam.

Plass also wears the Airborne jump wings and the Vietnam parachutist wings.

CAREER OPPORTUNITY PURSUED

Following the pattern across Fort Benning this past week, four enlisted men at Martin Army Hospital elected to continue their Army service on the hospital's Career Opportunity Day. Shown are, left to right, Col. Martin A. Pfotenhauer, hospital commander, CSM Birney V. Gainer, of the hospital, SFC James K. Tyson, personnel sergeant, 24th Med. Bn., SFC David E. Walker and Sp5 Charles Z. Hendrix, both of nursing service. Gainer and Tyson reenlisted for three years while Walker and Hendrix reenlisted for six years. (U.S. Army Photo)

the Legion of Merit, the Bronze Star Medal with "V" device and Oak Leaf Cluster, the Air Medal with four Oak Leaf Clusters, and the Combat Infantryman Badge. He wears the Airborne and Ranger tabs, Senior Parachutist Badge and the Army General Staff Badge.

The colonel is a native of Orlando, Fla. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Y. Y. Phillips, reside at 317 Fairfax Ave., Nashville. Besides having attended school there, Colonel Phillips is a member of the Masonic Lodge (Corinthian), in Nashville.

Married to the former Miss Bettye Lee, the Phillips have three children, Y. Y. III, 20, Randall, 17, and Bettina, 15.

The Phillips family will live in St. Petersburg, Fla.

tion began here Dec. 1, when the Reception Station processed its last inductees. Those 528 men, who filled the 1st Brigade's 10th Battalion, will become the last graduates of Fort Benning's Training Center Feb. 6.

In the meantime, battalions will be phased out and men reassigned as companies graduate at the rate of four a week, with administrative work for closing the two brigades and Training Center headquarters to be completed by March 31.

The graduation of the 1st Brigade's provisional battalion leaves operational six of the Training Center's eight battalions, or 24 of its 40 original companies. Neither the 4th Battalion, which graduated Nov. 28, nor the 8th Battalion, graduated Dec. 5, has refilled.

Since its organization Sept. 15 1965, the Center has produced about 188,650 trained combat soldiers.

Captain Sets Four Records

Capt. Margaret T. Murdock of the U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit here established four national women's records at a Santa Monica, Calif., tournament.

Her new records were:

— 365 out of 400 with 40 shots on an International Course, kneeling at 50 meters with any sights, breaking the old record of 361.

— 384 out of 400 with 40 shots on an International Course, keeling at 50 meters with any sights, breaking the old record of 383.

— 1,793 out of 1,800 with 180 shots on an International Course, prone at 50 meters with any sights, breaking the old record of 1785.

— 1,148 out 1,200 with 120 shots on an International Course at 50 meters with any sights, breaking the old record of 1138.

King's Pizza On Call

For Ham What Am: Try basting a lean ham steak with ginger ale or fruit juice for a different taste treat.

Heat a ceramic kitchen tile in the oven along with the dinner rolls. Tuck the tile in the bottom of the bread basket to keep rolls warm.

Olives should be taken with the fingers. This custom is so old that it is said that Cardinal Richelieu once dismissed a guest who revealed himself as a fake nobleman when he helped himself to olives with a fork.

The earthy peanut, when finely chopped and sprinkled over creamed onions, lends a royal touch.

An ancient Arabic poet once wrote: "Coffee is our gold. Wherever it is served, one enjoys the society of the noblest and most generous of men."

It was also once said that you can judge a restaurant by the coffee it serves. Come for a fine dinner at

Byline Bayonet

(Byline Bayonet welcomes questions of general interest about Fort Benning and the Army. Within space limitations, all reasonable questions will be answered. Questions of a purely military nature which obviously could be more properly answered by commanders or supervisors within the chain of command will not be accepted. Questions must be signed with current unit assignment indicated. Send questions to Bayonet Editor, Room 602, Infantry Hall.)

SAFETY BELT CAMPAIGN

Is the post's Safety office conducting another automobile safety belt campaign?

Yes. The campaign began last week and will continue through the Christmas-New Year holiday period. Daily checks are being made across the entire installation. If a driver and other occupants of a car stopped during one of these checks are wearing safety belts properly, the driver is eligible for a $5 cash award.

GIFT WRAPPING

Is there any place on post where one can get Christmas gifts wrapped?

The Post Exchange is operating a gift wrap activity in the Howard bus station near the main exchange. Hours of operation are 10 a.m. - 6 p.m. Monday through Friday; 9 a.m. - 5 p.m. Saturday and 1 -5 p.m. Sunday.

GENERAL OFFICERS

How many Army general officers began their careers with the Reserve Officer Training Corps?

Approximately one-half of all officers in the Active Army are ROTC graduates. More than 150 of them are general officers. This includes a four-star general, three lieutenant generals, 58 major generals and 87 brigadier generals.

M-16s AND NATIONAL GUARD

Will the M-16 rifle be issued to the National Guard?

Reports say General William C. Westmoreland, chief of staff, would like to see a "one-rifle" Army again. It is possible Army Guard and Reserve units may share in 200,000 M-16 rifles next year. Currently, Guard units have a mixture of World War II M-1s and M-14s plus a token number of M-16s.

CHAMPUS PARTICIPATION

What does CHAMPUS participation by a health care organization mean?

Physicians and other sources of health care participate by providing authorized services to the CHAMPUS beneficiary, or submitting their claims for payment to a designated fiscal agent.

These claims include agreement to accept as full reimbursement those amounts payable under this program.

TRAINEE COSTS

What is the average cost to the Army to keep one soldier for one day while in basic training? This cost estimate should include everything.

$21.00.

A True Love Story

I was reading a history book in the 7th grade when I first noticed her, and I suddenly felt a bit of childish passion. By the time I graduated from high school, I had fallen in love.

She may be a little on the large size, but who cares? To me, she's the most beautiful thing on earth. I love her for many reasons and one of them is her compassion for others. She's always thinking of someone else. Always giving of herself. When I stop to think of the numerous people she has helped when they needed her — I can't find the words to express myself.

No, she's not perfect, by any means; but then, who is? All I care is that she tries hard to be just what I want her to be. How many others can say that? Not many. I know. I've been around.

She's gentle and kind, and gives with her heart. And, when I see anyone trying to take advantage of her, it makes my blood boil. I guess I'm just jealous. Haven't I the right to be? I'd never stand by and see anyone try to take her away from me. She's too precious; besides she depends on me too much. I'll go on loving and protecting her to the day I die.

Of course, there are times when I tell her of things that are wrong. But, after I've told her, she always does her best to change them for me. I'm proud of her for that. I've only to let her know how I feel and be a little patient. No one can change things in a day, can they?

It's when I've been away for awhile that I really miss her and realize how much I long to get back. What's that saying, "Absence makes the heart grow fonder?" As I near home, she's waiting there with outstretched arms to offer me all of the wonderful things I have never been able to find in this cockeyed world. I know, I've been around.

Everywhere I've traveled, I've made the comparison and could not find one who could compare; I never have; I never will. I'm convinced, after all these years.

When I go to sleep each night, I rest peacefully knowing that she is there, belonging to me. And, in my heart, I'll always keep her precious name — America. There's not another beauty like her in all of God's world. I know, I've been around. (AFPS)

Study Shows Trends Of GI Bill Enrollment

A study of veterans who entered college during the first three years covered by the current G.I. Bill indicates that while almost one half enrolled as freshmen, approximately one in five enrolled for a masters or doctorate degree.

The Veterans Administration (VA) study was based on more than one half of those veterans now in college who indicated their field of study.

Of this group, 31 per cent chose business and commerce, 14.5 per cent education and 11 per cent engineering.

Next in order are the life sciences (agriculture, biology, medicine and health), which comprise slightly less than nine per cent. Technical and social science courses each compromise approximately eight per cent.

Among veterans who trained in schools below the college level, business, electrical and electronic training are popular fields of study.

In apprentice and other on-job training authorized by the G.I. Bill, structural courses are the most popular.

The results of the VA report are based on a three-year period ending June 30, 1969.

The VA invites veterans in or out of school to contact the nearest VA office if they have any questions about veterans benefits.

Veterans in school are urged to inform the VA promptly if they change their course of study, address or number of dependents. (ANF)

White House Reports

(On June 27, 1969, the President concurred in the conclusions and recommendations of a special task force looking into the problems of narcotics, marihuana and dangerous drugs. The portion of this report relating to marihuana is being reprinted for Bayonet readers. This is the fourth of a seven part series dealing with marihuana.)

EFFECTS

While no long-term physical effects of marihuana use have been adequatey demonstrated in this country, the American experience has been extremely brief and additional studies are needed to resolve this and other issues. Although there is no firm evidence that marihuana use in humans has either teratorgenic or genetic implications, this possibility should be explored—particularly in view of some evidence on this point with respect to LSD. It is possible that there are serious consequences of chronic use which will only become apparent after careful, long-term studies. In foreign countries where heavy use of the stronger cannabis preparations is common, a variety of physical ailments supposedly related to marihuana use have been reported—notably conjunctivitis, chronic bronchitis and certain digestive ailments.

There have also been reports of adverse psychological effects of marihuana both in this country and abroad. Recently a group of some 1500 psychiatrists, psychiatric residents, internists, general practitioners and psychologists in the Los Angeles area reported that they had seen almost 1,900 "adverse reactions" to marihuana. It is difficult to interpret this finding since "adverse reaction" was poorly defined, and there has been no follow-up to define just what the reactions to the drug were. However, there have been reports of increased number of hospitalizations following the usage of marihuana.

Considerable concern has been expressed in the United States over the possibility of personality changes and a loss of motivation among youthful marihuana users. The potential effects of a reality distorting agent on the future psychological development and maturation of the adolescent users are of special concern.

Normal adolescence is a time of considerable psychological turmoil. Patterns of coping with reality developed in the teen years help determine later adult behavior. Persistent use of an agent which serves to ward off reality during this critical period of development is likely to affect adversely the future ability of the individual to cope with the demands of a complex society.

While systematic studies of large numbers of American chronic users are not yet available, a number of clinicians have observed that at least some users show evidence of a loss of conventional motivation. They seem to prefer instead a non-goal oriented life style, which emphasizes immediate satisfactions to the exclusion of ambition and future planning.

The "pothead", then, may well retard his own chances for emotional growth by not learning how to deal with life stress. Characteristic personality changes among impressionable young persons from the regular use of marihuana include apathy, loss of effectiveness, and diminished capacity or willingness to carry out complex long-term plans, endure frustration, concentrate for long periods, follow routines, or successfully master new material. It has also been observed that verbal facility is often impaired, both in speaking and writing.

OC Wives Hold Yule Coffee

The Officer Candidate Wives Club of 41st Co., 6th Stu. Bn., TCB, held a Christmas coffee recently in the company dayroom.

Honored guests were Mrs. Grady W. Williams and Mrs. John R. Schumaker.

Special guests were Mrs. Miles A. Perry, Mrs. William L. Yarbrough, Mrs. Leslie T. Smith, Mrs. William Toelke and Mrs. Peter M. Harvard.

Mrs. Christos O. Tsonas and Mrs. Anders F. Johnson hosted the morning affair.

The morning program consisted of a showing of Army customs and courtesies slides by Mrs. Harvard.

Wassall was served as an alternative to coffee.

64th OCs March In Senior Review

Officer Candidate Class No. 1-70, 64th Co., 6th Stu. Bn., TCB, marched recently in their senior status review at York Field.

Col. Robert M. Piper, commanding officer of the Candidate Brigade, was the reviewing officer.

Marching as junior support company was the 9th Company, 9th Stu. Bn.

Following the review, a reception was held at the 64th Company with Col. and Mrs. Piper and Lt. Col. and Mrs. Grady W. Williams as honored guests.

Senior Candidate James L. Carroll, Student Council president and Mrs. Kemper R. Baker, OC wives club president, cut the cake together, symbolizing the joint effort of the wives club and the candidates in the attainment of senior status for the 64th Company.

The afternoon entertainment consisted of a display of American and Communist weapons and WW II uniforms modeled by candidates from the support company. Also on display was a collection of field gear currently being considered for use by the army.

The evening dance was held at the Main Officers Club.

The theme for the affair was "The Blue Knights." The dormen and waiters were dressed in medieval costumes.

Candidate entertainment was provided by a group called the "Low Crawl Five," which sang several folk songs and featured Candidate Jeff R. Lyman singing solo.

Idea Earns $25 Award

Mrs. Viola R. Worozbyt, civilian employee with the U. S. Army Infantry Board here was given special recognition this week in the form of a $25 cash award and a certificate for a suggestion she had submitted.

The presentation was made to Mrs. Worozbyt by Col. Charles B. Thomas, president of the board, in his office.

Mrs. Worozbyt, clerk stenographer in the field equipment test division of the Infantry material test board, forwarded a safety suggestion regarding the installation of guard rails around the porch at the main post library.

With the adoption of her suggestion, a serious safety hazard was eliminated which should improve the morale of all those using the facility, said Colonel Thomas.

This is the second safety award for suggestions made by Mrs. Worozbyt.

In Norway Santa Wears a Mask, Rides a Horse

By Sp4 Frank H. Valk

Froliche Weinachten, Joyeux Noel, Feliz Natal, Merry Christmas — although it's said in many different ways and celebrated with minor variations, it still holds the same meaning and reaches the hearts of the Christian world with equal vigor and enjoyment.

One of the widely recognized symbols of Christmas is Santa Claus. In Belgium and France, however, he is Saint Nicholas, who is dressed like a Catholic cardinal and carries a staff. With him is a mule, which carries the toys to the children.

"We also have a little man, carrying a whip, who always follows St. Nicholas," Capt. Roger J. Walrant of Belgium says. "He is used to frighten the children, who believe that if they are bad, they will be punished."

The Norwegian's Santa Claus is called Father Christmas or Julenisse. He is a man with a mask, who carries toys in a bag over his shoulder.

Unlike the Anglo-Saxon tradition, which has Santa Claus riding through the sky on Christmas eve in a sleigh full of toys and driven by reindeer, Julenisse comes on horseback to children on Dec. 6.

"Toys and candy are given to the children on this day. On Christmas eve, they are given more practical gifts, such as shoes or clothing," Maj Arne Sakshaug, a student in IOAC 3-70, commented.

The use of Dec. 6 as the day which the toys are passed out is a common tradition among the Nordic and Germanic peoples.

The Norwegian children also have a special treat two days after Christmas when the schools open up for Juletrefest, a festival of the Christmas tree, Sakshaug says.

In Germany a special festival, called kinderfest (children's festival) begins two weeks before Dec. 6. In Nuremberg, the Kindermarkt (Children's market) is set up in the streets with toys and foods. Special ceremonies, with people dressed in gaily colored costumes, are held through this period.

"Only the adults receive their presents under the Christmas tree" Capt. Lauro J. Alves Jr., of IOAC 2-70, says. "The children put a shoe on the window or by their bed; Father Christmas then places the toys around the shoes."

In Liberia Santa Claus is exactly like his American counterpart. However, he doesn't bring the children toys; rather he goes house to house and does a dance, Capt. Joseph M. Dunn of IOAC 2-70 says.

"In the hinterlands Christams is celebrated with dancing, festivals, and carousing. In the civilized areas Christmas is only recognized from Christmas eve to the day after Christmas. This day is called 'boxing day' and is reserved for recuperating from the holiday," Capt. Dunn says.

Another important aspect of Christmas recognized throughout the world is the food and drink used for the Christmas feasts. Most countries have turkey as the main course for the Christmas dinner. Europeans and South Americans, however, have Christmas dinner on Christmas eve before going to the evening service.

The most popular meat in Norway for this meal is pork ribs and pork thighs. At this time of the year homemade beer is produced.

Goose and knoodles (doughballs served with gravy) adorn the tables in many parts of Germany along with bottles of the best red wine, which are saved for this occasion. During the Christmas season many areas of Germany have Weinachtsbier (Christmas beer) which is saved through the year and bottled with a special wrapper for the holiday. It is a much more potent beer than is produced for the remainder of the year.

The Brazilians, who derive much of their tradition from Portugal, have an extra meal following the midnight mass. Though the main meal is served before mass, Ceia is celebrated afterwards. The Ceia is a meal of fruits and nuts which are laid out on a decorated table. A special bread is also prepared for the Ceia, it is Rabanada. The Rabanada is bread dipped in milk and eggs then fried.

"This bread can be found only in homes. It is never sold in stores or restaurants," Capt. Alves said.

In Belgium a special Christmas cake is prepared. At one time, the cake was made in the shape of a body to represent the Christ child, but now the cake is round, or takes the shape of a head.

The religious aspect of Christmas still remains the most important, however. Protestants and Catholics alike gather in special evening services noted for their music and joy. In Brazil it is called Missa Do Galo (the mass of the rooster) since the rooster is supposed to sing at midnight. Whatever the name, this annual tribute to Christ brings together Christians in a common bond singing choruses of "Peace on Earth, good will toward men."

Group to Distribute Gifts

The USAIC Protestant Women of the Chapel will go to Highland House Nursing Home Wednesday to sing Christmas carols and distribute gifts. The regular PWOC Bible Study Group will meet at 9:30 a.m. and will dismiss at 10:30 so those wishing to go to the nursing home may attend.

The ladies will leave Bldg. 2605 shortly afterwards and will return at noon for a finger luncheon.

Those ladies who would be interested in bringing joy to the lives of elderly people during this Christmas season are urged to attend. A nursery will be provided at Bldg. 2605 throughout all the activities. For further information call 545-4334 or 545-7413.

Officer Honored

The 93rd OCS Co. honored Lt. Robert H. Oliver, executive officer, at a party in the Gold Bar Club before he left for Vietnam.

Oliver was assigned in August to the 93rd Co. from the 96th Co., where he had been a tactical officer since February.

Sewing Theme of Wives Luncheon

Mrs. Theresa Jorgensen, representative of a local fabric store, presented a program on fabrics and sewing hints at the Army Training Center's officers' wives luncheon at the Main Officers Open Mess.

Tables at the supper club were decorated with sewing baskets and various sewing notions. Hostesses for the event were Reception Station wives, Mmes. Omer E. Pigeon Jr., Reynold A. Johnston, Peter A. Leggett, Joseph Byers, Edwin J. Rowan and Norman K. Bryant.

Newcomers welcomed are Mmes. James O. Cravens, Clarence M. Brooks, Oliver W. Dillon, Nelson J. Garcia, Edward J. Covington, William A. Campbell, Thomas O. Humphius, John Loper, Harry E. Behel, Ronald Taylor and Leland R. Bays, 1st Bde.

Second Bde. welcomed Mmes. Richard O. Stanbakken, Francis A. Baran, Jay B. Jeffries, Paul J. Ready and Bertrand A. Page II.

WAC Capt. Roberta A. Britten and Mrs. Bobby J. Hammonds were introduced as newcomers to Headquarters Co., and the Reception Station welcomed Mmes. Joe E. Byers Jr., Hugh W. Hastings and Harry W. Trimm.

The traditional training Center charm was presented to Mrs. Daniel Y. Moy, upon her departure from Fort Benning.

Large Turkey Makes Delicious Leftovers

The smart homemaker plans ahead when she buys her Christmas turkey or chicken; she gets one much too large for her family so she will have enough to use in other favorite dishes. Here are a few of them.

TURKEY TETRAZZINI

1 (10½ oz.) can condensed cream of mushroom soup
1 cup turkey broth
2 cups grated processed cheese
6 cups cooked spaghetti (12 oz. uncooked)
4 cups boned turkey, diced.
½ cup mushrooms or sautéed almonds (optional)
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese
Dash Paprika.

Blend soups and broth (part milk may be used). Stir in processed cheese; mix with spaghetti, turkey and mushrooms. Turn into greased shallow baking dish, about 7½ by 12 inches. Sprinkle top with cheese and paprika.

Bake in moderate oven (350) until bubbly and browned, about 30 minutes. Makes eight to 10 servings.

"TURKEY" CRANBERRY SALAD

Turkey layer:
2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
½ cup cold water
1½ cups turkey broth
1 tblsp lemon juice
¾ cup mayonnaise or salad dressing
1½ cups finely diced turkey
½ cup finely diced celery
Salt to taste

Cranberry layer:
1 (1 lb.) can jellied cranberry sauce
1 tblsp lemon juice
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
¼ cup cold water
½ cup boiling water
Dash of salt

Soften gelatin in cold water. Heat 1 cup broth, add gelatin, stir until dissolved. Add remaining broth, lemon juice and salt. Cool.

Blend a little gelatin mixture into mayonnaise until smooth; add remaining gelatin mixture. Chill until syrupy. Fold in turkey and celery. Pour into oiled 1½ quart oblong baking dish. Chill until set.

Mash cranberry sauce with fork. Add lemon juice and salt. Soften gelatin in cold water. Add to boiling water; stir until dissolved. Add cranberry sauce; blend well.

When turkey layer is set, pour over cranberry mixture. Chill several hours until cranberry (top) layer is set.

To serve, cut in squares and place on crisp greens. With tiny cookie cutter, or knife cut design in center of each square. Remove cutout; fill hole with mayonnaise. Makes six 3 inch squares.

TURKEY SURPRISE

4 tblsp shortening
½ clove garlic, chopped fine
4 tblsp flour
3 cups diced cooked turkey
2 cups turkey broth
1 tblsp soy sauce
Hot cooked rice

Melt shortening; add garlic and saute lightly. Stir in flour and cook until bubbly, stirring constantly. Add broth, soy sauce, turkey and seasonings, if desired.

Cook until thickened and thoroughly heated, about 20 minutes. Serve with hot cooked rice. Makes six

IOBC-8 Graduates Told Vocation A Public Trust

By Sgt. Carol Aubin

"The American people have the right to expect our unassailable integrity, the habitual conduct of our affairs, both private and official, in an honest, straightforward, honorable manner . . . Let us not betray that trust," said Col. Alexander H. Hunt, addressing graduates of the Infantry Officer Basic Course, Class No. 8, here.

"The Army officer's vocation is a public, not a private one. He is a public servant, an official of the government. There has been reposed in him a special trust and confidence," said the colonel. He is chief, staff group, brigade and battalion operations department of the Infantry School.

The colonel briefed the new graduates on what to expect when they arrived at their first duty station. He told them that some of the would find themselves involved with the management of manpower, money and material. "The most important, most critical, and most precious of these resources is our manpower — our soldiers."

Colonel Hunt said, "A former chief of staff of the Army, emphasizing the importance of the individual soldier, said, "In the final analysis, it is the man, rather than the equipment, which is the heart and the soul of the military."

He stated, "This is why such a high premium is placed on leadership in the military — on the fine art of motivating the man. Eliciting from his his best effort, his respect, confidence and willing cooperation — the men who will reply on your leadership are your primary responsibility."

The colonel told the graduates that the men under their command ask that they know their job, and perform to the best of their ability. "Be sincere, honest, and fair and insure that the soldier's legitimate needs are met."

Colonel Hunt said the challenges given most often to men aspiring to be effective leaders is "know thyself." He emphasized the importance of "reperative analysis — to capitalize on his strengths and to improve his weaknesses."

"An Army officer must have courage to act when action is needed. He must not hesitate when asked for an opinion, and must have the courage to tell his commanding officer what he needs to hear and not what he thinks he wants to hear," the colonel said.

Distinguished graduate was 2nd Lt. Bryce J. Robinson, III.

School Honors G. M. Blomberg As Top NCOC

Gary M. Blomberg was named distinguished graduate of Infantry Noncommissioned officer Candidate Class No. 10-70, in graduation exercises at Marshall Auditorium.

For his achievement, Blomberg received a letter of commendation from Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the Infantry School, an Association of the United States Army plaque, and a "Follow Me" statute. He was promoted to staff sergeant.

Guest speaker was 1st Sgt. Joseph W. Jones 80th Co., 8th Stu. Bn., The Candidate Bde.

Annual Yule Contest Set For Outside Decorations

Barracks and family quarters alike at Fort Benning will soon be decked with boughs of holly, mistletoe, Christmas lights and other signs of the Yuletide season.

The decorations will be displayed in connection with the Infantry Center's annual "Outside Christmas Decoration Contest."

The contest, to be conducted Dec. 1955, will be divided into four categories: No. 1 — company or battery headquarters or similar type building or sponsored display; No. 2 — battalion or higher level headquarters and similar type building or sponsored display; No. 3 — single type family dwelling; No. 4 — Single residence of a multiple type family dwelling.

Participants must furnish the Special Services Officer in Bldg. No. 395 this information in writing, not later than Dec. 17: Name of unit or individual entering contest; category entered; phone number; and the number of building being decorated or nearest to the display.

First and second place entries in the contest will receive plaques upon conclusion of the contest.

For further information, phone 545-7414.

Soldier Complaints Termed 'Music To Colonel's Ear'

BY LT. JAMES W. HOPSON

"These boots hurt my ankles."

"How come the steel pot weighs so doggone much?"

"C-rations are so bulky that I throw half of the cans away."

"Why can't somebody find a better way to carry M-79 ammo?"

Soldiers' complaints are music to the ears of Col. Robert H. Robinson, Army Materiel Command (AMC) Infantry Research and Development liaison officer here.

Colonel Robinson and his staff are assigned to Fort Benning to listen to Infantrymen talk about their individual clothing and equipment.

From the Doughboys' gripes and suggestions about their gear, the AMC liaison officer makes formal recommendations for modifications and improvements in what the soldier wears, what he eats, what he shoots — in equipment that the soldiers use every day.

"There is no product in the U. S. Army that cannot stand to be improved. We are constantly striving for ideas to improve equipment," The Col. said. "What this office really is doing is making an effort to find out from soldiers what they think about their individual clothing and equipment and how they think it can be improved."

To get opinions from Infantrymen, Colonel Robinson sends two men, Capt. Edward G. Huntley and MSgt. Clinton A. Howard to interview soldiers. Huntley questions officers while Howard talks with enlisted men. They seek suggestions from soldiers of varied backgrounds and levels of experience, from noncommissioned officer candidates to veterans of two wars.

This past summer the Infantry team commandant of the Infantry School, the assistant commandant of the School, president of the U. S. Army Infantry Board and commanding officer of the Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency) met to pinpoint the five items of the Infantryman's gear that needed the most immediate improvement. Those items were identified as the combat boot, the steel helmet, load-carrying gear, the temperate zone uniform and body armor.

Brigadier Gen. Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the school, appointed Infantry School CSM Bob L. Williams to head a panel of NCOs to discuss improvements in the five critical items of equipment. Howard, from Colonel Robinson's office, attended the meetings of the NCO board to provide guidance and the knowledge gained in hundreds of interviews with soldiers.

After the board presented its findings to the Infantry Team, Colonel Robinson arranged for the team and the NCOs to offer the suggested improvements at AMC's developmental laboratories at Natick, Mass. Prototypes of the modified equipment suggested by the NCOs will be evaluated shortly.

Colonel Robinson explained that from comments collected by his team, he prepares a regular report to be sent to AMC headquarters, outlining changes recommended by Infantrymen here.

AMC reviews the recommendations, checks with other Army research and development agencies for acceptability of the suggested improvements and secures the go-ahead to initiate small research and testing programs which may result in the eventual acceptance of the suggested modifications.

"We enable research and development people to have a better idea of what soldiers think about what they make," he said.

The Combat Developments Command (CDC) states the Army's initial requirements for a piece of equipment. Colonel Robinson said, while AMC is responsible for developing, testing and procuring the actual equipment.

Therefore, no modification suggested to AMC can be implemented without approval of the CDC, since CDC must determine if a modification would so change the design of a product that the product would no longer do the job for which it was intended.

As an illustration of how a recommendation is processed through his office, AMC development and procurement channels and into the supply system, Col. Robinson offered this account:

In March, 1969, Col. Joel M. Hollis, then director of the Infantry School Weapons Department, inquired about the status of a modification in the M-60 machine gun that had been proposed some years earlier. The M-60 ammunition is issued in the T-7 bandoleer, a 100-round container designed to allow the gunner to carry the weapon loaded. The machine gun, however, had no device for attaching the bandoleer to the gun although a bandoleer support had been designed and approval for the support had been given at the same time that AMC accepted the bandoleer itself.

As a consequence of the lack of a bandoleer support, soldiers were forced to carry the gun unloaded or to garry-rig some sort of ammunition support, or worse, to carry M-60 ammo "Pancho Villa" style draped over their shoulders and exposed to dirt and moisture.

Colonel Hollis, who was familiar with the early development of the bandoleer support, asked Colonel Robinson why the modification was not yet in the hands of the troops. Colonel Robinson, working with AMC headquarters, speeded the development and acceptance of the bandoleer support through AMC channels.

As a result, all M-60s manufactured after January, 1970, will be built with the new bandoleer support, and modification kits will be issued to units for improving existing weapons. In less than one year, a suggestion made at Fort Benning resulted in a product improvement being delivered quickly into the hands of the troops.

Four types of body armor. Two of the "flak vests" are standard Army issue—one offers titanium plates as protection and the other, 12-ply nylon.

The other two are innovations. The "Variable Body Armor System" may be worn in any of several ways and depends on tough ceramic fiberglass. Another type of experimental body armor is the modified 12-ply nylon vest suggested by the Infantry School NCO board. The modifications include the removal of the collar, the replacement of the zipper with a simpler Velcro closure and the addition of a "spacer" — a nylon mesh device that lines the inside of the vest — to allow better ventilation.

To ease the Infantryman's combat burden, AMC acted on the NCO board's recommendation to produce a lighter adjustable rucksack-type pack. The prototype model is made of lightweight nylon and will accommodate larger loads, more comfortably distributed on the wearer's back, than does either the combat pack or the rucksack issued now.

Another interesting development is the Army's use of "freeze-dried" foods. As an example, through the freeze-drying process, enough cherries for a nine-inch pie can be compressed into a disk no larger than a deck of playing cards and will burst out as full blown cherries with an application of warm water. Fruits, meats and even whole main dishes have been reduced and preserved through the freeze drying process.

Anniversary Message

UNITED STATES ARMY
The Chief of Staff
TO THE MEMBERS OF ARMOR

"On the occasion of the 193d anniversary of Armor, it is my pleasure to extend congratulations on behalf of the men and women of the Army.

"The arm of mobility proudly carries the heroic traditions of the Cavalry, which reach back to the Revolution, and of Armor, with its spearheads of steel in more recent wars. Today, your record throughout the world is a notable addition to those traditions. In Vietnam, your accomplishments have culminated in the successful application of armor tactics and doctrine to the difficult terrain, again proving Armor's capability of adapting to the ever-changing conditions of modern warfare.

"I have watched your progress with pride, and wish you every success as you continue your outstanding performance.

ROTC Commission Led Captain On Unique Path

By SpS John Klopf

Perhaps one of the most unusual backgrounds of ROTC-commissioned officers at the Training Center here is that of Capt. Robert J. Ciolek, chief, personnel actions division.

Ciolek is a distinguished military graduate from Rutgers University, New Brunswick, N. J., who asked for a commission in Armor, was placed in the Adjutant General Corps and spent six months as a platoon leader with the 25th Inf. Div. in the Republic of Vietnam.

The captain, winner of the Silver Star, Bronze Star, and Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry, had a first-hand opportunity to talk and work with other platoon leaders, most of them OCS graduates. "In the final analysis," he said, "it's the individual, not the schooling, that makes a good leader."

Ciolek pointed out advantages of both OCS and Reserve Officer Training Corps schooling. "ROTC prepares you more for a staff position or a career in the army," said Ciolek. "OCS gives you better preparation for a specific job, such as platoon leader or company commander."

"Age, of course, is one advantage the ROTC graduate has over his OCS counterpart. The average age of ROTC graduate is three years or four years older, and with that age comes more experience and maturity," he said.

"The biggest advantage ROTC held for me came while I was still in school," Ciolek stated. "The financial assistance really helped a lot."

From Rutgers, Ciolek went to Armor Officer's Basic Course in Fort Knox, Ky., and then to Fort Meade, Md., where he was a platoon leader with the 6th Armored Cavalry Division. From there it was jungle school in Panama and then Vietnam, first as a weapons evaluator with an Army concept team and then as a platoon leader.

MAH Mess Operation Is More Than Peeling Spuds

The mess hall at Martin Army hospital is an operation far more intricate than merely having to peel potatoes or scrub a greasy pot.

Under the direction of Lt. Col. Selna E. Kaplan, the hospital's food service department sees that all the food is processed and prepared under quality conditions and that both regular and diet menus are established.

The department, which controls the flow of meals to patients and staff at the hospital, is comprised of the production and services branch and the diet therapy branch.

The production and services branch is concerned mainly with the preparation of food for the regular diet menus.

"Our biggest problem," said Capt. Annetta Hamil, chief of the branch, "is that of personnel. At the moment we are short, and that can sometimes run into a few headaches."

Employees in the hospital kitchen are all civilians, supervised by military specialists.

Captain Hamil, a graduate of University of Texas and and a native of Austin, noted that Martin Army's food service program does not operate under the regular field ration system of other mess halls. "We are granted a budget, based on forecasts of the number of meals we'll be required to serve," she said. "From this we purchase our food."

A vital part of the production and services branch is the supply section, where food materials come into the hospital and are stored until needed.

Busy among the high shelves of the supply room with a clip board in hand, SFC Robert Buckley, noncommissioned officer in charge of supply, said, "We have approximately 15,000 different items in here now and we must keep it stored like this at all time.

"We receive about $150,000 to buy food with," Buckley said.

The commissary does most of the purchasing for the food service. "Once in a while we may have to go to Columbus for special dietary foods," the sergeant said.

Story by Sp4 Paul Miller

According to Buckley, food service handles about 3,000 meals a day. Budget is determined by forecasting the annual patient load. "Sometimes we can figure pretty close from one year to the next what our loads will be," said Buckley.

The food service department, in addition to its many other activities, also maintains its own butcher shop, where meats are cut to order by trained butchers.

In a room to one side of the immaculate kitchen are the offices of the food service diet therapy branch under the direction of 1st Lt. Gail McMahon.

The branch is responsible for special diets that are needed by patients in the different wards of the hospital.

Five civilian and two military workers in the diet therapy section obtain diet orders from the doctors and prepare the food accordingly.

"We average about 61 different diets per meal," said SSgt. Jestine Pender.

Pender noted that the number of diets and types of diet vary with the season. He said, "In January we can expect a rash of URI (upper respiratory infection), which will mean that many of our diets will call for smooth, easily digested meals."

Pender said, however, that "with the closing of basic training units here, we expect URI cases to go down considerably."

Engineer Bridge Unit Goes Out Anytime Span Needed 'In A Day'

By SP5 Rich Brooks

"Anytime a bridge goes out and they need a bridge put in in a matter of a day or so . . . we put it up."

With that matter-of-fact statement, Platoon Sgt. Clayton W. Lowery, operations sergeant for the 586th Engineer Company (Float Bridge), explained the capability of his unit and expressed his faith in its men.

It is the type of confidence that emanates not from a blind faith, but from the unit constantly coming out on top of the situation.

The "situation" can and has ranged from every-day details such as post police and supplying drivers on a daily basis for the post transportation motor pool to river-crossing exercises and actual assistance in flood-ravaged areas.

Each assignment presents its own unique obstacles, but it is up to the men of the 586th to overcome them. In their primary mission they find the answer . . . they are the only float bridge unit in the Third Army.

As a company, they are unique in that they are more or less on their own. They are capable of complete ground mobility and maintain in excess of 120 vehicles that vary in size from jeeps to 5-ton bridge trucks.

Although they usually work in conjunction with other units, they have the ability to single-handedly construct a bridge large enough to span the Mississippi River.

But Capt. John D. Davis, commanding officer, explains that it is not likely his unit would be called on to undertake such a job since his company's main mission is to function as supervisors.

When arriving at a bridge site, the unit would normally be attached to a battalion which would then supply the manpower to erect the bridge.

According to 1st Sgt. Joseph E. Lynch, perhaps the most remarkable thing about the company is its lack of major personnel difficulties.

He states that the unit has been faced with a considerably lesser number of disciplinary problems than in units of comparable size.

His sentiments are echoed by Davis who says, "The thing that elates me more than anything is how well mannered, disciplined and capable the troops of this unit are."

Investigators Eye New Heart Pumps

Heart pumps to keep the heart going during open-heart surgery, developed by Army Materiel Command's Harry Diamond Laboratories, are being evaluated by 13 medical investigators at hospitals and universities across the country, as well as at the Army's Walter Reed Medical Center.

It is expected that the pump will receive wide commercial use — another double dividend for tax dollars.

Surgical Syringe Makes Friends

CU CHI, Republic of Vietnam (25th Inf. Div 10) — A Golden Dragon Medcap team is proving that it is not the pen but the surgical syringe that is mightier than the sword.

Capt. Howard Hanna Jr., surgeon for the 2nd Bn, 14th Infantry, 25th Infantry Division, and his band of medics and interpreters almost daily go into the hamlets of the unit's area of operations.

"Because of the nature of this war," Hanna said, "many of the residents of these hamlets are related to the enemy still out in the rice paddies."

"We could just let them alone. Let Hanoi worry about sending them their own doctors, but we can't. We're out to win these people over and to keep them on our side."

Each day a portion of the nearly 10,2000 residents of Trung Lap, the New Life village, come in droves to the impromptu aid station. Beneath the shade of large rubber trees, the Medcap team administers medicine, vitamins, cold pills and cough syrup.

The also clean and dress the various scraped knees or stubbed toes of the children.

"If we are unable to treat a patient on the spot an appointment can be made in Cu Chi or Saigon," Hanna said. "Of course, we supply the transportation."

Precautions are also taken to insure that the medicine does not fall into enemy hands. "However, it it ever did," an interpreter, Nguyen Loug, said, "it would most likely work to our advantage. The medicine being American and given to the people of South Vietnam might only make the VC decide to Chieu Hoi (surrender)!"

A number of services are also provided by the Dragon's Medcap team including such things as free haircuts.

This is just another "bennie," showing the Vietnamese people that the good guys are the ones wearing the OD green hats.

Recruits Use M-16 To Learn Marksmanship

A basic training company at Fort Benning is learning basic rifle marksmanship with the M-16 rifle.

But the Army has made Co. D, 6th Bn., 2nd Bde., a "two-rifle company. Though its members learn rifle marksmanship with the M-16, they are taught drill and ceremonies and bayonet using the M-14.

"The M-16 is a lot better," said Pvt. Charles S. Henck, an Army Reservist from Atlanta. "It's lighter, easier to fire, and has less kick."

Another Reservist from Atlanta, Pvt. Jerry J. Latimer, made one of the discoveries most important to the professional infantryman. "It's lighter to carry," he said.

Comany D, a test unit for a schedule that basic training companies here would have converted in with the planned arrival of 9,000 M-16s in January, travels to ranges on main post for its marksmanship training.

The unit has number one priority for transportation, and "the men are doing rather well," according to Capt. William E. Burley, company commander.

"It's inconvenient to have two weapons," he said," but the new schedule is a little easier for the trainee. Instead of a 3-week block of instruction with basic rifle marksmanship all week, it's spread over five weeks with 4-hour blocks of instruction."

When told his would be the test company, Burley said he was flattered. "We thought we must have done something good," he said. "It turned out we had the only arms room that would accomodate all the weapons."

The results of the test here will be passed on to other posts, where other trainees will be using the M-16.

"With the M-16," Henck said "I can get the same stock weld every time. I just put the charging handle against the end of my nose. I wouldn't do that with an M-14."

Commissary Said Open To Uniform

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Commissary patrons in uniform will not have to show identification cards in the future, according to Vice Adm. W. P. Mack, deputy assistant secretary of defense (Manpower and Reserve Affairs).

The change in commissary regulations was authorized by L. Mendel Rivers, chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, to provide uniformity in the regulations for both exchanges and commissaries."

The revised commissary procedures rely on the judgment of the "military commander concerned" to decide whether the uniform alone will suffice to identify authorized patrons.

In a letter to assistant secretaries of the military departments, Admiral Mack asked that military commanders be encouraged "to apply the liberalized identification procedures to the greatest extent possible while emphasizing . . . that this is being done to reflect trust and confidence . . . in those who wear the uniform of the United States Military Services."

Keeping Up With the Joneses

By Marian Jones

If you would like to see good entertainment in a slightly different vein, be at the Fine Arts Hall at Columbus College at 8 o'clock tonight for Columbus' first annual drama festival.

Five Columbus high schools have entered the competition. The plays they have chosen to present demand polished performers and all reports indicate that these young actors and actresses will meet the challenge.

The schools and their entries are: Pacelli, "The Love Philtre of Ikey Shoowstein;" Hardaway, the second act of "Inherit the Wind;" Baker, scene from "Blithe Spirit;" Jordan, "Occurrence at Owl Creek Bridge;" and Kendrick, excerpts from "Thurber Carnival."

Three judges will determine today the two best performances, and these will be presented again this evening in a bid for the top award. The public is invited. Admission cost is 50 cents to help cover the cost of the carnival.

A MAN FOR ALL SEASONS

The Fort Benning Dramatizers are preparing for their next presentation, Robert Bolt's "A Man for All Seasons." Tryouts are to be held on Jan. 5 and 6 at the post playhouse at 7 o'clock each night.

In addition, people talented in art and design, dress making, music, carpentry and interior lighting are asked to attend also.

For further information call 545-2992.

CHRISTMAS CONCERT

Did you know that Columbus has a symphony orchestra? Well, they do and its a good one so if you really want to get in the Christmas mood attend their Christmas concert Sunday at 3 p.m. in Columbus College's Fine Arts Hall.

NUTCRACKER SUITE

The Springer Theater Ballet Company will present "The Nutcracker Suite" beginning Thursday night at 8:30 at the Springer Theatre. This famous ballet will feature two performers who have appeared with the Ballet Russe and the Washington Ballet Company.

In addition to Thursday night's performance, the ballet will be presented on Friday and Saturday nights (Dec. 19th and 20th) at 8:30 with matinee performances on Saturday and Sunday (Dec. 20th and 21st) at 2:30 p.m. Admission is $2.50 for adults and $1.25 for students and enlisted personnel in uniform.

THE PLAY'S THE THING

Here's another use for that laminated card containing your name, rank and serial number commonly known as your ID card. With it you can buy not one but two tickets to performances at Atlanta's Alliance Theatre Company for the price of $2.

The offer is good on Wednesday and Thursday nights and for Saturday matinees (6 p.m.).

There are five plays left to be shown in the current series — "Much Ado About Nothing," by William Shakespeare, (Jan. 9-31); "We Bombed in New Haven," by Joseph Heller (Feb. 6-28); "Long Day's Journey Into Night," by Eugene O'Neill (March 5-26); "Charley's Aunt," by Brandon Thomas (April 3-25); and "The Devil's Disciple," by George Bernard Shaw (May 1-23).

Special Offer Made On Theater Tickets

FT. MCPHERSON, Ga. — The Alliance Theater in Atlanta has announced that reduced-rate tickets now are available to military personnel for all productions remaining in its 1969-70 season.

Under its military rate policy, the Alliance Theater is offering tickets to active duty personnel at $2 per ticket. The offer is good for performances on Wednesday and Thursday nights, and for Saturday matinees at 6 p.m.

Tickets may be purchased at the reduced price upon presentation of an ID card, not to exceed two tickets per individual purchaser.

Seats may be chosen from any price range (normally $3 to $8 per performance) subject to availability, on the day of the performance.

The theater box office is open from 10 a.m. until curtain time at the Atlanta Memorial Arts Center where the theater is located, Peachtree at 15th Street.

Productions remaining during the current season are "In the Matter of J. Robert Oppenheimer," by Heinar Kipphardt, running through Jan. 3 (except for a Christmas break, Dec. 22 through 27); "Much Ado About Nothing," by William Shakespeare, Jan. 9-31; "We Bombed in New Haven," by Joseph Heller, Feb. 6-28; "Long Day's Journey Into Night," by Eugene O'Neill, March 6-28; "Charley's Aunt," by Brandon Thomas, April 3-25; and "The Devil's Disciple," by George Bernard Shaw, May 1-23.

Soldier Hopes To Win World Boxing Title

WASHINGTON (ANF) — He stands five feet four inches tall, tips the scales at 135 pounds and fights like a demon.

He's Pfc Andy Hunt, Tulsa, Okla., a member of the 70th Engineer Battalion, now serving in the Republic of Vietnam.

Hunt's one big desire is to become the lightweight boxing champion of the world, and thus far his credential indiate the possibility.

The scrappy little fighter is undefeated in 27 amateur and 20 professional bouts. Of his 57 wins, 48 have been by the knockout (KO) route.

At 17, Hunt was Golden Gloves champion of Oklahoma, and by the time he turned 18 he had won 36 fights—all but five of these by KO.

Hunt has fought around the country at such famoust sport centers as Miami Beach's Convention Hall, San Francisco's Cow Palace, The Forum in Las Vagas and the granddaddy of them all, Madison Square Garden.

Before tradng his gloves for an Army M-16 rifle Hunt had 20 pro victories — 16 by knockout, four by decision.

As for his future career in the squared circle, Hunt said, "I haven't had the gloves on in several months. I'll be back in the ring soon, though, and I'll become the lightweight champion of the world."

Library No. 4 Reopens

The day of the dog-eared paperback Western and the thumb-soiled science fiction collection is over at the 197th Infantry Brigade's 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry. The men of the mechanized unit in Harmony Church have their library back and it's better than ever.

Located near battalion headquarters and the NCO Club, library No. 4 in Bldg. 3840 has been extensively refurbished, redecorated and restocked from top to bottom. The former class room-gym-theater now boasts an acoustical ceiling, florescent lighting, newpaint, brand new furnace and new furniture to accommodate the men of the battalion. In addition, the library has received 600 new record albums and almost 300 new books and is in the process of obtaining two new record players.

The five-room facility is staffed by Sp4 Michael Pitts of Headquarters Co. and PFC Robert Langford of Company C.

Airlines Add Flights to Atlanta, USO Adds Cookies

One of three airlines serving the Columbus area will expand services later this month to handle what has been termed a "mass haul-out of troops," from Fort Benning during the holidays.

"The Columbus-to-Atlanta air route has always been a bottleneck for troops traveling during the peak holiday season," said Taylor Owen, manager of the Joint Airlines Military Ticket Office here. "This expansion of flights on Dec. 19-20 should be a big help."

The airline has negotiated to provide eight additional flights during the evening of the 19th, when a large bulk of the military personnel are expected to return home for Christmas. The first flight will leave at 6:20 p.m. and the last is scheduled at 8:42 p.m.

The following morning there will be nine extra flights to Atlanta, with the first leaving at 8:20 a.m. and the last departing at 10:54 a.m.

Owen emphasized these flights were set up for military personnel only, and reservations can only be made at The Joint Airlines Military Ticket Office on post.

A representative of another airline serving Columbus said that additional flights to Columbus may be set up, but such action is uncertain at this point.

The station manager of the third airline serving the area noted that his company has no plans to expand service over the Christmas holidays. "We already have everything available out there now, and there simply is no room for expansion," he said.

Owen pointed out that military personnel must pay the full fare from noon until midnight on Fridays and from noon on Sunday until noon on Monday. The two-thirds military reserve will not be offered during these periods.

Both bus companies in Columbus have announced that there will be extra drivers and buses available for service to Atlanta and other major connecting cities during heavy travel periods.

For those who prefer riding the rails northward, there will be train service from Columbus to Atlanta each day at 8 a.m.

The USO of Atlanta has stepped in to make it easier on the homeward bound passing through Atlanta Municipal Airport.

Lloyd Hoon, executive director of the Atlanta USO, has arranged a bus shuttle service back and forth between the USO building at 151 Spring St., N.W. and Atlanta Airport. The service will go into effect Friday, Dec. 19. When it will stop has not yet been determined but Hoon hopes to have it in effect through New Years day or more—by which time most of the men will have returned.

Mr. Hoon will work through the Armed Forces Information Desk at Atlanta Airport to coordinate the leaving time of the buses. This will enable the soldier waiting for his flight to relax and take advantage of the USO facilities.

Besides the usual peanut butter and jelly sandwiches always available at the USO, there will be cookies and sweet rolls—plenty of them. And coffee, of course.

The ladies of the Peachtree Christian Church of Atlanta will provide approximately 20,000 home-made cookies and rolls during the shuttle operation.

Mr. Hoon expects approximately 20,000 soldiers enroute home to take advantage of the shuttle system and use the USO facilities while waiting for their flights to depart.

This service will, of course, mean longer hours of operation for USO and Mr. Hoon. Call it the Christmas spirit. Color it USO.

197th Brigade Sets New Record With 72 October Reenlistments

The 197th Infantry Brigade Reenlistment Office announced this past week that a record 72 men took the oath this past month, setting a new high that broke the existing record set in October.

In October, 70 men reenlisted within the brigade, breaking the old record which was set in January, 1967, when 53 men took the oath.

The new record represents 110.8 per cent of the assigned goal set for the reenlistment section of the brigade.

Master Sgt. Harold J. Woodward, of the reenlistment section credited this month's high rate to a combined effort on the part of brigade career counselors, the unit reenlistment NCOs and individual battalion and company commanders.

The 197th Support Battalion won the Brigade Commander's reenlistment trophy for the month of October by reenlisting 20 men.

Thirty-five of the new record reenlisted for their present duty assignments within the brigade.

Many others, however, elected to exercise their reassignment option and chose such places as Hawaii, Alaska, Vietnam, Korea, Thailand, and Germany.

Of the 72 men reenlisting, 11 chose the Republic of Vietnam for their next duty assignment.

First Lt. Charles B. Alvord, brigade reenlistment officer, said that he was "proud of the 197th Infantry Brigade's outstanding achievement in the reenlistment field.

"I feel strongly," he said, "in the belief that our modern Army is made up of professional soldiers that know their job and know it well. If we are to keep alive the esprit de corps and pride in service that we have in the United States Army today, we must build a professional Army out of professional soldiers."

Choirs Set Carol Show

The Children's Choir and the Officer Candidate Choir will combine to present the annual Christmas music program at 6 p.m. Sunday at the Sightseeing Road Chapel.

This year's program is based on the carol "O Christmas Tree, O Christmas Tree."

A brass choir of students from Baker and Columbus high schools will play carols and accompany the choirs.

The Children's Choir is under the direction of Mrs. Gloria Gargiulo. Theodore Gargiulo will direct the brass choir and accompany on the organ. Spt Timothy W. Fleming will direct the Officer Candidate Choir.

'Big Picture' Releases 4 New Television Films

To be released in January as part of the 19th "Big Picture" television season are four new 30-minute color films.

"The 82nd Airborne Division Story," "Testing at Aberdeen," "Combat Infantry Soldier" and "What Makes A Modern Army?" will be shown on more than 350 television stations.

"The 82nd Airborne Division Story" traces the history of the division and presents a close-up of training at Ft. Bragg, N.C. The 82nd, which now serves in Vietnam, became the first Army airborne division in 1942.

A detailed study of tank and artillery testing is presented in "Testing at Aberdeen."

Filmed on location near Saigon, "Combat Infantry Soldier" is a tribute to the men who bear the brunt of the fighting in Vietnam. It is a day-by-day account of the activities of a typical rifle company.

Mission, motivation, modernization and management are the themes around which "What Makes a Modern Army?" is built.

Skits, Songs Brighten Directorate Party

Fort Benning's theater group, the Dramatizers, recently put on a brief but witty and entertaining Christmas show at a holiday party for members of the Directorate of Personnel in the Benning Room of the Fort Benning Officers Club.

Done in a series of brief skits, the songs and humor went over well with the small but responsive audience. The first of the three skits parodied drill instruction classes. In this case, however, the students were Santa Clauses.

The second skit was a takeoff on the life-like doll craze. Portraying "Prunella" the latest in the series was Phoebe Caldwell was, to say the least, life-like. John Akers was the straight-faced MC in the skit.

The final blackout featured three festive couples singing a medley of Christmas songs. Highlights of the scene were John Akers and Diane Savoca singing "Winter Wonderland" and Lilly Kaufman soloing "The Christmas Song." Others in the scene were David Heckman, Donna Spence and Bob Meadows.

The show was directed by Bob Hanley of Special Services with music provided by Terry Moretti and Pafti Villaseñor. Roy Faires was the announcer.

Act Expands 3 Networks

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Three automatic communications systems serving Defense Department and military services are being expanded to meet increasing needs.

Expanded systems include the Automatic Voice Network (AUTOVON); Automatic Digital Network (AUTODIN); and Air Force Automatic Digital Weather Switch (AWDS).

AUTOVON was recently activated at four new switching centers in Europe and one in the Panama Canal Zone. The centers are part of a network that links more than one million telephones, teletype writers and high-speed data sets to 2,000 military bases.

The second expansion, AUTODIN, will eventually eliminate the present system of separate teletype and data card terminal equipment. When completed there will be 1,046 processing terminals around the world.

AWDS — the third system — is located at Carswell AFB, Tex., and is part of the Automatic Weather Network. Upon activation at the end of the year, this system will service Air Force bases around the world.

Post Talent to Dance in Ballet

Miss Andrea Vodehnal and Eugene Collins will dance in the Springer Ballet Theatre's production of "The Nutcracker." Both are well known at Fort Benning, having danced the same roles of the Sugar Plum Fairy and her Cavalier in Le Petit Ballet's production of "The Nutcracker" presented by the Officers Wives Club two years ago.

Miss Vodehnal, prima ballerina, formerly of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo and the National Ballet of Washington, D.C. and Eugene Collins, premier Danseur, formerly of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, the Metropolitan Opera Company, and the National Ballet of Washington, will dance in all performances.

The production will be held at the Springer Opera House in Columbus, Dec. 18, 19 and 20 at 8:30 p.m. and Dec. 20 and 21 at 2:30 p.m.

Terrell Paulk and Mrs. Sonja Manzi, both instructors for the Officers Wives Club School of Dance will dance two of the lead roles, the Snow King and Queen. Mrs. Manzi is the wife of Capt. Ralph Manzi who is currently in Vietnam.

Carrie Christie, daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Chester I. Christie, was selected to be "Clara," the little girl in the ballet who is given the Nutcracker, falls asleep and dreams that she travels to the Land of Snow.

There she is entertained by the Sugar Plum Fairy and her Cavalier, the Arabian dancers, Chinese dancers and many, many others that delight all who travel with her.

Miss Sandra Ortiz, daughter of SSgt. and Mrs. Cigiredo Ortiz, Miss Lachner Liles, daughter of Lt. Col. (Ret.) and Mrs. Paul V. Liles, Miss Linda Morris daughter of WO (ret.) and Mrs. William R. Morris, are former members of Le Petit Ballet of Fort Benning, and will dance with Miss Mary Jo Werp, daughter of Lt. Col. (ret.) and Mrs. Joseph Werp.

Miss Werp was soloist with the Auburn Civic Ballet Company of Auburn, Ala., before joining the Springer Company.

The Springer box office will be open from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. Dec. 11-17 and tickets will be available at the box office an hour before each performance.

All seats will be $2.50 for adults and $1.25 for students (through high school seniors) and enlisted personnel. All seats will be reserved. Reservations may be made by calling the Springer box office, 327-3682.

The first veteran's benefit on record in America is one enacted by the Pilgrims of Plymouth Colony in 1636.

2 Starlets Cheer Hospital Patients

Patients at Martin Army Hospital were surprised by a visit from two Hollywood starlets appearing in Columbus for the premiere of their film "Dracular, the Dirty Old Man."

The actresses, Miss Bunny Boyd and Adarainne, visited and autographed pictures for patients in the orthopedic and surgical wards. They were elated with the opportunity to participate in the goodwill tour; as Adarainne put it, "It makes me feel so good just to be here."

Following the visit, the girls were reflective. Speaking of the war in Vietnam, Miss Boyd observed, "They're over there fighting for us, the least we can do is show that we care."

The young ladies were accompanied on the tour by their producer, Whit Boyd, who also is Bunny's husband, their distributor, Jimmy James, and a theater representative, Miss Sandra Greenhall.

The tour guide, Miss Anne Moore, said that patients at Martin Army Hospital are visited by various church and civic groups on an average of once a week, and more often during Christmas holidays. Recent visitors include the 3rd Army Chorus, and "Miss Phenix City" and "Miss Columbus" contestants.

Tryouts Set For 'Seasons'

The Ft. Benning Dramatizers in cooperation with the entertainment section of Special Services will hold tryouts for their next production, Robert Bolt's "A Man for All Seasons," on Jan. 5 and 6.

The tryouts will be held at 7 p.m. each night in the post playhouse (bldg. 1237).

"Seasons" offers parts for 11 males and three females. People talented in art and design, dress making, music, carpentry and interior lighting also are asked to attend.

Grady Smith, who directed the Dramatizers' recent production of "Guys and Dolls," will direct the play.

They run a kind of U.S.O.

United Air Lines people try to make "U.S.O." stand for "United—Soonest Out."

They work for the airline with the world's largest jet fleet, providing more flights and more seats to more U.S. cities than any other airline. They're more likely to have a seat for you, sooner.

And they're interested in you. They're against "hurry and wait." They want to help you save precious leave-time.

They'll reserve a seat in advance, at only 3½ regular Coach fare, for any U.S. service man or woman. Or they'll board you standby for ½ fare. Just show up in uniform with a copy of your leave orders.

Check first with United, the airline with the big lift and the friendly people who want to give you a lift when you need it.

Keep up the good work, U.S.O., on behalf of the 3½ million men and women in our Armed Forces. U.S.O. is for someone you know a long way from home.

fly the friendly skies of United.

Racing Around

Local Chavaga Region Wins Slalom At Montgomery

By 2nd Lt. Jeff Martini

For the first and only time this season a factory Dodge has won at a Nascar superspeedway against the full Ford factory team.

Last Sunday, Texas International Speedway was the scene of the final Nascar race of the season and also Dodge's last chance to beat Ford. After a series of Ford mishaps and engine failures it looked as if Dodge was going to pull the Texas 500 out of the Ford bag.

Buddy Baker, leading with just 21 laps to the checker, ran (literally) into another Dodge (driven by James Hylton) and the resultant crumpling took him out of the race. The fantastic thing about the accident is the fact that it happened during a yellow caution flag at less than 70 miles per hour.

Baker was looking out the side of his car at his pit board and in front of 60,000 fans crunched his chances of a Texas 500 win out the window.

Bobby Isaac was found to be in first place after a scoring error was discovered. The expected challenge from Ford's Donnie Allison never occured because Allison had to pit twice to change shredding tires. The win was Isaac's first superspeedway victory but 17th overall for the season.

All time single season money and superspeedway winner Lee Roy Yarbrough finished tenth after having blown his engine while in 2nd place. Lee Roy finished the season with $188,605 in official Nascar earnings for '69. Not bad for only a year's work.

Isaac who won ten more races than Yarbrough this year "only" had $79,760 for his efforts, so you can see where the Nascar money goes — to the superspeedways.

On the local front Chavaga Region SCCA pulled off the upset win of the slaloming season when their entry of just four cars took eight out of 16 trophies at the Montgomery International Speedway Sunday.

The slalom sponsored by Central Alabama Region, SCCA drew entries from all over the southeast.

First place trophies were garnered by SSgt Joe White in Small Sedans in his (automatic??) Austin America; Sp 5 Paul Cohen, B Sports; in his Lotus Elan; and Web Sullivan, Medium Sedans, in a Ford Cortina.

Capt. Lyan Stover the fourth member in the small Chavaga entry took a 3rd in C Sports in his Volvo P 1800. All four together took the team trophy, beating Regional entries three times their size. A tip of the checkered hat to Chavaga for "blowing off" the big guys.

On The Scene: Trans-Am 1970 is really shaping up as big business. Chaparral cars (Jim Hall, etc.) had two representatives taking in the Texas 500 last week-end. They told Racing Around that two Chevy Camaros were sitting in their Midland, Texas garage being prepared for the '70 season. Tony DeLorenzo and Jerry Thompson will come off their ARRC success and jump into 1970 Camaros for Trans-Am.

Sam Posey and Autodynamics (Ray Caldwell) will campaign Dodge's 1970 Challengers which should make for an exciting season. As it stands now Ford (Bud Moore), Chevrolet (Jim Hall, De Lorenzo-Thompson), AMC (Roger Penske), Plymouth (Dan Gurney), and Dodge (Caldwell) will all be running hot and heavy.

Mario Andretti has signed for 1970 with STP racing. Two cars are promised—one an Indy engined road racer, the other a turbo-Ford Indy car.

Some of the drivers set to run at Sebring's Formula 'A' race on Dec. 28th are World Champ Jackie Stewart, Indy and USAC Champ Mario Andretti, Trans-Am Champ Mark Donohue as well as title contenders Tony Adamowicz and Sam Posey.

Nascar's racing "Richards", Petty and Brickhouse, both smiled and declined to comment on whether or not they were going to "make it" with Plymouth for 1970.

©1969 THE BAYONET AND S-3/OD, PUBLICATIONS

Though the peerless one Predicto, that is) was mired down with an average 8-5 mark, the slack was taken up by his cohorts. With only 12 games counting this week (Detroit-Baltimore ended in a tie), Sgt. Jim Fowler had a 18-2 mark while Pvt. Steve Zimmerman chipped in at 9-3. The final results to, who, some say, bears a remarkable resemblance to Sonny Jurgenson) staff were Bayonet staff 22-9 Comptroller (R & A Div) their fifth victory in eight 25-11.

This gives the Bayonet outings (with one tie.) staff this week is challenging Unit Readiness.

This week with the exception of the Liberty Bowl clash between Alabama and Colorado, Predicto (who claims that his pointing finger was sore last week) again ascends into the pro ranks to guess (guess??) the outcome of such difficult games as KC and Oakland, Baltimore and Dallas. The Bayonet

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

Curiously, the little gray squirrel and his slightly larger cousin, the fox squirrel, are the kings of Georgia's game animals. The squirrel can't put on any regal airs about his claim to the throne, however, because it is based on the number of hunters who occasionally find themselves hunting him when they don't have the chance or the time to bag something else, rather than because he is the most desired quarry.

Squirrels have been at the top of the hunter total list for several years. For instance, during the 1967-68 season, 141,963 squirrel hunters were estimated to have bagged 1,503,681 bushytails in 912,588 man-days of hunting.

Georgia is blessed with an abundance of squirrels in almost every part of the state in most years, making them readily available to hunters everywhere of all ages.

While squirrels also feed on leaves, buds, bark, tubers and roots, their preference for acorns, hickory nuts, beechnuts and pine mast is justifiably famous, and these are the type of trees hunters can expect to find them in during the fall and winter seasons. Both because they use the fleshy fruits of hardwood trees (known as mast) for food, and make their homes in the hollows of large old den trees or build nests in them, gray squirrels are creatures of the hardwood forests.

In addition to the hardwoods of a large river swamp, a narrow band of old den trees or hardwood mast trees can usually be found on the banks of most Georgia streams, even those that run directly through cultivated land, pastures, or pine plantations. This band of old, crooked, or leaning trees doesn't make good saw timber. These old trees frequently have large hollow openings caused by disease or age that make an excellent home for squirrels, along with wood ducks, raccoons and many species of song birds. Wildlife specialists recommend leaving at least six good mast trees for each acre of timber cut, along with at least one den tree for every twenty acres.

Squirrels are most plentiful in the southern part of the state. In the heavy swamps and thickest of the coastal counties, squirrel populations of one or more per acre aren't uncommon. Gray squirrels are abundant year after year regardless of hunting in all of the large South Georgia river swamps of the coastal plain, and are plentiful in the Middle Georgia Piedmont and Northwest Georgia in areas with good stands of hardwoods.

Only in the mountains of Northeast Georgia are squirrel populations subject to drastic variations from year to year, depending on the mast crop. While there are extensive hardwood forests on most of the high ridges and peaks, mast production is controlled by the weather. A late spring freeze can virtually wipe out the acorn crop for an entire season, which sometimes causes a spectacular migration of squirrels off the high mountains into the more temperate valleys, and almost always results in a low production of young squirrels during the next rearing season. But with following years of good mast production, squirrel hunting is good in the mountains.

The most common methods of squirrel hunting are quite similar to deer hunting. The most popular is to find a feeding area and quietly sit in a fairly concealed spot, waiting for squirrels to come out of their hiding places to feed. Patches of hardwoods or a fence row between the woods and a cornfield make good hunting areas. It is best after shooting a squirrel to wait to pick him up until the other squirrels in the tree or the nearby area are bagged or scared off. If many squirrels are in the area, they may resume moving within minutes of a shot. This system also works well at a large den tree, especially early in the morning when the squirrels are leaving or late in the evening when they rush back in.

Another system that requires more skill but less patience is stalking. This is accomplished by sneaking along Indian-fashion, a few steps at a time, cautiously looking and listening for signs of activity. Many times during the early season when squirrels are feeding in trees, the sound of acorns or small twigs being cut out of a tree and dropping to the ground will give away Mr. Bushytail's whereabouts. Later in the season when acrons and nuts have already fallen, rustlings in the leaves of the forest floor serve the same purpose. Stalking is most successful when leaves are still damp and quiet from a recent rain or heavy dew.

ATC Team Sports College Stars

By PFC Chester Hilburn

Swish . . . Swish . . . Basketballs are filling the air again as one of the nations top competitive sports gears itself for another exciting season.

Top-flight competition is promised on the hardwoods of Fort Benning as six brigade league teams began play Dec. 2.

Sporting two former college stars is the Training Center brigade level team which figures to be in the thick of the post-wide scramble.

Starting at center for ATC is Sp4 James P. Jones of Headquarters and Headquarters Company The 6'8" pivot man was a third round draft choice of the Houston Mavericks of the American Basketball Association last year before entering the Army.

In his sophomore year he was unanimous all-conference choice, he was also all-state his junior year for Beloit, which ranked 8th in the nation on defense.

During his senior year Jones led his team to the Midwest Conference championship netting an average of 23 points and 12 rebounds a game. Selected as his team's most valuable player, Jones once again was named unanamious All-Midwest Conference and All-state.

Jones says his greatest moment in basketball was in a game against conference foe Ripon College in 1968, when he scored 28 points and pulled down 17 rebounds in leading Beloit to a clinch of the conference crown.

Starting at a forward position for the ATC team will be PFC Joseph Saddler Jr., a 6'6" standout at Morehouse College, Atlanta, from 1965-69.

Scouted by numerous professional basketball teams, Saddler has been noted for his quickness, aggressiveness, and shooting accuracy.

POWERFUL ATC Saddler Blocks Jones

Offered various basketball scholarships on graduating from Howard High School, Chattanooga, Tenn., Saddler says he chose Morehouse because "It offered more of an academic challenge to me. I wanted to be prepared for competition in life as well as sports."

Team captain for Morehouse, Saddler led his team in scoring and rebounding during his sophomore, junior and senior years.

As a sophomore, he was all-city and most valuable team offensive player, scoring at a 22 point-a-game clip.

During his junior year, Saddler was selected on the all-city and all-conference teams, again, averaging 23 points and 14 rebounds a game.

Reaching his height his senior year, Saddler was 12th in the nation in scoring, blistering the baskets for a 26-point-a-game average. In a conference game against Alabama A&M he scored 32 points, grabbed off 22 rebounds and blocked 11 shots.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Saddler Sr., Chattanooga, Saddler received his B.A. degree in physical education in 1968.

Jones, the son of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Jones, Herea, Ky., received his B.A. degree in biology from Beloit in 1968.

Television, Arnold Palmer Change Golf

There are two reasons, says Frank Beard, that golf's new, young pros are hitting the ball harder and longer:

"Television and Arnold Palmer.

"These kids have grown up watching Palmer on television, watching him hit it out of sight. They try to do the same thing. They just tee it up and let it all out.

"And if they hit it out of bounds, well, they've got a sponsor and don't have to worry about the money and just go on to the next spot."

The leading names in the game agree that the muscular young men who are shouldering their way into the ranks of the touring pros hit the ball harder than their counterparts of an earlier generation.

But they don't agree on reasons. Gary Player and Jack Nicklaus cite a change in teaching methods. Billy Casper mentions the positioning of the ball. Palmer says it's a change from "a swinging game to a hitting game." Beard points to equipment.

But all agree on one aspect—size.

"They're bigger and there's more of them," Palmer said.

"Vitamins and nutrition play a part," Beard said. "People are just bigger and stronger than they were."

Nicklaus concurred.

"It's a simple fact that people are getting bigger. Athletes in all other sports, football, basketball, baseball, are bigger and stronger than ever. It's got to happen to golf, too.

"Some day some one is going to come along who is 6-foot-6 and weighs 260 pounds, an athlete, with strength and coordination and nerves and he's going to change the game.

"All the records we have set are going to go like that, pfffttt. "It's bound to happen. I don't say it's going to happen next year or the year after or in 10 years. I don't know when it's going to happen. But I know it is going to happen. It has to."

Nicklaus also talked about a change in teaching methods.

"There was the English method," he said, and brought his right arm back, the hand cocked near his ear. "But now it's out here," and he extended the arm out and away from the body.

"You've got a bigger arc. The bigger the arc, the more power, the harder you hit it."

"There's a different emphasis in this country," Player, the little South African said. "Everywhere else in the world you learn to hit the ball straight. In America you learn to hit it hard.

"The courses are built that way, too. In other countries, if you don't hit it straight you can get in trouble. In America there isn't that much premium on accuracy, you can recover from a bad shot."

Casper talked about the irons.

"They used to teach that the shorter the shaft on the club, the closer you played the ball to your right foot. Now they set up everything in the same position. You've got a wider swing on the short irons and hit them further."

"It used to be a game of swing," Palmer said. "Now it's a game of hit. They hit it longer because they do just that—they hit it, not swing."

"Equipment has improved," Beard said. "That has to be a factor, too.

"I passed my physical peak about three years ago, when I was 27. But I'm hitting it 10 yards longer now than I did then. It has to be the ball. It can't be me, I know that. It has to be that thing right there," he said, and pointed to a ball by his foot.

THE FORUM THE FORUM

By Marc Reiff

Does anyone remember a fellow with the initials O. J. who caused more than a few ripples when he graduated from college last fall? He was supposedly the greatest thing to hit the sports market since the invention of Wheaties. Leading Rusher in the AFL, Rookie of the Year, and All-Pro honors were to be superlatives before and after his name. Where has O. J. Simpson gone?

We can see him a couple times a week doing his thing on television commercials and picking up some nice change in the process but yardage he just is not getting. Buffalo was to be transformed into an instant winner this fall yet they have won only three games so far. The quarterback situation looked likely to improve and the running game was to become legendary. Yet Simpson has a monumentous 2.8 rushing average and the Heisman Trophy is starting to get a little tarnished.

To be fair, he did get a late start on the season, what with contract disputes and he was no doubt out of shape after attending all the banquets in his honor. And for a rookie so highly publicized, he is sixth in the league in rushing. Many players were irked by the press notice he had gotten and keyed excessively on him. It remains to be seen whether he will make a comeback next year and match his college records (not likely) although I suspect he will be much quieter and let his deeds speak for themselves.

The rumor is flying around the New York papers that Fran Tarkenton is getting fed up with the Giants and the boo birds who have been on him all season. The quarterback usually gets the blame when things are not going according to plan and Fran has shouldered it stoically, according to the papers.

Tarkenton has been chasing a football championship for eight years now and is no closer than when he started. At 29, he would be quitting in his prime — and leaving the Giants without an adequately-prepared replacement. Tarkenton is working on a single-season contract and might just walk away from the boos, bruises and responsibility of a thankless situation.

It does seem a shame that Columbus is not more interested in professional sports. The newspaper and television people make a big thing out of the high school and college teams around the area but what do we hear about the AFL or professional basketball. For a town that is trying to improve its image they are not very interested in becoming a big sports town. The baseball team here has trouble attracting peanut venders let alone paying customers even though they have a good team.

Allied Officers See Wrestling Matches

Powerful body slams, the thud of bodies meeting other bodies, faces groaning in contorted shapes — these are all marks of professional wrestling.

Forty-eight Allied officers observed all of these when they attended an exhibition at the arena in downtown Columbus. The matches included a tag-team bout as well as the regular singles. The Allies were introduced to the crowd shortly after their arrival and were also mentioned on a local television network, which carried the matches.

Maj. Jon C. Stillman, chief of the Allied Student Training Division, explained the sport to the Allies to help them understand what was occurring. Some of the local fans even volunteered to give the Allies a few tips on the matches and about championship matches coming up.

On the trip back to Fort Benning following the matches, many arguments could be heard throughout the bus as to whether the matches were real or faked.

Capt. Mekonnen Seyum of Ethiopia and a student in Infantry Officer Advanced Course, Class 2-70, commented, "When you see the wrestling matches on television, it looks very real. I discovered though, that when you see it live it appears to be fake. Since this was the first time I had seen a live wrestling match, I had expected it to be very real, so I was quite disappointed.

"I found that it was at times more interesting to watch the people than the match. Some of the people really get excited during the matches," concluded Seyum.

Whether the matches are real or only excellent jobs of play-acting, the fact remains that the Fort Benning Allied students were exposed to a very "real" American pastime.

Rod and Gun Club

productive, is using a dog to locate and tree the squirrels. One can cover a much greater area more quickly. The species of dog used for squirrel hunting doesn't seem to matter much. A mixed breed mongrel dog frequently makes an outstanding squirrel dog. The dog makes quick work of a squirrel without the need for a shot that might ruin the meat.

Almost any gauge and choke of shotgun loaded with number six to four shots is suitable for squirrels, although full choke barrels are popular with veteran squirrel hunters for long shots up to fifty yards. But the most sporting weapon for squirrel hunting is the common .22 caliber rifle. A .22 automatic rifle with a low power telescope mounted on it for squirrel hunting can make even a jaded adult feel like a child with a new toy. Of course, he isn't allowed to brag about any squirrels that require more than one shot to drop. Preferably they should be hit just under the ear, so as not to ruin the meat.

Clothing for squirrel hunting should be dark colored. Camouflage clothing is excellent. Boots are a good idea on damp days. The best time for squirrel hunting is early in the morning on cold, crisp days, or late in the warmer afternoon, although some squirrel movement continues throughout the entire day. If the wind is blowing, don't expect good squirrel hunting; possibly because the wind makes it difficult for them to hear a predator, squirrels lie close to their dens or nests as much as possible.

Rifles Allowed With Affidavit

WASHINGTON (AFPS) Internal Revenue Service now allows owners of firearms and ammunition to bring them back to the United States using only an affidavit as proof that the firearms or ammunition were previously taken out.

Prior to this change, a certificate from the individual's commanding officer was required.

The statement, sworn to before a United States consular, visa officer or other federal officer authorized to administer oaths, must indicate that the weaponry is the same as that which was taken out of the United States.

Firearms or ammunition purchased from a licensed United States firearms dealer or ordered through an authorized overseas rod and gun club can also be brought into the U.S.

Brigade Readies For Post Shoot

Last week the 197th Infantry Brigade held a competition for small bore rifle and pistols to decide the team the 197th will field for the upcoming post championship matches. Two teams will be fielded from the 197th.

The number one rifle team, the 2nd Bn., 10th Artillery Red Team will have as coach Lt. Col. William Berry and as assistant coaches, Maj. Robert Morrison and Maj. John Krisco. The members of the team are, Capt. Francis Komornik, Capt. James Krilich, Capt. Chester Dubberly, Capt. Gene Fong, Capt. Michael Foley, and Lt. Marks.

The number two team which will also compete is made up of members of the 1st Battalion 58th Infantry. Individual honors in the competition went to Capt. Krilich with second and third place going to Capt. Komornik and Lt. Marks.

THE Sports COMPUTER

by Bud Goode

Some football teams are efficient as hawks in flight. Others sweat to score, moving from goal to midfield in fits and starts, hitting and missing on half their horsepower.

Dallas, Minnesota, and Los Angeles in the NFL, and Oakland, and surprising Cincinnati in the AFL, are the most efficient teams on offense according to the Sports Computer. Moving their players from goal to goal with speed and precision, they are smooth as the 150 mph Tokyo Flyer.

But the Chicago Bears and San Francisco Forty-niners in the NFL, and the Boston Patriots and Miami Dolphins in the AFL are the least efficient. They grunt for every point.

How do we measure football efficiency? One way is to find out how easy a team scores—how many points do they earn per play.

To measure points per play the Sports Computer poured the season statistics into our Univac sports analyzer with these results:

NFL:
		San Francisco	.19
		Chicago	.16
Dallas	.48
Minnesota	.47
Cleveland	.46	AFL:
Los Angeles	.44
Washington	.40	Oakland	.42
Philadelphia	.37	Cincinnati	.43
Baltimore	.35	Denver	.42
Green Bay	.32	Kansas City	.39
Atlanta	.31	New York	.37
Pittsburgh	.31	Buffalo	.33
St. Louis	.29	San Diego	.30
New Orleans	.27	Houston	.27
New York	.26	Miami	.25
Detroit	.25	Boston	.23

At the end of the year if you look at this points per play statistic you will find that it is a more reliable measure of a team's standing than offensive points alone.

And for the first weeks of the season the stats tell an interesting story: Cincinnati and Denver are the offensive surprises in the AFL. If Greg Cook returns soon to the Bengals, a new power may be born in the Western Division.

As for the NFL, there is plenty of competition at the top. One serious injury or a couple of big plays can throw the divisional championships up for grabs.

Longhorns Still First In AP Poll

Texas' courageous comeback victory over Arkansas has assured the Longhorns of a firm hold on the top spot in major college football — at least until their Cotton Bowl date with Notre Dame.

The Longhorns, who battled from 14 points down in the final quarter last Saturday to nip the then second-ranked Razorbacks 15-14, remained entrenched atop the national rankings Monday in the Associated Press' last regular season poll.

A post season ballot, following the Jan. 1 bowl games, will determine the national champion, the Razorbacks' heart-breaking loss, their first of the season, cost them the No. 2 position, Penn State moving up from the third spot one week after completing an unbeaten season.

Texas, 10-0 received 22 of 30 first place votes cast by a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters. Penn State, which picked up five first, trailed the Longhorns 580-492 in points while Arkansas had 426.

Fourth-ranked Ohio State, No. 5 Southern California and No. 7 Michigan divided the other three first place votes as the remainder of the Top Ten stayed the same as a week ago. Missouri held sixth, Louisiana State eight, Notre Dame, ninth and UCLA 10th.

Penn State, 10-0 this season and unbeaten in 29 consecutive games, puts its streak on the line against Missouri, 9-1, in the Orange Bowl; Arkansas, 9-1, meets No. 13 Mississippi, 7-3, in the Sugar Bowl and Michigan, 8-2, takes on Southern Cal, 9-0-1, in the Rose Bowl.

There were position changes in the Second Ten, although all the teams had finished their regular schedule a week or more before the poll. Tennessee and Auburn, 12th and 11th, respectively, last week, switched places. So did Mississippi and Nebraska, Nos. 14 and 13 last week.

Florida went from 18 to 15th and Stanford from 17th to 16th. Purdue and Houston, 15th and 19th last week, tied for 17. West Virginia dropped from 16th to 18th and unbeaten, untied Toledo held 20th.

Colorado was the only other school to receive votes.

The Top Twenty, with first place votes in parentheses, season record and total points (points awarded on first 15 places based on 20-18-16-14-12-10-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1):

1.	Texas (22)	10-0	580
2.	Penn State (5)	10-0	492
3.	Arkansas	9-1	426
4.	Ohio State (3)	8-1	374
5.	Southern California (1)	9-0-1	348
6.	Missouri	9-1	338
7.	Michigan (1)	8-2	317
8.	Louisiana State	9-1	251
9.	Notre Dame	8-1-1	237
10.	UCLA	8-1-1	197
11.	Tennessee	9-1	152
12.	Auburn	8-2	151
13.	Mississippi	7-3	95
14.	Nebraska	8-2	82
15.	Florida	8-1-1	66
16.	Stanford	7-3-1	48
17.	Purdue	8-2	43
18.	Houston	8-2	34
19.	West Virginia	9-1	31
20.	Toledo	10-0	14

Also receiving votes: Colorado.

Sports Demand Discipline To Cope

By Pvt. John Waring

"Wrestling's an individual sport; you win or lose on your own talents and determination. It's also a great preparation for Ranger training where you learn how far you can push yourself," says 2nd Lt. Michael J. Nordotti Jr., a 1969 West Point graduate.

Nordotti draws this parallel from experience. At the Point he was on the mats for three years as a varsity wrestler. After graduation he attended the Airborne and Ranger schools here. Presently he is completing the Infantry Officer Basic Course with the 28th Co., 2nd Stu. Bn., TSB.

Nordotti was an All-American in 1968 ranked sixth in the nation in collegiate wrestling. That year he posted a 10-0 record in dual competition. In the Eastern Collegiate finals he took third competing against the top wrestlers from Navy, Lehigh, Penn State and Maryland. In his senior year at the academy Nordotti tasted defeat only once and repeated his third place finish in the eastern finals.

Discipline is the big factor in wrestling and is the important contribution this sport brings to a student's education, according to Nordotti. The collegiate wrestling season is long, stretching from September to the end of March. It demands constant determination and discipline to compete on the mats and maintain a good academic standing. Nordotti excelled in both.

"I wrestled in the 160-lb. class which meant I often had to trim my weight before the season and then maintain it," said Nordotti, whose present 200 pounds are spread evenly over his six foot frame. "Mentally and physically I was prepared to cope with the meager rations during certain phases of Ranger training. That's what discipline teaches you."

Nordotti's next assignment is with the 5th Mechanized Co., Fort Carson, Col. Next July he is slated for Vietnam duty with the 1st Cavalry Division.

Flag Football Tourney Winners Receive Trophies

This year's winner, by virtue of an 8-6 overtime victory was the 3rd Ranger Company (TSB). The team was coached by Maj. Mike Chensey.

The runner-up team was the 52d Personnel Company (CTC). They are coached by SSgt. Albert Davis.

In addition to the team trohies, both the post champions and the runners-up received individual trophies.

DOUBLE HONORS

Improved Detector Developed To Locate Non-Metallic Mines

FT. BELVOIR, Va. (ANF) — An improved non-metallic mine detector has been developed by the Electrical Equipment Branch, U.S. Army Mobility Equipment Research and Development Center.

Called the ANPRS-7, the new model is more accurate in detecting anti-vehicle and anti-personnel mines than the current model. Moreover, it is lighter, longer lasting, safer and more easily maintained.

By using solid state components and printed circuitry, the new model weighs only nine pounds as compared to the current, 18-pound model.

The electronic package of the ANPRS-7 is smaller than that of the current model and can be attached to the detector's handle or the operator's belt. The electronic pack of the current model is worn on the operator's back.

Battery powered, the new detector can operate 25 hours, whereas the current model's operating life is eight hours.

Improved operator safety is provided by a low voltage alarm which indicates faulty operation.

Maintenance requirements have been reduced by replaceable modules and an easily-removed oscillator assembly. An external plug adapter enables operation in low temperatures.

The detector is operated by sweeping the search head slowly over the ground. If a mine is detected, an audible signal is produced.

Some 180,000 widows will receive larger checks from the VA in January, 1970, under a law signed in October, 1969.

Captain's Widow Accepts Posthumous Award

The captain's widow, Mrs. Linda S. Roe, 901 Joy Road, Columbus, accepted the awards, which also included the Bronze Star Medal, 21 awards of the Air Medal and the Purple Heart. They were presented by Col. Talton W. Long, deputy post commander.

The citation for the Distinguished Flying Cross read, in part, "Captain Roe distinguished himself by exceptionally valorous actions while serving as pilot of an unarmed helicopter used as a command and control ship for a search and destroy mission.

"The operation took place in an area 10 miles east of Moc Hoa. After reaching the area to be reconnoitered, he descended to a lower altitude in order to get a closer view," the citation said.

It added, "Heavy enemy concentration was known to be in the area. Finding it necessary to get a better look, he descended to a level just above the area in question. He fearlessly maneuvered his aircraft to avoid any enemy fire, but his ship set off a booby trapped bomb which resulted in his death," it said.

The Bronze Star Medal was awarded to Captain Roe for "untiring efforts and professional ability through which he consistently obtained outstanding results."

The 21 awards of the Air Medal were presented to Captain Roe for "meritorious achievement while participating in sustained aerial flight in support of combat ground forces of the Republic of Vietnam."

The Purple Heart was awarded the captain for wounds which he received resulting in his death July 24, 1969.

Soldier Says Khrushchev Was His WW II Leader

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — You think you have it bad? Specialist 6 John Jacobs, an interrogator with the 82nd Airborne Division's military intelligence detachment at Fort Bragg, N. C., once had Nikita Khruschev as a commanding officer — and later, while still a teenager, spent months in Germany's infamous Buchenwald and Dachau concentration camps during World War II.

In revealing his boyhood recently, Jacobs said he was born in the Ukraine. "My father had been an Imperial Guard in Petrograd (Leningrad) under Czar Nicholas II until the revolution began in 1917. When he came home people knew he had been a White Cossack and he had to evacuate our family. He took us to Poland."

In 1938, Jacobs went back to the Ukraine to live with his grandparents as the German occupation of Poland neared and World War II began.

As the Nazis spilled into the Ukraine and began taking young men to Germany as a labor force, Jacobs and six other boys between 16 and 18 went into the mountains to avoid being conscripted. He was then 16.

"I was a commander of a local and Nikita Khrushchev was my brigade commander. We conversed many times on strategy," he said. "And Khrushchev's code name at that time was 'Dedoschka,' meaning grandfather."

From Dachau, Jacobs migrated to France. After working there two years, he heard about the United States offering citizenship to displaced persons in Germany who would agree to serve honorably in the U. S. Army for five years.

Brigade Donates To Scout-A-Pal

By Betty J. Kemper

Trainees of Co. D, 5th Bn., 1st Training Bde. at The Training Center, took a break to meet Television Channel 9's popular "Miss Patsy" and view the presentation of a check for more than $1,000 to aid her in her annual Scout-A-Pal Program.

The Christmas spirit of giving was exemplified by trainees, noncommissioned officers and officers of the 1st Training Brigade, who again reached just a little deeper into their pockets and offered assistance to those less fortunate than they.

Each year prior to Christmas, "Miss Patsy" conducts a series of parties on "The Patsy Avery Show," for children whose names are provided by the various school principals.

The brigade's contribution will assure more than 100 needy children will have a toy and clothing this Christmas, according to Chaplain (Capt.) Benjamin Bradley, who coordinated the project.

In an impromptu speech to the trainees, "Miss Patsy" remarked, "I have a special regard for the men of the 1st Training Brigade. They were the first people from Fort Benning to contribute to the project — not 'project'; it's a very personal thing to me — and since then, other units have asked to participate."

The program was initiated by former brigade commander, Col. Ben Ward, in 1966 and was continued by his successor, Col. Samuel C. Smith. For the second consecutive year, Col. Richard M. Maeder, brigade commander, has participated.

"I am delighted to have the opportunity to participate in such a worthwhile project," he said. "It is always a pleasure to be involved with children at Christmas time. The wonderful thing about this program is that children receive things they need and it is people like the men of the 1st Brigade who help to make this possible."

Army Tests Drug Effect On Humans

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — For the first time since the Army radiation protection program began 10 years ago, an anti-radiation drug has been tested for side effects in human volunteers.

Called Compound 638, the drug was tested this year in humans and its toxicity directly corresponded with that seen in large animals at the same dose level, according to the radiobiology research branch of the Army Medical Research and Development Command in Washington, D. C.

When an 11-gram daily dose was given orally to volunteers, the drug was essentially nontoxic, but that dosage is not considered to be protective against the harmful effects of ionizing radiation. The explosion of a nuclear weapon can spread such radiation over wide areas.

Other drugs will be tested this year on volunteers. Researchers are hopeful that another, more effective drug called Compound 2721 will be easily tolerated in humans. Scientists expect to test the drug in radiation-protective doses — or what they think to be radiation-protective, since humans are not subjected to harmful ionizing radiation during testing.

VA Expects 1.24 Million Trainees In School Year

About 1,242,000 beneficiaries will participate in the Veterans Administration's training programs this school year.

The VA said these programs include 24,000 disabled veterans in rehabilitative training, 1,158,000 veterans and servicemen receiving educational assistance under the GI Bill, and 60,200 dependents of deceased and disabled veterans.

The number of persons participating in education and training programs is expected to increase by 113,000 to 1,355,000 during 1971.

According to the VA, the number of veterans and servicemen seeking educational assistance is related mainly to the size of the armed forces and the yearly rate of discharge. Veterans who served after Jan. 31, 1955, are another factor.

Another reason for the rise in the number of trainees is the wide publicity being given the programs through U. S. Veterans Assistance Centers, the VA's "Outreach Program," and hospital visitations.

The VA urges Vietnam veterans and others who have served since Jan. 31, 1955, to contact their nearest VA office for further information on educational benefits.

Students Hear S. L. A. Marshall At Graduation

General Marshall addressed the class at the 1 p.m. graduation ceremonies in Marshall Auditorium.

At present, General Marshall has five books on the market. Two of them, "Ambush" and "Battles in the Monsoon" are on Republic of Vietnam campaigns. He is presently preparing for release a third, entitled "Bamboo Fields" which is about the 1966 campaign near Tuy Hoa.

Lieutenant Marshall is a 1968 graduate of the University of Virginia in Charlottesville.

Private Blows His Horn On Way to Join A Band

By Spc John Klopf

"TOOT"
Pickup Plays

To most men entering the Army, what the future holds in store is a mystery. However, Pvt. George E. Pickup, now in his second week of basic combat training with Co. A, 10th Bn, 1st Bde., knows where he's heading: To the Continental Army Command (CONARC) band at Fort Monroe, Va.

Pickup is a former professional trumpeter who attended DePauw University in Greencastle, Ind., and has played with the St. Petersburg Symphony Orchestra, St. Petersburg, Fla.

Electing to enlist for an assignment in a large Army band, Pickup auditioned at Hunter Army Air Base, Savannah, Ga., and Fort McPherson, Ga., before having his audition scores sent to CONARC at Fort Monroe, Va. He has been pre-assigned to go there after basic.

The 19-year-old trainee was on a full music scholarship at DePauw, and has been playing the trumpet since he was 11-years-old. Now he plays the simple strains of reveille and taps in his company formations every morning and evening.

"If it wasn't for this I wouldn't be able to play at all," said Pickup. "I didn't bring my trumpet from home, and the company lets me use this bugle they had in supply. The only time I have to play is information, but any chance I get is a chance to improve."

Company A's 'bugler' will doubtless get many chances to improve before his training ends. The shrill notes of a cavalry charge (courtesy of Private Pickup) precede his company's motto before they take their seats at every class, and anytime he hears a drill sergeant shout "Toot" he knows it's time for him to blow.

"After the Army, I'd like to continue playing professionally," said Pickup. "I'll try to get into studio or free lance work, so I can play as many different styles of music as possible."

Monitor Called 'Breakthrough' For Medicine

Development of a portable lightweight heart monitor by the Army Material Command's Harry Diamond Laboratories represents a major medical breakthrough.

Sounding an alarm when a patient's heart malfunctions, while avoiding false alarms, the monitor costs one-tenth of a conventional apparatus, and is more accurate and easier to operate.

It is about 1-50th the size of conventional units. Battery operated, it can thus be used in the field by medical soldiers and by civilian doctors making house calls.

The device reads a heart's electrical signals and sounds a loud two-second tone alarm every 10 seconds if the heart is beating too fast, too slow, is fibrillating (quivering), or has stopped.

It was developed by AMC for the Army Surgeon General.

Digest Plays Cartoonists In January

CAMERON STATION, Va. — A soldier's life encompasses all the frailities of mankind. It also embraces all the rich qualities that make men proud that they are, or were, part of the military world.

January's ARMY DIGEST will take you back through the years with a satirical look at Army life in its "Cartoons Lighten the Load." Relive World War II with Bill Mauldin's "Willie and Joe," as the soldier's magazine humorously explores Army life of the early '40s.

Mauldin's cartoons capture the lighter side of Army life, and are paired with recent combat photographs to parallel conditions of yesteryear with those of today. Army cartoonist SFC Bill Dolan's pen rounds out the feature with his famous characters of "Up Country" based on his assignments to Vietnam.

Another highlight in the January issue of the DIGEST is Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird's summary of Vietnamization. In this concise article, Mr. Laird explains what has been and remains to be done to accomplish the First World's goals in Vietnam.

CHRISTMAS A LITTLE BRIGHTER FOR SOME
Donations Loaded on Truck by SFC George Holt of Infantry Board

Infantry Board Members Collect Items For Project Save-A-Toy

By Rex Ellis

Santa's helpers are working overtime these days in preparation for the expected arrival of the long white bearded and jolly old gentleman on Christmas Eve.

At the U. S. Army Infantry Board the helpers have managed to collect a truck load of toys for the Save-A-Toy campaign and the drive continues to get more repairable toys to contribute to the worthy cause.

SFC George Holt, the operations sergeant of the small arms test division at the Infantry Board, started the Save-A-Toy drive a month ago at the Infantry material test board to obtain toys for needy children.

His drive has been quite successful. He recently loaded a 1½ ton truck with toys collected at the test board for the children.

The repairable toys are delivered to Santa's workshops at the mortar committee where they are repaired and painted and made "just-like-new."

With the assistance of some thoughtful contributor, a little repairing and paint by the mortar committee, and a letter from Santa Claus with directions as to where the toys are to be delivered, some children of needy families of the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning area will have a Merry Christmas.

Holt advised members of the Infantry Board that they have until Dec. 13 to complete the drive for toys for the needy children.

He forecast that another truck load of toys would be collected for Santa's workshop by the test board's members.

The Save-A-Toy campaign is an annual drive initiated by SFC Christ Lobere of the mortar committee in the early 1950s. Although the drive is not new, it never fails to elicit large contributions of toys for its worthy cause.

Lobere has since retired but the good works which he started have continued to thrill the hearts of many youngsters.

Talks Here Focus On Support Ideas

Discussions on mutual areas of support between the U.S. Army Infantry School and the U. S. Army Aviation School were held during a visit of Col. Bill G. Smith, assistant commandant of the school at Fort Rucker, Ala.

Included on Colonel Smith's itinerary was an examination and discussion by Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant, and key educators of the Infantry School of items covered in the U. S. Army Aviation fact sheet.

While at the post, Smith toured Infantry Hall and observed an airmobile exercise.

Troop Command Swears In 29 During Career Day Ceremonies

By Spt Steve March

A total of 26 men of the Infantry Center Troop Command were reenlisted during a ceremony outside the command's headquarters as part of Army Career Day activities at Fort Benning.

After administering the oath of enlistment, Col. Charles H. Reidenbaugh, commanding officer, spoke briefly and mentioned that the group represented "a 135 year enlistment."

He then introduced Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott, commanding general, who said, "On behalf of the Army I thank you, and as a soldier, I congratulate you."

Later, three more men from CTC were reenlisted. This brought the total number of reenlistments in the command to 29 under the Army Career Day program.

Army Career Day was held to set aside a specific period in which to place maximum emphasis on retaining soldiers for the service, said SFC Wayne E. Eicher, the senior career counselor for CTC.

Eicher said that in previous years, this program was held on a post level, but that the major commands this year held their own career days during the period from Dec. 2-10. This, in effect, introduced competition among the various commands, he said.

NCOC Earns Three Titles

Gary V. Grayhill managed a rare feat when he was graduated from Infantry Noncommissioned Officer Candidate School No. 370 in graduation exercises at Marshall Auditorium.

Grayhill is a member of both NCOC and the Honor Graduate Association.

Grayhill, in competition with 173 other members of the class, was named distinguished academic and leadership graduate of the 105th Co., 10th Student Bn., The Candidate Bde.

For this achievement he received a letter of commendation from Brig. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, assistant commandant of the Infantry School, as well as an Association of the United States Army (AUSA) plaque, a "Follow Me" plaque, and a "Follow Me" statuette. He was promoted to staff sergeant.

SAID BEST

Selected Soldier of the Month for December by The Candidate Brigade is Spt Alston H. Killen, 104th Co., 10th Stu. Bn. Killen, a native of Macon, Ga., holds a bachelor of arts degree in journalism from the University of Georgia. He was selected as the brigade's top soldier for his military knowledge, bearing and dress.

SUBJECT: Accident Prevention -- Christmas-New Year Holiday Season

All Fort Benning Personnel

1. Each year the accident rate in the United States climbs to its highest peak during the Christmas-New Year holiday season. Instead of great joy normally associated with this period, for many it becomes a time filled with great loneliness and despair. This unnecessary grief is usually caused by an accident which results in death or injury to a loved one or close friend.

2. Every commander is concerned about the accident problem during the Christmas-New Year holiday. I am particularly concerned about the lasting impact accidents may have on your family. Only YOU can provide the moderation and self-restraint that are necessary to insure you are safe, whether you are in your home, driving, working, hunting, or walking during the holiday period. As your commander, I am concerned because there's a job to be done and your help is needed.

3. This is the season when we should think of others, so I ask each of you to give to others that great gift called CONCERN. Show concern by doing your part to make the holiday season safer -- hence happier for your family, your friends, and for all others.

Infantry Brigade Hosts 28 Applicants for Point

By Spc Robert Merkin

The 197th Infantry Brigade has put into high gear its part of the machinery for sending young men to the United States Military Academy by playing host to 28 academy nominees as they take examinations to qualify for the historic school.

The nominees — 28 high school students from Georgia, Alabama and Florida, and a warrant officer candidate from Fort Rucker, Ala. — arrived during the weekend and were lodged in the brigade's headquarters company barracks on Kelley Hill.

A committee of brigade members and West Point men supervised the nominees during their two days of testing, which consisted of a physical aptitude examination at the Kelley Hill field house and medical tests at Martin Army Hospital.

Captain Michael Ellison, headquarters company commander and 2nd Lt. James W. Beasley, assisted by a team of selected 197th NCOs, were on hand to answer the nominees' questions about the regular Army while Col. Ralph Pucket, commander of West Point's First Regiment, and Cadet Captain Herbert Roberts gave the nominees their first insight into academy life.

First Classman Roberts, son of Army CSM Herbert Roberts, killed while serving with the 4th Inf. Div. in the Republic of Vietnam, explained some of the ways in which a young man can reach West Point.

"The most normal way," the Columbus, Ga., native said, was through congressional appointments in which U. S. representatives and senators nominate men in their district to the academy.

An additional number of openings are available through nationwide competitions, and other slots, called Presidential appointments, are held open for sons of military personnel killed in wartime service.

There is also a program through which qualified enlisted Army active duty men can reach West Point as well as a number of positions for those in Reserve military components.

The brigade will continue to host groups of West Point bound nominees two days a month through March.

B. L. Parker In Top Slot Of 10th Bn.

In the training center's last battalion change of command, Parker received the battalion standard at ceremonies held at 10th Bn. headquarters. Col. Richard H. Maeder, Brigade commander, conducted the ceremony between Parker and Lt. Col. Richard N. Thrower.

Thrower, who has been re-assigned to main post, had commanded the battalion one year.

Parker started his career at Fort Benning in 1945, when he graduated from OCS. Since then he has returned to Fort Benning to serve with the 3rd Inf. Div. from July, 1954, to September, 1956, but has spent most of his career in overseas assignments, including tours in Japan, Germany, France, Korea and the Republic of Vietnam.

Parker has been with the training center since July of this year. He and his wife, Mary, live on post with their daughter, Brenda, 16.

Leadership Aired By Psychologist

By PFC Richard Salentine

In dealing with the theory of leadership as it applies to the Army, Dr. Fred E. Fiedler, professor of psychology, University of Washington, said that there were two problems involved: "How does one get to be a leader?" and "How does one get to be an effective leader?"

Speaking in Marshall Auditorium, Dr. Fiedler told members of five Infantry Officer Advance Course classes that it was the question of effective leadership which most concerned the Army. He said, "Everyone is a potential leader, but the effective leader is measured by the performance of his group."

Describing leadership as a relationship between people and an exercise in power and influence, Dr. Fiedler said that although different situations might require different types of leadership, there are three points which determine whether or not a given situation turns out favorably or unfavorably.

These points are:

The leader's position of power and influence. (Obviously, a brigadier general has much more power and influence than a private first class.)

Leader-member relationship. (If the leader is well liked by his subordinates he will have much greater chance of success.)

The structure of the task at hand. (If every member is sure of what to do and when to do it, the chances of success are again much greater.)

Citing an example of petty officers from the Belgian navy, Dr. Fiedler said that although they were in a position of power and the structure of the task was fairly well known, the leader-member relationship broke down because of language barriers.

This was because approximately one-half of the Belgian people speak French and the other half speaks Dutch.

He said, thus it appears that the relationship between the leader and his members may be the most important ingredient for success.

Dr. Fiedler said, "Your family may owe 51 per cent of the stock, but if you're the chairman of the board, you still have to work with the other 49 per cent."

204 Finish IOBC Here

Heading the list of graduates were 2nd Lt. Bryce J. Robinson III, the distinguished graduate and 2nd Lts. Brian W. Kong, Wilfrid L. Cameron, Joseph L. Olson and Daniel A. Koski the honor graduates.

Recipient of the Commandant's Leadership Award was 1st Lt. Gordon N. Spies.

Guest speaker for the graduation was Col. Alexander H. Hunt, chief staff group, brigade and battalion operations department of the Infantry School.

ROTC LEADERSHIP AWARD

MERRY CHRISTMAS

With Clair Boone Taber, a junior at the University of Georgia, posing as Santa Claus, it has to be a Merry Christmas. She is the 20-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Taber of Columbus, Ga. Miss Taber likes to water ski, ride horses, dance and is interested in drama. The members of The Bayonet staff and the Infantry Center's Information Office join her in extending Season's Greetings. ATC CG Moves To Corps Post On February 27

Brigadier Gen. Oscar E. Davis, commander of the Army Training Center here since Nov. 26, 1968, will report Feb. 27 to Ft. Bragg, N. C., to become chief of staff of the 18th Airborne Corps.

His reassignment is a result of the phase-out of basic training here, announced Dec. 5. Though the final closing date for the Training Center is Mar. 31, active training will end with the graduation of the 1st Brigade's 10th Battalion Feb. 6, three weeks before the general's scheduled reassignment.

Also Col. Herbert G. Peabody, Training Center chief of staff and former commander, will leave Feb. 1 to be chief of staff for the Army section of the Military Assistance Advisory Group, China (MAAG) at Taipei, Taiwan.

Though General Davis' assignment will be his first at Ft. Bragg during his more than 28 years of Army service, he is no stranger to airborne units. In World War II he served with the 542nd, 541st and 511th Infantry Parachute Regiments. During the Korean conflict, he served with the 45th Infantry Division as a battalion commander, regimental executive officer and Division G-3.

In Vietnam, he served as deputy brigade commander of the 1st Brigade, 101st Airborne Division, from March to August 1967. From October, 1967, to October, 1968, he served as an assistant division commander with the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile).

Colonel Peabody will be returning to Taiwan for a second tour. He served there from 1964-1968 as adviser to the Chinese Special Forces. His wife, Kay, and daughter, Deborah, will join him next summer after Miss Peabody's graduation from Columbus High School.

Mighty Ninth Gets New CO

The officer candidates and cadre of the 9th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade, have a new leader, Lt. Col. Joel H. Bell, who recently assumed command of the "Mighty Ninth."

Bell, a veteran of the conflict in Vietnam, served with the U. S. Military Assistance Command, Vietnam, from July 1968 to July 1969. Among the awards held by Bell are The Legion of Merit, The Bronze Star medal, and the Army Commendaton Medal with two oak leaf clusters.

Before entering active duty on Jan. 8, 1956, Bell graduated from Virginia Polytechnic Institute (Blacksburg, Va.). His military schooling includes the Infantry Officer Basic Course, Ranger School, Airborne School, Infantry Officers Career Course, Command and General Staff College and the Infantry School, Instructor Training Course.

Bell, who currently resides at Fort Benning with his wife and three children, served as chairman of the Map Reading Committee of the Company Operations Department, United States Army Infantry School, prior to coming to The Candidate Brigade. He is filling the position left vacant by Lt. Col. William Muller, who is leaving for Korea.

Thirty Two Men From 197th Brigade Reenlist

The years rolled in, the money rolled out, and the 197th Infantry Brigade will be the richer for it. It was Career Opportunity Day, and 32 of the 197th's troopers took the oath of re-enlistment together.

Re-up officials from the Brigade signed the professionals up for a total of 161 years and paid dearly and readily for it in sought-after bonus checks: after the cake-and-coffee ceremony at the Kelley Hill Chapel annex, the 32 men walked out $81,000 greener. High bonus man was Sp4 Dennis R. Haza of the 72nd Engineer Co., who signed up for a six year contract.

Seventeen of the re-enlistees were taking the plunge for the first time, while twelve raised their right hands to continue in their present Brigade duty assignments. Others will be bound for the Republic of Vietnam, Germany, Panama, Okinawa, Thailand, Alaska and Korea shortly. Rank of the re-uppers ranged from private first class to sergeant first class.

The swearing-in was

Colonel Peabody has been at Ft. Benning since August, 1967. He served as deputy commander of the Center Troop Command until Aug. 15, 1968, when he became Training Center commander. He became deputy commander and chief of staff of the Training Center when General Davis assumed command.

He saw combat in four campaigns in New Guinea and the Philippines during World War II, and on two tours in Vietnam.

Colonel Peabody's decorations include the Distinguished Service Cross with first oak leaf cluster, the Legion of Merit, the Bronze Star and Combat Infantryman's Badge with star. He is also a master parachutist.

BRIGADE

conducted by 197th Infantry Brigade commander Col. John E. Strever Jr., who commented on the ceremony:

"I'm very pleased with the records of the men who have reenlisted today. This Brigade assigns a great many bars to reenlistment; if a man has a bar to his record, we will not let him reenlist. We won't reenlist a man just to reenlist him.

"You men know the Army today, so you know how much the Army needs you. And you know the work of the 197th — so you certainly know how much we need you," he said.

The ceremony was attended by all the battalion commanders and sergeants major of the Brigade, as well as by Brigade Sgt. Maj. Frank Plass. Also SMG. Charles Hendrickson, Re-enlistment Officer 1st Lt. Charles Alvord, and the Brigade Career Counselors who had organized the event, MSgt Harold Woodward, SFC Robert Adams, SFC John Spencer, and SSgt Richard Lee. Members of the re-enlistees' families were also on hand.

MSgt. Woodward expounded on the colonel's comments about re-enlistment regulations in the 197th. "If a man is substandard, we won't re-enlist him, or if he's just marginal — if he does just enough work to stay out of trouble but requires a whole lot of supervision — we won't re-enlist him. We look beyond just seeing whether he has a bad record or not.

"The men we re-enlisted today," he added, "will be worth a lot to the Army and the Brigade. I'm glad we made it worth a lot for them."

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

By Bill King
King's Pizza On Call

"This groundnut when boiled becomes as soft as a cooked chestnut, but has skin no thicker than a truffle . . ." was a Spanish explorer's description of the white potato discovered in Peru.

Americans now spend more than $2 billion a year on such snacks as chips, pretzels, popcorn and crackers. (So who's on a diet?)

Round breads like pumpernickel will keep fresh longer if you slice them from the middle. After you cut new slices, press the exposed sides together and rewrap.

Clusters of tiny vigil candles in glass cups, set here and there about a room, create a subtle romantic atmosphere for a holiday party.

Toss dried fruits and nuts in flour before adding them to the fruitcake batter and they won't sink to the bottom during baking.

If all the holiday preparations have you running around feeling nutty as a fruitcake, take time out to relax over a delicious dinner at

Byline Bayonet

(Byline Bayonet welcomes questions of general interest about Fort Benning and the Army. Within space limitations, all reasonable questions will be answered. Questions of a purely military nature which obviously could be more properly answered by commanders or supervisors within the chain of command will not be accepted. Questions must be signed with current unit assignment indicated. Send questions to Bayonet Editor, Room 602, Infantry Hall.)

Photographs

I have just been promoted to platoon sergeant. What do I have to do to meet the requirement for full length photographs required by Department of the Army?

The pictorial branch, Directorate of Communications-Electronics, shoots full length photographs to meet the DA requirement on Wednesday mornings only between 8 a.m.-noon. No appointment is necessary. However, in case of an emergency, a special appointment can be made by telephoning 545-2112.

Christmas Trees

Is there any place on the military installation where I can cut down a Christmas tree to use in my quarters?

Provisions have been made for occupants of on-post quarters and for military units to cut Christmas trees in certain parts of the post. All those desiring to enter the areas which have been selected for this purpose must obtain clearance by checking the range clearance map posted at the Provost Marshal Office, Bldg. 215, or at Range Control, Bldg. 2621 or at the Gun Club, Bldg. 4050.

Domestic Action Council

Is it true the Department of Defense has a special group that meets on domestic problems?

There is a group known as the Domestic Action Council established in April, 1969, by Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird, which directs and coordinates domestic action programs of DOD. This council meets monthly to discuss ways in which DOD can join other government agencies and private organizations in their efforts to overcome the serious domestic problems which face the country.

Armed Forces Day

When is the next Armed Forces Day?

The next Armed Forces Day is scheduled for May 16, 1970. The theme will be "Forces for Freedom" and the concept will center again on the idea of a "Report to the Nation." In past years, Fort Benning has hosted an open house on Armed Forces Day, entertaining citizens from many communities in the general area.

Secretary of the Army 1969 Christmas Message

To all members of the United States Army I extend my best wishes for Christmas and the New Year.

The world's hope is that the true spirit of Christmas will one day prevail everywhere, for that would mean peace on earth and good will among all men. No one contributes more to keeping this age-old hope alive than American soldiers. For almost two centuries they have been guarding our country's freedom and helping other people who seek freedom from tyranny and aggression.

I want all of you in the Army family — military and civilian, active and reserve components — to know that your unselfish and devoted service is known and appreciated.

May the Christmas season bring happiness to you and your families, and may the New Year and new decade be personally and professionally rewarding.

Stanley R. Resor

Chief of Staff 1969 Christmas Message

Christmas Season 1969 and the advent of a new decade offer a time for reflection and rededication to all members of the United States Army. Although many of you will be unable to spend this joyous season with your families, certainly you are in their thoughts and in the thoughts and prayers of peace-loving people everywhere. Through your sacrifice of selfless service, you have made possible the freedom and security which allows others to enjoy the blessings of this Holy Season. The birthday of the Prince of Peace renews in us the hope that real peace — a just, honorable, and lasting peace — may yet become a reality for all peoples of the world.

To all members of the Army, I extend personal best wishes that this Christmas Season will bring a full measure of happiness. May the New Year strengthen our resolve for peace on earth among men of goodwill.

W. C. WESTMORELAND
General, United States Army
Chief of Staff

Take the 'Pro' Test!

In this day of increasing specialization, the variable reenlistment bonus and pro-pay, the man-behind-the-machine gets more and more attention. And rightly so because more is demanded of him as technological advances increase the complexity of the military machine.

This is true whether the man be airman, sailor, soldier, or Marine — the defense force of this nation is an iron fist whose knuckles are the combined efforts of all the services.

The increasing demands placed on today's military man are manifest in many ways but they all have a common cure: dedication to a job well done. Getting the job done is an American heritage.

The old poster with Uncle Sam rolling up his sleeves, getting ready to pitch in, typifies the kind of 'can do' spirit which has kept this country strong since the days of 'Manifest Destiny.'

In the Atomic Age, liberty permeates everything we do, democracy rings in our ears and the distinction between individualism and protest becomes distorted. Protest for its own sake becomes the fashion and individualism becomes more regimented and uniform than the 'establishment' itself.

The dissenters fail to recognize this and continue to see the man who shines his shoes and salutes as conforming to the 'establishment' and therefore a blah, a non-entity.

But is he? Is he not in fact more the individual because he has made a decision? Has he not chosen to roll up his sleeves and pitch in? Let us examine this creature and see if he is filled with the stuff of glory or just a hollow shell of shiny shoes and smart salutes.

Who is this man and what are his goals? He is an American and part of the mightiest military machine the world has ever seen. When his flag goes by, he gets a lump in his throat and he thrills at the power of his service and his country.

Yet he is a compassionate man who builds orphanages and is anguished by the ravishment of war. He is a complex, paradoxical creature; he is a human being; above all, he is a professional.

He is, as Francis Bacon called him, "a debtor to his profession." And he does indeed "endeavor . . . to be a help and an ornament thereunto." (AFPS)

WHITE HOUSE REPORT

(On June 27, 1969, the President concurred in the conclusions and recommendations of a special task force looking into the problems of narcotics, marihuana and dangerous drugs. The portion of the report relating to marihuana is being reprinted for Bayonet readers. This is the fifth of a seven part series. It was prepared by the Armed Forces Press Service at Washington, D. C.)

EFFECTS

The British cannabis report by the Advisory Committee on Drug Dependence (1968) concluded:

There have been reports, particularly from experienced observers in the Middle and Far East, which suggest that very heavy long-term consumption may produce a syndrome of increasing mental and physical deterioration to the point where the subject is tremulous, ailing and socially incompetent. This syndrome may be punctuated on occasions with outbursts of violent behavior. It is fair to say, however, that no reliable observations of such a syndrome have been made in the Western World, and that from the Eastern reports available to us, it is not possible to form a judgment on whether such behavior is directly attributable to cannabis-taking.

PROGRESSION TO OTHERS

A basic question that frequently arises is the extent to which marihuana use in some sense predisposes users to escalate to stronger and more dangerous drugs. There is little question that most heroin and LSD users have had experience with marihuana. Indeed, 85 to 90 per cent of heroin addicts reported that they started their use of drugs with marihuana. Three is also a question whether any but a small percentage of marihuana users progress to other drugs, the evidence tending to show that only 5 per cent of the habitual marihuana users progress to heroin addiction.

In discussing the question of progression, it is vital to distinguish between the casual experimenter with marihuana, and the regular and continuous user, and between physical addiction and psychological dependency.

A casual experimenter by definition is not dependent upon the drug. A regular and continuous user, on the other hand, may very well be dependent upon it.

Once he has become psychologically dependent upon one drug as a "crutch" to cope with life stress, the user is substantially more susceptible to the acquisition of a larger crutch through the medium of a stronger drug.

An example of the importance of this distinction is the heroin addict. The most desperately "hooked" of junkies with a "habit" costing hundreds of dollars per day can be "de-oriffed" in under 8 days, and brought to a point where the drug will produce no physical reaction or withdrawal symptoms.

Yet, let that individual be imprisoned for 5 years without access to the drug, upon release he will seek a pusher. He will do so because he is psychologically dependent upon heroin.

Recognition of the fact is basic to the New York State rehabilitation program which spends years, rather than weeks, treating addicts. Their physical craving is terminated in days — their psychological dependency is the subject of years of treatment.

In view of the foregoing, it must be concluded that regular and continuous use of cannabis can and does produce psychological dependency and marked susceptibility to progression to stronger reality concealing drugs.

The progression is, however, probably not a consequence of the pharmacological properties of marihuana, but rather is due to sociological and psychological factors present in a vulnerable minority of users.

ATC Officers Wives Club Holds Luncheon

OWC BAZAAR ITEMS ADMIRED

Admiring a hand-made angel during the Officers Wives Club bazaar earlier this month were, left to right, Mrs. James Wheaton, bazaar chairman, Mrs. Orwin C. Talbott, wife of the commanding general, Mrs. Malcolm R. Baer, OWC president, Mrs. Oscar E. Davis, wife of the Training Center commander, and Mrs. Sidney B. Berry, wife of the assistant commandant of the Infantry School. Reports say profits from the annual event will total more than $5,000. (Photo by Phillip Reid)

A visit from "jolly old St. Nick" and a program of holiday music by the Infantry Chorus highlighted the Army Training Center Officers Wives Christmas luncheon at the Fort Benning Supper Club.

Other guests were Mrs. Rose Barclay, Mrs. Frank Hellwig, Mrs. George Cardina, Maj. (Ret.) Francine Mortenson, Mrs. Robert Fitzsimmons, Mrs. W. R. O'Farrell and Mrs. Jennie McRae.

The red-suited visitor was Capt. Edwin Frazier, who arrived with a jingle of bells and from a full pack distributed gifts to everyone.

Turning the tables, Mrs. Oscar E. Davis, wife of ATC commanding general, presented Santa a gift and expressed the wives' appreciation for his visit.

The hostesses were 1st Brigade wives who created a colorful Christmas scene dominated by a gaily lighted tree. A galaxy of stars twinkled overhead while gold glittered wreaths adorned the walls. Surrounding the stage were gay Santa Claus replicas, mementos from France shared by Mrs. Brandon Parker.

The candlelit tables were centered with pine boughs and cones, tiny gift packages and gold nut trees. The red and green napkins were shaped like miniature trees.

Newcomers welcomed were Mrs. Brian Arnold to headquarters, Mrs. Frank C. Willoughby, Mrs. Herbert F. Hille, Mrs. Richard Greenburg, Mrs. Davis Leslie and Mrs. Jesse Morris to 1st brigade, and Mrs. Allen Grant, Mrs. Calvin Seybold and Mrs. John L. Hardy to 2nd brigade.

Charms with the green and gold Training Center crest were presented in farewell to Mrs. William Joyce, Mrs. Thomas Dunmire, Mrs. Kevin Kenney, Mrs. Charles Baugh, Mrs. Richard Thrower, Mrs. Edwin Frazier, Mrs. Louis Rogers, Mrs. Ronald Denny, Mrs. Edwin Rowan, Mrs. Reynold Johnston and Mrs. Jerry Moore.

Columbus Choral Guild Entertains Medical Officers Wives Club Here

Members of the Columbus Choral Guild, under the direction of Horace McFarland, presented a program of Christmas carols for the Medical Department Activity Officers Wives Club at the Supper Club.

Mr. McFarland, who is the minister of music at St. Luke's Methodist Church, has been active in music and civic circles since coming to Columbus. He founded the Choral Guild in 1964, and has recently become choral music director of the Springer Theater Company productions. Jack Jones accompanied the group on the piano.

At the end of the program the wives were asked to join with the guild members in a sing-a-long of Christmas favorites.

The tables were laid with white cloths and red napkins, and centered with miniature Christmas trees. A huge lighted Christmas tree completed the festive scene.

Club Fetes 8 Members At Coffee

The officers wives of the 5th Bn, 31st Inf. met for a December coffee at the home of Mrs. John L. Nixon Jr., wife of the battalion commander.

Mrs. Nixon welcomed several new wives to the battalion. They were Mrs. Charles Manning, Mrs. Richard Anderson and Mrs. William Massey.

Engraved silver trays were presented to those wives leaving the group. They were Mrs. Duane Barber, Mrs. Alan B. Nixon, Mrs. Daniel Harvey, Mrs. Thomas Sneed and Mrs. Charles Whitlock.

Door prize drawings were won by Mrs. Charles Manning, Mrs. Ronald Plumley and Mrs. Charles Whitlock.

Discussion followed concerning club positions to be filled. Mrs. Charles Manning will be the hospitality chairman, Mrs. Robert McDowell will assume duties as reservation chairman and Mrs. Ronald Plumley will be publicity chairman.

Business Meeting Held By NCO Wives Group

The Noncommissioned Officer Wives Club held a monthly business meeting Dec. 10 at the Top Five Supper Club.

The invocation was given by the club chaplain, Mrs. James Harden.

Mrs. Walter Cunningham, president, expressed appreciation for the hard work and the cooperation of the members and board "who gave so much of their time towards making the Christmas bazaar a great success."

The president welcomed all the new members and guests to the club. Resignation of the club's second vice president, Mrs. James Saunders, was accepted and the new second vice president, Mrs. James Dixon, was introduced.

Silver trays were presented to two departing members, Mrs. Edward Smith and Mrs. Larry Kendrix. Mrs. Kendrix was presented an additional silver tray for her outstanding work as assistant to the mimeograph chairman.

Plans were discussed for a formal Christmas party to be held Dec. 20 at the Patton House.

Refreshments of finger sandwiches, coffee and tea were served. An account of new members and departing membership was presented by the membership chairman, Mrs. Robert Hale.

Any wife whose husband is of the rank of E-4 and above may join the club by contacting Mrs. Hale at 324-6090.

WOMEN'S NEWS

Party Honors 14 Officers

A hail and farewell party for officers of the 197th Inf. Brigade's 2nd Bn., 10th Arty., was held at the home of Lt. Col. and Mrs. William Berry.

The affair was a covered dish dinner to which all the wives contributed their favorite course.

YULE DECORATIONS AMERICAN STYLE

Christmas, American style, is the decorating scheme for these wives of Allied officers currently assigned to Fort Benning. Working in the home of Mrs. W. L. Humphrey, the women learned how to use materials available in the woods and fields surrounding the post as well as commercial articles to create Christmas decorations for their own homes and for the OWC Christmas bazaar held earlier this month. Shown are, standing left to right, Mrs. Pedro Montalban of Chile, Mrs. Lauro Alves of Brazil, Mrs. Albert Samaha of Lebanon, Mrs. Keith Cameron of Great Britain, Mrs. Solah Al-Ayoubi of Lebanon, Mrs. Mansour Vantanpour of Iran, Mrs. V. D. Booth, and Mrs. Roger Waltrant of Belgium. Lending a helping hand are, front row, Crina Alves, Mrs. Robert W. Phillips and Pasha Vantanpour. (Photo by SP5 Ludwig Dwodlak)

Colonel Gives Away Clerk -- In Marriage

PFC Richard Salentine

It is not everyday that a colonel gives away a bride but such was the case when Pvt. Helen M. Wise and PFC Donald Gray were married at the Airborne Chapel.

The former Private Wise, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wise of Farmington, Pa., is a clerk in the S-1 section, 1st Bn., The School Brigade. When her parents were unable to attend the ceremony, she asked Lt. Col. Edmund B. Bookman, her battalion commander, to step in for her father.

The bridegroom, a student in Track Vehicle Mechanics Class No. 18, is the son of MSgt. and Mrs. Monroe W. Gray, Columbus AFB, Miss.

Maid of honor was Pct. Jean Janiel of Fort Benning. Leslie Whitehead of Columbus, Ga., served as best man.

The services were conducted by Chaplain (Capt.) Ralph E. Short. The organist was MSgt. Robert J. Everett, Infantry Center Chaplains Office.

TCB Wives Hold Monthly Coffee

The Wives Club of Headquarters, The Candidate Brigade, held a monthly coffee at the home of Mrs. William T. Ipock with Mrs. Douglas R. Babcock serving as cohostess.

A small Christmas tree adorned the refreshment table. Christmas cookies, hot punch and coffee were served.

After the guests were served, Mrs. Robert M. Piper started the meeting.

OWC Names High Players

Officers Wives Club bridge winners last week in the duplicate category were Catherine Hart and Amber Green.

Ann Ball and Diana Moscrip tied for second and third with Betty Haley and Mary Lou Robbins and Caroline Black and Anita Portman, fourth place.

Party bridge winners were Betty Haley, first place, Mary Burrows, second place, Ann Ball, third place and Diana Moscrip, fourth place.

Both bridge games meet at the Country Club weekly, duplicate on Monday and party bridge on Thursday, at 12:30 p.m.

Mrs. Merlin Carothers was the guest of honor.

Special guests were Mrs. Grady W. Williams, Mrs. Miles A. Perry and Mrs. Walter P. Ragan.

The guest speaker was Capt. Jesse P. Peel, commander of 60th Co. He spoke to the ladies on finances and transportation for officers.

Mrs. Jade Abernathy was elected the club's treasurer.

Student wife hostesses were Mrs. Jack Partridge, Mrs. Jeff Taylor, Mrs. Michael Trued and Mrs. Roger Gilmore.

Following the theme "Visions of Sugar Plums," a gumdrop tree adorned the serving table.

Schedule Is Prepared For Religious Services

Fort Benning soldiers and their families will attend both Protestant and Catholic religious services scheduled for Christmas Eve and Christmas Day.

The Protestant services include those for both Lutheran and Episcopal faiths while the Catholic services include a special Christmas Eve midnight mass.

Chaplain (Col.) Holland Hope, post chaplain, invited all members of the military community to attend the services of their choice or to join with civilians in the surrounding communities to share the true spirit of Christmas.

Protestant services to be held Dec. 24 are 7 p.m. at the Infantry Center chapel and the Airborne chapel (Lutheran) and at 11 p.m. at the Indianhead Road chapel (Episcopal).

On Christmas Day, Protestant services will be held at 8 a.m. at the Indian Road chapel (Episcopal), and at 9:30 a.m. at the Infantry Center chapel and the post stockade.

A Catholic service scheduled for 5:30 p.m. Dec. 24 at the Kelley Hill chapel will satisfy the holyday obligation, according to the chaplain's office.

Christmas Day services for members of the Catholic faith start at midnight with a mass at both the Main Post Catholic chapel and the Infantry Center chapel.

Christmas Day mass is to be held at 8 a.m. at the post stockade, at 9 a.m. at the Main Post Catholic chapel and at 10 a.m. at the Sightseeing Road chapel.

Also, at 10:30 a.m. at the Main Post Catholic chapel, at 11 a.m. at Marshall Auditorium and at Martin Army Hospital, at 11:15 a.m. at Harmony Church Chapel No. 1 and at noon at the Main post Catholic chapel.

Wives Group's Luncheon Aids Needy Family

The Fort Benning Supper Club was the scene Thursday of the U. S. Army Infantry Board's initial Christmas festivities. The women of the Infantry materiel test board held their annual Christmas party in the form of a "benefit" luncheon for a needy family.

Each guest arriving for the luncheon brought with them a gift for the family.

Earlier this month, the American Red Cross had designated a needy family and the test board had adopted them. With this ground work already laid, the ladies of the board knew the family well enough to know what some of their most urgent needs were at this time of the year.

The abundance of useful gifts of clothing and toys indicated that the "Spirit of Christmas" was in the thoughtful giving as each brought of their abundance.

The arrangement for seating at the Christmas luncheon took on the spirit of the season when the tables were placed to form a big star.

The arms of the star were tables emanating out from a small round table graced with beautiful candelabra.

Each table was decorated in Christmas colors of red, white and green and appropriately named after a Christmas theme. They were "The Angels," "Candles," "Poinsettas," "Holly," and "Candy Canes."

Guests arriving drew one of these named themes for their place setting.

The Christmas luncheon was sponsored by the ladies of the small arms test division of the test board. Mrs. Arthur Wichmann was the luncheon chairman.

Each of the women brought as their special guests their husbands from the Infantry Board.

To add to the festive spirit of the occasion, the ladies made arrangements for Christmas carols to be played over the public address system during the luncheon period.

More than 70 guests at the early Christmas season festivity also honored, in the form of a farewell, members of the Infantry Board departing for other assignments.

Among those recognized upon their departure were Lt. Col. and Mrs. Kent S. Hasemeier. Hasemeier is retiring from the Army Dec. 31 after 21 years of service. He is a veteran of World War II, the Korean War and the conflict in Vietnam.

He has been serving as the chief of the personnel and administration division of the Infantry materiel test board.

Infantry Brigade Wives Hold Coffee

The officers' wives of the 197th Inf. Bde. headquarters held a December coffee at the home of Mrs. Lyle Blank.

In keeping with the season, the table was covered with holiday red cloth and trays filled with Christmas fare made from each of the lady's favorite recipes stood with a huge punchbowl of eggnog.

Welcomed to the wives group was Mrs. James Wheaton, wife of the new deputy brigade commander, Mrs. Brigham Shuler, Mrs. Tillman Rasberry, Mrs. James Carter and Mrs. Stephen Kosher.

Goodbyes were said to Mrs. Charles Alvord and Mrs. William Grant.

A hospitality committee was formed to compile a welcome brochure for new members. The committee members are Mrs. Michael Ellison, Mrs. Charles Ford, and Mrs. Grant Rosenteel. The committee will present the brochure to the club for approval at the January coffee that will be given by Mrs. John Neal.

It was decided to give charms to departing members as reminders of the friendships developed while members of the brigade. Mrs. James Carter, the new treasurer, will purchase the charms from funds supplied by holding a raffle at each coffee.

Mrs. Bruce Kay was the winner of the first raffle prize, an attractive clear glass cruet.

To emphasize the holiday season, gifts were exchanged among the wives. This was followed by a general discussion of the forthcoming holiday activities on the post.

A tray of treats was sent to Mrs. Gerald Coady who was recently released from the hospital.

NCO Wives Group Sees Ideas For Home Holiday Decorations

Decorating the home for the holidays was the theme of the Army Training Center noncommissioned officers wives' coffee at the Sand Hill NCO Club.

Mrs. Ray Brassell and Mrs. Robert Telma demonstrated a variety of Christmas decor ideas ranging from elegant candle arrangements to pixie-trimmed tissue holders.

Stressing the use of simple materials to gain beautiful effects, Mrs. Brassell created a table arrangement of red candles, greenery and ribbons which was given as a door prize.

A special guest, Mrs. Oscar E. Davis, wife of the Training Center commanding general, was welcomed by Mrs. Acy Akridge, wife of the command sergeant major.

The hostesses were Mrs. Lucio Ramirez, Mrs. Michael Walsh, and Mrs. James Hurley.

St. Nick Jumps to Party

Jolly Ole St. Nick dropped in by parachute to be the guest of honor at the Army Community Services Christmas party for handicapped children.

Santa landed at Gardner Field, where he passed out candy and toys to 58 children.

He and the children were then transported by car to Faith School gym for games and refreshments.

Four Mexican pinatas were made for the children by Mrs. John Webb and Mrs. John Marshall. The children broke them open and scrambled about picking up the candy which fell.

The program was planned and carried out by the ACS committee for handicapped children with Mrs. Charles Bohlman as volunteer chairman.

In addition to Mrs. Webb and Mrs. Marshall, other members of her committee are Mrs. Robert Osborne, Mrs. Armand DeCesare, Mrs. Don Rowe and Mrs. Ethel Petersen.

Lt. Col. Herbert See is ACS Officer at Fort Benning.

Coffee Is Held By NCOC Wives During 6th Week

The Noncommissioned Officer Candidates Wives club of 161st Co., 10th Stu. Bn., The Candidate Brigade, held a sixth week coffee in the company dayroom.

Honored guests were Mrs. William McElrath, Mrs. Douglas R. Babcock, Chaplain (Capt.) and Mrs. Loren D. Pugh, and Mrs. James G. McDonough.

A special guest was Mrs. James J. W. Biggers, Jr., chairman of the Columbus Historic Foundation. Mrs. Biggers showed slides of historical sites and of housing that is available in the Columbus area...

Hostesses were Mrs. Thomas T. Poole, Mrs. Elias D. Divers and Mrs. Rodger T. Spear.

Christmas decorations provided the theme for the coffee.

YAC CORNER

Guess Who's Coming

What distinguished guest will be in the YA office Dec. 22-25? With bags of goodies and a long list, old Saint Nick will be waiting for all Fort Benning kids who want to let Santa in on just what they want for Christmas. So come on out to YA between 9-11 a.m. and climb up on his knee. He's waiting for you at Bldg 1684. Don't miss this chance!

Judo

Sp.4 Rosario, Youth Activities new judo instructor, hopes everyone enjoyed the Judo exhibit Dec. 15 during the opening of the new gym . . . He's reminding everyone about the start of the new Judo classes Jan. 20. Children from 7-17 years of age interested in joining can register anytime at the YA office, Bldg. 1684, or at the new gym. Practice sessions will be held on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6:30-8 p.m.

Christmas Dance

Tomorrow night is the big night, teens! Mrs. Fraker wants all to be sure and don Christmas frocks and with the Christmas spirit high, to come on out. The festivities start at 8 p.m. and last until midnight. The "Rocking Rebellions" will be there to furnish the sounds and add to the fun. The Dance is free to members, but to members, only, so let's all be there. Remember, Saturday night is the night!

Charm Course

Youth Activities is interested in organizing a charm course for girls 12-19 years-of-age. Anyone wishing to volunteer their services as instructor are asked to contact YA Bldg 1684, or call 545-1585.

Private, General Exchange Military Notes -- In Korean

By Sp5 John Kleipf

The trainee braced at attention as the major general approached him. When they were six paces apart, Private Lee saluted and uttered an exclamation only the visiting dignitary understood.

"Hwa-Rang," a Korean military greeting almost 1,500 years old, was extended to Republic of Korea, Maj. Gen. Chung Sup Mun by U. S. Army Private Ung Young Lee a former staff sergeant in the Korean Army.

Lee, in his third week of basic combat training with Co. D, 5th Bn., 1st Bde. here, had been given the opportunity to meet and talk with the visiting commandant of the Infantry School and 2nd Military Academy in Korea, during a visit to the Infantry School and Training Center.

Meeting outside Training Center headquarters, the two countrymen exchanged greetings in Korean. General Mun presented the 25-year-old trainee a cigarette lighter inscribed with the Korean Infantry School 'Follow Me' symbol and 2nd Military Academy insignia.

Lee, a North Korean native, moved south with his family in 1951. He attended Kuyng Hee University in Seoul for one year before joining the Republic of Korea Army.

During two years and eight months with the Korean Army, he served in an Engineer company as a secretary and later as a heavy equipment operator.

"Korean training teaches almost the same subjects I get here," Lee said as he compared the Korean six-week basic training course with his eight weeks training at Ft. Benning.

"Instead of hand-to-hand combat," he said, "we have taekwon - do two times a day." Tae kwon-do is an oriental art of self defense similar to karate.

Physically, Lee feels his Korean basic training was tougher than that he is receiving here. Discipline is a major part of the Korean way of life, however. Even in high school, boys must have their hair cut short and girls cannot wear short skirts, Lee said.

He came to the U.S. four months ago on an immigration visa, with the help of his brother-in-law SGM Don A. Edwards, operations sergeant major of the 197th Inf. Bde. here.

Although not yet a U.S. citizen, Lee hopes to receive his citizenship papers early next year. Lee said "much paperwork and many checks" were done on him before he could come to America. Now, he wants to stay.

"I understand the English language but do not speak it so well," he said. "After basic I want to go to an Army school where I can learn about the language and everything I can about America."

After his schooling, Lee would like to go either to Vietnam or Germany. He has his sights on OCS and airborne training. As Lee puts it, "It is my duty and right to fight for America."

Famous Military Writer Addresses Graduating Officer Basic Class

Marian Jones

When 2nd Lt. John D. Marshall graduated last week (Dec. 11) from the Infantry Officers Basic Course (IOBC) he had a privilege not given many graduates of that course. His grandfather made the graduation address to the more than 200 graduates of IOBC 8-70.

Marshall's grandfather is Brig. Gen. (ret.) S. L. A. Marshall who was introduced to the graduates by Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott, Fort Benning's commanding general, as "the greatest military writer in the world today."

General Marshall has authored many best-selling books on military campaigns. He presently has five books on the market and is preparing for release a sixth, entitled "Bamboo Fields" which is about the 1966 campaign near Tuy Hoa in the Republic of Vietnam.

General Talbott commented in his introductory remarks that the average age for this graduating class was 8 when General Marshall made his first trip to Vietnam in 1955.

In his speech in which he stressed the value of good communications, General Marshall stated, "You are today entering upon the part of your career where it becomes important that no one around you fail because he doesn't get the word. If I could change this Army I'd stress communications from reveille to taps. In this business you have to get the word.

He went on to point out two instances in which our men didn't get the word—resulting in two of the greatest military surprises in our history, the Bulge in Germany and the battle of Chongchon in Korea.

Private Spends Summers As Vessel's First Mate

By Chester Hilburn

The sea became his way of life when he first sailed the "Victory Chimes" as a cabin boy.

After five summers aboard the three-masted schooner — the largest commercial sailing vessel under the U.S. flag — Pvt. James K. Payne became the first mate.

A reservist of Co. D, 6th Bn., 2nd Bde., USATC, Payne said his first summer aboard the sailing vessel consisted "mostly of polishing the brass and learning the ropes."

Constructed in 1900 from Georgia pine as a cargo vessel the "Victory Chimes" was converted in 1954 to a passenger pleasure cruiser based in Castine, Maine.

Depending on the wind and weather to chart its course, the 44-passenger schooner sets sail from Rockland, Maine, every Monday morning during the summer months, Payne says. It docks each night in a different harbor — a fishing village or summer resort — and moves up the coast of Maine for a week of sailing and sightseeing. Its tradition reaches back to colonial times.

At 15 Payne was promoted to sailor. "My job then consisted of rigging the sails, catering to the passengers and keeping everything spotless," he said.

After one summer at this task, Payne became the boatswain for the next two seasons. "I was sort of a second mate then," the reservist said, "in charge of supervising the other sailors in the rigging and handling of sails."

For the past five years Payne has been the schooner's first mate. He is in charge of the ship's 10-man crew, the passengers' comfort and navigation when the captain is not aboard.

Between his summers of sailing Payne attended Trinity College, Hartford, Conn., where he received a BA in history in 1968.

It's not too surprising to learn what Payne's plans are when he returns to his reserve unit after basic training.

SANTA'S HELPERS

Pvts. John N. Konzelmann and Kenneth W. Jones find that trimming the Christmas tree at 5th Bn., 1st Bde., USATCI, is a much easier task when there is a joint effort. Jones, who stands 4'11" tall welcomed the helping hand of 6'6" Konzelmann. Jones, assigned to Co. A, had to have a special waiver to enter the Army. Konzelmann, who has a bachelor of science degree in building construction, is assigned to Co. D. (US ARMY PHOTO)

New Program Will Inform Soldiers

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The Department of Defense has joined with the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, and the Veterans Administration to make servicemen more aware of educational opportunities available to them when they leave the military.

Under a program called Project MEMO, (More Education, More Opportunity) servicemen will be placed in contact with colleges, universities, trade and technical schools before they leave the service.

MEMO will be aimed initially at servicemen in the Republic of Vietnam (RVN). Entertainer Bob Hope will launch MEMO during his Christmas trip to RVN with the help of a team of 30 educators and admissions officers from colleges and universities.

During his shows, Hope will recognize the educators in the audience, recommend use of educational benefits offered by the G. I. Bill and encourage servicemen to continue their education.

MEMO services will include:

— Sending a serviceman's name and address to the schools he lists on a questionaire, or to colleges and universities in his home state.

— Providing a serviceman with a list of names and addresses of all colleges and universities in his home state.

— Telling him how to apply for admission and for financial assistance.

— Helping an institution find the kind of student it is seeking.

In many cases, colleges, universities and technical schools will contact a man while he is still in the military, according to Dr. Gordon Sabine, vice president. Michigan State University and originator of project MEMO.

The educators will counsel servicemen and assist them in filling out Project MEMO questionaires. Servicemen will be advised to fill out a questionaire about six months before they leave the service.

Kelley Hill Craft Shop Provides Varied Activities

By SP4 Robert Merkin

What does a 197th Infantry Brigade soldier do with time on his hands? He goes to the Kelley Hill Craft Shop and puts some clay in his hands — or a piece of wood, a model plane, a camera or even a rocket.

Located next to Theater No. 4 on Watkins Street in the same building with the bowling center, the Craft Shop provides workshops, assistance, material and tools to engage in the most complicated and exact of hobbies — or just to mess around and make a purple ash tray with a lump of wet clay. The soldiers who have discovered the Kelley Hill Craft Shop have stumbled across hundreds of ways not just to occupy their time, but to challenge themselves and their skills with creations of beauty, precision and ingenuity.

One of the latest do-it-yourself fads to hit the Kelley Hill Shop has been model rocketry, which, like similar hobbies, can be pursued on a number of different levels, with novice kits almost ready to shoot off to advanced Saturn kits with multiple rocket engines which the enthusiast builds almost from scratch. Ready to go, the Saturn setup includes a launching gantry that slides away, multiple stage separation, and decal and paint work that could fool the heck out of an airplane pilot passing by when the little bird goes by. In addition, rocket hobbyists can't avoid picking up a considerable amount of information about chemistery, physics and ballistics as they go along.

Safety standards for the rocketing hobby are high and take into account such things as the length of the launching guide rod, a metal shaft which could poke a hobbyist in the eye as he bent over his rocket model if it were too short, the amount of fuel a rocketeer can use for safety's sake (not to keep orbiting satellites a government monopoly), and the necessity for parachute rigs for the descending rockets once they've reached their apex of flight — to make sure they don't lean any one in the head.

A number of model airplane enthusiasts also haunt the Kelly Hill Field House, and here, too, is a hobby which can involve anyone regardless of his experience. A wire-flier can purchase his crate ready to gas up and take off, or can build his own dream machine from the landing gear up with the shop facilities.

The shop also has dark room facilities for shutterbugs to soup a number of sizes of black and white film and print black and white pictures from wallet size to blow ups, and the equipment and chemicals provided are top rate. As with all materials, photographic paper and supplies are sold at no mark-up to persons using the Shop. The photo section also has a portarait studio set up for those who want to try their hand at the fine art of capturing a personality on film.

Ceramics, leatherwork, woodwork (the smell of sawdust is everywhere) and jewelry craft are other features of the program at the Kelley Hill Craft Shop, which is operated by a top-rate and knowedgable staff of civilians and soldiers from the 197th Infantry Brigade. So if you find yourself with time on your hands, head down to the Kelley Hill Craft Shop and build yourself a box to put the time in instead.

Soldiers Assist Weather Forecasters

By Capt. Jesse Marsano

Been taking your weather predictions for granted lately? Have you ever wondered who predicts the weather? Probably some highly paid civilian from Columbus, right?

Well, maybe so, but that civilian would be in a bind without the help of a small group of Fort Benning soldiers in the Metro Section of Headquarters Headquarters and Service Battery, 2nd Bn. (Composite) 10th Artillery.

This 12-man contingent is charged with four missions: Providing meteorological data to artillery FDC sections, giving weather information to Detachment 10 of the USAF Weather Squadron at Lawson Field, aiding the USAIC CBR section in planning and providing valuable information to the US Weather Bureau at Muscogee County Airport.

The information that the Metro Section provides can be used to predict weather and to brief pilots flying in and out of Lawson Field.

The section obtains weather information by launching a 6 foot weather ballon filled with helium and carrying an instrument called a Radiosonde. Using sophisticated equipment valued at $25,000, the ground controllers obtain readings that translate into temperature, humidity and pressure. They also determine wind direction and speed by tracking the direction and distance that the balloon travels.

Attached to each balloon is an explanatory note and a self-addressed envelope. The finder is instructed to fill out the form and mail it. The Metro NCOIC, SFC Thomas L. Erskine, says that the results have been interesting, officially and unofficially.

So if you see an unusually large balloon in the boonies of Georgia or Alabama, take a few minutes to examine it and answer the questionaire. You may strike up a new friendship. If every balloon launched this year had been found, there would be 897 plotting pins in Erskine's map.

188,000 Trained During 4 Years

This week's announcement that the U. S. Army Training Center, Infantry, will be phased out by the end of March was met with mixed emotions by the more than 2,100 military and civilian personnel who are responsible for converting civilians to soldiers.

The Army Training Center Crest with the motto "This We'll Defend" worn by all permanent party personnel at the Training Center will soon be a thing of the past at Fort Benning, and the famous World War I-type campaign hat — the mark of the drill sergeant — will disappear from the scene.

Recalling the initial planning for the Training Center in the fall of 1965, Sgt. Maj. Thomas E. Fitzpatrick, now assigned to Co. C, Center Troop Command, remarked, "I was assigned to the Reception Station and a group of us went to Fort Jackson, S. C., to observe their operations. Then we came back here and went to work."

"We started with shells of buildings that had to be completely renovated. Even while the Reception Station was near completion, civilian seamstresses who were to sew insignia and name tapes on the recruits' uniforms were on their hands and knees painting floors and putting the finishing touches to the center buildings."

Col. Bob E. Edwards commanded the new Training Center — 10 battalions in two brigades.

In the spring of 1966 expansion of the Army necessitated a reorganization of the Training Center to three training brigades, 12 battalions and 61 companies.

An October 1967 phase-out of one brigade headquarters and two battalions returned the Training Center to its original posture.

In September 1968, another two battalions were phased out and one company from each remaining battalion was designated "swing company," forming a provisional battalion in each brigade.

ATC's second commander, Brig. (now Maj.) Gen. Charles M. Mount Jr. was succeeded by Brig. Gen. (then Col.) Herbert E. Wolff, whose deputy commander, Col. Melecio Montesclaros, assumed command upon his departure.

Colonel Montesclaros was succeeded by Colonel Herbert G. Peabody, who relinquished command to the present commander, Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis, last November.

Now Col. Robert P. Hatcher is the deputy commander, Colonel Peabody, chief of staff.

The U. S. Army Reception Station, an integral part of the Training Center, processed civilians and assigned them to the Training Center for transformation to soldiers.

This year, for the third successive time, the Training Center maintained the nation's only basic ROTC Camp. Billeted in the Harmony Church area of the Training Center's 2nd Brigade, the cadets underwent active-duty training in lieu of two years' on-campus study.

The Training Center's goal of developing a disciplined, highly-motivated soldier who is qualified with his basic weapons, physically — conditioned, trained in the fundamentals of soldiering and prepared for advanced individual training has been exemplified by the more than 188,000 soldiers who have completed training here.

Training Grenade Tests Are Completed At Board

By Rex Ellis

The need for a training version of the M67 Fragmentation Hand Grenade for Infantrymen has resulted in the service testing of the new practice hand grenade, XM68, at the U.S. Army Infantry Board (USAIB).

Col. Charles B. Thomas, president of the Infantry materiel test Board, said the tests which are nearing completion stages have been performed to determine, under actual or simulated conditions, suitability of the XM69 and the delay fuse, XM228 along with its associated reusable spare parts for use as a training item by the U.S. Army.

The spherical shaped practice grenade has the same physical characteristics as the M67 hand grenade presently in use. With the adoption of the standard M67 the Army had no practice item or companion training version of the fragmentation grenade to use in training. The present M62 training grenade was not of the proper configuration and weight as it resembled the earlier M26 type.

Tests conducted by the test board were performed by test soldiers under field conditions in simulated battlefield situations. The performance was compared to control items, the M67 hand grenade and the M62 practice grenade. Specific tests included phases of safety, functional, suitability, reliability, durability, maintainability, human factors, and value analysis.

Configuration and size of the test practice grenade is similar to the M67. It is 2.62 inches in diameter which makes it small enough for the average soldier to handle and throw with ease similar to a baseball and its weight of 14 ounces, loaded and fused, approximates the weight of the M67. The safety clip used on the practice grenade is the same as that on the M67.

During the field tests six soldiers from USAIB and ten from the Army Training Center threw the new ball-shaped grenade and checked it in all phases of testing. These men also maintained the item in the field and found that the practice grenade was highly reusable. One grenade was reused 200 times with most being used 50 times. (NOTE: The practice grenade does not explode into fragments like the M67. It only blows out the plug and emits sound and smoke effects for training.)

The noise and smoke produced by the detonation of the practice grenade enabled the test soldiers to detect the explosion easily at 40 meters distance. At the same time, the new practice grenade fuse, XM228, allowed an average time delay of 4 to 5 seconds, for the soldier to get the grenade away and on target.

Small Arms Test Division of the Infantry materiel test board was responsible for executing the tests, writing the plan of test and submitting the test report. Lt. Col. Arthur Wichmann is chief of the Test Division, Maj. Donald Marnon, senior test officer at the Board, was the test officer with SSgt. Roy Norland serving as test NCO.

The final report is being written this week on the test following its boarding action on Monday. The Infantry Board forwards its reports and recommendations to its parent command, the Army Test and Evaluation Command at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Maryland.

Lt. Col., WO Receive Cash

Lieutenant Colonel Charles W. Rock and Chief Warrant Officer (ret.) Clyde R. Bowery Jr. of the U.S. Army Training Center, Infantry were presented cash awards of $115 each by the Major General Orwin C. Talbott, commanding general of the Infantry Center and Ft. Benning. This was in addition to previous cash awards of $500 each.

The men were presented the awards for their co-authored suggestion concerning the elimination of issuing insulated caps to trainees for retention and the issuing of these caps from a revolving inventory when required.

The adoption of this suggestion resulted in reduced procurement required for insulated caps.

Adoption of this suggestion also resulted in an estimated annual savings in materials of $181,248, as verified by army audit.

Lepers Live Purposeful Lives In Midst of Vietnam Fighting

By Sp4 Weldon D. Jolly

DI AN, Vietnam (2d Bde 10) — In a land torn in half by conflict, the Ben Soi Leprosaurium is a kind of negation of the strife outside its gates.

Encompassing some 700 acres of flowering trees, orchards, and farmland, the leprosaurium is a village in itself. Winding paths, bounded on either side by well-pruned flowering shrubs, connect the buildings which act as nucleus for the leprosaurium.

Of the more than 30 buildings on the grounds, about two-thirds of them have a dual purpose. Many of the buildings house equipment, which, when put to use by the patients, produce goods to be used within the medical complex or sold outside.

The most valuable service the workshops provide is that of occupational therapy for the more than 120 patients.

The leprosaurium even has a school in which several patients, who have earned grade school certificates, teach other patients how to read and write.

For the adults and children housed at the leprosaurium, such activities provide a meaningful challenge when compared to a life of begging, physical misery and social ostracism lepers outside the colony face.

The day-to-day administration of the leprosaurium is in the hands of Father Victor Berset, a native of Switzerland with a lengthy background of missionary work in the Far East.

A man of seemingly endless energy and jocosity, Father Berset has been extremely successful in channeling money and medical equipment from private donors and organizations all over the world.

The 1st Infantry Division alone has given at least four pieces of equipment to the leprosaurium, the largest being $15,000 in X-ray equipment donated in 1968 through the efforts of Chaplain (Maj.) Clement Davenport, then the Catholic chaplain for the 2nd Brigade.

The leprosaurium is a melting pot of Chinese, Vietnamese, Montagnard, and Cambodian extraction.

There are few rules which the patients must adhere to, but three which are held as inviolable are those prohibiting gambling, intoxication and begging.

As a disease leprosy has long been misunderstood and feared, largely out of ignorance and the rest out of insufficient retreatment.

In 1872 a Norwegian bacteriologist, Gerhard Henrik Hansen, discovered the bacillus which causes leprosy, but no one, as yet, has determined how the organism enters the human body.

"Leprosy is perhaps one of the most difficult diseases to research," Father Berset explained," because the bacillus cannot exist outside the human body. No other animal, including other primates, have leprosy.

"Because of these limitations, researchers are handicapped in their studies of leprosy," he said.

Captain Paul Flynn, battalion surgeon for the 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry, visits the leprosaurium once a week and with a team of visiting Australian doctors helps to treat the patients there.

Flynn, from Stinson Beach, Calif., explained that he and the other doctors performed surgery as a form of treatment of the disease in order to prolong the patients' use of their appendages.

Company 'Adopts' Orphanage

By Sp5 Leonard E. Campbell

DI AN, Republic of Vietnam (1st MED IO) — A beer can for a cup. Two children to a small straw bed. Breakfast: Bread and Milk. Dinner: Rice and small chunks of meat. Supper: Rice and a thin meat sauce, No refrigeration.

Such is daily life at one of the hundred or more orphanages in the Saigon area where thousands of homeless, neglected children are cared for by the various religious and government organizations of South Vietnam.

The Men Thahn Gia Orphanage located near the village of Dong Hoa was adopted by the men of Headquarters and Company A, 1st Medical Battalion, 1st Infantry Division when Maj. Richard Wilker, formerly of the Big Red One, discovered the children while on a medical assistance operation.

The orphanage began in 1960 when 14 sisters of the Order of the Holy Cross, from the province of Phat Diem, North Vietnam, came to the village of Dong Hoa and, seeing a real need, started the orphanage.

The local Vietnamese refer to the orphanage as the "boarding house" because the sisters never refuse admittance to any child in need.

One of the children at the orphanage is an albino, about 9 years old. The Vietnamese people believe that the Buddhist gods were angry at her parents and thus created the albino child as a form of punishment. Rather than have the child treated as an outcast among her own people, the parents placed their daughter in the orphanage.

He'll 'Pay Any Soldier Who Wants to Be Paid'

By Sp4 Weldon D. Jolly

DI AN, Republic of Vietnam (2nd Bde 10) — The Big Red One has a new circuit-riding paymaster and he just loves to pass out money.

At least three times a month, Lt. Col. James H. Cook, 1st Infantry Division finance officer, sets out on his mission as a one-man complaint department.

Cook, of Meridian, Miss., visits hospitals within the Big Red One at least twice a month and fire support bases once a month to provide servicemen a means of solving their financial problems.

Even though he doesn't make elaborate preparations for visiting the servicemen, Cook's trips are invaluable to men who have no other means of getting to see a finance officer. Cook merely grabs a handful of pay receipts, signs out for several hundred dollars and he's on his way.

"My first payday here in the Big Red One, I discovered that quite a few servicemen weren't getting paid," he said. "The following payday, I made a study of just how many servicemen weren't getting paid and why."

Bulldozer Training Helps in Vietnamization of War

By Lt. David E. Daubei

LAI KHE, Republic of Vietnam (DIV IO) — Several weeks ago Le Thi Nang, an 18-year-old girl from Ben Cat, was a janitor in a contractor's office at the 1st Infantry Division's Lai Khe base camp.

Today Miss Nang and six other members of her graduating class are fully qualified bulldozer operators. The nimble Miss Nang can also handle with ease a giant road leveler, but according to her instructor, Enrique Garcia, she is better with the bulldozer.

The six Vietnamese civilians and Miss Nang recently completed an intensive two-week heavy equipment operators course sponsored by the contracting firm with the cooperation of the Lai Khe installation coordinator's office.

The bulldozer course is one of several skilled labor courses sponsored by the company's office in Saigon. It was one of the first courses taught here by a "roving instructor" from the firm and it is a small, but important part of the 1st Division's Vietnamization program.

Complementing the military efforts of Vietnamization, the training program has been concerned with teaching Vietnamese civilians how to operate and maintain facilities such as those found at Lai Khe. Vietnamese civilians can attend formal classes in Saigon for electrical repairmen, refrigerator and air conditioning repairmen and heavy equipment operators.

W. G. Watson, installation manager for the contractor, commented on the problem of operating facilities at a base camp the size of Lai Khe where there are thousands of troops.

"The key to this operation is to train the Vietnamese so they become efficient at operating such a facility," he said.

"Let's face it," said Watson, "we Americans are not going to be here forever, but the Vietnamese are, and they will have to know how to operate this equipment and to keep a place like Lai Khe functioning."

The civilian company is responsible for performing the functions normally conducted by the Army Corps of Engineers at a stateside post.

During the recent training course, a large, idle section of Lai Khe was made available as a training site.

The seven Vietnamese students cleared heavy underbrush on the southwest corner of the post during their on-the-job training. Their instructor, Garcia, a Phillippine national who travels throughout Vietnam, said he didn't really need an interpreter as he sat in the bulldozer with each student, teaching them one step at a time.

"All of them caught on real quick," said Garcia, "especially Miss Nang. She wasn't afraid of the bulldozer and was able to operate it after only a few hours of watching me."

In addition to learning how to operate the machinery and equipment, all students are required to learn how to maintain it. Miss Nang not only operates the bulldozer, but she can also pull maintainance.

Being a heavy equipment operator may not sound too glamorous, but the civilians who just completed this course have acquired a skilled trade that will insure that they have a continuing income and a future in the growth of South Vietnam.

Future Sniper Instructors Learn Techniques Here

By Sp4 Paul Miller

For the first time in the history of the military, a course is being conducted at the U. S. Army Infantry School to teach advanced riflemen the methods of sniper instruction.

The sniper has long been an essential factor of small unit operations. He is the lone rifleman—the man who sits and waits silently, sometimes with overwhelming patience — waiting for the approaching footsteps of an unsuspecting enemy. He is the man who is the trigger for any well planned ambush and he is the demoralizing harasser of a small enemy force.

Snipers do not always act in the offense role. In numerous cases they are placed outside of a defense perimeter to surprise a snooping foe and to warn the defending troops of an oncoming attack.

Speaking to the 19 students in his class, Maj. Willis Powell, principal instructor for "Sniper Marksmanship Unit — 11" (SMU), said that prior to the opening of this new course it had been the practice of small unit commanders to delegate an effective marksman with the duties of sniper. In most cases these men received little or no instruction on how to perform their new task.

The course, consisting of 206 hours of instruction, is given to both noncommissioned officers and officers.

When the men graduate from the four-week course, they are dispatched to different units in the Republic of Vietnam, where they will teach enlisted men how to shoot accurately as a sniper.

These classes will be almost identical to those which are taught at the Infantry School to the future instructors. More emphasis, however, will be placed on the "steady hold factors," which are considered the basics of good marksmanship. The students under Powell were well versed in this subject or they wouldn't have been selected for the class here.

Most of the teaching hours in Vietnam will be conducted during darkness the major says. This is to acquaint the student with night-time shooting since most sniper operations take place at night.

The instructor's course includes training with various telescopic sights as well as the Army's revolutionary Starlight Scope.

Besides weapons and marksmanship training, emphasis also is placed on first-aid, radio-telephone procedure land navigation and camouflage.

Prior to their graduation, the men are required to present both a 10-minute and 20-minute lecture on sniping, on which they are graded as to their proficiency as instructors.

Powell noted that any man who has had a background in shooting "and has won some awards" is eligible to attend the class. "Although we prefer to take only E-5s and above, rank has no bearing on whether we accept a man," he said. "We are looking for men who can shoot and shoot well so that they can possibly teach others to do the same."

Baker High Band Will March At Sugar Bowl

The Baker High School Band under the direction of John Grantham will march in the Sugar Bowl Parade, Dec. 30, in New Orleans. This is the first annual Sugar Bowl Parade and it will be televised nationally over the ABC television network.

This will be the sixth consecutive year that the Baker High School Band has performed at post season football bowl games.

Baker's band will depart Columbus Dec. 29.

Three full days of activities are planned by the Sugar Bowl Committee for the Baker Band.

On Tuesday, Dec. 30, Baker will march in the massive parade down famous Canal Street. Following the parade, the participating bands will be entertained at a dinner at Rivergate. The Sugar Bowl Ball follows. The next morning, Dec. 31, the members of the band will be treated to an outing down the Mississippi River on the S. S. President. Entertainment while on the President will be furnished by Al Hirt, Pete Fountain, and the Buddie Cole Trio. More sightseeing and a New Year's Eve party will close the year 1969.

Synopsis

DAY OF ANGER. This film stars Lee Van Cleef as the professional gunfighter Frank Talby who teaches a young orphan certain basic lessons the youth interprets as the essence of daring, courage and virility. Talby then teaches him to use a gun.

Together they shoot their way through several gunfights but eventually they drift apart when the young man realizes how callous Talby really is. Eventually they face each other in a gun duel.

Running time is 109 minutes. This film is suggested for mature audiences only.

THE CONQUEROR WORM. Veteran actor Vincent Price has the lead in this one. He is co-starred with Ian Ogilvy and Robert Russell.

A return run at Fort Benning, the picture tells of Matthew Hopkins, self-appointed "witchfinder" of the Cromwellian era, who spread terror throughout eastern England for two years.

Running time is 87 minutes. It is suggested for a mature audience.

THE GOLDEN GOOSE. Yul Brynner is hired as an American agent to help Scotland Yard track down counterfeiters circulating phoney American currency on an international scale.

Brynner and an English agent infiltrate the formerly notorious Golden Goose gang and Brynner ends up in the gang's headquarters confronting the head man.

Running time is 105 minutes. Suggested for mature audiences.

Keeping Up With the Joneses

By Marian Jones

Compared to such festivals in other parts of the country, Columbus' pop festival, being called a mini-affair by a downtown columnist, may not meet expectations but it is creating enthusiasm locally and is a step in the right direction toward bringing some livelier entertainment to the Fountain City.

Highlighting the show will be "The Sweet Younguns," a bandrock group of some fame. The show's sponsors have also lined up the "Electric College" who are psychedelic lighting artists to provide special effects.

There will also be a band contest among several of the better known local groups.

Time for the festival is Monday at 7:30 P. M. in the municipal auditorium. Admission is $1 for advance tickets and $1.50 at the door.

Christmas At Callaway

Callaway Gardens has what they're calling a holiday season weekend planned for tonight, tomorrow and Sunday. If you're tired of crowds and rude people and traffic jams at Columbus Square this may be for you.

Tonight Callaway invites you to their trim-the-tree buffet. While enjoying your holiday dinner you can add an ornament to their "special" Christmas tree. Tomorrow you can get back to nature with a guided bird walk on the trails, identifying the many migrating birds in their winter home. Then there is the family golf-tournament for father-sons, mother-daughters, husband-wife or any combination you wish. There is also the Christmas decorating workshop, quail hunting, skeet and trap shooting and the feature movie in the Callaway cinema. On Sunday you can hear the reading of the Christmas Story in a 17th Century setting and listen to organ music while you are dining by the fire in the rustic gardens clubhouse.

Nutcracker Suite

The Springer Ballet Company's presentation of "The Nutcracker Suite" will be continuing tonight, tomorrow night and Sunday at the Springer Opera House. A Christmas tradition by this time, the ballet will begin at 8:30 P.M. tonight and tomorrow with matinee performances tomorrow and Sunday at 2:30 p.m. Admission is $2.50 for adults and $1.25 for students and enlisted personnel in uniform.

Quote of the Week

"The Long Gray Line has never failed us. We are you to do so, a million ghosts in olive drab, in brown khaki, in blue and gray would rise from their white crosses thundering those magic words: Duty, Honor, Country." — General of the Army Douglas MacArthur, at the U.S. Military Academy, May 12, 1962.

Dramatizers Begin Work On 'Man for All Seasons'

By Pvt. Steve Zimmerman

When Fort Benning's theatre group, the Dramatizers, chose "A Man For All Seasons" to follow their successful production of "Guys and Dolls," they were taking advantage of the wide diversity of subjects available in drama.

From the Broadway of the '50s, the setting of "Guys and Dolls," to the England of the Tudors, the setting of "Seasons," represents a change that will tax both the abilities and imaginations of this repertoire company.

"A Man For All Seasons" was written by Robert Bolt. It was first performed on stage (both in London and New York) during the 1961-62 season. It won many awards during its long run, and it later was made into a highly successful motion picture. Paul Scofield had the lead role of Sir Thomas More both on stage and screen.

The playwright was born in Manchester, England. He is a graduate of the city's university. After serving stints in both the Army and Air Force, he began teaching at the Millfield School, Manchester.

He was still teaching there when his first play, "Flowering Cherry," (1958) was presented in London. The story of a man (Mr. Cherry) who substitutes for his inadequacies as a husband and as a father to his rebellious son first with liquor and then with a fantasy about retiring to a little farm to raise apples, the play was a success. Ralph Richardson played in the title role.

Bolt soon retired from teaching to devote full time to play writing. His latest effort is a play called "Gentle Jack" (1963).

"A Man For All Seasons is the story of one man's attempt to defy convention and stand upon the courage of his convictions. Sir Thomas More, statesman and scholar, is the man. Henry VIII's attempt to impose his will upon the English people is the convention.

Though Sir Thomas, a clever man as well as a highly moral and religious one, can reconcile himself to Henry's attempts to divorce his barren wife and, in the process, sever his ties with the Church of Rome, he cannot abide with the manner in which the King chooses to impose his will.

Sir Thomas must swear to and support an Act of Supremacy (making Henry sole head of the church of England), and an Act of Uniformity (in which the divorce and remarriage of the King is universally recognized and accepted).

The question of why a man of his deep moral and religious convictions cannot take the oath when other men, just as moral and just as religious can, provides the vehicle leading to keen insight into one man's personality which this play affords.

The Dramatizers are tackling this complex play head-on. Try outs have been announced for Jan. 5 and 6. Work on the stage (which will, as in "Guys and Dolls," be built by the Club members) has already begun.

The next meeting of the club will be Jan. 12. Anyone interested in theatre is invited to attend. The meeting will be held in the post playhouse. Bldg. 1237.

Vocalist Wins In Talent Test

Vocalist Sp4 Harry R. Nash, Hq. Co., Reception Station won first place and $25 in the monthly entertainment contest held at the South Harmony Church Field House.

Nash sang a medley of Christmas songs.

Other winners are Sp4 Henry C. Trice, 72nd Engr. Co., Kelley Hill, who performed a comedy act to win $25 and second-prize, and Pvt. Dennis Waltin, Co. C, 7th Bn., 2nd Bde., Army Training Center won third place and $25, for a combination song and piano playing act.

The monthly entertainment contests are sponsored by Special Services. The next contest will be held Jan. 24 at the Main Post service club. Interested persons are encouraged to compete.

Rex Harrison Accepts Top Role In 'Scrooge'

Rex Harrison will play the title role in "Scrooge," the musical film version of Dickens's "A Christmas Carol," it was announced by John Peverall, Cinema Center Films' European production executive.

The part was originally to be played by Richard Harris. Harris could not meet the film's starting date. Producer Robert H. Solo, succeeded in signing Rex Harrison for the role.

This will be the third movie in which Harrison displays his unique musical talents. His Academy award winning performance in "My Fair Lady" was followed by the title role in "Doctor Doolittle."

Harrison is currently starring in John Gale's production of "The Lionel" limited run at London's lyric Theatre on Jan. 24, 1970.

"Scrooge" will start filming at Shepperton Studios in January and be directed by Ronald Neame. Oswald Morris is director of photography for the Panavision and color film for which Leslie Bricusse has written the screen play, music-lyrics and will serve as executive producer.

Bricusse won an Academy award for his song "Talk to the Animals" in "Doctor Doolittle," and the current MGM release, "Goodbye Mr. Chips."

"Scrooge" is a Waterbury Films Limited production for Cinema Center Films, scheduled for release Christmas, 1970.

Use DD Form 1580 To Fly Commercial

WASHINGTON (ANF)— Some commercial airlines use DD Form 1580, Military Authorization for Commercial Air Travel, to confirm a soldier's leave status and thereby entitle him to a reduced military fare.

Soldiers flying commercially while on leave or within seven days after discharge from service should arrive at the airport with at least five copies of the form.

A soldier should request the person approving his leave to initiate DD Form 1580 if he expects to use commercial air travel. If copies of the form are not attached to leave orders, ask for them.

Finally, soldiers must wear their uniforms to get reduced military fares.

Social Security Number A Must

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Army Adjutant General wants all mail addressed to Army people to carry Social Security numbers in place of Service numbers.

The Army moved to the nine digit Social Security numbers July 1. Since then, Major General Kenneth G. Wickham said, the longer set of numbers has become the key for establishing positive identification of the addressee.

He asked for "wholehearted cooperation" from the public.

WHISTLE STOP

Holiday travelers will be safer if they stop for coffee breaks, says Secretary of Transportation John Volpe. If all the waitresses look like this, the holiday season should be a safe one. Some 15,000 restaurants are cooperating in The National Coffee Safety Stop Program's campaigning to prevent accidents with free coffee breaks during Christmas.

Children Receive Training On Danger Of Explosives

A series of special safety programs were presented at the seven elementary schools at Fort Benning last month.

The thirty-minute programs, conducted by a team from the 89th Explosive Ordinance Disposal Detachment and supervised by Fort Benning's Safety Office, was designed to help post dependent school children become aware of the hidden dangers of unexploded ammunition that may be lying about the military reservation.

SFC RICHARD J. MCCREA
Teaches Dangers Of Explosive Ordinance

In his address to the youngsters, SFC Richard J. McCrea noted that experts are trained to handle explosives and they know they must be careful. "Some items of ammunition are so sensitive that they might explode as a result of someone jarring the ground while walking near it," he said.

In describing the appearance of ammunition, McCrea said it could look like "an old tin can, a pasteboard box or a piece of pipe." "Any abandoned gadget you can't identify, even some things found around the homes, could be ammunition," he said.

In his discussion with the school children, the sergeant, an expert with high explosives, pointed out that thousands of tons of ammunition have been fired on all parts of the post since World War I, and some unexploded rounds may still be partly buried where they can wash to the surface, making them a hazard.

In explaining the dangers of unfamiliar ammunition the sergeant cited several examples of how youngsters have become seriously injured while handling explosives that were found.

A brief film produced at Fort Benning depicting the dangers of so called "dud" rounds was shown to the students.

In concluding his remarks McCrea urged the children to contact the Military Police, their parents or the 89th EOD, if any ammunition is discovered.

The safety lecture is a periodic event, usually presented each year, prior to the approaching holidays, when children are expected to be out in force playing on the Military Reservation.

President Nixon Establishes Medal

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — President Nixon has ordered the establishment of a Presidential Citizens Medal to recognize American citizens who perform "exemplary deeds of service for their country or their fellow citizens."

According to Executive Order, the President may bestow the medal upon any citizens at his sole discretion.

The Army Institute of Heraldry has been ordered to prepare a design of the medal for the President's approval.

Reports Say Camouflage Screen Easier To Handle, Absorbs Less

FORT BELVOIR, Va. — The Army will be getting a screen test. According to a proposal by the Combat Developments Command (CDC), a new lightweight camouflage screening device is intended to replace the present burlap-garnished cotton twine camouflage nets.

As indicated by CDC, the new screen is lighter and easier to handle with less fluid absorption than the conventional nets. The proposed synthetic screens have demonstrated radar transparency over radar equipment and radar scattering over non-radar equipment.

Conventional burlap garnished nets also have had to resort to families of sizes, shapes, color blends, and numerous engineering tests to meet general as well as specific requirement. This has created a tremendous logistical burden which is compounded by the scarcity of foreign procured burlap and substitute fibers in time of war.

CDC's proposed screens will be made of synthetic materials which are readily producible in this country under all conditions and further relieve the problem of supply by virtue of the modular concept to be employed in their design. Predictions are that a man with 20-20 vision and normal color sensitivity will have a ten percent chance of detecting this new system from 100 meters without visual aids.

A single camouflage screen will provide 400 square feet of area concealment and can be erected in a domed configuration. Two or more screens can be quickly joined along any of their edges to conceal larger objects.

Initial requirements call for this new system to offer three reversible designs for environmental characteristich of several world-wide terrains including woodlands, desert and snow. As such, it is another of CDC's efforts to prepare today's fighting soldier from tomorrow's equipment and doctrinal problems.

Racing Around

'70 Season Roars In With Riverside 500

By 2nd Lt. Jeff Martini

From the looks of things to come 1970 should be the banner year for the motorsports enthusiast. In stock car racing there'll be the return of the Plymouth factory team in the form of the new "Superbird" — Ford has already successfully tested the '70 Torinos at Daytona (faster than ever) — Dodge finally has a competitive car (the Daytona Charger) — and Mercury's got the Cyclone CJ and Cale Yarborough.

Don't forget all of the great drivers — Lee Roy Yarbrough, David Pearson, Donnie Allison, Cale Yarborough (Ford); Charlie Glotzbach, Bobby Allison, Buddy Baker, Bobby Isaac, James Hylton (Dodge); and as a guess, Richard Petty, Richard Brickhouse, Dave Marcis, Richard Brooks (1969 Nascar Rookie-of-the-Year) and (when available) Dan Gurney (Plymouth).

Richard Brooks in only his second year of racing finished in the top ten 12 times (3 of which were fifth place finishes or better). Would you believe $27,682 was the amount Brooks took home to keep the winter fires burning?

Nascar stock car racing is truly becoming a year round sport with the first race of the '70 season kicking off Jan. 18 with the Riverside 500. Last year was the first year that a Nascar pilot ever won at Riverside. Dan Gurney has won five of the seven races with Parnelli Jones winning the other one.

In international sports prototype racing, Ferrari hopes to have at least two of its new 512 prototypes ready for the Daytona 24 hour (Dec. 31-Feb. 1). Porsche will be back to defend its world title with a John Wyer (of Gulf GT-40 fame) managed team of 4.5 liter 917's. Also look for a strong challenge from France's Matra. There'll be the usual herd of American independent entrys but look for strong showings by Ferrari (Jackie Ickx and Mario Andretti) but the title will go to the steady consistent Porsches (Jo Siffert, Brian Redman).

SCCA's Tran's -Am series will be the most colorful exciting and closest racing of the season. Roger Penske promised American Motors the title — and I'll stick with a proven winner — I take Javelin just barely edging out Ford's Mustang with the Camaros and Barracudas breathing down each other's necks. The Dodge Challenger although utilizing roughly the same engines as the 'Cudas will lose out on team management and pit stops — who ever heard of having your mother give the pit signals!

Can-Am will be more interesting still with the addition of the new Chaparral (21?), the long awaited AVS Shadow, and a team of Ferrari 512's — with the icing being a Group 7 entry from none other than Japan's Toyota. Look for strong challenges from Holman — Moody (that reads M. Andretti) and of course the Kiwi twins (it may be triplets if Chris Amon joins Bruce and Denis).

The Continental Championship (vague name for the SCCA pro formula series) will still have the shadow of Formula I and the USAC championships (Indy, etc.) hanging over its young head. The Continental (if I may call it that) is still a great proving ground for young open-wheel drivers and will continue to grow and prosper.

The United States Auto Club (USAC) still has Andy Granatelli and Mario but after A. J. Foyt it starts to go down hill. Indy is still the "greatest spectacle in racing" but I'm waiting for the opening of the new California "Indy," Ontario Motor Speedway, before I make any statements about big, best, or greatest.

Drag Racing not only continues to grow but is gaining genuine respectability as it goes. The NHRA and AHRA have done a good job of trying to deal with 1) the increases in speeds and the resultant dangers to drivers and spectators and 2) the myriad of classes and championships. People identify more with cars that they own or wish to own — that's why Trans-Am and Drag Racing are so popular. Its hard for a person to identify with a $18,000 Lola — Chevy (What's a Lola?). But Ronnie Sox is a Super Stock 'Cuda or Mark Donohue in a Javelin is a little easier to follow and the average spectator can certainly recognize a contemporary automobile.

So look for the coming year to be exciting — remember automobile racing is the world's and America's second largest spectator sport — behind horse racing!

FIGHTS MAN AND THE TRACK

In a tight finish (with the peerless PFC Predicto leading the charge) the Bayonet staff managed to squeak by Unit Readiness by one game. The final results were 21-9 for the Bayonet to 20-10 for Unit Readiness. Captain A. G. Bliebergér of Unit Readiness compiled the best record of the week at 9-1, with Predicto (who is hoping to become Sp4 Swami in the near future) close behind at 8-2. The Bayonet staff's record now stands at 6-2-1. Predicto declined interviews with sports reporters except to mention that he is considering branching out, and in the future he may be quoting morning lines on the WAC of the Week. However, for now the paunchy one announces that the Bayonet staff will be challenging Range Control this week.

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

If you were asked how much it's worth to you to have the privilege of deer or turkey hunting in Georgia, what would your answer be?

If your answer is nothing, then chances are you aren't a deer or turkey hunter, and don't want to be one, so your answer is correct. By the same token, if you are not a big game hunter, you probably should not have to pay anything to support these activities of the State Game and Fish Commission—right?

No. You're wrong, and right, at the same time!

Stop and think about it. Just because you don't hunt big game now doesn't mean that you won't in the future, for a number of reasons. Maybe you don't hunt deer or turkeys now because there aren't any (or many) in the county where you live or hunt. Maybe quail or rabbit hunting hasn't declined enough yet from the encroachment of forests and thick brush where you hunt to discourage you enough to look for a more rewarding species to hunt with less frustration. Maybe you simply haven't ever tried deer or turkey hunting yet and really don't know whether you'd like it or not.

If the philosophy was always followed by the State Game and Fish Commission of only spending as much money on a particular species as was put into the State Treasury by hunters who hunted that species or who wanted to, deer would probably still be extinct in Georgia. It's the principle of which comes first, the chicken or the egg, all over again. When there were no or few deer in most areas of Georgia, few hunters hunted them, or wanted to, with an abundance of easier quail hunting readily available at their fingertips. But when quail hunting began declining and deer became plentiful; thanks to the efforts of the State Game and Fish Commission working with the change in habitat brought on by the decline of agriculture and the rise of forest, many ex-quail hunters began switching to deer. For instance, there were probably only a thousand or so deer hunters left in Georgia by 1896 in only 20 counties, while the number jumped to 86,000 in 1962 and to 140,000 in 1967, concurrent with the resurgence of the deer population in all of Georgia's 159 counties to record levels.

But now that a successful restocking and management program has brought back interest in deer hunting to the number two spot in Georgia, ahead of quail and just behind squirrels, the question of whether deer hunters are paying their own way has become even more important.

In any county which has a deer population, wildlife rangers of necessity must spend more of their time than ever before protecting whitetails from game thieves who shoot deer from automobiles at night or hunt them out of season or illegally with dogs. These problems increase in direct proportion to the numbers of the deer herd.

Georgia is second to no other Southeastern state for dove shooting. In fact, hunting for this grey speedster of the September skies is neck and neck with quail hunting for the title of Georgia's most popular game bird. During the 1967-68 season a survey indicated that 106,256 hunters spent 703,342 hours bagging 3,377,544 doves; 878,957 birds more than were taken by quail hunters.

What makes the dove such a popular game bird? Speed, agility, plentiful numbers and edibility. His habit of congregating in large numbers over a recently harvested grainfield in the fall creates an ideal situation for a community get-together that is eagerly awaited by shooters each year, marking the beginning of another hunting season.

In the opinion of many sportsmen, the dove is the hardest to hit flying target that a hunter can find. At the sight of a hunter or the sound of a gun, a dove loafing lazily along can come to life like the second stage booster of a Saturn rocket, swooping up, down and sideways in both directions like a bumblebee with indigestion. Surveys by ammunition companies indicate why Mr. Mourning Dove is so popular with the powder boys: the national average is six shots for every dove in the bag, or almost a box of twenty-five shotgun shells for every four doves killed. Of course, to get an average, a lot of hunters have to do better . . . and worse. But if he was easy to hit, he probably wouldn't be nearly as popular with hunters.

Unlike quail, doves require water in a pool or a stream to drink. During fairly dry periods when many sources of water are dried up, waterholes can provide some good dove shooting, especially in the late afternoon. Shooting doves coming to roost at sunset can also provide fast, sporty shooting, but hunters must be careful not to shoot into [illegible]

Ex-Football Star Finds Vietnam Rougher Than Gridiron Battles

CAMP RADCLIFF, RVN (ANF) — Carrying an M-60 machinegun up that last hill after a tough day in the jungle is rougher than busting heads with a 260-pound fullback, according to former college football and track star PFC Longio White, Jackson, Miss.

White, now a machinegunner with the Famous 4th Infantry Division's Co. D, 1st Bn., 12th Infantry, served as captain of Tennessee Agriculture and Industrials (Tennessee A&I) football and track teams.

During his athletic career he won the reputation as being one of the hardest hitting defensive backs in the country, and as leg man of the track team's mile relay team he led the way to one victory after another.

"I think sports really gave me a good preparation for what I'm doing now," related White. "It takes the same characteristics to be a good athlete as it does to be a good soldier. One thing you learn is that you can take the hardships. You learn how to work as a team and put the goal of the team ahead of everything else."

TCB CHAMPION

The 95th OC Co., 9th Stu. Bn., The Candidate Bde., won the brigade flag football championship at Doughboy Stadium. The win over the 183rd NCOC Co. was decided in an overtime of a scoreless game. The 95th Co. won the game for deepest penetration during the overtime.

2nd Lt. Lesak Takes First in Rifle Match

Awards have been presented to accomplished marksmen of the U.S. Army Infantry Center's small bore rifle teams. The awards were presented by Col. Talton W. Long, deputy post commander.

The teams, representing various units on post, are led by Edgar Burroughs, USAIC Match Director. Administrative noncommissioned officer in charge is SSG Morton Levran.

Receiving a china serving dish for first-place in the rifle individual division was 2nd Lt. Allen J. Lescak, Co. C, 58th Supply and Services Bn., USAIC Troop Command. Lescak was high scorer in the competition with a 272.

Capt. James H. Krilich, with a 270 score, and Capt. Francis J. Kormornik, 249, placed second and third respectively. Both men are assigned to Headquarters, 2nd Bn., 10th Artillery, 197th Infantry Bde.

Receiving top honors with the 45 caliber pistol was PFC Coy T. Brown, Co. A, 1st Bn., USAIC Troop Command. Coy scored 278-4.

SSG Jimmie G. Piercy, Co. D, 197th Support Bn., 197th Infantry Brigade, shot a 267-5 to take second place.

Lescak earned the third slot with the pistol, shooting a 240-6.

Winning the top honors in rifle team competition was Headquarters Co., 2nd Bn., 10th Artillery, 197th Infantry Bde., with a score of 1169. The team is composed of Captains Krilich, Komornik, William E. Boreland, Chester F. Dubberly, Gene Fong and Michael E. Foley.

Second place in the rifle team action was awarded to 1st Bn., 58th Infantry, 197th Infantry Bde., composed of Capt. Richard A. Stewart, SSG Juan Lopez, 1st Sgt. Clarice Williams, Sp4 Douglas Simmons, Sp4 Thomas M. Bumgarner and SFC Harry K. Dickerson. The team scored 1047.

Golf No Game To Beard, Pro's Top Money Taker

"Golf is a business with me, not a game," says Frank Beard, whose business is good these days.

Last week the Louisville, Ky., professional was acclaimed the year's top Professional Golfers Association money winner with purses totaling $175,223.

"I'm very happy I could win this, though I'm not as happy as I thought I would be," he said. "It's an example of the expectation being greater than the realization.

"It's just a great deal like going to the office," he said. "I've done my job, and by doing it well I can provide for my family and prove to my peers that I belong."

There can be no doubt in any pro's mind that Beard belongs. But Beard said he doesn't worry about his fellow pros.

"I don't know opponents exist," he said. He admitted, however, that he gave more than passing notice to Dave Hill, who finished second in earnings at $156,432.

"I watched his progress closer than I normally do. But the only person who can beat me is myself, so I don't worry about the others," he said.

This admission to individualism extends to his tour image, or, more accurately, non-image, his trademark.

"I'm not in a fashion parade nor am I flamboyant," he said. "I don't talk to the gallery. My golf speaks for itself. Other golfers try to gain the limelight by other means than their play. I'm not fond of recognition, but if I get it I want it to be genuine."

Beard's relationship with the gallery isn't so cordial as that enjoyed by some others on the tour.

"I don't have anything" in the way of gallery recognition, he said, and "if anything, it might be awe." This awe would be inspired "not so much by prowess as a golfer, but that I threaten to approach the heights of Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus. Otherwise they tend to think of me as a golfer with a sour demeanor."

There's no Arnie's Army or Nicklaus' Navy for Beard. "Dave Hill and I joke about our galleries — together we could probably fit them in a phone booth," he quipped.

He attributes his small following to the fact that "people want to be entertained and playing good golf—which I can perform at times—doesn't entertain them. It doesn't bother me that I don't get more attention."

Fans or no, Beard's golf pays. This is the third consecutive year his earnings have exceeded $100,000.

The seed for his success was planted when Beard was 12 years old. Though his father Ralph was a teaching pro, Frank decided on his own to take up the sport.

He played on golf teams at Louisville's St. Xavier High School and at the University of Florida.

3rd Ranger Co. Leads In Basketball League

By PFC John Waring

The 3rd Ranger Co. teams must come from the same mold: The winning one. In flag football the Rangers dominated brigade play and were the eventual post champions. Now the Ranger cage team has taken the early lead in TSB's basketball league with a 4-0 showing.

The Rangers kept their slate clean last week with convincing victories over 41st. Airborne Co. and the 10th Co. five. The margin of victory in both games was wide: 56-41 against 41st and 52-36 against 10th Co.

The 11th Co. team lost its share of the top slot when it dropped a game to previously winless 71st Co. The 71st Cagers came from behind in the waning moments to notch a 52-42 victory. The 11th Co. unit also helped the Rangers when they outscored undefeated 16th Co., 47-42.

The 41st Airborne team carved its own niche in the middle standings by edging HHC 40-36 last Thursday. This game gave 41st a good shot at second place and dropped HHC one step from the cellar.

Alone at the bottom of the league was the luckless 14th Co. team which lost two more decisions, dropping their winless record to 0-5.

Seaver's Winning Streak Tops National League

Tom Seaver, who led pitchers in New York's final drive for the Eastern Division title, strung 10 victories in a row for the National League's longest winning streak in 1969.

Official pitching statistics released by the league office in Cincinnati showed that Seaver did not lose a regular season game after Aug. 7 as the Mets rallied to overtake Chicago. Seaver also topped league hurlers with 22 victories.

While losing only seven games, Seaver posted a 2.21 earned run average but that was not good enough to lead the league. San Francisco's Juan Marichal claimed that honor with a 2.10 mark and also finished first with eight shutouts. He was 21-11 and completed 27 of 36 games he started.

Bob Gibson of the St. Louis Cardinals led in completed games with 28. Gibson, who started 32, wound up with a 20-13 record and a third-best 2.18 ERA. He paced pitchers last year with a league record ERA of 1.12.

In the dubious distinction department, season highs recorded were most hits yielded, 293 by Claude Osteen of Los Angeles; most home runs given up, 33 by Jim Merritt of Cincinnati; most games lost, 20 by Clay Kirby of San Diego; and most runs and most walks allowed, Bill Stoneman of Montreal with 123 and 123 respectively.

Basketball Staff Seeks Parents

Special Services is making a "final appeal" for parents to serve on the staff of the Youth Activities Basketball Commission. Volunteers will assist the commission's staff in formulating policies for the 1970 basketball program.

Interested individuals may contact the Athletic Office, 545-3371.

ATC CHAMPION

Red Sox Make 2 Trades To Get Gary Peters

The Boston Red Sox have nailed down two interrelated trades in order to get the man they wanted — southpaw pitcher Gary Peters of the Chicago White Sox.

The Red Sox first acquired infielder Tom Matchik from the Detroit Tigers in a swap for utility infielder Dalton Jones.

A half hour later, they announced the deal with Chicago that brought Peters and catcher Don Pavletich to Boston, in exchange for infielder Syd O'Brien and pitcher Billy Farmer plus an unspecified amount of cash.

General Manager Dick O'Connell said one deal depended on the other, with Matchik fitting in for the loss of O'Brien.

He said the key to the deal with Peters who "is the experience southpaw we have been seeking all along and the only one of the two or three we had in mind we really had a chance to get."

O'Connell said Pavletich will be a contender for the first string catching job and will add bench strength.

ATC Team Leads Pack In Basketball Tourney

The 1969 Brigade Level Basketball Tournament takes a break for the holidays after tonight's games but resumes play on Jan. 6.

Tonight's action pits TSB against 10th Aviation Group at 6:30 in Briant Wells Field House and at 8 o'clock on the same court TSB plays CTD, which trounced (72-63) 10th Aviation Tuesday. At 7 p.m. in Kimbro Gym at Sand Hill MEDDAC challenges ATC, which leads the pack with a 3-0 record.

In second spot on the charts is CTC with three wins and a loss. MEDDAC follows with 1-1. TSB and 10th Aviation are tied with a 1-2 record while TCB brings up the rear at 0-3.

After the holidays the schedule will follow the same pattern: Two games each Tuesday and Friday night at 6:30 and 8 at Briant Wells and one game each Tuesday and Friday at 7 p.m. at Kimbro.

On Jan. 6 the two games at Briant Wells will pit MEDDAC against 10th Aviation and TCB against TSB. ATC will meet CTC at Kimbro. Tenth Aviation will play ATC on Jan. 9 and TSB will play CTC at Briant Wells. MEDDAC will meet TCB at Kimbro.

A make-up game will be played on Jan. 10 at 7 p.m. at Briant Wells pitting MEDDAC against 10th Aviation.

On Jan. 13 TSB will meet ATC and TCB will play 10th Aviation at Briant Wells. At Kimbro MEDDAC will meet CTC. On Jan. 15 the two games at Briant Wells will be 10th Aviation vs. CTC and TCB vs. ATC. MEDDAC will play TSB at Kimbro.

Top College Receiver to Perform For North Team in Senior Bowl

The nation's No. 1 quarterback on total offense and passing yardage and the top college receiver in the country will perform for the North in the 21st annual Senior Bowl football game Jan. 10.

Sponsors of the all-star game have announced that quarterback Dennis Shaw of San Diego State and wide receiver Jerry Hendren of Idaho will play for the North team coached by Lou Saban of the Denver Broncos.

The 28 North squadmen include the nation's No. 2 scoring leader, Mack Herron, of Kansas State with 126 points, and rugged Mike Reid of unbeaten Penn State, winner of the Outland Trophy as top interior offensive lineman.

Reid and Missouri quarterback Terry McMillan are two of 10 North players who, because of NCAA regulations, cannot accept invitations to play in the game until after bowl games in which their teams will compete.

The 10 include McMillan, offensive lineman Mike Carroll and defensive back Butch Davis, all of Missouri, who will face Reid and running back Charley Pittman of Penn State in the Orange Bowl.

Also included in the 10 are Rose Bowl rivals Garvie Craw, Michigan back who led the Wolverines in scoring with 13 touchdowns, and AL Cowlings, 250-pound defensive stalwart for Southern California.

The other three are standouts for Sun Bowl-bound Nebraska — tight end Jim McFaland, linebacker Ken Geddes and defensive back Dana Stephenson.

OFFENSE

DEFENSE

Backs: Mike Delia, 198, of Indiana and Don Highsmith, 196, of Michigan State; backs Chuck Pitcock, 177, of Ohio State; linebacker Don Goode, 215, of Syracuse; guard Keith Lackey, 220, of Kansas State, and Jerry Sisemore, 245, of Oklahoma State, and halfback Benny Goodwin, 185, of Oklahoma State.

Post Deer Cause 5 Highway Mishaps

In one recent week alone, a total of five deer were involved in motor vehicle mishaps on the reservation.

In each case a deer ran into either the path of, or into the side of a privately owned motor vehicle.

All five of the deer were killed, and damage to the vehicles in most instances was extensive.

In addition to the property damage, this type of accident frequently results in personal injury to one or more occupants of the vehicles which strike the animals.

"I sincerely hope that our drivers will be on the lookout for this hazard. There may save themselves not only time and inconvenience but may avoid personal injury as well. These deer roam across many streets, roads, and highways of the reservation," said Norman Evans Fort Benning safety director.

Airborne Department Sergeant Wins Silver Star

By PFC John Waring

The mission began as a reconnaissance and ambush patrol in the Republic of Vietnam's Binh Duong Province. It almost became a deadly trap. But the gallant action of SSgt. Ormad B. Crabtree saved the lives of his five-man squad. His action also won him the Silver Star.

The incident unfolded last April when Crabtree, assigned to 1 Company Ranger, 75th Infantry, took his squad into an area of heavy enemy activity. Moments after setting up a position, the squad encountered a sizable North Vietnamese force. In the initial fire fight four members of the team were wounded. Crabtree suffered a concussion and multiple abrasions.

Vastly outnumbered the squad fought its way to a clearing. Crabtree had to carry some of the wounded to the new position. He then called in air strikes, gunships, artillery and a company-size reaction force.

After evacuating three members of the squad, Crabtree and his remaining squad member guided the reaction force into position. He accomplished his mission in spite of the wounds he had received.

On Nov. 26, 1969, Crabtree received the Silver Star for valorous action which saved the lives of his men and successfully accomplished the mission.

Crabtree is now assigned to the Ground Committee of the Airborne Department here at Fort Benning. In addition to the Silver Star, Crabtree holds the Bronze Star with "V" device, the Purple Heart and the Air Medal.

Allied Students Hold International Potluck Dinner At Skeet Lodge

By Sp4 Frank H. Valk

The table was filled with everything from Kim Chee to Arros con leche.

To most, it would seem as feasible as having mulligan stew with Veal Parmesan, but for Allied officers, it was a delightful evening of an international pot luck supper, sponsored by the Allied Student Training Division (ASTD).

Sixty Allied Officers, their wives and guests gathered at the Ft. Benning Skeet Lodge for the supper. Each Allied officer was to furnish a dish from his home country. Wives of Allies brought samples of the most popular food in their respective countries, and if an Ally didn't have a wife, he cooked it himself.

Such dishes adorned the table as Abodo (chicken and pork cooked in vinegar, garlic, pepper and bay leaves) from the Philippines; Machi (vegetables wrapped in grape leaves) from Saudi Arabia; Phadwunsen (noodles and eggs spiced with soy sauce) from Thailand; and Bul Goki (barbecued beef heavily spiced) from Korea.

The Allies and guests began their day with everything from games (which seemed to be most enjoyed by the children) to watching televised football games and generally getting together.

After the meal, Maj. Jon C. Stillman, chief of the Allied Student Training Division, welcomed the Allies and their guests, declared the event a success and stated that the division intended to have a similar supper in the future.

Special guests of the Allies and ASTD were Col. and Mrs. William Humphrey and Maj. and Mrs. Robert M. Herrick. Colonel Humphrey is the chief of Management and Budget and Herrick is the new deputy secretary for the Infantry School.

Most of the Allies agreed that this affair was much more than just combining foods from their countries.

"It is very important for us to be together like this, not only for the food, but for the company," Major O. Cabrales - Gualteros of Colombia said.

First Lieutenant Hamed A. Jubair of Saudi Arabi commented, "I would like to have this every night. It was a good chance for us to meet and discuss things. It also gave us a chance to understand each other better. Not only do we need to understand the American way of life, but we should also know our Allies from other countries. I enjoyed all the food I ate, but more than that I think I understand the other students better, not only by talking to them, but through becoming acquainted with their food, which I feel is a very important part of understanding another culture."

Commercial Carriers Reduce Fares For Servicemen During Holidays

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Reduced fares for military personnel during the holiday season have been announced by commercial air, bus and rail passenger carriers.

Bus furlough rates are limited to approximately 20 points along the eastern seaboard and in southern California. Local bus carriers should be contacted for specific points.

In the rail category, reduced fares of nearly 50 per cent are available.

The reductions, in the airline category, are of two types — military reservation fare and military standby fare.

On the former, savings of approximately 67 per cent on coach is available. Transportation officials caution, however, that this fare is not applicable from noon to midnight on Fridays and on Sundays.

For the latter, which requires no reservations, travel is assured once all reservations are honored.

ATC Shutdown to Cut Red Cross Donations

By Pvt. Gil Delaney

Persons entering the Second Brigade area of Fort Benning's Training Center are greeted by a sign which reads "More sweat in training, less blood in combat." With the closing of the Training Center, there also will be less blood for the Red Cross.

Training companies have been among the best sources of blood donors on post, says Jack H. Curtis, assistant field director for the Red Cross here.

The Red Cross conducted its final drive in the training companies last Saturday and collected 317 pints of blood. Officials turned away nearly 200 more prospective donors for reasons ranging from age (under 18) to too recent service in Southeast Asia.

Saturday's 317 donors brought the yearly total collected from ATC donors to 2,095 pints. A breakdown of the five drives held in the Training Center this year shows the October drive yielded the greatest volume with 639 pints collected.

August yielded the second highest with 554 pints collected. April was third with 394, and December fourth with 317. The February drive yielded 191 pints.

Curtis bemoaned the closing of the Training Center. "ATC has always been one of our best sources," he said. "If they replace the training companies with a Vietnam returnee unit, it could be pretty rough, because we don't take blood from returnees for at least two years."

Artillery Committee Uses Skits To Teach

By Marian Jones

The Infantry School's Artillery Committee has some unique training aids.

Their instructors have Artillery red lining in their jackets and they wear red socks. Then there is the Goldman and Kelly song and dance team.

All of this talent, energy and imagination goes into presenting their block of instruction to officers in the advanced course classes.

According to Maj. Edward Kelly of the team of Goldman and Kelly, the Artillery instruction at the school needed a little life. "Any class that extends for four hours can be boring regardless of its subject," he said adjusting his Artillery red sock.

In addition to Kelly and his partner, Maj. Paul Goldman, who is known as the Infantry School's answer to Moshe Dayan, there is Jeri Brown, a secretary in Operations and Training along with the two Dans — Maj. Redner and Clark who present a briefing on how the Texas National Guard prepares for combat.

Kelly was responsible for devising the Artillery presentation which is not just an act but a series of give and take comedy reliefs which break up the 22-hour block of instruction.

Since the new system of instruction was put into effect, approximately one year ago, the class average has been consistently in the 90s.

At the present the committee will confine its act to the career course classes where they have proven that the instruction doesn't have to be as dull as the subject.

World War II Vets At High Premium

The average World War II veteran, now 49.3 years of age, is fast approaching the higher premium hurdle of 50 if he still retains his G.I. term insurance, the Veterans Administration said recently.

The VA says that in most cases the higher insurance cash outlay at age 50 can be eased in a number of ways.

One way is a modified life plan. If purchased at age 50, it will have a constant premium of $15.90 for a $10,000 policy.

Some 211,000 eligible veterans have taken advantage of this plan since it was made available in 1965.

Helicopter Ambulances Ease Wounded To Hospitals

ZAMA, JAPAN — A unique and "one of a kind" mission is being performed in Japan by what might be called the "World's smallest airline" — the 587th Medical Detachment (Helicopter Ambulance).

Japan is a country of narrow, winding, congested roads where it is not uncommon to travel in an automobile a total of two miles in an hour. When the buildup of hospitals in Japan began in late 1965, it became immediately apparent that the use of helicopters was a necessity because of these conditions.

In May 1966, the 587th Medical Detachment (HA) became part of United States Army Medical Command, Japan; with the mission of flying the medical evacuees arriving from the Republic of Vietnam to one of the four Army hospitals of the Medical Command, located around and in the greater Tokyo metropolitan area outskirts and the Naval Hospital at Yokosuka.

The distances flown on a single flight may vary from 35 to 78 ground miles, which although not tremendous distances, would require a ground ambulance five to six hours to drive. A helicopter ambulance could cover the same distance in an average flight time of 17 minutes or less. In addition to the significant savings in time, air evacuation alleviates almost completely the inherent danger of wound aggravation and patient discomfort caused by riding in a ground ambulance for such a lengthy period.

Since all the flights are near or over the metropolitan district of Tokyo, the flying conditions are seldom considered perfect as the area is constantly plagued by "smog" conditions. If there is no wind, the visibility may run from one-eighth to better than 5 miles. In addition, this great variance may be experienced within 5-5 air miles. It is a common occurence that even on a clear day the wind factors are so high that flying is often prohibited completely or a moderate turbulence exists which continually tests the aviator's skill.

This small "airline", which has moved more than 50,000 patients since its inception, is only authorized nine UH-1D helicopters, eight Medical Service Corps pilots and 36 enlisted men, yet they have set a few records. In a single month, 7,404 patients were moved.

The detachment, in addition to the patients, has flown more than 100,000 pounds of medical supplies within the command to include vital whole blood and much needed emergency medical supplies. Coupled with these records, better than 2,000 passengers, mostly physicians on a consulting basis or to assist in operations, have been transported between the hospitals. The unit has logged well over 11,900 actual flying hours.

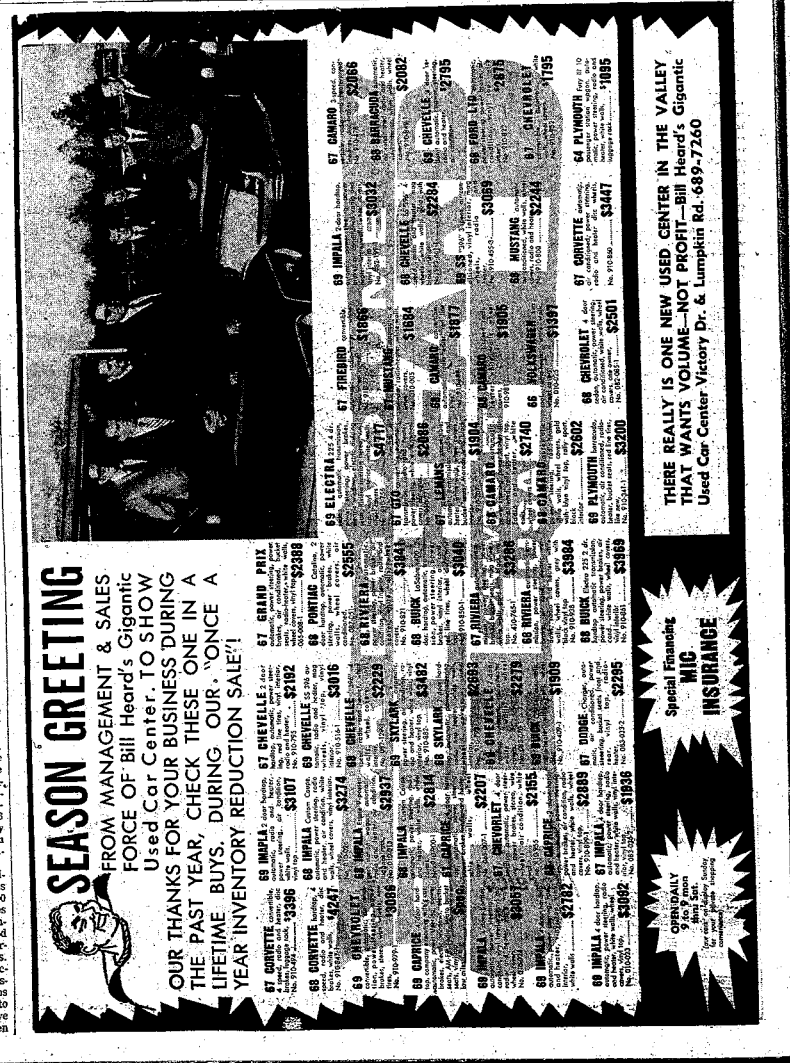
The mission of the 587th differes from normal medevac operations in that there is at least one regularly scheduled U. S. Forces evacuation flight landing daily at Yokota Air Base. Weather conditions permitting, the airborne ambulances can be assured of daily evacuation flights. Since the daily patient load varies and special evacuation flights may arrive from Southeast Asia at any time, the 587th must also be able to respond on an around-the-clock basis, seven days a week.

To assist in a continued smooth flow of patient evacuation and to aid in handling the unscheduled flights, all hospitals, casualty staging areas, and the helicopters are in constant radio communication. This radio network ensures that if physicians or special medical equipment are required for a patient, the arrival of the helicopter at the hospital landing pad will be expected, and the needed treatment can begin as soon as possible.

In addition to advising of pre-arrival needs, the radio net has proven to be invaluable in the resupply of needed blood and respanding rapidly to emergency requirements, accidents and transfer of special equipment from one hospital to another.

The pilots and men of the 587th, most of whom are veterans of Vietnam, are skilled, well-trained, and know the importance of their mission. The Medical Service Corps pilots received basic medical care instruction when they attended the AMEDS aviation course at Ft. Sam Houston, Tex.

A fully qualified "medic," who is a permanent member of the crew, personally attends the patients during the flight. The experience and skill of the members of the detachment is attested by the number of medals and decorations held by the unit's men. At last count, the men hold a Silver Star, 10 Distinguished Flying Crosses, 5 Bronze Star Medals, 9 Army Commendation Medals, 159 Air Medals and 7 Purple Hearts.



Allied Students Are Guests Of Lions Club

"During the year Allied Students are brought into the organization as guests of the military representatives in the club," noted Walter R. Braun, president of the Columbus Chapter.

The foreign officers were greeted at the entrance to the Mirror Room by the Lions. Each student was delegated a Lions sponsor, who he sat beside during the evening.

Braun pointed out the dinner was an annual event, which is a culmination of several other annual programs for the Allied Students.

The dinner began much as it always does for the Lions with the Pledge of Allegiance, followed by the group singing "My Country, 'Tis of Thee."

An invocation was then presented asking for God's blessing on the members and guests of the club, with a prayer for peace and world mutual understanding.

Prior to introducing the students to the Lions, Maj. Jon C. Stillman, chief of the Allied Student Training Division, explained the mission of the Lions Club to his men and cited several of the annual events that the Lions sponsor each year. The major then turned his attention to the club members and spoke of the missions of the Allied Student Training Division.

The highlight of the evening was an informal concert presented by the Choral Guild of Columbus College, under the direction of Dr. Katherine Mahan, professor of music.

Doctor Mahan, who has entertained the Allied Students at Christmas for "the past seven or eight years," invited all to join in with the singing. "Now, I want everyone to sing . . . stomp your feet if you like," she said.

"The singing is pretty," said Maj. Pyung Sik Min of Korea. "Some I can recognize . . . the music is familiar," he said.

The song fest terminated with "Silent Night" as Allied Students and Lions gathered with the college chorus around the piano.

Braun said it was his hope that the students had learned something of American Civic Clubs as well as had a good time.

When the evening had ended, and the men were beginning their exit from the Mirror Room, a few Allied Students could be heard humming the American Christmas Carols that they had just learned.

SS Pays Disabled Workers

"Many people in the eleven county area we serve are not receiving money to which they are entitled," Robert E. O'Neal, Manager of the Columbus Social Security Office stated. "It's a shame," he continued, "that people don't realize that Social Security is not just for the retired or the elderly. We also pay persons who are unable to work because of a disability."

Disability benefits are payable to persons who have worked under Social Security, and who have an illness or accident which will keep them out of work for at least twelve months. This program also pays monthly checks to the wife and children of a disabled person.

"We know there are people in our area who qualify, but who have not applied for disability benefits," O'Neal said, "and we feel this is simply because they do not know about this phase of Social Security." We urge anyone who feels he qualifies for disability benefits, or who wishes further information on any phase of the Social Security program, to call, write, or visit us at 301 15th St., Columbus — phone 324-5461. We will be glad to answer any questions and to help in any way we can."

Office hours are 8:45 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday thru Friday.

New Bottle Is Safer

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Armed Forces have been turning to the child-proof pill bottle to protect small children from taking medicine not prescribed for them.

Called a "Palm-N-Turn" container, the cap is almost impossible for a child under six years old to open. The cap must be pushed downward with the palm of the hand and turned at the same time before it can be removed.

A two year study conducted at the Army's Madigan General Hospital, Tacoma, Wash., showed that only one poisoning occurred from 339,000 drug prescriptions in the Fort Lewis Madigan - McChord AFB area.

The Army Surgeon General's Office said test results stimulated the Defense Department to approve the cap for use in military pharmacies.

Authorities said that if this type of cap were used on other consumer products potentially harmful to children, an estimated 360 childhood fatalities would be prevented annually, and childhood poisonings would be reduced by 80 per cent.

Compassionate Study May Reassign Soldier

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Compassionate Review Branch, CRB a segment of the Office of the Adjutant General, receives and processes about 3000 requests for compassionate reassignments or deferments per month. Based on statistics, approximately half of these cases are favorably considered.

Most of the cases that are favorably considered are those within the category of problems resulting from: Recent death of spouse's or child; recent divorce when Army member has been awarded custody of the children; recent severe psychotic episode, as a result of which the affected person has been institutionalized; and recently incurred tuberculosis or poliomyelitis, when prolonged hospitalization has been scheduled or effected.

Requests based solely upon threatened spearation or divorce action or physcho-neurosis resulting from family separation incident to military assignments are not normally favorably considered. In addition, normal problems associated with pregnancy are not considered the sole basis for reassignment of an Army member.

These are the types of requests most often received by the CRB and in every instance each is carefully reviewed and considered to determine if the request is based on problems which place an unusual and severe hardship on the individual or his family and whether the problem would cease to exist within a reasonable time upon granting a reassignment or deferment to the Army member.

From Mule Skinner To Sergeant Major

The bugle for evening sable call sounded at 1630 hours.

Everybody knew what that meant: mules and mounts had to be as clean as the Springfield rifles before anyone went to chow.

And the stable sergeant made sure everything from hoofs to teeth were just right.

"Maintenance is maintenance — whether it was on an animal or a vehicle," said CSM Frank Plass, new command sergeant major for the 197th Infantry Brigade, commenting on his first Army assignment with a 6th Infantry Regiment mule drawn machine gun company.

In 1939 when Plass was stationed at Jefferson Barracks, St. Louis, Mo. the use of mules and horses was bound for virtual extention from most Army units in about three years.

Times would change, but in that pre-war year, training went on as usual.

On morning marches to the range "the CO and first sergeant would ride horses. Everyone else walked, leading a mule," said Plass.

The 30-caliber machine guns, were 1917 models (standard, then, for mounted and unmounted troops) and water cooled. Mules toted the guns and tripods as well. ("The tripods weighed as much as that.") laughed the sergeant major.)

Missouri winters often worked a hardship on the water cans for the machine guns cooling systems — Plass remembers seeing them frozen and on the other extreme, so hot from use that the water boiled.

The water probably never got as hot as the stable sergeant did in the evenings when a mule, or mount didn't pass his turn-in inspection.

Animals had to be fed, their hooves cleaned, teeth cleaned, coat cleaned, dried, curried and all leather equipment would be standing nothing short of tall.

There was no chance of getting to the mess hall early unless the job was done right. The stable sergeant's keen eye and keener wrath made certain of that.

"You took care of your horse or mule before you took care of yourself," Plass said. "If you don't take care of it, it won't take care of you: It's that simple with any type of equipment."

After a year with the 6th Infantry, Plass was stationed with the 4th Infantry Regiment in Alaska — the first of a great many moves during a long and varied Army career.

Before assuming the 197th Brigade command sergeant major job, Plass was senior sergeant major of the 1st Bn., 29th Inf.

This is his 4th tour of duty here at Ft. Benning.

Describing the 197th's mission as a "very important" one, Plass added: "There is no other brigade, in the U. S. Army like it. We are very lucky to have so many combat veterans with vast knowledge and experience. It helps produce better trained combat leaders for the Army."

Braves Set Date For Spring Training

The Atlanta Braves reporting dates for spring training are Feb. 17 for pitchers and catchers, and Feb. 24 for the rest of the squad, the team has announced.

Army Training Center Will Host Children

By Betty J. Kemper

The U.S. Army Training Center, (ATC), has assumed a holiday look that will greet more than 800 children expected to attend a Christmas party at 9:30 a.m. tomorrow at Theater 2 in the Sand Hill area.

Cadre and trainees, using their knowledge of camouflage tactics, covered tanks with pine boughs and fashioned huge candy canes from the barrels.

A vacant building is wrapped and decorated to resemble a giant Christmas gift, and the center of attraction, a massive Christmas tree, is topped with the familiar Training Center crest in place of the traditional star.

Manger scenes are prevalent throughout the area and Santa and his reindeer decorate the rooftops of many of the company buildings.

Children of cadre, former members of ATC and civilians are invited to the party which will feature a visit from Santa, Christmas movies, group singing and refreshments.

The Rhythmettes, a dance group from Eddy Junior High School, will entertain before the showing of the movie and the school's choral group, the Vocaletts, directed by Miss Aurelia Pitts, will present a selection of Christmas songs.

Training Center Re-Ups 17 Men

By Sp5 John Klopf

Taking the oath during a mass reenlistment ceremony performed in the Training Center Headquarters conference room were: 1st Sgt. Cleo F. Stevens, Co. E, 9th Bn., 2nd Bde.; SFC Dene Grimes, Co. A, 8th Bn., 2nd Bde.; SFC David L. Dubose, HHC; SSgt. Richard J. Elks, HHC; SSgt. Paul R. Barnett, Co. A, 6th Bn., 2nd Bde.; SSgt Earl Rushin, Co. C, 1st Bn., 1st Bde.; SSgt. Richard W. Chatman, HHC; SSgt Russell Whetstone, HHC; SSgt. Cornelius Jones, HHC; Sgt. William L. Cope, Rec. Sta.; Sgt. John R. Sartin, Co. D, 1st Bn., 1st Bde.; Sp5 Bobby L. Gwyn, Rec. Sta.; Sp5 Donald L. McCluskey, HHC; Sstg. Arthur Massarano, Rec. Sta.; Sp6 Harry J. Donnelly, Rec. Sta.; Sp6 Robert Edmond, HHC; SSgt. Arthur Mas-Shepherd, Co. D, 1st Bn., 1st Bde.

Brig. Gen. Oscar E. Davis administered the oath to the men, whose combined reenlistments totaled 66 years. Their variable reenlistment bonuses, ranging up to $7,532, topped $22,504.37 overall.

Career Opportunity Day ceremonies were directed by SFC John R. Boeck, senior career counselor. SSgts. Joseph N. White, Fred B. Murdock, Orland A. Rice and George L. Rock, all from the Training center reenlistment office, assisted.

Know Your Berries

Mistletoe berries are deadly if eaten. Some other poisonous plants are: wisteria, iris, larkspur, narcissus, castor beans, rosary pea and daffodil. That the ancient Greeks used hemlock for a suicide potion is well known. But did you know that the Delaware Indians used mountain laurel for the same purpose? The rhubarb stalk, of course, is safe to eat but the rhubarb leaves are poisonous. They contain oxalic acid.

Let's Hope He Makes It

A Review Of The Sizzling Sixtys

By Sp4 Paul Miller

At the close of 1959, the approaching decade was already being dubbed by many as the "Sizzling Sixties." With expectations of startling and rapid advances in technology, paralleled with a promise for an even richer and prosperous economy, one's attitude could only be optimistic.

The "Sizzling Sixties" was to be a decade of promise and hope for many. For America, the period was to be a decade of greatness, in which the country would strengthen even further its position as a world leader.

As events developed, many of man's predications for the 1960s became reality. It was America that advanced so boldly into space as to put a man on the moon in one decade; it was America that bridged the video gap between the continents with the introduction of the Telstar and Earlybird Satellites, making it possible for live television programs to be broadcast across the ocean; it was America that discovered a vaccine to thwart the spread of German measles, thus preventing the crippling of thousands of the world's children; and it was America that spurred the way for the first transplant of a human heart.

Though progress in certain areas was present and phenomenally rapid, as some had forseen, other events which occurred during this period will tend to overshadow these advances and cast a rather dismal light on the decade.

It seems inevitable that historians will record the last 10 years, not as the Sizzling Sixties as one may have dubbed it in 1959, but rather as the decade of tragedy and unrest.

It was during this sometimes bewildering period that America cried out, angrily with tears in her eyes, as she witnessed the assassinations of a president, a candidate for president and a leader of the Negro minority.

America examined her conscience as she watched

MUST Hospitals Prove Successful in Vietnam

WASHINGTON Inflatable hospitals, known officials as MUST units (medical unit, self-contained, transportable) have proved so successful in the Republic of Vietnam that the Army surgeon general has called for the eventual conversion of all Army field hospitals to MUST units.

Conversion of some medical field units outside Vietnam is expected in 1970.

Until 1966 when the first MUST was introduced to Vietnam, field hospitals did not differ much from those used during World War II. To a medical officer of 1945, the solemn sight of injured soldiers lying on cots in chilly, dimly lighted tents was all too familiar.

The medical tent of World War II was lighted by bare bulbs, floored with dirt and dependent upon outdoor temperature. MUSTs have modern operating room lights and well-illuminated wards, a plastic-like flooring that is cleaned with a wet vacuum cleaner and a self-contained air conditioning and heating system.

Three major elements comprise the MUST, each of which can be airlifted and dispatched by truck or helicopter.

Complex and delicate surgical operations can be performed in the MUST's first element, an expandable unit with a total inside floor area of 206 square feet. When collapsed, the unit can be transported in the bed of a standard Army Truck.

The second is the utility element—a large box that provides electricity, heating and air conditioning for the portable hospital, keeping the inside comfortable when outside temperatures plunge to -65 or soar to plus 120 degrees Fahrenheit.

The third element is an air-inflatable unit that creates a giant ward when several units are connected.

Five partially equipped MUST units are now serving Army casualties in Vietnam as 60-bed hospitals, and the Navy has two 40-bed MUST hospitals to serve the Marines. Refinement of the MUST in the past three years has resulted in field hospitals as advanced as many U. S. city hospitals.

Testing is now being undertaken by the Army Materiel Command on a new MUST component — a water and waste management system. Soon after the first of the year testing will begin on the MUST food service.

The water and waste management system consists of a utility room complex, a hospital incinerator, a waste treatment unit and a water purification unit. In the central utility room complex are toilets and sanitizing facilities, lavatory, showers and a human waste incinerator.

The water purification unit contains enough tanks to store all the potable water required for the operation of a given MUST complex. A surgical hospital requires about 14,000 to 15000 gallons of water each day and the new unit will eliminate much of the time and effort now needed to haul water.

Final testing of the food service system, complete with kitchen and dining room, is expected in 1970. An expandable shelter houses the MUST kitchen and an inflatable shelter is the dining room for the staff and ambulatory patients. Ward containers also have refrigeration space.

Other equipment developed for the MUST includes pharmacy, x-ray and dental facilities. Featured in current MUST hospitals are complete operating rooms, central sterile preparation rooms, a clinical laboratory, flash sterilizer and modern ward facilities.

The new equipment will improve the MUST units in Vietnam that are already the most modern field hospitals in the world.

VA INSURANCE

Q. My World War II insurance is on a term basis, and the premium keeps rising. Is it too late to convert it?

A. No. You can convert this insurance at any age. The VA office to which you pay your premium will be glad to furnish information on all the types of policies to which you can convert.

SICK CALL

Q. May I go on sick call any time during the day or only in the mornings?

A. Routine sick call is held only in the mornings. In the afternoon the doctors handle physical examinations and outpatients. If a real emergency arises in the afternoon or at night, you should report to the Emergency room at Martin Army Hospital.

CIVIL SERVICE

Q. I am applying for a Civil Service position with the Federal Government. While in Vietnam, I suffered a gunshot wound to my left leg and am now drawing 20 per cent disability from the VA. Am I entitled to any preference for a position because of the disability?

A. Yes, being a disabled veteran qualifies you for a 10 per cent preference. To secure this preference, you must submit to the Civil Service Commission a statement from the VA to the effect that you are receiving disability compensation.

MOVIES

Q. I understand the Army has banned the movie, "Oh, What a Lovely War," from post theaters because of its anti-war theme. Is this true?

A. The movie has not been banned from post theaters. However, because of extremely poor box-office performance, the film's run has been reduced from two days to one. This action has nothing whatever to do with the film's subject matter but was taken solely because of the exceedingly poor performance of the film.

PERMANENT PROMOTIONS

Q. I understand the Army has dropped the Enlisted Permanent Promotions. Is this true and if so, why?

A. Yes, the Army has dropped the dual enlisted promotion system. In its place is a single system which eliminates temporary and permanent rank distinctions. Basic purpose of the change is to help streamline enlisted advancement procedures by doing away with the cumbersome requirement for the maintenance of two separate 'sets of books' for temporary and permanent promotions. Impact on the individual is virtually nil since the so-called permanent promotion represented, for the most part, nothing more than administrative upgrading to a rank already held with no tangible gain in pay, prestige, security or responsibility.

Our Obligations

Everyone has obligations. Teachers, parents, scholars, servicemen and women—no matter what the walk of life—we are obligated by the nature of our society, whether we've thought about it or not.

One definition of the word obligation by Webster states: "That which a person is bound to do or forbear; any duty imposed by law, promise, or contract; by the relations of society, or by courtesy, kindness, etc."

President Nixon perhaps best asserted the meaning of our obligations as members of the U.S. Armed Forces when he spoke last June at the Air Force Academy commencement exercises. He said, "I believe that we must balance our need for survival as a nation with our need for survival as a people. Americans, servicemen and civilians, must remember that defense is not an end in itself—it is a way of holding fast to the deepest values known to civilized men."

No country can survive for long unless its people survive within it. By this we mean, dedicated and compassionate men and women of our great country must hold fast to the human values we deeply believe and accept as a highly civilized society. Among these aesthetic values are freedom, heritage, happiness, prosperity and peace. To lose any one of these from within means we would fail to survive as a people; in turn, we would also fail to survive as a nation.

As Americans, serviceman and civilians, we must band together, work together and build together. Above all, we must be idealists if we are to continue to progress and be respected as the leader of the Free World.

Individualism and enthusiasm are urgently needed if we are to remain a proud society of idealists. This is how America became the greatest nation on earth. This is how she will remain the greatest nation on earth.

We have only to love our country and contribute our fair share of effort as individuals and as a team to achieve and retain the goals we hold fast as "... the deepest values known to civilized men."

We have only to fulfill our obligations—as a people and as a nation.

The Law And You

Defraud By Merchants

If you have been defrauded or otherwise legally wronged by a local merchant, and all private attempts to settle the matter have failed, is it time to go to court? Not necessarily. First, consider the possibility of referring your case to the Armed Forces Disciplinary Control Boards throughout the armed forces. Many servicemen are aware of the board's "disciplinary" functions. However, the boards also have the authority to receive and act on servicemen's complaints involving transactions with local businessmen. There is at least one board for each Army area.

Powers

Each board has the authority to investigate complaints and can recommend appropriate action to the major commander, including placing a business establishment "off limits" to all military personnel.

Procedure

As a protection against emotional or unfounded complaints, the board requires each complaint to be in affidavit form, sworn to before a Notary Public or an officer entitled to administer oaths. The affidavit plus relevant supporting documents is then forwarded to the board.

Where a credible complaint is made to the board, a letter may be sent to the proprietor or owner concerned informing him of the charges made and inviting him to rebut the charges made or take steps to correct the deficiency. If the matter remains unresolved the proprietor is afforded the opportunity to appear at a formal hearing. The results of the hearing will determine whether the board will make any recommendations to the area commander.

Many cases are resolved by letters of inquiry from the board. In other cases, the board may refer the serviceman to the appropriate agency, depending upon the nature of the complaint.

Before filing a complaint, it's a good idea to see your nearest Legal Assistance Officer, who can advise you of the legal sufficiency of your complaint and, if appropriate, can help you prepare an affidavit for submission to the board. (ANF)

WHITE HOUSE REPORT

(On June 27, 1969, the President concurred in the conclusions and recommendations of a special task force looking into the problems of narcotics, marihuana and dangerous drugs. The portion of the report relating to marihuana is being reprinted for Bayonet readers. This is the fifth of a seven part series. It was prepared by the Armed Forces Press Service at Washington, D. C.)

Marihuana vs. Alcohol

Some marihuana users have tried to justify their behavior by claiming that it is no worse than consuming alcohol. It is estimated that the consumption of alcohol is a major problem for some five to six million Americans who are unable to control their drinking. In most cases, excessive drinking of alcoholic beverages causes serious physical, psychological, social and vocational problems for these people and their families. It is well known that one half of the fatal traffic accidents in the United States are related to excessive drinking.

While alcoholism constitutes a major social problem, surely it is not valid to justify the adoption of a new abuse on the basis that it is no worse than a presently existing one. The result could only be added social damage from a new source. It would not solve our alcohol problem and would only lead to additional numbers of marihuana intoxicated individuals. Moreover, marihuana, unlike alcohol, is nearly always consumed by its users for the express purpose of obtaining a "high," a disorientating intoxication.

Allegations have been made and attributed to government officials that marijuana is no more dangerous than alcohol. When these stories appear in the mass media they often do considerable harm, even when subsequently retracted. Dr. James Goddard, former Commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration, was extensively quoted as saying that marihuana is no more dangerous than alcohol. Dr. Goddard was, in fact, misquoted and never made such a statement. Although the wire service issued a written apology, the retraction has never caught up with the misquote.

The Position of the AMA and Who

The American Medical Association has stated that marihuana is a dangerous drug and, as such, is a public health problem. They reiterate that while no physical dependence develops this does not mean that it is an innocuous drug. Further research is considered essential, and educational programs should be directed to all segments of the population.

The World Health Organization recently reaffirmed its previous opinions that cannabis is a drug of dependence, produces public health and social problems, and that its control must be continued. More basic data are needed on acute and chronic effects on the individual and society to permit accurate assessment of the degree of hazard to public health.

Marihuana Use and Crime

Aside from the fact that marihuana use and possession is in itself a crime, it has not been proven that its use is a direct cause of other types of criminal behavior. Generally, assertions that marihuana plays a casual role in the commission of crime are based on reports from other than scientific agencies. The validity of these impressions is, however, questionable because of the unscientific basis on which such data has been collected. The New York Mayor's Committee (1944) reported that many criminals might use marihuana, but the Committee did not feel marihuana played a casual role in crime. In the United Kingdom, the use of cannabis has not been generally regarded as a direct cause of crime.

The British cannabis report by the Advisory Committee on Drug Dependence (1968) concluded:

There have been reports, particularly from experienced observers in the Middle and Far East, which suggest that very heavy long-term consumption may produce a syndrome of increasing mental and physical deterioration to the point where the subject is tremulous, ailing and socially incompetent. This syndrome may be punctuated on occasions with outbursts of violent behavior. It is fair to say, however that no reliable observations of such a syndrome have been made in the Western World, and that from the Eastern reports available to us, it is not possible to form a judgment on whether such behavior is directly attributable to cannabis-taking.

Fort Rucker Woman Named 3rd Army Wife of Year

HEADQUARTERS, 3rd U. S. ARMY Fort McPherson, Ga. — Mrs. B'Jo Summers of Fort Rucker, Ala., has been named Third U.S. Army Military Wife of the Year for 1970.

A native of McKenzie, Tenn., she is the wife of Col. Archie W. Summers, deputy director of the Department of Rotary Wing Training at the Army Aviation School, Fort Rucker.

Her selection was based on her long and continuing record of community services during her husband's military career. Her major objective has been "to understand and appreciate the views, customs and lives of the people of foreign countries."

The culmination of this objective was realized during her 13 months' residence in Vieniance, Laos. Mrs. Summers gave art lessons to Lao nationals, taught English for the Lao-American Association and made her home available as a meeting place for various nationalities.

Since returning to the United States she and her husband have spoken to a wide variety of civic groups in Alabama, Illinois and Florida, describing the people and cultures of Southeast Asia and stressing that "all people regardless of nationality, want the same things, feel the same things and enjoy the same things."

While on assignment in Germany Mrs. Summers helped present American culture through plays and dramatics, and while in Japan she worked through the schools and orphanages and with a radio program of the Armed Forces network.

Her multitude of activities at Ft. Rucker include serving as a member of the executive board of the Officers Wives' Club and as editor of the "Hedgehopper Magazine," an OWC publication.

She is also a member of the Speakers Bureau and the Coin Club, and is active in little theaters and serves on the post's Sunday School staff. Additionally she is a sponsor of Allied students. She has also served as a Red Cross volunteer for 12 years.

Mrs. Summers was formerly employed by Radio Station WDIA, Memphis Tenn., and participated in a closed circuit radio program of music and discussion for hospital patients at Fort Rucker. She also has made several guest appearances on commercial television.

She studied French at the U.S. Army Language School, Monterey, and the Foreign Services Institute in Washington, D.C., and has attended the University of Georgia. Her diversified hobbies include work in ceramics and porcelain, candle making, hat making, painting, embroidery, researching English history, coin collecting, community theater and water ballet.

Mrs. Summers is oriented "through and through" to military life. Her father was in the service; she has an adopted son serving in Vietnam as a helicopter pilot. The Summers have another son who is a 10th grade student.

Mrs. Summers was selected Third U.S. Army Military Wife of the Year from among nominees submitted by major installations of the Third U.S. Army.

Mrs. Summers' name has been submitted as Third Army's nominee for Army Military Wife of the Year. This person and wives designated from the other military services will be the finalists from whom the Military Wife of the Year will be selected.

The program is conducted in conjunction with the commercially sponsored "Art Linkletter's World Tour of Military Wives and Kids."

29th Wives Hold Christmas Tea

Mrs. Johnny J. Johnston and the ladies of the 1st Bn. 29th Infantry held a Christmas Tea for the wives of the 197th Infantry Bde. at the Supper Club.

The decor was in the traditional Christmas fashion with a giant, brightly-lit tree gracing the center of the room.

Mrs. Orwin C. Talbott was guest of honor.

Highlighting the occasion was a musical presentation by the Polka Dots, under the direction of Mrs. Robert G. Hertle.

As a finale the ladies were paid a surprise visit by Santa Claus. Behind the jolly Ho-Ho-Ho's was Lt. Col. Johnny J. Johnston!

Chairwoman of the decorating committee was Mrs. Thomas F. Madden Jr.

TCB Students Express True Spirit of Season

For many needy children in this area Santa Claus and his elves appeared early in the person of Col. Robert M. Piper, commanding officer of The Candidate Brigade, and members of his command.

Colonel Piper, accompanied by cadre and candidates from the various Officer Candidate and Non-Commissioned Officer Candidate Battalions within the Brigade, appeared on the Miss Patsy Show (WTVM-Ch. 9) on Dec. 8, 12, and 15. The candidates entertained more than 200 needy children with various acts and then presented each child with several gifts. The gifts were purchased with money supplied by The Candidate Brigade Christmas Fund, which is made up of contributions from men in the Brigade.

A number of needy families from Fort Benning also will enjoy a merrier Christmas thanks to the generosity of the men of TCB. Each of the six battalions is selecting several families to receive aid from The Brigade Christmas Fund. The men of TCB hope that this assistance will enable less fortunate members of the military to enjoy Christmas a little bit more.

On an individual basis, all the companies within The Candidate Brigade have displayed the Christmas spirit in a variety of ways. Several examples of the initiative and ingenuity employed by the Candidates can be seen in the gestures made by the candidates of the 62nd and the 63rd companies.

These two companies combined this week in a joint effort to bring some Christmas cheer to more than 300 children in Phenix City. Money was collected from the candidates and used to purchase gifts and refreshments for the party. As one candidate said, "I'm glad to donate. I remember one Christmas when I wish someone had remembered me."

Because these men cared, Christmas will be considerably brighter for the children of the Brick School in Phenix City.

The men of the 63rd. Co. further displayed their Christmas spirit in a rather unique manner. The men sent several hundred cards to the men of the 3rd Bn., 101st. Airborne Division in Vietnam. Each card was addressed to "A Soldier in Vietnam",

Leadership Wives Hold Christmas Tea at Club

The FBOOM Supper Club was the scene of a Christmas tea for the wives of the Leadership Department of the Infantry School. Hooored guests were Mrs. Sidney B. Berry, wife of the assistant commandant of the Infantry School; Mrs. Holland Hope, wife of the post chaplain; and Mrs. Malcolm R. Baer, president of the Officers' Wives Club. Mrs. John W. Flynn was a special guest of the department wives.

The tea was hosted by the Ladies of Headquarters, Mrs. Weldon F. Honeycutt, chairman, Mrs. Max D. Bradley, Mrs. Blynn B. Scott, Mrs. Glen F. Sweeney, Mrs. Henry E. Jeffrey, Mrs. Patrick J. Lalley, and Mrs. Homer H. Haracourt.

A lovely Christmas program was presented by the Infantry Chorus, directed by Lt. Gary Bogle. Near the end of the program the ladies joined the chorus in singing some favorite Christmas carols.

The Christmas theme began at the entrance with a screen decorated like a stained glass window which reflected the colors of a revolving spotlight. Two mannequins dressed in white robes with red bows at the collar represented choir boys.

Nametags were in different shapes and colors denoting committees. Headquarters-red boots, Leadership-blue mittens, CCDC-green wreaths, Management-pink and white snowmen, and white cards with holly sprigs identified guests.

The stage for the Chorus was flanked with white lanterns, wound with garlands of holly and poinsettias, tied with red bows. On the piano were red candles surrounded by gold magnolia leaves and poinsettias.

New Year's First Born To Get $100 Account

The first baby born in the new year to a military family will receive a birthday present of a $100 savings account, compliments of the National Bank of Fort Benning, the bank has announced.

The baby must be born to the wife of a member of the active military at Martin Army Hospital or one of the Columbus area hospitals. In the event of multiple births the prize will go to the first prize only. In the event two are born at the exact same time the prize will be shared.

The father who thinks his baby qualifies for the savings account should contact Ronald Rice, Cody Smith or John Gunn at the advertising offices of The Bayonet in the Ledger-Enquirer Building at 17 West 12th St. by Jan. 9. The father should bring a doctor's certificate to verify the actual time of birth.

Last year's winner was William J. Connolly III, the son of Sgt. and Mrs. William J. Connolly Jr.

BAZAAR OFFICIALS

A hand-made angel draws the attention of the three Fort Benning generals wives and bazaar officials at the 1969 Officer Wives Club Christmas Bazaar. From left they are Mrs. James Wheaton, bazaar chairman; Mrs. Orwin C. Talbott; Mrs. Malcolm Baer, president of OWC; Mrs. Oscar E. Davis; and Mrs. Sidney B. Berry, wife of the assistant commandant of the U.S. Army Infantry School. Over $5,000 profit was gained for the club's charitable projects from the bazaar.

Support Group Gives Coffee

Mrs. Andrew Gausz was appointed publicity chairman at the Christmas coffee held by the wives of the Support Battalion of the 197th Infantry Battalion.

Newcomers welcomed were Mmes. David Brubaker, Daniel Reynolds, Thomas Finnegan, Terrence Rudes and William Litton. The group said good-by to Mrs. James Estes.

Mrs. John Bush and Mrs. Paul Tyler gave the coffee.

'Follow Me' Was Penned In Single Night Here

By Marian Jones

Its clean, contemporary sound can be heard coming from whistlers and hummers long after the ceremony, parade or graduation is over.

It is the song of the U.S. Army Infantryman. Not surprisingly, it is set in march tempo and is called "Follow Me." What is surprising is that it is relatively new (composed in 1966) and was written in one night especially for the U.S. Army Infantry Center by a refreshing duo from the "Up With People, Sing Out 66" group.

When it was presented for the first time the next night by this moral rearmament group it received a 10-minute standing ovation by a group of officer candidates to whom it was dedicated.

As an added attraction, the singers added this line to the end of the song, "I want to be an Airborne Ranger Ee-Ah! Follow Me!"

Witnesses who were there in Marshall Auditorium that night said that the candidates reacted to the song the same way an audience of teenagers reset at a Beatle concert.

Prior to his retirement in 1968, Gen. Harold K. Johnson, then Army chief of staff, approved "Follow Me" as the official Infantry song.

The song was written by Kathe Green and Glenn Close. Their organization, Moral Rearmament, Incorporated, holds the copyright. However, they granted permission to the Department of Defense for the song to be used in performance by various military bands and other musical groups of the department.

"Follow Me' captures the driving spirit and dedication of the Infantryman," former Fort Benning commander, Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., stated in a letter to Gen. James K. Woolnough, commanding general of Continental Army Command. General Wright said that it was one of the songs most often requested of the Infantry Chorus.

So today, wherever you find Infantrymen you will hear this Infantryman's song:

Chorus

FOLLOW ME

Chorus

You can hear it in the heat of the jungle,

You can hear it across the sea.

It calls to every freedom loving man,

The cry of the U. S. Infantry

"Follow me, follow me."

Verse

From Concord Bridge to An Khe

"Through swamps and mountains and sand.

They fight and die where brave men lie,

Against all tyrants they stand.

These men are strong as the land they love,

They've fought through history.

Because of them in the years to come,

All children will be free.

They march by land they drop by air,

Victorious they will see

The world rebuilt, as all men dare

To follow the Infantry.

Army Researchers Display Varied Interests

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Who benefits from Army research?

All of us do.

Army research has made a mark on many fronts: taking the first small step to the moon; cruising in a streamlined jet airliner or passenger train; or sunning, surfing or skiing at a resort.

Whatever or wherever the pursuits, Army research has probably made things a little easier, a bit better or more comfortable.

Examples? Plenty.

Army nutritionists developed prototypes of the foods astronauts now eat on voyages to the moon.

Army - sponsored researchers have steadily improved or developed boots, sleeping equipment, tents, raincoats, insect repellents, collapsible canteens, free-fall water containers, packaged rations, freeze-dry food techniques, irradiated foods and special packaging methods. Most of these improvements and innovations can be or have been adapted to sporting, camping, rescue operations and other civilian activities.

Discoveries and work by Army medical scientists have contributed to the health of the nation for almost 200 years.

For example: Dr. John Jones, a surgeon with Colonial troops in the Revolutionary War who authored the first American medical textbook; Dr. Benjamin Rush, who wrote the first U. S. textbook on psychiatry; Army Surgeon William Beaumont, a physiologist who pioneered the study of the digestive system; and Maj. Walter Reed, who conquered yellow fever.

Army research has a contribution-packed heritage. The battle against death and disease and the challenges of space travel are carried forward by the doctors, scientists and technicians of today's Army. As in the past, future Army research efforts can be expected to pay handsome dividends to all of us.

Infantry Board Awards Certificates

Three members of the U.S. Army Infantry Board at this Georgia Infantry post were honored 19 December when they were awarded certificates of achievement for outstanding accomplishment and performance of duty during the past year. Recognized for their superior work were Mrs. Bertha P. Marzek and Raymond G. Sammons, Department of the Army civilian employes and Sp5 Larry G. Tester. Colonel Charles B. Thomas, president of the Infantry materiel test board, presented the awards to the recipients before the assembled members of the Board.

Mrs. Marzek, clerk-typist for the Logistics Division of the test board, was officially commended for high quality performance of duties for the period of 15 September 1968 through 15 September 1969. She was awarded a quality step increase for her professional competence and exemplary manner in which she accomplished her duties. Mrs. Marzek has been employed in the Logistics Division of the board since August 1958 but has served 18 years as a civilian employe at Fort Benning. She worked at the Main Post Hospital from 1951 until coming to the Infantry Board.

Sammons, commended officially for his outstanding and sustained superior performance duty, is a technical and scientific photographer for the Infantry Board. His exceptional proficiency in using the full range of photographic equipment and his adeptness in working with remote control, high speed and motion picture cameras earned him his high degree of excellence. Sammons is also the chief television photographer and narration script writer for the test activity. His technological experience and capability were particularly helpful during recent tests in which the field of TV was introduced as a medium of testing Infantry equipment and man-weapon combinations. He was awarded a check for $250 for his sustained superior performance.

Specialist Tester, a mathematics - statistician in the Combat Conditions Test Division, was awarded a certificate for exceptional meritorious service for his professionalism knowledge, and accomplishment of statistical endeavors. Tester is a grandnate of East Tennessee State University and has completed statistical reliability and maintainability courses in the Army at Rock Island, Illinois.

Army Reduces Training Jobs

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Secretary of the Army Stanley Resor recently announced reductions to Army training centers which will affect 420 civilian positions and more than 6,000 military personnel.

The action is part of the Army's overall effort to reduce spending and will result in a $5.5 million savings annually.

Installations affected are: Fort Gordon, Ga., where a reduction of eight civilian employes and 1,673 military personel is involved; Fort Benning, Ga., 191 civilian employees and 1,859 military will be phased out; Fort Bliss, Texas, 181 civilians and 1,229 military; Fort McClellan, Ala., 628 military; Fort Lewis, Wash., 4 civilian, 434 military; Fort Huachuca, Ariz., 36 civilian, 506 military.

ROTC Advantages Highlighted by Captain

PFC Chester Hilburn

"ROTC and OCS are equally strong programs—it is the individual in the final analysis who determines the superior officer."

Capt. Hugh W. Hastings, Training Center assistant G-1, pointed out strong points of both ROTC and OCS on the 150th anniversary of ROTC.

"The biggest advantage ROTC offers is the opportunity for one to obtain a commisson and receive the benefit of a college education at the same time. Scholarships add yet another advantage to the program," the captain said.

A 1965 ROTC graduate from the University of Maine, Hastings said the OCS graduate is slightly ahead experience-wise after being commissioned.

"His intensified training allows him to quickly grasp his leadership potential. On the other hand, the ROTC graduate is better prepared to assume a staff function."

Commenting on the recent student demonstrations against ROTC, the captain said student demonstrators have failed to understand the importance of the program.

"They fail to realize that it is such institutions that make it possible for them to get an education if they desire. They are actually doing more to undo our freedom than to preserve it."

Hastings was on the ROTC brigade staff and was named the University of Maine's Outstanding Junior Cadet in 1964. He was a distinguished military graduate, and earned a bachelor of science degree in history and education.

His decorations include the Bronze Star with cluster, Army Commendation Medal and the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry.

'Charity' Director To Shape Drama

NEW YORK — Robert Fosse has been signed to direct "Burnt Offerings," a suspense drama.

Fosse, celebrated Broadway stage and motion picture choreographer, recently turned motion picture director with "Sweet Charity," starring Shirley MacLaine. He directed the choreography for such long-running Broadway musical hits as "My Sister Eileen," "Damn Yankees," "Pajama Game," "Sweet Charity" and "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying."

Lawrence Turman, currently completing production on the screen version of the Broadway hit, "The Great White Hope," will be executive producer of the new film. He was the producer of "The Flim-Flam Man" and "Pretty Poison," and boxoffice hit, "The Graduate."

"Burnt Offerings," an original screenplay by Robert Marasco and his initial writing for the screen, is the story of a New York couple who rent an elaborate beach house for the summer and experience a series of bizarre and terrifying occurrences. Production is scheduled to begin in the summer of 1970 on location in New York.

Board Shows Use Of New XM 203

By Pvt. Steve Zimmerman

The Infantry Board at Fort Benning, observing a "Half Century of Testing," demonstrated the new XM203 Weapons System System at Farnsworth Range.

Col. Charles B. Thomas, president of the board, was on hand to explain the intricacies of the demonstration.

The new weapons system, which is now out of the testing phase and has been recommended for use in the Republic of Vietnam, combines the firepower of the M-16A1 rifle with the explosiveness of the M79 Grenade Launcher. The resultant weapon, in the hands of one infantryman, is comparable to a mortar.

Both before and after the demonstration, the colonel stressed the flexibility of the weapons system.

"From the same weapon system," he said, "one can fire not only ball (standard) ammo, but also explosives (grenades)."

The demonstration, which took no more than 30 seconds, consisted of a demonstrator firing first grenades from the 40 mm launcher at a target 350 meters away. This was followed quickly by a burst of 5.56 ball ammo at a target 200 meters away.

The firer then launched grenades at a target 150 meters away, quickly following that with a burst at a target 75 meters away. Then, the demonstrator launched a buckshot round at a target 30 meters away. The word "buckshot" is literal here.

Damaged Cars May Be Sold In Columbus

A tip from the Better Business Bureau—Auto buyers should be wary of cars damaged by Camille.

Automobile buyers are cautioned to use care in the next few months to avoid purchasing 1969 model cars which were severely damaged by salt water as a result of hurricane Camille.

A number of cars damaged as a result of this hurricane have been salvaged from lots, sold at auction and are now turning up for sale in areas not affected by the storm.

Engine parts and underbellies have been corroded and warranties will no longer be valid with manufacturers.

A prospective buyer of a car believed to have come from the Gulf coast should make the following examination:

Look under the dash behind the instrument panel. If the car has been submerged in salt water, there will be a white powdery, crystaline deposit.

Remove the front seat cushion to check the support springs for rust.

Open the hood and look at the engine inner side panels. Check for water line to determine the extent of water submersion. (If the car was totally submerged, this won't show).

Check for discoloration of seals and seat belts.

To examine for total submersion, remove the compartment light in the roof of the car, remove the lamp socket and check wiring for crystallization.

Open the rear compartment deck lid and a water line may show in the rear compartment.

The best means of checking for salt water damage, according to local auto dealers, is look at the instrument clusters and wires behind the instrument panel.

94th OC's Entertain Children at 2 Parties

All the festivities took place at the Baptist Missios located at 2052 Buena Vista Road Tuesday and Wednesday. On the first evening, children aged 3-9 received gifts and refreshments from Santa; the following evening, the procedure was repeated, this time for children from ages 10-14.

The entertainment included Christmas carols and sing-along songs which were led by candidates from the 94th Co. The distinguished guests at the functions included Lt. Col. Joel H. Bell, the 9th Student Bn. commanding officer, Battalion Chaplain Everette C. Thomas, and the commanding officer of the 94th Co., Capt. Larry D. Fiesner.

Donations for the party were from the "Mighty Ninth Battalion." Coordination for the affair was made by Capt. William Downey.

Chief Nurse

Lt. Col. Anne Rose has been named chief of Martin Army Hospital's Nursing Service, succeeding Lt. Col. Catherine Betz, who is now working in the office of the surgeon general in Washington D.C.

Lt. Col. Rose transfered here from the U.S. Army Hospital at Ft. Mac Arthur, Calif.

She attended St. Anthony's in Pocatello, Idaho where she received an R.N. degree in 1945. Although a native of Dillon, Montana, she is a resident of Seattle, Wash.

She first served with the Army Nurse Corps at Ft. Douglas, Utah in 1945. Since then she has served in the South Pacific, Guam, Frankfurt and several places in the states.

Besides being interested in photography and tape recording which she likes to do in her spare time, she is a member of the American Nurses Assoc., the National League of Nurses, Association of United States Army, and the American Legion Service.

Recruiter Adhers To His Own Advice

By Sp5 John Klopf

To a career counselor in the U. S. Army, the VRB (Variable Reenlistment Bonus) is something for the client only. Why? Because a VRB comes with the first reenlistment. And when was there ever a career counselor who didn't have at least one reenlistment behind him before becoming a recruiting and career counselor?

Probably never, at least not before SSgt. Arthur A. Mascarinas, career counselor with Procurement Branch, Training Center Reception Station.

Recently Mascarinas reenlisted for five years as 00E40 and received a $4,000 VRB at a mass reup ceremony at Training Center Headquarters. Before he re-enlisted, however, be was unique in his field as a career counselor.

Mascarinas came to Fort Benning in November, 1967, as a clerk typist. He worked his way up to administrative supervisor before realizing there is one thing he would like to do more in the Army.

Laser Beam Sets Type For Oriental Material

MOORESTOWN, N. J.— A unique electronic typesetting machine used by the U.S. Army to compose oriental ideographic language text for printed materials is being equipped with an advanced laser holographic memory by RCA.

Use of a hologram — a device that contains high resolution images created through laser techniques — to store 10,000 ideographic characters of the Chinese, Korean and Japanese languages will improve quality of the machine's operation and will slash its memory's size approximately 50 times, according to Dr. James Vollmer, Manager of RCA's Advanced Technology Laboratories, Camden, N.J.

The hologram will make it possible to store the characters on one glass plate 3 inches square in contrast to three plates 42 inches in size previously required. Weight of the memory and associated retrieval system also will be reduced from 350 pounds to less than 35 pounds.

The electronic typesetter — called the Ideographic Composing Machine — was developed several years ago by RCA for the Army's Natick Laboratories in Massachusetts. It teams computer, television and optical technology to enable an operator to use a keyboard to "set" ideographic characters.

Previously, the method of composing text in oriental languages was hand setting — an enormously laborious process since the languages contain more than 10,000 characters compared to the 26 letters of the English alphabet.

The new holographic memory will be divided into 625 segments of 16 characters each. When the operator uses the keyboard to activate the machine's computer circuitry and designate the character to be "set," a laser beam will be trained automatically on the proper segment, illuminating all characters in it. A vidicon TV camera, cued by the keyboard, then will select the single character desired and display it on a cathode ray tube — a small screen similar to a TV picture tube.

The character then can be photographed on film for subsequent incorporation into artwork for offset printing.

Use of the hologram will allow many of the machine's large precise components such as an optical tunnel and beam splitter to be eliminated. It also will increase quality of the machine's output and will simplify the entire operation since less precise alignment is required for display of a character.

If the laser beam touches any portion of the segment containing the desired character, the entire segment and all its characters are displayed, with non-holographic techniques, if alignment of the system is not exact, part of the character can be lost in the reproduction process.

Two Ideographic Composing Machines are being equipped with the laser holographic memories by RCA. They are used by the Army to set Chinese, Korean and Japanese text for orientation literature information leaflets, training publications and other printed materials.

Museum Presentation

Senior officer candidate Kevin Connelly 60th Co. 6th Student Battalion, TCB, presents the rare volume, UNITED STATES ARMY INFANTRY TACTICS to Mr. John E. Hunter, curator of the U. S. Army Infantry School Museum. The book which was once part of the private collection of Maj. Gen. S. W. Connelly (USAR-RET), was donated on behalf of Gen. Connelly and the 60th Co. during a ceremony held recently at the museum.

Rare Volume Is Donated To Museum

In joint gesture of giving, a rare volume concerning military tactics was presented to Fort Benning's US Army Infantry School Museum, on behalf of S. W. Connelly (Maj. Gen. USAR-RET) and the 60th, 6th Student Battalion, The Candidate Brigade.

The book, "United States Army Infantry Tactics," was presented by Capt. Jesse Peal and senior officer candidate Kevin D. Connelly (Birmingham, Mich.), both of the 60th Co., to Mr. John E. Hunte, the Museum curator, with the hope that the gift would "enrich and deepen our understanding of the history and evolution of the United States Infantry."

The gift volume, originally copyrighted in 1866, is a revised edition printed in 1877; it has considered significance in that it represents the official doctrine for Infantry training throughout the entire Army and Militia. "United States Army Infantry Tactics," written by Brevet Major General Emory Upton, was published in New York by D. Appleton Company. Preparation of the book was solicited by the Army, and recommended for adoption in place of all previous manuals by a board of officers of which General U. S. Grant was president. The board approved the manual in 1867 US Army Infantry and the Militia of the United States. To insure uniformity throughout the Army, Edward M. Stanton, then Secretary of War, declared that all Infantry exercises and maneuvers not included in this volume would be prohibited, and that all those prescribed, would be strictly observed.

The gift volume itself was the property of John Millis while he attended the US Military Academy at West Point. Cadet Millis graduated Number 1 in the class of 1881. He retired in 1922 with 41 consecutive years service after attaining the rank of colonel. Millis was commissioned in the Corps of Engineers in 1881 and spent the duration of his tour in the Army devising and supervising various construction projects in the US, Asia, and Europe. Several of the more important projects that Millis worked on include the installation of electric light for illuminating the Statue of Liberty, and the formulation of an emergency flood relief plan for lower Mississippi. This plan saved the city of New Orleans in the disastrous flood of 1927. After his retirement, Col. Millis returned to his lifelong interests and authored several books on those topics, including the following:

"The Constructional History of the Solar System and Our Earth," "The Dualistic Theory," and "The Mystery of the Star Chains." Col. Millis died on May 20, 1952, at the age of 94.

Brighten Yule

As a rule packages and cards are hurried off to soldiers from people at home during the holidays. But last week the men of Co. E, 7th Bn., 2nd Bde., USATCI, reversed the custom.

1st Sgt. David Dixon had noticed a newspaper account of a Columbus, Ohio, widow who desperately wanted to receive some Christmas cards. So he suggested that the unit try to brighten her holiday by sending as many cards as possible.

Trainee platoon leaders, Pvts. Richard Look Jerry Hughes and Robert Cord, took on the project. Soon more than a hundreds cards had been selected and bought by the trainees and cadre to make Christmas a bit brighter and merrier for Mrs. Ora "Billie" Anderson.

CDC Uses 'War Games' To Plan Army of Future

Tactical, materiel, and organizational requirements for the Army of the future must be defined before the future becomes the present. This, in turn, defines the real-world role of the Army's Combat Developments Command (CDC) which uses realistic war games and computer simulations to keep its probes into the future timely and meaningful.

While these games and simulations do not seek a model world, they are, however, based on "models" — mathematical structures representing a real world situation in abstract form suitable for deliberate objective examination by skilled analysts.

CDC's Institute of Systems Analysis (ISA), Fort Belvoir, Va., has formed a project group to develop a compatible family of models capable of simulating the field operations of each arm and service in any combination of combined arms and support. These simulations will be able to examine organizational structures up to division size units with perspective on each of the five functions of land combat.

In addition, the models must permit evaluation of the increase in combat effectiveness from the introduction on the battlefield of new weapons systems and new operational concepts. The three main areas for CDC model utilization — Operations, Materiel and Organization — provide the acronym OPMOR which identifies the project.

Since this effort is of such large scope, it will be some time before the complete set of OPMOR models will be available. However, an initial set of two or three compatible models of capabilities more modest than the ultimate OPMOR family is planned to be available by Army fiscal year 1972.

CDC's ISA is already well on the way toward providing this interim capability. A basic model depicting in detail the operations of a maneuver battalion in land combat against an enemy force of comparable size is now being expanded to include more combat support functions.

Even before the expansion is completed, this CDC model is being readied to begin an evaluation of the capability of new army weapons systems, whether employed from the air or on the ground, which are designed to defeat hard point targets such as tanks or bunker emplacements.

ISA is seeking to insure that the user agencies of CDC will have the finest analytical tools available to assist them in studying increasingly more complex problems. OPMOR promises to be among the best.

Unit Welcomes 30th Dignitary

Those cannon blasts which split the air at irregular times on the main post are courtesy of the six 105 mm howitzers supplied by Alpha Battery, 2nd Bn., 10th Artillery.

The battery along with 282nd Post Band and an honor guard platoon from 1st Bn., 29th Inf. recently welcomed its 30th dignitary this year to the post. He was Gen. Joaquim Da Luz Cunhu, professor of the Portugese high command course.

Private Is President Of Exchange Program

By PFC Gil Delaney

Bravo Company, 10th Bn., 1st Training Bde., has a trainee with trainees, — 5,000 of them. Pvt. Michael J. Passage, a 23-year-old reservist, is the president of AIESEC (pronounced "eye sack") in the United States, an international business exchange program.

"AIESEC is somewhat similar to the American Field Service exchange program, except that AIESEC trainees are college students and the exchanges are multilateral, not just between the U. S. and all the other countries," Passage explained

AIESEC is an abbreviation for French which, translated into English, means International Association of Students in Economics and Commerce. "That pretty much explains what AIESEC is all about. College students studying business or economics are given a chance to work for two to 18 months in a foreign country."

"We have chapters on 80 campuses in the U. S. and student members on the campuses contact local businessmen and ask them to give a foreign student a job. The student members overseas do the same and a computer matches company needs with available qualified students."

The presidency of AIESEC is a one-year elected post. Passage's term will end in July.

"I've been taking a year off from work I'm doing on my masters degree at Harvard Business School," Passage explained. "I'll be going back to school after the year is up."

"AIESEC's objectives are to complement business education, promote international good will and provide the business community with internationally trained young managers.

"The students we place in jobs are usually 20 to 27-years-old and are completing their work on a bachelors degree in business or economics. AIESEC depends solely upon the support of the business community for its support, there is no government grant."

"Quite frequently U.S companies hire our trainees for their overseas offices after the students complete their education.

The business community obviously feels that AIESEC is worthwhile. More than 5,000 students were placed in jobs during the 1968-69 school year, according to Passage.

CTC Members Receive Awards

The second Oak Leaf Cluster was added to a Bronze Star Medal, and two Army Commendation Medals with "V" Devices were awarded to three soldiers of 1st Battalion, Center Troop Command in a ceremony.

Lt. Col. Eldward E. Crow, commanding officer, 1st Bn., CTC, presented Sgt. Dennis G. Bealka his third award of the Bronze Star Medal, and specialists four Robert G. St. George and Michael D. Fray with their decorations for heroism.

Sgt. Bealka, then serving with Co. D, 3rd Bn., 22nd Inf., 25th Inf. Div. in Vietnam, took command of his platoon after his platoon leader was lost in action near Tay Ninh. He led his men through several skirmishes and ground attacks near the Cambodian border during the period from June 1 to July 1, 1969.

The citation states that Sgt. Bealka "consistently manifested exemplary professionalism and initiative in obtaining outstanding results. The enthusiastic manner in which he applied himself has materially contributed to the United States effort in the Republic of Vietnam."

Specialists four Robert G. St. George and Micheal D. Fry received their awards for heroism on May 12, 1969 at the An Khe POL Tank Farm in Vietnam. The action occurred when a fuel storage tank in their area received a direct hit from enemy fire resulting in an initially uncontrolled fire that threatened several other fuel tanks in the vicinity.

According to their citation, they "aggressively attacked the fire, and without regard for personal safety, expended maximum effort to preserve the remainder of the storage complex." Later, amidst the still raging fire, the enemy scored a direct hit on another fuel tank, creating an immediate hazard to crew and equipment located nearby. The citation continues, "The firefighters, now fully aware that they were performing under continued enemy attack, re-positioned their equipment immediately . . . and maintained their determined effort to restrict the fire."

Specialists St. George and Fry are currently assigned as fire fighters to Co. A, 1st Bn., CTC. Sgt. Bealka is attached to Co C, 1st Bn., CTC, and is Chief Processing Clerk at Fort Benning's Transfer Point.

Allies Present Present Swords To Gen. Berry

Two new gifts from Allie students soon will be displayed in the front hallway of Infantry Hall.

In a ceremony prior to a luncheon in the Officers Club, Maj. Jon Stillman chief of the Allied Student Training Division (ASTD) presented Brig. Gen. Sidney Berry with swords given by the Allied officers of Infantry Officers Advanced Course (IOAC) Class 4-69. He also presented the general with a plaque given to the school by Capt. Joseph Younes of Lebanon.

bloodshed in the streets of Watts; she flinched at the shootings in Detroit; and she sobbed once more as she looked on at her capital, burning under the torches of a people demanding equality.

The 1960s was also a decade of war — perhaps the most controversial war the United States has ever known. It was a war that stirred debates and strife from the multiversities of Berkeley and Wisconsin to the ivy-shrouded halls of Harvard.

Though economy did prosper, as many predicted, the sixties were a decade of inflation, in which a dollar could no longer buy a gallon of milk or a good meal in a restaurant.

The strife, unrest and confusion, the progress and techonological steps, as well as the national and world policies of four presidents, are greatly reflected in the events which highlighted Ft. Benning and the U. S. Army Infantry Center during this short span of years.

Ft. Benning's soldiers of the sixties witnessed heavy troops buildups; changes and innovations in training and combat techniques from conventional methods to the new jungle guerrilla methods, and expansion and construction of numerous facilities to accommodate the demands of an evergrowing Army.

The sixties at the Infantry Center were not always somber. At times the military community was quite festive with division reunions, commemorative balls and parties, not to mention the celebration of the post's 50th anniversary in October 1968.

The sixties were also a decade of excitement here when, during 1967, many troops participated in and viewed the filming of the motion picture, "The Green Berets."

Excitement was also stimulated by appearances of numerous VIPs on post, including Lyndon Johnson, General William Westmoreland and the late Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Of 1960, it was said that "the year dashed hopes — but they were false hopes of a well meaning people who thought the enemy had changed his heart, as well as his face."

It was during this year that the Infantry Center was visited by President Eisenhower, prior to his leaving office. The soldier-politician had come to observe "Project Man," a program designed to enhance teamwork between the Army and NATO forces who use "fighting hardware" and those industrialists who produce it.

1961 was termed "the year of fulfillment." Plans for a new academic building (Infantry Hall) were announced that year in Washington to be a part of the growing U. S. Army Infantry School.

Also announced in 1961 were plans for establishment of a 4-year, degree-granting university center on post.

During 1962, it seemed quite likely that hopes for a larger training area at Ft. Benning would be realized in the future.

1962 was the year of the first of many crises that were to hit the nation in the sixties and Ft. Benning felt the brunt of these events.

This was the year of the famous Cuban Crisis where nuclear war was at the brink of reality. It was at this time that many Ft. Benning units were alerted to an attack on Cuba which fortunately never came.

The racial question at Oxford, Miss., was a headliner in 1962, when a young Negro requested admission into the then segregated University of Mississippi. Fort Benning was there with a number of units sent to "keep the peace."

1963 can only be remembered as a year of tragedy. It was during this year, on Nov. 22, that President John F. Kennedy was fatally shot while riding in a motorcade in the streets of Dallas, Tex. Just an hour after his shocking death, the Army received a new commander-in-chief in Lyndon B. Johnson, as he was sworn in aboard the presidential aircraft, Air Force 1.

At Fort Benning, there also was tragedy as a CH-34 "Choctaw" helicopter crashed on Dec. 2 near Cusseta on U. S. Highway 27, killing five soldiers and injuring eight.

The Department of the Army stirred a few speculations in 1963 as it ordered the organization at Fort Benning of the 11th Air Assault Division (Test) to be commanded by Maj. Gen. (now Lt. Gen.) Harry W. O. Kinnard. This division was designed to train men and test techniques for the Army's new concept of airmobility.

1964 was deemed "a year of experimentation and change" at the Infantry Center, with massive tests being conducted often by the newly created 11th Air Assault Division to prove the worth of airmobility.

In June, 1964, the $10-million academic building (Infantry Hall) was dedicated and opened to the Infantry School. The immense, H-shaped facility took two years

Also dedicated during 1964 was a bridge over the Chattahoochee River, connecting Ft. Benning with Ft. Mitchell and other Alabama cities.

1964 was termed a "year of stress and strain on the military establishment." This was the year that America's increasing involvement in Vietnam was so greatly felt at Ft. Benning.

It was announced in 1965, that personnel and equipment from the 11th Air Assault Division would merge with the 2nd Infantry Division, present on post, to form a new division that would gain fame in the highlands of Vietnam. Colors of the 2nd Infantry were exchanged with the colors of the 1st Cavalry Division in Korea to complete the merger of what came to be known as the 1st Air Cavalry Division (Airmobile).

With the military build up came announcement of a greatly expanded Officer Candidate School program and the institution of an Army Training Center here.

The U. S. Army Infantry School acquired its theme song, "Follow Me," in 1965 during a visit by the "Up With People, Sing Out 68" group. Written by a duo in the group in one night it was presented to officer candidates, who gave it a 10-minute standing ovation. Since then the song has been a part of Ft. Benning and of the Infantry School.

In 1967, involvement in the Republic of Vietnam continued to grow, and this too was reflected at Ft. Benning, where a Noncommissioned Officer Candidate School was established to meet the increasing needs of fire team leaders in the war.

1967 was also the year of the celebrity here, with visits by President Johnson, Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara and movie star John Wayne. Johnson described Benning as "the home of the brave" and "where it all begins."

The Officer Candidate School commissioned 10,013 second lieutenants in '67, nearly three times that of the previous year.

Scout Dog training was greatly expanded that year, and a new type of training was introduced with BB guns designed to teach men to shoot without taking time to aim.

1968 was the year of festivities as the Infantry Center took time to celebrate its 50th anniversary as a military installation. Functions included a speech by Gen. Westmoreland, chief of staff; a special ceremony at General Benning's grave in Linwood Cemetery; and a parade through downtown Columbus.

On Aug. 29 of this year, more than 1,000 soldiers from Ft. Benning were dispatched to the devastated area of Gulfport, Miss. to aid the victims of Hurricane Camille.

1969 saw three commanding generals of the Center come and go. Major General John Wright left in May to be succeeded by Major General George I. Forsythe. Major General Orwin C. Talbott took command in September as Maj. Gen. Forsythe departed to assume duties, as well as a third star, with the U. S. Army Combat Developments Command at Ft. Belvoir, Va.

1969 was also the year of visits by numerous VIPS and dignitaries, including astronaut John Glenn, Jan. 28; and Gen. Westmoreland in August.

1969 was the year of "Vietnamization of the war" in which the first contingents of troops departed Vietnam for home.

International attention was focused on Ft. Benning during 1969 as a result of the alleged murder of civilians in My Lai, Republic of Vietnam. Court martial proceedings were ordered against a Ft. Benning lieutenant as a result of investigations into the alleged incident.

Only last month the department of the Army announced that the U. S. Army Training Center here would close after four years of service. During this brief period more than 187,000 young civilian men were groomed for military service at the Harmony Church and Sand Hill sites.

The last year was a year of recognition and celebration for some. It was the year that the post newspaper, The Bayonet, was awarded first place by the U. S. Continental Army Command (CONARC) as "the finest civilian enterprise letter-press newspaper in CONARC for 1968."

Officer Candidate School here saw its 100,000th graduate on March 8 from the 64th Company.

Old friends were reacquainted and memories revived on Aug. 22 with the reunion of the 1st Air Cavalry Division Association here.

Officers and enlisted men alike bowed their heads in mourning on March 28 as the death of former president Dwight David Eisenhower was announced. The hero of World War II and leader of the country had served at Ft. Benning as a lieutenant and later as a major.

Columbus College Deans List Is Announced

Dean John Anderson has named 313 Columbus College students to the dean's list for the fall quarter. CHRISTMAS 1969

The Christmas season holds special meaning for soldiers and their families. It is a time when loved ones are reunited and when we most remember those who cannot be with us for the holidays.

It is also a time for us to rededicate ourselves to the principles of peace and brotherhood taught by the One whose birth we pause to celebrate. We in the military must be ever mindful that our fellow Americans have entrusted us with the responsibility to uphold those principles, and this awareness must influence all we do.

On this most joyous of holiday seasons, I wish all military and civilian members of the Fort Benning community a Merry Christmas and a safe and Happy New Year.

Synopsis

THOSE WERE THE HAPPY TIMES. Julie Andrews stars in a film that was once called STAR but which was retitled and shortened for general release. It is the story of Gertrude Lawrence, who thrilled British and American playgoers during the 30's and 40's. Filled with several of the great songs of the period, the movie also stars Daniel Massey in a highly - acclaimed portrayal of Noel Coward.

I LOVE YOU, ALICE B. TOKLAS. Peter Sellers plays the "de-squared" hero who unravels in a hippie haven. The story is a contemporary satire about a nervous Los Angeles lawyer harassed by his mother and his pushy fiancee. Trying to get away from it all, he turns hippie. Jo Van Fleet and Leigh Taylor-Young, also star.

THE YOUNG REBEL-CERVANTES. This film tells how a brash, young but naive romanticist struggles to cling to his convictions in the face of lust, behind the-scenes papal diplomacy and war's savagery. Though the convictions of Miguel de Cervantes (Horst Buchholz) are ultimately withered, the personal defeat eventually enables him to write a literary classic, "Don Quixote."

Ironically, it is one of Cervantes' virtues that begins the youth's series of advantures, as bawdy as they are perilous. Gina Lollobrigida portrays Julia, a courtesan, scheduled by a papal edict to be banished. Jose Ferrer is seen as Arab ambassador, Hassem Bay, a cold realist who baits both Cardinal Acquaviva (Louis Jourdan), a scheming diplomat, and Cervantes.

Traffic Mishaps Cause Most Deaths Since July

With the time for annual Christmas and New Year's holiday leave approaching, commanders and supervisors are making efforts to promote safe and defensive driving over the holiday period. They are working in a variety of ways to assist the people of Fort Benning to cope with the holiday traffic hazards.

Traffic accidents have caused the deaths of more Fort Benning soldiers this fiscal year (since 1 July) than have all other types of accidents combined.

Of 18 accidental deaths 12 have involved a privately owned vehicle.

Seven of these deaths involved the driver and in all but 2 cases the soldier was of the rank of E-4 or below.

The average age of the men who were killed was 23.

An analysis of the accidents shows that some basic knowledge and adherence to rules would have saved each man's life. These were:

1. Be extra alert when driving at night.
2. Maintain vehicle in a safe mechanical condition.
3. Learn how to control a vehicle in a skid.
4. Keep speed within the legal limit.
5. Wear safety belts.
6. Learn how to drive defensively.
7. Know the driving and handling characteristics of the car, especially of the sports car with a big engine.

This knowledge and an attitue of obedience to it would have save the lives of most all; if in fact not all, of these men killed in private motor vehicle accidents during the past 5½ months.

"Three lives were lost over the holiday period last year. With your help that figure can be zero this year," said Norman Evans, Fort Benning safety director.

IT'S EASY FOR YOU TO SAY THAT

Dan Rowan (left) and Dick Martin being under-age and indecent in "The Maltese Bippy." In the comedy flick Dan has an affair with an Afghan dog and Dick turns into a werewolf.

'Laugh-In' Stars Make Transfer to Film Roles

Rowan and Martin are the latest television stars to find a niche in the movie hall of fame. With their big new picture together, M G M's way-out-comedy, "The Maltese Bippy," the noted team is in select company.

Steve McQueen did it. So did James Garner and Clint Eastwood. But add one or two other names and the list is depleted.

The first season in which Dan Rowan and Dick Martin scrambled to make "Laugh-In" a success, they were too busy to think about movie careers as the series soared from 48th to first place in the ratings within a matter of weeks. But four Emmy Awards later and into their second year, they began to consider their futures in entertainment.

"We knew the series wouldn't run forever," states Rowan. "We didn't want it to. Yet we turned down several lucrative movie offers."

Training Center Celebrates Last Christmas

But for the absence of echoing cadence and the sight of drill sergeants making pre-dawn police call along Highway 27, it would be hard to tell the Army Training Center's 3,500 recruits have gone home for Christmas.

In fact, thanks to excellent transportation arrangements and staggered departure times scheduled by the Training Center's G-4 section, it was hard to catch them leaving.

The exodus began at noon Friday, when men from the just-graduated 9th Battalion got a 6-hour head start on their fellow trainees. Most others left at 6 p.m. or midnight Friday, the rest at 7 a.m. Saturday.

Because of the spreadout schedule — and because the current phaseout of basic training here has reduced the Training Center's size from 40 to 26 companies — the confusion which usually attends a mass departure did not develop.

Small groups waited patiently for the bus or taxi which would provide the first leg of their journey home, and many from neighboring states left by private vehicle.

They had learned an important lesson observing other TV stars make mistakes in similar matters. They would not film a cinema version of "Laugh-In," nor would they appear in a quickie production exploiting their popularity.

"Not doing a movie was preferable to doing a bad one," says Dick Martin, who two years ago had a good comedy role with Doris Day in "The Glass Bottom Boat."

Producer Robert Enders picks up the story here. He was preparing several projects for MGM when studio executives asked him to produce a Treasury Department short subject promoting Savings Bonds. He was assured the film could have entertainment value as well as deliver a message and that he could have any star he wanted for the project. The top actors and actresses were only too happy to cooperate.

"Rowan and Martin," was his fast reply. The result was titled "Rowan and Martin at the Movies," was filmed in five hours. It ran only ten minutes but received such important marquee billing that it drew large audiences wherever it played.

"When we made that short subject," Enders recalls. "I realized there was a big market for a new Rowan and Martin feature picture. I asked Dan and Dick about their picture plans and they said none of the generous offers they had recieved guaranteed top-flight artistic quality."

The next move was that Enders telephoned producer Everett Freeman to ask if he still had a property he had written, titled "The Incredible Werewolf Murders." Freeman answered in the affirmative and Enders hung up without an explanation.

"Then I asked Dan if he would like to watch Dick turn into a werewolf," he relates. "He broke up. I asked Dick how he would like to watch Dan watching himself turn into a werewolf. They both broke up."

'Charlie Brown' Sets Record at Radio City

NEW YORK — A new all-time box office record of $222,558, the largest single gross for an opening week of any Christmas attraction in the 37 year old history of Radio City Music Hall, was established by "A Boy Named Charlie Brown" and the Music Hall Christmas show.

Announcing this new box office record today James G. Gould, president and managing director of the Rockefeller Center Showplace, added that this broke the record of $210,380.35 set by "Father Goose" five years ago which opened one week later and closer to Christmas than the current attraction.

"A Boy Named Charlie Brown," starring the world famous Peanuts characters in their first full length movie, is accompanied on the Music Hall stage by the Nativity pagaent and a new Christmas spectacle, "The Fabulous Years."

Trainees Yearn For The Rolling Waves

By PFC Gil Delaney

Surf's up on the Chattahoochee! Not really, but privates Gene Barnes and Jerry Chatham of D Company, 10th Bn., 1st Bde., wish it was. They're surfers, and the rolling hills of Georgia on a forced march just aren't the same as the rolling wave of the surfing circuit.

Christmas leave promises a chance to assault the waves, however. Chatham plans assaults on his home town beach at Ft. Walton Beach, Fla., Cocoa Beach, Fla., and armed with a wetsuit, a possible assault on Virginia Beach, Va. Barnes of Newport News, Va, is contemplating an assault on Virginia Beach, Va.

At 17, Barnes is already a big-money winner in surfing although because he is under 18 he cannot be rated by a surfing association. Chatham, 20, is a 3A rated surfer, one step below the professional 4A rating.

Discussing their favorite sport, each gave insight into his ambitions, special problems encountered by the surfer.

"You have to know how to swim a long, long way," Chatham said. "Endurance and good physical condition are very important, because an 8-ft. 10-foot wave can really hurt you if you're out of shape."

"Strong leg muscles are needed for maneuvering the board," Barnes added. "And strong arms come in handy for paddling out."

Both Barnes and Chatham use shorter boards now, but in the days when they first took up the sport, longer boards were used.

"I like the shorter board because it gives you more freedom to maneuver. A longer board (9 ft. 8 in.) takes all your strength and ability just to turn it," Chatham explained.

"The beginner is better off with the longer board, however," he continued, "because it is easier to paddle and has greater flotation, making it easier to learn on."

Chatham uses a 7 ft. 4 in. surfboard now. Barnes has three boards, the shortest — 8-ft. 2 ins.

"Most of the boards used on the East Coast are the shorter minibords," Barnes explained. "They are usually made of fiberglass. However, I have a wooden board I built myself that I hope to use on the fifty foot waves they sometimes have in Hawaii, just before or after a storm."

Both found certain problems in being a surfer.

Movie Crew Scares Gas Station Customers

What would you do if you pulled into a service station in the middle of the desert, in need of gas for your car and terror was facing you?

This would be the case if parked in front of the gas station were six motorcycles, their riders in full costume with the name "The Satans," on their backs and no one else in sight.

If this were the case, you would probably make a dash for your car and rush away as fast as your remaining gas could take you.

Well, this is exactly what happened to motorists who stopped for refueling in India, Calif., during the recent production of "Satan's Sadists."

Here was a motorcycle gang that looked as mean and dangerous as any gang could.

The owner of the gas station nervously waited for the film crew to finish as this "Hollywood Clambake" was costing him valuable business. When the gang of "Satans" had to ride in and out of the service station to capture the right effect for the filming, they truly looked like a vicious group out to start trouble.

The amazing results of the proper makeup and wardrobe were visible that day in the desert as two police cars stopped at the station during the course of the day's shooting to find out what all the trouble was about.

When the officers, looking for dangerous characters, spotted popular screen stars Russ Tamblyn, Scott Brady and Kent Taylor, they knew a camera must be close by . . . and so it was.

Sebring Final Race Of SCAA Pro Series

By 2nd Lt. Jeff Martini

For those of us still active. This weekend Sebring, Fla., will be the place to be at with the final race of the 1969 SCCA pro series taking place there.

Drivers from all over the country will be racing for over $22,000 in prize money. Mario Andretti will introduce the new Formula "A" Lotus, while Mark Donohue will do the same for Lola's new T-190.

Sam Posey will be the only driver who can challenge Tony Adamowicz for the Formula "A" Continental Championship. Rumor has it that world champ Jackie Stewart will be starting in his Formula 1 Matra-Ford although this may remain a rumor because Matra has dropped Ford for 1970. Stewart has a strong Ford commitment and consequently may not race in the Matra.

Regardless of who's there it still will be an exciting race. All of the cars are highly competitive, each running approximately 305 cu. ins. and 600 plus horsepower.

In other news television and motorsports have reached a happy medium for 1970. In a surprise move Nascar has announced a $1.5 million contract with the American Broadcasting Company to televise nine of the South's superspeedway races with an option for 26 more in 1971-72. The following speedways will be participating: Daytona Beach, Fla., Talledega, Ala., Richmond and Martinsville, Va., Bristol, Tenn., Darlington, S. C., and Charlotte, Rockingham and North Wilkesboro, N. C.

Not to be outdone the United States Auto Club (USAC) has announced an agreement with TVS television Network (also for $1.5 million) covering two years to broadcast eight of USAC's scheduled races. Both ABC and TVS have agreed to solid commitments as it appears that there will be at least 17 auto races appearing on television for next season. Auto racing's entry into serious television coverage marks a milestone in recognition for the sport.

On the Scene: In an announcement which was predicted a full two weeks before by this columnist, Richard Petty made it official that he was leaving the Ford stock car racing team and returning to Plymouth. The price on Petty's head is reported to be in the neighborhood of two to three million!

Petty said his reason for his switch back to Plymouth was that he got a better deal out of Plymouth. "The Ford Engineering I feel that the new Plymouth Super-bird) will be competitive and will get the job done."

Petty will be campaigning two cars and plans to drive in every Grand National race, trying for his third Nascar driver's championship. The second car is planned for superspeedway use only with a second team driver to be named by Petty at a later date.

The drive for Trans-Am success continues with a Camaro being prepared for Indy star Lloyd Ruby to drive whe the USAC championsip racing schedule permits.

And Ford, which wants to win back the Trans-Am title, has been secretly testing 70 factory-backed Mustangs at Northern California's Sears Point International Raceway with star driver Parnelli Jones turning the wheel.

Range Control was no match last week for the masterful masterminding of The Bayonet staff which was led, once again, by the indomitable (and very lucky) PFC Peredicto. In racking up their seventh victory (against two losses and one tie), Predicto and his cohorts called 23 of 33 games correctly while Range Control could manage only 20 correct guesses.

The peerless one was at a loss to explain this recent good fortune but added that he wasn't pressing his luck.

With only three major games on tap this week (Dallas-Cleveland, Minnesota-Los Angeles and Tennessee-Florida) Predicto is refusing any one-on-one match play ("It's too much like football," he explained.)

He is, however, giving the reading public the benefit of his omniscience this week and announces that he is searching for worthy adverseries to compete against The Bayonet staff in picking the big New Year's Day bowl games. Predicto's picks for the three games mentioned are Dallas, Mimeso'a and Tennessee.

L. A., Dallas Dominate NFL All-Star Team

NEW YORK (AP) — The Los Angeles Rams and Dallas Cowboys dominate the National Football League All-Star teams selected for The Associated Press by a 48-man panel of sports writers and sportscasters from the 16 league cities.

The voting was so close for the two wide receiver posts with Gary Collins of Cleveland just a whisker ahead of Dan Abramowicz of New Orleans and Roy Jefferson of Pittsburgh, who tied for second, that all three were included on the 12-man offensive unit.

Roman Gabriel, the 6-foot-4, 228-pound quarterback who sparked the Rams to 11 straight victories before they were up-ended by Minnesota, heads the Los Angeles contingent. Big Bob Brown, the tackle traded to the Rams by Philadelphia last summer, is the other Ram on the offensive unit.

Deacon Jones at end, Merlin Olsen at tackle and Eddie Meador at safety round out the five-man Ram contingent on the first teams.

Dallas also put five on the first teams with rookie Calvin Hill at running back, Ralph Neely at tackle and John Niland at guard on offense and Bob Lilly at tackle and Chuck Howley at corner linebacker on defense.

Gabriel heads up a backfield that includes Hill, the flashy rookie from Yale, and Gale Sayers of the Chicago Bears as his running backs. Jerry Smith of Washington is the tight end.

The interior offensive line is manned by Neely and Brown at the tackles, Niland and the veteran Gene Hickerson of Cleveland at the guards and Mick Tingelhoff of Minnesota at center.

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

If you want to get a heated and confused argument going in a hurrry, get a few fishermen from different parts of Georgia together with a fish biologist or two, then ask them to agree on the common name, habits, and best ways of fishing for any species you like. There's plenty of room for argument, even among the experts, since there are at least 124 distinctly different species of fish in Georgia, not counting hundreds of types of small minnows that only an Ichthyologist can identify with a microscope. At least thirty-two of these species are considered game fish, with some argument over a few of the others.

There are, for example, nine "bass" in Georgia. The most popular among them, the largemouth, are usually called "trout" in South Georgia. Biologists say that there are really only two members of the bass family found in the state, and the largemouth isn't one of them. He's a member of the sunfish family.

Multiple popular names never cease to be a source of amusement and conversation when fishermen from different areas meet. Many fishermen pronounce and spell crappie just the way it looks. Others spell and pronounce it "crppie," while some spell it "crapple" and pronounce it "croppie." South Georgians avoid the problem entirely by calling them "white perch," which is the most common name of a small ocean fish that swims up freshwater rivers from South Carolina northward. In many areas of Florida, the black crappie is known as speckled perch.

The walleye of north Georgia is usually called a "Jack," or "pike." Chain pickerel of south Georgia are known as "jackfish." Redear sunfish are usually "shellcrackers. White bass are "stripers." Brook trout are "specs." When it comes to catfish, the simplest thing to do is to forget about precise identification, since even the common channel catfish is variously known as the spotted cat, fiddler, forktail cat, sand cat, blue cat, and white cat. Flathead catfish are sometimes known as shovelhead cat, mut cat, or yellow cat.

Water temperature has a lot to do with whether the fish that you laud thirty minutes from home is a rainbow trout, a spotted bass, or a chain pickerel. In the high altitude, cold water streams of northeast Georgia, rainbow, brown, and native brook trout are the only game fish found. Just south of trout waters, intermediate cold water game fish species like the smallmouth, redeye, and the spotted bass are prevalent, succeeded a little further south by clearly warm water species like the largemouth bass, black and white crappie, bluegill, white bass, and channel catfish. These species then blend with varieties that are common only in south Georgia, like the chain pickerel or jackfish, and the warmouth, both of which are found in the Okefenokee Swamp.

Biologists and fishermen have never agreed on a common name for the wide variety of panfish in the sunfish family sometimes described as "bream," which is pronounced and sometimes spelled "brim." These fish are usually grouped together because they share many common characteristics including size, appearance, and feeding habits.

Probably the most popular member of this clan is the bluegill, a scrappy rascal who will bite anything small that looks like a good meal. Since a fish biologist discovered that bluegill could be stocked in artificial ponds successfully with largemouth bass, redear sunfish (shellcracker), and channel catfish, the popularity of these four species has skyrocketed. The best time to catch bluegill is in the late spring and summer while they're "on the bed", spawning. Most bluegill fishing is with live bait, especially earthworms of any size, and crickets. Artificial lure fishermen can take them on small fly rod size popping bugs and wet flies.

Undoubtedly, the most popular Georgia fish is the largemouth. bass because of its size, fighting ability, inclination to take artificial lures, wide availability, and largely because it tastes good. The average bass is about two to three pounds, although many smaller ones are caught. Dozens of largemouth over ten pounds in size are caught each year in large lakes and small ponds all over Georgia.

The largemouth is probably one of the more difficult game fish to catch because of its intelligence and the fact that it is less numerous than other members of the sunfish family. Some fishermen swear by live bait, especially large minnows called "shiners" and large "pink worms." Others prefer artificial lures, plugs, spoons, or the newer artificial plastic "worms," which have soared to popularity in recent years. Techniques for working the various lures vary drastically depending on time of year and the type of water.

Lost Mutt Outsmarts 'Scout Dog'

By SSgt. Joe De Priest

Only at Christmastime. That's a fair enough description of how a vagrant Cocker Spaniel rambling the Georgia woods found a name, a home and a master with the 26th Infantry Platoon (Scout Dog).

Sergeant Sam Hopson, a trainer with the Scout Dog platoon, smiles broadly whenever he tells about the recent afternoon he was hidden in a ravine, playing decoy for scout dogs in a regular field problem. Cadre members concealed themselves over a wide area to test the alertness of scout dogs who were sent to sniff the area.

Hopson said he heard movement at the top of the hill, looked up expecting to see one of the big scout dogs but saw instead a pint-sized mutt who ambled down to check things out.

"He was a bit wary of me at first," said Hopson. Satisifed the situation was safe, the little pathfinder proved very amiable.

Hopson named the dog ("half Cocker Spaniel, half mutt") Scout.

During his spare time, Hopson has been giving Scout lessons in basic obedience ("down," "sit," "stay") and described the pupil's response as splendid.

Scout is now more or less the 26th platoon's mascot and divides his time between the training area and Hopson's off-post apartment.

According to the sergeant, in scout dog lingo, Scout is "non-aggressive."

Congeniality is his middle name, in fact, and it extends to cats, too; he gets along beautifully with Hopson's cat, Tammy.

"My wife thinks the world of both of them," he said.

PRE-CHRISTMAS SERVICE

Chaplain (Capt.) Troy O. Donthit of the 197th Infantry Bde. conducted pre-Christmas services for 26th Infantry Platoon (Scout Dog) personnel at a bivouac area recently. The service included carol singing and a brief message by the chaplain.

Bowl Public Sale Over in 2 Hours

The public sale of Super Bowl tickets is over. The tickets — all 2,884 of them — were sold within two hours after they went on sale.

Tickets for the Jan. 11 game between the champions of the American and National football leagues went on sale at the New Orleans Saints ticket office.

Several hundred persons queued up to be sure they got theirs. Two tickets at $15 each were allowed each person. Sales were on a cash only basis.

Most of the lucky ticketholders were from the New Orleans area but one man came from as far as Hartsville, S. C., with the hope of being first in line. But bearded Larry James, 32, after a 24-hour bus ride, spent the night in fourth place.

Drugging Rules Said Tightened

NEW YORK — The American Horse Shows Association will adopt a new and tough rule on drugging next year that in many instances puts the burden of proof on the accused.

The association's board of governors will present the rule to the annual convention of the organization here Jan. 15-17 for final ratification.

The AHSA is the national governing body for equestrian sports in the United States.

The new rule clarifies the definition of "forbidden substances," and specifically permits the use of phenylbutazone, which formerly was considered a forbidden substance.

Airborne Wives Attend Party

The officers' wives of the Airborne Department attended an afternoon Christmas Punch Party recently at the home of Mrs. Duane G. Cameron.

In keeping with the holiday season, Mrs. Cameron's home was decorated with fresh greenery adorning the mantle over a fire. The traditional tree welcomed the ladies as they entered the foyer.

Refreshments of punch, cookies and finger sandwiches were served from a gaily decorated table.

Mrs. Thomas H. Snider and Mrs. Bardon Blizzsard Jr. were welcomed to the wives group by Mrs Lee E. Ellis, Jr., wife of the deputy director. Each newcomer was presented with a green plant.

A bracelet charm was given as a farewell gift to the departing Mrs. Eugene D. Hawkins.

Mrs. Cameron introduced Mrs. Gerald Webb, a geographical wife, as a guest at the party.

Emphasizing the Christmas season, small gifts were exchanged among the ladies.

THE FORUM THE FORUM

By Spd Bob Vargas

The final score was the Los Angeles Rams, six; Dallas Cowboys, four; Minnesota Vikings, three; Cleveland Browns and Chicago Bears, two; Detroit Lions, Green Bay Packers, Pittsburgh Steelers, St. Louis Cardinals, Washington Redskins, one each. So read the final balloting for All-NFL football selections by the United Press International sports writers.

The Rams, who last year placed behind the defending NFL champions, the Baltimore Colts, had six men on the elite corp of pigskin all-stars. Leading the way for the Rams was Roman Gabriel, All-NFL quarterback for the first time in his career. Two of the "Fearsome Foursome," end Dave "Deacon" Jones and tackle Merlin Olsen head the defensive team along with Minnesota's Carl Eller, end, and Alan Paige, tackle.

The offensive line centers around Mick Tingleloff, Viking center with Gene Hickerson, Browns, and Tom Mack, LA, at the guards. At tackles are Ralph Neely, Dallas, and Bob Brown, LA. The tight end is Washington's Jerry Smith. At split end is Cleveland's Gary Collins.

WRONG WAY VIKING

Jim Marshall, the former Ohio State tackle and now part of the devastating Minnesota Viking defense, is an unusual football player. He is a sky and scuba diver, a reader of Buddhism and an ex-wig manufacturer. Once he shot himself in the stomach while unloading a revolver and another time required medical attention when a grape became stuck in his throat. To top it off in 1964 during the Viking-49er game he recovered a San Francisco fumble; when he came up with the ball he lost his sense of direction and headed the wrong way to score.

SUN BOWL

Nebraska ran roughshod over the Georgia Dogs in the annual Sun Bowl at El Paso, Tex. The Cornhuskers, co-champions of the Big Eight Conference with Missouri, demonstrated their size and ability to smaller and weaker Georgia. The score, 45 to 6, was the most humiliating for a Georgia team under the direction of Vince Dooley. Everyone knew the eventual outcome of the game and Nebraska showed without a doubt that Georgia was no match for the Cornhuskers. How this game came to be is beyond the many sports-minded football fans.

NCAA SOCCER

Soccer, the world's most popular sport but one which has not achieved public acclaim in the United States, has become synonymous with the University of St. Louis. In the eleven years that the NCAA has recognized soccer as a major sport, St. Louis U. has dominated the scene with records as impressive in other sports as the Boston Celtics, the New York Yankees, the Green Bay Packers and the UCLA Bruins.

OUT OF THE ARMY

Spd Charles Pasarell of Puerto Rico and a member of the U.S. Davis Cup team was discharged from duty on Dec. 23. During his two year tour of duty his tennis play carried him to Southeast Asia on goodwill tours for the State Department.

Braves Announce Home Opener

The Atlanta Braves will open their 1970 home schedule April 13 against San Francisco, the club has announced.

The Braves said that ticket prices will remain the same as in 1969, except in the box seat levels.

After playing on the West Coast, the Braves come home for their Atlanta Stadium opener with San Francisco in a night game. The Giants were Atlanta's opening game opponent last year, too, and they finished 1-2 in the Western Division of the National League.

San Diego, Los Angeles and Cincinnati follow the Giants into Atlanta. The world champion New York Mets play in Atlanta in early June and in mid-August. St. Louis, a big drawing card in Atlanta for three years, is here May 8-10 and July 28-30.

Three twi-night doubleheaders are on the schedule. They are June 19 vs Houston, July 3 vs San Diego, and July 10 vs Cincinnati.

Ticket prices will again be $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for children in the upper and pavilion levels, and general admission tickets the same price for the fifth straight year, $1 children. Furthermore, the Braves said, season ticket prices will not change.

In announcing an increase from $3.50 to $4 for field level and from $5 to $5.50 for dugout and club level seats, the Braves said they had hoped to maintain the status quo on all prices in 1970.

Higher team expenses, however, forced the adjustment in the prices of box seats, which are still comparable to or lower than other new National League stadiums. Since the team moved to Atlanta in 1966, operating costs have risen 8.7 per cent. In one area, player procurement, development and farm clubs, costs were $500,000 higher this year than in 1966.

"Fifteen of the players on the 1969 team were graduates of our farm system," President Bill Bartholomay points out. "Naturally, we want to continue investing the demands of maintaining a pennant contender on the field in Atlanta."

COMPUTER CORNER ON SPORTS

By Bud Goode

When it comes to pass interceptions, Los Angeles Ram's quarterback Roman Gabriel is the Scrooge of the football field. Gabe gave the ball away only three times in 11 games, a remarkable 1 per cent interception rate. According to this record the opposition has three chances of picking off a Gabriel pass — poor, miserable, and none at all.

By comparison, Minnesota's Joe Kapp gives away the ball on interceptions at a 4½ per cent clip—a good record and better than league average. According to the Sports Computer's Univac analysis of pro football the extra interception wins 80 per cent of all games where two teams are equally matched. So watch for the turning point in this Sunday's war between the Rams and the Vikings—it should be the one extra turnover, a pass interception.

A second important difference between these two powerful teams is the percentage of times the quarterback gets clobbered. Gabriel has been dumped 15 times this year, for a low 4.7 per cent figure, Minnesota's Joe Kapp has been dropped 31 times, or 10.2 per cent of the time. If it isn't the pass interception, then it will be the hard rush of the defensive front four which makes the difference in this big game.

What is more important in pro football — the defensive line or the offensive line? Measured by the percentage of times the front four dumps the passer, the Sports Computer finds that the defensive line contributes most to a team's won-lost record.

ATC Leads Basketball Opponents

ATC has taken an early lead in the brigade level basketball standings by ripping past three straight opponents.

In their first game ATC dumped CTC by 94-82. They were led by Spd James P. Jones (Center) and PFC Joseph Saddler (forward) both dribbling in the double-diget column.

In their second game, ATC overwhelmed 10th Avintion by a score of 111-70. Pacing the victory once again were Jones with 24 and Sadler with 21.

Eagles' Cornerback Ponders: 'To Coach Or to Play?'

Ivy Cross hasn't decided whether he'll be a player or a coach next season for the Philadelphia Eagles, but of one thing he is certain, he won't be both.

"I haven't really decided at this point whether I'll play or not next year," said Cross, one of the top cornerbacks in the National Football League in the last decade.

"I've told myself many, many times during the season, however, that if I had it to do over again, I wouldn't," he said of his dual role as Eagles defensive coach and a starting defensive back.

"I would do one or the other and not set myself in both jobs."

Cross isn't too happy with his performance as a player this season, although he had little, if any pre-season training. "This hasn't been one of my better years, frankly," says the 30-year-old Cross, one of a handful of Negroes in NFL coaching ranks.

"I've always been severely critical of my own play, but this year I've been more concerned about the total defense rather than my own personal individual play. I haven't had a bad year, but I haven't had the kind of year I'd like to have for myself."

Cross was acquired by the Eagles in the trade which sent tackle Bob Brown to the Los Angeles Rams. He had retired as an active player and was named an assistant coach by new Philadelphia general manager Pete Retzlaff.

"The primary concern was to help the club as much as I could," said Cross, explaining his willingness to play again. "We didn't get the help we thought we were going to get from our defensive backs, so it sort of forced me back onto the field."

Cross said coaching and playing requires a tremendous adjustment. He works from sunrise to sunset some days.

"Frankly, I think that trying to do both and do a good job on both is practically impossible. Physically, its really wearing and tearing. Mentally, the pressures and responsibilities you have are sometimes too much to bear. I haven't seen much of my family."

As a coach, Cross feels he has made progress with an Eagles defense that needed almost a complete rebuilding job.

"Some things we have been able to do. ...there is a great deal more we'd like to do. I came out of a system on the West Coast where we had experienced players, been together for a long time and were able to do a great many things that make a real complete defensive system. We're building that here now. It's going to take a while to get it all in."

Cross said one of the things he has tried to do is get his players accustomed to taking the football away. "I feel as a defender that anytime a team puts the ball in the air, or anytime a runner comes at us its a direct challenge. They're saying 'we can throw at you and we can run at you,' and I feel that when they do that, we have to feel we can take it away; the ball belongs to us. To me this is all psychological. This is what we're trying to establish and we're gradually getting aound to that kind of thinking."

Ivy Cross talks like a coach, not a player, if you're guessing on his plans for 1970.

Model Tanks Put On Display Here

BY RON JOHNSON

Presently on display in the main hall of the Infantry Center are 36 model tanks and armored vehicles from various countries.

These detailed models are the handiwork of Capt. Lawrence Dring Jr., a student in IOAC 8-68. All are near-perfect replicas. Even the O.D. paint, applied by a special process invented by the captain, is exactly the same color and texture as the real thing.

The captain was an Infantry soldier with Airborne, Ranger and Special forces training fighting in Vietnam during the 1968 Tet Offensive. He was wounded in the legs, and evacuated to the Ft. Gordon, Ga., hospital. Doctors predicted that his leg would have to be amputated.

Realizing that he could no longer be in the Infantry if he lost his leg, he considered changing his branch to Armor. He says "I thought that if I couldn't walk too well, I could always sit in a turret." He began to take an interest in tanks, and found that making models of them, whittled away the long hours in the hospital.

The materials for most of the models the captain has built have been imported from Japan. He says that the Japanese are "really good model makers." Even after the doctors saved his leg and he knew that he would be able to walk again, he continued his hobby.

Now, he probably knows as much about tanks as the men who actually work on them. "I have to research each model placed on display," he says, "because sooner or later the man who drove it, made it, or fought in it will turn up to make comment or ask questions. And Dring knows the answers.

WAC Foundation To Seek Money for New Museum

FT. McCLELLAN, Ala. — Col. Elizabeth P. Hoisington, director of the Women's Army Corps has announced the incorporation of the Women's Army Corps Foundation which will launch a drive to raise funds to build a WAC museum at Ft. McClellan, Ala.

Colonel Hoisington said she was pleased to announce also the names of the distinguished officers and civilians who have consented to serve as the first directors of the foundation.

They include two former WAC directors, Col. Emily C. Gorman of Washington, D. C., and Col. Westray Battle Long of Garysburg, N. C.; two leading citizens of Anniston who have given outstanding service for many years to the Women's Army Corps, Marshall K. Hunter, civilian adviser to the Third U. S. Army commander, and Ralph Callahn, president of The Anniston Star and Gen. Hugh Harris, president of The Citadel, Charleston, S. C.

General Harris' wife is the former Lt. Col. Kathleen Burns, who commanded the WAC Training Bn. at one time.

An architect's conception of the proposed building to house the Edith Nourse Rogers Museum was put on display in the museum's present quarters in Munson Hall, the WAC Training Bn. building.

Col. Maxene B. Michl, WAC Center commander, was congratulated by Colonel Hoisington on initiating the first step, organizing the foundation, a goal long a dream of many WAC leaders.

"This was a milestone we set for ourselves," Colonel Michl said. "Our desire is to create an institution we can use proudly as an expression of the history, meaning and heart of the Women's Army Corps.

"But this museum will be living history, the setting for activities, research and educational programs incorporated is our training and professional development," Colonel Michl said.

Since the founding of the WAC museum in 1955 in a single room in WAC Center headquarters, the collection has grown until it now is crowded in the several rooms it occupies in Munson Hall.

The site for the new museum building has been selected and approved by Ft. McClellan, according to Lt. Col. Angelina Previto, who has served as project officer in arranging the foundation's incorporation.

The site selected is on Galloway Gate Road about midway between the WAC Chapel and the WAC Bn. on a sloping area shaded by tall pine trees.

Study of Veterans Opens Multiple Sclerosis Windows

NEW YORK—A VA Hospital study of World War II veterans continues to open windows on multiple sclerosis (MS), a mysterious disabling disease of the central nervous system.

In 1966, Dr. John F. Kurtzke, head of neurology of the VA Hospital in Washington, D.C., made a comparative study of 389 patients with multiple sclerosis and an equal number without MS.

The study, a significant contribution to the growing knowledge of multiple sclerosis, indicates that some unknown event before age 15 might operate as a factor in triggering MS in adult life.

To Kurizke and other epidemiologists, this finding suggests that multiple sclerosis may be a disease of places, rather than people. Other research findings lending credence to this theory are that even if adults move from high risk northern latitudes to low risk southern ones, they fail to lessen their risk of MS.

On the other hand if children are moved from high to low risk geographic areas, findings suggest they may decrease their chances of developing multiple sclerosis in later life.

One of several research grantees of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society (NMSS), who leans toward the MS geographic theory is Dr. Milton Alter, of the University of Minnesota Medical School.

As head of a research team studying multiple sclerosis in semi-tropical Israel, Dr. Alter uncovered a surprising number of MS cases where they were thought to be rare.

Further research revealed that most Israelis with multiple sclerosis had emigrated from countries in Nothern Europe where multiple sclerosis is a relatively common disease.

Another NMSS research grantee reported similar geographic - immigration findings in the Republic of South Africa. He's Dr. Geoffrey Dean, director of the Medico-Social Board of Research, Dublin, Ireland.

At the September Epidemiology Conference, sponsored by the NMSS and the International Federation of Multiple Sclerosis Societies in New York City, Dean reported his nationwide study on the age of multiple sclerosis patients when they migrated to South Africa and the age the disease manifested itself.

Like Alter, Dean also found multiple sclerosis to be more prevalent among white settlers who had migrated from central and Northern Europe than among native-born South African whites.

Another significant finding is in the frequency distributions of age at emigration. All data indicates a critical age of 15 years below which the risk of multiple sclerosis is low.

Comparisons of MS patients with matched controls show the relative risk of multiple sclerosis to differ greatly above and below age 15.

Finding answers to these and other questions will take Kurtzke, also professor of neurology and community medicine at Georgetown University, Washington, D.C., two long arduous years of research and almost $60,000 of National Multiple Sclerosis Society research money. The two year TMSS grant starts Jan. 1, 1970, and ends Dec. 31, 1971.

In collaboration with Dr. Bui Quoc Huong, professor of neurology and psychiatry at Saigon Medical School, Kurtzke will study multiple sclerosis risk in Vietnamese who emigrated to France before and after age 15.

As Kurtzke's study of World War II veterans opened windows on the possibility that multiple sclerosis is an environmentally determined disease so he hopes his new study will throw more light on the mystery of MS, an impenetrable disease for more than a century.

A disease of the brain and spinal cord, multiple sclerosis distrets, sometimes even blocks, nerve impulses that control many of the body's vital functions, like seeing, speaking, walking and balance.

Usually striking during the prime career and family-building years between 20 and 40, it's estimated some half million Americans are victims of multiple sclerosis and related neurological disorders.

The National Multiple Sclerosis Society, founded in 1946, is the only national voluntary health agency conducting programs of research to find the cause, cure and prevention of multiple sclerosis.

To date, it has granted $12.2 million to support promising research and advanced training related to multiple sclerosis all over the world.

Now embarked on a crash five year research development plan, the Society hopes to raise $10 million to explore with all possible speed research leads that show promise, like is multiple sclerosis a disease of places, rather than people.

New Tracer Bullet Helps Riflemen Fire Accurately

WASHINGTON — A new tracer bullet developed by Philadelphia's Frankford Arsenal will soon be helping American riflemen and machine-gunners fire their rounds more accurately in the Republic of Vietnam.

The XM276 low-intensity tracer cags over five years of research by the Army aimed at developing a bullet which can be observed in flight by the gunner, but not by the enemy target.

While ordinary tracer bullets create a path of light which shows how close to the target the rounds are hitting, Frankford Arsenal's low-intensity tracer blazes a trail visible only through electronic "image-intensifying" viewers.

Early in the Vietnam conflict, the Army developed night-viewing devices including low-light-level television and infrared viewfinders to rob the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese of the cover of the dark—these devices could illerally "see in the dark".

Although the instruments worked dependably in the field, they were reportedly unable to handle the momentary burst of bright light caused by conventional tracer bullets. In the crucial moments after firing a tracer, the gunner's essential night viewfinder would not operate. Diagnosis: A simple case of temporary "blindness."

But the cure was not as easy to find as the problem had been to determine. "For two years the Army tried to modify the night viewing devices to accommodate the light from existing tracers", says John Spangler, a Frankford Arsenal industrial project engineer. "The effort was not too successful".

In 1965 research chemists at the Arsenal's Pitman-Dunn Research Laboratories decided to concentrate on modifying the intensity of the tracer light rather than altering the night view finders. By replacing powdered magnesium in the tracer with peroxide oxidizers, Thomas Doris, a Pitman-Dunn chemist, was able to reduce the light to one-thousandth of its original intensity.

Changing the chemical composition of the powder in the bullet, though, affected the bullet's flight characteristics. Since the weight of the powder was altered, the center of gravity of the projectile shifted. The result was that a tracer bullet fired from the same gun as a regular bullet would not hit the same target.

Because the purpose of a tracer is to help the gunner pinpoint a target, it was essential for it to fly the same path as a non-tracer bullet of the same size.

By carefully arranging the contents of the tracer bullet, Frank Dietsch, another Frankfort Arsenal project engineer, was able to precisely control the trajectory. Because of his efforts, tracer and non-tracer bullets can now be interchanged and both will hit the same target to the effective range of the weapon.

It was no accident that Frankford Arsenal was chosen to develop the XM276 low-intensity tracer. The 153-year-old installation was making Standard Tracer bullets as early as 1917. Its long experience, coupled with its resourceful talent and the spirit of teamwork of its career employees, makes the Arsenal in Philadelphia uniquely qualified to assume its vital role in meeting the difficult demands imposed by today's weapons technology.

As in the past, Frankford Arsenal is directly responsible for improving troops in a war where scthe first power of Army ence turns night to day.

MT Unit Instructs Canadian Shooters

The bonds of friendship between Canada and the U. S. were strengthened as 30 Canadian shooters were guests of the U. S. and more specifically the U. S. army Marksmanship Training Unit (MTU) here.

The Shooting Federation of Canada, much like the N.R.A. in the U. S. sponsored thirty of their top shooters to visit and receive instruction on international type shooting from members of the Army's International Rifle and Pistol teams.

The Canadians were instructed in techniques of international type shooting and coaching. The instruction was to prepare them to become future international shooting instructors and to further the international programs of shooting in Canada.

Keeping Up With the Joneses

By Marian Jones

If you are staying at Fort Benning during the holidays and you're feeling lonely and blue and left out, Special Services is here too and they may be able to help fill in some of those empty hours.

For instance have you checked out their new Arts and Crafts Center across the street from the main post bowling alley? They're going to be open during the holidays except for New Year's Eve and New Year's Day.

In the center you will find an array of amusements such as wood working, lapidary and jewelry making, electronics workshop, photo developing and printing, painting, decoupage, linoleum block and silk screen printing and ceramics. In the small crafts section there is model building, leather work, candle making and weaving.

Its all there specially for guys like you who have some time on their hands. If you don't know how to do any of the above, the center provides instructors in each craft to teach you.

Is the Great Outdoors more your line? If so, turn again to Special Services. They have traveling campers for you to rent for the price of $1 per day. All you need is an automobile with a trailer hitch and Special Services will connect you right up. These campers are set to go anywhere and contain a cook stove, a camping table, an ice chest and a safari light. To reserve yours, call 545-3831.

Looking for an inexpensive something to do on New Year's Eve? Take your wife or date to the special bowling session at the main post bowling center of the one at Kelly Hill. Designed by Special Services especially for New Years Eve celebrants, the package deal will cost you $2.50 per person and will entitle you to howl from 11 p.m. on the 31st to 6 a.m. on New Year's Day.

Included in the price are setups for mixed drinks and breakfast. As an added attraction at the main post center a Scotch doubles tournament will be conducted and at the Kelly Hill Center a 3-6-9 tournament will be held. Entry fee for the tournament is $1. Reservations for the evening can be made by calling the bowling center, 545-7580.

At Callaway Gardens

Callaway Gardens is continuing their round of Christmas activities in which you should be able to find something of interest. Today there is the annual Callaway Gardens Christmas Open Golf Tournament and a tennis tournament for singles and doubles. During this weekend is included the usual gardens doings such as quail hunting, skeet and trap shooting and, of course, you can tour the winter gardens. On New Year's Day they are hosting their traditionally Southern New Year's Day Dinner of hog jowls and black eyed peas. (It doesn't exactly turn us on either but its different.)

Cage Talent

Some of the best basketball in the area can be seen at the Municipal Auditorium in Columbus beginning tonight and continuing through Tuesday. It's the Bi-City Basketball Tournament and will match the high schools in Columbus and Phenix City in play to determine the bi-city champion.

Tonight at 7:30 its Baker vs Central and at 9 its Carver against Hardaway. Tomorrow at 6 p.m. is a playoff game between the losers from Friday night and at 7:30 Columbus High meets Kendricks High. At 9 p.m. its Jordan vs Spencer. Monday and Tuesday nights' play will consist of playoff games at 6, 7:30 and 9 p.m. Admission price is $1.50.

Captain Selects Army Over Angels

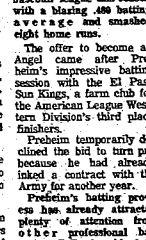
FORT BLISS, Tex. (ANF)—There was much weeping and teeth-gnashing by the California Angels baseball club when Capt. Arnold Preheim laid his bat aside—at least for another year.

Preheim, Garden Grove, Calif., now studying at the U.S. Army Air Defense School here, led the Bliss baseball league this season with a blazing .480 batting average and smashed eight home runs.

The offer to become an Angel came after Preheim's impressive batting session with the El Paso Sun Kings, a farm club for the American League Western Division's third place finishers.

Preheim temporarily declined the bid to turn pro because he had already inked a contract with the Army for another year.

Preheim's batting prowess has already attracted plenty of attention from other professional ball clubs. Following his father's desire to put education before a baseball career, Preheim turned down 14 offers to try out for various pro ball clubs during his high school days.



A SADIST?

Regina Carrol is billed as the "freak-out girl" in "Satan's Sadists," a film about a motorcycle gang.

The strapping 215-pound slugger holds a hefty lifetime batting average of .405. His records indicate that he "slumped" to a .310 average, the lowest of his career, while attending college at UCLA.

"I suppose my school work interfered with my ball playing and vice versa," he explained.

After three years at UCLA came military service and a tour of duty in the Republic of Vietnam in 1968.

Preheim's power at the plate was demonstrated during the regular baseball season this year. In two trips to the box he belted consecutive home runs, both tape-measure drives of 400 and 450 feet.

Vic Villareal, Bliss sports director, said, "Preheim can hold his own on any team on the strength of his hitting alone, but he can also do a good job in the outfield, at third base and in relief pitching."

College Students May Still Apply For Army ROTC Scholarship Aid

HEADQUARTERS THIRD U. S. ARMY, Fort McPherson, Ga. — There is still time for students entering or continuing their college education during 1970 to apply for an Army ROTC Scholarship Award.

Army ROTC scholarships, offered on a competitive basis, pay tuition, textbooks and lab fees, plus a $50 per month subsistence allowance. Winners may attend any of 270 colleges and universities offering the four-year ROTC program.

Students may apply for either two, three or four-year scholarship awards. Those applying for the two and three-year awards should do so with the professor of military science at their present college or university.

Applications for the two and four-year awards will be accepted until Jan. 15, 1970. Three-year applications will be accepted from Jan. 15 to April 15, 1970.

Part of thescholarship selection is based on scores received on either the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) or the American College Testing Program test (ACT). High school students who intend to compete for one of the awards should take one of the tests given nationwide before Dec. 6, 1969.

This past school year 800 high school students won four-year scholarships. Of these, 735 ranked scholastically in the top 20 per cent of their graduating classes.

The leadership potential of the 1969 winners was indicated by the fact that 624 were presidents of their student bodies or were class officers; 479 were varsity athletic letter winners; 135 were debate team members; 159 were Eagle Scouts and 208 were members of other extracurricular activities.

For detailed information about the four-year scholarship program, residents of Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee or Puerto Rico should write to: Army ROTC Scholarships, Fort McPherson, Ga., 30330.

Trainee Changes Tux For Army Fatigues

By Sp5 John Klopf

If ever there was a basic trainee who knew how to "conduct" himself properly, he would be Pvt. Alan I. Kunins of the Training Center's Co. B, 6th Bn., 2nd Bde.

It doesn't help him much at Fort Benning, however, because all his conducting was done as concertmaster of the Northern Westchester Symphony Orchestra, Westchester County, N. Y. There, rhythm was perhaps more precise but never more strenuous than that of the PT "selections" which start Pvt. Kunin's days at the Training Center.

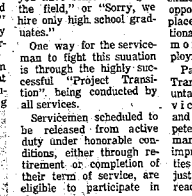
He does have a little jump on his fellow trainees, though, even if he doesn't realize it. His previous experience in "scoring" perhaps earned him a seat on the scoring line at Malone 2 recently and doubtless his "arranging" ability will come in handy during night-time GI parties.

Only one test away from his master's degree at New York University, Kunins has been giving stringed instument instruction the past five years for Peekskill City School System, Peekskill, N.Y. He also has substituted as an instructor at the Juilliard School of Music in New York.

Perhaps a partial product of his environment (his father plays and teaches piano professionally), Kunins started playing piano in third grade and the violin two years later.

As concertmaster (1st violinist) last season for the Northern Westchester Symphony, Kunins was the conductor's right-hand man, assisting whenever he needed help, arranging the string section and conducting rehearsals when the conductor was absent.

Now the national guardsman is looking forward to the competition of basic training and Chemical Equipment Repairman School at Fort McClellan, Ala. Chemical repairman? Well, what else do you do with a concertmaster NG with two months active duty remaining.



ENTICING WOLF

Would you ever suspect that this enticing beauty is a 300-year-old werewolf? It's Julie Newmar and that's the role she plays in Dan Rowan and Dick Martin's new picture, "The Maltese Bippy."

Are You Ready

More than ever, in today's highly competitive job market, the unskilled and uneducated job seeker is meeting with "Sorry, we can't use you unless you have some training in the field," or "Sorry, we hire only high school graduates."

One way for the serviceman to fight this suuation is through the highly successful "Project Transition" being conducted by all services.

Servicemen scheduled to be released from active duty under honorable conditions, either through retirement or completion of their term of service, are eligible to participate in the program.

While he has a genuine advantage over his contemporary who has not completed his obligated service, a serviceman who has not acquired an identifiable civilian-related job skill or the equivalent of a high school education has the opportunity to do so by participation in Project Transition.

Here's how it works. Servicemen or women with up to six months remaining before their scheduled separation from the service, and who are not going to reenlist, can enroll in a variety of special on-job-training or education courses. These courses are designd to train them for specific jobs which certain employers want to fill, give them skills for which civilian job opportunities are good, or place them at an educational level necessary for more advantageous employment.

Participation in Project Transition is entirely voluntary. But for any serviceman looking ahead and not qualified to compete in the civilian job market or who wants to improve his job opportunities transition could be just the thing. Are you ready to compete? See your transition couselor. (AFPS)

World Of Sports

by Rod K.

WHILE MANY SPORTS FIGURES are wearing long hair, sideburns and Edwardian garb to try to prove they are under 30, some spectator sports are claiming to be 100 years old. Pro baseball has been whooping up its Centennial all summer, and now college football comes along claiming 100 candles for its cake last month. On November 6, 1869, Rutgers and Princeton met for the first recorded rah-rah game between universities. Rutgers won, 6 to 4.

THE FIRST GORILLAS

While football may be celebrating its 100th anniversary, all the coaches aren't celebrating. The campus unrest, that has led to protesting, burning, and treating the dean's desk in an undignified manner, has even had its effect on some of the noble athletes. It's the nightmare of every grid mentor that he may wake up to find that yesterday's monster man is today's flower child.

Players are especially adamant about keeping their hirsute adornments. If a coach says, "Either that mustache goes or I go," he is as likely as not to be the one that goes.

Just as hippies point out that great men of history had long locks, the gridmen also find precedent. The late John W. (Trophy) Heisman, a college hero of the 1880's, wrote:

"We had no helmets or pads of any kind. Hair was the only head protection we knew, and in preparation for football we would let it grow from the first of June.

"Many college men of that day, especially divinity and medical students, permitted their beards to grow. Often they were referred to as gorillas. The divinity students couldn't answer back — I mean, in the right way."

COAST TO COAST

Shaved or not, thousands of young fellows continue to pummel each other on Saturday afternoons for dear old alma mater—and for the pro contract that may come with graduation. Paying customers fill the giant stadia and pour millions of dollars into the university tills. Unless the hippies try harder, the grand old game may last another hundred years.

As squads jet across country to fill their schedules, it may be interesting to note an 1873 view of such activity. In that year, students of Cornell worked up a contest against the University of Michigan, proposing that it be played in Cleveland, a neutral site.

But, alas, the president of Cornell refused permission. He said, "I will not permit 30 men to travel 400 miles merely to agitate a bag of wind."

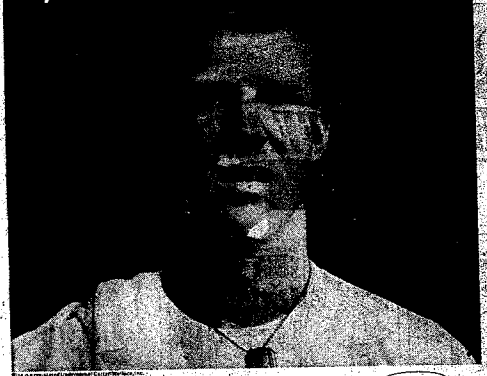
When you remove your beard you shouldn't remove your face.



Today's super-duper razor blades are meant to cut whiskers. They can also do a job on the skin underneath the whiskers.

To help keep you from butchering yourself—this is the reason for Rise.® And why we put a thin lubricating film into it that gets between your blade and your skin.

Put Rise on your face before you shave, and maybe you won't have to put toilet paper on your face after it.

Save Face.

BRAIN TEASER No. 178
AMERICAN ARMED FORCES FEATURES
6 E. 43rd Street, New York, N. Y. 10017

That bright young Marine,
George E. Porgie,
At kissing the girls had an orgy.
They'd run and they'd cry,
"What brass!
What a guy!"
"But of course.
I use Brasso",
winked George E.

Bet you didn't know...

The first Army uniform was established and standardized by George Washington in 1779, when as commander-in-chief he issued a general order to the Continental Army. The coat for all branches was blue. However, the facings for the infantry varied—white, buff, red and blue. Coats for the artillery and artificers were faced with scarlet and had scarlet linings; while those of the light dragoons were faced with white and featured white buttons and linings.

One of the first, if not the first use of armored "railroad batteries" occurred in the Civil War, when they were employed by Federal troops against Confederate positions. Flat railroad cars were first reinforced with iron floors and artillery pieces installed. Around these was constructed a shed of iron, with iron doors which opened upward to permit firing. Railroad batteries proved effective in the Civil War, but their use was limited because of the relatively few railroad lines available.

And did you know...

An Army career is pretty hard to beat. Look hard. Look wide. Then take another look at what you have.

Quick advancement. It's up to you. A chance for more education. Travel and excitement. Security for you and your family. Technical training. Big bonuses for staying Army. Free medical care. Retirement while you're young enough to enjoy it. Experience that pays off if you take a civilian job after retirement. Pride in doing an important job, now. Great people to work with. A feeling of accomplishment. So take a hard look at all the angles. The best deal? You've got it. Stay Army.

Your future, your decision...stay ARMY.

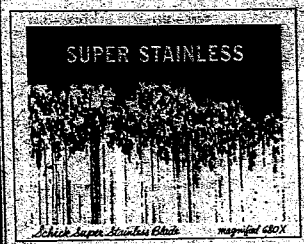
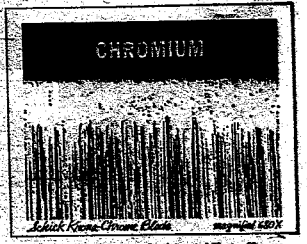
(even our own)



Super stainless is not complete protection against corrosion. This, for instance, is a corroded section of a plastic-coated Schick super stainless edge after five shaves, magnified 680 times. It's rough, pitted, corroded.



This is a section of the new plastic-coated Krona-Chrome chromium edge after five shaves, magnified 680 times. As you can see, chromium more effectively resists blade breakdown due to corrosion.

Only Schick Krona-Chrome has the chromium edge.

You don't need connections to get a close shave.

Most people think you need connections to go places.

But here are two shavers that can go anywhere. And shave there. Without connections.

The brand-new Norelco Cordless 20B never needs a connection. It'll give you up to 30 days of inspection-proof shaves anywhere. Because it delivers close Norelco shaves on only 4 penlight batteries.

It's an entire shaving kit all by itself. Even has a mirror in its cap. And fits your pocket like a pack of cigarettes.

Our Rechargeable Tripleheader 45CT only needs a connection about once every three weeks.

It gives you almost twice as many shaves per charge as any other rechargeable. And it shaves as close or closer than a blade in 2 out of 3 shaves.

You see, it's got floating heads that fit the curves of a man's face. And inside those floating heads are 18 self-sharpening blades that shave close and smooth every day. The Norelco unique rotary action keeps the blades sharp while it strokes off whiskers. Every time you shave.

And besides that, the Tripleheader has a pop-up sideburn trimmer.

The Norelco Rechargeable.
Or the new Norelco Cordless.
Now who says you can't get places without connections?

Norelco
Even on a beard like yours.
